TORNADOES

The United States, with an average of two or more twisters daily, leads the world in tornadoes. This is one of the busiest years in U.S. history. The story is on page 12.

Storms Unleash 79 Tornadoes On South

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

Violent spring storms that lashed the South with 79 tornadoes, leaving seven people dead and hundreds of houses wrecked, pushed into the Northeast today with a threat of flooding.

Rain extended from New England and the middle Atlantic Coast states westward into the Ohio Valley. But skies were mostly fair across the Southeast which was battered by tornadoes Wednesday and Thursday. Thundershowers today were confined mostly to the coastal sections of the Carolinas, Georgia and northern Florida.

A flood watch was posted for the Catskill Mountains of

New York state where up to 2½ inches of rain had fallen since Thursday afternoon.

In Georgia and Alabama, people picked up the pieces after the two states were battered by 37 of the 43 tornadoes reported Thursday by the National Weather Service.

Twisters also touched down Thursday in Mississippi, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, the National Weather Service said. Five people were killed Thursday in Alabama, one was killed in Georgia, and one died Wednesday night in Arkansas.

The Georgia victim was 69-year-old woman killed in Atlanta on Thursday night when a tree fell on her car on a downtown street.

In all, 79 tornadoes cut a path of destruction from Texas to the Carolinas on Wednesday and Thursday, said Hugh Crowther at the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Meanwhile, Texas baked Thursday under record temperatures that sent the mercury soaring to as high as 107 degrees. Never had it been so hot in May in Corpus Christi, where it was 103, or in Galveston, where it was 92.

Three waves of tornadoes surged through Alabama on Thursday, hitting at the morning rush hour, in mid-afternoon and again in early evening.

The most deadly roared across a busy highway in Montgomery early Thursday, tossing cars and trucks like toys and leaving four people dead in roadway wreckage.

"My car left the road twice that I know of," said T.A. Reynolds, driving to work when the black whirling cloud clutched his car.

A fifth person was killed when a twister flipped her Mobile home near Montgomery.

Tornadoes hit later in the day in Talladega County and near Prattville. In all, Alabama authorities reported 60 homes destroyed.

In Georgia, where 30 people were injured, Gov. Joe Frank Harris declared a state of emergency in Bulloch County and Maj. Gen. Joseph Griffin, the state adjutant general, flew to Statesboro to assess the damage.

Newcomer Gillam Testing Political Clout Of Jones

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Democratic voters in the sprawling 1st Congressional District are being wooed by a relative newcomer calling for changes and a 10-term congressman running on his political clout.

In campaigning for the May 8 Democratic primary, both incumbent Rep. Walter B. Jones and state Rep. John Bond Gillam III, D-Bertie, emphasize Jones' seniority in Congress, but for different reasons.

"I am basically campaigning on the seniority which I possess," Jones, 70, said in a recent telephone interview. "I have the chairmanship of one of the 21 major committees which can be neither bought nor sold. I will continue to represent the people to the best of my ability. I just don't think the people ... want to give up that advantage."

Gillam, however, questions whether Jones has used his clout to its best advantage, saying Jones gave up chairing an important agriculture subcommittee to control the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"Why did Mr. Jones voluntarily give up the chairmanship of the subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts when in eastern North Carolina, 95 percent of us are tobacco, peanut, soybean, corn farmers or have our income coming from that?" asked Gillam, 37, a two-term state House member.

Jones emphasized his "dedication to saving the tobacco program over the years in the face of severe challenges" and said chairing a major committee gives him more opportunities to help North Carolina.

"I can then get them (committee members) to vote on farm legislation when they might otherwise not," he said. "The whole committee voted against a bill to terminate the tobacco support program when many had no interest."

Also, with Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., committed to his role of majority whip, Jones is next in line to chair of the House Agriculture Committee. However, there is little reason to believe that Rep. E. de la Garza, D-Texas, at 56, will relinquish the chair soon.

Gillam said "new energetic leadership" in Congress could help bring jobs to 21 counties hard hit by unemployment and lagging behind in economic development.

"Sixty-two percent of the industrial capital investment is in the Piedmont," he said. "And I am saying that an active congressman will bring some of that to eastern North Carolina."

In the 21 eastern counties, where Democrats outnumber Republicans more than 8-to-3, the GOP primary has been overshadowed by the high-spending Democratic race.

Third Month In A Row

Nation's Jobless Rate Holds Steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment in April remained frozen at 7.8 percent — its third month at that level — as the number of new jobs virtually accommodated a heavy springtime demand for work, the government said today.

Not since September-November 1980 has unemployment held steady for three months running.

Economists in and out of government have said for months that the steadily declining unemployment rates of the last year or so could level off as the pace of the expanding economy slows.

Still, many analysts expect the civilian rate to fall below 7.4 percent, the rate President Reagan inherited from Jimmy Carter in 1981, by year's end.

In April, the Labor Department said today, total civilian employment rose by 260,000 to 104.4 million, a record. But roughly 333,000 jobless Americans re-entered the labor force in search of work, offsetting the gains.

The total number of unemployed people rose by 71,000 last month, to 8.84 million, but that increase was not enough to drive up the overall unemployment rate when the calculation was adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

The bureau said the average factory worker put in 41.2 hours a week last month, up 36 minutes from March and the highest level in nearly two decades.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes noted, "The combination of increased employment and greater average hours should imply higher industrial production and a generally strong economic picture in the weeks ahead."

He added: "The economic recovery appears to be settling down to a sustainable level. ... New jobs are being created and, all in all, it's a very healthy economy."

A separate unemployment rate, which combines the civilian labor force with the roughly 1.69 million members of the U.S. armed forces stationed in the United States, held steady at 7.7 percent last month, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported.

The unemployment calculation is based on a Census Bureau survey of some 60,000 U.S. households taken in the week that includes the 12th day of the month.

A separate survey of business payrolls, which is not used in the compilation of the unemployment rate, showed that 410,000 jobs were created in April, the BLS said.

A host of economic reports in recent days has sent mixed signals about future business health.

The Index of Leading Indicators, for instance, dropped 1.1 percent in March, the first decline in 19 months. But the gross national product (GNP) grew at an annual rate of 8.3 percent in the first quarter.

(Please turn to Page 16)

Pitt's Unemployment Falls

Pitt County's unemployment rate fell from 7.2 percent in February to 6.5 percent in March, the Employment Security Commission said today. Pitt was among 82 counties in North Carolina whose unemployment rate fell in March. Unemployment rose in 16 counties and remained constant in two counties, the ESC said.

Statewide unemployment was 7.3 percent in March or 241,700 people without jobs, compared to 7.6 percent or 222,100 jobless workers in February.

Wake and Gates counties, with March jobless rates of 3.4 percent, tied for the state's lowest rate, followed by Orange County with 3.8 percent.

Protestor Says His Actions 'Justified'

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A North Carolina man, who remains in jail under $100,000 bond after his arrest Easter Sunday, says the actions he and eight other defendants took were justified.

Patrick O'Neill, 28, of Greenville, N.C., and the other activists face state charges of burglary, trespassing, possession of burglary tools and criminal mischief after breaking into a plant that manufactures components for nuclear missiles.

"Our actions are justified under international law, and we're justified as Christians," he said in a telephone interview from the Orange County, Fla., Jail.

"This was not vandalism," he said. "We didn't go to steal or make money, but to make a powerful statement for peace and disarmament."

O'Neill, a student at North Carolina Central University, said that he and the other protesters broke through a fence at Martin-Marietta Nuclear Weapons Plant in Orlando on Easter Sunday morning.

"The purpose of our going ... was to (heed) the prophet's command in Isaiah — 'beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks,'" he said.

The group removed missile components from one kit and "symbolically beat them ..." O'Neill said. The demonstrators then went to a secure area and prayed. They finally were arrested a couple of hours later, he said.

O'Neill said he has a history of civil disobedience in the name of arms control and other political issues. At the time of his latest arrest, he was on probation for throwing blood on the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. He also was arrested for blocking traffic at Fort Bragg, N.C., to protest the training of Salvadoran soldiers there.

O'Neill said the bail was set excessively high to ensure that no more demonstrations would take place in Orlando.

Hot Dogs: Threat For Kids

Hot dogs have the "perfect" design to block a small child's airway, says a researcher who worked on a study published Thursday that found frankfurters the chief cause of food-choking deaths in youngsters. Candy, nuts and grapes were also listed as top contributors to choking deaths among children.

The researchers, led by Carole S. Harris of Falls Church, Va., collected data on children up to 9 years old in 41 states from 1979 to 1981. They found that, in the 103 cases where the food that caused the fatal choking was known, hot dogs were responsible for 17.

However, according to Dr. Nicholas Benson of the East Carolina University School of Medicine's Department of Emergency Medicine, parents should be aware that children can "choke on virtually anything — coins, small plastic game pieces, thumbtacks, safety pins — but in terms of food, hot dogs, peanuts and grapes are potential threats."

According to the report which was published in Thursday's Journal of the American Medical Association, about 75 children under the age of 9 die each year from food asphyxiation, or about one every five days. More than 40 percent of such deaths are due to hot dogs, candy, nuts or grapes, with hot dogs alone accounting for 17 percent.

One-year-olds suffered the highest incidence of food asphyxiation among all groups, choking most often on carrots and hot dogs, the study said. Hot dogs, apples, and cookies or biscuits caused half the choking deaths in infants younger than 12 months.

Grapes and peanuts were the most frequent causes of fatal choking among 2-year-olds. Of 10 food fatalities among 3-year-olds, seven were blamed on hot dogs, the researchers said.

According to Benson, choking cases can be prevented if parents

Summer Programs Designed For Gifted Kids

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

From CATS to FISH and CHIPS, the Gifted Students Institute in Arlington, Texas, offers challenging 1984 summer programs for bright students, near geniuses and geniuses, a perusal of its catalog shows.

CATS puts brainy kids on stage and in the wings during a two-week session opening July 29 at the Creative Arts Theatre & School (CATS) in Arlington. Students say lines, sing songs, execute dance steps.

Other times during the summer mind-stretching fun, gifted entering grades five to 11 run sound, dim lights and move sets.

The insider experience is expected to whet appetites of a few for a career in acting, singing, dancing, designing, choreographing and writing. For the others there will be the lifetime knowledge of how theater works, satisfying a gifted child's curiosity.

The FISH and CHIPS program, set for Southwestern University in Georgetown, Texas, casts the super bright kids in a computer-assisted study of fish.

The FISH and CHIPS students, entering grades six to eight, will help the Inland Fisheries Division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department study fish populations in a controlled reservoir.

The two-week cerebral treat starts June 17. A $420 fee covers food, lodging, materials, instruction and sponsored recreation. The FISH and CHIPS program, like others in the Institute's catalog, isn't all work, Mrs. Laura Allard, associate director, said.

Students will have supervised use of the university's recreational facilities after daily work is completed. The gamut includes swimming, tennis, racquetball, golf.

Mrs. Allard said the Gifted Students Institute for Research and Development also does research on identification, cultivation and conservation of giftedness, and provides schools with consultation service on gifted youth.

She said each summer the programs enroll a few geniuses; the rest are gifted.

"If by the time a child is 2, he can read, that's a sign of genius," Mrs. Allard said.

"Another sign is if a child can handle four numbers by age 2, has an extensive vocabulary and has little in common with kids his own age and has an insatiable curiosity.

"In every school about 1 percent of the students will be geniuses," Mrs. Allard said.

Other Institute summer programs for the gifted in Texas are offered at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth; Southwestern University, Georgetown; Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos; and Pan American University, Edinburg.

Two other programs are scheduled for Quebec, Canada, and Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico. "Vivir En Espanol" opens June 17 and runs a month at Centro Bilingue Multicultural in Morelos.

Students from outside the Fort Worth-Dallas area will pay $1,255; others $1,225. Fees include round-trip bus fare from Mexico City to Cuernavaca, four weeks' room and board with a Mexican family, weekend tours and other school-sponsored activities.

"Live in Spanish with a Spanish-speaking Mexican family, studying Spanish and touring fascinating Mexico in a total immersion session for 32 day," says the catalog. The program is for students entering grade 9 to college freshmen.

"Vivre En Francais" at Centre Linguistique, Jonquiere, Quebec, also is for students entering grade 9 to college freshmen. It gives students a chance to "live in French totally," including lodging with a French-speaking family.

The program fee is $1,295.

Fuller descriptions of the programs and prices, plus application and recommendation forms, are in the catalog obtainable by writing to the Gifted Students Institute, 611 Ryan Plaza Drive, Suite 1117, Arlington, Texas, 76011.

How Far Will Uncle Strip At Wedding?

DEAR ABBY: Next month, our son is getting married to a girl I'll call Helen.

I just heard that Helen has an uncle who always does a striptease dance at family weddings. I feel that this is in poor taste at a wedding and I'm afraid it might offend some of the guests. I spoke to my son about this, and he said he wanted everyone to have a good time.

He and Helen are paying for the entire wedding, so naturally they have the final say.

I would like your opinion.
UPSET IN VERMONT

DEAR UPSET: You've voiced your objections, which is all you can do. Find out how far this stripteaser goes. And if he strips to the point where everybody yells, "Uncle," he should save it for the stag.

DEAR ABBY: I am terribly confused about this subject. Are homosexuals and lesbians born that way? If so, is it possible to detect it before birth or in the early stages and be averted?

Nobody wants to be a homosexual today; it's a living death. If they are born that way, perhaps society would be more willing to accept them and treat them more humanely.

Please go into detail on this in your column because I am sure there are others who are just as confused as I am.
HUMAN BEING

DEAR HUMAN: My consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, a psychoanalyst who is one of the most respected authorities on the subject, says:

"There is no single cause for homosexuality. People come to it in a variety of ways. A number of recent research studies strongly suggest that many homosexuals are born with a predisposition toward such behavior, which then becomes shaped and reinforced by environmental factors. In other homosexuals, environmental factors seem to be more important than inborn ones."

According to my mail, most homosexuals and lesbians are born that way and environment has little or nothing to do with it. (Why in a family of two, three, four or more children raised in the same environment is one gay and the others are straight?)

However, one thing is clear: The vast majority of gay people do not "choose" to become homosexual; their homosexual inclinations feel just as natural to them as heterosexual inclinations feel to straights.

The statement "Nobody wants to be a homosexual today — it's a living death" is no longer true. In recent years, more and more homosexuals are "coming out," demanding their civil rights and in many quarters are living happy, productive lives without apologies or feelings of inferiority or guilt.

Although there are biblical injunctions against homosexuality (Leviticus 18:22), in recent years God-fearing, churchgoing Catholics, Protestants and Jews who are admitted homosexuals and lesbians have been made welcome in the churches of worship.

So, "detecting" and "preventing" homosexuality are not the issue. The issue is accepting homosexuals as human beings with the same needs for love, personal dignity and human support as the rest of us.

Homosexuals and lesbians are neither sick or defective. And nobody "went wrong." They are simply a minority (approximately 10 percent of our population) that for years has been misunderstood and discriminated against by an unenlightened society.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

This is the first family reunion our family has planned since Grandma died. Frankly, it's going to be the biggest mess in the world. Grandma was the only one who kept track of who was speaking to whom . . . and why.

Grandma was an apostle of grudges. She believed if you paid attention and kept a firm grip on things, you could go to a funeral and the deceased would know you were only there because you shared the same mother and father. You could fall into disfavor with Grandma for a number of reasons. Each carried its own grudge sentence.

"You didn't answer your phone when I called because you knew it was me." (Four years.)

"You never paid me the $3 when we went in on flowers for Margaret's funeral." (18 years.)

"I was the last one to hear you were expecting." (Two years.)

"When you looked through my photo albums my picture of Dad was there. When you left, it was gone." (25 years.)

"YOU know!" (This was the dreaded grudge that lasted for life.)

I remember going to one reunion where you needed a program to know which side of the picnic table to sit on. I approached Marie, one of my cousins, and said, "Are we speaking to one another this year?" "I don't think so," she said. "Why?"

"I never thanked your mother for the pen and pencil set the year I graduated."

"How old are you now, Marie?"

"Forty-seven, but I'm gonna write her tonight."

I felt my grandmother looking at me.

"I'll check in with you next year," I said.

My Grandma was really a nice lady. There wasn't anything she wouldn't do for you, but she had a sense of justice that when you had been wronged, you had to make it right. I once asked her what it would take to get my Aunt Jeanette to be welcome in her house. (Grandma sent home a loaf of freshly baked bread with her once and she never returned the pan.)

Grandma thought a bit and said, "Grovel. She would have to grovel."

The other day my mother got a thank-you note for a pen and pencil set. "Who's Marie?" she asked.

"She's the one at the reunion who grabbed the picnic table in the shade for her family." Grandma would have sentenced her to ten years for that!

Happy Sailing

The North Carolina coastal town of Beaufort has been around for more than 250 years. Its harbor attracted whaling ships and sailors as early as 1709, which by American standards represents remarkable longevity of historical value.

Scattered through the town's residential area are homes dating from the 1760s to the mid-1800s. (There are also more modern structures, of course.)

The local historical society manages 10 of those older homes, and other old homes are marked and maintained by private owners. It is a community with a past that is kept alive; it is also a community with a present and a future ... thanks to an investment of federal and local funds and some state money ... and a lot of thoughtful planning, restoration and rebuilding during a 20-year period. The payoff is visible.

Sailing craft (and power boats) are once again flocking to the harbor; and the new waterside boardwalk is becoming the sort of social center it used to be 100 years ago: alive, vibrant, with chance meetings and planned reunions of friends. It's an exciting prospect.

This is heady stuff; not only for town officials and residents, but for all North Carolinians who treasure their past as well as thrill to rejuvenation of a town that had become run down but now exudes attractiveness and charm.

We have a very strong feeling that the long hours of inspired thought and labor, of investment and dedication, are going to produce a "happy ending".

Learning Process

Saturday morning some 2,500 graduates will receive their degrees from East Carolina University at Ficklen Stadium.

The university will graduate 39 physicians and some 900 will receive advanced degrees.

It is a time of fulfillment for these graduates as they see the years of study culminating with the recognition of obtaining their degrees. Proud parents, relatives and friends will be on hand to see and hear the ceremonies.

Obtaining knowledge is hard work, as any student is aware, and Saturday's graduation is a milestone for these graduates. They should know, however, that at this point they have only been trained to learn. The learning process will go on throughout life and, with the mind-boggling changes that are taking place now, continuing to learn will be essential for their growth and development.

We wish this year's graduates the best in life and we hope they will continue to add to the wisdom they have obtained at East Carolina University.

The Revolution Is Over

The Sexual Revolution, according to "Time" magazine, is over. It started in the Sixties and apparently was fought to a standstill. Finally, according to the magazine, both sides got tired and have now given up.

I remember the beginning of the Sexual Revolutions if it were yesterday. Three friends came over to my house and told me quietly, "The revolution began at midnight. Are you with us or against us?"

"I'm with you. But for heaven's sakes, what took you so long?"

"We had to wait for the post-World War II babies to grow up. Now we're ready to overthrow the bourgeois mores of the Forties and Fifties."

I went upstairs to the bedroom and put on my old Marine uniform, which had been hanging in my closet since Japan surrendered to the United States.

"What are you doing?" my wife wanted to know.

"If you don't let it out of this room I'll tell you," I said. "The sexual revolution is going to start tonight and I'm signing up."

"But you're too old," she said. "Sexual revolutions are for young people."

"You're never too old for a sexual revolution," I said gently. "I could never face myself every morning if I knew there were so many kids out there fighting for it and I was sitting safely at home. Besides, they need a cadre of experienced G.I.'s from the big war to show them how to do it right."

"What about our children?"

"I'm doing it for them," I told her. "I want them to grow up in a world where they can be free of the dogmas and restraints that our generation was saddled with. I want them to have opportunities that were beyond our wildest dreams. Someday when the battle is won, I hope they'll be proud of the role I played in shaking off the sexual taboos and restrictions of the past."

"But suppose you don't come back?"

HOWARD AIR BASE, Panama — Over the past eight years, no international issue has had more effect on North Carolina politics than has the issue of the Panama Canal Treaty. Presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter negotiated the treaty and it was ratified by the U.S. Senate five years ago.

But President Reagan used opposition to the treaty as a major issue in the 1976 North Carolina primary. His victory here kept that campaign and probably his political career alive. U.S. Sen. John East used the issue in his successful 1980 upset of Sen. Robert Morgan, a treaty supporter. In the 1984 Senate race, Sen. Jesse Helms has made some small attempts to brand his likely Democratic opponent, Gov. Jim Hunt, as a supporter of the treaty.

In late April, a contingent of North Carolina legislators, civic leaders and reporters traveled to Panama with the N.C. Air National Guard to observe their operations in the Central American nation. During briefings, they were surprised to hear both military and State Department officials report that the treaty is working very well.

Sigrid Martrejean, American

consular for public affairs in Panama, gave the official U.S. government position on the state of Panamanian-American relations. She said they were "the best in 25 years." Unlike its neighbors to the north, Panama does not suffer from political unrest and there is very little concern that it will have any in the future. In fact, she said the future points towards democracy. Voters on May 6 will, for the first time in 16 years, elect a president and legislature.

That stability is very different from the picture Col. Joe Parker of Ahsokie, public affairs officer for the Guard, saw on his two previous trips to Panama. "The canal is a safer place today than in 1978," he said. "When we first came down here that year, the people felt they'd been frozen out and they resented it." Anti-Americanism was very strong at that time, he said.

Two legislators from eastern military districts, both of whom said they were opposed to the treaty, said they were surprised to hear and see that it is generally working. Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, is a retired Air Force colonel. He said he still thinks the United States needs to maintain a stabilizing military presence in Panama to protect the canal. The treaty does not provide for that after the year 2000. But, Lilley said he thinks the Panamanians will allow the U.S. to keep military forces in the country, under an agreement to be worked out later, and he says the good will generated by the treaties will probably be responsible for that.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, a former paratrooper, said of the treaty, "It's working better today than some of us were afraid it was going to work." He was especially glad to hear that the Inter-American Air Forces Academy, due to close Oct. 1 according to the treaty, will probably remain open under an arrangement being worked out by the two governments. The academy trains pilots for Latin and South American air forces.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, a former helicopter pilot, expressed some concern that the closing of some American facilities has already caused higher unemployment in Panama. He added that a fair assessment of the treaty couldn't be made until after the elections. "If they develop a democratic form of government ... then Panama could be the looking glass for all of Central America ... (and the treaty) would have been beneficial to both countries."

The message was optimistic and that's a nice change of pace for Central America these days.

Baker May Be Next Choice

WASHINGTON — White House insiders privately point to the outgoing Delaware governor, Pete du Pont, as President Reagan's possible fallback candidate for attorney general if White House counselor Edwin Meese III eventually asks Reagan to withdraw his own nomination.

Intimates of the president told us that sub rosa speculation places du Pont and Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh as possible Meese stand-ins. One problem: Neither one is on intimate terms with Reagan or has long-term association with him — usually a must for any attorney general. The far more likely candidate: White House Chief of Staff James Baker III.

Formally, the White House line is unvaried: As soon as the beleaguered Meese is "cleared" by the special prosecutor, the Senate will be asked to confirm him as the government's chief lawyer. Privately, White House insiders harbor growing doubts that, even if cleared, Meese will make it to Justice.

The scathing attack on Reagan administration policies read on the steps of the White House by Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, chairman of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, infuriated not only the White House staff but also the two new American archbishops selected by Pope John Paul II.

White House aides had no warning that after the Catholic clerics lunched with the president April 18, Malone would read the anti-Reagan attack prepared by the Conference's left-center staff. But neither did the two new conservative archbishops: John Joseph O'Connor of New York and Bernard Francis Law of Boston.

Hand-picked by the pope, O'Connor and Law were humiliated by Malone's statement. O'Connor called the White House later in the day to apologize, making clear he had no part in the attack on the president. That could be the start of an effort to purge the Conference's staff.

The spectre that disturbs President Reagan's peaceful sleep these nights is higher interest rates and his fear that Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker will be their agent.

White House political aides say that the "top worry" for the presidential campaign and, their polls show, for voters is not Central America, Lebanon, the Persian Gulf, nuclear arms or unemployment during the 1982 congressional election year. Now it is whether Volcker lifts interest rates to cool off the economy — and induces a recession just before the election.

Eyebrows raised in genuine anger when freshman Sen. Paul Trible was quoted in the well-informed Richmond News-Leader on April 23 that Sen. Barry Goldwater, beloved Republican elder statesman, was "falling asleep on the job."

Trible, one of the Senate's youngest members at age 37, has been well-regarded since his 1982 first-term election, partly on grounds of exemplary senatorial conduct. He damaged that reputation with Republicans last week by describing presidential counselor Edwin Meese III as an election-year political embarrassment.

Privately, many Republicans would agree with that. But the knock at the party's 1964 presidential nominee, who has had serious health problems at 75 — twice Trible's age — was widely resented. That put Trible in trouble with fellow members of the reputed most exclusive club in the world.

A second Texas Democrat, Gov. Mark White, is getting close scrutiny at high party levels, including the Mondale campaign, as possible vice presidential nominee on the Mondale ticket.

Reason for the scrutiny is age: White is 44 years old, while Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, long regarded as Mondale's preferred running mate if he decides to go South in search of one, is 63.

White came from behind to win the 1982 race for governor and ran particularly well with Hispanics. But unlike Bentsen, who is far more conservative, White would not be the magnet for conservative, rural white Democrats leaning to Ronald Reagan.

Strength For Today

There is an interesting story told in the 20th chapter of the First Book of Kings about a man set to watch a prisoner. But the guard busied himself with other things, and the prisoner escaped. When taken to task for this failure to discharge his responsibility, he replied, "While thy servant was busy here and there, lo, he was gone."

Here was a man who failed to see the difference between matters of primary and secondary importance — who allowed the incidentals of life to distract his attention from the thing of overwhelming importance.

The application of the story is plain. "Here and there" things so often take up our time that the real things of life are forgotten; and the excuse we offer is the same as that offered by this ancient Israelite: "While thy servant was busy here and there, lo, he was gone."

Public Forum

To the editor: On behalf of the individuals involved in the tornado that swept through our county on March 28, 1984, killing nine people and injuring over 100 more people and leaving many of our citizens homeless, I want to take this opportunity to thank each and every one that came out to help during this time of disaster.

There were so many local governmental agencies, departments, agencies, volunteer organizations, church groups and local volunteers that came out to help their fellowman. For this help that you rendered we are indeed very grateful. To our volunteer emergency service personnel (firemen and rescue), we owe you a big thank you for a job well done. For when the first plea for help was heard many of you left your homes and families to go help others. Many of you worked long hard hours and took off from your jobs and worked even days. You are truly dedicated to the cause to help others and you gave so unselfishly of your time.

We want to thank each person that played a role in donating food to feed the Emergency Service Personnel on a day-to-day basis as they helped clear debris and clean up land. You were so kind to do this. We also thank each person from far and near that has donated food, clothing and household items for these victims. These items have helped them greatly as they try to salvage what was left, if anything, and try to start their lives over again.

It is indeed a privilege and a pleasure to be associated with such a fine group of dedicated people that give so freely of their time and are so willing to help their fellowman. It was with your help and willingness to help others that made my job of coordinating this disaster much easier. To each of you, I would say "A Job Well Done." May God Bless you all.

To the editor: There are days when you are especially proud of being a citizen of Greenville. Today was one of those days. I had the pleasure as a councilman to attend the graduation of the first police academy class of Pitt Community College and get a good look at the fine, obviously dedicated young officers who completed this long, difficult class.

These young professional men and women will now begin providing the safety to all our citizens and we are indeed fortunate to have people of this caliber accept a position with our city in this arduous and often dangerous job. Keep your eyes open for these officers and I'm sure you'll feel continuing pride in our police department and its certain future.

Principal Cancels Visit By Bell

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The principal of Jefferson High School has canceled a visit by U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell, saying Republican organizers put impossible demands on the school's staff.

Principal Nathan Jones said organizers had insisted on scheduling Bell's visit for 2 p.m. next Monday, the same hour Dance Theater of Harlem will perform at an all-school assembly that has been scheduled for a year.

However, Brent N. Bahler, political director of the state Republican Party, said he believes Jones canceled the visit because "some teachers don't want to do anything to make a Republican look good."

Bell originally was invited to Portland by the Oregon Council of College and University Presidents to address their luncheon meeting at the University Club.

Police, who charged Ms. Evans with failing to yield the right of way, estimated damages at $300 to the Evans car and $1,500 to the Sprivey car.

Cars driven by Diane Marie Kalcinski of 209 Oak St. and Susan Lynn Pate of Courtney Square collided about 5:26 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 500 feet west of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, causing $100 damage to the Kalcinski car and $1,000 damage to the Pate vehicle.

Phillip Rowan

Pitt Gets New Livestock Agent

Phillip Rowan may be a newcomer to Pitt County, but he's no stranger to the livestock business.

Rowan, Pitt's new agricultural extension agent for livestock, says animal science, particularly his specialty of swine production, is a long-time interest. "It always interested me from the beginning," he said. "I don't really know why."

While growing up in Greensboro, Fla., he helped raise hogs on the family farm and when he entered college he chose animal science as his field.

Rowan has been on the job in Pitt County since April 2, and says his biggest challenge so far is learning his "clients," the many livestock producers in the county he's here to help.

"I'm trying to learn who everybody is," Rowan said. "I can't accomplish too much without that. My immediate plans are to get to know the producers, to gain their respect and help develop programs that will benefit them."

"I would ask that the producers in the county help me do that by calling on me and asking me questions," he added.

The livestock agent said he also plans to work closely with the Pitt County Livestock Association "to create a stronger association, one that's representative of the county," he said.

Rowan attended Abraham Bell Agricultural College and received his bachelor's and master's degrees in animal science from the University of Florida. In addition, he managed the swine research unit at the university for two years. For the past four years he served as a livestock extension agent in Suwannee County, Fla. When he and his family decided to make a move, he applied to the North Carolina State Extension Service. The growth and resources of Pitt County drew him to eastern North Carolina, Rowan said.

Rowan's hobby is jogging, and he enjoys competitive road races. He is presently living in Frog Level. He and his wife, Alise, have a 2-year-old son, Daniel.

Chamber Luncheon

Clinical psychologist Lou Gilbert of the Pitt County Mental Health Center will speak at a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce sponsored luncheon Thursday at the Sheraton Inn.

The first Small Business Leader award will also be presented.

Deadline for registration is Tuesday. For more information, contact the Chamber of Commerce.

Council officers installed included Charles Mayo, president; Shrader, vice president; Ms. Polly Dail, secretary, and James Vincent and Dr. Al King, board members.

According to campaign spending reports, Gillam had raised $245,563 and spent more than $219,000 in 1984 alone, with large amounts going to media consultants, television and radio advertising and "strategy" polls. Jones, in the same period, reported raising $38,790 while spending more than $83,000.

Jones received $5,000 from the Engineers Political Education Committee, $4,750 from the National Education Association political action committee and $1,000 each from the International Association of Drilling Contractors, the Ocean and Drilling Exploration Co., the Better Government Fund and McDermott Inc.

Campaign reports were not available for Republicans Gene Leggett or Herbert W. Lee, but Lee said money was a big problem in challenging Jones.

"Money is the mother's milk of politics," he said. "If I had the money I would give either one of them a good race. But it's expensive covering a district this size."

In his ads, Gillam has questioned Jones' support of jetties to keep Oregon Inlet open and the incumbent's commitment to legislation for marine interests.

"We have come out in opposition to the jetties," Gillam said. "The hopper dredge, which acts in the ocean the same as a dump truck does on land, is the solution to the problem."

He said dredging for the next 50 years would cost $400 million less than the $600 million jetties would cost. Recent dredging has opened the silt-choked channel to a depth of 14 feet and the inlet "is in great condition," Gillam said.

Jones said jetties have been successfully used in Louisiana and Alaska and would cost considerably less than $600 million to build.

"Already the work that they did (dredging) has begun to shoal over," he said.

Jones' efforts to get federal funding for the jetties have been thwarted for 15 years, although recently Congress showed signs of breathing new life into the project.

Insecurity

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Retired Navy Adm. Noel Gayler says preoccupation with nuclear weapons rather than encouraging U.S.-Soviet negotiations is a source of insecurity rather than military strength for either country.

He told the United Methodist Board of Discipleship that "nuclear weapons are not military weapons at all. They are instruments of genocide."

AIR SHAFT — Rescue workers, soaked in a steady rain, inspect an excavated air shaft to help in the search for five persons still missing after a car plunged into a mine hole near Llewellyn, Pa. One body has been recovered and the vehicle has been retrieved. The car fell into the shaft at top center of this photo. (AP Laserphoto)

Five People Still Missing After Plunge Into Shaft

LLEWELLYN, Pa. (AP) — A car mangled when it plunged 70 feet into a collapsed mine shaft was hauled out by a crane, but rescue workers still could not find five of the passengers, who are presumed dead.

As rescue efforts continued, relatives of the missing people made angry phone calls to the governor's office Thursday complaining that the operation was moving too slowly since the accident Saturday.

"They're going by the book. But sometimes you can't go by the book," said Noreen Bertasavage, aunt of four of the five people who still have not been located.

"I don't blame them for being critical. Remember, these peoples' families are in there," said Walter Vicinelly, a mine safety expert with the state Department of Environmental Resources.

He said workers were moving as swiftly as they could without sacrificing safety considerations.

The crane lifted the black Chevrolet Blazer out of the 15-foot wide hole and high into the air Thursday before placing it on the ground, where it was taken away on a flat-bed truck.

A front wheel on the driver's side was missing, the roof was gone, and the two front seats were bent out of shape. The body of Connie Bluis, 25, was pulled from the car Tuesday night but attempts to find the other five have failed.

Mrs. Bluis' was the only body in the car, which was found overturned. The other passengers may have fallen farther into the watery mine, which is 319 feet deep, Vicinelly said.

Workers aided by a backhoe were trying to open up an old air shaft. Rescuers hoped to use the air shaft to descend deep into the mine. The shaft's square opening measures 7 feet by 7 feet.

Three couples left Saturday for a ride along mountain roads that run up a mountain riddled by deep mine shafts.

The Blazer fell into a hole near a road that led past the old mine. The hole was marked with two logs, but the driver of the car apparently drove over the logs and the car tumbled into the shaft.

Growth Hormone May Be Helpful To More Children

CHICAGO (AP) — A growth hormone can help many more abnormally short children than previously thought, but few hospitals are equipped to detect a disorder that can cause the condition, doctors said in a publication today.

The usefulness of growth-hormone treatment for some children had previously been known, the doctors said.

But the new research showed that others who could also benefit go untreated because current tests are too insensitive to detect a subtle disorder in the way their bodies release the substance internally, according to the report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"These patients often suffer social embarrassment and anxiety," said the doctors, led by Dr. Barry B. Bercu of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

In the study, seven patients not considered deficient in growth hormone by usual standards were found to have disorders in the way their bodies secreted the hormone, doctors said.

Six of the seven grew twice as fast when they were given human growth hormone replacement therapy for six months to two years, the doctors said.

"Our studies indicate that there is a group of short children who, although not growth-hormone deficient by classic definition, do not secrete an adequate amount of growth hormone during a 24-hour period," the researchers said.

An editorial accompanying the research in the journal cautioned against hormone therapy until more studies are done on the treatment's long-term effects.

In the editorial, Dr. William H. Daughaday of the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis said few doctors would be in a position to diagnose the disorder discussed in the study because hospitals are rarely equipped for the kind of testing necessary.

"We urgently need more practical methods of measuring partial deficiency of growth hormone secretion," Daughaday wrote.

While an estimated 5,000 children have classic growth hormone deficiency, probably even more have the disorder discussed in the study and might benefit from taking added growth hormone, Bercu said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Growth-hormone therapy has previously been limited to children who grew less than 1½ inches a year, had bone structures characteristic of younger children and failed to respond to chemicals that usually stimulate production of growth hormone.

Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Possibly faulty master brake cylinders has caused the Nissan Motor Corp. in U.S.A. to recall 11,909 early-1984 model 300ZX cars, the company announced.

The cars' brake cylinders may include improperly installed valve clips, which could slip and result in a loss of brake fluid, the Carson, Calif.-based distributor of Nissan cars and trucks said in a statement released in Detroit.

The National Highway Traffic

Safety Administration in Washington was notified of the action Wednesday, Nissan said, adding that car owners will be notified by letter to return the affected cars for a free inspection and, if needed, replacement of master brake cylinders. Nissan said it knows of no accidents or injuries resulting from the problem, which is believed to exist on only a few of the cars.

Planes Grounded

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The Royal Australian Air Force grounded its 67 Mirage jet fighters today following the loss of a fourth Mirage within four weeks.

The RAAF said all Mirage squadron operations have been temporarily suspended while it inspects the undercarriages of the aircraft.

A fighter was ditched into the sea off the coast of South Australia on Thursday after the pilot was unable to confirm that both undercarriage mainwheels were locked down. The pilot was able to eject and land safely.

Another Mirage crashed April 26 after it ran out of fuel while the crew was attempting to rectify a similar undercarriage problem. No one was injured. Last month, two Mirages collided in flight during exercises, killing both pilots.

Australia purchased the jets from France 20 years ago.

Earth's Interior Causing Shifts Of Continents

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Detailed computer "snapshots" of the Earth's interior suggest that an 1,800-mile-thick rock layer churns like a slowly boiling pot, creating pressures that make the continents drift gradually over the planet's surface.

Geologists have disagreed on whether the entire layer — called the mantle — or just its upper part provide the driving force for continental drift. The new findings indicate the entire layer is involved, said Robert W. Clayton, a geophysicist at the California Institute of Technology.

The Earth, from its surface down nearly 4,000 miles to its center, is divided into three main parts. The crust extends from the surface to an average depth of 15 miles. Extending down another 1,800 miles from the bottom of the crust is the mantle. From the bottom of the mantle to the center of the earth — about 2,150 miles — is the core.

Geologists believe the Earth's crust consists of great plates that drift very slowly over the planet, carrying the continents and the ocean floors. For example, the two plates that meet at California's San Andreas Fault move past each other at about 1 1/2 inches a year.

The plates move because of a process called convection, in which the plates are "recycled" over the eons because of heat from decaying radioactive material. Hot rock rises from deep within the planet and emerges mainly in ocean-bottom ridges, while colder, surface rocks sink at the edges of some continents.

"Words can't paint the situation as black as it really is," said Juergen Gramke, director of the district's community federation. In countries where free-market forces are most powerful, as in West Germany, labor cutbacks have often been made piecemeal as specific industries came under pressure from international competition. In France, with its high percentage of nationalized industry and its layers of social security legislation, the "restructuring" is being done in one large push.

Governments are trying to cushion the blow with schemes to lower the early retirement age, encourage additional investment and retrain workers for the hoped-for jobs of the "new industrial revolution" in computers and electronics.

The Common Market in February approved a five-year, $1.3 billion ESPRIT research program to develop Europe's information technology industry. But two U.S. giants — American Telephone & Telegraph and International Business Machines — alone now spend $2 billion on similar research every year. Common Market officials admit their investment may be too little too late to catch the Americans and Japanese.

"The amount the Common Market will be spending on ESPRIT is still a fraction of what is spent here on supporting the sugar beet market," said Maurice English, spokesman for a Common Market task force dealing with information technology issues.

Some industries, like Italian textile and leather goods companies, found they still could not compete with cheap imports even after cutting jobs and automating.

meeting of the American Geophysical Union in Cincinnati.

Caltech's Anderson, Clayton and Henri-Claude Nataf, and Harvard University's Ichiro Nakanishi, John Woodhouse and Adam Dziewonski made their "snapshots" using a technique called tomography. The method is similar to that used by doctors who take "CAT scanner" X-rays of patients to gain computerized pictures of the inside of the body.

But instead of X-rays projected through a human body, the geophysicists collected extensive information on the speed of earthquake waves as they traveled through the Earth. That information was fed into a large computer to produce cross-section images of the planet's interior.

These pictures show deep underground "hot spots," where quake waves travel slowly through molten or heated rock, and cooler spots, through which the waves move quickly.

To the untrained eye, the pictures look like little more than splotchy patches of orange and blue. But to geophysicists, the orange splotches represent hot rock while the blue patches show cooler rock.

Bill Ellsworth, chief of seismology at the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, said questions remain about the accuracy of the new pictures, but they "have provided the most detailed and accurate images yet of the structure of the whole planet."

Anderson said the research not only shows the whole mantle helps cause the continents to drift, but that churning within the mantle is very complex.

Europe Tries For New Industry

By GREG MACARTHUR
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — It was, President Francois Mitterrand said, "a collective error" in judgment. No one including the top economists for the European Economic Community realized how bad the recession would get.

France's Socialist leader was responding at a recent news conference to a pointed question about a rosy forecast he made in 1978 on the future of the French steel industry. He had just wrapped up a 30-minute explanation of why in April 1984 his government planned to slash 25,000 jobs from that same industry.

It was an embarrassing question for Mitterrand, who rode to power in 1981 on a promise to increase the labor force, not reduce it. His unease is shared throughout most of Western Europe, where thousands of jobs have been or are being cut in steel, coal mining, automaking, shipbuilding and elsewhere.

The old, labor-intensive "smoke-stack industries" cannot compete with cheap labor from the developing world or with new automated plants in Japan.

Modern industrial reality has crashed down hard on the Old World, where government subsidies for ailing industries and gill-edged job security have long been the rule, where it is often politically unacceptable to fire excess workers as in the United States.

Europe, still struggling to emerge from its slump, can no longer afford to pour money into failing businesses. Private and nationalized industries are contracting, merging, modernizing, automating and in some cases disappearing.

British coal miners, who have seen their numbers dwindle by 50,000 since 1979, struck March 12 over plans to lay off 20,000 more miners and close 21 unprofitable mines.

"The problem is tragically simple," says British Coal Board chairman Ian MacGregor. "We're producing too much coal too expensively."

MacGregor used to oversee the equally troubled nationalized British steel industry, which today has 71,500 workers, compared with 166,400 four years ago.

Shipbuilding, once the industrial pride of the seafaring nation of the Netherlands, is all but finished there. In Denmark, the shipyard labor force was cut in half between 1975 and 1983.

Italy's privately owned Fiat carmaker is looking confidently toward a profitable 1984 now that it produces the same number of cars with 40,000 fewer workers.

As the jobs disappear, the social problems of widespread unemployment intensify.

At the end of January, there were an estimated 12.9 million unemployed in the 10-nation European Economic Community, or Common Market. That represented about 11 percent of the work force and an increase of 600,000 over 1982.

The overall Common Market economic growth for 1984 is projected to be about 2 percent, an improvement over the 0.8 percent of last year but still not enough to break the unemployment logjam.

Instead of importing labor from the Third World as they did in the boom years of the 1960s, some governments are offering to pay immigrant workers to go home. In France, the sentiment that immigrants are taking jobs from Frenchmen has deepened racial tensions and led to a resurgence of the xenophobic extreme right.

Polish Leader Makes 'Working Visit' To Moscow

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — President Konstantin U. Chernenko received Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski today in the Kremlin during a "working visit" that was expected to include talks on political unrest in Poland.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said Chernenko met with Jaruzelski, but gave no details on the talks. The report said the meeting came at the start of Jaruzelski's "working visit," and was attended by Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov and Prime Minister Nikolai A. Tikhonov. Gromyko and Ustinov greeted Jaruzelski, head of the Communist Party in Poland, when his flight from Warsaw arrived at Moscow airport today. Neither the length of Jaruzelski's stay nor his agenda have been announced.

Thousands of supporters of the outlawed Solidarity labor union demonstrated in Polish cities Tuesday and Thursday in defiance of the Communist regime.

East European sources said Jaruzelski would receive a Soviet medal during the visit as well as confer with Chernenko on Poland's persistent economic and political problems. The East European sources and Western diplomats said there was no sign that Kremlin's support for the general was slipping.

"The Soviet Union seems quite satisfied with the way Jaruzelski has kept things together in Poland," a Western diplomat said today who spoke on the condition of anonymity. "There are still lots of problems, and no doubt the Kremlin would like to see a stronger Polish party. But, in general, it seems Jaruzelski still has plenty of support here."

Jaruzelski and the Soviet president met in February at the funeral for Yuri V. Andropov, Chernenko's predecessor.

Jaruzelski was twice scheduled to visit Moscow last year to receive the Order of Lenin, which he was awarded in July on his 60th birthday. He was expected to be presented the award this time.

Although the prize is a traditional award on such birthdays, the medal was seen by Western observers as the Kremlin's pat on the back for Jaruzelski's efforts to suppress political unrest in Poland.

Defying such efforts, Solidarity demonstrators came out by the thousands in Polish cities this week.

Police used water cannon in Gdansk and lead-lined truncheons in Warsaw to disperse several thousand Solidarity backers who demonstrated peacefully Thursday night after attending Roman Catholic Masses to mark the anniversary of Poland's defunct, democratic constitution of 1791.

Until the Nazi and Soviet invasions of Poland in 1939, May 3 was celebrated as a national holiday. Supporters of Solidarity, which was the only independent union in the Soviet bloc, have since begun attending Mass on May 3 as a way to express unity toward their cause.

On Tuesday, anti-government demonstrations were more widespread as Solidarity supporters rallied to counter official May Day marches. Police and protesters clashed in seven cities. In Gdansk, birthplace of Solidarity, founder Lech Walesa and 1,000 others infiltrated an official parade and stunned Communist officials on the reviewing stand.

Polish government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Thursday that 686 people had been detained on May Day, and 441 were tried and punished by misdemeanor courts. Western reporters saw police detain and beat dozens more protesters Thursday evening.

Solidarity demonstrations generally have drawn fewer participants compared to last year's numbers.

Thatcher Party Sees Losses

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher celebrated her fifth anniversary in power today, but her Conservative Party suffered heavy defeats as the Labor Party staged its biggest comeback in local elections since she was took office.

The Conservatives lost control of 14 towns and cities, including the central England industrial metropolis, Birmingham, in balloting Thursday.

The Tories were battered by the centrist Social Democratic-Liberal Party alliance as well as the socialist Labor Party in what was seen as the most significant test of political sentiment since Mrs. Thatcher won a second five-year term by a landslide in general elections last June.

"It's bad, but not disastrous," said Health Secretary Norman Fowler as results poured in early today from the balloting for 218 local authorities and three special parliamentary elections.

In the three parliamentary elections, caused by the deaths of legislators, the Conservatives only narrowly held their bastions of South-West Surrey and Stafford, while Labor firmly retained the socialist stronghold of Cynon Valley.

A British Broadcasting Corp. computer analysis of the overall results showed a 9 percent swing to Labor, largely at Conservative expense, since Mrs. Thatcher won with 42.4 percent of the vote last June.

"Labor demonstrated it has begun the long climb back to government," declared party general secretary Jim Mortimer.

With results in from 192 districts still comparable — boundaries have changed in others — the Conservatives lost 266 local seats, nearly twice their 135 gains. Labor had 182 gains and 137 losses, while the alliance, doing well in rural towns, had 203 gains and 62 losses.

Labor's strong showing in the local elections surpassed the party's revival in opinion poll ratings under its eloquent new leader, Neil Kinnock. Labor is running in the polls at around 36 percent, four to six points behind the Conservatives, with the alliance at 20 percent.

Kinnock has tried to trim Labor's party's radical platform and internal fighting which led to its worst election defeat of modern times.

Conservative managers blamed the defeats on the ruling party's vulnerability to protest votes after a big general election win.

As Mrs. Thatcher marked the fifth anniversary today of her election as Europe's first woman prime minister, an anniversary poll published in the Liberal Observer newspaper said most British voters regard her as dictatorial, uncaring and too right-wing. To the East bloc, she is known as the Iron Lady — a nickname she says she enjoys.

Despite the complaints expressed in the poll, 61 percent of a 998-voter sample questioned by Harris Research Center said she was doing "well" or "fairly well."

"I'm absolutely in tune with how people feel ... not just in their pockets, but in their bones, in their hearts and in their minds," Mrs. Thatcher said recently.

Mrs. Thatcher, 58, must call the next national election by June 1988, but can call it early. She announced last weekend that she still aims to be prime minister in 1990. Her anniversary thoughts, she said, will dwell "on the future — on the next five years and beyond."

"Few can have enjoyed as much as she does the intertwining benefits of disciplined willpower and astounding luck," commented the independent Sunday Times.

Israel, Syria Still Deadlocked

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel and Syria remained locked in a dispute today over three Israelis captured in northern Lebanon, and efforts to form a coalition government stalled as a Moslem militia leader insisted on a larger role.

The Shiite Moslem leader, Nabih Berri, said he would participate in the new Cabinet only if two new ministries were created and assigned to him — one to deal with the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon and the other with reconstruction of Beirut's war-ravaged southern suburbs.

The three Israelis, being held in the Syrian capital of Damascus, were captured by Syrian troops Tuesday near Batroun, 28 miles north of Beirut.

Israel said the three worked in Israel's liaison office in the Beirut suburb of Dbaye and were on a sightseeing trip to a Roman ruin when they strayed into Syrian-held territory.

A Syrian official in Damascus who spoke on condition that he not be identified said the three had admitted they were "on a spying mission" and opened fire when spotted by a Syrian patrol.

"They certainly were not on a picnic, as Israel claimed," the official said. "The area is not a desert so that someone can get lost. They were driving on a well-known road ... They knew exactly where they were driving and toward where they were heading."

An unidentified Western diplomatic source quoted in a Beirut newsletter also said there was a shootout between the three Israelis and Syrian soldiers. But he said the Israelis fired back only after the Syrians started shooting.

Lebanon's Prime Minister Rashid Karami held a one-hour meeting Thursday night with U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew.

"They discussed a broad range of current issues of importance and mutual interest to their respective governments," said U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart.

He declined to elaborate. But diplomatic sources who spoke on condition they weren't identified said the two may have discussed the Israeli-Syrian situation.

Karami scheduled a meeting today with Berri in an attempt to reach a compromise over Berri's demand for two more Cabinet portfolios.

Berri, 45, has refused to accept his appointment as minister of justice, water and electricity resources and insisted on the creation of the two new portfolios.

Berri said Druse opposition leader Walid Jumblatt supported this demand and had pledged not to attend any session of the new Cabinet until both ministries were created.

Karami, a pro-Syrian Sunni Moslem, formed the 10-man Cabinet on Monday, with half the seats allocated to Christian and half to Moslems and Druse.

Sniper fire sounded in Beirut today as shellfire and rocket-propelled grenades echoed sporadically through the downtown commercial district and the central residential neighborhood.

At least two people were killed and 30 wounded in hostilities along the "green line" that separates Christian east Beirut from the Moslem west in the 24 hours ending at daybreak today, police said.

Korean Students, Police Clash As Pope Visits

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pope John Paul II took a helicopter ride to an island leper colony today and touched the heads of the most seriously ill patients in blessing before bad weather made him hurry back to the mainland.

Earlier today, at the site of a bloody anti-government rebellion four years ago, the pope told Koreans to strive to resist hatred. On Thursday, the pope coughed and blinked back tears as he breathed tear gas fumes wafting from a nearby university in Seoul where police clashed with demonstrating students.

Two more demonstrations involving thousands of students were held at two universities today, and again riot police fired tear gas at rock-throwing protesters. South Korean students have been protesting limits on campus freedoms and demanding broader civil rights.

South Korea's Roman Catholic bishops declared today a day of national reconciliation, a theme proclaimed by the Vatican for the pope's five days in Korea during his 11-day trip to Asia and the Pacific.

The pope took an afternoon 80-mile helicopter ride to the leper colony, South Korea's largest, on the island of Sorokdo, and arrived in drizzling rain.

He held a 20-minute Mass in Korean for some 400 Catholics among the 3,000 patients and staff at the two-story brick hospital.

As he passed through the crowd of people, who were sitting on the floor or in wheelchairs, the pope touched several patients on the head in blessing.

He had prepared a speech, in English, to tell the patients that Jesus had special empathy for the suffering and point out that leprosy was common in Jesus' lifetime.

In the text, the pope said: "It is necessary for you to know that Christ is particularly close to you." He added that Jesus, by dying on a cross, offered an answer to the "unspeakable anguish of the question, 'Why me?'"

But the weather grew worse, and there was worry it could affect the helicopter trip back to the mainland, so the pope left without delivering the remarks. The speech was then read by a Korean priest who later told reporters the pope gave $25,000 and a three-foot-high wooden cross to the hospital.

Leprosy, also called Hansen's disease, leaves lesions on the skin and nerves and can severely disfigure its victims. It can be successfully treated with drugs. This morning, the pope said Mass in a stadium in Kwangju, a southern city where, in 1980, hundreds of people died in rioting triggered by a government decision to extend martial law and the arrest of several opposition leaders.

Shouts of "Mansei!" (may you live 10,000 years) and "Viva il Papa!" (long live the pope) greeted the pontiff as he circled the stadium standing on his white bulletproof "popemobile." Thousands more people lining the 12-mile motorcade route into the city gave him a tumultuous welcome.

Inside the stadium, were more than 70,000 people, most of them women wearing brightly colored traditional Korean costume and white veils.

The pope celebrated the Mass, which included baptism of 72 adults, in Korean, a language he learned for his visit to this country, whose 40 million people include an estimated 1.7 million Catholics.

In his sermon, delivered in English, John Paul said, "I am keenly aware of the deep wounds that pain your hearts and souls from personal experiences and from recent tragedies." Such tragedies, he added, "are difficult to overcome from a merely human point of view, especially for those of you from Kwangju."

Kwangju was the site of the student-led rebellion that occurred in May 1980 and lasted for a week before it was crushed by paratroopers who seized a student stronghold.

The pope told the audience that being a Christian means to "keep yourselves free ... from hatred and rancor."

The government has said 189 people died in the uprising, but foreign journalists on the scene counted several hundred bodies, and dissident leaders claimed as many as 2,500 were killed.

Later in an address to foreign diplomats, the pope condemned "naked terrorism" such as the Oct. 9, 1983 bombing in Rangoon, Burma, that killed 21 persons including four South Korean Cabinet ministers. He said the violence resulted from "a single-minded search ... to ensure military superiority."

Two North Korean army officers charged with carrying out the terror bombing were sentenced to death by a Burmese court. South Korea has demanded that North Korea admit and apologize for the bombing, but North Korea denies responsibility.

Autopsy Withheld

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Although he could "sympathize" with the news media, a judge said releasing an autopsy report on David Kennedy would hamper the investigation into the source of cocaine found in Kennedy's hotel suite.

An attorney for a newspaper said he may appeal Thursday's decision by Circuit Judge R. William Rutter Jr., who first studied the courtly medical examiner's report on what killed the 28-year-old son of Ethel and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

"Certainly we acknowledge the public's right to know," Rutter said. But in this case, he said, "I feel that we have to balance ... in favor of the public's right to be protected."

Several news organizations had sued law enforcement agencies for more information on the death of Kennedy, found dead April 25 in a suite at the Brazilian Court Hotel.

Initial tests showed traces of cocaine and the painkiller Demerol in Kennedy's body, according to the Palm Beach Sheriff's Crime Lab.

Police said 1.3 grams of 70 percent pure cocaine were found in the suite. The autopsy report, delivered to Rutter on Thursday, was expected to show whether a drug overdose caused the death.

Palm Beach Police Chief Joseph L. Terlizze has said the person who distributed the cocaine could face criminal charges of contributing to Kennedy's death.

"I have determined there truly is in fact a good faith and ongoing investigation.

U.S. Autos Record Peak Sales Period

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. automakers have recorded their best late-April selling period in five years — because of booming demand and a shortage of Japanese cars in American showrooms, analysts say.

Domestic car sales for the last 10 days of April, reported Thursday, were up 36.4 percent compared with last year.

Importers, mainly the Japanese, grabbed just 19.4 percent of the market, the lowest since 18.7 percent in October 1979. Japan's voluntary restrictions on imports to the United States have cut the variety and availability of their stocks.

"These guys need cars," said David Healy, automotive analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

"The average import dealer now consists of a guy with an order book and a lot of dust and cobwebs," Healy said. "These guys are just out of cars."

The sales for the end of the month put the figures for all of April at 30 percent ahead of the April 1983 rate. The annual selling rate — considered the most accurate yardstick for how sales are doing — was projected at 8.4 million in late April and 8.1 million for the whole month. That means that many cars would be sold if those rates held steady for a year.

U.S. auto sales have not topped 8 million since 1979.

Ford Motor Co. led the sales tally for late April with deliveries to dealers up 53 percent from the same period a year ago. Ford said it delivered 65,702 cars in the 10 days, up 53 percent from 48,285 a year ago.

General Motors Corp. sales were up 35.6 percent and Chrysler Corp. sales were up 14.1 percent. GM said it sold 164,171 cars in the period, up 35.6 percent from 136,175 a year earlier. Chrysler Corp. sold 34,059 cars in the period, 14.1 percent above last year's 33,596.

American Motors Corp. sales were down 20.6 percent and Volkswagen of America Inc. sales were down 2.1 percent.

PHILADELPHIA FIRE — Firemen battle a multiple alarm fire, blamed on sparks from a torch being used by a demolition crew, in Philadelphia Thursday. The fire destroyed an eight story building, damaged at least 17 others and forced the evacuation of 25,000 people. (AP Laserphoto)

Torch Ignites Building Hours After Crew Had Been Warned

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A demolition crew had been cited for improperly using a torch just hours before sparks ignited a nine-alarm fire, damaging 18 buildings and forcing 25,000 people from a downtown shopping district, Mayor W. Wilson Goode said.

The six-story Harrison Court building, a 90-year-old structure being renovated, was engulfed within minutes after the blaze broke out at 2 p.m. Thursday. The building had been hit April 6 by two small fires, both started by sparks from workmen's torches, the Fire Department said.

Embers and chunks of ash rained on streets and buildings, damaging about 20 cars in a nearby garage, and the heat buckled a wall in the new Gallery II section of the Gallery shopping complex, a focus of downtown renovation.

"It just went nuts," said Wilbur Crawford, an assistant director of the Hussian Art School, located next door.

Two firefighters suffered back injuries battling the blaze, which was under control within three hours. Firefighters continued hosing down "hot spots" Thursday night, officials said.

Fire Capt. Robert Drennen said the fire began when sparks from a worker's torch on the third floor apparently dropped down an elevator shaft and ignited rubbish in the basement.

The city's Department of Licenses and Inspections had cited the crew at 10:30 a.m. Thursday for improperly using a propane torch, and for failing to have a watchman on duty, said Linda Wright Avery, press aide to the mayor.

Another citation had been issued April 18 to the demolition company, Geppert Bros. of Colmar, Pa., which was tearing down the interior, the mayor said.

A woman who answered the phone at Geppert Bros. on Thursday said the company had no comment.

"My information is that they were using unsafe demolition techniques, which means that they were probably using some kinds of torches and things like that at the scene," Goode said.

Carley Capital Group of Madison, Wis., which bought Harrison Court last August, planned to spend $16 million to turn the building into office and retail space.

The mayor said 20,000 people were evacuated from the 120-store Gallery complex, with 5,000 more routed from nearby offices as traffic was sealed off for several blocks. Buses and subways were detoured away from the fire, which damaged a new commuter rail station below the shopping center.

At the Reading Terminal train station a few blocks away, fire extinguishers were used to put out embers that landed on the roof. Windows on at least one building near Harrison Court were blown in by the heat, and a water tower above nearby store caught fire.

Goode distributed a flier pledging to send city workers into the area today with offers of aid to fire-damaged businesses.

Methodists Seeking Unity

BALTIMORE (AP) — United Methodists are yearning to live up to the first part of their name. But at their national governing conference, they face such divisive questions as abortion, homosexuality and returning the church to its evangelical roots.

Delegates from across the country, occupied today mainly with reports and preliminary committee sessions on the third day of the 11-day convention, also are celebrating the 200th anniversary of the church in America.

It was in 1784 that 60 circuit-riding Methodist preachers got together in this Maryland city and organized a denomination independent of the Church of England.

The 18th century Methodist movement for evangelism and spiritual vigor first arose under the influence of John Wesley, an Anglican priest who never intended to form a separate denomination.

But the warm, informal style of prayer, study and preaching he engendered among England's working classes spread to America via preachers he sent, ordained irregularly by him after London's bishop refused to do it. Those fervent, roving Methodist preachers in early America, exhorting in the towns and riding their rugged circuits on the western frontier, made up the little group that launched the new denomination.

By the mid-19th century it was the nation's biggest denomination, since outnumbered by Roman Catholics and Southern Baptists. U.S. Methodism also diverged into about 40 different bodies.

But the 9.4 million United Methodists, plus 1.3 million baptized babies awaiting confirmation, are by far the largest of that tradition.

It often is called the most "American" of church bodies because its origins and development coincided with that of the nation and it characteristically focuses on cultural trends, often seeming to reflect them.

That tendency was a worry at this legislative convention, which has widely expressed hopes for returning the denomination to the evangelistic zeal of its Wesleyan heritage.

Calling for such a resurgence, the Rev. Earl D. C. Brewer of Atlanta says the church's present Book of Discipline fails to stress the duty of "spreading Scriptural holiness" — the church's founding aim.

"Yet this is crucial for the new age," he says.

A study report, "Into Our Third Century," says the denomination is suffering from "a lack of clear identity and purpose; a loss of evangelistic zeal; preoccupation with institutional survival; lack of cohesion and consensus; a mood of pessimism about the future."

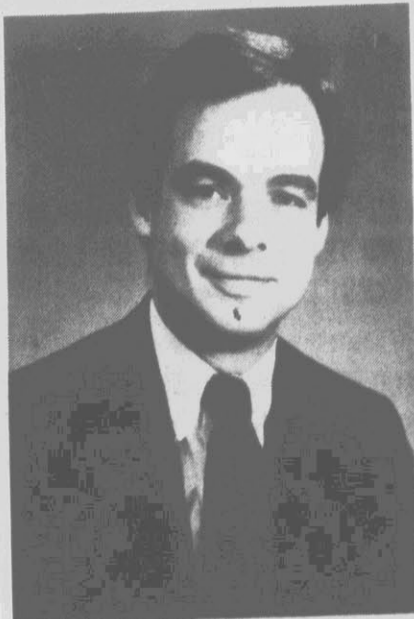

Although other mainline denominations have suffered membership declines in the last 15 years, United Methodism has had the heaviest loss, down 1.5 million over that period.

Retail Sales Reports Climb

The nation's major retailers reported strong April sales compared with the same month a year ago. But industry analysts said much of the gain could be discounted due to a later Easter this year.

Sales increases reported on Thursday ranged from just under 10 percent at Sears, Roebuck & Co. and K mart Corp., the nation's biggest retailers, to 43 percent at Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the mushrooming discount chain in the South.

Last year's Easter sales went into March reports because the holiday fell on April 3, and thus the following month's sales were comparatively uninspired, retailers said. Easter was April 22 this year.

Pre-Easter is traditionally a strong sales period for the change-of-seasons clothing and hardgoods such as lawn and garden supplies.

Wall Street analysts found April's performance disappointing, but said they still expected 1984 sales to show healthy growth, even though the comparison is against the strong first year of the 1983 recovery.

Most of the big retailers said apparel sales, traditional Easter fare, led their volume.

Sears, the nation's largest retailer, said it also had strong results in major appliances. Such items frequently are bought on credit, and such buying is considered an indicator of consumer confidence in the economy.

Sears said its April sales rose 9.8 percent to a record $1.96 billion. For the first quarter, which for retailers is February through April, Sears' sales totaled $5.7 billion, up 6.8 percent.

K mart, the No. 2 chain, said April sales increased 9.6 percent to $1.5 billion. Discounting the effect of newly opened stores, sales were up 8 percent. First-quarter sales totaled $4.2 billion, up 6.2 percent.

J.C. Penney Co., No. 3, said April sales jumped 27.6 percent to $865 million, the biggest increase for a month in 20 years. First-quarter sales totaled $2.5 billion, up from 15.7 percent.

Federated Department Stores Inc., No. 4, reported sales of $690.2 million in April, a gain of 17.3 percent. For the first three months, sales rose 12 percent to $2 billion.

Dayton-Hudson Corp., No. 5, had April sales of $509.7 million, an increase of 19.5 percent. For the quarter, sales rose 18.1 percent to $1.6 billion.

Montgomery Ward & Co., No. 6, said April sales jumped 12.3 percent to $460.1 million. For the quarter, sales were up 13.7 percent to $1.4 billion.

F.W. Woolworth Co., No. 7, said April sales rose 16 percent to $442.8 million and first-quarter sales rose 7.1 percent to $1.2 billion.

Wal-Mart, No. 8, said its April results totaled $467 million.

U.S. Is Most Tornado-Prone Nation In World

By MALCOLM RITTER

AP Science Writer

With an average of more than two tornadoes daily, with no state or time of year entirely safe, the United States is the most tornado-prone nation in the world, the National Weather Service says.

And twisters from Texas through the Carolinas on Wednesday and Thursday have helped give 1984 the busiest start tornado-watchers have seen in a decade.

"Most countries experience tornadoes, but not the level we do here," said Ed Ferguson, deputy director of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The major reason is geography: the mountains and prairies of the United States help form a west-to-east assembly line that delivers most of the nation's tornadoes to the area between the Rockies and the Appalachians. This year it and less prolific tornado mechanisms produced 491 twisters nationally up to late Thursday morning, Ferguson said, compared to only 327 for the same period last year.

This year's running count may be reduced slightly by revisions, he said, but he believes 1984 is off to the busiest start in 10 years.

On average, about 740 tornadoes strike the United States each year. They have touched down on every day and in every state, but are most common from April to June. They concentrate in an area called Tornado Alley, an oval-shaped region from north-central Texas across central Oklahoma and into eastern Kansas, eastern Nebraska and northwest Iowa. It stretches up to 200 miles wide.

Tornado Alley is the last stop for the tornado assembly line, which begins near the West Coast. Large low-pressure troughs there send smaller low-pressure centers eastward. The centers strengthen as they slip down the eastern slopes of the Rockies. By the time they reach the Plains, their counter-clockwise rotation is strong enough to draw in warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico. The Rockies and the Appalachians channel the Gulf air on its trip northward.

When the Gulf air hits the cooler air in the Plains, it rises. Then its moisture condenses in colder reaches of the atmosphere. If it has been lifted high enough, it can become a thunderstorm.

Turning a thunderstorm into a tornado requires help from the jet stream, which flows five or six miles above the Gulf air. It tends to run from the southwestern United States across Texas before curving northeastward, and during prime tornado season it tends to run over Tornado Alley. The jet stream helps pull the warm, moist air upward to further the storm-forming process.

Still, a severe thunderstorm needs more help to spawn tornadoes. Thunderstorms lose energy as their rain evaporates, and only a few can intensify by capturing enough moisture and heat from their immediate surroundings to start sending funnel clouds toward the ground.

This year's onslaught of tornadoes has abruptly ended a period of relatively few tornado deaths. The average number is 88 per year, but this year's total had surpassed 100 even before all the totals were in from the outbreak Wednesday and Thursday.

Last year only 34 people died from tornadoes, and 1981's total of 24 was a record low.

N.C. Leads Nation In Tornado Deaths So Far, But List Grows

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The peak month for tornadoes is just getting under way but the killer storms have already claimed three times as many American lives this year as all of 1983.

Tornadoes had killed 105 Americans as of Thursday, the National Weather Service reported, compared to only 34 twister deaths in all of last year. The United States has averaged only 88 tornado deaths a year over the last three decades.

Weather officials also noted an increase in the number of tornadoes, 490 so far this season compared to last year's total of 235.

And traditionally May is the most dangerous month for tornadoes, averaging 162 twisters in the month. June is second and, normally, April places third in tornado frequency.

North Carolina has been hardest hit this year with 44 lives lost to date, more than 800 injuries and $104 million in damages.

Other states recording tornado fatalities included South Carolina, 18; Mississippi, 15; Oklahoma, 13; Arkansas, 7; Alabama, 3; Wisconsin, 3 and Minnesota, 2.

Tornado experts at the weather service report that twisters are perhaps the most destructive of all nature's storms.

They strike suddenly and their strong winds can uproot trees, lift houses off their foundations, twist structural steel frames and cut swaths of destruction through cities and countryside.

The tornado itself is a long whirling cloud that extends downward from the base of a severe thunderstorm. Sometimes it touches the ground, sometimes it skips from point to point or draws back up into the parent cloud.

When conditions in an area are ripe for the formation of tornadoes, the weather service issues a tornado watch. If one is sighted by a spotter or on radar, a tornado warning follows.

People who hear a tornado warning are urged to follow these safety rules:

—If at home, stay away from windows, doors and outside walls. Go to the basement or an interior part of the structure on the lowest level. Get under something sturdy and protect your head.

—Leave mobile homes. If there is no substantial shelter nearby, lie flat on low ground, but stay alert for flooding.

—In public buildings, look for designated shelter areas. Otherwise interior hallways on the lowest floors are usually safest.

—Outdoors, lie flat on low ground and use the arms to protect your head.

—Do not try to drive a car or truck away from the funnel, instead leave the vehicle for low ground.

The destructive elements of a tornado are the strong winds, heavy rain, hail, lightning and the pressure drop within the funnel.

Winds whirl at 200 miles per hour around the center of the storm, rain can be intense, hail carried by the winds can penetrate like bullets and lightning may be almost continuous at the storm center. When the low pressure in center of a storm envelops a closed house the high pressure inside the building can cause it literally to explode.

On average, the width of the path of destruction is about 250 yards. Half of all tornadoes travel less than five miles on the ground, although a few have been tracked for as far as 200 miles.

Most Find Homes

By The Associated Press

Four of every five North Carolina families left homeless by tornadoes on March 28 have found living quarters through federal agencies, officials say.

"The housing program is in very good shape now," Perry Jenifer, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency said Thursday. "The numbers (of families housed) are rising steadily every day. But we're prepared to be here until everyone has been helped."

At least 374 families statewide had been moved into government-owned mobile homes, rental houses, apartments, hotels or motels provided by FEMA. Another 48 had received checks totaling more than $22,000 for minimal home repair by Thursday, Jenifer said.

At least 255 mobile homes had arrived in North Carolina by early Thursday, Jenifer said, and 241 sites had been approved for mobile home installation.

About 541 families were eligible for aid following the twisters.

Take Heart: NASA Says Any Citizen Can Go Up In Space

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without any fanfare, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has issued the regulations under which ordinary people can fly aboard the space shuttle. They don't seem too tough, but hold on to your resume for a while.

You've got a shot at a shot if you're healthy, responsible, willing to undergo training and fit the requirements for specific shuttle missions. You, too, can be a "Space Flight Participant Applicant."

"Selection of space flight participants will be based on their comparative abilities to fulfill the objectives and purposes stated in announcements of opportunity covering one or more space transportation system missions," said the regulations, published last week in the Federal Register.

The rules were sandwiched in with ones for reporting pesticides, proposals to consolidate the customs districts of Duluth and Milwaukee and an assertion that pads for woodwind instrument keys from Italy are being sold in the United States at less than fair value.

"The intended effect of this rule is to increase the access of the general public to the STS (space transportation system), the announcement said. "This... is not a solicitation of applications to participate in space flight."

NASA said many suggestions were offered for picking would-be space travelers.

"Some suggested that lottery tickets be sold and the proceeds used to defray the costs of the program and fund other programs," NASA said. It declined because "such a procedure would not permit selection of candidates who could best suit certain objectives associated with NASA's responsibilities under the Space Act."

There were suggestions that only people from special groups be eligible. No, said NASA. The intent "is to open the opportunity to fly to the widest possible segment of population."

To be considered, applicants must be free of medical conditions that would impair their ability to fly; be willing to undergo background investigation; be willing to undergo training and meet requirements that are stated in announcements of opportunity.

"Applications received before specific flight opportunities have been announced will not be accepted," NASA said. "Opportunities to apply will be made available at a later date."

An outside review panel will evaluate qualifications of applicants, but NASA makes the final selection. "NASA will encourage the participation of a wide and diverse array of participants, including women and minorities," the announcement said.

Insurance Industry 'Confused'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the Federal Trade Commission describes the insurance industry as rife with deception and confusion and says the federal government should act to protect consumers from "shoddy practices in this industry."

Insurance buyers suffer large-scale economic injury "from inadequate disclosures, deceptive sales practices, and poor state regulation," Michael Pertschuk told a House Judiciary subcommittee on Thursday.

He testified at a hearing on the 1945 McCarran-Ferguson Act, which exempts the insurance industry from federal regulation.

"A substantial federal role in monitoring and policing the insurance industry is one major way to ensure that consumers are adequately protected against the shoddy practices in this industry," Pertschuk said.

"The deception and confusion that abounds in the insurance industry today is the best evidence that the states are either unwilling or unable to restrain this giant," he said.

Pertschuk said the average rate of return on the investment portion of all whole life insurance policies in the hands of consumers in 1977 was 1.3 percent per year.

He said the commission concluded during the 1970s that this low level of return was caused by a marketing system that made it virtually impossible for a prospective policyholder, other than an expert, to compare the yields of policies and of competing investment opportunities.

Congress, under insurance industry lobbying, barred the FTC from even studying insurance, an action which Pertschuk called "a legislative prefrontal lobotomy." He then was FTC chairman but now is nearing the end of his term as one of five commissioners.

Voicing the industry's side was Frank J. Patterson of the Independent Insurance Agents of America. He said state regulation of insurance "is most compatible with the public interest."

Patterson said consumer insurance information is abundant and said that agents are prepared to answer all consumer questions.

Mondale Has Backing For Texas Caucuses

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Walter F. Mondale heads into Saturday's Texas caucuses with the backing of influential Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and most of the state's party establishment, but Gary Hart's supporters say they have laid the groundwork for an upset in the delegate-rich Lone Star state.

"We expect to win," Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, Hart's co-chairman, said Thursday in the state where 169 delegates — and a big share of Hart's hopes for the Democratic presidential nomination — are at stake in evening caucuses.

The third candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, continued to press his demands for changes in party rules, but at the same time was involved in quiet discussions aimed at resolving any disputes before the mid-July national convention in San Francisco.

Jackson disclosed this week that he has met regularly with Robert Beckel, manager of Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign, and Bert Lance, the Georgia Democratic chairman and former Carter administration official.

And on Wednesday, following the candidates' debate in Dallas, Jackson and Mondale held a private and unscheduled 20-minute meeting with former Democratic Party chairman Robert S. Strauss.

The meeting with Strauss, a Texan, was aimed at having him mediate disputes to lessen the chance of damaging fights at the national convention. "It would not be good for the nation or for the Democratic Party or for Jackson for him to be incorrectly perceived as or be a mischief maker, and he understood that better than anyone," Strauss told The Washington Post.

Although he was put on the defensive in the candidates' debate, Jackson has been speaking in conciliatory tones in recent days and talking about healing the party's divisions for the November race against President Reagan.

Mondale, who is remaining in Texas to campaign toward the caucuses, picked up the endorsement Thursday of Bentsen, one of those prominently mentioned as a possible vice presidential nominee on a Mondale ticket.

Bentsen appeared with Mondale at a fundraiser in Austin, and referring to Mondale's early losses to Hart, said: "We like a leader who can take a hit and not quit."

Campaigning later in Houston, Mondale chided Hart for leaving Texas two days before the caucuses to campaign in Ohio, Indiana and Louisiana.

"He pulled out of the state," Mondale said. "I believe that's the wrong way to treat this good state."

By contrast, Mondale was remaining in Texas through Saturday and campaigning today in Corpus Christi, Laredo, McAllen and San Antonio.

Hart defended his decision to leave early, saying "I have spent a lot of time in the state," and aides said they were leaving to allow volunteers to concentrate on get-out-the-vote efforts.

Texas caucuses are crucial for Hart, the Colorado senator who has said he expects to do well in western states. Texas will send the third largest delegation to the national convention.

Texas Democrats will decide 169 convention delegates in a complicated system which allows only those Democrats who vote in Saturday's primary election for state and local offices to participate in the evening caucuses.

Bentsen predicted Mondale would carry the precinct caucuses, where organization is crucial. But Hart's chairman, Frost, said Hart's forces were prepared for the meetings.

"We have placed virtually our entire emphasis on organization from the very beginning," Frost said. "We have done things right."

More than 600 delegates are at stake between now and May 8, and Mondale holds nearly a two-to-one lead in delegates chosen thus far. Mondale has 1,236.05 delegates to 670.75 for Hart and 208.2 for Jackson. It takes 1,967 delegates to win the nomination.

Jackson campaigned in Tyler, Texas, on Thursday and repeated his pledge to visit Nicaragua to try to improve relations there.

Jackson told an airport gathering he planned to "meet with the contra group. We can use our minds this time and relate to the contra group." The contras are CIA-backed guerrillas trying to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista regime.

But later Jackson told reporters he meant to say he would meet with the Contadora group, representatives of four Latin America governments who have a peace plan for the region. He said he'd also meet with the Sandinistas.

In other political developments, the national Democratic Party agreed to abandon efforts to challenge the delegates from Iowa and New Hampshire, which were selected in caucuses and primaries held earlier than national party rules allowed.

Although both states flouted party rules in scheduling their contests, the decision was made to prevent a messy floor fight at the convention.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush was in Arkansas today after stopping in Ohio on Thursday. In Ashland, Ohio, he paid tribute to the late Rep. John Ashbrook, and in Little Rock, Ark., he was trying to boost Republican Rep. Ed Bethune's Senate bid.

Parents Seek Vaccine Payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration opposes legislation to impose a surcharge on vaccines to compensate children who suffer adverse effects while relatives say a surcharge would help end an "American tragedy."

Dr. Edward N. Brandt, Health and Human Services assistant secretary for health, said Thursday that while the proposal by Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., "has a laudable goal," it also has major weaknesses.

The legislation would require the federal government to impose a surcharge on vaccines to provide compensation for victims. It also imposes record-keeping and reporting requirements, studies of the relationship between vaccines and certain illnesses and development of parent-information material on the risks of vaccines.

The bill establishes lists of symptoms covered and the time period in which they must occur after vaccination in order for the child to qualify for compensation. For example, hospital care would have to cost at least $2,500 or the child would have to die of complications before compensation would be paid.

"The bill establishes a strong presumption that the vaccine is responsible for essentially any adverse condition that happens after immunization unless there is incontrovertible evidence of other causation," Brandt said.

Major Defense Plans Likely To Survive

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's argument that further cuts in the Pentagon's latest budget proposal would harm U.S. security is likely to be rejected by Congress, but in time the military will probably get the weapons it wants.

A reluctant Weinberger on Thursday submitted a list of budget cuts to Congress, trimming the Pentagon's proposed authorized spending for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 from the original $305 billion to $291.1 billion.

Weinberger's proposal was in line with a March 15 agreement between President Reagan and Senate Republicans, who are worried about rising federal deficits.

Originally, the administration sought an inflation-adjusted increase of 13 percent in the fiscal 1985 Pentagon budget, which would be the fourth year of Reagan's five-year military buildup.

The plan submitted Thursday would trim that increase to 7.8 percent, a figure still far above the 3.5 percent recommended by House Democrats, who hold the majority in that body.

Last year, as Congress prepared to cut the Pentagon budget, Weinberger refused to submit a list of the best ways to trim back, leading to pleas from administration supporters over the past four months that he should be more cooperative this time around.

Since the original budget was unveiled in January, there have been numerous "alternative" budgets proposed by various private interest groups, most of them saying the Pentagon budget can be trimmed without hurting American defenses.

Weinberger disagreed Thursday, arguing that the high 1985 budget was justified by the rising Soviet threat and saying the latest cuts would only further harm what he and Reagan believe are necessary efforts to build U.S. military capability.

But the $13.9 billion in cuts leaves untouched all the Pentagon's "big ticket" items that would simultaneously overhaul all three legs of the nation's nuclear strike triad — of land-based missiles, manned bombers, and missile-firing submarines.

Rather than cutting items such as the MX missile, B-1 bombers and new nuclear-tipped cruise missiles, the Pentagon proposed trimming a little bit from a large number of conventional weapons — such as buying fewer fighters for the Air Force and tanks for the Army.

That process is known in defense spending circles as "stretching out," or taking longer to buy the same number of weapons.

Weinberger and a number of defense experts argue that "stretch-outs" are a bad way to buy weapons because in the end, additional production and labor costs mean the government ends up paying more for the same amount of weaponry.

But "stretch-outs" are popular on Capitol Hill — where members of Congress often see weapons as jobs programs and are thus reluctant to shut down production lines.

In addition, since few in Congress are really experts on what weapons the Pentagon needs, they often don't deny a defense program the un-informed services say they need.

The list of major weapons systems killed by Congress over the Pentagon's objections can be summed up in one word — zero.

"Eventually, we'll get all our ships. It'll just take longer," said one Navy officer Thursday, speaking on condition he not be named.

The latest budget offered by Weinberger would trim proposed spending in a number of areas that fall into the general category of "readiness," the ability of the U.S. military to fight right now. Those areas include manpower, training, support equipment and tactical weapons such as tanks and fighters.

That's a traditional way of cutting the Pentagon budget because the decreases show up in the current budget, unlike cuts in expensive, lengthy weapons programs such as the MX, which are paid for over a long time.

But it is the MX that is likely to be the target of the bitterest fight. The 10-warhead missile is opposed by a wide-ranging coalition of liberals, nuclear freeze advocates, and some conservatives concerned about its vulnerability to a Soviet first strike.

Last November, the MX survived by only nine votes in the House and even the House Armed Services, the committee usually friendliest to the Pentagon, has proposed trimming the fiscal 1985 purchase of the MX from 40 to 30.

Weinberger, however, refused to go along, urging authorization of the entire $4.9 billion for the 40 MX weapons.

Government Report Says CIA Foresaw Nuclear Fighting

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA director Allen Dulles envisioned "a fight with nuclear weapons" in Vietnam during a State Department staff meeting 30 years ago, according to a new congressional study.

The study, written by Library of Congress researchers for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and released Thursday, is the first in a four-volume history of the U.S. government and the Vietnam War.

It reports that Congress made "virtually no effort" to check on CIA activities in Southeast Asia and gave "exceptionally strong support" to military aid requests in the years leading to U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

The report quotes a 1976 Senate study of intelligence activities as saying that Dulles "secured the absolute trust of senior ranking members" of the House and Senate armed services and appropriations committees.

It also quotes Dulles as saying that if the Viet Minh waged an "all-out" attack, "he foresaw American bombing of Tonkin and probably general war with China."

"Our concept envisages a fight with nuclear weapons rather than the commitment of ground forces," Dulles is quoted as saying.

The report's portrayal of congressional monitoring of CIA activities in the 1950s foreshadowed the current controversy over how much Congress was told, or asked, about CIA-backed mining of Nicaraguan ports.

"Although the agency's role in Indochina was and continued thereafter to be very active, there was virtually no effort made by Congress during this time to examine what the agency was doing or the consequences of its activities, or to exercise any control over those activities," the report said.

It quoted the 1976 study, by an aide to a Senate committee investigating intelligence activities, as saying that members of the key committees "often preferred not knowing about agency activities."

CIA Director William J. Casey has acknowledged he did not brief the Senate Intelligence Committee as completely as he could have about the Nicaraguan mining, but some members of the committee and other lawmakers have also suggested that the right questions were not asked.

The committee met behind closed doors Thursday to go over its procedures for oversight of the CIA. Members have declined to say what changes are being considered.

The Library of Congress study of Vietnam was requested by Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., when he was chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. The present chairman, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., wrote in a foreword:

"The Vietnam War had a profound effect on America. It helped to unravel a general foreign policy consensus, alienate many young people and create doubt about the viability of our government's policies. In its wake, new divisions emerged between Congress and the executive, making it more difficult to re-establish the cooperation, trust and continuity needed to fashion an effective, bipartisan foreign policy."

The report came at a time when President Reagan has been calling for bipartisanship in foreign policy and charging that congressional actions hampered U.S. efforts for peace in Lebanon and threaten to hamstring his policies in Central America.

It says that "the continuing struggle to exclude 'politics' from foreign policy and to develop a bipartisan or non-partisan approach to foreign policy-making ... had the effect of inhibiting congressional inquiry" into early moves to deploy U.S. troops in Asia.

As in the case of the CIA's activities, it said early requests for military aid for what was then known as French Indochina received "exceptionally strong support" from Congress, partly because of preoccupation with the war then being fought in Korea.

U.S. Will Bolster Costa Rican Army

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The United States announced it is sending military equipment to bolster Costa Rica's tiny defense force, which clashed with Nicaraguan soldiers at a border village near the Pacific coast.

No one was reported injured in Thursday's firefight, the latest of at least a dozen between the Nicaraguan army and Costa Rican civil guards during the past two years. The clashes have been spurred by border-area fighting between Costa Rica-based Nicaraguan rebels and troops of Nicaragua's leftist government.

In El Salvador, moderate presidential candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte said Thursday that if he wins Sunday's runoff election, he will create a commission dedicated to wiping out right-wing death squads.

The runoff pits Duarte, a Christian Democrat, against Roberto d'Aubuisson, 40, candidate of the ultra-right Republican Nationalist Alliance.

D'Aubuisson has been accused of having ties with death squads but the allegations have not been proven. The squads are said by human rights groups to be responsible for most of the 43,000 civilian deaths in the 4½-year civil war against leftist guerrillas.

In Costa Rica, U.S. Ambassador Curtin Winsor met with President Luis Alberto Monge and later told reporters Washington is sending Costa Rica jeeps, trucks, some patrol boats, two helicopters and light weapons and ammunition.

He said 30 jeeps were due soon at Limon, Costa Rica's main port, but gave no details.

"The United States is ready to help Costa Rica with whatever it needs," Winsor said. "If Costa Rica were to need something extraordinary in the event of an invasion, the United States will be ready to cooperate."

Costa Rica is the only Central American nation without a standing army.

Thursday's fight occurred about 90 miles south of the Nicaraguan capital of Managua in the village of Penas Blancas, which straddles both countries.

Losers held a 7-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Georgia Officials Offer Resignations

By The Associated Press
 Georgia's state labor commissioner and Augusta's first black mayor have resigned in the wake of separate felony convictions, each saying his departure is for the benefit of constituents, not because he is guilty.

"To the voters of the state, I apologize for violating their confidence," Labor Commissioner Sam Caldwell said Thursday in an emotional speech delivered to a convention attended by 250 Labor Department employees.

"I want you to know that I have not committed any crime, although I stand here convicted as a criminal. But I have made so many mistakes that I have brought myself to the point that I can no longer be effective in leading the Labor Department," Caldwell said.

Edward M. McIntyre, the first black mayor of Augusta, a city of 59,000 people in east Georgia, stepped down Thursday after having been convicted Saturday on federal extortion charges. He has not decided whether to appeal.

"I was really disappointed with the decision of the courts, but I am doing what is in the best interests of this city, to enhance its future," said the 52-year-old insurance executive.

The Augusta City Council planned to meet today to select a mayor pro tempore, who will serve until a new mayor is elected in October.

Caldwell, 55, labor commissioner for 17 years, became Georgia's first constitutional officer convicted of a felony when he was found guilty last week of conspiracy to defraud the state. He was fined $10,000 and sentenced to one year in prison.

Caldwell and former aide John E. Flanagan were convicted of using state workers on state time to perform personal tasks, including extensive repair and maintenance work for more than a decade on several pleasure boats they owned.

Caldwell, who is appealing his conviction, received five standing ovations Thursday and people cried "no! no! no!" when he apologized for "the embarrassment I have caused you."

He still faces trial on federal charges of racketeering and extortion stemming from his 1982 re-election campaign, and on charges of mail fraud, conspiracy to sink a boat and destruction of a vessel in the 1982 sinking of his cabin cruiser.

McIntyre, convicted Saturday on federal charges of extorting $9,000 from a land developer in exchange for a favorable council vote on a land deal, faces a maximum 60 years in prison and a $30,000 fine at his sentencing June 4.

He also faces trial along with a real estate developer on charges contained in a separate two-count extortion indictment.

Refugee Church Sponsors Sought

ATLANTA (AP) — Need for American church sponsors for refugees is at a critical high, says Delbert Fann of the Southern Baptist resettlement office. Similar pleas have come from other denominational leaders.

Meanwhile, in Washington, D.C., 19 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders urged Congress to halt deportation of undocumented Salvadoran refugees from the United States, as proposed in pending legislation.

It would suspend such deportations for up to three years while the Reagan administration studies dangers the refugees face when they are returned home.

At a meeting of the United Methodist Committee on Relief in New York, officials said the need for sponsors of refugees is greater than ever.

Fann said the Southern Baptist office has had to turn down many refugee cases for lack of sponsors, calling it a "lost opportunity."

He said his office currently is seeking sponsors for 23 East European refugees and eight from the Middle East, and that in each case, the individual or family has "a well-founded fear of persecution and cannot return to their country of origin."

Police Probe Will Continue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An 18-month investigation into police corruption will continue after the indictment of former Deputy Police Commissioner James Martin and 14 officers on racketeering charges, authorities said.

The 15 indicted Thursday are accused of taking part in a scheme to protect video poker machines used for gambling in taverns and clubs. The gambling generated $350,000 in payoffs, authorities said.

So far the investigation has resulted in the conviction and jailing of seven former officers.

Martin quit last month as the city's No. 2 police officer.

Blue Bell Considers Leveraged Buyout

GREENSBORO (AP) — An announcement that Blue Bell Inc. is considering a multimillion dollar leveraged buyout has fueled heavy trading of the company's stock and raised its price to a record high of $50 a share.

The nation's second largest casual apparel maker based in Greensboro announced Thursday a leveraged buyout is being considered to halt repeated takeover threats by outside investors. Such a buyout involves using corporate assets as collateral for loans to buy back company stock.

Also Thursday Blue Bell halted trading on its stock because rumors about the potential buyout were fueling unusually heavy activity. Stock resumed trading this morning at a record-high $50 a share and 189,000 shares had traded hands in the first 46 minutes.

Officials of the company, known for its Wrangler jeans, said the plan was "in a preliminary stage and that no financing commitments had been obtained."

If Blue Bell proceeds with a buyout, it would be the second Greensboro company this year to take its stock out of public trading. In March, Cone Mills completed a leveraged buyout, becoming a privately held corporation, to avert a takeover attempt.

Blue Bell officials were in meetings this morning and unavailable for comment. Officials said Thursday the proposal would involve the acquisition of Blue Bell by a new private company owned by management, employees and a New York firm specializing in buyouts, Kelso & Co.

Also, Blue Bell was considering paying $50 a share for all its outstanding stock, about 10.9 million shares, according to the company's Form 10-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Jobs....

Sales of new homes declined by 4.9 percent in March; orders placed to factories rose 2.2 percent in March, the best showing in six months, and major retailers on Thursday reported substantial sales gains in April.

Since civilian unemployment hit a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982, some 5.4 million people have found jobs. During that recovery, the strongest gains have been registered by adult men, 2.9 million jobs, and by adult women, 2.4 million.

Among adult men last month, the jobless rate rose from 6.8 percent to 6.9 percent. The rate for adult women rose by the same fraction, from 6.9 percent to 7.0 percent. BLS officials say such minuscule increases are statistically insignificant.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood said that, on balance, "strong employment growth continued in April, the workweek increased and the unemployment rate held steady for the third month in a row."

A just-released survey by the National Federation of Independent Business showed that 24 percent of the firms questioned planned to hire new workers in the second quarter of 1984, while only 5 percent planned layoffs or staff cuts. The report signaled "strong employment gains on the horizon," said William Dunkelberg, a federation economist.

But Robert Gough, senior vice president of Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm, said Thursday, "We're into that sort of typical slower period (of employment growth)" where businesses that added workers last year "can't afford to go out on the limb and hire more until they see orders."

David Ernst of Evans Economics, a Washington forecasting firm, said, "I think the economy did an about-face in March... so I wouldn't really look for any significant change" in the jobless rate.

Nariman Behraves of Wharton Econometrics said that "from now on, I think we can expect very slow declines in the unemployment rate. Basically, the economy is slowing down."

Choking ...

watch their children closely while they are eating. "But to be real honest, chokings are a whole lot more common in adults. We see and receive twice as many calls involving adults as we do children."

If you suspect a family member, or anyone for that matter, is choking, the following methods outlined by Dr. Benson should take care of the problem.

"If it is a small child, an infant for example, place the child face down on your legs and firmly deliver several strong blows to the child's back with the open part of your hand. After doing this, turn the child over and look in his or her mouth to see if any food particles or whatever is causing the choking have been dislodged from the airway that can be easily removed with your fingers."

If an older person is choking, Benson recommends grabbing the choking person from behind and making your hands into a fist to jar inwards and upwards forcibly once or twice just under the rib cage.

"The way to tell if an adult is truly choking is that they cannot speak. An adult that can speak will rarely have a problem with a food particle or piece being lodged in the airway."

"With children, especially one who can't talk, look to see if the child is having difficulty breathing, is gasping for breath, shows signs of fainting, or is turning blue around the lips or fingers," Benson said.

Brinkley Supports Education

Education is my number one priority. As a parent and grandparent, I understand the need of quality education. My major concerns are higher teacher pay, reduction in class size, adequate facilities, and training expansion. We must attract and retain the best qualified teachers and develop a coordinated program that will give our children the basic skills and training needed to cope with today's society.

I will immediately establish a classroom teacher advisory committee to help me stay on top of issues affecting students. Merit pay is not the fairest way to attract the best teachers. Raising their base salary is far better. I oppose extending the school year and day of our public schools. I support adult bus drivers. The safety of our children to and from school is so vital.

Special school service workers need pay increases: lunchroom workers, janitors, maids, and mechanics. These people do more to contribute to a successful school program than they are given credit or paid for. We must develop a partnership training concept between Secondary Schools, Technical Institutes, and Community Colleges. This is the route to take in the future. Training and retraining to meet the market needs is a must.

We must put the better roads idea on the front burner and not on the back burner as it has been. Better roads are essential in Eastern North Carolina. I will work hard for the completion of Highways 17 and 64. Highway funds should be monitored to guard against abuses, such as bid-rigging.

I will propose a State funded Emergency Rescue and Service Delivery System in North Carolina. We are all still in a state of shock after the destruction by recent tornadoes. My sympathy and prayers go out to those families who lost their loved ones. I congratulate the Rescue and Rural Fire Departments and Police Departments for the very fine services provided. I strongly support an emergency plan for North Carolina now.

Fuqua, Michel Lead Rose Past Bruins

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILSON — Traye Fuqua cracked out a two-run homer in the second inning and Billy Michel recorded his eighth straight victory as Rose High School's baseball Rampants gained a 6-3 Big East win over Wilson Beddingfield last night.

The victory kept the Rampants in no worse than a three-way tie for first place in the league standings. Wilson Fike was to play Wilson Hunt tonight, while Rocky Mount was to face Northern Nash. Rose is now 8-2 in league contests while Fike and Rocky Mount enter their games tonight with 7-2 records.

Fuqua picked up three hits during the evening, leading the Rampant hitting, while Mike Smith added two. Mike Kinley cracked a two-run triple in the first inning that got the Rose scoring under way.

Michel struck out 11 batters during the evening and was highly effective until the final two innings when he allowed Beddingfield to make a rally that cut the lead in half. He scattered three hits over the first five innings and walked but four on the night, three of those in the fourth frame.

But the Rampants played good defense, committing only one error, and it all left Coach Ronald Vincent quite pleased.

"This was a big win for us," the coach said. "Michel really pitched well and I continue to be pleased with the play of Mike Smith in centerfield."

"I thought our defense played well, too, coming up with some big plays behind Michel."

One of those occurred in the sixth inning when Beddingfield was getting its rally started. With runners on second and third with two away, Toby Fischer made a diving stop of Seth Tyson's sharp grounder, got up and threw him out to retire the side.

It helped erase an earlier error by Fischer in the inning that contributed to the Bruin run in that frame.

Rose got half of its total in the first inning, scoring three times. Fuqua singled into right and stole second. Fischer walked and with one away, Kinley tripped to deep center, driving in two runs. Kinley then scored on Smith's two-out single to center.

The Rampants picked up two more in the second. With one down, Marc Nover walked and Fuqua followed with a booming homer to left center, running the lead out to 5-0.

The final Rose run came over in the fourth. With one down, Nover singled and stole second, moving to third when the ball was thrown away in the attempt to get him, he scored on Fuqua's third hit of the night.

Rose had a couple of other threats but they came to naught.

Beddingfield put men into scoring position in the third, fourth and fifth, but Michel managed to pitch his way out of trouble.

The Bruins finally managed to get on the board in the sixth. Woody Mercer led off with a single and Shane Baker beat out an infield hit. Mercer moved to third on a long fly ball and scored when Greg Hill reached on an error.

Then, in the seventh, the Bruins picked up two more. Chuck Madry pinch hit for Joe Hill, drawing a lead-off walk. Hill then returned to run, scoring when Tommy Boswell collected his second double, down the left field line. Tim Ballance followed with a single to center, scoring Boswell, but the rally ended there.

Boswell and Ballance each had two hits for Beddingfield.

The win boosted the Rampants to 13-5 overall. Beddingfield is now 9-9 overall and 5-4 in Big East play.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to Kinston for a 7:30 p.m. game against the Vikings.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Cale Yarborough and Waddell Wilson have become a predictable — and record-breaking — duo.

Yarborough, driving a car prepared by — and with an engine built by — team manager Wilson, Thursday broke his own Grand National stock car qualifying record.

The three-time Winston Cup champion wheeled his Hardee's-sponsored Chevrolet Monte Carlo to the pole for Sunday's Winston 500 by charging around Alabama International Motor Speedway's 2.66-mile, high-banked oval at an average speed of 202.692.

That broke the mark of 202.650 he set here last May.

But Yarborough was just one of a NASCAR-record seven drivers over 200 in Thursday's time trials.

"I thought there might have even been more (drivers) than that over 200," said Yarborough, who led six qualifiers over the magical 200 mark here last May. "I'm just glad I'm still quick enough to stay on top."

It was the third time in a row and the fifth time in the last six races at the superfast Talladega track that Wilson-prepared cars have captured the top qualifying spot.

"He just builds the best engines around," Yarborough said. "Waddell proves it time after time. He and the rest of the crew just do a great job getting the engines and the whole car ready."

"And that's the best I could do. There was no more in the race car. It ran perfect."

The area around the track in rural Talladega County was hit by severe weather Thursday, including reports of several tornado touchdowns.

BERENICE---DAUGHTER OF KING HEROD!

THE ELDEST DAUGHTER OF HEROD AGRIPPA SEEMS TO HAVE DONE HER PART IN KEEPING ALIVE THE TRADITION OF VILLAINY FOR WHICH THE HEROD LINE WAS FAMOUS OR "INFAMOUS"! SHE WAS FIRST MARRIED TO MARCUS, SON OF ALEXANDRA THE HEAD MAGISTRATE OF THE JEWS IN ALEXANDRIA. AFTER AN EARLY DEATH OF "POOR" MARCUS SHE THEN HURRIEDLY MARRIED HER FATHER'S OWN BROTHER, HEROD CHALCIS, WHO SOON AFTERWARDS, ALSO DIED! THENCE, SHE WENT TO LIVE WITH HER BROTHER AGRIPPA AND THE SCANDAL THAT AROSE FROM THIS RELATIONSHIP EVEN THE HIGH-BORN BERENICE COULD NOT OVERCOME! SHE THEN TRIED TO ALLAY IT BY YET ANOTHER MARRIAGE, TO POLEMO, KING OF CILICIA. BUT SHE SOON BECAME TIRED OF HIM AND, DESERTING HIM, RETURNED TO HER BROTHER AGRIPPA. HER CLAIM TO RECOGNITION IN THE BIBLE, CAME WHEN AGRIPPA HEARD ST. PAUL'S DEFENSE (ACTS 25:23:26) WITH BERENICE AT HIS SIDE. SHE WOUND UP HER CAREER, FIRST BECOMING THE MISTRESS OF VESPASIAN, AND THEN HIS SON TITUS--WHO, WHEN HE BECAME ROMAN EMPEROR, DISCARDED HER!

years ago. But the church still offers its OK on doctrinally acceptable books - and sometimes its ban from institutional use.

That has happened in the case of a popular and widely used adult catechism or teaching book, "Christ Among Us." It previously bore an official imprimatur, declaring it free of doctrinal error, but the book's circulation has been halted at the direction of the Vatican's doctrinal congregation.

"U.S. Religious Educators Are Baffled by Vatican Book Ban," read the headline in last week's Catholic Messenger of Davenport, Iowa. Some educators say the move indicates stiffening Vatican demands for more exact orthodoxy.

Many Catholic writers nowadays, including priests, turn out books on doctrinal matters without even seeking imprimaturs. In the more open, flexible church atmosphere since the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65, Catholics no longer widely determine their reading fare by such sanctions.

But in the recent case, one of the most extensively used books in teaching Catholic beliefs to new members and other adults got the ax.

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, head of the Vatican's doctrinal office, called for the action in letters to the publisher and to Archbishop Peter Gerety of Newark, N.J., who had given his imprimatur asserting the book was doctrinally satisfactory.

He promptly withdrew that imprimatur and informed the publisher, Paulist Press of Ramsey, N.J. It announced April 16 a halt to the book's circulation because it was found "not suitable as a catechetical text" by the Vatican doctrinal office.

About 1.6 million copies of the book had been sold since its first publication in 1967, with three revisions issued since, the latest selling 166,000 in 1983.

Paulist Press, publishing arm of the Paulist order of priests formed to evangelize in America, said Ratzinger's letter ruled the book would not be suitable even with "substantial corrections" and asked that no future reprints be considered.

The ban got major play last week in the Catholic press and in accounts by the National Catholic News Service, quoting numerous pastors and teachers who considered the book a helpful, stimulating teaching aid.

Specific reasons for the ban were not stated by the Vatican, and the Rev. Kevin Lynch, Paulist Press editor in chief, was seeking clarifications. "I am very disappointed," he said, adding that the book had been considered an important and useful text.

However, several conservative groups have persistently complained to the Vatican about the book and carried on campaigns against it, notably Catholics United for the Faith of New Rochelle, N.Y.

It maintained the book did not adhere to Catholic teachings regarding such matters as the Virgin Mary, the Eucharist, original sin, contraception, conscience and angels.

On angels, the book says in part: "Angels have traditionally been considered good spirits who worship God, act as his messengers, and guard and pray for us... Today, theology is restudying the whole question of angels and devils as part of the biblical milieu, rather than directly affirming their actual existence as part of God's revelation."

About contraception, the book says in part: "Contraceptive birth control... has been considered wrong in the church's teaching. The church has held to this through the centuries because of its regard for marriage and the sacredness of human life...

However, as is generally known, there has been much discussion within the church about this question. Many point out that now a consideration of what is 'natural' involves not only the physical sex act, but its meaning to the human persons involved..."

The book's author, Anthony Wilhelm, a Berkeley, Calif., counsellor and former priest, says the book has helped draw many into Catholicism, and it purposely had emphasized a pastoral tone, rather than repeating traditional definitions.

Thomas Shannon, a Roman Catholic theologian who teaches religion and social ethics at Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Worcester, Mass., called the ban "utterly outrageous, not just in respect to the First Amendment, but to Catholicism."

"They're being too rigid. It's saying one can no longer ask any questions."

National Catholic News Service reported a source at the Vatican doctrinal office as saying its action did not declare the book heretical, but only unsuitable in the sensitive area of teaching the faith.

Thomas H. Groome, a religious educator at Boston College, says Ratzinger has indicated stiffer requirements for doctrinal orthodoxy. Groome added in the National Catholic Reporter, an independent weekly published in Kansas City, Mo.: "Ratzinger is basically trying to call us back to a kind of old catechism approach."

The Rev. Charles Curran, a moral theologian at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., says the action against the book also seemed to reflect "great influence" of Catholic conservatives on the Vatican.

Denominations Join Lines To Stress Justice And Peace

NEW YORK (AP) - Believers of many kinds - Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox, evangelicals and Jewish - are observing "Peace with Justice Week" May 4-13 to underline the linked causes both of justice and peace.

Those concerns are to be stressed in worship services, study groups, discussions of the Catholic bishops' pastoral letter condemning nuclear war, vigils and public forums in communities across the nation.

The cooperative effort is "one of the broadest undertaken in this nation in recent years," says the Rev. Dwamni Epps, the National Council of Churches' director of international affairs.

He says the inclusive participation shows "that peace and justice concerns are not just the concerns of a few 'liberal' churches, but are in fact deeply felt concerns of people across a broad theological and religious spectrum."

The National Council of Catholic Bishops and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations joined for the first time with 11 original "inviting organizations, which had initiated the observance last year.

Scriptural theme for the occasion is Isaiah 32:17-18, which reads in part:

"And the effect of righteousness will be peace... and trust forever. My people will abide in a peaceful habitation, in secure dwellings, and in quiet resting places."

Joyce Yu, the national council's coordinator for the week, said its importance is "the focus it provides for a common religious witness on the most pressing threats to human survival of our time."

Pastor Travels On Horseback

MENA, Ark. (AP) - When the Rev. Denzil Gilbert got off his horse after 12 days of riding from church to church, he had spoken to 745 people at 13 meetings and had ridden in almost every weather imaginable.

The statistics aren't so unusual for a circuit rider. It's the circuit rider that is unusual in today's times. Gilbert took to the trail recently as part of the bicentennial celebration of Methodism in America and got a quick taste of what his forefathers experienced.

"We had one day that was pleasant," Gilbert, 44, said in a telephone interview. "For the old circuit riders, it was very much a part of life to travel in all kinds of weather. They were very devoted and determined and dedicated to preaching the word."

Gilbert, who is pastor of the Mountain View and Shady Grove United Methodist Churches in the Mena area, had his share of adversities on the trip. Aside from the weather, which included snow, sleet, high winds, rain and mist, he had to deal with the traffic along busy U.S. Highway 71 in south Arkansas.

Would he do it again? "I would for the church."

Gilbert, who has been in the ministry for two years, said the idea of the circuit rider had come about in a conversation with District Superintendent John Walker.

"At first, I didn't think much about it," said Gilbert, who has arthritis. But the more he pondered the idea, the better it sounded. Soon, he was back in the saddle again.

He hadn't ridden much, Gilbert said, in the past 25 years. So, he rode about 25 miles to get himself toughened up for the task that was ahead of him.

Presidential Hopefuls Plan Another State Push

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) - There will be one more push for votes this weekend by the three Democratic presidential candidates in hopes of swaying next Tuesday's state primary their way.
The Rev. Jesse Jackson will be one of the busiest candidates this weekend, with plans to spend Saturday and Sunday in the state.
Jackson's swing through North Carolina will begin Saturday around noon. He too will begin in the Charlotte airport, where he'll hold a news conference.

He'll tour a local housing project and speak at a church before departing for Chapel Hill, where he'll address a rally at the University of North Carolina, said spokesman Ben Shabazz.
On Sunday, Jackson will deliver the commencement address at his alma mater, North Carolina A&T

State University. He'll then go to Raleigh, where a huge fund-raising rally is planned at the State Fairgrounds. Former Rep. Shirley Chisholm, Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry, and Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett are slated to attend.
After the rally, Jackson will attend a private fund raiser in Raleigh and speak at another rally at N.C. Central University in Durham before leaving the state.

A group of Jackson supporters predicted at a Thursday news conference that the black civil rights leader would finish first or second in the state's balloting.
"We expect a tremendous turnout for the Reverend Jackson in the North Carolina primary," said Irving Joyner, president of the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers.
Joyner said Jackson's campaign speaks to people traditionally left out of the election process - both blacks and whites - and is not racially oriented.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale was expected to visit the Piedmont area Saturday, but state campaign officials said Thursday that his schedule still was tentative. Sen. Gary Hart is expected to be in the state Saturday.
Mondale's wife, Joan, launched a two-day tour of the state Thursday and said her husband's experience made him the most qualified candidate.
"He spent four years in the Oval Office, inches removed from the presidency," she said at a Raleigh news conference.
During her campaign visit, Mrs.

Mondale said North Carolina's primary is significant although Mondale has a wide lead in the race for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.
"The delegates who will be selected here in North Carolina are exceedingly important because they can improve and strengthen our lead over the other two candidates and assure our selection on the first ballot in San Francisco," she said.
Leslie Wolfe, spokeswoman for Hart's state campaign, said the Colorado senator would arrive at Douglas International Airport in Charlotte at mid-afternoon Saturday and attend a rally at Freedom Park. He planned to spend only a couple of hours in the state, she said.

Bales of marijuana seized in a raid in Hyde County Wednesday are stacked in one of several vehicles confiscated at the site near Englehard. Authorities said the bales averaged about 40 pounds and had a street value of about $40,000. Diagnostic Tests May Find Tumors DURHAM (AP) - Duke University researchers say studies are still in the preliminary stages, but they are hopeful that a test has been developed which can be helpful in diagnosing pancreatic tumors.

An antibody called DU-PAN-2 has been produced in the laboratory of Dr. Richard S. Metzgar, professor of immunology, by immunizing mice with a human pancreatic cancer cell line.
"The DU-PAN-2 antibody detects a marker, or antigen, on the surface of cells from fetal and normal adult (pancreases) as well as cells from pancreatic and certain other gastrointestinal cancers," said Metzgar.
"However, the antigen concentration is much higher on cancer cells. Recent studies indicate that the antigen probably is secreted or released by both normal and cancer cells and can be found in the circulation."
Using the DU-PAN-2 antibody, Duke researchers developed what's known as a competition radioim-munoassay - a test that can detect minute amounts of antigen in pancreatic cancer patients' abdominal fluids as well as in pancreatic cyst and duct fluids.

The new test is a refinement of a test commonly used in clinical laboratories to measure hormones and other substances occurring in extremely low concentrations.
The researchers - collaborating with clinicians from Duke, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the National Cancer Institute - measured the amount of DU-PAN-2 antigen in patients with a variety of malignant and benign diseases.
They found that DU-PAN-2 levels were considerably higher in fluids from pancreatic cancer patients than in fluids from patients with other types of cancer or with chronic kidney failure.

Market Center Stresses Search For Perfect Chair

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
HIGH POINT (AP) — The Southern Furniture Market Center is probably the best place to undertake a quest for the most comfortable chair in the world.

Thousands of chairs were on display here during the spring Southern Furniture Market ending today. The center itself contains 2.3 million square feet of showroom space and miles of corridors, which provide ample cause as well as opportunity to rest.

Comfort was the bottom line of this quest. The only problem was that after hours of walking around in search of the perfect chair, the seeker was ready to sink into just about anything.

But two chairs stood out for their comfort, and they represent differing theories on how best to relax. The Barcalounger Commander allows the weary to recline American-style amid plush cushions at the push of a lever, while the Finmark Body Chair was designed by a Swedish surgeon with your backside's health in mind.

"This chair forces you to sit in a healthy position," said Finmark president Peter Johnson. "Nobody sits in the same position for more than five minutes. You can sit in this chair without shifting longer than you can in any other chair. When you do shift, you can only shift into a comfortable position."

The Body Chair was designed by Gunnar Andersson, assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at a Swedish hospital. It has a bulge in the lower part of the back to provide support to the spine's lumbar region.

Johnson said American easy chairs are comfortable for the first few minutes, then they begin to cause strain because they're not designed scientifically. Many also tend to lose their softness after a few months of sinking in under their owners.

"The Swedes pay a lot of attention to their homes and furniture because they spend those long winters reading," he said.

The Body Chair, with a surface of fine calfskin, tilts back and stays there by means of a lever.

So does the Barcalounger Commander, but this chair also has a pop-out footrest when it reclines — and it can rock.

The chair, which looks like a large first-class airline seat on a swivel base, is designed to bring the knees up to the same level as the heart. The model at the Southern Furniture Market was upholstered in soft, red cloth.

"The idea of a recliner is that it puts you in the same position as floating," said a salesman who asked not to be identified. The salesman said Barcalounger makes no medical claims about its chairs, but that the company has sold recliners to hospitals.

New Wave Has Its Furniture

HIGH POINT (AP) — New Wave enthusiasts can express themselves with their choice in clothing, hairstyles and music — and now with their choice of furniture.

Steven Kief, owner of A&B America of Yonkers, N.Y., said he became involved in the movement when he noticed that thousands of young people everywhere were dressed in the bold, quirky New Wave style, but that they had no furniture to express themselves.

"New Wave is more than furniture, it's a way of living," Kief said. "The furniture is the punk look mellowed out ... tamed down and made commercial."

Kief's showroom was among the more popular at the Southern Furniture Market Center, which holds about half the showroom space of the spring Southern Market ending today.

Live mannikins, one in a tuxedo, made robot-like movements to rock music in the showroom, which was dominated by the bold blacks and reds of the A&B America collection.

"New Wave means freedom of choice and sophisticated, easy fashion," said A&B America representative Joan Russo. "It's high-tech without being stark."

Pieces on display included a black leather sofa with red threads for $2,500 retail, a shiny bird-eye maple wall system for $4,000, a gray brushed-leather couch with bag headrests for $7,000 and a "faux-goat" wall system with shiny panels designed to resemble goatskin.

Many manufacturers at the Southern Furniture Market touted their shiny lacquer surfaces as developments influenced by the New Wave.

"We've been doing that for years," said Ms. Russo. "When something's very successful, everyone tries to mimic it."

Will the New Wave style endure?

"Definitely," said Kief. "This furniture is designed for living. It's going to keep on developing — like computers."

Cary Child Receives Liver

By The Associated Press
The parents of a 10-month-old Cary girl who underwent liver transplant surgery are waiting out the critical 24-hour period after the surgery, when the new liver must begin functioning.

Shelley Rose McConnell was listed in critical but stable condition this morning in Yale New Haven (Conn.) Hospital.

"(The McConnells are) anxious for this day to wrap up and for their daughter to get out of the operating room," said hospital media coordinator Tom Urtz. "But they are calm. ... They are just nervous like everybody else."

Shelley Rose went into surgery about 11:30 a.m. and came out about 7:30 p.m., Urtz said.

"As usual in these cases the child is listed in critical condition," Victor Borellini, admitting officer at the hospital, said in a telephone interview Thursday night. "That is nothing unusual."

Nacy McConnell, the youngster's father, said that he and his wife, Susan, were tired but optimistic.

"We're over one hurdle, but we have to look at the hurdle ahead," Mrs. McConnell said.

Dr. M. Wayne Fly, the hospital's director of organ transplantation and immunobiology, headed the transplant team.

"The team is satisfied," he said. "We've done all we could. She's got a fighting chance to regain her health."

Shelley was 7 weeks old when doctors discovered she had biliary atresia and said she would die within a year without new liver.

The same ailment killed 5-month-old Ashley Quinn of Kenansville and 2½-year-old Shakeeka Richardson of Charlotte earlier this year and 9-month-old Joshua Brooks of Laurinburg last November.

The disease occurs when bile normally secreted by the liver to help digestion cannot be removed from the liver.

McConnell and his wife flew their daughter to Connecticut Tuesday morning when Shelley's condition worsened and she could not be kept at home. McConnell said doctors decided to send the child to Yale so she could be prepared for the operation if a liver was found.

"Everything just happened to work out just right," McConnell said. "We were very happy and very thankful that someone would do this for us in their hour of grief."

McConnell said he didn't know who the donor was, but the organ had to come from a recently deceased child with a healthy liver.

Fly flew with a transplant team to a Dallas-Fort Worth area hospital in Texas where a liver donor was found Wednesday night.

ACUFF ADMIRERS — Tammy Wynette, left, Minnie Pearl and Loretta Lynn, right, congratulate Roy Acuff following a salute to the longtime country music star

Thursday night at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington. (AP Laserphoto)

JFK Center Tastes Country With Salute To Roy Acuff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turning over its stage for a salute to Grand Ole Opry star Roy Acuff, the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts has finally taken its first taste of country music.

And from the reaction at the benefit performance Thursday night honoring the 80-year-old Acuff, it is unlikely that Nashville's brand of music makers will have to wait another 13 years to perform again on a Kennedy Center stage.

"It's about time," Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said in between sets by songstress Tammy Wynette and country-rock star Charlie Daniels. "This is the only unique, absolutely indigenous music in America. It's the only purely American art form in music."

About 500 people paid $500 a seat to watch a half dozen country music stars and several politicians pay tribute to the "King of Country Music" and spiritual leader of Nashville's 59-year-old Grand Ole Opry.

Kennedy Center Chairman Roger Stevens acknowledged that the capital's leading cultural institution, which opened in 1971, "may be a little late" in bringing fiddles, cloggers and pedal steel guitars associated with the native art form to its stage.

"But as I promised the majority leader, from now on there will be a lot of country music," Stevens said. Presenting a plaque to Acuff, he said, "I've never heard so many good things said about one person in my life."

Mrs. Henry Cannon, who has been performing comic routines on the Opry since 1940 as Cousin Minnie Pearl, was mistress of ceremonies for what Acuff called "the most elite" winging he's ever attended.

After reading a letter in which buxom songstress Dolly Parton recalled having kissed Acuff one time, Mrs. Cannon advised him in her Cousin Minnie drawl that he should perhaps look elsewhere for romance. "You stay away from Dolly Parton," she quipped. "Before you can say you haven't, you have."

More than half of the people who attended the performance, a reception at the Turkish Embassy beforehand and a dinner afterwards were from Tennessee. Baker quipped that "two-thirds of Nashville" was in the audience. But also there were Attorney General-nominee Edwin Meese and his wife and financier W. Clement Stone.

Acuff, who still performs at the Opry three to seven days every week, said before the performances that he was going to "sit back and enjoy the show" and leave the music-making to others for the night.

But he was persuaded by Daniels to take the stage for renditions of his two most famous songs, "Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird."

Acuff decline Daniel's offer of his fiddle for an instrumental solo, saying, "I can't play this electric thing."

Soaps Favorites For Recording

NEW YORK (AP) — Daytime soap operas seem to be the programs too important to miss, with afternoon serials occupying the first six places among shows taped on home video cassette recorders, an A.C. Nielsen Co. study says.

NBC's "Hill Street Blues" was first among prime-time programs. The study, which was released to Nielsen's clients this week, surveyed 1,100 VCR owners in November-December 1983 and January 1984. VCR ownership is now estimated at about 10 percent of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes and has nearly tripled since Nielsen's last VCR study in May 1982.

Daytime soaps dominated the current taping list. ABC's "All My Children" was the most recorded show, followed by ABC's "General Hospital," NBC's "Days of Our Lives," CBS' "As the World Turns," CBS' "The Guiding Light" and ABC's "One Life to Live." Soap operas accounted for 27 percent of the total recording. Movies were second at 17 percent.

"Hill Street Blues," which some call a cop opera, was seventh, while the bona fide prime-time serials, "Dallas" and "Dynasty," were eighth and 10th, respectively. CBS' afternoon soap, "The Young and the Restless," was ninth.

Afternoon serials, of course, are on five times a week, which contributes to their higher incidence of taping. Actually, the Nielsen survey said 42 percent of all taping was done during prime time. In the 1982 survey, only 29 percent of the recording was done in prime time.

The soap operas taped during the day were viewed later by a high percentage of young women, the Nielsen report said. The presumption is that they were working when the shows were broadcast.

Nov. 20, 1983, was likely the biggest taping night of all time. That was when ABC's nuclear disaster drama, "The Day After," went head to head with the first segment of NBC's "Kennedy" miniseries. Twenty-five percent of all VCR homes taped "The Day After," while 14 percent taped "Kennedy."

HAPPY NOTE — Composer-singer Lionel Richie, right, is joined by Quincy Jones, center, and Hal David, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, after Richie was named writer of the year at ASCAP's first awards dinner Thursday night in Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

Performing Rights Group Names Richie Top Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Composer-singer Lionel Richie was named writer of the year as the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers honored its greatest hits, old and new, at its first Pop Awards Dinner.

Some 450 musical luminaries, including Richie, Donna Summer, Kenny Loggins, Michael McDonald, Henry Mancini, Burt Bacharach, Hal David, Kenny Rogers and Quincy Jones, turned out Thursday night for the performing rights group's gala at the Beverly Wilshire hotel.

Richie was honored as the ASCAP writer whose works were the most performed in 1983.

"Up Where We Belong," the Oscar- and Grammy-winning theme from the movie "An Officer and a Gentleman," won as the most-performed ASCAP song of last year.

The publisher of the year award went to April Music Inc., which put out hits by the late Marvin Gaye and the groups Men at Work and Dexy's Midnight Runners.

With the organization celebrating its 70th anniversary in 1984, special awards went to 10 songs that have become standards: "As Time Goes By," "Misty," "Moon River," "Over the Rainbow," "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Tea for Two," "The Way We Were," "White Christmas" and "You Are the Sunshine of My Life."

"Love's Theme" was recognized as ASCAP's most performed instrumental standard.

ASCAP is the older and larger of the country's two performing rights groups; the other is Broadcast Music Inc. (BMI).

The groups were authorized by a Supreme Court decision to act on behalf of member composers and publishers in collecting fees for use of their works. Before the groups existed, songwriters and composers could only seek such compensation individually — a gargantuan task.

ASCAP and BMI grant so-called "blanket licenses" allowing use of all their members' music by radio and television stations, nightclubs and all locations that make money or augment their income by playing music.

The license fees are in turn distributed to members according to how frequently their music is played. The bigger the hit, the larger the payments.

'Fantasticks' Opens 25th Year

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Fantasticks," the world's longest-running musical, began its 25th year in the company of old friends and happy investors.

They filled the tiny 153-seat Sullivan Street Theater, a former Greenwich Village speakeasy, on Thursday to watch performance number 9,987 and cheer a show that its creators, composer Harvey Schmidt and lyricist Tom Jones, didn't think would make it past its first weekend.

"I want to put an end to the myth that I did it alone," said producer Lore Noto after the performance, as he paid tribute to everyone from set designer Ed Wittstein to the box office personnel. But it was Noto who put $3,000 of his own money into the struggling off-Broadway musical after it opened May 3, 1960 to mixed reviews.

The simple tale of two fathers who invent a feud to bring their son and daughter together has since become a financial bonanza as well as a treasure trove of statistics.

There have been more than 8,200 productions in the United States alone, including stock college and high school presentations. Its list of alumni, who have appeared in various productions around the country, include Liza Minnelli, Bert Lahr, Richard Chamberlain and Elliott Gould. Noto plays the role of the boy's father in the current production.

The show, which cost $16,500 to produce 24 years ago, has, so far, paid its backers a 7.624 percent return on their investment.

According to Variety, the show business weekly, the musical, best known for the song "Try to Remember," has earned a total profit of more than $2.5 million, including income from the New York production, stock and amateur rights, as well as the sale of sheet music and the original cast album.

Actor George Curley put $330 — a 1 percent stake — in the show because he admired Schmidt and Jones and liked their new musical.

"I believed in it," he said. "Now I get checks every two months."

Samantha Baker is turning sixteen and she's fallen in love for the first time. It should be the best time of her life. But...her family is so preoccupied with her sister's wedding they totally forgot her birthday, the boy she loves doesn't know she exists and the class clown is putting the make on her.

And...she still has to go to school, ride the bus, put up with an annoying younger brother, a hopelessly vain older sister, four delirious grandparents and a whacked-out foreign exchange student. Well, hang in there, Samantha. The day's not over yet. You may still get one wish.

We have often heard the snide remark: "Those who can, play; those who can't, teach." While that may be true in a few cases, it is definitely not in the case of Eddie Kantar of Los Angeles—he is among the country's best players, writers and teachers. Study his technique on this hand from the recent Spring Nationals in San Antonio.

North's double of one spade was "negative"—for takeout, not penalties. East preempted as high as he cared to go, but Kantar was not prepared to be shut out of the auction. His five diamonds ended the bidding.

West led the queen of hearts—obviously a singleton. East might have helped his partner by playing the ten, which could be only a suit preference signal for spades; however, he simply discouraged with a low heart. Declarer won and led a trump.

Looking at all the hands, it is easy to see that West can win the ace, get to his partner with a spade and score a heart ruff. But what if East held the ace of clubs rather than the ace of spades? West, a good defender, thought he had a solution to his quandary. He would hold up the ace of trumps one round. On the second trump lead, East would be able to signal in which suit he had an entry.

East never got the chance. Kantar knew what was going on and did not lead a second round of trumps. Instead, he cashed the ace of clubs, finessed the jack and continued with the king. When the suit broke 3-3, Kantar led the 13th club and discarded his lone queen of spades. West could ruff, but it would cost the defenders their spade trick. Declarer lost only two trump tricks.

Note that it is essential for declarer to play one round of trumps. If he does not, East will be able to ruff the last club and so prevent the "scissors coup" that cut the defenders' communications.

America's Jobless Turn To Free Courses To Launch New Careers In Market Place

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — One student sells two pints of his blood plasma a week for travel money to and from school. Another hitchhikes 55 miles a day.

Most of the 4,868 students taking free classes in an experimental retraining program in Allegheny County are unemployed, and many are desperate: for education, for jobs, for a return to their old standard of living, or for a better future.

They have hit dead ends with their old jobs and are going to college to start their lives over.

"The program gives a chance to people who want a chance," said business student Bill Feiertag, 32, furloughed 2½ years ago after working nine years repairing railroad cars.

"We're not looking for guarantees. There aren't any. There's a guarantee I won't get a job if I weren't here," added Feiertag. "All I'm looking for is a chance. I don't like being poor, and I don't like being unemployed."

The county has spent $3.2 million for free tuition and books since the program began in April 1983. Students must arrange their own travel to four campuses of the Community College of Allegheny County.

To be eligible, students must live in the county and either be drawing jobless pay or have run out of benefits on or before Oct. 1, 1981. Part-time jobs are permitted, and those who get full-time jobs can finish out a semester.

From an eligible pool of 90,000, the county received 10,000 inquiries and 8,115 applications. There are 1,500 people now on a waiting list.

"The object of the program is enhancing employability. That could mean a career change to just taking a few courses to get a job or how to apply or interview for a job," said Geri Weiss, counselor at a campus on Pittsburgh's north side.

"It's a place to go, a chance to accomplish something, a chance to feel good about themselves," said

Ms. Weiss. She said one student sells blood plasma for $8 a pint to earn money to get to classes.

The site of ailing smokestack industries, the Pittsburgh area had a jobless rate of over 16 percent when the program started. The area's unemployment rate was 12.3 percent in February, 4.7 percentage points worse than the national figure.

Half of the applicants were steelworkers, according to a random sampling, but the retraining covers a broad spectrum of white- and blue-collar workers.

The typical dislocated worker is 33½ years old and worked about 6½ years before getting furloughed. More than 73 percent are male, 70 percent have never been to college and 78 percent are getting jobless pay.

The program, which county officials call "an educational fund of last resort," has been studied by educators from around the United States and other countries, including the Netherlands and China.

"To me, it's not an expenditure. It's an investment in the future that will repay itself over and over," said Allegheny County Commissioner Thomas Foerster.

He defended it from critics who say the county is paying to educate workers for jobs that either don't exist or for jobs open only in the Sunbelt. Students are free to make their own career choices; a followup study on job placement is being done but won't be available for another year.

"To sit back and do nothing when people are really desperate and have lost all hope would be unacceptable and unthinkable," said Foerster, who said the program's future hinges on budget decisions.

The county would like more money from federal, state and private sources to keep the program going, the commissioner said.

The program features a Workers In Transition club that meets every Tuesday in a fourth floor loft. The club sponsors social events, provides support services and gives advice on mortgage foreclosures and utility bills.

Sporting blue and white buttons that say "If you think the system is working, ask someone who isn't," members say the club helps ease the trauma of being hopelessly out of work.

"Three of my friends have committed suicide," said Feiertag, who is taking management courses to complement his railroad experience. "When you lose your job, you lose your entire social structure. You lose your identity. Everything you've worked for is gone."

Elizabeth Jump, 34, married and the mother of two children, is a former secretary for an insurance company.

Vendor Is Killed By Bolting Horse

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A market vendor was killed and a buggy driver injured when a carriage horse, apparently spooked by loud construction noises, ran amok through Charleston's historic open-air market, police said.

Authorities said 58-year-old Eugenia Smith of Charleston was injured Thursday when the horse broke free from its carriage and raced into one of the market buildings, scattering merchandise and knocking other people aside.

She died later at the Medical University of South Carolina.

Deputy Coroner Charlie Green said the woman suffered multiple injuries and that an autopsy will be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

The injured carriage driver, Tony Menetti, 33, of Charleston, was listed in satisfactory condition at Roper Hospital.

Police Sgt. Thomas Gardner said the horse, which was waiting to pick up passengers for a tour of Charleston's historic district, apparently became spooked by a loud noise, possibly jackhammers from a nearby construction site.

The horse bolted with the carriage, which became wedged between two parked cars, throwing Menetti to the street and breaking the windshield of one of the cars.

It broke free, ran into the market building and jumped some tables, scattering merchandise and running into Ms. Smith, Gardner said.

The animal then galloped from the building, continuing 1½ blocks before finally being stopped by workers for the Old South Carriage Co.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CRANKY TRACK-AND-FIELD STAR'S FAVORITE DIVERSION — RACY NOVELS?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

VELVETY SMALL LEAVES ... Tender new leaves of a grapevine growing on a fence at the post-bud stage are pale green, lemon and pink in color.

AN EMPTY BIRD'S NEST ... of coarse twigs lined with softer material rests firmly in a clutch of vines several feet off ground.

OLD BUILDING FRAMED ... A tall board tobacco barn, its outer covering of green and black tar paper tattered by time and weather, is framed by the near transparent new leaves on the boughs of a sycamore tree.

UNEXPECTED DISCOVERY ... One of the pleasures of exploring back roads is the discovery of an unusual example of rural architecture. Such an example is the Cypress Creek United Methodist Church near Comfort with tall, 36-paned windows with inner stairs leading to a second level visible through the clear glass of the windows.

Travels Along Rural Roads

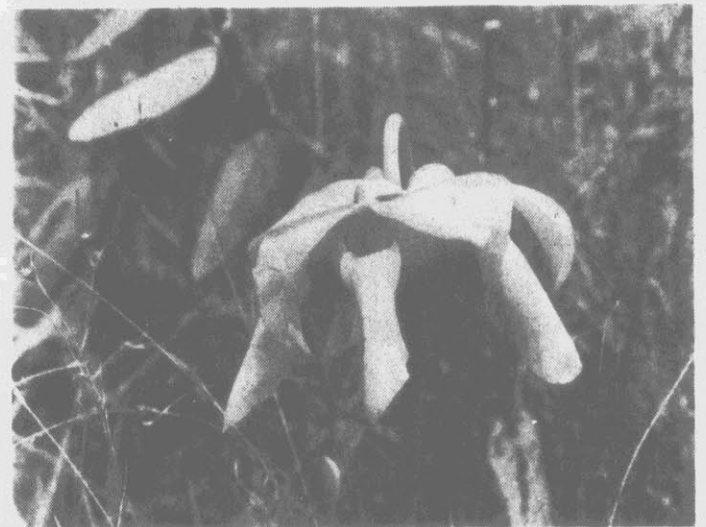

After a recent trip to take photographs of an old mill pond in the town of Trenton, county seat of Jones County, and with time left before I was due back in Greenville, I decided to drive along back roads in Jones County. For that purpose, I selected at random two roads from the map — N.C. 41 and a paved road undesignated by number that cuts south from the village of Comfort to Richlands in Onslow County.

The choices were good — very little traffic, sometimes two or three miles without another car on the road. The Comfort-Richlands road, a narrow one, is in rather poor condition, which necessitated slow driving, but which in turn allowed a more leisurely chance to see things of interest along the way.

These back roads, like most of their type, do not as a rule offer noted scenic or historic sights. What they do provide, however, are innumerable rural sights typical of off the beaten path routes — country stores plastered with soft drink and cigarette advertisements, some shiny bright, others faded and rusted; women hanging out the family wash on clothes lines; young men on their farming noon break lounging against pick-up trucks at community stores; farmers at work in fields; fine old homes abandoned, often with trim, landscaped mobile homes occupying a corner of what was formerly a spacious homestead yard.

On this page are a few of many enjoyable sights viewed along these two roads — including a trim white Methodist church with unusual architectural features; a couple of wild flowers among dozens in bloom this time of year, and a youth hard at work helping his grandmother in a spring cleanup task.

Whether one travels with or without a camera, a motor ramble along one of eastern North Carolina's many small rural backroads is an excellent way to experience a sense of North Carolina's countryside that in many respects remains the way it was in past years.

ROADSIDE FLOWERS ... Among numerous native wildflowers seen along the roadside are these two — at top, a single butter gold flower of the now rare yellow pitcher plant, or trumpets; and at bottom, flower clusters of the common fragrant white and pink wild azalea, locally known as shrub honeysuckle.
