Record Primary Turnout Forecast In N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — Primary elections in North Carolina today will narrow the crowded Democratic gubernatorial field and determine whether Walter Mondale, Gary Hart or Jesse Jackson gets the lion's share of 88 presidential convention delegates.

State officials predict a record primary turnout of more than 50 percent of the state's registered voters in the balloting for state and national party nominees.

"Without equivocation, I feel like we will have the largest turnout we have ever had in a primary," said Alex Brock, state elections director, citing the large number of contested races and intense voter registration in recent months.

"If just the candidates, their immediate families and close friends come out, we would have a respectable turnout," he quipped.

North Carolinians also nominate candidates for lieutenant governor, Congress, state Legislature and a number of state offices and judgeships.

The U.S. Senate race, expected to be perhaps the most bitter and expensive in state history, moves temporarily off center stage as Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt face political unknowns and anticipate easy nomination.

The governor's race has drawn the most attention during the primary campaign season. The field is crowded with prominent officials and former officeholders whose combined expenditures have topped $6 million in an effort to get into the June 5 primary.

A poll conducted by The Charlotte Observer during the last week of April showed former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox ahead with 24 percent of the vote, followed by state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten with 21 percent.

Former Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth polled 14 percent, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram 9 percent, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green 7 percent and former state Rep. Tom Gilmore 3 percent. Four other candidates, including a Ku Klux Klan leader, polled less than 1 percent each while 18 percent of those polled said they were undecided.

U.S. Rep. Jim Martin is seeking the Republican nomination for governor. His only opponent is Ruby Hooper, a dietician and Burke County GOP chairman.

City School Budget OK'd

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1984-85 fiscal year budget message for the Greenville schools, amounting to $12,833,216, received approval by city school board members Monday night. This is the budget request that later will be presented to Pitt County Commissioners for that board's consideration and action.

The total budget encompasses funds in five categories — state, $6,274,329; local $4,476,522; federal, $785,590; capital outlay, $309,933, and food service, $986,841.

Outlining highlights of the budget request, Superintendent Delma Blinson said the local fund (current expense) request, for funds to be budgeted from Pitt County tax revenues, "represents a $964,658 increase in expenditures over the current 1983-84 fiscal year. However," he added, "because of projected revenue shortfalls from this fiscal year, the requested increase in county appropriations is $1,137,868."

This increase, he pointed out, "represents a request for 50.24 percent in county money over this fiscal year."

Blinson explained several factors bearing directly on the larger than usual annual increase in the request for county appropriations. Noting that 92 percent of the budget is for salaries, he said "there is no way to cut back on certain fixed costs such as utilities, essential maintenance and basic supplies. We have carefully researched fixed costs, and the anticipated increase in this portion of the budget amounts to only about a 6 percent increase."

The major increase in requested funds is based on personnel costs.

"The budget request takes into account the same salary increase for personnel paid from local funds as projected increases for those paid from state funds," Blinson said. "This is a 10 percent increase for classified and 15 percent increase for certified personnel. Assuming these percentages, the salary increase cost will be $280,198. I believe we have little or no choice but to do this."

Council Hears Plea Over Males

By CAROL TYER

Greenville City Council members Monday afternoon heard a citizen's complaint about "males dressed as women walking the streets of Greenville."

Gary Jones brought television crews with him to a workshop session of the City Council to present a protest letter he says he wrote Sunday "as a concerned Christian citizen of Greenville." He alleged in the letter that he was approached twice Friday night, May 4, apparently by men dressed as women, and given prices for sex. However, Police Chief Ted Holmes said Nones later said that he was not solicited but overheard someone else being solicited.

He wrote, "Becoming furious, I phoned the Greenville Police Department, only to be told by the police officer on duty that there was

Surplus Donations To Be Sold

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday approved the sale of clothing and other items donated following the March 28 tornado, voted to hire a consulting firm to study the county's communication needs, and appropriated funds to help start a family violence program in the county.

The board approved the sale of clothing and other items stored at the New Greenville Warehouse and other locations and put the proceeds from the sale into the county disaster relief fund after Ed Garrison, director of the Department of Social Services, said the items need to be moved from the warehouse before the tobacco sales season begins.

Garrison said the N.C. attorney general has ruled that the items donated for relief of the tornado victims are county property and must be used to aid the disaster victims. The clothing and other items cannot be given to other needy people.

Commissioners, following a meeting with representatives of Telephone Consultants of Virginia, appropriated $6,850 for the first phase of the four-phase communication proposal.

Phase 1 would inventory the present system and needs and project the needs for the next 10 to 15 years, while Phase 2, at a cost of $5,150, would design a system to meet the county's present and future needs, and advertise for bids.

Under the third phase, the Richmond firm would analyze the bids, vendor contracts and complete a network analysis for $6,750, while implementation would come in Phase 4, with the consultants supervising installation and serving as advisors to the county for 12 months following installation of a new telephone system at a cost of $3,250.

David Burgess, director of engineering services for Telephone Consultants, said if the county followed through with all four steps, the firm would deduct $1,100 from the $22,000 total price.

The board Monday also allocated $2,000 to a newly formed Pitt County Family Violence Task Force. The local money will be given to the task force if the group is successful in securing a $10,240 grant from the state.

Dr. Barbara Vosk told commissioners that the family violence task force will operate under the Pitt County Mental Health Association until the task force can be incorporated and receive tax exempt status.

She said the task force goals are to provide services for victims of child, parent and spouse abuse.

In addition to providing services for family members involved in family violence situations, the task force will also provide community education programs, she said.

In addition to the county appropriation and state grant to begin the services, the mental health association will provide $4,500 worth of in-kind services for the task force program.

In other business, commissioners accepted bids for the county audit for the next three years, but agreed to study the proposals before awarding a contract; accepted an

King Elected GHA Chairman

By ANGELA LINGERFELT

Roscoe King was elected chairman of the Greenville Housing Authority at its annual meeting Monday night, while Billy Laughinghouse was elected vice president and Joe Laney secretary-treasurer.

They were the only nominees for the positions.

Commissioners agreed to keep the same officers on the Greenville Housing Development Corp. Patricia Rice as president, King as vice president and Laney as secretary-treasurer.

Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs, said an inspection was recently completed at Moyewood. Two units were designated to receive monthly inspections to bring them up to standards. She said overall housekeeping at the complex was better and that tenants were more cooperative. A clean-up campaign is scheduled for the project Saturday.

Mrs. Streeter reported three vacancies, including two in Moyewood and one in Newtown.

Ken Noland, assistant director, said phase I of Kearney Park is almost complete, with only a few items not finished. Incomplete items include insulation, caulking, screen doors, paint and shades. He said bids for phase II will open June 7.

Executive director Joe Laney told commissioners that the agency's Section 8 program is "very stable" with 96 of the 100 units authorized in the existing housing section under lease. He said 106 of 109 units allocated under the moderate re-

Determination Helps Send Her On To College Graduation

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Determination was one of Mary Roscoe's incentives to graduate from college, which she did on Saturday. She received a degree in library science from East Carolina University.

"This is something I wanted to do very strongly and it kept me in school. There were times when I would question my sanity as to why I was struggling with writing papers and studying for tests when I had much rather been reading a good book," she said.

D.R. and Mary Roscoe have lived in Greenville 23 years due to a job transfer for her husband, who works with Delmar Studios, based in Charlotte. "When my daughter started school I decided to attend college — it was a good opportunity with the university here. Although when I started in 1963, I had been out of high school 14 years. I only went for a year and a half when my son was born. Then we had two daughters born in 1968 and 1969."

In 1977, she decided to go back — by then the youngest daughter was in school. She had never been a full-time student, always going part time, taking two or three courses. She finished in December 1983. She participated in the graduation ceremony Saturday, wearing her cap and gown, because her children wanted her to do so.

"I like to finish things I start. I definitely could not have finished without the cooperation and assistance of my family and friends. My family has put up with hamburger suppers and ironing their own clothes and things like that. They have understood when I shut myself up in the dining room to study or spend Sunday afternoon at the library. I have friends who have taken my children places when I could not," she said.

She encourages others to further their education. "When I started in 1963, I was a minority and not the average college student because I was older. I never encountered anything but respect and friendship from the students. The professors were also very helpful," she added.

Two of Mrs. Roscoe's children were in college while she was — a daughter, Teresa Savage, who studied accounting at Pitt Community College, and a son, Tracy, a freshman at N.C. State University. Her daughters, Amy and Hillary, are in the Greenville schools.

Mrs. Roscoe is the media coordinator at Northwest Elementary School in Kinston.

Mrs. Roscoe's sister from Camden, S.C., and brothers from Kentucky and Connecticut, were here Saturday to attend graduation. Mrs. Roscoe graduated magna cum laude and was also named the outstanding senior in the library science program.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

The generic name for a demographic clique of voters who are getting a lot of attention these days is "YUPPIES."

Broken down, there's the YUMPS (Young Upwardly Mobile), the YAPS (Young Aspiring), the GUPS (Gay Urban), the PUPS (Pregnant Urban) and the YUPS (Young Urban).

They're young. They're bipartisan. And they're a generation that has a history of defying establishment.

Before all the cute names are gone, I'd like to focus attention on an older group . . . the LUMPS (Life-giving, Unselfish, Middle-class, Parent, Survivors) who spawned the YUPPIES.

We're the ones responsible for giving birth to 77 million YUPPIES between 1946-1964. Someone once described them as the "pig in the python," a bulge that moved through society causing indigestion all the way.

From the beginning, the Baby Boomers set up their own society — from high school protests to attitude changes about family, lifestyle, marriage and work ethics. They lived in their own youth ghettos, had their own costumes, their own hair and their own music.

The LUMPS are going through an interesting time as we sit back and wonder what we have spawned. (And occasionally spurned.) There isn't a day goes by that we don't learn more about our offspring.

We now find out the YUPPIES, who are now 20 to 38 years old, are getting down to dealing with their real estate inheritance . . . the United States. They are driven careerists who own a Volvo, work out regularly and drink designer water. They have yogurt and a wheel of Brie in their refrigerators and live by charge cards. They plan an apartment and one child (both self-cleaning). They can make a difference in presidential elections.

Every generation fights for its dream. The LUMPS were no different. We married early, had babies, wore practical polyester, paid cash, fertilized grass, washed our own cars and waited for the Christmas savings check. We accepted 20-year house payments, 40-year marriages and 30 years on the same job without question.

Then we discovered no one wanted to emulate us. No one wanted to inherit the fruits of our labor. No one wanted to profit from our experience.

I don't mean to imply the LUMPS are on "automatic pilot," but by sheer numbers the baby boomers have come to power. It will be interesting to see how they fare when they can no longer eat the Brie in our refrigerators, use our charge cards to put gas into our Volkswagens which they borrowed until interest rates went down.

They're a fascinating group. They've done a lot of living. They've done a lot of thinking. It will be interesting to sit back and watch them work.

Complaining To Officials Doesn't Help Dog Problem

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor has two enormous dogs that she keeps in her house most of the time, but when she lets them out to do their business, they head straight for my lawn and unload like a pair of elephants! We had some angry words about this two years ago and haven't spoken since. I called the police department to complain and I also called the dog pound, but nothing was done about it.

I am going through the menopause, and when I get nervous, my blood pressure shoots up. I'm afraid I'll have a stroke if something isn't done soon.

I would hate to kill those dogs, but I just can't let them take over my property.

If you have any ideas, please let me know soon.

DOG-TIRED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR DOG-TIRED: The dogs are not to blame, so please don't take it out on them. You don't say where you live, but in most communities, your neighbor would be in violation of the law and can be fined.

Call your police again and register a formal complaint. Be sure to give your name so the police will have a record of your complaint. If nothing is done, buy a "pooper scooper" (most hardware stores have them), and after the dogs have "decorated" your lawn, scoop the mess up and deposit it on your neighbor's lawn.

Short of fencing in your property, which is costly, the above suggestion seems the most humane.

DEAR ABBY: I have discovered without a doubt that "Rick," our 16-year-old son, is having sex with his girlfriend. She's also 16. They are both honor students and all-around "good kids."

We have a normal, stable family life. My husband and I have always spent a lot of time with our children and have stressed the importance of taking responsibility for one's own actions. In my opinion, sexual relations are not for those who cannot support themselves or any children that might come along as a result of an accidental pregnancy.

What is a sensible approach? Should I confront Rick alone? I suppose I should tell my husband, but I dread seeing the disappointment on his face. He has always been so proud of Rick.

I'm too close to the situation to make a wise decision. Please give me some guidelines.

HEARTSICK MOM

DEAR MOM: Tell your husband. Rick is his son, too. You and your husband should have a frank talk with Rick and his girlfriend and tell them what you "know."

You could limit the time they spend together, but please don't forbid them to see each other again because "love" will find a way.

Since accidental pregnancy is a very real possibility, be sure that Rick and his girlfriend know everything they need to know about contraception, but don't give them the impression that you think sex for 16-year-olds is OK. Let them know that in your opinion, it is not OK, and that you positively disapprove.

School Budget ...

A major factor entering the budget picture for the coming fiscal year relative to personnel is that of requested funds to "equalize the personnel between Greenville city and Pitt County schools." The amount requested for this purpose is $462,875, termed by Blinson as "the only new money requested."

Elaborating on the factor of equalizing personnel in the two systems, Blinson said, "It should be pointed out that this budget again this year reflects the drastic and critical effects of the current fiscal policies of North Carolina and Pitt County in allocating most of the revenue on a pupil pro rata basis."

"The effects of this policy, as documented in the Research Triangle Institute (merger) report, are devastating when marginal revenue decreases are greater than marginal cost reduction as a result of declining enrollment."

An example of the inequalities that can result on a pro rata share basis is the fact that since school year 1979-80, declining enrollment has resulted in the loss of 140 students - but the loss during that time in the full-time staff has resulted in the decrease of 48 positions. "Clearly a situation where there is a loss of one employee for every three students lost shows that the current pro rata fiscal policies have not been adequately addressed," Blinson commented.

Another important factor in the budget request is that it was necessary to use $267,875 from the fund balance during 1983-84 in order to balance the budget. "We project only $50,000 fund balance being available for the coming fiscal year," Blinson said, "and this fund balance needs to be replaced so that we can meet emergencies that might arise."

The $309,933 capital outlay fund request is about the same amount as the current fiscal year expenditure in that category. Blinson said "this represents less than half of the total needs identified by our staff, but we recommend a hold-the-line approach in capital outlay in deference to the very critical needs in current expense."

very little they could do and that he anticipated the problem would continue to become worse as the summer approaches."

Holmes said someone, apparently Jones, did call the police department early Saturday morning, and was told by a police lieutenant that, if he wanted to swear out a warrant, an arrest would be attempted.

Mayor Janice Buck told the council of a meeting involving her, Holmes and City Manager Gail Meeks with Jones and his employer, John Shannonhouse, manager of White's Stores, earlier in the afternoon. "We agreed with Gary," Mrs. Buck said, "that we prefer not to have this situation in Greenville and we asked him if he could suggest any solutions."

Holmes told the council that he had explained to Jones that the police department is keeping a close watch on the place where these men often gather, that there is no law against dressing as one wishes and that loitering laws have been proved unconstitutional. He said Greenville police officers have so far been unable to catch anyone soliciting for sex in a manner in which a prosecutor could make a case. He said citizen complaints have been virtually nil prior to Jones' and that no one has sworn out a warrant against anyone for solicitation.

The council members discussed their dislike of the situation to which Jones had called attention and asked the police chief and city attorney to "look further to see if there is anything that can be done to control the situation."

They also expressed dislike of the manner in which Jones had presented his complaint, sending out letters to the media prior to talking with the police chief or council about his perceptions of the matter.

Jones said he was "calling on every Christian to back me." He told the council and the television cameras that he had lost his job that afternoon "as a result of calling attention to this matter."

Mayor Buck confirmed that John Shannonhouse had said during the prior meeting that Jones would be without a job if he continued with his plans to bring TV crews to the workshop session. She said she had asked Shannonhouse not to take this measure. "Gary is a young man who has acted impulsively," she said, "as young men often do. He means well. He just acted before he had a well-thought-out plan of action to suggest for us or anyone else."

Another man who identified himself as Carl Nichols said his son has recently been approached in Greenville by someone he believes to be a male homosexual and that he joins Jones in demanding that the police and City Council "do something about these people before I have to do it myself."

Bonner Camporee

Approximately 203 Scouts and 60 adult leaders from the Pitt district were among the 2,000 participants in last weekend's East Carolina Council camporee at Camp Bonner North near Washington.

Bill Plueddemann, who served as chief of the Pitt gold area, said 15 Pitt troops and 29 patrols were involved in the activities, which were viewed by about 200 Cub Scouts and a host of parents who visited the camporee site.

Plueddemann said Bethel Troop 15 won a camporee citation for the most original gateway while Troop 30 of Greenville earned an award for personal appearance. Also receiving citations were Troop 34 from Ayden for campsite arrangement and a new unit, Troop 200 from Grimesland, for organization. Pitt Scouts won seven blue rib-

Good Timing

Washington's dealings with Peking resulted in something other than closer relationships between governments; there was also a treaty permitting U.S. firms the right to compete for Chinese nuclear reactor contracts.

This is a field of megabucks. China's leadership knows a plenitude of electric power is one of the country's basic needs, and opted for a giant step in that direction with a decision to go the nuke route. They have a long way to go.

Their first such plant is a 300-megawatt unit being built with some Japanese equipment. They will soon sign contracts with British and French firms for an 1,800-megawatt plant. Germany has an agreement similar to the American one; so the competition is very real and very tough. Being shrewd customers, the Chinese sought a competitive element; their supply of available money to invest is severely limited.

The British, Germans, French and Japanese all have good track records in construction of nuclear power plants for their homelands. ... Nevertheless, American firms who are entering the race exude confidence they will get a good share of the business involved.

The potential for highly lucrative business deals comes at a time when America's balance of trade figures have been going in an unfavorable direction at an increasing pace; making the nuclear agreement with China especially welcome.

Not A Bad Trait

Remember G. Gordon Liddy? He was one of several people who paid a prison penalty for their roles in the Watergate crimes.

A recent Associated Press report on a Liddy talk to an audience at Bradley University focused on a singular passage:

"There's something different about us — different from people of Europe, Africa, Asia.

"The vast majority of our fellow citizens live lives of illusion. Either they are unable at all to comprehend the real world or, if they can, they tend to turn away from it and shun the harsher aspects of it," said Liddy.

It is not a new observation. The trait, while it could prove a weakness, might also be a secret of what makes our social fabric work ... a willingness to "think well" of other people, and to lean over backward in passing judgments.

On the whole, such a quality of "illusions" suggests elements of self-confidence, strength and fair play prevail in the minds of most people.

It's far from being "bad," and it most certainly surpasses an incapacity of determining what is right, and what is wrong.

A Little Here And There

Time was when I couldn't get the time of day even from an aide close to the somebody-or-other. I'd see one on the street, ask him for it, and he'd say, "Get a watch, ya bum."

I never did, but I can see that those times are behind me. Now, as a newspaper columnist whose subtle pen strokes shape the course of history such that I feel I am practically writing a Time-Life hardbound, I have access to every brand of political hack. Highly placed, very reliable, and well-informed sources now pick up the tab at lunch. As for the aide close to the somebody-or-other who snubbed me, I file his phone messages where I do correspondence from various Publisher's Clearinghouses, and I don't mean in the "Things to Do" box.

Normally we keep it strictly social and confidential. Where are the best places to jog in Washington and what should one be seen in active-wear-wise? What page is all the rage among the bon vivants on the Hill? But besides being my very close personal friend, and the guy who was buying the quiche at Margaux's the other day, Hiram A. Kingmaker also happens to be a distinguished political analyst of national stature. It says so in the pamphlets promulgated by the Poli Sci profs who organized his latest lecture series at the local campus.

I used one as a napkin and cleared my throat to convey a new tone of seriousness to our conversation. There is, after all, my readership, hungering for the latest trends and implications, to think of.

"Hiram," I said, "we've known each other a long time."

"Why you're right," he said, glancing at his multifunction digital display chronometer. "I must catch a bird back to that entitlement town." "Before you go, Hi, into the sky, I want to know who's going to win?" "Helms, Reagan and the Chicago White Sox," he said idly, while sifting through his credit cards. "Where's Bruce?" "Bruce?" "You know. Cute fella. Introduced himself a couple of hours ago, said he intended to wait on us." His eyes futilely searched the premises. "But why?" "To pay the bill of course." "Not that. Your distinguished political projection. Please explain." "Pitching. It's 90% of the game. Always has been. Always will be. Helms, Reagan and the Sox have the best pitching. Where is that youngster?" "You don't like Hart?" "I love him, but now that he's

Public Forum

To the editor:

I admire Patrick O'Neill for his courage in protesting nuclear arms. It seems that the governments of the world are determined to make these weapons, which if unleashed will end human life as we know it.

I believe that citizens of the United States and other countries must and can use non-violent protest as a means to let the governments know that these weapons must be banned.

candidates in the field, and six of them given an honest chance of winning, this campaign has been confusing. Debate has not been direct. It has been diffused. Instead of two candidates firing straight at each other with rifles, this has been a campaign of six men firing shotguns all over the place.

The televised debates were boring. A reporter would ask a question and it would take 15 minutes for the six candidates to get through it. It's hard enough to figure out what a politician is saying without having to wade through six speeches on each issue. Press coverage hasn't been much better. As state elections chief

Alex Brock says, "The press has tried to be fair to all six but sometimes fair isn't good."

The two survivors will no doubt continue to ride the political issues which have carried them to Round Two. But they'll also add some new ones. They'll be looking to distinguish themselves from their one and only opponent. When they debate, it'll be much easier to know how the two men differ than it was during Round One.

For the campaign organizations, the 28-day campaign will be a mad rush to raise a whole new treasury and expand voter turnout operations. It will also be a time of intense negotiations between the two survivors and the four losers. Each survivor will seek the endorsement and the campaign supporters of the losers. Each loser, according to Brock, will try to assure that his supporters will be given fair consideration for jobs and other appointments in the next administration.

In past years, those endorsements were very important. This year, they'll be aggressively pursued but they may not be as important as in the old days. "In the new era of campaigning," says David Price, state Democratic Party chairman, "those personal alliances will have to be combined with an intensive public campaign."

Advertising and news coverage are the essentials of such a public campaign. To get the money for ads, the candidates can return to the people who contributed to them the first time for as much as an extra $4,000 per contributor. In this area, the endorsement by one of the losers could help raise money. But Price warns that funds won't be raised easily this May in a state already being drained by the U.S. Senate race.

Price says a strong voter turnout effort will be essential to the eventual winner. Turnout in a runoff is traditionally lower than that of a first primary. The runoff is June 5, a time when some folks may be heading off for an early summer vacation. There won't be a presidential primary, nor, in most counties, a congressional, legislative or county slate to add voter interest.

Round Two will test the candidates' ability to stand toe-to-toe with a single opponent in public, in the political corridors where deals are made and in the nuts and bolts departments such as voter turnout and fundraising. It should be a much easier race to focus on.

'The Game is Roughest On The Women'

WASHINGTON — A couple of events have come along that prompt observations long overdue. One of the events is spring in Washington. The other is the publication of Rosalynn Carter's autobiography, "First Lady From Plains." Let me propose a heartfelt toast: To our political ladies! God bless them all. Forty years of covering politics have left me with this certain impression: The game is roughest on the women. When men suffer the unkind cuts of a hard campaign, it is their wives who bleed most quickly. At the presidential level, our first ladies and our might-have-been first ladies know what is meant by hostile fire. Every one of them deserves a medal. My recollections of first ladies go back to Eleanor Roosevelt. Publicly she was a tough sister. Privately, as we now know, she felt a hundred wounds. She was the first of the first ladies to go public in a big way. Dolley Madison served effectively as first lady for 16 years, through both the Jefferson and Madison administrations, and gained a deserved measure of fame. Louise Adams, John Quincy's wife, established a tradition of fabulous entertainments. Mary Todd Lincoln is remembered as a redoubtable lady. Edith Galt Wilson, another tough sister, held the White House together during her husband's illness. But none of them ever put on a miner's helmet and went down a coal shaft. Eleanor did. Mrs. Roosevelt stoically endured the ridicule of columnist Westbrook Pegler, who dubbed her the Big Mouth, La Boca Grande. She weathered gossip about her own sexuality and about her husband's supposed mistress. Before Eleanor came along, being first lady was nothing much. Afterward, the position became an office in its own right.

Bess Truman was an altogether different personality. She was tough enough to keep the press at bay. Mamie Eisenhower cracked under the stress of the White House pressures and came to loathe the office. Pat Nixon and Betty Ford went through periods of agony.

Every year at this time, when the capital suddenly blossoms with thousands of daffodils and tulips, we think of Lady Bird Johnson and the debt we owe her. There was a great lady. She wept inside at the beating her husband took with Vietnam, but she stuck serenely to her self-appointed role as landscape gardener of Washington, D.C.

My most vivid recollection of Rosalynn Carter goes back to a luncheon the Carters once gave at Camp David for a dozen senior correspondents. They sat side by side at the head of an impressive table, as completely together as the husbands and wives one finds on Etruscan tombs. From time to time, when she thought he was about to say something impolitic, she would softly cover his hand with her own. All steel, we said of her.

THE WATCHED POT!

Strength For Today

A boy and his father were driving through city traffic, the boy at the steering wheel. When he started to exceed the speed limit, the father laid his hand on the boy's knee and said in kindly fashion, "Aren't you hitting it up a bit too fast, son?" The boy replied, "I'm just following that guy in front."

Many accidents arise from the fact that we try to follow "that guy in front." Many young married people who wind up in divorce court do so because they think they must keep up with a crowd of speeders. Some wives prevent their husbands from getting ahead in life because they spend every cent the husband makes going along with a group who think that life consists in hitting the high places.

If "that guy in front" wants to speed, let him go ahead, but don't try to keep up with him. There may be a big penalty to pay.

Ingram Renews Call To Drop CWIP

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Gubernatorial candidate John Ingram, in a news conference here Monday, called on the North Carolina General Assembly to repeal this state's Construction Work in Progress law during the 1984 short session of the legislature.

"This bad CWIP law has been on the books long enough to do serious damage to every household budget in North Carolina," he said. "CWIP (pronounced quip) is a gyp because it allows Duke Power, CP&L and Veeco to charge customers in advance for abandoned nuclear power plants. Unlike every other profit-making business in our state, the utility corporations take no risks."

He asserted that loans given to some of his opponents are "banking special interests taking control of my opponents. NCNB does of loan someone hundreds of thousands of dollars without expecting something in return. Every major candidate in this race for governor is in debt except John Ingram. Everyone has mortgaged North Carolina's future except John Ingram. The people have a right to know now, before the election, who is bankrolling these candidates. As governor, I will fight to change the laws so that loans to political campaigns are made illegal." He also criticized the candidates who have accepted utilities PAC (political action committee) contributions, asserting that "they have earned this money by serving special utilities special interests."

He cited a Wall Street Journal article which ranks North Carolina as being among the top 10 states friendliest to utility corporation interests and said this situation would end if he were elected governor and if the state had an elected utilities commission as he has called for throughout his campaign.

Martin Places Schools At Top

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Improving education, control of the rise of drug traffic into coastal havens in the state, further lowering the tobacco tax, and repeal of North Carolina's unique intangible and manufacturer's inventory taxes are considered by Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin as top issues to benefit Tar Heels.

Martin, speaking to the press and supporters at the Pitt-Greenville Airport at noon Monday, said "everywhere I've campaigned, people are talking about education. That's a major priority for them, and for me. In recent years, there has been an erosion in the teaching profession in our state. During the Holshouser administration, North Carolina ranked 20th in education in the nation. It now ranks 44th. People are also deeply concerned about test scores, as our students now rank third from the bottom nationally.

"I feel," Martin said, "that we very much need a stronger curriculum requirement for our students to strengthen the areas of learning open to them." Martin said too that better wages for teachers "like better wages for everybody else," is uppermost in the minds of many Tar Heels, a concern he feels is justified in view of the state being 45th in the rank of income.

"One of the issues I feel that is very important is the repeal of a couple of taxes that are unique to North Carolina, the intangible tax and the manufacturer's inventory tax.

"Much of the work done to recruit new, desirable businesses for the state is negated by the existence of these two taxes. I think it mandatory that we repeal these taxes as early as possible. They place North Carolina in an unfair competition with all the other states in the nation. I think the loss of revenue from these taxes would be more than compensated by the gain we would have in new businesses and new jobs that would be opened up."

Referring to the rapid rise of North Carolina to fifth place nationally in the amount of illegal drugs coming into the state, Martin declared, "We simply have to do something about that. We've got to let those people know in no uncertain terms they are not welcome here."

Martin said he proposes a program "to double the number of undercover agents, to increase efforts to net people in the drug traffic all the way up the chain of the supply line, and to establish a strong drug education program beginning in the primary grades to help young people fully understand the dangers of drugs to their minds and bodies."

Additionally, he opts for "stronger means of spotting traffickers in our coastal waterways. We have 48 high speed attack helicopters, we may need more reinforcements."

Efforts to cut the federal tax on cigarettes, Martin reminded his listeners, "is an issue I'm devoting time to. As a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, I've been able to persuade committee members to get the tax down from 16 to 12 cents, with three cents to be placed on drinks of whiskey. It looks hopeful that Helms will be able to get the tobacco tax on down to eight cents in the Senate committee."

An interesting sidelight to the tobacco tax was related by Martin. He said that in a recent visit to Trenton in Jones County, "which surely must be about 99 percent Democratic, the people there signed me up as a Republican member of the Tobacco Growers Association. They told me to be eligible for membership, a person either had to grow tobacco or help to lower tax on it, and that I was eligible as a fighter for a tax cut."

Congress Offers Truman Tribute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harry S. Truman's political friends and family today remembered him as a principled, strong-willed leader whose Midwestern horse sense put him on equal footing with the great world leaders of the century.

In a rare joint meeting of Congress, members of the 33rd president's administration and his daughter, Margaret Truman Daniel, paid tribute to the plain-spoken Missourian who would have been 100 years old today.

Congress only once before had held such an observance for the birthday centennial of a former president. That was in 1982 to honor Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose mantle Truman assumed in 1945 when Roosevelt died.

Among those paying tribute to Truman were Stuart Symington, the first secretary of the Air Force under Truman and, like him, a former Missouri senator; Clark Clifford, Truman's special counsel and later secretary of defense under Lyndon Johnson; and Truman biographer Robert Donovan.

Presiding over the session with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. was Senate President Pro Tem Strom Thurmond, who split with Truman in 1948 in a bitter dispute over Truman's civil rights policies and ran against him as a "Dixiecrat."

The ceremony in the House chamber featured the U.S. Army Band and chorus playing, among other selections, the Harry S. Truman March and pianist Daniel Pollack with two Chopin pieces that were favorites of Truman, who also played the piano.

Others present included John

Snyder, Truman's treasury secretary; Charles Brannan, his agriculture secretary; Elmer Staats, comptroller general in the administration; Averell Harriman, secretary of commerce; and members of Truman's White House staff.

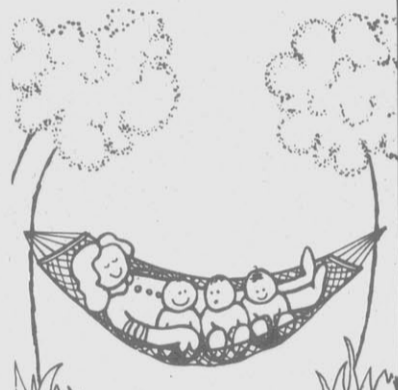

"His knowledge of the past directed President Truman's aspirations for our nation's future," said Rep. Ike Skelton, a Lexington, Mo., Democrat who was chairman of the centennial committee. "Because he knew that time was the final arbiter, he was able to lead our country through some of its most difficult days without wearing the shackles of fleeting public opinion."

The joint meeting was part of a series of nationwide centennial observances, including pageants, symposiums, ceremonies and special exhibits of Truman memorabilia.

While most of the remembrances focused on the feisty man and his often controversial policies, the most poignant came from Margaret, the only daughter of Harry and Bess Truman.

Two Banks Raise Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the nation's biggest commercial banks raised their prime lending rates today by a half percentage point to 12.5 percent, the highest level in 18 months.

The increase announced by Chase Manhattan Bank and Manufacturers

Hanover Bank was the third rise in the key borrowing rate in two months.

The nation's big banks raised their prime rate to 11.5 percent from 11 percent on March 19 and lifted it another half percentage point to 12 percent on April 5.

The last time the prime rate was above 12 percent was in October 1982 when it fell to 12 percent from 13 percent.

The prime rate is a base lending charge upon which banks compute interest on short-term business loans.

GOP Predicts Win Over Deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Senate leaders predicted today they have the votes to dump a $200 billion deficit-reduction package drafted by Democrats and clear the way for adoption of a $144 billion plan that has President Reagan's blessing.

"We do believe we have the votes to keep the (GOP) leadership amendment ... but it will be close," Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the assistant majority leader, told reporters today.

He added that if the Republicans' Senate majority holds, action on the legislation should be finished this week.

The Senate, after a four-day weekend away from legislative activity, resumed work today on plans for making a "down payment" on federal budget deficits. This will be the eighth day the Senate has devoted to trying to settle on an election-year package.

Two main contenders remain. One is the three-year, $143.7 billion package of tax increases and curbs on military and domestic spending worked out by the president and senior GOP senators.

The other is the three-year, $200 billion package drafted by Democratic leaders that would raise more in taxes and cut more from military spending than the Republican plan.

So far, Senate action has consisted of rejecting various substitutes that called for more drastic action to rein in the red ink, which is estimated to be about $600 billion over the next three years.

That series of rejections demonstrated that senators were unwilling to take major deficit-reduction action during this election year. It also appeared that Republican leaders have the votes necessary to hold off challenges to the GOP package.

The House already has approved the outlines of a three-year, $182 billion package.

The Republican plan pending in the Senate would include legislated "caps" on annual appropriations over the next three years, holding military spending growth to about 7 percent after inflation, and freezing domestic spending next year while allowing it to grow only at the rate of inflation in the next two years.

The Democratic plan is less stringent in its treatment of domestic spending but would limit military spending growth to about 4 percent. In addition, it would call for $74 billion in higher taxes, compared to about $48 billion under the GOP plan.

The Democratic plan also would delay for two years the scheduled 1985 start of indexing of personal income tax rates that would allow those rates to move with the inflation rate.

Minister Kidnapped In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three kidnapers today overpowered an American clergyman on a west Beirut street, forcing him into a car and speeding off, police reported.

A police spokesman identified the minister as Benjamin Weir, 60, pastor of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). He has been living in Lebanon for 30 years, serving with the National Evangelical Synod of Syria and Lebanon.

U.S. Embassy sources confirmed the abduction, but gave no further information.

A spokesman for the Presbyterian Church in New York said Weir was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, and raised in Berkeley, Calif.

Weir is the fourth American to disappear or be kidnapped in the Moslem half of the city since anti-government Moslem militias wrested it from the Lebanese army in February.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market held steady through morning trading today even though several major banks raised their prime lending rates to 12 1/2 percent.

Transportation, retail and oil issues rose, while paper and mining stocks retreated. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 1.25 on Monday, gained another 3.46 to 1,170.02 after two hours of trading today.

Gainers held a slim lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index rose 0.24 to 92.11.

Big Board volume totaled 35.52 million shares at noon EDT, compared with 34.79 million at that hour Monday.

Moments before the opening bell, Chase Manhattan Bank raised its prime, or base, lending charge by one-half percentage point.

Citibank in New York, First National Bank of Chicago and Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh were among the banks quickly matching the increase.

It was the third rise in the key borrowing rate in two months, putting it at its highest level in 18 months.

The latest increase did not appear to take Wall Street by surprise, however. Other interest rates already had been rising, lifting the banks' cost of obtaining funds for lending.

Hence, both the stock and bond markets appeared to partially discount the prime-rate boost; bond prices also were mixed after suffering broad losses in recent sessions.

On the NYSE, UAL rose 1 1/2 to 37, General Motors gained 1 to 65 1/2 and Coloco climbed 3/4 to 16 1/2. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.19 to 212.30.

QUEBEC (AP) — Police today stormed the Quebec National Assembly building where a man toting a submachine gun and dressed in military garb had opened fire, killing at least one person and wounding 10 others, Canadian Press reported.

Unconfirmed reports said he was holding at least one hostage and that there was a second death, the agency said.

Some of those injured in the shooting, which broke out minutes before the Quebec National Assembly was to convene at 10 a.m., were believed to be journalists and assembly employees, the agency said.

Witnesses said the man entered the chamber, shouting, "Where are the MNAs, I want to kill them," apparently referring to members of the assembly.

He was reported to be sitting in the speaker's chair.

The building was evacuated. The provisional police riot squad surrounded the building and had said they were trying to convince the gunman to surrender. Witnesses said the man claimed to be a member of the Royal 22nd Regiment of the Canadian armed forces, based in nearby Valcartier.

Radio station CJRP said that a man dressed in a green camouflage uniform visited the station at 9:20 a.m. today and delivered a cassette tape in an envelope, with orders not to open it before 10 a.m.

Station personnel opened the cassette just before that time and found it contained vague and slightly incoherent threats in French against the Quebec government, Canadian Press reported.

Station officials said they were in the process of informing police when they received word of the shootings. Police told them not to broadcast the cassette.

Rejean Dionne, a cameraman for the assembly's telecasting service, was injured in the arm. He said he was getting his camera ready for the opening of the session when a man broke into the main assembly chamber and fired bursts from a submachine gun.

"I lay on the ground but I was hit in the arm," he said.

Duarte Says Would Not Let U.S. Fight

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Jose Napoleon Duarte, jubilantly claiming election as president despite an incomplete vote count, says he would welcome U.S. aid but would never let foreign combat troops fight the leftist rebels.

The guerrillas, who tried to disrupt Sunday's presidential runoff election, were reported today to have launched fresh attacks in outlying areas.

An army patrol was ambushed near Santa Ana, 40 miles west of here, and a lieutenant was killed, military sources reported. There was no immediate word on guerrilla casualties.

In a separate action, insurgents blew up two power poles overnight near the town of Nejapa, 10 miles north of the capital, briefly blacking out part of that area.

Duarte, candidate of the moderate Christian Democratic Party, was carried on the shoulders of cheering supporters to a news conference Monday at which he stressed he would seek a peaceful end to his nation's 4 1/2-year-old civil war.

"We will not accept any foreign troops, whether they are U.S., Cuban or Nicaraguan. I believe the solution is a democratic solution, not one of violence," Duarte said.

The latest unofficial results compiled by the Christian Democrats, based on 97 percent of the vote, gave Duarte 734,004 votes, or 54.5 percent, against 624,109, or 45.5 percent for his conservative opponent, Roberto d'Aubuisson of the Republican Nationalist Alliance.

The Central Election Council, which oversees balloting and counting, released no figures and was not expected to have official results for

Runaway Tigers Crush Royals

By The Associated Press
The Detroit Tigers are taking no prisoners this year. "How can it get any better than this?" said Chet Lemon, the hottest hitter on the hottest team in baseball, after helping the runaway Tigers crush the Kansas City Royals 10-3 Monday night.

The victory extended the Tigers' road record to an incredible 12-0 and their overall mark in the American League East to 23-4.

"I don't know what tomorrow will bring," said Tiger Manager Sparky Anderson, "but for now we are playing super. It's hard to contain our lineup. From top to bottom, we don't lose a thing. We keep coming at people whether it's with our leadoff guy or our No. 9 guy. We're playing with the same confidence we left spring training with."

In other AL action, it was New York 5, Cleveland 2; Milwaukee 7, Chicago 3; Minnesota 11, California 1, and Oakland 6, Seattle 5. The Toronto-Baltimore game was rained out.

Lemon knocked in three runs in the Tigers' latest victory, while Darrell Evans unloaded a two-run homer.

Juan Berenguer, 2-1, struck out two and gave up six hits through 6 2-3 innings as the Royals lost their 10th game in 12 starts. Rookie Mark Gubicza struck out six of the first nine batters he faced but wound up with a third loss in three decisions.

"That young kid really throws great," Lemon said of the hard-throwing rookie. "He has an exceptional fastball. It took a second time round to adjust and know how hard he was really throwing."

The Royals' slump is reaching dangerous proportions. The once-dominant team of the American League West is only two games out of the cellar.

"When you're not scoring runs, everyone wants to jump on you," said Manager Dick Howser. "We're just going to have to do whatever it takes — get several well pitched games and figure a way to score some runs or just outscore some teams for a few days."

Yankees 5, Indians 2
Don Mattingly and Steve Kemp hit New York's first home runs in 11 games while Shane Rawley allowed one hit in five innings, leading New York over visiting Cleveland.

Rawley, 1-2, who failed to last more than two innings in two of his three previous starts, walked five, struck out four and allowed only Carmen Castillo's second-inning single in his five-inning stint.

Curt Brown and Jay Howell finished up with Howell going the final 21-3 innings for his first save.

The victory was only the Yankees' third in their last 12 outings while Cleveland suffered its fourth straight setback and eighth in nine games.

"I started swinging the bat a little better in Milwaukee over the weekend," Kemp said. "Right now, I feel good."

Brewers 7, White Sox 3
In Chicago, Jim Sundberg and Ted

Simmons each clubbed two-run homers to carry Milwaukee over the White Sox.

The Brewers' power display was a welcome change for winner Jaime Coanower, 1-4, who had received only seven runs in his previous five starts this year. Coanower gave up six hits, struck out two and walked one in seven innings before giving way to Rollie Fingers.

"This is the first game this year that I've really hit the ball," said Simmons. "I haven't hit a ball like that in a long time. Last year, probably. But you never really know."

Twins 11, Angels 1
In Anaheim, Gary Gaetti and Houston Jimenez each knocked in three runs and Mike Smithson scattered six hits as Minnesota defeated California.

Smithson, 4-3, walked two and struck out six in completing his third game of the season. The strikeouts gave him 38 for the year, second in the American League to Bert Blyleven's 43 with Cleveland.

Gaetti hit a three-run homer off reliever Frank LaCorte in the seventh to give the Twins a 6-1 lead at that point, and Minnesota added five insurance runs in the ninth, two on a single by Mickey Hatcher.

"I feel I can get any right-handed batter out in the American League," Smithson said. "California has a good balanced lineup but if I take care with the lefties, I'm confident of handling the righties."

A's 6, Mariners 5
In Oakland, Bruce Bochte singled with one out in the ninth inning to score Joe Morgan from third base and lead the A's over Seattle.

Voodoo Fails To Do The Job

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Even voodoo couldn't stop Alan Risher and the Arizona Wranglers.

Risher passed for 172 yards and a touchdown and kept another scoring drive going with his running to lead the Wranglers to a 28-13 victory over the New Orleans Breakers Monday night.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for Arizona, now 5-6, and kept them in the playoff chase in the United States Football League's Pacific Division.

The Breakers fell to 7-4 after a 5-0 start.

Prior to Monday night's game, Chris Roig, a local psychic, staged a brief voodoo ceremony designed to break the Monday night jinx that plagues New Orleans professional football teams at home. Neither the Breakers nor the Saints of the National Football League have ever won a Monday night game at home — a dismal string that now stands at 0-7 dating back a dozen years.

For 28:32, it appeared the voodoo was working. The Breakers led 10-0. The Wranglers had been held to just 43 yards passing and 46 yards rushing by the usually passive New Orleans defense.

Then Risher got cranked up, taking the Wranglers on a 51-yard scoring drive that the young quarterback credited with changing the momentum of the game. He accounted for 44 of those yards himself, 33 passing and 11 on a scramble that put the ball on the New Orleans 13-yard line. Fullback Kevin Long capped the drive with a 1-yard scoring plunge with four seconds left in the first half.

"That sent us into the locker room with some momentum," Risher said after the game.

And the Wranglers kept rolling in the second half. Risher hit wide receiver Lenny Willis with a 20-yard scoring pass in the third quarter, putting the Wranglers ahead for good. Long added another touchdown on a 2-yard plunge in the third quarter, and Tim Spencer burst 44 yards for a touchdown with just over two minutes remaining in the game.

"I think we were a little too conservative, to begin with, and that was my fault. I called the plays," Risher said. "We thought we'd run the football, and they kind of stuffed it on us."

The Breakers got field goals of 44 yards and 26 yards from Tim Mazzetti and a touchdown on a 13-yard run by Marcus Dupree. Dupree, the 19-year-old rookie, also had a 67-yard touchdown run called back and still finished with 125 rushing yards on 11 carries.

New Orleans quarterback Johnnie Walton, league leader in total yardage most of the season, finished with 10 completions and three interceptions on 34 attempts.

"He hurt his left shoulder a bit, but nothing that kept him from throwing or anything," Breakers Coach Dick Coury said after the game.

"I think a lot of it had to do with the defense he was facing. They were hurrying him a bit.

"It's not the things John was doing as much as what teams have been doing against him."

Bulls Offered More Security

DURHAM (AP) — Duke quarterback Ben Bennett said he chose the United States Football League over the National Football League's Atlanta Falcons because he felt the first-year USFL club offered him more security.

Bennett announced Sunday that he had signed a four-year contract with the Jacksonville Bulls.

The NCAA's career passing yardage leader was the Falcon's sixth round draft pick and he said the team made him an offer Thursday. He said the contract was for three years, for less money and was not guaranteed. Though he said he wanted to play in Atlanta, those factors swayed his decision.

"Atlanta really offered no security," Bennett said, "and hardly any opportunity to play."

Bennett declined to go into specifics on the contract offer, but published reports have placed the sum at $1 million including bonuses and incentives.

"A lot of important things are guaranteed," Bennett said. "Most of the big money is contingent on performance. Not performance where I have to be tops in the league, but performance where I have to be tops on the team.

"The overall opportunities were just too much to pass up," Bennett said. "The fan support there is amazing. It's in Florida, which is great weather most of the year. It's under Lindy Infante, who is a wide-open passing offensive coach. When you look at all these variables, it's too good to pass up, especially when you throw in the money."

Bennett said he was not slated to play for three weeks. There are seven weeks left in the USFL season, which is the first year on Bennett's four-year contract.

Shawn Moore and Greg Hunt each had two hits to pace Pepsi-Cola to an 11-6 Tar Heel Little League victory over the Moose yesterday.

Pepsi pushed ahead with two runs in the top of the third, but the Moose came back with three in their half of the frame.

But Pepsi rallied for six in the fourth to put the game away. With one away, Eric Huber reached on an error and Shante Moye walked. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Bill Bizzard also walked, loading the bases. Greg Hunt singled in Huber and Paul Allen walked to force in Moye. Moore got a double, driving in Bizzard and Hunt, and a walk to Ritchie Grimsley reloaded the bases. Will MacKenzie walked, driving in Allen, and a walk to Huber brought in Moore for an 8-3 lead.

Pepsi added three more in the fifth, while the Moose picked up one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Chris Christopher led the Moose hitting with three.

Schnellenberger USFL Bound?

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) -- University of Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger, fresh off a national championship season, has been offered a multimillion dollar contract to coach a United States Football League franchise reportedly bound for Miami, The Orlando Sentinel said today.

The Sentinel, quoting sources with the Tampa Bay Bandits and in the USFL, said Miami hotel developer Sherwood Weiser has nearly completed negotiations to purchase the Washington Federals.

Weiser, 53, has also secured South Florida territorial rights from Bandits owner John Bassett and offered Schnellenberger a five-year contract worth more than $2.5 million, the newspaper said.

Reached in Salt Lake City Monday night, Schnellenberger confirmed he met with Weiser last Thursday at the developer's Miami home.

"All I can say, as always, is that I will look into every situation that comes my way," Schnellenberger said. "We discussed a lot of things that had to do with his potential ownership of the team."

Schnellenberger was in Salt Lake City as part of a Florida delegation to a Fortune 500 convention.

Weiser, chairman of The Continentals Company that developed and operates 32 hotel properties, confirmed meeting with Schnellenberger and his wife Beverlee, but insisted there "is no offer on the table."

St. Louis beat Los Angeles 5-1 and Chicago defeated San Francisco 10-7. San Diego at Pittsburgh was rained out.

Expos 4, Astros

Steve Rogers worked 5 2-3 innings, allowing just three hits before leaving with a blister, and snapped a 1-1 tie with an RBI double in the Montreal fifth. Andre Dawson later hit a two-run single in the inning to give the Expos a three-run lead over Houston.

Terry Francona, who has seven hits in his last 10 at-bats, started the Expos' fifth with a triple. One out later, Rogers doubled off Joe Niekro, scoring Francona. Miguel Dilone singled, sending Rogers to third, and, one out later, Niekro hit Tim Raines with a pitch to load the bases. Dawson then grounded a single past shortstop, driving in two more runs.

Enos Cabell provided Houston with its only run, hitting his second homer of the year in the fourth inning.

School Board OK's Contract For Rose Field House Addition

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A low bid of $29,376 was approved by city school board members at the board's information meeting Monday night for the construction of a 30 by 60 foot addition to the field house at Rose High School.

The contract for constructing a masonry building to house a weight training room was awarded to Norman Eastwood Construction Company. Bids were let on two options — for a masonry building or a pre-engineered metal building. Eastwood's low bid for the masonry construction is $28,800 to which a bond performance amount of $576 has been added for the $29,376 total. Miller and Davis submitted a low bid of $25,500 for a metal building.

Architect George Shoe, consultant to the city schools for architectural matters, recommended approving the masonry bid in favor of the bid for the metal building, noting it is his opinion that "a conventional structure is far better in maintenance and care, and since the difference in cost is so small, I recommend that you go with the masonry bid."

Expected time of completion will be about 60 days.

In another action, the board approved a live project contract to renovate a duplex house located at 13th and Clark Streets. This marks the first time the Rose High vocational classes trades project will take on a renovation project instead of new construction. Students will reroof the house, brick the exterior, strip out existing walls and ceilings, insulate and replace walls and ceilings, rearrange the interior, and construct a front porch.

Budget amendment number 4 of state public funds was approved. The amendment is for an $3,087 increase in state funds for the Community Schools program. The increase results from school systems not using all their funds, with the excess divided among actively participating systems.

Approval was given for the administration to submit applications for federal funds. Superintendent Delma Blinson reminded board members that approval carried an agreement to comply with any legal regulations applicable to use of the funds.

A gift of $200 from a retired teacher was accepted by the board with an expression of gratitude. Mary Murrell, a retired first grade teacher who formerly taught at Third Street School, sent the check to be used in classes in K-3 schools to purchase pencils and erasers for needy students.

Several reports were presented to the board. Ann Harrison reported on guidance services; and Charles Ross gave reports on revisions to the STAR program for grades 4-6 and on the status of the new statewide annual writing assessment tests.

Sarah Allen, a reading resource teacher at Elmhurst Elementary School, was presented formally to the board. Mrs. Allen was 1984 teacher of the year in both the city schools and in District I which comprises 17 school systems. At the state level she was named one of three top finalists. The state teacher of the year, recently named, was a young male teacher from another school system.

Mrs. Allen expressed gratitude for the support given her. "It was a heartwarming experience," she said. "I'm proud to be part of the teaching profession, and feel I am fortunate to be part of the Greenville city school system."

Musical Tops Tony Nominations

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sunday in the Park with George," the Stephen Sondheim musical which opened to mixed reviews, has captured 10 Tony award nominations, one more than its closest rival, "La Cage aux folles," the season's biggest musical hit.

Both are in contention for best musical of the year after nominations for Broadway's top honor were announced Monday. Tom Stoppard's play "The Real Thing" and two other best-musical candidates, "The Tap Dance Kid" and "Baby," also did well, receiving seven nominations each.

A surprise was the lack of nominations for "Death of a Salesman," including none for its star, Dustin Hoffman. The critically acclaimed revival of the Arthur Miller classic received only one nomination — as outstanding revival.

"Sunday in the Park with George," suggested by Georges Seurat's pointillist masterpiece, "A Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte," received mixed reviews from critics when it opened last month. "La Cage aux folles," about an aging homosexual couple and their family complications, is based on a French farce which later became a popular movie.

Besides "The Real Thing," nominees in the best-play category include David Mamet's Pulitzer Prize-winner, "Glengarry Glen Ross;" Michael Frayn's hit British comedy, "Noises Off;" and Joanna Glass' "Play Memory," which expired after a run of less than one week.

Three English stars — Rex Harrison in "Heartbreak House," Jeremy Irons in "The Real Thing" and Ian McKellen in his one-man show "Acting Shakespeare."

PBS Looks At Modern Artists

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In one long, marvelous, almost spiritual scene toward the end of "de Kooning on de Kooning" on public television, the 80-year-old artist is shown at work in his Long Island studio, and the intensity of his effort almost defies description.

Still, actor Dustin Hoffman tries: "We ... watch spellbound as he paints with deceptive ease, slashing paint onto his canvas, stepping back to look at the result, stepping forward to stab again. "He's never satisfied with his work."

Hoffman introduces the five films in a new series called "Strokes of Genius," starting tonight with "Jackson Pollock: Portrait." "de Kooning on de Kooning" is the third show, May 22.

Rarely in the brief, introductory segments, does Hoffman remove his hands from his pockets. In describing de Kooning's artistic technique, he does.

"Strokes of Genius," produced by Courtney Sale Ross, examines the lives and work of five seminal practitioners of modern American art. After the Pollock film, the series continues May 15 with "Franz Kline Remembered" and "Arshile Gorky," and concludes May 29 with "David Smith: Steel into Sculpture."

Mrs. Ross, a Texan who studied art and ran a gallery in Dallas at the age of 21, turned to filmmaking in the late '70s, after putting together an exhibition, "New York: The State of Art," at the request of then-Gov. Hugh Carey.

Her first film, "The Big Picture," was a documentary of that show. She completed work on the de Kooning film in 1980, and only recently finished the Pollock documentary, which premiered at the Ziegfeld Theater in New York City in late April.

Steven Spielberg ("Jaws," "Raiders of the Lost Ark") directed Hoffman ("Tootsie") in the host segments in a classic exercise in cinematic overkill.

The Dutch-born de Kooning is the only one of the five still living, and he took Mrs. Ross, Hoffman, Spielberg and a film crew into his studio with some reluctance.

The artist and his wife, Elaine, spoke with Mrs. Ross for the film (the only one in which the producer appears), but it is the studio scene that sets "de Kooning on de Kooning" apart.

"He got so involved in doing the painting," Mrs. Ross says, "that he just forgot the camera was there. Watch the muscles in his face, the concentration."

"He walks back and forth, back and forth," she continues. "The painting appears to be finished, and then he will step up to it and, whoosh, change the whole thing."

"And then," Mrs. Ross says, "he'll sit for hours just looking at the painting."

There is a similar, though much shorter, scene in "Jackson Pollock" in which the artist is seen demonstrating his well-known "drip" technique. The footage was shot in the 1950s by Hans Namuth and obtained by Mrs. Ross for "Strokes of Genius."

But the film on Pollock is most impressive as a portrait of a complex and troubled man who was an enigma, even to those closest to him.

"I think he was tortured by something," says his widow, the artist Lee Krasner, "but I don't know what."

She remembers complaining to him about his drinking and his tantrums. "Think of it as a storm," Pollock would answer. "It'll go by."

Pollock said he painted unconsciously, and could not explain his work.

Pride of Missouri

Harry Truman - our 33rd President - was born on this day 100 years ago. Truman was the most recent of nine Presidents who did not attend college. The "S" in Harry S. Truman doesn't stand for anything. Few people are aware that Truman was distantly related to President John Tyler. During his come-from-behind presidential campaign of 1948, Truman conducted a 35-day, 31,000-mile "whistlestop" campaign. He delivered 356 speeches.

DO YOU KNOW - Whom did Truman defeat in the 1948 Presidential election?

MONDAY'S ANSWER - Queen Victoria's portrait was on the penny black.

The bidding:

West North East South
 1 ♥ 1 NT Pass 2 ♥
 Dble Pass Pass Pass!
 Opening lead: King of ♣.

We have always taken with a pinch of salt some of the wonders of Texas that have been described to us. However, this one, from the recent North American Championships held in San Antonio, Texas, can be attested to by four players at least!

South intended his bid of two hearts as a game force and a probe for a spade fit. What caused him to pass two hearts doubled is something of a mystery. Most likely he thought that his partner had to have better hearts when he passed the double, and he felt that his outside strength would be enough to guarantee eight tricks.

What's more, we can't fault his analysis. For we have yet to find a way to defeat the contract!

Let's suppose that West leads a trump - as good an attack as any. Declarer wins and simply fires back a trump. All West will score is four trump tricks and the ace of diamonds. Declarer must be careful though to use the king of clubs and a high spade as entries to his hand to lead twice toward the king-queen of diamonds, to prevent West from scoring the queen of spades.

Now we don't want you to go around trying to play a 3-2 fit whenever you have enough points for game and are doubled at a low level. Sometimes you will find an opposing distribution where the enemy gets a side suit going and you can't come to enough tricks.

Also, if you do find a way to defeat the contract, don't bother to write and let us know. We much prefer the story as it is - we will be able to tell it for years to come.

Have you been running in to double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. For a copy of his DOUBLES booklet, send $1.85 to "Goren-Doubles," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

March Tornadoes Ranked Worst In East

By The Associated Press
One of the 21 tornadoes that hit North Carolina and South Carolina was of monster proportions — at least 2½ miles wide — and a tornado expert says the storms as a whole are probably the most devastating the East Coast has ever seen.

On Monday, University of Chicago meteorologist T.T. Fujita completed a study of the deadly outbreak and some of his initial findings were made available by the University of Chicago news bureau.

By studying 1,000 aerial photos of the areas struck March 28, Fujita found that the storms traveled on three major tracks and that on several occasions two tornadoes may have traveled side by side.

The study also showed that North Carolina was lucky in one respect — for the most part the worst storms hit unpopulated areas — and unlucky in another — they struck at night, when residents couldn't see them coming.

The storms killed 44 people in North Carolina, injured more than 800, left more than 2,000 homeless and property damage estimated at more than $105 million. Eighteen people died in South Carolina.

"I have never seen anything like this on the East Coast," Fujita said. "It's more like a storm typical of the Midwest."

The swarm of twisters has proven to be the most deadly in a year that already has seen at least 106 tornado deaths, more than triple the 34 killed in 1983. Weather specialists aren't surprised by the increase in deaths, explaining that heavy tornado activity occurs in the United States every nine or 10 years. "We were ready for a busy year last year," Fujita, 63, said, "but it didn't happen. So we expected it this year."

However, meteorologists aren't able to explain why the nation's prime tornado region has shifted from the Mideast to the Southeast. The experts can say only that an unusual pattern of upper-level winds has concentrated the storms in this region.

On the afternoon and evening of March 28, that shift helped produce a series of tornadoes unlike anything in North Carolina in 100 years.

Fujita classified seven of the 21 separate twisters that hit the area as "F-4" on a tornadic scale he has devised. The most severe storms rank as F-5s.

Of the 13 twisters that struck eastern North Carolina, four were of the F-4 category.

F-4 storms pack winds ranging from 207 to 260 mph and can demolish well-made houses, toss cars around like dry leaves and uproot and carry away large trees.

Fujita said the unusually high death toll could be attributed to two factors: the large number of severe tornadoes — those rating F-4 — and the fact that the tornadoes lasted well into the night.

But Fujita said the death toll could have been much higher had some of the most severe storms not hit in rural areas. "It's striking," he said in a news release, "because most of the F-4 (storms) were in forested, unpopulated areas."

Fujita said the fact that the storms struck during the night probably caused the death toll to be higher.

"The storm crossed into North Carolina near nightfall, and that's when most of the deaths started,"

Fujita said. "At night, people have only their ears to warn them of a tornado. Since a tornado can be heard from only one to two miles, a storm that moves at 55 mph, like this one, gives only one or two minutes warning. That's not enough."

Fujita and five of his students flew over the devastated areas March 30 to April 2 and then spent the next several weeks analyzing the photographs.

Senators Want Better Warning System

WASHINGTON (AP) — The once revolutionary weather forecasting system that has been used by the federal government since 1958 is obsolete and should be replaced, says a group of Southern senators whose home states recently were battered by tornadoes.

The senators are sponsoring legislation which would establish a 10-year program to hasten the development and use of a new radar forecasting system to replace the current system.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a member of the science and technology committee that will review the legislation, called the current system "outdated and obsolete."

Heflin said it "must be replaced." Along with Heflin, the bill's sponsors include Sens. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.; Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Russell Long, D-La.

Although the cost of a new system using the latest radar technology could reach $100 million a year, Heflin said the cost "will be returned many times over in the savings of billions of dollars and thousands of lives."

"The new technology is at hand or under development," said Hollings, noting the loss of lives and property that occurred when tornadoes hit several Southern states in March.

"We are faced with staggering and unnecessary costs in both the economy and human misery," he added.

"We can sit back and be a cold witness to more of this pointless tragedy, or we can set our feet on the path to a coordinated comprehensive program that will reduce these costs and more than pay for itself doing so."

According to figures obtained from Heflin's Senate staff, storm-scale weather accounts for an annual economic loss of $20 billion and the loss of 1,000 lives each year.

The federal government already has committed itself to replacing the current forecasting system, but the target date has been pushed back to the 1990s because of a lack of funding.

The new system proposed by the Southern senators would emphasize early detection and warning through the use of a modern radar network, additional remote sensors for existing weather satellites, ground-based remote sensors, automated surface weather stations, refined communications systems and digital computer systems.

Rumor Sparks Sale Of Reynolds Stock

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A rumor stock analysts think sparked record-tying prices on R.J. Reynolds Industries stock on the New York Stock Exchange says a Texas oil man wants to force the company to sell him its oil and gas subsidiary, Aminoil, USA.

R.J. Reynolds officials refused to comment and one tobacco analyst called the rumors "crazy."

R.J. Reynolds Industries stock at one point Monday equalled its all-time high of $65 a share. The stock closed Monday at 63½ on the New York Stock Exchange, up 3½ from Friday's closing.

Trading was active, with a total of 946,800 shares — 0.8 percent of Reynolds' 113 million shares outstanding — changing hands nationwide. That compares with average daily trading of about 220,000 shares.

Trading activity was concentrated in New York, where the major institutions do their buying and selling. About 847,700 shares traded there yesterday, have been sparked.

The rumor centers around T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, who has been trying to purchase oil-related businesses for the past two years.

Pickens, 55, tried in March to buy Gulf Oil Corp., but forced the company into the arms of Standard Oil of California. Pickens made a $760 million profit in losing his takeover bid.

Pickens tried to take Cities Service Co. in the summer of 1982. He failed, giving up the battle for a $31.5 million pre-tax profit. Pickens tried for General American Oil Co. in the winter of 1982. He failed then, too, but pocketed $32 million.

Aminoil is a gas and oil exploration and development company that has headquarters in Houston. Last year it contributed 10 percent to Reynolds revenues of $13.5 billion and 13 percent to its profits of $881 million. Although Aminoil doesn't fit the mix of disposable consumer products that Reynolds makes and markets, company executives have said that it's a good investment and little trouble.

George E. Trimble, chairman of Aminoil, said less than two weeks ago that Reynolds is often approached by other oil companies who express interest in buying Aminoil. But Aminoil isn't vulnerable to unwelcome takeovers, he said.

He described Aminoil as a "plum" and a "strategic investment."

Sudenburg Going To Seattle School

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Robert C. Sudenburg, who is on his way out as the chancellor of the N.C. School of the Arts, has been chosen to be president of the Cornish Institute, an arts school in Seattle.

Sudenburg, 48, said Monday he is the choice of the school's search committee.

Sudenburg, who spent eight years as a music professor in Seattle, said, "We're in close agreement at this point." The choice will be made formal in the next week to 10 days by the school's trustees, he said.

The institute, which is privately funded, was founded in 1914 as a conservatory.
