Pitt Opts For Mondale And Hunt Second Primary Set

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox will compete in a June 5 runoff primary to determine who faces Republican Congressman Jim Martin in the governor's race.

Edmisten held a narrow lead over Knox in incomplete, unofficial returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary. D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth placed third in the pack of 10 Democratic candidates.

"I never had any doubts that we'd be in the runoff," Knox said. "I really think if we hadn't had the negative publicity of the last week we'd have pulled away and I could have led substantially."

Edmisten promised to start his campaign at full speed today.

"Our tough days are just now beginning," he said.

With 2,241 or 95 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Edmisten had 278,767 votes or 31 percent and Knox had 238,469 votes or 26 percent. Faircloth followed with 142,720 votes or 16 percent.

The other candidates were grouped closely. Tom Gilmore had 80,346 votes or 9 percent; Lt. Gov.

Jimmy Green had 76,998 or 8 percent; and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram had 69,897 votes or 8 percent.

Democrats with 1 percent of the vote or less were, J.A. "Andy" Barker with 3,557 votes, Bob Hannon with 7,914 votes, Glenn Miller with 5,641 votes and J.D. Whaley with 1,424 votes.

With 2,238 or 95 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Republican Congressman Martin had 125,962 votes or 91 percent and Burke County GOP Chairman Ruby Hooper had 11,914 votes or 9 percent.

WINNER — Rep. Walter B. Jones of Farmville won the Democratic nomination Tuesday for another term in Congress. Jones, who ran on his record, defeated challenger John Gilliam of Windsor.

Edmisten, Knox Get One-Two Finish

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Democrats Tuesday voted with party members across the state in selecting Walter Mondale as the party's nominee for president; Gov. Jim Hunt as the Democratic standard-bearer to oppose incumbent Republican Sen. Jesse Helms for the U.S. Senate, and giving Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox a one-two finish in their bid for the nomination as governor.

Pitt voters also went with the rest of the 1st Congressional District in selecting incumbent Congressman Walter Jones to represent the party in the First Congressional District race in November.

In the race for the party's nomination as president, Mondale, who campaigned in Greenville, last month, took 5,721 votes Tuesday, while Gary Hart, who canceled a campaign stop in Pitt County Monday, placed second in the race with 5,047 votes. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who also campaigned in Greenville, placed a strong third, with 4,398 votes.

The other candidates on the presidential ballot — Reubin Askew, Alan Cranston, John Glenn, and Ernest Hollings — found themselves in the "also ran" column with votes ranging from a low of 29 votes for Cranston to a high of 433 votes for Glenn.

Some 1,068 voters in the county marked the "no preference" box on the ballot.

In the race for the Senate nomination, Hunt, with 11,515 votes, took a commanding lead over Tom Allred, who placed second in the race with 2,338 votes and third place finisher Harrell Jones, who received 1,649 votes.

Although Edmisten was the first place finisher in the race for the

Hart Keeps Bid Alive

By The Associated Press

Victories in the industrial states of Ohio and Indiana have blown new fire into Sen. Gary Hart's faltering presidential candidacy, offsetting Walter F. Mondale's wins in Maryland and North Carolina and guaranteeing the nomination struggle will continue through the final primaries and possibly onto the convention floor.

"The Democrats of this nation are not prepared to have this contest and this debate end at this time," a jubilant Hart told supporters Tuesday night.

Mondale, appearing tired, subdued and clearly disappointed, told reporters, "I am confident as the debate goes forward that I will get the delegates that I need to be the nominee."

But he conceded there is "a good chance" the fight for the nomination will continue to the Democratic National Convention next July in San Francisco.

While Hart got the industrial state victories he needed to keep his candidacy alive, Mondale added to his formidable lead in delegates.

Hart planned to rest today and then fly to Nebraska tonight. Mondale was planning to fly to the West Coast with an intermediate stop in Nebraska later in the week. The Rev. Jesse Jackson was in Washington to address the American

Little Damage In Pitt

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite reports that tornadoes were spotted Tuesday night at two locations in Pitt County, authorities said today there was only a small amount of wind damage and a report of "a little outbuilding overturned" as a result of the night's thunderstorms.

"To the best of our knowledge all we had was a little high wind. There was some wind damage — some signs were blown over and torn up — but there was nothing serious," Linwood Outlaw of the Grifton Police Department said.

Several television stations reported Monday night that a tornado had been spotted in Grifton and was moving toward Black Jack.

"I rode out through that section (of Grifton) last night about 8:30 and didn't see any damage," Outlaw said today.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said "a tornado was seen by the Raleigh radar over the Grimesland (near Black Jack) area, but it was up in the air. Our deputies were out watching it and it looked like one, but evidently it must not have been because it didn't cause any damage."

He added that "one of the boys (deputies) went looking this morning and couldn't find anything in Grifton or the Black Jack area except a small building overturned near Grifton."

According to Bruton Manning at the Grifton Utilities Department, "a few limbs fell and that's about all." A spokesman at the Ayden Police Department said no damage had been reported there.

Malcolm Green, superintendent of the electric department at Greenville Utilities, said outages in Greenville Tuesday night were "minor and scattered, with the exception of one circuit on Highway 102, which affected the area toward Clayroot, St. John's and Calico — the

Blinson Leaving Schools For ECU

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, has submitted his resignation to be effective Jan. 1, 1985.

DR. DELMA BLINSON

School board members in executive session at Monday night's meeting voted to accept his resignation. Blinson will accept an appointment on the East Carolina University faculty immediately following termination of his position as superintendent.

"Delma Blinson has made a fine school system even better during his three years as superintendent," commented Jack Wall, chairman of the city school board. "His credentials throughout North Carolina in public education are outstanding. We have been fortunate to have him as our superintendent. All the board members wish him the very best of luck."

"I am resigning as superintendent with very mixed emotions," Blinson said. "This is an excellent school system, and the people with whom I have had the privilege of working are simply tops. I feel good about what has been accomplished in the three years I've been here."

Blinson pointed out, "There are

School Board Races

Incumbents Ferrell Blount III and Robert Halstead were re-elected to the Pitt Board of Education Tuesday.

Blount, according to unofficial results, received 5,860 votes, or approximately 62 percent of the votes to win re-election to the Bethel seat on the board. Challenger Bryant Tripp received 3,530 votes or around 37 percent of the vote. The figures include totals from 23 of the 24 precincts in Pitt County.

Incumbent Robert Halstead received 7,112 votes. He was unopposed in his bid for the seat representing the Chicod area.

Members of the County Board of Education serve six-year terms.

Incumbents Sue Zadeits, Jack Wall and Lena Brown won their bids for re-election to the Greenville Board of Education Tuesday.

Incumbents Ernest Brown and Jerry Smith were defeated in the election and will not return to the board July 1 when the new board is sworn in.

In addition to the five incumbents seeking re-election, a sixth person, Donovan Phillips, a former school board member, was a candidate, bringing to six the number of persons seeking the three available board seats.

Unofficial tallies for the six candidates are: Zadeits, 3,933; S. G. (Jack) Wall, 3,291; Lena Brown, 3,215; Donovan Phillips, 2,762; Ernest Brown, 2,574; and F. G. (Jerry) Smith, 2,290.

Electric Rates Hiked 4 Percent

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night approved a 4 percent hike in electric rates to take effect June 1, passing on to customers a similar increase in wholesale power costs the commission received on January 1.

By postponing the January rate hike until June 1, GUC Director Charles Horne said the commission has saved customers about $650,000. "But this cannot continue," he suggested.

According to Horne, the 4 percent rate hike will mean a $2.80 per month increase for the average residential customer using 100 kilowatts of electricity a month.

The last electric rate increase approved by the commission was July 1, 1983. However, another rate hike could come Oct. 1, when another increase in wholesale power costs is expected.

Commission members Tuesday, based on a request by the Greenville City Council, also adopted a new sports field lighting rate schedule to take effect June 1. Based on a similar Carolina Power & Light Co. schedule, the new rate will save the city an estimated $5,400 a year on lighting costs for Evans, Jaycee and Elm Street park sports fields.

Commissioners were told that load management operations reduced April's power bill by $95,285 by trimming 8.5 megawatts from GUC's demand at the time of CP&L's monthly peak on April 10.

Board members were also told that surplus equipment and vehicles auctioned on April 14, sold for $10,321.

Commission members also approved two water main extensions Tuesday night, at an estimated cost of $170,000 each.

One, along Greenville Boulevard from Memorial Drive to the area of the Hooker Road intersection, will increase the flow of water in the area of Carolina East Mall.

The other, along SR 1726, from SR 1725 to N.C. 33, will complete a loop around the east side of the city's extraterritorial limits.

Incumbents Holding Lead

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Two incumbent Pitt County commissioners seeking re-election on Tuesday's primary balloting led candidates challenging them for the Democratic nomination.

With all precincts but Simpson reporting, incumbent Bruce Strickland had 7,550 votes (62.85 percent) for the third district seat, while opponent Carl Whitfield had 4,462 votes (37.15 percent).

Things are more complicated in the race for the first district or Greenville township seat, where incumbent Charles P. Gaskins led three challengers — James Rouse, Tom Johnson and Frank Grooms — with 7,162 votes, with 23 or the county's 24 precincts reported.

Rouse took second in the race with 4,044 votes, while Johnson placed third with 2,187 votes.

Grooms received 1,617 votes, for a fourth-place finish.

However, Grooms was disqualified Tuesday by the board of elections after it was determined that he is not a resident of Greenville Township. Officials said Grooms lives within the Greenville city limits and the city school district, but his home is in Winterville township.

The board of elections has scheduled a meeting this afternoon to decide how to treat the votes for Grooms in figuring a majority in the race.

The session was scheduled for 3 p.m. to allow time to receive an opinion from the attorney general.

However, a spokesman said unofficially that Grooms' votes would be dropped and the majority figured on the remaining total.

Depending on the Simpson vote, Gaskins could win a majority of the votes and not be faced with a runoff.

In the race for the second district seat, now held by Bob Martin of Bethel, who chose not to seek reelection, Eugene James had a Pitt County Republican voters created a show of unity Monday around their major candidates, helping nominate Jesse Helms for the U.S. Senate, Jim Martin for governor, Herbert W. Lee for the U.S. House of Representatives, and John H. Carrington for lieutenant governor.

Helms received 1,522 votes to George Wimbish's 187; Martin 1,521 to Ruby Thompson Hooper's 121. Lee, a Greenville resident, received 966 to Gene Leggett's 640; and Franklin Jordan led the field of lieutenant governor candidates with 600 votes to John H. Carrington's 427, Barbara S. Perry's 355, William S. Hiatt's 178, and Erick Little's 51.

"We're pleased that our party members have supported our major candidates so well," Andy Andrews, a local Republican said Monday night. "We think this kind of unity will put us in good shape to capture a large party of the undecided and conservative Democratic vote in November and put our people in office."

Wedding Vows Said In Kinston Church

KINSTON — Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was the setting for the April 28 wedding of Daphne Snow Waters and Guy Franklin Jones Jr. The double ring ceremony was performed by Bishop William Carr of Kinston.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. David Thomas Waters of Route 1, Dover, and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Franklin Jones Sr. of Route 1, Hookerton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of candlelight English net over peau de soie fashioned with an open squared neckline which featured short pouf sleeves of bridal satin accented with satin bows and silk flowers at the shoulder. The fitted bodice featured appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. The full skirt and attached chapel length train was enhanced with appliques of beaded lace. Lace edged the hemline and train. She wore a halo of silk rosebuds and leaves with net veil attached at the crown. The bride carried a bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, ivy and stephanotis accented with pink dendrobium.

Janice R. Daniels of Kinston was honor attendant and bridesmaids were Patti Rouse of Greenville, Cindy Jones of Hookerton, sister of the bridegroom, Paige Killinger, cousin of the bride, and Peggy Cox, both of Kinston.

Margaret Dodson of Scotland Neck, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Shea McLawhorn of Scuffleton, Desmond Jones of Eureak, cousin of the bridegroom, Steve Gray of Kinston, cousin of the bridegroom, Mike Hardy of Snow Hill and Marshall Whitfield of Kinston.

Jimmy Dodson of Scotland Neck, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

A program of wedding music was presented by Dennis Michels, organist, and Jan Michels, vocalist. Sally Sugg directed the ceremony.

Lisa Sugg of Snow Hill, cousin of the bridegroom, and Candy Gregg MacDonald of Anderson, S.C., cousin of the bride, presided at the register.

The bride graduated from Brigham Young University and is presently in graduate school at East Carolina University. She works at Lenoir Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from Greene Central High school. He attended Lenoir Community College and N.C. State University. He is a farmer.

The couple will live near Hookerton after a wedding trip to the Outer Banks.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride in the church cultural hall. A rehearsal dinner was given by bridegroom's parents as well as his uncles and aunts at the Walnut Creek Country Club.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

For cool summer evenings or air-conditioned restaurants, nothing could be more useful or becoming than this elegant Trinity Stitch Shawl — a "quick-knit" worked on large needles.

The shawl is started at the lower point and is worked upward, increasing in size as you go. Because of this working method, it can be made in any size from toddler to adult. Just knit until it is the size you wish, bind off, add the fringe and enjoy! It is designed to be made with 4-ply worsted-weight yarn, but because of the working method, you may use almost any yarn you wish.

To obtain directions for knitting the Trinity Stitch Shawl, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0506 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0506 by sending a check or money order for $14.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The designer's choice of natural white will be sent unless you specify a preference for Wedgewood blue or lavender instead. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and sufficient yarn for the full adult size. Materials for the pocketbook shown in the photo are not included.

Dear Pat: Here is my hint for setting sleeves in a cardigan: Pretend you are a tailor making a man's jacket. Forget the sleeves for the time being.

Finish the sweater completely and sew the shoulder seams. Next, sew a strip of matching ribbon over the shoulder seams. Sew the underarm seams, finishing front borders and buttonholes and completing any other details such as pockets, neck bands or collars. Then sew the sleeve seams.

Pin the sleeves in place working from the inside so you can see that you distribute the fullness evenly. The cap of the sleeve must be larger than the armhole to allow for movement of the arm. Match the underarm seams and have the center of cap at the shoulder seam.

TRINITY STITCH...shawl is worked on big needles and can be knitted in any size from toddler to adult.

Look at the sweater to see that the sleeves hang properly. Finally, working on the inside, chain stitch the sleeves in place making the chains on the sleeve side rather than on the armhole side of the sweater. This method will give your sweater a professional look. — Mrs. L.K. Ebersole, Findlay, Ohio.

Many thanks, Mrs. Ebersole, for sharing your hints with us. I had always done stitching from the armhole side, so was pleasantly surprised to see how much better the sleeves looked by simply changing and stitching on the sleeve side. My only added comment is that most people would be wise to baste the sleeves in place before starting the final chain stitching.

For those who may not have used the chain stitch for working knit seams, I will briefly describe that technique, which is done with a crochet hook.

Step A: Insert the hook through both thicknesses of fabric and pull up a loop of yarn from underneath. Step B: Insert the hook into the fabric once more moving up the distance of an average knitted stitch, pull up another loop and then pull this loop through the first loop on the hook. Repeat Step B along the entire edge to be seamed.

You will see that this stitch looks like a series of chains. Work smoothly with a fairly loose tension so that your work will not pucker.

treatment of washing soda paste: mix 4 tablespoons of washing soda and 1/4 cup of warm water; gently rub the paste into the dampened stain and wash as usual. Or, soak the items in the washing machine or a tub filled with warm water. Add 1/2 cup of washing soda per gallon of water. Soak for at least 30 minutes before washing.

Keep your kitchen clean using a baking soda solution to clean and deodorize cutting boards, formica countertops, linoleum tile, chrome, stainless steel and fiberglass surfaces. Don't worry, baking soda won't scratch or dull; it's non-abrasive.

Blast through the big jobs and fight extra dirt dissolving 1/2 cup of washing soda in a gallon of warm water to cut grease and dirt on ranges (including hoods and exhaust fans), broiler pans and floors. Remember to follow all cleaning with baking soda or washing soda with a clear rinse and a good drying.

Minimize your microwave mess. You can clean and deodorize the inside of the oven and around the door seal with a baking soda solution. Leave an open box inside to remove persistent odors, but be sure to take it out before using the oven.

Make your fireplace glow even without a fire! A baking soda solution will make your brushes, screens and irons shine. An open box of baking soda placed in the corner of the fireplace will help to eliminate odors until the fireplace is used again. Camouflage the box behind logs, a plant or a bouquet of dried flowers.

Barbeque bonus: Before you grill the first steaks of the season, remove last year's accumulation of grease with washing soda sprinkled on a moistened, stiff-bristled brush. Or, soak the grills in the basic half-cup solution. Remember to rinse thoroughly and wipe dry.

For The Birds Saying Offends This Reader

DEAR ABBY: I love birds, which is why I'm writing. For some years now, I have been offended by the expression "for the birds." When people want to express a negative opinion of something, they say, "It's for the birds."

Why, Abby? Birds are the most beautiful of all God's creatures, and their music is among the most glorious of all sounds. What did they ever do to earn the disparaging "It's for the birds" reputation?

I would like to know where that unkind expression originated.

FOR THE BIRDS

DEAR FOR: So would I. If a word (or a bird) lover out there knows, I'll deliver the message.

DEAR ABBY: The man I dearly loved for two years walked out on me to take up with the woman who had been my best friend for 25 years! I am devastated. She had been separated from her husband, so I foolishly invited her along to make it a threesome. I'm 50 and am now going with "R," a man of 70 who has been waiting in the wings for me. He loves me, but I can't return his love as I will always love the other man no matter what he does.

I admire and respect "R," but I feel the need of a younger man. (Am I wrong?) He is good in the bedroom, but I feel like I'm making love to my father, and that bothers me.

"R" insists on the bedroom scene and I would rather not. (Can you blame me?) How do I get around this? He's attractive and well-to-do and would give me the moon. People say I look 40, and I feel 30. What should I do?

but what good is the moon if you need a younger man? It's not up to me to blame or judge you. You are the one who must live with your decision. Let him go for your sake and his. There are plenty of women your age who would find "R" the answer to their prayers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I need a couple of questions answered. In the last two years, three of our son's girlfriends have had babies by him. What are those babies to us? And what are they to our son?

And if our son should decide to marry one of these girls, would he have to adopt his own baby to make it legally his?

NEEDS ANSWERS IN ALABAMA

DEAR NEEDS: The children fathered by your son are your grandchildren regardless of whether they were born in or out of wedlock. And your son is the father of these children. You need more than answers from me; you need counsel from a lawyer who practices law in your state.

And let me offer a little unasked-for advice: It's high time your son learned something about birth control as well as self-control.

Auxiliary Names New Officers

Margaret Register was named president of the American Legion Auxiliary No. 39 at its meeting Friday.

Others elected were Dora Craft, vice president, Faye Adams, secretary, and Alice Elks, treasurer. Frances Strawn was appointed sergeant-at-arms and Mayo Rogers will serve as chaplain.

The officers will be installed at the June meeting, which will be the last one until September. The group's meetings are held the first Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m.

Plans have been made for the annual Poppy Day with Mrs. Adams as chairman. Members interested in participating in the distribution of poppies should contact the chairman at 756-3568. The dates for distribution are May 18-19.

The auxiliary will assist in sponsorship of a department candidate, Elizabeth Stewart.

A contribution to the nursing scholarship was made by Mrs. E.E. Rawl.

furniture ready for summer. Scrub down wrought-iron pieces and plastic cushions with a baking soda solution. Scrub with a stiff-bristled brush, rinse off with a hose and allow to stand in the sun to dry.

Get going on your greasy garage floor as the weather turns warmer. Pour washing soda generously on oil and grease spills, and sprinkle lightly with water until a paste forms; let it stand overnight. The next day, scrub with a damp brush, hose down and wipe surfaces clean. It's a great idea for the patio floor, too.

Or better yet, leave the garage for a rainy afternoon in June — relax for now. Indulge yourself with a baking soda bath. Add 1/2 cup of baking soda to a tub of water to soothe yourself and make your skin feel soft. Lie back and savour your accomplishments.

Room To Live

A House Judiciary subcommittee, after prolonged study of FBI "sting" operations, proposes judicial permission before instituting such investigations.

The report was highly critical of FBI tactics, saying they posed a very real threat to constitutional rights and observing some operations proved damaging to public institutions as well as to innocent third parties who could be hurt in addition to probe targets by the activities.

As we read news reports, the subcommittee did not say the investigations were unnecessary; it was concerned by the manner in which some operations were conducted.

We should remember, too, that the panel was instituted to find faults and flaws. Of course it found them; otherwise its work would have been a waste of time and effort, and there are few things in human endeavors that cannot be improved upon.

Briefly, it is suggested the Justice Department be required to add lawyers specializing in civil law and civil rights to the department's undercover review panel and make annual reports to Congress on the operations. The document also proposes the FBI be required to obtain a judge's approval before starting undercover operations.

All in all, while the report was properly critical, it was modest in its proposals for future guidelines. There is no reason to think the Justice Department could find it difficult to live with them.

Input Sought

Despite dark suspicions to the contrary, government is interested in reaction and receptiveness to laws involving specific sectors of society. The gesture by the U.S. Agriculture Department inviting public comment on formal proposals to implement a new law regulating marketing quotas for flue-cured and burley tobacco again illustrates that point.

The opportunity should be of special interest to area tobacco growers. People who are most affected by any given law passed by Congress may seem a shade remote to many lawmakers who settle on decisions by consensus. Sure, they have available a wealth of analyses on paper, and briefings by staffers who are assigned studies in fields perhaps unfamiliar to the lawmaker; but no matter how conscientious the effort there are also another 30 or 50 or more pieces of legislation requiring attention.

This makes personal input by those who are most affected a valuable source of opinion-shaping.

Details of the new tobacco marketing quotas law, in addition to the abbreviated format published by The Reflector on May 2, are available from a variety of sources. There is a deadline, of course.

Public comments may be sent by May 31 to: Director, Tobacco and Peanuts Division, ASCS, USDA, Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Mideast Mission Points Up Failures

WASHINGTON — The empty-handed return of a high-level Reagan administration mission to Persian Gulf states to offer specific U.S. protection against Iran was the latest evidence that American Mideast policy now scrapes rock bottom.

The mission, which included Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, President Reagan's deputy national security adviser, was one of supplication: Just ask us for anything, from F-15s to an on-shore military exercise, and our boys will be there to help you!

There was not a single taker from Kuwait to the United Arab Emirates — certainly not Saudi Arabia. With a pro-Israel election-year Congress moving fast to prevent the U.S. from creating a Jordanian strike force for defense of the Persian Gulf littoral, the foreboding prospect looms of defenseless oil-rich Arab states.

Even if the Iranians are stalled for now in their move to split Iraq and advance to the Kuwaiti border, the inability to persuade friendly Arab states to accept U.S. security guarantees shows the costs of ever-tightening U.S.-Israeli bonds. No countries anywhere in the world are as fearful of both Iran and the Soviet Union as those along the Persian Gulf.

But U.S. impotence to halt the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, followed by the Reagan administration's ducking into and then ducking out of its own role in Lebanon, has emptied the pool of influence and credibility that once flowed so richly out of Washington to the Arab world.

Poindexter and Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy headed the blue-ribbon delegation that returned empty-handed April 22 after 10 days of trying to beguile conservative Arab leaders to accept American security guarantees. That followed a lengthy visit here by the defense minister of Kuwait. He listened literally for hours as the Pentagon brass and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, highly respected by Arab leaders, described what the U.S. was prepared to do.

Not a chance, the Pentagon was told; the word and the worth of the U.S. have been so diluted that military exercises, much less bases capable of handling U.S.-piloted F-15 fighters, could not be tolerated in Kuwait. Even naval exercises "over the horizon" — beyond the reach of the human eye — are ruled out as potential breeders of political trouble.

President Reagan's admirable scheme to use a Jordanian strike force, transported by American carriers, to meet any Iranian threat is under systematic attack by pro-Israeli congressmen and lobbyists. The latest assault came from Tom Dine, head of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), the premier pro-Israeli publicist. His demand in a recent speech to AIPAC's policy conference that the administration cut off all military aid to any Arab state "until and unless" it agrees "to make peace with Israel" mirrors Israel's own lobbying effort with the administration.

AIPAC has an enviable record of anticipating Mideast positions to be taken later by various presidents, particularly in an election year, a fact well understood by pro-American Arab states. Both AIPAC and Israel want the Middle East to be defended by American force at least partly based on Israeli ports, not through joint U.S.-Arab arrangements. That Israeli thesis lies at the heart of its demand for wider "strategic" agreements with House's more liberal reputation becomes clear. Of the 10 highest rated House members, at least five would not object, privately, to being called "liberal." On the Senate side, there is only one such person in the top 10.

The rankings show the influence lawyers hold in the Legislature. Of the top 15 House members, nine are lawyers. Of the top 15 senators, eight are lawyers (one doesn't practice law.) Almost every lawyer in the Legislature, with the exception of a few freshmen, ranked in the top half.

While it could be argued that some of the legislators are a bit under — or over — ranked, for some legislators the rankings tell the horrible truth. They're ineffective legislators, everybody down in the Legislative Building knows it, and the rankings point right at them. Freshmen and Republicans can be excused for being ranked low. That is always going to happen. But what do you say when veteran legislators like Sens. George Marion, D-Surry, and Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, end up in the bottom 20 percent, and veteran politician Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, ends up 98th out of 120 in the House? How does Rep. Pap Creecy, D-Northampton, explain his drop from 115 two years ago to 120 (dead last) this year?

The rankings also show some remarkable success stories for individual legislators. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, backed Carl Stewart for lieutenant governor in 1980, and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green could have rendered him powerless for it. But Rauch, whom Green named as co-chairman of the Finance Committee in 1983, is a survivor. His effectiveness in 1981 was ranked fourth, this year he's back to third, right where he was in 1979. (Rauch's co-chair in Finance, Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, is curiously rated at 20th. That's not bad, but not good for a man with such a powerful job, either.)

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, is another legislator who ranks extraordinarily high. Only a second-term, the Raleigh lawyer is yet to get a committee chairmanship under Speaker Liston Ramsey. Yet Blue is ranked eighth. Another success story is Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, who has suffered in terms of committee appointments because he opposed Ramsey for the speakership. Helms is seventh. Curiously low in the House rankings is Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, House speaker pro tem. In theory, his job is the second most important in the House but he ranks 14th, that's down from seventh in 1981.

Possibly the funniest quirk in the ratings is the score Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, received from capital reporters. Adams actually scored ahead of Ramsey, the man who gave Adams his job. These rankings reveal some truth but, as in the Adams case, they also include some foolishness.

Acid Rain Raises More Questions

WASHINGTON — On March 19 the Senate environment Committee voted 16-2 in favor of a bill that presumably would reduce levels of "acid rain" in the Northeast. I look at the bill, and my heart says hooray while my head says, I dunno. This is a tough one to call. There no longer is any doubt that something — let us provisionally call it acid rain — is wreaking havoc upon forests and lakes over much of the Northern Hemisphere. Here in the United States, we are understand-dably most concerned about damage to the woodlands of the Northeast, the Blue Ridge and Appalachia, but the United States is not alone. A recent paper from the Worldwatch Institute documented extensive damage in Europe and Scandinavia as well. Nearly half of the famed Black Forest of Bavaria has been harmed. Even the Soviet Union, which rarely reports anything wrong, has disclosed that vast areas of forest are dying near the manufacturing city of Togliatti.

The difficult questions boil down to two inquiries that stubbornly resist pat answers: Is acid rain causing the damage? And what causes acid rain?

Acid deposition occurs when sulfur and nitrogen oxides are transformed in the atmosphere and fall to earth as acids in rain, snow, fog or as dry particles. The evidence appears conclusive that these deposits are responsible for ruining many lakes in Scandinavia and in eastern North America. The evidence is not nearly as impressive in the matter of our woodlands.

Neither can scientists agree on the causes of acid rain. The most convenient villain is the high-sulfur coal that is burned in scores of electrical generation plants in the East and Midwest. Doubtless these plants bear much of the responsibility, but the largest source of sulfur dioxide in North America is not an electric utility; it is the giant smelter of the International Nickel Co. near Sudbury, Ontario.

The bill now pending in the Senate, sponsored chiefly by Vermont's Robert T. Stafford, is predicated upon several assumptions that every environmentalist and economist can accept: Acid rain — or whatever — is causing incalculable harm. Viewed merely in terms of the damage to forests, the consequences are severe. These ought to be averted.

But how? Stafford's bill, patterned closely upon a bill that was favorably reported in the 97th Congress, would require that public utilities in 31 Eastern and Midwestern states reduce their emissions of sulfur dioxide from roughly 22 million tons a year to about 12 million tons. The senator has wearied of further studies. He believes the answers are sufficiently clear, and he wants action now.

The senator's bill has provoked something close to civil war within the Senate. The heaviest burden would fall upon consumers of electricity in the Midwest. In order to meet the required reductions, generating plants would have to shift to low-sulfur coal or they would have to install even more costly "scrubbing" devices than they have in place now. A move to low-sulfur coal would throw thousands of coal miners in Appalachia out of work. The scrubbing equipment would compel rate increases ranging over a five-year period from 18 percent in Illinois to 38 percent in Ohio.

Stafford sees nothing wrong with this: "The polluter should pay." His Southern and Midwestern colleagues see everything wrong with it. They contend that Northeastern states are proportionally worse polluters than the rest of the country. Calculated per capita or calculated per square mile, emissions of sulfur dioxide are higher in Maine, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island than elsewhere. The Midwestern attitude is that the Northeast should get the smog out of its own eye first.

The regional conflict has stymied clean-air legislation for the past three years. No reconciliation is in sight. At the risk of appearing to waffle, I'm inclined to fall back on President Reagan's recommendation in his budget message last January. He proposed to double funds for research in this field, from about $5 million in 1984 to $10 million in 1985, in the hope that definitive answers can soon be found.

Strength For Today

Some years ago a Christian missionary was describing to a group of Moslems the miracles of healing performed by Jesus. A man in the group interrupted him. "Just two years ago," he said, "Jesus was here. He made the blind to see, the deaf to hear and the lame to walk."

At the close of the service the missionary inquired a little further of the man and found that he was referring to a missionary doctor who had passed through that section of the country. His ministry to the sick and ailing had been so Christ-like that when the missionary presented the Christ of the New Testament, the people thought he must be talking about the good doctor who had helped them so much.

True religion cannot be concealed. Jesus healed and comforted, and he commands us to do likewise. The cultivation of the Christian experience is a continual process.

Five East Carolina University mathematics students were recently recognized for academic excellence. The students and descriptions of their awards are as follows.

Sherry Louise Conran of Vanceboro has been named Outstanding Senior in Mathematics for 1984. She was elected by a panel of faculty members of the ECU Department of Mathematics.

A candidate for degrees in both mathematics and computer science, Ms. Conran held the highest academic standing among senior mathematics majors.

She is also the recipient of the Pignani-Archer Scholarship which carries a $100 award. The annual scholarship is made in memory of the late Tullio Pignani, former chairman of the ECU mathematics department, by his wife Hattie, and by former mathematics department staff member Dannellet Alley, in memory of her mother Leone Archer.

Ms. Conran is the daughter of Richard and Gladys Conran of Route 2, Vanceboro.

Karen Allen Hartley of Princeton, a junior in the ECU math department, is the recipient of the 1984 ECU Computer Science Award.

The award, which carries a $100 scholarship, is presented each spring to an outstanding student on the basis of academic merit and citizenship qualities. The scholarship was established by ECU alumnus, Robert Speight of Elm City, and his employer, Firestone Co. of Wilson. Speight graduated from ECU in 1975.

Ms. Hartley has maintained a perfect 4.0 academic grade point average during her studies.

JASON GARRIS

Lori Ann Hollowell of Newport News, Va., a junior in the ECU Department of Mathematics, has been selected to receive the John B. Davis Scholarship.

The $100 scholarship is presented annually to a mathematics major who demonstrates a special interest in the field of statistics. The award was established in memory of the late John B. Davis, a former professor of mathematics at ECU and former director of the school's institutional research department.

Jason A. Garriss of Greenville has been named 1984 Outstanding Senior in Computer Science by faculty members of the ECU Department of Mathematics.

The honor is extended each year to a graduating senior with an outstanding record of academic achievement and citizenship.

Three Killed As Soldier Tries To Topple Quebec Government

QUEBEC (AP) — The Canadian soldier who killed three people and injured 13 with showers of sub-machine gun bullets in Quebec's legislative chamber said his goal was to destroy the separatist provincial government.

The soldier, identified as Cpl. Denis Lortie, a 22-year-old supply technician, held a sergeant-at-arms hostage for more than four hours Tuesday in the National Assembly building before surrendering. He was scheduled to appear in court today.

The gunman, wearing green combat fatigues, a flak jacket, beret and ammunition belts, was taken into custody by Quebec City police.

The dead and injured were low-ranking legislative employees preparing for a committee meeting, rather than the top politicians who apparently were the target of the attack. Flags at the assembly building were flown at half-staff today in mourning.

Defense Department officials said Lortie was a native of Pont Rouge, Quebec, and worked at an armed forces base at Carp, Ont., just outside Ottawa, which is the government's emergency bunker and communications center for use under nuclear attack.

As a supply technician, he would have access to weapons, but no authority to take them off the base, authorities said.

City police declined to provide any information, or even confirm the identity furnished by Defense Department officials for the man being held, but a picture of the days events emerged from scattered reports from around this historic city.

At about 9:20 a.m., a man dressed in military fatigues delivered a tape recording to radio station CJRP. The cassette was in an envelope marked "D. Lortie," with a note saying to listen to it after 10 a.m.

Maritche d'Abbadie, a newswoman at the station, said he appeared calm. The recording's criticism of the policies of Premier Rene Levesque and his Cabinet was not alarming, she said, until the speaker started saying he would destroy the government between 10 and 11 a.m.

Station employees called police, but discovered that the shooting was already underway.

Before heading to the assembly building, the gunman apparently stopped at the Citadel, an 1820 fortress built on the bluffs overlooking the St. Lawrence River.

Shots were fired at tourists by a man in military fatigues, but no one was hit and the gunman slipped away, armed forces officials said.

At about 9:45 a.m., the gunman entered the assembly building and immediately opened fire, making a group of about 50 touring schoolchildren duck for cover.

He entered the assembly chamber and continued firing the submachine gun from the speaker's chair until sergeant-at-arms Rene Jalbert walked up to him, shook hands and talked with him calmly, camerawoman Johanne Tanguay reported.

"I'm sure Mr. Jalbert saved the lives of many people who were at the mercy of the gunman," she said.

VW, GM Calling In Some Models

By The Associated Press
About 26,000 1982-, 1983- and 1984-model Porsche 924, 911 and 944 sports cars will be recalled voluntarily to replace rear seat belt assemblies, according to Porsche's U.S. distributor, Volkswagen of America Inc.

Meanwhile, General Motors Corp. announced a recall of 357 manual-transmission, 1984-model Chevrolet Celebritys assembled without a retaining clip needed to keep a clutch cable from contacting a master cylinder brake pipe.

The Porsche cars were equipped with manually adjustable rear seat belt assemblies contrary to a federal standard requiring that belt systems adjust and lock automatically, Volkswagen said Tuesday in a statement.

Porsche Audi dealers would be instructed how to remove the manual portion of the seat belt assembly on affected cars and replace it with an automatic belt, VW said.

The replacement work will be done free of charge, the automaker said.

Also Tuesday, GM said the missing retaining clip could cause the clutch cable to eventually chafe through the brake pipe, resulting in a brake fluid leak and loss of half of the affected Celebrity models' dual braking system.

Dealers will install the missing clip and will replace brake pipes if they indicate wear, GM said, adding that there have been no reported accidents or injuries resulting from the problem.

Khadafy Reportedly Survives Rebel Attack

ROME (AP) — Libyan forces reportedly crushed a daring attempt by a small band of men to storm Moammar Khadafy's fortress-like barracks home, but his regime's opponents vowed to fight on.

The attack on the barracks, where the Libyan leader lives with his family outside Tripoli, lasted five hours Tuesday before his loyalists defeated the 20 or so rebels who fired rocket grenades, news reports from Tripoli said.

A Western diplomat in Rome said the attackers claimed Khadafy was killed, but preliminary intelligence reports from Tripoli indicated he survived yet another of a series of attempts to oust him since he seized power in a coup 15 years ago.

It was not known if Khadafy was in the barracks when the attack occurred.

A group calling itself the National Front of the Salvation of Libya claimed responsibility for the attack in calls to The Associated Press in Washington and London. One of the callers said the anti-Khadafy campaign "will be escalated."

Photographs taken from Libyan television footage showed rows of bullet-riddled bodies, said to be the attackers, outside the barracks.

One diplomat said some of the dead were reported to be "Palestinians and people trained abroad by Britain and Sudan."

Libya's official news agency, JANA, did not mention the attack in any dispatches Tuesday. Libyan media said only that "British-trained" terrorists had taken several hostages in an unidentified building and were killed after refusing to surrender.

Diplomats reached by telephone in Tripoli today told the AP that Khadafy had not appeared on state-run radio or television.

Libya generally bars Western reporters from the country or severely restricts their activities.

Khadafy usually lives with his family in the Bab el-Aziziya (Splendid Gate) barracks about 3½ miles south of the city. Electrified fences, bunkers and guard towers surround the barracks, which is scanned by television cameras.

The Italian news agency ANSA reported that at least 20 men began the attack in early morning. It quoted witnesses as saying four or five armored vehicles rolled out of the barracks, firing on the attackers who fled into a nearby building.

The group that claimed to have engineered the attack was founded in 1980 by Mohamed Yusef al-Maghariaf, an economics professor who served as Khadafy's state comptroller and ambassador to India.

The National Front said its rebels killed scores of Khadafy's guards but "our people, unfortunately, ran out of ammunition and were killed."

In the call to the AP bureau in London, a caller said: "This is a continuation of the military campaign which started two days ago when three of our commandos ... were engaged in a clash with Khadafy's guards."

"The events of the last two days are the beginning of the Front's military campaign inside Libya. And it will be escalated until the regime is overthrown," the caller said.

JANA reported Tuesday that Libya had arrested three Libyans and killed one who it said belonged to a British-backed terrorist group. It said they were arrested trying to infiltrate from Tunisia.

Khadafy has faced increasing opposition to his authoritarian and sometimes erratic rule of the North African nation of 3 million people, according to diplomats and reports from Libya.

A group called "Alborkan," the Arabic word for volcano, said it carried out the Jan. 21 assassination in Rome of Libya's ambassador to Italy. The group also claimed a car bombing in Tripoli in March in which a key Khadafy aide was hurt.

The Washington Post said Libyan officials confirmed that a government ammunition dump had been blown up recently.

Pope John Visits Guadalcanal Site

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Pope John Paul II, looking tired on the eighth day of an 11-day pilgrimage, today visited Guadalcanal's battlefields, prayed for World War II's dead and appealed for brotherhood.

Sunburned and sweating under a tropical sun, the pope appeared startled when a tribal warrior, clad only in leather loincloth, lunged toward him with a spear. But John Paul quickly realized it was the cue for a start of a dance and stepped back, saying "Thank you."

Later, at the city sports field, he had an exotic tribal welcome to this coconut-growing island by native women, some bare-breasted and others loosely draped with cabbage leaves. Hula dancers also performed, and at an afternoon Mass the pope was given a live pig in a bamboo cage.

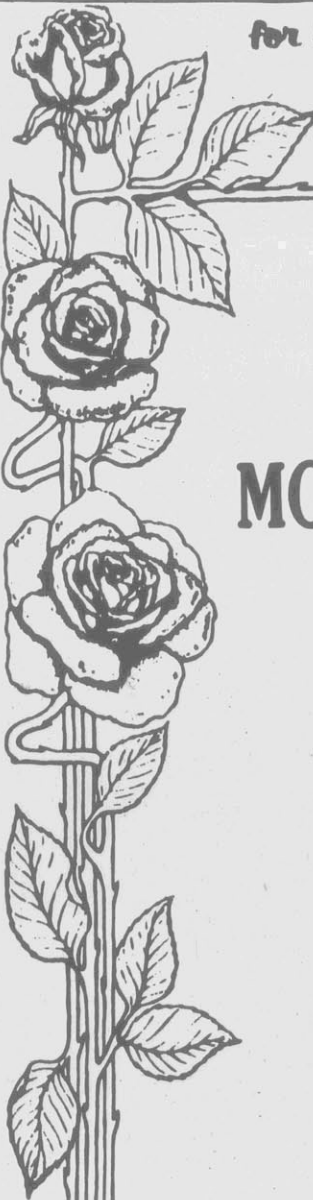

John Paul reviewed an honor guard at Honiara airport, which as the Henderson Field airstrip was seized by U.S. forces from the Japanese during World War II. For four months in 1942-1943, U.S. and Japanese soldiers fought fiercely on jungle-covered, mountainous Guadalcanal, largest of the Solomon Islands in the southwest Pacific.

The Japanese, who lost some 28,000 men in land action here, called Guadalcanal, "island of death." American land battle deaths were about 2,000, and many U.S. sailors died offshore.

During an outdoor Mass, the pope prayed for mercy for the Solomon Islands, "devastated by the horrors" of World War II, and beseeched God to give "eternal rest for all those who died in battle on their soil."

During the battle for Guadalcanal, "most missionaries were killed or forced to withdraw," the pope said, speaking in English. He praised clergy who witnessed the wartime suffering.

How They Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes April 26 through May 2.

House
NUTRITION — The House rejected, 136 for and 270 against, an amendment to hold spending for several child nutrition programs at present levels. This cleared the way for increases of $1.2 billion over three years. It occurred during the debate on HR 7, which later was sent to the Senate.

At issue were Administration-backed cuts in the program for feeding pregnant and nursing mothers and infants (WIC), the school lunch program and other nutrition outlays. HR 7 restores some cuts made under the 1981 Gramm-Latta budget reconciliation bill, a cornerstone of Reaganomics. Sponsor Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, said child nutrition programs "are being assisted ... quite well" at current levels.

Members voting no wanted to increase child nutrition spending. Voting yes were Tim Valentine, D-3, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10.

Voting no were Charles Whitley, D-8, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting were Walter Jones, D-1, and Ike Andrews, D-4.

METRIC — By a vote of 146 for and 143 against, the House adopted an amendment to delete $500,000 for further study of U.S. conversion to the metric system.

The amendment was attached to a National Bureau of Standards funding bill (HR 5172) that later was sent to the Senate. The vote took place on a Thursday after scores of members had left town, and the high absenteeism enabled sponsors to score an unexpected victory.

Sponsor Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., said "I strongly oppose government's unwarranted promotion and costly imposition of metric on the American people ..."

Opponent George Brown, D-Calif., said the government should assist any industry that wants to improve its stake in world trade by voluntarily converting to the metric system.

Voting yes was Broyhill. Voting no were Walter Jones, Britt and Rose.

Not voting were Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Hefner, James Martin and Clarke.

Senate
JUDGES — The Senate adopted, 67 for and 28 against, an amendment giving federal judges the same four percent pay hike that was awarded to other federal employees at the beginning of 1984. This occurred during debate on HR 2163 (below).

The amendment benefits all 700 or so federal judges, at an annual cost of $1.7 billion. Their salaries presently range from about $65,000 to the $100,700 paid Chief Justice Warren Burger. A specific act of Congress is required to raise salaries of the judiciary.

Sponsor George Mitchell, D-Maine, said federal judges are "highly deserving ... men and women entrusted with the most serious responsibilities ...". No opponent spoke against the amendment.

Senators voting yes favored a four percent pay raise for federal judges. John East, R, did not vote. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

BUDGET — By a vote of 38 for and 57 against, the Senate rejected a plan to cut approximately in half the $600 billion in new deficits projected for fiscal 1985-87. This was the most drastic of three major plans before the Senate for attacking upcoming deficits, which each year will raise the national debt by at least $20 billion in added interest costs.

It called for deferring tax indexing, freezing most domestic spending for one year at 1984 levels, and slowing military spending to an after-inflation growth rate of 5 percent. The Senate later rejected another of the major plans (below), leaving center stage to President Reagan's proposal.

While the Reagan plan would raise military outlays by 8 percent and retain tax indexing, it would use spending cuts and tax hikes to slash $143.7 billion from the $600 billion

Mark Andrews, R-N.D., who sponsored the plan rejected by this vote, called Reagan's proposal "a half-way solution" and no match for "the monstrous deficits which stand poised to ... kill our economy within a few short years."

Opponent Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said "nobody wants to balance the budget on Social Security or on Social Security recipients."

Senators voting no disliked this plan for halving the next three years' deficit growth.

East and Helms voted no.

FREEZE — By a vote of 33 for and 65 against, the Senate rejected a plan to freeze nearly all domestic and military spending for one year at fiscal 1984 levels. During fiscal 1985-87, the proposal would have caused an estimated deficit reduction of $260 billion. It clamped down on virtually every area of federal spending, from defense to Social Security.

When the vote occurred, the freeze was the only remaining alternative to the president's less-ambitious plan, which called for some $144 billion in deficit cuts over three

Sponsor Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said a drastic remedy is needed because "I fear that the the unfolding fiscal disorder may reach unmanageable proportions."

Opponent Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said a freeze "has an appealing simplicity about it (and) is convenient for the members of Congress because it excuses us from doing the harder job" of making selective budget cuts.

Senators voting no were opposed to a one-year freeze on virtually all federal spending.

Senators East and Helms voted no.

Military Construction Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee has approved unanimously a $9.3 billion military construction bill for fiscal 1985, a $1.23 billion cut from President Reagan's original request and one which eliminates new U.S. facilities slated for Honduras.

Coupled with earlier reductions in other areas of military spending, the generally conservative panel has trimmed more than $20 billion from Reagan's defense budget for next year.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger last week agreed to $14 billion in cuts, including some unspecified construction projects, from the $313 billion asked by Reagan in January.

While the Republican Senate is regarded likely to adhere to the administration's new figures, the deeper cuts favored by the House panel drew virtually no complaints from its GOP members.

William L. Dickinson of Alabama, the ranking Republican on the committee, noted that the panel had approved overall "real" growth, adjusted for inflation, of 5.7 percent for defense. The administration, which once sought 13 percent, now is asking for 7.8 percent.

But even deeper cuts are likely in the House, which already has set a general target of 3.5 percent in boosted military spending.

The House begins debate on the committee's package next week, including its recommendation that the request for 40 MX missiles be cut to 30. A close vote is expected on a move to kill the program instead.

The construction bill contains nearly $114 million for MX-related facilities, including $106 million for roads, machine shops and other installations around Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming, where the new intercontinental nuclear missile would be based. An additional $7.7 million would be spent for storage facilities at Hill AFB in Utah.

The measure also eliminated $8.7 million the administration wanted for new military facilities in Honduras. Several members of Congress have asserted the administration has abused legislation that authorized construction of temporary training sites in Honduras to build permanent bases instead.

"By zeroing out these projects," said Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., chairman of the construction subcommittee, "We are saying to the Secretary of Defense: 'We want your attention'" over the administration's plans in Central America.

Dellums said the funds would be restored in later legislation only if the administration produced a "regional master plan" for military projects in the area.

The construction bill also cut $96.2 million for facilities slated for deployment of ground-launched cruise missiles in the Netherlands and Belgium, pending further study of whether those nations will accept the installations.

And it cut $124 million for facilities to house a rapid deployment force and to harden shelters for aircraft at "a classified location," presumably Jordan, pending further negotiations with the host nation.

These female Dalmatian Pointers, about six months old, were found in the Bells Fork area. They appear healthy and vigorous, and have an excellent disposition. They need a good home where they can run.

Pentagon Testing 'Star Wars' Concept For Missile Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, embarking on a $28 billion "Star Wars" program, is testing whether Soviet nuclear missiles in space can be intercepted and destroyed before they re-enter the atmosphere.

Despite "various glitches," U.S. officials are confident that with lasers and other futuristic techniques, Soviet missiles can be destroyed before they reach American targets.

Three tests have been run, and a fourth is planned within a few months, John Gardner, a weapons specialist, told reporters at a news conference called Tuesday to rebut scientists' criticism of President Reagan's program.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, the director of the program, said improving missile defenses can reduce the threat of nuclear war. He was testifying today on the controversial program before a House appropriations subcommittee.

A study conducted for Congress last month sharply criticized Reagan's vision of space technology to prevent war. "This judgment appears to be the consensus among informed members of the defense technical community," said the analysis by the Office of Technology Assessment.

But Abrahamson said, "I believe it is possible to build a system which will give us enough protection so that it will reduce the threat of nuclear attack."

The Air Force general, who directed the U.S. space shuttle program, said, "We can't let one particular report stand when it is in error." He called some of the findings "rubbish."

The missile interceptor tests are the first concrete results of the program authorized by Reagan last year to explore defense systems as an alternative to a weapons buildup as a deterrent to nuclear war.

Called the "homing overlay experiment," the idea being tested is to use non-nuclear ballistic missiles to intercept Soviet nuclear missiles and to destroy them.

High-Level Soviet Visit To China Canceled

PEKING (AP) — China said Soviet Vice Premier Ivan Arkhipov today canceled his trip to China, one day before he was to arrive for what would have been the highest-level Kremlin mission to Moscow's Communist rival in 15 years.

The cancellation surprised Western and Asian diplomats, who said it was possibly linked to Soviet anger over President Reagan's recent trip to China, which he used as a forum to attack Kremlin policies.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Qi Huaiyuan announced the cancellation at a regular weekly news conference and, pressed for an explanation, said, "The Soviet side said they are not fully prepared." He said he did not know when the visit would take place.

Arkhipov is the Soviet Union's senior vice premier and once served as an economic adviser in China during the era of Chinese-Soviet friendship in the 1950s, before ideological and territorial disputes broke out.

The surprise announcement came one day before Arkhipov was to have arrived in China for a visit that Chinese and Soviet sources had said would focus on trade.

He would have been the highest-ranking Soviet official to visit China since 1969, when then-Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin conferred with counterpart Chou En-lai at Peking airport.

Asked when the Soviets notified China of the cancellation, Qi said, "They notified the Chinese side on May 9, that is, today."

Asked if the Chinese regret the decision, Qi said, "For the moment, I have no comment to make." He declined to elaborate.

Today is a holiday in the Soviet Union, and there was no immediate comment or reaction from Kremlin officials.

Over the past several days, Soviet and Chinese sources had declined to provide details of Arkhipov's itinerary, an indication that the visit was still unsettled. China had officially announced last month that Arkhipov was coming.

Reagan had used his April 26-May 1 trip to China to criticize the Soviets in speeches given in Peking and Shanghai. The Soviet state-run press reacted angrily and accused China of collaborating in his "anti-Soviet crusade."

There also was speculation that Arkhipov's cancellation was connected to the Soviet Union's announcement Tuesday that it will not participate in the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles because of what it called anti-Moscow hysteria promoted by Reagan.

Though commercial and cultural ties between Moscow and Peking have increased in recent years, the Chinese have said there can be no fundamental improvement in relations until the Soviets remove what Peking calls "the three obstacles" that threaten China's security.

These are the 600,000 troops and scores of SS-20 missiles on the Chinese border, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, and Moscow's support for Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia.

The Chinese had been expected to press Arkhipov on these issues, which have left the two sides deadlocked despite four sessions of talks since October 1982 aimed at resolving them.

A man answering the telephone at the Soviet Embassy compound in Peking said there was nobody available to comment on the cancellation.

"Today is our rest day. Call back tomorrow," he said, refusing to identify himself.

Soviet sources had said Arkhipov's mission was aimed primarily at increasing border trade, exchanging Chinese processed food and clothing for Soviet minerals, timber and machinery.

In February, China and the Soviet Union agreed to increase trade 60 percent this year to $1.2 billion.

Downs Chopper

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua said its forces shot down a military helicopter from Honduras that crossed into its airspace. Honduras said the U.S.-built craft was unarmed, part of its air force, and that all eight men aboard died.

The foreign minister of Nicaragua's leftist government, Miguel d'Escoto, said the violation of the airspace Tuesday was "evidence one more time of the danger with which the American administration, through the CIA, is pushing Honduras into participating in the aggression against our country."

Nicaragua claimed another helicopter crossed into its airspace but escaped back to Honduras.

The Sandinista government took reporters to see the helicopter's remains, scattered over an acre about 10 miles south of Potosi, a port on the Gulf of Fonseca which is shared by Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador.

CIA-backed rebels based in Honduras have attacked Potosi four times since January.

TABULATING VOTES ... Daily Reflector Sports Editor Woody Peele and Computer Displays' employee, Larry Koscianski tally Pitt County election returns

Helms Says U.S. 'Bought' Election Vote For Duarte

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms is asserting that the State Department and the CIA "bought the election" last weekend of Jose Napoleon Duarte as president of El Salvador.

Helms, R-N.C., last week accused the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Thomas R. Pickering, of trying to manipulate the election. In a prepared statement Tuesday, Helms went further.

"Now the evidence is that Mr. Pickering was presiding over a covert plan to funnel U.S. government funds and other assistance directly into Duarte's campaign. ... In other words, the State Department and the CIA bought the election for Duarte. Mr. Pickering was merely the purchasing agent," Helms said.

"The only way to make amends is to tell the truth," he added.

President Reagan acknowledged he was happy with Duarte's victory, telling reporters on Monday, "That's pleasing to us. Most pleasing. They have had a successful election that proved again they have made strides toward democracy."

In response to Helms' charges, Peter Roussel, a White House spokesman said, "The president expressed himself on the election and I don't think we have anything to add beyond that." The State Department also declined to comment on the new assertions.

Helms said he was not holding Reagan responsible for the activity.

"The fact appears to be that President Reagan never himself approved the funding of Duarte. It was the decision of the third-level Interagency Group on Central America that is supposed to coordinate policy in the executive branch," Helms said.

"I have known the president too long to believe that he would ever support a phony democracy or a crooked election," Helms added.

"This was the policy of a small coterie of bureaucrats with their own agenda and their own policies — the 'permanent government' pursuing its own aims in defiance of the president's wishes," he said.

Helms added that "the bureaucrats" in the Reagan administration favored the "the socialist candidate, Mr. Duarte," and had "malice towards Mr. (Roberto) d'Aubuisson, who openly espoused the principles of the Republican Party in the U.S."

Helms did not disclose how he obtained his evidence or its exact nature.

But he said covert funding has been going into El Salvador for two years.

"We see now that all of this was not just mere bias," Helms said. "The State Department and the CIA were protecting their investment."

"They had bought Mr. Duarte lock, stock and barrel, and they didn't want the invested capital to be wasted by the Salvadoran voters rejecting the merchandise. They wanted the trappings of democracy to enhance the product, but they did not want to risk a real commitment to freedom," Helms added.

In addition to direct payments, Helms claimed the United States provided money for 400 precinct organizers to work for Duarte, a press operation, radio and television studios, technical advice and "a computer voter registration system that disenfranchised 20 percent of the voters the first time around."

"If the CIA programmed the computers, how can anyone trust the numbers?" Helms asked.

Helms also said the Senate Intelligence Committee was informed of the financing only last Thursday. Helms is not a member of the Intelligence Committee.

"I have been given to understand that senators who heard the news declined to go to El Salvador (last weekend) as election observers because they did not want to be in the position of appearing to approve what has transpired," Helms said.

Tornadoes, Heavy Rain Hit East Coast

By RON SIRAK

Associated Press Writer

The surging Tennessee River crept into Chattanooga today while vicious storms that left 22 people dead or missing slipped into the Atlantic Ocean after drilling the East Coast with tornadoes and 85 mph winds that wrecked houses, toppled trees and halted power for 140,000 people.

At least 16 twisters touched down in five states Tuesday, damaging 20 mobile homes in Georgia and collapsing the roof of an apartment building in Virginia.

Meanwhile, floodwaters began to recede in the mountain valleys of Appalachia and many of the more than 6,000 people who scurried for higher ground when rain-swollen rivers left their banks returned to homes and businesses caked with inches of mud.

Seventeen people have been reported killed by flooding, lightning and other storm damage since Sunday. Five other people are missing.

"Two-hundred-year-old trees are splintered like firewood," said Michael Galvin, president of the Salem County (N.J.) Hospital. "I've seen it on TV. Now I've seen it for real and I cannot believe the devastation that takes place. It's amazing that we have not had any serious injuries."

Authorities in Tennessee kept a close eye today on overflowing rivers and streams as the Tennessee Valley Authority reluctantly spilled water over Douglas Dam, which was pushed to capacity by a week's worth of torrential rains.

The release was expected to worsen the flooding in low-lying areas of Chattanooga along the Tennessee River, said Carl Vines, a spokesman for the TVA's reservoir dam operations.

At least 40 homes in the Chattanooga area were evacuated Tuesday, said Dwain Scott, operations officer for the Hamilton County Office of Emergency Preparedness.

About a dozen families were also evacuated from along the Tennessee River at South Pittsburg in Marion County, police said.

Tennessee has been drenched by 15.67 inches of rain since April 20, the National Weather Service said.

Workers from the Montgomery County Rescue Squad Service began sandbagging areas in Clarksville Tuesday night, said squad Capt. Dave Gilland. The Cumberland River there was expected to crest today 10 feet above flood stage, the Weather Service said.

The storms that have been lashing the Deep South on Tuesday battered the East Coast from South Carolina to New Jersey. Sixteen tornadoes were reported in North and South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and New Jersey, the National Weather Service said.

A twister tore through Bartow

County, Ga., damaging 20 mobile homes. The storm left 16,400 people in four counties without power, authorities said.

Winds gusting to 85 mph caused extensive damage in Petersburg, Va., Tuesday but caused no serious injuries, authorities said.

Police Lt. M.C. Jones described it as, "Trees on top of homes, trees on top of cars. Trees as much as one foot in diameter uprooted."

About 50,500 Virginia Electric & Power Co. customers suffered outages, spokeswoman Susan Gardner said Tuesday.

Winds gusting to 71 mph hit New Jersey, and minor injuries were reported among 45 people evacuated from the Salem County Nursing and Convalescent Home, damaged by the storm. And a 28-year-old woman died Tuesday night in Moorestown when an uprooted tree crushed her car, police said.

Officials said at least 12,000 people in New Jersey lost power.

Winds killed a Maryland man Tuesday when his chicken coop collapsed on him. About 63,000 homes were reported without power in the state.

In West Virginia and Kentucky state officials prepared today to ask for federal disaster aid. West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller declared four counties as disaster areas and estimated the damage at at least $13 million.

Emergency services officials estimated about 4,800 people had been evacuated in Kentucky by Tuesday, mostly in the east, with about 900 displaced in Mingo and McDowell counties of southern West Virginia, 200 in eight counties of southwestern Virginia, and more than 200 in Jefferson County, Tenn.

The 17 people killed in stormy weather since Sunday include seven drowning victims in Kentucky, three in Tennessee and one in South Carolina.

Two people in Louisiana died Monday in a storm-related traffic accident and a third was killed by lightning. One person was killed Tuesday in Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey in violent thunderstorms.

Near Mountain Home, Ark., sheriff's officers searched Tuesday for four boaters missing. One person was feared dead in West Virginia.

ABC Leads Ratings Again: As 'Dynasty' Takes First

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although outnumbered by CBS in the Top 10 shows of the week, ABC captured the regular ratings race for the third straight week with "Dynasty" edging CBS' "Dallas" to lead the way.

NBC invaded the list as the opening installment "V: The Final Battle," a tale of humans fighting off their would-be alien conquerors, finished at No. 5 in the Nielsen ratings, two spots above part one of ABC's "The Last Days of Pompeii." The two ran opposite each other Sunday night.

"Dynasty," "Dallas," ABC's "Hotel" and CBS' "Falcon Crest" took the top four spots as the prime-time soaps frothed toward end-of-the-season cliffhangers. A rerun of NBC's "Adam," about the Florida kidnapping of little Adam Walsh, was sixth.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. survey released Tuesday gave ABC a network average of 14.9 for the week. CBS was close behind in second place with 14.6 and NBC was third with 13.7. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 14.9 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

Completing the Top 10 were CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," which was canceled one year ago, returned by popular demand and then renewed last week for the 1984-85 season, at eight; CBS' "60 Minutes," ninth; and NBC's "The A-Team," 10th.

CBS won the opening days of the May sweeps, the period when local stations are measured. The Nielsen sweeps ratings for May 3-6 showed CBS with 15.6, ABC with 14.4 and NBC with 12.3.

Network programs are measured all year by Nielsen, but only in May, July, November and February are the local stations monitored by the ratings service. The ratings during this period help determine what stations can charge for advertising for the next few months, and the networks have scheduled miniseries and original episodes of many series to boost audiences for their stations.

Among the evening news shows, "The CBS Evening News" began its third consecutive year in first place, posting a 12.2 rating. ABC and NBC had a rating of 10.0.

The lowest-rated show of the week was NBC's "Animals Are the Funniest People." The five bottom shows in descending order were: NBC's "The Master," ABC's "Ripley's Believe It or Not," CBS' "The Bugs Bunny Special," NBC's "Knight Rider" movie and NBC's "Animals Are the Funniest People."

Here are the top 20 shows:

1. "Dynasty," ABC, a rating of 25.2 or 21 million households.
2. "Dallas," CBS, 23.8 or 19.9 million.
3. "Hotel," ABC, 22.4 or 18.8 million.
4. "Falcon Crest," CBS, 22.0 or 18.4 million.
5. Miniseries: "V: The Final Battle," Part I, NBC, 20.7 or 17.3 million.
6. Movie: "Adam," NBC, 19.6 or 16.4 million.
7. Miniseries: "The Last Days of Pompeii," Part I, ABC, 19.6 or 16.4 million.
8. "Cagney & Lacey," CBS, 19.3 or 16.1 million.
9. "60 Minutes," CBS, 19.0 or 15.9 million.
10. "The A-Team," NBC, 18.6 or 15.6 million.
11. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 18.3 or 15.3 million.
12. "The Fall Guy," ABC, 17.6 or 14.7 million.
13. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 17.3 or 14.6 million.
13. "Three's Company," ABC, 17.4 or 14.6 million.
15. Special: "Country Comes Home," CBS, 16.9 or 14.1 million.
16. "Kate & Allie," CBS, 16.8 or 14.1 million.
17. "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, 16.4 or 13.7 million.
18. "Newhart," CBS, 16.3 or 13.6 million.
19. "The Love Boat," ABC, 15.9 or 13.3 million.
20. "Oh Madeline," ABC, 15.5 or 12.9 million.

United Methodists Approve Changes To Popular Hymns

BALTIMORE (AP) — The United Methodist Church has decided to produce a new hymn book — but there were some sour notes about the plan to use sexually "inclusive" language in the lyrics.

Several delegates at the denomination's quadrennial governing conference said Tuesday that many members are not ready for modified wording, and would resist it.

But a strong majority approved the proposal Tuesday, adding a qualifying amendment that the producers of the book "respect the language of historic hymns."

"People are scared to death of this inclusive language," said Peggy Coates of Galveston, Texas. She added that the denomination should not undertake a project "that we cannot afford and that members don't want."

LaVerne Burton of Hot Springs, Ark., said the project was being pushed prematurely and could drive some people out of the church.

"Please leave the traditional hymns as they are," she asked the delegates.

Her reference was apparently to such old favorites as "Faith of Our Fathers," "Stand Up O Men Of God," and others with male-oriented usage. However, there were indications that some of these time-honored wordings would be preserved.

The Rev. Edward L. Duncan of Adrian, Mich., said a new hymnal could be a "unifying force in a diverse church" and would offer "the Lord a new song as we hold to our past, celebrate our present and embrace the future."

The 9.4-million-member denomination, marking the 200th anniversary of the founding of Methodism in America, only the day before had directed the use of sexually inclusive language about God in developing new teaching materials.

Backers of the change said studies show that 90 percent of the denomination's 38,000 congregations regularly use only 150 of the 600 hymns in the present hymnal, which was produced 20 years ago.

The Rev. Robert C. Morgan of Birmingham, Ala., in presenting the plan, urged Methodists to "trust the process."

Morgan said the revised hymnal would be presented to the denomination's next governing conference scheduled four years from now. That conference would "have the final word" on any changes made, he said. Earlier Tuesday, the delegates established a special commission to chart strategies for a concerted, church-wide renewal after reviewing a report which said the church "has lost the unifying vision" that once fired it.

The report said such a renewal is "crucial for every aspect of the church's life."

In other action Tuesday, the conferees:

—Created a task force to develop a new doctrinal statement for the church to replace the one formulated in 1972.

—Approved a comprehensive television and telecommunications ministry and authorized the raising of $2.4 million to fund it. The money would be split 50-50 between the national communications agency and regional conferences.

The 11-day conference will continue through Friday.

Interest Rates Traced To Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking issue with White House finger-pointing at the Federal Reserve, private analysts are blaming the fresh hike in the prime lending rate on the surging demand for loans in the economy.

Striving to feed the credit hunger of businesses and consumers, banks have increased their own borrowings. That in turn, say the analysts, has led to higher costs for the financial institutions.

"So the prime went up" to meet those costs and maintain a margin of profit, said Ted Gibson, economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank.

Crocker was one of the major U.S. banks that on Tuesday boosted its key lending rate from 12 percent to 12.5 percent. It marked the third rise in seven weeks of that base rate for corporate loans.

Allen Sinai, chief economist at the investment firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., agreed. He said that "the rise in interest rates is primarily the result of strong" demands by businesses and consumers for loans after the 1981-82 recession when they cut back on their credit holdings.

Moreover, he said, the Treasury is putting additional pressure on interest rates by borrowing heavily to finance the government's nearly $200 billion deficit.

Said James Annable, an economist at the First National Bank of Chicago, which also boosted its prime rate, "All together you're overwhelming the available savings in the economy" for financing the loans.

Citing an example of banks' funding costs, Gibson said that 90-day certificates of deposit were yielding 11.20 percent to investors. That, he said, translates into a cost to banks of 11.75 percent because of government restrictions on how much of their money must be set aside as a cushion.

At a 12 percent prime rate, he said, the banks' profit margins were too small.

But the White House offered a different view.

In a strongly worded statement, spokesman Larry Speakes put the blame for the higher prime rate on the Federal Reserve, saying it was limiting the supply of money "in a period of expansion and economic growth."

The Federal Reserve, the nation's central bank, tries to provide enough money to sustain economic growth without reigniting higher inflation.

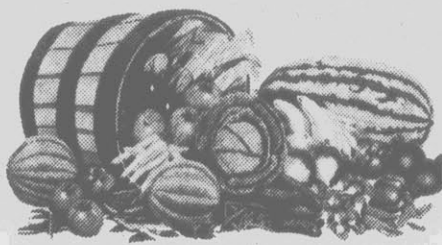

The administration's concern over Federal Reserve actions was likely prompted by the recent disclosure that the central bank decided to tighten monetary policy in late March to slow the rapid pace of the economy.

Panel Seeks Solution To Imports Of Steel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., says a comprehensive remedy to steel trade problems should emerge from hearings by the U.S. International Trade Commission on a request for sweeping quotas on incoming foreign steel.

"This commission is uniquely positioned to recommend a well thought out, comprehensive remedy to one of the most persistent and vexing trade problems of our day," Heinz, chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said in prepared testimony as the panel was opening its hearings.

"I urge you not to lose sight of the magnitude and importance of the opportunity before you," Heinz said.

The six-member commission is scheduled four days of hearings. But night sessions may be needed to hear from everyone on the 20-page witness list.

In person testimony or prepared statements were expected today from Govs. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Richard Orr of Indiana, George Wallace of Alabama, Mark White of Texas, and Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia. Local officials and members of the Federal Trade Commission also were to appear.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America, also on the witness list, spurred the proceedings with a Jan. 24 petition to restrict steel imports from all other countries to 15 percent of U.S. consumption.

Those fighting the petition, including representatives of 16 steel-producing countries and individual steel companies within them, testify later in the week.

Last year import penetration of the U.S. market was 20.5 percent and reached more than 25 percent in the first quarter of 1984, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute, an industry trade group.

The commission must determine whether imports have injured domestic steelmakers and, if so, recommend quotas, tariffs, adjustment assistance or some combination of remedies. The president makes the final decision but, if he rejects or modifies a commission recommendation, a dissatisfied Congress may overturn his action.

The Reagan administration opposes international import quotas and says individual problems can be handled by current unfair trade laws. Various officials have said quotas could provoke trade retaliation and raise steel prices here, in turn injuring American exporters who use steel in their products.

However, Heinz said imports are growing "on a scale so massive that they literally overwhelm the discipline of our unfair trade laws ...

While some of our bureaucrats remain wedded to the abstract theory of free trade, our domestic steel industry is being systematically and progressively decimated."

Fertility Increases For Older Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Childbearing is up sharply among women in their early 30s who postponed having babies until schooling was completed and careers begun, a new government study indicates.

Between 1980 and 1983 births jumped 15 percent among women aged 30 to 34, according to a Census Bureau study on fertility released Tuesday.

Women in that category averaged 69.1 births per 1,000 women in 1983, the bureau reported, up from 60.0 in 1980. It was the only age group to show what bureau statisticians classified as a statistically significant change.

In addition, women aged 30 to 34 averaged 13.8 first births per 1,000 in 1983, up from 12.8 in the earlier year. Women aged 25 to 29 also increased their rate of first births, from 3.6 to 5.2 per 1,000 women.

Carolyn C. Rogers of the Census Bureau said these increases follow the trends of the last few years, with women delaying marriage and children to complete their education and begin careers.

Then, when they arrive at their 30s, they begin to think about having families before childbearing becomes an increased health risk, she added.

Ms. Rogers said that the 30s are a prime time for working women to begin families because childbearing is still relatively safe, with the chance of medical problems for the mother or child increasing only after age 35 or so.

The Census report showed a smaller increase in births to women aged 25 to 29 during the period. But Ms. Rogers said the gain of under 5 percent was not statistically significant. Rates for other age groups remained fairly constant during the period, she said.

The study also found that 45 percent of recent mothers under age 30 resided in families with income of less than $15,000, compared with 27 percent of those over 30. Only 10 percent of the younger mothers had family incomes of more than $35,000, compared to one-fourth of their older counterparts.

Medicare Eyes Pacemaker Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is considering a recommendation that Medicare cut its payments for heart pacemaker monitoring nearly in half over the next five years by limiting the number of times it pays patients for the procedure.

In a draft report circulated on Tuesday for comment, Health and Human Services Inspector General Richard Kusserow complained of wide variations in the number of times that physicians of firms monitor heart pacemakers each year and in the cost of such procedures.

Telephone monitoring, the kind singled out for criticism in the report, was found to cost from $7 to $60 each time the procedure was performed. Some patients have their pacemakers monitored at least once a month, the maximum number of times for which Medicare will pay. But others get twice a year or quarterly assessments, the report said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened narrowly mixed today after demonstrating resilience to rising interest rates on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 9.74 points Tuesday, was off .84 at 1,175.46 in the first half hour of trading.

But slightly more stocks rose in price than fell in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

And eight of the 15 most active NYSE issues were unchanged in early trading.

Analysts said traders were encouraged with the market's gain on Tuesday despite the banking industry's move to adopt a 12.5 percent prime rate, a rise of one-half percentage point and the highest level for the key business borrowing charge since the fall of 1982.

Interest rates have been steadily climbing for months, raising fears of a slowdown in the economy. Pressures on rates continued this week, with the Treasury in midst of a quarterly borrowing, and an auction of $5.25 billion in 10-year notes set for today.

Today's early prices included Sears, unchanged at 32½; Sony, unchanged at 15½; International Paper, down ¾ at 53; American Telephone & Tele- graph, unchanged at 35¼; and Hewlett-Packard, up ¾ at 35¼.

On Tuesday, gainers led losers 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 81.61 million shares from 72.76 million Monday.

The NYSE composite index rose .57 to 92.44. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .69 to 212.80.

Quebec Sniper Hurts 2

(Related story on page 6)

QUEBEC (AP) — A gunman today wounded two people on a city street and then took his own father hostage, Canadian Press said. The man reportedly was upset over the killing of three people by an army corporal who sprayed Quebec's legislative chamber with sub-machine gun fire on Tuesday.

Today's attacker fired on passers-by in downtown Quebec with a shotgun, slightly wounding a male pedestrian in the arm, leg and hip, Canadian Press quoted police as saying.

It said a female motorist suffered a minor throat injury when shotgun pellets pierced her car window. The shooting occurred on the Charest Boulevard in the commercial Saint-Roch district.

The gunman later was found to be in a private home, the news agency quoted police as saying. He fired shots at police through the door, and was holding his elderly father hostage to keep authorities at bay, Canadian Press said.

Police surrounded the house and sealed off the area. They were negotiating by telephone with the gunman, whose name was not disclosed.

Witnesses had initially described the gunman as being dressed in military uniform or an army jacket.

Canadian Press quoted police as saying the gunman told them he could not sleep overnight because he was troubled by the shooting spree in the Quebec legislative chamber, where three people were killed and 13 were wounded in a hail of submachine gun fire.

The Canadian soldier taken into custody in the Tuesday incident, identified as Cpl. Denis Lortie, a 22-year-old supply technician, said his goal was to destroy the separatist provincial government.

The soldier, who held a sergeant-at-arms hostage for more than four hours Tuesday in the National Assembly building before surrendering, was scheduled to appear in court today.

Wearing green combat fatigues, a flak jacket, beret and ammunition belts, he was taken into custody by Quebec City police.

Tuesday's dead and injured were low-ranking legislative employees preparing for a committee meeting, rather than the top politicians who apparently were the target of the attack.

Soviets Stage Dramatic Pullout

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 9, 1984

By The Associated Press
Shortly after the Olympic torch was lit on American soil, the Soviet Union announced it was pulling out of the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

The timing of the move was dramatic. It was seen by some as retaliation for the United States-led boycott of the 1980 Games in Moscow. And it sent waves of shock and dismay around the world.

Still, some saw an opening in the official wording of the Soviet announcement that was relayed Tuesday by the Tass news agency that there could be a change in heart before the June 2 deadline.

"In these conditions..." the statement said. And therein lay what some felt was a possible out for the Soviets.

If the conditions the Soviets complained about should change, would they change their mind?

But the impact was immediate.

The president of the International Olympic Committee, Juan Antonio Samaranch, and the president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, Peter V. Ueberroth, flew from New York on Tuesday, where the torch began its journey across America, to Washington to meet with President Reagan.

"We are apparently paying the price for 1980 — that's our interpretation," said Ueberroth. "The ones who are hurt are the athletes."

"We think this is a blatant political action for which there was no real justification," said John Hughes, a U.S. State Department spokesman.

"You cannot have an event where there has been an attempt to damage it, as was done in 1980, and assume all of that is forgotten. Memories are not that short," said Samaranch.

Four years ago, then-President Jimmy Carter pulled the U.S. team out of the Moscow Games to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. Eighty one other countries also stayed away from 1980 Olympics.

In its statement, the Soviet National Olympic Committee on Tuesday said:

"It is known that from the very first days of preparations for the present Olympics the American administration has sought to set course at using the Games for its political aims. Chauvinistic sentiments and an anti-Soviet hysteria are being whipped up in the country.

"Extremist organizations and groupings of all sorts, openly aiming to create 'unbearable conditions' for the stay of the Soviet delegation and for the performance by Soviet sportsmen, have sharply stepped up their activity with direct connivance of the American authorities."

"In these conditions, the National Olympic Committee of the U.S.S.R. is compelled to declare that participation of Soviet sportsmen in the Games is impossible."

An IOC official in Lausanne, Switzerland, questioned whether the Soviet statement definitely ruled out Soviet participation in the Games.

"I don't see it as a statement saying they will definitely not participate," said the official, who asked not to be named. "The statement really says that under prevailing conditions, the Soviets find it impossible... Anything can happen."

The official said there could still be another meeting of U.S. and Soviet delegates since the Soviet Union has until June 2, the deadline for declaring its participation, to reverse its stand.

"I can only hope that the problems seen by the Soviet side in Los Angeles can still be solved," said Walther Troeger, general secretary of the West German National Olympic Committee.

"I do not believe the Russians will not be at the Olympics," said British NOC chairman Charles Palmer. "And I shall not believe it until the deadline for entries has passed. I think the Russians are trying to claim extra concessions from the Americans and are playing a very hard game."

"It is merely a tactic to give them time to get what they want."

Carol Thompson, a University of Southern California political science professor, also believes the early announcement may have been intended as a bargaining chip.

"A month ahead of time means they want to be begged to come," she said. "They want concessions to some demands that are not as outrageous as some of the Western press has been reporting."

Col. F. Donald Miller, executive director of the United States Olympic Committee, said:

"The one thing I learned in all my negotiations with the Soviet Union is to expect the unexpected. The only thing they are consistent about is their inconsistency. I would hope that they reverse their position, but I'm not counting on it."

But some feel the decision is final.

Nelson Paillou, president of France's National Olympic Committee, said the Soviet decision could prove "a mortal blow struck at the Olympic spirit."

And, while most felt the move was political, almost all said it was the athletes who will suffer.

"The athletes were the losers in 1980," said Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley. "If the Soviets don't come, it will be the athletes who will be the losers."

"I'm still surprised (at the decision) because the Soviet people are very good athletes and I'm sure it is not in the interest of the athletes of Russia to accept it," said Canadian Sports Minister Jacques Olivier, who offered to mediate the dispute.

Tom Tellez, University of Houston track coach who will coach U.S. Olympic high jumpers, triple jumpers, long jumpers and pole vaulters, said: "I hate to see the

Edwards' Lifts Vikes To Share Of Lead

WHEAT SWAMP — Darryl Edwards fired a four hitter and struck out 11, while Chris Via ripped a solo homer to lead D.H. Conley to a 4-1 victory over North Lenoir to insure a share of the Coastal 3-A Conference baseball lead.

Via finished with two hits in three trips to the plate, but the Vikings managed just four hits in the contest.

Edwards raised his strikeout total to 94 on the season, with a 6-4 record and a 2.18 ERA.

Conley improved its record to 12-6 overall with a 6-2 conference mark. The Vikings came into the game in a three way tie for the league lead with North Lenoir, now 5-3, and West Carteret. Conley hosts West Craven Friday in another Coastal matchup.

Conley took the lead in the top of the first as Fred Bryant reached first on catcher's interference, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a single by Via.

Todd Cochran ripped a bases-loaded double in the second to drive in Lee Hardee and Randy Mills. Hardee reached on an error, Randy Mills singled and Steve Mills drew a walk to fill the bases.

Via's homer in the third closed the scoring for the Vikings, while North Lenoir managed its only run in the bottom of the frame.

Pirates Hope History Repeats

When top-seeded East Carolina meets #4 seed Georgetown at noon Thursday in the first game of the ECAC-South baseball tournament at Harrisonburg, Va., there may be a few people hunting for four-leaf clovers, rabbits' feet and the like.

Baseball players are a superstitious lot, and when one looks back on ECAC-South history — and ECU history — there may be some looking back over the shoulder.

Take for example: Only once in the five previous ECAC-South tournaments has the number one seed won. That was in 1981 when James Madison took the title.

But East Carolina has been most fortunate in even numbered years in making it to the NCAA, and the winner of the tournament gets an automatic bid. ECU received at-large berths in 1964 and 1980, won Southern Conference titles in 1966, 1968, 1970, 1974, and 1977 and won the ECAC-South title in 1982.

So it could come down to the irresistible force meeting the immovable object when play opens on Thursday.

While the Pirates and Hoyas meet in game one, the hosting James Madison Dukes take on LaSalle in the second contest at 3 p.m.

Friday, the losers meet to eliminate one team at noon, with the winners meeting at 3 p.m. Saturday, the losers' bracket finals are at noon, with the winner advancing at 3 p.m. to face the lone unbeaten. Should the latter win, the tournament is over. A second game, if needed, would be played Sunday afternoon.

East Carolina enters the tournament with a 28-10 record, while #2 seed Madison is 36-11. Georgetown has a 30-15 record, while LaSalle is 18-16-1.

Pirate assistant coach Gary Overton said that he believed LaSalle's higher seeding was due to its having beaten Georgetown twice during the season.

East Carolina played neither LaSalle nor Georgetown during the year, and beat Madison twice. The Pirates took a 4-3 win in Greenville and later beat the Dukes, 3-1, in Harrisonburg.

Madison split a doubleheader with Georgetown, played in Harrisonburg, winning 4-2 and losing 6-5.

"From what we've heard," Overton said, "Georgetown is a very offensive-minded club. They have excellent team speed and very good hitters with three hitting over .400. They've stolen a number of bases."

Overton said that the two top pitchers for the Hoyas are a right-hander Doug Starcher and lefty Ed Burke. "We expect to see one of them," the assistant said. "We know Burke is 7-3, but we didn't get Starcher's record."

The top player is centerfielder Steve Iannini, who hit .487 during the season and stole 49 bases. First baseman Bob Ebner is hitting .407, while second baseman Scott Elliot has a .460 average.

"Our approach is going to be a one-game-at-a-time thing," Overton said. "Since we don't know much about them, we're just going on the idea that we'll have to play excellent defense against them because of their speed and offense."

East Carolina is expected to start sophomore righthander Winfred Johnson on the mound. Johnson brings in a 8-2 record with a 2.94 earned run average.

They will follow with either Robbie McClanahan (7-1; 2.96) or Jim Peterson (7-2; 3.16) depending on the outcome of the first game.

Centerfielder Chris Bradberry is the leading hitter on the team with a .359 average, followed by sometimes designated hitter Mark Council at .353. Next comes shortstop Greg Hardison at .331; Johnson, who pitches, plays first place and also is a designated hitter, has a .325 average, followed by rightfielder Mike Williams, .318, and leftfielder Mark Shank, .301.

East Carolina goes into the tournament with a 3-game winning streak, having won 11 of the last 13 games.

For many of those games, Johnson has been the star. Not only has he contributed eight victories on the

Viola, Puckett Travel Different Paths

By The Associated Press

Frank Viola seems to have finally learned his lessons in the school of hard knocks but Kirby Puckett must think the major leagues are easy pickings.

After struggling through his first two big-league campaigns with an 11-25 record and a 5.38 earned run average for the Minnesota Twins, Viola has won three games in a row to even his 1984 log at 3-3. And his season ERA is down to 2.54 following Tuesday night's four-hit 5-0 blanking of the California Angels.

"I've had the hard knocks. I really feel like taking those hard knocks my first two years is paying off now," said the 24-year-old left-hander.

While Tom Brunansky and Tim Lardner backed Viola with home runs, Puckett, a 23-year-old center fielder, hit his way into the record book. After grounding out to start the game, he singled on each of his next four at-bats, becoming the ninth player in modern major-league history to debut with four hits in a nine-inning game. The all-time record for a debut is five hits, but it was done in a 12-inning American League game and way back in 1894 in the National League.

"I feel great," said Puckett. "Once I got that first one under my belt I felt a little more relaxed. It feels great just to be here. I was nervous. I'm just going day-to-day."

In other AL games, the Detroit Tigers downed the Kansas City Royals 5-2, the Oakland Athletics nipped the Seattle Mariners 3-2, the Texas Rangers edged the Boston Red Sox 4-3 and the Milwaukee Brewers and Chicago White Sox battled to a 3-3 tie that was halted after 17 innings by the AL's 1 a.m. curfew and will be resumed before tonight's regularly scheduled contest. The Toronto-Baltimore and Cleveland-New York games were rained out.

Minnesota's fifth consecutive victory knocked California out of first place in the AL West. The Angels, who have dropped three in a row, trailed Oakland by three percentage points, with the Twins one-half game back.

"Confidence and consistency are the keys," said Viola. "I feel 100 percent more confident this year. You can look for it and look for it. Finally, it just hits you."

Brunansky homered in the first inning off Jim Slaton and it remained 1-0 until the seventh when the Twins scored four times, two on Lardner's homer and two more on a single by Brunansky.

The game was delayed for 13 minutes after California rookie Gary Pettis was caught stealing for the final out in the bottom of the sixth. Pettis was removed from the field on a stretcher after being fitted with a neck brace. The Angels said he suffered a neck injury and the 26-year-old center fielder was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Tigers 5, Royals 2
Alan Trammell jolted Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry with a grand slam home run in the seventh inning to erase a 2-1 deficit and boost Detroit's Tigers' road record to 13-0.

The Tigers, whose 24-4 mark is the best in the majors, are only three victories away from the all-time American League record for consecutive road victories set by the 1912 Washington Senators.

The Royals, who have lost six in a row, led 2-0 after six innings, but Detroit scored in the seventh on singles by Larry Herndon, Darrell Evans and Chet Lemon. Two outs later, loser Bud Black walked Lou Whitaker to load the bases. Quisenberry came in and served up Trammell's third career grand slam, the first ever surrendered by the sinkerballing reliever. It made a winner of Jack Morris, who scattered seven hits to become the first six-game winner in the majors.

"The biggest surprise to me is that I threw a sinker that didn't do anything," Quisenberry said. "That's a lot longer ground ball than I'm used to giving up."

Athletics 3, Mariners 2
Dave Kingman's two-out single in the ninth inning, his third hit of the game, drove in the winning run. Tony Phillips started the inning with a single off Dave Beard. Rickey Henderson forced Phillips and then stole his ninth base of the season before an intentional walk to pinch hitter Joe Morgan. One out later, Kingman stroked his fourth game-winning hit of the year. Reliever Bill Caudill, 5-0, earned his second victory in as many days.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 3
Marty Fierstein's two-run homer in the sixth inning capped Texas' comeback from a 3-0 deficit and enabled the Rangers to win for only the second time in 13 games as Charlie Hough and Odell Jones combined on a seven-hitter. Foley's fourth home run of the year — he has only six hits — came off Boston starter Mike Brown with Bobby Jones aboard via a single.

Boston went ahead 1-0 in the first inning on a single, a walk and two passed balls by catcher Foley, who had trouble handling Hough's knuckler. Dwight Evans and Jim Rice homered on consecutive pitches in the fifth. The Rangers scored twice in the bottom of the fifth on singles by Wayne Tolleson and Curtis Wilkerson, Mickey Rivers' RBI double and Pete O'Brien's grounder.

White Sox 3, Brewers 3
Chicago scored two unearned runs in the bottom of the ninth after Milwaukee had taken a 3-1 lead with a pair in the top of the inning. Robin Yount doubled to open the top of the ninth, stole third and scored on catcher Carlton Fisk's throwing error. Ted Simmons singled, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Ben Oglivie.

But Milwaukee right fielder, Charlie Moore dropped Tom Paciorek's fly ball for a two-base error to start the bottom of the ninth. Paciorek scored two outs later when reliever Rollie Fingers was tagged for a double by Julio Cruz and Cruz scored the tying run on a single by Rudy Law.

L.A. Ends Mavericks' Hope Of NBA Title

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers didn't want to go back to Dallas ... and as a result made sure that Dallas wasn't going anywhere else in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"We were committed not to go back to Dallas," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, whose Lakers made sure they wouldn't with a 115-99 victory over the Mavericks Tuesday night that sewed up their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series in five games.

"We didn't want to go back to Dallas because we would be facing a chance of not only injury, but misery if they won back there and forced a seventh game," Riley pointed out.

The Lakers thus became the first team to advance to their conference finals. They'll meet the winner of the Phoenix-Utah series. The Jazz staved off elimination with a 118-106 victory Tuesday night and now trail the Suns 3-2 in the best-of-seven series with Game 6 scheduled for Thursday night in Phoenix.

In Tuesday night's other playoff game, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the New Jersey Nets 94-82 to take a 3-2 lead in their Eastern Conference semifinals.

The playoffs continue tonight with the New York Knicks in Boston to face the Celtics in the other Eastern semifinal series.

Mike McGee paced Los Angeles with 27 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 14 points and 15 assists in the victory that gave the Lakers the series.

The Lakers led all the way, grabbing an early lead and increasing it steadily. Los Angeles led by 32 points, 101-69, going into the final period.

McGee scored 16 of his points, hitting 7-of-7 from the field, in the third quarter as the Lakers pulled ahead by 33 points, 84-51, five minutes into the second half.

Guard Rolando Blackman led the Mavericks with 25 points.

Said Dallas Coach Dick Motta of the Lakers: "They're great; I never seen them play any better."

Utah 118, Phoenix 106
Adrian Dantley scored 31 points in the first half and 46 points overall as Utah defeated Phoenix in a do-or-die game.

Dantley scored 10 of his points in the fourth quarter, when Phoenix had erased what once was a 23-point Jazz lead early in the game to trail by a mere five points with 2:55 left.

The Suns got 19 points from Kyle Macy and Maurice Lucas.

"I was very surprised I played that well, because I was still tired from Sunday," Dantley said, referring to a one-point overtime loss at Phoenix two days before. "I felt sluggish. That Sunday game was a heart-breaker."

Jazz Coach Frank Layden similarly was moved by the play of the 6-foot-5 forward, who was the league's scoring champion with over 30 points per game.

"Adrian Dantley was absolutely stupendous. He played hard, he played smart. Maybe it was the best performance he ever had," Layden said.

Milwaukee 94, New Jersey 82
Alton Lister scored seven of his 17 points in the fourth period to help Milwaukee beat New Jersey.

Milwaukee held a 72-61 lead after three periods, but the Nets, behind guard Darwin Cook's seven points, trimmed the margin to 73-70 with 8:49 left in the game.

But Lister scored four points in an 8-0 run that gave the Bucks an 81-70 advantage with 6:37 remaining.

Then after New Jersey's Darryl Dawkins sank two free throws to cut the gap to 82-73, Lister scored on a dunk and a free throw to widen the margin to 85-73 less than a minute later. The Nets got no closer than eight points the rest of the way.

Forward Marques Johnson led the Bucks with 22 points, followed by Sidney Moncrief with 19. Darryl Dawkins, playing much of the second half in foul trouble, topped the Nets with 20 points.

The Celtics and Knicks continue their series tied at two games apiece.

"They're going to make us beat them from outside with the guards, obviously," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "And we're not hitting the shots."

The Celtics won the first two games in Boston before the Knicks swept them in New York. The teams also split their six regular-season games.

"We just know we have to take our play up a notch," said Kevin McHale, one of Boston's primary defenders against New York's high-scoring Bernard King, who had 43 points against the Celtics in the last game in New York. "The only adjustment we might have to make is on our defense."

Watson, Crenshaw Head Nelson Field

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson and Ben Crenshaw, whose credentials exhibit a certain similarity, loom as the principal figures in the $400,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic that begins Thursday at the Las Colinas Sports Club.

Each is a recent winner, Watson last week in the Tournament of Champions, Crenshaw three weeks earlier.

Each owns one of golf's Big Four titles, Watson the British Open and Crenshaw the Masters.

And each has a certain tie to Dallas and the Nelson Classic. Crenshaw is the defending champion. And Watson is a protege of the man whose name the tournament bears, along with being a frequent visitor to the area and a four-time Nelson winner.

"Last week was my first start since the Masters, and I guess a little letdown was inevitable," Crenshaw said.

"But I feel like I'm still playing well. And it's always nice to come back to a place where you've won before. When you've won there once, you feel you can do it again."

And Watson is riding a personal high after his run-away triumph in the Tournament of Champions, the 30th of his American Tour career. The victory put him back in his customary position as the game's leading money-winner ($284,468 for the year) and made him the second two-time winner of the season.

"I have a very good feeling about the next three weeks," he said before a practice round over the 3,982-yard, par 71 Las Colinas course. "I'd like to get a streak going before the U.S. Open."

While much of the gallery attention is certain to be centered on Watson and Crenshaw, Bruce Lietzke should not be overlooked in the bulky, 156-man field that will be chasing a $72,000 first prize.

Lietzke, a winner earlier in the year, was runner-up to Watson in the Tournament of Champions and is a previous Byron Nelson title-holder, beating Watson in a playoff for the 1980 title.

Among the other leading contenders are PGA champion and 1983 Player of the Year Hal Sutton, steady Tom Kite, off on another string of high finishes and contending positions, and three major Dallas-area residents, Lee Trevino, Lanny Wadkins and David Graham.

Other major figures included Andy Bean, Ray Floyd, Craig Stadler, Jim Colbert, Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Corey Pavin, a recent winner of the Houston Open.

Rose Captures Big East Title

Rose High School captured the Big East golf title yesterday, edging Wilson Beddingfield by four strokes.

The Rampants toured the Brook Valley Country Club in a total of 319 strokes, while Beddingfield came in with a 323 total.

Northern Nash finished third with a 328, followed by Wilson Hunt with 335, Wilson Fike with 343, Kingston with 345, Rocky Mount with 373 and Northeastern of Elizabeth City with 407.

Rose's David Lee and Hunt's Kent Williams shared medalist honors, each shooting a 77. The low eight scorers and ties were named as the all-conference team. Others on the all league team were: Jordy Smith of Rose, 78; Harry Tyson of Beddingfield, 78; Tee Davies of Rose, 80; Tim Hoyle of Northern Nash, 81; Jimmy Allen of Hunt, 81; Brooks Pierce of Beddingfield, 81; and Joey Exum of Beddingfield, 81.

The other Rose scorer was Mike Herring, who carded an 84.

The Rampants travel to Rock Creek Country Club in Jacksonville on Monday for the Eastern Regionals.

Russell Continues Hitting Tear

By The Associated Press

Now that he's a part-time player, Bill Russell is making a regular pest of himself to National League pitchers.

The 34-year-old veteran, who has been used to spell injured players this year, continued to carry one of the hottest bats in the Los Angeles lineup as he singled home both runs to lead the Dodgers to a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night.

"I'm just a control batter, and right now they're falling in," said Russell after singling home Steve Sax in the first and fifth innings. "I don't strike out very much, which is why they like to hit-and-run with me. I just ordinarily hit the ball where it's pitched. Lately, that's been the magic touch."

Russell, who is hitting .387 over the past 10 games, improved his batting average to .290 for the season with his latest performance.

In the National League's only other games Tuesday night, Chicago outlasted San Francisco 12-11 and Atlanta defeated Philadelphia 8-2. Three games were rained out — Houston at Montreal, Cincinnati at New York and San Diego at Pittsburgh.

The Dodgers quickly led 1-0 when Sax walked to start the contest, reached second on Danny Cox's balk and scored on Russell's first single.

One-out walks to Willie McGee and Lonnie Smith followed by McGee's steal of third and George Hendrick's force of Smith on a grounder produced a Cardinal run in the fourth.

In the fifth, after Jerry Reuss walked on four pitches with one out, Sax forced the Los Angeles pitcher and then stole his 10th base. Sax continued to third on the play on catcher Darrell Porter's errant throw and scored easily on Russell's hit up the middle to snap a 1-1 tie.

Reuss and Tom Niedenfuer combined on a three-hitter for the Dodgers.

Cubs 12, Giants 11
Pinch-hitter Keith Moreland's tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth inning boosted Chicago over San Francisco.

The Cubs loaded the bases with nobody out when Mel Hall and Jody Davis singled and pitcher Greg Minton, 1-2, fielded Larry Bowa's bunt and threw late to third trying for the force play.

Gary Lavelle replaced Minton and got Bill Buckner to ground into a forceout at home before Moreland, batting for Bob Dernier, singled to give the victory to reliever Lee Smith, 3-2.

The Giants had tied it 11-11 with two runs off Smith in the top of the ninth on Jack Clark's sixth home run of the season, Gene Richard's single and a triple by Joel Youngblood.

The Cubs were leading 11-9, with the help of a seven-run third keyed by Ron Cey's fifth career grand slam, which was his sixth homer this year.

"We should have won the game easy," said Moreland, "but we didn't play very well. We were fortunate. You're not going to win a lot of games playing like that."

Braves 8, Phillies 2

In Philadelphia, Rafael Ramirez's squeeze-bunt single in the seventh inning pushed across Claudell

Washington with the winning run as Atlanta beat Philadelphia behind Pete Falcone's four-hitter.

After the game was held up at the start by rain for nearly two hours, Falcone struck out eight and walked four as he posted his second victory against three losses. John Denny, 2-3, was the loser.

With the score tied 2-2, Alex Trevino opened the Atlanta seventh with a double and took third on Washington's infield single.

Ramirez then dropped a bunt to the left of Denny and beat it out for a single as Trevino scored to send the Braves ahead 3-2. Dale Murphy singled home Washington to give the Braves a 4-2 lead.

Atlanta added four insurance runs in the ninth, two on a single by Chris Chambliss.

"He (Denny) didn't know it was coming," Ramirez said of his game-winning bunt. "He thought I was going to hit."

Soviets Out Of Games...

Olympics used as a political arena. There definitely are more effective ways to get our points across. The only people who will suffer are the individual athletes for they won't have the opportunity to compete."

Jody Anderson, a competitor in the heptathlon, said she feels "sorry for the athletes because it is all political. Athletes have nothing to do with it."

"It could well be the beginning of the end," said Jimmy Carnes, president of The Athletics Congress. "We could see the world championships in each event become the big thing instead of the Olympics. Top government officials in the United States and Russia don't control the athletes in world championship competition to the degree that they do in the Olympics."

With the pullout of Soviet athletes — and possibly other members of the Soviet bloc — the strength of the fields in many sports would be diminished.

The Soviet Union captured the most medals in the past three Summer Olympics and, with the United States and 81 other countries missing the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, the Soviet Union had an easy time, winning 80 gold medals, 69 silver medals and 46 bronze.

The 80 gold medals compared with their 49 golds in 1976 and 50 in 1972 when both the Soviet Union and United States competed. However, a number of black and Arab countries boycotted the 1976 Games in Montreal, continuing the political problems that has plagued almost every Olympics since the modern Games began in 1896.

Besides track and field, swimming, basketball, wrestling, weightlifting, rowing, shooting and gymnastics, the Soviets were also expected to do well in water polo, volleyball, handball, cycling and some of the other less dominant sports.

The top four seeded teams in the first round of soccer include the Soviet Union, East Germany and Czechoslovakia. The strongest nations in canoeing are the Soviet Union, East Germany, Bulgaria and Romania.

The Soviets and Romania have dominated gymnastics, while the Soviet Union and Bulgaria are heavily favored in weightlifting.

The Soviet withdrawal will almost certainly increase American medal chances in a number of sports, including track and field. Carl Lewis is attempting to match Jesse Owens' 1936 sweep of four gold medals. Mary Decker is going for two golds in women's distance events, and sprinter Evelyn Ashford could win three gold medals.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, said the Soviets not participating in Los Angeles would have little effect on American television.

"It's too early to tell," Arledge said. "There will be a bountiful harvest of American medals if the Russians don't show up."

"With television, it's difficult to predict an audience, but enthusiasm can always sweep people up. They don't tune in to watch the Russians."

Jones, facing his most serious opposition since being elected to Congress 18 years ago, won over John Gillam, a two-term state representative from Windsor.

In Pitt County, Jones received 11,434 votes (66.45 percent) to Gillam's 5,772 (33.55 percent). In the 21 counties of the district, with 89 percent of the votes counted, Gillam, who spent twice as much as the incumbent in his bid for the nomination, had 40.1 percent of the votes to Jones' 59.9 percent.

Democrats in Pitt County seemed to agree with other voters throughout the state on the nominees for other state offices also.

In the three-way race for the Incumbent Thad Eure, who has served longer as Secretary of State than anyone in the nation, won over Betty Ann Knudson, 9,396 to 5,804, while Jim Long took 7,842 votes in Pitt to win the nomination as commissioner of insurance over Billy Martin, who received 5,988 votes.

Incumbent John C. Brooks, Greenville native, took 9,585 Pitt votes (68.12 percent) in his bid for the nomination as commissioner of labor. Second in the race was Dick Barnes, with 3,232 votes (22.97 percent), while Don Wiseman was third with 1,254 votes (8.91 percent). State-wide, Brooks held a narrow lead and could possibly face Barnes, a state senator from Winston-Salem, in a runoff on June 5.

In his bid for the nomination as associate justice of the supreme court, Henry Frye placed first with 7,004 votes in Pitt, followed by Raymond Taylor who received 6,085 votes, while John Martin received 9,611 votes in the court of appeals judge race, followed by Meyressa Schoonmaker's 2,201 and Robert Cecil's 1,556.

Pitt voters also approved the proposed constitutional amendment — to allow the General Assembly to enact laws creating an agency to issue revenue bonds to finance the cost of building agricultural facilities.

In the race for district court judge for the Third Judicial District, which includes Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico Counties, New Bern attorney J. Randall Hunter won over Don Hicks of Greenville.

With all but four precincts in Pamlico County, and 23 of 24 precincts in Pitt reporting, Hunter, district-wide, had 18,687 votes to Hicks' 10,199.

In Pitt, with the Simpson precinct not reported, voters gave Hunter 6,551 votes (51.84 percent), while Hicks took 6,086 votes (48.16 percent).

Hunter's heaviest margin came in his home county, Craven, where he took 6,586 votes to Hicks' 1,523. In some crucial issues facing public education in this county, including the merger issue. It is my sincere hope that my resignation will facilitate a resolution of some of these issues.

Carteret County, the vote was 4,260 for Hunter and 2,316 for Hicks, while in Pamlico County, with 13 of 12 precincts reporting, Hunter had 1,290 votes to Hicks' 274.

"I sincerely trust that my resignation will signal to the community, the county commissioners, the county school board it is my desire that the community will move ahead in deciding what happens to the merger issue. To use an old country expression, 'it's time to fish or cut bait.'"

Making reference to his future position at ECU, Blinson said: "I'm looking forward to teaching there. I've had a goal of returning to teaching for over 15 years, and I look forward to teaching future school administrators. I'm excited about the changes taking place in the School of Education under the leadership of the new dean, Dr. Charles Coble."

Wall announced that the Greenville board will not hire a replacement immediately. "Since Dr. Blinson will remain through December, we will wait until mid-summer to determine what direction will be taken on the merger issue. We hope this action will help facilitate a decision within the next month or two.

"If there is no decision to merge within that time," Wall added, "we will begin a search and employment process in order to have a replacement by January 1."

Blinson, a native of Clayton, was principal at Garner High School for 10 years before coming to Greenville in the summer of 1981. He began teaching in the Wake County schools in 1965, and has been in education since that date. He is married to the former Nancy Avery, also of Clayton. The couple has two children, Michael, 12, and Lisa, 8.

Clark Opposes Leasing Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary William Clark says he will urge President Reagan to veto legislation to give state governments a greater voice in offshore oil leasing if Congress approves the measure.

Clark told the National Forest Products Association that the measure, designed to counter a Jan. 11 Supreme Court ruling that confines state control of offshore drilling within a three-mile limit, would "spawn a horrendous new regulation."

Clark urged the group to push to kill the legislation, which would extend state regulation to the entire continental shelf. Success for the bill, he said, could yield a move to tighten state regulation of the timber industry.

MHA Series

The Mental Health Association in Pitt County's annual Mental Health Month Spotlight lunchtime lecture series will be held each Thursday at noon this month.

The speaker for this week is Jeff McAllister, director of the Pitt County Council on Aging. He will address "Breaking the Myths of Aging."

Speakers for the remainder of the month include Dr. Hal May of the ECU Department of Family Medicine, Eli Bloom, hospital volunteer; Camille Clark, retired nutritionist; Ann Swartz, yoga instructor; Ann Cameron, aerobics instructor; and Philip Evancho, visiting artist at Pitt Community College.

The lectures will be held at the Greenville Parks and Recreation Building, 2000 Cedar Lane, Greenville.

Workers Kicking Habit Get Gifts

SPENCER, Mass. (AP) — A central Massachusetts plastics company has decided to encourage its workers to quit smoking by handing out gift certificates to those who kick the habit.

Flexon Co. Inc. is providing $30 worth of gift certificates each month for a year to workers who don't smoke and $15 monthly to those who stop smoking at either work or home, Joanne Quinn, director of human resources, said Tuesday.

Since the program began last month, 34 of the 173 workers who smoked have quit completely, and another 14 have quit smoking either at work or home, she said.

Democrats View TV House Debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frustrated with President Reagan's effective use of television, House Democrats are considering televised floor debates immediately following all presidential addresses to get their side of the issue across to viewers.

"Ronald Reagan is such an effective user of the media that we have been frustrated to find a way to respond to him," said Steve Skardon, an aide to Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark, the chief deputy majority whip.

One way Alexander suggested before a meeting of the Democratic Caucus is to set up Democratic-Republican debates on a particular topic that the president has just finished discussing on nationwide television.

Ban On Leaded Gasoline Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Something like a ban" on leaded gasoline most likely will be issued by the Environmental Protection Agency this summer, an agency officials says.

The remark by Assistant EPA Administrator Joseph Cannon came after agency officials told reportings at a ceremony marking National Clean Air Week that proposed regulations involving leaded gasoline might be issued by late this year or early in 1985.

While outages were minor last night, Green said the entire county was without power for 17 minutes this morning when the main system failed.

"There are two main systems. When one is down the other is a back-up. This morning, one side of the station was off while we were working on it. One of the relays on the side that was energized tripped the other station off while we were testing," Green explained.

He said when a system that size (230,000 volts per station) fails, testing procedures must be made to assure the system will work properly when it was restored. These procedures took approximately 10 minutes this morning.

Incumbents Hold Leads In Congress

RALEIGH (AP) — All of the challenged incumbents in Congress won Tuesday as bids by two candidates to be the first black congressmen elected in North Carolina this century faltered in Democratic primaries.

Rep. Walter B. Jones waited late into the night to be certain he would beat state Rep. John B. Gillam, D-Bertie.

Jones had 59.9 percent of the votes in the 1st District's 21 counties with 89 percent of the vote counted. He will face Republican Herbert Lee, who edged Gene Leggett 57.8 percent to 42.2 percent with only 10 percent of the vote left uncounted.

Gillam, backed by his prominent eastern North Carolina family, ran an expensive campaign in which he emphasized his youth and Jones' indifference to local issues. Gillam repeatedly pointed to Jones' decision to give up his position on the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee to chair the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Jones pointed to his help to coastal areas in the district and said he was running on his political clout.

State Rep. Ken Spaulding, D-Durham, mounted a strong challenge in the 2nd District to incumbent I.T. Tim Valentine, with leads changing late into Tuesday night. But after Spaulding surged ahead on black support in Durham County, Valentine gradually regained the lead. With 99 percent of the vote tallied, Valentine had garnered 63,995 votes, or 51.7 percent, while Spaulding had 59,684 votes and 48.3 percent.

Valentine faces Frank H. Hill, a Republican salesman, in November.

Howard N. Lee, whose election as mayor of Chapel Hill in 1969 made him the first black mayor of a predominantly white Southern city, strongly fought incumbent Rep. Ike Andrews in the 4th District. But the former secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development finally fell short of forcing a runoff with Andrews as the six-term congressman took 51.9 percent of the vote with 97 percent counted. John Winters Jr., a Raleigh businessman, took 9.5 percent.

"It looks good," said Andrews from his Tuesday night campaign headquarters, adding that he was somewhat disappointed by the results. He said the early vote "about 6,000 votes short of what I thought we would have."

While both candidates said they underestimated Winters' support, Lee said he would have no statement on the race until the final vote was tallied.

Andrews' victory set the stage for a return match with Republican Bill Cobey, who ran a close second to Andrews in 1982.

Valentine and Andrews faced the strongest battles of any incumbents.

In other races involving incumbents:

— In the 5th District, Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., handily defeated Wallace B. Ray. Neal, in his fifth term, drew 89.6 percent of the vote with all 231 precincts reporting. Neal faces GOP candidate Stuart W. Epperson of Winston-Salem in November.

— In the 7th District, Congressman Charles Rose, a six-term Democrat, got 84.2 percent of the vote in beating Tommie Dial, based on final, unofficial returns. Rose will face Republican Samuel T. Rhodes of Wilmington in November.

— In the 8th District, Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., swept retired postal clerk Leonard Tyson, gathering 83.4 percent of the vote with 92.3 percent counted. Hefner faces a rematch with Republican Harris D. Blake, who Hefner defeated in 1982.

Society of Newspaper Editors and planned a campaign stop in Nebraska Friday night.

Nebraska and Oregon hold primaries next Tuesday, and Idaho Democrats will have caucuses on May 24. But the climactic day in the Democratic campaign is June 5, when California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia have primaries.

The big prize that day is California with 345 delegates, and that is where the three contenders were likely to spend most of their time.

"I'm going to campaign very heavily on the issues that concern Californians," said Mondale.

Hart, who hadn't won a primary since Connecticut on March 27, suddenly had a chance to put together a winning streak. Hart swamped Mondale in caucuses Monday in his home state of Colorado, he is favored to carry Oregon's primary, and he scheduled the next several days campaigning in Nebraska.

But Mondale's big wins in Maryland and North Carolina more than offset Hart's delegate gains in his narrow victories in Indiana and Ohio. The former vice president picked up 186 delegates in the four states compared to 139 for Hart and 42 for Jackson.

Mondale now has 1,446.05 delegates, Hart has 874.75, and Jackson 279.2. With about 800 delegates left to be allocated in the remaining primaries, Mondale needs 521 to reach the 1,967 needed for a convention majority. Mondale will get at least 100 delegates from Texas, where the allocation from last Saturday's caucuses has not yet been determined.

Jordan, Stewart Knotted In Race For No. 2

By MARY ANNERHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Bob Jordan led former House Speaker Carl Stewart in the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor but it was unclear whether the margin would be great enough to avoid a runoff.

In results from the Republican primary Tuesday, Rockingham businessman Frank Jordan and Raleigh businessman John Carrington won spots in the June 5 runoff, something that surprised both candidates.

"It looks to me like if the present trend continues we will almost certainly be looking at a runoff," said Stewart, a Gastonia attorney.

Jordan, a lumber company executive from Mount Gilead, refused to predict whether there would be a runoff.

"It's a little closer than I expected," he said. "I thought I would win by 51 or 52 percent. Others felt it would be more than that."

With 2,222 or 94 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Jordan had 413,871 votes or almost 51 percent and Stewart had 370,004 votes or 45 percent. A third candidate, Ku Klux Klan chaplain Stephen Miller, had 35,619 votes or more than 4 percent.

Republican candidate Jordan, who said he spent only $1,400 on the campaign, acknowledged that he might have benefited from commercials for the Democratic candidate with the same last name.

"I said before the race that it would take a miracle to win," Jordan said, adding later that, "Jordan is a good name."

Carrington said he had expected to get in a runoff with former state Rep. Bill Hiatt of Mount Airy.

"I am surprised, no shocked," he said of the unofficial results.

With 2,164 or 92 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Republican candidate Jordan had 38,618 votes or almost 31 percent and Carrington had 34,051 votes or almost 27 percent.

Hiatt had 26,633 votes or 21 percent; Barbara Perry of Kinston had 23,948 votes or 19 percent and Erick Little of Cary had 3,387 votes or almost 3 percent.

In a hotly contested Council of State race, incumbent John Brooks led state Sen. Dick Barnes of Winston-Salem in a race for labor commissioner that could wind up in a June 5 runoff.

Brooks is seeking a third term but has lost support of the state AFL-CIO to Barnes, who has served two terms in the state House and one term in the Senate.

With 2,106 or 90 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Brooks had 305,760 votes or 46 percent and Barnes had 264,625 votes or 40 percent. Former Labor Department official Don Wiseman of Cary, the third candidate, had 91,361 votes or 14 percent.

Secretary of State Thad Eure held a healthy lead over challenger Betty Ann Knudsen in Eure's quest for 12th term. With 2,145 or 91 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Eure had 436,614 votes or 59 percent and Mrs. Knudsen had 305,255 votes or 41 percent.

Former state Rep. Jim Long of Burlington easily defeated Billy Martin of Carthage, a gasoline station employee, in the Democratic race for insurance commissioner.

With 2,131 or 91 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Long had 453,460 votes or 66 percent and Martin had 230,643 votes or 38 percent.

Supreme Court Justice Henry

Frye, the first black appointed to the court, won the Democratic nomination by defeating Raymond M. Taylor of Raleigh.

With 2,106 or 90 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Frye had 381,976 votes or 60 percent and Taylor had 250,549 or 40 percent.

High Point.

With 2,072 or 88 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Martin got 353,122 votes or 58 percent, Ms. Schoonmaker got 130,458 votes or 21 percent and Cecil got 129,401 votes or 21 percent.

Helms, Hunt Win Nomination, Then Pick Up War Of Words

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Jesse Helms and Jim Hunt paused long enough to acknowledge their nominations U.S. Senate, then resumed in earnest their war of words that has been under way for months.

Helms, a two-term Republican senator, and Democratic Gov. Hunt overwhelmed token opposition Tuesday in the North Carolina primaries. Their nominations officially inaugurate the campaign expected to be one of the costliest and most bitter in state history.

Already, over $9 million has been raised between the two candidates, and thousands of dollars have been spent on toughly-worded advertisements. Hunt's victory statement suggested that more of the same could be expected.

"Between now and Election Day, I intend to wage an aggressive, hard-hitting campaign," said Hunt. "I'm confident that once the people of this state have examined Sen. Helms' record — once they have learned how he has voted against their interests ... they will retire Jesse Helms from politics."

Helms was in Washington, D.C., Tuesday and could not be reached for comment. Claude Allen, spokesman for his campaign, said he was "very encouraged about the fact that Sen. Helms is the candidate of the Republican Party."

Hunt, Allen said, "has looked at the polls and he sees that he is trailing and he's desperate."

With 2,280 or 97 percent of the 2,352 precincts reporting, Helms had garnered 133,688 votes or 89 percent to 17,290 votes — 11 percent — for George Wimbish, a Charlotte broker-wholesaler.

Hunt saw nearly a quarter of the Democratic vote go to his two token opponents but still won easily. With 2,296 or 98 percent of the precincts reporting, he had 632,326 votes or 77 percent to 124,147 votes or 15 percent for businessman Tom Allred of Greensboro. Harrill Jones, a Gastonia real estate investor, had 63,531 votes or 8 percent.

Incumbents Fall In Partial Primaries For Legislature

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, who ran for re-election against four candidates including his ex-wife, and Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, were among incumbents defeated in Tuesday's primaries.

Weldon Price and W.D. Goldston took the two 24th District seats with just of 12,000 votes apiece while Marion had 9,852 and his ex-wife, Patty, had 6,833. Randolph Phillips had 7,822 votes in that race.

Hancock fell victim to a strong charge by Ralph Hunt in the 13th District as Hunt tallied 22,568 votes to lead Senate Majority Leader Ken Royall, who took the remaining seat with 18,929 votes. Hancock was third with 16,247, followed by Rosalie Gates, 8,296, John Monroe, 2,500 and Rackley Ivey, 918.

Rep. Edward Bowen failed in his bid for the nomination, placing third to Edd Nye and Rep. Murray Pool in the race for the two 12th District House seats. Nye got 12,274 votes while Pool had 8,271 and Bowen had 8,203.

Incumbent Hugh Lee was defeated in the 32nd House District by Donald Dawkins, who got 5,199 votes to 4,289 for Lee.

There were 29 Democratic primaries and seven Republican primaries Tuesday, but court challenges to the state's legislative redistricting plan forced several more to wait until June or July. A three-judge panel ruled this year that Senate Districts 2 and 22 and House Districts 8, 21, 23, 36 and 39 unconstitutionally diluted minority voting strength.

While the General Assembly redrew the questioned districts, the delay pushed back primaries for Senate Districts 22, 33, 34 and 35 in Cabarrus and Mecklenburg counties and 20 House districts in Mecklenburg, Wake, Forsyth and Durham counties to June 5. Second primaries, if needed, will be held July 17.

There will be primaries July 17 in Senate Districts 1, 2, 6, 9, 10, 11 and 14 with runoffs, if needed, on Aug. 14. Those districts involve all or part of Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Franklin, Gates, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Hyde, Lee, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, Vance, Wake, Warren, Washington and Wilson counties.

Other incumbents nominated Tuesday for re-election to the Senate were:

- In the 12th District, Tony Rand and Lura Tally.
- In the 16th District, Wanda Hunt and Russell Walker.

- In the 17th District, Aaron Plyler.
- In the 25th District, Helen R. Marvin, Ollie Harris and Marshall Rauch.
- In the 28th District, Robert Swain and Dennis Winner.

Incumbents nominated Tuesday for re-election to the House were:

- In the 3rd District, Gerald Anderson, Chris Barker and Daniel Lilley.
- In the 5th District, Melvin Creecy.
- In the 11th District, Martin Lancaster and Charles Woodard.
- In the 17th District, C.R. Edwards and Luther Jeralds.
- In the 18th District, W.E. Clark, R.D. Beard and Henry Tyson.
- In the 22nd District, James

Crawford, Billy Watkins and John Church.

- In the 25th District, Bertha Holt, Robert McAlister and Tim McDowell.
- In the 35th District, Republican Brad Ligon.
- In the 37th District, James Lambeth.
- In the 45th District, Republican Austin Allran.
- In the 46th District, Republicans James Hughes and George Robinson.
- In the 48th District, Edith Lutz, John Hunt and Charles Owens.
- In the 50th District, Republican Charles Hughes.
- In the 51st District, Martin Nesbitt, Gordon Greenwood, Marie Colton and Jim Crawford.

Voters OK Farm Financing Amendment

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina farmers may find it easier to get loans after voters approved a constitutional amendment establishing a state agricultural financing authority.

The N.C. Agricultural Facilities Finance Act, already approved by the General Assembly, had won the approval of 54.2 percent of voters Tuesday with 85.1 percent of the vote counted. The act is designed to raise money for farm loans by selling tax-exempt bonds to private investors without using state tax money.

Banks, savings and loan institutions and other lenders could use money from the bonds to give loans to farmers at lower-than-usual interest rates.

Frank Bordeaux, chief economist with the state Department of Agriculture, said interest rates would be 1 percent to 2 percent below commercial rates. Farm lobbyists said the legislation would help bolster the farm economy and stem the tide of farm foreclosures.

Edmund Aycock, executive vice president of the N.C. Agribusiness Council, said the seasonal nature of farming requires a special source of money to replenish the agricultural economy. Opponents of the measure said it would end up serving owners of large farms at the expense of small-acreage farmers. They say there are no eligibility requirements to see that small farmers get their fair share.

The National Sharecroppers Association distributed a press release saying the bonds would end up costing taxpayers because of tax dollars lost due to interest savings reaped by farmers.

Runoff Possible In 6th District

The possibility of a runoff exists in the race for the Democratic nomination to the 6th District seat in the N.C. House of Representatives following Tuesday's primary balloting.

Leading the three-way race in the district, which includes Bethel and Carolina townships in Pitt County, as well as Hertford County and portions of Martin and Bertie counties, was former House member William D. Harrison of Williamston, with 3,485 votes.

Unofficial totals, which could change when the various boards of election canvass the votes, had L.M.

"Mutt" Brinkley, an Ahoskie developer, and Ahoskie publisher Joe Parker tied for second place with 2,967 votes each.

Democrats in Bethel and Carolina townships gave Harrison 375 votes (41.03 percent) to Parker's 320 votes (35.01 percent). Brinkley placed third in the Pitt balloting with 219 votes (23.96 percent).

Since Harrison, who served in the General Assembly before being defeated by incumbent John Gillam four years ago, does not have more than 50 percent of the votes cast, and since the totals could change in the official canvass, Brinkley Parker, could call for a runoff, which would be scheduled for June 5.

Birthing Center Set In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Three Charlotte-area midwives say they will be offering healthy pregnant women a compromise between home and hospital delivery this fall with the opening of their birthing center.

Birth Inn will provide care from the prenatal through the newborn stages, with backup medical support from two obstetrician-gynecologists and a pediatrician.

"It will be a place where normal, healthy mothers can come — we're not dealing with anyone who is complicated — with their families and have their baby in their own way," said Terry Zweber, who is combining efforts with Carl Hurley of Tega Cay, S.C., and Joan Walker of Rock Hill. All are certified nurse-midwives.

"We feel if a mother is normal and healthy in pregnancy, she should have a normal, healthy delivery," Zweber said. "But if she runs into problems, we have a physician backup."

It is the third such alternative in North Carolina since the first opened in Siler City 5½ years ago. The other birthing center is in High Point.

Man Dies In Cave-In

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — One man was killed and another was injured when a 10-foot-deep trench they were working in flooded with water and collapsed in an Aiken subdivision Tuesday, authorities said.

The victim's identity was withheld pending notification of relatives. An autopsy was scheduled today, said Coroner Sue Townsend.

The injured worker, Bobbie Benjamin, 26, of Augusta, was trapped in the muddy trench for four hours while work crews dug with shovels and their bare hands to free him. He was taken to Aiken County Hospital and later released.

The men were working in the ditch, which was about 8 feet to 10 feet deep and 6 feet wide, when a backhoe hit and ruptured a main sewer line at about 5 p.m., said Public Safety Director J.C. Busbee Sr.

As the ditch flooded with water, the walls caved in, burying the dead man and trapping Benjamin, Busbee said.

The crew was beginning to close down for the day when the ditch walls collapsed, said Roy Mutimer, who was operating a nearby backhoe at the time.

PBS Show Points To World War II Propaganda Battles

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Did Dr. Josef Goebbels, Nazi Germany's evil propagandist, recognize himself as his own worst enemy?
"They hung themselves," said Frank Capra, the Hollywood director chosen by Gen. George C. Marshall to "give the boys a reason to fight."

"We showed them for what they were," Capra said, "and they weren't pretty. They were mad dogs."
Capra took the movies produced by Goebbels and his cohorts to promote Hitler's nefarious cause and made "Why We Fight," a series of films designed, the American said, "to show the difference between our way of living ... and the enemy's."

The attack and brilliant counterattack is examined in "World War II: The Propaganda Battle," tonight's edition of "A Walk Through the 20th Century with Bill Moyers" on public television.

Interviews with Fritz Hippler, the Nazi filmmaker, and Capra are the basis for this clear and eminently thoughtful perspective on the struggle, between fascism and freedom, for mind and soul.

Moyers, the CBS News correspondent and commentator, is at his best with the time to contemplate and reflect aloud on a complex subject, and "The Propaganda Battle" is a characteristically superior effort.

Propaganda was an age-old tactic when Hitler began his rise to power in Germany in the 1920s, but this time, Moyers says in the program, there was something new: "the power of film."

"Now the propagandists could reach the whole crowd at once," he says, "and yet, touch each person in that crowd, individually."

Hippler was 17 when he joined the Nazi party in the mid-1920s. By 1936 he was head of German newsreels, producing theatrical films supportive of Hitler's world design. "We only showed the good sides," he says today, "and not the dangers."

Within three years, the 30-year-old Hippler was supervising all films made in Germany. Two films, "Campaign in Poland" and "Victory in the West," stand out as examples of effective film propaganda.

"The secret ... is to simplify complicated or complex things," Hippler explains. "Simplify ... and repetition."

"The Eternal Jew" was Hippler's most despicable work. The film was designed to turn the German people against the country's Jewish population.

"A film of hate, yes," Hippler concedes. "We had the same feeling, but we didn't talk about it. ... We had no idea that this could be the basis on which mass murder would follow."

Moyers says Hippler, largely due to "The Eternal Jew," became an "accomplice to the mass murder of millions." Says Hippler: "With this fact I have to live all this time."

Across the Atlantic, U.S. leaders were searching for an effective response to Hitler and Hippler. Ultimately, they settled on Capra, an immigrant from Sicily whose films ("It Happened One Night," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington") generally displayed, in Moyers' words, "a belief that life is rounded with a happy ending."

Capra, who was 45 at the time, recalls of Marshall: "He wanted somebody ... able to reach the people, and I had reached the people with my films."

Marshall's mandate? "Give the boys a reason to fight ... and don't lie," Capra says. "They must believe it. If they don't believe it, we're dead. ... The truth was that if we lost, we'd lose our freedom certainly above all, and I thought freedom was our most precious commodity."

Capra said that despite resistance from the U.S. Army Signal Corps, which preferred films demonstrating American military might, he obtained copies of Nazi newsreels and propaganda films and used Hitler and Mussolini, and their frightening exhortations, in his propaganda effort.

Mitchum Receives Treatment
RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Robert Mitchum has joined the list of celebrities who have turned to the Betty Ford Center for treatment of problems with drugs or drinking.
Mitchum's lawyer, David LaFaile, said the 66-year-old actor was being treated for an alcohol problem. He declined to say how long Mitchum has had the problem.
The actor entered the rehabilitation center at Eisenhower Medical Center on Saturday, LaFaile said. He did not say how long Mitchum would be in the center.
Founded by former first lady Betty Ford, the center has treated such celebrities as Elizabeth Taylor, Johnny Cash and Peter Lawford.
Although the center doesn't release the names of its patients, Tony Ripepi, a spokesman for Mitchum, said the actor decided to announce that he was undergoing treatment.
Mitchum was nominated for an Academy Award as best supporting actor in 1945 for his role in "G.I. Joe." More recently he appeared in the TV miniseries "Winds of War."

Unrest Delays Cabinet Session

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fears for the safety of members of Lebanon's new coalition Cabinet blocked the group from holding its first work session today, and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt proposed meeting on a U.S. or French warship.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami said later the question of where the meeting would be held had been resolved, but he declined to name the chosen site or say when the Cabinet would meet.

Jumblatt and his civil war ally, Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri, said in separate statements that President Amin Gemayel's government palace in Baabda, a Christian suburb of Beirut, was not a safe place for them to attend meetings of the half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet.

"Why not the New Jersey or the Clemenceau?" asked Jumblatt in a statement broadcast by his Voice of the Mountain radio station. "If they're obliging, we can meet there."

The New Jersey, a U.S. Navy battleship, has moved away from Mediterranean waters off the coast of Lebanon after the collapse in February of U.S. peacekeeping efforts in Beirut. The French aircraft carrier Clemenceau is near the Lebanese coast, apparently to protect 65 French truce observers on Beirut's front lines.

Two Christian members of the Cabinet rejected the at-sea meeting proposal. Cabinet sessions at the palace "is a tradition we're not prepared to break," said Camille Chamoun, a leader of the National Liberal Party. Gemayel's father, Pierre, of the Phalange Party, agreed with Chamoun's statement made on behalf of the Christian part of the coalition.

Louisiana Upset Over Name Change

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The University of Southwestern Louisiana's attempt to change its regional-sounding name to attract top faculty has been temporarily scuttled after a state Senate committee said the move would put the school "ahead of others."

The Board of Trustees for State Colleges and Universities touched off the furor two weeks ago when it voted 16-1 to let the 16,300-student state college in Lafayette change its name to the University of Louisiana.

Critics charged the name change echoes the better-known Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, which has more than 25,000 students and offers doctoral degrees in 53 areas; Southwestern Louisiana has only five doctoral-level programs.

After a two-hour hearing Tuesday, the state Senate Judiciary Committee approved a bill scuttling the name change. However, a compromise on the matter is being discussed by the committee to avoid a floor fight in the full Senate.

"The name change puts one university ahead of the others at the disadvantage of the others, and that is wrong," said Sen. Cliff Newman of Lake Charles, who authored the bill stopping the change.

Under the proposed compromise, Southwestern Louisiana could Karami met later with Jumblatt and Berri then announced the issue had been resolved.

"We have reached agreement that we would clear the way for the Cabinet meeting at the official site that will satisfy all parties," he said.

Asked whether the meeting would be held Thursday at the presidential palace, he told reporters, "Tomorrow (Thursday) you will know where."

Defense Minister Adel Osseiran, who was present at the meeting in west Beirut, said the Cabinet was to meet "definitely" on Thursday.

Meanwhile, no developments were reported in the abduction Tuesday of an American Presbyterian minister who was strolling with his wife in west Beirut, a mostly Moslem section. Police said they had no clues to the identity of the three men who forced the Rev. Benjamin T. Weir, 60, into a car. His wife ran to notify police. The minister has lived in Beirut for 30 years.

In the stalemate over security assurances for the Cabinet ministers, Berri, said: "How to reach the Baabda palace is a security problem for Mr. Jumblatt and myself." Berri is serving in the Cabinet as minister of state for south Lebanon and reconstruction.

"Security guarantees are lacking in Baabda," said Jumblatt, who took the Cabinet post covering public works, transportation and tourism.

The hilltop presidential palace in Baabda, five miles east of Beirut, is part of a region guarded by predominantly Christian army units.

Jumblatt and Berri said they have authorized Karami, the Syrian-backed Moslem who heads the new Cabinet, to work out the security problems concerning the meeting.

become the University of Louisiana at Lafayette. But other state colleges also could use the name — as long as it contained the site in its name.

Thus Northwestern State University could become the University of Louisiana at Natchitoches, Southeastern could become the University of Louisiana at Hammond and Grambling would become the University of Louisiana at Grambling. There are nine universities in the state system.

For years, officials at the Lafayette school have complained that their institution gets short shrift compared to Louisiana State. In addition, they say the regional-sounding name hinders their attempts to draw top faculty.

Louisiana State University Chancellor James Wharton told the committee that LSU is "very much alarmed by the intent of the name change and where it will lead."

Wharton said letting Southwestern Louisiana change its name would indicate that it was a comprehensive university on the level of the University of Oklahoma and other noted institutions. LSU is — and should be — the state's sole flagship university, he said.

Congressional Races May Be Costliest Ever

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The November elections are still six months away, but the candidates for U.S. Senate and House already have amassed $111 million, with more than a quarter of that money coming from political action committees, an Associated Press analysis of campaign finance records shows.

With the costliest months of the campaign still ahead, the incumbents and challengers are on a spending spree that seems certain to eclipse the records set in 1982, when Senate candidates spent an average of $1.7 million and House contestants $211,669.

A half-dozen Senate candidates — four of them incumbents — have built up $1 million war chests for the fall campaign, while four House veterans each have more than $500,000 in the bank.

Republicans are outspending Democrats as they seek to retain their 55-45 margin in the Senate, where 33 seats are at stake this year — 19 of which are now in GOP hands.

But it is another story in the House, where all 435 seats are at stake and where Democrats are outspending their Republican rivals in a bid to bolster their 102-seat edge.

The figures come from a computer analysis of all campaign finance reports filed with the Federal Election Commission through the end of April.

The information from candidates' reports for 1983 and for the first quarter of this year was put on a computer and tabulated by PAC Researchers Inc. for The Associated Press.

Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, a first-term Democrat, boasted the biggest war chest as of March 31: just over $2 million.

Louisiana Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, a second-term Democrat, had nearly $1.5 million cash on hand, while two freshmen senators, Rudy Boschwitz, a Republican from Minnesota, and Howell Heflin, a Democrat from Alabama, had $1.4 million and $1.1 million respectively.

In the nation's most expensive race to date, North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt had just over $1 million on hand to wage his battle with incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms.

Helms, a conservative Republican, had raised $6.3 million through March and spent $6.2 million. He reported having $113,760 cash on hand, but debts of $241,888. Hunt had raised nearly $3.1 million and spent $2.2 million.

In Tennessee, where Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker is retiring after 18 years, Rep. Albert Gore Jr., a Democrat, has raised almost $1.5 million in his pursuit of Baker's seat. Gore had spent $422,668 and had $1,069,146 in cash and only $169,506 in debts on March 31.

Congress Watch, part of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization, said Monday that Gore has gotten more PAC money than any other candidate: $428,838.

PACs have donated $30 million so far this year and steered 86 percent of their money to incumbents, Congress Watch said.

Three House Democrats — Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, Fernand J. St Germain of Rhode Island and Stephen J. Solarz of New York — and one Republican, W. Henson Moore of Louisiana, all had war chests of more than $500,000. Nineteen other House incumbents had at least $250,000 in the bank.

In Texas, six Republicans and Democrats scrambling to fill the seat of retiring Sen. John G. Tower had spent nearly $8 million by April 1.

Rep. Phil Gramm, who won the GOP primary in a landslide Saturday, spent $1.7 million through March. Among the also-rans, Rep. Ron Paul spent $1.3 million and Houston oilman Rob Mosbacher $1.4 million.

The Democratic race in Texas will be decided by a June 2 runoff between conservative Rep. Kent Hance and liberal State Sen. Lloyd Doggett. Doggett spent nearly $1.4 million through March; Hance had spent $729,419, but had enough cash on hand to fuel a $500,000 media blitz in the last two weeks. Former Rep. Robert Kreuger, who finished third by a few hundred votes, had spent $1.4 million through March.

The Senate race in Illinois has already cost more than $6 million. Sen. Charles Percy spent $2 million in turning aside a challenge from Rep. Tom Corcoran in the GOP primary. In November Percy will face Rep. Paul Simon, who spent $1.3 million in topping the Democratic field.

In Minnesota, four Democrats are eyeing the Senate seat held by Boschwitz, who had raised more than $3 million and spent $2 million by the end of March.

In West Virginia, wealthy Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV has already spent $2.9 million in his quest to succeed retiring Sen. Jennings Randolph, a fellow Democrat.

A few senators are bucking the trend toward ever more costly campaigns. In Rhode Island, Sen. Claiborne Pell, a four-term Democrat, has accepted no money from PACs, which are special interest groups of people who band together to pool their political contributions and clout. Pell had raised only $199,469 and spent just $91,373 through March, but still had $273,067 in reserve.

Oklahoma's freshman Sen. David Boren also has eschewed PAC contributions, but managed to raise $746,140 so far for his re-election bid. In Senate races, PACs have given $4.7 million to Republicans and $4.5 million to Democrats. But in the House, Democratic candidates have raked in $14.8 million from PACs, compared to $6 million for the GOP.

The analysis of FEC records shows that Democrats had more than $35 million in their war chests as of April 1, compared to about $25 million for Republicans. Part of that advantage consisted of borrowed money: Democrats owed $10 million, Republicans only $4.8 million.

In Senate races, Republicans have raised $28.6 million and spent $26.7 million through March. They had $8.8 million in the bank and owed only $2.5 million.

Their Democratic counterparts raised $24.4 million, spent $18.5 million, put $14.4 million into their war chests and owed $4.8 million.

In House races, Democrats have raised $35.9 million, spent $25.1 million, stockpiled $21.2 million and gone $5.2 million into debt. The smaller GOP contingent raised $22.4 million, spent $15.8 million, had $16.1 million on hand and owed $2.3 million.

Truth About Cancer Masked In Cynicism

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — It was one more in the endless stream of scientific studies that seem to find cancer lurking everywhere.

This time the culprit was beer. Researchers linked it to an excess of rectal cancer in Japanese men in Hawaii.

Such studies pointing to possible causes of cancer are so common they have led many people to conclude that almost everything causes cancer. Forty-six percent of Americans now believe "there's not much a person can do to prevent cancer," according to a government survey.

Such beliefs are unfounded, the experts say.

The actual number of known causes of cancer is small. The National Cancer Institute unofficially lists about 30 causes of cancer. The American Cancer Society's working list includes some 40 substances or activities.

Many of these substances are industrial chemicals or drugs with unpronounceable names and restricted uses. Others are better known — smoking and radiation, for example.

"There aren't a heck of a lot of things known to cause cancer in people — outside of tobacco, which causes 30 percent to 35 percent," says Frank Rauscher, senior vice-president for research at the American Cancer Society.

Finding the causes has proven to be an enormous task. "We know what causes about 50 percent of our cancers," says Rauscher. "The other 50 percent is a gray area. Much of that is thought to be related to diet and nutrition."

Studies to determine exactly which items in the diet might cause cancer — or protect against it — are only beginning, so nothing can be said with certainty.

One of the difficulties is that scientists still do not understand exactly how known cancer-causing agents actually trigger the disease. Another problem is that 30 or 40 years can pass between exposure to a carcinogen and the appearance of cancer, as often happens with lung cancer and smoking.

And, to make things worse, people seem to have differing susceptibilities to carcinogens. Everyone knows someone who smoked heavily for a lifetime and died peacefully of old age.

Earl Pollack, the National Cancer Institute researcher who led the study on beer drinking and rectal cancer, hasn't concluded beer drinking causes cancer.

"All we can say is there was a statistical association" between beer and cancer, he says. "But we can't say it was due to the beer."

It might sound like doubletalk, but Pollack has chosen his words carefully. He is not begging the question.

Maybe beer drinking causes cancer, maybe it doesn't. The most eminent scientists simply don't know.

There are undoubtedly many differences between beer drinkers and non-drinkers. Beer drinkers might smoke more or eat different foods. Pollack took those differences into account, and still found an excess of rectal cancer. But in any statistical study, questions remain about whether all such differences have been properly considered.

The excess rectal cancer in beer drinkers might only appear in Japanese men in Hawaii, for unknown reasons. Or it could be a mere coincidence, a statistical fluke.

"This is sort of a flag to continue to look in this direction," says Pollack, whose study appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine March 8. Many more studies would be needed to prove conclusively that beer causes rectal cancer.

Explaining that to the public, however, can be difficult. If Pollack were asked to do it, he says with a laugh, "I'd refuse."

The closest thing to an official list of causes of cancer is a collection of about 30 volumes prepared by the International Agency for Research on Cancer, located in Lyon, France. The weight of the evidence varies from one substance to the next.

"There's really a continuous range of evidence, from very good evidence to very poor evidence," says Robert McGaughey, a biophysicist in the office of health and environmental assessment of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Scientists have three kinds of tools to search for cancer causes. One is the statistical study like Pollack's, based on medical records and questionnaires.

Each of these studies has its flaws. "You always look back and wish you had asked different questions," says Pollack.

List Of Causes

NEW YORK (AP) — Both the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute have drawn up unofficial lists of substances that cause cancer in humans. Here are the names of the substances that appear on both lists, followed by where the substances are commonly found. This is not a complete list.

Aflatoxins — naturally occurring in grains, peanuts.

Arsenic, inorganic arsenic compounds — pesticides, manufacture of glass and ceramics, food, drinking water, smelting of metal ores.

Benzene — manufacture of chemicals and plastics; paints, adhesives, gasoline fumes.

Benzidine — manufacture of dyes.

Bis(chloromethyl) ether — manufacture of chemicals, plastics.

Chromium, chromium compounds — manufacture of metal alloys and protective coatings on metals; paint, sometimes a contaminant in food and drinking water.

Cyclophosphamide — an anti-cancer drug.

Diethylstilbestrol (DES) — synthetic estrogen (female sex hormone), used to treat hormonal abnormalities, symptoms associated with menopause, sometimes breast and prostate cancer.

Isopropyl oils — manufacture of isopropyl alcohol (rubbing alcohol).

Nickel, nickel compounds — manufacture of metal alloys and metal plating; paint, sometimes a contaminant in food and drinking water.

Soots, tars, mineral oils — manufacture of coal tar and creosote, crude mineral oils and cutting oils, shale oils.

Tobacco, tobacco smoke — cigarettes, pipes, snuff.

Vinyl chloride — manufacture of plastics.

Prisoner Gets Top Award

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — When Gerald Crane started writing his weekly newspaper column, he had two big handicaps. English was his worst subject, and he was doing a 35-year stretch for bank robbery and kidnapping.

A year later, still in prison but his writing considerably improved, the 32-year-old high school dropout beat out five competitors to be honored as the best local columnist in a daily newspaper in Nevada.

Crane said Monday he was not upset he couldn't attend a Nevada State Press Association convention to pick up his award last weekend. "I've had a grin on my face from ear to ear for the past couple of days," he added.

"I was really surprised," he said. "I didn't even know I had been entered in the contest."

Crane gets $15 a week for his "Being There" column written in his Northern Nevada Correctional Center dormitory and run every Monday for the past year in the Nevada Appeal of Carson City.

"I'm absolutely tickled about this," said Dave Osborn, the newspaper's general manager. Osborn said he encouraged Crane to write a regular column after noticing his work in a prison newsletter.

Vern Housewright, the state's prison director, said he too was "pleased" by the award because "it's not often inmates in prison are recognized."

Housewright said, however, that he has "some problems on occasion with some of the things he says in the articles."

Crane also was praised by one of his favorite columnists, Cory Farley of the Reno Gazette-Journal.

"He's in jail and wants to be a columnist? Obviously the rehabilitation process isn't working," Farley said.

Crane, who has been criticized by prison administrators and convicts alike for his views, hopes to be able to get more papers to run his column.

The column runs with a disclaimer that says it has not been approved by prison administrators, Osborn said.

The contest's judges said Crane "writes with conviction (no pun intended) of his subject matter. He tells us about prison life, and, in a sense, what it takes to survive there, both socially and politically ... He has something to say, and he tells it like it is."

"I'm just trying to get people to get along with people, and to see the prison community as not separate from the outside community," Crane said. "We're all part of it. We're just separated by this fence."

Although Crane said he is trying to debunk the "ultra-cool, mysterious image" of prison inmates, he understands why that image persists.

"Otherwise, what would you have?" he said. "A dope in prison for breaking the law."

Crane has served nearly nine years behind bars for the October 1975 kidnapping of the wife of a local bank manager and for attempting to rob the bank.

Crane and his former wife tied up the woman in a motel before going into the bank. The woman escaped and called police, who arrested Crane inside the bank.

Crane, who has since remarried while in prison, grew up in Marin County, Calif., where he was first arrested as a teen-ager after taking some dynamite from a rock quarry.

He pleaded guilty to bank robbery and kidnapping and got a 35-year term. Since then, he has been paroled from the 10-year sentence for robbery and is now serving time on the 25-year sentence imposed for the kidnapping charge.

Safety Board Cites Drinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — More effective measures are needed to detect the use of alcohol by pilots, including tests when licenses are issued to identify problem drinkers, the National Transportation Safety Board says.

The board said there is no evidence of problem drinking among commercial airliner pilots but that alcohol-related accidents are reported every year among general aviation pilots and, in fewer cases, among pilots for air taxi and commuter operations.

The Federal Aviation Administration should establish a minimum blood alcohol level for pilots, require all pilots to consent to blood alcohol tests when applying for licenses and develop a better way to identify problem drinkers, the board said.

Pet A Pet

This week is Be Kind To Animals Week, as well as National Pet Week. The intention is to promote humane care toward animals. Each year Americans spend $1.5 billion on pet food — four times the amount spent on baby food. There are some 500,000 dogs in New York City alone. Pets have changed through the ages. The Chinese during the time of Kublai Khan used trained lions for hunting. And the Egyptians trained baboons to wait on tables.

DO YOU KNOW — What country has the largest cat population in the world?

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A great day for you to carry through with whatever course of action has already been decided upon and for you to show off how well you can reduce your ideas to a working success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to discuss with experts how to improve your work routines and become more efficient. Be cooperative with associates.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Sit down with associates and know just what is expected of you and how to have more mutual success in the days ahead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can improve home conditions by agreeing with ideas of kin more. Don't neglect younger persons who are eager for guidance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get in touch with persons who know all about entertainment that is foreign to you but would like to get into.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Study monetary brochures before you handle whatever it is you have in mind and become better informed.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure you know your true desires before going after them since there is every chance you will gain them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy and make a workable plan for the days ahead and then put it quickly in operation. Make life easier by being modern.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to get friends to help you in your aims and take suggestions that can bring you greater success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study what your true position is with those who can assist you in your worldly goals. State your ideas and ambitions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the right interests through which you can make progress in some plan that you have. Be tactful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you have handled those duties that your mate requested, your romantic life is fine, but if not, get them done quickly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you don't like terms of a contract with partners, say so, but be very precise. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who will get along well with associates because of the ability to find out what is expected of him, or her and also gain their good will. However, there could be a streak of stubbornness here that has to be curbed.

Program Breeds Disease-Resistant Tree

HARRISVILLE, N.H. (AP) — Armed with a razor blade and working in a converted 137-year-old mill, Zeke Goodband is raising thousands of tiny elm trees that he hopes soon will spread their branches across the country.

They are new American Liberty Elms. And in much the same way as humans can shake colds, the trees sprouting at the Elm Research Institute are able to shake the Dutch elm disease that has wiped out millions of stately elms during the last 50 years.

The institute is so confident of the trees, part of its "Johnny Elmseed" project to re-elm America, that they come with a 10-year guarantee.

"If they die of Dutch elm disease, we will replace the tree, free, at the size they are when they die," said institute spokeswoman Yvonne Spalhoff.

Eugene Smalley, a professor of plant pathology and forestry, helped develop the disease-resistant tree at the University of Wisconsin. He had people throughout the country send him seeds from healthy American elms, which he planted 20 years ago.

Smalley cross-bred the trees, injected them with Dutch elm virus, cross-bred them again and administered more injections to help ward off the disease.

He sent the root cuttings from the third generation trees to the institute in November, and that's when Goodband went to work.

"I just keep them growing as fast as I can," said Goodband, a horticulturalist who is the institute's "propagator."

He cultivated the roots until they began growing, cut small leaves from the sprouts, then replanted the cuttings until they too sprouted.

Goodband does it over and over each day, gingerly cutting away leaves with his razor blade, dipping their stems in rooting hormone and sticking them in a special moss-and-sand-based mixture until they root and can be planted in soil.

Now, six months after he first planted 1,000 root pieces, he has about 5,000 sprouting trees. As they grow about one foot a month, he continues cutting and replanting sprouts in a warm, humid room lit 18-24 hours a day year round to stimulate rapid growth.

Chinese Court Sentences School Student To Death

PEKING (AP) — A high school student who stole 31 cultural relics and bashed a policeman with an iron bar during a robbery has been sentenced to death in Hunan province, the official news agency Xinhua reported today.

Xinhua said Xu Fandi was sentenced Monday but the Changsha Intermediate People's Court suspended the execution for two years because he under 18 when he committed the crimes last October.

In China's penal system, people under 18 who commit capital crimes often get suspended death sentences, which are later usually commuted to life imprisonment.

Xinhua said Xu broke into the Hunan Provincial Museum last October, smashed seven showcases and stole relics from a collection of burial objects from the Han Dynasty (206 B.C.-220 A.D.).

"He also struck a guard with an iron bar during a robbery at the Changsha Friendship Store a week later," it said.

Police recovered most of the stolen articles, Xinhua said.

Truman's Early Life Was Full Of Flops

By MARK PETERSON
Associated Press Writer
INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Harry Truman went to work in a zinc and lead mine he bought in early 1916 with the fanciful notion he would strike it rich and thereby persuade his well-to-do sweetheart to marry him.

"Just think what a win would mean," Harry wrote in an Aug. 19, 1916, letter to Bess Wallace, the woman he loved. "All my debts paid (something that no one of the name ever accomplished), a city home, a country home, some automobiles and flying machines — and who knows but maybe a yat (yacht? what?), and you to boss the whole thing."

A few weeks later, the mining company went bust. And Bess, unwilling to become a farm wife, was still putting off marriage.

But Truman didn't give up. When the mine slipped into disaster, he and a couple of partners formed an oil investment and drilling company.

"If this venture blows, I'll know I'm hoodooed," Truman said in a letter to Bess in January 1917. "I don't want to be a bloated plutocrat, but I would like very much to have enough to tell my creditors to take my liabilities off the books and then have something left over ... just enough for a country place, a machine or two, and a couple of new dresses a year for the lady."

Truman worked hard, but his bad luck continued. He and his associates, for example, stopped drilling a well in Kansas, a few hundred feet short of tapping what years later proved to be one of the richest oil fields in the state.

"I seem to have a grand and admirable ability for calling tails when heads come up," Truman wrote to Bess in May 1917.

By this time, however, the United States had entered World War I. Truman signed up to lead an artillery battery in France, leaving his dwindling share of the oil business up for grabs and glowing with a promise from Bess that she would marry him upon his return.

The two were married in 1919, and Truman made a final stab at business. He started a haberdashery, but that too only lasted a few years. He then started a political career that carried him to the White House.

Truman's brief foray into the mining and oil businesses is an almost forgotten chapter of his life, which began 100 years ago in a small house in Lamar, Mo. Truman himself did not talk about it much.

"It was a classic case of a naive investor's bad timing and bad luck," said Thomas Heed, a history professor at Ramapo College in New Jersey who is writing a book on Truman's pre-presidential years.

Truman got into mining with money from his mother and an uncle. He and two friends — Jerry Culbertson and Thomas Hughes — purchased a mine in Commerce, Okla. But the venture didn't work out. Truman figured his net loss at $7,500.

Still eager to leave farming and to impress Bess and her mother, who scorned him, he entered the oil business with Culbertson and an Oklahoma wildcatter named David Morgan.

With money from investors, they acquired thousands of acres of oil leases in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana. They drilled and drilled, but all they hit was some salt water in Louisiana.

In Kansas, Truman and his partners would have struck the prodigious Teter Oil Pool had they gone just a few hundred feet deeper. In Texas, they drilled a well 2,500 feet and came up empty. Another company took it over, went 500 feet deeper and struck a gusher.

Fired Nurse Loses Appeal

DALLAS (AP) — Nurse-dispatcher Billye Jean Myrick, who delayed sending an ambulance for a dying woman while chastising a distraught relative for his language, has lost an appeal to get back her job with the fire department.

Ms. Myrick's attorney said he was not surprised that Assistant City Manager Richard Knight on Monday upheld the firing of the nurse and the demotion of her supervisor, Donald Greene, from captain to lieutenant.

The incident occurred Jan. 5 when Larry Boff called to request aid for his 60-year-old stepmother. Ms. Myrick repeatedly insisted on speaking to the woman, despite Boff's protests, and Greene broke in to warn Boff against cursing.

The City has published a new services brochure, "Greenville: A Gold Mine of City Services". For your free copy, call the City Manager's Office at 752-4137.

Inflation Continues In Houses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the days of huge annual increases in the value of homes may be a thing of the past in most of the country, the inflationary spiral continues in New York and Atlanta and to a lesser extent in five other U.S. cities, according to figures from the National Association of Realtors.

From the first quarter of last year to the first quarter of this year, the cost of a median-priced home in the New York metropolitan area, which includes Long Island and Newark, N.J., rose almost 21 percent from $83,100 to $100,500.

Half of all houses sell for more than a median price and half for less.

New York thus joined four California cities where half of all resale houses sell for more than $100,000.

The market of Anaheim-Santa Ana tops the list at $133,500, but that is only 1.5 percent higher than a year ago. San Francisco, San Jose and Los Angeles, in that order, round out the top four.

San Diego is in sixth place with a median price of $96,300, actually down from last year, but by less than a full percentage point.

The metropolitan Washington, D.C., area is the only other area where most homes cost more than $90,000.

Atlanta's median housing cost increased was 18.1 percent over the year, from $57,500 to $67,900.

Despite the big increase, Atlanta's median-priced home is near the national average of $71,800.

Other cities with double-digit percentage increases over 1983's first quarter are: Boston (13.7), Providence (12.1), Albany, N.Y. (11.2), Dallas-Fort Worth (11.1) and San Antonio (11.0).

Prices went down for median-priced resale homes in five areas last year, Louisville; Indianapolis, Ind.; Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Nashville, Tenn. and San Diego. Louisville showed the largest drop with an 8.1 percent decline.

Louisville had the lowest median price in the country. Half of all resale homes there cost less than $47,900.

COMPUTERS AND OIL

DALLAS (AP) — There's an important role for computers to play in the oil industry, according to W. H. Bricker.

Bricker, chairman of Diamond Shamrock, said at a computer technology conference here recently that in the current competitive gasoline market cutting costs is critical. Bricker says the computer is one of the major tools which will help accomplish this goal.

He says the equipment can be used to help decrease the number of dry holes as well as to reduce the risk of costly exploration.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE DOCTOR'S RASH COMMAND TO AILING DOG: HEAL.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Population Nears 4.8 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's population has doubled since World War II, currently totaling nearly 4.8 billion people, a private Washington research group reports.

And if current trends continue, the total will double again within 40 years, according to the study by the Population Reference Bureau.

The bureau group estimated world population at 4,762,000,000, up nearly 85 million from last year. That's almost enough new people to populate Mexico and Austria combined.

The statistics are included in the group's "World Population Data Sheet," an annual reference publication that also shows a variety of statistics for many nations.

Children born in the more developed countries, for example, can expect to live 15 years longer than newborns in the developing countries, the 1984 data sheet reports.

Demographers Carl Haub and Mary Kent of the reference bureau prepared the study, which showed annual world population growth of 1.7 percent.

If current trends continue, they said, world population will reach 5 billion by 1987, 6 billion by the turn of the century, and will double in 40 years.

They said that, on average, newborns in 1984 can anticipate living 61 years. But their actual outlook varies considerably depending on where they were born.

Icelanders topped the life expectancy list with new residents of that tiny nation expected to average 77 years.

On the other hand, the outlook is only for 40 years of life for the typical newborn in Ethiopia, Chad and Afghanistan — nations torn by war and famine in recent years.

Overall, life expectancy was 73 years for developed areas and 58 for developing ones.

Haub and Ms. Kent noted that attitudes toward population growth have changed sharply since the 1960s, with the governments of 62 developing nations now showing concern about high birth rates and the danger of excess population impeding development.

Only four Third World nations were expressing such concerns in the 1960s, the two population experts said.

Developing nations, which experienced sharp increases in recent years as improved nutrition and medical care lowered their death rates dramatically, have begun to realize the dangers of large populations, Haub and Ms. Kent said.

At the same time, some European nations are concerned about declines, they noted, with falling populations already observed in Denmark, Hungary and West Germany.

Similar patterns are likely in some other developed nations, they reported, and countries with large numbers of foreign guest workers have begun taking steps to restrict new arrivals.

Other highlights from the world population study include:

—Bangladesh is likely to pass the 100 million population mark this year.

—The stringent efforts to hold down China's population growth are having an effect, but that nation's more than 1 billion people will continue adding to their numbers.

—Women in less developed countries average about five children each, compared to two or less in the more developed nations.

—Youth predominates in the Third World, with more than 40 percent of the people under age 15 in those nations.

Life Spans Range Afar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newborns in developed nations can expect to outlive babies arriving in the Third World by 15 years, according to population estimates by the Population Reference Bureau.

The private, Washington-based study group said Iceland residents have the highest life expectancy at 77 years, while it is only 40 years for newborns in Ethiopia, Chad and Afghanistan.

In North America, residents of the United States and Canada have a life expectancy of 74 years — as do Cubans. In other areas of the Americas, the expectancy drops as low as 52 years in Haiti and 56 years in Nicaragua.

EPA Sees Asbestos As Concern

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is looking for ways to eliminate cancer-causing asbestos from more than 14,000 schools and other public buildings where it is part of wall and ceiling construction.

The agency acknowledges that its prodding for voluntary action against the carcinogen has failed.

This week, scientists, union officials and parents at a hearing urged the EPA to require the substance be removed from all remaining public buildings, especially the schools. EPA officials were told that the asbestos problem is a national one which states and local governments can't afford to deal with.

"They know it's there. They would like to do something about it but do not have the economic wherewithal to do it," said Louis Kitchen, director of government services for the Ohio Association of Public Employees.

Asbestos was used in public building construction and insulation until it was pinpointed as a cancer-causing agent in humans in the late 1970s. The EPA estimates costs of $2 to $13 per square foot to remove asbestos from insulated or treated walls, ceilings or other structures. The estimate does not include the cost of replacement and the agency has no guess of what the overall bill would be, EPA spokesman Dave Ryan said.

Among the health problems linked with asbestos are asbestosis or pulmonary fibrosis, a non-malignant disease which causes degeneration of lung tissue and scarring which can lead to interference with normal functions, and mesothelioma, an irreversible, fatal cancer which spreads over the lungs' surface and the stomach lining.

The EPA plans similar hearings in Boston, San Francisco and Chicago in June.

"Ultimately, what you will do is decide who will live and who will die," said Irving Selikoff, director of the Environmental Sciences laboratory at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine and an authority on the health effects of asbestos.

"We're gazing at children being exposed to asbestos. We're seeing teachers, personnel being exposed. We don't really need any additional research about what can happen. What we need now is controls."

The EPA hearing grew out of a petition filed by the Service Employees International Union seeking a rule which would assure the removal of asbestos from schools and other types of public buildings.

National Education Association Vice President Keith Geiger estimated that as many as 650,000 teachers and other personnel and 3 million children are exposed to asbestos every school day in 14,000 institutions. He described asbestos as "literally a time bomb."

"An emergency exists in our schools. Each day that the asbestos hazard goes unabated, the likelihood increases that there will be more victims," he said.

Regulations which went into effect in May 1982 required local education agencies to identify school with friable asbestos, notify Parent Teacher Associations and school employees in writing of its presence and post warnings to school employees of the potential hazard. The objective was to generate local pressure on schools to remove harmful asbestos.

"The asbestos in schools programs is not working very well," said EPA spokesman Ryan. "We are rethinking our position. We are looking for ways now to make it work."

The hazards occur when asbestos fibers are inhaled. Asbestos is most dangerous when it is in a friable state, that is when it can be crumbled, pulverized or reduced to powder by pressure, vibration, deterioration or damage. In such a state, a ball hitting a gymnasium wall or ceiling, or even during custodial work could be sufficient to shake free millions of asbestos particles which could then be inhaled.

Navy Completes Ocean Exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has ended a 12-day exercise in which two U.S. warships worked with Salvadoran and Honduran patrol boats on ways to intercept weapons-carrying Nicaraguan vessels crossing the Gulf of Fonseca.

Pentagon officials said the exercise ended on schedule when the U.S. destroyer Deyo left the gulf for the Panama Canal. The operation was described in an April 26 announcement as "a limited-scale naval surveillance maneuver."

The departure of the Deyo left the U.S. guided missile frigate Reid on station outside the gulf, where the Navy has kept a warship for more than two years to monitor Nicaraguan communications and detect small craft laden with weapons headed for El Salvador.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

The Spring North American Championships in San Antonio, Texas in March marked the start of a year-long trek for Yvan and Rolande Pageau of Montreal. After playing in the first event of that tournament, they set out in their camper to play 365 games of bridge in the coming year, each in a different town or city in the U.S. or Canada. They are publicizing the 1985 Spring Championships, which will be held in their home town. Their 365th game will be in the first event of those championships.

The Pageaus received a pleasant sendoff from San Antonio — they won their section of the tournament on the evening preceding their departure. On this hand from the event, Yvan Pageau received a good score for making an overtrick at four hearts.

West was remarkably quiet in the auction, and most cooperative on defense. He led the king of spades and shifted to the nine of diamonds. East's king lost to the ace, and declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in hand. He then led a spade toward dummy. Declarer was able to discard his low diamond on the queen of spades and then finesse East for the jack of diamonds to make 11 tricks.

Better defense is for West to continue with ace of spades and another, allowing East to ruff away the queen of spades. But declarer can still come to an overtrick if he guesses the distribution. He cashes the ace and king of trumps, then finessses the ten of diamonds. He gets back to the table with the king of clubs for a second diamond finesse, cashes the ace of diamonds and ruffs his last diamond on the table. Now his hand is high and he can claim the rest of the tricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Islands Seeking Health Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pacific islands administered by the United States since World War II are asking the government for $2 million to fight leprosy, cholera and tuberculosis.

Baimey Oltter, vice president of the Federated States of Micronesia, asked for the funds in a round of Washington talks last week. Officials here say the three diseases are a serious problem in the islands, which have a population of 100,000 and have been self governing since 1979.

Janet McCoy, U.S. high commissioner for the islands, said the government stands ready "to help in any way we can." Federation President Tosiwo Nakayama said Sunday that, with 1,075 new cases of leprosy last year, the majority of them in the capital of Ponape, the disease has reached "the epidemic stage."
