World Court Bans Mines

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court ordered the United States today to halt the mining of Nicaraguan harbors and other aggressive actions against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

The court, judicial arm of the United Nations, has no enforcement powers and depends on voluntary adherence to its rulings. The United States has said it would not accept the Court's jurisdiction in the case.

In a unanimous ruling, the 15-judge panel ruled that "the United States should cease and refrain from any actions in restricting, blocking or endangering the access to Nicaragua and from Nicaraguan ports and in particular the laying of mines."

The court said in a separate ruling — from which a U.S. judge dissented — that "the right to sovereignty and political independence of Nicaragua should be respected like the sovereignty and political independence of any other state in the region or in the world, and that it should not be jeopardized by military or paramilitary actions."

The rulings were interim measures requested by Nicaragua while the court deliberates on the Sandinista government's complaint that the United States violated international law by supporting anti-Sandinista rebels and directing the mining of Nicaraguan harbors.

Under the Court's procedural statutes, it is empowered to take the interim measures when the sovereign rights of a nation are in jeopardy, even before final adjudication in a case.

Carlos Arguello, his country's chief representative at the Court, said that the Court decision was "a moral victory" for Nicaragua, and that the ruling of "a prestigious organ" like the World Court would have a "positive effect" on the Contadora peace process.

The Contadora group, consisting of Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, and Mexico, is negotiating with all Central American nations in an effort to reach a solution to the political, social, and military problems of the region.

Davis R. Robinson, the U.S. representative in the case, declined to comment on the Court's ruling. "I first have to talk with the State Department," he said.

The dissenting opinion on the Court's ruling that Nicaragua's sovereignty should be respected came from U.S. Judge Stephen M. Schwebel. He said he "emphatically" disagreed because "Nicaragua itself is charged with violating the territorial integrity and political independence of its neighbors."

County Board Returns Hold As Simpson Votes Counted

By STUART SAVAGE

Vote totals from the Simpson precinct in Tuesday's primary election failed to change the results of balloting in the county's other 23 precincts in races for three seats on the Board of County Commissioners.

However, a ruling by the Board of Elections Tuesday, disqualifying Frank Grooms as an eligible candidate for the Greenville Township seat on the board, gives incumbent Charles Gaskins a clear majority, based on unofficial returns.

Simpson vote totals in the commissioners' races were not available because the reporting forms were locked in the precinct ballot box until they were opened Wednesday at the Board of Elections office.

In the first district race for the representative from Greenville

Township, Gaskins, who received 7,162 votes from the other 23 precincts, retained his lead by gaining another 260 votes in Simpson, for a total of 7,422 votes. Second place finisher Jim Rouse added 146 votes from Simpson to his 4,044 votes from the other precinct to finish with a total of 4,190, while third-place finisher Tom Johnson received 69 votes in Simpson to add to his previous total of 2,187 votes to finish with a total of 2,256.

Grooms, ineligible because he is not a Greenville Township resident, received 72 votes in Simpson, giving him a total county-wide of 1,689 votes.

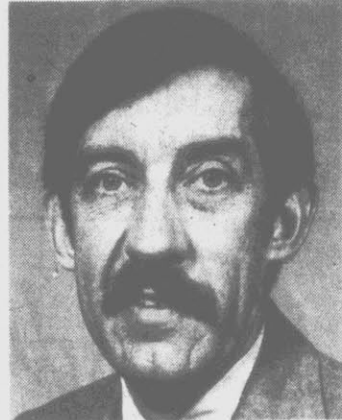

While Grooms lives inside the Greenville city limits and the Greenville school district, his home is in Winterville Township.

Clifton Everett Jr., chairman of the elections board, said since Grooms lives in "an ineligible township," he is ineligible to be a candidate for the seat and "we have to discount his votes."

Florida Executes Black Murderer

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — James Adams died in Florida's electric chair today for the beating death of a millionaire rancher more than a decade ago, becoming the fifth convict executed in the state since the death penalty was restored and the 19th nationwide.

Adams, 47, was pronounced dead at 7:11 a.m. at the Florida State Prison, where four other men have been put to death since May 1979. In a final statement, he urged other death row inmates to "keep on fighting."

He was convicted of the murder of Edgar Brown of Fort Pierce, a rancher and former St. Lucie County sheriff's deputy who was beaten to death during a Nov. 12, 1973, robbery at his home.

"I don't care what they do to him," said Al Brown, the victim's son. "I have mixed feelings about the whole thing."

Adams was the first black electrocuted in Florida in 20 years. Three other black men have been executed in other states since the death penalty was restored in 1976.

The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way for Adams' execution Wednesday night, voting 5-4 in favor of the state's emergency request to lift a stay of execution which a lower federal panel granted a day earlier.

Tuesday afternoon, Adams told reporters at a prison news conference that he was innocent and had been "railroaded."

But the Tennessee native, who studied in prison so he could read the Bible, said he had become a confirmed Christian and had forgiven his prosecutors. He said he "wouldn't hesitate to walk like a man" to the electric chair, convinced he would soon be "with the Lord."

Shortly before 5 a.m., today, he ate a last meal of steak and eggs, baked potato, milk and coffee.

He entered the death chamber just before 7 a.m., sat in the oak electric chair and looked at defense attorney Richard Greene, who was sitting in the front row of witnesses on the other side of a glass window.

Asked by the prison superintendent if he had any last words, Adams replied: "To all the men on death row, keep on fighting, because it's wrong and immoral. I have no animosity toward anyone. I only have love, that's all."

He was strapped in and a black mask was placed over his face. At 7:05 a.m. prison superintendent Richard Dugger, who had an open line to the governor's office, nodded to Department of Corrections Col. Randall Music to trip a circuit breaker behind the chair.

Adams' fists clenched and slowly relaxed as 2,000 volts passed through his body for a little more than a minute.

After his pulse and breathing were checked, Dr. Cahn Nguyen pronounced him dead at 7:11 a.m.

City Seeks Lease of ECVC Pool

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A lease agreement between the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and Eastern Carolina Vocational Center (ECVC) for operation of the center's pool and other recreational facilities was approved at the Wednesday meeting of the Recreation and Parks Commission.

The proposed agreement between the two agencies will be presented to the City Council at that body's June meeting. If the city approves, the agreement will go into effect July 1.

Commissioner Lib Proctor, chairman of the committee working with officials of ECVC, said she and members of ECVC agreed the proposal drawn up is a good working arrangement. Under terms of the agreement, staff of the Recreation and Parks Department will operate the recreation program at ECVC, designed to include activities both for clients at the center and for the general public. ECVC will also provide a staff member.

Department director Boyd Lee said the arrangement would not result in having to hire additional city staff personnel, that the current staff could be shifted to meet staffing requirements at EVCC.

Recreation Director Charles Vincent and Summer Programs Director Carol Whiteford presented a preview of the overall program planned for the summer.

"A major difference this year from before is that we have changed registration procedures," Vincent noted. "This year, registration for the programs will take place earlier, on May 29, 30, and 31, and will be during evening hours, 7 to 9. Jaycee Park will be the central registration point including signing up for swimming and tennis."

Vincent said there is to be no early registration, or registration by phone, and that a person will be allowed only to sign for himself and immediate members of his family. "We are going to police this very closely to insure fair registration procedures," he commented.

Ms. Whiteford outlined the wide range of programs planned. These include day camps, softball, a soccer camp, beginning gymnastics, arts, crafts, music, athletics for preschoolers, and a wide variety of other programs for persons of all ages from tots to senior citizens.

"One of our new programs we are excited about is break dancing for youngsters," Whiteford said. "This will be given for six 30-minute sessions over a period of three weeks for children ages 6 to 12."

The mobile recreation unit, termed by Ms. Whiteford as "one of our most popular programs," will be traveling to different parks as well as to church grounds in some community areas.

In his monthly report for April, Lee called attention to the tremendous increase of public usage of facilities at River Park North. "It's incredible, the surge of interest. I think within a year it will be the most used facility of any in Greenville."

Among activities during April noted in the report is the issuance of 306 daily fishing permits at $1 each, 33 boat launch permits at $2 each, and several instances of picnic shelter reservations.

"Howard Vainright (director of River Park North) has reported that the nature study program for school children is booked solid every school day for the remainder of the school year, with additional requests received that cannot be filled," Lee commented.

Percy Cox Rules Out Senate Race

Percy R. Cox, who announced in March that he would be a Democratic candidate for the state's 9th Senatorial District seat, said today that due to time and business considerations he does not plan to file for the post.

The former Greenville mayor said he was "having a hard time finding the time to do the campaigning I knew I would have to do" and had learned that he would have to be out of town during the upcoming filing period. Cox also said his Greenville business is taking more of his time than he had anticipated.

Due to the delayed senate re-districting schedule, the new filing period for district's affected by the plan will be May 18-25. Cox and Greenville attorney Tom Taft had announced earlier intentions to seek the 9th District seat representing precincts in Pitt, Beaufort and Martin counties.

The special primary election has been set for July 17.

Couple Says Vows In Kinston Church Saturday Afternoon

KINSTON — Gordon Street Christian Church was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Paula Jewelle Baker and Raymond Arthur Bryan III. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Robert E. Mooty at five o'clock.

The bride is the daughter of Jewelle Baker Gardner of Kinston and the late Paul Thomas Baker. Her stepfather was the late Fred Calvin Gardner. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Arthur Bryan Jr. of Goldsboro are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Paul Thomas Baker Jr. She wore an original Frank Masandrea white silk taffeta gown from the diamond collection. The fitted bodice featured ruffled sleeves and V-neckline, front and back defined with silk Venise lace motifs with white silk roses on the shoulder. The full silk taffeta skirt had silk Venise lace motifs around the waist and extended into a chapel train. Her mantilla was custom designed with a garland of seed pearls and roses fashioned of silk taffeta with a chapel length silk illusion with a border of silk Venise lace motifs. She carried a cascade of white silk roses, lily of the valley, baby's breath, snapdragons and tube roses. She wore pearl and diamond earrings, a gift to her mother from her father and a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Stephen Collier Bryan of Goldsboro, brother of the bridegroom, Edward Bryan Edwards of Raleigh, Timothy Kivett Franklin of Clarksville, Tenn., Charles Jeffrey Daniels and Jack Sterling Scott Jr. of Cary and J. Michah Pate III of Raleigh.

The honor attendant was Angela Elizabeth Gardner Jones of Kinston, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Trudy Lynette Miller of Lewiston, Texas, niece of the bride, Mary Anna Gibson of Herndon, Va., cousin of the bride, Mary Scott Gilbert, Ann Morris Bryan of Goldsboro, sister of the bridegroom, Audrey Raye Sugg, cousin of the bride, and Polly Elizabeth Jones, niece of the bride, both of Kinston.

Blanche Baker Miller of Lewiston, Texas, sister of the bride, was lady in waiting. Honorary bridesmaids included Joanne Frances Miller of Elkton, Va., Jean Alice Dixon of Greenville, Ginger Diane Dixon of Kinston, Carolyn Elizabeth Wooten of Wilmington, Shari Robin Deffenbaugh of Atlantic Beach, Terri Jan Bayles and Brenda Moore Bost, both of Raleigh.

Bari Kristian Jones of Kinston, niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Crystal Lane Miller of Lewiston, Texas, great-niece of the bride.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Gail Cooper, organist. Mrs. Melvin Whitfield directed the wedding.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to Negri, Jamaica, and Acapulco, Mexico.

The bride graduated from Arendell Parrott Academy in Kinston and attended the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Saint Mary's College in Raleigh, Southern Seminary College in Buena Vista, Va., and East Carolina University. She graduated from the Barbizon School of Modelling in Raleigh and is a free lance model.

The bridegroom graduated from Wayne Country Day in Goldsboro and attended North Texas State University in Denton, Texas, and graduated from N.C. State University in Raleigh. He was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. He is self-employed at Bryan Insurance Services, Inc., in Raleigh and associated with Aetna Casualty and Surety Co.

A reception was held at the Kinston Country Club after the wedding. A wedding brunch was given Saturday at the Walnut Creek Country Club in Goldsboro by relatives of the bridegroom. An after-rehearsal dinner-dance was also held at the country club. A luncheon for the bride was held at her home for immediate family and out-of-town guests Friday. On Thursday, a bridesmaids luncheon was held at Zachary's and a cookout was held at the home of the bride for immediate family and out-of-town guests.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

It's all over, Levi Strauss. Sorry, Vanderbilt, Jordache and Sasson.

Tougho, Lee, Wrangler and Sedgefield.

Like the Stone Age, the Ice Age and the Glacier Age that have passed into history, the Denim Age is behind us now. The trend will diminish in a couple of weeks.

How do I know? Because last Saturday I bought my first pair of jeans. That's right. For the first time in my life I'm wearing the pants that brought dialogue between mother and son, joined urbans with suburbans and established detente with Russia.

This is not the first time I've put a fashion to death. When I was a teenager, every girl in the entire Western world wore a poodle skirt. (A skirt with enough cloth to slip-cover New Jersey with a big poodle applied on it.) The Christmas I got one, I never saw another poodle skirt again. I had missed the trend by two days.

I'll bet you can almost guess the week I bought my husband a Nehru jacket and the hour my hemline went up. Basically, I'm a fashion conservative. What does that mean? It means I watch what women wear on the Academy Awards show and then I start to work on the part of the body that is "in."

It should be of comfort to designers to know there are some fashions I can't touch. The "Dynasty" gowns made out of bugles and beads are safe, for the same reason you don't light up a cold sore.

The jump suits should flourish for another hundred years/until a cure for menopause, whichever comes first. And I certainly won't touch the "Flashdance," raggy-off-the-shoulder T-shirts, or the bathing suits with the leg opening that goes all the way to the armpits. I tried on a pair of those sleeveless "fun" overalls the other day with an arm opening that went down to the hip, but decided I would be tempted to store food in there, so I put it back on the rack.

Why did I wait so long to buy a pair of jeans? A woman can only take so much rejection. When they first came out, we were light years apart. Then they made a full leg that I could actually get over my feet. They added pleats. They preshrunk the fabric. They introduced a material that breathed. They acknowledged the fact that many women are not built like TV antennas. And, finally, they put elastic in the back of the waistband. It was like putting a sun screen with a cowboy on it in the back window of a Porsche. They signed their own death warrant.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Wife Is Losing Battle To Catch Hubby's Eye

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a problem, although he doesn't think it's a problem.

We don't get a chance to talk much because he's an officer in the U.S. Army and works long hours. Anyway, whenever he talks to me he always looks somewhere else—at the TV, a newspaper or just out into space.

I've tried turning off the TV (with his permission) and waiting until he has finished reading the newspaper, but he refuses to look at me when he talks to me. When I bring this to his attention, he says he doesn't have to look at me to hear what I'm saying. I say he's being rude and makes me feel like nothing.

Who is right and what do you suggest? It is driving me nuts. In case you're wondering, I wear makeup, fix my hair pretty and look my best when he's home, so it's not that I'm hard to look at.

HURT
DEAR HURT: Maybe it has something to do with his military indoctrination. (Eyes front!) Or he could be one of those exceptionally shy people who finds eye contact difficult, if not painful. If so, he can overcome it with therapy. In the meantime, try this: Instead of telling him he's being rude, tell him that you are hurt and made to feel like nothing when he refuses to look at you when he talks to you.

DEAR ABBY: Clyde married Rita in 1951 in Georgia. (They had two babies first.) Then Clyde and Rita went their separate ways. No divorce!

Clyde then married Bertha in Tennessee in 1958 and left her after a couple of months. Clyde Jr. was born in 1959. No divorce. (They didn't see each other again until Clyde Jr. was 16.)

In 1961, Clyde married Agnes in Michigan. They had a big wedding. Clyde and Agnes had five children.

First question: Who is legally Clyde's wife—Rita, Bertha or Agnes? Second question: Upon Clyde's death, which wife is entitled to his Social Security benefits?

No effort has been made to untangle this mess, but since I am closely involved (a relative), I need some answers.

INTERESTED PARTY

DEAR INTERESTED: Clyde's first wife (Rita) is his legal wife; however, Bertha and Agnes (depending on state laws) could also have some rights concerning Social Security benefits. Interested parties should consult a lawyer, or their local state or county bar associations.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Nod Of Approval

Let's hope the surplus in state revenues forecast by the executive director of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners proves accurate.

Ron Aycock said recently that due to the state's conservative revenue growth estimates for the year, the General Assembly could have almost $500 million to divvy up for key projects when it convenes for its short session in June.

If that's true, one group that will expect its share in the form of salary improvements will be public school teachers. Other state employees would also be in line for adjustments, said Aycock.

Virtually every candidate for governor has said he would consider education in general and improved teacher pay specifically among first orders of business under a new administration.

That's one issue we can nod our heads on. Budget problems and wage freezes have delayed paycheck increases for teachers and other state workers. School boards and county governments have voiced disappointment in state funding levels for public education.

Whether money is earmarked to offer teachers across-the-board, longevity or merit raises, or a combination, the Legislature should take a look at salaries and the financial duties of state and local governments for public schools.

Our lawmakers will have important education decisions to ponder this summer in what is traditionally a perfunctory session.

Enough Is Enough

We found it particularly fascinating that, of the handful of resolutions adopted by the North Carolina Medical Society's House of Delegates, three displayed their concern over vehicular and traffic accidents.

One would require use of vehicle seat belts, shoulder harnesses and head-rests. Another would forbid off-road motorcycle racing by those under age 16. The third was encouraging the American Medical Association to push for stronger curbs on drunken driving nationwide.

It suggests our doctors are fed up with self-inflicted injuries, maiming and deaths; they have enough problems dealing with other types of accidents and coping with common and uncommon health problems.

It's All In The Price Of A Corned Beef Sandwich

The president keeps saying that inflation is way down, and he has government statistics to prove it. But if it is, President Reagan doesn't buy his corned beef sandwiches from the same delicatessen I do.

In 1980 a corned beef sandwich on rye at Ben's cost me $1.50, including a nice large slice of dill pickle. The same sandwich today costs $3, although I've noticed the rye bread slices are smaller and the pickle is much thinner.

"How come," I asked Ben, "if Reagan says he's cut down inflation to 5 percent, your corned beef sandwich costs twice as much as it did when he took office?"

Ben was steaming. "If you think I'm making more money on a $3 sandwich than I was when it was $1.50, then you're crazy."

"According to the Department of Agriculture, food prices have been holding steady."

"I don't know from food prices," Ben said. "But there is more that goes into a corned beef sandwich than bread, beef and Russian dressing."

"What's that?"

"City taxes, Social Security and health benefits for my employees. My electric bill looks like monthly rent, and my telephone bill now looks like my electric bill. How come those hot shot statisticians in the government don't take those things into account before they publish their figures?"

"Don't get mad at me, Ben. I was curious as to why your prices had doubled in a period of single-digit inflation."

I apparently opened a can of beans. Ben said, "You see that pipe up there that is leaking? In 1980 the plumber charged me $30 to walk in the door. Now he wants $60. So what does a government computer know about plumbers?"

Ben lifted one foot over the counter. "I bought these shoes last week. They cost me $75. The same shoe two years ago cost $45. Why don't you ask a shoe store owner why it costs $30 more if inflation is so low?"

I tried to change the subject. "How's your wife?"

"She just got out of the hospital. Her room cost $400 a day. The same room three years ago cost $190. They threw in a television set for free then. Now they charge $5 a day for it. The doctor used to charge $25 a visit. Now you have to pay $50 up front, and wait twice as long to see him. That all goes into the price of a corned beef sandwich."

"You want to know about my kid? In 1980 his tuition was $6,000. This year it's up to $9,000. It's a bargain compared to how much more I'm paying for his automobile insurance.

The president says interest rates are down to 11.5 percent. Maybe for Ed Meese. But own a delicatessen and see if you can get a loan for less than 14.5 percent. Put that in your corned beef sandwich and eat it."

"The price of gas is down," I said.

"So how come the guy who supplies my corned beef is now charging 20 percent more for delivering it? You see this brown bag? It isn't even made by human beings any more. It's made by robots. Every six months it goes up two cents."

"I'm sure everything you say is true, Ben," I told him, "but government statistics don't lie. Reagan has cooled inflation and he has the printouts to prove it."

"Then why has my laundry bill for aprons risen 15 percent?"

"Probably because aprons aren't included in the price of the index."

"Nothing that goes up seems to be included in the price index. If you want to make a big deal about what I'm charging now compared to 1980, why has the price of the Sunday paper you write for gone up 25 percent?"

"That's simple. We had to raise it, or no one on our staff could afford your corned beef sandwiches."

CWIP May Face Rocky Road

RALEIGH — The political rhetoric of 1984 has been sounding pretty much like that of 1982, and that has to be bad news for the state's utilities.

In the 1982 legislative session, the usually utility-loving Legislature spanked the state's utilities with a pair of setbacks. They acted only after months of heightened public debate about alleged abuses of the adjustment fuel clause and the state's Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) law.

Although anti-utility sentiment was extremely strong at the time, the assembly wasn't expected to deal with anything other than Gov. Jim Hunt's plan to fix up the fuel adjustment clause. But, on the floor of the House, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, stood up one afternoon and introduced an amendment that took away the utility's automatic right to CWIP charges. The assembly passed both.

In 1983, the utility lobby, stung by those two setbacks, laid low. No major utility bills were introduced and the assembly's utilities committees had little more to do than sit around. (Some pro-utility legislators, angry that they couldn't help their utility buddies, used the committee meetings to berate consumer lobbyists.)

If the utility lobby had any hopes that things would calm down in 1984, they were dashed by John Ingram, who made the utilities the target of his gubernatorial campaign. Rufus Edmisten joined in. The race between Carl Stewart and Bob Jordan for lieutenant governor developed into an argument over CWIP. All of a sudden, all the anti-utility sentiment was showing up on TV screens. You have to wonder if that won't prompt action in the 1984 session which starts June 7.

Under CWIP, a utility is allowed to pass on to ratepayers the costs of building a power plant even before that plant produces power. This means that the consumer pays for a power plant even if the utility cancels it before completion. With several such multimillion dollar cancellations lately, the public has a lot to be fired up about. As Stewart noted in his ads, those cancellations are the kind of mistake the utilities should pay for themselves.

Will 1984 see the utilities spanked again with maybe the complete repeal of CWIP, or some other legislation? If anyone knows of any planned effort to do so, they're not talking. But the mood is right. "People have really been sensitized to that issue," Hunt said, adding that utility legislation could be forthcoming if legislators feel the 1982 changes weren't sufficient.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey says the 1982 changes were "adequate, if the Utilities Commission would use what we gave them." Ramsey defines "adequate" use of Wright's CWIP amendment to mean no CWIP charges. "If they're still West Hollywood (Calif.) and Dupont Circle (D.C.). Bohemians tend to be avant-garde about their politics as they are with their studio interiors — that is, somewhat anarchical.

Combined, however, these groupings account for about 15 million, or only 20 percent, of the Baby Boom generation, says Robbin. The rest of what is now a 20-to-36 year-old cohort is scattered widely. At least 20 percent, he estimates, live in white-collar, middle-class existence in medium-size cities and subdivisions such as those built after World War II. Blue-collar types, meanwhile, account for another 30 percent. (In addition to urban industrial areas, they live in "mine and mill" towns and Southern textile towns.) The remaining 30 percent are divided almost equally between rural-farm and urban-ghetto settings — in what Robbin calls, for example, the "back country" South and "Public Assistance" neighborhoods.

Robbin admits that Baby Boomers share more liberal social attitudes than older generations have. The issues of war and peace and the environment may be the best examples of unity for a generation sensitized by Vietnam and toxic chemicals. Future presidents may always have trouble receiving support from this group for dispatching U.S. combat troops or taking chances with the environment.

"They are a little older and wiser than we were when we were their age," adds Robbin, who is 55. "They are more skeptical and better educated. They are more independent and more intellectual. You have to speak directly to them. They want answers and substantive comments. You can't smile your way through problems with them. More than any other generation, they have a tremendous insecurity about the future and what's going to come out of the fruits of their labor."

Strength For Today

In the Gospel of John, Jesus is referred to as the only begotten Son who is in the bosom of the Father.

This means that Jesus is the revelation of the heart of God. He did not come to reveal the power of God. We find this revelation in the natural world around us. But Jesus came that mankind might know with certainty that in God they have a heavenly Father who loves them.

The revelation of God which we get in the natural world is sometimes very terrifying. The world seems to be under the domination of ruthless laws in which there is no place for mercy or love. It is when we look to Jesus who is the revelation of the heart of God that we realize that love is behind it all.

Natural religion — as contrasted with revealed religion, plays an important part in our lives, but what completes and vitalizes our faith is what the Bible teaches regarding Christ and his ministry.

'Amazing what an election year and a little education will do!'

Elderly Voting Bloc Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elderly Americans and those aged 25 to 44 will exert the biggest influence in this year's presidential election, while the impact of the young and middle-aged is less than in the past.

The two growing segments of the population, aged 25 to 44 and 65 and over, will constitute 57.7 percent of this fall's potential voters, a new Census Bureau study showed Wednesday.

The other two groups, which have been shrinking, will make up the remaining 42.3 percent of the voting-age population.

In addition, women will outnumber men and the South is the region with the most potential voters.

Overall, the bureau estimated that 173,936,000 Americans will be old enough to vote in November, nearly 10 million more than in the 1980 contest.

The maturing of the post-war baby boom generation has given the biggest boost to the 25 to 44 group, which jumped by 9.5 million in the past four years, the bureau pointed out.

This age group will constitute 41.5 percent of Americans old enough to cast ballots in November. That is up from 38.5 percent in the 1980 election.

But the baby boom is now aged 20 to 38 and has been absorbed into the nation's voters, meaning that overall increases in the voting population are slowing.

For example, the 2.4 percent increase in potential voters since 1982 is the smallest jump since 1964-66, and future increases can be expected to be even smaller, the Census report said.

There was a drop in the potential voters aged 18 to 24. This group fell by nearly 1 million to 28.9 million people, dropping from 17.7 percent of the electorate to 16.7 percent, reflecting the decline in births during the 1960s.

Americans in middle age also lost ground, as the smaller number of Americans born during the Depression years moved into the 45 to 64 bracket. They will make up 25.6 percent of the voting age population in November, down from 26.3 percent in the last presidential contest.

But there was growth in the number of potential elderly voters, increasing from 15.9 percent to 16.2 percent in the last presidential contest.

Of all eligible voters this fall, 52.3 percent are female, outnumbering men by 8 million. Women outnumber men in every state except Alaska, Hawaii, Wyoming and Nevada. The northeastern states have the highest proportion of women (53.4 percent) and the West has the lowest (51 percent).

Blacks are expected to make up 19 million eligible voters in November, or 11 percent of the electorate.

The 1980 Census also counted 9 million persons of Hispanic origin, who may be of any race, as well as 2.5 million Asian and Pacific Islanders and 865,000 American Indians. Those figures were not updated in the 1984 estimates.

The South will have the most voting-age Americans at 59.1 million, followed by the North Central states, 43 million; the Northeast, 37.5 million, and the West, 34.3 million.

All this doesn't mean they will go to the polls, however. The study noted that voter participation in 1980 was down 1 percent to 52.6 percent of eligible voters, well below the record 62.8 percent who voted in 1960.

The North Central states traditionally have the highest participation, with Minnesota was the only state to reach 70 percent in 1980.

The South generally has the lowest turnout although it has been improving in recent years. In 1980,

South Carolina was the state with the lowest participation at 40.1 percent, although the District of Columbia turned out only 35.2 percent of its potential voters.

The voting age population also includes about 8.5 million people who will not be eligible to vote because they are not citizens or are in prisons, mental hospitals or other institutions.

City's Residents Boiling Water

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Residents should continue to boil drinking water despite assurances from the state that a parasite that has sickened hundreds of people has been flushed from the system, a city official said.

The state on Wednesday lifted its March 9 "boil order." However, City Business Representative Richard Rossi, acting on behalf of Mayor James B. McNulty, said he was not convinced the city was rid of the microorganism, called giardia cyst.

U.S. Offering Oil Leases Off Northeastern States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a jurisdiction dispute with Canada over half of the area, the Reagan administration is offering some 14 million acres off the coasts of seven northeastern states for oil and gas leasing.

The sale, to take place next September, was announced Wednesday by Interior Secretary William P. Clark, who said more new offshore discoveries are "badly needed," particularly in the Northeast where dependence on oil imports is heavier than any other region of the country.

Interior officials estimate that the sale area contains as much as 140 million barrels of oil and 3.1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

William Bettenberg, director of the department's Minerals Management Service, said about half the acreage in the sale is also claimed by Canada.

The Canadian government already has let leases to five companies — Texaco, Mobil, Dome Petroleum, Standard Oil of California and Fairholm Development — in the area but no drilling has begun, according to U.S. officials.

Bettenberg said the sale would be divided into two parts, with the disputed acreage omitted if the International Court of Justice at The Hague, Netherlands, has not resolved the competing jurisdiction claims of the two governments by then.

Originally scheduled for last February, the sale had been put "on hold" by Clark while he reviewed the controversial leasing policies of his predecessor, James Watt, and to consult more with officials of the seven affected states.

As a result of those consultations and a congressional ban on drilling in the Georges Bank, a rich fishing ground off the New England coast, the area being offered has been cut back 60 percent from its original 25 million acres.

"We have demonstrated great sensitivity and ... we are willing to go the extra mile to reconcile governors' reasonable objections," Clark said.

In addition to 8.3 million acres banned from leasing under a congressional moratorium, the Interior Department excluded another 2.7 million acres in areas believed to be rich breeding grounds for lobster, scallop and other marine life vital to the New England fishing industry.

"From the discussions so far, I believe we have satisfied the concerns of most of the northeastern states," Bettenberg said.

However, he acknowledged that Massachusetts officials want the drilling limited to areas at least 1,300 feet deep, which could preclude many offers for the leases.

While offshore wells have been drilled in depths of up to 6,400 feet, no oil or gas has even been found in areas greater than 1,200 to 1,300 feet under water, Bettenberg said.

The 2,470 tracts being offered have depths ranging from 200 feet to 6,600 feet. All are at least 50 miles offshore. The six other states surrounding the sale area are Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey.

The only previous U.S. lease sale in the North Atlantic, in 1979, led to the drilling of eight dry holes. Several companies, however, have maintained an interest in the area.

Larger Allowance Asked For Patients

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nursing home patients need more money from Social Security to pay for personal items like candy, toothpaste and magazines, says a 77-year-old woman from Illinois.

Testifying from her wheelchair, Ruth Howard, of Canton, Ill., told a House subcommittee that personal expense allowances should be raised from $25 a month to $75.

Mrs. Howard, who is crippled by arthritis, was brought to Washington by Rep. Lane Evans, D-Ill., who is sponsoring a measure to double personal expense allowances for nursing home residents receiving aid through the federal Supplemental Security Income program.

For more than a year, Mrs. Howard has been waging a crusade to increase allowances for those restricted to $25 in expenses through SSI rules or, like her, because they receive state-administered Medicaid and Social Security. She said she had accumulated about 3,000 petition signatures in her quest, which gained national attention last year.

During her 10-minute appearance before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance, Mrs. Howard said $75 a month would meet the real needs of those in nursing homes.

Methodists Ban Homosexuals From Pulpit

BALTIMORE (AP) — The United Methodist Church's decision to bar active homosexuals from the clergy will leave some ministers open to attack based on gossip and force others to disguise their "real identity," opponents said.

Flooded with demands from congregations across the country, 1,000 lay-clergy delegates to the quadrennial governing conference of the 9.4-million-member denomination Tuesday adopted the additional criteria for its clergy.

Officials said the ban could be carried out only if an individual openly admitted homosexual activity or if it was proved in a church trial.

The new rule "will be applied conscientiously," said the Rev. William K. Quick of Detroit, who shepherded the legislation through the conference.

Bishop Earl G. Hunt of Lakeland, Fla., said the action "provides a handle we can use to keep the wrong people from preaching for the first time in history."

But leaders of a Methodist gay caucus, called Affirmation, said the action encourages hiding "real identity" and would prevent appointments of only "a few openly" homosexual clergy.

"It could be the basis for denying reappointments without trial or proof," said the Rev. Morris Floyd of Minneapolis. "The burden of proof is put on us." He said he now faced a decision about his own relationship to the ministry.

Under church procedures, ministers are subject to annual reappointment at discretion of their area bishops.

The new standards, couched in positive rather than negative terms, requires "fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness" for ministers.

The qualification is interspersed throughout the church's disciplines for ordination and admission to standing in regional ministerial bodies.

Pressure for the requirement had swelled through the church for six years after self-avowed homosexuals were kept in church posts in New York City and Denver, despite challenges.

The church's highest court, the Judicial Council, ruled in the Denver case in October 1982 that nothing then in church law prohibited the appointment of admitted homosexuals.

The Rev. David Seamands of Wilmore, Ky., called this a "completely unprecedented situation," stirring "not just calls from the grass roots" for legislation, but "shouts from the whole church."

More than 1,000 petitions from congregations had poured in about it.

Opposing the new rule, the Rev. William M. James of New York said it set "one level of morality for ministers" and another for the rest of the church, demanding a separate, Pharisee-like superiority of clergy.

But the Rev. Terry Clark of Tuscola, Ill., said the new requirement "is positive, holistic, sensitive and in keeping with the gospel."

Quick emphasized the rule did not apply to mere sexual orientation, but to practice. "Because of the considerable influence of ministers, they must be completely dedicated to the highest ideals," he said.

Some delegates, seeking a more stiffly stated prohibition, asked in the long, heated debate that the Judicial Council rule on whether the adopted provision directly banned avowed, practicing homosexuals.

However, in the floor deliberations, the requirement of celibacy for single clergy was defined as "abstinence from genital sexual activity between persons."

Helms Denies He's Tied To Rightist

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., who charged that the U.S. State Department and the CIA bought the presidential election in El Salvador last weekend for Jose Napoleon Duarte, denied Wednesday published reports linking him to Roberto d'Aubuisson, the apparent loser in the race.

Helms said in an interview that he met d'Aubuisson only once, at a dinner attended by about 2,000 people. Helms said he never endorsed d'Aubuisson for president.

D'Aubuisson has been linked to right-wing death squads in El Salvador. Some congressmen have said that if d'Aubuisson had won the election, America should cut its aid to El Salvador.

Although final totals will not be available until next week, preliminary returns show the moderate Duarte leading 54 percent to 46 percent.

In a speech on the Senate floor Tuesday night, Helms said he has evidence that will prove the CIA and the State Department used direct funding, provided radio and television studios, gave technical advice and paid for a computer voter registration system to help Duarte.

Helms' reported link to d'Aubuisson included one news article saying that Helms aides had unsuccessfully tried to get d'Aubuisson a visa to enter the United States. The State Department had denied d'Aubuisson a visa, citing his links to the death squads.

Helms said Wednesday he had heard rumors about d'Aubuisson's possible link to death squads. As chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee's subcommittee on western hemisphere affairs, he began a private investigation.

"I went to every intelligence agency in this town. I talked to people at the State Department, and I even consulted in private with (Secretary of State) George Schultz in my office," Helms said. "Nobody could give me any evidence whatsoever of d'Aubuisson's ties to the death squads."

Asked what evidence he has to support his charges against the CIA and the State Department, Helms said, "I'll submit that at the proper time."

Hart's Rejuvenated Campaign Moves On To Nebraska; Mondale Remains In Capital

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart, his campaign rejuvenated in Ohio and Indiana, is campaigning toward the next round of primaries and eyeing unpledged delegates, but Walter F. Mondale's camp plans to have the Democratic presidential nomination locked up before the convention.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, disappointed by his showing in Tuesday's four primaries, planned to discuss the Soviet Union's Olympic boycott today in a meeting with Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin at the Soviet Embassy.

Mondale remained in Washington today, but will be heading to Nebraska, which holds its primary Tuesday, and California, the big prize with a June 5 primary.

Hart was already in Nebraska after spending the night at the governor's mansion in Lincoln as a guest of his supporter Gov. Bob Kerrey. He planned a tour of the state today before going Friday to Oregon, which also votes Tuesday, and on to California for the weekend.

Arriving in Lincoln on Wednesday night, Hart issued a sharp reply to President Reagan's appeal for more U.S. military aid to El Salvador, saying the president's policy has backfired and caused greater military strength and resolve on the part of Salvadoran rebels.

"Communism is not the greatest enemy; poverty is the greatest enemy" facing U.S.-backed governments in Central America, Hart said.

Mondale's campaign director James H. Johnson said that even if Hart continues winning primaries, Mondale will increase his delegate count so steadily that he will have a majority of delegates before the convention in San Francisco in mid-July.

On the day before the final round of primaries on June 5, Johnson said Mondale will have between 1,750 and 1,800 delegates — within striking range of the 1,967 needed to win the nomination.

"We are ... prepared to predict that when we have all the results in from June 5, we will have more than the 1,967 delegates," Johnson said.

Mondale, he said, will add to his total through the slower, less-publicized process of second-level caucus meetings and by swaying unpledged delegates to his side.

But Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager, disputed Johnson's estimates and said his projection shows that by the end of the primary season, Mondale would have 1,650 delegates to 1,450 for Hart.

Hart said Wednesday that a key element to his strategy to close that gap is to persuade uncommitted and unpledged delegates to switch to him during the period between the final primary and the start of the nominating convention July 16.

Hart's campaign is flush with renewed life after Tuesday's four primaries. He split them with Mondale, though Mondale came away with more delegates in the four states by winning North Carolina and Maryland.

But Hart's narrow wins — by 1 percentage point in Indiana and 2 points in Ohio — proved he could take industrial states and that the race was still alive.

Mondale won 188 delegates on Tuesday to Hart's 138 and Jackson's 41. That means Mondale has a total of 1,450.05 delegates to 873.75 for Hart and 279.2 for Jackson. The totals do not include Saturday's Texas caucuses, in which completed return are expected to show Mondale with at least 100 of the 169 delegates at stake.

Jackson planned to resume campaigning Friday with a trip to Nebraska, New Jersey and California.

On Wednesday, Jackson told the American Society of Newspaper Editors that they had a "moral challenge" to improve coverage of his campaign.

"I believe I have earned the right to fair coverage," he said.

"I've been portrayed as less dedicated to the mission of the Democratic nomination for president than I have been."

The news executives questioned Jackson about his alleged use of the term "Hymies" to describe Jews and his failure to repudiate supporter Louis Farrakhan, the Muslim leader who apparently threatened a newspaper reporter for printing the "Hymie" comments.

Jackson admitted that he waited too long to deal with his own use of the term, but said Farrakhan's comments in a radio speech were not a threat.

CAMPAIGN 1984 Candidates' Scorecard

Here is a breakdown of the preference of delegates selected or allocated thus far to the Democratic Convention

Mondale	1,450.05
Hart	873.75
Jackson	279.20
Other	55
Uncommitted	298
To Nominate	1,967
Total Delegates	3,933

Nixon Says 10 Years Is 'Enough'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago, in his 1974 State of the Union address, Richard M. Nixon tried to close the door on Watergate. "One year of Watergate is enough," he said.

"Ten years of Watergate is enough," he said Wednesday, still trying to close the door. He said it before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, addressing the group for the seventh time since 1954 — but for the first time since he resigned the presidency in disgrace on Aug. 9, 1974.

It was vintage Nixon. He spoke without text, notes or rostrum, standing before a bare microphone and about 900 editors. He clasped his hands together, then plunged them into his jacket pockets, a characteristic gesture.

In his address, on foreign policy, Nixon generally backed President Reagan, called for annual summit meetings so the superpowers will not miscalculate, deplored the flap over the "Mickey Mouse mining" of Nicaragua's waters.

Then came the questions — the first from an editor who had been at a journalists' convention in Disney World, Fla., on Nov. 17, 1973, when Nixon made his famous remark, "I am not a crook." The editor wanted to know the impact of Watergate on the presidency.

"Let me be very direct," said Nixon. He said he wrote about Watergate "at excruciating length in my memoirs" and "lived through it again" in two sets of television memoirs.

"As far as I am concerned, I have covered the subject as well and as honestly as I can," he said. "I think 10 years of Watergate is enough and as far I'm concerned, I'm going to talk about the future and not the past."

Another question: An editor quoted William Ruckelshaus, head of the Environmental Protection Agency who served in Nixon's Justice Department, as saying he felt like throwing his shoe at the television screen when Nixon defended his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, in the interview on CBS.

Nixon replied that Agnew "apparently" received illegal payments while he was in the vice presidency but for acts performed while he was governor of Maryland.

"As far as I am concerned, he suffered enough and I'm not going to kick him around," Nixon said, adding: "I realize he's not the pin-up boy of this group."

Then politics: Nixon predicted it will be a Walter Mondale-Ronald Reagan race in November, with Reagan the winner in a close contest. "I wouldn't bet the ranch on it," he said, but "unless the economy goes down, I wouldn't even bet the outhouse on Mondale."

Girl Claims Sexism, Rejects Award

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — A 10-year-old girl has turned down a scholastic award from a local Optimist Club because the group doesn't allow women as members.

Charity Grant, who is in the fourth grade at Longfellow Elementary School in Iowa City, rejected the "good reading award" from the Noon Optimist Club of Coralville, saying the "bigger prize would be to help stop discrimination."

"It's like a bunch of silly little boys playing a game and not letting us girls play, too," she said in an interview published today.

Charity received the award last month, then gave it back to Ann Thalken, the librarian at the school. The award was given to students who complete certain projects, such as reading a book outside of class, visiting the public library or designing a book mark.

"I wanted the prize badly," Charity said, "but I thought it over and decided it would be a bigger prize to help stop discrimination against women."

Ms. Thalken said she disagreed with Charity's action, noting "this organization has done something good for the school, and to have any bad publicity after they've done so much good would be just crushing to me."

However, Charity said she thought she had a good reason for turning the award down.

"I remember sitting up in my bedroom and thinking, 'Who cares? Why shouldn't I take the prize?'" Charity recalled. "But I thought some more and decided I shouldn't take this award if they're discriminating against women. I'm a female and this kind of thing shouldn't be going on."

Hugh Cranford, executive secretary of Optimist International in St. Louis, Mo., said women are not allowed to join the organization because "our constitution prohibits it."

Democrats Praise Feldstein Policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential economist Martin Feldstein is drawing praise from congressional Democrats who are using his resignation to attack the Reagan administration on its economic policies.

Feldstein, who announced he will leave his job on July 10 to return to Harvard University, became popular on Capitol Hill for an outspokenness on budget deficits that sometimes put him in hot water with the White House and Treasury Department.

"Martin Feldstein was about the administration's last link to economic reality," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said, "We will miss his sense of reality and integrity in the national debate. It is unfortunate that the president will no longer have Dr. Feldstein's voice of reason."

Another Democrat, James Jones of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Budget Committee, described Feldstein as "a voice of soundness in trying to get the deficit down."

"Unfortunately, too many in the administration took the political way out and tried to find blame somewhere else and avoid the tough issues of getting the federal deficits down," he said.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., compared the economist to the fabled boy who said the emperor had no clothes. "He was the only one to say the Reagan administration doesn't have an economic policy," he said.

Feldstein, interviewed this morning on the NBC-TV "Today" show, reiterated that "I did what I've been planning to do ever since I came — to stay for two years and then to return to my teaching and research in Cambridge."

Asked if he was pushed or had jumped, he replied, "Neither."

As to the timing of the announcement, which came as he reiterated support for Federal Reserve Board policies attacked earlier by the White House, Feldstein said he wanted to give two months' notice before leaving and added, "I had planned for quite a while I would do it this week."

Feldstein, in a briefing with reporters Wednesday, played down his differences with the White House and said that recently there has been no disagreement over the need for action to pare the budget red ink.

He also gave his backing to Federal Reserve policies, just a day after presidential spokesman Larry Speakes blamed the central bank for the fresh hike, to 12.5 percent, in the prime lending rate of major U.S. banks.

Later at a dinner marking Small Business Week, Feldstein reiterated that support and said, "It would be a terrible mistake for monetary policy to attempt to prevent an increase in interest rates by an overly expansionary rise in the money supply."

He warned that such an excess of money growth would threaten the modest pace of inflation over the past year.

The Federal Reserve tries to keep enough money flowing to maintain economic growth without a resurgence of higher inflation.

Speakes had complained that the Fed's weekly measure of the money supply was running at the low end of its target range of 4 percent to 8 percent "in a period of expansion and strong economic growth."

But Feldstein told the business executives that the money supply likely "will bounce up quite naturally" in the next few weeks toward the middle of the range.

"Basically, I think that monetary policy is on target and that that policy is appropriate," he said.

Feldstein, 44, had held the economics job for two years, the maximum amount of time Harvard permits its professors to leave academic duties.

He also will return to his position as president of the National Bureau of Economic Research in Cambridge, Mass.

Speakes said a successor has not been chosen.

Police Identify Mutilated Body

NEW YORK (AP) — A mutilated body found soaking in acid in two 55-gallon drums is that of a missing organized crime figure accused with 30 other people of running a $1.65 billion heroin ring.

The Brooklyn district attorney's office identified the body Wednesday as Cesare Bonventre, 33. He had been missing since April 9, when he was one of 31 people charged with running what police called the "Pizza Connection" heroin ring.

FBI agents were searching a former macaroni factory for stolen property when they opened the two drums and found Bonventre, who was a bodyguard for Carmine Galante when the reputed mobster was killed in 1979, authorities said.

PIER FIRE — Well back from the heat, firemen pour water on blazing warehouses on San Francisco's Embarcadero's waterfront. A fire-alarm fire destroyed two piers and damaged several warehouses. (AP Laserphoto)

Waterfront Blaze Destroys Two Piers In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A spectacular waterfront blaze that sent orange flames shooting hundreds of feet above San Francisco Bay as it destroyed two Embarcadero piers caused at least $2.5 million in damage, fire officials said today.

Two firefighters were injured Wednesday night in the five-alarm blaze that Fire Chief Emmet Condon said was the worst he had ever seen along the city's waterfront.

About 150 firefighters fought the flames with the aid of a half-dozen fireboats and towering ladder trucks that sprayed thousands of gallons of water on piers 30 and 32.

The general alarm blaze, which began at 9:15 p.m., quickly engulfed the aging wood-framed structures before it was brought under control at 11:35 p.m., Condon said. Telephone service failed along some parts of the waterfront.

There was apparently no one working on either pier when the fire erupted, officials said.

The piers are located on the Embarcadero, Spanish for the embarkation point, which is the street that runs along the waterfront in northeastern San Francisco.

Condon said the cause of the blaze had not been determined. He said arson investigators were probing the ashes today.

"We might never find out what caused it," the chief said, because so much of the buildings were destroyed.

Two firefighters were treated for burns at San Francisco General Hospital. One suffered first- and second-degree burns to his right forearm, hand and neck, and the other had second-degree burns on both legs and on the right hand, said a nursing supervisor who declined to give her name.

Hundreds of spectators — including Mayor Dianne Feinstein — crowded the fire scene to watch the spectacular flames, visible for miles.

The flames turned the sky orange and lit the towers supporting the western end of the Oakland-San Francisco Bay Bridge. Nearby downtown skyscrapers glowed in the light.

Traffic backed up along freeways and city streets as the smoke and heat covered the area near the bridge, the major link between San Francisco and the cities of the East Bay area, including Oakland and Berkeley.

Firefighters from Oakland, the Navy base at Treasure Island and the Coast Guard base in San Francisco helped city firefighters who used 30 engines to battle the blaze.

Condon said he did not believe the concrete foundations or the wooden pilings supporting the piers were severely damaged. But the warehouse-like buildings upon them were turned to charcoal skeletons.

The mayor, wearing a firefighter's jacket over her dress, said the city had just painted the piers and had planned to decorate them before the Democratic National Convention in July.

"We'll rise from our ashes," she said, standing amid the tangled firehoses and pools of water.

The chief said it was the city's biggest fire since a blaze destroyed more than two dozen buildings in 1981. That fire was said to be the biggest since the inferno after the 1906 earthquake.

Genetic Link Possible

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Scientists at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine have found that people who metabolize alcohol quickly may be protected against alcoholism.

Research results also suggest that this built-in protection may be hereditary, said Dr. Ronald G. Thurman, professor of pharmacology and director of the research effort.

In a study of 215 male students, Thurman and his colleagues found that subjects who were able to more quickly eliminate alcohol from their systems reported fewer alcohol-related problems than those who did not exhibit the trait. Those with fewer problems themselves reported a lower incidence of alcoholism among close family relatives as well, Thurman said.

Boy, 8, Held In Girl's Death

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — An 8-year-old boy was in the county juvenile detention home today, charged with second-degree murder of a 2 1/2-month-old girl left in his mother's care, police said.

Shanava R. Williams died Saturday of injuries to her head and body, police said. The boy, whose name was withheld, told a nurse the baby stopped breathing after choking on formula he was feeding her from a bottle.

The third grader takes medicine for a hyperactive condition and attends public school for children with learning disabilities, said his grandfather, Frank Long, 68.

Second-degree murder carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Flooding Threatens Much Of Kentucky

By The Associated Press
Floodwaters sweeping downstream today threatened to spill over their banks in western and central Kentucky as thousands of residents returned to soaked and mud-caked homes in West Virginia and eastern Kentucky, where damage was estimated at $24.5 million.

Officials warned that the danger of flooding remained even though skies had cleared in the mountain region today. Rivers were brimming after three days of storms in Kentucky and in the Tennessee Valley of southern Tennessee and northern Alabama.

But Steve Corfidi of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., reported it was "quiet on the weather front" in most of the country today. He said the jet stream has shifted farther north, sparing the South the violent weather that produced more than 300 tornadoes and about 24 deaths in the past two weeks.

One potential trouble spot was Utah where temperatures were headed into the 80s today, Corfidi said, increasing the chances of rapid melting of a near-record snowpack. It was a year ago this month that mountain runoff in Utah caused $480 million in damage.

And in Arizona, a peculiar shroud of brown smog hovered over the desert cities of Tucson and Phoenix a second day today, hiding the surrounding mountains from view in both cities. The blanket of dust and other contaminants was thought to be the thickest ever in Tucson.

After the violent weather that has left 22 people dead or missing since Sunday, floodwaters were receding today in southern West Virginia and eastern Kentucky, where most of the more than 6,000 people forced to flee lived.

But the Tennessee River, swollen by the reluctant release of water from bulging flood-control dams upstream, remained outside its banks.

The river crested 5 feet above flood stage Wednesday at Chattanooga in what officials said was the worst flooding to hit the city since 1973, when high water caused nearly $67 million in damage. The Cumberland River crested Wednesday in Clarksville almost 11 feet above floodstage.

U.S. Gains Edge In Third World Arms Sales

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms sales by industrial nations to the Third World fell by nearly one-half last year to $24.7 billion, with declines of $6 billion for the United States and $8.9 billion for the Soviet Union, a congressional report says.

Although American sales fell to $9.5 billion in 1983, the U.S. share of the weapons market, 39 percent, more than doubled that of the Soviet Union for the first time in the 1976-83 period covered by the study.

Soviet sales totaled $4.16 billion last year, or about 17 percent of the market, compared with 27 percent a year earlier.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said Wednesday the Congressional Research Service study "raises some serious questions about the role of the United States in the Third World and our short-sighted policy of indiscriminately selling arms to whichever countries have the resources to purchase them."

Hatfield forwarded the report to President Reagan and wrote: "Mr. President, I implore you to reject the sad and seemingly universal notion that arms sales are uncontrollable and that there is little use trying to negotiate restraints among the world's major suppliers."

"It is a slowly burning fuse," Hatfield said, "which we will one day deeply regret not having attempted to stamp out."

But the administration rejected Hatfield's critical tack. Joseph Lehman, spokesman for the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said that "clearly some senators have chosen to make a political football of the study, which essentially says that the value of U.S. arms sales overseas has declined significantly from last year's total."

The Congressional Research Service, a division of the Library of Congress, examined arms sales by governments to Third World nations from 1976-83. Commercial sales were not counted. Among the findings:

—The "real," or inflation-adjusted, value of all Third World arms transfer agreements in 1983 was $24.67 billion, by far the lowest of any of the preceding seven years, topped by $59 billion in 1980. The value of actual deliveries in 1983, counting some negotiated in earlier years, was $26.45 billion.

—Despite the 1983 decline in the value of U.S. arms transfer agreements, from $15.5 billion to $9.53 billion, the American share of the market increased from 32 percent to 39 percent.

—The value of Soviet agreements, as measured in 1983 dollars, declined from $13.1 billion in 1982 to $4.2 billion last year, and its share dropped from 26.9 percent to 16.9 percent. France also registered a sharp decline, from $8.8 billion in 1982, to $1.2 billion in 1983.

The study defined the "Third World" or buying category, as all nations except those in NATO, the Warsaw Pact, Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

"The Near East and South Asia region has historically been the greatest Third World arms market. In 1980-83 it accounted for more than three quarters of the total," the study found.

It cited, as well, "notable increases in U.S. arms transfer agreement values in Latin America in recent years ... the Latin American share of all U.S. Third World agreements increased to 3.2 percent from 0.9 percent in the 1976-79 period. In addition, the U.S. share of Latin American arms transfer agreements increased to 12.5 percent in the 1980-83 period from 4.1 percent in the 1976-79 period."

The Soviet Union continued to rank first in the Latin American region, with 34.7 percent of the market in the 1980-83 period, while the United States passed West Germany and France to rank second.

"It is ironic that, while the study shows that the Soviet Union is the leading arms supplier to Latin America, some senators have chosen to lament not this fact, but the fact of U.S. arms assistance to our allies in Latin America," said Lehman.

The report showed that for the entire 1976-83 period, the Soviet Union led in six of 12 categories of weapons delivered to the Third World, while the major Western European suppliers led in four and the United States in two.

The Soviets topped the list in deliveries of tanks and self-propelled guns, with sales of 10,365; artillery, 12,700; armored personnel carriers and armored cars, 14,000; supersonic combat aircraft, 3,200; surface-to-air missiles, 13,480; and guided missile boats, 78.

The Western Europeans led in major surface ships, 71; minor surface ships, 293; submarines, 24; and helicopters, 1,570. The United States led in subsonic combat aircraft, 442, and other aircraft, 899.

Modern Robin Hood Has To Repay

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doris Chapin stole $160,000 from the rich and gave most of it to the poor. But now the admitted embezzler has repented and is asking the Revs. Jerry Falwell, Jimmy Swaggert and other TV evangelists to return the money she gave them.

"It appears none of the stolen money went to her own family, although there was a need," said James Epstein, an assistant district attorney in Mercer County, where Mrs. Chapin was prosecuted. "It's a very unusual case."

In tearful testimony, Mrs. Chapin said she had embezzled from Seidel Sand and Gravel Inc. of Jefferson Township, where the mother of four worked as a bookkeeper and her husband was a supervisor.

The scheme went on for about "six or seven years," said Mrs. Chapin's attorney, public defender Lorinda Hinch, with the last theft occurring in October 1982. A company vice president discovered it.

Howard Chapin never knew of his wife's activity, even though she embezzled by forging his signature on company checks, Ms. Hinch said. At least $15,000 went to church and evangelistic organizations around the country, said Epstein. The judge who sentenced Mrs. Chapin March 27 to seven years' probation also ordered her to ask for that money back.

The groups are under no legal obligation to return the money, Epstein said, but most appear ready to do so.

"We wouldn't want to be involved in an illegal action," said Betty McTaggart, an official at the Jimmy Swaggert Ministries of Baton Rouge,

La. "It would be our moral responsibility to return the money."

Epstein's office said Swaggert received nearly $1,000, while Falwell's Old Time Gospel Hour received $1,449. Among the larger donations was $3,860 to the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association of Tulsa, Okla.

George Stoval, who monitors donations to Roberts' group, declined Tuesday to say what would be done with the money, saying Roberts' response was "confidential."

The court found that, despite her own money problems arising from her elderly mother's medical bills, Mrs. Chapin gave most of the money to families who could not meet mortgage payments or buy groceries.

"Everything she did was for other people," testified Mrs. Raymond DeRaps of Greenville.

Riding The Rails

Today is Golden Spike Day, the anniversary of the meeting of Union Pacific and Central Pacific railways, and the completion of the first transcontinental railroad in the U.S. Today, France has trains that can exceed 150 mph - the world's fastest. The fastest passenger run in the U.S. travels between New York and Washington, D.C. in 3 hours. The cow-catchers on early locomotives were invented by Charles Babbage, the "father" of the modern computer.

Reagan Avoided Direct Fight With Congress

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan vetoed a confrontation with Congress and decided to play down U.S. support for rebel "contras" in Nicaragua before delivering his Central American speech to the nation.

A senior White House official told reporters Wednesday night that Reagan rejected advice from his speechwriters that "there should be a sharper drawing of the line" against Capitol Hill.

The official, who declined to be identified, said Reagan also blue-penciled nearly all expressions of support for the anti-Sandinista rebels only hours before going on the air. U.S. covert aid is one of the most controversial aspects of Reagan's policy in the region.

"It's a point of law and principle that you cannot ... discuss these matters and should not," the official said by way of explanation. In fact, he said, "the president isn't changing his policy at all."

But clearly, Reagan had a purpose in trying to avoid a clash with Congress and in not stirring up the covert issue again: he wants to come as close as he can to his $187 million request for U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

His long-range goal is to win Congressional approval of the $8.4 billion in economic aid for the region recommended last January by the Kissinger Commission. That means he needs help, especially from the Democrats.

Soft-pedaling the "contras" issue could mean Reagan has concluded that in a compromise he might have to surrender on the $21 million in covert aid approved by the Senate. It's the most vulnerable item in his package.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. had urged him during the day to disavow covert aid in the region. The Massachusetts Democrat said most Americans are against an undercover U.S. role in Nicaragua.

The president's policy cannot succeed without bipartisan support. In the Democratic-controlled House he has enlisted Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the majority leader. But other Democrats are trying to slash the aid request and impose such stringent conditions as the eradication of death squads.

Reagan scrapped the draft presented to him before his China trip and started from scratch over the weekend at his Maryland mountain retreat. Although he retained some prepared excerpts, the speech - and its strong anti-communist line - was a personal expression of his beliefs.

He accused the ruling Sandinistas of conducting "a Communist reign of terror" in Nicaragua.

He charged Cuba and Nicaragua with aggression against El Salvador and said they were "aided and abetted" by the Soviet Union.

Unless they are stopped, Reagan said, 100 million people in seven countries from Mexico to Panama "could come under the control of pro-Soviet regimes."

And then, he said, "the risks to our security and our way of life will be infinitely greater."

At the same time, though, Reagan made an effort at conciliation.

He leaned on two Democratic presidents, Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy, for support. He said he had no plans to send American troops into combat in Central America.

He said there is a violent, right-wing movement in El Salvador that opposes democracy in the country just as the leftist guerrillas do. And he acknowledged conservatives do not have a monopoly on democratic political parties.

They range, Reagan said, "from the democratic left, to center, to conservative."

Teacher Suggests Read To Children

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) - It's important to read aloud to children of all ages, and parents should revive the practice, says Dr. Lambert "Buzz" Baker, a professor at United States International University here, who teaches children's literature classes in the School of Education.

Baker reports that a study of three north San Diego County schools done by a USIU graduate student in 1983 revealed that only 13 percent of the parents had ever read or told stories to their children.

He points out that reading aloud has multiple benefits for children. Not only does hearing a well-read story motivate children to read on their own, but it can also make children want to write their own stories and poems.

"The sound of words is completely different from the sight," Baker says. "The word is the same word; it means the same to me. But I can play with those words when I read out loud to you, I can emphasize them."

One reason parents read to children less is that television is readily available now to provide entertainment, he notes.

But Baker believes television is a mediocre substitute for good children's literature. It's also unfortunate that once a child reaches age 11 or 12, even parents who read aloud when their children were younger seem to abandon the practice, he adds.

Baker is also a fan of story telling, which he considers another lost art, because the story can be tailored to meet the needs and interests of the audience. Although he has not written children's books, he frequently tells stories he has written to groups of children.

"They are all my stories and every one of them was made for a very specific purpose, to tell a very specific thing without preaching," he explains.

When looking for good books to read aloud or for books a child can read by himself, Baker suggests parents seek books based on true stories. "Good children's literature, like good adult literature, is all based on truth."

Children in their preteen years read more than they will during any other period of their lives, he says. Because children learn values by reading, Baker says, there is a need for books for older children which deal with subjects such as divorce.

Democrats See Rise In Salvadoran Aid

DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Democratic critics in Congress predict he will get some of the money he wants to bolster El Salvador's armed forces, but it will not buy a military solution to the "chaos and anarchy" he says communists are spreading in Central America.

Democrats branded Reagan's televised address Wednesday night as a "saber rattling" call to arms that paid only lip service to efforts for a negotiated settlement and could lead to another debacle like the involvement of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

But they conceded the president will win at least a limited grant of additional funds to buttress the Salvadoran army against the onslaught of Marxist-led guerrillas.

Reagan's speech was his most strongly termed defense yet of his Central American policies, comparing his critics to those who concluded in the years before World War II that "the aggressor's appetite would be satisfied" with just one more conquest or international transgression.

"What we see in El Salvador is an attempt to destabilize the entire region, and eventually move chaos and anarchy toward the American border," the president said.

"We have provided just enough aid to avoid outright disaster but not enough to resolve the crisis, so El Salvador is being left to slowly bleed to death."

"The simple questions are: Will we support freedom in this hemisphere or not? ... Will we stop the spread of communism in this hemisphere or not? Will we act while there is still time?" the president asked.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., one of the Senate's harshest critics of administration policy in the region, said, "The president will get his aid, but not for the right reasons."

"The Republicans will support their president," Tsongas said. "The Democrats to a large extent will give the president what he wants just so that we will not be blamed if anything goes wrong."

Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the senior Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, called the address "a strong and in my view saber rattling speech that ignores the wishes of the leading countries of the area, who prefer the negotiating route to the military one."

Reagan repeated his previous pledge to keep American troops out of a Central American war, saying the argument was "definitely not about plans to send American troops into combat in Central America."

But he said that without more aid El Salvador may not be able to withstand a Cuban-backed guerrilla offensive that the United States believe is planned for the fall.

And he divulged a new assessment of the strength of Cuban forces in leftist-ruled Nicaragua, saying the Cuban force there has grown from 165 in 1979 to 10,000.

Reagan called Nicaragua's Sandinista government "a communist reign of terror" and said the Sandinistas "seek to export their terror to every other country in the region."

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., called the president's speech "a call to arms in Central America" and a prescription for "more U.S. involvement, more force, more deaths."

Rep. Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Western Hemisphere, in the official response for the Democrats in Congress, said the "vast majority" of them support "substantial military and economic aid for our friends in Central America."

But Barnes added that the Democrats also "believe that, where diplomatic options exist for achieving our objectives, we should use them first" and that "there must be reasonable limitations on direct U.S. military intervention."

The first test of strength may come today. The House was scheduled to take up the Central American portion of a $10.5-billion worldwide foreign aid bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

O'Neill said Wednesday he "wouldn't be surprised" if the House approved a Republican-backed amendment loosening proposed restrictions on military aid to El Salvador. O'Neill added, however, that adoption of such an amendment could lead to rejection of the bill as a whole.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a sponsor of the administration-backed amendment, said, "I'm optimistic that we will win. The president showed how vital this region is to the security of our country."

The outcome of the fight over Central American aid in 1985 is expected to set the pattern for a House-Senate conference committee that meets next week on the more immediate issue of appropriations for the rest of this fiscal year. The Republican Senate has approved $61.7 million in additional military aid for El Salvador, adding it to a House-passed bill that contained no such funds.

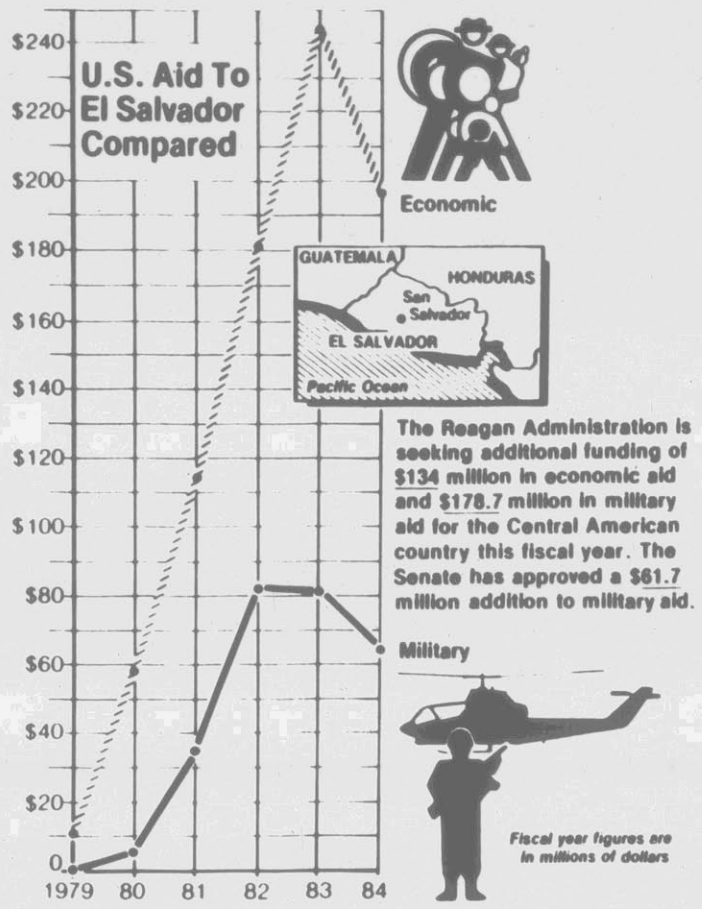

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a staunch supporter of the administration's Central American policy, said of the speech, "I think it will have wide acceptance from anyone who is not locked into ideological opposition to President Reagan."

But Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said, "The president comes to us with a very weak case." Long said Reagan was "probably wise" not to mention the CIA-backed mining of Nicaraguan harbors by guerrillas fighting the leftist

Nicaraguan regime "because that was an act of war."

A senior White House official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Reagan rejected suggestions that "there should be a sharper drawing of the line" between him and Congress. The official said Reagan eliminated denunciations of the lawmakers in rewriting a draft that was submitted to him.

Reagan-At-A Glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are highlights of President Reagan's speech on Central America Wednesday:

U.S. AID

"As I talk to you tonight, there are young Salvadoran soldiers in the field facing the terrorists and guerrillas in El Salvador with the clips in their rifles the only ammunition they have."

"The lack of evacuation helicopters for the wounded and the lack of medical supplies if they are evacuated has resulted in one out of three of the wounded dying. This is no way to support friends — particularly when supporting them is supporting ourselves."

"The simple questions are: Will we support freedom in this hemisphere or not? ... Will we stop the spread of communism in this hemisphere or not? Will we act while there is still time?"

"We have provided just enough aid to avoid outright disaster but not enough to resolve the crisis, so El Salvador is being left to slowly bleed to death."

"The people of Central America can succeed if we provide the assistance I have proposed. We Americans should be proud of what we are trying to do in Central America, and proud of what, together with our friends, we can do in Central America."

Rightist Charges Fraud In Voting

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Roberto d'Aubuisson withdrew his far-right party from participation in the official count of presidential votes, charging U.S.-backed fraud, and said he would win if illegal ballots were thrown out.

D'Aubuisson, candidate of the Republican Nationalist Alliance, claimed at a news conference Wednesday that his party's tally shows he won 52 percent of the valid votes in Sunday's runoff election to 48 percent for moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat.

No official results have been released, but Duarte claimed victory Monday, saying his party's figures showed he won about 55 percent of the vote.

"Our results are legal, theirs are fake," said d'Aubuisson.

D'Aubuisson also accused the U.S. State Department and the CIA of conspiring with the Christian Democrats to fix the election.

He said he had no "tangible" proof of the claim but read from a statement by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who said the Reagan administration used a "covert plan to funnel U.S. government" money and assistance to Duarte's campaign.

The United States has pushed hard for elections here but denies it tried to influence the outcome.

Six senior officers in El Salvador's powerful military said Wednesday they would be willing to accept Duarte as the new president but warned he must move cautiously if he wants to win the confidence of the armed forces. They spoke on condition that they not be identified.

The official count was halted Tuesday night when the parties squabbled over procedures and d'Aubuisson's party, known as ARENA, withdrew. The count began again Wednesday without an ARENA representative present.

D'Aubuisson said his party would boycott the count until a "legal" tally is made, meaning his party wants to present challenges before the votes are read in public and put in the computer.

Under Salvadoran law, each party has three days after the final results are announced to issue challenges.

Officials of the Central Election Council rejected the fraud charges and said the tally would be binding whether or not ARENA sent an observer. Conservative parties friendly to ARENA also have representatives at the count.

The vote is seen in the United States as vital for President Reagan if he wants to continue his substantial economic and military aid program. The United States supplied considerable technical and financial help to organize the voting.

Honduras Threatens To Break Relations

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras says it will break relations with Nicaragua unless it receives a satisfactory explanation for the shooting down of a Honduran military helicopter over Nicaraguan territory.

Honduras said four armed forces members and four civilians died Tuesday when the U.S.-built helicopter was shot down. It said the aircraft was unarmed and blown off course.

Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica said Honduras "may break diplomatic and commercial relations with Nicaragua if that nation does not clarify the incident ... because it is a matter of a criminal and warlike conduct that the Sandinistas have maintained against Honduras for no valid reason."

The leftist Sandinista junta runs Nicaragua's government.

Honduras' ambassador was called home Wednesday from Managua, Nicaragua's capital.

Nicaragua's army was said to have gone on top alert for the first time since the fall, when the Sandinista regime said it feared the United States might invade its country after the invasion of Grenada in October.

"The situation is truly critical for Nicaragua as much on the border with Honduras as it is with Costa Rica," said a Nicaraguan military source, who asked not to be identified for security reasons. "The shooting down of the helicopter made the crisis more serious, and it was because of that the army was placed on a state of maximum alert."

The helicopter was downed near Potosi, a small port on the Gulf of Fonseca, which is shared by Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador.

Thailand Increases Security For Pope

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Soldiers clutching submachine guns separated Pope John Paul II from hundreds of nuns, priests and schoolchildren today after threats against the pontiff reportedly were made shortly before his arrival in Thailand.

An air force spokesman, Col. Wisawat Boonao, said "security threats" were made but he declined to elaborate. The Bangkok World newspaper quoted unidentified police officials as saying the international terrorist Carlos was reported in Thailand.

Heavily armed soldiers surrounded the pope after his special Alitalia DC-10 brought him to Bangkok International Airport from Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, where cheering well-wishers beat jungle drums at his sendoff.

The pope was scheduled to visit an Indochinese refugee camp during his 34-hour swing through Thailand, a predominantly Buddhist country that is last stop on the pope's 11-day trip to Asia and the South Pacific.

At the airport, 40 young Thai women wearing traditional silk sarongs and blouses showered roses and jasmine petals onto a red carpet as the pope passed. Rows of submachine-gun toting soldiers came between the pope and 600 nuns and priests and 150 youngsters who came to greet him.

A Thai security official said 20,000 soldiers and police would help protect the pope.

John Paul met Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda and then went to a reception at the royal palace where he told King Bhumipol and Queen Sirikit his visit was an expression of appreciation from him and "the whole Catholic Church ... for the generous hospitality given to thousands and thousands of refugees from neighboring countries."

King Bhumipol told him Thailand was tolerant of all religions in keeping with Buddhist teachings that there is goodness in all people.

"Your loving compassion toward these needy and suffering people makes me feel very close to you all," the pope told the king in English.

Refugee officials say Thailand's camps have sent more than 460,000 people to new homes in other countries and that 130,000 refugees remain in camps scattered across the country.

At the palace reception, the pope said his visit was in part a repayment for the visit by the Thai royal couple to Pope John XXIII at the Vatican in 1960.

John Paul began his current tour of the East in South Korea, then went to New Guinea and the Solomon Islands.

Only 200,000 of Thailand's 50 million people are Roman Catholic. Although Catholics are only a tiny fraction of the population, the church claims to be quite active in Thailand, running 200 schools with thousands of non-Catholic students, as well as hospitals, nursing homes, and other institutions across the country. Dominican missionaries first came to Thailand in 1555.

John Paul met today with Supreme Patriarch Ariyavong

Sagatayana, the 87-year-old leader of Thai Buddhists, who make up 95 percent of the population.

The pope also was scheduled to ordain 23 priests while in Thailand and meet with church officials. Thailand received its first Catholic cardinal last year when the pope elevated Archbishop Michael Meechai Kitbunchu to the post.

The cardinal said in an interview last week that the pope's motor trip Friday to a camp with 18,000 In-dochinese refugees would show the pontiff's deep concern for the plight of the homeless people.

Phanat Nikhom refugee center is 56 miles southeast of Bangkok.

Catholic Relief Services says it is the major agency helping the camp, which trains Vietnamese, Cambodian, and Laotian refugees for jobs in countries which have accepted them.

The pope visited an Asian refugee camp in the Philippines in 1981.

Prosecutor Seeks 7 Indictments

ROME (AP) — A state prosecutor says he expects a decision by July on his request that indictments be brought against three Bulgarians and four Turks in the 1981 assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II.

Prosecutor Antonio Albano asked that the seven be charged with complicity in the shooting by Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca, who is serving a life term in an Italian jail. The charge of complicity in an assassination attempt carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Albano's recommendation will be considered by Judge Ilario Martella, who is in charge of investigating the May 13, 1981 shooting in St. Peter's Square.

"It is my personal opinion that Martella will issue a decision by the end of July," Albano said Wednesday.

Italian newspapers said that if Martella decides to issue indictments a trial would be held in the fall.

In his formal request Tuesday, Albano asked for trials for Sergei Ivanov Antonov, former station manager of the Bulgarian state airlines in Rome, and two former Bulgarian Embassy employees, Todor Ayvazov and Vassiliev Kolev.

Young To Head FDA Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Microbiologist Frank E. Young is leaving his post as dean of the University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry to become commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration on July 15.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler announced Young's appointment on Wednesday, concluding a search that began after Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. gave up the commissioner's job in September 1983. Hayes became head of New York Medical College at Valhalla.

The FDA is the agency responsible for assuring the safety of foods, drugs and cosmetics as well as for safeguarding against other hazards like radiation exposure from x-rays.

Young's background is in medical research as well as in teaching and medical practice. During his tenure at Rochester, he helped develop a laboratory for biotechnology research at the university.

Quebec Sniper Halts Day-Long Attack

QUEBEC (AP) — An unemployed factory worker suspected of shooting and wounding two passers-by on a city street surrendered this morning after holding police at bay outside his home for more than a day, authorities said.

The man was unarmed when he emerged from the house to surrender, police said, and no shots were fired.

Police say the man, identified as Jean-Claude Nadeau, 39, opened fire on a Quebec City street early Wednesday morning and then fled a few blocks away to his home. He sent his mother, father and two brothers away from the house and held up inside, refusing for a day police efforts at negotiations.

A relative said Nadeau had been unable to sleep Tuesday night because he was troubled by Tuesday's rampage in the Quebec legislature, where three people were killed and 13 others wounded by a man firing a submachine gun, police reported. No other connection was established between the two incidents.

Friends also said Nadeau lost his job recently when a shoe factory closed and "maybe that's why he was depressed."

About 50 residents living in the neighborhood were evacuated overnight and electricity was cut to the house, in the Saint-Sauveur section at the foot of Quebec City's famous St. Lawrence River bluffs.

The gunman fired shots through the door Wednesday afternoon when police knocked, and he refused to answer the telephone, authorities said.

Late Wednesday, police brought in a small, six-wheeled remote-controlled robot with camera, microphone and loudspeaker, nicknamed Hercule Poirot after mystery writer Agatha Christie's famous fictional detective.

The robot moved up to the house and police said through its microphone: "We are here to help you. Get in touch so we can continue our conversation by telephone."

Police used the robot at least four times without results. At one time they told the man his 77-year-old father was standing by with a message.

Police ruled out storming the building and said they were willing to take their time.

Both of those injured in Wednesday's shooting incident were treated at a hospital and released, police said.

The man held in Tuesday's killings at the provincial legislature, Canadian armed forces Cpl. Denis Lortie, 25, appeared Wednesday in Quebec City Sessions Court.

His lawyer entered a plea of innocent to three counts of first-degree murder, punishable by a minimum 25 years in prison with no possibility of parole. Canada does not have the death penalty.

According to reports of Tuesday's events, a man dressed in military fatigues stalked into the Quebec National Assembly building and opened fire, then entered the assembly chamber, went to the speaker's chair and continued firing.

Most of those killed and wounded were parliamentary employees preparing for a committee meeting, rather than the political leaders who apparently were the killer's intended targets.

The gunman surrendered to police several hours later after long conversations with Rene Jaibert, a sergeant-at-arms later was described as a hero who possibly saved many lives.

Khadafy Posting Guards

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Armed guards were stationed at roadblocks in Tripoli today after an unsuccessful attack against Col. Moammar Khadafy that the Libyan leader claims was supported by the United States.

Details of the attack still were sketchy two days after it occurred, but Khadafy clearly escaped unscathed.

He was shown on Libyan television Wednesday, smiling and laughing as he toured a clothing store in downtown Tripoli. He joked in English that Britain had given up exporting clothing to Libya and instead was exporting terrorism.

He also blamed the United States and Sudan for backing Tuesday's attack.

Khadafy called President Reagan "the worst terrorist in the world" and said U.S.-trained Moslem Brotherhood extremists were responsible for the attack, according to reports from the French newspaper Le Monde and the Italian news agency ANSA.

State Department spokesman John Hughes had no direct comments on Khadafy's allegations. Hughes noted there were varying reports about who was responsible for the attack.

Another group, the National Front for the Salvation of Libya, has claimed responsibility for Tuesday's attack and vowed to continue to stalk Khadafy.

"He will not be able to save himself every time," a spokesman for that exile group said.

The British Foreign Ministry in London rejected Libyan charges of British involvement.

Britain broke diplomatic relations with Libya last month after a British policewoman was killed by gunfire from the Libyan Embassy in London into a crowd of anti-Khadafy demonstrators.

Today, Libyan officials with automatic weapons stopped cars and trucks and searched some vehicles. "People's Committees" of civilians brandishing automatic weapons were posted at dozens of city intersections.

In its dispatch from Tripoli, ANSA said Tuesday's attack was launched against Khadafy's headquarters barracks south of Tripoli by about 20 men armed with rocket grenades and automatic weapons.

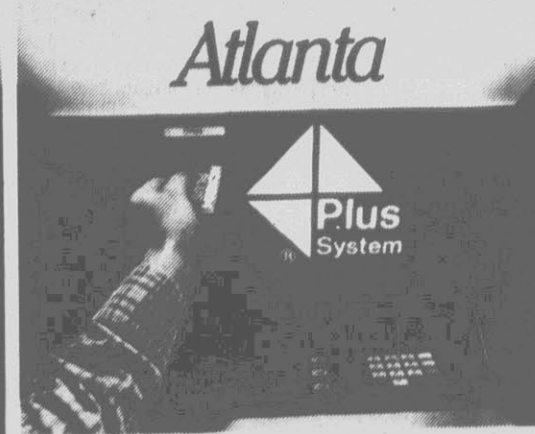

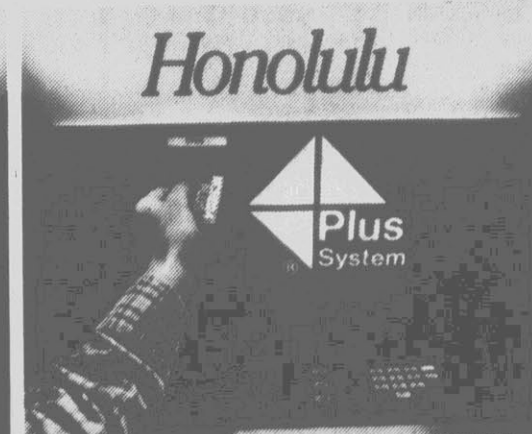

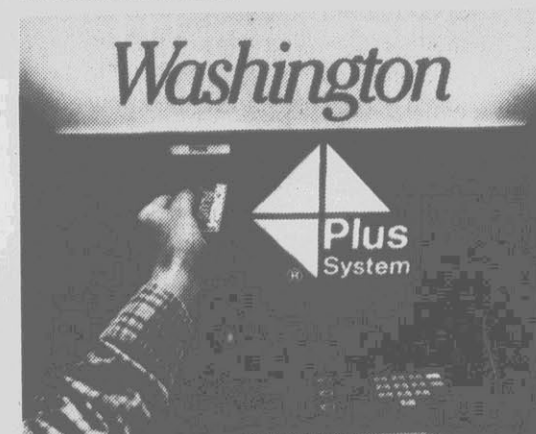

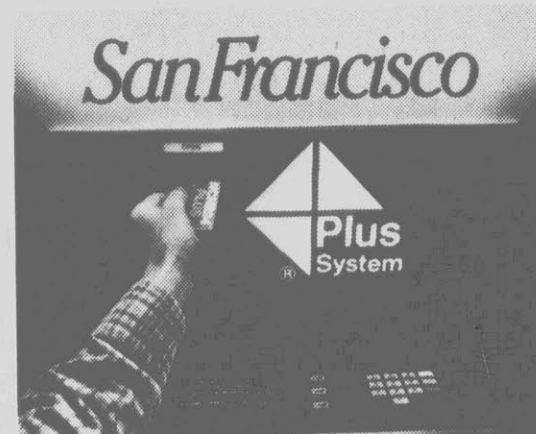

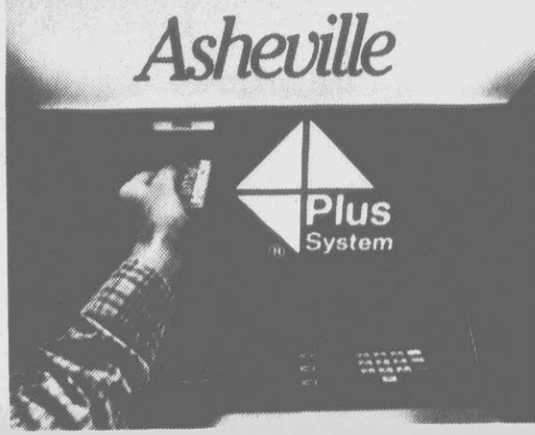

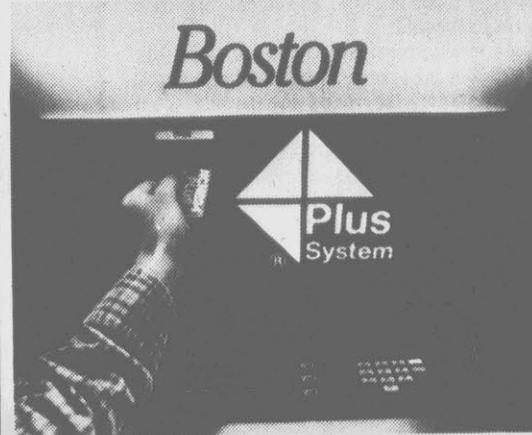

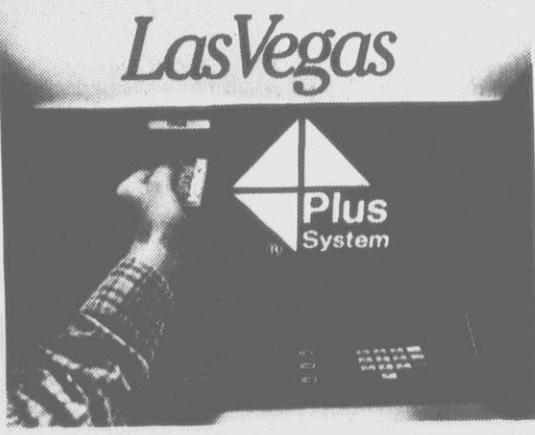

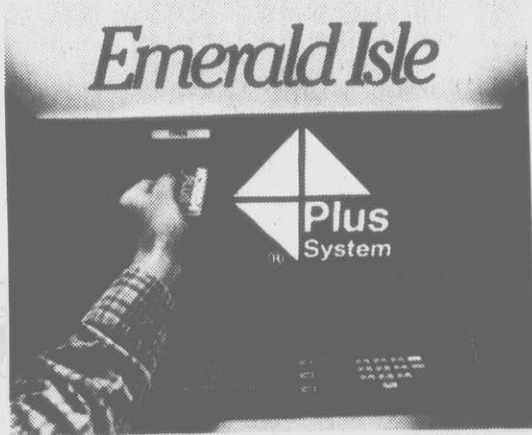

Lebanese Cabinet Holds 1st Session

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A new coalition Cabinet, formed in a bid to end Lebanon's civil war, held its first regular meeting today as shells crashed in the zone dividing Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors.

The Cabinet met at President Amin Gemayel's summer home in the Christian stronghold of Bikfaya, a mountain town 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

On Wednesday, the ministers failed to meet as scheduled because they could not agree where to hold the session. Two leaders of anti-government militias said they were afraid to travel to a meeting at the presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda.

Vote ...

Gaskins, based on the unofficial returns, holds a clear majority in the race.

Had Grooms been eligible to be certified as party nominee, and Grooms' vote total been counted, Rouse, as second place finisher, could have called for a runoff because Gaskins would not have a majority of the votes.

Commenting on the Grooms' case, Everett said "we ought to" check on the eligibility of a candidate, but "the form that is used in that race (to file as a candidate for the Board of Commissioners) does not state where he lives, what township he lives in ... other than he is a registered voter of the county."

"In this situation ... (Grooms) was a resident of Greenville Township last fall," Everett said. "He moved from River Hills to Club Pines, and came in, as he should have done, properly, and changed his precinct."

According to Everette, "a clerk pulled his card, noted the change of precinct number, change of address," but "did not mark through Greenville Township and change that to Winterville. When he came in to file, there was nothing to alert anyone that he lived in Winterville township."

"We ought to have caught it," Everette said, but "the ultimate responsibility is on him (Grooms). He listed taxes in Winterville Township ... signed the abstract. Everything south of (U.S.) 264 (Greenville Boulevard) in that area (from near Pitt Plaza to the intersection of U.S. 264 and U.S. 264A west of Greenville) is in Winterville Township."

In the other commissioner races, incumbent Bruce Strickland, who received 222 votes in Simpson, still led Carl Whitfield, who picked up 234 Simpson votes, by a total of 7,772 to 4,696, while Eugene James, seeking incumbent Bob Martin's seat (Martin did not seek reelection) received 282 votes in Simpson for a total of 8,784 in his race with Annette MacRae, who received 159 votes in Simpson for a county-wide total of 3,815.

Koreans Arrest Four As Spies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Four Koreans, including two club hostesses, have been arrested on espionage charges after they allegedly were recruited by North Korean agents in Japan and Singapore, South Korean authorities said today.

The Agency for National Security Planning said Kim In-hwan, 31, was accused of passing on military information when he visited North Korea in January for training. Kim was said to have been recruited by a North Korean agent in Singapore.

The agency said Kim was under North Korean instructions to open an English-language school in Seoul and recruit students for use in an anti-American campaign.

The agency, formerly the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, said two Korean hostesses working in Japan were charged with spying for North Korea.

In another case, a 59-year-old Korean who had lived in Japan was accused of espionage but received clemency because he repented his wrongdoings, the agency said.

The agency did not say when the alleged spies were arrested, but said all four, charged with violating South Korea's National Security Law, had operated independently.

CLARIFICATION

On March 29, The Daily Reflector published a photo and caption which described Alene Harris being helped from a neighbor's house following the tornado of the night before.

The caption said she and a companion, Ray Brewer of Greenville, were thrown from a house trailer located on SR 1732 into a field across the road during the Wednesday night storm.

In a subsequent story it was clarified that Alene Harris is Ray Brewer's sister.

We reiterate the clarification and express our regrets for any misunderstanding the original caption may have caused.

Hunt Launches Attack on Helms

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt launched a new attack today on Republican Sen. Jesse Helms' stand on foreign policy, saying Helms is sabotaging President Reagan's efforts in El Salvador.

Hunt also said he was pleased with his showing in Tuesday's Democratic primary for the U.S. Senate. The primary results mean Hunt will face Helms in the November general election.

Hunt said Helms is "trying to play secretary of state" and his opinions on Central America are out of step with North Carolina, the Republican Party and President Reagan.

"Twice in the last week, Jesse Helms has embarrassed the administration with charges designed to undercut the president's policy," Hunt said.

He cited the letter Helms sent to President Reagan calling for the resignation of the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador and raising questions about that country's elections before they happened. He also noted Helms' public criticism of Reagan's policy in El Salvador.

"I support the basic thrust of U.S. policy in El Salvador, which is to encourage free elections and continued progress toward democratic self rule," Hunt said at his weekly news conference. "I believe that Sen. Helms, in attempting to cast doubt on the legitimacy of those elections, is sabotaging that policy."

Hunt said he disagreed with Reagan about the mining of harbors in Nicaragua and said the president should have done more to stop the death squads in El Salvador and to improve that country's economy.

He said he would support sending U.S. troops to El Salvador only as a last resort. But Hunt said it was important that other countries know the United States is willing to send troops there.

In the Democratic primary Tuesday for the U.S. Senate, Hunt got almost 78 percent of the vote against two little known politicians. He said he believed he was the leading Democratic vote getter in each county.

"I am very pleased with that," Hunt said. "We got 77 percent knowing we had people on the other side who were going to vote for anybody else."

Hunt said he has started a new series of television commercials designed to force Helms to defend the record he compiled during his 12 years in Washington.

He said he believes Helms and his allies are nervous in light of an announcement by the Fund for a Conservative Majority that it will contribute to Helms' re-election fund.

Helms was in a Senate Agriculture Committee meeting and could not be reached for comment.

Siamese Twins Get More Tests

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Week-old Siamese twin girls continue to undergo tests at the Medical University of South Carolina as doctors prepare to separate them.

The infants, born last week at Grand Strand General Hospital, are joined at the abdomen and share a liver and a portion of intestines. A team of 11 physicians is handling the case.

The infants, who remain in fair condition at the hospital, were scheduled for an arteriogram Thursday, said MUSC spokesperson Shirley Trainor.

"Dye is injected into their systems to monitor the blood flow through the abdomen and abdominal organs," she said.

Doctors said last week that tests could take as long as three weeks before they make the decision to go ahead and separate the infants.

Last week, the twins underwent a cardiac catheterization to check the condition of their hearts. On Monday, physicians performed X-Rays and CAT scans.

Miss Trainor said that the parents of the twins still request that their names not be released. She said she did not know how long it might be before doctors decide to proceed with the separation surgery.

Open House Set

In celebration of National Transportation Week, May 13-19, member counties of Highway Division 2 of the state Department of Transportation will hold an open house at maintenance headquarters in Greenville.

The open house will begin at 10 a.m. May 19 and end at 12:30 p.m. Local DOT representatives will be on hand to discuss the area's road maintenance program. Displays featuring equipment, road maps, photos and static displays will be set up. The maintenance department is located on N.C.

Rampants Crush Kinston, 16-5

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
KINSTON — Mike Smith ripped a pair of triples and Billy Michel added two doubles as the Rose High School Rampants rode a 15-hit attack for a 16-5 victory over Kinston Wednesday in Big East 4-A baseball action.

Smith finished with a three-for-four performance at the plate and scored a pair of runs, while Mark Nover went two-for-two at the plate, scored twice and drove in a pair.

Winning pitcher Mike Kinley evened his record at 4-4 as he yielded just two hits and struck out five, but walked ten in five innings. Steve Wall came on to in the sixth to close out the contest.

"Mike Smith continues to improve for us," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "He hits the ball where it's pitched. I'm real pleased with the way we hit the ball all day, and some of the breaks went our way for a change."

Twelve of the 16 Rose players credited with an at-bat got a hit including seven extra base hits.

Kinston took the early lead with a pair of runs in the bottom of the first, but Rose shattered that margin in the second.

Michel opened with a double to right field, and Smith drove an rbi triple to center for the first run. A triple by Van Alston evened the score. After Wall reached on an error, Nover reached first on a bunt single to drive in Alston.

Eric Woodworth singled to drive in Wall and Nover scored on Michel's second double of the inning. But courtesy runner Battle Emory was nailed at the plate attempting to score from first on that play.

Rose plated five more runs in the third on rbi singles by Nover and Traye Fuqua. But the final three were made possible by five wild pitches by the Viking staff.

Smith opened the top of the fourth with his second triple and later scored on a fielder's choice by Wall.

Junior Simms and David Mitchell walked in the bottom half of the frame and Ike Brown ripped a double to trim the margin to 12-4.

Neither team threatened to score again until the seventh when the Rose reserves ripped four hits to drive in four runs. Doyle Kirkland led off with a base on balls, Larke Weatherington singled and Gary Scott drove in Kirkland with a hit. Joey Hallow ripped a double to plate Weatherington, and Eric Jarman followed with another double to drive in Scott and Hallow.

Pinch-hitter Ralph Sutton doubled to open the bottom of the seventh, and he later scored on a sacrifice fly by Billy Reary.

"We needed a win here with just a couple of games left," Vincent said. "This keeps us in the race, but we need to keep hitting the ball."

The Rampants improved their conference mark to 9-2, even with Rocky Mount for the lead, while the Vikings slipped to 8-12 overall and a 4-7 league record.

Rose plays host to Fike tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Famine Ends For Parker As Reds Defeat Montreal, 6-4

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
It's been a home run famine for Dave Parker this season, but he finally feasted on a pitch from Bill Gullickson.

"It's one of the few times in baseball where you go to the plate trying to hit a home run and it happens," said Parker, whose first blast of the season led the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos Wednesday night.

The two-run shot with two outs in the eighth inning was Parker's first homer in a Reds' uniform since he hit one on the first day of spring training. In fact, Parker's teammates had organized a "home run pool" to guess when he would hit his first this season.

"Yeah, I knew they had the pool," said Parker. "It was all in fun, and then some reporter in Cincinnati put it in the paper. I admit I went up to the plate trying to hit a home run. It was that kind of situation - we're losing by one run with a man at first base and two out."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was New York 3, Atlanta 1; Houston 7, Philadelphia 1; San Diego 3, St. Louis 2 and Chicago 7, Los Angeles 0. Rain washed out the Pittsburgh-San Francisco game.

Gullickson, 0-3, had yielded only one hit since the first inning before Duane Walker singled with two outs in the eighth. Parker then launched a towering fly beyond the right-field fence in Olympic Stadium to give the Reds a 5-4 lead.

The Reds added a run in the ninth on a single by Cesar Cedeño and a single by Eddie Milner and throwing error by third baseman Tim Wallach.

Tom Hume, 2-3, the fourth Reds pitcher, worked two innings for the victory, while John Franco pitched the ninth for his second save as the hot Reds won for the 10th time in 11 games.

"I don't care how many home runs he hits, as long as he keeps getting those RBIs," said Cincinnati catcher Dann Bilardello, mindful that Parker leads the team with 20. "That's why we got him over here - he contributes so much with his bat and his leadership."

Mets 3, Braves 1
In New York, Keith Hernandez singled home the tie-breaking run in the third inning and Ron Darling and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter as the Mets beat Atlanta to snap a three-game losing streak.

Darling, 3-2, pitched six innings and allowed five hits, struck out four and walked four. Doug Sisk and Jesse Orosco combined to pitch two-hit ball the rest of the way, with Orosco picking up his sixth save.

Atlanta's Rick Mahler, 0-1, in his first start of the season after nine relief appearances, lasted 5 1-3 innings, and allowed eight of the Mets' 10 hits. He struck out one and walked three.

"It's obvious I have a great deal of confidence in my bullpen," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson. "Darling was wavering, and when he goes, he goes in a hurry."

Cubs 7, Dodgers 0
Leon Durham drove in three runs with a pair of singles, and Scott Sanderson and Rich Bordi combined on a five-hitter to lead Chicago over Los Angeles.

Sanderson, 4-1, allowed four hits in five innings before leaving because of a muscle spasm in his back. Bordi gave up one hit in the final four innings to earn his first major league save.

The Cubs got all the runs they needed in the first inning when they scored four times to knock out Burt Hooton, 0-1. Durham singled in two of the runs.

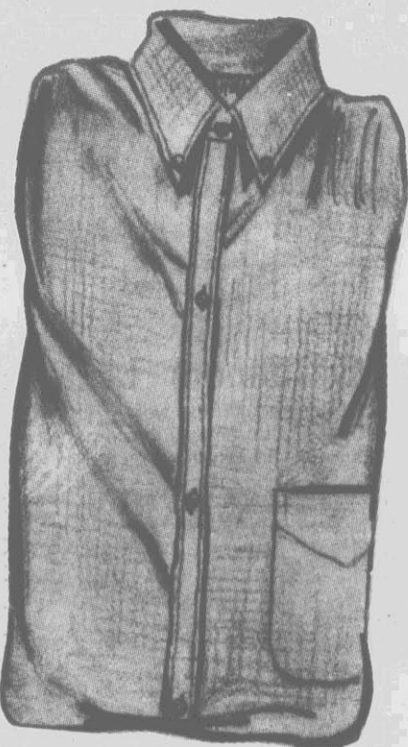

"I'm relaxed and I'm getting pitches I can drive," said Durham. "You have to be patient up there. There were a couple of times I wasn't patient today, and I didn't hit."

Padres 3, Cardinals 2
In St. Louis, Steve Garvey tripled home Tony Gwynn with two out in the sixth inning and Terry Kennedy followed with a homer, powering San Diego over the Cardinals.

Kennedy's home run followed Garvey's hit off John Stuper, 0-2. The San Diego rally began when the St. Louis right-hander walked Alan Wiggins with one out and Gwynn tapped into a forceout.

Left-hander Mark Thurmond, 2-2, and Goose Gossage combined on a four-hitter. Gossage pitched the last two innings to pick up his ninth save.

Sox, Brewers Play Marathon

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If the Chicago White Sox and Milwaukee Brewers aren't in midseason form yet, they probably never will be.

After playing 34 innings in two days — including an American League-record 25-inning marathon that lasted 8 hours and 6 minutes, making it the longest major-league game ever time-wise — both teams might be ready for the All-Star break. The game was suspended by an AL curfew after 17 innings Tuesday night tied 3-3.

"If you're going to play them that long, you might as well win them," said Chicago's Tom Seaver, the winning pitcher in both games as the White Sox captured the record game 7-6 on Harold Baines' homer and then took the regularly scheduled game 5-4.

Seaver hurled the top of the 25th as Chicago's eighth pitcher and allowed one hit. It was his seventh career relief appearance and first since 1976. Seaver then gave up three hits — two of them homers to Roy Howell and Robin Yount — in 8 1-3 innings of the nightcap after retiring the first 14 batters.

In other AL action, the Detroit Tigers downed the Kansas City Royals 3-1, the Minnesota Twins beat the California Angels 5-2, the Baltimore Orioles took two from the Toronto Blue Jays 7-4 and 7-3, the Seattle Mariners defeated the Oakland Athletics 4-1, the New York Yankees pounded the Cleveland Indians 11-4 and the Boston Red Sox blanked the Texas Rangers 2-0.

The previous longest game in elapsed time was 7 hours, 23 minutes when the San Francisco Giants defeated the New York Mets 8-6 in 23 innings on May 31, 1964. The old AL time record was June 24, 1962, when the New York Yankees outlasted Detroit 9-7 in a 22-inning game that lasted exactly seven hours.

The former AL record for most innings was 24, originally set in the Philadelphia Athletics' 4-1 victory over Boston in 1906 and equaled in 1945 when Philadelphia and Detroit played a 1-1 tie.

The longest major-league game was 26 innings on May 1, 1920, when the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves played a 1-1 tie. The only other 25-inning contest was the St. Louis Cardinals' 4-3 victory over Seaver's Mets in 1974. Seaver also was a member of the Mets when they lost to Houston 1-0 in 24 innings in 1968.

"I'm more than happy to put them (the wins) on my side of the ledger," Seaver said. "But the important thing is this team earned two victories. It's a great lift because these guys are exhausted. The records and all the other numbers are nice for the media and the fans because that's the mystique that makes baseball what it is. But we were just concerned about winning."

But inning after inning it seemed no one would ever win. Both teams scored two runs in the ninth inning Tuesday night. When play resumed, Ben Oglivie's three-run homer in the 21st gave Milwaukee a 6-3 lead but the White Sox tied in the bottom half.

They blew a chance to win it in the 23rd when Dave Stegman led off with a single. One out later, on a hit-and-run play, Tom Paciorek singled. But as Stegman rounded third he was physically stopped by coach Jim Leyland and was ruled out for coach's interference.

Scott Fletcher's two-run single broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning of the nightcap.

Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachmann held a brief team meeting following the sweep. "All I told them was that these were tough ones to lose, but the world's not going to end by any means," he said. "We're not going to hang our heads. But I've had a lot of happier days in my life, you can bet on that."

Tigers 3, Royals 1

Alan Trammell collected three hits as Detroit stretched its road record to 14-0. In winning their sixth game in a row and handing the fading Royals their seventh straight defeat, the Tigers moved within two of the AL record for consecutive road victories established by the 1912 Washington Senators. The major-league mark is 17 by the 1916 New York Giants. The Tigers' 25-4 record equals the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers for the best start after 29 games.

Darrell Evans doubled to start the Detroit second inning and scored on a double by Rusty Kuntz, who went to third on a throwing error by loser Danny Jackson on Tom Brookens' grounder and scored on Lou Whitaker's grounder. Trammell, who leads the league with a .381 batting average, singled in the fifth, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Marty Castillo's single.

Twins 5, Angels 2

Gary Gaetti doubled to trigger one uprising and contributed an RBI single to another as Minnesota won its sixth straight game and moved into first place in the AL West, one-half game ahead of Oakland and California. With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Gaetti doubled off Geoff Zahn and scored on Ron Washington's single. After Reggie Jackson's homer tied the score in the bottom of the sixth, the Twins scored three runs in the seventh. Tim Teufel singled, went to third on a single by Tom Brunansky and continued home on center fielder Fred Lynn's throwing error. Brunansky scored on Gaetti's single and Mike Hart's grounder produced the third run.

Orioles 7-7, Blue Jays 4-3

Floyd Rayford's three-run homer capped a five-run Baltimore rally in the eighth inning of the nightcap following a disputed two-out steal by Eddie Murray. The Orioles, who have won five games in a row and 11 of their last 12, took the opener as Scott McGregor scattered eight hits for his 100th major-league victory and Jim Dwyer's two-run single keyed a four-run fourth inning.

Mariners 4, A's 1

Bob Kearney's ninth-inning double, only the fourth Seattle hit, broke a 1-1 tie and Jack Perconte added his third hit, a two-run double. Darnell Coles walked with two out and Kearney lined the next pitch from Keith Atherton off the left-field fence. Perconte's RBI single in the eighth off Ray Burris gave Seattle a 1-0 lead. The A's tied the score in the bottom of the eighth on a two-out single by Joe Morgan. Seattle starter Ed Vande Berg, working with only two days rest because of Mike Moore's tender arm, allowed two hits in six innings and won a place in the regular rotation.

Yankees 11, Indians 4

Don Mattingly drove in five runs with a homer, single and sacrifice fly and Dave Winfield and Roy Smalley also homered, while Phil Niekro went seven innings for his fifth victory in six AL decisions. Mattingly's three-run homer capped a four-run first inning against Rick Sutcliffe, Winfield blasted a two-run shot in the and Smalley added a solo homer in the fourth. Mattingly picked up his other RBIs with a sacrifice fly in the fourth and a single in the sixth. Only one of the runs off the 45-year old Niekro was earned and his ERA is 1.03.

Red Sox 2, Rangers 0

Bob Ojeda and Bob Stanley combined on a six-hit shutout and Marty Barrett scored one run and drove in the other. Ojeda, who beat Detroit 1-0 in his previous outing, allowed five hits in seven innings and Stanley picked up his fifth save. In the third inning, Barrett bounced a two-out infield hit off loser Mike Mason's chest, stole second and scored on a single by Dwight Evans. The Red Sox added their other run in fifth when Glenn Hoffman doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Barrett's sacrifice fly.

Ty Cobb batted .300 or better for 23 consecutive seasons, 1906-1928, a major-league record.

Control Was Big Factor

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Soviets' lack of control over possible athlete defections and anti-Soviet demonstrations at the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles sparked their decision to boycott the event, says Richard Mandell, a sports historian at the University of South Carolina.

"There's no way the Americans can guarantee defections won't occur," Mandell said.

The Soviets' "nightmare" would be to have the "most beautiful gymnast and the most handsome sprinter both defect and become Hollywood media stars," the USC professor explained.

Twelve years ago in Munich, the athletes were kept "more or less contained" in separate quarters, but "Los Angeles is spread out. There is no way to control all of these people," Mandell said.

"You just can't control that many people in Southern California."

Mandell served as an adviser for former President Carter on the 1980 U.S. boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics.

As for possible terrorist activity, which the Soviet news agency Tass reported as a reason for this summer's boycott, Mandell said, "There might be some American screwball. But that's not what they fear."

Then, in the second, UC put the game on ice with four more runs, boosting the lead to 7-1. Abram Lang walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Jonathon Powers reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. A wild pitch scored Lang and moved Powers to third and he scored on a double by Andra Hopkins. Gibbs then singled in Hopkins.

Gibbs' homer came in the third when Union Carbide added six more runs. The final run came over in the fourth. The Jaycees picked up single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings.

Two more crossed in the fourth before First Federal came up with three in the fifth, all scoring on a homer by Leen Watson. The Exchange rallied for three in their half of the fifth for a 12-9 lead, only to see First Federal tie it up once more, as First Federal scored three, two of them on a homer by Mike Cox.

Then, in the bottom of the inning, Harmon got all of a pitch with one away, to put it out of the park and give the Exchange the victory.

Bullets Clinch Tobacco Belt Title

CRESWELL — Jamesville High School rolled up a 10-2 baseball victory over Creswell yesterday and clinched the championship of the Tobacco Belt Conference.

The victory gives the Bullets a bye in the first round of the 1-A state playoffs. Jamesville will play the winner of the first round game between the runners-up in the Carolina and Tri-County conferences.

Both teams scored single runs in the first inning of the game and Creswell took the lead with another run in the third inning.

But the Bullets took charge from there on in, scoring three times in the third. Rusty Holliday led off with a single and moved up on a passed ball. He scored when Terry Perry reached on an error. Earl Bowen singled in Perry and Whit Brown walked. A sacrifice by Chris James brought in Bowen for a 4-2 lead. Jamesville added four in the fifth and two in the sixth to close out the scoring.

Holliday led the Jamesville hitting with three, while Richie Ange, Perry and Bowen each had two. Ange and Perry each had a double. Mike Davenport led the Creswell hitting with two.

Jamesville is now 18-1 overall and 14-0 in Tobacco Belt play.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central pulled out a 3-2 eight-inning victory over C.B. Aycock last night and opened the door for Farmville Central to pull even with the Falcons for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference baseball race.

The game was scoreless until the sixth inning when Aycock broke the ice. John Thomas singled and moved up on an error. He was sacrificed to third and when Johnny Carr attempted a squeeze, a pitchout caught Thomas in a run-down. Unfortunately, he escaped back to third untouched. Carr then walked as did Jeff Lynch. John Herring's grounder was relayed to home, but was not in time to get Thomas.

The Rams tied it up with one in the bottom of the sixth. Rick Radford struck out but reached on a wild pitch. Michael Warren sacrificed him up and an error on a pickoff play let Radford score.

Aycock went back ahead with one in the eighth. Lynch and Herring both walked and a double error let Lynch score.

The Rams rallied once more, scoring two to win it. Radford reached on a bunt single — the first Greene Central hit of the day. Warren reached on an error on his sacrifice bunt and Kevin Langston squeezed in Radford with the tying run. Todd Grant also bunted, scoring Warren with the game-winner.

Aycock pitcher Tony Tillman took the hard loss after striking out 17 and allowing just two hits.

E. Germans Likely Out

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland on Thursday dropped the description "Olympic qualification" from a preview of track and field events scheduled this weekend.

Western observers in East Berlin took this as an indication that East Germany would follow the Soviet Union and Bulgaria in pulling out of the Los Angeles Summer Olympics.

Neues Deutschland referred to the meets in Erfurt and Jena on Saturday and Sunday as "sports festivals." The events had been listed as "Olympic qualifications" in the official East German sports calendar for 1984.

Similar contests at Potsdam last weekend, before the Soviet pullout, were described as "Olympic qualifications" by the official East German news agency ADN.

The authoritative Communist newspaper carried no other reports on the controversy surrounding the Soviet announcement Tuesday to withdraw from the Los Angeles Games. Nor did it specify East Germany's plans.

Bulgaria's announcement Wednesday to join the Soviet pullout was not reported in Neues Deutschland or other state-run East German media.

PIKEVILLE — Greene Central held off a rally by Charles B. Aycock for a 6-5 victory and clinched the Eastern Carolina Conference softball championship yesterday.

YOUTH IS SERVED

NEW YORK (AP) — Rosemary Casals, a veteran of the pro tennis circuit, has reached that age, familiar to all athletes, where she sees nothing but young faces around her.

"I don't know anybody any more," Casals said. "I look around the place and here are all these kids who should be in school. This is supposed to be women's tennis but it isn't any more. It's kids' tennis. And in a lot of ways, it's kind of sad."

Space Shuttle May Lead To Exotic Drugs

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An experiment to be conducted during next month's space shuttle flight could open the door for commercial marketing of exotic drugs that can only be made in quantity and purity in weightlessness.

The first made-in-space medicine to be tested on animals and human volunteers will be produced in orbit on the 12th space shuttle mission. If the drug proves successful, it will be submitted to the Food and Drug Administration for approval.

The industry sponsors, McDonnell Douglas Astronautics and the Ortho Pharmaceuticals division of Johnson & Johnson, won't say what drug will be produced, citing proprietary reasons. Disclosure is expected when clinical testing begins on humans late this year or early in 1985.

James T. Rose, manager of space processing for McDonnell Douglas, said only that the product will be a hormone that is to be separated from a mixture of protein. Protein materials can be used to correct body deficiencies.

Interferon and urokinase fit that description, and the two companies are known to consider them candidate medicines for space manufacture. Each is difficult and expensive to produce in Earth's gravity, and are of uncertain purity.

Interferon helps the body resist viral infections, and is receiving development emphasis as a treatment for certain types of cancer. Urokinase is a natural protein that dissolves blood clots.

A machine called an electrophoresis processing unit, built by McDonnell Douglas, has been flown on four space shuttle flights. Each time, astronauts separated a variety of biological materials and proved, Rose said, the feasibility of making medicines of purity and quantity in zero-gravity.

A McDonnell-Douglas engineer, Charles D. Walker, will be a member of shuttle Challenger's six-man crew when the space plane lifts off on June 19. He will operate the machine continuously for at least 80 hours to obtain large amount of the desired hormone.

The unit passes a stream of biological samples through an electrical field. Because each type of cell has a different electrical charge, the cells respond to the field at different points in the stream. In weightless space, cells of the same type separate from the others and are collected as virtually pure samples.

In Earth's gravity, mixtures in the solution often sink to the bottom, float to the top or collect in blobs or bubbles.

"Our earlier flights successfully demonstrated the process would separate 700 times more material per hour in the absence of gravity," Rose said. "And we demonstrated we can gain a factor of four in purity."

Johnson & Johnson will conduct the animal and human clinical tests just as it does for any potential new medicine.

Medicare Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of the drive to trim federal budget deficits, the Senate has decided Medicare beneficiaries should pay more for additional insurance that covers doctors' fees.

But the Senate — nearing the end of its third week of deliberations — was still struggling today to settle on an overall "down payment" on eliminating government red ink.

Senator after senator has made speeches in favor of serious action to cut deficits. But, so far, the only action has been votes rejecting a series of substitutes for the three-year, $144 billion deficit-reduction package President Reagan has worked out with Republican leaders.

During debate Wednesday, arguments that the elderly would have to pay more for health care were ignored as the Senate refused to block Medicare spending cuts included in the Republican deficit-reduction plan.

By a 58-36 vote, the Senate tabled — in effect killed — an amendment by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that would have barred premium increases in the Medicare supplemental "part B" which pays for physician and hospital outpatient services beyond basic hospital care. The amendment also would have kept the Medicare deductible at $75.

Under the proposed Medicare savings, previously approved by the Senate Finance Committee, premiums for part B coverage would rise by whatever amount is necessary to pay 25 percent of the program's costs. The current annual premium is $175.20.

Ex-Patients Tell Psychiatrists To Halt Involuntary Therapy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Declaring themselves victims of "sane-ism," former mental patients challenged psychiatrists to stop forcing therapy on unwilling people as the American Psychiatric Association held an unprecedented forum for patients' rights groups.

"Crimes are being committed in psychiatric hospitals across the nation," Leonard Frank, editor of the Madness Network News, told 50 people at the session Wednesday. "Patients are being wrestled to the ground and injected with drugs."

Of nearly 10,000 psychiatrists attending the association's annual meeting, only about 20 were at the forum to hear Frank and five other former mental patients condemn involuntary hospitalization and drug and electroshock therapy.

But Dr. Melvin Sabshin, the APA's national medical director, hailed the session as marking "a historical point." He blamed the low turnout on the session's hasty organization, adding, "It takes some education for psychiatrists to come to such a meeting."

The forum marked the first time the association had invited patients' rights groups to put down their placards and air grievances.

"It's important that we try to understand their criticisms," Sabshin said. "That doesn't mean we would necessarily agree with all the criticisms."

Ron Schraiber, a former mental patient from Ukiah, Calif., said the group was "not mad, we're angry."

"We are a civil rights movement," Schraiber said. "We are victims of a type of racism. We call it sane-ism. We want equal rights."

Frank, of San Francisco, extended his criticism to psychiatrists who don't use involuntary drug and electroshock therapy in their own practices but still "keep your mouths shut. And through your silence, you become accomplices."

Nevertheless, he added, "Our aim is reconciliation. But reconciliation is not possible until you renounce the use of force."

Several psychiatrists at the session said they agreed there have been abuses of drugs and electroshock therapy and called the forum an important step in improving relationships with patients.

However, most still supported use of those treatments and involuntary commitment.

"You don't treat abuses by destroying a whole structure any more than you would tear a house down because the plumbing is bad. ...

Arnold S. Relman, the journal's editor, said the new research "tells us that an important part of the added costs of teaching hospitals is probably due to the increased intensity of workup and treatment of very sick patients."

In the study, the doctors compared the fates of 102 seriously ill patients, half treated by faculty doctors and half by community physicians.

The patients in the two groups had the same illnesses, but the bills for the faculty's patients were more than twice as high, and almost twice as many of them survived to be discharged.

However, many of the faculty's patients died shortly after being sent home. Within nine months, there was no difference in the death rates between the two groups.

"Our inference is that these differences in costs and outcomes can be the result of how physicians practice and of differences in patients' preferences for what they want to happen," said Fuchs, an economist at the National Bureau of Economic Research.

"Do not resuscitate" orders were attached to the charts of 26 of the 51 patients seen by private doctors but only six of the faculty's patients.

The regulations are intended to hold down medical costs, but experts say they are likely to reduce differences in the intensity of care offered by community hospitals and university-affiliated teaching hospitals.

"If hospital services become more homogeneous," the researchers wrote, "we may see hospital mortality rise."

The latest study was conducted at Stanford University Medical Center, where some patients are cared for by medical school faculty and interns and others are seen by private community physicians.

When the seriousness of the patients' ailments was the same, the hospital bills for the faculty's patients were 11 percent higher than for the community doctors' patients. But the mortality rate in the hospital was about a third lower for the faculty patients.

The study, conducted on 2,025 patients, was published in the New England Journal of Medicine. Earlier research has shown that teaching hospitals are more expensive, but there has been little attention on what effect this spending has on patients' welfare.

An accompanying editorial by Dr.

Study Predicts More Deaths If Hospital Fee Plan Changes

BOSTON (AP) — More people may die in the nation's sophisticated teaching hospitals if the institutions have to scale back their aggressive care because of new Medicare rules that pay flat fees for treating various illnesses, a study today concludes.

The researchers found that even though treatment by doctors on medical school faculties is more expensive, their sickest patients stand a substantially better chance of being sent home than do those seen by doctors in private practice.

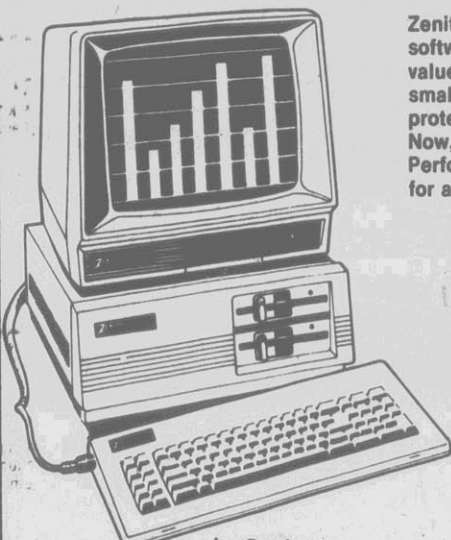

Part of the difference, however, may result from a willingness of the private doctors to allow the seriously ill to die quickly in the hospital rather than subjecting them to all-out treatment for a few more months of life.

"There is a lower in-hospital mortality" among the faculty's patients, said Victor R. Fuchs, one of the researchers. "Whether that's a gain is a judgmental matter that we don't take a position on."

The new Medicare rules, being phased in over the next three years, will pay hospitals flat fees for taking care of federally funded elderly patients, no matter how much their treatment actually costs.

NBC To Feature Aliens From 'V' In New Lineup

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, hoping that proven stars can lift it from the No. 3 position it has occupied since 1975, will have Bill Cosby, Michael Landon, Lynda Carter, Loni Anderson and the aliens from "V" in new series next season, the network announced today.

NBC will debut nine new programs. Six are one-hour dramas and three are half-hour comedies, giving the network 10 sitcoms.

ABC announced last week it would schedule nine new shows next season, while CBS said it would add five new programs to its fall lineup.

NBC canceled 20 shows, including all 10 new series that began the 1983-84 season, eight mid-season replacements, "Real People," which began in 1979, and "Mama's Family," which debuted during the 1982-83 season.

Three second-season starters will return: "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes," "Riptide" and "Night Court."

Shows that began the 1983-84 season and have been dropped include: "First Camera," "For Love and Honor," "Mr. Smith," "The Roustabouts," "Bay City Blues," "Manimal," "The Yellow Rose," "Jennifer Slept Here," "Boone," "We Got It Made," "Mama's Family" and "Real People."

Shows that were added during the season and were canceled included: "Buffalo Bill," "The New Show," "Legmen," "The Master," "Father Murphy," "Double Trouble," "The Duck Factory" and "People Are Funny."

NBC will keep intact its Monday night lineup ("TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes" and the "NBC Monday Night at the Movies") and its winning Tuesday night schedule ("The A-Team," "Riptide" and "Remington Steele.")

"V," the high-rated miniseries that was broadcast in May of 1983 and had a successful sequel this month, will return Marc Singer, Faye Grant and Jane Badler to the series. The show will anchor NBC's Friday nights, where the network has been floundering throughout the 1980s. NBC introduced an entire new slate of Friday programs twice this past season.

Also on the Friday night lineup is "Hunter," from executive producer Steven J. Cannell, whose "A-Team" is NBC's most popular series. Cannell's other current series are NBC's "Riptide" and ABC's "Hardcastle & McCormick."

Landon, who starred on NBC for 25 years in "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie," stars in "Highway to Heaven," billed as a fantasy-drama. Landon plays an angel sent to Earth to help the needy and spread good cheer.

Cosby, who was the first black to star in a series in "I Spy" in 1965, is featured in "The Bill Cosby Show." He plays an obstetrician living with his wife and four children above his office in a New York City brownstone.

Miss Carter ("Wonder Woman") and Miss Anderson ("WKRP in Cincinnati") co-star in the comedy-mystery "Partners in Crime," in which they play owners of a private investigation agency willed them by the man whom both women had married.

Here's NBC's schedule for the 1984-85 season:

Monday: "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes," and "NBC Monday Night at the Movies."

Tuesday: "The A-Team," "Riptide," and "Remington Steele."

Wednesday: "Highway to Heaven," "The Facts of Life," "It's Your Move," starring Justin Bateman from "Silver Spoons" as a scheming kid who is at odds with his adult neighbor, and "St. Elsewhere."

Thursday: "The Bill Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," "Night Court," and "Hill Street Blues."

Friday: "V," "Hunter," and "Miami Vice," a drama about two offbeat detectives.

Saturday: "Diff'rent Strokes," "Gimme a Break," "Partners in Crime," and "Hot Pursuit," about a young married couple who were framed and go on the run.

Sunday: "Silver Spoons," "Punky Brewster," about a young girl who comes to live with an old man, "Knight Rider," and "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies."

Pentagon Studies 'Pool' Coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is being urged to consider creating a "pool" of reporters ready on a moment's notice to accompany future U.S. invasion forces without being told where they are headed, The Washington Post said today.

The newspaper said the recommendation was contained in a report sent to Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, by a 14-member panel headed by retired Maj. Gen. Winant Sidle appointed last November to advise the Defense Department on how to cooperate with the news media during combat operations.

The report, which Vessey will forward to Weinberger with his recommendations, offered no assessment of the Pentagon's handling of coverage of the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada Oct. 25, noting that Vessey had not requested comment, the Post said.

Vessey appointed the panel of seven former journalists and seven military public information officers after news organizations strongly protested the Pentagon's decision to prohibit reporters from entering the Caribbean island until the third day of the invasion. According to the Post, the Sidle panel said the Pentagon should allow news coverage of military operations "to the maximum degree possible, consistent with mission security and safety of U.S. forces."

The panel, however, recommended that reporters who violate Pentagon security guidelines be barred from further coverage of an operation, the newspaper said. The panel declared that reporters and editors "must exercise responsibility" in covering military operations.

As part of an effort to ensure maximum possible news coverage of invasions and other military actions in the future, the panel reportedly said, an emergency pool of reporters might be established to accompany U.S. forces on short notice, without advance knowledge of their destination.

The panel headed by Sidle, a former chief Pentagon spokesman in the 1960s and early 1970s, said media access to military operations should be governed by how well reporters voluntarily comply with security guidelines and ground rules set by the Pentagon on a case-by-case basis, the Post reported.

A RIDE INTO THE PAST ... Bethel Elementary students Randy House and Keyford Langley (sitting) take a ride into the past during the school's celebration of Heritage Day. Exhibits at the school featured items from the past, including this buggy, that are unfamiliar to many students. Waiting their turn to try out the "new" transportation are Carol Nicholson and Shane Riddick (standing). (Barry Gaskins Photo)

Georgia Sees Crop Damages

By The Associated Press
Farmers in six middle Georgia counties, which were hit hard by high winds and heavy rains last week, estimate they will lose millions of dollars worth of crops and property because of weather damage.

Damage totals from Telfair, Toombs, Tattnall, Wheeler, Montgomery and Bulloch counties are preliminary estimates submitted this week to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

More comprehensive reports will be prepared within a couple of weeks in an effort to gain federal disaster aid, ASCS district director Hugh Brock said Wednesday.

The weather heavily damaged pecan orchards and timber in Telfair, Toombs and Tattnall counties and ruined up to $1 million in growing Toombs County crops, including the county's famed onion crop. The weather caused about $750,000 in soil erosion losses and other land damage in Bulloch County.

As many as 900 pecan trees worth up to $1,000 each were uprooted when a tornado Thursday cut a five to 10 mile path through Telfair County, said Chuck Riley, ASCS director in Telfair County.

About $350,000 worth of Telfair County timber also was estimated destroyed, along with $150,000 worth of peanuts. Damage to farm dwellings and out-buildings was estimated at $450,000.

In Toombs County, losses to wheat, tobacco and onions may total $800,000 to $1 million, said county extension director Aurice Hartley.

Toombs County timber losses, estimated at $500,000, and about $200,000 damage in eroded land from heavy rains will be more long-lasting problems, Hartley said.

About $750,000 worth of damage was caused in Bulloch County when 5 inches of rain in one hour Thursday eroded soil and washed away field terraces and pond dams, said John Rudowski, director of Bulloch's ASCS office.

The extent of damage to Georgia farms and crops was "the worst we've had probably in several years," Brock said. "This was more widespread than anything we've had in the 14 years I've been here."

The disaster is particularly affecting because hard-pressed farmers had just "put the most expensive crop ever in the ground" with rising seed, fertilizer and fuel costs, Riley said.

"The extra expense (of replanting and reworking damaged lands) is going to be a little much for many of them," he said.

No dollar estimates were made in the losses of almost 1,000 acres of timber and about 180 acres of pecans in Bulloch County.

Land damage was estimated at $500,000 in Montgomery County, and farm buildings valued at $500,000 were reported destroyed.

About 1,000 pecan trees were destroyed in Tattnall County, and timber losses were estimated at $1.25 million, Brock said. Damage to farm structures was reported at $680,000, and land damage was put at $400,000, he said.

Pilot Housing Program Starts

RALEIGH (AP) — A new pilot program developed by the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency will enable a limited number of families earning between $12,500 and $18,500 to buy their first homes, Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday.

At today's 13.5 percent interest rates, it would take an income of $21,000 to qualify to buy a $40,000 house, but the new program will allow a family with an income as low as $12,500 to buy the same home.

The program will contribute up to $100 each month toward mortgage payments on a house. The contribution is a loan which will be repaid when the house is sold.

The Pilot Homeownership Assistance Program will help about 50 families in the first round, Hunt said, and will target families in the far western and far eastern parts of the state.

The program will also direct loans to counties affected by the March 28 tornadoes.

Potential buyers will be required to pay 5 percent down.

Primary Voting Falls Below Projections

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Voter turnout for Tuesday's primaries was below what state Elections Director Alex Brock expected, but he says a traditionally high turnout area may have been sabotaged by weather.

Brock said the Board of Elections bases turnout on votes cast for president or governor, whichever figure is larger. Basing turnout on the governor's race, the figure was 40.3 percent — lower than the 50 percent Brock predicted.

However, Brock said his projections were based only on Democratic voters because Republican participation in primaries is notoriously low.

"The only negative factor I ran into was in a section of the state that has traditionally been a salvation to turnout — far western counties," he said. "They were bombarded with torrential rains and thunderstorms in the early hours. I don't think there's any question that that had a considerable bearing."

Of 2.1 million registered Democrats, 942,345 (44.8 percent) voted for governor and 957,697 (45.6 percent) for president.

Republicans didn't vote for president; Ronald Reagan was declared the winner and got all 53 of the state's delegates. In the governor's race, 137,826 of 704,000 registered Republicans voted for a turnout of 19.5 percent.

Brock said overall turnout was good, although GOP primary turnout usually ranges from 27 to 35 percent. Between 45 and 48 percent of Democrats usually cast primary ballots.

County election boards across the state begin certifying results today. They'll mail the results to the state board, which will announce official vote totals May 21.

Based on unofficial results, Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale captured 43 of the state's 88 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco. Sen. Gary Hart got 19 delegates and the Rev. Jesse Jackson got 13. The remaining 13 are reserved for party and elected officials who will be uncommitted.

With 2,323 or 98.7 percent of 2,352 precincts reporting in the presidential race, Mondale had 337,877 votes or 35.3 percent. Hart placed second with 286,609 votes or 29.9 percent and Jackson ran a strong third with 249,331 votes or 26 percent.

Jackson, who campaigned heavily in the state where he attended college, said his showing was impressive in light of his relative lack of funding. "This time a week ago, they had us around 9 percent," he said from his election-night headquarters in the Raleigh Civic Center.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox will meet for a June 5 runoff, and the winner will meet U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, who swamped Burke County GOP official Ruby Hooper in the Republican gubernatorial primary.

In other races, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms and Gov. Jim Hunt were easy winners in the Republican and Democratic races for Senate nominations. Helms garnered 135,201 votes or 90.5 percent to 2,350 for challenger George Wimbish. Hunt had pulled in 77.7 percent for 125,554 votes to Tom Allred's 125,554 and Harrill Jones' 64,508 on the Democratic side.

Leaders Seeking Support For Gubernatorial Runoff

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten says the battle lines in his Democratic gubernatorial runoff with Eddie Knox will be clearly drawn and the question will be "which one can represent the working men and women of the state without entanglements."

The two candidates emerged from Tuesday's primary as the top two vote-getters in a 10-candidate field, placing them in the June 5 runoff. Congressman Jim Martin easily won the Republican nomination over Burke County dietician Ruby Hooper.

In complete but unofficial returns, Edmisten had 293,860 votes or 31 percent and Knox had 247,673 votes or 26 percent. Behind them were Faircloth with 151,350 votes or 16 percent, Tom Gilmore with 82,364 votes or almost 9 percent, Green with 81,326 votes or almost 9 percent, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram with 74,965 votes or 8 percent and Bob Hannon with 9,465 votes or 1 percent.

Democrats with less than 1 percent were Glenn Miller with 5,679 votes, J.A. "Andy" Barker with 3,655 votes and J.D. Whaley with 1,473 votes.

In the Republican primary with 2,301 or 98 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Martin had 126,230 votes or 92 percent and Mrs. Hooper had 11,596 votes or 8 percent.

Edmisten and Knox immediately began seeking the support of defeated Democrats. Although no one announced endorsements Wednesday, there was speculation that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green would back Knox and former Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth might support Edmisten.

Green supporters have not tried to hide feelings that Edmisten was responsible for Green's trial on bribery charges. Green was acquitted and Edmisten has said he played no part in bringing Green to trial.

Faircloth and Edmisten have worked closely together for years as top officials in Gov. Jim Hunt's administration and in Democratic Party affairs.

Edmisten and Knox said they expected at least one debate before the runoff.

Edmisten said Wednesday that he was the only candidate without entanglements and blasted Knox for accepting campaign contributions from utility companies' political action committees.

"He will have to listen to them (the utilities) more than I do," said Edmisten, who has refused to accept money from utility PACs.

Knox said he never received any money from power companies but did get $2,000 from Southern Bell's PAC. He said Edmisten, however, got $12,000 from car dealers, a "clear cut conflict of interest."

He charged that Edmisten used his office to enhance his campaign efforts, including use of office workers to campaign and traveling in the state airplane and car.

But Knox said that despite Edmisten's 10 years as attorney general he received less than one-third of the vote.

"That means 69 percent of the Democrats reject him after 10 years of public service," Knox said. "He is back exactly where he started one year ago."

Knox said he believed recent allegations about his stand on gun control and his family life prevented him from leading the field of 10 candidates and perhaps winning without a primary. He said the charges took time away from discussing issues and came so late that he could not refute them all.

Knox repeated his charge that the allegations came from Edmisten supporters and said the attorney general "has to accept responsibility for his campaign workers doing that." Edmisten has called Knox's charges "ridiculous."

'Jordan' Takes Top Billing In Race For No. 2 Office

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The name Jordan was atop unofficial tallies for Democratic and Republican races for lieutenant governor, and two Democratic labor commissioner candidates appear headed for a runoff.

State Sen. Bob Jordan claimed victory Wednesday in the Democratic race for lieutenant governor, saying he'd gotten enough votes in the primary election to avoid a runoff. Opponent Carl Stewart said he would wait until all the votes had been counted, but added that it appeared likely that Jordan had the majority needed.

Meanwhile, another Jordan — political newcomer Frank Jordan of Rockingham — won the right to compete in a runoff for the Republican lieutenant governor nomination against John Carrington of Raleigh.

With 2,338 precincts or 99.4 percent reporting, Bob Jordan had 443,928 votes or 51 percent while Stewart had 389,318 votes or 44.7 percent. Stephen Miller, a Ku Klux Klansman, had 38,027 votes or 4.4 percent.

With 2,337 or 99.3 percent of the state's 2,352 precincts reporting, Republican candidate Jordan had 40,101 votes or almost 30.6 percent and Carrington, a Raleigh businessman, had 35,475 votes or almost 27 percent.

Bill Hiatt had 27,306 votes or 20.8 percent; Barbara Perry of Kinston had 24,775 votes or 18.9 percent and Erick Little of Cary had 3,554 votes or 2.7 percent.

Bob Jordan, who frequently clashed with Stewart during the primary campaign, held out an olive branch in a news conference at the state Democratic Party headquarters.

"We've proved we can run a positive campaign no matter what happens and when," he said. "We need Carl Stewart and the good Democratic supporters of Carl Stewart for a total victory in the fall."

Frank Jordan, a retired Army sergeant and small businessman whose ventures include selling "pet pebbles" — a smaller version of the pet rock — is making his first run for public office.

He acknowledged that his last name might have been a factor in his first-place showing, since his Democratic counterpart ran a heavy television ad campaign.

"Jordan is a good name," he said, adding that he spent only $1,400 in the campaign and relied mostly on face-to-face contact with voters. He said he drove over 10,000 miles to attend GOP gatherings.

John Brooks, a two-term labor commissioner, had 346,031 votes or 46.7 percent with 2,299 or 97.7 percent of 2,352 precincts reporting.

Richard Barnes, a state senator from Winston-Salem, had 294,424 votes or 39.7 percent while Don Wiseman, a former Labor Department official from Cary, had 100,758 votes or 13.6 percent.

Under state law, the No. 2 finisher can call for a runoff if the front-runner doesn't get more than 50 percent of the vote. A runoff is tentatively scheduled for June 5.

Barnes has attacked Brooks as ineffective, saying he has an abrasive personality and cannot work with the General Assembly or organized labor leaders. The state AFL-CIO endorsed Barnes.

Brooks has defended his performance, saying he has improved the department and accusing Barnes of failure to support pro-labor legislation and funding proposals.

In other council of state races, secretary of state race Thad Eure easily outdistanced Wake County Commissioner Betty Ann Knudsen, who also managed the unsuccessful gubernatorial campaign of Democrat Tom Gilmore.

With 2,300 or 97.7 percent of the 2,352 precincts reporting, the 84-year-old incumbent had 474,981 votes or 58.9 percent while Mrs. Knudsen had 331,796 votes or 41.1 percent.

Jim Long, a former state representative from Burlington who last year served as counsel to House Speaker Liston Ramsey, romped over Carthage gasoline station employee Billy Martin in the race to succeed Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who ran unsuccessfully for governor.

With 2,282 or 97 percent of the precincts reporting, Long had 490,029 votes or 65.7 percent. Martin had 255,791 votes or 34.3 percent.

In the Supreme Court race, Associate Justice Henry Frye easily defeated challenger Raymond M. Taylor of Raleigh. With 2,299 or 97.7 percent reporting, Frye had 427,124 votes or 60.1 percent to 283,784 votes or 39.9 percent.

Frye, a former state senator and the first black to serve on the state's highest court, was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to fill an unexpired vacancy last year. Frye was the only candidate in any race to win a public endorsement from Hunt.

In a three-person race for the appeals court seat, Judge John C. Martin won the Democratic nomination for re-election.

With 2,265 or 96.3 percent of the precincts reporting, Martin had 403,746 votes or 58.6 percent to 143,657 votes or 20.9 percent for District Court Judge Robert L. Cecil of High Point and 141,487 votes or 20.5 percent for Meyressa Schoonmaker of Winston-Salem.

Students Clash Over Crackdown

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Student demonstrators clashed with police in two cities during a day of marches and class boycotts staged to protest a government ban on student unions and the detention of about 100 student activists.

In Peshawar and Karachi, marchers were dispersed Wednesday by police firing tear gas and rubber bullets, said Abdul Latif Saqib, a spokesman for students. He said no arrests were made, and there were no reports of casualties.

The military government of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, meanwhile, threatened to stiffen enforcement of a ban on political reporting by the nation's newspapers.

An alliance of opposition politicians, defying the ban on all political activity, met Wednesday in Lahore to denounce Zia's program for a transfer of power that he has pledged to complete by March 23, 1985.

The politicians also vowed to boycott parliamentary elections that are expected to be held this fall. They are demanding that Zia dismantle his military rule, now in its eighth year, and hold open elections that will return this Moslem nation to civilian rule.

Council Of Churches To Pinpoint Smoking

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Council of Churches will address the moral issue of smoking, but the group's tobacco study commission chairman says it does not want to condemn tobacco growers.

"We have determined that there are moral issues involved here," said the Rev. Rufus H. Stark. Among the issues he cited were "the health issue, the issue of economic disruption and the issue of natural resources."

But the Rev. Collins Kilburn, the council director, admits the state's economic dependence on tobacco creates a dilemma.

"If it were just wealthy people or cruel landowners, then we could say tobacco should be abolished off the face of the earth," he said. "But that's not the case."

Kilburn said he thought the report would show the committee's concern for farmers dependent on tobacco and its honest struggle trying to present the issues.

"Too often, the church has said that's a sin or that's not a sin," Kilburn said. "Now we're trying to deal with a problem that's very complex."

Alternatives to growing tobacco and research into the beneficial uses of tobacco are two avenues the report discusses, Kilburn said. The study will also examine the social costs of tobacco and marketing practices in the Third World.

Tobacco supporters are already preparing for the report's expected release next week and the effect it will have.

"I think the ultimate use and effect of the council's studying this and issuing their report will be another battleground in the anti-tobacco forces' war to eliminate tobacco from this country," said

Reginald L. Lester, managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee.

John H. Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the state Department of Agriculture, said he believes the church has no business saying anything about the crop.

"I'm a Baptist," Cyrus said. "My minister knows this is something not to bring up in church. And if he did, we'd fire him."

Behaviorist Says Beat Your Stress

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An expert on human behavior says recognizing stress is a good start to beating stress.

"You don't have to get into a yoga position. You don't have to tell anybody. Just be aware of it," said Daniel Zeluff of Zeluff & Associates.

"If you will monitor your stress, you will automatically reduce stress."

Zeluff, a PhD and president of Zeluff & Associates in Asheville, made the remarks Tuesday at a mini-seminar for small business operators. Zeluff said it is important that you do not condemn yourself for being stressful. "You don't have to do anything, just recognize it."

"Under pressure, we do not produce better, we just produce more. We've got to live with stress — a certain amount of it. The danger comes when we can't turn it off," Zeluff said.

Some other things that you can do to reduce stress are to eliminate sugar from your diet and exercise more. "Park a little farther from the door and give yourself the discipline of walking. Use the stairs instead of the elevator. Take another swing around the block instead of just walking into the office," he said.

Executives can reduce stress by learning to make decisions instead of procrastinating, according to Zeluff, who said procrastination increases stress. Begin, he said, with good time management.

Northeastern N.C. May Get Wolves

RALEIGH (AP) — There is a chance that the red wolf could be reintroduced to North Carolina.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is considering a proposal to place the endangered wolf on lands in the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge recently established in Dare and Tyrrell counties. Warren Parker, field supervisor for the wildlife agency's Endangered Species Field Station in Asheville says the proposal is in "the early, early developmental stage."

Parker called the red wolf "the most endangered mammal in North America."

"It was once the wolf of the Southeast," Parker said, but the red wolf has not roamed the state in decades.

Unlike the gray wolf, which occasionally attacks livestock, "the red wolf is very secretive and stays away from man," Parker said.

"Folks may hear them at night, but they'll never see them."

Grady Barnes of the state Wildlife Resources Commission said as far as he knew the red fox "is no more dangerous than a fox, which we have plenty of."

Up to six mated pairs of the animals initially would be involved in the project, and none would be released before June 1986, Parker said. The program would require the approval of the state Wildlife Resources Commission.

Parker said the program would tentatively last for five years and could involve as many as 40 to 50 wolves. They would be closely monitored with radio transmitters and could be recaptured and withdrawn at any time.

'Nancy Astor' TV Series Striding

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — While Hollywood and the networks dwell on fantasy and whimsy, public television continues to be the best, and just about the only, vehicle for fascinating and entertaining history on TV. Another fine example is "Nancy Astor," now appearing on "Masterpiece Theatre."

The eight-parter hits its stride with the fifth episode Sunday and then its most compelling segment next week. Viewers can join this miniseries in progress and still be spellbound by this remarkable character and her times.

"Nancy Astor" proves that real political history is richer and more provocative than shows about ghosts, genies and other figments from Hollywood's overworked imagination. Unless the subject is the Kennedys, American commercial television virtually ignores our past.

"They're afraid anything written with a quill pen won't appeal to a mass audience," said producer David Gerber, who sweated, cajoled and filibustered before CBS agreed that a treatment of George Washington could be worthwhile. His estimable "George Washington" miniseries appeared last month.

The British seem to have more regard for their political roots. British TV has done programs on such leaders as Queen Elizabeth I, Benjamin Disraeli, Winston Churchill — all of which have appeared on public TV — and many other significant personalities. Now add the latest import: Nancy Astor.

Mrs. Astor, played with unquenchable gusto by New Zealander Lisa Harrow, was an American, a divorcee and a Christian Scientist. Those might be three strikes for somebody trying to gain a foothold in British politics, but not this woman. In 1919, when women had barely won the right to vote, she became the first woman elected to Britain's Parliament.

Winston Churchill was a well-publicized adversary of Mrs. Astor through her 26 years in the House of Commons, and it's odd and unfortunate that he's not a part of this production.

It was Churchill who wouldn't talk to Mrs. Astor her first two years in Parliament. He said he considered her an intrusion and felt embarrassed, as if she had burst into his bathroom when his only cover was a sponge. "You are not handsome enough to have worries of that kind," she reportedly said.

Churchill, though, managed to turn the tables on his acid-tongued colleague. Once she told him, "If I were your wife, I'd put poison in your coffee!" Growled Churchill: "And if I were your husband, I'd drink it."

Mrs. Astor founded the British nursery school movement, was one of Britain's foremost temperance advocates and was a dynamic leader of feminist causes. But she also was an impossibly difficult person, particularly to those who loved her. She could be condescending, unreasonable, insensitive, belligerent and downright nasty. Her husband, Waldorf Astor (James Fox), is given saintly treatment here. He's about the only person who could have tolerated her abuses.

To appreciate the second half of the miniseries, here's what you need to know about the earlier episodes, which planted motivational seeds, but are, essentially, glorified and aristocratic soap opera. The production and its rare character begin to soar only this Sunday.

Nancy Langhorne was born in 1879 in Virginia, where she learned about poverty before her father struck it rich in the railroad business. Her compassion for the poor, which gave her a commoner's touch when she was running for Parliament as a Conservative, was genuine.

In 1897, she married Robert Gould Shaw, and they had one son, Bobby, who became embroiled in a scandal (in episode six) that was, quite amazingly, kept secret by the Astors and their friends in the British press for 50 years until it was revealed in a book published in the 1972.

The Shaw marriage failed quickly because of her frigidity. Shaw is played by Pierce Brosnan, who is NBC's "Remington Steele." Brosnan fans might get a kick out of seeing their hero as a portly, balding middle-aged man in the sixth episode.

In 1906, Nancy Shaw married Waldorf Astor, British heir to the American Astor fortunes. They had five children, but family could never sustain her. First, she pushed Astor into politics and a seat in Parliament. His heart was in the right place, but he lacked her gregariousness and strong public presence.

When Astor's father died, his peerage passed to his son, disqualifying him from serving in the House of Commons. His wife won his seat, launching a political career and a TV series.

"Masterpiece Theatre" host Alistair Cooke summed it up best: "If there ever was a driven woman, it's Nancy Astor."

Hotels Rejected For Convention

DALLAS (AP) — Thirty hotels that will house delegates to the Republican National Convention failed to meet state standards for kitchen sanitation, while six have been cited for fire code violations, inspectors say.

The 46 hotels where delegates will stay Aug. 20-23 have been subject to close scrutiny this spring, including a crackdown on fire safety.

Bladen Men Charged

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Bladen County authorities charged two men Wednesday with three counts of murder each in the shooting of an Elizabethtown man in March and the deaths last month of the man's widow and her 5-year-old daughter.

A sheriff's spokesman said Elton McLaughlin, 33, and Eddie Carson

Robinson, 36, both of Elizabethtown, were being held in Bladen County Jail. They are charged in connection with the deaths of James Worley, 55, his wife, Sheila B. Worley, 21, and her daughter, Psoma Washington.

Worley's body was found March 26 in a burning car near Lisbon in Bladen County. An autopsy showed he had been shot twice in the upper body.

Ban On Foreign Labor Stirs Fuss

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A year-old immigration rule designed to control the foreign worker population in the United Arab Emirates has spurred controversy between legislators and government officials.

The rule prohibits an immigrant from leaving one job to take another for higher pay, thus precipitating what its backers call an artificial labor scarcity.

It granted exemptions to certain professionals and specialists in short supply, such as doctors, lawyers, investors, tailors, barbers, launderers, computer consultants and chartered accountants.

The restrictions upset immigrant workers who felt their future was doomed because the rule ties them to the same employer and leaves them at his mercy for the duration of their stay in the country.

The United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) is a federation for seven Arab sheikhdoms, formerly known as the Trucial States, on the Persian Gulf.

To circumvent the rule many immigrants, or expatriates, entered themselves in official records as investors, professionals or computer consultants.

Sensing an avalanche in this direction, the government withdrew the exemptions in May 1983.

The deterrent effect of the rule became evident last summer, when most employees stopped moving from one job to another, officials said in interviews.

"For the first few months, the rule brought considerable stability in the U.A.E. job market," said one official of the Ministry of Labor. "Contracting companies, transporters, service ministries, who were always losing staff, reported total stability in their operations as a result of the rule."
