Raleigh Police Captain Killed

RALEIGH (AP) — The Raleigh Police Department's first and only black captain was was shot and killed during a domestic dispute Saturday, and a Central Prison guard was charged with first-degree murder, authorities said.

Capt. Curtis Winston, 43, died of two gunshot wounds in the chest after a dispute at the home of his girlfriend, Karen Brown, said Capt. E.O. Lassiter. Winston was off duty at the time.

Morris Ray Davis, 27, of Louisburg, was charged with murder and held in the Wake County Jail, Lassiter said.

The argument broke out after Davis entered Ms. Brown's apartment and found the couple, Lassiter said, adding that Davis is Ms. Brown's former boyfriend.

Winston, a 19-year department veteran, was pronounced dead at Raleigh Community Hospital shortly after the 12:40 a.m. shooting.

Winston was commander of C Platoon, a rotating platoon with about 40 uniformed officers. He was one of eight captains in the department.

"He's our first black captain," said Maj. Larry Smith. "He was well thought of by his peers. I really don't know what else to say."

Sgt. G.W. Black, who investigated the shooting, said, "I think, above all, everybody thought he was a good officer. (There is) shock and disbelief that something like this could happen."

Central Prison Warden Nathan A. Rice Jr. said Davis came to work with the Department of Correction on Jan. 15, 1979. He was promoted from correction officer to sergeant on March 1, 1982.

"He had been a good employee," said Rice. "We had found him to be very dependable."

"He's a quiet, nice guy," added prison guard David M. Carpenter. "For this to happen shocks me. He just don't seem like the kind of guy who would have done that."

16 People Die In Beirut Battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Fierce shelling erupted in and around Beirut Saturday, killing at least 16 people and igniting fires throughout the capital hours after hundreds of children marched through the streets in Lebanon's first peace rally.

Fighting engulfed both predominantly Christian east Beirut and the mostly Moslem western sector and quickly spread to Christian villages in the mountains above the capital.

The right-wing Voice of Lebanon said at one point, 10 shells per minute were falling on one east Beirut suburb. Five cease-fires were arranged and broken, Beirut radio said.

The fighting erupted about 5 p.m. with sniping on army positions and developed into "a battle with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades," the Voice of Lebanon said. The violence continued after nighfall.

The shelling sent civilians on both sides of Beirut and in the Christian villages fleeing into basements for shelter. Clouds of smoke from huge blazes on both sides of the capital hung in the bright moonlight.

Christian Free Lebanon radio said at least six people died and 20 were injured in east Beirut. A radio station operated by the Moslem Mourabitoun militia said more than 10 died and 25 were wounded in the western half of the city.

Druze Moslem and Mourabitoun radios said 11 of the casualties in west Beirut hospitals were children under the age of six.

Three posts of Beirut's small cease-fire observer force were repeatedly attacked with rockets and three members of the buffer zone force were slightly wounded, Christian Phalange radio said.

Beirut radio said the Irshad secondary school between West Beirut and the city's southern suburbs, was burning out of control after an incendiary shell landed on the building, which houses refugee families. At least 40 cars nearby were set on fire and gutted.

Beirut airport was also badly hit, Druze radio said. "A number of fires can be seen," it said of the airport, which has been closed since Feb. 6.

Knox Happy With Gilmore Support

By ANGELA LINGERFELT

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Eddie Knox said Saturday at a press conference at the Pitt-Greenville Airport that ex-candidate Tom Gilmore has endorsed him and he is "glad to have him on our team."

The former Charlotte mayor said his whole campaign has changed drastically in the past three days and that he was "delighted and excited" about the momementum of it and Gilmore's support.

Gilmore, also at the airport, said "Knox is the best man and we agree on the major issues like schools and the environment. I made the decision to endorse him at 8:30 this morning."

EDDIE KNOX

He added that Knox's record is "far superior than the other candidate for governor. He cares about the people and I'm convinced he will do a good job."

Knox, who ran second to Rufus Edmisten in Tuesday's primary balloting and qualified for a runoff, said he was going to "build as many bridges as possible" between eastern and western North Carolina. He said if he is elected governor he will propose a governor's office in eastern North Carolina in order to

Reagan Preparing For 10-Day Trip

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Democratic presidential candidates stuggle for the limelight, President Reagan is preparing for a 10-day mission to Europe scripted to impress American voters with pageantry, drama and diplomacy.

The made-for-TV agenda that starts June 1 includes sentimental stops at Reagan's ancestral home in Ireland, where demonstrations are planned against his Central America policy, and a side trip to the D-Day beaches of Normandy, France.

The president will have a chance to display skills as a world leader at the annual economic summit in London, the main purpose of the trip.

There is always a potential for trouble when leaders venture into the international spotlight, but White House aides and staffers at the Reagan-Bush re-election committee are expecting Reagan to come home with enhanced popularity, as they said he did after his China trip.

"It's his fourth summit," White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said in an interview last week. 'He'll be at ease, confident. He knows the people. He has a close personal relationship now with all those other leaders."

Since the summits began in the 1970s, they traditionally have brought together the leaders of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Japan, Italy and Canada to discuss the pressing economic problems.

In previous years, there have been times when the other nations have ganged up on the United States to protest high interest rates that, in turn, affect their European economies.

Asked whether that was a worry this year, a high-level White House official, who insisted on speaking anonymously, replied: "It's been a pattern. But we've been well prepared for that. Their economies are to some degree dependent upon ours and ours is now in healthy recovery. Theirs have been lagging behind ours.

"There's a concern about our interest rates and we will make the point that we're doing what we can in that regard and that we have a deficit reduction package," he said. "Frankly, we'll plow a lot of the same ground that you plow every year at these summits."

Since returning from China on May 3, Reagan has met with White House staff to discuss the substance, schedule, logistics, and public relations aspect of his next international venture.

The White House summit group, as it is called, is chaired jointly by Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver and national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane. Deaver handles the logistical and image aspects, McFarlane the international issues.

Each of the summit nations appoints a "sherpa," or guide, to work out events and schedules with the others. Reagan will meet with his sherpa team today.

Since the economic summit is an annual event, the White House does not expect anyone to claim Reagan is attending solely to boost his political fortunes, even though he is seeking re-election.

As for Ireland, the land of the president's ancestors, it just made sense to include it in the itinerary, the high-level aide said. "Will there be some beneficial political fallout from that? Maybe," the official said. "And if so, fine. But that is not the main reason the trip was scheduled."

And there is no avoiding the emotionalism that is likely to engulf the side trip to Normandy on June 6, the 40th anniversary of the Allied invasion. Acknowledging that trip carries "a great deal of symbolism," the official said.

"Some cynics, I suppose, would argue that's only being done for domestic political purposes," he said. "I would argue that it's very much a part of the duty of being president of the United States."

From Ireland, Normandy and England, the television images of Reagan that will be beamed back to American voters are designed to Church Asks For Mother Nature's Cooperation

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Loss and gain are words members of Ayden's Freedom Baptist Church have become familiar with over the past few years. Twice they've gotten close to finishing the spacious church where they hoped to worship, but both times Mother Nature intervened.

The first time the forces of nature put a stop to the congregation's work, the structure on Cox Road had already been framed and its trusses set in place. Then one Sunday, a strong summer storm blew the structure down, only 24 hours after it had been erected.

"It was a trying time," Freedom Pastor John W. Hill recalled, "but we considered it a test of faith and started reconstruction immediately.

"We didn't have insurance on the building at that time, even though only a few days before we had looked into getting coverage. So about all we could do was pull out the nails and start from scratch," Hill said.

All this happened in summer of 1983, only one year after Hill and Deacon J.M. Brown founded the church and held their first meeting at the American Legion Building in Ayden. By March 1984, however, the church was almost complete — the sparkling white steeple had even been placed high atop the roof to serve as a welcoming sight for those who would come to worship.

Then, a series of tornados whirled through Ayden and much of Pitt County March 28, and when it left, the new steeple was smashed. Several windows were broken out of the church and the roof was damaged as well. Total damages were estimated at $18,000.

Once again, church members began rebuilding and if all goes as planned, Pastor Hill will deliver his first sermon from the pulpit of Freedom Baptist's new home May 20.

More than any other church, this one will be a church of its people, according to Brown. "We've got a lot of fine people, people who believe in God's grace ... people who desire more than anything to be part of a live church that wants to do something for God and this struggle to build a place to worship has brought us all closer together," he said.

The people of the church have been instrumental in the realization of Hill's and Brown's dream to have a church, a church with a vision. Ladies of the church have been diligently stripping and painting the old wooden pews that members of the congregation have sat in since Freedom was founded — pews that many Christians sat in for years before Freedom acquired them. When they're finished, the pews will match the sky blue carpet that will be laid in this week. Others devoted literally two years of weekends to build the church and provided resources for building supplies.

And of course, there is the lady who donated the land on which the church now stands — Gracie Dennis of Ayden.

The church changes daily as opening Sunday draws near. Late Wednesday afternoon, the church was lit only by dwindling rays of the sun. By Friday, circling paddle fans with simple white lights had been mounted on the ceiling, the natural wood moulding had been finished and the balcony was taking shape.

"Oh, yes, it will be a whole new place when Sunday rolls around," Hill said.

Consumers Warned In Cyanide Death

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — Cyanide in a bottle of cola killed a 34-year-old man, and police warned area consumers to check other soft drink bottles for tampering, authorities said Saturday.

Manitowoc County District Attorney Denis Vogel and Manitowoc Police Chief LeRoy Strauss made the announcement at a joint news conference to report results of the investigation into the death of Thomas Dresser of Manitowoc, who was found dead Thursday.

Police advised area consumers to check all 16-ounce bottles of Coca-Cola for possible tampering, but the product was not being removed from stores.

Vogel and Strauss said two Coca-Cola representatives were aiding in the investigation.

Carlton Curtis, a spokesman for Coca-Cola Co. in Atlanta, said Saturday night: "The appropriate comment is to say that we are cooperating fully with the district attorney's office and that there is no reason to believe that this is anything other than an isolated incident."

Curtis said nothing similar has ever happened to a Coca-Cola product.

"We believe this is an isolated case and expect no products to be pulled from store shelves in the area," Vogel said.

Vogel said he believed the cyanide was added at an area store and the bottle was not tampered with at a bottling plant.

They said Dresser was found by his wife, Shelly, at a highway rest stop along Lake Michigan near Manitowoc where the couple had planned to have lunch.

Rescue squad personnel attempted to revive Dresser, who was found face down in the grass.

Vogel and Strauss said two 16-ounce bottles of Coca-Cola with twist-off caps were found near the body, and portions of both bottles had been consumed.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration office in Minneapolis tested the bottles and determined that one contained cyanide, they said, and an autopsy showed that Dresser died from toxic poisoning.

There was a March 30 bottling date on the bottle.

The original autopsy released Friday listed Dresser's death as due to natural causes.

Vogel said the pathologist considered poisoning as a possible alternative cause, however, and the bottles were then forwarded to the FDA for further analysis.

The cyanide found was considered to be a lethal amount, he said.

7-Year-Old Recalls Late Mom In Contest

CHICAGO (AP) — Emily Roberts had been trying to overcome feelings of loss since the death of her mother last year. And her victory in a city-wide Mother's Day letter-writing contest appears to have helped the 7-year-old take the first big step.

Emily's letter about her mother — and her father, whom she called "a perfect Mr. Mom" — was judged the best of 1,300 entries by Chicago public elementary school children in a competition sponsored by the school system and a city hotel.

"My mother died two years ago," the second-grader's letter read.

"My mother was a good cook and made good dishes," the letter went on. "I think other children are lucky to have a mother.

"I miss my mother telling me there would be no monsters in my room at night, and when she was fluffing my favorite pillow, so I could watch TV.

"Now my father is taking her place. I think e is a perfect 'Mr. Mom' and I love him for that."

"Mr. Mom" was a recent movie in which actor Michael Keaton played a husband and father who lost his job and took over the household chores and raised the children while his wife went to work.

For winning the contest, Emily and her family will be taken by limousine to a Mother's Day brunch at an elegant Chicago hotel.

In a telephone interview Saturday, Emily said, "I like my father because he's nice and he's special and whenever I want him to take me somewhere he does. He takes me everywhere."

Cheryl Roberts had suffered from Hodgkin's disease, a lymphatic cancer, "but was considered cured, pronounced in remission," said Tim Roberts, Emily's father. "She was in better health than she'd been for many years."

But Mrs. Roberts died at age 33 in her home on a February morning.

"We woke up one morning and she was dying," Roberts, 32, said. "Emily saw it all — the paramedics coming, working, everything. It happened out of nowhere. It's haunting to me, and I'm not sure how Emily feels about it."

But he knows how he'd like Emily, an only child, to feel.

"I didn't want that to be her only memory of her mother," said Roberts, video director at Loyola University here. "We couldn't hide the fact of death, but I started immediately talking about the wonderful times — stressing all the good things."

To fill some of the gap in Emily's life, Roberts moved in with his parents, the Rev. William and Betty Roberts. "My parents filled some of the void," Roberts said, "but Emily distinguishes between her grandmothers and her mother. I think she's adjusted to the loss now."

Now, Emily stands to get another mother. Her father plans to remarry next month and Emily also will gain a 10-year-old sister. The family will move to Connecticut, where Roberts' fiancee lives.

strike envy in the hearts of the Democratic candidates and glee in the hearts of Reagan's campaign staff.

"We're better served to let the American people see two Democratic contenders going at each other tooth and toenail and then creating a dramatic difference between their activity and that of the president," said Reagan's campaign spokesman, James Lake.

Even if Reagan encounters demonstrations in Ireland or anger about the U.S. deficit and interest rates from foreign leaders, he still stands to come out on top if he handles the problems well, Lake maintained.

"People do not expect things always to be hunky-dory and rosy but do expect the leader to have the ability to deal with whatever is put before him," Lake said.

"If (the situation) is tough, being tough in itself is not harmful so long as he handles it well. People are not so unsophisticated as to think the president of the United States only deals with soft stuff. It's how he deals with the hard stuff that (determines how) he gets measured."

Convicted Killer Says He's Sorry

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — John Wade Carter, in jail for killing a black man in what the state calls a racial slaying, says he violated his own code by "acting like a redneck."

The 20-year-old Carter said that to him, white "rednecks" are just as bad as blacks who "bully people when they got them outnumbered."

He was interviewed at the Hillsborough County Jail, where he is being held until he can be sent to a state prison to serve a 22-year sentence for murdering Wayne Everette Raines.

Carter said he was outraged at seeing Raines and Michael Fields, two black men, in a coffee shop with two white women in the predawn hours of March 25, 1983.

He and his pal Mark Cheek made some racial remarks, then waited outside the restaurant. When Raines and Fields left, Carter trailed them 10 miles to Interstate 275 where he opened fire, killing Raines and wounding Fields.

His attorney acknowledged the slaying, but called it the stupid act of a young man who had too much to drink and was trying to be more macho than his buddy. It wasn't the premeditated deed of a sober person, the defense insisted.

Originally, Carter was charged with first-degree murder and attempted murder. In his first trial, the jury couldn't agree on a verdict. A second jury convicted him of a lesser charge of second-degree murder.

Special Message to our Democrat Friends

Many of you are disappointed at this time about the outcome of your primaries. Perhaps you worked hard and supported Faircloth, Green, Ingram, Gilmore or one of the others in the gubernatorial primary. Mondale Gets Head Start In California Campaign

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer

Walter F. Mondale got a head-start on his Democratic presidential rivals in the high-stakes California campaign Saturday, as Gary Hart urged supporters in Oregon to send President Reagan "back to his ranch for good."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, distributed ground beef in Nebraska and accused his opponents of "offering only Band-Aid solutions to a cancerous problem" — the plight of the American farmer.

Oregon and Nebraska are holding primaries Tuesday, but the 67 delegates being divvied up by the two states are just a fraction of the stakes in California's June 5 contest.

All three Democrats were to be in California by Sunday, when they will converge on San Jose to court the state's large Hispanic vote at a meeting of the Mexican-American Political Association. The group's president, Fernando Chavez, has endorsed Mondale.

Mondale began his day Saturday in California's capital, Sacramento, and planned a full day of campaigning in the state, which will have 306 delegates at stake in its June 5 primary.

Hart stressed the environment in Oregon and told an outdoor rally in Eugene, "We must not let this president have four more years in office when he will not be accountable to the American people."

He said Reagan should not be permitted to "ride roughshod over the environmental laws of this nation and chop up the environmental safeguards back in Washington. I say let's send him back to his ranch for good."

On the trip to Oregon from Nebraska, the Colorado senator said Mondale would be the cause of disunity in the Democratic Party if he continued to attack his chief rival for the nomination.

"I'm disappointed in Mr. Mondale, in the character of the attacks, the nature of them, the inaccuracy, the purposeful misstatements, mischaracterizations, the desperation of it," Hart said.

He also disputed claims by Mondale's campaign chairman, James Johnson, that the former vice president would have the nomination locked up after the last round of primaries June 5. "You can discount that pretty clearly as politics," Hart said.

Jackson spent the night at the Murdock, Neb., farm of Vern and Dorothy Lau and then told reporters, "The family farmer has been driven out of business without much drama, without much protest. The protest has been too scattered, too sporadic and not dramatic enough."

Lau said he had been a Republican but had switched to the Democratic Party and was supporting Jackson.

"The price for our commodities just doesn't match the cost of production," he said. "It just doesn't look like we can make it at all."

Later, Jackson's campaign workers distributed ground beef to supporters in Omaha as he called for a moratorium on farm foreclosures and other programs designed to help the American farmer.

"Today, while he poses as a great defender of traditional American values, Ronald Reagan is presiding over the end of one of our most basic traditions, family farming," Jackson said.

He also said his Democratic rivals weren't aggressive enough in proposing assistance to farmers.

"Neither has addressed the seriousness of the agricultural crisis today," he said.

Modifies Position

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today trimmed the scope of his promised overhaul of the nation's income tax system, ruling out any move to abolish the deduction for mortgage interest.

In a speech prepared for the National Association of Realtors convention, Reagan also said "there is no satisfactory reason" for recent increases in bank interest rates. But he appeared to dismiss their significance, referring to them as "upticks."

Earlier this week, a Reagan spokesman blamed the Federal Reserve Board for the latest increase in the prime rate, from 12 percent to 12.5 percent, saying the board was keeping too tight a rein on the nation's money supply.

Reagan did not repeat that charge today.

Referring to remarks he made to real estate industry leaders in Dallas on April 11, which some interpreted as an indication he might try to drop the mortgage interest deduction, Reagan said today, "I am afraid that story was just another example of someone trying to read things into my remarks that were not there."

Taxpayers' ability to deduct the interest they pay on home mortgages — often the bulk of their monthly mortgage payments — on annual income tax returns has played "an important role in helping Americans fulfill their dream of home ownership," Reagan said, adding:

"Well, in case there's any doubt, I want you to know we will preserve that part of the American dream which the home mortgage interest deduction symbolizes."

Reagan has ordered a broad re-examination of the income tax system and has promised to produce a proposal for simplifying the tax code after the November election.

Business Award Presented

Greenville businessman Jack Edwards became the first recipient of a Small Business Leader award presented by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce at a banquet Thursday.

Edwards is the owner of six local businesses, yet he still finds time for civic and church activities.

"I think delegation is the key to operating any business," Edwards said in an interview. "I am very fortunate to have excellent personnel that are capable of management. That is how simple it is" to run a small business.

Edwards is the owner of the University Book Exchange, The Book Barn, Art & Camera Shop, Art & Camera Frame Shop & Gallery, Rent-A-Wreck and Edwards Auto Supply.

A Charlotte native, Edwards moved to Greenville in 1924 and attended the local elementary and secondary schools and Greenville High School. He received a degree in journalism from the University of North Carolina and a master's degree in business from East Carolina University. He is married and has two children.

In addition to his involvement in his businesses, Edwards is a board member of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Downtown Greenville Assocation. He was instrumental in forming North State Savings and Loan; he served as its first chairman and is presently on the board.

A charter member of St. James United Methodist Church, Edwards is a former member of its board of administration and has served on the board of trustees.

He was chairman of the business division of the stadium drive for East Carolina University and is a member of the Pirate Club fund-raising drive and of the Chancellor's Society of ECU.

"At University Book Exchange, we are very proud to give 10 academic scholarships per year, plus being plank members of the Pirate Club," he said.

Other activites for Edwards include being a trustee of the Karl B. Pace Academy and past president of the Rose High Boosters Club and Greenville Sports Club.

He raised $15,000 for Boys Home in Lake Waccamaw with his "Golf Ball Drive."

A member of the Rotary Club, Edwards was instrumental in forming the Noon Rotary Club. He was district governor of Rotary in 1979-80 and was chairman of the Group Study Exchange for Rotary from 1980-84. He received the Rotary District Service Award in 1984.

The Small Business Leader's luncheon and the award will be an annual salute to small businesses in the area, according to chamber of commerce chairman Ed Walker.

"In the past two weeks, there have been four businesses opened that will employ 400 people," Walker said, emphasizing that the Greenville area is growing rapidly. "We have relied heavily upon small business to keep our unemployment rate down."

Ed Kirby was the chairman of the Thursday luncheon meeting.

Sunday Opinion

Runoff Primary Will Be Easier On The Voters

Conscientious voters must feel that a burden has been lifted following last week's primary and election.

Voters faced the task of choosing from many candidates for offices such as governor, lieutenant governor and others.

There was a constitutional amendment to decide and the election of city and county school board members. The day was further confusing in that Democrats and Republicans receive ballots only for their respective parties but everyone received ballots for the constitutional amendment and the school board elections. But then there was the problem of which school district each voter lived in.

So it went. It is a tribute to the voters and to the polling place workers that things went so well on election day. We can hope that in the future efforts will be made to make things easier for the voters and thus make the democratic processes more workable.

In the meantime voters now have a second primary approaching. This time there will be only two candidates for each contested office. Each of us can now study carefully the positions of the various candidates and make more educated choices on those who are best equipped to lead us. We should listen carefully to the candidates' positions on the issues and raise questions if we can. Now more than ever the local, state and national governments need qualified and informed leadership if we are to overcome the problems which face our society. Choosing a candidate to support, and voting, are among the most important things that any of us as citizens do.

Modern Election Equipment Needed

It appears that computerized voting went well at the two Greenville precincts where they were installed for last week's election.

The equipment available now uses a paper ballot which is marked by the voter and is then fed into the computer, which counts the vote and saves the ballot for possible future reference.

The performance of the equipment should be carefully evaluated by the Board of Elections and the County Commissioners in the next few weeks. Then a decision should be made to acquire the best equipment available for use in the November elections, or even sooner.

Our current method of hand-counting ballots is outdated. We must have voting totals available quickly on election night to be a part of the tallying process which goes on in the state and nation. Even though these figures are unofficial, they are universally recognized as accurate in determining winners of various races.

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

The day of computerized voting has finally come to Pitt County. Not full force of course, but two computerized ballot counters were used at two polling places in the Tuesday primary.

Many voters were surprised to find the equipment at the American Legion building and the Elm Street gym. Voters there were given ballots printed for the equipment and a special pencil to mark them.

The ballots were then fed into a slot in the device which promptly rolled them in, counted them and preserved the ballot locked inside.

A few, perhaps, didn't fully understand that the equipment not only accepted the ballot but counted it, too.

"That is an expensive way to store ballots," one observer commented.

Considering the assortment of metal and handmade ballot boxes used for years in elections, the new equipment is pretty fancy.

The Daily Reflector, as do most newspapers, has boxes all over the area which are filled each day with newspapers for convenient sale to the public.

The boxes require coins to open, but patrons are on their honor to take only one paper once the box is opened.

Most people we have found are honest but, needless to say, there is some shrinkage of papers sold from the vending boxes.

Even there, however, we find honest people.

Bonnie Hardee, the newspaper's circulation manager, recently received a letter with a note and $2 enclosed.

It read, "I needed four issues of The Daily Reflector, Sunday. I did not have enough change and no convenient place to get any Sunday morning. I used 50 cents to open the container. I'm enclosing $2 to pay for all four papers."

Well, we are certainly glad we could be of service and we fully appreciate such honesty.

Elections go on, no matter what. Last Tuesday's primary election day was a stormy one and, following the devastating tornadoes of March, local people can be excused if they were more than a little concerned about the unsettled weather.

There were reports of tornado sightings around the county, although subsequently no major damage was reported.

Here at the newspaper Chris Bennett and Sue Hinson worked all day on an outside board for posting returns Tuesday night.

Alas the rain and thunderstorms held the crowd to zero, the board was soaked and no returns were posted. Voting tabulations went on inside, however, and the results were available the next day.

It was stormy everywhere in Pitt County Tuesday night and one elections officials called to suggest that we compliment polling place workers for carrying on under severe conditions.

That they did. It was a long day and a long night for them and much of the vote counting was done with severe weather warnings hanging over the area. Polling place workers certainly deserve credit for the jobs they do.

Mergers May Affect Giving

WASHINGTON — Merger mania has prompted many Americans to wonder whether corporate swapping will bring them better and cheaper products, or just more economic concentration and worker displacement.

But one related question has gone largely unaddressed: How do mergers affect the scope of philanthropic activity in the towns where acquired companies are located?

Commissioners at the Federal Trade Commission haven't made this question one of their concerns. Yet citizens in Pittsburgh, home of recently purchased Gulf Oil Corp., are worried. Industrialist J. Peter Grace, owner of hundreds of properties worldwide, has even voiced concern. And so might the rest of the country, as the long-term effects of recent acquisitions become evident.

In general, corporations already devote a relatively small share of their wealth to community and charitable needs. In its most recent study of corporate giving, conducted with the Council for Financial Aid to Education, the Conference Board found that companies increased their support for community and charitable activities by more than 13 percent from 1981 to 1982.

As a percentage of pretax income, however, corporate gifts rose only from 1.1 percent to 1.7 percent in that period. (Meanwhile, Ronald Reagan and Congress were giving U.S. business the store with the 1981 tax-cut program.)

Mergers may only threaten the equity with which this small base is distributed. "If there are enough mergers and enough large companies, they're bound to have an effect," says Anne Klepper, senior reseach associate at the Conference Board.

Last year, 1,506 U.S.-based companies were acquired by other firms. Of that number, says W.T. Grimm & Co.'s Tomi Simic, only 190, or 13 percent, were publicly traded companies — the kind of firms most likely to have substantial corporate-giving programs. Those acquisitions accounted for 83 percent of the $47.6 billion transacted.

Moreover, the effect of an acquisition varies on a case-by-case basis. Some companies, for example, are more committed to their communities and local charities than others; after purchasing another firm, therefore, they're less likely than others to change its local profile.

Sometimes the acquiring company, let's say U.S. Steel, is poorer than the acquisition — we'll take Marathon Oil in this case — and gives it almost full autonomy. To wit, Findlay, Ohio, home of Marathon, is still a company town enjoying the largesse of its locally-based oil giant.

But in some of the biggest and most celebrated mergers to date, the potential effect on philanthropic activities has attracted attention at the highest levels of city and state government. In Pitsburgh, for example, city fathers fear that Gulf's acquisition by Standard Oil of Californnia will reduce or eliminate the hometown firm's local giving, which was $2 million last year. The Pennsylvania attorney general has publicly called the potential loss of Gulf's local support an "area of great concern," according to his office.

Their fears have been fueled, in part, by the outcome of Conoco's purchase by E.I. duPont de Nemours Co. When Conoco's headquarters were moved from Stamford, Conn., to Wilmington, Del., so were its charitable contributions. Du Pont's John Burchenal insists that the two companies' giving programs have been combined, but he concedes that some "organizations found themselves reduced."

St. Louis, meanwhile, has witnessed three major acquisitions of local companies in recent years. Though two of the purchased companies have maintained their pre-acquisition level of giving, one has cut back, according to a coordinator of local corporate philanthropy.

Klepper of the Conference Board admits that a more extensive study is long overdue. Indeed, additional analyses may prove the extent to which a company's size, location, industry and corporate philosophy govern the philanthropic efforts of its subsidiaries.

In the meantime, however, state and municipal leaders may have voiced legitimate concern about this less-publicized aspect of the merger phenomenon.

Tennessee Launches School Reform Plan

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — In recent years most of the news about our public schools has been bad news — news of teacher strikes, student vandalism, declining test scores, and so on. Here in Tennessee, as a refreshing change, some good news is being written. The Volunteer State's "Comprehensive Education Reform Act" is on the books and its implementation has begun.

I don't mean to go overboard. Some of us who have followed the melancholy course of public education over the past 40 years are so hungry for good news that we may get swept away. Tennessee's program looks good — it looks very good — but its success will depend largely upon some complex and untried procedures for evaluating teacher performance.

Other factors of uncertain effect will play a part. The Tennessee Education Association (TEA) is not exactly burbling with enthusiasm at the new program. A newly constituted State Board of Education will have to provide fresh leadership. The legislature has imposed additional taxes to pay for the venture, and both legislators and taxpayers understandably will expect demonstrable improvement.

For the moment, let me put doubts and reservations to one side. Many other states have reacted in gratifying ways to last year's report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education, but Tennessee's is the most truly comprehensive program to be enacted thus far. It is a product of Gov. Lamar Alexander's leadership, coupled with a high degree of legislative courage and some powerful lobbying by the TEA. The final package is not what Alexander originally sought, but neither is it the comfortable combination of pay raises and permanent protection that would have pleased the TEA. These are the key elements:

Starting in the teachers' colleges, the academic program that leads to teacher certification will be beefed up with stronger courses in a teacher's subject. There will be more emphasis on content and less emphasis on method.

Upon graduation, a prospective teacher will have to pass the California Achievement Test (or its equivalent), and then survive a one-year probationary period. For the next three years the beginning teacher will have the status of "apprentice teacher." If all goes well, the teacher acquires tenure after his or her fourth year. Substantial pay raises will provide incentives all along the line. For prospective teachers of math and science, 100 scholarships a year will be made available.

For experienced teachers the Tennessee program offers a five-step "career ladder." No teacher is compelled to get on the ladder, but bonuses of $1,000 to $7,000 a year are expected to prove great attractions. To move up the ladder a teacher must go through a recurring process of evaluation. In this process the teacher's performance will be judged by other teachers, by principals, and in some part by students. Evaluators will sit in a teacher's classroom to observe the teacher in action. Not only classroom teachers, but also principals, superintendents, librarians and others will face similar tests and will have similar opportunities.

The Tennessee program addresses the problem of disruptive students; it will be a little easier hereafter to move the troublemakers to alternative schools. The program provides $9 million in new money for computers, $3.5 million for math and science teachers in the high schools, $4.6 million in instructional supplies and $6.5 million toward the employment of teacher aides. The Tennessee school year will be increased from 175 to 180 instructional days. All in all, the reform measures will throw $400 million in new revenues into public education in 1984-85. It's quite a package.

Alexander, the TEA and the state legislature can share in the credit for this exciting and encouraging effort.

It takes nothing from their achievement to observe that by going from 175 to 180 school days, Tennessee is barely catching up with the national average; no school system in the United States approaches the 220 eight-hour school days of England, Japan and other industrialized nations. But leg over leg the dog goes to Dover. We can't do everything at once. These are good steps, and Tennessee can rightfully be proud of taking them.

Tension Deepens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relations between the United States and the Soviet Union seem to be hitting rock bottom.

The Kremlin decision to boycott the Olympic games came as a surprise to the White House despite the tension that has been building between the superpowers since President Reagan took office.

The walkout probably was motivated by a fear of defections by star athletes and publicized threats of disruptions by dissidents. But even more pronounced is the Soviet decision not to do business with the Reagan administration.

Both sides have exacerbated the problem, and the detente of the '70s seems to have faded into the distant horizon, although it is in the interest of both nations to retreat from the brink.

A former high-ranking government official said that the latest move shows the Soviet "capacity to shoot itself in the foot." But he also believes that in the last three years the president has made rhetorical mistakes in dealing with the Soviets.

"They lie, they cheat," Reagan said of the Russians at his first news conference after he took office. He has denounced their ideology as the "focus of all evil" and denounced the Kremlin's expansionism.

It appears that as far as they are concerned he long ago threw down the gauntlet, and now they are not willing to open their eyes to his many new gestures and concessions.

European allies are worried over the lack of communication between the superpowers. West German Chancellor Hans-Dietrich Genscher visited Reagan recently to express the concern of allies who do not want the relationship to reach the point of no return. Mostly he fears a "mistake or miscalculation" that would be a total disaster.

According to Pentagon officials, the United States still has a military advantage that might restrain adventurism. But Reagan's fantasies have been Moscow's fears, particularly in view of the president's drive for "Star Wars" space weapons.

The president told Genscher he is ready to talk about such armaments with the Russians. Neither side has developed them and it may take some 10 years before the United States has such weapons.

The hopes that Washington nursed that Konstantin Chernenko might turn out to be a softer-liner, and to be ready to deal in a more conciliatory way, have all but vanished.

If anything, the White House is becoming resigned to a tough Kremlin approach, seeing little change despite the pitfalls and the dangers of the superpowers being incommunicado.

The word coexistence has gone out of style. President Gerald Ford wiped out the expression "detente" in international politics in his day.

Needs Bible, Too

To the editor:

I was one of the tornado victims who lost everything I owned except some clothes, two dining room chairs, a stove and a little plot in which I had planted roses, a river birch tree and pansies. I cherished this little corner and felt that God had protected it to deepen my faith.

The day after the tornado the stove which contained my cooking utensils was taken by someone who needed a stove more than I.

Yesterday I went to a nursery and bought plant food for my roses. When I went to feed them, they had been taken up along with my river birch tree that I paid $25 for last year.

I would like the one who took these to come by and get the plant food. I will also give them some of my clothes.

My favorite Bible was not damaged. I especially want them to have that. They need it. They may contact me at the following address.

All the brouhaha engendered by the news that Russia will be boycotting the Olympics! Statements are being made as to sadness and disappointment at the decision. I see it differently. In a way, I am somewhat relieved, since I have misgivings as to the possibility of the opportunity the Olympics could give Russia to enter undercover agents in the guise of athletic participants. Far out? Who knows?

I don't consider the boycott a great loss since, in the true sense, the competition does not appear to be fair as to amateur standing. Though they are not paid, Russian athletes are trained professionally from the outset by their government, whereas this is not so with the American athletes. Yet, we shut our eyes to such deception and participate. Call this sportsmanship? So, why are we upset at Russia's boycott?

Another thought — it could be concern and fear on the part of the Russian authorities, knowing that their athletes have been indoctrinated from birth as to communism. When in America, they may by a gradual osmosis, see America and democracy for what it truly is in practice as to freedom of speech and choice, plus the decent standard of living, average-wise. The leaders would be aware that this could plant the seed of doubt and questioning in the minds of their athletes. They'd consider this danger to the bureaucracy reason enough to cancel out.

Russia claims there are not guarantees given as to the security of their athletes — therefore, the boycott. Amcridcans are not a captive people. We live in freedom. That is our guarantee.

The North Carolina State Department of Transportation needs to install pavement reflectors on N.C. Highway 11 from Carolina East Center to the Winterville Bypass because it is hard to see the lines at night, especially when it rains. I have contacted Gerald England, who is in charge of the Fourth Division Department of Transportation. He is very receptive and interested in this proposal. The Highway Patrol has records of five to six accidents on the six-lane highway ir. the area from Carolina East Center to the Winterville Bypass in the year of 1983. Mr. England has informed me that the paint they use on the highway lines is 15 thousandths of an inch thick. When the roads get wet they become 12 thousandths of an inch thick and develop glass beads that destroy the reflection of the lines. The point of installing pavement reflectors is to prevent accidents from occurring. Anyone who is interested in getting pavement reflectors installed on six lanes of N.C. Highway 11 from Carolina East Center to the Winterville Bypass, write to Gerald England, Division Office, P.O. Box 1587, Greenville. N.C. 27835-1587.

The Greenville City Schools should be proud of its Elementary Honors Orchestra Program and is indeed fortunate to have an instructor of the caliber of Mrs. Jo Ann Moore. Recently I was invited to c onduct master classes at both South Greenville and Wahl-Coates Schools for the orchestra. I was immediately impressed by the classroom environment created by Mrs. Moore. Her organization, vitality, discipline and attention to the smallest details were evident everywhere. I will never forget conducting these responsive, well-trained young people. Moreover, the pride they reflected in their performance was outstanding! It was obvious that Mrs. Moore has sparked a special interest in these children to learn and to excel. Congratulations to an outstanding educator.

I wish for all mothers a happy Mother's Day.

The keys to raising great men and women are love, consistent discipline, an abiding faith in God, prayer, encouragement, hard work, praise and approval. A child who develops a good self image develops self confidence, and self-confidence radiate happiness.

Parents need to set good examples. A child learns to live a rewarding moral and spiritual life from parents who are good moral and spiritual models. One of our greatest needs today is for our young people to assume responsibility, With freedom come responsibilities.

The purpose of the American Mothers Inc. is to strengthen the moral and spiritual foundations of the home and family. We believe strong homes are necessary to keep America great.

To the editor:

In answer to the letter written by Shanya D. Andrews on May 6 concerning discrimination; she has lived in Greenville for seven years and finds the discrimination appalling.

I have lived in Greenville for 39 years and believe me, we've come a long way. I am sick and tired of hearing about how people are discriminated against. A lot of people cause their own problems and label it "discrimination."

I have compiled quite a long list of places where blacks are "out front" and where quite a number are working. These places are where black females are bank tellers, waitresses and are "out front." If the lady will call me, I will give her a list of these places.

I have friends who are maids and housekeepers (black and white). What's wrong with these positions? It's good honest work. A lot of people would love to have one of these positions.

I feel the writer has stereotyped jobs for blacks and jobs for whites. If she is as qualified as she says she is, she should look in the back section of The Daily Reflector under "Help Wanted." I feel she might find just the right job she desires. Of course, sometimes, a little leg work is involved in finding a job.

Oh, by the way, yes, I am white and consider myself middle class. I have worked at a few different positions in my time. For the past seven or eight years, I have been one of the cleaning ladies for my church. Does the writer consider me working below my capabilities?

I could also tell the writer about the times I have been discriminated against because I am white, such as a black being hired because there were too many white already working.

The slaves have been freed and are no longer in bondage, except the bondage they keep themselves in. I know discrimination does still exist, to a certain degree, but discrimination is not just against the poor blacks or poor whites, it is also against the middle class.

To the editor:

I have often suspected and slightly feared that "the Arts" occupied a basement floor in that grand architectural structure called public education. I had hoped that I was just being paranoid, but knew I wasn't when funds began to dwindle and the threat of extinction loomed on the horizon. At last, however, I located that elusive piece of evidence that provides irrefutable provenance that, yes, the arts really are in the basement ... under the basement.

Students at several secondary schools in the area were recently asked to fill out a career survey, also referred to as an interest or aspiration survey. As I scanned the list of available selections for what I knew would be only a limited list of arts choices, my heart began to sink and my skin turned a clammy yellow when my eyes came to the end of the list and still ... NO ARTS ... none! I went in reverse. I turned the paper on its edge. I ran it through an X-ray machine and an ultraviolet light recorder, knowing that somewhere there had to be a listing for the arts.

Finally, I resigned myself to the terrible truth. I scanned the lower section which listed Sports and Hobbies selections. I just knew it would be there. After all, didn't I go to college for six years so I could teach art? But Alas! Even there I could not catch a glipse of my beloved career. Words nor bullets could describe my despair. NOWHERE! The arts were non-existent. Where were the musicians, painters, dancers, singers, illustrators and so forth? I was told the survey was being conducted by a major organization.

Later in the day, after I had recovered, I was given a pat on the back to convert into inspiration, incentive and encouragement. Oh well! They may have kicked us into the basement, but at least they haven't taken away our shovels.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — For the first time in the nation's history proportionately as many blacks as whites say they are registered to vote, a fact which, if accompanied by high turnout, could spell the difference in a close presidential election this fall.

In personal interviews with over 10,000 adult Americans conducted from November through April, 72 percent of whites and 73 percent of blacks said they were registered to vote. During the same period in the 1979-80 presidential campaign, 70 percent of whites and 67 percent of blacks claimed to be registered.

Registration, of course, is only the first step toward voting. If blacks are to make a difference in the election their turnout record will also have to improve. In the 1980 presidential election 84 percent of registered blacks reported having voted, compared to 89 percent of registered whites.

Significance For Election

As shown in the table, the current division of registered white voters leans only narrowly to the Democratic over the Republican Party, 39 percent to 33 percent, with 28 percent saying they are Independents. Among registered blacks, however, Democrats outnumber Republicans by an overwhelming 81 percent to 4 percent margin, with 15 percent Independents. Registered Hispanics, though predominantly Democratic in affiliation, are closer to the political profile of whites than of blacks.

Political Affiliation
(Based on registered voters)
November 1983-April 1984

	National	Whites	Blacks	Hispanics
Democrats	43%	39%	81%	56½
Republicans	30	33	4	23
Independents	27	28	15	21
TOTAL	100	100	100	100

Thus, it is extremely likely that a newly registered black will vote Democratic, but the chance that a newly registered white will be a Democrat, Republican or Independent is almost a toss-up.

Here is the question asked to determine registration:

"Is your name now recorded in the registration book of the precinct or election district where you now live?"

As shown in the table, significantly higher proportions of Southern blacks, those 18-29 years of age, and blacks from households with total annual incomes of less than $20,000 say they are registered to vote than do their white counterparts.

On the other hand, a greater percentage of Eastern whites than Eastern blacks report they are registered to vote.

In all other groups shown, the differences between the racee in reported registration are not large enough to be statistically meaningful.

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 10,776 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localitiee across the nation between November 1983 and April 1984. The total includes 9,495 whites and 1,078 blacks.

For results based on the total sample one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 2 percentage points in either direction. For results based on the samples of whitee and blacks, the comparable figures are plus or minus 2 percent and 4 percent, respectively.

Author Was Social Outcast

Back in 1938-39, most folks in Fayetteville who encountered Carson McCullers agreed that she was a strange one and, most assuredly, no asset to her handsome young husband, Reeves, in his struggle to make a go of the local office of a collection agency he had been sent there to establish.

Not until months later when they read the rave reviews given her first book "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter" did they realize that she was a talented writer whose novels would make her a prima donna of the New York literary scene.

They were inclined to look askance at the young lady who prowled the streets attired in high-top tennis shoes and knee socks, an ancient coat with a fur collar with a knitted khaki Army cap perched on her head.

The Fayetterville folks observed her prowling the streets daily, stopping people to ask questions about their way of life and their political views. They eyed her with suspicion and she became pretty much a social outcast in Fayetteville.

She hated the place and frequently voiced her criticism of the town and the lifestyle of its people. "If you don't like our town and keep finding fault with it, why do you stay?" asked one woman weary of hearing her complain.

"For a special reason I couldn't expect anyone to understand — but believe me, I won't stay a minute longer than I have to," Carson retorted.

For Carson and Reeves, who hated the place as much as she did, the two years they lived in Fayetteville were probably the most miserable of their married life and may well have contributed to their divorce a few years later.

By contrast, the eight months they lived in Charlotte before going to Fayetteville were possibly the happiest of their married life. Reeves had lived there a year or so before their marriage in her home town of Columbus, Ga. But even in Charlotte, Carson was something of a character, particularly in her dress. When invited to dinner by Reeves' aunt and uncle, the J.T. Winns, she showed up in a severely tailored coat whose sleeves hung open from the elbows and in a skirt some four inches longer than fashion dictated. Nevertheless, the Winns found her appealing and liked her.

She was already at work on "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," and during the winter when their apartment was too cold for comfort, she took refuge in the Charlotte Public Library. It was warmer there, but she made it even more so by surreptiously sipping sherry from her Thermos. One of the characters she was creating that winter was an adolescent girl obviously patterned after Carson. The character's whole life was tied up in music.

One evening in March 1938, Reeves came home with news that he had been promoted and given a raise. However, the promotion meant they would have to leave Charlotte and go to Fayetteville where Reeves was to set up a new office. Fayetteville was a disaster from the beginning. That summer, they decided it was the hottest place they had ever known, and Carson could hardly believe the near squalor of the apartment into which they moved.

However, Carson's spirits were lifted by a letter she received from Houghton Mifflin, the book publisher, to which she had submitted the first six chapters of her novel plus an outline of the entire book. Houghton Mifflin offered a contract, agreeing to publish the work when it was completed and agreed to pay a $500 advance on royalties. It sent $250 of the advance immediately.

That fall the McCullers were temporarily happier after they had moved into a spacious apartment in a large white-columned house that had been built 150 years before as the Cool Spring Tavern. It was the oldest standing structure in Fayetteville. Apparently, her reputation preceded her. The local women not only did not admit to being her friend but were reluctant to be seen talking with her. But she continued working on her novel, completed it in the spring of 1939 and sent it to the publisher.

She immediately set to work on her second novel, "Reflections in a Golden Eye," which she first called "Army Post." She got the idea when Reeves told her about a young Fort Bragg soldier who had been arrested after he was caught peeping into the married officers' quarters. It went quickly and was completed after only two months of arduous work. When it was published a year and a half later it caused some excitement, particularly at Columbus, Ga., and the nearby Army base of Fort Benning. It prompted Gen. George Marshall, a former commander of Fort Benning who had met Carson, to wonder good-naturedly if "the whole post had gone to pot." It also prompted Mrs. George Patton to cancel her subscription to Harper's Bazaar, in which the novel was published, and to try to pursuade other wives at the fort to do likewise.

But all that came later, after publication of "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter" in 1940. It was hailed by the reviewers, and Carson McCullers was described as the most exciting new talent of the decade. It also brought her the remaining $250 of her $500 advance royalty payment. With that and $50 they got for their old Chevrolet, Carson and Reeves McCullers prepared to shake the dust — or rather the sand — of Fayetteville from their feet. Reeves quit his job. They packed and shipped their belongings and boarded the Atlantic Coast Line Champion for New York City. They quickly settled down in a fifth-floor walk-up apartment in Greenwich Village.

A few days later she told John Selby, Associated Press arts editor, that she and Reeves had moved to New York because they did not like living in a small town. She liked a farm and she liked a big city, but no in between.

Selby wrote that Carson was something of a puzzle to the literary set because "her novel has the maturity of style and thought to be expected from a women in middle age, yet she was only 22 when it was published."

Although she scaled the heights with poetry, plays and other novels including "The Member of the Wedding," her life was marked by tragedy. She and Reeves McCullers were divorced, remarried and separated again. He ultimately committed suicide. She was herself paralyzed and crippled by a series of strokes which left her an invalid, off and on, for the rest of her life. When she died Sept. 27, 1967, she was only 50 years old.

Cancer Victims Delay Seeking Help

DURHAM (AP) — At least one-third of cancer victims wait more than three months after detecting telltale signs of the disease to seek treatment, a Duke University researcher says.

Such delays probably reduce a person's chance of long-term survival by 10 to 20 percent, said Dr. David M. Eddy, whose research was supported by the American Cancer Society and the Dana Foundation.

If victims would see a doctor promptly upon discovering the symptoms, up to an additional 50,000 of the 870,000 Americans who develop cancer each year could be cured, said Eddy.

"Contrary to the popular view, cancer usually doesn't strike suddenly without warning," he said. "It comes on slowly, giving signals for months, even years, and the earlier it is detected and treated, the greater the chances for cure."

Eddy, a physician and mathematician who directs Duke's Center for Health Policy Research and Education, said there are many reasons why people procrastinate in seeking cancer treatment, including:

— Failure to realize the importance of a symptom.

— The absence of pain or discomfort.

— The perceived inconvenience of an examination.

— Financial hardship.

— Fear and refusal to believe it could happen to them.

Not every instance of delay is unreasonable, Eddy said. People can't be expected to go to the doctor every time they notice a slight change in their bodies.

"The decision must be made by weighing the perceived probabilities and outcomes," he said. "If the chance of cancer is perceived to be miniscule, if the hassle is perceived to be great, if a delay is perceived to make little difference in prognosis, the balance may be tipped toward delay."

On the other hand, if the person thinks there's a good chance he has cancer, of if the need for relief of symptoms is great, medical attention should be sought immediately.

"People make these kinds of assessments, value judgments and comparisons all the time," he said. "Some people pay an extra $1,000 to buy a safer car, other people do not."

In most cases, it pays to play it safe and see a doctor if one has even a slight suspicion that he has cancer, Eddy said. The odds are that the person doesn't have cancer, and thus can be relieved. But even if he does have the disease, prospects for cure are better the sooner it's discovered.

Defense Attorneys Push Claim For British Connection

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The British accent in the John Z. De Lorean drug trial is becoming more pronounced as defense lawyers press their claim that Anglo-American intrigue led to the automaker's arrest.

They are digging for more data on newly disclosed contacts between U.S. and British officials in the weeks before De Lorean's arrest on drug charges. And they want to know how De Lorean's claims of Irish Republican Army ties influenced the "sting" operation, and when authorities decided to discount the claims.

"We are not going to abandon this issue," said De Lorean attorney Donald Re. "Every aspect of this case is colored by it."

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, who has privately reviewed government files on the matter, said he will not open them to the defense because they involve state secrets.

"I've indicated the concern the court has with communications between sovereigns that were meant to be confidential," said Takasugi.

Re said he and his partner Howard Weitzman would seek the information by other routes — perhaps through testimony of witnesses in the cocaine trafficking trial.

"We want to know if the British were cooperating with the U.S. government in the investigation of this criminal narcotics case," Re said. "If that kind of conduct was engaged in by the British government at the request of the U.S. government, that certainly is relevant to entrapment."

De Lorean, 59, is charged in an alleged $24 million cocaine conspiracy designed to save his Northern Ireland auto company from bankruptcy.

The Belfast plant, which turned out a futuristic stainless steel gull-winged sportscar, was backed with some $200 million in British government loans. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ordered De Lorean Motor Co. closed for good Oct. 19, 1982 — the same day De Lorean was arrested at a Los Angeles Airport hotel by FBI agents who had posed as cocaine dealers.

Two questions were later raised by his lawyers:

—Did the British allow the plant to stay open longer than they had planned to keep financial pressure on De Lorean and help the U.S. authorities ensnare the automaker?

—Did American authorities ignore British assurances that they had investigated and found De Lorean had no ties to the terrorist IRA?

Satellite Secured

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Engineers on the ground maneuvered the errant Westar 6 communication satellite into a higher, more secure orbit Saturday, preserving the option for a space shuttle crew to recover it later this year.

A radio signal fired from the Hughes Aircraft satellite control center in Fillmore, Calif., triggered an onboard rocket that jockeyed the satellite into a near-circular orbit 600 miles high. Hughes built the payload for Western Union.

Warren Bechtel, a spokesman for Western Union, said the firing went well and will "preserve the health of the satellite."

Westar 6 was intended to rocket out to a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high after it was released by the crew of the 10th space shuttle mission in February. But the booster rocket failed after firing only a few seconds and the spacecraft settled into a useless orbit ranging from 150 to 500 miles high.

Couple Target Of Search

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Troops and police intensified their search Saturday for an Ohio couple abducted by Tamil separatists who left a letter saying they would kill their victims if they didn't receive $2 million in gold.

Sri Lankan and Indian navy boats patrolled the Palk Straits, separating the two nations, in search of the abduction gang.

Stanley Bryson Allen, 36, of Columbus, Ohio, and his wife, Mary Elizabeth Dayman, 29, were kidnapped Friday in the northern Sri Lankan city of Jaffna by eight members of an underground terrorist group who also demanded the release of 20 jailed rebels.

The kidnappers set a 72-hour deadline, ending at noon Monday, for acceptance of their demands. "There will be no negotitions," said a ransom note addressed to Sri Lankan President Junius R. Jayewardene. "If our demands are not met within 72 hours, we will kill a prisoner every six hours."

Vice President George Bush arrived in India of an official visit and was immediately briefed by U.S. Embassy personnel on the abduction. It was not known if he discussed the issue with Indian Irime Minister Indira Gandhi during a dinner meeting.

The U.S. government, in a statement released in Colombo, said it would not pay any ransom to the abductors. "It is the long-standing policy of the U.S. government that we do not pay ransom to kidnappers," it said.

The ransom demand was made to the Sri Lankan government, not to the United States.

Jayewardene has said his government will not pay ransoms to terrorists.

The People's Liberation Army, which claimed responsibility for the kidnapping, is the military wing of the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front, an obscure Marxist group.

India and the rebel organization denied a report by Lalith Athulathmudali, Sri Lanka's national security minister, that the kidnappers had escaped with the couple to the southernmost Indian state of Tamil Nadu by boat.

"This is absolutely incorrect," Tamil Nadu Chief Minister M.G. Ramachandran, the state's top elected official, told The Associated Press by telephone. "We only have Tamil refugees from Sri Lanka, no kidnappers."

The Liberation Front, in communiques delivered to news agencies, said the Americans were being held in Sri Lanka's Tamil-dominated Northern province. "The Sri Lankan government is trying to divert public opinion by issuing misleading statements," it said.

Allen is an engineer employed by the Ruhlin Corp. of Columbus, Ohio. He was working on water-supply projects funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development in Jaffna. He began work in Jaffna last October and then went back to Ohio to get married. He and his bride left for Sri Lanka on March 27, three days after their wedding.

Jaffna is a stronghold of Tamil extremists who want the majority Sinhalese to grant autonomy to the minority Tamils of Sri Lanka.

Tamils, whose ancestors came from the southern Indian state of Tamil Nadu, make up 18 percent of the islands nation's 15 million population.

Twelve percent of them live in the Jaffna region, and many hope to win an independent homeland there called "Eelam."

Tamils claim they have been victims of discrimination in jobs, education and language policies by Sinhalese-dominated governments since the former British colony of Ceylon gained independence in 1948.

A leading Indian newspaper, India Today, printed a story saying 2,000 armed Tamil guerrillas are ready for battle and another 2,000-3,000 trained fighters are waiting for arms shipments from the Palestine Liberation Organization and other groups.

Jayewardene has said the separatists are backed by "international terrorist organizations."

Tamil separatists killed 13 soldiers in an ambush in Jaffna last July, triggering rioting by Sinhalese that left at least 400 Tamils dead and 130,000 homeless.

At least 50 people have been killed in a new round of violence in Jaffna district since late March. Most of the victims were Tamils shot by government troops.

Authorities Look For Clues To Park Fire That Killed 8

By TOM ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Investigators poked through the ruins of an amusement park's Haunted Castle attraction Saturday, seeking the cause of a fire that killed eight people trapped in a narrow, dimly lit maze of metal trailers.

Eight others were injured in the fire Friday night at the Six Flags Great Adventure Park.

Seven of the bodies were found huddled together and the eighth was a short distance away, Ocean County Prosecutor Edward Turnbach said Saturday.

A spokesman for Great Adventure, Glenn Vallach, said neither he nor investigators could explain why the victims had been unable to get out. Vallach said he had heard rumors that some patrons believed the fire was part of the attraction.

Preliminary examinations indicated seven of the victims were male and one was a female, Turnbach said. Four of the victims, all of whom were believed to be teen-agers, were tentatively identified, he added.

Vallach said Six Flags had held a drill at the Haunted Castle on April 1. He also said all attractions at the park were inspected by fire officials April 14 and approved as safe.

There were no sprinklers in the Haunted Castle, he said.

Jackson Township Mayor William Schreiber said he had no concerns about safety at the park. "You people would have to come here when there is not a tragedy to see how well it is run," he told reporters.

On Saturday, thousands of tourists attending Family Christian Day at the park were prevented from viewing the burned-out attraction by a makeshift plywood wall 6 feet high.

Telephone calls to the park dwindled as most of the anxious parents whose children were among the park's 20,000 visitors Friday evening were reunited with their youngsters.

"The switchboard was overloaded all night. Any person who had a child who was even late or slept over at someone's house was concerned," said Police Commissioner Richard Borys.

Investigators have not ruled out arson as a possible cause, Borys said Saturday. Turnbach said the investigation of the fire was continuing and "we have no suspicions of anything as to cause."

The fire struck the 17 metal trailers that make up the Haunted Castle and spread quickly as winds fanned the flames. Firefighters said the blaze reached heights of 100 feet and temperatures inside the trailers reached up to 2,000 degrees.

The trailers were melted and gutted, and the castle facade around them was standing but charred. The fire broke out at 6:35 p.m., and was brought under control about an hour later.

"People were running around," said Jerry Wolkowitz of Freehold, a visitor to the park Friday evening. "I though it was some gimmick at first. I saw some people crying but I thought it was just the idea of the fire being so close."

People rode rides and a rock band played at the 200-acre amusement section of the park and safari about 60 miles south of New York City as firefighters battled the blaze. The park was closed at 8 p.m., two hours early.

Borys said several employees working at the Haunted Castle smelled smoke and evacuated a small number of patrons. He said he considered the employees who led patrons to exits as "superheroes in a way." Seven of those evacuated were treated for smoke inhalation.

Borys said the victims appeared to have no chance in the dark, narrow and winding interior which has low ceilings and some uneven floors.

When the fire cooled, authorities began the grim search in the Haunted Castle, where park employees posing as demons frightened 7.4 million visitors since it opened in 1978.

Rape Victims More Willing To Testify

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Despite fear and embarassment, rape victims are becoming increasingly willing to testify against their assailants in court, law enforcement officials and social workers say.

Last week, a man was convicted of raping and robbing three women in Charlotte's Wendover community — the same area where 12 years ago a man terrorized women by breaking into their homes and raping them at knifepoint. Many victims refused to testify against the prime suspect and those crimes are unsolved.

Julius Cedrick Johnson, 21, of Charlotte, had been charged with four additional rape counts but won't be tried on them. Authorities say Johnson probably will spend the rest of his life in prison.

Johnson was convicted after seven women testified about attacks on them between June and December 1983. Observers said their willingness to testify reflected a growing trend.

"I think women — and men, too — are just not willing to be raped or sexually assaulted and not report it any more," said Charlotte police rape investigator Cheryl Horner. "They're saying, 'Hey, this is my life, and I'm going to do something about it.'"

One of the women who testified against Johnson said she felt compelled to do so.

"You have to weight what's important," she said. "For me, I felt an obligation to the city of Charlotte and every man, woman and child in Charlotte, to see the city safe of this one man.

"Keeping that in mind, I don't see how one person couldn't testify."

She said, however, that 12 years ago she might have felt differently.

"Women were passive in the past," she said. "They were ashamed, more or less. I think they're more active now. ...I don't feel ashamed or have guilt about what happened to me."

Nationwide, 81,540 rapes were reported in 1981, the latest year for which figures are available. Only about 1,600 rape suspects were prosecuted, said Kathy Adams-House, spokeswoman for the National Association for Victim Assistance in Washington.

Ms. Horner said she hoped the Johnson case would encourage still other victims to cooperate with authorities.

"I think it's a very positive influence ... on people who wondered if they could do it," she said. "The answer is 'yes.'"

As recently as 1972, during the earlier rape spree in Wendover, rape trials were "horror shows" for the victims, Ms. Horner said.

"They paraded men through court who said, 'I slept with her. I slept with her.' Now they don't ask how many men you slept with, but what did this man do to you."

In 1979, the General Assembly passed the "rape shield statute," which excludes information about a woman's sexual behavior and history as evidence in a rape trial.

Assistant Attorney General Chris Brewer said a woman's sexual behavior prior to the rape is irrelevant except in cases of marital rape or rape by a boyfriend or acquaintance.

Jordan Calls For Flaherty To Quit

By The Associated Press

The chairman of the North Carolina Republican Party is showing favoritism in the battle for the party's nomination for lieutenant governor and should resign, a candidate says.

Frank Jordan, a Rockingham businessman and surprise front-runner in last week's GOP primary, said Friday that David Flaherty had shown partiality to Jordan's runoff opponent, John Carrington of Raleigh.

Carrington spent over $100,000 in the campaign for lieutenant governor, more than all five of his opponents combined.

Jordan, a political newcomer who spent only $1,400, got nearly 29.6 percent of the vote in last Tuesday's primary. Carrington got 28 percent of the vote.

Under state law, a second-place finisher can call for a runoff if the leader got less than 50 percent of the vote in the first election. Carrington, after seeking Flaherty's advice, called for a runoff which will be June 5.

Jordan said that Flaherty talked with him Thursday and, instead of congratulating him, told him he was going to advise Carrington to seek a runoff.

In a handwritten statement issued Friday, Jordan said, "It saddens me deeply when party officials become partial to one candidate at the expense and hurt of the other.

"It appears to me — and I hate to say this — but I believe the North Carolina Republican Party could be better served if the officials that show partiality (for) one candidate over the other would consider resigning and letting impartial people step in."

Flaherty, in an interview Friday, responded: "That's just Frank Jordan trying to get some attention. I'm not supporting Carrington."

Flaherty said he contacted GOP county chairmen for their views on a runoff in the race and that Jordan had interpreted that as an endorsement of Carrington.

Jordan also said he was upset because both Flaherty and Carrington had said Jordan got many of his votes from people who confused him with state Sen. Bob Jordan, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

Bob Jordan, of Montgomery County, ran a highly visible advertising campaign as the campaign wound up and defeated former House Speaker Carl Stewart for the Democratic nomination.

Frank Jordan said the more than 40,000 people who voted for him knew who they were voting for because Bob Jordan's name wasn't on the GOP ballot.

They were "people who spoke and said we are tired of our government being bought and sold like a common piece of merchandise," said Jordan.

Degrees Awarded To Thousands In State

(UPI) Thousands of students this weekend received degrees from North Carolina universities and colleges and moved out from the campus into the working world.

Commencement at North Carolina State University topped the list of the more than one dozen graduation ceremonies held Saturday across the state. The university held the largest commencement in its history conferring 3,769 degrees. Of those, 2,882 were undergraduate degrees, 20 professional, 658 master's and 209 doctorate.

For the first time since 1975, North Carolina State awarded an honorary degree, the Doctor of Humane Letters. The recipient was Dr. Theodore W. Schultz, an emeritus econmics professor at the University of Chicago, the winner of the 1979 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science.

Schultz is recognized for his contributions to economic development of poorer nations.

Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton described Schultz, who has been a visiting professor at the university, as "an inspiration to many of us through his emphasis on investing in human capital."

Abraham Holtzman, professor of political science and public administration at North Carolina State, presented the principal address on "Political Stereotypes: Dangerous Illusions" and urged the graduates to vote in the 1984 elections. Holtzman also told the graduates to avoid categorizing all politicians as corrupt.

"At the same time, I would suggest that a dose of healthy skepticism about politicians and government is always warranted," Holtzman told his audience. "Skepticism yes; stereotypes no."

Other graduation ceremonies were held Saturday at Gardner-Webb College, University of North Carolina-Charlotte, University of North Carolina-Wilmington, Louisburg College, Peace College, Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Shaw University and Pembroke State University.

On Sunday, more than 5,000 graduates were expected to be recognized at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The university also planned to present honorary degrees to Research Triangle Institute Director George R. Herbert, businessman and philantropist Frank H. Kenan and actor James Earl Jones.

State Spends Over $21 Million For Short Stretch In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Two crooked miles of I-277 in Charlotte will lie on the costliest property the state has bought in its road-building history.

To buy the 1.9 mile swath from Kenilworth Avenue to I-77, the North Carolina Department of Transportation spent $21.5 million.

For that final segment of the inner-city dogleg, the department displaced 32 businesses — more than any other state road project. It spent almost $8 million on business property, and another $300,000 moving those firms.

"I'd be hard-pressed to think of anything more expensive than I-277 because of its urban nature," says Cy Lynn, Raleigh-based DOT spokesman.

The final 1.9-mile segment, to open in 1988, joins another 0.7-mile segment to form the 2.6-mile loop from Brookshire Freeway to I-77.

While 90 percent of the I-277 project is federally funded, the rest is from money people pay in state gasoline taxes. It's important that the state consider both property owners and taxpayers when spending a third of the $60 million project budget on land, DOT officials say.

"It's a pile of mony, isn't it?" said Jack Baldwin, DOT manager of right-of-way. "You take something right through the heart of Charlotte and you're in the most expensive property."

At least four Charlotte business weren't easily parted from their land, as property owner met property taker in court.

"Nothing is easy anymore," Lynn said. "We're a long way from the days when the right-of-way agent was 5 inches in front of the bulldozer ...."

DOT acquires an average of 80 to 86 of its right-of-way property through negotiations. However, on the I-277 project, its negotiation rate dropped to 73.

The department negotiated 104 of 142 property claims without problems. But it fought for 10 years to settle the land purchase from a dry cleaners and Knight Publishing Co., which publishes The Observer and The Charlotte News.

Knight Publishing Co. fought longest and eventually recouped $3.3 million for 2.5 acres of parking area and an undergound warehouse. The company, which originally asked for $6 million to $7 million, received the largest settlement.

The Bouligny Co. got $2,825,000 for land at 433 W. Morehead St.

But perhaps the most-remembered challenge came from American Dry Cleaners. The owner of the blue cinderblock building, a hallmark of drycleaning for 60 years, said state transportation and federal relocation authorities didn't offer enough help in finding a suitable new site.

The state began demolishing around the cleaners, leaving it on a veritable island amid the construction until a Richmond federal appeals court ruled the cleaners had received proper relocation help. It will recoup $200,000 for the land purchase. Other purchase prices include:

— Lacey's Alignment Service, part of a $283,120 purchase, for the one-story brick building at 900 S. Mint St.

And some of the losses got almost sentimental. Last year, the Charlotte Farmers Market at Independence Boulevard and Kenilworth Avenue moved so rights-of-way surveyors could begin early work. A new market opened recently off Billy Graham Parkway.

For $124,000, the state uprooted the Mecklenburg Democratic Party from its Tryon Street headquarters.

The Carolina Trade Mart lost 700 to 800 parking spaces to I-277.

Before DOT ever lifted its wrecking ball, it held public hearings on environmental impact and design, road alignments and other matters that affect property owners, Lynn said.

Governor Seeks Support For Plan

GREENSBORO (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt asked education, business and government leaders to support his $303 million plan to improve North Carolina's public schools which the General Assembly will consider next month.

"We have to strike while the iron is hot, and it is hot right now," Hunt said in a speech before 100 people at a Greensboro high school. "We have an opportunity we haven't had before and we may not have again in our lifetime.

"We want to look back on 1984 as the year we began the process of making our schools what they ought to be and giving our children and grandchildren what they deserve," he said Friday.

Hunt's plan was drawn up by the N.C. Commission on Education for Economic Growth, a state task force he formed after chairing a similar national commission.

He wants the Legislature to finance the plan during its June budget session. It would pay for a 15 percent pay raise and a career growth plan for educators, reduced class sizes and more money for handicapped students, textbooks, laboratories and vocational equipment.

"Meet with your legislators," Hunt urged his audience. "Tell them you are behind this and you want them to vote for it. They will not have to raise taxes."

He said each school system should form a local task force to design its own school improvment plan. Local leaders should form foundations to raise non-tax funds for education, he said.

The State Board of Education has asked Hunt to seek money to implement the recommendations of the Public Education Policy Council, which would bring the school improvement plan to $349 million.

That plan, similar to Hunt's, calls for the state to pay the $36 million in local tax funds going for vocational education.

Hunt is considering the policy council plan, said spokeswoman Lynne Garrison.

Hunt's speech in Greensboro was the fourth briefing he has conducted on the commission's recommendations. Others have been held in Charlotte, Smithfield and Asheville.

Public schools won't be the only institutions seeking some of the revenue surplus anticipated this summer.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors on Friday authorized its president, William Friday, to seek nearly $6 million from the Legislature to buy and house two sophisticated body scanners for the medical schools at UNC-Chapel Hill and East Carolina University.

Fair Opens On Heels Of Frantic Cleanup

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heralded by riverboat whistles and skyrockets, the $350 million 1984 world's fair opened Saturday after a night of frantic construction and cleanup that left only a few parts of it unfinished.

"Let the good times roll," Mayor Dutch Morial told the crowd at opening ceremonies in the huge fair amphitheater overlooking the Mississippi River.

Floyd Lewis, chairman of the corporation that set up the fair despite a financial struggle, urged those in the audience to become "a cheerleader for the fair, and as you leave the amphitheatre, don't leave any trash behind because we're trying to get the place cleaned up."

Little of the debris — lumber stacks, sand piles, mountains of cardboard boxes and scaffolding — that marred the 82-acre site Friday was visible Saturday. The general manager of the fair, Petr Spurney, appeared to have kept his promise to have the site cleaned up by show time.

The African Market and the exhibits of Peru, Bolivia and the Philippines were closed to various technical problems.

Perfect weather — sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s — enhanced the site.

But at least part of the fair was obviously not ready. Only five of the 40 cars had been attached to what is billed as the world's largest Ferris wheel.

Reports that the fair might not be quite ready failed to dim the enthusiasm of the lines of people at the gates — many of them veteran New Orleans partygoers who gathered as early as 8 a.m. to begin what they saw as the beginning of a six-month Mardis Gras.

There was some early confusion over the opening ceremonies — which were by invitation only to about 6,000 dignitaries. The crowd outside both gates, some of whom bought their $15 tickets at 8:30 a.m. when the booths opened, were not allowed in until noon.

However, at the stroke of noon, blasts of riverboat whistles, fireworks, bells and an Air Force flyover signaled the official opening, and the Southern University band led a dancing wave of first-paying customers through the sturnstiles.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige pressed a button to unleash 84 skyrockets, which exploded high over the festivities.

Officials hoped that 88,000 people would pass through the gates by the time they closed at 2 a.m. Sunday.

State officials hope crowds will flock to the fair, which has been plagued by cash flow problems and slow advance ticket sales. The corporation putting on the fair, Louisiana World Exposition Inc., had to go to the state Legislature last month for a $10 million loan to pay overdue construction bills. Lawmakers grudgingly approved the loan.

Bob Kocurek, president of J&K Rig Builders, Inc., of Lafayette, La., was one of the early arrivals. He had come to see the oil industry pavilion, which his company had helped construct.

The theme of the fair is "The World of Rivers: Fresh Water as a Source of Life."

The theme was evident everywhere, from the lagoons and man-made lakes that greeted visitors passing through the front gates on the edge of downtown New Orleans to the banks of the Mississippi River.

Highlights included a monorail that provided a quick tour of the site and an aerial gondola ride — similar to a ski-lift — to carry fair goers 370 feet in the air across the river.

The day for the average fair visitor will be expensive. Parking at the fair is $5. An adult admission ticket is $15 — good for admission to all pavilions and for the monorail. A gondola ride will cost another $3.50. A tour of the Vatican Pavilion where priceless paintings and art objects are on display will add $5.

In addition, food and other purchases will be higher because of a 14 percent tax on all sales at the fair.

Twenty-three nations are taking part. The centerpiece of the site is the cavernous, ultra-modern Great Hall, through which the monorail slinks as it travels around the site.

Contrasting with the clean, modern lines of the hall are the 19th-century warehouses along Fulton Street, the French and Creole-style architecture evident in many of the restaurants and shops and the "Wonder-Wall," a half-mile long facade that fair literature describes as a "frozen parade" and a "fantasy parody of architectural history." The gaudy, colorful structure includes the huge papier-mache Mardis Gras figures that usually adorn carnival floats.

Forty fountains and a thousand plants adorn the Wonder-Wall, adding to the air of tropical fantasy evoked at the front gates by the gigantic figures of sea creatures, alligators, goddesses and the voluptuous bare-breasted mermaids that some indignant New Orleanians had found objectionable.

New York Mayor Orders Mondale Posters Removed

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertising posters sporting a caricature of a nearly nude Walter Mondale were being stripped from city subways on Saturday after Mayor Edward Koch declared them obscene.

The drawing depicts Mondale as "a male stripper," illustrating his "obsequious" support from feminist groups, said Bob Guccione, Penthouse publisher.

"We feel Mondale's activities deserve such comment," Guccione said.

Koch, who supports the Democratic presidental candidate, disagreed.

"I felt it was obscene and shouldn't appear in the subways as a commercial ad," Koch said Saturday. "We do not permit racial or religious slurs in our subways and we certainly should not permit obscenity."

The mayor called Metropolitan Transportation Authority Chairman Robert Kiley on Friday and asked about the posters. Koch said Kiley told him that "he was in a difficult position because he did not like to perform the job of censor."

Koch noted that under the contract with Subway Advertising Co., a private firm that has a $10 million franchise for subway advertising, "the MTA has the right to make judgment on the appropriateness of copy."

The mayor said Kiley "took about an hour to think about it" before "he decided to withdraw it."

Koch said he objected to the poster not because he backs Mondale but because it was obscene.

"It would be an obscenity if it were President Reagan, former President Nixon, minister Jesse Jackson or Sen. Gary Hart. We don't permit obscenity directed at anyone to be commercially displayed in our subway system."

The mayor called Kiley's decision to ask the advertising company to remove the posters "a victory for decency."

Smart Recorders

INDIANAPOLIS P) — Video cassette recorders are getting smarter, smaller and simpler to use.

A new one from RCA is a "convertible": it's both a table model and a lightweight portable. This recorder can be preset to record eight hour-long television programs for a year ahead.

A remote control unit almost eliminates the need for an instruction manual. The user presses a button and step-by-step operating directions are flashed on the screen.

Program Sponsors Children's Visits To Mothers in State Institutions

GOING HOME ... Stormie Jones, 7, who underwent the world's first simultaneous heart and liver transplant on Feb. 14, hugs a doll at her temporary Pittsburgh home. The blond, brown-eyed girl is expected to return home to Cumby, Texas, on Monday. She will return to Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital for checkup and doctors say her new orogans are "functioning normally" and she "is normal." (AP Laserphoto)

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — Shirley Green's children have seen her drunk, high on drugs and hustling on the street, but at first she was not sure if she wanted them to see her in prison.

But once she decided she did, a special program made it possible for her children visit her at the state Correctional Institution for Women.

"I try to give them some insight that this is not the place to be," she said recently as two of her sons played basketball in the prison gym and she discussed family news with her daughter. "If they're doing something on the streets, they better get their acts together."

Mrs. Green, her three sons, daughter and grandson are among the 105 inmates and about 200 children involved in the 7-year-old Mother-Child Visitation Program, paid for in part by federal funds.

Children from seven New Jersey counties within a 1½-hour drive of the state's prison for women in this Hunterdon County community are picked up by a van. They eat lunch, play and take pictures with their mothers in the gym.

Visits go on three days a week for up to 15 children a day, permitting most to come about every six weeks.

"There's nothing cute about sitting here or (the children) coming here," said Mrs. Green, whose husband is in a Pennsylvania prison. "But it gives me a chance to tell them I still think about them and my love is still with them."

"The kids feel abandoned when their mother goes away," she said.

Many inmates hesitate about joining the program at first, ashamed that their children should have to visit their mothers behind bars.

"I tell them, 'If you tell them you did something wrong, they can handle that,'" said Mrs. Cassebaum, the mother of eight.

Most of the mothers cherish the opportunity to see their children and show them off to the other inmates, she said.

"Being a criminal doesn't make you a poor mother," Mrs. Cassebaum said.

And for some of the inmates, the visits are the first time they have become involved in their children's lives.

"Some of them who have been on drugs or had alcohol problems, here they're off (the substances) for the first time," said Mrs. Cassebaum. "They begin to think of someone other than themselves."

Mrs. Green, 34, said her alcohol and drug problems and prostitution had so torn apart her Camden family that before she was sentenced to nine months for welfare fraud, her mother told her: "I want the judge to give you some time, but not too much."

Her 16-year-old daughter Cheri, mother of a 9-month-old son, said she and her three brothers often fought over whether they should remain loyal to a mother who often did not come home at night.

She said she uses the visits to tell her mother "we love her and miss her" — and are looking forward to her release, scheduled for next month.

Tornado Rips Through Flea Market, Hurts 11

ALTAMONT, N.Y. (UPI) — A tornado swept through an outdoor flea-market Saturday, injuring 11 people, lifting a truck into the air and toppling a grandstand, officials said.

Strong winds also knocked down trees and power lines across several counties near Albany as a line of severe thunderstorms moved across the state and into New England late in the afternoon, the National Weather Service said.

Police said the tornado at the Altamont Fairgrounds lifted a large van into the air and tossed it on top of a woman who was pinned under the truck for nearly 15 minutes, police said. The woman's identity was not immediately known.

Hospital officials said 11 people were treated for injuries, which were mostly minor. Most of the victims were to be released later Saturday, hospital officials said.

Sgt. Douglas Laremore of the Guilderland Police Dept. said the twister hit the Altamont Fairgrounds 14 miles west of Albany about 3:30 p.m. during a flea-market to raise money for the American Cancer Society. About 150 people were on the grounds, he said.

The storm knocked down wires and pulled apart several smaller bleachers and tossed tables into the air, he said. "It's quite a mess," he said.

Little Apple?

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York state, including its "Big Apple," may not be such a big apple by the 21st century.

The American Council of Life Insurance says both Texas and Florida are likely to surpass New York in population by the year 2000.

The council, which based its estimate on Census Bureau projections of state populations between 1980 and 2000, says California will remain the most populous state.

ECU In Finale After Pair Of Victories

HARRISONBURG, Va. — Mike Christopher threw his first complete game since March 22 and Winfred Johnson blasted a towering homer to give the Pirates of East Carolina University a 4-3 victory over host James Madison in the ECAC-South baseball tournament.

The victory by the Pirates forces a championship game Sunday at 2 p.m. in the double-elimination tourney between ECU and Madison. The Pirates are 3-0 in 1984 against the Dukes and hold a 7-0 advantage in the series.

Johnson's homer was his 15th of the season and the 26th while at East Carolina tying the record set by Butch Davis, who ironically, was sent down to the Kansas City Royals' AAA farm team Thursday.

Christopher gave up nine hits in the contest, struck out three but walked no one in his first outing since throwing 2 1/3 innings in a 9-5 loss to North Carolina Wesleyan April 24.

"We knew he was capable of it," ECU Coach Hal Baird said. "It was his outing by far. Once the game got into a flow, I knew Mike had good stuff.

"How good we are, we'll just have to see tomorrow. They're good, and we know tomorrow will be tough."

Madison jumped on the Pirates for a run in the first, as Mark Siciliano singled after one out, Jeff Urban single and Mike Reeves singled in Siciliano.

But ECU bounced back for three runs in the fourth. After two outs, Chris Bradberry doubled to left-center, and Steve Sides singled him in. Mark Cockrell stepped to the plate and ripped his first homer of the year to drive in Sides for a 3-1 ECU lead.

Reeves blasted a leadoff homer in the fourth, his 12th of the year, to trim the margin to 3-2.

Johnson closed the ECU scoring in the eighth with a blast that cleared the trees beyond the flag pole in center field to put the Pirates ahead 4-1.

Carey Nemeth opened the bottom of the ninth with his third homer of the tourney, equalling the record.

But Christopher retired the final three for the victory.

"Mainly I went with my breaking pitch to day, and I was able to get it over for strikes," Christopher said. "Changing speeds was a big key today. If you could do that, you can control the tempo of a game. Needless to say, I was real pleased with my game."

Hardison finished with three hits in four trips to the plate, while Bradberry went 2-4. Reeves led the Dukes with two hits in four at bats.

ECU improved its record to 31-11, while Madison slipped to 38-12.

Jumtirethe s

"Overall, played well on every level," Baird said. "We probably hit the ball better than the amount of runs we scored would indicate. It's been a long haul through the losers bracket, but now its all even and a one-game championship.

"It was a great day. Both games were the same type of ballgame; they were both tough and hard from start to finish."

The Pirates advanced to the game against James Madison with a 7-6 victory over Georgetown.

The Hoyas defeated ECU Thursday in the opening round, but the Pirates rallied from a 6-1 deficit in the fifth to take the win.

David Wells ripped a pair of doubles and drove in two runs, while Todd Evans added two hits. Greg Hardison drove in a pair of runs with a single.

Georgetown took the lead in the top of the first, as Scott Elliott singled and moved to second on an error on a pickoff attempt. Chris DeMarco sacrificed Elliott to third, and he scored on Steve Iannini's sacrifice fly.

The Pirates picked up a run on an error in the second, but the Hoyas posted two more in the third. After two out, Iannini walked, and Bill O'Malley singled and took second on the throw to third. Bob Ebner rolled a grounder to shortstop, but the ball

Sneva Lives Up To Indy Reputation

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Defending Indianapolis 500 winner Tom Sneva, living up to his reputation as a great qualifier, demolished the one-lap and four-lap track records Saturday and tentatively grabbed the pole position for the $2.5 million race at an average of 210.029 mph.

Sneva, who has started from the inside of the front row at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway twice before, got progressively faster on each of his four qualifying laps, hitting 210.689 on his final trip around the historic 2 1/2-mile oval.

He was one of a handful of drivers to top the previous one-lap mark of 208.049 and the four-lap standard of 207.395, both set last May by Italian driver Teo Fabi. Sneva's teammate, Howdy Holmes, tentatively took the middle of the front row with an average speed at 207.977.

A sun-drenched crowd estimated at more than 200,000 watched the fastest day of qualifications in the 68-year history of the 500, with 18 of the first 19 qualifiers averaging above the once-magical 200 mph mark.

Several others were unofficially above that mark in practice during the past week, including Mario Andretti, who came into the first of four days of qualifications as the favorite to win the pole after posting a fast lap of 212.414 Friday.

But Andretti, who made his qualifying effort prior to Sneva, finished with a disappointing four-lap average of 207.467 after his engine shut off as he came onto the final straightaway on his last lap. That ill-fated last lap averaged 202.950.

"We had an ignition failure in turn four, just as I got straightened out," the frustrated winner of the 1969 Indy 500 said. "It's unfair. It's cruel.

"My fourth lap was probably my cleanest one, until the engine died," added Andretti, whose first lap, clocked at a then-record 209.678, turned out to be his best. "That's the emptiest feeling I've had in a long time. Three hundred more yards, it could have just been painless."

Lakers Cruise By Phoenix, 110-94

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, whose well-rested Lakers opened the Western Conference finals with a 110-94 victory over Phoenix Saturday afternoon, said he expects the series to get tougher for his club.

"This game will be an education for (Suns Coach John) MacLeod," said Riley. "He's one of the best at preparation, and believe me, Phoenix will be well-prepared for the next game.

"We had three days off, but the Suns were probably feeling the effects of their game on Thursday night, and it didn't give them much time to get ready for us."

The best-of-seven series, from which the winner advances to the National Basketball Association Championship playoffs, resumes Tuesday night at the Lakers' Forum. The third and fourth games are in Phoenix on Friday and Sunday.

MacLeod said he was going to give his team time off Sunday to rest up from the seven-game series against Utah and the ensuing game against the Lakers.

"We had no time off, really," he said.

Reserve forward Bob McAdoo scored 20 points, 12 in the decisive final quarter, to pace Los Angeles' victory.

"McAdoo really hurt us," said MacLeod. "The Lakers played very well. We had a good first half, but they dictated the pace in the second half."

McAdoo said: "We keep fresh guys coming in off the bench and that throws the other team off. Teams usually try to relax when the opposition goes to the bench, but we're so deep, we don't lose anything."

Los Angeles took command in the fourth quarter, as the Suns went cold from the floor midway through the period and the Lakers built a commanding lead.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored eight of his 19 points in the third quarter to help the Lakers build a 78-68 advantage by the end of the period.

The closest the Suns came in the final 12 minutes was six points, at 78-72 early in the period, but Los Angeles then got consecutive baskets by McAdoo and Byron Scott and the Lakers went on to build a 90-76 pad midway through the closing quarter.

Mike McGee added 17 points for the Lakers, Magic Johnson had 16, James Worthy 13 and Scott 10.

Walter Davis led the Phoenix scoring with 24 points and Alvan Adams added 15 and Larry Nance 14.

The opening half was close almost all the way, with the Lakers finally able to move out to a nine-point edge, 57-48, with an 11-2 spurt in the waning moments of the half.

Los Angeles, which had trailed 32-29 at the end of the first period, led 57-52 at halftime.

Olympic Boycotts

Czechoslovakia, Laos Join Soviet-Led Withdrawl From 1984 Summer Games

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

Czechoslovakia and Laos dropped out of the Los Angeles Olympics on Saturday, bringing the Soviet-led boycott to seven countries, as the International Olympic Committee invited delegates from the United States and Moscow to an emergency meeting.

The meeting, scheduled for Friday in Lausanne, Switzerland, was called to try change the Soviets' stance. Delegates from United States and the Soviet Union, as well as officials of the Los Angeles Organizing Committee have been invited.

IOC Director Monique Berlioux said Saturday there had been no formal responses yet to the invitations, which went out late Friday night.

But Steve Montiel, a spokesman for the LAOOC, said a Los Angeles delegate is prepared to attend if a Soviet counterpart does.

Mario Vasquez Rana of Mexico, the president of the Association of National Olympic Committees, met Saturday with the chairman of the Soviet Olympic Committee and said the Soviet Union did not appear ready to reconsider its boycott.

But Marat Gramov, the Soviet official, promised to attend Friday's meeting, Vasquez Rana said.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, IOC president, described the meeting as part of a "a fight to the last minute" to change the Soviets' minds.

China, meanwhile, confirmed it will attend the Games, Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympics Organizing Committee, said Saturday.

East Germany, Bulgaria, Vietnam and Mongolia previously announced they had joined the boycott. Poland, Cuba and Mozambique have hinted they will not participate in the Games.

Czechoslovakia, with its formidable track and field team, won 14 medals at the 1980 Moscow Games and this year had several medal candidates, including women's 800-meter world champion Jarmila Kratochvilova and women's world shot put champion Helena Fibingerova.

The decision of Czechoslovakia, which has echoed Soviet criticism of the Games, was announced by the official news agency CTK.

Anton Himl, Czechoslovakia's national Olympic committee chairman, said the organization of the Games was "sharp contradiction with the Olympic charter," according to the CTK. The dispatch also accused the U.S. adminstration of interfering in preparations for the Games and trying "to subordinate the Olympic Games to their own political objectives."

Laos withdrew because "the U.S. administration uses sports as a political tool," Radio Vietiane quoted government officials as saying.

The LAOOC received a letter from Zhong Shitong, president of the Chinese Olympic Committee, confirming his country's attendance, Montiel said. The letter was handed to Charles Lee, the LAOOC envoy to China, Montiel said. Lee is completing a series of meetings in China.

"Our delegation has been extremely well-received in China," Ueberroth said. "After several very difficult days, this is a very positive gesture."

The deadline to file an entry for the Los Angeles Games is June 2. The Games are set for July 28 to Aug. 12.

At a news conference Friday, Samaranch said he would go to Moscow as soon as the Soviets respond to his request for a meeting with Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko.

He read a letter from President Reagan to the Soviets in which the president said the Olympics "should not be used for political purposes" and asserted "the United States is totally committed to upholding the Olympic charter."

Japan's Foreign Ministry made a formal request Saturday to the Soviet Union that it permit teams to participate in the Games, said a ministry spokesman who requested anonymity.

China Accepts IOC Invitation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — China has accepted its invitation to participate in the 1984 Summer Olympics, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee announced Saturday.

"We are very pleased that the Chinese Olympic team accepted their invitation to the Los Angles Olympic Games," LAOOC president Peter Ueberroth said Saturday. "Any team can accept the invitation before June 2, and we are very pleased that this team has done so."

Steve Montiel, spokesman for the LAOOC, released a copy of the formal acceptance from China:

"To the organizing committee of the XXIIIrd Olympiad

"Dear Chairman Paul Ziffren

"Dear President Peter Uebberoth

"Dear Executive Vice President and General Manager Harry L. Usher

"We have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of the official invitation of the organizing committee of the XXIIIrd Olympiad inviting us to send a sports delegations to the Los Angeles Olympic Games.

"I have the honor to inform you that the Chinese Olympic Committee has decided to send a sports delegation to the Los Angeles Olympic Games.

"We wish the games every success.

"Yours Sincerely,

"Zhong Shitong, President of Chinese Olympic Committee."

Montiel said the letter was handed to Charles Lee, the LAOOC envoy to China. Lee is finishing a series of meetings in Peking.

"Our delegation has been extrememly well received in China. After several very difficult days, this is a very positive gesture," Ueberroth said.

The People's Republic of China has not participated in any summer Olympics since 1952 in Helsinki, Finland, due to the recently resolved conflict over how the Nationalist Chinese team was to be designated. In 1981, Nationalist China agreed to change the name of its Olympic committee to the Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee and fly a different Olympic flag, apparently satisfying the mainland government's demands.

Jackson, Lynn Power Angels' Win

DETROIT (AP) — An old-fashioned Tommy John game, a monstrous Reggie Jackson home run and a clutch single by Fred Lynn helped the California Angeles' snap a five-game losing skid and put a halt on the Detroit Tigers' seven-game winning streak.

John tossed a seven-hitter, Jackson slammed a two-run homer over the right-field roof and Lynn broke a seventh-inning tie with a run-scoring single as the Angels beat Detroit 4-2 Saturday.

"Fortunatey today, I had one of my better games," said John after handing the Tigers only their fifth loss in 31 games, still the best record in the majors this season.

John had his sinker working to perfection, forcing the Tigers to hit the ball on the ground 13 times for outs. But John, one of eight pitchers to win 20 games in each league, said he does not expect the Tigers to go on many losing streaks this season.

"With (Jack) Morris and (Dan) Petry pitching, it's virtually impossible for those guys to lose two in a row," said John, adding the Tigers remind him of the 1977 Dodgers, a team that won the National League's West Division after a very fast start.

"It too early to say but they have a good hold on the American League East," said John. "They are loose, they expect to win and they are."

Jackson became only the 12th player in the history of Tiger Stadium to hit a ball over the roof when he connected off Juan Berenguer, 2-2, on a 3-2 pitch in the fifth inning. The blast, Jackson's seventh of the season, was only the 18th to clear the stadium's roof and came after a walk to Juan Beniquez.

"It was a fastball right out over the plate," said Jackson. "I haven't been swinging well, but he gave me a good fastball to hit right out over the plate."

California broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh as Doug DeCinces singled, moved to second on a wild pitch by Berenguer and, after a walk to Brian Downing, scored when Lynn singled to right.

Rob Wilfong homered in the eighth, his third of the season, for a California insurance run.

John, 3-3, walked two and struck out two in beating the Tigers for the first time since April 28, 1981.

California turned four double plays, including one in the ninth inning that got Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson ejected for arguing an interference call.

Anderson said he was kicked out by umpire Ted Hendry for throwing his hat.

"We never cursed each other. There never was a word from me or a word from him even shouting," said Anderson.

However, home plate umpire Jim Evans said Anderson showed bad judgment was arguing so long and could have caused a "riot."

"Someone could have gotten killed," added fellow umpire Greg Kosc.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Chet Lemon singled and took second on a wild pitch. After Darrell Evans walked. Lemon scored on the front end of a double steal when catcher Bob Boone threw the ball into center field when he tried to nail Evans at second.

Cleveland.....8

CLEVELAND (AP) — After two lost seasons, Bert Blyleven is still considered a great pitcher by his peers.

"He's one of the best pitchers I've ever seen," Lloyd Moseby said after Blyleven pitched the Cleveland Indians to an 8-4 victory over Moseby's Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

"There's no question about it. In my mind he's a great pitcher and the way he throws, you would never know he's been hurt," Moseby added.

Blyleven, 4-2 this season while rebounding from a pair of seasons ruined by elbow and shoulder injuries, held Toronto to one earned run in seven innings before Earnie Camacho finished for his fourth save.

The 33-year-old Blyleven, whose career ERA is 3.01, has tossed at least seven innings in each of his eight starts and leads the American League with 47 strikeouts.

"I just want to be consistent when I go there. The other pitcher knows I'm going to pitch a good game and that he's got to be at his best to beat me," Blyleven said.

Blyleven's lifetime record of 180-162 is hardly what one would expect from a pitcher so stingy of yielding runs, but the big right-hander says, "You can't control some things in baseball. Everytime I go out there I want to keep my club in the game."

Cleveland got Blyleven the victory when Brett Butler's run-scoring single snapped a seventh-inning tie and sparked a three-run rally.

Jerry Willard drew a leadoff walk off Jim Acker, 0-2, in the seventh inning. Nixon ran for Willard and Jim Key came on in relief. Nixon went to second on Mike Fischlin's sacrifice bunt, and on the second pitch to Butler, Key pulled his left hamstring.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tim Teufel would have trouble telling the Milwaukee Brewers about his problems at the plate.

Teufel keyed Minnesota's 14-hit attack with a 4-for-4 performance and one RBI to lead the Twins to a 4-2 victory over the Brewers Saturday.

Teufel, last season's most valuable player in the International League, extended his hitting streak to seven games with his four singles. He is batting .400 during the stretch with 12 hits, two home runs and seven RBI.

"I'm just starting to come out of a bad groove," said the 25-year-old second baseman, who has raised his average from .240 to .276 in the seven games. "I had one good series at Baltimore. I haven't really found myself hitting. I want to turn it around and be more consistent hitting."

"He's been doing the job for us," he said. "I think he'll do an even better job the second halfof the season. And playing on the Astroturf at the Metrodome should help his hitting, too."

For the Brewers, it was another case of having the hits, but not enough runs.

"We've got to score more than two runs to win," said Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann, whose team had 11 hits. "Sometimes you hope

CHICAGO (AP) — Marv Foley hit a two-run home run to help Dave Stewart win his first game of the season as the Texas Rangers defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-4 Saturday.

Stewart, 1-6, allowed four hits, walked six and struck out four through five innings. Jim Bibby went the next three innings and Dave Tobik pitched the final inning for his third save.

Texas took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off White Sox starter LaMarr Hoyt, 3-4. Billy Sample led off with an infield single and moved to third one out later on Buddy Bell's single.

Sample scored on Larry Parrish's ground ball to shortstop Jerry Dybzinski, who tried to force Bell at second, but second baseman Scott Fletcher dropped the throw for an error. Bell then scored on Gary Ward's single.

The White Sox got a run back in their first when Jerry Hairston drew a leadoff walk and Greg Walker and Tom Paciorek followed with singles.

Foley's fifth home run of the season came after Ward singled in the third. Curt Wilkerson singled in the fourth, moved to second on a groundout and scored when Hoyt's wild pickoff throw to make it 5-1.

Walker hit a solo home run in the White Sox sixth, his third of the year, before Texas got an insurance run in the eighth when Fley doubled and later scored on Sample's sacrifice fly.

Harold Baines smacked a two-run homer, his third of the season, in the eighth to pull Chicago within 6-4.

Pirates, JMU In Final...

was thrown away allowing Iannini and O'Malley to score.

The Hoyas closed their scoring with three more runs in the fifth. DeMarco walked, Iannini singled and O'Malley singled in DeMarco. An error by Evans in left field allowed the runners to move to second and third, and Mike Saguto singled in Iannini. Bob Davidson came on to pitch for the Pirates, and Mike Letnew drew a base on balls to force home O'Malley.

But the Pirates came alive in the fifth, as Wells reached first on an error and a single by Evans put runners on first and third with one out. A fielder's choice by Wintred Johnson forced Evans at second, but Bruckner's throw went into the dugout allowing Wells to score.

The big inning for East Carolina was the sixth, as the Pirates posted four runs. Mike Sullivan reached first on a fielder's choice, Steve Sides singled and Jim Riley was hit by a pitch to fill the bases. Hardison ripped a two-run single, and Wells followed with a double to drive in two more runs and even the score at 6-6 before Cockrell blast lifted the Pirates.

Georgetown loaded the bases with two out in the eighth and had runners on second and third with two out in the ninth, but Davidson closed the door both times.

Hendrick Ends Soto's No-Hit Bid

The Cincinnati Reds right-hander was just one out away from a no-hitter and had a 2-2 count on St. Louis' George Hendrick when he decided to try to climax a potential record performance with a change-up Saturday.

"As soon as I threw the pitch I said, 'That's trouble,'" Soto said. "I hung the pitch."

Hendrick swatted the inside-and-high offering well over the left-field wall for his second homer of the season, leaving Soto to eventually settle for his second career one-hitter and a 2-1 victory over the Cardinals.

The Reds' sixth straight win took on a bittersweet tinge after the Reds made two outstanding defensive plays to help Soto go into the ninth with his bid for his first career no-hitter intact.

Dave Parker's sacrifice fly gave Soto a run in the third, and it looked like it would be enough. Soto, 5-1, overpowered the Cardinals with his fastball, striking out 10 in the first six innings on his way to a 12-strikeout performance.

"I started getting nervous after the sixth," said Soto.

Reds second baseman Ron Oester made a sensational play to rob Ozzie Smith of an infield single leading off the seventh. Oester dove and swatted Smith's weak grounder barehanded to first baseman Dan Driessen to barely nab Smith.

With one out in the eighth, right fielder Dave Parker made a sensational diving catch of a drive by Tom Herr in the right-center field gap, bringing a standing ovation from the crowd of 24,364.

"I think I was more nervous than Mario out there," Parker said. "I wanted it for him real bad."

Soto made the last out in the Reds' eighth, then took the mound for the last time. He got Smith on a groundout and Lonnie Smith on a pop up as the crowd stood and cheered wildly on a warm and sunny spring afternoon.

"I think I was too nervous," Soto said. "I just couldn't stand it out there. I was nervous after I made the last out in the eighth. I've never felt that way before."

Up came Hendrick, who made the last out when Tom Seaver no-hit the Cardinals on June 6, 1978. Soto got two quick strikes, then Hendrick fouled off two pitches and took two balls high.

Then it was the change-up.

"In that situation, you've got to be so careful," Soto said, noting he had just a one-run lead. "You're thinking of giving up a hit, and you don't want him to hit the ball out of the park. Look what happened.

"I almost died right there. I don't think anybody felt worse than I did. I wanted to leave. I almost walked out."

"I felt like digging a hole someplace," Gulden said. "I felt very bad for Mario. You don't get that many chances in your lifetime to pitch no-hitters. I wanted to be part of it."

Soto hunched over with hands on knees at the side of the mound while Hendrick circled the bases. His teammates came over to console him, and the crowd gave him a long ovation for the effort.

"I told him the game is tied 1-1, forget about the 'no-no,' now he's got to work for the win,'" infielder Dave Concepcion said.

Soto walked the next batter, Andy Van Slyke, then toughened and retired Ken Oberkfell on a fly ball to end the ninth.

"I said to myself, 'If you want to win the game, you'll have to work hard, get out of the inning, and we might score a run and win.'" Soto said.

That was the script. Concepcion singled off Bruce Sutter, 1-2, with one out, stole second and rode home on Gulden's single.

All that was left for the Reds was to celebrate their 13th victory in their last 14 games and lament one pitch.

Soto's 12 strikeouts marked the 23rd time in his career and second this season that he's fanned 10 or more.

Soto threw 132 pitches in his third complete game of the season and his fourth straight victory. But there were muttered cuss words by Reds players in the clubhouse after the game, as Soto and his teammates tried to accept the disappointment of settling for a near no-hitter.

"I thought he had it when he got two strikes on George," Concepcion said. "He's a great hitter. When you've got a good hitter, you've got to be careful.

"But, that's the way it is."

Oester said he was at a loss for words when he went over to console Soto after the homer.

"I didn't say anything. I just patted him. There's nothing you can say in a situation like that," Oester said. "There's nothing you can say to make him feel better.

"You can't come any closer than that."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It should have been a glorious day for the San Francisco Giants, who snapped a four-game losing streak and rewarded Mike Krukow with his first win in more than a month Saturday.

But there was a cloud of gloom which hovered above the 8-7 Giants victory over the Montreal Expos because infielders Manny Trillo and Fran Mullins were injured seriously and had to placed on the disabled list.

Trillo was placed on the 21-day disabled list and Mullins was placed on the 15-day disabled list. The Giants recalled Tom O'Malley and Joe Pittman from their Phoenix affliate and the pair will be in uniform Sunday.

"It's quite a blow to us to lose a player like Trillo," Manager Frank Robinson said. "You don't replace someone of his caliber. It's a blow to the entire team but we have to keep our heads up and go on."

The Giants scored four times in the first inning, off Rogers, 2-2, with Jeff Leonards' two-run homer being the key blow. They added three runs in the third staking Krukow, 2-4, to a 7-0 lead.

Al Oliver followed with a run-scoring single to right and following Jack Clark's run-scoring groundout, Leonard made it 4-0 with his fourth home run of the season.

Mike Krukow, 2-4, won his first game since April 10 as the Giants broke a four-game losing streak despite being outhit 17-7.

After the Expos scored a run in the second on a walk to Gary Carter and singles by Tim Wallach and Terry Francona, the Giants chased Rogers with three runs in the third.

Fitzgerald Rallies For Mets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rookie Mike Fitzgerald, returning to his southern California home with New York Mets, came through in style with the game-winnning RBI in Saturday's 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It's great to come home and have two good games in front of my friends," said Fitzgerald, who had three hits and two runs batted in during the first two games of the series at Dodger Stadium.

"This club is doing a good job. We're young, but not all that young. We've got some veterans, too. We've been playing good defense.

"If we've got the lead in the sixth inning we're tough, with (Doug) Sisk and (Jesse) Orosco coming out of the bullpen."

Sisk hurled four innings of one-hit relief and George Foster hammered his fifth homer of the season to give the Mets their second straight win over struggling Los Angeles, which has lost seven of its last 10 games.

Ed Lynch, making his first start of the season, upped his record to 4-0 by going five innings before Sisk got his third save.

The Mets scored a run in each of the four innings against Alejandro Pena, 4-2, who had won four straight decisions.

Wally Backman and Jose Oquendo singled to lead off the first against Pena, and Backman came home on a sacrifice fly by Keith Hernandez.

In the second, Mookie Wilson led off with a double, his fourth successive hit against th Dodgers. One out later, Mike Fitzgerald singled him home.

Foster homered with one out in the third, his fifth homer of the season. It was also his 33rd against the Dodgers, the most among active opposing players.

Chicago 5
Houston 4

HOUSTON (AP) — A late gamble paid big dividends for Jody Davis and the surprising Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Given the green light on a 3-0 pitch with two outs in the ninth inning, Davis belted a three-run pinch-hit home run that gave Chicago a 5-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

"On a 3-0 fastball (Cubs Manager) Frey took a gamble and let me swing," Davis said. "And it sure paid off."

"I was in shock going around the bases. I thought he (Houston center fielder Jerry Mumphrey) had caught it. I was watching Mumphrey and not the ball."

Davis' homer, which barely cleared the orange line signifying a homer, was his third of the season and came against loser Frank DiPino, 1-2, as the Astros had their three-game winning streak snapped.

A walk to Ron Cey, who left for pinch runner Henry Cotto, and a pinch-single by Bill Buckner preceded Davis' game-winner.

"I haven't done that well in the Astrodome," said Davis. "It's such a big place. It's a big win because our offense hasn't done much the last three or four games."

Chicago had scored only one earned run in its previous 26 innings before Davis swatted his homer.

"I challenged him," said DiPino, "and he beat me. I thought I'd get lucky with all that space in the Dome, but I didn't."

Polish Athlete Keeps Working For A Chance

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Janusz Peciak, the Polish pentathlon champion, is still running, swimming, shooting, riding, fencing, and hoping that he and his teammates will travel to Los Angeles for the Summer Olympics.

"We have a one percent chance of going," the 35-year-old 1976 Olympic gold medalist said Saturday as he ended a 12-mile run at the Athletic Training Center in Warsaw's northern Zoliborz section.

"That one percent is only because the Olympic committee has not made a decision. Of course, it is not the committee that will decide," said Peciak, implying that the Communist government will make a choice based on its alliance with Moscow.

Poland's state-run media have hinted strongly that Warsaw will join the boycott, but spokesmen for the Polish Olympic Committee said no decision would be announced before Monday or Tuesday.

By Saturday, six Soviet allies followed the Kremlin in its boycott: East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Vietnam, Laos and Mongolia.

Peciak contested Moscow's claim that its athletes would be harassed in Los Angeles. "I have been to the United States 12 times and never had any problems," he said. "I am very mad about the decision, because I do not think we will have any problems.

"All of us are very upset," said Piecak, referring to the more than 100 Polish athletes who expected to compete at the Games.

Peciak, the nine-time Polish pentathlon champion, won a gold medal at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, and took the world championship titles in 1977 at San Antonio, Texas, and in 1981 at Drzonkowo, Poland.

The modern pentathlon consists of a 4,000-meter run, a 5,-000-meter horse ride, a 300-meter swim, fencing and pistol shooting.

"My private opinion is that this (the Soviet pullout) is in revenge for the United States not going to the Moscow Games (in 1980). I was against the U.S. boycott," said the blonde, mustachioed Peciak, whose black-and-gold track suit and red wool hat were coated with mist on an unseasonably cool May morning.

Peciak was in Los Angeles in 1982, touring Olympic sites, visiting Disneyland, and sampling Mexican and Chinese cuisine, which is not available in Poland. "I liked it. Everyone was very nice to me," he said.

"Even if there would be problems for Polish athletes, it is still better that we compete," said Peciak. "In the end, people will forget who went or did not go, and will remember only who won.

Stadler Leads Nelson Classic

DALLAS (AP) — After scoring seven birdies and an eagle-2 in a round of 64, Craig Stadler said he saw the end of a frustrating non-winning string.

"Obviously, I'm pleased with my position," a satisfied Stadler said after he'd opened up a four-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the Byron Nelson Classic.

"Somebody will have to play a pretty good round to catch me now," said the former Masters champion and leading money-winner who has not won since his banner season of 1982.

"I hit the irons very, very good today and the putter is working tremendously well."

One of the iron shots was perfect. That came from about 175 yards out on the ninth, where, he said, "I hit it right at the hole — and that's where it ended up."

That eagle-2 and a birdie-par-birdie finish helped him to a 205 total, eight shots under par for 54 holes, and prompted his challengers to agree that a superior effort will be necessary to catch Stadler in Sunday's final round.

"It will have to be a 64 or 65; 71 won't do it.

"He'll be a hard man to catch," said Tom Watson, a four-time winner of this event who goes into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize at 211, six off the pace.

"It looks like Craig is so far out in front, the players behind him will have to take chances. And he won't have to take chances," analyzed Lee Trevino, also at 211.

Mike Smith, a career struggler who hasn't made a check this season, once lost his playing rights because of lack of performance and hasn't made expenses in four seasons, held second at 209. He birdied the last hole and had a 68 despite a double bogey from the water on the 14th hole.

Watson, Trevino and Mark O'Meara were next at two under. O'Meara had a 66 in warm, sunny weather that remained breezy but not nearly so windy as during the first two rounds.

"A much easier golf course today," Watson said.

Tied at 212 were Andy Bean, Jay Haas, Dave Edwards and Chip Beck. All had third-round 69s.

While scoring, generally, was lower in the diminished winds, PGA champion Hal Sutton could do no better than match par 71 and completed three rounds at 214.

Ben Crenshaw, the new Masters champion and the defending titleholder here, had a 70 and was at 215.

Washington's Triple Gives Perez Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Claudell Washington drilled a run-scoring triple into the right-field corner to break an eighth-inning tie and give Pascual Perez his second victory as the Atlanta Braves edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 Saturday night.

Washington's hit came off reliever Cecilio Guante, 0-2, and scored Albert Hall, who was running for Bruce Benedict from first base. Washington then scored the Braves' fourth run on Chris Chambliss' pinch double down the right-field line.

Perez, 2-0, was making his second offical start of the season since returning to action after spending three months in jail at his native Dominican Republic before being convicted on a drug misdemeanor charger and awaiting disposition of an appeal.

Perez went eight innings, allowing only four hits, striking out six and walking two.

The Pirates gained a 2-2 tie in the fifth after Perez had retired 10 batters in a row.

Tony Pena started the rally with a double and scored on Brian Harper's single. Harper went to second on Doug Frobel's grounder and scored when Dale Berra singled.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead in the first when Washington lined a 3-1 pitch from Larry McWilliams over the center-field fence. It was Washington's eighth homer of the year and his fourth leading off a game.

The Braves added an unearned run in the third. Perez singled to right and Washington walked. Paul Runge then sacrificed, but Perez scored and the other runners wound up at second and third when third baseman Bill Madlock fielded the bunt and overthrew first.

McWilliams allowed six hits, walked five, and fanned eight in seven innings.

Lendl Whips Connors In Straight Sets

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ivan Lendl, erasing some of the sting from humiliating defeats in the last two U.S. Opens, handed Jimmy Connors his worst beating ever Saturday in the semifinals of the $500,000 Mercedes Tournament of Champions at the famed West Side Tennis Club.

With a 6-0, 6-0 thrashing of Connors, Lendl advanced into Sunday's title match against defending champion John McEnroe, who crushed Jimmy Arias 6-1, 6-2.

"I feel a little bitter — not personally — about Jimmy because he has taken me twice at the U.S. Open," said Lendl, who took only 52 minutes to dispose of the tournament's No. 1 seed on Saturday. Both losses came in the championship matches of America's premier tennis event.

It was the first time since he turned pro that the 31-year-old Connors has ever lost a match without winning a game. And it was the worst defeat in his career since Lendl crushed him 6-1, 6-1 in the ATP Championships semifinals in Cinncinnati in 1982.

And the time before that, Lendl defeated Connors 6-3, 6-4 in the Volvo Masters in New York in January.

"I was in there. I was hitting the ball all right," Connors said, "but he wasn't missing too much."

Lendl was missing at all. The Czech controlled the match, hitting soft forehands and sliced backhands, letting Connors self-destruct. And Connors did just that.

The left-hander made 26 unforced errors to just six for Lendl. And he fired nine aces to none for Connors.

"I don't think I've beaten any top player love-and-love before. This is the first time," Lendl said. "If you're playing a match and you're playing well, you want to win love-and-love because it proves a few things — that you're physically well and everythig in your head's alright."

Connors won only 16 points in the entire match. He reached "game point" twice, but each times Lendl won the next three points.

McEnroe's destruction of Arias was almost as complete. He reeled off the first five games of the match, and when Arias finally held serve, the 19-year-old clay court specialist bowed to the cheering crowd.

It didn't faze McEnroe, who promptly won the next five game, wrapping up the opening set and taking a 4-0 lead in the second. Arias then held his own service again and broke McEnroe at 30 to narrow the score to 4-2. But it was the end as the New York left-hander lost only three points in taking the next two games and the match.

"I think it will be different tennis tomorrow," Lendl said of his title matchup with McEnroe, a serve-and-volley specialist. "It will definitely be more aggressive, especially by him. I won't get away with 'soft' balls. I'll have to hit harder.'

McEnroe agreed.

"I'm definitely going to be attacking more (than Connors)," McEnroe said. "It won't be as defensive as it was today."

HAMBURG, West Germany — Henrik Sundstroem of Sweden defeated top-seeded countryman Mats Wilander and Juan Aguilera of Spain upset Guillermo Vilas of Argentina Saturday to reach the final of the $315,00 German Open Tennis Tournament.

The 20-year-old Sundstroem, seeded 14th, ousted an erratic Wilander 6-2, 7-5, while the unseeded Aguilera scored his second major upset in two days by disposing of Vilas, seeded seventh, 7-6, 6-3.

The 19-year-old Wilander, the world's fourth-ranked player, also lost to Sundstroem in the Monte Carlo final last month but still holds a 5-2 career edge over his fellow Swede.

"Privately, we are very good friends, but the friendship ends on the courts," said Sundstroem, who is ranked 16th in the world.

The semifinal between the two clay court specialists lasted one hour, 43 minutes, before a crowd of 9,500, in cool but sunny weather.

Aguilera, 22, oustroked the 31-year-old Argentine in a match that took 2:08.

Sundstroem broke Wilander's service in the fifth and seventh game of the first set to take it 6-2, in a match of long baseline rallies.

Wilander took a 2-0 lead in the second set, but Sundstroem came back and the two Swedes were tied 5-5.

From then on, Wilander won only three points. He saved a match point at 40-15 of the final game when Sundstroem, who was serving, missed an easy volley.

But Sundstroem clinched the match when Wilander put a forehand too deep over the baseline on the next point.

Sundstroem also was more effective in rare ventures to the net.

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Sweden's Bjorn Borg and American Bill Scanlon will meet in the men's singles final of the $200,-000 Gunze Invitational tennis match here Sunday.

The women's singles title will be contested between Canadian champion Carling Bassett and West Germany's Bettina Bunge.

En route to the finals at the Osaka Castle Hall, Borg, playing in his first competitive tournament in two years, knocked out American Eric Korita 6-7, 7-5, 6-3 in Saturday's semifinals.

Scanlon eliminated compatriot Scott Davis 7-5, 6-4 in the other semifinal match.

The favored Czech, taking the first set 6-4, withdrew after the fourth game of the second set when she suffered an injury in the Achilles' tendon of her right leg. Bassett was leading 2-1.

In the second women's semifinals, Bunge downed Beth Herr of the United States 6-4, 6-4.

Winners of the men's and women's singles each will receive $30,000.

Eight men and eight women from Canada, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the United States, West Germany and Japan started off the five-day competition in Tokyo May 9. The site was shifted to Osaka for the championship rounds.

Authorities Abandon Probe Of Alleged Drug Abuse

DALLAS (AP) — Federal authorities have abandoned their probe into alleged cocaine use by six players for the Dallas Cowboys and do not intend to bring charges against any of the players, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

The decision not to seek prosecution of the players, reached in recent months, was based on several factors, the newspaper said, quoting sources in the FBI, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and U.S. attorney's office.

They included questions about the soundness of the government's case and fears about how the public would react to an attempt to prosecute the players on the popular National Football League team.

U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe was wary of the case, because it hinged on the testimony of convicted drug dealere, and a key witness had disappeared, the sources said.

Rolfe and Christopher Lee Milner, an assistant U.S. attorney who handled the investigation, refuse to discuss the case.

According to the sources and courtroom testimony, six players were investigated in the case, one of them never named. The other players were defensive end Harvey Martin, halfback Tony Dorsett, fullback Ron Springs, defensive end Larry Bethea and wide receiver Tony Hill.

Their names surfaced during two federal investigations into alleged cocaine distribution rings.

Martin has since retired and Bethea jumped to the United States Football League this spring.

Attorneys for the five players and the players themselves have repeatedly denied that they used cocaine or were involved in any drug transactions.

Martin's lawyer, Dan C. Guthrie, a former federal prosecutor, said Friday that "even if every allegation and rumor about the Cowboys ahd been 1,-000 percent accuarte, it would still not be a case that would have been prosecuted by federal authorities."

Saints Set To Announce Contract With Stabler

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints tentatively scheduled a press conference for Monday, and it appears that 38-year-old quarterback Ken Stabler intends to announce that he's signing a contract to play at least one more National Football League season.

There had been speculation — fueled by the Saints' trade for Richard Todd — that Stabler would retire.

He played hurt for all but the first few downs of last season. He suffered torn cartilege in his right knee in the season opener.

Vikes' Win Clinches Share Of Title

HOLLYWOOD — Chris Via singled in Fred Bryant and D.H. Conley held off West Craven 3-2 to clinch at least a tie for 1984 Coastal 3-A Conference baseball title Friday.

Paul Hill pitched six innings without giving up a run to record the win, his sixth in eight decisions. Reliever Darryl Edwards gave up a two run homer to Robert Hill in the top of the seventh, but recorded his 95th strikeout of the year to close the door on the Eagles.

The victory sets the Vikings' record at 7-2 in the league, 13-6 overall, with a home game against Havelock Tuesday remaining. West Craven slipped to 4-14 overall and 3-6 in the Coastal race.

The Vikings got on the board in the first inning with a pair of pitching mistakes by West Craven starter Randy Elks. Steve Mills ripped a leadoff single, stole second and went to third when Todd Cochran reached first on an error of a sacrifice attempt. Cochran stole second, and a wild pitch by Elks allowed Mills to score the first run. Elks balked on the next pitch to plate Cochran with a 2-0 Conley lead.

Bryant singled with one out in the third inning, and a wild throw on a pickoff attempt moved him to third. Via's single pushed Bryant across for the winning margin.

But SouthWest Edgecombe evened the score in the second. David Sides reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and an error on a fly ball by Tony Nichols allowed Sides to score.

In the third, Varnell singled and scored on Braswell's triple. Braswell later scored on a wild pitch.

SouthWest added three more in the fifth.

Peterson Hurls ECU Past LaSalle, 5-0

HARRISONBURG, Va. — Jim Peterson threw a perfect game through 6⅔ innings, then finished with a three-hitter as the Pirates advanced in the ECAC-South Baseball Tournament with a 5-0 shutout win over LaSalle Friday.

Winfred Johnson and Jim Riley went 2-3, while Greg Hardison and Mike Sullivan went 2-5 for the Pirates, now 29-11 overall. LaSalle dropped to 18-18-1 with the loss.

The Pirates got on the board in the second inning, as Sullivan opened with a double to left-center. After two outs, Hardison singled to left to drive in Sullivan with the eventual game winning run.

Edmonton Ready For Rematch

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The Edmonton Oilers are ready, willing and apparently quite able to play with the New York Islanders in their Stanley Cup finals rematch.

That's a far cry from last year, when the Islanders swept to their fourth consecutive National Hockey League title and clearly were a better team than the Oilers. Much of the difference, according to Wayne Gretzky, is in the preparation.

"We've been prepared very well by the coaching staff for this series," Gretzky said as he got ready for tonight's second game of the championship series. The Oilers showed surprising defensive strength in winning the opener 1-0, their first victory over the Islanders in 11 tries, dating back to Dec. 13, 1981. "We were very patient and didn't lose our composure.

"We were off for nine days after beating Minnesota and we used that time to get ready for the Islanders. We spent four, five days studying films, dissecting them. We knew the Islanders even better than before."

Gretzky didn't think the Oilers were ill-prepared for last year's finals, their first trip to the championship round.

"Experience had a lot to do with last year," said the most dangerous scoring threat in the sport. "We also were reading in the press how the Oilers were so great, how we would win in four or five games, how easy it would be. Maybe we didn't know any better than to believe it. We thought if we just threw our sticks out there, we'd win.

Goalie Grant Fuhr was the key to the shutout, the third the Islanders have suffered this spring in their drive for a record-tying fifth straight Stanley Cup. But the forwards worked hard in their defensive zone, often a rarity with the Oilers, and the defense didn't gamble very often and didn't cough up the puck in the face of the Islanders' strong forechecking.

"We're capable of holding on to a one-goal lead but we hardly ever have had to do it," said defenseman Paul Coffey, the second-leading scorer in the NHL this season behind Gretzky. Coffey has been criticized for his wide-open style and vulnerability on defense but he wasn't caught out of position Thursday night.

"The Smythe Division is different from the Patrick Division. Games aren't like this. The games are shootouts and we're too strong offensively for the other teams to beat us.

Aycock Ends Farmville's Title Quest

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Paul Summerlin threw a five-hitter and John Thomas drove in three runs with a double and a homer as the C.B. Aycock Falcons clinched the Eastern Carolina 3-A Conference baseball title with an 11-0 thumping of the Farmville Central Jaguars.

Even with the loss, their third in 12 conference outings, the Jaguars are assured of a playoff berth by holding second place in the league. Aycock improved its record to 10-2 in Eastern Carolina action.

The Falcons needed just eight hits for their runs, as Aycock utilized walks and errors by Farmville.

"We just got outplayed," Farmville Coach Bill Davis said. "The swung the bats well; they played well defensively, which we did not do at all.

"I thought we were a little tight early, but we settled down until they got so far ahead."

Farmville starter Nat Norris struck out Tommy Dunn to open the game, but a passed ball on third strike allowed Dunn to take first. Norris hit Jesse Woodard with a pitch, and a walk to Summerlin filled the bases. Dunn scored on a passed ball, and Summerlin later scored on a fielder's choice by Jeff Lynch.

Norris led off with a walk for the Jags in the bottom of the first, and Randy Daniels followed with a single. A fielder's choice by Billy Godley moved the runners to second and third with one out, but Norris was later thrown out at the plate attempting to score on a grounder by Joey Steppe.

Summerlin settled down in the second to strike out the side, and the Falcons put the game away with two more runs in the third.

Thomas opened with a solo homer, and Johnny Carr reached second on a throwing error. After a pair of strikeouts by Norris, Sherwood Core laced a single to left to drive in Carr for a 4-0 lead.

Aycock added four more runs in the fourth. After Dunn opened with a single, Farmville recorded two outs before the Falcons rallied. Thomas drove in Dunn with a double to left, and Carr followed with a two-run homer. Lynch drew a walk, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on a single by John Herring.

A double play in the bottom of the frame erased the Jaguars only other threat to score.

Norris walked Dunn again to open the fifth and struck out Woodard, but Davis put freshman Robert Evans on the mound after Dunn scored on an error. Evans got Thomas to ground out, but Carr ripped a double to drive in Summerlin for a 10-0 Aycock lead.

Evans struck out three in the sixth but gave up a run in the seventh. Woodard walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a short fly ball Thomas.

"That's just the third time (Evans) has thrown for us this year," Davis said. "I feel like he's going to be a pretty good pitcher for us.

"But I really thought we were better prepared for the game than we were."

Carr went 2-5 and drove in three runs, while Dunn went 2-4 and scored three for Aycock. Daniels went 2-3 as the only Jaguar with more than one hit.

Chocowinity Error Gives Bath Victory

BATH — Karen Boyd scored on an error in the bottom of the seventh to lift Bath to a 7-6 victory over Chocowinity in Tobacco Belt 1-A softball action Friday.

Boyd finished the day with a 3-3 performance at the plate, while Kim Tetterton went 3-4.

Zina Warren went 2-4 and Lisa Clark 2-3 to lead Chocowinity at the plate.

Chocowinity trailed 5-1 going into the sixth inning, but three errors by Bath allowed the Lady Tribe to post four runs to even the score.

In the top of the seventh, Wanda Congleton reached first on an error and moved to second on a fielder's choice by Wendy Elks. An error on a grounder by Warren drove in Congleton for a 5-4 Chocowinity lead.

But in the bottom of the frame, Tetterton singled in Williams to even the score before Boyd crossed the plate with the winning run.

Bath improved its record to 13-1 in the conference and 13-2 overall. Chocowinity, now 11-4 overall with a 10-4 league mark, travels to Bear Grass Tuesday.

Coaches Differ With Curry

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's Bill Curry may be correct in saying that some college football teams use dishonesty and drugs to win football games, but other college coaches said most don't.

In a speech at the Yellow Jacket Club's end-of-the-year banquet Thursday, Curry said of the opposition: "They cheat, they're vicious, they're dishonest and they corrupt young minds. They will cheat and sacrifice young minds with drugs or whatever it takes to win. We have identified the enemy and it's more than a game. If you stick with us, we not only will catch them, we will bring them to their knees."

Curry said he was not talking about a particular school.

"I was talking about people who abuse young athletes. They know who they are. They are the people who work under the guise of education," he said. "They cheat to get them here, and they sign them under the pretense of preparing them for pro football, and when their four years of eligibility is gone, they're first-semester sophomores."

"I feel very strongly that the majority of college football is at the other end of the spectrum," said Wake Forest Coach Al Groh. "There's a possibility you could find incidents of rules violations. But there's a vast difference in incidents and prevalence."

"I think there are things of that nature prevalent in intercollegiate football," said Maryland Coach Bobby Ross. "There were 20 years ago and that's still true today.

"But as to the extent of it, I don't know. That's a pretty strong statement. I don't think what Bill said was a misstatement. I would agree with the content, but I don't think it's as prevalent as that."

"He darn sure wasn't talking about Auburn," said Tigers Coach Pat Dye. "We had 21 seniors on our team last year, and I expect every one of them will get their degrees."

Down And (Eventually) Out
Sugar Ray Leonard sprawls on the canvas after being knocked down in the fourth round by Kevin Howard at the Worcester Centrum Friday. It was Leonard's first and last time knocked down. Leonard defeated Howard with a ninth-round TKO but announced his retirement after the fight. (AP Laserphoto)

Leonard Wins, Retires

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The comeback of Sugar Ray Leonard is over, ended after a victory that included the first knockdown of his fabulous career.

Leonard got off the deck to stop unheralded Kevin Howard with a controversial ninth-round technical knockout Friday night and then announced that he was leaving boxing again, and this time for keeps.

"I have retired for good," he said. "It's no sense fooling myself or anyone else. I can't go on humiliating myself."

Idle since Feb. 15, 1982 because of surgery, first to repair a detached retina in his left eye and then to mend a slight tear in the right eye, Leonard had hoped to use Howard as a stepping stone to bigger things. The road ahead included a possible record payday against middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

But it was not to be and Leonard said he knew it as soon as Howard dropped him in the fourth round.

"When I was knocked down, it was a big surprise, a shock to see myself on the canvas," he said. "I was never down before. When I got up, I looked at Kevin Howard. I knew he was coming for me. I looked at my wife to see if she was OK. It hit me. What am I doing? It's just not there. I reached the decision (to retire) then."

Leonard used his old ring savvy to battle his way out of that crisis, created when Howard tagged him with a short right hand. Then he showed flashes of his old form, complete with the charisma that had made him one of boxing's biggest crowd-pleasers. But it was all window dressing.

"In my corner, I could feel it wasn't there," Leonard said later. "I was apprehensive of being hit. I had cold feet."

That is no way for a fighter to approach his craft and Leonard knew it. He would not walk away though, and traded leather with Howard through the ninth round. Then he tagged the youngster from Philadelphia with a left and had Howard hanging on.

Celtics, Knicks Move Into Final NBA Playoff Game

NEW YORK (AP) — Both the Boston Celtics and New York Knicks are engaging in a little wishful thinking about Sunday's seventh game of their National Basketball Association playoff.

The Celtics hope that on Sunday King scores closer to his playoff average of 23 points in Boston rather than his norm of 37 at New York.

"It will be a monumental task to stop Bernard on Sunday," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "Hopefully he'll come out cold and miss some shots."

His wish list is for the Celtics to shoot like the team that made 43 percent of its field goals in New York rather than the one that hit 55 percent in Boston. Brown also wouldn't mind it if Boston center-forward Kevin McHale shot at the 36 percent pace (13-for-36) he's managed in New York rather than the 80 percent (32-for-40) shooting he produced in Boston.

"What we need is to play one good game in Boston," Brown said. "We can't let them get out to a big lead the way they have before."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Los Angeles played host to Phoenix today in the opener of the Western Conference final series. Milwaukee will meet the New York-Boston winner in the Eastern Conference final.

The Celtics have won the three games in Boston by a combined total of 54 points, while the Knicks won their three home games in close decisions. In the last two, however, the Celtics have never led.

"We've played better defense in New York," said Brown. "Whether it's the crowd that stimulates us to more intensity, I don't know. We also shot a better percentage in New York and don't turn the ball over as much, so consequently we give them fewer fast-break opportunities."

The Knicks have played the Celtics to a standoff in six regular-season meetings and six playoff games, although Boston won 15 more games overall.

"No matter what happens Sunday, I'm proud of all our guys," Brown said. "We've played them 12 times and were 6-6 against a team that was 62-20 during the regular season."

King's 11-for-13 shooting performance and 29 points in the first two periods lifted New York to a 59-51 halftime lead.

High Speeds At Indy Raise Questions Among Drivers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The mind-boggling speeds during the past week at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway have raised serious questions about the safety of the drivers.

Chandler, a veteran of three Indy 500s, was listed in serious but guarded condition in the hospital's neuro-constant care unit. His injuries were diagnosed as cerebral contusions and lacerations to the forehead and left leg.

The youngster, who is the son of Otis Chandler, chairman of the board and editor-in-chief of the Los Angeles Times-Mirror Corp., hit the wall in turn three of the Speedway's $2\frac{1}{2}$-mile oval after something apparently broke in the car's rear suspension.

Thirty-one drivers, including Chandler, in 37 different cars have been over 200 mph in practice at the speedway during the past week — including two-time Formula One world champion Emerson Fittpaldi of Brazil, who made it for the first time Friday at 200.133. That compares to 17 drivers in 19 cars over 200 last May. And, until Friday's crash, there had been only a handful of minor incidents this month.

Mario Andretti, who went into today's pole qualifying as the favorite after touring the historic track Friday at a torrid 212.414 — the fastest unofficial lap ever run here — said there is good reason for the relative safety so far.

"The car today is probably as forgiving as it's ever been — knock wood," said the 44-year-old Andretti, who won here in 1969. "You look at all the speeds out here and only a couple of incidents, that tells you something.

"When I first came here (in 1964), we were going 150 and guys were smacking the wall every day. The big difference in the speeds is that if you get in trouble at slower speed you have longer to think about it before you hit the wall. Now, you lose it and, boom."

Andretti added, "The cars now are very good, well-balanced. They give the driver a decent warning if something is going to go wrong. They are just better engineered and I feel much safer in these cars than I did in the cars a couple of years ago. The answers are there. The days of seat-of-the-pants driving are long gone."

Changes In Hunting Regulations — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission adoped regulations for the 1984-85 hunting seasons at a meeting in Raleigh on April 16. These regulation changes go into effect on July 1.

Major changes in hunting regulations for eastern Carolina are listed below. In areas not mentioned, seasons and regulations will essentially be the same as last year except for minor calendar adjustments. Complete information on regulations is included in the 1984-85 Norht Carolina Inland Fishing, Hunting and Trapping Regulations Digest, which will be available from license agents in July.

The following gun either-sex seasons for deer were adopted. In areas not mentioned, either-sex seasons will be the same as last year except for calendar adjustments.

•November 28-29 in all of Pitt County, that part of Craven County bounded on the south by SR 1005, on teh east by SR 1243, SR 1401, SR 1400, and SR 1440, and on the north by NC 43, Currituck County except from the Outer Banks area.

•November 28-Dec. 1 in all of Hyde County, Jones County and in Martin west of US 17.

A fox harvest season running from January 5-26 will be held in Currituck, Edgecombe, Hyde, Northampton, Perquimans, Stokes and Tyrrell counties. In these counties, limited numbers of fox permits will be issued based on fox populations.

Changes in regulations on eastern game lands are as follows:

•Allow six-day per week waterfowl hunting outside the posted waterfowl impoundments on the Goose Creek Game Land during the special 10-day canvasback season.

•In addition to Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, allow waterfowl hunting on the Holly Shelter Game Land on the opening and closing days of the applicable waterfowl seasons and on Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

The experimental canvasback season will be continued. This season allows hunters to take canvasbacks by permit only for the last 10 days of the waterfowl season in a designated area in coastal waters.

White Bass Run Still On — "White bass run when the dogwood blooms" is an oft-repeated phrase in North Carolina's western Piedmont. This is almost a fool proof prediction because white bass spawning runs usually begin in late March, peak in April and don't completely end until the end of May. At some point, the fish's run is bound to coincide with the blooming of the dogwoods. Like viewing the snowy white trees, however, fishing a white bass run is an experience that no one should miss.

White bass are native to the Mississippi River basin, and were first introduced to North Carolina by the Wildlife Resources Commission in the early 1960s. In the 25 years since the fish were introduced to the state, white bass have established strong spawning runs in many rivers that once provided only minimal angling for catfish, small panfish and carp.

"The Linville, Catawba, Uwharrie, Tuckasegee and Yadkin rivers all host strong white bass runs," said Cape Carnes, wildlife commission supervising fisheries biologist for the Piedmont. "The fishing is often fast and furious during these runs. Although white bass are lake fish, they migrate up streams and rivers to spawn. When they reach an impassable obstacle such as a dam or suitable spawning habitat, the run ends and the fish congregate in large numbers. Fishing is usually excellant in these spots."

Light spinning tackle with a 4-8 pound test line is favored by many white bass anglers, and any flashy spinning lure or small, feathered jig works well. Be sure to bring plenty of extra lures because the tree-lined, rocky-bottomed rivers where the white bass run have a voracious appetite for terminal tackle.

Fishing Report — Fishing has improved on the coast this past week. King mackerel have moved in close to shore with the piers picking up a few. Bluefish seem to be everywhere and trout are also on the move.

Panfish are now on the beds in the ponds and rivers. Live crickets on light tackle are hard to beat this time of year.

Tigers Chase New Mark

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Tigers now take aim at the 1946 Boston Red Sox.

With their seventh straight victory, the Tigers improved their season record to 26-4 Friday night, giving them the best 30-game start in major league history.

The next getaway milestone is the 50-game mark of the '46 Sox, who were 41-9. The Tigers would have to go 15-5 in their next 20 games to tie that mark.

"It's impossible to compare this experience with anything else I've done in the big leagues," said Tigers first baseman Dave Bergman. "We just set a new record. When you come to the ballpark here, you just hope your name's in the lineup."

Bergman was a big reason for the Tigers' record-breaking victory, driving in three runs with a triple and a two-run single. Milt Wilcox, 4-0, earned his 100th American League victory, yielding six hits over six innings, and Willie Hernandez finished up.

"Hitting's contagious and winning's contagious, and it's easy to blend in here," Bergman said. It takes 25 guys to win, and that's the way we've been doing it — with 25 guys.

"There are no heroes on this team."

The Tigers' 26-4 record bettered the start of the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers, who went 25-4 before losing four in a row en route to a World Series title.

"There's not much you can say for the Tigers," Angels Manager John McNamara said. "Their record speaks for itself."

Hernandez gave up both of California's runs. Doug DeCinces led off the eighth with a homer, and the Angels scored again in the ninth on consecutive singles by Dick Schofield, Rod Carew and Juan Beniquez.

The game drew a crowd of 44,187 at Tiger Stadium.

In the rest of the American League, Baltimore defeated Oakland 4-3, Texas beat Chicago 6-1, Milwaukee defeated Minnesota 4-1, Kansas City beat Boston 6-4 and Seattle defeated New York 4-3 in 17 innings. Toronto at Cleveland was rained out.

Orioles 4, A's 3

Baltimore won for the 12th time in 14 games as Jim Dwyer hit a two-run double and scored twice ahead of doubles by Rich Dauer. Dauer's error had opened the door for the A's to score two unearned runs in the third inning on a two-out double by Joe Morgan.

Mike Boddicker pitched 8 2-3 innings, giving up seven hits and leaving with the bases loaded in the ninth. Tippy Martinez walked Jeff Burroughs to force in one run before getting the final out.

Dwyer's two-run double came in the third, and he walked in scored in both the second and sixth innings.

Rangers 6, White Sox 1

Larry Parrish hit two home runs, including a grand slam in the first inning, to back the four-hit pitching of Frank Tanana. Tanana, 3-4, walked three and struck out nine in his first complete game of the season. He lost his shutout bid when Greg Luzinski homered in the third.

Parrish's first homer came before Floyd Bannister, 2-4, could get a single out in the game. Billy Sample singled, Pete O'Brien doubled and George Wright walked before Parrish came to bat. Parrish also homered to lead off the ninth, giving him four this season.

Brewers 4, Twins 1

Milwaukee ended the Twins' six-game winning streak as Robin Yount drove in three runs and Moose Haas and Rollie Fingers combined on a four-hitter. Yount hit a two-run homer, his third, in the fifth inning and also drove in a run with single in the third. Yount has three homers this season.

Haas gave up three Minnesota hits in eight innings, and Fingers pitched the ninth inning for his fifth save.

Royals 6, Red Sox 4

Joe Orta homered and drove in three runs, and Kansas City ended a seven-game losing streak by beating Boston. Pat Sheridan also had a two-run double, and Dan Quisenberry came on with one out in the seventh to earn his eighth save.

Orta hit a two-run homer in the third inning and hit an RBI grounder in the seventh.

Quisenberry relieved after Larry Gura yielded a homer to Marty Barrett, a single to Wade Boggs and a walk to Dwight Evans. The Royals relief ace got Jim Rice on a line drive to second, and Mike Easler grounded out.

Mariners 4, Yankees 3

Jack Perconte hit a sacrifice fly to center field in the top of the 17th inning to help the Mariners snap the Yankees' four-game winning streak. The sac fly scored Darnell Coles, who had doubled and taken third on a sacrifice bunt.

The Mariners had gone ahead of New York 3-2 in the 14th on Al Cowens' RBI double, but the Yankees retied it in the bottom of the inning when Roy Smalley hit his second homer in three nights.

The Yankees now have played 33 innings of baseball in two nights. They beat Cleveland 7-6 in 16 innings on Thursday night.

Federals Enjoy Upset Win Over Generals

By The Associated Press

From the first play of the game, it was clear the night belonged to the Washington Federals and not the New Jersey Generals.

Even though they were 1-10 entering the game, the Federals had no trouble stopping the Generals and handing New Jersey its third loss in 12 games. Washington began its 31-17 victory Friday night with a 91-yard touchdown return of the opening kickoff by Greg Taylor and never looked back.

"We had the spark and fire tonight," said Federals Coach Dick Bielski. "We got that early lead and then we controlled the ball so they weren't able to use that Herschel (Walker) left or right. It took them out of their offense."

Five interceptions against Generals quarterback Brian Sipe helped, too.

"It was the kind of day we should have stayed home," Generals Coach Walt Michaels said. "The opening kickoff took some steam out of us. Then, we fumbled on the 3-yard line and they promptly marched down the field and scored. It just wasn't our night."

It was a great night for the Federals, who were sold earlier in the week for $5.5 million.

"I just bought the team back for $7 million," quipped Berl Bernhard, who will operate the team the rest of the year before turning it over Sherwood Weiser.

Quarterback Mike Hohensee keyed the Federal attack, scoring on a pair of 1-yard runs and passing 6 yards to Joey Walters for a third.

Scherrer Mixes Luck, Skill For Victory

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati relief pitcher Bill Scherrer knows that to be good in the major leagues, you also have to be lucky.

The left-hander was both of those things Friday night in helping the Cincinnati Reds beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 for their fifth straight victory and 12th in the last 13 games.

"I got the first hitter on a liner, and that's important because you've got to get those kinds of breaks," Scherrer said. "You need breaks in a game like that, whether you're Bruce Sutter or a low-life like me."

Scherrer came into the game with no outs and runners in scoring position in the seventh inning. He got the first out when Tom Herr lined sharply to second baseman Tom Lawless, then retired the next five batters in easy fashion before giving way to John Franco in the ninth.

"You can't hit the ball any better than Tom hit it," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "He (Scherrer) was lucky there."

In other action, Atlanta beat Pittsburgh 4-2 in 10 innings, Houston tripped Chicago 3-1, Philadelphia downed San Diego 6-4, New York blanked Los Angeles 2-0 and Montreal outscored San Francisco 7-5.

Jeff Russell, 2-3, scattered five hits over six innings before needing Scherrer's relief help. Franco pitched the ninth for his third save.

The Reds scored all four runs off Dave LaPoint, 4-4, including a two-run homer by Cesar Cedeno in the fourth that gave the Reds a 4-0 lead and their eventual winning run.

"This shows you how we're playing as a team right now," Russell said. "If one guy fails, another guy picks him up."

Braves 4, Pirates 2

Dale Murphy's two-run homer with one out in the 10th inning lifted Atlanta over visiting Pittsburgh. Murphy drilled his eighth homer of the season on an 0-1 pitch from Kent Tekulve, 1-3.

The victory went to Terry Forster, 1-0, Atlanta's third pitcher in the game.

The Braves had taken a 2-1 lead in the eighth on Bob Watson's run-scoring single, but the Pirates tied it in the ninth on a home run by Doug Frobel, his third, off reliever Gene Garber.

"I would have taken a broken-bat single in that situation," Murphy said, expressing surprise that he managed to get the ball in the air against Tekulve, who yielded his first homer in 87 innings dating back to last season. "I believe I can count on my hands how many fly balls I've hit off Tekulve."

Astros 3, Cubs 1

In Houston, Nolan Ryan allowed four hits and struck out eight batters over 7 1-3 innings and rookie catcher Mark Bailey's seventh-inning single provided the winning run to lead the Astros over Chicago.

Jerry Mumphrey and Enos Cabell led off the seventh with singles off loser Dick Ruthven, 2-4, before reliever Tim Stoddard came on to serve up Bailey's single for a 2-1 Houston lead.

Cabell then scored the third Houston run on a passed ball by Chicago's Jody Davis.

Phillies 6, Padres 4

In San Diego, pinch-hitter Sixto Lezcano stroked a two-run homer in the ninth inning off reliever Dave Dravecky to boost Philadelphia over San Diego, snapping a five-game losing streak for the Phillies.

With one out in the ninth, Ozzie Virgil singled and Lezcano, batting for Ivan DeJesus, hit a 3-2 pitch from Dravecky, 1-2, over the left field fence at Jack Murphy Stadium. The blow made a winner of Al Holland, 1-2.

Lezcano's shot snapped a 4-4 tie forged in the Philadelphia eighth on a two-run homer by Mike Schmidt.

Eric Show pitched the first seven innings for the Padres, allowing just four hits. Goose Gossage pitched the eighth, yielding a two-run homer to Mike Schmidt and failing to finish a game for San Diego for the first time in 15 appearances.

Mets 2, Dodgers 0

In Los Angeles, rookie Dwight Gooden hurled a four-hitter for his first major league shutout, pitching New York over Los Angeles.

Mookie Wilson led an 11-hit attack Mets attack against Fernando Valenzuela, 3-4, and reliever Carlos Diaz with two doubles and a single. Darryl Strawberry added two singles.

Wall Wins Two Events

TARBORO — William Wall of Rose High School took first place in the shot put and discus at the sectional high school track meet Friday.

Wall heaved the shot put 56-10 and the discus 143-9¾ to win the events. Edward Fraley took first in the pole vault with a climb of 11-6, while Roswell Streeter finished fourth in the high jump at 6-6.

All four of those Rampants qualified for the regionals to be held next week at Wilson Fike.

PCC Tops Tourney

Ed Schwidde defeated Mark Rector of James Sprunt 6-4, 6-1, then teammed with Jonathan Fletcher to win the second flight doubles as Pitt Community College won seven of the nine matches in the final round of the ECCAC Tournament Friday.

Craven Community College won two events, while Sprunt and Coastal Carolina Community College missed the championship group.

Furniture Makers Are Now Meeting Consumer Wishes

HIGH POINT (AP) Americans shopping for furniture may find it a refreshing experience in the coming months.

Indications at the recently concluded semi-annual furniture market in High Point, N.C., are that consumer wishes are being taken into account by manufacturers eager to convert an upturn in housing construction into more sales for new furniture.

Manufacturers of wood furniture have tended to divide it by style, offering some groups in each style category. Typically these include: American or European traditional, French, 18th-century, oriental and contemporary. When sales in one style start to go down, it is usually considered time to offer something new in that classification.

Today, however, says Thomas G. Tilley, sales manager of the traditions division of Thomasville Furniture Industries, some companies are taking a new approach. Instead of giving people more of what they don't want and aren't buying, they look for what is selling to develop new furniture.

Thomasville's new American country group shown at the market (which introduces the new styles for the coming season to retailers and the press) was created after analysis showed that the company's sales of country furniture have more than doubled in the last three years.

The "Santa Fe" collection combines Spanish, English and Mexican design themes. Some pieces carry the theme's romance, while others would go with almost any medium-brown wood furniture. That's because "new furniture usually has to go with what people already have," explained Tilley.

Besides the country category, other important trends in new wood furniture include more of the modern unornamented, high-sheen lacquer style introduced in Europe and authentic reproductions.

Speaking at one of a round of industry panels, Ron Hahn, president of Universal Furniture Industries, noted that today's home furnishings customers were the most sophisticated and knowledgeable ever. When buying traditional furniture, such people often seek pieces with more integrity and authenticity, he said. Perhaps this helps account for the continued growth of reproductions.

The Kittinger Co., solicting new retailer business for the first time in recent memory according to company president Fred M. Battson, showed 16 of its best-selling replicas from six historic restorations and museums.

The pieces — copies made by Kittinger to the exacting standards of museums and restorations such as Colonial Williamsburg, Newport, R.I., and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts — were formerly sold mainly through designers and at the museums. Now Kittinger is following the lead of others in mass marketing these pieces.

The Baker Co. added to its Stately Homes Collection, this time selecting 12 pieces to reproduce from Irish castles. John Widdicomb also presented a collection of authentic replicas.

A new interest in satisfying consumer demands was evinced by a number of companies. Before developing "Santa Fe," for example, Thomasville went calling on furniture retailers and consumers to see how people were actually living. The company also employs focus groups and maintains a dialogue with bellwether retailers to anticipate and ascertain consumer needs, according to Tilley.

John Foster, president of Lea Furniture, noted that his firm had marketed children's furniture based on themes from cartoons for several years, but discontinued it. "The furniture didn't work for consumers because it was too expensive and too short-lived," he said.

Instead, after consultation with retailers and others, Lea was showing a "Build-A-Bed" system which employs seven components such as a trundle bed, storage base, bed ladders and a chest to create as many as 15 different configurations. The function of sleep, guest accommodation, study and play surface and storage are all satisfied in the package which is designed to sell for under $1,000, he said.

Traditional distinctions between bedroom, dining room and living-room furniture appear to be breaking down, rapidly, in recognition that furniture that functions well can usually fit into any room.

Drexel Heritage, for example, offered a library wall panel arrangement of storage units, bookcases and bases against which a convertible sofa or a bed may be set.

Reported Low Supply Causes Up-Swing In Futures Prices

By ELLEN PORATH
Associated Press Writer

Soybeans rose sharply Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, as the futures market reacted to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report showing low soy-bean stocks and high usage.

May soybeans settled 19½ cents higher higher, wheat and corn were lower and oats were mixed in active trading.

Susan Hackmann, a grain analyst in Chicago with A.G. Becker-Paribas, said the USDA supply and demand report was "not exactly a surprise because we know usage rates have been high."

Many analysts say ending stocks of 105 million bushels are much too low, and that demand for soybean oil in particular has been high. Both factors have tended to push up prices.

Wheat futures prices dropped after the USDA released figures predicting what may be record world wheat production and a possible decline in U.S. wheat exports.

Wheat settled 2 cents to 6 cents lower with the contract for delivery in May at $3.60½ a bushel; corn settled ¼ cent to 3¼ cents lower with May at $3.48½ a bushel; oats settled ¼ cent lower to 3½ cents higher with May at $1.81 a bushel; and soybeans settled 5 cents to 19½ cents higher with May at $8.56½ a bushel.

The gold futures contract for delivery in June hit a contract low of $370 a troy ounce, breaking a previous low of $372.60. Prices rebounded slightly after that, said Bette Raptopoulous, senior metals analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Rising interest rates have been to blame for recent declines in precious metals futures, Miss Raptopoulous said. Generally, investors put their money in investments such as Treasury bonds and bills when interest rates increase, which tends to depress precious metals prices.

Volume was slightly better than moderate, Miss Raptopoulous said.

Gold settled $1 to $1.70 lower with the contract for delivery in May at $371.30 a troy ounce; silver settled 4 cents to 5 cents lower with May at $8.733 a troy ounce.

Livestock futures prices were mixed and frozen pork bellies were lower in fair trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson-American Express, said pork bellies futures prices were lower again as the market "be-gins to run out of patience." Analysts have predicted a tightening of hog supplies, and the market has been waiting for pork production to begin to drop off. Traders are concerned that warehouses have been overstocked, Levitt said.

Cattle futures traders have been waiting to see if consumer demand for beef picks up this weekend as grocers across the country, hoping to rekindle interest in cookouts, offer sales on steaks, Levitt said.

Live cattle settled .25 cent lower to .10 cent higher with the contract for delivery in June at 65.87 cents a pound; feeder cattle settled .30 cent lower to .18 cent higher with May at 62.70 cents a pound; live hogs settled .08 cent lower to .33 cent higher with June at 54.82 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies settled .10 cent to 1.15 cent lower wth May at 65.85 cents a pound.

On the New York Cotton Exchange, frozen concentrate orange juice settled 2.3 cents to 3.75 cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $187.45 cents a pound.

Pamela Rockley, an orange juice analyst in New York with A.G. Becker-Paribas, said prices continued high over concern about the size of the orange juice crop, hurt by freezes last winter.

ACLI Reports Jobless Rate Went Down

Only 3.6 percent of the nation's farm labor forces was jobless in 1982, compared with 9.5 percent of nonfarm residents, says the American Council of Life Insurance. However, many farm residents who lost nonfarm jobs were not counted as jobless because they still had farm jobs.

Federal Reserve's Volcker Says Recovery Going Well

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The head of the nation's central bank on Saturday fended off a recent series of attacks by Reagan administration officials and declared the current economic recovery is the strongest in recent history.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker also said he saw no threat of a recession but stressed that inflation must be controlled to keep the recovery going.

Since major banks raised their prime lending rate Tuesday to 12.5 percent — the highest level in 18 months — the administration has been directing a steady stream of criticism toward the Federal Reserve, charging that its actions threaten to bring on a recession.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes blamed the Fed's tight monetary policy for the rise in the prime, the interest rate banks giving their best corporate borrowers. And Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige both weighed in with their own criticisms.

Regan contended Friday that if the central bank does not allow for faster growth of the money supply, it could "lead to the same thing that happened in 1981" when he said the Fed "slammed on the brakes" on the supply of credit and brought on the deep recession.

Regan denied his attacks were a part of an orchestrated campaign against the Fed during an election year, saying the administration was just voicing the same concerns about interest rates as savings and loan companies, farmers and builders.

The administration has maintained that because inflation continues under control, the Fed could employ less restrictive controls on the money supply to keep interest rates from rising.

But Volcker, who spoke to reporters following an appearance here before the Business Council, said the central bank did not have as much control over interest rates as some people "seem to think." And he disagreed with predictions the economy could plunge into a recession by the end of 1985.

Volcker said the recovery from the 1981-82 recession has been the most rapid of any rebound since World War II. He noted that industrial production has risen 19.1 percent during the first 16 months of the current recovery, far above the average increase of 14.8 percent for that time span.

Although inflation has remained fairly stable, he said, "the question is what lies ahead."

Volcker has repeatedly made it known he is unwilling to squander the gains made against inflation during the recession by allowing the money supply to grow too rapidly, and he reiterated that Saturday.

"What we want is a recovery that is going to continue for a long period of time, and I think that requires that it be accompanied by some moderation on the price front as well," he said.

Stocks Wait For Help From Bond Market

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a strong belief on Wall Street that the stock market is ready to advance if only the bond market would improve. But the bond market is not cooperating.

Moreover, if the bond market continues to slide, analysts say the stock market could lose whatever enthusiasm it currently holds.

Given the rise in interest rates so far this year, and the subsequent slump in bond prices, some Wall Streeters are impressed that the stock market has even managed to hold its own.

The Dow Jones industrial average is down 129.50 points from its 1984 high of 1,286.64, reached last Jan. 6. But since March 9, the blue-chip measure is up 17.38 points.

So stocks haven't been able to break out into a broad, sustained rally, but they haven't completely crumbled under the weight of higher rates, either, which is giving cause for optimism.

"The stock market's ability to levitate as both long and short interest rates rise has been truly remarkable," Greg A. Smith, research director at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., writes in his latest market commentary.

A. Marshall Acuff Jr., portfolio strategist at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., says that while stocks "go down on a given day, they bounce back the next day. There's resilience on the upside and this is occurring at a time when the bond market continues to deteriorate."

Stock investors — although defensive and maintaining sizeable cash positions — apparently think the bond market will improve within the next few weeks, Acuff says. Being defensive also includes not having too-slim an exposure to stocks should that improvement materialize, and missing a significant upturn.

Still, Smith cautions that "the level of interest rates does matter, and the stock market will not ignore this forever. The longer the levitation, the harder the fall."

The level of interest rates certainly mattered this past week.

Both the stock and bond markets turned skittish amid the Treasury's three-part, $16.5 billion quarterly refunding operation. The first step, a sale of relatively short-term notes of three years, went well in Wall Street's opinion.

But the last two sales, of 10- and 30-year securities, were said to have been poorly received by the credit markets, and the securities produced yields well over 13 percent — the highest for such bonds in two years.

Then, in the week's final session, bond and stock prices tumbled again and interest rates rose despite the refunding being out of the way. Bonds recovered most of their losses late Friday, but stocks erased only some of their losses.

As a result, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished the week with an 8.17-point loss at 1,157.14.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.52 to 91.23, and the American Stock Exchange market value index lost 3.00 to 209.21.

Big Board volume averaged 87.91 million shares daily, compared with 95.57 million the previous week.

While the stock market has avoided a major retreat, Acuff says it's not hard to see why many money managers have cushioned themselves with large cash positions.

A look at the total returns — price appreciation plus yield — of Treasury bills, Treasury bonds, a variety of stock indexes and other measures shows "cash is king," he says.

The total return of the Dow Jones industrial average for the 13 weeks ended May 7 was down 3.82 percent, and the NASDAQ composite index was off 9.62 percent, his figures show. Various Standard & Poor's averages also were negative, as was the 20-year Treasury bond.

But the three-month Treasury bill's total return in that period was up 2.21 percent.

For the 52 weeks ended May 7, the total return on the Dow Jones industrial average edged down 0.06 percent, but the return on three-month T-bills climbed 8.77 percent.

Treasury bills have been "the only area to produce a consistent positive return" over the past year, he says.

That's not lost on money managers. "If it (lower rates) continues to be delayed," he adds, "then stock-market participants could continue to lose faith."

Harsh Winter Delays Season On Shrimping

GEORGETOWN, S.C. (AP) — A harsh winter has forced South Carolina to delay opening its commercial shrimping season until June 15 — one of the latest dates in state history, officials said.

The state Wildlife and Marine Resources Commission agreed Friday to delay the start of the season to allow a depleted white roe shrimp crop to spawn for the fall.

The season traditionally opens about May 15, but has started as late as June 26, said Charles Bearden with the office of conservation management with the Marine Resources Division. Shrimping will likely continue through the end of the year.

Extended cold weather around Christmas and early January led to a "fairly disasterous winter" for the white roe shrimp which are are primarily caught during the spring and early summer months, wildlife department specialist Paul Sandifer said.

English Puzzles Popular

LONDON (AP) — Three down: cause disturbance in a private American gallery (7 letters).

Ah yes, of course: agitate.

And all around Britain, over bacon and eggs or riding the train to work, thousands of hands jot the seven-letter solution into place and move on, say, to 12 down: "Outdated, he meant to reform (4-5)."

We're talking, of course, about crossword puzzles. But not just any crossword puzzle. These are English cryptic crossword puzzles, which for more than 50 years have been engrossing, enraging and enrapturing the English and are catching on in the United States.

The crossword puzzle seems to bear out the adage that Britain and America are two countries separated by a common language.

Where most American puzzles are a simple test of vocabulary and general knowledge, English puzzles are word games, puns and anagrams designed less to educate than to baffle.

"I suppose crosswords have something that appeals to the English passion for riddles, for puzzles, for charades," says Barbara Hall, the 61-year-old language wizard who has been compiling the weekly Sunday Times crossword for eight years.

New York magazine, which introduced the Sunday Times puzzle to Americans, billed it "the world's most challenging." It isn't, as Mrs. Hall readily admits. The daily Times puzzle is harder, and the weekly Listener magazine's is as impenetrable to the uninitiated as a cricket match.

Mrs. Hall turns up her nose at American crossword puzzles, saying they are for children. "We find them boring," she sniffs, "because either you know the answers or you don't. So they really are just a general knowledge contest."

The key is mental agility. Some words are abbreviations, others are anagrams. Punctuation is mostly misleading. A grounding in aristocratic titles, gardening, Shakespeare, railway terms, Cockney accents, Scottish slang, and obscure synonyms is valuable.

That three-down clue, for instance: "Cause disturbance in a private American gallery." It means that a synonym for causing a disturbance is hidden in a private American gallery. But the 'private' is something of a red herring. It actually refers to an American private, or GI. So combine a GI with the Tate Gallery in London, and you have a-gi-tate.

Couple Marries In Evening Ceremony On Saturday

The Immanuel Baptist Church was the scene of the 7:30 p.m. wedding Saturday of Barbara Diane Hinsley of Greenville and Raleigh Bradford Lee III of Aurora.

The Rev. Hugh Burlington performed the double ring ceremony. Wedding music was performed by organist Randy Buck, who sang "The Wedding Song," "Truly" and "If."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Hinsley of Austin, Texas. She is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is employed by Wachovia Bank in Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lara Lee and the late Raleigh Bradford Lee Jr. and is a graduate of Aurora High School. He is employed by Texasgulf in Aurora.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a traditional gown of white knit organza and alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a high neckline and a sheer yoke highlighted with alencon lace detailing. The bodice ended in a natural waistline which was accented with the same imported lace. The full sleeves of the gown ended in a lace cuff and lace flounce. The A-line skirt of her gown was accented with a small pyramid of alencon lace in the center front and appliques of lace trailing to the sides. A narrow flounce of chantilly lace edged the skirt hem and the full sweep of the chapel train. She wore a fingertip veil of pencil-edged illusion which fell from a circlet of white silk flowers and featured a pencil-edged blusher. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses.

Honor attendant was Bonnie Lee of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Cynthia Johnson and Kathy Hooker, both of Aurora, Brenda Paige of Greenville, Louise Lilley of Hubert and Caroline Edwards of Bethel. Each attendant wore a lavender gown of silesta styled with an empire waistline, A-line skirt, scoop neck and a long silesta drape edged in lavender camelot lace. Each attendant carried a votive candle accented with white azaleas and gardenias.

Best man was Lawrence McDonald of Aurora. Ushers were George Straker, Danny Johnson and Joe Hooker, all of Aurora, and Michael D. and Larry D. Hinsley, both brothers of the bride from Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal raspberry silesta gown with matching chiffon jacket. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal powder blue gown with chiffon sleeves. Corsages were presented to the grandmothers of the bridal couple, Mrs. Milton Cobb of Killeen, Texas, and Mrs. Raleigh B. Lee of Greenville.

The wedding was directed by Katherine Vinson.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Kent Lee, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom. Mrs. Malcolm T. Simpson served wedding cake and punch was poured by Mrs. Ted Moore. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. W. Reid Staton.

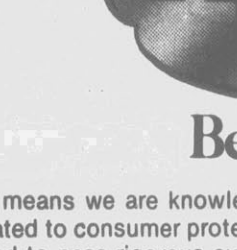
A rehearsal party was given Friday evening by the mother of the bridegroom and Mrs. Kent Lee, aunt of the bridegroom, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Reid Staton. Several showers were given in honor of the bridal couple.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic Beach, the couple will reside in Aurora.

MRS. LEE

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck



This is the tale of two mothers.

They have the title by definition: a female who gives birth to an offspring.

Yet, neither has nursed her baby, bathed it, rocked it or kissed it as it slept.

They show up every Mother's Day to painfully remember that moment when they made a decision they would question the rest of their lives.

When Peg (not her real name) decided to give her baby up for adoption she was 17 years old. "I didn't even think of the part of the child I was taking with me," she wrote. "All I thought of was trying to get my parents to stop crying, get my life back to normal, and find a place for the baby to grow.

"Does anyone know how many times I sat on my bed and hugged my pillow and ached for him? I held him once, but I doubt that he remembers anything I told him. I told him hello and goodbye when he was 10 days old. I told him to never forget how much I loved him. I loved him enough to let go when it was best. I could never do it again. It almost killed me.

"Sometimes I have this heart-felt panic that I don't know if he is in danger. I remember the flutterings of life, but it's all I have of my son. I don't even have the satisfaction of knowing he loves and trusts me."

Pam (not her real name) was estranged from her family when she became pregnant. Without a support system, she clung desperately "to the one human being who related to my doubts and fears ... a person I could not say no to.

"I was unable to raiee a child alone, unable to give away a child by a man I loved like yesterday's newspaper, so I terminated the life of my child. Not a choice. A decision. I'm not an advocate of abortion and I don't represent teenagers who have abortions, but I do represent mothers who forfeit their children because they are powerless to do otherwise. We pay for it every day of our lives. Never allowed to grieve, we go on bleeding forever and always. We live with a lie and reminders of the stigma.

"Every little child we see that is about the same age reminds us of the gifts that we denied. The life we destroyed or gave away. Few people would allow us the right to say that we lost a child. 'Lost' is too easy. We should be made to admit the full weight of our sins. Admit that we 'murdered or abandoned' it. None of us expect sympathy. But a little compassion would help."

Excerpts from the letters of these two mothers are shared with you on this day for one reason. Not to judge. Not to pass sentence. But to point out to young girls who have not been faced with the decision, that pregnancy is not as "simplistic" or as "routine" or as "final" as society would have you believe.

This is the one moment in your life where thy will will be done. And it is awesome.

It is not the end of a problem — but only the beginning.

After washing metal lawn furniture, wipe it with a dry cloth sprayed with furniture polish. This will give the metal a long-lasting protective coat.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Dawson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. M.W. Aldridge of Greenville and the late Dorothy F. Aldridge.

Matron of honor was Jackie D. Wilkerson and maid of honor was Jimi Dawson, both sisters of the bride from Greenville. Bridesmaids were Miri and Susan Johnston, both sisters of the bridegroom, and Kelly Jordan, Cindy Talbert and Kristy Troutman, all of Greenville, Cooka Garrett of Raleigh, Lynn Tucker of Dallas, Texas, and Sandra J. Nobles of Simpson.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Mike Aldridge of Greenville and Steve Aldridge of Orlando, Fla., both brothers of the bridegroom, Reid Jones, Bobby Wornoff and Bill Collier, all of Raleigh, Reggie Spain, Billy Williams and Beau Young, all of Greenville, and David Team of Charlotte.

MRS. ALDRIDGE

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk-ened organza, Venise lace and pearls. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice overlaid with motifs of silk Venise lace and pearls, modified Queen Anne neckline, cap sleeves and sheer back yoke of point d'esprit. Scattered lace motifs and rows of lace cascading down the back enhanced the chapel-length train which was encircled with matching lace. She carried a bouquet of silk flowers with greenery and baby's breath.

Each attendant wore a formal gown of daphne rose matte taffeta designed with a sweetheart neckline and short off-shoulder Renaissance pouf sleeves centered with a fabric rose. The fitted bodice was accentuated by a cummerbund of matching taffeta. The maid of honor and matron of honor each carried two long-stemmed orchids accented with greenery and baby's breath. Each bridesmaid carried a single long-stemmed orchid with greenery and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of lavender chiffon with a matching lace overlay. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal gown of candlelight chiffon.

A reception was held at the King and Queen North, given by the parents of the bride and Mrs. C.B. Whitfield, grandmother of the bride. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. W.F. Tyson of Stokes. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Ed Taylor, Mrs. Marshall Whitfield, Mrs. Braxton Newman, Mrs. Jim Weidman, Mrs. Raymond Novicki and Mrs. Ed Schlatterer, aunts of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dail.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Aldridge at the Greenville Country Club. Following the dinner, a dance was held at the country club by friends of the bridal couple. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by Mrs. Donald Tucker and Mrs. Cletas Jackson at the home of Mrs. Tucker. Several other parties and showers were given in honor of the bridal couple.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is a teacher in the Greenville city schools. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and is employed by Aldridge and Southerland Realtors.

Prevent Serious Mildew Problems

It wouldn't be a Carolina summer without high humidity. All that moisture in the air means people will soon be struggling with mildew.

To prevent serious problems, extension housing specialists at North Carolina State University recommend the following steps to get rid of excessive moisture inside the house:

•Turn on air conditioners when the relative humidity is 60 percent or more. Humidity is generally given in the daily weather forecast. Air conditioning helps reduce excess moisture in the air.

•Put sheets of polyethylene in the crawl space. Eighty percent of the ground should be covered with four-to-six mil plastic. Vents in foundation walls should also be opened for cross ventilation.

•Ventilate the attic. Homes should have continuous eave vents, ridge vents or gable vents. Attic fans also help circulate the air.

•Use ventilating fans, particularly those in the kitchen and bathroom.

To tint coconut, combine two to four drops of food coloring with a small amount of water. Half fill a wide-mouth, screw-type jar with coconut, add the coloring and shake until the coconut is evenly colored.

Square House Plan Offers Most Foundation Space

Of all shapes, the square house plan encloses the most space with the least foundation, exterior walls and roof, say extension housing specialists at North Carolina State University.

This design lowers construction costs and reduces exterior maintenance costs. The square shape works well for a two story or small one-story plan.

The rectangular shape gives more interior design flexibility and can be almost as economical to construct as the square type. It adapts well to long, narrow lots or can be turned lengthwise to the street, creating a private backyard.

Swing one end of a rectangular plan around and you have a L-shaped house design. Interior design becomes more interesting, and the outdoor area formed by the L can be private and accessible from many parts of the house.

Just remember that every time a plan turns a corner, the cost goes up, warn extension specialists. More land is used, more foundation must be laid and the break in the roof line is more expensive.

Another variation is the T-shaped plan, which is good for interior living zones and exposure to the outside. Construction costs will rise along with the bill for heating and cooling.

The interior courtyard is an attractive, if expensive feature. Consider it is privacy is very important.

On The Young Side

By Clay Deanhardt

What group of dedicated girls works hard all year long and then roots the home team to victory each Friday night in the fall? Why, the 1984-85 varsity cheerleaders for Rose High.

Next year, the school will be represented by the following spirit-filled girls: Leigh Lanier, head; Ginger Galloway, co-head; Marty Welch, secretary/treasurer; Alicia Speight, Kim Edwards, Karen Wainwright, Eleanor White, Sherri Buie, Nancy Midgette, Nicole Adams, Shonda Brown, Kasonya Daniels, Lisa Holloman and Anissa Boyer. Latecia Tyson, Polly Baker and Amanda Johnson are alternates.

Also in preparation for the upcoming year, clubs have started to select new officers. This week, two clubs, the International Club and the FCA (Federation of Christian Athletes) have elected their new officers. Next year's leader of the International Club will be Amy VanScoy, president. Charles Moore is vice president and Mary Jon May, secretary/treasurer. In the FCA, new officers will be Sue Holec, president, Luanne Wallace, vice president, and James Ormond, secretary/treasurer.

Probably the most important thing happening at Rose this week is registration for next year's classes. Students must select their courses carefully and remember that it will be very hard to change a class next year just because they don't like the teacher or something. Contact the guidance department if you have any questions about registration.

One final note on last week's production of the musical "Finian's Rainbow." Once again, Ms. Topper and her fantastic cast managed to pull it off and stage an excellent production. If you missed it, you missed a lot, but be sure to watch out next year for further drama shows.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Bobby A. Best of Minnesott Beach announce the engagement of their daughter, Brenda Leigh, to James Henderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henderson of Bath. The wedding is planned for May 26. The bride-elect and bridegroom-elect are from Greenville.

Sugar Short Cuts To Calorie Counters

It's hard to have your cake and eat it too when it comes to jams and jellies on a low calorie diet.

"Sugar doesn't just add sweetness, it preserves, keeps fruit colors bright and helps form the gel," says Dr. Carolyn Lackey, extension foods and nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University. Many a home preserver has tried to simply cut out the sugar only to end up with a syrup instead of a quivering jelly.

There is a way out of this dieter's dilemma, Dr. Lackey says. Food researchers have come up with the following four low-calorie alternatives:

•Unflavored or flavored gelatin can be used to give shape to jam or jelly while saccharin or aspartame replace the sugar. The texture is more gelatin-like, and the color is less stable. "Make no more than two cups at a time or the jelly is likely to outlast its refrigerator storage life," Dr. Lackey says.

•For fruit taste rather than the super sweet taste of regular jam, try a fruit spread or butter. Fruits are cooked until tender and may be pureed. Citrus fruits and/or spices can be added for more flavor. A low calorie sweetner can also be added to taste after cooking. Again, since sugar is not there as a preservative, store this product in the freezer.

•A low-calorie gelling aid now on the market is Slim Set, which uses gums, starch and other thickening agents to make a gel. Saccharin or aspartame can be substituted for sugar after cooking. Follow package directions.

•A modified pectin has been designed which does not need sugar to gel. "Several types of low methoxyl pectin products are available," Dr. Lackey says.

Any of these low methoxyl pectins can be used to make low-calorie jams and jellies since saccharin or aspertame can be used instead of sugar. Recipes are with the products.

Cooks using sugarless recipes will face several problems. "Since sugar is not used with these jams and jellies, the product lacks the shiny luster of regular jam and jelly. Also, the fruit color fades quickly. After several months storage, a red strawberry jam will become a brown strawberry jam. Food coloring added when the jam is made helps cover up this problem," the extension specialist explains.

These low-calorie jellies and jams, if not heat processed, will also spoil easily. "Keep them in the refrigerator for short periods of time or the freezer for longer storage," Dr. Lackey says.

Avoid Food Poisoning

Hot weather is ice cream weather and many North Carolinians perfer the homemade kind.

Just be sure to avoid food poisoning, says Dr. Robert Brackett, extension food safety specialist, North Carolina State University.

Never use cracked or dirty eggs or milk or cream of questionable quality. Make sure all freezer parts are clean, and be sure to cook the ice cream mix if the recipe requires it. Then dig in and enjoy.

Icon Makers Turn To A New Art Form

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

PALEKH, U.S.S.R. (AP) — In this windswept old Russian village, the traditions and skills of the Orthodox Christian past find a rare blend with the interests of the Communist present.

Sixty years ago, seven of the thousands of religious icon painters whose livelihood vanished after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution came to Palekh and began making small, richly decorated papier mache boxes.

The boxes were the artists' way of keeping their skills, if not their pre-revolutionary subjects, alive. Replacing religious themes with motifs from Russia's rich folklore and the Soviet era, they applied to a new art form the painstaking love of detail and luscious use of bright color and gold developed over centuries.

The result was so successful that, today, there are some 250 craftsmen employed at Palekh's workshop, with hundreds applying every year for the few cofeded places to study and master the box-painting technique.

The boxes they produce, most of them exported, sell for an average 350 rubles — $490 at the official exchange rate — to high-class art shops and private collectors around the world. The smallest are the size of a man's wristwatch, the average about 3-by-5 inches.

Like so many thousands of other villages, Palekh is a cluster of wooden houses huddled around a church, plunked in the infinite plains and forests that are Russia's heartland.

It became famous in the 16th century, refining iconography to such a degree that by the 1700s, Palekh boasted individual workshops painting only the faces, or limbs, or backgrounds of tiny icons.

Choice examples are displayed in the village church, which is finely restored but, like most churches now, is a museum and not a place of worship.

A collection of the finest Palekh works in a nearby two-story, wooden museum shows how the heroes of communism came to replace the Russian Orthodox saints as subject matter.

Symbolism was important in old Russia, and remains so. It takes a mind steeped in this tradition to note that the tails of the whip cracked by a driver on one box illustrating an Alexander Pushkin tale nearly touch the face of Czar Nicholas I.

"The common people are nearly whipping the czar," a Soviet guide explained.

The director of Palekh's workshop, Alexei D. Kochupalov, says he encourages new themes, but production centers on frequently copied folk tales.

After five years' training, and perhaps two years in the workshop, an artist can complete an average box in two to three weeks using handmade brushes of squirrels' tails to paint and wolves' teeth to polish.

Outlining the design takes two days. Then comes the elaborate process of coloring before the application of the first layer of lacquer, which gives the traditional reddish tint.

Before a final lacquering, gold leaf touches are added.

For producing such boxes regularly, artists earn about 250 rubles ($350) a month. Kochupalov says many also make exhibition pieces that can take up to two years to complete and are commissioned for as much as 1,200 rubles ($1,680) each.

Last year, hard currency sales — which account for about 90 percent of annual production — earned the equivalent of $1.4 million.

Earnings could be increased if Palekh expanded its workshop. But Kochupalov said they do not want to lose either the traditional craftsmanship or way of life.

"We need to watch over the workers, so that it isn't just work, but they become artists," he said. "If we took 70 to 80 people a year it would become a factory."

Work has started on a new complex incorporating students' workshops and the main production. It is to be finished in late 1985, but the artists insist tradition is not vanishing from Palekh.

"We don't want Palekh to grow into a town," Kochupalov said. "We want to preserve it as a village," so that the artists can enjoy the same centuries-old Russian pleasures of winter ice fishing and skiing, or summer mushroom hunts as the folklore characters they depict once did.

Palekh boxes are the most expensive and prestigious, partly because of the patronage of Gorky, who studied icon painting

Turntables Turned

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Prospects for German bands were so bleak a few years ago that they had to sing in English just to sell a few records in their own country.

Suddenly, the turntables have turned.

Decades after most of the world began to rock, German artists are finally starting to roll as Teutonic tunes wend their way to the top of the revered American and British pop charts.

That's no small coup for a culture whose music traditionally conjures images of shrill Valkyries, apple-cheeked oompah bands and the smoky invitations of Marlene Dietrich rasping from the Victrola.

Not even the leader of the pack can explain why Germans have penetrated an international market that shunned them for years.

"Everyone keeps asking me that! I have no idea," protests the 24-year-old hitmaker from Hagen who calls herself Nena. "That question is so boring."

Nena's anti-war "99 Luftballons" is the most successful of the German exports. The single, with an English version, "99 Red Balloons" on the flip side, soared to the No. 1 spot on record charts in the United States and Britain.

Peter Schilling's "Voellig Losgeloest," a takeoff on David Bowie's "Major Tom," has also triumphed abroad. It enjoyed 22 weeks on the Billboard chart, where it peaked at No. 14.

It was the No. 1 song in West Germany for 1983, and enjoyed popularity in other European countries as well.

The English version of Schilling's album, "Error in System," has been on the American charts for more than 20 weeks, peaking in 61st place.

But the success of Schilling, Nena and Trio has "opened a lot of doors and it's going to be very interesting to see what happens next," Dietrich said.

First Look At A Treasured Civil War Journal

EDITOR'S NOTE — For 120 years, John D. Austen's family treasured the journal he wrote during the Civil War siege of Port Hudson — the longest siege in U.S. military history until the Vietnam War. The journal was given to the state of Louisiana in January, and The Associated Press got this first look between its crumbling leather covers.

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Even mule meat is tasty toward the end of a siege, according to a diary kept by the Confederate chief telegrapher at Port Hudson, the South's last Mississippi River stronghold in the Civil War.

"This day we had mule steak for dinner for the first time. I partook of it most heartily, and indeed found it good," John D. Austen wrote July 4, 1863 — 43 days into the siege and five days before the garrison surrendered.

"It is equal at least to the poor quality of beef which we have sometimes been compelled to eat."

By that time, all the "meal, rice, bacon and lard" were gone, Austen wrote.

His diary spans all but the surrender in the 48-day siege — the longest in U.S. military history until the 77-day siege at Khe Sanh during the Vietnam War.

Port Hudson isn't as famous as Gettysburg or Bull Run. But some Louisiana historians say that it would have been the most important fight of the Civil War if it hadn't been for Vicksburg, under siege at the same time and surrendering five days earlier. That Mississippi battle also was directed by a far more illustrious general — Ulysses S. Grant.

Port Hudson was the first major action for the Union army's black troops and one of the most photographed battlefields of the Civil War.

Port Hudson and Vicksburg, 110 miles upriver, were besieged in a two-pronged attack to complete one of the North's main objectives: controlling the Mississippi River to divide the Confederate army and cut off supplies.

In the 1800s, Port Hudson was atop high bluffs overlooking a sharp bend that slowed ships going downstream and threw a stiff current against vessels traveling upstream.

After New Orleans fell, artillery batteries were set up on the bluff, backed by a network of natural ravines and earthworks.

Nathaniel Banks besieged the batteries at Port Hudson. "He was one of the most inept Northern generals," says Art Bergeron, curator at the State Commemorative Area here. "It's easy for people to forget Banks."

Even the vast numbers of photographs of Port Hudson — 150 to 200 are known — did nothing for its position in history. Banks wanted the pictures for posterity and the voters, but he did a poor job even in victory.

Bergeron notes that Banks had 30,000 troops. Only 6,800 defended Port Hudson, but two major assaults against the garrison failed.

"U.S. forces advancing from Baton Rouge," begins Austen's chronicle of the siege. "Heavy skirmishing all day ... Colonel Miles' Battalion of Infantry and Boone's company of artillery encountered Enemy at Plains Store. Heavy fight ensued in which both parties retired. Loss quite heavy on both sides.

"Our boys behaved gallantly. The fight ceased at 5 o'clock. At about 9:30 or 10 p.m. operator at Bayou Sara informed me enemy was landing forces at that place."

Although the first entry is dated May 21, it may actually have been written a day later, when all telegraph wires were cut, forcing Austen out of his usual work.

May 23 — the day now considered the start of the siege because it was the day Union troops surrounded the fort — reads only: "Our skirmishers on the left retired within breastworks. Sharpshooters continued firing all day."

It is similar to several brief notations, which read only, "Sharpshooting all day."

However, the first major assault — a May 27 attack all along the 4½-mile Confederate line — provoked a much longer entry.

Austen noted that siege cannon began firing early, joined at 7 a.m. by the guns of the Union fleet, which bombarded the port for about two hours from their position below the Mississippi bluffs.

"After fight concluded with fleet, fight by land continued with much vigor. It was indeed terrific," Austen said. "During the night, a new fight took place. During the whole day's fighting Enemy made 8 attempts to storm our works, but were repulsed with heavy loss each time."

June 14 brought the second major Union assault. "At 4 o'clock this morning a most desperate assault commenced all along the line," Austen reported. "Enemy attacked our right, left and center. The fire of artillery was the most violent of the whole siege; it was indeed terrible."

Austen wrote that another attack was expected on or before July 4. But it did not come.

"'The 4th' has arrived, and no attack yet! What can the enemy be doing? This morning was the most favorable for an attack that could have been devised by Enemy — Nature seemed to favor them," Austen wrote. "A heavy fog enveloped the Country, rendering the formation of Enemy's Columns within short distance of our lines an easy matter; yet — he did not take advantage of it. It can not be understood, unless indeed, he desires to await the moment when, being out of provisions, he thinks we will quietly surrender. Time will show."

The surrender came, Bergeron says, partly because word of Vicksburg's collapse had filtered through and Gen. Franklin Gardner was worried that Grant would lead his troops to Louisiana.

Few people outside Austen's family had seen the journal until Paula Brooks Stubbs, then married to Austen's great-great-grandson, showed it to her history teacher at Southeastern Louisiana University three years ago.

She says Dr. Bertrom Groene, a Civil War enthusiast, helped persuade the family to donate the book to the state in January.

"I decided that it really belonged to history. To the people. I decided this was what my great-grandfather wanted to do with it — otherwise, why would he have kept the diary?" says Mrs. Stubbs, 56.

She says the diary was given to her mother — Austen's granddaughter — by his widow, a plantation owner's daughter who outlived all seven of her children and stayed with Mrs. Stubbs' family until her death in 1943.

The diary was written in pencil in the center pages of a leather-bound, 3-by-5-inch notebook in which Austen apparently kept his business accounts.

John Wiest of the Louisiana Office of State Parks notes, for instance, that one of the names is E.D. White — Edward Douglas White II, who later became chief justice of the Supreme Court.

"It had always been thought that he was there during the siege, but this is the first proof we've had," he says.

Austen's last sentences, written July 7, are, "At 12 m (meridien, or noon) U.S. fleet and land forces fired salute, and it is reported that Vicksburg is taken. Some regard this as a ruse of Enemy. We shall see."

Terms of surrender were worked out the next day, and the garrison gave up early July 9.

Austen, however, apparently was among the numerous men who sneaked out of the garrison. He wasn't captured there, but at Osyka, Miss.

"That sounds to me like something that happened later in the war," says Bergeron. "There were no troops near Osyka until summer or fall 1864."

Mrs. Stubbs says he was imprisoned in the cotton press building in New Orleans and, because he refused to take the "Ironclad Oath," kept there for several months after the war ended.

That oath stated that the person who took it had never voluntarily taken arms against the Union or helped people who did so, and was required of anyone who wanted to hold any sort of civilian or military office.

Austen eventually took an oath of allegiance to the Union and was released. Mrs. Stubbs says he was active in reconstruction and died in November 1892 in Shreveport, where the street the family lived on was named after him.

After its surrender, Port Hudson became the training ground for most of the Union's black troops in the area and was used as a Union garrison until the end of the war.

"Approximately 18,000 to 20,000 Louisiana blacks enrolled in the Union army. It's estimated that up to 90 percent of them were at Port Hudson, either garrisoned or in training," Bergeron says.

The state plans to keep Austen's notebook in a museum to be built at the battlefield. So far, the museum is only lines on paper, and construction is at least 18 months away, Wiest says.

The 650-acre state commemorative area now includes more than six miles of walking trails around the battlefield's breastworks and fortifications.

The centerpiece is a three-quarter-mile U that was dubbed "Fort Desperate" during the May 27 assault. Repeated charges against it failed to move the Arkansas regiment that held it. A boardwalk and one of the park's three viewing towers have been built there.

The photographs taken for Banks have been a great help in restoring the battlefield, Bergeron says.

"They had a team of photographers taking pictures all over the Confederate lines and in some cases some of Union lines," he says.

The silkworm is not a worm. It is a caterpillar, a member of the order Lepidoptera, which includes butterflies and moths. The most common source of silk is the domestic Bombyx mori, but there are more than 500 species of wild silkworms. One of them, found mostly in China, produces an off-white silk known as tussah. A shimmering gold silk comes from the muga caterpillar of India's Assam Valley.

Chicago Art Fair An International Feast In Art

By CATHY LEWANDOWSKI

CHICAGO (UPI) — John Wilson never wanted to start an art fair. But he staged his first in 1980 and now he has one of the hottest art happenings in the world — a high quality expo known for its electrifying contemporary character and international perspective.

The 1984 Chicago International Art Exposition opens with a gala benefit for the Chicago Museum of Contemporary Art May 10 and runs through May 15 at historic Navy Pier, a massive 1913 lakefront structure the city is keeping open only for Wilson's art and antique fairs.

About 160 dealers will be showing the works of 2,000 artists from around the world — including, for the first time, the Soviet Union.

Interviewed recently in the apartment he rented overlooking Navy Pier, Wilson said he has no idea how the Exposition has grown from 75 dealers in 1980 to 162 in 1984.

It is the expo the world's major art dealers dare not miss.

"I didn't want to start a fair," said Wilson, a printmaker and founder of the Lakeside Group, the Expo umbrella organization. "I tried to get other people to do it."

Wilson, who exhibited prints from his Lakeside Studios at a fair in a leaky armory in Washington, D.C., decided Chicago could stage a better fair. He assembled some loyal and sympathetic friends and formed the Lakeside Group in 1980.

Wilson staged the first expo in Chicago, a city he considers geographically and artistically desirable, with a European flavor all its own and civic support for the exposition.

It was difficult to attract big name dealers to an upstart American fair, but the Expo's reputation grew. Now, European dealers use Chicago standards to judge Basel and critics and dealers regard Wilson's fair as the world's top exposition for dealers and collectors.

"The art world is a small world and it's beautiful that we do have that reputation — it's a must thing. People have to come. If not as exhibitors, as viewers," Wilson said.

"It's a serious fair and serious things are done," said Richard Gray, owner of Chicago's Richard Gray Gallery.

Wilson quoted Gray, saying, "Richard Gray said in Basel last year, somebody came up and said, 'This is nice, but it's not Chicago,' That's tremendous. Now we're the ones used as the standard."

This year, 162 dealers — 55 of them foreign — will bring to Chicago jazzy pieces that are setting the art world awhirl.

Dealers and collectors attending this year's Expo will see:

—A 13-ton sculpture by Spanish artist Vacanda Larrea, about which Expo director Thomas Blackman said: "I don't know how I'm going to move it."

—A performance piece sent by Galerie Alain Oudin, Paris. The artist and participants close their eyes and chant hymns as they walk through a chalk and paint reproduction of the famous maze in Chartes Cathedral. Four French artists perform during the 10-minute walk.

—Works of the Neo-Expressionists, artists who work on a monumental size and with brutal and fairly simplistic style. They are inspired by the post-war experiences of the artsts who grew up burdened by the roles their parents played in World War II, Gray said. They are "taking the world by storm."

—Works by Europe's Constructivists, artists who distill painting down to the starkest essentials, using pure color and line.

—A variety of pieces from some of Europe's most prestigious galleries — including Galerie Farideh Cadot of Paris, London's Mayor Gallery, Naples' Gallery Lucio Amelio — all being shown for the first time.

—A huge piece by New Yorker Dennis Oppenheim for the outdoor sculpture mecca called "Mile of Sculpture." "It's 10 by 15 by 100 feet," Blackman said. "It's called 'Rolling Explosion' and I don't even know what it does."

—For the first time, the Expo will feature works by contemporary Soviet artists that have drawn the attention of the art world — and a suspicious U.S. government.

"It is (scary) to this extent — the paranoia comes from the FBI. They saw someone applied for a visa to come see John Wilson and asked 'Why would someone come see you?'"

"They thought he was going to steal electronic secrets or measure the Sears Tower, for God's sake," Wilson said.

"They asked, 'Do you have any state of the art equipment they could steal?' And I thought, the only state of the art equipment is the art," Blackman said.

The Soviet Union is being represented by its official fine arts wing, V.O. Mezhdunaradnaya Kniga, Moscow.

—Works exhibited by leading European galleries such as Karsten Greve Gallerie of Koln, W. Germany, Fernando Vijande of Madrid, Annely Juda Fine Art of London.

European participation has been enthusiastic, Blackman said, and the governments of France, Canada, Poland, Spain and Great Britian are sponsoring works in the Mile of Sculpture.

"The French government is just being great," he said. "The French artist Michel Girard is having his piece forged right here in Chicago. He thinks it's really a kick."

Chicago artist Ed Paschke designed the poster, titled "Viseon," heralding the Expo, a figurative piece in the Chicago School style.

"It's reminiscent of the imagery of static lines that come from a TV set as they zip across the screen," Blackman said. "Very electronic looking. And it was done in a 16th century process, stone lithography. It's done by hand. The figure in the piece exemplifies the exposition in the fact that the image is kind of looking back at you in kind of an exchange, which is really what the art expo is about in a lot of ways.

"It's a rare opportunity for the art world and the commercial sector to take a look at each other and make an exchange like this."

Chicago's central location has helped attract museums and collectors from around the country, Wilson said, and foreign museums send groups of board members.

"We can attract museums from New York, Houston, Atlanta. The museum from Miami is coming this year."

"We just got notice today the Tate Musuem in London is bringing a group."

"Last year, the Museum of Contemporary Art in New York brought a group. Today, the Sheldon (Memorial Art Gallery from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln) Museum in Lincoln, Neb., wrote in. It's tremendous to get this kind of following."

The Association of Corporate Curators, a group flush with cash dispatched to collect art for big business' headquarters, is also attending this year's fair.

"They spend a lot of money," Wilson said.

Wilson, who remembers his mother dragging him off to museums to draw when he was a boy, said he gets 10 requests for each booth in the show, but he has to keep the Expo small to ensure quality and to keep from swamping visitors with more art works than they could see in five days.

The formula seems to have worked and the young fair is now regarded as the hottest art happening in the world.

Dusseldorf's Hans Meyer, who started the first international art fair in Germany, once remarked, "The future is here! Basel may still be the biggest, but Chicago is now more interesting for contemporary art."

"The world is coming to Chicago now," Wilson said.

Religious Revival On The Rise In Ethiopia

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The car moved slowly through the empty expanse of this capital's Revolution Square, dominated by a mammoth billboard depicting the Communist trinity: Marx, Engels and Lenin.

An Ethiopian official veered to the left and lifted a hand from the wheel to gesture at dense crowds gathered for Epiphany services at St. Stephen's Church across the way.

"Can you believe the religious revival we are having these days," he asked in a half-whisper. "Bigger than anything we had before. Even the young are attending church."

While some clerics might argue with the term "revival," there is no disputing the sharp upsurge in public religious observances 10 years after the monarchy of Emperor Haile Selassie, himself a Christian, was replaced by a stern Marxist-Leninist government, long-time residents say. Selassie was arrested and died in detention in 1975.

Church-state relations have been uneasy, with cases of heavy-handed government interference in the hierarchy of the 1,700-year-old Ethiopian Orthodox Church, which counts among its members most of this East African country's Christians — about half the estimated 33 million people.

But the Orthodox Church, independent sources say, is careful to avoid friction with the ruling Marxist authorities, a posture apparently stemming as much from its long experience as the state church until 1974 as from simple pragmatism.

"This is a traditional pattern in many socialist countries," said one Western resident. "Here, as in some Eastern-bloc countries, you have an Orthodox Church willing to cooperate, although the state is vigorously hostile."

Reflecting the increased interest in worship, 16 new churches have been built here in the past decade to meet demand — more than at any other time in Ethiopian history. A huge costly edifice, St. Gabriel's, overlooking the city's main market, is nearing completion after financing was raised through private donations.

Millions reportedly took part in Christmas and Epiphany services — both held here in January, in accordance with the church's use of the Julian calendar. Many teenagers were seen among the worshipers.

And they participated despite the fact that prayers and hymns, as always, were in the ancient Ge'ez language in which relatively few laymen are proficient.

Crowds surged toward the elderly church patriarch, Abuna Tikle Haimonoto Malaku Wolde Mikael, as he nimbly climbed atop a fountain at an outdoor Epiphany observance to bless them with splashes of holy water.

Funerals are considered deeply religious events here. In spite of new state regulations forbidding staff from taking time off for church funerals, whole government departments might turn out at memorial services for a building janitor, a foreign adviser to the government said.

The Rev. Solomon G. Selassie, in charge of church printing, said that while Ethiopia "might be going the way of the Soviet Union, we have the freedom to preach."

Comparing the crush at the outdoor Epiphany service with what he had seen during two visits to the United States, the archpriest said: "There are freedoms in America, including the freedom of religion. But its churches are empty. Everyone is watching television."

Observers see the increased church attendance here as a popular reaction against state pressure to stay away or curtailment of other rights.

"People are going to church in far greater numbers because it is one way of showing a protest, although many are undoubtedly motivated by purely religious feelings," said one foreign observer.

Commented a Western diplomat: "It's not revivalism. It's an attachment to the past — a gut reaction, a hanging on."

Churchgoers often must defy local neighborhood councils, known as "Kebeles," which sometimes compete with religious services by scheduling compulsory political education classes at the same time.

Loudspeakers try to drown out church bells, and names of youths attending Mass are taken down by activists of the Kebeles, which came into their own during a 1976-78 period known as the "Red Terror," when an estimated 2,500 people were killed in Marxist in-fighting. Today, the Kebeles control food distribution and have the power of arrest.

Why has the regime of Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam tolerated the church's growing popularity?

One close observer of the religious situation said, "The government realized it would be too much to take on the church. Its pull is too deep, and too many members of the government themselves or their families are attached to it."

The Orthodox Church has been spared the much stronger government action against such Protestant denominations as the Lutheran-related Mekane Yesus.

This sect has had churches and schools closed in recent years, apparently because a number of Oromo Tribe members, who have launched a secessionist movement, belong to Mekane Yesus.

Orthodox Patriarch Malaku was described by one Western source who has met him as a "monk, but not a learned, worldly monk. He is a prisoner of the system."

He was elected head of the church following the 1976 arrest of his predecessor, Patriarch Thewophols, who was deposed by the regime on grounds of corruption.

The related Cairo-based Coptic Orthodox Church was neither consulted on Thewophols' removal nor on the selection of a successor, "in direct contravention of Ethiopian canon law," said one expert, who declined to be identified. Reflecting close past links, the Egyptian church supplied the patriarch until the post began being filled by an Ethiopian in 1959.

No Orthodox clergyman is known to have publicly criticized the detention of Thewophols or the forced retirement of eight bishops in 1978. The former patriarch has not been seen publicly since his arrest and there is speculation he is dead.

The priests, who are paid salaries by the government in lieu of revenue lost when church lands were nationalized in 1974, "will not express a political opinion on any matter," said one foreign source, who has met with numerous church officials here.

A top churchman once confided to a diplomat that the bishops were restrained from speaking freely by their ubiquitous government-appointed secretaries, the informant added.

The church did protest to authorities, however, after a large number of young clergymen were drafted into military service, leaving some churches without the five priests required to hold a service.

The regime backed down a bit, granting exemptions to draft-age priests if there were fewer than five others too old for military service. But after the five slots are filled, the remaining priests would still be eligible to an army call-up, sources said.

Latin America's trade balance showed a surplus of $7.7 billion in 1982. This, according to the Inter-American Development Bank, indicates the countries of the region are making an extraordinary effort to generate resources needed to pay their loans. Mexico alone accounted for most of the surplus — $6.9 billion. That represented a $10.3 billion turnaround since 1981, when Mexico had registered a deficit of $3.4 billion.

Exciting News On Bald Eagles

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Wildlife Federation is compiling figures from its latest winter survey of the American bald eagle population and the conservation group says the results are exciting.

"The indications are that in many areas there are more eagles han ever before," said Robert Kennedy, the director of the federation's raptor information center.

Kennedy said the survey conducted in January shows that the comeback of the American bald eagle is nowhere more apparent than along the Mississippi River in Illinois where NWF volunteers counted large numbers of the birds.

The bald eagle also is doing quite well in the Chesapeake Bay area, Kennedy said, and one nest of the national bird was even spotted near the birthplace of George Washington in Wakefield, Va.

Kennedy was in Atlanta recently to deliver his good news about the eagle to the 48th annual meeting of the federation, the nation's largest conservation gboup that claims 4 million members and supporters.

He said in an interview that the bald eagle population had grown from an estimated 9,815 in 1972 to between 13-14,000 in 1983. The estimates are based on actual counts of NWF volunteers who take to the wilds in early January of each year to conduct the survey.

The bald eagle, peregrine falcon, osprey and brown pelican were in danger of becoming extinct following years of DDT pesticide spraying in the 1950s and 1960s. The turnaround came with the banning of DDT in the early 1970s.

"All of these birds have started to come back and they are coming back very strongly," Kennedy said.

"At one time the brown pelican, the state bird of Louisiana, became extinct in that state because of pesticides. But now they are doing quite well there."

Based on the NWF survey in 1983, the state of Washington currently has the largest number of bald eagles at 1,158, followed by 1,042 in Utah and 908 in Missouri.

In the Southeastern states, Florida has 684 bald eagles, the most in the Southeast. South Carolina has 21, and Georgia 18, while none of the birds were found in Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina or Kentucky.

The mortality rate of eagles continues to be affected adversely by the activities of man, Kennedy said.

Crayfish Cultivated

By RENEE HAINES-SAINE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — A new crop is being coaxed from the rice fields along the Mississippi River. Local connoisseurs call them Arkansas lobsters. The scientific term is crayfish.

The tiny, edible crustaceans have been called worse. In Louisiana slang, the term is mud bugs. Some folks call them crawfish, crawdads or crawdaddies. But the key word is profit to a growing number of Arkansas farmers looking for something to augment the nation's largest rice crop.

"We're trying to see whether there is a place for crawfish in Arkansas. I think there is," said Leroy Gray, a fish and wildlife biologist with the Arkansas Cooperative Extension Service in Little Rock.

"Everybody's excited," said Ronnie Thomas, who started the first commercial crawfish operation in Arkansas last year. About 90 people from throughout the state attended a meeting late last year of the new Arkansas Crawfish Producers Association.

mThomas, who operates "The Crawdad Hole" with a business partner, was elected president.

"Next year, you'll see it really go statewide," Thomas said. "There's a lot of interest, especially from local farmers. They all laughed at us last year. They made fun of us. 'You boys are crazy.' Now they're coming back, asking how do you raise them," he said.

"The main idea here is to get the market established, not only in Arkansas, but nationwide," said Thomas, who lives in Hattiesburg, Miss.

In Louisiana, crawfish are raised for human consumption only. Gray said there are two markets for the product in Arkansas.

"The Cajuns think it's sacrilegious to put a crawfish on a hook and catch a fish with it. We don't," he said.

Thomas said he recently received a large order for fish bait from Wisconsin. His business has been swamped with orders from individuals and restaurants.

"We ended up having to buy 30,000 pounds besides what we could raise," he said.

Next on the agenda is opening a restaurant in the area that will feature the delicacy, he said.

Thomas and his partner grossed $410 an acre from crawfish production last year, he said. In two years, they expect to gross $1,500 an acre.

"The farmer's got to be diversified. You can't just make it on beans and rice," Thomas said.

"We've got a great situation," Thomas said.

Perfect Mother's Day Gift Is Yours For a Mere Stamp

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Next Sunday is Mother's Day. And so soon after income tax time, which has left most of us a little short. Dry your tears. I have a suggestion for a Mother's Day gift that could be the most appreciated gift your mother has ever received. And the price is right.

It makes no difference if you're 9 years old or 70, if you're lucky enough to have a mother, sit down and write her a letter. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece, just a few sentences telling her how much she means to you and why. If you happen to be in a sentimental mood, go ahead and write your heart out, expressing some thoughts you've never verbalized. And be sure to date it, because long after the nightgowns, purses and hankies are worn and discarded, I'll bet your letter will remain tucked away for safekeeping with some other treasures your mother couldn't bear to throw away.

How do I know? My letters were.

DEAR ABBY: The recently discussed problem of wives who refuse or are reluctant to have sex with their husbands has a simple solution.

Prior to the marriage ceremony, these women should inform their prospective husbands that they do not intend to honor the marriage contract, i.e., that they intend to be "non-wives," occasional wives or reluctant wives.

Otherwise, entering into the marriage contract constitutes fraud, and the defrauded husband should boot her worthless rear out immediately and seek an annulment.

(MR.) E.J.A.,
MONTGOMERY, ALA.

DEAR MR. A.: And what about the woman who had every intention of honoring her marriage contract, but after the vows have been said she finds herself yoked to an inconsiderate brute whose sole interest is in satisfying himself?

Should she "boot his worthless rear out" immediately and seek an annulment?

DEAR ABBY: Finally! Heartiest congratulations on your courage to tell it like it is. You said what most clergymen don't care to go into these days. A gal, 18, and her 22-year-old boyfriend decided to live together, but their parents objected, saying if they wanted to live together they should get married first. (Aren't they stinkers?)

The young couple gave as an excuse that they didn't want to get married because their religion looked down on divorce, and you said loud and clear, "I know of no religion that looks down on divorce that also doesn't look down on fornication."

Abby, you have burst the bubble of widespread hypocrisy—that the young can eat its cake and have it, too.

Please print this and use my name.

SAMUEL HOFFMAN,
SUNRISE, FLA.

DEAR SAM: Before I accept any orchids, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am afraid you are rather parochial because there are religions that do not look down on fornication. Perhaps not in the United States, but there are some.

YVONNE L. IN NEW YORK

DEAR YVONNE: I didn't say there were none, I said I knew of none. But if you (or anyone else) does, I would appreciate the information.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (UPI) — Dave Zullo and Ron Van Sickle, who love books and know a good business opportunity when they see one, are trying keep an important but often overlooked part of Civil War history alive.

They own Butternut Press, one of a handful of small publishers across the nation that specialize in reprinting regimental histories, memoirs and personal narratives from the war.

Butternut's list of titles, which totals 21 and will probably reach 40 by year's end, does not include books by Bruce Catton, Shelby Foote or other authors of popular Civil War histories.

What it does include are books such as "Mosby's Men," a 1907 work by John H. Alexander, of Company A, 43rd Battalion, Virginia Cavalry ($22.50); or "Camp Life of a Confederate Boy of Batton's Brigade, Longstreet's Corps, C.S.A.," an 1883 volume of letters written by Lt. Richard Lewis to his mother.

"Some of these books are so scarce (in the original) they're just not available," Van Sickle said in a recent interview. "Some are so expensive the cost is prohibitive. The whole idea is to make these books available to people."

The books that Butternut reprints usually cost more than $125 in the original, Zullo said, and some fetch prices much higher.

Butternut's biggest seller to date has been "The Maryland Line In The Confederate States Army, 1861-1865," by Maj. W.W. Goldsboro, Second Batallion, Maryland Infantry, P.A.C.S. ($35).

Until recently, Butternut published only material dealing with Southern forces. But it is now selling books on the North under the rubric "Worthy Adversary Series."

Although they are newcomers to publishing, Zullo and Van Sickle are longtime students of the Civil War. After collecting war books for years they turned an avocation into a vocation by becoming dealers — Van Sickle in Michigan, Zullo in Maryland. They met often at trade shows, became friends and decided to go into business together.

In September 1981 they opened Zullo and Van Sickle Civil War Books, a Gaithersburg store specializing in rare and out-of-print books, maps, letters, and war-related memorabilia.

The bookselling business proved to be a success, and in February 1983 they launched Butternut. (Confederate soldiers whose homespun uniforms were dyed butternut brown were nicknamed butternuts).

Butternut has sold 4,200 books since its inception, enough to convince its owners that they're on the right track.

"We're doing better than I thought we would," Van Sickle said.

Butternut's customers are almost as varied as the estimated 40,000 to 60,000 books that have been written on the Civil War in the past 120 years.

"You go from the relic hunters to the scholars," Zullo said. "They're investors, scholars, readers, hoarders. Some buy both the reprint and the original."

Many customers have ancestors who fought in the war.

Zullo said Butternut's chief competitor is Morningside Bookshop, of Dayton, Ohio, owned by Bob Younger, a Missouri native who says he is distantly related to the Younger brothers, the 19th century outlaws.

Since starting the business in 1969, Younger has published 80 reprints, of which more than 100,000 copies have been sold. Unlike Butternut, Morningside has its own printing operation and publishes some original works on the war.

Morningside's most popular title is "High Tide at Gettysburg," by Glenn Tucker, which has sold 10,000 copies in hardcover and paperback.

Among the more esoteric titles he has reprinted, Younger said the most popular is "The Passing of the Armies," by Joshua Chamberlain, an account of the last nine days of the war published posthumously in 1915. It has been through three printings and has sold 1,000 copies. Younger considers it the finest "unknown book of the war."

There are more than 10 million silk farmers in China, says National Geographic. They produce more than half of the world's estimated 480,000 tons of cocoons each year. Japan is the largest consumer of silk.

Computer Graphics at Trial Open New Era of Evidence

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Damask arrived at the Bronx courthouse last week carrying the symbols of two eras of America trial techniques — a piece of chalk and a computer graphics video cassette.

Damask, a Queens College physics professor called to testify as an expert witness in a vehicular homicide case, had the chalk to draw blackboard diagrams — something witnesses have done for decades to help explain themselves.

He brought the video cassette in the hope the court would allow computer graphics to be admitted as evidence in a criminal trial for what legal experts said would be the first time.

Damask's testimony took almost the entire week at the manslaughter trial of 19-year-old Michael McHugh, accused of being drunk behind the wheel of his car when it crashed on a Bronx highway last year, killing four friends in the car.

Damask, being paid for his testimony by the defense, said the computer graphics — he called the videotape a "cartoon" several times — were his reconstruction of the accident. He also said the graphics, which he produced along with Arthur Paskin, another Queens College physics professor, showed McHugh could not have been the driver.

Lawrence Feitell, McHugh's attorney, argued that the graphics should be admitted because they were a type of map or chart, but with motion.

"Through the magic of the computer — er, through the science of the computer, we now have a visualization," Feitell said.

The debut of the computer simulation Wednesday afternoon marked the start of what might be a new era in trial tactics in America — and a lucrative new market for computer scientists.

The first part of this century was the era of courtroom oratory, when lawyers like Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan swayed juries with wit and eloquence.

Then came the era of demonstrative evidence, when Melvin Belli and F. Lee Bailey hauled photos and blackboards and scale models and even skeletons into court to let jurors see for themselves. "Don't say it, show it," was the law school maxim.

The McHugh trial is an important step toward an era of evidence dominated by technology. Damask said that as computer graphics became more common in court and as clients became willing to spend more for them, his relatively crude home-computer graphics would be replaced by animation as vivid as anything in a video arcade or movie special effects.

Frank Burke, the prosecutor in the McHugh case, objected to the introduction of the computer graphics as "not a fair and accurate depiction." But Judge John Collins overruled Burke and admitted the graphics into evidence.

"Every new development is entitled to its first day in court," the judge said. "A computer is not a gimmick, and a court should not be shy about its use when proper." In this case, he said, the graphic could help the jury understand the defense's case.

The tape, shown on a television set, depicted McHugh's car — two small dots of white light on the screen — inching through two curving white lines that represented the rain-slick roadway. It showed the car missing the curve, sliding harmlessly onto a grassy area next to the road and then turning back onto the roadway.

At that point the car struck a smaller white light representing a utility manhole left uncovered alongside the road. A final segment of the film, which resembled an instant reply on a TV football game, then showed the car spinning counterclockwise out of control and smashing into a concrete retaining wall.

The jurors stared intently at the screen, some leaning forward but none visibly reacting as Damask narrated. The only person who made no effort to watch the tape was McHugh, a slender, red-haired youth who remained slumped silently in his chair at the defense table.

Damask testified that from where McHugh was found by police with a broken arm and internal injuries, the laws of physics dictated that he must have been thrown clear of the spinning wreck from the passenger's seat. The driver of the car must have been killed, Damask insisted.

The introduction of computer evidence will add an element to the way lawyers handle expert witnesses. As the trial continues this week, for example, Burke's cross-examination will have to take into account not only the two professors' credentials as physicists but also their abilities as computer programmers.

Paul Rothstein, an evidence expert at Georgetown University Law Center, warned that jurors must be cautioned not to be unduly impressed by the "magic" of computers. "What you get from a computer is only as good as what you put into it," he said. "And there's a lot of chance for error in what you build into a computer simulation."

In the McHugh case, Burke is expected to recall Steve Coulon, a police accident investigator, as a rebuttal witness to Damask and the computer graphics. In earlier testimony, Coulon said the car had to have been traveling at more than 80 miles an hour. The computer graphics, however, were based on a speed of 45 mph, figured according to Damask's interpretation of physical evidence at the scene.

Such differences in programming, Rothstein said, are what juries will have to weigh when deciding whose simulation is closer to the truth.

Rothstein said computer simulations had previously been used in civil lawsuits, usually in product liability cases where machinery parts were analyzed to show how they would hold up to stress. He said he had never heard of them being used to reconstruct an accident for a jury, but he predicted they would soon be used by both sides in many cases.

"Computer materials are the wave of the future in evidence," he said.

A gag order issued by the judge early in the 6-week-old trial prohibits the lawyers from discussing the case. Damask is also covered by the gag order, but before he began his testimony last week he and Paskin described their work in detail.

Damask, a specialist in collision theory, and Paskin, an expert in metal strength and fractures, said they had analyzed 100 accidents in the 2½ years since they started advertising their services in the New York Law Journal. Many of their reports have prompted out-of-court settlements.

Ordinarily they charge $90 an hour, but in the McHugh case they spent perhaps 40 hours without charge in the hope that their work would persuade other courts to allow computer graphics and other lawyers to hire them. They predicted the cost of producing computer simulations of accidents would drop from several thousand dollars to several hundred.

When a case comes in, they ignore the statements of people involved and witnesses.

"We look at the debris and work backwards to see what happened," Damask said. "We reconstruct accidents on the basics of physics."

Once the speeds and masses and torgue and vectors are figured, Damask and his son Jay, a 16-year-old "computer bug," program the equations into their Apple II home computer. The result is an animation that shows what happened every hundredth of a second.

In one case involving a 9-year-old boy struck by car while riding his 20-inch bicycle, Damask needed to know how fast the bike was traveling. So he hired half a dozen neighborhood 9-year-olds at $2 apiece to race their 20-inch bikes up and down the street while he timed them. He came up with the statistics he needed, including the standard variation. "The kids loved it," he said.

In another case, a man claimed he had been in a crosswalk when a stopped truck suddenly lurched forward and ran over his leg. Damask had his wife and son heft an old truck bumper and run into him a number of times in the backyard. Each time he fell he measured the angle of the fall, and there was a variation of only 2-3 percent each time.

He fed it all into the computer, compared the results to the man's X-rays and found that instead of being hit, he must have stumbled and fallen under the wheel.

Copper Strike Has Strained The Patience of Residents

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

CLIFTON, Ariz. (AP) — For months, the prayer here and in the adjoining town of Morenci had been that, despite all, thetwo communities could somehow hold together.

But human endurance, like a violin string, can withstand only so many turns of the screw.

When the National Guard moved in with guns and helicopters last week in response to the latest eruption in a bitter strike, it was, to many, evidence that the endurance of Clifton and Morenci had at last been stretched too far.

"Everybody here seems to be armed," Sgt. Allen Schmidt of the Arizona state police said last Monday.

It had come to that.

Even after the militia began moving out at midweek, a peace of sorts restored, the incident remains as yet another nerve-fraying episode in a 10-month agony that still offers no sign of abating.

"Normal? What's normal?" says Jeff Drembly, a Clifton city official. "We'll never get back to what once was normal. It's too late."

The strike, which began July 1, was not the first against Phelps Dodge, the copper mining company that sustains the economy and the social vitality of Clifton and Morenci.

It was the first one, though, in which the company hired outside workers to replace the strikers; the first one in which strikers, as many as half of them, crossed the picket line and went back to work; the first time "scab" became a part of the local vocabulary.

All this was new to the people of the close-knit sister communities, and from the very start the middle ground vanished. Lifelong friends swore lifelong vengeance. Family members quit speaking. In the phrase of the Indians who once roamed this valley, blood was on the moon.

A month into the strike, the National Guard was summoned to restore peace —for the first time; last week's callup was the second.

As if it weren't enough that its social fabric was torn apart, a second cruelty visited Clifton on the afternoon of Oct. 1.

High water in the upper reaches of the San Francisco River triggered flood warning sirens in Clifton. The townspeople gathered on high ground. In silent horror, they watched a hissing, boiling torrent rip away the heart of their town.

"The strike, the flood, it's been a one-two punch that really knocked us to our knees," says Louis Montoya.

"The scars from the flood will heal," he said a few weeks ago, driving past a heap of silt that once was the city park, a heap of masonry that once was the city hall, a heap of steel that once was a bridge from which local kids caught catfish. "I'm sure the scars from the strike never will."

Montoya, who is 37, is the Clifton school superintendent. Thus he is not directly involved in the strike. Also, his home and family, unlike 300 others, was spared the ravages of the flood. So he can reflect on both tragedies with some detachment.

"Since before the turn of the century," he says, "the pattern has been for a kid to graduate from high school and take a job at Phelps Dodge, just like his father and his grandfather. Fewer than 30 percent went off to college.

"What has been utterly disrupted here is a safe, comfortable way of life, and I can't begin to tell you how ugly it has become.

"For instance," he says, "last Christmas, as they always do, our third-graders drew names to exchange token gifts. One little girl opened hers and the card said, 'Merry Christmas, scab.' Third-graders, mind you.

"At least," he says, his voice dripping sarcasm, "the number going off to college has doubled. They just want to get away from here.

"Our career guidance sessions for high school seniors no longer deal with career guidance. They end up in strike talk. The kids feel compelled to choose sides, sever friendships. Add to that the emotional trauma left over from the flood, all the dislocations, and you can imagine what we've been going through."

A safe, comfortable way of life no longer, but it still offers exquisite reasons for people to want to live here.

Over the eons, the San Francisco sculpted this canyon in southeastern Arizona's high desert. Its steep, redrock walls are as beautiful as they are remote; the sign leaving Morenci says, "Next gas 95 miles."

Coronado plodded up the canyon in his search for the seven cities of gold, unaware of the riches in copper beneath his horse's feet — assuming, of course, a good price for copper, which is not now the case, which brought on the cutbacks, which brought on the strike.

Depressed copper prices forced Phelps Dodge to shut down the mine for six months back in April, 1982. To get the mine reopened, the company pared the workforce from 3,300 to 2,000. Those who survived that layoff took pay cuts as stiff as 9 percent. Rather than accept further cutbacks, in cost-of-living provisions and wages for newly hired workers, the miners struck.

Coronado, by the way, couldn't make it up that trail today.

From PHELPS CHEVROLET
By Mike Outlaw

BATTERY CARE TIPS

Nobody really appreciates the importance of his car's battery until it goes dead. It has a tremendous job to do. But it's most important function is to provide the massive, momentary power demanded when starting the engine. No juice-no start. You can insure your battery's output by taking a few, simple maintenance steps.

At least once a month, check the fluid level in each battery cell and add water as needed. Do not overfill. Regularly wipe traces of dirt, moisture and corrosion from the battery top, tray, hold-down clamps and connections. At least once a year, carefully clean the unit with a mild, lukewarm solution of baking soda and water. Rinse off with clear, cold water and wipe dry. Make sure that the terminal connections are tight.

About twice a year ask your serviceman to check the battery voltage or the specific gravity of the acid-water solution. Investing a few extra minutes, on a regular basis, will mean extra miles of dependable performance.

ARTIFACTS . . . from the "Modern Greece" include fierce looking Bowie knives, sometimes called "Yankee killers" resting on a surgeon's kit, and at bottom, a porthole cover. A large number of the knives, an integral part of the Confederate's equipment early in the war, were recovered from the "Modern Greece." Surgeon's kits were among medical items exported to the Confederacy from England.

Exhibition Of Blockade Runner Artifacts On View In Greenville

FINISHING TOUCHES . . . Bruce Terrell (left) and Chris Fonvielle put finishing touches on one of several exhibit cases containing the blockade runner exhibition. The two, along with five other ECU graduate students were responsible for planning and constructing the exhibiton. An exhibition entitled "Running the Blockade into North Carolina, 1861-1865" opened May 1 at the historic Robert Lee Humber House, 117 W. Fifth St. in Greenville. North Carolina's Eastern Office of the Division of Archives and History, which opened in Greenville on Oct. 1, 1983, is sponsoring the exhibition — the local office's first — in cooperation with East Carolina University's Department of History. The public is invited and there is no charge for admission.

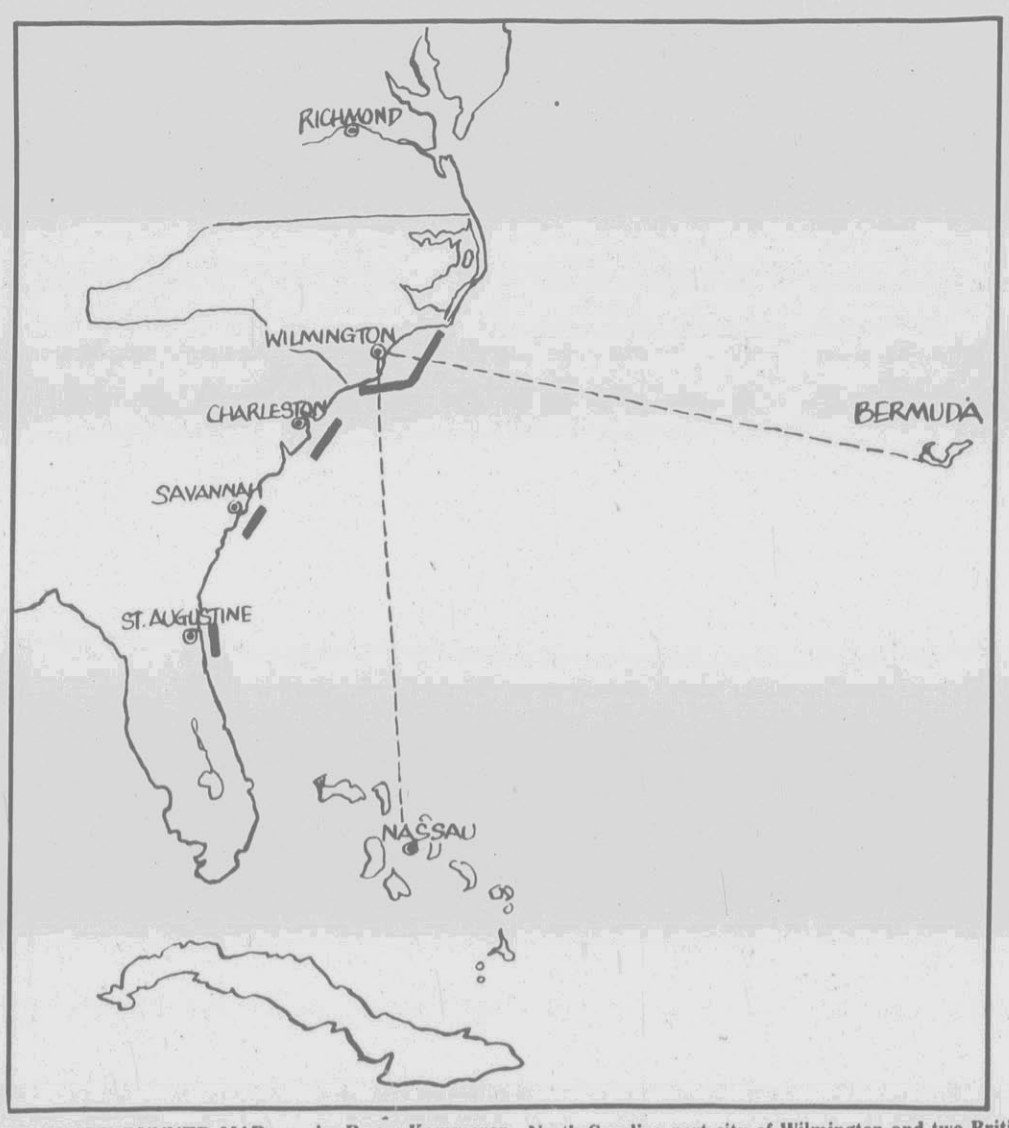
Historical Background

On April 19, 1861, a few days after the fall of Fort Sumter, President Abraham Lincoln declared a blockade of the Southern states from South Carolina to Texas. A week later, Lincoln extended the blockade to include Virginia and North Carolina.

The South did not have the machinery, skilled labor or raw materials needed to make war. As a result, it had to import its arms, ammunition and medical supplies from abroad, and export its cotton in return.

Shortly after the outbreak of the war, Queen Victoria issued a Proclamation of Neutrality, "enjoining on all loyal subjects of the British Crown an attitude of strict neutrality, and solemnly admonishing them under pain of Her Majesty's displeasure to respect the Federal blockade." But the proclamation was virtually ignored. High profits were waiting to be made from blockade running.

Blockade runners shipped cargoes directly to and from Europe early in the war, but profits were not sufficient enough to justily the hazards of the long voyage across the Atlantic; therefore, a trans-shipment plan was implemented. Larger and slower vessels carried cargoes from Europe to trans-shipment points, such as Bermuda, Nassau, Havana and Halifax. From those points, smaller but faster blockade runners sped the contraband cargoes through the blockade to such Confederate ports as Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah and St. Augustine.



BLOCKADE RUNNER MAP . . . by Roger Kammerer illustrates the most frequently sailed routes between the North Carolina port city of Wilmington and two British possessions, Bermuda and Nassau.

The favorite port of call for blockade runners was Wilmington. The North Carolina coastal town was located less than 700 miles west of Bermuda, and only 570 miles north of Nassau. Blockade runners had to enter the Cape Fear River through either New Inlet or Old Inlet, and travel 28 miles to reach Wilmington. A direct railroad connection with Richmond allowed war material unloaded at Wilmington to be distributed throughout the South.

Captains of blockade runners could select their crews from the pick of the British seafaring community. The pay was good and sailors were ready and willing to join. The captain himself might make enough to retire after six months of blockade running. Commanders of Union warships also acquired fortunes by capturing blockade runners and sharing in the "prize money." When a blockade runner was captured, the Union government sold her cargo to the highest bidder. The proceeds were divided among the captain, officers and crew of the vessel that had captured her.

Blockade runners frequently changed their names and flags, and their captains operated under various aliases. The hulls, deckhouses, stacks and masts were painted dull gray to make them inconspicuous. Experienced captains reduced their vessels' silhouettes as much as they could; many even insisted that the watch on deck wear white clothing. A single dark-clothed figure on the bridge of a blockade runner was enough to betray her. Most blockade runners, however, elected to run the blockade under the cover of darkness. Silence was crucial, and captains took special precautions to prevent lights from alerting Union warships.

The Union Navy had its own problems. In the early days of the war, the blockade amounted to little more than wishful thinking. The Federals admitted that they were ill-equipped to police 3,500 miles of Rebel coast. The South's shoreline had 189 rivers and a maze of bays, inlets, shifting sands and dangerous shoals. And the Union Navy faced the difficult task of setting up supply bases in enemy territory.

In 1863, about 80 percent of all attempts to penetrate the blockade were successful. That figure dropped only slightly the following year. The weakness of the system was distribution; Southern merchants got rich from blockade running during the war, but many of the cargoes never reached the Confederate armies.

The Union never stopped the Confederates from running the blockade. But as the Southern ports began falling to the enemy, the flow of goods into the Confederacy began to dry up. In January, 1865, in the largest amphibious operation of the war, Union forces took Fort Fisher. With Wilmington sealed off, the South had no more major ports. Blockade running collapsed and shortly thereafter, so did the Confederate States of America.

The Exhibition

Seven graduate students, enrolled in field and laboratory studies in Museum and Historic Site Development (a course with ECU's Public History Program) are responsible for planning and constructing the exhibition. Dr. John Tilley, the ECU history professor teaching the course, closely supervised and assisted the students in all activities associated with the exhibition's development this semester, from inception to culmination. Before joining the Department of History at ECU as assistant professor this fall, Dr. Tilley worked as a curator at the Mariner's Museum in Newport News, Va.

Why an exhibition on blockade running?

"The Civil War is a popular subject in this part of the state," Dr. Tilley explained. "This exhibition will permit the public to become acquainted with blockade running through North Carolina during that war. Blockade running is a distinctively southern aspect of American maritime history."

ECU'S Public History Program

According to Dr. Tilley, ECU's public history program attempts to combine a traditional education in history with a professional training program to aid students in finding interesting and creative jobs upon graduation.

"Shortly, ECU's Department of History is going to institute a bachelor of science degree in public history that will train students for employment in museums, historic sites and archives," Dr. Tilley said. "The combination of this 'hands on' training with East Carolina's other fine history courses will qualify our students for many interesting jobs."

The Eastern Office

Since opening in Greenville the Eastern Office Division of Archives and History has been informing the public of the many programs of the Division of Archives and History based in Raleigh — especially those concerning the preservation of historically or architecturally significant structures.

The Eastern Office's three-person staff, headed by Drucilla (Dru) G. Haley, assists citizens in taking advantage of services provided by the staff in Raleigh.

"We see this exhibition of blockade running as an excellent opportunity to work on a cooperative basis with East Carolina University's graduate program in public history," Haley said. "And, it offers the local community an opportunity to enjoy an aspect of Eastern North Carolina's colorful history."

According to Haley, the following institutions have loaned artifacts and illustrations to the exhibition: the Mariner's Museum, Newport News, Va.; New Hanover County Museum, Wilmington; and the North Carolina Division of Archives and History. ECU students responsible for setting up the exhibition are: Mindy Carr, Jim Cox, Chris Fonvielle, Barbara Howlett, Stuart Morgan, Beth Scott and Bruce Terrell.

The exhibition will be open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, until Oct. 1.

End Of A Blockade Runner

On the morning of June 27, 1862, the British-owned blockade runner Modern Greece tried to slip past Union gunboats blockading Wilmington. The Federal ships discovered the Modern Greece, however, and chased her until she ran aground. The Modern Greece's crew escaped and the guns of Fort Fisher drove off the Union vessels.

The Confederates then fired solid shot into the hull of the Modern Greece to sink her so they could salvage the cargo. Confederate troops saved a battery of Whitworth cannon, several hundred rifles, a large quantity of liquor and some hardware and clothing.

A hundred years later, in 1962, U.S. Navy divers assisted the North Carolina Division of Archives and History in recovering artifacts from the Modern Greece for exhibit at Fort Fisher Visitors' Center. Eating utensils, woodworking tools, medical equipment, leather shoes, Bowie knives, Enfield rifles, Whitworth artillery projectiles, tons of lead and tin ingots and thousands of bullets were salvaged.

The artifacts from the wreck of the Modern Greece testify to the wide variety of products imported into the Confederacy by blockade runners during the Civil War.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

Taking a trip this summer? Perhaps the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles and/or the World's Fair in New Orleans are on your traveling agenda. Two new books available at Sheppard Memorial Library could help you.

"Fodor's Los Angeles and Nearby Attractions 1984" is one guidebook designed to help you plan your trip. Local facts: business hours, local holidays, time zones and customs are included. An essay section covers the cultural, historical and regional events in order to provide adequate background information. Most helpful is the geographic breakdown of the area: detailed descriptions, addresses, directions and phone numbers for hotels, restaurants, tours, museums, historical sites. Of special interest is the insert on the Olympic Games to be held in Los Angeles between July 28 and August 12.

A similar guidebook is "Fodor's New Orleans." This book is filled with facts and descriptions of events which will prepare anyone for travel to what the authors call the "least American" of any city in the United States. 1984 promises to be another exciting year in New Orleans as it hosts the Lousiana World Exposition — the city's second World's Fair. In addition to the routine tourist information, this guide includes fascinating essays on such places and events as the Mississippi River, Mardi Gras and other festivals, as well as the unique food, music and architecture.

If you are Los Angeles- or New Orleans-bound, the travel books by Fodor will prove to be valuable aids and are ready for check-out at the library.

Lescaze Exhibition

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The work of Swiss born architect William Lescaze (1896-1969) is the subject of a retrospective exhibition, "The Rise of Modern Design in America," to be shown at the National Academy of Design from May 31 to Sept. 2.

About 200 objects that trace Lescaze's development as a designer in the modern style are being shown, including photographs, drawings, and models.

The academy is located at 1083 Fifth Avenue. Opening hours are noon-5 p.m. Wednesdays through Sundays, and noon-8 p.m. Tuesdays.

American Addiction

Popcorn, long a national addiction, is this year's nouvelle cuisine — "a rage, a fever, a gustatory obsession." It's the favorite of the people and it's the favorite of the famous.

Like who? "Ronald Reagan dotes on the billowy clusters at bedtime, serves bowlfuls drenched in melted butter to his friends at White House screenings," Town & Country reports in the May issue. "Former Vice President Mondale's zeal is intemperate. Mondale's mother understands. She sends 'Fritz' a packet of popcorn every year for his birthday.

"Thank the swarm of new fast-food popcorn shops with their jazzy, anything-goes flavor for this mania."

Popcorn shops have been around since 1929, when the first of some 270, 44-state Karmel Korn Shoppes opened in Rock Island, Ill. Simple popcorn. Buttered, salted, cheesed or carmeled. But in 1978, a retired candy company executive, Charlie Bird, at his wife's request, made chocolate popcorn.

The rest, as they say, is history. Charlie opened a popcorn store in Dallas called The Corn Popper, featuring chocolate. Now there are 32 flavors in coast-to-coast Corn Popper shops. In 1982, actor Jack Klugman opened Jack's Corn Crib on a New York City movie row, the first of many franchised Crib shops that are going international with 50 wild flavors ranging from watermelon to sour cream and onion popcorn.

"On the road doing 'The Odd Couple' with Tony Randall," says Klugman, "I ate gallons of my favorite, popcorn with garlic powder and cheese, that I made in an electric popper I carried with me. Of course, I had no friends, because with the garlic nobody would come near me."

Health food enthusiasts are high on popcorn as an easily digested, low-calorie, fibrous, whole grain cereal. The American Cancer Society recommends it as non-carcinogenic. "The Society's good-for-you list," Town & Country notes, "also includes sitting in the shade, having a good laugh, and making money."

And popcorn does, indeed, make money. In a good year, 600 million pounds worth is sold from the Corn Belt states, one-sixth earmarked for export to about 75 other countries. About 300 million pounds a year are sold in food stores. People at sporting events, circuses and saloons love it. Movie-goers gobble another 50 million pounds. Side items such as electic poppers, popping oil and finely milled popcorn salt add to the industry's profits.

Everybody knows about Cracker Jack and its role in the song favorite, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

Family fortunes have been made through popcorn through the generations. Movie operators sold $300 million worth last year. And the Town & Country report recalls a famous actress this way: "The last gleeful word on popcorn was pronounced by Mae West, who once moaned happily: 'Too much of a good thing can be wonderful.'"

An American revolutionary army, commanded by Gen. Richard Montgomery, a former British officer, captured Montreal Nov. 12, 1775. Montgomery's force then proceeded to Quebec City, where it joined another American army led by Benedict Arnold. They laid siege to the city, but Montgomery was killed. The siege was broken the following spring by the Royal Navy.

Exhibition Of British Art Opening At NCMA June 9

By SHARON BROOM
N. C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — "Gilbert & George/Richard Long," an exhibition of works by three of the most influential artists working in Great Britain today, will be shown June 9-Sept. 9 at the North Carolina Museum of Art. The exhibition is being presented in conjunction with the British-American Festival, which celebrates the 400th anniversary of the colonization of North Carolina.

The artist duo simply known as Gilbert and George will be represented by four large-scale photographic murals, up to 10 by 10 feet in size, which they call "photo-pieces." Each photo-piece displays an assortment of images blown up to life-size or larger, divided into separate framed rectangles that are assembled into a grid to create the whole image. Sections of the black and white photographs are then handcolored in deliberately artificial hues.

These works, from the 1982 series "Modern Faith," address the spiritual crisis of the late 20th century, what the artists consider man's loss of traditional belief and his creation of new and sometimes dubious substitutes. Nature, youth, food, dogmatism, good and evil are examined through the eyes of the artists, who appear frequently in the photos as detached observers.

Long will be represented by "Little Tujunga Canyon Stone Circle," a circular sculpture 18 feet in diameter that rests directly on the floor. The sculpture is created by arranging dozens of stones that the artist collected in the Little Tujunga Canyon in southern California, during one of his many treks through landscapes the world over.

Long rarranges nature's artifacts into circles, rectangles or lines, making the viewer aware of the human presence that alters nature and the human mind that creates order. His stone pieces might almost be termed "worshipful," as they remind the viewer of man's links to the earth.

The work of Gilbert and George has been presented in London, Amsterdam, Dusseldorf and Paris, and most recently appeared in a major retrospective at the Baltimore Museum of Art. Richard Long's work has been presented in numerous solo exhibitions worldwide, including shows at the National Gallery of Canada in Ottawa, the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam and the National Gallery in Edinburgh.

USS North Carolina Season Begins June 1

WILMINGTON — North Carolina's internationally recognized Sound and Light spectacular, "The Immortal Showboat," opens its season Friday, June 1 at the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial in Wilmington. The outdoor drama will continue nightly at 9 p.m. through Labor Day, Sep. 3.

The drama has attracted more than a quarter milion persons to the site of the World War II Memorial since its initial performance in 1965. The show is 70 minutes of sound and light telling the story of the mighty super-dreadnought from the time of her keel laying in 1937 to the end of hostilities in the Pacific in 1945.

Wartime action is depicted at such locations as the East Solomon Sea, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa. The performance includes simulated air and submarine attacks on the battleship and shore bombardment by her huge 16-inch guns.

Over 500 lights and speakers give depth and realism to the story of the USS North Carolina as she fought through every major naval engagement of the war in the Pacific. Special effects include a waterline explosion simulating a torpedo hit and the crackling fire of the close range anti-aircraft guns.

Admission to the outdoor naval drama is $2 for adults, $1 for children 6 through 11, and free for those 5 and younger.

Ramar Returns To The Zoo

ASHEBORO — North Carolina Zoological Park officials are preparing for the arrival of Ramar, the zoo's 400-pound lowland gorilla, and his 150-pound female companion, Hope.

But zoo visitors may ahve to wait until the African Pavilion opens in late sumemr before welcoming the popular pair.

Ramar and Hope are scheduled to arrive in Asheboro during May in a C119 transport plane used by the N. C. Forest Resources for firefighting.

Forestry officials offerd to help move the animnals when the zoo's request to the Air National Guard was not approved. Forest Resources and the zoo are both divisions of the N. C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. The zoo is paying for use of the forestry aircraft.

Ramar and Hope have been on exhibit at Metrozoo in Miami while their new quarters were being built. They will occupy a half-acre indoor-outdoor natural habitat, the largest exhibit in the 42,00-square-foot African Pavilion.

Ramar was a favorite with visitors from the time he was purchased by the zoo in 1974 until he left for the Philadelphia Zoo for a breeding loan in 1978. He was moved to Metrozoo in 1981, where Hope joined him last summer as a breeding companion. She is on permanent loan to the N. C. Zoological Park from the National Institutes of Health.

North Carolina zookeeper William Parker flew to Miami on May 1 to begin assuming care of the gorillas. Zoo director Robert L. Fry, general curator Les Scholbert, staff veterinarian Dr. Michale Loomis, Parker and several other zookeepers will accompany the gorillas back to Asheboro.

The animals will remain in isolation for the first month so their health can be monitored and they can adjust to their new quarters, Fry said.

The French sculptor Auguste Rodin, whose works include "The Thinker," was born in Paris in 1840.

Rock Music Being Featured In Festival

SPORTS NEW JACKET — Capitol Records young rocker O'Bryan sports his new $5,000 custom-made jacket on an upcoming segment of Don Cornelius' Soul Train, where he will perform his new single. The program airs at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, May 26 over WNCT-TV, Channel 9, Greenville.

DURHAM — There may be 40 years of history between them, but both Sir Walter Raleigh and contemporary British musicians will bring critics and artists from both sides of the Atlantic to Durham on June 15 for "The Transatlantic Rebound: A Conference on Rock Music in Britain and America."

The conference and a rock concert are part of the British American Festival, June 2-16, in Durham. The festival commemorates the arrival 400 years ago of explorers on the coast of North Carolina, sponsored by Sir Walter and other English backers of early exploration. The festival will highlight the heritage, including rock music, that Britian and America share.

Rock 'n roll is one of the most complex crosscurrents in 20th century British and American popular music. Music critics Robert Palmer of the New York Times, Robert Christgau of the Village Voice, and Nelson George of Billboard and several of their British colleagues will join with artists and representatives of the recording industry to discuss the roots, new directions and influences of British and American rock music. (Details of the rock concert that will follow the conference will be announced later).

The conference will explore rock as artistic expression, marketable commodity and cultural document. Topics to be discussed by a panel include: The Beatles and the Rolling Stones: 20 Years After; Black Roots, White Fruits: Race and Popular Music in Britain and America; Hope I Die Before I Get Old: Rock as Youth Culture; The Influence of Media on Popular Music in Britain and America; and New Music in 1984: Where It's Going.

In addition to the American critics, other conference participants include British sociologist Simon Frith, author of "Sound Effects: Youth, Leisure and the Politics of Rock 'n Roll," and Charlie Gillett, also from Britain, who is director of Oval Records and author of "The Sound of the City" and "Making Tracks: The Story of Atlantic Records." Other participants will be announced as soon as they are confirmed.

The British American Festival includes two weeks of performing arts, sports, folklife, food, films, exhibitions and symposia celebrating 400 years of shared cultural heritage. It is sponsored by the N. C. Department of Cultural Resources, the British Council and the Smithsonian Institution.

GALLE GLASS

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Emile Galle was born in France in 1846 and spent most of the 58 years of his life creating works of art in glass.

A selection of Galle's transformations of nature into glass will be seen at the special exhibition "Emile Galle: Dreams Into Glass," at the Corning Museum of Glass April 28-Oct. 21.

FOREST AMBROSIA — As the flowers of the native dwarf azalea reaches it blossoming peak, the tasty watery fruit that quickly follows the flower begins to form. A seedless fruit, in taste it is a bit tangy with a slight suggestion of the sweetness of the flower. More plentiful in years when substantial rainfall occurs at flowering time, the exotic honeysuckle fruit ranges in size from thumbnail to ones as large as hen eggs. Some prefer eating the wild May delicacy with a light touch of salt. Before eating, the fruit should be washed well in cold water. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

City Student Orchestras Concert Set

The culmination of the year-long study of string music by students in the Greenville City Schools will be a grand-scale performance at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Wright Auditorium. The concert is free and is open to the public.

All 200 students in the Greenville City orchestra program will be a part of the Fourth Annual all-City Orchestra Concert. The young performers are being directed by JoAnn Moore and Lori Lloyd.

This annual event allows the public to have an opportunity to see what students of various ages have achieved during the current school year. This culminating concert, however, is not the only opportunity students have had to perform. Each student has performed at least twice since Christmas — once for the Orchestra Boosters general meeting; and on another occasion for the workshop conducted by visiting clinician Jacquelyn Dillon on May 4.

Selections for the Wednesday evening concert will include a wide range of music from folk song arrangments to symphonic music.

The orchestras programs in the Greenville City schools receives support from the recently formed Orchestra Boosters Association. Richard Lucht of the East Carolina University School of Music faculty is president of the boosters. He is assisted by Arch Manning, Pat Carter, Sheri Carter, and Jerry Harris. The group currently numbers about 90 members.

ECU Concert Choir To Tour The West Coast

ECU News Bureau

The 39-member East Carolina University Concert Choir will travel to the west coast and back during May on a concert tour of 13 states.

The ensemble, accompanied by conductor Brett Watson of the ECU School of Music faculty, will perform at churches as far west as California and as far north as Oregon.

Their concert tour program includes a variety of sacred and secular choral music: a Gregorian chant; a motet, "Ave Christe" by des Prez; a double choir motet by Victoria, sung from opposing aisles; a triple choral setting of a psalm by Schutz, with organ and brass; two contemporary hymns; Samuel Barber's "Twelfth Night;" and several English and American folk songs and spirituals.

The choir, ECU's touring chorus, tours several states each spring. This year is the choir's second tour to the west coast. In previous seasons, the choir has performed at the Washington Cathedral and at St. Patrick's Cathedral and Rockefeller Plaza in New York. The choir's rendition of traditional and contemporary Christmas music has been recorded on an album, "The East Carolina Choir Sings at Christmas."

Dr. Watson is an ECU alumnus with advanced degrees from the Eastman School of Music and the University of Southern California. He was twice selected one of 24 choral directors form North America, Europe and Asia to conduct at the International Bach Academy in Stuttgart, West Germany.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I intend to refinish the wooden floor in our dining room. I expect to rent a floor sander, the kind with a large drum at the bottom of it. I noticed at a dealer's store that the sanders for rent have attachments to take care of the dust that is produced while the sanding is going on, yet I read recently a lot of dust is generated when a floor sander is used. Don't the dust bags work?

A. — They work, but only up to a point. Without a bag, your house would be a mess. With it, a lot of vacuuming will still be necessary, since not all of the dust goes into the bag. If possible, close off the dining room so that any dust produced doesn't go through the entire house. Some dining rooms cannot be closed off because there is an open passageway rather than a door. In that event, try hanging an old sheet or something similar over the opening to catch the dust. Once you finish sanding, go over the entire room — floor, walls and ceiling — with a vacuum cleaner and one or more of its attachments.

Q. — We need a lot of remodeling done on our house. Even though it is going to cost us more than $10,000, we have run into trouble trying to get a contractor to start work at once. All of them say it will be a month or more before they can even begin the project. Is this normal?

A. — Yes. Contractors have to schedule jobs ahead of time or else find themselves paying workers for idle days. Your best bet is to try to get one or more individuals who are working for themselves. This is a calculated risk, however, because some such individuals are not skilled craftsmen. Try to hire somebody who is recommended and who carries the necessary insurance.

Q. — I will soon be installing wall paneling in our attic. The studs are already up and so are the furring strips. I will be using 4-by-8 sheets of hardboard, the regular kind, not the exterior type. I am concerned about making the cutouts in the paneling for electrical outlets and other receptacles. Is there some special way of doing this so that the cuts in the paneling will be accurately lined up with the electrical outlets?

A. — It is presumed all the electrical work will be completed before you install the paneling. In that case, chalk the edges of each outlet. When you get to a part of the wall where the paneling will cover an outlet, press the hardboard against the wall firmly, then remove it. The chalk marks will then be on the back of the paneling at the precise point where the cut must be made. Drill holes into the four corners of the outline, then use a keyhole saw or something similar to make the cutout. Just be careful and you can get a result as good as if the job had been done by a professional.

Q. — I have used varnish remover several times in the past with good results. This time I have a problem. The piece of furniture I wish to refinish has some carved moulding on it. I usually scrape off the old varnish after applying the remover, but I am afraid this would damage the carvings. Could I use steel wool instead of a scraper?

A. — Yes. Steel wool often will work in a situation of this kind. But an even better bet is to use an old, clean toothbrush. Scrub the carvings lightly and carefully. Don't try to do everything at once. Take off a little at a time. Sometimes the varnish will come off quickly, sometimes it will take repeated efforts. Everything depends on how many coats of varnish and-or stain are on the piece of furniture.

Q. — What is pipe "dope?" I heard a plumber use the term in conversation with another plumber.

A. — It's a slang expression for pipe joint compound, which you smear on threads before joining together two pieces of pipe.

(Leaky faucets, clogged drains, pipe leaks, noisy pipes and condensation dripping are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questons of general interests will be answered in the column.)

Passive Contemporary Design Features Sunken Living Room

by Jerry Bishop

Wood adds its warmth to the contemporary features of the Tipton. Generous use of southern glass doors and windows, an air lock entry, skylights and a living room fireplace reduce energy needs. R-26 insulation is shown for floors and sloping ceilings. Decking rims the front of the home and gives access through sliding glass doors to a bedroom/den area and living room. The dining room lies up several steps from the living room and is separated from it by a half wall.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

In the early part of the 18th century, Swedish settlers in the United States were busy cutting trees, hauling them to clearings and chinking together the logs to build weathertight cabins.

Whereas a handful of log cabins might have been constructed in the New World before then, this was the first large-scale production of this type of housing. Quite incidentally, the "World Book Encyclopedia" says six United States presidents — Jackson, Polk, Fillmore, Buchanan, Garfield and Lincoln — were born in log cabins.

Although the traditional concept of log homes envisions hardy backwoodsmen full of self-reliance, the contemporary log home builder is more likely to be a middle-income urban family looking for a log house in suburbia as its primary residence. But there need be no tree-cutting as the initial step in the construction, whether the home owner is doing the work himself or having it done by professionals. If the family is making it a do-it-yourself project, it's a lot easier than conventional construction because you can pick your home from a catalog and have pre-cut logs delivered to the building site and because the logs make up both the interior and the exterior walls.

Kits range from ungraded random-length logs, which require the builder to cut corner notches and openings for windows, doors, gable ends and rafters, to complete packages of pre-cut and finished logs that are numbered and coded to fit in specific spots in the walls. Complete kits often include all windows, doors, trim, pre-cut rafters, roofings materials and the electrical, plumbing and mechanical systems. Local codes determine whether you are permitted to handle the electrical, plumbing and mechanical work.

A study by the National Bureau of Standards for the Department of Housing and Urban Development shows that the thermal mass of log walls provides excellent energy-conservation benefits for both heating and cooling.

Log home manufacturers are located in every part of the country. They sell directly to the consumer or have dealers in regional and local areas. Most manufacturers supply the detailed building plans required to get a building permit.

Log houses now represent a $1 billion segment of housing sales and are home to more than 1 million Americans.

You could have a problem finding a bank that will lend you money for a log home, but your local log house dealer often has a list of banks that provide such financing. Occasionally, you can find a lending institution that will arrange a conventional mortgage. The building plans must be shown to the lender, with the mortgage commitment based on the home being built to specifications.

You can get a free copy of a booklet called "Is a Log Home for Me?" by writing to the Log Homes Council, National Association of Home Builders, 15th and M Streets, N. W., Washington, DC 20005.

(Dot-it-yourselfers will find much valuable data in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Q. Can I water my tomatoes and melons by burying a tile or piece of pipe (or plastic jug or coffee cann, etc.) with a hole in the bottom and pouring the water in it? (B.T., Barber)

A. There is nothing wrong with this method of watering. It makes efficient use of water and keeps foliage dry. For large plantings, however, many containers are needed and installing them can be quite a project.

Q. A neighbor told me that a saucer of beer could be used as a trap for slugs. Is this true? I have always had trouble with slugs eating my strawberries. (D.M., Mararettsville)

A. You can partially control slugs if you place shallow dishes of beer in the vicinity of infested plants. Some species will crawl into the beer and drown. Adding flour makes the beer a ticker, more effective trap.

Q. Is it all right to divide and reset a clump of irises now while they are blooming? Should I leave the rhizome above ground? (A.P., Mount Pleasant)

A. Irises can be moved at any convenient time, but many growers prefer to do it a month or six weeks after the blooming period. Plant rhizomes in well-drained sunny beds. In light, sandy soil the rhizomes may be covered with about an inch of soil, but in heavy soils the tops of the rhizomes should be left exposed.

Q. The leaves of my clematis are turning yellow. The leaves turned yellow last year and I thought the plants would die. It is away from buildings, and no other plants encroach upon it. I mulch the plant with pine needles, and in the fall I put lime in the soil. The plant looks as if it were undernourished. Do you have any suggestions as to what the problem might be? (J.M., Hickory)

A. Have the soil tested. A clematis grows best when the soil pH is about 6.0, and liming every year could have raised the pH considerably above this, making some nutrients unavailable.

Neighbors Come To Aid Of 'Hard-Luck' Man

GEORGETOWN, S.C. (AP) — Hugh Thomas' hard luck story is tough, but it differs from many bitter stories because it has a happy ending.

The Pawleys Island resident recently lost most of his home to fire and was forced to live in one room. In the bitter winter weather that followed, he lost his legs to frostbite and spent almost four months in the hospital.

The story began some time ago in the bedroom of Thomas' woodframe house. He's not sure about the time, but he remembers vividly the events which took place.

"I was going in the bedroom and I turned the light switch on," he says. "And I think it shorted out. I went to bed and wind started blowing really hard. The next thing I know is that I saw fire in the loft.

"I got up and went to my cousins' house for help, but by the time I got help, the fire was out of control."

The fire destroyed the inside of the house, leaving the remainder charred.

"I lost all of my clothes and with the fire and water used trying to put the fire out, my furniture was a total loss," he says.

After the fire, Thomas lived in one room which hadn't been too badly burned.

"After the fire, I had heat but it was not enough. During the cold weather in December, I got frostbite," he said. "Both of my feet started swelling and to get the swelling down, I put them in a tub of boiling water. When the swelling didn't go down, I went straight to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Charleston because I didn't have any money.

"The doctors told me I had poor blood circulation and frostbite. So, they had to amputate both of my legs just below my knees. I didn't have much of a choice in the matter — it was either my legs or me — gangrene had set in."

Next came therapy. Thomas was given artifical legs, along with a wheelchair. After extensive therapy, he learned to walk again.

Although he was away from his family and friends for almost four months, he was not forgotten.

Without his knowledge, Thomas' house was being completely remodeled by a group of local people. Spearheaded by Bud Langston, concerned friends and neighbors gave their time, money and materials to give Thomas a home to return to when he was released from the hospital.

"We knew Hugh and we heard about his accident after he was in the hospital," Langston said. "He didn't have a dime and we just wanted to try to make his house liveable. It was a community project."

Langston said donations, in the form of cash, materials and labor, came not only from Pawleys Island, but from Georgetown, Andrews, Conway, Myrtle Beach and other areas.

"It was a labor of love. It looked like a Chinese fire drill with whites and blacks working together, cutting down bushes and cleaning the yard," Langston added.

The house was leveled and the inside was completely redone. Curtains were hung, new furniture brought in and the pantry shelves stocked with food. Carpet, vinyl, a stove and a refrigerator were among the many items donated to make life more comfortable for Thomas.

For the first time since Thomas had lived in the house, bathroom facilities were installed. Electricians, plumbers, school students and people from all walks of life gave their free time to complete the project on time.

On April 14, Thomas was released from the hospital. More than 50 friends and neighbors greeted a surprised Thomas at the door to his rebuilt home.

"It was like a brand new house, it looked so nice," Thomas said. "I went through every room in the house. People had given me furniture and clothes."

Completely settled in, Thomas is now getting used to his new home, his new legs, and his newly found friends — the people who still see to his needs.

"I can't thank them enough," he said. "No words can measure how I feel."

JONQUILS, NOT GRASS — Instead of a lawn of green grass, this abandoned house in the town of Robersonville is a May field of fragant white jonquils in bloom. Each year the extent of the spring flowers spread a few feet, unhampered by a gardeners' hand to curb the underground growth of bulbs.

Like many of his colleagues, Brown is dapper, glib and flashy. His gesturing hands are bright with jewelry, his hair is coiffured and his long nails gleam with gloss.

Brown clearly has own ideas about fashion, but he also has a somewhat unique outlook on Florida politics.

The 42-year-old Tampa native sees the Legislature from ground level: When he isn't busy peddling influence, Brown is busy shining shoes.

"It's the family trade," he explained. "My father was the best shoeshine man in Tampa."

In keeping with his dual role, Brown has two business cards. One identifies him as an executive consultant while the other — under a logo for the Shoe Doctor Co. — describes him as "the professional's professional."

"Most people will hit a lick and a promise, but I take pride in my work," Brown said. "That's what makes me world renowned."

Brown frequents the state Capitol during business hours, a familiar figure at the plaza-level Florida Information Center and in the fourth-floor passageway between House and Senate chambers.

Although he occasionally will spruce up a legislator's loafers, Brown said he prefers to do business "by appointment only." He charges $3 a customer at the Capitol, but increases the price to $5 elsewhere.

"I don't need much business," he said. "I want quality, not quantity. I just do this as a hobby."

Brown declared himself a lobbyist last year, after a lifetime spent watching movers and shakers from the sidelines. It was time to get in on the action, he decided.

"To beat the system, you've got to be part of the system," Brown said. "That's why I'm part of the system now. But I'm not just part of the system. I am the system."

Florida laws allow any member of the public to register as a lobbyist. The only requirement is that the lobbyist file a semi-annual financial statement. Out of more than 1,000 people registered as lobbyists, 118 represent only themselves.

So far, Brown represents only himself, choosing to learn the ropes gradually by way of a self-styled "lobbying internship." For pointers, he keeps a sharp eye on the likes of Senate veteran Warren Henderson, R-Venice.

He also has followed the big-ticket bills of this year's session, taking particular note of education, interstate banking and wetlands protection.

But Brown refuses to voice an opinion on the issues, saying he is content for now to avoid taking sides.

"I'm just building up good will," he said. "You know, that's a tangible asset."

Of all the lawmakers, Henderson is Brown's particular favorite. The senator's recent decision not to seek another term, amid reports of racial slurs and drunken behavior, was "a miscarriage of justice," Brown said.

"People really gave him a bad time," Brown said. "They blew it all out of proportion."

Brown said he admires Henderson as someone deft at wielding power and privilege. His goal is to become equally important "so that when I speak — just like when E.F. Hutton speaks — everybody listens."

Money figures prominently in Brown's conversation. He seems preoccupied with the subject, but his attitude varies from disinterest to avarice.

"Money's my game," he said. "I've always had it but I never knew how to handle it. I'm not even worried about money, I'm just happy every day."

In the best tradition of homespun philosophy, Brown denies that money is an ingredient of success.

"Success to me is to be able to do what I want to do, where I want to do it, when I want to do it," Brown said. "I don't know how much money I have because I deal in cash. Only my accountant knows for sure."

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	3 ◇	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇.

Bridge players are usually not shrinking violets. However, no one has yet come forward to claim to be the defender on this hand from an international team trials almost 20 years ago.

At seven of the eight tables in the event, North-South reached a contract of four hearts, which went down one when declarer had to lose three trump tricks in addition to the ace of clubs. At the eighth table, however, the bidding went as shown. We do not know what caused North to opt for a takeout double of one diamond – it certainly wasn't the quality of his spade suit. South made up for his partner's optimism with one of the most conservative leaps to game we have ever seen.

West got off to the unfortunate lead of the ace of diamonds. Now there is a legitimate chance for declarer to make his contract. Since he must lose a club and a trump trick, he cannot afford more than one heart loser. The only way that can happen is if the defender who holds the ace of clubs has a blank ace or king of hearts.

Therefore, declarer should ruff the opening lead, cash the two high trumps and then then exit with the king of clubs. As soon as West wins the ace of clubs, he is end played. He can take his high trump and king of hearts, but then he must lead a minor suit card and give declarer an entry to the table for all the discards he needs.

However, declarer was mesmerized by the two high diamonds in dummy and tried to steal an entry to the board at trick two by leading a low club. West flew in with the ace of clubs, cashed the king of hearts and put declarer back in hand with the king of clubs.

Declarer now cashed the ace-king of trumps, but West countered beautifully by unblocking the queen and jack. Although declarer's trump loser had suddenly vanished, he could not make his contract because he had no way to avoid losing two more heart tricks in addition to the two tricks he had already lost.

Study Finds Problems Encountered By Children Of Black Middle-Class

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — They live as outcasts in different cultures, fighting racism, loneliness and jealousy. They are squeezed by conflicting pressures to succeed and to fail.

They are middle-class black children, and more than a third of them are depressed, according to a recent Howard University study.

"These children are forced to live in three different cultures," said Lawrence E. Gary, director of Howard's Institute for Urban Affairs and Research. "They have to try to fit in with traditional blacks, their own group of middle-class blacks, and whites. That can be extremely stressful."

"Some of the blacks from poorer families look at the middle-class blacks and see blacks who often talk, dress and act more like the white kids in the class than the black kids," he said.

"What is worse," he said, "these kids realize many of the kids from the middle class have things they can never hope to get, and will be able to accomplish things they probably won't be able to, no matter how hard they try."

Gary said middle-class blacks frequently are accused by poor black people of "selling out," which puts pressure on them not to succeed.

For example, Gary said, the university researchers saw one case in which a black child thought to be illiterate by his teachers went to church each Sunday and read the Bible to Sunday school classes.

While middle-class black students feel pressure from less fortunate blacks not to be overachievers, they are under intense pressure from their parents to succeed, the researchers said.

"The parents have often fought and scraped to make it to the middle class," said McGhee, "and they are determined the children will accomplish as much or more than they did."

Gary said even when middle-class black children work hard to succeed, they sometimes are not given the chance. He said many teachers exert a subtle racism against the children.

"They just don't challenge them as they would white children," he said. "They just assume that they have little educational background and act accordingly."

In Montgomery, it's hard to believe the pressures of the black middle class could penetrate the Everetts' home in Woodcrest Estates. Both parents are accomplished professionals and have provided a secure environment for their three school-age children.

Charles Everett is principal of Houston Hills Junior High School; his wife, Alfreda, teaches mathematics at Prattville Elementary.

Since the family replaced its plastic wading pool with a real swimming pool a few summers ago, the one-story brick house and neatly trimmed yard behind it have echoed with the laughter of not only their children, but the rest of the neighborhood's as well.

Still, the Everetts acknowledge they sometimes feel pressures that middle-class white families may not feel, and often put pressure on their children that middle-class white parents may not.

"Sure I pressure my kids," said Everett, whose father and grandfather were school principals. "I see on one side the pressure of being expected to get a good education, and on the other the sentence of suffering the continued effects of slavery.

"I know how much getting an education meant to my ancestors, what they had to sacrifice to get it and to allow us to have it. I don't want my children to forget that."

Both Mrs. Everett and her husband said they felt the same pressure from their parents to achieve.

Mrs. Everett said she felt so much pressure while attending Alabama State University 'that she jumped into a pool and sank rather than fail a required swimming course. "They had to pull me out of the water with a hook," she recalled, "but eventually I made a B in the course."

"I was the second one in my family to get a college education, and I knew how much my parents were sacrificing to give me the opportunity," she said. "I never would have taken them home anything other than an A or a B, and I never did."

THE WATER'S WARM, BUT THE AIR IS COOL — An unidentified surfer at the public beach at Fort Fisher stayed in the water for only short periods of time recently. Although encased in a wet suit, the young man and others surfing at the time agreed that the ocean water in May is still a little on the chilly side for surfing. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Notes On Roanoke Research

By PALMER HILL
N.C. Department of Cultural Resources

Archaeologists are used to solving mysteries, but in this case the clues were ridiculously few: some snippets of information from a journal and three letters carved on a tree on Roanoke Island to tell them where the first English settlement in America had been.

In his recent book, "Archaeology and the Enigma of Fort Raleigh," archaeologist J.C. Harrington describes the work he did between 1947 and 1965, allowing him to confirm the location of the fortress erected by the first English colonists. Harrington, who was working under the auspices of the National Park Service, was unable to find the location of the settler's homes. However his efforts provide the background for current archaeological explorations on Roanoke Island.

Harrington's book has just been published by the Historical Publications Section of the Department of Cultural Resources, in conjunction with America's 400th Anniversary Committee. The 400th Committee is charged with coordinating the three-year commemoration of the Roanoke Voyages of 1584-1587, which brought the first English settlers of America to the Outer Banks.

As part of the commemoration, the 400th Committee and Historical Publications Section have worked together to publish a number of books and pamphlets for everyone from scholars to schoolchildren.

The settlers who came to Roanoke Island in 1585 erected Fort Raleigh and some houses before returning to England a year later. The group who arrived in 1587, headed by John White, used these dwellings also. Governor White returned to England for supplies. When he finally got back to Roanoke Island three years later, the settlers had disappeared.

As well as confirming the site of the fortress, Harrington made some other important contributions. In 1959 construction workers came across fragments of clay and brick in an area which Harrington later identified as an "outwork" of Fort Raleigh, but not the location of the 1585 settlement site. By 1965 Harrington's work had shown that the colonists had very likely made these bricks themselves, although they must have soon discovered that the local earth was unsuitable.

In "Archaeology and the Enigma of Fort Raleigh" Harrington describes these discoveries, and offers suggestions for further attempts to find the 1585 settlement site.

The National Park Service is continuing the search, using its own funds as well as a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation to the American Quadricentennial Corporation, the private, fundraising arm of the 400th.

Harrington's book, a 36-page paperback, is illustrated with photographs of artifacts found during the author's digs, as well as plans of the fort and the "outwork." The book is available for $2 a copy, plus $1 for postage and handling, from the Department of Cultural Resources, Historical Publications Section (N), 109 East Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, (919) 733-7442. It may be obtained at the North Carolina Museum of History Gift Shop in Raleigh, the Elizabeth II State Historic Site in Manteo, some other state historic sites and in some commercial bookstores.

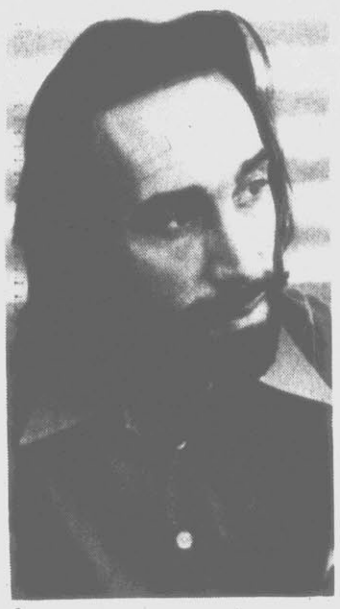
Poet To Give Readings



FATHER DAVID CHORLTON

Father David (David Chorlton) of the Grayrobes, whose parish is the Sonora Desert, will meet with the Greenville Writers' Club at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Playwrights' Office in the basement of the Humber House, 517 E. Fifth Street.

He will also give two public readings of his poetry on Wednesday. The first reading will be at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, at noon. Those attending are encouraged to bring bag lunches, with refreshments to be served by the musuem staff.

The second reading will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Humber House.

Father David, of Phoenix, Arizona, will be in Greenville two days, Tuesday and Wednesday. The outward forms of Chorlton's prayers and supplications are embodied in drawings, paintings and poems. Chorlton's wife, Roberta, is an accomplished violinist. They share a house with five cats name after German composers and philosophers, and an undetermined number of birds named after famous Hangarians — among them, Esterhazy.

Chorlton, a native of Austria, has lived in the U.S. for six years, and his writing and art work are becoming widely known. "European Scenes," a collection of his watercolors, is featured in the spring, 1984 issue of Georgia Review. Some of his poetry will apper in a forthcoming edition of Tar River Poetry.

Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, based in Greenville, is sponsoring the appearance of the Arizonans. The readings are free and open to the public. Parking for the Humber House is the parking lot in the corner of West 5th and Evans Streets.

Competition

Preliminary details on the Third Annual Playwright Competition and a poetry competition, both sponsored by the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, Inc. (PFNC) have been announced.

Entries are now being accepted for one act and full length plays by North Carolina writers. A cash prize and a workshop production in April 1985 will be given the winning entry.

Deadline for entry is Sept. 15, 1984. Manuscripts typed in standard format and securely bound are to be mailed to: Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, Inc., P. O. Box 646, Greenville, N. C., 27835. A return self-addressed stamped envelope is to be enclosed.

This year marks the first sponsorship by PFNC of the First Annual Poetry Chapbook Competition of poems by North Carolina wrtiers. Entries are to be a maximum of 20 pages, and may include poems that have previously been individually published, provided copyright has been returned to the poet or permission by publishers is given. A cash prize, personal copies, publication of the chapbook and a public reading in April, 1985 is offered. Deadline for submission is Sept. 15, 1984.

Poems are to be sent to the same address as for plays.

Writers Club To Meet On Tuesday

A special meeting of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the office of the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina in the basement of the Humber House, 517 West 5th Street.

Father David Chorlton of the Grayrobes of the Sonora Desert of Arizona, an Austrian born poet, will be the guest at this meeting.

The club normally meets on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month. Anyone interested in creative writing is welcome to attend the meetings, for which there is no charge.

Kinston Park Day

KINSTON — The sixth annual "A Day in the Park" is being held in Kinston on Saturday. Most activities will be held at the Bill Fay Park. A variety of entertainment and competitive events are scheduled — including a bicycle race, baseball and softball games, golf and tennis tournaments, train rides for children, martial arts demonstrations and other athletic type events.

There will also be performances by community and bluegrass bands, arts and crafts shows and sales.

One of the main events will be the BB&T Kinston Road Race which begins at 8:30 a.m. at the park. Individual sections of the race are the 6.2 mile run, a 3 mile run and a 1 mile run.

Details for various areas of the "Day in the Park" can be obtained by calling: for the golf tournament, David Proctor, 527-5220; for the tennis tournament, B. J. Bass, 527-9053; for arts and crafts, Pat Faulkner, 527-9053.

Applications for the BB&T race can be obtained at any Branch Banking and Trust Office or from the Kinston Recreation and Parks Department. For more general information, call 527-9053.

Coming Events At Mariners Museum

BEAUFORT — Two events are scheduled during the coming week at Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner Street, Beaufort. The museum is downtown near the waterfront.

The "First English Expedition (1584) to Carolina, 400th Anniversary Ceremony" is the topic of the Thursday at Lunchtime lecture to be given at the museum by Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Barbour of Morehead City. They will talk about the April 1984 celebration in Plymouth, England.

On Friday, the Ship to Shackleford field trip will leave the museum at 9:30 a.m., with a return time of 4:30 p.m. Fee for the trip is $15. Reservations are required. For reservations, call the museum at 728-7317.

Sun Fun Festival

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — The Grand Strand's 33rd Annual Sun Fun Festival will be held in Myrtle Beach four days, June 1-4. Contests will be held for many activities, such as sandcastle building, water treading, baitcasting, shag dancing. For the athletes, there will be beach runs, sailing regattas, volleyball and fishing competition.

Neuse Park Show

SEVEN SPRINGS — The Second Annual Arts and Crafts Show at the Cliffs of the Neuse State Park outside Seven Springs will be held beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday, May 20.

The fair is sponsored by the Wayne County Agricultural Extension Service. It is free and open to the public.

SPRING INSECTS

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Many lawn-damaging insects spend the winter buried deep in the soil only to emerge again in the early spring, says Dr. Jo-Ann Reed, an entomologist at Spectrum Home & Garden Products.

With the arrival of warmer weather, she says, these insects move toward the surface to begin feeding on the roots and leaves of turf grass. If left untreated, some of these pests can actually destroy a lawn.

To prevent lawn damage, she recommends early applications of a multi-purpose granular or liquid spray product which is effective against insects throughout the year. Granular insecticide can be applied uniformly by using a fertilizer spreader, while liquid products can be applied using a hose-end sprayer.

RUM CENTER

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — In Colonial times, New England was one of the rum capitals of the world.

New Englanders imported molasses from the West Indies to make rum and by 1750 there were 63 distilleries in Massachusetts. The city of Newport, R.I., alone had 30 distilleries.

According to Heublein Inc., those early Americans consumed some 12 million gallons of rum annually, or about 3.4 gallons per capita. The figure compares with today's consumption of 2.1 gallons per capita of all distilled spirits.

Cuzco was the capital and holy city of the Inca empire in South America. It also has a rich Spanish colonial heritage. It was founded by the Incas in 1200 and conquered by the Spaniards in 1533.

Asner Cools Activism, Returns To TV

HOLLYWOOD — Ed Asner sits in his modest office across the street from mammoth Universal Studios in Burbank, one foot propped up on a chair, contemplating his prospects for a return to television.

Since "Lou Grant" was yanked by CBS in 1982, Asner's source of fame has been largely unfortunate: no shrinking violet, he has been vocal in his role as president of the Screen Actors Guild, and, in Hollywood at least, he is now almost as well known as a union activist as he is as an actor.

His tenure as a union boss should not be permitted to overshadow his reputation as one of the most impressive actors doing television, and on May 15, he's back on the tube in "Anatomy of an Illness."

Asner plays Norman Cousins, a celebrated writer who used good humor and guts to conquer an illness that his doctors said should have been fatal.

"It's a part I badly wanted to play," says Asner. "Comedy still means a lot to me after all my years with 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show,' but this is inspirational stuff. It's entertaining, but it also shows the power of the human spirit to conquer adversity."

"Anatomy of an Illness" will probably be Asner's last outing for a while playing a journalist on TV. Right now he's waiting for the word from ABC on whether he'll be on parade in the fall alongside Eileen Brennan in "Off the Rack," a sitcom about the New York garment industry. It's as far removed from "Lou Grant" as "Scooby-Doo" is from "Wall $treet Week."

After "Anatomy," Asner will be seen in the May 29 CBS all-star celebration of the SAG's 50th anniversary, a fitting moment for him to start winding down his daytime union commitments.

Asner first got into trouble in his long-running union role for supporting a $25,000 donation to the homeless in El Salvador, and although the money had nothing to do with the SAG and his own contribution was strictly personal, he clashed head-on with the Guild's old guard, led by Charlton Heston.

Asner categorizes his highly publicized collision with Heston as a relic from "my more volatile days," and concedes that he might have been wiser to keep quiet about his private charity work.

Jersey's Video Jumping

By Ethlie Ann Vare

Will New Jersey become the Hollywood of music video? Probably not, but there's been a lot of taping there within the past year. Pat Benatar's "Love Is a Battlefield" was done in Clinton; Bruce Springsteen's "Atlantic City" was shot in that city; Billy Idol's "Rebel Yell" was taped in Passaic; Ashford and Simpson just finished a song in Jersey City; A Flock of Seagulls is working in Colts Neck; and Cyndi Lauper went on location to Morristown, Ledgewood and Wharton.

Rick Springfield's "Love Somebody" video is getting better reviews than the movie that spawned it, "Hard to Hold." But the handsome singer-actor doesn't have to worry about a few bad notices; the film's sound track has already gone gold. In a magazine interview,, Springfield said he never expected to grow up to be a sex symbol. "I never thought I was good-looking at all," admits the former Dr. Noah Drake of "General Hospital." "I was one of the last guys in my class to lose my virginity, and I had to join a band to do it, just like everybody else."

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I am a great fan of Joan Collins. Is "Dynasty" her first television series? Any truth to the rumors she might leave the series to star in her own show? I think she looks great for her age. How old is she? — Mary T. Ford

To Mary: Joan has appeared in more than 50 films, and countless television shows, but "Dynasty" is her first TV series. She recently inked a contract for three more years of "Dynasty," so don't look for TV's Super Bitch to leave Denver anytime soon. Collins was born in London, England on May 23, and admits to being 50. If you saw her in the December issue of Playboy, you know age means nothing — although a good cameraman always helps. Joan is a Gemini, and a great believer in astrology; would you believe she consults an astrologer every time she meets a man she might be interested in? It's true.

DEAR MICHELE: Please settle a $2 bet. Name the actress who played Maggie McGregor in the miniseries "Master of the Game." My friend says Jane Seymour. I say no way. Who is right? — Esther Roccio

To Esther: Are you sure you don't want to put a little more money on this wager? Your friend is out $2. The role of Margaret McGregor starred Cherie Lunghi, not Jane Seymour.

DEAR MICHELE: Did Roger Moore star as one of the brothers on the old Western series "The Big Valley"? — Linda N. Wagner

To Linda: No, Moore's boots never set foot on Barclay land. The dashing British import has starred in the series, "The Alaskans," "Maverick," "The Saint" and "The Persuaders." The latter two series were produced in England.

DEAR MICHELE: What was the name of the young actress who played in the John Wayne film "True Grit"? Is she still in pictures? — Charles Smith

To Charles: Actress Kim Darby appeared in this film which garnered Wayne an Oscar for Best Actor. Miss Darby starred in several Westerns in the late 1960s and early '70s. Her film career is at a virtual standstill.

DEAR MICHELE: My roommate claims that William Hurt and Jeff Bridges are half-brothers. I disagree. Can you please settle this dispute? — Mary Sue Schwartz

To Mary Sue: The only relationship between these two is the brotherhood of actors. Lloyd Bridges has been married to actress Dorothy Simpson since 1938, and their offspring are sons Beau (born 1941), Jeff (born 1949) and a daughter, Lucinda (born 1953).

Stephanie Wyatt Actor Resigns

After a decade as Stephanie Wyatt on "Search for Tomorrow," Marie Cheatham has resigned from the NBC daytime soap. She intends to devote time to producing two TV movies. One is a documentary, "From the Wagon to the Moon," a portrait of Texans who have lived from the time of covered wagons to see man walk on the moon. The other is a two-hour docudrama of Commanche chief Quana Parker. Miss Cheatham was born of a Cherokee mother and Choctaw father.

Nevertheless, the character of Stephanie Wyatt continues on "Search for Tomorrow." Louise Shaffer, who played Rae Woodard for five years on "Ryan's Hope," stepped into Miss Cheatham's high heels to continue the character.

Man's best friend

Russell Todd, who stars in the remake of "Where the Boys Are," credits his barber for his starring role. The barber arranged an interview for Todd with another of his customers, producer Allan Carr.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

James Garner ("The Rockford Files") has won the coveted starring role in "Space," the 13-hour miniseries based on James Michener's best-selling novel. Garner will play Norman Grant, an American Navy Commander, who after World War II, becomes a vital political force in America's space program. Scheduled to air on CBS in early 1985, the miniseries will be filming on location in Houston, Washington, D.C., Cape Canaveral, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and various sites in England.

On Sunday night, as a special Mother's Day presentation, NBC airs "Family Secrets," a dramatic examination of the relationship between mothers and daughters, which often develops into a love-hate situation. Stefanie Powers, who co-created the story and will be making her debut as a producer, stars with Maureen Stapleton and Melissa Gilbert.

Cloris Leachman had to wear 30 pounds of padding under her clothing for her role as Ernie Kovacs' mother in ABC's "Ernie Kovacs: Between the Laughter," airing Sunday, May 14. The film, starring Jeff Goldblum as Kovacs, is the untold, tragic story of Kovacs' custody battle. If you remember Ernie Kovacs, you may want to see this film.

"Fame" Music Maker Will Produce New Weekly Show

Charles Koppelman, who produced all the music for "Fame" and has produced records for Barbra Streisand, Dolly Parton and others, will produce a half-hour show, "This Week's Music," featuring songs that are popular from week to week.

Livingston Taylor, brother of James Taylor, will be the host of the show, which will be filmed in Philadelphia. One guest artist will appear on each show which will feature lots of dancing kids.

"We're not locked in to any particular format," Koppelman says. "The music that's popular from week to week will dictate our programming."

Jane joins Burt

Jane Alexander has joined the cast of "City Heat," a feature film starring Clint Eastwood and Burt Reynolds. She has been cast as the secretary to a private eye (Reynolds).

Garner Not Profit Happy

By Tim Boxer

Don't expect any smiles from James Garner even though his old series "The Rockford Files" is a hit all over again in syndication. The star is engaged in a heated controversy with Universal, the show's producer, over his share of the profits from that syndication.

"There's nothing like death to make your career come alive," says Lisa Hartman. Last year when her character Ciji was killed off on "Knots Landing," it was believed Miss Hartman was leaving the series. But no, she came back this year, in the new role of Cathy Geary. Now Miss Hartman is in Europe making a movie called "The Bride." "I'm going to die again — I freeze to death in Czechoslovakia."

Neil Diamond, who was recently inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame along with Henry Mancini, Richard Adler, George David Weiss and others, says he's working on a television special. He's planning to do it for CBS next fall.

'Cheers' to add role; Kim Fields sings it

By David Gabriel

ADDITION: There will be a new character at the bar in "Cheers" when the show comes back in the fall. Les Charles, executive producer and writer of the series, says that "the third year is a good time to add a character. We have to find somebody we like, though."

Shelley Long

The series ended the season with a cliffhanger: Diane (Shelley Long) walked off her job as a waitress and out of the life of her boyfriend, Sam (Ted Danson). This twist in the plot is designed to torture us all summer with the question of whether the two lovebirds will reconcile.

Since Miss Long's contract has been renewed, you can be sure she will return. The only question is how she will make her re-entry.

PERSONAL PREFERENCE: George Lindsey has been on television for 20 years. He started on "The Andy Griffith Show" and for the last 15 years has been on "Hee Haw." "Griffith was better," he says. "It paid more."

Kim Fields

"Hee Haw" may not pay more but it gives him plenty of time to do other things. He joins the cast of country characters for two weeks twice a year, in June and October, to tape 13 episodes each time. Besides dancing and singing he is given such lines as "I'm from Alabama. I got off the bus in New York and picked two bags of snow. I thought it was cotton."

STICK WITH IT: After five years as Tootie on NBC's "The Facts of Life," Kim Fields says she's ready to do more, though she still wants to stay with "Facts." She's no fool.

Fifteen-year-old Miss Fields is going to pursue her singing. She sang on her series two years ago and during an appearance on "The John Davidson Show." Last month she released a single, "Dear Michael," a female version of a song Michael Jackson recorded some years ago.

Second leg of the Triple Crown

"The biggest problem when we do races is bad weather," says Chet Forte, director of ABC's broadcast of the Preakness Stakes from Pimlico Race Course in Baltimore this Saturday afternoon. "I always pray for good weather. Bad weather throws everything off.

"It's especially bad at the Preakness. If the weather's bad, they'll paddock the horses inside. That means we've got to move all our equipment. And they usually don't decide that until about an hour before the race."

Still, Forte, producer Chuck Howard, and the standard announcing quartet of Howard Cosell, Bill Hartack, Jim McKay and Jack Whitaker would rather broadcast the Preakness than the Kentucky Derby any day. There's no confusion over which of the 20 horses to follow with the three isolated cameras because the field is considerably smaller.

"The Derby is a nit-picker's delight," Forte says. "It's the most difficult to produce. The Preakness is much easier. All the stories are right there."

So are ABC's cameras — all 18 of them. They were never better than in 1980, Forte's favorite Preakness. That's when Codex got away with mugging Genuine Risk. ABC had it for all the world to see, but the Pimlico stewards were wearing blinders. They chose to believe a photographer. To this day, Forte thinks the stewards blew it.

Yet this is essentially a two-camera race: one wide shot and one tight shot. If ABC tampers with that formula, racing aficionados will scream bloody murder. All those cameras will also produce countless replays, but Forte promises that unless it's worth it, he won't show one.

Forte's employer is certainly a network of its word. After the ratings downers provided by Monday Night Football and the Winter Olympics, many advertisers wanted their money back. They started getting it beginning April 15 via two extra commercial minutes during USFL telecasts. This standard procedure is called a "make good."

ABC thinks it's been making good all along. "We added those two minutes at the beginning of the season," says an ABC spokeswoman. "It has nothing to do with the Winter Olympics or Monday Night Football." But other network and advertising sources confirmed the "make good." "Are you kidding?" asks one network source. "Do you think there are that many advertisers who want time on USFL games?" Absolutely not.

Sunday, May 13.

Tournament of Champions Tennis Tournament, ABC. The final of this $500,000 affair from Forest Hills, where they used to play the U.S. Open. Now this is it for Forest Hills. Maybe McEnroe will play Connors and make it worthwhile.

NBA Playoff, CBS. Game 7 of the Eastern Conference semifinal or Game 1 of the conference final. At press time, the announcers weren't decided, but if this is Sunday and there's only one game, it must be Dick Stockton and Tom Heinsohn.

Ringside and SportsWorld, NBC. First comes James "Hard Rock" Green vs. Mark Kaylor in a 10-round middleweight fight. Then it's heavyweights James "Bonecrusher" Smith against Frank Bruno for 10 rounds. Marv Albert and Ferdie Pacheco get to go to London's Wembley Arena for this. The fights should only be one-eighth as menacing as the nicknames.

Saturday, May 19.

Baseball Game of the Week, NBC. California Angels at New York Yankees or Houston Astros at Chicago Cubs. See Reggie return to Yankee Stadium! See him try to stick it to George Steinbrenner by hitting a mammoth home run!

Happy Mother's Day, Mother

By Nancy Reagan

The First Lady and her mother today

Nancy, 5, and Loyal Davis, 32, in 1926

ASK THEM YOURSELF

SCHNEIDER: BLOND AMBITION

John Schneider, one of the resident hunks on the corn-pone CBS hit series The Dukes of Hazzard, has no delusions of grandeur. Unlike other celebrities, who view their stardom as divine right, Schneider sees little connection between talent and success. "If I had been 5′ 2″ with brown hair," says the 6′ 4″ towhead, "and if I were the greatest actor in the world, I would not have landed the part." Tell that to Herve Villechaize.

Rich and famous Jacqueline Bisset, who will turn 40 come September, is not down in the dumps about getting older. "I'm quite comfortable not being 25," she insists. In the face of the big four-zero, Bisset has made several decisions about performing, producing, and walking down the aisle. As to acting, quality has become more important than quantity.

"I used to do two or three films a year, but now I make more demands on myself. I've already played a lot of different characters, and it gets more difficult not to repeat myself." As for producing, a task she undertook for Rich and Famous, don't expect to see Bisset's name as producer float by on the credits again anytime soon. "It was very tough; people's attitudes toward me changed." Resting up between Under the Volcano, with Albert Finney, and HBO's Forbidden, Bisset was in residence at her country cottage, which Alexander Gudonov often visits. But their pas de deux won't lead to the altar. "The quality of a relationship is slightly higher when there's no obligation," says Bisset. "It's humiliating to be taken for granted."

BISSET: HITTING 40 IS NO REASON TO HIT THE DEEP

Regal bearing notwithstanding, Katharine Hepburn is not much for ceremonies. Despite her record four Oscar wins, she has only attended the Academy Awards once, and then it was to present a special citation to producer Lawrence Weingarten. Now, guess who may be coming to the Cannes Film Festival at the end of May? The elusive Kate. That's provided her new movie, The Ultimate Solution of Grace Quigley, co-starring Nick Nolte, is being shown. "I'll take Kate by the hand and put her on the Concorde," says the film's producer, Yoram Globus. "I already asked her in person — not on the phone even. And she didn't say 'no.' So right now, it's 100 percent sure — almost." All the same, Yoram, maybe you'd better hold off on booking the suite.

HEPBURN: CANNES SHE MAKE CANNES?

Two Dallas alums, good guy John Beck (whose character, Mark, is marked for death) and bad girl Mary Crosby (a.k.a. Kristin, who attempted to dispatch J.R. to that big oil rig in the sky), will join forces to film a new NBC pilot tagged Crazy Dan Gatlin. Any similarities to the Clint Eastwood film Dirty Harry and its successful sequels are strictly intentional.

Jane Fonda did not exactly doll up for her role in The Dollmaker, airing tomorrow on ABC. To portray a big, clumsy hillbilly, the workout woman put on 20 pounds ("I'm not afraid of being ugly on film," she says) and stayed on a farm in the South with a couple introduced to her by Dolly Parton. Using husband Tom Hayden's last name during the shooting, Jane managed to blend in with locals as she learned to milk cows, churn butter and chop wood. To keep her twang intact, Fonda refused to grant interviews during the shooting, having "promised Dolly that I would really work on my accent." Husband Tom says she stayed in character even when calling home. "Jane would say, 'Aah've been baking bread. An' how yew-all?'"

recording star

Years ago I gave a concert in Chicago. That night, Mayor Richard Daley was supposed to have dinner with the king of Norway, and he didn't show up because he was listening to me sing. The next day, at a press conference, Daley was asked to explain his absence. He said — tongue-in-cheek — "because I was with another royal person, the Polish Prince."

LISA WHELCHEL

star of TV's The Facts of Life

Television sometimes seems risque — do you agree? — N.C., Saginaw, Mich.

I think that occasionally the real "facts of life" play too much a part of the story lines. For example, I objected to one of our episodes in which Blair and her steady consummate their relationship. Young girls compose a large part of our audience, and they look up to Blair and the show's other girls. I don't believe in premarital sex, and I don't want to condone it.

Happy Mother's Day, Mother

By Nancy Reagan

Michael Evans/White House Photographer

A mother's pride: (clockwise from lower r.) Nancy Reagan, Ronald, Maureen, Michael (with son Cameron), Colleen, Patti, Ron Jr.

They broke the mold after they made my mother. If I could be half the woman she is, I'd be happy. I think that anybody who has ever known Edith Luckett Davis would agree with me; she is an absolutely unique woman. She has a delicious, wicked, wonderful sense of humor, but she also has a fierce loyalty to her family. Heaven forbid that anybody should ever say or do anything against them. That person would hear about it in no uncertain terms; the happy-go-lucky, storytelling "Lucky," as she's been called all her life, would disappear, and the offender would know very quickly where he stood. She has never been one to hold back her thoughts or opinions.

Lucky was the last of nine children. She grew up in Washington, D.C., where her father worked. But she was born in Petersburg, Va., because her mother refused to give birth to a "damned Yankee," and so returned to her native Petersburg to have her children. Lucky's parents didn't have much money, and with nine children, everyone went to work early. My mother began her career on the stage at 14. Her brother, Joe, ran a theater and gave her her first job. One of the wonderful stories about her involves the singer Chauncey Alcott. He was to perform in Washington with his sister as his accompanist. She became sick, however, and they had to get a replacement in a hurry. My Uncle Joe grabbed Mother by the hand and took her in to see Mr. Alcott. He said, "Do you play the piano, Miss Luckett?" My mother answered, "Oh, yes." She didn't, of course, but she was hired. That day she went out and bought a toy piano and practiced "My Wild Irish Rose" all night. The next evening, at the opening, no one was the wiser. She went on to appear with many of the theater world greats, including Walter Huston.

Shortly after I was born, she and my natural father were divorced, and several years elapsed before she remarried. During those years, I lived with my aunt and uncle in Bethesda, Md., and saw my mother when she came to town with a play or when I was able to stay with her over a period of time in New York. How I used to look forward to those visits! Sometimes when I was in New York I saw her on the stage. I took those plays very seriously. In one role, the character mother played was treated unkindly, and when I went backstage, I refused to talk to any of the other actors because I thought they had been mean to her. She had to take me aside and say: "Nancy, it's all just make-believe. They're not really mean to me, they're my friends and it's just playacting."

To me there was a glamour about my mother's life on the stage, but my favorite times were when I could be with her away from the theater. And she felt the same way — perhaps even more so.

I have her diary that she kept when she went to Europe with friends and met Loyal Davis, a Chicago neurosurgeon. Each entry ended with "How I miss my baby," or "How I wish my baby were here." I can't read it now without my heart filling up. I'm sure any mother can understand.

When my mother and Loyal Davis married — he legally adopted me at 14 — we moved to Chicago, and at last my mother and I were able to live together again. I walked to school every morning, and I think almost everybody I passed on the street knew her. She was very active in community life there. Whether it was a doorman, a cab driver, a policeman, somebody walking to work — whoever — they all knew her. She had the ability to get along with people of every age and calling.

She gave up her career when she married my father, but her schedule was soon filled with new interests. She helped organize the gift shop at Passavant Hospital where my father worked. She was involved in so many charities that I can't begin to remember them all. She did quite a bit of radio work. As a matter of fact, she was the only woman in the city to appear on Amos 'n' Andy during its early broadcast days when it originated from Chicago. She headed up the Community Chest drive; she worked for the church — so very many things.

She had a great many good, close friends, and she was always extremely thoughtful of them. She knew their families, their joys and their troubles. She never missed a birthday, or an anniversary, never missed being there when people needed her. I heard recently from a couple in Florida — he practiced medicine with my father — who said that they still receive birthday cards from my mother every year. The only problem is she's gotten the dates mixed up, so his card arrives on his wife's birthday and hers arrives on his. Apparently this has been going on for years, and it has become one of their treasured traditions.

If anyone was sick in a friend's family, my mother would tell that person to come to the hospital for a checkup with my father. Then she'd take care of the sick individual until he or she got better. She'd wear herself out at Christmastime, seeing that all the residents, interns and nurses at the hospital were remembered. She has always been a very outgoing, generous, loving woman. But it was her marvelous, marvelous sense of humor that really made her special. Even if she got mad at somebody, she could follow it up with humor and take the edge off the anger.

As I said before, family loyalty was very important to her, as it was to my father. I suspect that trait was handed down to me, too. I'm sure there were things I may have done when I was growing up that she wasn't particularly crazy about, but she felt that it was up to her to tell me in private — never in public. When I began dating, both my parents had occasional reservations about some of my beaus. But those boys never knew it. Somehow every boy I dated ended up being devoted to my mother. I've often said she was my biggest competition. And many of those "boys" are still active fans of Edith Davis. I received a letter the other day from a very good old friend of mine, with a letter enclosed for my mother. They all adored her in spite of — and maybe because of — the times when she lowered the boom and told them what she thought.

I always had the feeling I could go to Mother with anything. If I wanted to talk about something that was bothering me — something that I had done that I knew deep down I shouldn't have done — I always talked to her about it. I knew she would understand. She might disapprove of what I'd done, and she would invariably tell me why.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

ROBERT LUDLUM

THE SPY MASTER'S IDENTITY: THRILLING

Michelle Ryder

Novelist Robert Ludlum's fans seem to be as fanatical as the right-wing generals in his latest bestseller, The Aquitaine Progression. His 11 suspense thrillers, including The Scarlatti Inheritance and The Bourne Identity, have sold between 25 and 30 million copies in 23 countries. He counts among his fans Congressmen and generals who sometimes find the intricate story lines not only entertaining but also faintly familiar. When Ludlum, 56, and his wife, Mary, are not at their Connecticut home, they're enjoying their Florida condominium. Journalist Robert McNamara interviewed Ludlum there recently for FAMILY WEEKLY.

McNamara: Paranoia is a theme in your books. Are you paranoid?
Ludlum: I don't believe that as a walking-around, normal human being I'm as paranoid as readers of my novels might think. When I'm writing perhaps I am. I take my work very seriously. I do not, however, take myself that seriously.

Q: You didn't begin to write until you were 40. Why?
Ludlum: It was the late '60s and my wife, Mary, and I had a theater going in New Jersey. I was both an actor and producer. But I'd always wanted to write. So I set aside a year to try to research and write a novel. I've been scribbling ever since, and I love it.

Q: Have you ever thought of being a spy?
Ludlum: No. If I were an intelligence agent we'd be in real trouble. I wouldn't be very good at it. I'm much too gregarious to be a spy.

Q: What is your goal as a writer?
Ludlum: I start off every book with an idea I want to convey, but I know that in order to express my views I've got to entertain people. Of course, there's a sense of morality in my work, but if the moralizing becomes too intense, the entertaining goes out the window, and I don't want that.

Q: Do you share any qualities with your characters?
Ludlum: I loathe fanatics. That's in the books and in me. I think all decent writing, comedic as well as dramatic, comes out of a sense of outrage.

Q: I hear you start work at 4:15 a.m. How do you get going?
Ludlum: I tense up to begin with. I get a little wound up when I first start because my adrenalin is going. I do a lot of pacing because that helps.

Q: What is your idea of a hero?
Ludlum: Someone who is faced with an enormous challenge and finds the capability, in spite of his own fears, his own limitations, to meet that test. I think we all have strengths — moral and physical — to draw upon. When faced with a difficult situation, an ordinary man can often come up with extraordinary resources. FW by Paula Levey, President National Health Products, Inc.

This is a long story.

If you read it all the way through, that's proof you're seriously considering losing weight. If you have at least 15 or more pounds to lose, we've advanced the scientific timetable by half a decade to make it easy for you — so easy we'll refund twice what you pay for this program if it fails you. How can we make this astounding guarantee and still stay in business? Simple!

You may have seen our ads across the country during our test market last year. Here are the results — "Of the tens of thousands who ordered DiCellulite, 97.2 out of every 100 customers lost the excess fat and weight they desired without hunger pangs or lack of energy." Yes, it really does work. And DCP/2000™ will work for you too (even if other programs have failed you).

The 24-hr. effective combination of ingredients will help you lose weight all day and all night. EVEN WHILE YOU SLEEP!

EIGHT EFFECTIVE COMPONENTS
Weight Loss Experts Say:
"Here's the magic formula —"

AM FORMULA

Each morning when you take your AM tablet, you'll feel it begin to work within minutes. Your own body chemistry will activate its special timeclock which will work all day to help you lower your caloric intake. You'll eat 3 hardy meals a day without fear or guilt! DCP/2000 AM gives your willpower a tremendous boost and contains no caffeine or stimulants that can make you jittery.

PM FORMULA

The seven ingredient PM tablet is a complex of amino acids and other elements that are often deficient during a rapid weight-loss cycle. Amino-therapy is the latest discovery in the all-natural health and life extension field. Here's how this tablet can help you:

DCP/2000PM-1 A fat mobilizer. This ingredient helps make it easy for the fat to leave your body. You'll get rid of body fat easily, naturally, and without even knowing it.

DCP/2000PM-2 A gentle diuretic. This ingredient maintains proper body water levels, preventing fluid buildup and the uncomfortable bloated feeling that goes with it.

DCP/2000PM-3 An essential amino acid. Lack of this element in your metabolism can mean uneven moods, low energy, and lack of vitality and sex drive. You'll love the new you.

DCP/2000PM-4 A super energy lift. This complex group of aminos helps you feel peppier and happier. You may not crave sweets for that often needed boost of energy. You'll love it!

DCP/2000PM-5 A natural fiber. This ingredient is one you know well. It helps clean the digestive tract. You'll feel more alive than you have for years.

AND THAT'S ONLY THE BEGINNING

DCP/2000 is only half the story. National Health Products adds to the miraculous DCP/2000 a weight loss system so simple, so basic and so logical, you'll wonder why it hasn't been this easy for you before. The DCP/2000 system is so powerful in stripping the fat off your body we're not at all afraid to offer you DOUBLE YOUR MONEY back if it doesn't work exactly as we say it does, without hunger pangs or discomfort.

- How long has it been since you could wear the size you wore when you went to school?
- How long has it been since you looked in the mirror without thinking, "One of these days I'll get rid of these bulges?"
- How long has it been since you were able to grasp your waistline or thigh and not have a handful of flab?

Here's a suggestion. Circle these questions with a red pen or pencil, then look at them again two months after starting the DCP/2000 Weight Loss System.

Unless you have no commitment at all or deliberately try to scuttle your own progress, you'll be happier than you've been since, pound by pound and inch by inch you lost the slim trimness you used to have — and can have again!

I promise you.

MODERN TECHNOLOGY MADE SIMPLE IN OUR NEW MONTHLY COLUMN

TYPEWRITERS THAT CAN THINK

By Gordon Williams

One of the most exciting products on the market today is, surprisingly, one of the oldest. It's the typewriter, that traditional graduation gift for a youngster and often a necessity for the rest of us. Today, thanks to the marvels of electronics, you have heaps of machines to pick from — at every price level and with features that weren't available at any price a few years ago.

Just consider! For $200, you can still buy an electric portable, but for $300, you can enter the world of high-tech, with an electronic typewriter — fast, silent, reliable; able to correct your worst typing errors in a twinkling. And for $700, you can go all the way to word-processing, done with a computer-printer combination that lets you compose on a screen without setting anything on paper until you've honed it to perfection.

You won't go wrong buying an electric: They're time-tested, dependable, easy to use, and even the cheapest features built-in error correction. Still, almost anything an electric can do, an electronic can do better and faster and more quietly. The electronics shun traditional type elements, preferring a daisy wheel, which is a plastic disk with the letters on the daisy's "petals." Type a letter with hardly more effort than it takes to rest a finger on the keyboard; the disk whirls to the correct spot on the daisy, and the letter is printed. Make an error on an electronic, and you hit a correction key. The typewriter remembers what it has typed (from a dozen characters to several lines, depending on the model), and it marches back, erasing as many characters as you want erased.

If you have the money, you may wish to go one step further and consider the computer, which has many more features than the electronic and is probably a lot cheaper than you might think. Word processing simply means that you have a computer that is programmed to write things, from brief notes clear up to full-length books. The program is on a tape or computer disk or cartridge, and it tells the computer what to do. I'm writing this article on an Atari 800XL computer, using a word processing cartridge called Atariwriter. It's the size of a pack of cigarettes and it pops into the computer. I can do other things with the computer — from playing Pac-Man to managing my investments. To shift from Pac-Man to word processing takes 10 seconds.

The whole outfit costs about $1,200, including computer, printer, disk drive and word processing program. I use my color TV as a monitor. But I could also do it for a lot less. Coleco's Adam made a splash last year by offering a complete world-processing package for $700, including printer. Nowadays, you can do as well from any of the makers of home computers: Atari, Commodore and Radio Shack, as well as Coleco.

The basic computer costs about $250, often less, and you can get a printer for under $300. If you already have an electronic typewriter, an interface for $150 will turn it into a printer, although a very slow one. The word processing program can cost under $100; a cassette recorder for saving what you've written goes for about the same price. Use your own TV set as a display screen, and you have word processing for around $700, less when you buy the whole package at once.

After that, it's a matter of balancing what you want with what you can afford. A disk drive will save what you've written better and faster than a cassette recorder — at about $300 — and you'll have to spend around $400 to buy a good quality printer.

What makes word processing such a joy is that you can compose to your heart's content without committing a word to paper, because what you type appears on the TV screen. You can write and delete and write again. You can shift around words, sentences or whole paragraphs. Only when the work is finished to your satisfaction do you print a word of it.

The more writing you do, the more a word processor makes sense. For most people, though, a medium-priced electronic will be all the typewriter they need. (Just to show that even computers have their limits, that superduper word processor will be hard-pressed to type the address on an envelope.) So as graduation time nears, shop around. Compare an electronic with a word processor. Check the prices and features. And then decide, from among all the choices open to you in this new age of high-tech typewriters. Chances are you'll also want one for yourself. FW at payments so low you won't believe!

When small is wanted you'll find a wide selection of big little houses at Jim Walter Homes. For example, take a close look at one of our newest models, the TICA. The very name says, "This I Can Afford." It's a cozy home in which an amazing amount of living space has been uniquely captured. This is just one of many and all Jim Walter-built homes are builder-financed.

10% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE MORTGAGE FINANCING

Jim Walter offers one of the biggest values in the homebuilding industry, NO DOWN PAYMENT, 10% MORTGAGE FINANCING, to qualified property owners. When building a home the financing can make a big difference not only in monthly payments but also in the total amount and number of years you will pay.

For example, when you finance a $25,000.00 home at 13% over a period of 30 years your payments will go on for 10 years longer than with Jim Walter. Each payment will be over $35.00 per month more and you will have spent an extra $41,000 more than if you built and financed with Jim Walter Homes at our standard 20 year, 10% annual percentage rate financing. The chart below gives an example of typical Jim Walter financing and savings over other standard financing plans.

But she always approved of me. That was the key. There was never a feeling between us that she was some unapproachable adult.

I was fortunate to have been raised by parents who communicated their love to me and made me confident that they always would be there for me if I needed them. But at the same time, they balanced their love and support with discipline. There were rules, and I was expected to obey them.

My father died last year and Mother isn't well, but we talk every night on the phone, and I visit her as often as possible. I think many of today's children grow up without that relationship, and I feel terribly sorry for them because they're missing so much. One time when I visited Mother and we were having our picture taken by a friend, she looked at me and said, "They really don't know how we feel about each other." All I could do was nod because if I had tried to talk, I'm sure I would have cried.

Boys I dated became devoted to my mother. She was my biggest competition.

I suppose as you get older, you value family relationships more. You see your mother or your father equally as a friend and as a parent, and you realize that, in the final analysis, they're the ones who will always be there.

I think it also has something to do with becoming a parent oneself: You see your parents in an entirely different light and you really appreciate them. I remember when they brought Patti to me in the hospital. I had wanted a child so badly and I was overcome with joy. I was a mother at last! What a special, precious moment. (But I remember, too, wishing my husband were there in the room to share it with me — it was a long, difficult delivery, ending with my having a Caesarian, and the doctors had sent him home before Patti finally arrived.)

When we were living in Pacific Palisades, Calif., I loved driving in the car pool and serving on the school board. I never missed the special days for parents at Patti and Ron's school. Those were full years for Nancy Reagan, Mother. And happy ones.

I confess to being a real sentimentalist as a mother. I've tried to hold on to everything that the children ever brought home to me from school. Every mother knows those misshapen pottery ashtrays and bowls, the paper Christmas decorations for the tree, and the greeting cards made of construction paper and crayons. Well, I kept them. Over the years it became a family joke when we were trimming the tree. My kids always tried to take the homemade decorations away from me or sneak them off the tree. But I think maybe secretly they were a little bit pleased that I'd saved them all those years.

Speaking of bringing things home, how clearly I remember one day when Ron came home from a school outing and announced, "I brought you something." He'd used his allowance to buy me what someone else might have thought was a terrible looking pin, but I thought it was perfectly beautiful, and was so touched that he would even think of buying anything for me. I walked on air for days. I still have it, and of course it's one of my most treasured possessions. I also have every letter my children have ever written me, every painting — everything! For instance, when Ron was 10 years old, he went away to camp for the first time. I couldn't wait to get his first letter, which turned out to be a postcard that read: "Dear Mom, We went on a raft trip and turned over and I almost drowned. Love, Ron." Certainly designed to make a mother feel comfortable and happy!

Now, somehow, my children have grown up. Ron is married and doing very well as a freelance writer. Patti is in California pursuing an acting career. As they get older, and as I get used to being the mother of two grown children, I hope that, as I did with my own mother, they are beginning to see me as a person. I also have two children from my husband's first marriage. There have been some rocky times, but I think we're coming out ahead.

All mothers (and fathers and children) make mistakes along the way. And I am sure that if I had it to do again, I probably would do some things differently. I suspect my mother thinks so, too. But to me the important thing is that you try to do what is right.

I wouldn't have missed being a mother for anything in the world. True, there are some sorrows and heartaches that go with the role, but what great joys as well! Motherhood has helped me become more fulfilled, more of a person. I can't imagine life without children. Even now, with them in New York and California, at least I know they're out there and, I hope, will always love me as I do them.

As my mother's daughter, I think the hardest time was holding my father's hand at the hospital when he died, and then having to go to the house and tell my mother before she heard it on the radio or TV. But in a strange way, I think that she knew it. All during his final year, when he was in and out of the hospital, and later, after his death, she avoided going into the study or the bedroom where he stayed prior to his hospitalization. Without saying a word to anybody, she just went right by those two rooms. Theirs had been a very, very close marriage. She's a woman of tremendous faith, which I am sure has stood her in great stead this past year. Her friends visit her daily out of genuine love. She gave them so much of her love when she was able.

I said earlier in this article that I feel sorry for young people who don't feel close to their mothers or fathers, and don't take the chance to express their love and gratitude. That was brought home to me when my father was dying. The day will come — and it will come so quickly that you'll wonder where the years went — when you'll find yourself wishing you had said something at a particular time to your parent. Don't become an "if only" child, because it must be a terrible thing to live with. Today — Mother's Day — is the perfect occasion to make the time to express your love. Give your mother a little extra squeeze or a little extra "I love you."

I've always thought I loved my mother as much as I could. But with every day that passes, I find I love her more. I know that each new day is an extra day that God has given us. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

SUITED TO A TEA

In recent years we've heard all about the dangers in eating many of the foods we love, but when it comes to tea, it seems there's no reason for a brew-ha-ha. The number of known benefits of the drink seems to multiply with each new study.

Researchers at the University of California found that tea may help to reduce the chances of arteriosclerosis — clogged arteries — by strengthening blood vessels and inhibiting cholesterol absorption. A team at Washington University in St. Louis found that tea, which is high in fluoride, discourages tooth decay.

Tea is also a good source of several important minerals, and may help relieve pain by constricting the blood vessels that swell and throb during headaches. To say nothing of the fact that when you're done drinking it, you can read your fortune in the leaves.

BOOKING A SUMMER VACATION

Despite the many creative techniques teachers use to inspire their charges to read, few youngsters have been known to jump up from their seats and cry out, "To the books, then!"

Family Learning, a new journal for parents who want their children to grow up with a good education, gives some dos and don'ts for encouraging kids to spend part of the summer with a book.

For starters, don't nag. Try to make it a positive, enjoyable activity. Take note of what your child reads voluntarily and encourage it. Browse through a couple of children's books so you will be able to talk to your child about his or her choices. Treat reading as a normal, pleasurable activity, not as a chore or something to be rewarded. And don't insist that your child read the books you enjoyed as a child or be too fussy about his reading list. Practice is the main thing — War and Peace will come later.

HOME RULE

Though the typical mom has changed drastically over the last decade or so, the amount of time she spends on household chores has changed little. Whereas the average full-time housewife spends five to 10 hours a day on housework, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports that married women who also hold down outside jobs still spend four to eight hours on their home work.

It hardly seems fair — so Mary Ellen Shaver of San Ramon, Calif., did something about it. After repeatedly asking for help from her family, to no avail, Mrs. Shaver went on strike. For four weeks, dirty dishes and laundry piled up. Dust collected. Clothes, books and newspapers lay where they were dropped, and meals were on an "every person for himself" basis. Finally, the family sat down at the bargaining (also dining room) table and hammered out a contract that assigned duties to each family member.

Mrs. Shaver's contract was such a success that she is now marketing strike kits for other beleaguered moms. Write: MEE Enterprises, Box 441, San Ramon, Calif. 94583.

SHUCKS!

Science forges ever on, opening up new frontiers never before imagined. You name it, science can do it. But only rarely do we witness breakthroughs of the magnitude of one recently revealed by the University of Maryland.

Electrical engineer Leonard Taylor — a faculty member at the U. of M. — has invented a microwave oyster shucker that blasts the shell open. Taylor explains that his gadget — a hand-held wand with a loop antenna at one end — sends microwaves into the muscle that ordinarily keeps the oyster shell closed up. The water molecules in the muscle then heat up and expand. In just a few seconds, the bivalve explodes with a puff of steam, revealing the still-cold — and delicious — meat.

It would be impertinent to ask about the reason for creating a microwave oyster shucker. Science has its own inscrutable purpose. Let's just be glad we beat the Russians to this one.

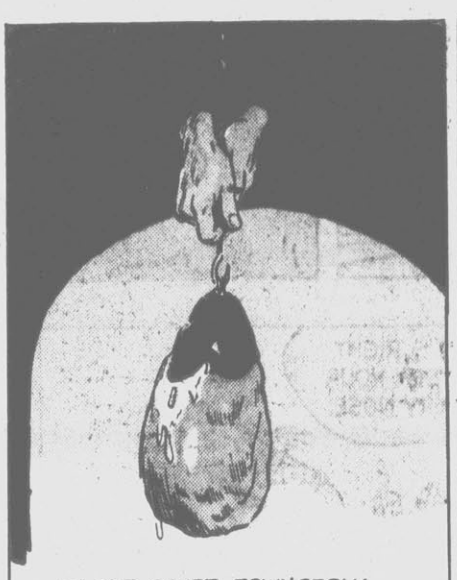
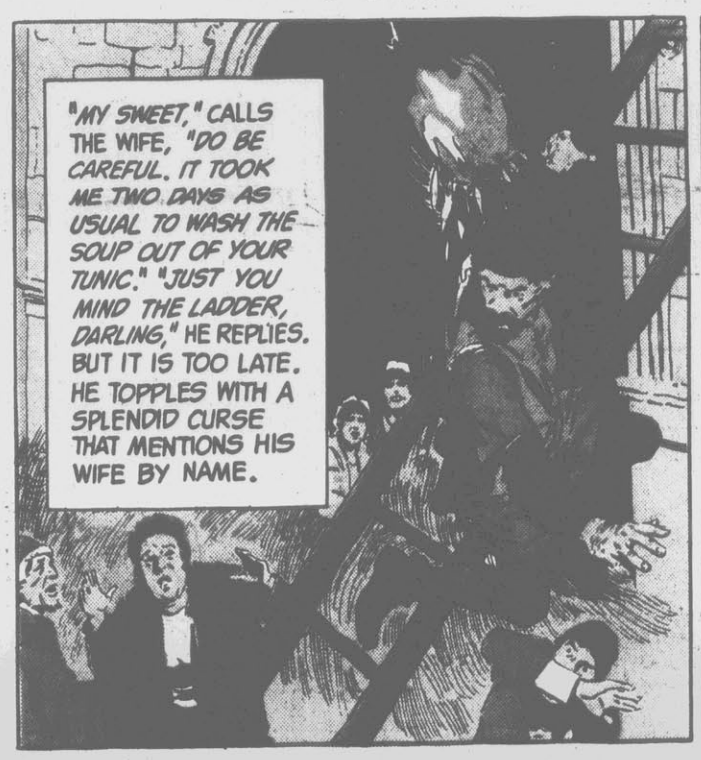
Our Story: FOR A TIME THERE IS PEACE IN CAMELOT. EASTER IS PAST AND PREPARATIONS BEGIN FOR THE TOURNAMENT AT PENTECOST. "SHALL WE TRY FOR THE HAM?" ALETA ASKS HER HUSBAND COYLY. FOR IT IS THE CUSTOM IN THE WEEKS BEFORE THE TOURNEY TO HANG A HAM HIGH OVER A CITY GATE.



AS THE OTHER TOWNSFOLK GATHER ROUND, MARRIED COUPLES WHO CLAIM NEVER TO HAVE QUARRELLED ARE ALLOWED TO TRY AND CUT IT DOWN.

ONE COUPLE STEPS FORWARD. "IN TWENTY YEARS," THE HUSBAND SAYS, "MY BRIDE AND I HAVE NOT HAD CROSS WORDS." HE PRODUCES A LADDER. "HOLD IT STEADY NOW, MY DEAR," THE MAN SAYS. HE BEGINS TO CLIMB. AS HE DOES, THE NOONDAY SUN BEGINS TO MELT THE FAT.



"YOU CLUMSY OAF!" THE WOMAN SNAPS BACK. "AND LOOK AT THAT STAIN!" NOT IN ALL THE YEARS OF PENTECOST, THE CHRONICLES REPORT, HAS THE HAM BEEN WON.

KAREN HAS NO TIME FOR SUCH GAMES. WITH THE KNIGHTS AWAY, THE YOUNGER SQUIRES HAVE THE RUN OF CAMELOT. ONE OF THEM, A BRASH AND COCKSURE LAD, HAS KAREN ON HIS ARM.
