Black Turnout Rises, But Results Mixed

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Voter registration drives and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign apparently boosted black voter turnout in North Carolina's primary, but the results for minority candidates were mixed.

Raleigh attorney Irving Joyner, legal counsel to Jackson's campaign in North Carolina, estimated that Tuesday's primary had the highest black voter turnout the state has seen.

But he acknowledged the impact was not enough to give Jackson better than third place in the presidential race or give state Rep. Ken Spaulding of Durham the Democratic nomination for Congress from the 2nd District.

Spaulding lost to incumbent Tim

Valentine, who got 52 percent of the vote.

"It did not deliver enough votes to carry the day, but it did increase the number of blacks participating and the number of whites participating," Joyner said.

Jackson did best in the Northeast, where the 1st and 2nd Congressional Districts are located. He led all presidential candidates in 22 counties.

Spaulding, who was the second black in as many elections to narrowly lose the nomination, said he's not disappointed with the primary results and he will run again for the seat in 1986.

"Anything that is of any significance is difficult to do," Spaulding said. "We were able to do well to get white support. We could have done better if we had had more votes."

The loss did not discourage Joyner either. He noted that Spaulding got perhaps 10 percent to 15 percent of the white vote.

"It just says we have to go back to the drawing board and beat the bushes some more," he said. "Whoever runs in that district has to be more palatable to the white community."

Joyner said he also was pleased with Howard Lee's showing against Congressman Ike Andrews in the 4th District. Lee lost but got almost 39 percent of the vote in a district where blacks represent less than one-fourth of those registered. Another black candidate, John Winters, got almost 10 percent of the vote.

There were some successes for blacks.

In Wilson County, Frank Emory became the first black nominee for the county commission.

Jackson's first-place showing in Forsyth County has encouraged his campaign leader to consider running for office. Larry Little, a Winston-Salem alderman, said he's confident now that a black can be elected mayor there.

Another county where Jackson and black candidates fared well was Anson County. Four black candidates led local races and, depending on results of the June 5 runoff, voters could elect the first black county commissioner this century.

There were a number of losses for minority candidates.

Bertie County had a 54 percent voter turnout, but two black members of the board of education were defeated by white candidates, in one race by only a 40-vote margin.

Edgecombe County had more than 58 percent of its voters cast ballots but two black candidates for county commissioner lost. The U.S. Justice Department sent observers to the county for the election.

G.K. Butterfield, former president of the N.C. Association of Black Lawyers and a member of the Democratic Party's executive committee, said he understood the observers were requested because of past problems with black voters casting ballots.

"It was a crucial election because blacks stood the chance of becoming a voting majority on the county commission," Butterfield said.

Joyner said blacks turned out in large numbers to vote in Vance County but the black candidate for District Court judge, Randolph Baskerville, lost.

The problem for black leaders now becomes turning out voters in November, when there will be fewer blacks on the ballot.

"The (Jackson) campaign demonstrated to white people that black people can in fact articulate issues of concern to all people, not just civil rights issues of concern to blacks," Butterfield said.

"Voting has got to be a habit among people. The more people vote the more confident they become," he said.

"We have got to have faith and we've got to continue to pray and work toward a goal that will benefit the entire state," Spaulding said.

Moon's Jailing Clears

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today cleared the way for the imprisonment of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, sentenced to 18 months for tax evasion.

The justices, without comment, rejected an appeal by the founder and leader of the Unification Church, who said he was denied a fair trial and portrayed himself as a victim of religious persecution.

Federal prosecutors now are free to seek the immediate imprisonment of Moon and an associate, Takeru Kamiyama, who was sentenced to a six-month term for conspiring to file false tax returns. The government frequently allows those convicted in such cases up to two months before they must report to prison.

Moon and Kamiyama have been free on bail pending appeal.

The Moon case attracted the support of numerous civil rights and religious organizations that urged the high court to overturn Moon's conviction.

Moon was sentenced to prison and fined $25,000 in 1982 after a federal jury in New York City found him guilty of evading $162,000 in taxes on income from both a bank account and an importing business.

He also was convicted of conspiring to file false tax returns.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld his conviction last September, rejecting Moon's argument that he should have been tried before a judge rather than a jury.

FAIR ACTIVITY — A balloon salesman walks by Seymour D. Fair, the pelican mascot of the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition in New Orleans. Fair Has Rough Edge In Opening

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Crews will be put to work overnight to smooth out the rough edges of the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition, which staged its grand opening over the weekend, officials said today.

On Sunday, there were still some signs that the $350 million fair, which will run for six months, may have started too early.

Liberia's deserted exhibition hall still had unpainted walls with naked wiring hanging where fixtures will be hung.

The combined exposition of Honduras, Belize and the Dominican Republic was just a pile of lumber in an empty room. A spokesman said it would be three weeks before it is completed.

The Ferris wheel, advertised as the biggest in the world, remained inoperative, half of its seats still missing in shipment.

But the few rough spots were overshadowed by an operation that appeared to be running smoothly.

Paul Creighton, the fair's operations manager, said the official revised count for the opening day crowd Saturday was 83,000, 20,000 more than previously announced.

Jeanne Nathan, the fair's publicity director, said Sunday's attendance figures would not be available until later today.

Athens Explosion Hurts 47

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An explosion tore through a nine-story office building today, sending shards of glass and metal flying through the streets. Police said at least 47 people were injured.

The minister of public order, Yiannis Skoularikis, rushed to the site and said the 2:30 p.m. blast was "probably caused by a gas leak." Police initially had said a bomb was the cause, but later said a gas heater might have exploded.

Police said 18 of the injured were being kept in hospitals for treatment, eight of them in serious condition. They said at least 29 others were released after receiving first aid.

Skoularikis said the blast occurred in a pastry shop on the ground floor of the office building, several people

Kidnap Couple Will Be Freed

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The kidnapers of an American couple agreed today to free the newlyweds, hours after extending a deadline to kill the pair unless $2 million in gold was delivered.

The Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front said in a statement released in Madras, India, that it had "directed our comrades to release the two Americans in custody." It said the decision was in response to appeals by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and the top elected official of India's Tamil Nadu state, M.G. Ramachandran.

The Tamil separatist group has "assured us they would release the couple" today, said K. Chockalingam, chief secretary of the Indian state in Madras.

The U.S. Embassy in Colombo and the American consulate in Madras said they had received no word yet on exactly when the couple, Stanley and Mary Elizabeth Allen, would be freed.

"It appears they would be released, but we don't know the time or place," said Roy L. Whitaker, U.S. vice consul in Madras, capital of Tamil Nadu state.

The group's statement expressed hope the Sri Lankan government would make "a matching gesture" for the couple's freedom by meeting the kidnapers' demands for the release of 20 Tamil "political prisoners."

At first, the Tamil separatist kidnapers had set a deadline for noon today (2:30 a.m. EDT) to kill Stanley Allen, and vowed to kill his wife, Mary Elizabeth, six hours later if the Sri Lankan government did not meet the demands. The kidnapers claim the couple spied for the CIA.

Tamil Nadu state officials said they persuaded Tamil separatists, arrested in a roundup Sunday, to telephone Jaffna, in northern Sri Lanka, where the Americans were kidnapped Thursday night, and order fellow secessionists to release the pair.

"It was an order, and they obeyed," said K. Mohandas, Inspector-General of Crime and Intelligence.

Senate Resumes Battle On Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate was resuming its weeks-long search today for a way to reduce federal budget deficits, while the House, having argued last week over President Reagan's foreign aid requests, was preparing to battle over his military spending recommendations.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., already is predicting the House will vote to delete the MX missile Reagan wants from a $208 billion measure authorizing military spending for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. But supporters of the weapon are trying to patch together a bipartisan coalition that would allow production, but at a reduced level.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the administration would continue to seek it full request for the nuclear-tipped MX. "We're certainly working with the leadership as the vote approaches, which is scheduled Wednesday."

"We don't think the Soviets should be rewarded for walking out of the arms control discussion," Speakes added. "Our desire is for the full and immediate funding."

He said the president may call congressmen on the issue and could hold meetings at the White House.

Senators were beginning their fourth week of work on the president's three-year, $144 billion "down payment" plan for reducing the red ink. However, passage of the measure is now in doubt following two close calls last week when opponents came within a single vote of dumping the proposal.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., estimates the package of about equal amounts of tax increases, domestic spending cuts and reductions in planned defense spending increases has only "even odds" of passage.

The House already has passed legislation outlining a three-year, $182 billion deficit-reduction plan.

Service Honors Police Officers

A memorial service honoring police officers killed and injured in the line of duty will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in front of the Winterville Town Hall.

The service coincides with National Police Memorial Week, Monday-Friday, and will include a 21-gun salute and remarks by the Rev. Willis Wilson. It is the first service of its type in Pitt County, according to Winterville Police Chief Keith Knox, a spokesperson for the event.

Knox noted that Congress has declared Tuesday National Police Memorial Day and that the Pitt County Law Enforcement Association has requested that officers wear black mourning bands on their shield or stars during the day.

"These black bands will be worn to remind the public that somewhere in the nation, an officer will be killed every two days in the line of duty," said Knox. "In addition, 136 officers are injured, most seriously, every hour."

Knox said the memorial service in Pitt County will "honor the memory of fellow officers who have given their lives in the line of duty and those that have passed on."

A moment of silence will be observed at 11 a.m. in local courtrooms in conjunction with the service, Knox said.

Her Sunbathing Provokes A Heated Discussion

DEAR ABBY: I am a 45-year-old professional man. My wife, who is 42, recently had breast implants because after bearing children her breasts were not as full and firm as they once were.

We recently attended a convention in a city where the daytime temperature was in the low 50s with brisk winds. I wore a light topcoat. After attending meetings alone one day, I returned to my hotel early in the afternoon and stopped at the bar to have a drink with a colleague. I was surprised to see my wife in a bikini—"sunbathing," with occasional walks around the outdoor pool, which was in clear view of the bar. She and a well-endowed teenage girl were the only two people at the pool during the 30 to 45 minutes I was in the bar. The two of them attracted a large crowd of spectators from the bar.

Later I asked her if it wasn't a bit chilly to be sunbathing. She became very defensive and accused me of going through a "midlife crisis!"

Abby, after reflecting on the incident, I honestly believe I would have had the same feeling had I been 25. I haven't mentioned it to her again, but do you think it's possible that she is the one going through the midlife crisis?

MIDLIFE CRISIS

DEAR CRISIS: There may be a "crisis," but it has nothing to do with her age or yours. Your wife was proud of her new body and couldn't wait for more appropriate weather to show it off. (She should have.) Her feelings are understandable, but her timing was bad.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Ella," a single parent, has a 3 1/2-year-old daughter. Ella and our granddaughter had been living with us until a few months ago when they moved in with Ella's boyfriend. Last weekend my husband and I went to pick up our granddaughter for the weekend. As we were leaving, Ella said to the child, "Kiss Daddy goodbye" (referring to her live-in lover).

Our mouths fell open. Needless to say, since they aren't married, we don't think it's right for Ella to tell her child to call this man "Daddy."

I believe Ella has told her neighbors that she and this man are married, and in order to make it appear so, she wants the child to call him "Daddy."

I haven't said anything to Ella yet, and I won't until I hear from you.

UNEASY

DEAR UNEASY: Apparently your daughter is trying to provide her child with at least the trappings of a normal family life, which is to her credit.

Don't judge her. Perhaps it was the child's idea to call him "Daddy." Be kind. And be quiet.

DEAR ABBY: Spring is here and children are already out flying their kites, which scares me very much. I am a lineman for a New York electric company, and every year I see dozens of kites dangling from high-voltage lines. Abby, if people only knew the danger that their children are exposed to when flying kites, they would take the time to find a safer place for them to play.

Last year when I saw a kite entangled in a 115,000-volt transmission line, my heart leaped into my throat. These high-voltage lines are extremely unpredictable where an untested substance such as kite string is concerned. If this string is contaminated with any conductive material (such as metal tracer, dirt or even dampness), a child could easily be electrocuted. I have seen these voltages change ordinary dirt into a molten glasslike substance, so I know the danger is real.

I hope you will print this. It may save some young lives.

It'll Be Fun Time For Legislators

Welcome Mat

Pope John Paul II appears a popular and welcome guest in all lands he visits.

He brings messages readily understood and largely welcomed by his hosts. Add to that the "mutual admiration society" existing between himself and children, and you have a combination hard to beat.

Multitudes from the most primitive societies, as in Papua and the Solomons, warmly received him.

The pontiff's stopover in Thailand (most of whose people are Buddhist) was "an expression of my personal thanks ... to the government and people of this noble land for the generous hospitality given to thousands and thousands of refugees from neighboring countries", he said. "Your loving compassion toward these needy and suffering people makes me feel very close to you all."

Who could remain indifferent to such words?

His visit included a courtesy call on Thailand's Buddhist Supreme Patriarch.

Surely there is a welcome mat waiting to be used again in remote lands around the world for any return visit by John Paul — or, at some future date, for his successors.

Looking Back

Education Secretary T.H. Bell has called for a return by this nation's institutions of learning, especially secondary schools, to 1965. Specifically, Bell wants the schools to work toward raising college entrance examination scores to their level of 1965.

Falling back? No, coming up. College entrance scores, as well as many other comparative test results, have fallen sharply in the last decade.

Bell, who has joined others in education in calling for drastic change in the wake of last year's report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, says the various states have made a good beginning in revamping their public school systems. He noted that parents and teachers appear to be responding to the push for improvement.

It sounds good on paper, and so far it looks good in practice. Still to come, however, in virtually every state is what to do about teachers' salaries, the level of learning that will be required for graduation and the length of the school year.

When all that's settled, perhaps then we can return to yesteryear.

RALEIGH — It's just about time for the Legislature to go shopping. The 1984 session is just three weeks away and, for the first time since 1980, lawmakers return to town to find a treasury fat with cash.

After three sessions in which "cut," "lean" and "belt-tightening" were the words most frequently used in the Legislative Building, legislators can finally reopen the dictionary on the page that says "spend, spend, spend."

How much can they spend this year? There are all kinds of numbers floating around Raleigh. Six Democratic gubernatorial candidates appeared on a televised debate in April with figures ranging from $300 to $500 million.

The available money will come from three general areas. (Actually, it will all come from the taxpayers but the Legislature takes it from the taxpayers in three different ways.) First, there's the money appropriated for use during this current fiscal year which, due to Gov. Jim Hunt's reduced allocations, will not be spent. There is no official estimate of how much money is involved here but informed sources have been saying all year that the figure could reach $130 million — and maybe a bit more.

The surplus is the second pool of money which the Legislature can spend. This is tax money collected this year which is above and beyond that which the Legislature planned on needing. When the Legislature drew up this year's budget, it figured the state would need an 11.2 percent increase in revenue to balance the budget — 12.2 percent if one accounts for some revenue which did not materialize and for eliminating a deficit spending gimmick which the Senate put in the budget. Revenues this year are running at about 14.2 percent above last year's and that means a $70 million surplus.

The third pool is next year's revenue projections. The 1983 assembly actually approved the 1984-85 budget and did so with an unusually low revenue growth projection. The assembly said it will need only 2.6 percent growth to keep the budget in balance next year. But, it did not approve funding for a number of programs — the biggest of which is $25.8 million for the Highway Fund — but an educated guess is in the area of $50 million. That means revenue in 1984-85 will have to grow by about 4 percent to bring in a balanced budget. Any projected growth above 4 percent can be budgeted as new spending by the assembly in June.

It is that third pool that offers the big bucks for the assembly. If the recession year of 1983 is not counted, then state revenues have grown by an average of 10.5 percent since 1978. If the Legislature decides that 1984-85 will be an average non-recession year, with 10.5 percent growth, then $237 million is available. (Each percentage point of growth equals $36.5 million.)

Let's add it all up. There's a $70 million surplus and a possible $237 million revenue increase projected for next year. These are repeating revenues and therefore can be used for repeating expenses, like salaries and permanent programs. Then, there's the $130 million in reversions which can be spent only once because these are not repeating revenues. This is the kind of money that is used for capital expenses and temporary programs.

What will all that money buy? Each 1 percent increase in certified public school personnel salaries costs $10.8 million. The same raise costs $19.4 million for all other state employees. Reducing class sizes in grades four through six would cost $31 million, buying needed textbooks $14.3 million and buying school computers $10.6 million.

With their wallets nice and fat, legislators ought to have fun deciding where they'll spend their money.

The Style Can Make A Difference

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Rev. Jesse Jackson talks about "breaking the cycle of pain," people listen. That's his style.

Walter F. Mondale possesses a quick and understated sense of humor, but his delivery is sometimes less than exciting. That's his style.

Gary Hart is often so impatient to finish a speech that he doesn't pause when audiences applaud his best lines. And that is Hart's style.

Political style can win or lose elections. There are many who believe that Sen. John Glenn was knocked out early in the competition for the Democratic presidential nomination solely because his delivery was, ah well, dull.

And now, the differences among the campaign personalities of the surviving candidates are greater than their divisions on the issues.

Ironically, the best public speaker among the three Democrats, Jackson, has no real chance to win the nomination.

Jackson's cadence and ability to rhyme at will give his speeches a musical quality, a magnetism which delivers an emotional charge to audiences of all races.

Like many civil rights leaders, Jackson spent much of his adult life as a Baptist minister, and the tradition among black congregations is to participate, to respond with fervor during church services.

When Jackson speaks in black churches, his audiences interrupt at will. "Tell it like it is, preacher man," they say, adding, "That's right."

But when he talks to white audiences, the rhetoric and the syntax shift. There are fewer references to the values of Jesus Christ, and more discussion of issues of the day.

Among the candidates, Jackson is probably the best at adapting his words and delivery to match his audience.

Mondale has been on the political stage for so long that he is often greeted more as a familiar, visiting family member than a presidential candidate.

His humor often draws belly laughs from audiences, but is so understated that it doesn't make it to the television screen as part of the day's network news coverage.

For example, when he spoke last week before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Mondale picked up the program and said he couldn't thank all of them individually by name for inviting him to speak, but had picked out a few "at random."

He proceeded to read the names of four editors, all of them from his native Minnesota.

On television, Mondale comes across as sober, serious, experienced and sometimes tired, which he often is.

"I have traveled more than any other living American," Mondale joked the other day about his years of seeking the presidency. "I know that because if I traveled any more, I wouldn't be living."

In person, Mondale is warm, funny and personable, qualities which often get lost in his television image.

Hart began his presidential campaign as a stilted, wooden public speaker often ill at ease, except when discussing serious issues in small groups.

He has loosened considerably over the 15 months since announcing his candidacy.

Boycott Won't Hurt Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hammering away at the Soviet Union has carried Ronald Reagan to the political heights since his first assault in behalf of Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater in 1964.

Now that the Soviets have risked acquiring the reputation of spoilsports by withdrawing from the Olympic Games in Los Angeles this summer, Reagan may have some more to gain politically at the expense of Moscow.

According to some analysts, one of the main reasons the Soviets withdrew is that they did not want to contribute to the spectacle of Reagan presiding at the July 28 opening. They have ruled out doing any serious business with the man before November, and obviously have no interest in contributing to the theater at which he excels.

There is more than a hint of this motivation in the Soviet withdrawal statement. "It is known that from the very first days of preparations for the present Olympics the American administration has sought to set course at using the Games for its political aims," the statement distributed Tuesday by Tass, the Soviet news agency, said.

But while Soviet leaders apparently hope Reagan will be defeated, there is no evidence that the walkout will hurt him. Jimmy Carter and other Democrats criticized the Kremlin, not the White House after the Soviets dropped out. No one blamed Reagan.

Nor, for that matter, is anyone criticizing Carter, who set a precedent for boycotts in 1980 by keeping the American team away from the Olympics in Moscow to protest Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. West Germany, Japan, Canada, China and a number of other nations followed suit, infuriating the Russians, who had put enormous effort and money into the preparations.

"They are trying to embarrass the administration," said a leading American Kremlinologist. "But the primary reason for the walkout is they are great believers in retaliation. The huge costs in 1980 still rankles those gerontards," he said.

In other words, the Soviets are sore losers. They want to get even for their 1980 setback, and somehow the America experts in the Kremlin miscalculated in thinking they could hurt Reagan by spoiling the Games, said another U.S. specialist.

Reagan, of course, is a past master at putting the Soviets in the worst possible light. He began his first term declaring the men in the Kremlin "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat."

While he has sometimes taken a more conciliatory approach — and proposed a number of arms control agreements — the rhetoric has always been there.

Last year, Reagan described the Soviets as "the focus of evil in the modern world." And when they shot down a South Korean civilian airliner, he said "we cannot change the Soviets, yet we can change our attitude toward them. We can stop fooling ourselves that they dream the same dreams, and cherish the same hope that we do."

Reagan, whose first job was as a baseball broadcaster, has never lost his yen for sports. On competitive grounds alone, millions of Americans have to harbor at least some resentment toward Moscow for spoiling some of their summer fun.

Beyond that, the Soviets have opened themselves to the sort of criticism leveled by the State Department, which called the pullout "a blatant political action for which there was no real justification."

Unless they change their mind about participating, and no one expects them to, Reagan will have from now until November to jump on the boycott as further evidence of bad Soviet behavior. So far, the technique has served him well.

Weapons Lease Sets Precedent

The United States has added a new gimmick to the arms business. The Pentagon announced a few weeks ago it plans to "lease" four sting ray missiles to Saudi Arabia. They would be used to protect King Fahd's new super luxury yacht.

Originally the Reagan administration planned to sell Jordan 1,600 sting rays and Saudi Arabia 1,400. (The missile is a hand-held weapon which can shoot down aircraft.) But the deal turned sour when King Hussein attacked the U.S. in an interview, and the White House decided it could not get Congress' approval for the sale.

The lease for the four weapons to King Fahd will be for six months, at a cost of $50,000.

The Saudis' lease deal could set a precedent on supplying arms to nations that the Reagan administration wishes to support, but Congress doesn't.

"Pentagon, General Avis Hertz speaking."

"This is Junta Colonel Alvarez of El Muscador. What happened to the weapons we ordered from the U.S. which you were supposed to deliver last month?"

"We're terribly sorry, Colonel. We ran into a roadblock with Congress. They're dead set against us selling you the hardware because your death squads keep killing the opposition party leaders."

"We need the weapons to fight the Marxist peasants who are trying to take over the government."

"We're aware of that, but Congress has their feet in cement."

"Does this mean we're not going to get any military equipment?"

"I didn't say that. We think we have a way of getting around the legislative branch. What would you think of leasing the weapons from us instead of buying them?"

"Leasing them?"

"Right, it would be much cheaper in the long run, and it's tax deductible. You would have the use of them without worrying about insurance, upkeep, repairs and spare parts. If anything breaks down, you just send it back and we'll replace it."

"But if we lease the weapons can we use them?"

"Of course you can. If, for example, you wanted a 155mm Howitzer, it would cost you $1,000 a month, and 50 cents for each shell you fire. A fighter plane runs $5,000 a month and we throw in the first 10 missions free. Then it would only cost you $100 a sortie after that. We also have a special $150-plus-mileage weekend rate for our gold card customers."

"We've never leased military equipment before."

"Neither have we. But it's the only way we can get around Congress. The president is determined that you get all the military hardware you need, and this seems to be the logical solution."

"Suppose the weapons are destroyed in combat or captured by the enemy. Do we have to pay for them?"

"If it wasn't your fault you don't. We take all the risks. Another advantage to our leasing the equipment to you is that since we own the weapons we have a vested interest in seeing that they operate properly. In the past, half the stuff we've sold you wound up in the junkyard because your troops didn't know how to take care of it. But if the El Muscador soldiers know the material doesn't belong to them, they won't leave it all over the battlefield."

"How do we pay for the lease?"

"The Pentagon takes Visa, MasterCard, American Express or Diner's Club."

"Do you lease tanks?"

"We certainly do and they're all 1984 models. If you rent one, we throw in a full tank of gas. And if your ashtrays are dirty, we give you another tank for a week absolutely free."

"All right, we'll lease everything you promised to send us last month. But we need it right away."

"We have everything packed and ready to go. You should be able to start a major offensive within the week."

"You're very accommodating."

"We're No. 2 after the Soviets, so we have to try harder."

Strength For Today

A wealthy man whose hobby was the collection of valuable musical instruments once secured one of the rarest and finest violins in the world. A noted violinist came to this rich man and offered him a huge sum of money for this violin. The owner refused to sell.

Then the violinist asked that he might have the privilege of playing the instrument. He did so, and so exquisite was his performance that the owner handed the instrument to him and said, "This violin belongs to the man who can use it, not the man who can buy it. Take it. It is yours without cost."

The things in life which really count always belong to the people who can use them. Usually they are in the possession of such people. But if they are not, there is a way in which ability reaches across ownership and establishes title that mere purchase cannot establish.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

Despite the warnings, it happens every year when a timber buyer calls or stops by a farm and offers the landowner what sounds like a lot of money for a designated plot of timber. Only after the contract is signed and the timber belongs to the buyer does the landowner discover that he has turned his timber loose for way too little money.

There are plenty of reputable timber buyers in the business along with private consultants and others who can help determine the actual value of any timber on your farm.

A private consultant will, of course, charge a fee to walk over your woodlands and identify the suitable timber and determine the volume and value of all that is standing. But he will leave you with the knowledge necessary to successfully negotiate the sale of such timber to a reputable buyer.

Most landowners sell timber only once in a lifetime and this usually involves a great deal of money. Unfortunately, many of these sales are made in a very casual way. It often occurs when a timber buyer stops by a farmer's home or calls him on the phone and makes him an offer. This practice can cost timber owners thousands of dollars. These offers can reflect the true value of the timber, but there is no guarantee. Before you sell timber, know what you have to sell and the market price.

Guerillas Attack South African Refinery

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Four guerrillas rocketed an oil refinery, then led police on a car chase through a waterfront industrial area before police killed all four early today in a shootout at a construction yard, police said.

Police spokesmen said three other persons died inside a paint storage shed that caught fire during the 20-minute shootout. Their bodies were burned beyond recognition but paint shop owner Mahomed Joosub said two were male employees who often slept in the shed, and the third was a woman.

Four policemen were wounded during the chase.

Police said they did not know who had carried out the refinery raid. Most sabotage attacks in South Africa are conducted by the African National Congress, a black movement that seeks to end white-minority rule.

L. Thomas Jefferson, spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria, said one policeman was seriously wounded when he was shot in the head while trying to stop the guerrillas as they drove away from the Mobil oil refinery. Constable Andries Nel was later reported in satisfactory condition at a Durban hospital with a bullet wound in the cheek.

Jefferson said a policeman was slightly wounded by fragments of a grenade thrown by the fugitives at a roadblock three miles from the refinery. Two other policemen who took up the pursuit after the guerrillas turned away from the roadblock were slightly injured when a bullet shattered their windshield.

Jefferson said the attackers fired three rocket-propelled grenades at the refinery Sunday night, starting a fire and causing limited damage. A refinery official said no storage tanks were hit and that the blaze was put out by refinery workers in 40 minutes. He said three small-diameter pipelines were damaged.

Police spokesmen said the guerrillas were three black men and one of mixed race. He said they were armed with AK-47 automatic weapons.

Violence Marring Philippines Voting

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Filipinos crowded polling places today to elect a new National Assembly despite a call for a boycott, and election-related violence claimed at least 38 lives on the eve and the day of the voting.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos' government put nearly 300,000 soldiers and police on special alert. Officials said communist rebels planned to disrupt the voting in this 7,100-island nation of 51 million people.

Polls closed an hour early so counting could begin before dark, when violence was considered more likely. Official results were not expected before Tuesday.

Police and news reports said that at least 12 troops and policemen were killed today in violence connected with the election. Twenty-six people died in campaign-related clashes on Sunday, they reported.

Election officials and observers said at midday that voting was brisk across the islands.

In what was seen as a major test of Marcos' political strength, 25 million citizens were eligible to choose from among some 1,000 candidates to fill 183 seats in the National Assembly.

Marcos' party now holds all but a dozen seats, and he said he would be surprised if his opponents won more than 30. His wife, Imelda, predicted a "clean sweep" for Marcos' New Society Movement in metropolitan Manila, where she has campaigned for 21 government candidates.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A

X-RAYED DENTISTRY

The X-ray in dentistry has nothing to do with racy movies. The picture the dentist takes with his x-ray machine is one of the most essential tools he has in treating dental problems. It is always used with the greatest concern for your safety. In fact, the exposure takes less than a second and is less than you receive from everyday living from the rays of the sun or from natural radiation in rocks and other materials.

It's the x-ray picture that reveals hidden cavities or early signs of gum disease. It can also save a life by detecting certain kinds of oral cancer in its early stages, when it's curable.

Without his x-ray machine, the dentist would not be able to spot a cavity that may be lurking under an old filling. Unnoticed, it may destroy the pulp of the tooth, causing severe pain. By then it might be too late to save the tooth.

The x-ray is a super sleuth. It can apprehend abscessed teeth and other culprits, such as extra teeth, crooked roots, and broken root tips or damaged bone structure.

Early Americans

Jamestown colony — the first permanent English settlement in America — was founded on this day in 1607. The first shipment of American goods sent to Europe was a cargo of pitch, tar, soap, ashes, and glass sent from Jamestown in 1608. Games were outlawed in most of the early colonies. When Jamestown colonists were discovered bowling in 1611, the activity was promptly banned. Jamestown residents introduced the carrot to America.

Mondale Wins Hispanic Backing

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
Walter F. Mondale, seeking to regain his earlier fighting form, is wooing California's Hispanic voters and criticizing rival Gary Hart on arms control as the three Democratic presidential hopefuls campaign for the largest state delegate prize.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson was preaching party unity Sunday, saying there will be a "period of reconciliation" after California's June 5 primary, the last and biggest delegate contest before the convention in San Francisco in July.

"We are competing for the nomination on the one hand, but then there's the specter of Reagan beyond July," Jackson said.

Hart was stopping in San Francisco today before heading back to Nebraska for a flying tour of the state one day before it holds its presidential primary.

Jackson was remaining in California, where Democrats will decide 306 of the state's 345 delegates in the primary, and flying to Oakland after a Sunday night rally at a church in the Watts area of Los Angeles.

Jackson and Hart both followed the former vice president with appeals for Hispanic votes Sunday, but it was Mondale who won the endorsement of the Mexican-American Political Association meeting in San Jose, Calif. Group spokeswoman Paula Fiscal said Jackson lost by only four votes, less than 2 percent of those cast.

"I was there when you needed me," Mondale told the association.

Later in the Van Nuys suburb of Los Angeles, Mondale spoke to a group of National Organization for Women members and attacked Hart on arms control and the proposed nuclear weapons freeze, which he says Hart was slow to embrace.

"Arms control will be the most important issue on my desk" as president, Mondale said. "Measure my record with Gary Hart's."

"He has taken seven inconsistent positions on the freeze," Mondale said.

Mondale appeared to be resuming the tough stance toward Hart he took while winning a string of industrial-state primaries that stopped the Colorado senator's late-winter surge. With the nomination seemingly within his grasp, Mondale had eased his rhetoric — and ended up losing two key states last week.

Mondale was campaigning in a Hispanic area of Los Angeles again today before flying to Oakland and San Francisco, where he planned a fund-raiser with Mayor Dianne Feinstein.

Democrats in two states hold primaries Tuesday, with 24 delegates at stake in Nebraska and 43 to be decided in Oregon.

Polls in both states give the lead to Hart, whose campaign was resuscitated by victories in Ohio and Indiana last week and who needs to keep on winning to gain ground on Mondale's large delegate lead.

In Oregon, a poll published today by The (Portland) Oregonian newspaper said Hart had 49 percent support to 28 percent for Mondale and 9 percent for Jackson. The survey of 367 voters was conducted Wednesday through Saturday and has a margin of error of plus or minus 5.2 percent.

In Nebraska, a poll published by the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star newspaper showed Hart with 41 percent to Mondale's 31 percent and Jackson's 4 percent, with 17 percent undecided. The sample size was small, 169 Democrats surveyed Monday through Thursday, and it had a margin of error of plus or minus 7.5 percent. And among Democrats considered likely to vote, Hart's margin fell to 38 percent to 36 percent.

Mudslide Strikes Utah Community

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rising temperatures today threatened to accelerate mountain runoff that sent a mudslide smashing through three homes in central Utah, burying a 70-year-old man and washing another man out of one building and into another.

The mudslide in the Carbon County town of Clear Creek came as temperatures soared Sunday into the mid 80s, melting mountain snow in northern, western and central Utah.

Temperatures in the state were expected to climb into the upper 80s and 90s today, "further aggravating the situation," said National Weather Service forecaster Ed Carle.

Hundreds of volunteers piled sandbags in Salt Lake's Liberty Park on Sunday to contain the runoff, and more workers were being sought today.

A sandbag channel has been built through the park to divert some of the runoff that normally flows under South Street to storm drains.

In Colorado, authorities in Routt County warned residents in downtown Oak Creek that a temporary dam strained by spring runoff was "seeping and about to break" and that the situation was "potentially dangerous."

Sheriff Tim Walsh said no evacuation was ordered as of Sunday night. The dam, believed to hold about 5,000 acre-feet of water, is on Oak Creek just north of the town.

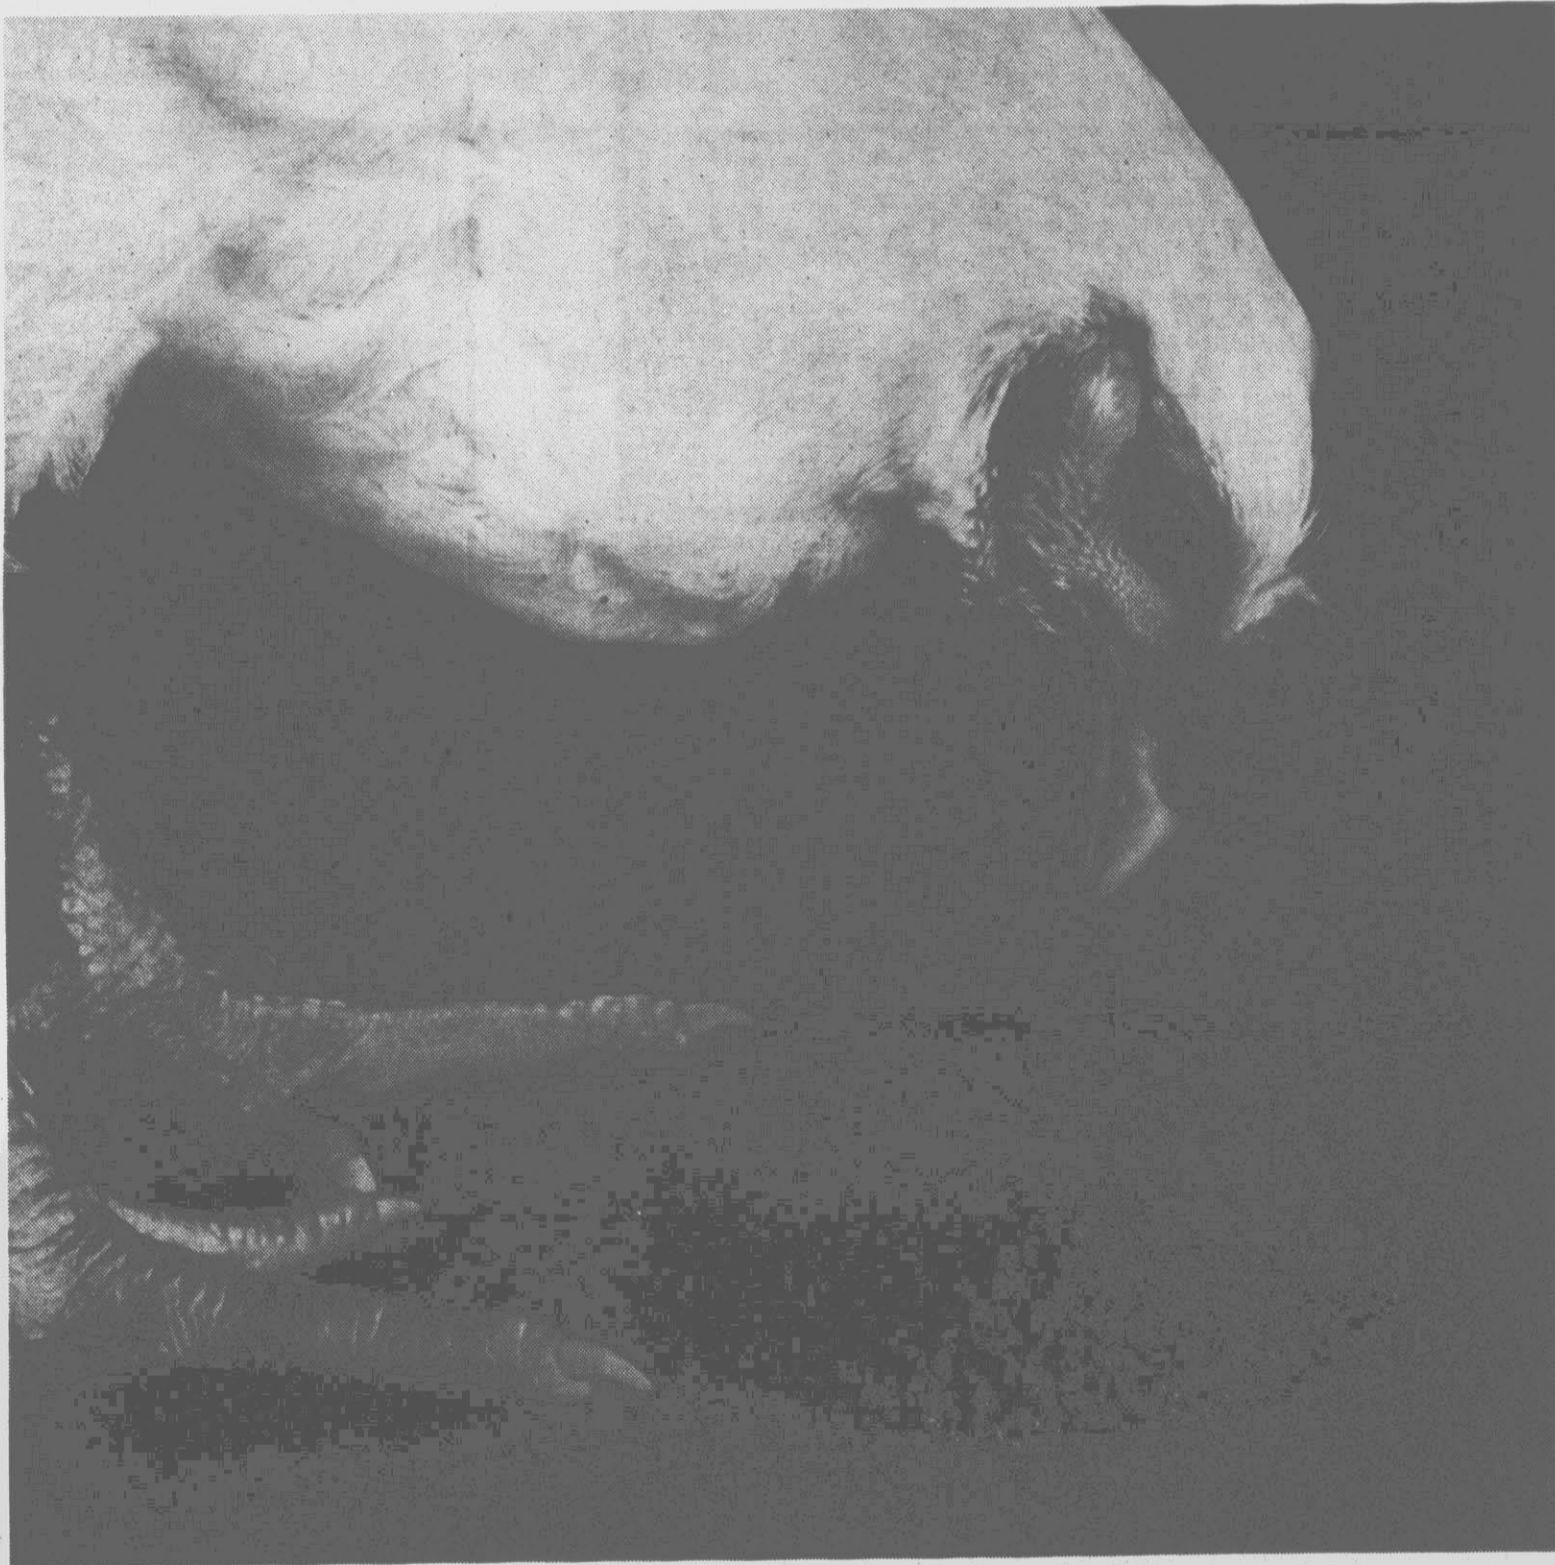

Police in Hazard, Ky., meanwhile were keeping a watchful eye on a 250,000-gallon water tank that could be forced over a mountaintop by a mud slide. "The foundation under the water tank isn't very good," Hazard Mayor Bill Gorman said Sunday, adding that the tank rests on the back of a "massive" slide about 150 feet wide.

In Clear Creek, Utah, Iver Joel Koski, 70, was killed and his brother-in-law, Richard Sutton, 53, was in good condition with broken ribs after they were caught by a slide in the town of about 50 people 100 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Slides had occurred last week, but "they never notified us they had a problem" said Sheriff A. Ross Horsley.

Koski and Frank Helsten were talking outside a home and Sutton was inside. They had been removing belongings from that and other homes.

They heard a loud noise, looked up and saw a tree shaking, Helsten said.

Men Face Soliciting Charges

Greenville police have arrested three men in separate incidents on charges of loitering for prostitution, soliciting to commit a felony (an unnatural sex act) and carrying a concealed weapon.

Chief Ted Holmes said William Evans, 24, of 112 N. Church St., Winterville, was arrested in a parking lot at 1901 Dickinson Ave. about 10:15 p.m. Friday, while Raymond Andrew Johnson, 18, of 112 N. Church St., Winterville, was taken into custody about 11:20 p.m. Friday on Dickinson Avenue. Holmes said Ronnie Jerome Callahan, 26, of 310 Paige Drive was arrested at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Watauga Avenue about 2 a.m. Saturday.

In addition to the weapons, soliciting and loitering charges, Callahan was charged with resisting arrest.

The chief said the arrests resulted from an undercover operation headed by the department's narcotics and vice squad.

Crime Rate Drops Dramatically In 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robbery, aggravated assault and burglary were dramatically less widespread in 1983 as 7 percent fewer U.S. households were touched by crime than the year before, the Justice Department says.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Sunday that 27 percent of U.S. households, or 3.6 million of the total 86.1 million households, suffered one or more crimes during the year.

In 1982, nearly 25 million households out of a total of 85.2 million, or 29 percent, were touched by crime. The bureau said the decline in 1983 was the largest in the nine years the figures have been gathered.

While the percentage of households hit by crime in 1983 was 2 points lower than the comparable figure for the previous year, that point decrease represents 7 percent of the households victimized in 1982.

For the first time, virtually every type affected fewer households. And, the pervasiveness declined in urban, suburban and rural areas, although black and urban households continued to be more vulnerable to crime than white or suburban or rural households.

The number of households experiencing at least one robbery dropped by 19 percent, while the figures for aggravated assault and burglary dropped by 9 percent and 11 percent, respectively.

Only 6.1 percent of the nation's households experienced one or more burglaries, the lowest percentage ever recorded in the nine years. Some 5.3 million households were burglarized during the year, 7 percent below the number in 1975, although the number of households in the nation has increased by 18 percent during those nine years.

"We know that in 1983 about 70 million people lived in households touched by crime," bureau Director

Steven V. Schlesinger said. "Even though this number is smaller than that for the previous year, it indicates that crime victimization remains a widespread occurrence."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ95 ♥87 ♦KJ6 ♣AQ106
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Dble Pass 2 ♦
Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—What would you like to do? Even though you have more than a minimum for a takeout double, partner has denied fair values by his failure to jump. In addition, he almost certainly does not have four spades. Since there is no hope for game, you might as well pass in case partner is really broke.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K986 ♥AJ10632 ♦K6 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a superb hand for partner. Nevertheless, it is still a minimum opening bid, and you shouldn't get carried away by the distribution. Raise to two spades. Unless partner can bid again, you are unlikely to have missed anything. By the way, only a selfish player would rebid a six-card suit with four-card support for partner's suit, especially a major.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ109763 ♥A ♦AKQJ2
What is your opening bid?
A.—Believe it or not, there is a conventional bid that can handle this situation. Open five spades. That asks partner to raise you to the six-level if he holds either the ace or king of your suit, or to bid a grand slam if he happens to have both.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1095 ♥K63 ♦A84 ♣J982
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—On this auction, there is a chance that your partner has only four spades and five hearts. However, it is much more likely that he has five spades and four hearts, and you owe it to him to take a preference to his first-bid suit. Correct to two spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♥QJ63 ♦Q9854 ♣Q932
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—Just because you aren't enamored with partner's bid and are afraid that he might rebid his suit at a higher level is no reason for you to throw in the sponge. If partner does have a second suit, you might even have a game. Respond one no trump and see what happens.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A987 ♥KJ6 ♦AJ104 ♣J9
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—There is no point to bidding your spades. First, partner is unlikely to have four-card support. Second, you might confuse partner into thinking that you have an unbalanced hand with at least five diamonds, and as a result your side could end in the wrong spot. Make the value bid of six no trump.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices continued last week's slide in moderate trading today amid lingering concern about interest rates and the pace of economic growth.

Automotive, retail, airlines and technology stocks were numerous among the losers, while a few entertainment, mining and metals stocks rose.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 10.05 points on Friday for an 8.17-point loss for the week, was down another 5.97 points at 1,151.17 at noon EDT.

Losers held a 2 to 1 lead over gainers among issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange whose composite index was down 0.40 at 90.83.

Big Board volume totaled 26.43 million shares by noontime, against 34.77 million shares at the same point on Friday.

Stock prices have been under pressure from expectations of higher interest rates fueled by heavy government borrowing and a pickup in business demand for credit.

But some analysts say corporate earnings are strong and that they expect the pace of economic growth will soon slow, a combination which should reduce upward pressure on rates.

Before trading began today, the Commerce Department reported that inventories held by businesses rose 0.9 percent in March, the ninth consecutive monthly increase but only half the 1.8 percent increase in February.

Pirates Blast Madison In Title Game

HARRISONBURG, Va. — Winfred Johnson returned to the mound after two days rest and threw a complete game, while tourney MVP Mike Williams drove in four runs with three hits as the Pirates of East Carolina University defeated James Madison 9-5 Sunday to capture the 1984 ECAC-South Tournament championship.

Johnson pitched a complete game Thursday when the Pirates lost 4-1 to Georgetown in the opening round. Against Madison, Johnson gave up 10 hits and five earned runs with five walks.

"With Winfred coming back in two days, I didn't know how long he could go," ECU Coach Hal Baird said. "But he's a tough kid. We swung the bats real well, and that helped Winfred because he didn't have to pitch under pressure."

"He normally requires three days, but there was nobody we would rather have with the ball than Winfred. Nobody would be more ready to do that than Winfred."

The Pirates played five games in the tourney and used just six pitchers as the ECU starters threw four complete games. East Carolina is just the second team to lose its first game and go on to take the title, as William & Mary accomplished the feat last year. The Pirates also joined James Madison as the only top-seeded teams to win the tourney; the Dukes did it in 1982.

Johnson ripped a mammoth homer Saturday to lead the Pirates to a 4-3 victory over Madison and forced the final game. The win Sunday marked the fourth win by ECU over the Dukes this season and set the series record at 9-0. JMU cruised through its opening-round game against LaSalle, while the Pirates went to the consolation bracket for the remainder of the tourney.

"Any time you win it, you're not worried about the route you took," Baird said. "Our kids knew after the first game that we could come back and win it. And in a four-team tournament, it's not as tough. But that's not to take anything away from James Madison or the other two teams."

"Madison has a fine ballclub, and we just happen to play our best when we play them. Good teams bring out the best in you. A lot of people try to make more of that than there is."

"Some people are calling it a jinx, but I don't believe that. We're just two good ballclubs, and when we meet it's just what happens between the lines. James Madison is an outstanding team, and we've just been fortunate each time we've played them."

The Pirates now wait to find out which NCAA Regional they will attend May 23-27. ECU is now 32-11 on the season, while Madison dropped to 38-13.

JMU took a brief lead in the top of the fourth when Carey Nemeth ripped a homer to left-center. It was his fifth of the tourney, establishing a new record.

But the Pirates took control with four runs in the bottom half of the frame. Todd Evans opened with a base on balls and moved to second on a fielder's choice by Johnson. A single by Williams drove in Evans, while a walk to Chris Bradberry and an infield hit by Steve Sides filled the bases. Mark Shank slapped an RBI single to right, and Bradberry scored when the JMU shortstop threw the ball in the dirt on a grounder by Jim Riley. Greg Hardison lofted a sacrifice fly to left to drive in Sides.

Nemeth doubled to leadoff the sixth but was later thrown out at third on Steve Cullers' grounder to shortstop. Morant followed with a two-run homer to trim the margin to 4-3.

But the Pirates put the game out of reach with five more in the

Celtics Oust Knicks

BOSTON (AP) — If at first you don't succeed, you can try, try again. The New York Knicks, however, won't get another chance to beat the Celtics in Boston.

The Celtics jumped on top quickly and, like the early leader in the other six games of the National Basketball Association playoff series, went on to win Sunday for the fourth straight time at home.

By routing the Knicks 121-104 in the seventh and decisive game, the Celtics earned the right to play host to Milwaukee Tuesday night in the opener of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

"It'll be difficult for the Bucks to beat the Celtics. The Celtics are playing very well," said Bernard King, who has first-hand knowledge of Boston's ability.

The Knicks' brilliant forward averaged 35.7 points per game, including six over the 40 mark, in his first 11 playoff contests but was held to seven in the first half Sunday.

By the time he got his first field goal, nearly three minutes into the second period, Boston already had a 44-30 lead. The edge never dipped below nine points after that.

"I told the players the Knicks were going to go to King from the start and we had to do all we could to stop that," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones.

Offensively, the Celtics wanted to give the ball to Larry Bird, who ended up with a career playoff-high of 39 points.

"The game plan was to go to Larry and get him started quick," Jones said. "He was going well and we kept going there."

"I was concerned about getting off to a good start because the team that led early had won each game," said Bird. In five of the seven games, including Sunday's, the winning team never trailed.

Bird had 15 points in the first quarter, which ended with Boston ahead 36-26. In the first six games, the team leading after the opening period went on to win.

Trevino Caps Braves' Two-Out Rally

By The Associated Press
The Atlanta Braves have won eight of their last nine games, and part-time catcher Alex Trevino feels like he's been given a second life.
Trevino, traded from Cincinnati on April 24, hit a two-run double in the bottom of the 10th inning, capping a two-out, three-run rally that gave the Braves a 9-8 victory over Pittsburgh Sunday.
"I feel like I'm just reborn again," Trevino said.
Before the trade, Trevino had not appeared in a game as a catcher, going to bat only six times as a pinch-hitter for the Reds. Since coming to Atlanta, he has caught in seven games and has a .400 batting average with 12 hits in 30 at-bats.
Trevino called the game-winning hit, his first of the season, the biggest hit of his career "because I'm with a winner now, potential World Series champs."

In the rest of the National League, Houston shut out Chicago 1-0. Los Angeles beat New York 5-3. St. Louis downed Cincinnati 6-2. San Francisco edged Montreal 4-3 and Philadelphia clobbered San Diego 8-3.
Trevino's hit came off John Candelaria, making a rare relief appearance for Pittsburgh, and enabled the Braves to come from behind for the second time in the game.
Atlanta tied the score 6-6 with a pair of runs in the ninth against three Pittsburgh relievers, including Rod Scurry, who was making his first appearance since April 5 after coming off drug rehabilitation.

Trevino had a single in that rally, but Pittsburgh scored two runs in the top of the 10th to take an 8-6 lead.
Singles by Lee Lacy and Bill Madlock started the inning, and Tony Pena followed with an RBI single. Madlock also scored on the play when Pena was caught in a rundown.
But after two were out in the Braves 10th, Pirates right-hander Don Robinson walked Jerry Royster and Gerald Perry. Candelaria, who started in Friday's 4-2 loss to the Braves, then relieved and gave up an RBI double to Claudell Washington, setting the stage for Trevino.
"That was the toughest loss I ever had as a manager," Pirates skipper Chuck Tanner said. "I never saw anything like it."

Astros 1, Cubs 0
Mike Madden and Vern Ruhle combined to check Chicago on nine hits, and Houston scored its only run off Rick Reuschel in the fourth on a triple by Jerry Mumphrey and Enos Cabell's sacrifice fly. Reuschel went the distance, allowing only three hits.
Madden scattered six hits in five innings, aided by two double plays, and Ruhle went the rest of the way for his second save.
Ryne Sandberg of the Cubs singled in the fifth inning to extend his hitting streak to 16 games, longest in the NL this season.
Dodgers 5, Mets 3
Left-hander Rick Honeycutt posted his fifth victory, scattering six hits over six innings, and rookie R.J. Reynolds singled three times as

Los Angeles salvaged the third game of its series with New York.
Tom Niedenfuer shut out the Mets over the final three innings.
Reynolds singled and scored in the third inning and drove in a run in the sixth.
The Dodgers scored three unearned runs in the fifth after an error by Mets shortstop Ross Jones. Pedro Guerrero doubled home one run, and the other two scored when reliever Tim Lary threw a wild pitch with the bases loaded.
Cardinals 6, Reds 2
George Hendrick hit his second home run in two days to help St. Louis end Cincinnati's winning streak at six games. Hendrick homered with two out in the ninth inning on Saturday night to break up a no-hitter by Mario Soto.

John Stuper also singled home a run and pitched six innings for the Cardinals, scattering four hits, and Bruce Sutter pitched the final 1 1/3 innings for his eighth save.
Hendrick hit a solo homer, his third of the season, leading off the fourth, and he also drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning.
Giants 4, Expos 3
Jack Clark's single drove in Chili Davis, who had tripled with two out, to break a seventh-inning tie as San Francisco took two out of three from Montreal.
Rookie right-hander Scott Garrelts pitched eight innings in relief for the Giants, and Randy Lerch got the final three outs for his first save. The Expos scored twice in the first inning, and San Francisco starter Mark Davis left without getting a man out.

Yankees Win 'Sloppy' Shutout

By The Associated Press
Bob Shirley gave the New York Yankees a handful of high-fives.
He pitched five innings Sunday against Seattle.
He allowed five hits ... and five walks.
But when Manager Yogi Berra decided to change pitchers at the start of the sixth inning — "That's enough, Bob," he said. "You're giving me a heart attack." — the left-hander left a winner as Jose Rijo and Dave Righetti preserved the 7-0 shutout of the visiting Mariners.
Elsewhere in the American League it was Kansas City 5, Boston 1; Baltimore 5, Oakland 1; Milwaukee 4, Minnesota 1, and Chicago 8, Texas 1.
Rain washed out California's game at Detroit and the Toronto-Cleveland doubleheader with the Blue Jays and Indians tied 4-4 in the eighth inning of the first game.
"It was pretty sloppy pitching," Shirley said of his first start of the season. "I just couldn't get the ball over. In this park, all you've got to do is throw strikes, but sometimes that's the hardest thing to do. You try to throw strikes and you start aiming them like darts."

Shirley, usually a middle-inning reliever, was pressed into service as an emergency starter because the Yanks had played 16-and 17-inning games Thursday and Friday nights. Asked when Shirley might make another start, Berra replied: "In an emergency."
In his previous six games this year — 16 2/3 innings of relief — Shirley had a 7.56 earned-run average. "I guess when you start hearing people booing at you, you've got to start doing better," he said. "I don't know what I was doing out there. It was strange just to be out there."
And then, with a turn of phrase that would make Yogi proud, he added: "I guess I was so excited that I sort of fell asleep."
Lou Piniella and Roy Smalley had run-scoring singles off Mark Langston in the first inning and the Yanks chased him when they scored three runs in the fourth on RBI singles by Mike O'Berry, Willie Randolph and Don Baylor. Andre Robertson drove in a fifth-inning run with a suicide squeeze bunt and, one inning later, Smalley produced his second run-scoring single.

Royals 5, Red Sox 1
Unlike Shirley, Bud Black of Kansas City had no trouble finding the plate. He struck out eight Boston batters and didn't allow a walk until giving up two in the eighth.
"I had a good fastball today and I was able to put it in spots," said Black. "When you do that, you get good results."
And when Black faltered, Dan Quisenberry took over and racked up his ninth save, tops in the league.
"We're just not hitting the ball," said Manager Ralph Houk, whose Red Sox were outscored 14-5 in losing all three games to the Royals. Pat Sheridan hit a two-run homer in Kansas City's five-run fifth against Mike Brown.
Orioles 5, A's 1
Wayne Gross and Steve McCatty were long-time teammates with the A's — and before. They're still close friends. But in Gross' first appearance against McCatty, he drilled a single and a homer, driving in all of Baltimore's runs to back Storm Davis' six-hit pitching.

"We go back a long way," Gross said. "We signed together in 1973 and played rookie and A-ball together. Today was my day, his might be next. You never can tell. He's probably my best friend in baseball."
"As far as I'm concerned, it was Wayne Gross 5 and the A's 1," said

McCatty. "He's the only one who did any real damage. He's a friend of mine, but on the field he's the enemy. As many times as I'm going to face him, he may not get another hit, or he may get 10."
"Sometimes you eat the bear, and sometimes the bear eats you."

Besana's TD Passes Lead Oakland Over Wranglers

By The Associated Press
After the airborne division of the Oakland Invaders' offense stalled, they found an able pilot in grounded quarterback Fred Besana.
Besana came off the bench to fire two touchdown passes, rallying the Invaders to a 14-3 United States Football League victory over the Arizona Wranglers Sunday. It was Oakland's third straight triumph after opening the season with nine consecutive losses.
Besana was Oakland's starter until the team traded for Tom Ramsey earlier this season. But Ramsey was ineffective before he suffered a slight concussion in the second quarter, completing one pass (for two yards) in five attempts, with one interception.
On his first series, Besana guided the Invaders on a 27-yard scoring drive that he capped with a seven-yard touchdown pass to Marc Lewis. Oakland went ahead 14-3 in the fourth quarter when Besana tossed another seven-yard touchdown pass to Brian Williams.
"Fred Besana deserves a lot of credit for the way he came off the bench today," Oakland Coach Chuck Hutchison said. "You have to have 43 players contribute to win and we had that today."
In Sunday's other games, New Orleans tripped Michigan 10-3 and Philadelphia edged Los Angeles 18-14. Houston outscored Pittsburgh 47-26 in Saturday's only game, and on Friday it was Washington 31, New Jersey 17; Memphis 38, San Antonio 14; Birmingham 42, Jacksonville 10 and Chicago 29, Denver 17.
In tonight's game, Oklahoma is at Tampa Bay.
In addition to Besana, Oakland also got offensive help from halfback Eric Jordan, who had 29 carries for 107 yards, his third consecutive 100-yard game since becoming a starter.
"I don't feel as good as I did last week," Jordan said. "I don't like to carry the ball so many times to barely get 100 yards."

The Invaders' defense held Arizona to 75 yards rushing and sacked Wrangler quarterbacks Greg Landry and Alan Risher eight times. Oakland linebacker Gary Plumber set up Besana's touchdown passes with a fumble recovery and an interception.
"Oakland is a better team than the last time we played them," Arizona Coach George Allen said. "They are playing with confidence now and Jordan gives them the home run threat. We didn't score any touchdowns today, so that should give you an answer as to what I think about the way the offense played."
Arizona's only points came on a 31-yard field goal by Frank Corral in the first period.
Stars 18, Express 14
A 46-yard interception return by Garcia Lane set up a go-ahead touchdown by Dave Riley and Philadelphia went on to record its 11th victory in 12 games by winning at home against Los Angeles.

A crowd of 22,391 saw Los Angeles quarterback Steve Young and fullback Mel Gray power the Express, 5-7, to a 14-9 lead with 3:18 left in the third quarter. Young ran nine yards to give Los Angeles its second touchdown.
Gray, a rookie from Purdue, finished with 122 yards on 20 carries, including a 20-yard TD jaunt, to become the first rusher to gain more than 100 yards in a game against the Stars this season.
Kim Takes First In Three Events
JACKSONVILLE — Won Kim took first place in three events to lead the Greenville Swim Club to a fifth place finish at Camp Lejeune Saturday.
Kim won the 100 back stroke, 100 butterfly and the 200 individual medley in the 11-12 age group, and was second in the 100 freestyle and third in the senior boys 50 free.
Marshall Moore led the 13-14 age group with a first place in the 200 IM and 100 free. Moore was second in the senior boys 50 butterfly and 100 backstroke, as well as the overall high point award in his age group.

Moore Leads Parrott Golfers
GASTONIA — Lyn Moore of Greenville won the State Prep School Golf Tournament at Gastonia Golf and Country Club.
Moore, a student at Parrott Academy in Kinston, shot a two-day total of 153 with a par of 72 in bad weather conditions.
Greenville's D.J. Patrick shot a 160 in the same tourney, and both were named to the all state team. Moore also won the district round at North Green CC in Rocky Mount April 30 with a three-over 75.
Parrott Academy finished second in the state behind Forsythe High School and first in District I of the North Carolina Independent School Athletic Association. Moore, Patrick and Jim Blount, also of Greenville, were named all conference in the Coastal Plain Independent league.
"Our golf team has been most successful this year, considering the inclement weather conditions they've faced," Parrott Coach Hugh Pollock said. "Lyn Moore, a newcomer, has contributed greatly to our overall success. He has an excellent swing and plays the game very intelligently and confidently."
"D.J. Patrick and Jim Blount have always been steady contributors to the program."

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 5-14

U A U R I M F J U A F D J J D M L P R K D Q Q K J
 E P D B M E Q L M D B I Q D Q J .

Saturday's Cryptiquip — BALKY, BROKEN CLOCKS CAN'T ALARM MOST SLEEPY PEOPLE.
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: U equals P

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Goldblum Shines As 'Ernie Kovacs'

Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — "Ernie Kovacs: Between the Laughter," tonight on ABC, is a sad story about a very funny man, and a tour-de-force for Jeff Goldblum and a cigar.

Goldblum is rarely without the eight-inch stogie in this movie about the radio and television funnyman whose rise to stardom was disrupted by a little-publicized custody fight over two young girls.

The cigar (there's even a spare in a water glass in Kovacs' bathroom) is no mere prop; that instrument, and a dark mustache, contributed significantly to Kovacs' comic image. And Goldblum's Kovacs is a clown in the face of all sorts of adversity.

"You know what gets me?" he asks his wife, Dorothy, who's just admitted she's having an affair with a fellow called Welland. "Welland," Ernie continues, answering his own question. "It's such a dumb name. It sounds like something I'd make up."

Goldblum, a talented actor whose credits include the acclaimed but short-lived ABC series "Tenspeed and Brownshoe" and the theatrical films "The Big Chill" and "The Right Stuff," is superb as Kovacs, who died in an automobile accident in Hollywood in 1962.

Several of Kovacs' most familiar characters and routines are re-created in the TV movie, and the vintage effect — black-and-white and slightly distorted — is remarkable, and genuinely appealing.

Cloris Leachman plays Kovacs' zany Hungarian-born mother, Mary, and Melody Anderson his second wife, singer and comedian Edie Adams. Miss Adams herself makes a cameo appearance in the film as Mae West.

Ernie is about to start his first TV job when Dorothy (Madolyn Smith) leaves home to join Welland in Florida. Kovacs quickly becomes a local hit in Philadelphia and is hired by NBC as a summer replacement for "Kukla, Fran and Ollie."

Dorothy, apparently aware of Ernie's success, returns after two years, demanding custody of the children. A judge won't take the youngsters from Kovacs but refuses to cut the woman off altogether; on one occasion, she takes the kids and disappears.

Ernie vows to do whatever is necessary to find his daughters. As the months pass, and the bills mount, one private eye after another returns empty-handed.

In the meantime, Ernie meets Miss Adams, a music-school graduate intent on a Broadway career, and she becomes a regular on his television show. They fall in love, though Edie warns the entertainer that her parents don't like men with moustaches.

"Don't you find yourself awfully warm with that hair on your lip?" Edie's father inquires when they meet. "No," Ernie replies, reaching for a glass of fruit juice. "No. Not when I have something cold to drink."

Their relationship is threatened when Edie is cast in a Broadway play, "Wonderful Town," with Rosalind Russell; for a while, she tries to do both the play and Kovacs' TV show, but that doesn't work. What's more, she complains, Ernie is demanding too much of her time.

"Living with you is a full-time job," she says.

"You make it sound like sanitation work," he responds.

Actress To Recreate Attack For Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Theresa Saldana says she'll recreate the stabbing attack that nearly killed her for a television movie she hopes will show "what it's like to be an innocent victim."

Miss Saldana, 28, plays herself in an NBC-TV movie that tells of the assault on her by a drifter, her dramatic rescue by a water delivery man and the aftermath that prompted her to form "Victims for Victims," which is also the name of the movie to be telecast next fall.

"I feel playing myself makes a statement because it shows I am completely recovered and able to work again," said Miss Saldana, who began work Friday on the movie.

She was attacked March 15, 1982, outside her West Hollywood apartment by Arthur Richard Jackson, who had seen her in the movie "Raging Bull." Jackson, a citizen of Scotland, was sentenced to prison for attempted first-degree murder, and will be eligible for parole in two years.

Miss Saldana said she had no apprehension about staging the attack.

"I've already been there. It's just a matter of remembering what it was like and re-creating it," she said.

Director Karen Arthur said Dr. Paul Joseph, the psychiatrist who treated the actress during her recovery, will be on hand. The filming location will be kept secret so it will be "safe and comfortable" for Miss Saldana, who will have a bodyguard, the director said.

Expensive Runoff Developing In N.C. Race For Governor

By The Associated Press
An expensive and possibly bitter campaign could be waged between Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox for the right to be the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, the candidates' strategists say.
Edmisten's strategists say he'll go on the offensive during the runoff campaign, which will end with the election June 5. He previously focused mainly on his record as attorney general. Now he'll question Knox's record and loyalties.

During last Wednesday's news conference, for example, Edmisten said the primary results had left North Carolina Democrats with a choice "between the special interests, the rich and the people."

In a new advertisement, Edmisten criticizes Knox for suggesting that the N.C. Utilities Commission's public staff, which represents consumers, be reduced.

Meanwhile, Knox is peppering Edmisten with criticism, mostly about the attorney general's campaign tactics.

"He has put out the dirt, and he has ridden the white horse," said Knox.

But campaign manager Marvin Blount says the the Knox camp won't alter its strategy radically.

"The important thing is that we really went to sleep right there at the end," said Blount. "We're going to communicate real closely with our people and let them know that in the runoff, the smaller turnout is going to make the get-out-the-vote effort especially important."

Edmisten's campaign plans to spend about $500,000 for the runoff. As of April 21, Edmisten had raised $1.5 million — $180,000 of it in loans.

The Knox camp also has budgeted about $500,000 for the runoff and will spend most of it on television ads.

In addition to advertising, both sides also will emphasize getting their supporters to the polls — especially since turnout traditionally is lower for a runoff than a first primary.

"I think people realize we are now sort of in the underdog position," said Knox. "We have to work harder, to do more door-to-door, more phoning. Certainly our people will be more active than they were."

Hospitals Feeling Financial Troubles

By The Associated Press
Competition has invaded the hospital business and it is the small hospitals which stand to suffer the most, a University of North Carolina official says.

"I would guess 30 or 40 hospitals in the state are not going to be able to survive the price competition," said I. Glenn Wilson, chairman of social and administrative medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The North Carolina Hospital Association reports more than 1,000 beds were closed in 30 hospitals in the state between late 1982 and 1983. One of every four hospitals laid off employees during the same period in response to declining occupancy rates.

Wilson and other observers blame the trend on a dramatic increase in use of larger hospitals at the expense of smaller ones, a decline in the average length of hospital stays and growing emphasis on outpatient services.

Other factors are the aging of public hospitals built with the help of federal money, an influx of for-profit hospital chains and changing private health insurance reimbursement formulas amid rising health care costs.

Under new Medicare payment rules, which began to be phased in last October, hospitals get a pre-determined fee from Medicare for treating a given type of ailment, regardless of how long patients remain hospitalized.

Hospitals previously would bill the federal government for "reasonable costs" of treating patients and would receive more the longer the patients stayed.

Hospitals can't bill patients for the difference if their care costs more than their Medicare payments. Therefore, with the set rate, hospitals that discharge quickly and keep their costs down will come out on top.

After the rules changed in October, bed occupancy rates at many North Carolina hospitals declined noticeably.

At Moore Memorial Hospital in Southern Pines, the rate fell 20 percent, forcing that facility to close 45 of its 336 beds, rework some of its services and impose hiring freezes and temporary layoffs.

But administrator J. Crenshaw Thompson said the new Medicare rules have had "a positive effect on all of us. I hate to put dollars and cents on everything we do, but it has made everybody more budget-conscious."

For-profit chain hospitals have sprung up across the nation and in North Carolina, where they have built or taken over the operations of hospitals in Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Raleigh, Hickory, Tarboro, Sanford, Statesville and Mooresville.

Critics contend such hospitals skim off the cream in the health care field, choosing locations where patients can best afford to pay and limiting their services to those that are most profitable.

"They have put nothing creative into health care," said Arnold S. Relman, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine. "They have simply been quick and astute enough to recognize that the American health care system is an invitation to make money."

NCAE Skipping New Endorsement

RALEIGH (AP) — There will be no endorsement from the North Carolina Association of Educators on the June 5 Democratic gubernatorial race between Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox.

The group rejected a committee's recommendation to endorse Knox during a closed meeting of the NCAE's 148-member ratification council Saturday.

Glenn Keever, communications director for the organization, said the action resulted from views that there were few differences between the candidates on education and concerns that an endorsement might prove divisive.

Keever said the vote on the NCAE's Political Action Committee on Education recommending endorsing Knox was "fairly close."

Edmisten led the 10-man field in Tuesday's primary and Knox, who came in second, called for a runoff set for June 5.

Edmisten said that he had expected Knox, former mayor of Charlotte, to receive the endorsement and said he was pleased with the decision against making an endorsement.

Community Colleges Losing Faculty

DURHAM (AP) — A recently completed survey shows that the overall attrition rate for the North Carolina community college system's teachers was about 10 percent a year, according to a community college official.

Sanford Shugart, vice president in programming for the 58-campus community college system, said that figure "is not so bad."

But the news isn't as good in health, business, computer, mechanical and electrical and electronics programs, where an average of 14 to 17 percent of the teachers are leaving to work for private industries, he said.

Mark Van Sciver, spokesman for the community college system, said

North Carolina has the second-lowest salaries for community college teachers in the nation, with Mississippi's the lowest.

On the average, teachers who leave for better-paying jobs are receiving 35.8 percent more money than what they were making, Shugart said. The average new salary is $24,952. The average salary at the time a teacher leaves the college is $17,777, and the average replacement's salary is $18,994.

Former Gov. Bob Scott, president of the community college system, is planning to ask the Legislature for a $27,461,938 budget when it convenes in June. If granted, the budget would include a 10 percent pay raise for teachers.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, don't give the appearance of trying to find out from companions just what they are trying to do or they will resent it very much. You feel like getting out of promises, but wait.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is the best time to handle practical obligations and then tonight you can plan to make changes. Plan to add to your bank account.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to understand that stubborn person better and come to a fine understanding. Keep any promises you have made.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy at work in the morning, then talk over plans with an associate, but don't make deals yet. Be sensible.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some entertainment matter may go awry, so get busy and accomplish a good deal in some worthwhile endeavor.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't let a situation at home bother you too much and then get into new interests that can bring you greater abundance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get those difficult problems handled wisely in morning; then be sure to go along with some family plan.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your monetary position in the morning and figure out how to improve it; then confide in those who can be of assistance to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find the best way of adding to your prosperity, since your present aims are not very good. Take care of that physical matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early get rid of that private anxiety so that later you can keep the promises you have made calmly. Think logically.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Work every angle possible to gain your aims today, then sit back and feel satisfied. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Begin the day properly by meeting the expectations of those in public office and then assist friends in some way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some new activity needs further study before you get into it. Handle that outside duty that is important. Drive carefully.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who will automatically understand what the score is in any situation but will need to study all the ramifications before any problem can be solved wisely. One who will be fascinated by difficult problems.

Poisoned Cola

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — The death of a man from cyanide-laced Coca-Cola prompted store owners to remove bottles with the same serial number from their shelves, while authorities pressed their investigation for the source of the poison.

Police Chief LeRoy Strauss said Sunday that store owners in Manitowoc voluntarily cleared their shelves of 16-ounce, twist-top Coca-Cola bottles with the serial number C-30-D "as a precautionary move until we learn more about this."

There are no bargains in health coverage. Some plans are just better than others.

Common sense and past experience will tell you that, if your health plan is sound, its cost will be fair.

Well then, how sound is it? How appropriate is the coverage and how accurately does it anticipate your needs?

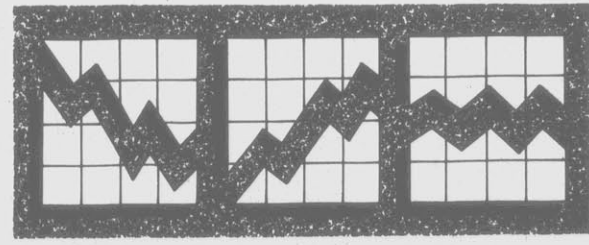

You know what it costs. But what is it worth?

High-value coverage vs. bargain rates.

The single most important determinant of your plan's value will be the information used to construct it.

For example, annual utilization estimates for a specific group in a specific locale should not be based on gross regional or even state averages, but on actual local data.

How much will your coverage cost 12 months from now?

And even within communities, careful distinctions should be drawn between facilities, physicians, and support services such as labs.

That's why we maintain the most comprehensive database of its kind in North Carolina.

It's the basic resource that enables us to help our subscribers choose their options so wisely.

And their deductibles.

And their risk-levels.

And it also makes all the difference between paying lip-service to cost-containment and actually helping our subscribers adopt workable strategies.

Cost-containment made practical.

For example, since an average hospital day in North Carolina now costs about $418, every group should do what it can to control its need for hospitalization.

But given the specific composition of your group, how and to what extent would reduced hospital stays be possible?

And given the specific cost of health care in your community, what would be your options for containing those costs?

We can help you answer those questions with a precision that simply isn't possible for anyone else.

How we save $185 million a year.

Precision, as a matter of fact, might be our most distinguishing characteristic.

You'll find it in the way we review claims to verify their validity.

And coordinate benefits to prevent overpayments.

And monitor changes in health-care costs, so we can question claims that appear unusual or excessive.

Out of each dollar received in fees, we spend less than 6¢ to cover all our expenses. The rest is used to benefit our subscribers.

The result is high-value coverage that saves more money than any bargain-rate ever could.

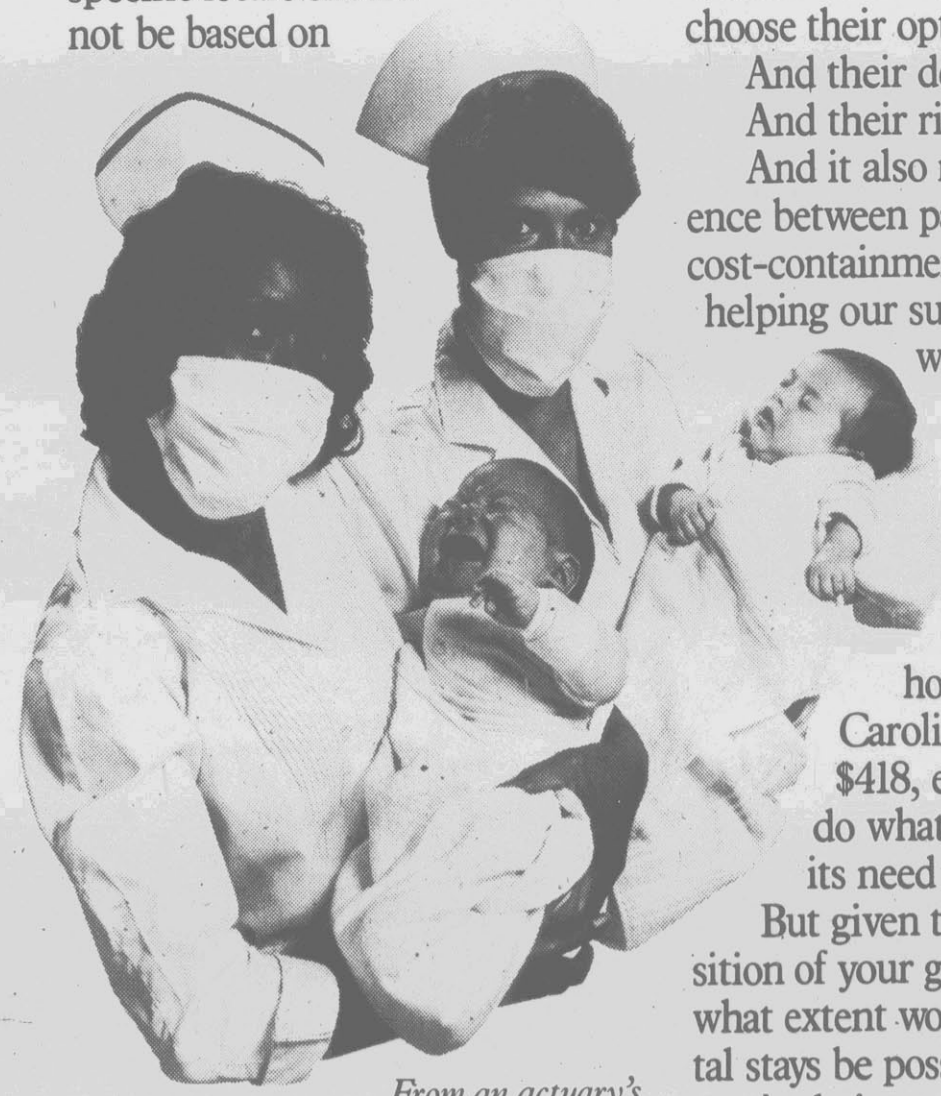

Last year those savings came to more than $185 million. To learn how your group can share in them, just call our nearest office.

Or write to Cost Containment, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, Box 2291, Durham, NC 27702.

The better you understand health coverage the more you'll prefer ours.

From an actuary's viewpoint, having a baby in Thomasville is not necessarily the same thing as having a baby in Greenville.
