City Will Eye $1.4 Million In '84-85

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

An additional $1.4 million will be needed in the coming fiscal year to run Greenville's city government and services as they should be run, City Manager Gail Meeks told City Council members during a preliminary budget workshop held Monday night at City Hall.

"We really need $1.4 million. We could get by with a $500,000 increase in revenue, but that would mean putting off a number of much needed improvements until the next fiscal year. And while none of our requests are written in concrete, a number of items are definite needs," Mrs. Meeks said.

Several major proposals that have been written into the preliminary budget include an assessment of data processing needs of the city office, the addition of nine full-time and eight part-time city employees, new garbage and police vehicles, providing better handicapped services at city buildings and improving the city's police training and re-training program.

According to Mrs. Meeks, $30,000 for police training, $65,000 for street maintenance and improvements and $22,000 for the data processing analysis would be budgeted items. Improving access to city buildings for the handicapped, the purchase of new city vehicles and acquisition

Winterville Board Holds 2 Hearings

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Board of Aldermen conducted public hearings Monday night on proposals dealing with off-street residential parking and with property off Main Street.

The first hearing was to amend the zoning ordinance dealing with multifamily residential dimensions and off-street parking from one space for a single family dwelling unit to two spaces, increase requirements to two spaces for a two-family unit, one and one-half spaces for a three bedroom multifamily dwelling unit. There were no comments from citizens concerning the change.

In a second public hearing the

Pitt School Board OK's New Budget

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education will submit a $7,820,708 current expense budget — including $5,997,175 in county appropriations — and a $535,481 capital outlay budget for 1984-85 to the Pitt County Commissioners next week.

In addition, the board will request $375,000 — its estimated share of the one-half cent sales tax — in additional capitol outlay funds.

The board approved the 1984-85 budget, which tops the 1983-84 budget by $656,125, in a special meeting Monday.

The increases include a 15 percent salary raise for professional personnel and a 10 percent increase for classified personnel, increments set by the state, in addition to $40,000 earmarked for leasing new band equipment for the county. It also includes $10,000 to cover the expenses of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges 10-year reaccreditation review, and $51,474 for additional guidance counselors required for this reaccreditation.

County Agencies Ask More Funds

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners continued its series of preliminary budget hearings Monday, with representatives from such agencies as the Board of Elections, emergency management, solid waste and the sheriff's department, presenting their requests for funding for fiscal year 1984-85.

Clifton Everett Jr., chairman of the Board of Elections, presented requests totaling $187,892 for the coming year. The requests, considerably higher than the present budget of $80,192, includes sizeable increases in the area of pay for part-time help and poll holders, telephone service and office supplies.

However, the request does not include funds for vote-tabulating machines such as those used at two precincts during the May 8 primary.

Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner proposed a budget totaling $24,868 for the emergency management office, up slightly from this year's $20,305. For the fire marshall's office, Joyner proposed a budget totaling $220,350.

The major difference between this year's $197,842 budget is an 8.9 percent increase in contributions to rural fire departments ($124,795 proposed for 1984-85 as compared with $110,538 this year), and an increase for contributions toward the purchase of new fire trucks.

Although the proposed rescue squad budget of $90,561, as presented by Joyner, is down from the present budget of $102,912, it includes a request for an 8.9 percent increase in contributions for rescue squads in the county.

The sheriff's department's proposed budget of $831,879 ($795,025 this year) as presented by Sheriff Ralph Tyson includes $24,872 in new money for equipment.

However, the total does not include funds to implement any recommendations made in a recently completed National Sheriff's Association management study of the department, Tyson told commissioners.

Tyson said the major recommendation of the study suggests the need for 20 additional deputies in the criminal and civil divisions of the department, five additional deputies in the jail, and four additional employees for the county's communications center.

"We'll have to do it in stages," Tyson said of the recommendations. "We need the jail and field deputies now. We need all of them, but we can do it in stages."

The requested budget presented by Tyson for jail operations, $265,986, ($214,886 this year) included $8,146 in new money for equipment and $5,000 for janitorial supplies.

Tyson proposed a $95,940 budget for the communications center, as compared with $94,590 for the current fiscal year. But again, the request does not include any additional manpower.

Commissioners indicated that they would make changes in the department's budget after they have had an opportunity to review the NSA study.

The largest increase in the proposed $824,388 for solid waste in the coming year ($641,549 this year) is the purchase of a $180,000 compactor, a $10,000 addition to the shop building, and a new maintenance helper. H.C. Kinsaul told the board.

Other requests presented to the board Monday included: a proposed $45,000 for Pitt-Greenville Airport ($30,000 this year); $5,000 for the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Inc. ($2,000 this year); $25,000 for general operations of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center ($15,000 this year), as well as $25,000 in capital funds (the same as this year), and a new request for $10,000 toward the purchase of four buses; a

Board To Hear Voting Queries

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Elections will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday to review requests for more voting by two candidates involved in the race for the Greenville Township seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in last week's primary election.

Second-place finisher Jim Rouse has asked for a runoff with incumbent Charles Gaskins, who finished first in the May 8 primary, while third-place finisher Tom Johnson has requested a new primary.

The requests stemmed from the fact that the Board of Elections disqualified Frank Grooms, a fourth candidate on the ballot, the day of the primary because he is a resident of Winterville Township. The board ruled Grooms was not eligible to hold the Greenville Township seat on the board.

Voters gave Gaskins 7,422 votes, while Rouse got 4,190 votes. Johnson followed with 2,256 votes and Grooms placed fourth with 1,689.

Elections board chairman Clifton Everett Jr. said the board would follow the opinion of the N.C. attorney general's office that votes cast for Grooms should not be counted when figuring the majority needed to determine the election.

By discounting Grooms' votes in figuring the majority, Gaskins holds a clear majority in the race.

If Grooms' votes are counted, Gaskins would not have a majority and Rouse would be eligible for a runoff, according to the attorney general's opinion.

Rouse's request for a runoff suggested that votes cast for Grooms should be counted as part of the total vote in figuring the majority.

Johnson's request for a second primary suggested Grooms' name was on the ballot due to an error and said a new primary should be held

MAIL ORDER ADVICE

Greenville Postmaster Lloyd Mills has developed a list of rules for mail-order shopping which he says will remove much of the risk of being swindled. The cardinal rule, he said, is "If a deal sounds too good to be true, it probably is. (Diamonds are not sold for $4.95.)"

Don't be rushed. Avoid offers that claim to be your "last chance" to get a bargain.

Keep a copy of the advertisement from which you ordered. Keep a record of the date of your order and the number of your check if you pay by check. Retain the canceled check.

Never send cash. Use a check, money order or credit card. These can be traced if necessary.

If you have doubts about the company, check with the Postal Inspection Service, the Better Business Bureau or a local consumer protection agency to see if there are any complaints on record against the company. It is best to do this before ordering.

Ayden To Install Tile

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The town of Ayden will spend $20,000 on drain tile that will be installed in open ditches in the town, members of the Board of Commissioners have voted.

The $20,000 expenditure will begin a long-range project to eliminate open ditches, say town officials. Length of the project and expected annual expenditures will be decided by the board after a feasibility survey is completed.

"I don't feel we can put a specific time limit on the project or a specific dollar amount per year until we have the actual needs in front of us and the survey can provide us with this information," said board member Sue Moody. "It's important, I feel, that we make a commitment now to the project and work out the details later," she added.

Board member Marvin Baldree said he thought the initial $20,000

Filing Period Set Friday

The Pitt County Board of Elections announced today that the filing period for reapportioned state Senate Districts 6 and 9 begins Friday at noon and closes May 25 at noon.

The special primary for the two districts, which include portions of Pitt County, will be held in Pitt County on July 17.

Voters may register for the primary through 5 p.m. June 18. Those who registered on April 10 and who register through June 18 will be eligible to vote only in the special primary. They will not be eligible to vote in any second primary held on June 5.

R.L. (Bob) Martin and Thomas F. (Tom) Taft had previously filed as candidates in state Senate District 9 before the 1984 reapportionment which moved Bethel Township, where Martin resides, into the 6th Senate District along with other portions of Pitt County.

Any candidate who filed previously in a reapportioned district by the Feb. 6 original deadline will be entitled to have his or her filing fee refunded, or may ask that the original fee be applied to pay for new filing.

Hart Seeks Victories Today

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart is pinning his hopes on Democratic voters in Nebraska and Oregon today to sustain his campaign's recovery while Walter Mondale and the Rev. Jesse Jackson concentrate on California's big primary three weeks away.

Latest polls gave Hart the edge in both Oregon and Nebraska, but with the race in the Cornhusker state appearing closer, the Colorado senator flew there for a final pitch, dropping the rest of his Oregon schedule.

Mondale did not campaign in Oregon and spent only a few hours in Nebraska.

There are 67 delegates at stake today, 43 in Oregon's primary and 24 in Nebraska's, with voting limited to Democrats only in both states.

Mondale was making a foreign-policy address today in San Francisco after sharpening his attack on Hart as he wooed Hispanic voters in Southern California.

Jackson, too, was out to win Hispanics, more heavily concentrated in California than anywhere else in the nation and representing 16 percent of the electorate.

And Hart was making a final appearance in Lincoln, Neb., today with Gov. Bob Kerrey, an early supporter, after chiding Mondale on Sunday for ignoring the state.

"I've been traveling around here and in Oregon looking for Walter Mondale, and I haven't found him," Hart told Nebraskans. "Have any of you seen Mr. Mondale out here?"

Jackson crossed into Tijuana, Mexico, on Monday and said he was not sure the flow of illegal aliens across the border is a problem.

"I know of no objective, scientifically legitimate study that has proven that undocumented workers take jobs from Americans, deplete our social service programs, cause undue crime, tax our educational systems or harm our society in any other way," Jackson said.

Jackson said he thinks undocumented workers may actually strengthen the American economy.

Jackson repeated his opposition to the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform bill before Congress. It would grant amnesty to illegal aliens but is opposed by many Hispanics because it would impose sanctions on employers who hire undocumented workers.

Mondale, who picked up the endorsement of the Mexican-American Political Association in San Jose on Sunday, spoke at an East Los Angeles school and chided his chief rival as a newcomer to Hispanic issues.

"Gary Hart is trying to introduce himself to you," Mondale said. "Where's he been?"

"He's been a senator for 10 years. He could have been involved in these issues we're talking about. He could have provided leadership."

By contrast, said Mondale, "I've been out front."

Later in Oakland, Mondale criticized President Reagan's call for the House to approve funds for the MX missile, which he called "the most dangerous major weapons system deployed in the U.S. arsenal."

Mondale, who one week ago appeared close to wrapping up the Democratic nomination, has been concentrating on California and New Jersey — the two biggest primaries held on June 5.

Although Mondale still holds a substantial delegate lead, Hart's campaign revived with victories last week in Ohio and Indiana. He hopes to sustain that momentum today.

The Colorado senator on Monday renewed his charge that Mondale risks dividing the party with his attacks.

"When Mr. Mondale's winning, he's for unity, and when he's losing he likes to attack," Hart declared.

Hart also said the United States should occasionally spend money to influence the outcome of foreign elections as a way of neutralizing similar Soviet efforts.

"What I don't think this country ought to do is have a wholesale policy of buying elections," Hart declared.

But he added: "I'm not naive. The Soviets and their surrogates and other political entities put money into elections all the time, and it's sometimes necessary for this nation to do that ... to offset what's happening on the other side."

Marcos' Opponents Make Strong Showing In Philippines' Election

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Unofficial election returns today showed opponents of President Ferdinand E. Marcos making a surprisingly strong showing and leading in half of the National Assembly races.

While conceding that the opposition was doing better than expected, Marcos insisted official returns would show his party retained firm control.

"You cannot deny the fact that there was an undercurrent of discontent that has been fanned by the opposition because of the economic situation," Marcos said in an interview on CBS.

But he predicted his party would win about 140 of the 183 contested seats. That would give the opposition about 43 seats, and Marcos had earlier predicted the opposition would take no more than 30 seats.

Even if his party were to lose a majority in the National Assembly, the constitution gives Marcos the power to legislate by decree.

Marcos was not a candidate, but opposition leaders said the results of the Monday balloting would be seen as a setback to his administration. At least two Cabinet members were trailing, according to the unofficial results.

Opposition leader Salvador H. Laurel said the results were "beyond our hopes and wildest imagination" and he warned against "monkey business" changing the results. He had projected victories in about 30 percent of the races.

The government's Philippines New Agency said pro-Marcos candidates were leading in 99 races. The independent National Citizens Movement for Free Elections, conducting its own unofficial count, had Marcos' party ahead in 79 races and opponents leading 91 with about a third of the vote tallied.

Results for 13 races had not been reported to the independent organization.

Official results were to be announced within the next few days. "The opposition won large in the cities. In the country, we have won," Marcos said in a broadcast from Manila.

"I would presume that our instructions to our people to allow ... the opposition to win some seats might have been taken too literally," Marcos said on the "CBS Morning News." He also was interviewed by NBC, ABC and Cable News Network. He said the results would allow him to "truthfully say we have presented to the world the image of a free democracy."

Marcos said some opposition strength was due to the country's economic problems and to critical reports in the Western news media. He said "nobody can quantify" the effect that the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino had on voters.

More than 90 percent of the assembly now belongs to Marcos' New Society Movement.

Dear Abby

Any Couple Can Reaffirm Their Marriage Vows

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in an attempt to clear up a source of much heated debate at my home.

A sister of one of my best friends is about to have her 10th wedding anniversary, and she is planning to have a full-blown white wedding. She eloped on her original wedding and was married in Nevada at a wedding chapel. She claims that she has read in etiquette books that if you elope you are entitled to a white wedding on your 10th anniversary.

I don't feel that there is anything wrong with the idea, but I have looked through several books on etiquette and cannot find anything even closely resembling this.

Please let me know if this is true. Thank you.

JUST CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Any couple can reaffirm their marriage vows on any anniversary of their choice. Nowhere is it stated that an "eloped couple" are entitled to a white wedding on their 10th.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.H.: Acquaint your young friend with the local suicide prevention clinic. It offers excellent counseling. Suicide is a permanent solution to a temporary problem.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column about young people who want summer jobs. As an employer, I think you missed an important point. This may appear prejudicial and discriminating, but I know it to be a determining factor in hiring help. The subject is beards!

I flatly refuse to consider applicants who sport beards and droopy mustaches. After several experiences with these types, I won't even interview them, regardless of their qualifications. They're arrogant, defy authority and give the impression that they're superior and more learned. When one of them comes in for an interview, I see nothing but eyes, a nose and teeth. (Not even ears!) I don't even know what his face looks like!

I want the clean-cut, freshly shaved, nothing-hidden type fellow working for me. Those with beards need not apply.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

DEAR MAN: Of course you're entitled to your opinion, but unfortunately your preconceived, prejudicial opinions are out-of-date. You still equate all bearded types with the rebellious, anti-establishment hippies of the '60s.

Wrong! If you disqualify all men with facial hair before even taking a second look to see if their beards are clean and well-groomed, you could be passing up some very bright and talented prospects.

DEAR ABBY: I plan to be married sometime this summer. My future husband doesn't want me to use oral contraceptives after we get married because he thinks it might deform any children we might have.

I don't want to take the chance of getting pregnant because I will be only 17 when we get married, and he will be 21. I don't want to be a young mother. I prefer to wait until I am 22 or 23 before I have my first child.

My fiance doesn't want to wait that long because he thinks he will be too old by then. That seems to be the only problem between us.

What do you think?
NOT READY FOR MOTHERHOOD

DEAR NOT: I think you're not ready for marriage either. Your "only" problem can be serious enough to make your marriage fail. Better to resolve the problem now than dissolve the marriage later.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Neonatal Patients Get Smocked Bonnets As Gifts

On Mother's Day, infants in Pitt County Memorial Hospital's Neonatal Intensive Care Unit donned new miniature bonnets hand-smocked for them by the Down East chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America.

Ann Deans, chapter president, Nancy Schell, secretary, and other club members last week presented nearly 30 smocked bonnets — most of them too tiny to fit over a man's fist — to neonatal head nurse Julie Flack. The infants in the unit, most of whom are being treated for prematurity and related illnesses, first wore their new pastel bonnets in honor of Mother's Day Sunday.

Smocking is a shirred stitching which is usually decorative. On the bonnets, it serves the additional purpose of helping the bonnets fit snugly to the babies' tiny heads.

Sewing and smocking the bonnets was the 26-member chapter's first community service project. The group's purpose is to establish high standards of workmanship and further the appreciation of smocking and other types of handwork. It meets at 7 p.m. the first Thursday of each month at the Greenville Recreation Building.

By Erma Bombeck

Scientific breakthroughs have come and gone in this country and have been totally ignored by my mother.

No one will ever convince her that the responsibility for good health does not lie within the minds of each and every one of us.

From birth to age 11, my mother's cure-all for every malady I ever suffered was the same. "You need a laxative." I went through grade school wondering why kids went around with their legs and arms in a cast when all they had to do was take a candy-flavored cleansing agent before they went to bed.

It was uncanny how she could just look at you and determine how you were ready for a clean start in life. A laxative cured an upset stomach, headaches, fever, stomach rashes, dizziness, and a general run-down feeling. By the time she finished with you, nothing seemed important enough to open your mouth and complain about.

At age 12, a new diagnosis emerged from my mother's lips. "You're just bored." All my friends had impacted teeth, blood disorders, viral attacks, appendicitis, dog bites, pneumonia, kidney infections and visions problems. I had all those things, but I was "just bored" and the cure was "get yourself something to do or I'll find something."

I think I cleaned up enough rooms, snapped enough beans, swept off enough porches, carried out enough trash, folded enough laundry to keep me in good health the rest of my life.

It wasn't until after I was married that my mother, Dr. Strangelove, shifted into her third phase as a diagnostician. All my ailments for the last 30 years have been attributed to "It's just your nerves."

"Mom, I fainted twice today."

"It's just your nerves."

"I think I'm pregnant."

"Nonsense, it's just your nerves."

"I'm calling from Madonna Pavilion. I just gave birth to eight pounds, four ounces of nerves."

You don't get any flowers for "nerves." You don't get a greeting card or a check from your insurance company. You don't even get any sympathy from it. The fact that you allow them to invade your body is your own fault.

A couple of months ago, I began having trouble getting my foot into a shoe. Pain became a way of life. I didn't even want to tell my mother. I checked into a clinic and had surgery on it and then called her.

"What did they do?" she asked.

"They took off a bone spur and moved the nerve over a little bit."

I heard, "Aha!" at the other end of the phone and then, "What did I tell you?"

Man Of Action

Only once before has there been a joint session of Congress to specifically honor a former president on his birthday centennial; and that was in 1982 as a tribute to Franklin Roosevelt. In 1984 it was for his successor, Harry S. Truman.

There was probably never a less well prepared vice president in U.S. history to take over the presidency. He was not a Roosevelt confidante.

Truman's years in the White House were tumultuous, seeing historic decisions that were often politically damaging; but because he knew they were "right", decisions were made and he stood by them.

Consider a few: he ignored the critics and recognized the new nation of Israel; he directed civil rights changes and desegregation of the military; he ordered use of the A-bomb to end a long and bloody war; ramrodded adoption of the Marshall Plan, and he decided to pursue establishing the United Nations.

Others might have waffled.

Truman once wrote, "A man who is influenced by the (public opinion) polls or is afraid to make a decision which may make him unpopular is not a man to represent the welfare of the country." Adding, "If he is right, it makes no difference whether the press and the special interests like what he does, or what they have to say about him."

Those words pose a standard for leadership few of our presidents (or governors) could match. That is just one of the reasons he is looked upon today as a paragon.

Biographer David McCullough notes President Truman was a busy letter writer, and his letters today are a treasure trove to those who want to learn more about that period in world events. And in afterthought, McCullough added: "Thank goodness he didn't like to use the telephone."

That pleases us, too.

Point Taken

Environmental Protection Agency Director William Ruckelshaus has tried to put some perspective on the public's distraction over possible cancer risks in the environment.

The near-hysteria seems to ignore that virtually anything and everything, in some dosage or other, could possibly cause cancer, and that science's capability to detect such things has mushroomed in recent years.

The end result could approach the point of "banning" just about everything. It's not very sensible.

Ruckelshaus said in a speech at Princeton University:

"I suppose that the ultimate goal ... is to get the American people to understand the difference between a safe world and a zero-risk world with respect to environmental pollutants. We have to define what safe means in light of our increasing ability to detect minute quantities of substances in the environment and to associate carcinogenesis with an enormous amount of substances in common use ..."

In the dietary field, he noted "among them are such foodstuffs as black pepper, mushrooms, celery, parsnips, peanut butter, figs, parsley, potatoes, rhubarb, coffee, tea, fats, browned meat and alfalfa sprouts. ... It would be hard to find a diet that would support life and at the same time impose no risk on the consumer."

There is nothing one could add to underline his point.

Making The Best Of The Worst

—James Kilpatrick—

WASHINGTON — At long last, 11 years after this particular folly began, the FTC (Federal Trade Commission) finally has succeeded in imposing a trade regulation rule upon the nation's 22,000 funeral homes. The rule that became effective last month provides one more example of the zeal to regulate that infects even the best of federal agencies in the best of times.

The only good thing that can be said of the final rule is that it is a vast improvement over the indefensible and stultifying rule that the FTC proposed in August 1975. Three years of "study" had gone into that misbegotten proposition. There followed months and years of hearings, comments, revisions, amendments, more comments, more revisions, on and on, ad infinitum, until opponents of the rule died or wore out.

The original proposition treated funeral directors — all funeral directors, everywhere — as if they were no more than a bunch of con artists out to swindle poor widows in their hour of grief. The FTC's staff report accompanying the first proposal fairly breathed of animosity toward the industry. The proposed regulation would have required a funeral director to make elaborate statements and to keep formidable records; it would have been an unfair trade practice for a mortician to "disparage" an inexpensive funeral, though how that provision could have been enforced was beyond anyone's comprehension.

In October 1976 a House subcommittee took a long and measured look at the FTC's vindictive crusade. Its findings are as valid today as they were at the time. This was the key conclusion: "The subcommittee finds no compelling need for federal regulation of the funeral industry."

That is the heart and soul of the matter. Certainly there is a role for federal regulation in many areas of everyday living. No conservative is going to defend some non-existent freedom to ship tainted meat or sell adulterated drugs in interstate commerce. Where the public health, safety and welfare may be demonstrably, significantly enhanced only by federal regulation, federal agencies have a clear responsibility to step in.

In the matter of funeral practices, no such need and no such justification ever have been established. When the FTC began its investigation in 1972, only a relative handful of complaints had been reported. Over the preceding five years, in which 10 million funerals were held, the FTC itself had received fewer than a thousand complaints of deceptive practices. State agencies reported the same picture. In Maine, for example, the Consumer Fraud Division received 4,600 complaints of all kinds over a period of three and a half years. Only four complaints related to the funeral industry.

Certainly there have been some abuses. No spokesman for the industry ever denied it. In isolated cases, unethical funeral directors have sold expensive caskets for cremation (simple wooden boxes will suffice). Others may have faked charges or inflated charges. Undoubtedly there have been occasions of unseemly competition for possession of a profitable corpse. The point is that on the record, such proven offenses have been remarkably few. The new regulation may be well-intentioned; it is not well-justified.

But for the next four years, under its limiting terms, the FTC's rule is now part of the law of the land. The rule's effect will be to compel the funeral directors to do what probably 99 percent of them were doing voluntarily anyhow — to provide itemized information on prices, to explain that embalming ordinarily is not required if a body is to be cremated or to be buried immediately, and to charge only for those services that a family specifically orders.

At the time of the subcommittee's report in 1976, the FTC had spent more than half a million dollars on the funeral rule. At least that much more must have been expended in the ensuing eight years. Nothing useful will have been accomplished that the industry and the state regulatory agencies were not accomplishing already. The rule has been a monumental exercise in sheer busywork. It is a logical manifestation of the liberal doctrine that government should regulate us not only from the cradle, but to the grave as well.

Path To Nomination Could Change

WASHINGTON — Within hours after Walter F. Mondale narrowly failed in Ohio to lock up the nomination, a few serious voices inside the Democratic Party began suggesting an escape route to avoid a doomed general election campaign fought by a crippled nominee.

The Ohio returns open a possible worst-case ending for the carefully crafted Mondale campaign: losing primary after primary to Sen. Gary Hart over the next month so that the former vice president enters San Francisco bloody and falling in the polls — yet assured of the 1,967 delegates needed for the nomination.

Apart from the second rehabilitation of the year Mondale prays for, the escape route increasingly discussed is selection by the convention not of Hart but of a new face. Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas has privately been sounded out by Senate colleagues in recent weeks about his availability for that role. In the larger world outside the U.S. Senate, Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York excites the most attention.

This would have been considered romantic fantasizing before Ohio and even now is laughed off by the party's wise men. But Mondale faces concentrated pressure to force the first brokered convention in 50 years.

For all his inherent weaknesses as a candidate, Mondale was tantalizingly close to pinning down the nomination. Had he swept the May 5 primaries, Hart would have faced irresistible pressure — even from his own camp — to quit. His principle supporters in California, his strongest big state, were disgusted with Hart's operatives and ready to run up the white flag. Former national chairman Robert S. Strauss, working with Mondale strategists, had proffered honorable terms of surrender.

But in seeking peace, Mondale forgot to fight the war in Ohio. AFL-CIO strategists back in Washington were furious that their man disregarded advice to stick to Hart and went back to Reagan-bashing. Abandoning the gritty combativeness of late winter, Mondale once again became pleader for liberal special interests, unable to broaden Democratic boundaries.

The late primaries, never programmed to be conclusive in the front-loaded delegate process, are stacked against Mondale. Jimmy Carter in 1976 and 1980 underwent a similar ordeal but saved himself both times by winning Ohio, then contested in early June. Considering his uphill June 5 task in California, Mondale has to rely on New Jersey that day. But his labor operatives there have been characteristically heavy-handed, while state Democratic Chairman Jim Maloney has put together an attractive Hart delegates slate.

Simultaneously, both Hart and Jesse Jackson forces will challenge delegate maldistribution in Mondale's favor. Much nastier will be Hart's assault on 550 delegates won in states where political action committee (PAC) money was spent by Mondale delegate committees. Charges of "tainted" delegates will proliferate.

None of this is apt to take delegates from Mondale, but could accelerate deterioration in opinion polls. Since Mondale has run steadily behind President Reagan despite winning most primaries up to Tuesday, what happens to him while losing primaries under the worst-case scenario? It could mean dropping more than 10 percentage points below Reagan, the danger point exciting Democratic dread of wide presidential coattails in November.

But there is little sign of Democratic politicians turning to Hart in distress. Their consensus is that Hart has failed all tests of presidential mettle since New Hampshire. Over lunch in the House dining room Wednesday, several Democratic congressmen who have endorsed Mondale said that whatever happens to their man, Hart never would be nominated.

Indeed, some Hart supporters are disillusioned. In Texas, while savaging Mondale at long distance, he disregarded unanimous staff advice to assail him eye-to-eye in their debate. The fact that Hart has been either beaten back or overawed in every personal confrontation with Mondale naturally leads to questions of how he would fare against Reagan.

Disdain for Hart inside the party is Mondale's greatest asset. In the aftermath of Ohio, gloomy Democrats assayed a bleak landscape: low voter turnouts (save for Jackson's blacks), apathy, defeatism and hand-to-hand combat before Mondale's inevitable nomination — inevitable because he is the least objectionable of the three candidates.

To most Democratic politicians, an escape route through selecting a non-candidate is so exotic as to suggest abandonment of the entire nomination process. But the credibility of that course will grow in direct proportion to Fritz Mondale's misfortunes. Unless he can restore himself again, the lure of a brokered convention will beckon.

Letter Writer Puts Forth His Ideas

CLEMMONS — Walter S. Boone may be one of the most widely published writers in North Carolina. No, he's not a novelist, screenwriter or journalist. He's a businessman from Valdese who doesn't get paid for his writing. He's widely published because he's an avid writer of letters to the editor.

Boone, 58, figures he's had more than 1,000 letters to the editor published in local papers, national papers and national magazines. He's such a rarity in the publishing world that he was asked to come before the N.C. Editorial Writers' Conference held here in April and give state editors his ideas on how they could improve their editorial pages.

Most editors want more letters from their readers. Letters are widely read, they provide the editorial page with balance and they get the community involved in the paper. The editors asked Boone why he writes and what they could do to encourage more letterwriting.

Boone said he had three reasons for writing. First, he says he has an intense interest in ideas and "I can only clarify them when I sit down and put them on paper and then maybe write them again."

Secondly, Boone finds letterwriting satisfying to his ego. "I'd like to prove that I can explain an idea of substance and have it accepted by some and even appreciated by others."

Thirdly, Boone writes out of a sense of civic duty. "It's the sense of eternal vigilance," he says. "The individual must help keep his own freedom. Too often, there's the feeling that those people out there will take care of it for me."

Many citizens feel strongly about issues and care deeply about protecting their freedom, Boone says, but they still don't express themselves publicly. Why? Boone feels there are barriers between the average man and the editorial page. Many people don't feel articulate enough to write. For non-professionals, writing is difficult — even for the college educated.

People fear rejection. Putting one's ideas on paper and having them presented to the community leaves one open to criticism from acquaintances and the public. It also opens one up to self-criticism. "People have the hidden fear of opening one's mind for inspection, even self-inspection. One might even have to abandon a prejudice if he laid it all out there (on paper) and had to examine it," Boone says.

Finally, people are awed by "Fourth Estate." They don't understand how a paper is put together and don't know how to get a letter published.

Boone told the editors that he has greatly benefited from the letters he's written. "The newspaper provides a rather good practical school for writing, for organizing one's thoughts." He suggests it for all who share his concern about issues and ideas.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

Nothing exists in this universe apart from the rest of the universe. We are assured by Jesus that the very hairs of our head are numbered. This was his striking and figurative way of saying that the whole universe hangs together. We are as closely connected with the farthest star in the galaxy as we are with the soil in our flower beds.

The invisible connection should make us remember that we are not for a single moment alone, for the God who made the universe still abides in it.

Furthermore, this God is love, and everything that he has done has been in the spirit of love. Every syllable of the Bible from beginning to end indicates that the most high God is a loving, tender Father. We can turn to him at any moment of our lives. He may not give us the thing that we ask for, but if he does not, it is because he is planning to give us something better.

He told the editors they'll get more letters from readers if they make a serious effort to reduce the barriers between editors and readers. Editors should occasionally write on the techniques of good letterwriting, giving their readers tips on how to organize a letter. He also suggested that editors occasionally meet with the public. Writing techniques could be explained at these meetings, Boone said.

Finally, he suggested that for those who are unwilling to write a letter, editors provide space simply for the expression of an idea. This might amount to nothing more than a sentence or two — maybe called into the editor on the telephone — about an issue of the day.

Military Spending Heads For $1 Trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military spending around the world will top $1 trillion next year in an upward spiral propelled mostly by the United States, the Soviet Union and their allies.

Together, the two superpowers are responsible for more than 55 percent. The Soviet Union is the top arms supplier, the United States is next — $250 billion to $196.34 billion in 1982, the last year covered in a U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency study released Monday.

The superpowers and their allies in the Warsaw Pact and North Atlantic Treaty Organization accounted for nearly 75 percent of the arms delivered from 1972 to 1982.

During that span, overall military spending — which includes manpower costs, research and upkeep as well as weapons — increased from $290.9 billion in 1972 to $817.5 billion in 1982 and will reach an estimated $967 billion this year.

Inflation was partly responsible for the rise, but even in real dollars spending is increasing an average of 3.1 percent a year. It moved up twice as fast in developing countries as in industrialized ones, with the Middle East and Africa leading the way.

While the United States, the Soviet Union and their allies played the leading roles, the U.S. agency found a number of other countries coming into prominence as arms exporters in the early 1980s: Brazil, Israel, North Korea, South Korea and Turkey.

Still, their sales were far below that of the leading suppliers for 1978-1982: the Soviet Union, the United States, France, the United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and China.

The Soviet Union, the top arms merchant since 1978, held 30.1 percent of the arms market in 1982. The United States was second with 26.2

percent. However, the NATO allies led the Warsaw Pact, 47.9 to 38.3 percent.

The arms control agency gathered its material from a number of sources, including the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Central Intelligence Agency.

In the case of some countries, actual military outlays probably are higher than reported because nations tend to understate what they spend on arms, manpower, research and supplies, an agency official said.

Saudi Arabia ranks first in the world in per capita spending on defense, followed by Qatar, Oman, United Arab Emirates, Israel, Kuwait and Libya.

Israel stands first in the percentage of population in the armed forces, while Oman spends a bigger proportional share of its budget on the military than any other country. Iraq was the biggest arms importer in 1982.

The growth in military spending in the developing countries slowed dramatically after the mid-1970s and has remained low since, Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the arms control agency, noted in a statement.

But, Adelman said, the reason was an economic slowdown rather than an easing of tensions. "Much of the underlying causes of military spending — particularly aggressive political-military tendencies and insecurities in the world — have not abated," he said.

ing — particularly aggressive political-military tendencies and insecurities in the world — have not abated," he said.

American Couple Still Being Held

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Hundreds of soldiers and police hunted for an American couple in the northern jungles of Sri Lanka today after kidnapers withdrew a death threat and said they were freeing the pair.

In New Delhi, India, Vice President George Bush said today that "we are still in the dark" about the newlywed couple's whereabouts.

Tamil separatist guerrillas who abducted Stanley and Mary Elizabeth Allen of Columbus, Ohio, last Thursday night said Monday they were releasing the couple unconditionally, although their demands for $2 million and the release of 20 prisoners were rejected by the Sri Lankan government.

But President Junius R. Jayewardene told The Associated Press by telephone that the Allens "have not been found yet. I have no news of them."

The Defense Ministry operations room in Colombo said the search for the pair had been intensified. Security forces scoured the countryside throughout the night without success, National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali said.

In India, separated from the island nation of Sri Lanka by a strait off its southeast coast, Bush was briefed on the case and told a news conference the Indian government was doing "everything it could do to help."

"Our hearts go out to the people involved We are very much concerned about this," said Bush. He said the case calls attention to "great waves of international terrorism and kidnapping" against which the international community has been unable to take forceful action.

Athulathmudali, at a news conference today in Colombo, said, "The world should be reassured that the Allens are alive," and urged the rebels to allow authorities to "hear their voices."

"If there is an indication of where they are, I will arrange for civilian officials to go and get them. What more can I do?" he said.

Referring to the possibility that the Allens had been taken to southern India, Athulathmudali said the Sri Lankan navy would guarantee safe passage across the Palk Straits for the abductors if they wished to release the couple in Sri Lanka.

According to the Sri Lankan government, many Tamil separatists operate from India's southernmost Tamil Nadu state. India denies the charge.

Reagan Proposes Cutting Synfuels

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to rescue a faltering program he once opposed, wants to cut in half the $19 billion in federal aid for synthetic oil and gas ventures intended to wean the nation away from imported oil.

Reagan's proposal to cut the Synthetic Fuels Corp.'s budget by $9.5 billion and put tighter restraints on the subsidies it hands out was announced Monday amid mounting congressional opposition to the 4-year-old program and charges of mismanagement and wrongdoing.

Administration officials indicated that Monday's proposal, in the form of a bill rescinding $9.5 billion of the $19 billion appropriated for the program in 1980, would be sent to Congress soon.

Subtracting other funds already spent, the corporation would be left with $4.6 billion in unobligated funds "that could be used to support a wide array of carefully selected private synthetic fuels projects," the White House said in a statement.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Suppose that dummy holds A-K-10-x-x in a suit and you have J-x in front of it. When declarer leads the suit, it costs you nothing to play the jack. If declarer holds nine cards missing the queen, he might come back to hand and take a losing finesse for the queen rather than play for the drop.

In the trade, that is known as the "idiot's finesse," because West is jeopardizing a sure trick in the suit if he started with Q-J-x—declarer is unlikely to take a first-round finesse if West plays low. However, an interesting version of the idiot's finesse cropped up in the Vanderbilt Team Championship at the recent Spring North American Championships, and declarer was certainly no idiot—he was a many-time national champion.

West led the queen of clubs and East won the ace to shift to a diamond. Declarer played the queen but West did not cover, thereby depriving declarer of a later entry to his hand in diamonds. Now when declarer led a trump, West put up the jack.

In this situation West might play an honor from Q-J-x to protect a trump trick because South, more than likely, has no fast re-entry to his hand. Declarer thought for some time, but he finally decided to play East for a 1-1-4-7 distribution. He cashed the ace of hearts and, when the jack fell from East, he tried to get to his hand with the ten of hearts to take a trump finesse. East was delighted to ruff with the queen and claim down one.

In the other room, North-South got no further than five spades. So West's deceptive play gained 11 International Match Points for his team.

Wachovia BankLineSM

The prime-based line of credit up to $25,000 or more that's as easy to use as writing a check.

It's prearranged.
Use it anytime, for any reason.

With Wachovia BankLine you can have a personal line of credit from $2,500 to $25,000 or more at rates based on Wachovia's Prime Rate.* When you want to borrow money, you don't have to make a trip to the bank; you simply write a BankLine check. Your BankLine account costs you nothing to open, and there are no annual fees.

Rates based on the prime.

A Wachovia BankLine account lets you enjoy preferred interest rates based on Wachovia's Prime Rate. So BankLine can be a less expensive way to borrow. And your rate is determined by your credit line, not by the amount you borrow. Here's how it works.

YOUR CREDIT LINE: YOUR INTEREST RATE:

$10,000 or over	Prime + 1%
$ 5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%
$ 2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%

Your rate may vary monthly with economic conditions. If the Prime Rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the Prime Rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged is 18%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

Ask a Personal BankerSM.

A Wachovia Personal Banker can help you decide if BankLine is right for you. Call or stop by any Wachovia office this week and ask about BankLine. It's a better way to borrow.

*"Prime Rate" refers to that interest rate set by the Bank from time to time as an interest rate basis for commercial and consumer borrowings. The Prime Rate is one of several interest rate bases used by the Bank. The Bank lends at interest rates above and below the Prime Rate.

Court OK's Bans On Signs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities may ban political signs — along with other advertisements — from public property to limit "visual clutter," the Supreme Court ruled today.

The court, by a 6-3 vote, reinstated a Los Angeles ordinance that a lower court said violated constitutional rights of free expression.

"The problem addressed by this ordinance — the visual assault on the citizens of Los Angeles presented by an accumulation of signs posted on public property — constitutes a significant substantive evil within the city's power to prohibit," said Justice John Paul Stevens in his opinion for the court.

Stevens said the ban, which applies to both political and commercial signs on public property, is legitimate even though it does not apply to private property.

"The validity of the aesthetic interest in the elimination of signs on public property is not compromised by failing to extend the ban to private property," he said. "The private citizen's interest in controlling the use of his own property justifies the disparate treatment."

The local law had been challenged successfully by former Los Angeles city council candidate Roland Vincent whose 1979 political signs were attached to utility pole supports and later removed by city workers.

Los Angeles officials said the ban was essential to prevent eyesores from proliferating throughout the nation's third largest city.

Anthony Saul Alperin, a Los Angeles deputy city attorney, had told the Supreme Court that with 6,400 miles of streets in the city, "you can have a great deal of visual clutter."

City officials also said the political posters could be dangerous by obscuring road hazards.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1982 that the ban is unconstitutional because it is too extreme. The appeals court said the city could limit the size and design of posters, require them to be removed after a certain period and ban them from some areas of the city.

The portion of the Los Angeles ordinance dealing with political signs was the only aspect challenged. The provision applying to commercial signs was not at issue.

Stevens said the ordinance is reasonable, in part because there are other means for political candidates to get their message across.

"There are ample alternative modes of communication in Los Angeles," he said. He noted that a candidate is free "to exercise the right to speak and to distribute literature in the same place where the posting of signs on public property is prohibited."

In a dissenting opinion, Justice William J. Brennan said, "The court's lenient approach towards the restriction of speech for reasons of aesthetics threatens seriously to undermine the protections of the First Amendment" to the Constitution.

Brennan said courts should exercise greater scrutiny to assure that the aesthetic goals of local officials are substantial.

"Because aesthetic judgments are entirely subjective, the government may too easily overstate the substantiality of its goals," he said.

Justices Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun joined the dissenting opinion.

In 1981, the court ruled that communities are free to ban all commercial billboard advertising. But the ruling caused confusion because the decision, ironically, struck down a ban in San Diego, Calif., on non-commercial billboard ads, such as political or personal messages.

That case did not deal specifically with signs placed on public property or city-controlled property.

expenditure is "too conservative." "The need is great and we should make a commitment. I would like to see the feasibility survey first."

Town Manager Don Russell said the completed proposed survey would include an aerial map with critical need areas and ditches plotted. No completion time was given.

In other business:

•The board approved application for entering employees into the state retirement system beginning July 1.

•The contract for the town's 1983-84 financial audit was awarded to Earl Umphlett for $4,950.

•A bid totaling approximately $76,000 was awarded to Truxmore for purchase of a new 24-cubic yard garbage truck. The vehicle will not be available until October. Town Manager Russell noted.

•Board members authorized a letter to Cable TV of Rocky Mount expressing "dissatisfaction with the service in the Ayden area." Residents reportedly have had problems with unbundled temporary cables and cables "strung through trees," in addition to cable buried on their property without permission. Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger reported.

•Board members Sue Moody, Marvin Baldree and J.J. Brown along with Town Manager Russell and Mayor Persinger will attend Mayor's Day in Raleigh June 12.

•Board members Sue Moody, Carl Speight and Robert Harris reported they would attend the Mid-East Commission meeting in Greenville May 31.

and installation of a computer system would be funded by additional revenues should the council elect to create them.

There are several ways that the council can raise the needed funds, she said. Council members could elect to increase property taxes, use additional utilities turn over, repeal the blue law or they could choose to increase or create fees for garbage collection and rescue services.

Should the council elect to raise property taxes, each one-cent increase would bring in an additional $80,000. If the blue law is repealed, the sales tax on items not traditionally sold on Sundays would bring in an estimated $100,000 per year.

Mrs. Meeks pointed out, however, that these measures are just conjecture at this point. "This was purely an informational meeting and all that was discussed is for the council members' future consideration. We have yet to submit the final budget proposal," she said.

Mrs. Meeks said her office plans to submit its proposal sometime next week and that the council will finalize the budget sometime before July 1.

Commissioners are scheduled to hear requests from the county and city school systems next Monday.

In addition to hearing budget requests, the board Monday approved a three-year contract with Lloyd R. Moody Certified Public Accountants for audit services for a three-year period for a total of $65,000.

Right To Enter Homes Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today significantly limited the authority of police officers nationwide to enter, without court warrants, the homes of people suspected of minor crimes or non-criminal offenses.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices set aside a Wisconsin Supreme Court decision that Madison police did not violate Edward G. Welsh's privacy rights when arresting him in his home April 24, 1978, on suspicion of drunken driving.

In Wisconsin, a first offense for drunken driving is a civil — not a criminal — violation. It is not a jailable offense and the maximum penalty is a $300 fine.

First-time drunken driving offenders are not treated as criminals in several other states, including Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota.

"Before agents of the government may invade the sanctity of the home, the burden is on the government to demonstrate exigent (emergency) circumstances that overcome a presumption of unreasonableness that attaches to all warrantless home entries," Justice William J. Brennan wrote for the court.

The Constitution's Fourth Amendment generally requires police officers to obtain court approval before conducting searches or making arrests.

"When the government's interest is only to arrest for a minor offense, that presumption of unreasonableness is difficult to rebut," Brennan said, "and the government usually should be allowed to make such arrests only with a warrant."

board approved the zoning change for the Juanita Olive property off Main Street from agricultural-residential to R-10.

Engineer Linwood Stroud explained to the board that the state had changed its plans for paving Ange Street and if the town would like Sylvania Street paved at the same time, work would need to begin immediately on the curb and gutter. The board chose to delay paving Sylvania Street until the project could be studied further.

Mayor E.C. Hines requested the board to set up a public hearing for May 31, to amend the ordinance for motor vehicle license taxes to make them subject to an annual motor vehicle tax of $3. The tax would be added to the ad valorem property taxes. The board approved the hearing date.

Developer Bill Clark and Engineer Linwood Stroud presented a proposed subdivision plan to the board consisting of multifamily dwellings and about 160 single family lots. The proposed subdivision would be off the Tar Road near the town limits. Clark said the long range plan would take about eight to ten years. The board took no action on the matter.

Aldermen Bobby Crawford asked the board for permission to look into prices of "fault-finder" equipment for the electric department. The board approved the request.

Members of the Winterville Rescue Squad asked the board for permission to solicit picture settings for a fund-raising project from May 16 through June 29. The board approved the request.

Rouse said Monday that ballots cast for Grooms should be counted because they were cast by eligible voters. "That's the American way ... they should have a voice," he said, suggesting that if his request for a runoff is denied, he would appeal the decision to the State Board of Elections.

Schools Trying New Plans For This Fall

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer

With summer vacation in sight, North Carolina public school administrators are hitting the books to prepare for changes this fall ranging from tougher conduct codes and teaching standards to computers in the classroom.

In the largest of the state's 142 school systems — Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools with 72,000 students — 150 tenured teachers will participate in a pilot program to upgrade teaching, said Myra Joines, public information coordinator.

The $500,000 Teacher Career Development Program will take teachers for one year, give them extra training and evaluate their performance.

Ms. Joines said teachers now receive tenure "fairly automatically." But since the Legislature agreed to exempt Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools from the state teacher tenure law, it will take their teachers at least five years to get tenure, beginning next fall.

Under the pilot program, teachers will work toward career status at three different levels, each increasing in responsibility. Ms. Joines said it's estimated teachers gaining the highest status, Level III, could earn up to $38,000 a year.

"The idea behind it obviously is to improve the quality of teachers in our schools and to make sure that we can compete with private industry to get the best persons into teaching," said Ms. Joines. "The sad fact is our high school teachers see that very few of their brightest students are going into teaching."

The city-county school system also is implementing changes in curricula.

High school students, who now take one math and two science courses, will be required to take an additional class in each of the two disciplines. Vocational education has been revamped to drop job-placement programs in which students are using few skills.

Meanwhile, Asheville city schools are focusing on early learners, said Carolyn Moore, public information spokeswoman.

The Gazelle Pre-Kindergarten Program involves the screening of children in day care centers to pinpoint learning and physical disabilities "so that they can head off problems that might crop up," said Ms. Moore.

Children enroll in the program at age 5, which actually delays kindergarten for one year and helps them "catch up," she said.

In the Wake County schools, a task force made up of administrators, teachers and parents is reviewing the high school program "with an eye toward designing curriculum for the future," said spokeswoman Ann Massengill.

The Greensboro city schools are closing six elementary schools next fall because of a decline in the number of students, said Barbara Peichman, public relations director. School administrators also are studying whether to switch from a junior high school system to a middle school system.

Greensboro schools also have asked for $500,000 for a micro-computer system, while Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools are expanding computer labs for student in kindergarten through high school.

Plowshare 8 Enter Plea

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Plowshare 8 anti-nuclear demonstrators pleaded innocent Monday to federal charges in connection with their Easter Sunday break-in at a plant here that manufactures Pershing 2 missiles.

Appearing before U.S. Magistrate Donald Dietrich, the six men and two women read from the Bible and said they would represent themselves in their U.S. District Court trial, scheduled for June 11.

Sister Anne Montgomery, a veteran demonstrator against defense-contractor sites and weapons around the country, said after the break-in that it was an attention-getting action to show concern about the basing of the Pershing 2 missiles in Europe.

In addition to the Roman Catholic nun from New York, the other defendants, held in lieu of bonds ranging from $5,000 to $110,000, are Patrick O'Neill, 28, Greenville, N.C.; Christin Marie Schmidt, 24, Baltimore, Md.; Per Ingmar Herrgren, 22, Syracuse, N.Y.; Paul Joseph Magno Jr., 27, Washington D.C.; James Lyman Perkins, 45, Baltimore; Timothy Allen Lietzke, 32, Richmond, Va., and Todd Simcha Kaplan, 26, Washington D.C.

The protesters, who admitted smearing blood and vandalizing missile components and equipment at Martin Marietta Corp., were charged by a federal grand jury with conspiracy and damaging federal property.

They will also face trial on state charges of felony criminal mischief, trespassing and several related counts.

Lung Cancer Victims Seek $9.3 Billion Over Smoking

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Three lung cancer victims are seeking $9.3 billion from major tobacco, distribution and advertising corporations, claiming they weren't warned that cigarettes are addictive.

The suit contains 12 counts, each demanding $780 million, and contends that the companies negligently and intentionally failed to warn the public that tobacco products are physically and psychologically addictive.

"The plaintiffs relied upon this intentional omission of material fact," says the suit, filed Monday in Kanawha County Circuit Court.

The cancer victims each ask $2.7 billion, and their spouses request $420 million each.

"I think they deserve every penny of it," said Stanley Preiser, a lawyer for the plaintiffs who said the suit is the first of its kind.

"There have been other suits claiming that tobacco products caused cancer, but this suit says, 'You got us addicted and never told us we'd be addicted, and now we can't quit,'" Preiser said.

The suit claims that the cancer victims "sustained bodily injuries, both temporary and permanent ... and will sustain in the future disfigurement and deformity."

Also, it says, the victims will suffer "a lessening of earning capacity."

Each of the victims' spouses, the suit says, "incurred, and will incur in the future, mental and emotional distress, suffering, anguish and anxiety." It said the spouses also will suffer "humiliation and embarrassment," and "damage to the family unit and loss of consortium."

The suit says the defendants should have made it clear to the public that tobacco products are addictive and can cause physical problems.

The tobacco manufacturers "owed a duty to the plaintiffs before the plaintiffs became physically and psychologically dependent on tobacco products" to warn them that tobacco is addictive.

The suit says the manufacturers also should have informed the plaintiffs of "early warning signs of adverse reactions to tobacco products."

The manufacturers sold, the advertising firms promoted and the distributor transported products that were "unreasonably dangerous because they were dangerous to an extent beyond that which would be contemplated by the ordinary recipient who possessed ordinary knowledge common to the plaintiffs' community," the suit says.

The cancer victims, all of Charleston, are identified in the suit as Rosilee Haight, Andrew J. Goodwin and Charles Forbes. The spouses are identified as John Haight, Joy Goodwin and June Forbes.

The defendants are the American Tobacco Co.; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.; Phillip Morris Inc.; R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc.; Liggett Group Inc.; S.S.C.C. & B Inc.,

Auditor Sees 'Major Weakness'

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's financial health is good, but the financial operations of some state agencies could cause some complications, the state auditor says.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow said during a news conference Monday that he would ask the General Assembly in 1985 to help solve a number of problems, including the lack of up-to-date inventories of assets owned by some agencies.

The report detailed some "major weaknesses" in the fiscal operations of some state agencies.

Renfrow said if an agency did not know how much money it had, "people would be jumping up and down. But, really, fixed assets are nothing but cash converted" into property.

The report, called the Comprehensive Annual Financial Report for fiscal 1982-83, showed that state agencies owned $888 million in fixed assets. But Renfrow said that figure significantly understated their true value.

In a letter to the Governmental Operations Commission, he said, "Serious consideration should be given to denying future equipment or construction funds to any state agency or institution that cannot properly account for the fixed assets that presently exist."

State agencies could slip innocently into deficit spending because they use the "cash basis of accounting" for their funds, Renfrow said.

The cash basis of accounting could be compared to how individuals keep up with their checking accounts, the state auditor said.

"It tells you nothing but how much cash you may or may not have in the bank at a given time," he said.

Renfrow also said legislators needed to define deficit spending.

He said that at the end of fiscal 1983, which ended last June, the state had $49 million in unobligated funds in its General Fund, a decrease from $116 million at the end of fiscal 1982.

The small surplus, he said, is as close as the state has come to what he considers deficit spending.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell back at midday today after making an early bid at a rally in more active trading, following Monday's broad retreat.

Auto and some technology stocks were among the early gainers, but a number of financial and airlines issues fell.

The Dow Jones Average of 30 Industrials, whose 6.07-point decline on Monday marked its second consecutive losing session, was down 2.41 points at 1,148.66 at noon EDT.

Advancing issues were running about even with losers among issues on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index was down 0.09 at 90.57.

Big Board volume was 37.68 million shares at noon, compared with 26.43 million at the same point in Monday's sluggish session.

Stock prices have been hurt in recent sessions by rising yields in the bond market, which competes with stocks for investor attention.

Bond yields have risen to two-year highs, and analysts say investors are worried that rates may go even higher.

But other analysts say the economy will soon begin slowing down, and that the slowdown will ease upward pressure on rates. They also say corporate profits are strong enough that recent expansion in corporate borrowing demands will also subside.

Before trading opened, the government reported industrial production rose a sharp 1.4 percent in April, the strongest rise since a 1.5 percent advance in January.

Ingram Endorses Rufus Edmisten

RALEIGH (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram today endorsed Attorney General Rufus Edmisten for governor, saying Edmisten would "represent the people and not the special interests."

Ingram, one of four major gubernatorial candidates defeated in last week's Democratic primary, denied that he and Edmisten had struck a deal and said he wouldn't seek a government job should Edmisten be elected.

Appearing with Edmisten at a news conference at the state Democratic Party headquarters, Ingram criticized former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox as "pro-utility." Ingram said he and Edmisten favored repealing a law that allows utilities to charge rate payers for incomplete construction work.

Edmisten finished first in last week's primary with 31 percent of the vote, followed by Knox with 26 percent. The two will compete in a June 5 runoff to determine the Democratic nominee, with the winner facing Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Martin in the general election.

Last week, Edmisten was endorsed by former Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, who finished third in the primary. Knox won the backing of unsuccessful candidates Tom Gilmore and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Ingram said today he had met with Ingram and Knox, both of whom sought his support.

"I expressed my concern to (Knox, a former state senator,) about his introduction of pro-utility legislation ... which has hurt the people," said Ingram.

"I believe Rufus Edmisten has the best record of representing the people and not the special interests. Rufus Edmisten has not voted water for the utility corporations."

Ingram said Edmisten had promised to seek repeal of the construction-work-in-progress law, which Ingram said "will fulfill one of my proposals to stop unfair electric bills."

Edmisten praised Ingram for his 12 years as insurance commissioner, saying he had "fought for the consumer — always doing what he felt was right."

Ingram said he expected to resume his law practice and had not asked to be a part of Edmisten's administration.

Edmisten said he hadn't bargained with Ingram to secure the endorsement, but wouldn't rule out an appointment for the insurance commissioner. Ingram "has an abundance of talent," Edmisten said.

A spokesman for the Knox campaign who asked not to be identified said that Ingram's criticisms were "the same old rhetoric he's been using all along."

The spokesman said Ingram's endorsement probably wouldn't have much effect. "One individual's loyalty doesn't necessarily translate into votes from his supporters," he said.

Meanwhile, the third-place finisher in the Democratic labor commissioner primary announced today he was endorsing state Sen. Richard Barnes over incumbent Commissioner John Brooks.

Don Wiseman, a Cary resident and former labor department official, criticized Brooks' management of the department and said Barnes was "respected by both industry and labor."

Knox Says Race Won't Split Party

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Knox said today that his attacks on Rufus Edmisten will not divide Democrats in the November gubernatorial election.

"It's down to a two-man race now (for the Democratic nomination in the June 5 runoff)," Knox said. "The public is entitled to know the differences between us. That's not negative campaigning."

"He's the one that was doing the mudslinging and misrepresenting my position," he added. "I think we can pull people together (after the runoff)."

Knox spoke at a news conference after a forum sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Arts Councils. Attorney General Edmisten was represented at the forum by his wife, Linda. State Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, stood in for Republican gubernatorial nominee Jim Martin.

Knox criticized Edmisten and Martin for not showing up and said he would appear at every forum and every debate he's invited to.

He also criticized Edmisten for declining an invitation to debate him on WBT television in Charlotte.

"I hope he doesn't run and hide and we'll be able to talk about the issues," Knox said.

Knox was to appear later today in a forum in Greensboro sponsored by the North Carolina Criminal Justice Association. Edmisten did not plan to attend.

During the arts forum, Knox said that if he were elected governor he would push for a "technical assistance development commission" to enhance the arts in rural areas and small cities across North Carolina. The commission would help local arts councils with fund-raising and grant matching, he said.

Knox also said he favored state funding for early art education, saying there is a "tremendous amount of untapped talent among children."

Knox said his tenure as Charlotte mayor shows that he has the commitment and experience in the arts that North Carolina needs, and he stressed the role of the arts in industry recruitment.

Mrs. Edmisten, who works for historic preservation in Raleigh, said she and Edmisten were "personally involved in the arts."

She read parts of Edmisten's position paper on the issue pledging support for public libraries and museums and instruction in the arts. She also said Edmisten would work to see that artists can earn "living wages" while practicing their crafts in the state.

Ballenger said he didn't know what Martin's position was, but that he personally supported a "free enterprise approach to the arts."

"The real strength is at the local level," he said.

During the news conference, Knox stressed several differences between himself and Edmisten, saying:

— That Knox is the only candidate who ever worked outside government.

— That he is the only candidate with extensive experience in financial management.

— That while Edmisten "talks about crime," crime has actually risen 70 percent during his administration as attorney general.

— That while Edmisten "gives out patronage jobs," Knox has made trips abroad to recruit job-rich industries.

Thompson, Berra Power Pirate Win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jose DeLeon found his missing forkball, and the Pittsburgh Pirates found their missing long ball.

The Pirates, after three consecutive late-inning losses in Atlanta, got home runs from Jason Thompson and Dale Berra to go with a solid eight-inning performance from DeLeon to edge the Houston Astros 3-2 Monday night.

"I'll tell you, this feels great. I'm happy tonight," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner, who had called Sunday's 9-8, 10-inning defeat to the Braves "as tough a loss as I can ever remember."

"Jose pitched great and it's nice to see a couple of home runs," Tanner said.

In two other National League games, Philadelphia edged Los Angeles 3-2 and Montreal beat San Diego 7-6 in 10 innings.

The Pirates, normally one of the most prolific hitting teams in baseball, had hit a National League-low 11 homers until Monday. No other team in the league had hit fewer than 17.

Thompson, the Pirates' cleanup hitter who had managed only two previous homers, drilled a two-run homer in the fourth following Marvell Wynne's double to give the Pirates and DeLeon a 2-1 lead.

Then, after losing pitcher Bob Knepper tied the game at 2-2 with his fourth career homer, Berra came through with the game-winning solo shot in the seventh.

"It was a 2-0 pitch and I knew I'd get something good to hit," Berra said. "There's nothing like a home run to get you back in the ballgame."

"It always feels great to hit a homer. It was nice tonight that we hit some homers and we won late in the game," Berra said. "We've been losing a lot like that."

DeLeon, 2-1, was one of the top rookie pitchers in baseball last season when he flirted with no-hitters three times en route to a 7-3 record. But Monday's start was only his third of the season, and he brought a 7.82 ERA into the game.

"He's been struggling and struggling to find his forkball, and he finally had it tonight," Tanner said. "He needs the forkball to set up the fastball and his other pitches."

DeLeon scattered just three hits over eight innings before leaving in favor of reliever Kent Tekulve because of a blister on his pitching hand. The Astros quickly put runners on first and third with one out in the ninth, but Tekulve got Mark Bailey to ground into a game-ending double play.

"I haven't pitched in 12 days but I felt good as soon as I started warming up in the bullpen," DeLeon said. "I want to pitch and they know I'm here. I'll do whatever they say."

Phillies 3, Dodgers 2

Reliever Tom Niedenfuer hit pinch hitter Len Matuszek with a pitch with the bases loaded, forcing in the winning run, and Philadelphia extended its winning streak to four games by scoring three runs in the ninth inning against Los Angeles.

Jerry Reuss went into the ninth with a two-hit shutout but yielded one run on consecutive singles by Ivan DeJesus, Luis Aguayo and Juan Samuel. That chased Reuss, and Niedenfuer took the mound.

Garry Maddox sacrificed the runners ahead, and Niedenfuer walked Mike Schmidt intentionally. An error by first baseman Franklin Stubbs, who earlier had hit his first major league homer, allowed Aguayo to score, and Niedenfuer hit Matuszek with an 0-2 pitch.

Charles Hudson surrendered just four hits in eight innings for the victory.

Expos 7, Padres 6

Tim Raines hit a two-run homer and doubled home the winning run in the top of the 10th inning as Montreal extended the Padres' losing streak to five games. Gary Carter also homered for the Expos, hitting a three-run homer that helped Montreal build a 6-1 lead.

But the Expos, with the help of homers by Alan Wiggins and Terry Kennedy, tied the score 6-6 after seven innings.

But Terry Francona led off the Expos 10th with a single and scored all the way from first when Raines' drive to left off Dave Dravecky rolled all the way to the wall.

Offense Still Key For Tampa Bay

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Defense has carried Tampa Bay through much of the club's six-game United States Football League winning streak, but offense is still the team's hallmark.

The Bandits rolled up 511 net yards Monday night and quarterback John Reeves threw for 378 of them to pace a 48-21 victory over the Oklahoma Outlaws before a crowd of 45,116.

The triumph boosted Tampa Bay's record to 9-3, one game off the pace of first-place Birmingham in the USFL's Southern Division. The 6-6 Outlaws, meanwhile, dropped their third straight decision, despite 435 yards of offense of their own.

The contest featured only one punt — that by Tampa Bay in the second quarter — although interceptions ended three Oklahoma drives; a fumble halted another and a fifth died when the Outlaws lost possession on downs.

"We thought we could throw on them, so we did, just to see if they could stop it," Bandits Coach Steve Spurrier said. "John (Reaves) seems to get better every week. He's playing with a lot of confidence."

It didn't take Spurrier long to find out how well the Oklahoma secondary could cope with his offensive game plan.

Tampa Bay scored on its first three possessions and by night's end, Reeves had completed 22 of 31 passes and thrown for four touchdowns, including a 10-yarder to Marvin Harvey for a 28-21 halftime lead.

Harvey, a first-year tight end, also caught TD passes from running back Gary Anderson and wide receiver Eric Truvillion — targets for two of Reeves' scoring aeriels. Spencer Jackson also caught a touchdown pass and Greg Boone ran 1 yard for a score.

"We played pretty well on offense," said Spurrier. "Defensively, we weren't particularly fired up. If we had been, they wouldn't have scored 21 points on us."

Still, the defense was good enough to keep Oklahoma out of the end zone after intermission and spoil the homecoming of Outlaws quarterback Doug Williams.

Williams, who played five seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League, completed 25 of 48 passes for 317 yards and three touchdowns.

The Oklahoma quarterback was intercepted three times; received one unsportsmanlike conduct penalty and was flagged for a personal foul on another play. The latter prompted a sideline scuffle involving players from both teams.

"Before I left Oklahoma I knew we were going to have to come in and play our game — not my game," Williams said. "I couldn't do it by myself."

"When you get behind, you play catch up football," added Williams, who was penalized once for protesting a play to an official and another time for a late hit after an interception. "And we were playing a great offensive team."

Trailing 21-7, Williams rallied the Outlaws with touchdown passes of 14 yards to Lonnie Turner and 3 yards to Jerry Price late in the second quarter.

Tampa Bay, which scored on drives of 77, 78 and 79 yards the first three times it had the ball, came right back with a 74-yard effort, though, that Reaves completed with his TD flip to Harvey.

Reaves' other touchdown passes covered 26 yards to Jackson; 6 to Anderson and 35 to Truvillion, who later took a lateral and threw 13 yards to Harvey.

Despite its three-game losing streak, Oklahoma still trails defending USFL champion Michigan and Houston by one game in the Central Division.

Coach Woody Widenhofer said he expects his club to bounce back.

"We are going to be a good team down the stretch," he said. "We're going to score some points and win some games."

Pirates Wait On NCAA Direction

From Wire and Staff Reports

East Carolina's Pirates, winners of the ECAC-South title, won't find out until late Monday where they will be assigned in the NCAA baseball regionals, but it would appear now that it would be at Florida State.

The NCAA announced yesterday five regional sites for the first round playoffs.

All five host schools — the University of Texas, Florida State, Oklahoma State, Fresno State, Calif., and Arizona State — qualified for the tournament through automatic conference berths, the NCAA said.

None of the 11 at-large selections was announced. However, the NCAA said it would announce those picks by May 21 along with five seeded teams, the three remaining regional sites, regional assignments and pairings.

The eight regional winners will advance to the College World Series, which begins June 1 at Rosenblatt Stadium in Omaha, Neb.

East Carolina officials said they understand that South Carolina, runner-up in the Metro Conference, was a possible at-large entrant. There remains a possibility that South Carolina could also be a host team for a regional and that the Pirates could be assigned to that regional.

Here are the regional sites, host teams, records and conferences: Central Regional at Austin, Texas; Texas, 54-12, Southwest Conference. South Regional at Tallahassee, Fla.: Florida State, 53-26, Metro Conference.

Midwest Regional at Stillwater, Okla.: Oklahoma State, 51-11, Big Eight. West I Regional at Fresno, Calif.: Fresno State, 53-10-2, Northern California Association.

West II Regional at Tempe, Ariz.: Arizona State, 48-17, Pacific Ten-North.

Twelve other automatic qualifiers for the tournament are: Grambling State, 29-15, Southwestern Athletic Conference; North Carolina, 42-9, Atlantic Coast; Appalachian State, 35-5, Southern; Lamar, 40-16, Southland; Rider, 20-17, East Coast;

Waltrip Named Coors Winner

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip, who slowed because of a caution flag only to see Neil Bonnett race past him on the final lap, has been declared the winner of the Coors 420, NASCAR officials announced Monday.

Citing the intent of caution flag rules, NASCAR Grand National Director Dick Beatty said the first-place prize money in race run in the Nashville, Tenn., Saturday night should go to Waltrip.

Bonnett took advantage of a little-known NASCAR rule which allowed him to slip past Waltrip on the last lap because both the caution and white flags had been waved. Passing under a caution flag normally is penalized, but a NASCAR rule says drivers may race to the finish when a caution flag and white flag are waved simultaneously.

"In this case, the caution flag was displayed before the leaders reached the start-finish line and not 'during the white flag lap' as we initially ruled," Beatty said in a release.

"The final lap should have been run under a cautious pace because of the yellow flag conditions, and each car should have held the same position at the checkered flag that it did as it took the yellow flag to complete the 419th lap."

Also, Terry Labonte was officially declared the eighth-place finisher and Dick Brooks dropped down to ninth because of passing in the last lap.

NASCAR officials reviewed the order of finish of the Nashville, Tenn., race after Waltrip filed an official protest.

The two-time Winston Cup champion took a chance and passed up a late pit stop opportunity Saturday night. The gamble paid off as Waltrip was leading the race when a wild, multi-car crash brought out a caution flag during the second lap from the finish.

Waltrip, thinking the race would end with everyone holding their positions under the caution flag, also took the white flag — signifying one lap to go — and slowed for the final trip around the five-eighths-mile oval.

Bonnett, who also drives for the team operated by Junior Johnson and Warner Hodgdon, shot past and took the checkered flag.

Rose Golfers In State Meet

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's unbeaten golf team wrapped up the Jacksonville sectional title yesterday and qualified for the state tournament, to be held next week in Chapel Hill.

The Rampants, now 33-0 on the season, finished the round at Rock Creek Country Club in Jacksonville, with a 313 team score. Eastern Wayne finished second and also qualified for the state tournament with a 319 total.

The Rampants were led by Mike Herring who fired a 34-40-74, while Jordy Smith had a 38-39-77. Tee Davies added a 40-40-80, while David Lee carded a 39-43-82 to round out the scoring.

State tournament play will get underway on Monday at the Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill, concluding on Tuesday.

Seek Higher Athletic Standards

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH — North Carolina has joined a growing list of states considering higher academic standards for high school athletes, officials say.

"What we are seeing is a national trend," said Jerry Paschal, chairman of a committee reviewing a proposal that would upgrade the academic standards for prep athletes.

That trend has been spurred in part by a proposal passed by the NCAA two years ago raising college admission standards for athletes.

"Since the colleges were looking at it, I thought the high schools needed to do so, too," said Simon Terrell, outgoing executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Paschal said the issue was first raised in his mind while talking with Terrell.

"I was telling him everywhere I was reading and looking, I saw that standards were being raised," he said. "I asked him how long it had been since we've raised our standards, and he said it had been some time."

The Presidential Study Committee on Academics and Athletics is examining a plan that would require high school athletes to pass four courses and have a 75 percent attendance rate per semester. Now, athletes are required to pass three courses and have a 60 percent attendance rate.

Paschal said toughening the standards is overdue.

"A person could participate in sports for four years (now) and not come close to graduating," he said.

The committee, which met in February, is receiving comments about the proposal from members of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, he said.

"The people that have called me or written me all support the idea, one, that the attendance regulation needed to be updated and raised, and also that the academic standard should be raised..." Paschal said.

"What they have been saying is that across the country all the schools are raising their graduation requirements and setting goals and objectives higher, and that it's been quite a while since we've done that in North Carolina from an athletic side," he said.

The committee will reconvene in December to put the final touches on the proposal. The plan will then be presented to the full NCHSAA membership for a vote, Terrell said.

If the proposal is passed, the rule would become effective in the fall of 1985, but the first students affected would be those taking part in athletics the spring of 1986.

Terrell said he expected the proposal to be approved, but added that the committee was still working on the four-course requirement.

"The committee is looking at some alternatives," Terrell said.

Of the three courses athletes are required to pass, one must be an "academic," or required, course. The committee is trying to decide whether athletes should be required to pass two academic courses their first two years and one their remaining two, or some variation of that.

"Most kids take most of their required courses in their freshman and sophomore years," Terrell said.

Paschal also said guidelines would probably have to be set up to define which courses would be classified as academic courses.

"Say you say an athlete must pass four courses, and two of those are academic courses. One school system might define academic one way and another school system might define it another way," Paschal said.

Paschal stressed the committee's goal is "to raise our minimum standards ... and we're hoping local school units will add to that if they can."

"What I've heard is that we need to make sure we treat everybody equitably while still striving for excellence," he said.

"I feel if we allow an athlete to barely get by, then the coaches, administration and everybody else are doing an injustice to that young fellow when he can no longer participate in athletics but does not have the academic skills to cope with life," Paschal said.

"I see it all working hand-in-hand," he added. "They're just two sides of the same coin, athletics and academics."

Terrell and Paschal said some states have gone overboard in toughening their standards.

"California and Texas, and some others, have done some real drastic things," Terrell said.

In California, the Los Angeles Unified School District enacted a rule a year ago that barred students with less than a C average or an F in any course — or the "no-fail" rule — from participating in any extracurricular activities the following quarter.

When the rule was first instituted, there was a substantial increase in the number of students forced to drop extracurricular activities. But school officials said that number has steadily declined as students became familiar with the new requirements.

Terrell said under California's rules, a student could get all As and one F and not be allowed to participate in any extracurricular activities.

Paschal said that North Carolina's requirements would not be as harsh as those in California.

"What we are requiring is not so strong that it would hurt people," he said. "I wouldn't want them so high that it would eliminate some youngsters from even trying to get there."

Both Paschal and Terrell also said they were concerned that organizations that lack the knowledge or whose main concern was not athletics would become involved in putting together a proposal.

"If the North Carolina High School Athletic Association doesn't look at this, other groups would become involved" not as well versed in athletics, Paschal said. "Sometimes, their decisions can be harmful."

Ticket Sales Help Keep The Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins may be staying put until at least 1988, thanks to more than $6 million of corporate and public money thrown into a massive, lease-binding ticket drive.

But the ticket buyout and the future of major league baseball in Minnesota still hinges on one thing: The average peanut-chomping baseball fan can't quit buying tickets in hope of getting in free.

Harvey Mackay, the Minneapolis envelope executive who's leading the drive, will be at the Metrodome ticket window today before the Twins-Toronto game.

He'll be buying the first block of 1.4 million tickets that he hopes will boost the Twins' attendance over the 2.4 million mark, thus voiding an escape clause in the team's Metrodome lease.

"But it is crucial that the general public continues to purchase Twins tickets so that we may meet our 2.4 million ticket goal," Mackay said.

Meanwhile, the Minneapolis Star and Tribune reported today that the Twins offered to negotiate a new four-year Metrodome lease, just hours before the ticket buyout was scheduled to begin.

Under the proposal, local buyers would have underwritten the sale of 6,000 season tickets a year over four years and the club's rent at the dome would have been reduced, the newspaper said. The proposal would have cost $2.1 million more than the buyout.

But sources said the task force rejected the Twins' proposal and decided to go ahead with the buyout.

Mackay's group will come up with a plan within 10 days for distributing the tickets to needy people in the five-state area of the Dakotas, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

But even though the drive will boost his team's attendance and revenues, President Calvin Griffith repeated Monday he doesn't like the plan.

"I am not in favor of the ticket program which has been proposed because I do not feel it is good for baseball as a whole and, especially, baseball in Minnesota and the five-state area," Griffith said in a three-sentence statement.

Griffith, 73, has said he will sell his controlling interest in the Twins this season. Griffith and his sister, Thelma Haynes, own 52 percent of the Twins' stock.

But if the Twins are forced to stay in Minnesota, the price tag on the team might go down because out-of-town bidders may lose interest.

Griffith said he is optimistic that a plan can be worked out with Mackay's group to fairly distribute the tickets. Both sides are worried that the normal fan may resent sitting in a sea of non-paying customers.

"There might be some confusion that would erode normal sales if people feel or perceive that free tickets are floating around and hold up buying tickets," Mackay said. "Minnesota has shown that we want to keep major league baseball in our state and now it is the time for the fans of this region to step up to the plate and help this effort."

Jerry Bell, the director of the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission that pitched in $2.5 million, said the group has not ruled out simply not using or destroying tickets, instead of giving them to fans who would usually pay their way in.

"They'll probably have to sit on them or burn," Twins spokesman Laurel Prieb said. "That's the smart business thing to do."

Curt Carlson, president of the Carlson Companies which is helping the buyout, said the impending sale of the Twins and the out-of-state bidders had sparked "a kind of emergency and it looked like we'd lose the team to another city."

Last month, a Tampa, Fla., group purchased 43 percent of the Twins' stock and other groups from Denver, Indianapolis, and Vancouver, British Columbia, were also interested in buying the Twins.

"All the talk about a sale and 43 percent of the interest going to Tampa was very counterproductive," Mackay said. "But this ends all the speculation and we can now go forward and fans will know baseball will stay in Minnesota for five years."

However, he warned, "there's no way the we can flatly guarantee we will reach our goal, but this is an insurance program."

The escape clause in the Twins' lease says that the team must average 1.4 million fans in its first three years at the Metrodome; this is the last year.

Crowds have been small since the team moved into the dome in 1982. Last year's attendance of 858,000 — third lowest in the American League — left them 2.4 million away from the lease requirement.

If 2.4 million fans show up, the Twins would be bound to the lease through 1988.

The $6 million included $2.5 million funds from the stadium commission, $400,000 from the city of Minneapolis in adjusted parking fees, $500,000 from the fellow Metrodome-dwelling Minnesota Vikings football team, and the rest from a group of 35 undisclosed corporations.

Two Films Offer Abundant Action

Two movies now showing at the Plaza Cinema have one denominator in common — action. "The Bounty," another cinematic version of a factual mutiny that took place in the Tahiti area of the Pacific, provides historical/fictional action based on known facts of the 1788 seizure of a British ship, HMS Bounty. "Breakin'" focuses on a subject as up-to-date as tomorrow, the phenomena of break dancing now sweeping the country.

Presented in the format of a series of flashbacks — from the court martial scenes in London of then Lt. William Bligh on trial for having lost his ship, to sea and land sequences of events referred to in the court martial, the end result is a curiously quasi-documentary film. Despite this back and forth narration/thread-of-action framework, "The Bounty" succeeds in bringing insights into the relationship of Bligh and the close friend, Fletcher Christian, who ultimately betrayed him.

Anthony Hopkins as Lt. Bligh is more consistently believable a character than is Mel Gibson as Christian. There are static moments when Christian gives the impression of a model posing for Gentleman's Quarterly. In one memorable scene, however, Christian explodes into feverish action — at the moment he is trying to maintain order among his fellow mutineers while getting Bligh and other crew members into boats to be cast away.

As often happens in many epic adventure movies, minor characters in "The Bounty" have the best developed characters, the most telling dialogue. Expectedly, the photography is first-rate, rich in sea and ocean contrasts.

A few minor things marred my enjoyment of the film. One is that the Tahitian population is comprised almost entirely of slender, comely maidens and lean, muscular young men. Only a handful of older, typical stout Polynesian types are to be seen. And where were the children? Another bothersome point is the apparent depletion of every blossom on the island to fashion welcoming leis on the crew's arrival in Tahiti.

Just as the 1930s and '40s saw a series of formula musicals and dance/musicals, often weak in plot but rewarding in melody and structured dancing, the '80s has spawned a new type of musical films. Pulsing with rock or rock-derivative rhythms, they are basically high-energy caliber entertainments with the merest thread of story.

"Breakin'" following closely on the heels of "Flashdance" and "Footloose," positively crackles with the highly intricate footwork of break dancing, backed by a score that is taut, clean and surprisingly complex.

The young stars in "Breakin'" are unknowns. (I could not catch the names of players in the difficult-to-read credits) — this in no way equates to the absence of talent. What they achieve with the human body in responding to break dancing music is nothing short of incredible. They are also fine actors in the few scenes involving words instead of dance.

Touche of comedy and the budding of possible romances add a good dimension to what could have been an overdose of dancing.

It's going to be interesting to see if from these musicals oriented to youth and rock or rock-related music there comes to maturity a new galaxy of musical stars — names and talents that will be as easily recognized as the musical stars of yesteryear. Chances are good this will happen.

Alabama Wins Trio Of Music Awards

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Alabama, country music's reigning supergroup, pulled off its second three-award sweep in two years at the Academy of Country Music's 19th Annual Awards Show.

Veteran stars Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton, who teamed on the crossover hit duet "Islands in the Stream," won two awards, while Janie Fricke and Lee Greenwood were first-time vocalist winners at Monday night's ceremonies telecast by NBC.

Alabama's awards included the group's third straight entertainer of the year prize and fourth consecutive vocal group award.

The quartet from Fort Payne, Ala., also won the album of the year award for "The Closer You Get," which in February earned the best country group vocal Grammy.

Clutching their trophies — shaped as little cowboy hats — group members Jeff Cook, Teddy Gentry, Mark Herndon and Randy Owen said their latest awards were no less exciting than their first ones.

"This is what we dreamed of years and years ago," Owen said.

"It's like winning the Super Bowl, the World Series and the World Heavy Weight Championship all at once," Herndon added.

Since bursting on the country music scene in 1980, Alabama has been showered with awards. Monday night's honor brought to nine their total from the Academy of Country Music, an organization headquartered in Los Angeles.

Greenwood, whose hit love song "I.O.U.," also won a Grammy this year, was touring and was not on hand to collect his "the Hat" award for top male vocalist. Ironically, Greenwood's name did not even appear on the Academy's initial nomination ballot and he made the final ballot by write-ins.

But Ms. Fricke, who last fall won her first award from the Nashville-based Country Music Association, picked up the top female vocalist award and later gave a rousing performance.

NBC Sets Sights For Young Viewers

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC just might have to change its team bird. The peacock no longer suits the network's programs or its audience profile. From now on, the trademark should be the pigeon, the ultimate urban survivor.

Like this suggested new symbol, NBC's fall schedule is gritty, gutsy and hungry. The new programs should appeal to city dwellers, who have learned to laugh at adversity. Major elements of NBC's new series are guns and giggles.

Half of the six dramas NBC introduced are law-and-order shows, and one of its three new comedies has Bill Cosby living in a New York City brownstone.

"Miami Vice" is set in Miami. "Partners in Crime," starring Loni Anderson and Lynda Carter as private eyes, is filmed in San Francisco. And in "Hunter," Fred Dryer is another Dirty Harry, who punches one punk into unconsciousness, then stands over the sleeping slime and spits out the words: "You have the right to remain silent, you have the right ..."

Even Michael Landon, who moved from the Ponderosa Ranch on "Bonanza" to "Little House on the Prairie," can finally wipe his boots on cement.

He plays an angel who arrives on Earth to help the needy in "Highway to Heaven." "He'll be visiting a lot of big cities, where angels are needed the most, particularly with young people who need it the most," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

Two years ago, perennial also-ran NBC showed ratings and audience demographic growth by appealing to viewers in big-city metropolitan areas before anybody'd heard of Yuppies or Gary Hart. They voted each week for new shows like "Cheers," "St. Elsewhere" and "Family Ties," and the TV profession handed NBC 33 Emmy awards — more than ABC and CBS combined.

"The A-Team" was the highest-rated series among males aged 18 to 49. "Hill Street Blues," the best dramatic series the last three seasons, wasn't far behind.

But this past season, NBC made a serious miscalculation. The network picked up a twang and planted seeds in the pavement with such rural fare as "The Roustlers," "Yellow Rose" and "Boone." Not only did NBC fail to capture CBS' rural franchise, it also alienated its own following.

NBC finished the regular prime-time season in third place for the ninth consecutive year, and its average rating dropped to 14.9, meaning less than 15 percent of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes were watching, on average, compared to CBS' 18.1 rating and ABC's 17.2.

All 10 programs NBC introduced last fall were canceled, including shows about a ghost ("Jennifer Slept Here"), a man who turned into animals ("Manimal") and a talking orangutan ("Mr. Smith").

The well-executed "Bay City Blues" and "For Love and Honor" never found their audiences either, and even "Hill Street Blues" was wounded, getting a late start with original episodes and losing every week to "Knots Landing."

"We got off to a rocky start last fall," Tartikoff told advertising executives at NBC's new-season presentation. "But let's not look back too long. Let's look forward."

For the new season, he promised a September start for "Hill Street Blues" and 26 episodes, four more than the normal series commitment.

"This season, we're not trying to be all things to all people," Tartikoff said. "We're offering a contemporary schedule for young, upscale audiences."

NBC is returning 14½ hours of reasonably solid programming, evidence that Chairman Grant Tinker's patient approach is taking hold.

FOCUS

The Eye Of The Storm

Today marks the beginning of hurricane season in the Eastern Pacific. The hurricane which struck Galveston, Texas, at the turn of the century was the worst natural disaster in U.S. history. An estimated 6,000 lives were lost. The energy of an average hurricane could supply the electrical energy used in the U.S. for half a year. In fact, there is enough energy in 10 minutes of a hurricane to match the nuclear stockpiles of the world!

DO YOU KNOW — What is the generic name for a Pacific hurricane?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Jamestown is located in Virginia.

TOWN OF WINTERVILLE ADVERTISEMENT OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-368 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Board of Aldermen of the Town of Winterville, dated April 9, 1984, I am advertising tax liens for the year 1983 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and costs from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when a very great deal can be accomplished if you are careful to not be over-extravagant or to allow some personal prejudice to take over and control you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You get a flood of ideas that should be weeded out and the best of such utilized to your advantage.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A partner may have an eye on your mate, but don't quarrel over it and all will be fine. Find a better way of handling your debts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't be so concerned with work that you fail to gain a big favor from one who is generous in the outside world.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Ideal day for handling tasks you have agreed to do, but don't run off on any tangents. Be careful of your comments.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to enjoy entertainments that you like without family interference. Forget that home work that is not important.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be happy at home and don't let some outsider try to interfere with your pleasure. Invite charming persons to visit you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day for communicating well with associates and don't allow some monetary worry to deter you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Financial affairs are best handled during the daytime but concentrate more on acquiring than spending. Take it easy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do whatever is best to improve your well being even though some duties could be boring. Be happy and satisfied.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to see an advisor and make fine plans for the future. Don't permit a friend to take you away from the practical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Fine day for being with good friends and enjoying them. Get away from career pressures for awhile to regain equilibrium.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Handle vocational and credit affairs first and do not go off on some tangent. A powerful individual can give you the support you need.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to travel and study new philosophies, new interests, etc., and should have the opportunity to go to college and learn foreign languages in order to make a big success. One who can get along well with others.
