GUC Makes 'Extra' Turnover To Council

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission board voted Thursday night to turn over an additional $500,000 to the city in the coming fiscal year, but did not consider requests to sell electric power to the city at wholesale cost and take over the city's street lighting system.

At a joint meeting with the City Council Tuesday, members of the Utilities Commission were asked that an additional $500,000 in turnover be made to the city in fiscal 1984-85; that a municipal electric rate be established to sell electricity to the city and the commission at wholesale cost, rather than the present rate which is based on cost of service; that the commission assume responsibility for municipal street lighting, thus relieving the city of the costs involved, and that the regular turnover to the city be based on all utility funds — electric, water, sewer and gas — rather than based on electric and gas only.

If all the requests were honored, it could cost the GUC an additional $662,000 in fiscal 1984-85 and an estimated $1.36 million beginning July 1, 1985.

City Manager Gail Meeks said at the joint meeting that the city would save an estimated $62,000 in the coming year if it paid the wholesale cost for its electric power, and an estimated $300,000 if the Utilities Commission would assume the responsibility for street lights.

As for the additional turnover from water and sewer funds, which produce little or no profit, Mrs.

Meeks said turnover from those funds, based on a 6 percent return on equity, would yield an additional $1 million for the city.

For the last two years, the city has had a "bare bones budget," Mayor Janice Buck said Tuesday. "We must play catch-up in areas where we've slipped behind ... we're asking for your help."

Mrs. Meeks said the questions of street lighting and wholesale electric rate could be addressed in the fall and put into effect "as soon as possible." She also suggested that the addition of water and sewer funds to the turnover formula could be considered for inclusion in the 1985-1986 budget.

But she said the question of the additional $500,000 in turnover be addressed for inclusion in the 1984-85 budget.

In return for the additional $500,000 in turnover in 1984-85, Mrs. Meeks said, "we'd be willing to turn over the $200,000" in water and sewer funds from the half-cent sales tax to the commission. "Good faith merits good faith," she said.

The General Assembly, when it approved a half-cent local option sales tax last year, specified that 40 percent of the money received by municipal governments would be used for water and sewer projects for a period of five years. The percentage would drop to 30 percent for the following five-year period.

Questioning Mrs. Meeks Thursday, commission member Andy Warren asked what options the city has for disposing of the portion of the sales tax designated for water and (Please turn to page 16)

Rouse Requests State Board Act In Local Primary

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Jim Rouse, the second-place finisher in the race for the Greenville Township seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in the May 8 primary, has requested a "legal opinion and decision" from the State Board of Elections on action by the Pitt County elections board Wednesday.

Incumbent Commissioner Charles Gaskins led in the balloting with 7,422 votes, followed by Rouse with 4,190 votes. Tom Johnson placed third with 2,256 votes and Frank Grooms received 1,689 votes.

However, Grooms was disqualified on the day of the primary because he was not a resident of Greenville Township.

An opinion from the N.C. attorney general's office said Grooms' votes should not be counted in figuring a majority, thereby giving Gaskins a clear victory. If the votes cast for Grooms were counted, Gaskins would not have a majority and Rouse would be entitled to ask for a runoff.

In turn, Rouse asked the county elections board to include Grooms' votes in the total and hold a runoff, while Johnson, citing errors, asked that a new primary be held between the three eligible candidates.

GNP Spurts Upward

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy grew at a robust rate of 8.8 percent in the first three months of the year as the enduring strength of the recovery continued to surprise the experts.

The Commerce Department today once again revised upward its projections of growth from January to March, a period which many economists had once expected to exhibit a marked slow down.

Instead, the 8.8 percent performance marked the fastest pace for growth since a 9.7 percent spurt turned in from April-June of 1983, as the recovery from the 1981-82 recession was gaining momentum.

That 9.7 percent rate for the gross national product, the total output of goods and services in the economy, was followed in the second half of last year with gains of 7.6 percent and 5 percent.

Many economists had first predicted the first quarter of 1984 would look much like the final three months of 1983 with growth between 4 and 5 percent. Thus, the government's first estimate of growth at 7.2 percent took economists by surprise and they predicted it would be lowered substantially in later revisions.

However, the number was boosted last month to 8.3 percent and, today, to 8.8 percent.

Most economists predict this will be the high-water mark for growth this year with estimates for growth in the current quarter averaging 5 percent and dropping to 3 percent to 4 percent for the final half of the year.

This pace would still be enough to boost the real GNP, output adjusted for inflation, to around 5 percent for the year.

Real GNP grew at a rate of 3.4 percent in 1982 as the nation recovered from the worst recession since World War II. It had fallen by 1.9 percent in 1982.

Despite the upward revision today to 8.8 percent, inflation remained moderate during the quarter. As measured by a standard that takes into account changes in prices and demand, the pace of inflation was 3.7 percent in the first three months of the year, down from a 3.9 percent rate from October through December.

The department said that after-tax corporate profits for the first three months of the year rose 3.9 percent compared to a decline of 0.8 percent in the final quarter of 1983.

Iraq Attacks Two More Ships, Iran Cautions War Is Looming

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes today attacked two ships south of Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal in the latest of a series of raids — blamed on both Iran and Iraq — that has alarmed governments and oil shippers in the region.

An Iranian leader appealed to his nation to "prepare itself for war throughout the world" in the event other nations intervene in the gulf.

"There is a possibility that an extremely momentous development, the consequences of which cannot be predicted, will come about in the region," Tehran radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, as saying today. "Therefore, our nation should pay a great deal of heed and prepare itself for a prolonged move and jihad." Jihad means holy war in Arabic.

"Should the way be opened in the gulf to the superpowers and everyone of the second rate powers, our nation should prepare itself for war throughout the world against the interests of every country desirous of intervention in the gulf," Rafsanjani said.

An unidentified Iraqi military spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad state radio, said the Iraqi jetfighters attacked two "big" naval targets south of Kharg Island, set the ships ablaze with "direct and effective hits" and returned safely to base.

The communique did not identify the type or nationality of the ships, and there was no immediate confirmation of the report from shipping sources.

The communique came a day after the foreign ministers of six Persian Gulf nations — members of the Gulf Cooperation Council — decided to seek help from the Arab League and the U.N. Security Council to protect oil tankers from hazards of the 44-month-old Iran-Iraq war.

Iraqi warplanes fired on two Saudi supertankers on April 25 and May 7. Two Kuwaiti tankers were attacked Sunday and Monday outside Iranian territorial waters, and a Saudi tanker was attacked in its own territorial waters Wednesday. The ministers blamed the three attacks earlier this week on Iran but did not mention the attacks attributed to Iraq.

Taft, Martin File For Senate

R.L. (Bob) Martin of Bethel and Thomas F. (Tom) Taft of Greenville filed today for the Democratic nomination to the state Senate. Both had filed earlier but were forced to refile when their districts were realigned.

Martin filed under District 6, while Taft filed under District 9.

"I am looking forward to the race with much anticipation. So far it has cost me several thousand extra dollars (because of additional campaigning after realignment) and that's been rough. It feels real good now that a date has finally been set," Martin said.

Taft said he was looking forward to serving the people of his district so they could have a voice in the Senate.

Congress Eats Into The Budget At Rate Of $4.5 Million A Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — It costs $4.5 million a day to run Congress, nearly five times as much as in 1970.

A big chunk of the $1.67 billion congressional budget, however, will be spent on agencies that do more than support the House and Senate.

For example, the Library of Congress, which serves the public, accounts for $321.2 million of the total. The Government Printing Office, which works for the entire government, will cost $105 million.

The Tax Foundation, a private research group, calculated in a report released Thursday that direct spending on Congress this year will total nearly $800 million — $263 million for the Senate and its staff and activities, $453 million for the House and $84 million for joint activities.

What Congress spends directly for its activities is nearly 16 percent higher than last year, while expenditures for legislative-branch agencies will rise by 21 percent.

The foundation said the legislative branch had 39,167 people on the payroll as of last Sept. 30, including 19,361 assigned to legislative agencies rather than to members and committees. The total number on the payroll has declined by 3.5 percent since 1980.

In addition to money spent directly on running Congress, the Library of Congress and the Government Printing Office, the legislative budget this year includes $129.7 million for the architect of the Capitol; $2.3 million for the Botanic Garden; $16.4 million for the Congressional Budget Office; $271.2 million for the General Accounting Office, which conducts investigations for Congress; $14.7 million for the Office of Technology Assessment and $16 million for the Tax Court.

The budget totaled $343.1 million in 1970 and within 10 years had grown to $1.2 billion. The figure for direct operation for Congress, including staff, travel and offices, grew from $179 million in 1970 to $799.6 million this year, the foundation said.

Published Author Combines Work Experiences And Places In Book

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Sharyn Arwood McCrumb's just published book, "Sick of Shadows," has a small Southern town setting with a sheriff instead of detectives and a small newspaper.

She has combined former work experience and places in her book. Mrs. McCrumb graduated from J.H. Rose High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a double major in Spanish and communications. She taught Spanish for a couple of years and was a newspaper reporter for two years.

"One of these years was spent in a small western North Carolina town and among the stories that I covered one involved the sheriff and deputies," she said.

"My idea for the plot was that of a girl painting a picture by a lake. She was killed and someone took the painting. I couldn't figure out what would be in the painting for about two years. When I figured that out, then the book took about six months to write," Mrs. McCrumb said.

"Lovely in Her Bones" is the sequel and has been accepted by Avon and is set for publication next spring. "Elizabeth (main character of first book) goes on an archeological dig in western N.C.," she added.

Her book titles are quotes from other works — mostly poetry. The title is representative of the symbolism in the book.

"A lot of people think mysteries are not very literary; if they were food, they would be cupcakes. This is not the type of book I want to write. My style has been compared to Jane Austen. You're not reading the book just to find out 'who done it,' but its a comedy of manners.

"Avon accepted my book very quickly after receiving it (two weeks). It's common to ask for a rewrite, but they did not in my case. I first sent my manuscript to my agent, who in turn sent it to her first choice of publishers. The agent might send it to several publishers before someone takes it," she said.

Mrs. McCrumb's Appalachian short stories will be published with that of poet Mona Kay Helper in a book titled "Our Separate Days." She is also working on a psychological novel called "Rue With a Difference."

Her short stories have been published in the Central Appalachian Review, Crescent Review and the Journal of Irreproducible Results. A story on Appalachian life won the Sherwood Anderson Short Story Contest. She is a member of the board of directors of Appalachian Writers Association and a member of Mystery Writers of America.

Mrs. McCrumb is on the staff at Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, Va., and is film librarian. She is also finishing requirements for a master's in English there. Her husband, David, is a biochemist there. The couple has a daughter, Betsy, 6. The family lives on a farm in Craig County which is in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. Her parents are Dr. and Mrs. Frank Arwood of Greenville.

She tries to write two pages a day. "Novels have to be sandwiched among my full-time job, family and graduate studies.

"I think if people want to write they should read extensively and should read the classics — real literature," she said.

She would like to be a full-time writer within the next five years.

Mrs. McCrumb will be in Greenville Saturday at the Book Barn for an autograph party from 1-4 p.m.

Dear Abby

Sister-In-Law Makes Sister-In-Law Steam

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. I have a sister-in-law who is the nosiest person I've ever known. She's the kind who will pick up a person's personal letter and read it if she gets the chance. I caught her going through my checkbook once. Anyway, here's what happened, and I am fuming.

After being gone all afternoon, I came home and my phone was ringing. It was her. She told me she had been shopping and came across a good bargain on strawberries, so she bought a box for me and put them in my fridge. I asked her how she got in and she said she took the screen off the back bedroom window and climbed in.

Abby, she broke into my house. The nerve of that woman! I'm sure while she was there she snooped around because she wouldn't miss an opportunity like that.

Couldn't I have her arrested for breaking and entering? My husband tells me I am overreacting. (She's his sister.) But I need to know what I should do about this.

STILL FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Simmer down. Don't have her arrested, but do ask her not to go through any more windows when you're not home.

DEAR ABBY: I've just finished the latest in a never-ending string of arguments with my father about my choice of careers. He has always maintained that he didn't care what I did as long as it was good, honest work.

I'm 24, male, and I've been a paramedic for the last five years. I'm well-trained, love my work and, like a doctor or nurse, I'm proud to be in the lifesaving profession.

I wish third-rate TV shows would portray us as the caring professionals we are instead of lead-footed, careless-driving boobs.

I wish I had a dime for every time I've been asked, "What's the grossest thing you've ever seen?" To that question, I simply reply, "I don't know. I've stopped remembering."

Is there a better answer?

A PROUD PARAMEDIC

DEAR PROUD: Yes: "That's the grossest question I've ever been asked."

DEAR ABBY: "Chuck" and I have been going together for five months. We're both 36 and divorced. Chuck told me he'd been in the service for 12 years but was out now because he developed colitis. He said colitis could be controlled with medication now, and he hoped to get back in again.

About a month ago I called Chuck and said, "I just came from the doctor's, and I'm pregnant." He said, "Don't 'B.S.' me—if you are pregnant, it's not mine," then he hung up before I could say, "April Fool!"

I called him back and said it was only an April Fool's joke. Then he got really mad, called me an idiot and hung up on me.

The next day I called to apologize, and he said, "Your joke was a terrible shock to my system. Now I'm bleeding real bad and don't want to talk to you." Then he hung up.

Two days later he called to tell me he had just taken his physical to get back in the service. He didn't pass, and it was all my fault! By this time I was feeling really rotten. I called and tried to explain that I didn't mean to hurt him, but he said, "You really screwed things up for me but good, and I never want to see you again." Then he hung up.

Abby, how can I make amends? I feel just terrible.

NOT FUNNY

DEAR NOT FUNNY: Consider it a good learning experience and don't try to make amends. I think you were lucky to learn that Chuck had (a) no sense of humor, and (b) no sense of honor.

It's just as well that Chuck chucked you, because I'd have advised you to chuck Chuck.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Women Participate In Sports The Same As Men

By FRED McNEESE
United Press International
The YWCA in Raleigh, N.C., gets a lot of calls these days from women wanting exercise programs right after work.

women doing it makes it more acceptable," she said. Women's programs at Y's and other sports clubs are booming. Ms. Hogan said, including weight training and fitness exercises.

And stay-at-home mothers call to make sure child care is available during the day so they can work out. Raleigh is not unique.

Lynne Mullins, of the Raleigh YWCA, said sports activity has become almost like a support group for participants.

Women across America who grew up with little or no physical activity are now hitting the roads, racquetball courts, spas and other sports facilities where men once ruled, experts say.

"Traditionally, the man has gone to the 'Y' to meet with the guys. 'Men have always had a night out with the guys. It is kind of switching now with women having their night out with the girls.'"

Eva Auchincloss, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation in San Francisco, said more women are signing up every year for road races and other athletic events in which only a handful used to participate.

Ms. Mathews said the social aspect definitely plays a role in the attractiveness of sports activity. "I see that happening in terms of the members of the spa that I belong to," she said. "What I have observed is that people go there for exercise but there also is a lot of social interaction. I think this is particularly true of younger women. I think also it's an alternative to a singles bar."

She sees fitness as the motivation. Pearl Berlin, of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, who has studied sports motivation, said women's athletic activity is at an all-time high and still growing.

Ms. Hogan said interest in sports creates friendships that extend into other areas.

"We are riding a new wave of popularity," she said. "We have people who, never in their whole life did anything remotely athletic, now getting out there and doing it, and more importantly, enjoying it."

"You socialize with those people more," she said. "It is a very healthy trend for women to get that camaraderie that was not available before," she said.

Ms. Berlin said sports make women feel better physically and provide a sense of fulfillment mentally. Other motivations, experts say, include social interaction, friendship, anti-stress benefits and personal development.

Ms. Mathews said more women, particularly the young, career-oriented ones, also use athletic activity as an anti-stress mechanism.

Ms. Berlin said statistics on women's athletic activity are scarce.

Traditional family lifestyles have tended to isolate women in the home and social groups revolving around the home, Ms. Auchincloss said.

"We never had occasion to know before it became relatively acceptable for women to say they are athletes," she said. "We never really knew who was doing what. 'Now there is certainly a much broader societal acceptance of women athletes.'"

As the shift develops away from the traditional family, women are turning to sports to find new companionship.

Dr. Jane de Hart Mathews, director of women studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said athletic involvement is an outgrowth of the "Me Decade" of the 1970s when the emphasis was on developing one's potential.

"Certainly, anybody who is involved athletically uses it for all the same reasons, regardless of male or female," Ms. Auchincloss said. "You can call it letting out stress, personal development, physical fitness, whatever."

She also said girls in elementary school have been receiving more encouragement to be athletically active. When they reach adulthood, their interest in physical activity continues because it is seen as totally appropriate and desirable.

"It is an area where people can do something well in a world where things are usually not that clear-cut. 'Sports is an area in which people can excel, it is not as nebulous as other things.'"

Engagement Announced

Patricia Hogan, the New York-based health and fitness consultant for the national board of the YWCA, said the portrayal of women on television and in books as being athletically active also encourages women.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Powell Ashley of Fairmont announce the engagement of their daughter, Kellie Wade, to Dennis Ray Corbett, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bennie Corbett of Tarboro. The wedding will take place June 2.

Ms. Berlin thinks the acceptance of greater activity on the part of women may be a "chicken or egg" situation.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

You may think clay is for children, but often great artists, past and present, build up a figure in clay before making a permanent cast in bronze or other materials.

2 cups of baking soda (one pound package)
1 cup of cornstarch
1 1/4 cup cold water

We less skilled artists may never create a famous work, but still we have the desire to express ourselves.

Stir together baking soda and cornstarch in saucepan. Add water and cook over medium heat, stirring constantly. When mixture is the consistency of moist mashed potatoes, turn out on a plate and cover with a damp cloth. When it is cool enough to handle, gently pat until smooth.

An interesting and inexpensive medium for practicing your skills is Play Clay. Sculpturing is just the beginning. When your artifact is completed, accent its curves, ridges and details with your painting skills. Adults and children can fashion gifts, decorations, toys and original art from Play Clay in a way that is both easy and fun. And the results look professional.

Roll out the Play Clay between two sheets of waxed paper to a 1/4-inch thickness. Then use cookie cutters or a table knife to cut different shapes. Remove the Play Clay sculptures to a plate of other flat surface to dry. To shorten the drying time, heat shapes in a preheated oven at 350 degrees F. for approximately 15 minutes. If they are not hard enough, continue to heat in five-minute increments.

This inexpensive craft can satisfy any age, and Play Clay is easier to make than cookies. All the ingredients are right in your kitchen. Here's the basic recipe:

After drying, smooth the edges with an emery board. Then paint with water colors, poster paints or a felt-tip pen. Protect finished work with varnish, shellac or coats of clear nail polish. Objects will have a shiny glaze and last for years.

You can put holes in the tops of the shapes if you want to hang them. Make a mobile with your shapes, or string a ribbon through one and wear it as jewelry. Or, glue a magnet on the back and use as a refrigerator note holder.

You can also make vases, pencil holders or paper-clip holders by molding Play Clay around a can or jar. Mold it free hand to make bead decorations for macrame projects, book ends, trivets or paper-weights. The possibilities are endless. There is no better way to offer a truly personal gift than with a Play Clay "masterpiece" and it costs only pennies.

Play Clay is great for youngsters — in camp, church summer school, a child development class or for babysitting. Molding the clay improves finger dexterity and hand-eye coordination. Children can learn numbers and the alphabet by cutting Play Clay into the shapes of digits and letters.

Most often babysitting is a difficult task for both parties because the sitter usually runs out of ideas and resorts to putting everyone in front of the TV. Instead, bring along the baking soda and cornstarch. With a little imagination, there is no end to what you can do to keep kids busy and having fun.

Infrastructure repairs to the nation's drinking water systems could be paid for without government subsidy or grants, according to the American Water Works Association. Water rate increases averaging 27 percent would raise the near $30 billion required over the next 10 years, the association calculates.

Nice, But ...

The White House just can't seem to leave show biz alone.

There it was, big as life, the president thanking a nice young guy in a White House setting for the use of some music from a big-selling album in a radio and television promo against drunken driving.

There was an award presentation (a plaque) ... of which Michael Jackson has a house-full.

Our hearts are pure. No envy. We even share the general admiration Michael generates. It was a nice First Family gesture, to boot.

But (picky-picky), that show business aura infringes on the image of a White House preoccupied with concerns and travail of steering the destiny of a nation and the welfare of its people; no small responsibility, when you get down to it.

There is our involvement in the affairs of numerous other countries, alliances and treaties, our own deficit spending, inflation and deflation, taxation, immigration, health, poverty, hunger ... questions of arms control, peace, war, hostility and amicability, interest rates, housing, crime, appointments, maintaining prosperity, employment, upcoming elections ... no, not that.

November must be the furthest thing from Mr. Reagan's mind.

The Dean Is Gone

State Sen. Julian R. Allsbrook, 81, of Halifax County was buried Thursday. He will be best remembered by Pitt Countians as their spokesman in the Senate for many years.

His legislative career in the Senate began in 1935 and he served one term in the House in 1941. Otherwise, he spent most of his political service with the Senate.

Senator Allsbrook had been looking to the 1984 short session as his last. Retirement was very much on his mind.

He was admired and respected in the Legislature. State Sen. J.J. Harrington has referred to him as dean of the Senate and an expert in the field of Constitutional law.

Through Allsbrook's many years of serving his constituents he earned a large number of friends and admirers in our county and he will be missed.

Risks Increase In Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — While attacks on tankers in the Persian Gulf are today's worry, the Reagan administration is bracing for even more bad news when the roads near Basra dry: the possibility of an all-out assault by Iran to topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The flare-up of fighting in the gulf is risky business in itself. Insurance rates went up sharply Wednesday after the latest attack. Oil deliveries to Japan and Western Europe will slip if shippers choose not to gamble on safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz.

President Reagan declared last February that he could not "stand by" if the strait was closed. Analysts William Quandt and Thomas McNaugher speculated in a private report this week that persistent Iranian attempts to disrupt traffic might lead to U.S. attacks on Iranian vessels and aircraft.

And administration officials said Thursday that the United States has discussed with Saudi Arabia and its neighbors the possibility of providing air cover for tankers in the gulf.

However, the countries have not requested the help, the officials said.

"It's very worrisome," the State Department spokesman, John Hughes, said Wednesday about the flare-up in the gulf. He said Iran's assault on tankers from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait represent "a dangerous escalation of the Iran-Iraq war and a growing danger to shipping in the Persian Gulf."

There is enough oil in storage around the world to make up for any short-term cutback and the United States hardly would feel the pinch since it imports only about 4 percent of its oil from the gulf.

But Japan and Western Europe would be hurt. The Japanese get about 60 percent of their oil from the gulf, the Europeans, about 40 percent. And then there is the grave possibility of U.S. military involvement in an area former President Carter first designated as vital to American security interests.

Iran's show of force in the gulf does not mean the Khomeini regime is about to launch a final drive against Iraq. It may simply be

The United States has a very serious problem. It doesn't want the Russians in El Salvador, but it does want them in Los Angeles.

The Soviets, according to President Reagan, are running all over Central America, but they don't want to send one weight lifter to the Olympics.

The State Department is now working day and night to reverse this situation.

"What do you plan to do about the problem?" I asked one of the American diplomats working on the impasse.

"We're in touch with Moscow now and our message to them is that we have no objection to them testing us in Los Angeles, but we take a serious view of them competing with us in Central America."

"The Russians say the reason they won't come to L.A. is that it's too dangerous for their athletes."

"We're trying to tell them they've read our signals all wrong. Where they are in physical danger is in Nicaragua and Cuba. They have nothing to fear if they show up in California."

"I'm not clear why Ronald Reagan is unnerved about the Soviets being in El Salvador, but is not afraid of them in Los Angeles."

"The reason is quite simple. Los Angeles is farther away from Washington than El Salvador is from Houston. The president is very hurt that the Soviets have decided to boycott the Olympics because they feel they won't get enough protection here. Russian lives are sacred to Mr. Reagan when they are in the United States. At the same time, we have informed Mr. Chernenko the Soviets are not going to win any Gold Medals if they keep swimming in our hemisphere."

"I guess both messages coming at the same time must have Moscow very confused."

"I don't think so. We want the Soviets to compete in the Olympics. We'll give them all the visas they request to come to Los Angeles. But we're not going to give them permission to send one more hammer thrower into Central America."

"Maybe the Soviets are retaliating because we refused to go to their Olympics in 1980."

"We had a very good reason for not going to Moscow then. They invaded Afghanistan and we wanted to send a strong message that we wouldn't stand for this outlaw behavior. Just because we wouldn't come to their Olympics is no reason for them not to come to ours."

"I understand the other reason the Russians decided not to come to L.A. was because of the smog. Have you been able to assure them that there would not be any smog in Los Angeles if they agreed to compete?"

"There's always smog in Los Angeles. The Soviets damn well know that. We consider this excuse a red herring. If you want the truth we suspect that one of the reasons they are not coming is because they will have to be tested for steroids. Everyone knows their athletes are full of it."

"Do you think the Soviets are using steroids in Central America?"

"We have a strong suspicion they are. But it's the arms they are shipping to the rebels, and not the steroids that we're concerned about," he said.

"I know this is a crazy idea. But if the Soviets are in Central America and we're there also, why don't we just move the Olympic Games from Los Angeles to El Salvador?"

"That's the stupidest thing I've ever heard. Suppose the Russians come to El Salvador for the Olympics, and then refuse to leave after they're over? What do we do then?"

"What guarantee did we have that they wouldn't stay in L.A. after the Olympics were over there?"

"None. And frankly, we think that's the main reason the Soviets decided not to come."

Understanding The Problem

WASHINGTON — It happens at least once a semester. The teacher becomes distressed with his students' behavior, academic performance, or both. He decides to make classroom life all business. Homework assignments are increased, tests announced, fun and frolic cast aside.

Students, in turn, roll their eyes and wait a week or two for the teacher's desperation to pass. They know that he could never fail or discipline a whole class without losing his own job.

Memories of hunkering down in high school flashed back the other day as the Reagan administration praised itself for ushering in a "tidal wave of school reform" in public education. Like the Draconian teacher, federal and state governments have tried to look serious about improving educational performance. But the system may be beyond simple remedies.

One year after releasing "A Nation At Risk," the devastating report on U.S. public schooling, Education Secretary Terrell Bell released a purple-bordered follow-up. "The Nation Responds." According to the report, at least 35 states have already approved tougher high school graduation requirements. At least 22 states have authorized changes in school curricula; seven have lengthened the school year; 15 have increased the number of years spent studying subjects in high school. The additional areas addressed range from student evaluation to extracurricular activities considering such reforms themselves — mostly, we're told, in response to a widely felt need for drastic measures. Many colleges and universities have reportedly raised their standards for admissions and teacher education, and virtually every educational group has issued some sort of policy or proposal.

Yet even when sanctioned by public officials, reform measures don't always adequately anticipate resistance from those for whom their intended. Well-entrenched in their ways, some teachers and administrators will be able to finesse new requirements. Where the laws are broad, as in a new California rule that permits lengthening school years anywhere from five days to a full year, some districts will respond more thoroughly than others.

Salary and professional incentives could assure a more amenable teachers corps, yet financial measures are likely to come more slowly than increased math, language and science requirements. To date, according to the new Education Department report, only 14 states have approved salary increases. (In another 20, it says, salary increases have been "proposed.")

Yet these concerns seem relatively minor compared to the kinds of social maladies that defy sweeping remedies. State legislatures, for example, can no better instill equal educational commitment in every home than they can equitably enforce the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. Regardless of new homework assignments and pop quizzes, many students will still drink, do drugs, become pregnant, or bring their family problems into the classroom.

Meanwhile, the campaign for educational excellence may run contrary to democratic tradition. The public schools have been open to everyone (or almost), whether they sought academic distinction or simply functional working skills. The system has tried to serve ranging needs while seeking a reasonable standard of competence.

That mission, of course, hasn't always succeeded, but the new reforms could make life much tougher — maybe too tough — for millions of slower learners. Educators may have to reconsider a generation's worth of expansion in the right of access to education.

Such an effort would require the kind of public consensus that Reagan, Bell and other public officials have used to promote tougher standards. It would also hold the prospect of more long-term change — not the quick fix promoted in the federal government's latest report.

That is why citizens, rather than politicians, may have to shoulder most of the responsibility for changing public schools for the better. When the self-styled reformists can't see beyond the next election, they can't fully understand the seriousness of the problem before them.

Wages

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States could have a healthy and competitive steel and automotive industry with many more jobs than now exist if ...

There is always an "if" it seems, and while this one is simple in concept it is complex in consequences. The "if" is this: If workers are willing to accept lower wages ...

The very notion sounds like a turn-of-the-century (the last one) management concept, but as explained by Professor William Dunkelberg it may take on more rational tones.

As things stand, says Dunkelberg, who teaches economics at Purdue University, not far from some of the ghostly shells of old plants, workers in autos and steel earn on average $26 to $30 an hour in total compensation.

That, he notes, is more than twice the average compensation in the entire manufacturing sector, and even higher when compared to average compensation in all jobs in the economy.

"Lower wages don't mean poverty," he states. "Wages would still be higher than the average for the economy as a whole."

A bit of history adds clarity to his argument. Hourly compensation in many smokestack companies during the 1970s rose faster than the inflation rate. At the same time, productivity fell and foreign competition grew.

Steadily, the number of jobs shrank in, for example, the steel industry, from more than 500,000 jobs in the 1960s to less than 300,000 today.

"The workers who lost their jobs certainly did not find other work at equal pay," Dunkelberg observes. "It is not written in stone that workers in these industries should be paid this much."

And it is a fallacy, he contends, that foreigners can build technologically superior facilities. "We can build as good a steel plant as the next guy, he says. "We haven't, because building such plants is not profitable."

We could, he continues, try to solve this problem by protecting our industries from competition by means of domestic content bills, import duties, import restrictions, taxes on imports and the like.

But, he asks, please observe one consequence of doing so. The bottom line, he says, would be to force the American consumer to pay more for a product than the market would ask under competitive conditions.

All this, he reasons, "to save a few of the highest paid jobs in the economy."

Consider another consequence, says Dunkelberg. "If we all pay $1,000 more for a car than is necessary, it destroys existing jobs or prevents the creation of new ones."

Lower, but still higher than average wages, he says, would mean old industries might be able to invest in more modern technology.

Protectionism, in contrast, still leaves industry without the incentive to invest in modern technology and otherwise become competitive and more capable of enlarging the job market.

Strength For Today

Jealousy! The Bible describes it as "cruel as the grave; the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame" (Song of Solomon 8:6)

The lives of many people are seared, burned and ruined by this passion. For indeed it is a passion, and unfortunate is that person who writhes, inwardly and outwardly, in its toils.

It is not easy to rise above jealousy. There is injustice in the world. There is a mal-distribution of benefits. Some people are born fortunate; others unfortunate. Prosperity comes easily to some; with difficulty or not at all to others.

There is reason why people become jealous, but this does not justify the fact that they are. We should remember that jealousy never brings solace and frequently brings unhappiness, despair and ruin. It is wholly evil.

House Rejects Gas Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has persuaded Congress to approve billions of dollars for thousands of weapons as part of his record Pentagon buildup, but he still can't win approval for nerve gas, a weapon he says is "absolutely essential."

The House of Representatives voted 247-179 Thursday to reject a Defense Department request for $95 million in fiscal 1985 to build components for gas bombs and shells.

The vote came as the House worked its way through a huge bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $285 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, the fourth year of Reagan's five-year blueprint to "rearm America."

Chemical weaponry is the only major new Reagan program Congress has rejected.

Although the Republican-dominated Senate still has yet to consider the nerve gas questions, the margin of defeat in the Democrat-controlled House likely spells defeat for the program.

That is what happened last year, when the House overwhelmingly rejected nerve gas and the Senate approved it by a single vote. The issue went to a House-Senate conference committee for resolution and the House ban prevailed because of the size of the opposition vote compared to the narrow Senate approval.

Reagan, in a letter to House members, said "it is absolutely essential that we act now" to authorize new nerve gas weapons and strengthen the U.S. hand in U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at eliminating chemical weapons.

Premature Baby Exceeding Expectations

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A baby who weighs 14 ounces and is believed to be one of the smallest surviving infants in the country shows more promise the longer she lives, hospital officials say.

"Baby Melika" was born 18 weeks prematurely on April 26.

"When she was born, she was not expected to live, but she's been hanging in there for 2½ weeks. One of the doctors told me she seems to have the will to live," said Lydia Housman, a spokeswoman for Children's Medical Center.

"It's a day-by-day thing and it's difficult to make a prognosis," but Ms. Housman said that so far, the child has been doing well.

The child's mother, who has not been identified, was admitted to Grandview Hospital and Medical Center April 19. The child was born about 18 weeks before her due date and weighed 450 grams — less than an ounce short of a pound.

Once stabilized, the child was transferred to Children's Medical Center's Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

The baby recovered well from surgery performed May 9 to close an opening between the main artery and the pulmonary artery, Ms. Housman said. The opening normally closes on its own, but doctors often close it in premature babies to prevent possible damage from being on a respirator, she said.

Because the child is premature, she needs a respirator to breathe and is being fed intravenously in a temperature-controlled environment.

Marine's Conviction Draws Mixed Reaction

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys called the sentence for a Marine who cited religious reasons for not going to Beirut "a travesty of justice", but some fellow servicemen approved of the outcome.

Cpl. Alfred Griffin, a 22-year-old Muslim, was convicted Thursday of unauthorized absence without leave and missing a troop movement by failing to return on Oct. 18, when the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit left for Lebanon. He was found innocent of a third charge of missing a movement by not returning on Oct. 17, because a special weekend pass Griffin received extended into that day.

Military Judge Lt. Col. Charles D. Breme sentenced Griffin to four months' confinement, a bad conduct discharge, reduction in rank to private and forfeiture of $395 in pay each month for six months. A private's salary is $596 a month.

Several Camp Lejeune marines applauded the sentence.

"I don't think he should have joined the Marine Corps," Lance Cpl. David Reuther, 19, of Cincinnati, said Thursday. "I don't think he's a real Marine. I cannot condemn him for his personal beliefs, but I don't think he should be in the Marine Corps."

Another Marine said he agreed with the bad conduct discharge Griffin received.

"I figured they should have just let him go because he's not doing his job...if he has thoughts about not killing other people," said Lance Cpl. Delano McDonald, 22, of New York City.

A terrorist bombing Oct. 23 killed 241 U.S. servicemen at the Beirut airport. Griffin's unit, originally scheduled to relieve some of those Marines, was rerouted to participate in the U.S. invasion of Grenada and later arrived in Lebanon.

Griffin said teachings of the Islamic holy book, the Koran, conflicted with the possibility that he might have to fire at Muslim "brothers" in Beirut.

During the one-and-a-half day court-martial, defense attorneys said the former White House honor guard's religious convictions were so strong he "feared the loss of his immortal soul."

But prosecutor Capt. James Marino questioned the sincerity of Griffin's beliefs, saying he should have told superiors about his misgivings before going AWOL.

"They probably would've been able to do something about it," Marino said after the sentencing.

He said Griffin "left a lot of people in the lurch" who were depending upon his expertise as a machine-gun team leader in both Beirut and Grenada.

Griffin, a native of Chicago, said he felt he was discriminated against because of his religion and would go beyond protesting his sentence.

"I am going to fast until I am released — until I receive justice, which is what I was supposed to have received when I entered that court," he said.

"There's always a degree of sadness in cases like this," said civil rights attorney William Kunstler, who is also with the Center and has defended members of the Black Panthers and the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"I am regretful that we did not move the military judge far enough" to bring about a lenient sentence. "...But it is the way of the world," he said.

Attorney Randolph Scott-McLaughlin of the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York City, which represented Griffin, called the sentence "a travesty of justice."

"It shows that since the days of Dred Scott in 1850, a black man has a very hard time getting justice in this country," he said.

But Marino and McDonald said racial discrimination was not a factor in the case.

"I don't think race has got anything to do with going over to fight for your country," McDonald said. "That's what you join the Marine Corps for."

The sentence automatically is appealed to Griffin's battalion commander, then to Commanding Gen. Alfred Gray and next to the U.S. Court of Military Review in Washington, D.C., said Scott-McLaughlin. If necessary, the defense would appeal to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., and the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We're going to take the appeals one step at a time," said another

Center attorney, Ron Kuby.

Three other Marines from Griffin's battalion missed the movement, including one who has not returned. The other two received bad conduct discharges. Cpl. Donald King of Orlando, Fla., was confined at hard labor for 90 days, while Pfc. Craig S. Kobi of Baltimore was confined for 45 days.

Fishing Pier Fire Causes 5 Injuries

WEST ONSLOW BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Five people were injured early Thursday night when a fire destroyed a fishing pier at West Onslow Beach, authorities said.

About 15 people were on the Paradise Pier when a fire broke out about 7 p.m., Onslow County Fire Marshall Don Herman said. At least five people jumped off the pier, including two who said they "wouldn't have made it back in" without the aid of surfers, he said.

"They looked back and saw flames and smoke..." Herman said during a telephone interview Thursday night with The Associated Press. "They couldn't see anything except the flames and smoke and weren't going to go back that way."

Herman said others ran through the flames and smoke to shore.

Four of the injured were treated and released at Onslow Memorial Hospital, while the fifth person was still being treated late Thursday night, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Knox Says Foe Wrong

RALEIGH (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox took the offensive on utilities after accusations by runoff opponent Rufus Edmisten that he had aligned himself with the utility companies, and blasted Edmisten for misleading the public on the issue.

Knox faces Edmisten in the Democratic runoff June 5. The winner will meet Republican Jim Martin in the November election.

Knox said Thursday power rates have increased $175 a year for every citizen since 1977 and challenged Edmisten's consumer record as attorney general during that time.

"When you look at the Construction Work in Progress (charges) the utilities have batted always over 50 percent and often times 100 percent," he said at a news conference. "So I suggest to the consumer and to the voter ... that they not only ask the attorney general if he's been fighting (but also) why hasn't he won a case?"

"I think this is one (issue) where Mr. Edmisten has grossly misled the public on almost to the point of lying to them," Knox said.

Knox said that if elected he would appoint Utilities Commission members from all parts of the state, give the commission adequate resources, prohibit utility companies from paying their executives excessive salaries, limit the number of requests for rate changes and repeal Construction Work in Progress charges that allow utilities to seek money to finance power plants.

Edmisten, in a prepared statement, said Knox is trying to draw attention away from his own record on utilities which shows a "pattern of consumer insensitivity."

"His sponsorship of the utilities' future projection bill that was immediately repealed because it was so bad, his acceptance of utility PAC money as a gubernatorial candidate and his proposal to dismantle the Utilities Commission's Public Staff are all tangible evidence of his record on utilities," Edmisten said.

Knox sponsored a bill in 1974 that allowed utility companies to recover more of their costs sooner.

Edmisten Cites Stand

RALEIGH (AP) — Saying he had been "unmerciful" with drug pushers as North Carolina's attorney general, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten said law enforcement was an area where he could be strong as governor.

Speaking to an audience at the North Carolina Close Up Program at Peace College Thursday, Edmisten said there are a number of legitimate uses of government like fighting crime, consumer protection and crime victims' compensation.

Edmisten, facing Eddie Knox in a runoff primary in June, said he had been "unmerciful" with drug dealers. "I don't like drug pushers. I despise them."

"Criminals aren't the only issue, according to Edmisten.

"The innocent victims of crime suffer two wrongs," he said, adding that they are victims of the criminal and the judicial system.

"That, to me, is dead wrong."

Noting that the accused are provided with attorneys and health care, Edmisten asked, "Why can't we do the same for those who are innocent victims of crime?"

Edmisten also said the state's DUI law "is the toughest in the nation."

Edmisten, who said he had been involved in the legislation's passage, said he recently saw an 18-year-old Asheville girl who had been in jail 10 days for a DUI offense. "That young lady, I hope, has learned a lesson she never, never will forget."

On other issues, he said he did not favor merit pay for teachers until someone finds a way to determine merit. He said the "buddy system" could taint such an idea by rewarding teachers for being friends with school administrators rather than for being good teachers.

The Close Up Program is composed of students from across the state who are selected by their schools to participate in a three-day study of state government. Seminars, speakers and visits to the Legislative Building are part of the agenda.

Hall Of Fame Honors Nation's Volunteers

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

For many retirees, volunteer work is its own reward. But the Second Wind Hall of Fame in Hendersonville, offers recognition in the form of a certificate.

"We give awards to a very wide variety of types of volunteers," said the Rev. Charles V. Covell, president of the award organization.

Recipients, who must be age 60 or over, are nominated by church groups, crafts clubs, chambers of commerce, women's clubs, garden clubs, theater groups, historical societies and service clubs like the Lions or Rotary Club.

"It's not for anything done before retirement," said Covell, 75, who received his Second Wind award for his work with the local mental health association in Hendersonville.

Once there are five recipients in a community, they can form a chapter. Some 500 retirees from as far away as California and Florida have received the award.

The organization making the nomination pays $16 for a certificate showing a sprinter and the retiree's name in calligraphy, Covell said. The award is presented in a surprise ceremony in the retiree's hometown, and newspaper clips of the event are sent back to the national headquarters in Hendersonville, where many retirees live.

These clips are kept in a glass case in the public library, where visitors may view them by asking the librarian for a key.

The certificate reads: "Because of a long and useful life, continuing production beyond retirement, while others pause to rest, this dedicated

Plant Closing

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Singer Furniture Co. announced Wednesday it is closing two of its manufacturing plants in Lenoir, putting about 600 people out of work.

Worth K. Oelschlager, president of the company, a division of Singer Co., said plans are to close Singer Plant 1 June 29 and convert Singer Plant 5 into a warehouse and manufacturing facility for samples and machine parts.

person caught a second wind and began a new career of service to mankind. May God give this servant the strength to continue constructive work, radiant with courage and an inspiration to all."

The organization was inspired by Phil Kelly, who offered informal Second Wind awards in the Hendersonville newspaper column he wrote after he retired from advertising in 1962. In 1971, he and four friends met at lunch and decided to found the Second Wind Hall of Fame. The Hendersonville chapter is called the Kelly Chapter in his honor.

House Unit OK's Compromise Leaf Warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Energy and Commerce Committee unanimously endorsed a bill which would provide for tougher health warning labels on cigarette packages — the first major revision of the warning label in 14 years.

The 22-0 vote Thursday sent the legislation, the product of months of negotiations among health groups, the tobacco industry and members of Congress, to the House floor.

Nearly every member of the panel present for the vote spoke in favor of the legislation. Committee leaders said that, given the wide bipartisan support for the new warnings, speedy approval by the full House was anticipated, perhaps as early as next week.

The new warnings would have to be affixed to cigarette packs and placed on billboard, newspaper and magazine ads starting one year after the bill's enactment. Each message would be rotated every three months.

Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., principal author of the legislation, called the effort, which was unveiled only Wednesday, "a true compromise keeping the essential elements of a comprehensive smoking education program (while recognizing) the legitimate concerns of the tobacco industry."

"Smoking is the No. 1 preventable cause of death in this country and the American people have the right to know the consequences of cigarette smoking," Gore said.

He praised the tobacco industry for its role, saying, "This bill represents a progressive and courageous step by the industry that many did not expect. This bill shows the industry is willing to take a courageous stand."

Tobacco state representatives claimed that industry support for the compromise was reluctant — but that cigarette makers preferred the measure to a more stringent one that had been moving through the both the House and Senate.

That one would require circles and arrows on cigarette packs to call attention to the health warnings and would include an assertion that cigarette smoking could be addictive.

The compromise was reportedly sealed in a handshake session Wednesday afternoon involving health groups, the Tobacco Institute and members of Congress, including Rep. Charles G. Rose, chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts.

Under the compromise, cigarette packs would no longer have to bear information on tar and nicotine levels on packs, although companies would have to provide this information, along with data on other additives, to the federal government at least once a year.

The new warnings would state:

— "Surgeon General's Warning: Smoking Causes Lung Cancer, Heart Disease and Emphysema."

— "Surgeon General's Warning: Quitting Smoking Now Greatly Reduces Serious Health Risk."

— "Surgeon General's Warning: Smoking by Pregnant Women May Result in Fetal Injury, Premature Birth and Low Birth Weight."

— "Surgeon General's Warning: Cigarette Smoke Contains Carbon Monoxide."

They would replace the present warning, which reads: "Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

Agreement Set On Split Ticket Suit

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A political lawsuit over North Carolina's split-ticket voting law will be settled out of court, effectively handing a victory to U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon, who questioned the law after losing his congressional seat in 1982.

James McClure Clarke, R-Fairview, defeated Hendon by 1,324 votes for the 11th District U.S. House seat.

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow W. Jones said Thursday he will draft a final judgment in the case based on the agreement, possibly in time for the General Assembly to rewrite the law during its June budget session.

Jones said the Legislature enacted the controversial law in 1952 to prevent voters in a predominantly Democratic district from re-electing a Republican congressman.

Because the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., declared the disputed ballot-counting law unconstitutional, the North Carolina General Assembly must enact a new law before the November general elections. Although the appeals court sided with Hendon, it did not allow a recount.

At stake in the lawsuit was the method by which split-ticket votes were counted on paper ballots and optically scanned ballots. In Hendon's case, voters in five Western North Carolina counties who marked a straight Democratic ticket but also crossed over to vote for Hendon were counted as straight ticket votes.

In the agreement, both sides conceded that optically scanned voting machines could be programmed for split ticket voting.

The Court of Appeals ruled the law was "an arbitrary subversion of the electoral process."

Assistant Attorney General Sandra King, representing the state and local boards of elections, said mechanical voting machines should be reworked.

Voting machines allow a voter to pull a straight-ticket lever and then cross over to vote for individual candidates of the other political party.

Ms. King said the state wanted to reprogram the voting machines so they would not count crossover votes, claiming that would give neither Democrats nor Republicans an advantage. Crossover votes cast on all methods of counting ballots would then be voided in the general elections, she said.

Thomas A. Farr, who represented Sen. Jesse Helms and the other Republican intervenors, said the state wanted to cut into the number of crossover votes GOP candidates get from Democrats.

"They intend to benefit Democratic candidates at the expense of Republican candidates," Farr said.

Democrats outnumber Republicans 3 to 1 among registered voters in North Carolina and Republicans depend on crossovers to elect candidates such as Helms and Hendon.

Farr and Robert B. Long, Hendon's attorney, argued that split-ticket ballots should be counted "as the voter intended."

Long said that ballot counting systems that optically scan paper and punch-card ballots can be reprogrammed to count split-ticket votes. He said only North Carolina and a few counties in Indiana and Kentucky have programmed the optical-scanning machines to void split-ticket votes.

Ms. King conceded that that systems that optically scan ballots could be reprogrammed to count split-ticket votes the same as lever-action voting machines.

Helms Asks For Probe Of Letter

The Associated Press
Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has asked the Senate Ethics Committee to investigate whether a classified letter from the Senate Intelligence Committee accuses him of revealing secret information.

Helms said a letter issued to Senate leaders by Intelligence Committee Chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Vice Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., contained "not even the vaguest implication that I have violated Senate rules."

Newspaper stories this week have described a top-secret letter from Goldwater and Moynihan which allegedly raps Helms for disclosing secret information on CIA money being used in El Salvador to influence that country's presidential elections.

Helms denied again Thursday that his information for a May 8 speech on the Senate floor came from an Intelligence Committee source. Helms accused the CIA in that speech of providing money and other resources to aid in the election of Jose Napoleon Duarte, a moderate candidate supported by the Reagan administration.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said Wednesday there was no direct accusation against Helms in the letter he had received from the two committee leaders.

While he confirmed that Helms' name was mentioned, Baker said, "It makes no allegation ... it is certainly not accusatory."

Baker and Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd sent a letter to all senators cautioning them to exercise care in discussing intelligence matters.

Helms said he hoped the Ethics Committee would make the Intelligence Committee letter public.

Halifax Says Plan Is Fair

WASHINGTON (AP) - Halifax County, N.C., has asked a federal court to declare the method of electing the six-member Board of County Commissioners as fair.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court, the county asked a three-judge panel, convened in voting rights cases, to declare that the addition of "the sixth member to the Board of County Commissioners does not have the purpose or effect of denying or abridging the right to vote on account of race or color ..."

Prior to 1972, the suit says, the Halifax Board of County Commissioners was composed of five members, nominated and elected at large to four-year, staggered terms. But when the county was divided into five districts, another seat was allocated to one of the districts by the General Assembly to create a more equal population distribution among the districts.

However, the suit said, the 1970 census revealed a disparity in the population among the five districts: District 1 - 8,104, District 2 - 18,505, District 3 - 8,357, District 4 - 10,249, and District 5 - 8,669 for a total of 53,884.

The Justice Department filed suit in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina last Oct. 6 because Halifax did not submit the change in the number of board members to the U.S. government.

The suit said the 1980 Census figures showed 49.8 percent of the county residents were white, while 41.7 percent were black and the rest belonged to other races.

Of 24,604 registered voters in 1980, 63.7 percent were white and 34.6 percent were black, the suit said. However, the 1980 Census showed blacks were a majority of the population in four of the county's five districts.

Failure to submit the change constituted a violation of the Voting Rights Act, the suit said.

Colleges Spurn Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Idaho educator says private colleges known for "an intense desire to remain independent" would fall prey to government regulation under legislation that broadly applies civil rights laws to institutions receiving federal aid.

The educator, Bruce C. Hafen, criticized the bill because it would force private colleges to follow federal directives simply because they accept students with federal tuition grants and loans.

Hafen is president of the 165-member American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities, which he said represents institutions with enrollments totaling 350,000 students. He also is president of Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho.

He told two House subcommittees Thursday that many colleges in his association receive no direct federal aid, although almost all have admitted students receiving tuition assistance.

"In general, the member institutions ... are distinguished from other private colleges and universities by their determined efforts over many years to finance their own operations from the private sector," he said.

"A principal motivation for this self-reliance has been an intense desire to remain independent of government control.

"How ironic it is for these college presidents to realize today that if (the bill) is passed, they will be as completely overwhelmed by the collective cloak of regulation as if they had applied for maximum possible federal aid over all these years."

The panels of the Judiciary Committee and the Education and Labor Committee are moving rapidly to approve the legislation that would overturn a Supreme Court decision of last Feb. 28.

The court ruled 6-3 that the government may not cut off all aid to a college because it practices sex discrimination in a particular program. The legislation would ensure that the punishment of an aid cutoff could be applied to the entire school.

But while the court ruled only on a law preventing sex discrimination in higher education, the new legislation also would cover statutes protecting the handicapped, the aged and minorities. In addition, the measure would not be limited to colleges, but include all institutions receiving federal aid.

However, the portion of the bill that most upset Hafen and other private educators followed the Supreme Court's ruling in a separate 9-0 decision on Feb. 28. The justices said the indirect assistance could trigger the aid cutoff.

Dr. George C. Roche III, president of Hillsdale College in Hillsdale, Mich., said his school would seek private donations for students needing assistance, so it would not be subject to government regulations.

But Hafen said some schools seeking to avoid the controls would not have the financial means to substitute private money, thus hurting the disadvantaged students that civil rights laws were designed to protect.

Roche said, "I would have to say with sadness that to call this bill the Civil Rights Act of 1984 reflects no truth in labeling."

He said institutions of all types "would be subjected to vague anti-discrimination fishing expeditions by federal enforcement officials operating in a climate of perpetual suspicion..."

Chemical Castration Overruled

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Court of Appeals today ruled that a "chemical castration" sentence was illegal and ordered resentencing for a man who sexually abused his stepdaughter.

Roger A. Gauntlett, heir to the Upjohn Co. pharmaceutical fortune, pleaded no contest last July to first-degree criminal sexual conduct involving his 14-year-old stepdaughter.

Kalamazoo County Circuit Judge Robert Borsos sentenced him to five years probation, the first year to be served in the county jail, on condition he undergo treatment with the drug Depo-Provera, a synthetic hormone used experimentally to decrease the sex drive in men. The drug is made by Upjohn.

Both Gauntlett and prosecutors appealed the sentence, and its imposition was delayed while the case was considered.

Although the appeals court agreed with Gauntlett that the judge's "chemical castration" order was improper, it also agreed with the prosecution that a prison sentence was appropriate for the crime and that probation was "an abuse of discretion."

Gauntlett argued the sentence was unconstitutional and that there was no authority for it in Michigan law.

"It is unnecessary to reach defendant's (Gauntlett's) constitutional arguments because the condition of the probation is an unlawful condition," a three-judge panel of the appeals court ruled unanimously today.

It noted "our research reveals that no appellate court in the United States, either state or federal, has ever passed upon or approved either voluntary or mandatory treatment of sex offenders with ... Depo-Provera."

"Although Judge Borsos crudely referred to Depo-Provera treatment as 'castration by chemical means,' the therapy is neither castration nor sterilization," the ruling said. "It goes without saying that there is no statutory authorization in Michigan for treating sex offenders with medroxyprogesterone acetate (Depo-Provera)."

The appeals court said Borsos should have referred to another judge a motion by lawyers that he disqualify himself from the case.

The decision said another judge — from another county — must resentence Gauntlett, and that probation is not an appropriate sentence.

Private Firm To Use Rocket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The reliable Delta space rocket, which has boosted more than 150 satellites and has logged 40 straight successful launches, is being transferred by NASA to a private company for commercial use.

Transpace Carriers Inc. announced Thursday it had signed an agreement with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to take over operation of the three-stage rocket.

The agreement was signed Wednesday, exactly one year after President Reagan directed the government to facilitate the transfer of expendable launch vehicles to private U.S. companies. Most American space payloads are being shifted to the manned space shuttle.

Other companies are negotiating to take over the Atlas-Centaur from NASA and the Titan 3 from the Air Force.

The agreement gives Transpace Carriers, a new company which will be based in Greenbelt, Md., exclusive marketing and production rights for future Delta launches after NASA completes its current Delta launch services contract in October. The company will pay NASA and the Air Force for the use of the Delta launch pad at Cape Canaveral and for tracking and data gathering services.

Bank Seeks Buyer

CHICAGO (AP) — Stung by bad loans and a run on deposits by foreign investors, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. is seeking a buyer while using $7.5 billion in emergency aid from the federal government and commercial banks, officials said.

The $7.5 billion — $5.5 billion from an enlarged, existing line of credit and $2 billion from the government and banks — is the second rescue package this week for the nation's eighth-largest bank and the largest bailout ever orchestrated by the federal government.

At a news conference Thursday, Continental Chairman David G. Taylor said the package will help the bank ride out its "temporary liquidity squeeze" and assured customers their money is safe.

"This bank is not insolvent, it's not about to fail ... it just needs a little more time," Taylor said.

New Mexico Entry Is New Miss USA

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The new Miss USA, 21-year-old Mai Shanley of New Mexico, credited her win to her lucky Irish ancestry — and promptly pulled up the bottom of her white evening skirt to reveal a green cloth cloverleaf sewn in the seam.

The dark-haired education major at New Mexico State University was crowned queen of the Miss USA pageant Thursday night, besting 52 other contestants from across the country to win more than $175,000 in cash and prizes.

"Ah, the luck of the Irish," she said when flashing her bit of the green. Her composure, she said, was only a facade — "My head is like scrambled eggs."

The 21-year-old Alamogordo, N.M., native was chosen over runner-up Miss West Virginia, Kelly Anderson.

Miss Tennessee, 24-year-old Desirée Daniels from Chattanooga, was second runner-up. Miss Missouri, 20-year-old Sandy Percival from Sunrise Beach, was third runner-up, while Miss Washington D.C., 21-year-old Steffanee Leaning, was fourth runner-up.

Miss Shanley's mother is of Taiwanese ancestry, her father is Irish.

She said she was excited about returning to Florida for the Miss Universe pageant on July 9. "It's been a dream of mine and I didn't think I'd make it this far."

Miss Shanley is 5-foot-7 and weighs 117 pounds. She lists her hobbies as singing, dancing, acting and traveling.

Miss Shanley is the daughter of Patrick and Vivian Shanley. Her father is a U.S. Air Force sergeant.

Test-Tube Agents May Kill Cancer

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Test-tube antibodies that can be used to accurately reveal the spread of a deadly form of lung cancer may eventually prove to be able to destroy malignant cells while keeping healthy ones intact, researchers say.

These substances, known as monoclonal antibodies, are far more precise than ordinary microscope tests in determining whether small-cell lung cancer has spread to the victim's bone marrow.

Small-cell tumors account for about a quarter of the 139,000 cases of lung cancer that occur in the United States each year.

"Overall, it is safe to say that it is probably the most aggressive solid tumor that exists in man," said Dr. Samuel Bernal of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

Small-cell tumors are usually considered to be inoperable because they grow and spread so fast. However, some researchers believe that victims of the disease may benefit from lung surgery if their cancer has not spread, so the test could be important in determining which patients should undergo these operations.

Ordinarily the body produces many different antibodies that defend the body against invaders such as viruses and bacteria. Monoclonal antibodies, however, are all alike.

Scientists manufacture them in large quantities in test tubes so they will latch onto just one target — in this case, small-cell lung cancers. When marked with dye and mixed with the patient's bone marrow, they zero in on the cancer cells and show up under a microscope.

Doctors described their use of the test earlier this month at a meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology in Toronto. Bernal said they've found that "the proportion of patients with spread to the bone marrow is higher than was initially suspected by conventional tests."

The earlier tests disclosed spread of the disease to bone marrow in about 30 percent of patients examined. But the monoclonal antibodies reveal this spread in about 70 percent.

If further testing proves the antibodies to be accurate and useful, they could help doctors choose the best treatment for the 30 percent of small-cell lung cancer victims whose disease hasn't spread.

In addition, Bernal said, "there is a good potential for its therapeutic use."

The doctors are looking into the possibility that the monoclonal antibodies can team up with another natural protein, called complement, to destroy the cancer cells while sparing normal ones.

The potential for monoclonal antibodies against cancer has stirred wide interest among scientists in recent years. However, a major obstacle has been the fact that many are drawn to healthy cells as well as cancerous ones.

But so far, Bernal said, the monoclonal antibodies he has tested react only with small-cell cancer and nothing else, not even other kinds of lung cancer. However, he said more testing is needed to make sure that they don't mix with normal tissue.

Bernal said the new test should also help doctors figure out which cancer patients will benefit most from experimental bone marrow transplants in which doctors remove a marrow sample, then destroy all that's left in the body with high doses of chemotherapy. Then they put back the marrow that's been held aside.

He said that with the new test, researchers are investigating whether people whose tumors have already spread can be helped by this therapy.

Knife Found On Protester

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 20-year-old man protesting an appearance by Jesse Jackson was booked for investigation of possessing a dangerous weapon after he was found to be carrying a knife, police said.

Daniel Zimring of Woodland Hills was arrested about 8 p.m. Thursday as he entered Los Angeles Valley College's football stadium, where members of the Jewish Defense League were preparing to protest a rally by the Democratic presidential contender, Sgt. Tim Day said.

Jackson had not arrived in the stadium at the time, Day said, and it was not immediately known whether Zimring was a member of the JDL.

"The officers detailed to observe the crowd saw the man in possession of the knife, concealed in his boot," Day said.

Sgt. Jeff Sheldon said the protesters carried placards protesting a remark Jackson made earlier in the campaign in which he referred to Jews as "hymies."

After Jackson arrived, the Jewish protesters "shouted opposition" as Jackson appeared, but no other incidents took place, Day said.

'Sweeps' Period Brings Out TV Specials

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent full-page newspaper ad for WCBS-TV pictured a gray-haired woman, a concerned younger female and this headline: "Will You Be Able To Take Care Of Your Mother As Well As She Took Care Of You?"

Another splashy ad for WABC-TV, also in New York, featured a family around a birthday cake as a white-haired woman prepared to blow out the candles. Its headline read, "Living Longer: Find Out How You Can Beat Father Time At His Own Game."

Not to be outdone, WNBC, the third network-owned TV station here, plans a story this month on grandparents and their legal rights.

In Los Angeles, KNBC-TV had a report called "Old Age Hurts," while rival KABC-TV will focus on issues affecting the elderly.

May is Senior Citizens' Month. It also happens to be a sweeps month, one of four months each year when ratings for local stations are measured, determining advertising rates for the next several months. In major cities, a slight ratings increase could add hundreds of thousands of dollars in yearly revenue.

Some stations believe that well-promoted special reports will attract greater sampling for their newscasts. "We try to do these things all year 'round, but during ratings months, there's an additional incentive to do better," said Fran Preston, public relations director for Chicago's WLS-TV.

In the sweeps months — February, May, July and November — the networks try to help their affiliated stations attract viewers to the late-night newscasts by scheduling major miniseries and movies in prime time.

Last year, when ABC ran the blockbuster "Winds of War" in February, local news for ABC's stations gained viewers, but so did local news on CBS affiliates. David Poltrack, CBS vice president for research, said the miniseries attracted infrequent viewers, some of whom then switched to CBS for news.

The current interest in the elderly may reflect a more sober attitude about special series, which, in the past, often seemed to spring from police blotters or Times Square marquees. It also suggests that the public may be getting wise to exaggerated, sensational reports, designed to inflate ratings.

"My favorite was one on kiddie porn — 'Is your 7-year-old daughter going to wind up in a porno flick?'" said Steve Friedman, a former local news producer who now runs NBC's "Today" show.

Last February, for example, WABC had special reports on video pornography and soap-opera romances on- and off-camera. This month, WABC is reporting on the elderly, the changing Roman Catholic Church and education in Japan and the United States.

"We're making a drive to change the direction of our content," said Cliff Abromats, news director at WABC. "Society has changed. Audiences have become much more sophisticated and, sociologically, much more conservative."

Abromats said the video pornography piece (titled "Are Your Children Exposed?") was a judiciously edited examination of First Amendment rights and control of our TV sets. He said that series would run today, but the soap-opera romance special would not.

"Everybody was doing these sleazy reports, so they became less effective as a ratings booster," said Friedman. "With some local news running two and three hours long, you see special reports all the time now. They're no longer special; people expect them. To be provocative, you have to be new. People have become revolted by reports on dwarfs in the nude."

The trend may be toward reporting news that people need.

"I think most broadcasters are shying away from crime and sex stories," said Larry Lyle, news director at Miami's WCIX-TV. "It's a gimmick that has lost its effectiveness."

The expanded coverage of the elderly also reflects the composition of the local-news audience. "The graying of America is a topical subject," said Poltrack. "It shows the growing affluence of older audiences and the fact that the early news audience definitely skews older."

Said Abromats: "The content has shifted to reflect an aging society."

Friedman said the sweeps' special reports, in part, grew out of the need for stories that could be promoted with eye-catching ads. "You really can't grab people with a full-page ad on foreign policy," he said.

"We have special reports virtually every week," said spokeswoman Andi Sporkin of Los Angeles' KCBS-TV. "The only difference during the sweeps periods is that we promote them more."

Abromats said WABC's specials were clustered more in sweeps months, but "That's in the process of changing. You're going to see more minidocumentaries spread throughout the year."

"The promotion department's budget is only so large," said Tony Ballew, news director at Cleveland's WJKW-TV. "(They) can't promote on the air, on radio and in print all year long. So they promote during ratings periods."

"People say, 'Why not do the same thing during the non-rating months?'" said Jeff Rosser, news director at Boston's WNEV-TV.

"Well doing a series is very costly and time-consuming in terms of manpower and investment. So you have to look at the times of the year that you get the biggest return on that investment, and that's the sweeps."

Some stations say they don't do anything different in sweeps months.

"We will not change our coverage," said Dick Westbrook, news director for WAND-TV in Decatur,

Ill. "We have in the past, a couple of times, busted our rears to do special reports or series. But, with our staff size, we found we were robbing Peter to pay Paul."

Jim Esser, news director at Pittsburgh's KDKA-TV, tries for investigative pieces every week. "It's a bit hypocritical to do special reports only during the sweeps," he said.

Ken Tiven, news director at Pittsburgh's WPXI, agreed. "We have done special reports in and out of ratings periods," he said. "They run when we get them finished. I think you earn your viewers 365 days a year."

Donald Duck Nears 50, But Still Going

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Donald Duck, the bellyaching sidekick to Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse, turns 50 this spring, but the Oscar-winning cartoon character isn't slowing down. He'll be headlining golden anniversary parades, shows and tours from New York to California.

Although Donald's birthday isn't until June 9, the festivities begin here Saturday at Disney World with a parade headed by Donald and featuring 50 specially trained, snow-white ducks in party hats.

On Monday, he'll plant his webbed footprints in the cement at Mann's Chinese Theater in Hollywood. Other plans over the coming weeks include a Donald Duck film festival in New York, the proclamation of Donald Duck Day in Los Angeles and a tour of 14 cities.

All this to honor a character considered by many to have played second fiddle to Mickey Mouse?

"Mickey is our stock in trade, but Donald was always the fun guy, the live wire — a real star," a Disney publicist says.

Starting with his debut 50 years ago in "The Wise Little Hen," Donald has appeared in 170 films, including five full-length features. He won an Oscar in 1943 for "Der Fuehrer's Face" — something his mousy colleague never achieved.

Asner Wraps Up Tour In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Edward Asner, formerly television's "Lou Grant" and now president of the Screen Actors' Guild, wound up a work-and-pleasure trip to the Soviet Union by saying, "This is the hardest week I've had in a long time."

Asner, 54, whose visit ended Thursday, came to Moscow last weekend for an international actors' conference on the status of artists.

Among the resolutions adopted by the conference, attended by 100 participants from 40 countries, was one pledging to promote the role of women in the performing arts, Asner told a news conference. The aim was to correct the "terrible percentage" of unemployed women artists, he said.

Waring Challenged

STROUDSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Fred Waring Sr. and two family-controlled businesses have filed four lawsuits against his son, but the younger Waring's lawyer claims the band leader's wife and two business advisers are behind the suits.

Virginia Waring and the advisers, Ralph Friedman and George Steinberg, "have taken it upon themselves to see that Fred Jr. doesn't operate his father's business enterprises," attorney Peter O'Brien said Thursday.

Nine months ago, Waring Jr., 47, filed suit against Mrs. Waring, 38, and his 84-year-old father's music-publishing company, Shawnee Press Inc., which Mrs. Waring heads. The younger Waring sued for breach of contract after he and his wife, Rachelle, 38, were fired from their jobs at Shawnee Press.

The latest lawsuits, filed over the past two weeks in the Monroe County Court of Common Pleas, seek repayment of loans and advances to Waring Jr. and accuse him of misusing Shawnee Press funds.

Contacted Thursday, Mrs. Waring referred questions to her attorney, Steve McBride, who had no comment.

City parks and picnic shelters are available for get-togethers and family gatherings. Call 752-4137 for reservations.

O Say Can You Sing?

On May 19th, 1932, Congressman Claude Fuller of Arkansas proposed a resolution requiring all candidates for federal posts to sing or recite the national anthem from memory. The resolution died in committee. Francis Scott Key did not write the music to "The Star-Spangled Banner" — only the words. The tune was based on a popular British drinking song, "Anacreon in Heaven." It was not adopted as our national anthem until 1931.

DO YOU KNOW — What was the original title of "The Star-Spangled Banner"?

Harold Stassen Resigns Himself To Losing Again

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Harold Stassen's appearance in West Virginia's Republican presidential primary could well be the last hurrah in a unique political career that dates back to 1938.

The 77-year-old Minnesotan seems resigned to his fate, whether history judges him a semi-comic perennial candidate or a man who cared so deeply that he was willing to subject himself repeatedly to the slings and arrows of political fortune.

Asked Thursday to estimate his chances in the June 5 primary, the last of the 1984 campaign, he could say only, "The power of the incumbency is so great...."

He was more precise in discussing the reasons behind his low-budget challenge to Ronald Reagan.

"What I am hoping to do is make this campaign a referendum on Reagan's policies," he told a handful of reporters at an informal news conference on the steps of the Cabell County Courthouse. "This is so important that somebody has to raise the issues."

Stassen's first run for the White House was in 1948, when Thomas Dewey captured the GOP nomination.

Since then, the three-time Minnesota governor has had his name on ballots in eight presidential races. And he has become a national symbol for perseverance — or perhaps futility.

His repeated attempts to gain the presidency have made his name familiar to millions of Americans, most of whom probably would not recognize him on the street.

Dressed in a gray pin-striped suit and wearing an impeccable gray toupe, Stassen reviewed his career Thursday for a young radio reporter who wanted to know how many times he has tried for the presidency. His strong voice and clear gaze belied his age.

"You know," he told her, "I got my start when I was elected governor of Minnesota. I was the youngest person ever to be elected governor of a state."

The year was 1938 and Stassen, a lawyer, was proclaimed the 31-year-old "boy wonder" of American politics.

"But I want to know why you are running for president," the young woman persisted.

Stassen smiled — a small, inward smile, almost a sigh.

"Had some younger person, a person with views similar to mine, stepped forward to discuss these crucial issues, then I would not be here," he said. "You know, the '48 campaign against Dewey was my most serious campaign. Since then, I have entered these races largely to talk about the issues."

Stassen, who has law offices in Minneapolis and Philadelphia, plunked down $2,000 to enter the West Virginia primary to talk about the issues in general and Reagan's policies in particular.

"He is terribly wrong on his foreign policy and on his domestic economic policy," said Stassen, whose only other primary campaign this year was in New Hampshire.

"America should be strong, but it also should be reserved in the use of its power," he said. "Reagan is making terrible mistakes."

Stassen said he was appalled by the president's willingness to use "excessive force" in pursuit of his foreign policy objectives.

"He was wrong to send the Marines into Lebanon, as everybody now knows," he said. "He should have sent in ambassadors with brains and kept the troops in reserve instead of sending them in, as he did in the Caribbean and as he appears to be getting ready to do in Central America."

On the home front, Stassen said, the president's economic policy has consisted mainly of fighting inflation by keeping millions of Americans unemployed.

"We need greater restraints on the excessive use of credit to finance these giant corporate mergers, which bring about more unemployment, and we need to change our world trade policy and rebuild our steel industry," he said.

In all, Stassen said, he probably won't spend more than $5,000 in West Virginia, if he spends that much.

"New Hampshire was the curtain-raiser and West Virginia is the finale," he said.

He smiled when asked if it also is the last act in his political career.

"Who knows?" he said. "The legend is that many of my ancestors in Norway still were sailing their Viking ships at age 100."

Reagan Campaign Launching TV Blitz

WASHINGTON (AP) — The scenes look purely American — a joyous wedding, a man painting a picket fence, a beauty queen — and the announcer's voice steady with confidence as he declares, "It's morning again, in America."

This is the America that President Reagan's campaign committee is depicting in the first television commercials of the president's drive for a second term. The seven advertisements will begin airing next Monday at a cost of roughly $2 million over eight days.

The commercials "try to create an environment that people feel comfortable with," Ed Rollins, Reagan's campaign manager, said Thursday as he showed them to reporters. "We wanted to remind people how things were and how they're getting better," he said.

Several of the commercials stress that an economic recovery has taken hold during Reagan's term in office.

"America today is prouder and stronger and better," the announcer says at the end of one commercial. "Why would we want to return to the way we were less than four short years ago?"

Another theme is Reagan's leadership.

"Isn't it interesting that no one, anywhere, is saying the job of president is too big for one person," the announcer says in one commercial. "President Reagan. He's doing what he was elected to do."

Democrats reacted to the ads even before they hit the air. Rep. Tony Coelho of California, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said, "He's running against the policies of the past, but the issue in 1984 is the future, and the danger posed by a second Reagan term."

Rollins and other Reagan campaign officials said the commercials will appear frequently during the eight days beginning Monday, and another $2 million will be spent on advertising by the time the president is renominated at the Republican National Convention in August.

This round of commercials will appear on network television and in 27 selected media markets around the country.

Reagan Gets Physical

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is getting his first complete physical examination in more than 2½ years.

Reagan was to leave the White House by helicopter today for the 10-mile flight to the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., a Washington suburb.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the examination by a team of physicians on the staff of the naval hospital was expected to last about three or four hours and that Reagan would then take the rest of the day off and fly to his Camp David retreat for the weekend.

Speakes said the examination was scheduled because it's an election year and there have been various suggestions in the media that Reagan should have one. He described the exam as routine and said there was no specific medical reason or complaint that prompted it.

Panel Calls For U.S. To Quit Central America

Opinion Makers Offer 'Peace Plan'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of 51 prominent Western Hemisphere opinion makers, warning that warfare in Central America could escalate, urges the United States, Cuba and Nicaragua to move toward peace through military disengagement from the region.

The recommendation was contained in a lengthy report made public Thursday on hemispheric security, trade and debt problems. Titled "The Americas in 1984: A Year for Decisions," it was signed by former secretaries of state Cyrus Vance and Edmund Muskie, Panamanian President-elect Nicolas Ardito Barletta and former Ecuadorean President Galo Plaza.

The report outlined a step-by-step "plan for peace" beginning with a halt to American military aid to anti-government rebels in Nicaragua.

Continued assistance to the insurgents "would be ineffective, counter-productive and, in the view of most of us, plain wrong," the report said.

It said the four Latin American peace mediation countries, known as the Contadora group, should obtain firm assurances from Cuba and Nicaragua that "neither country will provide military or paramilitary support for the insurgents in El Salvador."

Once this commitment is achieved, the report said, the United States should demonstrate its readiness to cooperate for peace by scaling down the level of its military construction in Honduras and by reducing the duration, size and frequency of its military maneuvers in the region.

"The prime requisite for making peace in Central America is not more aid, more weapons, or more advisers, but political will," the study said. All the parties to the various conflicts of the region must turn toward peace "with decisiveness, perseverance and a commitment to succeed. The time to act is now."

The project was co-chaired by Plaza and by Sol Linowitz, a former U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States.

Hit Squad Kills Five In Clinic

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Members of a hit squad that killed five people and wounded a doctor in an attempted gangland murder at a health clinic may have fled to the United States, authorities said.

The target of the bloody attack Thursday on the Clinica Raya Casimiro Espinosa, 31, escaped unharmed when he threw himself under a bed. Espinosa, who is reported to be an organized crime kingpin, was in the clinic being treated for a bullet wound suffered in a shootout earlier in the week, authorities said.

As the gunmen fled, several members of Espinosa's family, who live in houses near the clinic, poured into the street and fired at the getaway cars, said Esther Espinosa Campos, a family member.

Mrs. Espinosa declined to speculate on the motive for the attack, but said, "A lot of problems are still unsettled. My brother thought he had settled them, but apparently he had not."

Espinosa's sister, Norma Emilia Espinosa-Campos, 35, was killed as she shielded her brother from the gunmen, said Inspector Ernesto Danache, Matamoros police chief. The guard outside Espinosa's door, Nestor Torres Torres, 25, also was killed.

Bullets from automatic weapons pierced the walls beside Espinosa's bed, killing Virginia Sifuentes, 34, who was resting in a bed in the next room.

Two other clinic patients, Victor Raul Revulcada, 35, and his son, Norberto, 17, being treated in a room down the hall, also died from bullet wounds, Danache said.

Bomb Kills 2 Officers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA guerrillas detonated a land mine under a police car in a Northern Ireland border zone today, killing two police officers and wounding a third.

The attack came less than 24 hours after gunmen in Belfast shot and seriously wounded a Roman Catholic journalist who regularly condemned terrorism on both sides of the province's sectarian divide.

A Belfast police spokesman said guerrillas ambushed the police patrol on a quiet lane in South Armagh, an area near the Irish border known as "bandit country" because of frequent attacks on security forces there.

The spokesman, who in keeping with British policy spoke on condition of anonymity, said the bomb was hidden in a culvert and was apparently triggered by remote control as the armored-plated police car passed by.

The attack was similar to a blast Wednesday in which another police car was blown up by a 500-pound land mine in South Armagh. Three officers escaped serious injury in that explosion.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army, in a statement issued to news organizations, claimed responsibility for the blast.

Wilson Marine Dies In Crash

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. (AP) — An observation plane crashed during night training exercises at the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center near this desert town, killing two Marine officers, base officials said.

Officials said Thursday that 1st Lt. Colburn W. Hinton, Jr. 29, and Capt. David A. Fuzessery, 31, died Tuesday evening when their OV-10 Bronco turbo prop crashed during the training mission.

Warrant Officer Ron Frazier, base spokesman, declined to discuss details of the crash.

"They don't want any more said about the accident because of the investigation," he said.

The officers were members of Marine Observation Squadron 1, 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing stationed at Marine Corps Air Station (helicopter), New River, N.C.

Hinton, the pilot, is survived by his mother, Audrey A. Hinton of Wilson, N.C.

Martin Schools Seek $3.3 Million

WILLIAMSTON — The budget request of the Martin County Board of Education, the largest single request submitted to the Martin County Board of Commissioners, totals $3,358,717.

This figure represents a 38 percent increase over the $2,434,624 that was appropriated by the county for the education budget in the current 1983-84 fiscal year.

The request for capital outlay for $884,015 is more than double the $360,000 allocated by commissioners for the current fiscal year.

The 1984-85 budget request includes provisions for salary increases and other benefits that are part of a teacher package expected to be approved by the state. It also includes other proposed improvements in the system operation.

County commissioners also heard a request from Martin Community College for $372,257 for the school and the ADAP program.

GUC ...

"We could spend it ourselves," Mrs. Meeks, who is also a member of the Utilities Commission, said.

She said the City Council could elect to pay water and sewer bonds, place the money in a capital reserve fund, give it to the GUC, or "request a waiver" from the state and spend the money on other projects.

Mrs. Meeks also said that if the commission did not appropriate the additional $500,000 in turnover, there is "a good chance you wouldn't" get the sales tax money.

GUC Director Charles Horne then told commission members that the additional turnover could be raised by raising rates for customers, reducing capital improvement expenditures or taking the funds from retained earnings or a sewer capital reserve fund.

Commission member Bill Taft and others voiced opposition to raising utility rates after Commissioner Buddy Zincone said an 0.8 percent increase in electric rates would provide an estimated $380,000 in revenue to fund the city's request. "We're already way above our neighboring communities on water and sewer (rates)," Warren noted.

Referring to capital improvement money and reserves for expansion of the system, Warren said, "If we have to run lines to Brook Vally or any other annexation, we don't have the money to do it."

"The city can't expect us to come up with money (for annexation) when they come up with this (request for additional turnover)," Commissioner Richard Powell suggested.

Fred Robbins said "this is the fourth budget period I've been through" as a member of the commission. "This is the third time in four years this (the city's request for more money) has been repeated."

"My personal view about the $500,000 is not to consider it at all," GUC Chairman Margaret Wirth, said, suggesting that any funds given to the city be considered only in the regular turnover formula.

Mrs. Wirth continued, "My personal feeling is the half-cent sales tax is not an inducement to talk about the $500,000. To me the $200,000 (from the sales tax) is no inducement for the $500,000."

Asked where she would recommend finding the additional turnover, Mrs. Meeks suggested, "You have substantial contingencies."

Asked if the city expected consideration of the wholesale power rate and the street lighting issue in the coming budget, Mrs. Meeks responded, "What we're looking at is $500,000."

"We agreed on turnover to keep these things from reoccurring," Warren said. "This is not doing it."

Commission members then approved the transfer of $500,000 to the city from the sewer capital reserve fund, to be paid in quarterly payments as receipts from the half-cent sales tax are received.

The Utilities Commission's proposed budget for 1984-85 includes a turnover from the electric fund of $1.32 million and $190,000 from the gas fund. The additional $500,000 approved Tuesday will bring the total turnover to $2.01 million.

Turnover to the city this year, based on the established formula, amounted to $1.46 million.

It was pointed out at the special session that in addition to the turnover, the city this year will receive $1.12 million from GUC customers in the form of franchise tax revenue on electric and gas sales.

The franchise tax — 6 percent on electric and gas sales — is paid to the N.C. Department of Revenue by the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency and N.C. Natural Gas (GUC's wholesale suppliers). The revenue department, in turn, distributes half the revenue to the city, with the other half being retained by the state.

Although GUC customers pay the franchise tax through the electric and gas rates, Mrs. Meeks said, "We don't count that as coming from you (the Utilities Commission)."

The city's franchise tax revenue in 1984-85 is expected to amount to about $1.19 million.

elections board agreed to accept the attorney general's ruling — which would lead to a declaration of Gaskins as the winner — and declined to act on Johnson's proposal for a new election. Instead, the board agreed to send Johnson's petition to the state board for a ruling.

In a letter to Alex Brock, director of the state elections board, dated Thursday, Rouse said, "I ... am appealing the decision ... to deny me a runoff."

"My request for a runoff is based on the fact that out of four candidates, I received the second highest number of votes cast, yet have been denied a runoff."

"This action, in my opinion, and the opinion of legal counsel," Rouse's letter continued, "is contrary to the North Carolina General Statute."

A state elections board spokesman said this morning that Rouse's request had apparently not been received in Raleigh. However, she said Brock was out of the office and he might have received the request without her knowledge.

Woodworth, Fuqua Power Rose Win

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 18, 1984

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Eric Woodworth cracked a grand-slam homer and Traye Fuqua had a two-run shot as Rose High School's Rampants rolled to an 11-1 baseball victory over Northeastern yesterday in the final game of the Big East regular season.

The victory — combined with Rocky Mount's 9-7 win over Wilson Fike — gave Rose a share of the Big East championship with the Gryphons.

However, a draw for top-seeding in the 4-A state playoffs, gave Rose the number one berth. The Ram-pants will play at Scotland County (Laurinburg) on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the first round. Rocky Mount, seeded #2 for the league, will travel to Richmond County for a first round game.

The Rampants got only nine hits on the day, but took advantage of three errors and 12 walks given up by the Eagles to score their runs.

Billy Michel got the win, but went only three innings by plan, as he increased his record to 10-0 on the year. Steve Wall and Gary Scott followed, going two innings each, with Scott giving up the lone Northeastern run, that being unearned.

"I thought we played pretty good today," Coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. "Our pitchers did a good job of keeping them off base."

"I'm real pleased to be going to the playoffs again as the number one seed. I think that our guys are really looking forward to it."

Vincent said that he was very pleased with the job done by the team this year. "They're really done well all year long. And I've got to say that Randy Phillips has been a tremendous asset as an assistant coach for us."

Rose had little trouble with the Eagles, holding them hitless through the first four innings. Michel walked two and struck out five in his three-innings on the mound. Wall gave up the first hit in the fifth, allowing another later in the inning. Scott allowed the lone run as he hit a batter with the bases loaded, and also allowed a total of two hits.

Rose took the lead with one in the first. Fuqua walked as did Toby Fischer and Eric Woodworth. Mike Kinley hit into a double play, however, but Fuqua scored on the play.

In the second, the Rampants scored four times. David Jester walked and scored when Fuqua hit the ball out of the park in left. Fischer drew another walk and Woodworth reached on a two-base error. Kinley singled to right, driving in both base runners.

Four more crossed in the third. With one away, Jester walked and Mike Walsh reached when his fly to left was dropped. Fuqua also walked and Woodworth drove the ball out of the park in left for his grand-slam — the second of his career.

Rose added one in the fourth. Mike Smith reached on an infield hit and stole both second and third, scoring on Marc Nover's groundout.

The final Rampant run scored in the fifth. Fuqua walked as did Woodworth. Kinley then singled in Fuqua.

The Eagles got their run in the sixth. Melvin Hawkins singled and Chuck Shields came on to run for him. Leon Carver reached on an error and with two away, Rocky Pipkin walked to load the bases. Scott then hit Cliff Colson, forcing in Shields.

Kinley had two hits to lead Rose, while Clint Williams picked up two of the four Northeastern hits.

The Rampants finished the regular season with a 16-6-1 overall record and an 11-3 Big East mark.

Indians 'Throw Away' 11-10 Decision

By The Associated Press

After losing 11 of their previous 13 games, the Cleveland Indians found another way to throw one away ... and this time they did it literally.

Losing 10-3 Thursday night, the Indians staged a frantic comeback in the last two innings to tie the game in regulation. But then they lost it 11-10 in the 10th when Jim Rice chugged home from third on a wild pitch by reliever Ernie Camacho.

"I had a lead, but I stopped and froze because I didn't know how far the ball had gotten away," Rice said. "But then I saw how far it got away. He (Camacho) said he tagged me, but he didn't."

The visiting Red Sox had led by seven runs before the Indians tied it with three runs in the eighth and four in the ninth, the last three on a homer by Andre Thornton.

"He's strong and whenever he hits the ball solid, it will go a long way," Boston reliever Bob Stanley said of Thornton. "He's a lot like Jimmy (Rice). They're both struggling around .230, but they're going to hit."

In Thursday's other American League action, Texas beat Milwaukee 4-1 and Toronto nipped Chicago 3-2.

Rice led off the Boston 10th by reaching first on shortstop Julio Franco's error. After Camacho, 0-3, struck out Tony Armas, Mike Easler singled to send Rice to third.

With Rich Gedman at the plate, Camacho then uncorked his wild pitch which hit in the dirt in front of catcher Jerry Willard, bouncing about 20 feet to his right. Rice streaked home, barely beating Willard's throw to Camacho to the plate.

Steve Crawford, 1-0, picked up the victory with two scoreless innings of relief pitching.

The Red Sox had built their 10-3 lead with the help of three hits and three RBI by Gedman and a solo homer by Dwight Evans.

Rangers 4, Brewers

In Milwaukee, Bobby Jones' RBI single keyed a four-run, mistake-filled seventh and Frank Tanana tossed a seven-hitter to lead Texas over Milwaukee.

The Brewers' errors included a throw from right fielder Charlie Moore that went to the backstop, allowing a run to score, and a wild throw by catcher Jim Sundberg that let in two more.

Tanana, 4-4, posted his second complete game this year. He didn't allow a walk while striking out five batters, giving up Milwaukee's run in the fifth on Moore's RBI single.

"Tanana pitched well," said Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann. "He's a battler. He's turned himself from a 90 mile-per-hour pitcher into an outstanding pitcher."

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

In Toronto, Lloyd Moseby belted a solo home run in the fourth inning and a tie-breaking triple in the eighth to lead Toronto over Chicago.

Damasco Garcia led off the eighth against Chicago starter Lamarr Hoyt, 3-5, with a single and was sacrificed to second by Dave Collins. Moseby then hit his game-winning triple down the right field line to make a winner of Roy Lee Jackson, 4-1.

After the White Sox took a 2-1 lead in the top of the seventh on Carlton Fisk's double and pinch hitter Tom Paciorek's run-scoring single, the Blue Jays tied it in their half of the inning on Rance Mulliniks' single.

Designated hitter Willie Aikens made making his first start for Toronto after a jail term and suspension for drug-related charges and hit a leadoff single in the seventh-inning rally.

The victory was Toronto's 11th straight in one-run decisions, lifting the Blue Jays' season record to 11-3 in that category.

LSU Signs To Host Pirates

East Carolina University will meet Louisiana State University on the football field in 1985, Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr announced late yesterday.

The contract between the two schools is for one game only, to be played at LSU on December 7, 1985.

"This is just another step in the upgrading of the football schedule at East Carolina," Karr said in making the announcement. "We are trying to play as many Southeastern Conference schools as we possibly can because of the stature of that conference."

LSU thus becomes the second SEC school on the 1985 schedule. It was announced just a short time back that East Carolina and Auburn would meet in a two-game series in 1985 and 1986 — both games at Auburn.

The Pirates played their first SEC team last year when they met Florida.

LSU played in the 1982 Orange Bowl and recently named Bill Arnsparger as its new coach. Arnsparger was once the head coach of the New York Giants and most recently was the defensive coordinator of the Miami Dolphins.

The addition of LSU to the 1985 schedule means that the Pirates now will face Miami of Florida, South Carolina, Tulsa, Temple, Southwestern Louisiana, Auburn, N.C. State and Southern Mississippi in that season.

Wiggins Helps Padres Steal Win

By The Associated Press
To Alan Wiggins, stealing bases is just a matter of being hot, hot enough to finally send the San Diego Padres' seven-game losing streak up in smoke.

Wiggins, stole five bases Thursday, the last of which led to the run that allowed the Padres to beat the Montreal Expos 5-4. The five pilfers tied a National League record held by three other players.

"Stolen bases come in streaks," said Wiggins, who leads the league with 24 steals. "For some reason, you get that aggressive attitude. You take extra chances, but it's worth it."

With the game tied 4-4 and two out in the bottom of the eighth, Wiggins was walked by reliever Andy McGaffigan, the last of 10 walks surrendered by Expos pitchers. He stole second, wound up on third when catcher Bobby Ramos' throw sailed into center field and scored when Tony Gwynn beat out an infield hit.

There were only two other National League games Thursday. The Cincinnati Reds beat the Chicago Cubs 5-3 and the Atlanta Braves downed the St. Louis Cardinals 5-3.

Wiggins, who fell one short of the single-game major league record of six stolen bases set in 1912 by Eddie Collins of the Philadelphia Athletics, didn't blame Ramos for his spree.

"Their pitchers didn't do a good job of holding runners on," he said. "Every throw he made was right there except one."

And Ramos, filling in for Gary

Carer, out with an injured finger, added:

"If the pitchers hold the runners on well, I'm going to have a good chance. But there's no sense in worrying about what happened today. I'm just going to forget about it."

The record equaled the achievements of Dennis McGann of the New York Giants in 1904, Davey Lopes of Los Angeles in 1974 and Lonnie Smith of St. Louis in 1982.

Reds 5, Cubs 3

Mario Soto, who allowed only one hit in his last start and held the St. Louis Cardinals hitless until there were two out in the ninth, allowed only three hits to the Cubs and became only the seventh Cincinnati pitcher to reach the 1,000 strikeout mark.

"When I'm going good, I'm going real good," said Soto, who is now 6-1.

"Soto's a tough customer, no question about it," said Manager Jim Frey of the Cubs, who had pounded three homers and 24 hits to score 16 runs in the first two games of the series.

Soto had only one bad inning, the seventh, when Ron Cey doubled for one run and Jody Davis hit his fifth homer for two more. He also became only the 17th man in baseball history to strike out four men in an inning, when one of the strikeout victims, Bob Dernier, reached first on a passed ball by catcher Brad Gulden in the third.

The Reds, who had 16 hits but left 12 runners stranded, ended a three-game losing streak.

Braves 7, Cards 2

Pascual Perez celebrated his 27th birthday by throwing a seven-hitter to post his third win in three decisions since returning from the suspension imposed for his drug conviction in the Dominican Republic.

Rafael Ramirez drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and two-run triple and Glenn Hubbard smacked a two-run homer for the Braves, who had 13 hits to salvage the third game of their three-game series.

"We've struggled, but you've got to feel that's going to turn around," Hubbard said. "It's just like this team (St. Louis). They've got people with high averages, and they're going to score more runs."

Harris then scored the 11th run on a single by Taylor.

Planters added one in the second and three in the third.

Brown & Wood scored two in the second and two more in the fourth.

The lone hit came in the sixth inning as Josh Potter beat out a grounder to shortstop for the lone single.

Sportsworld picked up one run in the first and added seven in the second to put it away. Joel Fickling led off the second with a walk and Shea Harper also walked. Steve Anthony singled and Johnson doubled in Fickling and Harper. An error let Anthony score. Tim Moore singled to score Johnson, and Brewington got a hit. Kelvin Yarrell singled in Moore and Tye Fickling singled to score Brewington. Yarrell scored on an error with the final run of the inning.

Five more crossed in the third, as Moore hit a three-run shot and Brewington followed with a solo homer. Six scored in the fourth with Johnson hitting a solo homer and Fickling hitting a two-run round-tripper. Two more scored in the fifth on Brewington's second homer. The final run scored in the sixth.

The Lions got two in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Brewington led the Sportsworld hitting with five, while Moore had four, hitting for the circuit. Johnson had three and Fickling had two.

Kirk Welch led the Lions with two hits.

Then, in the fifth, the Bankers took the lead for good, scoring three more times. Dwayne Williams singled and Nelson Galloway tripled him in. Mike Thompson reached on an error, scoring Galloway and Mario Davis singled. Walks to David Allen and Josh Shepard forced in Thompson with the seventh FSB run.

The Bankers then added one more in the sixth.

Demetrice Williams led the Banker hitting with two, while Malcom Wilson had three and Billy Turcotte had two for Shop-Eze.

Jacobsen In Colonial Lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Fit and sassy Peter Jacobsen has staked an early but impressive claim on the $500,000 Colonial National Invitation golf title.

"There's nothing better to boost your morale than starting birdie-birdie," said the personable sharpshooter, the leader entering today's second round of the prestigious NIT.

Jacobsen birdied the three opening holes Thursday, slashed six strokes from par and rode a sparkling 64 to a two-shot lead over a quartet of touring veterans that included Tom Watson.

"There's no reason why I can't do it again (today)," dead-panned Jacobsen, whose first, last and only tour victory was at the 1980 Buick-Goodwrench Open. Pausing only a moment, he added with a grin:

"There's no reason why I can't shoot a 63."

Stumbling but once, a bogey at the treacherous fifth hole that embraces the Trinity River, Jacobsen dropped birdie putts of 8, 1, 20, 20, 40, 2 and 20 feet and barely missed a 12-footer at the 18th that would have tied the course record.

"I felt great out there," he said, recalling that back problems forced him to withdraw at Houston three weeks ago and sent him home to confer with his doctor.

"He told me I wasn't 22 anymore," he said. "The older you get, the more attention you have to pay to your body."

Jacobsen said he started exercising, changed his eating habits and began losing weight.

Doug Smith To Lose Poundage

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers can offer a big reason that the team's poor pass rush of 1983 will be improved this season — 6-4, 299-pound Doug Smith, the team's second round draft choice in the National Football League draft.

Smith was projected as a first-round draft choice but some teams were scared away when his weight ballooned to 305 pounds. The Oilers discovered, however, that Smith always gains weight in the off-season and loses it before the season starts.

"Since the Oilers drafted me, I've been hearing cracks about my weight," the second-round draft choice from Auburn said. "I'm not too thrilled about it myself but I'm going to lose it."

The Oilers chose the North Carolina native in the second round, making him the 29th player chosen overall. He is being counted on to bolster the Oilers weak rush, that provided only 31 quarterback sacks last season.

The Oiler defense yielded 460 points and ranked last in the NFL against the rush.

"Nobody's ever made this big a deal about my weight," Smith said during the Oilers' mini-camp. "I play at 285, and when the season's over, I gain weight. Then I lose it. Once I start playing, my weight never gets over 285 during the season."

Smith guarantees his summer weight will all be gone by the time the Oilers report for pre-season drills.

"Since everybody's made such a big deal out of my weight, I told the coaches they were going to be surprised when I came in for the mini-camp," Smith said. "I worked real hard the past couple of weeks. Last week, I was down to 295, but then I pulled a hamstring and couldn't run."

Smith hopes to make an immediate impact on the Oiler starting lineup.

"I'm here to make a contribution," Smith said. "I'm coming in hoping to start, but I also see the other players, and I don't think I'm better than they are. What I mean is, there are a lot of good linemen here. If I don't start, it won't be because I'm not giving my best."

Smith, who is being pursued by Birmingham of the United States Football League, has not signed an Oiler contract.

"I had a chance to sign with the USFL, but since I've always wanted to play in the NFL, I decided to wait for the draft," Smith said. "A lot of people didn't want me to wait. Some of my friends went ahead and signed with the USFL teams. I'm glad I waited, though."

Sullivan Proves Strategy Pays Off

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Sullivan's efforts to get into the Indianapolis 500 offer ample evidence that strategy often plays as important a role in automobile racing as speed.

The 34-year-old driver from Louisville, Ky., already has qualified for the May 27 race, but his DSR race car is the slowest among the 28 in the tentative lineup and would be the first bumped from the field once the final five spots are filled this weekend.

So the decision was made to withdraw the earlier entry, which qualified at just over 196 mph, and try to earn a starting spot in the much superior Lola, which is identical to the car Mario Andretti has driven in practice at more than 212 mph.

"We ordered this car but we couldn't get it in time for last week's qualifications," Sullivan said along pit road during a break in Thursday's practice. "But we had nothing to lose by qualifying the other one."

"What if it rains all day Saturday and Sunday? At least we've got a car in the show."

Bad weather is the only thing likely to keep Sullivan from qualifying the Lola. No other car among those driven by non-qualifiers has gone faster, and by the start of today's practice session, Sullivan had his Cosworth-powered race car up to 206.801 mph.

Thursday's practice, which also saw two more drivers reach 200 mph for the first time, was marred by a third-turn crash that sent already-qualified Jacques Villeneuve to the hospital with a concussion. Villeneuve was listed in satisfactory condition.

Under U.S. Auto Club rules, it's the car that qualifies for the race, not the driver. So the already-qualified DSR would have to be withdrawn before Sullivan could try to qualify the Lola, and Villeneuve's March would have to start at the rear of the field should another driver be assigned to the car in his place.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Sullivan said of his first practice laps in the Lola a day after the Sherson Racing team finished putting the new car together. "I thought it would be a good car, but I didn't know how long it was going to take. I hadn't run 200 before, so I didn't know how it would feel to me."

"Right now, it's a lot easier to drive (at 206) than the other car at 196," he said.

Sullivan said team owner Doug Shierson first realized the DSR wouldn't be good enough a day after the track opened for practice. It was at that time he first considered buying a Lola from the Newman-Haas team, for which Andretti drives.

"He saw the writing on the wall," Sullivan said of Shierson. "He saw it (the DSR) wasn't up to speed and he had doubts it could get up to speed. With Domino's Pizza (his sponsor) putting up the money, he couldn't take the chance of not making the show, so he started negotiating with Haas."

Teammate Johnny Rutherford, a three-time Indy winner, also was unable to get up to speed in another DSR and left to drive one of A.J. Foyt's backup Marches.

While the new Lola has performed up to Sullivan's expectations, he's not looking to duplicate Andretti's speed — especially since he knows he'll be starting toward the rear of the pack regardless of his qualification average.

"Everybody's kind of relaxed now, taking it easy. We're still a little ways away, we still have a lot of little detail things to do."

Sullivan, one of "the crazies in the infield" for his first Indy 500 as a spectator in 1968, started racing

Formula Fords in England four years later. He stayed in road racing for 10 years before passing his rookie test at Indianapolis in 1982. He qualified 13th here that year, but finished 14th after crashing on the 149th lap.

He did not compete on the Indy-car circuit last year, instead driving for the Tyrrell team in the Formula One series.

A good qualification run, coupled with the bumping of a few other slow cars this weekend, could move Sullivan up in the lineup, but he's more concerned with finding a comfortable speed to race at.

"We're running around 209-210 now on the straightaways, and we're not trying to race. The other car never got over 200 (on the straightaways). I think we can run safely around 203-204 lap after lap. But we're not trying to set up the car for a track record, because if we go out and screw up and hang it up on the wall, we won't have any car in the race."

Just ahead of Sullivan in the tentative lineup is second-year driver Chris Kneifel at 199.831, a speed that also is not likely to stand up. Twelve other drivers not yet qualified have practiced above 200, while two more are nudging that mark at around 199.

Celtics Crush Bucks, Delay Victory Claim

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics own the tools, but there's no way they'll talk about burying the Milwaukee Bucks — not yet, anyway.

Milwaukee's big Bob Lanier mentioned quicksand, but the Celtics outwardly ignored the remark.

With a 2-0 lead over the Bucks after a 125-110 rout Thursday night, the Celtics are not about to repeat a near-fatal mistake.

A couple of weeks ago Kevin McHale, the National Basketball Association's Sixth Man Award winner, remarked that the Celtics had the New York Knicks in the grave after two easy victories in Boston Garden.

The remark came back to haunt the mighty Celtics. The upstart Knicks extended Boston to the limit before bowing out in seven games.

Now, eyeing an unprecedented 15th NBA championship, the Celtics are wary of a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series for the Eastern Conference title. Games 3 and 4 are in Milwaukee Saturday afternoon and Monday night.

"I think everybody realizes that we can't go into Milwaukee and let Kevin or anybody say a few words," veteran guard Dennis Johnson said after his finest playoff game of the spring. "We're not in a situation where we want to give anybody any extra incentive. Let's just go out there and play."

Asked what he thought about the series, Johnson said:

"I think it's going to be a dogfight. I hope we can get the first one in Milwaukee."

"The Bucks are a good team. They'll come back. We just have to keep the pressure on them."

"We know we still have a long way to go," McHale said. "We'll have two tough games in Milwaukee before their home crowd. The Mecca is going to be rocking."

"I'm sure they'll be fired up," said veteran center Robert Parish. "They were kind of flat out there tonight, but when they get on their home court, they'll be relaxed, fired up, and we should see a better club."

Still smarting from the humiliation of a four-game sweep by the Bucks in the conference semifinal last year, the Celtics probably would like nothing better than return that "favor" in Milwaukee.

However, even though they had a 62-20 regular season record, best in the NBA, and were 5-1 against Milwaukee, the Celtics have their work cut out. In the playoffs, they're 8-0 at home, 1-4 on the road.

Since winning their first two games against the Washington Bullets in a battle of tight defenses, the Celtics have won their last six home games by 18, 14, 22, 17, 23 and 15 points.

In all six, they've jumped out to big leads and breezed, including a 118-96 rout of Milwaukee in their series opener Tuesday night.

"It's frustrating," Lanier said. "We're not shooting the ball well, we're playing hard, but we're sticking ourselves in a hole, sort of like being in quicksand."

"We're on the short end now, 0-2 going home. We're going to have to play opportunity ball and hustle. They're taking control in the first five minutes, setting the tempo. We've got to stop that."

"We have to go home and hope we shoot better," said guard Mike Dunleavy. "We're 0-2 and we've played horrible. We have to go home and play up to our capability."

Larry Bird scored 32 points, Johnson 26 and McHale 24 as the Celtics charged to a 19-point halftime lead and never let the Bucks get closer than a dozen points the rest of the way.

"We went into this game with the same intensity we had in the last game," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "The team really wanted to win this one. It was a very important game for us to win, so that they wouldn't get the momentum going back home."

"They are a very good team, solid everywhere," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "It's very tough to have to play a team like that coming from behind. We're not a high-scoring team. Tonight we got our shots. They just didn't go in. I assume those shots will start going down for us."

"It's important to start strong in any game, but especially in the playoffs. We haven't done that yet. You don't make comebacks all the way. You have to do it gradually. When you play from behind you have to exert a lot of energy to get back into the ball game."

Orioles Release Veteran Palmer

BALTIMORE (AP) — It was time to reminisce about Jim Palmer, but Elrod Hendricks objected to those speaking in the past tense.

"You make it sound like the guy is dead," Hendricks said when he was asked to describe Palmer, the pitcher, and Palmer, the man.

As far as the Baltimore Orioles were concerned, however, Palmer was indeed about to pass from the scene ... released by the club he first joined in 1965.

At his own request, rather than retire or be traded, Palmer was released and will be free to sign with another club should he decide to continue his career.

"I still think I can pitch, I have a desire to do that," Palmer said Thursday at an emotionally charged news conference that ended after just one question from the scores of media members present.

The 38-year-old Palmer, choking back the tears, had enough after breaking up four times in about two minutes, and he bolted from Memorial Stadium.

Palmer, the winner of 268 games and three Cy Young Awards, has said he wants to pitch regularly. But that is something the Orioles could no longer accommodate since Palmer lost his spot in the rotation following one of his numerous injuries.

But Palmer does not need baseball to make a living. Handsome and articulate, he already has a lucrative career as a media underwear salesman and his work as a television color man has drawn rave reviews.

And, should he decide to hang up his playing gear, Palmer can rejoin the Orioles in a capacity yet to be determined. The club made the job offer during recent talks, but Palmer opted for his release.

Even after being released, Palmer will receive full pay for his 1984 contract, believed to be worth about $600,000.

Palmer, reached at home after his emotions eased, contended he didn't mind his role as a fifth starter with the Orioles and felt that at some point during the season, "I would have been able to help the club."

A poor start by Baltimore's starting pitchers, compounded by Detroit's fast start in the AL East, he said, "changed my role and the roles of all the other pitchers."

Palmer made three starts and two relief appearances, with a 9.17 earned run average and an 0-3 record, on top of a 1983 season in which he pitched only 79 2/3 innings.

THE BITTER WATERS OF MARAH!

WITH THE ISRAELITES' WRATH, EXPRESSED IN EXPLOSIVE WORDS OVER THEIR DISAPPOINTMENT AT NOT BEING ABLE TO DRINK THE WATER, MOSES TURNED TO THE LORD — "...AND THE LORD SHOWED HIM A TREE, WHICH WHEN HE HAD CAST INTO THE WATERS..." (EX. 15:25)...

WHILE ALL THE PEOPLE WATCH SILENTLY, THE TREE IS POISED ABOVE THE WATERS...

...AND, WITH A MIGHTY SPLASH, IT IS IMMERSSED IN THE WATERS OF MARAH—BUT NOT A SOUND IS HEARD FROM THE PEOPLE AS THEY WATCH....

Study Says Books Distort Religious Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — History textbooks used in public schools "neglect, deny and distort" the role of religion in America's past, says the report of a study by Learn Inc., a private foundation stressing traditional teaching methods.

 It says an examination of 20 different textbooks used in suburban Maryland's Montgomery County found that the only extensive discussion of religious influences had to do with the colonial role of New England Puritans, with most references to them negative and superficial.
 Religious influences since then get little or no attention, the report says, adding that although the country was settled by people seeking religious freedom, "religion is taken to be negligible in American history."

The report says few texts deal with Quakerism in Pennsylvania while only one goes beyond barely mentioning Roman Catholicism in Spain's American possessions, and none discuss the role Anglicans played in the middle and southern English colonies.

Group Agrees On 'Motherly Father'

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — A Church of Scotland study group has been unable to agree on whether God can legitimately be addressed as "mother," but the group recognized "motherly elements" in the fatherhood of God.

The group, whose report goes before the church's General Assembly next week, also assailed as "quite erroneous" the assumption that the God whom Jesus addressed as father is male.

Suggesting that "motherly father" might help overcome the authoritarian, masculine caricatures, the report says Jesus himself on occasions used female and maternal metaphors as the best way to convey the love of God.

First Woman

OTTAWA (AP) — Jeanne Sauve, a former journalist and Cabinet member, has become the first woman to serve as Canada's governor general.

The governor general is appointed by the British monarch on the advice of the Canadian prime minister.
 "Peace should be our rallying cry, our foremost cause and the most compelling objective of our common action," Mrs. Sauve said after taking the oath of office Monday in the Senate chamber.

Mrs. Sauve succeeds Edward Schreyer, whose five-year term expired last January and who was named ambassador to Australia.

Mrs. Sauve was elected to the House of Commons from a Montreal district in 1972 as a candidate of the Liberal Party.

Paper Suggests Catholic Study

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The National Catholic Reporter says Pope John Paul II should appoint an interfaith commission to examine the Roman Catholic role in regard to the Nazi "holocaust, its origins and aftermath."

The independent weekly, citing a painstaking study of Jewish organizational failures during that period and recent evidence of possible Catholic involvement in postwar escapes of Nazi war criminals, says in an editorial:

"It is time to unequivocally analyze the successes and failures of rescue attempts and to delineate the possible complicity of some Catholics in the dreadful events of those years."

Coalition

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — The president of the Rabbinical Assembly, representing Conservative Judaism, has urged rabbis to take the lead in a new black-Jewish coalition to combat problems facing the nation.

Rabbi Arnold Goodman told the organization's annual meeting that Jews and blacks worked closely together in the civil rights struggles of the 1960's and despite recent differences, the two groups' "historical ties ... must be strengthened" to work for "the full potential of democracy."

Rockies Bracing For More Runoff

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

Temperatures began climbing in the Rockies today, renewing the danger from a record snowmelt runoff, and the toll from a week of flooding and mudslides rose to five people dead or missing when the body of an Idaho man was found in a partially submerged car.

Tiny mountain mining towns and plush resorts threatened by overflowing rivers and traveling walls of mud took advantage of a brief cooling spell Thursday to dig out, clear out or build new sandbag barriers.

In the East, temperatures dipped to record lows for the date at several cities, with readings near the freezing mark across much of New England. Temperatures across the rest of the Eastern Seaboard were mostly in the 40s.

Record lows were set at Atlantic City, N.J., 39 degrees; Hartford, Conn., 31; Columbia, S.C., 41; Jacksonville, Fla., 48; and Savannah, Ga., 49.

In south Texas, where Brownsville had gone 55 days without measurable rainfall, much-needed rain has fallen over the last three days. The city has received more than 6 1/2 inches of rain in the last three days, and more than 2 1/2 inches fell in a six-hour period early today.

The Air National Guard on Thursday flew thousands of sandbags to several Wyoming towns bracing for the next round of floodwaters while the tiny town of Baggs remained under waist-deep water.

In the ritzy Colorado resort towns of Vail and Beaver Creek, some residents were told Thursday to leave their expensive homes because of impending mudslides.

Mountain areas had baked under 90-degree heat that sent floodwaters surging through valley towns and mudslides cascading into dozens of homes, but the mercury fell to the 60s Thursday. The relief, however, was temporary.

"The spring thaw will come no matter how gradually," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "I doubt any kind of season — unless we had another winter — would avoid flooding."

He predicted temperatures in the 70s today and in the 80s by early next week.

"Even if the temperatures stay in the normal range, it would still be bad because of the record snowpack," Duke said today. "They will have a very severe river situation for weeks to come."

Bill Alder of the National Weather Service in Salt Lake City said that only 20 percent to 30 percent of the 13-foot deep snowpack had melted in the higher elevations.

"If we were going to stay in the mid-80s or a little higher into midweek, we're going to begin having widespread flooding problems again," Alder said.

In Nevada, a 69-year-old Idaho man was found dead Thursday in his partially submerged car, officials said. Five people in three states are dead or missing since Saturday as a result of the sea of water and mud.

In Cassia County, Idaho, where temperatures are expected to hit 80 degrees over the weekend, laborers worked Thursday to finish a channel to keep the Oakley Reservoir from overflowing.

Officials have posted a 24-hour watch on the reservoir, and residents have been advised to be prepared to move fast if necessary.

In Wyoming, 400 residents of Baggs, the town flooded out when a dam broke Wednesday, were told Thursday they should not plan on returning home any time soon.

"We've still got a lot of snowpack to come yet," said Don Nelson, emergency coordinator in Baggs. Another 200 people also remained evacuated from two nearby villages.

Ten thousand sandbags were airlifted Thursday to Saratoga, near Baggs, because of the rising North Platte River.

Thousands of sandbags were also flown to Sheridan, where rivers and streams were just beginning to feel the effect of a late April blizzard that dumped nearly 5 feet of snow in the Big Horn Mountains, said Bordon Greene of the state Disaster and Civil Defense Division.

Oak Creek, a mining town of 900 people in north-central Colorado, remained without water Thursday due to flooding.

Town Trustee Jean Davidson said that unless services are restored by Saturday's high school graduation they could have "girls in their formals using the porta-potties."

Tracks on the Denver & Rio Grande-Western train line between Oak Creek and Steamboat Springs, closed twice this week by mudslides, were reopened Thursday, officials said.

Residents of Vail and Beaver Creek were still digging out Thursday from slides earlier in the week that damaged 15 homes. People were told to leave homes on Vail's Bald Mountain Road due to the mud threat.

"They are high-risk areas right now," said Vail spokesman Jim Overcash. Seven families evacuated Wednesday from Emigration Canyon east of Salt Lake City returned home Thursday, but officials planned to install electronic monitoring devices to keep an eye on a wall of mud overlooking their houses.

Six families in East Layton, Utah, were allowed Thursday to begin cleanup work from a massive mudslide Monday.

Workers hoped to reopen a section of track today in Spanish Fork Canyon in central Utah closed Wednesday by a slide that cut Denver & Rio Grande service to Salt Lake City.

 Opening lead: Four of ♣.

It is unsound fiscal policy to put your money in a bank which might fold at any minute. We can make that statement even though we know of a number of players who do not seem to subscribe to that point of view—the West of today's hand was one such player.

North's Stayman inquiry of two clubs is the accepted way to start an invitational sequence while at the same time probing for a major-suit fit. With a near maximum, South was justified in continuing to three no trump. As the cards lie four hearts is an easy contract, but there is no reasonable way to get to that spot.

East played the king of clubs on the first trick and, when declarer ducked, he continued with the ten. This, too, declarer allowed to hold, so East led his last club and declarer won perforce.

Since the clubs were now established for the defenders, declarer had to hope that the player with the long clubs did not have the ace of spades. He ran his heart tricks and then led the ten of spades. When East turned up with the ace, declarer scored an overtrick.

West had erred grievously. When East returned the ten of clubs at trick two and declarer followed with the nine, West could see that there was no point to setting up club tricks since there was no entry to his hand to cash them.

If the contract was to be defeated some other source of tricks had to be found. Obviously the only suit that offered any hope was diamonds. Therefore, West should have overtaken the ten of clubs with the jack to shift to the ten of diamonds. That would establish two tricks in that suit for the defenders, in addition to the two club tricks already in the bag and the ace of spades yet to come.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers.
