Walk-In Units A Possibility

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Walk-in urgent medical centers have opened in a number of North Carolina cities and Greenville may have one or more within the near future.

One firm which now operates in Atlantic Beach has been advertising "coming soon" in this newspaper recently and Pitt County Memorial Hospital's board of trustees approved May 15 the involvement of the hospital's subsidiary agency, East Carolina Health Services Inc., in the delivery of a competing service. The ECHS's governing board is to meet Wednesday to decide if the plan will be pursued.

Urgent care centers serve the medical care consumer who wants immediate attention to a particular health problem. There is no waiting for an appointment and no followup unless he or she chooses it. Episodic illness like sore throats and colds are treated, as are non-traumatic injuries like cut fingers.

Fred Brown, hospital vice president, says frankly it is the hospital's intention to head off competition to the already-established medical services being rendered here through PCMH's emergency department, through East Carolina University School of Medicine clinics and in local medical practices. The hospital may be too late to head off other urgent care centers. However, Brown said he believes the hospital will go through with its plan regardless of how many privately-operated urgent care centers open here. Med Center I apparently has its plans well underway and a local realtor says he has been approached by three different firms about leasing space for similar operations. He refused to provide names.

The Atlantic Beach Center is located on the causeway in a highly traveled area. Raleigh's Doctors Urgent Care Center is situated on busy Wake Forest Road. Easy access is a selling point, Brown said.

"Our studies show," he said, "that the Greenville area has enough medical care. However, they also show that we could render this kind of care at costs similar to those of the private groups and with lesser prices to the consumer because we wouldn't have to have the margin of profit that the entrepreneur does."

The hospital-related center and the private center both would have a physician medical director and presumably some doctors who see patients and some physician extenders like family nurse practitioners and physician's assistants. Fees would presumably be comparable to those charged by local family physicians, less than those of the hospital emergency departments. The Doctors Urgent Care office visit fee is $28 in Raleigh; $25 in Fayetteville.

Hours of the Atlantic Beach Med Center I are now 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. After Memorial Day they will be 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Convenience for the consumer is a selling point, a spokesman for a Raleigh center indicated.

Pitt Memorial is not the first hospital in North Carolina to establish an urgent care center to meet competition. Charlotte has two, while Wilmington and Gastonia each has one, all run by hospitals.

Brown said the hospital's study showed that the hospital-run center could expect 9,000 to 11,000 visits a year.

Pitt Elections Official Says Less Than Half Of Registration Voted

More than 3,400 new voters — added to the books between Feb. 2 and the April 9 deadline — were eligible to vote in the May 8 primary election in Pitt County.

But, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, only 47 percent, or 18,971 of the 40,254 registered voters in the county participated in the election.

Mrs. Hardee said that as of Feb. 2, the registration deadline for the Bell Arthur fire department fire district tax election, there were 36,806 voters registered in the county, including 29,874 Democrats and 5,730 registered Republicans.

At the April 9 deadline for registering for the May primary, the total registration had climbed to 40,254, including 32,687 Democrats and 6,309 Republicans.

About "two thirds of them (the new voters) came from outside ... from the special registration commissioners (SRCs) and the Department of Motor Vehicles (drivers license examiners)," Mrs. Hardee explained. "One turned in over 400."

The special registration commissioners, provided for by the General Assembly last year, were appointed by the board of elections in August 1983.

Receiving no pay, "some are good ... really sharp," Mrs Hardee said. But "some are not," she suggested.

The SRCs, Mrs. Hardee suggested, "create more work for us. We have to run the people (they register) down ... call, write ... get them to come in" to check the information. We have to check for duplications ... the proper precinct ... everything else.

"It's more time consuming than if we'd done it (registered the voters) here."

Pitt now has 122 at large SRCs nominated for the posts by the Democrat and Republican parties in the county.

Other SRCs include nine people designated to register voters at town halls or other municipal facilities in Ayden, Bethel, Falkland, Farmville, Fountain, Grifton, Grimesland and Winterville, as well as five employees allowed to register voters at Sheppard Memorial Library, the East End and Carver branch libraries in Greenville, and on the library's bookmobile which travels throughout the county.

"The number is not limited. Some counties have 300 or 400," although the Pitt board has chosen not to add to the list," Mrs. Hardee said.

"They increase registration," but "it triples the work in this office. We have to check ... we have that responsibility," Mrs. Hardee said. "An application (for voter status) does not become a registration before it is approved by the board of elections."

Happy Reunion For Half-Sisters

By JANE WELBORN
*Reflector Staff Writer

The family gathered at the Pitt-Greenville Airport to say goodbye to the woman boarding the plane looked like any other group saying "Bon Voyage."

But the two local women, Lois Ann Bailey of Greenville and Connie Bond of Bethel, had just a few days before met the woman to whom they were now saying goodbye — their half-sister Pollyanna Pearce.

Polly, now 21 years old and a computer operator at NASA in Houston, Texas, did not know until recently that she had two half-sisters and two half-brothers, James Pearce and Wayne Pearce, both of Greenville. In fact, she began communicating with her father and the father of her half-siblings only six years ago.

Polly's father Robert Pearce, a resident of Bremerhaven, West Germany, is retired from the Army. He and Polly's mother were divorced and Polly was placed in a foster home when she was 1 year old. Pearce was previously divorced from his first wife.

Pearce came to Greenville from West Germany to be a part of the family "reunion" that took place last weekend. For the first time, the five children were together.

SENATE CANDIDATE — Thomas F. (Tom) Taft, a Greenville attorney, filed Friday as a candidate for Democratic nomination for State Senate, District 9. Taft had filed previously as a Senate candidate but refiled for a special primary to be held July 17 because of redistricting.

Costabile Seeking 6th District Post

Dr. John Costabile of Wilson, a former member of the Wilson County Board of Commissioners, filed Friday as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the 6th District seat in the state Senate.

The primary election for the new district, which includes portions of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe and Wilson counties, will be July 17.

"This state is at a critical turning point where decisions must be made about the allocation of scarce resources for needed programs," Costabile said.

"With active leadership and vision for the future, our legislators can take responsible action that will result in the betterment of our schools, our highways, our economy and the stability of our farms."

A practicing optometrist with offices in Wilson and Tarboro, Costabile is a member of the Wilson-Greene Mental Health Board and a member of the N.C. Highway Improvement Association. He is a former member of the board of trustees of Wilson County Technical Institute and former chairman of the Wilson Industrial Council.

Costabile, named by the American Optometric Association as National Optometrist of the Year in 1975, is a former member of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, the N.C. Task Force on Health Manpower and the Citizens Committee to Study the Legislature.

Attacks Continue In Persian Gulf; Freighter New Target

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A steel-laden freighter hit by an Iraqi missile sank Saturday in the Persian Gulf, shipping sources said. It was the latest in a string of attacks by Iran or Iraq that have threatened gulf oil shipping.

The 17,000-ton freighter Fidelity, of Panamanian registry, was near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, headed toward the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini with a load of Spanish steel, when it was attacked Friday.

Shipping sources said 230,000-ton Spanish oil tanker Barcelona escaped an attack at the same time the Fidelity sustained a direct hit.

"The Spanish tanker Barcelona was not hurt, but the Fidelity sank ... A mayday call was received from its captain to that effect," said a Bahrain-based executive of a European ship salvage company. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

At least 19 other vessels, including several huge oil tankers, have been attacked in the gulf region since February. Five of the eight ships attacked since April 25 were tankers registered in Kuwait or Saudi Arabia. Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Shipping sources at Dubai, the United Arab Emirates, said 24 crewmen of the Fidelity were rescued by other ships or Iranian helicopters while nine escaped in life rafts. There was no word on any casualties. Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence of London said it was uncertain how many crewmen the ship had.

On Friday, the Iraqi military said its warplanes hit two "big" naval targets near Iran's main Kharg Island oil termial. On Saturday, the Iraqi state radio in Baghdad quoted unidentified shipping sources as "admitting that one of the two naval targets which were successfully hit by Iraqi planes yesterday has sunk near the Iranian oil terminal in Kharg Island."

The two targets were identified by shipping sources as the Fidelity and the Barcelona. Sources said the Fidelity sank southwest of Kharg.

Officials of the Arab War Risk Insurance Fund, a conglomorate of 28 gulf insurance companies, met in Doha, Qatar, to overhaul insurance guidelines because of a wave of recent attacks on tankers and freighters in the oil-rich region.

Executives of the fund, speaking on condition they not be identified, said its Arab underwriters were considering declaring Persian Gulf sea lanes north of the Strait of Hormuz a war zone.

In Tunis, Tunisia, foreign ministers of the 21-nation Arab League met in emergency session and discussed Iranian attacks on Arab shipping in the gulf.

The meeting originally was slated to discuss tension between Libya and Tunisia, but Kuwait called for immediate pan-Arab action to deter Iran.

Although the gulf nations have remained officially neutral, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are major supporters of Iraq in the war.

Iraq is a member of the league. Iran — a Persian, not an Arab nation — is not.

Syria and Libya, the only Arab League members supporting Iran, blocked a move by the Arab League ministers at Tunis to denounce Iran for bombing Arab shipping in the gulf and refusing to talk with Iraq on ending the war. The Arab League ministers follow a rule of unanimity, and the Syrian and Libyan opposition served as a veto.

Arab League sources in the Tunisian capital said the ministers agreed to convene a sumit meeting of Arab leaders in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, in November with the gulf war probably heading the agenda. They said another foreign ministers' meeting would precede the summit conference.

Saudi diplomatic sources said Saudi and Kuwaiti officials were seeking agreement from other Arab foreign ministers jointly to petition the United States, Western European nations and Japan to put pressure on Iran to halt its attacks.

Kuwait has blamed Iran for attacks on Kuwaiti tankers May 13 and May 14. A Saudi tanker was hit May 16, and the State Department, which has access to intelligence from AWACS aircraft, said there was good evidence Iran was responsible. The three attacks occurred in neutral waters away from the war zone, and were seen as retaliation for Iraqi attacks on tankers near Kharg.

"Iranian aggression is a serious menace to the overall strategy of gulf national security, which is an inseparable part of the broader Arab security," Bahrain's foreign minister, Mohamed bin Mubarak, told reporters before flying to Tunis.

He said, however, that the Arab League should work to avoid intervention by nations from outside the region. "Security of the gulf is a pan-Arab responsibility, after all," he said.

The United States has offered to provide air cover to vessels of gulf Arab nations.

Iran has threatened to close the Hormuz strait — the gulf's only access to the open sea — if its oil facilities are attacked. The United States repeatedly has vowed to keep the strait open.

About 20 percent of the non-communist world's oil moves through the strait, including about 60 percent of Japan's oil imports.

Storms Continue To Lash Nation

By The Associated Press

Powerful thunderstorms dumping up to 5 inches of rain rumbled across eastern Nebraska on Saturday, while a flash flood warning was posted for southeast Texas.

Cooler weather in the Rockies eased the threat of flooding from a near-record snowpack in Utah and Colorado.

In Alaska, the rising waters of the Yukon River prompted Air Force officials to evacuate personnel and planes from Galena, a village 350 miles northwest of Anchorage, on Saturday. Galena houses the nearest U.S. base to the Soviet Union. An ice jam was blamed for pushing the Yukon two feet above flood stage.

The Nebraska storms dropped 5.05 inches of rain on Tecumseh in the 24 hours ending at noon Saturday, the National Weather Service said, while Lincoln recorded 3.68 inches. An estimated 4½ inches fell on Aida and 4 inches on Juniata, both in the Grand Island area, and more than 2 inches on Beatrice.

The weather service reported flooding of some lowland areas and roadways in southeast Nebraska. The Nebraska State Patrol said no highways were closed because of flooding.

Slow-moving thunderstorms in southeast Texas were expected to dump 3 to 5 inches of rain, prompting the weather service to issue a flash flood watch.

The Snake River continued to rise along the Oregon-Idaho border, and Oregon officials closed Ontario State Park near Interstate 84 as the river covered a boat ramp. Some businesses in Ontario reported flooded basements.

Work crews in Oakley, a critical flood point in south-central Idaho, completed a second flood diversion channel to relieve pressure on the reservoir behind Oakley Dam. The reservoir rose to within two feet of the spillway Friday, but began falling Saturday.

The newest 23-mile channel, coupled with a smaller channel completed earlier this month and an irrigation canal, should be able to siphon enough water from the rapidly filling reservoir to avoid uncontrollable flooding, Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Billy Crystal said.

Earlier, officials had feared the reservoir would spill over the dam onto a score of homes below.

Mudslides have killed two people this year in Utah and damaged scores of structures.

sister," Mrs. Bond said. "She's part of the family and I hope we'll be able to do more things together in the future.

"Polly has come a long way and we are very proud of her being independent," she added.

Ms. Bailey, who works at Greenville Villa, said she was thrilled to meet her half-sister. "It's a strange feeling, I tell you," she said. "All these years I've been saying I have one sister and I really have two."

Polly said she did not know that she had two half-sisters and two half-brothers and that she was "pretty happy" about meeting them. "I always wanted brothers and sisters," she related. "But I have to remember more birthdays now."

As Polly prepared to board the airplane, Mrs. Bond said, "Maybe some day Dad will be back in the States and we can all be together."

Then she added, "I hate to see Polly go, but this time she won't be gone so long."

State Officials Glad Labor Conflict Over

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Some state officials think Georgia will attract even more Japanese investors now that 700 workers at a zipper plant in Macon have rejected traditional American labor organization for a Japanese corporate philosophy called "The Cycle of Goodness."

The workers, in a recent decertification election, tossed out the American union that had represented them in labor negotiations with YKK USA for five years and adopted the Japanese company's philosophy, which encourages them to work for the good of the corporation rather than personal enrichment.

Officials with the worldwide zipper manufacturer YKK are celebrating the copmpany's 50th anniversary, as well as the apparent end to their fight with American organized labor. A contingent of Georgia leaders, including Gov. Joe Frank Harris and former Govs. George Busbee and Jimmy Carter, left Saturday for Japan to join in the company's anniversary celebration.

YKK officials are not the only ones who are relieved that the tense labor situation is over.

Jack Welsh, assistant commissioner of the Georgia Department of Industry and Trade, said the state, already the site of 130 Japanese offices, will be more attractive to other Japanese firms now.

"An awful lot of Japanese firms who come here go down and talk to YKK because of the size of its operations," said Welsh. "And I'm sure the subject of labor unions has come up. Especially among firms who are thinking about coming to this country for the first time, there is a fear of the unknown. Now they can see that YKK had a difficult situation and handled it. I'm sure that the situation will be more beneficial now."

George Lancaster, an international representative with the Department of Industry and Trade, said unionization "is the number one fear of Japanese companies coming over here. Japan has unions, but they are company unions. Each company has its own union.

"The Japanese are afraid of American unions because employees are often more loyal to the union than the company. That's really scary to many Japanese managers," Lancaster said.

But Busbee, the former governor now in private law practice in Atlanta, said he disagreed that the labor situation at YKK has hampered the state's recruitment of Japanese companies.

Pearl Harbor Group Plans Spring Reunion

Gurganus noted that a substantial number of survivors of the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor live in Greenville, Pitt County and adjacent areas. In addition to Gurganus, this local group includes Kenneth Dews, Raymond Webb, Will Cherry, J. C. Moore, W. G. Maye, Gentry Porter, George Boyd, Blondy Scott, Harry Mizzelle, and Joseph Tripp.

"We know there are other Pearl Harbor survivors living in Elizabeth City, Ahoskie, and Kinston, who have not been heard from in years, a few not since being discharged from service 40 years ago," Gurganus said. "We hope they will get the word and join us in this reunion."

The local Pearl Harbor Survivors Club is Chapter No. 1 of the North Carolina association. Meetings are held four time yearly, in March, June, September and December at different towns throughout the state.

The Republican Corner

Pitt County's Conservative Voice

The Pitt County Republicans strongly endorse President Reagan's plans for the defense of Central America as presented in his television speech of May 9. We cannot understand the willingness of the majority of the Democrats in the House of Representatives to allow a small group of communists (armed and financed by the Soviet Union and Cuba) to overthrow these small countries. Moreover, we are appalled that our congressman, Walter B. Jones, voted against the President's aid bill to El Salvador a few days ago. Central America is not another Viet Nam! El Salvador, Guatamala, Costa Rica are our close American neighbors. Military equipment and economic aid should be sent to them as quickly as possible. If we cannot defend these small countries to the south of us, then we must inevitably ask ourselves the question: Can our armies defend the United States proper when the time comes? Or, will our country by the last big Viet Nam?

Here's the way it ought to be: Reagan, Helms, Martin, Lee.

Official Backs His Undersecretary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. says he supports his agency's No. 2 official, recently under fire for saying it is the "cultural preference" of many Hispanics to live in overcrowded housing.

"He is not a bigot," Pierce said Friday of HUD Undersecretary Philip Abrams. "He's a very good man. He has my support."

Pierce spoke about Abrams after he addressed the seventh annual convention of the Association of HUD Management Agents.

Meanwhile, Hispanic leaders called for for Abrams' resignation.

"Mr. Pierce is toying around with very bigoted and prejudicial people," said Arnold Torres, executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens. "It would be to Mr. Pierce's advantage to disavow them."

The Washington Post quoted Abrams as saying that Hispanics "don't mind, and they prefer, some prefer, doubling up" in overcrowded housing.

On overcrowded conditions, Abrams was also quoted as saying, "It's a cultural preference, I'm told."

"He did not say that exactly," Pierce said. "He was really trying to explain why there was, in certain cities, a large amount of overcrowding.

"One of the things he (Abrams) pointed out was that there was a tendency to have extended families among Hispanics," Pierce said. "Where the overcrowding comes in, is really because people are poor."

Abrams, a former Boston developer, made the controversial remarks two weeks ago when he was asked why HUD has targeted communities with large Hispanic populations for a new housing grant construction program.

Abrams said he followed congressional direction to award the grants based, in part, on overcrowded housing, which favored such communities.

In a letter to Rep. Robert Garcia (D-N.Y.), chairman of the congressional Hispanic Caucus, Abrams apologized for his statement.

"I can control neither the inaccurate representation of my statements nor conclusions attributed to me by others," Abrams wrote. "If my own statements, however, have offended you and Hispanic Americans, I apologize."

City's Proposed Quick-Rich Plan Will Cost More

OK, elementary economics class, come to order. Please pay attention.

First, Greenville Utilities Commission is a business which is owned by the city. It purchases electricity and gas from wholesale suppliers and then resells the products to its customers at a retail rate. As the owner of Greenville Utilities the city government is entitled to some return on its investment, hence the tradition of an annual turnover of funds to the city. That represents profit from the operation. Term it as you will there has been a turnover of funds for many years and it has steadily, even spectacularly, grown.

The city government sees the need for additional funds and predictably it has turned to the Utilities with a plan which could cost the Utilities an additional $662,000 in 1984-85 and an additional $1.36 million in 1985-86.

The city is asking that turnover come from all utility funds — electric, water, sewer and gas — rather than just from electric and gas.

The city wants electricity sold to the city government at wholesale rates, and it wants Greenville Utilities to assume the full cost of the street lighting system. Finally the city wants, and got, an additional $500,000 in turnover in 1984-85.

All that might seem a masterful way for the city to solve its financial problems ... except for the laws of economics.

It is just a fact that if Greenville Utilities provides power to the city at wholesale rates, funishes street lights at no cost and ups the turnover the money is going to have to come from somewhere. Where? Why obviously from all the other customers. Residential customers in all parts of the city, business and industrial customers could expect to help pay for the city government's windfall, and that could mean higher utility rates.

Greenville Utilities has to maintain retail rates which are competitive with the private power companies that operate in this area. And it has to have reasonable reserves to maintain and expand its electric, gas, water and sewer systems.

Economic principles are often illustrated with a pie. Try as one might there are only so many slices there, and no matter how the city attempts to rationalize dipping deeper in the Utilities' financial operations it will not be done without shifting additional financial burdens to local customers.

Highway Projects Are Needed Here

Representatives of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce presented the area's highway needs to the N.C. Department of Transportation in New Bern Thursday.

There is nothing on the list that wasn't needed yesterday.

The representatives asked for a western loop to link sections of U.S. 264 from the area west of the hospital to N.C. 11 near the Burroughs Wellcome plant.

Also proposed was the five-laning of Evans Street from 10th to Greenville Boulevard, extending Arlington Boulevard from Memorial Drive to N.C. 43 northwest of the hospital; multilaning N. C. 33 east of the city to state Road 1726, windening N.C. 43 south of Pitt Plaza; five laning of 14th Street from Elm Street to State Road 1725.

These projects are greatly needed to handle the ever increasing traffic flow in Pitt County.

Somehow we must impress upon state officials that this is a rapidly growing area and new highway project are necessary simply to stay up with that growth.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Newspapers often receive letters from corporations concerning the use of their trademark product names. Understandably the corporations want to protect their trademarks and the letters serve to remind newspaper editors to use the terms properly.

Recently a term has crept into politics. The Teflon factor refers to President Reagan's apparent immunity to problems created by his aides.

The Wall Street Journal referred to the Teflon factor. Promptly came a letter from Du Pont Co. pointing out that the phrase was incomplete and constituted trademark misuse.

"So to be technically correct," Wall Street Journal said, "this political phenomenon should henceforth be described as the 'Teflon fluorocarbon resin factor'."

Political writing sure gets complicated.

And we received a phone call from a cool and collected public relations person in a far away office last week.

The voice began to explain that they wished to send us a piece written by the corporate president for possible use on our opinions page.

The voice suddenly broke off in mid-sentence.

"I'll call you back," the lady finally said breathlessly. "Someone has come into my office. They're disconnecting the telephone."

Makes you wonder what was going on.

Turns out we found out. The caller phoned back and explained that their building had had a bomb report and it was believed that the bomb was connected to the phone system. Hence the disconnection. Everything turned out all right and there was no bomb.

Remember the manual typewriter? It has gone the way of a lot of things.

The Wall Street Journal reports that only 10,000 office manuals will be s this year, compared 495,000 in 1966.

The manual typewri appears to be approachi extinction as it loses out electric and electron typewriters, and more cently computer printers.

There was a time wh columns such as this we written on manuals, b tered ones at that. No mo however. Now newspap writers prepare their wo on computer screens transmission to co puterized typesetti equipment.

Sometimes, though, wh we are alone and nostal ... we sure do miss th manual typewriters.

Abner On The Spot

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — It was just a couple of years ago, if memory serves, that I was commenting upon the mental condition that afflicts Abner Mikva. The gentleman is in fact a judge of the powerful U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Alas, he imagines he is still a member of Congress from the 10th District of Illinois.

Nothing else, I submit, could account for this liberal Democrat's passionate and partisan pronouncements from the bench. Given a chance to assail an action of the Reagan administration, Mikva is Abner-on-the-spot. His juices begin to flow, his temper rises, and all of a sudden he is back in the well of the House, whooping it up for Ralph Nader, Americans for Democratic Action and the wisdom of Jimmy Carter.

Two years ago Mikva was assigned to write the court's opinion in a case involving automobile airbags. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) had attempted to rescind a pending regulation that would have required the installation of passive restraint devices in all automobiles manufactured after Sept. 1, 1983. Mikva took the agency's action as a personal affront. By gad, he had voted in 1978 in favor of the airbag legislation. What he and Ralph Nader had put together, no Reaganite bureaucrats were going to put asunder.

The outraged jurist spit on his hands and delivered himself of a 76-page opinion holding that the NHTSA had acted improperly. Not just improperly. Judge Mikva found the recision capricious, illogical, inconsistent, contradictory, artificial, unjustified, unreasonable, misdirected, absurd' Orwellian and totally arbitrary. In brief, he didn't like it.

A couple of weeks ago, this unregenerate pol was back in the saddle again. It amounted to a kind of instant replay. This time the NHTSA had undertaken to suspend (in effect, to rescind) a regulation having to do with standards for automobile tires. The agency had struggled vainly for 14 years to come up with a defensible regulation on treadwear and tire grading. It had failed. Judge Mikva could not restrain himself.

"It is hard to imagine a more sorry performance of a congressional mandate than that carried out by NHTSA and its predecessors under Section 203 of the Act. Between inaction, foot-dragging and field reversal, the track record of agency performance is very muddy indeed."

The proposed suspension, said Mikva, was "arbitrary and capricious." It was unsupported by evidence. It was not reasonable behavior. "We cannot imagine a more complete flouting of the statutory scheme."

Well, some of us would be hard put to imagine a more complete flouting of the principles of judicial review. Those principles are not arcane or obscure. They hold that judges ought not to substitute their own personal prejudices for the findings and decisions of regulatory agencies — not without compelling reasons for setting aside an executive action. In this case, reverting to his old congressional role as protector of the consumer, Mikva tossed principles to the wind. He voted himself into office as Commissioner of Treadwear and ordered the suspension suspended. Ipse dixit! Old Ab had spoken.

I stand indifferent in the cause. The record suggests to me that the NHTSA did its durndest to come up with a testing program that pass muster. The tire manufac industry joined the effort. Tw longed lawsuits delayed the exe According to the agency, a h variables produced test da unreliable and misleading th data could not have suppor workable regulation that truly benefit consumers. Treadwe peared to depend upon such f as the time of day, the afternoo the weight of a "deer guard" a light or heavy foot of the test My own thought was that the professionals in charge of t tests abundantly documented reasons for calling the whole off.

A measurement of treadw tires is something less than a issue. By contrast, the doctr review by a temperate and im judiciary is of the utmost tance. Mikva is by natu ultraliberal partisan. He w home in the House where he off and on for 10 years. Come the Hill, Abner! And all forgiven.

A Covert Reminder

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — On the night of March 24, a group of peasants discovered the charred wreckage of a DC-3 aircraft on a hilltop in northern Costa Rica.

Within hours of the crash, about three dozen armed opponents of the Nicaraguan government arrived on the scene. They gathered some of the plane's cargo, mostly arms and parachutes, and set fire to the corpses as well as all documents. Among the victims were believed to have been four Americans, possibly CIA operatives dressed in camouflage fatigues.

In describing a subsequent effort to cover up the accident, Susan Morgan of the London Daily Observer offered new evidence of the CIA's involvement in the war against the Sandinistas. The plane was carrying arms to the Costa Rica-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance (ARDE), one of the groups fighting to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

But while American citizens were dying in Central America, few people back home knew their number or identities. Such is the nature of Ronald Reagan's escalating secret war against Nicaragua.

Under cloak of darkness and the direction of the CIA 20 years ago, American military personnel were dropped behind the lines of a country with whom the U.S. was not officially at war. These operatives, officially "advisers" that day, were on missions to seek out and murder men believed to be working against the interests of a U.S. ally. The place was North Vietnam.

Before Ronald Reagan entangles the United States in a Central American web spun by the CIA and the Pentagon, he'd do well to remember the problems Lyndon Johnson invited upon himself by not leveling with the American people.

Never question the military. That's what Navy Cmdr. Richard Banks has learned.

A naval fighter pilot for 12 years with 124 combat missions over Vietnam, Banks wrote the Senate Armed Services Committee last January complaining that his reserve squadron in California soon would not have aircraft with which to train. His statement contradicted assurances by Navy Secretary John Lehman that the squadron would.

Within two weeks of his communication to Congress, Banks, who flies for Western Airlines in civilian life, was dismissed from his part-time job as squadron commander.

CWIP Law Still Swirls In Controversy

RALEIGH — Two years ago, the Legislature changed the state's utility laws in a way which should have lowered consumer rates. The Legislature said the utilities could no longer automatically recover their construction costs for incomplete capital projects. Under the new law, the Utilities Commission was the decide whether or not Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) costs would be included in the formula under which utility rates are set.

How has the new law worked? Has the commission sided with consumers and saved them money? The man who sponsored the changes, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, says yes. Consumer advocates say no.

"The amendment has saved consumers millions. This amendment has been used to greatly reduce the requests of the power companies," Wright said in a recent telephone interview.

John Runkle, executive coordinator of the Conservation Council of North Carolina, an environmental group that opposes the construction of new power plants, says the changes have not brought about any substantial differences in the way the utilities are treated by the Utilities Commission. "There hasn't been a substantial difference between before the amendments were passed and after," Runkle said.

Runkle said the commission is supposed to review CWIP requests in light of two factors: Would inclusion of the CWIP costs benefit ratepayers and is inclusion vital to the company's financial health? "They've decided that it would benefit the rate payers to have healthy companies," he said.

Another consumer advocate, Bill Holman, lobbyist for a number of environmental and consumer groups, generally agrees with Runkle but says the CWIP changes have helped lead the utilities to the decision to cancel some nuclear power plants which had not been completed. Although these cancellations mean billions of wasted dollars, they also mean more good money won't be thrown away, Holman said.

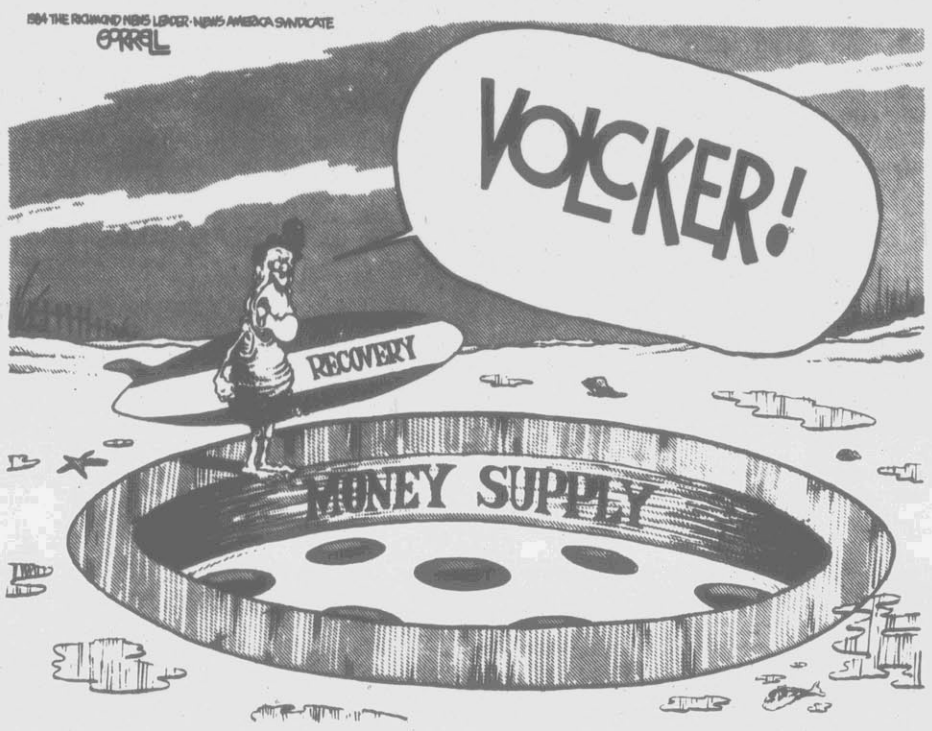

What do the records show? The Public Staff, which represents the public before the Utilities Commission, says the utilities are still getting their way most of the time. Dennis Nightingale, director of the Public Staff's electric division, says that the "commission has generally agreed with what the companies have requested rather than the position of the Public Staff which was that they shouldn't get any CWIP."

Public Staff records show that since the law was changed in 1982, telephone utilities have gotten about one-third of the CWIP they've requested. By denying CWIP to the phone companies, the commission has saved consumers about $4.5 million. The natural gas companies have received almost three quarters of the CWIP they requested with denials saving consumers about $300,000.

The big money comes in electric rates, however, where the multi-billion dollar power plants are covered by CWIP. About four-fifths of all electric utility CWIP requests have been approved by the commission since the changes in the law. The one-fifth denied meant that consumers saved $63 million in rates but the four-fifths granted cost consumers about $225 million.

Although hearings were held more than a year ago, the commission has failed to issue rules under which Wright's 1982 law would work. Therefore, there are no set guidelines that tell either consumers or utility companies when CWIP will be allowed and when it will be disallowed.

Have the CWIP changes worked? The $68 million saved certainly can't be sneezed at. But those who oppose CWIP altogether consider it a pittance compared to the more than $225 million plus which was not saved.

Benefit

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the many advantages to being president in an election year is that you can campaign while pretending you're not.

From a Mother's Day visit at a senior citizens center, to an appearance with superstar Michael Jackson, to an upcoming journey to Europe and a just completed trip to China, President Reagan has been doing just that.

Many of those events have an official, as well as a political, purpose. That means the president gets all the benefits of positive exposure while still maintaining an image as a leader, aloof from the campaign fray.

"It's always striking that the president can command as much television time as he can," said Maxine Isaacs, press secretary to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

"But as we learned ourselves in 1980, Jimmy Carter was the incumbent and that (television exposure) did not end up being a particular advantage."

In fact, the Mondale people play down Reagan's current role in the campaign. "I don't think what Reagan is doing is particularly relevant to politics at this point," Ms. Isaacs said.

At the White House, the attitude, as expressed by deputy press secretary Larry Speakes is: "If doing the job has a political benefit, so be it."

Speakes said the activities Reagan is engaged in now are not much different from what he's been doing for the past three years, though he acknowledged: "Perhaps they do have benefits as far as keeping the president in the forefront on key issues."

This week, Reagan went from visiting a home for the aged, where he referred to the residents as "my generation," to an appearance ith Michael Jackson, who seems to have mesmerized even young children with his "Thriller" album and unique style of dress.

During a ceremony on the South Lawn to thank Jackson for allowing his song "Beat It" to be used in anti-drunk driving commercials this week, Reagan even tried to speak Jackson's language.

The president said some young people at the White House asked him to give Jackson a message: "Please give some TLC to the PYTs. Now, I know that sounds a little off the wall," the president added, "but you know what I mean."

(The decoded message is: Please give some tender loving care to the pretty young things.)

There's one thing Reagan can be thankful for: since the Mondale campaign isn't particularly upset by his election year activities, there's little chance they'll follow the example of backers of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy who filed a lawsuit in 1980 against Carter's alleged political use of the presidency. Anyhow, the suit was thrown out of court.

Volcker Is A Question Mark

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's advisers feel both terror and impotence in facing the obdurate tight-money policy of Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, now in an election-year embrace with Democratic politicians.

"I wonder what President Mondale's economic policies will look like," one panicky Reagan policymaker told us. Other administration officials are less apocalyptic but believe Volcker's central bank policies threaten the economic recovery essential to Reagan's reelection. One respected insider privately suspects a one-term Reagan presidency would be just fine with Volcker.

Yet there is no Reagan game plan for dealing with the longtime bureaucrat he reappointed last summer. Still fearful of frontally challenging Volcker, administration strategists plan to await the May 22 meeting of the Fed's Open Market Committee (FOMC). If there is no loosening then, direct action will be considered — perhaps too late.

The exotic element in Fed politics is the election-year marriage of convenience between Volcker and Democrats now discarding their ancient anti-banker, low-interest-rate lineage. Senate Democrats in particular have consciously decided to defend Volcker as Reagan's scapegoat while they bash Reagan as a deficit-builder.

Responding to the prime interest rate boost to 12.5 percent on May 8, the White House did not castigate evil bankers but correctly fingered the Federal Reserve. That showed new sophistication about the central bank by James A. Baker III and Richard Darman, the West Wing's influential aides.

Both the White House and the Treasury now understand that basic reform in the Federal Reserve system is needed, and admit to colossal blunders in Volcker's reappointment. But that is not matched by any taste for public confrontation with Wall Street's favorite or any confidence that they could change his policy. Accordingly, the administration would rather have congressional Republicans take on Volcker.

Soon after last week's prime-rate shock, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan was asking help from GOP lawmakers. The response was mixed. Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, who as chairman of the Banking Committee faithfully represents the financial class, made clear his veneration of Volcker has not flagged. But other non-radical, non-populist Republicans such as Sens. Howard Baker and Paul Laxalt responded to the secretary's alarms with deep concern.

Majority Leader Baker summoned Volcker to breakfast recently and informed him that he may find both Republicans and Democrats wanting to trim the Fed's imperial powers. But Baker's warning was mitigated in that morning's Washington Post, which contained an article by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen attacking Republicans for "scapegoating" Volcker and for huge budget deficits.

Bentsen, chairman of his party's Senate campaign committee and a possible vice presidential nominee, is no ordinary Democrat. His article represented a 180-degree shift by Senate Democrats from 1982, when they joined Rep. Jack Kemp and other House Republicans to demand looser money. Support for Volcker was pledged weeks ago in a secret meeting between staffers of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee and the Federal Reserve.

The outlook is less clear in the House, where Majority Leader Jim Wright — truer to the Texas populist tradition than is Bentsen — still attacks Fed policy and where many Democrats are heartsick over Bentsen.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Reagan, if re-elected in November, will likely have to work with a Democratic House of Representatives, judging by the latest Gallup Poll, which shows 55 percent of registered voters nationwide stating a preference for Democratic congressional candidates, compared to 45 percent who choose Republicans.

The current figures represent little gain for the GOP since the 1982 congressional contests, when 56.1 percent of popular two-party vote went to Democratic candidates and 43.9 percent to Republicans. These percentages translated into 269 seats for the Democrats and 166 for the Republicans.

If President Reagan wins in November and the Democratic Party retains its present wide advantage, the pattern of a Republican president with a Democratic the last half-century — in 1953-54, during Dwight Eisenhower's first term as president — has the GOP held the white House and control of both Houses of Congress at the same time.

This question was asked:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this congressional dietrict — the Democratic Party or the Republican Party?" (Those who were undecided or named another party were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to the Democratic Party or to the Republican Party?")

Following is a comparison of the latest survey results, with the undecided vote allocated to the two parties, and the two-party popular vote in 1982:

Popular Vote For Congress

	1984 Gallup Estimate	1982 Election Results
Democratic Party	55%	56.1%
Republican Party	45%	43.9%
TOTAL	100%	100%

Although some political observers believe it is important, from the point of view of "checks and balances," that the White House and Congress be controlled by different parties, others believe that a change in the Constitutional system is called for to permit voting for a combined ticket of president, vice president and representative, to achieve unity.

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,157 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,531 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period April 6-9.

For results based on the registered voters' sample, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction.

Statistics Cloud The Change

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1960, the federal deficit for the calendar year was $3 billion. By 1982 it had swollen nearly 50 times to $147 billion.

Such long-term examination of economic statistics often brings trends into glaring perspective, revealing the numbers in bone-clean clarity — freeing them from the confusion of day-to-day economic and political disputes.

An overview also reveals something perhaps even more significant than the huge increase in the deficit. It is the percentage of that deficit made up by interest. It nearly doubled to 2.7 percent between 1960 and 1982.

Which way has defense spending gone? Up, you say. No, the statistics say, it has gone down, at least as a percentage of the gross national product — from 8.9 percent in 1960 to 5.8 percent in the calendar year 1982.

Back in 1960 the country spent $45 billion on defense, or 8.9 percent of the $507 billion gross national product. In 1982 it spent $179 billion, but since the GNP has grown to $3.07 trillion, the percentage was just 5.8.

Another significant trend is revealed by an eagle's eye view of the same years: Transfer payments as a percent of GNP nearly doubled — from $27 billion or 5.3 percent to $321 billion or 10.5 percent.

These figures, all of them, are from official government sources, but private sources also provide meaningful insights into the workings of the economy.

In this instance, some short-term numbers tell a revealing story about housing, homebuyers and lenders.

You remember, of course, how the nation's thrift institutions fell into a financial trap by borrowing short and lending long, the classic formula for putting any person or institution onto the financial toboggan slide.

But now, you observe, those thrifts that survived have plenty of money to lend and are, in fact, shoveling it out to homebuyers as fast as they can. The crisis, you might therefore conclude, has been passed.

Hardly. None other than the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, which speaks for most of the savings and loan associations, reveals a set of numbers that underscores the fragility of today's economy:

More than 85 percent of the deposit liabilities of savings institutions still have a duration of one year or less, while 75 percent of assets are in fixed-rate mortgatges with an average remaining life of 12 to 14 years ...."

The result, it concludes, "is a massive mismatch that makes the job of managing the asset-liability mix of an institution pretty complex and unpredictable."

Weren't variable rate mortgages supposed to have resolved that problem? Perhaps, but not immediately, the reason being that so many fixed-rate mortgages already were on the books — and few borrowers intend to turn them in.

About 500 lenders do have some relief, however, through the formation of an Asset Management Fund for Savings Institutions, which seeks to invest pools of money in a way that offsets the mismatch.

Meanwhile, another set of numbers shows mortgage insurers are putting their own restraints on the availability of adjustable rate mortgages, or mortgages in which the interest rates rise — or maybe fall — with market conditions.

One technique that made such mortgages available was to offer first-year rates well below market rates, thus enabling many more families to qualify for loans. But, a survey by Advance Mortgage Corp. shows, that game may be up.

The private insurers, says Advance, have in effect raised by 20 percent the income needed to qualify for adjustable mortgages. Until recently they allowed a family to use 33 percent of income for mortgages. Now they're down to 28.

At the same time, says Advance, they have have placed limits on those first-year discounts. Earlier, they would allow lenders to offer first-year discounts to borrowers of as much as 6 percent. Their new limit is 4 percent.

Leader In His Field

George W. Randall would be considered a dreamy idealist in these days when many people assert that the way to deal with crime is to build prisons bigger and stronger and to lock up culprits and throw away the key.

Randall, who headed the North Carolina prison system during much of the 1960s, operated on the opposite premise. He believed that putting a person in prison was a last resort and every type of rehabilitative remedy should be tried first. The idea of throwing away the key was wrong, for it robbed the prison inmate of hope and made him a more desperate and more dangerous individual.

In his last appearance before the Advisory Budget Commission in September 1972, Randall, who was then secretary of the state Department of Social Rehabilitation and Control, urged that the state correctional system be permitted to place more emphasis on community-based programs rather than sending people to prison.

Randall told the commission that his department had cut its requests for building and operating prisons so that the money could be spent on probation, parole and halfway-house programs.

"Please don't misunderstand me," said Randall when some members voiced skepticism. "We will always need prisons to house dangerous offenders," but "handling offenders in community programs is not coddling. It is a hard-nosed approach requiring the offender to work to support his family, to pay taxes and to obey the law."

Randall cited studies by experts which showed that "while dangerous offenders should be held in strong prisons the vast majority of prisoners could be handled much better in community based programs at less cost, more efficiently and would bring about a reduction in crime."

Randall described halfway houses as places where offenders could live in small groups in a family-like atmosphere. This brought a word of caution from Tom White, commission chairman, that "they would have to have real good supervision."

Randall died three months later, before he could place his program into operation. He was only 62. His death brought an eulogy from Gov. Bob Scott, who described Randall as "an outstanding leader nationally recognized in the field of correctional reform. His efforts brought North Carolina to the forefront in leadership in that field. He walked with assurance and set the pace for his associates to follow."

One of the innovations Randall inaugurated was called work release. Prisoners on work release were allowed to work on their jobs by day but were required to return to their prison cells at nights and weekends. In addition to supporting their families and paying taxes, work release prisoners were required to save money to provide a nest egg when they were released.

Randall was an Alabama native who studied at Auburn University and the University of Alabama before going to work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington. In 1940, he got a job with Mooresville Mills in Mooresville. There he took an active part in politics and was elected to the state House of Repesentatives in 1952 and 1954. In 1955, Gov. Luther Hodges hired him as a consultant to study the prison system, particularly the proposal to separate the prisons from the state Highway Commission.

In 1956, Hodges appointed Randall as chairman of the state Board of Paroles and in 1960 placed him in charge of the state's prisons which then included 83 prison camps and nine major prisons. The job has been described as the toughest in state government and likened to sitting on a powder keg that's likely to explode at any moment.

"The most important thing" in running a prison system, Randall once observed, is maintaining security. Next is "to give each prisoner the best treatment you can so that upon release he'll be able to make a satisfactory adjustment."

Randall continued as prisons director under Gov. Terry Sanford, but in 1964 he backed Richardson Preyer, who was defeated by Dan. K. Moore in the race for the Democratic nomination for governor. When Moore became governor the following year, he asked for Randall's resignation.

Slave Honored

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (AP) — Veterans and dignitaries dedicated a gravemarker Saturday to a former slave who received a Congressional Medal of Honor for his Civil War bravery but whose modest grave lacked any note of his heroism.

First Sgt. Decatur Dorsey, a member of Company B, 39th Regiment of the U.S. Colored Troop, earned the nation's highest military honor for saving the colors and rallying the troops at the battle of Petersburg, Va., in 1864.

He was one of 186,000 slaves who fought in the Union Army and one of the 56 blacks among the 2,357 servicemen awarded the Medal of Honor since 1863.

Dorsey, who is buried at the Flower Hill Cemetery where Saturday's ceremony took place, died in nearby Hoboken at age 55 on July 11, 1891.

Squatters Fight

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than two dozen squatters fought with police trying to evict them Saturday to make way for a road, witnesses said. Police said one officer was hurt and one man arrested.

The 15-minute fracas in the Manila suburb of Navotas started when 30 government workers accompanied by about 90 riot police arrived to begin demolition of some 100 shanties standing next to a road being widened to ease traffic congestion.

The residents pelted the workers and police with stones and charged their adversaries with sticks. But they were quickly subdued by police, witnesses said.

Immigration Arrests

NEW YORK (AP) — An alleged Irish Republican Army figure and a second Irish national were held on alleged immigration law violations after their arrest on a city street, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

INS agents picked up Joe Cahill, 64, and James Drum on Thursday night in the borough of Queens, said Lawrence Paretta, the service's assistant district director for investigations.

Bail for Cahill was set at $150,000 by U.S. Magistrate John Caden in Brooklyn federal court. Cahill was identified as co-treasurer of Sinn Fein, the political arm of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. He was charged with re-entering the country after being deported in 1971 and misusing a passport, Paretta said.

Guilty Plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 16-year-old girl pleaded guilty to helping a teen-age boy charged with murdering a 16-year-old high school football star.

In exchange for Anna Bekgaard's guilty plea Friday to aiding and abetting Danny Elmore, 17, Deputy District Attorney Mary Ganahl withdrew charges of murder and attempted murder that had been leveled at her. Miss Bekgaard admitted that she gave sheriff's investigators a wrong address and name for Elmore, who is charged in the Feb. 14 slaying of Anthony Montgomery and the attempted murder of Montgomery's friend, Mathew Priest, also 16.

The shooting occurred after an argument among Elmore, Montgomery and Priest, testimony at Elmore's preliminary hearing indicated.

Damages Awarded

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A federal judge has awarded $9.6 million in damages to the owner of a freighter ruined by a fire that broke out at a grain terminal on Valentine's Day two years ago. The ship's owners had sought $12 million compensatory damages and about $3 million in punitive damages.

U.S. District Judge Gus J. Solomon on Friday awarded the damages to Protectus Alpha Navigation Co. Last month, Solomon found North Pacific Grain Growers Inc., the operator of the Kalama, Wash., terminal, "grossly negligent." The judge said then that two North Pacific employees had set the burning ship adrift and "turned a small shipboard fire into a marine disaster."

A Coast Guard crewman was killed and another severely injured in an explosion while fighting the fire after the freighter had floated 1,000 yards downstream. The freighter had stopped at the terminal for refueling.

Should Have Talked

PURCHASE, N.Y. (AP) — Better communication with his family might have helped David Kennedy fight the drug problems that led to his death last month, his aunt, Joan Kennedy, said Saturday.

Mrs. Kennedy, the former wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said in a radio interview that it was important for people with drug problems to "keep the channels of communication open" with their parents and others.

Asked if such communication could have helped David, the 28-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, she said, "Yes."

Soviet Space Walk

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts took a space walk to install an additional solar battery on their Salyut-7 space station, the official Tass news agency said Saturday.

Tass said mission commander Leonid Kizim and flight engineer Vladimir Solovyev donned special suits Friday and went outside the craft to install the battery in order to increase the station's power supply.

Tass said Kizim and Solovyev spent three hours and five minutes in space, while fellow crew member Oleg Atkov rotated the newly installed battery.

Exporting Charges

ROME (AP) — An Italian magistrate on Saturday ordered fugitive Licio Gelli, leader of the now-outlawed P-2 Masonic Lodge, to face charges of illegally exporting currency to Switzerland.

Judicial authorities said the summons, signed by Rome Magistrate Giorgio Santacroce, accuses Gelli of depositing about $1.5 million in a Swiss bank account before 1981.

Gelli, grand master of the Propaganda Due — P-2 — Masonic Lodge, was arrested in Geneva in September 1982, but escaped from a Geneva prison last August and is still at large.

Running With Jesse Not Easy For Press

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wherever the Rev. Jesse Jackson takes his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination, the crowds chant, "Run, Jesse, Run."

But running with Jesse isn't easy — at least not for reporters and photographers who travel with his campaign.

Jackson frequently describes his campaign as a historic event, a reference to the fact that he is the first black to conduct a serious national campaign for president.

It is also the first presidential campaign in which the press became so frustrated with the candidate's staff that they chartered their own plane.

Traditionally, candidates' staffs handle all travel, baggage and hotel arrangements for reporters covering their campaigns, and bill each news organization for its share of costs.

That's the way the Jackson campaign worked — or failed to work — until this month.

There were times when reporters and televison crews arrived at an airport with Jackson and found there was space on the plane only for the candidate and his staff, or possibly only for a third or half of the news people traveling with him.

Even worse, the low-budget campaign chartered planes so rickety that reporters and staff worried about safety.

While Jackson continues to fly by either commercial flights or small chartered planes, the press follows in a high-performance twin jet arranged in a luxurious "parlor car" fashion with about 25 seats in three clusters of couches in a space that would take about 60 seats in conventional rows.

While the Jackson campaign planes were noted mostly for cold fried chicken — or nothing — and a general lack of amenities, the press charter is a flying gourmet restaurant. One recent flight featured crab, lobster and shrimp plus hors d'oeurves and an assortment of wines and champagne.

The press plane also has a television set, stereo and work tables and enough space in the aisles for dancing.

The three major television networks plus major newspapers are chartering the plane, providing any extra seats to other reporters for first-class fare.

The Jackson press charter is too new to have a name, but it has a mascot — a fuzzy toy alligator with a press credential, microphone and dark glasses named "Mohammed Ali Gator."

The alligator is a private joke between Jackson and reporters covering him.

There are two stories about its derivation. One is that Jackson called the reporters a pack of snapping alligators; the other is that Jackson said the motor drives on cameras sounded like snapping alligators.

In any case, regular members of Jackson's traveling press corps, plus some Secret Service agents, all carry toy snapping alligators attached to their press credentials.

The snapping alligator toys are good to relieve tensions — other campaigns have whistles or other distinctive trademarks. But they also have another useful purpose.

Duarte In D.C. For Talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte flew to Washington Saturday amid tight security for talks with President Reagan and to lobby for increased U.S. military aid.

Duarte, a Christian Democrat who was elected to a five-year term in presidential balloting May 6, left the Ilopango military base just outside the capital at 2:30 p.m. EDT, authorities said. No reporters were allowed into the area for security reasons.

He was expected to arrive at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington at 6:55 p.m. He is scheduled to meet with President Reagan Monday, five days after being declared president-elect.

Duarte, who begins his term June 1, won a May 6 runoff election with 54 percent of the vote compared to 46 percent for his right-wing rival Roberto d'Aubuisson of the Nationalist Republican Alliance.

In Washington, Duarte is expected to appeal to the U.S. Congress for more military and economic aid for his country, battered by civil war between the government and leftist guerrillas.

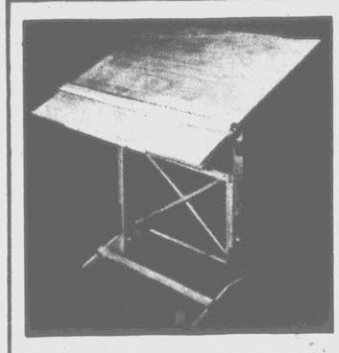

Before making the trip to Washington, Duarte visited Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica to discuss the situation in the region where leftist guerrilla insurgencies, border skirmishes and a CIA secret war against Nicaragua have sharpened tensions.

In Costa Rica, Duarte said El Salvador could never have normal relations with Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, which is accused of supporting leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

"For me, it is really impossible to sustain normal relations with a country that, like Nicaragua, has been recognized in international forums as one that aids the guerrillas who are fighting against the government of El Salvador," he said.

Edmisten Denies He Was Aware Of Solicitations

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Saturday that his campaign staff wrote utility company lobbyists seeking money and advice without his knowledge, but said the important thing was that no utility contribution was accepted.

The Democratic gubernatorial candidate commented before greeting several hundred Jaycees at a statewide convention. Edmisten led a field of 10 Democrats in the May 8 primary and won the right to challenge Eddie Knox in the June 5 runoff.

The winner of that contest will meet Republican Jim Martin in the November election.

The Greensboro Daily News and Record reported Friday that on March 6, Edmisten's campaign mailed letters to all legislative lobbyists registered with the Secretary of State's Office. The letter sought contributions and advice from the approximately 350 organizations represented by the lobbyists.

Utility companies were among those groups. Edmisten repeatedly has said he will not accept contributions from utility companies' political action committees and has advertised that he is not beholden to special interest groups.

"Any campaign is going to have staff members seek funding from all sources," Edmisten said. "Although they were solicited ... the key is the campaign didn't accept any (money) from utility PACs.

"I specifically have not received money from utility company PACs because utility companies derive their entire income from government appointees (the N.C. Utilities Commission)," said Edmisten.

He said the other PACs are business-related and he sees no problem with accepting contributions from them. Edmisten said a governor does not directly influence other industries as he does utilities.

Edmisten praised the Jaycees for helping others and promised to turn to them for leadership if elected. He told female members that his only special interest group would be the children of North Carolina.

Edmisten was accompanied Saturday by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram's gubernatorial campaign leader, Mike Rogers, and supporters of former Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth. Both Faircloth and Ingram endorsed Edmisten after losing in the gubernatorial primary.

Lacy Thornburg, the Democratic nominee for attorney general, and Jim Long, Democratic nominee for insurance commissioner, also worked the crowd of almost 1,500 Jaycees at various convention events.

Edmisten also was scheduled Saturday to visit a Shriners' convention in Fayetteville.

Knox Blasts Rufus On Minority Hiring

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox Saturday blasted Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's "intolerable record when it comes to minorities" and accused his campaign workers of intimidating blacks.

"In 1982, he didn't have one single minority in his top 33 management positions," the former Charlotte mayor said at a fish fry at the home of Jim Richardson, who is running unopposed for the state House in the mostly black 59th District. "When we started talking about it, he got one the next year."

He said black voters have a choice between Knox and a "good old boy politician" whose campaign workers intimidate blacks.

Asked to elaborate on the charge in an interview after his remarks, Knox said his campaign aides in Wilson had reported that some blacks working to elect Knox said they had been told, "Better not work for that other fellow ... someone could hurt you." He said similar incidents were being investigated in Greenville and in Haywood County.

Neither Edmisten nor his aides could be reached immediately for comment.

About 75 friends, supporters and neighbors attended Richardson's backyard party and cheered when Knox said, "Black folks must ask themselves whether they're going to take the rhetoric or take the person who is responsive and is going to listen to them."

Knox said that when he was mayor, many appointments went to women and minorities. He also said he had made an effort to give city business to minority-owned firms, noting that 15 percent of the businesses at the new Charlotte airport are minority-owned.

Knox said in response to a question that he supported capital punishment, but that he would adopt guidelines for accepting each sentence to ensure that blacks were not treated unfairly.

He said he had no plans to support any gun-control legislation, although he said he had introduced a bill that would require a permit to carry a gun because of the "urgency of the times."

"We did something about crime in this city," he said. "We ran out the Hells Angels and the massage parlors."

Knox repeated his challenge to Edmisten to debate him, saying that "we have all the time in the world now."

He also cited his record as mayor in seeking summer jobs for unemployed youth, for improving housing and for revitalizing the downtown area.

Knox urged black Democrats to motivate others to vote for him in the June 5 runoff against Edmisten, saying, "I'll whip (Republican candidate) Jim Martin, don't worry about that."

Helms Had More 1983 Income Than Hunt

By The Associated Press

Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' 1983 income was at least $107,507, compared to at least $71,871 for Gov. Jim Hunt, his Democratic re-election rival, according to financial disclosure reports.

The reports, filed with the secretary of the Senate and made public Friday, reflect income and holdings in broad categories. They show that the net value of assets owned by Helms ranged from $235,000 to $516,307, compared to a net value of assets owned by Hunt of between $105,002 and $270,000.

Neither has large personal debts and the liabilities reflected in the reports are mortgages on homes or other property.

Helms earned $69,800 as a senator last year while Hunt earned $59,316 as governor. Hunt received an additional $10,853 in taxpayer funds to operate the Executive Mansion for personal uses.

Helms picked up $21,400 in fees for speeches to $1,500 for Hunt.

Aside from salaries and speaking fees, Helms reported between $16,307 and $136,700 from dividends, rents and interest payments from bank accounts. Hunt listed income of between $202 and $2,000 from interest on an account at the State Employees Credit Union and a 3.6 percent share of ownership in a Raleigh apartment project.

On the campaign trail, Helms said Friday that Hunt needed "the turnout of the black block vote" to win. Helms also called Hunt a "windshield wiper" who moved back and forth on issues.

At a news conference in Weldon before a fund-raising dinner in Roanoke Rapids, Helms repeated his allegation that State Department officials had interfered in El Salvador's recent elections.

He denied that he had released secret information on the U.S. role in the elections and said he knew more about what was going on in Central America than members of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Helms said he expected proposed legislation to authorize stricter health warnings on cigarette packages would encounter little Senate opposition. He said he thought the warnings were a waste of money, but wanted to hear from cigarette manufacturers before taking a position on the matter.

'Fame' Students Gave Farewell Performance

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1984 graduating class of the High School of the Performing Arts, the backdrop for the movie and television series "Fame," gave a farewell performance Saturday.

The students are the last to practice scales, soliloquies and high kicks in the same hallways where teenaged Al Pacino, Ben Vereen, Liza Minelli, Suzanne Pleshette and Carroll O'Connor once walked.

Next year, some of the city's most talented students will receive their high school training at the LaGuardia School of the Arts in a $60 million, eight-story building complete with 1,500-seat auditorium at Lincoln Center.

The landmark building on 46th Street near Broadway in the heart of the city's theater district, built in the 1890s and opened as the High School of the Performing Arts in the 1940s, will serve as a high school specializing in writing and communication.

"The old school is so creative. It's home. The new school — it's all modern. It's not the same," said Peter Moore, 17, as he warm

Tiny Aphid Means Double Trouble For N.C. Farmers

By BOB CAIRNS
NCSU News Bureau

A tiny, black insect is eating away at farm profits in North Carolina.

When the aphid feasts on money crops such as sweet potatoes, squash, melons and peppers, it can be double trouble for the state's farmers, says Dr. James W. Moyer, a North Carolina State University plant pathologist.

According to Moyer, these pests not only feed on the underside of the green leaves, they spread viruses throughout the entire crop that can cause additional losses.

Losses resulting from aphid-borne viruses may only affect 10 to 15 percent of a crop, but in the case of a virus called watermelon mosaic number two, the affect on squash losses can be even greater.

"In recent years growers' profit margins have declined; so losses once overlooked may mean the difference between proft and loss in today's economy," Moyer said.

Moyer and his associates at N.C. State are studying how aphids transmit the viruses and how a plant's resistance to the virus and the aphid affect the spread of these diseases.

The NCSU research is supported by a three-year, $80,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Dr. George G. Kennedy, associate professor of entomology, is a principal investigator with Moyer on the project. Dr. William H. Swallow, associate professor of statistics, is working with the researchers, providing statistical expertise and developing a manual of methods for future research.

In-depth laboratory and greenhouse investigations aimed at discovering more information about the transmission of the viruses are being carried out by Louise Romanow, an NCSU graduate student.

A particular area of interest is the efficiency with which the aphid transmits the virus.

"Aphids can light on crops in droves, transmit a virus by simply probing a plant for as little are 10 to 15 seconds, and leave the crop infected," Moyer said.

It is almost impossible to project the number of insects carrying viruses because the probability of a single aphid transmitting a virus is so low, Moyer explained.

"But the statistical expertise brought to the project by Swallow could lead to more accurate predictions," he said.

Models developed by the NCSU researchers have enabled them to make accurate and specific assessments about the incidence of transmission of viruses by aphids.

These mathematical models make it possible for the researchers to detect one virus-carrying aphid in 10,000.

In another phase of the research, Moyer and Kennedy are infecting cantaloupe plants with watermelon mosaic number two, a member of one of the largest families of aphid-borne viruses which affect North Carolina crops.

Information from tests run on the infected plants may be applicable to a great number of other state-grown crops, Moyer said.

"We're using this virus as a model because the basic information learned fromthe experiments (which plants are more susceptible) may apply to similar viruses spread by aphids in crops such as tobacco, corn and sweet potatoes," he said.

The reserach also has led the NCSU scientists to the identification of resistant plants — plants in which there appears a lower incidence of disease.

"We've learned that in these resistant plants the probablility that an aphid will pick up the virus and carry it to other plants is reduced," Moyer said,

The ultimate goal of the research is to thoroughly understand the complex interaction between plants, aphids and the virus, he said.

Mood Is Sad In Cameroon

AOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Shaken by last month's thwarted attempt to topple their civilian government, Cameroonians on Sunday mark their most somber national day since they gained independence in 1960.

The government of President Paul Biya, who has kept a low profile since loyal army units crushed the April 6 rebellion, canceled parades and other ceremonies and designated Sunday as a day of reflection and meditation.

The attempted coup was mounted by disgruntled elements of the elite presidential guard which was charged primarily with protecting Biya.

The weeks since have been sobering ones for the West African nation's 8.9 million people.

What the president has called the "dark hours" of the April uprising badly damaged Cameroon's reputation for political stability in a turbulent region and raised troubling questions about Biya's style and approach to governing a country of extreme ethnic and religious diversity.

The uprising "has shaken the fiber of the nation," said one mid-level government official who, like others interviewed, asked not to be identified by name. "We're not used to coups and it's been very difficult to adjust to this."

"People are very nervous and think (an uprising) might happen again anytime," said a student in Yaounde, the verdant, sprawling capital that was the scene of the attempted takeover. The government said the fighting claimed 70 lives.

Most analysts, however, said they doubt Biya's government faces any immediate threat from the armed forces. The army remained loyal during the attempted coup and senior officers have demonstrated no desire to assume power.

Another restraining factor is the punishment that was swiftly meted out to suspected participants in the rebellion. The Yaounde military tribunal heard evidence in secret against 436 suspects and sentenced 46 to death. Most of those are believed to have been executed. Of the others, 183 were acquitted and many were sentenced to prison terms of two to 20 years.

Biya, in an address on national radio Thursday, a day after the verdicts were announced, said the secret trials were conducted "without hatred" and that sentences were commensurate with the offenses.

The speech was Biya's first since the immediate aftermath of the uprising.

O'Neill-Gingrich Tilt Didn't Match 19th Century Duels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., got to shouting at each other in the House chamber last week, the episode was described as the most raucous hullabaloo in recent congressional history.

So it was, with the speaker actually ruled out of order for calling a Gingrich speech "the lowest thing I've heard in my 32 years here."

But compared to what commonly went on in the House in the 19th Century, the O'Neill-Gingrich set-to and the rowdy background provided by angry members of both parties was a Sunday school picnic.

In 1858, while debating the issue of whether to admit Kansas to the Union as a slave or free state, members became embroiled in what Neil MacNeil, author of the House history, "Forge Of Democracy," called "a wild melee."

"A fistfight broke out between Galusha Grow of Pennsylvania, later to be speaker, and Laurence Keitt of South Carolina over words spoken in debate, and Grow knocked Keitt down," MacNeil wrote.

"Partisans of both hastened to join the battling and immediately the House floor was the scene of rioting. One member picked up a spittoon to brain his enemies.

"William Barksdale of Mississippi seized Grow and was wrestling with him when he himself was assaulted ... 'Bowie Knife' Potter of Wisconsin grabbed Barksdale by the hair, only to discover to his surprise that he had pulled off the Mississippian's wig.

"'Hooray, boys,' Potter shouted above the din. 'I've got his scalp!' That broke up the quarrel in a wave of equally riotous laughter."

Rough boys in those days. Rep. John Potter, for example, got his nickname for his reply to one of his Southern colleagues who challenged him to a duel. Potter had the choice of weapons and instead of selecting the pistols favored by gentlemen of the time, insisted on fighting with Bowie knives. The duel never came off.

But many duels actually were fought and in 1838 Rep. Jonathan Cilley of Maine was killed by Rep. William Graves of Kentucky. They fought at the 10 paces usually used with pistols (one account says it was 100 yards), but they were armed with rifles.

The period before the Civil War was the rowdiest in the House, which one observer called "The Bear Garden," and a member, Rep. William Holman of Indiana, said the place was "like a Texas barroom." Speaker Joseph W. Keifer reportedly carried a gun to the rostrum when he presided over the House in 1881-83.

The Senate wasn't all that sedate either. In April of 1850, Sen. Henry Foote of Mississippi, a veteran of three duels, engaged Sen. Thomas Hart Benton of Missouri in debate. Foote was responding to a statement by Benton when the Missourian began walking toward him and the Mississippi senator pulled a pistol and pointed it at Benton. Benton shouted, "Let him fire! Stand out of the way! Let the assassin fire!" Cooler heads prevailed and no blood was shed.

Another pistol was produced, and the trigger pulled, in an 1827 encounter on a Washington street between Reps. Samuel Houston of Tennessee and William Stanbery of Ohio. Houston went after Stanbery with his cane and the Ohioan drew his gun, but it misfired. Houston lived on to become the president of the Republic of Texas, U.S. senator and statesman.

The first recorded instance of the House out of order was long before the imprending break between the North and South had frayed tempers.

On Jan. 1, 1798, Rep. Matthew Lyon of Vermont, a former Revolutionary War soldier, became so angry at Rep. Roger Griswold of Connecticut that he unloaded a full mouthful of tobacco juice into Griswold's face. Angered that the House had refused to expel Lyon, three days later Griswold came up behind his opponent in the chamber and began hitting him with a hickory cane.

Alvin Josephy Jr., in the congressional history, "On The Hill," wrote that Lyon "staggered to the fireplace on the House floor, seized the fire tongs and flailed back at his assailant. As the two men closed and wrestled each other to the floor, the other members cheered them on with partisan delight."

The House subsequently defeated a motion to expel both members, but the Vermonter thereafter was known as "The Spitting Lyon" of Congress.

Opposition Gains Won't Hurt Marcos

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The opposition has clearly won a sizable minority in the Philippines parliament, but it will not affect the powers of President Ferdinand E. Marcos to decree laws, order arrests or declare martial law.

By the weekend, 38 candidates who ran against Marcos' governing New Society Movement had been proclaimed winners in Monday's election, and 47 others were running ahead. Sixty-five Marcos candidates had been declared winners and others were running ahead in more races than were opposition candidates.

The New Society movement was headed for a certain majority of the 183 seats at stake — Marcos appoints an additional 17 — but the degree of rejection of Marcos' candidates was stronger than predicted by the press, Marcos himself, or even most opposition leaders.

Opposition victors included former House Speaker Jose Laurel, several young lawyers who defend political dissidents, and at least two candidates under house arrest on subversion charges — former Sen. Eva Estrada Kalaw and Cagayan de Oro Mayor Aquilino Pimentel.

But many Filipinos are not sure what they have gained.

Opposition ranks are badly divided and the new assemblymen will sit in a body that, since it was formed in 1978, has been in its own words a "rubber stamp" to the will of Marcos and his politically powerful wife, Imelda.

The outgoing assembly has 14 oppositionists in name but only two or three who opposed Marcos regularly.

Marcos ran the country under martial law for eight years. The decree was lifted in 1981 but he retains many martial law powers.

Salvador H. Laurel, president of the United Nationalist Democratic Organization, a coalition of most opposition parties, called the early election returns "beyond your hopes and wildest imagination."

Later, however, he accused Marcos' candidates of trying to steal back the opposition victories with massive fraud and terrorism. Similar changes were made against the opposition by some ruling government candidates.

It was Marcos' own assessment, made offhandedly in a U.S. television interview, that was being most widely quoted in Manila.

"I would presume that our instructions to our people to allow the opposition to win some seats might have been taken too literally," Marcos said.

Marcos has accused foreign and local news media of turning Filipinos against his regime.

With inflation reaching a record high 40 percent, Marcos ordered small wage increases a few days before the election. But his government increased fuel prices even as the votes were being counted, and businessmen expect a currency devaluation soon.

Many opposition candidates campaigned on the issues of the troubled economy and the Aug. 21 assassination of Marcos' chief rival, Benigno Aquino. The government contends a Communist agent killed Aquino, but the opposition maintains that Marcos, his wife or the military plotted it.

Western diplomatic observers said other factors in opposition victories were a large youth vote and a massively organized pollwatch effort by a group of businessmen and church workers called the National Citizens Movement for Free Elections.

Headed by businessman Jose Concepcion, the group claimed to have fielded 150,000 volunteers to watch the counting in individual precincts and to pick up copies of official vote tallies before they could be altered.

In the early counting, its totals differed widely from those given out by the government. Some discrepancies in the counts are yet to be resolved.

Nonetheless the election gave Marcos, at least temporarily, a new democratic face abroad at a time when his government is seeking a restructuring of its $26 billion debt as well as $3.3 billion in new loans.

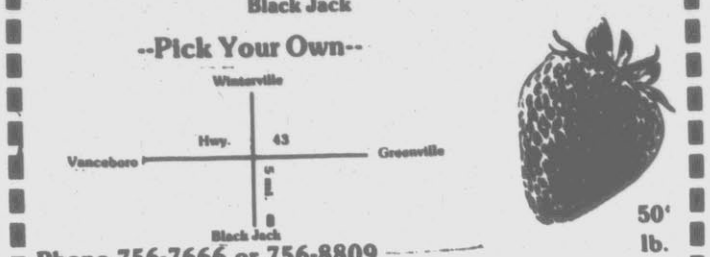

It also indicated that most Filipinos would rather vote than protest. Only 14,000 signed a pro-boycott petition in the Manila area, although organizers of a boycott movement claimed millions stayed away from the polls to protest what they called the "Marcos-U.S. dictatorship."

Communist rebels killed at least 60 soldiers, and more than 30 other people died in election day violence.

Historian Teodoro Agoncillo said the violence, the boycott movement and the strong opposition vote show growing discontent with Marcos.

"If the opposition won, it is in spite of (the government), not because democracy is alive," Agoncillo said.

He said there is good evidence many Filipinos followed the advice of Manila's Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, who told Catholics it was all right to accept candidates' bribes because it is the people's money and they need it. Then, he said, they should vote according to their conscience.

Gubernatorial Advisers Play Key Roles

Associated Press Writer
By MARY ANNE RHYNE

RALEIGH (AP) — They're called by different names — campaign chairmen, coordinators, finance council members — but each sees the gubernatorial candidates almost daily to give opinions and offer advice.

The advisers to Democrats Eddie Knox and Rufus Edmisten range from businessmen and political newcomers to Democratic Party stalwarts. The importance of their duties increases as the June 5 runoff draws closer.

Edmisten aides say that among the attorney general's top advisers are state Alcoholic Board of Control Chairman Marvin Speight, Raleigh businessman Bill Carl, Johnsie Setzer of Catawba County, Garland Garrett Jr. of Wilmington and Thad Eure Jr., son of Secretary of State Thad Eure.

Perhaps Edmisten's closest adviser, Charlie Smith, died after a plane crash in March. Aides say no one person has replaced Smith.

Aides to Knox, a former Charlotte mayor, say his circle of advisers includes public relations specialist Joe Epley of Charlotte, pollster Walter DeVries of Wilmington, campaign manager Marvin Blount and campaign coordinator Wes Ives.

Carl said he hopes to make a difference for Edmisten in at least two areas — bringing a business approach to politics and improving the political decision-making process.

"I want to be able to bring a significant element of business management to the business of politics," Carl said. "The business of politics can be extremely predictable and can be very consistent if you get rid of the rag-tag, off-the-cuff, seat-of-the-pants attitudes."

When it comes to decision making, Carl said he tries to help Edmisten get time to think things through.

"You try to reduce the element of surprise," Carl said. "You try to eliminate it so there are no time-sensitive decisions."

Carl, whose wife Jeanette is a member of the state Board of Transportation and is active in the state Democratic Party, is relatively new to politics. He said he met Edmisten six years ago and learned much about politics from his wife. As soon as his business allowed, he joined Edmisten's gubernatorial campaign.

Carl said he spends 75 percent of his time looking after the Edmisten campaign finances and spends the rest at Investors Management Corp., a holding company for Golden Corral restaurant and other development projects. He is one of the heads of the company's board of directors.

In contrast, Speight knew Edmisten when the candidate was attending law school and working for former U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina. Speight, a former fundraiser for Gov. Jim Hunt and auto parts dealer from Farmville, helped Edmisten take former Attorney General Robert Morgan's place when Morgan left office to run for the U.S. Senate.

He said he was attracted to Edmisten because he is a "down-to-earth boy."

With his fulltime state job, Speight spends nights and weekends working for Edmisten and traveling with him.

Speight said he has been "in the trenches" for the party since Bob Scott ran for governor. He is best known for his annual fish fry and barbecue on Emerald Isle, where Speight owns several houses. The event takes place after Labor Day.

He gave his first party when Edmisten was running for attorney general and Hunt for lieutenant governor. There were 500 people present that year. Now the event is a regular stop for candidates seeking any statewide office and it attracts up to 5,000.

But Speight said this may be his last campaign.

"If I get through November, win, lose or draw I'm just going to vote from now on," Speight said.

Garrett is a former Board of Transportation member and he unsuccessfully ran for the state Senate in 1980. He was co-chairman of Edmisten's first campaign for attorney general and is helping raise money this year.

Mrs. Setzer has worked for Edmisten since 1974 too. She has held a number of state and national party positions and was Democratic Woman of the Year in 1980. She has raised money for President Carter and Hunt.

Blount met Knox when he was a Superior Court judge hearing cases across the state and Knox was practicing law in Charlotte. Blount said Knox's brother and law partner, Charlie, appeared before him in court.

At age 30, Blount became one of the youngest people in North Carolina to be appointed a special Superior Court judge. He served in the job three years before returning to private practice.

He said he is wants to make sure that other eastern North Carolina residents understand Knox is looking after their interests too.

"The East perceives that a governor from Mecklenburg might not respond to their needs as well," Blount said. "But Eddie has agricultural roots and he has spent a lot of time in Eastern North Carolina."

Blount said Knox is easy to work with because he is predictable and stable. He said he'd like to see the next governor have those two qualities.

Epley was a reporter when he met Knox, who was running a friend's campaign for solicitor in Mecklenburg County almost 20 years ago. Epley left his television station in 1968 to help Knox work to pass a water bond.

When Epley began his own public relations firm, Knox became his lawyer. Epley later helped Knox with his campaigns for state Senate and mayor.

"The friendship has endured as well as the professional relationship," Epley said.

He said he and Knox agree on political philosophies but sometimes disagree about how to carry out those ideas. Epley said Knox is "not as dogmatic as other candidates are" and that makes it easy to give him advice or offer a different viewpoint although Knox ultimately makes his own decisions.

"I believe strongly that people need to know about a candidate and that good people need to offer themselves as candidates," he said. "I believe in Eddie as a friend. I believe ... he can do something really good for North Carolina."

Ives retired after 37 years in state government to manage day-to-day activities in the Knox campaign. He is a brigadier general in the N.C. Army National Guard, a former executive director of the state Democratic Party and most recently was assistant secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Salesman Convicted In Pipe Explosion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former trucking firm salesman has been convicted of mailing a pipe bomb to his former boss, who was maimed when it exploded in his Newark, N.J., office.

Michael George Michaels, a former $91,000-a-year sales manager for Right-O-Way Airfreight Inc., was convicted Friday in federal court of mailing the bomb to company President Joshua Brown.

The explosion blew a hole in Brown's stomach, ripped apart both hands and badly damaged his liver and spleen.

Michaels believed Brown had cheated him out of commissions, prosecutors said.

Black Muslim Breaks Fast

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Cpl. Alfred Griffin, in confinement for refusing to join his unit in Lebanon because of religious beliefs, has ended a fast he vowed would continue until he was freed, a Marine spokeswoman said Saturday.

The 22-year-old Black Muslim and Chicago native ate breakfast Saturday, said Cpl. Pamela Vajner. He also ate a meal Friday night, said Gunnery Sgt. Mike Branski of Camp Lejeune's Joint Public Affairs Office.

Griffin had been placed in the custody of the Base Correctional Facility's medical staff earlier Friday after refusing three meals.

Griffin was convicted Thursday of missing his unit's movement from Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 18 and of being in an unauthorized absence status from Oct. 17 to Oct. 19. His unit sailed for Beirut on Oct. 18 but was later diverted to Grenada.

His attorneys, affiliated with the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York City, based his defense on grounds of First Amendment religious rights. Griffin said was afraid he would be put in a position of having to kill Muslims, which he said would violate Islamic law.

At a news conference after his court martial, Griffin said he was discriminated against because he was a Muslim. He said he would not eat until he received "justice."

According to Branski, regulations require that any prisoner who misses three meals in a row be immediately turned over to the medical personnel.

"They will determine what treatment is necessary, if any," Branski said.

Griffin was formally confined at 3:20 p.m. Thursday, and missed the evening meal as well as breakfast and lunch on Friday. Up until the time he was put into medical custody, authorities said he had not been observed drinking any water, Branski said.

Branski said that according to facility officials, "a lot of confinees who enter the facility initially miss the first few meals because of nervousness."

Griffin is the third Marine to be tried and convicted of missing the movement of Battalion Landing Team 28, part of the 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit, on Oct. 18.

Griffin was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, reduction to private, forfeiture of $395 dollars per month for six months and confinement at hard labor for four months.

Wife Used To Hubby's Escapades

PITMAN, N.J. (UPI) — Blanche Creamer takes her husband's death-defying escapades in stride.

The Pitman mother of three is used to her husband defying the gods and sailing around the world with none of the navigational tools modern seaman consider a must.

But when Marvin Creamer, a 68-year-old retired geography professor, docks at National Park, Gloucester County, Sunday morning that will be his last journey in the style of ancient sailors, she says.

"This is going to be his last voyage because I don't want him to go anymore," the 63-year-old woman said in a telephone interview Saturday.

"There is a certain amount of uncertainty with no instruments. He lives with it and he likes it. He's out there to meet anything that's handed out," Mrs. Creamer said.

Creamer and the crew of the 36-foot Globe Star were making their way up the Delaware River from Greenwich Saturday to arrive in time for a 10 a.m. homecoming at National Park Sunday.

A weather-beaten Creamer docked briefly at the Greenwich Boat Works Friday to greet wellwishers and talk to reporters. Mrs. Creamer was there to greet him.

"He was in good spirits and he looked good. He was a little ruddy from the winds and the sun but he seemed full of energy. And so did the crew," she said.

The Globe Star crew included nine men, but he sailed with only two to four at a time.

Dr. Edward Gibson, 69, Cherry Hill, and David Lansdale, 67, Bryn Mawr, Pa., both old friends of Creamer, both crewed for the final stage. They were joined by 33-year-old Robert Watson, Bridgeton, an architect and amateur sailor.

Sunday, Creamer is to anchor at 9 a.m. in the Delaware off the New Jersey coast at National Park. From there he will be transported by boat to the shore, where about 7,000 people are expected to turnout for a homecoming celebration.

The retired Glassboro State College professor left National Park Dec. 21, 1982, and started his 31,000-mile journey by sailing around Cape Horn and through the Falkland Islands using the stars, winds and ocean currents as guide.

From there, Creamer battled winter gales to cross the Indian Ocean before reaching Tasmania, an island off the coast of Australia. He later traveled to Sydney, Australia; New Zealand; and the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic.

HELPS VETERANS ... Harriett Batchelor is blind and works for the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Dublin, Ga., as a counselor. (AP Laserphoto)

Blind Counselor Helps Vets Overcome Handicaps

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — Blindness hasn't stopped Harriett Batchelor from helping others overcome their own handicaps.

Ms. Batchelor, blind since birth, counsels emotionally withdrawn patients and recovering alcoholics at a residential care unit of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Dublin which houses about 330 patients.

As a psychology technician, the 28-year-old McRae native teaches and conducts sensitivity sessions and contacts community agencies. She also types patients' progress reports, using a typewriter and an opticon — a $5,000 device that lets her read letters and lines through vibrations picked up by the fingertips.

Patients and co-workers sometimes are skeptical of her at first, she said, but "if they have any feelings about me being inadequate, it's pretty much put to rest when they see me work."

Dublin VA officials think highly of Ms. Batchelor — so highly, in fact, that they've picked her as the facility's nominee for Outstanding Handicapped Federal Employee of the Year. She will compete with nominees from other VA centers and federal agencies.

"She's just motivated," said Bruce Hoyer, chief of voluntary services at the VA. "I see a lot of patients in that condition who won't do anything. She's just very well motivated."

Ms. Batchelor is an independent, determined, "very helpful person in rendering service to our veterans out here," said Dr. Henry Raymaker Jr., chief of the facility's psychology service.

"She is very sensitive to people with her handicap, and I think she has developed the capacity to really understand and sympathize," said Raymaker.

But Raymaker concedes he had to learn to curb his own overprotective inclinations toward her.

"I remember one patient told her, 'Well, I feel sorry for you,'" he said. "And she said, 'Don't feel sorry for me. You're the patient, and I'm here to help you.'"

Ms. Batchelor, who holds a degree in sociology from Georgia College in Milledgeville, began working at the Dublin VA center in 1979 as a patient representative while still a student.

After graduation in 1980, she returned to the VA in a temporary position and was hired for her current job in September 1981.

She is a graduate of the Georgia Academy for the Blind in Macon, an elementary and high school facility, where she learned to read Braille, type and use a cane. She also has an associate of arts degree from Middle Georgia College in Cochran, earned in 1977.

"I don't really think of me as being different," she said. "I don't remember when I became aware of being blind. It's like, when do you remember being aware that you could walk?"

Ms. Batchelor is a member of a VA employee swimming club and occasionally goes for rides with friends on a double-seater bicycle she owns. She lives with her mother in Dublin because "it's cheaper for both of us."

She now works 20 hours a week but hopes eventually to work full time at the VA or some other social services agency.

Ms. Batchelor said the biggest obstacle for the blind is not their own lack of vision, but sighted people who don't understand them.

"Sometimes, a person that's blind has problems dealing with the public because the public is not aware of what a blind person can do, because they've not been exposed to the blind," she said. "And when a blind person goes for a job interview, the employer sometimes is afraid of the blind person. He doesn't know all the blind person can do."

Goldwater Denies Claim

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., says he did not rebuke Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in a letter to Senate leaders last week.

"Nobody has rebuked him," Goldwater said in an interview published Saturday by The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Goldwater also denied any rebuke of Helms in an interview with the Winston-Salem Journal.

He told the News and Observer he does not believe Helms disclosed secret information from the committee's files in a May 8 speech accusing the Central Intelligence Agency and the State Department of covert involvement in El Salvador's elections.

In the speech, Helms said the two agencies secretly aided the presidential campaign of moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte, who defeated rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson in the May 6 election.

Goldwater said he disagreed with some of Helms' statements, but he did not believe Helms revealed classified information from the intelligence committee's files. Helms is not a member of the committee, but has access to its files as a Senator.

An inquiry by the committee staff seems to support claims by Helms that he received his information from radio broadcasts in El Salvador and from other sources, Goldwater said.

"Some of the material he had, we didn't have," Goldwater said.

Asked if he initially thought Helms had released classified information, Goldwater said, "Let me put it this way: we wondered where the hell he got it."

News reports last week said Goldwater and Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., the committee co-chairman, wrote a letter to Senate leaders rebuking Helms for disclosing classified information in violation of Senate rules.

Goldwater said he timing of the letter with Helms' remarks was "coincidental. He happened to make his speech about the same time we decided to write the letter."

He said the letter, which is classified, was an attempt to combat recent public disclosures about intelligence operations in Central America.

"This whole area of Central America has been one long, continuous series of leaks," Goldwater said. He told the Winston-Salem newspaper he feels some of the leaks originated from the White House.

"I don't mind telling you we think a lot of the leaks come from 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.," he said.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and Democratic leader Robert Byrd later advised senators to keep intelligence information secret, regardless of the source.

"If any senator receives information about alleged intelligence activities from sources other than the intelligence committee, he or she should bear in mind that such information may well be classified and the subject of the committee's oversight," Baker and Byrd said in a letter to senators.

Proposed Chowan River Site Worries Environmentalists

WINDSOR, N.C. (UPI) — Environmentalists are concerned about studies of a site on the Chowan River in Bertie County for a possible coal-fired generating plant.

A spokesman for Virginia Electric & Power Co. said the Bertie County is one of four being considered as possible sites for the power station to help meet electricity demands in the 1990s.

The study is preliminary and no decision has been made about building the plant, Vepco officials said.

Environmental studies are being conducted at a site in the Midway area, between Windsor and Edenton and at three sites in Virginia, in Mecklenburg, Greensville and Buckinham counties.

Preliminary studies of the North Carolina site indicate a power station with four coal-fired units would require the daily movement of 34 barge loads of coal and 17 tugboats on the Chowan River.

A.B. Whitley III of Hertford County, president of the North Carolina Wildlife Federation, said the organization has not taken a stand on the project but has been trying to stimulate public review of Vepco's plans.

Similar plants in other areas have caused environmental problems, he said.

"We're looking at possibly some devastating effects on the Chowan as far as fishing is concerned," Whitley said.

He said members of the federation are concerned about the possibility of spills in the river and the need for changes in drawbridge operations to accomodate the river traffic.

The federation also is concerned about two of the Virginia sites, in Mecklenburg and Greensville counties, because they would use water from Kerr Lake and Lake Gaston, Whitley said. The third Virginia site, in Buckingham County, would draw water from the James River.

In a letter to the Wildlife Federation last month, a Vepco official said the company's study in Bertie County includes 8,200 acres providing enough land for a station with four generating units. The letter said the plant would include two concrete pipes 3 feet in diameter and more than four miles long to move water from the river to cooling ponds.

Elaine Matthews, a spokeswoman for the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said the agency would be concerned about the siting of a power plant on the Chowan River.

"The Chowan River is a sensitive body of water," she said. "It has its problems and we would look at the siting of any major water user with concern."

Nicholas Parham, a Vepco spokesman in Roanoke Rapids, said the size of the plans has not been determined and a decision on construction is not expected until 1985 at the earliest.

The estimates on barge traffic and construction size are "extremely preliminary," he said, and studies at all four sites will determine the impacts of a coal-fired plant on the environment.

Parham said the company also is considering other options, including sites in coal-producing areas to reduce transportation costs; the use of alternative fuel sources such as wood, peat or hydroelectric power; and joint ventures with other companies.

Peach Crop Looking Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Some 45 million pounds of peaches should be harvested in North Carolina this year, a fourfold improvement over last year when late spring freezes killed much of the crop, state agriculture officials say.

But the bumper crop won't necessarily mean top prices for growers.

"The trouble is, all the other (Southern) states are doing equally well or better this year," said Jeff K. Morton, market specialist with the N.C. Department of Agriculture's horticultural crop section. "That might mean growers could have a problem getting a good market (price)."

The North Carolina peach crop hit a low in 1982, when only 2 million pounds were harvested because of cold weather. Last year, 10 million pounds were gathered.

This year, the weather has cooperated and the crop in nine Southern states is expected to be 783 million pounds, up from 297 million last year.

North Carolina farmers last year got an average price of 26.2 cents per pound of peaches last year.

No predictions have been made about this year's prices, said J. Mark Harris, statistician with the agriculture department's crop and livestock reporting section. Those estimates should begin as harvesting starts in June.

South Carolina, the leader of the nine Southern states that produce peaches, expects to harvest 480 million pounds compard with 95 million pounds last year.

Second-ranked Georgia expects its crop to be up 55 percent over last year's 155 million pounds. That would be about 240 million pounds.

North Carolina ranks third in the South and about sixth nationwide in the size of its peach crop.

Growers in North Carolina should begin harvesting their peaches in about three weeks, said Bill Reece, Montgomery County agricultural extension chairman.

"This is not only one of the best years for quantity, it's one of the best I've seen for quality," said Reece.

McNamara Recalls Vietnam Doubts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said during recent testimony that he became convinced the Vietnam War could not be won militarily shortly after U.S. combat troops were sent there in 1965.

McNamara said he felt at that time, three years before he resigned, that attempts to negotiate with North Vietnam should be started immediately.

He also said he thought the bombing of North Vietnam was largely ineffective, and that infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into the South was "substantially higher, by ... a factor of two or three or 10" than official reports indicated.

In a 444-page deposition released this week that may be the most detailed discussion to date of his role in Vietnam, McNamara said he eventually began to distrust military statistics on troop strength and casualties because they "just didn't add up."

But he said he did not belie.e Gen. William Westmoreland or any Pentagon or White House officials conspired to deceive him or President Johnson about the numbers.

McNamara, who served under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, has refused to publicly discuss the war since his resignation in 1968.

He was subpoenaed in late March by CBS to give a deposition in a libel suit brought by Westmoreland against CBS Inc., and was questioned for two days by CBS attorney David Boies.

At one point, McNamara stressed that he was being questioned against his wishes and said he was discussing the war only because he was required by law to do so. "I would quite frankly refuse to answer them if I thought I had a legal right to refuse them," he said.

President Pushes For Teenage Wage Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Saturday urged Congress to act on his bill to reduce the minimum wage for teenage summer job seekers, but he also called on employers to do what they can to avert the "national tragedy" of youth unemployment.

For the third time in a week, Reagan spoke out on behalf of a "youth employment opportunity wage" of $2.50 an hour for summer jobs instead of the $3.35 an hour minimum wage now in place.

In his weekly paid political radio address, delivered from Camp David, Md., Reagan said the proposal — dubbed by opponents a "subminimum wage" — would create much-needed jobs that would not otherwise exist because they "simply aren't worth that much in the marketplace."

Among the beneficiaries of such legislation, which died in Congress last year, would be fast-food restaurants, which hire tens of thousands of teenagers and must pay them $3.35 an hour.

After urging Congress to act, Reagan added an appeal to business leaders. "But I also want to request that all employers review their operations with the aim of creating more summer jobs. You, the business leaders of America can make a great difference, and the time to act is now."

Reagan recalled his own first job as a 14-year-old construction worker, wistfully noting that today's regulations prohibit that kind of work by one so young.

Planetarium Marks 35th Anniversary

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The story goes that Harvard astronomer Harlow Shapley once said North Carolinians were "the most astronomically ignorant people in all America."

And that's one reason why, in 1949, North Carolina got a planetarium.

The University of North Carolina's Morehead Planetarium is 35 years old this month, and in that time over 3 million paying customers — along with the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo astronauts — have had some of their "astronomical ignorance" alleviated there.

In its 35 years, Morehead has gone through a couple of major renovations, while outer space has gone from the realm of fantasy to the realm of everyday. Through changes past and future, the planetarium's function stays the same, said director Lee Shapiro: "talking about astronomy, and trying to explain astronomy to the general public."

Currently the museum is automating its Zeiss projector, the second phase of a wholesale updating of the star theater's hardware. Before automation, Shapiro said, it took two people just to operate all the controls involved in showing a star theater program. Now, it takes one person and a computer.

Shapiro said the planetarium is also doing more with exhibits than it has for a while. There are currently three on view.

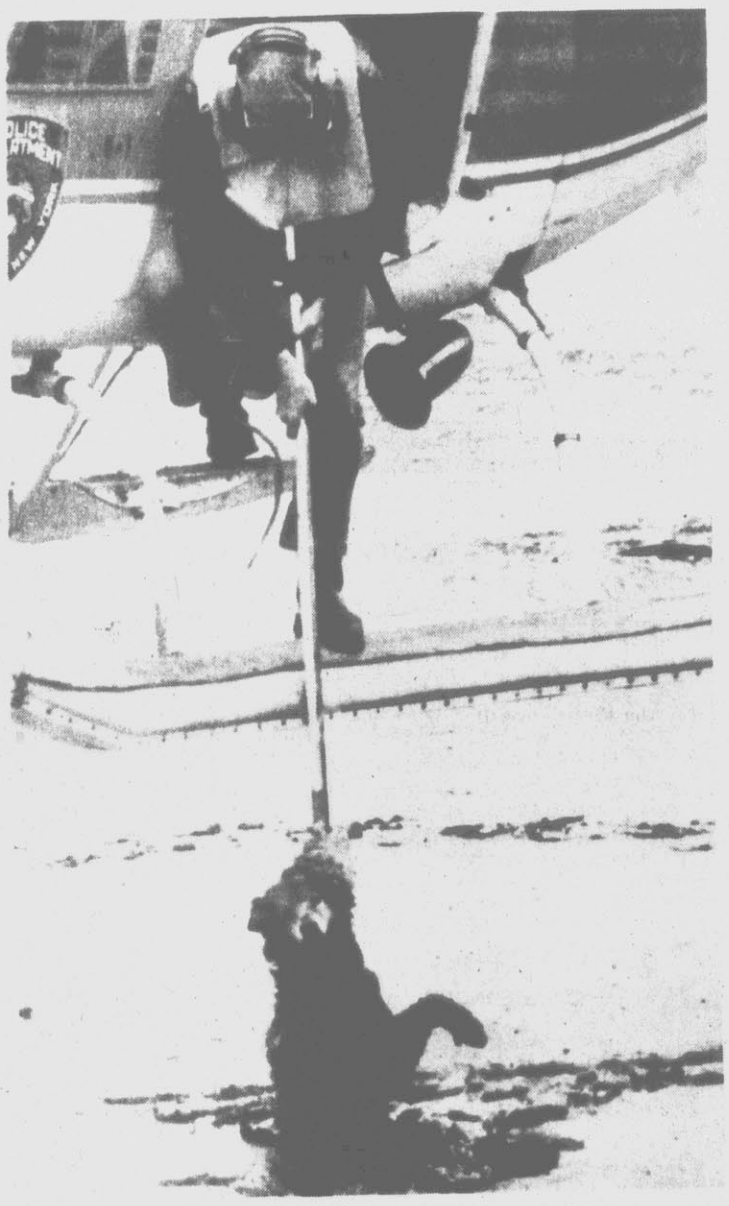

One of those features a set of astronomical instruments bought by UNC President Joseph Caldwell in 1824 — including a telescope whose lens was carried on a space shuttle flight by astronaut William Thornton. Another is on the May 30 solar eclipse, and the third is of a shuttle model and moon rock.

Morehead was the sixth planetarium built in the United States. It is named for John Motley Morehead, UNC class of 1891, who gave it to the university at a cost of $3 million.

Morehead, grandson of a North Carolina governor and a land speculator for whom Morehead City was named, had made a fortune in the chemical business. He wanted to give the university a building and thought of an astronomical observatory or a planetarium.

According to a 1949 account in the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel, astronomer Shapley had given a lecture at UNC, during which he made his remark about "astronomical ignorance." Whenever a celestial event, such as a comet's appearance, took place, Shapley said, letters poured in to the Harvard observatory from all over the country — even from South Carolina and Mississippi — but not from North Carolina.

Morehead had a meeting with Shapley, who pointed out that while an observatory is a scientific tool, a planetarium is an educational one for the general public. Then he said again, "North Carolinians are the most astronomically ignorant people in all America."

Burley Growers' Assessment Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burley tobacco farmers will have to pay an assessment of 9 cents per pound for all burley they sell this year if they don't want to lose federal price support benefits, says the Agriculture Department.

Everett Rank, administrator of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Thursday the 9-cent assessment "is necessary to cover projected government losses on the 1984 crop, plus a portion of the losses expected on the 1983 crop."

Under a "no-net-cost" program required by law, producers must pay fees to offset taxpayer costs of tobacco supports.

Mime Great Puts Students Through Paces

CHICAGO (AP) — Marcel Marceau, known best for his silence, was in a talkative mood this week about his International School of Pantomime in Paris.

The school's entire faculty and student body were flown here at the end of Marceau's U.S. tour.

Marceau, 61, said Monday his school makes sure that mime will live on when the master is no longer around to practice his craft.

"If we want mime, it must not be considered an art carried on the shoulders of one man," he said during an exhibition at the University of Chicago's International House.

Marceau's school teaches fencing, modern dance, drama and acrobatics because the mime must understand all facets of the arts, he said.

"They are learning the craft of the body," he said.

Classes and training are rigorous, with student dropout rates very high, Marceau explained.

Students attend from 25 countries and pay about $3,200 a year in tuition.

The challenge, Marceau said, is to instill the same artistic passion he employs.

Dancing Over The Line

Gate Dancer, with Angel Cordero Jr. up, wins the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Racetrack in Baltimore Saturday. Play On, ridden by Jean-Luc Samyn finished second. (AP Laserphoto)

Gate Dancer Leaves Field

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jockey Angel Cordero Jr. admits he could be a little crazy, but don't tell him there's anything wrong with Gate Dancer, the problem-plagued colt who won the $338,600 Preakness with a record-shattering performance Saturday.

"I think both of them (Cordero and Gate Dancer) are a little crazy and they ought to fit each other," trainer Jack Van Berg joked before the race.

Cordero fit Gate Dancer perfectly, guiding him straight as an arrow down the homestretch to a 1½-length victory over fast-closing Play On in 1:53 3-5, a Pimlico track record and the fastest of the 109 Preaknesses.

The impressive performance by the earmuffed colt, who has a habit of lugging in during the stretch, completely overshadowed Swale's bid to add a Preakness victory to his Kentucky Derby triumph and dashed hopes for a Triple Crown winner this year.

Swale was in contention until the final turn and then faded to finish seventh in a field of 10 three-year-olds.

The time clipped 2-5 of a second off the record set by Canonero II in 1971 and was faster than the times achieved by Preakness winners such as Secretariat, Affirmed, Spectacular Bid and Seattle Slew, who is the sire of Swale.

"Oh, I know I'm a little crazy," said the 41-year-old Cordero, "but a horse who lugs in ain't a crazy horse. I hate to see him get a bad reputation because he's a good horse.

"I'm looking forward to the Belmont if I can ride him because he can run all day."

Van Berg and owner Kenneth Opstein, a former sports writer for the now-defunct International News Service who never covered a Triple Crown race, said that if Gate Dancer came out of the race all right, he would run in the 1½-mile Belmont on June 11 at Belmont Park.

While Gate Dancer — fourth in the Kentucky Derby but disqualified and placed fifth for bothering a horse in the strech — behaved himself Saturday, so did Cordero, who has been the center of controversy in some past Preakness Stakes.

"It's a pleasure to be here without controversy," he said. "The last time I was here, I was in a whole lot of trouble."

Until Saturday, the last time Cordero was in the Preakness he wasn't even in contention, finishing 12th aboard Flying Nashua in 1981.

The race where he got into trouble was in 1980, when he won with Codex, after taking the horse extremely wide in the upper stretch

Area Teams Enter State Playoffs

Five area baseball teams and three softball teams will begin — or in one case has already begun — play in the state playoffs this week.

Greene Central's girls, winners of the Eastern Carolina Conference, opened play in the 3A/4A playoffs Friday with a 16-4 win over West Columbus.

Elsewhere, Rose High School's Rampants were co-champs of the Big East Conference and drew the number one seeding for the league in the 4-A playoffs. Williamston, Conley and Farmville Central all qualified in the 3-A ranks, while Jamesville qualified in the 1-A division.

In softball, Williamston and Jamesville also gained berths, the Lady Tigers in the 3A/4A and the Lady Bullets in the 1A/2A.

Rose will open play on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Scotland County (Laurinburg). Scotland captured the championship of the Southeastern Conference. The winner moves on to face the winner of the Cap Eight champ-Southeastern runner-up game. That will be played later in the week. If Rose wins, it would again have to travel.

In the entire playoff bracket, Rose would play at home only once — in the third round — should it continue play.

Williamston, runner-up in the Northeastern Conference, travels to Northwest Halifax Tuesday at 4 p.m. Northeast was the winner in the Roanoke River Conference. The winner plays the surivor of the Roanoke Rapids-Roanoke River runner-up game. Williamston would host that game should it win — unless Roanoke Rapids wins, then the Jackets would travel.

D.H. Conley, winner of the Coastal Conference, meets Eastern Carolina Conference runner-up Farmville Central on Monday at 8 p.m. at Conley. The winner there advances to face the winner of the C.B. Aycock (ECC champ)-North Lenoir (Coastal runner-up) game. Conley would host that second round game, should it win and Aycock lose, otherwise it would be either at Aycock or North Lenoir.

The two survivors of all those games then meet early next week at the Coastal-ECC survivor's field. The winner there also hosts the next round, and, if successful there, the state finals.

Jamesville, winner of the Tobacco Belt Conference, has a first round bye in the tournament. The Bullets will host the winner of the Carolina

'New' Pirate Outfielder Earns Share Of Limelight

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Take a college pitcher turned outfielder who only had eight hits in 41 at bats for a .195 average as a junior a year ago, and naturally you'd expect him to to bat over .300 and earn most valuable player honors at the conference tournament.

Most people would agree that's an unreasonable expectation, but not East Carolina University right fielder Mike Williams. The former Rose High School hurler was batting .318 going into the 1984 ECAC-South baseball tournament and netted the MVP selection as he led the Pirates to the title.

In the championship game against host James Madison, Williams drove in four runs with three hits as the Pirates took the title with a 9-5 victory. ECU was forced into the loser's bracket when Georgetown won the opener 4-1, but Williams accounted for that run with a solo homer.

Was Williams' rise from an seldom-used reliever to a tourney MVP a surprise?

"Very much so," ECU Coach Hal Baird said. "One of the biggest factors of our success was that Mike ended his career here on a positive note. He had not had a whole lot of playing time till this year, but he came through when we needed him.

"We had an awefully young team. We started seven players on a daily basis that hadn't played here before. We were surprised with the number of wins, but this team is a lot like the 1982 team in that there progress continued throughout the year. This year they were very determined."

Williams' determination is one of the best examples.

After posting ERAs of 7.50 and 5.20 in just 33 innings of 11 games over two seasons, Williams decided to switch to outfield during summer baseball.

"I had struggled with control problems all the way back to high school," Williams said. "Then in summer baseball, we were a little short-handed and coach (Gary) Overton started playing us at other positions. He asked if I might play outfield.

"I had played a little in high school and (American) Legion ball, but there's a lot of little things you have to know. Coach 'O' helped me with that a lot."

But the transition was gradual, as Williams played in just 19 out of 39 games in 1983 and compiled a mediocre .195 batting average.

"I was glad (1983) wasn't my last year here," Williams said. "The redshirt year (1982) gave me another year.

"I really didn't know what to expect; I did want to hit over .300, but I didn't know what I was capable of."

The Pirates took the long route through the ECAC-South tourney field after losing to Georgetown. ECU then beat LaSalle, nipped Georgetown 6-5 and topped JMU 3-1 to force the fifth game. Sophomore Winfred Johnson came back after two days rest to throw his second complete game of the tournament as ECU advanced to the NCAA regionals.

"We started off real slow at the tournament," Williams said. "We had about a four-day layoff after exams, and we were not swinging the bats well. Then our hits started falling and our defense picked up.

"We still don't know where we're going as far as the regionals, but I think we've got as good a chance of advancing as anybody. We've got good pitching depth, and our defense comes through for us — we proved that at the (ECAC-South) tournament.

"We had our backs to the wall."

When the 1984 season finally comes to an end, Williams intends to utilize his business management degree. Baseball, after all, is still a game.

"I'm not looking for anything after school as far as baseball is concerned," Williams said. "Right now, we just want to keep on going as long as it's a reality."

Rutherford Ends Indy Struggle

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, a three-time winner who missed the race last May after he was injured in a crash during practice, ended an uphill battle Saturday when he qualified for the May 27 Indianapolis 500 while spewing smoke from the engine of his streaking March race car.

Driving a car purchased hours earlier by fellow Texan A.J. Foyt and Foyt's longtime sponsor Jim Gilmore, Rutherford bumped first-week qualifier Chris Kneifel from the tentative 33-car starting field. He became the 33rd qualifier to finish a four-lap, 10-mile run with an average of more than 200 mph, assuring that the 68th version of the Indy classic will be the first event in auto racing history with an entire starting field over that once-magical mark.

Kneifel had qualified his Primus race car a week earlier at 199.831.

Time trials conclude Sunday with non-qualified cars attempting to bump the slowest qualified cars out of the lineup for the $2.5 million race. However, the National Weather Service forecast an 80 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Rutherford's speed was good for a tentative spot on the inside of the 11th and last row.

"What a month. What a month. Thank God for Jim Gilmore and A.J. Foyt," said the 46-year-old Rutherford, who left one team last week before getting a chance with the four-time Indy winner Foyt. "They went to bat for me. They went to work quite vigorously. It (the car) is still not quite right, but A.J. said we had one shot today, so let's go for it."

Rutherford said the smoke, which began spouting from the rear of the car during the second lap, probably was caused by overheating.

"A.J. decided to plug the front of the car to see if we could get more speed," the driver explained. "It got a little hot. I was crossing my fingers the last lap and a half because I could smell it in the cockpit. And when you smell it, you're in trouble."

Following Rutherford's run, the slowest car remaining in the provisional field is the 1983 March-Cosworth qualified last weekend by Canadian rookie Jacques Villeneuve at 200.013. Villeneuve, who suffered a concussion in a crash during practice Thursday as he worked on his backup car, remains an uncertain starter even if the car stays in the lineup.

Scott Brayton, driving a March 84C powered by an experimental Buick V6 engine, came back from two first-week crashes to place his car into the lineup with an average of 203.637 mph. That was the fastest of the seven drivers who completed qualification runs Saturday.

Brayton, a 25-year-old veteran of two previous Indy starts, crashed his backup car in practice last week, then hit the wall in his primary car during a qualification attempt last Saturday.

Danny Sullivan qualified Saturday for the second time this year after the Shierson Racing team withdrew the car that was the slowest among 28 first-week qualifiers.

Sullivan, who had put his team's DSR1 race car into the tentative lineup last Saturday at 196.044, came up this week with a much more solid 203.567 in the team's new Lola T-800. The car, an exact copy of the one placed in the second row last weekend by Mario Andretti at 207.467, was not delivered to the Shierson team until last Saturday morning and did not get onto the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 2½-mile oval until Wednesday.

"It took a lot of money and effort to make this happen," said Sullivan, who made his Indy debut in 1982 and was a regular in Formula One racing last year. "You have to give Doug (Shierson) a lot of credit, and the guys on the crew did three or four weeks of work in four days."

Kevin Cogan, whose teammate Michael Chandler is in the hospital recovering from a head injury suffered in a crash here on May 11, put an exact replica of that Pontiac-powered Eagle into the race at 203.632.

Cogan started the month in a new Ligier that he was never able to drive above 185 before it was withdrawn.

Henderson Sparks Rally, Celtics Take 3-0 Edge

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Boston guard Gerald Henderson wasn't sure if he was coming or going in the first half against the Milwaukee Bucks. But when he finally got going, he took the Celtics with him.

Henderson sparked a third-quarter rally with 11 points and Larry Bird scored 11 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter to lift Boston to a 109-100 victory over the Bucks Saturday in their National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Celtics now hold a commanding 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals. The fourth game will be played here Monday.

"In the first half, I couldn't go left or right," said Henderson, who went scoreless the first two periods. "In fact, I couldn't go at all. After halftime, I felt that I had to make things happen and be a spark to get this club going."

Milwaukee, with Sidney Moncrief scoring 13 points and Mike Dunleavy and Junior Bridgeman 12 apiece, took a 63-50 lead at halftime.

But the Celtics charged back, going on a 24-10 run to take a 74-73 lead with 4:03 left in the third quarter. Henderson hit four baskets during the spurt.

"We applied the defensive pressure and that pretty much got us going," Henderson said of the Celtics' turnaround. "We knew we had to come out and be aggressive because they surely were. Our first break wasn't very good in the first half. In the second half we had to cut down on the turnovers."

Milwaukee recovered to take an 85-82 lead at the end of the period with Paul Mokeski scoring six points in the final two minutes.

"It hurt us emotionally when we lost our 15-point lead in the third quarter," said Mokeski. "We had some turnovers, some missed shots which Boston would turn into baskets."

After Mokeski opened the fourth quarter with a rebound basket, Bird scored five straight points, two coming off illegal defense calls, to pull Boston even at 87-87.

Baskets by Bob Lanier and Marques Johnson gave Milwaukee a 91-87 lead with 8:44 to go. The Celtics then scored 10 straight points, with Bird hitting two baskets.

Corcoran Embarassed By Attention

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies pinch-hitter Tim Corcoran seemed a little embarrassed over all the attention he hit a three-run double to lead the Phils to a 6-2 win over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Corcoran is 5 for 12 as a pinch-hitter, but he had no RBI's until his bases loaded blast off reliever Frank Williams cracked a 2-2 tie in a four-run seventh.

Williams replaced loser Renie Martin, 1-1 and walked Mike Schmidt with one out to load the bases. He got ahead 0-2 on Corcoran before the pinch-hitter grounded a 3-2 pitch up the first base line and into the rightfield corner.

"How an I supposed to act? This stuff is new to me," Corcoran said after the Phillies streaked to their eighth straight victory.

"With two strikes I was just thinking about hitting the ball up the middle on 3-2. I was looking for something out over the plate and it happened to be inside, Corcoran added."

Corcoran's blow made a winner of John Denny, 4-3, who helped himself with two singles and two runs scored. Denny, the league leader with a 1.65 ERA was lifted after six innings because of tightness in his forearm.

The Phillies scored in the third when Samuel singled, stole second and scored on a single by Hayes. Denny singled and eventually scored on Schmidt's sacrifice fly in the fifth.

The Giants scored in the fourth on Chili Davis' leadoff homer and added an unearned run in the fifth.

Greg Minton started for the Giants, his first start after 346 relief appearances since 1977. Minton went into the fifth inning, allowing six hits and two earned runs.

Chicago 5
Houston 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Bowa decided to listen to his wife, Sheena, who told him to "go out and relax. You've been doing it for 15 years and you can still do it."

Bowa responded with three hits Saturday, including a double which triggered a two-run seventh-inning rally that led the first-place Chicago Cubs to a 5-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

"I was really depressed yesterday," said Bowa, who went to the plate three times with runners in scoring position Friday but failed to produce. "I decided to listen to her and let it fly.

"I've been doing the job defensively but I've been a real load on offense," the shortstop said. "I've always been a slow starter and I hope this will get me going.

"You know, when you're 38 and you don't do the job, people say you can't play anymore," said Bowa, who stole a base, advanced to third twice on fly balls and had six chances in the field "but if you're 23, they say you're just in a slump.

"I've been fortunate because the other guys have been picking me up and we've been winning," said Bowa, who felt his leadoff double in the seventh inning "might have gone out if the wind had been blowing you like yesterday."

Bowa, who had doubled and singled earlier, doubled off starter Bob Knepper and scored the tying run when pinch-hitter Richie Hebner greeted reliever and loser Bill Dawley, 2-3, with a double.

Bob Dernier then laid down a sacrifice bunt and when Dawley threw the ball past second baseman Bill Doran, who was covering first, and into the Houston bullpen, Hebner scored the lead run.

Rick Reuschel, 1-1, was the winner and Lee Smith pitched the final two innings to earn his seventh save.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the first on a single by Craig Reynolds, a double by Jose Cruz, a sacrifice fly by Jerry Mumphrey and a run-scoring single by Enos Cabell.

The Cubs scored a run in the first on a walk to Dernier, a single by Ryne Sandberg and Gary Matthews' fielder's choice. Jody Davis singled in the second, went to third on Bowa's double and scored on a sacrifice fly by Reuschel.

Chicago took a 3-2 lead in the third on consecutive doubles by Matthews and Leon Durham but the Astros came back with two runs in the fourth on a single by Mumphrey, a double by Cabell, a run-scoring single by Ray Knight and a sacrifice fly by Harry Spilman.

to intimidate and brush the filly Genuine Risk, the Kentucky Derby winner.

The stewards disallowed the foul claim against Cordero and Codex and a storm of protest broke out. Nobody had any complaints against Cordero in the 109th Preakness.

He laid sixth after the first half-mile, then moved Gate Dancer into fourth after three-quarters. Then, on the final turn, Gate Dancer, wearing purple earmuffs and a yellow shadowroll, moved up to challenge pace-setting Fight Over.

When they turned for home, Cordero sent Gate Dancer past Fight Over on the outside and he had plenty left to withstand the late charge of Play On, who was ridden by Jean-Luc Samyn.

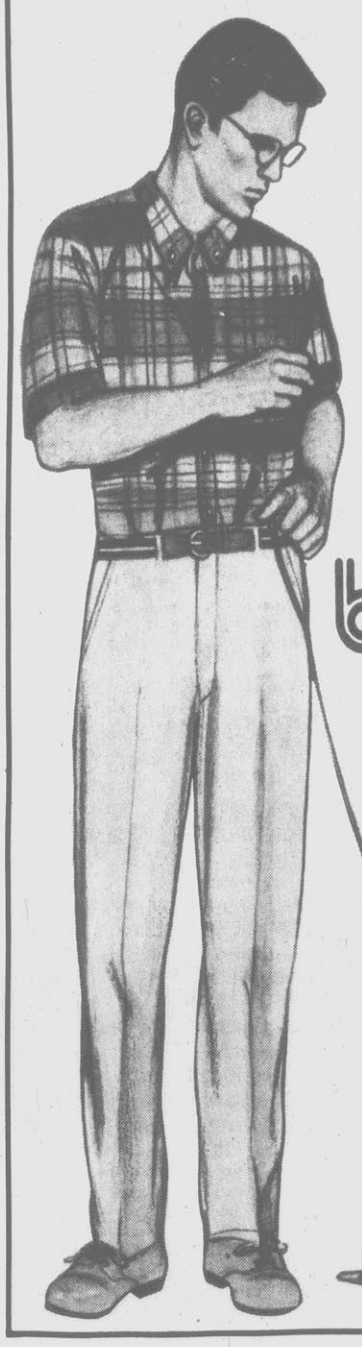

Fight Over, a supplemental nominee for $10,000, held on for third, three-quarters of a length ahead of Taylor's Special after fractions of 22 2-5 for the quarter mile, 45 4-5 for the half, 1:09 4-5 for three quarters and 1:34 2-5 for the mile. It was the fastest mile ever run at Pimlico, 2-5 of a second faster than the mile time posted by Seattle Slew when he won the 1977 Preakness en route to the Triple Crown.

Completing the order of finish after Fight Over was Taylor's Special, Pine Circle, Wind Flyer, Swale, Raja's Shark, Pac Solider and S.S. Hot Sauce.

Each starter carried 126 pounds.

The 11th base on balls of the game by the Carroll & Associates pitching staff forced across the winning run in the sixth, as Pepsi Cola took an 8-7 victory Saturday in Tar Heel Little League baseball action.

Pepsi was held without a hit in the game, but walks and errors allowed seven runs to score in the fifth.

Joel Daughtry led C&A with two hits in three at bats including a solo homer, while Chad Adams went 2-3.

Zahn's 'Junk' Pitches Top Knuckler

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a duel a different sort, Geoff Zahn's ortment of junk pitches against knuckleball of Phil Niekro.

With the help of some timely ting by Brian Downing, who had RBIs, Zahn won the slow-motion tle Saturday as the California gels defeated the New York nkees 4-0.

"When you go out there, any cher wants to throw a no-hitter, a utout," said Zahn, 5-3, who ered his ERA to 2.24. He scat- ed nine hits, struck out two and lked one.

"You know you're not going to get ot of runs off a guy like Niekro, so just try to keep them close," nn said. "I can't do anything out our hitting."

Downing was the one who did nething about the Angels' hitting. sparked a three-run seventh ing off Niekro with an RBI- uble, then drove in another run h a single in the eighth to chase 45-year-old Yankee right-hander.

The loss was only the second in ht decisions for Niekro, both ning when the Yankees were shut , something that has happened e times this season.

"The other guy pitched a great me," Niekro said. "We had a ple of chances, but he still made pitches when he had to. That's difference. I didn't."

Gutsy Play

Despite giving up the four runs — three of which were earned — Niekro still leads the American League with an ERA of 1.32.

The Angels added a run in the eighth when DeCinces doubled with one out and scored on a single by Downing that knocked Niekro out the game

The Yankees loaded the bases twice against Zahn with one out, in the third and fifth innings.

In the third, Zahn escaped damage when Dave Winfield popped up and Don Baylor hit into a forceout. In the fifth, Baylor hit into a double play to kill the threat.

The victory was the first at Yankee Stadium for Zahn since April 29, 1982, when he also shut out the Yankees.

Niekro had allowed only four hits and had been helped by three double plays when California started its rally. Doug DeCinces reached on an error by shortstop Andre Robertson and scored from first when Downing guided a Niekro knuckle ball into the gap in right center for a double.

Rob Wilfong followed with a triple to score Downing, and Wilfong scored on a sacrifice fly by Ron Jackson.

Toronto.....1

TORONTO (AP) — Every two weeks, Jim Gott and the boys get together for a little shutout baseball at Exhibition Stadium.

Exactly two weeks after he blanked the Kansas City Royals over seven innings, Gott took the mound for Toronto on Saturday and threw a three-hit shutout over 6 2-3 innings. With relief help from Roy Lee Jackson, Bryan Clark and Dennis Lam, he outdueled Tom Seaver as the Blue Jays downed the Chicago White Sox 1-0 in American League baseball action.

"We'll have to get together more often, make this more of a regular thing," Gott said after the victory.

The Toronto right-hander, the fifth starter in the Jays' rotation, was scheduled to start last Sunday at Cleveland, but was rained out. He missed another start earlier this year when he came down with the flu.

"I think it (the layoff) showed in the second and third innings," said Gott, who struck out four and walked three to even his record at 2-2. "I was pretty rusty, but I just tried to stay ahead of the hitters and go as hard as I could for as long as I could."

Dave Collins delivered what proved to be the winning run in the third inning with a single to left field in the third.

"I think with the pitching staffs these two clubs have you can expect to see a lot of low-scoring games," said Collins, who collected his second winning run batted in in as many days.

Lamp tossed the ninth inning and earned his seventh save of the season as the Jays extended their win streak to five games and set a club record with their seventh straight victory at home.

Seaver, 4-3, went all the way for Chicago, allowing only six hits and walking none. He struck out four batters, leaving him three shy of 3,300 for his career.

Damaso Garcia, stranded at third in the first inning after he doubled and was sacrificed to third, stroked a lead-off single in the third and promptly stole his league-leading 19th base. Collins then drilled his run-scoring single to left.

The three Toronto pitchers never allowed a runner to third and stranded 10 White Sox baserunners. Gott was removed after Vance Law doubled with two out in the seventh.

In the sixth, Collins led off for Toronto with a triple to right-center, but was stranded as Seaver got Lloyd Moseby on a ground ball and struck out Willie Upshaw and Willie Aikens.

Martin Testimony Expected In Munson Plane Crash Suit

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Both sides a $42 million negligence suit over airplane-crash death of baseball cher Thurman Munson say their es will be helped by the testimo- of former New York Yankees nager Billy Martin.

n a lawsuit scheduled to go to l Monday in U.S. District Court, nson's widow, Diane, alleges that sna Aircraft Co. and Flight ety International Inc. were ligent in not adequately training nson to fly the plane he crashed.

Munson was killed Aug. 2, 1979, n his twin-engine Cessna Cita- jet crashed about 1,000 feet rt of the Akron-Canton Airport. he time of his death Munson was tain of the Yankees.

Mrs. Munson's lawyer, Eugene Okey, maintained Cessna offered Munson a special deal on lessons if he took them from Flight Safety, a flying school.

But instead of requiring him to attend a two-week Flight Safety school in Kansas, Flight Safety assigned Munson "a so-called traveling instructor to go on the road to train Munson to fly the airplane between ballgames," Okey said.

The lessons ended two weeks before the accident.

"Thurman Munson is the one and only guy they ever trained in that fashion," Okey alleged.

The National Transportation Safety Board ruled in April 1980 that Munson made several mistakes when he attempted to land the aircraft. He was flying too slowly, following a non-standard flight pattern, forgot to extend his wing flaps and failed to use a pilot checklist, the board said.

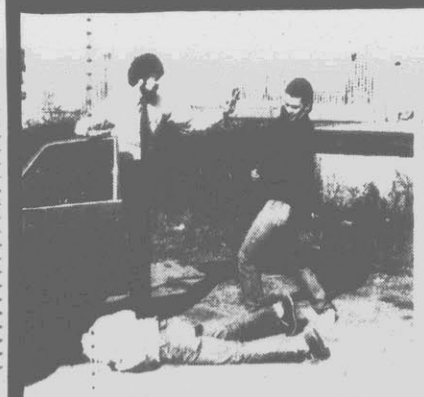

Okey said Martin's deposition, videotaped in California two weeks ago, would be beneficial to his case because Martin "testified that Munson was a major league catcher under great pressure."

Martin, Okey said, questioned the judgment of having Munson learn to fly a sophisticated twin-engine plane during the baseball season.

But Cessna's attorney, Michael Gallagher, said Martin's testimony would aid the defense.

Stewart's Record Effort Earns Lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Payne Stewart's record-setting effort not only staked him to a lead but also brought to the fore two intangible factors going into Sunday's final round of the $500,000 Colonial National National Invitation Tournament.

Stewart, a winner in each of his last two seasons, birdied the final hole to finish off a 6-under-par 64 Saturday and:

•1, set a record for this old tournament with a 54-hole total of 198 — 12 under par on the respected Colonial Country Club course and two shots better than it's ever been played before,

•2, completed three rounds better than anyone has played them on the PGA Tour this season, and

•3, took a two-shot lead over Peter Jacobsen.

On a less positive note, it revived memories of the San Diego Open, about three months ago, when Stewart — playing almost as well as he is right now — forged a one-stroke lead at the end of 54 holes, then ballooned to a 78 in Sunday's round.

"I'm playing well now, like I was through three rounds at San Diego. I'm putting well, and I'm really happy with the way I'm striking the ball. I feel very comfortable.

"Hopefully, that will continue tomorrow."

If it does, Stewart will wipe away the haunting memory of that San Diego collapse when, he said, "the wheels just came off. I try not to think about it."

The other intangible involves a promise Jacobsen made to his father on television after he'd birdied the 18th hole, a birdie that completed a 65 and left him within striking distance at 200.

He told the national television audience he would try to win the tournament for his father. Later, off camera, he said his father is hospitalized with cancer, which was discovered only a week ago.

And the promise became more firm. The word "try" was not involved.

"I'm going to win it for him.

"Payne is playing well. I can't figure him to back up, shoot anything over 70. It may take a round of 65 for me to do it. But I'm going to win it for him."

Dr. Gil Morgan, the non-practicing optometrist who held the second round lead, matched par 70 in the occasional drizzle and drifted back to third at 203.

Steady Tom Kite, a top-10 finisher in his last four starts, was alone at 206 after a solid, no-bogey round of 67.

"What's going on here?" Kite asked. "For the first couple of months, every tournament was decided by one shot or in a playoff.

White Takes LPGA Lead

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Former champion Donna White, playing what she described as an "erratic" second round, took a one-stroke lead Saturday over defending champion Pat Bradley when she fired an even-par 73 at the $175,000 LPGA Chrysler-Plymouth Charity Classic.

"I'm really surprised to shoot even-par and be right up there," said White, the 1980 champion here at the par-73, 6,389-yard Upper Montclair Country Club course.

White, who began the day one stroke off the lead after a 5-under-par 68 on the opening round Friday, completed the first 36 holes of the 54-hole event at 5-under 141.

White offset four bogeys with four birdies on the second round, which began in the morning with rain showers and ended with sunshine in the late afternoon.

"I guess you can describe it as erratic or just hanging in there," White said of her equal number of birdies and bogeys.

White said she would have to shoot "at least" under-par on the final round Sunday to capture the tournament.

Bradley, the leading money-winner on the tour this year even though she has not won, was right behind White at 4-under 142 after firing a 73 Saturday.

"The whole key in a nutshell was not capitalizing on birdie chances," said Bradley, who had two birdies and a double bogey on the second round. "I had a lot of chances (for birdies), but just burnt the edges.

"I didn't capitalize on my putting," added Bradley, who has had three second-place finishes and two thirds in tournaments this year. "It kept me back in the back and not out in front."

First-round leader Juli Inkster, the tour's leading candidate for rookie of the year, lost five strokes with a 78 Saturday and finished the first 36 holes at 1-under 145.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin, who started the day at even-par 73, made five birdies in a row on the back nine to go 6-under. But her bid for the lead disappeared when she triple-bogeyed the par-3, 182-yard 17th hole and finished at 3-under 70 for a 36-hole total of 143.

Laura Cole and Barb Bunkowsky also were two shots off the lead at 143. Cole shot 71, while Bunkowsky fired 72.

Vicki Fergon was three shots behind White at 71—144.

Marlene Floyd had the best score on the second round, fashioning a 4-under 69 to take a 146 total into the final 18 holes. Golfers who shot a two-round total over 155 did not qualify for the final round.

Sun Devils Top UNC In NCAA Tourney

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Dave Graybill picked up his eighth win against no defeats in relieving starter Chris Beasley as top-ranked Arizona State University took the rubber match of a three-game series with fourth-ranked North Carolina at Tempe Diablo Stadium Saturday, 9-6.

The Sun Devils picked up two runs in the first and never trailed, although Norrh Carolina tied the game in the fourth on a run-scoring single by Glen Liacouras.

Arizona State went ahead in the fifth when Steve Murray scored on a single by Todd Brown. Murray added a solo homerun, his fourth of the season, in the seventh inning.

Arizona State scored three more runs on the strength of a balk, two wild pitches and a run-scoring single by Oddibe McDowell.

North Carolina scored three runs in the second inning on a run-scoring single by Dezy Bell, a run-scoring single by Liacouras and a run-scoring single by B.J. Surhoff. Their final two runs came in the eighth when a double by Todd Wilkinson scored Jeff Hubbard, who had doubled, and Wilkinson scored on a single by Matt Merullo.

Arizona State is now 50-18. North Carolina is 43-11.

Rudd Posts Record Time In Bud 500 Qualifying

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Ricky Rudd posted his record time on the board early Saturday and no one could match it as he won the pole position for Sunday's Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Rudd, who was the second qualifier on the track, recorded a time of 140.807 mph, breaking the track record of 139.616 set last year by Joe Ruttman. It was the third time Rudd has won the pole position this year.

Bobby Allison, the all-time winningest driver at Dover Downs and winner of the last two years' races, qualified in 12th position. The race was previously known as the Mason-Dixon 500.

Starting alongside Rudd in the front row will be Bill Elliott, who was one of six drivers to surpass the previous track record. Elliott's time was 140.652 mph while Harry Gant also broke the 140-mph barrier with a time of 140.209. Starting fourth will be Terry LaBonte, who came in at 139.838.

"I thought we would have the advantage qualifying early, because the sun was just starting to come out after we qualified," said Rudd, the Chesapeake, Va., native who is driving the Wrangler Jeans Ford this year.

"I thought the track would heat up and we'd be in pretty good shape, but then the sun went back in behind the clouds and it actually got cooler than it was earlier. But usually, it is an advantage to qualify here early in the morning," Rudd said.

It was the third time Rudd has won the pole position at Dover Downs, but he has yet to win a race at the Monster Mile. Rudd's best finish has been fifth in both the Mason-Dixon 500 and the CRC Chemicals 500, both in 1981.

"I can't remember finishing a race here in a long time," said Rudd, who is currently third in the Winston Cup point standings behind Darrell Waltrip and LaBonte.

The rest of the starting lineup includes Richard Petty, fifth; Waltrip, sixth; Geoff Bodine, seventh; Lake Speed, eighth; Dave Marcis, ninth; and Buddy Baker, 10th.

Rudd was one of several drivers who switched teams during the past season after driving the Piedmont Airlines' Chevrolet in 1983. So far, the change has been good for the 27-year-old Rudd, who finished ninth in the Winston Cup point race a year ago. Earlier this year, he won the Miller High Life 400 at Richmond, Va.

"We felt like we should be sitting here right now with three victories," Rudd added. "We ran well both at Wilkes Boro (N.C.) and at Martinsville (Va.) up to the checkered flag."

Waugh Takes First At East Regional

WILSON — William Waugh of Rose High School took first place in the shot put at the Eastern Regional Track and Field Championships held at Wilson Fike Friday.

Waugh won with a toss of 56-11½, while Roswell Streeter of Rose was fourth in the high jump with a leap of 6-6.

Farmville Central's Lisa Lang took fourth in the 200 meters with a time of 25.44.

The top four finishers in each event qualify for the state meet to be held at North Carolina State University next week.

Area Playoff Teams...

Conference and Tri-County Conference runners-up game late next week, time and date to be decided. Jamesville would have to travel for the third round game, but would host the state finals, if it continued that far.

In the softball playoffs, Jamesville's girls won the Tobacco Belt title and will play host to Currituck, the Albemarle runner-up, in the first round. Bath and Manteo play in the other part of the bracket. If Bath and Jamesville both win the next game would be at Jamesville. However, Jamesville would travel for the next three games, if successful, if Manteo wins. Jamesville would, however, be the state tourney host, if it reaches the finals.

A Greene Central victory yesterday would advance the Lady Rams into the next round, on the road against the Mideastern champ or the Coastal runner-up.

The only other area team in the 3A/4A playoffs is Williamston, which finished second in the Northeastern. It meets the Big East champ, Northern Nash, Monday at 5 p.m. The winner advances to face the Roanoke River champion in the second round in a home game.

Further pairings will be announced as available and applicable.

Teufel's Homer Leads 8-3 Twins' Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When they played baseball for Clemson University, Tim Teufel and Mike Brown were good friends, but that ends once Teufel steps into the batter's box for the Minnesota Twins these days.

"We were friends and we pull for each other, but you can't think about friendships," said Teufel, who belted a home run and RBI single off his former college teammate in the Twins' 8-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox Friday night.

Teufel extended his hitting streak to a club-high 11 games with his first-inning home run off Brown, with whom he played in 1979 and 1980, when Clemson went to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

Mike Smithson, who pitched in the Red Sox farm system for six years, hurled a six-hitter for his sixth victory.

"Those guys are personal friends and you want them to do well," said Smithson, who once shared a room with Red Sox leadoff man Wade Boggs. "But when you go out on the mound, you have to forget all about that."

In other American League action, it was Detroit 8, Oakland 4 in a game called in the sixth inning by rain; Toronto 4, Chicago 3; California 4, New York 3 in 10 innings; Baltimore 4, Seattle 1; Texas 2, Kansas City 1 and Cleveland 8, Milwaukee 4.

The Twins took a 5-0 lead in the first inning and never trailed against Brown.Teufel started the first-inning flurry with his fifth home run. Tom Brunansky later doubled home three runs and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly.

Brown settled down after his rocky start and retired 11 straight batters before running into problems in the fifth, when Teufel singled home a run.

Jim Rice slugged a homer for the Red Sox in the sixth to cut the Twins lead to 6-3 at that point.

Tigers 8, A's 4

Kirk Gibson's bases-loaded single drove in two runs during a five-run first inning as the red-hot Tigers beat Oakland in a rain-shortened game and improved their record to 30-5.

Dan Petry, 6-1, allowed seven hits, walking two and striking out four in the 5 1-3 innings that the game lasted.

"I was looking for a curve or a fastball," Gibson said of his game-winning hit off Bill Krueger, 1-1. "But after I got behind 0-2, I had to fight off a couple of pitches. I got lucky and fouled a couple back. Then I got the pitch I was looking for and just went with it."

Blue Jays 4, White Sox 3

Dave Collins broke a sixth-inning tie with a double and Damaso Garcia collected three hits, stole two bases and scored a run to spark Toronto over Chicago.

Alfredo Griffin beat out a bunt to lead off the Toronto sixth and took second on a groundout. Collins then doubled for the winning run.

Jim Clancy, 3-3, was the winner, going 6 and 2-3 innings, walking three and striking out four.

Angels 4, Yankees 3

Doug DeCinces homered to lead off the 10th and boost California over New York. DeCinces' seventh homer of the season came on the first pitch from Yankee reliever Jay Howell, 1-2, and made a winner of right-hander reliever Luis Sanchez, 4-1.

The Yankees had tied the score 3-3 with two out in the ninth on Butch Wynegar's two-run single off Sanchez, who had come on in relief of Tommy John after the left-hander had loaded the bases with two out.

Orioles 4, Mariners 1

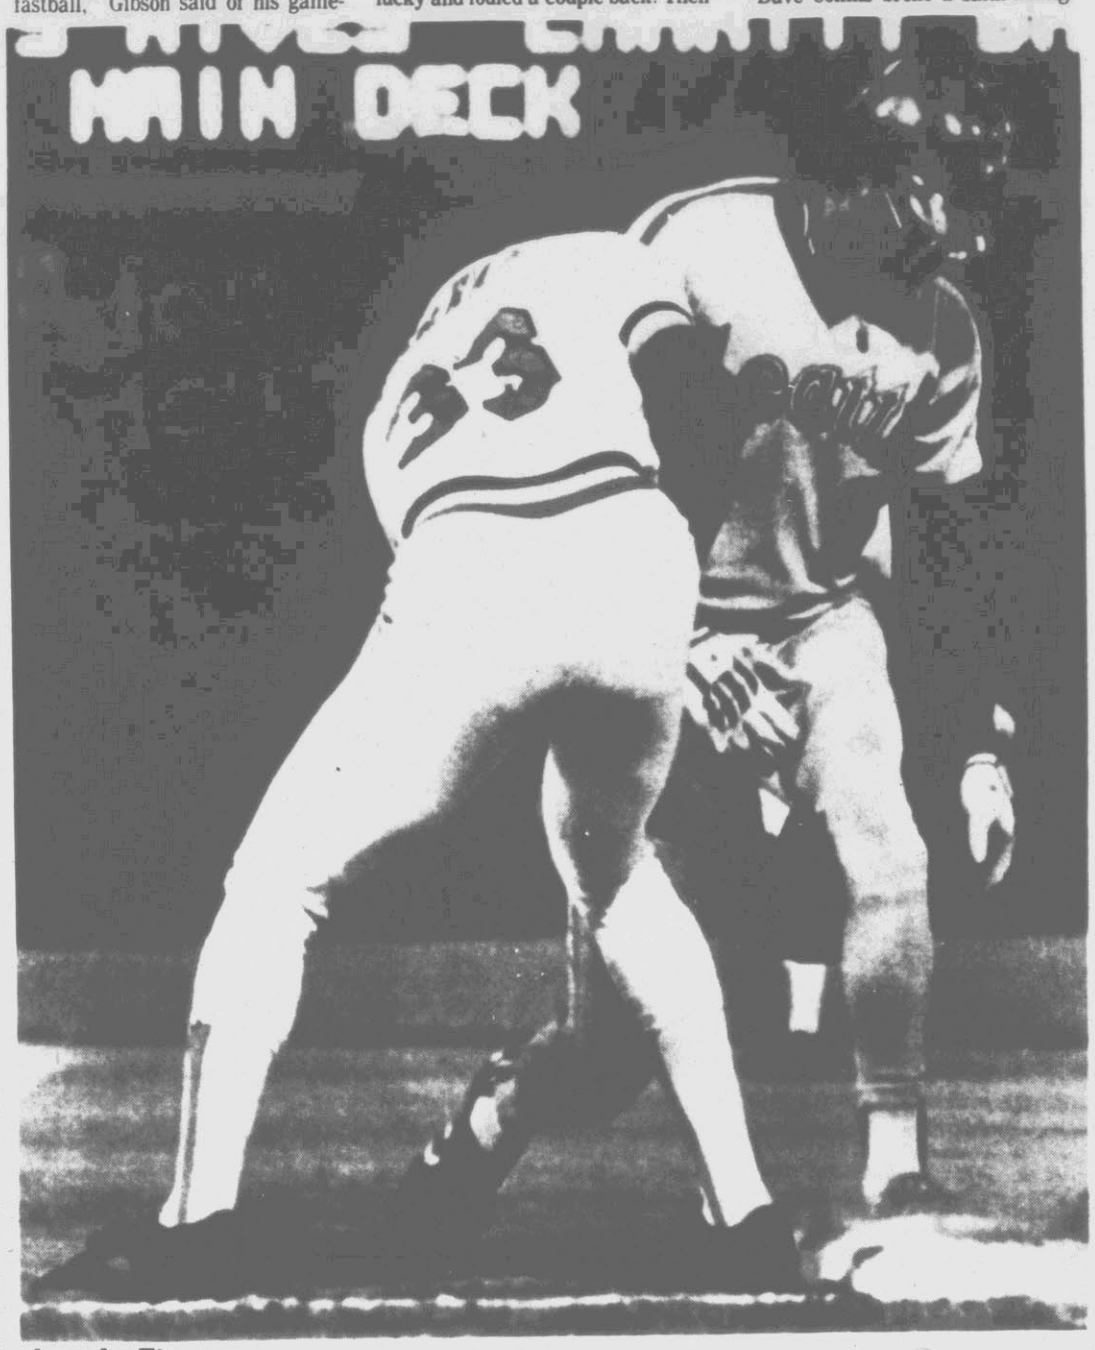

Eddie Murray hit his eighth home run and Storm Davis tossed a six-hitter as the Orioles recorded their 16th victory in 20 games.

Davis, 4-0, fanned six in dealing Seattle its fifth straight loss. In the process, the 22-year-old right-hander completed his third game in his last four starts and lowered his ERA to 1.56.

Murray gave Davis all the support he needed in the first inning. After Al Bumbry opened the inning with a double, Murray homered off Jim Beattie's first pitch. It was Murray's eighth game-winning RBI, tops in the AL.

Rangers 2, Royals

Gary Ward slugged a two-run homer in the eighth inning to lift Texas to a 2-1 victory over Kansas City and spoil the return of George Brett and the home debut of Willie Wilson.

Twins' Purchase Not Approved

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and both league presidents have told members of the Tampa baseball group that bought a 42 percent interest in the Minnesota Twins that their purchase will not be approved, The Minneapolis Tribune reported in today's editions.

The newspaper reported in a copyright story by Sid Hartman that Kuhn, American League President Bobby Brown and National League President Chub Feeney met in New York Thursday to discuss the stock sale and the entire Tampa baseball situation.

The three reportedly told representatives of the Tampa group that they opposed the stock purchase and relocation of the Twins if a local purchaser can be found, the newspaper said.

The purchase would need approval of 11 of 14 American League owners and a majority of National League owners.

Twins' President Calvin Griffith, who with his sister, Thelma Haynes, owns about 52 percent of the club's stock, said Friday that he hoped the sale of the 42 percent owned by H. Gabriel Murphy would be blocked.

"I'd prefer them not to have the minority stock at the present time," Griffith said Friday of the Tampa group.

Cedric Tallis, executive director of the Tampa Baseball Association, said his group "won't take any legal action if the American League refuses to approve our purchase of the stock."

Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad has been negotiating a deal with Griffith. An opportunity to also buy the stock the Tampa group wanted to purchase would make the deal more attractive to Pohlad because of tax advantages.

"If Carl Pohlad wants to buy the team, I'd prefer him to be able to buy that stock," Griffith said.

American League executive vice president Robert O. Fishel confirmed that the New York meeting took place, but refused to say what was discussed at the meeting. He did say that the league wants to do all it can to keep the Twins in Minnesota.

The league is scheduled to meet next Wednesday in Chicago, and the Murphy stock sale is on the agenda.

Fishel told the St. Paul Pioneer Press that there is "a distinct possibility" an agreement would be worked out to make Murphy's stock available to a local buyer.

Murphy was to receive $11.5 million for his minority share of the Twins' stock. But so far, he has received only a $500,000 letter of credit. He was to receive $3 million when the sale was approved and the balance at 9 percent interest over a 10-year period.

IS SHE FROM DIXIE?

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tanya Haave, the star senior forward of the Tennessee women's basketball team in the 1983-84 season, found life in that state somewhat different from her native Denver.

Although retaining her Western personality, she praised the people she met, calling them friendly at all times.

Greene Central Downs West Columbus, 16-4

SNOW HILL — Greene Central ripped four homers and took command with nine runs in the second inning, then went on to uefeat West Columbus 16-4 Friday in the opening game of the state 3-A/4-A high school softball playoffs.

Anntionnette Wilkes and Sharon Dawson blasted two-run homers, while Sharon Croom and Patronelle Davis had solo homers for the Lady Rams. Wilkes, Croom, Dawson, and Cyndi Hicks each went 2-4 at the plate, while Davis and Stephanie Streeter both went 2-5.

Greene Central put the game out of reach in the second, as Wilkes homered after Streeter singled, and Davis followed with a solo blast. Croom and Jenny Hardison singled, and Hicks reached first on an error to drive in Croom. Melody Bowen tripled in a pair of runs, and an error on Dalen Herring's grounder allowed Bowen to score. Another error on a ball hit by Sherry Williams plated Herring.

The Lady Rams will face the winner of the Havelock-Southern Wayne clash.

Loose Ball

Davis, Macy Pace Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — In "must win" situations, the Phoenix Suns usually turn to Walter Davis and the all-star guard seldom disappoints.

Friday night, Davis and backcourt mate Kyle Macy scored six points apiece in overtime as Phoenix beat Los Angeles 135-127 and cut the Lakers' lead to 2-1 in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

The Suns can even the best-of-seven Western Conference finals with a win in Game 4 here Sunday.

"We've got to go back to LA tied at 2-2 (for Game 5 Wednesday night). It can't be 3-1," Davis said. "We are confident we can win. We play well on our home floor and we weren't going to let LA come in here and push us around. They know they're in a fight now."

Phoenix was blown out in the first two games of the series — 110-94 Saturday and 118-102 Tuesday night. Both were at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

"This finally proves to everybody that we can beat the Lakers," said Suns Coach John MacLeod. "After those two 16-point losses in LA, there was some doubt that we could beat them — even in our own minds. The papers said, 'Sure, the Suns upset Portland and Utah in the other rounds but they can't upset the Lakers.' Well, we'll see about that."

Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, however, said his club is "still in the driver's seat. We want that one on Sunday. We should have had this one, but they took the startch out of us in that overtime."

The Lakers forced the extra period at 119-119 on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's sky hook with 22 seconds left.

Macy sank his six points in the first 1:24 of overtime for a 125-121 Phoenix lead and Larry Nance's layin made it 127-121 with 2:52 to go.

Davis hit a bank shot 22 seconds later and he and Maurice Lucas sank two free throws each in the final seconds to seal the victory.

"Kyle got us going. He had the first six points on two layups and a jump shot from the corner. That got us a good lead," Davis said. "We held on from there and I penetrated a couple of times for baskets inside."

Davis finished with a career playoff high 34 points while Nance had 23, Lucas 19, James Edwards 18 and Macy 12.

Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 31 points. Rookie Byron Scott added 26, Johnson 21, Michael Cooper 12 and James Worthy and Bob McAdoo 10 apiece.

"As a team, we could have played a lot better," said Scott, a product of nearby Arizona State. "We had some turnovers at crucial times near the end. We just didn't take care of the ball like we have in the past. We were fumbling it out of bounds with time running out and things like that and that's unusual for us."

The Suns watched their first-quarter leads in both Games 1 and 2 disappear in the dust of the Lakers' vaunted fast break and MacLeod said "we were determined to get the jump on them this time."

Phoenix led 42-31 after the first period by setting a club playoff record for points in an opening period.

Davis had 11 of them including nine in a 1:29 span during a 14-2 Suns string which padded their lead from 21-20 to 35-22.

Down 46-33 1:01 into the second quarter, Los Angeles used an 11-2 spurt to forge a 53-53 tie on Jamaal Wilkes' jumper with 3:54 left.

Five straight points by Nance following a Davis jumper put Phoenix up 60-53. Scott then scored seven points down the stretch including a three-point goal for a 62-62 tie with 1:12 left and a slam dunk at the buzzer for a 64-62 Laker halftime lead.

Phoenix led 87-77 with 4:17 left in the third quarter before the Lakers fought back for a 91-91 tie by the end of the period behind Scott's seven points.

Los Angeles trailed by eight at 105-97 with 8:45 left in regulation before rallying for the tie with Abdul-Jabbar notching 10 fourth-period points.

Panthers, Stallions Moving Towards Same USFL Goal

By The Associated Press

The defending United States Football League champion Michigan Panthers and the rookie-laden Los Angeles Express, are proceeding in opposite directions this season. But Coach John Hadl of the up-and-coming Express is of the speak-no-evil persuasion — particularly when the subject is his next opponent.

"They were playing exceptional football in the early season but they have been hurt by some key injuries recently," Hadl said of the Panthers, who have lost five of their last six games and are 7-5 going into Sunday's clash at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"They still play physical football, and field one of the best offensive and defensive lines in the league."

In Friday night's only USFL game, the Birmingham Stallions beat the Chicago Blitz 41-7 as Cliff Stoudt threw for 229 yards and two touchdowns and rookie cornerback Charles Clanton notched his league-leading ninth interception. He returned the pass by Vince Evans 41 yards for a touchdown, his third score of the season with a theft.

In other games Sunday, Oklahoma is at Houston, San Antonio at Washington, and New Orleans at Tampa Bay and Monday night it's Pittsburgh at New Jersey.

Los Angeles, with more than 30 rookies on its roster, has won three of its last five games to move to 5-7. They are coming off a tough 18-14 loss to Philadelphia, which has the league's best record at 11-1.

"The Express is the kind of team that has grown a little bit each week," said Michigan Coach Jim Stanley. "From a coach's standpoint, you'd rather play them early, but this is where they fall in our schedule."

The game will feature two of the USFL's premier quarterbacks — $40 million man Steve Young of the Express and Bobby Hebert of Michigan. But the Panthers will still be without star wide receiver Anthony Carter and since he's been gone, Hebert has been intercepted 13 times.

Kanetzke Leads BV Golfers

Brook Valley's Jan Kanetzke was the lone Greenville winner in the Eastern League Ladies Golf Association outing last week at Walnut Creek Country Club.

Kanetzke finished with second low gross in the third flight with a 102-90—192 total.

Distefano Greets Big Leagues With Triple

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

When Benny Distefano stepped to the plate for the first time in the big leagues, there was a guy from his old neighborhood on the mound. He treated him no better than he treated the sandlot pitchers back home.

Distefano, called up two days ago from Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League, took over in left field for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the first inning Friday night when Amos Otis was cracked his ribs crashing into the wall to catch Claudell Washington's drive.

Leading off the third, he tripled off Pete Falcone to begin a two-run rally that started the Pirates on their way to a 6-0 shutout of the Atlanta Braves. Larry McWilliams scattered eight hits for his first victory of the season and Tony Pena clinched the game with an eighth-inning grand slam.

Falcone and Distefano both attended Lafayette High School in Brooklyn, N.Y. — the same school that produced Sandy Koufax — and Distefano graduated in 1980 with Falcone's brother Neil.

"He used to tell me all the time about his brother and how he made it to the big leagues," Distefano said. "What are the odds I'd face him in my first at-bat?"

In other National League games Friday, it was Chicago 7, Houston 6; St. Louis 5, Cincinnati 3; San Diego 5, New York 4; Philadelphia 1, San Francisco 0, and Montreal 5, Los Angeles 4 in 11 innings.

"Did I think it was out?" Distefano asked. "Yeah. That's why I went into my home run trot."

"Benny gave us a big lift," said Manager Chuck Tanner, whose Pirates entered the game with a team batting average of .241. "He's going to play for us. He's been playing, he's in good shape, and he's mentally prepared."

Cubs 7, Astros 6

Gary Woods drew a walk from Frank DiPino with the bases loaded to force in the winning run to climax a two-run ninth-inning rally that gave the Chicago the win.

After Houston had broken a 5-5 tie on Enos Cabell's solo homer off Tim Stoddard with two out in the top of the ninth, Gary Matthews led off with a wind-blown fly down the right-field line that fell in for a double. Stoddard, 3-0, eventually became the winner.

Leon Durham then doubled Matthews home and was sacrificed to third by Keith Moreland. DePino then relieved Dave Smith, 0-1, and walked two more batters intentionally to set up a force, before issuing the pass to Woods.

"I wasn't looking for a walk," said Woods. "I know he's not afraid of me, he's gotten me out before. He was wild. He won't do that too much."

Phils 1, Giants 0

Marty Bystrom, plagued with injuries and misfortune since his 5-0 streak as a rookie in September of 1980, allowed only two hits through seven-plus innings for the Phillies.

Boat Races Scheduled

Preliminary entrants range from 15 to 50 and it is hoped that some older and younger will also enlist. Women are also invted to submit entries provided at least two crews and vessels of similar nature and type can be found. Company team events are also encouraged.

The grand finale will be a 2¾ mile single scull race down the Tar River finishing on the Pamlico.

An entry fee of $5 per boat is required.

Celebrate National Fishing Week — "Gone fishin'." Sound relaxing? More than 50 million Americans think so. One of the country's greatest pasttimes will be celebrated during National Fishing Week June 4-10, a time to appreciate all that fishing in America is — the tremendous variety of fish, the enjoyment and respect for nature, and the billions of dollars it generates. Everyone who packs a rod and reel and heads for a rippling stream or a quiet pond is on of the 42 million adults and 12 million youths who go fishing each year in the United States.

Those anglers take 750 million annual fishing trips, says the National Wildlife Federation, whose 4.1 million members and supporters include hundreds of thousands of men and women who fish.

"All of us who enjoy fishing must realize that the sport is threatened by many of our own environmental mistakes," said Jay D. Hair, NWF executive vice president, citing such problems as water contaminated by toxic wastes, agricultural runoff, overfishing, and dam construction on fish spawning streams.

"One of the most grave threats is the loss of habitat such as wetlands, which is increasingly critical. Another is acid rain, which is already responsible for fish losses in 212 Adirondack lakes and ponds, and threatens hundreds of other bodies of water across the country," Hair said.

"If we as a nation of anglers wish to continue to enjoy fishing and protect our fishing-related economy, then we must protect, enhance and restore our valuable fishery habitat."

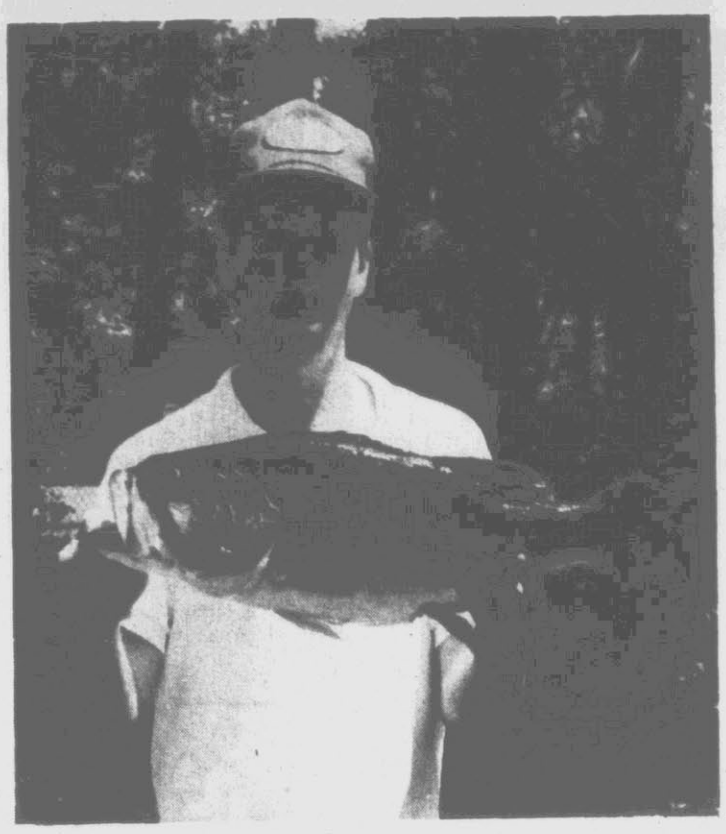

Gardening With Wildlife — Any back yard, from several acres to a few square yards — even a window box — can become a wildlife refuge-in-miniature.

The National Wildlife Federation's new "Gardening With Wildlife" kit is designed to help create a backyard environment where birds, butterflies, small animals, trees and flowers can thrive. Developed by NWF's expert naturalists, the kit is the official "Backyard Wildlife Habitat" planning and planting guide with activities and suggestions that can provide years of pleasure for gardners and the wildlife they'll attract.

Included in the kit's 33 items are a planting guide, a wildlife habitat log for your personal records, a bird feeding preferences booklet and patterns to build birdhouses and feeding tables.

For more information about the "Gardening With Wildlife" kit, write to National Wildlife Federation, Dept. 170, 1412 16th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. If you would like to purchase the backyard kit, send $14.95 plus $1.55 shipping to the NWF address.

Fishing Report — Flounder, grey trout and croaker have shown up in the Pamlico Sound early this year. Commercial fishermen report good catches of all three in the nets. King mackerel fishing last weekend was spotty depending on your location. Around Beaufort Inlet, the catch was good, while further down at Bogue Inlet there were few kings. Inland, white perch fishing has been good on the Roanoke river; panfish and crappie fishing has been consistent around eastern Carolina. Most largemouth bass are still bedding but should be coming off anytime.

Holbert Sets Mark, Takes Camel Pole

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Al Holbert of Warrington, Pa., set a Charlotte Motor Speedway record Friday to take the pole for the Camel GT 500, touring the 1.5-mile oval track in 121.040 mph.

Holbert drove his Porsche 962 prototype to the pole for Sunday's race, eclipsing his own record of 119.028 mph set last year.

"This is one of the toughest tracks we run," Holbert said. "It's a real compromise, setting up a car for both the infield road course and the oval high bank."

Bill Whittington of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., driving a Chevy March, was the second fastest qualifier, but only the pole position was determined during qualifying runs Friday. The rest of the field will be determined today with qualifying runs and a 10-lap qualifying race.

Meanwhile, Hurley Haywood, a two-time IMSA Camel GT champion and the winningest active driver in IMSA history, will replace Klaus Ludwig as co-driver in the Ford Mustang GTP for Sunday's race.

Ludwig, from Bonn, West Germany, sprained muscles in his neck Thursday in a spectacular crash in the fourth turn. Ludwig was told by doctors to rest and not risk further injury.

Ludwig's car was nearly destroyed after hitting the wall in turn four and sliding along the concrete wall for more than 200 feet before coming to a stop on the infield grass.

Hagler's Depression Forces Fight Delay

BOSTON (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler wanted to fight Mustafa Hamsho this summer as a tuneup for the "fight of the century." Instead, he plans to meet him in the fall as a tuneup for the fight of last resort.

Goody Petronelli, Hagler's co-manager, said Friday Hagler will not defend his undisputed world middleweight boxing title against Hamsho as scheduled on July 20.

Sugar Ray Leonard's retirement after he stopped Kevin Howard in the ninth round May 11 in Worcester, Mass., triggered Hagler's decision, Petronelli said.

"You might say that" the summer meeting with Hamsho, whom Hagler had stopped in the 11th round on Oct. 3, 1981, to retain his title, was viewed as a chance to warm up for a rich fall battle with Leonard, Petronelli said.

"There's no big deal with Hamsho. We beat him once," he added. "We wanted to get Leonard. That's what we wanted. We had half a promise.

"It would have been the fight of the century, no question about it. That would have been quite a thing. You can really get up for that."

Now Hagler has his eye on the winner of next month's fight between Roberto Duran and Thomas Hearns.

"That would be a good money fight," Petronelli said. "That's the only one left.

"That's about what we had in mind," he said, when asked if the Hamsho fight was delayed to make it a better tuneup for a possible bout with Hearns or Duran.

At Leonard's comeback fight with Howard, Pat Petronelli, Hagler's co-manager, said negotiations were nearing completion for a guaranteed $11 million payday for both Hagler and Leonard for a fall fight.

Hagler's purse would have been $1 million in the Hamsho fight, which would have been televised by Home Box Office.

HBO has replaced it with a heavyweight bout between Gerry Cooney and Phillip Brown, who were to fight 13 months ago before Cooney needed surgery on his left hand. No site has been announced. HBO said it plans to telecast a fight between Hagler and Hamsho in the fall.

Rather than spend six weeks training for Hamsho, who is top ranked by the World Boxing Council, Hagler prefers to spend the summer working at his home in nearby Hanover and being with his family, Goody Petronelli said.

"Why get back into training? For what? For a Leonard fight, yeah. For a big fight, yeah. But for this?"

Hagler "is a little depressed over Sugar Ray Leonard's retirement and he doesn't feel he has his head into it," promoter Bob Arum said.

"Marvin was disappointed, like we all were" with Leonard's retirement, said Goody Petronelli. "You're on the brink of the largest payday probably any fighter ever got and, all of a sudden, zappo.

"If he (Hagler) had to fight him (Hamsho) he would have fought him," Goody Petronelli added. "Pat and I didn't sign the contracts on it. If we signed the contracts, we would have gone through with it."

Clay Courts Favor South Americans

ROME (AP) — Even after all the upsets at the Italian Open, the fact that three of the four players in Saturday's semifinals were from South America came as no surprise.

South Americans have a tradition of success to uphold on the clay courts of Rome's Foro Italico.

In four of the last five years, South American players had made the final of the event, winning three times.

Two of those victors, Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina and Ecuador's Andres Gomez, were in line to repeat their success after advancing Friday to the semis along with a third South American, Diego Perez of Uruguay.

Eighth-seeded Clerc, the Italian champion in 1981, and fifth-seeded Gomez, the 1982 winner, were the only two of the original 15 seeds to remain in the running for the $48,000 first prize.

Clerc ousted yet another South American, Pablo Arraya of Peru, 6-1, 6-3, and Gomez downed Italian Claudio Panatta 6-3, 6-0 to gain the semis.

The two were to face each other Saturday for a berth in the final. The last time they played, in North Conway, N.H., last year, Clerc won 6-3, 6-4.

Perez, who beat Mark Dickson 6-4, 6-1, was to meet another American, 16-year-old Aaron Krickstein, for the other spot in the final.

Krickstein became the youngest semifinalist in the tournament's history Friday night, crushing 21-year-old Francesco Cancellotti of Italy.

Fear Motivates Islanders

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Throughout their four-year reign as National Hockey League champions, the New York Islanders have used fear as the ultimate motivator. It's usually worked.

Saturday at Northlands Coliseum, the fear of seeing the end of their stranglehold on the Stanley Cup is something the Islanders hope to convert in their favor. And the Edmonton Oilers, who stand on the brink of winning their first NHL championship in only their fifth year in the league, want to use another kind of fear to spur them to one more victory.

"We have to play scared, play for survival and we have to come up with a big effort to survive," said New York's John Tonelli. "I have the confidence in this team. There is too much experience and maturity in knowing what it takes."

Having been there four times, the Islanders know what it takes to get over that final hurdle. The Oilers — at least for the time being — can only imagine.

"They haven't won the Cup yet, so it will be an anxious moment from the start," said the Islanders' Butch Goring. "They will feel a lot of pressure. I know we did the first time and I hope that will be an advantage for us.

"They can't really say they won't be nervous or excited — it's a function of life. Until you've done it, you're not sure how you will do it and you have to live with that fear."

Wayne Gretzky, the NHL scoring king who finally broke out in final-round play with two goals in Thursday night's 7-2 rout of the champions, isn't afraid of living with the fear of the unknown.

"We have to be scared to lose," said Gretzky. "They will play the best game they have played in five years. We can't go back to the Island."

If the Oilers continue to use their speed to advantage, they won't have to worry about a return to New York for a sixth and possibly seventh game. Edmonton has dominated the Islanders in the two games here, outhitting, outskating and outshooting them.

"Everything you do against the Islanders has to be above average," Gretzky admitted, "because they do everything above average.

"The last couple of games have opened up for us. We've played so disciplined defensively that finally the offense opened up."

The Oilers also have gotten to goalie Billy Smith, their nemesis in a sweep at the hands of the Islanders in last year's finals.

"We realized afer Game 1 (a 1-0 victory in New York) we could play a solid defensive game," said defenseman Kevin Lowe, a standout throughout the playoffs. "But could we score goals on them? We never really questioned our capacity to score goals but we might have had a mental block against Billy.

Parsons' Word Against Former Boss In Libel Suit

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The trial in the $75 million libel suit of former women's basketball coach Pam Parsons boiled down Friday to her word against the word of her former boss at the University of South Carolina.

Key defense witness Ron Dickerson, former USC assistant athletic director, told the court Ms. Parsons admitted having an affair with one of her players and then offered her resignation on New Year's Eve 1981.

Earlier, Ms. Parsons testified she met with Dickerson but never discussed allegations of an affair with a player and said they had talked about coaching philosophy, and a parent's complaints about her personal relationships with players.

The former women's basketball coach has denied having a homosexual relationship with player Tina Buck and filed the libel suit after a Sports Illustrated magazine article published in February 1982 said she was having an affair with a player when she resigned from USC. Testimony resumes at 10 a.m. Monday in federal court.

Dickerson, now an assistant football coach at the University of Colorado, testified for the defense Friday about a meeting with Ms. Parsons the day she resigned, Dec. 31, 1981.

"Was there any type of affair between you and Tina?" Dickerson recalled asking Ms. Parsons.

"She shook her head and said, 'Yes,'" he said.

"Why with your players?" he said he asked her. "There are thousands of men that would go out with you."

Dickerson testified he had confronted Ms. Parsons at her home after hearing another player's parent complain about the coach's relationships with her players.

When she admitted the affair, Dickerson said he asked her if she wanted psychiatric help and if she wanted to fight the charges. But she offered to resign instead, Dickerson testified.

Attorneys for Ms. Parsons questioned Dickerson if he specifically mentioned the words "lesbian" or made specific references to sex when talking with Ms. Parsons at her home.

Dickerson said he did not, but he is confident that he and Ms. Parsons knew they were discussing a sexual affair with Tina Buck.

Earlier, Time Inc. attorney Bill Pope asked Ms. Parsons about her meeting with Dickerson the day she wrote out her resignation.

"Did he ask you if you were having an affair with Tina Buck?" Pope asked her.

"No he did not," she replied.

She denied she and Dickerson had talked about sexual relationships with her players and whether she should see a psychiatrist. She acknowledged they talked about a parent's complaint about her personal relationships with her players.

"I told him I was not going to put the team through any controversy," Ms. Parsons told Pope. "I wanted the team to stay together."

Her undefeated team was ranked second in the nation at the time.

The trial entered its fifth day in federal court Friday with the former coach on the witness stand under a barrage of questions from Pope about her personal habits and her relationship with Miss Buck.

Pope cross-examined Ms. Parsons part of the day about extensive phone calls she made to Miss Buck's home in 1980 and 1981 and about numerous visits to a Holiday Inn in northeast Atlanta.

The defense also produced a deposition by a psychologist who said Ms. Parsons had told of going to gay bars in Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Atlanta after her resignation.

"I wanted to know what I was being compared to," Ms. Parsons said Friday.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — For the first time I have a project coming up that will involve driving finishing nails below the surface of the wood. Can you give me some tips? What size nail sets are required? How far below the surface should the nailheads be driven? I assume a wood filler is used to fill the openings left by the nailheads.

A. — You should always keep about three nail sets in your home workshop or wherever you do your woodworking. Select a size that is just a tiny bit smaller than the nailhead you are using. Drive the nail below the surface to a depth equal to the diameter of the nailhead; it isn't essential in most cases to be accurate to a 32nd of an inch. After you have hammered in two or three nails, you will get the knack of stopping as soon as the nail gets a little below the surface. Yes, a wood filler should be used to fill the recesses. Remember that you don't use a nail set until the head of the nail is slightly above the wood's surface.

Q. — I read your article about repairing furniture using shellac stick to fill mars in the wood. I've looked in the stores here and no one seems to have ever heard of it nor do they know where it can be bought. Could you please inform me where I can obtain it?

A. — Sometimes the shellac sticks come with furniture repair kits and sometimes they are sold separately. Anybody who has never heard of it has never done much wood repairing. A well-stocked home center or the hardware section of one of the large department stores usually carries either the separate sticks or the furniture repair kits with the sticks in them. Also, many artists' materials stores sell them. A sure bet is one of the mail order wood finishing supply houses such as Constantine's, 2050 Eastchester Road, Bronx, NY 10461, and Craftsman Wood Service Co., 2729 South Mary St., Chicago, IL 60608.

Q. — Our laminated counter top in the kitchen is coming loose. My husband has reglued and rolled it and put clamps on it for several days, but it will not hold permanently. We are senior citizens on a limited income and would like to avoid getting a new counter top. Any solution?

A. — If it keeps coming unglued, it may be that your husband is putting the new adhesive on top of the old, which must be scraped off before anything can be done. Another probability is that he is not using the proper adhesive. Let him try contact cement, in which case no clamps will be necessary, although rolling the laminate and putting some weights on it, such as books, will aid in producing a secure bond. Most people find that, when the cement has been applied and allowed to dry a bit, as per the instructions on the label, then rolled, even the weights are not required.

Q. — I saw your reply to a reader saying that, when you cut glass or a window pane, you can smooth the edge with sandpaper and a little oil. I have a solution that always works. When I cut a piece of glass and want to smooth the edge, I use another piece of scrap glass and rub it over the cut corners at about a 45 degree angle for a few strokes back and forth. It takes off the sharpness immediately.

A. — Thanks.

(The techniques of using shellac, varnish, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

No. 10358 — The Cherrywood

Bermed Design Conserves Energy

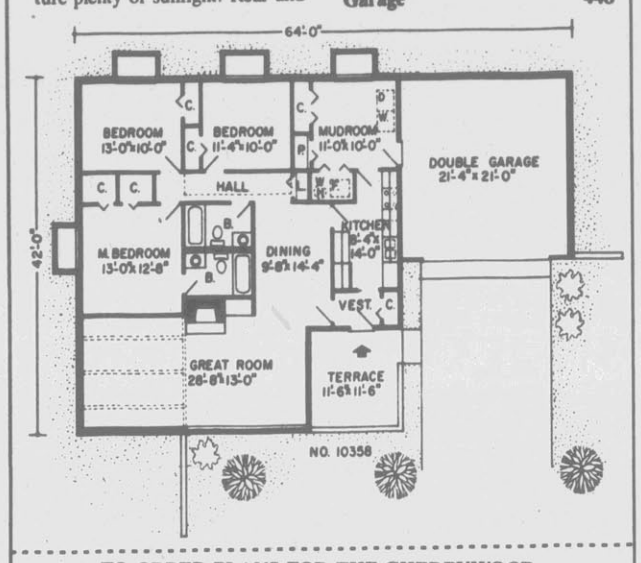

By Jerry Bishop

Designed to save energy summer and winter alike, the Cherrywood, a handsome three bedroom contemporary, is a semi-underground plan that calls for soil bermed up to the cornices on sides and back.

The plan takes advantage of the insulating value of soil and also features an airlock vestibule and a well-windowed facade, with southern exposure to capture plenty of sunlight. Rear and side window wells allow for emergency exits.

With all its energy efficiency, however, the plan primarily stresses livability. A 28-ft. great room merges with the dining area and corridor kitchen for an airy effect, and three large bedrooms share two full baths. The double garage opens into a functional mudroom.

Q. What causes tomato transplants to become weak and spindly? (G.S, Goldsboro)

A. Some probable causes are too much shade, too much water, seeds that were sown too thick and the plants were not thinned, and too much nitrogen.

Q. What are some trees that can be planted in a limited space? (D.D., Charlotte)

A. For planters or limited spaces choose small or intermediate size trees such as crepe myrtle, Foster holly, Judas tree (redbud) or Japanese maples.

Q. Will picking old flowers and seed pods off my annual bedding plants help them produce more blooms? (F.M., Taylorsville)

A. Generally, annuals like zinnias, snapdragons, salvia and marigolds produce more blooms when spent flowers are removed. The faded or dying blooms should be removed at least once a week or every four or five days.

Q. The radishes I planted produced healthy tops but the roots didn't develop into radishes. What could be the problem? (A.S., Raleigh)

A. Radish seedlings should be thinned to about one inch apart within five to seven days after the plants emerge. Since most radish varieties mature within 30 days from planting, early thinning is necessary for the roots to develop.

Take Care With Unripe Tomatoes

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Never put unripe tomatoes in the refrigerator. That's the advice of Florida experts who ship 1.16 billion pounds of tomatoes to market yearly.

When you bring tomatoes home from the market they aren't ripe yet. It was planned that way to preserve them for long journeys. Treat them right and they'll turn red, juicy and delicious.

Florida tomatoes, I was told by Wayne Hawkins, manager of the Florida Tomato Exchange, are harvested "mature green," full size, turning from dark to light green, and as "breakers" starting to blush. At riper stages, tomatoes would bruise and soften in shipping.

Brought home, Hawkins advised, tomatoes will finish ripening if you just place them stem end up in a bowl on a table or shelf in 65 to 75 degrees (F). Below 50 they will turn soft without ever turning red. A good way to room-ripen tomatoes is to use a plastic ripening bowl, readily available at stores, or a paper sack with a half-dozen small air vents.

Consumers, Hawkins said, "prefer smooth, firm, good-tasting tomatoes. They think big, but smaller tomatoes are prettier."

Whether the tomato is picked mature-green or vine ripened, at the eating stage there is no difference in sweetness or acidity, Hawkins said.

'New Wave' Furniture Now The Talk Of The Industry

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Is America ready for "new wave" furniture?

Ready or not, the art movement that relies on odd color combinations, strange angles and irreverent attitudes was interpreted in new furniture at the recent furniture market in North Carolina, and at least one national retailer plans to put new wave furniture on the sales floor by fall.

Although only a few furniture showrooms contained new wave and other adventurous styles, these few garnered a large share of market conversation as the furniture industry gathered for its semi-annual rites. New furniture and accessories are reviewed and ordered by retailers at the market.

As usual with dramatic style departures, the new wave showed up first in upholstery and occasional furniture and in accessories. Among American manufacturers, Thayer Coggin made the strongest showing. Its 12-piece "Prisma" collection by Milo Baughman includes sofas, chairs, tables and multicolored etageres.

Baughman predicted "New wave will be the most interesting and important revolution in design since William Morris and the arts and crafts movement."

Baughman's designs for Thayer Coggin illustrate some of the style's basic principles in the use of large, overscaled upholstered pieces that combine black and several primary colors in a single chair or sofa.

An import collection from Sweden of seating and tables and the apparently obligatory oddly-angled etagere was shown by A+B America.

Others also offered some pieces that might be called new wave. Casa Stradivari has a collection of "ruffled" tables and chairs, the ruffles carved from a block of maple.

In an effort to cut down on building costs and make new houses affordable for families who cannot handle the financing, some builders are reducing the amount of habitable square footage.

The easiest way to accomplish this is to cut down on the sizes of the rooms. Some people find this unacceptable, preferring to have fewer good-sized rooms rather than more smaller ones. But for those who need a certain number of rooms to accommodate their families, there is no choice.

What builders — and architects — can do to make living in confined spaces easier to take is to give some thought ahead of time to making the rooms seem larger. Also, the ingenious use of patios and outdoor space can make up in some measure for small indoor rooms.

Two design experts at United States International University at San Diego, Calif., Dr. Donald Smith and Netter Worthington, agree that some fairly easy-to-do design tips can make a difference regardless of whether the builder did his part during construction. They offer some visual decorating pointers if you have a house or apartment with small rooms. They suggest:

—Using light colors on walls and ceilings.

—Avoiding patterned wallpaper, furniture and carpets.

—Using mirrors to give an illusion of space and to reflect light.

—Using furniture that is in scale with the size of the room.

"You can be comfortable or uncomfortable in the same space at the same cost. It's all a matter of design," says Worthington. He notes that low intensity colors are calming and that poorly selected fluorescent lighting can sometimes be irritating.

Smith's suggestions for opening up small rooms include such possibilities as skylights or indirect lighting. "Color is important," he says. "You can use it to create an illusion of space." He adds that colors like red on the walls will make small rooms seem even smaller.

Smith's other recommendations include choosing neutral colors for walls to make them appear to recede. He urges that, when you can find a house with small rooms but high ceilings, "they can make all the difference in the world in giving a residence a contemporary and liveable look."

If a ceiling is low, you can make it seem higher by painting it a light color. By the way, paint sometimes dries to a different color or shade than when it is wet. If you want a good idea of how the paint will look when dry, brush a little of it on a clean, white blotter. The blotter will quickly absorb the wet gloss and show how the paint will be when it is dry.

You can make something in a room stand out if you paint it a far different color from the dominating color. Conversely, if you want something in the room not to be noticed, paint it the same color as the walls. This would be the case, for instance, if you didn't want a radiator, with or without a cover, to be conspicuous.

A small living room or family room will seem larger if it has sliding glass doors leading to a deck or patio. Providing views is one way a builder can make small indoor spaces seem larger.

(Do-it-yourselfers around the house can get many valuable tips from Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Duke Asks Court To Dismiss Suit

GREENSBORO (AP) — Duke University Medical Center has asked a federal court to dismiss a $5 million lawsuit filed by a man who says that he suffered brain damage during a simulated, deep-sea dive at Duke in 1981.

The medical center and F.G. Hall Laboratory, in answer to a suit filed in U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro, say Leonard T. Whitock knew the dive involved risks.

In February, Whitlock, an oceanographer from Vero Beach, Fla., sued the medical center, the laboratory, Duke University and Dr. Peter B. Bennett, the director of the experiments, which were held at the laboratory.

Whitlock contends the defendants intentionally misrepresented the dangers involved in the experiment, downplayed certain symptoms reported on earlier dives and later conspired to conceal the extent of his injuries to prevent negative publicity.

The answer denies the charges, but does say Whitlock "exhibited symptoms associated with simulated deep-water saturation dives."

Duke's answer, which was filed May 7, says that because Whitlock signed a consent form he should be barred from recovering any money.

According to the answer, the consent form stated, "It is important that individuals about to undergo tests involving the changing of atmospheric pressures understand that many of these tests have never been performed under such conditions before and there may be risks which are unknown."

Whitlock said during and after the dive he suffered memory loss, narcosis, dizziness, tremor, vivid dreams, itchiness, headaches, slurred speech, loss of manual dexterity and a decrease in his IQ level.

On Jan. 23, 1981, Whitlock and two other paid volunteers entered an 8-foot-diameter chamber pressurized to simulate underwater conditions.

Money-Strapped Liverpool Cashes In On The Beatles

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Driven to its knees by recession, Liverpool is swallowing its pride and cashing in on the Beatles legend. Having largely ignored its four most famous sons for 20 years, the city is discovering that the Beatles may be its only growth industry.

Suddenly, Beatles monuments are sprouting everywhere, gold fillings in the rotting teeth of one of the most depressed regions in Europe.

There is a Yellow Submarine, a replica of the Cavern dance cellar where the Beatles were discovered, streets named after John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, even a statue of the foursome, guitars in hand.

The many pilgrims who until now have had to find Penny Lane or John Lennon's school by themselves, and risk getting run over by speeding cars outside the Strawberry Field orphanage, can now see it all from a bus on a day tour that costs the equivalent of $13.80.

There is something sad about this sudden preoccupation with the Beatles amid the economic stagnation and urban decay. There was a time when Liverpool lived on more solid achievements than a defunct pop group whose three surviving members moved out long ago and hardly ever come back.

The city was once a great port, famed for its architecture, the starting point for the emigrant's journey to the New World. Herman Melville called its waterfront a Chinese Wall compared with New York. Liverpool, it seemed, always had a future. When the 18th-century slave trade dried up, it became the exporter of Lancashire cotton. And when that dried up, the city became a powerhouse of the post-World War II industrial boom.

Now it attracts novelists and poets who come to write its epitaphs, like Beryl Bainbridge: "Someone murdered Liverpool and got away with it." Or Keith Waterhouse: "Liverpool may or may not be dragged into bankruptcy ... but either way, as the city it once was, it's done for."

Its population has slumped from 610,000 in 1971 to an estimated 503,000 last year. Unemployment averages 19 percent, and is over 50 percent among teen-agers. The unemployment rate nationally is 13 percent.

Juvenile delinquency is so widespread that one-quarter of all criminal prosecutions last year were against youths under 16. Heroin is a major disease. Police recently discovered that pushers were lacing school milk and lunch packages with heroin to get the kids at one high school hooked more quickly.

Writer Stanley Reynolds, a former Liverpool resident, believes that one day "people will flock to Liverpool ... to see this Museum of Horrifying Example — to be warned of the dire things that happen to an industrial city when it is industrial no more."

The city has picked itself up from the rubble left by a year-long German blitz in World War II, and the first thing a visitor sees getting off the train at Lime Street Station are the graceful Victorian buildings shawled in fog, sloping gently down to the Mersey River where 125 acres of derelict docks have been transformed into a splendid garden exhibition.

And yet the city's reputation is so bad, says furniture manufacturer David Simpson, that many businessmen are dropping Liverpool from their letterheads and using Merseyside, the county name, instead. He claims he lost a $42,000 order from the United States "because they thought our city was run by Marxists."

City Hall, in fact, is run by a militant left-wing council bent on a showdown with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a Conservative. Mayor John Hamilton speaks of "a complete breakdown of law and order eventually" unless Mrs. Thatcher gives Liverpool more money. Rioting broke out in the slums in 1981. Next time, says Hamilton, it will be much worse.

Critics claim mild-mannered Hamilton, 61, is just a front for Liverpool firebrand Derrick Hatton. Councillor Hatton belongs to the Militant Tendency, a Trotskyist faction in the Labor Party. He insists his sole concern is the city's plight, while Liverpudlians joke that Hatton wants to establish "t'peoples republic of Liverpool."

"Hatton believes the Marxist revolution in England will start in Liverpool. He intends to bring down the government and Liverpool is the starting place," says Rosemary Cooper, a 32-year-old sales executive and city councilwoman for the opposition Liberal Party.

Hatton, a 36-year-old ex-boxer, says he is simply trying to help Liverpool survive Mrs. Thatcher's budget cuts. He points out that Liverpool's government aid has been cut by 120 million pounds ($168 million) over the past three years and faces a choice between sacking 5,000 municipal workers or trebling local taxes.

In a city with spreading poverty, the Beatles are regarded in City Hall as a frivolity. The resolution to name streets after them was adopted only after a long battle. The council refuses to spend any money on Beatlemania, and has allowed the Cavern to be closed down and its cobblestoned street to be uprooted.

But the fact that lately the council has not hindered private Beatles entrepreneurs is encouraging to the keepers of the memory.

"We have been fighting for years to get some sort of recognition for the Beatles and their contribution, and I think we're finally getting there," says John James Chambers, the engaging and appropriately mop-haired spokesman for the Liverpool Beatles Appreciation Society.

Liverpool's relationship with the Beatles has always been touchy.

"People started out being very proud of the Beatles and the whole idea of the Mersey Beat," says Ms. Cooper. "But now they feel deserted. They feel betrayed that the Beatles made it and then cleared out." She adds that many accuse the Beatles of having made drugs fashionable.

Indeed, there is something refreshing in Liverpool's studied neglect of the Beatles myth. After all, Liverpool could follow the example of Memphis, Tenn., which has built a whole tourist industry around the late Elvis Presley.

"I don't think we should do that," says Ms. Cooper, who has visited Memphis. "It's a city that lives off the dead. They'll sell you any old piece of rubbish as an Elvis memento."

Liverpool may not be far behind. The bricks of the Cavern club are selling briskly as mementos at 5 pounds ($7) each, and a 9-million-pound ($12.6-million) "Beatles shopping complex" with a reconstructed replica of the Cavern is to open soon. It was financed by an insurance company.

At the Beatles souvenir store you can buy Beatle beer mugs, Sergeant Pepper tunics, Beatles socks, Beatles salt shakers, John Lennon granny glasses and copies of Beatle birth certificates.

The Beatles sang of love and sunshine and Strawberry Fields Forever. They even had a song that went "Once there was a way, to get back home...."

But today the poetry of Liverpool carries a harsher tone — of people on the dole, alienation and a future without hope, summed up in all its grinding dissonance by poet Tony Size:

On the dole, such a bore, sitting around, or breaking the law,

You wake in the mornin', go for a jog, pop in the center, and look for a job. ...

You go back home, feeling bad, have something to eat and then go to bed.

Southern Forests Threatened

DAY, Fla. (UPI) — Firefighters battling a five-day blaze that destroyed more than 8,000 acres of prime timberland in north Florida feared Saturday that high winds and low humidity would spread the flames through nearby forests.

Ashes from the fire were carried by winds more than 100 miles into Georgia and Alabama. Officials declined Saturday to predict when the fire — which already has scorched about 20 square miles of timberland — would be out.

The blaze, about 50 miles southeast of Tallahassee, was ignited Tuesday by lightning and not contained until Friday. A spokesman for the state Division of Forestry said that only rain would bring an abrupt end to the fire.

"There's a 20 percent chance of rain forecast for Sunday, which isn't much, but it's more hope than we've had in the past three days," said spokesman Barry Gay.

"So far we've won a few battles. Whether we'll win the war, that's yet to be determined," he said.

Damage was estimated at $1 million, but no injuries were reported and the town of Perry, some 12 miles to the west, was in no danger, officials said. The blaze, about 35 miles south of the George border, destroyed timber owned by Gilman Paper Co.

Teams of 100 firefighters from the forestry division working 12-hour shifts kept the blaze within a 20-mile perimeter early Saturday.

But officials said low humidity and strong winds forecast Saturday afternoon could reignite spots outside established firelines. The area is heavily forested.

"We are concerned some of the unburned pockets will pick up speed. Fatigue is starting to show on some of the men," Gay said.

He said callers from across north Florida and south Georgia, and as far away as Dothan, Ala., reported smelling the smoke and seeing ashes from the fire.

Strong winds Friday fanned the fire north, backtracking across pine forests and cypress stands that were only partially burned earlier in the week.

Firefighters on the ground were assisted by a U.S. Forestry Service plane from North Carolina with a 2,500-gallon tank and two helicopters on loan from the Georgia Forest Commission, which dumped 250-gallon buckets of water with pinpoint accuracy.

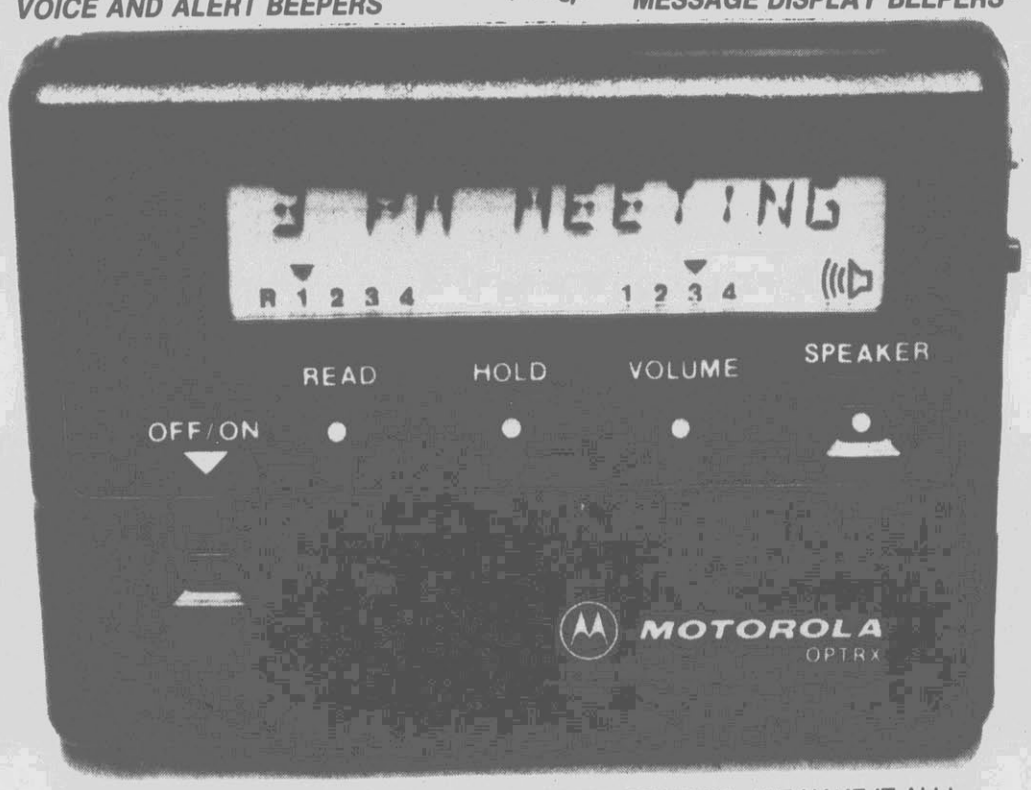

Mayor Asks For Help In Gangland Dispute

MATAMOROS, Mexico (UPI) — The mayor of this tense border city has asked the state capital for help to maintain peace between two underworld gangs whose rivalry erupted in a commando-style massacre of five people last week.

"It's obviously two different (underworld) bands," Mayor Jesus Roberto Guerra Valasco said as he marched in a funeral procession for slain policeman Nestor Torres. Torres was one of the five killed in an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate reputed syndicate boss Casimiro "El Cacho" Espinosa Campos, 31, last Thursday.

Police say the gangland war could be between the organizations of Espinosa and Oscar Lopez "Professor" Olivares over control of a black market operation that reputedly trades cocaine and marijuana for vehicles stolen in the United States.

The corporation's wholly-owned subsidiary, Planters National Bank, has 48 offices in 19 North Carolina cities.

Dividend Declared

The board of directors of Branch Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of 29 cents per share, payable on June 15 to shareholders of record June 1. Currently, there are approximately 5,500,000 shares of Branch Corp. stock outstanding.

Earnings Declined

Robert Fomon, chairman and chief executive officer of the E.F. Hutton Group Inc., has reported 1984 first quarter earnings of $13,110,000 compared to $37,302,000 in 1983.

Fomon said revenues in the quarter increased to $594 million compared to $500 million a year earlier, primarily as a result of an improvement in interest revenues of $91 million. He said, however, that interest expense also increased by $90 million, leaving only a modest increase in net interest profits.

The spokesman said other revenues from the securities firm declined from 1983 levels due to lower retail activity and reduced underwriting volume.

Cotton Futures Prices Increase After Sharp Fall

By ELLEN PORATH
Associated Press Writer

Cotton futures prices increased significantly Friday on the Cotton Exchange in New York — after falling sharply on Tuesday, soaring on Wednesday and dropping again on Thursday.

The contract for delivery in July set a contract high, settling at 84.86 cents a pound, said Ernest Simon, a cotton analyst in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. Cotton settled .50 cent to 1.31 cents higher.

On Tuesday, cotton prices were under pressure as growing conditions generally improved across the nation. On Wednesday, the July contract closed up the 2-cent daily limit, in part because of a continued shortage of cotton, a reduction in deliverable stocks and a lack of significant moisture in West Texas, said Simon.

On Thursday, cotton futures prices dropped after some rain fell in West Texas. In addition to the cotton shortage, a major reason for Friday's advance was that analysts felt not enough rain had fallen, he said.

Coffee futures prices increased sharply on the New York Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange.

Edwward Meir, a coffee analyst with Drexel, Burnham, Lambert Inc., said quality problems with old and new crops supported prices. Also, the price situation looked good from the standpoint of traders who follow trends on price charts, he said.

Several contract months increased the 4-cent daily limit, and all contract months were nearly at that level.

Frozen concentrate orange juice futures dropped for the second day in a row on the Cotton Exchange in New York, with some traders thinking the demand for orange juice may be slowing. Prices have skyrocketed since freezes damaged the crop last winter.

Orange juice settled 2.20 cents lower to 1 cent higher with July at 180.55 cents a pound.

Precious metals futures settled higher in moderate trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Mike Paulenoff, a precious metals analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said price chart trends were a factor in the increase. Another factor was increased tension in the Persian Gulf, with reports of increased attacks on oil tankers, he said.

Gold settled $3.20 to $3.30 higher with the contract for delivery in May at $378.30 a troy ounce; silver settled 20 cents to 23 cents higher with May at $9.118 a troy ounce.

The Persian Gulf situation also helped drive up heating oil prices in heavy trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, said Nauman Barakat, a heating oil analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Futures prices dipped Thursday as traders sold contracts to take what profit they could after Wednesday's sharp advances, Barakat said.

Heating oil settled unchanged to .62 cent higher with June at 83.71 cents a gallon.

Wheat, corn and soybeans futures prices were higher and oats were mostly higher in trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Trading was moderate early in the session, but active near the end, said Bob Lekberg, a grain analyst with Shearson-American Express.

The strength of the soybean oil market continued to help soybeans, Lekberg said. Excessive dryness in the Soviet Union helped grain futures, he said.

Wheat settled 9½ cents to 12¾ cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.83 a bushel; corn settled ¼ cent to 4½ cents higher with May at $3.56 a bushel; oats settled ½ cent lower to 2½ cents higher with May at $1.87¾ a bushel; and soybeans settled 8 cents to 23¾ cents higher with May at $8.88½ a bushel.

Feeder cattle futures prices were higher, live cattle and hogs were mixed and frozen pork bellies were lower in light trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

More Worries For Stock Market Investors

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Financial problems at one of the nation's major banks and air attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf gave stock market investors something new to worry about last week.

Analysts blamed the two developments for darkening Wall Street's already pessimistic mood.

But some analysts say they expect the new worries could be fleeting, and they say that will free investors to get back to worrying about a more fundamental issue that has bothered the market for months — rising interest rates.

For the week, the Dow Jones industrial average closed at 1,133.79, down 23.35 points from the previous Friday's close.

The New York Stock Exchange's composite index finished at 89.56, down 1.67 points for the week. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 3.74 for the week to 205.47.

Big Board volume averaged 82.79 million shares a day, against 87.91 million shares a day the previous week.

Federal authorities and a group of leading banks scrambled last week to create a multi-billion dollar line of credit for Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., the nation's seventh-largest bank.

Officials of the bank's parent company acknowledged that they were looking for a merger partner, and omitted the company's quarterly divided.

Analysts said the problems led some investors to wonder whether there would be fallout from Continental Illinois' problems at other financial institutions.

The Iran-Iraq war spilled over into the Persian Gulf where several oil tankers were reported to have been fired upon, raising fears that shipments from the area would be seriously disrupted.

Analysts said those reports helped oil stocks do better than the general stock market for the week, but depressed prices of oil-dependent issues such as the airline stocks.

"The stock market is nervous because of both things," said Eldon A. Grimm, senior vice president of the San Francisco-based investment firm Birr, Wilson. "It is certainly on the defensive."

But Sung Won Sohn, chief economist for Norwest Corp., a diversified financial services firm based in Minneapolis, said he thought that concerns about both issues has eased somewhat by the end of the week.

He said federal regulators had "moved decisively to calm the financial markets" over the Continental Illinois and that it appeared Persian Gulf nations may take collective actions to ensure the flow of oil shipments.

"That brings us back to interest rates ... the fundamental problems are still there," Sohn said.

He said evidence of a slowdown in economic growth simply has not shown up.

"The economy is exceeding its speed limit. If anything it is going in the wrong direction, and becoming stronger and stronger," he said.

In that environment, he said it is likely that the financial markets will "deteriorate further" and the stock market averages could fall further.

Frank Korth, first vice president with Shearson Lehman-American Express, said the stock market has done much better than the bond market since the beginning of the year.

He said this week's decline was the beginning of a "catch-up process" which could carry stock market averages lower for the next five to six weeks.

Fred Fraenkel, director of equity research for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said the stock market "is starting to reflect continued pressures of interest rates exerted by the credit demands of a strong economy and a very large budget deficit."

"Many investors had hoped the economy was slowing down, and the data this week suggests the economy is not slowing down," he said.

But amid the pessimistic forecasts, some analysts think the stock market could revive.

Officials Exchange Charges

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A three-day conference on acid rain between Midwest and Canadian officials ended on a sour note Friday as Illinois Sen. Charles Percy charged the Canadians with moving backward on the problem.

Percy told the Transboundary Air Pollution Educational and Cultural Exchange that despite Canadian rhetoric to end the problem, production of sulfur dioxide by Ontario's only utility has increased in recent years.

Sulfur dioxide is suspected of being one of the prime causes of acid rain.

In addition, Percy, citing a recent article in The New York Times, said the Canadian government has not set aside any funds to study the acid rain problem this year.

David Balsille, an official with Ontario's Ministry of the Environment, disputed Percy's remarks, saying the increased sulfur dioxide production by the utility was due to the temporary use of coal-based energy until two nuclear power plants come back on line.

Balsille also said the Canadian government has committed about $16 million to the study of acid rain this year and Ontario itself has devoted $10 million to such research.

"So I think that we do have programs, we do have committments," Balsille said. "We're looking for further commitments on both sides."

Percy said he does not support any of the current proposals to curtail acid rain because their effectiveness is not yet known and they would have an extremely adverse effect on Illinois coal miners.

Illinois coal has a high-sulfur content.

The Republican senator said a lot more research into the cause of acid rain is necessary before anyone rushes in with a solution that will do more harm than good. He said he does not expect any acid legislation to be passed by Congress this year.

Tires Alert Driver

NASHVILLE (AP) — The modern auto tire warns the driver if it's running out of air.

For the first time in 140 years since machinemaker August Schrader invented the tiny device that keeps auto tires inflated, something new has been added to the original air control concept. A low tire pressure indicator, called Red Alert, was developed by the Schrader Automotive Group of Scovill Inc. that not only controls air pressure in a tire but also gives the driver visual proof if the tire has enough air in it.

The driver merely looks at the indicator to determine whether the tire is properly inflated.

Donna Flake, Oren Stone Job Exchange

Donna Flake of Greenville and Oren Stone of Southampton, England, are currently on a job exchange for six months. Donna and Jerry Flake left the states Feb. 27 after meeting Oren and Linda Stone and their children Feb. 26.

Donna is working at the Wessex Medical Library, University of Southampton, doing reference work. Oren is doing reference work at the Health Sciences Library, East Carolina University. He is also spending some time working in other departments at the library.

In explaining her idea of the job exchange, Mrs. Flake said, "In the summer of 1982, I was on a train traveling from Arizona to Chicago and met a British teacher who was here on a job exchange and she told me of her experience."

After the job exchange idea was cemented between Donna and her husband, she talked to Dr. JoAnn Bell, director of the Health Sciences Library, (her work supervisor), to see if the idea was feasible. Through her efforts and support, Mrs. Flake began to look for a job exchange partner. She wrote to medical libraries throughout Great Britian asking if any of their librarians would be interested.

"I received a lot of letters — they were delightful and warm and asked me to come to visit, but could not accept my offer. I was finally advised to advertise in British library journals. I received four responses — one in Glasgow, Scotland, one in London, one in Birmingham and one in Southampton.

"I began corresponding and getting a feel for the exchange possibilities. I chose Southampton — it was a medical school library and had a warmer climate. It was also near interesting places we wanted to visit," she said.

At the same time Dr. Bell was examining the credentials of the possible exchange partner. "She agreed that person was acceptable and I decided I wanted Oren Stone to be my exchange partner," she added.

The living mechanics were decided upon by the Flakes and the Stones. "We would be living in each others homes, driving the cars, and how to handle utitlity and telephone bills."

Mrs. Flake's parents and several of the couple's friends will be going to England to visit. Jerry and Donna want to coordinate their free time for travel to France, German, Italy and Greece.

Jerry applied for and received a permit allowing students to job hunt in England. He is a student at East Carolina University and is majoring in political science.

In a letter received by the writer of this story, Donna said Jerry is working at the University of Southampton in the medical and biological sciences division.

"When I first arrived in England, I was amazed at the intensely green, green grass in the country. Every farm is separated from other farms or estates by hedges. There are many sheep grazing on the farms. The houses and buildings are the most different. Practically every house or building is over 100 years old and looks like it would be of interest. There are many homes with thatched roofs and half timber. Many homes are on very small amounts of land — so the houses tend to be several stories high rather than spread out on one floor as they are at home.

"The people I have met are extremely friendly. My neighbors gave me a birthday party after knowing me for only three weeks," she said.

"Three things that were surprising to me were customers are not given grocery bags for groceries — you must bring your own; each local telephone call you make costs; and the plugs on electrical appliances are about three times larger than those at home.

"Also, drivers seem much more aggressive — they frighten me — but I have not seen any accidents yet," she added.

OREN AND LINDA STONE WITH DANIEL AND MARIKA

DONNA AND JERRY FLAKE

Oren and Linda Stone of Southampton, England, were quick to talk about the weather in Greenville and of the March 28 tornado.

"In England, the rains are gentle (normally) and here the rain is like a faucet being turned on. At home, they will never believe about a tornado. I thought the tornadoes were in the Midwest — it just didn't seem real," said Mrs. Stone.

The couple thinks the large yard and trees here are nice. "We are all enjoying it. In a city, this would be a very large yard.

"In England, we live in a row house (terrace house) with a very small yard. There are four or five families right around where I live having preschool children and mother at home. The children, Daniel, 4, and Marikâ, 2, have other children to play with and I have friends to visit with. Here you have to use the car for everything — at home I know many women that don't drive — if they do, they don't have a car," she added.

"Another surprise factor was the ungarded railroad crossings and the length of the trains — they are so long and they aren't passenger trains. At home, people use the communter trains for going to work, shopping, touring and just traveling. People use the trains a lot more in England and also the buses — there are fewer cars," Oren said.

"There isn't a lot of preschool day care for children at home. There is a strong play group movement in England but this doesn't provide for mothers working. I was astonished to learn that day care centers opened at 6:30 a.m. and closed at 6 p.m. here. Play groups and toddler groups and mothers are a very good way to meet mothers and young children at home," said Mrs. Stone.

"Shopping here was different — it's expensive. Bread is terrible, therefore, I make my own. We are spending a lot on food here and I do miss the small shops," she added.

Other things the Stones find different are the drive-in banks and fast food chains. "At home, there aren't any drive-in anythings. Health service in England is free. Here you have to think hard if you need to seek treatment," the couple said.

Mrs. Stone enjoys the politics here but wonders at all the money involved. She was also surprised at some television commercials such as sanitary needs and funeral monuments.

In his job exchange, Oren said, "There is more use of computers for retriving information than in England because telecommunication prices at home are much higher. In England, there are charges for overdue books in university libraries. The university library here is opened for far more hours during the day and for more days during the year. Here there is a greater emphasis on reference work which I like."

This is Oren's third trip to the United States and Linda's second. She has an aunt in Charlotte and a cousin in Raleigh and they hope to spend some time with them as well as at the coast. The couple would also like to see the mountains and Washington, D.C.

Accent On Living

New Forces Affecting Young U.S. Doctors

EDITOR'S NOTE: For generations, young doctors in training have turned to more experienced elder physicians to learn the art of healing, the craft of surgery, and even the business of running a practice.

But the current generation of new doctors has problems it will have to solve on its own, among them mammoth debt and disillusionment with the burden of work and patient attitudes. This is the first of two stories on some of the new forces affecting America's young doctors.

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Ten years after leaving her parents' little farm in Ohio to seek her fortune, Alice Keys is a doctor. But the only fortune attached to her name is the one she owes.

Another small fortune is riding on the signature of Eric J. Grigsby, who figures his parents have never earned as much in a year as he spends every year going to medical school.

America's future doctorc are signing their names to loans of up to $80,000 as medical school costs spurt higher and universities cut back on grants.

No previous generation of medical students had to pay anything like this, and some educators say the big loans will eventually mean higher costs for patients. The effects are only beginning to be felt.

"When I came to medical school, I intended to go into a rural farm practice," said Ms. Keys, the only one of seven children in her family to go to college. "Because of the loans I have to pay for, it's really not a possibility."

These money problems, most acute at private schools, are the most striking evidence for some medical students that the profession they're entering is different from the calling that attracted them in college.

Private practices are expensive to begin and exhausting to sustain. Malpractice insurance and loan repayments chew up big incomes. Attractive areas of the country are crowded with doctors.

"People are going to have to gear down their expectations," Dr. Norma Wagoner, an associate dean at the University of Cincinnati's medical school. "It's just not the easy road that it was in the past."

By the time Grigsby graduates from Boston University this year on the way to becoming a surgeon, he will have borrowed up to $80,000 for expenses and tuition, which is $14,400 this year. Some loans are government backed and some are from the university.

He had thought about working in rural Tennessee, but he doesn't consider that possible anymore. "In rural health clinics you make $30,000 to $40,000 tops," he said. "My debt service will come out to $7,000 a year."

His father, a restaurant equipment salesman in Knoxville, Tenn., and his mother, who works for a psychiatrist, "have truly sacrificed," he said, "and I still expect to make enough money to sort of make their lives a little more reasonable.

"Inasmuch as my debt impinges on my ability to do that, it encourages me to go into a lucrative specialty," he said.

The American Medical Association has studied medical students to see just what effect their debts have on their choices of specialty. It wanted to know whether the students with the big debts picked the most lucrative fields, such as surgical subspecialties or anesthesiology.

The last available study, in 1979, said there was no indication that debts affected student choices, said the AMA's director of health resource analysis, Douglas E. Hough. But he pointed out that the study was done "before indebtedness seemed to be a major problem — and that was only four years ago."

Although many students are put through school by their families and others have relatively low expenses because they attend state medical schools, the majority of medical students rely on loans.

In a 1971 survey by the Association of American Medical Colleges, 72 percent of medical school seniors reported they had debts, and the average was $5,500, said AAMC spokesman Charles Fentress.

A decade later, 76 percent of the seniors responding to the survey had debts, and the average amount was $19,700.

Last year the percentage jumped to 83 percent and the average indebtedness hit $21,100.

What has happened to medical school tuition in the past few years?

In the 1970s, costs were pushed upward by inflation, particularly energy costs and salaries, Fentress said. At the same time, the federal government was trimming the aid it was giving to medical schools per student. After reaching a peak of $2,400 in the mid-'70s, the aid dwindled and finally was cut off three years ago amid predictions of a surplus of physicians by 1999.

The private schools took the worst of it. While the average total cost for in-state residents attending public medical schools was $9,588 last year, the figure for students at private medical schools was $18,210, including $10,721 for tuition, Fentress said. Five years before, the average total cost at private schools was $8,217.

Many private schools have had to cut back on scholarships.

Northwestern University's medical school offers an extreme example. It used to have an unusual policy of guaranteeing entering students that their debt would be limited, with the limit tied to the inflation rate.

But Northwestern has abandoned that policy as too expensive.

The result is that the maximum debt for students in the class of 1985 will be about $35,000, but for the class of 1986, "the sky's the limit," said school spokeswoman Ellen Soo Hoo. With the annual cost of attending Northwestern's medical school now at an estimated $19,200, including $12,795 tuition, student debts could be as high as $80,000.

Dr. John I. Sandson of Boston University School of Medicine wrote in an article in the New England Journal of Medicine in May 1983 that unless financial assistance to medical students increased, most medical students would eventually come only from affluent families.

Of course, medical school is still a pretty good investment, since students can expect high incomes — 30 percent of doctors answering a 1979 survey by Medical Economics magazine earned more than $100,000 — and deduct the interest payments on their loans. The Urban Institute, a Washington-based research organization, said that assuming a high debt load and typical income, a doctor entering a private practice in primary care in 1988, would still make $40,000 that year, after taxes and loan payments.

A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association in December 1982 indicated that fewer than 1 percent of the students who withdrew from medical school did so for financial reasons.

Nevertheless, some students have resorted to extremes in trying to earn money. Mrs. Wagoner tells of a student she knows who earned $3,000 selling his sperm to sperm banks. Other students earn money as guinea pigs in drug research.

Alice Keys did nothing so dramatic. She simply bankrolled most of her medical education at Tulane University through $55,000 in loans.

Ms. Keys left home at 17. Her family, she said, is "still scraping in the dirt every year to make a living" in Altville, Ohio.

She was surprised by the cost of going to medical school: the $900 for a microscope, for example, and the expense of living in New Orleans.

"It never really occurred to me" that the costs would be so high, she said.

Now, at age 27, she has finished medical school and begun a program that will include one year of internship in medicine and three years of residency in neurology. She will be earning $19,000 for her internship.

But she'll be paying $4,000 in interest.

"You don't make enough money as an intern or resident to pay off your loans," she said.

At Washington University's medical school, where some seniors will graduate with $40,000 in debts, the associate dean, Dr. John Herweg, said students were increasingly concerned about their loans and the medical school was, too.

"Eventually the patient is going to have to pay for that," he said.

The bridesmaids wore formal gowns of petal pink taffeta designed with an open neckline outlined in matching Brussels lace. Each gown was fashioned with short pouffed raglan sleeves of taffeta. A gathered sash of taffeta enhanced the modified natural waistline and gathered skirt. Each carried a classic bouquet of pink spring flowers and baby's breath tied with rose pink bows.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Three Steers. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Daughtrey, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bullock, Mr. and Mrs. William Byrd and Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Parker gave a wedding breakfast at the Ramada Inn Saturday morning.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Jeckyll Island, Ga.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is a sophomore at East Carolina University. She attended Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. The bridegroom graduated from Rose and is a sophomore at ECU.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 37 and my husband is 39. We've been married for six years. It's the second marriage for both of us. We had a terrific sexual relationship until about two years ago, then it seems that he was either "too tired" or not in the mood. I tried to be understanding. Meanwhile I was going out of my mind with frustration. I did a lot of sewing, reading and eating and went from 130 pounds to 190 before I realized what I was doing to myself.

I lost most of the weight, bought sexy clothes, talked sexy talk and hoped things would change. Nothing! Then I just quit asking him because I knew he'd have a "backache" or be too tired. He keeps asking me to be patient, but that's easier said than done.

I'm lonely, hurt and frustrated. Right now I'm angry with myself for staying in this marriage. Please don't recommend an affair. I could never go that route. Besides I really love the guy.

Is there a support group for middle-age women who meet and talk about rejection?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Your husband's sudden lack of interest in sex could be a symptom of a physical problem—or an emotional one. You won't help your husband, nor will you solve your problem, by meeting with other middle-age women to compare notes about "rejection."

If you love him, and I believe you do, please insist that he see a doctor for a complete physical examination. You need to determine the cause before you can even hope for a cure.

DEAR ABBY: Our 9-year-old son is nagging his mother and me for a "motorcycle." Actually it's a "dirt bike," but it can go between 40 and 50 miles an hour.

Some of his friends have one, but I can't see a 9-year-old kid going that fast on a bike. His mother is starting to give in, and I'm running out of excuses.

I talked to the state police and was told it isn't against the law for him to ride one as long as he stays on private property. I still think he's too young. Am I being unreasonable?

LOVES MY SON

DEAR LOVES: No. Stick to your guns. Since when does a father need an excuse to discipline his son? Give him a reason, the reason being, "Because I'm responsible for your safety, and it's against my better judgment."

Meet your friends at the Lake Ellsworth Swimming Pool.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

MRS. GILLIAM

Cynthia Gail Carson of Cary, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Oliver Carson of Grifton, and Bryan Keith Gilliam of Durham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dabney Thomas Poindexter Gilliam of Roanoke, Va., were married Saturday in a mid-morning ceremony.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the Grifton United Methodist Church by the Rev. Gerald Lloyd Edge. A program of wedding music was performed by Dave Kirk of Rocky Mount. Christy Goodall Hill was the featured soloist and guitarist. Wedding music included "The Twelfth of Never," "The Wedding Song" and "One Hand, One Heart."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza, alencon and chantilly lace. The fitted bodice front was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckine outlined with scalloped alencon lace etched with tear drop and seed pearls and iridescents. The bodice back was accented with iridescents and bridal buttons. The short lace-appliqued puffed sleeves were also etched with seed pearls and iridescents. The flowing skirt was bordered with a chantilly lace ruffle which flowed into a chapel length train. Her walking length veil was of silk illusion and was attached to a halo of white silk flowers accented with pearl centers. She carried an all-silk cascade bouquet of white flowers accented with pale pink phlox and roses and cascading miniature orchids.

Amy Bunting Carson and Janet Carson Ricciarelli of Grifton, sisters of the bride, served as maid and matron of honor respectively. Bridesmaids were Faith Evern Entwistle and Lu Anne Stewart, both of Raleigh; Sevanne Younger Gilliam of Halifax, Va., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Katherine Gilliam Ruffin of Winston-Salem, sister of the bridegroom. The attendants each wore a formal gown of violet organza over matching taffeta. The gowns were fashioned with open, sweetheart necklines and pouf sleeves. The mock wrap fitted bodice was centered with a rolled fabric rose and long streamers of violet satin. Each attendant carried cascading clusters of gerbera daisies, pink tulips, alstroemeria and purple statice.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Dabney Thomas Poindexter Gilliam Jr. of Halifax, Va., brother of the bridegroom; Antony David Humphreys and Bryan Patrick Ross, both of Raleigh; Paul Andrew Ricciarelli of Grifton, brother-in-law of the bride, and Robert Galloway Ruffin of Winston-Salem, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a matinee length gown of pastel pink matte taffeta designed with a V-neckline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a matinee length gown of steel blue linen. The semi-fitted gown was fashoined with front and back inserts. Each wore a white corsage of tea roses.

The wedding was directed by Catherine Taylor Whaley of Grifton. Peggy Brown Jett of Jacksonville presided at the bridal register.

A reception held at the Greenville Country Club was given by the bride's parents. Rice filled flowers were distributed by the bride's attendants. Janipat Worthington Whaley of Grifton presented piano music during the reception. Cake was served by Emily Lu Herring of Ayden, Jane Lancaster of Raleigh and Sarah Vetter Mayhew of Boone.

The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and attended East Carolina University. She is employed by the North Carolina State Auditing Department in Raleigh. The bridegroom graduated from Elon College where he was a member of Sigma Pi fraternity. He is employed by Northern Telecom Incorporated in Raleigh.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday at the Sheraton Inn in Greenville. A cocktail party and several other parties wre held in honor of the couple.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will reside in Cary.

Cooking Is Fun

CREAMY CELERY

1 stalk celery (about 1½ pounds)
3 cups water
1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves, crushed
2 bay leaves
1 small onion, quartered
2 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 cup heavy cream
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
¾ cup shredded (medium-fine) Swiss cheese mixed with 1½ teaspoons all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Separate the celery into ribs; cut off leafy tops and refrigerate for other use. Slice ribs crosswise ¼-inch thick — there should be about 7 cups.

In a large saucepan bring the water to a boil. Add the thyme, bay leaves and onion. Simmer, covered, for 10 minutes. Remove bay leaves and onion. Bring to a boil again and add the celery. Simmer, covered, until celery is tender — about 10 minutes. Drain celery — there should be about 4 cups; reserve.

In the saucepan over low heat melt the butter; stir in the 1½ tablespoons flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the cream and milk, keeping smooth. Stir in the salt and pepper. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Off heat, stir in the Swiss cheese-and-flour mixture and the Parmesan until the cheese is melted. Stir in celery. Turn into a shallow 1½-quart baking dish. Cover tightly (with foil if necessary). Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until bubbling hot — about 20 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I love reading those stories on how much it costs to raise a child.

A couple of years ago, it was something in excess of $100,000 to nurture a child from infancy to age 18, give or take a few cases of catsup. By the time my kids were 11, they had blown their entire lifetime budget on pizza.

We were in a panic. We still had two overbites, one astigmatism, a set of tonsils, 37 pairs of Adidas, and seven months of May to go.

For the overbites and medical bills we could borrow on our insurance, and I could put off my operation for the Adidas, but the seven months of May, multiplied by three children, was scary.

If you don't know about the month of May, it's because you're not a parent. Everyone I know lives in dread of the month. It's a time when your children wake up in the morning with their hands outstretched and every sentence ie prefaced by "I need."

The education that you thought was free back in September turns on you. "I need $12 for a book I lost." "I need $6 for a bus for the baseball playoffs." "I need $3 for a present for Miss Weems who is retiring." "I need your gas card and your car to drive to a party." "I need $40 to sand a desk that someone who looks like me put my name on."

The kid who dressed like a wino for 12 years suddenly has a social life which requires a wardrobe. "I need a $12 necktie for senior drees-up day." "I need a pair of hard shoes for the class picture even though I'm in the last row." "I need a dress for awards day."

Parents who endure the last May of their fiscal responsibility to their child should be eligible for disaster relief. It's the senior send-off. "I need a car of my own to show everyone my parents love me." "I need a $120 suit to wear under a graduation gown." "I need $30 for a yearbook." "I need $60 for a class ring." "I need $70 to go to dinner before the prom." "I need rental fees for my tux." "I need money for flowers."

And just when a parent thinks it's safe to write a check again, their offspring announces, "I'm going to college and become a doctor."

Roughly that amounts to one car, a wife (or husband), a small unplanned baby, a modest allowance, and . . . six more months of May.

Garden Club To Have Luncheon

The annual Lynndale Garden Club luncheon will be held Tuesday at the Greenville Country Club. The social hour will begin at 11:30 a.m. and the buffet luncheon will follow at noon.

President Jean DaVanzo will give her annual report and install new officers for the upcoming year including: Sally Ann Atkinson, president; Betsy Lewis, vice president; Martha Wilkerson, secretary; Claudette Lynch, treasurer; Lil McCurdy, program chairman; Ginny McConnell, historian; Naomi Jackson, chaplain; Phyllis Sloan and Pam Taft, children's activities; Gail McGara, civic; Jane Brown, courtesy; Gail Moore, grounds and horticulture; Virginia Herrin, newsletter, Wanza Broome, N.C. Federation of Garden Clubs; Marcia Tingelstad, planning and caring; Joyce Satterfield, social; Connie Jones, special projects; Louise Page, telephone, and Janice Whitehurst, parliamentarian.

The following new members will be introduced and each will be honored with a rose: Carol Irons, Karen Flickinger, Ruth Gibbs, Jacque Coggins, Charlie Carlson and Sandra Carter.

All members are reminded to bring a plant for the exchange following the installation.

The yard of the month was awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Hoover Taft III.

On The Young Side

By Clay Deanhardt

Each spring, 20 juniors with outstanding school and civic records are chosen to be inducted into the National Honor Society. The students are chosen based on their grade point average and extracurricular activities and they will be inducted Wednesday, May 23, at First Christian Church. The 20 new members are: Regina Carter, Virginia Close, Anne-Lynne Davis, Clay Deanhardt, Kara Deyton, Susan Evans, Douglas Frelke, Page Griffin, Stacy Hamilton, Leah Harris, Evan House, Charles Moore, Beth Parham, Vickie Petrie, Lisa Pories, Alicia Speight, Samantha Steingold, Amy VanScoy, Josie Wilem and Rocky Ziehr. In the fall of next year, 20 more seniors will be selected to fill the club roster of 40 members. Congratulations to all.

Thursday night was the annual spring concert at Rose High, with the chorus, the stage band and the Rose High Early Bird Jazz Band each performing. Ms. Betty Topper directs the chorus, while Chuck Allen conducts both band ensembles.

Three more clubs have selected officers for the upcoming year. The new Keywanette officers are: Ashley Miller, president; Ashley Lane, vice presiden; Nancy Douglas, secretary; Nancy Sneed, treasurer, and Karen Wainwright, historian. The new board members are Leah Lassiter, Andrea Coker and Amy Gavigan.

The 1984-85 Juniorettes will be led by the following students: Lisa Trevathan, president; Jill Whitehurst, vice-president; Alexis White, treasurer; Nancy Sneed, chaplain; Kara Deyton, historian, and Shannon Shearin, secretary.

The French Club also elected officers, and their new officers are: Clay Deanhardt, president; Amy VanScoy, vice-president, and Becky Powers, secretary/treasurer.

One correction needs to be made in last week's column. The FCA was incorrectly identified as the Federation of Christian Athletes, when it is in fact the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. My sincere apologies to all club members and president Sue Holec.

Powers play

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Stephanie Powers, co-star with Robert Wagner in the weekly "Hart to Hart" TV series, will make her debut as producer-writer-star in NBC-TV's "Family Secrets," a Mother's Day special.

Miss Powers' story deals with a mother and daughter who spend a weekend with the grandmother to pack up the family house following the death of the grandfather.

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP
THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK
Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.
The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment...to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.
1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one-half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.
2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.
3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.
Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.
The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains directions and a 2 week supply of products that together make weight control a physical science, not a challenge for your willpower.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

An acquaintance of mine makes an interesting meat loaf using ground beef and bulk pork sausage, embellished with pistachio nuts, that does triple duty.

She serves it cold, as you would a French pate, as a main dish for lunch or as a first course for dinner. Or she offers it as a sandwich filling for a light meal or an afternoon or evening snack.

When the loaf appears at lunch or dinner she accompanies it with lettuce, cherry tomatoes ad cornichons. Cornichons, imported from France, are available at specialty food shops. They are midget gherkins pickled with vinegar, salt and such seasonings as small white onions, tarragon, thyme and bay leaf. If cornichons are not at hand, the small sour pickles processed and packed in the United States and widely available in supermarkets may be used.

When we made sandwiches of the meat loaf, we varied the bread and spread it generously with homemade mayonnaise. As an accompaniment to the sandwiches, we offered small lettuce cups filled with cornichons.

PISTACHIO MEAT LOAF

- 1 large egg
- ½ pound ground lean beef
- ½ pound bulk pork sausage
- 1 cup finely chopped peeled apple
- ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup coarsely chopped natural pistachios
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon dried crushed oregano
- ⅛ teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
- Lettuce
- Cherry tomatoes
- Cornichons

In a medium bowl beat the egg enough to combine the yolk and white. Add the beef, sausage, apple, crumbs, onion, pistachios, salt, oregano and pepper. Pack into a glass or metal loaf pan (about 7 by 4 by 2 inches and holding 3 cups). Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until well-done — 50 to 60 minutes. Let stand about 20 minutes to reabsorb some of the juices; drain off remaining juices; cool; turn out. Cover tightly and chill.

At serving time, cut into ¼-inch thick slices. Serve on lettuce garnished with the tomatoes and cornichons as a main dish for lunch or as a first course for dinner. Or use as a filling for sandwiches for a light meal.

NOTE: Cornichons are sour pickled midget gherkins imported from France.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place Saturday Afternoon

The wedding ceremony of Ellen Manning Heath and Cameron Rigby Dudley Jr. took place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Bethel Baptist Church in Bethel. The double ring ceremony was performed by Norman Joyner.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Corinne M. Heath of Bethel and the late Lenwood Scott Heath Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Rigby Dudley Sr. of Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of East Carolina University. She is employed at Quadrangle Internal Medicine and the bridegroom works at North State Savings and Loan.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lenwood Scott Heath Jr. She wore a formal gown of ivory chiffonella over peau de soie and beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline, sheer yoke and beaded alencon lace bodice with cap sleeves. The A-line skirt, gathered in back, flowed into a semi-cathedral train bordered with alencon lace. Her waltz length veil of imported silkened bridal illusion was highlighted with beaded schiffli motifs and bordered with schiffli lace. It was attached to a cap of lace and pearls. The bride carried a semi-cascade of yellow roses, ivory carnations, baby's breath and springerii.

Brenda Gay Lutz of Greenville was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Frances Cameron Dudley of Greenville and Wanda Dudley Tutor of Philadelphia, Pa., sisters of the bridegroom, Bonita Manning Edwards of Greenville, Teresa Carter Kline of Sterling, Va., and Linda Corey Woodard of Raleigh.

Each attendant wore a formal gown of lavender matte taffeta styled with a ruffled drop shoulder and accented at the waist with a self-fabric cummerbund. They carried nosegays of white daisies, yellow carnations, purple statice, baby's breath with loops of satin yellow ribbon.

Honorary bridesmaids were Norma Elizabeth Manning of Greenville, Nancy Boyette Miller of Asheville, Debra Manning Perkinson of Greensboro and Elizabeth Weeks Smith of Raleigh.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Graham Johnson Davis of Wilmington, Moulton Braxton Massey III of Spartanburg, S.C., Worth Dunn Albea, Mike Whitehurst Corey and Max Ray Joyner Jr., all of Greenville.

Shelia Heath, sister-in-law of the bride, directed the ceremony.

Gerald Herring was organist and Mary Ann Davis and Donald Greene were vocalists. Selections were "Wedding Song," "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer."

A reception was given by the mother of the bride at the Bethel Rotary Club.

The couple will live in Greenville after a Caribbean cruise.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Greenville Country Club. A dance followed at the club and was given by friends and relatives of the couple.

Cousins of the bride entertained at a bridesmaids luncheon on Friday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Bruce of Winter Park, Fla., and is a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Nursing. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sensenbrenner of Waxhaw. He attended Lenoir-Rhyne College and graduated from the East Carolina University School of Medicine. Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon over taffeta designed with a fitted bodice and scooped neckline defined with peau d'ange lace. The lace extended down the center front of the bodice and around the waist. The front of the bodice was accented by pearls and the French pouf sleeves were enhanced with a design of peau d'ange lace with a ruffle at the elbow. The full skirt extended into a chapel length train. The skirt and train featured a double ruffle flounce of chiffon edged in peau d'ange lace. She wore a white turn-of-the-century hat with one side of the brim upturned. The crown and brim of the hat were overlaid in pearls and a short veil fell from the brim. She carried a cascade of pink roses, white miniature carnations tipped in lavender, snow drift pom pons and baby's breath.

Each attendant wore a formal length gown of orchid taffeta. The slip-styled gown was complemented by a taffeta boleo jacket designed with a regal collar and short Renaissance sleeves. The honor attendant carried a cascade bouquet of daisies and pink lavender tipped miniature carnations accented with ribbon streamers. MIRIAM SARZIN'S CHICKEN AND PRUNES

A neighbor's adaptation of a recipe low in fat and salt.

4 to 6 chicken breast halves (each with a wing attached)
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 teaspoons cumin seed, crushed
1 teaspoon paprika
2 garlic cloves, crushed
8 ounces pitted prunes
2 cups water
1 medium-size onion, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon corn oil

Remove skin from chicken breasts; wipe breasts and wings dry; place in a large heavy casserole. Sprinkle pepper, cumin, paprika and garlic over chicken; set aside for 30 minutes. Soak prunes in the water to plump. Separate onion slices into rings; arrange over and around chicken with prunes and about 1 cup of the prune water. Fawcett tapped

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Farrah Fawcett returns to television to star in the two-hour CBS movie, "The Red-Light Sting," laundered from the original title, "The Whorehouse Sting," which was deemed too graphic for TV tastes.

Scheduled for broadcast April 5, the romantic action drama is based on a true story recounting an undercover operation that used a real bordello to snare an underworld kingpin.

"The Red-Light Sting" is Miss Fawcett's first television appearance since she starred in the 1981 NBC miniseries, "Murder in Texas." She will co-star with Beau Bridges who plays an FBI man.

Spoleto Featuring Events From Opera To Break Dancing

MUDDY, BUT LOVELY — The shoreline of a cove along the eastern tip of land at Yaupon Beach south of Wilmington is a place of scenic beauty when viewed from higher ground. However, the ankle deep mud of the shore does not invite strolling. (Reflector Photo By Jerry Raynor)

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — This elegant city with its centuries-old traditions is about to be swept up in the whirl of opera, concerts, plays and dance recitals that are the Spoleto Festival U.S.A.

From the time a brass fanfare greets the festival Friday on the steps of Charleston's city hall until the final fireworks fade over Middleton Place Plantation June 10, more than 120 Spoleto performances will bring an estimated 110,000 arts lovers to Charleston.

The 1984 festival, the eighth, features a more traditional program than in recent years.

It also opens on a firm financial footing amid predictions of box office records. Spoleto General Manger Philip Semark has predicted that by the time the festival opens, more than $858,000 worth of tickets will have been sold, eclipsing a 1982 record.

The response is the result "of seven or eight years of building the reputation and visibility of the festival," said Semark, who will be at the helm of his first Spoleto.

This is the final Spoleto for Charles MacKay, the festival's director of development and finance who is leaving to take a position with the Opera Theater of St. Louis.

MacKay generally is credited with getting Spoleto on its financial feet following the early years when money problems cast a shadow over the festival's future.

The past seven seasons have seen "a tremendous period of growth, artisically and financially," MacKay said.

"Spoleto has really become a tradition and has renewed Charleston's place as a world-class cultural center. And we see this evident in the arts year-round in Charleston," he said.

"Last year's festival brought Spoleto a lot of national and international recognition because it was an adventurous program, and this year we're feeling the benefits of that. It's a nice balance because this season is more traditional."

The variety each season has justly earned Spoleto the reputation as the world's most comprehensive arts festival, MacKay said. "We have everything from grand opera to break dancing. That's pretty remarkable."

For the first time, this year's festival will feature three operas, something artistic director Gian Carlo Menotti has wanted since he created the American festival along the lines of the Spoleto Festival in Italy.

The festival, which Menotti says has "a very fine program and a challenging one," will include Franz Lehar's "The Merry Widow," Richard Strauss' "Ariadne Auf Naxos" and Menotti's own "Juana, La Loca."

Spoleto also will showcase the American premieres of two plays — David Williamson's "The Perfectionist" and Nigel Triffitt's "Secrets," which Menotti calls "not a play but something that would be a great challenge to our audience. It's a very surrealistic spectacle."

Musical offerings include, among others, performances by the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra and the Emerson String Quartet as well as the ever-popular chamber music concerts.

There will be dance performances by the Paul Taylor Dance Company, the Pacific Northwest Ballet and Tandy Beal and Company. Jazz greats Dizzy Gillespie, Ramsey Lewis and Tommy Flanagan also will entertain.

One of the innovations at this year's Spoleto is a performance by The Spoleto Express, a group of break dancers performing a work commissioned for the festival.

Throughout the 17-day festival, the city of Charleston stages Piccolo Spoleto, featuring hundreds of plays, concerts, films, poetry readings and dance performances by regional artists.

Diane Abbey, the director of the city's Office of Cultural Affairs, said with the exception of a Utah dance company, all the performers will be from South Carolina or other Southeastern states. In all, more than 500 performances will be presented, many of them free.

Wooden Birds Pay Golden Dividends

By TONY LUCIA
The Reading Eagle

READING, Pa. (AP) — Gary Fehr has found a way to make birds lay golden eggs. The 17-year-old Wilson High School senior carves birds out of wood, and his hobby has not only won him national honors, it has also paid off as an enjoyable way to make money.

Four years ago, Fehr became interested in bird carving through the example of his neighbor, Fred Cutts, a carver who won first and second place in the Ward Foundation World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition in 1976.

Fehr works in a neat, well-lit workshop in a corner of the basement of his parents' Whitfield home. He is surrounded by various woodworking tools and source books for bird photos and paintings, such as the Audubon Society's field guides.

To make each bird, Fehr draws a pattern on paper, then carbons it onto the wood, using a band saw and belt sander to make the rough cuts and smooth them.

"I use basswood, which comes from the linden tree, because it has little grain, and it works well," Fehr said. "It's soft but not too soft — you don't lose the effect you want."

For the fine, detailed work such as the feathers, intricately reproduced down to the individual barbs on each feather, Fehr uses a variety of grinding, burring and woodburning tools.

Depending on the coloration of the bird, Fehr either burns the color into the wood, or paints it with acrylic paint.

"I use acrylic because of the quick drying time," he said.

Fehr even makes remarkably natural-looking settings for his birds. It is nearly impossible to tell, even at close range, that the tuft of grass on one of his models is made out of aluminum.

"The feet are cast from metal, mostly lead, and the eyes are made of glass, the kind taxidermists use," Fehr said.

It takes Fehr somewhere between 15 and 30 hours to complete each bird, and how much he sells them for depends on how much time they take.

"I've sold eight or nine of them for prices ranging from $80 to $120," he said.

The ribbons Fehr has won for his carving illustrate the respect and admiration he has won from his peers.

In last year's annual Yorkcarvers Woodcarving Show, held at York College, Fehr won first place in the beginners' category, and third place in best of show, both for a lifelike small woodcock.

After graduation, Fehr would like to go to college, but has no firm plans at this point — other than to continue with his carving.

"No matter what I decide to do for a living, I'll always keep this as a hobby," he said.

Rare String Mouth Bow Dates Back To Early Indians

MOUTH BOW . . . Carlock Stooksbury of Norris, Tenn. strums a tune on his mouth bow, a rae instrument that he says dates back to the time of the Indians. Stooksbury, 61, says it's hard finding craftsmen who still know how to make the stringed instrument. (AP Laserphoto by Dave Carter).

By STAN DeLOZIER
Knoxville News-Sentinel

NORRIS, Tenn. (AP) — Carlock Stooksbury says every good orchestra must have one — a mouth bow player, that is.

"I guess that kind of limits the number of good orchestras," Stooksbury said.

Few people are familiar with the wooden, stringed instrument that is held with one end to the mouth and strummed with a homemade pick.

And even fewer are able to play one.

Stooksbury figures he must be one of the few mouth bow players left.

It was the only stringed instrument in the new world when Christopher Columbus landed — proof that the Indians used their bows for more than shooting arrows, he said.

"Indians would put one end of their bow in their mouth and pick the string," said Stooksbury. "They found out that by opening and closing their mouth as they picked they could play a tune."

Playing a mouth bow is nearly a lost art.

"There used to be a man at Andersonville who played one but he died. I'm the only one I know that's left and I'm 61 years old."

In addition, Stooksbury said he doesn't even know anybody who can make a good mouth bow. Alex Stewart, a fellow Norris resident, made the one Stooksbury plays.

"But he's quit making them," Stooksbury said. "He's 93 years old. He made my mouth bow nine years ago. If I wanted a good one made now I don't know who I'd get to do it.

"I've tried to make them but somehow mine come out whompsided on one end and cattywampused on the other. They sound all right but they sure don't look good. I've got one I started making but I got lazy and quit.

"Now the pick's not too hard to make. My daddy picked with his finger and I made me a pick out of a piece of an old plastic jug that had Prestone antifreeze in it."

Stooksbury, who owns a restaurant in Norris, learned to play the mouth bow from his father.

"I don't know who taught him," he said. "I guess way back somewhere an Indian told some of my people about it."

Sometimes Stooksbury can be found making music at the Museum of Appalachia on Highway 61 near Norris.

"We play sometimes when there is a special tour or something coming through. Mostly it's just when some of us decide to get together. We just get under a big shade tree and let 'er rip."

It was during a performance at the museum that Archie Campbell, star of television's "Hee Haw," saw Stooksbury playing and invited him to appear on the show last October.

He and several other east Tennesseans were flown to Disney Studios in California to be filmed as part of a documentary on country music.

However, during the filming Stooksbury played a jew's harp instead of a mouth bow. The documentary will be shown at Disneyland.

"The documentary is an hour long, but we'll be in it about a minute I think," Stooksbury said. "I wish I could make a living playing a mouth bow but it doesn't pay too well.

"We've been running a restaurant . . . for 23 years. We're making it all right — doing as good as we want to. We open at 10 in the morning and close at 7 at night, except on Saturday when we close at 5 in the afternoon."

Stooksbury confided that he doesn't want longer hours: it would cut into his time for mouth-bow playing.

Attended N.C. Arts Conference

Penny Laing, executive director and Su-Su Corbitt, member of the board of directors of Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, recently returned from the 10th annual conference of the North Carolina Association of Arts Council in Hickory.

Two awards were given to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council for work in communications — honorable mentions for best single piece for the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival poster, and most effective program or special event for the package of information prepared for the Arts Fund drive for 1984.

Keynote speaker Ralph Burgard spoke on the topic, "Culture, Community, Frivolity."

Mrs. Laing and Mrs. Corbitt attended workshops, seminars and general sessions on a variety of topics designed to help arts council volunteers and administrators on conceptual approaches and administrative techniques.

Fake Art Shown In Rio Gallery

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A pioneer art exhibit showing the masterpieces of Leger, Picasso, Matisse, Roualt, Modigliani, Derain, Dufy, Vlaminck and Van Dongen is attracting great interest in this South American country.

There's only one problem — the paintings are all fakes.

"Some people in the local art world thought it took a lot of courage to put on this showing," gallery owner Paulo Klabin said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"On the other hand, a lot of people thought it was a great idea," he said.

He was surrounded by the bogus works, all painted by the late Hungarian counterfeiter Elmir de Hory.

The paintings come from the collection of Carlo Mossy, a Brazilian film producer who was a close friend of the late Fernand Legros, a French art dealer. Legros was in turn a close collaborator of de Hory's.

The works of de Hory, whose life was chronicled in an Orson Welles film called "F for Fake," have been displayed before. But Klabin said this was the first formal showing of the copied paintings in Brazil and probably in all of Latin America.

"Fakery does not invalidate art," Klabin said, standing next to false copies of Picasso's "Le Peintre" ("The painter") and "Torada" ("Bullfight").

"You can appreciate de Hory's talent as a copier," the gallery owner said. "But you can also say: 'I love Picasso, but I could never afford an original.' But with de Hory, I can have a Picasso in my own home."

The original "Torada" is worth around $700,000, according to Klabin. He is selling the de Hory version for $10,330. It is no wonder, then, that art buyers are flocking to the exhibit for the bargain fakes.

A phony de Hory "Femme Assise" ("Seated Woman") based on the work by Italian modernist Amedeo Modigliani was on sale at the Rio gallery for the equivalent of $11,800. The real thing is worth over $1 million.

Klabin said he had sold two of the 15 paintings on display in the first three days of the exposition and had firm orders for several others.

Brazilian art critic Frederico Morais called the de Hory exhibit "polemical."

"Falsification is art seen as an object of consumption," the art critic said. "But the matter becomes more complicated when falsification captures its own space within the circles of art."

Morais noted that classical art training is based on the copying of the great works of the masters. "What artist has not paid homage to Duchamp? What artist has not stood at attention and saluted before Mondrian," he said.

"So if the artist behaves this way before art with no feelings of guilt, ... then let the masterworks be counterfeited," the art critic concluded.

Emmys set

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences announced its 36th annual Emmy Awards presentations for prime time programs will be telecast Sunday, Sept. 23, by CBS-TV.

The three-hour awards show, honoring the best comedy, drama, musicals, special events, children programs, news and sports will be held at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

The Emmy Awards Banquet, primarily presenting trophies to the creative arts and some area awards, will take place the preceding Sunday, Sept. 16, at Los Angeles' Century Plaza hotel. Nominations will be announced Aug. 2.

Spacek cast

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sissy Spacek will star in "Strawberry," a contemporary comedy based on Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Beth Henley's original story and screenplay for Warner Bros.

"Strawberry" deals with a small town woman's migration to the big city where she experiences the difficulties of becoming a nighclub comedienne.

The Robert Shapiro Production will begin filming in Los Angeles and Mississippi this fall when Miss Spacek completes her current assignment as the star of Columbia Pictures' "Violets Are Blue."

The island of Manhattan was formally surrendered to the British by the Dutch Nov. 10, 1674. Lying at the mouth of the Hudson River, the island was strategically important to the British for control of the Hudson Valley. It enabled them to offer resistance to the French whose American holdings then stretched from the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi.

If you're in the market for a new home, take a good look at that symbol.

It's the sign of a remarkably energy-efficient new kind of house brought to you by Owens-Corning and your local builder.

The home is designed using a sophisticated computer system. It features the latest construction techniques and high-quality insulation materials, and is built to cost you significantly less to heat and cool than ordinary homes.*

Here's the gist of how the idea works.

To make a Thermal Crafted™ Home, your builder uses Owens-Corning's computerized system to evaluate his building plans and the use of various energy-saving construction options. The direction a house faces, for example. The levels of insulation. Or whether the windows are double-glazed. And so on.

Then he decides how best to reach the degree of energy-efficiency required to qualify as a Thermal Crafted Home.

Materials—as well as design—are important. A Thermal Crafted Home is built with quality energy-saving products such as famous Owens-Corning pink Fiberglas® insulation. Or, if the plans call for insulated sheathing, the Owens-Corning Energy Shield™ sheathing.

And of course a Thermal Crafted Home is constructed to keep on saving energy.

BONUS: while designed primarily to save you money on fuel bills month after month, a Thermal Crafted Home may also enable you to buy more house than you thought you could afford now. In conventional homes, utility costs can eat up a big chunk of your monthly budget. But with a Thermal Crafted Home, the money you save on heating and cooling could help you carry a larger mortgage.

It's easy to see that as fuel costs rise, the resale value of energy-efficient homes ought to rise, too.

Improve your standard of living. Call a Thermal Crafted Home builder soon.

OWENS/CORNING FIBERGLAS

*Savings vary. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power.

Artist Creates From Abundance Of Discarded Material

AT WORK . . . Kathy Sholar and her husband, Rurik Zuidhoek, pose in their work clothes in the yard of their home in Greenville. The two plan this summer to find a rural retreat away from town noises.

Eight years ago Kathy Sholar left her hometown of Providence, Rhode Island to study art at East Carolina University. Two years ago she married a Netherlands born flutist and craftsman, Rurik Zuidhoek. This summer the two plan to make a dream come true, "to find some place for a few months at least when we can be outdoors, where we can get away from traffic and town noises. You could say we're looking around for a dream spot, a quiet power spot of nature," Kathy commented. "We have several places in mind, but haven't decided yet which we'll choose, where we'll go."

After graduating from the School of Art at ECU, Kathy at first worked as a commercial designer for a local florist. "It was fun, and the discipline was good for me. At first, having to turn out artwork to somebody else's specifications was something of a chore, but I soon got to the point of liking what I did."

It has been in the past couple of years that Kathy has discovered the form of art that most deeply appeals to her. "Miniatures in collages, designing greeting cards are two forms of art that I especially enjoy doing, and what I think I do best," she says. "I love vivid colors, the challenge of combining found material with drawings and sketches on a small scale that complement the found items I choose to use in a composition."

Her art has been shown on several occasions in the local area, both at the Greenville Museum of Art and in other local and area shows.

Kathy admits that collecting, salvaging all sorts of materials "has always been a major hang-up for me. This became even more deeply ingrained when I found out my college roommate, Susan Edwards, was equally fond of collecting things that people throw away all too quickly.

"We used to, for example," she added, "retrieve flowers from banquets and other affairs that were thrown out while they still had good life left. We'd give some away to people we knew enjoyed flowers. Others we'd take to the studio. Sometimes," she laughed, "it became ridiculous, the mass of flowers we'd have on hand."

During the past couple of years, Kathy has worked both in teaching art and drama — art classes at the Greenville Museum of Art, and drama at the Recreation and Parks Department last summer with children enrolled in the summer theater program.

"I'm now working at the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center," she said. "It's great. I like working with the children and with the staff at the center.

"Sometimes it gets a little wild. In one corner of a room I'll have pottery the children is working on, with paintings in the middle of the room, and break dancers working in another area. It's a pleasure working with children, they are natural athletes. And they are totally honest in what they say and do."

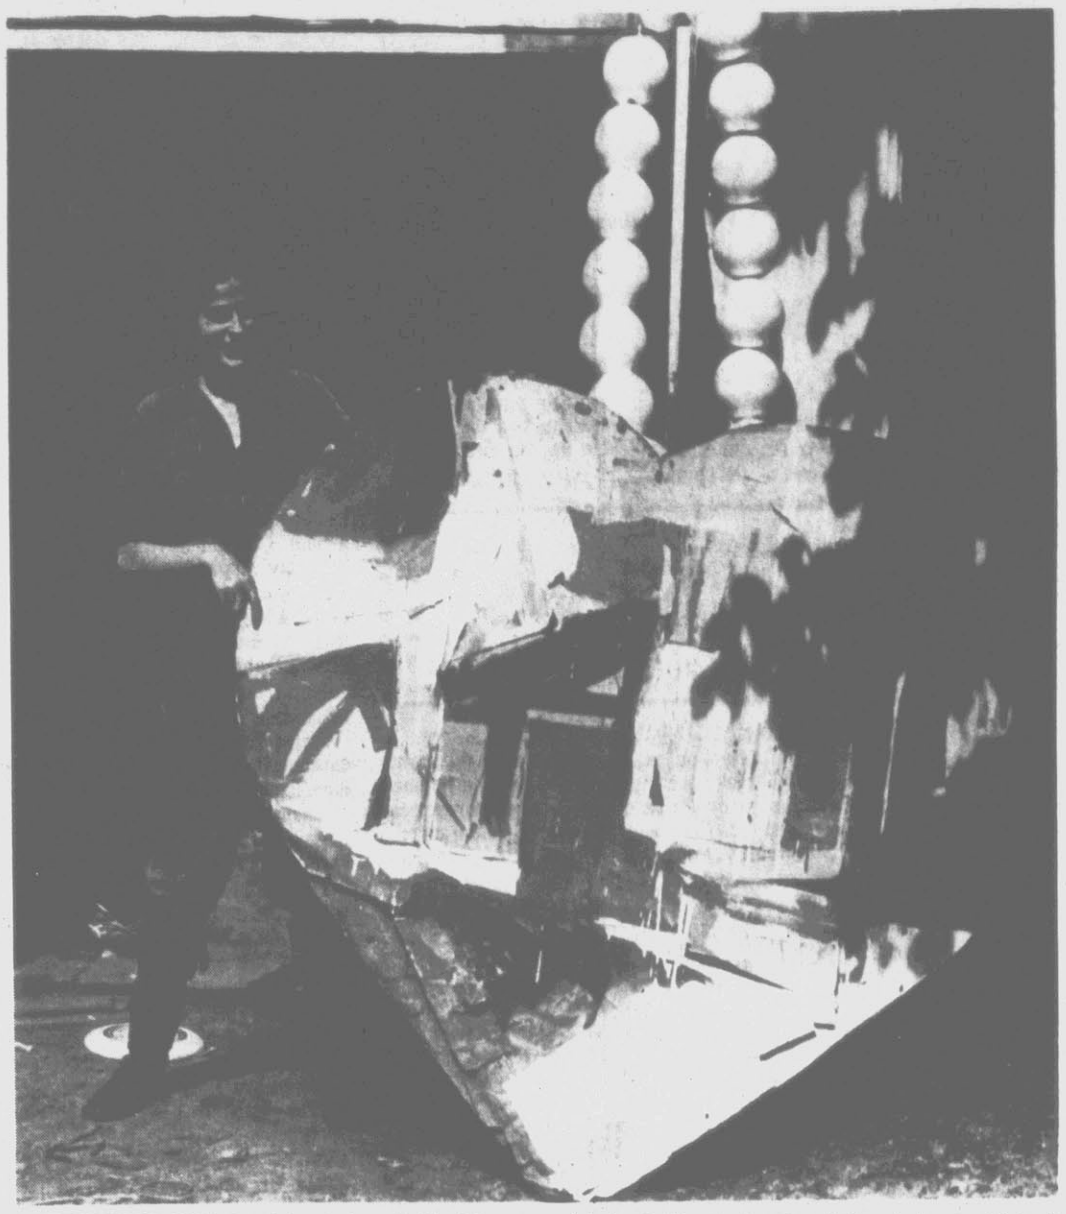

Rurik, a native of The Hague in the Netherlands, lived in Morocco and in India before coming to the U.S. He has had training in and hopes someday to complete studies for deep tissue massage. "Rurik spent some time in India training in yoga," Kathy commented. "He studied at Ashram."

"Rurik and I are both oriented to saving material from the abundance of re-usable items that come from American technology," Kathy said. "In fact," she smiled, "it has created a give-away problem."

According to Kathy, Rurik's creative talent lies in shaping things. "He's good at making grapevine wreaths, and in working with wood," she said.

"One thing I've learned from Rurik is listening to music other than pop or rock and roll while I'm working. Since he's a trained flutist, he enjoys working to the sound of tapes or records of chamber music, and I'm getting more into that too. It is soothing, and good to listen to as well."

A TREASURED GIFT . . . A heart-shaped object is an oft-recurring motif in art work by Kathy Sholar. Because of that, one of her prized possesions is this large painted valentine designed and given to her by Michael and Lisa Loderstedt.

Accent On Local Young Achievers

PASSING BY . . . Gordon McKellar, skiing barefoot, waves as he passes the boat docking area on the Town Common. He and his two training companions, Mike Hodges and Kevin Singletary, take turns at operating the boat, monitoring the skier, and skiing.

ECU Trio Trains On The Tar River

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

A ten-mile stretch of the muddy Tar River is their training ground. Their hopes are pinned on winning championships in four categories of water skiing. The trio of water skiers have more than just their love of water sports in common — "Each of us is majoring in electronics industrial technology at East Carolina," commented Gordon McKellar.

McKellar, a senior, is from Southern Pines. His two trainee companions are Mike Hodges of Pinehurst, a junior, and Kevin Singletary of Palm Beach, Florida, a senior.

"Originally, my home was in Wrightsville Beach," said Singletary, "but Palm Beach is now home." Singletary has earned five North Carolina state championships. "Now, I'm practicing for the national competition," he said. "It's to be held at the end of the summer season, tentatively scheduled in Louisiana."

"Gordon and I are training for the southern conference regional competition," Hodges said. "This should be near the end of the summer season, possibly in late July or during August." McKellar added the southern conference will "most likely be held in Seffner, Florida."

Training to perfect water skills in various events — conventional skiing with water skis as well as trick and barefoot skiing — the trio devotes considerable free time to practice. "We put in about ten hours of hard work a week," Singletary said.

"Our training ground is a ten mile stretch on the Tar," McKellar added. "We practice all the way from the Town Common to Yankee Hall and beyond to Grimesland."

Although the Tar River water is muddier than water they will normally encounter in bigger, clearer water competition, they agree the Tar is a handy practice ground with not many other boats on the water.

"One good thing, people along the river who see us are friendly," Singletary said. "They often wave at us."

"And we try always to wave back," Hodges added, "especially if it's girls who are waving."

Betsy Markowski 'Best Of Show' Winner At The Smithsonian

BEST OF SHOW AWARD . . . Betsy Jordan Markowski of Greenville is one of three "Best of Show" award winners in the Smithsonian Institution/American Pewter Guild competition held in Washington, D. C. With Mrs. Markowski are Pierce Dunn, center, president of the American Pewter Guild, and Marshall Ritch, juror for the competition.

ECU News Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A pair of fabricated pewter boxes made by artist Betsy Jordan Markowski won one of three "Best of Show" awards in a design competition sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and the American Pewter Guild.

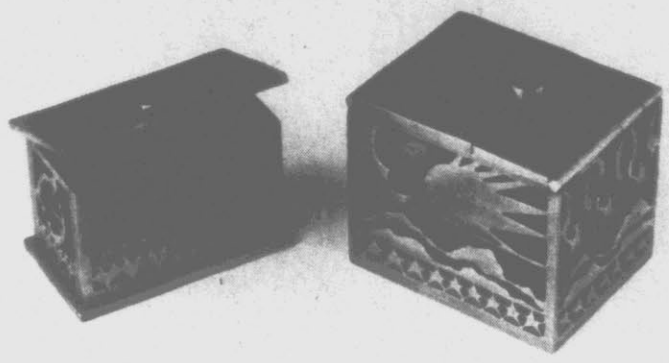

The Markowski boxes, along with other winning items — a set of wrought pewter bases by a Milwaukee artist and a production teapot by the Kirk-Stieff Company of Baltimore — are on view this month at the Smithsonian Museum of American History. The design competition was held to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Amerian Pewter Guild, a national association.

Mrs. Markowski, a candidate for the Master of Fine Arts degree in design from the East Carolina University School of Art, holds degrees in art education and constructive design from Florida State Univrsity.

An active exhibitor, she has shown her metal and textile work in some three dozen juried and invitational exhibitions in New York and several southern states.

She is an exhibiting member of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. and Carolina Designer Craftsmen, and has won awards in exhibition competitions sponsored by the N. C. Museum of History and the Kinston Community Council for the Arts.

Most recently, her work has been on view at the North Carolina Museum of Art's 1984 North Carolina Artists Exhibition in Raleigh and at the Greenville Museum of Art's W-6 show, a display of works by six Greenville women artists.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOTLZ

Rae Andre and Peter Ward shift attention from the "one-minute manager" to "The 59-Second Employee." Through the experience of Dave, a fictional employee feeling exploited by his manipulative manager, the authors expose the secret of one-minute management. They reveal the on-the-spot praisings, reprimands, and goal-settings which are the one-minute manager's tools. Employees subject to such tactics are counseled not to join in the one-minute game but to "stay one significant second ahead of the one-minute manager."

The employee working udner a one-minute manager should study his or her superior and the company itself in order to best know how to "manage up." Knowing the manager's style and how employees are regarded by the company will enable an employee to maintain dignity and interest in the job while gracefully sidestepping the manager's techniques. With humor and wit, the authors of "The 59-Second Employee" puncture the myth of the single-idea, all-purpose management scheme and remind business readers that "there ain't no one best way."

Also aiming to debunk management fads is Robert Townsend. His popular 1970 book "Up the Organization" has been expanded, revised, and retitled "Further Up the Organization." Townsend has kept the alphabetical arrangement of his short anecdotal chapters. His topics range from "accounting and reporting" to "workers should own company stock."

Townsend casts his irreverent eye on business traditions, unworkable new theories of management, and misguided business school graduates. In doing so, he takes a common-sense approach to the operation of a company and the organization of people for work. Townsend advocates "participative management" and scoffs at personnel departments, public relations people, and consultants. Readers of Townsend's first book, as well as those unfamiliar with his ideas, will enjoy the snappy insights of this successfull veteran business-watcher.

Colonial Day Set At Tryon Palace

NEW BERN — Tryon Palace will be the historic setting for the sixth annual Colonial Living Day May Saturday from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The grounds and gardens are open free to the public on this special day, and over 35 regional craftsmen will demonstrate their skills outside the colonial capitol and governor's mansion.

Crafts run the gamut from tinsmithing and gun making to spinning and weaving, basket making and candlemaking — skills necessary to the operation of North Carolina's grandest 18th century household.

A highlight of Colonial Living Day will be the activities of the Guilford Militia under the direction of Robert Shively. The militia, organized four years ago by two muzzle loading clubs in Alamance County, will set up an encampment complete with a regimental surgeon. Their program will include military drills and musket demonstrations throughout the day.

The fourth season of the Tryon Palace Drama Tours, Kermit Hunter's "The Rising Splendor," will premiere on Memorial Day, Monday, May 28. Twelve actors, portraying colorful characters from the early days of Tryon Palace, entertain visitors as they pass through the rooms of the palace.

The drama tours alternate throughout the tour day with regular interpretive tours by the museum guides. The drama tours will be available through Aug. 19 except on Sundays and Wednesdays, when all Tryon Palace tours are given by museum guides.

The Tryon Palace Restoration and Gardens complex is open year round Mondays through Saturdays, 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. and on Sundays 1:30-4 p.m. Last tours each day begin at 4 p.m.

The two hour tour of Tryon Palace and Gardens is $4 for adults and $1 for children (grades 1-12). As of July 1, there will be a price increase to $5 for adults and $1.50 for children. The three hours plus combination tour (Stanley House, Stevenson House, Tryon Palace and Gardens) will increase from $6 to $7 for adults and from $2 to $3 for children. Children under six are free. All interior tours are guided.

Persons wanting more information on Colonial Living Day or other Tryon Palace events are to call 638-1560.

400th Souvenir Sources Provided

By PALMER HILL
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

Porcelain plates, lapel pins and hams. Who but Americans could fully appreciate all three?

What we know as America was first settled by the British in 1584 and transformed into a nation by people from all over the world. So it is fitting that during America's 400th Anniversary, 1984-87, a variety of mementos of the celebration will be available to the public.

Suppliers of official "America's 400th Anniversary" commemorative products have been announced by Lindsey Warren Jr., chairman of the 400th Anniversary Committee and the private fundraising American Quadricentennial Corporation. Agency East, Inc., the Plymouth, N.C.-based licensing agency for the celebration, and the American Quadricentennial Corporation have licensed 21 companies thus far to produce and market official products.

"We've been very selective about the quality of official merchandise," Warren said. "We've licensed everything from art and music to popular family souvenir items and English and North Carolina crafts."

Warren said the American Quadricentennial Corporation and the Friends of the Elizabeth II, Inc., have trademarked America's 400th Anniversary logos and all related wording with all rights reserved. "The royalties from the sale of products will be a substantial part of our future funding," he said, "and we of course plan to vigorously pursue any infringements."

In addition to licensed commercial products, official publications of America's 400th Anniversary Committee are beong published by the University of North Carolina Press and the Historical Publications Section of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.

Michael D. Swearingen, president of Agency East, said several more companies also have products under consideration for licensing.

Interested retailers may contact Agency East, Inc., for a current list of licensed suppliers and merchandise. A wholesale catalogue is being produced for bulk purchasing of official products and will be available in plenty of time for the July 13 opening celebration of America's 400th Anniversary.

For more information on official 400th products, contact Michael D. Swearingen, Agency East, Inc., P.O. Box 457, Plymouth, N.C. 27962, (919) 793-9064.

Mexican Locale Has Everything For Filmmakers

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) — The way Juan Jose Perez Pandilla tells it, this area of perpetual spring has just about everything film producers want or need: near-perfect weather, low production costs and an abundance of talent.

"The day you don't have sun, we pay the payroll," said Perez Pandilla, who has headed the Morelos State Film Commission since its inception in December 1983.

While Perez Pandilla admittedly is bragging about the weather, it is not an idle boast. People living here have to scratch their heads and think when asked about the last time there was really bad weather.

Because of its year-round springlike climate, Cuernavaca has been a recreation area since the Toltec Indians of 800-1000 A.D. During Prohibition it was a playground for American gangsters and during the Red Scare of the 1950s, it was a refuge for expatriates from the United States.

"California no longer has the skies (because of pollution). We do and we don't sell it to you, we give it to you," Perez Pandilla said in an interview.

The film commission here is similar to the state film commissions that have mushroomed in the United States to attract productions from Hollywood. In Mexico, the only state that had a film commission in the past was Durango in the north central part of the country where many Westerns have been made.

The formation of the Morelos commission was prompted at least in part by an upsurge in productions in Mexico that took advantage of bargain basement prices resulting from the 1982 devaluation of the peso. The price advantages are being eroded by inflation, but the idea of filming in Mexico has spread to Europe and elsewhere.

Perez Pandilla said the Cuernavaca area has more than blue skies. The state has purchased three large warehouses which, with little work, have been converted into sound studios for a variety of indoor settings.

Work also is under way on sound and film processing laboratories which should be ready within six months. A film institute is being planned with its campus in Cuernavaca.

For outdoor settings, Perez Padilla said, there are forests resembling the terrain in Canada, mountains that could be in Colorado, jungles, deserts, caves and lagoons — all within a few hours' drive from here.

"There are a lot of friends we talk to — we induce them to come here," Perez Pandilla said. "We hope we can compete across the border."

His efforts have been paying off. From January through March, eight full-length feature or TV movies were completed in the area. Five were in production in April. Before the commission was established, the area averaged five film productions a year.

Spanish Singer Julio Iglesias Has Sold 100 Million Albums

By ROBERT McCLURE

MIAMI (UPI) — One of the most popular singers in the world is a skinny, 40-year-old Spaniard who is losing his hair and wears tight white pants. And chances are you've never heard of him.

He is Julio Iglesias, the Spanish singing sensation who sold a record-breaking 100 million albums. Worldwide, he is the biggest heart-throb to hit the music scene since Frank Sinatra. Now, "the Spanish Sinatra" wants to win over another 234 million people in the United States.

Iglesias acknowledges that he just hasn't measured up yet in the country where it counts.

"There's a lot of power in the music here," Iglesias said in an interview at his $3 million bayfront home in Indian Creek Village, an exclusive island community in Miami's Biscayne Bay.

"You know, you Americans sell the music all over the world. In Europe, we sell mineral water, we sell wine, we sell dresses — but not really singers."

But Iglesias is planning a new assault on America this spring and summer. He's expanded his musical style, singing duets with Willie Nelson and Diana Ross and bringing in back-up harmonies from the Beach Boys and the Pointer Sisters.

An American tour begins with a date at the United Nations General Assembly in June.

Iglesias — simply "Julio" to fans across the globe — speaks and sings in six languages: Spanish, French, Italian, English, Japanese and German.

The Rudolf Valentino-ish crooner has parlayed his gift for foreign tongues and his musical gift into a following rivaled only by music greats such as the Beatles, Abba, and the man to whom he is often compared, Frank Sinatra.

"I think that every artist in the world dreams to really sing all over the world," he said. "And of course I sing here in the United States, but still I'm not popular in the Saxon community enough to really sell a lot of records."

Visitors must cross a guarded bridge to reach Iglesias' white marble home, where they are greeted in his tiled driveway by a member of his staff and the singer's two waist-high hound dogs.

To enter the palatial home, one walks through a patio and past the first of two pools. Inside the living room, where a half-dozen aids scurry about, Iglesias sits at the Yamaha piano. Spacious powder-blue couches line the room, which also features a black granite fireplace and Oriental vases and lamps.

The rail-thin Iglesias greets visitors dressed in white T-shirt, excruciatingly tight white pants and white sneakers. It is his standard uniform while off stage. He dons a blue windbreaker when he's chilly.

The son of a surgeon-gynecologist, the Spanish Sinatra studied English at Cambridge before returning to Spain to take up Latin and semi-pro soccer, known as "futbol" in his homeland.

"Yes, I played futbol — very badly," he said modestly. Yet he was a star goalkeeper, according to his former teammates. He planned a career in diplomacy. A crippling auto crash changed everything at age 21 and he fell into music accidentally.

"I had a big accident," he recalled. "I was hurt for quite a few years. It was very bad. It was very bad on my back and I was two years in the bed, one year in the hospital.

"You couldn't complicate my life more. I feel like I've been through everything. I had to learn to walk again. That accident changed my life."

While Iglesias was recuperating in the hospital, a nurse loaned him a guitar. Bored, he applied himself and soon launched a music career unprecedented in its success.

He has more than 350 gold and platinum records, the all-time high for which he will be honored in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Iglesias says he's a little bothered by the incessant comparisons of his career to Sinatra's because he fears people hearing him for the first time will expect him to be like Sinatra.

"This is one way the press uses sometimes to explain to Americans who this Julio Iglesias is," he says. "I'm much more a person to be genuine. But still there is a great distance between he and I.

"It's not that I don't like to be compared, because I love Sinatra. But Sinatra is Sinatra. It's a completely different style. It's a way to explain quickly what is already apparent for Europeans.

"But you say Sinatra, Sinatra. Then everybody wants to see Sinatra. It's not very understanding maybe because they're going to be confused." ——

With Iglesias' fame came continued adversity as well as money and success. He broke his usual silence on the kidnapping of his father, Dr. Julio Iglesias-Puga, then 66, by Basque terrorists in 1981, to say:

"Oh that's over. It's done. I tell you, all the family forgot that. It was very bad."

The separatist Basques demanded $2 million in ransom, but Iglesias theorizes they also sought notoriety by kidnapping the father of a popular singer.

"I was here at home. I was going to the studio and I had a call," he said of the day the abduction took place. "My ex-wife called me from Switzerland and I went straight there. It was all over in 3 or 4 days."

Actually, the abduction lasted 19 days. Spanish authorities burst into the terrorists' hideout as the kidnappers slept to rescue Dr. Iglesias.

"My father was a surgeon, now he doesn't do anything," Iglesias said. "He's physically perfect but I think in the mind...he was controlled 24 hours a day. His mind was working for 24 hours a day."

Another misfortune that came Iglesias' way after his rise to stardom was the end of his marriage. He and his former wife, Isobel, both are Catholic and decided to have the marriage annulled rather than divorce.

The children — a teenage daughter and two younger sons — live with their mother in Madrid. Sometimes they visit their father at his spacious Indian Creek villa.

"You never have what you need," Iglesias observed. "The day I have what I need I will stop to sing. This is a wonderful house, but it's a house, not a home."

Will tour from Boston to Los Angeles

Traveling occupies most of Iglesias' time anyway. His upcoming six-month tour will take him to Las Vegas, Dallas, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston, Montreal, Chicago, New York, and Atlantic City. He'll also make an appearance at the Olympics in Los Angeles July 27-Aug. 6 and later will embark for Europe, Africa, Australia and Japan.

There are not many hours to enjoy the good life.

"It helps for me to take care of my life. I have a very healthy life," Iglesias said, cigarette in hand, drink on the table.

"Of course I'm full of vices like every human. I don't show the vices. I know a lot of vices I will never make in my career, because I have to be French for the French, German for the Germans, Portuguese for the Brazilians and Spanish for the Spanish. I have to be really a lot of things at the same time.

"I have to change. I was French yesterday, before yesterday I was Italian, before before yesterday I was Spanish and now I have to be American, which is sometimes very confusing."

In Iglesias' world of international, multilingual entertainment, there is bound to be some confusion. It's the factor he blames for a bothersome news report last fall that he was going to sing for the late Soviet premier Yuri Andropov.

The Spanish news agency EFE reported he planned the visit. But the report stemmed from an off-the-cuff remark Iglesias made to the effect that he would sing for anyone, even the leader of the Soviet Union, according to Iglesias.

"Sometimes we want to make people dream. I'm an entertainer. I'm a typical entertainer. I'm not involved in any class of political things. I'm just selling off music. And music makes a lot of dreams. And people get happy, people enjoy the music and that's our reason."

But back "home" in Miami, where he was planning an Oct. 15 concert, the report set off howls of indignation from the stolidly anti-Communist Cuban exile community — Julio's biggest fans in the United States.

"Please, you must put out a telex that he is not going to Russia," pleaded his Colombian-born press agent, Fernan Martinez.

No matter. By showtime the fans

. . . Singer Sells 100 Million Albums

were back in Iglesias' hands — pliable as putty.

"His songs go right to the romantic part of you," said Kari Carbonell, 21, one of about 32,000 fans who came to his show in the Orange Bowl. "It's like magic. He's got a very suave personality. But he's down to earth."

"He's got skinny legs, he's losing his hair. But he touches people," added her companion, Marta Jacinto, 17. Women crowded to the front of the stage, only to be pushed back by security guards and police. Unlike fans at some of Julio's concerts, those at the Orange Bowl show did not toss women's panties to the stage in a show of affection.

Iglesias bent and kissed a woman who brought him a flower. The girls screamed all the way to the uppermost seating sections.

Women fainting has become an expected part of an Iglesias' shows, he said.

"In the concert happens many things. There is excitement. There is loving, there is tender, there is many things," he said. "Of course you excite the people and they will answer you."

Iglesias' appeal, though in part sensual, is broad, said Enrique Bocamegra, 31, a fan at the Orange Bowl show.

"He sings with his heart and there is a connection. Everybody feels the same and everybody feels good," Bocamegra said. "His songs are not just for people in love, not just for old people, not just for kids. It's for everybody."

After years of making albums for Europeans, Brazilians and Japanese, Iglecias released his first album with several songs targeted for the United States last year. It was entitled "Julio."

"Julio Iglesias has already brought this special joy and romance to countless millions of admirers around the world," a blurb on the back cover says. "Listen to the voice of this man. There is a rainbow of emotion, personal sensitivity and the uncomplicated expression of love."

Next to those words, Iglesias smiles broadly at the would-be record buyer. His tanned, hairy torso peeks out the undone zipper of the leather jacket he wears. The angle of his head and the curl of his hair hide his receding hairline.

An album with songs recorded entirely for American consumption is due out in late March.

Iglesias' duet with Willie Nelson, entitled "To All the Girls We've Loved Before," hit the airwaves in late February. It is one of the nine songs in the forthcoming album.

Iglesias chanced on Nelson — who like himself is on the CBS record label — when both were in London and the country-western artist heard Iglesias on the radio and got in contact with him.

"I like Willie and I like the song," said Iglesias. "It's very touching and very different. I think it's a song every singer can sing."

Iglesias calls himself "an old artist," but says he has the energy for a new bid to expand his popularity and record sales.

"Of course (success in the United States) is a goal for any artist — any European artist," he said. "It's a goal because because it's very difficult. This country is very a competitive country and our style of music is very different. It's very important not only for me but for our music — the European artists'. A lot of luck I need. A lot of luck."

James Brown's Coming Back

BY SUSAN RUEL

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A television video with Michael Jackson is just one of the signs that James Brown, soul brother emeritus, is on his way back up.

In places such as Kuwait, Hong Kong and London, the Godfather of Soul has reigned for three decades. His manager, Frank McCrea, said he drew a crowd of more than a million in Paris last year.

The way Brown drove San Francisco audiences wild recently, cooking as if it were only yesterday, suggests his comeback in America may be close at hand.

At 50, Brown is not content to put on a nostalgia show. The man who sang "Say It Loud, I'm Black and I'm Proud" still grunts, growls, screams, gasps and makes moves break dancers could study.

He conducts the tight 12-piece band, a virtual academy of soul he has traveled with for more than 20 years. His legendary sax player, Maceo Parker, embroiders the show with heartstopping riffs.

Brown, a survivor, has forsworn drugs and undergone a religious revival. When he loses his grenade-like temper, symbolic of black militant rage in the 1960s, he recites the 23rd Psalm instead of exploding.

Brown hasn't lost the hip energy of tunes such as "Papa's Got a Brand New Bag," or the sexual fury of "Cold Sweat" and "Sex Machine." He said he sees no contradiction in playing his old, raunchy hits and living a Christian life.

Brown, a black American artist who was popular with white audiences, now says he "hates to hear the word black or white."

"It wasn't my idea to have two water fountains, one black and one white," he said. "I never seen black water. People don't say Ralph Nader-white, Santa Claus-white. Any time you isolate people, it's a sin against humanity."

"I made black a positive — I took a negative and made it a positive," he added.

Brown said New Wave, punk, reggae and other contemporary music trends are "a simpler form of what I did 20 years ago."

"If you take high octane, why buy regular?" he asked.

If it weren't for the 837 tunes he recorded, Brown said, "whites would still be dancing to the upbeat — I taught them to catch the downbeat."

Brown's MTV video with Michael Jackson and B.B. King is a modified version of the show he has taken on the road for three decades. He still shouts out the names of cities like a conductor in the old hit "Night Train." He still whoops, hollers and moans songs like "Too Funky in Here" and "Superbad."

Danny Rea, the emcee who has been with Brown for a quarter century, still drapes him with red satin during his ritual collapse in the middle of every show.

And Brown always rises again.

Ancient Mummies Discovered In Chilean City

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — A group of 74 mummies believed to be about 5,000 years old — roughly the same age as the first mummies in Egypt — has been recovered from a prehistoric cemetery in Arica, Chile's northernmost city.

The figures were discovered in the center of the city on a construction site for a new water line. Some were preserved more elaborately than others, but most of the mummies — adults and children alike — were prepared so that they could be stood up like statues.

The rigid remains are attributed to the Chinchorros, a coastal people who earned their livelihood from the sea and probably used the bodies in ancestor-worship ceremonies.

Hundreds More Expected

"Hundreds of other mummies will probably be found in the cemetery, which measures only about a sixth of a city block," reports Marvin J. Allison, a professor of anthropology at the University of Tarapaca in Arica, who is helping with the recovery of the mummies.

Four of the bodies recovered so far showed traces of syphilis or a disease closely related to it. If further analysis of the remains shows that the illness was contracted sexually, it could reinforce the contention that the disease was carried from the New World to the Old World by the early explorers, observes Allison.

In the most complicated embalming process, and the one prevalent at the site, the skin was first removed from the body and probably preserved in salt water. Most of the internal organs were removed, the body was dried with glowing coals, and the skeleton reinforced with sticks and ropes to make it rigid.

The body was rebuilt with various materials such as specially prepared dirt and vegetable matter held in place by alternating layers of mud and straw matting. A final layer of mud hardened the mummy, and the preserved skin was carefully fitted and resewn over it. The skull was fitted with an elaborately modeled mask made from a substance resembling modeling clay.

"Usually colored red, black, or white, the masks were works of art," says Allison, whose work is supported by the National Geographic Society. "Each was designed a little differently, prehaps to reflect the personality of the deceased."

No Frills Burial

At the other extreme was a kind of no-frills mummification where bodies were wrapped in matting and placed in shallow graves. Preservation then occurred naturally from the drying action of the arid coast's warm sand.

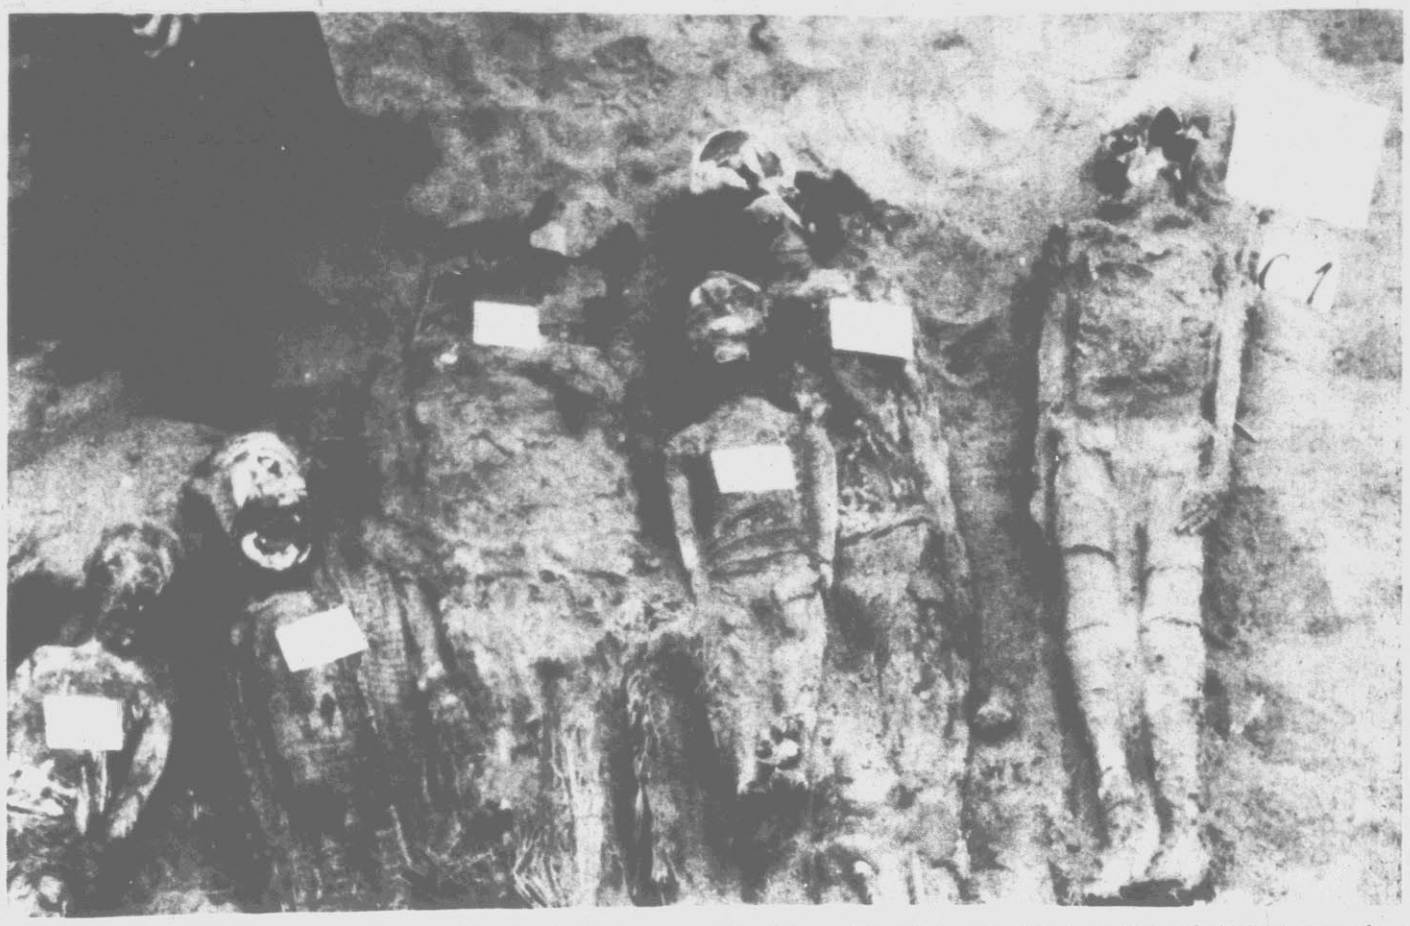

Clothing and other artifacts such as fishooks and spear throwers were found with both male and female mummies, indicating a kind of egalitarian society where both sexes did the same work and even dressed alike in loin cloths covered by a hula-type skirt made from reeds.

It wasn't completely classless, however. Allison believes that a specially designated class of priests or embalmers prepared the mummies, which were probably the centerpieces for some kind of organized religion.

"The body may have been prepared to stay with the living, because the individual was still considered to be with them in spirit," speculates Allison. "Then after a period, or when the mummy fell apart or began to deteriorate, it was buried."

The anthropologist hopes that the mummies of Arica will yield new insights into the lives of early coastal peoples in South America.

"Indeed, detailed study of hundreds of these people may give us a totally new view of the way coastal people on the continent related to those inland during prehistoric times," he says.

BIZARRE ASSORTMENT . . . of mummies, thought to be about 5,000 years old, have been uncovered in Arica, the northernmost city of Chile. Many of the remains — embalmed so they could be stood up like statues — were found in small family groups of men, women, and children, suggesting a form of ancestor worship. Early Concerns On Eliot's Life Play

LONDON (UPI) — When it was first announced, a new play about the disastrous first marriage of poet T.S. Eliot seemed certain to provoke controversy.

Eliot, after all, is a major poet — though his current fame is less for his Nobel prize than for his off-hand verses turned into lyrics for the hit musical "Cats."

Yet in "Tom and Viv," playwright Michael Hastings threatened to spotlight the fact that Eliot put his first wife in a lunatic asylum and abandoned her there until she died. Well before opening night, articles appeared suggesting "the water was muddy enough already."

Any whiff of scandal, however, evaporated when "Tom and Viv" actually opened. Hastings shirks none of the facts, but his dense, sympathetic play is meticulously fair to both sides.

In scenes so concentrated it seems you miss a good deal if you blink, Hastings moves chronologically through an unfamiliar story.

It begins in 1915, when Eliot eloped with Vivienne Haigh Wood, daughter of a distinguished English family.

The new Mrs. Eliot had periods of emotional instablity. The probable cause was a hormone imbalance easily treated now but unknown then. Novelist Virginia Woolf wrote of Vivienne "wriggling, raving ... wavering, trembling."

Married life for both "Tom" and "Viv" became increasingly impossible. In 1932, Eliot took out separation papers while on a visiting professorship at Harvard and wrote a letter to Vivienne informing her. Three years later he and her family had her committed to a "home" under lunacy laws which Britain has since changed.

Vivienne stayed in this genteel asylum until she died. In that whole 12 years, Eliot did not see her, speak to her or write to her.

"At some point in their marriage," poetess Dame Edith Sitwell once told Hastings, "Tom went mad and promptly certified his wife."

Hastings quotes her remark in the introduction to his play's published text. But he hardly sees the situation that way — even though Eliot's side of the story is barred to him, as to everyone else.

"Most researchers have encountered unusual difficulties," Hastings says. Eliot's papers, those of his publishing house, other letters and diaries "remain inaccessible," some "under embargo until 2030."

But during five months in 1980, the playwright talked with Col. Maurice Haigh Wood, Vivienne's brother, just before he died. Hastings studied Vivienne's newly available diaries, probed what archives he could, interviewed people connected with the Eliots' lives.

His play blurs the line between fact and fiction. Some of its incidents are invented. We must take his word that the Eliots' relationship developed precisely this way.

Yet this blurring is not intended to slant the argument. Far from scandal-mongering, "Tom and Viv" tries to be meticulously impartial. It is not an attack on Eliot, who is depicted with penetrating sympathy. It is not a whitewash of Vivienne, who as portrayed would madden anyone.

The play, in fact, is about the withering of love. It is a sad and sometimes funny story — superbly acted in this Royal Court production — of two people who loved one another but could not avoid mutual destruction.

It would be just as effective, if less piquant as history, if no names were used. As it is, some of its names are famous ones.

Eliot mixed with Virginia Woolf and the whole "Bloomsbury Set." But Vivienne so despise THAT GROUP — the feeling was mutual — that it was one factor driving them apart.

"Tom and Viv," however, focuses on the personalities of an American desperate to belong to English society, on Vivienne's wild gyrations of action and mood, on the snobbish and stupid but essentially good members of her family.

Tom Wilkinson as Eliot gives an uncanny impression of almost disembodied intellect, dry and passionless and precise.

Global Peace Goal Of World College

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

MONTEZUMA, N.M. (AP) — In the isolated beauty of northern New Mexico, not far from the birthplace of the atomic bomb, another experiment intended to change the world has sprung to life.

Some 40 years ago, the Manhattan Project, organized in secrecy at Los Alamos, unleashed upon the world the specter of nuclear war. Today, in this dusty village of 150 people and a smattering of sheep, global peace is the goal of a human laboratory in the wilderness.

The Armand Hammer United World College of the American West is two years old. On May 24 it will graduate its first class of 98 students. They will receive an International Baccalaureate Diploma, which is equivalent to the last year of high school and the first year of college in the United States.

British Ambassador Sir Oliver Wright is to be the commencement speaker. The 85-year-old Hammer, one of the world's premier capitalists as chairman and chief executive officer of Occidental Petroleum Corp., and the college's Daddy Warbucks, intends to be on hand. Prince Charles, in his capacity as president of the international council which oversees the six United World Colleges on four continents, will send his congratulations. VIPs galore will be shuttled across a one-lane bridge to ceremonies at the small campus' setpiece, a 99-year-old castle originally built as a resort hotel.

Hammer bought it from the Catholic church in 1981 after promising Prince Charles' uncle, Lord Louis Mountbatten, that he would oversee formation of a UWC campus in the United States. Lord Mountbatten was killed by Irish Republican Army terrorists in 1979.

But the real stars of the event, which will take place at an elevation of 7,000 feet, alongside the Gallinas (Wild Turkey) River, are the 197 teen-agers from 63 countries who were chosen to christen the two-year institution by becoming the classes of 1984 and 1985.

The young people, ranging in age from 16 to 21, traveled thousands of miles to live and learn together. They came from the People's Republic of China and Hungary, Nepal and Swaziland, Israel and Lebanon. They represent Communist bloc nations, totalitarian regimes, the oldest democracies on earth, and about 30 languages and a dozen religions.

Nearly all receive financial aid which pays up to the full $10,000-a-year cost.

Many of the students face an unusual problem: learning to live with peers who are potential enemies.

Daphna Ron, daughter of an Israeli diplomat, had never met a supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization until she arrived on campus in August 1982.

"My country was at war in Lebanon," she says. "I arrived and began shaking hands with the other students. But the Palestinian boys wouldn't shake hands with me. They said, 'You killed my family.' So I said, 'You killed my friends.' And that's the way we left it for weeks."

All classes are taught in English, and the four dormitories are arranged two students per room — one fluent in English, the other needing practice. A first-year student bunks with a second-year student. No television sets, video arcades or junk food machines in the dorms. A student center has one TV set and a single cola machine.

Leroy Lim Leng, 20, of Singapore, says he's "spent a lot of time discerning the differences between cultural aspects of people, and personality conflicts with them."

One of the hardest adjustments he had to make, he says, was the behavior of many of the girls from Western societies. "At first they struck me as cantankerous, outspoken, not observing proprieties dictated by my culture. I used to conclude that if I didn't like the behavior, I didn't like the people. I don't feel that way anymore."

Dormitories and classrooms are comfortable but not luxurious. Spending money is limited, by vote of the student body, to $250 a semester. Many students are from poor or middle-class Third World backgrounds.

Classes begin shortly before 8 a.m., and often study groups don't break up until the 10:30 p.m. curfew.

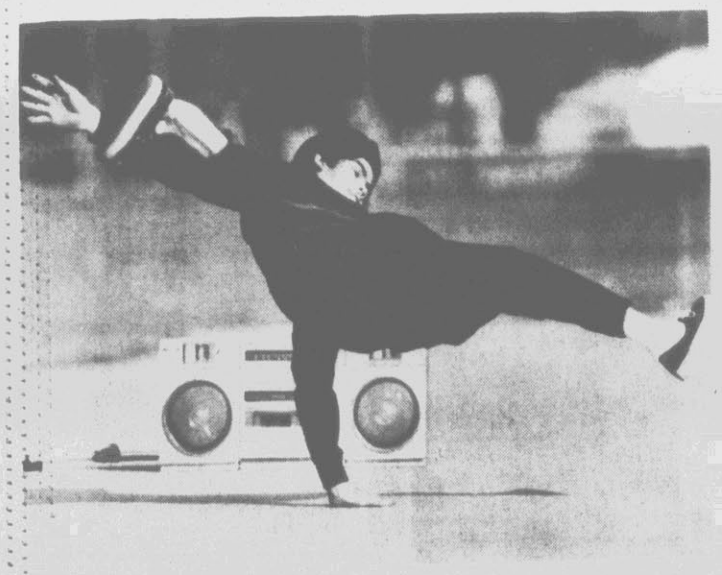

English teacher Hannah Tyson worries that students study too hard. "They know they're special or they wouldn't be here, and that puts a tremendous responsibility on them to succeed."

She and her husband, Dan, who teaches history, are resident tutors who live on the ground floor of a dormitory. In their kitchen they have a mug tree with 51 handmade cups they bought for the students who live above them.

"We toss hot cocoa parties during tense times, such as exams, and at Christmas time we had everybody put out their stockings for little treats," she says. "We thought they'd think that was corny, but they loved it. Sometimes, because they're so bright and mature, you almost forget they're kids."

Jin will return to the campus next year. Daphna Ron will be in the Israeli army. Leroy Lim Leng will be serving in Singapore's military, with his entry into Princeton deferred until he fulfills his army obligation. His countrywoman, Kathy Soutien Lai, and American classmate Mark Larrimore, will be at Oxford. Marie Dixon, the only child of a Jamaican mother who raised her alone, will study humanities at Yale as a first step to her goal of becoming a neurosurgeon. Vanessa Campbell and her classmate Yves Cassagnes of Toulouse, France, are taking a year off before college to teach wilderness courses at a private school in the Philippines. Andrea Tisi will enter Amherst to pursue a career in international diplomacy.

In the two years that the members of the Class of '84 coexisted in a 110-acre petri dish at the end of a dirt road in the Rocky Mountains, they have grown to believe that they are special. They've put faith in other people's hopes that they will change the world some day.

CHAMP IN "BREAKIN'" MOVIE — Eddie Fernandez, known throughout the Los Angeles area for his prowess at break dancing, says his lifetime ambition is to be a dancer. At 14, he is proving to be one of the best, with more than 20 dance contest wins over the past three months and a small role in the movie "Breakin.'" (AP Lserphoto by Ken Lubas)

Soap Opera Most Popular TV Fare In Zaire

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Friends start drifting into the house on Rue de Bushi-Mayi just after dark, in plenty of time to catch "The Theater of Our House," a long-running soap opera that is Zaire's most popular television show.

For nine years, the 23 members of the cast, most of them amateurs, have been entertaining Zairois television viewers with morality-loaded plays performed with improvised dialogue.

As "Dallas" became a fixture in American homes, "Our House" is a viewing event in Zaire.

TV sets are rare in this vast Central African nation, even in the middle-class neighborhood on Rue de Bushi-Mayi. So friends gather every other Thursday night to watch the show on a 1960s-vintage black and white set.

"Our House" has all the vices depicted in "Dallas," which was briefly shown here. But bad guys aren't allowed to triemph.

"In real life, criminals can win, but our goal is to educate," says the show's director and leading actor, who goes by the stage name Massamu and who holds a bachelor of arts degree in comedy from the University of Zaire.

Says Information Department spokesman P'fombon Dema: "We try to do sketches that are interesting and entertaining about everyday life, but we put in a little moral as well — things like not to drink too much. The show is popular because people can identify with it. They talk about everyday problems."

The dialogue is in Lingala, the most widely used tribal language, spiced with occasional French.

Massamu, 32, said in an interview that ideas for the show come from the public and nothing is sacrosanct, including government corruption. "We have autonomy. We are very free and uncontrolled," he said.

Once an idea is accepted, he said, "we develop a scenario around it. The players do not have a set script — we tell them what is supposed to happen and they make up their own dialogue."

The formula works. The group has done 500 episodes and the show remains the country's most popular.

"I can't go out on the street," Massamu said. "I am constantly being bothered by admirers. And it is difficult because I must have self-control since I am a model for people."

Though he may have the celebrity status of Western stars, Massamu doesn't have the wealth.

"We are not paid much, but we have been promised more because we are doing such a good job," he said.

The cast, which includes schoolteachers, technicians and others with no professional acting experience, recently got a personal message from President Mobutu Sese Seko, the country's autocratic ruler, thanking them for their work.

Massamu, whose real name is Nobunigi Mambimbi, lately has had some offers to do commercials and endorsements, and he hopes to cash in on his popularity. He also leads a band and produces children's shows.

This particular Thursday evening the show had to be funny to keep viewers awake. Even though it started half an hour late, after 9 p.m., the temperature and humidity were in the high 80s.

But before the main show began, the television news, complete with the eyewitness news chat format, brought people up to date on what was going on in the world.

Over the shoulder of the main announcer was a photo of President Mobutu, wearing his trademark, a leopard-skin hat. The president, who calls himself guide, founder and marshal, appeared periodically in the news reading speeches.

This is an election year, and even though he is the only candidate of the country's only party, Mobutu uses everything from television to the country's premier jazz musicians, considered the best in Africa, to exhort people to vote for him.

The leadup to "Our House" was peppered with commercials, including one for ice cream with the brand name Alaska, and one for Regla beer.

In the beer commercial a man asks his wife for a cold one and she hands him a bottle. He takes one swig and throws it on the floor shouting, "This isn't Regla." An announcer then intones: "If you drink Regla you don't get a headache."

The show is introduced by a presenter, a format used in many European and African nations. She roughly adjusts her blouse as she reads the evening's schedule.

This episode is called: "What We Get Today." It starts with two women, Kwidi and Zeke, chatting. Kwidi brags that her boyfriend buys her expensive gifts.

Zeke, jealous, refuses to talk with her husband, Nganda, when he comes home that evening. In frustration, he goes to a local diner to eat.

Meanwhile, it develops that Kwidi has been swindling her boyfriend, who has a good job, and ridiculing him in French, which he doesn't understand. She shares the spoils with her two unemployed brothers.

But the boyfriend starts to catch on just as Kwidi's younger brother steals everything she has to buy an airline ticket to Europe. Then the boyfriend tells Kwidi to get out because he has a new mate.

Zeke discovers what was going on but it is too late to get her husband back. Both women end up broke and alone.

The dialogue often provoked belly-splitting laughter in the living room on Bushi-Mayi. And if you stepped out into the concrete-encircled dirt courtyard among the avocado and mango trees, you could hear laughter in the adjacent houses.

Bushi-Mayi is a much better than average Zairois neighborhood. It has electricity and water.

Nations Form 'Brotherhood Of The Bomb'

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Gray-haired, mild-mannered, quietly dressed, Carlos Castro Madero passes unnoticed down Buenos Aires streets. But the fate of the Earth may rest as much in the hands of men like him as in the doomsday computers of the superpowers.

The retired admiral, until recently Argentina's nuclear energy chief, has led his country into the "can-do" club of the atomic age — those nations able to produce nuclear bomb material on their own.

The Argentines insist their intentions are peaceful. But their new uranium-enrichment plant stands as a symbol of how technology and Third World scientists are outstripping international controls designed to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

India, in 1974, was the last nation known to have tested an atomic explosive device, making it the sixth acknowledged nuclear power, with the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China.

But since then, Israel, South Africa, Pakistan and now Argentina — all of which reject the 119-nation treaty against nuclear weapons proliferation — have achieved the status of potential bomb-builders. Still others may aspire to the "club."

"With the spread of nuclear technology and equipment, it may be that the first nuclear conflict will break out between nations other than the U.S. and U.S.S.R.," Paul Leventhal, president of the privately financed Nuclear Control Institute, says in a Washington, D.C., interview.

Economic forces underlie the push to "go nuclear."

Developing nations short on oil see nuclear power as the route to energy independence. Hard-pressed nuclear-equipment manufacturers, largely shut out of the U.S. market because of safety worries, see the developing world as the way to keep business alive.

Although they reject international safeguards against nuclear weapons development, India, Israel, Pakistan and Argentina have had little trouble buying technology for advanced facilities, or developing their own.

Leading South American nations — Argentina, Brazil and Chile — appear ready to sidestep the treaty permanently.

A final ingredient in the proliferation mix, U.S. critics say, is the Reagan administration's decision to relax restrictions on American nuclear exports.

The Reagan administration argues that a policy of simply denying such exports to nations with "unsafeguarded" nuclear programs will not keep them from crossing atomic thresholds.

In Congress, both houses have passed amendments to close loopholes in U.S. law that allowed exports last year.

The key to the nuclear club is the fuel cycle, a scientific-engineering process with a split personality — civilian and military.

Most of today's power reactors use fuel of enriched uranium, natural uranium whose content of the fissionable uranium isotope U-235 has been increased to 3 percent, from natural levels of less than 1 percent.

But the plants that produce 3 percent uranium can also raise the U-235 to 20 percent, the enrichment level used in research reactors, or all the way to 90 percent, the level needed for material to make a bomb like the one dropped on Hiroshima.

The preferred explosive material, plutonium, used in the Nagasaki bomb, is a byproduct of power-plant nuclear reaction. A reprocessing plant, through chemical methods, extracts this dangerous element from the spent fuel.

All it takes to build a weapon, specialists say, is a handful of skilled people, 15 to 20 pounds of enriched uranium or plutonium, and a rudimentary factory.

The Argentines' two nuclear power plants do not use enriched uranium, but a combination of natural uranium and heavy water. Castro Madero says the 1,100 pounds of 20-percent-enriched uranium to be produced annually at the new enrichment plant will supply Argentina's five small research reactors and any small reactors it exports to other Latin American countries.

But some are skeptical. Leventhal's Nuclear Control Institute estimates the Argentine research reactors require a total of only 60 pounds of enriched uranium per year.

Argentina's severe economic problems may force it to rein in its nuclear ambitions, which include plans for four additional power reactors. The new civilian president, Raul Alfonsin, seems eager to give some signal of good nuclear intentions. He has ordered a review of nuclear policy and replaced Castro Madero with a civilian, though he retains the admiral as an adviser.

In neighboring Brazil, the government last year scaled down its nuclear plans because of an economic downturn. But the November announcement by Argentina, traditional rival for influence in South America, clearly troubled the Brazilians, who then pointedly made clear they were pushing ahead with their own fuel-cycle development.

Under a 1975 deal, West Germany is supplying Brazil with an advanced, "jet nozzle" uranium enrichment facility, scheduled for operation next year. Dario Gomes, president of the government nuclear energy company Nuclebras, says uranium will be enriched only to the 3.5-percent fuel level.

U.S. Defense Department analysts estimate 31 nations will be capable of manufacturing nuclear weapons by the year 2000. The list includes advanced countries — such as Japan, Sweden and Australia — that show no inclination to build a bomb.

Center Gives Disaster News

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A third-floor walk-up office in an old house on the fringe of Harvard Square is, at best, an unlikely source of Middle Eastern war news.

Yet when an Iraqi bombing raid on Iranian wells caused a big oil spill in the Persian Gulf, that's where the first tip to the outside world came from. Richard Golob — owner, manager and chief reporter of the small but grandly named World Information Systems — was right on top of it.

Calamities large and small have been Golob's vocation and obsession since he became head of one of the odder ventures of the federal government: the Smithsonian Institution Center for Short-Lived Phenomena.

In 1975, the parent museum "spun off" the center, as Golob puts it. So he decided to make it a private and, with luck, money-making business.

Since then, it has changed its name, grown in size and swelled in reputation to become perhaps the world's leading source of information about oil spills. Its major effort is the weekly Oil Spill Intelligence Report.

In addition, World Information Systems puts out the Hazardous Materials Intelligence Report and conducts studies for the federal government, the United Nations and other countries. Next fall it will publish a fat book called "Science Almanac" for ordinary readers.

Golob and his 12 employees gather news about human-made environmental disasters for the same people who create them, prevent them and clean them up.

After the Smithsonian decided to give up the venture, Golob thought he could keep it going. Now, for an annual fee of $377, Golob's oil spill report presents a dry, factual account of the latest spills, tanker collisions, government regulations, court decisions and reviews of oil cleanup equipment.

In March 1983, a Norwegian oil industry supplier called and said he'd heard there was a big spill in the Persian Gulf.

Golob milked his sources in the Middle East — government ministers, regional organizations, oil company executives, scientists, equipment suppliers, even salesmen passing through the area.

Iraqi planes, it turned out, had raided Iran's offshore Nowruz oil wells. Oil was spewing into the water. A big slick threatened fishing and water desalinization plants.

SMOTHERED TO DEATH

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

♠ K 9 3 2
♡ A 2
◇ A 7 4 3
♣ A K 6

WEST

SOUTH
♠ A J 8 4
♡ K 9 8
◇ K Q 6 5

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	4 ◇
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

The "Smother Play," in which a seemingly sure trump trick is made to vanish as if by the wiles of Satan, is one of the rarest plays in bridge. One of the few recorded examples is by master technician Jean Besse of Switzerland. See how deftly he worked his way though this distributional maze to reach the desired ending.

North's balancing double was for takeout, and Besse showed his good hand with a cue-bid. It did not take him and his partner long to get to a six spade contract which, with normal breaks, would have been a piece of cake. However, East's preempt had warned declarer that suits might not be breaking.

Besse won the opening club lead in dummy and led a spade to his ace. It was more than likely that East's 10 was a singleton, so Besse continued by leading a spade to the nine. Next came the king and queen of diamonds, and declarer learned the bad news that he had a certain loser in that suit. Since his 12th trick could only come from a heart ruff in dummy, it seemed that he would not be able to avoid a trump loser as well.

So much for appearances. Declarer led a club toward dummy. Since ruffing would only help declarer, West discarded a heart. Declarer won the king of clubs, cashed the ace-king of hearts and ruffed a heart on the table. After cashing the ace of diamonds, this was the position:

♠ K

WEST
♠ Q 7
◇ J

EAST
♡ J

SOUTH
♠ J 8

Besse led dummy's last club and discarded his diamond loser. West could not afford to ruff, so he discarded his diamond. Now East was on lead, and whether he led a heart or a club, declarer was going to make the last two tricks. Besse would ruff whatever was led with the eight of trumps. Whether West chose to overruff or underruff, his "certain" trump trick would disappear into thin air. Try it.

'Streets of Fire' May Yield Some Hot Videos

By Ethlie Ann Vare

"Flashdance" was one of the biggest movies and records of 1983 and also was responsible for some of the hottest videos on television. "Footloose" has already spawned Kenny Loggins' No. 1 single, thanks to a terrific video. Cheap Trick's video of the title song from "Up the Creek" is being heavily played on MTV.

Have we come to the point where you can't make a movie without a video to promote it? The producers of "Streets of Fire," a film they call a "rock 'n' roll fable" will be released June 1, and they aren't taking any chances. There are already four videos in the can, two of which will be released before the film itself hits the theaters.

"I don't think you'd necessarily damage yourself if you didn't have a video, but it certainly wouldn't be smart," says the film's producer, Joel Silver ("48 Hrs," "The Warriors"). "If you have a hit record, a hit video and a hit movie, you're getting the most exposure possible."

"Streets of Fire" stars Diane Lane ("The Outsiders") as a rock star in jeopardy, and Michael Pare ("Eddie and the Cruisers") as her knight in shining armor. Ry Cooder wrote the score. Jim Steinman wrote the two showstoppers, "Nowhere Fast" and "Tonight Is What It Means to Be Young." Steinman, who gained fame as writer-producer of Meat Loaf's classic "Bat out of Hell," also wrote Bonnie Tyler's "Total Eclipse of the Heart" and Air Supply's "Making Love out of Nothing at All." The film's musical supervisor is Jimmy Iovine, who has produced LPs for Tom Petty, Stevie Nicks and Bob Seger. Both Petty and Miss Nicks have written original songs for the soundtrack. Performers include the Fixx, the Blasters and Lone Justice.

"Look at the exciting videos people are making on budgets of $100,000," says Silver. "'Flashdance' cost $8 million — they had $8 million worth of footage to draw from. You have to assume such a video is going to look better."

The budget for "Streets of Fire" is $17 million, so we can expect some pretty fancy videos.

Heyapawin (Devon Ericson) is one Cheyenne woman who is strong enough to match the strength of Ahbleza (Robert Beltran), a young Sioux brave who is destined to be the leader of his people, in the five-hour ABC miniseries "The Mystic Warrior," airing Sunday May 20 and Monday May 21.

Play TV 'Scrabble'

Chuck Woolery will host a new word-game series, "Scrabble," premiering July 2 on NBC. The game, based on the popular board game, will be played by two contestants at a time. Clues are given for a word. Each contestant selects two letter tiles at random that may or may not be a part of that word. The winner in the preliminary round goes on to the "Scrabble Sprint" round for a chance at the grand prize of $25,000.

Star signs

Susan Lucci, the popular star of "All My Children," has reconsidered her decision to leave the daytime series. She has re-signed a long-term contract with ABC to continue her role.

HBO dramatic series

"Maximum Security," a new series, will debut on HBO in June. The show, focusing on the turbulent life inside a federal penitentiary, will premiere with an episode filmed at the Lincoln Heights Jail in Los Angeles.

Michele Will Tell

by Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Mickey Rooney is my favorite movie actor. I would like to know when and where he was born and what he's doing now. — Donna Garon

To Donna: Rooney, the son of vaudevillians, was born Joe Yule Jr. on Sept. 23, 1920 in Brooklyn. He made his film debut at age 6 in "Not to Be Trusted." In 1932, the young actor changed his name to Mickey Rooney while playing bit parts for Hollywood's major studios. Fame and fortune came by way of "The Hardy Boys," a series of 15 movies for which he won a special Oscar in 1939. Rooney has also received Oscar nominations for "The Black Stallion," "The Human Comedy," "The Bold and the Brave" and "Babes in Arms." In 1962, Mickey filed for bankruptcy — seven divorce settlements took the major chunk out of his millions in career earnings. Now on his eighth marriage, he has bounced back out of a very short retirement to star in the Emmy-winning "Bill" and the sequel "Bill on His Own." An energetic and enthusiastic individual, nothing keeps Mickey down for long. Witness a recent mishap, when his private plane, also carrying his son, skidded off the runway during a storm at Newark International Airport. Undaunted, Mickey and son boarded a commercial airliner to head back to the West Coast.

DEAR MICHELE: We've been watching "Ripley's Believe It or Not," and wonder if Jack Palance and Holly Palance are related? — Vicki Misna

To Vicki: Jack Palance is Holly Palance's father. Born in Los Angeles, Miss Palance is an avid jogger, world traveler and photographer.

DEAR MICHELE: May I have the address for Greg Evigan, the young actor who starred on "B.J. and the Bear." — Louise M. Burgwist

To Louise: Your best bet would be to write Evigan in care of his new series, "Masquerade," ABC-TV, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, CA 90067. I suggest you write soon — I don't know how long "Masquerade" can hold out in the ratings.

ERRATA: The late Alan Ladd was not 55 inches tall — he was short, but not a midget. To set the record straight, Alan Ladd was 5 feet 5 inches tall.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

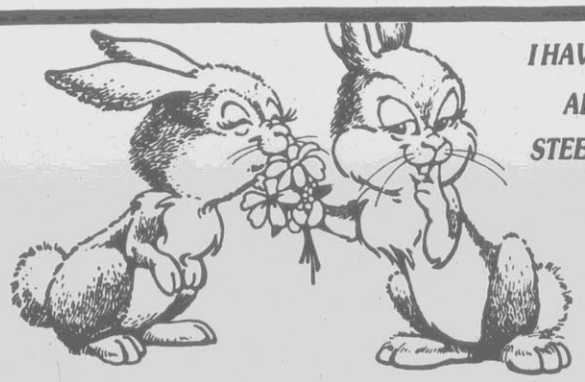

Joan Rivers, the first permanent guest host of "The Tonight Show," has renewed her commitment with the show for next season. "I'm thrilled that Johnny Carson renewed me," says Miss Rivers. "It's a miracle that he asked me back. He's the first man that has still wanted me after a year."

Charita Bauer has resumed her role as Bert Bauer on the daytime soap "Guiding Light," following a five-month absence recuperating from the amputation of her leg. With Miss Bauer's approval, producers and writers of the show are using her real-life experience in the current story line. They feel it will provide an example of hope and inspiration to those who may be facing the same medical problem as Miss Bauer.

Viewers who enjoy watching "Guiding Light" can purchase a series of paperback novels based on early stories from the 32-year-old drama. The first two novels, "Two Lives, Two Loves" and "So Tender, So True," are now available.

Tom Selleck, on hiatus from "Magnum, P.I.," is in Vancouver, British Columbia, filming "Runaway," a theatrical movie.

Michael Jackson hit the A&R Studios on Seventh Avenue where Quincy Jones, Frank Sinatra and Lionel Hampton were banging out an album. He stayed an hour and Hampton gave him vibe lessons... Al Pacino is looking to move his "Richard III" to Broadway for the second time... Darth Vadar a.k.a James Earl Jones is doing radio commercials endorsing off-Broadway's "Woza Albert."

George Steinbrenner, owner of the Yankees, has shriveled by 11 pounds. I asked how come. He answered: "My team's driving me to starvation."

Fox will maintain close 'Family Ties'

By Peter Meade

When "Family Ties" was renewed for a third season, a problem arose immediately.

Michael J. Fox's character, the ultra-preppy Alex P. Keaton, will be a college freshman when the NBC series continues with new episodes next fall. So what institution of higher learning will have the honor of having the second coming of William Buckley on its campus? Alex made an excursion to Princeton this season to visit his friend, Jeff, who is also his sister Mallory's off-and-off boyfriend. But don't look for Alex to be sharing a beer at the campus rathskeller with Brooke Shields. While Alex would fit right in at an Ivy League school, he'll be staying home. The problem is "Family Ties" takes place in Ohio and Fox's character is too important to send away to college in the manner of Chuck Cunningham, the long-lost brother on "Happy Days."

"It looks like I'm stuck here," says Fox, with a trace of sarcastic remorse. "One plan was for me to attend Ohio State, but that was a groan."

The groan was because Alex's button-down shirts and monogrammed pullover sweaters just wouldn't fit in at the football-happy Big Ten university. but there is another reason why he isn't Buckeye-bound.

"The appeal of the show is the whole family together," says Fox. "You can't mess around with that."

To avoid messing around Fox believes plan No. 2 will be put into action. In what ends up being a procrastination alternative, Alex's college plans will be put off for a year and he will spend the season on a work-study scholarship at home. Fox says he can see his alter ego, who he describes as "an egghead intellectual," working for a political candidate.

Michael J. Fox

The possibility of Alex working for a politician would give the show plenty of new material to explore. "Our writers are not afraid to go exploring," says Fox. "We can address outside social issues, but we deal with them from within the family. The family is our forum."

The family is also the formula and it got stronger during the series' sophomore season. Its original concept — a reverse generation gap between '60s parents and '80s kids — was just the foundation.

Fox admits that he is getting more comfortable with Alex, which translates to him becoming more like his Thursday evening persona. "I've picked up his vocabulary and his energy," says Fox.

Baseball Ratings A Dilemma

By Willie Schatz

There is a doubleheader on NBC next Saturday afternoon. Again. Didn't they just have one two weeks ago? They did. Aren't they using their quota of four early in the season? They are.

There is a method to the network's apparent madness. They've go to get in the games while the watching's good.

"More people watch baseball games on TV early in the season than in September," says an NBC source. "Our best ratings come in the first three weeks of the season. People don't watch as much in July and August. That's why we're going to get in all our double-headers before July."

The early returns this year have been encouraging, if somewhat perplexing. In Week One, the Saturday Game of the Week featuring Jack Morris' no-hitter, NBC drew a 6.7 rating and a 21 share. That was below last year's 7.6 rating and 18 share, and NBC was the only game on the tube that afternoon.

Week Two, however, brought a sign of life. The network pulled a 5.8 rating and 16 share, up significantly from last year's 4.7 and 14. Week Three was a bit of a downer, with a 7.6 rating and 20 share, compared to a 7.7 and 25 in 1983. The three-week average, though, was the same as last year's, at 6.7 and 19. That compares to a season-long average of 5.9.

"If the ratings had gone down in Week Two, we would have lost a lot of executives," says the NBC source. "People would have jumped out windows. I know Week Three was down, but it was the best rating of the day, and ratings are down in general. So nobody's committing hari-kari."

The executives may be saving that event for September, when major league baseball heats up, but viewers go cold. TV sports fans enjoy the beginning of the college and pro football seasons a whole lot more than the end of the baseball season.

Last year, on the next-to-last day of the baseball season, NBC's Game of the Week featured the Dodgers against the Braves for the divisional crown. It was the only division race worth a damn in September. So if you were going to watch one game all year, that should have been it.

It wasn't. Viewers could have cared less. The game got a 5 rating.

Sunday, May 20

. NBA Playoffs, CBS. Game Four of both the Eastern and Western Conference championships. These will be regionalized, so you may not get to see your heroes. If either or both series go to five or six games, CBS will show what's happening, either live or on tape, on Wednesday and Friday nights.

American Sportsman, ABC. Stefanie Powers returns to the Mt. Kenya Ranch to continue the conservation work of the late William Holden. (Repeat)

Indianapolis 500 Time Trials, ABC. Live coverage of "Bumping Day," in which those who haven't made the starting field get one last shot to do so.

Saturday, May 26

Baseball Game of the Week, NBC. Los Angeles Dodgers at New York Mets or St. Louis Cards at Atlanta Braves, followed by Baltimore Orioles at California Angels or Kansas City Royals at Boston Red Sox.

U.S. Olympic Team Trials, ABC. Same day coverage of the men's marathon trials.

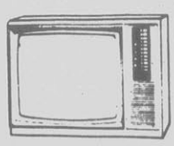

LINE OF THE WEEK: Bucky Waters, NBC college basketball analyst, speaking at the recent New York Metropolitan College Basketball Writers Association dinner: "When (Auburn's) Charles Barkley (all 284 pounds of him) sets a pick, you better pack a lunch to get around him."

Q: Has the National Hockey League ever had a game when no one scored and no one was penalized?

A: Only one such game has ever occurred. The Toronto Maple Leafs and the Chicago Black Hawks played a scoreless, penalty-free game on Feb. 20, 1944.

BOHAY: PLENTY OF GLOOM AT THE INN

Heidi Bohay of the ABC hit series Hotel, is not exactly a great advertisement for the innkeeper business. It's not that she's hostile to hostelries; it's just that "I've yet to stay at a good one." She does hasten to add that her experience with luxury spots like the St. Gregory, the hotel of the series, is limited. Heidi recalls one stopover when she drove cross-country to fame, fortune — and decent accommodations in Hollywood. "One night, the only place my friend and I could find was a seedy dive — with a single bed. 'One of us can sleep on the mattress, the other on the box spring,' I said. It was better than driving in the rain. When we took off the mattress, a million roaches greeted us. After that, driving in the rain didn't seem so bad." Obviously it was just another case of roaches checking in but not checking out.

Say what you will about Harold Robbins — that he's scorned by critics, that he turns out books like doughnuts — the guy knows how to tell a story. He's told 18 of them so far — all of them best sellers. Indeed, his latest, Descent from Xanadu, has been so successful in hard cover (this is before publication) that Robbins already has a $5 million paperback deal for his untitled and yet-to-be-written nineteenth and twentieth books. "But once I write a book, that's it," he says. "It's last year's book. Sometimes I have difficulty remembering things about it." But Robbins does remember the immortal first sentence of his very first novel, Never Love a Stranger, written in 1947: "Mrs. Cozzolina tasted the soup." Says Robbins, "I never knew it would be so easy."

Hollywood is nothing if not a sequel opportunity employer. So despite the indifferent reviews and box-office returns of his Slapstick of Another Kind, Jerry Lewis is re-teaming with writer Bill Richmond for The Nutty Professor Part II. Because the original Nutty (which Lewis produced and directed as well as starred in) was done in 1963, we can assume that the prof must have tenure by now.

Just in time for the Olympics, Frank Sinatra, who gave the No. 1 and now No. 3 U.S. cities their theme songs, New York, New York, and Chicago, is attempting to do the same for our No. 2, the Big Orange. Set for a late June or early July release, L.A. Is My Lady boasts music by Quincy Jones and lyrics by Oscar-winners Alan and Marilyn Bergman. No, the tune does not include a line like, "I want to wake up in a city that doesn't walk."

LEWIS: HERE'S THE PROFESSOR BUT WHERE'S THE JERRY?

Shera Danese (Mrs. Peter Falk), co-star of the CBS comedy Suzanne Pleshette is Maggie Briggs, has a strange way of maintaining her enviable cheesecake figure: She dreams about pizza pie. "I don't eat anything," she says. "I just think about pizza — pizza for breakfast, lunch and dinner." Shera may go to bed hungry, but at least she doesn't wake up with a bad case of indigestion.

CONNIE CHUNG

co-anchor of NBC-TV's news program Early Today

Do you ever get "talker's block," the way some authors claim to be afflicted with writer's block? — N.T., Waco, Texas

When I'm tired I sometimes have to search for words. Luckily, it doesn't happen early in the day when I'm on the air. The fumbles come later on when I'm not in front of the camera. Two words that get me tongue-tied are "rural" (why can't I pronounce it?) and "particularly." I try to avoid that one, and say "especially" instead.

EDDIE FISHER

How much responsibility do you assume for the ups and downs of your career? — E.C., Yuma, Ariz.

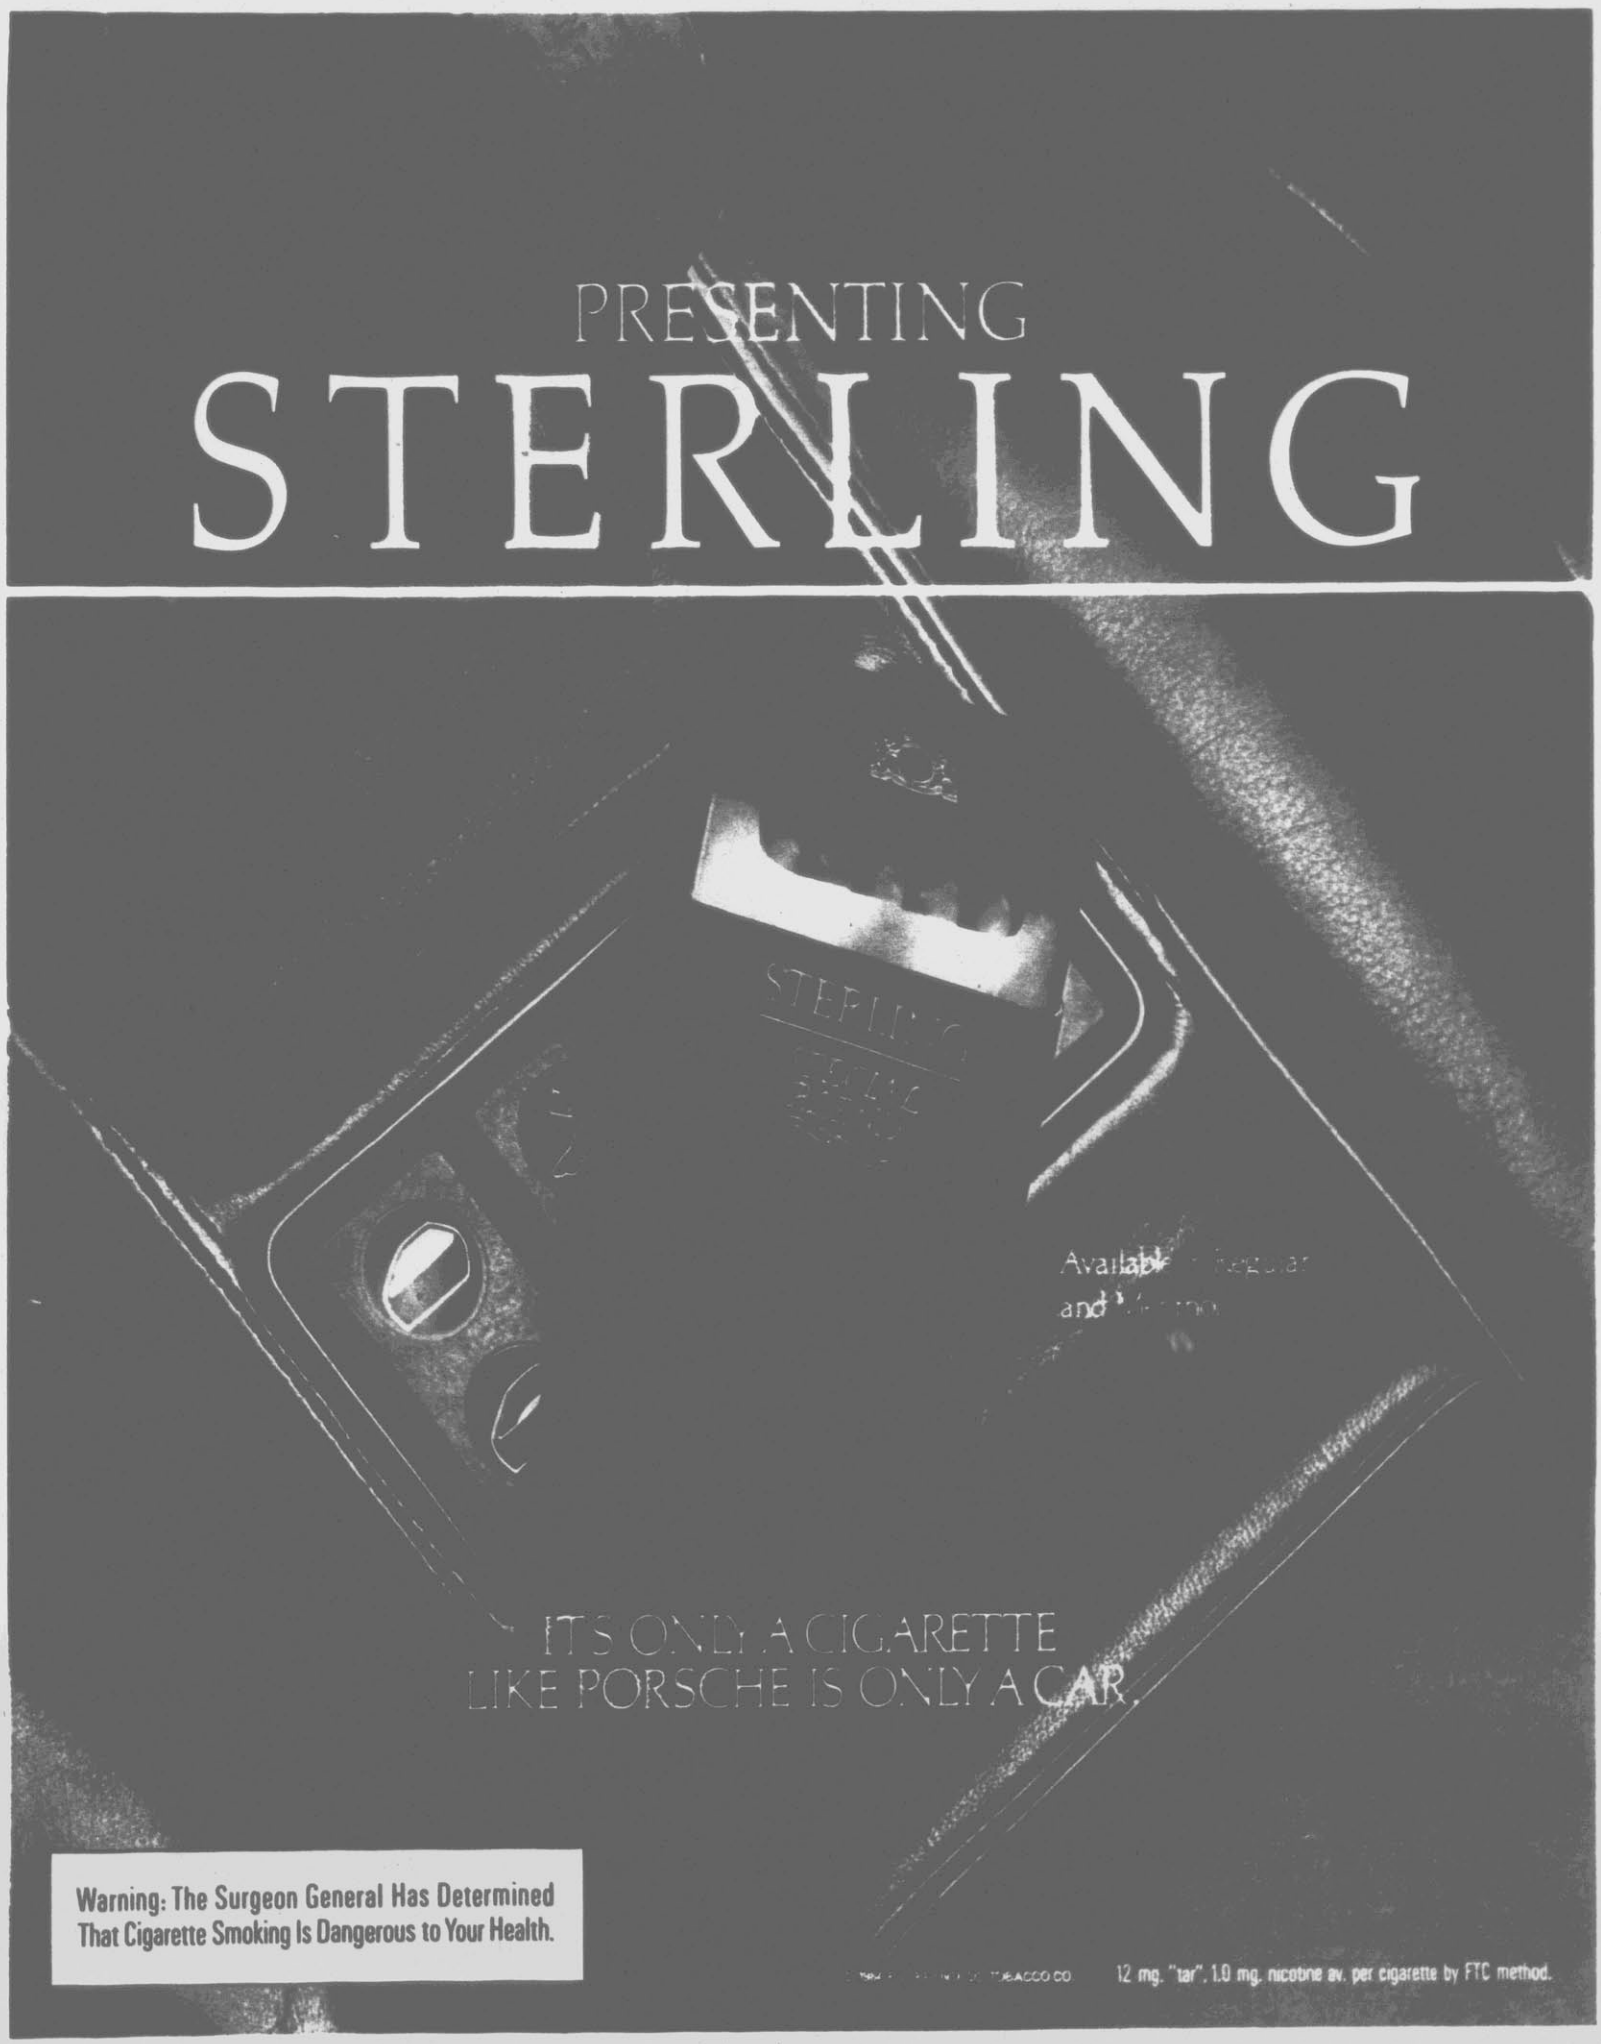

I have to admit that some things were self-inflicted, but I believe we are all victims of circumstances, too. I think I've been very lucky. If you don't know the lows, then you can't really appreciate the highs. Life doesn't go in a straight line, but in hills and valleys. To be comfortable all the time is not necessarily good. Discomfort is an important ingredient in life.

Ford in a gripping scene from Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom.

SOLO MAN

Harrison Ford detests talk shows and avoids parties. What kind of star is he?

By Ian Brodie

"You ain't got it, kid."
—Columbia Pictures executive to Harrison Ford.

Two large and menacing men in turbans wield swords in the hero's direction. He stares back with jut-jawed determination, confidently reaching for the gun in his holster. Uh-oh — the holster's empty. Indiana Jones flashes his foes a crooked, helpless smile. Cut.

Yes, folks, it's gung-ho, derring-do, edge-of-the-seat cliffhanger time again. This week sees the release of Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, Paramount's eagerly-awaited "prequel" to Raiders of the Lost Ark. The silver screen will be replete with chase scenes, careening planes and cars, rattling machine guns, treacherous mine caverns, perilous rope bridges and suspenseful moments inside the sinister Spike Chamber in the mysterious Palace of Pankot. And once more, America's successor to the Saturday matinee idols of yesteryear will be played by Harrison Ford.

Nothing can quite prepare an interviewer for just how bright Ford is. Mumbling, yes. Laconic, definitely. But sharp-witted, too. Above all, he is determined to be the antithesis of a movie star. You will not see him posturing on talk shows, endorsing products, or laboring on the Hollywood celebrity treadmill.

"I want to be known as an actor, not a star, if such a distinction is necessary," Ford says. "It's much more fashionable to be a star than an actor, but therefore much more short-lived. Besides, I don't like to go to parties.

"The business of being a star and doing what's necessary to remain a star — in other words, promoting yourself as a fascinating personality — is something I'm unable to do. I don't consider myself fascinating, nor do I have a star's personality. I don't see myself as being unique. I just work in the movie business."

Maybe, but he knows how to behave like a star when it comes to finances. Ford has demanded a percentage of the profits from his movies ever since producer George Lucas gave him a taste of money. For playing Han Solo, the mercenary pilot of Star Wars, Lucas presented him — in addition to his salary — with one-quarter of 1 percent of the studio's world-record returns, a bonus approaching $750,000.

Ford would neither confirm nor deny a report that he received 7 percent of the gross for Raiders three years ago, but assuming the figure to be roughly accurate, he earned in the region of $10 million. To that add his undisclosed percentage of The Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi.

So at 41, with the anticipated success of Temple of Doom, he will have appeared in and profited from five of the biggest box-office blockbusters ever.

Prudent with his riches, he leaves their investment to a business manager. His only visible indulgence is a black Porsche. "I never thought I would end up with a Porsche," he admits, "but it's fine; a nice machine."

He has everything he wants, he claims. His house in the steeper reaches of Beverly Hills is so modest in size that when the teenage sons of his first marriage visit, the only place they can practice basketball is out in the street, a quiet cul-de-sac.

Inside, the house reflects the carpentry and construction skills that kept Ford sane and fed for eight years before Star Wars. Wood surfaces gleam. Sash windows glide open at a touch.

Ford mumbles, yes. He's laconic, definitely, but sharp-witted, too — and shrewd about managing his riches.

Crafting furniture still satisfies him. He sits at a pine dining room table he made, a solid piece with beautiful lathe work. Ford agrees that if his career ever fell apart, he could always open a furniture factory.

That seems unlikely, as long as Indiana Jones can hold his own. "In Temple of Doom you will see him do things you wouldn't have suspected," Ford remarks teasingly. In the first saga, Jones, an archaeology professor with a lethal bullwhip, stubbly beard and battered felt hat, succeeded in saving the Ark of the Covenant containing the Ten Commandments, which had fallen into the hands of pre-war Nazis.

The new film takes place two years earlier. Jones is preoccupied with obtaining freedom for a band of slave children, a quest that takes him from the nightclubs of old Shanghai, where he appears with James Bondian elegance in a white tuxedo, to the Temple of Doom in India, via jungle, mountains and an assortment of daredevil escapades.

"The beauty of the first film was in discovering Indy," says Ford. "We can't repeat that because now we all know who he is, so we've been obliged to show more interesting sides of his nature."

Indy's girlfriend in the prequel, Willie, a nightclub singer portrayed by Kate Capshaw, replaces the memorable Marion, played by Karen Allen, who could drink most men under the table. The third principal role — a diminutive Chinese kid called Short Round — went to Ke Huy Quan, age 12, discovered in Los Angeles by director

Steven Spielberg.

Playing Indiana Jones is tough work: Ford seldom uses a double or stunt man. "As long as I can still fall down with a reasonable assurance that I'll get up again, I don't worry," he says.

In Temple of Doom, however, elephant riding on location in Sri Lanka and at a sound stage outside London left him with an injured back.

© The Ladd Company

With Sean Young in Blade Runner: His track record has been uneven.

"When you ride an elephant," he explains, "your legs are hyper-extended in both directions to accommodate the girth of the animal. You're being stretched first in one direction and then in another. It's as if your legs are being pulled apart. My back problem started with twinges that got worse as shooting went on."

Eventually the pain became so intense that Ford flew to Los Angeles for treatment at Centinela Hospital, which specializes in sports medicine. The diagnosis: a ruptured disc.

Normally that means a painful operation called a laminectomy. Instead, doctors tried a relatively new treatment — called chymopapain — in which an enzyme derived from papaya fruit is injected to "eat" the disc, in the way acid dissolves metal.

After six weeks of rest Ford resumed filming, and was thankful to discover that all the elephant riding was over. "But everything left to do was physical. They had saved up all the good bits until last. It was a really strenuous picture for me to make."

Ford reacts indignantly to suggestions that Indiana Jones is little more than a cardboard character. "That's an elitist attitude. For action-adventure pictures, he's really quite complicated, a once-in-a-lifetime character, and great fun to do. If the people who make these pictures, George Lucas and Steven Spielberg, thought he was a cardboard character, they probably wouldn't want to continue to employ my services and that would upset me."

They originally wanted Tom Selleck as Indiana Jones (Selleck couldn't fit the filming into his Magnum schedule), but Lucas now admits that "Harrison Ford is a terrific actor with a unique charisma that is ideal for the type of characters I develop." He considers Ford especially skilled at portraying Jones's occasional vulnerability, the trait that makes him so attractive to audiences.

Ford doesn't fear being typecast as Han Solo or Indiana Jones, although he has imparted his taciturn nature and sly humor to both. "You invest them with as many aspects of yourself as convenience allows. You certainly want to take advantage of things you have in common with the character.

"But you're also obliged to make them seem real and natural when they do things that are not natural for you," he adds. "It's true I'm not a 'nose-putty' actor. So far I haven't had the opportunity to play characters far different from myself."

Ford's career outside Solo and Jones has been spotty. He received universally glowing reviews for the integrity of his dour Vietnam veteran in Heroes. But critics were unimpressed with his title role in the futuristic Blade Runner, and unconvinced by the sour intensity of his romantic efforts in Hanover Street. "He's more of a comic-strip character here than he was in Star Wars," huffed The New York Times.

Ford's reply: "Unlike some actors, I cannot be good in a bad picture."

Nevertheless, he's not disappointed in his other work at this stage of his career, deeming some of his other pictures to have been his best ones. "I would pick out Heroes and a television special I did for (producer/director) Stanley Kramer, The Court-Martial of Lt. William Calley, in which I played the chief government witness.

"When people talk about cardboard characters and say, 'Haven't you ever done anything serious, haven't you ever dealt with real issues and real people?' I say, 'Yes, that's the real stuff, and if someone has a penchant for it, that's my offering in those areas.'

"I've done that sort of thing and find it satisfying, although it just doesn't come to me that often. But I look for something different at every opportunity I get. No one wants to repeat himself endlessly."

Harrison Ford, born to an Irish Catholic father and a Russian Jewish mother, grew up in Chicago, where his father was a pioneer of television commercials. "He invented the concept of the see-through washing machine to demonstrate the suds, and he was the first to use stop-motion photography for the Parkay rose, which bloomed for years and years.

"It was interesting for me to go around and see what my dad did. He certainly seemed to have a lot more interesting career than most other guys' dads. This may sound silly, but it encouraged me not to want a 'real' job. He did something different enough so it didn't seem to be a straight 9-to-5 position. I wanted to make a similar choice if possible."

He's indignant when people suggest that Indiana Jones is a cardboard character: "That's an elitist attitude."

At Ripon College in Wisconsin, Ford studied English literature and philosophy. After a final year spent loafing and eating pizza when he was supposed to be writing a thesis on the plays of Edward Albee, he was booted out, just three days before graduation.

"It was not taken lightly," he says, admitting that he felt guilty about the calamity for a long time. "My parents had paid for four years of education, and at the end of it there was no degree. Nowadays my good fortune has swamped my regrets, but I still wish I'd learned more."

School plays gave him a chance to act, though it scared him half to death to get up in front of an audience. "That was the most challenging thing in my young life: to face that fear and overcome it," he acknowledges. "Halfway through my junior year I realized acting was a career choice. I just never came up with a suitable alternative."

He married Mary, his college sweetheart, flipped a coin to decide whether to go to New York or California, and tossed it again when it came up New York, because he wanted to avoid the cold winters. He headed for Hollywood and almost sank without a trace.

With his lean, leathery features, reminiscent of a young James Stewart, he was hired by Columbia Pictures for $150 a week and sent to acting school to be molded into a star. The studio officials instructed Ford to get an Elvis Presley haircut, told him which actress to escort to the Oscars, and ordered him to change his name, because they thought Harrison sounded awfully pretentious. Ford rebelled on all counts.

Movie Star News

Star Wars gave Ford his first shot at success — and a $750,000 bonus.

In 1966 he played his first part — a bellhop delivering a cable to James Coburn in Dead Heat on a Merry-Go-Round. It led to a studio executive's now-famous put-down — "You ain't got it, kid." His offense was actually looking like a bellhop instead of projecting star quality.

After quitting Columbia, he took bit parts in a variety of TV drama series and eventually turned (in despair) to learning carpentry from library books in an effort to support his wife and two young sons.

A daunting first project — the conversion of a three-car garage into an elaborate studio for composer-arranger Sergio Mendes at a cost of $100,000 — proved a triumph. Ford's repute as a weather-stripper, remodeler and carpenter spread quickly through the residential canyons of Los Angeles.

Then in 1972, George Lucas cast him as a hot-rodder in American Graffiti. Four years passed before Lucas called again, this time with an offer to do Star Wars. Ford was working on Sally Kellerman's house at the time. "We all knew he'd get his big break one day," Kellerman has said, "but we never expected it to happen in the middle of a paint job on our kitchen."

But as Ford's career exploded, his marriage collapsed. The pressures of constantly filming overseas — first Star Wars, then a small part in Apocalypse Now, and finally Hanover Street — tore it apart. Ironically, it was his wife who had urged him to take Star Wars at a salary that originally paid less than his carpentry fees.

Ford is reluctant to discuss his 1979 divorce. "The short version of the tale is as you've heard it. Certainly there were the normal pressures of being poor and unfulfilled and having a difficult time. I was happy enough as a carpenter, but my real ambition was still to make a living as an actor."

And despite having parted ways, Ford and his first wife remain on amicable terms. "We're divorced to each other for the rest of our lives. It's by far the better way to go. I'm pleased that we can continue our relationship."

His sons, Benjamin, 17, and Willard, 15, live nearby with their mother and visit often. "I'm proud of them," Ford says. "They're good people and I enjoy their company. We try to spend as much time as we can together."

In March last year, Ford remarried. His new wife, Melissa Mathison, a lissome blonde, is the talented author of two major screenplays, "E.T." and "The Black Stallion." She is presently working on a new, still-secret script for Spielberg.

Ford won't allow separation to imperil this marriage, he says. "Melissa travels with me on location. She works anywhere she can, in the back of a car if she has to." As to their plans for a family, even close friends are kept guessing.

Ford's next film, tentatively billed Called Home, is being made this summer. It explores the relationship between a Philadelphia police lieutenant and an Amish woman whose son witnesses a murder.

But Indiana Jones will return. "George and Steven and I all agree, we had so much fun we must do it again," he explains. "But not for another three years." FW

California Millionaire Wants To Share The Wealth

You think times are tough and you've got problems?

Well, I remember when a bank turned me down for a $200 loan. Now I lend money to the bank — Certificates of Deposit at $100,000 a crack.

I remember the day a car dealer got a little nervous because I was a couple of months behind in my payments — and repossessed my car. Now I own a Rolls Royce. I paid for it in full — with cash.

I remember the day my wife phoned me, crying, because the landlord had shown up at the house, demanding his rent — and we didn't have the money to pay it.

Now we own five homes. Two are on the oceanfront in California (I use one as my office). One is a lakefront "cabin" in Washington (that's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming, and sailing). One is a condominium on a sunny beach in Mexico. And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back...or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because first, I don't want you to send me any money — at least none that I can use. Instead, as a token of your sincerity, send in your check or money order and postdate it for six weeks from today. You see, it's not really money because it's not negotiable — besides, I won't even touch it for six weeks anyway.

In this way you'll have plenty of time to receive my material, look it over, try it out and prove to yourself that everything I am telling you is true.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my net income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money...working "part time"...a few hours a day...about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their checks for six weeks, they had nothing to lose.

They were right.

'Made $50,000 just fooling around'

"In February 1974 you sent me (for ten bucks) your Lazy Man's Way to Riches. Since then I have made approximately 50 grand ($50,000) just fooling around on the basis of your advice. You see, I really am lazy — otherwise I could have made 50 million! Thank you!"

Made enough to retire at 41

"If it hadn't happened to me, I wouldn't have believed it...A few years ago, I had nothing to lose. I was unemployed and broke. I didn't even own a car and I lived in a cheap apartment. My total assets were half of a Ducati Motorcycle, and my liabilities could be read on my BankAmericard statement.

"Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."

R.A., Huntington Beach, CA

From $50 to $565 per week

"...when I sent for your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches), I was delivering the L.A. Times for $50 per week...Now...I earn an average of $565 per week, have $7,000 in the bank and a condominium that's worth $85,000..."

'There's no stopping me'

"Since I've got your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches) in July, I've started 4 companies...there's no stopping me and I'm so high I need chains to keep me on the ground."

M.T., Portland, OR

'Wow, it does work!'

"Oddly enough, I purchased Lazy Man's Way to Riches some six months ago, or so, read it...and really did nothing about it. Then, about three weeks ago, when I was really getting desperate about my financial situation, I remembered it, re-read it, studied it, and this time, put it to work and WOW, it does work! Doesn't take much time, either...I guess some of us just have to be at a severe point of desperation before we overcome the ultimate laziness, procrastination."

J.K., Anaheim, CA

Made $70,000

"A $70,000 thanks to you for writing The Lazy Man's Way to Riches. That's how much I've made...

"I use this extra income for all of the good things in life, exotic vacations, classic automobiles, etc. Soon I hope to make enough to quit my regular job and devote full time to making money the easy way..."

D.R., Newport Beach, CA

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life...One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership...I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B.F., Pascagoula, MS

'Steadily upward ever since'

"I ordered Lazy Man's Way to Riches in June...by September, my career was launched and has gone steadily upward ever since."

Mrs. B.A., Walnut Creek, CA

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five days' work."

M.D., Topeka, KS

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

Six weeks from today, you can be nothing more than a little older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Some have called it a Miracle. Some have called it Magic. You'll call it "The Secret of the Ages."

As for me, I thank God that before he died Millionaire Joe Karbo left, for all to share, the secret of "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches." The above story, which is in his own words, is his gift to you.

PROOF!

Don't take my word for it. These are excerpts from articles in newspapers and magazines:

Time:
He only works half the year in his stunning office on California's Sunset Beach, and even when he's there he puts in short hours...In other words, Joe Karbo...is the prototype for..."The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

Money:
Joe does more than dwell on personal problems; he solves them...
Which is a nice change: Karbo almost went bankrupt back in '62...

Boston Herald-American:
The book has drawn hundreds of letters from persons who have profited by it...

Los Angeles Herald-Examiner:
"Going broke was the best thing that ever happened to me," explains Joe Karbo who went from one business trouble to a million-dollar business fortune...

Forbes:
After bouncing around show biz, advertising, and real estate, he made his fortune...$250,000.

Money Making Opportunities:
Maybe Joe Karbo has the secret. Don't you think you owe it to yourself to find out what it is all about?...I just finished it — and I'm off on a vacation myself. Get the idea?

The Boston Globe:
Jay Haws of Chico, Cal., said the pep talk...in "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches" has "changed my life," and upped his freelance graphic designer income from $2000 to $30,000 annually.
"I'm not rich yet," said Haws, "but I see the light at the end of the tunnel...It gave me the swift kick in the pants that I needed."

Long Beach Independent:
He's programmed the path to riches for the lazy man.

The Kansas City Star:
He prints statements like "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money." He should have added that too many people these days are too busy earning a living to do any living.

Sworn Statement:
"On the basis of my professional relationship as his accountant, I certify that Mr. Karbo's net worth is more than one million dollars."

WHIZ QUIZ

CAN YOU BE ALONE WITHOUT BEING LONELY?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. No one really knows what loneliness is or what perpetuates it.

2. If you're lonely, all you need to do is make more good friends.

3. Lonely people feel that those who aren't lonely are more attractive, more intelligent and more worthy.

4. Lonely people are always blaming others when things go wrong.

5. It is important to realize that loneliness and being alone are not the same thing.

6. Teenagers get more out of being alone than adults do.

ANSWERS

1. False. Behavioral scientists at the University of Tulsa describe loneliness as "the psychological state resulting from dissatisfaction with the number and quality of one's social and emotional relationships." Loneliness was also found to be associated with the failure to appreciate oneself.

2. False. A Wake Forest (N.C.) University study on the "Social Reality of Feeling Lonely" found that: "Lonely persons listed as many best friends as non-lonely persons. Lonely subjects did, however, perceive a lower level of intimacy in these relationships than did non-lonely subjects, and their 'best friends' validated this perception."

3. False. According to a University of Tulsa study, loneliness is "associated with a view of human nature reflecting a generally unfavorable attitude toward others, particularly in the areas of trust and altruism, and a view of the world as an unjust place." The investigators suggest that, because of poor self-regard, lonely people may anticipate rejection from others. Thus, they devalue those people in order to rationalize the discomfort associated with what they see as their inability to be accepted.

4. False. "Studies of the Attributional Style of Lonely People," conducted at Rice and Stanford universities, showed that lonely people ascribe failures to "unchangeable character defects in themselves."

5. True. Psychologists point out that just as you can be lonely without being alone, you can be alone without feeling the least bit lonely. Time spent alone forces you to develop your personal strengths and provides you with the opportunity to explore what you really think and feel.

6. True. University of Chicago studies show that while aloneness is more painful for teenagers, it also appears to be more beneficial. Adolescents who spend more time alone tend to show greater purposefulness and personal direction in their lives. The researchers suggest that "teenagers seek solitude more than adults because they are experiencing a transition in life in which pressures from adults are unusually strong and there is a need to establish oneself independent of childhood parental bonds." DOWN IN CAROLINA

A SMASHING CELEBRATION

By Peggy Payne

Four hundred years ago, on the wooded strip of Roanoke Island, off North Carolina, English explorers sent by Sir Walter Raleigh waded ashore. These were the first people to attempt to colonize the New World. It wasn't a successful effort. One of the colonies (now referred to as The Lost Colony) vanished entirely. But America was off to a start.

On the weekend of July 13 through 15, Roanoke Island will host thousands of people from both England and America in a celebration of America's 400th birthday.

Though the July weekend will be the official kick-off of the birthday party that is to last three years, the festivities have already begun. On April 27, North Carolina Governor Jim Hunt led a delegation to Plymouth, England, for ceremonies with British officials to commemorate the departure of the English sailing ships that brought America's first settlers across the Atlantic.

Festivities on this side of the Atlantic will also abound. Weeks prior to the opening in Manteo on Roanoke Island, the British-American Festival in Durham will honor the four-century connection between these two cultures. At the restored royal governor's residence, Tryon Palace in New Bern, Fourth of July festivities will include the re-creation of activities in a 16th century military camp, a gun salute, and fireworks. And in September, Anson County will host a day of celebration of folk art and Indian life.

But the main event is the July weekend in Manteo, when the celebration officially begins. England's Princess Anne will attend. A 20-cent U.S. stamp will be issued to commemorate the 400th Anniversary. And puppet shows, magicians, musicians and food vendors will give the crowd an idea of what entertainment was like four centuries ago in England.

Just before dusk on Saturday, a flotilla led by Walter Cronkite will sail into waterfront Manteo. Fireworks will stream down over Manteo's Shallowbag Bay, and the outdoor drama "The Lost Colony" will be staged at the Waterside Theater.

"The celebration North Carolina will host between 1984 and 1987 offers us a rare chance to share our state's unique history with the rest of the nation — indeed, with the world," said Governor Hunt.

For those who want to attend the July opening on Roanoke, make reservations immediately. But if you don't, there's plenty more happening later. For more information on the jubilee, write: America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, NC 27611. FW

To LP Gas Users

Important Safety Announcement

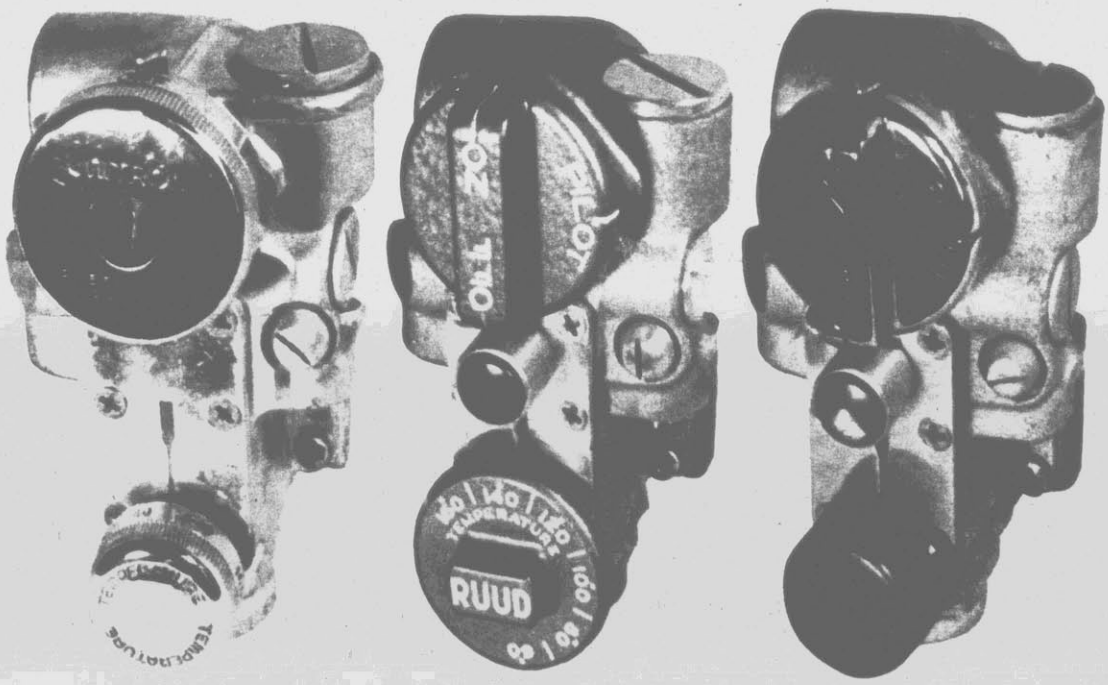

If you use LP liquid propane gas for your water heater and if your water heater control looks like any of those pictured below, we'll pay you $150 to have a new LP gas water heater installed.

The controls in question are at least 28 years old. Although they may appear to be working properly today, critical parts of the control can ultimately wear out, leading to a potentially dangerous condition. WARNING! THIS DISEASE CAN KILL YOUR DOG

By Dr. Lewis Berman

Heartworm, a disease carried by mosquitoes, has become a major killer among dogs, and it is at this time of the year in particular that your pet is most vulnerable. That's the bad news. The good news is that you can protect your pet by following a simple series of health care steps. And even if your dog does contract heartworm, you can save his life by familiarizing yourself with the warning signs and seeking veterinary treatment fast.

People tend to worry about their dogs getting fleas and ticks and forget about mosquitoes because they think their dogs are protected by their coat of hair, or because they think mosquitoes only bother humans. Not so. As I tell my clients, "If you're being bitten by mosquitoes, so is your dog." And if you live in a warm, humid climate near a lot of water where mosquitoes breed, your dog is a prime candidate for heartworm.

The trouble starts when an infected mosquito bites a dog and infects him with larvae. The adult worms live in the right side of the dog's heart and in the pulmonary circulation. Their presence restricts blood flow and thus increases the strain on the vital organs. This can lead to death.

The degree of danger your dog may be in varies according to what part of the country you live in. You see a lot of heartworm in the very deep South, Louisiana, southern Texas and along the southeastern Atlantic and Gulf coasts, where the disease started. Now it also has spread to most of the Eastern half of the country and the Midwest, so you really must keep your eyes open for heavy mosquito congregations in your specific neighborhood.

It's pretty safe to say that if you live in a heavily built-up area, your dog won't get heartworm. Mosquitoes don't tend to buzz around high rises.

But if you're in a high-risk area, it's very important to have your dog tested for heartworm at least once a year, in July or August. The test is both simple and painless. The veterinarian draws a little blood from the dog to see if he is free of microfilariae (immature worms). Then he gives you a preventive drug (diethylcarbamazine), which comes in three forms: liquid; chewable, with a really tasty base that's like candy to the dog; and a coated tablet. They're all equally good, so you should use whichever your dog accepts most easily. Remember, you have to go through this procedure every day during the heavy mosquito season and, if you live in a climate as warm as Florida's, let's say, you have to give it to your dog all year round. I suggest that you administer it to him for about two months after the mosquito season, because it actually works by destroying the infective larvae after the mosquito has bitten your dog. It only costs 10 cents, or less, a day for the average 25-pound dog.

You can't diagnose heartworm without going to your vet, but there are some signs you can look out for: If he starts to cough, gets very tired, or starts to go running with you and then suddenly stops, gasping for breath, you may have a problem.

As serious as heartworm is, though, if you diagnose it early enough, your dog can be cured. Immediately check him into the hospital, so your veterinarian can inject him with the right drug twice a day over a two-day period.

You can't diagnose heartworm without going to your vet, but there are some signs you can look out for.

When you bring your dog home, you really have to treat him like an invalid for about six weeks. You should always keep him on a leash, and when you walk him down the street, make sure that he goes very slowly. This isn't the time to throw his ball around or try to get him to play with his toys, either. And if you have two dogs, don't let them play together. One dog can't catch heartworm from another, but an infected dog tends to become a reservoir for mosquitoes, and those infected mosquitoes may turn around and go after the healthy guy.

One final note: The drug that will keep your dog free of heartworm has no known side effects. Well, almost none . . . there have been reports of impaired fertility, but for some odd reason, mostly in male greyhounds. So if you happen to have a breeding colony of greyhounds, and they have heartworm, and suddenly your birthrate goes way down, you may want to go into another line of work — or cure that heartworm fast! 2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar, divided
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
8 cloves garlic, peeled
2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger
½ teaspoon cumin seed
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon ground red pepper (cayenne)
1½ teaspoons ground cardamom seed
Pinch of crumbled saffron (optional)
1 teaspoon red food coloring

1. Remove skin from chicken; make 6 deep gashes in flesh. Rub chicken all over and inside with 1½ tablespoons lemon juice and 1 teaspoon salt. Wrap loosely with plastic and refrigerate for 1½ hours.

2. With a mortar and pestle, grind together remaining ½ tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, garlic, ginger, cumin seed, black pepper, red pepper, cardamom and saffron, or place in blender and process until combined.

3. Mix ground spices with red coloring and yogurt; mixture should be colored a deep, vivid red. Spread this mixture inside and over the chicken. Cover loosely and refrigerate, marinating to develop flavor for 6 to 8 hours.

4. When ready to cook, prepare charcoal grill to very hot. Place chicken on spit, reserving marinade. Fasten securely and turn over coals for 30 to 40 minutes, basting with marinade, until cooked through. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

CHARCOAL-BAKED BANANAS

6 large ripe bananas, in 1 bunch
4 tablespoons butter
½ cup packed brown sugar
½ teaspoon ground allspice or nutmeg
¼ cup dark rum
3 limes, halved

1. Set the bunch of unpeeled bananas in hot coals. Bake until black and soft to the touch.
2. Meanwhile, in a small saucepan, heat butter with brown sugar and allspice or nutmeg until bubbly. In a small skillet, heat rum — do not boil.
3. Each person should slit his banana, squeeze a lime half over it, and drizzle butter-sugar mixture on top.
4. Ignite rum and pour it flaming over the bananas a little at a time, shaking skillet gently until the flame dies.

Makes 6 servings

Beyond the ubiquitous "Boston Baked Beans," the foods of this region reflect in great part its proximity to the sea, from steaming bowls of chowder by the fire during a winter Nor'easter to fragrant, blazing red grilled lobsters on a secluded sand dune in summer. Local produce plus wild and cultivated berries round out a diet of simple, fresh foods. Menu and recipe are from Jasper White of Restaurant Jasper in, of course, Boston.

GRILLED LOBSTERS WITH DRAWN BUTTER

8 live "select" (1¾- to 2-lb) lobsters
1½ lbs. lightly salted, melted butter
Vegetable oil
Black pepper

1. Prepare a good strong charcoal or mesquite fire. While the coals burn down to the proper grilling stage, prepare lobsters.
2. Take a sharp knife and put the tip where the body meets the tail, with the blade facing the head. Split this half lengthwise, turn the lobster around, and split the tail. Remove head sack and intestine.
3. Lightly brush the shell and tail meat with oil. This will give the shell a glossy appearance which is very pleasing to the eye, and helps prevent the tail meat from drying.
4. Place shell side down on rack about 3 inches over coals. Cook until only ¼ of the tail meat is transparent (approximately 5 to 6 minutes). Cover. Cook about 2 to 3 minutes more, until done.
5. Remove from grill. Very quickly break off the arms and claws and shell them. On a platter, arrange this meat over the bodies; sprinkle with black pepper. Never use salt. Serve with little bowls of drawn butter.

Note: Rather than melting the butter slowly, try bringing it to a boil. The water in the butter will cause an emulsification of the milk solids, fat and salt, giving you pure butter flavor instead of the individual flavors of the components.

Tuscan food is noted for its simplicity: its lack of heavy sauces and seasonings. Unlike most Italians, Tuscans use little pasta, starting meals with a soup instead. The one given here is served cold and combines the fresh tastes of tomatoes, basil and olive oil. Broiled steak is delicately seasoned with freshly ground black pepper, olive oil and lemon juice. Menu and recipes from Lucio Sorre, vice president and chief wine-taster at Villa Banfi, U.S.A., in Old Brookville, N.Y.

2. Drain beans, return to kettle, cover with additional water, heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer for 1½ to 2 hours or until beans are tender. Add a little salt near the end of the cooking time (if added too early, it will toughen beans). Drain.
3. In large skillet or Dutch oven, heat oil and sage leaves until almost smoking. Add drained beans and cook, stirring, for about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes; season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir gently until heated through. Makes 6 servings

2. In small jar or bowl, combine lemon juice, olive oil, coarse salt and black pepper; mix well. Just before serving, pour dressing over salad, toss.

GETTING POLITICAL WITH

THE REV. JESSE JACKSON

Eighth in a Series of Interviews with 1984's Presidential Candidates

With a Presidential campaign that he hopes will revive the civil rights movement, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is well on his way to rewriting the manuals of political campaign strategy. Already, the 42-year-old Baptist minister has succeeded in launching a national drive on a shoestring, with virtually no TV commercials or direct-mail brochures. His campaign is built on some of the ideas of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and his goals include finding jobs for poor people, overhauling the Democratic primary system to help minority candidates reach higher office, and cutting back the U.S. defense budget. Jackson took time out recently to sit down with political writer Andrew Jaffe for a FAMILY WEEKLY interview.

Kaleta/Gamma-Liaison

Jaffe: What do you see as the major concern of America's families?
Jackson: Families are held together by financial stability and moral values. If a family is economically strong but has endured a collapse of values, it will disintegrate. I have, however, seen families that were morally strong survive economic tragedies.

Q: What level of aid, if any, should the federal government contribute to day-care centers?
Jackson: I think the government ought to either provide day-care or give tax incentives to corporations to provide it. If a corporation has a day-care center, it helps employees get to work on time, builds confidence in the company, and aids productivity. If business won't do it, then the government ought to help.

Q: Do kids who grow up in a day-care center environment get as good an upbringing as those who are raised more traditionally?
Jackson: One of the advantages of day-care is that it's a structured learning environment and it offers a variety of social interactions. Children need both the love, care and discipline that they get at home and an organized learning center outside the home that teaches the socialization process.

Q: Do you approve of federal government intervention in cases where parents decide not to prolong the life of a seriously deformed child, such as in the case of Baby Jane Doe?
Jackson: There's so much involved in that case — the doctor's ethics, the parents' wishes, the hospital's guidelines. It's a matter of conscience and judgment, and it has to be decided by the people involved.

Q: What's your reaction to the growing involvement of religious leaders in national affairs, particularly the Roman Catholic Church's participation in the ongoing nuclear freeze debate?
Jackson: The church has an obligation to help set the moral climate in a nation and to fight for peace. The church must not impose religion upon us, because we are a secular society, but it must make its impact felt.

Q: What level of aid should the government provide for abortion?
Jackson: I choose to put my emphasis on sex education and self discipline before the fact. I would never encourage abortion, except under medically extenuating circumstances. On the other hand, I do support freedom of choice. We must live with the consequences of our decisions and we ought to be challenged to make wise ones.

Q: What level of federal aid should there be for birth control?
Jackson: It's hard to put a budget estimate on it. We ought to encourage sex education during our children's formative years. When you do not teach a child the power of his or her body, it's like letting a car loose down a hill without a driver. The car makes the bottom of the hill only with a lot of luck.

Q: So you believe sex education should be taught in our schools?
Jackson: Early on we should be taught the biology of our bodies as well as the moral responsibility we have for them. There is no conflict really between teaching the spiritual dimension of one's body and teaching the fact that it has the power of reproduction. FW

CREAM OF THE CROP

Ice cream licks all other contenders when it comes to children's favorite foods. The current issue of School Food Service Journal reports that "nine out of ten children rate it as No. 1." Doughnuts came in second, chocolate chip cookies third and french fries fourth. So much for a balanced diet.

One thousand fifty-one children ranging in age from 2 to 12 — and their mothers — were surveyed to determine what kids like to eat. Other food faves were pizza — which only narrowly edged out chocolate cake — Mexican food and fishsticks. The favorite vegetable was corn on the cob, followed by dill pickles and carrots. In the lunch competition, chicken noodle soup was a surprise hit, beating out peanut butter and jelly, and finishing behind only burgers and hotdogs.

Eggplant finished last.

WHAT A CARD

One of America's great institutions is collecting and trading bubblegum baseball cards. Ah, for the halcyon days of youth when the most on your mind was whether your friend's Willie Mays was worth Don Drysdale and Ernie Banks. Recently there have been some new twists added to the old trading cards.

For one, Topps Chewing Gum Company recently began putting out cards with portraits of football cheerleaders on them, starting with the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders. A Topps exec insists that the move was just a reflection of the growing interest in women in sports. Mm-hmm. Oh yeah — there's no gum included in the packages.

But the ultimate in baseball cards is being offered by Big League Cards Inc., of Teaneck, N.J. Send them $30, a photograph and some background stats, and you get 50 trading cards of yourself.

The idea is the brainchild of Jim Bouton, former pitcher for the New York Yankees and bestselling author of Ball Four. His satisfied customers include the likes of Kevin Gropp, an IBM marketing manager, who, according to his card, "shot a hole-in-one at Monclair Country Club," and Tom Winner, Senior V.P. at William Esty Co., who appears on the card in his softball uniform.

Just think. If you hit it really big, someday your card could be worth, say, a Kevin Gropp and a Tom Winner.

DRINKING IN ATMOSPHERE

What drives a person to drink? In part it may be the ambience of his or her chosen watering hole. University of Minnesota anthropologist Jack Schaefer (no relation to a certain beer maker) has just finished a study on how the layout, decor and music in a bar affect the amount that people drink. Here's the word, straight up.

It seems that consumption increases in establishments with dim lighting and an absence of women. Action photos on the walls seem to promote imbibing, but landscapes discourage it. Dance floors and dress codes cut down on drinking, and patrons tend to consume in an inverse ratio to the tempo of the music — so Sinatra may lead to overindulgence while the Rolling Stones might actually promote temperance. And people who come in alone or with groups of five or more tend to drink heavily.

The one finding that is not surprising is that establishments that offer free drinks or two-for-one specials encourage drinking, while high-priced joints encourage only moderation.

THE KNIFE'S EDGE

When a product isn't selling well in Japan, Far Eastern marketing analysts like to get right to the core of the problem. It was noted recently that though apples are scarce, both the sales of the fruit and the prices are very low. Persimmon prices and sales have also been declining. According to Retailing Home Furnishings, Japanese analysts traced the problem to the fact that both fruits need to be peeled before being eaten. (In the Orient, they don't just bite in, skin and all.)

Well, you wonder, why don't they just peel them? Here's where it gets as mysterious as all the Orient. It all goes back to the assassination of the chairman of Japan's Socialist Party, Inejiro Asanuma, in 1960. The dirty deed was done with a knife, and from then on, a whole generation of school children was discouraged from using knives. The result is that some of Japan's young housewives can't handle a blade well enough to skin their fruit. Apples and persimmons therefore seem more trouble than they're worth.

It makes you wonder what would have happened if Chairman Asanuma had been run over by a small car.

BEDSIDE READING

Ever wonder what folks around the country read before they switch out the light and retire for the night? We have, too, so we're inaugurating a new feature that we'll be running from time to time called "Bedside Reading." Here's the first edition.

Mayor Ed Koch, New York, N.Y.: Schindler's List, by Thomas Keneally; The Little Drummer Girl, by John LeCarré.

Mayor Koch said this was his first exposure to LeCarré, and though the book was a little tough to get into, it proved to be well worth the time.

Mayor Fred J. Moore Jr., Eureka, Calif.: Les Misérables, by Victor Hugo; The Jerusalem Bible.

The Mayor tries to keep current with as many as twelve different versions of the Bible. The Jerusalem Bible, he says, is his favorite translation.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Plant is smaller. 2. Phone cord is moved. 3. Scallop on hassock is missing. 4. Elbow is concealed. 5. Hand is moved. 6. Rug is missing.

SUM RELIEF FOR FIDGETS

A bright young lady named Katey
Once wrote numbers
from one to eighty,
But it gave her the
fidgets to add up the digits —
If you help her she'll call you
her matey.

How can Katey be helped? Suggestion: Halve the top number of the series (80) and multiply the result (40) by the top number (80) plus one. That is, multiply 40 by 81. Resulting 1-80 sum — 3240.

Try tallying other number runs that begin with 1 similarly.

- FULL STEAM! Spring fever or other excuses not withstanding, the boss believes an employee should work eight hours and sleep eight hours, but TON TA EHT EMAS EMIT. Reverse capitalized words and read them in given order for sense.

...not at the same time.

- Log Jam! Tree A is three times as tall as tree B. Half the height of B is 20 feet less than the height of A. How tall is each tree?

A is 24 feet tall; B is eight feet tall.

- Hook 'Em? Use all of these letters to form names of three fresh-water fish: SUROBPTSCTREHA. Pick from these species: Carp, trout, bass, perch, pike.

Trout, bass and perch will do it.

- Di'ja Ever See! Di'ja ever see a soda pop? Di'ja ever see a hot dog stand? Di'ja ever see a tooth paste? Di'ja ever see a jury box? You try some.

FILL BILL! Two of the adult birds in the gathering above look enough alike to be twins. Which two fill bill?

Our Story: KAREN HAS BEEN CHARMED BY AN ARROGANT YOUNG SQUIRE. SHE WATCHES DEVOTEDLY AS HE PRACTICES FOR THE TOURNAMENT. THE KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE ARE FIGHTING IN GAUL. FOR ONCE THE SQUIRES WILL HAVE A FAIR CHANCE AT THE LAURELS. KAREN NOTES WITH PRIDE THAT MARCUS UNSEATS ALL WHO CHALLENGE HIM.

MARCUS, GRANDSON OF MANLIUS, LAST GOVERNOR OF ROMAN BRITAIN. HIS FAST RISE FROM THE RANK OF PAGE HAD BEGUN WITH A FOOD FIGHT.

WHEN THE FIGHTING BROKE OUT, MARCUS AT ONCE TOOK CHARGE OF HIS FRIENDS AND SEIZED THE HIGH GROUND. TO OUTFLANK THE FOE, HE SENT SOME OF HIS MEN OUT THE KITCHEN DOOR. THEY RETURNED BY A WINDOW, TAKING THE ENEMY UNAWARES. VICTORY WAS THEIRS.

SIR GAWAIN HAD BEEN AT HIGH TABLE WITH THE PAGES THAT DAY. HE MARVELED MARCUS'S AIR OF COMMAND, HIS INGENUITY, HIS SKILLFUL PLAN OF ATTACK. WHEN THE BATTLE ENDED, GAWAIN HAD THE BOY PUNISHED FOR HIS MISDEEDS. THEN HE TOOK HIM ON AS SQUIRE.

HIS PROGRESS HAD BEEN SWIFT. "JUST WAIT," MARCUS BOASTS WHEN THE PRACTICE IS DONE. "I WILL WIN TOP HONORS AT PENTECOST AND YOU WILL BASK IN MY REFLECTED GLORY."

"IT'S NOT FAIR," COMPLAINS VALETA, WHO IS AS MUCH IN LOVE WITH LOVE AS HER TWIN, BUT NOT HALF AS LUCKY. "KAREN NOW HAS TWO ADMIRERS AND I HAVE NONE AT ALL." "PERHAPS," PRINCE VALIANT SAYS, "YOU HAVE A SECRET ADMIRER WHO WILL FIGHT FOR YOUR FAVOR IN THE TOURNEY." BUT KAREN IS NOT CONSOLED.
