Storms Break Budding Drought In N.C.

By The Associated Press

The weeks of dry weather came to an abrupt halt as thunderstorms, which dumped as much as six inches of rain on parts of North Carolina in a matter of hours, have been blamed for the death of a 16-year-old girl and the evacuation of up to 100 people.

Tammy Kay Sauvageau of King died Monday night when her car stalled on a road flooded by a swollen creek, said G.M. Hicks of the state Highway Patrol office in Salisbury. He said her car overturned and floated down the creek for about one-tenth of a mile, and she apparently drowned in the car.

Many roads in northwestern Forsyth County, southern Stokes and Surry counties and northern Iredell County were submerged as up to four inches of rain deluged the area in less than three hours, the National Weather Service reported.

Kiver Alderman, chief of the King Fire Department, said a man in his 20s was injured when the water swept him into a 2-foot culvert and wedged him in up to his chest. Five rescue workers were unable to pull him out manually and had to use a winch. He was taken to Baptist Hospital for treatment, Alderman said, and his condition was not immediately available.

"He should have been dead," Alderman said. "I don't see how he made it."

Randy Morgan, head of the Stokes County Emergency Medical Service, said that during the height of the flooding, rescuers were trying to evacuate up to 100 people from their homes in the Meadowbrook area northwest of King.

Morgan said those evacuated would be sheltered in the Carl Calloway Post 290 of the American Legion in King. But officials said the evacuees were able to return to their homes early today.

Chief Jerry Isaacs of the Pinnacle Volunteer Fire Department said that a tornado touched down near the fire station and "just took the top off a barn and strowed it 400 to 500 yards."

Isaacs said there were unconfirmed reports of another tornado touching down on Trinity Church Road. He said he knew of no injuries from any twisters in the area.

The weather service had issued severe thunderstorm warnings Monday from Cherokee and Buncombe in the west to Nash, Edgecombe and Halifax in the east. However, Wayne Jones, weather service specialist in Raleigh, said the conditions were not "really good" for tornadoes.

"There are no watches in effect, so it's pretty much just severe thunderstorms, hail and high winds with a small chance of a tornado," Jones said.

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service warned that small streams and urban drainage basins are likely to reach near flood levels or slightly above them today.

The warning covers the northeast Piedmont and Halifax, Nash, Wilson and Johnston, Harnett, Lee and Moore counties. People living near flood-prone areas are warned to keep alert for rapidly rising water levels today and to stay tuned for weather advisories about flooding.

Flash flood watches remained in effect for the northern foothills and northwest piedmont, and the National Weather Service warned of the chance of storms bringing more heavy rain this morning.

Between one and three inches of rain fell over many communities overnight.

Warnings were also issued for Iredell County, where the weather service said it had reports of up to six inches of rainfall and a vehicle washed off the road in Union Grove.

Winston-Salem was under a flash flood watch until early today. Several city streets were flooded and some businesses reported water damage.

Ed Johnson, the operations supervisor for Duke Power Co. in King, Rural Hall and Pinnacle, said there had been "surprisingly few" power outages as a result of the storm. As of about 11 p.m., he said only about 200 homes had been without power.

Summer Jobs Are Available

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

A lot of young people in the area have already found summer jobs cleaning hotels, selling strawberries, picking cucumbers or working in country clubs and more jobs are available, according to Ernest Conner of the Greenville Employment Security Commission.

"We have all kinds of jobs available, especially farm work. We've written letters to many employers in Pitt County and we're getting back responses. Some young people have already been hired," Conner said.

Conner, who heads the summer jobs program for area youth, said the response from employers this year has been good.

"Even if employers don't need someone to work for them, we get a letter back saying they don't need any. They take the time to answer us, which I think indicates that the level of support for the program is quite good," he said.

Conner said most of the jobs available pay minimum wage.

"The rates usually average out to minimum wage. Farm work pays by the piece — like 60 cents a bucket for cucumbers. Sometimes farm jobs pay 50 percent of the sellable amount. So, if you pick $50 worth of cucumbers and the employer sells them at $50, you get $25," he commented.

Conner said many more jobs will become available in the next few weeks as schools close for the summer and employers begin needing help.

Economically disadvantaged youth, he said, can find work (Please turn to page 10)

HOW TO VIEW THE ECLIPSE — This is one method of viewing the solar eclipse that will occur Wednesday. Tape a piece of aluminum foil over a hole in one end of a cardboard box and place a piece of white paper inside the box on the other end. Hold the box with pinhole toward the sun and view the eclipse reflected on the white paper. Do not look at the sun directly or through the pinhole — look at the image projected on the white paper. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Studies Of Solar Eclipse Will Center On Its Timing

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Local interest in Wednesday's eclipse of the sun runs high in Greenville, but official studies of the May 30 eclipse by East Carolina University scientific personnel will be focused primarily on locales outside Greenville.

All contacts stressed above all the need to exercise stringent precautions in viewing the eclipse.

Dr. Jim Gaiser of the ECU Physics Department, said "we are setting up a telescope outside the Physics Building to project an image of the sun on a screen. This is for the benefit of the public and we expect lots of people to come to see the image."

For scientific studies, Dr. Gaiser said, "I will be heading a study group going to Greensboro to observe the eclipse and Dr. Seykora (Dr. Edward J. Seykora of the ECU Physics Department) will be in Petersburg, Va., heading a group going there."

"In general," he added, "our main purpose at these sites will be to determine precise timings of the eclipse."

Charles Ross, director of education for the Greenville schools, said "principals have been sent information on the eclipse, with emphasis on warning students of the safety hazards involved."

"School staff have also been preparing information on aspects of science, history, and language relative to the eclipse. This information will be correlated with major subject areas. Students in higher grades will be more involved in studying the eclipse."

Edgar Boyd, dean of students at Pitt Community College, commented "to the best of my knowledge, there are no specific plans for anyone to observe the eclipse here. We have no science major study that would normally zero in on the eclipse."

Court To Get Draft Cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to judge the validity of the government's former policy of prosecuting only those young men who publicized their resistance to the military draft registration.

The court said it will study the case of David Alan Wayne, a 23-year-old former Yale philosophy student from Pasadena, Calif., who says his free-speech rights were violated by the government's "selective prosecution."

Wayne's arguments convinced a federal trial judge to throw out his 1982 indictment, but the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco reinstated the indictment last July.

In other cases today, the court:

— Agreed to decide whether The Nation, a weekly magazine, violated copyright law when it printed information from former President Gerald Ford's memoirs before his book was published in 1979.

— Agreed to review a dispute between the federal government and the Western Shoshone Indians over 24 million a been given a life imprisonment term.

— Government contends the Indians' claims to the land were extinguished when the United States set aside $26 million as a damages payment to tribal members.

— Rejected the appeal of a gay British businessman, a Texas resident for 19 years, who was denied U.S. citizenship because of a federal law excluding aliens with a "sexual deviation."

— Ruled that an Arizona man, Dennis Wayne Rumsey, could not be (Please turn to page 10)

Amtrak Train Derails

DAWSON, Pa. (AP) — An Amtrak train derailed today next to a rain-swollen river in southwestern Pennsylvania, spilling some cars into the water and injuring at least 19 people, authorities said.

The seven-car Capitol Limited lurched to a halt at about 7:15 a.m. when crew members noticed part of the railbed had been washed out by recent heavy rain, said Robert Connors, an Amtrak attendant aboard the train.

"The engineer put the full brakes on, and the next thing we knew we came to a jerking halt," said Connors, interviewed by telephone at Connellsville State Hospital after being treated for a chest injury.

Five of seven cars left the track beside the Youghiogheny River in Fayette County, said Dawson firefighter Ray Frobrink. About 150 people were on the train.

"Two engines were derailed, and two baggage cars were in the water," said the train's fireman, James Enright, 34, of Pittsburgh, speaking by telephone from Connellsville State Hospital. A nursing supervisor said he was treated for an ankle injury.

Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black in Washington said the area was difficult to reach because "on one side of the tracks you've got a river and on the other side you've got an industrial area that's fairly inaccessible by motor vehicle."

Taft Runs Unopposed

Greenville attorney Tom Taft will be unopposed in the special primary for District 9 in the state Senate on July 17, but four opponents will seek the nomination in the 6th District.

The race in the new 6th District matches Bethel resident R.L. "Bob" Martin, Dr. John Costabile and Vernon Morton, both of Wilson County, and Shelly Willingham of Edgecombe County.

Taft will be opposed in the November partisan election by Republican Maynard Waters of Beaufort County. There is no Republican opposition in the 6th District race.

Morton, who filed Friday just before the deadline, is a member of the North Carolina lieutenant governor's staff. He lives in Wilson and works in Raleigh.

GARDEN SPRAYER ERROR

Sears, Roebuck and Co. has issued a warning to consumers of a catalog copy error involving the use of certain garden sprayers. The only sprayers involved are Tri-Poxy Sprayers, model numbers 711521, 711522 and 711523.

Sears 1984 spring-summer catalog says these sprayers can be used with "even the more harsh chemicals such as Round-up, Diazinon, hydrochloric acid and more." This information is inaccurate and consumers who own the sprayers should not use them with these types of harsh chemicals, the company said.

Although there have been no reports of injuries, Sears said the use of these types of chemicals in the Tri-Poxy sprayers may result in corrosion of certain component parts and cause leakage or discharge of the chemicals. Customers who've bought the sprayers for use with the above-mentioned chemicals may return them to the nearest Sears retail store or catalog outlet for the full refund, the company said.

State Targeted For Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A coalition of civil rights groups is targeting at least 15 states for lawsuits challenging voter registration rules on grounds that the regulations discriminate against poor and minority voters.

The first such lawsuit was to open today in District Court in St. Louis. Others are planned in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

In the Missouri suit, as in the others, the plaintiffs will charge that state law gives local officials too much leeway in registration rules, said Arthur Eisenberg, a lawyer for the New York Civil Liberties Union. He said that while St. Louis does not deputize volunteer registrars, for example, surrounding St. Louis County does.

The suits mark the latest attack in a broad movement to sign up eligible voters — many of them poor and minorities — in time for the November presidential election.

"This is the next big hurdle for voting rights in the United States," said Richard Cloward, treasurer of the New York-based Human Serve Fund, a registration group organizing the suits. "It's like they don't want poor people to vote."

In St. Louis, registrar Rosemary Plitt said employees in all city schools and libraries can accept registrations, and her office conducts registration drives in 10 supermarkets each weekend. In March and April, 9,800 people signed up — indicating a reasonable effort, she said.

Ross Briggs, a lawyer for the National Lawyers Guild who is arguing the case, disagrees. He charged that supermarket sign-ups began recently "to make them look good prior to trial" and that far (Please turn to page 10)

Couple Marries In Evening Ceremony In Chapel Hill

Pamela Deen Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Powell Fleming of Grifton, became the bride of Allan Tigner Holmes Saturday in a six o'clock ceremony in the Chapel of the Cross in Chapel Hill. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Urban Tigner Holmes of Sewanee, Tenn., and the late Rev. Holmes.

The Rev. Craig Barry Anderson of the School of Theology, Sewanee, Tenn., the Rev. Joe Morris Doss of New Orleans, La., and the Rev. Kenneth Townsend, the bride's pastor of Saint John's-Saint Mark's Episcopal Church in Grifton, officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal designer gown of ivory bridal satin fashioned with a scooped neckline, fitted empire bodice and long fitted sleeves. The neckline and bodice were appliqued with re-embroidered alencon lace and embroidered with seed pearls. The sleeves tapered to a calla point at the wrist with matching beaded lace trim. The full A-line skirt carried panels of matching beaded lace in a redingote effect down the front and a border across the hemline that flowed into a full chapel train. Her chapel length veil was of silk illusion with a scattering of seed pearls worn with an alencon lace and pearl embroidered cap. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis. She wore her mother's cameo earrings, a gift from her father on their wedding day.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Jessica Snyder of Greenville and Gina Fleming of Washington, D.C., as matron of honor and maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Janet Haws of Fort Worth, Texas, Teresa Little of Sewanee, Tenn., sisters of the bridegroom, Bonnie Britt of Greenville, Linda Branscome of New York, Stephanie Jones of Charlotte and Diane Bellini of Smyrna, Ga.

The best man was David Thomas Holmes of Doraville, Ga., brother of the bridegroom, and groomsmen included Roy Nance Haws of Fort Worth, Texas, William Kenneth Little of Sewanee, Tenn., brothers-in-law of the bridegroom, Benjamin Clinton Hale of Lexington, Va., William Michael Lewis of Raleigh, Jerold Lee Edwards of Chattanooga, Tenn., Louis Leonidas Sasser of Durham and John Harding Parker of Smyrna, Ga.

The bride's attendants wore formal gown of frost pink matte taffeta designed with an open neckline which featured a double ruffle of matching taffeta and a petal hemline with a rolled fabric rose accenting the waistline. They carried rubrum lilies tied with ivory ribbons.

Wedding musicians were Dr. Quinn, church organist, and Ruth Johnson, violinist.

The parents of the bride entertained at a reception at the Villa Teo and music was presented by a jazz ensemble from the Carolina School of Music.

The wedding party and guests were honored at a wedding brunch at the Carolina Inn Saturday. On Friday night the mother of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner party at the Carolina Inn.

The bride received her A.B. degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is now employed with Fonville Morisey

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Given a choice between having another child and another phone, I'll take a new baby, hands down.

At present, I have three children and four phones. The kids aren't perfect but when I'm resting, they never come up and ring in my ear. When they call me and I pick them up to answer them, they never go dead and pretend they never called me in the first place. If I ignore them when they call, I never carry around 20 pounds of guilt. I figure they'll tell me what they want to say later.

With a telephone, it's like having four whining, spoiled children in the house who keep ringing and ringing and ringing until you answer them just to shut them up.

Frankly, I think the younger generation's decision to have fewer children and more phones will be a decision they will live to regret. Oh sure, phones are cute when they're new... especially the ones in the car and the cordless ones you can take to the beach and the ones that dial your number electronically, but just wait... your life will never be the same again.

They'll ring 15 times when you're in the shower and just when you get to them dripping wet, they'll disconnect.

They'll sass you when you pick up the receiver with a curt, "Who is this?"

They'll invite friends on the line whom you've never heard of before and connect you with people you've never dialed.

They never nap when you do. And when you really need them, they'll turn on a recording and insist you leave your message at the sound of the beep.

Phones will never be your friend. Friends don't have an unlisted number.

There was a time when I thought children were demanding and insensitive. Compared to telephones, they're pussycats. The other night my phone rang three times. I dropped my fork into the plate, scraped the chair over my foot, clipped my hip on a skillet handle, spilling grease all over the floor, and got the receiver off the hook seconds before the caller hung up.

"What took you so long?" said the voice.

"I'm sorry," I said. "To whom did you wish to speak?"

"Is this Maxine?" he said. "You don't sound like yourself."

"No, this is not Maxine."

"Then how come you answered the phone, you BLEEP broad!" He hung up.

I washed the receiver out with soap. But it wasn't the same.

Greeks Prefer Church Rites To Civil Marriage Ceremony

By ARTEMIS PITTAS
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two years after the Socialist government introduced civil marriage, most Greek couples prefer an elaborate ritual in an incense-filled Orthodox church to a simple three-minute ceremony in the local town hall.

Only one in 10 Greek couples has opted for a civil wedding since the civil ceremony was introduced by law in March 1982. Official statistics show most of the 5,000-odd civil marriages so far celebrated took place in cities.

In the small mountain town of Florina in northern Greece, for example, only five civil ceremonies have been held so far.

"Ending the centuries-old religious monopoly on marriage was a vital social reform that was long overdue, but Greeks, even if they are not religious, find it hard to escape from the customs of an old-fashioned society dominated by the church," Thanassis Tsouras, secretary general of the Interior Ministry, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Tsouras said civil marriages did not appeal to most Greeks' taste for "the ceremony and fuss" of an hour-long Orthodox service that includes a wedding dance around the altar as guests shower the newlyweds with rose-petals and rice.

By contrast, civil weddings are conducted in quick succession once or twice a week by local officials in bare rooms in town halls.

The ceremony costs only 100 drachmas (one dollar) while ornate church weddings can soar to 50,000 drachmas ($500).

"People are still suspicious of civil ceremonies. They think there must be something wrong if they're so cheap and simple," said Christos Lorenzatos, who runs inner Athens' Civil Marriage Office.

The inner Athens area, which holds an average of 20 civil ceremonies a week, has the highest proportion of civil to church weddings in Greece, with 1,087 civil marriages to 7,750 religious ceremonies in 1983.

"The majority of newlyweds (opting for civil marriage) are young people whose parents probably disapprove and people over 50 who are embarrassed to go to church," Lorenzatos said.

He said the brief civil service also attracted a large number of "marriages of convenience" between Greek girls and foreigners wanting to live and work here, along with weddings where one partner was marrying for the fourth time — percent of those convicted of the offense continue to draw welfare support while on probation.

"The Catch-22 is, when these persons get convicted, they will then lose their jobs," Smith said. But Crawford says if they have the right incentive — such as staying out of jail — they find work.

"If they don't want probation, then obviously I have the power to put them in jail," he said, "and if I'm not going to exercise that I tell them the conditions they must meet."

Crawford said conviction for taking less than $5,000 carried up to 18 months in prison and a $2,500 fine.

One problem is benefits for minors or other dependents which now go through a person convicted of taking illegal benefits. He wants a law clarifying his position but said children and other dependents must be protected.

The state Public Welfare Department has no statistics on how many welfare fraud cases are reported or how many result in convictions.

Smith said in Franklin County alone about 100 people were indicted for welfare fraud each year, roughly 25 percent of the cases referred to his department because they involved large sums of money or repeat offenders. Most cases of overpayment are settled out of court.

Smith believes many judges may follow Crawford's lead, but Crawford found more skepticism than support when he began his program several months ago.

"The major argument against it was, 'You can't do it.' My response is I'm going to do it until I find out I can't."

He has asked Ohio legislators to write his idea more firmly into law.

State Sen. Michael Schwarzwald, a Columbus Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said there would be support for the measure but that time constraints made it unlikely to get consideration soon.

Smith said such a law would have to be worded to avoid conflict with federal statutes.

Crawford keeps offenders off welfare because he makes it a condition of probation. He cannot order the welfare department to withhold benefits because federal funds and federal rules are involved.

Croom-Lawson Wedding Vows Exchanged Sunday Afternoon

Bernita Fay Lawson of Kinston and William Franklin Croom of Greenville were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Macedonia Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Charles White performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lawson of Kinston. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Croom of Hookerton.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father. She wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of bridal satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke which accented the schiffli embroidery, leg of mutton sleeves and basque waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls appliqued the bodice and sleeves. The floor length bridal satin skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a small brim beaded bridal hat accented with a Dior bow and silk illusion streamers. She carried a cascade bouquet of white bridal roses, lavender tiger lilies, lily of the valley and English ivy interspersed with baby's breath.

Tenita Kay Lawson Wilson, twin sister of the bride of Kinston, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Yolanda Kay Bryant, cousin of the bride of Dover, Annie Fay Croom Boddie of Hookerton and Jackie Croom Wade of Washington, N.C., sisters of the bridegroom.

Robert Croom of Linden, N.J., was best man and groomsmen were Michael Leon Lawson, brother of the bride of Kinston, Jessie Croom, brother of the bridegroom of Elizabeth, N.J., and Willie Freeman, cousin of the bridegroom of Maury.

Lucy Sugg directed the wedding. The bride was graduated from South Lenoir High School and Lenoir Community College. She is employed by First American Federal Savings and Loan. The bridegroom was graduated from Greene Central High School and attended Lenoir Community College. He is employed by K Mart Corp. as assistant manager in Greenville.

A reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perry of Jacksonville and was held at the church after the wedding. Presiding at the bride's book were Vickie Lawson Perry, sister of the bride of Jacksonville.

Kim Stevens, cousin of the bride of Kinston, poured punch and Deborah Fleming, cousin of the bride of Newton Grove, served cake.

A miscellaneous shower was given for the bride by Cathy Platt and Sarah Howell. A bridal breakfast was held at the Holiday Inn given by Janice Jones last week.

The couple was honored at several showers and parties prior to the wedding.

Reader Can't Remain Silent: Decides To Speak

DEAR ABBY: I need a quick answer to this, and I can't ask anyone else because this is a small town.

Is it possible to leave out that part of a marriage ceremony that says, "If there is anybody here who has any objections to this marriage, let him speak up now or forever remain silent?"

Also, just in case somebody does speak up with an objection, what happens?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: The bride and groom should ask the person who will perform the ceremony to omit that question. The decision shall be left to the person officiating.

And if someone raises an objection, anything can happen, depending on what the objection is. Then the person who is performing the ceremony shall decide whether or not the ceremony should continue.

I have never known of a case where a marriage was halted for this reason, but if any of my readers have, please let me know.

Choosing Family Doctor Is Important Decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Most consumers are concerned enough with what they buy to shop around and make comparisons, but that is not often the case when it comes to selection of a doctor, says Dr. Jeffrey A. Stein, an associate attending physician at The Presbyterian Hospital here.

"More and more people comparison shop for the other things that they use," he points out. "But when it comes to making one of the most important consumer decisions in your life, you probably make the choice of a doctor based on little more information than a good word from a friend or a convenient office address."

"Too often the choice boils down to personality more than anything else," he adds. "People usually just call up a friend and ask, 'Who do you like?' It's important to like your physician. That obviously has something to do with the healing process. But to base your choice solely on personality is foolishness. There are objective references that can be used, too."

He suggests that a person in need of a physician contact a major teaching hospital in the area. They often have referral panels of physicians willing to serve as "family doctors."

"The fact that a doctor is on the staff of a university teaching hospital tells you that he or she has been prescreened for you," Stein says. "You know that all of the doctors there have had their credentials looked over pretty carefully by the university and hospital staff."

But he adds, "By itself, that's no guarantee." He recommends that people do a little research on their own. This entails more than just reading the diplomas hanging in the doctor's office.

Stein suggests consulting the "Directory of Medical Specialists," available in most libraries. It tells where a doctor attended medical school, where he or she was trained, in what and for how long. It also tells by which boards a doctor is accredited, professional affiliations and their entrance requirements.

You should, Stein advises, choose only those physicians who work or were trained at institutions that you know of and trust. Once you are satisfied with a doctor's credentials, he suggests that you should learn more about how the practice is run.

"You should find out what the fees are, if the doctor is available on evenings or weekends, how emergencies are handled, if the doctor has special hours to be available by phone, if he or she returns phone calls, and other information which will affect the structure of the relationship you'll have."

Such questions, Stein says, should be directed to a physician's office staff.

Of the doctor's approach to patients, Stein feels that "you have every right to expect a doctor to take the time to sit down with you after an exam and discuss what's been found, what questions remain, and what's planned in the way of follow-up care."

If any questions are not answered satisfactorily, or if you begin to feel that your physician sees your care as just a chore to be gotten out of the way, then, says Stein, "It may be time to look for somebody new."

"But, no matter why you are looking for a new physician, when you look, search as if your life depended on it. One day it may."

DEAR ABBY: I'm in college, and one of my closest friends here has asked me to be a bridesmaid in her upcoming wedding in June. It will be held in a distant state, and I've already purchased my plane tickets, which cost $700. The bridesmaid's gown set me back $300. Abby, this is all my own money I'm spending.

Two weeks ago I fell down the dorm stairs and fractured my right arm. Right now my entire arm is in a plaster cast, which I will have to wear for four months!

Yesterday I heard through the grapevine that my friend is hoping I will drop out as a bridesmaid because she's afraid I'll spoil the looks of her wedding! I think that's not only petty and mean, it's outrageous considering the money I've spent.

I'm upset enough at the prospect of having my arm in a cast all summer without being made to feel unwanted. What do you think?
CAST ASIDE (NO JOKE)

DEAR CAST: Does this "grapevine" through which you've been getting your messages happen to bear sour grapes?

Have a talk with the bride. Tell her what you've heard and how you feel about it. You've already had one break; maybe she'll give you another.

DEAR ABBY: In your answer to "Suffered Enough in Wisconsin," whose problem was excess hair growth, you recommended electrolysis.

I was a little surprised that you didn't suggest that very often this condition in women is caused by the overproduction of male hormones that can be markedly improved by medication.

Although mustache hair in women is no cause for alarm, excess hair growth on the chin, chest and sealing edges to side of dish. With a knife open vents as much as possible. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until bubbling hot and pastry is golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

In Our Minds

Perspective.

That's the word we sought on the recent Memorial Day.

Because of the underlined addition of another unidentified serviceman to the Grave of the Unknown, a stranger to our planet would think Vietnam was the only conflict America knew.

True, its tragedies (during and after, big and personal) have dominated our recent past. Much of it may be attributed to a saturation of reports, analyses and sometimes highly personalized and unobjective accounts by an all-pervasive and highly competitive news media reaching into nearly every home across the land. It dwarfs any similar American experience of the past.

Privately we marvel that of the multitude of young men (and some women) who shared the Southeast Asia experience, something less than 3,000 remain on the Missing In Action list; and most of those are presumed to have earned that listing in one of the more remote, unmapped, uncharted and uncivilized areas of the globe.

No other country in the world is so preoccupied with a complete accounting of all their war casualties. It is manifestly a near-impossible responsibility; and the minuscule share of those unaccounted for — as compared with the multitudes involved — leaves room for more wonderment.

Returnees from past conflicts have, on the whole, picked up their lives where they left off on going to war. Their experiences, personal tragedies and the horrors they endured were long ago accepted as natural facets among the travail of serving and survival in times of organized mass killing and maiming. So, too, were their subsequent absorption with survival in a peaceful society routinely accepted.

Memorial Day was an occasion for both the dead and the living.

We think of them often; not just on one day of the year.

Statistical Gems

We wish all readers could have gone beyond the first few paragraphs of the Census Bureau's report on the changing U.S. population profile.

Highlight of the account was that America is maturing. The median age has climbed to a new high, 30.6 years, as of 1982 ... meaning half of the population is above and half below that figure.

The statistic is no doubt important to demographers, but nuggets for the average reader were included elsewhere.

Examples:

More than half of the women aged 20 through 24 remain single; up from 36 percent in 1970. Men in that grouping that never married climbed from 55 percent to 72 percent in the same period.

The proportion of Americans who are elderly has tripled since 1900, and one of the fastest growing categories is that age over 85.

Women accounted for 59 percent of the increase in the labor force from 1970 to 1982.

White-collar workers and service workers made up 98 percent of the growth in employment during that period ... which says something about the industrial field.

The proportion of the total black population living in central cities declined. In 1982, about 55 percent of the nation's blacks lived in central cities, down from 59 percent in 1970 — a new trend?

Half of all married couples now have a wife in the labor force; up from 50 percent in 1972.

Even to non-experts those kind of statistics carry conclusions that evoke mixed reaction as well as some surprises.

Taken all together, they indicate the face of America is continually changing.

Central America: Focus For Issues

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — When Gov. Jim Hunt, the Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, came out of his cocoon and began arguing federal issues with Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, he chose to start with Central America. The Hunt camp thinks Helms is very vulnerable on Central America issues but even a brief examination of the issue shows that Central America offers both candidates a fair share of potential pitfalls and goldmines.

For Hunt, Central America offers him the opportunity to look senatorial. To this point, he's spoken primarily of education and jobs, issues closely identified with his governorship. He knows he must expand his range of campaign topics into foreign policy, however, if he is to assure the voters that he knows the jobs of senator and governor are different.

Politically, Central America allows Hunt to cozy up to the very popular President Reagan because Helms has been openly critical of Reagan's policy in the region. Hunt can also use Central America in his efforts to portray Helms as dangerously far right, further right than Reagan, all the way over there with the fascist death squads of the Salvadoran right wing.

Jesse Helms can also benefit from an increased Central American discussion in this campaign. Remember, he's successfully parlayed opposition to the Panama Canal treaties and aid to Nicaragua into victories for himself and friends in past elections. Even liberal congressmen concede that there's a communist threat in Central America now and Helms, by playing the hardest of all lines, reinforces his image as an ardent anti-communist. That stand has never hurt him in the past. So long as Hunt coozies up to Reagan, however, Helms will have a tough time painting Hunt as soft on communism in the region.

The biggest potential pitfall for Hunt lies in his inexperience in the foreign policy arena. All politicians run the risk of saying something stupid at some point. The risk rises when they're talking about things in which they're not directly involved. Hunt may be vigorously studying foreign policy now but he runs the risk of making a mistake every time he's hit with a foreign policy question for which he has not been specifically briefed.

By coozing up to Reagan, Hunt dances along another dangerous line. Already, some liberal Democrats are showing exasperation at Hunt's shift rightward to challenge Helms' base. If he gets too close to Reagan on Central America, Hunt might disenchant voters he's already counted as being in his column.

The political pitfalls of Central America may be greater for Helms. New President Jose Napoleon Duarte is considered by some as America's last chance in El Salvador. If Duarte fails, all hope of a non-military role for the U.S. may be lost, these experts say. Helms has staked himself out as a supporter of Duarte's chief opponent, Roberto d'Aubisson. If Duarte should be assassinated or simply fail to get the job done, and if President Reagan should blame d'Aubisson for either eventuality, Helms would be embarrassed tremendously.

The two candidates share one other pitfall — they might put more time and effort into Central America than it is worth politically. A poll conducted by the New York Times showed that less than 10 percent of the American electorate has a good enough understanding of American foreign policy in Central America to know who the U.S. supports and who the U.S. opposes.

For the public, there's a big pitfall. If the public doesn't learn what's going on independently, it makes it a lot easier for the politicians — Hunt, Helms and every other candidate — to present the situation in self-serving terms.

Strength For Today

Many years ago a teacher of English, who in his youth had aspired to write, decided to give up all ambitions along that line and concentrate on training young writers. He had students who seemed so much more promising than he; that in quite a selfless fashion, he decided he would serve the cause of literature best by training his students and forgetting about his own career.

Some time later he wrote an article setting forth an idea which had become very vivid to him. When the article was finished he was aware that he was writing on a new and higher plane.

Today he is considered the outstanding writer in his field. This unselfish English teacher who renounced a career and found a better one is illustrative of the declaration of Jesus that if we try to save our lives we lose them, and if we lose our lives we find them.

Take Him Like He is

WASHINGTON — It was a great flap while it lasted — the cam-pan-scram flap, that is — but now that the big guns of the House have subsided, it may be useful to put the affair in perspective. We have seen a little hardball played on Capitol Hill, and we have seen a little deception unmasked, and these events have aspects good and bad.

Five years ago the House authorized public television to make a gavel-to-gavel daily record of its sessions. The rules laid down by Speaker Tip O'Neill were clear: The cameras were to focus only on the person speaking in the well of the House. But on the evening of May 10, when Republican Bob Walker of Pennsylvania was speaking under a parliamentary procedure called a "special order," a funny thing happened up there in our forum: The camera suddenly "panned" the chamber, and it became evident that Walker had been orating to an absolutely empty House. Except for James L. Oberstar of Minnesota, who was stuck in the chair, no one was home.

Speaker O'Neill, it transpired, had unilaterally ordered the pan shot. His unabashed purpose was to embarass the Republicans, who had been using the after-hours special orders to denounce the Democrats. The Republicans naturally were aghast at what Trent Lott called "this underhanded, sneaky, politically motivated change in the rules." The Democrats responded that they were fed up with the Republicans' base attacks upon their patriotism.

The cam-pan-scram led to a splendid shouting match on the floor, in which O'Neill — of all people — was ordered to take his seat for bad behavior. An outraged Republican called Tip "a cheap, mean, petty, second-class Boston politician," which was most unkind. Under whatever remnants remain of civility in the House, the gentleman should have described Tip as "a cheap, mean, petty, first-class Boston politician."

What about all this? Let me say a word, first, about Speaker O'Neill. I cherish an abiding affection for the gentleman, but loving the speaker is like loving a wet collie. You have to take him as he is. O'Neill is a partisan Democrat, first, last and always. His magisterial change in the television rules was precisely in character. In Britain's House of Commons things are done differently, but God never made Tip O'Neill to wear a wig.

O'Neill was playing hardball party politics. Up to a point, this is no bad thing. We are forever talking in this country of our "two-party system," but if ours is a "system" the word has lost its meaning. O'Neill presides over a House that nominally includes 268 Democrats and 167 Republicans. On any given vote, 50 of his troops are likely to go over the hill. Party loyalty is a joke — or at least it has been a joke until the past couple of years. If the TV flap leads to a greater sense of party accountability, this could be useful.

I doubt that any such beneficial result will occur. Our "system," such as it is, is geared to a degree of political independence unknown to our British cousins. If we ever stumbled into rigid party positions, from which no dissent was permitted, we would stumble into folly. That danger is remote.

Our parliamentary procedures differ in another way from Britain's. For the past 180 years the reporting firm of T.C. Hansard has provided a daily account, absolutely verbatim, of what is said in Parliament. Hansard admits no deletions, no revisions, no extensions of remarks. By contrast, our Congressional Record provides a daily illusion of what is said in Congress. By one informed estimate, 70 percent of the words reported in the Congressional Record never are spoken on the floor.

On the evening of May 10, when Tip's camera panned the empty floor, we had a moment of truth. Except for quorum calls and roll-call votes, both House and Senate ordinarily operate with only a handful of members physically present. This is not a scandalous manifestation of congressional irresponsibility. Most of the work of Congress is done in committee.

More such honesty would be welcome. A video record of archival value occasionally would show the chamber warts and all. As for the Record, it is ridiculous to assess the taxpayers $485 a page for most of the self-serving junk that is printed as an "extension of remarks." The cam-pan-scram exposed a sham and it got some elderly adrenals pumping. As I say, it was great while it lasted.

Having Fun With Taxes

WASHINGTON — Back when William McKinley was president, and the U.S. was only 45 states, smokers and drinkers accounted for most of the federal government's budget.

Federal income taxes were still 13 years away. The government drew more than 80 percent of its income from excise taxes on tobacco and alcoholic beverages.

Fifteen chief executives later, "sin taxes" are again the rage. Though increased levies on liquor and tobacco ($10 billion in 1983) won't solve Washington's problems of the purse, Congress is certain to raise the price of a fifth of whiskey by as much as a dollar this year. Cigarettes, beer and wine may also be hit before Election Day, Capitol Hill sources say.

Tax hikes of any sort would seem impolitic during a campaign season, yet in this case they've received grassroots support from the anti-smoking and anti-drunk driver movements. Behavior modification has always provided the moral impetus for zapping smokers and drinkers for their pleasures.

But the joint pursuit of fiscal and moral objectives needn't be so inequitable. America could benefit dually by taxing hundreds of practices that are either excessive or unproductive. Just a few of the following levy proposals might warrant congressional consideration:

- Pollster tax. Not to be confused with the former Southern tradition, this duty would fall on the estimated value of information usually given freely to political campaigns, market surveyors and other exploiters of public opinion. Pollsters wouldn't vanish, but they'd probably bother people less.

- Politicians' hot-air tax. In this case, the source, not the recipient, would be burdened. This would bring a windfall of new revenue, since much of what politicians say is pretty taxing.

- Litigation tax. Nearly everyone agrees that Americans go to court to solve too many of their disputes. Perhaps they'd sue each other less frequently if the victor in any decision was forced to pay all the lawyer's fees as well as remit a percentage of the award to the court and jury members for clogging their schedules.

- TV tax. The problem isn't that Americans watch too much tube but that they watch the worst of it. For every situation comedy viewed last year (including reruns), taxpayers would have to increase their income taxes by $1, with total payments not exceeding the cost of their TV set.

- Cabbage-patch tax. Nothing drives people crazier than shortages of a popular commodity. Take the board game, Trivial Pursuit, for example. Would-be purchasers have been known to travel hundreds of miles to find an edition. This tax would go into effect automatically at the first sign of a shortage, reducing demand and unhealthy covetousness.

- Free-parking tax. Urban commuters inevitably discover that acres of downtown lots are reserved for use by certain companies or agencies. In Washington, where federal employees enjoy such privileges, resident tax-payers are doubly burdened. Taxing free lots might prompt their owners to change policies.

- No-kid tax. Word of a new baby boom notwithstanding, many young couples are going childless, ostensibly for the sake of living free and easy. Such abstinence, however, only undermines school systems, toy manufacturers' profits and the American family tradition.

- Tank tax. According to Detroit, America is falling in love again with the full-size car. If correct, the trend reveals a typically American ignorance with history. No matter how their fuel efficiency has improved, gas guzzlers ought to be taxed at a premium rate.

- Portable juke box tax. Unfortunately, the popularity of the Walkman radio has not led to the disappearance of the suitcase-size radio/tape players seen and heard on sidewalks in most cities. Nine pedestrians out of ten will say that these noisy nuisances ought to be taxed upon purchase.

Presbyterians To Name New Leader In Week-long Session

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The reunited Presbyterian Church, the fourth largest denomination in the United States, will pick a titular leader on Wednesday as it opens its General Assembly here and an operational head when the week-long session ends next week.

Two Michigan pastors and a California woman are the leading candidates for titular leadership as assembly moderator of the 3.2-million-member church, which reunited last year after splitting over slavery in 1861.

The assembly moderator's role has been overshadowed in the past by that of the stated clerk, who runs the denomination on a day-to-day basis.

But the General Assembly will consider rewriting the stated clerk's job description to reduce the position's power before choosing a stated clerk near the end of the weeklong meeting here.

Also on the agenda are such potentially divisive issues as abortion, relations with the National Council of Churches, school prayer, Central America, the Middle East, arms control and evangelism.

Presidential candidate Gary Hart is among the scheduled speakers.

The current moderator, the Rev. J. Randolph Taylor of Charlotte, N.C., who is not seeking re-election.

"The clay is wet, but it will harden up quickly," he predicted. "We've got about a year to shake our fundamental questions about the shape of our new denomination," he added. "Seldom do institutions get such a chance for reformation."

Seeking to replace Taylor are the Rev. Harold W. Kaser, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Saginaw, Mich.; the Rev. Donald G. Lester, executive of the Detroit, Mich., presbytery; and Harriet Nelson of the First Presbyterian Church of Napa, Calif.

Nominations from the floor are permitted but unusual, officials said.

Kaser, born in Holmes County, Ohio, served previously as a pastor in Forest Grove and New Hope, Pa., and in Canfield and Coshocton, Ohio. He is a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary. He is married and has four children.

Lester, a graduate of Yale University Divinity School, served as a pastor in Grand Rapids, Mich.; Wheeling, W. Va.; and Canton, Ohio. He and his wife have five children.

Mrs. Nelson, a graduate of the University of the Pacific, worked as a teacher in California and in Cameroon, Africa. She has headed numerous church committees, as have her two rivals. She and her husband have three children.

The church's southern and northern branches approved reunification a year ago but have kept duplicate sets of some departments since then.

The church now has offices in New York, former headquarters of the northern branch — the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and in Atlanta, host to the southern branch — Presbyterian Church, U.S.

U.S. Rushes Aid To Saudis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, employing his emergency powers, has sent 400 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles and two KC-10 tanker planes to bolster Saudi Arabian defenses against attacks on Persian Gulf oil shipments, sources said today.

Two hundred launchers fitted with short-range Stingers and 200 replacement missiles arrived in Saudi Arabia Monday, a State Department official said. This official and other sources confirmed the dispatch of the missiles on the condition they not be identified.

A formal announcement was expected later in the day. But one official said Reagan had used his emergency powers to send the missiles so that congressional approval wasn't needed.

The Saudis, who had requested the Stingers, will pay cash for them. It was also understood that the Saudis have given guarantees the missiles will be safeguarded and will not be transferred to anyone else.

American personnel will train the Saudis in the use of the missiles.

The Stingers have a range of three miles and could be used by the Saudis against low-flying attack planes. They already are armed with 62 U.S.-built F-15 jet fighters, but the missiles can swiftly hit back at raiding aircraft while the planes require time to scramble.

Plans called for deployment of the hand-held Stingers at the main Saudi oil depot of Ras Tanura, about Gulf tankers and around royal palaces, U.S. officials said.

One of the KC-10s was already en route to the Gulf while the other would follow later, the sources said.

They said the planes, designed for midair refueling, will be used to extend the flying time of the F-15s, enabling them to patrol waters where shipping has been threatened in a spillover of the Iran-Iraq War.

The F-15s were sold to the Saudis with small fuel tanks to reduce their range and, thus, their value for an attack on Israel, whose Capitol Hill supporters almost blocked the sale under the Jimmy Carter administration.

The KC-10s, flown by American pilots, also would be used to extend the range of four U.S.-crewed AWACS radar planes that can monitor much of the Gulf while following orders to stay 50 miles within Saudi borders. The two KC-10s would supplement three KC-135 airborne tankers that refuel the AWACS.

A Pentagon official said over the weekend that the Saudis plan to set up an "air cap" in Gulf waters to protect shipping.

The Defense Department's chief Middle East expert, Maj. Gen. Edward Tixier, was in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, discussing the deployment of the U.S. planes. One option is to have American pilots fly the tankers, ensuring that the United States has a tight rein on the operation. Another is to put the tankers under temporary control of the Saudis.

In Jerusalem, reports over the weekend that the Stinger shipment was imminent aroused the Israeli government. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told his Cabinet Sunday he feared that terrorists could get their hands on the missiles or that they could be used against Israel, a senior official said.

Meanwhile, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens is expected to arrive in Washington tonight for previously scheduled talks.

RJR Wins Entry To Chinese Sales

PEKING (AP) — China and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International Inc. today signed an agreement to produce cigarettes jointly for Chinese consumption, making the U.S. company the first to gain access to the world's largest market for tobacco.

The $20 million agreement was signed by Lester W. Pullen, president and chief executive officer of the U.S. company, and Lieu Wi Chan, manager of the Xiamen cigarette factory in Xiamen, a special economic zone for foreign investment.

Under the agreement, the two sides will produce and market a jointly owned brand for sale in China and overseas. The name of the cigarette has not been decided.

Previously, China had balked at allowing foreign companies to sell jointly made products to the domestic market. The U.S. tobacco company is the first to break through that barrier, Pullen said.

The government has said one-quarter of China's 1 billion people smoke, making the country the world's largest tobacco consumer. Chinese tobacco factories produce more than 900 billion cigarettes a year.

Chinese authorities have warned that cigarette smoking is hazardous to health and have announced a campaign aimed at making people quit.

"We agree that our government does not want people to smoke, but we think in society it is one of the things we cannot avoid," Mrs. Lieu said at a news conference following the signing ceremony at the Great Wall Hotel in Peking.

Cities Intensify Rabies Programs

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Health officials here and in the sister city of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, have intensified rabies vaccination programs because recent cases have raised the specter of a 1976 outbreak that crippled the tourist industry on both sides of the border.

Why Would A Bank Put So Much Value On Something Money Can't Buy?

No one is surprised these days when a bank touts the quality of its services or announces with pride the addition of another zero in its assets column.

And certainly, these things are important. It's just that, at BB&T, we view them from a somewhat different perspective. Because, what we value above all else is something quite different. We place a premium on attitude.

Attitude shows up on the balance sheet only indirectly. But we venture to say that you'll notice the difference it makes when you enter any one of our branches.

You'll find, for example, that instead of merely providing a service, we're interested in the full range of your long-term financial plans and needs.

We believe that our commitment to long-term thinking gives us superior insight. And that this insight gives us the ability to understand the need and value of integrated financial solutions for our customers.

Responsiveness is another BB&T attribute. We're committed to responding to any request for our services in the absolute minimum amount of time.

Ultimately, you'll also discover that BB&T delivers the highest quality financial services across the board.

Quality. Commitment. Performance. For the things that mean more than just money, come to the place that's more than a bank.

Hart Challenges Independent Delegates' Support Of Mondale

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Sen. Gary Hart is raising the specter of a convention floor fight over Walter F. Mondale's backing by independent delegate committees as the former vice president heads to California for the final week of the primary season and the Rev. Jesse Jackson ends a brief Mexican visit.

Hart said his rival's support from delegate committees backed by special interest money could attract a Justice Department investigation and jeopardize Mondale's chance against President Reagan.

"Think of what might happen after a convention in which Mr. Mondale has achieved the nomination and then the Justice Department investigation was launched about whether this money was in violation of campaign contribution laws," Hart said Monday in West Virginia and New Jersey.

"That could be the whole general election race," said Hart, trailing Mondale by nearly 700 delegates in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Mondale denies any illegality and says he intends to repay money donated to the delegate groups working on his behalf by political action committees. He has placed more than $400,000 in escrow, and aides say it will be paid back once the Federal Elections Commission approves.

But Hart said Mondale should return the money now and described the issue as posing a legal and ethical problem for the party.

He stopped short of saying he would lead a credentials challenge to Mondale delegates at the Democratic National Convention. But, Hart said, "It's not out of the question."

Mondale, also in New Jersey, brushed aside Hart's criticism, saying there is "not a single committee in any of the five states" holding primaries June 5. He said Hart's claim that some Mondale delegates are tainted by their assistance from delegate committees was "a scheme" for trying to take away delegates.

All three candidates are pointing toward the climactic round of primaries one week from today, when voters in California, New Jersey, West Virginia, South Dakota and New Mexico decide 468 delegates.

Mondale was wrapping up his major New Jersey effort today and heading to San Francisco, while Hart was spending another day in the Garden State before heading West on Wednesday.

Jackson was flying to New Mexico today after a 23-hour visit to Mexico, where he met with Mexican Congress and political leaders. Jackson found wide agreement on most issues, and he issued a strong condemnation of President Reagan's Central America policies.

"His basic approach is that of manifest destiny and gunboat diplomacy and big stick diplomacy ... as opposed to negotiation," said Jackson, who issued an apology for what he said was U.S. arrogance toward Central America.

Jackson's journey was his second major foreign trip of the presidential campaign. Unlike his earlier foray to Syria, which resulted in the release of a captured U.S. Navy flier, the stay in Mexico held little potential for drama.

But with Hispanic voters crucial in New Mexico and California, and with Central America on the minds of some voters, there could be a political payoff for the trip and his expressions of concern over Latin America.

Two-Coast Campaign Has Candidates Up In The Air

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

PACIFICA, Calif. (AP) — With waves from the blue waters of the Pacific Ocean pounding into the scenic California coastline behind him, Walter F. Mondale declared, "I love New Jersey."

Two days later on the beach at Big Sur, Calif., Mondale's rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, Gary Hart, proclaimed his affection for the same distant state.

With a smile, he added, "I think New Jersey has wonderful beaches, very close to California beaches."

A few hundred yards down the coast were two nude sunbathers, a man and woman, who remained unperturbed by the invasion of their quiet and privacy by 60 members of the campaign entourage.

A kind of bi-coastal political silliness is dominating the final weeks of the 1984 Democratic presidential race.

Geography, and an election calendar in which New Jersey and California end the primary season with a bang on June 5, have forced the candidates to campaign almost simultaneously in dissimilar states 3,000 miles apart.

If that's not enough, they must also make at least nominal stops in West Virginia, South Dakota and New Mexico, which also hold primaries June 5.

The result is seemingly endless and expensive hours spent by the candidates on campaign jets, tough choices by strategists on where they should spend precious campaign time, and arguments over who likes New Jersey the most.

That began when Hart said his wife Lee was fortunate because she could campaign in the sunshine of California while he sought support in New Jersey, a state with sections bearing a less than picturesque reputation.

"The deal is that we campaign separately," Hart said. "That's the bad news. The good news for her is she campaigns in California and I campaign in New Jersey."

Hart's campaign recently stayed overnight in a New Jersey motel with a waste dump on one side, an auto body shop on the other, and railroad tracks nearby.

Mondale, campaigning near a fishing pier a continent away from New Jersey, said Hart should apologize to residents of the state, a suggestion Hart rejected.

"I don't mind being in New Jersey," said Mondale, whose campaign schedule called for him to spend seven of the next 10 days in California and three in New Jersey.

After Hart made the remark about New Jersey at a California reception, his spokeswoman, Kathy Bushkin, said he did not mean to insult the state and merely was suggesting that the transcontinental commute to campaign there and in California was wearing. But the questions kept coming.

When Hart sought to emphasize his own interest in the environment by campaigning on one of California's most stunning beaches, he found himself perched on a rock in the surf and answering questions about his views on New Jersey.

Like Mondale, he said: "I love New Jersey ... The people of New Jersey know very well that I deeply admire the progress that state has made. I've said so throughout that state."

Mondale spent Memorial Day in New Jersey where he had planned to campaign among the holiday crowds that jam the state's beaches.

"If the sun is shining today there are 3 1/2 to 4 million people on those beaches," said Paul Tully, a Mondale campaign official. But the sun wasn't shining, and there were no people on the rainswept beach.

Mondale, on the offensive for a week, pressed Hart to debate him in New Jersey, a proposal Hart said was difficult because of scheduling problems. Campaign aides concede privately that Hart has lost more votes than he has gained in the several debates so far.

At a campaign stop in San Diego, Calif., Mondale said voters in both California and New Jersey were interested in the candidates' views on nuclear arms control and toxic waste disposal.

Mondale was reminded the three candidates will meet in a final debate on June 3, nationally televised by NBC, and was asked why, if the issues in both states were similar, was it necessary to have a debate in New Jersey too.

"The people of New Jersey deserve their own debate," snapped the former vice president.

Reagan Visits Olympic Camp

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, accused by the Soviets of trying to play politics with the Olympics, is flying to Colorado to visit the U.S. Olympic training center and give a pep talk to American athletes hoping to compete in the Los Angeles Games. The president planned to make a brief visit to the 34-acre training facility in Colorado Springs today before addressing a gathering of Reagan-Bush campaign supporters. On Wednesday, Reagan will deliver the commencement address at the U.S. Air Force Academy. The training center, sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee, is used year-round by more than 12,000 athletes. It offers potential Olympians exposure to the most modern concepts in athletic training, as well as a sophisticated sports medicine evaluation.

Reagan planned to test himself on a computerized strength measurement machine, watch an athlete on a treadmill and see an exhibition by candidates for the U.S. Olympic boxing team and the U.S. Olympic girls basketball team.

On the eve of Reagan's trip, the Soviet Union claimed Reagan wanted U.S. athletes to triumph "at any price" to help his re-election campaign. The Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda said Reagan wanted to use the Games to create a surge of patriotism and anti-Soviet feeling that would help ensure his victory in November.

Pravda said Reagan wanted to "grab a victory at the Games at any price for political aims." It said that anti-Soviet groups in Los Angeles, whose threats to Russian athletes were cited by Moscow as the reason for its withdrawal, were hoping to turn the Games into a "witches sabbath" that would unsettle communist participants and throw them off their best performance.

Pravda argued that the United States this year probably would have lost to Soviet and other socialist athletes, based on past Olympic performances and outcomes of other world competitions. It said the 1980 U.S. boycott of the Moscow Olympics deprived the Americans of needed experience.

Eleven other nations have joined the Soviet-led boycott of the Games, which open in Los Angeles on July 28.

Reagan, who will preside at the opening of the contests, has denounced the Soviet boycott. The president said earlier this month that the Soviet explanation for the boycott — that its athletes wouldn't be safe — was "absolutely false and we've been able to prove it."

Reagan said he would not personally intervene to get the Soviets to change their mind. "I don't think there's any action that I could take that would be prudent," he said.

After delivering the commencement address Wednesday, Reagan is to present the Medal of Honor to William J. Crawford for valor during World War II in Italy. Crawford was a prisoner of war when he was awarded the medal, and it was accepted at the time by his father.

Chrysler Wins Big Credit Line

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has reached another milestone on the road back from near-bankruptcy — a billion-dollar line of credit that could tide the automaker over for years even if a severe recession hits, financial and industry sources say.

"This is a very big break for them, and it shows the confidence the banking community has in Chrysler," said a Wall Street source who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

"Chrysler has so much cash right now that it doesn't need to draw on this money," the source said. "But now they can be more free about their spending. There's a lot of comfort in knowing this is there."

Other sources confirmed the deal, worked out between Chrysler and several Detroit and New York City banks.

By extending the line of credit, the banks have essentially approved loans before they are asked for, thus reducing red tape for Chrysler if and when it wants the money.

Chrysler is expected to publicly announce the transaction before its June 7 annual meeting in New Orleans.

The credit line approaches $1 billion and could go as high as $1.2 billion — the amount Chrysler received in federally guaranteed loans from 1980 to 1982 to avoid bankruptcy, the sources said.

Chrysler lost billions of dollars during the four-year car sales slump that ended last year. While the company has recovered, its credit rating has not.

The rating service Standard & Poors last week raised Chrysler's rating on senior long-term debt from CCC to B-plus and the rating on subordinated long-term debt from CCC to B. Those ratings are better, but still considered speculative.

But Wall Street analysts estimate that by the end of the year, Chrysler will have more than $2 billion in cash on hand and will have turned a 1984 profit of more than $2 billion, by far a record for Chrysler.

Chrysler would be under no obligation to borrow any money under the agreement. But the deal would serve as a backstop should the carmaker need a quick fix of cash in the event of slow auto sales or the need to bring out a new product quickly.

The interest rate will be pegged to the prime rate at the time of the loans, sources said.

New Crops Live In Salt Water

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have discovered crops that thrive on salt water and yield at least as much food as conventional crops, ament Research Laboratory at the University of Arizona.

Two varieties of another crop, atriplex, yield as much animal feed as alfalfa and can be harvested several times per year, O'Leary said Monday in a report presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The crops can be grown either with sea water or with brackish — partly salty — water, O'Leary said.

"There are a lot of places in the United States — California and Arizona particularly — where there's a large agricultural industry now and the demands for fresh water are increasing," O'Leary said in an interview. "Fresh water is going to become increasingly unavailable for agriculture."

Arizona, California and parts of the Great Plains lie over sources of brackish water that could be used to irrigate crops, thereby conserving dwindling fresh water supplies for other uses, such as drinking water, O'Leary said.

New Stock Issued

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Regent Air Corp. is issuing new stock and using other measures in an attempt to raise $21.2 million to keep its fleet of luxury "all-frills" airliners in the sky.

The company, which charges $810 each way on its lone route from New York to Los Angeles, has lost more than $16.9 million since organizing in February 1982. Its service, including private staterooms, a secretary, a beauty salon and gourmet meals that alone cost the company $100 per passenger, was launched in October 1983.

The airline averages about 15 passengers per flight, less than half of what it needs to break even, financial officer James Waters said.

Israel Says Hijackers Slain

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Moshe Arens says there may be criminal prosecution of the security men who, according to a military commission, clubbed to death two Palestinians captured in a raid on a hijacked bus.

The commission's report was released by the Defense Ministry on Monday in the form of a two-page summary. It said the skulls of the two 18-year-old suspects were fractured by severe blows with blunt instruments after the security forces stormed the commuter bus to end the hijacking.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was quoted today as calling the killings "a foulup and a deviation from the accepted rules."

The Yediot Aharonot newspaper quoted Shamir as saying the Defense Ministry "had not hesitated to investigate the causes and circumstances of the foulup, and to draw conclusions so that cases like this should not be repeated in the future."

Four hijackers, armed with a makeshift bomb, a pistol and a knife, seized the bus April 12 on the coastal highway near the city of Ashdod and forced it to be driven south toward the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip. Early the next morning, Israeli troops stormed the bus and freed 25 hostages. During the shootout, two hijackers and one of the passengers, a woman soldier, were killed.

The army had said the two other hijackers, Majdo Abu Jama and Subhi Abu Jama, died of their wounds while being taken to a hospital. The two are distantly related.

But demands for an inquiry into the two men's deaths grew after Israeli news photographers revealed that they had photographs of at least one man, apparently uninjured, being led away from the bus in handcuffs by security men. The photographs, initially censored by military authorities, were published for the first time today.

The commission said security men justifiably struck the two on the head and body while they were on the bus to stun the hijackers and prevent them from detonating the bomb.

Then the two were taken to a field for interrogation, the commission said. "Following their removal from the bus, the two terrorists were dealt severe blows by men on the scene" and died of skull fractures, it said.

Arens chose reserve Maj. Gen. Meir Zorea to head the commission. The report said some security forces members "may have broken the law" but did not say whether the men responsible belonged to the army or some other security force.

"Nothing can justify what happened," said Arens, who had supervised the rescue operation and had stood by initial army reports that the two men died en route to a hospital.

"An investigation will be opened against those who are suspected of crimes by the commission and if they have to be punished they will be punished," he said.

Egyptians Giving Mubarak Election Edge

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Preliminary results of parliamentary elections indicated today President Hosni Mubarak's party would win decisively but that the opposition would have its biggest bloc of seats since a 1962 military coup.

The government's Middle East News Agency said returns from about a third of the country's 48 constituencies showed the National Democrats winning 70-75 percent of the vote.

In second place with about 15 percent, the agency said, was the center-right New Wafd Party.

Official results of Sunday's elections for the People's Assembly were due to be announced later today.

According to the unofficial returns, the center-left Socialist Labor Party, the largest opposition bloc in the outgoing 392-member assembly, appeared to have about 6 percent, below the 8 percent cutoff needed to qualify for seats. Opposition parties have challenged the cutoff-mark system.

Two other opposition groups, the pro-Moscow National Unionist Progressives Party and the Rightist Liberals, were way below the 8 percent mark.

In the new parliament there will be 458 seats.

Noman Gomaa, assistant secretary-general of New Wafd, said his party was hoping for about 60 of the 448 elected seats. Mubarak appoints the other 10 members.

That would give the opposition and intimidated would-be voters on Sunday.

One woman candidate of the Socialist Labor Party was shot dead at a polling station near Luxor and the wife of a Wafd candidate was wounded during a disturbance at a precinct in the Nile Delta, according to accounts.

Gomaa claimed a New Wafd election observer near Zagazig was abducted by police on election day and died, apparently of a beating. But Deputy Interior Minister Maj. Gen. Mohammed Abdel-Halim claimed that the man, Hussein Tawfik Murad, died of a heart attack at a police station while visiting his nephew, a member of the force.

A police statement listed 14 disturbances nationwide on Sunday, including five shootings and exchanges of fire between rival partisans, four attacks on polling stations by partisans who damaged or burned ballot boxes and one case of arson. It described the disorders as "individual incidents" and said all occurred outside Cairo.

Salvadorans Join U.S. War Games

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — For the first time, Salvadoran soldiers have joined U.S. and Honduran troops in war games intended to increase pressure on leftist forces in both El Salvador and Nicaragua.

Leftist rebels in El Salvador, in a broadcast on their clandestine radio station, claimed the maneuvers are being synchronized with Salvadoran army plans to launch a major attack on guerrilla positions in northeast El Salvador near the border with Honduras.

A contingent of 1,300 Salvadoran troops was flown to Honduras on Monday. One group went to Cucuyagua, about 25 miles from El Salvador, and the other to Jamastran, about 20 miles from Nicaragua, according to military sources who asked not to be identified for security reasons.

Also participating are 1,800 Honduran soldiers and 1,000 U.S. troops.

A U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said the exercises are designed to exert "psychological pressure" on Nicaragua's leftist government to reduce its military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union and stop alleged smuggling of weapons to Salvadoran rebels.

Leftist rebels have been fighting a guerrilla war for 4½ years against the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador.

The rebel broadcast Monday said the maneuvers were aimed at achieving "an important military victory" to accompany the swearing-in of President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte. Duarte, a moderate, was elected May 6, and takes office Friday.

Col. James Strachan, spokesman for U.S. forces in Honduras, says American troops are under strict orders to stay at least five miles from the borders of El Salvador and Nicaragua to prevent events like that of Jan. 11, when Nicaraguan troops shot down a U.S. helicopter that strayed into Nicaraguan airspace.

The Reagan administration says the military exercises, which began with the Big Pine I maneuvers in February 1983, are intended to improve the defense capabilities of pro-U.S. nations in the region.

Peruvians Stage Raids On Drugs

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Security forces destroyed 28 secret airfields and 45 cocaine-processing operations in sweeps against terrorists and illegal drug traffickers in the Peruvian jungle, the interior minister says.

Interior Minister Luis Percovich said 36 of the 47 people arrested in the raids were linked to a Maoist-oriented guerrilla group, Shining Path.

He told reporters that over the last 30 days, government forces had five armed confrontations with terrorists and drug traffickers.

"Operation Bronco," he said, took place in the jungle along the Huallaga River, about 375 miles northeast of Lima.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted lower today as trading resumed after a three-day holiday weekend.

Several auto and technology stocks were among the early losers, while several oil and oil service issues gained.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 3.67 points on Friday, was down 1.47 at 1,105.63 at noon EDT.

Declining issues held a 7 to 6 lead over declining issues on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index was down 0.14 at 86.98.

Big Board volume was 25.81 million shares at noon, compared with 37.97 million shares at the same point on Friday.

Stock prices have been under pressure in recent weeks because of concern about the financial prospects for some major banks, intensified fighting in the Persian Gulf area and rising interest rates.

But some analysts say the gloom is so widespread on Wall Street that the market could be ready for a comeback.

On the credit markets early today, short-term interest rates were higher and long-term bond prices were down.

As trading opened, the Labor Department revised upward to 3.5 percent from 2.6 percent its first-quarter measurement of the annual rise in U.S. business productivity.

On the NYSE, Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) was up 1/2 at 58 1/4, Continental Illinois was up 3/8 at 7 1/2 and International Business Machines was down 1/4 at 107.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 0.03 at 198.32.

Scientists Say Bacteria Could Prevent Cavities, Gum Disease

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Tooth decay caused by bacteria may one day be reduced by a common germ that wipes out the cavity-causing strain, scientists say.
 Researchers at the University of Connecticut are coating people's teeth to find the best method of applying the apparently beneficial microbes, which have warded off tooth decay in rats, but they say conclusive results probably are years away.
 The microscopic organisms aren't expected to eliminate the need for brushing, but they could add one more weapon to the struggle against tooth decay, perhaps the most common chronic infection known to mankind.

 The scientists outlined their preliminary research Monday at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.
 The most frequent cause of tooth decay by far is a kind of bacteria called Streptococcus mutans. It sticks to the teeth, turning the sugar that people eat into acid, which in turn dissolves tooth enamel and causes cavities.
 Dr. Jason M. Tanzer of the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington is experimenting with tove, a form of a common safe bacteria called Streptococcus salivarius.

 When painted onto rats' teeth, the tove bacteria multiplied and somehow wiped out most of the cavity-causing S. mutans germs. The result was a 30 percent to 40 percent drop in the number of cavities formed in the rats' teeth.
 Tanzer doesn't know why tove will not cause cavities itself or even how it crowds out the S. mutans bacteria.

 resented to death for the same crime after he had been given a life imprisonment term.
 — Killed an industry challenge of a 1976 agreement between the government and environmentalists to limit toxic water pollution. The justices left intact a ruling that threw out a lawsuit by industry critics of the agreement that sets certain standards for treating toxic wastes.
 In the draft registration case, the appeals court said the government's one-time "passive enforcement" of the draft registration law did not violate Wayte's constitutional rights.
 But another federal appeals court — the 6th Circuit court based in Cincinnati — subsequently ruled in a similar case that the enforcement policy "clearly violates the First Amendment (protection of free speech)."
 The Supreme Court must decide which appeals court was right.
 If it decides that the 9th Circuit court was correct, Wayte would have to stand trial. Conviction carries a maximum five-year prison sentence.
 Draft registration — not the military draft — was reinstated in 1980 under a law signed by then-President Carter. Some 11 million young men, about 97 percent of those eligible, have registered since then.

 The law requires all male citizens and resident aliens born after Jan. 1, 1963, and aged 18 to 26 to notify the Selective Service.
 Enacted in the aftermath of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the law is designed to make it easier to draft young men if that becomes necessary.
 The nation's highest court is expected to decide sometime by July a legal controversy from Minnesota related to the registration law: whether the government may deny federal aid to male college students who cannot prove they fulfilled their registration obligation.
 Wayte's selective-prosecution appeal challenged the government's method of "deliberately selecting for investigation and prosecution only a class of vocal protestors against the law."
 It noted that by 1982 less than 20 of some 500,000 non-registrants were indicted.
 Wayte had written two letters to the president, stating he never would register.
 Justice Department lawyers said they did not oppose the Supreme Court's resolving the split between the 9th and 6th Circuit courts, but said Wayte had failed to prove "that the government's prosecution policy in general was designed to retaliate against those who voiced disagreement with the registration law."
 They said the passive enforcement policy led to the prosecution of only "known non-registrants."
 The government lawyers noted that the policy has been changed, and now "persistent non-registrants" actively are sought out for prosecution.

 "Uncle Sam pays their salary, which is minimum wage. They have jobs available in all areas. Last year Farmville Central High School had 10 people cleaning, doing odd jobs and clerical type work," he said.
 If any young person needs a job, he should stop by the Employment Security Commission's office at 3101 Bismarck St. and tell the receptionist he is interested in summer work. She will give him an application to fill out.
 "Then the receptionist gives the application to me. I match the qualifications of the applicant with the needs of the employers and go from there," Conner said.
 He said he encourages every young person who needs a job to "come see us and we'll try our best, give 100 percent to get him a summer job."

Morris Records 10th Against A's

By The Associated Press

When you've just spent a lost weekend, it's nice to find your top pitcher on the mound to put an end to the embarrassment.

So it really came as no surprise that Detroit's Jack Morris stopped Oakland 6-2 on six hits Monday night.

"The losing streak helped me prepare mentally. I wanted badly to win. Everybody was a little embarrassed by what happened in Seattle," Morris said after yielding a pair of unearned runs and striking out eight in snapping the Tigers' first three-game skid of the season.

The Tigers thus increased their lead in the American League East to 5 1/2 games over Toronto, which was rained out in Chicago. Elsewhere, Baltimore trimmed Seattle 7-4, California whipped New York 6-2 and Kansas City downed Texas 6-1. Also rained out were Minnesota-

Boston and Milwaukee-Cleveland.

The Tigers staked Morris to a four-run lead in the first inning and the right-hander, who has lost only once, went on to lower his earned run average to 1.79 and become the first 10-game winner in the majors.

"He's awfully tough with a four-run lead. He's awfully tough period," said catcher Lance Parrish, who homered in the ninth for Detroit's final run. "With Jack pitching, I figured we had a pretty good chance."

Oakland starter Chris Codiroli retired only one batter and was charged with all the first-inning runs. The Tigers scored their first run on a walk to Lou Whitaker and singles by Alan Trammell — who had three hits and raised his average to .358 — and Kirk Gibson. Later in the inning, Codiroli hit Terry Herndon with a pitch to force in a run. Dave Bergman had an RBI single and Chet Lemon hit a sacrifice fly. Trammell had an RBI double in the seventh.

Orioles 7, Mariners 4

Storm Davis and two relievers combined on a six-hitter as Baltimore won for the 21st time in the last 29 games. Davis allowed two hits in six innings but came out because he felt some tightness in his arm.

Baltimore took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly and made it 3-0 in the third on a run-scoring wild pitch by loser Jim Beattie and a single by Wayne Gross. The Orioles added two runs in the sixth on Rick Dempsey's single and Bumby's sacrifice fly and got two more in the eighth on Bumby's single and Jim Dwyer's sacrifice fly. Ken Phelps and Steve Henderson homered for Seattle.

"I'm just a little fatigued in the arm," said Davis, who threw just 67 pitches. "Warming up I was a little tight. It never got any worse, but it never got any better. I just have to strengthen it back up. I'm thankful I've got a fastball I can throw at 90 miles per hour when I'm not feeling well."

He said he left the game because "I want to be as ready as I can be" when the Orioles meet Detroit next weekend for the first time this season.

Angels 6, Yankees 2

Reggie Jackson blasted a grand slam to support Doug Corbett in his first major-league start. Corbett went 5 1-3 innings following 191 relief appearances as a replacement for scheduled starter Tommy John, who came down with the flu.

New York rookie Dennis Rasmussen held the Angels hitless for the first three innings but walked, Juan Beniquez to open the fourth, hit Dick Schofield with a pitch and made a late throw to third base on Mike Brown's sacrifice bunt to load the bases. Doug DeCinces' sacrifice fly scored Beniquez and another walk to Brian Downing reloaded the bases. Jackson then snapped an 0-for-23 slump with his eighth home run of the season, 486th of his career and 10th career grand slam. Brown homered in the fifth.

"I just wanted to get a good ball to hit," said Jackson. "After he threw me an outside pitch, I got a fastball right down the middle and smashed it. I have been striking out quite a bit lately. It was frustrating and sometimes embarrassing, but the hit gave me some confidence."

Royals 6, Rangers 1

Frank White's line drive hit the left-field foul pole for a tie-breaking home run and triggered a three-run seventh inning. Larry Gura, 6-2, scattered six hits, while the loser was Frank Tanana, who hasn't beaten the Royals since 1980 when he pitched for California.

After White led off the seventh with his sixth homer, Steve Balboni singled and was forced by Lynn Jones. Don Slaught doubled Jones to third and he scored on Onix Concepcion's suicide squeeze bunt. Willie Wilson's double drove in Slaught with the third run of the inning. Balboni hit his fifth home run in the eighth and Darryl Motley added an RBI single in the ninth.

"When we used to play the Angels, Nolan Ryan would give us trouble, but we would make it up the next night against Tanana," White said. "It seemed like we always beat him, even when he had his good stuff."

Suspension Ahead For Mario Soto?

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati pitcher Mario Soto, ejected for bumping an umpire in a dispute over a home run call, says he does not know whether to expect a suspension.

"I don't care if they suspend me. That's their decision," said Soto of National League officials who will investigate his actions of Sunday. The Reds-Cubs game Monday was rained out.

"I don't really want to talk about this," Soto told reporters. "I've already read the story and that about says it."

Soto was the central figure in the argument and brawl that resulted in his ejection of Soto and Chicago Manager Jim Frey.

The incident started when umpire Steve Rippley said Ron Cey's fly ball in the left field stands at Chicago's Wrigley Field was fair. The decision was later reversed.

Soto, who had argued, was put out of the game. When he learned that, he charged the umpires but was restrained by Cincinnati catcher Brad Gulden.

As he left the field, a Wrigley Field usher hit Soto in the chest with a bag of ice. Soto grabbed a bat and started over the fence when he was restrained by the Reds a second time.

"I really don't know what happened. It happens so fast," Soto said Monday.

Blake Cullen, National League supervisor of umpires, said the incident was under study by league President Chub Feeney.

"I've talked to Chub and the umpires and we're getting information together to see what has to be done," said Cullen.

Givens Shoulders Burden

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — For a wisp of a woman, Randy Givens is carrying a heavy burden in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The slender 5-foot-6, 121-pound senior from Amityville, N.Y. is the backbone of the Florida State team favored to win the women's title for the first time.

The Seminoles' chances depend very strongly on Givens, who is entered in the 100- and 200-meter dashes and will run on the 400- and 1,600-meter relay teams.

"I don't mind it," said Givens, who undertook the same work load in the 1983 meet, when the Seminoles finished second to UCLA, the team champion for the second straight year.

A year ago, she finished sixth in the 100, third in the 200, ran the anchor leg on the winning 400-meter relay team and led off the winning 1,600-meter relay team. This time, she again will be entrusted with the important anchor leg on the 400 relay and will run third in the longer event.

Running the anchor leg on the 400, has at times, proved discouraging for the lithe Givens.

Riley Fears Bird, McHale In Lakers-Celtics Series

BOSTON (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley says he fears Boston's Larry Bird and Kevin McHale more than any other Celtics.

"We could do a better job denying Bird the ball and we also have to contain McHale," Riley said at a news conference Monday. "He had no problem shooting over any of our forwards and he was superb on the offensive boards."

McHale led the Celtics with 25 points as Los Angeles won Game 1 of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association Championship Series 115-109 Sunday. Bird hit only seven of 17 shots from the field, but still had 24 points. Bird and McHale also had four offensive rebounds apiece to help the Celtics finish with 21 offensive rebounds to 12 for Los Angeles.

"I expect Game 2 Thursday to be an all-out war," Riley said.

The Lakers coach said he believes his team has a good chance to become the first team in NBA history to win the first two games of the Championship Series on the road. In 1969, the Lakers lost the first two games of a playoff series in Los Angeles and went on to beat San Francisco 4-2, but that was in the Western Division finals.

"Many times in the past we have won the first game on the road, but we've never been able to win the second," Riley said. "But I think we're capable of it and are on the verge of it. We're a deeper team than we were in the past."

Riley said the Celtics "have three days to get angry, but on the other hand maybe the pressure to win at home will get to them."

The Lakers did not practice Monday after playing two games in three days, with a five-hour flight to Boston in between.

After the Celtics practiced, Coach K.C. Jones said his team has to "work harder defensively to stop the Lakers from running. They were getting fast breaks after we made free throws."

Jones said the fact that Bird was "missing shots he normally makes" definitely hurt the Celtics in Game 1, but he expressed confidence that his star forward would find his shooting eye in Game 2.

"I hope he gets the same shots Thursday," Jones said.

Bird said he was less concerned about his shooting percentage than he was about the Lakers' ability to dictate the pace of a game.

"I don't expect to score 25 or 30 points per game the way I have been," Bird said. "The Lakers are one of the prime teams in the league and they are good at making you do things differently than you're used to."

Frazier Takes Top Honor In California Track Meet

BAKERSFIELD, CA. — Ed Frazier, formerly of Rose High School and now at Taft College in Taft, Ca., was voted the Most Valuable Athlete of the Meet at the California Community College Track and Field Championships held at Bakersfield Community College Saturday.

Frazier was California state champion in the 400 meters with time of 45.77, setting a new state meet record. He finished third in the 200 meters at 20.86, and ran on the 4 X 100 sprint relay which was first with time of 39.89. On the 1600 relay unit which took third with a time of 3:08.52, Frazier ran a 46.0 leadoff leg.

Also a wide receiver for the football team, Frazier was recruited for football. Taft College won the 1982 national JuCo championship before Frazier's arrival, and the 1983 squad went undefeated in regular season losing only to Fullerton College for the national title.

Error Provides Two Runs Padres Rally By Mets

By The Associated Press
The New York Mets have tried more than 70 players at third base since Don Zimmer played the position in the team's first game in 1962. Now and then, they still have gardens there.

Ron Gardenhire, making his first appearance at the hot corner this season, found Kevin McReynolds' bases-loaded grounder too hot to handle in the eighth inning Monday, resulting in two runs that carried the San Diego Padres to a 5-4 victory over the Mets.

The game, which was interrupted for more than an hour by rain, was one of several Memorial Day holiday contests in the National League affected by the weather. Cincinnati at Chicago and San Francisco at Philadelphia were rained out, while Atlanta downed St. Louis 6-2 in a game in which the start was delayed by rain. Los Angeles beat Montreal 6-1 and Pittsburgh blanked Houston 7-0 in other NL action.

Gardenhire, who started the game at shortstop, moved to third for just the third time in his career when Hubie Brooks, the team's regular starter, left after the sixth inning because of an inflamed nerve in his right shoulder.

Earlier in the game, Brooks singled to extend his hitting streak to 22 games, longest in the majors this season and one shy of the team record set by Cleon Jones in 1970 and tied by Mike Vail in 1975.

But in the eighth, with the score tied 3-3, the Padres loaded the bases on a one-out walk to Graig Nettles, a single by Steve Garvey and an intentional walk to Terry Kennedy.

McReynolds then hit a hard grounder on the soggy turf that skipped off Gardenhire's glove and caromed into left field.

"I booted the ball. The wet field had nothing to do with it," Gardenhire said candidly. "The ball was hit right at me, but I was playing in no-man's land. I was out of position."

"Before McReynolds got to the plate, I was thinking situations, where to throw the ball if it was hit to me," he said. "Once it came my way, I misplayed it and let it go off my shoulder."

Said Mets Manager Dave Johnson: "It was a tough chance under tough conditions for someone playing the position for the first time."

Brooks' status remains day-to-day.

Brent Gaff, 0-1, was the loser while San Diego starter Eric Show, 6-3, got the victory, which he called "the toughest win of my life."

"I can't imagine having less stuff," said Show, who allowed three runs on seven hits in seven innings. Rich Gossage got his league-leading 11th save despite allowing Mookie Wilson's solo homer, his first, in the eighth inning.

"I, more or less, felt like a target out there," Show said. "I was missing my spots. And my ball wasn't moving very well. Could you imagine being less armed? I only knew that I'd stay out of trouble if the ball didn't leave my hand."

Kennedy, his catcher, agreed. "He couldn't've gotten hurt out there," Kennedy said.

Dodgers 6, Expos 1
Fernando Valenzuela, who struck out 15 Philadelphia batters and tossed a three-hitter in his last start, got off to a shaky start in Montreal before settling down to win. Valenzuela, 5-5, gave up five hits and walked a batter in the first two innings against the Expos, but the Los Angeles defense helped him limit Montreal to just one run.

In the first inning, first baseman Franklin Stubbs threw to the plate to start a double play, and right fielder Candy Maldonado cut down Terry Francona, trying to score on Gary Carter's single, for the final out of the inning.

In the second, Montreal scored its only run on Doug Flynn's double-play grounder.

Valenzuela finished with an eight-hitter, striking out five and walking two in completing his sixth game of the season.

Mike Scioscia put Los Angeles ahead in the third inning with a three-run homer off Steve Rogers, 2-3. Scioscia, who hit only one home run last season, belted his first of the year after singles by Ken Landreaux and Pedro Guerrero. Valenzuela's double and a single by Landreaux accounted for a run in the sixth.

Pirates 7, Astros 0
John Candelaria pitched six innings of two-hit ball before leaving with slight stiffness in his left elbow. Reliever Don Robinson allowed only one hit over the final three innings and also hit a solo home run.

Candelaria upped his record to 5-4 and Robinson got his fourth save in the combined three-hitter at the Astrodome.

The Pirates took a 4-0 lead in the third against Vern Ruhle, 0-2, on singles by Candelaria, Marvell Wynne, consecutive doubles by Johnny Ray and Bill Madlock and a single by Benny Distefano.

Olympics Bar Individual Entries

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The Summer Olympic Games are barred to all the athletes from communist countries who are trying to break the Soviet bloc boycott by competing individually, the director of the International Olympic Committee said Tuesday.

"It is impossible for the IOC to accept these entries," Monique Berlioux told reporters. "It would be a violation of Olympic rules. No athlete can compete unless he is sponsored by his National Olympic Committee."

The National Olympic Committees of the Soviet Union and at least 10 Soviet-influenced nations are boycotting the Los Angeles Games because of alleged American violations of Olympic rules and alleged "threats" to athletes from communist nations.

Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, told reporters that "between 10 and 20" athletes from countries boycotting this summer's Games have approached the organizers for permission to compete without the approval of their National Olympic Committees.

He said most of them were refugees or were simply living outside the Soviet bloc. He noted, however, that at least four athletes have written from inside their own countries to apply for individual admission.

Ueberroth refused to identify these athletes to protect them from possible reprisals, or even to indicate their sport or their nationality. He said he did not know how those who applied from within the Soviet bloc proposed getting the necessary permission from their governments to travel to Los Angeles.

Berlioux said the applications had to be turned down under Article 30 of the Olympic charter governing the admission of athletes to the Games.

The article stipulates that "only National Olympic Committees recognized by the IOC may enter competitors in the Olympic Games."

She recalled that a number of American, German and other athletes tried to break the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow games by entering individually, but were rejected for the same reason.

Meanwhile, with the deadline for Olympic entries only five days away, a top-level Olympic delegation prepared to travel to Moscow on Wednesday to present new proposals aimed at bringing the boycotting nations to the Games.

The delegation will deliver a letter to Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko containing "proposals, suggestions and comments" in a plea for a reversal of the Soviet boycott decision. International Olympic Committee director Monique Berlioux said Monday.

Berlioux, at the IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, said there was no assurance the delegation would actually meet with the Soviet president. Neither was there any indication that the Soviets were prepared to consider any new proposals.

Marat Gramov, Soviet Olympics Committee chairman, already has declared the boycott final and "irrevocable."

Ueberroth welcomed the trip to Moscow as "an act of courage," but he declined to discuss the substance of the new proposals.

Ueberroth, in Lausanne for an executive board meeting, indicated he would have been happy to accompany the group, but was not invited.

Speaking at a news conference, Berlioux said the delegation will "meet Mr. Chernenko or another senior Soviet official for a final effort to persuade the Soviet Union to reverse its decision."

She declined to discuss details of the letter, or to indicate whether it would contain any radical U.S. concessions to the Soviet stance.

The delegation will include Berlioux, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, Primo Nebiolo of Italy, president of the Association of Summer Sports Federations, and Mario Vazquez Rana of Mexico, president of the Association of National Olympic Committees.

According to one Olympic official, even if Samaranch is not received by Chernenko, he almost certainly will be received by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko whom he knows well from his term as Spanish ambassador to the Soviet Union from 1977 to 1980.

The delegation was scheduled to return to Paris Friday afternoon, where Samaranch will hold a news conference, Berlioux said.

Although the Los Angeles Games will be uppermost in his mind, she said, he also may seek assurances that the Soviet bloc will not boycott the 1988 Olympics scheduled in Seoul, South Korea.

South Korea has no relations with any member of the Soviet bloc, and each of the IOC's 10 Soviet bloc members opposed the choice of Seoul when the committee made its decision at a 1981 meeting in Baden-Baden, West Germany.

The Soviet Union announced its boycott May 8, alleging the United States violated the Olympic charter and failed to assure the security of Soviet athletes. Eleven communist allies have joined the walkout.

If a communist boycott develops at the Seoul Games, it would be the fourth successive Olympics affected by a major political boycott.

At least two dozen African countries stayed away from the 1976 Montreal Games to protest New Zealand's sports links with South Africa.

In 1980, the United States led a boycott of 62 nations to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Johnny Bumphus, the World Boxing Association's junior welterweight champion, was one of the victims of the 1980 action. He had won the Olympic Trials 139-pound title before President Jimmy Carter organized the boycott. "I feel bad for the Russians," said Bumphus. "I know how they feel. I still have flashbacks. Even now I think about Jimmy Carter."

"Because of Jimmy Carter, the Olympics will not be the same. The Russians are getting back."

Martina's Domination Changes Tennis

PARIS (AP) — When women tennis pros were battling for equal prize money a decade ago, Billy Jean King used to argue that the paying customers got more out of the prolonged exchanges in women's tennis. The slam-bang serve-and-volley style of the men was just too dull, she said.

That was before Martina Navratilova began her domination of the women's circuit with just that kind of play.

Nobody is calling Navratilova's style dull, but her crushing superiority has taken some of the tension out of the competition.

The men's field appears wide open at this year's $1.8 million French Open. But the odds are strong that Navratilova will win the tournament and wrap up a Grand Slam.

She came into this tournament with consecutive victories in the other three major tournaments that make up the Grand Slam — the Australian, Wimbledon and U.S. championships.

American John McEnroe is seeded No. 1 in the men's singles and coming off some impressive victories on clay, not usually his favorite surface. McEnroe, who also McEnroe is playing pretty well right now on clay.

Noah, who shares McEnroe's aggressive style of play, won here last year, McEnroe points out.

Top-ranked in the world, McEnroe has won 36 consecutive matches, including a 6-3, 6-2 clay court thrashing of Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl in the finals of the World Team Cup in Dusseldorf, West Germany.

The hopes of Noah, who is seeded sixth — seedings are based on Atari-ATP computer rankings — have been clouded by a nagging muscle injury which hampers his serve. His doctors say he will be on the court for his first-round match, but they're making no predictions on how long he'll be able to play.

Wilander, the No. 4 seed and Bjorn

593, Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969, and Margaret Smith Court in 1970. All won the four tournaments in the same year with only the French being played on the clay. The other three were on grass.

Since then, however, the Australian Open has moved from January to December, making it the last, instead of the first, of the Grand Slam events, and the U.S. Open has moved from grass to hard courts.

Although some contend a Grand Slam can only be achieved in the same calendar year, the International Tennis Federation recognizes anyone who wins all four titles consecutively to have accomplished the sweep and awards that player a $1 million bonus.

"I don't want to say anything about the women," Connors, the No. 3 seed, said after breezing through his first-round match Monday against countryman Eric Fromm 6-2, 6-3, 6-1, "but that's what's so good about the men right now. There's a lot of depth. There's no way you can pick a champion."

"There are the main clay court players who always have a chance — like Noah, Lendl, Arias, (Spain's Jose) Higueras and Wilander, but Borg's heir apparent, won the French Open in 1982 and appeared on his way to becoming the world's top clay court player. But he has faltered this year, losing on clay to his fellow Swede, Henrik Sundstrom, seeded ninth here.

Arias, seeded fifth, is still considered America's best clay court player, but many are watching Eduardo Oncins of Brazil 6-0, 6-1, 6-1. Later he told reporters he was suffering from a "bad headache," a cold "and probably a fever," then showed X-rays of a fractured bone on the little finger of his left hand.

Despite his ailments, he predicted that he would be among the high-ranked players when the summer tournaments roll around.

Allison's Weekend Profitable With World, Melo Yello Wins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
HARRISBURG, N.C. — Bobby Allison's weekend at the World 600 Grand National stock car race was both profitable and eventful.

Allison's victory Sunday pushed him over the top of the $5 million career earnings mark. On Saturday, he grabbed a narrow victory over Darrell Waltrip in the Mello Yellow 300 late model sportsman's race at the 1.5-mile tri-oval.

And in between the two, he wedged in enough time to move into his condominium which overlooks the first turn at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"It's my front yard," said Allison, who pocketed $88,500 for the victory in NASCAR's longest event. "It looks pretty good."

Starting from 16th position, Allison was in contention for most of the race, jockeying for position with Cale Yarborough and Dale Earnhardt. Two rain delays and two crashes did not change their positions appreciably.

With Allison showing signs of pulling ahead, blue smoke began spewing from Yarborough's orange-and-white Chevrolet as he entered turn two. Circling the track on the inside lane, yarborough drove the car down pit row, into the garage area, and out of the race.

His quest to win his first World 600 ended 16 laps from the checkered flag.

"We were lucky that we got the caution, but we were running him down anyway," Allison said. "We were hot on his tail when we got the caution light."

Allison said Yarborough seemed to be running problem-free until the engine quit.

"It blew up. That's the whole story," Yarborough said. Though he said he had not believed in a jinx before the race, "I'm beginning to wonder what you have to do to win this thing."

The setback placed Yarborough in 21st place, seven places from where he began the race.

With Yarborough gone, Allison had only Earnhardt to contend with, and he cruised to a 17-second victory.

"We even put on a good set of tires on that last pit stop trying to catch Bobby," Earnhardt said. "But we couldn't because we had no brakes and the traffic was heavy, so we couldn't really run up in there without the brakes."

Much of the sellout crowd of 149,000 was interested in seeing veteran Richard Petty capture his 200th career victory. Petty ran strong until lap 216, when he pulled off the track and into the garage with a broken valve.

"I started smelling smoke so bad, I thought it was going to blow up," Petty said. "I knew I wasn't gonna win, and I knew I wasn't gonna finish. I knew that this morning when I got up."

Two-time defending champion Neil Bonnett finished 12th, while Winston Cup point leader Waltrip finished 26th.

Ron Bouchard finished third behind Allison and Earnhardt, while pole-sitter Harry Gant, who led for one lap, finished fourth. Geoff Bodine, starting from the 13th position, closed in fifth place.

Rounding out the top 10 were Lake Speed, Buddy Baker, Jody Ridley, David Pearson and Tim Richmond.

On the next hole, Nicklaus apologized to Bean for the gallery's behavior.

"I said to Andy, 'I'm from here, you know. I don't think people are being malicious. I'm sorry. I don't know what to say.'"

Nicklaus quoted Bean as replying, "I understand totally. No problem. The people here have been great."

Still, the golf purists grumbled it was no way for what is supposed to be a high-class gallery to act.

"It's bush league," said one non-Ohio sports writer.

It brought back the memories when Nicklaus himself was the heavy in his early career duels with Arnold Palmer, then the king of the golf hill.

Error Provides Two Runs

Padres Rally By Mets

By The Associated Press
The New York Mets have tried more than 70 players at third base since Don Zimmer played the position in the team's first game in 1962. Now and then, they still have problems there.

Ron Gardenhire, making his first appearance at the hot corner this season, found Kevin McReynolds' bases-loaded grounder too hot to handle in the eighth inning Monday, resulting in two runs that carried the San Diego Padres to a 5-4 victory over the Mets.

The game, which was interrupted for more than an hour by rain, was one of several Memorial Day holiday contests in the National League affected by the weather. Cincinnati at Chicago and San Francisco at Philadelphia were rained out, while Atlanta downed St. Louis 6-2 in a game in which the start was delayed by rain. Los Angeles beat Montreal 6-1 and Pittsburgh blanked Houston 7-0 in other NL action.

Gardenhire, who started the game at shortstop, moved to third for just the third time in his career when Hubie Brooks, the team's regular starter, left after the sixth inning because of an inflamed nerve in his right shoulder.

Earlier in the game, Brooks singled to extend his hitting streak to 22 games, longest in the majors this season and one shy of the team record set by Cleon Jones in 1970 and tied by Mike Vail in 1975.

But in the eighth, with the score tied 3-3, the Padres loaded the bases on a one-out walk to Graig Nettles, a single by Steve Garvey and an intentional walk to Terry Kennedy.

McReynolds then hit a hard grounder on the soggy turf that skipped off Gardenhire's glove and caromed into left field.

"I booted the ball. The wet field had nothing to do with it," Gardenhire said candidly. "The ball was hit right at me, but I was playing in no-man's land. I was out of position."

"Before McReynolds got to the plate, I was thinking situations, where to throw the ball if it was hit to me," he said. "Once it came my way, I misplayed it and let it go off my shoulder."

Said Mets Manager Dave Johnson: "It was a tough chance under tough conditions for someone playing the position for the first time."

Brooks' status remains day-to-day.

Brent Gaff, 0-1, was the loser while San Diego starter Eric Show, 6-3, got the victory, which he called "the toughest win of my life."

"I can't imagine having less stuff," said Show, who allowed three runs on seven hits in seven innings. Rich Gossage got his league-leading 11th save despite allowing Mookie Wilson's solo homer, his first, in the eighth inning.

"I, more or less, felt like a target out there," Show said. "I was missing my spots. And my ball wasn't moving very well. Could you imagine being less armed? I only knew that I'd stay out of trouble if the ball didn't leave my hand."

Kennedy, his catcher, agreed. "He could've gotten hurt out there," Kennedy said.

Dodgers 6, Expos 1
Fernando Valenzuela, who struck out 15 Philadelphia batters and tossed a three-hitter in his last start, got off to a shaky start in Montreal before settling down to win. Valenzuela, 5-5, gave up five hits and walked a batter in the first two innings against the Expos, but the Los Angeles defense helped him limit Montreal to just one run.

In the first inning, first baseman Franklin Stubbs threw to the plate to start a double play, and right fielder Candy Maldonado cut down Terry Francona, trying to score on Gary Carter's single, for the final out of the inning.

In the second, Montreal scored its only run on Doug Flynn's double-play grounder.

Valenzuela finished with an eight-hitter, striking out five and walking two in completing his sixth game of the season.

Mike Scioscia put Los Angeles ahead in the third inning with a three-run homer off Steve Rogers, 2-3. Scioscia, who hit only one home run last season, belted his first of the year after singles by Ken Landreaux and Pedro Guerrero. Valenzuela's double and a single by Landreaux accounted for a run in the sixth.

Pirates 7, Astros 0

John Candelaria pitched six innings of two-hit ball before leaving with slight stiffness in his left elbow. Reliever Don Robinson allowed only one hit over the final three innings and also hit a solo home run.

Candelaria upped his record to 5-4 and Robinson got his fourth save in the combined three-hitter at the Astrodome.

The Pirates took a 4-0 lead in the third against Vern Ruhle, 0-2, on singles by Candelaria, Marvell Wynne, consecutive doubles by Johnny Ray and Bill Madlock and a single by Benny Distefano.

Olympics Bar Individual Entries

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The Summer Olympic Games are barred to all the athletes from communist countries who are trying to break the Soviet bloc boycott by competing individually, the director of the International Olympic Committee said Tuesday.

"It is impossible for the IOC to accept these entries," Monique Berlioux told reporters. "It would be a violation of Olympic rules. No athlete can compete unless he is sponsored by his National Olympic Committee."

The National Olympic Committees of the Soviet Union and at least 10 Soviet-influenced nations are boycotting the Los Angeles Games because of alleged American violations of Olympic rules and alleged "threats" to athletes from communist nations.

Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, told reporters that "between 10 and 20" athletes from countries boycotting this summer's Games have approached the organizers for permission to compete without the approval of their National Olympic Committees.

He said most of them were refugees or were simply living outside the Soviet bloc. He noted, however, that at least four athletes have written from inside their own countries to apply for individual admission.

Ueberroth refused to identify these athletes to protect them from possible reprisals, or even to indicate their sport or their nationality. He said he did not know how those who applied from within the Soviet bloc proposed getting the necessary permission from their governments to travel to Los Angeles.

Berlioux said the applications had to be turned down under Article 30 of the Olympic charter governing the admission of athletes to the Games.

The article stipulates that "only National Olympic Committees recognized by the IOC may enter competitors in the Olympic Games."

She recalled that a number of American, German and other athletes tried to break the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow games by entering individually, but were rejected for the same reason.

Meanwhile, with the deadline for Olympic entries only five days away, a top-level Olympic delegation prepared to travel to Moscow on Wednesday to present new proposals aimed at bringing the boycotting nations to the Games.

The delegation will deliver a letter to Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko containing "proposals, suggestions and comments" in a plea for a reversal of the Soviet boycott decision. International Olympic Committee director Monique Berlioux said Monday.

Berlioux, at the IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, said there was no assurance the delegation would actually meet with the Soviet president. Neither was there any indication that the Soviets were prepared to consider any new proposals.

Marat Gramov, Soviet Olympics Committee chairman, already has declared the boycott final and "irrevocable."

Ueberroth welcomed the trip to Moscow as "an act of courage," but he declined to discuss the substance of the new proposals.

Ueberroth, in Lausanne for an executive board meeting, indicated he would have been happy to accompany the group, but was not invited.

Speaking at a news conference, Berlioux said the delegation will "meet Mr. Chernenko or another senior Soviet official for a final effort to persuade the Soviet Union to reverse its decision."

She declined to discuss details of the letter, or to indicate whether it would contain any radical U.S. concessions to the Soviet stance.

The delegation will include Berlioux, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain, Primo Nebiolo of Italy, president of the Association of Summer Sports Federations, and Mario Vazquez Rana of Mexico, president of the Association of National Olympic Committees.

According to one Olympic official, even if Samaranch is not received by Chernenko, he almost certainly will be received by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko whom he knows well from his term as Spanish ambassador to the Soviet Union from 1977 to 1980.

The delegation was scheduled to return to Paris Friday afternoon, where Samaranch will hold a news conference, Berlioux said.

Although the Los Angeles Games will be uppermost in his mind, she said, he also may seek assurances that the Soviet bloc will not boycott the 1988 Olympics scheduled in Seoul, South Korea.

South Korea has no relations with any member of the Soviet bloc, and each of the IOC's 10 Soviet bloc members opposed the choice of Seoul when the committee made its decision at a 1981 meeting in Baden-Baden, West Germany.

The Soviet Union announced its boycott May 8, alleging the United States violated the Olympic charter and failed to assure the security of Soviet athletes. Eleven communist allies have joined the walkout.

If a communist boycott develops at the Seoul Games, it would be the fourth successive Olympics affected by a major political boycott.

At least two dozen African countries stayed away from the 1976 Montreal Games to protest New Zealand's sports links with South Africa.

In 1980, the United States led a boycott of 62 nations to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Johnny Bumphus, the World Boxing Association's junior welterweight champion, was one of the victims of the 1980 action. He had won the Olympic Trials 139-pound title before President Jimmy Carter organized the boycott.

"I feel bad for the Russians," said Bumphus. "I know how they feel. I still have flashbacks. Even now I think about Jimmy Carter."

"Because of Jimmy Carter, the Olympics will not be the same. The Russians are getting back."

Martina's Domination Changes Tennis

PARIS (AP) — When women tennis pros were battling for equal prize money a decade ago, Billy Jean King used to argue that the paying customers got more out of the prolonged exchanges in women's tennis. The slam-bang serve-and-volley style of the men was just too dull, she said.

That was before Martina Navratilova began her domination of the women's circuit with just that kind of play.

Nobody is calling Navratilova's style dull, but her crushing superiority has taken some of the tension out of the competition.

The men's field appears wide open at this year's $1.8 million French Open. But the odds are strong that Navratilova will win the tournament and wrap up a Grand Slam.

She came into this tournament with consecutive victories in the other three major tournaments that make up the Grand Slam — the Australian, Wimbledon and U.S. championships.

American John McEnroe is seeded No. 1 in the men's singles and coming off some impressive victories on clay, not usually his favorite surface. McEnroe, who also McEnroe is playing pretty well right now on clay.

Noah, who shares McEnroe's aggressive style of play, won here last year, McEnroe points out.

Top-ranked in the world, McEnroe has won 36 consecutive matches, including a 6-3, 6-2 clay court thrashing of Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl in the finals of the World Team Cup in Dusseldorf, West Germany.

The hopes of Noah, who is seeded sixth — seedings are based on Atari-ATP computer rankings — have been clouded by a nagging muscle injury which hampers his serve. His doctors say he will be on the court for his first-round match, but they're making no predictions on how long he'll be able to play.

Wilander, the No. 4 seed and Bjorn

Borg's heir apparent, won the French Open in 1982 and appeared on his way to becoming the world's top clay court player. But he has faltered this year, losing on clay to his fellow Swede, Henrik Sundstrom, seeded ninth here.

Arias, seeded fifth, is still considered America's best clay court player, but many are watching Eduardo Oncins of Brazil 6-0, 6-1, 6-1. Later he told reporters he was suffering from a "bad headache," a cold "and probably a fever," then showed X-rays of a fractured bone on the little finger of his left hand.

Despite his ailments, he predicted that he would be among the high-ranked players when the summer tournaments roll around.

Allison's Weekend Profitable With World, Mello Yello Wins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

HARRISBURG, N.C. — Bobby Allison's weekend at the World 600 Grand National stock car race was both profitable and eventful.

Allison's victory Sunday pushed him over the top of the $5 million career earnings mark. On Saturday, he grabbed a narrow victory over Darrell Waltrip in the Mello Yellow 300 late model sportsman's race on the 1.5-mile tri-oval.

And in between the two, he wedged in enough time to move into his condominium which overlooks the first turn at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"It's my front yard," said Allison, who pocketed $88,500 for the victory in NASCAR's longest event. "It looks pretty good."

Starting from 16th position, Allison was in contention for most of the race, jockeying for position with Cale Yarborough and Dale Earnhardt. Two rain delays and two crashes did not change their positions appreciably.

With Allison showing signs of pulling ahead, blue smoke began spewing from Yarborough's orange-and-white Chevrolet as he entered turn two. Circling the track on the inside lane, yarborough drove the car down pit row, into the garage area, and out of the race.

His quest to win his first World 600 ended 16 laps from the checkered flag.

"We were lucky that we got the caution, but we were running him down anyway," Allison said. "We were hot on his tail when we got the caution light."

Allison said Yarborough seemed to be running problem-free until the engine quit.

"It blew up. That's the whole story," Yarborough said. Though he said he had not believed in a jinx before the race, "I'm beginning to wonder what you have to do to win this thing."

The setback placed Yarborough in 21st place, seven places from where he began the race.

With Yarborough gone, Allison had only Earnhardt to contend with, and he cruised to a 17-second victory.

"We even put on a good set of tires on that last pit stop trying to catch Bobby," Earnhardt said. "But we couldn't because we had no brakes and the traffic was heavy, so we couldn't really run up in there without the brakes."

Much of the sellout crowd of 149,000 was interested in seeing veteran Richard Petty capture his 200th career victory. Petty ran strong until lap 216, when he pulled off the track and into the garage with a broken valve.

"I started smelling smoke so bad, I thought it was going to blow up," Petty said. "I knew I wasn't gonna win, and I knew I wasn't gonna finish. I knew that this morning when I got up."

Two-time defending champion Neil Bonnett finished 12th, while Winston Cup point leader Waltrip finished 26th.

Ron Bouchard finished third behind Allison and Earnhardt, while pole-sitter Harry Gant, who led for one lap, finished fourth. Geoff Bodine, starting from the 13th position, closed in fifth place.

Rounding out the top 10 were Lake Speed, Buddy Baker, Jody Ridley, David Pearson and Tim Richmond.

On the next hole, Nicklaus apologized to Bean for the gallery's behavior.

"I said to Andy, 'I'm from here, you know. I don't think people are being malicious.' I'm sorry. I don't know what to say..."

Nicklaus quoted Bean as replying, "I understand totally. No problem. The people here have been great."

Still, the golf purists grumbled it was no way for what is supposed to be a high-class gallery to act.

"It's bush league," said one non-Ohio sports writer.

It brought back the memories when Nicklaus himself was the heavy in his early career duels with Arnold Palmer, then the king of the golf hill.

New Poll Gives Nod To Reagan In N.C.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
President Reagan could defeat either of the Democratic challengers, according to a Gallup Poll commissioned by several members of the state media.

The poll indicated that if the presidential election had been held in mid-May, Reagan would have beaten Walter Mondale 59 percent to 38, while he would have defeated Gary Hart 56-40. Since the poll's margin of error is 4 percentage points, pollsters said the differences in supporter between Mondal and Hart were not significant.

The telephone poll of 1,000 registered voters across the state was conducted May 16-20. Since a Gallup poll was taken last fall, Reagan has gained 7 points in his overall standing among North Carolina voters.

In another poll released Monday, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten is favored by 48.5 percent while 36.5 preferred Eddie Knox.

The poll, sponsored by WTVD of Durham and WBTV of Charlotte, consisted of phone surveys with 499 registered Democrats who said they were likely to vote in the June 5 runoff.

The margin of error was 4.5 percent.

Both Knox and Edmisten downplayed results of two polls released over the weekend which also showed the attorney general ahead of the former Charlotte mayor. One was a Gallup Poll commissioned by several North Carolina newspapers and the other was done for The Charlotte Observer.

N.C. Campaign '84

Knox

Edmisten

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox says he will cancel his appointments, allow opponent Rufus Edmisten to choose the site, and even pay the expenses for a public forum before the June 5 Democratic runoff.

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten took his campaign back to eastern North Carolina, which has been a stronghold for him in the past, and asked supporters to continue to campaign aggressively for another week.

The only scheduled debate so far is set for June 1 on public television, but Knox said Monday that, "We still have reason to believe Mr. Edmisten will never appear at that debate."

He asked each of the 1,000 people at the National Guard Armory in Fayetteville to get 10 new supporters each day until the June 5 runoff with Democratic opponent Eddie Knox. Edmisten said his campaign has a tested product to offer.

Knox said Edmisten was refusing to allow Knox to ask direct questions at the debate and was insisting on a moderator.

"Government is not a play toy," he said. "It is very serious business because it controls the lives, liberty and property of people. You have a product that has been tested, tested by the people of this state on three occasions."

"The public will be denied something if we have this pansy affair and don't address the issues," Knox said. But he said he would appear with Edmisten "any way we can."

Edmisten referred to his 10 years as attorney general and his first-place finish in the May 8 primary. Eastern North Carolina was one place where Edmisten made a strong showing.

At a news conference Monday at his Mecklenburg County headquarters, Knox said he was "requesting of Mr. Edmisten and demanding on behalf of the public joint appearances through forums, debates or news conferences. I will pay for broadcast time, rental of the facility or any other expenses."

He stopped for rallies in Lumberton, Fayetteville and Whiteville as he began a week where he will spend more time on the telephone gearing up a get-out-the-vote network. That was the focus of a private meeting Monday with Fayetteville supporters.

Knox said Edmisten could choose the location for the debate and that he would agree to guidelines by "any neutral organization." He said he would cancel his schedule to accommodate Edmisten and would appear before any reporters.

"This could be a very close election," Edmisten told reporters before renewing his attack on Knox's campaign tactics.

Knox denied that his challenge was the mark of a second-runner. He said he had called for a debate when he was the frontrunner in the polls.

"A desperation campaign is sometimes very dangerous because people don't know what's happening and could be fooled into not voting for me."

"I'm still asking for one even though I admit I'm behind in the polls," Knox said.

Edmisten repeated that he and Knox have different ways of campaigning and said if it took a negative campaign to win, he was not willing to pay that price.

The candidates have volleyed charges of unnecessary campaign tactics, with Edmisten complaining that Knox has been using "gutter, alley-cat tactics."

Knox, at a Charlotte rally Monday, repeated his call for a public forum with Edmisten, saying the attorney general was trying to duck debates.

"We have continued to point out his record to the public," Knox said. "If anything I have said is untrue and they can demonstrate that to me, I will publicly apologize."

Knox asked Edmisten to choose a location at Knox's expense for a debate and said he doubted Edmisten would show up for a June 1 forum scheduled to be aired on public television.

State, Nation Experiencing Reported Surplus Of Lawyers

GREENSBORO (AP) — Richard Gabriel set himself up in a stark, one-room office and scrambled to pay a part-time secretary, his $80 monthly rent and his telephone bill as a freshly graduated attorney.

It was six years before the 1975 law school graduate was finally able to give up his part-time job — first as a clerk in his father's grocery store, then as a visiting lecturer teaching night classes at Guilford College.

"I was known to have dinner with my parents on a rather frequent basis during that time," he said. "My whole office was leveraged on credit. I climbed out on the proverbial limb where the twigs are and just hoped the wind didn't blow too hard."

His persistence paid off. He is now managing partner in a five-lawyer office in more comfortable quarters than the ones he started with.

Gabriel's story is repeated countless times each year across North Carolina and the nation as thousands of graduates emerge from law schools and enter a profession that many say is already crowded.

And there are those in the law community who are alarmed by what they perceive as a link between the burgeoning lawyer population and the litigation explosion.

Nationally, there are 650,000 licensed lawyers — one for every 363 residents, the American Bar Foundation says. If growth continues at the present rate, there will be 1 million lawyers in the nation by the mid-1990s.

In North Carolina, there are 10,560 active lawyers in the state — one for every 560 residents. That ratio is encouraging compared with the national figures, observers say, and it has made the state attractive to law school graduates from elsewhere.

Only about 8,000 lawyers — one for every 740 people — are engaged in private practice in North Carolina, according to Bobby James, executive director of the N.C. State Bar.

Each year, the state has a net increase of about 400 lawyers, but James said population growth keeps up with that increase.

Some observers point out also that there are pockets in rural areas of the state where there are relatively few lawyers, while the urban areas are bulging with them.

"I think there is a problem with distribution," said Leary Davis, dean of the Campbell University law school in Buies Creek. "Five counties have 50 percent of the lawyers."

Those counties are Wake, Mecklenburg, Guilford, Forsyth and Buncombe.

Official Says Mental Health Facts Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — Education is the only way to dispel ignorance about mental health problems, which affect nearly every family in the country, according to a leader of the N.C. Mental Health Association.

shape," Mrs. Valand said. "Most teams have sports psychologists today, and they feel it is important to have players' mental health up."

Mrs. Valand said North Carolina's outpatient commitment law, and a similar law for paroled prisoners, allows some patients to live in the community while their treatment is monitored.

"Prisoners who have a chronic history of an identifiable illness, such as schizophrenia, can go out on parole, but a condition is that they continue treatment," said Mrs. Valand, who serves on the state Parole Commission.

"For years, we sent them away, locked them up, because we didn't understand them," said Wymene Valand, a board member of the state and national mental health associations.

But today, Mrs. Valand said one out of every five people need mental treatment or counseling during their lives.

Many people are able to return to the outside world following treatment with psychotropic drugs or other forms of rehabilitation, she said.

"They no longer need to be hospitalized and can continue their medication while leading lives as part of the community," she said. "It's a constant battle, but I feel education is the only way to erase the stigma of mental illness."

The state association is hosting a banquet tonight in Raleigh which will feature a discussion of mental health in sports.

Among the speakers will be Dean Smith, head basketball coach at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and Debbie Leonard, assistant women's basketball coach at N.C. State University.

"You can't be in top physical shape without being in top mental

Years Later, Hero Is Found

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro businessman Allan Matthews has a special place in his heart for a special war hero — a Greensboro air ace who helped him escape certain death in World War II.

Matthews finds himself wishing there were some way he could thank the city's most famous war hero.

"I think the people of Greensboro should be aware of the things George Preddy did so they will appreciate him more," he says.

Matthews had not known why a pack of German fighters suddenly broke off an attack on his bomber 40 years ago until he read "Wings God Gave My Soul," a book about the late George Preddy, the ace pilot from Greensboro who shot down at least 26 German planes during World War II.

Matthews' daughter, Betty Stratford, works with the George Preddy Tar Heel Junior Historian club at the Greensboro Historical Museum. The club's namesake was killed on Christmas Day in 1944 when Allied anti-aircraft fire mistakenly downed his fighter plane, the "Cripes A' Mighty."

Ms. Stratford gave her father the Preddy book, knowing he would enjoy reading about the pilot's exploits. Matthews himself won two Distinguished Flying Crosses as a pilot flying B-24 bombers in Europe.

Matthews began reading about Preddy's war years in Australia and Europe, where he quickly became famous as a daring dogfighter. Preddy once blasted six German fighters out of the sky in less than five minutes.

Midway into the book, Matthews read of an incident on Dec. 22, 1943, near Osnabruck, Germany. Preddy, then 24, was flying at 26,000 feet when he came upon a crippled B-24 bomber being attacked by six German Messerschmitts.

Though greatly outnumbered, Preddy aimed his plane at the Nazi pack and gave chase. The attackers fled. Preddy doubled back and found another Messerschmitt firing at the bomber. He chased the enemy plane and shot it down.

Matthews read with growing excitement.

"I just couldn't believe it," he says. "I went back and read the account again to make sure."

On that same day in 1943, Matthews, then about 21, was the co-pilot of a B-24 in the same place in northwest Germany. The plane was moving slowly because of engine problems. Two other troubled B-24s were flying nearby. A pack of Messerschmitts appeared and destroyed the other two bombers.

A few minutes later, a swarm of Messerschmitts came out of the clouds and opened fire on Matthews' plane.

"They set our engines on fire," he said. "They killed our navigator."

He remembers the cockpit filling with smoke, the oxygen supply system failing, the oil and gas gauges plunging to zero. Several crewmen were wounded.

Matthews was sure the end was near.

But all at once the German planes quit firing and roared away.

"They just left us and we didn't know why," Matthews says.

He knows why now: George Preddy.

Matthews says he didn't see an American plane come to the rescue. "We were too busy fighting the fire and caring for the wounded," he says.

The book's account of the enemy planes — based on Preddy's mission report — closely matches the written report Matthews completed the day after the incident.

"No one else was straggling in the skies that day except our plane," Matthews says. "It just couldn't have been anyone else."

Matthews' plane, coughing and sputtering, managed to make it the 300 miles back to England. Along the way the crew tossed out guns, radios, flak jackets, even the body of the navigator, to lighten the load.

Matthews won the first of his Distinguished Flying Crosses for his part in getting the plane and most of the crew home.

Even though the crew was never told that Preddy was their rescuer, others apparently realized it. The 8th Air Force awarded Preddy the Silver Star for the mission.

"Though out-numbered six to one, he unhesitatingly led in an attack on the enemy and pressed it home with such viciousness that the enemy planes were scattered and forced to cease their attacks on the bomber thus allowing it to escape," the award citation said.

Tar Heels Honor Their War Dead, Others Try Beaches

By The Associated Press

While the Memorial Day holiday traditionally sends thousands of North Carolinians to the beach, others paused to honor those killed in military service.

In Asheville, three chapters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Monday held joint services honoring Americans who died in conflicts from the Spanish-American War to Grenada. An American Legion post held a flag raising ceremony Monday at the Asheville Veterans Administration Medical Center.

A second ceremony is scheduled for Wednesday, the traditional Memorial Day.

A memorial service also will be conducted Wednesday by the Asheville and Black Mountain chapters of the American War Mothers. Those to be honored include servicemen who died in Beirut and Grenada.

The West Asheville American Legion Auxiliary 335 held a memorial service at Green Hills Cemetery Sunday. Flags and flowers were placed at the grave of each veteran.

American Legion Post No. 1 in Raleigh sponsored the annual Memorial Day service at Raleigh National Cemetery Sunday.

About 100 veterans, friends and family members huddled under trees and umbrellas in the rain to remember those who had died. Representatives of Wake County American Legion posts placed about 20 wreaths on servicemen's graves.

The Mecklenburg County Veterans Council sponsored a memorial service Sunday at Evergreen Cemetery with traditional flags, the playing of Taps and lowering the flag to half-staff.

Kenneth McDonald, director of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Winston-Salem, told the 75 people at the ceremony that efforts should be increased to treat surviving veterans and families of dead veterans with fairness and honor.

"It is up to us to honor our dead by ensuring the welfare of their families and living comrades," McDonald said. McDonald said the service was a tribute to the one million people who have died on battlefields from the Revolutionary War to Vietnam, as well as those who died in Lebanon and Grenada.

Meanwhile, Ian A. Millar of Kernersville said over the weekend Memorial Day observances neglect veterans of the merchant marine, whom he calls "the forgotten heroes of World War II."

Millar, whose father was a career merchant seaman, has founded the "Sons and Daughters of U.S. Merchant Marine Veterans of World War II," a group with about 200 members nationwide.

Millar said the merchant marine, as an organized group, suffered the highest casualty rate of any branch of the armed forces, except for the Marines.

"The merchant marine was a 100 percent volunteer civilian group," Millar said. "Because they were not a military branch of the armed forces, they have not ever been accorded the recognition they deserve for their service and sacrifice during the war."

The state Highway Patrol reported at least seven people lost their lives in weekend traffic accidents across the state, and at least one swimmer was reported drowned along the coast.

On the Outer Banks, tourists poured in to kick off what local residents hope will be a busy summer celebrating the 400th anniversary of the English colonization of America.

"If the holiday weekend is any indication, we will have a good year," said John Bone of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce in Kill Devil Hills.

'Fun Zone' Flat At Start

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ever been to a party that starts with too much drinking and childish behavior, then, as the night wears on, degenerates into an overdose of too much drinking and obnoxious behavior?

"Welcome to the Fun Zone." That's the name of NBC's late-night trial balloon that will occupy the "Saturday Night Live" timeslot this weekend. There's been talk at NBC that this experimental show might replace "SNL" someday.

While "SNL" aims for intelligent parody, this collection of gags, comedy acts, music, film shorts and animation has its sights a bit lower, both in I.Q. and age. Maybe it should be called "SNL in the Sandbox."

Somebody at NBC probably asked for something that combines "Laugh-In" and MTV, and they came up with McTV, another testament to the growing belief that viewers' attention spans and tastes have declined.

The idea is to throw everything at the wall, and if anything sticks, fine. But, if not, no matter, there's always something else visual, wacky or musical to try. ... Next.

There's no question "Fun Zone" is trying to approximate a party atmosphere. A particularly young-looking audience is sitting on the studio floor, watching the program and its assortment of loud music, loud colors and loud lights.

The comedy ranges from bizarre to freaky, not unlike something you'd see in a carnival side show. A greasy lounge singer-comedian with the world's largest pompadour is awful, the manic Howie Mandel ("St. Elsewhere") is weird (but not funny), and some guy with wax on his face keeps demanding nude women.

Some may think this funny. The 2-year-old of the house walked in during "The Fun Zone" screening and laughed at the waxy man's face.

Even the normally zany John Candy fails here in a pointless, macabre video about a haunted golf course.

One act, Marc Weiner and the Weinerettes, is hysterically outlandish, though. Weiner is an extremely creative puppeteer, who manages to give his R-rated puppets life-like movements. One sadistic puppet kills a roach in slow motion and combines with another puppet in a chair for an imitation of "Ironside," the wheelchair-bound police chief.

Film clips are an integral part of "Fun Zone," and Weiner has the best one, when his sleazy little charges do sensational imitations of Boy George and Mick Jagger. Another short, The Wind-up Toy Olympics — featuring those klutzy walking gears and a couple of Mr. Potato Heads as announcers — was a good idea run amok.

Music is very important to "The Fun Zone," and the only number worthwhile was Weird Al Yankovic's "I Lost at Jeopardy," a spoof of TV game shows and the humiliation people go through to win prizes. Songs from Carlos Santana, Booker T. and the Fabulous Thunderbirds won't be appreciated by most demographic groups.

The show's opening montage takes a mad historical dash through TV's entertainment annals. It starts with the come-on line from "Howdy Doody," "Hey kids, what time is it?" — but this time the audio track is accelerated to make the announcer sound like Alvin and the Chipmunks.

Then, faster than a speeding bullet, we see "Ozzie and Harriet," "Star Trek" and other TV snippets from the 1950s and '60s. The sensation is one of a video pinball machine, with the viewer bouncing from bumper to bumper.

Dr. Demento, a high-pitched radio DJ, is the announcer, and there are three hosts, who don't have much to do or say. They're probably around in case your mother walks in, so you can say, "They look respectable." The young, clean-cut trio resembles the old "Mod Squad," with a white (Charles Zucker), a black (Rusty Cundieff) and a blonde in a miniskirt (Tawny Moyer).

One comedy segment features The Couch Potatoes, who spend their days stuffing their faces with food and TV. "There's no such thing as bad television," says one Couchie. Wanna bet?

Celebrity Softball

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When country singer Barbara Mandrell gets some friends together for a softball game, she attracts some show business heavy-hitters — including actress Brooke Shields, singer Brenda Lee and country music legend Roy Acuff.

Also on the all-star squad Monday night at the Barbara Mandrell Celebrity Softball Classic — a fund-raiser for the Vanderbilt Children's Hospital — were Patrick Duffy of TV's "Dallas," David Hasselhoff of "Knight Rider," the Oak Ridge Boys and Miss Mandrell's two sisters, Erlene and Louise.

Sports celebrities on the roster included Ray Guy of the Los Angeles Raiders, Danny White of the Dallas Cowboys and Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears.

"I've always wanted to come to Nashville," Miss Shields said. "I think there's a good feeling here with the people. I'm especially happy to come here for this cause, even though I'm not such a good softball player."

"We hope it's a big night for the children's hospital because that's what it's all about," Miss Mandrell said.

'Marmaduke' Set For Girlfriend

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — "Marmaduke," the devilish comic strip canine who would be more than 200 years old in dog years, will soon become enchanted with a hard-to-get heart throb, creator Brad Anderson says.

"He is always getting into trouble," said Anderson, who has been drawing Marmaduke for nearly 30 years. "And he has lots of girlfriends."

But Marmaduke's footloose days may soon be over, however. Anderson is working on future strips that include a new, blond Afghan who is "very aloof" to Marmaduke's affections.

THE HARD WAY — Brooke Shields' form may not be the best, but she gets the job done as she catches the ball during warmups prior to the start of the Barbara Mandrell Celebrity Softball Classic in Nashville, Tenn., Monday night. ## County Stars Give Items To Auction

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tammy Wynette, Waylon Jennings and Ronnie Milsap are among the country music stars who have donated dozens of items to be auctioned off at a fund-raiser for a YMCA-sponsored charity.

The items go on the auction block Monday at the first annual Brenda Lee Celebrity Auction, with proceeds going to displaced homemakers seeking training to enter the job market.

One of the hottest items is expected to be a $4,000 gown worn by Miss Wynette when she performed at the White House in 1982.

"It has 500 yards of material — layers and layers," said Miss Wynette, known for her 1969 hit "Stand By Your Man." "It's like all the dresses in 'Gone With the Wind,'" she added.

Also up for auction will be a hand-crocheted silk stage outfit, covered with more than 1,000 diamond-faceted rose-colored rhinestones, worn by Milsap the night he was voted entertainer of the year by the Country Music Association in 1977.

Among the other items are a pair of boots from Jennings, a signed shirt from Gregg Allman and an autographed baseball cap from Conway Twitty.

Governor's TV Remarks Observed

NEW YORK (AP) — State Republican Party Chairman George Clark says remarks made by Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo after Cuomo's father-in-law, was mugged show that the governor is a "dogooder" who "would have been better off as a priest."

Following the mugging and beating last week of 78-year-old Charles Raffa, Cuomo said, "I was angry, but anger is a sin."

Smokey To Give Award To Author

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Smokey the Bear, who has helped educate millions of Americans about forest fire prevention, is bringing the U.S. Forest Service's highest honor to Harry Rossell, the man whose pen gave him life.

Rossell, who drew Smokey for the Forest Service for 35 years, will receive a 9-inch silver Smokey Award on Thursday at ceremonies at the service's Atlanta office marking his career in fire prevention.
