Hart TV Ads Recall Mondale's Praise

By The Associated Press
 Gary Hart is invoking Walter Mondale's old praise of him as a "brilliant" senator in new television commercials as all three Democratic presidential hopefuls turn their sights to California and its huge delegate prize.

With the presidential primary season down to its final week, Walter F. Mondale is back in San Francisco after ending his New Jersey campaign, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson was heading for California after stops in New Mexico today.

President Reagan was on a political trip too, meeting with Republican supporters in Colorado late Tuesday after visiting U.S. athletes training for the Olympics. Because of the political meeting, spokesman Larry Speakes said, the president's trip was paid for by the Reagan-Bush campaign, not taxpayers.

Hart, who flies to California today from New Jersey, starts airing new television advertisements this evening — different ads by different producers in the two states.

Hart's California commercials quote a Nov. 9, 1979 speech by then-Vice President Mondale endorsing the Colorado senator's reelection.

"Gary Hart is one of the most decent and compassionate public servants I have ever known in my life. He is brilliant... If we lost Gary Hart, it could change the course of this entire nation," an announcer quoting Mondale says in the 30-second commercial.

The ads show the "hypocrisy" of Mondale's recent attacks on Hart, says Hart consultant Bill Zimmerman, who produced the commercial.

Zimmerman said Hart is budgeted to spend $335,000 on television advertising. In New Jersey, Hart campaign officials say they will spend another $300,000 or more airing different ads.

Five states hold primaries next Tuesday with 486 delegates at stake. The bulk of them are 306 in California, the biggest delegate state of all, and in New Jersey with 107. Also holding primaries are New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia.

"What's at stake in California is the nomination," said Zimmerman.

Mondale picked up more delegates Tuesday when eight uncommitted delegates in Mississippi and two in Alaska — including Gov. Bill Sheffield — said they were backing the former vice president.

Mondale has 1,681.05 delegates, fewer than 300 away from the 1,967 needed to secure the nomination. Hart has 991.75 delegates, and Jackson 311.2.

In San Francisco on Tuesday, Mondale spoke briefly to about 500 supporters at an after-work, "Puttin' on the Ritz for Fritz" rally in a warehouse on the bay.

Mondale said he had urged President Reagan to withhold anti-aircraft missiles sent to Saudi Arabia and to "keep these weapons in the United States where they belong."

In New Jersey earlier, Mondale met factory workers at an RCA plant and spoke with former Johns Manville Corp. workers suffering from exposure to asbestos.

Mondale criticized Hart for sponsoring legislation that would have relieved Manville of much of the financial responsibility for claims by workers suffering from asbestos exposure.

A press aide to Hart, Paula Weiss, said Mondale was "mischaracterizing Senator Hart's record." She said he proposed legislation that would seek immediate relief for victims of asbestosis by creating a pool of money from insurance companies, Johns Manville and the federal government.

Jackson, returning to the country after a one-day visit to Mexico, campaigned in Albuquerque and Santa Fe, New Mexico late Tuesday, where he defended undocumented workers and attacked proposed immigration reforms.

"We should never use the words 'illegal alien.' Heroin is illegal and E.T. is an alien. Hispanics are people. They are God's children," Jackson said.

Before leaving Mexico City, Jackson said he might go to Cuba later as part of his effort "to stop the war" in Central America.

Jackson said he will meet soon with the leaders of the other three so-called Contadora nations to talk about their plans for peace, and he strongly rejected the suggestion that some have called his mission a failure.

However, a Mexican Foreign Ministry spokesman, who declined to be identified, said Mexican officials had serious reservations about Jackson's trip and were concerned the Mexican government might appear to be meddling in U.S. elections. The official also said no such Contadora meeting was being set up for the black civil rights leader.

Hart was talking about the economy while in New Jersey, blasting President Reagan's "trickle-down" philosophy and the "bailout economy" he said Mondale favors.

"We can't afford to go back to the failed policies of the past," Hart told the Meadowlands Chamber of Commerce. "Change has its risks but inertia guarantees we will fail this country's economic future."

Hart did not mention his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination by name. But his reference was unmistakable when he declared, "Bailouts and protectionism are not cures to our long term economic ills."

Leftists Hit News Bureaus

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Leftist guerrillas raided offices of The Associated Press and Agence France-Presse news agencies and ordered reporters at gunpoint to transmit a message condemning Chile's military government.

Both armed groups entered the agency offices in downtown Santiago on Tuesday evening and left after cutting telephone lines, shutting employees in bathrooms and leaving packages said to be bombs. Neither package contained explosives.

The raiders said they belonged to the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, a 6-month-old guerrilla movement named for a Chilean independence fighter. It has claimed responsibility for bombing scores of government targets and businesses.

Two men and a woman entered the AP bureau at 7:10 p.m. EDT and handed their written message to reporter Eva Vergara. One man put the muzzle of an automatic pistol against her neck and said, "Let's transmit this."

After she sent it by telex to the AP's New York headquarters, the gunman told her, "If this story doesn't come out tomorrow we'll kill you." A news story based on the incident and the communique was sent to Latin America.

The statement called for a return to democracy as the only way to end what it said was an "economic catastrophe" in Chile. It said President Augusto Pinochet's appointment of new economic ministers last month was "a farce... a vain attempt to gain time and to appease growing popular unrest."

Miss Vergara, AP photographer Angel Gonzalez and office employee Miguel Pizarro were held at gunpoint for 15 minutes before the intruders left. The three, who were unmasked, also wielded a sub-machine gun and a grenade.

Humberto Zumarán, the French news agency's bureau chief, said three armed men made him file the same message at the same hour to his Paris headquarters after knocking another agency reporter to the floor.

AFP, seven blocks from the AP office, is located less than a block from the presidential palace and the Defense Ministry headquarters.

Gunmen from the same guerrilla group raided the Santiago bureau of the Italian news agency ANSA on May 3 and forced a newsman to transmit a different statement.

Anglican Panel Broadens Rules For Marriage By Step-Relations

LONDON (AP) — People related by marriage but not by blood should be allowed to marry, a panel of the Anglican Church of England recommended today after reviewing taboos dating back to the 16th century.

But the group of five women and four men split on the issue, with one woman and two men saying step-relationships should never be allowed to marry step-children they had raised from childhood.

The minority also disapproved of marriage between a man and his daughter-in-law or a woman and her son-in-law. Those panelists felt that such in-law marriages would lead to sexual rivalry between a parent and the offspring who had been divorced.

The panel's majority felt marriages between in-laws would be rare and said most people "might still prefer to avoid them" in much the same way as many feel uneasy about lawful marriage between cousins.

Baroness Nancy Seear, a Liberal Party politician, headed the panel, which included theologians, a former judge, a sociologist, a microbiologist, a psychologist, an attorney and a bishop's wife. Among those consulted by the panel were two newspaper columnists who answer readers' questions about sex.

Marriages of affinity — as non-blood marriages are called — are forbidden in the Old Testament Book of Leviticus.

In the 1500s, during the formal start of the England's official church, a table was drafted for the Anglicans' Book of Common Prayer listing 30 relatives a man could not marry and similar forbidden marriages for a woman. The bans were written into English law with slight modifications over the centuries.

England's 1949 Marriage Act lists 27 relatives who cannot be married, beginning with parents and ranging through the grandparents of a spouse to adopted children.

Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, set up the panel in May 1982 to "thoroughly study" the matter, after the House of Lords voted down four bills since 1979.

Both the majority and minority reports from the panel recommended allowing marriage between a man and his grandmother-in-law or a woman and her grandfather-in-law.

The majority said people should be able to marry other in-laws, including father-in-law or mother-in-law.

Under the law, a man and woman who are related as step-parent and step-child are prevented from marrying.

In a foreword to his panel's report, Runcie, spiritual leader of England's state church, said the panelists researched a "difficult subject, which touches deep instincts in people."

The panel's attorney, Lionel Lennox, said the Church of England's 43 bishops would debate the report soon.

Color, Gadgets And Gimmicks Spark Annual Housewares Show

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL
CHICAGO (UPI) — There's money jingling in American pockets again and the housewares industry is out to get it with such items as 16-foot feather dusters, a radio about the size of a hearing aid and $200-$495 espresso coffee makers.

Color, color and more color is another sign of renewed confidence in the economy. Retailers have to feel confident of sales before ordering the same item in many colors instead of basic white or the long-popular wood tones.

Clocks, dinnerware, pots and pans, trays, towels, patio chairs and wastebaskets were among thousands of items in every bright or pastel color imaginable at the 80th semi-annual International Housewares Exposition at McCormick Place April 8-12.

Many kitchen appliances are designed to clear precious counter space. They can be hung on walls or from the bottom of cabinets. There's even a toaster-oven whose top is insulated to protect the cabinet from which it hangs.

Two new electric iron models come with automatic shut-off features and a third is cordless. All cost about twice as much as a standard steam iron.

The single most visible item at the show was a feather duster on a series of telescoping plastic poles that collapse to 4 feet or extend to as much as 16.

Extend-a-Duster lets you reach cathedral ceilings and chandeliers and the tops of doors, windows and picture frames while standing in the middle of the room or do the baseboards without bending. It comes in bright colors, weighs next to nothing and costs about $6.95 and up.

The same company, Reach High Products, of San Diego, Calif., also showed a curved plastic arm to clamp onto bed or buggy to hold baby's bottle at just the right angle.

Bob King, buyer for Sav a Stop of Amarillo, Texas, said the show was crammed with "lots of gadgets priced for impulse buying."

Worldwide Marketing called its Out-a-Sight the world's smallest self-contained radio. It's barely larger than the ear unit of a hearing aid, fits in the ear, has an on-off switch and a dial that can be adjusted without removing the earpiece. It receives most AM stations. Manufacturer's suggested retail, $15.

"This (radio) is going to be the next hula hoop," said marketer Marv Curtis. "Kids today have so much money. They'll buy anything that's faddish that's under $20."

The radio doesn't work as well in cars and doesn't work at all in heavily metal-shielded buildings such as McCormick Place, yet buyers were ordering them without bothering to walk outside for a test (we did, and they do work).

At the other end of the economic scale is a new ice-less, Simac electric ice cream machine with a removable container. It and other no-ice frozen dessert makers shown were in the $400 to $700 range.

Coffee lovers can also spend big bucks. The Maxim Moka espresso maker is expected to sell for about $220 and brew one or two cups at a time. For another $20 you can get an attachment holding enough coffee for six cups. The 24-cup reservoir has a see-through indicator.

Salton's 8-cup espresso maker is $200 and Italy's Faema home cappuccino-espresso maker comes with recipes for "The Cappuccino Diet for Dessert-Lovers." Price, about $500, plus another $250 for the accessory coffee grinder.

The outdoor party crowd might like Country Kitchen's seafood (or chili, or anything) pot with iron stand and gas burner. It comes in six sizes, from 16 quarts for $40 to 78 quarts for $140. The iron stand and flame unit is $25 and a large propane storage tank is $50. Prefer grilling? Weber Kettle Grills has wrapped its largest model into an oak plank, wheeled stand with snap-up side extensions for $400 complete. Weber also introduced 7 1/2 pound bags of wood chunks designed to replace or supplement charcoal while adding flavor. They come in oak, hickory and the new snob favorite, mesquite. About $5 a bag.

They include a children's night light that turns on and off automatically and a series of cordless, rechargeable lights.

One comes on automatically when electric power fails and can be carried about. A similar unit is flashlight size. Another is a clamp-on light adjustable to various angles.

Still another is a closet light that burns two hours on a 24 hour charge and holds its charge six months.

Our photographer wanted to take home Henry Wedemeyer's $150 convertible stepladder. It's a 32-pound, 12-foot aluminum model with square rungs and three sets of swivel locks at 3-foot intervals. It can be used as a 6-foot-high stepladder, a 12-foot straight ladder, a 6-foot-long platform three feet high. Or it can be bent at an angle to rest one foot on the floor and another halfway up the stairs to let you paint awkward staircase walls. It folds into an almost flat "M" for storage, and fits even subcompact car trunks.

Among little items were: —A disposable foil meatloaf pan with rack to drain drippings as the loaf cooks.

—Plate Mates, plastic clips designed to attach a wine glass or stemmed cocktail glass to your plate — eliminating the usual balancing act requiring three hands per person at a buffet.

—Sea Cucumbers, which are large ocean-going slugs boiled in broth. These were dishes, and I quote, "To help lighten the homemaker's burden." I don't know about burden, but it certainly lightened the contents of my stomach.

My kids won't eat anything they've seen in a Walt Disney movie or that quivers when you put it over rice. They refuse to chew anything more than twice and if it has strings or a seed in it, forget it.

Introducing something new to their taste buds is like Hamlet offering a drink to his stepfather. First, they look at you suspiciously, then they bring the plate close to their noses and smell it. Before they bring it to their lips they want to know what is in it, the origin of the ingredients and why you're pushing it. Some mothers think once you have it in the child's mouth, you're home free. Wrong. Now you have to get them to swallow it.

My kids entered high school with food stored in their mouths I had forced there three years previous. As for the "Sea Cucumbers," there's only five ways my kids would even consider touching them.

1. If they could play with the slugs and get them to assume a comical position on the plate.
2. If somebody else's mother served it to them.
3. If they cost $12 a pound and I had to cut them in half to make them go around.
4. If they rotted their teeth.
5. If a fast food chain opened, "Ed-die's Batter-Fried Slugs."

They don't deserve me.

For keeping food hot or cold, there's the Hot Shot, a cutting board with a thin insulating layer that captures and stores heat or cold and reflects it back to the surface. It is said to hold foods at serving temperature about an hour. About $14 or $22, depending on size.

A number of companies showed fancy, attractive gas-fueled hot plate burners for outdoor use. Iwatoni of Tokyo's Cassette Feu weighs less than four pounds and costs $55.

Nordic Ware's portable, countertop barbecue grill looks like a huge kettle on a burner. It costs $130, runs up to four hours on a small propane cylinder and has a locking lid. It is designed for campers, boaters and cookout lovers. There's also an electric model for indoor use.

The average U.S. household is shrinking steadily, but you wouldn't know it by most of the utensils and appliances shown. Oster's new Super Pot is an 8 1/2 quart electric kettle cooker, with rack and basket for steaming or deep-fat frying.

Cleaning up is ever easier. Wear-Ever Aluminum offered pans with non-stick SilverStone coating inside and out.

Non-stick coating is also moving into microwave cookware. Regal and Nordic Ware showed SilverStone-coated dishes for microwave ovens, and Endura Industries of Reynolds, Ind., will add the coating shortly to cook-and-serve ware.

Do you find yourself with your hands in the dough and the recipe across the room? Karen Haas and Diane Lewis of Micromex, Inc., have put together six collections of 35 recipes each on 3-by-5 cards that slip into a plastic envelope that attaches by Velcro to the bodice of a butcher apron. The apron is $12, the cards $1.89 a pack. The recipes look simple and good.

Black & Decker recently bought General Electric's housewares division and can use the name for three years, but will keep its own name on a new line of household lighting devices, at prices ranging from $11 to $46.

They include a children's night light that turns on and off automatically and a series of cordless, rechargeable lights.

One comes on automatically when electric power fails and can be carried about. A similar unit is flashlight size. Another is a clamp-on light adjustable to various angles.

Still another is a closet light that burns two hours on a 24 hour charge and holds its charge six months.

Be Honest, Tell Her You Don't Enjoy Three

DEAR ABBY: I met a girl while in school two years ago and we've become close friends. We usually meet for dinner twice a month. We live in different counties, so when we do get together it's special. It gives me a chance to get out of the house, away from my husband and children.

Lately, every time we get together she brings her husband along. It wouldn't be so bad if he weren't so insulting to me. He belittles me, and his put-downs are becoming too much to bear. Our meetings before had always been just the two of us, and we used to sit and talk, but since her husband has been joining us, it seems she would rather talk to him. I don't see why she doesn't just stay home and save me the time and gasoline it takes to drive there.

Our friendship is wearing thin. Is there a tactful way to tell her I wish her husband wouldn't join us? How can I do this without hurting her feelings?

THREE'S A CROWD

DEAR THREE'S: Be honest. Tell her you don't particularly enjoy the threesome because her husband belittles you and puts you down. And if it means the end of your friendship, what have you lost? A "friend" who permits her husband to insult you.

DEAR ABBY: This letter concerns an argument with my roommate. She claims she read a letter in your column in which a girl got pregnant without taking off her clothes, and that the guy was also fully dressed. She said they were wearing jeans.

My roommate very often gets confused about things she's read or heard, so I called Planned Parenthood and another family planning clinic to prove her wrong, and they could hardly answer me for laughing.

I told her this, but she still believes a girl can get pregnant while fully clothed.

If this is true, please print the letter again.

CAN'T BELIEVE IT

DEAR CAN'T: You had better believe it because it's true. The item your roommate was referring to is as follows:

DEAR ABBY: I have been told by friends that it is possible to get pregnant through your jeans. I can't believe this!

I am a virgin, just turned 15, and know I am going to be more involved with guys now that I'm dating. If this is possible, I am scared to death to get very close to any guy. I need to know as soon as possible.

I hope you won't think this is a dumb question.

WORRIED IN EL PASO

DEAR WORRIED: It is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused just by lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

It's not possible to get pregnant through one's jeans, but sometimes kids remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, erator door for everyone in my family to read.

I am amazed at the number of people who come home from shopping and immediately begin to prepare a meal without washing their hands. And how about all those fast-food places where employees handle the food, handle the money, then back to the food?

I have spoken to several of them about this, and they looked at me as if to say, "So what's wrong with that?"

Let's wash up, America!

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I was complaining the other day about how bored I am with cooking.

Every week, I toss the same old things in my cart: two pounds of hamburger, a package of thin-fry chops, macaroni and cheese, applesauce, a slice of ham and a package of spaghetti. It's all about as predictable as my husband's table blessing, "Thanks for nothing. I had it for lunch!"

Well, yesterday on the refrigerator door was a clipping someone had put there about a contest for China chefs.

At this point, I must warn you that the following material uses some disgusting language and if you are hung over or on a bland diet, you may find it unsuitable for reading.

The entries included "Dragon, Tiger, and Phoenix," made up of snake, ant eater and chicken; "Flying Tiger over the River," composed of shredded meat of rare birds and "Sea Cucumbers," which are large ocean-going slugs boiled in broth.

These were dishes, and I quote, "To help lighten the homemaker's burden." I don't know about burden, but it certainly lightened the contents of my stomach.

My kids won't eat anything they've seen in a Walt Disney movie or that quivers when you put it over rice. They refuse to chew anything more than twice and if it has strings or a seed in it, forget it.

Introducing something new to their taste buds is like Hamlet offering a drink to his stepfather. First, they look at you suspiciously, then they bring the plate close to their noses and smell it. Before they bring it to their lips they want to know what is in it, the origin of the ingredients and why you're pushing it. Some mothers think once you have it in the child's mouth, you're home free. Wrong. Now you have to get them to swallow it.

My kids entered high school with food stored in their mouths I had forced there three years previous.

As for the "Sea Cucumbers," there's only five ways my kids would even consider touching them.

1. If they could play with the slugs and get them to assume a comical position on the plate.
2. If somebody else's mother served it to them.
3. If they cost $12 a pound and I had to cut them in half to make them go around.
4. If they rotted their teeth.
5. If a fast food chain opened, "Ed-die's Batter-Fried Slugs."

They don't deserve me.

Norman Peale: He's Outlived His Critics

PAWLING, N.Y. (AP) — It is Friday, and Norman Vincent Peale, the author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," is not thinking especially positively.

As always, there is Sunday's sermon to prepare. What's he going to say? Will people like it? For 60 years, preacher Peale has never failed to fret about his sermons on Fridays.

But there are added insecurities for Peale this Friday. He is to speak at lunch to more than 100 ministers who have come to this rustic upstate hamlet from all over North America. Then he and his wife, Ruth Stafford Peale, will face a question-and-answer session with those ministers and their wives.

But first, Peale must endure an interview. All the shyness, all the self-doubt is written on his face as he and his wife walk into the worn, comfortable conference room at the YMCA camp here.

She appears younger than her 77 years. He, despite a somewhat dour

Friday expression, doesn't look or act as if May 31 will be his 86th birthday.

Mrs. Peale, after 54 years of marriage, knows she must break the ice. She matter-of-factly ticks off facts and figures about the Peales' empire of religious enterprises.

There's Guideposts, their pocket-sized inspirational magazine with 500 employees and 5 million subscribers. There are the clubs to which people send $5 or $10 a month for newsletters on positive thinking or Bible study.

There's the Foundation for Christian Living, the all-purpose 150-employee company in Pawling that sends reprints and recordings of Peale's sermons, conducts international tours for church groups and sponsors annual conferences for ministers.

There are her husband's radio shows, his newspaper columns and his speaking engagements, about 45 of them in 1984 at up to $5,000 each.

There are his books. He has written two dozen now, with total sales well over 10 million — his publishers lost count years ago.

And, of course, there's their "main job" for 52 years: the pastor and pastor's wife at Marble Collegiate Church in New York City.

Throughout his wife's recitation, Peale sits quietly beside her in his monogrammed shirt, silk tie and tailored suit. He never looks directly at her, but instead appears to be resting patiently, his clear eyes blinking behind rimless glasses. Finally he speaks.

"If I had been let alone, none of these things would have been developed!" he cries out.

This is Peale's normal manner of speech; he frequently seems to be crying out in amazement or recognition or just plain ain't-life-great enthusiasm.

He goes on to lavish praise on his wife, whom he calls "Mrs. Peale" in public, for being the aggressive one, the organizer who took his ideas and pushed them into corporate realities.

"She's the real positive thinker in the family," he says. "She's a natural. I had to learn it!"

Mrs. Peale, who calls him "Norman" in public, lauds her husband for learning to deal with her rigidity. Their words come tumbling out on top of each other.

"I may be wrong, but I'm never in doubt," she says.

"Yes, sometimes she's wrong, but usually I am!" he interjects.

"He has such feelings of shyness and inferiority," she goes on, clucking just a bit. "He really suffers for it. I can't understand why..."

"Well, I've gotten so I can handle it!" he exclaims.

"You're getting better," she allows.

And they smile at each other.

At this point in life, rich and respected, Peale has reason to smile. He has outlived his critics and outlasted the criticism. In his past, he had plenty of both.

He has extricated himself from involvement in the conservative Republican politics that drew criticism in and out of religious circles: opposing the New Deal in the 1930s; endorsing Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Thomas Dewey for president in the 1940s; warning in 1960 that John F. Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, should not be elected president because the Vatican might exert undue pressure, going to Vietnam as a personal representative of the Nixon White House.

Adlai Stevenson, asked about Peale's practice of mixing religion and politics, once said, "I find Paul appealing, but Peale appalling."

Peale no longer thinks it a clergyman's duty to get involved in the political issues of the day: "If I had to do it all over again, one thing I would not do is get involved with any politicians."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAY 31, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when it is good for whatever has to do with the little affairs of everyday living that require ingenuity, as your mind sees what needs to be done and is receptive to all conditions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Important that you clear your desk of work so that you can be ready for greater action coming up soon.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study into all the practical aspects of your existence and know how to get ahead faster. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Personal matters need more thought and attention at this time. Contact friends who can give you pleasure and get fine results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get small tasks done today and clear the deck for more important things. Show that you help those who are in trouble.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can handle civic work nicely during spare time and enjoy it. Show that you are inventive in any career work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study whatever it is that can help you to advance more quickly in your career. State your ideas to persons who fit into your plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find the right means by which you can expand, even if it means taking a trip. Your intuition is working fine now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to find a better system for getting your business running more smoothly and profitably. Show that you are willing and wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Have long talks with outside partners and come to a far better understanding with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get into the details of your work and handle them well. Converse with fellow workers and clarify whatever is confusing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Ideal day to get entertainment matters nicely planned, so study your newspaper well for ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study every aspect of your fundamental security and be ingenious in making it more solid. Invite friends in so that you can talk.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very good during times of emergency, and courses should be added to the curriculum that will further this natural ability. There can be great success during the lifetime. Teach to finish whatever is started.

How They Voted

Nigeria Opens War Against 'Indiscipline'

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 17-23.

HOUSE
DEFENSE — By a vote of 173 for and 250 against, the House rejected an amendment to hold fiscal 1985 outlays for buying weapons at the 1984 level, after adjusting for inflation. This occurred during debate on the $208 billion military authorization bill for 1985 (HR 5167) that was headed for final passage and the Senate.

Sponsor Pat Schroeder, D-Col., said Reagan's "defense spending binge" must be contained because "we are in as great a danger of losing our way of life to the economic enemy as to a military enemy."

Opponent Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., called Schroeder's proposal "one of those cute little amendments designed to give members a chance to vote for massive reductions in that terrible old defense budget without actually having to vote to cut a single, solitary program."

Members voting yes wanted to hold 1985 weapons spending at 1984 levels. North Carolina representatives voting yes were: None. Voting no were: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Britt, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, D-9, James Broyhill, D-10, James Clarke, D-11. Not voting: None.

PERSHING — The House rejected, 122 for and 294 against, an amendment to delay further procurement of Pershing II missiles for deployment in Western Europe, pending word on whether the Soviets will resume arms-control talks with the U.S.

The amendment, offered to HR 5167 (above), sought to apply the same conditions to the Pershing II that the House recently imposed on fiscal 1985 funding of the MX missile. Under the MX plan, money is to be withheld until at least next April. If the Soviets have not by then stated a desire to resume negotiations, MX production likely would be resumed.

Most NATO nations have gone along with the Administration's request to accept Pershing II and cruise missiles, targeted at the Soviet Union, to counter the SS-20's the Soviets have aimed at Western Europe.

Members voting yes wanted to delay placing Pershing II missiles in Western Europe, in order to induce the Soviets to resume arms-control talks.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Clarke. Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martine, Broyhill. Not voting: None.

NERVE GAS — The House voted, 247 for and 179 against, to eliminate money for binary nerve gas from the $208 billion military authorization bill for fiscal 1985 (above). The amendment deleted $95 million that President Reagan wanted for resuming U.S. nerve gas production, which has been suspended since 1969.

Supporter William Ford, D-Mich., said the "the U.S. already has an existing stockpile of...lethal chemicals that is estimated to be comparable to the Soviet supply."

Opponent Robert Badham, R-Calif., called it "plain bunkum" to argue that existing nerve gas stockpiles would deter the Soviets. "This is like saying that once we invented the Model T truck we should never have to produce a better, bigger truck."

Members voting yes were opposed to resuming U.S. nerve gas production. North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, James Martin, Broyhill, Clarke. Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Hefner. Not voting: None.

SENATE

PRISONS — The Senate rejected, 36 for and 60 against, an amendment to ensure that at least $200 million is appropriated in fiscal 1985 for prison construction grants to states, which would have to match every federal dollar received with three of their own. This occurred during debate on HR 2163, the Senate's three-year, $142 billion deficit-reduction plan that later was sent to conference with the House.

While supporter Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said this was a chance for senators "to start putting their money where their mouth is" on the crime issue, opponents said HR 2163 was the wrong legislative vehicle for such an amendment.

Senators voting yes wanted the deficit-cutting plan to earmark $200 million for building more prisons. Both John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

ALLOCATE — By a vote of 63 for and 32 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to spend an additional $326.4 million in fiscal 1985-87 on domestic health and child abuse programs. The money was to be allocated as part of HR 2163 (above), the Senate's three-year package of tax hikes and spending cuts aimed at slowing the growth of deficit spending by $142 billion over three years.

Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said the amendment, however meritorious, should not be allowed to obstruct passage of the long-debated deficit bill. He said a vote to table the amendment would be "politically embarrassing" to some senators, but necessary.

Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said "fairness and a decent sense of national priorities makes this modest increase essential."

Senators voting no favored the added domestic spending. Both East and Helms voted yes.

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — With posters, lapel buttons and television advertisements, Nigeria's military government has gone to war against disorderliness, inefficiency, sloth and disregard for hard work.

Should the military win its widely publicized campaign, Africa's most populous country could become a somewhat more disciplined place.

The regime calls its operation the "War Against Indiscipline" and its first objectives were to encourage Nigerians to line up while boarding buses, to stop driving on the wrong side of roads, to pay more attention to their children and to avoid hoarding scarce consumer goods.

The campaign seems to have achieved an initial degree of popular acceptance.

"An instant success if there ever was one," Olatunji Dare, a mass communications instructor at the University of Lagos, wrote in a recent column in the Lagos Guardian. "The 'War Against Indiscipline' has transformed Lagos bus stops from human jungles into havens of brotherly love, where the survival of the fittest has been supplanted by the survival of the meekest."

State-run television recently gave prominence to a report about a woman who returned the equivalent of nearly $4,000 she had received in error in a bank transaction. A bank clerk spent three days in jail, under suspicion of fraud, until the woman reported the mistake, Nigerian Television said. It attributed the woman's honesty to the consciousness-raising impact of the "War Against Indiscipline."

The campaign's influence was also detected in the recent changeover of Nigeria's currency. Nigerians endured lengthy lines at banks to exchange restricted amounts of old bank notes for new bills — a massive operation characterized by its general orderliness.

Russians Given Time To Reconsider

By The Associated Press
 Juan Antonio Samaranch says he is prepared to give the Soviet Union more time to reconsider its boycott of the Los Angeles Games if he gets the slightest sign of interest.
 Saturday is the deadline for entries, but the chairman of the International Olympic Committee said, if on his visit to Moscow, the date poses a problem to a solution that would get the Soviets and their allies to Los Angeles, the deadline would be extended.

 Samaranch was to leave today with a top-level IOC delegation to deliver a letter to Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko. It contained a plea to the Soviets to reconsider the decision that has led their powerful team and 11 of their allies to boycott the Games.

 Samaranch acknowledged Tuesday that he was not optimistic.

"I'm a realist," he said, noting that Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet Olympic Committee, had declared on several occasions that the boycott was "irrevocable."
 "Of course, if they make some new proposals to overcome the impediment to their full participation and if the June 2 deadline poses a problem, I will postpone the deadline immediately."

In other Olympic-related developments Tuesday:
 — President Reagan, speaking to American athletes at the Olympic training center in Colorado Springs, predicted the Games would be successful.

"It is unfortunate," he said, "that not all nations will be represented at the Games. I hope you realize, however, that the success of the Olympics, and your personal success in the Games, in no way depend on political machinations of power brokers in countries that are less than free."

— A senior Czechoslovak sports official announced that separate competition in rowing, basketball and track and field will be held in the Soviet Union in August and that handball and road cycling will take place in East Germany in July and August. But Rudolf Dusek, deputy chairman of the Czechoslovak Physical Training association said they "will not be organized as alternatives to the Olympics."

— Athletes from countries seeking to compete individually in the Games were turned down by the IOC. "It is impossible for the IOC to accept these entries," said IOC director Monique Berlioux. "It would be a violation of Olympic rules. No athlete can compete unless he is sponsored by his National Olympic Committee."

Peter Ueberroth, head of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said that "between 10 and 20" athletes from countries boycotting the Games have approached organizers for permission to compete. He said most were refugees or were living outside the Soviet bloc but noted that at least four athletes have written from inside their own countries to apply for individual admission.

Berlioux recalled that a number of American, West German and other athletes tried to break the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow games by entering individually, but were rejected for the same reason.

— In East Berlin, Siegfried Geilsdorf, vice president of East Germany's leading sports organization, said a factor in the decision to join the boycott was the lack of response from the LAOOC regarding requested written assurances about their athletes' safety. Geilsdorf's remarks, quoted in the Los Angeles Times, were made to a group of foreign journalists in East Berlin on Tuesday.

Asked what might happen if written assurances of security were received now, Geilsdorf said that it would be too late, because of Saturday's deadline. Asked what would happen if there were no deadline problem, Geilsdorf simply shrugged his shoulders.

— The Games' organizers said the absence of the boycotting countries have caused no events to be cancelled and said a new event, solo synchronized swimming, has been added. Ueberroth said that Soviet bloc officials remain in gymnastics and cycling, but have been replaced by the federations governing other sports.

Samaranch, preparing for his trip, hinted that the deadline problem could be dispensed with.

"If we postpone the deadline, it will be a good sign," he said. "But I do not think they will ask for it."

"We take our instructions from the IOC," Ueberroth said. "If the IOC asks us to extend the deadline, we will do it."

In a related matter, a federal judge in Los Angeles rejected a motion by Chicago Bears wide receiver Willie Gault to open the Olympics to professionals.

U.S. District Court Judge Consuelo B. Marshall ruled Tuesday Gault has not demonstrated "a substantial probability" that the Games' amateur tradition is in violation of due process and civil rights laws.

In denying Gault's motion for a preliminary injunction, the judge ruled that Gault has also not pursued solutions within the ruling bodies of amateur sports.

In an antitrust suit filed last month, Gault charged that amateur sports are "a business for profit" and therefore should not be allowed to bar professionals.

A world-class high hurdler and 100-meter sprinter, Gault won a bronze medal in the hurdles and a gold medal in the sprint relay at the World Track and Field Championships in Helsinki last summer.

Baird Decision Is Due Soon

East Carolina baseball coach Hal Baird is expected to announce his decision sometime today or tomorrow whether he will accept a job as head coach at Auburn University or remain with the Pirates.

Baird, who has guided the Pirates into the NCAA Regional playoffs two of the past three years, confirmed several weeks ago that he had been offered the job by former ECU head football coach Pat Dye, now head football coach and athletic director at Auburn. Baird asked at the time that press releases on the job offer be withheld until his team had completed play in the NCAA Regionals in Florida this past week.

However, an area television station released the information late last week, saying Baird had delivered an "ultimatum" to ECU athletic director, Dr. Ken Karr.

Baird had said earlier that Karr had asked him to withhold his decision until the two had talked further on the situation, and two meetings were held Tuesday.

Karr reportedly made an attractive offer to Baird at the time, and Baird is now considering that offer.

Baird, who said he never gave Karr an "ultimatum," said he had asked to be relieved of teaching duties and to have his budget raised from $30,000 to $60,000 per year. That, according to one source, would still leave ECU trailing each of the other five schools who made it to the NCAA South I Regional this year, in which the Pirates finished third. Baird said he was not asking that it all be done by next year, and that he was willing to accept a program of gradual increases, "so long as the school showed that it was serious about baseball," he said.

Details of the offer were not made public, but were said to meet Baird about halfway.

Baird was unhappy about the early announcement of the job offer, noting that most of his players did not know about it until they heard it from friends and relatives after the television broadcast. East Carolina lost the next two games in the tournament to bow out, and Baird feels that the announcement definitely had an effect on the players.

Baird, 34, played his collegiate ball at East Carolina, where he was an outstanding pitcher and outfielder. He then signed with the Kansas City organization, advancing to the AAA level with Omaha. Following his retirement from professional ball, he returned to East Carolina as assistant coach under Monte Little and took over the head coaching duties five seasons ago. This year's team posted a 34-13 record.

Emory Said In Talks With UM

Ed Emory, rumored last week to be a possible candidate for the vacated head coaching job at the University of Miami, has reportedly been in contact with Hurricane officials about the position.

Miami coach Howard Schnellenberger resigned last week to become head coach of the Washington Redskins, expected to move to Florida next season. Schnellenberger will not take over that position until the end of the current season.

Emory's name first popped up in media talk last week. The story originally came from the Orlando Sentinel, where the sports editor made a list of those he felt were possible candidates, including Emory's name because of the way the Pirates played in their three losses to Miami, Florida and Florida State in the Sunshine State last year. ECU lost close contests in each of those games and wound up ranked #20 in the Associated Press' final poll.

Emory, according to unconfirmed reports, visited Miami over the weekend, and was also in contact with unidentified Miami representatives. Efforts to reach Emory or Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich this morning for confirmation were unsuccessful.

Emory recently signed a contract extension through the 1987 season with East Carolina after the Pirates went 8-3 this past year.

Another report said that University of Washington coach Don James had been offered the job by Miami, but had turned it down. It was also reported that former Dye assistant Al Kincaid, who served under Dye at ECU and Wyoming, and who is now head coach at Wyoming, was flown in this past weekend for an interview with Miami officials.

Johnson Is All-Tourney

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — East Carolina University sophomore Winfred Johnson was named to the NCAA South Region I All-Tournament team.

Johnson was included on the squad as a pitcher, and he threw a complete-game victory to eliminate host Florida State Friday.

But Johnson also terrorized pitchers with a .444 average on eight hits in 18 trips to the plate, including three homers and seven runs batted in. Johnson had the game-winning RBI in both wins by the Pirates, including a grand slam homer against the Seminoles.

Johnson, a native of Elizabethtown, was also impressive in three games at first base finishing the tourney with a 1.000 fielding percentage.

Irvine New Pacers' Coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George Irvine, the new coach of the last-place Indiana Pacers of the National Basketball Association, says the team too often plays "not to lose," rather than playing to win.

"It's a very fine line, but it's one we've got to cross," Irvine said after being named the fourth head coach in the Pacers.

Irvine said the Pacers are strong defensively and play well together. But he said the team has to find a way to score more points.

"We have to figure out a way to score more baskets," Irvine said. The Pacers ended the 1983-84 season with a record of 26-56, the worst in the NBA.

"I like a running game and easy baskets," he said. "By running and attacking quickly, I think we can get to the boards easier."

Irvine, who has been the team's vice president and director of basketball operations for the last year, said the Pacers will keep "the nucleus of the team," but would consider trades that could help the club.

Pacers' President Bob Salyers announced Irvine's appointment at a press conference in Market Square Arena. "After evaluating a number of candidates, including George, and doing extensive interviews, it was decided that George was the best candidate for the job," Salyers said.

Snow Hill Takes Third Straight

EDENTON — Snow Hill drove a long way in the rain, found a relatively dry field in Edenton and came away with a 6-2 American Legion win last night.

"It rained all the way over there and most of the way back, but we got it in," Snow Hill Coach Jim Fulghum said. "We also had a half-hour wait after a transformer blew. We didn't get back (to Snow Hill) until after 2 o'clock, but it was worth it."

Quite likely — the win was the third straight for the Snow Hill club and took care of one of the longest road trips the team has to make during the regular season.

The game was scoreless until the fifth inning, when Edenton score both of its runs. Calvin Holley singled, getting the first hit off the Snow Hill pitcher, Rusty Murphy. An error on a pickoff try allowed Holley to move on to third base and he scored from there when Brian Bunch reached on an error. Paul Whidbee walked and Lemuel Capehart grounded into a potential double play, but an error at first let Bunch score.

Snow Hill came back with a pair in the top of the sixth to tie it up. With two away, Todd Grant reached on an error and Adrian Smith singled. Jerry Butler walked, loading the bases and a single by Mike Warren scored both Grant and Smith.

In the seventh, Snow Hill again struck with two away, scoring twice more for a 4-2 lead. Kevin Langston walked and Anthony Russo singled. Grant singled in Langston and Smith got a hit to plate Russo.

The final two runs by Snow Hill scored in the ninth.

Butler led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Grant and Smith each had two. Holley had two for Edenton.

Now 3-0, Snow Hill travels to Kinston on Friday.

Jaguars Reset For Tonight

LITTLEFIELD — The State 3-A baseball tournament game between Farmville Central and Roanoke Rapids, scheduled for Ayden-Grifton last night was postponed because of rain.

The game has been rescheduled for tonight at 8 p.m. at Greene Central High School.

The winner of the game advances into the eastern finals of the state tournament, and will be the host team for the next game — and the finals, should it win the eastern title.

Study Needed

It must be tempting to the City Council to consider charging $50 to $60 for rescue calls.

That was proposed at a council meeting last week. The thinking seems to be that many rescue calls are out of the city and that insurance companies frequently would cover the costs of the calls.

Perhaps so, but the council also needs to look at the potential for unevenness in collecting the rescue call fees. The nature of the work requires that responding fire-rescue personnel transport injury victims to the hospital promptly. No arrangements can be made there for insurance or personal payment.

Thus some will pay and some won't. Insurance might be a factor in the case of vehicular accidents, but all rescue calls do not involve wrecks. A child falls out of a tree and suffers a fractured leg. Who pays?

The entire situation could quickly become one in which some insurance companies pay, while others won't; a few individuals pay from their personal funds while many others do not.

Rescue service is very valuable to our community and, we acknowledge, very expensive, but our concern is that the service continue to be available to all who need it.

It is a complex situation and one which we think needs much study before the City Council moves to institute a charge.

Keeping Faith

It was known when the East Carolina University School of Medicine was launched that it would be a program of quality medical education.

It could be no other way, first because that is the way ECU and state officials, along with all supporters of the school, wanted it; but also because medical education must be of high quality to be accredited. Certainly an outstanding staff has been assembled and good facilities have been provided. The ECU School of Medicine is on the way to fulfilling the goals its founders set for it.

Developing a quality education program involves as much as anything the selection of quality students. It is evident that outstanding applicants have been chosen so far to pursue their medical studies. There should be further improvement in this area with the establishment of the Brody Scholar Program in Medicine to recognize scholastic excellence in medical education.

One student will be designated the Brody Scholar and will receive a stipend of $7,500 a year for four years. Four other students will be designated Brody Fellows and will receive $2,000 annually in scholarships.

This program can draw the best to the ECU School of Medicine, and it can be a great help to the recipients in meeting the mounting cost of attending medical school.

The ultimate beneficiaries, however, will be the public in that it is the people who will benefit from the life's work of those chosen for the Brody Scholar Program in Medicine.

New Jersey Vote Is Critical

DEPTFORD TOWNSHIP, N.J. — The frustration of Walter F. Mondale, tantalizingly close to clinching the Democratic presidential nomination, is underscored by a deceptively comfortable lead in this middle-income barometer district of a state he must win in the last round of primaries, June 5.

Numerically, Mondale ran well ahead of Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson in a political scouting expedition we conducted here with the help of Pat Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research (CSR). The tallies from our questionnaires, prepared with CSR's help: Mondale 34 votes; Hart 18; Jackson 6; undecided, 15.

But behind those numbers, the answer from the voters interviewed suggest Mondale's basic problems. They reflect a lack of emotional commitment and therefore a shaky lead. More important, his unsolved problem of expanding his bases from social-welfare constituencies of the liberal hard core was dramatized by the intention of Hart voters to switch to President Reagan on Nov. 6 if Mondale wins the nomination.

An amazing 78 percent of Hart's supporters among Democrats and independents (who can participate in the June 5 primary) would desert Mondale for Reagan. But when we asked the same question of Mondale's supporters, they were solid Reagan-hating Democrats. Half of them said they would loyally stick with Hart if he were nominated.

Typical of Mondale backers was the reason a 43-year-old state employee gave for supporting him: "He'd give us more of the same program of Roosevelt." Another longtime member of an AFL-CIO union, a 62-year-old retired aircraft-test mechanic, answered the "why Mondale?" question succinctly: "The Democratic Party."

Deptford Township is not only a barometer of New Jersey voting but the kind of area Democrats must win nationwide to defeat Ronald Reagan. It was carried overwhelmingly by the victorious Frank Lautenberg for the Senate in 1982 and the defeated Rep. James J. Florio for the governor in 1981. Nevertheless, in 1980, Reagan displayed his appeal among Democrats with narrow margins in all but one precinct here.

A pleasant Philadelphia suburb, Deptford mixes young professionals and blue-collar workers. By accident, our sample turned up fewer young professionals — Hart's lifeblood — than the township's overall percentage. Thus, our results may exaggerate Mondale's statewide appeal. In any event, we interviewed May 22, just as this crucial New Jersey campaign was moving into frenetic high gear.

Quite apart from the unavoidably indecisive quality of our results, there was no doubt of the growing estrangement between Mondale's and Hart's supporters in the bitter battle for the Democratic nomination. Backers of Hart, by 2-to-1, agreed that Mondale has made "so many promises to special interest groups" that he could not be "independent" as president. "Mondale represents the party and the unions," said a pretty, young housewife whose husband in a non-union professional.

Mondale backers disagreed, denying by 8-to-1 that Mondale had overpromised. Similarly, Mondale backers showed their Democratic colors when they told us, by 4-to-1, that it was "very important" to retire Reagan on Nov. 6, no matter whom the Democrats nominate. But among Hart's supporters, more than half told us it was "not important at all" to send Reagan packing.

See An Opportunity? Run With It

The new trend in commercial real estate is to construct tall buildings as close to airports as one possibly can. Washington's National Airport is a perfect example of this imaginative way of using what were once vast wastelands of air space.

Just across the Potomac River, in the small town of Rosslyn, is a silver tower reaching up to the sky; a beacon of welcome to all pilots attempting to land and take off from one of the busiest terminals in the country. A twin building is now going up next to it, so that soon there will be two towers instead of one to greet passengers arriving in Washington.

The father of airport skyscrapers is Alf Klagstrom, a developer who started out with $50 and a dream.

I sat with Alf in his Cloud Suite on the 30th floor of the Klagstrom Tower, and he told me how he came up with the idea for his unique real estate development plan.

"I was selling mobile homes door to door in the early '60s," he said, "and did a lot of flying. I noticed most major airports were out in the sticks, surrounded by farmland and ugly one-story buildings. There was no decent architecture within miles of the terminals, and no one seemed to care that all this good land was going to waste. 'Why,' I said, 'can't I develop a city close to air terminals so business people would not have to buck the traffic to catch their flights?'"

"There was no godly reason for airports to be so isolated from passengers they served. So I took an option on all the land at the end of the National Airport runway and hired an architect to develop a plan to make use of the air space. I told him I wanted something that would not only be utilitarian, but also beautiful to the eye, so that people flying in and out of National would be awestruck by what they saw."

"It's amazing you were the first to think of it," I said. "Very few people would have the imagination to build a skyscraper in the flight path of a commercial airport."

Alf said modestly, "I'm sure other people thought of it before I did, but no one had the persistence to follow through. Everyone was against me at the start. The banks laughed at me and said no one would want to rent space in a building at the end of a runway. When I told them all the footage had already been spoken for before I even broke ground, they were flabbergasted.

"Then I had to deal with the bureaucratic airport officials who complained that the skyscrapers could present a safety hazard to their flights. I told them people once said the same thing about the Empire State Building when it was proposed. I also argued the skyscrapers would make pilots more alert when they were landing at National. To calm their fears I offered to put a red light on the top of all the buildings at my own expense."

"That was very decent thing to do," I said. "Did you have any trouble with the Arlington County officials in getting a permit?"

"They were the only people on my side from the start. They saw the enormous tax revenues that commercial buildings would bring to the country, not to mention the jobs it would provide for people in the community. Compared to the federal government officials, who tried to stop me at every turn, the supervisors gave me encouragement during some of my darkest hours. Their faith in me has been rewarded. Arlington, which was formerly a bedroom community, now has one of the most beautiful skylines in the country."

"It must be a great feeling to see what you have accomplished in such a short period of time."

Alf said, "It's only the beginning. I've heard from counties all over the United States who want me to build skyscrapers next to their airports. I can see the day when every runway will be surrounded by glass and concrete towers, and high-rise hotels and apartment houses, creating an environment that will enrich the life of every American."

As we were talking, a DC-8 flew by Alf's window, its wing almost touching a large azalea plant out on the balcony. Alf waved at the passengers who could clearly be seen through the windows. He said, "I'm making money on the deal, but the real thrill for me is to see the delighted expressions on the travelers' faces every time they fly by my building."

Investor's Counselor Calls It Bloodletting

NEW YORK (AP) — For many years now, John Winthrop Wright has been seeking an explanation for the Federal Reserve's behavior, which he claims has cut nearly $3 trillion from U.S. production in the past 14 years.

Never, he says, has he received a satisfactory answer for what he calls the Fed's "institutionalized misconception," or the notion that inflationary problems can be controlled by shrinking the domestic supply of dollars.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth," shouts Wright, who as founder and president of Wright Investors' Service, Bridgeport, Conn., handles $1.3 billion of investments for clients.

The independent-minded Wright, whose research and scholarly bent keeps him close to academe as well as the business community, has brought his message directly to the Fed, to members of Congress and wherever it can have impact.

While he has made some impact on legislators, he has made little headway with the Fed. He won't give up; he takes his message wherever he goes, most recently to a lecture hall at West Texas State University in Canyon.

The Fed's very notion, he contends, is perpetuated by mankind's tendency to turn mindless from time to time. He reminds listeners that for two centuries doctors endorsed phlebotomy, or bloodletting, as an almost universal cure.

That, he says, is what the Fed does when it cuts the domestic supply of money as an antidote to inflation or other economic problems. In his view, it bleeds the economy into anemia, but doesn't cure a blessed thing.

Wright argues that the pragmatism that brought economic success in the 1950s and 1960s has now been replaced by professional dogmatism that has blinded the Fed to the damage being done by Eurodollars.

In his view, the Federal Reserve repeatedly puts a stranglehold on the domestic supply of money, damaging the U.S. economy in the process, while ignoring the creation of dollars outside the United States.

To him, it is madness to attempt the control of inflation by limiting the supply of dollars made in the United States when the creation of dollars abroad — Eurodollars — goes on unrestricted by any government.

In the United States, the Fed seeks to control the creation of dollars by raising or lowering the percentage of funds a bank must keep in reserve. If the reserve is lowered, the bank can make more loans.

Well, you call them loans, but others call them dollars. They become so when the loan is re-deposited, permitting the recipient bank to go out and make more loans that are, as they say, dollar-denominated. Money is created.

For many years following World War II the United States ran a deficit in its balance of payments. It bought a lot of foreign goods and it left a lot of dollars abroad, and they in turn created more dollars, or Eurodollars.

As Wright points out, this dollar-creation avoids not only the restraints of the Federal Reserve but of any regulations by the central bank of the nation in which the depository bank is situated.

He asks you to make this mental note:

"Although not obligations of the United States, Eurodollars are substantially interchangeable with U.S. dollars since checks drawn against Eurodollar deposits in foreign banks buy the same goods and services at the same dollar prices as checks drawn on American banks."

And he asks you to listen to his estimate of the consequences:

"The failure of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board to recognize this fact and the Board's subsequent dogmatic adherence to a policy of unprecedented domestic monetary and credit restriction was the basic cause of progressive deterioration of the American economy (over the past 14 years)..."

Eurodollar creation, he asserts, is unmistakably the main cause of the massive inflation which engulfed the United States and, indeed, the entire world. And yet, he maintains, the Fed has not dealt with the problem.

He has warned to the subject. In a booming voice he vents his outrage.

Rather than deal with the problem, he declares, the Fed "hobbled American industry, impoverished the American people, and prevented the effective continuation of a half-century of American world financial leadership."

Over the past 14 years, he contends, the Fed and its supporters have been responsible for three recessionary periods and helped produce deficits which have added $1 trillion to the Federal debt.

Wright is more optimistic about the future. The misconception will be overcome, he says.

Why? He answers: "There are in both our political parties better and more objective brains than those which have been employed by our government during the last decade and a half."

Rockies 'Get New Mudslides; East Hit By Flooding

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

A wall of mud carrying rocks the size of cars crept toward Vail, Colo., today as broiling heat in the Rockies triggered floods and landslides from snowmelt, while torrential rains pushed rivers over their banks from Florida to New Hampshire.

Fourteen people have died in flood-related accidents since Sunday as a waterlogged storm system moved east across the nation. Meanwhile, rampaging rivers and mudslides in the West closed roads, washed out railroad tracks and drove people from their homes.

More than 18 inches of rain have washed across southern Florida since Saturday, the National Weather Service said, closing dozens of roads in the Miami area and forcing work-bound people Tuesday to wade through water 10 inches deep downtown.

As much as 6 inches of rain has soaked Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire since Monday.

A break from snowmelt flooding and mudslides in the Rockies ended Tuesday when the mercury climbed back into the 80s and 90s with more heat predicted.

"It'll go into the 90s today as far north as southern Idaho," said Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "These kinds of temperatures really eat the snow and will create just continuous problems. They're in bad shape out there, and it's not going to improve soon."

Five houses in Vail, Colo., were evacuated Tuesday as a wall of mud 20 feet high, 60 feet wide and 300 yards long crept toward the resort town.

"This morning it moved about 30 feet in about an hour" and was within 300 feet of the houses, Vail Assistant Police Chief Ken Hughey said Tuesday.

"If it breaks loose all of a sudden — and these rocks are the size of cars — there's nothing we can do," Hughey said.

A mudslide Tuesday slammed into the Denver & Western Rio Grande Railroad tracks near Soldier Summit, Utah, closing the main line between Salt Lake City and Denver, company officials said.

Crews hoped to clear the track by noon today, said Larry Freeman, trainmaster at the railroad's Salt Lake City office.

Floodwaters from the Sevier River closed a stretch of Utah Highway 124 on Tuesday near Nephi, police said, and overflowing rivers closed some roads in Sanpete County.

Flood warnings remained in effect today in Gunnison County, Colo., where high waters Tuesday closed Interstate 70 between Fruita and Loma, state police said.

In Idaho, where the mercury hit a record 94 in Boise on Tuesday, the weather service warned of possible flooding along rivers in the higher elevations where dense snowpacks remain.

A soggy cold front battering the East extended early today from southeast New England to northwest Florida, Gordon said, and was expected to move into the Atlantic later today.

"The threat of flooding exists today along most of the Atlantic Coast," he said.

Sandbags were piled Tuesday night along the swollen Winnepesaukee River to protect downtown businesses in Franklin, N.H. Four families were evacuated from nearby Tilton and several roads were closed in Keene, Civil Defense spokesman Frank Haley said.

Minor flooding also was reported today across northern New Jersey, the counties immediately north of New York City and in isolated parts of Connecticut.

"Rivers are very close to flood stage," said Walt Blake of the Newark, N.J., office of the National Weather Service. In Wayne, N.J., where hundreds of people were forced from their homes by floodwaters in April, "a lot of people have left — they aren't taking any chances," said police Capt. Thomas Mullaney.

Crews worked early today to reopen railroad tracks south of Pittsburgh where an Amtrak passenger train derailed Tuesday, causing minor injuries to 24 of the 153 people on board. Officials said an 85-foot section of track bed along the swollen Youghiogheny River washed out before the train jumped the tracks.

Thirteen flood victims died, in Oklahoma, where water Sunday gushed in strong torrents through Tulsa. A 16-year-old girl drowned Monday in King, N.C., when her car was washed into a swollen creek.

Aide Says Block Loans Are 'Normal'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the six unsecured loans the cabinet official and his farming partners received last year are normal and have now mainly been covered by collateral.

The six loans of more than $250,000 on top of four others in 1982 were reported in Block's annual financial disclosure statement.

John Ochs, Block's chief spokesman, said Tuesday the loans were extended by bankers in a normal manner because the agriculture secretary who owns a log farm near Galesburg, Ill., is a "good customer."

"In the 70s, credit was easy in agriculture," Ochs said. "Now bankers are getting more conservative and asking borrowers to secure their loans. They asked the secretary and he has done that."

On Capitol Hill, some lawmakers have expressed interest in how Block and his partners obtained unsecured loans. Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., has said the need for hearings on the subject is "obvious."

The secretary's statement, required by the Ethics in Government Act, listed unsecured loans of at least $1.97 million to more than $2.7 million. Officials are not required to report the precise amount of their debts and holdings but only the ranges.

Block listed overall debt for himself and his partners as $6.62 million to more than $7.45 million. His assets, some held jointly with his wife or his daughter, were given as $2.72 million to more than $3.79 million.

School Maintenance Going To Computers

The Greenville schools' Maintenance Department is in the process of computerizing its operations.

The computer project, headed by maintenance director Frances Dorey, will include organizing a key accountability system, updating building and site plan blueprints, storing of information on inventory and cataloging information on school property.

The department, headed by Dr. Richard Preston, has as its major goal the job of providing preventive maintenance on a continuous regular basis to all buildings and grounds.

The system's maintenance personnel carry out and coordinate several other projects. These include the installation of a fuel farm, composed of large capacity underground tanks for storing heating oil. This enables the school district to purchase oil in large quantities at a cheaper than normal price.

Another project was the installation of an energy conservation incentive plan for all schools. In the first year of this program, $12,000 was returned to the schools. Overhead fans were also installed in many classrooms to improve air flow for heating and cooling.

Clearing Sky Opens Heavens To Eclipse

ATLANTA (AP) — Skies began to darken in the Southeast today as the moon blocked the view of the sun in the nation's last major solar eclipse this century, after a damp curtain of clouds broke up and cheered astronomers and moon-struck party-goers.

Telescopes at the University of New Orleans indicated the eclipse began at 10:41 a.m. EDT. About 45 minutes later, residents of Sunshine, La., reported a slight darkening of the sky.

In Atlanta, squarely in the path of the rare celestial phenomenon, National Weather Service supervisor Harvey Hostetter predicted "great" viewing conditions as clouds that covered the region Tuesday cleared overnight.

Scientists said the path of the near-total eclipse would cast its darkest shadow along a line from just north of New Orleans to just south of Richmond, Va., although skies would be dimmed in every state but Alaska.

Skies were overcast in Virginia this morning, but Charles Smith, director of the planetarium at the Science Museum of Virginia in Richmond, predicted "considerable darkening" even if the clouds persisted.

"It will be very obvious that something's going on," he said.

Projections called for 99.7 percent of the sun to be blotted out by the moon at the eclipse's peak, leaving a very thin band of sunlight at the star's edge. The ring is called an annulus, and the event is known as an annular eclipse.

Two other phenomena were expected during the eclipse — Baily's beads and the shadow band effect.

The shadow band results from the reduced sunlight being distorted by irregularities in the Earth's surface. It produces light in wavy lines, somewhat like the undulating bands of sunlight sometimes visible on the bottom of swimming pools.

Baily's beads — sometimes called a "diamond necklace in the sky" — occur in the seconds before the maximum eclipse. Because of their positions in the sky, the moon appears to be slightly smaller than the sun as it moves in front. And because of the mountains and valleys on the moon's surface, the light does not form a true ring but shines between the peaks and gives the appearance of bright beads around the moon.

Much of the interest in today's eclipse was not scientific. Parties, festivals and candlelight luncheons featuring such dishes as "moon beans" were planned across the Southeast.

Many colleges and universities in the Southeast set up telescopes to project the image of the eclipse for public viewing.

Scientists at Georgia Tech in Atlanta were asked to record the event for the Naval Observatory in Washington, D.C. A 300-member contingent from the Smithsonian Institution planned to travel to Richmond's Science Museum of Virginia for the day.

Foreign scientists also were arriving for the big show. The Virginia museum expected visitors from the Bahamas and Canada, and Atlanta's Fernbank Science Center said scientists from Japan and Europe planned to be on hand.

Smith, of the Virginia planetarium, said that by recording exactly where the edge of the moon's shadow falls, scientists will be able to improve their knowledge about the moon's orbit.

"Also there's been some speculation that the sun's diameter may be decreasing a bit, perhaps by one part in several thousand.... During the annular eclipse perhaps it will be possible to take some measurements of the sun's diameter," Smith said. "It's a worthwhile experiment to try."

Curiosity seekers were invited to Atlanta's Piedmont Park to hear "Symphony for the Eclipse," a three-hour, five-minute work composed and performed by a jazz group, This Side Up.

The band painted a giant sign warning, "Don't Look," referring to eye damage that can result from direct viewing of an eclipse.

Dave Hostetter, curator of a planetarium in Lafayette, La., said at least 145 cases of eye damage were reported when an eclipse was visible in that state in 1970.

The cells in the retina of the eye can be burned and permanently damaged when exposed to continuous light from the sun — even when shaded by the moon, scientists say.

Greenville Area Gets 1.68 Inches

Rainshowers and thunderstorms Tuesday and early today resulted in a rainfall of 1.68 inches recorded at the measuring station of the Greenville Utilities Commission for a 24-hour period from 7 a.m. Tuesday to 7 a.m. Wednesday, according to a spokesman there.

As a result of rain in a widespread area, the water level of the Tar River is also on the rise. At 8 a.m. Tuesday, the level measured at the Greenville facility was 4.0 feet. By midnight Tuesday it had reached 5.1 feet, stood at 6.0 feet at 4 a.m. this morning, and at 8 a.m. measured 6.9 feet. The flood stage level of the Tar River in the Greenville area is 13.9 feet.

Temperatures Tuesday and Tuesday night ranged from 74 at 8 a.m. Tuesday to a high of 82 at noon, and registered at 60 degrees at 8 a.m. this morning.

The nearly two inches of rainfall in most instances will be helpful to spring farm crops, according to Leroy James, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. "I was out yesterday looking over crops in several areas of the county and tobacco and corn look reall good at this point," James said today. "I would suggest that farmers take a look at their fields after last night's rain to make certain there is no standing water. If there is any, it should be drained to prevent damage to young crops."

State's Jobless Rate Falls Again

RALEIGH (AP) — Unemployment rates decreased in 93 counties in North Carolina and increased in seven from mid-March to mid-April for a state level of 6.3 percent for April, according to figures released today by the N.C. Employment Security Commission.

ESC Chairman Glenn Jernigan attributed the drop in the jobless rate to increased employment in trade, construction and service industries.

"This improvement, along with the anticipated increase in tourism and better weather conditions were major factors in North Carolina's unemployment decline to the April 6.3 percent rate," Jernigan said.

The national unadjusted rate to which other states are compared was 7.6 percent.

Counties with the lowest unemployment rates were Wake, 3.1 percent down from 3.4 percent;

Gates, 3.3 percent down from 3.4 percent; Orange, 3.5 percent down from 3.8 percent; and Durham, 3.5 percent down from 3.9 percent.

Counties with the highest unemployment were Swain, 18 percent (860 unemployed); Tyrrell, 14.8 percent (230 unemployed); Graham, 14.6 percent (580 unemployed); and Alleghany, 12.6 percent (580 unemployed).

Unemployment rates decreased in nine Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas and increased a little in one. Salisbury-Concord had the largest decline to 7.9 percent from 11.2 percent after many textile workers returned to work from temporary layoff. Burlington had the only increase to 8.1 percent from 8 percent.

The ESC said the increase is considered insignificant.

Council Delays Proposed Change In Medical District

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council found they had more questions than answers concerning a proposed update of guidelines for future development of Greenville's medical district during their workshop meeting Tuesday night.

As a result, the council asked the city manager's office and the Planning and Zoning Commission to gather more information before it considered revising the existing medical arts plan that was formed in 1975.

Among the council's concerns were projected land use in the area zoned for medical related facilities, expansion plans of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, interests of area residents and criteria used in making past rezoning decisions of land designated medical arts.

William Hadden urged the council to remember that the 249 acres previously designated for medical arts was set aside for future use "and even though it might not be in use now, we will use it later."

Councilman M.W. (Henry)

Aldridge said the council also needed to consider the acreage designated in the initial growth plan, asking "is it realistic to expect we'll need as much as we've got?"

At the end of the discussion, the Attorney Enters Innocent Plea

Garry T. Pegram, 39, of 202 Jamestown Road pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges that he took $27,000 from trust accounts held by his law firm and attempted to take another $30,000.

A Pittsboro native who practiced law in Greenville for 10 years before his arrest by the State Bureau of Investigation Feb. 18, Pegram waived formal arraignment in Pitt County Superior Court. A trial date of Aug. 6 was set.

A former member of the firm of Pegram and Hahn, Pegram was indicted by a grand jury May 7 on nine counts alleging the embezzlement of $25,000 on one occasion and $2,000 on another by writing checks on the firm's trust account.

The funds, according to the indictment, belonged to 18 individuals and one corporation.

The indictment also charged that Pegram attempted to embezzle $30,000 on another occasion.

A malfeasance charge resulted from the check-writing incidents, while three false pretense counts charge Pegram with obtaining $25,000 in credit from Branch Banking and Trust Co. on Feb. 9, $2,000 credit from BB&T on Feb. 10, and attempting to obtain $30,000 in credit from BB&T on Feb. 15, by depositing the checks to his personal account.

FENCE REPAIR PROGRESS?

I would like to know if the lovely old iron grate fence of the Fleming House is going to be repaired. It's such a shame that a section on West Third Street was damaged in a wreck a while back. I'm wondering just how difficult it is going to be to get it repaired and when it might be done. L.T.

Gerry Dail with the city of Greenville said, "Yes, the fence is going to be repaired. The estimate process was completed Tuesday and as soon as the insurance money comes through the work will begin." (The city of Greenville owns the Fleming House, which is leased to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.) She said she hopes the work will be completed in a couple of weeks.

"We saved all the parts we could," Barbara Woods of the Chamber said. Ms. Dail said the estimator was delighted to see that the chamber staff had taken the portions of the fence which were severed inside and protected them from the elements and possible loss. "This will make the job much easier," she said. "It's a beautiful old fence and everyone is eager to see it intact once again."

Reagan Says Space Program Demonstrates U.S. Technology

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — President Reagan, mixing politics and patriotism in a conservative western state, told Air Force Academy graduates today that the space program is demonstrating an era of technological greatness in the United States.

"We have only seen the beginning of what a free and courageous people can do," Reagan said.

In a text prepared for delivery before about 1,000 graduates, Reagan said, "The bold, not the naysayers will point the way, because history has shown that progress often takes its greatest strides where brave people transform an idea, which is scoffed at by skeptics, into a tangible and important part of everyday life."

Reagan said the space age, only a quarter century old, already has led to the space shuttle and dozens of scientific advancements.

The president's two-day trip, paid for by his re-election committee, started Tuesday.

Before leaving Washington, Reagan said he believes the Soviet Union is boycotting the Los Angeles Olympics to retaliate against the United States for boycotting the 1980 games and to prevent Soviet athletes from defecting.

On the trip, he gave a pep talk to aspiring American Olympic athletes, met with Republican campaign volunteers and appeared at reception Tuesday night for about

Danish Designer Tailors For Men, Women

By MARK WUKAS
 CHICAGO (UPI) — The adage about clothes making the man could not be further from the philosophy of designer Bech Thomassen. He thinks they reflect the man.
 "I don't believe clothes make the man," the Danish-born designer said. "I like the man to identify with the clothes he is wearing. I like my clothing to express his attitude of living — a person confident with himself. He is what he is and he knows what he is."
 Thomassen, who averages 35 new pieces per season, said his fall line will include more textured natural fibers — cotton and wool — colored in faded earth tones which "ease out and run together" such as stone, muddy water and blue-gray.
 Thomassen believes his roomy and comfortable yet sculpted and body-conscious men's designs should provide an element of self-discovery for the wearer, whether the garment is a shirt, pants or jacket.

 "When you buy a piece of clothing you find things in yourself that you never saw," he said. "You should see my clothes and say, 'Yes, this is me.'
 "For me it's very important for clothes to be casual," he said, adding that "relaxed, casual and elegant" best describe his design philosophy.
 Thomassen, 35, is now achieving wider recognition in the United States as a designer, yet he smiles when he hears himself described as "up-and-coming."
 As he puts it: "They're finally opening their eyes to my direction."
 Thomassen has designed clothes professionally for 15 years, although his unofficial career began in childhood when he designed and made wardrobes for his sisters and their dolls.

 He studied at the Fashion and Industrial Art School of Design in Copenhagen, and in the early 1970s established himself as a designer of women's clothing. He is the grandson of a couturier and was trained as a tailor. He said he uses his background to breathe life into his designs: "That's the challenge — of making something come alive, to make it become something expressive."
 Working for Birger Christensen Furs in Copenhagen, he designed a fur coat for Denmark's Queen Magrete II, as well as numbering among his private customers Marlene Dietrich and Josephine Baker.

Thomassen came to the United States in 1976 and set up shop on the West Coast, where he specialized in men's clothing. "It's a bigger challenge in America to cater to the American man, to bring my European know-how instead of just making money on ladies clothes," he said.
 He said he designs for the man of the '80s who "dares to do a little more than average. I like the American man in the sense that he is sporty, that he's a daredevil."
 Thomassen's eight years in the United States have caused his designs to lean more toward this side of the Atlantic, but he insists he has kept his European influence: "It's like I put it in a blender and mix it up and pour it out my way."
 Having established himself as a designer of men's clothing in San Francisco for many top retailers, Thomassen has returned to designing clothes for women. "I think the American woman is ahead of the European woman — more impulsive," he said. "American women are more casual and sporty than European women, and that's right up my alley."
 "American men have to think about their image."
 He calls his designs for women "an expression, an extension, of my men's clothes, but not unisex. I really cater to a person who is all together."

 Thomassen moved from San Francisco to New York last year to pursue integrating his European background and training with his concept of the American way of life — as he puts it, "blending classical design elements, elegance and sophistication with the relaxed attitude and innovativeness of American sportswear."
 "I am very interested in architecture and its influence, the strong lines in buildings today. My clothes are streamlined because of the architecture of the body."
 "A man's body is very strong. I try to get (clothes) to express the same sex appeal dressed as undressed."

Now that success is there, Thomassen said, it will not change him or his designs: "I enjoy life more than success. I always like being up against the mountain — it is the challenge."

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
 Pitt Home Agent

According to recent reports, buyers who have never owned a dwelling before are again becoming active in the housing market. First-time buyers accounted for 39.7% of all home sales last year. Two years earlier, the percentage was only 13.5%.

Since nearly every step of the house purchasing transaction has legal implications, it makes sense for first-time home buyers to familiarize themselves with some of the basic legalities of buying a house. Barry Stokes, Extension Family Resource Management specialist, offers the following tips for those who have shopped around and have decided upon a house to buy and are ready to make the sellers an offer to purchase.

The Offer to Purchase

The offer to purchase the house is the first formal step in the purchasing transaction. The buyer makes a written offer to buy the house at a given price under certain conditions. In North Carolina, most realtors use the standard form Offer to Purchase and Contract approved by the North Carolina Bar Association and the North Carolina Board of Realtors. As a buyer, you should be very careful in making the written offer to purchase because if seller accepts your offer, a binding contract is formed. Thus, you want to be certain that the offer accurately reflects your needs. Do not be intimidated by the standard form contract. Include in your offer any special conditions you want to include and delete any terms you find inapplicable or undesirable. The standard form is merely a guide for the parties to modify as they see fit.

 It is important to know that oral agreements made outside the written agreement usually are not enforceable. Do not rely, for example, upon oral assurances that the washing machine or the draperies remain with the house. Spell it out, either in your offer to purchase or in a separate written agreement.

Look over the provisions in your Offer to Purchase and Contract to be sure that the names are filled out and that you understand and agree with them. It is a good idea to have your attorney review the offer before you sign it.
 After the buyer makes an offer, but prior to acceptance by the seller, a buyer may revoke his or her offer at any time. In other words, if you change your mind after making an offer, you have every right to revoke that offer at any time prior to acceptance by the seller.

Once the buyer makes an offer, the seller may or may not choose to accept this offer. If the seller rejects the offer, this offer is deemed legally "dead." That means seller may not come back and hold buyer to the original offer. Alternatively, the seller may decide not to reject the offer outright, but may make a counteroffer. This once again puts the ball back into buyer's court for acceptance, but it "kills" buyer's original offer. Again, once buyer's original offer is "dead," seller cannot hold the buyer to this offer without buyer's consent.

The Contract

Suppose buyer makes an offer and seller accepts. At that point, a valid and binding contract is formed. No other document except the signed Offer to Purchase and Contract form is needed. Both parties are bound by the terms of the agreement. Violation of the terms of the Contract can amount to breach. If you arbitrarily change your mind and unjustifiably refuse to go through with the deal at this point, you will probably be in breach of the Contract. Similarly, if seller unjustifiably refuses to sell, seller will probably be liable for breach. Buyer and seller have a number of options in case of breach. Sometimes these are spelled out in the contract. For example, provision 1 on back of the Standard Offer to Purchase and Contract provides that if seller breaches, the earnest money will be returned to Buyer. If Buyer breaches, the earnest money is forfeited. Note, however, that provision specifies that other remedies are also available to Buyer or Seller. These remedies are provided by law and will usually involve litigation.

L&M Buyout Is Approved

DURHAM (AP) — An agreement in principle has been reached between Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. and its parent company, GrandMet USA, to sell Liggett for $325 million in cash, officials say.

GrandMet USA announced in late January that it wanted to sell Liggett, preferably to a group consisting of Liggett's management, employees and outside investors.

Liggett spokeswoman Carol Jova announced the agreement Tuesday and said no deadline for concluding the buyout was given by GrandMet, which is based in Montvale, N.J., "but we expect something definitive in the next several weeks."

"We feel like the first big hurdle has been cleared and the next step is work out the details of the financing and exactly how the employee ownership will work," Ms. Jova said.

As for the $325 million figure, she said, "We are optimistic about getting our financing with that figure."

The buyout is expected to be fueled by a loan based on Liggett's assets and officials have said there will also be some form of employee stock-ownership plan separate from the present profit-sharing plan for employees. In addition, officials have said, management would put as much cash as possible into the deal in exchange for stock.

Grand Metropolitan PLC of London, the parent company of GrandMet USA, bought the Liggett Group for $570 million in 1980.

Labor Runoff Struggling For Attention

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats will nominate in the June 5 runoff a candidate for state labor commissioner after a campaign that has fought for attention and focused more on style than political philosophy.

Two-term incumbent John Brooks, who got 46.7 percent of the vote in the May 8 primary, faces a challenge from state Sen. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, who finished second with 39.7 percent. The winner goes against Republican candidate Margaret Plemmons of Forsyth County.

Don Wiseman, a Cary safety consultant who finished third with 13.6 percent of the Democratic vote, endorsed Barnes a week after the primary. Wiseman's stinging denunciation of Brooks typified the criticisms he has received from Barnes.

"Mr. Brooks' management style does not contribute to the open, fair and democratic operation of a successful department ...," said Wiseman, who resigned as head of the department's Occupational Safety and Housing Administration program in 1981 after a dispute with Brooks.

Barnes, Wiseman said, "has demonstrated his administrative abilities as evidenced by his experience in running a successful business ... (and) is a team player, a good listener and a hope builder."

The state AFL-CIO, which has sided with Brooks in the past, threw its support to Barnes this year. The North Carolina Association of Educators, taking sides in the labor commissioner race for the first time, endorsed Barnes, as did the state chapter of the National Organization for Women.

"Brooks just wouldn't listen to us," said Christopher Scott, state AFL-CIO president, calling Brooks abrasive and stubborn. "We do want a labor commissioner we can talk to."

Brooks responds that he has been an effective commissioner and that criticisms of him are based on his refusal to "knuckle under" to labor's demands.

"I suppose Barnes coined that 'abrasive' phrase from my willingness to bring up difficult issues," he said. "A lot of people in government want to skirt the issues. I go ahead and bring them up."

He adds that he has widespread support from individual unions that belong to the AFL-CIO but don't always take its advice.

Barnes says Brooks has clashed with the Hunt administration and influential members of the Legislature. But Brooks says his problems with the General Assembly have been exaggerated and that he's gotten calls of support from many state lawmakers.

Despite the endorsements, Barnes polled 204,424 votes May 8 while Brooks got 346,031 votes. Barnes was surprised by his showing, saying he'd expected to finish first or a close second.

"I think most definitely that the lack of media coverage of our campaign hurt," said Barnes, complaining that the Democratic gubernatorial primary overshadowed the race for labor commissioner. "I don't think I've ever been in a campaign where it was harder to get coverage."

He added that Wiseman, who got 100,758 votes, did better than Barnes anticipated. "Most of the people who voted for him would have voted for us if he hadn't been running," said Barnes.

Since the primary, Barnes has spent much of his time on the phone, wooing Wiseman supporters and rallying his troops to get out the vote June 5. He also has attended rallies and has appeared before a number of organizations.

Barnes also has tried to make an issue of SBI and FBI investigations of federal job-training grants issued by the Department of Labor.

Brooks has said the probes are not unusual and have nothing to do with the department itself, but with independent contractors. Nevertheless, Barnes says the investigations are another example of poor management by Brooks.

Unlike Barnes, Brooks says he has spent little time on the phone since the primary. He has called several news conferences and is trying to shift attention from his personality to what he calls his outstanding eight-year record.

"I love second primaries," he said. "Until then, it's difficult to get people to focus on the issues."

Brooks said he has turned the Labor Department from a political organization into a "highly professional service department." Its Wage and Hours Division received two of three productivity awards issued by the governor's office in recent years, and the OSHA and apprenticeship programs are flourishing, he said.

Brooks said he expects to get the votes of many Wiseman supporters because of his interest in on-the-job safety and because he opposes a state lottery, which Barnes championed as a legislator.

N.C. Campaign

Edmisten Knox

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten says he will stick to the issues in the closing days of the campaign for the June 5 runoff, and will not give opponent Eddie Knox an opening to make personal attacks.

"We don't have to campaign on the low road," Edmisten told about 200 people who attended a $1,000 a couple fund-raiser Tuesday night. "All we have to talk about is education, jobs, putting children first, developing the state economically and looking after folks who can't look after themselves."

Edmisten also answered charges by Knox that he did not attend the June 1 debate scheduled for statewide broadcast at the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television.

Edmisten said as far as he was concerned, the debate would take place. He added, however, that he was determined not to give Knox an opportunity to launch what Edmisten called "the vicious personal attacks he has made since the (May 8) primary."

Edmisten, however, said Tuesday that he knew "of no problem with the debate, as long as we stick to the issues." He said his negotiators were insisting that the debate be moderated by someone who would disallow questions or comments of a personal nature.

Knox, former Charlotte mayor, said in a news conference Monday that Edmisten was looking for an excuse not to debate and accused him of ducking the issues.

In a Winston-Salem news conference Tuesday, Knox also said his campaign's polls indicated that Edmisten's support was eroding, with people who had supported the attorney general drifting toward the ranks of the undecided.

Knox said the trend was a result of his hard-hitting advertisements that he said were giving voters "the true image of Edmisten, and it's hurting him."

Edmisten, whom several statewide polls have said is ahead of Knox, said he didn't know how he stood and that he lent little credence to polls.

"The real key to this election is getting out the vote," he said. "And that's why I think I am in a position to win. I think that the organization that got me through the primary in first place will come through again."

Edmisten captured 31 percent of the vote in the May 8 primary, while Knox finished second with 26 percent.

Edmisten also confirmed that new ads of his own will not be shown. He said Tuesday night that he decided after a strategy session not to use the ads.

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Knox shed his coat, loosened his tie, waved a fist and warned some 300 faithful in an overheated dining hall that they faced the "biggest political machine ever built in the history of North Carolina."

With Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green at his side, the former Charlotte mayor barnstormed this eastern North Carolina town Tuesday, promising if elected governor to establish an eastern office and promote economic development in the coastal plain.

Knox spent much of the day in Winston-Salem and peppered Democratic rival Rufus Edmisten with criticism during a news conference.

He continued the assault after a barbecue supper at the Goldsboro Moose Lodge. Green, who endorsed Knox after being eliminated from the gubernatorial race in the May 8 primary, joined in.

"Now, Mr. Edmisten will tell you that he is looking after the little people. He says he has fought the big utility companies," said Knox. "If he has fought, he has been a dead loser. ... Your utility bills have gone up $1 billion since 1977."

"Let me tell you something: The little people ought to rise up and knock him out of the box on June 5 because he's let 'em down."

Knox said his record as mayor, chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission and state senator left him far better prepared for the governorship than Edmisten, the three-term state attorney general.

Acknowledging that several statewide polls released over the weekend showed him trailing, Knox said, "I know we can turn this thing around ... and we're going to win."

His anti-Edmisten advertisements are not heavy-handed and merely point out stains in his opponent's record, said Knox.

In an interview, Knox said he wouldn't gloat over a Wake County grand jury's indictment Tuesday of the National Rifle Association on a charge of violating campaign reporting laws. The NRA, in several statewide mailings, accused Knox of supporting gun control and advised members to vote for Edmisten.

"You can't ever be pleased when someone gets indicted," said Knox. "I'm mostly disappointed that a national organization like the NRA ... gets involved in a state campaign and tries to tell North Carolinians how to run their government."

Green told the rally that anyone believing "the poppycock put out by the NRA" should "stand on your heads until I finish talking, and I promise to talk all night."

He derided Edmisten's insistence that Friday's scheduled debate with Knox include a moderator who could disallow certain questions or remarks.

Poll Of Teachers Places Discipline As Major Problem

By The Associated Press

A new poll says the big problem areas in the public schools are a lack of discipline and difficulty in attracting good teachers, but a state school official says the public should not lose sight that the schools are generally doing a good job.

The special Gallup Poll of 1,000 voters conducted in May for six state newspapers and a television station showed 14 percent said lack of discipline was the most serious problem in the schools. Another 13 percent cited difficulty in attracting good teachers and 10 percent cited lack of interest by teachers.

Those surveyed between May 16 and May 20 were asked, "What do you think is the most serious problem in North Carolina's public schools?" Nine percent cited the use of drugs or alcohol by students, 7 percent noted poor curriculum and 7 percent cited teacher underpayment.

Six percent cited lack of financial support, 6 percent cited integration and busing, 4 percent cited lack of school prayer, 3 percent cited overcrowded schools, 2 percent said parents lacked interest and 2 percent said pupils lacked interest. Nine percent cited other issues and 26 percent said they didn't know.

The totals exceed 100 percent because of multiple responses.

The poll had a margin of error of 3 percentage points, meaning that in 95 cases of 100, similar surveys of randomly selected voters would vary by no more than 3 percentage points from this one.

C.D. Spangler Jr., chairman of the state Board of Education, said the survey showed "there is no overwhelming matter that takes away the confidence the community has in the public schools." He said that while the poll posed a negative question, the public should not lose sight that the schools are generally doing a good job.

A. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, said the 26 percent who said they didn't know what the major problem facing the schools was indicated some satisfaction with the schools.

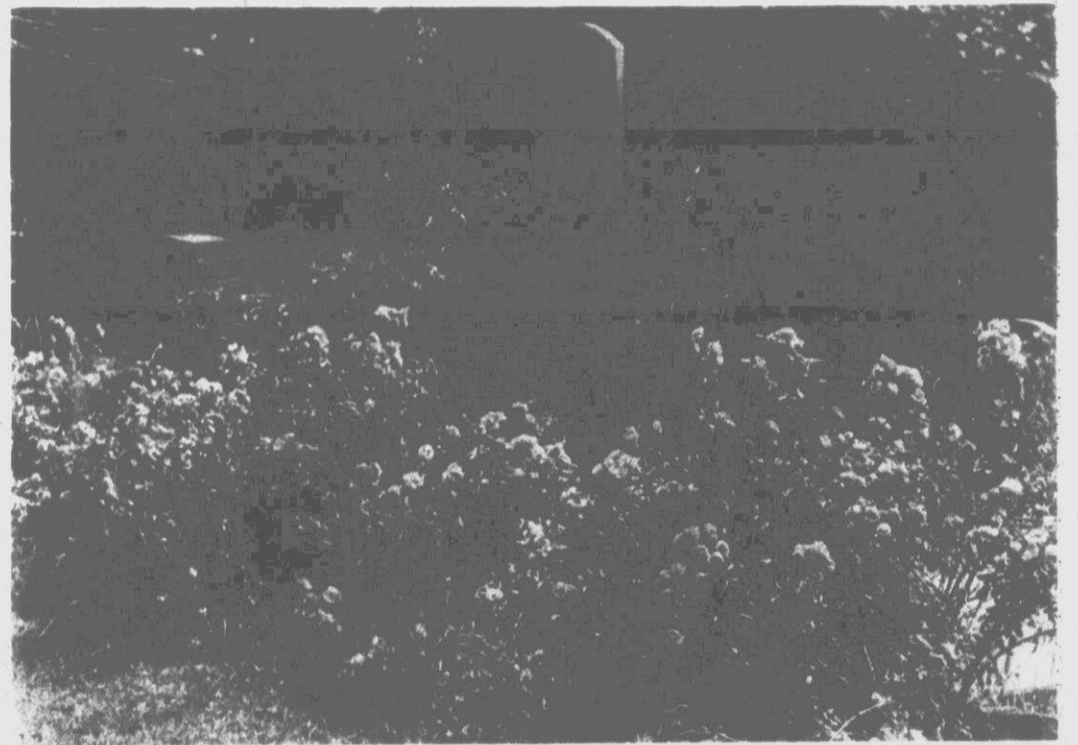

Phillips said it was not unusual for people to cite discipline problems in surveys and much of what people say in polls is a reflection of what they read in newspapers.

"I don't see anything significant about (the poll)," Phillips said

A Review

'Indiana Jones' — No Surprise Here

In "Raiders of the Lost Ark," archaeologist and hero Indiana Jones confronted ancient Egyptian curses, Nazis and supernatural forces as he sought to recover the Ark of the Covenant.

When filmmakers George Lucas and Steven Spielberg set out to create the sequel, they were confronted with a problem: what prize and what opponent were worthy of the attention of their hero? The answer can be found in "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," currently playing at the Plitt, in which Dr. Jones, in search of Hindu magic stones, must deal with nefarious Indian Thugees and devil worshippers while trying to save hundreds of starving children from slavery.

While this is not quite the archetypal struggle of good and evil of the first film, Indiana Jones is definitely on the side of the angels.

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," like "Raiders of the Lost Ark," is a flashy, expensive and, in many ways, loving remake of the B adventure films of the '30s and '40s.

Viewers will not discover a single idea in the film, and the good guys are very good and the bad guys are totally evil. It is difficult not to write about the plot of the film, because the movie is all plot. Character development and complexity are cheerfully sacrificed for action, but no one will mind. This is the first of the summer releases, films made to entertain all of the kids who will soon be out of school.

Unlike the original B movies, low budget films of poor quality, "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" is visually attractive and loaded with expensive sets, special effects and stunts. In addition, there is more action and less talk here than in most of the originals.

The film is, in fact, one continuous chase. It's also very funny. It's hard to take any of the dangers seriously. Watching "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" is like reading a comic book: children might take it seriously, but adults will enjoy the guilty pleasure.

In addition to adventure, the film contains some wonderful moments. During the opening credits we are treated to a lavish song-and-dance sequence of "Anything Goes" in Chinese, and while Jones is heading toward the Temple of Doom we are given shots straight from "The Wizard of Oz." The film is as much of a tribute to Hollywood's golden age as it is an imitation of its productions.

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" is mindless entertainment, full of gruesome and gorey small details, just the stuff to make audiences squeal in the dark. I especially enjoyed a dinner party, but I will leave the details for you to discover. My only complaint is that "Raiders" was better. That film was a surprise; with this one you know what you are going to get before you enter the theater.

Singer Wins Royalty Claim

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Country singer Emmy Lou Harris, a winner on the charts with such hits as "One More Bottle of Wine," has scored to the tune of $60,000 in royalties in a federal appeals court decision.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday upheld a lower court ruling that Miss Harris had a right to royalties from a re-release of her "Gliding Bird" album.

The singer recorded six songs — including five she wrote — under a contract with Jay-Gee Record Co.

CBS-Westmoreland Case Topic Of Public TV Debate

By TOM JORY

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Midway through a televised discussion on CBS' documentary, "The Unaccounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," professor Michael Botein interrupts the combatants — writer Don Kowet, TV producer George Crile and the moderator, Steven H. Scheuer.

Botein, director of the Communications Media Center at New York Law School, tells the three they sound like lawyers arguing their respective cases. Scheuer and his guests on "All About TV" ease off momentarily.

The case will be in open court soon enough, Botein seems to suggest. What he wants to know, he says, is why, as Kowet maintains, CBS was out to get retired Army Gen. William Westmoreland; and why, as CBS argues, Kowet was out to get the network.

The 90-minute documentary, produced by Crile and broadcast Jan. 23, 1982, accused Westmoreland, as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, of misrepresenting enemy troop strength to deceive President Lyndon Johnson and the American public.

Kowet and Sally Bedell, in a subsequent article in TV Guide magazine, criticized the film as "often unfair and arbitrary in its approach to a subject that demanded all the objectivity and thoroughness that the journalists of CBS News could muster."

Westmoreland filed a $120 million libel suit against the network. The suit is scheduled to go to trial in September, though CBS recently asked that the case be dismissed.

Botein's question, both interesting and manageable, is more or less ignored, and a short time later, the quarreling resumes:

"He is an agent out to try to kill the documentary," Crile declares, referring to Kowet and the documentary form rather than a specific show.

"It was your program," Kowet retorts, "that killed documentaries. Your work."

It's an especially ludicrous turn in the hour-long program, to be broadcast by about 40 public TV stations starting Sunday night, that is more accusatory than enlightening:

"You're defending a $120 million lawsuit," Kowet snaps at one point. "That's right," Crile replies, "and you're exploiting that."

Perhaps the subject is too complex, and the participants too deeply involved, to allow for reasonable conversation. Moments into the program, Crile decries Kowet's journalism as "irresponsible, inaccurate and easily demonstrated to have those flaws."

It's not a good start; Kowet, in the course of the hour, defends his work, including his newly published book on the subject, "A Matter of Honor," and nothing is resolved.

Scheuer attempts, from time to time, to steer the discussion along a meaningful course, though to little avail: "You did so," one side argues, in effect. "I did not," answers the other.

The problem is that professional reputation is at stake, and these fellows are not about to concede error in judgment or fact. That's understandable.

Crile is eager to defend his work and tear down Kowet's ... in the same breath, if he can.

"The show claimed there was a systematic deception and the country was misled," Crile declares. "We said it was our opinion it was a conspiracy. We now stand, through legal evidence in the form of sworn testimony ... in saying that was the case."

"Now, I don't think that your expertise or your ability to comment on the subject is up to the position that these men had," Crile adds, referring to the witnesses who support CBS' position.

Kowet, toward the end of the program, insists a conspiracy was not proved. Unfortunately, he must contend with the moderator, rather than Crile.

Ford Film Leads Box Office List

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Swashbuckling "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" made off with a record $42.3 million in its first six days in the theaters, kicking off what Hollywood hopes will be a strong summer movie season, packed with escapist fare.

"Indiana Jones," the eagerly awaited sequel to "Raiders of the Lost Ark," smashed what had been considered unbeatable records set last Memorial Day by the final chapter in the "Star Wars" trilogy, "Return of the Jedi," Paramount Pictures said Tuesday.

From Wednesday through Monday, the $27.5 million yarn about a mild-mannered professor (Harrison Ford) who turns into a whip-cracking scourge of evil, surpassed the $41.1 million that "Jedi" collected in its first six days.

"Indiana Jones," a fantasy-adventure from "Jedi" creator George Lucas and Steven Spielberg, also established a new single-day mark on Sunday of $9.3 million while playing in 1,685 theaters. In comparison, "Jedi" gobbled up $8.4 million in one day last year in 1,002 theaters.

No other major studio films were released over the holiday, a nod to the earnings potential of "Indiana Jones." Of the movies already in release, Robert Redford's "The Natural" from Tri-Star Pictures was a distant No. 2, taking in $6.9 million from Friday through Monday at 989 theaters.

"Indiana Jones" collected $33.9 million in the same four days. The movie far surpassed the $12.7 million logged by "Raiders" in its first six days in 1981. "Raiders" went on to rank sixth in all-time box office receipts, while "Jedi" became third best ever.

"Star Trek III: The Search for Spock" goes out Friday in the largest release in movie history: 1,966 theaters in the United States and Canada.

Paramount will release "Top Secret!" — a new movie from the creators of the 1981 hit, "Airplane!" — on June 22.

On June 8, Spielberg's house-haunting "Gremlins" debuts at the same time Aykroyd and Murray begin exterminating poltergeists in "Ghostbusters."

Israelies Concerned Over Aid To Saudis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens is registering his concern over the delivery of 400 U.S. anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia despite assurances of "strict safeguards" to keep the Stingers from terrorists. The deal authorized Tuesday by President Reagan permits the Saudis to deploy the missiles anywhere on their territory or on tankers carrying oil through the Persian Gulf. "They are purely defensive in every sense of the word," said Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman. But having faced Saudi arms in four Mideast wars, Israel is worried the missiles might be trained on them, fall into the hands of rebels if the monarchy is overthrown or be taken over by terrorists.

However, the sale is final and cannot be reversed by Congress since Reagan invoked his emergency powers, so Arens does not plan to dwell on the issue in a meeting with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and at a lunch at the Israeli Embassy. U.S. arms sales was the likely topic at the luncheon, and top Pentagon and State Department officials in the security field will attend. Besides, U.S.-Israeli relations are warm, and the two governments are making unpublicized but steady headway on military cooperation in the Middle East. "We're expecting a judicious exposition," said a State Department official before Arens arrived. He said Israel shares U.S. concerns about the war in the Persian Gulf and a potential decline in oil supplies throughout the world.

However, a diplomat who declined to be identified doubted the Stingers would make a difference. He said they were useless aboard a ship and ineffective against planes because of their short range. Americans will train the Saudis to operate the missiles and will fly tankers to refuel the F-15 jet fighters sold to the Saudis during the Carter administration. In addition to the Stingers, Reagan ordered an American-piloted KC-10 tanker to help in refueling Saudi fighter planes.

war between Iran and Iraq was "very slight." Besides delivering the missiles and adding the tanker to three already at the Saudis' disposal, the administration is speeding delivery of fuel tanks, ammunition and spare parts. The Saudis also requested bomb racks for their 62 F-15 jets, but the United States declined, officials here said. The Pentagon said the Saudis will pay $40 million for the missiles and the cost of U.S. personnel training the Saudis to use the weapons, which carry fragmentation warheads and home in on the heat generated by the engines of attacking planes. The Stinger is about 5 feet long and weighs about 34.5 pounds.

The Stingers are shoulder-fired missiles with a range of three miles and can be used against low-flying attack planes. "It's an answer to an emergency situation in the Gulf that threatens Saudi shipping and Saudi shipping lanes," Speakes said. Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said the refueling "will take place in Saudi airspace, most likely over the land mass." Reagan said at a news conference last week the possibility of direct U.S. intervention in the 44-month

Foreign Trade Deficit Hits Another Record In April

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's foreign trade deficit surged to a fourth straight monthly record in April, with imports surpassing U.S. exports by $12.19 billion, the Commerce Department reported today.

The deficit had reached ever-higher record levels in January, February and March, hitting a total of $10.26 billion in March.

The imbalance for the first four months of 1984 stands at $42.01 billion, meaning the deficit would soar to just over $126 billion for the year if the current pace continued. Officials have said they expect a total of more than $110 billion, far in excess of last year's record $69.4 billion.

The largest U.S. trade deficit before that was the $42.6 billion imbalance of 1982.

Government officials and private analysts have said the high trade deficit is mainly due to two factors:

—The relatively high-valued U.S. dollar, which makes American exports expensive overseas and makes foreign goods less expensive here.

—The fact that most foreign economies have recovered less robustly than America's, leaving those nations less able to buy U.S. exports and Americans better able to buy from overseas.

In April, the new report said, total imports rose 6 percent to a record $29.71 billion, while exports declined 1.2 percent to $17.52 billion.

Part of the increase in imports was accounted for by an 8.5 percent rise in the value of oil products coming into the nation. The average number of barrels per day of imported oil rose to 6.2 million from 5.6 million in March, while the price per barrel rose to $29.65 from $29.60, the report said.

It said an increase in non-petroleum imports "was the result of sizable increases in a variety of manufactured goods — including new passenger cars, telecommunications equipment and parts, organic chemicals, footwear and numismatic coins — agricultural commodities and nonmonetary gold."

The decline in exports reflected lower figures for such commodities as wheat, animal feeds, soybeans, tobacco, chemical products and oil, the report said.

Japan Tries Boost Yen

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S.-Japan working group has agreed on steps to open Japan's financial markets wider to foreigners and strengthen the yen internationally — moves U.S. officials hope will reduce America's huge trade deficit with Japan.

Business and government leaders in Tokyo said today that the steps will give foreign banks better access to Japanese money markets, provide needed competition for Japanese banks and eventually ease U.S.-Japan trade friction by strengthening the yen against the dollar.

The working group released a report on the steps Tuesday in Tokyo and Washington, following a series of six meetings that started in February.

Gulf Gets A 'Graveyard'

MAMANA, Bahrain (AP) — Three crippled ships, watched over by a fleet of salvage tugs, lie 70 miles northeast of Bahrain in a section of the Persian Gulf that shipping companies are calling the "graveyard" of the Iran-Iraq war.

Moored within six miles of each other are two Saudi Arabian-registered tankers hit by Iraqi missiles and a Liberian oil-chemical carrier struck by Iranian missiles.

On a visit to the area this week on a Bahrainian coast guard boat, a reporter saw huge blackened gashes in the ships and melted, bent superstructures.

Salvage tugs were scattered nearby, their crews watching with foam sprayers in case fire erupted anew as hundreds of thousands of barrels of crude oil from the Saudi ships, the Safina al-Arab, and the al-Ahooed, were transferred to other ships alongside. The Safina al-Arab was attacked April 25, and the al-Ahooed, May 7.

The Liberian ship Chemical Venture was empty, heading for Kuwait for a load of naphta when attacked on May 24.

At least 19 ships have been reported attacked in the gulf by Iranian and Iraqi warplanes since January. The attacks have sharply increased since April, prompting fears that the war could expand to other gulf nations and nations that import oil from the region.

In the triangular "graveyard," a gash the size of a bus had been opened in one ship. The sea washed in and out of a gap that opened up when a bomb went through a deck and exploded on the waterline. A 30-foot-wide hole had been punched in a billboard-size "no smoking" sign on the chemical carrier.

Black streaks of thick oil, its stench evident from a mile away, coated the waters.

Traffic through the gulf waterway was down this week, with shipping unions deciding to boycott the gulf waters as long as the tanker war continued.

A Filipino on a salvage tug said the only aircraft he had seen in recent days was a helicopter "with someone taking pictures." A U.S. warship had cruised by, he said.

The United States has a five-ship force led by the flagship La Salle stationed in the gulf, and another force led by the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk in the Arabian Sea, off the coast of Oman.

Britain has a three-ship fleet, and the French navy has some vessels rotating in and out of the gulf waters.

U.S. ships often dock in Bahrain's territorial waters for fuel and supplies. The USS Luce, a guided missile cruiser equipped with 40 surface-to-air missiles, and the USS Boone, a guided missile frigate, were docked off Bahrain for supplies this week.

Tankers docked at Bahrain harbor were clustered around the U.S. warships.

Iran Says Nuclear Site Hit

By The Associated Press The International Atomic Energy Agency said today it had received a complaint from Iran protesting an Iraqi air attack on the site of an unfinished nuclear reactor.

A source in Vienna, Austria — the headquarters of the U.N.-affiliated agency — said there was no damage to the plant at Bushehr and there were no fissionable materials at the site when the attack occurred March 25.

has been at war with Iraq since September 1980.

The source, who declined to be identified, said experts from the West German firm which had been building the reactor went to the site this spring at the request of Iran government and were scheduled to complete feasibility studies this fall on the future of the project.

Hans-Friedrich Meyer, a spokesman for the atomic energy agency, said the Iranian complaint was addressed to the agency's Director General Hans Blix but had not been discussed in the Board of Governors because its last session was in February. The next board meeting will be June 5, but there was no official word whether the complaint would be on the agenda.

The agency was established by the United Nations in 1957 to promote peaceful use of atomic energy. It monitors nuclear plants and fuel processes in an effort to prevent their being used to make weapons.

Construction of the Bushehr reactor by the West German Kraftwerke Union began in 1976 but was suspended by the Khomeini regime after it ousted the shah and took power in 1979. Officials of the German company were not available when the Associated Press called the firm for comment.

U.S. Says Soviets Attacked Diplomat

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. diplomat serving in Leningrad was assaulted and kicked by two Soviets outside a Leningrad restaurant, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

U.S. authorities made a "very strong protest" to Soviet officials in Moscow, Leningrad and Washington about the April 17 incident, said the spokesman, who requested that he not be identified.

The diplomat, Vice Consul Ronald A. Harms, was leaving a restaurant in central Leningrad when he was "accosted by a couple of Soviets," the spokesman said.

"He was knocked to the ground and kicked," said the spokesman, adding that Harms did not require hospitalization. The spokesman said he believed Harms remained at his post at the U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

Harms, reached by telephone today in Leningrad, told The Associated Press that he could confirm only that an incident took place in which he was accosted by Soviets. He would not make any other comment.

The embassy spokesman said as far as he knew, Harms was not with any other diplomats or Americans when the incident occurred.

The embassy spokesman declined to comment on reports that Harms was meeting Soviet contacts, possibly dissidents, in the restaurant. He also did not say why the embassy and the U.S. State Department had not previously made the incident public.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — VOLUBLE MAILMEN AT CONVENTION ARE ADDRESSING A BIG AUDIENCE.
 Today's Cryptquip clue: R equals H

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

West Joins In As U.S. Criticizes Military Buildup By Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign ministers of the 16 NATO nations are meeting informally in a secluded 18th century mansion on Chesapeake Bay after hearing U.S. and West European leaders accuse the Soviet Union of a reckless and intimidating drive to achieve military superiority.

"Relations have gone down hill and we do not bear the responsibility," said French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson on Tuesday as he addressed the opening of a three-day meeting marking the 35th anniversary of the North Atlantic Alliance.

The Soviets, said Vice President George Bush, have laid down "a trail of adventurism" stretching from Asia to Africa to Latin America.

In their talks at Wye Plantation, a 23-bedroom Georgian mansion on a Maryland peninsula stretching into the waters of the Chesapeake, the 16 foreign ministers will discuss not only the state of East-West relations but such immediate issues as the Iran-Iraq war, with its threat to the flow of oil to the West.

Secretary of State George Shultz, the host for the first NATO parley to be held in the United States since 1969, is expected to use the private meetings to brief his colleagues on the U.S. decision to rush Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia to help protect shipping.

Also on the agenda is the postponement by the Netherlands of a decision to deploy 48 American-built cruise missiles to help counter the expanding force of Soviet SS-20 medium-range nuclear-tipped missiles.

In his opening address in the Dean Acheson auditorium of the State Department — a room named for the secretary of state who presided over the founding of NATO in 1949 — Cheysson said there can be no doubt of Moscow's "obstinate intention to place our alliance, or at least the continental European part of it, under fearful political and psychological pressure."

In his speech, Cheysson said the immediate cause of East-West tensions is the deployment of Soviet medium-range missiles aimed at Western Europe.

"No one can deny that this has changed, has broken the balance of forces," said the French foreign minister as he accused the Soviets of a "massive" military buildup "to acquire superiority and thus the power of intimidation."

Beginning with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and continuing through "the suppression of newly won liberties in Poland," Moscow has clearly demonstrated "the inadequacy of the concept of detente," Cheysson said.

In his welcoming address, Bush also said NATO allies have a duty to help developing Third World countries protect themselves and to ensure that their freedom and independence "is not destroyed by aggression and subversion."

He called on the Soviet Union to resume arms control negotiations. But he also said he was "not optimistic" about chances for quick progress in the negotiations in Geneva aimed at banning chemical weapons.

The vice president said it is vital that the unity of the alliance remain unbroken and said the allies should continue to seek a "more constructive relationship" with Moscow.

Cheysson was uncompromising in his criticism of the Soviets.

He accused Moscow of a "contempt for human rights," especially in the case of the hunger strike by Nobel-prize winning dissident Andrei Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, whom the Soviets refuse to permit to travel to the West for medical treatment.

"The symbolic image of the couple held at Gorky is present in the minds of all of us," Cheysson said of the Sakharovs.

Haitian Troops Kill 2 In Riot

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers patrolled two cities today after rioting broke out in Haiti for the second week in a row. A mob tried to storm a food warehouse, and two people reportedly died of gunshot wounds after troops fired at the crowd.

A Haitian army spokesman confirmed that troops were deployed to put down disturbances in Cap Haitien, the second largest city in this poverty-stricken Caribbean nation, but he said no one was injured.

The army spokesman, who would not give his name, said the soldiers "fired only in the air" and not at the mob surrounding the CARE warehouse. But an employee at Justinien Hospital in Cap Haitien said at least two people died of wounds from the rioting and several other people were hospitalized.

In Gonaives, a detachment of soldiers that quelled rioting there last week continued to patrol that town. Soldiers restored calm in Gonaives, on Haiti's west coast, after four days of disturbances sparked by alleged beatings of civilians by police.

The outbreak of rioting, something rarely seen since the authoritarian Duvalier family came to power in 1957, also has been attributed to high prices and food shortages aggravated by a drought.

In Cap Haitien, on Haiti's north coast, most stores and businesses were closed as soldiers patrolled to discourage looting and more violence.

According to two Cap Haitien residents who did not want their names used, peasants on Monday broke into a warehouse of CARE, an international relief agency, at the nearby town of Milot. On Tuesday morning, another mob attacked a larger CARE warehouse in Cap Haitien, but soldiers arrived and fired shots, the residents said.

Prefect Auguste Robinson went on Radio Cap Haitien to appeal for calm Tuesday afternoon. Four hours later, he made another radio address to deliver what he called "a personal message" from President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Robinson told residents that Duvalier had ordered him to oversee distribution of food donated by charity. Preferential distribution and misappropriation of the food will be "punished," Robinson said.

12 Earthquakes Hit Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A series of 10 earthquakes within four hours today shook western Honshu, Japan's main island, and two quakes jolted eastern Honshu, breaking windows and disrupting train service but causing no serious injuries, authorities said.

Of the 10 quakes in western Honshu, three of them registered 5.5 on the Richter scale, the Central Meteorological Agency said. The tremors, which began at mid-morning, were centered about 280 miles west of Tokyo.

The only reports of damage came from the southwest prefecture of Hyogo, where windows shattered and an employee at an agricultural cooperative was hurt by broken glass. Kyodo News Service said the quake broke windows at 16 public schools and cracked the walls of one school building.

At the Hyogo city of Miyazaki, near the center of the series of quakes, the tremors shattered window panes of the town hall, jolted objects to the floor and sent frightened employees rushing out into the street, Kyodo reported.

High-speed "Bullet Train" service between Osaka and Hakata on Kyushu, the southernmost main island, were halted for nearly three hours for rail inspection, inconveniencing nearly 150,000 passengers, the Japan National Railway said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. A quake of 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage.

Sakharov In Hospital

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet source said today that prominent dissident Andrei Sakharov has been hospitalized in Gorky because of complications from a hunger strike which he reportedly began May 2.

The report was the first word here on Sakharov's whereabouts since May 19, when dissident sources said his wife, Yelena Bonner, sent a telegram to his children in Moscow saying the physicist had been taken from their home May 7.

A spokesman for the Soviet Academy of Sciences, of which Sakharov is a member, told The Associated Press when asked if the report was true:

"I have no information if Sakharov was hospitalized or not. I just have the information which has been published in Izvestia on May 20."

He referred to the Soviet government newspaper, which carried a lengthy article May 20 accusing Mrs. Bonner of encouraging him to start a hunger strike to stir up anti-Soviet sentiment in the West.

The Soviet source, who is not a dissident and whose work gives him access to official information, said he heard that doctors ordered Sakharov hospitalized last Friday.

"They were very, very concerned about his health," said the source, who asked not to be identified. He said Soviet authorities were anxious to protect Sakharov's health because he is so well known in the West.

There was no explanation of the discrepancy between his information and Mrs. Bonner's report that Sakharov was taken away from their Gorky home on May 7.

The source said he did not know the whereabouts of Mrs. Bonner, and added, "You know she is under investigation under Article 190."

Here's an opportunity for you to test your analytical ability. Follow the play and decide whether declarer made any errors, and if so where.

The contract was a routine four spades, and West led the king of diamonds. When South contributed the queen, West shifted to the ten of clubs. Declarer covered in dummy with the jack, and captured East's king with the ace. He entered dummy with a trump, ruffed a diamond, crossed back to the table with another trump and ruffed dummy's last diamond. Now declarer tried to throw West in by cashing the jack of clubs and leading another club, but West was careful to unblock the nine and East won the third club.

The heart shift was automatic. Declarer had to finesse the queen, but when West won the king, declarer had to concede a second heart for down one.

Bad luck, or poor play? You are right if you picked the latter. Declarer should have made his contract with an elimination play.

Declarer should strive to keep East off lead. When West shifts to a club at trick two, it is a virtual certainty that East has the king of clubs. Therefore, declarer should not cover the ten of clubs.

Assume West continues with a club — as good a defense as any. Now declarer captures East's king, crosses to the board with a trump and ruffs a diamond. He draws another trump, cashes dummy's high club and leads the jack of diamonds — but he does not ruff! Instead, declarer discards a low heart. West wins the ace of diamonds to complete the defensive book, but he is then forced to bow the knee. He must either lead a heart into declarer's major tenace or a diamond, which will permit declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of hearts from his hand.

Coupon Shredding

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — The federal government plans this week to begin shredding 4.8 billion gas rationing coupons printed during the 1974 Arab oil embargo but never used, the U.S. Department of Energy says.

James Merna, DOE director of public affairs, said officials decided to shred and bury the coupons because they resemble $1 bills and might be fraudulently used in dollar-changing machines. The coupons have been in storage at a government facility here for the past decade.

The last time rationing coupons were used in the United States was during World War II, for gas, rubber and certain foods.

Merna said it will take about three weeks to destroy the coupons, packaged in about 3 million plastic-wrapped containers.

"It's an enormous task," he said. "It will take nine people about three weeks using fork lifts, bulldozers, tractors and trucks."

It cost the U.S. Bureau of Engraving and Printing up to $12 million to print the coupons, Merna said, adding it will cost $145,000 to destroy them.

White Sox Snap Toronto Streak

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Harold Baines and LaMarr Hoyt may be among the reasons the Chicago White Sox aren't running away with the American League West like last year. But they're also among the reasons the Toronto Blue Jays no longer have a seven-game winning streak.

Baines, hitting just .201 entering the game after a 25-homer, 105-RBI season a year ago, broke out with four hits as the White Sox topped the Blue Jays 8-1 Tuesday night. Hoyt, last year's American League Cy Young Award winner, broke a personal three-game losing streak, limiting Toronto to six hits over eight innings and running his record to 4-5.

"I try not to talk about slumps," Baines said after setting up the first White Sox run with a double, tripling home the second, and starting a six-run eighth inning with a single.

"I never lose confidence in my ability and I never have a negative attitude."

The Chicago win kept Toronto from moving closer in the American League East on the cooling-off Detroit Tigers, beaten 8-5 by the Oakland A's. It was the Tigers' fourth loss in five games and dropped them to a still torrid 36-9, still 5 1/2 games ahead of the Blue Jays, who have the second-best winning percentage in baseball.

In other AL contests, Kansas City topped Texas 7-5 in 10 innings, Milwaukee beat Cleveland 5-3, Baltimore edged Seattle 2-1 and California nipped New York 6-5.

The game in Boston between the Red Sox and the Minnesota Twins was rained out after four innings with Minnesota leading 5-0 and Frank Viola working on a one-hit, eighth strikeout game.

"We were pitching Baines wrong, making the wrong pitches," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "But he only hit one good one, really, that triple. The other ones just found holes."

But Baines, who was hitting line drives right at people earlier in the season, just smiled at that.

"That's part of baseball," he said. "Sometimes they just fall in."

A's 8, Tigers 5
Mike Heath had a three-run homer and Rickey Henderson a three-run triple to pace Oakland and give the Tigers a taste of the medicine they've been giving to the rest of the American League.

"We haven't had too many games like this. It's tough to play catch-up," said Detroit's Darrell Evans.

Bill Krueger, 3-1, was the winning pitcher and had the benefit of an 8-1 lead by the fifth inning.

"That's the kind of thing they've done all year. It's nice to be able to do it to them," said Krueger, who was battered by the Tigers in a loss at Detroit 11 days ago.

Chet Lemon had a homer for the Tigers as Milt Wilcox lost his second game in eight decisions.

Orioles 3, Mariners 2
With Seattle leading 2-1 and two outs in the top of the eighth, Mariners reliever Paul Mirabella decided to pitch around Eddie Murray. He walked him, then he walked Gary Roenicke and up came Benny Ayala, hitting .116.

Ayala bounced a single up the middle, scoring the tying and winning run.

Youth Baseball S. Pitt Little League

Chicod 20
Chicod Hornets 13
CHICOD - Chicod held off the Chicod Hornets and gained a 20-13 victory last night in the Southern Pitt Little League.

Chicod zoomed out to a 13-1 lead in the first three innings, then saw the Hornets rally for 11 in the top of the fourth. Chicod added six in the bottom of the inning, however, to insure the win.

Paul Jackson hurled the win and added two hits for Chicod. David Rhodes and Brent Elks also had two hits each.

David Beacham led the Hornets with two, one of them a homer.

Babe Ruth League

The two Babe Ruth League games scheduled for last night were rained out and have been reset for Sunday. Pepsi-Cola will meet Wachovia Bank and Planters Bank takes on Coca-Cola.

The two games set Monday night, Planters Bank vs. Brown & Wood, and Pepsi vs. Everett's Pest Control, have been rescheduled for Saturday.

Prep League

Last night's games in the Prep League, Shop-Eze Foodland vs. Garris-Evans, and First State Bank vs. Hendrix & Dail, were rained out and will be rescheduled for Thursday, June 7.

Little League

Yesterday's Little League games were rained out and have been rescheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday.

Coca-Cola will face the Optimists at Guy Smith field, while Pepsi-Cola takes on the Moose at Elm Street Park.

"Aggressive hitting really pays off," Ayala said. "I was trying to get down on it. Sometimes they're not going to be hit real hard. It found the right place."

Mark Langston, Seattle's rookie left-hander, struck out nine and seemed on the way to the win when he gave up a two-out single to Cal Ripken. That brought in Mirabella.

Tippy Martinez, 2-4, took over with one out and the bases loaded in the seventh, pitched out of the inning and went the rest of the way to pick up the win.

Angels 6, Yankees 5
Juan Beniquez had five consecutive singles as the Angels jumped out to a 6-1 lead, then survived three straight Yankee homers in the sixth inning to hold off the New Yorkers.

"I'm just trying to make contact and go with the pitch," said Beniquez, who now has 15 hits in his last 22 at-bats. "I'm playing more now and the weather is heating up. Being in the lineup gives me a chance to get in a lot of swings in batting practice."

Rod Carew added two singles to the 13-hit California attack, which drove Phil Niekro 7-3 from the mound in the fourth inning.

But the Yankees bounced back in the sixth on a two-run homer by Don Mattingly, then consecutive shots by Don Baylor and Dave Winfield. The last two came off Craig Swan, who relieved winning pitcher Frank LaCorte. LaCorte was making his first start since 1979.

Curt Kaufman and Luis Sanchez finished up for California, which also got a home run from Reggie Jackson.

Brewers 5, Indians 3
Moose Haas yielded two runs in the third inning, one on Brook Jacoby's fifth homer, but settled down and retired 19 of the last 21 batters.

"About the fourth or fifth inning I felt real good, that I could throw a strike anywhere with any pitch," said Haas, 3-4, who held Cleveland to six hits.

"I was in a good groove and it's probably the first time I've felt this way this year," he added.

Ben Oglivie had two run-scoring singles for Milwaukee as the Indians lost their fifth straight. Dan Spillner, 0-4, took the loss, giving up five runs on nine hits in 3 2/3 innings.

"Early in the season, we weren't getting those key hits with men in scoring position," Oglivie said. "I feel it's just a matter of time now until we start driving in some runs."

Royals 7, Rangers 5
Darryl Motley, who earlier had crashed a two-run homer, ripped a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning to give Kansas City the win.

The Rangers had rallied for three runs in the eighth before Motley cracked his single off the glove of second baseman Wayne Tolleson.

"The infield was in and I hit a high hopper and it went through," Motley said. "I didn't think it would be a base hit, but it jumped over his head. I thought it was going to be right at him."

George Brett and Dane Iorg, who had opened the inning with consecutive singles before Frank White was intentionally walked, scored on Motley's hit.

Minister Has Been To Jail

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Rev. Maurice McCrackin smiles in recalling his embarrassment the first time he held a picket sign to protest a segregated music school here in 1948.

"I was embarrassed, but once I got that sign up it was an emancipation for me," said the white, 78-year-old pastor of the Community Church of Cincinnati, a congregation of about 80 people, most of them black.

Since then, he has been jailed dozens of times during protests for human rights, civil rights, peace, anti-nuclear and anti-war movements, and for not paying income taxes.

"I haven't filed a (tax) form since 1955. I spent six months in jail, but I never paid," said McCrackin. He refuses to pay taxes because, he says, the government uses the money for war.

McCrackin was reared as a Presbyterian in Monmouth, Ill. His brother and sister became medical missionaries in Africa. He was ordained as a Presbyterian minister, but the Presbytery removed him from his Cincinnati church in 1962 and nullified his ordination in 1963.

"I was an embarrassment to them. I was keeping the church from getting money," he says. But he also saw that as another emancipation.

"I was freed from all that," he said, referring to church duties, meetings and gatherings.

Reagan 'Fails' On Wildlife Report

2 WASHINGTON (AP) — A wildlife group says the Reagan administration has improved its attitude on preserving endangered species but still deserves an unfavorable report cards.
 The organization, Defenders of Wildlife, said efforts by the Interior Department to save such well known threatened species as the bald eagle and the grizzly bear deserve commendation.
 In a report on government compliance with the Endangered Species Act in the decade since it was passed, the organization gave the Reagan administration grades of "F" for budgeting and listing of species; "D plus" for efforts to save already listed species and "C" for attitude, up from "F" under former Interior Secretary James Watt.

 Martha Stout, one of the authors of the report, said that even though species are being added to the endangered list at a faster rate than ever before, "they will never catch up."
 The organization estimated that seven species become extinct every year.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged again today, continuing their month-long decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.98 to 1,095.26 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by almost 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was little in the news to help the market halt its recent slide.

Bond prices fell and long-term interest rates rose in the credit markets this morning. High yields on interest-bearing investments tend to attract money away from stocks.

The Commerce Department reported a record trade deficit for April, with imports exceeding exports by $12.19 billion.

Today's early prices included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/8 at 15 1/2; Florida Power & Light, down 1/4 at 35 3/8, and Signal Cos., unchanged at 26 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.86 to 1,101.24. It was the lowest close for Wall Street's best-known indicator since it finished at 1,096.94 on Feb. 23, 1983.

Declining issues outpaced advances by 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index fell 0.67 to 86.45.

Big Board volume totaled 69.06 million shares, against 78.19 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 0.86 at 197.49.

Kroger Plans Store Closings

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Kroger Co., which pledged last month to fight declining profits with staff reductions and more favorable union contracts, is closing 18 supermarkets in northeastern Ohio.

The June 30 closings will affect 1,496 employees. Company spokesman Jim McIntire said continued losses at the stores in Akron, Canton, Mentor, Norwalk and Bellevue were responsible for their shutdown.

He blamed competition and operational costs.

The announcement of the closings follows by three months the sale of 45 Kroger stores in the Pittsburgh area to Wetterau Inc. of St. Louis. In March, Kroger said it was closing nine stores in Pennsylvania and one in Salem, Ohio.

Kroger cited stiff competition and reduced food inflation rates for lower earnings in 1983 and each of the last two quarters. Net income dropped in 1983 to $41.68 million from $60.07 million in 1982.

Kroger, the nation's second-largest supermarket chain, said its distribution center and offices in Solon will be closed by mid-July. The company will immediately begin negotiations to sell the closed stores, McIntire said.

Kroger is seeking a new labor contract to reduce costs at its 28 remaining northeastern Ohio stores to give them an opportunity to compete successfully, McIntire said. The current contract expires in September.

McIntire said the company made no attempt to renegotiate union contracts for the stores set for closing.

"We had no realistic expectation for improvement in those stores," he said.

States Get Right To Force Owners To Sell Property

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that states may force landowners to sell off their property so that more residents have a chance to buy smaller parcels of land.

In an 8-0 decision, the court upheld a "land reform" program in Hawaii designed to break-up a land-owning concentration that has its roots 200 years ago during the reign of King Kamehameha.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, in her opinion for the court, said that states may use their so-called condemnation powers to transfer property from one private owner to another as long as the aim is a broad public benefit such as alleviating a housing shortage.

"Government does not itself have to use property to legitimate the taking," she wrote. "It is only the taking's purpose, and not its mechanics, that must pass (constitutional) scrutiny."

In the case of Hawaii, "no purely private taking is involved," she said. "The Hawaii Legislature enacted its land reform act not to benefit a particular class of identifiable individuals, but to attack certain perceived evils of concentrated property ownership."

The federal government and states commonly invoke their condemnation powers — forcing private owners to sell at a fair price — to use land for such public purposes as parkland or highways.

In 1967, Hawaii enacted a land reform law that authorized the state housing authority to transfer property to those who had been renting

Nuclear Power Plant Operating

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Washington Public Power Supply System's first operating nuclear power plant has started up nearly 12 years after work on it began at a cost seven times the original projection, officials say.
 Plant No. 2 is the only one of the five units begun by WPPSS that is generating power. Two units were mothballed and work on two others was abandoned, leading to a default on $2.25 billion in bonds.
 It was estimated at groundbreaking on Aug. 12, 1972, that Plant No. 2 would cost $450 million. With interest and financing, the cost is now put at $3.2 billion, WPPSS spokesman Gary Petersen said Monday.

Concepcion Powers Reds' Victory

By The Associated Press

Dave Concepcion has become quite a joker, but he won't get many laughs from the Pittsburgh Pirates.

When Concepcion came to bat with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning Tuesday night and the Cincinnati Reds locked in a 4-4 tie with Pittsburgh, he told Pirate catcher Tony Pena that he was going to end the game with one swing.

"When I got to home plate, I said to Pena, 'I know you're going to call a pitch right here, and I'm going to hit it out.' I was joking with him," Concepcion said.

The shortstop came up a few feet short on his bold prediction, bouncing a ground-rule double over the center-field wall. But he still managed to score the winning run in a 5-4 victory that extended the Reds' winning streak to four and moved them to within a half-game of the lead in the National League West.

Rain, which forced the postponement of two NL games on Memorial Day, again claimed three more — Los Angeles at Montreal, San Diego at New York and San Francisco at Philadelphia.

In the only other NL games, Atlanta beat Chicago 7-4 and Houston edged St. Louis 1-0.

Concepcion's double came off reliever Kent Tekulve, 1-5, who then walked Wayne Krenchicki intentionally. Ron Oester coaxed Tekulve for yet another walk to load the bases, and with the Pirate infield and outfield drawn in, pinch-hitter Brad Gudden hit a high-bouncing grounder that third baseman Bill Madlock snared with a leap.

But his throw home tailed away from Pena and cost the Pirates the game.

"I think a good throw would have had me," Concepcion said. "But it was a tough play for him to get in position to throw it."

The error capped a game in which the Reds wasted a two-run lead and had to overcome a two-run deficit to win.

Nick Esasky slammed a solo homer in the second inning, his first since April 10, and Pirates starter Larry McWilliams walked Concepcion with the bases loaded to force in a run in the third.

Esasky's throwing error let in a run and set up another as the Pirates tied it in the fourth. Lee Lacy slammed his third home run of the season — all against the Reds — in the fifth to give Pittsburgh a 4-2 lead.

McWilliams, who was kicked in the arm on a putout at first base in the fifth, gave way to reliever Lee Tunnell to start the sixth. Dann Biardello promptly hit a two-run homer, his first of the year, to tie it.

Ted Power, 2-0, the third Cincinnati reliever, made his major league-leading 26th appearance of the season and shut out the Pirates on one hit over the last two innings.

Braves 7, Cubs 4

Atlanta kept pace with the Reds the hard way, rallying to win for the 10th time this season, this time from a 4-0 first-inning deficit.

Bob Horner led the way with two doubles and two singles to drive in three runs.

With the score tied 4-4, Horner legged out his second double to lead off the eighth and scored the go-ahead run when reliever Warren Brusstar, 1-1, walked Albert Hall with the bases loaded. Alex Trevino followed with a two-run single.

Brusstar thought plate umpire Gerry Davis missed several calls, including the final pitch to Hall.

"He took the last pitch away, and that was definitely the biggest pitch of the ball game," Brusstar said.

Horner's heroics enabled Pascual Perez to lift his record to 4-1.

Leon Durham cracked a two-run single to boost his RBI total for the year to 39 and Ron Cey followed with his eighth homer in the first inning, but it wasn't enough to prevent the fourth loss in a row for the Cubs.

They held a half-game lead over Philadelphia in the NL East.

Astros 1, Cardinals 0

Bob Knepper and Frank DiPino combined on a three-hit shutout and Jerry Mumphrey got a measure of revenge as Houston handed St. Louis its seventh loss in eight games.

"I get a kick out of playing the Cardinals," said Mumphrey, who was drafted by St. Louis in 1971 and played over 500 games for them before being traded in 1979. "Any player would probably feel the same way."

Mumphrey drove in the game's only run in the sixth inning off loser Dave LaPoint. Kevin Bass led off with a double, took third on Jim Pankovits' sacrifice, and scored on Mumphrey's double to right.

LaPoint, 5-6, struck out eight.

Knepper, 5-5, allowed only one hit through the first seven innings before leaving with two outs and the bases loaded in the eighth. DiPino got Tom Herr to line out on his first pitch to end threat and retired the side in order in the ninth for his seventh save. "We've been struggling," said Herr. "We haven't been getting the hit with runners in scoring position with two out all year."

"I would certainly say this team is frustrated right now."

Williams, Cronin Return

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Williams hit his 521st home run off Baltimore's Jack Fisher in his final major league at-bat on Sept. 28, 1960.

He circled the bases to the cheers of about 10,000 fans and jogged directly into the Boston dugout and retirement.

Williams stubbornly refused to doff his cap. His only acknowledgment of the cheers was a quick wave.

Williams, who will be 66 in August, didn't have a cap to doff at Fenway Park Tuesday night. But he did even better.

With Joe Cronin in a wheelchair, Williams spoke for both himself and his old Red Sox teammate and manager. And he said it all.

"Baseball is the greatest in Boston and the fans are the greatest — and I salute you," Williams said.

Then, the onetime "Splendid Splinter" got into a golfcart and was driven around the inner walls of the park.

He held aloft a plaque with just the number "9" and waved to acknowledge a standing ovation. Cronin, approaching 78 and ailing, sat in a rooftop luxury box overlooking third base.

Cronin's old No. 4 and Williams' No. 9 were retired in special ceremonies on the Red Sox' annual Jimmy Fund Night.

Cronin, who went from the streets of San Francisco, to All-Star player, to the Hall of Fame to the presidency of the American League, was represented on the field by members of his family.

Mrs. Jean Yawkey, president and a co-owner of the Red Sox, directed the unveiling of the numbers posted under the Jimmy Fund sign on the roof in right field.

They are the first numbers ever retired by the Red Sox. Cronin's No. 4 was worn by several players after he moved up from manager to general manager in 1948. However, no one has worn No. 9 since Williams donned it in 1939.

Cronin and Williams were presented the Thomas A. Yawkey Memorial Award for their longtime efforts in helping the Jimmy Fund, the fund-raising arm of the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Williams, heavier but still very active, then took the microphone for a brief acceptance speech.

"I wish I had the ability to say what's in my heart tonight," said Williams, who hit 344 with 521 homers in a fabulous career interrupted by two wars — World War II and the Korean War.

Williams went on to say that the biggest break he ever got was being purchased by the Red Sox and then playing for Cronin as manager.

"I can't tell you how important he was to me," Williams said after a wave to his old boss. "I had understanding from a very, very wonderful man. He taught so many players so much."

"Joe Cronin was a great player, a great manager, a wonderful father. No one respects you more than I do, Joe. I love you. In my book, you're a great man."

Cronin later held an impromptu news conference in which he recalled stories about Williams.

"He loved a challenge," Cronin said. "He was easy to manage. He never missed the bus. He always was on time."

Heavy rain, which washed out the scheduled game between the Red Sox and Minnesota with the Twins leading 5-0 after four innings, prevented Williams from taking special batting practice for the benefit of fans.

Asked if he could still hit a home run here, he quipped:

"Give me three days of practice and a strong wind blowing out and I'd bet on myself."

Bean Is Among Kemper Favorites

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — It's a rule of thumb on the PGA Tour that the men who are playing well at a particular time tend to continue to play well.

And that puts the spotlight squarely on Andy Bean, Payne Stewart and Gil Morgan going into the Thursday start of the $400,000 Kemper Open.

Bean, already a winner this year, played his last two rounds in 67, 67 at the Memorial tournament last weekend and took Jack Nicklaus to a three-hole playoff before a putting lapse cost him the title.

"I'm playing well, making a lot of birdies. I'm not disappointed. I'm just pleased to be playing this well. Maybe this will be the week," Bean said.

Stewart, who came out of the pack with a birdie-birdie-birdie-par-eagle burst during the final round of the Memorial, is on a roll of his own. He's finished second and third in his last two starts.

And Dr. Gil Morgan, the non-practicing optometrist, has recorded three thirds and a sixth in his last five starts.

Craig Stadler, a winner in Dallas three weeks ago, has tailed off slightly in his last two starts but, for a different reason, must be considered a very important factor in the 156-man field that will be playing the tough, 7,173-yard, par 72 Congressional Country Club course in suburban Washington, D.C.

It is, almost certainly, Stadler's favorite playground. He has won this tournament two of the last four times it has been played here, and was second in another one.

"It just seems there are certain horses for certain courses," he shrugged. "This just happens to be a course I play well."

Fred Couples, the defending titleholder and winner of the Tournament Players Championship earlier this season, PGA titleholder Hal Sutton and U.S. Open champ Larry Nelson also are major contenders.

Winners of 1984 Tour titles included in the lineup are Peter Jacobsen, Bob Eastwood, Hale Irwin, John Mahaffey and Tom Purtzer.

The foreign contingent is led by South African Gary Player and his son Wayne, and also includes Australian Greg Norman.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Scientist Says Space Colonies Possible In Next 500 Years

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Hitching rides on comets or riding space schooners with vast microwave-catching sails, explorers could open the way for Earth colonies to be established throughout the solar system and beyond within the next 500 years, a government scientist says.

"A human migration into space is completely compatible with who we are," said Eric M. Jones, an astrophysicist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico. "One of our basic instincts is our urge to explore."

Jones outlined his vision of the trek to the stars in a talk and paper delivered Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Within the next 500 years or so, one trillion human beings will inhabit the solar system's planets, moons, asteroids and comets, Jones said.

By then, the goal will be the distant stars beyond the solar system, he said. The first target might be Barnard's star, a neighbor six light years away, he said.

The trip there could take 60 years. Jones envisions colonists setting off in "fastships," space schooners pulled along by vast sails that capture microwaves.

Once they get to the new star's planets, semi-intelligent robots would start building habitats and pulling together the supplies needed for human life. Humans would be employed mainly as troubleshooters, he said.

Other explorers might hitch rides on comets that wander through interstellar space for a slower but more fuel-efficient journey to distant worlds, he said. Groups of 500 people could live indefinitely off the resources of a single comet, and these drifting human colonies could reach the nearest stars in 100,000 years.

Eight million years from now, our descendants will have colonized the entire galaxy, he predicted.

If humans can inexorably spread this way throughout the cosmos, Jones reasoned, so too would other galactic civilizations — if they exist.

"Where is everybody?" he asked. "My answer is, 'We are alone.'"

However, Frank D. Drake, an astronomer from Cornell, counters that travel between the stars is simply too expensive, and that's why spaceships don't visit Earth.

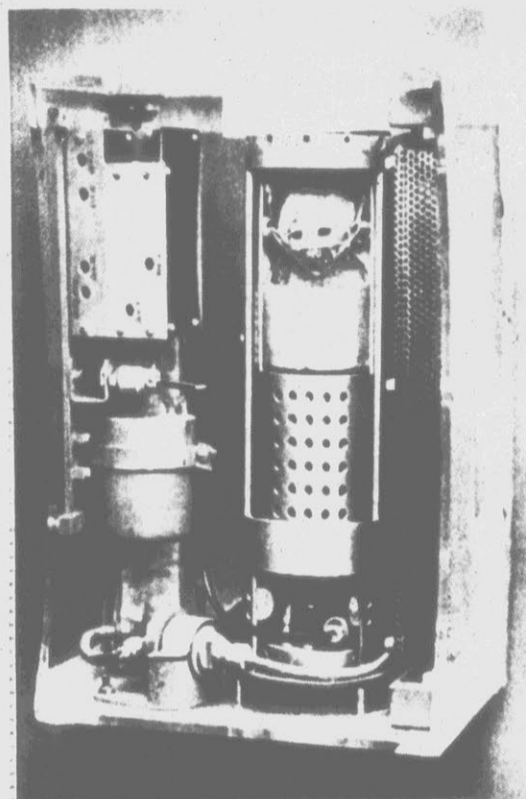

"A rational and intelligent civilization will not strike off on such a venture," Drake told the conference. "The right place for colonization is your own solar system."

Jones agrees that the solar system will be the springboard for earthlings' venture into extraterrestrial living. The first stop will be the moon, he said.

"Because lunar gravity is weak," he said, "the moon represents a tremendous reservoir of resources in our back yard."

With a moon base fitted out with mines, smelters and a power station, people could build space cities and launch them cheaply into the solar system.

The next goal would be gigantic power plants, constructed with raw material from Mercury, that will circle the sun and capture its energy. Then humans can set up housekeeping on the asteroids, planets and even the comets that rotate the sun, he said.

SPACE ANNIVERSARY — America's first female in space, "Miss Baker," along with her male companion, "Abel," were the first animals launched into space and recovered alive. Her 15-minute flight was on May 28,

Old Cemetery May Provide Clue To Early Black Culture

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 19th-century cemetery uncovered during construction of a subway tunnel may provide clues to the largely unrecorded history of black urban culture prior to the Civil War, archaeologists say.

Experts believe the First African Baptist Church Cemetery is the first burial ground for free blacks to be excavated in an urban area, said Michael Parrington, chief archaeologist of John Milner Associates, the West Chester firm directing the project.

"We know so little about urban black residents from historical sources," Parrington said Tuesday. "The things we are finding here are in some ways like a historical document, and we're trying to read the pages."

The cemetery, just off a downtown expressway, was discovered in November 1980 when workers digging a subway tunnel hit a wooden coffin.

The city halted construction and sealed off the area for archaeologists, who began their excavation last year.

"One of our goals was to see how free black people adapted to the white culture they found here," Parrington said.

In the South, slaves were buried according to their masters' style, leaving no clues to black customs, Parrington said.

But at the Philadelphia site, archaeologists found remains of two bodies with ceramic plates on their stomachs, signs of an African custom of burying the dead with vessels they had used, Parrington said.

In addition, five coffins were found with a single shoe on the lids, he said, adding, "We haven't researched that sufficiently to see where that derives from."

Researchers also hope to learn about the health of blacks in Philadelphia in the 1800s. Bones uncovered at the site will be studied for diet and evidence of disease, Parrington said.

"They appear to have had anemia, which is a dietary deficiency, and many of the adults have fractures, indicating a lot of manual labor," Parrington said.

About 40 percent of those buried at the cemetery were infants, and the average age of death was 33, he said.

All the remains are being studied by the Smithsonian Institution, Parrington said.

Health and property records show that the First African Baptist Church was formed in 1809 by 13 blacks, Parrington said. Eventually, the church split into two groups. The group that used the cemetery eventually disappeared, and the city Redevelopment Authority took over the 60-by-20-foot site.

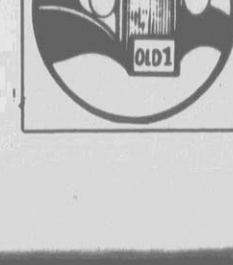

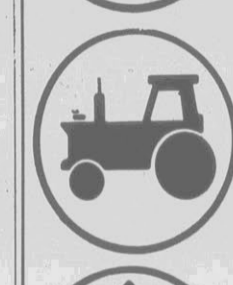

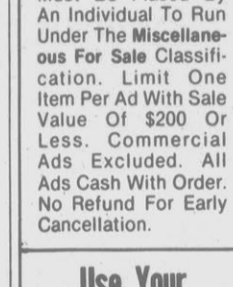

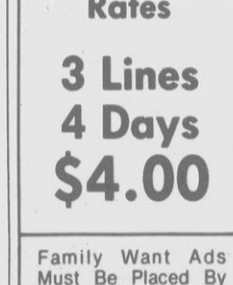

Community groups have been closely following the excavation, Parrington said. Tours are encouraged, and many visitors wander in from the street.

The remains of 78 bodies have been identified, and about 30 more may be found, Parrington said. The deepest burial was about 7 feet, and the remains of five or six bodies have been found together in one plot, he said.

City Board of Health records listed the names of 60 people buried at the site, along with addresses, ages and some occupations. One woman, in her 50s, was a midwife from Virginia. Another was a 94-year-old man, James Anderson, who was born in Africa.

Property records show that Henry Simmons, pastor of the First African Baptist Church and apparently a wealthy man, owned the cemetery in the 1820s. By 1836, complaints were made to the Board of Health about the crowded state of the graveyard, and three years later the board closed it.

Although more research is needed, Parrington said, the discoveries so far are exciting.

The last annular solar eclipse visible from North America this century occurs today. "Annular" means that the moon almost but not quite covers the sun. The oldest event that can be dated to the exact date is a war that was ended by a solar eclipse. The armies of Lydia and Media were preparing for battle when the eclipse occurred, and they signed a peace treaty. Modern astronomers have fixed the date of that eclipse as May 28th, 585 B.C.

DO YOU KNOW — How many lunar eclipses can occur in one year?

More Hurricanes Forecast

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — There'll be more hurricanes in the Atlantic this season, predict forecasters who say there's no way to tell if a major storm may hit the South Carolina coast.

During a seminar on hurricane awareness here Tuesday, Hurricane Specialist Robert Sheets of the National Hurricane Center in Miami said the El Nino effect has weakened and the hurricane season this year should be near-normal.

El Nino is the upper atmosphere disturbance which has generally prevented storms from forming in the Atlantic during the past two years but has resulted in a higher-than-normal number of storms in the eastern Pacific.

Speaking only three days before the official start of the hurricane season, Sheets said only four storms formed in the Atlantic last year.

One of those came ashore as a major hurricane — Alicia which slammed into Texas claiming 17 lives and causing $1 billion damage last August.

"You have to look back to 1930 and '31 to find two consecutive years which have had as low of hurricane activity as we have had for the past two seasons," Sheets told about 75 people attending the seminar.

He noted in a normal year, about 10 storms develop and six become hurricanes.

Sheets added that while people both in the Carolinas and Florida have suggested their states are overdue for a major storm, it's hard to predict where such storms are likely.

During the 1940s, he said, most of the big hurricanes hit Florida. During the 1950s, they were more likely to hit the Carolinas and on up the East Coast.

Since about 1960, most of the big hurricanes have smashed into the Gulf States. "When that cycle will change, we don't really know," he said.

Sheets also discussed the new hurricane probability forecasts which project landfall for the storm as many as three days in advance.

He cautioned the forecasts are only guides and predict the landfall of the eye of the storm, noting that hurricane conditions could hit the location many hours earlier. Sheets said that along the Gulf Coast the problem with evacuations has increased, even in areas that have been hit in recent years by storms.

He said where single-family homes were destroyed, developers are now putting in condominiums which mean more people to evacuate.

Also during the seminar, Brian Jarvinen of the National Hurricane Center discussed the SLOSH program.

SLOSH stands for Sea, Lake and Overland Surge from Hurricanes. SLOSH projects which areas might be flooded by hurricanes of a certain intensity.

SLOSH models for the lower South Carolina Coast have already been developed.

As part of the model, planners have timetables showing how soon critical points such as roads and bridges might be inundated in the event of a major storm.

Asheville Douses No-Smoking Ban

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Asheville City Council doused a proposed ban on smoking in some retail establishments Tuesday, while giving tentative approval to a new fire prevention code.

The council was trying to regulate potential fire hazards with the revised code. But its members shied away from a controversial stand on smoking in public places.

But prohibitions against smoking in elevators and in public and private hospitals were left intact in the ordinance.

The ordinance without the retail smoking ban passed its second reading on a 5-2 vote. As amended Tuesday, the code still gives the fire marshal discretion to post no smoking signs in businesses determined to be fire hazards.

The revised fire code will go into effect if passed on third reading next week.

Asheville Fire Department officials presented the reworked code last week to city council with the smoking ban.

Drawn from the National Fire Protection Association code, the ordinance would have outlawed smoking in retail stores with capacity of 200 or more people or with at least 25 employees. Violations of the code would have brought a $25 fine against offending smokers.

A survey of 100 businesses found 52 were in favor of such a ban, 23 against it and 22 neutral, according to Assistant Fire Chief J.J. Causey. Many store managers cited damaged merchandise due to careless smokers.

Four States Want Man Held In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A man being held on counterfeiting charges in the Mecklenburg County Jail will first be tried in North Carolina and then may be moved to any of four states who want to try him on a variety of other charges, authorities say.

"His file looks like a Sears and Roebuck catalogue," said U.S. Marshall Max Wilson said. "It's about two inches thick. He's got a long, long record," including three or four pages of sentences already served.

U.S. Marshall Max Wilson said warrants or verbal detainers for James M. Debardeleben have come in from Virginia, Missouri, Connecticut and Maryland.

Wilson said Debardeleben will be tried first in North Carolina. "Then I'll have to decide what detainer to recognize first."

Debardeleben was brought to Charlotte March 8 on charges of passing four counterfeit bills in a Gastonia shopping mall in April 1983, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Andresen of Charlotte said.

Debardeleben is scheduled for trial June 11, Andresen said.

"We are attempting to determine if he is responsible for any other crimes other than those he's charged with," said Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. "I can't speculate on what other crimes those might be. That's what we're trying to find out."

The Shreveport (La.) Journal reported in a copyright story on Thursday that authorities had discovered a trove of evidence that makes them believe Debardeleben may have kidnapped, raped and murdered at least 40 young women in journeys through the South and up the Eastern Seaboard.

The evidence included pornographic photographs, tape-recorded screams of terrified women and a detailed travel log that placed him in cities where dozens of unsolved murders are still on the books, the newspaper quoted the authorities as saying.

Bossier City (La.) Chief of Detectives Scotty Henderson said Thursday Debardeleben remains the primary suspect in the 1982 strangulation and stabbing death of real estate agent Jean McPhaul, and Arkansas authorities say they plan to talk to Debardeleben about the 1978 disappearance and presumed slaying of part-time real estate agent Mary Jimmy "Bo Bo" Shinn, 25.

Debardeleben was arrested by Secret Service agents outside a shopping mall in Maryville, Tenn., in May 1983. He was transferred to North Carolina after receiving a 35-year sentence for counterfeiting in Tennessee.

"When he was arrested just outside the mall, the agents searched him and found a North Carolina driver's license bearing a name that later turned out to be phony, 13 more counterfeit $20 bills and a loaded .22-caliber pistol," said Charles Fels, the Assistant U.S. Attorney who successfully prosecuted Debardeleben in Knoxville, Tenn.

Professor Sees Lack Of Experts

RALEIGH (AP) — A decline in the number of agricultural scientists is already being felt and it will take a concerted effort by the government to prevent a shortage which could hurt agricultural development, a North Carolina State University professor says.

Dr. Edward W. Glazener, associate dean of academic affairs in the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at NCSU, said the shortage will be caused by an unusually large number of retirements in colleges of agriculture, state agricultural experiment stations and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"These shortages will hurt the development of new technologies, which are needed to keep American agriculture competitive in markets both at home and around the world," Glazener said.

A symposium Glazener arranged on the shortage problem was held Tuesday in New York City during the 1984 American Association of Science annual meeting.

He said technology will be hurt because the shortage will come when technology is being used more for greater productivity and quality on American farms.

Glazener predicted the shortages will occur at the both the bachelor's and doctoral degree levels.

He said the most pressing of the shortages comes in the agriculture doctoral programs, where there aren't enough students to replace retiring scientists.

"The decline is already being felt," he said, adding that nationwide, the freshman class in agricultural sciences at land grant universities dropped 10 percent in the fall of 1983.
