Merger Decision Put Off Several Weeks

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

It will be at least several more weeks before the Pitt County Board of Education is ready to announce its position on the question of consolidating the county and Greenville school systems, Mark Owens, chairman of the county school board suggested Wednesday.

Owens, speaking at a joint meeting of the city and county school boards and the Board of County Commissioners, said "we welcome the opportunity for the three boards to come together" to work toward a solution of the problems facing the schools. But he said the county school board was "not in a position to make a recommendation" on the Research Triangle Institute study of the feasibility of merging the two school systems. That study was completed in September 1983.

Although Owens said the question of consolidation "needs to be resolved," he suggested, "When you are dealing with emotions ... lives of young people ... to take an extra second, it is fitting."

Owens then explained that the county school board plans to "go back to the local advisory councils, relate to them what these (RTI) reports mean to us as board members, and get suggestions from them on what will make the report a better report."

"This is not an effort to long this thing out," Owens emphasized. "Our recommendations will be based on the recommendations we get from these meetings."

R.L. "Bob" Martin, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, said the session was being held "at the request of the city school board, in order that we might speak to the RTI study and recommendations."

Jack Wall, chairman of the city school board, told commissioners and county school board members that "we're telling you we endorse the RTI study, which is to merge" the two school systems, and "we need an answer as soon as possible."

"We are in a situation where we need an answer as soon as possible," Wall said again, because of the resignation earlier this month of Delma Blinson as superintendent of the city system "and a couple of other situations."

Closing the meeting, Martin said the city board "has some momentous decisions to make," but "if you're (the county board) not ready ... we can't ask you for an answer."

According to Martin, "What we need to do is keep the three boards together ... have it resolved somehow in the near future."

He then said he would schedule another meeting between the two school boards and the commissioners "in 30 days or so ... to hear what you have done."

The RTI study listed several options, including maintaining two school systems in the county. However, the study recommended the consolidation of the city and county schools as "superior" to the other options in terms of its "impact on the issues and concerns" facing the schools and in terms of "its potential for long-range planning for public education in the total county."

The RTI study suggested that if the problems facing the school systems are not resolved "their economic implications could seriously jeopardize the ability of both school systems" to maintain quality programs.

Economic Activity Slows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.5 percent in April but new orders to factories for manufactured goods dropped at the fastest rate in four years, the government reported today.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the relatively modest increase in the Index of Leading Indicators meant that "less robust economic growth lies ahead." And the factory orders report, also issued by the Commerce Department, seemed to carry the same message.

New orders dropped 3.6 percent to $189.1 billion in April, marking the largest one-month slide since a 3.9 percent decrease in May 1980.

The big decline had been expected in light of a recent report that orders for factory durable goods — about half the total orders — had recorded their biggest drop since the same month in 1980. However, the new figure on the overall decline, including a 44.8 percent plunge in the volatile category of military hardware, was striking all the same.

The leading indicators report, on the other hand, showed that statistics designed to forecast the nation's future economic health resumed their upward trend in April after a one-month dip.

Noting that recent gains in the indicators index have been smaller than during many months last year, Baldrige said, "After a year and one half of vigorous rebound, smaller gains in the Index of Leading Indicators and in many other economic statistics are a normal development signaling a more moderate, sustainable growth period ahead."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the April figures "show the economy to be moving ahead at a brisk but sustainable pace."

Pitt Jury Says 'No Negligence'

A civil court jury Wednesday took 21 minutes to return a decision favorable to a Greenville physician charged in a complaint filed in July 1980 with negligence in the death of Harold M. McGrath, 63.

The jury said there was "no negligence" on the part of Dr. Jack Wilkerson in his treatment of McGrath.

Mildred McGrath, a former member of the Greenville City Council, had sought "compensatory damages in excess of $10,000" in connection with the death of her husband in October 1979.

The complaint charged that as a result of surgery in January 1974, McGrath was diagnosed as having carcinoma of the pancreas, and that Wilkerson "prescribed and directed that" McGrath be given a treatment "commonly known as chemotherapy ... without a biopsy of the pancreas having been done."

The complaint also alleged that the drug prescribed "was an improper choice to be administered" even if McGrath had had cancer of the pancreas.

Several physicians who testified during the trial, which began last week, said Wilkerson's handling of the patient was proper, and that performing a biopsy on the pancreas to diagnose cancer was frowned upon because of possible complications.

Judge James E. Strickland presided over the trial in Pitt County Superior Court.

Rebel Leader Hit By Blast

LA PENCA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora was wounded and five people, including an American journalist, were killed when a bomb exploded as about 16 journalists ringed the guerrilla leader for a news conference.

The explosion, which Red Cross officials in Costa Rica said injured at least 28 people and killed five, occurred Wednesday night about one mile from the Costa Rican border. Pastora's guerrilla forces have been fighting in the region against troops of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Among those killed was Linda Frazier, 38, a reporter for the Tico Times newspaper in San Jose, Costa Rica, and wife of AP Central American correspondent Joseph B. Frazier, according to Miguel Carmona, general director of the Costa Rican Red Cross.

Mrs. Frazier, who had been a stringer for the AP in Costa Rica, was from Portland, Ore., and formerly worked for The Oregonian newspaper there. Mrs. Frazier and her husband had a 10-year-old son. She was the 14th foreign journalist to be killed in Central America.

Pastora, 48, was wounded in the heel, according to his nephew, Leonel Pastora, a member of his uncle's Costa Rican-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, known by its Spanish initials ARDE.

Carmona said Red Cross workers evacuated 20 injured people and that there were more to be moved to hospitals. Other Red Cross officials put the number of injured at 28.

Among the injured was AP correspondent Reid G. Miller, who said by telephone from a hospital in Quesada, Costa Rica, that he sustained shrapnel wounds and burns. Another journalist reported seriously hurt was Susan Morgan of Newsweek magazine.

The identities of the other four people killed were not immediately known. Costa Rican Justice Minister Angel Solano said in a radio broadcast that a Costa Rican cameraman was among those killed.

About 16 journalists were gathered on the second floor of Pastora's headquarters when the bomb went off at about 7:30 p.m. (9:30 p.m. EDT). The explosives apparently had been planted in the building.

After the blast, there was an immediate burst of automatic rifle fire, apparently from Pastora's men outside the building.

Pastora's news conference was held in a warehouse-type building in a jungle area that has been controlled by ARDE rebels, and Pastora's headquarters had been in that area.

Radio Havana, in a broadcast monitored in Miami, said "unconfirmed reports indicate that the explosive was set by a couple pretending to be journalists."

Union Carbide To Get Award

Union Carbide Corporation's Battery Products Division in Greenville has earned a special award from the N.C. Department of Labor for on-the-job safety after compiling nearly 1.9 million safe employee hours without a lost time or disabling injury.

The Labor Department's award will be presented at a dinner in Greenville on Tuesday by Michael D. Ragland, deputy labor commissioner for health and safety. The dinner will be held at 7 p.m. at the Sheraton.

Union Carbide ran up the safety record for the period April 10-Dec. 31 in 1983.

Thirty-nine other businesses, government units and service establishments will receive safe safety awards at the dinner, which will be co-sponsored for the 10th consecutive year by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Welcoming guests will be Dr. Jon B. Tingelstad, chairman of both the chamber board of directors and the department of pediatrics, East Carolina University School of Medicine.

East Plans To Campaign For Helms And Reagan

Sen. John East said in a news conference late this morning that much of his time off during the numerous Congressional recesses coming up during the remainder of this year will be spent campaigning for Jesse Helms and Ronald Reagan.

He named various places in the state he has visited already on behalf of Helms and Reagan. He said he expects this state's 13 electoral college votes to go to Reagan in the November general election.

He reported that his two major efforts on the Senate floor lately have been to work to support President Reagan's aid to Central America package, i.e., to defeat any amendments to it and to support James Harvey Wilkinson III's appointment as a 5th Circuit Court judge.

East said he has also been vocal against the efforts to require stronger warning labeling on tobacco products packages and feels he and his allies have been successful in the Senate so far. He said he will not go along with any compromise in the House about the proposed labeling changes, which he called "harsh and punitive." He said he agreed with Sen. Helms' public statement that the proposed stronger labeling is "unwarranted and unnecessary."

East said Gov. Jim Hunt has resorted to demagoguery in calling for the resignation of Surgeon General C. Everett Koop for having said that this will be a smokeless society by the year 2000.

Wife Resents Disabled Husband's Treatment

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a handsome man in his 30s who is totally disabled due to an accident. He's a quadriplegic who has not regained his ability to speak and must be fed through a tube.

I know he understands what is being said to him because he smiles a lot and changes his facial expressions. He requires 24-hour care, but he is living at home because I want him here.

My problem: How can I protect him from well-meaning people who tickle his chin, pat him on the head and even kiss him and treat him like a child? It's always women who do this. Recently, a woman I met for the first time actually hugged and kissed him! (It did not occur to me to kiss her husband.)

I want my husband to be treated like the man he still is, the man I am married to and dearly love. His children and I give him plenty of love and affection. I appreciate those people who care about him, but if he weren't in a wheelchair I'm sure they wouldn't do some of the things they do.

Am I being silly? What do other people with problems like this do? I know if I were in a wheelchair I wouldn't want people I hardly know patting me on the head or kissing me.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: You are not being silly. Your problem is one that many people must deal with. The solution is to educate the well-meaning public, and your letter is a giant step in the right direction. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my mid-30s, married and have children. Now that our family is complete, I've decided to have a very embarrassing medical problem taken care of.

I am incontinent! I've been referred by my family doctor to a urologist and am scheduled for surgery to correct that problem. I am facing a hospital stay of at least three days.

My problem? What on earth do I tell my family and friends? My problem is especially mortifying, and I have never confided it to anyone except my husband. I've heard my mother make unkind remarks about older women who were so "nasty" they wet their pants every time they coughed, sneezed or laughed. My cheeks would burn and my heart would beat faster at such comments, so I could never tell her that I was afflicted with that same "nasty" problem.

Please help me dream up a believable reason for being in the hospital for three days or more. I couldn't bring myself to tell the truth.

POSITIVELY ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: If you must offer an explanation, just say you're going in for minor surgery of a personal nature.

DEAR ABBY: There is a woman in town who divorced her husband. Shortly after the divorce her ex-husband died. As soon as that happened, she started calling herself a widow.

Can she do this, Abby?

A TOUCH OF CURIOSITY

DEAR TOUCH: Obviously she can because she is doing it.

Does calling herself a widow

Career Women Now Want Family Says Megan Marshall

By SHARON RUTENBERG
UPI Science Writer
CHICAGO (UPI) — Young career women are finding life lonely and are turning to marriage and children, author Megan Marshall says.

The new generation grew up with women's liberation and sexual liberation — with freedom to nourish a career instead of a family.

To their mothers, "love was everything in a woman's life," says the author of "The Cost of Loving: Women and the New Fear of Intimacy" (Putnam, $14.95).

"Mother found out who she was by getting married to a man, taking his name and having his children," Ms. Marshall said in a telephone interview.

"But the daughters of those women really felt that their mothers were missing out on a lot ... had no separate identities from their families. They complained their mothers were terrible role models and very depressing to them.

"They really rejected the notion of love being important at all. Suddenly what was important in life was developing a career, proving you could live by yourself, support yourself and be independent."

When this new generation reached their 30s, they found themselves a little lonely and wanting love, Ms. Marshall said.

One successful woman lawyer said: "I don't want to make 'partner' and come home to an empty house."

"The women were getting kind of burned out from working so hard or getting somewhat disillusioned from their jobs and realizing their job wasn't everything," the author said.

Ms. Marshall's book is based on 40 case studies of women, age 25-40, in Boston, New York City, Washington D.C., Atlanta, Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"There was a kind of epidemic of fear of intimacy that was holding women back," she said.

They were afraid of losing themselves, had nightmares of being suffocated, and feelings of claustrophobia.

They were willing to make commitments to a career, but ran away from men.

They had found an identity in their work and proved they could take care of themselves.

"They were afraid that new self would just go away if they got married," she said.

They just assumed they could get married and have children when they wanted to. But women in their 30s find a shortage of men, Ms. Marshall said, or men who are marrying younger or less professional women.

Some have infertility problems.

Ms. Marshall found men also were getting tired of career women.

"Often they were the ones who really wanted deep and committed relationships. And they were frustrated with going out with women who were more willing to put time into a career than a relationship."

She thinks the trend is reversing. "They're finding in their 30s that they have really paid a different price — that all this worry about commitment and fear of intimacy really has shrunk their horizons in a way that they never expected," Ms. Marshall said.

"I think that it's kind of sad because in a lot of ways these are the women who are best prepared to have good marriages — if they would let themselves."

They are strong, capable of making commitments and know themselves in ways women previously never had time to discover, she said.

"These women can be some of the most happy and fulfilled women the world has ever seen. But it's going to be a matter of reassessing their choices pretty quickly."

Little sisters of that generation are beginning to realize they do not want to end up in their mid-30s with a great job but no family life.

In their early 20s, they begin to work hard to find a relationship with a man so they can marry and have children by their late 20s, Ms. Marshall said.

They might even wait until their mid-40s to completely devote themselves to a career. By then, their children are old enough to be left in school instead of a day care center.

Pilot Club Officers Are Installed Monday Evening

Installation of 1984-85 officers and presentation of certificates of appreciation highlight the program meeting of the Pilot Club of Greenville Monday evening.

Using Pilot International theme for the year — Enthusiasm — the Key to Success, Barbara Clark, outgoing president, conducted the installation. New officers are: Ann H. Barnhill, president; Mary Susan Templeton, first vice president; Dot Garcia, second vice president; Paula Haigler, recording secretary; Trudie Gardner, corresponding secretary; Leigh Seamster, treasurer; and board members, Frances Johnson and Blanche Jones. Ms. Clark will also serve on the board.

Receiving certificates for noted involvement in club activities were Mrs. Barnhill, Mary Cochran, Mrs. Garcia, Ms. Johnson, Mrs. Jones, Lib LeConte, Margaret Nelson, Irene Prewett and Ms. Templeton. Division coordinators and special committee persons were recognized.

Beginning with 20 years of continuous membership, certificates were presented to Winona Daniel, Mrs. LeConte 21, Mrs. Jones 25 and charter member Sue Howell 27. Included in a related perfect attendance category for the year were Mary Cochran, Dorothy Johnson, Margaret Nelson and Mrs. Prewett.

President Clark presented the president's pin and gavel to the new president and also received a past president's pin. President Barnhill reminded division coordinators, Lenore Morton, projects, Judy Trolley, outreach, and Audrey Johnston, internal affairs, that plans of work are to be completed by June 14. It was announced that due to the tornado relief surplus yard sale Saturday, a similar sale scheduled for that date has been postponed.

Sarah Logan, Pilot Club of Laurinburg, is the new governor of the N.C. District, Pilot International.

LIQUEUR BERRY SAUCE

A spirited version of a popular fruit combination.

10-ounce package frozen raspberries in syrup, thawed
1 pint basket strawberries, stemmed and sliced
2-3rds cup French black raspberry liqueur such as Chambord
1 tablespoon lemon juice
blended with 1 tablespoon cornstarch

Thoroughly drain syrup from raspberries into a small saucepan. In a bowl stir together the drained raspberries, strawberries and 1-3rd cup of the liqueur; set aside. Over medium heat, bring raspberry syrup to a boil; stir in cornstarch mixture and cook, stirring constantly until clear and thickened — about 2 minutes. Stir in the remaining liqueur. Cool; gently stir into berry mixture. Serve over ice-cream cake. Makes about 3 cups.

Over the last decade or so, the voice of John Cyrus has become one to be reckoned with when tobacco matters are being discussed. So, it is meaningful when Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the state Department of Agriculture, says the handwriting is on the wall for tobacco.

That, in effect, is what he did recently in expressing the belief that world dependence on U.S. tobacco is a thing of the past. Thanks to low production costs in other countries, to technical assistance from U.S. buying companies and the at-times unrealistic costs of production and marketing in this country, tobacco of excellent quality can and is now being grown for less in several countries.

Topping off the paradox, U.S. buying companies last year imported 2,000 tons more tobacco than U.S. processing firms exported. According to Tobacco Associates Inc. in Raleigh, U.S. cigarettes today contain an average 31 percent foreign-grown tobacco. Thirty years ago, American cigarettes were 93 percent American.

Inflation has driven up other costs for farmers; prices paid for their tobacco have to stay in line, so drastic cutbacks in market prices would serve only to drive more growers from the farm. Tobacco buying companies helped precipitate the current situation, but they can't really be blamed for seeking cheaper raw products. And, as we observed on this page recently, the major U.S. tobacco companies obviously have decided tobacco is not the only staple for their table as most of them have diversified rapidly and widely in the last few years. Tobacco is only one of many items in their inventory.

The American Farm Bureau has called for immediate import quotas to cut down on competition from foreign tobacco. Chances of approval are slim, but political considerations could come into play in an election year — especially as North Carolina is the 'largest benefactor of the federally endorsed tobacco support program, and since Sen. Jesse Helms, a Republican with ties to the Reagan administration, is running for re-election.

Restrictions on imported tobacco certainly would be beneficial to farmers, but it could bring retaliation in other areas where import-export transactions are involved.

Import quotas, even if helpful now, will not be the long-run answer. One cannot say with certainty that there is a long-run answer — except that tobacco as "the" revenue-producing crop for the rural masses will be replaced. North Carolinians should begin preparing for that now. Change is peeping around the corner.

Nature's Hand

The theory of ECU underwater archaeologist Gordon Watts, that the Lost Colony on Roanoke Island was a victim of erosion and rising sea water, sounds the most logical answer to a very old puzzle.

We've heard it before. Source uncertain, but it was probably Watts.

People who are familiar with erosion of the coastal islands and shore damage on North Carolina's mainland beaches would agree that could be the answer.

It would take very few storms with an accompanying unfavorable tidal sequence to do the trick.

Too, the late 16th century settlers conceivably were unfamiliar with the processes of erosion even then under way, and built on exposed lowlands which made the colony possible early victims of what was to come.

The theory is well suited to the circumstances as we know them. There is quite good reason to think substantiating evidence is in nearby waters.

A Helping Hand When Needed

ASHEVILLE — A Raleigh TV crew was in a bind. They'd been traveling with Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and had prepared a report for the evening news. But, as the crew and candidate landed here, they had to go in different directions — Edmisten was late for a campaign event, the crew needed to get its film on a commercial flight back to Raleigh.

Enter Jerry Mobley, Edmisten's press aide. Mobley jumped out of the campaign plane and found an Edmisten supporter who was willing to lend the TV crew his car. Edmisten went to his campaign event, the crew shipped its film back home and then caught up with Edmisten, thanks to the loaned car.

One of a political campaign's most valuable assets is its press secretary. He or she can't flood the newspapers and TV with glowing stories of the candidate, nor can they squelch negative coverage. But a good press secretary will advise the candidate on ways to get good coverage and to neutralize bad coverage. A good press secretary gets the trust of the press and makes sure that his campaign's perspective is conveyed to them.

In the 1984 Democratic gubernatorial race, press secretaries were very visible. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who has had many problems dealing with reporters, hired veteran newsman Vernon Morton for his official staff and then Morton worked nights, as a volunteer, for the campaign. He did a lot to improve Green's rapport with the press. Lauch Faircloth, too, had sparred with the press and was perceived by reporters as being a bit arrogant. But Faircloth hired Steve Meehan, his press secretary from the N.C. Commerce Department, for his campaign. Meehan is the best in the business. He's astute, accessible, extremely likable, and honest. Faircloth didn't have many problems with the press after that. Tom Gilmore hired a novice, Melanie Reid, who grew into the job quite well.

It would be nice to be able to go directly to the candidate on all questions. But that's impossible. Reporters have deadlines and candidates have more important things to do. So people like Mobley, Meehan and Ms. Reid acted as valuable contacts for reporters. All three were on the inside of decision-making and all three really knew what was going on. Information they had to give was as good, if not better, than that which the candidate would have distributed.

In the run-off between Edmisten and Eddie Knox, Edmisten clearly has the advantage in the press aide department. While Mobley is almost always in his office, ready to answer questions, finding a Knox spokesperson can resemble chasing a greased pig. Knox had a corporate public relations firm handling his press relations until about five weeks before the May 8 primary. Then he hired Nancy Young, a former reporter and veteran P.R. person. But Knox hasn't given her the freedom Mobley has. She also finds herself campaigning with Knox a lot and that means reporters can't find her when they need a question answered.

Knox has criticized the press for allowing Edmisten to hide behind Mobley. Knox is accessible to reporters and says Edmisten should be, too. But Knox doesn't understand how tight deadlines can get. If Knox can't be found for an hour or two to return that call, the paper may have already been printed when he does talk to the reporter.

A good press aide's value can't be measured tangibly. Good reporters won't write favorably about a campaign just because of the press secretary. But a good press secretary makes good reporters better. They make sure their campaign's views get into stories. They make sure a TV report gets on the airplane headed for home.

'I'm OK, You'd Better Be Perfect'

WASHINGTON — Almost every night around 9 o'clock we find dozens of well-dressed males in their early 30s, hanging out at bars near our local health club. For the most part, these heterosexual jocks are all Yuppies who've gotten off work late and decided to play squash, go for a jog or work out on some Nautilus equipment.

In addition to worshipping an hour of sweat, these gentlemen share another common feature: they are all single.

The Census Bureau took note of this rapidly expanding group last week when it released a study that said more people are remaining single well into their 30s. Last year, for example, almost 20 percent of the 9,217,000 males aged 30 to 34 had never married. Ten years before, 9 percent of all men in this age group had remained unmarried.

While startling news to some moms, this trend can no longer be ignored. An overindulgent America may have spawned a displaced generation of bachelors who are incapable of modifying their lifestyles to match those of the modern American woman.

Indeed, after eavesdropping on Yuppie bar conversation here and elsewhere, we suspect that men in this well-suited crowd may never marry. They are, to put it diplomatically, too preoccupied with themselves and what they think life owes them to ever make compromises with the other sex.

Many of these children of the '50s see themselves as the entitled crowd. They grew up with almost everything. They attended first-class colleges and went backpacking around Europe during summer break. After college, many attended graduate school or, in some cases, did little more than get in touch with themselves.

More importantly, many in this crowd were often told by parents that they were the best and deserved the best. Whether they swallowed such nonsense remains immaterial. The fact is that it has led to an overblown social ethic between males and females that says, "I'm OK, you'd better be perfect."

With such a billing it's not surprising that many of these men only look for marriage partners who are beautiful, smart, upwardly mobile, wealthy, sensitive, athletic and experienced.

Yet, even for those males who've relinquished the possibility of ever meeting "superwoman," the matter of economic advancement remains an obstacle to marriage. The long recession of the 1970s and the plethora of baby boomers has stymied this group's forward progress. Today many are not as financially secure as they thought they'd be at this stage in their lives. Rather, they've learned that it takes a lot more money to feel secure, regardless of what standards one sets for himself.

No doubt there are other factors involved in explaining why so many males have delayed marriage. The women's movement, which has taught some men to be less aggressive and more emotionally connected, has frightened, and in some cases confused, males. Furthermore, according to some feminists, it has turned some males into wimps who are unable to make the slightest of commitments. Women's reluctance to give up their careers has complicated matters, too.

Moreover, the act of being single in itself is no longer a social stigma. At one time, society held that if a man didn't become a provider and marry by age 30, he was a failure or a homosexual. But that's no longer true. Today's man can get by with displaying a new set of social standards. A successful job, a well-decorated apartment and an ability to handle sushi is all it takes to be viewed favorably by society.

Not suprisingly, the unavailability of marrying males has now led to great frustration among many females. Many, we know, have taken to wearing T-shirts that ask: "Where Have All the Good Men Gone?"

While some sociologists may interpret late marriage as a healthy indicator — one is more prepared for marriage — there's no guarantee that large numbers of younger baby boomers won't reverse this trend and marry earlier.

Adds William Novak, author of "The Great American Man Shortage": "A lot of single people in this age group will just not get married, not because they don't want to. But rather because they can't adjust their standards to the mores of the day."

One thing is certain. Unless our friends at the bar reassess themselves and begin to compromise their aspirations, they'll be complaining in chorus for years to come.

Reagan's Service Was Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan visits Normandy on June 6, the 40th anniversary of D-Day, the Allied invasion of Nazi-held France, he may recall that his military service was limited to making training films because of his bad eyesight.

As a radio announcer at WHO in Des Moines, Iowa, the president cheated on his eye examination to become a reserve officer in the 14th Cavalry Regiment so he could ride horses.

"I had no particular desire to be an officer," he wrote in his autobiography, "Where's the Rest of Me?"

"Like everyone else, I thought we had already fought the last war. Still, doing correspondence courses and going to once-a-week classes wasn't too high a price to pay for getting astride a horse."

World War II started after he had moved to Hollywood and was making feature films, and in April 1942, Reagan was ordered to report to Fort Mason in San Francisco.

By that time, Reagan's cheating had caught up with him and he had been tagged "limited service" — eligible for corps area service command or War Department."

Initially, he had been informed that no such limited service officer would ever be called. But that was before Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

"I have no intention of doing a chapter on 'Where was I on Dec. 7?' I was in bed asleep — how exciting can I make that?" he wrote.

After spending time at Fort Mason as a second lieutenant tracking down supplies and lost equipment, Reagan was transferred to the Air Force and assigned to Fort Roach in Los Angeles, his hometown.

His first duties were to interview and process applicants for commissions. "Naturally there were some who were looking for a way to escape a different kind of military service," Reagan wrote. "For the most part, however, our volunteers were ineligible for regular military duty and simply and sincerely wanted to serve. My out in the former cases was the fact that we could not commission any man who was eligible for the draft."

He is sensitive to any suggestion that he was avoiding real service, saying the people assigned to the motion picture unit were not draft dodgers. "The overwhelming majority of men and officers serving at our post were limited service, like myself, or men who by reason of family, age, or health were exempt from normal military duty," Reagan wrote.

The unit turned out training films and documentaries, conducted a training school for combat camera units, and even got involved in a couple of secret projects.

But Reagan showed some regret at not having seen action: "I must say that whoever coined the phrase that war was a long period of boredom, punctuated by a few seconds of intense fear, was right — but someone must have gotten an overdose of fear because I got more than my share of boredom."

He was honorably discharged in 1945 after a three-year tour. He left as a captain, after having turned down a chance to become a major.

Strength For Today

Some time ago a film strip appeared of a natural aquarium on one of the islands of the West Indies.

Fish, when they are small, can get through a certain small aperture which leads from the sea to the aquarium. But after tourists have fed them for a few weeks, they become so large that they cannot get back out into the ocean through the same opening. As the number of fish in the aquarium increase, the larger fish are scooped out and are hung up in the fish market.

Habit formation begins quite naturally and innocently. Like the little fish, we go through a small aperture in response to desire, and then after our desires are fed, we find that we cannot go out the same place we came in.

Many a person, like the poor fish, has found himself hung up in the fish market because of an easy, indulgent attitude toward life which finally brought trouble.

U.S. Urges Resumption Of Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying improved relations between the West and the Soviet Union are vital to the cause of peace, today promised to meet Moscow half-way if it will return to the nuclear arms talks.

"We all recognize there is no more important consideration than the development of a better working relationship with the Soviet Union, one marked by greater cooperation and understanding and leading to stable, secure and peaceful relations," Reagan said.

The president delivered brief remarks in the White House Rose Garden following a meeting with the foreign ministers of the 16 NATO countries. The foreign ministers, who stood at this side, were concluding a three-day meeting here.

Reagan appealed to Moscow to return to the arms control negotiations. Last year, the Soviets suspended the talks in Geneva, Switzerland, to protest deployment of U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in several Western European countries.

"When the Soviet Union returns to the negotiating table, we will meet them half-way," Reagan said.

He said the United States is prepared to "negotiate fairly and flexibly without preconditions" on arms control and other issues.

However, NATO officials have said privately there is virtually no chance Moscow will return to the arms talks this year. Moscow has insisted it won't resume negotiations until the United States withdraws the newly deployed missiles from Europe, which Washington refuses to do.

Reagan, who earlier this week described relations with Moscow as "bad right now," held out the hope of improved relations in the future. He said a better relationship with the Soviet Union "has been and will continue to be a primary goal of the United States and the NATO alliance."

"It is our sincere hope that the Soviet Union will soon come to understand our profound desire for peace which inspires us," Reagan said.

He also said he hopes the Soviet leadership will "finally realize" it cannot split the alliance. "We will not be split; we will not be intimidated ... The West will protect the peace."

Secretary of State George Shultz and his allied counterparts, meanwhile, have conducted a detailed examination of the widening war in the Persian Gulf with the United States said to be urging the allies to take a more active and vocal role in bringing the fighting between Iran and Iraq to an end.

American diplomats have complained privately that Washington has been virtually alone in its efforts to end the war, even though a cutoff of oil flowing through the gulf would damage the economies of Europe and Japan far more than that of the United States.

U.S. Schedules Food for Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Reagan administration will send an extra $21 million worth of food to Haiti in the aftermath of rioting in two cities, U.S. officials in Port-au-Prince say.

A U.S. Embassy official said the assistance from the Agency for International Development is in addition to $54 million already allocated this year for the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation.

In the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti, President Salvador Jorge Blanco ordered a 25 percent cutback in government fuel use and imposed other austerity measures Wednesday. An earlier series of austerity steps sparked protest riots in April that claimed 54 lives.

In Haiti, President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier announced several changes in his so-called "Super Cabinet" late Wednesday, reducing the number of ministers from six to four. There was no indication whether the changes were linked to the rioting, which the government has refused to comment on.

The U.S. Embassy official in Haiti, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said AID was exploring the possibility that some of the aid can be used to alleviate unemployment problems and the impact of a drought in the northern cities of Gonaives and Cap-Haitien.

U.S. Considers Stinger Sales To Kuwait

By The Associated Press

Kuwait has asked the United States to sell it Stinger anti-aircraft missiles as protection from attacks in the Iran-Iraq war on oil shipments in the Persian Gulf, according to Reagan administration sources.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Wednesday night that Kuwait unofficially asked for the missiles for the same purposes as Saudi Arabia, which recently received 400 from the United States.

Kuwaiti Defense Ministry sources said a U.S. military delegation was in Kuwait today discussing the gulf nation's requirements for U.S. arms. They did not confirm the report that Kuwait had requested the missiles, or say whether the delegation was specifically considering such a request.

Iraq claimed Wednesday that its warplanes attacked another "big naval target" near Iran's main Persian Gulf oil terminal to enforce a blockade of Iranian ports, and international oil traders said Iran is offering discount prices to maintain its oil export income.

There was no immediate confirmation of the reported Iraqi attack, and shipping officials in the gulf said they had not received any distress signals.

In the past week, President Reagan has employed emergency powers to send 400 Stingers and a KC-10 tanker plane to bolster Saudi defenses against attacks on oil shipments by Iran.

Publicly, a Defense Department spokeswoman acknowledged early today that "we are reviewing Kuwait's defensive requirements with them, but we are not proceeding with any other Stinger sale in the region at this time."

The hand-held Stingers have a range of three miles and can be used against low-flying attack planes.

The Reagan administration has committed itself to defend free navigation in the gulf against Iranian threats, but President Reagan has said no U.S. military action would take place unless other gulf countries request it.

In New York, the United States told the U.N. Security Council on Wednesday that it supports a request by six Arab states that the council condemn Iranian attacks on commercial ships in the gulf. A resolution was expected to be formally introduced today and acted on by Friday.

In Tokyo, spokesmen for Japan's two top trading houses, Mitsubishi Corp. and Mitsui and Co., said Iran has offered to cut its crude oil prices by about $2.50 per barrel. They said Japan had no immediate plans to take up the offer, but an oil trader in New York said Iran was selling oil to one Japanese company at a discount of up to $3 a barrel.

The reduction, he said, was to make up for extra expenses such as higher insurance costs and hazard pay for crews entering the gulf war zone. The trader, who asked not to be identified, said Iran told its customers it wanted to keep their business, and added: "They need the money to continue the war."

Duarte Realigns Defense Ministry, Names Cabinet

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President-elect Jose Napoleon Duarte has split the Defense Ministry into two separate departments as part of an effort to curb human rights abuses, officials of his Christian Democrat Party said.

Party officials also said Wednesday that Duarte had named most of the members of his Cabinet, choosing politicians from his own party, political independents and members of the moderate Democratic Action Party. The Cabinet is to be announced officially today and sworn in Friday.

Meanwhile, El Salvador's Communist Party claimed Wednesday it has assumed a bigger role in the 4½-year guerrilla war against the U.S.-backed government.

Duarte, elected in the May 6 runoff election over ultra-rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson, is to be inaugurated Friday. U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz is scheduled to attend the ceremony.

Two top Christian Democratic officials and another authoritative source, who did not want to be identified for security reasons, said the Defense Ministry would be divided into one agency for defense and the other for security.

Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova will remain in his post as chief of both divisions. The defense branch will be headed by Gen. Rafael Flores Lima, now deputy defense minister. Heading the security branch will be Col. Carlos Reynaldo Lopez Nuila, now National Police director.

Salvador's three main security forces — the National Police, Treasury Police and National Guard — would apparently come under jurisdiction of the new security department, along with civil defense units. The security forces and civil defense units have been blamed for most of the human rights abuses committed by government forces.

In the past, the jurisdiction of the three separate security forces has been unclear, and the forces have in practice often been their own masters.

"The idea of this is to tighten the reins," the party source said.

Sources and party officials said those named for the Cabinet were a leader of the Democratic Action Party, Ricardo Gonzalez Camacho, as economics minister; lawyer Francisco Cardona as justice minister; Jorge Eduardo Tenorio, a political independent close to the military, as foreign minister; and Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena as planning minister.

The statement from the Communist Party's central committee, read over the clandestine rebel Radio Farabundo Marti, said the Communist Party "has strengthened its ties to the popular cause and has been profoundly transformed" by the guerrilla war against government forces.

Hawaii Moves To Implement Court-Approved Land Reforms

HONOLULU (AP) — Bolstered by a favorable U.S. Supreme Court decision, Hawaii will move quickly to force big landowners to sell property to thousands of renters even though some legal questions remain, a state official said.

The high court, in an 8-0 decision, said the state can use its powers of condemnation to break up a 200-year-old system of concentrated land ownership as long as the aim is a broad public benefit.

Still to be resolved is a case in which the Hawaii Supreme Court must determine what constitutes "public use" of land, a lawyer for one large landowner said.

But state Deputy Attorney General Michael Lilly said, "There is nothing to preclude the filing of condemnations and pursuing the condemnations already filed. Everything can go forward."

Wednesday's decision settled a lawsuit brought in 1979 by the estate of Princess Bernice Pauahi Bishop, challenging the state's Land Reform Act. The ruling could affect as much as 40 percent of the land on Oahu, the heavily populated island which includes Honolulu, Lilly said.

The Land Reform Act, passed by the state Legislature in 1967, contended that concentrated land ownership dating back to King Kamehameha 200 years ago was causing a critical shortage of residential land for sale to a growing population.

However, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year ruled the legislation was unconstitutional because the property was to be transferred from one private owner to another, and not to be held for use by the general public.

Wednesday's Supreme Court ruling overturned that decision.

"In this case, the Supreme Court said the state Legislature had a problem of landed monopolies in Hawaii and came up with a rational solution for the problem," Lilly said. "It's a classic state's rights case."

"It took 17 years, but it is worth it," Gov. George Ariyoshi said.

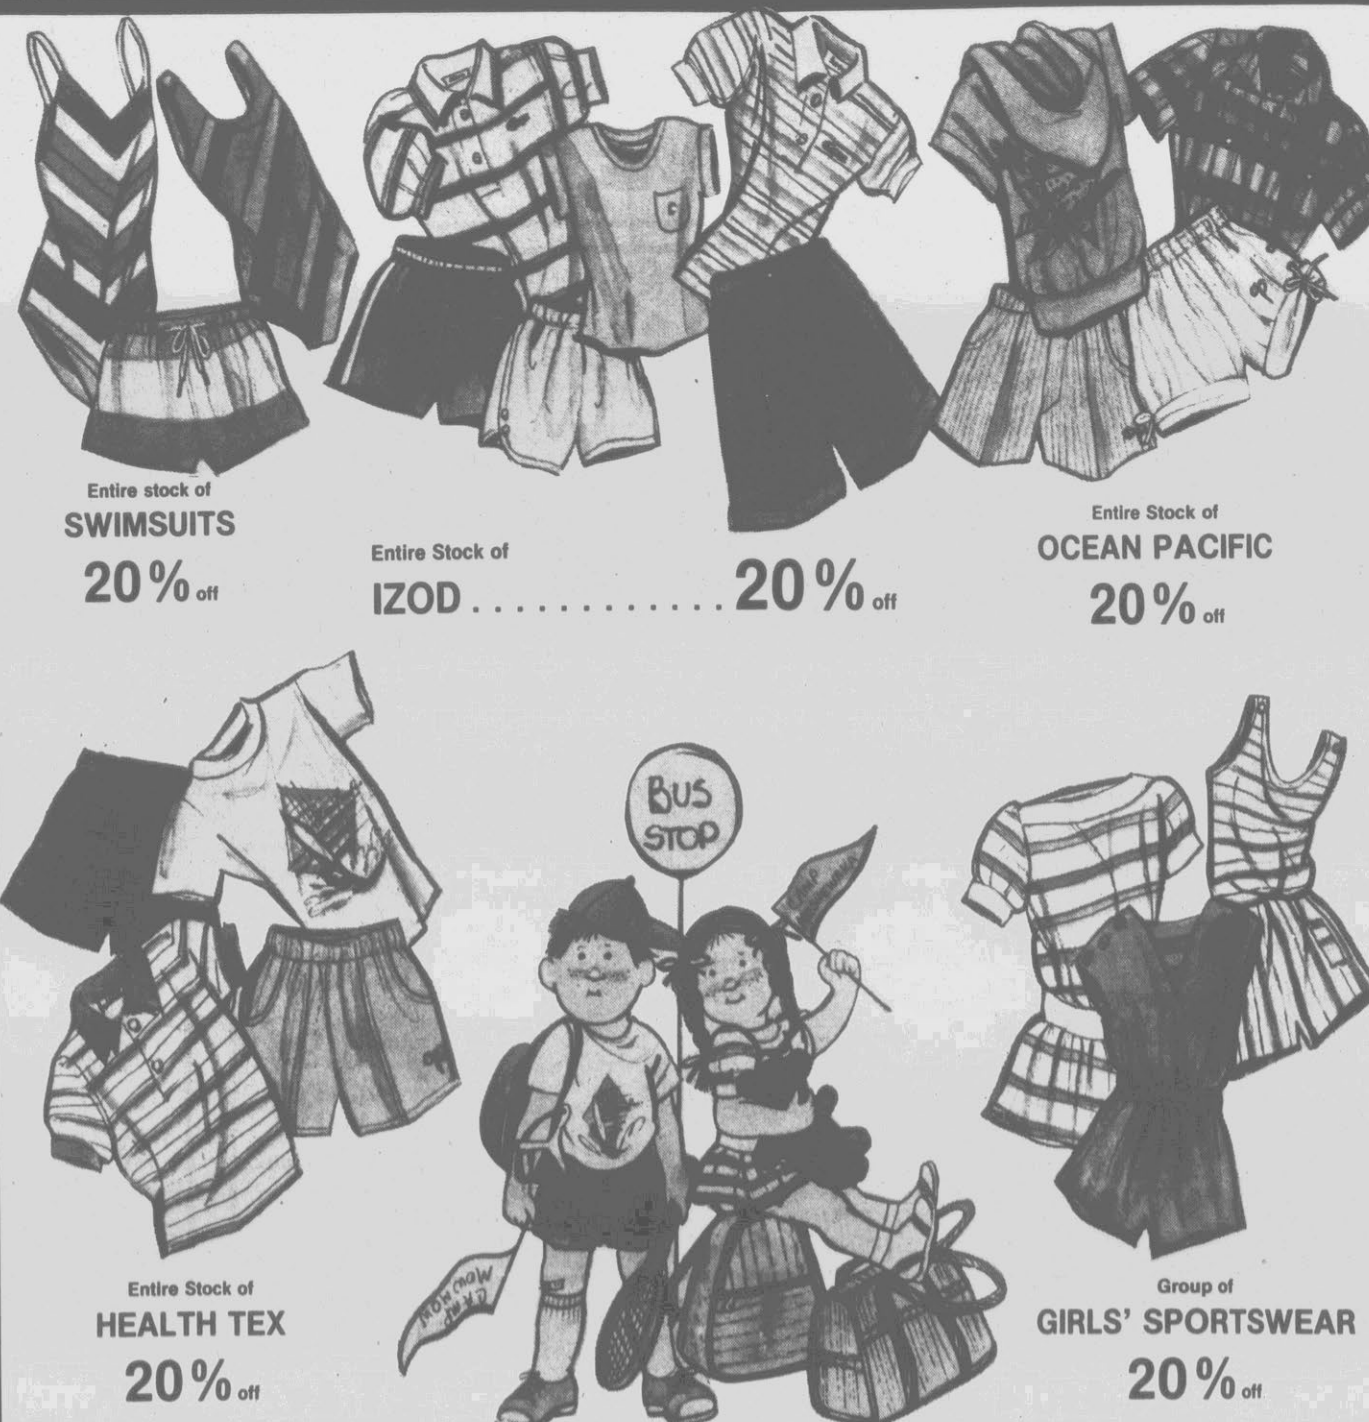

"I know the 3,000 people I represent will be going crazy," said Bernard Bays, an attorney for homeowners seeking to buy the land underneath their houses. "They will be so delighted with the result."

The value of the land affected is difficult to estimate because prices would have to be determined through negotiations or court proceedings, Lilly said.

Hunt Says State Prepared To Take Lead In Electronics

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt told members of the Semiconductor Industry Association today that North Carolina is determined to build a "vigorous, thriving electronics industry" in the state.

"We are determined to be the heart and soul of technological change and progress in the semiconductor industry," Hunt told association members and the board of directors of Semiconductor Research Corp. this morning in Research Triangle Park.

Hunt said North Carolina has proved its commitment to the high technology industry in the past year by appropriating millions of dollars to support it.

The General Assembly appropriated $17 million to the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, bringing the total amount of state money for the center to $43 million, Hunt said.

North Carolina also has spent $40 million in capital investments at the center's participating institutions, Hunt said. The investments include a state-of-the-art computer science building at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a new engineering building at North Carolina A&T State University, Hunt said.

The money also went toward "new high-level faculty positions, new graduate fellowships, new equipment and increased undergraduate computer interaction," he said.

"Our investments add up to a program that reflects the largest state commitment in the nation to the field of modern electronics," Hunt said. "These investments reflect our belief that — in North Carolina — electronics means business."

Hunt said the investments were made to support North Carolina's economic development program. But he said they were also made because "American industry must develop the next generation of microelectronics technologies — to regain our international leadership role in technology and to stimulate American economic growth."

Hunt said North Carolina has made direct grants of almost $45 million to the Microelectronics Center. He said industry has provided support of about $3.5 million so far, with total commitments for the first three years of about $6 million.

Alien Smuggling Ring Broken Up

CHICAGO (AP) — A smuggling ring that helped up to 100 aliens from Yugoslavia enter the United States illegally has been broken up with dozens of arrests, federal authorities say.

Seventeen people were named in indictments returned late Wednesday, said A.D. Moyer, local director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. He said as many as 50 people had been arrested by Wednesday afternoon and up to 100 aliens face legal action.

Most of those indicted live in the Chicago area, and some are restaurant owners.

The indictments said that the 17 people had organized a ring to transport Yugoslavs for a fee by plane to Mexico. The amount of the fee was not disclosed.

The Yugoslavs then were smuggled through a fence and across the border into the United States at Nogales, Ariz.

Worker Trapped

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Kernersville street worker was trapped in a ditch for about 45 minutes Wednesday when it collapsed and buried him.

Fellow workers said that Tim Martin, 32, an employee with the Kernersville Public Works Department, was helping to install a storm drain line when the rain-saturated dirt caved in and covered him. Martin was saved when other street workers on the project dug down two feet and uncovered his head to let him breathe, Robert Campbell, public works director, said.

Correction

The 1st District Democratic Convention will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday in Williamston. The time was reported incorrectly in an article published Wednesday.

Club Meeting

The second organizational meeting of a metal detecting club, "Tarheel Treasure Hunters," was held recently. Nicki Adams was selected treasurer.

The "Find of the Month" award went to Bill Rogers for a collection of Civil War relics and to Mark Cagle for coins he found which included a silver "walking liberty" 50-cent piece.

The next club meeting will be June 26 from 7-9 p.m. at the Community Center.

Rosy Oil Outlook Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief energy forecaster dismisses the notion that the Iran-Iraq war will raise gasoline prices this summer, saying oil prices will drop more in 1984 and double-digit increases in natural gas prices will stop.

"Energy prices, in general, should contribute to the stability of the overall price level of U.S. goods and services throughout the 1980s," says J. Erich Evered, head of the Energy Information Administration.

Evered on Wednesday released his agency's 300-page Annual Energy Outlook projecting supply, demand and pricing trends through 1995.

Despite recent attacks by Iraq and Iran on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, the agency's outlook this year is the rosiest since the Egypt-Israeli war more than a decade ago triggered the first Arab oil embargo and plunged the world into an energy crisis.

"We don't expect any price impact in the United States this summer ... or this year from the Persian Gulf activities," Evered told reporters. "There is a tremendous excess of production capacity outside Iran and we are much better off as a nation to withstand a disruption."

Evered's agency says a continuing glut of oil on the world market will likely cause the price of oil to drop from its current $29 a barrel to $26 in 1986, discounting inflation, and could send it as low as $22.

But from then on, the agency said, Americans can expect oil prices to again start rising faster than inflation — just as they did throughout the 1970s — so that by 1995, oil will be costing about $50 a barrel in today's dollars.

"The price explosions of the 1970s have caused oil markets to shrink," Evered said. "For example, our current forecast for U.S. consumption in 1990 is 16.6 million barrels per day, 30 percent below the forecast made in 1977."

"These same prices have encouraged efforts to find and produce more oil," Evered said. "As a result, total demand for oil is significantly below the world production capacity, particularly in OPEC countries."

Statistics in the report show member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries producing 31.4 million barrels per day or more than 64 percent of the non-communist world's supply of oil in 1973.

That OPEC share declined to 18.6 million barrels or 43 percent of the world's supply last year and is predicted in the report to rise back to 24.1 million barrels or roughly 46 percent of the supply by 1995.

Accused Of Neglect, Kidnapping

Boarding School Closed, Three Employees Arrested

WALTERBORO, S.C. (AP) — Forty-four students from a fundamentalist Christian boarding school spent the night at a National Guard armory after the school was closed and three employees arrested on charges ranging from child neglect to kidnapping, authorities said.

"Four little boys broke down and hugged our officers," Colleton County Deputy Sheriff Emory Rush said after deputies arrested the three men and closed the New Bethany School for Boys on Wednesday.

The closing followed allegations that some students were beaten with plastic pipes, handcuffed to their beds and put in a padlocked punishment cell, authorities said.

"There were six or seven boys we found evidence of corporal punishment being inflicted upon them," Solicitor Randolph Murdaugh said.

Olin King, 40, and Robert King, 25, were charged with unlawful neglect of children, conspiracy to commit unlawful neglect and kidnapping. Richard Davis, 18, was charged with conspiracy to commit unlawful neglect and kidnapping.

The two Kings were in jail today in lieu of $15,000 bond, while Davis was held in lieu of $10,000 bond. A bond hearing on the kidnapping charges was scheduled for later today.

There were about 57 students between the ages of 5 to 17 at the school, although some lived nearby and attended only as day students, authorities said. The other students were expected to be returned to their families or placed in foster homes.

The child neglect warrant alleged that the defendants allowed a student to be handcuffed to his bed and be beaten with a plastic pipe last February.

The kidnapping charge accused the defendants of unlawfully confining a student in a padlocked cell. Authorities believe the student had been there several days when he was freed Wednesday.

The conspiracy warrant alleged that the three "failed to furnish proper care and attention" so that the students' "life, health and comfort" were endangered.

Murdaugh, who accused the operators of "flat brainwashing those kids," said most of the students "are not Sunday school boys. By that I mean they're boys who have been convicted of crimes, they're unruly, they don't behave and their parents can't govern them."

According to Colleton County records, the church and school in this town about 30 miles west of Charleston are owned by the New Bethany Baptist Church of Arcadia, La.

Rush said some boys who ran away from the school several months ago told authorities they had been locked in an isolation cell, handcuffed to their beds and beaten with a pipe.

He said two other boys who ran away last weekend were given lie-detector tests in Columbia, leading to the arrest warrants.

An 11-year-old student identified only as Michael said he was glad sheriff's deputies closed the school because "they had been beating us."

"They didn't teach right," Michael said. "They didn't have the true word of God there. It was all fake."

HEARING HELPS — Associate Circuit Judge Nicholas T. Pomaro of Cook County, Ill., shown being assisted by a clerk, was blinded at age 6 by a blood disease. Pomaro, now 46, says he is "perfectly capable of determining credibility," relying on his hearing and a "kind of sixth sense." (AP Laserphoto)

Blind Judge Uses 'Sixth Sense'

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — A blind judge who's worked eight years in the nation's busiest court system says he doesn't have to see his witnesses to be fair because "it's what's inside that counts" when determining truthfulness.

Cook County Associate Circuit Judge Nicholas T. Pomaro, blinded in childhood by a rare disease, presides over civil, felony, misdemeanor and traffic cases.

"I believe in my whole heart, soul and mind that I am perfectly capable of determining credibility," said Pomaro, 46. "Because what I lack in what I see, I more than make up for in what I hear."

"Maybe it's a kind of a sixth sense that you develop," he explained in a recent interview. "I don't sit here in a black abyss... I form these images in my brain, but those images are not perceived through sight, but through imagination, sounds, smell, feel and the other senses."

Pomaro is keenly aware that blindness on the bench became an issue recently in a murder case in Denver, when a lawyer challenged a blind judge's ability to review a videotaped confession given to police.

The lawyer asked the judge to disqualify himself because he would not be able to see the defendant's non-verbal expressions. The judge refused and was upheld by the state Supreme Court.

Pomaro, who has followed the case closely, said the situation is similar whenever someone testifies before him because "I can't see his face and I can't see his expressions."

But "that outer appearance ... doesn't make him a truthful person and it doesn't make him a liar. It's what's inside that counts, and that's what I'm better able to get at," he said.

Pomaro said most attorneys are "scared to death" when they learn he is blind because they don't know what to expect. But, he said, "when you work with me a while ... there's a rhythm that you establish."

Kevin Kelly, a Cook County assistant state's attorney, will attest to that. Pomaro "provides the things you expect in a judge — fairness and knowledge of the law," Kelly said. "He's more than qualified to sit on the bench."

Blinded at age 6 by a rare blood disease called purpura hemorrhagica, Pomaro graduated from DePaul University and John Marshall Law School, both in Chicago.

He said he encountered few objections to his blindness when he began his private practice as an attorney because people looking for inexpensive services didn't care whether he was sightless.

"I always had a client and always earned some money," he said.

But that changed after he became an assistant state's attorney in April 1966.

"No one wanted to give Nick a chance," said his wife, Jean. "The state's attorney's office wanted him to sit and do office work, but he wanted to try cases."

Mrs. Pomaro said her husband always felt he would remove himself if for some reason he couldn't properly try a case, "but he wanted the chance to try."

Pomaro has developed his own system of overcoming his blindness when dealing with visual evidence such as photographs.

"I have the clerk describe the photograph until I feel that I understand what is depicted," he said. He then asks the attorneys involved for corrections or additions.

"When I feel I have a good verbal description of what the photograph depicts ... we go on from there," he said.

U.S. Population Grows Older

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's elderly population has jumped 65 percent since 1960, led by a whopping 337 percent hike in Florida, the Census Bureau reports.

Seven states now have a million or more residents aged 65 and over, the bureau said, up from only three states with that many elderly in 1960.

And during the same period, working-age Americans have also increased their numbers massively, the bureau said.

Indeed, the study of the population by age group suggested the jump in those aged 18 to 64 may be the most significant change in recent decades.

The 46 percent growth in this age group since 1960 is a result of the maturing of the post-World War II baby boom generation and produced huge numbers of new workers, the bureau said.

In the 1960s, it said, 15 million people entered the labor force. The figure rose to 24 million in the 1970s and 7 million so far in the 1980s.

The survey concentrated on state population changes between the 1980 census and July 1, 1983, and looked at national trends dating to 1960.

What's In A Name?

Two men most often associated with cruelty are remembered this week upon the anniversaries of their birth. French Assemblyman Joseph Guillotin was born on May 28 and the Marquis de Sade on June 2, 1740. The two were very different. Guillotin urged the use of the device which now bears his name as a humane means of execution. It was first used on a highwayman in 1792. In contrast, de Sade's acts of cruelty have given us the word "sadism."

DO YOU KNOW — What was Joseph Guillotin's actual profession?

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 1, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have all kinds of opportunities to get ahead by being alert to modern techniques as well as humanitarian projects so get into these advanced interests and activities early.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can garner a good deal of data if you listen to what modern persons have to suggest. Avoid one in business who is greedy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Important that you step out of that rut you are in and find out how some more modern careers can help you to get ahead faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Think along more progressive lines and put aside whatever has been deterring your progress. Make new acquaintances.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A good day to get out of that rut you are in and look for more progressive ways of handling your daily business.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't permit a demanding bigwig to keep you from being with outside associates just to please his whim.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look for new mechanisms that can make your job more efficient and forget that new contact who doesn't understand you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can get into the amusements you like and have a fine time, so forget that monetary worry you have.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Many changes are occurring today, so be prepared to accept them graciously. Your plans also require some changes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Analyze your methods well and see if adding modern touches do not improve your practical affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You feel that you understand a moody individual, but you may find it is just the opposite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Planning work may be difficult today since unexpected situations may come up to spoil your schedule.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) That entertainment that you have planned may need some last minute revision, but it will work out better than you had thought.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be emotional and romantic and will like change, but circumstances rise up that prevent consistency so try to be helpful to your progeny by proper guidance and teach early to be more objective.

Quackery: Fraudulent Medical Cure Is Growing Problem For Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Quackery, the use of fraudulent cures for health problems, is a growing national problem costing Americans an estimated $10 billion a year, a House subcommittee said today.

The congressional report, the result of four years of work by committee staffers and medical and scientific experts, said quackery is thriving despite advances in medicine and legitimate cures.

"We now know that mistletoe has no curative power over corns; frostbite, infertility and bubonic plague," the 250-page report said. "We now know 'filling your mouth with milk and shaking it until it becomes butter' will not cure toothaches and eating a mouse a week, as Pliny prescribed, will not prevent toothaches from occurring."

"With the extension of our scientific knowledge, the practice of quackery has changed but not diminished. It has, in fact, grown in size and sophistication," it said.

The report said the quack's prime target is the senior citizen.

"Quackery now invades nearly every aspect of our lives, and at points, attracts adherents with near religious zeal. The easy to recognize and somewhat comic figure of pitchmen of the past has been supplanted by sophisticated and shrewd hucksters with a keen sense of the vulnerability of potential customers, the limitations of the law and the profitability of exploiting both.

"Quackery has become big business. Twenty-five years ago, quackery was said to cost $1-2 billion a year. Today, it probably totals at least $10 billion," the report said.

The report was prepared by the House Select Committee on Aging's health and long-term care subcommittee, whose chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, called it "the most comprehensive review of quackery ever undertaken by a congressional body."

"Quackery is a problem of massive proportions. Billions of dollars are being ripped off," said Pepper, a Florida Democrat. "Thousands of people are being harmed. Many have the last few precious moments of their lives stolen from them or suffer needlessly and no one seems to be interested in doing anything about it."

He said eight victims of organized quackery schemes would testify at a hearing today. The conditions for which they sought relief include arthritis, cancer and Alzheimer's disease, Pepper said.

"Eighty percent of seniors have at least one chronic health condition.

Forty-four percent of those over the age of 65 have arthritis, 39 percent have hypertension, 27 percent have a heart condition, 28 percent have hearing loss, 12 percent suffer visual impairment, 50 percent have lost their teeth, 16 percent have orthopedic problems and 8 percent have diabetes. Many seniors have more than one of these problems. "In all, seniors, about 11 percent of our population in 1981, account for about 33 percent of our total health bill. Per capita health expenditures for seniors, defined as those over 65, are more than three times those under 65 — about $3,140 compared to $828 in 1981," the report said.

Chicken Pox Vaccine Tested

BOSTON (AP) — The tormenting itch of chicken pox, still a rite of passage for many American children, could soon be eliminated by a new, highly effective vaccine developed in Japan, a study released today shows.

In a test involving 956 children who never had chicken pox, doctors at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia found that the vaccine was 100 percent effective in warding off the disease during the first winter after the shots were administered.

Chicken pox is the last major childhood infection for which there is now no widely available protection.

"I see this as another measles vaccine, one that all children would receive and be protected against chicken pox," said Dr. Robert E. Weibel, who led the research team that conducted the test.

Although followup studies will be needed to check long-term effectiveness and safety, Weibel says he expects the vaccine will be approved for routine use in about two years.

An estimated 3 million children catch the highly contagious disease in the United States each year, and most people have had it by the time they reach adulthood.

Although its victims usually suffer no lasting complications, chicken pox occasionally carries dangerous side effects, including encephalitis, a brain inflammation, and Reye's syndrome, an often-fatal condition marked by brain swelling and seizures. Chicken pox is fatal in about two of every 100,000 cases, killing about 100 to 150 people a year.

Weibel's team tested the vaccine on 956 suburban Philadelphia children ranging in age from 1 to 14 years old. They published their findings in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Harvest Baptist Church

INDEPENDENT SOUL WINNING

Meeting at Carolina Country Day School Phone 756-3624

Jesus said, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life no man comes to the Father but by me."

Hi!

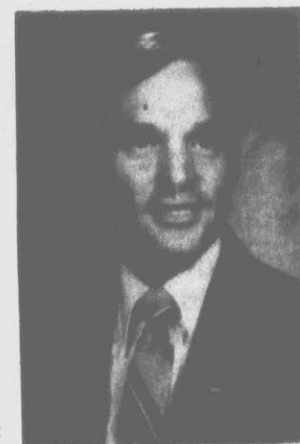

My name is David LeBlanc and I pastor Harvest Baptist Church of Greenville. We're not just another church—we're a ministry; a ministry that cares about you and your family as individuals.

I received my Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Minnesota in 1968 and taught school for 12 years before God called me into the pastorate. In 1983 I received my Master of Divinity from Liberty Baptist Seminary. My wife Renee and I have two sons, Matthew and Russell.

I know you will find the ministry of Harvest Baptist Church different because we truly care about you. We would like to minister to you and your family. You are important to us. We are a church with a vision and a burden for God's people.

We take the command of God seriously, "Go and teach all nations..." to that end our church has made over 4,000 door to door visits (Acts 20:20,21). Perhaps we have knocked on your door with God's message of salvation. We are committed to a ministry with an aggressive, soul-winning emphasis.

Let me take this opportunity to invite you to become involved at Harvest Baptist Church. We are in our second year of growth and are located at the Carolina Country Day School across from Pitt Community College.

David J. LeBlanc,
Pastor/Teacher

Purpose and meaning for life cannot be achieved apart from a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. That is why, HARVEST BAPTIST CHURCH is in Greenville—to reach the lost and to teach the saved.

Mondale Accuses Rivals Of Trying For Rules Changes

By The Associated Press
Walter F. Mondale is accusing his Democratic presidential rivals of trying to change party rules "so they can win even though they lost," while the Rev. Jesse Jackson is shunning a fund-raiser with the other candidates and saying talk of party unity is premature.

With the final primaries less than a week away, Jackson ended a New Mexico swing and joined his opponents, Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart, in California, where the major delegate prize awaits in Tuesday's voting.

Hart and Mondale planned to attend a Los Angeles fund-raiser to help pay off the debt of a dropout candidate, George McGovern, this evening. But Jackson declined to attend, saying he couldn't go along at a time when he is being denied delegates he deserves.

In Shiprock, N.M., Wednesday night, Jackson said it is "too premature for a celebration of party unity. I believe that real party unity can only be founded on party justice."

Jackson credited the former South Dakota senator with opening the party door to equal representation and other issues he supports. But he wrote to McGovern, "I am extremely disappointed that you call for party unity at a time when the issues you raised with your campaign are still completely unresolved."

In San Francisco, Mondale dismissed challenges by Hart and Jackson to party rules as efforts by the trailing candidates "to change the situation so they can win even though they lost."

Jackson has complained that party rules have denied him a share of delegates commensurate with the percentage of popular vote he has been winning. Hart has complained that Mondale received "tainted" delegates through victories in some state primaries in which he benefitted from the support of independent delegate committees that took political action committee contributions. Mondale has promised to pay back that money.

"When some one gets far enough ahead — and I'm 700 or so delegates ahead — the people who are clear behind want to change the situation so they can win even though they lost," Mondale said in dismissing such challenges.

Mondale continues to predict he will clinch the Democratic presidential nomination the day after Tuesday's primaries in California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia.

Mondale now has 1,682.05 delegates, with 1,967 needed for the nomination. Hart has 991.75 and Jackson 311.2.

GOP Turns TV On O'Neill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are test-marketing House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. as a campaign issue for the upcoming congressional elections.

The Republicans say O'Neill, D-Mass., has been running the House of Representatives in an arbitrary, dictatorial fashion that would prompt the founding fathers to shed a tear.

"Bring back the pride," say GOP television commercials. "Vote Republican."

Democrats, though, say O'Neill and the Democratic majority he commands are the nation's "insurance policy" against the Reagan administration and its Republican allies in the House and Senate.

On Wednesday, the campaign group for House Republicans began placing two 30-second commercials critical of O'Neill on the Cable News Network and Washington, D.C.-area television stations.

"We believe that we, as Republicans, have had our rights as a minority trampled upon and therefore the rights of the people have been trampled upon," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, which provides assistance to GOP House candidates.

"The American people really don't know and aren't aware of how the speaker is exercising his power. ... Right now almost half of the American people believe the Republicans run the House of Representatives or don't know who runs it," he added.

In one ad, there is a portrait of Thomas Jefferson and an announcer talks of fairness and free and open debate.

"The Democrats have controlled the House for 29 years," says the announcer. "And look at the result."

A picture of O'Neill flashes on the screen.

A gavel strikes a wooden block as the announcer ticks off the GOP grievances.

Jefferson reappears, and a tear rolls down his cheek.

The second ad features a choir singing "America the Beautiful" while a picture of the Capitol flashes on the screen. Then a closeup of O'Neill, with the GOP complaints typed over it.

"Something's gone wrong, very wrong, in America's House of Representatives," says the announcer.

Finally, a portrait of George Washington appears as the announcer asks, "Is this the way our founding fathers meant for things to be?"

A tear appears in the corner of Washington's eye. "Bring back the pride. Vote Republican," says the announcer.

Vander Jagt said a relatively modest $17,000 would be spent initially to air the commercials. He said his group would gauge the reaction, then decide whether to expand the advertising.

O'Neill shrugged off the commercials saying, "It really doesn't make much difference to me."

"They're upset about the fact that I fight for middle America and fight ... for the poor of America," O'Neill said, hitting at "the regressives that they have there (on the GOP side) ... the John Birch type."

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., Vander Jagt's counterpart at the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, issued a statement saying, "This latest lie-and-buy campaign will not work."

He said the commercials were the product of "extreme conservatives, who embrace the spirit of Joseph McCarthy, (who) now dominate the Republican side of the aisle."

Coelho later said he thought the Democratic campaign committee would be able to use the GOP commercials to raise money.

"I'm looking forward to making money off of it, and I thank the Republicans for doing it. It sort of makes my day," Coelho said.

Coelho said his organization will be sending out fund-raising letters over O'Neill's name in June soliciting money for an "insurance policy" against Ronald Reagan and the Republicans.

Lincolns Called For Shock Check

DETROIT (AP) — Possible suspension problems have forced the recall of 38,600 1984-model Lincoln Continentals and Continental Mark VIIs, Ford Motor Co. said.

The luxury cars were recalled Wednesday for replacement of a valve that could fail and cause the air-filled shock absorbers to sag, the automaker said in a statement.

The valve failure would not pose a safety problem but would cause a "less-than-satisfactory ride," Ford said.

Ford also recalled 1,000 of the cars for replacement of a sensor designed to detect water in the fuel of models equipped with the 2.4-liter, BMW-made diesel engine. Ford said the sensors weren't wired correctly and might fail to activate indicator lights if water got into the fuel.

Opening lead: Queen of ♦.

This hand was played in a team match, and the same contract was reached at both tables. The two opening leads were the same, yet one declarer went down and the other made his contract. Study the two lines of play and decide whether the successful declarer simply made an inspired guess or exhibited sound technique.

At both tables South chose a jump to two no trump for his rebid. Although he had only 18 HCP, his prime controls and good five-card suit increased the worth of his hand by a point or two.

Both Wests selected the queen of diamonds as the opening lead. At one table the play was soon over. Declarer covered with dummy's king, East won the ace and returned the suit and the defenders collected five fast diamond tricks. Down one.

At the other table South followed with a low diamond from dummy on the opening lead! West continued with a diamond to the king and ace, but East had no diamond return. Declarer won the spade return, crossed to the king of hearts and ran the ten of clubs. When that won, he repeated the club finesse and had nine tricks in the bank.

What's your verdict? Was South lucky or good when he opted to play a low diamond from the table at trick one?

There was a slender clue to suggest that East might have the ace of diamonds. Since East-West were not vulnerable, West might have overcalled one diamond, had he held A-Q-J-10-x in the suit, or even A-Q-J-x plus the king of clubs. That was enough to influence South into ducking the diamond lead at trick one, which was the odds-on play to prevent the defenders from running five diamond tricks.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Rearing Child Costs $100,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Middle income families with two children and a wife working part time spend about $100,000 to raise each child from birth through four years of college, a study says.

In his new book, "Investing in Children: New Estimates of Parental Expenditures," Thomas J. Espenshade, a population economist, also said the number of children in the family is the chief determinant in money spent per child.

Middle-income parents of only children generally spend 54 percent more on their offspring than parents of three children spend on each child, said the study, which used figures from 1981 and was commissioned by The Urban Institute, a non-profit research institute.

High-income families were defined as those in which the husband held a white-collar job and attended college; medium-income, the husband held a blue-collar job and a high school degree; and low-income, the husband was a blue-collar worker with less than a high-school education.

High-income families spent $98,300, excluding college, on each child; middle income, $82,400; and low-income, $74,950.

"Current evidence suggests that parents vastly underestimate the amount of money they spend on their children," said William Gorham, president of The Urban Institute.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The market trend is 1.00-1.25 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro and Robersonville 48.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 48.25; Wilson 48.25; Rowland 47.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 42.00; Fayetteville 41.00; Whiteville 41.00; Wallace 41.00; Spivey's Corner unreported, Rowland 43.00, Durham, unreported.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 55 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is generally steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,792,000, compared to 1,819,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady at mostly 3.96-4.06 in East and 4.00-4.10 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans slightly lower at mostly 8.65-8.86 in the east and mostly 8.66-8.71 in the Piedmont; (new crop corn 2.95-3.34; soybeans 7.04-7.30, wheat 3.38-3.60).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some scattered gains today, resuming a short but spirited rally that took place late in Wednesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.66 to 1,106.25 in the first half hour.

Advances and declines ran about even in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Some buying interest was attributed to reports that Iran was inclined to sell oil below prevailing market prices, because of problems and high costs involved in shipping oil through the Persian Gulf war zone.

But brokers also said traders had been encouraged by the fact that buying has stepped up each time the Dow Jones industrial average has dipped below 1,100 lately.

They said that gave rise to hopes that the market had found a "support level" after its long decline since last winter.

Today's early prices included General Electric, up 1/4 at 52 1/2; General Motors, up 1/8 at 62 1/2, and Exxon, down 1/4 at 40 1/2.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average, down about 12 at 2 p.m. and up about 12 at 3 p.m., closed with a 1.35 gain.

Declines outpaced advances by about 7 to 6 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 105.66 million shares, against 69.06 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .01 to 86.46. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .49 at 197.00.

Three TV Permits Issued For N.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission held its seventh broadcasting lottery on Wednesday, awarding 36 construction permits for low-power TV stations across the country, including three in North Carolina.

A low-power TV station serves a much smaller area than a conventional TV station — normally 10 to 15 miles. As a result, a low-power station is much cheaper to build. One can be put on the air for $100,000 or less compared to the millions required for a regular station.

The winners in Wednesday's lotteries included Satellite Entertainment Network Inc., Channel 68, Charlotte, N.C.; Ventures in Communications Inc., Channel 60, Raleigh, N.C., and Sandi Barrios, Channel 46, Boone, N.C.

Spring schedules for Recreation and Parks Department activities are now available. Call 752-4137 for your copy.

Cadet Gets Commission

East Carolina's Army ROTC detachment formally ended its first year of operation by awarding its first commission and acknowledging outstanding cadets.

The commission was presented to Graduate Cadet Maj. Ventura (Kris) A. Cuello, formerly of the Dominican Republic. Cuello, commissioned as a second lieutenant, will now undergo military intelligence training at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., before taking duty in Panama.

Pitt County cadets Dan Hester and Kennedy Shelly were also recognized.

Hester was presented the Department of Army Superior Cadet Decoration Award, given each year to a ROTC Cadet who excels in military studies, and the American Legion General Military Excellence Award, presented yearly to a high ranking cadet who demonstrates outstanding qualities in military leadership.

Shelly, the son of Ken Shelly of 102 Cherrywood Dr., received the Daughter of the American Revolution Award, given annually to a cadet ranking high in Army ROTC and academic studies.

Crash Study Is Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board has rejected findings by its staff that a two-minute delay by military technicians in identifying a civilian airplane off the North Carolina coast contributed to its collision with a military jet last year.

The civilian plane's pilot, Waynesboro lawyer Henry H. Tiffany, 48, and six passengers were killed in the accident on Jan. 9, 1983 after the plane strayed into a restricted military zone.

The jet, one of two Air National Guard F-4C Phantoms sent to identify the plane, clipped the wing and fuselage of the smaller aircraft, which crashed into the Atlantic Ocean 40 miles southeast of Jacksonville, N.C.

Investigators told the board Wednesday that three factors contributed to the collision: The pursuing jets flew too close to the civilian plane while trying to identify it; military technicians with the North American Defense Command delayed passing on information for air traffic controllers in contact with the civilian plane to halt the pursuit, and the civilian pilot, who had not activated a flight plan, was in a restricted military zone.

Reagan departs Washington Friday on a 10-day journey that will conclude in London with an economic summit of the seven major industrialized democracies.

The indicators report also said the index had declined only a tiny 0.1 percent in March rather than the relatively sharp 1.1 percent first estimated. The earlier, bigger version of the March decrease, the first in 19 months, had been interpreted by some analysts as a sign the nation's economic recovery was about to slow drastically.

Coach Sees Physical Game Tonight

BOSTON (AP) — It's only the second game of a possible seven-game series, but Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley says the Boston Celtics "have to win" tonight and will use more physical contact to accomplish it.

"They're sending us a very subtle message" in their comments to reporters, Riley said Wednesday. "They're going to bump us and be more physical, and I hope our players are listening because that's the approach I think they're going to take."

After the Lakers won Sunday's first game of the National Basketball Association championship series, 115-109, Boston's Cedric Maxwell said, "We played L.A. with kid gloves. We did not really touch them or bump them early in the game. We let them do what they wanted."

Facing the prospect of a more brutal battle tonight, Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said Wednesday, "I hope they're not more physical. They'll probably bring brass knuckles if they are."

"Sunday's game was very physical. I think they want to make it count for something. We were able to deal with it except for brief stretches when they got a lot of offensive rebounds."

The Lakers rode their fast break to a 28-10 lead in the first eight minutes. Boston never caught up, although it outscored the Lakers 99-87 the rest of the game.

To win, the Celtics say, they must improve their outside shooting to keep Los Angeles from double-teaming their big men and must retreat quickly on defense to stop the Lakers from scoring easy baskets off the fast break.

"I haven't seen a fast break this good in years and years. They're the best I've seen in the last 10 or 15 years," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones.

"It's a necessity that we win," Maxwell said. "To be down 2-0 going to Los Angeles, we really don't want to do that. . . . We won't play any bigger games this season except maybe the final one."

Only seven times in NBA history has a team lost its first two playoff games at home. And only once has that team come back to win the series. That was Los Angeles over San Francisco in the Western Division semifinals in 1969. In the championship series that year, Boston beat the Lakers, 4-3, in their most recent playoff meeting.

The home court "is a factor. I don't think it's a big factor but it's a factor," said Abdul-Jabbar. "It can be worth a couple of points at crucial times."

The Lakers, who had the NBA's

13th best home record during the regular season, will be hosts for Games 3 and 4 Sunday and Wednesday. Boston's 29-12 road record was the league's best.

The Celtics were tied for the league lead in home record at 33-8 and had won 15 games in a row here before the Lakers handed them on Sunday their first loss at home since March 23.

Riley said Los Angeles would continue to concentrate on Boston's strong frontline of Robert Parish, Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Maxwell.

"We have to take care of that priority," he said. "We're going to contest inside and run down the outside."

The most important factor for the Celtics is "coming out strong and not being flat" as they were in the opener, Parish said.

Boston also hopes to contain Abdul-Jabbar, who had 32 points in the opener, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had 18 points and 10 assists.

"They'll probably double-team me and not give me the room to maneuver," said the Laker center, the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

On Sunday, the Celtics used 6-foot-2 Gerald Henderson instead of the 6-4 Dennis Johnson to guard 6-9 Johnson. Would Jones change that tonight?

"I'll give some thought to that," he said. "Most times since I've been in the league, nobody's been guarding him."

"With DJ (Dennis Johnson) you have to be more careful with the ball because he has the long reach," said Earvin Johnson. "With Henderson, you have to be more careful about which way you go because he's so quick he can jump in front of you. DJ is a better defensive player, but Henderson is quicker."

Baird: No Decision Yet

East Carolina baseball coach Hal Baird still had not yet announced his decision on whether he will accept a similar position at Auburn University or remain at ECU this morning.

Baird, who has been the head coach at East Carolina for the past five years, was offered the Auburn position by former Pirate football coach Pat Dye, now the head football coach and athletic director at Auburn, several weeks ago.

East Carolina recently completed its season, finishing third in the NCAA South I Regional in Tallahassee, Fla. A six-team field competed in the regional, with Miami advancing to the College World Series from it.

Baird is apparently considering a counter-offer from East Carolina athletic director Ken Karr.

Jaguars Again Are Rained Out

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's 3-A State Baseball Playoff game with Roanoke Rapids, scheduled for last night at Greene Central High School's field, was again rained out for the second night in a row.

The contest is now scheduled for tonight at 8 p.m., again at Greene Central.

The winner advances into the eastern finals, and will be the host team for that game.

Cubs' Trout Flirts With No-Hitter

By JOHN KEKIS
Associated Press Writer
Nobody said anything about Steve Trout flirting with a no-hitter. As it turned out, it didn't matter.

Trout came within four outs of carving the masterpiece of his career, and then it spoiled by Albert Hall's infield single.

"I was wound up and intense," Trout said after the Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak with a 6-2 victory over the Braves.

"At first I was upset when it was scored a hit," Trout said of the smash that second baseman Ryne Sandberg knocked down on the outfield grass, but couldn't find in time to make a throw.

When the hit sign was flashed on the scoreboard, Trout turned toward the press box and shouted at the official scorer, but later changed his mind after thinking about the play.

"It was a tough play. It was fair. It was a hit."

Elsewhere, Los Angeles defeated Montreal 4-1, Philadelphia edged San Francisco 3-2, Cincinnati rallied to defeat Pittsburgh 6-4 in 14 innings, and St. Louis beat Houston 6-4. San Diego and New York were rained out for the second night in a row.

Trout also lost his shutout on Hall's hit. With two outs Alex

Trevino walked and moved to third when Jerry Royster's grounder up the middle bounced off shortstop Larry Bowa's glove for an error.

Hall's hit scored Trevino and the next batter, Rafael Ramirez, lashed a clean RBI single to left to score Royster and chase Trout, 6-3. Lee Smith finished up for his ninth save of the year.

"I thought about it around the fourth inning," Trout said. "But nobody said anything to me about a no-hitter. You definitely don't mention that on the bench."

Chicago jumped on Len Barker, 4-5, in the first. Leon Durham lashed a two-run double, giving him 41 RBI.

Chicago added three runs in the fourth on Bob Dernier's run-scoring hit, his third of five singles, and a two-run double by Sandberg, who had three RBI.

It was the third time in Dernier's career he's had five hits in a game, all against Atlanta, and gave him six straight hits.

Franklin Stubbs and Ken Landreaux hit two-run homers and Alejandro Pena pitched a five-hitter as the Dodgers moved into first place in the NL West.

"I'm getting one hit a game, but I just can't seem to get more than one," said Stubbs, who beat Bryn Smith with a home run for the second time in 10 days.

The Dodgers have only six homers in their last 22 games and Stubbs, brought up from the minors April 28, has four of them.

"I'm not quite used to the strike zone yet," said Stubbs, who is hitting just .211. "I'm going to strike out a few times, but I'm going to get hits that beat you a few times, too."

"He's got my number, I guess," said Smith, 5-4. "He hit a fastball, the same pitch he hit in Los Angeles. He's a pretty good guesser, he ought to go to Vegas."

Hunt Says Series On

The football series between East Carolina and N.C. State will continue — according to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Hunt, at a press conference yesterday, noted that the series between the two schools would continue in the future. There had been talk of State ending the series after the current contract expires in 1985.

Hunt, however, did not know now long the series would be continued — just that it would. Apparently negotiations for 1986-87 are progressing, although no contracts have been signed as yet. Contracts for the series have been made on a two-year basis all along, although Dr. Ken Karr, ECU athletic director, stated in the past that dates into the 1990's "have been identified" by the two schools for play.

Karr, however, is out of town this week, attending the College Football Association meeting in Dallas. East Carolina has been recommended by the membership committee for inclusion in that group, which includes most of the major conference and independents.

Pena, 5-2, won for the first time since April 29, hurling the 15th complete game by the Dodgers' staff this year, tops in the league. Gary Carter ruined his shutout with his ninth homer.

Reds 6, Pirates 4
At Riverfront Stadium, reliever Don Robinson put on a spectacular hitting and pitching display, but with victory just one strike away he made a crucial mistake.

Little League Games Reset

The Greenville Little League games, scheduled for Wednesday, were rained out and have been reset for Sunday.

The North State game between the Jaycees and Union Carbide will be held Sunday at 4 p.m. at Guy Smith field, while the Tar Heel game between First Federal and Exchange will be played at 4 p.m. at Elm Street Park.

pitch too good to pass up in the bottom of the 14th inning, and he belted it for a three-run homer, snatching a victory and a game-winning hit away from Robinson, 0-1.

Robinson had taken matters into his own hands in the top of the inning, lashing a run-scoring single to center off Bob Owchinko, 2-1, for a 4-3 lead.

"It's very disappointing," said Robinson, who worked eight innings and struck out eight. "I haven't pitched like that since no telling when, and I end up getting beat by a home run."

Wayne Krenchicki belted a solo homer in the ninth to send the game into extra innings.

Phillies 3, Giants 2
The dreary Philadelphia weather didn't dampen Al Holland's spirits.

With the scored tied 2-2 in the top of the ninth, Holland was set to chalk up his third strikeout of the inning when rain precipitated a one hour, 50-minute interruption.

Junior High School Athletic Banquet, held last night.

Ojeda, Stieb Toss Fine Outings

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sports Writer

Bobby Ojeda had Minnesota's number. Dave Stieb had Chicago's.

Ojeda, pitching in Boston's cozy Fenway Park, baffled Minnesota 2-0 with a seven-hitter Wednesday night while Stieb, hurling Toronto, ran his lifetime record against the White Sox to 9-3 as the Blue Jays held on for a 2-1 victory.

Elsewhere in the American League it was Texas 7, Kansas City 3; New York 10, California 1; Baltimore 8, Seattle 2; Detroit 2, Oakland 1 and, in a two-night double-header, Cleveland 9, Milwaukee 1 in the first game and Milwaukee 3, Cleveland 2 in the 10-inning second game.

Ojeda needed only 102 pitches and 49 minutes to record his league-leading third shutout of the season. That, coupled with Bruce Hurst's 6-0 silencing of Kansas City (there were a couple of rainouts between the two) provided Fenway Park with its first successive shutouts since Sept. 20-30, 1916, when Babe Ruth and Dutch Leonard blanked the Yankees.

"It's among his best games," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "I've been after him to throw strikes because with his stuff he can get any batter out. He said he would try — and he did."

The Twins nicked Ojeda for two hits in each of the first two innings before he settled down. "I was worried a little when they got those dinky hits, but Ojeda came through," Houk said.

"It was a fun night," the pitcher added. "We moved the ball around, changed our attack, started throwing different pitches, and it all worked."

Jim Rice drove in both runs, with a sacrifice fly in the third inning and his seventh homer of the year — and first in Boston — in the seventh.

"Today, I came out early and, with the field covered, I went to the batting cage under the centerfield bleachers about 3 o'clock," said Rice, who has been battling a slump. "I hit for about an hour and a half, just trying to relax and concentrate. Now I just hope this is the start of something for me."

Blue Jays 2, White Sox 1
"Every pitcher has a team he pitches well against. This is mine," Stieb said of the White Sox.

He came within two outs of a complete game before a walk and Ron Kittle's double brought Manager Bobby Cox to the mound. "He told me I'd thrown 150 pitches. That was enough," Stieb said.

Jimmy Key took over and gave up an RBI grounder to Marc Hill before nailing down his fourth save and Stieb's seventh win in eight decisions.

Buck Martinez and Alfredo Griffin had run-scoring singles as Toronto won for the eighth time in nine games. It also was the Blue Jays' 18th consecutive one-run victory.

"Our pitching's been good enough to keep us in the games," Cox said of all those one-run decisions. "We have some speed and some power and we can manufacture runs in different ways. We lost our first three (one-run games). . . I just don't know how to explain it beyond that."

Rangers 7, Royals 3

Mickey Rivers added an unaccustomed long ball to his short game to lead Texas past the visiting Royals. In the third inning, he slugged a two-run homer, his first of the season to go with one each of the past two years. And his bunt single loaded the bases in the fifth to trigger a three-run burst.

"You never can tell about me. I might get 20 home runs this season," said Rivers, whose homer gave Texas a lead it never relinquished. "It feels good to hit a home run in that situation," he added. "I knew we needed two, so I didn't take any chances."

"It was a welcome surprise," said Manager Doug Rader. But he noted: "The bunt he beat out was just important." Knuckleballer Charlie Hough scattered eight hits for the Rangers.

The Yankees beat California for the first time in six games this year, pounding rookie Ron Romanick and Jim Slaton for 15 hits. Romanick blanked Ron Guidry and the Yanks 3-0 on three hits 10 days ago. This time, Guidry scattered seven hits.

Roy Smalley hit a solo homer in the second inning, Butch Wynegar slammed a three-run shot in the sixth and New York added four runs Eddie Murray sparked a four-run fourth inning in Seattle with a three-run homer, his 10th homer of the year, and Mike Boddicker pitched a four-hitter for his fourth complete game as the Orioles won their fifth in a row.

Murray's blast off Ed Vande Berg followed singles by Len Sakata and Cal Ripken Jr. Gary Roenicke tripled and Benny Ayala hit a sacrifice fly to cap the rally.

Baltimore added three runs in the eighth on doubles by John Lowenstein and Mike Young and Todd Cruz's homer.

Rain Clouds Hide Eclipse In Eastern N.C.

By The Associated Press
Greensboro's fair skies provided favorable conditions for eclipse watchers to gather with all kinds of sophisticated and less sophisticated devices designed to provide a view of the last major eclipse in the United States this century. Some people traveled hundreds of miles to see Wednesday's annular eclipse. It took the moon from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. to journey across the sun's face. At 12:36 p.m., the time of maximum eclipse, the sky darkened to an eerie, yellowish twilight. The temperature dropped 5 degrees from a noon high of 59 degrees in Greensboro, the U.S. Weather Service reported. The dimmed sky kicked on light-sensitive street lamps. Tiny shafts of light streamed through holes in tree foliage, casting crescent moon images upon the ground. More than 300 people gathered inside, behind and in the parking lot of the Natural Science Center on Lawndale Drive to watch the event on boxes, cardboard, paper, the ground and even a front door. About 150 people congregated at the former regional airport terminal on U.S. 421, including two busloads of Winston-Salem high school sophomores, a Canadian television crew, three local television vans and dozens of amateur astronomers equipped with sophisticated telescopes, solar filters and cameras. TV Ontario arrived at the airport shortly after 11 a.m., having raced south from Petersburg, Va., where they had originally set up. "We were up there and it was raining and overcast and we were all very depressed," said producer Craig Moffit. "We just piled in and headed for Greensboro." The crew is filming for the series "Not Another Science Show" for a program on backyard astronomy. The show's host, David Stringer, said, "We literally have been on an eclipse chase all morning." Downtown workers streamed out of office buildings about 12:30 p.m. to catch a glimpse of the eclipse's most dramatic moments. And at the Guilford Courthouse National Military Park about 200 people found scattered openings in the forest canopy to watch the moon's shadow race by them at about 1,400 miles per hour.

At the peak of the eclipse, the sun was obscured for a bare seven seconds at 12:36 p.m. in Greensboro. But the show was more than three hours long with the moon beginning its journey across the sun's face at 11:05 a.m. and ending at 2:13 p.m.

At the Natural Science Center parking lot, a group from Virginia had rigged a projection system to watch the eclipse on the back of a white front door. Karl Stein, who came from Waynesboro, Va., with five other people this morning, had planned to project the eclipse onto an empty Coors beer box. Paul Voight, a Greensboro man, saw the contraption and offered to lend him the door. In the group of about 30 clustered around Stein's projection was University of Utah Professor Grant Fowles, who planned a year ago to make the trip to see the eclipse. The spectacle began in the United States near Morgan City, La., at about 9:40 a.m. After crossing seven southeastern states, the moon's shadow left the continent at 2:49 p.m. near Ocean City, Md. Larry Lee, the U.S. Weather Service Meteorologist in Raleigh, said a strong Midwestern storm system moving into the area made viewing difficult in some areas of North Carolina. The eastern sections received early morning rain, as did the mountains, and the Piedmont turned out to have the best conditions.

Temperatures dropped an average of 4 to 6 degrees across the state during the eclipse, said meteorologist Richard Jones of the National Weather Service in Raleigh. But Jones said the cloudy, cool weather at Raleigh-Durham airport not only prevented the temperature from dropping, it also stopped most people in the area from being able to view the eclipse. Another annular eclipse in the United States will not occur for another 10 years and it will be 2017 before a total eclipse will cross the country coast to coast.

Task Force Opens Study On Children

RALEIGH (AP) — Twenty North Carolinians are developing a plan they hope will spare as many parents as possible the horror that inspired the television drama "Adam." The newly formed Task Force on Missing Children met for the first time Wednesday, its leaders vowing to determine the scope of the problem in North Carolina and recommend what to do about it. Gov. Jim Hunt appointed the task force May 14, ordering it to submit a report and proposals for possible legislation by Oct. 1. "This is a very complex, difficult situation," said task force chairman Heman Clark, state secretary of crime control and public safety. "We must work quickly and not get bogged down, nor must we come up with a plan that will just add to the bureaucracy." North Carolina drew praise from a consultant on missing children who said only three states had organized similar task forces. Kristin Cole Brown, formerly the public information director of the national non-profit organization Child Find Inc., said that only recently have local, state and federal agencies begun working together to find the 1 million children reported missing each year. "I've spent three and a half years ... running from here to there, trying to catch the babies," said Ms. Brown. "I have listened to parents begging for help. The public was sympathetic but had no channels through which to help." Ms. Brown's testimony, during U.S. Senate hearings on what was to become the Missing Child Act was chronicled in "Adam," a movie about the kidnapping and murder of a 6-year-old Florida child and his family's struggle to improve federal programs on missing children. Saying she had addressed skeptical audiences across the nation, Ms. Brown added: "This is the first time that I don't feel that I have to ... plead, cajole or persuade." North Carolina has shown its awareness that "there is an enormous problem out there," she said. Charles Dunn, task force vice chairman and former director of the State Bureau of Investigation, said officials "really don't know how bad the problem is in North Carolina." The group will develop a definition of "missing child," study relevant state laws, and discuss ways to improve collection and distribution of statistics and other information on missing children, he said.

Lawmakers Get Teacher Pay Plan

Candidates Talk On Issues

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

Gubernatorial candidate Eddie Knox believes the next governor's biggest challenge will be managing money, but Democratic opponent Rufus Edmisten foresees more difficulty in setting priorities for the state.

Knox and Edmisten will meet in the Democratic runoff June 5 and the winner will go on to challenge Republican Congressman Jim Martin in the November election.

In separate interviews, the Democrats outlined their position on issues including taxes, education, jobs and utilities.

"The biggest opportunity (for the next governor) is in education, but the biggest challenge is how we are going to manage money," Knox said, citing federal cutbacks and attempts to balance state and local responsibilities.

He said there are additional fiscal controls that can be implemented and the state should not begin programs and then shift the burden of paying for them to local governments.

Edmisten said he believes the biggest problem for the next governor will be setting priorities because, "no governor can come in and right off the bat say this is the way I'm going to do it because things have been set in motion (by the previous governor) for a long time."

Edmisten said he believes his first priority would be to end "fragmentation of the educational system." He said the next governor should sit down with leaders including the state superintendent and the president of the University of North Carolina system.

"We should be talking about eliminating duplication and turf protection so much," he said. "We should strive for excellence regardless of who does it or how they do it."

Several of Edmisten's suggestions for improving the schools are a return to a more basic curriculum, including more emphasis on reading and writing, and giving teachers more time to teach by eliminating some clerical duties.

He said the state should reward teachers for extra work. One example, he said, is giving teachers more of a bonus for getting their master's degree.

"I am not for flat merit pay because there is no way in my

RALEIGH (AP) — First-year teachers in North Carolina would see salaries increase from $13,660 to $16,000 — a 17.1 percent boost — under a plan unveiled before state lawmakers Wednesday.

Legislative budget leaders, who submitted the plan to the General Assembly's Appropriations Committee, said the proposal was intended to boost the pay of starting teachers even more than two previous plans.

"The biggest need was starting salaries," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Expansion Budget Appropriations Committee.

Under the latest plan, teachers now earning top salaries of $21,640 would receive a 14.1 percent increase to $24,700.

The $201 million package is part of a $609 million draft budget prepared by the legislative staff under direction of legislative leaders.

On June 7, lawmakers will convene to consider Gov. Jim Hunt's formal budget proposal for 1984-85, which the governor plans to submit late next week or early the following week.

Hunt has said he would propose a 10 percent raise for all state employees with an additional 5 percent boost for teachers and school administrators.

In other budget matters Wednesday, James A. Summers, state secretary of natural resources and community development, said most of a proposed $4 million water appropriation would be used to provide grants to farmers to help reduce runoff to the Falls Lake basin and other state water systems.

opinion to judge who should get a merit increase and who should not," Edmisten said.

Knox advocates a re-examination of the state's educational goals in relation to the future job market and settling the discussion about who is the state's chief spokesman for schools — the state superintendent, the governor or the Legislature.

Knox said he's not taking a stand on who the spokesman should be.

"Now we're all struggling to find a handle on education," he said. "We're going in too many diverse directions and there is too much disagreement."

Knox said he favors a career development plan and continued in-service training. He favors new incentives for teachers to get their master's degree and rewarding them at each step rather than only after the degree is obtained.

Knox said he does not believe the state will have to raise taxes to pay for such programs, but said he is willing to consider a tax increase if it is the only way to give teachers the pay raise he has promised and to give state employees cost-of-living raises.

"It is unfair for people who work for the state to be denied cost-of-living adjustments when the private sector is being given cost adjustments," he said.

Knox wants to try to phase out the inventory tax over five or six years with a corporate income tax credit that would have less impact on local governments than outright repeal of the tax. He said he wants to begin studying how to get rid of the intangibles tax.

Edmisten said he knows of no way to lift the inventory or intangibles tax because they bring in so much revenue, but he said he would be willing to listen to suggestions for getting rid of the taxes.

He said he would be willing to consider a tax increase if there were an "emergency" in the educational system. Edmisten said such an emergency might be a sudden, sharp drop in student test scores or the mass exit of teachers.

"We need to get more out of the tax resources we have right now," he said.

Cigarette Label Vote Expected

By The Associated Press

The U.S. House may vote within two weeks on a compromise measure to put tougher warnings on cigarette packages now that manufacturers appear satisfied with the legislation, Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Wednesday.

"It appears things are back on track," Rose said in an interview in Washington, D.C.

Rose said he was told by officials of the Tobacco Institute, the trade association for cigarette makers, that lawyers for the major companies had agreed on language in the compromise being considered.

The latest dispute over the bill centered on a report to accompany the legislation spelling out the intent of Congress in setting up a system of four rotating warning labels for cigarette packs and advertising. The industry has opposed the report's attempt to broaden the Federal Trade Commission's authority over the labels.

Rose said a resolution in the language saying the FTC does not have jurisdiction over other design features of cigarette packs should help the bill pass the House.

Leases Approved

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Marine Fisheries Commission Wednesday approved eight shellfish production leases for public waters despite protests that recreational interests might suffer from the first such action in more than two years.

The leases are the first to be issued since a 1981 ban was lifted in July 1983. Five leases are in Pender County, with two in Carteret County and one in Onslow.

ABC Takes Ratings Lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paced by the comedy movie "Love Thy Neighbor," ABC scored with the three highest-rated television shows for the week ended May 27 and ran off with an easy first place in the Nielsen ratings.

The movie starring John Ritter and Penny Marshall, plus four other shows in the Top 10, put ABC back on top for the fifth time in six weeks.

CBS, last week's winner, fell to second place, nearly three ratings points behind the leader. NBC was in third place. CBS won three places in the Top 10, and NBC had two.

The weekly A.C. Nielsen Co. survey had ABC with an average of 14.6. CBS was second with 11.7, and NBC was third with 11.5. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 14.6 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The 11.7 rating was CBS' lowest average since the week ended July 29, 1980, when it scored 11.3 but still came in first.

The next two places after "Love Thy Neighbor" also went to ABC. The second and final chapter of "The Mystic Warrior" was second, and the special "Life's Most Embarrassing Moments" was third.

PBS Show Offers Viewer Class On Elegant Writing

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Some worthwhile things you may have missed the first time around:

"Calligraphy with Ken Brown" on public TV is a neighborly and eminently entertaining introduction to the ancient art of elegant writing.

Brown says it's easy to learn — "Calligraphy is an acquired skill," he explains, "that anybody can do, without artistic ability" — and he makes it look that way, too.

Brown's approach is classic how-to: describe an instrument or explain a pen stroke, then demonstrate its use or application.

His friendly, comfortable approach is what sets "Calligraphy with Ken Brown" apart; it's difficult to resist Brown's suggestion that you give the technique a try.

Each program in the series features a different project — how to design your own stationery letterhead, for example. In the course of a show, the instructor demonstrates various styles of lettering.

Calligraphy is an inexpensive pursuit, Brown says, with supplies available at any art shop. A kit developed to accompany the series is available by mail.

Brown himself learned the skill, practiced by scribes for centuries, in an architectural design class at Oklahoma State University. That was 23 years ago, and in 1972, he established the Ken Brown School of Calligraphic Art.

Though Brown now lives and works in Hugo, Okla., the television series was produced by KOCE, the PBS station in Huntington Beach, Calif.

The 13-week series, already shown in many parts of the country, will be available to all Public Broadcasting Service stations a second time starting June 6.

Part II of "Balanchine," Monday night on public TV's "Great Performances," includes scenes from the 1929 film "Dark Red Roses" — the only known footage of George Balanchine as a young dancer. The film was discovered recently among several old nitrate prints in the attic of a farmhouse in Ireland.

It's an early look at the eventual founder of the New York City Ballet, who appears for the romantic role in braid and earring.

"That Teen Show," in syndication on 75 commercial-TV stations across the country, is a weekly series of half-hour programs dealing with topics of importance to young people that happily gives more attention to substance than set design.

Suzanne Peters and J.T. Smith, teen-agers themselves, talk with celebrities and guest experts on a variety of provocative topics — cults, for instance, or adoption, or drinking and driving, or dating. Interviews are separated by rock-video segments chosen to fit the theme of the particular program.

There is a relaxed, unrehearsed air to "That Teen Show" that suggests spontaneity rather than slick packaging: "Views on teen-age gambling?" Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder wonders, seemingly caught off-balance when asked for his opinion on an upcoming show on the subject.

And it's a mild surprise, too, when Snyder, an analyst on CBS Sports' weekly pre-game show, "The NFL Today," declares: "I'm against all gambling."

Suzanne and J.T. elicit experiences from the celebrities ("Making people laugh," says comedian Robert Klein, the guest on a program on stress, "is a wonderful mission in life"), and talk with the experts for information:

"There seems to be much more stress than there ever was," says Dr. Alan Elkin, director of the Stress Management and Counseling Center in New York City, "largely because things are changing at such a rapid rate."

It's the experts who offer the advice ("Never give a compulsive gambler money," suggests Arnold Wexler, vice president of the National Council on Compulsive Gambling), and it's straightforward, never preachy.

"That Teen Show" was introduced in January 1982 on New York's WNBC-TV, and offered for syndication nine months later. More than 100 stations carried the series' first season starting in the spring of 1983.

The 26 programs scheduled for broadcast this summer were previously shown in the series' second season, which began in November.

"The Dumont Network," a television pioneer, is the subject of a retrospective exhibit, June 7-Sept. 20, at the Museum of Broadcasting in New York City.

The show, Metromedia and the DuMont Legacy, includes some of the most innovative programs in the DuMont library: "Captain Video," "Cavalcade of Stars" with Jackie Gleason, "The Ernie Kovacs Show," and "Life is Worth Living," with Bishop Fulton J. Sheen.

Families Evacuated In Wilson

By The Associated Press

A cold front that moved through North Carolina Wednesday dumped heavy rain in Eastern North Carolina, forcing some residents from their homes, and raising fears of crop damage.

Nearly 100 Ahoskie residents were forced to turn off their gas and electricity because of rising water from Ahoskie Creek in southern Hertford County. More than five inches of rain has fallen there since late Tuesday, authorities say.

In Wilson, about 50 families at the Lincoln Trailer Park were helped from their homes early Wednesday by rescuers in boats, said Sgt. J.W. Lamm of the Wilson Police Department. Lamm said the residents were asked to leave their homes as a precaution. He said the residents would stay with friends and relatives until the waters recede.

The rain that pounded the Piedmont Tuesday has prompted estimates of nearly $1 million damage to crop land. Most of the damage was restricted to Stokes, Yadkin, Forsyth and Surry counties.

Carl N. Cross, head of the state crop and livestock reporting service, said no such damage reports have come from eastern North Carolina. He said the rains might delay the harvest of strawberries and blueberries.

ADVERTISING OF TAX LIENS OF REAL PROPERTY FOR TOWN OF SIMPSON

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, I am hereby advertising tax liens for the year 1983 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and cost, and the omission of interest and cost from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The real estate that is subject to the lien, the name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. At the discretion of the taxing unit, and the governing body, the taxes that remain unpaid will be subject to attachment, garnishment, and foreclosure, to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

This 10th day of May, 1984.
