GUC Drops Rates For Bulk Barn Users

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission cut electric rates for bulk tobacco barn customers Tuesday night, and approved increases in tapping fees for water and sewer service.

The adjustments in the seasonal (bulk barn) electric rate schedule will reduce charges to bulk barn customers an average of 17.33 percent, and continue the commission's policy of basing rates on the cost of service.

GUC Director Charles Horne said a shift in the electric system demand charge to a monthly coincidental peak charge in January, made the reduction possible.

The new rate will take effect July 1, and according to Horne, will save bulk barn users about $107,000 this year.

The new tapping fees, which will take effect July 1, will increase the present $220 fee for a 4-inch sewer tap to $300.

While the present $220 fee for a three-quarter-inch water tap will remain the same, the cost of a 1-inch water tap will go from the present $350 to $400. The cost of a 2-inch tap will increase from the present $1,100 to $1,250, while the present $25 fee for a temporary hydrant will increase to $35.

Water department head Wadie Lewis said the new fees reflect the current cost of installing water and sewer taps.

No charges were made in the main fees and acreage fees for water and sewer service.

Commissioners were told that load management operations in May saved $69,502 in electric costs by reducing demand and adjusting voltage coincident with Carolina Power and Light Company's peak for the month, which occurred between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. May 22.

A total of 12,836 load management switches are in operation through the system, including 6,469 installed on water heaters and 6,340 on air conditioning units.

The radio controlled switches allow the GUC to cut water heaters and central air conditioning units off to reduce the demand on the electric distribution system.

Persons participating in the load management program, called "Beat the Peak," receive a $5 credit for each switch on their utility bills during the months of June, July, August and September.

Load management operations during the first five months of this year have saved some $473,600 in electric power costs by reducing GUC's demand at the time of CP&L's system peak during the five months.

Commissioners approved extension of water and sewer service to a 50-acre tract of land on State Road 1708 (the White Road) east of Treetops Subdivision, provided the property is taken into the extrajurisdictional limits of the city.

The developer of the property, Tommie Little, said the land will be divided into about 200 individual lots for manufactured housing.

Commissioners also approved a request from Sunnyside Eggs, located on the White Road, for sewer (Please turn to page 14)

Funding In Jeopardy For Eastern Office Of Archives, History

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The continued operation of the Eastern Office of the Division of Archives and History in Greenville appears in jeopardy, but local legislators say they're optimistic though not assured about getting special funds appropriated.

Funds for the first year's operation were voted last year with special legislation introduced by Sen. Vernon White of Pitt County. These funds will be used up June 30 of this year.

Archives and History Director William Price said this morning that every item asked for by his division and voted by special legislation over the past two years was eliminated from this year's budget prior to its presentation to the Legislature. This is the only regional office eliminated, he said, but several positions vital to the continued operation of various historical sites and museums are being deleted along with this office.

Price said he and Cultural Resources Secretary Sara Hodgkins are in favor of keeping the Greenville office open and have said so publicly.

White, contacted this morning, said he plans to use special legislation once again to keep the funding going. White said he and state Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. "are all very much aware of the need, and are going to do everything we can to get the money to keep the office open."

The office, which opened last fall in the Humber House here, was initially funded with $69,000. Three persons — an administrator, an archivist's assistant and a secretary — were employed. Presently working here are Dru Haley, ad-

Barfield Execution Docketed Aug. 31

RALEIGH (AP) — A judge today set Aug. 31 as the execution date for Velma Margie Barfield, the only woman on North Carolina's death row, who was convicted of poisoning her boyfriend with arsenic.

The execution would be the first for a woman in the U.S. in 22 years. North Carolina prisoners can choose between cyanide gas and lethal injection.

In a television interview this morning, Mrs. Barfield blamed drug addiction for leading her to commit murder by poisoning her boyfriend and her mother.

"No one knows how easy it is to become addicted to the medicine," Mrs. Barfield said in an interview with CBS. "I blame it all on drugs because these things had never happened in my life until I got involved with drugs."

Mrs. Barfield, a 51-year-old grandmother, was convicted in 1978 in the poisoning death of her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. At her trial in Bladen County, Mrs. Barfield testified she had also poisoned at least three other people, including her mother.

A stay of execution for Mrs. Barfield was lifted last week after her latest appeal to the United States Supreme Court was denied.

Depression Goes Inland In Florida

By The Associated Press

Two dozen tornadoes mounted another assault on the Midwest overnight and up to 8 inches of rain flooded homes and washed away cars, drowning at least two people, while lightning set fire to an oil tank farm in Alabama.

The two people were killed when their car was swamped by floodwaters four miles east of Lincoln, Neb., bringing the toll of weather-related fatalities since the weekend to 16, including 12 who succumbed to a heat wave in the Northeast and two killed by a tornado in South Dakota.

Meanwhile, a tropical depression with 30-mph winds — the potential forerunner of a hurricane — began moving inland at St. Augustine, Fla., this morning.

"Locally heavy rains and gusty winds will occur over northeastern Florida and extreme southeastern Georgia today as the depression moves inland," said a statement from the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Small craft advisories were in effect from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to Savannah, Ga.

Nebraska bore the brunt of the storms Tuesday night and early today with at least nine twisters touching down in several communities.

Retail Sales Inch Upward As Economic Surge Slows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales by U.S. retailers edged upward just 0.2 percent in May after surging ahead one month earlier, the government said today.

There were moderately strong increases for auto dealers and department stores, according to the Commerce Department report. However, the overall sales increase to $107.3 billion was weak in comparison with the 3.1 percent jump in April.

Thus, the report could be read as a new indication the national economic recovery is slowing, as both government and private analysts have recently been saying.

On the other hand, the only other major economic report for May so far seemed to indicate continuing strength. That report, issued June 1, showed the unemployment rate dropping from 7.8 percent to 7.5 percent of the civilian labor force.

When asked about the modest gain in retail sales, deputy White House press secretary Peter Rousell said today that it "appears there is a moderation in economic activity that should help reduce fear of overheating" in the economy.

In the last week, both Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and chief White House economist Martin

Feldstein have said they expected growth to be slowing in the April-June quarter from the torrid pace of the first quarter. However, both also said expansion this year will still be higher than the 5 percent officially estimated by the administration.

State OK's Panel For Greene Trial

The selection of a jury continued today in the trial of Harvey Lee Greene Jr. of Bethel on murder charges.

The state approved a panel of 12 prospective jurors Tuesday, but Greene's attorneys were questioning them this morning in Pitt County Superior Court.

Greene is on trial on murder and armed robbery charges in connection with the Dec. 19 deaths of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, at Young's Cleaners in Bethel.

Miss Bland and Edmondson were found beaten to death.

Greene is charged with their murders and with taking $3.50 in pennies from Miss Bland and $20 from Edmondson.

Chicken Pox Vaccine From Japan Is Tested By U.S.

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

A few droplets of virus isolated by Dr. Michiaki Takahashi of Japan's Osaka University were received with the scientific equivalent of ruffles and flourishes at a research laboratory in West Point, Pa.

The droplets, a scientific treasure, made it possible to start up American production of a promising chicken pox vaccine, developed in Japan and now undergoing clinical trials in the United States.

Varicella, the medical name for chickenpox, is a mild to acute disease caused by a member of the herpes family of viruses.

A small number of children develop only a few eruptions and show little sign of illness. However, most develop a rash and blisters. Some suffer high fever, lymph gland swelling, sore throat, joint pain and severe itching and discomfort.

Some 2 million to 3 million Americans, most of them children, come down with chickenpox annually. Sixty to 100 die. By the time they reach the age of 10, as many as 85 percent of all U.S. children have had chickenpox.

First reports on trials with the vaccine in America, begun in 1982, were published in the New England Journal of Medicine recently. They show the vaccine was 100 percent effective in preventing chickenpox.

Thirty-nine cases showed up in a similar group, also ages 1 to 14, that did not get the vaccine, said the report from Dr. Robert E. Weibel and associates at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia and the University of Pennsylvania.

The vaccine still is being investigated. About 9,000 children will receive it over the next 18 months. Results will be sent to the Food and Drug Administration for review and a request that the vaccine be approved for general use.

Dr. Arlene A. McLean, senior director of Merck Sharp & Dohme's research laboratories, said without the "Oka" strain of chickenpox virus from Japan there probably would be no effective vaccine at this point. It was isolated from a 3-year-old boy in 1974.

She said Takahashi's success ended the search for a strain and strength of chickenpox virus that induces the best possible antibody response while producing minimal side reactions.

The vaccine contains the live attenuated (tamed down) strain of varicella virus. It is called the Oka-Merck strain because it is made by Merck with a virus, Oka, the Japanese have licensed the drug company to use.

The chickenpox vaccine involves live viruses that are in the herpes family.

"It's a herpes virus and you look around and see what other viruses are herpes viruses," Weibel said. "There is genital herpes and mononucleosis and now some of these viruses have been associated with cancer."

"But just because they are in the same family doesn't mean they are as bad. We have no evidence of these problems."

The vaccine uses live viruses that have been weakened so they don't cause disease but permanently immunize the person who is vaccinated, Dr. McLean said.

Complications of chickenpox, cited in a Merck Sharp & Dohme report on varicella vaccine, include:

-Bacterial infections of skin lesions.

-Pneumonia, particularly in newborns and adults.

-Encephalitis, a complication in an estimated 1.7 out of every 100,000 cases in children; 1.5 of every 10,000 in adults.

Reye's syndrome, an encephalitis-like viral disease that can be fatal, is believed to occur in 3.2 reported cases per 100,000 of chickenpox. Medical authorities estimate chickenpox is the trigger illness for one-fourth to one-third of all cases of Reye's syndrome.

There also is a shingles connection.

"The virus that causes chickenpox is called 'herpesvirus varicellae' or 'varicella-zoster virus,'" the drug company report said.

"Unlike the viruses that cause measles, mumps and rubella infections, the varicella-zoster virus can remain dormant in the body for long periods."

"A child who develops chickenpox at the age of 6 and recovers, can harbor the virus for decades."

"Then, in middle age, usually after the age of 50 and at a time when the body's immune system becomes weakened, the zoster virus is somehow reactivated. 'Suddenly, it erupts into a case of shingles, an infection of the central nervous system marked by skin blisters and acute pain in the parts of the body supplied by the affected nerves.'"

Turkey, Chicken Interchangeably

It tastes good, is fairly low in calories, is a bargain and supplies high quality protein, iron, thiamin, riboflavin and niacin. No wonder poultry has long been a favorite food. Turkey and chicken may be used interchangeably in recipes.

Chicken can be cooked any way imaginable and its mild flavor combines well with many ingredients. The key is to buy the right type of bird, says Rachel Kinlaw, extension foods specialist, North Carolina State University.

The broiler-fryer is a young meaty bird about 9 weeks old. It usually weighs 1 1/2 to 3 1/2 pounds. It is tender and versatile and may be roasted, simmered, sauteed, broiled or fried. You will find broiler-fryers cut into pieces or left whole.

The roaster is an older (about 12 weeks) and larger bird usually weighing 3 1/2 to 5 pounds. It is never more than 8 months old. Its meat is suitable for roasting and stewing. Roasters have enough fat to brown well at a moderate roasting temperature.

The broiler hen is a plump, meaty laying hen about 1 1/2 years old. This bird usually weighs 4 1/2 to 6 pounds. It is sold as a stewing or baking hen. Cook slowly in a covered pan with water or steam to make the meat tender. Broiler hens are best cooked by simmering, steaming or with a pressure cooker. The mature chicken is generally preferred for rich stews and casseroles because they are more flavorful than the young chicken.

Rock Cornish hens are a small specialty chicken, usually weighing only 1 1/2 pounds or less. They may be roasted, baked, broiled or fried and are especially good stuffed. Plan on serving half or a whole bird per person.

The capon is a large bird about 16 weeks old, usually weighing 4 to 7 pounds. It has a fine flavor and a large amount of light meat. Capons are male chickens which have been surgically desexed. They make excellent roasting chickens.

Cooking Is Fun

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The country cuisine of America has been growing steadily in popularity and nowhere has this been more pronounced than in bean cookery.

For generations, both here and abroad, beans have been the mainstay of the laborer. They are hearty and usually cheap. Even today a bean dish that is the centerpiece of the meal can be cooked for a family of four for a little more than a dollar.

Bean specialties have also shown up in the gourmet field, such as the Brazilian special composed of black beans and sour cream laced with spices and a little rum.

One of America's favorites is the Boston baked bean classic that is still a Saturday night standby in many New England homes and a Sunday breakfast special as well in some.

In America's southland the black-eyed pea still holds sway. It serves as the base for the "Hoppin' John" stew, which includes salt pork or bacon, rice and seasoning, along with the beans. This is a New Year's tradition in many southern homes.

Americans are also becoming fond of an old Italian favorite. It comes from Florence, where the white beans of Tuscany, cooked and spiced with lemon juice and olive oil, are garnished with chunks of white tuna. Americans can substitute canned white beans for the Tuscan variety.

Many varieties of dried beans have become popular as the centerpiece in salads, including red beans, navy and lentils.

Red kidney beans, refried and laced with chili powder, have long been a standby in Mexico. And the Arabs puree chick peas with sesame paste to serve with dinner.

Some cooks consider it a must to soak dried beans for hours before cooking, but others feel it is sufficient to simmer them until tender. There is also a theory that beans are more digestible if you bring them to a boil and then soak them for about 12 hours.

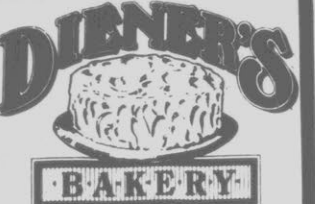

Beans have always been key ingredients in such soups as this mixture of white beans and frankfurters.

1/2 pound dry small white beans
Water, as needed
2 teaspoons chicken bouillon granules
1/2 onion, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1/8 teaspoon pepper
8 ounces frankfurters, sliced 1/2 inch thick

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

I don't mean to preach, but people who start using drugs rarely have a prayer.

DEAR ABBY: Can you explain why a 57-year-old Christian woman would want to spend all her time with an 83-year-old Jewish widower? He calls her every day, and she takes every opportunity to go to his home. Every time they meet, they embrace like lovers. What is the motive? His and hers? PERPLEXED IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Maybe she's looking for a father figure. Or he's looking for a daughter figure. Or his income figures in the millions. I can't figure it out. But then, it's really none of my business.

Head For Arizona And Retirement

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are very depressed because of our daughter and son-in-law, who are tenants in the two-family house we share.

We have decided to move to Arizona because I've just retired and we want to get away from the cold New England winters. Neither my wife nor I is in the best of health.

I told them I am going to sell the house and buy a home in Arizona. I offered to pay them for the wall-to-wall carpeting and other improvements they put into the house.

Well, my Dear Abby, you would not believe the way they took this news! They are upset because they will have to pay higher rent somewhere else, and they haven't spoken to us since.

Do you think we should stay in Connecticut because of them? They both have civil service jobs and are not hurting financially.

RETIRED

DEAR RETIRED: Don't give your selfish daughter and her equally selfish husband a second thought. Head for Arizona with no apologies, and happy retirement.

DEAR ABBY: Re "One Man's Opinion," the man who refused to hire anyone with a beard or droopy mustache:

Listen to this one: My grandson teaches in a Texas high school. Just before Christmas vacation he started to grow a mustache. The principal called him into his office and said, "Mark (not his real name), you know we must be an example to these young kids, so when you return from your vacation I don't want to see any mustache."

Most of the male teachers in that school either smoke or chew snuff. They also murder the King's English with "I seen," "He don't," "Have went," "Me and Joe did this or that," but not a word has ever been said to these teachers concerning their grammar.

IDAHO GRANDAD WITH A HANDLEBAR MUSTACHE

DEAR ABBY: Sue (not her real name) and I are engaged to be married. We've gone together for nearly two years and are both in our mid-20s. The other night she said she would like to get me high on pot just to see how it would affect me. I have never even tried pot and I told Sue I had no desire to.

She said she had smoked it occasionally with the guy she went with before she met me, and when she was high on pot, the sex was really terrific—not that she didn't enjoy sex with me, but it was incredible with pot!

I told her I didn't care to smoke pot, and if she did, she had the wrong guy. Abby, Sue had never mentioned pot before, and her sudden interest in it worries me. What do you make of this? And what should I do?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: Initiate an honest, open discussion with Sue, making it crystal clear that you're not interested in smoking pot.

As Sue said, it may enhance the sexual experience, but hear this: Studies done with male laboratory animals show that the principal chemical in marijuana (THC) lowers the level of testosterone, the principal male sex hormone, decreases sperm count and causes abnormalities in the sperm.

Also, one of the most widely accepted misconceptions about marijuana is that it is not physically or psychologically addictive. Not true. It is.

It's Same Idea

You would like to see the huge federal deficit reduced?

You are not alone. The "how" is being considered within and outside the federal government.

A study by the prestigious Brookings Institution has the answers ... they think.

It has some of the general prescription from the White House, but comes more closely to approximating the basic themes of Democratic Party seers: reduce spending and increase taxes.

The study's spending cuts would begin with a freeze on most domestic programs for next year, plus reductions in defense budgets. The proposal for enlarging the tax bite is more revolutionary ... envisioning the scrapping of our present philosophy of income taxes in favor of what amounts to a tax on what a person or business spends. The "consumption" tax would exempt savings.

A drawback?

Replacing the 71-year-old income tax system is something that could not be accomplished in a hurry. More than likely it would take precious years.

Present efforts to further simplify familiar Form 1040 have been under way for months without a satisfactory product. Our old friend has been "simplified" a number of times but the chore of filling-in-the-blanks is still as confusing to some taxpayers as Rubic's Cube.

There would be a "shock factor," too, in switching to a consumption tax. True, the Brookings' study includes a graduated tax plan in which the low income family would be paying only a proportionate share as compared with the wealthy; but conceivably it could drive our society's big spenders (and would-be big spenders) up the first available wall.

To adopt the new system would require a great education program to convince a majority of the citizenry of its benefits, a big selling effort to even get it considered in Congress ... which together suggest its chances are remote.

At best, the study confirms what has been long known: a broad spectrum of concerned people are seeking a remedy for the federal deficit. And, the final line remains: less governmental spending and more governmental revenue.

Keeping Pace

Leaders of seven major industrialized democracies have been looking at their problems in a summit meeting in London.

The problems were seen as many, but British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher summed them up. There will be no "easy or painless solutions," she said, but the message of the summit must be that promoting economic expansion without inflation "is the right one — and we intend to stick to it."

The wise prime minister well knows that growth in dollars and pounds and the other currencies of the world mean little if those gains are eaten up by inflation.

In our own nation careful government spending will do as much as anything to curb inflation, and if we can hold down inflation here we will help other nations in achieving the same aim.

Of course, outside factors such as a sudden surge in oil prices could have an effect, but that is all the more reason to pursue internal policies which tend to control inflation.

So Far, Candidates Are On 'High Road'

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — "The less substance that distinguishes competing candidates the more bitter their campaigns are likely to be."

That bit of political insight comes from the editors of The New Republic magazine and, although those editors were refering to the Democratic presidential campaign, their words certainly could be applied to the Democratic gubernatorial race which just ended with Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's nomination.

The runoff race between Edmisten and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox got very bitter because, in part, the two candidates were so similar politically. The two agree on most issues and come from the broad middle of the Democratic Party. They are both in their 40s. Both are lawyers and both have outgoing personalities.

In a race where the issues won't set the candidates apart, something else needs to be found to distinguish them from each other. When Knox and Edmisten couldn't debate major differences in education and tax policy, for example, they found themselves talking about personal traits such as experience, character, integrity and intelligence. When you get on those subjects, the debate almost certainly will offend someone who then feels the need to counterattack.

If we can accept the premise that candidates with similar stands on the issues will have nasty campaigns, then there is hope that the final round of the gubernatorial marathon will be conducted on a higher plane. There are enough major ideological differences between Edmisten and his Republican opponent, U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, to fill up a barbecue pit.

For example, in the runoff, much was made of some small campaign contributions each took from utility groups. Edmisten said Knox was insensitive on the utilities issue. Knox called Edmisten a "liar" for not publicizing his own utility contributions. It was much ado about nothing because the two had similar utilities agendas if elected.

In an Edmisten-Martin debate, the utility issue is real. Martin voted for Construction Work in Progress as a member of Congress and says it's time that "demagogic" politicians stop running "witch hunts" against the utilities. The utility question in Martin's mind is how does the state keep utility rates low without driving capital away from the utility companies. Edmisten has vowed to seek the repeal of CWIP, the law that allows utilities to charge customers for power plants before those projects begin generating electricity. In deciding between Edmisten and Martin, voters will have to decide between two very different utility perspectives.

The two differ on other issues, as well. Edmisten supports the Equal Rights Amendment and state-paid abortions for poor women. Martin opposes both. Martin supports a system of merit pay for teachers; Edmisten does not.

Edmisten repeatedly said during the runoff campaign that he wanted to talk about the issues but that Knox would not. On the day after the runoff, Martin vowed to run a "high road" campaign and showed an article of good faith in that regard by saying one of Knox's issues — that Edmisten hadn't paid his taxes for 11 years — wasn't really much of an issue. It was a "mistake" on Edmisten's part, Martin said, a mistake caused by ambiguities in the tax laws.

At this point, the two candidates sound like gentlemen. But the mudslinging doesn't usually start with the candidates themselves. Uncontrolled supporters usually get things going. Let's hope these two very different candidates keep their campaigns on the "high road," the road where their differences can be explored.

Public Forum

To the editor:

With the possible exception of Germany under Hitler and the Soviet Union under Stalin, no 20th century nation has suffered more under one ruler than has Iran under the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. When the shah was hounded out of Iran in 1979 by a people sickened of his high-handedness, his nepotistic excesses and his secret police, the hope was that Iran would keep the best element of the old imperial regime — impressive economic growth — and combine that with enlightened Western-style political freedoms to become a model for other developing Middle Eastern states. Five years later this hope clearly has not worked out. Iran is wracked by numbing problems that threaten to tear the country apart.

Khomeini's "Islamic Republic" is based on his belief that only he and his fellow clerics can be trusted to interpret and implement God's will without question. Don't obey and you will be annihilated. Those suspected of being sympathetic to Western culture or to the shah are denounced in public show trials as agents of Satan before being put to death. Many more Iranians have been killed or maimed in the four-year-old Persian Gulf war.

The paradox is obvious. In the name of a revolution that was supposed to end human rights abuses, the ayatollah's goon squads and maniacal war have killed far more Iranians than the shah's secret police ever did. Iran's robust economy has almost completely broken down. Communication by mail or phone has become difficult. Food and medicine are expensive and in short supply. Inflation runs over 100 percent annually. Unemployment is nearly 2 million, even with the fresh conscripts in the meat-grinder war. Oil production, once the foundation of the national economy, is at barely one half the level of the Shah's last years.

No one can say whether Khomeini's Islamic Republic will outlast him. But in an age of general world progress, no state is making less progress — indeed, is sliding faster into anarchy than is the Iran of the Ayatullah Khomeini.

S. Frank Harrell Jr.
Washington, N.C.

To the editor:

Senator Helms has stated flatly that there are no death squads in El Salvador. The senator credits the infallibility of his judgment on a meeting with Roberto D'Aubisson, the losing right-wing candidate in the recent presidential election, who did not strike him as "being the kind of fella who would be connected with death squads." Four dead American nuns and a publicly murdered El Salvadoran bishop would most likely express contrary opinions if they could talk.

To borrow a phrase from erstwhile admirers of Chairman Mao, Jesse, "the Great Helmsman" is steering into muddy water when he declares that an ex-U.S. Ambassador has been trying to turn Central American countries over to the communists. If the Senator had lived in the time of Christ, he might well have labled Jesus' actions in driving the merchants from the temple "communist-inspired" because it discouraged free enterprise.

The present U.S. Embassy received no cooperation from Salvadoran officials when it undertook to investigate the murder of the nuns. It took two years to bring the suspects to trial, where they were convicted in spite of intimidation of the jurors.

Speaking For A President

WASHINGTON — Strategists at Reagan-Bush '84, the president's campaign organization, have so far excluded several top administration officials from their roster of surrogate speakers for Ronald Reagan.

Among those officials who have not made public appearances for Reagan are budget director David Stockman, Attorney General William French Smith, presidential counselor Edwin Meese, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and CIA Director William Casey.

Stockman, point man in the president's early budget battles, has kept a low profile since his confessions to William Greider in The Atlantic Monthly. Smith was to leave his post earlier this year, but Meese's difficulties in succeeding him have forced him to postpone his departure until after the election.

Casey, like Meese, has encountered continuing inquiries into his personal finances and role in the "Debategate" case. And Weinberger's advocacy of high defense spending has ostensibly given worry to Reagan campaign officials concerned about the president's militaristic image.

Reagan-Bush says that 21 individuals, including four congressmen and Dallas Cowboy coach Tom Landry, have stumped for the president thus far. Vice President Bush leads the travel roster with 17 states visited. He is followed by Maureen Reagan, who has visited seven states for her father, then Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce (five), Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Hance (four), and Treasury Secretary Donald Regan (three). Seven of the 21 have been women.

Interior Secretary William Clark, who Pentagon sources say has continued to be involved in national security affairs (his former White House beat), and Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, at least once controversial, have visited two states each for the presidential campaign.

Members of the U.S. Senate received more than $3 million in honoraria in 1983, a 25 percent increase from 1982, according to the self-styled citizen's group Common Cause. This year new restrictions will limit honoraria to approximately $22,000 annually per senator.

Two months ago American Airlines became the first domestic air carrier to shift some of its clerical work overseas. It hired 244 new employees in Barbados to enter data from used American Airlines tickets into company computers. American contends that the overseas jobs, paid at a rate of $2 to $3 per hour, haven't cut into the airline's employment stateside. Yet it is an indication of how "service" sector jobs are not immune to export.

A South African Supreme Court judge recently cleared a white man who had murdered a black for stealing 81 cents in milk money from the white's porch. The judge, Irving Steyn, said the white man "deserved a medal for ending a spate of petty theft" in the neighborhood.

Reagan Questions Soviets' Solidarity

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan moves into his reelection campaign, the argument he is beginning to make for the lack of progress in controlling nuclear weapons is that Soviet leaders are too confused to come to any decision, even to reopen stalled negotiations with the United States.

"We're so accustomed," he told reporters at the windup of the economic summit in London, "to viewing the Soviets as engaged in various kinds of machinations, and so forth, it's beginning to occur to some of us that maybe the silence is because they don't know what to say right now."

The notion that Konstantin U. Chernenko is not firmly in the saddle in Moscow four months after succeeding Yuri V. Andropov could deflect criticism that Reagan has not tried hard enough to resume the arms control talks after a lapse of more than six months. There would not be much point in making proposals to an adversary incapable of framing a response.

"Damn it, Pierre," the president is reported to have said to his only critic at the summit, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada, "what do you want me to do? We'll go sit with empty chairs to get those guys back to the table."

Trudeau, who also needled Reagan at last year's meeting of the seven major industrial democracies at Williamsburg, Va., was pressing him to promote detente between East and West.

At his news conference, Reagan said the West was willing to discuss with the Soviets "whatever is on their mind." But the problem, he suggested, was the men in the Kremlin were uncertain about what they wanted to say across the bargaining table.

Here, at home, as the campaign gets rolling, the Democrats are likely to emphasize the dangers posed by the slump in U.S.-Soviet relations, not the least of which is a steady buildup in nuclear weapons on both sides.

Liberal and moderate voters, who may hold the key to the outcome in November, have never been convinced that Reagan is committed to reaching an agreement with the Soviet Union. Walter F. Mondale, his probable Democratic opponent, has already said he would impose a temporary halt to the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons in a bid to get the Russians back to the table.

For his part, Reagan keeps saying the United States is ready to be flexible on the terms of an accord — provided the Soviets resume negotiations.

Critics, of course, are demanding more of the White House. Some have proposed incentives to Moscow, such as an offer to combine the Euromissile and START talks.

Strength For Today

Bishop John C. Patteson is listed as one of the martyrs of the modern church. After a brilliant career at Eton he entered the ministry of the Church of England and was later sent to the South Sea Islands as a missionary.

He was greatly beloved by the people among whom he worked. One day, however, some white men landed from a ship and carried off five of the natives into slavery. Immediately, because he was a white man, feeling against Bishop Patteson changed.

The natives killed him. Later they repented of their violence and buried him with honors. Over his grave are the inscriptions: "He would gladly have given his life in behalf of those who took it." And these natives then returned to the Christian beliefs and practices which Patteson taught them.

Martyrdom is a great tragedy to those who suffer it, but it has been an inspiring revelation of the power of faith to those who witness it.

Medical Experts Issue Warnings On Heat Stress

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With simmering weather locked over the East, medical researchers are warning against the health hazards of ordinary heat, a killer that claims more victims annually than either hurricanes or tornadoes.

Hospitals in eastern cities have seen a dramatic increase in people needing treatment for lung and heart problems aggravated by heat stress.

Record heat last August was blamed for 220 deaths across the nation. A total of 1,265 Americans perished of ailments brought on or worsened by summer heat in 1980, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The National Weather Service warns that this summer is expected to be hotter than normal in the Northeast, Midwest and far Southwest.

Heat waves are especially hazardous in June, before the body has time to adjust to changes in weather, the Center for Environmental Physiology report.

A sudden increase in temperature can place a dangerous strain on the heart and blood vessels if the body has not acclimatized, the center, a private research organization, said in a report for the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs.

Heat kills by taxing the body beyond its abilities.

Weather historians estimate that more than 20,000 people have died from heat since 1936, including a record 4,676 heat deaths in that year.

Heat places a stress on the human body by overworking the organs that normally keep its temperature around a constant 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit.

When the hypothalamus gland senses a flow of overheated blood, it sends out cooling signals.

The heart begins to pump more blood, extra blood vessels are put into use and the circulation moves into tiny capillaries close to the surface of the skin — a means of dissipating heat into the air.

At the same time, water is sent onto the skin from sweat glands to cool by evaporation. A great quantity of water can be lost this way if the blood remains too warm.

As the air temperature becomes close to that of the body, it gets harder and harder to dissipate heat into the air and perspiration becomes the only way to lose heat.

But perspiration can cool the body only if it evaporates. The more humidity there is, the less evaporation can occur. That's why high humidity makes a hot day feel even hotter.

The extra work by the heart, the loss of water and minerals through perspiration and the continued rising of the body temperature can eventually overwhelm a victim — leading to heat cramps, heat stroke and even death.

Discomfort and listlessness can be first signs of heat stress, but usually are not serious. More dangerous symptoms, the Consumer Affairs Office warns, include dizziness, rapid heartbeat, diarrhea, nausea, cramps, throbbing headache, dry skin, chest pain, great weakness and breathing problems.

Those who have such symptoms should contact a physician.

People of any age can become victims, although the hazards are greatest for the elderly and the very young, whose body cooling may be less efficient.

To help avoid the hazard of heat stroke, hot weather safety rules have been issued by the National Weather Service. They include:

—Slow down.

—Heed your body's early warnings — discomfort and heavy perspiration — by reducing your activities and seeking a cooler environment.

—Dress for summer. Lightweight, light colored clothing reflects heat and helps your body cool itself.

—Eat less, especially protein, to reduce the heat from your body's metabolism.

—Drink plenty of water; perspiration can wring you out before you know it.

FCC Ruling May Raise Phone Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court, in a decision likely to mean higher telephone bills for Americans next year, has ruled the Federal Communications Commission may require consumers to pay telephone "access charges."

Unless Congress overrides the FCC or the matter is successfully appealed to the Supreme Court, the court's ruling on Tuesday clears the way for the FCC to impose a $2-a-month telephone access charge on residential customers sometime during the first half of 1985.

"Confronting rapid and fundamental changes in the telephone industry as a result of competition and fast-moving technology, the FCC acted for the most part with flexibility and care," the three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia concluded.

The agency had planned to implement the fee last Jan. 1 to coincide with the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., but then approved a delay until 1985 to allow time for further study and to mollify congressional critics. The FCC's chairman, Mark S. Fowler, has made it clear, however, he expects the consumer fee to be imposed next year.

In the meantime, the agency has already ordered most of the nation's businesses — those with more than one phone line — to begin paying a monthly access charge of up to $6 per line. Those fees became effective May 25 and Tuesday's decision allows them to remain in place.

The court's unanimous, 110-page opinion was a setback for state regulators and state utility consumer advocates as well as a host of corporations that had objected to isolated sections of the plan. The ruling could also strengthen the FCC's hand in defending its actions before Congress.

The access charge plan was developed to eliminate a decades-old procedure under which long-distance rates are set at artificially high levels to produce a subsidy to hold down local rates.

Social Security Change Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of experts has given Congress a blueprint for springing the Social Security Administration from the Health and Human Services Department, but one House Democrat says the plan does not go far enough to restore the agency's "lost integrity."

The plan conceived by the Congressional Panel on Social Security Organization would make Social Security an independent agency, stripped of some of its welfare duties. It would be run by an administrator reporting to the president who would rank on a par with the head of the Veteran's Administration.

If Congress went along, a new, bipartisan nine-member advisory board also would be set up to oversee management, weigh policy issues and make recommendations to the president on who should be the program's administrator.

Jackson Plans Three Nation Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson says he will visit Panama, Nicaragua and Cuba later this month in a bid to "break the cycle" of confrontation in the region and promote a "breakthrough for peace."

"We prepare to leave on this mission convinced that peace is possible," Jackson told reporters Tuesday after being briefed by State Department officials on U.S. policy in the region.

"I'm convinced that in this age we must fight for the pulling together of various elements of the Western Hemisphere, from Cuba to Canada, and declare the Western Hemisphere a war free zone. We must use a more aggressive diplomatic approach and stop militarizing the region."

Jackson will visit Panama on June 23 for discussions with officials of the so-called Contadora group, the four Latin American nations that have been attempting to negotiate a peace settlement in Central America since early last year. The group is comprised of Panama, Venezuela, Mexico and Colombia.

"Afterward, he will go to Nicaragua and Cuba for discussions on ways these countries can ease their differences with the United States."

The Reagan administration had high-level meetings with Cuban officials in late 1981 and early 1982 but no progress was achieved. Twelve days ago, Secretary of State George P. Shultz visited Nicaragua and reached agreement to hold talks on narrowing differences between the two countries.

Party Leader Objects To Plan

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The head of the military regime's Social Democratic Party has quit because he objects to having the party presidential candidate chosen by a convention rather than a party primary election.

Sen. Jose Sarney, who quit this week, argued that a primary would unite the party and discourage its delegates from deserting when the electoral college votes for a successor to President Joao Figueiredo.

Mondale Plans Interviews Before Deciding On Veep

WASHINGTON (AP) — Potential Democratic vice presidential candidates will begin trooping to Minnesota next week for chats with Walter F. Mondale, who is following a selection method reminiscent of how Jimmy Carter filled out the ticket in 1976.

Carter's choice that year was Mondale, who had been one of several Democrats to travel to Plains, Ga., for an interview.

Mondale, with enough delegates to win the Democratic presidential nomination at the convention next month, issued a statement Tuesday on how he plans to go about choosing a running mate.

"I expect to interview many of the candidates before I make my decision," he said. "I hope to begin these interviews within a week."

Top Mondale aides were meeting today to draw up a list of prospects and arrange times for them to travel to Minnesota. Among the participants in that session was John Reilly, the Mondale law partner and political adviser who was given the task of leading the vice presidential search.

Maxine Isaacs, Mondale campaign press secretary, said the eventual choice would not necessarily come from the ranks of those interviewed personally by Mondale.

The names mentioned most often as potential running-mates are Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, who is continuing his effort to block Mondale's nomination; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who endorsed Mondale on the eve of the Texas caucuses; Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York; Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York; Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky; and Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco.

Glenn Seeks Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "John Glenn 84" poster is still pinned bravely to the wall at the Ohio senator's presidential campaign headquarters, but campaign workers have been replaced by accountants and money raisers.

One group quietly totes up the $3 million campaign debt, and the other quietly figures out how to reduce it.

"We would like, obviously, to take a big hunk out of the debt by the end of this year because we still get matching funds through the end of the year for debt retirement. So there's a premium for getting a lot of that done now," said William White, treasurer of the John Glenn Presidential Committee, Inc.

"Basically, we're just trying to raise as much as we can as quick as we can," he added.

Glenn pulled out of the race for the Democratic presidential nomination in March after poor showings in the early primaries.

Of the $3 million debt, White said, $2 million is owed to four Ohio banks.

Senate Wants Treaty Effort Before Anti-Missile Testing Resumes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has acted to halt testing of a U.S. weapon designed to shoot down satellites until President Reagan certifies he has made a good faith effort to negotiate a treaty with the Soviets containing "the strictest possible" limits on such devices.

The 61-28 vote late Tuesday capped more than seven hours of debate which included a secret session to hear U.S. intelligence reports about recent Soviet advances in space, the last frontier of the arms race between the two superpowers.

It came only a day after Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko said a treaty should be negotiated "without delay" to ban anti-satellite weapons, a call which was publicly rejected by the White House.

Reagan insists an anti-satellite ban would be too difficult to verify and says the United States should go ahead with its own anti-satellite weapon — known as an ASAT.

The ASAT weapons are different from the successful Sunday test of the Army's missile designed to knock down other missiles. And they also differ from Reagan's call for research into a futuristic "Star Wars" shield against Soviet missiles, although all three systems use some common technologies.

The Senate restriction would ban the next round of testing of U.S. anti-satellite weapons unless Reagan certifies he is "endeavoring, in good faith ... to negotiate the strictest possible limitations on anti-satellite weapons."

The provision tacked onto a Pentagon authorization bill differed from a House vote last month to ban the tests unless the Soviets break their self-imposed, 10-month-old moratorium on testing the weapons. The two versions will be worked out later by a House-Senate conference committee.

The secret session, the first in 15 months, was held to discuss capabilities to kill U.S. satellites. Both nations rely on satellites for spying, communications and early warning of attack.

Goldwater Sees 'Cookie Farm'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After watching the Senate pass what he called "a bad piece of business," Republican Barry Goldwater of Arizona was in no mood to quit for the night. Nor did he mince words about "this ... cookie farm."

Moments after the Senate approved on Tuesday night a measure that would require President Reagan to attempt to negotiate with the Soviet Union over space weapons, Republican Leader Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee sought to recess until this morning. The hour was 9:01 p.m.

Still pending was further action on an overall defense spending bill which has been on the floor since Thursday. Until Tuesday's debate over anti-satellite weapons, little had been accomplished.

"After that last vote, I'm a little you-know-what anyway," said Goldwater. "At this rate, you're not going to finish this bill by the Fourth of July."

"I can remember when we used to work all night. I've got three amendments ready. I've been here since 7 o'clock this morning, and I'm still ready to go."

"My God," he went on, "this place is getting to be like a cookie farm."

Baker, who earlier had promised the Senate could quit at 9 p.m., shot back: "I don't know about cookie farms. But I know this. If there's one thing I take pride in, it's standing by what I say. And that's what I'm going to do."

"Well," retorted Goldwater, "You're a minute late."

Greenhouse Project Rejected

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A multimillion-dollar plan aimed at creating 60,000 high-paying jobs and increasing wages in the nation's smallest state was "perhaps too bold," Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy said after residents rejected it by a 4-to-1 margin.

The proposal turned down Tuesday, known as the Greenhouse Compact, would have authorized up to $90 million in notes and bonds as the first step in the $250 million revitalization plan.

With 99.5 percent of precincts reporting, 121,079 voters, or 80.1 percent, voted against the plan; 29,994, or 19.8 percent, favored it.

"If Rhode Island really is going to do something with its economy, it will have to adopt something like this in coming years," said Ira C. Magaziner, a business consultant and principal author of the 976-page report that recommended the plan.

"People knew there was a lot of money involved, but they didn't know exactly what we were going to do with it," he said.

Garrahy, who declined to seek a fifth term so he could lead the Greenhouse effort, said fear of increased taxes raised by opponents bothered many voters. "There's no question it was bold, perhaps too bold," he said.

"This was an attempt to create the Rhode Island version of industrial policy. It would have placed a great deal of economic power in the hands of a small group of people" — people the voters did not trust, said Alan Feldman, a Brown University economics professor and a leader of the opposition group Common Sense.

Common Sense said the state economy was not as bad off as the plan's supporters believed, and argued that the proposal would cost taxpayers more than its worth to the economy.

The plan, released in October, was named for research "greenhouses" it would have established to develop new industries. A commission of 19 business, labor, academic and government leaders drew up the proposal after a 13-month study.

Reagan Telecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will hold a news conference Thursday, to be broadcast live from the White House East Room at 8 p.m. EDT.

The news conference, Reagan's 25th as president, was announced Tuesday by White House spokesman Peter Rousell.

It will be Reagan's first formal news conference since May 23, before his 10-European trip which ended last Sunday after an economic summit meeting in London.

Perez de Cuellar Says 'Encouraged'

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he leaves the Middle East today encouraged by the interest Arab and Israeli leaders have shown in seeking a peaceful solution to the region's problems.

After visiting Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Israel, he said it was too early to "digest the positions put forward by the various governments."

"But what I can say, which in some way is encouraging, is the fact that all leaders I have met are interested in a peaceful solution of the problem," he told a news conference.

During his tour, Arab leaders supported Perez de Cuellar's proposal for an international Mideast peace conference under U.N. auspices. But Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir rejected the idea, saying it would only be another public forum for criticism of the Jewish state.

Perez de Cuellar said he had not raised with Shamir his alternative suggestion that peace talks be held

West Europe Eyes Defense Union

PARIS (AP) — Seven Western European nations have taken a first step toward rebuilding a defense union that has been largely dormant since West Germany's entry in NATO more than two decades ago.

Foreign ministers from France,

Britain, West Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg, as well as lower-level officials from Italy and the Netherlands agreed in principle Tuesday to try to revive the Western European Union.

"The ultimate objective is to strengthen the European pillar of the Atlantic alliance, to strengthen the European contribution to Western defense," said Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe.

The French-led initiative comes at a time of growing pressure on Europe from the United States to carry a bigger share of the burden in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which was created to defend Western Europe.

West Germany's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, said the ministers are focusing on four basic issues:

- An assessment of the military threat posed by the Soviet Union and its East European allies.
- A need to improve U.S.-European relations on such issues as nuclear arms control and the manufacture of military hardware.
- Ways to enable the European members of NATO to build compatible arms systems and to make Europe more competitive with U.S. defense contractors.
- Efforts to improve political relations with non-aligned countries.

The ministers said a formal declaration on reactivating the London-based union was planned for October, when foreign and defense ministers of the member nations are scheduled to meet in Rome.

The union originally was designed to monitor the rearmament of West Germany after World War II, a purpose that became outmoded when West Germany joined the union members in NATO.

The goal of the new drive to invigorate the union is to create a vehicle for coordinating Europe's defense policies.

Tuesday's meeting was the first at the foreign minister level in more than a decade.

World Population Growth Declining

LONDON (AP) — The growth rate of the world's population has declined for the first time in modern history, but a record 80 million to 90 million people are still being added to the human race each year, a United Nations report said today.

The annual population growth rate has declined from 2 percent to 1.7 percent in the past decade, said the State of World Population 1984 report, which put the global population at 4.76 billion.

The world population grew by nearly 800 million during the past decade — more than the number of people in India.

"And we shall be adding about one Bangladesh (population 93 million) per annum between now and the year 2000," said Rafael M. Salas, executive director of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities. The agency released the report at a news conference in London.

The report commended the overall slowdown in world population growth, but said high growth rates in many developing countries "were undercutting economic progress, reducing incomes and diminishing the quality of life for many millions of people."

The report said the per capita income of the richest country was nearly 220 times the per capita income of the poorest country in 1981. That gap will widen unless population growth is slowed and economic development is spurred, the report said.

The situation could be improved if all governments set specific population targets to help alleviate poverty and advance the quality of life, the report said.

"What we are looking for ultimately is stabilization," Salas said.

"Many developed countries perceive that since the growth rate is declining, there is not much to worry about," he said. "This is missing the point."

Escapee Reports Seeing American

HOUSTON (AP) — An American crewman from an oil drilling ship was seen alive in a Vietnamese prison camp weeks after his ship sank, contrary to official reports that all 81 crew members perished, an escapee from the camp says.

Nguyen Hun Chanh, who is now in a Filipino refugee camp, said in a letter to Douglas Pierce that he saw Pierce's son, John, and five other Americans during his incarceration in Da Nang, the Houston Chronicle reported today in a copyright story.

Nguyen, a 35-year-old industrial engineer, said he recognized John Pierce from a photograph in an Oriental publication. The elder Pierce had placed advertisements offering a $100,000 reward for information about his son's fate.

Nguyen has declined the reward, Pierce said.

John Pierce was one of 81 crew members of the Glomar Java Sea, an American ship which sank Oct. 25 during a typhoon in the South China.

Marvells Bring Old Rock And Roll Tunes Back To Life

Chuck Berry was there. So was Jerry Lee Lewis and James Brown, the Supremes and Buddy Holly, Connie Francis and the Temptations.

Actually, all those super singers from the past were the Marvells, a rock and roll revival group who performed last week at the Carolina Opry House.

The Marvells perform the hits of the 1950s and '60s with vitality and a sense of humor. Each of the nine group members sings and most of them play at least one instrument. Every selection, from "Rock and Roll is Here to Stay" to "My Girl," is choreographed and packed full of energy.

The group, based in Nashville, Tenn., performs three totally different sets each night. The first show is fast-paced and includes lots of off-the-cuff humor. Each member of the group is dressed differently to represent a character from the 1950s, from the "nerd" to the "greaser."

The second show, the Marvell High School Hop, opens with the musicians dressed as cheerleaders. Special guests attend the hop, and the group members portray a few of the rock and roll greats.

The third set includes tunes with a more contemporary sound, with the emphasis on letting the audience dance.

"Each show is so different in the sense that we try to give each song a different presentation," said saxophone player and manager Ed Zap. He said that the group, which includes eight men and one woman, was formed 10 years ago.

The Marvells include female singer Wendy Lord, who can belt out a version of "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" that would make Diana Ross proud; Tony Koz, guitar, keyboards and bass player who does a fine imitation of Sonny Bono; keyboardist Myron Stillman, who has a great 1950s disc jockey voice; trumpet player Kenny Posey, who can tear up a piano like Jerry Lee Lewis; Earl Peaks, James Brown impersonator, who plays guitar and bass; guitarist "Mad" Mark Rosenburger; drummer Freeman Brown, and Robert Green, bass and trombone player. Each member of the group sings and has the spotlight at some point during the night.

The highlight of the show was guitarist Rosenburger's incredible impersonation of Chuck Berry; he had the mannerisms and vocal stylings of Berry, and even though Rosenburger is white, resembled Berry after applying make-up.

"It took Mark two years to put the bit together," Zap said. "Two years of practicing, learning how to put on the make-up and watching Chuck Berry live. Almost every night someone comes up to us and asks if that was really Chuck Berry."

"We put in hours of rehearsal for every minute of show time, especially when choreography is concerned," Zap said. "The group decides what songs to include in the show and then everyone is assigned a specific duty: someone handles the musical arrangement and someone else the vocal arrangement and a couple of people get together and do the choreography."

"We have six or seven hours of material to choose from for each one hour set," Zap said. "Each night, the show we give is different."

Zap said that the group has a rigorous schedule of club dates, fairs, concerts and television. "We have driven 2,000 miles in the last week," he said. "We work 48 or 49 weeks a year and play an average of five nights a week."

He said that in order to be energetic for the show the group members have to take care of themselves. "You've got to eat properly and try to get as much sleep as you can," he said. "Rock and roll people are known for abusing themselves, but this is not true in our band."

The group goes through personnel changes each year, Zap said. Auditions are held in Nashville and "each group member is required to sing and dance and play a couple of instruments," he said.

"The thing that keeps it fresh is the fact that what we perform is such fun music to perform and the audience enjoys it so much," Zap said.

Ballet Philippines To Perform At ADF

DURHAM — The premiere dance company of the Philippines, Ballet Philippines, will make its first appearance at the American Dance Festival (ADF) when it brings its modern repertory to the stage of Duke University's Page Auditorium on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Led by artistic director Alice Reyes, a former student at the American Dance Festival, the 14-year old company will perform American premieres by two Filipino choreographers. Ballet Philippines is a company of 15 dancers which began as a dance workshop in 1970 and has since grown into the resident company of the Cultural Center of the Philippines, presenting annual seasons at the center and touring internationally.

The premieres in Durham will include "Photography — Gentleman's Honor" by Denise Reyes to a score by Philip Glass; and "Mutya NG Pasig," "Vision of Fire," and "Pagsamba" (Worship), all by Edna Vida.

Director Alice Reyes in 1966 received a Hanya Holm Scholarship to the Colorado College of Modern Dance. She also studied at Sarah Lawrence College and at the ADF under instructors such as Holm, Alwin Nikolais, and Merce Cunningham.

The company will also take part as one group involved in a five-part Humanities Series sponsored by the ADF as part of its 50th Anniversary celebration. The program, "Dances and Their People: The Aesthetic and Cultural Significance of Modern Dance," will feature the Philippines on Sunday, June 17 at 5 p.m. on the lawn in front of Baldwin Auditorium on Duke's East Campus.

The performances on Thursday, Friday and Saturday all begin at 8 p.m. Tickets may be obtained by calling the box office at 684-4059. For more information on the ADF's Golden Anniversary programs, call the ADF office at 684-6402.

'Street Scenes' Concerts Planned

WINSTON-SALEM — Music, an integral part of black heritage and culture, is the theme of the Salem Spirit Street Scenes, a series of outdoor concerts that will be held in seven metropolitan cities across the nation this summer.

The series, sponsored by Salem cigarettes, will feature nationally known musical talent at each concert. The events will be held in Memphis, Washington, D.C., Detroit, Los Angeles, Baltimore, New York City, and Chicago.

"Music is an important element in all our lives, and the Salem Spirit Scene is our way of bringing music to the local communities in which we are involved," said Charles Sharp, manager of special markets for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The Salem Spirit Street Scenes series will begin June 23-24 in Memphis with a two-day festival featuring The Manhattans, The Dells, and The Chi-Lites. The event, sponsored by Salem in conjunction with WDIA Radio, will be held at Tom Lee Park on the banks of the Mississippi River.

The Fort DuPont Summer Concert Series in Washington, D.C., will feature well-known entertainers each weekend from June 22 through Aug. 25. The concerts, which are part of the Salem Spirit Street Scenes series, will be held outdoors at Fort DuPont National Park.

The Watts Towers Music and Arts Festival, another of the Salem Spirit Street Scenes series, will be held Thursday and Friday in conjunction with the Los Angeles City Recreation Department. The festival will take place during the height of the Summer Olympics.

In Detroit, Salem will sponsor the Afro-American Festival, one of the nation's largest black festivals, with an anticipated attendance of more than one million people. The event will be held in Hart Plaza July 27-29. Salem will sponsor entertainment all three days of the event.

The Afram Expo, organized by the Eubie Blake Cultural Center, will be held Aug. 3-5 in Rash Field in downtown Baltimore. The event, is the largest ethnic festival held in Baltimore and is expected to attract as many as one million people.

New York's Harlem Week, an arts festival organized by the Uptown Chamber of Commerce, will be held Aug. 10-19 with activities in various locations throughout Harlem. Salem will sponsor four musical concerts during the 10-day festival.

In Chicago, more than 500,000 people are expected to take part in Bud Billiken Day, an event honoring newspaper carriers across the nation. Festivities will include a Bud Billiken Parade and a Salem Spirit Music Festival at Washington Park. Bud Billiken Day was started 54 years ago by the Chicago Defender, a black-owned newspaper that wanted to recognize newscasters who delivered the paper to subscribers. The imaginary Billiken symbolizes news carriers everywhere.

All Salem-sponsored events are free to the public.

Salem's involvement in these seven festivals is part of its ongoing program to help black communities celebrate their culture through music. Salem's financial support also enables communities to bring in bigger headline entertainment.

"The festivals are a way of involving Salem in the local communities at a grass roots level," Sharp said.

A Review

'Gremlins' Is Lacking A 'Heart'

Steven Spielberg's "Gremlins," now playing at the Plaza Cinema, has aroused a good bit of critical debate since it opened last Friday in theaters around the country. This issue is not the quality of the film: it is superbly made.

Rather, a number of reviewers were disturbed by scenes of graphic violence in a movie which will attract a large number of children. Even the producers seem to be aware of the problem because a warning, "May be too intense for very small children," appears on the advertisements and at the box office. At Saturday night's screening, I saw a number of parents take their children from the theater, but my 11 year-old source, Jason, told me he wasn't bothered at all. Nevertheless, for once the PG rating, parental guidance suggested, should be taken seriously.

"Gremlins" is a film full of deliberate tension. Spielberg set out to create a story that was both comic and horrific, and he has succeeded. Ultimately the comedy triumphs, but along the way there are plenty of scenes of good, old-fashioned gore. Spielberg never permits his audience to get comfortable; he constantly shifts the tone of the movie, keeping his viewers off balance.

Spielberg's story is old fashioned. In fact, anyone familiar with the horror movies of the '50s will recognize dozens of scenes, characters and situations. Into a small, isolated town Spielberg deposits his gremlins. They soon multiply, threatening chaos and confusion, and must be stopped by a handsome young hero.

Although the plot is cliched, the performance is not. Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates, Polly Holliday and Hoyt Axton are fine as sympathetic innocents caught up in the gaggle of gremlins. Axton is especially entertaining as a bumbling inventor whose creations never quite work, but Spielberg's creations, the gremlins, steal the show. There are all kinds of gremlins. Some are cute, cuddly things, and others are not. Once the gremlins begin to take over the town, viewers soon learn that all small, strange creatures are not cousins of E.T.

Director Joe Dante has filled "Gremlins" with memorable scenes. In addition to being clever, mischievous, and intelligent, gremlins are wonderful mimics. Two scenes in particular illustrate how human the gremlins become. The first is in a bar full of smoking, drinking and gambling gremlins, complete with a flasher and break dancers. The second is when the gremlins go to the movies, and Dante shows his audience a mirror image of itself.

"Gremlins" ultimately becomes a parable, and while heavy handed, it does suggest that we should treat the small creatures for whom we are responsible with considerable care. It is hard to escape the notion that Spielberg wants us to see his gremlins as children. His cute gremlins are every parent's dream and his maniacal gremlins every parent's nightmare.

"Gremlins" is one of the most entertaining films of the last few years, but despite the brilliant technology and outstanding direction, the film lacks a heart. "E.T." and "Close Encounters of a Third Kind" showed Spielberg enamored with the innocence of childhood. "Gremlins" suggests that he has grown tired of the cuteness.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied today, responding to a decline in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 5.30 to 1,115.83 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Interest rates fell in the bond and short-term money markets this morning after the government reported a 0.2 percent increase in retail sales last month. The gain compared with a 3.1 percent rise in April, and was smaller than most Wall Street analysts had expected.

Brokers said it was taken as a possible harbinger of a slowing in the pace of economic expansion.

Many Wall Streeters believe such a slowdown is necessary to permit any chance of a lasting drop in interest rates.

Today's early prices included Koppers, down 1/8 at 18 3/4; Johnson & Johnson, up 1/8 at 32 3/4; Superior Oil, up 1/8 at 41 3/4; and National Semiconductor, unchanged at 12 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.08 to 1,110.53, bringing its losses over the past four sessions to 23.31 points.

Nearly two stocks fell in price for every one that rose on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 84.66 million shares from 69.05 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .42 to 87.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .61 at 200.90.

McGovern Endorses Mondale Candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — George McGovern today endorsed Walter F. Mondale for president, saying he was convinced that the former vice president "will reverse the dangerous deterioration of Soviet-American relations and the drift towards war in Central America."

McGovern, who dropped out of the Democratic presidential race after poor showings in the early primaries, called on Democrats to unite behind Mondale and defeat President Reagan.

"It is imperative that the Democratic nominee be elected next November because Mr. Reagan does not have the philosophy, realism, or sense of history that can save us from war and economic danger."

McGovern said he was endorsing Mondale not only because he is "the likely nominee of the Democratic Party but also because I believe he will be a successful president."

He called Gary Hart "my special friend and former campaign manager" and said it was not easy for him to endorse Hart's chief rival. "Gary may not have won quite enough delegates to gain the nomination but he has won the support and admiration of many millions of Americans."

McGovern said Tuesday that Hart should make peace with Mondale. He also has called for a Mondale-Hart ticket as the best way to achieve unity in the party.

As for the third Democratic presidential candidate, McGovern said the Rev. Jesse Jackson "has pursued some of the foreign policy initiatives and military spending reductions that have been dear to me for many years."

McGovern said he does not agree with all of Mondale's views, "but I know that he is guided by a practical knowledge of economics, politics and diplomacy undergirded by the values of the Judeo-Christian ethic. I am convinced that he will reverse the dangerous deterioration of Soviet-American relations and the drift towards war in Central America."

The office acts largely as a referral center for the main office in Raleigh and serves as the base for Dru Haley, who now has responsibility for coordinating the work of 13 counties which have preservation project at various stages of completion.

The only other regional office — the western office — has been in operation in Asheville since 1977, Price said. Warren said he understood this office is funded as a regular budget appropriation.

"I feel we need an office like this in the east," Warren said. "And Vernon, Walter and I are going to do everything we can to get special funds appropriated for another year. We're also going to be working on making it a part of the regular

Celtics Topple Lakers

NBA Champs

Cedric Maxwell and Larry Bird (33) of the Boston Celtics slap a high five during their victory over the Los Angeles Lakers at the Boston Garden Tuesday night. Boston defeated the Lakers 111-102 in the final game of the championship series. (AP Laserphoto)

BOSTON (AP) — If one weapon is misfiring, the Boston Celtics reach into their potent and varied arsenal and pull out another. Somehow, they find a way to win.

Plagued by miserable shooting, players on the National Basketball Association's most successful franchise pounded the boards, paraded to the foul line and claimed an unprecedented 15th championship Tuesday night.

The Celtics capped a surge from a 2-1 deficit with a 111-102 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in the seventh and deciding game to win the series, 4-3.

"There's no way we were going to lose this game," said Boston hero Cedric Maxwell, who matched his season-high with a team-leading 24 points. "We have leadership, courage, poise, charisma. We have it all."

"Their aggressiveness won it," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley.

The Celtics, who were to visit President Reagan at the White House today, hit only 39.5 percent of their field-goal attempts, their second poorest performance in 23 playoff games, while Los Angeles connected at a 48.8 clip. But the Celtics' 52-33 rebounding margin was its second largest of the playoffs and marked the fifth time in the series that they outrebounded the Lakers.

Trailing by two points in Game 2, Boston found a way to win on a steal and game-tying layup by Gerald Henderson with 13 seconds left in regulation. Boston won in overtime, 124-121.

In Game 4, the Celtics trailed by five points with less than a minute left in the fourth quarter, but a three-point play by Robert Parish and two free throws by Larry Bird forced the game into overtime and they won 129-125.

In Game 7, the team that couldn't shoot straight won with rebounding and foul shooting, in which it enjoyed a 43-18 scoring advantage.

"What has been our Achilles heel has been rebounding and countering their aggressive play," said Riley. "Their strength is size and power inside. That was the difference. They are a great rebounding team."

Nowhere was it more evident than late in the third quarter when Boston seized control of a tight game.

With Maxwell scoring 17 points, Boston took a 58-52 halftime lead.

"Before the game started, Maxwell said everyone get on his back because he's going to carry us and that's exactly what he did," said Henderson.

Los Angeles crept to within 73-72 with 5:17 remaining in the period.

But a jumper by Bird, the unanimous choice as the series' most valuable player, launched an 18-6 spurt that put the Celtics on top 91-78 heading into the final quarter.

Boston ended the third quarter by scoring nine consecutive points. Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge hit jumpers, then Parish sank one of two free throws after being fouled while hustling for an offensive rebound with 59 seconds to go.

He was fouled again 30 seconds later while fighting for another offensive rebound and made both shots. Finally, with two seconds left, McHale was fouled on a fastbreak and hit two free throws.

"It seemed like everybody played with a little more character then," said Maxwell, the playoff MVP when Boston won its last title in 1981. "We dropped down deep. We got all the rebounds. We pushed the ball up."

"We built the lead. We had things in our eyes that said we're not going to be denied," McHale said.

But the Lakers, whose last lead was 32-30, weren't dead yet. A 17-6 rally brought them to within 105-102 with 1:15 remaining in the game. Boston, which had just three field goals in the fourth quarter, finished the scoring with two free throws by Dennis Johnson, who had 22 points, and four by Bird, who scored 20.

"We put the clamps on them in the third quarter," said Maxwell. "In the fourth, we just held on."

"At the end of the game we made an aggressive comeback. We had to get to the (foul) line. That bails you out when you're struggling," Riley said. "When everything's got to go through from the field, that's tough."

The Lakers outshot Boston from the field in six of the seven games, but the Celtics, only the third team in 12 years to win the title after getting the best regular-season record, had more foul shots in five of the contests. In the finale, their aggressiveness on the offensive boards, where they enjoyed a 20-9 advantage, led to Los Angeles fouls and the 25-point bulge from the free-throw line.

"We didn't hit a lot of outside shots and we didn't control the boards," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Lakers with 29 points. "I think we could play better. You're only better if you prove it on the court."

The Lakers' fastbreak, responsible for a 33-point rout of Boston in Game 3, was absent. Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who controls it, had 16 points and 13 rebounds but sank only five of his 14 shots.

James Worthy added 21 points for Los Angeles, and Michael Cooper had 16.

Boston's victory keeps intact a number of trends. The Celtics have now won their last 14 championship series after suffering their only setback in 1958, and are 7-0 in seventh games of final rounds. Los Angeles is 0-5 in seven-game finals and the Lakers, dating back to their days in Minneapolis, are 0-8 in championship series against Boston.

The Celtics, who were swept in four games by Milwaukee in last

Nettles Provides Win For Padres

By The Associated Press
Graig Nettles is happy to be in San Diego. The Atlanta Braves are glad they're leaving.
Nettles, hitting only .224 entering Tuesday night's game, drove in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning with a single off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 4-4, to give the Padres a 7-6 victory over the Braves.

"I like it when the situation is like that," said the 39-year-old native of San Diego. "He's a power pitcher and I'm a power hitter. It's just basic baseball."

Nettles, who is 7-14 with nine RBI in his last four games, lined a 2-0 pitch to right to score Alan Wiggins, who had walked and stolen his league-leading 32nd base.

"I've got to look for a fastball in that situation and he'd be a fool not to throw a fastball," said Nettles. "This is exciting baseball we're playing here. It could be a fun summer."

In other National League games, Los Angeles outlasted San Francisco 8-7, Chicago crushed Montreal 11-4, Pittsburgh turned back New York 6-3, Houston blanked Cincinnati 7-0, and St. Louis defeated Philadelphia 7-2.

Nettles may never have been the hero if right fielder Tony Gwynn hadn't made a spectacular catch in right-center field on a drive by Brad Komminsk in the eighth. Gwynn caught the ball in full flight at the wall, then spun around and nailed pinch runner Albert Hall with a one-hop throw to first for a double play.

"The ball kept carrying," said Gwynn. "I don't have that strong of an arm, so the key for me is to get rid of it fast. I can't describe it. I just took off after the ball. I didn't think I had a chance to catch it. I'm not one of the best right fielders, but I just keep working and tonight I made the play."
"I've seen better catches, but I don't know if I've ever seen a better catch and throw," added Nettles.

Komminsk drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Rafael Ramirez had three hits as the Braves ended a 14-game road trip with five straight losses. Tuesday's defeat dropped them into third place, 3½ games behind San Diego in the NL West.

Dodgers 8, Giants 7
Pedro Guerrero went 5-for-5, scored three runs and won the game with a solo home run in the bottom of the eighth inning as the Dodgers moved into second place in the West.

"I've been struggling all year, but I know it doesn't last forever," said Guerrero. "I've always had confidence in my hitting, but I have to admit tonight gave me a very good feeling and a lot more confidence."

Guerrero's homer, only his fourth this year, came off Greg Minton, 1-5, and gave Dodger reliever Pat Zachry, 4-1, the victory. R.J. Reynolds also scored three runs and hit his first major league homer.

Jeff Leonard drove in three runs for the Giants with a single and his sixth homer, and Jack Clark had a two-run double to boost his RBI total for the year to 41.

Cubs 11, Expos 4
Jody Davis led his Chicago teammates on an afternoon romp at Wrigley Field, connecting for two home runs and a double as all nine Chicago starters had at least one hit in a 16-hit attack against four Montreal pitchers.

"I'm using a short swing to keep up a high average," said Davis, who drove in four runs and boosted his average to .311. "When the wind is blowing out, we've got seven guys who can hit the ball out."

That includes Mel Hall and Gary Matthews, who hit two-run homers and drove in three runs apiece. Matthews' fourth homer knocked out loser Charlie Lea, 10-3.

Dennis Eckersley, who had lost his first two starts for the Cubs because of a lack of support, was the beneficiary of the blasts as he earned his first NL victory.

Derrel Thomas had a run-scoring single, Tim Raines a two-run double and Gary Carter his 13th homer for Montreal.

Pirates 6, Mets 3
The Pirates, averaging just over three runs a game, are being called the "Slumber Company" these days, but not last night. They pounded out 15 hits to relieve some of the strain on their pitching staff.

"I was real happy to see those runs out there. Getting an early lead like that doesn't happen that much to anybody," said winner Larry McWilliams, 3-4, who has allowed just eight earned runs in his last 45 innings.

Milt May, starting when regular catcher Tony Pena came down with a virus, drove in two of the Pirates' four first-inning runs with a single, and Lee Lacy helped add some insurance with a solo homer in the ninth, his fifth.

Pittsburgh's first-inning barrage came against Tim Leary, 2-3, who was making his first start after six relief appearances.

Hubie Brooks doubled home two runs in the bottom of the ninth to chase McWilliams and bring in Rod Scurry, who earned his second save.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 2
Rick Horton, who had relieved 15 times, made his first major league start a successful one, pitching five effective innings before giving way to reliever Neil Allen, who finished with four perfect innings for his third save.

George Hendrick provided Horton with plenty of offense with a single, homer and three RBI as the Cardinals beat the Phillies for the fifth time in five meetings.

John Wockenfuss hit his fourth homer for Philadelphia.

Astros 7, Reds 0
Joe Niekro went the distance for the first time this year, hurling the sixth three-hitter of his career, as the Astros won their third straight and handed the Reds their 10th loss in the last 13 games.

Niekro, 5-7, struck out three and walked one and got help from Jerry Mumphy, who drove in two runs, and Bill Doran, who had three hits and scored twice.

Late Inning Heroics Do Job Again For Red Sox

By The Associated Press
The Boston Red Sox are not only making a habit of winning these days, but they're doing it the hard way — with late-inning heroics.

For the third straight time, the Red Sox pulled out a game in the late innings when they rallied on Dwight Evans' three-run homer in the eighth to beat the New York Yankees 9-8 Tuesday night.

"The pitch was kind of high, probably a ball, but I managed to hit it well," Evans said of the gopher ball by Yankee relief ace Dave Righetti. "I don't think I can hit a ball any better."

"Of course, here (Fenway Park) it doesn't make any difference whether you hit it 315 feet down the line or 550 feet or whatever onto the turnpike. They all count the same."

The victory was Boston's fifth in a row, and 12th in the last 14 contests. Previously, the Red Sox beat Milwaukee Sunday when Rick Miller drove in the winning run with a pinch triple in the eighth. On Monday night, Reid Nichols capped a six-run ninth with a three-run pinch homer against the Yankees.

In other American League action, it was Texas 6, Minnesota 2; Baltimore 5, Milwaukee 4; Toronto 12, Detroit 3; Seattle 3, Kansas City 2 in 10 innings; California 3, Chicago 2 in 10, and Cleveland 11, Oakland 5.

Boston's comeback offset two homers and five runs batted in by Don Baylor and five consecutive singles by Don Mattingly of the Yankees.

The Red Sox had cut the Yankee lead to 8-6 with two runs in the seventh on triples by Evans and Jim Rice and a single by Tony Armas. Then in the eighth, Miller opened the inning with a pinch walk and Jackie Gutierrez also walked before Righetti, 2-1, replaced reliever Jay Howell. Wade Boggs sacrificed the runners along before Evans belted only the second homer off the New York southpaw this season.

Rangers 6, Twins 2
Buddy Bell hit a two-run double off former teammate Mike Smithson and Larry Parrish drilled a two-run homer, carrying Texas over Minnesota behind the pitching of Danny Darwin and Odell Jones.

Darwin was touched for two home runs but earned his fifth victory of the year against three losses. Darwin's elbow stiffened after seven innings in which he allowed six hits. Jones finished up.

Smithson, who was traded to Minnesota in the off-season and beat the Rangers last week, was tagged for four runs in the second inning and lost his seventh game against as many victories.

"It felt good getting back at Mike," Bell said. "He was last throwing as well as he did last week."

Orioles 5, Brewers 4
Mike Young and John Shelby homered in the eighth inning to rally Baltimore over Milwaukee.

Young led off the eighth against reliever Rollie Fingers, 0-2, with his third home run of the season to tie the game 3-3. One out later, Floyd Rayford singled and Shelby homered for the winning runs.

The blow gave the Orioles a 5-3 lead and helped them withstand an RBI double by Jim Sundberg in the ninth off reliever Tippy Martinez, 3-4. Sammy Stewart came on to get David Rhodes led the way, hitting two home runs and a double in his three-for-four evening. Brent Elks and winning pitcher Paul Jackson each added two hits, while Chris McFarland and Stephanie Haddock each hit home runs.

WINTERVILLE — Winterville Machine moved into first place in the South Division of the Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League last night with an 8-7 victory over Washington, avenging its only loss of the year.

Mike Elks picked up the victory, his fourth against no losses. Chris Via, Lee Hardee and Junior Huber each had two hits for Winterville. Via's were both doubles, while Hardee had a triple. Duane Whittenburg had three hits to pace Washington, including a double and a homer, while J. Williams picked up two hits.

Whittenburg, whose homer had beaten Winterville Machine in their first meeting, tied the game in the top of the seventh with a three-run homer. But in the bottom of the frame, Via doubled, moved to third on an infield out and scored the game winner when the relay from first to third was overthrown, allowing him to race on home.

Winterville Machine goes to 6-1 in the league, while Washington falls to 3-2. Winterville plays host to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday.

Chris Bland banged out three hits and Carlos White hurled a four-hitter as Exchange defeated Wellcome, 9-3, in the Tar Heel Little League last night.

Exchange pushed ahead in the first inning, scoring three times. It stayed that way until the fourth when Exchange added two more — the clinchers. Jermaine Reed singled and Jeff McMillion walked. Both moved up on a wild pitch and an error let Reed score. Bland doubled to drive in McMillion with the fifth run.

Exchange added three more in the fifth and one in the sixth. Wellcome broke the ice with one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Grant Harman and Jenny Stoneham each had two hits for the Exchange, while Scott Byrd had two for Wellcome.

Tim Moore ripped a pair of homers including a three-run shot in the first to lift Sportsworld to an 11-1 victory over Union Carbide Tuesday in North State Little League baseball action.

Kelvin Yarrell fired a two-hitter and struck out nine on the mound for Sportsworld.

Moore finished with three hits, while Ledowick Johnson added two. Moore cracked a two-run homer in the fifth.

Tim Baker paced Sunshine with three hits, while Mark Smith and Eric Wilson added two each.

Computerland advances to face Aldridge and Southerland in the second round of the tourney.

"Dealing with a new coach and a new system and going all the way to the championship in the first year is quite an accomplishment," said K.C. Jones, who replaced Bill Fitch as coach after last season. "To get this far, these guys had to learn to understand each other and to develop that work ethic."

"The Lakers had more talent than we did, but I just think we had a little more desire, a little more heart, a little more character. That's why we won the game," Maxwell said. "We've become champions of the world again. That's where we belong."

Four Already Appeal Realignment

With less than a week gone, there have already been four appeals to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's "final" plan for realignment, set to go into effect in the 1985-86 school year.

A fifth school, involving an area conference, has also said that it would appeal, but formal notice has not been received by the NCHSAA.

The plan, under study for several years, was chaired by Greenville City School's superintendent Delma Blinson. A proposed plan was presented last month, and some changes in that were made before the plan was formally presented last Wednesday in Chapel Hill.

Schools wishing to appeal must notify the NCHSAA by September 15 and initial appeal will be heard on October 10. Further appeals will be heard on November 7, and the December Board of Directors meeting will adopt the final plan after hearing any further appeals from the committee's last decision.

It was recommended by the realignment committee that no further changes be made for at least four years after that date, and that any further realignment be based on percentages (whether a school falls into the top 25 percent, second 25 percent, etc.).

From the earlier plan submitted by the committee, several changes were made, but only a few of which would affect teams in this area.

In Class A, Cape Hatteras, originally assigned to what has been the Tobacco Belt Conference, was switched to Conference #1 instead. Conference #2, the TBC would, instead, take in North Edgecombe instead. Chocowinity, Jamesville and Bear Grass are current members of that league. Other members of the league are, and will be, Aurora, Bath, Columbia, Creswell, Mattamuskeet, and Belhaven Wilkinson.

In Class AA, the proposed Conference #1 would be unchanged from the first draft. Area schools in that group include Roanoke and Williamston. Other members are Ahoskie, Edenton Holmes, East Northampton, Plymouth and Roanoke Rapids.

Conference #2, which includes a number of the present 3-A Eastern Carolina Conference membership, would have one change. South Lenoir, originally in Conference #3, would be switched to Conference #2. Area members of that league would be Ayden-Grifton, Farmville Central, Greene Central and North Pitt along with C.B. Aycock.

In Class AAA, one change was made involving Conference #2, in which previously unassigned Pender County was moved into the league. Area members include D.H. Conley and Washington, along with Havelock, North Lenoir, West Carteret and West Craven.

The current Big East 4-A Conference, of which J.H. Rose is a member, would survive intact through realignment. However, there would be some changes in the 4-A overall alignment.

The state would have 13 4-A leagues instead of the current 10, and one of them would be a unique 3-A/4-A combination league.

Conference #13 would include Asheville, McDowell, A.C. Reynolds and Tuscola as 4-A members and East Henderson, Enka, Clyde Erwin and Pisgah as 3-A members. In that league, the top 3-A and 4-A teams in percentage would advance into the playoffs, regardless of overall league standing finish. (For instance, the top 3-A team could be third overall and still gain a playoff berth.)

Charles Adams, the incoming executive director of the NCHSAA, said that plans for the football playoffs are already set, and each classification would have a 16-team field. Second place teams, on a rotating basis, would be added to the Division I field, six each year from 1-A, five from 2-A, four from 3-A, and three from 4-A. The remaining runners-up would move into the Division II playoffs, as they have done the past few years.

Basketball playoff plans have not yet been made. Baseball, in all but the 4-A level, has admitted two teams from each league, and will continue to do so, with the 4-A's probably having two from each league also. Softball would continue to have two from each league qualify.

The official appeals already received involve two schools which wish to be assigned to different conference and two which wish different classifications. Denton, placed in Conference #6 in the 2-A ranks, wants to play instead in Conference #7. McDowell, placed in Conference #13 (the combined 3-A/4-A league), wants to be placed in Conference #12.

West Caldwell, assigned to Conference #9 in the 3-A ranks, wishes to play as a 4-A team. North Johnston, assigned to 2-A Conference #5, wants to play as a 1-A team.

Pender, as noted, assigned to 3-A Conference #2, has verbally said it would appeal to play in the 2-A ranks.

The NCSHAA noted that those schools which are placed by the committee in a higher classification because of geographic problems, would retain full playoff privileges. Those who move to a lower classification by request, will have no playoff privileges.

Late Inning Heroics...

the last out and post his first save after Martinez left with the bases loaded.

Blue Jays 12, Tigers 3

Damaso Garcia socked four hits and scored a pair of runs. George Bell contributed three hits and Ernie Whitt walloped a three-run homer as Toronto routed Detroit and snapped a five-game losing streak.

The Blue Jays shelled Detroit starter Jack Morris, 11-3, for six runs on eight hits in the first three innings in the earliest exit for the Tiger right-hander in two seasons. The loss was Morris' first on the road in six decisions this season and prevented him from posting his 100th career victory.

Toronto right-hander Jim Clancy, 5-6, bounced back from three straight losses, striking out five and walking four in 7-2-3 innings.

The Blue Jays broke open the game with six runs in the fourth to take a 9-0 lead.

"I guess there's certain teams you do better against and Detroit happens to be one of them," said Whitt, a Detroit native. "I definitely get more pumped up."

Mariners 3, Royals 2

Larry Milbourne, who had tied the game with a solo homer in the sixth, drove home the winning run with a 10th-inning single as Seattle beat Kansas City.

Alvin Davis opened the Mariner 10th with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice by Al Cowens. Ken Phelps was intentionally walked, and Barry Bonnell forced Davis at third. But after Darnell Coles went in to run for Phelps at second, Milbourne lashed a 1-2 pitch off Bret Saberhagen, 2-6.

Mariner right-hander Mike Moore, 3-4, went all the way, scattering seven hits.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

Doug DeCinces singled with the bases loaded with one out in the 10th inning to boost California over Chicago.

Rob Wilfong's single with one out off Al Jones, 0-1, brought on Juan Agosto, who surrendered a single to Rod Carew and an intentional walk to Fred Lynn. Salome Barojas then came on to face DeCinces, who singled sharply to score Wilfong.

Doug Corbett, 2-0, pitched the final 12-3 innings to pick up the win.

Reggie Jackson's one-out single off Jones drove in the tying run in the ninth inning for California after Mike Squires' two-out RBI single in the top of the ninth had given the White Sox a 2-1 lead.

Indians 11, A's 5

Julio Franco and Pat Tabler hit their first home runs of the season, worth two runs apiece, in a five-run first-inning outburst which propelled Cleveland over Oakland.

Leader In First Defeat

Immanuel Baptist, Arthur Christian and Salem Methodist captured victories in the fourth round of the annual Church League Tournament at Putt-Putt Golf and Games last night.

Immanuel Baptist, led by Alan Mizelle and Suzanne Tadlock, upset Farmville Presbyterian by 15 strokes to take the contest. Mizelle fired rounds of 34 and 32 to finish the evening with a six-under par 66.

Salem Methodist slipped by Jarvis Memorial by 12 strokes to up their tourney record to 2-2. Salem was led by Ray Taft, who shot a ten-under par 62 for the night.

Arthur Christian defeated Hooker Memorial in the final match of the evening. Lanny Morris paced Arthur with a par 72 for the night.

Farmville Presbyterian still leads the field with a 3-1 record.

Glory Fades Quickly As Shiras Eliminates Lendl

LONDON (AP) — Success and fame can be fleeting. Ivan Lendl has quickly learned.

Less than two days after winning the French Open, Lendl was knocked out of the Queen's Club grass court tennis championships Tuesday by unheralded American Leif Shiras.

Lendl, who looked strong on French clay in defeating John McEnroe for his first Grand Slam triumph, had trouble with the grass courts in this south England resort in falling 7-5, 6-3 to Shiras.

Shiras, 24, of Milwaukee, used a big serve-and-volley game to beat the second-seeded Lendl on the second day of play in this $203,000 Wimbledon tuneup.

Two other seeds also lost, advanced by defeating countryman Marty Davis 7-6, 6-2 and defending champion Jimmy Connors, seeded third, beat South African Bernie Mitton 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Lendl, 24, of Czechoslovakia, broke his opponent's serve to lead 4-3 in the first set. But Shiras broke back at love against Lendl's service in the next game and took control of the match.

"I only had two hours practice on grass, and I admit I didn't play very well," Lendl said afterward. "But to come from Paris and to play at the same level here as when I finished at Wimbledon last year would make me a genius."

Lendl added that the defeat "is definitely not going to send me into a corner crying."

Shiras said the victory was "my greatest moment as a tennis player."

Herbicide Damage In Eight Counties

Firm Recalls Leaf Fertilizer

By The Associated Press

W.R. Grace & Co., a New York-based agricultural company, Tuesday withdrew three of its fertilizers from the market in North Carolina as farmers in at least eight counties reported damage to thousands of acres of tobacco.

Fertilizers laced with herbicides are suspected in the damage, although state agriculture officials said test results received Tuesday had not "conclusively proven" what was in the fertilizer or that the fertilizer was causing the problems.

"It's highly suspect," said James R. Stevens, fertilizer administrator with the state Department of Agriculture in Raleigh. "W.R. Grace as of this afternoon has withdrawn all of its 3-9-9, 4-8-12 and 6-6-18 tobacco fertilizer from sale in North Carolina."

State officials said they found traces of herbicide in samples of the three types of fertilizer manufactured by Grace and that their results, matched with damage reports of the crop, "tend to confirm their conclusions" that the fertilizer caused the problem.

Agriculture Department spokeswoman June Brotherton confirmed that lab analysts are working to narrow the list of potential herbicides and suspect the chemical is involved is dicamba, a mild weed killer used on highway rights-of-way, corn and wheat. Tobacco is particularly sensitive to the herbicide.

But only trace amounts of dicamba were found in the Grace products.

"What we have here is an indication that it might be dicamba," Ms. Brotherton said. "What we're working with has been compared to working with an inch out of 16 million miles."

The list of counties with reported crop damage includes Wake, Moore, Chatham, Lee, Granville, Wayne, Duplin and Sampson. The damage reports began last week.

Reports of damage in Moore County range from 50 percent to 90 percent of the county's 2,600 acres of tobacco, local and state agriculture officials said.

While testing continues, agriculture officials are urging farmers to continue normal tobacco growing practices and to document damage to their crops with photographs. Farmers should also maintain purchase records and report problems to their fertilizer dealers.

Textile Import Freeze Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — An industry official says as many as half of the two million Americans employed in the textile industry could lose their jobs if textile imports to the United States continue at their current rate.

James H. Martin Jr., president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, made his prediction Tuesday after a group of Southern congressmen introduced legislation to freeze textile imports at 1983 levels.

"We commend the members of the Congress for their initiative in trying to come to grips with the most serious import surge in history," Martin said.

If Congress or the Reagan administration does not act on the proposal, textile imports will exceed 10 billion yards by the end of 1984, he said. "This displaces a potential one million American jobs," he added.

Martin said the textile industry has continued to call on President Reagan to fulfill his 1980 campaign commitment to tie the growth of imports to the growth of the domestic market.

And while the administration has yet to act on that commitment, the Congressional Textile Caucus has shown its members "believe they must act aggressively in the face of what is happening."

The bill introduced Tuesday would instruct the Commerce Department to establish an import licensing system and freeze 1984 imports of textiles, apparel and fiber at 1983 levels.

Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., the Textile Caucus chairman, said the bill was prompted by the administration's failure "live up to the promises it has made" to protect the domestic textile industry from unfair competition.

Jenkins acknowledged that the timing of the bill is intended to pressure the administration to take the same steps outlined in the measure. He insisted, however, that the caucus "wants to see the bill become law."

IN THE STATE

State Dedicates Research Center

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — At dedication ceremonies, the new Microelectronics Center of North Carolina was billed as a way for the United States to outdistance foreign competition.

Gov. Jim Hunt, speaking at Tuesday's dedication, said the $30 million research facility is "perhaps the closest thing we have to a national microelectronics center."

"This center is uniquely positioned to play a key role in a national program to make sure our American electronics industry is the leader it ought to be in the world," Hunt told some 350 people at the ceremony. "It is designed to bridge the gap between university research and industrial application, and as our companies band together in joint development efforts, this center can be the critical factor in their success."

The not-for-profit center is owned by the Research Triangle Institute and five universities: Duke, North Carolina State, North Carolina A&T State and the universities of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Charlotte. It also has industrial affiliates who contribute money and help in return for access to research findings.

The industrial affiliates include General Electric, AIRCO Industrial Gases, GCAIC Systems of Boston and Bell Northern Research, the research wing of Northern Telecom.

The state has contributed $43 million to the center in hopes of attracting more high-technology industries to North Carolina.

Roland Schmitt, chairman of the National Science Board, said the center is a major source for "the real electronics revolution: intelligent electronics."

"The center is a perfect example of how our country can indeed find new ways of building on its existing strengths in the international race for technical development," Schmitt said.

The center, incorporated in 1981, is seeking ways to manufacture a new generation of computer chips with microscopic transistors so small that a million could fit on one silicon chip — a chip which could easily rest on a fingernail.

Schools Ban Tug Of War

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tug of war was banned by the Haywood County School Board Tuesday night at all school events after a fifth-grader lost four fingers in a competition May 31.

Alex Smith, 11, underwent surgery at an Asheville hospital to reattach the fingers but doctors do not know if the child will regain use of his fingers.

The boy reportedly put his fingers inside a slip knot in the rope before the game began. When the knot tightened, the fingers broke and were pinched off. School personnel rushed him to Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville with the severed digits on ice.

Surgeons reattached them soon after the boy arrived. He was discharged last weekend.

Firm Accused Of Rigging Bids

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal grand jury handed down indictments Tuesday against a Goldsboro electrical contractor on charges the firm rigged bids on two school projects, federal officials said.

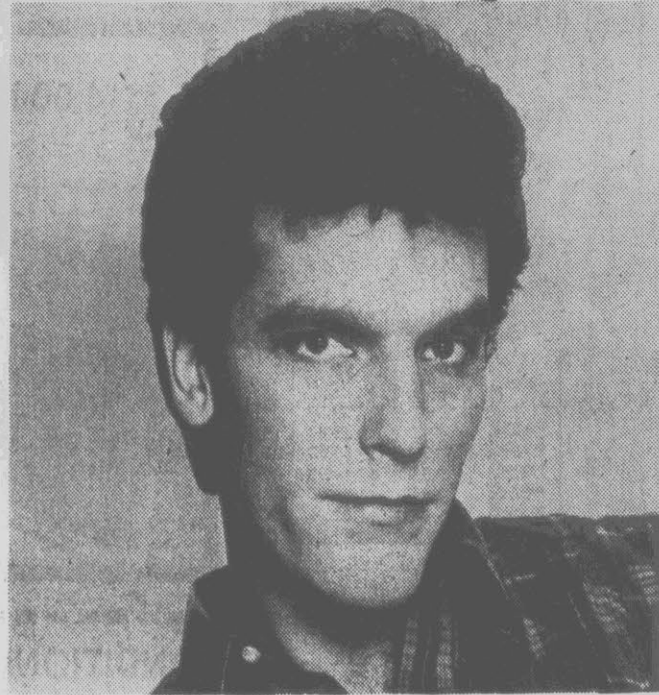

The two-count indictment charges Darden Electrical Co., Inc., with conspiring to rig bids on a July 1979 project at South Brunswick Middle School at Boiling Springs Lakes. The indictment said Darden won the contract with a bid of $301,000.

Darden also allegedly rigged the bids on a project at West Carteret High School in August 1979 with a bid of $156,000. Work was to be done on the school's auditorium.

The probe is continuing, according to a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's office.

If convicted, the firm faces a $1 million fine on each count.

Legislators Bid For Another $19 Million

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Money for repairing the roof of the Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst and for training workers to help them get off welfare are on the General Assembly's list of more than $19 million in requested additions to the 1984-85 budget.

The list was compiled by budget leaders and distributed Tuesday to members of the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee. Lawmakers were expected to open debate today on the proposals, which would be added to Gov. Jim Hunt's request for more than $300 million to upgrade the public schools.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said the three-page list, which calls for spending approximately $14 million on continuing projects and almost $5 million on one-time investments, contains items inadvertently omitted from previous drafts of the 1984-85 budget.

Some of the smaller items are $150,000 for repairing the roof of the Golf Hall of Fame and $120,000 for research into turf grass and corn at North Carolina State University.

Some of the larger items are $3 million for the state Housing Finance Agency, $2.4 million for expanding a seventh-grade vocational education pilot project to 72 new sites and $2.2 million for local programs to train workers and help them get off welfare.

There also is $2 million for community programs to help troubled youth, $1.5 million for adult day care programs, $1.5 million for additional personnel at training schools, $1 million for Community Action agencies that help the elderly, poor and handicapped and $1 million for operating the General Assembly.

Appropriations Expansion Budget

Committee Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said leaders are not yet trying to stay within a specified budget because they don't have any estimates of revenue for 1984-85.

"We're trying to be realistic but we're not limiting requests," Watkins said.

Until the revenue figures are available later this week, there are lots of estimates from which to choose. They range from $500 million — $400 million in new revenue and $100 million left from 1983-84 — to almost $600 million.

Legislators also remain divided whether to give teachers a 15 percent pay raise, a 10 percent across-the-board increase and 5 percent salary reclassification, or to give them a $900 salary adjustment and 10 percent pay raise.

The $900 adjustment would amount to a 17 percent pay raise for teachers at the bottom of the pay scale and a 14 percent raise for teachers getting the highest salaries. The largest number of teachers fall in between those levels and would get a 15.2 percent raise.

In other legislative action: A year-old sales tax on the informal sale of automobiles between individuals may be revised. The House Finance Committee approved a bill to do away with computing the sales tax on "book value" listings for specific makes and models of automobiles.

Instead, the tax would be based on the price stated in an affidavit signed by the new car owner and used to apply for an ownership title.

Bill sponsor Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said it was needed because many people were paying sums for used cars far lower than the "book value" set by the Division of Motor Vehicles.

The bill, which now goes to the House floor, could cost around $1.2 million a month.

A bill to deal with hazardous waste was introduced in the Senate. The bill, the result of a legislative study committee, mandates construction of a treatment facility and would prohibit locating it within 25 miles of a waste storage facility.

The bill attempts to deal with a problem that stumped the Legislature last year. Lawmakers adjourned without approving a waste disposal policy despite heavy lobbying by Gov. Jim Hunt's administration.

Another key provision is a ban on storage of any hazardous waste until there is a treatment facility. The bill would establish a nine-member panel to meet every 60 days and regulate disposal of wastes in the state.

Environmentalists and industry lobbyists have raised objections to specific items in the complicated bill and have criticized it as vague, but supporters say they're confident an amended version will pass during the short session.

A sharply divided House Finance Committee approved 24-15 a bill exempting shoppers' guides, publications containing only advertising, from sales taxation.

The exemption applies to purchases of materials used to make the guides.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said the proposal was "a matter of equity and fairness" since newspapers have enjoyed the same exemption since 1957.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said a better way to promote equality might be to restore the sales tax on newspapers and retain it for shoppers' guides.

Helms Seeks Delay On Farm-Related Civil Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chaired a hearing before his Senate Agriculture Committee which only critics of a pending civil rights bill attended, prompting Helms to call the bill a "legislative time bomb" and predictions that it would not be enacted this year.

Helms backed up that prediction with a letter to Sen. Orrin Hatch, chairman of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, asking that action on the bill be held up.

"I request you withhold action on this bill until a further assessment can be made of the bill's impact on American agriculture," Helms wrote Tuesday in a letter to Hatch.

Helms said in the letter that witnesses appearing at a hearing held by the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry "prompts me to urge that your committee thoroughly study the implications of the bill before proceeding."

Opponents of the bill charged that it would require farmers who receive federal aid to comply with federal civil rights laws, including installing ramps for the handicapped.

Helms said at the hearing, "This piece of legislation, as written, would be just a legislative time bomb for any federal judge around the country to tamper with."

Helms warned that farmers might find themselves in the same situation as the University of North Carolina in its 13-year struggle to comply with federal court desegregation orders.

"The taxpayers in my state spent $100 million to try to comply with all those doodads the federal government proposed," Helms said.

In his letter, Helms asked Hatch to hold full committee hearings on the legislation with referral to other committees as requested.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., one of the bill's co-sponsors, "can't understand all this resistance to guaranteeing American civil rights," said Packwood's press secretary, Etta Fieles, after the hearing.

The bill is sponsored in the Senate by Packwood, Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and 54 other Senators. It is aimed at reversing a February ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court which said Grove City College in Pennsylvania could not be denied all its federal funds because one of its programs was discriminatory.

Proponents of the legislation say the court's decision seriously diluted enforcement of civil rights laws and say their bill would restore those laws to their previous effectiveness — and no more.

Fire Forces Beach Guests To Flee

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — More than 400 people were safely evacuated from a four-story Holiday Inn Tuesday night after a smoldering fire in a first-floor linen closet filled the building with smoke, officials said.

Diane Moulthrop, assistant hotel manager, said there were no injuries and that the guests left the hotel in an orderly fashion after fire alarms sounded about 9:30 p.m.

She said some guests checked into nearby hotels for the night, while others said they would wait in the parking lot or at poolside until firemen cleared the smoke from the building.

Kill Devils Hills Fire Chief Bill Guard said the damage to the hotel was minor and the blaze was contained in a linen basket.

'Simon & Simon' Takes No. 1 Spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC tied for first place in the Nielsen ratings for the second time in two weeks, this time with CBS, which had the top show with the detective brothers "Simon & Simon."

Although NBC and CBS were tied for the week ended June 10, CBS grabbed the lion's share of the Top 10 with five shows. NBC had three, and ABC, in third place, had two.

The previous week, NBC had eight shows in the Top 10 and tied with ABC for first place. CBS was in third place.

It was only the second time since the end of the regular season in mid-April that CBS has been first, even though CBS won the season by a comfortable margin.

CBS' "Simon & Simon" was first and the network's "Trapper John, M.D." was second. In third place was the NBC movie "Born To Be Sold," about baby selling.

Other shows in the Top 10: CBS' "60 Minutes," fourth; CBS' "Alice," fifth; ABC's "20-20," sixth; NBC's "Joe Dancer," a movie pilot for Robert Blake, and CBS' "Magnum, P.I.," tied for seventh; NBC's "The A-Team" and the ABC movie

"Moment By Moment," tied for ninth.

"Moment By Moment" was the only show in the Top 20 that was not a rerun, and its finish in the Top 10 may reflect the audience's restless search for something new. The theatrical release, starring Lily Tomlin and John Travolta, was panned by the critics as stultifyingly dull and vanished rapidly from the theaters when the public stayed away.

CBS and NBC tied for first in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey for the week ended June 10 with a network average of 12.3. ABC was in third place with 11.1. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 12.3 percent of the TV homes were tuned to either CBS or NBC.

The drop in audience for the summer is shown by the fact that the winning network averages for NBC and CBS are considerably lower than what a network in third place got in the fall. In a typical week during the fall, CBS was first with 17.9 and NBC in third place with 15.0. The difference is a loss of 4.6 million households between the fall CBS figure and the current rating.

NBC's "Father Murphy" returned to its usual place at the bottom of the ratings this week. The five lowest-rated shows in descending order were: the CBS movie "The Jazz Singer," ABC's "Olympic Boxing Trials," NBC's "Homemade Comedy," CBS' "Mama Malone" and NBC's "Father Murphy."

"The CBS Evening News" was first again among the evening news shows with a rating of 10.2. NBC was second with 8.9, and ABC was third with 8.2.

Here are the week's 20 top shows:

1. "Simon & Simon," CBS, a rating of 18.4 or 15.4 million households.
2. "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, 16.6 or 13.9 million.
3. Movie "Born To Be Sold," NBC, 16.2 or 13.5 million.
4. "60 Minutes," CBS, 16.1 or 13.4 million.
5. "Alice," CBS, 15.9 or 13.3 million.
6. "20-20," ABC, 15.3 or 12.8 million.
7. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 15.2 or 12.7 million.
8. Tie-Movie "Joe Dancer," NBC, 15.2 or 12.7 million.
9. "The A-Team," NBC, 15.0 or 12.5 million.
10. Tie-Movie "Moment By Moment," ABC, 15.0 or 12.5 million.
11. "TV Bloopers & Practical Jokes," NBC, 14.8 or 12.4 million.
12. "The Love Boat," ABC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
13. "Cagney & Lacey," CBS, 14.6 or 12.2 million.
14. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 14.5 or 12.1 million.
15. Tie "Matt Houston," ABC, 14.5 or 12.1 million.
16. Tie "The Jeffersons," CBS, 14.5 or 12.1 million.
17. "Scarecrow & Mrs. King," CBS, 14.4 or 12.0 million.
18. "Facts of Life," NBC, 14.2 or 11.9 million.
19. "Remington Steele," NBC, 14.1 or 11.8 million.
20. "Riptide," NBC, 13.9 or 11.6 million.

Moyers Traces History Of Auto

DETROIT (AP) — At a time when the U.S. auto industry faces an uncertain future, it pays to reflect on how the car, perhaps as much as any invention, changed the people, the landscape and even the soul of America.

In the latest program in his series "A Walk Through the 20th Century," Bill Moyers explores the automobile, from its birth as a coughing, kicking horseless carriage to a dream machine of modern suburbia.

The installment, titled "America on the Road," will be broadcast tonight on most public television stations.

Moyers, a commentator on the "CBS Evening News" and co-anchor with Charles Kuralt on CBS' "American Parade," looks at the car and America as an inseparable unit and from a broad perspective. There are no in-depth examinations of any single event or character from automotive history.

Instead, the production is like flipping through the pages of an illustrated history book that we have read before. But Moyers pulls this off with urbane comments, tying together the program well as he takes us from one automotive era to another.

We see Ransom Olds and the first auto assembly plant and Henry Ford, his Tin Lizzie and the effects of his revolutionary $5 daily wage.

"In one stroke," Moyers says, "Ford doubled manufacturing wages and turned his workers into consumers of their very own product. You have to wonder what Karl Marx would have thought about the mobility of the masses."

Detroit's products are at first a curiosity — and, Moyers adds, a pollution-control device of sorts. Cars, he says, helped rid America of "millions of pounds of manure and thousands of gallons of horse urine (that) were left daily on city streets."

"In just a few years, the car was changing society. No other invention had so shaken up traditional living patterns in so short a time — moving the old boundaries, taking the city to the country and the country to the city and giving women access to a much larger world," Moyers says.

We get a glimpse of Charles Kettering who could be credited as a sort of women's liberator. His invention, the self-starter, eliminated the engine crank and made the driver's seat accessible to everyone.

The carriage became a real car and a toy of the Roaring '20s and Hollywood. Later, it was a machine that allowed the empty-bellied families of the plains states to escape the Dust Bowl.

In the 1950s, Moyers points out, highway cloverleafs bloomed, acres of concrete were poured across the land and the automobile, by then "a living room on wheels" married to the mass advertising media, grew fins and garish chrome. It assumed a darker side, a vehicle of air pollution and white flight to the suburbs.

Perhaps the biggest achievement of Moyers' show is his depiction of the auto industry as America's industrial furnace.

Most States See Jobless Levels Fall In Last Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half of all states enjoyed substantial declines in unemployment between last April and April 1983, and a half dozen states saw their jobless rates plunge by four or more percentage points, the Labor Department says.

The strongest improvement was in West Virginia, where the rate nose-dived from 19.7 percent to 14.9 percent. But that rate, nonetheless, was the highest of any of the 50 states. Only the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, for which the Bureau of Labor Statistics keeps records, had a higher rate. The island's jobless rate in April was 20.1 percent, according to the figures.

Besides West Virginia, the five states with the steepest declines in unemployment over the 12-month period were Arizona, Michigan, Mississippi, Tennessee and Wisconsin, the report said.

Between April 1983 and last April, the raw, seasonally unadjusted national civilian unemployment rate receded from 10 percent to 7.6 percent. The state-by-state figures are compared with the unadjusted national rate because the various state labor force figures are not adjusted for seasonal variations.

The seasonally adjusted U.S. civilian rate peaked at 10.7 percent in November 1982, and had fallen to 7.5 percent in May, with 103.5 million Americans employed and more than 8 million officially classified as unemployed.

Only a half-dozen states recorded unemployment exceeding 10 percent in April. In contrast, 24 states had joblessness at or above 10 percent a year earlier, according to the bureau.

In its monthly survey of state labor markets across the country, the bureau found that only one state — Alaska — actually saw its unemployment rate rise from April 1983 through last April. In that state, where energy industries have been slumping, unemployment stood at 11.8 percent in April, 0.3 percent higher than in April 1983.

At one time in the spring of 1983, as many as 30 of the 50 states had unemployment rates at or above 10 percent of the labor force. But in April this year, the states with double-digit unemployment had dwindled to six — Alabama, Alaska, Michigan, Oregon, West Virginia and Washington, plus the District of Columbia.

Besides West Virginia and Alaska, the states with unemployment in double digits were Alabama and Michigan, 11.0; Washington state, 10.3, and Oregon, 10.0. The District of Columbia had a 10.7 percent rate, and the lowest rates were in Nebraska, 4.1 percent; Connecticut and Virginia, 4.3, and New Hampshire and South Dakota, 4.5.

Tornado Victims Seeking Support

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

When tornadoes roared through North Carolina March 28, the Scotland County community of John's Station was all but leveled.

In the weeks since, residents of the small town have struggled to put roofs back over their heads and gather up the pieces of their lives. Wednesday night, the rebuilding process will move from the physical to the emotional as local residents hold the first meeting of a support group for tornado victims.

"We hope it will give people a chance to talk about what their experiences were, what they're going through now and how to deal with it," said Jerri White of the Scotland County Mental Health Department.

Many people who may not have had direct damage are still affected," Ms. White said. "We've got a normal population, so we're seeing normal reactions to severe stress."

"It's not uncommon for people to have fear, nightmares and to be sad," she said. "They're sad about all the losses, the losses of belonging and things that were important to them. It's like a grieving process."

The department, she said, has kept in touch with residents through other agencies and churches, with many normal reactions and some abnormal ones. The support group is intended to help separate the two types.

"Fear is a natural thing," Ms. White said, "and that fear is reactivated whenever there's a storm in the area. We've had several tornado or severe thunderstorm watches in the area since the tornadoes hit and that has brought a fear reaction from adults as well as children."

"A reaction to the stress, she said, often comes at a time when people think they are beginning to adjust."

"You'll think you're doing real well and then something happens that causes it to pop back up," she said. "There are some people who may not have gone back to a normal sleeping pattern. Others may be experiencing changes in their appetite, either eating more or eating less."

"Others are frustrated, cynical or angry because of all the delays and red tape in trying to get back to normal," Ms. White said. "Things are not going to get back to normal for a considerable period of time and some things will never be like they were before. People have to adjust to that."

The support group, she said, may help people air those feelings and realize they are not alone in their reactions.

"Essentially, we're anticipating that as the immediate aftermath is over, people will find that their lives have not gone back to normal as they thought they would," said Bonnie Morrell, the state coordinator for tornado victim programs in the state Department of Human Resources.

"We're offering specialized outreach services in about 10 counties to help people deal with the real problems they're still facing," she said. "We're also planning programs aimed at children in terms of helping them understand the things they continue to experience."

The delayed reactions, she said, range from depression to family conflicts.

"They're all the kinds of things you see when you have a tremendous amount of stress," Ms. Morrell said. "Based on a study done after the Mt. St. Helens eruption, where people looked at the use of agencies and other indicators of stress, they found that as long as a year afterwards there was a need for services of various kinds."

High School Pals Developing Robots

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — It started with two high school friends with a passion for machines and progressed to the invention and sale of a robot to a Mebane firm for assembly work.

"It's a bare robot," said Kurtis Keller. "It's missing a hand and a program."

His friend, Brian Wall, became involved in computers when his parents purchased one of the first personal computers on the market seven years ago.

Before that, Wall said "I always took apart my toys. Calculators fascinated me."

From the backs of homework papers, the invention moved to scrap metal, wires and microchips. Then the 18-year-olds created a mechanical arm and a homemade computer brain.

GKN Automotive Components Inc. of Mebane purchased the device to work in its factory when the system is complete. The prototype is designed to remove and insert parts from machines on assembly lines, but future units will be programmed to perform a number of tasks.

Although GKN got a discount on the prototype model, the teenagers will be selling their next one for $12,000. They already have drawn blueprints for an improved version and have plans for two other computerized robot arms.

Keller, a 1984 Southern Alamance graduate, became interested in metal working during the three summers he has worked at his father's company, Kamtec, Inc., a precision machining firm in Mebane.

Wall, who graduated from Williams High School this week, began designing computer parts about three years ago, he said, and dreamed of designing and building his own computer.

Last November, the friends consolidated their ideas and began working on the prototype. The late nights began.

They worked at Kamtec or at home in free moments after school, designing, redesigning, and improving. The project was not finished the night before the East Carolina Science and Engineering Regional Fair in March. But sometime in the early hours the robot came to life.

Prices Paid For Grains Hold Steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new supply-and-demand analysis by the Agriculture Department shows that wheat and corn prices stand little chance of improving in the coming year if current harvest indications are borne out.

Looking at the livestock situation, the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday that total meat output is expected to be around 54.1 billion pounds, up slightly from last month's estimate but still nearly 2 percent below the 1983 level.

Poultry producers, however, are boosting output in response to higher market prices this spring, the report said.

One reason for the pessimistic price outlook for wheat is the huge world supply, created in part by bumper U.S. harvests in recent years — and the 1984 wheat harvest, which is now under way in southern areas, also could be huge.

Based on current projections, 1984 total U.S. wheat output could be about 2.53 billion bushels, up from 2.43 billion bushels in 1983. That would make this year's wheat harvest the third largest on record.

The new projection of 2.53 billion bushels was down slightly from 2.55 billion bushels indicated by a similar analysis on May 10. There was some decline in winter wheat prospects since then.

Overall, wheat prices at the farm are expected to average $3.20 to $3.50 per bushel nationally in 1984-85, unchanged from last month's prediction. In the wheat marketing year that ended on May 31, prices averaged $3.50 per bushel, down from $3.55 in 1982-83.

When the new wheat marketing year began on June 1, the United States had a wheat inventory of about 1.39 billion bushels left over from previous harvests. That was a decline from the record level of 1.54 billion bushels in the carryover a year ago.

But if the 1984 harvest turns out as now predicted, the wheat carryover on June 1, 1985, could rise again to about 1.45 billion bushels, although still short of the record level.

The 1984 corn crop, which farmers are just now winding up planting, was projected at nearly 7.93 billion bushels, based on trends in yields and a normal growing season. That was up from 7.78 billion bushels projected on May 10 and would be nearly 90 percent more than the skimpy 4.2 billion bushels harvested in 1983.

Corn prices for the crop marketing year that will begin Oct. 1 were projected at $2.60 to $3.05 per bushel, compared to $3.25 forecast for 1983-84.

The Oct. 1 corn carryover was projected at 520 million bushels, down from a record 3.14 billion bushels last fall. But a bumper harvest this fall could replenish part of supply and lead to a buildup to about 1.25 billion bushels by Oct. 1, 1985, the report showed.

Soviet Grain Output Falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is expected to harvest 190 million metric tons of grain this year, down slightly from 1983 but still the second-largest output in six years, according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Tuesday that the latest forecast was unchanged from the initial estimate issued in May, although the mix of crops was somewhat different. That included a decline of one million tons in the estimate of coarse grains and an increase of one million tons for miscellaneous grains.

The revised figures included 85 million tons of wheat, 94 million tons of coarse grains such as corn and barley, and 11 million tons of miscellaneous grains and pulses, which include beans and other leguminous crops.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal, for example, to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

The 1983 Soviet grain harvest was estimated by USDA at 195 million tons, the most since the record output of 237 million tons in 1978.

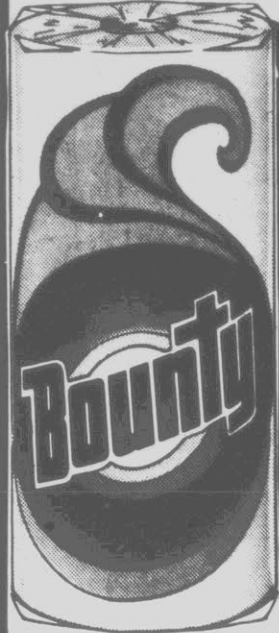

Turkey Output Slowing Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turkey production is slowing down, according to new hatchery statistics by the Agriculture Department.

As of June 1, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Tuesday, there were 27.1 million turkey eggs in incubators. That was down 2 percent from a year earlier.

But meanwhile, the report said, the actual placement of poults in May rose 1 percent from a year earlier to 21.1 million young birds.

Overall, according to another report, production of turkey meat in 1984 is expected to decline slightly from 1983 to about 2.56 billion pounds. Broiler output, by comparison, is expected to increase this year to about 12.7 billion pounds.

Lyndon LaRouche For President ... It's A Different Campaign

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In last April's primary campaign in Pennsylvania, Democratic presidential hopeful Lyndon LaRouche assembled a staff of several hundred volunteers.

He bought half an hour of time on statewide television to present his views.

And he proposed a vast construction project, a second Panama canal, that could benefit the state's steel industry.

From far outside the mainstream of the Democratic party, he wound up with less than 2 percent of the vote.

LaRouche says he knows the reason why: "Massive, absolutely massive vote fraud, most of it by voting machines."

A voting machine, he said in an interview, "is practically an open license for massive voter fraud. It takes a matter of seconds to fix the vote on a machine by juggling the wheels, these stupid little plastic wheels."

He bought more TV time before last week's five-state primary finale but wound up with no more than 3 percent of the vote in any state. An aide said LaRouche was contemplating a suit alleging vote fraud in New Jersey.

LaRouche is not your average politician.

For one thing, his party loyalty is a little suspect.

LaRouche attacks fellow Democrats Walter Mondale ("a bum"), Jesse Jackson ("a hustler") and Gary Hart ("an evil apostle of the New Dark Ages") more vehemently and more often than President Reagan, whom he describes as a likeable, well-intentioned captive of "Michael Deaver's White House Palace Guard."

"We're going to blackmail these idiots," LaRouche said of his fellow Democrats before an audience in Sioux Falls, S.D. "Either they do something we like or we're going to destroy the ticket."

His views, voiced in this and two previous runs for the White House, have led Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt to describe LaRouche's organization as "a bizarre, extremist cult." The Los Angeles Times quoted Manatt as saying LaRouche is "a dangerous fraud who is running as a Democrat to deliberately confuse people."

In nine half-hour commercials on the three major TV networks, LaRouche has told Americans:

—Henry Kissinger and Walter Mondale are Soviet "agents of influence," and Mondale has supported the nuclear freeze "since Soviet officials visited Minneapolis to issue orders to the Mondale machine in May 1983."

— "We're on the verge of an international financial collapse. ... This means 90 to 95 percent of you would earn about half as much at the end of 1985 as you earned at the end of 1983 — if you are still employed."

— "I know, with certainty, that Moscow is committed to making the Soviet Union the only major strategic power in the world, and to accomplish this before 1988" when the Soviets plan the largest celebration in Russian history to mark the 1,000th anniversary of Russia's "Christianization."

In his political career, the New York-based business consultant has claimed to have been targeted for assassination by opponents ranging from the Queen of England to the mayor of Keene, N.H.

In two presidential campaigns, the 61-year-old LaRouche has qualified for a total of almost $900,000 in federal campaign matching funds. This year the campaign claims to have raised more than $3 million, much of it for what LaRouche calls "the most extensive television campaign in the history of politics."

According to Nielson ratings, two of LaRouche's broadcasts — April 27 on CBS and March 26 on ABC — drew audiences of 4.8 million and 2.1 million homes respectively, about normal for late-night time slots.

Where does the money come from? LaRouche said he relied mostly on small donors. His National Democratic Policy Committee claims 30,000 dues-paying members. They include the zealous LaRouche supporters who brandish "Feed Jane Fonda to the Whales" signs at the nation's airports, where they advocate nuclear energy and deride environmentalists.

Funds also come from several LaRouche publications, including the $10-an-issue weekly "Executive Intelligence Review."

LaRouche has a slate of about 2,500 candidates who ran for various offices, both party and elected positions, around the country. The LaRouche campaign said about 100 had won preliminary elections.

LaRouche himself has fared poorly — in 1980 he got less than 1 percent of the total Democratic primary vote and this year his best showing was 3 percent last Tuesday in the South Dakota primary.

LaRouche has also had election law problems. In 1982 he agreed to pay a $15,000 fine for 79 federal violations and admitted his campaign had sought federal matching funds for contributions from fictitious donors or campaign workers. On the latter he was fined $2,500.

LaRouche is also upset with the government's conclusion that he is not a major candidate and thus not eligible for Secret Service protection.

As a result, said LaRouche, he must restrict personal appearances and rely on television. When he does campaign he is accompanied by armed bodyguards.

"In general, among security services internationally, the threat potential against me is rated at between 4, 5 and 8 on a scale of 10, most of the time," he said. "Among the candidates, the only one who really outshines me is the president."

If elected, LaRouche said he would promote rapid economic development with government-backed low-interest loans to rebuild the infrastructure, revitalize industries and finance exports. He supports huge engineering projects, including a second Panama Canal, a grand canal along the coast of China and a high-speed rail line across Africa.

He also would eliminate the Federal Reserve system's control over the money supply and return to the gold standard; order "Apollo-style" crash programs to develop cures for "diseases of aging human tissue" and an anti-missile shield; reorganize loan repayment schedules for deeply indebted developing nations.

Old Port Hiring Hall Is Closing

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — More than 100 dockworkers, their faces creased by decades of outdoor toil, crowd around the podium as a man calls letters and numbers with the speed of an auctioneer.

Within minutes, the last number is called, the last job handed out. The men cheer — only a few have to head for the piers this morning. The majority go home, knowing they'll get paid anyway.

The morning ritual on the top floor of City Hall here has gone on for years, but the days are numbered for the hiring hall, officially named the Hudson County Center of the Waterfront Commission of New York Harbor.

It was to have closed May 25, leaving only three hiring halls in New York Harbor — Brooklyn, Manhattan and Port Newark. The waterfront commission argued that the Hoboken hall, which serves only about 150 workers daily but costs $75,000 a year, was too expensive to run.

But the decision was reversed at the request of the International Longshoremen's Association and the New York Shipping Association. Labor and management agreed the hall should remain open temporarily while a proposal for new hiring methods is studied.

The current hiring procedures for longshoremen who are registered with the waterfront commission are complex and confusing, dictated by the fact that there is simply not enough work, even with the ranks of longshoremen dwindling steadily.

In 1955, 32,000 longshoremen reported to 14 port hiring halls. But containerized shipping sharply reduced the number needed to handle cargo.

Today, 8,277 longshoremen are registered with the commission and only about 5,100 of them had steady work in April, said Gerald Lally, general counsel for the bi-state agency.

Of the average 22 boats docking in the port each day, 15 carry containers or have other automated systems, Lally said.

The changes are reflected in Hoboken, once a major shipping center. A 46-acre pier area has been idle since the 1960s and is now earmarked for a $500 million residential and office complex.

The drab brick tenements near the Hudson River, the backdrop for the 1954 movie "On the Waterfront," have become prime real estate as urban homesteaders flock to this city only minutes away from Manhattan.

And the majority of the longshoremen "badging in" at the Hoboken hiring hall are in limbo — too old to find other jobs but too young to retire.

But there is some comfort. A collective bargaining agreement dating back to the 1960s ensures that registered longshoremen receive a guaranteed annual income of $31,200 a year, whether they work or not.

Most of the men reporting to the hiring halls don't expect to find work, but have to go through the motions in order to remain eligible for their guaranteed paycheck.

The majority of the port's longshoremen are "listmen" who regularly report to the same pier or company.

The rest of the jobs are filled through the commission's central computer, which matches employers' short-term requirements with the appropriate workers — selected according to seniority, job categories and location.

Longshoremen check with the commission in the afternoon to find out where they have to report the next morning.

Those still left without a job are required to check in at their hiring hall in the morning to be available for last-minute calls, said Frank Johannessen, who manages the Hoboken Hall.

"Many of these men were listmen with steady assignments at one time," said Johannessen. "Their piers closed down, the companies moved."

Frank, a 32-year veteran of the docks who asked that his last name not be used, said that in the "old days" longshoremen "shaped" piers every morning searching for a job and often had to pay kickbacks to union officials to get chosen.

"If it wasn't for the commission, it would be worse. We'd all be out on the street," he said.

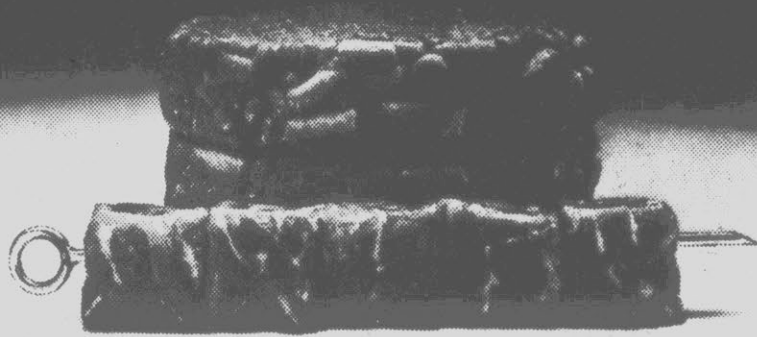

The Waterfront Commission was established Dec. 1, 1953, to try to get a grip on organized crime domination, corruption and violence on the docks.

Poland's Ancient Trade In Amber Falls To Politics

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Since ancient times, traders have scoured the Baltic Sea coast for golden beads of amber, the fossilized pine resin used as jewelry and ornaments.

Bronze Age merchants shipped it down the "Amber Road" to ancient Greece and Rome, and until recently smugglers spirited it from rich deposits in the Soviet Union to Poland and then to the West.

Now, geography and politics have combined to stifle Poland's amber trade, although it still plays a role in religious ceremonies and folk medicine.

"There is hardly any production at all right now," said Dariusz Czarnocki, commercial director of Cepelia, the Polish government firm which retails and exports folk crafts.

"We've given up production of amber jewelry and instead make silver jewelry with amber inserts," Czarnocki said in a recent interview.

Shops catering to foreign tourists still sell amber earrings, brooches, rings, bracelets and necklaces for between $8 and $75, but both quality and volume are down. Officials decline to disclose the value of exports, but say output has been halved from its mid-1970s peak of 10 tons annually.

Craftsman Jan Manthei said during a tour of the state-owned amber cooperative Bursztyn on the Baltic at Gdansk, "We were exporting 85 percent of our output, but now we are down to 15 percent." He attributes the drop to the decline in export-grade amber.

Amber is the fossilized resin of now-extinct conifers which grew 50 million to 80 million years ago. Most amber necklaces are made from pieces the size of a thumb joint, with color ranging from honey to ivory. The remains of tiny insects, trapped in resin oozing from the living tree, can sometimes be seen in clear amber.

Amber is found all around the Baltic Sea, washed ashore from the depths, but the richest known lodes lie on the Sambian Peninsula in the Soviet Union, a few miles from Poland.

Officials from Poland's government-owned Serebro jewelry company say the Soviets use bulldozers to unearth head-size chunks.

"We used to import from other Socialist countries — mainly the Soviet Union — but now they don't want to sell," said Czarnocki.

Private jewelers also relied on Soviet amber, smuggled across the border, but say the illicit trade stopped in 1980 when the Kremlin sealed the frontier to keep Polish free trade unionism from spreading.

"I was traveling by train near Bialystok (eastern Poland) some years back and shared a compartment with a Soviet family visiting relatives in Poland," said one private craftsman in Warsaw.

"I pulled out a bottle of vodka and in a little while we became good friends. I asked about amber, and they grinned and pulled up their pant legs and showed me socks full of it, bracelets around their ankles and pieces tucked all through their luggage," said the jeweler, who asked not be identified.

"It's not getting through any more, though, and the supply is drying up," he added, sadly showing visitors his last few pieces. He and many other Poles believe amber wards off disease when worn against the skin or dissolved in spirits.

"We soak tiny grains, which are not good for jewelry, in pure spirits, and drink a few drops in tea all through the winter. We never get colds or flu," he said. "And if we do get sick, we rub the solution on our skin." Larger beads, worn as bracelets or necklaces, are said to protect against rheumatism.

Pilgrims in this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation often hang amber strands at shrines in thanks for answered prayers.

Small grains are also added to tallow for altar candles, and when burned give off the strong smell of primeval pine forests.

Some of the largest and most exquisite amber ornaments are displayed in the Amber Museum inside the 14th century Teutonic castle at Malbork, 30 miles south of Gdansk.

The most famous amber treasure, a room of panels carved in Gdansk for an 18th century king, disappeared from the Russian palace at Tsarskoye Selo, near Leningrad, during the German occupation in World War II. Its whereabouts are a mystery.

The amber hunt continues on a smaller scale. Polish farmers occasionally turn up pieces with their plows, and beachcombers find varieties of shades and sizes when the wind blows from the northeast.

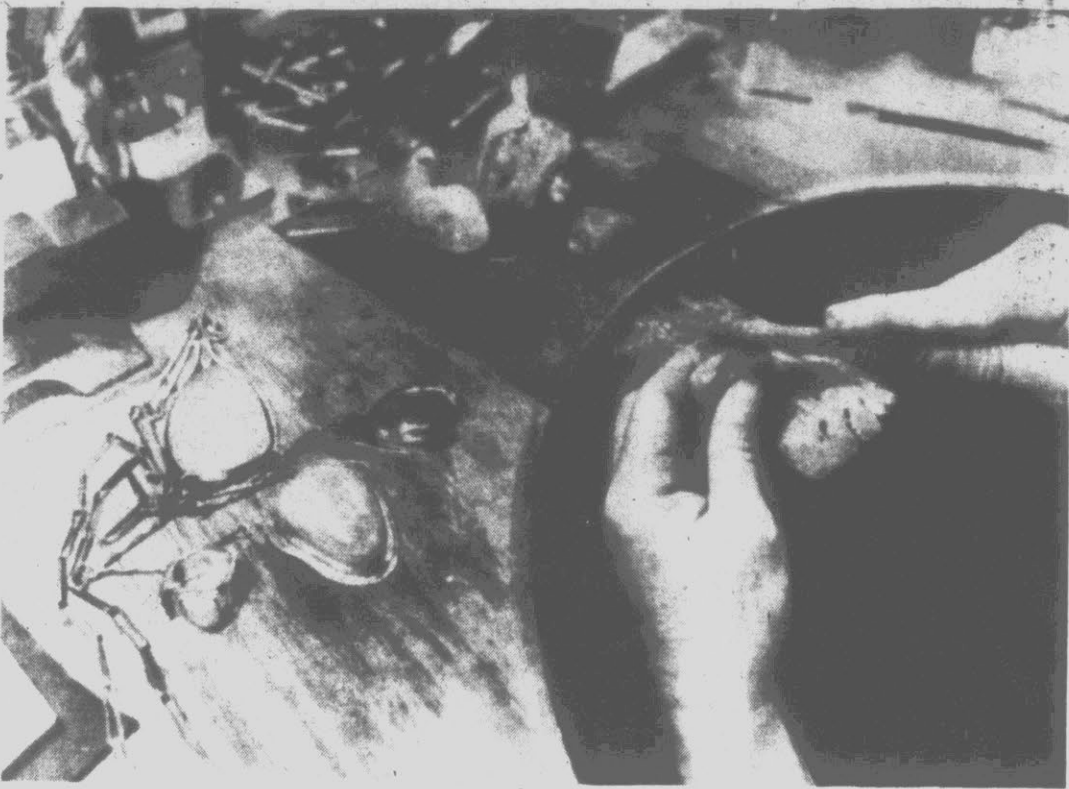

They sell it to state-owned enterprises for up to 2,000 zlotys per kilogram — about $10 a pound — or get twice that from private jewelers for choice pieces.

Builders working on a new port in northern Gdansk excavated large amounts during the 1970s. After the project was finished, government and private prospectors found amber by forcing water into the ground at high pressure and floating the light resin to the surface.

That process wreaks havoc on vegetation, however, and has been stopped under pressure from environmentalists.

Amber has been exported since ancient times, but recently geography and politics have combined to stifle Poland's amber trade. (AP Laserphoto)

Pennsylvania Area Prone To Quakes

READING, Pa. (AP) — Berks County leads the 67 counties of Pennsylvania in the number of earthquakes and seismic activity recorded during a period of 245 years extending from 1737 to 1982.

That revelation was among the recent major findings of Dr. Madan M. Varma, an associate professor of geology and physics at Kutztown University.

Varma has spent hours researching seismic activity in Pennsylvania for an article to be published soon by the Pennsylvania Academy of Science.

He found documentation describing 86 earthquakes in the commonwealth during the period. Of that total, 28 of the disturbances occurred in Berks County.

Most of them, Varma said, have been minor.

And while the April 22 earthquake south of Lancaster heightened public concern about earthquakes, he said, the Lancaster area is only 25 percent as seismically active as Berks.

"We can expect earthquakes of a minor nature in this region," explained Varma, a native of India.

Andrew Lands Helicopter

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew, dubbed "Randy Andy" by the British press for his well-publicized love affairs, successfully landed a Lynx helicopter dubbed the "Brazen Hussy" on the deck of his new ship, the HMS Brazen.

Andrew, a 24-year-old lieutenant in the Royal Navy and a veteran of the Falkland Islands war with Argentina, had to circle for about 15 minutes Monday because the 3,556-ton frigate was late for the rendezvous in Plymouth Sound.

Volunteers Pay $4,000 For Chance To Help Dig

ISHANGO, Zaire (AP) — Like the 19th-century gentlemen scientists who pursued research as a hobby, Earthwatch volunteers are helping anthropologists working here to try to unravel the history of early man.

A hardy and handy group, ranging in age from 21 to the late 60s, these "volunteers" have paid more than $4,000 to do work which — they are warned beforehand — is "tiring and quite often tedious."

Mostly they dig up sediment and run it through sieves, looking for evidence of past life.

"I came because it is directly related to what I do," said Frieda Fairburn, 46, of Westbury, N.Y., who teaches at Herricks High School. "It heightens my enthusiasm, which I hope motivates my students."

The Herricks school district gave Ms. Fairburn leave from her social studies post for the two-week stint at this remote site in northeastern Zaire near the Uganda border.

Alberto Angela, 21, a natural sciences student from Rome, Italy, reckons the work will help his studies. But Angela, whose duffle bag identifies him as a member of the Italian Adventurers Association, adds: "I also like this kind of life."

Both were on their second stay here where the Semliki River flows from Lake Edward, formerly known in neighboring Uganda as Lake Idi Amin. The site, 200 miles east of Kampala, the Ugandan capital, is home to the world's largest concentration of hippos.

The volunteers were sent here by Earthwatch, a Belmont, Mass., group which by the end of 1983 had raised more than $2.5 million from 5,500 volunteers to subsidize 450 expeditions in 25 U.S. states and 48 countries.

Volunteers help pay the field costs and the administrative expenses, with about 60 percent of their money going to pay for food, shelter, freight, transport and other bills.

Earthwatch, which sponsored 80 expeditions in 1983, tells volunteers that they "must balance romantic notions about field research with the realities of scientific discovery."

Just getting to Ishango can puncture any romantic ideas. Transport is unreliable, and Zaire airports are a nightmare of often unspecified people demanding money for unexplained fees or infractions.

Once here, the volunteers work for anthropologists Noel and Dorothy Boaz. More than 50 volunteers, most of them American, have worked here since Earthwatch began helping with the Ishango project in July 1983. The Boazes started work here in 1982.

Boaz, 32, an assistant professor of anthropology from the University of New York, has a Fulbright grant as well as funding from Earthwatch and the National Geographic Society.

Boaz said the work here was aimed at finding out where the ancestors of early man and the African ape might have emerged.

"My suspicion is that it was very close to here," Boaz said.

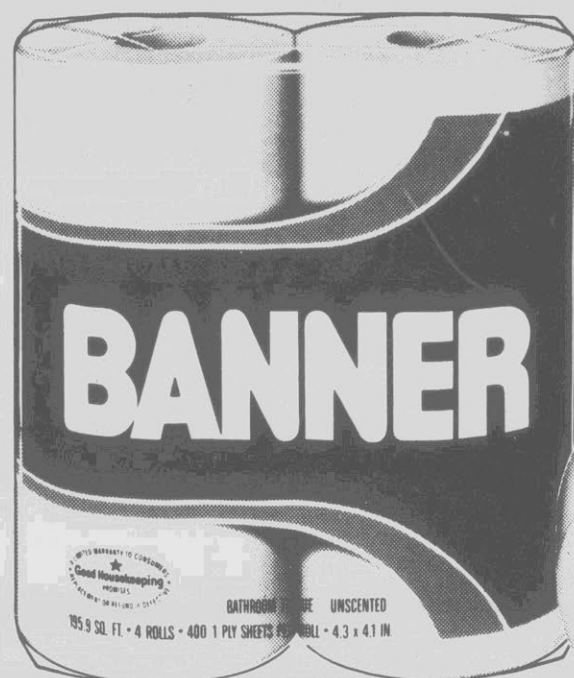

Pointing to a high ridge, Boaz said: "That is the western African rift wall. That was the first major split in the vegetational continuity of Africa from east to west, maybe 20 to 25 million years ago.

Boaz, who has worked previously in Ethiopia, Libya, Kenya and Tanzania, also noted that all of man's relatives, the pygmy chimp, common chimp and gorillas, are found in Zaire.

REFLECTIONS IN STILL WATER — Mooring poles in a corner of Wright's Creek in Pamlico County are reflected in near motionless water on a late spring afternoon. During weekdays, this spot is periodically a

Florida Island Stuns Visitors With Virgin Tropical Forest

LIGNUMVITAE KEY, Fla. (AP) — Visitors come to this state-protected island for one of two reasons: to see its virgin tropical forest or to visit with Russell Niedhauk, a legend in the Florida Keys.

Accessible only by boat, the triangular-shaped island is a unique state botanical site with an assortment of 44 native trees botanists say cannot be found in any other single place in the hemisphere.

The most famous of these trees is the Lignum Vitae, one of the hardest woods on earth and one so heavy it can't float.

The island, just south and one mile west of Islamorada, is edged with thick mangroves and encircled by blue-green water. Its only dock is on the east side where, through an opening, visitors get a glimpse of an antebellum house beyond a clearing.

Here is where one usually finds Niedhauk, a white-haired octogenarian, who lived on the island for 25 years with his wife, Charlotte, and is its unofficial historian.

"What you have here is unique," says Niedhauk, 82, a civilian employee who assists the four Florida Park Service rangers and assistant park manager assigned to the island. "You'd have to go as far away as Trinidad and Grenada to find some of the trees we have here."

Niedhauk and his wife, until she died in April 1983, kept detailed records of the island's flora and fauna for several universities, including Harvard and Cornell. He continues to lecture and plans to write a sequel to his wife's book about their experiences.

The Niedhauks came to the island in 1953 as caretakers for three men who owned it at the time. The caretakers' home they lived in was built in 1919 and has been restored to its condition after repairs were made following the Labor Day hurricane of 1935.

"It was so peaceful here and it was a challenge," he recalls of those early years. The island now attracts 4,000-5,000 visitors per year.

Lignumvitae was purchased by the Department of Natural Resources for a reported $2 million in 1971. (The tree for which it was named is two words, but the state uses a single word for the island's name.) Niedhauk explains part of the money was federal funds while some of it came from the private sector.

"It was bought to keep it from going high-rise," Niedhauk explains. He and his wife moved to the mainland in 1978 following disagreement with park service officials over how the island should be maintained.

Jeanne Parks, a graduate botanist, has been a ranger here for seven years. She and Niedhauk, whom she describes as one of the foremost authorities on hardwood trees, share a common interest in the Lignum Vitae species.

"Lignum Vitae weighs between 63 and 83 pounds per cubic foot," explains Niedhauk, "and is usually sold by the pound rather than board feet."

Another unique characteristic of this gnarled, slow-growing tree is the high resin content of its heartwood, explains Ms. Parks. This makes the Lignum Vitae a self-lubricating wood. During World War II, shipbuilders used the wood for shaft bearings on Liberty Ships and submarines.

"It was especially useful in submarines," explains Niedhauk, "because it needed no lubrication and made no noise under water."

Ms. Parks has made extensive studies of the Lignum Vitae here. She estimates there are about 2,400 on the island. They rarely grow over 30 feet in height and become diffuse and irregular. Niedhauk has found one tree he says is 1,300 years old.

Each spring, in March or April, the Lignum Vitae blossoms for about a week. When its tiny blue flower appears, mainland residents and rangers put on the Annual Lignum Vitae Blossom Festival — a time for picnics and outings to this island that remains almost unchanged from when the Spaniards first saw it in the early 16th century.

Helpful Trucker

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A trucker listening to his CB radio helped police nab one of two New York prison escapees during a wrong-way, high-speed chase by parking his rig across the highway, police said.

The trucker, who drove away after the incident and has not been identified, had heard a radio alert Monday and blocked Interstate 275 when he spotted a red car driven by Lewis Van Horn, 30, police said.

Van Horn and Richard Anderson, 29, who had been arrested a few minutes earlier, had escaped from Groveland Correctional Institute in Sonoma, N.Y., on May 22 while serving terms for burglary. Both now face escape and traffic charges in Florida, police said.

Galaxy Power

BALTIMORE (AP) — A distant galaxy glowing with the power of 2 trillion suns but only barely visible by telescope from Earth is a "most remarkable" celestial body because 99 percent of its energy is emitted as heat instead of light, scientists say.

The galaxy, known as ARP 220, is 300 million light years from Earth and was first discovered in 1966, according to scientists attending the annual convention of the American Astronomical Society here.

Most of ARP 220's energy output is visible only in the infrared part of the spectrum, and it is one of the most luminous infrared galaxies ever discovered, Soifer said.

Soviets Unveil Andropov Plaque

MOSCOW (AP) — A bronze plaque commemorating the late Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov was unveiled at a rainswept 30-minute ceremony by Communist Party officials.

Policemen cordoned off a 200-yard area on Kutuzovskiy Prospekt, one of the city's main thoroughfares, for the low-key occasion. About 300 invited people stood in the wind and rain clutching red carnations as Communist Party officials gave speeches in memory of Andropov.

The plaque is on a large building where Andropov is said to have maintained an apartment. It also bears a plaque commemorating Andropov's predecessor, Leonid I. Brezhnev on its walls.

Brezhnev is thought to have lived in a country dacha for the last years of his life.

Flying Ranchers Patrol Bolivian Range

By PETER McFARREN
Associated Press Writer
ESTANCIA SAN JUAN, Bolivia (AP) — As the twin-engine Cessna glides above the tropical savanna, a three-story brick mansion with its warehouses and silos breaks the green monotony of Bolivia's last frontier.

Descending near the meandering, chocolate-colored Mamore River, the plane touches down at a private airstrip beside the palm-shaded clapboard shacks of the Moxos Indian descendants who work on Carlos Schenstrom's 250,000-acre San Juan Ranch.

This is the Beni, a Bolivian province in the Amazon Basin that is becoming one of the world's most promising cattle ranges and grain belts — thanks to pioneers like Schenstrom and their airplanes.

"It is one of the privileged areas of the world," says Eloy Avila, a physician and rancher whose brother manages the Schenstrom ranch. The Beni's lush, year-round pasture can support four times the 2.5 million head of cattle now grazing here, agricultural experts say. And for South America's poorest nation, its expected 30,000-ton rice crop this year will end the need to import the grain.

Until a generation ago, this northern province on the Brazilian border — the size of England and Scotland combined — was linked to the outside world only by river that dried up part of the year and dirt roads that washed out in the rainy season.

For 200 years after Spanish Jesuit priests introduced cattle here, the odds of getting them to market were so slim that most were slaughtered only for their hides.

"The meat was left for the vultures," recalls the 35-year-old Schenstrom.

His father, the Argentine-born son of Swedish immigrants, changed all that. After World War II he went to the United States, bought several B-23 bombers, used by the U.S. Army Air Corps mostly for training in World War II, for $10,000 each and became the first to take beef out of the Beni by air.

What followed was a proliferation of private cargo planes and dirt airstrips that has broken the province's commercial isolation and written a chapter in the history of the conquest of South America's vast interior.

"Until airplanes linked the area with the capital, 10 families, including my father's and grandfather's, dominated cattle ranching here," says Avila. Today 6,000 of the province's 200,000 people are ranchers. They own 700 private planes and at least 1,000 airstrips.

Cattle are now slaughtered on the ranches, loaded on planes that lumber off dirt runways and flown to Trinidad, the provincial center, and from there across the Andes Mountains to La Paz, the national capital, or to Santa Cruz.

San Juan, 40 miles north of Trinidad, has grown from a wild savanna inhabited by ocelots, ostriches and flesh-eating piranhas into one of the continent's most modern and comfortable ranches.

Though still culturally isolated from the rest of Bolivia, Schenstrom and his wife and three children can at least enjoy a swimming pool and indoor gymnasium with exercise machines, whirlpool baths and racketball court. In the evenings, Mrs. Schenstrom communicates with relatives in La Paz by short-wave radio.

Near the three-story ranchhouse, children chase after chickens while their mothers cook and wash under the shade of palm trees.

From Schenstrom's modern slaughterhouse, Hercules cargo planes carry away 44,000 pounds of beef at a time. Near the airstrip lies the wreckage of a World War II vintage cargo plane that crashed several years ago while fully loaded.

"So many people I know have died in plane crashes that I have forgotten their names," says Eduardo Avila, the ranch manager, who has flown meat across the Andes many times.

With 35,000 head of cattle, the ranch is one of the largest in Bolivia. But Schenstrom has invested $2 million of mostly borrowed money.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

This hand gave rise to a problem that appeared in the May issue of our new publication, the "Goren Bridge Letter." Cover up the East and West hands, and tackle the problem as those readers saw it.

Over North's reverse bid of two hearts, South showed a minimum two-over-one response and a stopper in the unbid suit by bidding two no trump. North saw no reason to look for any other game.

West led the queen of spades, and declarer was about to play low from dummy reflexly, so that he could win the king and take the diamond finesse, when he wisely paused to count his tricks. He had five sure tricks in the major suits, so he needed only four in the minors. If either minor suit broke 3-2, declarer could set up four tricks by tackling that suit. But he would have to guess which suit to tackle, and there was no guarantee that either suit would behave. What if both suits split 4-1?

After some thought, declarer discovered a safety play that would handle even that distribution. He won the ace of spades on the table, cashed the ace of diamonds and led a diamond toward his queen.

If both defenders followed, there was no problem. If East showed out on the second diamond lead, the queen would force the king and West's ten of diamonds would be exposed to a finesse to assure four tricks in the suit. If East had four diamonds to the king, he could not rise with the monarch without setting up the suit for South.

As the cards lay, East was forced to play low and declarer's queen won. But now that he had two tricks in diamonds, he needed only two more for his contract. So declarer abandoned the diamond suit and switched to a club to the king. No matter how the cards were divided, he could not be prevented from scoring two tricks in that suit for his contract.

Election Bill Wins Approval

LONDON (AP) — The House of Lords has narrowly approved in principle a bill to scrap elections due next year for the Greater London Council and the six other local government authorities which run Britain's biggest cities.

The House of Lords, the non-elected upper chamber of Parliament, voted 238-217 this week against an amendment supported by Labor and alliance peers which would have wrecked the bill.

The bill, which already has passed the House of Commons, is the part of a plan by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government to abolish the seven authorities in line with a pledge given at the general election last year.

The authorities, funded by a combination of government cash and local property taxes, are strongholds of Britain's socialist opposition Labor Party.

The government says they are grossly extravagant with public cash. It plans to hand their powers to smaller borough councils. Laborites, the centrist alliance of the Liberal and Social Democratic Parties and some Conservative rebels, say the government plans are an attack on democracy.

Old Towns Renovating Main Streets

BREWTON, Ala. (AP) — Brick by brick, Brewton's pride has been restored, and leaders in the timber and manufacturing town hope the investment in saving the historic buildings downtown pays off soon.

It's happening in other small Alabama towns as main streets recover from decades of neglect and loss of trade. Selma, Lafayette, Prattville and Tuscumbia have taken on tasks similar to Brewton's renovation of downtown.

Brewton, the county seat of Escambia County, population about 7,000, has fought life-threatening floods from Murder Creek and Burnt Corn Creek in the Conecuh River basin. Major floods occurred in 1913, 1928, 1929 and less seriously in the late 1970s.

"Once that creek gets up, there's nothing you can do," said Mayor Ray Scherer, a downtown merchant who recalled having three feet of water in his store during the last flood. "Engineers have been up and down the creeks clearing all the snags."

Cathy Marchinko, manager of the Main Street Project, said, "It took about a year to get the project off the ground. One of the first things we had to do was get the city on the federal flood insurance program."

The flood battles brought the town together and so has the effort to save the 1900s buildings on the main street, which is bisected by railroad tracks that no one knows exactly how to handle.

"We decided if we didn't do anything to the railroad, it may go away," joked Robert McMillan, a member of one of the prominent timber and landholding families here.

Alabama's earliest timber mill was located at Brewton, causing the Alabama-Florida Railroad to establish a depot in the town in 1860. The railroad is as much a part of the town's history as the old buildings facing the tracks.

McMillan said he got involved in saving the old buildings when Mason Drugstore left town in 1977. He recalled the "bucking and arguing" among property owners when the Main Street organization first began work in 1981.

"Everybody said it was impossible. 'I'm not going to do it. He's not going to do it,' they'd say, pointing fingers. Now they're saying, 'We've done it,'" McMillan said.

The 60 merchants involved were finally organized and 11 of the 15 stores in one block have been rehabilitated.

McMillan said $250,000 in private capital had been invested in the Main Street Project so far. Add to that $500,000 in grants, and the investment approaches $1 million.

"I don't think we'll ever see Brewton like it was 25 years ago," said City Councilman Carlton Blackburn. Those were boom years for the town.

David Schure, a spokesman for the Alabama Historical Commission, said the Main Street Projects had been created not only to preserve historic buildings. Project directors also stay on to assist new businesses, such as shopping centers, in finding their place in the refurbished towns.

Grants Considered For Some Surgery

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. James Thompson says he will allocate $3 million to provide last-resort grants for people who need life-saving surgery if the state Senate approves the measure.

The bill, which has been approved by the House, was introduced by Rep. Judy Baar Topinka after one of her constituents, Lisa Bahnks, said her insurance would not pay for a liver transplant because the surgery was considered experimental. Ms. Bahnks received the transplant after state officials intervened with the insurance company, but died six months later.

If approved, the bill would permit a state grant of up to $200,000 to people who cannot find a funding source and would bar insurance companies from refusing to pay for such operations.

Moon Soil Used In Making Concrete

CHICAGO (AP) — An engineer who is making experimental concrete from 40 grams of moon soil says the sturdy material could be used in building space stations, and its great weight wouldn't matter if it were mixed on the low-gravity moon or in weightless space.

NASA officials said scientists had agreed to give the sample to T.D. Lin, research engineer with the Portland Cement Association in Skokie.

Lin believes the low-cost space concrete could offer the advantages of heat, resistance, insulation and toughness. Scientists have concentrated on aluminum and fiberglass for proposed space stations because of the huge amount of fuel needed to lift cargo into space.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail price does not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
