In the sweltering heat inside North Pitt High School's gym, a flurry of fanning kept a breath of air moving. Parents lined the bleachers, talking quietly with neighbors and waiting.

At the front, a banner read "Ours Is The Future And The Future Is Ours." Without warning the band broke into the graduation march and a flow of white robes streamed quietly into the hot gym and took their places.

"The world is a sum of changes," graduate Clyn Morris told classmates at North Pitt's commencement ceremony, "and it is our task to help direct these changes for the better."

The challenge to the class of 1984, Morris said, is to "guide these changes within our individual lives" and in turn "be advancing the success of mankind in general."

Effective Against Herpes

Drug Made Locally May See Wide Use

Experts say a new drug, produced by Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Greenville, that prevents the painful flare-ups of rash and pain suffered by millions of people with genital herpes could become one of the most widely used medicines in the United States.

Burroughs Wellcome has applied to the Food and Drug Administration to sell the oral medicine, a capsule form of the drug acyclovir, as a prescription drug.

While acyclovir does not cure herpes — the sores will come back when people stop taking the drug — it represents the first effective way of controlling the recurring eruptions of the disease.

Spokesman Thack Brown said Burroughs Wellcome has "no firm idea when it's going to be approved," but he said B-W hopes to have an answer from the FDA in the next couple of months.

Brown said acyclovir is already on the market in two versions, a prescription ointment approved in March 1982 under the brand name Zovirax and a sterile powder for use in intravenous solutions approved in November 1982.

But he said while the ointment speeds healing of the first outbreak of infection, it is not effective against recurring outbreaks of the painful rash and sores.

Reports in today's New England Journal of Medicine say acyclovir capsules suppress herpes in people with frequent outbreaks of herpes, one of the nation's most common infections.

Brown said no firm statistics are available on the number of Americans with genital herpes, but he said estimates range from 5 million to 20 million people.

"Based on the estimates, we are presently geared up to handle that," although there has been no increase in employment," Brown said.

However, if the estimates are low, "if that should come about, an increased volume is likely to result in some increase in employment" in Greenville, Brown suggested.

He said 300,000 to 500,000 persons a year have initial outbreaks of the venereal disease. But with "recurrent herpes, you get into bigger numbers."

In the April issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, William L. Whittington and Dr. Willard J. Catres Jr. of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said the potential market for the "prophylactic" or protective, use of acyclovir to prevent recurring rashes "is awesome."

"Assuming just one in five persons elect oral prophylaxis, a projected 1 million persons with a history of recurrent HSV (herpes) infection would be taking acyclovir daily. This would make acyclovir the second most commonly prescribed daily prophylactic medication, next to oral contraceptives," the men wrote.

Researchers hope that in addition to helping those who already have the disease, acyclovir capsules may also someday be proved effective in keeping people from catching the sexually transmitted herpes virus.

Initially the drug will probably be approved only for use in clearing up outbreaks of herpes after they occur. Researchers say more study into (Please turn to page 16)

PCC Awarded Two State Grants

BY MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Community College has received two grants for 1984-85 totaling $115,779 from the North Department of Community Colleges, school officials have announced.

The grants will be used for continued cooperative skills training in local industries and to upgrade the electronic servicing curriculum, President Charles Russell of PCC said.

For three years PCC has received special monies for cooperative skills training, said Russell. The school was one of eight in the state originally selected for this state grant, and the funds have been renewed each year. In 1984-85 the program will get $74,900, Russell said, and this money will be "directed toward the needs of the production and manufacturing industries in the area."

"The nice thing about this money is that it enables us to more adequately meet the industry's needs for training," Russell said. "This is not 'regular' money — it is not bound by the FTE (full time equivalency) restrictions. We have freedom of scheduling and can work with any number of people that need the assistance."

For example, he said, the college can schedule instruction at the industry site instead of requiring employees needing training to attend classes at the college. In addition, if only two employees at a particular industry need instruction, the program can serve them without "worrying about the minimum number of students," he added.

"This is money that allows us to go the extra mile in terms of meeting the training needs of local industries," Russell said. "We would not be able respond (to industries' needs) the way we'd like to without it."

In the past year, emphasis in cooperative skills training at PCC has been placed on industrial maintenance and machinist instruction. A recent progress report indicates the program in 1983-84 served one plastic manufacturer, two metal working industries, one pharmaceutical company and one (Please turn to page 16)

CAMP NEEDS COUNSELORS, SUPPLIES

The N.C. Department of Human Resources is seeking volunteer counselors and cash and material donations to help support Morrow's Retreat '84, a one-week summer camp for disadvantaged children Aug. 12-17 at Girl Scout Camp Mary Atkinson near Selma.

Ninety children, aged 9 to 11, will participate in summer sports, crafts and outdoor life at the camp. They will be foster children or from families which receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The cost of the six-day camp will be about $85 per camper and will be paid almost entirely through donations. Summer clothing — shorts, shirts, bathing suits, shoes and socks — are being asked, as are personal hygiene items like washcloths, soap, combs, shampoo and deodorant, and arts and crafts supplies. All donations are tax-deductible.

Anyone wishing to help out should contact Susan Harrington, Office of Volunteer Services, 325 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611; 733-4502.

Resolution Read Honoring Bundy

RALEIGH — A resolution honoring the life and memory of the late Sam D. Bundy of Farmville was introduced in the N.C. General Assembly Wednesday and was read on the House floor early this afternoon.

Bundy was a member of the House, representing Pitt and Greene counties, from 1970 until his death in January 1983.

The resolution, introduced by Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. and by Sen. Vernon White, said Bundy "devoted his life to the enrichment of others" by serving as a principal in public school systems in Farmville and in Duplin, Edgecombe and Martin counties, and "made his mark in the field of higher education" as a member of the board of trustees of Mount Olive College.

The resolution, citing Bundy's participation in civic and church activities, said Bundy "made an indelible imprint in the field of public service in North Carolina" through his service in the House.

"His accumulated wisdom, experience and common sense made him one of the most prominent members" of the state Advisory Budget Commission, the resolution continued.

The resolution concluded by saying "The General Assembly of North Carolina honors the life and service of its former member Sam D. Bundy and expresses its gratitude for his life and example and for his service to the people of his district and to the people of North Carolina."

It's The People, Not The Weather

By SUE HINSON

Sizzling summer heat has already produced a few casualties in Greenville — at least one a day for the past couple weeks, according to Tony Brannon, assistant chief of the Greenville Fire and Rescue Department.

However, the heat is not so much the problem as the people, Brannon said. "People get out and do whatever they're doing for too long without realizing their limitations, without realizing that their bodies have not gotten used to the heat yet."

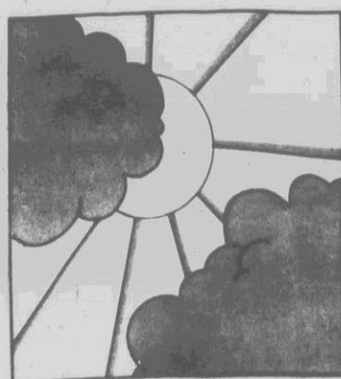

"If people would just realize that it takes time to get used to the heat, if they would pace themselves, and when they do get too hot, if they would get in the shade and take off some clothes or something, they could avoid serious problems," Brannon said.

Even though authorities pinpoint the elderly and very young as those most likely to be affected by heat, Brannon said the majority of heat-related calls the rescue department receives concern young adults. "Mostly college age kids who get part-time summer jobs outside. They're not used to the heat like the fellows you see working roads or construction. Those fellows know how to pace and to handle themselves, but the kids get out and (Please turn to page 5)

Musical Background Can Make Or Break Fashion Opening

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — To Barry Lederer, music is a vital accessory to a fashion show. Like the proper shoes or appropriate hairdo, it can make or break a presentation.

"Sometimes," said Lederer, "I just say, 'Start the music. I don't care which tape we use. Get the show going.' Then we work from there."

Lederer is the musicmaker for dozens of New York's leading designers who have just completed their fall-winter openings for the nation's store buyers and press. On a non-seasonal basis, he provides background music for retail store presentations and for other fashion events.

"Music is a further explanation of clothes," Lederer said. "Next to lighting, it is the most important. I can make a dress sexy or playful, dramatic or demure."

Style of music, like style of clothes, goes in cycles. Lederer said a few years ago the beat was jazz, then the industry went through the electronic hard rock phase. Now it's what he called a "mixed bag."

"We're leaning to melody, to clean music and more vocals," he said.

Lederer has a record library of some 15,000 discs, more than enough to provide the music almost any client might request.

"One of the things you learn is that a designer is a creative person, but not always secure on what he does outside his studio."

"They know what they want but they don't really know what they want, if you follow me," he said. "Many designers have a favorite little (musical) number. Yet it won't work out there on a runway in a hotel ballroom with 500 people watching."

Lederer, 35, who owns his firm, Graebar Productions, has a roster of garment district names that reads like the blue book of New York's apparel industry.

Start with Adele Simpson, Adolfo, Adri, Albert Capraro, Anne Klein, Bill Blass, Bill Haire, Bob Mackie, Carolina Herrera, Diane Von Furstenberg, Geoffrey Beene, Jeffrey Banks, Jordache, Mary McFadden, Mollie Parnis, Oscar de la Renta and Pauline Trigere.

Add in such international names as Dior, Gucci, Givenchy, Cardin, Valentino, Zandra Rhodes and Japan's Yamamoto.

Stores include or have included the prestigious Martha's, Bergdorf

Goodman, Bloomindale's, Bendel, I. Magnin and Saks Fifth Avenue.

"I've planned music for Tokyo and Milan shows," Lederer said. "And I try to get to Paris regularly. You won't believe this but I really go to Paris in search of records. The industry there has plenty of others doing what I specialize in."

Lederer works with a designer's staff more often than with the designer, who probably is making changes in his collection up to the time it appears on the runway.

"I look for a breakdown in what the designer wants to get across, the theme or themes of the collection, what he or she wants highlighted."

"At the same time I have to consider that audience. Many of those buyers and reporters sit through six and seven shows a day so we have to offer musical variety. We also have to think of the model — the girl has to have something to do on the runway."

"I think the worst thing that can happen is when a model fails to show up and she's scheduled to wear several outfits. You have to reshape the whole production."

"Once we were doing an outdoor benefit show for Central Park with clothes and models all flown in from Paris. We had the tent, the bleachers, everything set up the night before. Next day, time for the show, and a final check showed water in a barrel that was supposed to provide oil for a generator. We ended up getting power from a New York City street lamp."

Jaycee Women Name Winners

The Winterville Jaycee Women have named this year's scholarship and outstanding youth recipients.

Kimberly Anne Chipman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richie Chipman of Winterville, received the scholarship. She is a graduate of D.H. Conley and plans to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and major in mathematics.

Michele Denise Stocks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Stocks of Winterville, received the youth award. She graduated from D.H. Conley and was active in the drama department and was a member of the National Honor Society. She plans to attend the N.C. School of the Arts in the fall.

Barry Lederer, New York born, is a graduate of Alfred University, near Rochester, N.Y., with a degree in sociology.

He was in New York social work programs until a hobby turned into his business. Lederer was a record collector and wrote a column for Billboard, the show business weekly.

A friend at Bill Blass asked if he could do a fashion show and so the new career was born. The date, 1972.

Surrounded by fashion though he is, Lederer said, "I'm not a fashion conscious guy. When I shop it's usually at a discount house."

Patrice Alexander Is New President

The Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club installed officers for 1984-85. Patrice Alexander is the new president.

She will be assisted by Pam Parrott, first vice president; Carolyn Harrell, second vice president; Carol Hignite, recording secretary; Naomi Edwards, corresponding secretary; and Elizabeth Deal, treasurer.

The Woman of the Year award was presented to Annie Turner.

The $200 scholarship was awarded to Georgia Mooring, one of over 20 applicants. She is currently in her junior year at East Carolina University as an accounting major with some experience in law from Chapel Hill.

The next meeting will be tonight starting at 6:45 at the Ramada Inn. Members are reminded to bring an auction item for the white elephant sale.

June Yard Of Month Presented

The Winterville Jaycee Women named Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Whitaker as recipients of yard of the month for June.

The yard of the month is selected each month by the women in conjunction with the Winterville Jaycees.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I started to cut down on the number of movies I saw a few years ago when it was no longer a religious experience to sit in a dark theatre and listen to someone chew ice in my ear and drip chili sauce down my back.

Movies had become an audience participation show, rather than an observing experience. A food orgy for nocturnal people.

The last movie I saw in a theatre was almost a year ago when I went to see "Never Cry Wolf." The woman behind me had a three-year-old on her lap named Wesley to whom she had to read the entire foreword. The rest of the movie was spent explaining why the mice didn't look like Mickey and Minnie and why big boys didn't push their little feet between the seats, forcing the people in front of them to be airborne during most of the film.

We decided to buy a video adapter and rent our own films.

It was wonderful. After dinner, my husband and I would sit in soft chairs and in the comfort of our living room watch in silence while the story unfolded before our eyes. Occasionally my husband would clear his throat, but I would forgive him for it with a smile. I'm that kind of person.

Later, a few of our friends would drop in and we extended our hospitality to include a beverage and perhaps a tray of cheese.

In time, family members popped in and we added a few more chairs. Oh, occasionally, in the dark, we'd get trampled on by people who had come late or who had to leave early, but no one complained about that.

When the children started coming by and bringing their friends, every five or ten minutes the phone would ring for one of them and we'd miss some of the dialogue, but when we explained this, they'd take the call on another phone in the kitchen.

The other night there must have been 15 of us there. My son wanted to show a movie his friend had rented and our newspaper boy's grandfather, who is hard of hearing, kept asking his wife if "The Happy Hooker" was a fish story. Someone burnt the popcorn and the smoke alarm went off. When I suggested to a young girl whom I didn't know that she use the phone in the kitchen, she said she didn't want to screw up her call to Honolulu. Someone spilled ice all over the sofa and an announcement was made by a shadow in front of the set that a car with license plates 2ND WIFE was blocking traffic in the driveway.

I may grow up never knowing who Glenn Close and Debra Winger are. It's a chance I've got to take.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

Mother Believes Kids Should Be Allowed To Be Kids

DEAR ABBY: I very carefully select what my children watch on TV because I care what they hear and see. I will not allow people with low moral standards to influence my children's lives in any way.

"We don't go to PG-rated movies because I don't believe in forcing my children into early maturity. If there is even a glimpse of something sexual they should not see—regardless of how brief—they are better off not seeing it."

It is very disturbing to know that many of my children's friends get to see PG- and even R-rated movies, then they tell my children what they have seen. When I am within hearing distance I can stop the conversation, but there are times when I am not around; therefore, I am forced to tell them to refuse to listen to such talk when one of their friends starts in with it. If persistence prevails, then they are to leave that child alone.

I explain to my children that the child knows no better and the fault lies with the parents, which is unfortunate, as it makes that child an undesirable playmate.

You may not agree with me, but I can assure you that I am not alone.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your concern is commendable. Too many parents make no effort whatsoever to prevent their children from watching violence and vulgarity on TV, or attending PG-rated movies.

But when children go to school, there is no way for parents to censor what they hear from other children. In fact, what's forbidden is usually more attractive.

The most parents can do is to try to give their children as much wholesome guidance as possible, and trust them to make wise choices.

DEAR ABBY: I'm presently sharing an apartment with a friend I'll call Carol. She's getting married in three months, which will leave me with no place to live. I can't afford this apartment alone.

Carol feels terrible about leaving me out in the cold, so she's offered to let me move in with her and "Charlie" (her fiancé) until I can make other living arrangements.

Here's the problem: Charlie has made some passes at me in the past, which makes me leery about moving in with them. What should I do? I've already told Carol I'd move in with them, and if I tell her I've changed my mind, she will be hurt and want to know why.

Should I tell her about Charlie? (It would devastate her.) Or should I go against my Christian principles and lie?

THREE'S A CROWD

DEAR CROWD: Tell Carol you've changed your mind. Simply say, "Three's a crowd." That's no lie.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of a minister who would say to a bride, "I have to know if you are a virgin or not." I was asked this question during a premarital counseling session. My fiancé was present and was as shocked as I was.

When I told the minister it was a private matter, he replied, "Then I will have to jump to conclusions." I said, "That is your privilege." The minister then insinuated that I had to get married. Abby, we announced our engagement in August of 1982 and set our wedding date at that time. The minister was aware of this, so he had to know that we didn't have to get married.

He then said he had to know if we were living together, because if we were, it would reflect badly on him and the church. My fiancé and I are not living together, never did, nor do we intend to until we are married.

Neither my fiancé nor I is Catholic, and confession to a clergyman is not required by our faith. We are both over 21. I have been very upset since this meeting, and I don't want to have this minister officiate at our wedding. Am I wrong?

BOTHERED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: You are not wrong. Ask your minister's superior if the questions you were asked were appropriate in your situation. I certainly understand your wanting another minister to marry you. "Seek and ye shall find."

DEAR ABBY: You said, "There is no way a man can demand to be called 'Mister' without coming across as arrogant, pretentious and self-important."

Wrong! Perhaps you've been eating in too many restaurants that require the staff to say, "Hi, I'm Bruce, I'll fill your water glass," and "Hi, I'm Nancy, I'll be your breadbasket girl." Have you ever asked some intelligent restaurant employees how they feel about saying that? They hate it.

That kind of cheap familiarity spills over into the rest of life, demeaning everyone who is victimized by it, usually the young and women. Sit in a doctor's office and listen to the staff call the patients: "Sally, Dr. Fletcher will see you now. Mr. Jones, Dr. Smith will see you now." If informality is so terrific, what's wrong with, "Sally, Sam will see you now?"

Formality is terrific stuff. It allows for room to become more familiar. But when you start out on the chummiest plateau, there's nowhere to go.

Right Perspective

Another year, another class of grads from Greenville and Pitt County high schools. This time, more than a thousand of them. Sometimes it seems the calendar is speeding up.

Many of the former high-schoolers will move into higher education — the formal kind — of lectures, classrooms, laboratories, long hours of reading and much writing.

Others will continue their learning process in what is often called the "classroom of life." In any case, the learning process will (and must) continue for the rest of their active lives.

The glow of accomplishment they feel today is very real, and will prevail for weeks and maybe months; but the awareness that 12 years of schooling is only the first step will reach them all and grow on them all too soon.

Some (possibly many) will find their futures far from the community they knew as "home," but for all of them this was where they took their first big step; they reached a plateau.

When you get right down to it, they had a lot of help. Many teachers were involved; and a skein of educators and administrators and lawmakers, their community. Finally, there was Family.

Quite a team ... all of them with an eye on the future.

It makes a high school grad sound pretty important. And it's true. Every blessed one of them.

Sensible Ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled this week that police do not have to warn suspects of their rights in a situation where there is a concern for the public safety.

That the vote was 6-3 shows there is disagreement among the justices on the correctness of the decision as it relates to Constitutional guarantees. The decision will also bring protests from civil rights groups that the "Miranda" ruling, which required police to inform a suspect of his rights, has been violated.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing an opinion for the majority of the court, acknowledged that the new ruling does create an exception to the "Miranda" warning.

Yet it is difficult to imagine how the Supreme Court could rule any other way in this narrow matter. The case involved introducing as evidence a gun police had seized before a suspect was told of his rights.

Although the courts must continue to monitor carefully police actions in such matters, it is clear that the safety of innocent people has to be safeguarded.

Baker Wants To Get It All Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., has been having a hard time getting the Senate to do anything lately, so he's proposing — somewhat whimsically — that this election-year session be brought to a close as rapidly as possible.

July 1 would be a good time to call it quits, Baker told reporters recently. In particular, he said he's not too optimistic about the current plans for both House and Senate to work for three weeks between the Democratic Convention in July and the Republican Convention in August.

"Past experience shows that I'll probably be here — alone," Baker said.

It took the Senate about a month to grind its way through a tax and budget-cutting bill and now it's making glacial progress on a defense measure, a bill that Baker said could take anywhere from "four days to six months."

Yet, Congress can't recess for the year until it takes care of — at the minimum — the 13 appropriations bills needed to fund all government agencies and programs for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

To date, none of these measures has been enacted.

When the Senate turned to the defense bill last week, many of the key players were in Normandy, not on Capitol Hill. "We still don't have our happy warriors back from Omaha Beach," Baker lamented.

Little actually remains of the 98th session of Congress. Both chambers will take off for the two political conventions, then return for a short session in September. If it still hasn't acted on the funding bills by time it leaves for its election recess, then it will be forced to return for such a session.

The fact that the Senate was making scant progress on the defense bill caused crusty Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., to wonder aloud about the absence of senators at a Commerce subcommittee hearing that he chaired. The missing

RALEIGH — A young man is arrested and convicted of a felony in Brevard. As he stands for sentencing, the judge should be aware that several years ago this same fellow was convicted of a similar crime in Greenville. But will the judge know?

A state law enacted by the 1981 General Assembly created a system for developing criminal histories of defendants. Despite that law, there's a good chance the judge in this case and many others will know nothing about the defendant's record.

"I think everybody believes that we have what Jack Lord had on (the TV show) Hawaii Five-O," says Gordon Smith, director of the Governor's Crime Commission. "That is, whenever we need a criminal history, we can punch a button and up it comes ... But we have no such ability."

The 1981 law set up a two-step process for developing histories of North Carolina criminals. At arrest for felonies and some misdemeanors, the defendant is fingerprinted and a copy of the prints is sent to the State Bureau of Investigation. Then, when his case is closed — when he's either convicted or acquitted — that case disposition is also supposed to be sent along to the SBI.

"Our feeling is that the fingerprints are being taken at the time of arrest," said David Jones, director of the N.C. Criminal Justice Analysis Center. "But, basically, the dispositions are not being reported."

The SBI says it is not being informed of dispositions on 16 percent of all cases in the state. In some counties, the percentage is much higher. Jones led a research team that studied six counties with which the SBI was having the most difficulty.

For the period of Jan. 1, 1982 to June 30, 1983, the researchers found that Transylvania County failed to report 68 percent of its dispositions, Moore County 24 percent, Forsyth 32 percent, Guilford 34 percent, Onslow 46 percent and Pitt 31 percent. The research covered cases which were at least six months old, so the local officials should have had enough time to send the dispositions to Raleigh.

Jones said two problems cropped up time and again. First, the form on which the disposition is supposed to be reported was misplaced. Second, the form simply sat in the file because no one sent it to Raleigh.

The crime commission is recommending that the General Assembly make several technical changes in the mandatory fingerprinting law this month. Jones says the changes are designed to speed up the reporting of dispositions from 60 to 30 days. Also, the changes will make the law more specific about who is responsible for carrying out each stage of the fingerprinting and reporting process and how much time they have to do their job.

College Has A Sea Of Troubles

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Things are quiet these days at Fisk University. At the old Cravath Memorial Library, the clock in the tower has stopped and paint is peeling in great scabrous sheets from office walls. Trumpet vines are growing in the shrubbery. Enrollment has plummeted from 1,125 a few years ago to 694 in the semester just ended. Fisk isn't dead, but it is barely holding on.

If Fisk goes under, it will write a sad end to a beloved institution that deserves something better. Founded in 1866, Fisk was the fourth predominantly black college in the country. For the better part of a century it flourished as one of the best of the lot. It developed academic strengths in art and music — its Jubilee Singers gained international renown — and along with Howard University (1867) it attracted the elite among black high school graduates across the country.

Now Fisk's friends and trustees are waiting on the report of a federal task force to see if the university will be able to open in the fall. It needs at least 200 freshman students possessed of keen minds and also possessed of $6,800 for board, room and tuition. It needs to rebuild its badly depleted endowment funds. It needs cash to serve a $2.8 million debt. It needs everything that goes into a rescue operation, and it needs all this the day before yesterday.

How did Fisk get in this fix? Part of the reasons are local and personal. Walter Leonard became president of Fisk in 1977, and though he came highly recommended he proved to be the wrong man for the job. He alienated Nashville's conservative civic leadership. He could not cope with a crisis that developed last November when the Nashville Gas Co. cut off the university's gas for non-payment of a $350,000 bill. In January he abruptly resigned. He said he had been promised a substantial sum in severance pay, and he had a check drawn accordingly. Board Chairman Timothy Donaldson said Leonard was "lying" about the promise and stopped payment on the check. Leonard termed the action "callous, irresponsible, obscene and reckless." The dispute has not been resolved.

Now a new president has been named, Henry Ponder of Benedict College in Columbia, S.C. If he is to pull off a successful salvage operation, he will need to combine the talents of diplomat, educator, fundraiser, administrator, publicist, politician, roof repairman and miracle worker.

It is a large order. Fisk may be the most troubled of the 102 predominantly black colleges, but it is not alone in a sea of problems. For the past 20 years, since desegregation of colleges became not only fashionable but legally imperative, predominantly white institutions have been engaged in a ferocious competition for promising black students. One consequence has been to drain away the best and brightest young people who might have kept the old luster alive at Fisk.

At the last count, about 10.6 million white students and 883,500 black students were in American colleges — but only 163,800 of these black students, or about 19 percent, were in the 102 schools that historically have been black. Under the relentless pressure of federal courts and federal agencies, white universities in the South have attracted every eligible black they could lay their hands on, but the black institutions, by and large, have not done too well in attracting whites. (A few black institutions, remarkably, have gone so overboard for desegregation that they have lost their old identity. Bluefield (W.Va.) State College is now 89 percent white, and Kentucky State University is but 54 percent black.) Fisk last year had only one Chinese and two white students.

The government's policy toward the black institutions is uncomfortably ambivalent. In theory our entire educational system, from kindergarten through graduate school, should not be racially identifiable. As the Supreme Court has said, the aim is not for white schools or black schools but just schools. On the other hand, the historically black colleges are objects of much pride and devotion; their needs cannot politically be ignored.

Say a prayer for President Ponder. Like presidents of other black colleges, he needs all the help he can get.

A Good Investment Is A Challenge

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of living may be rising much more slowly now than it was a few years back, but it's still a challenge to find investments that beat inflation.

That conclusion arises from an annual survey of the performance of 14 different types of investments conducted by the Wall Street firm of Salomon Bros. Inc.

In the 12 months ended June 1, the firm calculates that only four of those 14 categories produced returns greater than the 4.6 percent rise of the consumer price index over the same period. They were Old Masters paintings, up 14.3 percent; Treasury bills, up 9.4 percent; coins, up 7.4 percent; and housing, up 5.5 percent.

Chinese ceramics slightly trailed the CPI with a 3 percent rise. Diamonds and oil were unchanged for the period, and the rest finished in the minus column: farmland, down 0.7 percent; stocks, down 1 percent; foreign currencies, down 3 percent; gold and U.S. stamps, both down 4 percent; bonds, down 7.2 percent; and silver, down 25.2 percent.

High "real" interest rates — after taking inflation into account — played a prominent role in the way those ratings came in, Salomon Bros. analysts noted. For example, high rates pushed Treasury bills, which pay specified rates of interest determined at regular government auctions, into the No. 2 spot.

Other money market investments like money market mutual funds and money market deposit accounts at banks and savings institutions, which are not accounted for as separate categories in the Salomon Bros. survey, presumably posted similar results.

High interest rates contributed to strength in the dollar by attracting money from international investors into the United States — thus the weak showing of foreign currencies. This situation may have had a direct bearing on the rise in Old Masters paintings, Salomon Bros. added.

"Industry sources tell us that Americans have been arriving in force at European art auctions to take advantage of the significant opportunities offered by currency differentials," the firm said.

Measuring the merits of any investment over one arbitrary 12-month period has its limitations. But Salomon Bros. suggested there are some lessons to be learned about "inflation hedge" investments from their recent behavior.

"There are, in fact, three fairly distinct categories of tangible assets: collectibles, commodities and real estate," the firm's analysts said. "While all three types of tangibles tend to rise in value when inflation rates are high, they can respond in quite disparate ways to other economic trends."

Commodity investments like gold and silver have been depressed not only by lower inflationary expectations, but by the high borrowing costs facing people, both dealers and investors, who use credit to finance their holdings of commodities.

Real estate is normally sensitive to interest rates as well. But Salomon Bros. observed that the impact of high rates on housing has been cushioned lately by the rapid spread of adjustable-rate mortgages.

"By lowering the initial cost, variable-rate instruments have made housing more affordable to more people, and thus they have stimulated demand," the firm noted.

Collectibles, for their part, seem to be able to stand up to the pressures of high interest rates better than other types of tangible investments.

"Rising real rates diminish the relative attractiveness of collectibles compared with financial assets," Salomon Bros. concluded. "But they do not increase carrying costs, since purchases are rarely, if ever, financed by borrowing."

Strength For Today

A religious leader of a former generation had a clever way of dealing with people who professed to be atheists and unbelievers. "You don't believe in God?" inquired this preacher. Then he went on, "Tell me about what kind of God you don't believe in. Maybe I don't believe in him either."

The Bible teaches that God is the creator of the heavens and the earth. Furthermore, God has continued to manifest himself and his will through godly men — prophets, psalmists, ministers, priests, rabbis, world leaders. The books of the Old and New Testaments constitute an account of how this disclosure took place and what the men of the early centuries thought of it.

Some of us like this definition of God: "God is a Spirit, infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in his Being, in his wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth."

county that received high school diplomas during graduation exercises Wednesday. Across the county degrees were handed out at North Pitt, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central and Ayden-Grifton.

To be successful, Morris told graduates, the class of 1984 must possess four characteristics — wisdom, courage, strength and faith. "Fellow classmates, the opportunities lie before us," he said. "We have the potential to bring these opportunities to fruition."

Speaker Martha Rollins told classmates at North Pitt the future offers challenges, but that "we should not let these challenges intimidate us, for we have the wherewithal to meet them."

"We are, first, a class for whom our youth will be a great advantage," she said. "Our willingness to learn about new concepts will make it much easier to alter and adapt our lives along with a rapidly-growing, changing world."

"Along with our youth we are probably as healthy now as we will ever be," Miss Rollins added. With this good health and youth, she said, "come the vitality and eagerness that we must have to do the most and best we can with our lives."

Graduates must separate their dreams and goals, she said. "For some, the dreams may actually become attainable goals; however for many of us the dreams are things we will just always hold onto as the utopias we wish to attain."

At Farmville Central, graduation speaker Sara Beth Fulford spoke to classmates about the "often unrecognized prize of being born free." The class of 1984 should work to preserve this gift, she said, and not take it for granted.

The authors of the U.S. Constitution, Miss Fulford said, "wanted to insure that future generations would live in freedom and that they would perpetuate it."

"Today, we are the people in whose hands this great task lies,"

she said. "I ask you to make a contribution to maintaining the United States of America as the free nation it is in order that the class of 2084 will also have the precious gift of being born free."

Farmville Central graduate Kelly Hobgood told classmates to dream and to work hard to make these dreams a reality. "When you dream, there is no limit to what you can do," he said. "The hard part is making these dreams a reality."

Effort, motivation and opportunity and the keys to success, he said. "Effort and motivation come from within, but unfortunately the ways of the world play a part in your life also," Hobgood said. "Chance and opportunity are what sets off a dream. During a lifetime there may be a one-in-a-million opportunity to reach that dream."

Graduates should take that chance, he said, not "just sit back and watch it go by."

Ayden-Grifton graduate Linwood Hall also spoke to classmates about dreams. "From Lincoln to Kennedy, dreams have created the basis of reasoning from which the participant acquires the answer to a confusing question," he said. "Many of today's seniors have followed a dream since they were old enough to converse with other counterparts — dreams of becoming cowboys, astronauts, nurses, teachers or other traditional heroic figures."

These dreams will continue to motivate the class of 1984 throughout their lives, said Hall, as their increase their knowledge, choose an occupation and work at it "as they journey through their lives."

"The voyage (through life) will relate convincingly to that of Dorothy in 'The Wizard of Oz,'" he said.

Ayden-Grifton graduates Monica Stokes and David Springer, in a shared speech, spoke about school pride the class of 1984 developed. "The past four years in high school have been filled with diligent study and hard work," said the two graduates. "But they have also been four of the most fun-filled and exciting years of our lives."

The pride at Ayden-Grifton developed, according to Miss Stokes and Springer, because of a challenge by Principal Bill Wiggins to "experience the feeling one gets whenever he does his best."

"Thus faculty and students formed a bond and set their goal as upgrading pride to the ultimate level," the two said. The result was "more support from students than ever before" because of "increased homeroom attendance, participation in athletic events, plays, band and chorus, and in county-sponsored events."

Developing this pride, the two said, "is a significant step toward a better school, better education and a better appreciation of life."

At D.H. Conley graduation speaker Ragan Spain told members of the class of 1984 that "graduating from high school shows us that now is the time for us to grow up and finally discover ourselves and our own inner ambitions."

"These ambitions will guide us in the course of our life's action," Spain said. "In order for us to achieve personal happiness, we must allow these dreams to permeate our very being or else our life cannot hope to satisfy these goals...therefore we'll be terribly unhappy." To realize ambitions, Spain said, graduates must "have a burning ambition to press on."

"Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence, he said. "Talent will not, genius will not and education will not."

"Our future is now in our hands," D.H. Conley speaker Bart Richards told classmates. "From this moment on, our parents and teachers will no longer be there to look after our every need and dismiss all the errors we make."

"Now is the time to grow up, to become mature adults and handle responsibilities too important to overlook," Richards added. "Time has come to rearrange our priorities. 'If we can intelligently list our priorities and be governed by them, we have grown up more than we realize.'"

After the class of 1984 matures and sets its priorities, Richards said, the second task is "to discover ourselves...determine our identities...dream...and be successful."

Principals and local school officials awarded degrees to the graduates across the county.

try to do too much and get sick," he said.

Drinking plenty of water is also a good way to combat summer heat, according to Dr. Sam Spicer, assistant professor of emergency medicine for the ECU School of Medicine.

"Water should be drunk before exercising, while you're out in the sun or anytime when it's hot," he advised. "Serious runners also need to drink about a quart or at least two large cups of water before they go out and they should never run after 9 a.m. or before 4 p.m.," he said.

"Some people take salt tablets to combat water loss, but that is not a good idea at all," he added. "Your body doesn't need that high of a concentration of salt. Most people's diets give them all the salt they need and if you feel you need more — if your legs cramp when you run or your feel nauseous — drink some Gatorade and get out of the sun, walk a bit and run under a sprinkler."

Host Families

Homes are needed by the Nacel Cultural Exchanges for 40 French students, aged 13-19, who will spend four weeks in this area between July 12 and August 8.

Nacel is organized jointly by French and American teachers. As part of the program, 30 American students have been selected to stay with French families this summer.

Families interested in hosting a student should contact Nacel Cultural Exchanges, 5313 Ridgeloach Place, Raleigh, 27612, or call Dr. Frederic Flandermuller at 782-7700 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Application deadline is Wednesday.

Fire-Rescue Report

Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen reported that the department responded to 198 calls during May.

The calls involved 185 rescue responses (145 within the City and 40 in the county) and 13 fire calls. The department transported 113 city residents, 48 county residents, and 20 non-residents. Fire-rescue vehicles traveled 1,530 miles, including 996 in the city and 534 in the county.

Allen said his personnel spent 688 hours in training exercises and skills development.

Society Inductions

Betty Ann White of Fountain and Gordon T. Walker of Greenville have been inducted into the Epsilon Pi Eta Honor Society at Campbell University.

Ms. White, a medical technology major, is a presidential scholar and has received the Salutorian and Pastor's Appreciation scholarships at the university. A president's list student, she is secretary-treasurer of Phi Eta Sigma honor society and a graduate of Bertie High School.

She is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert C. White of Fountain.

Walker, a trust major, is a presidential scholar and a member of Phi Eta Sigma. He is chairman of the College Republicans and former vice-president of his sophomore class. He is state president pro-tempore of the Christian Educators Council of North Carolina.

A Rose High School graduate, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Walker of Greenville.

Benefit Wrestling

Mid-Atlantic championship wrestlers Adrian Street and Miss Linda will battle Johnny Weaver at the Rose High School gymnasium Monday at 8:15 p.m. as part of a series of benefit matches sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees.

Also wrestling will be the Mark Youngblood-Renegade team against Ivan Koloff and Don Kernodle in a tag team bout; Angelo Mosca Jr. against current Atlantic heavyweight champion The Outlaw, and Russian newcomer Nikolai Koloff against Bret Hart. A match between Ben Alexander and Mark Fleming will open the series.

Council Award

East Carolina University's chapter of the Student Council for Exceptional Children, with a membership of more than 100 majors in special education, has received the state's first North Carolina Outstanding Council Award.

The award is presented by the North Carolina Association of Student Councils for Exceptional Children.

The chapter is headed by graduating senior Lynnette Pollard of Garner, president, and rising senior Elizabeth Shannon of Goldsboro, vice president.

Bicyclist Hurt

So-Tai Yuan of 56 Carriage House Apartments was charged with driving while impaired after a car he was driving collided with a bicycle operated by Brent Holmes, 20, of 203 Foxhaven Drive about 1:57 a.m. today.

Officers, who said the collision occurred on Charles Street at the entrance to Pitt Plaza, said Holmes was injured and taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Damage was estimated at $400 to the Yuan car and $250 to the bicycle.

Homes Entered

Greenville police are investigating three home break-ins reported Wednesday.

Officer W.R. McLawhorn said three checks and four rings were reported taken from 407A Darden Dr. in an 11 a.m. break-in.

He said entrance to the dwelling was gained through a window.

According to Officer J.M. Jones, a ladies wrist watch was taken from 1002 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 12:55 p.m.

A chess table, valued at $100, was stolen from A7 Glendale Apartments in an incident reported at 7 p.m., Officer B.D. Dobbs said.

Property Taken

Greenville police are investigating the theft of stereo equipment from a car parked at 104 Lindenwood Drive, according to Officer M.C. Jernigan.

He said an amplifier, two speakers and a radio-tape deck, valued at $800, were stolen.

The theft was reported at 9:12 p.m.

Anniversary

Choir No. 5 of Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church will celebrate its 16th anniversary Sunday at the church, corner of Hudson and Ward streets, with registration at 4:30 p.m. and the program beginning at 5 p.m.

The choir will rehearse tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Musical Program

When you are behind in a match, you sometimes need to take chances to catch up. This hand cropped up in the qualifying rounds of the Connecticut area Grand National Team Championships. Sitting South was Harold Feldheim of Hamden, Conn., who did the programming for the computer course "Charles Goren: Learning Bridge Made Easy."

With so many soft values, South has a doubtful opening bid. His move toward slam, based on a void in partner's suit, was dictated only by the state of the match. The result was a slam that was way below par, especially after the marked heart lead.

Declarer won the ace of hearts, cashed the ace of diamonds for a heart sluff, then ruffed a diamond. When the queen dropped, a ray of light appeared. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs, shedding a heart from the table, and ruffed a club. Another diamond ruff felled the king, which established the suit, and a club was ruffed in dummy. When that fetched the king, the slam became unbeatable as the cards lay.

Declarer led the jack of diamonds from the board.

Restored Houses Give Downtown Greenville An Extra Dimension

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Downtown Greenville has taken on an added dimension in recent years. Just a few steps away from the city's modern buildings, movie theater and clothing stores, the curious can find two very unusual, stately turn-of-the-century homes that are as different as they can possibly be.

Located at the corner of Third and Greene streets (a block from the Town Commons on the Tar River), the J.L. Fleming house sits behind two age-old magnolias. Its rose, white and grey patterned slate roof and iron grillwork catch the eyes of all passersby. The Humber house, built six years before the Fleming home in 1885, has a more subdued exterior, broken only by terracotta capitals topping the porch columns. Inside, the home is a hodge-podge showing French influence and a style that can be described as cabinetry.

For sometime before 1980, the Fleming house was empty and drunks sometimes slept against its porch. Then when J.L. and Loula Fleming's daughter Margaret Fleming Winstead died, the house reverted to the city which in turn gave the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce a 25 year lease on the house, chamber president Ed Walker said.

Fleming was a Greenville attorney who married Loula Victoria White in 1899. He was active in the political life of Greenville and Pitt County and worked diligently to get city electricity and water works. Fleming was twice elected to represent the sixth senatorial district and was instrumental in bringing to Greenville the Eastern Training School which later evolved into East Carolina University.

The only problem that arose during reconstruction involved the outside walls of the house which fell to pieces when the painters scraped them. "We had no choice then but to take off all of the exterior siding and re-do the whole outside," Walker said. "Then when we were hammering the siding back up, the blows caused the plaster on the inside walls to crumble so we had to replaster as well."

The trouble was worth every penny, he said, "because now we've got a building that speaks out loud for the community."

"Everyone here is so proud of the building and the care taken in restoring the house as close to its original condition as possible. But if we hadn't done it right, it would have been a sin against the house," he said. Reconstruction costs were paid through donations and pledges by members of the community and the chamber. Several local companies also paid for specific rooms to be finished. The result is a pleasing combination of wallpapers, lighting and period furniture, along with office equipment.

The Humber place is a working house as well. Practically every room on its four floors is in use by either the Eastern Office of the N.C. Division of Archives and History, the Playwright's Fund of North Carolina, the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council or the Greenville Area Preservation Association. However, it was a working house in another sense long before it was ever put in the hands of the city and Pitt County.

The house was originally built in 1885, then it was enlarged in 1910 and then enlarged again several years later. "Humber had a craftsman in here from the time he fled the Nazis in Paris until he died," Archives Acting Head Dru Haley said.

Dr. Robert Lee Humber was a wealthy man of letters who made his fortune in the international oil business. He was a lawyer and a Rhodes Scholar who received several honorary doctorates. He is said to have been an avid reader, collector and writer as well as a most meticulous, but pleasant man whose passions included art and world peace, Ms. Haley said.

According to archives records, Humber worked diligently to make state governments realize the need for a governing world body and was more than partly responsible for the quality of pieces now at the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. Humber returned from Paris during the second world war, and worked the rest of his life making his home fit his and his French wife's needs.

Cabinets and shelves can be found in every room of the house. In some rooms, there are even shelves with false backs that hide yet more shelves. On brief count, the basement rooms hold more than 160 cabinets built into the maze of walls.

The number of cabinets in the entire house might number well over 400.

The Humber house and grounds were given to the City of Greenville and Pitt County in 1980 by his family on the condition that the house be used only for cultural and historical purposes. If that condition is not upheld, the house will revert to the family.

Although neither house holds daily organized tours, staff members say they're glad to show anyone around.

Mubarak Plans Party Shakeup

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak will ask acting Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly to form a new Cabinet this summer, shortly after the newly elected Parliament meets on June 23, a senior government official said.

Aly, 62, was named acting prime minister June 5 after the death of Prime Minister Fuad Mohieddin.

The official source, speaking on condition of anonymity, also said Mubarak plans a major shakeup of his National Democratic Party, including the appointment of young leaders to key posts.

Aly was defense minister from 1978 to 1980 following a three-year tour of duty as director of General Intelligence, the Egyptian equivalent of the CIA.

Pentagon Says Soviets Have Increased Arms Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, which increased defense spending by up to 10 percent in 1982, has started producing more than 10 new or improved air, sea and land weapons, including two new intercontinental ballistic missiles, Pentagon officials say.

The officials, who asked for anonymity, also said the Soviets have increased output of five weapons.

"The 1983 growth in military procurement apparently reflects decisions to produce several new systems for which production is likely to expand in the next few years," said one of the officials, who briefed reporters under ground rules protecting their anonymity.

The officials claimed that none of the 18 new and improved weapons which were leaving Soviet production lines for the first time or in stepped-up quantities was being produced in response to the Reagan administration's massive buildup, which began in 1981.

"All of these systems were well in train before 1980," said one official. "Most of them entered research and development between 1973 and 1976."

The estimated 5 percent to 10 percent increase in the dollar-equivalent value of Soviet military production last year compares with a 14.7 percent boost in U.S. weapons production outlays in the same period.

The briefing officials, acting on information developed by the Defense Intelligence Agency, gave no hard dollar figures on the Soviet increase, but estimated that the 1982 level of procurement in the Soviet Union totalled about $59 billion, compared to about $50 billion in the United States.

The two new missiles mentioned in the report are the solid-fueled SSX-24, a medium-sized weapon, and the smaller SSX-25. The Pentagon's report on Soviet military power, released in April, said that "available evidence suggests mobile as well as silo deployment for both systems."

Other Soviet weapons listed as in production for the first time in 1983 were the MiG-29 air superiority fighter, the Su-25 ground attack warplane, the Su-27 fighter, an aircraft carrier, a cruise missile submarine, a new model of a medium tank, an advanced infantry combat vehicle and three types of attack submarines, two of them nuclear and one conventionally powered.

Improved versions of the huge SS-18 and SS-19 ICBMs also were said to be in production but not yet deployed.

Listed as in increased production were the MiG-31 interceptor, the Bear-H bomber, the Mi-8 assault helicopter, the SA-10 surface-to-air missile and the Udaloy-class guided missile destroyer.

Anti-Soviet Drift Will Continue

ROME (AP) — Spanish and French Communist leaders say the effort to inject Western democracy into Marxist ideology will continue, despite the death of Italian Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer, who guided his party away from the Soviet orbit.

Berlinguer was buried Wednesday, two days after his death at age 62 from a brain hemorrhage. Police said as many as 1.5 million mourners crowded the site of his funeral in St. John Lateran Square, a traditional rallying place for Italian leftists.

Communist militants came by special trains, buses and ferries from throughout Italy to pay tribute to the leader of Italy's second-largest political party. Venetian gondoliers, Sardinian miners and Sicilian anti-nuclear activists were part of the crowds clogging Rome's streets in an attempt to catch a glimpse of the coffin.

Among those who joined the mourners were leaders from the world's two biggest Communist nations, Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang of China, and Mikhail Gorbachev, a Soviet Politburo member who is said to be the No. 2 man in the Kremlin. Berlinguer, leader of the West's largest Communist party, outlined the concept of Eurocommunism to stunned Soviet leaders at the 25th Soviet Party Congress in 1976: "Socialist society must be built through the contributions of different parties, in a pluralistic and democratic system."

"Eurocommunism will survive Berlinguer and all the rest of us who have launched it," Santiago Carillo, who resigned as Spanish Communist leader in 1982, said Wednesday.

French Communist leader Georges Marchais said Berlinguer's death "will change nothing" in the drive to promote Eurocommunism.

Berlinguer helped to launch the idea of national ways to socialism. "There's no single model to follow," said Marchais, whose party often has taken a pro-Moscow line, differing with the Italian Communists.

Berlinguer tried to bring about a "historic compromise" of sharing power with Italy's biggest party, the Christian Democrats. His positions on major policy matters often put him at odds with the Kremlin.

However, Gorbachev appeared to play down the difference between Moscow and the West European Communist parties.

Angolan Rebels Take 11 Hostages

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Guerilla forces of the Angolan rebel movement UNITA captured 11 Americans, Portuguese and Colombians during attacks on government troops in the southern African nation, a spokesman for the rebel group said today.

The rebels also claimed to have killed 210 Angolan soldiers and 30 Cuban troops in battles in four provinces Wednesday, the same day the 11 captives were seized. Forces of UNITA — the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola — suffered 15 killed and 32 wounded in the fighting at Quibala, Angola, UNITA spokesman Jardo Muecalia said.

The foreign workers were captured in Quibala, a town in central Kwanza-Sul province, and they will be marched hundreds of miles to rebel bases in southern Angola, Muecalia.

"They will receive our traditional hospitality, unless government forces try to stop our march," said Muecalia. He did not identify the captives nor say how many of the 11 are Americans.

The rebels usually release the names and hometowns of foreigners they capture just before setting them free. UNITA did not say how many of the captured workers were Americans, or what kind of work they were doing. In the past the rebels have captured technicians, drivers, builders, civil engineers, and agricultural advisers.

The number of captured foreigners was the largest claimed by the rebels since a March 25 attack on the southern city of Sumbe, where UNITA claimed to have taken 10 Portuguese and four Bulgarian workers.

UNITA has fought for a power-sharing arrangement with the Marxist government of Angolan President Jose Eduardo dos Santos.

Eruptions Erased Andean Civilization

CHICAGO (AP) — Pottery shards dug from the Andes have helped archaeologists unravel a mystery that spanned two continents and thousand of years: how the New World's most promising civilization disappeared after a series of Pompeii-like volcanic eruptions.

Archaeologists had long known of a highly sophisticated art style originating from the Cauca Valley region, stretching 550 miles from northern Ecuador into Colombia.

But it wasn't until last year, when Illinois graduate student John Isaacson recovered pottery shards from two levels deeper into the volcanic ash at the Nueva Era site in Quito, Ecuador, than his predecessors had gone, that the mystery began to unravel.

Then it took a stroke of luck, some museum detective work, and University of Illinois archaeology professor Dr. Donald Lathrap's penchant for remembering the characteristics of ancient pieces of pottery and metal-crafting to establish what scientists at Chicago's Field Museum now believe is the correct date for the civilization — 600-1,500 B.C., instead of 400-800 A.D.

"If these findings are correct, they indicate the existence of a culture that was essentially 1,000 years ahead of what was going on at the same time in Peru and Mexico," Lathrap said.

"And the people responsible were wiped out or driven away by the immense outburst of volcanic activity," he added. "... Here we have not one, but a series of Pompeii-like disasters," over a period of 600 years. Vesuvius' massive eruption buried Pompeii in 79 A.D.

If their findings are correct, archaeologists also may have traced the beginnings of the fabled empires of the Incas, Aztecs and Mayans to the people who fled the Cauca Valley's continuing eruptions. Lathrap believes the refugees carried their technological developments with them as they migrated among other groups.

What Isaacson found actually was a series of villages and shards of pottery similar to those designated in 1969 as "Incised Brown Ware" by archaeologist Karen Bruhns.

That style of pottery first was exhibited in public in 1896 at the Chicago-Columbian International Exposition, part of a collection assembled by Vincent Restrepo, a Colombian aristocrat who hired professional tomb looters to make the find.

In the same tombs, they found a host of spectacular gold pieces showing the level of skill achieved by artisans of the civilization, but the collection was dated 400-800 A.D.

Because of the depth at which Isaacson made his discovery, the date of the pottery was pushed back by hundreds of years, predating the cultures of the Mayans, Incas and Aztecs.

However, it had been forgotten that the skillfully crafted gold had been linked to the pottery and the significance of Isaacson's find was missed.

But Lathrap and researcher Colin McEwan, with time on their hands one day in the museum, decided to open the catalogue for the original Columbian exposition prepared by Restrepo.

From that manuscript, they established the pottery found by Isaacson and the gold pieces came from the same culture. That told Lathrap the civilization that once thrived at the Nueva Era site and that had produced the pottery was so advanced, "that in terms of metal-lurgy — which is one good indicator of a society's level of achievement — they were on the moon at a time when everybody else was riding bicycles."

"And remember," he concluded, "this was all wiped out at a time when it was likely just beginning to flower."

Aussies Reject U.S. Troop Base

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The government said today it would not allow the United States to base combat troops in Australia for rapid intervention in Southeast Asia or southern Africa, if such a request were made.

Defense Minister Gordon Scholes made the statement in response to news reports that a U.S. study had proposed dividing America's Rapid Deployment Force between Australia and Spain.

The report by the Center for Strategic Studies at Georgetown University in Washington suggested that three divisions, or about 50,000 U.S. soldiers, could be based in Western Australia to intervene quickly in Southeast Asia or southern Africa.

Troops in Spain could handle emergencies in Europe or the Middle East, the study said.

Persian Gulf States Agree On Plan To Protect Ships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The foreign ministers of six Persian Gulf countries have agreed on joint action to protect their oil installations and their customers' tankers from attack, Prince Saud Al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia said today.

Without giving details, the Saudi foreign minister said three days of talks on how to keep world markets supplied with oil despite the Iran-Iraq war had produced agreement on combined action "surpassing expectation."

Iraq and Iran have attacked more than 40 ships in the gulf, making customers reluctant to enter the region and threatening to sharply erode the oil income of the gulf states.

The ministers finished their deliberations in Taif, Saudi Arabia, just before dawn and ate a meal together before beginning an all-day fast, as required during the month of Ramadan, the holiest period in the Islamic year.

The official Qatar news agency reported that the defense ministers of the six Gulf Cooperation Council nations will meet soon to lay down plans for the "protection of security and sovereignty."

The agency said the defense officials were to create a unified defense plan.

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the foreign ministers considered creation of a oil tanker sea corridor close to their nations' coastlines, with air cover, naval escorts and protections from coastal artillery.

Those strategies were also discussed at a Sunday meeting of oil ministers of the Council, which includes Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

King Hussein of Jordan traveled from Oman to Qatar to Abu Dhabi on Wednesday, seeking collective action to ease the crisis and avoid foreign military intervention, said Qatar's news agency.

Bahrain's prime minister, Sheikh Khalifa Bin Salman, had said Wednesday that a deterioration of the gulf situation would lead to intervention by the superpowers, which "we utterly reject." But he told the Cyprus-based Gulf Cooperation magazine that oil importing countries should join in diplomatic efforts to help "ensure that oil will reach them."

Bataan Survivors Seeking Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Survivors of the World War II Bataan death march, recalling life in that "living hell," are asking Congress for the right to sue to win compensation for their work as slave laborers.

The former U.S. defenders of Bataan and Corregidor in the Philippines, who became prisoners of the Japanese in 1942, were to testify today in support of legislation that would give them the right to file legal actions in U.S. Claims Court.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Manuel Lujan Jr., R-N.M., said the measure would permit suits against Japanese companies that used American prisoners. A 1951 treaty between the United States, its allies and Japan bars suits by war prisoners against the signers' governments.

Ex-Olympian Turns Candidate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Richards, once known as the "pole-vaulting parson," has decided after two Olympic gold medals, 15 years of Wheaties commercials and 38 years of speechmaking to seek the presidency of the United States.

Richards, 58, who won gold medals for pole vaulting at the 1952 and 1956 Olympic Games, said he made the decision after he was approached by the Populist Party, which hasn't held a convention since 1892.

"I debated and debated and I decided I had to do it for my country," Richards said Wednesday in a telephone interview from Dallas. "I think an awful lot of people feel like I do, that the Democrats and Republicans no longer represent the people."

Richards has long believed in the need for a third political party. His views coincide with those of the Populist Party, which is joining forces with the American Independent Party to support him. The AIP has most of its strength in California, where it claims nearly 160,000 members.

He said that he doesn't expect to win, but wants to "educate" voters and act as a "spoiler" on the 1984 presidential scene.

"I have higher qualifications than either of the candidates," he asserted, assuming President Reagan and Walter Mondale win their parties' nominations.

"I've traveled more than either of the candidates. And I'm probably better known to the average person prior to politics than either of those," he said.

Richards, who now lives on a ranch in Waco, Texas, was a minister and professor of philosophy at La Verne College in Southern California when he leaped into the public eye with an Olympic record vault at the 1952 Games in Helsinki, Finland.

He later resigned as pastor of the First Church of the Brethren in Long Beach to train more intensely for the 1956 Olympics, and ended up winning 26 national indoor and outdoor championships.

Following his Olympic victories, he remained in the public eye as a spokesman for Wheaties cereal — dubbed the "breakfast of champions."

He also traveled as a State Department goodwill ambassador in 1954 to India, Burma, Thailand, Hong Kong and Korea and was named to the President's Council For Youth Fitness by then-President Dwight Eisenhower. In 1957, he wrote a book, "The Heart of a Champion."

Fifteen years ago, he decided he "just didn't want to be known as the Wheaties guy," and has made a living in recent years on the lecture circuit, giving motivational speeches mostly to corporate audiences, he said.

The Populists contacted him for support following a meeting of Populist and American Independent leaders last month, said Richards' public relations spokesman, Ed Shaw of Los Angeles.

"Richards was the only one who came forward and said, 'I want to run and make a serious go of it,'" Shaw said Wednesday.

Richards said his platform consists of halving the federal budget, turning most government functions over to the states, cutting interest rates to 4 percent, nationalizing the Federal Reserve system and requiring an end to deficit spending.

He also supports a non-interventionist foreign policy, saying, "We don't believe in fighting wars all over the world and killing American boys all over the world."

He said he hopes to "educate voters" through a series of videotapes he will send to groups nationwide.

Richards predicted his party could have a good chance of winning the presidency in 1988.

Researchers Say Rules Inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental research organization says bad air is polluting the water and polluted water is hurting the air because environmental protection programs are too narrow.

"U.S. environmental control laws and programs ... seek to control pollutants as if they remain in the same medium. This narrow focus can undermine the effectiveness of the laws," the Conservation Foundation said in its biennial "State of the Environment" report issued today.

"Scientific findings are increasingly revealing that major water pollution problems are due to air pollutants being deposited in water; at the same time, studies in Philadelphia and elsewhere are revealing that municipal plants to treat water pollution are major sources of air pollution from volatile organic chemicals," the report said.

"There is a discordant lack of correspondence between the ecological unity of the natural world and the fragmentation of the institutions that have been developed to deal with that world," the foundation's report said.

The report detailed progress and problems in many areas familiar to environmentalists from separate reports by governmental agencies and others.

The report suggested dealing with the problem through improved coordination, reorganization of environmental agencies and consolidation of environmental laws.

Auto Sales Lag From Year Ago

DETROIT (AP) — Lack of assembly line space may have begun to catch up with U.S. automakers, who have recorded their first year-to-year decline in car sales this year, Wall Street analysts say.

Figures released Wednesday by the major manufacturers put sales for early June at 0.4 percent lower than for the comparable period a year ago.

Ford Motor Co. sales were up 13.1 percent and Chrysler Corp.'s rose 4.2 percent. But General Motors Corp. showed a 5.2 percent decline, Volkswagen of America Inc. sales were off 55.2 percent and American Motors Corp. sales were off 28 percent.

Industrywide sales for the year still were running 29.1 percent ahead of last year's pace, but "these figures are nothing to stand up and shout about," said Joseph Philippi, an automotive industry analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds in New York.

Philippi said sales took a dip because the automakers "are not getting out as many cars as people would like." He also said it appeared that more Americans were willing to put off purchases until they can get exactly what they want in color, style and options.

Most analysts agree that U.S. automakers would be hard-pressed to turn out as many cars as they did collectively in 1979, 8.2 million, and that there's no way 1978's record level of 9.1 million could be reached.

The seasonally adjusted annual rate for early June was 7.6 million.

Blue Cross-Shield Issues Guidelines On X-Rays, Scans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association has issued guidelines designed to reduce the number of medical imaging procedures such as X-rays and ultrasound scans in hopes of cutting mounting health costs.

Bernard R. Tresnowski, president of the association, told a news briefing Wednesday that the guidelines will help assure that patients don't get unnecessary diagnostic imaging and that insurers like Blue Cross and Blue Shield won't have to pay for it.

"The new guidelines are not a reduction in benefits," Tresnowski said, "but an attempt to make sure that we are not paying for tests that are not needed."

Tresnowski said Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans throughout the country pay about 35 percent of the $7 billion spent annually on X-rays, computerized three-dimensional X-rays called CAT scans, ultrasound scans, as well as nuclear and other types of imaging.

Almost 200 million of these imaging procedures are done each year and the number is rising by about 8 percent each year. Although there are no figures on how many of these procedures may be unnecessary, he said, there are good indications that some of them are.

Even if the percentage of unnecessary imaging procedures is small, Blue Cross officials said, so much money is spent on these diagnostic tools that even a small decrease in use will mean savings of millions of dollars.

Dr. Ervin E. Nichols of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, one of eight professional medical organizations that helped develop the guidelines, said 40 percent of all pregnant women have ultrasound examinations.

Nichols said he would guess that between 10 percent and 30 percent of these ultrasound scans are being done "for no good reason."

The guidelines will be sent to state and local Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans, which generally adopt such recommendations, Tresnowski said.

The following are some of the key recommendations:

—When cancer or other breast disease is suspected, X-ray mammography may be indicated, as well as ultrasound if the X-ray results are inconclusive. However, thermography, which uses variations in tissue heat to produce images, and diaphanography, in which images are created with intense light passing through tissue, are not recommended.

—CAT scans should not be used to evaluate headaches, unless the headaches are very unusual or prolonged and could suggest a more serious brain problem.

—Ultrasound images should not be used routinely during pregnancy and only when a specific problem is suspected. Physicians should not do ultrasound examinations just to learn the sex of a fetus or to give the prospective parents a picture to show their friends.

—Routine chest X-rays are not recommended for any situation.

"The use of diagnostic imaging procedures continues to escalate every year," Tresnowski said. "Significantly, it is the newer and more costly imaging procedures, such as ultrasound and CAT scans, which have had the fastest growth, nearly 60 percent annually."

The association recommended that state and local plans spend the next six months to a year educating hospitals and physicians and other health professionals on the guidelines and monitoring their behavior.

As patterns of inappropriate use emerge, institutions and individuals should be warned that their insurance reimbursements may be endangered before considering any cuts in payments, Tresnowski said.

In most cases, the insurers will continue to pay for most imaging procedures, he said, but doctors and hospitals will be required to provide more written justification for acting contrary to the guidelines.

Vaccine Protects Children From Meningitis

BOSTON (AP) — Children should be routinely vaccinated against hemophilus, a bacteria that preys on babies and is a major cause of meningitis and other fatal illnesses, says a European study published today.

The vaccine prevents infection with hemophilus influenzae type b, which causes 20,000 to 30,000 cases of illness in the United States each year.

Tested on 50,000 children in Finland, the vaccine has one major drawback: It does not work on children who are under 18 months old. And since the bacteria often strikes babies around age 1, many experts have discounted the usefulness of the shots.

The latest research shows, however, that the germ is a major hazard throughout childhood, and much illness could be prevented by a widespread vaccination program.

The germ — not to be confused with the flu virus — is the foremost cause of childhood meningitis, a brain inflammation that kills 5 percent to 10 percent of its victims and leaves 30 percent with permanent damage. It also causes epiglottitis, a fatal obstruction of the windpipe, along with arthritis, pneumonia and other diseases.

The study, directed by Dr. Heikki Peltola of the National Public Health Institute in Helsinki, was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors found that 60 percent of the hemophilus infections in Finland occur between the ages of 1½ and 9, and these "are potentially preventable" with the vaccine.

The shots, known as the Hib vaccine, apparently cause no dangerous side effects. Therefore, they wrote, "there should be no medical or ethical reasons for delaying the use of the Hib vaccine as soon as it becomes available."

The vaccine is not yet produced in large volumes in the United States.

Aid Sought For Alzheimer's Victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress must act now to deal with expected increases in the number of victims of Alzheimer's disease as the nation's elderly population increases in the coming years, Rep. Olympia J. Snowe says.

"We must now address the problem of providing care for these victims and support for their families," the Maine Republican told a House Veterans Affairs subcommittee Wednesday.

Mrs. Snowe said 3 million to 4 million Americans suffer from Alzheimer's, including tens of thousands of veterans. She said it is the fourth leading cause of death among older persons, after heart attacks, cancer and strokes.

"The illness runs from three to five years before the victim's inevitable death and is characterized by progressively debilitating memory loss, personality changes, and finally, total lack of control over bodily functions," she said.

Marilyn W. Paige told the subcommittee about her 56-year-old husband, who has had the disease "perhaps eight or 10 years — it's difficult to tell. This terrible affliction can start so insidiously that you are not sure at times if anything is really wrong. Symptoms can be very subtle when they first appear."

She said her husband was not diagnosed until February 1981, and six months later was fired from his job. "He was still able to do his yard work, although I began to notice many of the jobs he undertook were poorly done, which is typical of Alzheimer's victims. That June, after the diagnosis, he danced at his daughter's wedding as well as he ever had."

"Today, he is so unsteady he has great difficulty getting around. Gradually, the symptoms grew worse, but I managed to care for him at home, with one day per week spent at a day care center. By last year, I was afraid to leave him alone — he might fall or perhaps start to wander. Also, by last year, he was not able to communicate well."

"My husband and companion of almost 30 years, for all practical purposes, had left me. Instead, I had a big 2-year-old who required constant supervision and help with all of his daily needs."

FCC Launching Drive To Help Scrub-a-Dub-Dub

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tossing a wool sweater into a hot dryer is a mistake, Federal Trade Commission Chairman James C. Miller lamented as he launched a campaign to teach Americans about the fabric care labels in clothing.

But learning how to care for clothing better is a "great opportunity to save money ... and to look even spiffier," Miller said Wednesday.

Clothing with more detailed labels, explaining how to safely wash or clean the item, will be appearing in stores shortly.

Federal rules require the extra information on clothes manufactured beginning this year. They replace older labels that were less useful, commission officials said.

For example, instead of saying "machine washable," a new label might say "machine wash, only non-chlorine bleach when needed, tumble dry warm."

The labels will show any special care needed for machine washing, hand washing, drying, ironing and pressing, bleaching, dry cleaning and leather or suede cleaning.

Miller said his agency has spent about $70,000 preparing public service announcements that will be sent to 500 television stations to help advise the public about the labels.

And a new booklet explaining the labels will also be available from the commission, Miller said.

In addition, Calvin S. Hatch, chairman of the Clorox Co., said his firm has printed 11 million laundry room guides that will be distributed free to the public.

The cardboard guides — which Hatch said cost about $200,000 — are designed to hang in a laundry room. They contain explanations of the care labels and a glossary of what the terms on the labels mean.

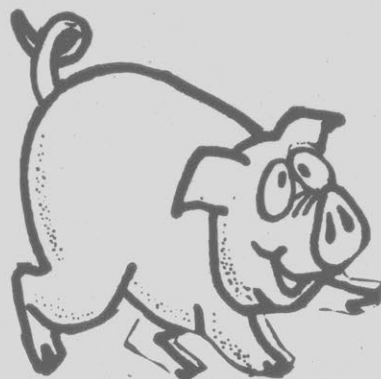

Hatch said the guides will be available in supermarkets nationwide or can be obtained by writing to his company in Oakland, Calif.

Assistance provided by the new labels and the laundry guide and booklet will help avoid errors such as those Miller said he made in drying his wife's sweater — a mistake he said resulted in a garment several sizes smaller than when he began the laundry that day.

Miller said a 1982 commission study found that 70 percent of consumers look at the care label when deciding whether to buy an item, and 95 percent follow the cleaning instructions on the labels.

But many consumers felt the labels then in use were not detailed enough or were confusing, prompting the new regulations.

Copies of the commission booklet "What's New About Care Labels" can be obtained by sending a postcard to "Labels," Federal Trade Commission, P.O. Box 37079, Washington, D.C., 20013.

Wind Gust Slams Plane To Runway

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Fifty-five people were "very, very lucky" to escape death or serious injury when a wind gust slammed a USAir jetliner onto a storm-swept runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, forcing a crash-landing, officials said.

The pilot of Flight 183 had aborted a landing in a hailstorm Wednesday and was retracting the landing gear to attempt another pass when the DC-9 was blown to the ground, said David Shipley, USAir assistant vice president for public affairs in Washington, D.C.

The damaged plane skidded to a stop on grass next to a runway, officials said. One passenger was hospitalized and four others were treated for minor injuries and released.

"The pilot was trying to take the plane up in the air, and all of a sudden there was a drop, a very severe drop," said passenger Don Wheeler of Springfield, Mass., who said his son, John Wheeler, suffered a bruised back.

"I realized the plane was sliding down the track sideways," said passenger Alma Guthrie, 66, of Mendon, who was among the injured. "It kind of shook me up."

The plane, carrying 50 passengers and five crew members, was arriving from Bradley International Airport at Windsor Locks, Conn., a suburb of Hartford, Shipley said.

"Either they were very, very lucky or else somebody upstairs was watching them," said Nozmi Elder, an airport operations assistant. "We're very lucky, no question about it, that there were 55 people on board and nobody killed."

There could have been an explosion if the aircraft had caught fire, said Al Weishaar, a Federal Aviation Administration air traffic manager.

The accident occurred at 5:05 p.m. At about the same time a severe thunderstorm with hail and 48-mph winds hit the airport, the National Weather Service said.

"On final approach into Detroit, the pilot lost visual contact with the runway and elected to do a go-around," Shipley said.

The aircraft was buffeted by hail and high winds as it approached the runway, said passenger Robert Sandner, 47, of Detroit.

"It seemed like when we were coming in we were in a blinding hailstorm. It looked like we were coming into rain. You could literally hear the hail," he said.

Weishaar said the plane came to rest on a grassy area between a runway and a taxiway. He said control tower personnel did not see the accident because the thunderstorm limited visibility.

Damage to the aircraft was "substantial," Shipley said.

A National Transportation Safety Board crash team was expected to join FAA officials today for an investigation, said FAA public affairs officer Mort Edelstein in Chicago.

Drawer Award

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Albuquerque police sergeant has been awarded more than $55,000 because he hurt his neck in the line of duty — trying to open a stuck desk drawer.

Sgt. Dennis Brandt, who was awarded the money in a lawsuit settlement this week, claimed that he received neck injuries while working as a liaison to the district attorney's office on Feb. 24, 1983.

"I had an old wooden desk that had a drawer that would hang up sometimes," Brandt said.

He said he was late for a meeting and needed some papers from the drawer. "I was jerking on it and it wouldn't come," he said. "I just gave it all I had."

Brandt said the drawer didn't open, but he "pulled something" in his neck, causing nerve damage.

Senate Shelves Proposal To Reduce Benefit Package For Ex-Presidents

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Under the combined weight of opposition from President Reagan and former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford, Senate Republican leaders have apparently shelved a bill that would sharply trim benefits for ex-presidents.

Crying foul, sponsors William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said their bill was quietly "pulled" from the Senate agenda at the request of the Reagan administration.

The legislation, approved by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee 8 to 1 in March and awaiting final action, would place new restrictions on the size of presidential libraries and reduce staff allowances for ex-presidents from the current $300,000 to $200,000 over nine years.

It would also end Secret Service protection for former presidents and their families after eight years. Former presidents who used government staffers to help them prepare their memoirs would have to have the memoirs printed by the government and any profits turned over to the Treasury.

"I was prepared to bring the bill to the floor for a vote. Now I understand that the administration has succeeded in having a hold put on the bill and I must say I am very unhappy with its action," Roth said.

Roth, who is chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, complained that the bill for round-the-clock protection of ex-presidents and their families, for maintaining seven presidential libraries and for paying office and travel expenses has risen from $64,000 in 1955 to $27 million this year.

"The American people want their former presidents to be treated with dignity and grace. But dignity and opulence should not be confused," Roth said.

Although the administration has no direct power to delay legislation, it was able to block action on the legislation by appealing to Republican leaders to keep the bill from coming to a vote.

A formal objection lodged to the legislation by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., will keep the bill from coming to a vote anytime soon. It would take unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed with the bill at this point, said Tom Griscom, an aide to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

A White House spokesman, Anson Franklin, said the administration opposes the measure because "it changes the rules in the middle of the game."

Senate sources, who did not wish to be identified by name, said both former Presidents Carter and Ford appealed directly to Baker to express their opposition to the bill. Former President Richard Nixon has not been heard from on the measure, Senate officials said.

"I am disappointed to find an administration that talks about the need to eliminate excessive government spending would place a hold on the bill," said Chiles.

A summary of the bill prepared by Democrats on the Governmental Affairs Committee said that "tax dollars have been used to assist former presidents become wealthy. This is a consequence not even envisioned by lawmakers."

Chiles said that, in particular, the use of government-paid staffers to help assemble presidential memoirs — that have later become best sellers — helped provide the impetus behind the bill.

"Should a former president be allowed to use staff paid from his staff allowance to write a book and then make great sums of money on it?" Chiles asked.

The bill would also require all future presidential libraries to be in a single building whose space may not exceed 60,000 square feet for a one-term president or 70,000 square feet for a two-term president.

The legislation would raise one benefit while it reduced the others. Pensions for widows of ex-presidents — now collected only by Lady Bird Johnson — would be raised from $20,000 a year to $55,000 a year. The three former presidents receive pensions of $80,000 a year, which would not be affected by the measure.

Job Bias Orders Face Review

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of court orders requiring employers to use race or sex quotas for hiring, promotions or layoffs will be reviewed by the Justice Department to see if a new Supreme Court ruling on affirmative action means they can be modified.

The review was announced at a news conference Wednesday by Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, the Reagan administration's chief civil rights enforcer. He claimed that a Supreme Court ruling Tuesday had vindicated his three-and-a-half-year battle to end the use of race or sex quotas to remedy past discrimination.

But Reynolds' announcement was immediately met by skepticism or disapproval from civil rights and business lawyers and even some administration officials.

The Supreme Court, in a case involving Memphis, Tenn., firefighters, ruled that a lower court erred in ordering the city to ignore a seniority system that favored white men so that minority or female workers would not be laid off from jobs obtained through a court-ordered affirmative action plan to remedy past discrimination.

The court said special job preferences may be ordered only for specific victims of discrimination but not for a victimized "class" of people, such as all blacks or women on an employer's payroll or in his community.

Citing this part of the ruling, Reynolds said, "We have a lot of decrees that we are going to be examining — certainly all the decrees the government is a party to."

Reynolds said any rewriting of these court orders would not force the firing or demotion of minority or female workers who had benefited from them.

Any changes would simply confine future benefits to people who could prove they had been specific victims, he said. "This would have to be prospective; you can't fault employers or employees for doing what a court ordered them to do," Reynolds said.

The Reagan policy against job quotas and goals reversed the policies of four previous Democratic and Republican administrations and earned Reynolds the bitter condemnation of many black, Hispanic and women's groups. "It's been a struggle to maintain the position we have in the face of a lot of shrill criticism," he said Wednesday.

Phone Taping Bill Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, citing concern for whistleblowers, the handicapped, and sexually harassed women, is opposing legislation that would make it a crime for a federal employee to secretly record a telephone conversation.

Administration witnesses told the Senate Judiciary criminal law subcommittee Wednesday that the proposal is an overreaction to revelations that such taping had been done by U.S. Information Director Charles Z. Wick.

They testified that law enforcement activities and intelligence gathering would be hampered if Congress made it a crime to record conversations without the consent of the other party.

But the bill's sponsors, Sens. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the measure is needed because secret taping by federal employees violates no law unless an employee has criminal intent.

"Secret taping of telephone calls by government officials is a clear infringement upon the fundamental rights to privacy of the people of this country," Metzenbaum said.

"Officers of the government simply have no business secretly tape recording conversations," said Bumpers, who called Wick's actions "nothing short of reprehensible."

Their bill, similar to laws in 13 states, would provide a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and six months in prison.

Victoria Toensing, deputy assistant attorney general for the Justice Department's criminal division, said the department opposes the measure for two principal reasons.

"First, it would be harmful to law enforcement operations without enhancing privacy interests," she said. "Second, because it unreasonably singles out federal employees for coverage while leaving unaffected identical conduct by other persons."

Storms Bring Hail, Tornadoes

By RON SIRAK

Associated Press Writer

Double-barrelled storms stretched from the Rockies to New England today after hurricane-force winds, grapefruit-size hail and more than two-dozen tornadoes knocked out power to 40,000 homes and triggered flash floods that trapped cars in water 5 feet deep.

The East Coast, reeling from a week of near-100-degree heat, got cooling relief with the brutal thunderstorms, but the mercury was expected to rise back into the upper 90s today from New York to the Carolinas.

At least 18 people have died this week from tornadoes, flooding or heat.

In Harrisburg, Pa., a 23-year-old inmate at Dauphin County Prison died Wednesday after being admitted to Harrisburg Hospital for heat stroke. A Washington, D.C., woman died of cardiac-pulmonary arrest due to the heat, officials said.

"We had a flurry of tornadoes Wednesday, 26 in all," Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today. "Storms like this aren't unusual. What's unusual is how widespread they are," Gordon said.

Tornadoes were reported Wednesday in Wyoming, Washington, New Mexico, Nebraska, Montana, Kansas, Indiana, South Dakota and Colorado, Gordon said. No serious injuries and only scattered damage were reported from the twisters.

"There are two areas of storms, one from the Rockies to the western Plains and the other from Indiana to southern New England," Gordon said. "Scattered, violent thunderstorms are continuing over those areas and will throughout the day."

In Colorado, nearly 5 inches of rain Wednesday washed across the Denver suburb of Arvada and up to 6 inches of hail was on the ground, said Byron Louis of the National Weather Service in Denver.

About 20 Arvada police cars were damaged seriously enough by hail that they were taken off the road for repairs, Arvada police Lt. Ted Mink said. Mink said one officer was dazed when he was hit by a hailstone "as large as a grapefruit."

Police had to rescue occupants of a half-dozen cars trapped in water up to 5 feet deep on Wadsworth Avenue, Mink said. Several low-lying streets in the Denver area were closed by flooding Wednesday, including U.S. 36, the main road from Denver to Boulder, authorities said.

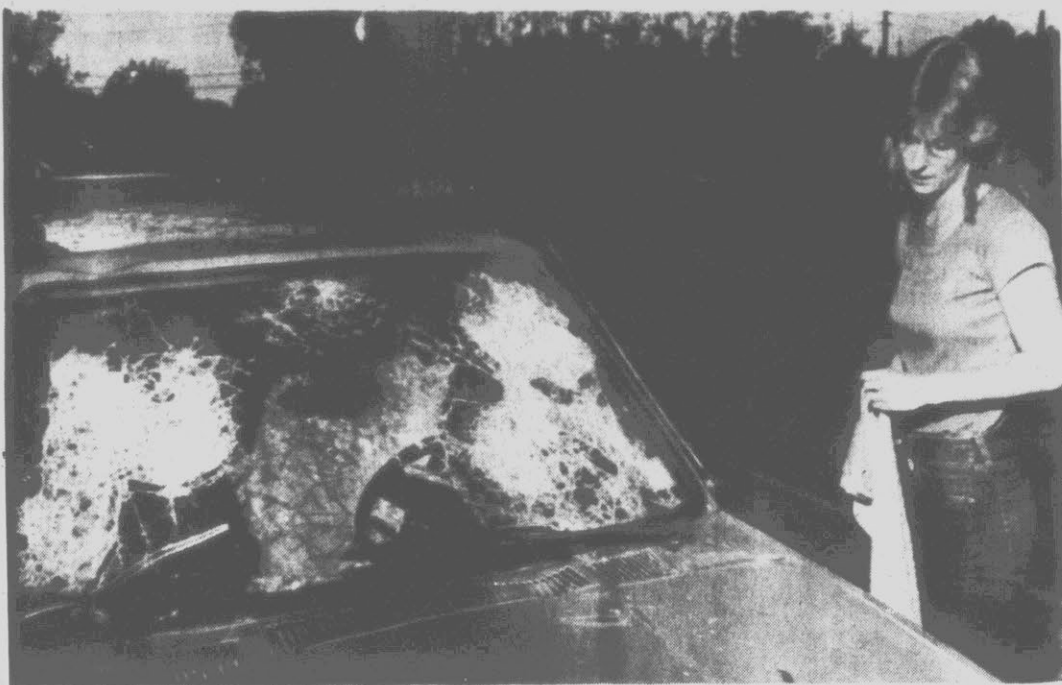

A dozen people were treated for cuts from hailstones or shattered glass, said John Easter, a spokesman for Lutheran Hospital in Wheat Ridge, near Denver.

Dozens of people were driven from apartments and mobile homes by flooding in the northwest suburbs of Denver, authorities said.

A gust of wind slammed a USAir jetliner onto a runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport during a violent thunderstorm, forcing a crash-landing that injured five of the 55 people aboard. The pilot had aborted a landing because of poor visibility from hail and rain and was retracting the landing gear to make another pass at the airport when the accident occurred, officials said.

In New Jersey, the wind blew so hard that the measuring device at Newark International Airport broke, officials said.

"We logged officially 83 (mph winds), and tower officials logged 92

HAIL DAMAGE — Anne Roeder takes a look at her damaged car in Lakewood, Colo., after hail broke the windshield and dented the body during a storm

Wednesday. The storm left a trail of broken glass, injuries and flooding throughout Colorado. (AP Laserphoto) before their equipment broke," said Harry Woodworth of the airport weather station.

"There are trees uprooted by the dozens, and God knows how many wires down," said spokesman Al Green of Rockland Electric Co. in Bergen County, N.J. Utility officials said some of the more than 18,000 homes that lost power because of the storm would not have service restored until later today.

Utility officials in the New York City area reported more than 9,000 homes without power, and officials in Connecticut put the figure at about 15,000.

A woman in Kearny, N.J., suffered leg cuts when wind blew in her living room window, police Capt. John O'Neill said.

Officials at Kennedy and LaGuardia airports in New York said the storms caused delays of up to five hours. Hundreds of late arrivals competed for the few cabs still working around midnight. At La Guardia, a delivery truck driver was besieged with offers of cash for a ride into Manhattan.

Before the storm, temperatures were well into the 90s, hitting a record-tying 100 degrees in Baltimore, the weather service said.

Records for the date also were broken or tied at Boston, where it was 97; Hartford, Conn., and Atlantic City, N.J., which reported a 96, and Scranton, Pa., where the mercury reached 92. It was 94 degrees in New York City, and 97 in Washington and Richmond, Va.

Besides the woman in Washington and the Pennsylvania prisoner, this week's weather was blamed for the deaths of two elderly people drowned Tuesday when their car was swept away by floodwaters near Lincoln, Neb.

Nine heat-related deaths have been reported in New York City since Sunday and three people have died from the heat in Philadelphia this week, authorities said. An elderly couple were killed Tuesday by a twister near Sioux Falls, S.D.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, continuing its recent indecisive pattern.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .33 to 1,110.20 in the first half hour.

Losers held a slight lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Wall Streeters have seen some evidence lately that the economy is slowing — a development widely perceived as necessary to permit any meaningful decline in interest rates.

The latest signals came Wednesday in the form of relatively weak retail sales figures for May and domestic car sales reports for early June.

But analysts said investors were still in no rush to buy stocks with attractive returns available in money-market vehicles such as Treasury bills.

Among today's early volume leaders, General Electric rose ¼ to 53¼ and Procter & Gamble gained ¼ to 51¼, but International Business Machines was down ¼ at 104.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average closed at 1,110.53, unchanged from the day before.

Declines outpaced advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 67.51 million shares, against 84.66 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .07 to 87.74. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .02 at 200.88.

acyclovir's long-term side effects is needed before people could begin taking it daily to ward off the skin eruptions.

Dr. Stephen E. Straus, who directed a study at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said acyclovir "is a drug that more otherwise completely healthy people may take more of for a longer period of time than most other prescription drugs we have. When a drug interacts with the genetic material of cells, there is the potential for a rare but serious problem."

Acyclovir, which works by preventing the herpes virus from dividing, could potentially be used as a "morning after" pill to prevent infection in people who have been exposed to the germ for the first time.

"It's clear that you can prevent infections in some animals if you treat them just about exactly the same time that the initial infection begins," Straus said. But he emphasized, "we know nothing about how that would work in humans."

battery manufacturer.

In addition, according to the report, the program trained 26 production mechanics, 12 machine operators, seven material handlers, 19 electricians and electronic technicians, 14 machinists, six quality control technicians, eight supervisors and nine welders. Courses taught included blueprint reading, shop math, programmable controls maintenance and first responder.

The funds also paid a program administrator and a clerical worker.

The $40,879 electronics servicing grant will be used, Russell said, "for enrichment and upgrading our electronic servicing program."

"With these funds we will be trying to revise courses in electronic servicing to teach servicing skills in digital electronics and microprocessing," Russell said. "We will also try to increase our enrollment because of the increased demand for electronic servicing personnel in these areas."

Black Coalition Plans Meeting

The first formal meeting of a Greenville black coalition designed to pursue a campaign of civic and political involvement will be held Monday at 8 p.m. at York Memorial AME Zion Church.

Johnny Wooten, chairman of the coalition movement, said the purpose of the group is to "strengthen black community relations and to heal wounds between recent supporters" of candidates in the recent primary election campaign for governor, as well as "increase involvement in civic and political affairs."

A major function of the coalition, according to Wooten, "will be to establish 'advisory boards' to every major governing board of the city."

"Most blacks feel that they have little or no voice at all in the decision-making process, and a united coalition could remedy this problem," according to Wooten.

Wooten, saying "this coalition workshop will not be an exhibition of music and choirs, but a meeting of the minds to bring about a greater unity in the city," said that "each church congregation, social and fraternal organization is asked to have three representatives at this meeting."

Six Jurors Set For Greene Trial

The selection of a jury to try Harvey Lee Greene Jr. on murder and armed robbery charges in connection with the deaths of two people at a Bethel dry cleaning business last December centered its fourth day today.

Six jurors, including six women and two men, had been seated following questioning by the district attorney and defense lawyers as Pitt County Superior Court opened this morning.

Greene is charged with beating Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, to death at Young's Cleaners on Dec. 19, and taking $3.50 in pennies from Miss Bland and $20 from Edmondson.

Court officials said this morning that witnesses are expected to begin their testimony next week.

No Tax. No Hassle.

If you have a goal that's a few years down the road, like sending your children to college, owning a second home or retiring in comfort, we've got an investment that may be just right. Zero-Coupon Municipal Bonds.

Unlike most municipals, these bonds have no coupons to clip and pay no income. Instead of receiving semi-annual interest payments your earnings are automatically compounded until maturity. An investment of $5000 could grow to over $110,000 in 30 years. More than 20 times your original investment.

The automatic compounding feature of Zero-Coupon Bonds allows you to avoid the uncertainty of re-investment rates. And best of all, you'll pay no federal taxes, and in many cases, no state taxes.

Please send me the Zero-Coupon Bond brochure.

Pitt Edges Snow Hill For First

SNOW HILL — Mike Kinley scattered eight hits and the bottom three in the lineup scored five runs as Pitt County's American Legion baseball team slipped past hosting Snow Hill, 6-4, last night, taking over sole possession of first place.

The victory boosted the Pitt record to 6-2 on the year while Snow Hill falls a back to 7-3.

Kinley, who was chased in the second inning in his first outing of the year for the legion, bounced back with a fine performance in his second try, recording a complete game. He walked four and struck out six.

The bottom three batters in the lineup, Mark Nover, Steve Mills and Steve Wall accounted for all but one of the six Pitt runs, although the top of the order drove in most of them. However, it was getting there that did the job.

Snow Hill struck first, getting a run in the bottom of the first inning. Randy Daniels opened with a single and moved up on a hit by Anthony Russo. Daniels moved to third when Todd Grant's grounder got Russo for the second out, and Jerry Butler's single brought Daniels over for a 1-0 lead.

Post 94 increased that to 2-0 with another in the second. Kevin Langston opened with a walk and was sacrificed up. Billy Braswell reached on an error, and Daniels reached on an error, scoring Langston.

Pitt put on a rally in the third, scoring three times to take a 3-2 lead. Mills opened with a triple, but held when Wall reached on an error. Jackie Conway singled, but again Mills had to hold third as Wall moved to second, loading the bases. Toby Fischer then grounded into a; double play, scoring Mills. Billy Michel singled to score Wall and Eric Woodworth got a hit. Kinley singled to drive in Michel with the go-ahead run.

Pitt added a fourth run in the fourth. Nover opened with a single and was sacrificed up. Wall singled him to third, and Conway reached on an error but Nover had to hold on third. He then scored when Fischer grounded out.

Snow Hill cut it back to 4-3 with one in the bottom of the fourth. Langston singled and moved to third on a double by Bryan Hall. Braswell grounded out, scoring Langston.

The sixth saw two more Pitt runs cross, making it 6-3. With one away, Mills singled and stole second. He scored on a double by Wall, who took third on a single by Fischer. Michel singled to score Wall with the final Pitt run.

The other Snow Hill run scored in the ninth. With one down, Russo tripled and Billy Godley walked. Grant's sacrifice fly scored Russo.

Conway, Michel, Woodworth, Mills and Wall each had two hits to lead Pitt County, while Russo and Langston each had a pair for Snow Hill.

Pitt returns to action tonight, hosting Rocky Mount at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field in Greenville, while Snow Hill plays host to Wilson on Friday at 8 p.m. in its next game.

Marsh Quits Conley Job; Will Coach At Havelock

HOLLYWOOD — Shelly Marsh, head basketball coach at D.H. Conley for the past 13 years, has resigned to accept the same post at Havelock High School along with the assistant principal duties.

"Basically, it was the opportunity to be both an administrator and a coach," said Marsh, who had been in the Pitt County school system for 19 years. "It's been delightful working here; you couldn't ask for a more cooperative administration to work for."

"I still have mixed emotions about leaving. I feel like, personally, the change will do me good. I'm leaving a good system, and I hope I'm leaving in a manner that in the future I might still be considered for an administrative position."

Marsh was first contacted about the assistant principal post in January of 1983, but the basketball coaching slot was not available.

"I want to stay in coaching a few more years anyway," Marsh said. "I was working on my principal certificate at the time, as well."

A native of Bonlee, N.C., Marsh graduated from J.S. Waters High School in Goldston. Marsh participated in baseball and basketball while completing his undergraduate work at North Carolina A&T University, then earned his master's degree in physical education. He is currently completing the master's program for school administration at East Carolina University.

Marsh was honored as the Pitt County Coach of the Year eight times while at Conley and served as the coach of the East squad at the annual East-West All-Star game in 1981.

But his most memorable event while at Conley was "the first championship; you never forget that."

"The 74-75 team that finish third in the state comes to mind, also," Marsh said. "They (Havelock) haven't had that much talent over the years, but that's one of the challenges: to go in and see if you can develop a basketball program."

Marsh has coached a number of players who went on to college careers, the most notable among them being Keith Gatlin, currently a rising sophomore at the University of Maryland. Gatlin was selected as the North Carolina Prep Basketball Player of the Year as a senior at Conley by the Associated Press.

Marsh's resignation will mean that the three major men's sports programs have undergone a change in the past year. Alan Wilson took over the baseball program this spring, while Donnie Bunn, a former assistant coach at SouthWest Edgecombe, will become the Conley football coach this fall.

Allison Team Makes Protest

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Bobby Allison's team manager says cars were improperly positioned behind the pace car during a caution period and that caused a scoring error that cost his driver second place in Sunday's Van Scoy Diamond Mine 500.

Gary Nelson said he immediately complained to chief scorer Morris Metcalf when Allison was listed as a lap down.

"During the caution, I informed NASCAR that the cars were improperly positioned behind the pace car," Nelson explained. "The reply from NASCAR was, 'We have checked scoring three times and we see nothing wrong.'"

Allison, the defending Winston Cup champion, found himself a full lap behind when the green flag came back out.

Harry Gant, who eventually finished second, was leading when the yellow flag came out because of a car stalled in the grass in the third turn. Gant passed the flag stand just before the yellow was waved.

Several of the other leaders — including Allison and Dale Earnhardt — ducked immediately into the pits, in effect making green-flag pit stops. Gant did not officially take the yellow flag until he came back around at race speed.

Cale Yarborough won the race, while Allison was officially listed seventh, one lap behind the winner.

"They split the field in half with the pace car," explained Nelson, who flew to NASCAR's headquarters in Daytona Beach, Fla., Tuesday in an unsuccessful effort to iron out the situation.

"If they can prove we finished seventh, I'll take it," he said. "If we finished second, I want it because we earned it."

Jerry Koosman went a year and a day between complete games. The St. Louis Cardinals wouldn't mind if they go that long before having to face the 40-year-old left-hander again.

Koosman threw a five-hitter, boosting the Philadelphia Phillies past St. Louis 4-1 Wednesday night. The last time he went the route was on June 12, 1983, while pitching for the Chicago White Sox.

Koosman carried a shutout into the ninth inning and seemed more disturbed about not keeping St. Louis off the scoreboard in the last inning.

"Yeah, I wanted it," said

Koosman of the lost shutout. "I worked hard for it. The last inning I did my best. I just got beat on it."

By then, the Phillies were on their way to beating the Cardinals for the first time in six meetings this season.

Elsewhere, it was the New York Mets 2, Pittsburgh 0; Cincinnati 5, Houston 4 in 11 innings; San Francisco 10, Los Angeles 5, and Chicago 7, Montreal 4.

Philadelphia took a 3-0 lead in the second. Mike Schmidt and Sixto Lezcano singled, then John Wockenfuss singled home Schmidt, with the runners advancing to second and third on a throwing error by center fielder Tito Landrum.

Ozzie Virgil singled home Lezcano and Wockenfuss scored on a balk by Dave LaPoint.

The Phillies made it 4-0 in the sixth when Wockenfuss singled and scored on Ivan DeJesus' triple.

Koosman, 6-6, lost the shutout after Lonnie Smith hit an inside fastball for a double. Smith reached third on a long fly ball and scored on Landrum's infield out.

"Those last three outs are always tough to get if you're leading 1-0 or 10-0," said Koosman, who struck out four and walked one.

Koosman looked awfully tough to Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

"What is he, 41?" Herzog asked. "He can still throw. He throws very easily. He has a very easy delivery."

Koosman claimed he was helped by a 56-minute rain delay after 4½ innings.

"I look forward to a little rain delay at my age," he said. "It gave me some rest. I was faster after the rain."

"I feel good about it because it gave the bullpen a needed rest. And I'm happy for myself."

Mets 2, Pirates 0

Ed Lynch gave up only two hits in six innings before muscle spasms in his neck forced him out of the game. Doug Sisk took over and loaded the bases on walks in the eighth before nailling down his seventh save.

The New York runs came on a Mookie Wilson RBI single in the second and Jose Oquendo's fielder's choice groundout which scored Danny Heep in the seventh.

"Lynch's neck started bothering him in the second inning," explained Mets Manager Davey Johnson, whose team has won eight of its last 10. "After the sixth, he told me to get ready for a quick hook. I watched him warming up for the seventh and he was grimacing with pain."

So was Johnson as Sisk loaded the bases.

"Sisk is amazing," said Johnson. "He gives you heart failure but still gets the job done. The funny thing about it is that you know he's going to get into a jam."

Reds 5, Astros 4

Cincinnati broke a five-game losing streak and ended a three-game winning streak for the Astros on Dave Concepcion's two-out RBI single in the 11th inning. Concepcion and veteran outfielder Cesar Cedeno, both of whom earlier this week complained about how they were being used — or not being used — by Manager Vern Rapp, were the heroes.

Concepcion lined his single over the head of shortstop Craig Reynolds to score Gary Redus with the decisive run. In the sixth, Cedeno had blasted a towering two-run homer over the left-field wall.

Giants 10, Dodgers 5

A balk call against Dodgers starter Bob Welch made a big difference in the game. Both Welch and Manager Tom Lasorda were ejected for arguing the fifth-inning call and the Giants went on to score seven times in the frame on eight consecutive hits.

San Francisco's fifth-inning rally was capped by a two-run pinch single by Duane Kuiper. The Dodgers were ahead 4-2 on Mike Marshall's third-inning grand slam.

But Chili Davis and Jeff Leonard, Jack Clark, Al Oliver, Joel

Youngblood and Bob Brenly all singled, Brad Wellman added an RBI double and Duane Kuiper managed a two-run pinch single.

"He (Umpire Bob Davidson) felt I did something for a balk," explained Welch. "I said something I shouldn't have said."

Davidson, umpiring at third base, called the balk in the fourth inning, with the Giants' Jack Clark on third base.

"He was in the windup position and once he started his delivery, Clark made a move and then he (Welch) stopped," explained Davidson. "You can't do that. It was blatant, it wasn't even close."

"Then he came off the mound and cussed me."

Cubs 7, Expos 4

Leon Durham messed up Montreal's strategy of walking Gary Matthews intentionally to get to him in the sixth inning. Durham laced a tie-breaking double and Jody Davis followed with a two-run double for the Cubs.

"I wasn't surprised, really," said Durham. "It was to get to a left-handed hitter with a left-handed pitcher (Gary Lucas) and also set up a chance for the double play. I've hit Lucas decent in the past but the last two times he has pitched against us, he got me. You have to go with the odds."

The Cubs did not make an error and set a club record of nine consecutive errorless games, breaking a mark set last season.

In the 3,000-meter steeplechase race, an Olympic event, the runners have to clear 28 hurdles and seven water jumps.

Planters Bank.....16
Coca-Cola.....14

Planters Bank outlasted Coca-Cola, 16-14, in a Babe Ruth League baseball game last night and clinched no worse than a tie for the league championship.

Planters is now 11-1 on the year while only Wachovia Bank, 7-4, has a chance to catch up. Any combination of a Planters' win or a Wachovia loss would give the title to Planters.

Planters took the lead in the first with three runs, while Coke got one in the second. Planters added four more in the bottom of the second for a 7-1 lead. Coke got one in the third and another in the fourth to trim it to 7-3 before Planters scored three in the bottom of the fourth to go out 10-3. Planters added two more in the fifth. But in the top of the sixth, Coke rallied for six runs, cutting it to 11-9.

In the bottom of the inning, however, Planters scored four times to up the lead to 16-9. Greg Davis singled and Donald Perkins reached on a fielder's choice. Eric Jarman reached on an error, scoring Davis. Adrian Barnhill also reached on an error which allowed Perkins to score. Greg Jones singled and an error on the play let both Jarman and Barnhill score.

Coke rallied for five in the seventh, but fell short of catching up.

Morris Johnson led Planters with three hits, while Jarman had two. Jeff Mahoney had four hits, while Pickle Garris, David Daniels, Greg Hallow and Robbie Barner each had two for Coke.

Wachovia Bank.....6
Pepsi-Cola.....3

Wachovia Bank kept its fading title hopes alive in the Babe Ruth League last night with a 6-3 win over Pepsi-Cola. Wachovia, 7-4, is the lone team left with a chance to catch Planters Bank, 11-1, but would have to win all its remaining games while Planters loses all its games, to achieve a tie.

Wachovia pushed ahead with three runs in the first inning. Pepsi came back with two in the second, but Wachovia got another in the third to put it out of reach.

Terry Warren led off, reaching on an error. Dallas McPherson also was safe on a misplay and Scott Davis walked. A walk to Mike Kelly with two away scored Warren.

Wachovia added single runs in the sixth and seventh innings, while Pepsi got one more in the fourth.

Wachovia pitchers Tim Bland and Travis King limited Pepsi to only one hit, a second inning single by Neal Bullock. Wachovia got only four hits off Tom Moye, the losing pitcher, and no one had more than one.

Chicod Hornets.....16
Simpson Saints.....6

CHICOD — The Chicod Hornets romped to a 16-6 victory over the Simpson Saints in the Southern Pitt Little League last night.

Eric Bradley got the victory on the mound and added two hits, a double and a homer to the Hornet hitting. Eric Swinson had three hits and Anthony Dixon added two more.

No one had more than one hit for Simpson.

Little League

Coca-Cola.....7
Kiwanis.....3

Coca-Cola held onto a share of the lead in the North State Little League yesterday with a 7-3 victory over the Kiwanis.

Coke and Sportsworld are tied for the league lead with 12-1 records, and meet each other on Saturday in a game that could eventually decide the title. They split their two earlier meetings.

The Kiwanis took the initial lead in the game, scoring twice in the first inning as Monte Smith hit a two-run homer.

But Coke came back to score three times in the bottom of the first as Walter Gatlin homered, driving in all three.

Then, in the second, Coke added three more to put the game away. Derrick Clark singled and stole second, moving to third on a wild pitch. With one away, Gatlin walked and Derrick Hines reached on an error, scoring Clark. Gatlin took third on the play and Hines stole up. Both then scored on a single by Edwin Manning.

The Kiwanis got one more in the third while Coke added its final run in the fourth.

Clark led the Coke hitting with three, while no one had more than one hit for the Kiwanis.

True Value.....16
Pepsi-Cola.....1

True Value Hardware romped to a 16-1 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the North State Little League, moving another step toward the league championship.

True Value is now 12-1 on the season and holds a three-game lead over the second place teams. The win leaves True Value with a magic number of three.

True Value got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. With one away, Matthew Cagle walked and moved up on a passed ball. He stole third and scored on an error. Clarence Hammonds also walked and stole second, coming the rest of the way on an error.

The Hardwaremen added three in the third, five in the fourth and six in the fifth. Pepsi's lone run crossed in the fifth.

Ken Sawyer and Chris Langley limited Pepsi to just three hits, and no one had more than one for the Bottlers. Craig Willoughby had two hits for True Value.

Kingman 'Shows He's Back

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Dave Kingman is back in the Oakland A's lineup, and it doesn't look like he's missed a stroke.

Playing only his second game after missing 11 contests with a knee injury, Kingman smashed a home run Wednesday to lead the A's to a 3-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

"His presence gives this club a lift, because we know he can win a game with one swing," said Oakland pitcher Bill Caudill.

Kingman's 15th homer did precisely that. The leadoff blast in the eighth inning snapping a 1-1 tie and a six-game Oakland losing streak as well. It was Kingman's first homer since May 25 and it tied him with Boston's Tony Armas for the American League lead. In addition, he has 46 RBI in 48 games.

"It's a good feeling to be back. We've got to put a winning streak together now," said Kingman, the designated hitter who played with a light knee brace. "I'm strong mentally and physically."

In other AL action, Toronto beat Detroit 7-3, New York whipped Boston 4-2, Texas blanked Minnesota 3-0, Chicago edged California 2-1, Kansas City tripped Seattle 6-4 and Milwaukee beat Baltimore 6-1.

Kingman's homer came on the first pitch of the eighth inning from loser Bert Blyleven, 4-3, making his first start since May 17.

The A's added an insurance run later in the inning on a sacrifice fly by Mike Davis off reliever Mike Jeffcoat following a walk to Bruce Bochte and a double by Mike Heath.

The A's took a 1-0 lead in the first on Joe Morgan's sacrifice fly. The Indians tied it in the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Brett Butler.

Caudill, 6-1, got the victory with two hitless innings in relief of Ray Burris, who pitched six-hit baseball for seven innings.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 3

Rance Mulliniks lashed three hits and Alfredo Griffin and Willie Upshaw each collected a pair to lead Toronto over Detroit.

The victory enabled the Blue Jays, who took the three-game series 2-1, to move within six games of the AL East Division leaders.

Winner Dave Stieb, 8-2, left the game with a three-hit shutout after the seventh inning but the Tigers reached relievers Jimmy Key and Dennis Lamp for three runs on four hits and an error in the eighth.

Stieb struck out five and walked two before giving way to Key, who lasted two thirds of an inning before Lamp came on. Loser Milt Wilcox, 7-4, lasted five innings and gave up four runs on six hits while striking out two and walking one.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 2

Dave Winfield belted a two-run homer and scored the tie-breaking run on Roy Smalley's single after doubling to lead off the ninth as New York snapped Boston's five-game winning streak.

Phil Niekro scattered 10 hits in eight innings, including Jim Rice's two-run homer in the first, in improving his record to 9-3. Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his eighth save, striking out the side in the process.

Boston right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 1-4, also was tough in the clutch before being shelled in the ninth.

Rangers 3, Twins 0

Larry Parrish hit a three-run double in the sixth inning and Frank Tanana pitched a five-hitter to lead Texas over Minnesota, the Rangers' sixth triumph in a row.

The shutout, Tanana's first of the year, was the 27th of his career. Tanana, 7-6, struck out five and walked two, allowing only four base runners to reach second.

Losing pitcher Ken Schrom, 0-1, gave up only four hits, but three of them were in the Rangers' three-run sixth.

"I just decided to go with my fastball more tonight," said Tanana. "It was control on my fastball that got most of my outs."

White Sox 2, Angels 1

Rich Dotson fired a three-hitter and Ron Kittle homered to lead Chicago over California.

Dotson, 8-3, retired 10 straight batters before giving up a single to Rod Carew. He gave up only two singles the rest of the way — to Carew and Jerry Narron in the ninth when the Angels scored their run on an error. Pinch-runner Gary Pettis was thrown out at home on the two-out error that scored the run, preserving Chicago's victory.

The White Sox grabbed a 1-0 lead in the third inning off Tommy John, 3-5, on Tom Paciorek's RBI single. Kittle's homer in the sixth inning, his 14th, gave the White Sox a 2-0 lead.

Royals 6, Mariners 4

Steve Balboni's RBI single capped a four-run first inning and relief ace Dan Quisenberry preserved the victory with three strong innings at the end as the Royals beat Seattle.

Larry Gura, 7-2, was staked to a 4-0 lead, but had control problems in the sixth and needed relief help from Joe Beckwith. Quisenberry allowed just one hit in the final three innings to notch his AL-leading 16th save.

The Royals went ahead for good when they scored four times in the first off Matt Young, 4-4.

Brewers 6, Orioles 1

Jim Gantner drove in three runs and Robin Yount rapped four hits, including three doubles, to power Milwaukee over Baltimore and snap a five-game losing streak.

Yount's double off Mike Flanagan, 5-5, provided Milwaukee with a 1-0 lead in the first inning and the Brewers never were headed.

Boston Fans Lose Control After NBA Championship

BOSTON (AP) — Seconds after the Boston Celtics won the National Basketball Association title, Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was trapped at midcourt by a mob of fans that stormed onto the Boston Garden floor.

"It was a very unprofessional way to control the crowd," the highest scorer in NBA history said. "I got punched, people were jumping on my back, they took my glasses and they tried to tear my jersey off. I had to defend myself, just fighting them off."

Plans had been made to enhance security, but there is a limit to how effective they can be, NBA security director Jack Joyce said Wednesday.

"I don't think it's impossible" to have maintained order in Tuesday night's deciding game, he said, "but it is difficult."

The age of the Garden, which was built in 1928, and the late start of the contest, 9 p.m. EDT, contributed to problems at the end of Boston's 111-102 victory over the Lakers as referees, players and coaches were caught in the frenzied throng, Joyce said.

He cited the lack of air conditioning on a hot night, the proximity of fans' seats to the team benches and the narrow exit ramp toward the locker rooms as problems resulting from the building's age.

A capacity crowd announced at 14,890, but seemingly larger, attended the game. With 26 seconds left and the Celtics leading 109-102, people in that crowd ran on the court while time was out. After play resumed, spectators edged onto the court.

"With 26 seconds to go, we still could have shot off a couple of three-pointers and got closer," said Lakers' Coach Pat Riley. "There was no way the referees or anyone could control the crowd. (Referee) Earl Strom even came over to me and said, 'Pat, what can I do?' There wasn't anything he could do."

When the final buzzer sounded, players and coaches rushed to the ramp but "when that thing jammed up it backed the players, the officials and everyone else on the floor and then you had this huge surge of humanity," Joyce said.

He also said the late start gave fans more time to drink between the end of their work day and the beginning of the game.

"I certainly saw people in a condition in which they really didn't care or know what they were doing," said Joyce. "When you get a young crowd like that who have been drinking, you're going to have a certain element that is going to be very disruptive."

Security Systems Inc. of Boston, which handles security at the Garden, increased its force at the game by 55 Tuesday night and had a six-hour planning session earlier in the day, said a company representative who refused to be identified.

He said the company "absolutely" had enough personnel at the game "but with all that enthusiasm it was very difficult to keep people from going onto the court."

The players, he added, "were in the dressing rooms in a very short period of time, which was one of the primary objectives."

Joyce said plans called for a dozen guards, instead of the usual three, to be near each team bench at the end of the game and for the referees to have a beefed-up escort from the floor. He also said security personnel were deployed two-to-three feet apart around the court in the final minutes.

"If we had them with their arms linked going around the court, once that chain is broken" fans can swarm onto the court, he added.

Joyce said he met with Riley and Garden security personnel before the game and made extensive preparations, including bringing a bus inside the building for the Lakers to ride out in.

But extremely strict security can be as much an object of criticism as looser arrangements, he added.

"It's almost a damned if you do or damned if you don't situation," Joyce said. "We were very fortunate up until this last game."

Youth Ball Program Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is offering a youth baseball program for boys and girls ages 7-12 years of age (ages of August 1, 1984).

The first part of the program will be spent on techniques and fundamentals and the remainder will be spent playing games between the various teams.

There is a $5 registration fee, and the schedule is as follows:

- Small Fry — 9 to 10:30 a.m. for 7 year olds, or those having completed first grade.
- Big Fry — 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon for 8 year olds, or those having completed second grade.
- Big Ten — 1 to 3 p.m. for 9-12 year olds, or those having completed third grade.

The program will be held Monday through Friday until schedules are made and will meet at Elk Street Park beginning Monday, June 18.

Participants may register Thursday, Friday or Monday at J.C. Park. For more information call 752-4137, ext. 248.

Past Record May Influence Sentence

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Murder, rape and kidnapping charges in six states and evidence of "sex torture" mean James M. Debardeleben may receive a harsher-than-usual sentence on his counterfeiting conviction, a federal prosecutor says.

"I think this man's record and conviction do not fully apprise the court of this man's threat to society," Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Andresen told U.S. District Judge Robert D. Potter on Wednesday after Debardeleben was convicted of passing four bogus $20 bills at a Gastonia shopping mall last year.

Potter set a July 6 sentencing hearing for Debardeleben after Andresen said he would offer evidence indicating the judge should designate him a "dangerous special offender." Papers filed with Andresen's request indicate officers searching Debardeleben's storage lockers in Virginia found "photographs of victims whom the defendant had brutally sodomized ... notes written by the defendant which described in detail the acts of sodomy and sexual torture ... (and) tape recordings made by the defendant of the actual acts of sodomy and sexual abuse."

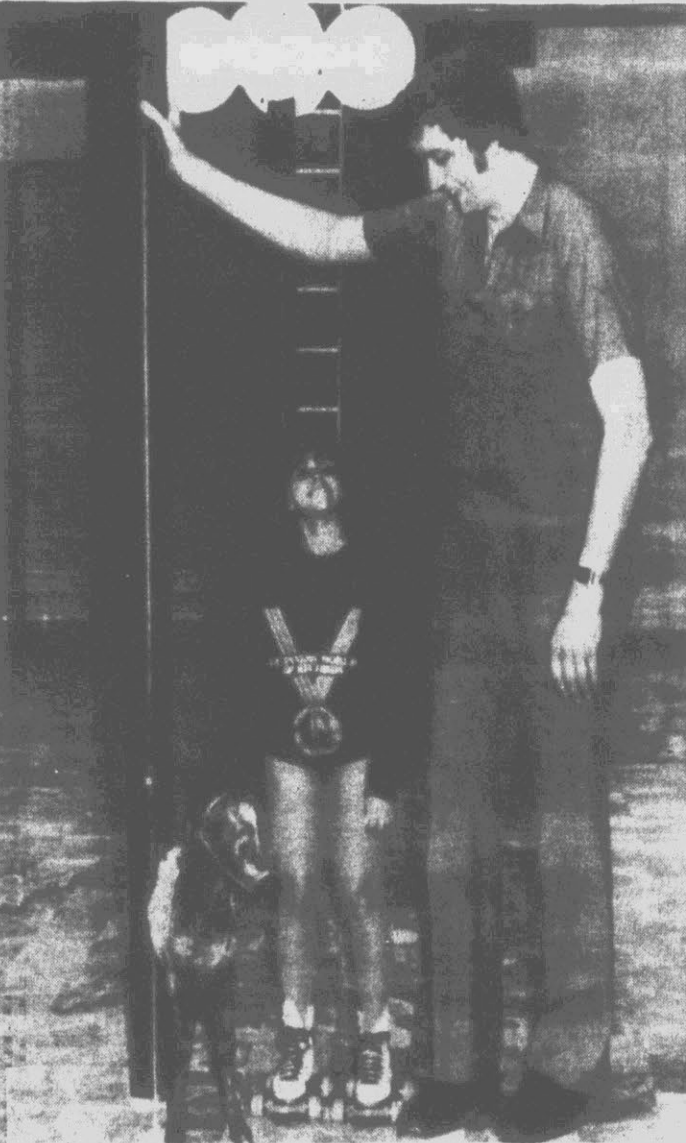

Andresen said the "dangerous special offender" label could mean 25 years, rather than a maximum 15 years, on each counterfeiting count, affect the type of prison he is sent to and affect his work release and parole.

Debardeleben was indicted June 6 in Bossier City, La., on first-degree murder charges in the 1982 hanging death of a real estate saleswoman.

U.S. Marshal Max Wilson said he is also charged in Sussex Co., Del., with rape; in Manassas, Va., with abduction and sodomy; in Bloomfield, Conn., with kidnapping; in St. Louis, Mo., with sodomy and armed robbery; and in Baltimore with kidnapping.

Andresen said Debardeleben has also been sentenced to a total of 35 years in a Tennessee counterfeiting case.

Wilson said officials would decide in the next few days where Debardeleben will be tried next and that he would remain in the Mecklenburg County Jail until then.

Great Smoky Park Turns 50 On Friday

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — The Great Smoky Mountains National Park turns 50 on Friday, the legacy of children who donated their nickels during the Depression and unemployed men who labored to transform the timberland into the country's most popular national park.

Some 208 million people have been drawn to the hazy, blue-green ridges straddling the Tennessee-North Carolina border since the park opened.

It is the country's most-visited national park, according to the National Park Service. In 1983 alone, more than 8 million traveled through its roadways along the Appalachian Trail.

On Friday park officials expect 5,000 visitors to celebrate the golden anniversary of the date Congress authorized the construction of park roads and facilities, June 15, 1934.

Beginning in 1925, Tennessee and North Carolina began purchasing the land and donating it to the federal government.

Much of the money for the land was privately raised. During the Great Depression, even schoolchildren contributed to a pot that reached $10 million.

"The affluent gave a quarter. I gave a dime," said Ted Davenport, a retired park employee who remembers the early days.

By 1940, the park covered 512,225 acres, much of it once the domain of lumber companies.

Davenport recalled that the biggest controversy arose over "these lumbering people here with large land holdings."

But the states prevailed, buying 85 percent of the land from 18 lumber companies and the rest from several hundred families, some of them anguished at leaving homesteads their ancestors pioneered.

According to park lore, the idea for a Smoky Mountains park was first suggested in 1923 by the wife of Knoxville businessman Willis Davis. He worked with civic leaders to interest the government.

In April 1925, the Tennessee Legislature authorized the purchase of the first land — a 76,507-acre tract from Col. W. Townsend's Little River Lumber Co.

"Col. Townsend couldn't bear the thought of seeing all this virgin timber, this good 'merchantable' timber, as he would put it, 'go to waste,'" Davenport said.

Edmisten Talks To Girls Staters

GREENSBORO (AP) — Rufus Edmisten, state Attorney General and the Democratic candidate for governor, told the 45th annual Tar Heels' Girls State conference Wednesday, "You're not tomorrow's leaders, you're today's leaders."

Edmisten told some 350 high school seniors that the quality of Girl's State participants improves every year and that past participants have worked in the state attorney general's office as well as on his campaign committees.

He said it is important for the girls to prepare themselves for the future and "have a sensitive heart toward those without rank or power."

He urged the participants to consider teaching as a career because of the influence teachers have on society.

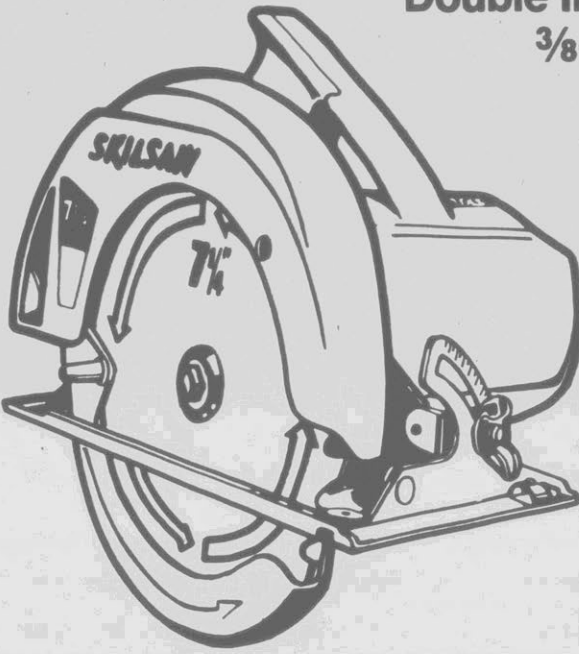

"We need our brightest and our best to go into the teaching profession and we have to make sure our teachers are paid a decent salary," said Edmisten, a former third-grade teacher.

UNIVAC Facts

The Bureau of the Census installed its first computer, UNIVAC I, on this day in 1951. Designed for record-keeping, UNIVAC was the first "business computer." It stored its data on metal-plated tape. This "memory" feature allowed for rapid commercial use of these efficient new "electronic brains." Other early computers were named MADM, SWAC, and MANIAC, which stood for Mathematical Analyzer, Numerical Integrator and Computer.

DO YOU KNOW — What the acronym "UNIVAC" stands for?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The 18th Amendment prohibiting liquor was ratified in 1919.

Intangibles Tax Attacked

RALEIGH (AP) — Two prominent state senators have proposed phasing out the intangibles tax on savings accounts, stock and bonds, while the House thwarted a surprise attempt to attach repeal to an unrelated tax bill.

Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tem of the Senate, collected the signatures of 23 of the 50 senators for his bill Wednesday. Among the co-sponsors was Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who also introduced his own bill to stop the tax.

Industry recruiters have sought repeal of the tax for years, saying it discourages wealthy people from living in North Carolina. They also have fought the inventory tax — the property tax paid on business inventories — which they say alienates industrial prospects.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, has introduced a bill to give businesses a tax credit against the inventory taxes they've paid. The credit would be 13 percent of the inventory tax in the first year and increase to 17 percent by 1986.

Both Lilley and Lawing have argued that some of the leftover money from 1983-84 should go toward lowering taxes. But other lawmakers want to spend the extra money on public schools and other projects.

"Not many tax bills are going to have a chance this short session," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House Finance Committee.

Lawing's bill would require the state to use interest on intangibles tax revenue to make up one-half of the revenue lost by local governments, which would bear the rest of the burden. The tax would be reduced by 20 percent in each of the next five years.

Once the tax is gone, "there will be more than enough industry coming in to offset the loss on the local level," he said.

Rauch's bill would repeal the intangibles tax effective this tax year. Local governments would be compensated beginning July 1, 1985.

The state in 1985 would return to local governments 80 percent of the intangibles tax collected in 1983. That amount drops to 60 percent in 1986, 40 percent in 1987 and 20 percent in 1988.

Rep. Frank Jordan, D-Alamance, surprised the House by calling for repeal of the intangibles tax during floor debate Wednesday. His proposal was contained in an amendment to a bill that would exempt shoppers' guides from sales taxation.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey ruled the proposal out of order because it wasn't directly related to the bill. The House then tabled the amendment, 79-27.

In other legislative action: Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, filed a package of bills recommended by the Public Education Policy Council, one which would appropriate $51.5 million to fund the changes and match federal allocations under the Vocational Education Act of 1984-85.

Another bill would direct the State Board of Education to develop a standard course of study for all public school students.

It also would establish qualifications for superintendents and principals and direct the state board to make plans for strengthening teacher education, and evaluating teacher performance.

A third bill would require the Legislature to meet as one committee for 20 days during the 1985 session to deal with education matters.

The bills "address the major problem areas in grades K-12 that have evolved over the last 20 years," said Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, a council member.

A number of state representatives filed bills to authorize the counties they represent to levy room occupancy taxes to raise money for tourism development.

Seeking permission to levy the 3 percent tax include Guilford, Dare, Cherokee, Craven and Cumberland counties and the towns of Lumberton and Long Beach.

Reps. J. Paul Tyndall and Bruce Ethridge, both D-Onslow, filed a bill to appropriate $25,000 to help fund a memorial to the 262 Marines killed in the Oct. 23, 1983, bombing in Beirut. The Marines, stationed at Camp Lejeune, were participating in a multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Rep. James Black and Sen. Craig Lawing, both D-Mecklenburg, filed identical bills to study what they called the proliferation of home health agencies, which provide health care as an alternative to institutional care.

Under the bills, there would be a moratorium until Jan. 31, 1985, on certificates of need for additional home health agencies or home health services.

Black and Lawing also proposed letting people disagreeing with final decisions on certificates of need, which must be obtained to build hospitals and other health agencies, appeal to the N.C. Court of Appeals.

By a 110-0 vote, the House tentatively approved a bill to revise the way the sales tax on used vehicles is computed.

Under the bill, the tax would be based on the purchase price as listed by the owner in an affidavit. Anyone knowingly falsifying the affidavit would be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Currently, the tax value is based on a standard set of used car prices that Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said often were inflated.

The bill was amended to grant a refund to people who ordered vehicles before the tax was levied but were charged the tax because their cars arrived after the law was passed.

Assembly Skips Drunken Driving

RALEIGH (AP) — Drunken driving, a topic that occupied more of the Legislature's time than any other matter except the budget in 1983, is getting relatively little attention during the current short session.

After months of haggling last year, the Legislature enacted the Safe Roads Act, Gov. Jim Hunt's plan to crack down on drunken drivers. It raised the minimum drinking age from 18 to 19, created the offense of driving while impaired, eliminated plea bargaining and required that violators pay fines and spend time in jail or performing community services.

Despite widespread grumbling about various parts of the new law, no one has come forward with proposals for major revision.

"No one wants to get into it," said Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, the bill's chief Senate sponsor.

One reason drunken driving isn't a big issue this summer is that a push to raise the drinking age to 21 is being postponed until the 1985 session.

The proposal drew substantial support last year, but was beaten back when Hunt and others warned that it might jeopardize the entire bill by reducing alcoholic beverage tax revenues so drastically that it couldn't be funded.

However, action on Capitol Hill has provided yet another incentive to boost the age limit. The U.S. House of Representatives has passed a bill that would cut federal highway funds to any state with a minimum drinking age under 21. The Senate hasn't acted on the proposal.

Passion Play Celebrating Its 350th Anniversary

350th Anniversary Of Germany's Passion Play

CHRIST'S WALK WITH THE CROSS . . . will be reenacted in the Bavarian Alpine village of Oberammergau from May 20 to September 25 this year, as part of its traditional Passion Play. This year's production, a special one in addition to the traditional ones presented every ten years at the beginning of each decade, is to celebrate the 350 anniversary of the vow of villagers in 1634 that if they were spared the plague, they would present the Passion of Christ every decade.

The Passion Play of Oberammergau, the oldest outdoor drama still in performance, has been seen by millions in its scenic setting in the Bavarian Alps of Southern Germany.

Forty million travelers visit Europe every year, and the numbers will doubtless exceed that in 1984. The reason for the increase? The "Passion Play" at Oberammergau.

The town is famous for the performance of the play every 10th year. Hundreds of thousands will flock to see daily performances between May 20-Sept. 25. Performances take place six days a week.

Oberammergau is a village in Bavaria, Germany, situated in the foothills of the Alps mountains in the valley of Amer, 64 miles southwest of Munich.

In 1960 and again both in 1970 and 1980 it was my privilege to attend performances of "The Passion," the term used by the native. My assessment of it was: "Excellent . . . the music marvelous . . . would that everyone might see it."

The play covers the period of Passion Week in the life of Christ, from the triumphal Entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday to the Resurrection, plus the Ascension 40 days later. In the four Gospels the events of this period occupy about 31 percent of the text.

Anton Long — Christ

I had a special interest in going to Oberammergau. I had occupied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church of Birmingham, Ala., from 1939-1945. The pulpit furniture had been carved by Anton Long, who was three times the Christus in the play when he was in the United States during the 1920s. He died in the early 1930s but his fame outlived him.

He was of a leading family who owned, among other properties, the frescoed Alois Lang Hotel, garnished with red geraniums, where our party was accommodated.

History Of The Play

The play was born of two vows. The first was made by the Emperor Ludwig of Bavaria (1287-1347), who, returning from a war in Italy, vowed to build a monastery in gratitude to God for having blessed his arms in battle. Tradition says that on his return to the valley his horse bowed three times before a great spruce tree, reminding him of his vow. Faithful to it, he established the Monastery of Etta, which nestles in the hills a short distance from Oberammergau. Through the years the monks of this monastery have been the authors of the play, one of many which were performed throughout Europe beginning about the 13th century.

The Second Vow

The second vow which influenced the creation and perpetuation of the play was made early in 1633. The previous year Swedish soldiers had introduced the plague into Bavaria, but Oberammergau, partly protected by mountains and by rigid controls, remained immune at first; however, one day a native son who was employed in a nearby town managed to slip past the guards to return home. He brought with him the dreaded disease. More than 100 citizens of the town died as a result.

Then it was that the survivors, led by the town council, assembled at the church to implore God to spare further spread of the epidemic, with the promise to perform in thanksgiving a play about the life of Christ once every 10 years to the end of time. The plague ended and from that day to this, with few exceptions, the play has been performed in keeping with the vow.

Performances

The number of performances during a single year have ranged from one, to 19 in 1971; 67 in 1922; 76 in 1934, the tercentenary jubilee year; and 85 or more to be performed in 1984. During the Franco-Prussian War of 1870 and the two World Wars (1920 and 1940) there were no performances. Popular demand resulted in 98 performances in 1970 and 1980 before more than 500,000 spectators.

Since the Second World War, because of charges of anti-Semitism, boycotts have been threatened, resulting in some moderation in the text of the play.

Actually, the text has been altered nearly every decade. The present text has as its basis that written in 1860 by J.A. Daisenberger, itself based on older texts. The spoken text is German but translations in various languages are available, including English; thus, it is easy to follow and to understand the dialogue.

The music, the composition of Rochus Dedler, was completed in 1815. The orchestra is composed of 65 instrumentalists and there are 48 members of the choir.

Setting

Oberammergau is surrounded by inspiring mountains, ranging up to more than 6,000 feet above sea level. The town possesses a fairyland appearance and is distinguished for cleanliness. Houses are frescoed and from as early as the 8th century.

There are modern shops and churches. Homes and hotels provide adequate accommodations for 10,000 although the population is only 5,000.

The Theater

The theater, which was built in 1930, is divided into two parts. The stage, which is 50 yards wide and open to the sky and elements, provides little protection for the actors who perform regardless of the weather. The auditorium is protected by walls and roof and from it spectators may view the sky, mountains and in-flying birds.

During the early decades the play was performed in the church, later outside on the level ground, then still later on stages in the open air.

The present auditorium seats 5,200 persons. In 1960 there were 82 performances; therefore not more than 421,200 seats were available for the entire season. In 1970 there were requests for more than 3 million tickets, three-fourths of which were turned down.

Requests for a longer season and a greater number of performances consistently have been turned down.

The People

Occupations of the native people are mainly dairying and craftsmanship — wood carving and sculpture, etc. They are dedicated Roman Catholics. More than a thousand of them participate in the play, which consists of 123 speaking parts. Numerous children perform. Most of the citizens dedicate themselves to a genuine religious experience in anticipation of being selected for a principal part in the ensuing performance.

In November of the year before the performance of the play, a committee is selected by the people who have been convened at the church for a mass during which they consecrate themselves to God for the approaching season. Pursuantly, the Committee of Twenty-Four meets and by secret ballot elects the cast of characters. As characters are elected, their names are posted for all to see.

The selection of the Christus is paramount. In 1960, Anton Praesinger, 47 years old, was chosen for the second time. In 1970, he was producer of the play. In 1970, Helmut Fisher performed as "the Christ."

The Play

The passion play is non-professional and non-commercial. Few of the actors ever receive professional training. Everyone performs his part naturally and to that end the men grow long hair and beards.

Though large sums of money have been offered for motion picture rights, the play is not for sale.

The 1970 play consisted of 14 acts (16 in 1960) and sub-acts and scenes, as well as 11 prologues. In addition, there are 18 tableaux, each of typical import from the Old Testament, the counterpart of New Testament acts which follow.

For instance, there is a tableaux of Joseph being sold by his brethren for 20 pieces of silver, followed by the scene of Judas betraying his Master for 30 pieces of silver. The tableaux are colorful and well portrayed by actors who remain motionless as soloists and the choir perform.

Costumes are of native design and creation. Make-up is used sparingly. There are no wigs.

The acting is good but hardly perfect. The best is performed by the Christus and Judas. One gets the impression that Judas overplays his part — he seems to outshine Christ. But is not that the way the part should be portrayed? Is not man's sin just that — an effort to overshadow God?

To me, the highlight of the performance was the scene in the Garden of Gethsemane, where Christ, "being in an agony of prayer more earnestly; and His sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down upon the ground" (Luke 22:44). I doubt that there was an eye which did not shed tears during that scene.

It is said on authority that the person performing the part of Christ must possess physical stamina equal to the performance which requires him to be on stage the entire eight hours of the play, during which he engages in strenuous performances to the point of exhaustion, including the carrying of his cross and hanging on the cross for nearly half an hour.

The Women

The women who play the parts of Mary, the mother of Jesus, and Mary Magdalene are usually quite young, about 20 years old. This is due to the fact that only unmarried women are chosen for speaking parts which explains the circumstance that always during the year following the play there are a greater number of marriages than during the intervening years.

Length Of Performance

The play begins at 8:15 a.m. and continues until 11:45 a.m., following which spectators return to their hotels for lunch and a siesta. The afternoon performance begins at 2:15 and ends at 5:45.

Evaluation

Many scenes stand out but among the best are the triumphal Entry of Christ on Palm Sunday, Christ parting from his mother, the prayer in Gethsemane, the Last Supper, the mob scene where Christ appears before Pilate, and the Crucifixion.

As a whole, the play is impressive. Raymond Tiff Fuller in his book on the play speaks of the artistic accomplishment of the play and sums up its merits by saying that "to these rapt villagers the play has continued to be an act of adoration; a church service, a mark of faithfulness to that vow made more than 300 years ago, a vow which is a token of gratitude for divine deliverance."

Father Max Bertl, writing the foreword for the 1970 "Text Book" on the play, on the authority of Vatican II, "Declaration on the Relation of the Church to Non-Christian Religions," denies that all Jews, without distinction, then alive or living today, are to be charged with Christ's death but that rather those who were responsible for his death were the representatives of all mankind, "who by their sins brought about the Lord's death."

He concludes:

"The reputation of the Oberammergau Passion Play remains for the unbiased visitor what this play has been in the past, a testimony to the words, 'For God so loved the world that he gave his only son, that whosoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life' (John 3:16)."

Velma Barfield Was Good Influence

Arrest Shocked Neighbors

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — On Jan. 31, 1978, Stuart Taylor and his fiancée left Taylor's St. Pauls home to attend a Rex Humbard evangelistic service in Fayetteville.

Taylor didn't know that his fiancée, Velma Margie Barfield, had laced his afternoon beer and his iced tea at dinner with arsenic. He became ill during the service and died three days later.

Doctors at Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton were puzzled by the death. Taylor showed signs of a severe flu infection, but they could not pinpoint what caused his death. A standard autopsy provided few clues, but a full autopsy that included screening for poisons turned up the arsenic.

On March 13, 1978, Mrs. Barfield — a 45-year-old Sunday School teacher, grandmother and nurse's aide — turned herself in at the Robeson County Courthouse and signed a confession to poisoning Taylor, her 74-year-old mother, and two elderly Lumberton residents who had employed her as a private duty nurse and cook.

Superior Court Judge Robert L. Farmer Wednesday set Aug. 31 as the execution date for Mrs. Barfield, the only woman currently on Death Row in North Carolina. If the execution is carried out, she will be the first woman to be executed in the United States in 22 years.

Mrs. Barfield's arrest came as a shock to most people who knew her and Taylor.

Friends said she had made a noticeable difference in Taylor's life, convincing him to drastically cut back his drinking and attend church, sometimes two or three times a week.

She taught religious classes for children at First Pentecostal Holiness Church in Lumberton and volunteered one day a week to work in the church office. At the time of her arrest, she was working as a nurse's aide in a nursing home for the elderly and handicapped.

She stayed with Taylor's family through his funeral, received money from Taylor's children, as well as some items from Taylor's home, and asked to keep the diamond engagement ring and accompanying wedding band Taylor had bought for her.

In the months following her arrest, the bodies of her mother, Lillie Bullard, as well as the bodies of two former husbands and two former employers were exhumed and checked for arsenic. All showed traces of the poison and prosecutors said at her November trial she had killed Stewart and the five others using rat and ant poison.

Mrs. Barfield, testifying during her trial, admitted to killing Taylor and three others, but denied she intended to kill any of them.

She testified she put ant poison in Taylor's beer and tea because she was afraid he would find out about a $300 check she had forged on his account. She had already forged two checks on the account when she wrote the third.

"The reason I gave it to him was because of the last check," she testified in 1978. "It bothered me because he was going to find out about it."

She said she poisoned her mother in 1974 because of a $1,000 loan she had fraudulently taken out in her mother's name. When the loan came due, her mother was sent a notice, and Mrs. Barfield testified she wanted to make her mother "sick for a while" so she could repay it.

An insurance policy on the loan paid it off after Mrs. Bullard's death.

She testified she poisoned John Henry Lee, 80, after forging a $50 check on Lee's account. She was working as a private duty nurse and cook for Lee and his wife at the time.

She also admitted giving poison to Dolly T. Edwards, 85, but said she had not forged any checks on Mrs. Edwards' account.

"I don't know why I gave it to her," she testified. "I didn't have any reason. My mind was real fuzzy."

A Bladen County jury convicted Mrs. Barfield of first-degree murder in Taylor's death and recommended the death penalty. She was never charged with the deaths of Mrs.

Bullard, Lee or Mrs. Edwards.

She pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, but Superior Court Judge Sandy McKinnon ordered the jury to disregard the issue of insanity because no evidence presented at the trial indicated she was insane.

Mrs. Barfield testified she had a 10-year addiction to Valium and other tranquilizers, an addiction that led her to forge checks to buy drugs. She said most of the time she was "walking around like a zombie."

She said her addiction had led to her conviction for forging a prescription, and that she had served time in jail for that forgery. Her daughter, Kim Norton, testified that Mrs. Barfield had been hospitalized four times for overdoses.

In interviews after being sent to Women's Prison in Raleigh, Mrs. Barfield said she had put her life "in God's hands" and had overcome her drug addiction.

Legislators Eye Phosphate Usage

RALEIGH (AP) — A group of state House members fears the detergent North Carolinians use to wash their clothes is clogging lakes and rivers with algae blooms and damaging water quality.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, and Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, are co-sponsoring a bill to limit the levels of phosphorus in detergents used statewide. The bill affects laundry detergents, dishwashing compounds and household cleaners.

But soap and detergent manufacturers believe the legislative concern is misplaced. They argue that phosphorus in detergents is much less hazardous to water quality than agricultural runoff from farms, where the land has been treated with fertilizers and pesticides.

The bill is expected to be controversial, with Gov. Jim Hunt, the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development and the N.C. League of Municipalities siding with the House members.

Opponents have hired top lobbyists, including former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, to block the bill.

"The major thing people need to realize in many municipalities across the state is that a lot of consumers will pay extra if we don't pass the Clean Detergent Bill," Hackney said.

If phosphorus is limited, opponents of the bill contend that North Carolinians will pay the price with dirtier clothes and more expensive detergents.

They say consumers will have to use more hot water and more laundry additives. They also say detergents containing phosphorus substitutes wear out clothes and washing machines more quickly — extra costs amounting to $9 a person a year.

The detergents contain a form of phosphorus, a nutrient found in all living things. In detergents, the phosphorus softens the washwater and helps break up dirt on fabrics.

That nutrient contributes to the growth of algae, microscopic plants that can hurt water quality when they multiply too rapidly.

There have been algae problems in the Neuse and Chowan Rivers. There is concern that algae problems will grow in the Falls Lake and B. Everett Jordan Lake, two new reservoirs.

Evans said that 19 of 31 major lakes in the state have algae problems already. He hopes people will seriously consider the threat to water quality.

"In my opinion it is an item of major importance and should be considered," Evans said. "If time prevents a full discussion (in the short session) we'll be back in 1985."

Opponents say lawmakers should focus on promoting farming techniques that prevent soil erosion and on more careful land development instead of limiting phosphates.

Opponents also argue there is no crisis and lawmakers should wait until the long session in 1985 to take action. They say more studies could be performed to determine the best way to tackle the problem.

"To say we don't have any crisis misstates the function of state government," Hackney said. "It is the responsibility of state government not to merely react to a crisis but to the need to plan for the future."

ESCAPEE — Virginia death row inmate Lem Tuggle Jr. is escorted by two officers to an awaiting airplane in Burlington, Vt., Wednesday for a flight back to Virginia. Tuggle, arrested at a roadstop in Vermont last Friday, was one of six inmates who fled a Virginia prison on May 31. (AP Laserphoto)

Escape Planned For Six Months

BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — One of the men who escaped from Virginia's death row says he "could probably write a book and sell it."

Lem Tuggle Jr., captured in Vermont on June 8, said the escape took six months to plan and that he wasn't let in on it until the final two months. He would not say who masterminded the plan.

"It worked good," Tuggle said of the escape. "The prison was supposed to be one of the most secure in the United States, but they opened the gates and let us out."

Tuggle told the Bennington Banner that he and another escapee, Willie Leroy Jones, camped together for about five days before they ran out of money on their way to Canada.

He said he and Jones arrived in Vermont three or four days after they and four other convicted murderers broke out of the Mecklenburg Correctional Center in southern Virginia on May 31.

The death row inmates pretended to have a bomb and drove away from the prison in a van. Their bomb turned out to be a television set.

He told the Banner that he and Jones, also captured in Vermont June 8, were driving a stolen pickup truck and spent several days in the Woodford area in southern Vermont before heading north. When they reached Jay, near the Canadian border, they camped out until last Friday.

Tuggle, who has a tatoo reading "Born to Die" on his left forearm, said in the newspaper interview the two needed more money in order to get to Canada, so he decided to try and get a temporary job.

"I was trying to get it some other way, without robbing someone, hopefully by working," he said.

Tuggle drove south until he reached Woodford again, leaving Jones in Jay, even though Tuggle said his companion was afraid of sleeping in the woods alone.

Tuggle said he robbed the Red Mills Gift Shop in Woodford "out of desperation."

"I was broke and out of gas. It was either that or go on on foot," the fugitive said.

Tuggle was caught less than half an hour after the gift shop robbery and Jones surrendered four hours later in Jay.

Tuggle initially fought extradition to Virginia but changed his mind Tuesday and Vermont prosecutors decided not to charge him with the robbery. Jones is still fighting extradition and is being held in a Vermont jail.

Tuggle was returned to Virginia Wednesday night and taken to the State Penitentiary in Richmond, where he will be held for the time being, Virginia Department of Corrections spokesman Gilbert Miller said.

'Saturday Night' Producer Didn't Know About Drugs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The executive producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live" says he now "assumes" drugs were used on the set while John Belushi was a cast member, although he was unaware of it at the time.

Dick Ebersol, who was the NBC executive in charge of developing "Saturday Night Live" in 1975, told television writers gathered here Wednesday night that he knew of no drug use at the show in the mid-1970s.

But in retrospect, he said, he recognizes that Belushi may have been using drugs, "particularly during periods when John was wound up."

Belushi often was jealous and upset because fellow cast member Chevy Chase had become the star of the show, Ebersol said.

Belushi, who died at age 33 in 1982 of a drug overdose, is portrayed as a heavy drug user in a recently published book, "Wired — The Short Life and Fast Times of John Belushi," by Bob Woodward.

"But I never saw (John) use drugs," Ebersol said.

While in charge of developing the late-night comedy program, Ebersol said, he was not responsible for policing the show. But today, as executive producer, "I feel it would be my responsibility."

"There is no drug use on 'Saturday Night Live' today," said Ebersol. If he discovered drug use by a staffer now, Ebersol said, he would have the person enroll in NBC's counseling program.

"If within 24 to 48 hours" the staffer had not taken steps to correct the problem, the person would be suspended, he said.

The issue of drug use in Hollywood has received much attention in recent months.

A story in this week's issue of TV Guide magazine, citing unidentified sources who worked on the now-canceled CBS show "Square Pegs," charged that drugs "were readily available on the set, were used and affected the quality of the work."

Harvey Shephard, senior vice president of CBS Entertainment, said he was "never aware of drug use" on "Square Pegs." He said stars at CBS had been released from shows because of drug involvement; "but I won't identify them."

Mackenzie Phillips of "One Day at a Time" was released from that show in 1980 after repeated tardiness and absence from work and for an inability to learn her lines. She acknowledged she had a drug problem, was treated and rejoined the series.

Stacy Keach of the CBS series "Mike Hammer" recently was arrested in London for cocaine possession. He pleaded innocent.

Shephard said CBS had no set policy about Keach continuing on the show if he were convicted.

Pay-Cable Breaks New Ground

LOS ANGELES (AP) — By design and necessity, pay cable is breaking new ground in the area of two staples of commercial network television: situation comedies and dramatic series.

"Brothers," beginning on Showtime July 13, is about three adult siblings, one of whom is homosexual.

"Maximum Security," starting Sunday night on Home Box Office, focuses on murderers, rapists and other prison felons, none of whom use G-rated language.

Neither series is "Little House on the Prairie," underscoring the notion that if pay-cable services are going to supplement movies with original series, these shows must be decidedly different from network fare. Otherwise, HBO and Showtime subscribers might question paying for products they can get elsewhere for free.

Peter Chernin, Showtime's vice president for original programming, said he wanted "Brothers" to be "controversial," the kind of show that becomes popular by word of mouth like "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "All in the Family."

The script for "Brothers" was originally commissioned by NBC when the movie "La Cage aux folles" was popular several years ago.

Greg Antonacci, the show's supervising producer, said the network wanted to do something about homosexuals, "but then when it was finished they said, 'Hey, there are gay people in there!'"

Showtime has scheduled seven episodes, and Antonacci said the gay character probably will be shown dating men.

Three years ago, NBC would not confirm whether Tony Randall's character on "Love, Sidney" was gay. A year later, NBC said he was a non-practicing homosexual, although his sexual preference never was addressed in the series.

Pay-cable is concerned over its ratings decline last season. Some subscribers had seen most of pay-cable's basic movie inventory and were not satisfied with the new releases each month, particularly since the same films could be rented cheaply on video cassettes.

As more video cassette recorders are bought, the pay-cable services are moving toward greater program variety, staking out areas that will distinguish them from the commercial networks and from each other.

"If homes are going to buy only one service, the decision will be made on which one has what viewers want and can't get anywhere else," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research.

Beach Boys Set For New Concert

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Beach Boys came to town to promote their free Fourth of July concert and wound up, instead, extolling the virtues of those "terrific American corporations that create lots of jobs and make wonderful products" — and foot their bills.

Lead singer Mike Love had not a bad word to say about the rock and roll group's exclusion from the celebration at the Washington Monument last year by now-gone Interior Secretary James Watt, who thought they'd attract the wrong element. Love wouldn't even bite on a loaded question about Wayne Newton, whom Watt signed in their stead.

"I believe July 4th does not belong just to the Beach Boys or any one spectrum of music ... it belongs to America," he said. Then came the commercials.

"We are attired with various corporate logos," Love said. "Bruce (Johnston) is wearing a Jeep hat because they are not only going to give away a Jeep in sweepstakes July 4 to some lucky winner, but they also helped us out with the cost of doing this show."

Love did not explain why Johnston was wearing a shirt embroidered with the name of a golf course.

"You see by my cap our wonderful friends at Amway have made it possible in a large way to make this show happen because a free concert, free to the people, is not really free," Love said. "It can cost a small fortune to put together and Amway is being most gracious."

Al Jardine, another of the group, was wearing a cap that said "Beach Boys." But he plugged "our friends at Braniff Airlines. They are giving us the opportunity to fly from Washington to Miami on the 4th of July."

The group is performing by the Washington Monument in the afternoon; in Miami Beach in the evening.

"Please don't think this is one big commercial," Johnston pleaded. Then he talked about the money it takes to put on a large show and the corporations that are "kicking in money so that we can all give something back in America to Americans."

Mike Love: "Hyatt Hotels is donating 85 rooms the night of July 3 and 4 so we can house all the entertainers and production people and pull this off."

The news conference was held in 95-degree heat near the Lincoln Memorial.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 15, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite a tendency on the part of a number of persons to be disputative, there is a strong undercurrent of benefits through using your charm and magnetism.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Any tensions with outside associates should be forgotten, and more affection should be shown for true rapport.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't try to force that new plan of action on others. Study ways to make your property more valuable and charming.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are full of magnetism and sparkle and can gain the favor of those around you easily. Do something thoughtful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Tonight is fine for happiness with the one you love, if you are more affectionate. Drive very carefully during the day.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get together with good friends and show more affection so that the future can be happier with them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put more energy into your work and gain more benefits. The evening is best spent at home with kin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to get into the outside world and make important new contacts. Plan that trip you want to take for pleasure, but count cost.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Ideal day to show special thought for your mate so that you have greater rapport. Trust only your closest ties and be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing whatever will please your partners can bring in greater benefits now and in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideas for self advancement are no good, but if you do your regular work well, you get fine benefits just the same.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) After your work is done you can have a delightful time with good friends at mutually liked amusements.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to be at home as much as you can and entertain those who can be of help to you in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very good at any profession dealing with the public in general so slant the education along such lines and the career can start quite early in life. Teach to handle own financial affairs so as not get ripped off by others.

Recount Ordered As S.C. Primary Ends In Near Tie

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The first recount in a statewide Democratic primary in South Carolina history was to get under way today to resolve a cliffhanger in the U.S. Senate race between the Rev. Melvin Purvis of Florence and black Orangeburg newspaperman Cecil Williams.

The two political newcomers were separated by only 425 votes out of more than 291,000 casts in the Tuesday primary. The winner will face incumbent Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond in the fall.

With 1,786, or 99.8 percent of the state's 1,789 precincts reporting, Purvis had 145,968, or 50.07 percent to 145,543, or 49.93 percent for Williams.

Purvis claimed a qualified victory Wednesday while Williams called for the ballots to be brought to Columbia so they could be tabulated in one place. He also asked the FBI to investigate for possible voting irregularities.

"It looks like I won, doesn't it?" asked Purvis, a 41-year-old Florence minister whose father helped orchestrate the capture of John Dillinger. "It looks like I'm the winner then doesn't it? I don't know what to say."

Williams, a 43-year-old newspaper publisher and photographer, said that neither he nor his opponent had the ability to monitor all the 46 county Democratic committees which were to recount the ballots beginning today.

If the ballots were not brought to Columbia, so they could be tabulated in one place, "I'm going to try to have those boxes impounded because there is some hanky-panky going on somewhere," he said.

Betsy Rader, the acting director of the state Democratic Party, said Democratic executive committees in counties across the state would start recounting today. But some larger counties may not have time to complete the tabulations and would have to continue Friday, she said.

"I'm certainly hoping" the process will be completed by late Friday, Ms. Rader added.

"This is the first time we've had a statewide recount," she said, adding the process would mean some logistical problems for the party and some added expense. But it wasn't clear whether the local parties or the state organization would have to pick up the tab.

Under state law, a recount must be held if the margin between two candidates is less than 1 percent of the total vote cast.

On the Republican side, the 81-year-old Thurmond dispatched former CIA agent Bob Cunningham of Pawleys Island, gathering 95 percent of the vote in Tuesday's primary.

Thurmond spent $1.2 million on the campaign saying "it doesn't matter who your opponent is."

The Republican senator said he hadn't said a word against Cunningham during the race. "I don't know anything about him," Thurmond said.

Meanwhile, Williams said he would wait until the final totals are in before conceding.

"If it is true he's the winner, I'm going to congratulate him and place my support behind him," he said.

Purvis said running against Thurmond, who is a legend in South Carolina politics, "is not such a dubious honor."

"I can't run another campaign on a shoestring," Purvis admitted. "I'm not going to beat Strom on a shoestring, that's for sure."

The minister likened a victory over the incumbent to Harold Washington's winning the mayors race in Chicago, using few funds against big-name candidates.

"There's a new wave going on now and I'm going to be part of it," Purvis said, and added he would work to "return government responsiveness to the people."

Williams said that he ran well in some of the state's larger cities, although Purvis did well in his own Florence county and in the state's rural areas.

"That leads me to believe people were voting along racial lines," he said. "In some instances I think I picked up crossover votes (from Republicans) as well."

USDA Says Financial Crunch Growing Worse For Farmers

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The financial crunch on many farmers is getting worse as they reach the end of the line with creditors, says a new report by the Agriculture Department.

But department economists are sticking with earlier predictions that farm income, overall, will increase sharply this year as producers put idled land back into crops for the 1984 harvest.

"The number of farmers leaving the sector for financial reasons will likely increase during the remainder of 1984," the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday in a new issue of Agricultural Outlook.

"Many analysts believe that lending institutions have postponed foreclosures and liquidations on their most distressed clients for as long as they can."

Although credit is still available, interest rates are expected to go even higher, making it even more difficult for farmers to qualify for loans, the report said.

The Reagan administration has acknowledged that 2 percent to 4 percent of the nation's farms could fold this year because of financial reasons, compared to a normal attrition rate of 1 percent to 1 1/2 percent.

No new estimates for overall failures were made in the new analysis, although the report cited Federal Reserve bank surveys showing how farm failures have risen.

"For example, the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis estimated that between October 1983 and March 1984, 3.4 percent of farmers and ranchers in its area discontinued farming because of financial difficulties," the report said. "This compares with 2 percent during the same period the previous year."

Many of the "highly leveraged" farmers have suffered losses for the past several years because of low market prices and a sluggish economy, the report said.

"Rather surprisingly, owners of smaller farms are often in better financial shape as they typically have large off-farm incomes to help with debt repayment," it said. "More often it's those larger farms which are highly leveraged that are having severe financial problems."

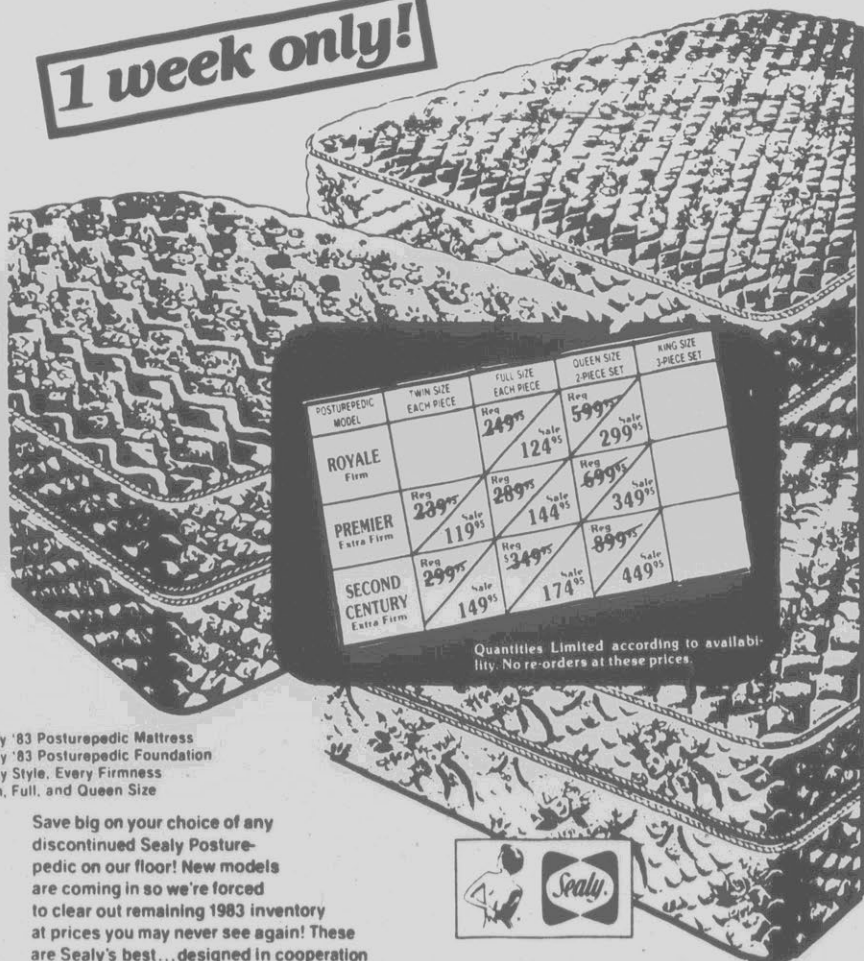

But taken as a whole, net farm income is expected to rise sharply this year to a range of $30 billion to $34 billion, the report said. That is less than the $31 billion to $36 billion forecast earlier but still well above the $20 billion to $22 billion netted in 1983.

Farmers are expected to harvest larger crops this year than in 1983 when production was cut by drought and government acreage programs. Also, commodity prices are expected to be up from last year, at least in the first half of 1983, the report said.

"Much of the gain will probably be due to a buildup in inventories," the report said. "In 1983, the value of inventories was cut by the drought's effect on yields and the drop in harvested acres."
