Falling Food Prices Hold Inflation Flat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sharpest food price decline in almost two years held wholesale prices flat for the second straight month in May, the government said today.

The two-month showing was the best since last spring.

May's food costs, paced by cheaper prices for meat, vegetables and eggs, dropped 1.2 percent, the most since a 1.4 percent decline in July 1982, said today's Labor Department report on the Producer Price Index. Food costs had declined 0.6 percent in April.

Balancing the falling food prices was a 1.5 percent spurt in energy costs, including increases of 5.2 percent for fuel oil and 2.0 percent for gasoline.

So far this year, wholesale prices are rising at an annual rate of 3.5 percent, a bit better than economists' predictions of an increase from 4.5 to 5 percent for all of 1984. Last year's increase, the best in 20 years, was only 0.6 percent.

In May, today's report said, food price declines included 14.7 percent for vegetables, 14.3 percent for eggs, 7.8 percent for beef and veal, 4.9 percent for poultry and 2.0 percent for pork.

Fruit prices rose 10.6 percent; dairy prices edged up 0.2 percent, and fish costs gained 0.3 percent.

As for energy, the May increase followed a more moderate 0.7 percent rise in April and included a 0.7 percent rise in natural gas costs.

In other details, today's report said:

—New car prices fell 0.7 percent after declining 0.3 percent in April. Light truck prices held steady.

Pitt Farmers Report 300 Acres Of Damaged Leaf

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt agricultural officials said today around 300 acres of tobacco in Pitt County have been damaged by fertilizer containing traces of the herbicide Dicamba.

"We've got damage in Pitt County and expect to see more," Pitt extension agent Mitch Smith said. "Currently we have around 300 acres and on several farms this figure might tend to go up." The damaged tobacco, he said, is in the Chicod area.

State agricultural officials confirmed Thursday that they identified the broadleaf herbicide Banvel which contains Dicamba, to be the contaminant. Grace Fertilizer Co. is the manufacturer of the contaminated fertilizer, state officials said.

Smith said today the fertilizers containing herbicide are Gold Dollar 3-9-9, 4-8-12 and 6-6-18. The contaminated fertilizer was shipped from the Wilmington production plant.

Smith said a letter he received today from North Carolina State University stated, "In fields where there is a small amount of tipping, it is our opinion that this tobacco will make a normal crop."

In 1979, Smith said, tobacco producers had a similar problem with a chemical called picloram. Officials are not expecting damage to be as great as in 1979 because tobacco is less sensitive to dicamba.

"The contamination level of the fertilizer containing Banvel is 20 parts per billion, considerably lower than the levels of picloram in 1979," he said.

Tobacco is very sensitive to 2,4-D herbicide, said Smith, and officials are using that herbicide as a measuring stick to determine how tobacco will react to the dicamba.

"Tobacco is 100 times more sensitive to dicamba and 1,000 times more sensitive to picloram," he said. According to N.C. State, the likelihood of finding the contaminant in the cured leaf is "extremely remote."

"Farmers with damaged tobacco should continue with normal cultural practices until released by Grace Fertilizer or its insurance carrier," said Smith. "Right now we don't know what will happen with the plants. With a couple of good rains it (the plant) has potential to come out of it."

Zoning Requests Delayed

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Action was stopped on rezoning requests of two local developers during Thursday night's public hearing and regular session of the City Council when three unexpected petitions were given to the council by landowners opposing the rezoning proposals.

According to City Manager Gail Meeks, when petitions are presented against major requests like the rezoning proposals before the council, a three-fourths decision majority is required. Not enough council members were present to give the decision.

Voter Deadline

The deadline for registering or updating registration data in order to vote in the July 17 special primary for the state's 6th Senatorial District seat is Monday, according to the Pitt County Board of Elections.

Margaret Hardee, elections supervisor, said balloting for the seat will be conducted in the Pitt precincts of Bell Arthur, Belvoir, Bethel, Falkland, Farnville and Fountain. Townships in Edgecombe, Martin and Wilson counties are also involved in the makeup of the realigned 6th District.

Democratic candidates are R.L. (Bob) Martin of Bethel, Shelly Willingham of Rocky Mount, and Vernon Morton and John D. Costabile, both of Wilson.

No Republicans filed for the 6th District seat.

There will be no voting on July 17 in Pitt County for the 9th Senatorial District seat, Ms. Hardee said. Thomas F. (Tom) Taft of Greenville and Maynard Waters of Washington are unopposed in their bids for the Democratic and Republican nominations, respectively.

The deadline to apply for an absentee ballot is July 12 at 5 p.m. Ballots must be submitted to the elections board by 5 p.m. July 16.

Wet-Then-Dry Clime Hurting Pitt Crops

The wet spring Pitt County experienced hasn't made the June drought any easier for crops, local agricultural officials report.

"At this point we are experiencing some moderate to severe drought stress in the county," Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell said. "This situation is made worse by an extremely wet spring because plants such as cucumbers, tobacco and some corn were given so much rainfall early that they never developed an extensive and deep root system.

"Consequently, when the top two-three inches of soil dries out as it has the last few weeks, it dries out at a substantial portion of a plant's root system," Uzzell said.

The hardest-hit crops are cucumbers and other vegetables, he said.

"We're also seeing lots of corn twisting, but this could be easily revived at this point with an inch or two of rain." A more critical time for corn is tasseling time, Uzzell said. "If rain doesn't come soon, though, we will have shorter (corn) stalks and lesser yield potential."

Uzzell pointed out that late-planted soybeans have to be planted into soil that dries out quickly. He said beans planted in no-till fields should have a better chance of germination than those planted in conventionally cultivated fields.

Newly planted ornamentals will need attention and irrigation to survive in dry conditions, Uzzell said, and watering in early morning or late afternoon will eliminate moisture loss from evaporation.

Scholarship Winner

Carolyn Pearsall of Greenville has been awarded a $2,600 per year, four-year scholarship by the Procter and Gamble Corp.

The scholarship is one of 100 across the United States presented to children of Procter & Gamble employees. Recipients are selected entirely on academic performance, according to Robert Griffin, who heads the Greenville Procter & Gamble plant.

Miss Pearsall is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pearsall of Route 1, Box 714, Greenville. She is a 1984 graduate of D.H. Conley High School, where she was active in Literary Club, Bi Chem Phy, Future Business Leaders of America, the Honors Medical Seminars at East Carolina University, Social Science Club and National Honor Society. She also participated in Junior Achievement and served as a senior class officer and marshal. She attends Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church.

Miss Pearsall plans to attend North Carolina State University in the fall and major in either chemistry or pre-med.

"This is the fourth nationwide winner from Pitt County of a Procter & Gamble scholarship," said Griffin. "This tells me our community and its schools are competitive with others across the nation. We are very proud of our winners."

New Home Knitting Machines Offer A Range Of Styles

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — The time has come when a home knitting machine can cost less than a designer sweater.

A Perry Ellis sweater, for example, can set you back $200 to $300. The least expensive of a line of five home knitting machines now going into national distribution is about $160. The top of the line, an electronic model, is about $1,250. The in-between models cost about $338 to $550.

Home knitting machines have been sold in the United States for 30 years, said Stephen J. Kind, president of the North American Sewing Products Division of the Singer Co., at a news conference and demonstration in New York.

Until recent years, prices have been in the high hundreds and up.

Kind said his company's Japanese-made machines have been sold in Canada for about eight years and on a limited basis in the United States for about three years.

He said he didn't really know if working women looking for time and labor-saving devices had any impact on the machines' growing popularity.

"They're an outlet for creativity and take some of the drudgery out of knitting — and knits are very fashionable now," Kind said.

Fania Price, an education instructor for the company in eastern Canada, said the machines are about 100 times faster than traditional hand knitting, can be used to inset pearls directly in the knitting and even weave.

Ms. Price estimated many fashion garments would cost as little as $15 in acrylic yarn or $30 in fine wool and could be made in anywhere from a few hours to a single day. "The price is determined by the quality of the yarn," Ms. Price said.

No one machine uses every weight yarn now on the market. The most versatile units are the SK-360 and the electronic model. Both can use anything from sewing cotton through four ply yarns.

The FK-370 knits with every weight from fingering yarn through sport weight.

All three can use metallic lame yarn.

Standard equipment with each model includes a package of patterns for all basic shapes of traditional knitted garments for men, women and children and a stitch pattern book.

"A knit contour system eliminates keeping track of the number of rows and stitches needed for each size," Ms. Price said.

"With accessories you can expand to 20 different stitch types and design your own motifs on blank punchcards."

Optional accessories include extra punch card sets, an intarsia carriage and patterns, blank punch cards and punches for designing your own patterns, a yarn changer, a rib knitter, and project and stitch pattern books whose designs range from classic to high fashion.

Ms. Price suggested beginners start with an easy yarn, smooth and not too thick.

"Save mohair or boucle for when you're more experienced."

In one respect, machine knitting is like hand knitting. You must make a sample swatch for each project to determine the gauge, which varies with each yarn and stitch type.

Jean-Marc D'Amours, the company's director of knitting products, said consumers who have tried the machines said they were easy to operate, not at all intimidating and almost trouble free.

In fact, they do look formidable. Depending on model, they are 44 to 46 inches long, 6 to 8 inches wide and 3 1/2 to 4 inches high when closed, and have a complicated looking yarn-threading mechanism.

But loading the punch cards containing the patterns is as easy as running a sheet of paper into a typewriter. Threading is only slightly more complicated, but easy to follow from a drawing in the booklet that comes with each machine. In-store demonstrations are available at dealers.

The demonstration model used was the K-360, which Kind described as middle-of-the-line and, as such, the most popular model. It, the 370 and the 560 can weave and make lace, although an optional special lacemaking carriage is needed for the 560 and the 370, said Frank Miconi, the distributor for New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The company recommends the HK-100 and SK-150 for beginners who want to make small, simple things in either stockinet or tuck stitches. The HK-100 uses only bulky yarns and the SK-150, chunky fashion yarn in moss, block check, knit-in, tuck, cable and crossed cable stitches.

Because the carriages lock in place, all the machines, weighing 25 pounds each, can be stored vertically in very little space. A folding table and stand are available, although the machines can be used on an ordinary table.

Cooking Is Fun

Most people have fixed ideas about garlic. They either love the herb or hate it.

I am among those who crave the controversial seasoning, and it was with delight that I finally read Lloyd J. Harris' exhaustive study of this cousin of the onion. ("The Book Of Garlic." Panjandrum-Aris Books, 11321 Iowa, No. 1, Los Angeles, CA 90025.)

Among other things, the book tells of garlic's medicinal role over the centuries. Sometimes called Russian penicillin, it is one of the natural herbal remedies still used by the Soviets. At one point, the U.S.S.R. is said to have imported 500 tons of garlic during a flu epidemic.

The ancient Babylonians were garlic buffs and one Babylonian ruler reportedly had 395,000 bushels of the herb delivered to the court in a single batch.

Garlic was prized as a medium of exchange in Egypt. And the authorities there fed a diet of garlic, onions and radishes to thousands of workers laboring to build the great pyramid of Cheops.

When he passed through the Yunnan region of China, Marco Polo said he saw people eating raw liver, chopped and flavored with garlic.

Centuries later, the herb received a warm reception in France, particularly in Provence, where the peasants eat garlic on black bread for breakfast.

The British gave garlic a cool reception and were said to have sought some means of disguising the smell, but little was done. The Japanese are said to have developed an odorless fresh garlic, however. No mean feat, since it is estimated that one millionth of an ounce can be detected on one's breath.

Garlic is a key ingredient in gourmet dishes everywhere, but no one uses more of the herb than the Chinese, I believe. Here's a Chinese recipe from Lloyd Harris' book for Pekinese eggplant with garlic.

- 1 medium eggplant, firm and dark
- 8 cloves garlic
- 1 tablespoon Chinese black beans
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
- Vegetable oil, as needed

Cut eggplant into 2-inch cubes, leaving unpeeled. Brown the eggplant in a heavy frying pan, adding a few drops of oil as needed. Mix in paste made of crushed garlic and black beans (about 2 tablespoons). Add mixture of soy sauce, sugar and chicken broth. Reduce heat and simmer covered for 12 minutes.

No Ghostwriters For Abigail

DEAR ABBY: I heard that you don't write your column all yourself—that you have ghostwriters. Is that true?

CURIOUS IN BOISE, IDAHO

DEAR CURIOUS: It's not true. I have no ghostwriters and never have had, but sometimes I wish I had a few, so I could blame somebody else when I goof.

DEAR ABBY: I'm engaged to be married soon. My girlfriend is dumb, but that's OK with me because she knows she's dumb, so she keeps her mouth shut.

I have heard that girls usually take after their mothers, and boys take after their fathers, so if we have children, the girls will take after her (dumb), and the boys will take after me (smart).

What if something goes wrong and I end up with smart daughters and dumb sons?

Please answer soon, as the wedding is in August and I don't want to spend any more money on the plans if I'm going to break the engagement.

PITTSBURGH PETE

DEAR PETE: It's not true that girls "take after" their mothers and boys "take after" their fathers. But if it were, take comfort in this oft-quoted ditty: "A son is a son 'til he takes a wife,

"But a daughter is yours for the rest of her life."

So stop worrying. If "something goes wrong," you'll end up with smart daughters looking after you in your old age.

DEAR ABBY: For many years, you have been one of the strong advocates of the Living Will. My wife and I agree with you—should we ever become terminally ill, we do not want our lives prolonged by artificial means.

I've heard that life insurance companies are refusing payment of death benefits when artificial means of prolonging life are available, but not used by the insured.

Last week at a senior citizens' group meeting, someone said that refusing to prolong life by artificial means constitutes suicide, and most life insurance companies refuse to pay if the insured commits suicide.

Please check into this, Abby, and let the millions of us who have signed the Living Will know where we stand.

R.W.B., COCOA, FLA.

DEAR R.W.B.: The Society for the Right to Die, which dispenses the Living Will, has assured me that life insurance companies do pay death benefits irrespective of the use of Living Wills.

Please set your senior citizens' group straight. And thank you for inquiring.

DEAR ABBY: "One Man's Opinion," who hated beards, wrote to say he wouldn't even interview a man who showed up with a beard or a droopy mustache regardless of his qualifications.

Best Health Found Among Employed Married Mothers

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

The caricature of the working married mother as a sickly soul suffering from short circuited nerves, blown fuses and burnout doesn't fit with the facts, ma'am.

Speaking of the jugglers of spouse, children, job, home and maybe a dog or cat, Dr. Lois M. Verbrugge, expert on women, work and health at the University of Michigan, said: "The best health is found among employed married mothers, though employed married women without children are very close to them.

"The worst health is among women with 'no roles' — unmarried women with no job or children."

Dr. Verbrugge, research associate at the U-M Institute for Social Research, Ann Arbor, spoke at a symposium on "Health Prospects for American Women" during the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The link of multiple roles — job and family responsibilities — with good health comes mainly from the positive effect of each component role, the social scientist said.

"Employment is associated with good health," she said.

"Marriage is also a healthful status, compared to nonmarriage; and even parenthood is weakly associated with good health. So people with multiple roles reflect the health benefits of each role. The same is true of men.

"There is no evidence of health debits for having such busy lives.

"The small parenthood effect suggests that having any children may be a little more satisfying and healthful than having none."

The health plus to parenthood for the women with multiple roles, however, is influenced somewhat by the ages and number of children, Dr. Verbrugge said.

"Having preschoolers or numerous children can pose problems and stresses for working women and ultimately jeopardize their health," she said.

"The scientific evidence on this is not consistent, but it points in that direction — more health problems and curative behaviors among women with preschool-age children than older ones, and among women with three or more children rather than one or two."

The "health debit" of children, as Dr. Verbrugge called it, seems largest for unmarried employed mothers.

"Whether parenthood ends up having a positive or negative effect on health seems contingent on the children's characteristics and the mother's marital status."

Health benefits of multiple roles do not apply to all employed women, Dr. Verbrugge said.

"The link between busy lives and good health could be true for the majority of women, namely, white middle class women, but not for less advantaged ones."

"The reasoning is that black women, low income women, and low education women have jobs by necessity, gain few social and financial benefits from their work, and have more domestic responsibilities because of more dependents and less help from spouses.

"All of this would make multiple roles tough for them, entailing more stresses and fewer satisfactions; so the effect on health could be negative or, at best, less positive than for white middle class women."

However, married, single, parent or not, women with a paid job are notably healthier than unemployed women and women outside the labor force, the expert said, citing the following from government surveys:

—Among women 17 to 44, employed women averaged 13.4 restricted activity days per year, compared with 19.6 for women not in the labor force; 5.4 versus 8.5 days of bed disability; 5.7 percent versus 10.5 percent with limitations due to chronic conditions.

—For ages 45-64, comparable figures are 15.4 versus 38.0 restricted activity days; 5.2 versus 13.6 bed disability days; 12.1 percent versus 32.1 percent with chronic limitation.

Dr. Verbrugge said the fact that multiple-role women are healthier than others spurs an important question: "Is this because having important roles offers satisfactions and resources that promote health, or because only relatively healthy women can take on several roles?"

The jury is out on that one.

Given the fact that employment seems to be a "healthy status," Dr. Verbrugge made a prediction.

"As larger percents of women become employed and are exposed to employment for more years of their lives, the health of American women should improve.

"Although work environments and tasks do pose some risks that nonemployed women avoid, research evidence suggests that these are more than offset by social and psychological benefits of jobs. The same is true of men."

Cooking Is Fun

If you want instant success as a hostess this summer, I suggest you offer Sesame Wafers at an afternoon or evening party. They are definitely delicate — thin, crisp, fragile. In the Carolinas, where this recipe comes from, sesame seeds are called benne seeds.

When the weather is humid, a friend of mine has a way of storing these Sesame Wafers so they stay crisp. She layers them in coffee cans, covers them tightly and puts them in the freezer. At serving time she defrosts as many as needed.

SESAME WAFERS

1-3rd cup sesame seeds
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
6 tablespoons butter
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 large egg
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Sprinkle the sesame seeds over the bottom of a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, stirring a few times until browned — about 10 minutes. Cool completely.

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour and baking powder.

In a medium bowl cream the butter and brown sugar; beat in the egg and vanilla until blended. Stir in the flour mixture until blended. Stir in the sesame seeds until well distributed.

Drop by level teaspoons, 2 inches apart, on cookie sheets that have been lined with foil and the foil greased.

Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until lightly browned — 8 to 10 minutes. Cool; remove with a wide spatula from foil.

These wafers are truly thin and fragile; they should be stored between layers of wax paper in a tightly covered tin box.

Makes about 8 dozen.

POTATO SALAD

2 pounds (6 medium) potatoes (boiled in jackets, peeled and diced — 1/2-inch)

1 cup diced (1/4-inch) celery

1 to 2 medium scallions, finely chopped (2 to 4 tablespoons)

1 cup mayonnaise

1 tablespoon prepared Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon white wine vinegar

Salt and pepper

Cherry tomatoes and cucumbers

Mix together potatoes, celery and scallions. Whisk together mayonnaise, mustard and vinegar; toss with potato mixture and salt and pepper. Cover tightly and chill. At serving time garnish with tomatoes and cucumbers. Makes about 1 1/2 quarts — 6 to 8 servings.

Marvels To Enjoy

Each year more North Carolinians "discover" the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. It's an experience not soon forgotten, and discoverers mentally note it's a place they must someday re-visit.

That park is marking its 50th anniversary with a ceremony today at Newfound Gap. It is a natural treasure hard to ignore.

To infrequent visitors the park is an experience in silence and grandeur. The grandeur is for real but the silence is deceptive. There are sounds, but different from those to which most of us are accustomed. Bird calls, rushing water, a scuttling sound in the underbrush, the whisper of breezes wafting through high branches and the rattling of leaves. Traffic noises are far away ... as are the shoutings of children, the omnipresent background of radio, television and tape-players, banging doors and sirens. One could go on. The wandering visitor can really "get-away-from-it-all".

Even the air is different (unfamiliarly primitive, by urban standards) and views from varying heights stretch for uncountable miles until horizons are lost in a distant haze.

How long has it been since you last stood on rock-solid ground and looked down on clouds?

Check it out one more time. Maybe you've forgotten some of the marvels of the Creator's handiwork that was set aside for you to enjoy.

Hard Life

House and Senate negotiators are working slowly but surely toward the goal of cutting the federal deficit by between $150 billion and $180 billion. There is at present about $30 billion worth of revenues adopted toward that goal.

It was achieved by wiping out a tax break for savers (before it actually went into effect); extension of a 3 percent telephone service tax that was due to expire next year; measures to curtail tax cheating; tougher measures on tax shelters, and a couple of other items the Senate and House had agreed to before negotiations began.

Yet to be decided are the extent of a tax boost on liquor and whether to go along with planned reduction of cigarette taxes, and efforts to curb use of tax-exempt bonds for private commercial buildings and to reduce tax benefits available to investors in real estate.

Apparently the "easy" part of their workload lies in the revenues field because the problems of spending reductions were saved for later. The dark side runs like this:

Sen. Robert Dole has warned the president is not likely to accept a bill that raises taxes and cuts military spending without reducing spending for domestic programs as well. The real blood-letting begins at that point.

So there's a long way to go and hands of the clock keep moving.

It's a hard life for any officeholders dreaming of re-election.

Gulf War Leads To Change

WASHINGTON — In a sudden change of fortune in the Persian Gulf war, little Iraq has checkmated giant Iran — offering President Reagan an opportunity to seize the initiative against Moscow by establishing a Saudi-Iraqi-American condominium blunting the fanatical thrust of the Ayatollah Khomeini.

Top administration officials privately report that Iraq has accomplished the seemingly impossible: holding off half a million Iranians, mostly revolutionary guards, massed for many weeks north of Basra. Even if the long-expected attack starts over the presumed opposition of Iran's regular military leadership, predictions here are that it will fail. That would end the ayatollah's exotic vision of sweeping Islam with anti-Western Shiite Moslem passions designed to engulf Israel and the entire Arab world.

That means Khomeini is losing his dangerous gamble to run Uncle Sam out of the Middle East. U.S. strategic cooperation with Saudi Arabia in the air war, part of unusually adept American tactics the past month, is paying big dividends. Despite all its help for Iraq, the Soviet Union has been unable to get any payoff from Baghdad — and will not any time soon.

Reagan's advisers will not predict

The trouble with foreign people in this country is that they take everything Americans say literally. I have a French friend named Michel Bernheim. I met him the other day on the street, and after the usual chit-chat about Paris I said, "Give me a call some time."

The next day he was on the line. "Bonjour," he said. "It's Michel. You said to give you a call."

"I did?"

"Oui, don't you remember? I spoke to you yesterday on Pennsylvania Avenue."

"I didn't mean for you to give me a call right away. I was just finding a nice way to say goodbye to you."

"Then you don't want to talk on the telephone?"

"I can't think of anything to say, frankly."

"But you asked me to call you."

"You're right, Michel. Look, I'm terribly busy right now. Let's have lunch some time."

"I would like that. When?"

Taking Things Literally

"I'm not sure. Why don't you give me a holler?"

Two days later I heard someone calling my name from the sidewalk. I opened the window in my office and Michel was down below.

"What in the devil are you shouting about?" I yelled down to him.

"You said to give you a holler when I wanted to have lunch. How about today?"

"I'm busy today."

"Well, when can you have lunch?"

"I'm not sure. I'm tied up for the next three weeks."

"Why did you tell me to give you a holler when I wanted to have lunch if you were so tied up?"

"Michel, you've been around long enough to know when an American says, 'Let's have lunch some time,' he doesn't necessarily mean it. It's a pleasantry. You French say, 'Au revoir,' the Germans say, 'Auf wiedersehen,' the Spanish say, 'Hasta mañana,' and Americans say,

'Let's have lunch,' which in our country means, 'Don't call me, I'll call you.'

Michel said, "I didn't mean to bother you."

"You didn't bother me. I'll tell you what. Let's check in with each other and have a drink one of these days."

"That would be great," Michel said.

I was sweating out a column the next day when the door opened and Michel stuck his head in.

"Now what?"

"I'm just checking in to see if you wanted a drink."

"Can't you see I'm busy?"

"I can see that now, but I couldn't before I checked in with you."

"Michel, you're driving me nuts. You can't take everything we Americans say as gospel. The only reason I said 'Let's have a drink some time, is because I wanted you to stop hollering under my window about having lunch together.'"

"All you have to do is tell me you don't want to see me," Michel said in a hurt voice, "instead of asking me to meet with you all the time and then breaking the date."

I felt badly. "You're right. I feel terrible about the way I've treated you. Our problem is that we're so used to saying goodbye to each other with a promise we'll get together soon, that no one in this country expects the other person to keep it. We wouldn't be able to get anything done if we had lunch with everyone we accidentally met on the street."

"I understand," Michel said. "But if you change your mind, you have my card and you can call me."

"I don't have your card, Michel. That's another thing you don't understand. When Americans exchange business cards with each other, they usually throw them away when they get home."

Barriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson thought the primary and caucus rules were rigged against them, they should take a look at the obstacles in the way of their efforts to strip Walter F. Mondale of crucial delegates.

It's not just Mondale's delegate majority that may stall Hart's "tainted delegates," charge and Jackson's "one-man, one-vote" demands a month before the Democratic National Convention.

Once again, it's the party rules that are in the way. They make it difficult for either man to win his case in San Francisco — or to even make it to the convention floor with their presentations.

Whether the arguments are successful or not this year, they could have a big impact on how the 1988 presidential nominee is picked.

Neither man has yet filed any complaints with the party, the convention Credentials Committee or the convention Rules Committee — and time is growing short as the committees start their sessions in 10 days.

Hart has argued that about 600 Mondale delegates were elected with the aid of illegal delegate committees, backed by political action committee money.

Mondale counters that the committees were legal — a question now before the Federal Election Commission — and that, anyway, they have been closed down.

To begin with, such an argument might be thrown out by the Credentials Committee.

The party rules say the committee can consider only challenges based on a state's failure to follow its own approved plan for picking delegates or its refusal to follow national party dictates. And such are not Hart's arguments.

If Hart were to get his challenge past the committee, he might have a chance of winning on the floor — so the argument goes — because challenged Mondale delegates would be barred from voting on their own status.

That would drop Mondale from about 2,000 delegates to only 1,400 of the 3,400 then eligible to vote on the matter — well short of the 1,700-plus needed to win.

But that argument has at least one weakness.

The only way to challenge delegates is state-by-state — all 600 can't be challenged at once. The delegates were picked state-by-state and that's how they can be challenged.

So, if Hart challenged Mondale's 96 pledged delegates from Illinois, they couldn't vote on the Illinois challenge. But Mondale's 129 pledged delegates from New York — who also might be under a separate challenge — could vote.

On any one state challenge, therefore, Mondale might be short of the majority he would need to win. But he would only be a handful short — with about 200 uncommitted delegates available to give him the needed number.

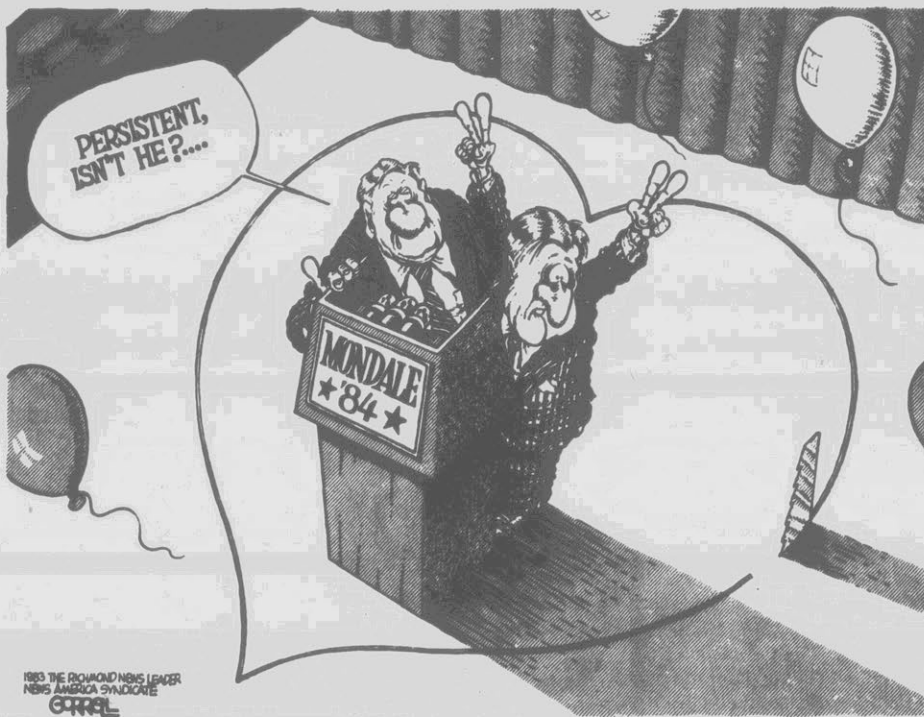

Jackson's argument is a little different, but the problems are similar.

Jackson says he has received more than 20 percent of the popular vote and less than 10 percent of the delegates. This "disenfranchises" his supporters, Jackson says, demanding a straight proportional "one man, one vote" delegate allocation system.

Aides to Jackson cite the party charter that says delegations should "fairly reflect the division of preferences expressed by those who participate in the presidential nominating process."

If Jackson took such a challenge to the Credentials Committee, it would face the same problem as Hart: it does not deal with whether a state failed to follow its plan for picking delegates.

On the other hand, if he took it to the Rules Committee, Jackson might get a hearing — as might Hart on his arguments. But even if one won in the rules body, it would be too late for 1984.

Economy Is Cooling

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy is cooling, the economy is cooling.

The sound of it is like a drumroll that goes on and on, rising in tempo each time retail sales are less than expected or car sales fail to show big gains or real estate turns just a bit sluggish.

Maybe so, but like all claims it must be considered in the larger perspective of things, and that perspective suggests you keep in mind three important things:

1. The economy may be cooling but it isn't going into a deep freeze.
2. A cool-down isn't necessarily a bad thing.
3. Any time an economy is hot, you'll find dozens of economists talking about the inevitable cooling off. Some of them have been talking that way for a year.

The fact is that by most measures the economy is still growing, and by most estimates it will continue to grow for several more months at least.

Estimates of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic activity, range from mere fractions to 5 percent for the April-May-June quarter. A cooling to be sure, since first-quarter growth was 8.8 percent.

That 8.8 percent figure really surprised a lot of people, including those people in the White House and the Federal Reserve who tend to think they run the economy by their policies and tactics. It was a very hot figure.

It frightened a lot of those ubiquitous "economic observers" too, because it suggested that perhaps the economic expansion was moving too fast — sort of like the mixed feelings of a parent who sees a child growing into a new pair of shoes before the budget can accommodate the extra expense involved.

A boom overloads the economy. It puts demands on the economic machinery that simply cannot be met. It burns out the bearings, and the proof of that is smoke, or as some call it, inflation.

To retreat from that condition, therefore, isn't always bad. A slower rate of growth gives the economy time to build the capacity to service the demand — and do so without straining and creating inflation.

Some might even contend that at this period in the current economy a cooling off is as welcome as a cold front intruding into a week-long siege of hot, sultry, debilitating weather.

Whatever, you may be sure that when the economy is moving along at a hefty pace, there will be those who feel it is their duty to remind you that it cannot last. Ronald Reagan, for one, has heard his fill of it.

There is a certain inevitability to such warnings, and it arises from the nature of the economic forecasting business.

There is, that is to say, no great merit, no points to be won, in merely telling customers that conditions will stay the same. Calling the turn wins the gold stars, and every economic forecaster tries to get them.

Strength For Today

A woman once prayed to God for patience, and the Lord answered her prayer, she said, by sending her a housemaid who would have tried the patience of the Angel Gabriel.

In other words, the Lord answered the woman's prayer by furnishing her an opportunity to develop patience through the exercise of it.

How strange are God's answers to our prayers, and yet how wonderful. God always answers our prayers — not always the thing we ask for, but always according to his loving providence. We ask for more love, and often he arranges things so that we have to work every day beside some difficult person whom we can love only with much effort.

When you pray that God will develop some virtue within you, you must be willing to accept his way of answering your prayer. Don't think that you both make a prayer and dictate the way it shall be answered. God knows more about yourself than you do.

Trudeau Farewell Leaves Audience With Red Eyes

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, saying goodbye after 16 years in power, told his countrymen that Canada has finally reached maturity.

"I thought that these 15, 20 past years in a certain sense were the period of adolescence of our country, coming of age. The people of Canada have reached a certain maturity," Trudeau said Thursday night in a nationally televised farewell address at a convention of his Liberal Party.

That convention will choose Trudeau's replacement Saturday, and the front-runner of seven candidates is a former Cabinet minister who has been at odds with the retiring prime minister.

"I'm stepping down as your leader," said Trudeau. "In two days we will be choosing a new leader and you will find me with you following him because we have much more building to do."

Canada graduated from colonial to dominion status in 1867 and became an autonomous nation within the Commonwealth in 1931. But the first truly Canadian constitution was adopted only in 1982, after Trudeau fought at home and in Britain for document.

Trudeau, 64, who will leave office later this month, spoke without notes. Many in the audience had tears in their eyes and Trudeau's trademark red rose in their lapels.

As he left the stage, Trudeau spun a graceful pirouette, recalling a playful twirl he once performed for photographers behind the back of Queen Elizabeth II in Buckingham Palace.

Before his speech, Trudeau and his three sons sat in the convention audience watching an hour-long tribute of film clips, personal remembrances and Canadian-grown Hollywood entertainment.

Singer-composer Paul Anka, who grew up in Ottawa, worked Trudeau into his song, "My Way," saying, "He did it his way." The song was written in 1968, when Trudeau first came to power.

Rich Little, also from Ottawa, offered impressions of how Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan would remember Trudeau, and ended with an impersonation of the prime minister himself.

Among those paying tribute was Sen. Keith Davey, Trudeau's closest political adviser, who said, "He made us realize we are a people, a culture, a way of life."

The seven candidates to succeed Trudeau have a final chance to sway the delegates tonight when each speaks to the convention.

John Turner, a former finance minister who quit Trudeau's Cabinet in 1975, has a chance to win a majority of the approximately 3,500 delegates on the first ballot.

He could set up his new government without being a member of Parliament, but would be expected to try to win a seat soon and would have to call an election by next spring.

The other six candidates are all members of Parliament and Trudeau's Cabinet.

Energy Minister Jean Chretien, who lays claim to the Trudeau legacy, is acknowledged to be in second place, with at least 1,000 votes.

The other five are far behind, with none expected to get much more than 300 votes.

Reports circulated Thursday of negotiations between Economic Development Minister Donald Johnston and Employment Minister John Roberts — who are likely to finish third and fourth — about a possible alliance on the second ballot.

The candidates themselves stayed clear of the speculation.

"I haven't even considered a deal," Johnston told reporters. Roberts also said he was not thinking of a coalition.

Turnout Is Light In European Vote

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The first round of voting for a new European Parliament produced big gains in Britain for the opposition Labor Party but little shift in the political balance in Denmark, Holland and Ireland, unofficial polls indicated today.

Official figures will not be released until Sunday night, after the polls close in the six other nations taking part in the elections — France, West Germany, Belgium, Italy, Greece and Luxembourg.

Pre-election polls had indicated that nearly two-thirds of eligible European voters would participate, but the turnout appeared to be much lower than that in the countries that voted Thursday.

In all, 4,626 candidates are running for 434 seats in the European Parliament, a mostly consultative body which meets once a month in Strasbourg, France. This week's election is the second since the assembly was created in 1952. Prior to the 1979 election, the members were appointed by the 10 Common Market governments.

In Britain, reports from polling stations said that despite sunny weather only 30 to 35 percent of the electorate turned out, about the same as in 1979.

Unofficial estimates in the Netherlands said about 53 percent voted, down about five percentage points from five years ago. In Denmark, however, turnout was up about five percentage points, to 53 percent. Estimates for Ireland were not available.

The campaigns focused on national rather than international issues in all the countries, where they were viewed as referendums on the parties in power.

The British Labor Party, which has suffered five years of electoral defeats, appeared to have made strong gains against the Conservative Party of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

A poll commissioned by the liberal Guardian newspaper in London said Labor candidates were neck-and-neck with the Conservatives, who had held 60 of Britain's 81 seats in the European assembly. Labor had 16.

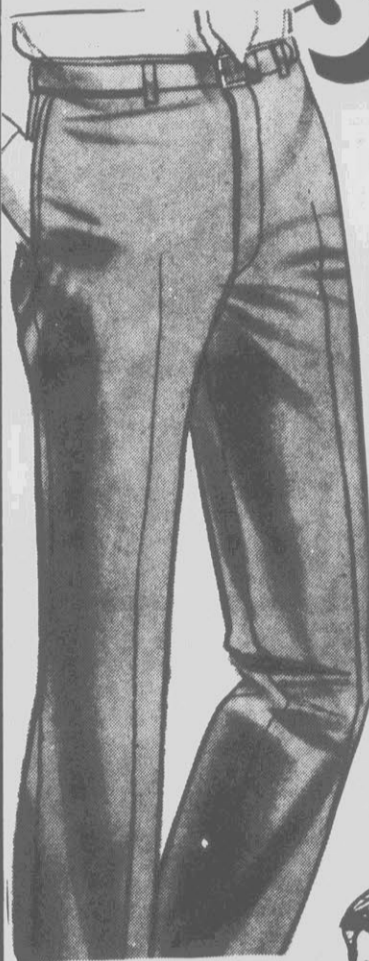

In the Netherlands, the Christian-Democrats were projected to lose one of their nine seats.

Arab States Try To Avoid War With Iran

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Despite attacks on their shipping, Arab states in the region still hope to avoid confrontation with Iran and are going to great lengths to prevent the Persian Gulf war from widening.

Foreign ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates — ended two days of talks in Taif, Saudi Arabia, on Thursday. They announced only that they agreed to "continue contacts" with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to end the conflict.

The ministers condemned an attack Sunday on the Kuwaiti oil tanker Kazimah but avoided blaming Iran. The ministers' statement also made no mention of any joint Arab military action in face of the Iranian threat and repeated their desire to live "in peace and good neighborliness."

By appealing to the U.N. secretary-general, the Arabs appear to be hoping that an agreement between Iran and Iraq to refrain from shelling civilians might be the first step to a broader cease-fire.

When the agreement went into effect on Tuesday, some Western and Arab sources saw it as a hopeful sign.

However, one Western diplomat and an Arab journalist with close contacts in Tehran saw little cause for optimism about the agreement, which has apparently held so far.

"The Iranians always differentiated between attacks on civilians, which they feel is un-Islamic, and the overall conduct of the war," the diplomat said.

Both noted that last February, Iran allowed attacks on civilians to peter out and shortly afterwards launched a major offensive against Iraqi forces near Basra, a major Iraqi port city.

Arab states have been trying to dispel any notion they are on the edge of a regional war.

Bahrain's information minister, Tariz al-Moayyed sharply criticized foreign reporters who cover the war from his country and convey the notion that Bahrain is "in the front line of this war." Bahrain, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates have cut back on the number of foreign reporters allowed in their countries.

Although Saudi F-15s shot down at least one Iranian F-4 Phantom jet that entered the kingdom's airspace, the Saudis have tried to play down the action.

The Saudi government has also agreed to allow 150,000 Iranians to make the pilgrimage to Mecca in August. Last year some 103,000 Iranians were allowed to visit Mecca, and the increase was seen by Western diplomats here as a goodwill gesture by the Saudis to Iran.

Western diplomats and some Emirates' officials say the Arabs' caution reflects differences within the Gulf Council on strategy toward Iran as well as a broad feeling that a wider conflict would serve no useful purpose.

Some Gulf countries, particularly the Emirates, maintain close economic ties with Iran, a large commercial market much closer geographically than Iraq.

Saudi Arabia, the largest and militarily strongest member of the council, considers itself the guardian of Islamic shrines and leader of the Islamic world. Although the Saudis have shown willingness to defend their territory, diplomats say the Saudis are reluctant to be seen as provoking conflict with another Islamic state, even Iran.

Iran is considered a Persian, not an Arabic nation.

Kuwait, the Gulf state believed most vulnerable to a wider conflict because it is closer to the war action, has denounced Iran for prolonging the war and has begun mock air raid drills to increase civilian preparedness.

The Kuwaitis have requested U.S. ground to air missiles and are considering drafting women into the armed forces.

"These differences are exactly why the GCC might fail through lack of determination," said one Western diplomat, who refused to be identified because of his embassy's rules.

Another diplomat said he thought the Arabs would stand up to Iran if the Iranians launched an all-out attack on one of them. But short of that, he felt differences among them would make it difficult to devise a common strategy for protecting tankers or taking other measures.

"These are small states with small military capabilities," he said. "GCC unity is a difficult concept, certainly militarily. No one wants a confrontation with Iran," he said.

Soviet-Bloc Blames U.S. For 'Threat'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet-led economic bloc wrapped up a three-day summit with an agreement to drop an 8-year-old oil pricing system — an apparent concession to East European nations — and an attack on the United States.

Communist Party leader Konstantin U. Chernenko closed the meeting of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance on Thursday by accusing the United States and its allies of locking the Kremlin into "a dangerous test of strength."

Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin, speaking at a news conference, said the summit "expressed profound concern over the enhanced threat to peace and the serious heightening of international tension due to the confrontational policy pursued by aggressive imperialist circles, above all the United States."

Zamyatin said the Soviet Union approves in principle of holding a U.S.-Soviet summit, but only if such a meeting is well prepared and there is the possibility of achieving tangible results.

President Reagan has said in the past he would not want a summit unless there was a reasonable chance of success and unless there was a specific agenda. But he said Thursday night he was willing to meet with Chernenko "any time" and said he would not insist on "a preconstructed meeting."

The Comecon summit, which included the Soviet Union's six East bloc allies plus Mongolia and Vietnam, ended with a statement saying the West was responsible for the world's economic troubles.

Personal Task

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A judge says he will personally supervise the three years' probation of two Vietnam veterans who pleaded guilty to torching a small Buddhist temple while on a weekend pass from a Veterans Administration hospital.

Donald E. Taylor, 37, and Roland F. Voudren, 33, faced a possible maximum sentence of 15 years in prison at Wednesday's sentencing, but the prosecutor had asked Superior Court Judge Charles Alberti instead to order additional treatment for combat-related mental problems.

COCKTAIL — A molotov cocktail explodes near the entrance of a cafe in Paris Thursday night during a demonstration by about 3,000 people against a political meeting led by extreme rightist Jean-Marie Le Pen.

Police are shown running from the blast, which occurred while officers were trying to disperse about 200 demonstrators who showed up wearing helmets and protective clothing. (AP Laserphoto)

Trailer Rigs Hijacked

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival militiamen hijacked 19 semitrailer trucks traveling between the Christian and Moslem sectors of the Lebanese capital during the morning rush hour today, prompting officials to briefly close the only crossing.

The drivers were released unharmed, but the six-wheel trucks carrying fuel and food remained in the hands of the militias, which may have commandeered them for transportation of arms and ammunition, police said.

There was no shooting, but police and French truce observers shut down the Museum Crossing to all motorists and pedestrians as a precaution against a possible breakout of fighting.

A security committee representing the principal warring militias and the Lebanese army intervened and arranged for the reopening of the crossing at 8 a.m. Cars and pedestrians began passing both ways but not trucks, police said.

One civilian was killed and six were wounded overnight in sporadic exchanges of gunfire and rocket-propelled grenades in the bomb-ravaged downtown commercial district and in the southern outskirts of the city, police said.

U.S. Embassy spokesman John Stewart said five Lebanese employees of the embassy were briefly detained on Thursday when militiamen stopped them at a checkpoint in west Beirut. Four were allowed to go on almost immediately, he said, but Daoud Khalaf was held for about an hour before being set free.

Fund Unveils Ad Drive For Helms

RALEIGH (AP) — The Fund for a Conservative Majority today unveiled a $1 million advertising campaign on behalf of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms that features veteran Congressman James Broyhill, R-N.C. Fund Chairman Robert Heckman said the independent expenditure amounts to 15 percent of the political action committee's $6.5 million budget. He said the group also plans to spend $3 million to help President Reagan's re-election efforts nationwide. Helms' bid for a third term is being challenged by Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat. Within hours of the announcement of the Helms' ad campaign, Hunt's campaign co-director Gary Pearce charged that the fund is part of a network of "right-wing political hit squads" and warned that he would closely monitor its efforts in North Carolina. Heckman and Broyhill said the ad campaign would focus on Helms' accomplishments in the U.S. Senate. "Our efforts will be positive; they will not be negative," Broyhill said today at the first of a series of news conferences across the state. "We are convinced that the overwhelming majority of voters of North Carolina support the principles which Sen. Helms displays and stands for in the United States Senate." In the advertisement airing today in four major media markets, Broyhill praises Helms for having courage to stand up for his beliefs in the Senate. Broyhill said the ad campaign's theme will be: "Jesse Helms is honestly outspoken." But Pearce charged that the fund has a history of conducting negative campaigns in other states and said the ad shown today "is the proverbial wolf in sheep's clothing." "They come into a state where they have no roots, and, in fact, no real interest," Pearce said at a news conference. "Their goal is to help candidates who subscribe to their extremist philosophy. They hit, and they run." Pearce also questioned whether the fund really is independent of the Helms' organization because Heckman also leads the Friends of Jesse Helms. Broyhill said Helms' re-election would send the signal that "North Carolinians are capable of seeing through the partisan rhetoric and the often vicious and personal attacks that have occurred against our great senator in recent times." Heckman said the independent expenditure shows support for Helms from voters across the nation.

County Board Starts Work On '85 Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
County Commissioners made few changes in their preliminary review of the proposed 1984-85 Pitt County budget as recommended by County Manager Reginald Gray. Gray, in his budget message to the board earlier this week, recommended a 4.5 cents per $100 valuation tax rate increase for the coming year. Gray's budget message said the 18 new positions recommended and proposed pay hikes for county workers (costing some $719,000) and school employees (an estimated $1.1 million) accounted for the largest part of the increase called for in the coming year. Wednesday, board members reviewed most expenditures in the general fund, which if given final approval, will amount to some $19.78 million in 1984-85. Total general fund appropriations this year total $17.48 million while requests for the coming year amounted to $23.24 million. Major general fund areas reviewed Wednesday and given tentative approval include: administration $672,300 ($689,400 this year); elections $108,900 ($80,192 this year); finance office $196,000 ($198,600 this year); tax supervisor $283,900 ($261,700 this year); tax collector $110,600 ($115,400 this year); planning and engineering $55,176 ($38,481 this year); buildings and grounds $508,000 ($479,500 this year); sheriff's department $947,700, including nine new deputies and 7 additional vehicles ($795,000 this year); jail $283,700, including two new jailers and new kitchen equipment ($241,900 this year); and communications center $118,700, with two new dispatchers ($94,590 this year). Other major areas reviewed Wednesday included: fire marshal $222,500, including an 8.9 percent increase in contributions to rural fire departments ($197,800 this year); rescue service $89,300 including an 8.9 percent increase in contributions to volunteer rescue squads ($102,900 this year); data processing $663,900 ($632,900 this year); and housekeeping service $235,800 ($230,200 this year). The board scheduled another budget workshop session for Friday afternoon, and a public hearing on the budget is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday.

Martin General Gets County Aid

WILLIAMSTON — Appropriations totaling $245,533 to provide assistance to Martin General Hospital, all of which must come out of county fund surplus accounts, were approved by the Martin County Board of Commissioners on Wednesday night. The board voted to fund the money for the payment of the pension plan and Medicare-Medicaid debt at Martin General Hospital. Some concerns were expressed by board members over the fast dwindling county fund surplus which will be paid this month and not be figured as budget items for the coming year. Phil Gibb, division vice president for the Hospital Corporation of America (HCA), which has been operating Martin General since May 1, explained the pressing financial needs of the hospital. He requested $130,000 for payment of the pension plan of the hospital, and also pointed out that $115,533 was owed by the hospital as a result of overpayments from federal agencies adjusted through a cost report. Gibb, along with Roy Vincent, current administrator at Martin General and Rick Miller, current controller at the hospital, told the board that HCA is budgeting for the coming year on a "worst case scenario." In addition to the $245,000 immediate cash need request approved by commissioners, Gibb and HCA requested that the county budget $225,000 for the hospital in the 1984-85 budget. This is the same figure budgeted for the facility in the current fiscal year ending June 30. It was also requested that the county either repair or replace the hospital ambulance. A recommendation was made by HCA that the ambulance be replaced with a van type ambulance which will cost about $23,000.

Bush Rescues MX With Tie-Breaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The MX missile has survived another close call in Congress as Vice President George Bush cast a rare, tie-breaking vote to give the Reagan administration's prized nuclear weapon its narrowest victory yet.

Bush broke a 49-48 tie late Thursday in the Republican-controlled Senate, casting the ballot that provided a 49-48 defeat of an effort to ban 1985 production of 21 of the 10-warhead weapons.

His vote capped eight hours of MX debate, during which President Reagan lobbied by telephone for the weapon.

Shortly before the vote, Reagan appealed in his nationally televised news conference for Congress to "support our strategic modernization program to keep America strong and convince the Soviets it is in their best interest to choose the course of negotiation, not confrontation."

Earlier in the day, the Senate had voted 55-41 to kill a proposal that would have eliminated all money for the MX. That measure was more sweeping than the amendment on which Bush voted.

The votes came as the Senate worked into the early morning hours today on a bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $291 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

In other votes, the Senate: —Voted down, 55-43, an attempt to limit the Pentagon increase next year to 5 percent, rather than the 7 percent hike now in the measure.

—Killed on a 49-45 vote an amendment aimed at providing a 5.5 percent pay hike for the 2.1 million men in uniform. Reagan proposed a 5.5 percent hike, but the Armed Services Committee trimmed it to 4 percent.

Bush, who only votes in case of a tie, entered the chamber as the MX debate wound down and it became clear the effort by Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, might pass.

The Senate being equally divided, the vice president casts his vote in the affirmative and the amendment fails, Bush said to the hushed chamber.

It was only the third time since Reagan took office that Bush had voted. His two earlier ballots were in favor of nerve gas, programs later killed by Congress. Bush last voted on Nov. 8, 1983.

Ten Republicans joined 38 Democrats in voting against the MX while five Democrats voted with the 44 Republicans, including Bush, to sustain the missile.

Reagan proposes to build 100 MX weapons, which he calls "Peacekeeper." He wanted 40 MX missiles in 1985 to go along with the 21 Congress approved last year, but the Senate Armed Services Committee approved only 21.

The House has approved 15 missiles, conditional on the Soviets returning to the stalled arms talks. Differences between the two chambers will be worked out later in a House-Senate conference committee.

Chiles proposed a speedup in development of the single-warhead "midgetman" missile which the Pentagon has supported as a follow-up to the MX. He said his proposal would ban 1985 production of the weapon, but would retain research money and permit some flight tests.

Sen. Bennet Johnston, D-La., said, "this allows us to have our cake and eat it too. We have a bargaining chip without buying it. We'll have the demonstrated ability to build" the weapon if the Soviets continue to boycott arms limitation efforts.

During the MX debate, Democratic opponents again argued — as they have in MX fights the past two years — that it makes no sense to put the MX into Minuteman silos because that would make the new missiles just as vulnerable to a Soviet first strike as are the Minuteman weapons.

The MX "is a missile without a mission, a weapon without a home, and a bargaining chip without a negotiating table," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said the MX "decreases stability in the nuclear balance" and will not force the Soviets to seriously negotiate.

But Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said, "we must not reward the Soviet Union for its intransigence" in walking out of the arms talks.

Before the MX debate, the Senate turned back the effort by Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., to cut an unspecified $5.3 billion from the package and limit the Pentagon to a 5 percent hike.

Noting the measure calls for an increase of more than 7 percent, Dixon asked, "how can we justify that while education programs are dying, the hungry are still hungry, and farmers are going bankrupt?"

But Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., decried the proposal as "political poppycock" and said it would take a "meat ax approach" to the Pentagon budget.

Tropical Forest Losses Decried

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tropical forests are disappearing fast along with products important to both the poor countries in which they exist and rich nations like the United States, experts told Congress.

"Each year ... an area of tropical forests the size of my home state of Pennsylvania is cleared while only one-tenth that much is replanted," Democratic Rep. Gus Yatron said

Thursday at a hearing of a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee he chairs.

Pennsylvania has an area of 45,333 square miles.

"The countries worst off are those that have little forest, a comparatively large population and a rapid rate of deforestation," one witness said in an interview before the hearing. He is Bruce A. Ross-Sheriff, project director in the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

He cited El Salvador and Haiti where the loss of forest is 3.2 percent and 3.8 percent annually. Haiti, he said, has little forest left.

Ross-Sheriff told the hearing that there are tropical forests in 76 countries, most of them poor.

"These poor countries contain about half the world's population and have the world's highest population growth rates," he said.

People in poor countries cut down trees to use for fuel. Loss of the forest brings massive soil erosion, damage to both fresh and coastal waters, loss of plant and animal species and possibly harmful changes in the world's climate, Ross-Sheriff said.

A report by his office earlier this year noted that the United States not only gives aid to these countries, but buys much of their goods — including about $430 million a year worth of tropical woods, $100 million worth of other tropical forest products including cinnamon, cardamom and citronella, and — in 1977 — 34,000 apes, monkeys and other animals for drug safety tests and production.

Other points in the report: "... Reservoirs used to operate the Panama Canal are rapidly filling with silt, as are hydroelectric reservoirs in Pakistan, Thailand, the Philippines, Indonesia and many other nations.

"The flow of refugees from Haiti to Florida is sometimes cited as an example of the economic and social disruption caused, in part, by tropical deforestation."

"Tropical forests offer potential resources for plant breeding. ... A Peruvian species, for example, contributed 'ripe rot' resistance to American pepper plants and a wild melon in India was the source of resistance to powdery mildew that threatened destruction of California's melon crop."

China Arms Sale Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has decided in principle on the first sale of U.S. weapons and military technology to China since the communists took over the Chinese government in 1949.

At meetings this week, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger worked out an agreement with his Chinese counterpart, Zhang Aiping, to sell China Hawk air defense missiles, TOW anti-tank missiles, improved artillery and some military technology, Pentagon sources said Thursday.

Ultimately, these sources said, the Chinese are expected to produce TOW missiles in their own plants, perhaps under some form of license.

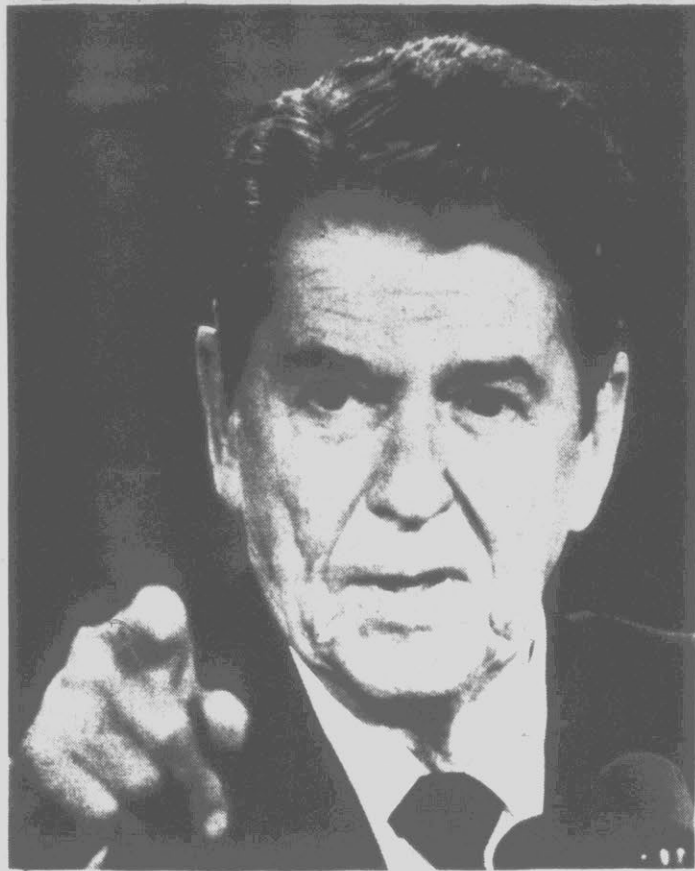

No formal agreement was signed before Zhang, after three days of talks here, headed for a tour of some American military bases and defense production plants on a visit that is due to end June 23. Zhang, the first defense minister of the People's Republic of China to visit the United States, will travel to Canada after his U.S. tour.

During their meetings, both sides expressed pleasure at what they called the "success" of the talks.

A Defense Department statement spoke of "the possibility of agreements being reached in the future." Officials said this was a reference to expected formal signings to carry out the agreements reached in principle.

There were indications, however, that a snag had developed in a drive to forge a new era of U.S.-China relations on another front.

A source said Thursday night that the Reagan administration has delayed sending to Congress a treaty to sell nuclear technology to China.

Reagan Says 'Ready To Talk'

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, softening his tone toward the Kremlin, says he's opening the door to a possible summit with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko, while acknowledging he's not quite ready to extend an invitation.

"The door is open," the president declared at a nationally broadcast news conference dominated by U.S.-Soviet relations. "And every once in a while, we're standing in the doorway, seeing if anyone's coming up the steps."

But when asked if his remarks could be taken as an invitation to his Soviet counterpart, the president replied: "We haven't reached that point yet."

Reagan also said he hasn't given "a flat no" to Chernenko's suggestion that the superpowers negotiate a ban on anti-satellite and other space weapons. "We're studying that whole situation," he said.

At the 25th news conference of his presidency Thursday night, Reagan also said:

"I would look forward to a debate" with his Democratic opponent during the fall election campaign.

—His campaign never received the briefing book prepared for President Jimmy Carter before their political debate during the 1980 election campaign. Although copies of a "Presidential Debate Briefing Book" were found in the files of at least two campaign aides, Reagan said "the so-called debate briefing book of the Carter team never has been in our possession ... all that was uncovered were some position papers...."

—He'll sign legislation raising taxes only if he has assurance that legislation cutting government spending was on its way.

—He supports a House-passed bill imposing fines on employers who hire illegal aliens because it will help America regain control of its borders. But he said care had to be taken to avoid discrimination by employers who don't want to bother to determine "whether an individual is legal or not...."

—If re-elected in November, he intends to serve all four years of a second term. "What the devil would a young fellow like me do if I quit the job," asked Reagan, who is 73.

—He's not willing to say yet whether he'd support changing the federal civil rights laws to prohibit job discrimination against homosexuals.

—There's been "no discrimination of any kind in this administration" and he's done more for minorities than any other White House occupant.

—The Republican Party platform should call for military parity with the Soviet Union, not superiority, which would be "counterproductive."

The questions at the East Room news conference repeatedly came back to the state of relations between the superpowers and what plans Reagan had to improve them.

An administration official, asked to interpret the president's statements on a summit, replied there was a "difference in tone, but not in policy, and that difference in tone is very significant because he's come a long way."

Reagan sounded more receptive to the idea of a summit with Chernenko, but he refused despite repeated questioning to spell out under what conditions he would agree to such a meeting. Nor did he say he was ready to take the initiative on setting up a summit.

And although he mentioned that the United States was engaged in "quiet diplomacy" with the Russians on a number of matters, a White House official, who spoke on the condition that he remain anonymous, said Reagan was not trying to claim that "he has a secret plan for a summit ... because I don't think that's the case."

The president never strayed from his long-held view that he would participate in a summit only if it was carefully prepared and held a reasonable chance for success. But neither did he stress those preconditions.

Asked whether Reagan had abandoned that position, the official responded: "He knows the perils of going to a summit without some planning, but I am sure from his tone he did not mean to be doctrinaire and put up obstacles to a summit."

Several times, Reagan spoke positively about his willingness to talk with Chernenko. At one point, the president said, "If they're ready to talk, we are, too."

Reagan Denies Staff Ever Got Carter Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, ignoring evidence produced by his own aides, says his campaign never received the briefing book prepared for President Jimmy Carter before Carter faced Reagan in a political debate before the 1980 election.

"I think there is one thing that ought to be cleared up about this whole case," Reagan told reporters during his news conference Thursday night. "Now, it was established quite a while ago that the so-called 'debate briefing book' (of) the Carter team never has been in our possession, that all that was uncovered were some position papers, the type of things that were issues during the campaign.

"And all of it had been out in the open and made public as the campaign went on, before the debate. But the briefing book, if you will remember, the briefing book, it was pointed out, finally someone located on the other side. And there it was, and no one on this side ever saw it, nor was it ever in our hands."

However, according to FBI reports and congressional documents released following lengthy investigations of the case, copies of the "Presidential Debate Briefing Book: Foreign Policy and National Security" prepared for Carter were found in the files of at least two Reagan campaign aides.

The House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee reported that Reagan campaign aides David R. Gergen and Frank Hodsoll "each produced from their files copies of the Carter foreign policy 'big book'."

That 250-page book was a basic document in Carter's preparation for his Oct. 28, 1980, debate with Reagan in Cleveland. A 40-page condensation of what investigators called the "big book" also was prepared and sent to Carter.

The subcommittee report included a copy of the 250-page briefing book, and FBI reports were attached showing the copies bore Hodsoll's and Gergen's fingerprints.

The materials were not simply public "position papers," as Reagan described them. They included suggested statements by Carter during the debate, themes he should emphasize and specific attacks to be made on Reagan.

Reagan was asked about continuing controversy over the issue, rekindled recently by a federal judge's ruling that the Justice Department should seek appointment of a special prosecutor in the case.

Reagan said if a special prosecutor is named — a step the Justice Department opposes — he will order full cooperation with the investigation.

But he said he regards contradictions in his aides' accounts of the matter understandable and dismissed the case as having been "investigated thoroughly."

Senators Seek Tougher Laws On DWI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators are trying to toughen the attack on drunken motorists by threatening to cut federal highway funds for states that don't set jail terms and loss of driving privileges for anyone convicted of driving while intoxicated.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, Jr., R-Conn., said Thursday he would push such a proposal as an amendment to a bill aimed at getting all states to make 21 the legal age for buying alcoholic beverages.

"It isn't fair to dump all the blame on the kids," said Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., explaining in a floor speech why he was supporting efforts to broaden the legislation.

As sent to the Senate floor, the proposal by Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., would have withheld a portion of federal road money from states that did not set a minimum drinking age of 21.

Supporters of the Lautenberg measure, similar to a bill that has passed the House, say it is intended partly to discourage teen-agers from driving across state borders to buy alcoholic beverages they are forbidden to purchase at home because of tighter age restrictions.

The Lautenberg bill would give states two years to raise their minimum drinking age to 21. Failure to do so would result in withholding of 5 percent of their federal highway funds in the third year and 10 percent in the fourth year. The states would receive withheld funds retroactively when they complied.

Twenty-two states specify 21 as the legal drinking age, with Rhode Island's law taking effect next month and Arizona's next January. Age restrictions vary in other states. In three — Hawaii, Louisiana and Vermont — the limit is 18.

After months of disagreement over the best way to end the erratic pattern of state drinking-age laws, key senators agreed to back Lautenberg's bill when the Reagan administration reversed itself Wednesday and endorsed the highway funds withholding provision.

Education Officials Label 202 Schools 'Best In Nation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell says a "can-do attitude" pervades the 202 secondary schools that his department has singled out as some of the best in the nation.

"Many of these schools have a student population that's not the easiest to educate," Bell told a news conference Thursday. "There are some high-income, suburban-area schools here. But we looked for schools that have faced some problems, some real tough challenges, and have been able to surmount them."

(North Carolina schools chosen by Bell's department as being among the best in the nation were Manteo High School and Needham Houghton High School in Raleigh.)

Bell started the Secondary School Recognition program last year, using judges from outside the government to choose winners from schools nominated by state school superintendents.

He said he has been surprised at the "enormous" interest sparked by the program among members of Congress and real estate agents, as well as educators.

Realtors have been calling his department saying that parents want to buy homes located in an exemplary school's district, Bell said.

The schools that won last year were not eligible to repeat. Bell said the winners were distinguished by "their ability to motivate students."

"There's a considerable amount of enthusiasm and a can-do attitude there," said Bell. Also, despite "very rigorous standards," he said, the schools do not have very high dropout rates.

The winning schools are from 44 states and the District of Columbia, plus three Defense Department schools in West Germany for military families.

They were chosen from 555 schools nominated by school superintendents in every state except Maryland and New Jersey. They will get flags and plaques at ceremonies in Washington this fall.

The department said Hawaii was eliminated from the competition because the state was not complying with federal civil rights guidelines on educating the handicapped. The dispute involves access to public schools for children with orthopedic handicaps, the department said.

Three other states, Montana, South Dakota and Tennessee, submitted entries but had no winners.

The Council for American Private Education, which held a separate competition for private schools under Bell's auspices with federal funds, will name its winners Monday.

In selecting the winners, judges rated the schools on what the Education Department called 14 "attributes of successful schools."

They were: clear academic goals, high expectations, order and discipline, rewards and incentives for students, regular and frequent monitoring of student progress, opportunities for student responsibility and participation, teacher "efficacy," rewards and incentives for teachers, concentration on academic learning time, positive school climate, administrative leadership, well-articulated curriculum, evaluation for instructional improvement and community support.

The experts also looked at how students performed on achievement and minimum competency tests, their success after graduation, student and teacher attendance rates, rates of student suspensions, and awards for students and teachers.

Vera M. White, principal of Jefferson Junior High School in Washington, D.C., one of last year's winners, told reporters, "It's made it just great to be a principal. It's almost like dying and going to principals' heaven."

Robert A. Hanley, principal of T.C. Williams High School in Alexandria, Va., which also won last year, said, "The major problem has been visitors." He said his pupil dropout rate has fallen from 7 percent to 4 percent.

Bell also announced new roles for a network of research laboratories and centers that the National Institute of Education is putting up for competitive bidding for the first time.

The institute, an arm of the Education Department, expects to award grants totaling $150 million over five years to 21 labs and centers — four more than the 17 it now operates.

On another topic, Bell said he supports a bill that would give student religious groups access to public school facilities. The House defeated such a proposal May 15.

"We hadn't ought to prohibit any group that wants to meet for a wholesome purpose," Bell said. The "young Baptists" should be able to meet "just as we'd permit the young Republicans or the young Democrats — I guess even the young communists could have an opportunity," he said.

46 Years Later, Man Apologizes

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Arthur H. Dauer says he has finally ended 46 years of guilt by apologizing in a newspaper ad for "the worst thing I've ever done" — falsely accusing a 6-year-old classmate of stealing a penny's worth of peanut butter and crackers in 1938.

"Viola, I am sorry," begins the $70 advertisement placed by Dauer, 51, who still remembers how his "very quiet, very meek" classmate didn't return to school for several days after he wrongly named her as the thief.

"I've carried a guilt feeling about this for many years," said Dauer, who left Trenton after graduating from high school in 1950 and now lives in Jupiter, Fla.

"I've thought about it many times since then," the stockbroker said. "I just wanted to get something off my mind and my conscience."

Viola's vindication comes in an ad prepared for today's editions of The Trenton Times. It reads: "In the McClellan School in East Trenton in the school year 1937-38, we were in Miss Cunningham's first-grade class. I was forced to accuse you of stealing a 1-cent peanut butter and saltine sandwich. I did not think you were guilty — and I have always been sorry. Arthur H. Dauer."

Dauer said he was "pressured" into accusing Viola, although he was certain the dark-haired girl had not eaten the sandwich. He refused to say who pressured him into accusing the girl, and he refused to provide Viola's full name, although he still remembers it.

"I remember the incident because she was a little girl and her feelings were hurt," Dauer said Thursday. "I can see her face in front of my eyes like it was yesterday."

Dauer's mother, Gertrude, who owned a grocery store near the school at the time, said Thursday that she had given her son the crackers and peanut butter and he had given them to the teacher.

After they were found to be missing, her son was asked by the teacher to smell the breath of each of his classmates to see if he could determine if they had been eaten, said Mrs. Dauer, who still lives in Trenton.

Dauer said he couldn't remember the teacher's first name, and he didn't know whether Viola was still in the Trenton area or even still living.

The brief incident as a 6-year-old was "the worst thing I've ever done," Dauer said. And he added that the experience affected his life because he tried never to repeat it.

"I always went out of my way to do the right thing," he said. "I can go anywhere in the world, and no one can say I cheated them or did anything wrong to them."

While visiting his mother here this week, Dauer, who is married and has four children, decided to relieve his conscience.

"There are things you can do something about and things you can't," he said. "It's something I thought about for a very long time. It is something I've been meaning to do. I don't expect Viola to see it."

"I feel 100 percent better," he said. "I made amends at least to my own conscience. I feel very good about myself now."

Awaits Sentence

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Samuel Brown, convicted of murder and robbery in the bloody 1981 Brink's holdup, will face a maximum of 75 years to life in prison when he is sentenced June 26.

Brown, 43, convicted Thursday, was the last defendant in the bungled $1.6 million heist which was organized by a coalition of radical groups and left a Brink's guard and two police officers dead.

Chemical Blast

SHELTON, Conn. (AP) — Heat and humidity apparently combined to detonate some chemicals a Shelton High School student had stored in his locker for making firecrackers, injuring five students and two teachers, Mayor Eugene

Bope said. The explosion Thursday blew a hole in a wall and destroyed several lockers, authorities said. One student was hospitalized in stable condition; the others were released.

GOOD CATCH — Cynthia Nevers holds 17-month-old Jessica Lynn Gough, whom she caught after the child fell from the porch balcony in the background. Neighbor Sprints To Grab Child Falling Off Balcony

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A 17-month-old girl was safe today following a spectacular rescue by a neighbor who ran across the street and hopped a fence to catch the baby by the arms as she fell from a second-floor balcony.

The neighbor, 27-year-old Cynthia Nevers, is wondering how she'll pay the medical bills for a hand injury requiring 40 stitches suffered while vaulting the chain-link fence.

Mrs. Nevers bolted from her porch when she heard mailman Joseph Carroll yell, "Get the baby! Get the baby!"

The baby, Jessica Lynn Gough, had crawled out an open door and was making its way toward the balcony railing.

"I'm usually not good in emergencies," Mrs. Nevers said Thursday. "I just reacted. Thank God for the mailman."

"If it had been up to me, I probably wouldn't have reached it in time," said Carroll, who saw the child start to crawl under the balcony railing as he walked his mail route Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Nevers ran across the street and leaped "half-over and half-around" the fence, Carroll said. "It must have been adrenalin or something — I've never seen anyone move so fast."

Mrs. Nevers yelled at the child to "sit down. But she just kept crawling and got airborne," she said.

She caught the child by the arms as it plunged toward the sidewalk.

"She didn't even cry until she saw me start to cry. I'm sure if I had smiled and said, 'Wasn't that a fun ride?' the baby would have smiled too," said Mrs. Nevers, the mother of two.

She said she hugged the child, who appeared to be unharmed.

Mrs. Nevers, who needed 40 stitches to mend a hand ripped open by the fence, took the child back upstairs to the babysitter, "who didn't even know she was missing."

Mrs. Nevers has no health insurance to cover emergency-room expenses for the severed tendon in her hand.

"I told the hospital they might get only five bucks a month. But what can they do, take my hand back if I can't pay more?"

Donor's Fall To Be Investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — A welfare mother who generated sympathy and gifts after she donated her 4-year-old son's heart to save another child now faces an investigation of her home life and the circumstances of her son's fatal fall, officials said.

The city Human Resources Administration disclosed Thursday that it was investigating the family life of John Ford, but the agency refused to say whether the fitness of his 38-year-old mother was at issue.

A source familiar with the case told The Associated Press, however, that the HRA had received complaints in recent years that the boy's mother, Dorothy Ford, had left her children unattended.

The source, demanding anonymity, also said Mrs. Ford had refused the assistance of a homemaker, which the city wanted to provide because the woman appeared to be overwhelmed by the job of raising five children.

Mrs. Ford's telephone number was not listed, and she could not be immediately reached for comment about the investigation.

School Board Rejects Claim Of Violence, Keeps Fairy Tale

EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) — Unswayed by a complaint that the fairy tale "The Three Billy Goats Gruff" promotes violence among children, a school board unanimously voted to keep it on school library shelves.

"Something that many of us in the community have been saying is, 'I grew up on that,'" Roger Leonard, chairman of the Eagle Point School Board, said after Thursday night's meeting. "There was a concern that this represented a deterioration of traditionalism."

"I think it is incumbent on the board of directors, the administration and the staff to be concerned about the willingness of people to legislate individual values for everyone," said Superintendent Stephen Miller.

The complaint was brought by Jon D. and Kathleen Corbin of White City, who have a child in White City Elementary School. They did not attend the board meeting.

"The book is extremely destructive and violent in nature," they wrote in their complaint. "It promotes extreme violence, maiming of foes."

They said they would not object to the story if it were presented without references to poking out eyes and tearing off limbs.

The Norwegian fairy tale is about three billy goats that decide to cross a bridge to reach a pasture rich with sweet green grass. They outsmart a troll who lives under the bridge and who threatens to eat them.

The 4-0 vote followed recommendations to retain the book from Miller and a special advisory committee.

"Freedom of expression and what one reads is a family decision and not a decision to be imposed by a group," Miller told the board.

Eagle Point is a town of 2,900 people on the banks of the Little Butte River in southern Oregon. The school district includes neighboring White City, Shady Cove and Trail.

Amy VanSickle, a member of the special committee that reviewed the book, said it offered valuable lessons to children.

"We all gave a lot of thought to censorship in general and this book in particular," she told the board.

The Corbins have said they still hope to have the book out of the school library by fall, Miller said after the meeting. The Corbins have an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached.

Miller said he had received letters in support of the fairy tale from Rhode Island, Idaho, Washington state and Illinois.

Rains Bring Flooding

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms packing heavy rains, tornadoes and hurricane-force winds today cast a drenching shadow from California to Florida, forcing more than 700 people from their homes in Nebraska and Iowa as rivers crested up to 15 feet above their banks.

Seven tornadoes were reported late Thursday around the nation — two in Texas and one each in Iowa, Nebraska, Louisiana, North Carolina and Wyoming — but no damage or injuries were reported.

In the East, meanwhile, 11 high school students in Mullica Township, N.J., were briefly hospitalized Thursday night after being overcome by a stifling heat wave blamed for the deaths of at least 14 people in the past week.

While the East can expect a return to "normal" early-summer temperatures, the Midwest and Plains will be hammered by more heavy thunderstorms and tornadoes in the next few days, said Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Railroad Dispatcher Suspended After Collision Of Coal Trains

MOTLEY, Minn. (AP) — A Burlington Northern railroad dispatcher on duty when two coal trains collided, killing two crewmen and leaving a third missing and feared dead, has been suspended without pay while the accident is investigated.

"Our preliminary investigation has indicated a dispatcher's error," company spokesman Al Wiegold said Thursday, declining to identify the suspended dispatcher. "Neither train was given an order to indicate they would be meeting."

Two bodies had been removed from the wreckage late Thursday when company officials announced they would make no further statements until today and that no names would be released until all bodies had been recovered.

Wiegold said it was not unusual to move trains toward each other on the same track, but in this instance it appeared neither engineer knew the other train was coming.

The trains were supposed to meet in Staples, where one was supposed to pull onto a siding and let the other pass, said company spokesman Brian Sweeney.

It was the third fatal accident involving Burlington Northern trains since April. Drugs and alcohol were linked to the other accidents, in which seven people died, but a union spokesman said such was not the case this time.

"Both of the engineers on these trains are sober men. Neither one of them were drinkers, neither one of them drug users, both hard-working, honest railroad men," said John Fisher of the United Transportation Union.

Fisher said the accident more likely was the fault of dispatchers in Minneapolis who he said are overworked and unfamiliar with all the routes.

The railroad consolidated its dispatching facilities in February, Sweeney said. Operations in Superior, Wis., and Minot and Fargo, N.D., were brought to Minneapolis, but not all dispatchers made the move.

Sweeney acknowledged that Burlington Northern had trained some new dispatchers, but refused to say if the suspended dispatcher was new on the job.

In Thursday's crash, a full coal train of 110 cars was heading east to Superior to deliver coal to Great Lakes ports, and an empty 80-car train was headed west, apparently to coal fields in Montana or Wyoming, when they collided in the heavily forested area 140 miles north of Minneapolis.

Fifty cars were derailed in the 1 a.m. collision, which company Vice President Don Scott called "the worst train accident I've ever seen." He said one train was going 45 mph and the other 49 mph. The speed limit on the track is 49 mph.

Each train carried a crew of four, said Sweeney, two in the engine and two in the caboose.

Trustees To Repay $6.7 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trustees of the Teamsters union's Central States pension and health and welfare funds have agreed to repay $6.7 million to the funds to settle government suits charging abuse of employee benefit assets.

The repayment was the largest of its kind ever achieved by the Labor Department, which enforces a federal law governing the handling of private business pension and other employee benefit plans.

The settlement, announced Thursday by Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, did not end the government's legal assault on the union's benefit plans. But it swelled to $11.1 million the amount of money recovered so far.

Still under negotiation is a possible settlement of longstanding government suits against past trustees of the Teamsters pension fund.

Donovan said a $2 million repayment offer by these former pension trustees amounts to "a pittance" compared to the $73 million the government claims was squandered through alleged mismanagement and other abuses.

Teamsters president Jackie Presser is among the former pension fund trustees involved in the $2 million settlement offer, one Labor Department official confirmed on the grounds he remain anonymous.

Vermont Nuclear Plant Alerted

VERNON, Vt. (AP) — An alert was issued at the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant today after a radioactive monitoring device became stuck outside its protective shielding, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said.

There was no danger to people outside the plant, but authorities were trying to determine if any workers were exposed to the probe, used to monitor radiation, said state Public Service Department Commissioner Richard Saudek.

"It's a danger to anybody who is right there, but it's not a danger to people away from the immediate area," said Saudek.

NRC spokesman Brian Norris said from the agency's regional headquarters in King of Prussia, Pa., that there were no known overexposures to workers.

The alert, the second-lowest of the four emergency action levels established by the federal government, was issued at 9:20 a.m., said a Vermont Yankee spokeswoman.

The plant continued to operate at 92 percent of full power, said Norris. He said plant operators planned to shut the unit down this afternoon, as previously scheduled, for regular maintenance.

"It does not involve the reactor. It's just a matter of getting the probe back into its shielding," said Norris. "It's an engineering problem. We don't think there's a potential for it to deteriorate further."

Norris said that the in-core probing device got stuck on its way back to its protective shielding compartment, "creating a high radiation area inside the containment building."

The 514-megawatt unit began commercial operation in 1972 and is owned by the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corp., a consortium of New England utilities.

council Thursday night were the Rev. William Hadden and Judy Greene.

Guy B. Mayo's request to rezone acreage located directly across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital from medical arts to neighborhood commercial and Collice C. Moore's request to zone two tracts of land located on the southwestern corner of N.C. 43 and SR 1204 to high density residential and residential/agricultural were continued until the council's July meeting.

In a separate blanket agreement, the council approved four capital improvement projects that will be funded in part by bond proceeds, the Utilities Commission transfer, interest on investments, and a general fund transfer. Projects and their costs include: the purchase of a site on Fifth Street on which the city will build a new fire-rescue substation (the lot is adjacent to the Greenville school system's administrative building), $80,000; construction of an addition to Sheppard Memorial Library, $163,000; street improvements, $612,700; and the purchase of cemetery land, $132,000. The council awarded bids on the library and street resurfacing projects and approved the purchase of traffic control equipment to be used at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road.

Council members also approved the following items:

•An ordinance prohibiting parking on a segment of Wilson Street.

•An amendment of the animal control ordinance allowing animals to be proclaimed public nuisances.

•A request by William H. Clark to rezone 12 acres on the south side of Red Banks Extension to allow for office and institutional, high density residential, and single-family residential.

•Annexation of a 2.7-acre area known as Quail Ridge Subdivision located off Quail Ridge Road.

•A zoning ordinance amendment governing locations of restaurants.

•New sign definitions and regulations under the zoning ordinance.

•An ordinance authorizing placement of stop signs at eight Greenville intersections.

•Scheduling of a public hearing on an application for a limousine franchise.

•The sale of disposal lots in the Southside project to John Bryant Venters.

each of the previous two months.

—Clothing prices rose 0.7 percent and non-prescription drugs were up 0.9 percent while household appliances prices moved ahead 0.1 percent.

The two months of steady overall prices provided the best wholesale inflation performance since prices declined 0.1 percent and then were flat in March and April 1983.

If May's rate were repeated for 12 straight months, it would result in a 0.4 percent decline for that year, a price decrease too small to be reflected in the rounded-off calculation for last month.

The actual increase for the last 12 months was 2.6 percent.

In May, the department's index stood at 291.5, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.15 last month.

All of the figures were adjusted to discount for normal seasonal variations.

In advance of today's report, private analysts commented that continuing food price declines would hold down prices overall in coming months.

Donald Ratajczak, director of Georgia State University's Economic Forecasting Project in Atlanta, said he expected lower prices for a wide range of foods, including vegetables, eggs, beef, fish and pork.

Michael K. Evans, president of Evans Economics in Washington, said, "Inflationary pressures continue to diminish."

Ratajczak said he saw bigger increases ahead in some areas.

Prices have been rising rapidly for crude materials that will later be turned into finished items for sale to retailers, he said.

"These especially sensitive prices suggest that industrial demand for commodities continues to intensify," he said. "When food prices again strengthen, as expected in the summer, prices for finished goods could be increasing at more than a 6 percent annual rate."

Still, he said in a recent report, "the weakness in food inflation will continue to restrain both consumer prices and the PPI."

Evans mentioned "continued price gains in industries with high capacity utilization rates — paper, building materials and rubber and plastics."

The wholesale price index measures month-to-month changes in prices paid to producers for food, energy products and other items. The prices American consumers actually pay — usually to retailers — are measured by the Consumer Price Index. The producer price measure often gives a good idea the direction those consumer prices will move.

Michel Hurls Pitt Past Rocky Mount

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Billy Michel lost his bid for a shutout last night in the ninth inning with two away, but still managed to post his second straight American Legion win of the season as Pitt County dumped Rocky Mount, 9-1.

Michel also did his part with the bat, collecting two hits, one of them a double, to drive in three runs. Roger Moyer added a solo homer and Daniel Keel had two hits also.

The big right-hander breezed along until the final few frames when the high heat and humidity began to take its toll. He allowed a total of eight hits, all singles, walked three and struck out 11. Two of the three walks, along with one hit batsman, came in the final two innings, along with two of the hits and the lone Rocky Mount run.

"Billy did get tired," Coach Bruce Rhodes said. "He hadn't pitched in about a week and it got to him there at the end, but he did a great job."

For Pitt County, revenge over Rocky Mount was sweet. In their first meeting earlier this year in Rocky Mount, Post 39 fell before the host team, 15-3. "But we bounced back this time. The guys wanted this one bad," Rhodes said.

"We're still making some mistakes, and we've got a lot of injuries, but we're still working hard."

Pitt County pushed into the lead in the second inning as Moyer cracked the ball out of the park down the right field line for a 1-0 lead.

The third saw Pitt put the contest out of reach in an inning that had a freaky finish to it.

Jackie Conway, Toby Fischer and Doug Coley all walked to open the inning, loading the bases. Eric Woodworth singled to right, scoring Conway for a 2-0 lead. Michel followed with a single to center, driving in Fischer and Coley, with Woodworth scoring when the ball got past the centerfielder. Michel ended up on third on the play.

With one away, Roger Moyer walked and stole second. When the throw by the catcher went past second, Michel trotted home. Daniel Keel walked, and Steve Mills grounded to short, with the throw to second getting Keel.

Rocky Mount's first baseman, however, thought the force was the third out, and headed for the dugout as the relay from second sailed past the unprotected first base. That allowed Moyer to score and Mills to reach. Mills, however, was thrown out as he attempted to go all the way to third, ending the inning.

However, it still served to give Pitt County a 7-0 lead.

Pitt added single runs in the sixth and seventh innings. In the sixth, Fischer singled and stole second. He scored on a double by Michel.

In the seventh, Mills singled and stole up, scoring on a double by Coley.

Rocky Mount threatened in the third, loading the bases on two singles and a walk with two away, but Michel struck out the final batter to end it. Another runner reached second in the sixth after arriving on an error, but died there when a double play, one of two by Pitt, ended the inning.

Finally, in the ninth, the tiring Michel gave up a run. With one down, Todd Goins beat out a slow roller to third and Shelton Grant was hit by a pitch. With two away, Bert Boone singled to center, scoring Goins to spoil the shutout bid.

Goins had two hits to lead the Rocky Mount hitting.

Pitt, in first place in the league standings, climbs to 7-2 with the win, while Rocky Mount sinks to 3-5.

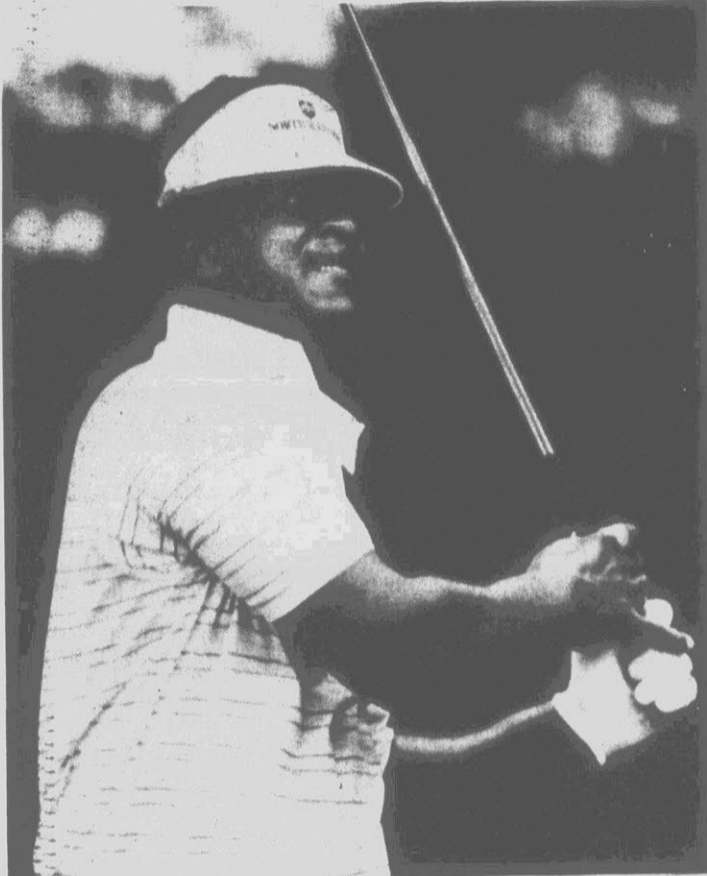

Pitt returns to action tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field, hosting Kinston.

Four Tied After First Round Of Open

Bogey-Bound

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — The monster that was Winged Foot one decade ago was tamed, and Hale Irwin was one of those with the whip.

Returning to the site of the first of his two U.S. Open triumphs, Irwin shot a 2-under-par 68 and tied 1977 Open champion Hubert Green, Jim Thorpe and Mike Donald for the first-round lead Thursday at the 1984 U.S. national championship.

"Winged Foot is not quite the monster it was," Irwin said. But both he and Green warned it could turn tiger again, if cornered.

Ten years ago, at age 29, Irwin captured the Open with a 7-over-par 287. It was called the "Massacre at Winged Foot," as no more than seven golfers could break par for 18 holes in any of the four rounds.

On the first day this time, 11 players broke par-70 on a course that had been made purposely easier than it was 10 years ago.

"The rough is more manageable, and the greens are intentionally slower," said Irwin, who also won the Open in 1979 at Inverness.

Rain that fell Wednesday further slowed the greens and they might stay that way a while longer after a thunderstorm Thursday evening which caused a 45-minute halt in play. The delay forced six players in the 156-man field to finish the first round today. Temperatures were in the mid-80s with a cooling, clearing trend predicted for today.

The large group at 69, one shot back, included Spain's Seve Ballesteros, David Canipe, Lennie Clements, Fred Couples, Curtis Strange, Mick Soli and U.S. amateur champion Jay Sigel.

Unlike most of the golfers who competed over this 6,930-yard, par-70 west course at the Winged Foot Golf Club, Irwin found the back-nine easier than the front. He shot par-35 on the front and 2-under 33 on the back with birdies at No. 11 and No. 17, a 444-yard par-4 where he holed a 60-foot bunker shot.

Green, a non-winner on the PGA Tour since 1981, shot 33-35, and Thorpe, one of the few black players on the Tour, shot 32-36. Donald, tied for third three weeks ago at the Kemper Open, had 33-35.

A bogey on the 448-yard, par-4 18th cost Thorpe sole possession of the lead.

"I think I can win now," said

Thorpe, who led the first round of the U.S. Open in 1981 before faltering. "It'll take under par to win."

Irwin shot a front-nine that consisted of two birdies and two bogeys to finish even. He birdied the 383-yard, par-4 11th with an 8-iron to 15 feet, then took another stroke from par on the 17th after his second shot plunked down in a bunker to the right of the green, some 60 feet from the hole.

"I think you're going to see the scores level off," Irwin said. "You always tend to see first-round scores lower than over the weekend."

Irwin's bogeys came on the first and fourth holes, and he said he got off to a slow start partially because of the painstakingly slow traffic clogging access to the club.

"That didn't start the day very well," said Irwin, who abandoned his car at the club's gate and walked the rest of the way to save a little time. "I don't think many of us got here very cool. We were a little hot under the collar, and I don't think you can blame us."

Green, 37, whose last Tour victory was in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open in 1981, had a front-nine consisting of three birdies and one bogey, on the 216-yard, par-3 third hole. He matched par on each hole on the back nine.

"Just in case there's a lot of Winged Foot Club members sitting around the clubhouse slashing their wrists about these low scores," Green said, "if God put some water on the greens, that's one thing, but P.J. (Boatwright of the U.S. Golf Association) is not going to touch them."

"And come Sunday, if it doesn't rain anymore, look out."

Thorpe, 35, a former running back at Morgan State, also had an all-par round going on the second nine until the 18th. He saved par on the 17th with a 16-foot putt, but he missed the 18th green, chipped to eight feet and 2-putted for bogey.

Thorpe said Nos. 15, 16, 17 and 18 — all 400 yards or more and all par-4s — were probably the toughest holes on the course.

Donald, 28, started a string of five straight birdies at the par-3 seventh hole and, by the 11th, was 4-under. He bogeyed the 12th after the rain delay, then bogeyed No. 17 to go back to 2-under.

Donald said he had hit his drive on the par-5 12th before the rain, and when he came back out for his second shot, he was stiff. He hit into an unplayable lie, took a drop and made bogey.

"I smother-hooked a 3-iron under a tree. It was really fat," Donald said. "It was the ugliest shot you ever saw."

The group at 70 included Greg Norman, Gil Morgan, Morris Hatalsky, Andy Bean, Mike Sullivan, Fran Marrello and Michael Reid.

Norman made the turn at 34, birdied the 10th and 12th holes to go 3-under, then gave it back with a bogey at 13 and a double-bogey on 15.

Norman was in a threesome with Jack Nicklaus, who was only three shots back at 71, and Raymond Floyd, who shot 72.

Roberson, Riley Hold N.C. Amateur Lead

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — Art Roberson of Zebulon and Tom Riley of Kinston shared the first-round lead in the North Carolina Amateur golf championship Thursday, firing 3-under-par 69s at Northgreen Country Club.

Last year's state junior champ Greg Parker of Old Fort and former pro Walter Hall of Clemmons tied at 70 while Larry Boswell of Greensboro and Johnny Crumpler of Jacksonville were knotted at 71.

Those were the only players under par in the 254-man field, which was split between Northgreen and Wilson Country Club, both par 72. The low-handicap half played Northgreen Thursday and Crumpler was the only player on the Wilson course to make the top 20.

Roberson, a sophomore at North Carolina State, hit every green and had three birdies. Riley, a student at Atlantic Christian who is not on the golf team, carded six birdies.

John Inman of Greensboro, the 1984 NCAA champion, stumbled to a 74.

At 72 were Vance Whicker of Greensboro, Chuck Johnson of Dallas, Bill Plyler of Monroe, Bob Cato of Kinston, last year's runnerup Dr. Bill Boles of Wilson, Bobby Bridges of Forest City, Lea Couch and Tom Coffman of Durham and Andy Parks of Forest City.

At 73 were Bryan Sullivan of Kitty Hawk, Ben Skinner of Wilson and Rick Riddle of Durham.

At 74 with Inman were John Allen of Charlotte, Jeff Lankford of Mocksville, Ken Green of Elm City, Steve Goforth of Fayetteville, Joe Gay of Sanford, Wes Wall of Mount Airy, Josh Dillon of Raleigh and Robert Wilson of Greenville.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, far away from "Arnie's Army," played a quiet round of golf and conceded that he couldn't help but think about the U.S. Open Golf Championship, taking place without him.

Palmer, one of the sport's all-time greats, failed to qualify for the Open, one of the four major tournaments, and he's missing it for the first time in 32 years.

While golf's other big names were playing in the Open in Mamaroneck, N.Y., he was trying out Shoal Creek, where the PGA will be held Aug.

13-19. After playing the par 72 Shoal Creek course in 67 Thursday, which was a stroke better than anyone shot in the first round of the Open, Palmer was asked if he thought about the big tournament he was missing.

"Yes, I did," he said. "I thought about Winged Foot," where the Open is being played. "I had a good day, though."

Instead of the monstrous crowds that have followed him on courses during his career, only six people, including a newsman and a photographer, tagged along. Palmer played with Hall Thompson, chief developer of Shoal Creek, and two other Birmingham businessmen, Bob Wise and Bill Reed.

"He came here for fun and to learn a little about the course," said Thompson. "When he won the PGA Seniors, it qualified him for the PGA and I thought he would like to get a look at the course."

As they walked down the fairways, Thompson explained intricacies of the course, designed by Jack Nicklaus, to Palmer.

After sinking a 10-foot putt to birdie No. 15, Palmer remarked, "This is really a beautiful course."

Thompson, playing on a team against Palmer, said he and his partner "have thought it over and, as well as you're playing, we won't press."

On No. 16 Palmer put his drive within 40 feet of the cup, puttied to within 3 inches and got his par.

Palmer was unhappy with his drive on No. 17. "All right, you dummy, hit it," he said after it fell shorter than he wanted.

Waltrip Out To Increase Lead

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip's main order of business this weekend is to increase his lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup standings.

First, however, Waltrip intends to have a little fun, and maybe pickup a little pocket money at the same time.

Waltrip was one of nearly 60 drivers who began qualifying today for the Miller 400 to be run Sunday at Michigan International Speedway. Half of the 40-car field was scheduled to qualify this afternoon with the rest qualifying on Saturday.

However, Waltrip also is one of 12 world-class drivers who will compete Saturday in the renewed International Race of Champions, a race of equally prepared Z-28 Chevrolet Camaros.

This is the first of four IROC events scheduled for this season.

The champion of the entire IROC series will win $150,000. By comparison, Sunday's NASCAR race alone has a purse of $378,055.

"The two-mile track here is a great place to race," Waltrip said. "The track is wide and, when your car is handling well, you can run anywhere on the track — high, low or in the middle. That's why we have seen some five abreast battles for positions here in the last few seasons."

The other three IROC races will be run in connection with the Cleveland Grand Prix on July 7, the Talledega 500 on July 28 and the Champion 400 back here at MIS on Aug. 11.

Because the cars are all the same, the premium in IROC racing depends mostly on driving skill.

"It's a thrill to be invited and a challenge to do well in that setting," Waltrip said. "It is also a lot of fun winning RBI, but H&D went on to score four in the opening frame. Cox added a two-run double in the second.

Hendrix and Dail scored twice in the second and third innings to put the game out of reach.

First State 13
Shop-Eze 5

Wes McKenzie ripped four hits and Dwain Williams drove in four runs with three hits to power First State to a 13-5 victory over Shop-Eze Thursday in Prep League baseball action.

McKenzie picked up the win on the mound for First State, scattering seven hits. Nelson Galloway added two hits for First State.

Billy Turcott ripped a solo homer in the fourth for Shop-Eze. Turcott and Todd Taylor had two hits each.

First State led 5-0 after two innings but needed another run in the fourth to put the game out of reach, then added three in the fifth.

Wooten Takes Putt Tourney

Alan Wooten was the winner of the Thursday Nite Amateur Tournament at Greenville Putt-Putt and Games last night.

Wooten combined scored of 30 and 31 to finish the night with an 11-under par 61 after two rounds of play.

Phil Martin took second place after a sudden death playoff with Mike Garris. The two tied after two rounds with four-under 68's. Martin parred the second hole of the playoff while Garris took a triple bogey.

The win was Wooten's second of the season, while Martin's second place finish was his fourth this year.

THE KEEPER OF THE GATE!

IN BIBLICAL TIMES EVERY CITY AND PALACE HAD A GATE WHICH WAS AN IMPORTANT PART OF DEFENSE AND WAS SIGNIFICANT IN THE PUBLIC ECONOMY OF THE TIME. IT WAS HERE THAT PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE TOOK PLACE AND ALSO WAS THE SITE FOR AUDIENCES FOR KINGS AND AMBASSADORS (DEUT. 16:18, JUDG. 9:35). THE GATE WAS ALSO A PLACE WHERE BUSINESS WAS CARRIED ON. (1 KINGS 22:10) LEGAL TRANSACTIONS WERE ALSO CONDUCTED IN THE GATEWAYS OF THE PALACES. SO THE KEEPER OF THE GATES WAS A VERY IMPORTANT PERSONAGE, TRUSTED BY THE KING AND ALL VISITING HEADS OF STATE, ETC. A CASE IN POINT WAS MORDECAI, UNCLE OF QUEEN ESTHER, WHO SAT IN THE KING'S GATE CONDUCTING OFFICIAL BUSINESS. (ESTHER 2:21)

Southern Baptists Agree On Plan Critical Of Women's Ordination

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In a resolution noting that God created man first and citing Scripture teachings that women should not have authority over men, Southern Baptists have voted to discourage the ordination of women members.

The resolution was approved by a vote of 4,793 to 3,466 by the messengers — voting delegates — at the Southern Baptist Convention's three-day annual meeting, which ended Thursday.

"We encourage the service of women in all aspects of church life and work other than pastoral functions and leadership roles entailing ordination," the resolution said.

Individual churches are not bound by the resolution because each church has the power to ordain anyone it chooses.

Although the resolution noted the "equal dignity of men and women" in the New Testament, it also said, "While (St.) Paul commends women and men alike in other roles of ministry and service, he excludes women from pastoral leadership to preserve a submission God requires because the man was first in creation and the woman was first in the Edenic fall."

"Scriptures teach that women are not in public worship to assume a role of authority over men lest confusion reign in the local church," the resolution said.

Two editors of Folio, a Southern Baptist women's newsletter, said the resolution would make it more difficult for women to join the ministry, but would not keep them from becoming ministers.

"No kind of legislation is going to stop the call of women," said one of the editors, the Rev. Reba Sloan Cobb.

About 250 women have been ordained in the 12 million-member Southern Baptist Convention, which is the largest of more than 20 Baptist sects in the United States. The Convention has had female lay deacons for more than a century.

Betty McGeary Pearce, who works with Ms. Cobb, said the resolution reflected the Convention's growing conservatism, which probably would recede with time, she said.

"I think Southern Baptists are slow but sure," she said.

At its meeting in Pittsburgh last year, the delegates skirted debate on the ordination of women and voted instead to "affirm those women who labor for the Lord and churches in places of special service to which God has called them."

Dissension between conservative and moderate Southern Baptists marked this year's meeting. The Rev. Charles Stanley, a leading conservative, was elected convention president and Zig Ziglar, another conservative, first vice president.

Messengers also voted on Thursday to oppose the naming of an ambassador to the Vatican, calling the action a violation of the U.S. Constitution.

The Convention's 17,000 messengers also agreed on resolutions that urged raising the legal drinking age and opposed abortion. Many of the messengers had left the meeting before the vote on women's ordination and others did not vote.

Despite the importance of tobacco as a crop in the southern United States, where the denomination is strongest, a resolution condemning the use or production of tobacco won easily.

John Paul Visits Famed Swiss Shrine

EINSIEDELN, Switzerland (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who has made the Virgin Mary a centerpiece of his papacy, visited the largest Marian shrine in Switzerland today.

The pontiff, dressed in dark red and white, knelt and prayed for 15 minutes before a 2½-foot tall statue of the Madonna in the Benedictine Abbey in this remote central Swiss pilgrimage town.

"Let us make Mary, the mother of Jesus, who is the mother of the church and our mother, too, our model and our companion on the path of our earthly pilgrimage," the Roman Catholic leader said in a brief sermon in German to several hundred people.

John Paul makes a point of visiting Marian shrines on his journeys, as he did before becoming pope in 1978.

He planned meetings later today with the Swiss Bishops Conference and with several thousand young German-speaking Swiss.

The stops come on the fourth day of John Paul's six-day Swiss visit, his 22nd foreign journey since becoming pontiff.

There were 2.8 million Protestants and 3 million Roman Catholics in Switzerland in 1980, according to a census.

Reaction to the pontiff's trip remains restrained and sometimes critical. There is little of the excitement and feverish preparation usually felt on his travels abroad.

The biggest surprise of the trip came Thursday, when the pope issued the Swiss a stiff lecture about their prosperous banking system.

In a meadow in the central town of Flueli, the Polish-born pontiff told the Swiss to prevent their banking system from leading to "war and injustice" and urged them to lend a "helping hand" abroad.

Swiss voters on May 20 soundly defeated a Socialist proposal that would have drastically watered down Switzerland's banking secrecy law.

The proposal would have reduced Switzerland's attractiveness as a haven for fugitive funds from abroad, which Socialist Party leaders estimated exceed $44 billion.

"Above all, be vigilant that, with your business and your banking institutes, you offer the world a service of peace and not — perhaps indirectly — an opportunity to promote war and injustice," he said during the sermon in his outdoor Mass.

DO MORMONS REALLY BELIEVE IN CHRIST?

The very fact that the name of the "Mormon" Church is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints should be evidence enough that the Church believes in Jesus Christ.

Not only do we believe in Him but we testify that He has appeared in these latter days and personally established His Church by a restoration of the necessary priesthood authority and the calling of prophets to speak in His name.

The Book of Mormon itself is another witness for Christ in addition to the New Testament of the Bible. It tells of His visitation and establishment of His Church on this continent immediately following His resurrection.

It is difficult to understand how there can be any question about Christ as the central figure of the "Mormon" Church, yet such is the case.

We accept Him completely, in that we believe Him to be the only Begotten Son of God in the flesh, the Redeemer of mankind. That through His atonement, He has brought to pass the resurrection of the human race and that through the principle of repentance and obedience to His laws and ordinances, God's children may return again to His presence.

The word "Mormon" as a name for the Church is a misnomer which comes from acceptance as scripture of the Book of Mormon which is nothing more, nor less, than another witness for the divinity of Christ.

Yes, we are Christian in every sense of the word and put Christ at the head of His Church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

AN UNUSUAL COMBINATION . . . such as the silk of a spiderweb stretched across junk metal can result in an interesting, off-beat picture for a photographer's personal album of pictures.

WHILE THEY'RE STILL HERE . . . Any number of subjects fall into the category of here today, gone tomorrow. A case in point is this old fishing shed at Wright Creek in Pamlico County which undoubtedly will not be standing much longer. Such scenes are not only nice photographic momentoes, but in some instances can be a valuable historical record.

Photographs For A Personal Scrapbook

A LANDMARK . . . such as this fine 1920s tile-covered shelter for gas pumps at the crossroads in Winsteadville can add an interesting architectural note to a collection of photographs. The general store the shelter once fronted has long been demolished.

From time to time, photographers, especially younger ones, ask me, "What kind of photographs do you suggest I take, pictures I can keep in a scrapbook?"

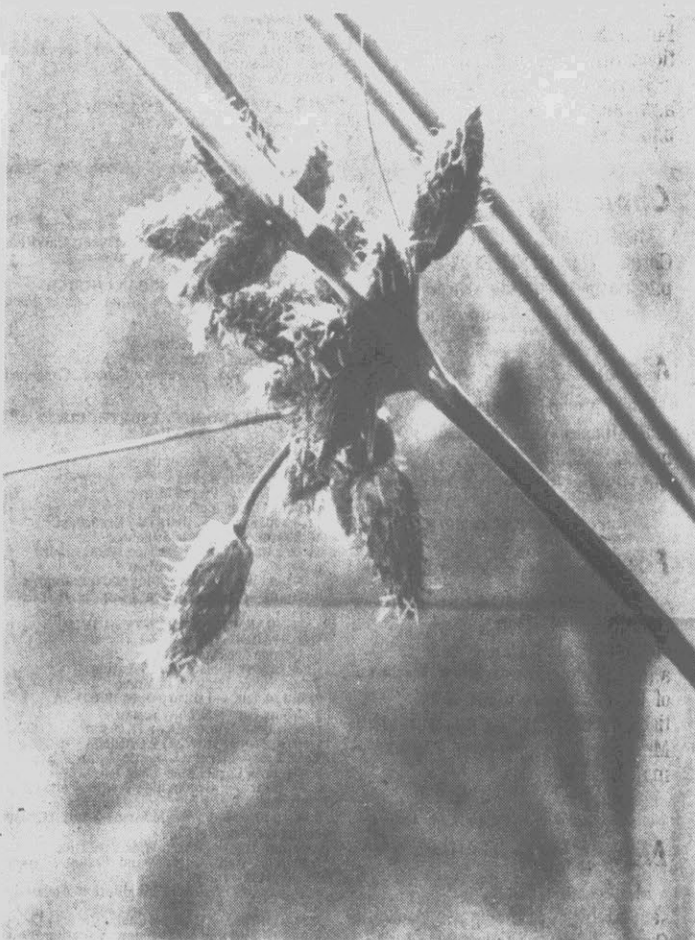

The first answer, obviously, is to take photos of important events — graduations, weddings, christenings, children, family celebrations. These are subjects the individual as well as family and friends will cherish.

After this, the answer is there's a wealth of material at any place and time that can be photographed without a great deal of expense and effort to form the basis of an enjoyable pictorial record.

An important consideration to bear in mind is that nothing stays the same. If something appeals, don't delay capturing it on film. A fine old home may be demolished before you return to the site again. That girl with alluring pigtails may overnight change to a kinky mop hairstyle, and the perfect rose soon withers.

Another question often asked is whether to use black and white or color. Color is perhaps to be preferred for special occasions or a showpiece photograph. On the other hand, black and white affords the opportunity to more cheaply make extra copies to give to friends.

Either way, expensive equipment is not necessary in making a variety of photos for one's personal scrapbook. The important thing is to be camera-ready when a good picture possibility comes along.

NATURE PROVIDES . . . endless photographic opportunities, in big scenes or in small details such as this cluster of cinnamon-colored seeds adorning the square stems of an unidentified marsh grass found in swampy areas.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor.

COMMON SUBJECTS . . . are not to be overlooked as subject matter. This close-in photograph taken in a cabbage patch shows the vegetable in the stage of beginning to head up and also gives a nice contrast in light and dark areas.

CANDID SHOTS . . . of friends or family are always welcome additions to a scrapbook of photographic memories. Here, two young Hobucken men, Mark

Church Cancels Communist Meet

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Catholic church that was a haven for anti-establishment politics in the 1960s canceled a Communist Party U.S.A. event set for its parish hall because politics "is not one of our tax-exempt purposes," diocese lawyer Barry Crane said.

Christ King Catholic Church on Wednesday canceled the June 23 meeting, which was scheduled three weeks ago to promote the Gus Hall-Angela Davis presidential ticket.

Local campaign leaders said the cancellation was an infringement of the group's First Amendment rights.

Producer Eyes 'Day After' Comedy

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — A veteran television producer says his idea for a comedy series about an isolated group of people, uncertain whether a nuclear holocaust has destroyed the world, has sticking power.

"The tenacity of a good idea is when you can't get rid of it. I can't get rid of this one," said Al Burton, whose credits include "The Jeffersons," "One Day at a Time," "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

So far, the networks haven't agreed. Last spring, CBS, NBC and ABC rejected the comedy followup to the nuclear war movie "The Day After."

But Burton, a former associate of Norman Lear, said he hopes to get the series, tentatively called "The Only Folks Around," accepted for the 1985-86 season.

"We're still welcome at all three networks to talk more," he said Wednesday in an interview at his Universal Studios office.

The project is not a spoof, said Burton, adding that he disagrees with those "who don't want to even talk about the day after. How do they deal with death? I'm anti-nuclear, but I believe there is humor in every one of life's potential situations."

"The Only Folks Around," which has a theme song but no script, explores the lives of a group of people who, somehow, become isolated from everyone else with the world on the brink of a nuclear holocaust.

Among the characters are a family and some "movers and shakers," he said. There will be optimists who think the bomb didn't explode, and pessimists who will "know it's over."

"Wherever they are, they are in a protected environment with some of the accoutrements of civilization," he said.

The producer, who also wrote the themes for comedies "The Facts of Life" and "Diff'rent Strokes," composed a theme song to give the networks "the flavor" of the concept. He sang it for the executives while pitching the idea last spring. In part, it goes like this:

"What would we do ... If we were the only folks around ... We'd be Adam and Eve ... Tell the neighbors to leave ... Rant and rave and never shave."

"And then we'd build a world much better than we'd found."

There have been comedies about war ("M-A-S-H") and about American prisoners of war ("Hogan's Heroes"), but "The Only Folks Around" would be the first TV sitcom dealing with the near-end of the world.

Burton wouldn't be too specific about content for fear of another producer stealing the idea, but he said the comedy would be sophisticated and sensitive.

"We won't have jokes about dead people," he said. "We won't have phrases like 'fried to a crisp.' No, nothing like that."

He likened the premise to TV's old "Gilligan's Island" about people shipwrecked on an island. "Gilligan kept trying to make contact. Our group may not have any contact," he said.

Burton said Universal Studios, his employer, owns the rights to a literary property (he wouldn't say which one) that resembles the scenario of "The Only Folks Around."

Burton said CBS gave Universal producers Bill Dial and Richard Chapman ("Simon & Simon") seed money for the series. But, in the end, all three networks rejected the proposal.

"We're regrouping to make a fuller pitch. I'll just have to go back to CBS and sing better next time," Burton said.

Bud Grant, president of CBS Entertainment, said Thursday of the project, "I don't believe it. It's nothing that we'd be interested in."

PBS To Air Mann Novel As Series

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortly after Thomas Mann's first novel, "Buddenbrooks," was published in 1901, a female fan in Munich told him, "I was never bored while reading your book, though I kept wondering with every page why I wasn't."

Somewhat the same reaction may occur to viewers who take the plunge and watch the nine-part adaptation that begins on public television June 18 as part of the Great Performances series. It's slow, it's long, it's difficult — and it's annoyingly dubbed in English. But it's ultimately gripping and very moving.

Mann was in his early 20s when he wrote "Buddenbrooks," and he later acknowledged it was a thinly veiled biography of his family, who lived in the northern German seaport of Luebeck, where the novel is set.

The Buddenbrook family — like the Manns — are prosperous grain merchants, and the book follows their rising fortunes and eventual disintegration through four generations that span the mid-19th century.

In stately, leisurely fashion, the book chronicles a succession of family gatherings at housewarmings, dinner parties, weddings, births and funerals. It reveals the characters' joys and disappointments in love, and shows them as business and political leaders of their time, even caught up briefly in the revolution that swept Europe in the 1840s.

But Mann was doing more than documenting social history. In the family's progress he traces a growing conflict between the business ethic, represented chiefly by the powerful Thomas Buddenbrook, and the artistic impulse, displayed by his brother, Christian, and Thomas' wife, Gerda, and, especially, by his doomed son, Hanno.

And through his close attention to the mostly humdrum details of everyday life at a specific period in one particular city, Mann has created a profound psychological portrait of human destinies in turmoil. His vision is still relevant to late-20th century American society as it grapples with such issues as family loyalty vs. individual fulfillment and the work ethic vs. hedonism.

Colbert Returns To London Stage

LONDON (AP) — Actress Claudette Colbert says she decided to return to the London stage after a 56-year absence because she "couldn't resist" the opportunity to appear with Rex Harrison.

The 80-year-old actress, who hasn't appeared in a play in London since 1928, will open next week opposite Harrison in Frederick Lonsdale's "Aren't We All."

Miss Colbert and Harrison, 76, last appeared together in the United States in a play called "The Kingfisher."

"I love acting on stage," Miss Colbert said Thursday. "I only went into the movies many years ago when the theater died."

Royall Wants Voter Review

RALEIGH (AP) — The state senate is renewing efforts to allow voters to reconsider gubernatorial succession, despite objections from Gov. Jim Hunt.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said Thursday that over a dozen senators had signed a bill he plans to introduce. The bill would let the voters, during this fall's elections, choose between making gubernatorial candidates eligible for a single four-year term, a single six-year term and two four-year terms.

"Being the majority leader, it is my duty to see if people want to do that," said Royall, adding that he always has opposed gubernatorial succession. "It is no reflection whatsoever on (Hunt)."

In 1977, North Carolina voters approved a constitutional amendment allowing the governor and lieutenant governor to serve a maximum of two consecutive four-year terms. Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green took advantage of the amendment in 1980 and won second terms.

Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press secretary, said Hunt felt the amendment should be given more time to work.

"Two four-year terms give the voters by far the most flexibility in electing a fellow or lady for four years and if they don't like the way they perform they can vote them out of office," said Hackney.

State transportation officials lobbied members of the House Rules Committee, hoping to stamp out concerns over a resolution that supporters say would help end the Morehead City bridge squabble.

The resolution would allow the Legislature to consider a bill that would affirm the state's authority to alter existing roads or construct new ones, overruling local officials if necessary.

The Rules Committee delayed action on the resolution Wednesday when some lawmakers questioned its effect on a lawsuit pending before the state Supreme Court.

The suit, filed by Morehead City, opposes a state plan to replace the two-lane drawbridge between that town and Atlantic Beach on the Bogue Banks. A Superior Court judge rejected the suit and Morehead City appealed.

Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, chairman of the Rules Committee, said it probably would consider the resolution again Tuesday.

The House Finance Committee approved an amended bill to reclassify half of the 6 percent gross receipts tax on utility bills as a general sales tax, enabling North Carolinians to deduct the payment on their federal tax forms.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, told the panel that the change would keep about $8.6 million in North Carolina and that "everyone (would) win except the U.S. Treasury."

The bill was amended to water down a section declaring that it is the state's policy when possible to structure its taxes so that payers will be eligible for federal tax writeoffs.

The House Rules Committee approved a resolution affirming North Carolina's opposition to unitary taxation, or taxation of an industry's worldwide operations.

The panel also approved a resolution allowing consideration of a bill that would permit North Carolinians savings and loans to operate in other states. A similar bill to authorize reciprocal interstate banking agreements is before a Senate committee.

A bill to change the way taxes on "casual" used cars sales between individuals are levied was approved 95-0 by the House and sent to the Senate.

The House approved 57-45 and sent to the Senate a bill to exempt shoppers' guides from sales taxation. The guides are similar to newspaper advertising supplements that are exempt.

The measure drew opposition from Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, who said there should be a distinction between newspapers — which are purchased — and shoppers' guides, most of which are free and unsolicited.

But Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said many of the ads in the supplements and the guides are identical and that they should be treated equally.

By a 101-2 vote, the House approved and sent to the Senate a bill to permit the N.C. Department of Revenue to hire collection agencies to retrieve delinquent tax payments from out-of-state residents.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said North Carolina is owed some $5 million from out of state but doesn't have the authority to send its own officials across state lines to get the money.

The House Judiciary III Committee was briefed on a list of proposed amendments to the Safe Roads Act, the crackdown on drunken driving enacted last year.

The suggested changes are mostly technical, stemming from complaints from judges, prosecutors and others who have worked with the new law.

The House approved a resolution Wednesday allowing a bill incorporating the changes to be introduced.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, chastized members of the Senate for getting the session off to a slow start. He noted that Thursday was the sixth legislative day and with 50 senators, there had been 2,400 hours wasted.

Lawing said the senators had taken time to go to the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina and the N.C. Zoo.

"It's time I think we started going to work here and getting the session behind us," Lawing said. "We're floundering around like a ship without a rudder."

Lawing said he was tired of people

"dragging their feet" and warned that he wouldn't run a business like that.

Officers Say Some Leads Developed In Escape Hunt

RICHMOND (AP) — FBI agents and Virginia authorities, after huddling for five hours in "a meeting that turned into a work session," say they have developed several leads to follow in the search for escaped death row convicts James and Linwood Briley.

"We found some areas we thought we could pursue," said Allen McCreight, special agent in charge of the Richmond FBI office, after Thursday's meeting.

"I don't want to get too specific. There are several different things in mind we are going to pursue," McCreight said.

The Briley brothers and four other inmates facing execution staged the largest death row escape in U.S. history using a fake bomb at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center May 31.

Two were recaptured June 1 in North Carolina, about 25 miles south of the prison, and another two were found June 8 in Vermont.

McCreight said the FBI from Richmond and Charlotte, N.C., the Virginia State Police and Richmond police attended the meeting to "make sure we're sharing information logically and pursuing everything we should."

"We wanted to go over what's been done on the case ... analyze information and plan what steps we want to pursue further," he said.

The recapture of Lem Davis Tuggle Jr. and Willie Leroy Jones in Vermont last Friday, while authorities were combing Warren County, N.C., shifted the center of the search for the Brileys to the Canadian border area. Tuggle waived extradition and was returned to Virginia on Wednesday. Jones was still in a Vermont jail.

Authorities said Thursday that a store robbery in Bedford, Quebec was being investigated as an indication that the two Virginia murderers might be in the area.

Canned meat and insect repellent were stolen Wednesday morning, but police did not learn of the break-in until late in the day, said Constable Rene Cote of Quebec provincial police.

"They're still looking there because of the kinds of things they took," provincial police Cpl. Richard Thibault said Thursday night.

After learning of the robbery in Bedford, police in Bedford brought back a helicopter and tracking dog to assist 35 officers who combed woods around the town.

At the same time, patrols continued on back roads around nearby Philipsburg, on the Quebec-Vermont border, where a minister said he saw one of the Brileys lurking in his back yard Monday.

The search in Vermont and Canada does not lessen the work of officials in Virginia, McCreight said.

"We'll be interviewing anybody who has information. We're just looking for that one bit of information that will lead us to the Briley brothers," he said.

"You have your frustrations. It doesn't discourage you. You just get anxious. I wish I could make the announcement that they had been apprehended."

McCreight noted that both pairs of fugitives were caught on Fridays.

"If tomorrow were only the 13th and they were having the bad luck," he said.

Couple Files Suit Over Child's Birth

GREENSBORO (AP) — A former Fort Bragg soldier and his wife say they should have been warned that their daughter could be born with chromosome abnormality and are suing a Durham doctor and Duke Medical Center, charging that proper precautions were not taken.

John and Kimberly Gallagher, who now live in Uniontown, Pa., filed their suit Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Greensboro against Dr. George H. Mickey of Durham and Duke University Medical Center.

Mrs. Gallagher gave birth in 1981 to a daughter, Jennifer, who later died of multiple birth defects.

Walk Don't Run

Today, many people will celebrate World Sauntering Day. The World Sauntering Society aims to revive the art of Victorian sauntering and to discourage jogging. Nominations will be taken for the Sauntering Hall of Fame. In 1900, Johann Hurlinger of Austria walked 871 miles from Vienna to Paris on his hands. Champion reverse pedestrian Plennie Wingbo once walked backward 8000 miles from California to Turkey.

Baptists Reject Tobacco Use

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — While some North Carolina Baptists support the resolution discouraging tobacco use which Southern Baptists approved at their convention, some tobacco officials chastised the convention for "meddling."

"I favored the resolution abolishing tobacco-support programs," said the Rev. Robert M. Tenery of Burke County, who is attending the convention. "I think we ought to encourage farmers to cease growing tobacco."

"North Carolina's economy once depended heavily on tobacco, but it's changing," said the Rev. Joe King of Rowan County. "I feel there could be a livelihood from other products without relying on tobacco as heavily as in the past."

But John Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the state Department of Agriculture, questioned the propriety of convention delegates "meddling" in tobacco.

"When they begin to get out of an area in which they have expertise — religion — and try to get into problems or what they think are problems they have no conception of, they're getting into an area they have no expertise to handle," he said.

Cyrus added that most North Carolina Baptist clergymen knew tobacco better than most convention delegates.

"As one Baptist preacher in Wilson County said on a CBS program, he didn't preach on tobacco because he 'wasn't ready to move.'"

The anti-tobacco resolution came to the floor Thursday in the final day of a three-day convention with some 17,000 delegates, including 1,240 from North Carolina. The issue passed by a large majority in a show of hands.

The resolution originally discouraged only cigarette smoking, but delegates offered amendments that met with little resistance.

The Rev. Jerry Sutton of Fort Worth, Texas, proposed an amendment to "urge Congress to terminate all funding and subsidies to those who plant, grow or sell tobacco products."

An amendment by Steve Brown of Louisville, Ky., where tobacco is also a major crop, encouraged growers to "cease such agriculture and, where feasible, to switch to another cash crop, in order to make such products less accessible."

"I have great respect for the Baptist State Convention, but I wish their convention had not done this," said Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., a leading tobacco supporter, after learning of the vote. "It will only encourage our opponents."

North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham defended the crop, which accounts for 1,500 jobs and almost 55 percent of the state's crop income, saying tobacco is not a moral issue.

"If someone has a crop that would replace tobacco, I wish they'd bring it up," he said. "There's nothing on the drawing board."

Tar Heels Opposing Alien Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Some North Carolina farmers and farm officials are taking exception to new legislation that would require employers to ask job applicants for documentation of citizenship.

"This is just another step they're taking to run us out of farming," said Samuel H. King of Newton Grove, who hires 20 to 25 migrant workers a year. "There's no way to prove verification. I can't (easily) prove my own citizenship. People don't keep that kind of registration stuff on them."

Under an amendment that has passed the House, all employers would have to verify that applicants are either U.S. citizens or aliens authorized to work in the U.S.. The amendment is not included in a Senate version of the bill.

The basic immigration package approved by both chambers authorizes fines and prison terms for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and officials of the federal Department of Agriculture have warned that the bill could make farmers benefitting from such federal programs as Farmers Home Administration loans and tobacco price supports subject to inspection for civil rights violations.

"If that (USDA) interpretation is given, it could hit a large percentage of our farmers because most participate in some kind of program," said John Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation.

"I don't rule out anything when it comes to investigations by certain departments of the government," said James Oliver, master of the N.C. Grange. "In the past, the federal government...has gone about as far as they want to."

T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said verification is difficult for farmers because they usually deal through crew leaders.

"Obviously, they don't know the status of the individual worker," Blalock said. "They deal with a crew chief who in turn pays the laborer. In that setup, the farmer is dealing with a contractor and doesn't have any way of checking up on the status of the individual worker."

Helms Clarifies Quote

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he didn't intend to say last week there is no evidence of right-wing death squads in El Salvador, but he restated his belief that such squads are not linked with Roberto D'Aubuisson.

Published reports said Helms on Friday indicated there was no proof death squads existed in the war-torn country where D'Aubuisson was defeated in the presidential elections. But Helms on Tuesday said his remarks were limited to proof of D'Aubuisson's alleged role.

"We were clearly talking about D'Aubuisson," said Helms, who had opposed the ARENA party candidate's challenger, Jose Napoleon Duarte, calling Duarte "a socialist."

Mondale Set For Veep Talks

HOUSTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale was going home to Minnesota today to begin interviewing possible running mates and to discuss the Democratic platform with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, who has been mentioned frequently for the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Mrs. Ferraro, chairwoman of the Democratic Platform Commission, will meet with Mondale on Saturday at his North Oaks, Minn., home.

"The purpose of the meeting is to create a platform that will reflect the concerns and interests of the mainstream of the Democratic Party," Mrs. Ferraro, D-N.Y., said in a statement.

Before flying to Minnesota, where Mondale also planned to address the state Democrat-Farm-Labor Convention, the former vice president was meeting with his Texas delegates.

Mondale, looking tanned and rested after a week at the beach, on Thursday called his vice presidential choice the "single most important decision made by the nominee."

In his first public appearance since claiming on June 6 that he had enough delegates to win his party's presidential nomination, Mondale insisted that he has not "included or excluded anyone" in his search for a running mate.

At a news conference, he said he would announce, perhaps as early as today, the names of the first three possible vice presidential candidates whom he hopes to meet with in Minnesota.

But he sidestepped questions on whether Gary Hart, his rival for the presidential nomination, or Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas would be on his list.

And asked whether he was committed to naming a woman, he responded: "The question is who would be the best vice president and who would be prepared to be president ... I think you have to look at the particular person and the merits of that person and that's what I will do."

Later Thursday, at a fund-raising dinner for the state Democratic Party and a tribute to Bentsen, Mondale praised the senator as "one of our nation's most respected leaders ... one of our nation's most respected economic thinkers."

Mondale also invited state Democratic Party leaders to Minnesota to talk about the fall campaign. But some who support Hart said they are passing up the session as premature.

"I'm not wildly excited about going to meet at this point with Walter Mondale," said Fred Mondragon, New Mexico Democratic Party chairman and a Hart supporter.

Maxine Isaacs, Mondale's press secretary, said the purpose of the meeting was to discuss election strategy rather than party unity. National party chairman Charles T. Manatt is expected to attend the session, along with about half the state party chairmen.

President Reagan, meanwhile, said in a televised news conference Thursday night that "I look forward to a debate" with the Democratic presidential nominee.

Mondale was assured of control of the committee that will draft the proposed party platform next week. Party officials on Thursday decided to give Mondale eight of the 15 seats on the panel.

Iacocca's Name Keeps Coming Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — He has never sought political office and says, "I'm not interested" in running for vice president. But Lee Iacocca, fresh from a successful campaign to save the Chrysler Corp., suddenly seems to be on everyone's list as a potential running mate for Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic presidential nominee in waiting.

"He has the image of a winner," says Rep. John LaFalce, the New York Democrat who is one of Iacocca's biggest boosters in Congress. "Whenever I've mentioned this to Democrats their eyes light up. Whenever I mention it to Republicans, they get sick."

One aide to Mondale, who refused to be identified by name, said Iacocca, 59, is "under consideration" as a possible running mate.

It is difficult to know how seriously, since Mondale may consider dozens of prospects — and others mentioned prominently would be more logical politically, including Gary Hart, Mondale's challenger through the primaries; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas; Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia; and Gov. Mario Cuomo and Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, both of New York.

But press secretary Maxine Isaacs says Mondale counts the Chrysler chairman as a "new friend," and says he was "very taken with him" when they had a get-acquainted chat last year in a Detroit hotel.

Iacocca says he has no desire to seek office, although the statement issued in his name does not flatly rule it out. "I am not interested," it says, adding he will continue to speak out on issues he is interested in.

He also accepted a new three-year contract last December as chairman of Chrysler, the company he rescued from the brink of bankruptcy with the help of federal loan guarantees, and whose television commercials feature him. His salary last year was $475,000, and he also received a $433,000 bonus.

There is also the question of Iacocca's political allegiance. He is an independent, although Ms. Isaacs said, "I believe he's a Republican."

Selection of Iacocca would amount to a sharp break in tradition by Mondale, a man who has spent his entire adult life working within the Democratic Party structure.

Yet Democrats say he would bring obvious attributes to a ticket.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♦	Dble 4♦	4♦	6♦
Dble	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

The late Gen. Alfred Gruenther was probably the most accomplished bridge player to come out of the military service. He was so well known as a tournament director that many tended to forget his skill as a player. This is our favorite example of his ability. "The Brain," as he was known, sat South.

North dredged up a takeout double of East's one spade opening and East took advantage of the vulnerability to preempt the bidding to an uncomfortable level. That might have disturbed some, but Gen. Gruenther, in his usual straightforward manner, leaped to six diamonds. West's double was to tell the world that no one bids a slam after he opens the bidding and gets away unscathed.

West led the queen of spades and, when dummy came down, declarer did not like his chances. With the king of clubs marked in the West hand, it seemed that declarer had to lose a heart and a club. But The Brain had made a reputation for deploying his forces to best advantage, and he made no mistake.

Declarer won the ace of spades, and then led a low heart from his hand toward the queen on the table. If West rose with the ace, declarer would be able to get rid of two clubs—one on the king of spades and the other on the queen of hearts—so West ducked perforce. Dummy's queen won, and declarer sluffed his king of hearts on the king of spades. This play is known to the trade as a "Morton's Fork Coup."

But that was only part of the problem. Now declarer had to worry about two possible club losers. He solved that problem as adeptly. After ruffing a heart high, he led a trump to the nine and ruffed another heart high. He then crossed back to the table with the king of trumps and led the nine of spades. When East did not, or could not, cover, declarer did not ruff. Instead he discarded a losing club.

West won the ten of clubs, but he was faced with losing propositions. A club return would run to declarer's queen, and a major suit would permit declarer to ruff on the board while pitching his last club loser from hand. Either way, South's battle was won.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Jackson Visits Home

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson says he returned to his native South Carolina "to rest and eat good food," but took time out to call for Democratic party unity and jobs for the unemployed.

"South Carolina is still home to me," Jackson told a news conference Thursday after he arrived at Greenville-Spartanburg Airport. "When you're weary, you come home to rest and eat good food."

Jackson's mother, Helen, and his daughter, Sandy, were with him at the airport.

He said it is critical that the three contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination unite to defeat President Reagan in November. There should be a meeting between Jackson, Walter Mondale and Gary Hart to decide on a unified approach, he said.

Jackson is the designated "favorite son" of the South Carolina Democratic Party.
