For Father's Day ...

Erick Abbey, age 16 months, of Raleigh, gets his first haircut from great-grandpa Lee Rowland at the Proctor Barber Shop in Greenville. Erick and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Abbey, are visiting great-grandpa and grandma Rowland for Father's Day. Rowland said he's given each generation in his family a first haircut. The occasion was a serious one for Erick, above, but for proud parents, grandparents and great-grandparents, each sporting a camera, the event was pure fun. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Even Paul Revere Had His 'Lambs'

By KEN SUGAR
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Paul Revere is remembered for his midnight ride while George Washington was tagged the father of his country. But Revere was a pretty fair father himself, having 16 children he called "lambs" and raising them in a "happy and affectionate" home.

"As far as we know, he was a good father," said Edith Steblecki, a researcher and guide at Revere's preserved home in Boston's North End. "It was very affectionate to call his children 'lambs.'"

Revere had six boys and 10 girls with two wives over 30 years, although there were never more than seven children under the Revere roof at one time. Five died in their first four years, Ms. Steblecki said, tragedies that apparently weighed heavily on Revere's spirit.

In a note to his cousin John in France, dated May 19, 1786, Revere wrote: "Since my last letter to you, I have lost one of the finest Boys that was ever born, two years and three-months-old, named John, whom I named for you.

"I now begin to think I shall have no more children."

But a year later, Revere's wife Rachel gave birth to his final child, another son named John who lived to the age of 60, Ms. Steblecki said.

Revere, a goldsmith who took time off from his business to join the movement that launched the Revolutionary War, lived in the house in the North End from the age of 35 to 65. He died in 1818 at the age of 83.

A successful businessman, Revere is best known for the midnight horseback ride he took April 18, 1775, to warn residents of Lexington and Concord of an impending raid by British troops.

He moved into the four-bedroom, wooden Tudor-style house in 1770, an "old house when he bought it," and sold it in 1800, the historian said.

One example suggesting Revere was a devoted father came during a smallpox epidemic in 1764.

"He refused to send his 'lambs' to the pest house," where people with the contagious disease often were sent to isolate them, Ms. Steblecki said. "The chances of kids dying there was much greater."

Instead, she said, "He quarantined them at home."

Ms. Steblecki says she expected about 100 people an hour to pass through the Revere Home this Father's Day. Visitors invariably take notice of the information about Revere's children.

"They say all kinds of things," she said. The usual response, she said, is: "Oh my God, did he really have 16 children?"

Delegates OK Gay Rights Proposal

Demo Convention 'Collapses'

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Democratic Convention approved a platform Saturday that appears to endorse gay rights, but adjourned in acrimony and confusion without voting on resolutions dealing with Central America, nuclear weapons and second primaries.

The convention, which had been mostly harmonious as keynote speaker Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and top officeholders and candidates called for unity, collapsed after scores of delegates wandered off the floor as the afternoon dragged.

After approving the lengthy platform and electing delegates to the national convention in San Francisco, the Democrats approved an adjournment motion placed by Harold Webb, director of the Office of State Personnel.

That came immediately after the remaining delegates approved by written ballot an amendment to toughen a resolution on Central America by calling for a virtual end to all U.S. military involvement in the region. Thus, the convention never voted on the resolution itself.

The platform that was approved committed the party to such traditional stands as equality, government efficiency, health and mental health programs, assistance to the elderly, quality education, environmental protection, more jobs, and economic development.

Several amendments were adopted, one of which added the words "affectional preference" to the party's statement of opposition to discrimination.

With the new wording, the statement reads: "The Democratic Party has consistently stood for, and will continue to foster, fair representation for all citizens in government affairs, regardless of age, sex, race, religion, economic status, ethnic origin, age, physical or mental disabilities, or affectional preference."

State Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, chairman of the Platform Committee, said the panel agreed to recommend the wording change after receiving numerous suggestions at platform hearings.

Asked later whether the amendment amounted to a gay-rights plank, he responded: "That's for you to decide."

Before being amended, the resolution was in line with stands Gov. Jim Hunt has taken in his quest for the U.S. Senate seat held by Republican Jesse Helms. It condemned the CIA's recent mining of Nicaraguan harbors and called for the U.S. to use "economic and military aid" and other resources to fight repression, "protect personal rights and improve living conditions" while bringing about negotiated settlements among warring factions.

But spokeswoman Stephanie Bass said Hunt would not favor the

Pitt Democrats Stress Unity In Fall Races

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

With the major primary elections behind them, Democrats are now looking toward November's general election when they hope to unseat a Republican U.S. senator, send a Democrat back to the governor's mansion, and even defeat incumbent President Ronald Reagan.

While Democrats far outnumber Republicans in Pitt County and across North Carolina, the key to success for party hopes in November is party unity.

"I feel the Democratic Party will pull together to elect Democratic candidates," Pitt Democratic Chairman Katheryn Lewis said last week. "We have a lot at stake if we don't pull together."

Although saying the coming general election will be "the hardest battle the Democratic Party has had in my lifetime," Mrs. Lewis said, "I feel we offer more to the grassroots person ... (and) I think we'll come through with flying colors."

The major emphasis now is to unite supporters of the 10 candidates that sought the Democratic nomination as governor in the primary elections.

"We're having a breakfast meeting June 20 with the leadership from all of the campaigns invited ... to talk together about what is the best way to go in Pitt County," the chairman said. And "the leadership in the (Eddie) Knox campaign has been in touch with the party leadership in the county, saying that they are ready to pitch in now and help." Knox lost his bid for the nomination as governor to Rufus Edmisten in a runoff earlier this month.

According to Mrs. Lewis, "Pitt County is a pivotal county in the east."

Success in November means "we can't take for granted that generally Republican candidates don't run well. It's a matter of rolling up our sleeves and working the way Democrats haven't had to work in this area."

Because of Pitt's position of leadership in the east, Mrs. Lewis said, "I do believe" the party's nominee for president, expected to be Walter Mondale, ar the vice presidential nominee, or both, will campaign in the county.

Kenneth Dews, Hunt's campaign chairman in the county, said "it's too early to make any comment on

Canada's Liberals Choose Turner As Prime Minister

OTTAWA (AP) — Former Finance Minister John Turner, who quit Pierre Elliott Trudeau's Cabinet nine years ago, was chosen Saturday to succeed Trudeau as prime minister.

Turner swamped two other candidates on the second ballot at a Liberal Party convention, getting 1,862 of the delegates' votes to 1,368 for Energy Minister Jean Chretien and 192 for Economic Development Minister Donald Johnston.

The new party leader will take over as prime minister once Trudeau makes his resignation official. The date for the transition has not been set, but it is expected in about two weeks.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan was dropped from the second ballot because he finished last in the first round.

Three other candidates withdrew after disappointing showings on the first ballot. Justice Minister Mark MacGuigan threw his support to Turner. Employment Minister John Roberts, Indian Affairs Minister John Munro and Whelan backed Chretien, who waged an emotional campaign in defense of Trudeau's policies.

The alliances developed in view of a national television audience. The candidates sat for more than six hours in the convention hall, surrounded by their supporters with banners and signs.

When a candidate decided to make an endorsement, he stood up — starting the television commentators speculating about which direction he would go — then marched across the floor to embrace the colleague he had chosen.

Turner was edged out of a first-round victory when he polled 1,593 votes, 126 votes short of what he needed for a one-round triumph.

There has been speculation that the Liberals might call an election soon after Trudeau's departure to take advantage of a recent surge in public opinion polls. After trailing the Progressive Conservatives of Brian Mulroney by more than 20 points, the Liberals suddenly jumped to a slight lead after Trudeau announced he was leaving office.

If prospects for a summer election are unpromising, the government could wait until fall or — pushing the current Parliament's mandate to the 5-year limit — until next spring.

All seven candidates made final appeals for votes in speeches to the convention Friday night with Trudeau watching, his shirtsleeves rolled and collar open in the steamy heat of a crowded hockey arena.

Turner, a Toronto-based corporate lawyer who sits on the boards of some of Canada's largest companies, tried Friday to combat the impression that he would move the Liberal government sharply to the right.

Champion Hollerer

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — A barefooted carpenter from Cumberland County with a 5-foot rattlesnake skin slug over his shoulder captured the 16th annual National Hollerin' Contest on Saturday at Spivey's Corner.

Mike Brown, 22, of Cedar Creek, won the title in a runoff holler after he tied Mark McGee, a 23-year-old machinist from Greenville.

"All the people just call me a Carolina country boy," Brown said. "I didn't expect this."

Brown said he dedicated his medley of "rattlin' hollers" to his late great-grandmother who taught him to yell.

The contest judges said Brown appeared to be the favorite among the crowd, which was estimated at about 7,000.

FOUNDING FATHERS — Officials in Fairmont, W.Va., claim that the first observance of Father's Day took place in their city 76 years ago. However, the Father's Day Council Inc. and officials in Spokane, Wash., claim the holiday originated in Spokene. Bob Moffett, above, is on the Fairmont committee lobbying for recognition. West Virginia Town Lays Claim To 1st Father's Day

FAIRMONT, W.Va. (AP) — As sons and daughters prepare to honor fathers across the land on Sunday, this small city is staking claim to having laid the groundwork of the tradition, no matter what the national Father's Day Committee says.

"It was originated by Mrs. John Bruce Dodd in Spokane, Wash., in 1910," Ted Kaufman, chairman of the nonprofit committee, rattled off when asked about the origin of the holiday.

Kaufman said it is possible that Fairmont held a celebration in 1908, as local officials claim, but that doesn't make Fairmont the "home" of the holiday.

"Obviously if they did have an observance they did nothing to extend its horizons," he said from his New York City office.

The Central United Methodist Church in Fairmont has been making a belated attempt to extend those horizons in the past several months, issuing a stream of news releases stating that the first Father's Day observance was held in Fairmont on July 5, 1908.

On Sunday, Fairmont will celebrate with road signs declaring the city as the home of Father's Day and a plaque will be dedicated at the site of the first observance.

There's little doubt that the West Virginia observance preceded the one in Spokane, said Robert Moffett, a spokesman for the local Father's Day Committee. But he also acknowledged that Fairmont had nothing to do with the declaration of a national holiday.

"There's really not much question that there was an observation held here before anyone in Spokane went about it," he said. The West Virginia Commission on Archives and History and a national greeting card company have confirmed the date, he said.

"That first observation of Father's Day was not, by itself, what became the national observance of Father's Day," Moffett said. "All we are claiming is that the first Father's Day observance was held in Fairmont."

Fairmont's claim centers around Mrs. Charles Clayton, who lobbied the congregation of the Williams Memorial combined Methodist and Episcopal church to honor fathers after Mother's Day was celebrated in nearby Grafton.

"It seems that spurred her interest in it," Moffett said.

But unlike Fairmont, Grafton has effectively promoted itself as the "home" of the holiday.

But while Grafton basks in national publicity once a year, Fairmont — and its claim to be the home of Father's Day — languishes in obscurity.

Lora Storz, president of the Poetry Scribes of Spokane, of which the late Sonora Smart Dodd was a member, said she'd never heard of Fairmont's competing claim until this past week.

"We've always given Mrs. Dodd the credit," she said.

Mrs. Dodd decided fathers deserved as much recognition as their wives after listening to a Mother's Day sermon, she said.

"She did this to honor her father, because her mother had died and left him with several children to raise. He never married again," Mrs. Storz said from her Spokane home.

Spokane's "ministerial alliance" decided at Mrs. Dodd's prodding to honor fathers on the third Sunday in June, Mrs. Storz said.

Kaufman said it was through Mrs. Dodd's efforts that Congress in 1972 — 57 years after official commemoration of Mother's Day — declared the third Sunday in June to be Father's Day. There had been six previous one-shot official observances.

strategy ... we're still talking about strategy. The wounds inflicted by both parties during the gubernatorial campaign (for the nomination) haven't healed. We are just biding our time right now."

But Dews said a campaign headquarters will be opened after the June 20 meeting. He suggested "the strategy across North Carolina seems to be that the east holds the key to the victory in November ... They're saying from Raleigh to the coast is going to determine who is going to be elected."

The race for governor is also of concern to party leaders. Edmisten, who won the nomination in a runoff, will face Republican Rep. Jim Martin, considered by many to be the strongest Republican candidate for governor in years.

"My main concern is delivering as many votes as I can for Rufus from Pitt County," Edmisten campaign manager Charles Vincent said.

"Our committee feels Rufus has a very close relationship with this county because of the successful events we had for him during the past year, and because of the money that has been raised in Pitt County for his campaign," Vincent said. "We feel he has many close friends in the county and broad-based support," and "we feel these ties make him particularly sensitive to the needs of Pitt County and the east."

One campaign strategy will be to remind voters of Edmisten's support for East Carolina University, the medical school, and the tobacco program, Vincent said.

"If the public will remember back in 1972, (Republican) Gov. (Jim) Holshouser had a chance to make deep inroads in the east for the Republican Party" by supporting the establishment of the medical school at ECU, Vincent said. "But he chose not to support the ECU medical school and remained loyal to the old line Republicans.

"That Jim Martin is from Mecklenburg County, we feel he has the same ties, and no matter what promises he will give regarding the east, we feel that he will do the bidding of his supporters in the Charlotte area," Vincent continued.

Vincent said Edmisten's campaign will also stress his "record as attorney general and the efficiency which he has demonstrated in administering that agency."

According to Vincent, "We've never had any problem getting workers. We have a very close knit group of supporters that seem to have tremendous personal feelings toward Rufus.

"Before the runoff, we incorporated (Lauch) Faircloth, (Jimmy) Green and (John) Ingram people in our organization. The same thing is true now of Knox supporters."

But Vincent said, "We're not trying to rush thing because Knox workers in Pitt County waged a great campaign. They had tremendous loyalty toward their candidate. We just have to be patient. When they are ready, we feel they will come.

"The Knox chairman, Monroe Waters, and I knew we would have to unify. This makes things easier ... party unity with Knox ... and we have welcomed them into our campaign, just as supporters of the other candidates," Vincent said.

New Klan Trial Date Postponed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A judge postponed on Saturday the trial date for a federal civil suit stemming from a 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro which left five demonstrators dead.

The trial was scheduled to begin Aug. 1, but Robert R. Merihige Jr., a federal judge from Richmond, Va., moved the trial date to Oct. 8 during a hearing in Winston-Salem Saturday.

The suit, filed by the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund in 1980, charges that a conspiracy among federal, state and city officials and Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis led to the deaths of the five communist demonstrators.

"He would not favor anything that would tie this country's hands," said Ms. Bass. "He would reserve the right to (intervene) militarily as a last resort."

Judith McGahey of Yancey County, who proposed the amendment, said, "I just don't think the Democratic Party would want to be accused of softness."

There also were no votes on three other resolutions recommended by the party's Platform Committee. They included calls for nuclear arms control and "barrier-free" polling places and a statement of appreciation for Gov. Jim Hunt's service.

Adams said another "seven or eight" resolutions had been submitted in writing. Consideration of those, too, was canceled by the adjournment.

Among them was a resolution submitted by the Seventh Congressional District delegation calling for an end to runoff primaries if, in the first primary, the front-runner received at least 40 percent of the vote.

Damages were estimated at $200 to the Harris car and $400 to the city vehicle.

Also on Saturday, cars driven by Gregory Christopher Bullock of 110 Downing Road and Johnnie Mack Tucker Jr. of Bethel collided on Memorial Drive, resulting in $800 in property damage — $400 to each vehicle. No charges were made.

On Friday, officers charged Helen Henderson Frye of 202 N. Library St. with failing to stop at a stop sign following an accident involving the car she was driving and a vehicle operated by Louis M. Dail of 301 Rawl Road. No one was injured. Damages were estimated at $1,100 to the Frye car and $200 to the Dail ar.

Officers also responded to an accident occurring on Dickinson Avenue Friday involving cars operated by Walter Grant Boswell of Route 8, Greenville, and Seth Wallace Hardy of 203 W. Repairs Scheduled

MIAMI (AP) — The 24,000-ton cruise liner SS Rhapsody, finally pulled from a coral reef where it was grounded nearly three months ago, sets sail from Grand Cayman Island this weekend for repairs and maintenance in Galveston, Texas, officials said.

The Rhapsody was hauled from the reef off Seven Mile Beach on Thursday by a barge operated by a Netherlands salvage company, said Jean Claude Potier of the Miami-based Paquet French Cruises, owner of the Bahamian-registered vessel.

He said he knew of no major damage to the $25 million vessel, which missed 14 scheduled cruises.

Three Escapees Caught In N.J.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A convicted murderer and two other Trenton State Prison inmates tried to escape Saturday by hiding in a food truck, but two were soon caught and the third was found locked in the truck three hours later, right back where he started. A prison employee was charged in the incident.

The last prisoner, convicted robber Harry James, 26, of Camden, was found in a food cart strapped to the inside wall of the truck when authorities searched it about 11:30 a.m.

"The truck was kept locked. They checked it out and there he was," said James Stabile, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

A prison employee, Kenneth Puchtler, 28, of Willingboro, was charged with three counts of aiding and abetting the escape attempt, three counts of conspiracy, three counts of permitting escape and one count of official misconduct, Stabile said.

Puchtler, an institutional trade instructor who did various odd jobs for the prison including making deliveries there, was arrested after an internal investigation and held without bail at Trenton police headquarters, Stabile said.

The three prisoners, among about 25 inmates assigned to work in the kitchen of the maximum-security penitentiary, hid inside carts that were half-loaded with food trays for Jones Farm, a minimum-security prison farm four miles away in Ewing Township, said Charles Trautman, chief of the prison's corrections officers.

The aluminum carts, 5-feet high, 4-feet deep and 3½-feet wide, each hold two vertical rows of food trays.

Sunday Opinion

County Commission Took Proper Step In Repeating 'No'

Pitt County Commissioners had two quick "nos" for the city Board of Education last week.

The commissioners said "no" to a request for withdrawal of the city school budget for 1984-85. And County Manager Reginald Gray said "no" to a request for far more money than the proportionate county allocation.

Gray said it was unrealistic for the city schools to expect a 50.24 percent increase in relation to the schools' present budget.

The city school board was also told that it was the attorney general's and County Attorney W.H. Watson's opinion that withdrawal of the budget was not legal.

The city board had submitted a budget on May 15 and took action to request its withdrawal on June 6, presumably pending the resolving of the school merger issue.

The Pitt County Commissioners have acted properly in these matters. The commissioners have indicated in directives to the two boards that it wants the merger to proceed. We, too, have expressed our editorial support for this much needed move. Because it has not, however, is no reason to move into the new fiscal year without a city school budget.

Nor can the city schools expect appropriations which are disproportionate to the county schools' appropriations. It was long ago decided that all school children in Pitt County should be treated equally insofar as educational spending is concerned, and that is the way it should be.

Merger of the two systems will insure that and we think merger should and will come. In the meantime, however, business has to proceed and that means the city schools need a fiscal year budget, and the County Commissioners must divide the educational funds available as equally as possible.

Electronic Vote Counters Nearer

County officials have been saying they are working toward having electronic voting equipment available to the voters in time for the November general elections.

A major step in that direction was taken last week when County Manager Reginald Gray included $107,425 in his proposed budget to purchase 27 electronic precinct voting machines.

The county has used printed paper ballots for as long as elections have gone on and voters have laboriously marked them, dropped them into an assortment of ballot boxes to be counted far into the night by elections officials.

Voting machines have been used for a long time in large cities and in recent years even rural counties have turned to them. Now new electronic equipment is available which allows the voter to mark a ballot which is read electronically and then falls into a vault. That way at the end of the election day totals are immediately available, but the ballot is preserved in case of malfunction or a recount.

That is clearly the way to speed up the election tallying process in this era when the public wants to know the results almost instantly.

Pitt County seems on the verge of doing what many other counties have already done — that is, modernizing the system of casting and tabulating votes on election night.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Voting is a solemn duty of any citizen of the United States. Right? And whenever an election day comes around, all eligible voters should go to the polls and cast their ballots for the candidates of their choice. Right?

Absolutely right, but somehow voting isn't getting any easier. This is our biggest election year. It is a four-year election when we choose a president and in North Carolina a governor and a U.S. senator. There are also many other state and local offices to be filled. So we go off to the polls on Tuesday after the first Monday in November and vote. Right, but first there are some preliminaries. Democrats and Republicans had a primary on May 8. On both tickets and with a state constitional amendment and local elections to be decided there were 74 decisions to be made.

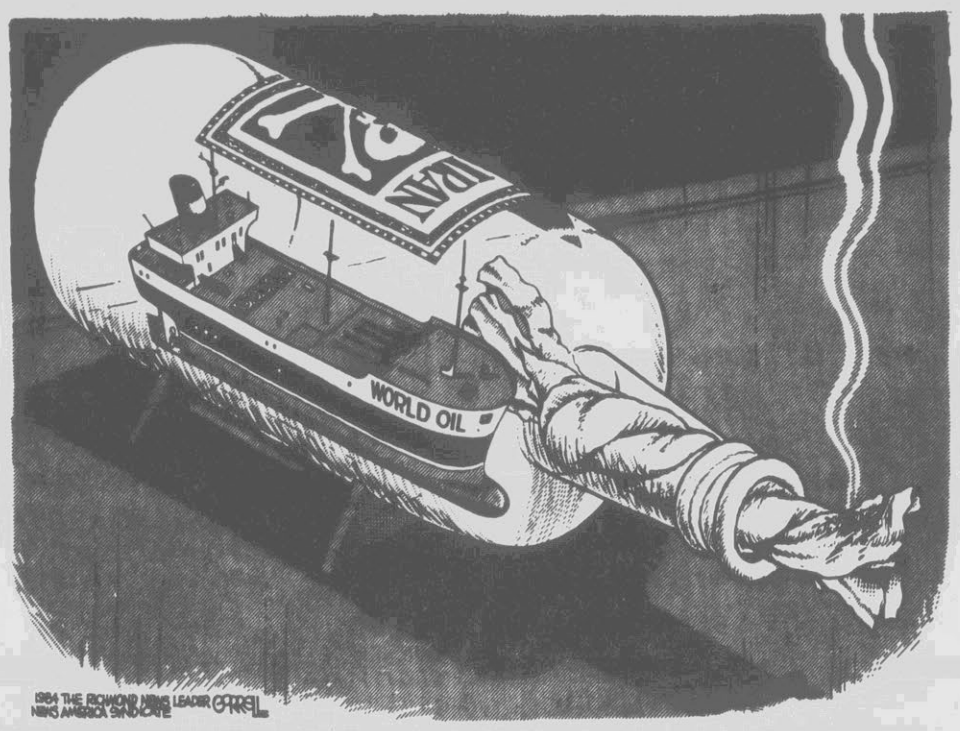

So we did our duty and now it is on to November. Right? Well, no, there was a second primary on June 5. The Democrats had to make a final choice for governor and commissioner of labor and the Republicans had to determine their choice for lieutenant governor. So we voted and now we can prepare for the big shootout in November. Right?

Well, no, there's a primary on July 17 to choose the Democratic state senatorial nominee for the 6th District which takes in the western half of the county. There also might be a second primary for the 6th House District which includes Bethel and Carolina townships in Pitt County. And there is also legal action hanging in Greenville Township for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

OK, so voters involved will go to the polls and finally settle these matters and then it is on to the November election.

Well, possibly, but not certainly. There are four candidates in the Democratic primary for the 6th Senate District. If no one receives a majority there could be a second primary there.

Thus some of us should be prepared to vote and vote and keep voting. Sometimes the price of citizenship is high indeed. We can be certain, however, that the November election date will not be moved. The framers of the Constitution set the date.

The Real Leader

RALEIGH — Either Jim Martin or Rufus Edmisten will be the next governor of North Carolina, right?

Well, in a way, the answer to that question is "yes," and in another way, it is "no." When you ask who gets the title of governor, who gets to live in the big house on Blount Street and who draws down the $85,000 a year salary, then it is correct to say that either Republican Martin or Democrat Edmisten — barring an upset by a minor candidate — will be the next governor. But if you're asking who will really run things in Raleigh, who'll be the next single most powerful politician in North Carolina beginning in 1985, then the answer is more likely Liston Ramsey, speaker of the state House of Representatives.

That, at least, is the way a number of Democratic legislators see the emerging power shuffle in state government. They note that Ramsey, Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green are now the state's three most powerful politicians and that Hunt and Green are leaving town next year after serving two terms. Ramsey is unopposed for re-election to the House from his Madison County district and for an unprecedented third term as speaker.

Therefore, when 1985 arrives, the state's three mnost powerful offices will be occupied by two rookies and one very seasoned speaker.

Why does that make Ramsey more powerful than either the new lieutenant governor or governor? Let's start with lieutenant governor. The House and Senate are supposed to be equal branches of the Legislature but, in fact, one house always flexes a bit more muscle. For Green's first six years on the job, he led the Senate to preeminence over the House. Since 1983, Ramsey appears to have evened things up, maybe moving ahead a bit.

In 1985, either Bob Jordan, the Democrat, or John Carrington, the Republican, will be lieutenant governor. As one Democratic legislator said, "the Senate is going to be in turmoil," next year while the House will be united behind Ramsey. A new lieutenant governor will have to learn his job and appoint new committee chairmen who will have to learn their jobs. "And while they're learning, Liston will be off and running," another legislator said.

Jordan has promised to shake up the Senate leadership, a move which would assure plenty of new chairmen. He might be able to unite the Senate quickly, however, and one stabilizing appointment would be veteran Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, as Appropriations Committee chairman. But Carrington would undoubtedly face a hostile Democratic Senate which would probably strip his office of many of its non-constitutional powers. In either case, Ramsey can be expected to dominate the 1985 General Assembly.

Ramsey can also be expected to wield more power than the next governor. Neither Edmisten nor Martin has any experience preparing the complete state budget. By the time they've put their plans before the assembly, a plan covered with Ramsey's fingerprints will already be there.

If Edmisten is elected, he can probably count on a certain amount of cooperation from Ramsey. But Martin would probably face the same kind of shut-off that Republican Jim Holshouser encountered when he was elected governor. "You have to remember that in this state, the Legislature sets policy. A powerful Democratic governor can influence that policy but not a Republican," one eastern legislator said. (The recent Separation of Powers rulings by the Supreme Court probably assure Martin, however, of a bit more power than Holshouser had.)

In 1985, the new "governor" will move into that fancy mansion in downtown Raleigh. No doubt, Liston Ramsey, the other "governor," will be asked to dinner quite often.

Success

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mark Twain said the only sure things in life are death and taxes, but President Reagan has stipulated that success must be assured before he holds a summit meeting with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko.

Reagan has been urged by two leading Republicans, Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Charles Percy of Illinois, to hold annual summit meetings with the Kremlin leaders with no fixed agenda to discuss the issues that are taking the divided superpowers to the brink.

Baker also described as "anachronistic" the premise that a summit must be arranged in all aspects with assurance of tangible results before it can be held. In other words, a signing ceremony rather than talks that could lead to better understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Percy, who originated the idea of Reagan and the Soviet leaders getting together annually to carry on a dialogue, said it could be done without "high expectations."

But there is a vast reluctance on the part of the president and his foreign policy advisers to go to a summit meeting without all their ducks in a row, not knowing the outcome beforehand. Apparently it would be too much of a gamble for them.

In an election year, Reagan has to decide what is best for him politically — that is, whether it is better to turn his back on the possibility of a summit and face opponents who may charge that he is refusing to talk peace, or agree to hold a meeting with Chernenko that may involve pitfalls and failure to achieve concrete results.

Both Percy and Baker see the world as more dangerous today and with time running out they do not want to take a chance when so much is at stake.

Reagan is insisting that the Soviets first return to negotiations on intermediate range and long range missiles, which were suspended when they walked out in Geneva last fall.

He also has laid down the edict that there will be no negotiations on anti-satellite systems and the "Star Wars" defensive shield in space until they are developed, so they can be used as bargaining chips.

The president rejects negotiations in those areas, claiming there is no possibility of verification that the other side is abiding by a ban.

Report Forces Prudent Reviews

WASHINGTON — One learns early in the pundit business to beware of superlatives. Prudence therefore dictates that a rhetorical question must be posed at the outset of these observations: Is the report of the House subcommittee on the Carter briefing papers the most stupid report ever to emerge on Capitol Hill?

The field of nominations for that accolade is so large that "among the most stupid" seems a just appraisal. The two-volume report weighs 5 pounds, 4 ounces; it runs to 2,454 pages; it cost $500,000 to produce; and no person in his right mind will ever read it all.

The subcommittee, headed by Don Albosta of Michigan, set out to solve a mystery: Who leaked, pilfered, stole, five-fingered or otherwise purloined about 750 pages of material that had been prepared to assist Jimmy Carter in his debate with Ronald Reagan in October 1980? Who delivered this stuff to the enemy camp? This was the subcommittee's $500,000 conclusion:

"It is difficult to reach definitive conclusions as to how the Carter debate briefing materials entered the Reagan-Bush campaign."

There were reasons for this disappointing result. For one thing, the subcommittee's investigators could not determine how much of what had gone where. There was a Big Foreign Policy Book of 250 pages, a Little Foreign Policy Book of 40 pages, a Domestic Papers Book of 170 pages, and some "Mondale Papers" that ran to 274 pages. The investigators interviewed 250 persons, including both Democrats and Republicans, but most of them were afflicted with a common ailment: They could not remember.

The subcommittee was able to identify as "suspects" two young women who were secretary-typists in the Carter White House. Some evidence, described as the "better" evidence, "indicated" that Reagan campaign director Bill Casey was fencing the goods. But "the manner in which the domestic policy briefing book was prepared, controlled, copied and distributed created an almost unlimited number of opportunities and possibilities for its unauthorized use." After its mountain of labor, the subcommittee could not bring forth even a mole.

According to the title, the report deals with "Unauthorized Transfers of Non-Public Information." This raises a nice question: Was any crime committed? None of the material was classified as Top Secret, Secret or even as Confidential. What exactly is "non-public information"? The subcommittee's view appears to be that material prepared specifically for Carter's political campaign was "government property." Really? Says who?

Says Lloyd Cutler, who was White House counsel to Carter. In 1980 he rendered an opinion that campaign briefing materials were official government business and could be prepared at government expense so long as the material dealt with issues involved in the president's official responsibilities. On the other hand, if the material was "designed to attack a position of Governor Reagan" it was campaign material and would have a different status at law.

Let us consider. The domestic briefing book was largely the work of David Rubenstein, deputy assistant to the president for domestic affairs. He had secretarial support from two women on the White House payroll. They typed the report on government time, on government typewriters, on government paper. They delivered the manuscript to a government messenger who made 13 copies on a government copying machine. Were these copies protected government property? Nonsense! They were campaign materials designed to attack Reagan.

The domestic briefing book was a coach's manual for the forthcoming debate. Rubenstein was full of sound advice: "Present your achievements in a positive tone." He urged his president to "use catch phrases, e.g., 'Kemp-Roth is a rich man's tax cut which would flood the country with dollars as fast as the printing presses could print them.'" The briefing book provided Carter with key lines to use on any occasion: "Governor Reagan simply does not understand the consequences of his proposal."

Under the Cutler opinion was this production job a criminal offense? Curiously, the subcommittee seemed to have little interest in pursuing this line of inquiry, but the mysteries of Debategate may never be wholly fathomed. Such a task would demand the talents of Travis McGee and Nero Wolfe, or better yet, the skills of the Keystone Kops.

To the editor:

A prominent American said recently that special interests are a greater danger to our national welfare than foreign threats. In other words, our worst enemy is not "they" but "us." Each one of us is a member of one or more special interests expressed by various social, economic, and political groups.

Another person has stated that we know enough to save ourselves but it remains to be seen that we are mature enough.

Our recent response in North Carolina and other parts of the country to the devastating storms this spring, shows that we can act unselfishly for the common good when we want to.

As we face the present and future dangers to our nation, may we join together in placing our concern for America and the welfare of all ahead of our special interests.

To the editor:

This Sunday, I thought, I would do it at last. I would read one of Alvin Taylor's columns and remain awake from start to finish.

Saturday night I turned in early, right after the Love Boat, and slept a solid 10 hours. Sunday morning I drank three cups of Cuban coffee (I once drove non-stop to Reno on just a demitasse of the stuff), and warmed up with a few calisthenics and a story from the Enquirer: "Does Mother Theresa have a drinking problem?" (No, as it turns out.)

"Last week was Industry Appreciation Week in Pitt County," I read. Uh-oh. You're getting sleepy, you're getting very sleepy. "... and for those who can recall years in the past ..." Such evocative prose. All of a sudden I found myself recalling years in the past. I remembered 1954. Willy Mays' catch of Vic Wertz's hit in the World Series. Two months later, I found a bicycle under the tree. Well, not actually under the tree, but close by. And then ... Wait a minute, fellow. You're never going to make it through Alvin Taylor's column if you don't buckle down and read. "... the appreciation is heartfelt." ZZZZZ.

Make that ZZZZZ in italics. Lucky thing the wife keeps smelling salts around or I might still be face down in a bowl of Smurfberry Crunch.

The man must have done his basic training in writing at Camp Lejeune. Why does a newspaper dose us up with its most powerful soporific on the only day when the paper arrives in the morning?

This week, though, I'm going to do it. Now if I can only figure how to read and run my fingernails across a blackboard at the same time.

Reagan Removes An Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — By asserting that he is "willing to meet and talk any time" with Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, President Reagan appears to be attempting to remove a potential campaign issue on which his Democratic critics have been hoping to capitalize.

At his news conference Thursday night, Reagan seemed intent on doing away with the notion that he has not gone far enough in easing tensions with the Soviets.

Although his remarks were somewhat ambiguous, Reagan indicated that he was no longer insisting that there be prior assurances of a successful outcome before he would agree to a meeting with Chernenko.

This was the second time in two weeks that Reagan has acted to mollify critics on a divisive foreign policy issue. On June 1, he dispatched Secretary of State George P. Shultz to Nicaragua where an agreement was reached to hold talks on easing tensions with that country.

For the previous two years, the administration had resisted such an overture.

Thursday night, under pressure from all three Democratic presidential candidates and from Sens. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., and Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., Reagan showed new flexibility on the issue of the Soviet summit.

While insisting that he was not playing "political games" with this delicate issue, Reagan's apparent aim was to take the peace issue away from the Democrats this fall.

Reagan also recognized that superpower summitry does not automatically lead to an easing of tensions, recalling that the 1961 meeting between John F. Kennedy and Nikita S. Krushchev was counterproductive.

Kennedy had been in office only five months at the time of the meeting and felt that Krushchev had tried to intimidate him. Within two months after the meeting, Moscow and Washington were in a full-scale crisis over Berlin.

But that summit appears to be an exception. The meetings with Soviet leaders of Jimmy Carter in 1979, Gerald Ford in 1974, Richard Nixon in 1972 and 1973, Lyndon Johnson in 1967 and Dwight Eisenhower in 1959 all were regarded as successes.

Generally, however, the meetings were held to ratify agreements reached at lower levels, usually involving arms control. Nowadays, there is virtually no prospect of such an agreement, suggesting that if a Reagan-Chernenko meeting does take place, broad disagreements would be almost a certainty assuming the two leaders go beyond generalities.

But Reagan clearly suggested he does not anticipate a summit over the short-term.

"I wouldn't expect them (the Soviets) to do anything that might help me in the coming election," Reagan said Thursday night.

So, in all likelihood, Reagan will finish out his first term without meeting Chernanko. But he has made the point he wanted to make — that the blame rests with Moscow and not him. On this issue, he is hoping the Democrats will not find him politically vulnerable.

What is open to debate is whether Reagan contributed to the present climate of distrust with the anti-Soviet rhetoric he used in his first three years in office. He has called the Soviet Union "the focus of evil" and has said he would like to see Marxism relegated to the "ash heap of history."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters today that "he wished he could be encouraged" about the possibility of a summit meeting, but that Reagan has failed to provide the groundwork for such a session.

"You can't go around calling people evil and godless, build a fence around yourself and then throw stones, then extend your hand and expect them to come in and sit down with you," O'Neill said.

The speaker said he hopes Reagan does meet as soon as possible with the Soviets to further the cause of peace in the world. But he added that he thinks the president, now running for re-election, is "using it as a political ploy."

Reagan sees his remarks as having less influence on Moscow than the almost uninterrupted leadership succession problems the Soviets have had since he took office. His view is that until now, none of the three Kremlin leaders who have been in office since his inauguration have had the authority necessary to ensure a flexible negotiating position.

Both Leonid Brezhnev and Yuri Andropov suffered from debilitating ailments during their periods in office and Chernenko also is believed to have serious health problems.

Reagan's six predecessors each were able to meet at the summit, in part, because their Soviet counterparts all were in good health — politically as well as physically.

Contrasts In Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan speaks about the Soviet Union, some observers have a hard time figuring out whether he's trying to be conciliatory, tough, or both.

During his recent trip to Europe, for example, the president made speeches that seemed designed to reassure European allies who are jittery about the increasingly hostile state of U.S.-Soviet relations. But the speeches also contained some harsh rhetoric.

When he visited the beaches of Normandy, France, on June 6, the 40th anniversary of D-Day, the president called for reconciliation with the Soviet Union "so, together, we can lessen the risks of war, now and forever."

But, just three paragraphs earlier, he had gone out of his way to criticize Moscow, saying that nearly 40 years after World War II, Soviet troops were still in Europe "uninvited, unwanted, unyielding..." while mentioning in passing that the Soviets lost 20 million lives in that war.

He also urged Moscow to return to the nuclear arms bargaining table, but complained that the Soviets "appear to have chosen to withdraw, and to try to achieve their objective through propaganda, rather than negotiations."

While this may appear to be a contradictory approach, Richard Burt, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, says it's simply part of the administration's Soviet policy in which the desire to renew U.S.-Soviet dialogue is just one component.

Burt said he doesn't believe Reagan's harsh words affect the Kremlin, partly because Moscow itself is engaged in an "unremitting propaganda campaign."

"That doesn't bother us," he said. "We are big boys. We understand what they are doing."

And Burt acknowledges that one of the reasons for Reagan's speeches in Europe was to calm the fears of the allies.

He said there was "much less understanding in Europe about the policies of Ronald Reagan than in the United States," so the trip gave him a chance to show that he's "not a saber rattler" or the "trigger-happy warmonger" portrayed by some critics.

As for the Soviets, Burt said, "I don't think they are going to be affected by rhetoric."

And a White House official, speaking anonymously, said it wouldn't have been in character for Reagan "to fail to describe the Soviet Union as he sees it."

The White House official said Reagan was not sure that the Soviets "understand that we do not have aggressive intentions toward them. He feels there is a misapprehension on their part." And Reagan would like to convince them otherwise, but not at a U.S.-Soviet summit.

"We would like to get that through to them, but that's not sufficient reason for going to a summit," the official said.

Ripoff?

NEW YORK (AP) — From the Washington think tank that brings you a stream of politically conservative suggestions comes this one on public housing: Sell it off at a big discount to the tenants.

A ripoff of taxpayers, you say? Not at all, says the Heritage Foundation. It contends that many responsible tenants deserve to own their units and that taxpayers deserve to be relieved of public housing burdens.

It suggests that an even bigger payoff might come later, as owners protect their newly won stake, demonstrate more constructive behavior and, building on their experience, develop businesses and community projects.

The proposal has been developed by Stuart Butler, widely credited with the idea of enterprise zones, in which state and local governments generate jobs in depressed areas through tax incentives and relaxed regulations.

Even the liberal Sabre Foundation, another Washington think tank, now supports enterprise zones as effective. And, Butler claims, his proposal of turning tenants into homeowners can be equally or more successful.

It is this:

Public housing buildings should be considered for sale at a substantial discount — probably 30 percent of market value — to responsible associations of occupying tenants.

Tenant associations that prove responsiblity and capability would apply to the Department of Housing and Urban Development to buy their buildings from the local housing authority. The latter would supply a mortgage.

At this point the criticisms begin, the first of which is that discounted sales constitute a subsidy to buyers. To which free-enterpriser Butler responds with the observation that subsidies are nothing new in housing.

Middle and upper-income buyers, for example, are able to deduct interest on their mortgage when filing their income tax. But this advantage is of little value to many public housing residents, who do not earn enough to benefit.

The high cost of perpetuating public housing also must be considered. He argues that the construction of such buildings costs about 25 percent more than comparable private housing because of various reasons.

Two of those reasons:

—Because funds are often obtained through offerings of tax-exempt securities, the construction price in effect includes a subsidy to higher-income investors.

—The actual construction of such housing often is under conditions of the Davis-Bacon Act, which means higher wages to construction workers than they might obtain on a private project. In effect, another subsidy.

"There seems little justice in forcing low-income homebuyers to cover the capital costs of a subsidy to Americans earning well above their income," he reasons.

Butler offers more positive reasons, too.

He reminds Americans that public housing projects were meant to ameliorate urban social problems but that they have actually added to the destabilization of neighborhoods. His proposals conceivably could reverse that situation.

"It would help stabilize the value of public rental stock near tenant-owned units, and would plant the seeds of improvement in the nation's most desolate neighborhoods," he says in his written proposal.

Expanding on his paper in an interview he becomes eloquent. The purpose of making homeowners of tenants, he says, is not just to take a burden off the taxpayers. It is, he maintains, a practial way to improve the human condition.

It is obvious, he says, that many tenants have neither the money to buy at full price nor the maintenance and accounting skills to protect their investment. But costs can be cut and skills can be developed.

He suggest that an interim stage, a tenant management association, is necessary to bring out the latent entrepreneurial skills of residents.

When You First Awaken ...

Imagine Pat Ryan's surprise when he awakened in a Hickory hotel that November morning and found an attractive damsel snuggled up in bed with him. Surprise turned to consternation when he discovered the bed was also occupied by an infant boy.

The young woman identified herself as Martha Barkley Ryan and she told Pat they had been married the night before. The child? Oh, he was her son by a previous liaison.

The circumstances of the marriage — and its almost immediate breakup — of Basil "Pat" Ryan, grandson of fabulously wealthy Thomas Fortune Ryan, and Martha Barkley, daughter of a Morganton political leader, titillated North Carolina and the nation back in the fall of 1937 and for some time afterward.

Apparently Ryan got on the telephone and summoned attorney Charles W. Bagby who had his client admitted to Hickory Memorial Hospital. Presumably the bride returned to her parents' home in Morganton.

When the press got wind of the marriage several days later, Bagby told them Ryan had no recollection of the marriage. He said his client had imbibed so much South Mountain corn whiskey he did not remember a thing until he awakened in the hotel room.

"When he came to himself he learned that a marriage ceremony had been performed; and he greatly regrets the embarrassing situation in which the young lady and his friends are now placed," he said. Bagby said Ryan was still in the hospital "and his condition is such that it is impossible for anyone to interview him."

The new Mrs. Ryan immediately took issue with Bagby's claim that Ryan was so drunk he did not recall going through the wedding ceremony. She asserted it was "utterly untrue" and it was "unfair to Mr. Ryan and to me to slander our marriage in such a manner."

"I am sure that Mr. Ryan will verify my statement that the marriage was consummated and all circumstances were discussed by us prior to the ceremony," she said.

Presumably, the young bride was contending she and Ryan had discussed her infant son who was born two months earlier in Morganton's Grace Hospital. Two months later charges of non-support she had brought against the child's father, a 24-year-old former Morganton youth, were dismissed after she and the father reached "a satisfactory settlement for the support, maintenance and education" of the child.

Newspaper readers learned that the 28-year-old Ryan had lived in Hickory for about two months and had spent much of his time assisting in the coaching of a local football team on a voluntary basis. They also learned that he had met Martha Barkley, who had lived in Hickory and gone to high school there before her family moved to Morganton, at the home of her half-sister, Mrs. Clem Geitner, a dancing teacher. They were married two days later.

Reporters learned that the wedding took place at the Morganton home of Justice of the Peace Earl Franklin at about 10 p.m., about an hour and a half after they obtained a license at the home of Register of Deeds Lawrence Crouch.

Asked by a reporter if Ryan was drunk, Crouch replied, "No. He was cold sober." He said that Ryan was sober enough to notice that Crouch had misspelled his name as: "Basil A. Rhyne." He said the young man drew a line through "Rhyne" and substituted "Ryan."

Franklin said when the young couple got to his house, "Ryan was very talkative and acted like a man who had had maybe a couple of bottles of beer." But the night clerk at the Hickory hotel said by the time they arrived there shortly after midnight, bringing the infant, Danny Boy, with them, Ryan was "so drunk he could not sign his name." He said while Ryan sat in a chair and Mrs. Ryan stood holding her son, the clerk signed the register for them, "Pat Ryan and family."

Ryan was in and out of the hospital a couple of times. Shortly before Christmas he left Hickory to spend the holidays in New York where he was photographed on New Year's Eve. The photo showed him with his right hand raised, and a liquor bottle in his left hand. The caption said he was "swearing off liquor during 1938."

Meanwhile, the bride filed suit against Ryan, asking $15,000 a year alimony, $15,000 for lawyer's fees and a legal separation on the grounds of desertion. She said the few days she had known Ryan were "just like a merry-go-round."

When her case came before Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo in New York, he took his text on "pampered youth." He said that Ryan, who did not attend the hearing, was a perfect example of such pampering, and asserted that American womanhood "no matter how humble her station in life" was "not to be treated as a chattel and afterward dropped like a toy by a drunken playboy." He awarded a separation, $10,000 a year alimony and $7,500 in lawyers' fees.

It took Martha Ryan's attorneys 21 months to catch up with the young traction and copper fortune heir in order to serve on him Justice Cotillo's order. Attorney Abraham J. Halprin told the court that a process server "located him working on the grounds of Brooklea sanatorium at Port Chester, N.Y." He said if Ryan failed to make payment within a reasonable time he would seek a contempt of court citation. Mrs. Ryan, meanwhile, had gone to work as a hostess in a New York restaurant.

Martha and Pat Ryan got into print again in July 1942. News items from Santa Fe, N.M., said she had been granted a divorce and awarded a case settlement of $30,000 — small potatoes compared to the estate of $140 million which her husband's grandfather left upon his death in 1926, and also small potatoes compared to the $1.2 million trust fund Pat Ryan reportedly inherited.

In granting Martha Barkley Ryan the divorce, Judge David Chavez Jr. set aside a divorce decree Ryan had obtained in Santa Fe the year before. That decree had been granted Ryan in an uncontested case — without any settlement — in which he had alleged advertisements he had carried in newspapers and notices sent to his wife's last known address had gone unanswered.

But Martha Barkley Ryan may have found happiness in the end. An article in the Hickory Daily Record on July 17, 1945, said she had been married four days previously at Lenoir to an Army lieutenant.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Central America situation could be a political liability for President Reagan in November, with many Republicans as well as Democrats and Independents critical of his handling of that area of foreign policy and fearful that the situation could lead to "another Vietnam."

In the latest Gallup survey, 72 percent of Americans aware of the situation feel it is either very or fairly likely that our involvement in Central America could turn into a situation like Vietnam — that the U.S. would become more and more deeply involved as time goes on. A total of 61 percent of Republicans, 70 percent of Democrats and 72 percent of Independents share these views. The current figures closely match those recorded in four surveys conducted over the last 15 months in which the question focused on U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

The latest survey also shows 49 percent of the public, including 31 percent of Republicans, 62 percent of Democrats, and 45 percent of Independents saying they disapprove of the way President Reagan is handling the situation in Central America.

Another Gallup survey shows that the public opposes, by a margin of 49 percent to 29 percent, providing military assistance to Central American governments, believing we should not get involved in the internal affairs of these nations.

Although concern over Central America is not currently one of the American public's principal worries, with only about one-fifth saying they have followed the situation there very closely, it is a key element in the public's generally negative assessment of President Reagan's handling of foreign policy. Recent surveys show that the president's prime area of vulnerability, in terms of voter support, lies in the area of foreign policy.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,516 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 18-21.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction.

RDI Observes 20th Anniversary This Month

By LESLIE TODD
ECU News Bureau

Employees at East Carolina University's Regional Development Institute are lighting the candles this month to celebrate the public service agency's 20th anniversary.

Since the institute was founded in 1964, RDI specialists have had a hand in more than 2,000 community development and business assistance projects ranging from sweeping regional plans to management suggestions for small business owners. Permits have been filed, studies conducted, and plans drawn for local governments, industries, and individuals scattered across a 32-county service area that includes most of North Carolina east of Interstate 95.

"Because of RDI, people in this area have had access to economic opportunities that would otherwise have passed them by," says Janice Faulkner, director of the Institute since 1982. "Through planning and other types of assistance, we have helped eastern North Carolina to take the best and avoid the worst aspects of development.

The need for information gathering and planning for economic development on a regional basis led to the original proposal establishing RDI. Drafted by geography Professor Robert Cramer and backed by former ECU Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins, the proposal described an agency that would make the knowledge of college faculty and staff available to solve problems affecting citizens of the region.

The late Thomas W. Willis of Farmville, an active veteran of economic development efforts in North Carolina, was hired as the fledgling institute's first full-time director. He immediately set out to lead RDI the way he knew best — luring new industries to the area and helping exisiting businesses expand.

In 1967, years before most state or local governments began wooing industry on an organized basis, a newspaper story on RDI boasted that "2.5 million facts about North Carolina's Coastal Plain are being made available to businessmen and industrialists through the computerization of regional information at RDI." In addition to the data bank, a series of overlay maps, designed to show businessmen prospective plant sites at a glance, were produced by RDI employees.

Other early projects included the location of plant sites for industries requiring large amounts of water and the selection of other sites along navigable waterways that could accommodate barge docking facilites. Feasibility studies examined the potential market for dozens of businesses and services.

Preliminary designs were drafted for city parks, civic centers, subdivisions and industrial parks. New industries were located in many Coastal Plain towns with the help of Willis and other RDI specialists.

By 1974, when the insitute moved into its present quarters at the corner of First and Reade streets, new patterns in the process of regional development were changing RDI's approach to area serivce. Federal support for regional projects was running strong. New government agencies and expanded municipal and county planning staff were tackling many of the challenges met by RDI in its first decade of service.

Funding for the institute also changed. Initial funding through large grants from the U.S. Economic Development Administration was gradually phased out and replaced with complete support provided by the state of North Carolina through ECU.

As a result of these forces, the Institute shifted its course, placing greater emphasis on responding to specific requests for services generated primarily by small towns and individual businesses. The number of projects increased, but the work carried less regional impact.

A 1977-78 annual report describes the type pf services provided by RDI during this period. Of the 137 projects accepted by RDI staffers that year, many were feasibility studies for small businesses ranging from frog farming to boat storage and day camps.

Other efforts attempted to help businessmen solve financial or management problems. Communities were assisted in the preparation of park and playground plans, promotional brochures, and downtown redevelopment proposals.

Large-scale projects, such as a study of Outer Banks barrier dunes with the National Park Service, were still performed but no longer held the spotlight at what Ms. Faulkner describes as a "passive" agency. Work was produced almost entirely by RDI staff members with limited input from ECU faculty.

A final period of transition in the early 1980s was accompanied by a change in the institute's leadership. After 17 years as RDI's cheif officer, Tom Willis resigned in 1981 and was replaced by assistant director Tim Brinn. Brinn was followed within a year by Ms. Faulkner.

The course set by the new directors was drawn from studies on RDI's performance done by an ECU faculty committee and by the RDI staff itself. The reports recommended that the agency adopt a more aggressive policy for identifying and solving major regional problems and called for RDI to increase its involvement with ECU faculty and students.

Shrinking federal participation in community developoment programs and increased demand for regional planning assistance also prompted RDI staff to refocus attention on broader issues put aside during the '70ss.

According to Ms. Faulkner, current priorities at RDI are aimed at increasing the agency's regional impact. A few recent highlights:

•Updating and expansion of the RDI data base to include a computerized mapping and graphic arts resource center.

•Re-establishing RDI as a key source of regional facts and figures by increasing the quantity and quality of publications from the Institute.

•Reaching larger numbers of business people and community leaders through seminars and conferences featuring well-known speakers on topics of regional importance.

•Maintaining a high level of service through greater cooperation with ECU faculty and greater use of student interns on RDI projects.

Ms. Faulkner also pointed out that the installation of new microcomputer equipment, publication in 1983 of a widely-used atlas depicting demographic and economic trends in eastern North Caroina and the scheduling last year of more than 400 conferences at RDI's Willis Building are examples that show the Institute is moving well in the direction it wants to go.

She also pointed to the extensive involvement of ECU faculty in a cultural program series sponsored by RDI in conjunction with "America's 400th Birthday" celebration and the tripling of student internships at the agency as clear signs of improvement in faculty and student involvement.

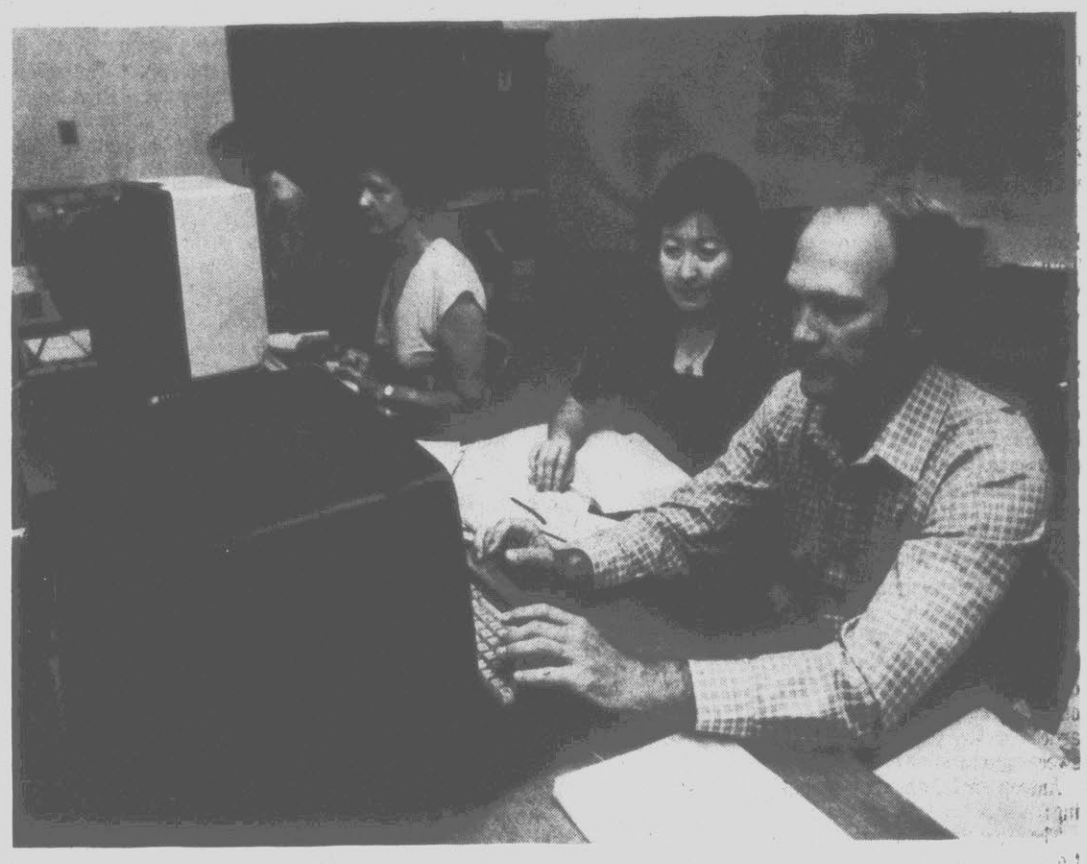

As far as regional development is concerned, Ms. Faulkner sees agricultural concerns as one of the most important issues in eastern North Carolina's future.

"Our greatest need now is to take advantage of our agricultural assets," she said. "There is a big need to look at new agricultural markets, identify better growing and processing techniques and explore new types of crops."

"We can't engage in a 'magic dust' approach to development, sprinkling a little money and effort here and there and expecting great things to result. We must pursue realistic, long-range goals that meet the needs of the region as a whole," Ms. Faulkner said.

RDI'S HOME BASE — ECU Regional Development Institute's Thomas W. Willis Building houses offices for the staff, conference rooms, a library and a 300-seat auditorium. Named for RDI's first director, the 10-year-old building overlooks the Tar River and Town Common in downtown Greenville. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

RESOURCE CENTER — The resource center at ECU's Regional Development Institute provides answers to questions on eastern North Carolona's population, culture or economy. The computerized data bank is currently being expanded to include computer graphics and mapping components. These new tools will allow RDI staffers to visually display stored information in easy-to-read graphs, maps or charts. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Leslie Todd)

Public Hearing Set Monday

County Board Gives Early Approval To Budget Items

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners continued their study of the proposed 1984-85 budget Friday and gave tentative approval to most items as recommended by County Manager Reginald Gray.

The board, which will hold a public hearing on the budget at 7 p.m. Monday at the county office building, has only three areas left to review — recommendations for funding Pitt Community College for the coming year and recommended appropriations for the city and county school systems. However, funding for education takes up the largest percentage of local property tax revenue.

Friday, commissioners gave tentative approval to a $4.96 million social services budget ($4.65 million this year), which includes $1.95 million in local revenue ($1.72 million this year).

The largest increases in the department's budget are in the area of grants ($1.74 million recommended, compaired with $1.56 million this year), with Medicaid leading with a total of $814,400 ($680,000 this year).

Also receiving tentative approval: $2.37 million for mental health ($2.43 million this year), which includes $246,100 in local funds ($196,000 this year); $1.66 million for the health department ($1.51 million this year), including $912,700 in local money ($824,454 this year); and $780,288 for solid waste ($581,549 this year), including $10,000 for expansion of the maintenance shop at the landfill and $136,000 for a new compactor.

Included in the budget for Revenue Sharing funds and given tentative approval Friday is $227,000 for new vehicles and $282,000 for a new mental health building, as well as $107,425 for the purchase of electronic voting machines and $96,000 for a new animal shelter.

Tentative approval was also given for contributions to a capital reserve fund, including $224,500 for landfill equipment, $25,000 for tax mapping, $16,000 for land and $15,000 for a new bookmobile.

Gray, in his budget message to the board earlier last week recommended a 4.5 cents per $100 valuation tax increase, pointed out that there has been no hike in the tax rate — presently 54 cents per $100 valuation — since 1980.

Bethel Man Gets Letter

Former Bethel Policeman Henry Williams received a signed letter from President Reagan Thursday commending him for saving a person's life on May 24 of this year.

"I want to congratulate and commend you for your outstanding act of heroism," the president wrote.

Williams was credited with saving the life of John Robert Rogers of Princeville, who tried to kill a water moccasin with a piece of board but was bitten on the hand in the process. Williams helped Rogers while the rescue squad was called.

The letter from Reagan, dated June 11, told Williams that he had "proven himself to be courageous, quick-thinking and concerned for the well-being of your fellowman. Although others will long remember and admire you for what you have done, your greatest satisfaction must come from knowing you did everything in your power to help in a time of great need."

Williams said he was surprised to receive the letter, which he thought was a birthday card before he opened it.

Legislators Say It's All Talk, No Action

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Spending, tax repeals, hazardous waste disposal and limits on phosphates are topics under discussion in the Legislature, but lawmakers say they're frustrated because committee meetings are more talk than action.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, calculated Thursday that the 50 senators had wasted 2,400 hours since they convened for a short session June 7.

He said there had been time for parties, dedication of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina and a trip to the state zoo, but he didn't see much happening to proposed legislation.

"It's time I think that we start thinking about going to work here and getting this session behind us," Lawing said. "We're floundering around like a ship without a rudder."

But any lack of action did not stem from a lack of bills. Several study commissions sponsored legislation on complex topics including hazardous waste, phosphate limits and sweeping education reforms.

Among the legislative action pending:

The joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee cleared the first hurdle to completing the 1984-85 budget Thursday when legislative analysts delivered their economic forecast. The budget is the main order of business for the session.

The analysts predict the General Assembly has an additional $602 million to spend because of an expanding economy but warned that an economic downturn could stall revenue growth in late 1985 and early 1986.

Budget leaders say the forecast means legislators need to trim about $40 million from the proposed $629.8 million in additions to the 1984-85 budget.

That package includes a 10 percent cost-of-living pay raise for public school teachers and state employees and money to reduce the size of classrooms in grades four through six.

But disagreement apparently remains over proposals to give teachers a salary reclassification that amounts to a 5 percent pay raise or a $900 adjustment to their salary classification, in addition to a 10 percent across-the-board pay raise.

The budget package before the committee includes the $900 salary adjustment, which would amount to a 17 percent pay raise for teachers at the bottom of the pay scale and a 14 percent raise for teachers getting the highest salary.

Among the proposed additions range from $2.4 million for expanding a seventh-grade vocational education program to 72 new sites and $2.2 million for training workers to help them get off welfare to $150,000 for repairs to the roof of the World Golf Hall of Fame.

The House tentatively approved a bill Tuesday that would revise the way the sales tax is calculated on "casual" sales of automobiles between individuals.

The bill would base the tax on an affidavit signed by the car owners specifying the purchase price. Anyone who knowingly falsified the affidavit would be guilty of a misdemeanor.

The tax, levied by the 1983 General Assembly, has been based on "book values," listings by the state Division of Motor Vehicles of approximate values of specific makes and models of cars.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said he introduced the bill because many people are buying cars for far less than the "book value."

A bill that would allow utility customers to deduct half the cost of a 6 percent gross receipts tax on their federal income tax forms was approved by the House Finance Committee.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the tax is passed along to customers. He said a future goal is to get another 1½ percent of the utilities tax reclassified as a local option tax and allow taxpayers to write it off their taxes too.

Efforts to repeal or soften the blow of the intangibles tax were abundant. The tax, which generates about $60 million a year, affects money in savings accounts, stocks and bonds.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, introduced a bill to phase out the tax and reimburse local governments for half the revenue lost.

Senate Finance Committee Co-chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, introduced a bill to repeal the tax and reimburse local governments for the loss at rates that decline during the next three years.

Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, unsuccessfully tried to repeal the intangibles tax during House debate on a bill to exempt shoppers' guides from sales taxes. House Speaker Liston Ramsey ruled the amendment out of order, so no vote was taken.

Industrial recruiters have long sought the repeal of the tax and Lawing predicted that within five years, his bill would generate money for the state.

"It would bring a lot of people who have got their assets somewhere else," Lawing said.

The question of how to deal with North Carolina's hazardous waste, which delayed adjournment of the 1983 legislative session, was raised anew when identical bills were introduced in the House and Senate.

The bill would create a nine-member Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission to recruit a private company to build a hazardous waste treatment facility in the state. If none is found, the commission could build and operate the facility.

Environmentalists would have liked the bill to ban hazardous waste landfills. The bill would not do that, but it would prohibit a landfill or a long-term storage facility from being established until at least one treatment facility is operating.

"I think this bill has a more than 50-50 chance of passing," said Sen. Joe Thomas, D-Craven, one of the bill's sponsor. "Last time, everybody wanted a bill and we couldn't get one together... I'm not saying this is perfect, but it will get us started."

Members of a legislative study commission who believe phosphorus is hazardous to the quality of water in North Carolina's rivers and lakes are urging that levels of phosphorus in detergents be limited to 0.5 percent by weight.

Laundry detergents contain phosphate, a form of the nutrient of phosphorus. The nutrient contributes to the growth of algae, microscopic plants that can hurt water quality. Already there are algae problems in the Neuse and Chowan rivers.

Opponents say there are other larger sources of phosphates and argue that the bill would just cost consumers an additional $9 per person per year in laundry bills.

A package of sweeping education reform bills was introduced as the result of a study by the Public Education Policy Council. The bills call for spending $51.5 million on items such as high school textbooks, compensation for decline in enrollment and finance officers in each school unit.

Other parts of the package require the state Board of Education to develop a standard course of study for all public school students, set qualifications for superintendents and principals and direct the state board to make plans for evaluating teacher performance.

Tennessee Won't Pay Reward

By VIOLA GIENGER
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A reward offered for the capture of two prison escapees won't be paid despite pleas from North Carolina officials that the money go to a blind man whose wife died after a fugitive forced his way into their home, officials say.

Gov. Lamar Alexander offered two $5,000 rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Ronald Freeman and James Clegg, who escaped from Fort Pillow State Prison on Feb. 18.

Jerry Knighton of Marion, N.C., and North Carolina authorities said in telephone interviews Friday they wrote letters to Alexander urging him to give any reward to Rassie C. Harvey, Knighton's father-in-law.

Harvey's wife, Molly, 63, died of a heart attack she suffered when Freeman forced his way into their home March 7.

Knighton said he alerted police that Freeman was in the Harvey home but wants his father-in-law to get the reward because "he needs it to pay off the rest of the funeral expenses and the bills." Even Harvey's guide dog is starving itself because of grief over Mrs. Harvey's death.

But a spokesman for Alexander said the reward for Freeman will not be paid because he was killed the same day in a shootout with police before they could arrest him.

"It's not our money, it's the taxpayers' and we have to take steps to be sure we give it to the right people," John Parish, the spokesman, said Friday. "We simply have to have a procedure and that's the procedure we've had and it seems to work. ...

"And in the Clegg case, the reward will be given to the person who the governor believes deserves it, based on the recommendation of the district attorneys involved."

That reward, however, will be given only if and when Clegg is convicted.

Clegg of Bristol, Tenn., was captured shortly after Freeman was fatally shot at an abandoned house where he holed up after eluding authorities at the Harvey home.

Maj. Don Ramsey of the McDowell County Sheriff's Department in North Carolina said the department sent its letter to Alexander within two weeks of Mrs. Harvey's death.

"We haven't heard a thing," Ramsey said. "We felt like if there was a reward, it ought to go to Mr. Harvey for the role he played in it all — losing his wife and everything."

Knighton said he also sent a letter to Alexander June 8 asking that the reward be given to his father-in-law.

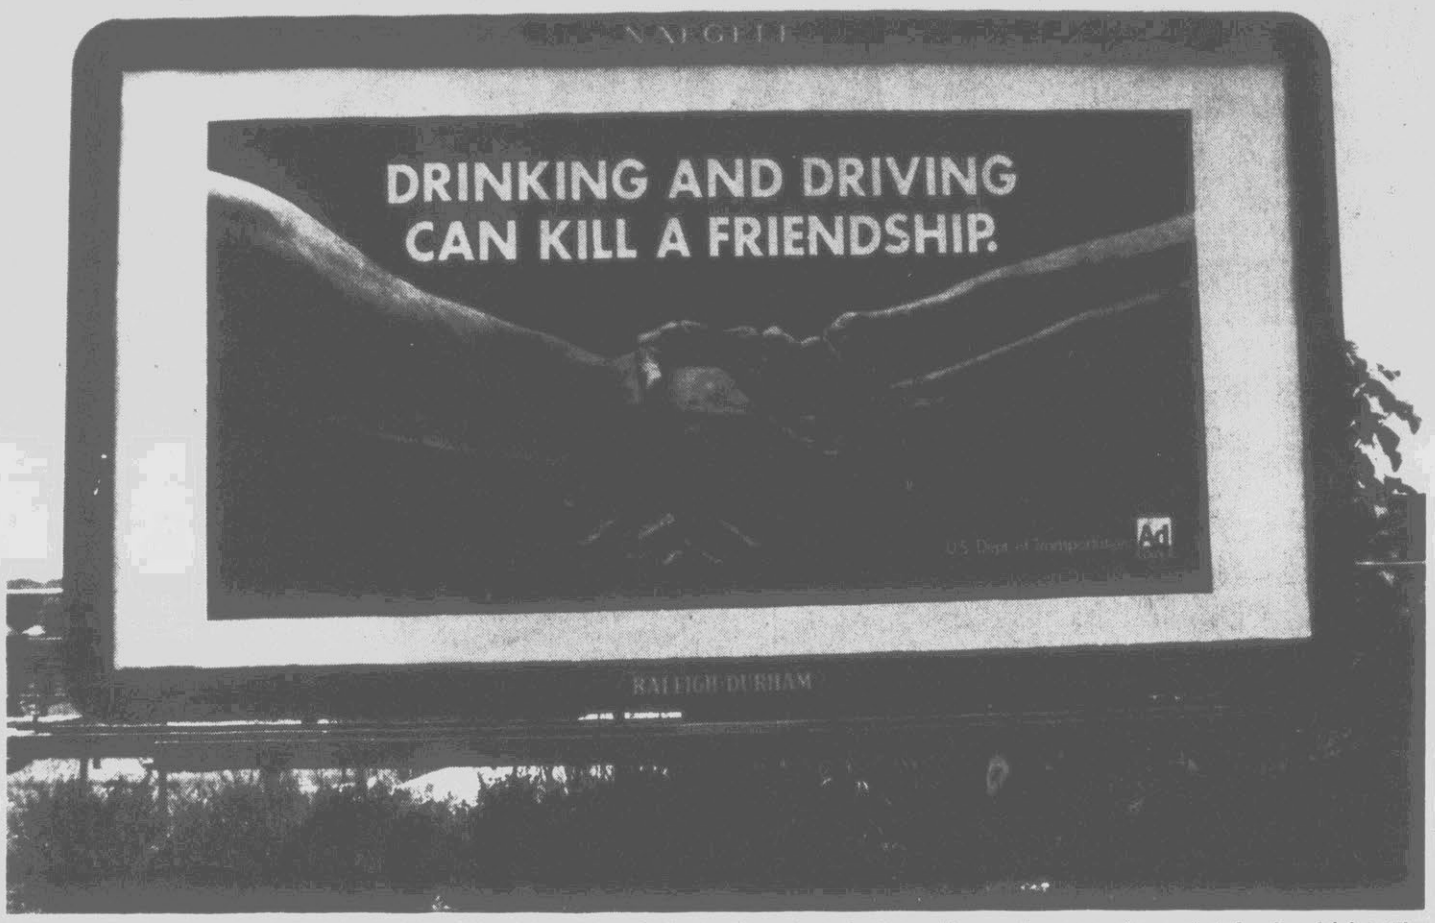

Harvey, 68, said he now lives alone. He said none of his family has heard from Alexander's office.

"I ain't doing too well. I'm all by myself here," Harvey said. "Except for my Seeing Eye Dog, at least, and he's grieving himself to death."

Harvey said the 10½-year-old dog, named Uther, eats only every two days or so and veterinarians told him the dog is depressed over the death of Mrs. Harvey.

"Anything would help," Knighton said. Harvey is "all by himself now. When that dog dies, he'll really be lost."

Carolinas Beaches Expect Good Year

By The Associated Press

With vacationers packing the beaches from Nags Head to Hilton Head Island, S.C., tourism officials say 1984 is shaping up as the best season they've seen in several years.

"We've already had a couple of stores say this past weekend was the biggest weekend they could ever remember," said Barbara LaRoque of the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce, which covers beaches from Atlantic to Emerald Isle.

"And it hasn't stopped," Ms. LaRoque said. "It's been unbelievable. We expect the biggest summer yet."

Fewer visitors are expected from other countries since foreign currency is weak in the United States. But officials say out-of-state visitors, especially those from Ohio and Pennsylvania, are hitting North Carolina and South Carolina beaches in record numbers.

About 250,000 visitors each weekday vacation along the Grand Strand — 60 miles of beach from the North Carolina border south to Georgetown, S.C., statistics show. It's estimated that number rises to 300,000 on weekends.

"It's been very hard to find rooms, especially on weekends," said Marie Woodward, executive coordinator of the Myrtle Beach Hotel and Motel Association. "It might take a little more searching. (But) there are vacancies you can find."

In the Wilmington area, where beach officials are hoping for at least a 14 percent increase, conventions averaging 182 people per meeting in 1982 now average 383 per meeting.

Wrightsville Beach is reporting about 7,000 more cars per Saturday this summer over 1983 and the Morehead City-Atlantic Beach bridge saw 18- to 20 percent more traffic around Memorial Day this year than last year.

Hunt, Edmisten Heat Up Their Rhetoric

State Democrats Bind Wounds

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina Democrats met Saturday to draft a platform, elect national convention delegates, bind wounds suffered in fierce primary battles and heat up partisan rhetoric for the fall elections.

The rhetoric and demonstrations of unity came first, as Gov. Jim Hunt and gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten warned of the dangers of Republican victories in November.

Hunt is challenging Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' bid for a third term and Edmisten faces Republican nominee Jim Martin.

"He (Helms) has the wrong vision for our future," Hunt told about 400 Democrats at a breakfast. "He thinks wrong. He acts wrong. He votes wrong. He may be the right man for the John Birch Society, the Moral Majority, the Moonies ... and right-wing dictators in the world ... but he's the wrong man for North Carolina."

"The best way to stop that greatness is to elect a Republican anywhere in this state and we must not do that," Edmisten said.

He told supporters of his Democratic primary and runoff opponents that he respected them and he and the entire Democratic ticket needed their help.

Edmisten's runoff opponent Eddie Knox, former Charlotte mayor, was not present to hear the appeal. Knox said earlier that he would be not be able to attend because of a previously planned Wayne County fundraiser to reduce his campaign debt.

"Many people who were not successful in either primary have other commitments," Edmisten said. "I have looked back at other primaries in this state and sometimes it was months before they got their schedules ready to be in one place. I never felt better about unity."

State Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, also called for unity, saying Democrats have the opportunity to become "giant killers" by defeating well-known and well-financed Republican candidates. He said Knox's absence did not mean Knox would not work to help Edmisten.

"I wish Eddie would come on. But I know he's a good Democrat," Jordan said. "The party needs him and he will continue to need the party."

Keynote speaker Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., told several thousand Democrats their state will play a "critical and perhaps decisive role in determining the direction of the national Democratic Party, in determining the direction of the U.S. Senate and in determining the direction of our nation" in 1984.

He listed some of Hunt's accomplishments as governor and said his record will make him a respected leader the day he arrives in Washington.

Nunn acknowledged that President Reagan remains popular but said Americans have begun to ask tough questions about the implementation of his economic and foreign policies.

He said Democrats will need to return to their traditional grassroots support for strength.

"We must reject the past tendency of political parties to endorse every individual pressure group demand," Nunn said. He said that practice yields few votes and does not produce a party that can govern effectively.

In other speeches, several top elected officials reminded Democrats of the party's fate in 1972 elections. That was the year Republican Jim Holshouser was elected governor and Jesse Helms was elected to the Senate. The state also supported Republican presidential candidate Richard Nixon.

Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt urged Democrats not to concentrate on losses of the past and to eliminate "creeping negativism" among their ranks.

"There is too much talk among Democrats about how unbeatable the President is going to be or how Sen. No (Helms) is going to do in Gov. Hunt or how great a campaign this guy is running against Edmisten," Gantt said.

"The Republicans can't beat us in November. We can beat ourselves. We need to project a positive image, not a negative one," he said.

U.S. Rep. Ike Andrews of the 4th District said the 1984 elections give Democrats a chance to eliminate the conservative National Congressional Club. He said the club is potentially very dangerous because unlike a political party it represents no one.

"In 1984 if we can elect Democrats in spite of the opposition, I predict that throughout the nation, as well as this state, it will have been determined and proclaimed that the Congressional Club can't accomplish anything and the Congressional Club will be dead," Andrews said.

Convention participants were to vote on a party platform drafted after six hearings across the state in April. Those at the convention could propose additions and changes. Much of the platform details accomplishments by Democrats over the past eight years.

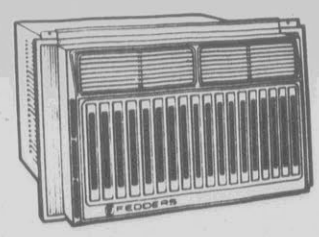

Another order of business was election of delegates to the National Democratic Convention in San Francisco, July 16-19. The state is entitled to 88 delegates and 29 alternates.

Most of them — 51 delegates and 17 alternates — were chosen at congressional district conventions earlier this month. The state convention was to choose 17 at-large delegates and eight at-large alternates, 13 unpledged party and elected official dlegates and four unpledged party and elected official alternates. The party chairman and vice chairman also are delegates.

As a result of the May 8 primary, presidential candidate Walter Mondale gets 43 delegates and 14 alternates, Gary Hart gets 17 delegates and 8 alternates and Jesse Jackson gets 15 delegates and 3 alternates. There also will be 13 unpledged delegate positions and four alternate positions for party and elected officials.

On Third Try, 50-Year-Old Runner Goes 100 Miles

RALEIGH (AP) — The third time was the charm for Vince Foote who found his ultimate challenge in a 100-mile run over mountains, valleys, woods, streams and highways.

In his first try, the 50-year-old Foote covered 67 miles before the humidity stopped him and he ran 87 miles in a second attempt.

But last weekend, amid 95-degree heat, the director of Product Design at North Carolina State University completed the Old Dominion 100 in 23 hours, 38 minutes — all for a silvr belt buckle, seven broken toe nails, blood blisters, sore ankles and the satisfaction of doing it.

"I've been called a lot of things, a fanatic ... and a fool," said Foote. "It's that I really enjoy the running. And I enjoy the competition with myself, how much I can stand, what I can tolerate. It was a personal challenge."

Foote, who was one of 12 runners — out of 41 participants — to finish the race within 24 hours, began running six years ago when a friend enticed him to enter the Great Raleigh Road Race.

After seeing a film about the Boston Marathon, Foote ran it, along with the New York Marathon and the Grandfather Mountain Martahon. He ran a couple of 50-mile races, winning the seniors division in Wilmington.

But the biggest challenge came when he decided to run the Old Dominion 100 — 100 miles of roller coaster paths, roads and highways in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley.

At one time the 100-mile stretch was exclusively an endurance test for rider and horse. Runners will included in the late 1970s.

Foote started training in February, running 2,117 miles to prepare for the all-day, all-night venture.

"That got old very rapidly," Foote said. "I was doing 170 miles a week during the latter part of training. Of course, one of the nice things about long distance training is that I was eating about 6,000 calories a day and not putting on weight."

In the Old Dominion, Foote had a three-person crew that drove along side him, carrying 14 pairs of shoes, socks, seven flashlights, batteries, food and plenty of water.

The race began at 4 a.m. Foote never stopped for rest, but ate and drank on his feet either walking or running.

"At each stop I would eat the equivalent of an instant breakfast," he said. "Being so hot, you couldn't put anything solid in your stomach or it would come back up."

With about 20 minutes ahead of his schedule and 10 miles to go, Foote sensed his body wanted to quit. Time was closing in on 4 a.m., but he made it.

"My crew clapped," Foote said. "It was a feeling of elation. I was completely drained. I felt a super high and a super low. Super high because it was over and I had done what I set out to do. Super low because I was completely depleted. There wasn't any energy left to throw my arms up or do anything.

"All I wanted was water and a bed."

Foote said he won't repeat last weekend's marathon.

"No more, this is enough," he said. "Now I would like to see how fast I can run a mile. My training for marathons has been five-minute miles. So that's next ... to see how fast I can run a mile."

Canada Keeps Up Hunt For Brileys

BEDFORD, Quebec (UPI) — A heavily armed 32-member Quebec Police Force tactical unit combed a 5-square-mile area near the U.S. border Saturday for two escaped convicts described as "killing machines."

James Briley, 27, and his brother Linwood, 30, escaped May 31 from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center in Boydton, Va., with four other convicts in the biggest death row prison break in U.S. history. The others have been captured.

"We're searching an 8-square-kilometer (5 square miles) area between Bedford and Philipsburg," said police spokesman Rene Cote. He said the squad would scan barns, sugar shacks, hunting camps, and cottages.

The Brileys were believed spotted last Sunday in a field in nearby St. Armand, Quebec, and again outside the home of a United Church minister in Philipsburg, Quebec, 10 miles south of Bedford.

Police moved into the Bedford area, 50 miles southeast of Montreal, on Thursday after a woman spotted two men lurking around the local race track.

The sighting came shortly after a grocery store was robbed of canned food and insect repellant.

Cote said officials on both sides of the border were searching for the fugitives. He said searches have been carried out by Montreal police and by the FBI in Colchester, Vt., about 12 miles south of the border. Both searches were fruitless.

Queen Observes 58th Birthday

LONDON (AP) — With traditional pageantry and little visible sign of security measures, Queen Elizabeth II on Saturday rode her favorite horse to the annual Trooping the Color ceremony, which marks her official birthday.

The queen's real birthday is April 21, but the official celebration is held in June, when the weather is likely to be better.

The queen saluted her 83-year-old mother who was watching from the Old Admiralty Buildings overlooking the parade grounds.

The Queen Mother had arrived in an open carriage with Princess Diana, 22, wife of heir to the throne Prince Charles.

Iraq Says Hamlet Shelled

By The Associated Press

Iraq on Saturday accused Iran of violating a five-day-old moratorium on shelling of civilian targets, dimming hopes for immediate progress on efforts to stop attacks on vessels in the Persian Gulf.

The U.N.-mediated moratorium called for both sides, which have been fighting since September 1980, to stop attacks on each other's population centers. But Iraqi military authorities claimed Saturday that Iranian gunners had shelled the central border hamlet of Sayed Sadeq for 2½ hours.

There was no immediate Iranian comment on the accusation.

Statements by both sides Friday and Saturday had raised hopes that the moratorium might be extended to attacks in he gulf sea lanes, where commercial shipping has been bombed repeatedly in recent months.

The spokesman, reading a communique over the state television, said 15 shells slammed into the hamlet's center, "injuring a citizen and inflicting severe damage to two houses."

"Despite the agreement arranged through the U.N. secretary-general on avoiding the shelling of ... civilian centers, the criminal Iranian regime, which does not respect commitments, shelled today the hamlet of Sayed Sadeq," the Iraqi spokesman said.

The Iraqis last February imposed a blockade on Iran's main Kharg Island oil terminal in an attempt to cut into Iranian oil revenues.

The Iranians have denied that their planes attack vessels in the gulf, despite repeated accusations by Iraq and the Arab nations that support Iraq.

Acceptance of the U.N.-proposed moratorium on shelling of civilian targets was Iran's first acceptance of mediation in nearly four years of fighting.

The Saudi Arabian state radio commented just before the reported moratorium violation that Iran's previously hard-line stance on hostilities with Iraq appeared to be changing.

A "succession of indications from Tehran tend to create the impression that (Iranian) officials are becoming convinced that no solution can be achieved by war, hence their statements for the first time about dialogue and negotiations," the Saudi commentary said.

Iranian Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Friday in a Sabbath sermon in Tehran that "we will not fire a single bullet in the gulf if Iraq stopped attacking oil tankers in the area."

He said he would welcome an appeal by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for a halt to attacks on commercial shipping through the gulf.

On Saturday, Iraqi Information and Education Minister Latif Jassem called Rafsanjani's overture "vague" but appeared to leave the door ajar when he demanded "clarifications."

Arab diplomatic sources in Bahrain said that to interpret Jassem's statement either as rejection or acceptance of Rafsanjani's offer would be an overstatement.

Israeli Soldiers Injured In 'Suicide' Car Explosion

By The Associated Press

A car carrying explosives blew up near three Israeli military vehicles in southern Lebanon on Saturday, killing the car's driver and injuring five Israeli soldiers, the Israeli military command said.

It was not clear whether the driver was on a "suicide mission," said Israeli Armed Forces Radio. The blast may have been an accident, but the black Mercedes contained explosives and weapons, it said.

The radio report said the car exploded as it passed the second of the three Israeli personnel carriers on a highway eight miles south of Sidon, the provincial capital of southern Lebanon.

Israeli reports conflicted with Lebanese reports that described the driver as a suicide bomber, and said the automobile crashed into an armored personnel carrier.

Reports by journalists in Sidon, and by Beirut's state-run radio said Israeli troops cordoned off the area and called in helicopters to fly out the wounded soldiers.

The state radio said the blast "ripped the Israeli armored personel carrier along with the car-bomb to shreds, and seriously damaged another APC in the Israeli patrol."

The Syrian government newspaper Al-Thawra said Saturday that Israel was moving troops and armor into southeastern Lebanon for a pre-emptive strike against the Syrian army in the Bekaa Valley.

On Thursday there was a two-hour firefight between Israeli and Syrian forces near the Bekaa Valley village of Kfar Kouk, four miles from the Syrian-Lebanese border.

An Israeli army spokesman in Tel Aviv denied that a military buildup was taking place along the 30-mile front, where the two armies are only a few hundred yards apart in some locations.

"The proximity of our forces certainly doesn't pose a stabilizing factor, and it could result in a situation where complete control could be lost," Arens said.

Christian-controlled radio stations in Beirut said Friday that Syria had placed its 30,000 troops in the Bekaa Valley on maximum alert, and brought up reinforcements of Soviet-made tanks.

Israel invaded southern Lebanon in 1982 to secure its northern borders from attacks by Palestinian guerrillas. The Syrian army entered Lebanon to try to help settle the Lebanese civil war in 1975, and remained in the eastern half of the country.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said in an interview with Israel's armed forces radio on Saturday that "There is a possibility that internal tensions inside Syria will break out in a war against Israel."

Arens apparently was referring to reports of a power struggle within the government of Syrian President Hafez Assad, who was hospitalized with a heart ailment late last year.

Opposition Leader Jailed

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — Opposition leader Wilson Ferreira returned by ship Saturday to Uruguay after 11 years in exile and was arrested immediately by military government officials who sent navy warships to escort him to port in an apparent ruse that broke up a demonstration of about 50,000 supporters.

Ferreira, who returned home to claim the presidential nomination of his Blanco party, was forced to sign a brief declaration before disembarking at Montevideo port. It was not immediately known what the declaration said.

He was arrested and was to be taken by helicopter to an undisclosed military base for confinement.

By pretending to divert the politician's ship to a tiny port 90 miles to the north, the military government broke up a demonstration by about 50,000 supporters who had gathered to greet him.

The demonstrators chanted "The military dictatorship is going to fall" and carried signs saying "Wilson for President," referring to Ferreira's candidacy in the Nov. 25 elections.

Pope Urges Better Working Conditions

LUCERNE, Switzerland (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday challenged the Swiss to improve conditions for the foreign workers who fill their low-paying jobs, and questioned whether neutrality could protect the Swiss from the problems of the rest of the world.

The pope, speaking at a Mass for more than 40,000 people, said international conflicts, hunger and nuclear weapons "threaten to put the survival of the human race itself in question."

"This worldwide endangering of people is a challenge for all nations, for the leaders of peoples, and for every single one of us," John Paul added.

"Is it (Switzerland) really such a happy country, an island of safety in the midst of the threatening surge of the world?" John Paul asked.

"The neutrality of your land does not keep you from being drawn into the worldwide spiritual and political discussions our our time. You are also called to decision in the face of great problems."

"What should be done so that the prosperity of your country may contribute ever more effectively to the service of peace for the international community of peoples?" the pope asked his audience.

The Roman Catholic leader, looking tired on the fifth day of his six-day Swiss tour, made his comments two days after he urged the Swiss to prevent their renowned banking system from contributing to "war and injustice."

Foreign workers and the banking system are highly sensitive issues in Switzerland because both are essential to its high standard of living.

Many of the more than 950,000 foreigners in the country are "guest workers" who hold low-paying, undesirable jobs rejected by Swiss natives. There are also severe restrictions on seasonal workers, some of whom can be found living in barracks-type accommodations.

Five voters' initiatives were undertaken between 1965 and 1974 to limit the number of foreigners in Switzerland. Each initiative failed, and the executive branch of government later restricted the number.

Switzerland's population is about 5.5 million.

"It is important to discover always the human person before the worker," said the Polish-born pope, a champion of the rights of those who leave their homelands in search of employment abroad.

"If, in recent years, much has been done in this sector, the need for further improvements must not be neglected, even when there is no easy solution," he said."An indispensable condition for that is that equal treatment be given both Swiss and immigrants in social and industrial life."

Among the improvements he called for were better housing and schools, "allowances and social security which insures peace of mind for the individual and for the families."

The pope told 15,000 foreign nationals at a workers' rally in a Lucerne city park before the Mass: "Participation on the part of immigrants in the life of the church and society is sometimes impeded by mutual prejudice."

Grace Tully, FDR's Aide, Dies At 83

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private funeral services are planned for Grace G. Tully, who was the personal secretary to President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Miss Tully died Friday at the age of 83 of cancer at the George Washington University hospital, where she had been for the past three weeks.

A native of Bayonne, N.J., who was educated in New York, she went to work in 1928 at the New York office of the Democratic National Committee and was assigned to help Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, then an aide to the committee.

Miss Tully later went to work for Roosevelt in his successful 1928 bid for the governship of New York and remained Roosevelt's secretary until his April, 1945 death. She often dined with the Roosevelt family at the White House.

Miss Tully recalled that one of her most memorable days was Dec. 7, 1941 when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. She went to work early that Sunday afternoon and stayed until well past midnight.

"I manned the telephones and took the information coming from Pearl Harbor. I typed it up with two or three people on the staff breathing on my neck and carried it to the president," she recalled.

Later that night, she said, Roosevelt dictated his planned address to Congress the next day. It was his famous "Day of Infamy" speech in which he asked for a declaration of war.

She called Roosevelt the "ideal boss" and wrote about his personal side in her 1949 book, "FDR, My Boss."

Nation's Mayors Give Priority To Fighting Pollution

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Leaders of America's cities, seeking federal help in reducing acid rain, handling hazardous wastes and improving air and water quality, made a cleaner environment a major issue Saturday at the 52nd annual Conference of Mayors.

Mayor Doug Sutherland of Tacoma, Wash., chairing the Energy and Environment Committee, won approval of five resolutions that will be considered Monday at the conference's full session.

"These resolutions deal with problems now before Congress and are likely to be the subject of intense legislative activities for the next several years," Sutherland said.

A key fight was avoided over relicensing of hydroelectric facilities when two resolutions, taking opposite positions, were scrubbed in favor of a suggestion that the mayors remain neutral "and leave it to individual cities" to make their own decisions.

Mayor Daniel Whitehurst of Fresno, Calif., had proposed that the conference ask Congress to allow private utilities to continue to operate hydroelectric facilities even though federal law provides that when licenses expire control of the dams can be turned over to the public.

Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle wanted his colleagues to oppose any federal legislation that would eliminate public preference in the relicensing of hydroelectric facilities. Such plants serve over 176 million people and 8 million commercial and agricultural customers.

The resolution on acid rain, described "as a threat to the nation's environment, particularly in the Northeast," urges Congress and the Reagan administration "to enact a program to reduce and control acid rain" without increasing the burden on any part of the country. Much of the acid rain affecting the Northeast, for example, is believed to come from factories in the Midwest.

In another resolution, offered by Milwaukee Mayor Henry Maier, the committee was unanimous in recommending a national approach to solving so-called "non-point pollution" of water.

"This pollution, up to 50 percent in some cities, is caused largely by agricultural runoff and runoff from construction, mining and other activities mostly outside of the city," the committee said.

"Failure to address non-point pollution soon will mean that many cities will not attain Clean Water Act goals and standards and billions (of dollars) spent by cities to clean urban waters will not have the projected impact," the report said.

Mayor Donald Fraser of Minneapolis offered a resolution, also unanimously adopted, asking the federal government to develop guidelines for hazardous waste storage and to consult with state and local governments.

Another resolution that will go before all the mayors next week deals with oil and gas exploration on the Outer Continental Shelf and the part that state and local communities should play in an area now controlled almost entirely by the federal government.

"OCS energy exploration, production and development can cause adverse environmental impacts on the coastal areas of the United States, often requiring local and state governments to assume additional responsibilities without providing funding to assure adequate discharge of these responsibilities," said the resolution by Mayor Tony Knowles of Anchorage, Alaska.

Remains Of Whale Found

CHESAPEAKE BEACH, Md. (AP) — Scientists say two Maryland teen-agers playing on the beach may have stumbled on the remains of a previously unknown species of sperm whale that lived 16 million years ago.

"Preliminary indications are that this is the only one of its kind found in the mid-Atlantic region," noted marine mammal expert Dave Bohaska, registrar at the Calvert Marine Museum on Calvert Island, Md.

Sean Ramp, 14, and his 15-year-old companion, Wesley Williams, both of Randle Cliff, Md., discovered the remains Monday while playing on the beach and looking for sharks' teeth.

Sean's father notified Peter Kranz, a paleontologist at George Mason University in Virginia. Kranz also teaches a class at the Open University of Washington, and had met the two teen-agers earlier on a field trip to the area. At the time he told them to call him if they ever discovered anything unusual.

Kranz went to the site Tuesday and immediately notified Bohaska and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington which sent a crew to recover the remains.

On Friday, scientists finished freeing the whale remains from the block of earth in which it was embedded. They believe the rock broke free from the cliffs during a recent storm.

The Calvert Cliffs, which stretch for 25 miles along the Western shore of the Chesapeake Bay, are considered one of the world's richest fossil areas.

The whale - whose length was estimated at over 30 feet, is believed to have migrated from Europe, South America or the North American Pacific coast, Bohaska said.

Bus Wrecks

LAMAR, Colo. (AP) — A chartered bus taking young people home to Texas from a summer camp was forced off the road early Saturday by an oncoming car, and all 43 people aboard were injured, 10 seriously.

The bus driver swerved into a ditch to avoid a head-on collision with a car that had crossed the centerline in front of him and the bus overturned once and landed on its wheels, said State Patrol Sgt. Vern Jordan.

The driver of the car never stopped and Jordan said it would be almost impossible to track him down because the car was not damaged.

"The only thing we can hope is that the guy gets a guilty conscience and he comes in and confesses," he said.

The accident occurred on two-lane U.S. Highway 287 around 1:30 a.m. about 19 miles south of this southeastern Colorado town.

Thirty-one people aboard the bus were teen-agers and the rest were adult chaperones, Jordan said.

No-News Rule Falls

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The only radio station in this fishing port broke its tradition of never reporting the news by telling listeners of a court ruling that in effect upheld the station's news-free format.

The listeners of WVCA-FM weren't complaining. They say the news that the classical music station will stay alive is "wonderful."

WVCA-FM broadcast the story not once, but three times, Simon Geller, owner and operator of the one-man station, said Saturday.

"I just made the announcement, 'I have some good news that I have been promising since March ... the court has finally handed down the decision reversing the denial of license of renewal to WVCA announced by the FCC in 1982,'" Geller said.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Friday ordered the Federal Communications Commission to reconsider its denial of license renewal o the station.

The FCC had refused to renew the license, saying WVCA didn't meet the informational needs of the community because it didn't broadcast any news.

But the appellate court refused to accept the FCC's reasoning.

"Focusing on the programming Geller proposed, the FCC concluded that Geller would not offer a new voice to the community because he offers 'no voice at all,'" the court said.

"Therein must lie the conclusion that Geller's programming is of no value to the community, despite extensive testimony to the contrary. This type of (program) content evaluation is ... unreasonable."

Conductor John Williams Leaves Boston Pops Post

BOSTON (AP) — Other conductors tolerated paper airplanes and live lobsters on stage and traditions such as hissing at rehearsals. But when performers hissed at his music, Boston Pops' conductor John Williams called it quits.

Now the Boston Symphony Orchestra has less than a year to find a new conductor in time for the popular Pops' 1985 centennial — unless Williams reconsiders pleas by musicians that he stay.

"He did what everyone said couldn't be done — come up with a new way of doing the Pops that was not like (former conductor) Arthur Fiedler's way, but that the public liked," Boston Globe music critic Richard Dyer told The Associated Press.

"How anybody else can be ready to do that in time for the centennial I imagine is worrying everybody at Symphony Hall."

Most of the Pops musicians also are members of the Boston Symphony, and the two organizations use the same hall and share some offices.

Williams, 52, has won four Academy Awards and made millions in royalties from scores to such movies as "Star Wars" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark.

The composer was reported to have walked off the stage Tuesday when a few musicians hissed while rehearsing his new song, "America, the Dream Goes On." The next day, he resigned.

Longtime associate conductor Harry Ellis Dickson believes the hissing was not vicious. "I was just letting down some pent-up feelings from the hard work over the long winter," he said.

Musicians often relieve boredom and stress with a variety of antics, Dickson said, and Fiedler encouraged their pranks.

For instance, while Fiedler was conducting the movie theme "Jaws," percussionists inflated a plastic shark and tossed it around on stage, he said.

Once they flew paper airplanes on stage, and another time a player let loose a live lobster to amuse a colleague, he said.

Williams, though, was not amused by a tradition of hissing while rehearsing new music.

"It is not unusual for the orchestra to hiss at what we consider bad arrangements. Some of the pieces do deserve it, but I think it particularly bothered John that his piece was included among them," a musician, who asked not to be identified, told The Patriot Ledger of Quincy.

The hissers never stepped forward, but the entire orchestra visited Williams that night to apologize and ask him to reconsider, Dickson said. "They feel very bad about this."

Craig Nordstrom, chairman of a players' committee, told the Globe, "There is a feeling of embarrassment."

Williams refused to reconsider, but promised to finish out the season, conducting four concerts on Boston's Esplanade, including the annual Fourth of July performance.

Ton Of Cocaine Found In Miami

MIAMI (UPI) — Customs agents on routine patrol found more than a ton of nearly pure cocaine with a street value of at least $1 billion in a shipment of freezers at a warehouse near Miami International Airport, officials said Saturday.

The cocaine bust was the second largest in U.S. history. No arrests were made.

"It hasn't been weighed, but we're estimating the weight at about 2,500 pounds," said Lou Bondi, deputy district director of the U.S. Customs Service. "It's locked up over the weekend until everybody gets cracking Monday morning."

Bondi said the cocaine, discovered by a sniffer dog named Kane during a routine check of the warehouse, was high in purity and would have been diluted several times before it was retailed on the street.

"It'll probably be worth somewhere between a billion and 2 billion dollars by the time it is cut 10 or 12 times," Bondi said Saturday.

The largest seizure of illegal cocaine in the United States was 3,906 pounds. It occurred when customs agents seized an air cargo shipment from Colombia March 9, 1982. The next largest cocaine seizure before Friday's discovery was 1,197 pounds at New Iberia, La., two months later.

Kane, a short-haired pointer, sniffed the shipment, jumped up on a cardboard shipping crate and began scratching. Agents found the cocaine in the freezer inside and in six others like it."

Vann Capps, branch chief of the Custom Service's contraband enforcement team, said the freezers arrived on an Inair DC-8 cargo jet from Panama earlier Friday. The plane was seized shortly after the cocaine was found.

Customs agents said warehouse employees and flight crew members were interviewed Saturday morning but no arrests were made.

Zulma Batista, general manager of Inair, went to the warehouse to discuss the seizure. She said Inair was owned by interests in Venezuela and Panama.

Ms. Batista said the freezers had not been listed on the plane's flight manifest so she did not know how they got on the flight.

Bondi said agents had made some small seizures from Inair in the past but nothing approaching Friday's magnitude.

Bondi said efforts to stem the flow of cocaine into the country have been stepped up in recent months. Agents say cocaine busts at Miami International Airport are averaging 15 to 25 a month, twice the average three years ago.

Problems Lingering Over Transplants

CHICAGO (AP) — In Tennessee, a liver transplant operation is canceled just hours before it is scheduled to begin. The intended organ donor, an Illinois man, first declared dead, suddenly coughs and is kept alive four days until his heart fails.

In New Jersey, the parents of a suicide victim win $150,000 in a suit charging harassment by doctors who kept their son on life support machines for three days while trying to persuade them to donate his organs.

In the Bronx, a distraught welfare mother places a tearful call to the director of an organ procurement program, saying she doesn't have the clout to arrange the "media blitz" she thinks necessary to find a donated liver for her child.

Such cases illustrate the lingering problems associated with a once-exotic medical weapon that has now become commonplace — the organ transplant.

Since the 1950s, doctors have found ways to give patients new kidneys, bone marrow, hearts, livers, pancreases, middle ears, skin and corneas.

But despite the miracles, not enough organs are available for people who need them.

No one knows how many people die because suitable organs could not be found. But only about one-eighth of the almost 20,000 Americans who die each year in such a way that their organs could be donated actually become donors, according to Arthur Caplan, a specialist in medical ethics at the Hastings Center at Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

"Most people don't think about this issue (of donating organs for transplant)," said Caplan. "It's kind of like buying a funeral plot."

Perhaps the most basic problem is determining when death occurs, so that the organs may be removed. Currently, a patient will not be considered dead as long as his brain activity remains above a certain level, even if there is no hope for his recovery.

But rather than saving lives, such a standard can prolong dying at great expense and anguish, according to a team of North Carolina doctors writing in a recent issue of the American Medical Association's Archives of Neurology.

It also stands to reason that many people waiting for organs do not get them because the current strict standards of death prevent some donations, said researcher Dr. Edward V. Spudis.

"When a vital part of the brain is irrevocably damaged ... and some other part of the brain is relatively normal ... I believe the family and society in general would sanction a declaration of brain death which would result in allowing the liver or kidneys to be used," Spudis said in a telephone interview.

However, Dr. John C. McDonald, president of the Southeastern Organ Procurement Foundation, said doctors are understandably cautious about declaring death too early.

"One mistake in a million is one too many," said McDonald. "I'm sure that organs are wasted because people are not willing to take the chance of making one mistake. I guess that's the right position. It's certainly my position."

Even when death is certain, organs may not be made available because the families refuses.

Bush Says 1984 GOP's Most Important Year In Two Decades

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Vice President George Bush told thousands of fellow Republicans Saturday that this is the party's most important political year in two decades, both for the presidency and for Texas GOP candidates.

"To some degree every race below the president will be affected by the outcome of President Ronald Reagan's efforts," Bush said.

"We must elect Phil Gramm and keep Republican the U.S. Senate seat that John Tower has filled with such distinction since 1960," he told the Texas Republican State Convention.

"We must add to the number of congressional seats we hold," Bush said. "We must add Republicans to the Texas Legislature. And of course, we must put Texas in Ronald Reagan's winning column for president."

About 6,000 delegates and visitors applauded and yelled during the speech, which was the highlight of a two-day meeting that GOP officials cheerfully admitted was mostly a big Reagan pep rally.

Bush drew a comparison in his speech between the position Texas Republicans face today and the situation at the Alamo, when William Travis reportedly drew a line in the dust and asked those who would fight "in defense of the things we hold dear to cross the line."

Bush said Democrats Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson have opposed every move by Reagan to control communism in Central America and have advocated more government spending, including more welfare checks.

"With Ronald Reagan and Phil Gramm, I belived it is America's mission to stand for peace, freedom and democracy in the world and for freedom, hope and opportunity at home.

"With Ronald Reagan and Phil Gramm, I believe that America is truly the best hope of man on earth," he said.

"If you're ready to join in unity with President Reagan, Phil Gramm and me in this campaign of principle and defense of all things we hold dear, I wish you would, right now, stand up and take a step across the line."

Missouri River Leaves Banks

By The Associated Press

More than 1,000 people stayed away from their homes Saturday in Kansas and Missouri as the Missouri River spread out of its banks over thousands of acres of farmland following a week of thunderstorms, and more rain overnight forced evacuation of parts of Nebraska.

Flash flood watches were issued for eastern South Dakota, eastern Nebraska and the western two-thirds of Iowa after a night in which up to 4 inches of rain fell on parts of Nebraska.

Authorities in Kansas and Missouri said the Missouri River — choked by up to 10 inches of rain over the past week — was leveling off Saturday, but a few more families were evacuated in isolated areas and more than 1,000 others stayed away from their homes.

"People are very leery about returning to their homes just yet," said Doreen Draper, communications officer for the sheriff's office in Platte County, Mo., just north of Kansas City.

Authorities on Friday ordered residents out of bottomlands along a 70-mile stretch on the Missouri side of the river from the Iowa border to north of St. Joseph, Mo.

In Atchison County, Mo., next to the Iowa border, where National Guardsmen were called to help evacuate homes and build sandbag walls, the situation had "stabilized" overnight, said Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Branson.

"The ones who have left are staying away from their homes, but we haven't had to evacuate any more people," he said.

The town of Howells, Neb., northwest of Omaha, was partially evacuated Saturday after water broke through a railroad track right-of-way that served as a dike.

"When the wall of water came down the east branch of Maple Creek, it punched a 20- to 25-foot hole in the dike and that's how the town flooded," said Bill Hayes, spokesman for the Nebraska Civil Defense.

Hayes said parts of the nearby towns of Hooper and Scribner also were evacuated because of flooding from Pebble Creek and the Elkhorn River.

Marine Pilot Gets His Medals But They Come 40 Years Later

BOSTON (AP) — Forty years after he piloted dive bombers for the Marine Corps in the Pacific, Charles J. Quinn finally received medals for his World War II service. But he doesn't know why he is being honored.

"No, I really don't," said the retired high school principal and first-term New Hampshire state representative. "I'm going to be given my pilot log book at the same time (as the medals), I understand. Perhaps there might be something there."

At a brief outdoor ceremony at the Naval Air Station in Weymouth, Maj. Gen. R.T. Trundy pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross and four other medals on Quinn, as Marines in ranks played the national anthem. Quinn wore civilian clothes.

Harry Kenyon, a spokesman for the air station, said he didn't know why Quinn had not been honored for his service before now. "I'd say it's uncommon" for the honors to be given 40 years late, he said.

Besides the Distinguished Flying Cross, Quinn received the Air Medal, the American Theater Campaign Medal, the World War II Victory Medal and the Asiatic Pacific Theater Medal.

Quinn, now 65, married and the father of seven, had joined the Marines when he was 22 after getting out of St. Anselm's College in Manchester, N.H., in June 1942.

He flew around the Marshall and Caroline islands in a two-man plane, the other man being a gunner who also read the radar.

"We were on patrols, antisubmarine, some strikes at some of the bypassed islands," he said referring to the strategy of "island-hopping" in which some islands were occupied and others were skipped over.

He was never wounded or shot down. "Thank God," he said. "I said a lot of prayers."

About a year ago, after reading an article in a service newspaper, Quinn said he wrote for information on what ribbons he might be entitled to receive ... "just out of curiosity more than anything else," he said.

"I knew everyone was supposed to get an American patriot medal," he said. Early last month, he got a letter from Col. Jimmy Green of Marine Air Group 49 at the Naval Air Station, inviting him there to be presented the medals.

"Apparently nobody ever put in for them," he said by way of explaining the 40-year delay in getting the medals.

"Actually, I suspect that any one of the members of my squadron would be deserving of the medal because we all flew the same amount of time. We flew daily," he said.

Quinn taught U.S. history and American government and coached football and basketball at West High School in Manchester, N.H., and retired three years ago as principal of the school.

Crash Tests Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has released results of crash tests on five additional 1984 vehicles, with the Renault Sportwagon scoring worst in the latest round of government figures.

The tests involved crashing vehicles at 35 mph into a fixed barrier. Instrumented dummies strapped into the driver and front passenger seats are used to monitor impact forces and estimate likely injuries.

According to the traffic safety agency, test results on the Renault vehicle, a four-door station wagon, showed "head injury criteria" (HIC) of 2053 and 2721 for the driver and passenger, respectively.

"In general, the lower the HIC, the less likely drivers and front-seat passengers would be seriously injured or killed in a frontal crash at 35 mph," it said, noting that a test value of 1,000 indicates an "approximate threshold above which more serious injuries are expected."

Driver-passenger head injury criteria for the other four 1984 vehicles tested were:

—Dodge Caravan multipurpose vehicle: 973-1200.

—Ford F-150 pickup truck: 1362-1443.

—Mercury Grand Marquis, four-door: 1094-1019.

—AMC Jeep Cherokee, two-door: 850-1548.

Reagan To Launch Detective Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday his administration soon plans to launch "a sophisticated detective program" to help local authorities catch murderers who kill one victim after another, often terrorizing particular groups of people.

In his weekly paid political announcement on radio, Reagan mentioned the program as one of the things his administration is doing to help American families.

"We're trying hard to make two other changes," he added. "We want to see fewer abandoned, handicapped or underprivileged children left in perpetual foster care, and we want to see the unborn child given his or her chance to live and to know the joys of life. Adoption is often the best option. Too often, it's been the forgotten option."

Referring to a Justice Department effort already in its preliminary stage of gathering information and seeking expert advice, Reagan said: "Soon, we'll start up a sophisticated detective program to help law enforcement officers identify and capture the so-called serial killers who prey upon women and children."

The department said several months ago it believes there are about 35 such serial killers at large in the country, stalking and murdering people who happen to fall in their target groups. Officials said at the time they would draw on the FBI's resources, criminal psychologists and whatever expertise they could muster to help local police track down the often-elusive repeat murderers.

Composer Willson Dies At 82

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — "Music Man" Meredith Willson, who created the award-winning hit musical about a huckster who hoodwinks River City, Iowa, with visions of "Seventy-six Trombones" and then repents for love, has died at the age of 82.

Willson, who also wrote the songs for "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," died of heart failure Friday at St. John's Hospital, where he had been admitted a week earlier for an intestinal obstruction.

"I was with him, and I must say he went peacefully," Willson's wife Rosemary said Saturday. "It was very unexpected, really, but he did go peacefully. He just went to sleep."

"We thought he'd be home in a few days, because they were clearing it up," she said of the intestinal problem, "but last night when he took a turn for the worse. His heart just gave way on him."

She said he had been involved recently with a new musical being produced by Robert Jani called "That Music Man's Music," due to open Oct. 23 in Los Angeles. Jani previously was affiliated with Radio City Music Hall in New York and Disneyland in Anaheim.

"The Music Man" won Tony awards for best musical, book and score, and an Oscar for the movie's musical director, Ray Heindorf. It also won a 1958 Grammy as best cast album. Some of its hits were "Seventy-Six Trombones," "Trouble in River City," "Til There Was You" and "Marian the Librarian." The latter won Willson a gold library card from the librarians of Los Angeles.

Willson's "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," about a plucky Westerner who survives the sinking of the ocean liner Titanic, was made into an MGM film and nominated for a musical-direction Oscar.

He also wrote the song "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You."

Willson, who played flute and piccolo with the John Philip Sousa band as a young man and with the New York Philharmonic, wrote such other musicals as "Here's Love" and "1491," about Christopher Columbus.

Willson, who had been married previously to the late Rini Zarova, had no children. Ms. Zarova, a singer and dancer, died in 1966.

After a funeral tentatively planned for Tuesday at St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church in Brentwood, Willson's body will be returned to Mason City for burial, Mrs. Willson said.

Husband's Body Found In Floor

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — A woman who reported her husband missing almost eight years ago was arrested after police acting on a tip found the man's mummified body under a bedroom floor.

Faye Flores McCabe, 38, was arrested Thursday for investigation of murder in the death of her husband, James Flores, said police detective Bob Muir. Mrs. McCabe, who remarried after Flores' disappearance, was being held at the Hayward jail.

Flores, then 30, disappeared in December 1976 and his wife said he had left with another woman.

Candidates Are Abundant In New Game: 'Pick A Veep'

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a raging political parlor game: Pick a theory and guess who Walter F. Mondale will nominate as his running mate. Anyone can play, and in Washington, almost everyone does.

For conventional balance, the liberal Minnesotan might go for a more conservative Southerner, or perhaps an East Coast ethnic.

To broaden the Democratic Party and attempt to increase turnout among minorities in key states, it could be a Hispanic or a black.

To provide for party unity with the Yuppie generation of well-to-do young voters, he could reach into rival Gary Hart's crowd.

For charisma, candor and a high-achievement track record, he could reach into the halls of business for an entrepreneur, or a Chrysler Corp. — as in Lee Iacocca.

Pick a theory, pick a veep.

The game is a lot like poker. If you don't have an inside theory, bluff it. Few will know the difference.

Think Mondale wants a two-fer?

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, a woman, and Italian.

Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas is a favorite with the Yuppie crowd and a Southerner to boot.

Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, Hispanic and a Texan.

Then there is the raw power theory:

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, a conservative Southerner.

And, of course, Hart, proven vote getter and symbol of unity.

And at the Mondale headquarters, attorney Nikki Heideprien is pulling together polls, charts and statistics to determine how a woman would help or hurt the ticket. She will try to determine how many voters a woman would attract, how many would be repelled and how it would help Mondale pick up electoral votes.

Kathy Wilson, president of the National Women's Political Caucus, says "There are some 30 million unregistered women who can make up for the good old boys who won't vote for a woman and who would probably go for Reagan anyway."

Backstage, the party activists have their own theories and preferences.

Robert Strauss, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee: "I hear two things. Should we take a business person like Iacocca or should it be a woman?"

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., co-chair of Hart's campaign, said that if Mondale offers the Number 2 spot to Hart, he will have to accept it.

"I don't see how he can turn it down," said Ms. Schroeder, dean of the congresswomen and frequently mentioned herself as possible nominee. "With the debts he's got and looking to 1988, I don't see the logic in turning it down. ... It's not so much whether he'll accept, but whether he's given the choice."

Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women, told Mondale last week he won't have to worry about the South if he picks a woman.

"There is no man on the ticket who will galvanize the women of this country like a woman," she said. "All the numbers say that is the magic, winning combination. Anything else will make it difficult, and it's difficult enough in 1984 running against the consummate actor (Ronald Reagan)."

Rep. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, a Mondale supporter and possible running mate, also talked to Mondale last week. She said the chances are 50-50 that Mondale will pick Hart as a running mate and 50-50 that he will choose a woman.

And if he doesn't choose either?

"There would be a possibility that if there is a sentiment of disagreement on the presidential choice for vice president, a woman could be independently placed in nomination," said Ms. Mikulski.

Blown Transformer Leaves Town Dark

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — The entire town of Southport and some sections of Brunswick County were plunged into darkness Saturday when a tranformer blew, authorities say.

The electricity went off about 2 p.m. in portions of southern Brunswick County, which includes resort areas, authorities said. Some areas have since had their electricity restored, but other sections — including Southport — were without power late Saturday night.

Officials said they were not sure how many people were without power.

Mondale Shapes Party Platform

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale began putting his stamp Saturday on the Democratic Party platform he expects to carry into the fall campaign against President Reagan.

At a meeting with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, platform committee chairman, Mondale suggested stronger language on arms control and economic growth than that outlined in a staff draft.

Mondale also said he wanted the platform to "draw the distinctions between the future that we would bring to the American people and that offered by the Reagan administration."

Mrs. Ferraro often is mentioned as a possible vice presidential candidate on a Mondale ticket but she and the former vice president said they did not discuss that during their two-hour meeting.

"The issue did not come up," said Mrs. Ferraro, who added that in her position she must be independent and able to work on the platform with Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"We agreed early that this task of chairing the platform committee required that independence and that we were not going to discuss the possibilities of the vice presidency during this interval," said Mondale.

But Mrs. Ferraro also made it clear that Mondale carries greater weight than his rivals for the nomination.

"I don't see him as just one of three presidential candidates," she said. "Obviously he has a sufficient number of delegates to receive the nomination so I see him in that position."

As Mondale continued laying groundwork for the general election campaign, Democratic activists in 11 states were fleshing out their contingents to the national convention next month by choosing 71 new delegates.

Mondale already has a 35-delegate margin over the 1,967 needed for the nomination and expects to gain a large share of the 71 so-called super delegates being selected this weekend. So far, he has won the support of nearly 65 percent of those super delegates, comprised of state elected and party officials.

Mondale's delegate majority is reflected on the platform committee, giving him the votes to work his will on the panel.

Asked how important she thought it would be to have a woman on the Democratic ticket, Mrs. Ferraro said, "For the women of America the most important thing is to beat Ronald Reagan."

Also participating in the session was Rep. Michael Barnes of Maryland, Mondale's representative on the platform committee.

Mondale is meeting here Thursday with Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and next Saturday with San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein to discuss the possibility of selecting one of them as a running mate.

But he has said there is no significance to them heading a list of several people he intends to interview as prospective nominees.

Jackson, meanwhile, called Saturday for an "emergency meeting" with Mondale and Hart in an effort to derail an immigration bill Jackson said would prompt increased discrimination against Hispanc Americans.

Jackson said that in addition to his two rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination, he also was inviting AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland to meet with him on the issue.

The labor federation has been supporting the bill, intended to help curb illegal immigration by imposing penalties on employers who hire "undocumented workers" while at the same time offering amnesty to many illegal aliens already living in this country.

Doctors Say Reagan Needs Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Specialists in the diagnosis and treatment of intestinal growths say the discovery of a benign polyp in President Reagan's colon suggests there may be others, and two leading physicians in the field recommend he have further treatment to prevent the possible development of colon cancer.

Assistant White House Press Secretary Mark Weinberg said last week that Reagan's doctors are still considering what steps, if any, to take following their discovery of the small growth a month ago.

But Weinberg said there is "no medical urgency," and he firmly denied any suggestion that further procedures might be put off until after the November election. "The political calendar is not a factor here," he said.

The polyp was detected when Reagan underwent a physical exam at Bethesda Naval Medical Center on May 18.

Dr. Daniel Ruge, the presidential physician, could not be reached for comment, but Weinberg responded to questions after consulting members of the White House medical staff.

Irwin Inches One Up On Zoeller

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — After 18 holes of struggle and 11 lead changes, of drama and excitement and illegal cameras, the third round ended just as it began:

Hale Irwin leads Fuzzy Zoeller by one shot going into Sunday's final round of the chase for the title in the 84th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"If ever there was a head-to-head duel, it would have been today," said Irwin, who eventually was handed the lead when Zoeller found bunkers on the last two holes and bogeyed them both.

"On 17, I threw up. And on 18 I got REAL sick," Zoeller said.

Irwin, who won the American national championship on the same Winged Foot Golf Club course 10 years ago, now has led or shared the lead at the end of the first three rounds. As it was at the end of 36 holes, the third-round margin is one.

Irwin's at 205, five under par. And Zoeller is at 206, four under. Each had a third-round 69.

Zoeller, the 1979 Masters champion, said the bogey-bogey finish would not bother him.

"I've already forgotten what I did on the last two holes — and the other 16, too. That's the difference between a pro and an amateur. I don't want to take today's round to dinner."

Both made reference to constantly clicking cameras.

"We had a very enthusiastic gallery," said Irwin, who backed away from at least three shots. "We had some problems with people without press badges taking photos."

"The spectators all had their cameras," Zoeller said, "and they got some good pictures. It didn't bother me — I don't concentrate enough for it to bother me — but I feel sorry for Hale."

Zoeller and Irwin, who were paired in the last twosome in the third round, will be paired again Sunday. But they are not overlooking the other two men under par, Australian Greg Norman and Jim Thorpe.

"I never forgot about them, and I won't be looking past them tomorrow," Irwin said.

"And don't think it's down to a four-man race," added Zoeller. "There are some other folks back there could still be in it — like Jack Nicklaus."

They were tied for the lead on four separate occasions. Irwin led twice. Zoeller had the lead alone four different times and they were never separated by more than one stroke all day.

In the end, however, Zoeller bogeyed the final two holes from bunkers, handing the lead back to Irwin.

Norman, whose sun-bleached white hair helped win him the nickname "the Great White Shark," had a third-round 69 and was third alone at 207.

"They might get into a 1-on-1 situation," Norman said in a look ahead to the final round.

Thorpe, 35, not yet a winner in seven years of PGA Tour activity, had five birdies and as many bogeys on his way to a par 70 and a 209 total, one under par and four strokes behind Irwin.

"I think I'll have to shoot four or five under to have a chance to win," Thorpe said. "I'll have to make some birdies and they'll have to fall off."

Old foes Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, each aged 44, kept alive their hopes of adding still another major piece of silverware to their crowded trophy-rooms. They were tied at 212.

Nicklaus, seeking a record fifth U.S. Open title, matched par 70 despite a bogey-6 on the 13th hole, which he called the turning point of the round.

Despite his position seven strokes back, he remained hopeful.

"I can't control anything anyone else does," he said. "It's up to me to shoot a good round. If I can get it to three or four under par, I've got a chance."

Trevino, twice the winner of this title, had a 69 in the mild, sunny weather.

Also at 212 were Johnny Miller, who had a 70, and Morris Hatalsky, who shot a 69.

There were a number of brief challenges that flourished, then disappeared in the trees and traps and troubles that abound on Winged Foot.

Andy Bean once crept to within three strokes of the lead. Then he hit down a bank against a tree, played a shot left-handed, thrashed around a little more and eventually stalked away with a tripe-bogey six — his chances gone.

Fred Couples got to within two at one time. He, too, fell back, making bogey on the next three holes. He, too, saw his chances disappear.

And there was David Canipe, the refugee from the mini-tours who made three unsuccessful attempts at the PGA Tour. He'd hung around the lead for two full days, and remained in contention through five holes of the third round.

But Winged Foot caught up with him. The strokes began to bleed away. The 6-footers he'd been making for par began to miss. And when it was over, his dream of glory had evaporated in an 81 that left him at 219, 14 strokes back.

There was a lead change on 11 of the 18 holes as first one, then the other, performed his own brand of magic.

It was a match-up of remarkably

Zoeller And Irwin Make Quite A Contrasting Pair

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Hale Irwin and Fuzzy Zoeller, playing partners in round three of the U.S. Open Golf Championship, were the quintissential opposites Saturday.

Irwin and Zoeller.

Irwin with the spectacles, the professorial look. Zoeller with the teddy bear and yellow duckie club head covers.

They were co-leaders midway through the round.

"Is that good?" Zoeller asked Irwin. No response.

He tapped in for birdie.

On the third hole, a par-3, Zoeller hit his tee shot into the deep grass by a green-side bunker.

"Oh, if that isn't disappointing," he said, laughed, looked at the gallery and handed the club to his caddie.

Both bogeyed.

On the sixth, a par-4, Irwin backed off his tee shot when a cameraman got behind him. He waved them away.

"Please, don't get in my backswing," he said.

Irwin hit his second shot 20 feet past the pin and came back for birdie. Zoeller made par.

Zoeller birdied Nos. 7 and 8, stopping to talk to a young forecaddy who had to find a ball he hit into the right rough on No. 8. Silent Hale parred both holes.

On the ninth, Zoeller stood over his tee shot, and an elderly couple walked halfway across the fairway about 250 yards out.

He stood over his ball again, and another couple walked into the fairway. He threw his hands in the air, backed off, then addressed his ball.

"All right, ball," he said, "just sit right there this time. Don't you start moving on me."

He shot bogey on the ninth. Steady Hale had par, and they made the turn tied for the lead at 4-under.

Pate, Aaron, Luckhurst Top List For Ronald McDonald Golf Tourney

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Three members of the professional golf tour, including a former Masters and a former U.S. Open winner, headline the celebrity list for the Ronald McDonald House Golf Tournament, to be held at Brook Valley Country Club on September 10.

Terri Luckhurst

The tournament, which will benefit the Greenville Ronald McDonald House, is expected to attract a field of 42 five-man teams for the one-day Superball format event.

Each team will consist of four local golfers and one celebrity golfer.

Joining the celebrity field will be former U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate, former Masters champ Tommy Aaron, and LGPA player Terri Luckhurst. Other members of the celebrity roster will be announced over the coming weeks, according to tournament chairman Reynolds May.

May released specific information on the tournament this weekend and announced that invitations to golfers to join in the event will be mailed out on Monday.

"We already have 142 golfers in the field," May said. Forty-two of those will be the especially invited celebrities, while another 100 will be filled through the sale of 50 $1,000 sponsorships. Each of those sponsorships carry with it two places in the tournament, to be selected by the person or business purchasing the sponsorship.

"That leaves us with only 68 places for those being invited," May said, "so those we receive invitations should respond immediately to be assured of a berth."

The invitation list was compiled through consultation with Pitt County golf professionals and a total of 225 will be mailed out. A $150 entry fee per golfer is required and the deadline for entries is July 1, although May expects the field to be completed well before then.

The entries will be filled on a first-come-first-served basis, and later entries will be put on a waiting list should there be drop-outs.

All of the golfers who enter will be set up into foursomes based on handicap.

Tommy Aaron

Sunday night, September 9, a cocktail party will be held at the King & Queen North for all of the golfers and celebrities, at which time the celebrity members of the teams will be drawn for.

Monday night, following the tournament, an awards dinner will be held, also at King & Queen North, with entertainment following by country music star Jana Jae.

In addition to the funds raised throught entry fees and sponsorships, addional funds are expected through a spectator fee to be charged to the gallery. The amount of that is yet to be decided.

Tommy Aaron joined the PGA tour in 1961 and since then has won nearly $1,000,000, despite winning only two tournaments in his career. His first was the 1970 Atlanta Classic, but the best win was in 1973 when he claimed the Masters championship.

His best year — money wise — came in 1972 when he earned $118,000.

The 47 year old Georgia native won the 1960 Western Amateur just before turning pro, and was the 1969 Canadian Open winner, a non-tour event. He was also a member of the Walker Cup team in 1959, and served as a member of the Ryder Cup team in 1969 and 1973.

Jerry Pate perhaps is most famous for his dive into the lake at the 18th hole after winning the 1982 Danny Thomas-Memphis Open title, snapping a long string of non-victories. He's also famous for his use of orange golf balls, becoming the first player to win a tournament with other than a white ball. Despite his 31 years and his only nine year pro career, Pate has surpassed $1,000,000 on the tour, closing the 1983 season with nearly half again that total. He played in 17 tournaments last year, finishing in the money in eight of those.

Jerry Pate

His first career wins came in 1976 when he captured the U.S. and Canadian Opens. He added the Phoenix and Southern Opens in 1977, and retained his Southern title in 1978. In additon to the Memphis Open in 1981, he won the Pensacola Open. In 1982 he won the TPC title.

Last year, Pate suffered through the season with a severe nick muscle pull, limiting his ability and playing time.

Rounding out the professional field, Terri Luckhurst is still another Georgia product. Still to win after two years on the tour, the former Terri Moody was an outstanding collegiate player at Georgia, winning the 1981 AIAW title. She was the 1981 Broderick Cup award winner and represented the U.S. in the 1980 Curtis Cup competition as well as being the low amateur in the 1980 U.S. Open.

She joined the pro tour in 1982, playing in only 13 events and winning $30,000. She was runner-up to Patti Rizzo for Rookie-of-the-Year honors.

However, she was forced to miss ten weeks of the season after she and her husband-to-be, Atlanta Falcon placekicker Mick Luckhurst, were severely injured in an automobile accident. In that wreck her cheekbone was shattered and she had to have over 200 stitches in her face.

But just two weeks back on the tour, she finished just one shot back of 19-year veteran Sandra Palmer in the Boston Five Classic. The second place finish was the best by a rookie in 1982 and her own career best.

The Ronald McDonald House will be another addition to the chain which has grown up nation wide to provide a more home-like situation for parents and families of children hospitalized for treatment when the family is required to be nearby. The Greenville Ronald McDonald House is to be built adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Upstart Shiras Faces McEnroe In Finals

LONDON (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe, tuning up for Wimbledon, moved into the final of the $203,000 Queen's Club grass court tennis championships for the seventh time in as many tries Saturday by beating fellow American and arch-rival Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-2.

In Sunday's final, McEnroe will face Leif Shiras of Milwaukee, who eliminated French Open champion Ivan Lendl in opening-round play Tuesday. Shiras downed Rodney Harmon of Richmond, Va., 6-3, 6-4 in a one-hour, 16-minute semifinal Saturday.

McEnroe, the defending Wimbledon champion, broke Connors' first service game — after Connors had been up 40-30 — and that set the tone for the match.

Connors only threatened McEnroe's serve once, when he had a break point in the third game of the second set. But McEnroe forced Connors to hit a backhand wide, and he finished the game off from deuce with an overhead winner and his eighth ace of the match.

That gave McEnroe a 3-0 second-set lead and his fifth straight game. A below-par Connors won his two remaining service games, but he couldn't hold off the 25-year-old New Yorker's service.

"Overall, I think that was the best match I've played so far in this tournament," McEnroe said. "I put a lot of pressure on Jimmy, and perhaps he wasn't expecting that much on grass."

Although Connors, 31, didn't seem at his best, he said he "gave it 100 percent of what I had today."

Unlike McEnroe's, Connors' route to the semifinals had been a tough one, featuring long contests with Americans Steve Denton and Tim Mayotte, both of which went to 9-7 in the third set.

With Wimbledon due to start a week from Monday, Connors said, "I could use a few days off to get away from tennis altogether and take things a little bit easy."

Asked by reporters about suffering his fifth straight defeat at the hands of McEnroe, he said, "Maybe you're counting, but I'm not."

Shiras, 24, came here unsung, ranked 105th in the world.

"This winning is becoming a habit," he said. "It's much better than the bad taste of losing."

Shiras' victory over Lendl came just 48 hours after the Czechoslovak had lost to McEnroe in the French Open final.

Then Shiras beat Chip Hooper 4-6, 7-6, 7-5 and ousted 15th-seed Brian Teacher, 4-6, 6-4, 9-7.

Rose Scuffles With Reporter

MONTREAL (AP) — The Montreal Expos' clubhouse was the scene of a scuffle between Pete Rose and a radio reporter following Saturday's 3-2, 11-inning victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Still bothered by what he said was an inaccurate statement attributed to him on the air Friday night, Rose attempted to throw a punch at the reporter, but players intervened.

Rose said he had been quoted by the reporter, Jeff Rimer of CFCF Radio in Montreal, as saying that the fans in Montreal were negative.

"If that's the truth, bring me the guy who has the proof I said that," Rose told reporters following the incident. "If he's got a quote in which I said the fans are responsible for the way the team is playing, then I'll retire.

"I've worked 22 years in this game to have fans support me, and this guy gets on the air and says that I said they were negative. The only thing I said about the fans is that if they keep reading all the negative stuff about the players in the paper, eventually they're going to start thinking negatively, too."

Planters Takes Babe Ruth Title

Little League

Coca-Cola.....2
Sportsworld.....1

Tim Moore tossed a no-hitter at Coca-Cola, but Sportsworld failed to score and Coke gained a 2-0 victory in the battle of the North State League leaders Saturday.

Walter Gatlin put together a one-hitter for Coke, and helped his team take over sole possession of first place in the league. Coke, now 13-1, leads Sportsworld, 12-2, by one game with four left to play. And even if Coke should lose once in the remaining four, it would still claim first, having beaten Sportsworld two out of three. All of the remaining teams in the league have been eliminated from title contention.

Derrick Clark scored both of the Coke runs. In the first, he reached on an error and Thomas Hillis walked. A pair of wild pitches scored Clark.

In the third, he walked and took second on a wild pitch. A passed ball moved him to third and after Derrick Hines walked, a double steal scored Clark.

Union Carbide.....6

The Optimists scored five times in the third then held off Union Carbide fo an 8-6 victory in the North State Little League Saturday.

The Optimists scored three times in the first, only to see Union Carbide pick up four in the second, all on a grand-slam homer by Andre Hopkins.

But the Optimists rallied for five in the third to take the lead for good. Park Williams opened with a single and Kendall Hardee walked. Mitch Jones singled in both runners, coming all the way around on errors. Kevin Hardee singled and Rod Whitley got a base hit. Both moved up on a passed ball and Hardee scored on Steve Nobles' sacrifice. Terrance Smith reached on an error, scoring Whitley.

Union Carbide came back with two in the fifth, but fell short.

Williams had two hits to lead the Optimists, while Hopkins had three and William Gibbs had two to pace Union Carbide.

Wellcome.....10
Pepsi-Cola.....0

Blake Stallings hurled a shutout as Wellcome rolled up a 10-0 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday afternoon.

Wellcome got all it needed in the second inning, scoring four times. Stallings led off with a single and moved up on an out. Joe Norris walked and Scott Byrd reached on an error, scoring Stallings. Wachovia Bank.....7
Everett's.....6

Terry Warren picked up three hits and scored three times in leading Wachovia Bank to a 7-6 victory over Everett's Pest Control Saturday in the Babe Ruth League.

Wachovia scored once in the first, but Everett's came back with two in the second. Wachovia pushed over three in the third to regain the lead, only to see Everett tie it up again with two in the fifth, 4-4.

In the bottom of the fifth, however, Wachovia scored three times to put the game away. Warren led off with a single and moved up on an out. He took third on a steal and scored on Travis King's double. Mike Kelly reached on an error and stole second. Both then scored on Lee Eakes' single.

Everett's came back with one each in the sixth and seventh, but fell one run short of catching up.

King and Eakes also added two hits to the Wachovia total, while Axel Smith, Tim West, Neal Everett and Brian Pierre each had two hits for Everett's.

Brown & Wood.....18
Coca-Cola.....8

Mike Wooten hit a two-run homer and Jay Mattox had four hits to lead Brown & Wood to an 18-8 romp over Coca-Cola Saturday in Babe Ruth League action.

B&W came back with two in the bottom of the third on Wooten's homer, then tied it up with three in the fourth.

In the fifth, Brown & Wood scored four more times for a 12-8 lead. Hunter Clark opened with a walk and Gay Ganor singled. Stewart Vines reached on an error, scoring Clark. Ganor went out at home on Robbie McDonald's infield grounder, but Wooten walked to load them up. Chris Meeks then tripled, scoring all three runners to finish the scoring for the inning.

B&W added six more in t;he sixth to make it a runaway.

McDonald, Wooten, Meeks and Gaynor each had two hits to add to the B&W total. Jarvis Groome had two to lead Coke.

Pepsi-Cola.....2

Pepsi did take the initial lead on a solo homer by Tom Moye in the top of the first. Planters matched that with one in the bottom of the inning and took the lead with one in the second.

In the third, Planters pushed over three to put it away. Tom Taylor led off with a single and Jimmie Gillahan walked. An error on a pickoff try let Taylor come home and Morris Johnson singled to score Gillahan. Jason Galloway singled in Johnson.

Planters added two in the fourth and five in the fifth to close out the scoring. Pepsi got its other run in the top fo the fifth.

Leal Dazzles Bosox In Two-Hitter

TORONTO (AP) — The tributes flowed just as quickly and easily as Toronto's Luis Leal sent the Boston hitters to the dugout.

"Today he could have shut out the 1927 Yankees," enthused Blue Jays Manager Bobby Cox in describing Leal's masterful two-hit 7-0 shutout over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

"It was the best pitched game against us this year," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk.

"When Rick Miller came to the plate in the eighth he asked me, 'Is he throwing that well or are we just swinging that bad,'" said Toronto catcher Buck Martinez, who backed Leal with a three-RBI performance, including a two-run homer.

Leal, as is his custom, said little.

"It was a good game and I felt great," said Leal. "I was throwing more fastballs and sliders. They were my best two pitches. Today I had everything going good — fastball, slider, change, curve."

Martinez said the key was Leal's ability to stay aggressive and ahead of the hitters.

"He stayed ahead of the count and wasn't nibbling so much. When Luis struggles it's when he tries to guide the ball a bit and gets it out over the plate. But today he just threw the ball and made good pitches at the same time."

It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Blue Jays and the fourth straight loss for the Red Sox.

Leal, 7-1, was touched for a single by Rick Miller in the second inning and then set down the following 13 batters before Jim Rice doubled to lead off the seventh. Overall, Leal struck out nine, which tied a career high, and walked one as he notched his second shutout of the season.

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the third inning when Damaso Garcia doubled, stole third and scored on Lloyd Moseby's grounder.

Martinez connected for his first homer of the season with Jesse Barfield aboard with two out in the fourth off Bruce Hurst, 8-5, to pad the Blue Jays' lead to 3-0.

New York.....8
Baltimore.....3

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Piniella, after his final game as a player before becoming the New York Yankees' full-time batting instructor and first base coach, said he could have set a better example for the team.

"Now that I'm the batting coach permanently, I hope the guys here didn't watch me today. It would have set them back a few years," said Piniella, who went 0-5 but still managed to knock in the go-ahead run with a third-inning groundout in the Yankees' 8-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

The 40-year-old outfielder's uncharacteristic uneasiness at the plate was understandable. He was playing before a national television audience and the crowd of 37,583 roared at his every move.

"I had goose bumps the whole game," said Piniella, who finished with a career .291 batting average, including a .302 mark in 29 games this season. "I was overwhelmed by the way the fans treated me. Believe me, I'll remember this day for the rest of my life."

Piniella, who was the American League Rookie of the Year with Kansas City in 1969, participated in five American League Championship series and four World Series with the Yankees.

Butch Wynegar drilled three hits, including a two-run single that keyed New York's three-run fourth inning.

Jay Howell, 2-4, making his first start this season after 23 relief appearances, allowed seven hits and one run over five innings. He struck out six and walked three before getting relief help from Ray Fontenot and Mike Armstrong, who gave up a two-run homer to Cal Ripken in the ninth before closing out the victory.

The Orioles, who collected 14 hits, had at least one runner reach base in every inning and stranded 12. The Yankees also collected 14 hits and had at least one runner on base in every inning but the seventh.

After Baltimore took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on Rick Dempsey's two-out RBI single, New York went ahead 2-1 in the third against Scott McGregor, 8-5.

Bobby Meacham led off with a ground-rule double and took third on Willie Randolph's bunt single. Wynegar struck out but Don Baylor beat out a roller to third for one run and the 40 year-old Piniella grounded to shortstop for a forceout, delivering the second run.

New York chased McGregor in the fourth as Don Mattingly led off with a single, Omar Moreno walked and Meacham's sacrifice advanced both runners. Randolph walked to load the bases and Wynegar followed with his two-run single to left, finishing McGregor. Dave Winfield greeted reliever Bill Swaggerty with an RBI single, capping the inning.

The Yankees added three insurance runs in the eighth, two on a single by Winfield that gave him three RBI for the day.

Oakland.....6
Chicago.....3

OAKLAND (AP) — Dave Kingman believes he has finally found a home.

"I've never had this much fun playing baseball," said Kingman, whose third homer in four games helped power the Oakland A's over the Chicago White Sox 6-3 Saturday.

Kingman, who leads the majors with 17 home runs, drove in his 49th and 50th runs of the year with a two-run homer in the first inning. Since returning to the lineup after a knee injury that sidelined him for 11 games, Kingman has sparked the A's to a four-game winning streak, their longest of the season.

"Having a good year is one thing, but playing with people I enjoy is what makes this my best year by far," said Kingman. "Injuring my knee has actually helped me at the plate. It causes me to keep more weight on my back leg."

"We had a couple ideas on how to pitch to him," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, "but he swung and hit them anyway."

"The last thing you want to do is get behind early," said losing pitcher Floyd Bannister. "Especially after what happened last night (when Oakland's Dwayne Murphy beat the White Sox with a ninth-inning homer). I threw him a breaking ball and it was a pretty good pitch, but he hit it."

Steve McCatty, 4-5, scattered nine hits in 7 2-3 innings and improved his lifetime record to 7-0 against the White Sox. He walked none and struck out five before giving way to Bill Caudill, who pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 14th save.

Kingman's homer, his third in four games since coming back to action from an injury, gave the A's a 2-0 first-inning lead off Floyd Bannister, 4-6. Rickey Henderson led off with a single and two outs later, Kingman hit a 2-2 pitch into the left field bleachers for his 49th and 50th RBI of the year.

Chicago scored an unearned run in the fifth. Vance Law singled, took second on a grounder and scored when Scott Fletcher's line drive glanced off the glove of Oakland shortstop Tony Phillips for an error.

Singles by Phillips and Henderson put runners on first and third in the A's' fifth. Bannister's wild pitch scored Philips and moved Henderson to second. Lopes followed with a single to score Henderson and give the A's a 4-1 lead.

The A's added two runs in the sixth. Bruce Bochte singled with one out and scored on Essian's second double of the game. Essian, who moved to third on the throw to the plate, scored on Bannister's second wild pitch of the game.

Ron Kittle's two-out, two-run homer in the eighth inning, his 16th of the season, made the score 6-3 and drove McCatty from the game. The White Sox added a run in the ninth on an RBI single by Steve Christmas.

Irwin...

different personalities: Irwin, intense and professorial; Zoeller, loose and easy, joking with the gallery.

Down the stretch, however, Zoeller's smile began to fade and it was apparent that old back injury was taking its toll.

Early in the round, he'd retrieve the ball from the cup. Late in the day, he left that chore to the caddy, dropping the putt then walking away to the next tee with the ball still in the hole.

They were tied at the turn at four under par.

Zoeller took the lead on the 12th with a great recovery from the trees that set up a 12-15 foot birdie putt.

Irwin rolled in one from the same distance on the next hole and they were tied again.

On the next, the 14th, Irwin appeared to have the upper hand when he put his approach suavely on the green and Fuzzy got in the rough at the side of the green. But Hale took two putts to get down and Fuzzy chipped in for birdie, and led again.

Irwin answered, knotting it up again, with a 6-foot birdie on the next hole. Another tie.

But he gave it back on the next one, after hitting a tree with his second shot, a wood from the fairway. It was a bogey and Zoeller led by one.

But he couldn't get it home.

He was bunkered on the 17th, came out across the green, chipped back close and tapped it in for bogey. Back to a tie.

And on the 18th Zoeller's approach caught still another of those deep bunkers, he blew it across the green to the rough, then chipped back close enough to tap it in with his wedge. But it was a bogey and left Irwin with the lead.

Dawson's Hit Could Be The Cure

MONTREAL (AP) — Struggling with a sore left knee throughout much of the season, Andre Dawson delivered a game-winning, 11th-inning single Saturday that Montreal Expos Manager Bill Virdon hopes will soothe some of the pain.

"Hopefully, this is something which will help him get started," said Virdon after Dawson's hit with none out in the 11th produced a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. "He needs a lift, we needed a lift, and they worked together today."

Miguel Dilone had opened the 11th against reliever Kent Tekulve, 2-6, by lining a triple that rolled to the fence in left-center field. Tim Raines and pinch-hitter Pete Rose were then intentionally walked, but Dawson foiled the strategy by ripping a single into left field past the drawn-in infield.

"It's been difficult for me this season, but by no means have I given up trying to do my best," said Dawson. "The most important thing today is that I was able to come through in a game-winning situation."

Jeff Reardon, 3-1, earned the victory with a scoreless 11th inning. He had relieved Bill Gullickson, who scattered seven hits through the first 10 innings, his longest career outing.

The Pirates held a 1-0 lead until Montreal scored twice in the fifth, then tied it 2-2 in the sixth.

Leadoff singles by Marvell Wynne and Lee Mazzilli off Montreal starter Bill Gullickson put runners at first and third. When Bill Madlock's grounder forced Mazzilli at second, Wynne scored.

Singles by Mazzilli and Madlock and an RBI single by Johnny Ray gave Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead in the first.

Chicago 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Ozzie Virgil claims he has been "struggling lately, but I hit the ball well in batting practice and tried to bring that into the game."

Virgil did. He went after a breaking pitch on a 2-and-1 count and drilled a two-run homer Saturday that capped a five-run first inning and propelled the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"I'd been pulling off the ball," said Virgil, "so I was trying to stay in on it and looking to hit the ball."

The victory was the fourth straight for the Phillies as the Cubs dropped their third in a row, all to the Phillies, whose tempo in the series has been to build big leads early.

"We've been scoring lately and getting five runs in the first inning really helps out and gets the other team down," said Virgil.

"Beating the Cubs three in a row makes us feel good," said Virgil. "They knocked us around pretty good when they came to Philadelphia and now we're hitting good on their turf."

The Cubs' turf is natural grass and the Phillies, who play on artificial turf at home, are 14-3 on natural grass.

"Yes, we've played pretty good on natural grass," said Manager Paul Owens. "If we keep it up I might ask to have the artificial turf taken out of our place."

Owens said Marty Bystrom pitched "a good game" although he took him out after Bystrom had yielded only six hits in eight innings.

"We've been getting such good pitching that I don't want the bullpen to get rusty," said Owen. "Bystrom tok his time and made good pitches when he had to. Getting five runs early also helped."

Bystrom, 3-3, pitched eight innings for the victory while Rick Reuschel, 3-3, suffered the loss, much to the dismay of a standing-room-only crowd of 40,723 at Wrigley Field, largest of the season.

Juan Samuel started the Phillies' big first inning with a single, moved to third on a base hit by Garry Maddox and scored on a single by Von Hayes. Mike Schmidt followed with an RBI single and Joe Lefebvre's groundout delivered another run before Virgil homered into the left field seats.

Parker Takes Two Shot Lead In N.C. Amateur

WILSON (AP) — Greg Parker of Old Fort fired a 1-under-par 71 to take a 2-stroke lead Saturday after three rounds of the 24th annual North Carolina Amateur Championship of the Carolinas Golf Association.

Parker, 18, a sophomore at North Carolina and the 1983 state junior champ, sank key par-saving putts on the back nine on the par-72 Wilson Country Club course for a three-day score of 3-under-par 213.

John Inman, the 1984 NCAA champion, took the lead on the front nine before falling back into a three-way tie at 215. Joining the Greensboro native two strokes off the lead are Bob Cato of Kinston and Mike Goodes of Reidsville.

Inman, a senior at North Carolina, fired a 70 on Saturday while Cato had a 71 and Goodes a 69. Cato had a bogey on the final hole to fall into a tie with Inman, while Goodes had five birdies on the back nine to come in with the day's top score.

Three players were tied at 216 going into Sunday's final round. They were Bill Boles of Wilson, who was second in last year's tournament, Mike Taylor of Gastonia and Jeff Lankford of Mocksville.

Boles and Lankford each had 71s while Taylor had a 74 after shooting a 67 on Friday.

Tied at 217 were Art Roberson of Zebulon, Robert Wilson of Greenville and Johnny Crumpler of Jacksonville.

Second-round leader Bobby Bridges of Forest City leads four golfers tied at 218. Joining Bridges, who had a 1-stroke lead going into Saturday's action, were Walter Hall of Clemmons, Thomas Riley of Kinston and Mitch Perry of Spring Lake.

Bryan Sullivan of Kitty Hawk, Vance Whicker of Greensboro, Paul Simson of Raleigh and John Williams of Wilson were all tied at 219, while at 220 were Larry Boswell of Greensboro, Thomas Coffman of Durham and Mickey Lienau of Raleigh.

Bonnett Captures IROC's First Leg

Bonnett averaged 145.985 mph, winning by three car lengths in a race slowed by five caution flags.

The IROC series, which puts all its emphasis on driving skill, features 12 equally matched Z-28 Chevrolet Camaros. The drivers drew for cars and starting postition.

"I actually felt like Danny Ongais (who finished fifth) had the strongest car," Bonnett said. "My car was telling me it did not want to lead, just like a race horse. I wanted to protect the lead those last three laps, though."

Bonnett, driving with a partial cast on his fractured right wrist, grabbed the lead for the third time with a daring inside move that nearly carried him onto the infield grass during a charge down the homestretch following a yellow flag on the 47th lap of the 50-lap race.

"That little downhill run was somthing I felt like was worth a chance because the cars are so equal," said Bonnett, a native of Hueytown, Ala. "With these cars, you just have to find out what everybody's weak point is."

Bonnett was followed at that point by Johncock and NASCAR driver Dale Earnhardt.

Another NASCAR driver, Darrell Waltrip, eased ahead of Earnhardt into third on the 48th lap, and the three leaders held through the 49th lap before a spin by Cale Yarborough in turn No.3 forced a caution flag out again — setting up the climactic charge in the final lap.

"My car just pushed so bad — worse as the race went on," Yarborough said. "I couldn't run the corners like I wanted."

When the race resumed, drivers got both the white and green flags as they roared past the starter for one last fling around the high-banked two-mile oval.

Parsons dropped low on the first turn of the final lap and shot past Waltrip, then took Johncock on the backstretch. Bonnett, meanwhile, stayed well ahead of the pack and easily held off a last-gasp challenge by both Parsons and Johncock.

"I had to sit there and talk to myself a lot of times and let people go by me, because I knew their tires were going to get too hot at the end," Bonnett said. "It really took a lot of self discipline."

Waltrip finished fourth, ahead of Ongais. Johnny Rutherford was sixth, Earnhardt finished seventh and Brazilian road racer Emerson Fittipaldi was eighth.

The other finishers, in order were Jacky Ickx of Belgium, Derek Bell of England, Indy driver Tom Sneva and Yarborough.

The four-race IROC series, which was discontinued after the 1980 season because of a sour economy, resumes July 7 on a road course at the Cleveland Grand Prix; runs July 28 at Alabama International Speedway in Talladega, then concludes back at Michigan International Speedway on Aug. 11.

The driver with the most points after the four races will earn $150,000 of the $465,000 IROC purse.

1. Neil Bonnett, 50, 145.985.
2. Benny Parsons, 50.
3. Gordon Johncock, 50.
4. Darrell Waltrip, 50.
5. Danny Ongais, 50.
6. Johnny Rutherford, 50.
7. Dale Earnhardt, 50.
8. Emerson Fittipaldo, 50.
9. Jacky Ickx, 50.
10. Derek Bell, 49.
11. Tom Sneva, 49.
12. Cale Yarborough, 49.

White Pushes Out To Three-Shot Lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Donna H. White took the lead with birdies on two of her first three holes Saturday and overcame all challenges in taking a three-stroke advantage after three rounds in the Ladies Professional Golf Assciation's $250,000 Mayflower Classic.

White, 30, shot a 3-under-par 69 for an 8-under 208 after 54 holes at the Country Club of Indianapolis. Ayako Okamoto of Japan gained a stroke on par with a 71 to move into second place.

Four players, including second-round leader Juli Inkster, share third at 214. Veteran Sandra Palmer, second-year pro Lauri Peterson and Atsuko Hikage of Japan complete the group.

Palmer, who has only two top 10 finishes in her 21st year on the tour, charged into contention after starting the day four strokes off the pace.

She made birdie putts of 30, 18 and 16 feet en route to a 70, scoring her only bogey on No. 15 with a "very poor chip shot"

"My short game's really been horrendous," Palmer said. "I'm getting back to thinking like when I was winning the Open (1975).

"I've been frustrated because my putts weren't falling and I've been hitting it close," Peterson said. "The ones that you should make some of the time weren't falling in."

The string started when she knocked a sand wedge about three inches from the pin on the 521-yard, par 5 second hole. The other birdies on putts of 15 and 10 feet.

Peterson's only bogey came on the 403-yard, par 4 No. 10, taking a "bad swing" on a 6-iron shot.

White, seeking her fourth victory since joining the tour in 1977, had three birdies and two bogeys on the front nine. On the back, White made birdie putts of 12 and 20 feet to go with seven pars.

Edwards Fans 20 In 5-1 Pitt Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Darryl Edwards took things into his own hands Friday night against Kinston, as the Pitt County American Legion hurler struck out a record 20 batters as Post 39 took a 5-1 victory in the contest.

It was the fifth straight victory for Post 39 and kept Pitt County atop the standings in the Eastern Division of Area I. Pitt is now 8-2 on the year.

Edwards, who allowed only three hits in the game, walked eight batters, but six of those came in the final four innings of the contest.

He recorded his 16th strikeout in retiring the side in the seventh inning, tying the record originally set by Mike Williams, and tied by Williams' brother Roger later on. Edwards had also tied the mark last Sunday against Edenton when he finished the game with 16 strikeouts.

He set the record in the eighth, striking out the leadoff batter in the frame — and the next two — marking the fourth time in the game he struck out the side. He added number 20 in the ninth, when he also walked the bases full.

The win by Edwards was his second in three decisions. He lasted but one inning in his first outing against Rocky Mount, but has been overpowering since then. In 19 innings pitched so far this season, he's recorded 37 strikeouts.

Meanwhile Joe Lane, the Kinston pitcher, didn't toil in complete anonimity. While he only fanned two and walked five, he held Pitt to just five hits and really got in trouble only once — in the fifth when he walked the three of the first four batters he faced. Pitt scored four times in that inning and put the game out of reach.

Pitt Coach Bruce Rhodes had praise for both pitchers. "That was a real fine performance by Darryl. His first game was a tough one, but he's been real fine these last two games. He did a super job tonight. He's a competitor and I had confidence that he would come back after that first outing.

"It was a real pitchers' duel," he added. "And they were right back in it in the ninth (when Edwards walked three before retiring the side).

"We got our hits at the right time, and not making an error in the field helped too. This makes four complete games we've gotten in the last five. If this keeps us, we'll be in good shape."

For a while, it looked like the two hurlers might battle forever as neither wished to give ground. Kinston put runners in scoring position in the third and fifth innings before anyone scored. In the third a walk and a stolen base put a man on second with two away, but Edwards fanned the next batter. In the fifth, Lane got the first hit off Edwards and Terry Walters followed, beating out a bunt for a hit. With one away, they were sacrificed up but again, Edwards struck out the final batter to end the threat.

Pitt, meanwhile, was doing little better. A single, fielder's choice and a walk put a man in scoring position in the first, but no one else reached second until the fifth.

The fifth, however, turned out to be the difference as four Pitt runners crossed the plate. Mike Kinley led off with a walk and with one away, Roger Moye and Edwards also walked, loading the bases. Jackie Conway followed with a single over the drawn-in infield, scoring Kinley. Toby Fischer followed with a single up the middle, driving in both Moye and Edwards. Doug Coley's grounder to second scored Conway with the fourth run.

Kinston came back in the top of the sixth with its only run of the night. Darnell Thorbes led off with a walk and stole second. He moved to third on a long fly out for the second out. Bobby Simmons then singled to center, scoring Thorbes.

Kinston twice more got runners into scoring position. In the seventh, two walks put a man on second, and in the ninth, three passes loaded the bases with two away before Thorbes grounded into a force to end the game.

Pitt, which left a man on second in the sixth, got its other run in the eighth. Eric Woodworth opened the eighth reaching on an error and took third on a double by Kinley. He scored on Traye Fuqua's sacrifice fly.

Fischer ended the game with three of the five hits collected by Pitt. No one had more than one for Kinston.

Kinston falls to 5-6 on the season with the loss.

Wilson Eases By Snow Hill, 5-4

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team made it Christmas in June Friday night when it allowed Wilson to rally from a 3-0 deficit and pull out a ten-inning 5-4 victory.

Snow Hill mistakes contributed to the victory as twice runners reached after striking out, and the winning run reached third when a fielder fell down trying to get to the ball.

The loss dropped Snow Hill to 7-4 on the season.

The host team grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring once. Nat Norris walked and Randy Daniels reached on an error. Both were sacrificed up and a groundout by Jerry Butler scored Norris.

Snow Hill added a second run in the third. With two out, Anthony Russo reached on an error and scored when Butler reached on an error.

Still a third run came over in the third. Todd Grant singled and Rick Radford also got a hit, moving Grant to third. Mike Warren grounded out, scoring Grant.

Wilson, which had only one baserunner in the first six innings, rallied in the seventh for two runs. With two away, Tommy Boswell singled. Woody Mercer struck out, but the ball got away from Grant, and an error on the first baseman allowed Mercer to reach. Both runners sped around the bases and another error on the relay scored both of them.

Wilson tied it up with one in the eighth. Seth Tyson doubled and scored on Roy Goff's single.

But in the top of the ninth, Wilson scored again to tie it at 4-4. Mercer again struck out, but reached on a passed ball. Greg Hill singled and Tyson walked, loading the bases. Milo Popowitch's sacrifice fly scored Mercer with the tying run.

Wilson got the winning run in the tenth. With two away, Rusty Dail tripled when Norris fell going after the ball. He scored on a hit by William Chapman and Snow Hill failed to come back in the bottom of the frame.

Chapman led the Wilson hitting with two, while Radford and Norris each had two for Snow Hill.

Hearns Turns Attention To Hagler After KO Win

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns, reborn as the "Hit Man" following a devastating second-round knockout of Roberto Duran, hadn't even stepped out of the ring before his thoughts turned to a fight against middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

"Marvin Hagler knows what's happening, he knows we're coming," Hearns said after stopping Duran at 1:07 of the second round Friday night. "I can see him now shaking like a leaf."

But for Duran the magic that spurred his most recent comeback may be over, although in typical Duran fashion he refused to admit it.

"I don't know, I haven't made a decision yet," said Duran, who turned 33 today. "I don't feel too good right now."

Hearns had predicted before the scheduled 12-round bout that he would knock Duran out in the second round to retain his World Boxing Council super welterweight crown.

That prediction not only didn't sit well with Duran, but was scoffed at by his handlers, among others, who pointed out that Duran had never been knocked out in his 81-bout professional career.

"You thought I was crazy, huh?" Hearns told the media after the fight. "I felt I could box him a round and then start unloading."

It didn't even take that long. After a cautious first two minutes that saw both fighters trying to feel each other out, Hearns suddenly shot out a left jab and followed it wih a crushing right to Duran's head that put the Panamanian on the canvas.

Duran, 154, was up at the count of five, but Hearns moved in and pinned Duran on the ropes where he unleashed a series of combinations that put him down for a second time.

The bell sounded as Duran struggled to his feet, but he was so dazed he staggered toward a neutral corner before his handlers brought him back to his stool.

Duran drew upon his vast ring savvy to open the second round with a combination that Hearns said later "made me stop a minute and think about what I was doing."

But Hearns, 153 14, regrouped and again began throwing combinations to Duran's head as Duran struggled to stay upright. Then, as Duran moved away on the ropes, Hearns threw out the left and caught Duran with his best punch of the fight, a bruising right that jerked Duran upright before he fell face first on the canvas and referee Carlos Padilla stopped the fight.

"It was a sneaky right hand," Hearns said of the knockout punch. "He was looking for the left jab and it wasn't there. The right was."

The knockout was the first for Hearns in almost two years, and may have stopped speculation that he could not knock out opponents in the higher weight class like he had in stopping 28 of his first 30 opponents as a welterweight.

"It was very important for me to win by a knockout," Hearns said. "I was fighting a legend, the greatest fighter in the ring today."

Duran said he could take nothing away from Hearns' performance.

"I don't have an excuse," he said through his interpreter-manager, Luis Spada. "I was surprised by Tommy Hearns. He won in a good way. I congratulate him for this victory."

Elliott Claims Pole At Michigan

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — If Bill Elliott could run more races at Michigan International Speedway, he just might his stock rise in racing circles.

Elliott pushed his Ford Thunderbird around the two-mile oval at MIS in a track-record speed of 164.339 mph Friday to earn the pole position in Sunday's Miller 400 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

"I really enjoy this track because it combines the draft of the long track with the corners of a short track," Elliott said. "It seems like a perfect marriage of the two and I like to race here."

"I had to look at the scoreboard clock twice when I came back in," Elliott said. "I thought maybe they'd got it wrong."

It was only the third pole for Elliott, a native of Dawsonville, Ga., who has been on the NASCAR circuit since 1976. Ironically, one of his other two poles also came at MIS — in August 1982.

"I just feel like I get around the race track better here," said Elliott, who currently is fifth in the Winston Cup standings. "The track seems to suit my driving style, which is a little conservative."

Elliott becomes the 10th different pole winner on the 1984 Grand National circuit.

"We made some changes in the car prior to Pocono (last weekend), but we didn't think they would have made as much difference as they did," Elliott said.

Sitting beside Elliott, on the outside of the front row, will be Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Garden, N.C. who was the second-fastest qualifier Friday at 163.114 mph in his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS.

"I didn't think we had a shot at the pole, but if anyone had told me earlier we'd run a 44.141 (seconds) I would have thought that would have been plenty," Bodine said. "But Bill just got in a super lap, and I do mean super."

Twenty cars in the 40-car field qualified Friday. The remainder of the field was to be filled Saturday, following a 100-mile International Race of Champions event in 12 equally prepared Z-28 Chevrolet Camaros.

After Elliott's Thunderbird, the next eight cars all were Monte Carlos.

The first car in the second row will be Neil Bonnett who qualified at 162.789 mph

Next to Bonnett on the outside of Row Two will be Darrell Waltrip, the current leader of the Winston Cup standings. Waltrip qualified at 162.572 mph

"We put some new tires on, and they were better," Waltrip said. "But, they're only good for about one and a half laps."

Cale Yarborough, winner of last week's Van Scoy Diamond Mine 500 at Pocono and winner of both NASCAR events at Michigan International Speedway last year, had the fifth-fastest run Friday, qualifying at 162.525 mph

Terry Labonte, who trails Waltrip in the Winston Cup standings by only a whisker, was sixth at 162.514 mph

Canipe Likes The Attention

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — David Canipe's gallery swelled from "about six to maybe 100" in the second round of the 84th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"I guess they just wanted to see what I looked like," Canipe said Friday after a second consecutive 69 had left him very much in the title hunt at the halfway point of the American national championship.

Canipe's 138 total left him tied for third place with Australian Greg Norman, two shots behind leader Hale Irwin.

"I heard people out there calling me 'canope,' and others wondering 'who is he'?" Canipe said.

He is a 30-year-old from Orlando, Fla. who made three unsuccessful attempts at playing the PGA Tour and now contents himself with competition in the mini-tours around Florida.

He bristled slightly at the suggestion he may be a golf hustler.

"Well, if you've got a sponsor, you're in gravy. But if you don't have a sponsor, and you don't play well for a month, then you've got a cash problem. It's kind of like poker. If you don't have the cash, you can't make a bet," he said.

Canipe said he entertained no thought of winning this tournament over the fabled Winged Foot Golf Club West course.

"In fact, I kind of hope a couple of guys jump in there ahead of me so I don't have to play with the leader Saturday. It's always a stampede with that last group."

Terrell Gives Mets 3rd Shutout

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

The last time it happened the names were Gentry, Seaver and Koosman, and Walt Terrell had just celebrated his 12th birthday.

Terrell, 5-6, combined with Jesse Orosco Friday night to shut out the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 and give the New York Mets three straight shutouts for the first time since May of 1970.

Wednesday, Ed Lynch and Doug Sisk shut out the Pirates 2-0, and Thursday Ron Darling blanked the Cardinals 6-0.

The five New York pitchers have given up a total of 11 hits over the three games. The Mets won their 10th in 12 games Friday and took over first place in the National League East with the victory.

"Do you think we're bona fide?" Mets Manager Dave Johnson asked rhetorically. "We've played good ball basically all year. We're getting to know each other."

"Tonight wasn't a great pitching performance, my mechanics were fouled up," said Terrell. "But I thought I threw the ball well, and I had good stuff. They only hit two fly balls."

In other National League games, Philadelphia beat Chicago 5-2, Montreal downed Pittsburgh 1-0, Atlanta defeated Cincinnati 6-1, Houston edged Los Angeles 3-2, and San Diego nipped San Francisco 3-2.

The Cardinals continued a shutout streak of their own. They have not scored a run in their last four home games and now have been shut out 10 times this year, the most in the NL.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog couldn't say where the runs have gone. "Every night we see another Walter Johnson, don't we?" he said. "We had our chances."

Keith Hernandez, with his fourth homer of the year, and Hubie Brooks, with his seventh, teed off in the fourth inning on St. Louis starter Joaquin Andujar, 10-6.

Mookie Wilson opened the fourth with a bunt single and Hernandez stroked his homer into the right-field seats off Andujar, who pitched six innings. Brooks followed with his shot two outs later.

Wilson made it 4-0 in the fifth, singling home Wally Backman, who had doubled. Jose Oquendo singled home Brooks an inning later.

Expos 1, Pirates 0

Dan Schatzeder, making his first start in almost a year, held Pittsburgh to five hits over seven innings and singled home the game's only run in Montreal.

Tim Wallach opened the second against Jose DeLeon, 3-4, with a double and Jim Wohlford followed with a walk. One out later, Schatzeder blooped a single into left field to score Wallach.

"The guys kidded me about the hit," said Schatzeder. "I thought I fouled it back, but then I saw everyone running to left field, the fans were cheering and the ball was bouncing in. I decided I'd better take off for first."

Schatzeder, 2-2, walked three batters and struck out two before being lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Bob James picked up his first save.

Braves 6, Reds 1

Rick Mahler hurled a three-hitter and had three hits of his own, including a two-run double, as Atlanta won for the eighth consecutive time over the Reds and lifted their advantage to 10-1 in the season series between the two teams.

It was also the fifth victory in a row for Mahler, 5-1, who raised his batting average to .450 — 9 for 20 — on the season.

"They just happen to be throwing the ball where I'm swinging the bat right now," he said.

Mahler slapped his two-run double to right field in the fourth following a double by Glenn Hubbard and a walk to Bruce Benedict. He also doubled to right in the seventh and scored on Randy Johnson's third single of the game.

Phillies 5, Cubs 2

Ivan DeJesus' two-run single with the bases loaded and the score tied 2-2 in the fourth inning propelled the Phillies to a win over DeJesus' former club.

"I always liked playing in Chicago," DeJesus said. "I have lots of friends here and I try a little harder."

Charles Hudson, 7-4, allowed four hits over eight innings to gain the victory. Al Holland came on to pitch the ninth and gained his 14th save.

The Phillies went ahead 5-2 in the fourth inning on a bases-loaded walk, DeJesus' single and Juan Samuel's double.

Ryne Sandberg's sixth home run gave the Cubs a 2-1 lead in the third.

Astros 3, Dodgers 2

Pinch hitter Phil Garner's one-out single brought home Terry Puhl with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth for Houston's fifth win in six outings.

Bill Dawley, 4-4, picked up the victory after pitching the final two innings. Oral Hershiser, 2-3, took the loss although the winning hit came off Pat Zachry.

Padres 3, Giants 2

Graig Nettles slammed a two-run homer and Ed Whitson won his fifth consecutive game as the Padres won for the 16th time in their last 20 games.

Nettles' homer, his ninth, came off Jeff Robinson, 3-7, and was his fourth in his last five games.

"The last two games I pitched, I didn't have anything. I had to rely on off-speed pitches," said Whitson, who allowed seven hits over seven innings. "I came up with a palm ball as my change-up, and now they can't just sit on the fastball. It's made all the difference in the world."

Bulls Slip By Breakers, 20-17

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Brian Franco booted a 30-yard field goal five minutes into overtime Friday night to cap a furious 10-minute rally and give the Jacksonville Bulls a 20-17 United States Football League victory over the New Orleans Breakers.

Jacksonville quarterback Robbie Mahfouz, who shared first half playing time with rookie Ben Bennett, completed his last six passes of the game, including the tying touchdown and three on the winning overtime drive.

Mahfouz finished with 15 completions in 20 attempts for 195 yards after throwing only four times for 26 yards in the first 30 minmutes of play.

The tying touchdown, which came with 1:17 left in the game, went to Perry Kemp — about nine yards in the air and Kemp legged it the remaining 33 yards.

With 5:56 left in the game, Brian Whiting put the Bulls in striking range with an eight-yard touchdown burst that narrowed the score to 17-10, in New Orleans' favor.

The rally overshadowed another outstanding night by Breakers running back Buford Jordan, who gained 198 yards rushing and caught four passes for 49 yards.

He scored two touchdowns, on on a 9-yard reception from quarterback Johnnie Walton and the other on an unusual 27-yard run in the fourth quarter.

Tim Mazzetti booted a 28-yard field goal in the second period for the Breakers' other points.

Walton finished 15-of-23 for 160 yards as the Breakers fell to 8-9 in their home season windup.

Toronto Rallies To Slip By Bosox

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

When the Boston Red Sox tried at first and did not succeed, they tried again. And when they did not succeed the second time, they lost.

Rance Mulliniks singled with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning, driving in two runs that carried the Toronto Blue Jays past the Red Sox 4-3 Friday night.

Mulliniks' hit came on a 1-2 pitch after the Blue Jays had rallied in the last of the ninth to tie it when Dave Collins doubled with two outs and scored on Lloyd Moseby's single.

In other AL games, Detroit rallied past Milwaukee 3-2, Baltimore nipped New York 2-1, Minnesota blanked Kansas City 3-0, Seattle tripped Texas 4-3 in 10 innings, Oakland slipped by Chicago 2-1, and California halted Cleveland 5-2.

Boston's loss was its third straight in which the opposition had won in its final at-bat.

The Red Sox took a 3-2 lead in the top of the 11th when Mike Easler and pinch hitter Reid Nichols singled and reliever Jimmy Key mishandled Rick Miller's bunt, loading the bases. Dennis Lamp then took over and walked Bill Buckner on four pitches to force in the go-ahead run.

Easler had earlier doubled to extend his hitting streak to 20 games, longest in the AL this season.

But the Jays battled back against Mark Clear, 5-1, as Collins reached first base when he struck out on a wild pitch. Willie Upshaw drew a one-out walk, and after Jesse Barfield struck out, George Bell walked to load the bases and leave it up to Mulliniks.

"It's a good situation to be in," Mulliniks said. "Every hitter looks forward to the situation where you can win a ballgame with a base hit."

"Coming to the plate, I wasn't pumped up," he said. "You want to make sure you concentrate and don't overswing, don't try to do too much."

Tigers 3, Brewers 2

Good teams take advantage of their opportunities. In Milwaukee, the Detroit Tigers, whose 45-16 record leads the majors, took advantage of two eighth-inning errors to beat the Brewers.

Jaime Cocanower took a 2-1 lead into the eighth but the Tigers loaded the bases on an error by shortstop Robin Yount, a single by Kirk Gibson and a walk to Darrell Evans.

Johnny Grubb then lifted a sacrifice fly to tie it, and the bases remained loaded when center fielder Rick Manning dropped the ball for an error. Larry Herndon followed with an infield single to put the Tigers in front.

Dan Petry, 10-3, went seven innings for the victory and Willie Hernandez nailed down his 11th save.

Orioles 2, Yankees 1

Mike Boddicker, the AL's Pitcher of the Month in May, continued his June success in New York.

The game was tied 1-1 and New York starter Bob Shirley had retired 14 straight Orioles before John Shelby led off the ninth with a single. Rich Dauer sacrificed, Cal Ripken Jr. was intentionally walked and Eddie Murray stroked a single to left to drive in Shelby.

It was Murray's 13th game-winning RBI of the season, tops in the AL.

Twins 3, Royals 0

Minnesota's John Butcher tossed a three-hit shutout while Kansas City starter Mark Gubicza pitched well but was shut out for the second straight time.

Butcher, 5-4, yielded one-out singles in the first, fourth and fifth innings and walked only one. Gubicza, 3-6, gave up four hits before being relieved in the eighth.

A's 2, White Sox 1

Murphy's homer was his 10th of the season and just the fourth hit of the game off Hoyt, 6-6.

Reliever Keith Atherton, 5-3, went 1 2-3 innings for the victory. He took over for Bill Krueger in the eighth with two runners on and one out and gave up Greg Luzinski's bloop single to load the bases before striking out Ron Kittle on three pitches and getting Harold Baines to ground out.

Kittle had earlier hit his 15th home run of the season.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3

Both starters, Charlie Hough of Texas and Mark Langston of Seattle, pitched well and neither was around at the end for the decision.

Hough, bidding for his fifth straight complete-game victory, gave up seven hits and left after eight innings with a 3-2 lead. Langston gave up just four hits in eight innings and struck out 11 of the first 16 batters he faced. He finished with 12 strikeouts, tops in the AL this season.

The Mariners tied the game in the bottom of the ninth against Joey McLaughlin, 0-1, on Bob Kearney's sacrifice fly and then won it in the 10th when Al Cowens singled with one out and the bases loaded.

Angels 5, Indians 2

Zahn, 8-3, earned the victory by scattering 11 singles over eight-plus innings. He left after giving up two hits to open the ninth, and Luis Sanchez got the last three outs for his seventh save.

Clipper Prexy Says Suit Wrong

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The National Basketball Association "made a tragic error" in filing a suit seeking to terminate or replace the San Diego Clippers franchise on grounds the club moved to Los Angeles without league approval, Clippers President Alan Rothenberg says.

"I didn't think they would be that stupid. The team is in L.A., and if the NBA pursues this, they're making a big mistake," Rothenberg said.

League attorneys filed the suit in federal court in San Diego Friday. The suit seeks more than $25 million in damages and asks the court to confirm the league's rights in approving or disapproving relocation of franchises.

Due to uncertainties created by rulings in past cases involving movement of professional sports franchises, the Clippers will be scheduled to play their home games in Los Angeles, and "any further steps to terminate the Clippers franchise will await the outcome of the litigation," NBA officials said.

"While we regret that the NBA has made a tragic error by suing us, we are delighted that they have made no attempt whatsoever to block the club's relocation," Rothenberg said in Los Angeles Friday.

NBA spokesman Alex Sachare said that under the suit another franchise could be created by the NBA board of governors to replace the Clippers either in San Diego or in another city.

NBA Commissioner David Stern said the suit "also seeks to confirm the NBA's right to evaluate the move under NBA franchise relocation procedures — and to approve or disapprove it after such evaluation."

The Clippers, who announced the move to Los Angeles May 15, "have followed faithfully the NBA constitution and the laws of this jurisdiction," Rothenberg said.

"There is absolutely nothing in the NBA constitution requiring league approval of our relocation," he said. "We will prevail in this litigation as surely, as decisively, and as expensively, as did the Raiders in their suit against the NFL."

In the Raiders' case, the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Los Angeles ruled that the National Football League team was within its rights to move from Oakland to Los Angeles starting with the 1982 season without NFL approval. The NFL is appealing the ruling.

Stern, in a prepared statement, said: "San Diego's conduct amounts to a willful violation of the NBA constitution and strikes at the very heart of the orderly operation of a professional sports league."

League rules require a majority vote of the 23 members of the board of directors for moving a team.

According to the NBA's suit, the Clippers signed a lease to play their home games in the Los Angeles Sports Arena starting next season and publicly announced they had become "the Los Angeles Clippers," with offices in Los Angeles.

The suit also names the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Commission, which operates the Sports Arena, as a defendant.

"Both the Clippers and the Coliseum Commission are committed to resisting this lawsuit no matter how long or how much expense it may take," Rothenberg said.

Russ Granik, NBA vice president and general counsel, said, in his judgment, the league's action was "consistent with the opinions of the Ninth Circuit in the Davis case"

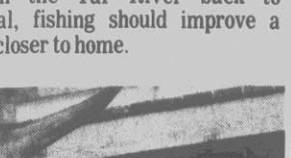

"We don't read the Davis Case as the league has no right to consider these," he said. "We think a league does have a right, as long as it is done in an appropriate manner. However, we are mindful of the uncertainties of the law in this area. And it is for that area the Clippers will be scheduled for next season — while the lawsuit is pending — to play their games in Los Angeles."

"We're pleased that the National Basketball Association has recognized the rights of the Clippers to play their home games in the Los Angeles Sports Arena by scheduling them here for 1984-85," Sen. William Campbell, a state senator and president of the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Commission said in a statement Friday. "On the other hand, we are disappointed that the league would elect to litigate this matter when the inevitable conclusion of such an action will be an endorsement of the Clippers' right to play in Los Angeles under our system of laws."

On Wednesday, the Senate Commerce Committee narrowly approved a bill to halt arbitrary shifts of pro sports teams to new cities, a measure prompted by the moves of the Raiders and the NFL's Colts from Baltimore to Indianapolis.

The legislation also would set up legal requirements for future team moves and give local interests a chance to buy a team about to be moved.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

Greenville Fishing Team Takes Third — The crew of the Greenville-based Barbera B. recently finished third in the annual Big Rock Blue Marlin Tournament held out of Morehead City. Bill Blount, Billy Clifton, Derek Dunn, Jim Andrews, Bill Hogan and Bruce Brown shared the third place finish in one of the east coast's premier marlin tournaments.

Congratulations to the entire crew.

Tournament Reminder — The first annual River Park North Fishing Derby postponed June 9 will be held this Saturday June 23. Co-sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the Outdoor Shop, the derby is open to all ages.

Registration forms are still available from River Park North on Mumford Road, The Outdoor Shop and the Trade Gas Station on Greenville Blvd.

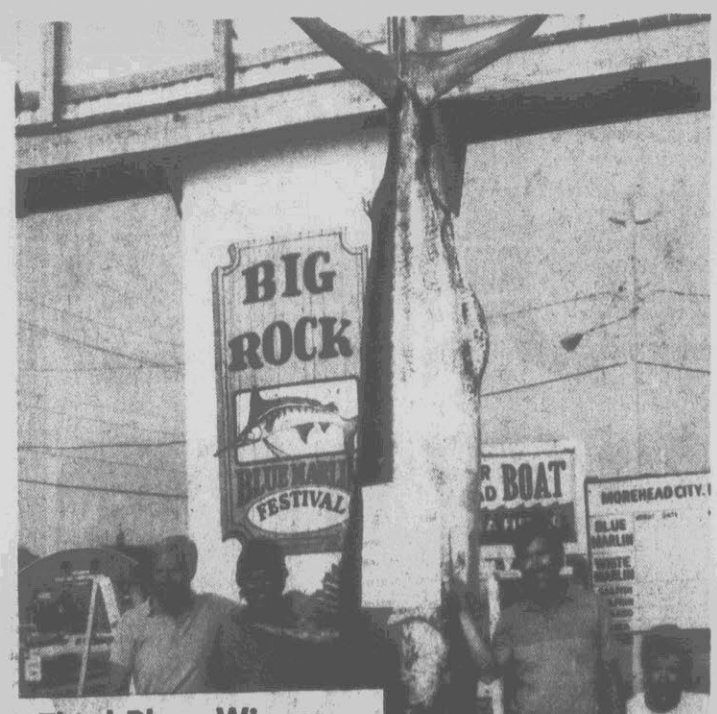

Official Weigh Station — The Outdoor Shop, a full line tackle shop in Greenville, recently became an official weigh station for the North Carolina Saltwater Fishing Tournament.

Authorized to certify eligable species in the N.C. Saltwater Tournament for citations, the shop also can certify potential salt and fresh water state records.

Fishing Report — This week the fishing news centers on the coast where most of the species are biting well. Grey trout remain abundant in all of the inlets, especially Ocracoke. Flounder seem to be everywhere. Last week the flounder moved up the Pamlico River as far as Hickory Point on South Creek. Dolphin, amberjack and a few billfish were being caught well offshore. King mackerel, Spanish mackerel and bluefish are still biting off Bogue and Core Banks.

With the Tar River back to normal, fishing should improve a little closer to home.

Third Place Winner

Denies Deficit Rumors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chief Olympics organizer Peter Ueberroth labeled as "ridiculous...erroneous" a report this week that the LAOOC stands to lose $95 million in revenues as a result of the Soviet boycott of the Summer Games.

After an interview with foreign journalists by satellite telecast, Ueberroth, the president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said there would be a "very small" or "tiny" surplus for the Games in response to a report from San Bernardino earlier in the week that an LAOOC security negotiator had told county sheriff representatives there that the LAOOC has no money left to pay more than $50,000 for the county's Olympic security costs.

The negotiator reportedly said the committee stands to lose $90 million to $95 million in revenues because of the Soviet boycott.

Deputy Chief Keith Larson, the San Bernardino County sheriff's security commander at the Olympic shooting events at Prado Regional Park near Chino, reiterated Friday that the statement had been made by Malvin Wessell, the LAOOC's security chief for the Prado site. He reported that Wessell made the point shortly after the Soviets announced their boycott May 8.

An LAOOC press officer, however, who checked with Wessell, said the security officer denied saying anything of the kind, and Ueberroth said the figure for projected lost revenue due to the boycott "isn't close" to the real figure.

"I don't know what it is," Ueberroth said of the projected loss. "It's certainly nowhere near those kinds of figures."

Ueberroth told Los Angeles reporters Friday immediately after the African news conference that "an awful lot of questions" will have to be answered before he can estimate the committee's boycott losses. He indicated the loss would be determined by how many of the 142 countries that have committed themselves to the Games actually show up.

During the teleconference, Ueberroth and Mayor Tom Bradley were repeatedly questioned about security concerns, high costs and commercialization.

Ueberroth defended the LAOOC, the first private group in history to sponsor the Games, but said it was likely that this would be the last time the concept would be used.

"This exact type of Games I don't think will ever happen again," he said. But he added, there is "a great deal that can be learned from these Games."

Ueberroth also suggested Friday that a substandard team and strict drug controls may have been factors in the Soviet Union's pullout of Games, but later toned down his remarks.

During the news conference Ueberroth said the drug crackdown in the Pan-American Games last summer sent a message "to all the world that there will be no banned substances permitted in Los Angeles."

Ueberroth then added, "And some people say that's a factor why some people don't compete."

After the telecast, when asked to elaborate on the remark, Ueberroth backed off, saying the matter was something he read in a report. He added, "I would hope it's probably not true."

Ueberroth, who has grown increasingly critical of the Soviets since the boycott was announced May 8, cited several reasons for the USSR action.

"My guess is, my guess only, is the first reason was to react to 1980," he said, referring to the U.S.-led boycott of the Moscow Games.

"It was an eye for an eye. The second reason, I think that this time the Soviet team was not nearly as strong as it's been in the past.

"I believe the teams from the DDR (East Germany) and Czechoslovakia had the strongest teams ever, but not the Soviet Union. And the chance to come here and not win many medals was another factor in their decision-making," he said.

With more than 50 teams joining the U.S.-led boycott, the Soviets won an Olympic-record 80 gold medals in 1980.

When an African journalist suggested the LAOOC was "insensitive" to the needs of third world nations by not providing more financial aid, Ueberroth said the private group lacked money.

"We don't have the funds to send out free airline tickets," he said.

After the news conference he told reporters that the USSR, at the height of the 1980 boycott, "blanketed Africa and said 'we'll pay for everything.'"

About 20 African nations attended the Moscow Games. More than 40 have announced plans to participate in the Los Angeles Olympics.

Bradley, responding to questions about having a private organization stage the Games, gave Ueberroth and the LAOOC a full vote of confidence.

"I would not change a thing. If I had it to do over again, I'd look for another Peter Ueberroth," he said.

Ueberroth said he has one regret.

"In retrospect, I think we can be criticized for not recognizing the change of power when (Soviet President Yuri) Andropov died," he said.

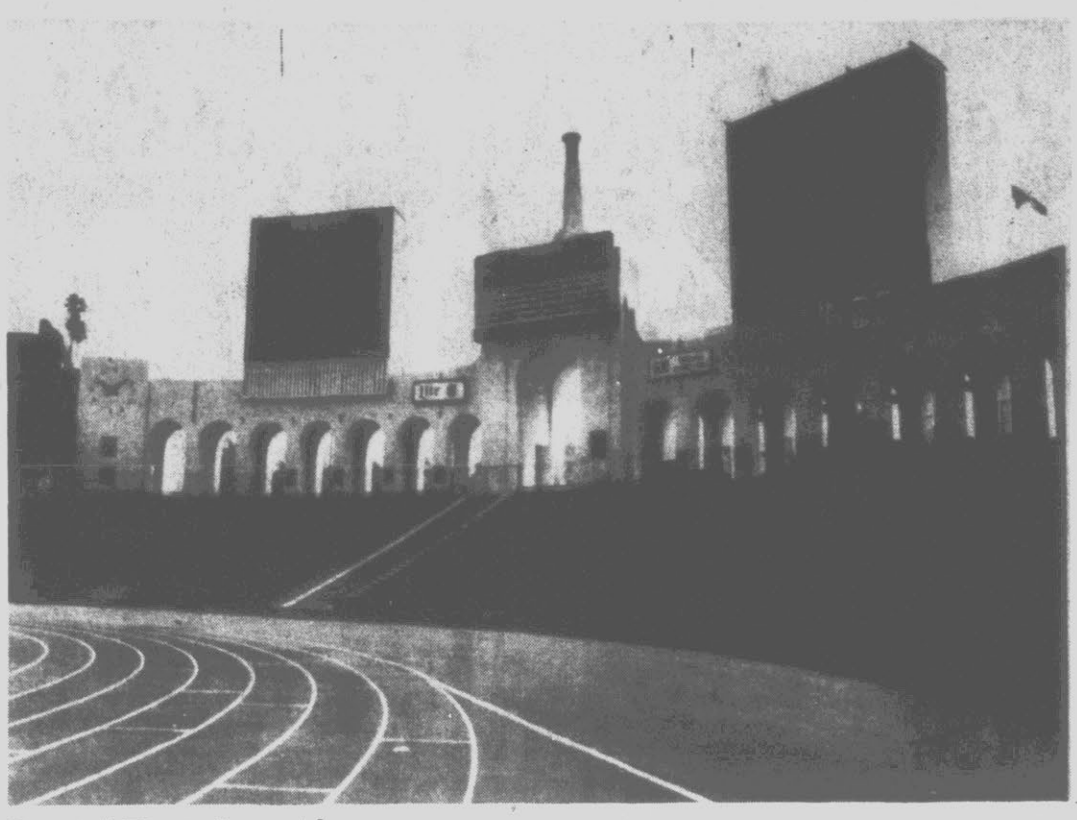

Given the luxury of hindsight, he said that the LAOOC should have moved faster after Konstantin Chernenko took power and "redoubled our efforts to avoid the problems that took place."

"Maybe we could have done more-but frankly, we have tried in every possible way," he said.

Following the news conference, when asked for a reaction to the line of questioning from African nations, Ueberroth said he was surprised that the Zola Budd issue was not raised.

Budd, a teen-age running sensation from South Africa, was recently granted British citizenship. South Africa was banned from Olympic competition in 1970 for its apartheid racial policies.

"I expected that question, but it is a matter for the IOC to decide eligibility," he said.

'Hit Man' Back; Hearns Happy

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The "Hit Man" returned Friday night after a two-year absence and Thomas Hearns welcomed him home like a long-lost friend.

"The Hit Man is back, all the way now," Hearns said after he devastated Roberto Duran in little more than four minutes of action to retain the World Boxing Council super welterweight title in a scheduled 12-rounder.

It was Hearns' vaunted right hand that did Duran in. A hard right in the first put him down initially and a crushing right in the second stopped him cold at 1:07 of the round.

"Since the Hit Man has been away for a while, on vacation, I thought the right hand was one of my hardest ever," said Hearns.

Hearns said he set up Duran with his left jab and confused the Panamanian by looking toward his body when he hit him in the face with the right hand that first put Duran down.

"It was a sneaky right hand," said Hearns. "He was looking for the left jab and it wasn't there. I faked the body and shot the overhead right hand."

Duran, who was stopped for the first time in this 16-year professional career, said Hearns caught him off guard.

"I don't have any excuses," said Duran. "I was surprised by Tommy Hearns. He won in a good way. I congratulate him for the victory."

Duran, who was stripped of his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title when he stepped into the ring against Hearns, said he wasn't sure whether he would fight again.

"I don't know, I haven't made a decision yet," said Duran, who turned 33 Saturday.

Hearns predicted before the fight that he would knock Duran out in the second round and managed to keep his promise.

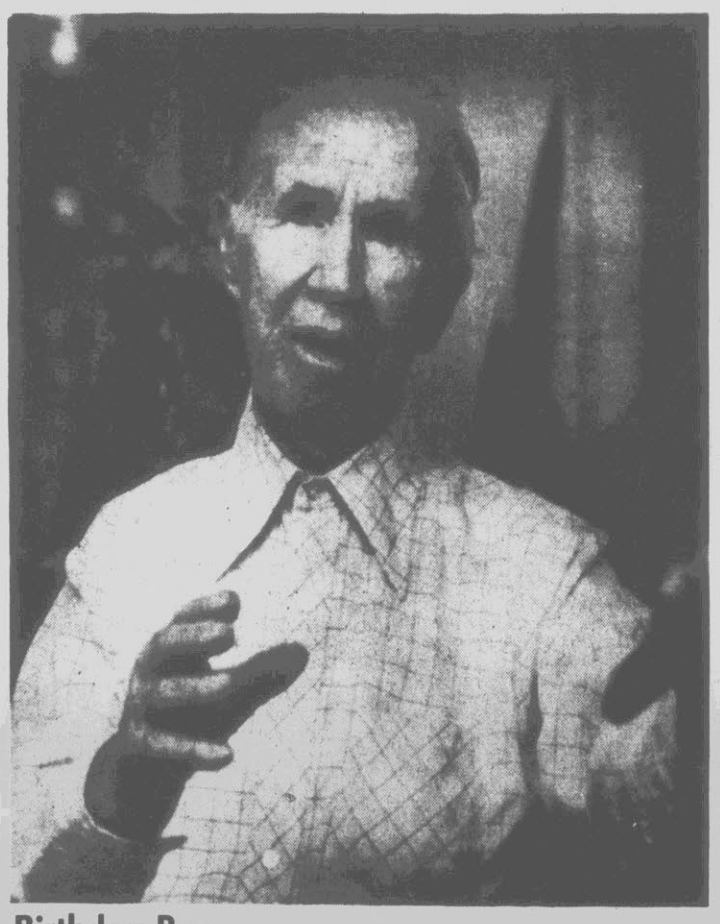

"You thought I was crazy, huh," Hearns told reporters after the fight. "I felt it would probably take me a round or so to figure Duran out. I was able to outsmart him in the first round."

Hearns says he will now move up in weight to the 160-pound middleweight division and hopes to fight undisputed middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler by the end of the year.

Hearns' manager Emanuel Steward said: "The fight is on as far as we're concerned. Being realistic, I think the fight would take place in October or November at the earliest."

Hearns promised a similar ending for Hagler as with Duran, who went 15 rounds with Hagler last November before dropping a close, but unanimous, decision.

"Marvin Hagler knows what's happening. He knows we're coming. I can see him now shaking like a leaf."

Savin Chairman Helps Open CopyPro Office In Greenville

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Paul Charlap prides himself on being one of the last true American chauvanists, and to prove it he wears an Eagle the size of a plum on his tie. "It's just my way of saying that America and American technology is good," he explains.

Charlap, board chairman of Savin Industries (patent holders of a new idea in photocopying), was in Greenville last week for formal opening ceremonies at CopyPro — one of three North Carolina businesses that will market Savin's new photocopy machine in the near future. "In fact, CopyPro will be one of the first stores in the world to offer our machine," Charlap said.

The differences between the Savin copier and others are simple, according to Charlap. "We use liquid instead of powder. If you want beautiful work done, you need to do it with ink, 500 years of tradition in painting and printing back that up," he said.

"We also use American workers and American money," he said. Until recently, Savin licensed out its technology to a Japanese company; however, after obtaining its patent for liquid printing, Savin began "investing in America," Charlap said.

Most photocopiers now available use dry ink or powders which must be heated within the machine before an image can be recreated. "This takes an extreme amount of heat and while the powders are being heated, the dry particles float around inside the machine causing clogs and frequent breakdowns," Charlap maintained.

He said the use of liquids in photocopying makes the machines relatively problem-free. "They also use less energy. In fact, Savin copiers can be plugged into any normal wall outlet and they also print beautiful color," he said.

CopyPro Inc., formerly Creech & Jones Business Machines in Greenville, held formal grand opening activities Wednesday in its new office complex at 3103 Landmark St.

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies marking the relocation from the original Trade Street offices were held with partners David Jones and Ed Murphrey, as well as Charlap, taking part. CopyPro is the largest Savin dealer in eastern North Carolina.

Jerry Creech and Jones formed Creech & Jones Business Machines in 1970 and were joined in 1977 by Murphrey who became a partner. In 1979 Jones and Murphrey bought out Creech's interests in the company.

The business was renamed and incorporated as CopyPro Inc. in January.

Savin, which markets photocopiers, honored the Greenville firm in 1982 as one of the three dealers in the United States to receive the corporation's "Circle of Excellence" award for sales performance. CopyPro is the largest Savin dealer in eastern North Carolina.

CopyPro recently established a telephonics division to serve commercial accounts in the eastern part of the state.

Corporations Face 'Greenmail' Threat

NEW YORK (AP) — A trend is growing in corporate America that some people liken to blackmail, except it is legal.

The financial community calls it "greenmail," and Walt Disney Productions has joined the list of companies willing to pay it.

Disney faced a takeover threat from financier Saul P. Steinberg, who owned 11 percent of its stock. To make Steinberg go away, Disney bought back his stock last Monday — at a substantial premium over its market price.

Disney retained its independence but in doing so sparked cries of outrage from other Disney stockholders who are angry that Steinberg received preferential treatment. And some holders are now suing Disney.

The Disney holders actually suffered a double blow — not only did they miss out on the premium, but their stock also plummeted 20 percent in one day because Disney removed the possibility of a takeover, which later might have bid up the stock's price.

More than $2 billion in greenmail has been paid in recent months by such corporations as Texaco Inc., Warner Communications Inc., St. Regis Corp., Castle & Cooke Inc. and Quaker State Oil Refining Corp.

Besides Steinberg, the money went to such financiers as the Bass family and Charles Hurwitz of Texas, and Sir James Goldsmith of Britain. In the Warner case, greenmail was paid to publisher Rupert Murdoch, who has holdings in the United States, Britain and Australia.

The trend has not gone unnoticed in Congress. Legislation has been introduced to curb the practice, and the Disney case is likely to fuel the debate on Capitol Hill.

Critics charge that besides denying all shareholders an equal price for their stock, greenmail wastes corporate assets, which effectively belong to the other shareholders; is simply a means of entrenching management, and weakens a company's balance sheet.

Disney, for example, had to pay Steinberg $325 million at a time when its earnings already were under pressure. And the figure included $28 million to reimburse Steinberg for expenses related to his Disney involvement.

Well-heeled financiers like Steinberg "should not be able to use their leveraged position to get a deal other stockholders are not able to command," said Arthur Burck, a merger consultant in Palm Beach, Fla.

Disney is not commenting on its actions except to say it "felt the decision was in the best interest of all our shareholders," said Disney spokesman Erwin Okun.

Market Closes On Mixed Note

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Wheat and soybean futures prices were lower and corn was mixed Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

The start of trading was delayed for two hours and volume was light through the remainder of the session. Problems with telephone lines caused the initial delay, a board spokesman said.

Most traders were careful about opening new positions, as the Agriculture Department was scheduled to release revisions of grain and soybean production estimates for the last five years after the close.

Analysts said the report reduced previous estimates of the size of the 1983 corn and soybean crops, but they down-played the significance of the changes.

"I don't think they mean very much," said Dale Gustafson, a grain analyst in Chicago with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "Most people were anticipating some reduction and, while it was confirmed that we got some, I think they're going to give more credence to the June stocks number because it will be a truer indication of how much we have available for the balance of the crop year."

The USDA is scheduled to release an updated stocks in all positions report on Thursday.

In trading Friday, wheat was under pressure, as the harvest is under way.

Corn was supported by reports of standing water in some areas of Iowa and Nebraska. Rainfall has been excessive in those areas, sources said.

Wheat settled ½ cent to 1¼ cents lower with the contract for delivery in July at $3.49¾ a bushel; corn was ½ cent to 1¼ cents higher with July at $3.47¼ a bushel; oats were ¼ cent to 1 cent lower with July at $1.83¾ a bushel; and soy-beans were 1½ cents to 7½ cents higher with July at $7.63 a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were higher in active trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Frozen pork bellies advanced the 2-cent limit allowed in a single day's trading. The price was supported by strong demand on wholesale cash markets, which has pushed cash prices up by 10 cents a pound in the past week, said Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express.

Hog prices were higher as traders are anticipating a report to be released next week by the USDA to show a decline in the total number of hogs in the nation. Levitt said he expects the decline to be 11 to 12 percent from a year ago.

Cattle prices were supported by a report released by the USDA on Thursday, Levitt said.

The report showed a 2 percent decline in the number of animals put onto feed lots in May, while analysts had expected an increase of 2 percent. That decline followed a 3 percent deceline the previous month.

Indications of strong demand from meat packers also supported prices, Levitt said.

Live cattle settled .62 cent to .92 cent higher with the contract for delivery in June at 66.20 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .30 cent to 1.03 cents higher with August at 66.70 cents a pound; live hogs were .07 cent to .83 cent higher with July at 52.47 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were 2 cents higher in all delivery months with July at 70.50 cents a pound.

Early weakness was associ-ated with the government report that the Producer Price Index was steady during May, the second straight month without an increase, said Len Alpert, a metals analyst in New York with ContiCommodity Services Inc.

"What we have is unfilled expectations of inflation. And there won't be any for the next six months," said Alpert.

Prices recovered later when concern about the international debt situation arose from various reports that Argentina will have difficulty meeting its debt payments, Alpert said.

Gold settled $4.40 to $8.40 lower with the contract for delivery in June at $370.50 a troy ounce; silver settled 6 cents to 12.1 cents lower with June at $8.52 a troy ounce.

Petroleum prices were lower with pressure from ideas that tension in the Persian Gulf is lessening, as Iran reportedly offered to extend its cease fire with Iraq, sources said.

Heating oil settled unchanged to .97 cent lower with the contract for delivery in July at 76.25 cents a gallon.

Marlboro Tests Larger Package

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Marlboro cigarettes will be sold in limited test markets in July in packs of 25 instead of the usual 20, according to company officials.

Philip Morris USA, the company that makes Marlboros, said it is offering the 25-count pack as a convenience to smokers. Studies show many smokers consume an average of 25 cigarettes a day, officials said.

The 25-count style dominates much of the world cigarette market — 80 percent of the market in Canada, 60 percent of the Australian market and more than 70 percent of the Belgium and Luxemburg markets.

Begining July 2, smokers in Spokane, Wash., and Indianapolis can buy Marlboro Red king-size in a 25-count soft pack. Marboro Lights in the 25-count pack will be available only in Indianapolis.

Third World Debt Affects Much Of Globe

By DAVID SMYTH
Associated Press Writer

The Third World debt crisis has boiled up to a point where at least three debtor nations are in open revolt, one major American bank is in big financial trouble and four Latin American presidents have issued a joint warning that something has to be done about the problem.

What exactly is the problem? And what if anything can be done about it?

On the answers to these two questions may depend the survival of a healthy financial system in the entire non-communist world. The U.S. Commerce Department has linked the debt crisis to the loss of an estimated 400,000 American jobs in 1981-83.

The basic problem is that developing nations have accumulated foreign debts of about $800 billion and are finding it increasingly difficult to pay their creditors. The creditors are mainly Western banks and governments and international financial institutions such as the International Monetary Fund, a United Nations-affiliated agency based in Washington.

Some nations, such as Argentina and Brazil, would have to use up huge amounts of their export earnings to pay their debts coming due this year. This would allow them little left over to pay for imports, including goods produced by workers in the United States and other industrialized countries.

Argentina's economy minister, Bernardo Grinspun, says the money needed to service his country's debt had risen to the point where it required the income from two thirds of Argentina's total exports early this year.

On Friday, the U.S. Treasury Department announced the government was withdrawing an offer of a $300 million short-term loan to Argentina, but left open the possibility that the loan could be made later if Argentina reached agreement with the IMF on a larger loan designed to help with its credit problems. Argentina's leaders told the IMF last week that they were relucant to impose budget austerity measures the agency was seeking in return for the loan.

According to the IMF, Mexico will have to pay out an average $12 billion a year to meet its foreign debt obligations between 1985 and 1990. This represents about a third of all its export income.

The average Latin American country's payments just to meet interest charges "is an intolerable 38 to 40 percent" of export earnings, according to Ramon Illarramendi, executive director of the Inter-American Development Bank in Washington. "The result is a hopeless treadmill."

Swamped by their debts, most of the indebted countries are now trying to borrow more money merely to pay the interest on their old loans.

The debtor nations, in short, are in an impossible situation, the presidents of Argentina, Brazil, Colombia and Mexico said in a joint statement May 19.

The four leaders said that rising interest rates in the United States — rates to which their own loans are linked — are creating unbearable costs for their countries. They also contended that a growing tide of protectionism in the industrialized nations — the United States, Japan and Western European nations — is making it impossible for them to earn enough to pay their debts.

They did not threaten any specific countermeasures, but Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Colombia, Venezuela, Peru and Ecuador have set a meeting in Cartagena, Colombia, for June 21-22 to see what they can do to resolve what has become their single most-nagging problem.

Foreign Minister Ramiro Saraiva Guerreiro of Brazil said the meeting is "an alert, not a threat." He said the participating nations do not intend to form "a cartel of poverty."

However, events in other countries in the last few weeks have signaled what shocks might be in store for the world financial system:

— On June 4, Finance Minister Pedro Pinto of Ecuador announced unilaterally that his country was suspending payments on $247.5 million it owes to foreign governments, pending renegotiation of these debts. Ecuador would like to repay them over a period of seven years. He said Ecuador would continue making payments on its $7 billion in debts to foreign commercial banks, however.

— Also on June 4, Bolivia officially informed foreign commercial banks that it had decided to postpone payments on the $720 million it owes them. The Bolivian planning minister, Ernesto Aranibar, told the banks, "Bolivia is in no condition to effect any partial payments to the private banking consortium, and is therefore proposing a postponement on the payments while it restructures its public debt." He added that Bolivia is willing to negotiate with the banks.

— Prime Minister Sandro Mariategui of Peru expressed his government's "full moral support for Bolivia in its decision." And on June 5, Mariategui persuaded the Club of Paris, a group of Western governments, to reschedule $1 billion of Peruvian loans falling due over the next 13 months.

— Economy Minister Grinspun of Argentina warned that several other Latin American countries might follow Bolivia's example, which he praised as "an act of national sovereignty." Argentina owes foreign creditors about $43.60 billion.

— The Bolivian decision was also closely watched in Brazil which owes close to $100 billion, in Mexico ($90 billion), in Venezuela ($35 billion), and in other Latin American nations whose overall foreign debt comes to about $400 billion.

The Bolivian development caused bond prices to plunge in New York, drove the U.S. dollar down on foreign exchange markets and further depressed the share prices of major American banks on the stock exchanges as investors saw the banks' prospects dimming even further.

It also added one more headache for the IMF, a 146-nation international organization that provides credit for needy nations. The IMF had proposed an economic austerity program for Bolivia — a plan that provoked hunger strikes by militant left-wing Bolivian workers' unions. Bolivia, and other countries in financial difficulties have had to reach agreement with the IMF on such austerity programs as a condition for getting any new loans from the commercial banks.

The IMF programs, always politically unpopular in the debtor countries, have now reached a point where — as the Bolivian developments confirmed — they are sometimes impossible to enforce. One such example was the Dominican Republic, where the IMF insisted that the government save money by ending food-price subsidies. The prices of some staples doubled, causing riots in April in which more than 50 people were killed.

When the IMF subsequently insisted that the price of gasoline be doubled, the Dominican government simply refused to comply. It was the first outright revolt against an IMF austerity program. Other countries, such as Brazil and Mexico, had only swallowed IMF austerity after prolonged disputes, and Argentina is still resisting strongly in negotiations with IMF officials.

The revolt of the debtor countries — against the IMF in the Dominican Republic, against the commercial banks in Bolivia, and against foreign government lenders in Ecuador — is an ominous sign of possible further trouble ahead. Latin American sources say Argentina might be the next country to suspend payments on its foreign debts — a move that could spread to other big debtor counrtries.

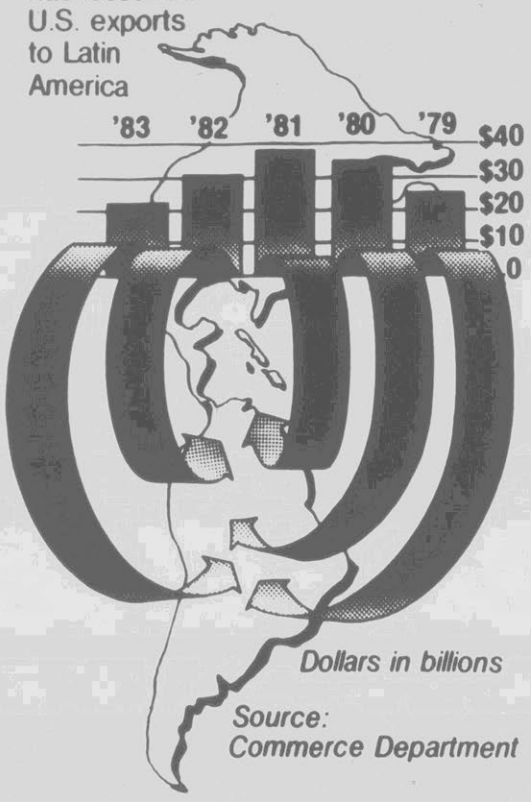

The growing crisis would not be limited to the Third World. It would cause, and has indeed already caused, enormous damage to the international monetary system, the world banking system and international economic activity.

The only casualty so far in the U.S. banking system has been Continental Illinois of Chicago. Its immediate troubles did not stem directly from the Third World debt crisis, but subsequent ones do.

Bad loans within the United States led to massive withdrawals of funds from the bank — about $8 billion in three weeks — by depositors in Western Europe and the Far East. However, the bank's recovery is hindered by the Third World debt situation because it is difficult to find a buyer for a bank like Continental which has a portfolio of several hundred million dollars in dubious loans outstanding in Latin America.

California Artist Is Pitt Native

Zilphia McLawhorn Morris, who has a one-woman showing of her oil paintings in Farmville next Sunday, said she got her worst punishment ever from her father, R.A. McLawhorn Sr. of Bell Arthur, for saying "wait a minute" dozens of times as she whiled away hours with a cut-and-paste and color project after her father had told her to run an errand across the field to her aunt's house.

When she was in grade school at Bell Arthur, she was known as the muralist for her school. From the time she drew her first garden scene on the chalkboard of her first grade classroom — "I can still see the fence and birdboxes and hollyhocks," she said. — she was called upon to provide seasonal and holiday drawings on chalkboards throughout the school.

Now a 60-year-old widow, the mother of five, the grandmother of nine, living in Covina, Calif., she's earning her living painting — mostly oils — and does some art instruction. She has never had an art lesson.

"I enrolled in the Washington Commercial School of Art in Washington, D.C., right after I graduated from Bell Arthur High School," she said. "But once I got there, it seemed so big and impersonal, all I wanted to do was come home. So I did. Later I went and worked in the shipyard in Norfolk. While I was there, I decided I needed to do my part for the war effort and that I would enlist in the Navy as soon as I was old enough. I did the day after I was 20 years old. I was the first woman to work in the audio-visual aids section of the Navy installation at Norfolk and I stayed there most of the time till the war ended. That was wonderful experience. We developed all kinds of training materials and I got lots of experiences in various facets of art."

Met Husband In Navy

Mrs. Morris met her husband, Edward, a Michiganer, in the Navy. They lived 16 years in Michigan, then moved to California a few years before he died of lung cancer. "I had a wonderful husband," she said, "and we had 24½ happy years together. He told me before he died that he wouldn't have changed anything about the time we had together. I know I wouldn't either. I felt lost when he first died. He'd been very protective. But then I made up my mind I'd make a good life for myself and our children without him. And I have.

"It was hard at first to get on with my painting. My husband was a fine artist and we used to get the children to bed by 10 o'clock and stand our easels side by side and paint till 2 a.m. or so. He was my best critic and my most avid fan and I was his. It's been hard without him, but it was really my art that got me through. I've always loved it, always seen it as my greatest talent, the way I could best contribute to other people."

She participated in art circles in Michigan and took college course in art appreciation and other areas of endeavor like accounting and marketing. In Covina, she has long been active in an art club and has won 28 awards for her work. She also is known in her area as a person who can give painting demonstration programs, i.e., paint a picture with subject matter of the audience's choice, all the while telling an audience what she's doing and why and make it entertaining. She gives some private lessons and likes to work with troubled teen-agers and children. "Art is the most wonderful therapy in the world," she said. "I've seen withdrawn children come back to life and get on with their lives once they realize their art ability."

Until the past year when she retired from being manager of a dress shop, Mrs. Mrrois has never depended on her art to make a living. "I've loved selling my paintings," she said. "loved getting commissions, loved the independence of saying 'If you don't like it, don't take it,' even after a person has commissioned a painting. But I had the thought that I wanted my art to be my avocation, not my vocation.

"Now it will be my sole financial support, except for Social Security, but I think I'm ready for that now. I have a lot of projects in mind and I think I can make it work."

Known As Zip

The 4-foot 11-inch Mrs. Morris, known to her family and friends as "Zip," visits North Carolina for about a month each summer. She drives alone straight through with only occasionally four-hour naps to break the journey. "I love that trip," she said. "This is a beautiful country. I long ago banished fear and fatigue from my consciousness, so I don't get tired and I don't feel afraid. I just strike out and I love every minute of it. It's wonderful to me when I pull into Winston-Salem, visit my brother, then head for Bell Arthur. This is home. I love being here."

A couple of years after her husband died, a trip home for her was paid for by the Bell Arthur Christian Church, the church in which she grew up. The congregation commissioned a painting of the Jordan River which now hangs behind the baptistry of the church.

"That was the first time we ever saw Zip work," her sister, Elsie Johnston of Route 1, Greenville, said. "We knew she painted and occasionally she brought one of us a piece of her work, but she'd always lived in Michigan and California, so we hadn't actually seen how she did it. We were fascinated seeing her form that beautiful painting with a palette knife. Our father, now deceased, loved every minute of it. He was so proud that his daughter was doing such a wonderful painting for the church he loved so much."

Mrs. Morris, who paints realistically and abstractly, though mostly realistically, says most of her present work is scenery of the western United States and animals. She has done a series of all the missions of California and often does sets of the same scene during the four different seasons. She plans to take plenty of pictures of North Carolina and begin a North Carolina series as soon as she returns home, she said.

Her art showing will be held Sunday, June 24, beginning at 2 p.m. at the Farmville Community Arts Council building, 111 N. Main St., Farmville.

VISITS FAMILY YEARLY...Mrs. Morris (right) spends about a month each summer in North Carolina. Most of her seven sisters and brothers and their children and grandchildren live in Pitt County. She poses here with her sister, Elsie Johnston of Route 1, Greenville.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday Afternoon

The wedding ceremony of Karen Louise Smith and Carl Wesley Brock took place Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in Saint James United Methodist Church. M. Dewey Tyson assisted by Caswell E. Shaw performed the double ring ceremony.

Frances Cain presented a program of organ music. Susie Pair sang "Sunrise, Sunset," "The Wedding Song," accompanied by her guitar and "The Lord's Prayer."

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Edwin Smith of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Brock of Farmville.

Mrs. James M. Myers II of Wallace and Mrs. Edward Dean Rhodes of Greenville were matrons of honor for their sister. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Wesley E. Singleton and Sara Layden Kempton, both of Greenville, Jo Alice Crawford of Elm City, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Joseph Caraway of Grimesland and Mrs. Wade Cline of New Bern. Melissa Johnston of Greenville was flower girl.

The best man was J.C. Brock of Farmville and ushers included James Edwin Smith Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va., brother of the bride, A. Phillip Lewis and C.A. Joyner, both of Greenville, Louis Spell of Ahoskie, Dixon Sauls of Farmville and Carlos Moore of Fountain. James Madison Myers III of Wallace, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown with a cathedral train of traditional bridal satin with re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured alencon lace and leg of muton sleeves which ended in a calla point. Re-embroidered alencon lace etched with seed pearls appliqued the bodice and trimmed the sleeves. Satin bridal buttons accented the back of the gown. The skirt and train were appliqued with alencon lace. Garlands of alencon lace extended from the waist back to the hem of the train. Scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace accented with alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls flowing from an alencon lace caplet encrusted with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white cymbidium orchids, freesia and pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath mixed with white satin and pink satin.

The attendants wore formal gowns of violet matte taffeta designed with a V-neckline outlined in a ruffle of taffeta. The fitted bodice was enhanced at the waistline with a corded tie sash. The gathered skirt featured a ruffled flounce at the hemline circling the skirt in an apron effect. The gowns were complemented by a bolero length jacked with a ruffle of taffeta forming a caplet at the shoulder. Each carried a classic bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, shades of pink orchid pixie carnations, lavender asters and baby's breath tied with violet satin.

The flower girl wore a floor length eyelet gown with a round collar, short puff sleeves and a flounce bordered the hemline of the skirt. Lavender and pink ribbon accented the gown. She carried a basket filled with pink and violet flowers tied with violet satin.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mint green knit with a V-neckline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a mauve Venise lace long dress with a bolero effect bodice.

A reception was held at the American Legion Building after the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Smith, aunt and uncle of the bride, greeted guests. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Murdock Smith, aunt and uncle of the bride. Cake was served by Mrs. Fred Coker of Farmville, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom. Punch was poured by Mrs. Edward Mozingo, aunt of the bridegroom. Assisting were Donna Kearney, Kathy Messer, Becky Muzychka, Frances Smith and Mildred Smith, cousins of the bride.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Paradise Island in the Bahamas.

The bride attended Greenville city schools and Pitt Community College. She works at North State Savings and Loan Association. The bridegroom attended Farmville schools and Chowan College. He graduated from Elon College. He is assistant principal and coach at Chocowinity High School.

At Wits End
By Erma Bombeck

I've often wondered what it would have been like if my husband had given birth instead of me.

His differences in traits and attitudes, whether stereotype or circumstances, do exist. Knowing him as I have for nearly 35 years, there is no doubt in my biased mind that child-bearing would take on some new rules.

He would definitely take to his bed for 30 days following the diagnosis. This would allow him time to make notes and formulate a plan of action.

Following this brief period, he would set about to prepare for the changes that were about to occur. He would get out his wardrobe (which hasn't changed in 35 years) and figure out it would be expensive to alter and that three-piece maternity suits and underwear would be obsolete after nine months. (This is inefficient cost accounting. Everyone knows that.) Besides, carrying around another person would interfere with his running program, his traveling and sleeping on his stomach. That acknowledged, he would do what he planned to do all the time . . . delegate the job to his secretary. (There would be a bouquet of flowers on her desk when he told her.)

Then he would work out a date of birth that would be fiscally feasible, taking into consideration tax benefits and advice from his accountants. Why have the baby in January when you could beat the Dec. 31 deadline?

He would put off buying anything until the eighth month. Then, because he is suspicious, he would seek a second opinion to find out if he was really pregnant or just retaining water.

Only after it was confirmed would he begin to buy everything he needed . . . in bulk.

He would demand no slip-ups and no surprises from his doctor. He would want him to not only confirm the sex of the baby, but whether or not it was going to cry all night long, spit up (name names and places), be tall or short, dark or fair, Democrat or Republican. He would offer to pay more for adjustments in personality and plumbing refinements.

It is safe to assume that if men had babies, there would be more nocturnal headaches and fewer children being born.

But all things considered, if my husband gave to motherhood the love and time he has given to being a father . . . he would have made Mother of the Year!

Cooking Is Fun

The aromatic spice known as cinnamon is one of the world's oldest seasonings, popular in gourmet cuisines the world over.

Actually, there are two varieties of cinnamon. The reddish-brown bark from the cassia tree is the one we usually see in the United States. Buff-colored Ceylon cinnamon from the bark of a laurel tree is popular in many lands, including Mexico, but it is rarely consumed in this country.

Cassia cinnamon is a native of southern China, where the people in ancient times regarded the cassia as the Tree of Life. Our two principal cassia sources today are Indonesia and Vietnam.

There are several mentions of cinnamon in the Bible. The Lord told Moses on Mount Sinai to make an anointing oil which would include cinnamon. And the 45th Psalm says "all thy garments smell of myrrh and aloes and cassia ..."

Cinnamon is cultivated today, much as it was thousands of years ago. It is harvested during the rainy season because the bark is easier to handle in wet weather. Once stripped, it is rolled into long, slender quills — the sticks familiar here in the United States.

Cinnamon is usually regarded in the United States as a seasoning to be added to recipes for sweets, but it has many other uses.

In Greece, the spice is used in beef stew, whle in India it is used in curries. In our country, the Pennsylvania Dutch sprinkle cinnamon sugar over sliced tomatoes, which I have found very tasty. Cinnamon sticks are also used to stir mulled cider and wine.

As for other uses, I once enjoyed a pungent chicken dish that was flavored with cinnamon. Here is the recipe.

- 4-pound chicken, ready to cook
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 4 cups water
- ½ cup chicken fat
- ½ cup flour
- 2 slices bread, crumbled
- 2 dozen sliced green olives
- 1 cup (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1-3rd cup seedless raisins
- 3 tablespoons instant minced onions
- 1 cinnamon stick, 1 inch long
- 2 teaspoons ground coriander
- 2 teaspoons oregano leaves
- ½ teaspoon black pepper
- ½ teaspoon instant garlic

Wash chicken and cut into serving-size pieces. Place with salt and water in 6-quart pan. Cover and cook slowly 2 hours until chicken is tender. Remove chicken from stock. Skim fat from broth and set aside. Measure 5 cups stock, adding water if necessary. Set aside. Return chicken fat to pan and blend in flour. Stir and cook until browned. Remove from heat and stir in stock and bread. Beat until smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Stir and cook until thickened. Add chicken pieces. Cook uncovered 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Serve hot with rice or noodles. Serves 8.

Asian Women Advertise For Husbands

By WILLIAM E. KRESNAK

HILO, Hawaii (UPI) — Thousands of Asian women are advertising for American and Canadian husbands in a photograph-filled publication put out by a pen pal club for the marriage-minded.

North American men, alienated by the women's liberation movement or frustrated by the singles bar scene, are writing to the women and marrying them.

Broussard estimates about 1,000 couples have married after striking up long-distance romances through his publication since it was first sent to men subscribers in 1975.

The mail-order bride business also has worked out well for Broussard, 59, and Ms. Pomeroy, 45. They said the operation earned a $60,000 profit last year.

"Business is absolutely fantastic," Broussard said. "It has probably increased by 20 times since 1980.

He said he also was helped by the television mini-series "Shogun," because after it aired there was "a tremendous interest in Japanese women." The immigration of Asian women, particularly Vietnamese, to the United States also has boosted business.

The men who subscribe to the service, he said, want old-fashioned wives who are homebodies, loving and submissive.

Broussard said his operation is aimed at rich men and is limited to 1,000 subscribers per issue.

"We are the Cadillac of pen pal clubs," he said.

The club got its start in the remote wilderness area of Stehekin, Wash., about 130 miles northeast of Seattle. Broussard, who once taught sociology at a Washington state community college, was earning a subsistence living importing Chinese movie posters, among other things. A friend asked him to handle the placing of an ad for a mate in a Taiwan newspaper. The response was so good Broussard decided to switch from movie posters to the pen pal business.

He met his wife through a classified ad she had placed in a national magazine in 1975 seeking a "bushwhacking partner."

"Kelly like me and thought Stehekin was a beautiful place, but it was too cold," Broussard said. "So we went hunting around for a warm place."

The couple moved their business to Hawaii in 1979.

Broussard points out his operation sells addresses, not women, and it is up to the men to woo their prospective mates with letters, by telephone and through visits.

But for $50 an hour, Broussard and Ms. Pomeroy will personally take charge of a wife hunt for a lonely guy. They will screen the women, searching for that perfect match, and handle all details from writing letters to buying gifts, if necessary.

They get paid another $1,000 after the wedding. They accept very few of these clients, however.

Some men complain about the high cost of finding and courting an Asian bride, Broussard said.

"But the average man doesn't mind at all paying $3,000 for a used car," he said.

Men paying $215 for the "super-subscription" offered by Broussard and Ms. Pomeroy receive, among other things, three issues each of the bimonthly Cherry Blossoms and its sister publication, Lotus Blossoms, plus the addresses of the more than 2,000 women listed.

Cherry Blossoms lists the most desirable women while Lotus Blossoms is crammed with more photographs but of less desirable mates. The women, from a dozen

Couple Marries Saturday Evening

The First Presbyterian Church was the scene of the candlelight wedding ceremony of Gayle Anne Schoephoerster and Merrimon Sydnor Bailey, both of Greenville, Saturday evening at six o'clock. The Rev. Richard R. Gammon and the Rev. R. Graham Nahouse officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Wedding music was presented by organist Dr. Robert Irwin and Susie Pair, who sang "You'll Never Walk Alone," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Merle E. Schoephoerster and Corinne H. Schoephoerster, both of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Merryman P. Bailey Jr. of Greenville and the late Mr. Bailey.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk Venise lace. The full bishop sleeves were fashioned of sheer organza accented by silk Venise appliques with lace cuffs edged in chantilly lace. The bodice was embellished with silk Venise lace beaded with seed pearls. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train featured a cascading ruffle of chantilly lace bordered in silk Venise with an arrangement of floral silk Venise appliques. She wore a fingertip length veil of illusion bordered in pearls and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in silk Venise lace. The veil was enhanced with appliques of silk Venise lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of white bridal roses, yellow daisies and blue miniature carnations with lace ribbon.

Sallie C. Keel of Greenville was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Michele Smith of Oxford, sister-in-law of the bride, Camille Parker, Beth Smith and Alma Weathersby, all of Greenville. The attendants wore matching blue dresses of sheer organza over matching taffeta fashioned with a triple ruffled front and back collar which formed capelet sleeves. The flared skirt with a flounced hem had a silk rose at the back waist which created a bustle effect. Each carried a hurricane lamp surrounded with miniature blue carnations, yellow daisies and white baby's breath tied with mixed satin streamers.

Ring bearers were Scott and Stacey Smith of Oxford, nephews of the bride. They carried satin pillows adorned with ribbons and lily of the valley.

Jack Haden of Williamston, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included David Schoephoerster, brother of the bride, and Gerald Anders, both of Greenville, Rodney Gray of Oriental and Terry Purkerson of Midlothian, Va.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of peach chiffon over matching taffeta complemented by elbow length pouf sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of salmon chiffon over matching taffeta styled with chiffon sleeves. Each wore a white cymbidium orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the father of the bride at the Brook Valley Country Club. Mrs. C. Emerson Baker and Mrs. Marvin Beland, both of Greenville, presided at the guest register. Cake was served by Mrs. William Cash and punch was poured by Mrs. E.L. Ferguson Jr., both of Greenville.

The wedding party, relatives and out-of-town guests were honored at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Beef Barn given by the mother of the bridegroom. The church women of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church gave a shower for the couple.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and attends East Carolina University. She is employed part-time at Ellen's Hallmark Shop. The bridegroom attended J.H. Rose High School and has done some post graduate work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel HIll and is the owner of a real estate investment firm in the Greenville area.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Disney World in Florida and other unannounced points.

The bride's wedding band, made from $25 gold pieces melted down to size, belonged to the bridegroom's great-grandmother who married in 1878. the miniature procelain bride and bridegroom figurines beneath a glass dome on the register table belonged to the bridegroom's great-grandmother, a gift from her mother which was used on her wedding cake in 1878.

Asian Women Advertise...

Asian nations such as the Philippines, Malaysia, Taiwan and Korea, range in age from 15 to 55.

Along with the photos are messages from the women, who vow to be dedicated wives.

"Believe me or not, I am still a virgin," writes Annie, 24, of the Philippines, who is reviewing for her certified public accountant exam. "I wish to marry a man who's stable and responsible, 28-40, and there must be love which will bind us together."

Cindy, 27, of Brunei, bluntly states why she is advertising for an American husband.

"I like American men very much because most of them treat the fairer sex in a gentle manner," she said.

Broussard said the Asian women want to marry Americans for financial security. Most of them are considered middle class in their own nations but are poor by American standards. He said women in poorer nations, such as the Philippines, are eager to advertise while women in richer countries, such as Japan, are less interested.

The women advertise free of charge and also are given a list of men seeking correspondence. Broussard said he originally advertised in newspapers to attract women to the club, known as Rainbow Ridge in Asia, but these days most women learn of the service through word of mouth.

Ms. Pomeroy said the club was swamped with so many photos from Asian women that she can publish only one of every six received.

Even women from the People's Republic of China have begun submitting photographs and personal information. Broussard suspects they have read Rainbow Ridge ads in Hong Kong newspapers.

Broussard said research done by a University of Texas sociologist describes men who subscribe to the service as averaging 37 in age, 5 feet 10 inches in height and 170 pounds in weight. The research showed 42 percent of them have professional or managerial careers, with about 63 percent earning more than $20,000 a year. Some have salaries of more than $100,000 a year.

An Idaho man who met his wife through the club wrote that women from the Philippines "sure could teach a lot of American women on how to be a REAL wife.

"She is spoiling me, though, with all of the attention," he said. "I get ALL of my nails manicured, (she) gives me a shower daily, a body massage nightly, shines my shoes, and I no sooner take a garment off then she has it hung up."

Feminists have attacked the operation as degrading.

"This is not a matching up of equal men and women searching for human love," wrote one American woman. "It is white males seeking pliant poor women and girls who will do almost anything to escape their lives — including going to a strange country to marry a strange 'RICH' American who they undoubtedly have pathetic and unrealistic fantasies about.

"I hope you people will find another way to make a living beyond trafficking in desperation. That is personal fascism that cannot be justified by people who aspire to concern for their fellow humans."

Ms. Pomeroy called the criticism "paternalistic." She said the writer apparently believed poverty befuddled Asian women's minds so that they make wrong decisions, and therefore their alternatives should be limited to avoid the possibility of mistakes.

Broussard and Ms. Pomeroy believe they are "riding the crest of the tide" of 50 or so existing pen pal clubs because of the extra effort they put into their business.

The couple prints a booklet titled "How to Write to Oriental Ladies" suggesting intimate questions be left out of the first letter. They also suggest scented stationery and commemorative stamps be used to attract the women's attention, and give tips on handling immigration requirements.

The couple also takes great pains to ensure addresses are current and to warn subscribers about women who list their hobbies as "collecting U.S. dollars."

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Fountaine-Merritt Vows Said

MRS. FOUNTAINE

ANSONIA, Conn. — The Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Carletta Faye Merritt and Herman Fountaine Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. V. Loma St. Clair and Eldress Cheryle E. Merritt performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of organ music was presented by Richard Clement. Karen Thigpen, cousin of the bride of New Haven, Conn., sang "The Lord's Prayer," "How do you Keep the Music Playing," "My Tribute" and "You Are so Beautiful to Me." The bride sang "You and I."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Harris of Greenville and Charles E. Merritt of Easton, Pa. The bridegroom is the son of Annie M. Fountaine of Ansonia, Conn.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal Romantic gown of organza with schiffli embroidery, pearls and chantilly lace accenting the high ruffled Queen Anne neckline. The gown was designed by Bridal Originals with long bishop sleeves and a full skirt with tiers of chantilly lace ruffles in the back that flowed into a cathedral train. Her hat was covered in schiffli embroidery and pearls with a cathedral length veil. She carried a cascade of sterling silver roses with ivory baby's breath showered with double faced satin with ivory sweetheart roses.

Katrina Holley of New Haven, Conn., was matron of honor and Catherine Merritt, sister of the bride of Queen, N.Y., was maid of honor. They wore burgundy formal gowns designed by Lady Paris of taffeta in a Victorian style with an illusion neckline, Juliet sleeves and a bouffant skirt ending in a sweep train. They wore matching Victorian hats and carried nosegays of mauve baby's breath, sweetheart roses, burgundy alstromerias and tips of lemon leaf tied with petalpink and burgundy satin.

Bridesmaids were Mildred S. Joyner of New Haven, Conn., and Bertha B. Williams of West Haven, Conn., aunts of the bride, Chante Colette Merritt, niece of the bride, Lossie Carney, Jackie Zollarcoffer, Ann Giles, Linda Slegler, all of New Haven, Conn., and Tammy Bailey, daughter of the bridegroom of Ansonia, Conn. They wore gowns and hats styled identical to those of the honor attendants' in mauve taffeta. Each carried a nosegay identical to those of the honor attendants'.

The flower girl was Quiana Garris, niece of the bridegroom, who wore a formal gown of organza trimmed with lace and mauve ribbon. She carried a white wicker basket of rose petals.

Walter Fountaine, brother of the bridegroom of Ansonia, Conn., was best man and groomsmen were Madison McAdoo, Gregory Roberts and Robert Howie, cousin of the bridegroom, all of New Haven, Conn., Marcus Garris and Eddie Glover, nephews of the bridegroom of Ansonia, Conn., Calvin Merritt, brother of the bride of Brooklyn, N.Y., Edward T. Love, uncle of the bride of Greenville, N.C., and Dwane Dixon of Ayden, N.C. The ring bearer was Corey Terrell Merritt of New Haven, Conn.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of ivory interlock knit with a chiffon coverlet of burgundy, mauve and orchid. She wore a wristlet. The mother of the bridegroom wore an ensemble in coordinating colors in the bride's color scheme and a cymbidium orchid.

The wedding was directed by Nell Elston of New Haven, Conn.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Polish Falcon Hall in New Haven. Inez Myers presided at the guest register assisted by Lizzie D. Williams of Ayden. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Madison McAdoo of New Haven and Mrs. Johnny A. Wooten of Greenville. Nell Elston announced the wedding party. Cake was served by Lois Ricks. Assisting were Doris Hansley and Ruby Taylor, both of Greenville. Music was provided by Howard Blackwood.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will live in New Haven.

The bride attended Wilfred Hairstyling Academy and is employed by Ward's House of Styles. The bridegroom attended South Central Community College in New Haven and is employed by the City of Ansonia.

Wash Blankets Before Storing

Wool items should be thoroughly cleaned before storage, or the fabric may attract moths. If a wool blanket is not washed properly, it will felt or mat and the blanket will shrink.

Only mild, neutral soaps or synthetic detergents should be used and the water temperature should be no more than 100 degrees, say extension clothing specialists at North Carolina State University.

Once the blanket has been successfully washed, take care to dry it properly. Air dry or take it to a professional cleaner with special blanket drying equipment. Follow these directions and the blanket will remain soft and fluffy.

When To Have A Will Rewritten

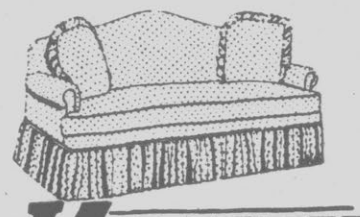

Many people from other states are now calling North Carolina home. Should rewriting a will be part of the moving chores?

In general, a will which distributes real property in North Carolina must be signed and witnessed according to state law to be valid, says Nathan Garren, extension economist, North Carolina State University.

A person may generally disinherit anyone, including children, but North Carolina has laws which prohibit the surviving spouse from being entirely disinherited.

It may be best to play it safe and have the existing will evaluated by a North Carolina attorney.

Who Should Sell?

Is selling your house a do-it-yourself job?

"If your house is in a growing area, an area that's well-traveled and an area where people want to move to, then you might try selling it on your own," says Michael L. Walden, extension economist, North Carolina State University. Using a real estate agent can cost the seller thousands of dollars.

On the other hand, a real estate agent can make your house known to a greater number of serious buyers. Part of the agent's job is to screen potential buyers. They advertise the house and can place it in the local multiple listings service. A real estate agent can also show the house, even when you are not there. "You will have to decide whether these services are worth the real estate agent's commission," the extension specialist says.

If you are going to handle the sale yourself, you will have to make sure the public knows it is for sale. A sign in the yard, newspaper advertisements and word-of-mouth are all important.

Pricing the house is a major decision. A professional appraiser can give you an estimate. Try to keep the asking price in line with comparable houses in your neighborhood or similar neighborhoods.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women executives are still being paid less than their male counterparts even when their credentials are identical, a new survey shows.

The study by Columbia Business School followed the first 10 years of careers of 45 men and 45 women who earned MBAs there between 1969-1972.

Prof. Mary Anne Devanna, who conducted the research, found inequities especially in the American manufacturing establishment and to a lesser degree in the finance and service areas. The professor is research coordinator of the school's Center for Research in Career Development.

She also concluded that women are not differently motivated than men, that marriage and motherhood don't necessarily lead women to drop out of the labor force or dilute their attention to their careers, and that women do not deliberately seek jobs in sectors of the economy or in functional areas that pay less.

Couple Weds Saturday Afternoon

Lynne Barber Shepherd and Clarence Howell Mozingo were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Cannon, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom of Greenville. The Rev. Martin Armstrong performed the double ring ceremony at two o'clock.

Parents of the bride are Lucille S. Barber of Gibsonville and the late J. Daymond Barber. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hubert Mozingo.

Given in marriage by her mother and escorted to the altar by her uncle, Gary Scoggins of Gibsonville, the bride wore a formal gown of satin with an overlay of dotted swiss chiffon. She carried a silk arrangement of orchids, roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Alison Leigh Shepherd of Greenville, daughter of the bride, and bridesmaids were Melissa Louise and Mary Elizabeth Mozingo of Bear Grass, daughters of the bridegroom. Amy Lynne Mozingo of Bear Grass, daughter of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of pink cotton with an overlay of dotted swiss. She carried a cascade of pink roses, carnations and daisies accented with blue baby's breath. The bridesmaids wore similar gowns and carried cascades of pink carnations and daisies accented with blue baby's breath.

The flower girl wore a similar dress and carried a basket of silk flowers. The bride's and attendants' dresses were made by Mrs. D.R. House of Greenville.

Crystal Michelle Cannon handed out rice roses.

Lynn Chappelear was pianist and Debra Gladson sang "You Light Up My Life," "We've Only Just Begun" and "Truly."

Sharon Meeks directed the wedding.

A reception followed the ceremony and guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Vernelson of Greenville. Karen Barbee of Greenville presided at the guest register. Sandy Hall of Greenville poured punch and Frances Tyer, aunt of the bride from Bath, served cake. Assisting were Linda Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Cannon and Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Joe Meeks.

The bride is employed by the East Carolina University School of Medicine and the bridegroom is employed by Lance, Inc.

First Recipe Contest Names Her Grand Winner

Her dish, Quickie Crab Bake, won her a trip for two to Orlando, Fla., from Piedmont Airlines and the Hyatt Winston-Salem. The contest was sponsored by the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service and the American Dairy Association of North Carolina.

The Kerseys live just 21 miles south of I-85. "We often hear from friends headed for points South when they get off in Burlington and call. By the time they get to my house, I have this dish in the oven and they think I've been baking all day," said Mrs. Kersey.

When she learned of the contest through the Silk Hope Extension Homemakers Club, she decided to enter her first recipe competition. "I'm a native of the coast of Virginia, and I'm very used to seafod recipes. I had concocted this one myself, using fresh crabmeat. But since we've moved here, it is not as available, so I worked out a recipe using the canned. It is really much simpler."

Mrs. Kersey cooks unusual dishes and collects cookbooks as a hobby and would like to someday put together her own cookbook of favorite recipes. She also enjoys entertaining frequently.

Debra McGee Stegel of Monroe and Eloise McIntosh of Burnsville received $100 cash prizes as winners for their recipes. "I decided to enter the Vegetable Casserole recipe I had gotten from my sister. It's a new vegetable casserole, made without squash or broccoli, and it warms easily," McIntosh said.

"I cook a lot and read recipes constantly," Mrs. Stegel said. "Cheese cake is my favorite dessert. I took what I liked from different recipes for cheese cake and combined them."

QUICKIE CRAB BAKE

6 ounces macaroni, shell shaped
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 cup sour cream
1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 cup green onions and tops, chopped fine
1/2 cup parsley, chopped fine
2 6-ounce cans crab meat, flaked
2 medium tomatoes, peeled and sliced
1 1/2 cups sharp cheddar cheese, shredded

Cook macaroni in boiling water for only five minutes. Rinse in cold water and drain. Keep moist.

Arrange half of macaroni in bottom of greased two-quart casserole. Divide half of cream cheese mixture and spoon over macaroni. Top with one can crab meat. Repeat these layers and top with second can of crab meat. Spread shredded cheese over all. Top with sliced tomatoes. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until bubbly on top. Serves 8-10.

VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

1 16-ounce can shoe peg corn
1 16-ounce can French-style green beans
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup cheddar cheese, grated
8-ounce container sour cream
1 can cream of celery soup

Topping:

4 cups cheese crackers
1 2-ounce package sliced almonds
1/2 cup melted butter

Drain vegetables and mix together with cheese, sour cream and soup. Place in a 9-by-13-inch pan. Crumble crackers and mix with almonds and melted butter. Sprinkle on top oc casserole mixture. Bake 30-45 minutes in 350 degree oven or until bubbly. Serves 16.

Couple Marries In High Noon Ceremony

MRS. HARRISON

Donna Dee Norris of Burlington and John Mark Harrison of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday at high noon. The Rev. Bennie Smith performed the ceremony in the Staley Memorial Baptist Church in Burlington.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Don Norris and Mr. and Mrs. W.G. Harrison Jr., all of Burlington.

Stan Benton was organist for the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her matron of honor was Lorie Rudd Barker of Raeford. Beth Harrison was the bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Rocky and Donnie Harrison, David Dixon and Duane Norris.

Patricia H. Woody directed the ceremony.

The bride is a graduate of Elon College with a B.A. in elementary education. The bridegroom graduated from N.C. State University and is comployed by IBM in Greenville as a marketing trainee.

The couple will live in Greenville.

Make Changes In A Will Through An Attorney

How final is a will?

"Your will is a legally enforceable declaration of how you want your property to be distributed at death, but it has no effect while you are alive," says Nathan Garren, extension economist and attorney, North Carolina State University.

"Since a will speaks only at death, it can be changed at any time during your life. It can also be cancelled," Garren says.

There are certain ways to change a will. "Don't draw a line through a paragraph or write the word 'omit.' Writing extra words on lines will not make the desired changes either. This may even make it invalid. Changes, called 'codicils,' need to be made by an attorney," explains the extension specialist.

A will should be reviewed when there are changes in the family or finances. Changes which may mean a will needs to be changed include: marriage, remarriage or divorce; the birth of a child; the death of a beneficiary; moving to another state; buying new property; a substantial increase in the value of property, and the passage of federal or state laws concerning death taxes.

Prayer Helps Mother Through Rough Times

DEAR ABBY: Will you please reprint something I cut out of your column about 15 years ago? I was a single parent, and it helped me to be a better mother. I think a lot of your readers would also benefit from it.

J.B. IN DANVILLE, KY.

DEAR J.B.: I've repeated it once (about three years ago), but I'll run it again. It was written by Garry C. Myers, founder of Highlights for Children, a fine, wholesome and educational monthly magazine that I highly recommend:

"Oh heavenly Father, make me a better parent. Help me to understand my children, to listen patiently to what they have to say and to answer all their questions kindly. Keep me from interrupting them, talking back to them and contradicting them. Make me as courteous to them as I would have them be to me. Give me the courage to confess my sins against my children and ask them forgiveness, when I know that I have done wrong.

"May I not vainly hurt the feelings of my children. Forbid that I should laugh at their mistakes, or resort to shame and ridicule as punishment. Let me not tempt a child to lie and steal. So guide me hour by hour that I may demonstrate by all I say and do that honesty produces happiness.

"Reduce, I pray, the meanness in me. May I cease to nag; and when I am out of sorts, help me, O Lord, to hold my tongue. Blind me to the little errors of my children and help me to see the good things that they do. Give me a ready word for honest praise.

"Help me to treat my children as those of their own age, but let me not exact of them the judgments and conventions of adults. Allow me not to rob them of the opportunity to wait upon themselves, to think, to choose and to make their own decisions.

"Forbid that I should ever punish them for my selfish satisfaction. May I grant them all their wishes that are reasonable and have the courage always to withhold a privilege which I know will do them harm.

"Make me so fair and just, so considerate and companionable to my children that they will have genuine esteem for me. Fit me to be loved and imitated by my children. Oh God, do give me calm and poise and self-control."

DEAR ABBY: I heard there's a club for redheads. How can I get in touch with it?

I may as well add a few comments on the trials of being a redhead. For years people have made assumptions about my sister and me based only on our hair color. Some are nice, most are negative and all are prejudiced. These are the most common:

1. You must have a violent temper.
2. You must be a firecracker in bed.
3. You're psychic or into witchcraft, aren't you?

SEEING RED

DEAR SEEING: The organization you want is: Redheads International, 23101 Moulton Parkway, Suite 110, Laguna Hills, Calif. 92653.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would say something about husbands who take their wives out for dinner, then proceed to get overly familiar with the waitress. My husband does this frequently, and it spoils my dinner.

He always manages to engage the waitress in some kind of small talk that has nothing to do with the menu—complimenting her on her hair, her shape, her smile, etc. Some waitresses act pleased; others do not appreciate it.

DESERVES BETTER

DEAR DESERVES BETTER: It won't be easy to change a man's habits after 31 years, but you can try. Don't chastise or criticize him; use a more gentle and appealing approach. Say, "George (or whatever his name is), when you get chummy with the waitress, it humiliates me. Please don't do it anymore."

If he claims he doesn't mean anything by it, repeat your little speech. And if he says he will "try" to overcome the habit, ask for permission to help him by giving him a small kick in the ankle should he "forget."

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Irish potato pancakes, called Boxty, are different from those I've come across in other cuisines. The difference lies in the addition of both cooked mashed potato and shredded raw potato to the batter. They are interesting and delicious.

You may enjoy serving them, as I do, for breakfast with eggs and bacon. Have lots of good strong hot tea on hand, the way the Irish would make it. These pancakes are also delicious for a light lunch or with meat, poultry or fish for dinner. The last time we made them we had some left over. Next day we cut them in about ½-inch strips and fried them in butter.

IRISH PANCAKES

1 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 pound potatoes
2 large eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup butter, melted
4 tablespoons (about) milk
Extra butter

Stir together flour, baking powder and salt.

Peel ½ pound of the potatoes and steam or boil until tender; mash fine — there should be 1 firmly packed cup.

Peel the remaining potatoes and finely shred; press out liquid — there should be 1 lightly packed cup.

Add mashed potatoes, shredded potatoes, and eggs to flour mixture; mix well; stir in butter. Gradually stir in enough milk to make a soft batter.

Melt a generous amount of extra butter in a large heavy skillet; add heaping tablespoons of the batter, well apart; fry over moderate heat, turning as necessary, until cooked through and browned on both sides. Keep warm in a low oven. Fry remaining batter the same way. Serve hot with butter.

Richard Gere Stars In Challenging 'King David' Role

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

IVER, England (AP) — Bearded with a wig of long, shaggy hair, actor Richard Gere looked far removed from the hip sensualist of "American Gigolo" — the movie that shot him to stardom.

But he was facing what could be the most challenging role of his career: King David.

On a Pinewood Studio soundstage in Iver, 22 miles west of London, Gere and Australian director Bruce Beresford were reviving that long lost film genre, the biblical epic. It was the third week of shooting on Paramount's $23 million "King David."

Both Beresford and producer Martin Elfand are confident that Gere can carry the film.

"It was Bruce's choice to have Gere," Elfand said during a break in filming, admitting that he initially had a different actor in mind. "And I must say it's been a terrific one. He's wonderful."

Encompassing the 50 years from David's anointment as King of Israel through his marital and political struggles, his fall from grace with God and his redemption, the movie gives Gere a range he's yet to experience in film.

Gere starred as a young man of questionable morals in 1980's "American Gigolo." In 1982, he played the brash serviceman, Zack Mayo, in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Beresford, whose films "Don's Party," "Breaker Morant" and "The Getting of Wisdom" helped the Australian movie industry to grow, said there is more to the story of David than his celebrated encounters with Bathsheba and Goliath.

"The forces that impinged on David, the decisions he had to make, the relationships he had with people and with God and the way he felt about Him — it becomes fascinating when you follow everything that happened to David from his childhood to his death," Beresford said.

"King David" marks the soft-spoken 43-year-old director's second American film. His first, "Tender Mercies," starred Robert Duvall and earned him an Academy Award nomination for best director. Duvall won the Oscar for best actor for his portrayal of an alcoholic country singer.

"It's nice to know that there are still people in Hollywood who want to make quality films for which they know very well there is not going to be a massive market," Beresford said. "I never thought 'Tender Mercies' would be a madly commercial film, but I did think it would be a good one."

With its emphasis on the mysticism of sun-baked Southern plains and vast skies, "Tender Mercies" had religious overtones that carry over into "King David" — despite Beresford's insistence that he's "not at all religious."

"It's just a coincidence really," he said. "Religion has to come into 'King David,' because it was part of everybody's everyday life then.

"People used to talk about God like we talk about going to a restaurant," Beresford continued. "They'd say, 'God did this, God did that.' But the emotional experiences in the film will be easily recognizable because they're so universal."

To ensure authenticity, Paramount has hired Rabbi Hillel Avidan to act as religious adviser on the film, a decision that has turned out to be financially and artistically well-advised.

"Saving words is saving money," Avidan said. "I made some script cuts that saved an hour of shooting .... The producer was delighted."

Beyond checking the veracity of Andrew Birkin's script, Avidan offers an interpretation of David for the film to uphold.

"David was a multi-faceted character," he said, "a religious poet, a warrior, a lover of women, a great administrator. The film has the balance right."

Greenville Magazine In Planning Stage

September is the planned date for the beginning of a full color, slick paper magazine to be titled Greenville, now being planned by Tom Williams, president of Williams & Co. of Washington, N.C., who will bring out the magazine featuring personalities, places and events in Greenville.

"We want to capture something of the excitement of this town and its rise as one of the leading commercial and cultural centers in North Carolina and the region," Williams commented.

The line-up of articles for the first edition is still in the planning stages, but nominations are sought for two features that are already in the works, a feature on Greenville's "Ten Most Powerful Women," and for a regular column, "Up and Coming," that will feature profiles of young business and political leaders "who are making their presence felt in the community."

Other articles planned will deal with the arts and entertainment, things to do and places to go, and personality profiles.

Williams, who formerly lived in Greenville, edited "The Bicentennial Book: A Greenville Album" and a new edition of Henry King's "Sketches of Pitt County." He is the author of several books, including the "Tales of the Tobacco County." Williams was editor and publisher of The New East magazine and founding editor of Tar Heel: The Magazine of North Carolina. He currently publishes two area magazines, one on Washington, the other on Beaufort County.

Musician Father Of Local Woman Honored

RIDGEWOOD, N. J. — In a special ceremony at the German Consulate in New York, Joseph Totzauer, 87, music teacher, composer, conductor and concert violinist, was recently awarded the West German government's Service Medal, First Order. The award culminates a long series of awards and honors he has received during a musical creer spanning nearly eight decades.

A native of Austria, Totzauer was born in a small village in the Sudentenland, a border area which was annexed by Hitler, then reclaimed by Czechoslovakia in 1945.

The founder and director of the Ridgewood School of Music, Totzauer is the father of a Greenville resident, Mrs. Terry Shank, a violinist and currently serving on the staff at Pitt Community College.

In a certificate of merit signed by West German President Karl Carstens, Totzauer was cited for "distinguished artistic and political contributions to German-speaking cultures around the globe."

A violinist, Totzauer arrived in the United States in 1922 for a concert series and dedided to remain here, and became an American citizen in 1927. He has served as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic and the Jersey City Symphony. Additionally, he has directed song festivals of the Northeastern Choral Societies at which more than 3,000 voices were massed.

He studied with Leopold Auer, who trained violinists such as Misha Elman and Jascha Heifetz. Totzauer has appeared as soloist and concert master of the Liepzig Philharmonic before coming to the U.S. At age 15, he played a command performance before Emperor Karl of Austria, for which he was awarded the nation's "Verdienstmedaille."

In addition to his musical activities, Totzauer has been active in the political arena and in fostering German culture abroad. He was a leading force in organizing American aid for Europe after World War II.

Still active as he nears his 88th birthday in July, just recently, at Bethlehem Lutheran Church, Totzauer joined two of his advanced students, Glen Rock sophomores Mischa Philleo and Sang Shin in a chamber music concert which featured works by Bach, Mozart and Dvorak.

Eroding Bluffs Threaten Famed Natchez Homes

By JANE E. ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — Judge Reuben Bullock wouldn't recognize his antebellum estate overlooking the Mississippi River. If he strolled more than eight feet from his 1855 mansion today, he'd slip over the steep, crumbling bluff.

Standing alone on 10 acres, vacant Weymouth Hall hovers on the brink of disaster, along with some 90 others. They sit atop a 200-foot, rapidly eroding bluff in one of the South's best preserved cities.

"It's not a matter of centuries, but scores of years" that all of Natchez will be in danger, says Historic Natchez Foundation director Ron Miller.

Mudslides are eating away the last yards between the historic mansions and the river bluff, and geologists, residents and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers haven't figured out how to stop them.

The bluff on which Bullock built his white brick Greek Revival house has eroded, carrying away the gardens, carriage house and a barn. Only the H-plan house with its two matching facades remains.

Officials of the U.S. Park Service, who oversee national preservation efforts, believe that mansion is in imminent danger and are trying to save it.

With the help of Mississippi's congressional delegation, a maximum of $1 million in federal money was earmarked in September 1983 to deal with the problem. The Park Service began an architectural survey of the area and hired the Army Corps of Engineers for an 18-month study that started in March.

Rising along two miles on the eastern side of the river, the bluffs have been deteriorating slowly since the 19th century, when naturalist John James Audubon noted them in his travel journals. In the past 20 years, however, that sloughing has accelerated, taking two lives along with blocks of Clifton Avenue in a 1980 slide.

Natchez, with a population of 22,000, escaped natural disasters and the torches of Union soldiers in the Civil War, and preservationists have saved the city from architectural oblivion, but fighting nature may cost hundreds of millions of dollars.

A Corps of Engineers drilling rig dwarfs Weymouth Hall, where soil engineers are boring for core samples. Barricades keep visitors from the dangerously undermined bluffs. Cave-ins are frequent.

The area's unusual soil composition is the problem, geologists say. The wind-blown soil — called loess — is sturdy and compact when dry, but in heavy rain melts away like a wet sugar cube.

When early residents cleared the land, chopping down trees and uprooting bushes, the soil cover was reduced, exposing the loess. Paving streets above the bluff intensified erosion.

Those living along the unstable bluff find it difficult to get home insurance. Real estate values are depressed as well.

"When you go to the banks or financial institutions, they just laugh," says Rivet Hedderel, a New Orleans interior designer who owns an 1858 home with a turn-of-the century addition bordering the remains of Clifton Avenue.

GRASS, TREES AND WATER . . . combine to create a typical scene of natural beauty often found in widespread areas of coastal Carolina. The stream of dark water reflects marsh grasses and trees that encircle the marshes on higher, firmer ground.

AN APPEALING SWEEP OF COLORS . . . is contained in the building and surrounding growth of this vine-enclosed building near the Beaufort County village of Royal. The green of honeysuckle and young corn, the gold of ripening oats, the clustered pink of running roses half hidden in the grass, frame the silver and brown of wood, shingles and tin of the building.

Restful Moods In Rural Landscapes

Text, Photos By Jerry Raynor

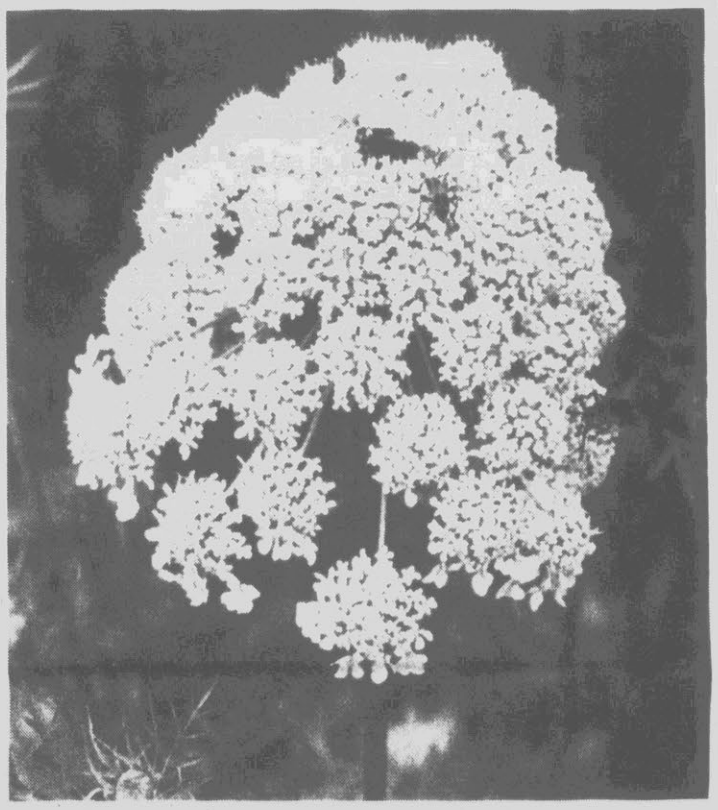

June, the beginning of summer, an outdoor time of full green and the first sustained sun warmth of the year.

June in eastern North Carolina is an excellent sightseeing month. Landscapes of green in forest, of fast growing crops, have a glowing freshness that interplays in green-gold with daytime hours of sunlight yet unmisted by the more intense heat of later summer days.

In any rural area of eastern North Carolina, rustic scenes that induce moods of restful enjoyment abound. Whether one travels only short distances in or around Greenville, or make a day's journey to coastal locations, there is a wealth of vignettes of natural beauty to be seen.

Old abandoned buildings of gray wood covered with flowering mantles of honeysuckle or trumpet vines; groves of trees filtering patterns of sun and shade on grass; roadsides and ditch banks adorned with luxuriant white flowers of Queen Anne's lace or elderberry bushes; coastal waterways rich in surface covers of water lilies; small streams of dark water reflecting marsh grasses and Spanish moss festooned trees — these are some of the colorful Carolina landscapes to be discovered during any leisurely trip.

Generally, exploring a particular site that appeals poses no problem. Along most rural eastern North Carolina roads, there are numerous wide highway shoulders or old driveways that permit safe parking. And nearly without exception, landowners readily give permission to explore — frequently taking time to provide interesting details on the history of a place and the people who once called home some lovely place now abandoned to nature.

QUEEN ANNE'S LACE . . . is a prolific, perennial favorite with a peak flowering season of late May and early June. The one here was photographed in Greenville.

NATURE'S RESISILENCY . . . is manifested in the healthy green branches growing from the tip of an almost totally deteriorated trunk of a china berry tree in an abandoned homesite along 14th Street in Greenville.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

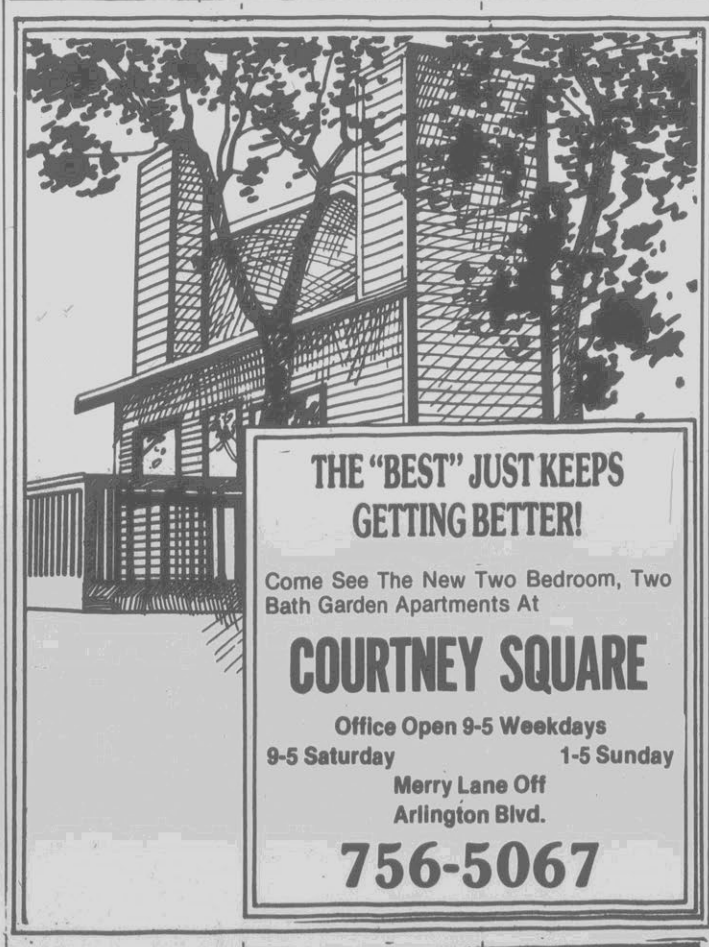

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighbourhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you – well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Call us for an appointment today.

Pearl Culture Tough On Muscles Of Mussels

ALLIGATOR CROP — Robert Kliebert of Hammond, La., holds a handful of part of his "crop" of baby alligators. Kliebert raises the alligators for their skins and meat and has 11,000 of them on his farm. He also raises turtles, mostly for sale as pets, and has more than 200,000 for breeding. (UPI Photoby Jerry Lodriguss)

EDITOR'S NOTE — Cultivating pearls from mussels is tough, especially on the muscles of the mussels. It's one reason there hasn't been a commercial pearl venture in this country — until now. A company based in Tennessee is about to provide the first fresh water pearls grown in U.S. waters.

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Some 250,000 irritated mussels are reluctantly growing a crop of pearls for John Latendresse in clean water lakes at secret locations in Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee.

It is the first commercial cultured pearl venture in this country, the culmination of years of research and development that started in Tennessee in 1963.

"For security reasons, I can't say where the lakes are," Latendresse says. "Everyone wants to learn our secrets. And we are afraid of losing some of our pearl farms due to toxicity."

What he means is that an unfriendly competitor could throw a couple buckets of chemicals into the water, upset the mussels in the lake and foul up production.

Mussels gag and gasp for life in polluted water — one reason 23 species are on the endangered list. Biologists estimate another 10 to 20 species have vanished during this century.

Latendresse's American Pearl Farms, of Camden, Tenn., looks forward to harvesting pearls by the bushel. He sells most of them at prices ranging from $2 to $150 each.

"We have taken some already — nothing great," says Latendresse. "We sold them to collectors. They were clamoring to buy the first fresh water pearls grown in America."

The 250,000 mussels were extracted from the bottoms of rivers or lakes in Kentucky or Tennessee over the past few years by scuba divers.

They work at depths up to 93 feet, groping around in "black water" — the trade term for water where visibility is less than three feet.

At this summer's peak, there will be 350 divers out there groping around, Latendresse says.

In the nucleating laboratory in Camden, each mussel chosen to become the "mother" of a pearl is carefully pried open to avoid damaging the mussel's muscles. A tiny bit of foreign matter, either a chunk of meat cut out of a "sacrifice" mussel or a bead of shell, is placed inside.

It takes 10 to 15 minutes.

After that, the mother mussel, muscles aching, goes back into the holding trough to rest and recuperate and to be transferred later to a lake.

There the mothers spend the rest of their life, two or three years, suspended on a net, pampered and monitored, doing their best to ease the irritation caused by the foreign material placed within their body by coating it with layers of calcium and smooth and lustrous nacre.

In two or three years, each mother mussel has made a pearl, hopefully a nice round one, since they are preferred over the egg shapes, baroques and "sticks."

"It has been a common belief that only Oriental people had the manual dexterity and concentration to be good nucleators," Latendresse says. "Our American technicians became very adept, much to the surprise of our Japanese partners."

Latendresse says a harvest is scheduled for fall, with the first major harvest to come in 1986. He says a well-managed farm of 30 surface acres will produce, in two or three years, about 5 million pearls of over two carats each.

Sounds easy but it's tough.

Latendresse got most of his techniques from the Japanese, who have been at this sort of thing for a long time. He is still experimenting. He says the mortality rate, 75 to 80 percent at the beginning, was down to 7 percent — less than the Japanese rate.

"We will never be through with research and development," he says. "But we are in commercial production now."

On one project, about 200 mussels were nucleated in a special way, left in the nets four years, and the output included a dozen round 16 carat pearls with the delicate blush overtone called rosea.

"Pearls of that size and shape are extraordinary," he says. "They brought a tidy sum."

The color of a pearl can vary, depending on the species and where the irritant is placed. Latendresse says the farms will be able to produce a variety of hues, including pastel shades of pink, lavender and tangerine.

American Pearl, which now has 41 employees, began at Cedar Lake near Camden, but the ecology of that manmade lake suddenly changed in mid-project and other lakes had to be found.

It was an example of the sort of ambush a pearl farmer may face.

"We were going fine and then, suddenly, growth stopped," Latendresse says. "We couldn't figure it out. We reran laboratory tests on the water. Nothing.

"So we checked back along the stream that fed the lake and within 400 yards we ran into the first beaver dam. The dams had backed up the water. It flooded some old gravel pits. The pits had traces of low grade iron ore. Iron got into the water. Due to the iron, the mussels could not extract calcium. No calcium, no pearl."

Works On Wetlands For Birds

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

Peter Coors says his main task as new president of Ducks Unlimited is to improve upon what is already there.

"Our role is the development and preservation and managment of wetland habitat, and that's as far as it goes," Coors said. "My role is simply to further that goal."

For most of its 47 years, Ducks Unlimited spent the bulk of its money preserving wetlands in Canada, where 70 percent of North American waterfowl breeding habitat is located. Another 20 percent of the habitat is in the northern United States and 10 percent is in Alaska.

Ducks Unlimited now has a $45 million annual budget and about 500,000 members.

"We feel now that our resources are large enough it now makes sense to do some development work in this country," Coors, 37, division president for sales, marketing and administration with the Adolph Coors Co., Golden Colo., said in a telephone interview from his office.

"It's not a change of philosophy, it's a dedication of resources, again toward habitat, so we begin to pick up additional pieces of the pie.

"We have now committed ourselves to working where 100 percent of the habitat is, rather than 70 percent."

Coors said his organization must tackle a wider area.

"We're just now beginning to start several projects in the United States. But there still is a very rapid dwindling of breeding habitat for waterfowl," he said. "There still is a tremendously large challenge ahead that is not met through other sources.

"I would believe clearly in the next two years, while I am responsible for the organization, our emphasis has to be on continuing to see the organization grow and the revenue grow, and the job we can do and the habitat can grow as well."

Coors said he first got involved with Ducks Unlimited in 1978 when a distributor, Bob Schulz of San Diego, suggested Coors finance one of the organization's films.

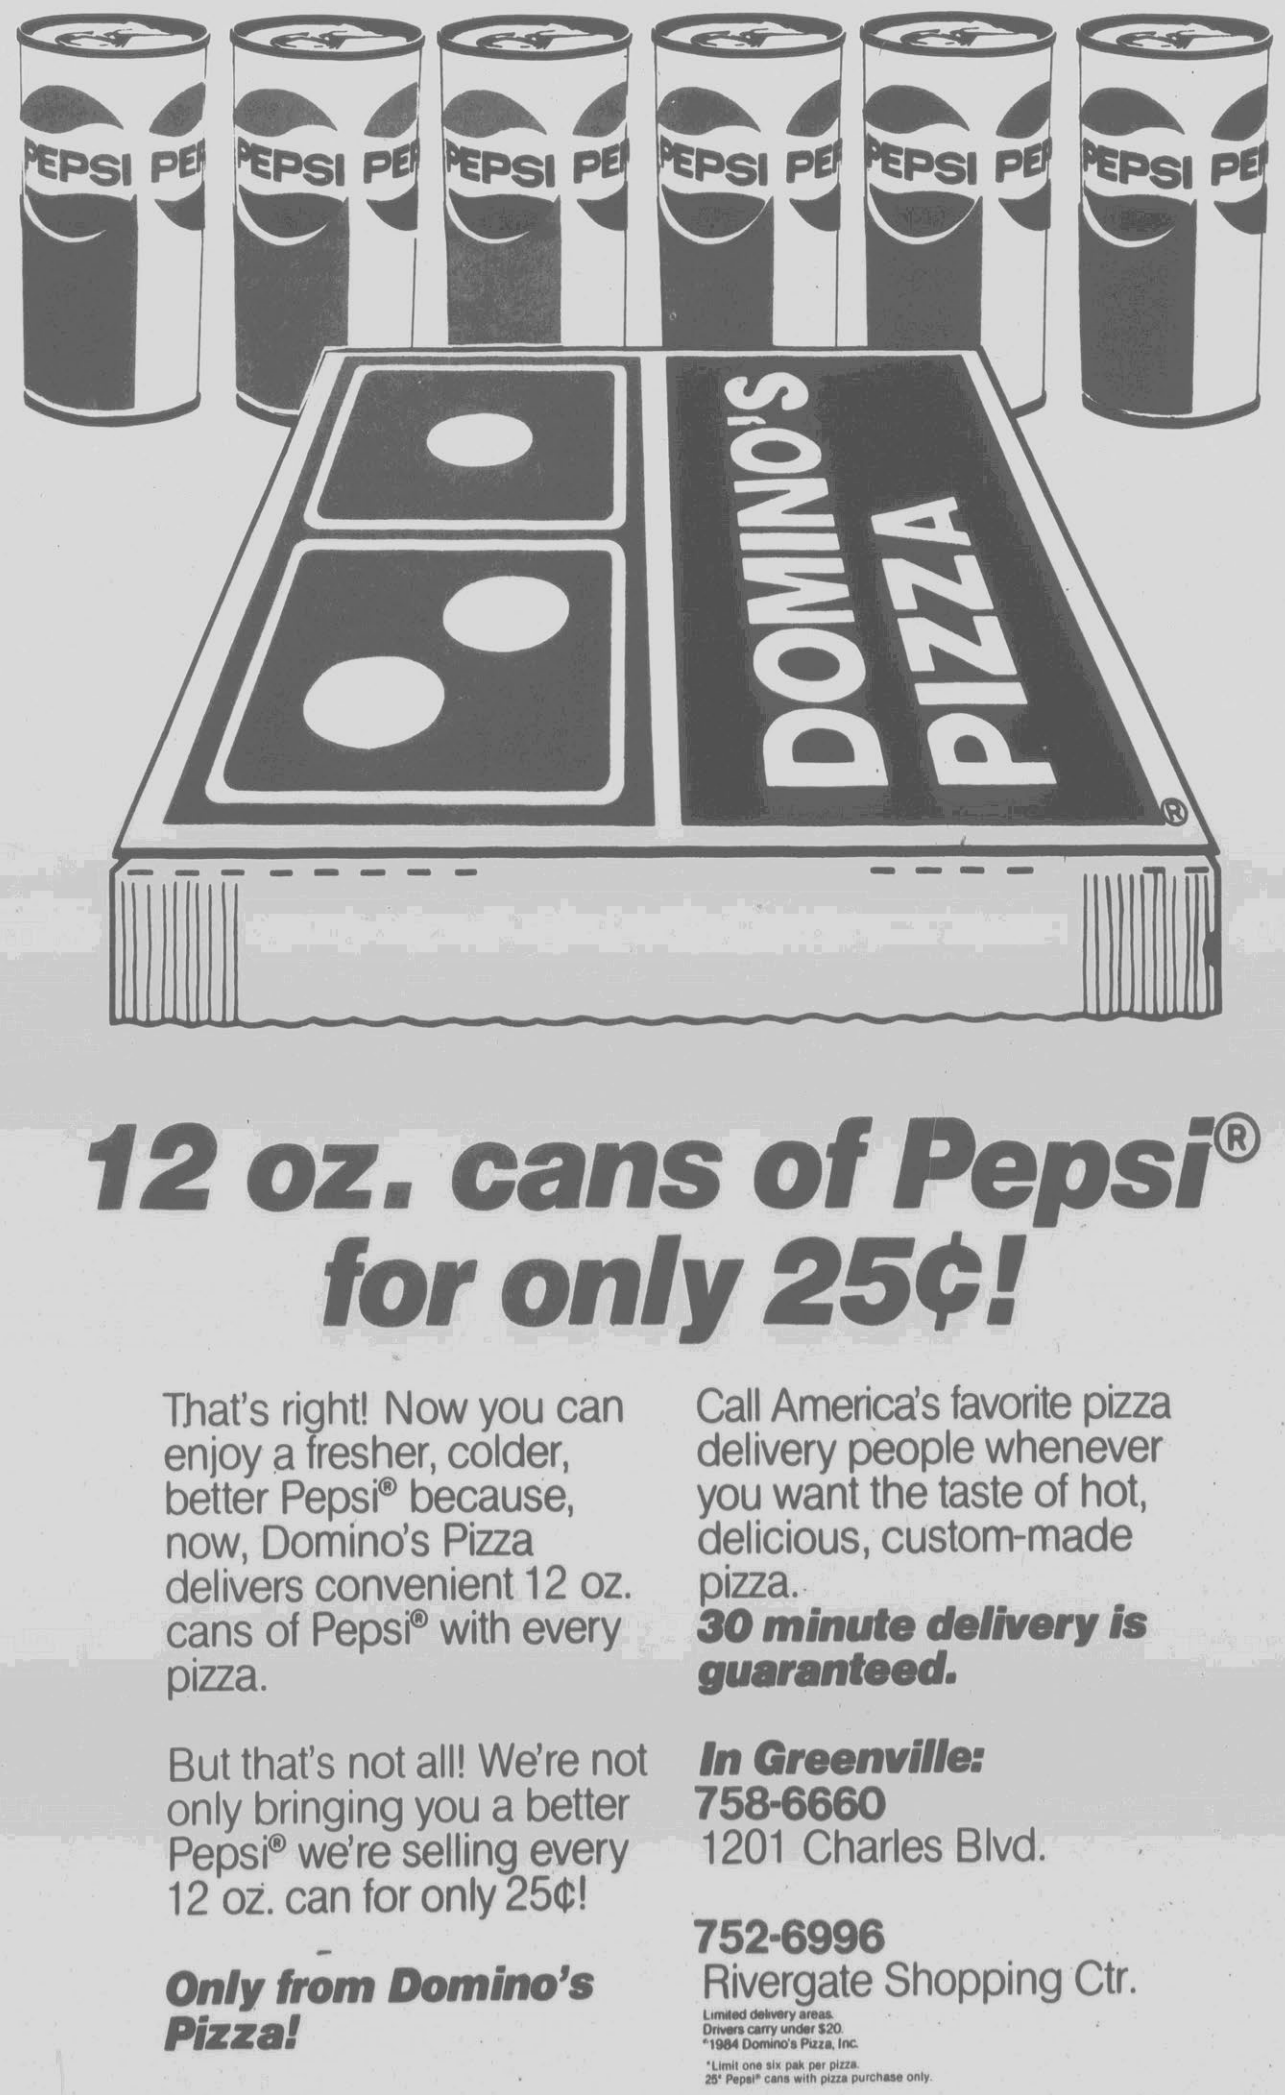

A former director of the National Wildlife Federation, Coors became more involved with Ducks Unlimited, was made a trustee and then senior vice president for membership. He was elected to a two-year term as president in May.

Coors said he enjoys hunting but "I would say duck hunting is not the reason I got involved with Ducks Unlimited."

"I'm basically a conservationist," he said. "As I looked at the various conservation and environmental organizations, I felt Ducks Unlimited had a purpose and a committment of funds in an area that avoided all the political and extraneous issues and got right down to the matter of preserving habitat.

"I thought that was very important to me. So that's where I'm at."

Carolina Farmers Of The Sea

MAKING ADJUSTMENTS ... Robbie Mercer makes an adjustment on a wench (out of camera range) and works on assembling wench gears on the table in front of him. He is a crew member of the scallop boat, "God's Mercy" based at Hobucken.

TYPICAL DOCKING SCENE ... Along coastal North Carolina, hundreds of docking places ranging from small to large exist along creeks, rivers, bays and the sounds of the state. Here, two fishing boats are tied up at a docking site on North Creek in the backyard of the home of Mayo Credle in the Burbage Crossroads areas of Beaufort County between Bath and Belhaven.

A majority of North Carolina's approximately 20,000 persons engaged in commercial fishing agree it's a hard, if exciting way to make a living.

TRAINING A YOUNG FISHERMAN ... James Hopkins, right, give pointers to his son, Robbie Hopkins, in the spacing of nails on a replacement strip of wood aboard the Libbie & Robbie. The 72-foot all purpose fishing boat, named for Hopkins' son and his daughter, Libbie, is berthed at the Hopkins Seafood Plant on Wright Creek in the Pamlico Beach area.

They're a hearty, dedicated breed, the men (and a few women) who, in the words of one weathered old fishermen, are "the farmers of the sea." Theirs is an occupation frought with constant uncertainties — stormy weather, erratic catches, fluctuating prices for their produce, and as Lowland veteran fisherman Earl Sadler notes, "the certainty that one thing remains constant, the higher price every year for fuel, ice, parts, everything you need for fishing."

Another commercial fisherman/seafood plant operator of many years experience, Roy Watson of Hobucken, declares "it's a satisfying life, but one becoming more and more difficult for young people to become established in. Older men who started years ago, have their boats paid for, can withstand losses much more easily. But even for these people, each year is a gamble.

"However," Watson added, "fishing is in the blood of some of our young people, and I'm glad that's so. The real hard workers will make it despite all the hardships."

Banker John Partin, with First Citizens Bank and Trust Company in Bayboro, specializes in arranging loans for men buying commercial fishing boats. "It's a tough market at this time," Partin commented. "The picture is the same in all coastal areas, not just here. In Alabama, Texas, Louisiana, fishermen are finding it difficult to make enough to pay off mortgages on their boats. Between high interest rates, insurance and yearly payments, fishermen have to do well in order to survive."

Time-consuming Duties

Fishermen rue the necessity to spend long hours each year away from their main concern, being out on the water. "There's always lots of things that have to be taken care of on a boat," commented Robbie Mercer, pausing for a moment from his work in assembling and adjusting gears for a wench on "God's Mercy," the Hobucken based boat on which he is a crew member.

"Boats have to be kept in good operating condition," said Pamlico Beach fisherman James Hopkins. He, his son Robbie and other crew members have recently been working to get the 72-foot "Robbie & Libbie" in top condition for the summer fishing season.

Painting, mending nets, repairing engines, adjusting wenches and other equipment on coastal Carolina fishing boats ranging from 25 to over 100 feet is, fifhermen say, costly and time-consuming.

An Important Industry

Commercial fishing in coastal North Carolina is big business. Jim Tyler, Information and Education Officer for the N. C. Department of Natural Resources, referred to recently compiled figures on commercial fishing in North Carolina during 1983 contained in the April 1984 issue of Tar Heel Coast.

The report shows that of the 23 coastal counties in which commercial fishing plays a reportable role, Carteret County by far is the most important area in North Carolina for harvest of sea produce — with 30,162,374 pounds of seafood harvested with a dockside value of $17,351,047.

Other counties that are high producers of seafood catches are: Dare, with 27,018,184 pounds and a dockside value of $9,387,301; Pamlico, 14,022,233 pounds with a value of $7,134,653; and Hyde, 9,190,366 pounds with a value of $3,362,096.

Altogether, the 23 counties during 1983 netted catches of 106,745,060 pounds with a value of $51,140,412. When these figures are added to the poundage and value of industrial landings (menhaden and thread herring), at 180,987,770 pounds for a value of $6,284,573, the state total for 1983 comes to 287,732,830 pounds with a dockside value of $57,424,985.

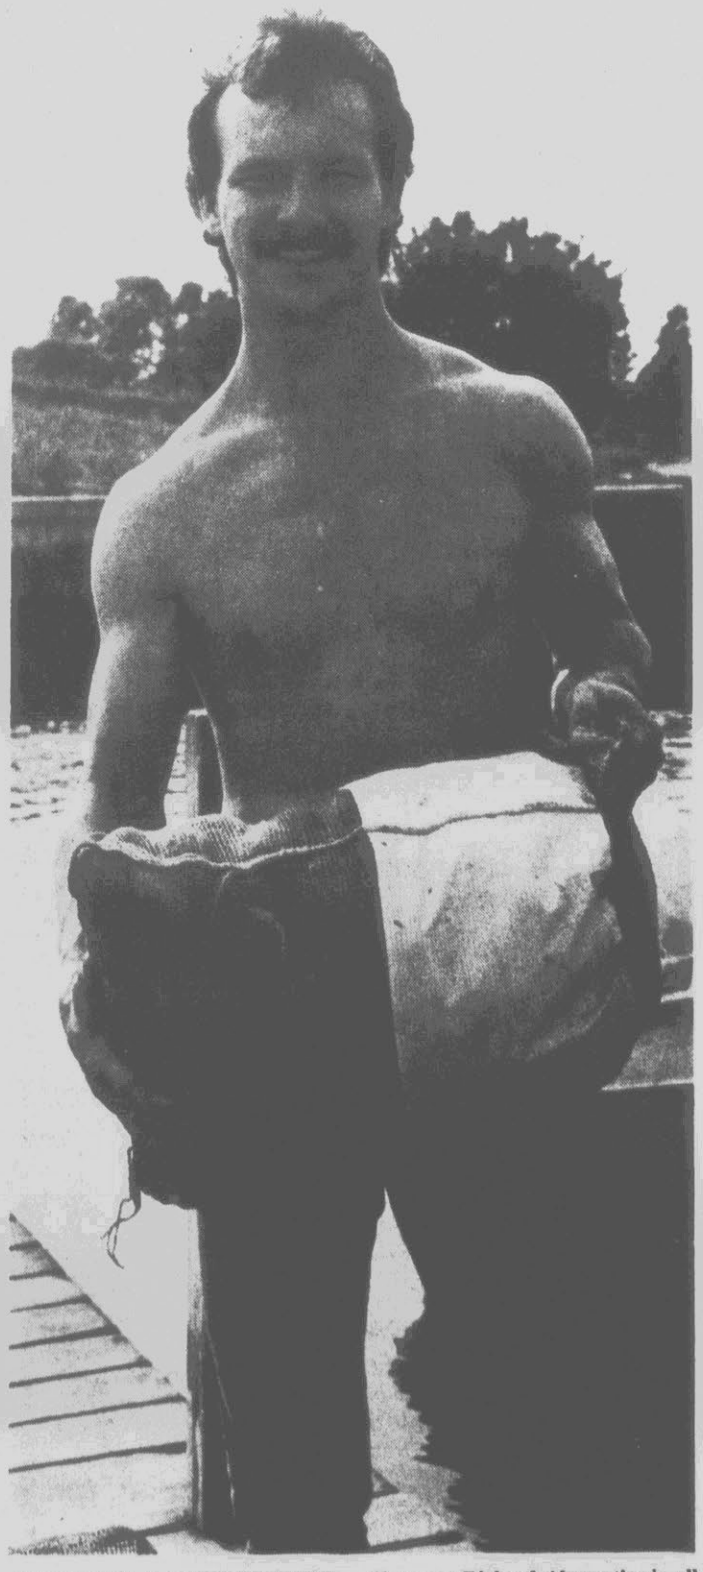

Aside from the catch in the industrial category, the totals reported for the 23 counties include shrimp, crab, oysters, scallops, and a wide variety of desirable food fish.

The approximately 20,000 fishermen responsible for the annual harvest operate from 24,766 licensed commercial vessels, of which 4,021 are full time vessels.

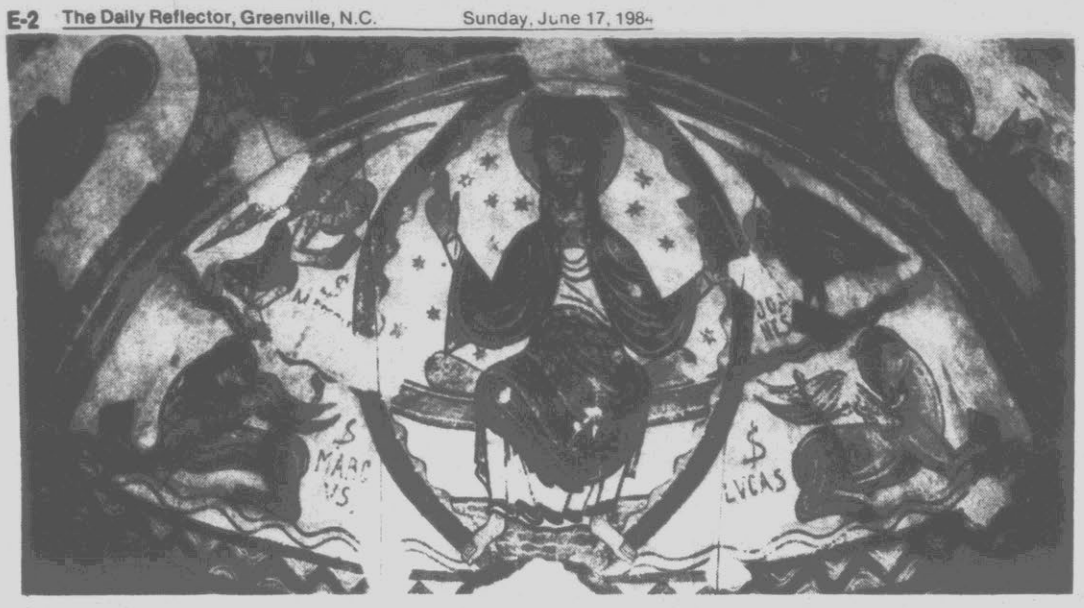

"There's no exact total of the number of marinas and smaller docking points in the state," Tyler commented. "They are numerous, ranging from large modern ones in boys and creeks to one and two boat docking points in small bodies of water all up and down the coast."

At this time, the going may be pretty rough for most Carolina fisherman, but it's a sure thing that these rugged individuals are in no ways about to become an extinct breed.

Apse Called Fake, Taken From View

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — One of the most popular exhibits at the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth, Texas, has been called a fake and has been withdrawn from view.

Other museums may have been victims of the same "sting" operation, including the Memorial Art Gallery of the University of Rochester, N.Y., the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Abegg-Stiftung in Bern, Switzerland, the Nationl Gallery of Canada in Ottawa and the Dublin National Gallery of Ireland.

According to art expert Leon Harris, author of an article in the June issue of Connoisseur, the dubious piece at the Kimbell is described as a 12th century Romanesque fresco, a 12-foot plus high apse from a church near Avignon, France.

William Bryan Jordan, deputy director of the Kimbell who instigated an investigation of the apse in 1981, said, "It is entirely a fake and intended to deceive."

It was bought in 1971 for $330,000 by the late Richard Fargo Brown, the founding director of the Kimbell, which opened in 1972.

It was so popular with museumgoers that local couples asked to be married in it, but were refused.

The apse first came under suspicion in 1980 by the museum's second and current curator, Edmund Pillsbury, who had his doubts but wanted to avoid what author Harris calls a "Kimbellgate."

Harris, a specialist who has served on the acquisitions and visiting committees of major museums, found a report circulated among the museum's trustees that indicated the Romanesque apse actually was the handiwork of a 20th century Avignon-based painter and restorer, the late Marcel Simon.

Simon's works, some genuine and some fake, were marketed first by the late H. Bing of Paris, then by the late Pierre Batifol, and today are handled by Bing's former associate, Roger Ferrero of Geneva, and London-based art consultant Walter Goetz. Goetz frequently assisted Brown of the Kimbell in making acquisitions.

Among experts who have examined the apse is the conservation coordinator of mural painting at Rome's Internationa Center for Conservation, Paul M. Schwartzbaum.

Schwartzbaum had examined a Romanesque apse being offered by Ferrero and Goetz to an Australian museum in 1979 and found it was "either totally over-painted or, more likely, was a modern forgery."

When he heard about the Kimbell apse, he asked to see it. The museum reportedly paid his expenses and per diem fee when Schwartzbaum traveled to Texas to examine the apse on August 31, 1982.

It reported that Schwartzbaum found similar inconsistencies in the Kimbell apse and the one he had examined in 1979, including cracks that had been "obviously artifically simulated," indications that the frescoes were "painted on the present wooden frames rather than having been detached from a wall," and "under ultraviolet light the surface of the fresco and its restorations fluoresce exactly the same . . . such areas should fluoresce differently."

Professor Otto Demus of the University of Vienna, a leading authority on Romanesque frescoes, examined photographs of the Kimbell apse and photocopies of the Dublin works.

"I am convinced all are fakes," he declared.

Harris asked Pillsbury of the Kimbell Museum about the apse.

"Until the Kimbell apse and all the examples in Dublin and Ottawa, in Bern and Boston, have been given long and scholarly study, it will not be possible to assess the full extent of Mr. Simon's career as a bona fide restorer and skillful forger," Pillsbury said.

If the apse is hidden away and under suspicion, Harris wonders in the Connoisseur article, "why are postcards of it still being sold in the museum gift shop?"

"Because we have a large inventory of them," Pillsbury laughingly replied.

State Art Museum Plans Exhibit Of Baroque Group

By SHARON BROOM
N. C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — "Baroque Paintings from the Bob Jones University Collection," an exhibition of 44 works, will be on view at the North Carolina Museum of Art July 7-Sept. 2.

The exhibition will mark the first time that a group of paintings from the Bob Jones University Collection of Sacred Art, which includes one of the finest private holdings of baroque paintings in the United States, will been seen outside the university museum.

This will be the first major exhibition organized by the North Carolina Museum of Art staff in the museum's new building, which opened in April 1983.

On view will be 17th-century Dutch, Flemish, Italian, French and Spanish paintings, including works by Peter Paul Rubens and Anthony van Dyck, with subject matter drawn primarily from the Old and New Testaments.

The Bob Jones University collection was assembled beginning in 1951 by Dr. Bob Jones Jr., chancellor of the Greenville, S.C., university and son of its founder, as a didactic and inspirational resource for students as well as for its artistic merit. The paintings are an integral part of the school's curriculum, in which study of the Bible plays a central role.

From a collection which spans European art from the 14th to the 20th centuries, Daniel H. Steel, Jr., associate curator of European art at the North Carolina Museum of Art, has chosen the best of the baroque paintings from the collection. On view from the Flemish school will be "Christ of the Cross," a study by Rubens, and a "Mother of Sorrows" by van Dyck.

Among the 26 Italian paintings in the exhibition are fine examples of the Roman, Neapolitan, Bolognese, Genoese and Lombard schools. Also on view will be nine important Dutch paintings, including works by students of Rembrandt, and representations of the French and Spanish schools.

A fully illustrated, 160-page catalogue, written by Steel, accompanies the exhibition, the first catalogue of any part of the Bob Jones collection to be published since 1968. It will be availalbe in the Museum Shop for $20.

In conjunction with the exhibition, the museum will present a symposium, "Vision and Ecstasy: Religious Art of the 17th Century," on July 14 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. In addition to Steel, the speaker will include three persons knowledgeable in the field of baroque art — Dr. John R. Martin, Princeton University; Dr. Howard Hibbard, Columbia University; and Dr. Susan Kuertsky, Vassar College. Tickets for the symposium are $12 each.

The exhibition and catalogue are made possible by funding from the North Carolina Museum of Art Foundation.

The North Carolina Museum of Art is located at 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no charge for admission. For more details about the museum and current shows, call 833-1935.

Tourism Now Ranks Third Among State's Industries

RALEIGH — A recent travel survey prepared for the North Carolina Travel and Tourism Division by Dr. Michael Rulison, a consulting economist, showed tourism as the state's third largest industry behind textiles and tobacco, in terms of overall impact.

The $3.4 billion received in travel expenditures during 1983 represented a 10 percent increase over the $3.1 billion reported in 1982. Of these expenditures, about $966 million, or 28 percent, was spent by North Carolina residents while nearly $2.5 billion was spent by visitors from outside the state.

North Carolina offers its citizens and visitors a wide range of natural, scenic, cultural and entertainment attractions for enjoyment. In 1983, many of the sites, as well as special events, reported solid gains in activity.

Various federal parks and monuments reported an increase in visitation of 4.4 percent, to 31.7 million persons. Nine outdoor dramas had attendance of nearly 238,000 persons at their performances, up 3.9 percent from 1982.

After two years of decline, the North Carolina state parks reported a gain of nearly 26 percent in visitation, up to 5.5 million persons. State historic sites had a six percent rise in visitation, to 671,000 persons. State buildings and museums in the Raleigh area reported more visitors, especially because of the reopening of the Museum of Art.

Some 165,000 of the state's citizens, or 8.5 percent of the private sector employment work force, works in businesses dealing directly serving travelers. Others, in retail trade, for example, owe a portion of their earnings to travel-related expenditures.

Copies of the North Carolina Travel Survey and the North Carolina Travel Study for 1983 may be obtained from the Travel and Tourism Division, 430 North Salsibury Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, telephone 733-4171.

The "Wind Machine," which director Barry Shanks briefly describes as "a spin off of summer theater," will be the featured attraction at today's "Sunday in the Park" concert. Today's concert marks the 12th consecutive year that Shank has directed a Sunday in the Park program.

The concert will begin at 7 p.m. on the grassy slope east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth streets. No admission is charged and all the series of summer concerts are open to the public.

In the event of rain, the program will be presented at the same site at 7 p.m. Monday.

For today's concert, Jim Rees of the drama department, East Carolina University, will be heard as the narrator in Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait," arranged by Beeler.

The brass choir will open the program with Mailman's "Two Fanfares," to be followed by Fucik's "Thunder and Blazes" and the Luckhardt arrangement of Rimsky-Korsakov's "Le Coq D'or."

Two pieces — "Lullaby" and "Greek Dance" from Werele's "Concertino for Three Brass" will be performed by soloists Bill Frazier, trumpet; George Broussard, trombone, and Bill Chamberlain, tuba.

Other selections listed for today's concert are: "Annie," arranged by Jennings; three pieces — "Poll's Dance," "Jasper's Dance" and "Finale" from "Sullivan's "Pineapple Poll" arranged by Mackerras, and Benson's "Transylvania Fanfare."

Also, the Sauter—Finegan "Doodletown Fifers" arranged by Roberts; Erickson's arrangement of Hairston's "Elijah Rock;" the Bocook arrangement of Williams's symphonic suite from "Return of the Jedi;" and Bagley's "National Emblem."

Lowly Crows Given Little Respect

By Mercer Cross
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Long before they want to wake up, thousands of American suburbanites are aroused each day by the raucous caw of a living alarm clock, the common crow.

He's not exactly a newcomer to their neighborhoods. His family, in fact, lived there for something like 25 million years before the first split-level rambler was built.

The family's name is Corvidae, and the crow's official title is Corvus brachyrhynchos. The most prevalent member of the clan, the bumptious, coal-black bird is well-known in every part of the United States. His cousins include ravens, jays, magpies, and nutcrackers.

Intelligence and adaptibility have been the crow's trademarks over the millennia. No other species of bird has been more reviled and persecuted. Yet none has thrived more effectively in adversity.

As a result, the U.S. crow population continues to grow, despite poisons, pesticides, dynamite, and guns. While less hardy creatures are succumbing to man's depredations, the number of crows flourishes. One recent estimate: 3 billion in North America.

In times past, when farms dominated the American landscape, farmers cursed the ever-hungry avian marauders for eating grain, fruit, eggs, and smaller birds. The farmers tended to overlook the services the crows performed by also eating mice, grubs, cutworms, and grasshoppers.

As housing developments and shopping centers have replaced barnyards and cornfields, crows have learned new tricks. With their long, powerful beaks and strong claws, they can effortlessly slash open plastic garbage bags and strew the contents over manicured suburban lawns.

But the irate homeowner who shakes his fist at the squawking bandit that taunts him from a nearby branch can also thank him for a few favors. That same crow reduces the insect population in the suburbanite's yard. And he helps remove animal carcasses from streets and highways.

All his good deeds, however, won't win him any popularity contests among his human neighbors. The best he can hope for is a standoff.

Since 1973, the crow has been protected as a migratory bird. Hunting him requires a license.

Still, he sometimes must be dealt with firmly, if not lethally. When thousands of crows roosted in trees next to a restaurant in the Washington suburb of Rockville, Md., the harried owner spent considerable money for aggravated customers' dry-cleaning bills and car washes. He finally removed some of the trees and set off fireworks to scare away the remaining birds.

Whatever deterrents people may try, they're likely to be effective only until the crow gets used to them and adapts, experts agree. His intelligence and flexibility are unmatched in the bird world. Scarecrows scare him only briefly. He quickly learns what a gun is, and stays out of its range.

Stories of his wit and mimicry abound. "They're samrt, they're very smart," says Eleanor D. Brown, a Smithsonian Institution research associate who specializes in crow language. Capable of imitating human voices as well as the sounds of other birds and animals, crows have a complex and distinctive system of songs and calls, she says.

Crows mate for life, and individual families develop their own identifiable quirks of communication.

Legend and tradition perpetuate the crow's ominous reputation as a harbinger of evil, a portent of death.

Conceding that many people don't like crows, Brown says with some irritation, "I think a lot of this stems from the fact that they watched Alfred Hitchcock's 'The Birds' when they were at an impressionalbe age."

Zimbabwe Wines: A Lesson In Genius

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — When the first batch of unpretentiously labeled "Rhodesian white wine" was almost ready for bottling 12 years ago, someone, by mistake, poured it all into four large vats used to store vinegar.

Red-faced vintners hastily canceled a much publicized tasting party for dignitaries including the prime minister. And cynics suggested that vinegar probably improved the flavor of the first commercially produced wine in the former British colony.

Efforts to create a wine industry in a high-altitude African country of hot, rainy summers and dry winters — the reverse of the ideal climate — were dismissed as a joke. But today viticulturists and vintners are having the last laugh.

The multimillion-dollar wine industry in Zimbabwe, which changed its name from Rhodesia at independence April 18, 1980, is sparkling.

"The grape growing here is rather haphazard," concedes Tom Southwell, 69, who produces grapes on his 40-acre Chikanga farm in the eastern highlands. "We muddle through. There's no selection of vines and no research. We don't even have an association. I get the highest yields in the country, but we just don't know why."

A German wine expert, Helmut Becker of West Germany's Geisenheim Research Institute, said after a visit to Zimbabwe that the country has the potential to produce high-quality wines.

"They just need to experiment and find out the right sorts of grapes to match the climate and ground conditions," Becker said. "The wine cellars have already attained world standards. It's just a matter now of improving cultivation techniques."

Ian Sieg, South African-born cellar master for Monis Wineries' Mukuyu estate near Marondera 62 miles east of Harare, says that Zimbabwe wines are getting better all the time.

"In the past, we lacked the expertise, the knowledge and the technology," Sieg says. "We have to take a lot more care than wine makers in other parts of the world. But by research, modern techniques and experience we are overcoming our special problems."

The biggest headache is the climate. While the Cape Province in neighboring South Africa is blessed with ideal Mediterranean seasons of warm, dry summers and rainy winters, the Zimbabwe climate robs grapes of sugar and alcohol and curses it with too much acid.

So some Zimbabwe growers — infants compared to the South African descendants of French Huguenot settlers who sailed to the Cape with their wine-making skills three centuries ago — do something unheard of in vineyards elsewhere. They add sugar.

"This accounts for the acidity in some of our wines," says Southwell. "I've called it vinegar on occasions."

Yet Zimbabwe white wines such as Bin 16, Kronenprinz and Premier Grand Cru are big sellers with locals as well as foreign diplomats and tourists. And Monis Wineries' Vat 10 Colombard, a crisp, dry white, won a bronze medal at the 14th International Wine and Spirit competition in Britain last year.

"We've gone on trial and error," says Tim Johnson, general manager of Monis, one of two major wine producers that together corked more than 1.25 million bottles last year. "We're still experimenting, still looking for the perfect grape, but we've done very well in such a short time."

Monis' biggest triumph in a country where Zimbabwe reds are rarely mentioned in polite circles is Mukuyu Cabernet.

Summer Theater Receives Grant

The East Carolina Summer Theater has received a $5,000 grant from the Theater Arts Section of the N.C. Arts Council, a Division of the Department of Cultural Resources in Raleigh.

Earmarked for salary support of the approximately 100 actors, technicians and musicians with the professional company, the grant "could not have come at a more appropriate moment," said theater general manager Scott Parker.

More than half of the singers and dancers have arrived in Greenville and rehearsals are under way for "Annie," the season's first offering to run July 2-7. Parker went on to say: "We think we have some of the finest musical theater talent in the Southeast this year and in large measure, N.C. Theater Arts can be thanked for the continuing salary support that enables us to attract these people. We are very grateful."

Also scheduled for production are "Chicago," July 9-14; "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," July 16-21, and "The 1940s Radio Hour," July 23-28.

Historic Edgecombe House Is For Sale

TARBORO — The Historic Preservation Fund of Edgecombe County Inc. is offering the Joseph Pippin House for sale. It is considered one of the finest Federal-style structures in the county, and is to be sold to a buyer who will restore this historic home.

The Joseph Pippin House was built in the early part of the 1800s as the seat of a large plantation. Pippin came to Edgecombe County from Maryland about 1765. He fought in the Revolutionary War and then settled in an area north of Conetoe. The house remained in the family throughout most of the 19th century.

The two-story frame dwelling has a double-shouldered, common-bond chimney at each gable end. It contains about 1,800 square feet originally arranged in a hall-and-parlor plan. Over the years, walls have been added to create a center-hall plan. The house has six rooms, four fireplaces, and a full unfinished attic. Much of the original woodwork remains including a reeded mantel, chair rails, baseboards, window surrounds, wide floorboards, etc. The outside has a richly ornamented cornice with courses of dentils, modillions, and punched moldings.

The Joseph Pippin House is located near Coakley on state road 1512 about nine miles east of Tarboro, and must be moved from its present location. Negotiations for a site within three miles of its present location are under way.

The house can be purchased for $10,000 subject to protective covenants. Anyone interested is to contact Louise W. Boney, Historic Preservation Fund of Edgecombe County Inc., P.O. Box 1595, Tarboro, N.C., 27886, phone 823-3080.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Susanne H. Long

During the days of the Summer Reading Program, the objective of most area children is to read a great number of books. Selection from books on the New Books shelf will ensure that children are including some of the best of summer's offerings in their stacks of reading materials.

For lovers of folklore, "The Story of Jumping Mouse" by John Steptoe is a thought-provoking retelling of a Native American Indian legend. This tale promotes the idea that through the spirit of hope and compassion the smallest of creatures can rise to greatness.

A small mouse longs to know the mysteries that lie beyond the familiarity of home and begins a journey, although he is ever aware of the mighty, fearful "shadows in the sky." During his journey he encounters pain and fear, but despite his hardships he remains hopeful and displays extraordinary kindness and generosity. In return for his selfless consideration, the small mouse is awarded one of those magical transitions in form through the animal hierarchy according to Indian tradition.

Caldecott Medal winner "The Glorious Flight" by Alice and Martin Provenson is a delight in every way. During 1901, in France, Louis Bleriot is out for a drive with his family when he sees a flying machine, and, in his excitement, drives into a wagonload of pumpkins. At that moment he knows that he must fly, and he begins an obsession marked by wet, bumpy, humorous, and sometimes dangerous efforts culminating in a daring flight across the English Channel. The Provensons convey the wonder of flight and add to a child's store of historical information.

Parents will be thankful for an admirable new book describing reproduction and birth with sensitivity and honesty. "So That's How I Was Born" by Robert Brooks handles a young child's questions and feelings with care, encouraging a responsible, comfortable, accurate view of sexuality.

Little ones will identify with Joey, whose initial anxiety and embarrassment are dissolved by parents who respect his feelings and encourage him to ask questions. The sensitivity of Joey's parents is critical — they do not rush their child, but provide explanations in language he can understand, although he is introduced to several new words. The strength of this book is its recognition that the facts of life do not all need to be thought of at the same time, but enough information is provided in a style just right for young children.

PBS To Show NCSU Tape On Japan

By DEWBBIE HAMRICK
NCSU News Bureau

RALEIGH — In the ancient textile district of Nishijin in Kyoto, Japan, some handweavers work for a week to make one piece of obi (kimono sash) fabric which will be no larger than a foot wide and five yards long.

A North Carolina State University video crew has captured for public television audiences this traditional art in the making as well as vignettes of wide-ranging personal experiences of North Carolinians in modern Japan.

The documentary transports viewers to design studios and weaving rooms where all the looms are powered by foot, and the artists work from designers' originals, interpreting as they weave.

The thick, Scottish accent of Alan Donaldson describes the time-consuming process of weaving fabrics for the traditional Japanese kimono industry.

In some areas of Nishijin, the narrator explains, the weavers file their fingernails into serrated edges and beat up the fell of the fabric for special effect.

Donaldson, textile designer at N.C. State University's School of Textiles, is one of four N.C. Japan Center Fellows featured in "Sound and Silence: A Japanese Experience" to be aired on PBS at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

The 30-minute documentary was produced for the Japan Center by Media Services of the NCSU School of Humanities and Social Sciences in conjunction with the UNC Center for Public Television.

"Through the Japan Center Fellows Program we are trying to introduce a Japanese competence in North Carolina across a wide variety of academic fields," explained John Sylvester Jr., director of the NCSU Japan Center.

Since the program began in 1981, 41 fellows from all areas of academia — the humanities to engineering — have spent time in Japan pursuing professional interests.

In addition to Donaldson, those featured in the documentary are 1982 Fellows Shanna Moore, NCSU assistant professor of physical education; Dr. Joseph P. Mastro, NCSU associate professor of political science and public administration, and Dr. David L. McIlwain, associate professor of physiology at UNC-Chapel Hill.

In North Carolina, the fellows incorporate their Japanese experiences into their classes and research and at the same time maintain contact with their Japanese counterparts.

Sylvester said the base of knowledge and contacts built through the Fellows is an asset to North Carolina as the state continues to attract more Japanese industries and increase its trade with Japan.

Tennessee Cattleman Takes Chance On Tropical Senepols

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Purebred Hereford cattle have grazed on John Niceley's farm in East Tennessee for years, but now he's replacing them with rare tropical Senepols.

"I think this type of cattle is the cattle of the future," Niceley said of the beef breed scarcely found outside the Virgin Islands. "They're going to explode in this country, but it'll take a little time."

The Niceleys, operators of Chesterfield Farm in Knox County for five generations, have a reputation as successful cattle breeders. Many prize-winners have come from their herds.

But they've sold all except 20 of the 100 Herefords that roamed the 500-acre farm. A year ago, Nicely brought 12 Senepols from the islands to Chesterfield. At the beginning of this month, 31 more arrived. Niceley expects 60 more next week.

Few people outside the Virgin Islands are familiar with Senepols. There are only 2,700 of the them in the world — 1,500 on a farm operated by brothers Fritz and Hans Lawaetz on the island of St. Croix.

The Senepol was developed in the early 1900s by crossing Red Polls with N'Dama, a type of cattle from Africa. Cattlemen expected the new breed to do well in the tropical Caribbean climate.

E.R. Lidvall Jr., professor of animal sciences at the University of Tennessee, said he believes the Niceley gamble will pay dividends. Senepols may replace Brahmans, another beef animal bred for the tropics, in many crossbreeding programs.

A 2-year-old bred Senepol heifer is worth $3,500 and a 2-year-old bull is worth $2,500 to $3,500, Niceley said.

"Senepols were bred for hot weather. But last winter when the chill factor was 38 below zero they did fine," he said.

Niceley said he thinks the animals could be crossed with more traditional breeds for farms in the Plains States where winters are severe.

"I believe cattle with some Senepol blood — maybe a fourth — would do well even in Montana," he said.

Why Senepol and not Herefords, Angus or Charolais?

"The big factor is the maternal instincts," Niceley said. "If I had 30 Senepol cows, I would expect to raise 28 or 29 calves every year for 15 years. That's much better than we have been able to do with Herefords.

"From Herefords, I'd expout 40 percent to raise good calves," he said.

"You know how when you drive through the country, all the cattle are in the shade or standing in the pond? You won't see that from a Senepol," Niceley said. "Even with cattle crossed with Senepol, they'll graze more in the heat of the day."

Niceley said lack of information has kept Senepols from becoming more widespread.

"The educators and the researchers have known about them for years, but they haven't had the ability to bring them to our country. The problem is that the people in the barnlot who have the cattle have not known," he said.

Veteran Clown's Career Is Reflected In Smiles

He's a clown.

The 31-year-old's mime and clown acts have taken him across the country and this fall he goes into the classroom. He'll be teaching character and improvisation at the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Clown College at Venice, Fla.

"I've been performing in mime work for 10 years, but my solo clown work has been developing for the past five years," Foreman said as he prepared to leave last week for a performance in Milwaukee, Wis.

Although his reputation as a performer appears to be growing, Foreman said he plans to raise his family in the rural Alabama coastal countryside of Magnolia Springs, where his wife grew up.

He said it may become necessary to keep an apartment in New York in the future. Foreman's twin brother, Donlin, is a principle dancer with the Martha Graham company in New York.

"Some of my mime work is very movement oriented, but it's still not termed dancing," said Foreman.

Ronlin and Donlin are from nearby Foley. Ronlin began to pursue his interest in the performing arts at Foley High School, where he was a drum major and helped design sets for plays. He later earned an undergraduate degree in fine arts at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Funny, but he makes you cry.

Offstage, there's the reality of paying bills. Security is a "big factor" to consider before deciding to become a clown, he said. "I've worked for 10 years and not done anything else. I do graphic design on the side. But basically we support ourselves in the theater. I've just stayed with it."

His wife, Lauren, designs his costumes. She traveled with Foreman, performing in small roles, before the birth of their first child, Lila. They are expecting their second child later this year.

Foreman said he teaches a lot, but he's never taught clowns, as he will at the Florida school.

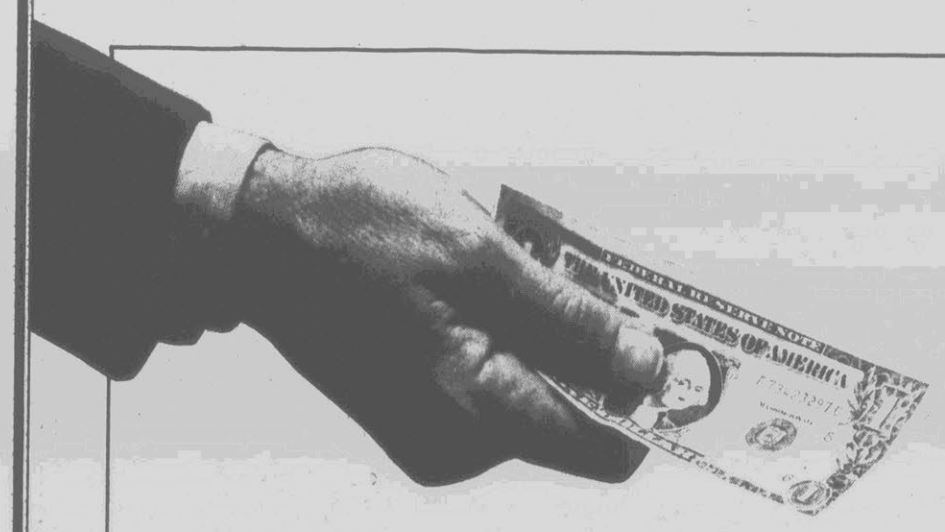

"My work with the clowns comes out of the background as an actor, their work with clowns comes out of the circus, with all the accouterments of makeup and garish costumes and circus technique," he said.

Foreman said he'd choose to be on stage, if it came to a choice between teaching and acting.

"It's been more beneficial for me to accept teaching situations in the past. As my reputation grows, I'm accepting less teaching and more performance," he said.

After his performance at the Milwaukee Performing Arts Center's Festival of Mimes and Clowns, he goes to West Virginia for the International Mime and Clown Festival, and later to Lincoln Center for a Labor Day performance.

NASA, State Team Try To Beat The Heat

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA and Florida are once again engaged in a joint endeavor for the betterment of mankind — but this time it's for the long-suffering earthling sweltering through a long hot summer.

The space agency and the Florida Solar Energy Center have just completed the first phase of a project aimed at cooling buildings and homes more efficiently, at improved energy savings.

After more than a year of research, the center at Cape Canaveral has proved the technical and economic capability of a new air conditioner-dehumidifier to deal with the problem of excess moisture in a hot, humid climate such as that of the Southeast.

Eventually, they want to be able to present design engineers with complete plans on how to incorporate the system into new construction.

Present air conditioners do a good job of cooling but only a partial job of removing humidity, said Mukesh Khattar, who conducted the research effort at the Solar Energy Center.

"Eliminating moisture is only a byproduct of air conditioning," said Khattar. "Moisture control in buildings . . . has been a persistent problem in warm, humid climates."

Since a typical air conditioner only partially removes moisture as it cools, thermostats are set lower and homes and buildings are overcooled in order to get the humidity to a tolerable level.

The new system would approximately double the capacity to eliminate moisture-laden air within the home or a commercial building, said Khattar.

NASA's Reed Barnett, a technology utilization officer at Kennedy Space Center, said the first application of the concept may come on large units for big buildings — such as supermarkets, theaters, factories — where large numbers of people gather and where humidity has to be maintained at a comfortable level.

Other structures ideally suited for the air conditioner-dehumidifier are those where humidity has to be maintained at lower levels than normal. Examples are the "clean rooms" used in the space shuttle program and large computer facilities at KSC and other locations.

At present, "To remove summertime humidity in large buildings in the Southeast, the air must be supercooled and then reheated again," Barnett said.

"It's a tremendous waste of energy, but it's necessary for human comfort and to ensure adequately dry air for machines and electronic equipment."

The KSC official estimated that the new system could be operating in about a year in large commercial buildings once one or more companies agree to build and market a unit.

Both are optimistic that the research and development work will be continued, both at the Solar Energy Center and with commercial manufacturers and engineers, for another year or two.

Besides the space agency's interest in energy and cost savings in its own facilities, NASA's involvement in the project is the result of its congressional mandate to make available to private industry the results of its own research and development.

The prototype air conditioner-dehumidifier unit used in the research was designed by a private company utilizing the technology developed by NASA to meet a number of specialized heat transfer requirements encountered in the space program.

"We think, and the people we talk to in industry agree, that this is a good example of (NASA) technology transfer. . . . that heat transfer technology can be efficiently applied in this case," Barnett said.

Khattar also is researching methods to "retrofit" or convert present central air conditioning systems so that they will be able to utilize the new concept.

NASA and the Solar Energy Center would work with commercial engineering and manufacturing firms that would do the actual conversions.

This is important because there is an estimated $10 billion worth of air conditioning equipment presently in use throughout the country.

Khattar said another area of future research is the development of a more efficient dehumidifier.

"We expect to increase efficiency and capacity by 40 percent using this concept," he said, noting that the dehumidifier industry alone has a retail market of about more than $1 billion.

The air conditioner-dehumidifier project has cost NASA and the state a little more than $100,000 so far — a cheap investment for what is considered a sweeping new concept.

Carnival Season Offers Fun For Whole Family

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Baptist who thinks the merriment of the carnival season should be for the whole family is bringing Mardi Gras to Mississippi's capital city.

"Our idea is that Mardi Gras should be something you wouldn't be ashamed to bring you kids or your wife to. And that you can have a good time without making a fool of yourself by getting drunk or high as a kite," said Murray Cain.

After two years of reviving the traditional before-Lent festival in neighboring Natchez, Cain has started the Krewe of LeFleur — named for the founder of Jackson, Louis LeFleur — for the city's first Mardi Gras celebration next Feb. 2-9.

"The acceptance has been tremendous. We've filled our first krewe and are looking for others to start krewes," said Cain, president of the Jackson Mardi Gras Association.

The association was set up in February, and the first order of business was to form a krewe — the organization that puts on the parades, balls and parties during the Mardi Gras celebration. Membership was limited to 250 couples — at $175 a person.

"We're in the process of selecting our poster which will come out in September. We've got T-shirts out and bumper tags. We're trying to get the idea before the public as much as we can," he said.

As a way of introducing carnival to those not familiar with the annual bash that goes on for days in New Orleans and other cities along the Gulf, the Krewe of LeFleur is throwing a July 4 cookout at a local hotel. It is open to non-krewe members at a slight charge.

"We want people to know who we are, what we are and the quality of the people in our krewe," said Don Gueniot, krewe "kaptain."

A native of New Orleans who has lived nine years in Jackson, Gueniot said krewe wants to bring a new spirit to the city by introducing the annual spring celebration.

While most people associate New Orleans with Mardi Gras, Cain noted that the first such celebration was held in Mobile and then came to Natchez.

"Carnival is a river city celebration and Jackson can claim that so we thought it would be great to bring it here. And we see it as a big boost economically to the city," he said.

In 1909, the Mississippi River city of Natchez dropped its Mardi Gras celebration, but three years ago Cain — who had never been to a Mardi Gras — decided to bring it back.

"We thought reviving it would help the tourist industry at a slow time of the year, and it has worked out well," Cain said.

He said at a meeting after this year's Mardi Gras in Natchez, a report from the city showed that tax revenues for February were up by $60,000 over the previous February, and "they (city officials) credit most of that to carnival."

The hope is that Mardi Gras here will be an even bigger economic boom to the city, and become a family tradition.

"Our plans are for a big celebration, to get a lot of people interested and involved," he said. "We've ordered more than 100,000 doubloons, there will be a main parade and a kids' parade, and, of course, parties and the big Mardi Gras ball on Fat Tuesday," Cain said.

"We're budgeting $40,000 alone for our first Mardi Gras ball and bringing in two bands — one from Keesler Air Force and a dance band from Texas."

States Look At TV Ads By Lawyers

By BRIAN O'SHEA
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Television viewers are accustomed to catchy jingles and improbable dramatizations used to sell toilet tissue and dishwashing liquid. But the Alabama Supreme Court has been asked to decide if this is the proper way for lawyers to hawk their services.

The Alabama Bar Association, acting on the recommendation of a task force, has asked the court to modify rules that now prohibit lawyers from advertising on radio and television. While most members of the bar agree the restriction should be lifted, some disagree about the style for broadcast ads.

State regulatory agencies throughout the Southeast have changed rules to allow lawyer advertising to comply with recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings. Most states require that the ads be honest, but rules designed to enforce truthfulness vary from state to state.

In South Carolina, the only restriction is that ads cannot contain a "false, fraudulant, misleading, deceptive, self-laudatory, or unfair statement or claim." In Tennessee, lawyers who advertise on television or radio must submit a copy of the ad after it is aired to the Board of Professional Responsibility, which is overseen by the state Supreme Court.

Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana allow lawyers to advertise in all media.

The Florida Supreme Court prohibits lawyers from using billboards, neon lights, sound trucks and "extravagant media," but newspapers, magazines, television and radio ads are allowed.

"We have tried to strike a balance between what the federal decisions say we can do ... and what we think is in the best public interest," said George Hibbs, assistant general counsel to the State Bar of Georgia, which polices lawyer conduct in that state.

Even with the rule changes, there has been no flood of advertising by attorneys in the region.

"I think probably only the very young and new lawyers are inclined to use the advertising for the simple fact that they don't have any business," said Mary Alice Simmons, director of communications for the North Carolina State Bar. "The older and more established firms don't need it because they already have clients. They're more inclined to sit back and let word-of-mouth bring in new clients."

Dan M. Byrd, a Rock Hill, S.C., lawyer who heads his state's lawyer grievance board, said the chief goal of the advertising should be to inform the public.

"Now to the extent that a lawyer's advertisement misleads or doesn't inform the public in general, then it's improper," Byrd said. "But if the advertising is factual and would help a consumer in making his decision, then it's perfectly proper."

William Hairston, president of the Alabama State Bar, is worried that broadcast ads by lawyers could go beyond the bounds of dignity and propriety if they aren't governed by strict rules.

"A fellow in scuba gear comes up out of a pool and says, 'In over your head? Let me put you into bankruptcy,'" Hairston told the state Supreme Court in a hearing last week, describing a hypothetical ad. "My case is that there's a difference between informing an educated public and solicitation."

Charles Whitehurst, general manager of a Montgomery, Ala., television station, said the rules "almost mandate the advertisement be dull and boring."

The proposed guidelines prohibit broadcast ads containing personal statements by the attorney, testimonials, music or dramatizations.

"Under these rules, a TV ad would simply be a broadcast picture of my newspaper ad," attorney Allen Howell said in an interview. "That doesn't make any sense. The guidelines should simply state that a broadcast ad must be dignified and that it shouldn't mislead the public. The rules shouldn't outlaw all dramatizations as undignified."

Other proposed guidelines would require attorneys to submit a recording of their broadcast announcements to the bar association before the commercial airs.

Attorney Wade H. Morton Jr., who headed the task force, said the rules were designed to keep the advertisements "for informational rather than promotional purposes."

But Harold Kirtz, an assistant regional director of the Federal Trade Commission in Atlanta, said the Alabama proposal was too restrictive. Dramatization in commercials could provide "truthful, non-deceptive" means for attorneys to advertise their services, he said, adding, "We don't believe broadcast advertising is inherently misleading."

The Alabama court did not issue an immediate ruling and gave no indication when it would decide the issue.

No. 22002 – The Creekstead

Elegant Master Bedroom Marks Design

by Jerry Bishop

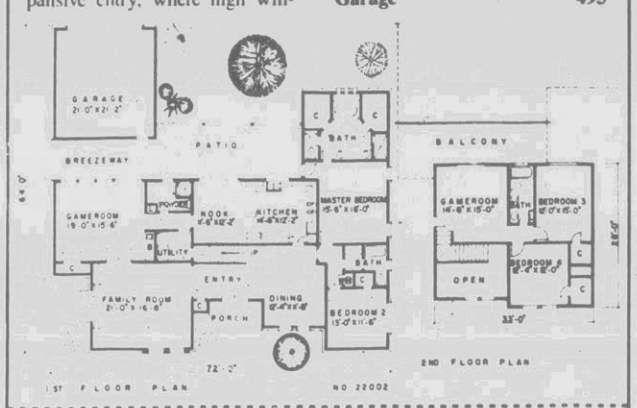

Contemporary in accent, the Creekstead, a four bedroom design, spotlights those bedrooms and lavishes the master bedroom in particular with plenty of square footage and a sumptuous bath.

The exterior impression is one of brick and glass angled and fused to create a unique structure. Inside, the focus is on living and the result is plenty of space for doing just that. Bedrooms are large, the family room measures 21-ft. in length, and the plan offers a 12-ft. dining nook in addition to the dining room.

Double doors lead to the expansive entry, where high windows admit light and create a pervasive feeling of space. At left, the family room, which might also be used as a formal living room, contains a substantial amount of floor space and climaxes in a wood-burning fireplace.

Doors open to the sprawling gameroom, well-furnished with closet, wet bar and sliding glass doors to the breezeway. Powder room and combination laundry/utility room separate the gameroom from the sizable kitchen and dining nook.

Handmade Glass Gaining Respect As An Important Art Collectible

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Quietly, but with growing certainty that they are on to something important, a small group of collectors and aficionados of handmade contemporary art glass have been helping to make studio glass an important art collectible.

Recently, the group showed its strength at the annual meeting of the Glass Art Society in Corning, N.Y. The society was founded in 1971 as a forum for communication among glass artists, collectors, scholars and others. More than 500 members came to the Corning Glass Center for the four-day meeting. The turnout was the largest ever for a G.A.S. meeting, according to William Warmus, conference coordinator and associate curator of 20th-century glass at the Corning Museum of Glass.

The group heard more than 70 speakers and also viewed some of the art nouveau glass masterpieces of Emile Galle, assembled as its major 1984 exhibition by the museum.

One speaker noted that although handmade art glass represents only about $117 million in wholesale sales — a tiny percentage of the total $2.6 billion glass market — it is recording increased sales each year.

Efrem Zimbalist III, chairman of Correia Art Glass in Los Angeles, said art glass sales had been growing at a rate of 12 percent a year recently.

That's quite an achievement for a movement that virtually did not exist in 1960 and was largely developed only after a demonstration in 1962 that molten glass could be worked in an artist's studio, he noted.

Another speaker pointed out that at an exhibition assembled at the Corning Museum in 1959, 95 percent of the pieces shown were factory-made and only 5 percent were handmade. By 1979, the percentages were exactly reversed in another museum exhibition — 95 percent of the pieces had been made by hand by artist-craftsmen.

Harvey Littleton and Dominick Labino demonstrated in 1962 that glassmaking could be taken out of the factory and into the artist's studio.

Furthermore, according to Paul Hollister, a writer on glass and other craft media arts, Americans have been leaders in sharing information on glass techniques.

Once an arcane craft in which secrets were hidden or "kept in the family," glassmaking has emerged as a medium in which artists exchange information on how to achieve new effects. Popular speakers at the meeting were artists who talked about their work and explained in detail how they created their unique pieces.

"There are more collectors, more publicity and more artists today," said Zimbalist, who added that cales of art glass should continue to increase at a rate of about 12 percent a year.

Besides traditional crafts outlets such as fairs and shops, several speakers noted that newer avenues of distribution for art glass include art galleries, department stores with crafts and fine arts departments, gift shops and decorator showrooms in wholesale furniture buildings.

The public for the work has also increased. Where once gift buyers and individuals decorating their homes might have been the typical purchasers, today serious collectors tend to make the important purchases. Prices for art glass have also substantially increased.

Recently the medium has received a boost with the acquisition of the work of a number of glass artists by American museums. Besides the Corning Museum, which owns 21,000 historic and contemporary pieces, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York is known to have acquired work by glass makers such as Harvey Littleton, Dale Chihuly and Michael Glancy, among others.

Other museums interested in glass include the Chrysler in Norfolk, Va., and the San Jose (Calif.) Museum, according to Ruth Summers, a gallery owner in Los Angeles.

Another force in the development of the studio glass movement, according to some authorities, has been the Corning Glass Museum which is part of the Corning Glass Center. Approximately 500,000 people visit the center each year, according to Dwight P. Lanmon, museum director.

Tuboponics Grows Food In The City

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Tar and concrete rooftops in New York City are turning green with tomato, zucchini, bean and other vegetable gardens using a technique called "tuboponics."

The project, which brings inexpensive vegetables, pleasure and fruitful activity to many elderly folk and children and faces less danger from vandalism, was undertaken by the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., and the Brooklyn Botanic Garden. Assisting are the American-Israel Friendship League and Consumer Action Now.

Alan Smith, Brooklyn Union assistant vice president, made a film about Israeli agriculture in 1976, including hydroponics. As economic conditions worsened, Smith wondered in 1980 whether the greenhouse process could be adapted for an urban environment.

Why would a gas utility get involved? "A great part of the cost of food is the transportation cost," Smith related. "If we reduce that cost by growing food locally, we save on energy cost. And rooftop greenery converts to pure oxygen some of the air's carbon dioxide produced by burning fuel."

Smith noted that nearly 40 percent of his company's customers receive some sort of fixed government income, making them increasingly vulnerable to food and energy price increases.

Brooklyn Union, which has a history of community involvement, has one of five pilot projects on its roof. Smith explained the process:

Basically, for each square foot of floor space, five layers of plants can be grown in an upright tube. These tubes, or columns, are usually white polyvinyl chloride, 6 inches in diameter and 5 feet tall, readily available in plumbing supply stores. Ideally, 8 tubes are attached to a rigid frame to keep them upright and spaced.

Twenty-one holes are drilled in each tube in rows of 4, rows one foot apart. Tubes are filled with 4 parts perlite to one part peat moss, a lightweight, sterile mix fed by a slow-release fertilizer added to it. Plants are started from seeds in cubes placed in a nutrient solution, then transplanted — or plugged into — the one-inch holes in the tubes.

Tubes may be watered by hand or by an overhead drip system with hose or plastic tubing fitted with an Israeli-designed dripper.

Smith estimates an 8-tube garden can be built for $300 for "tar beach gardeners" to produce fresh vegetables all summer. He says the yield can be many times higher than in traditional soil gardens.

At the Northside Senior Citizens Center, Smith related, "the tubes are vertical, and the need for stooping was eliminated. And growing vegetables without soil eliminates the drudgery of constant weeding." The food produced there is part of the 150 lunches served daily.

Urban gardening swelled 259 percent nationally last year. Smith notes that the entire tuboponics system is reusable every year. Only seeds and fertilizer need replacement for a new season.

Although a shed comes in a kit with precut parts, assembling it can be either a tedious or a fairly easy task, depending on the type of shed you want. Of course, you can have it erected professionally, but that is likely to cost more than the materials.

Many factors affect the amount of time and work necessary to assemble the shed. Considerable thought should be given ahead of time to how the shed will be used, where it will be placed and what your local building codes will and will not permit.

Detailed advice on how to choose the best shed for your needs is given in the book, "Outdoor Storage," published by Ortho Books. The following hints are included in the information:

—Expect to spend between $100 and $700, with wood sheds costing a bit more than metal ones. Site preparation and any materials not specifically included in the kit, such as anchors for metal sheds, will be extra.

—A metal shed is particularly vulnerable to strong winds, heavy snows and salt air. Choose aluminium rather than steel for a seaside location. Pick a structural design suitable for the location.

—Metal sheds are easier to put up than wood and are fairly standardized in form. The main differences are in size, roof style and features such as door-closing systems and protective finishes.

—Wood shed kits come with precut, partially precut and uncut materials. Wood sheds require some carpentry skills, but are easier to customize than those of metal.

—Select a site that is level, firm and well-drained, so that the shed will sit squarely, settle evenly and be subject to minimal moisture.

—Depending on your local building codes, you have several choices for a foundation. They include a layer of patio bricks, a pier foundation or pressure-treated lumber.

—Consider whether the things to be stored can be put in and taken out easily. For example, you don't want to have to turn sharp corners to maneuver in a lawn tractor. Think about access in bad weather, too. If you must use the shed regularly despite precipitation, put it close to the house so you won't get drenched each time.

—The shed's orientation to the sun will affect how much heat and light it takes in. Having a long side facing south gives the most moderate interior temperatures. Think also about where the shadows from the shed will fall. You don't want the shed to block the sun from your tomatoes or rosebed.

—A shed will affect how you use the rest of the yard. What routes are people likely to take when they go to the shed from various parts of the house and grounds? Will you be creating traffic paths where you don't want them? Will a shed in that spot displace other important activities?

—Consider how the shed's location will contribute to the appearance you want for your yard. Will the shed dominate the landscape or be a minor feature? Will you see the shed instead of the apple tree whenever you peer through the dining room window and does that matter? What about the view your neighbor will have? Will it still be pleasant? ——

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Q. — A painter left some paint on a few of our window panes. I always meant to scrape if off with a razor blade, but never got around to it. Now I have decided to do it, but I find the paint simply won't come off that easily, even with a blade. I have some paint remover in the house. Can that be used on the glass?

A. — Yes, but be careful not to get any of the remover on the sash or any other part of the window. If necessary, apply some masking tape in the appropriate places to prevent this. After 30 minutes or so — see the instructions on the container — scrape off the paint. Hold the blade at a 30-degree angle to the glass.

Q. — Every time we sweep the concrete steps at the rear of the house, a kind of powder comes off. What causes this and how can it be corrected? I have been told a solution of sodium silicate will cure the trouble. Is this correct?

A. — Dusting, as this condition is called, occurs because of some mistake when the concrete was originally put down. Since it can be any one of half a dozen reasons, there isn't much point in trying to guess now what the cause was. Yes, you can use sodium silicate — one part to three parts of water — but the dusting can often be halted with a coating of glass wax or liquid wax. It is better to do it with the wax because if you ever decide to paint the concrete, the wax can be removed easily. Paint will not adhere well to sodium silicate.

Q. — We have some property we intend to build on soon. It doesn't have a sewer and we expect to install a septic tank. How far away from the house should it be?

A. — Twenty feet or more, but it must be farther than that from any water supply source. Presumably you are having it installed by professionals, as it is a complex job. They will know what the local building codes are regarding the placement of the tank and other precautions.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Dare Residents Want Hospital

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (UPI) — A survey of the hospital needs and medical interests of Dare County residents indicates they want a hospital in their county.

The survey, conducted by the East Carolina University School of Medicine, was part of a 10-year health plan being developed by the Dare County Hospital study committee.

Dr. Walter Shepherd, assistant dean of the School of Medicine, said about 75 percent of the 1,400 respondents felt Dare County needed a hospital now rather than later.

PRINTING PAINTERS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Recent paintings and prints by European and American artists will be featured in the exhibition "Images and Impressions: Painters Who Print" at the Walker Art Center Sept. 23 through Nov. 25.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BROOM SALESMAN'S CRABBY CUSTOMER COMPLAINS, "HE IS TOO PUSHY."
Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

THE TALE OF THE FIVE OF CLUBS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Neither vulnerable. East deals.

Pass	Pass	6 ♡	7 ◇
Pass	Pass	Dble	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♡.

"As you might realize, it is not often the five of clubs gets to be the hero in a bridge saga, so you must forgive me if I go back to a hand that was played many years ago at the renown Cavendish Club of New York:

"You might not believe the bidding, but I can assure you that it is exactly as it occurred. Since my master's partner had opened with a two-bid, he had no option but to double or bid a grand slam at his final turn — East's pass was forcing. Obviously, my master's partner was a brave man — I am not sure that I would have allowed seven diamonds doubled to stand.

"Being a good partner, my master led one of his partner's suits. Declarer won the ace of hearts in dummy and cashed the ace and king of trumps. He decided that, for his pass of seven diamonds, East had to be void in both minor suits, so now declarer tried the sneaky play of the six of clubs.

"Now I know many of the people who while away their hours at bridge clubs would have played me under the six. In that case declarer would have run the six and made his grand slam. But it is not for nothing that I consider my master to be a great rubber bridge player. He covered with the seven, declarer finessed the jack, which won, and returned to hand with a heart ruff.

"Next came the eight of clubs, but my master covered once more. Declarer won the queen, and again returned to his hand with a heart ruff to lead the nine of clubs. My master stuck to his guns and covered with the king, forcing the ace from the board. My moment of glory had finally arrived. After three rounds of clubs had been played, I had been promoted to the master club!

"There was nothing declarer could do. He was forced to surrender a trick to me, and now, many years later, here I am, about to be enshrined in the bridge hall of fame!"

No Parole

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Paroling a man convicted of the machete murders of 25 farmworkers would "pose an unreasonable risk to the public," a member of the state Board of Prison Terms says.

The board on Wednesday denied parole for Juan Corona, citing his last psychiatric evaluation, his failure to adjust to prison life.

'Saturday Night' Is Still A-Live

By Nicholas Bronte

When comedic genius Eddie Murphy announced that he was leaving "Saturday Night Live," it looked as if the faltering show was about to bite the dust. The glory days of its first five exciting, utterly unpredictable years were long over. John Belushi had died, Chevy Chase, Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd and Gilda Radner had long since become involved in making movies. And the rest of the talented crew who made watching "SNL" mandatory on Saturday nights were scattered.

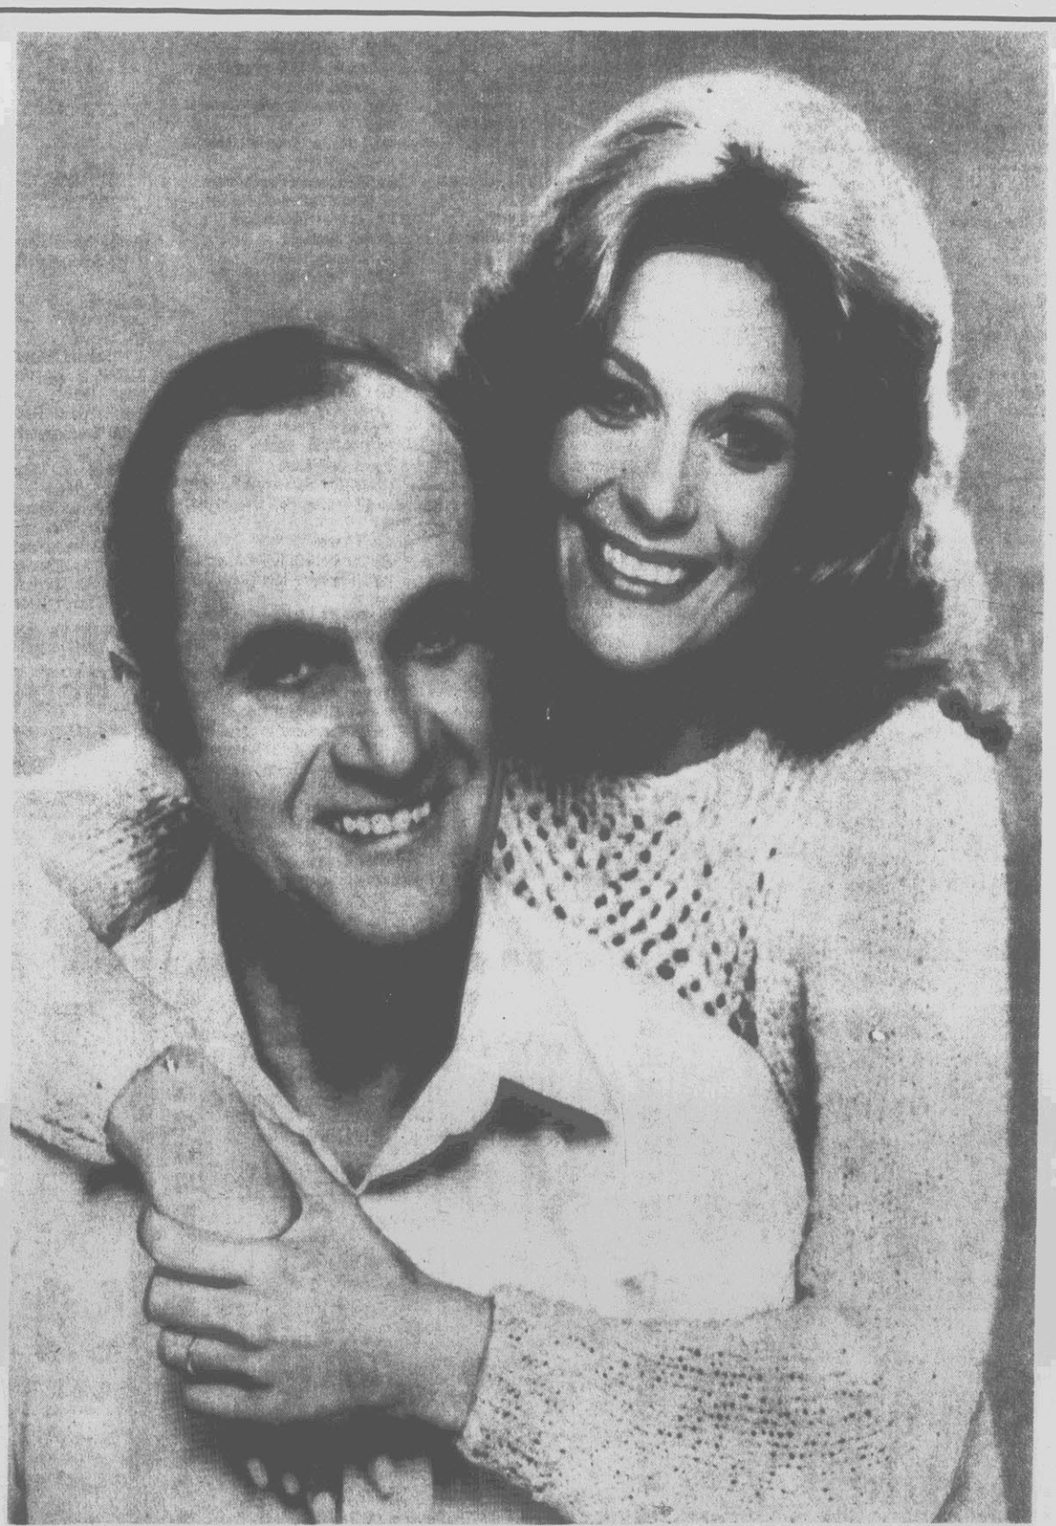

Everybody expected NBC to finally throw in the towel. But producer Dick Ebersol, who assisted the show's Canadian creator, Lorne Michaels, in the early years and took over the reins in 1982, begged to differ. Admitting that the past few seasons have been something less than a brilliant success, he says, "We know that our job now is to regain our credibility so viewers can be sure again when they tune in that they're in for a good time."

Ebersol is passionate about what he sees as a mandate given to "SNL." "This was the first show done by the television generation," he says. "It was their first opportunity to put their attitudes on the air and it represented a gigantic victory party for the 1960s kids who had been out demonstrating. Vietnam was over and Nixon had been driven from office, so they felt their ideas had been vindicated and they wanted to share their views and irreverence with their own generation and point them out to other people."

The baby boomers came to think of "SNL" as their own personal show, says Ebersol. "To the extent that we can convince them of this again," says Ebersol, "we'll be successful in the future."

Ebersol's prescription for reviving the show will consist of some personnel changes, although he's not yet prepared to elaborate.

In addition to fresh faces, Ebersol thinks his strategy of making the show more topical and political should be particularly welcome at a time "when even Johnny Carson limits his political remarks to commenting on the color of Ronald Reagan's hair." He admits, however, that this may be easier said than done.

Bob Newhart and Mary Frann star as Dick and Joanna London, a couple who encounter some funny situations in their operation of an old Vermont Inn, on "Newhart," airing Mondays on CBS.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Did Glen Campbell ever marry Tanya Tucker? My son says yes, I say no. I know he is presently married to someone else. — P. Carll

To P. Carll: The "Rhinestone Cowboy" ended his stormy relationship with Miss Tucker in 1981, although Miss Tucker has said, "I'll always love him and I believe he'll always love me." Their romance began soon after Campbell divorced his third wife, Sarah Davis, whom he wooed away from former pal Mac Davis.

The rocky road of romance has been an expensive one for Campbell. He is well-known for his generosity to women. Whatever Tanya wanted, Campbell provided — including a birthday bash at LA's chic Bistro that set him back $57,000. He also forked over $115,000 for The Rhinestone Cowgirl, a boutique spearheaded by Miss Tucker. His ex-wives have cost him in the neighborhood of $7 million. Campbell met his fourth and current wife, Kim, following his tempestuous affair with Miss Tucker. They are the proud parents of a toddler, Cal. By the way, as for Tanya, she has consoled herself by seeing Andy Gibb and boxer Gerry Cooney.

DEAR MICHELE: What was the name of the movie and the part President Reagan played in a film about Notre Dame? — Charles Berry

To Charles: Our man in the White House portrayed football star George Gipp in the 1940 classic "Knute Rockne — All American."

DEAR MICHELE: Are the opening shots of "Newhart" taken from outtakes of the film "On Golden Pond"? The brown Oldsmobile and the scenery are similar. — James Andrew Hayton

To James: There are too many legalities, not to mention dollars, involved for these scenes to be outtakes from the Oscar winning film. The "Newhart" execs have simply borrowed the idea.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

What price fame? Our rich and famous television stars — because of recent network contract negotiations — will become much richer this season. Returning to the grind of a weekly series becomes much easier when the carrot dangled before your nose is worth millions. Take, for instance, Linda Lavin, who will be paid $2.25 million to keep her waitress uniform on in "Alice," or William Shatner of "T.J. Hooker," who will be paid $1.4 million for keeping his police uniform on. Gary Coleman isn't planning to miss a single episode this season on "Diff'rent Strokes," since each one is going to be worth $90,000 to him.

Demand and availability sets the price in Hollywood just as in any other business. A few years ago series starring Hal Linden, Ed Asner, Loretta Swit, Gary Burghoff, Cindy Williams, Robert Stack, Jack Warden, Lucie Arnaz, Richard Kline or Eileen Brennan were sure to bring those all-important Nielsen numbers to the network. This year, each of them has filmed a pilot and not one has been chosen for the fall season. Let's hope some of our old favorites will find their way to our TV screens as mid-season replacements.

Production has started in Dublin, Ireland, on the NBC movie, "Holiday from Fear." A 'Green' Sunday On ABC

By Willie Schatz

A professional golfer prays that if he can win only one tournament in his career, it will be the U.S. Open. It is universally acknowledged as the most coveted and challenging title in the game. Even television executives admit it. That's why ABC will broadcast the final 18 holes live today.

ABC has televised the final round of the U.S. Open for the past eight years. It's the only network that devotes so much time to golf. Then again, the Open is the only tournament worth such royal treatment. (Actually, CBS would love to broadcast the final 18 holes of the Masters, but tourney honchos forbid it.)

Jim McKay, Jack Whitaker and Peter Alliss are the hosts for this afternoon of golf. Dave Marr will provide expert commentary, while Bob Rosburg and touring pros Ed Sneed and John Schroder offer on-the-course views and interviews.

The U.S. Open, which changes courses each year, returns to the Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, N.Y. after an eight-year hiatus. The players probably wish the absence were five times as long. No golfer has broken par over 72 holes in any of the three previous Opens played at Winged Foot.

Rosburg came close in 1959. He shot a three-over par 283, but lost by one stroke to Billy Casper. Hale Irwin won in 1974 with a 287 in horrible weather. He was helped considerably by Tom Watson, who led for three rounds before skying to a 79 on the final day.

That was the first time Watson was in Open contention. He should be there again today, along with Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, assuming Crenshaw isn't too devasted by his recent separation from his wife. Defending Open champion Larry Nelson hasn't done much this year, but won't give up his title easily. Then, as always in a major tournament, there's Jack Nicklaus. Look for the Golden Bear down the stretch.

Sunday, June 17.

The Michigan 400, CBS. Live coverage of this halfway stop on the 30-race NASCAR circuit. CBS will use at least one and possibly two RaceCams, minicameras which gives the TV audience a view from inside the car. The six-pound RaceCam was worth every ounce last year, when Cale Yarborough won his second consecutive title and the camera provided some spectacular shots.

SportsWorld, NBC. A 10-round lightweight fight between Cornelius Boza-Edwards and Guy Villegas. Edwards is the former WBC superfeatherweight champion and current European featherweight king. Villegas, who comes from Eugene, Ore. — not Paris as his name seems to indicate — has a reputation as a face-first brawler. This should be a power-packed bout.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

BOY GEORGE: HE SAID NO.

Of late, Michael Jackson's life seems less than harmonious. Although Mick Jagger accepted Mr. Grammy's offer to cut a dual track (State of Shock) for Jackson's new album, Boy George flatly turned down Michael's proposal. "I think he's a genius, but I don't want to work with him," explains Culture Club's leader. "When he called, I thought somebody was putting me on, but who could imitate his voice? He's called me several times and doesn't seem to take no for an answer."

□

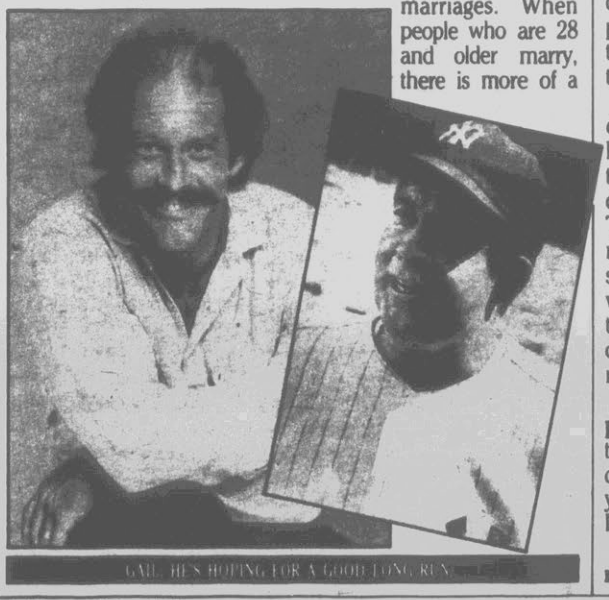

As Detective "Wojo" on the long-running ABC comedy series Barney Miller, Max Gail had a taste for beer and for watching the New York Mets. In the one-man Broadway play The Babe, Gail is swinging a bat rather than a night stick as the sultan of swat, Babe Ruth. "He's unique," believes Gail. "There are very few other people on that level of fame: Abe Lincoln, George Washington, for instance. People sensed Ruth's humanity. He made mistakes in front of everybody. He suffered public adulation and public humiliation. The only equivalent now is Michael Jackson." In this case, though, it's not "Beat It." It's bat it.

□

In a recent New York Times interview, Elizabeth McGovern talked about her relationship with Sean Penn (the two co-starred in Racing with the Moon), a romance she then felt might have marriage as its sequel.

"'But I don't know if we're going to do it right away,' said McGovern hesitantly. 'I've heard so many stories of disastrous early marriages that it is very scary to me.'"

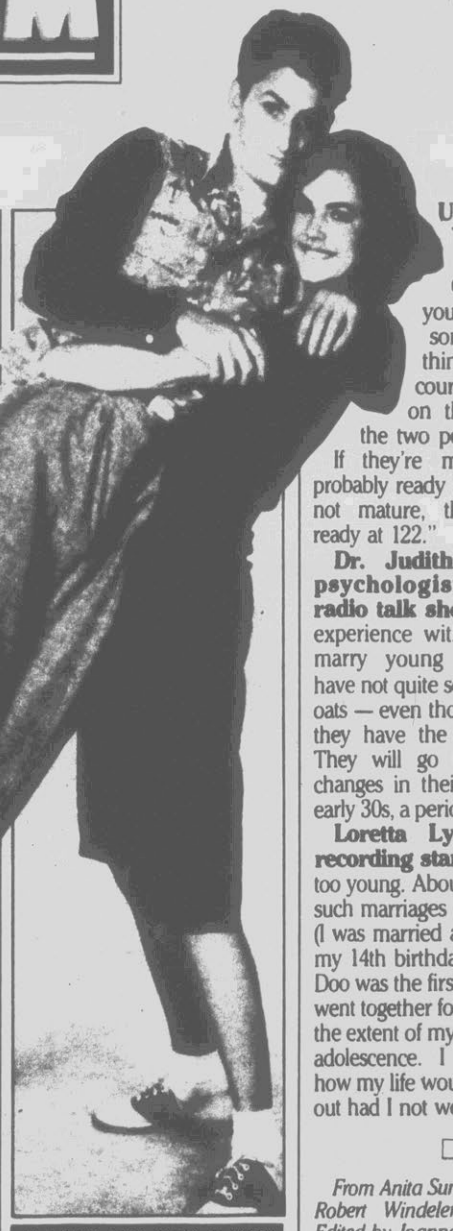

Elizabeth's fears seem to have been justified. She and Sean have since separated. Even so, we wanted an answer to that age-old question, "How young is too young for marriage?" and elicited the opinions of several experts. Of course, Hollywood being Hollywood, Sean and Elizabeth may be re-united by the time you read this.

GAIL: HE'S HOPING FOR A GOOD LONG RUN.

Dr. Joyce Brothers, psychologist: "Teen marriages [17 to 19] present the biggest problems because couples have not yet formed a picture of what they want from life. For example, the beach muscle-man we think is so terrific at 18 is not necessarily the fellow we want as the father of our children. The same for the voluptuous woman on the beach. Because teen marriages have a 50 percent mortality rate, it's generally best to have a few relationships — they don't have to be sexual ones — in order to learn about life, love and people before making a permanent commitment."

Dr. Irene Kassoria, psychologist and author of Go For It: How to Win at Love, Work and Play: "Rather than give my opinion, let me refer to data, taken from thousands of cases, that shows that there's a high probability of divorce with early marriages. When people who are 28 and older marry, there is more of a chance for survival. However, people in love are not interested in data. They follow their hearts, not statistics."

MCGOVERN, PENN: WHEN, IF EVER?

Marvin Mitchelson, divorce attorney: "Penn and McGovern would have been too young to get married. Their careers are squarely in the way. They are both on a meteoric rise, and cannot concentrate on settling down. Their professions will take them to different locations, a situation that is hardly conducive to a good and lasting relationship."

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, psychologist: "I don't agree that 20 is too young. But if a couple thinks they're too young, they're probably right. It's purely a personal opinion."

Margaret Petlicka, director, Family Counseling Unit, New York State Supreme Court: "Too young at 22? I personally do not think so. But of course, it depends on the maturity of the two people involved. If they're mature, they're probably ready at 22. If they're not mature, they won't be ready at 122."

Dr. Judith Kuriansky, psychologist, TV and radio talk show host: "My experience with people who marry young is that they have not quite sowed their wild oats — even though they think they have the perfect union. They will go through many changes in their late 20s and early 30s, a period of transition."

Loretta Lynn, country recording star: "I'd say 22 is too young. About 99 percent of such marriages fail. In my case (I was married a month before my 14th birthday) I was lucky. Doo was the first boy I met. We went together for one month — the extent of my childhood and adolescence. I often wonder how my life would have turned out had I not wed when I did."

BEVERLY SILLS

director of the New York City Opera

How do you relax? — D.I., Trenton, NJ.

By going to the movies. When I have a day off, my husband and I take a newspaper and plan how to see three movies, just by careful timing. Any kind of movies. I like them all — good, bad, indifferent. I enjoy French films, also the old ones. Even though it dates me, I must confess that Jean Gabin is a favorite of mine.

HE ALWAYS DOES IT HIS WAY

BY FRANK SINATRA JR.

I have often thought that it is easier to locate and express our feelings about our mothers than about our fathers. It seems to me that the very thought of motherhood, even for a man, brings to mind an abundance of bright pictures and warm recollections of that very soft person with the loving eyes and gentle hands who dared to experience the fear and pain of giving birth to us in the first place. Mother was the person who had to change our diapers, clean us, feed us, and nurse us back to health when we were ill. Writing about her seems easy. But what can we say about father?

How can we begin to write about that misunderstood man who could get a worried look in his eyes when the bills came due each month? How can we describe the dignified man who nonetheless smiled at the sight of his little girl performing in her first ballet recital or shouted his head off when he saw his son hitting his first home run in Little League.

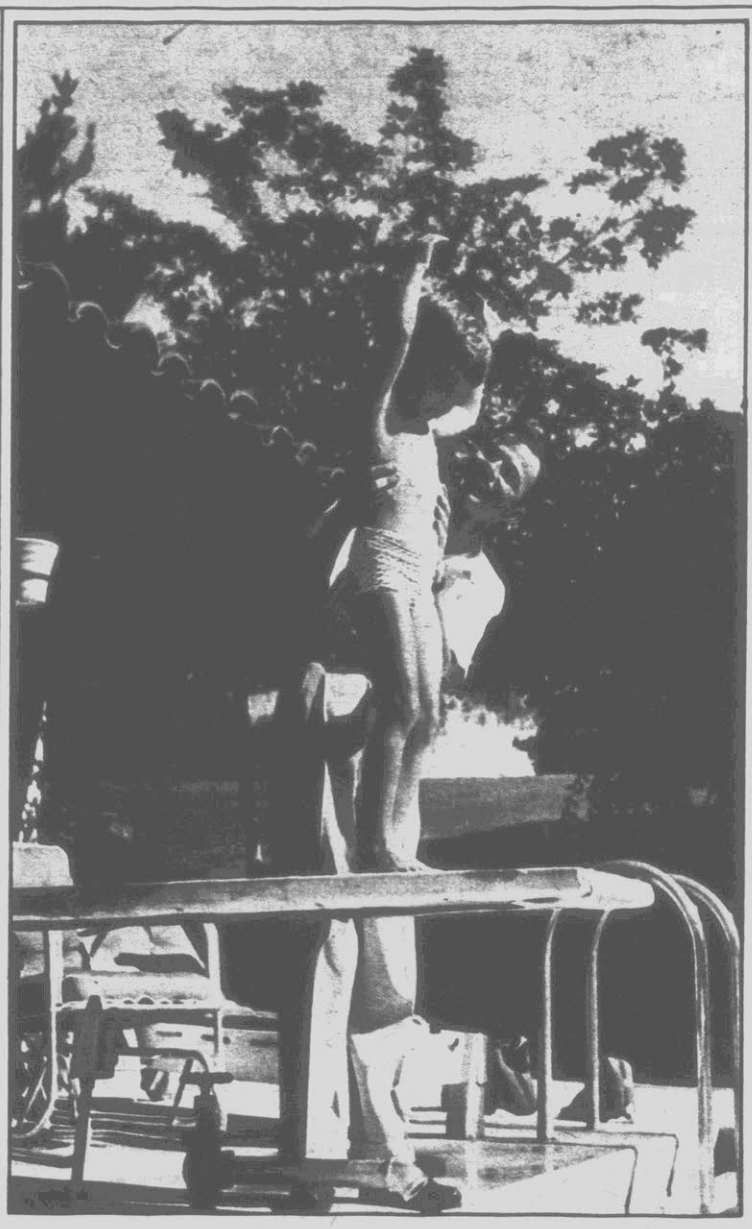

In my case, the problem of expressing the many feelings I hold for my father is compounded. You see, my father is a very famous and complex man. My name is Frank Sinatra Jr.

It's not always easy for one to separate the external man from the internal man, and that's certainly true for me when it comes to talking about my father. He has been called the greatest entertainer of the century — by many people, in many countries, for many decades. That, of course, is a big statement, and is purely subjective, and I'm not going to address it here. This is a story told by a son about the man who brought him into the world.

I suppose my first recollection of Dad dates from the time in my life when I wore knee pants. It was 1947, in Taluca Lake, Calif. My family — my parents, my sister Nancy and I — had come to California because my father's career had brought him into the movies. I spent my toddling years in a lovely home on a street called Valley Spring Lane. I can recall Dad in those days smoking his pipe as he worked at his easel — painting was his hobby. At the time I thought that, compared to the other grownups who often stood around him, he looked terribly thin! Years later, of course, I was to learn that he had become famous, at least in part, for that very characteristic.

On Sunday afternoons he would often load my sister Nancy and me into his black Ford convertible and take us out for a soda. In my mind's eye, I can see him with the sun on his face and the wind blowing his hair, which at that time was dark and curly. Shortly thereafter, he had the pleasure, as he has often remarked, of receiving the best Father's Day present of his life: On Father's Day, June 20, 1948, his beautiful daughter Tina was born.

Now, with his family complete, he moved us from the San Fernando Valley to an old section of West Los Angeles called Holmby Hills. Our home on Carolwood Drive was the most wonderful of estates, situated on beautiful grounds. Nancy and I were now school aged. I can still remember the smiles on my parents faces on those mornings when the two of us would burst into their room, usually at the crack of dawn, and jump on their bed to awaken them. Neither my sister nor I could possibly have forseen that such wonderful experiences would soon vanish from our lives forever.

Around three years after our move to Holmby Hills, our parents went through something that children never understand: divorce. It's not easy for anyone involved, but children have the worst time of all adjusting to the disappearance of one half of their universe. Fortunately, my sisters and I were lucky enough to have two exceptional people as parents, who, through the painful early years of separation, maintained great dignity and protected us from much of the suffering children of divorce experience. My father made every effort, as far as his busy work schedule permitted, to be with us, and I used to feel so very excited on those occasions to be going out to dinner with Daddy.

Whenever my father was involved in a new movie, Nancy and I would always get to see a screening of it before it was released to the public. There was only one exception. In 1955, when Dad starred in a film called The Man With The Golden Arm, we were forbidden to attend. It was not until all of us were older that we were permitted to see a story about a man who was hooked on hard drugs.

During those years we would visit my father on the sets of his pictures, and the memories of those times are among the dearest I have.

"Neither my sister nor I could have forseen that such wonderful experiences would soon vanish forever."

And then there were his records. By the 1950s, the long-playing record was firmly established as the most popular music medium, and we spent many happy nights standing in recording studios watching and listening to my father make his albums, which since that time have become the standard of the industry. This, of course, was also the era of the "loosened tie and hat Sinatra." Whenever Dad came to visit us, Nancy would invariably don his expensive Cavenaugh hat, which would make all of us laugh.

The most memorable night of that period was in the early spring of 1954. Nancy and I were invited to accompany Dad to the Academy Awards. I was a young boy, wearing my first pair of long pants, with very little understanding of the purpose of this event. I knew that something important was going on that night because all during the previous year I had been hearing about my father's performance in the film From Here To Eternity. As the evening progressed, I forgot the crowds of cheering people who filled the stands at the entrance of the old Pantages Theatre on Hollywood Blvd., and thought only that I was getting very sleepy. Suddenly a famous actress named Mercedes Macambridge read the following words from the stage:

Pictorial Parade

"Nominees for the best performance by an actor in a supporting role are...." When she said: "Frank Sinatra for From Here To Eternity," the audience in the theater gave a cheer and broke into spontaneous applause. "And who, please, is the winner?" came from the stage. "The winner is FRANK SINATRA!"

The theater went crazy. Men and women cheered. Tears flowed from faces that had suddenly turned to look at where we were sitting. My father slowly rose from his chair and began the walk to the stage, the greatest walk of his life, to receive his Oscar. On his face was a smile I will remember forever. In those days, when a person won an Academy Award, he was not quickly whisked offstage, never to be seen again during the evening; rather, he was permitted to return to the audience to enjoy the rest of the show. When Dad, carrying his trophy, rejoined Nancy and me, a lovely dark-haired beauty, whose name I learned was Donna Reed, spoke to us in a loud whisper. "Oh! Let me just touch it," she said, and placed a timid hand on the gleaming golden statue. Just a few minutes later, her name was called as the winner for the best performance by an actress in a supporting role for the same film. I can still see the smile on her face as she too began that triumphant walk. From that night on, I never needed anyone to explain to me the meaning of "Oscar Night."

My teen years passed slowly — as they always do. By now, Nancy and Tina had grown into beautiful young women, with a constant brigade of boys in pursuit of them. The hair at my father's temples was taking on a subtle but certain silver cast. The thinness I had noticed in him in earlier years was gone now.

I recall distinctly an afternoon during my 14th summer when, at my father's insistence, the two of us stood before a disgruntled golf pro at a local country club who had been given the unfortunate job of seeing to two things: First, that I, who had never even so much as held a club, learn the game; and second, that Dad, who had never been much good at it, *re*learn the game. Dad tried to take the instructor's advice, but only succeeded in topping the ball. At one point he pulled a divot the size of a skateboard, and then in frustration turned to see how I was doing. "Like this?" I asked the discouraged pro. WACK! I drove the ball over 100 yards with an iron club. Seeing this, Dad, blankfaced, tossed his club up in the air behind him and headed dejectedly into the bar.

The 1960s arrived. I can remember the news photos of Dad with presidential candidate John F. Kennedy. I was now at the end of adolescence and beginning my own career as a traveling musician. This endeavor had only just gotten under way when tragedy struck. In December 1963, while appearing at a resort hotel at Lake Tahoe, Nev., I was kidnapped at gunpoint by three criminals. For nearly four days I was held prisoner by them. I can't begin to describe what it feels like when you are held captive by armed men who have a fondness for radio, so that you hear your own eulogy, tearfully spoken on the news by your friends back home. Seeing the faces of both my parents when the ordeal with my captors was finally over, it seemed that they had aged 10 years. I sometimes wonder if Dad has ever really recovered from the experience. I'm sure that my mother hasn't.

The 1960s, as anybody who lived through them remembers, were a time of turbulence and unrest for all age groups. My father, who by the end of the decade had spent 25 years constantly working, was growing tired of the pressures; by the early 70s, he was ready for an indefinite rest.

In 1971 he shocked the world — and me with it — by going into retirement. During that time I saw very little of him, as he had a lot of living to catch up on. As a traveling singer, I understood his feelings, even though I'd only been working for 10 years..

It was the spring of 1974 when I, again working at Lake Tahoe, was called to the telephone to hear the news from his own lips. "I'm going back to work," he said. I congratulated him on his decision. "Yeah," he said. "I'm getting tired of golf."

"All that golf must be tough to take, particularly for a scratch player like you," I jibed.

"Don't be a smart ass!" he roared. Then we both laughed.

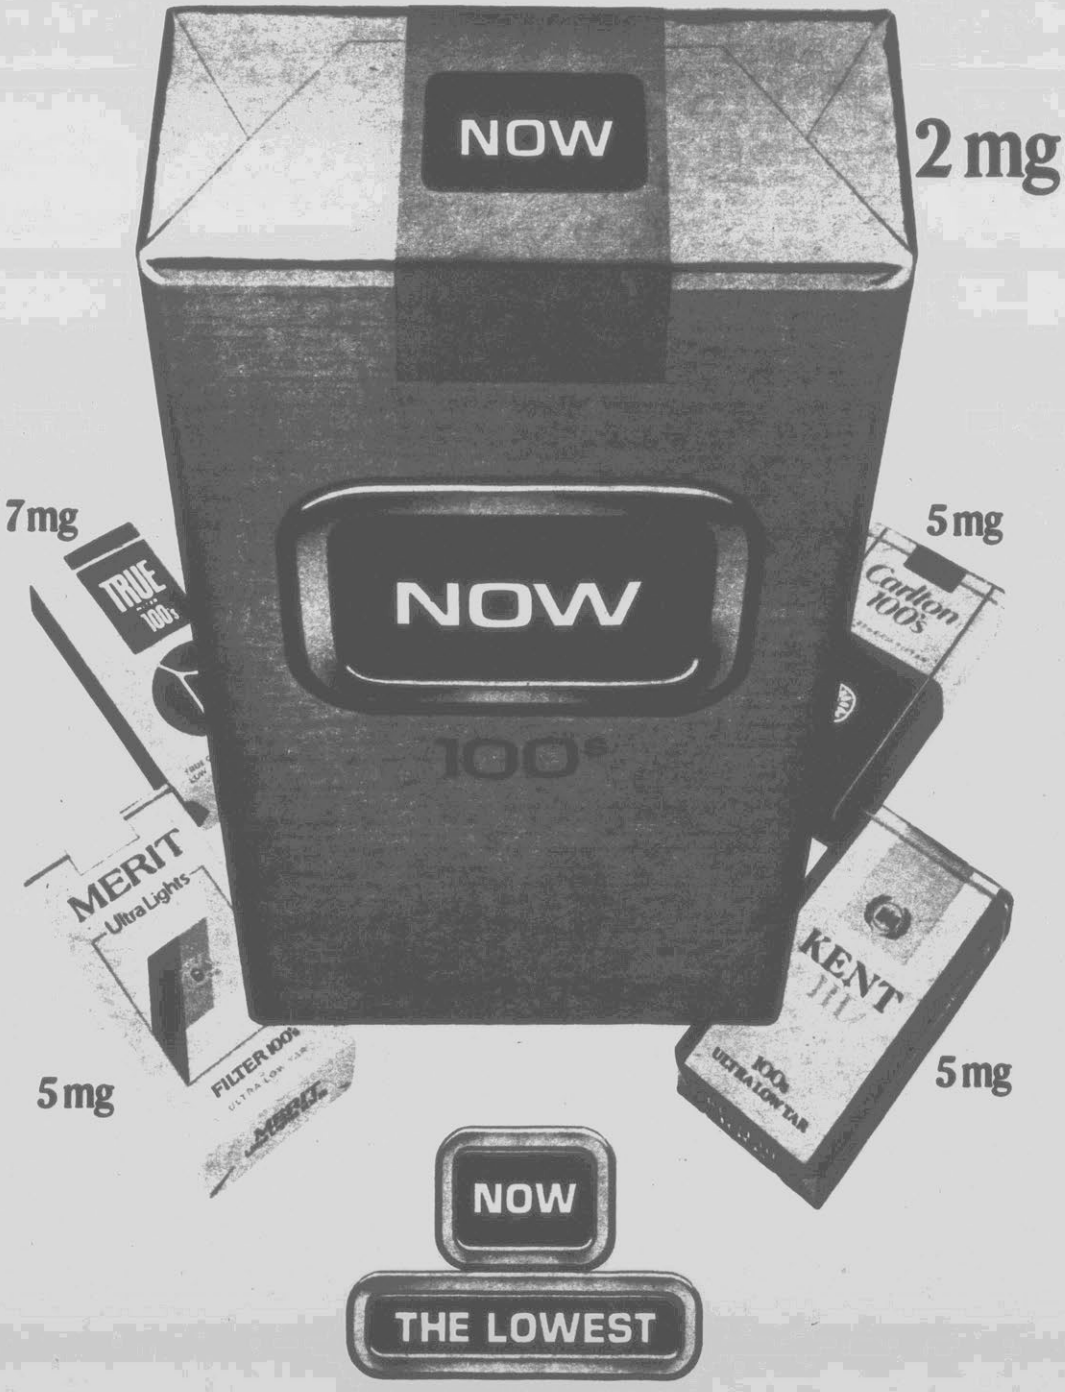

In 1977, tragedy struck again. Only this time my family was not as lucky as we had been when I was kidnapped 14 years earlier. On a winter afternoon over the desert near Palm Springs, Calif., a small airplane that was carrying my grandmother to Las Vegas, where Dad was performing, crashed into the snow-covered side of San Gorgonio Mountain. All aboard were killed. My father was devastated. The days that followed were the worst I had known. My father said nothing for hours at a time, and all of us who were nearby felt helpless to find any way to ease his agony. His mother's funeral was one of the most somber I ever attended. Dad stared vacant-eyed at the casket covered with flowers in the very church that had been built with funds raised largely by his mother's efforts. Back at his home after the terrible hour at graveside, I felt it best not to leave him alone. Sitting with him and watching the tears roll one by one down his face made me feel even more desolate than I had on the night the kidnappers dragged me out into the snow half dressed.

Now it is 1984. In recent times I have witnessed tributes, banquets, parties and accolades by the hundreds, including the Kennedy Center Lifetime Achievement Honor, awarded by President Reagan. I have watched as great honors have been bestowed by heads of state, various charity groups, and the millions of wonderful and loyal Sinatra fans who have stayed with him through all the years. As of this writing I am 40 years old. As a middle-aged adult, I look back on the years of my life with Dad and feel a special kind of nostalgia. He is the source of the inner strength I manage always to find when the going gets hard — as it so often does. I am forever impressed by his Herculean will, which somehow coexists in the same man who has a deep compassion for others. Orson Welles, his friend of some 45 years, put it best when he said on network television in 1979, "He is ferocious in his loyalty to the people and the things he believes in."

My own personal message to Dad on the special day of the year set aside for all fathers: I love you, Buddy, and I'm so proud of the man you are and have always been that I'm damned if I might not bust my buttons. FW

TAKES THE GUESSWORK OUT OF A LOW-SODIUM DIET

If you're on a low-sodium or salt-free diet, you don't need to be told how important it is to know the sodium content of the food you eat. You probably already own a book that tells you the amount of sodium in an ounce of celery, 3 oz. of beef, an apple and other basic foods.

But what about a 6 oz. can of tomato paste? One well known brand has only 24 mg. (milligrams) of sodium. But another famous brand contains 450 mg. of sodium — almost 20 times as much.

Or take mayonnaise. A leading brand contains 80 mg. sodium per tablespoon. But one diet brand has 50% more sodium (124 mg. per thsp.) while another brand has over 95% less (3 mg. per tbsp.)

As you can see, a lot of variation is possible from one brand to the next. And now you don't have to guess any more. Not when you own a copy of The Barbara Kraus Sodium Guide to Brand Names and Basic Foods.

This book includes sodium counts for basic foods. And then keeps going, with thousands of sodium counts for brand name food products. You get nearly 6,000 listings in all, organized in dictionary form for quick and easy reference.

MODERN TECHNOLOGY MADE SIMPLE

COMPUTERS OF THE FUTURE: WILL THEY NEED US?

By Gordon Williams

It's become a cliche that today's computers are marvels. They're crammed with millions of electronic devices on silicon chips no bigger than lima beans, and are so swift, their computing speed is measured in billionths-of-a-second. But there are limits to how many electronic devices can fit on a silicon chip, and limits to how fast and powerful we can make computers, using existing technology. Besides, as efficient as today's computers are, they mostly do things you could do with paper and a pencil. They can add and subtract at super speeds, but they can't reason things out, and they can't learn.

In light of this, scientists are working to develop super computers that will be far faster and more complex: able to think and reason. They would be so powerful that no computing problem, no matter how difficult, would exceed their ability. Yet they would be made so minute, they could fit into our bodies — perhaps, for instance, to serve as "eyes" for a blind person.

The building block of our present computer is the silicon chip, with all the necessary electronic circuitry etched on its surface. The building block of the computer of the future would be a molecule, bred to perform some specific electronic function. A billion molecules would take no more space than a silicon chip, and the molecular computer would be a billion times faster and more powerful than existing computers.

No human could work with anything that tiny, so scientists will use genetic technology to make these molecular computers build themselves. In one theory, organic materials — marvelous new proteins — would be blended together in a biological stew to form "biochips." Whatever functions you wanted a biochip to perform, you'd program them in when you were growing the molecules.

One immediate advantage is that a biochip would be three-dimensional, with vastly greater capacity than a two-dimensional silicon chip. No one has built a molecular computer yet, but the model for one certainly exists. It's the human brain.

Biophysicist James McAlear and electrical engineer John Wehrung have spent a decade working on the biochip at their Gentronix Laboratories in Rockville, Md. McAlear has no doubt that a biochip computer can be built — not overnight, but in stages, with the power and speed of the computer gaining 1000-fold at each stage. He thinks we'll have the full-blown biochip computer around the dawn of the 21st century. Even before that, McAlear expects to see computers that far surpass the power of the human brain. "Anything is possible in a system you grow yourself," he says.

In the meantime, computer technologists are working to build bigger silicon chips. Trilogy Systems, of Cupertino, Calif., wants to make super chips with as many electronic devices as you'd find on 100 small chips. That would make for more speed and more computing muscle — but it's harder than it sounds. Computer makers use small chips, not so much to save space, but because big chips are harder to make. Other computer makers have tried to make super chips and failed, and Trilogy now says that its first big-chip computer won't be ready before 1987.

But even super chips would only be an improvement on what we have today — not a grand breakthrough to the future. And what we have today are not-so-smart, not-so-efficient computers that can do very simple tasks very quickly: calculating payrolls, counting up all the widgets in a warehouse. For the super chores that lie ahead — from tiny computers that could be implanted in our bodies to monitor our health or enhance our intellects, to super, super computers that will guide spaceships to the most distant stars — we need something faster, more powerful and much smarter.

That something may well be a molecular computer based on a biochip that grows itself — even if the first biochip hasn't been made, and the genetic technology needed to make one still doesn't exist.

But even if the first biochip computer is years off in the future, "you know it's the way it ought to happen," says Martin Cooper, former head of research and development at Motorola Inc., who now has his own company in the cellular telephone business. "You need a new technique," says Cooper, "and the new technique is to grow them." FW

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

RUTH BELL GRAHAM

AN EXCLUSIVE CONVERSATION ABOUT BEAUTY, BELIEF AND BILLY

Billy Graham, America's first and foremost electronic evangelist, is known the world over. Yet Ruth Bell Graham, his wife of 41 years, has consistently declined to share his global limelight. Now, after decades spent raising their five children and working behind the scenes with both the faithful and the faithless, she has reluctantly allowed her biography to be written. The book, A Time For Remembering (Harper & Row), by Patricia Daniels Cornwell, constitutes the first in-depth public account of Mrs. Graham and her marriage. Now 64, she is a true believer who speaks softly but carries a big smile. Having previously declined, out of shyness, to discuss the book with the media, she agreed to an interview while in Dallas with writer Kathy Lowry for FAMILY WEEKLY in order to "share with others the good of God in my life."

The Grahams outside their N.C. home.

Lowry: Why did you decide to let someone write your biography?
Graham: Patricia Cornwell is a longtime friend who just talked me into it. But if I'd known what an invasion of privacy it would be, I never would have agreed.

Q: How can you be so lovely and not be vain?
Graham: That's a sweet way to put it. I don't really know. I've always found others more interesting than myself.

Q: What kind of suits do you buy for Billy?
Graham: He likes polyester because it travels so nicely; it doesn't wrinkle. I like it, too—now that they're making it so well. The wrinkled, saggy look is fine when your skin isn't wrinkled and saggy, but when it is, you need a little contrast!...Bless his heart, he's so neat on the platform, and at home he's such a slob....His appearance just isn't a priority.

Q: What is Billy Graham vain about — his oratory?
Graham: Oh, he's not really even proud of that, because he realizes that he's not the world's greatest preacher. I've heard many preachers greater than him; absolutely! I think it's his faithfulness to the Bible in his sermons that accounts for his success, because God honors that.

Q: I was surprised to read that your lifestyle isn't that extravagant. You live in a big log cabin in the North Carolina woods.
Graham: That's right. I think Muhammad Ali imagined we had a 1,000-acre farm and that he would be met at the airport by a chauffeured limousine. He said it was the kind of house a man of God should live in, but he graciously refused Billy's invitation to spend the night there.

Q: You chose to have five children, which meant you couldn't travel with Billy. Why?
Graham: I wish we'd had even more, but things were always too hectic. It's true our separations have been painful, but I'd rather have a little bit of Billy than a whole lot of some lesser man.

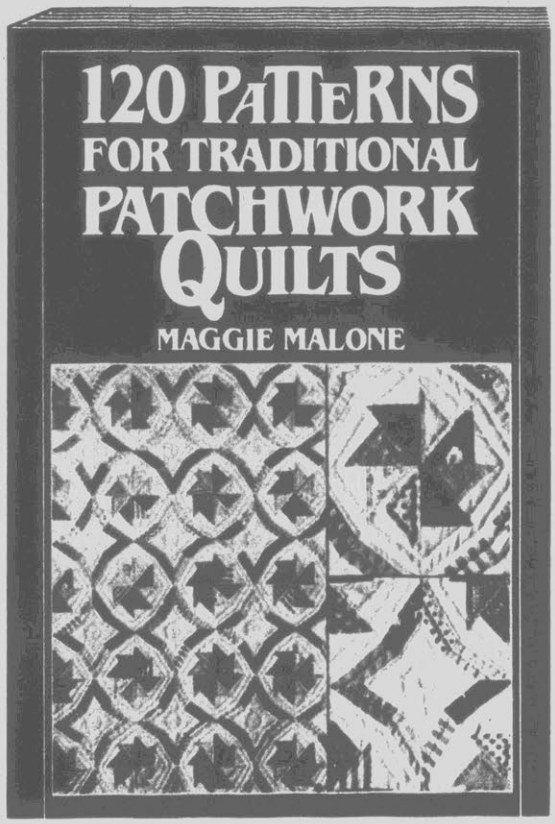

Q: Why have you remained a Presbyterian, refusing to switch to Billy's Baptist faith?
Graham: I could more easily be Episcopalian or Anglican than Baptist. Billy used to be criticized for not converting me, but then people can always find something to take issue with.

Q: What do you think of the Moral Majority?
Graham: Well, I agree with some of the stands they take, but I'm not so sure that we Christians have the right to dictate to non-Christians how to behave.

Graham: Yes, that's what the Bible teaches.

Graham: (Laughing) Oh, I'm sure God has a way of evening the score! Once, a man on an airplane asked me what I'd think if Idi Amin converted on his death bed, and I told him I'd be tempted to believe in Purgatory! FW

WHIZ QUIZ

THE INSIDE STORY ON EXTRAVERSION

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Introverts are generally smarter than extraverts.
2. It's harder for an extravert than for an introvert to keep a secret.
3. People tend to become more introverted as they grow older.
4. Your chances of having a drinking problem may be significantly influenced by whether you're an introvert or an extravert.
5. Introverts are more likely to have extrasensory perception.
6. Because they tend to be aggressive, extraverts are generally less popular than introverts.

ANSWERS

1. False. Personality Variables in Social Behavior, compiled by University of Maryland psychologist Thomas Blass, concluded that, "Overall, extraverts and introverts do not differ in intelligence. However... performance on tasks such as those found in IQ tests may be broken down into at least three components: speed, accuracy and persistence. When this is done, extraverts are found to be faster, but less accurate and less persistent, than introverts."
2. True. Studies at the University of Manitoba (Canada) showed that it's much easier to worm the truth out of an extravert. Introverts are more secretive and more inclined to be on guard when questioned about their feelings, attitudes and actions. The extravert, on the other hand, often wears his heart on his sleeve and finds it difficult to conceal his feelings from others.
3. True. France's Fondation Nationale de Gerontologie administered a battery of standard personality tests to over 2,000 men and women ranging in age from 29 to 88 years. Results showed that older subjects were not only more introverted, they were more rigid-minded and firm in their beliefs, and less apt to be affected by others.
4. True. Introverts are likely to drink more than extraverts. In a study conducted at Washington State University, a group of people with drinking difficulties and a group without such problems were studied. The group that had trouble with alcohol tended to be inward-oriented while the moderate drinkers were more out-going. It is also harder for introverts to overcome alcohol abuse.
5. False. Extraverts have the edge in this category. Behavioral scientists at Cambridge University (England) studied the relationship between the way people relate to the world and extrasensory perception tasks. Extraverts consistently performed such tests better.
6. False. Psychologists at the University of Missouri looked into the differences between popular and unpopular undergraduates. The more popular students were likely to be described in terms that suggested extraversion. They were characterized as sociable, friendly, relaxed, happy-go-lucky and outgoing. FW

Guaranteed Weight Loss With Advanced 24 Hr. DCP/2000™

In 30 Days, You'll Lose 20 to 50 Pounds of Fat*

New Foolproof Weight Loss System Features DiCellulite 2000 AM/PM™— The Miracle Diet Tablets That Weren't Expected Until the Year 1990!

"Just 2 tablets a day..."

- NO CALORIE COUNTING
- NO EXERCISING
- NO HUNGER PANGS

by Paula Levey, President National Health Products, Inc.

This is a long story.

If you read it all the way through, that's proof you're seriously considering losing weight. If you have at least 15 or more pounds to lose, we've advanced the scientific timetable by half a decade to make it easy for you — so easy we'll refund twice what you pay for this program if it fails you. How can we make this astounding guarantee and still stay in business? Simple!

You may have seen our ads across the country during our test market last year. Here are the results — "Of the tens of thousands who ordered DiCellulite, 97.2 out of every 100 customers lost the excess fat and weight they desired without hunger pangs or lack of energy." Yes, it really does work. And DCP/2000™ will work for you too (even if other programs have failed you).

The 24-hr. effective combination of ingredients will help you lose weight all day and all night. EVEN WHILE YOU SLEEP!

EIGHT EFFECTIVE COMPONENTS
Weight Loss Experts Say:
"Here's the magic formula —"

AM FORMULA

Each morning when you take your AM tablet, you'll feel it begin to work within minutes. Your own body chemistry will activate its special timeclock which will work all day to help you lower your caloric intake. You'll eat 3 hardy meals a day without fear or guilt! DCP/2000 AM gives your willpower a tremendous boost and contains no caffeine or stimulants that can make you jittery.

PM FORMULA

The seven ingredient PM tablet is a complex of amino acids and other elements that are often deficient during a rapid weight-loss cycle. Amino-therapy is the latest discovery in the all-natural health and life extension field. Here's how this tablet can help you:

DCP/2000PM-1 A fat mobilizer. This ingredient helps make it easy for the fat to leave your body. You'll get rid of body fat easily, naturally, and without even knowing it.

DCP/2000PM-2 A gentle diuretic. This ingredient maintains proper body water levels, preventing fluid buildup and the uncomfortable bloated feeling that goes with it.

DCP/2000PM-3 An essential amino acid. Lack of this element in your metabolism can mean uneven moods, low energy, and lack of vitality and sex drive. You'll love the new you.

DCP/2000PM-4 A super energy lift. This complex group of aminos helps you feel peppier and happier. You may not crave sweets for that often needed boost of energy. You'll love it!

DCP/2000PM-5 A natural fiber. This ingredient is one you know well. It helps clean the digestive tract. You'll feel more alive than you have for years.

AND THAT'S ONLY THE BEGINNING

DCP/2000 is only half the story. National Health Products adds to the miraculous DCP/2000 a weight loss system so simple, so basic and so logical, you'll wonder why it hasn't been this easy for you before. The DCP/2000 system is so powerful in stripping the fat off your body we're not at all afraid to offer you DOUBLE YOUR MONEY back if it doesn't work exactly as we say it does, without hunger pangs or discomfort.

- How long has it been since you could wear the size you wore when you went to school?
- How long has it been since you looked in the mirror without thinking, "One of these days I'll get rid of these bulges?"
- How long has it been since you were able to grasp your waistline or thigh and not have a handful of flab?

Here's a suggestion. Circle these questions with a red pen or pencil, then look at them again two months after starting the DCP/2000 Weight Loss System.

Unless you have no commitment at all or deliberately try to scuttle your own progress, you'll be happier than you've been since, pound by pound and inch by inch you lost the slim trimness you used to have — and can have again!

I promise you.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

FUNGUS AMONG US

Talk about Pandora's Box! The horrors unleashed by that curious maiden might be eclipsed by a thaw of Pennsylvania State University's deep freezer. What they've got, safely chilled to minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit, is the largest collection of fungi anywhere in the world. Seems that the scientists there specialize in fungus analysis. (What do you think they tell their mothers they do for a living?) So people from all over send them their growths.

Samples are frozen for future reference. All a scientist need do to refresh his memory about a particular mold is pull out the vial, let it thaw and, voila! instant fungus. The various types of fungi include varieties that do damage to plants, to animals, and even to humans. But don't worry, the researchers are keeping their blights to themselves. They do report, however, that the number of hospitals sending them cultures for examination is mushrooming daily.

FULL HOUSE

There's good news about the American family. Today there are more dads around and, as a result, more kids are growing up in families headed by both parents than ever before. Edward Kain, an assistant professor of human development at Cornell University, has found that though divorce rates have risen steadily over the course of this century, the mortality rate of middle-aged parents — particularly fathers — has declined. This means that there are now more complete households than ever.

In 1900, seven out of 10 marriages were interrupted by death or divorce before the children were grown. By 1940, the percentage of disrupted families was down to 63. And by the late '70s, the number of one-parent homes had declined to six in ten. Happy Fathers Day, Dad.

WANNA BET?

For centuries people have been putting money on the ponies — and, mostly, losing it. Well, here comes the computer age to the rescue of the habitual loser. Through the analysis of high-speed videotapes of the strides of horses running in Triple Crown races, George Pratt has been able to pick at least one winner of a Triple Crown race for each of the last four years.

Pratt, who is an engineer at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, scrutinizes the gaits of horses with the assistance of a computer. He started with the 1973 Marlborough Cup race between Triple Crown winner Secretariat and rival Riva Ridge. His study showed that Secretariat won because he was more efficient, with one leg leaving the ground almost precisely as the next one was touching down. Of a .43 second stride, Secretariat's legs overlapped for only .081 second compared to Riva Ridge's tardy .117 overlap.

Pratt doesn't propose using his technique to make wagers at the track. But he has helped potential horse buyers to decide which animals to bid for and, more often, which horses to avoid being saddled with.

MICKEY MOUSE REPORT?

Is Walt Disney dangerous? That's sort of like asking if Mom's apple pie is toxic. But according to a report issued by the National Coalition on Television Violence (NCTV) — which has been getting a lot of publicity recently — much of the programming on the cable Disney Channel contains "harmful violence."

For the past five years, NCTV has been monitoring levels of violence on both cable and network television. The coalition singled out the recent Disney movies The Black Hole and Tron for criticism, saying they teach violence as a way to cope with difficulties. But it was Disney cartoons that really got their dander up: "Donald Duck's many fights with his unruly nephew ducks, Casey Jones beating up train robbers, and Mickey Mouse fighting with a mother eagle for her eggs were considered inappropriate."

The coalition's report, based entirely on the findings of just four part-time monitors, is scoffed at by the folks at Disney, who cite the endorsement of their programs by both the National Education Association and the National Parent-Teacher Association. Experts in the communications field, too, have questioned the coalition's methods and motivations. Maybe Mickey can forever hold his banner high.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT STARTS IN SURPRISE WHEN KAREN'S FRIEND ALP ARSLAN SLIPS INTO "SIR TRUEHEART'S" TENT. STATE PAPERS MUST BE BROUGHT FROM THE MISTY ISLES TO QUEEN ALETA, AND VAL LEARNS THAT ALP HAD BEGGED TO BE ENTRUSTED WITH THIS TASK. "THIS MORNING I ARRIVED," ALP CONTINUES, "AND WHAT IS THE FIRST THING I SEE....

".... BUT KAREN ENTRANCED BY SOME PRETTY BOY'S CHARMS. PERHAPS IT IS VALETA, I TOLD MYSELF. A SCULLERY MAID SAID OTHERWISE.

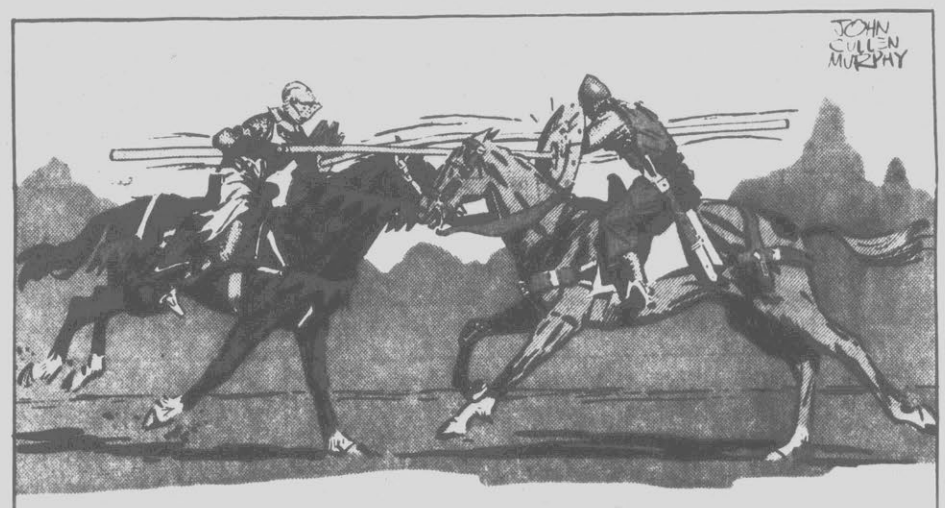

"WHY... WHY, I HAVE BEEN BETRAYED!" ALP CRIES. "MY HONOR HAS BEEN BESMIRCHED. WHEN I SAW SIR TRUEHEART INJURED IN THE MELEE, I THOUGHT TO TAKE HIS PLACE AND HUMBLE THE FIEND MARCUS. THAT IS WHAT BRINGS ME HERE. BUT INSTEAD OF SIR TRUEHEART I FIND YOU."

"YOU ALSO FIND ME WITH A USELESS ARM," SAYS VAL, "SO SIR TRUEHEART YOU MAY NOW BECOME." AS ALP ARSLAN QUICKLY DONS VAL'S ARMOR, MARCUS TAUNTS ONCE MORE FROM WITHOUT THE TENT. "COME, COME, OLD MAN, ARE YOU AFRAID TO ACCEPT MY CHALLENGE?"

NOW THE CHALLENGER AND HIS OPPONENT ENTER THE LISTS. MARCUS BOWS TO KAREN. ALP ARSLAN, AS SIR TRUEHEART, TIPS HIS LANCE TO VALETA, WHOSE COLORS HE WEARS. PERHAPS, ALP THINKS TO HIMSELF, HE MIGHT GIVE THAT SHY YOUNG WOMAN A SECOND LOOK. THE CROWD RISES TO ITS FEET AS THE COMBATANTS MAKE THE FIRST PASS, ONE HURTLING TO GLORY, THE OTHER TO DEFEAT.
