MEMBERS SWORN IN ... Three re-elected city school board members and two new members appointed by the Greenville City Council were sworn in by Pitt County Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins, right, on Tuesday night.

New Members Take Seats On City's Education Board

By JERRY RAYNOR

Two new members and three re-elected members to the Greenville Board of Education were sworn in by Pitt County Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins at the action meeting of the city school board Tuesday night.

The two new members, appointed by the city council for a four-year term of office are Martha Coffman and Francis Mebane. The three re-elected members are Lena Brown, Jack Wall and Sue Zadeits.

Mrs. Coffman has long been active in committees, groups and organizations supporting the city schools. She is also active in a number of other community affairs. Mebane is a retired educator with 40 years service including nine years a principal at H.B. Sugg School and 14 years as an administrator at Beaufort Community College.

Two members going off the board, Ernest Brown and Jerry Smith, were recognized by Chairman Jack Wall for service to the board. Brown had served for four years, and Smith for six years. Both were defeated in recent bids for re-election to the school board.

The board was informed that County Attorney W.H. Watson has recommended that the Pitt County Board of Commissioners deny the school board's request to withdraw its 1984-85 budget for further study.

In a June 11 memorandum to the County Commissioners and County Manager Reginald Gray, Watson wrote, "It is my opinion that there is no statutory authority for the withdrawal of the budget request by the city of Greenville Board of Education as contemplated in the (city school board's) resolution."

Watson further noted his opinion was "confirmed by the North Carolina Attorney General Andrew Vanore, who states that there is, in his opinion, no statutory authority for the withdrawal of the budget request."

The memorandum was forwarded to city school board chairman Jack Wall as an attachment to a letter from R.L. (Bob) Martin, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

In his June 12 letter, Martin stated the County Commissioners "therefore, must proceed with the budget process and it is the intent of the board to adopt the budget for 1984-85 fiscal year by July 1, 1984, as is required by law."

Superintendent Dr. Delma Blinson told the board that at this time he had not received a copy of the budget recommendations and therefore had no knowledge of the status of the city school's budget request. He said he had been told a copy of the county manager's recommendation was on file at the library and at the Chamber of Commerce office. Blinson said he and Finance Officer Naomi Edwards were making a study of the recommendation from the public posted copy. Further discussion of the budget status was made during executive session with city board

Court Delays Acceptance

Greene Pleads Guilty To Murders In Bethel

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Harvey Lee Greene Jr. pleaded guilty to two counts of murder and two counts of common law robbery in Pitt County Superior Court this morning.

But Judge Thomas S. Watts said he would not accept the guilty pleas until a hearing to suppress evidence in the trial is concluded to insure Greene's constitutional rights had not been violated during investigation of the case.

Greene is on trial in the Dec. 19 death and robbery of two people at a Bethel dry cleaners.

Greene, 23, admitted to the robbery and murder of Sheila Marlene Bland and John Michael Edmondson and led officers to the site where he said he had disposed of the murder weapon, Bethel Police Chief Jerome K. "Jerry" Ratley testified Monday.

During preliminary proceedings, Ratley was questioned about the events that led up to Greene's written statement in connection with the double slaying in Young's Cleaners.

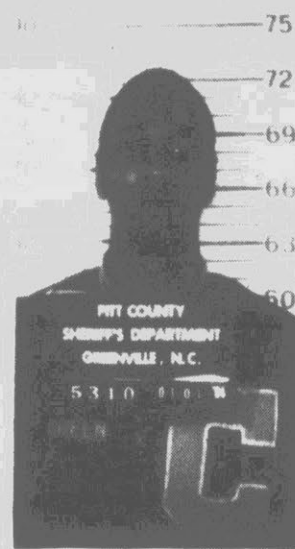

Ratley said Greene cooperated with the investigating officers, even turning over the clothes he said he wore the night the murders took place. The police chief said Greene was informed of his rights and that no force or offer of reward was used to coerce Greene into making a statement.

A motion made by the defense to suppress a written statement signed by Greene is being considered by Judge Watts. In a pretrial motion, defense lawyers maintained that Greene was not properly informed of his rights.

During his testimony, Ratley stated that Greene had said, "Man, I'm the one that done them things ... them murders at the cleaners."

Greene became a suspect in the case when a clerk at a local grocery store reported he had cashed in rolls of pennies twice. The manager of the dry cleaners said that rolled coins were missing from the counter under the cash register.

Ratley testified that Greene was first questioned Dec. 31 and that the defendant signed a statement about the murders on Jan. 1. The statement was not read to the court.

Following an afternoon conference with the attorneys, a recess was called until this morning. A conference between Greene and his attorneys continued after court reopened today.

Greene and his lawyers returned to the courtroom at 10:30 a.m. and his plea of guilty to the murder and common law robbery charges was announced.

Judge Watts told Greene that he would reject the guilty pleas if the hearing show that Greene's rights had been violated. But the judge suggested that he would be inclined to accept the plea if Greene's rights had not been violated.

Judge Watts told Greene that the minimum sentence he could receive on the murder charges is life in prison, with "the maximum possible punishment of death," either by inhaling gas or lethal injection.

The judge said the issue of punishment would be decided by the jury after it heard testimony during the sentencing phase of the trial.

The jury selected last week to hear the case was scheduled to return to court at mid-afternoon, after being dismissed after court opened this morning.

The hearing on the admissibility of evidence was continuing at noon today.

County Authorizes Study Of Telephones

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, after hearing a report Monday on the first phase of a telephone system study, authorized a Virginia firm to design a new telecommunications system for the county and to take bids for its implementation.

Officials of Telephone Consultants of Virginia, a Richmond firm, said the Phase I overview of the county's present system indicated the system in the county office building needs to be replaced or upgraded and expanded, and said telephone systems at the health and mental health departments are inadequate and need to be replaced.

The consultants also suggested that county offices in downtown Greenville which now have separate telephone systems — such as the tax supervisor and collector, the sheriff's department, Board of Elections and register of deeds — should be served from a single new switchboard.

The study suggested that new and well-planned systems could cut the number of trunk lines now leased by the county and allow automatic processing of long distance calls on the least costly types of lines.

The consultants suggested that if the present telephone system in the county office building is replaced, it might serve the needs of the health and mental health departments.

The study also suggested linking all county locations to a central call accounting system which would record the time of call, the location from which the call was made, the number called and the cost of the call.

Personal Incomes Increase Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose 0.6 percent in May, the same as the month before, but wages and salaries grew much more slowly than in April, the government reported today.

Consumers' spending also slowed in May, said the Commerce Department report, which seemed to be in line with the widespread view of government and private economists that the economic recovery is slackening.

Providing more evidence of such slowing, the department said in a separate report that the rate of housing starts dropped 10.5 percent in May after rising 19.7 percent the month before. Permits for new construction declined a slight 1.3 percent in May.

The income report said total personal income increased to an annual rate of $2.98 trillion in May. Personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything but interest payments on debt, rose 1.1 percent to an annual rate of $2.43 trillion after rising 1.6 percent in April.

Residents Balk At Garbage Fees

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The city's proposal to raise additional revenue through the creation of a garbage fee was met with some resistance during a public hearing on the proposed 1984-85 fiscal budget Monday night.

During the hearing, Randy Martin of 3102 Gordon Drive told members of the City Council that he agreed with Councilman Louis Clark's early June statement in favor of getting the needed revenue entirely through a property tax increase instead of through the creation of new charges. Martin added that the proposed garbage collection fee "deserves to be buried in the landfill with the rest of our garbage."

Martin also opposed giving

$250,000 to the Parks and Recreation Department to build a nature center at River Park North. "What you should do is tell Parks and Recreation that they should raise one-half of the money just like the East Carolina Vocational Center did, and then give them matching funds," Martin suggested.

Patricia Dunn of 1103 Ragsdale Road also questioned the council's wisdom in proposing collection fees and asked the council whether the refuse pick up fee was in reality a charge for services. She pointed out that to be fair, fees would have to be based on the number of times garbage was picked up at a location. "Otherwise it would be a form of taxation that is actually regressive," she said.

Runoff Set

The State Board of Elections today set July 17 as the runoff date for the 6th House District seat involving Democratic candidates L.M. "Mutt" Brinkley and Joe Parker, both of Ahoskie.

Brinkley led a three-candidate race in the May 8 primary while Parker finished second and William D. Harrison of Williamston placed third. Parker called for a runoff with Brinkley, but Harrison challenged the results of the election.

The district includes Carolina and Bethel townships in Pitt County, Hertford County and portions of Martin and Bertie counties.

Upset Cable Knocks Out Power

Electrical service to a large area of eastern Greenville and Pitt County was interrupted early today when a construction worker unearthed underground power cables on Cedar Lane, Greenville Utilities officials reported.

According to GUC electrical superintendent Malcolm Green, at 7:55 a.m. a construction worker using heavy machinery dug up some priority cables located in a ditch on Cedar Lane near a development project, shorting one of the wires. Power was out briefly to residents in the Brook Valley, Windy Ridge, Simpson and 10th Street areas, said Green.

"At 7:55 a.m. the computer told us we had an outage, and we sent out an engineer who lived nearby out to check it out," Greene said. "In seven-10 minutes we had power restored to 80 percent of the customers and in 30 minutes we had everyone back on."

Green said the cables were plotted on a construction map the worker had and were also marked with a series of flags. "We had engineers go over there yesterday and mark the location with flags," Green said. "What happened was the worker actually dug up one of the flags and the wire was directly underneath."

"Incidents like this make it hard for us (GUC) when we're trying to give good service and build a reputation for reliability," Green said. "We did everything we could to give the worker the exact location of the cable. It's frustrating for us (GUC) to deal with episodes like this."

HOME FREE

The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) and the Trailways Corporation has established a program titled "Operation Home Free" to aid in reuniting runaway children with their families. Any child identified by a member department of the the IACP as a runaway will be given free transport aboard a Trailways bus to his or her home community.

According to IACP statistics, more than 1 million children are reported missing each year. Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said his department is a member of IACP and he sees this as a worthwhile program, one in which the department will participate. Anyone wishing to and qualifying to use it is encouraged to contact the police department.

Reagan Will Give Daughter Away

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will give away his daughter, Patti Davis, when she weds Paul Grilley in a private ceremony in the garden of the Hotel Bel-Air in Los Angeles on Aug. 14, the White House announced Monday.
It will be the first marriage for both Miss Davis, 31, and her fiancé, a 25-year-old yoga instructor. Their engagement was announced April 11.
He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Terrance F. Grilley of Columbia Falls, Mont., who will attend the wedding.
The Rev. Donn Moomaw, pastor of the Bel Air Presbyterian Church, which the Reagans used to attend, will officiate. A dinner will follow in the hotel.

Sheila Tate, press secretary to Nancy Reagan, said invitations have been mailed to about 100 or 125 people.
Reagan met Grilley for the first time during Christmas at the White House. Miss Davis has known him for a year.
The bridesmaids are Doria Reagan, the wife of Reagan's brother, Ron, and Lanetta Wahlgren, a close childhood friend from Santa Monica, Calif. The groomsmen are Michael Grilley, the groom's brother, and Michael Stratton, the groom's best friend from Jackson, Texas.
Mrs. Tate said the guests are people who have been "personally important to Patti." They include her godmother, actress Colleen Moore; her dentist, Paul Schick; the Reagans' longtime housekeeper, Anne Allman; the Reagans' ranch foreman, Barney Barnett, and A.C. Lyles, whom the first lady described as the first person to visit her in the hospital after Patti's birth.

The couple plans to live in Santa Monica after the wedding, which Mrs. Tate said will be traditional. She said the first lady will dine with her daughter and prospective son-in-law when she travels to California later this week.
The bride's wedding dress, designed by Zaharoff, a friend of Patti's from Chicago, was described as a long, white, off-the-shoulder gown of lace and silk charmeuse with seed pearls. The bridesmaids will wear long coral silk charmeuse gowns.

Jay-C-Ettes Will Help Ronald

The Greenville Jay-C-Ettes recently heard Cathy Brown, program coordinator for the Ronald McDonald House, discuss plans for the proposed home-away-from-home for families of children hospitalized at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.
The Jay-C-Ettes voted to support the project with a barbecued chicken dinner to be held Sept. 7. Advance tickets will be sold.
Kay Winslow of Hertford, coastal regional director of the North Carolina Jaycee Women, and Charlene Cone were guests.
Certificates and plaques presented to the club at the state convention in Raleigh were displayed, as were those presented the club by the March of Dimes and University Nursing Home. Plans for the July 4 festivities were discussed.
Certificates of appreciation were given to Ludie Smith, who chaired the installation banquet; Pattie Michael and Marilyn Danford, co-chairmen of the Beautiful Baby Contest which raised $1,468.75 for the March of Dimes; and April Walston, chairman of the luncheon for the Department of Surgery, which raised $65.73.

Preparations for the fall and Christmas bazaar are being made and cross-stitched squares for the club quilt have been completed and turned in.
Items purchased for the pediatric floor of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital were delivered. A letter of appreciation to the club was read.
Plans are being made by several of the officers to attend the local officers training school at Meredith College during the weekend of July 13-15.

BARBARA LOU McPHERSON...is the daughter of Mrs. Lucy H. McPherson of Elizabeth City, who announces her engagement to Clifton Wesley Albritton, son of Mrs. Nancy Albritton of Snow Hill and the late Parham Taylor Albritton. A July wedding is planned.

Maximin Seeks Maximal in Food Satisfaction

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — At age 35, he's at the top of his craft, a master of traditional and "nouvelle" cuisine and darling of even the feisty veterans of France's haute cuisine. Jacques Maximin appears to have done it all.
But the precocious chef of France's landmark Hotel Negresco bristles a bit at the suggestion. "I want to arrive at perfection," he declares, his brown eyes flashing, "to satisfy all the customers all the time."
While Maximin is a bit inclined to bravado, he has nonetheless won over some of the world's more skeptical food critics.
After three years at the Negresco's Chantecler restaurant in Nice, Maximin coaxed two stars from the traditional Michelin guide and got the highest rating — four "toques" — from the more liberal but equally respected Gault-Millau guide to France, which described dinner at the Chantecler as "the best meal of the year" and Maximin as "a revelation."
Recently, Gault-Millau surveyed 35 of France's top chefs, including Paul Bocuse, the Troigros brothers and Roger Verge, who once coached Maximin at the renowned Moulin de Mougins near Cannes. They named Maximin the best chef in France under the age of 45.
He has traveled far from his childhood in tiny Rang-du-Fliers in northern France, where his family ran a modest restaurant, and from his first apprenticeship at age 14 in the kitchens of a small hotel. "I forsook an ordinary adolescence to learn the details of my trade," he says. "Now it is others who come to me and ask 'how do you do it?'"

Twenty-one years later, he's a vigorous, creative force in the kitchen, commanding his sous-chefs with what one observer termed "organized frenzy," putting his signature on every course if possible, adding sauce here, rearranging vegetables there.
Outside it, he is restless. His eyes dart around as he talks and he rises frequently to greet an admirer or friend, seemingly afraid of missing out on any detail or new idea that could be incorporated into a triumphant combination of taste and color.
At Toucano, a posh, colorful New York restaurant run by Brazilian Ricardo Amaral, Maximin's latest project is training a corps of cooks to — as Maximin sees it — transform Toucano into "the top restaurant in New York in six months." While remaining Chantecler's chief chef and living in Nice with his wife and young son, Maximin will travel to New York every few months to refine Toucano's menu and style.
"Many of my friends are artists and I am inspired by them — more than I am by other chefs," he said in French. "All the time, I am watching with my eyes for colors ... listening for sounds ... tasting ... I learn from everything."
This summer, a French publishing house is scheduled to publish his book on cooking appropriately titled "Colors, Odors and Flavors of my Cuisine." He is also working on a how-to book for youngsters who want to become chefs.
He also dreams of someday engineering a perfect marriage of high-technology and haute cuisine, a sophisticated computerized system that would guarantee the pleasure of every palate.
Maximin denies this far-out concept runs contrary to his ideal of chef as artist.

"You have man and machines working together," he says, "but in the final moment, it is the man who triumphs."

Put Mistakes Behind You And Get On With Your Life, Abby Says

DEAR ABBY: I'm miserable. I became involved with a married man who divorced his wife and gave up his child to marry me. I didn't really want to marry him, but I felt I owed him that since I had broken up his marriage.
After marrying him, I knew I couldn't stay in the marriage, but I felt so guilty I stuck with him for two years. I finally told him that I only married him because I felt guilty, so he agreed to a divorce although he didn't want one.
He kept after me, telling me he couldn't live without me and reminding me of what he had given up for me, so I married him a second time. Abby, I can't stand being married to this man, but I can't leave him because he still wants to be married to me. How do I get out of this trap?

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Mistake No. 1: Getting involved with a married man. Mistake No. 2: Marrying him against your better judgment. Mistake No. 3: Marrying him a second time because you felt guilty.
You can get out of that trap by getting into therapy and resolving your guilt. Quit beating yourself up. You've paid your dues; now get on with your life—without him.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a long-time, faithful reader. Over the years I've clipped items from your column I thought were inspirational.

Middle Eastern Dance Studied

A Middle Eastern dance workshop was held recently at the Ramada Inn. Participants in the workshop, led by Sumaya, Susan Thomas of Richmond Va., were taught a variety of Middle Eastern dance techniques and a Greek line dance. Sumaya has conducted dance seminars throughout the east and is author of a book of Mid-Eastern dance routines. The workshop included a fashion show featuring hand-designed and -constructed costumes for professional Middle Eastern dancers.
Middle Eastern dance, sometimes referred to as 'belly-dancing' in this country, is an ancient art form based on movements taken from everyday activities in the Middle East.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Childhood isn't really defined in the dictionary. It just says it's the "state of being a child."
Someone said by the end of this century, there would be no more childhoods. The "state of being" has been getting shorter and shorter with every year.
I'm lucky enough to remember what childhood looked like. It was worn by a lot of little people. A few older people hung onto theirs, but it was hard. Childhood had a culture all its own. The music was sing-songy and ended up with everyone falling down and laughing.
The books were made out of cloth or cardboard and were usually read upside down.
It had its own style of dresses with matching bloomers and suits with buttons on the shirt to hold them up.
For entertainment, childhood could not be matched. It drew from the world of imagination and make-believe with blankets for clouds and little friends that weren't there.
The morality dazzled you with its innocence.
Someone said today it is all too brief, barely a ripple in a child's life, due mostly to television.
Maybe so. The kids of the '80s have watched 6,000 hours of television before they start the first grade. They know their way around computers like technicians. They get their first door key when they're five, work a microwave by the time they're four and speak their first word when they're about three. The word is Jordache.

But to be fair, television is only an option. You don't have to go from womb to reality and bypass childhood.
Is it possible we've just forgotten how to care and feed a childhood? Did we get too busy to honor the time-consuming ritual?
Change and development need time. You cannot hurry the process. They need to know where they fit into the scheme of things. They need a time when they have no answers ... only questions. They need love which they haven't earned just to know it's there and always will be. They need a period when they have no responsibility. Being is enough. They need a world that's so small only they fit into it. A world that is uncomplicated and safe.
Television is only a part of the problem — that surrogate mother who, 24 hours a day, relentlessly beams out a diet of violence, misbehavior, insensitivity, and our crudeness to one another for their eyes to see.
Innocence was to be our children's birthright. We were charged with it. What did we do with it?

Bethel Pleased Over Prospect Of Wastewater Grant

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

BETHEL — "We are certainly pleased with developments, and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has really given us outstanding help," commented Mayor Frank Hemingway about the news that Bethel has a good chance of being the recipient of a $1,745,250 grant for an expanded wastewater facility for the northern Pitt County town.

On Monday the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development announced that Bethel is one of 11 North Carolina communities being considered as priority sites for wastewater facilities in 1984. Funds for the current programs are the result of $18 million expected to become available from Environmental Protection Agency funds recaptured by decreases from other North Carolina projects.

The eligible cost amount for the Bethel wastewater project has been set at $2,327,000, of which $1,745,250 — or 75 percent of the total cost, can come from a federal grant.

"The Bethel facility has been pending for some time under Project 201," Hemingway explained. "Our town commissioners have worked diligently for a long time to have all the plans in readiness in case funds became available at an earlier than expected date. We have been pushing, doing lots of engineering work to make sure everything was in readiness."

One of the most welcome aspects of the recaptured funds grant basis, Hemingway points out, "is that by getting funded before October, we can receive the 75 percent grant instead of the 55 percent grant that will go into effect after that date. The remaining 25 percent will be divided between state and local funds. For a small town like Bethel this makes all the difference. I don't see how we could raise the money needed if we had to do it on the 55 percent grant basis."

The existing wastewater facility was completed in 1967, "and was supposed to be sufficient to meet needs for 25 years," Hemingway said. "However, we are already in need of a larger facility after 17 years. The grant funds will be used to add to the present facility, enlarging the lagoon."

"It's a sand infiltration type lagoon, where the water treated by sand infiltration can be pumped into a large water supply. This system is mechanical, not highly chemical, and is considered very desirous by many towns and industries. It also better meets environmental guidelines."

Hemingway said he has high hopes that the proposed innovative system will meet compliance with federal guidelines for use of the environmental funds. The final status of fund approval for the project will not be known until the Environmental Protection Agency gives formal approval to Bethel and the 10 other priority projects throughout the state, including the largest individual facility at Goldsboro with an eligible cost of $6,349,000 and a 75 percent grant amount of $4,761,750.

National Housing Starts Lose Ground In May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts declined 10.5 percent last month, losing about half the ground they had gained in April, the Commerce Department reported today.

Permits for new construction also declined, but only slightly, after rising in April.

On the surface, the moderate income gain — to an annual rate of $2.98 trillion — seemed to provide little evidence either for or against the growing consensus that the economic recovery is slackening in the April-June quarter.

Wages and salaries increased only $8.7 billion in May compared with $21.5 billion in April. The overall income figure remained the same because of a leveling off in farm proprietors' income, which had plunged $15.3 billion in April.

The 1.1 percent increase in consumer spending was down from 1.6 percent in April. But it was still a strong number by recent standards and was in contrast to an earlier report that retailers' sales rose only 0.2 percent in May.

The housing report said work was begun on new homes at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.78 million units in May, a decrease a little more than half the size of April's 19.7 percent gain. Starts for single-family houses alone were down 8.2 percent after rising 11.2 percent in April.

Permit applications declined 1.3 percent to an annual rate of 1.74 million after rising 1.8 percent in April.

According to City Manager Gail Meeks, garbage collection fees would bring in approximately $496,000 annually. However, she added that the city could not expect to receive the full amount in the coming fiscal year because, if approved, the fees could not be instated until Oct. 1. The city's fee proposal includes a $3 charge per household and a $12 container pick-up charge for businesses. Charges would be added to customers utility bills.

In other budget-related business, the following agency representatives approached the council to formally ask for appropriations:

•Dick Flye of the Pitt County Committee of America's 400th Anniversary asked for $1,500 to help build a tobacco museum at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

•Mary Anne Pennington of the Greenville Museum of Art asked for $8,000 to supplement the museum's operating costs.

•Dr. Daniel le Roux of the East Carolina Vocational Center asked for $15,000.

•Terry Shank of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council asked for $2,000.

•Kay Warren asked for $2,000 to help finance the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

•Barbara Woods of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce asked for $2,000.

In closing, Mayor Janice Buck thanked the citizens for their input, adding that "the budget is a progressive look at Greenville and its growth."

"The 1984-85 budget proposal certainly addresses the importance of the city's financial condition and takes us a step further in making us less dependent on state and federal funding," she said.

The total budget proposal amounts to $16,492,656 — a $3.1 million increase, most of which is targeted for capital improvements, according to Mrs. Meeks.

The council will give its final decision on the budget sometime before July 1.

90-Year-Old Minister Takes A Bride

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. F.C. Lester had a surprise for parishioners at the end of the weekly service. The 90-year-old minister and his 77-year-old girlfriend tied the knot.

Lester, of High Point, married Gertrude Dawson, of Asheboro, a woman he has known for 50 years and whom he began dating last year. Both Lester and his bride had been alone since their spouses died.

"She and I are very much alike in thinking. We talked a little bit as friends a long time ago and found we liked it," Lester said. "But we decided we were too old to get married and didn't have much time left. Then we decided we'd rather be together than separate."

When Mrs. Dawson's sister became ill several weeks ago, Mrs. Dawson said she "realized how wonderful it is to have somebody to talk to about things like that."

"About a week ago, F.C. said to me, 'What are we waiting for?'" she said.

On Sunday, Lester preached at the regular service and his son-in-law, Paul Robinson, led the congregation in singing "Blest Be The Tie That Binds." He then asked the congregation to remain in the church.

There were gasps from the congregation as Lester came down from the pulpit, Mrs. Dawson walked up the aisle, and the wedding began.

The newlyweds honeymooned Sunday night at a High Point hotel and were headed for "a slow trip" to Florida.

"You don't have to be young to enjoy marriage," Mrs. Lester said. "If we only have two weeks together, it'll be marvelous."

Not Yet, Please

To Gov. Jim Hunt, the newly dedicated Microelectronics Center of North Carolina is "perhaps the closest thing we have to a national microelectronics center".

The not-for-profit facility is owned by the Research Triangle Institute and five universities; there are industrial affiliates who contribute money and help in return for access to research findings.

The short-range goal is one of attracting more high technology industries to North Carolina — a target within easy comprehension of laymen in a still exotic field. To Roland Schmitt, chairman of the National Science Board, the center is a major source for "the real electronics revolution: intelligent electronics". That concept is beyond our understanding. Perhaps it is a matter of defining intelligence.

In a purely personal perspective we view electronics as a basis for new machines; machines designed to perform certain assignments, and whose capabilities are the product of human intelligence.

"Intelligent electronics" is a term that suggests going beyond human contribution; which in turn implies the human contribution is approaching irrelevance.

And that is strange, too. The terminals before which sit millions of human users are worth nothing today without the human contribution. The intricate computers linked to those terminals are of little value without involvement of intelligence and creativity (as well as frequent repair) by people.

"Better machines" in our future? Yes.

"Intelligent electronics"?

Please, not yet, Dr. Schmitt. People are far from becoming obsolete.

Summit Needed

Maybe it is election year rhetoric, but President Reagan said in a press conference last week that he is ready to talk to the Soviets in a summit meeting.

"The door is open," the president said, to talks with Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko. "And every once in a while we're standing in the doorway, seeing if anyone's coming up the steps."

The president did not see the comment as a formal invitation to Chernenko to talk, but it was clear he was signalling the Soviet leader that a summit meeting is possible.

Both nations and the entire world have everything to gain and nothing to lose if President Reagan and Chernenko meet. There are many problems which need attention including arms control and space weaponry. It would be too hopeful to think that all our problems could be solved in one summit meeting, but what is important is that a start could be made. The president should press for a meeting with Chernenko.

WASHINGTON — A message is in order for all those happy people around the president who are burling about a "landslide" victory in November. The message is: Knock it off!

Let me venture certain assumptions. On the Democratic side, let us assume that the nominee is Walter Mondale, that the party has regained its unity (or some reasonable facsimile thereof), and that Jesse Jackson will be rousing his troops with all the sis-boom-bah for which he is so widely acclaimed. These are the best assumptions for the Democrats.

These are the best assumptions for the Republicans — that Reagan will continue in excellent health, that inflation will be holding at 5 percent or less, that unemployment will have edged down even further, that interest rates will not be above 13 percent, and that the Soviets will not have triggered some crisis that may demand a forceful American response.

On those assumptions, any talk of a "landslide" is nonsense. More to the point, Republicans who have their wits about them should regard it as dangerous nonsense. Mondale, on his own, may not be able to beat Reagan.

Overconfidence surely can.

Three reasons support this view. These are the Law of Changing Circumstances, the Tumbleweed Theorem, and the Grandparents' Postulate. Let us consider.

There is something to be gained, but not much to be gained, by looking at the figures from the 1980 election. With deference to Reagan, who ran a flawless October campaign, Jimmy Carter was a loser from day one. He would have lost that race to Mickey Rooney, or for that matter, to Mickey Mouse. Carter had in his saddlebags the lead weights of inflation, high interest rates, the Iranian hostages and his own wet mop personality. The Law of Changing Circumstances reminds us that Reagan will have no such pushover in 1984.

It is a fair statement that four years ago virtually no one actively disliked Ronald Reagan. To be sure, he had made some enemies as governor of California, but all that was long ago and far away. The Tumbleweed Theorem teaches us that incumbents in political office seldom gather new friends as their terms roll along. They pick up new enemies instead.

So it is with Ronald Reagan. What impresses his supporters as courageous leadership is seen by his foes as a despicable retreat. The president has managed since January of 1981 to offend blacks, women, farmers, environmentalists, and all whose motto is "Let us not be beastly to the Reds." His own right wing keeps fluttering in dismay. This is the fate that any vigorous president can expect — Franklin Roosevelt and Lyndon Johnson come immediately to mind — and Reagan has been nothing if not vigorous.

Finally, we have the riddle that leads us to the Grandparents' Postulate: why is it that grandparents and grandchildren are so closely bonded? It is because they share a common hostility. So, too, with the Democrats this year. Republican strategists should be exceedingly wary of all this talk about the "bitter divisions" within Democratic ranks. The Republicans are being set up as patsies.

Speaking symbolically, Jesse Jackson may be mad at the Jews and the Jews may be sore at Jesse Jackson. Midwestern farmers may have little use for urban intellectuals, and moderate Southern Democrats may be down on organized labor. Let us not be lulled by the sweet talk. These diverse factions share a common hostility. The union bosses, for all I know, may regard environmentalists as so many petal pickers in Gucci boots, but in their desire to see Reagan ousted from the White House, they stand as one.

This election, unless I am wholly mistaken, will be close — closer than Kennedy-Nixon in 1960, probably as close as Carter-Ford in 1976.

Pleased With Performance

RALEIGH — Although the state Department of Public Instruction isn't pleased with either student performance on the first statewide writing test or with the writing instruction which led to those results, DPI is pleased with its own performance in the administration and scoring of the test. DPI says that the test measured well-defined writing skills and that grading of the test was done on a fair and objective basis.

During a two-hour press briefing on the test results, Dr. Bill Brown and Dr. Charles Rivers of DPI explained that a good score on the test required that the student first understand the assignment given him, then proceed to compose a coherently written, organized essay consisting of a main idea and supporting detail.

The results weren't very impressive. Of the sixth graders who took a test of descriptive writing, 59 percent scored below mid-point. Of the ninth graders who took a test of persuasive writing, 63 percent scored below that level.

Rivers, a curriculum specialist, was quick to lay the blame at the doorstep of the schools. "There is the general feeling that composition is not being taught," he said. "Writing is generally conceived of as grammar rather than content."

The two officials were pleased that the test they'd helped formulate went beyond grammar. Students were tested not only on the ability to write and punctuate a sentence properly. They were also tested on their ability to organize those sentences in a way that communicated their ideas. A multiple choice exam can measure grammatical skills, the two said. Only a writing test such as theirs can measure the ability to organize and communicate one's thoughts.

DPI is also very proud of its score on scoring. When the test was first proposed, critics said a statewide writing test was an impracticality. As Tom I. Davis, DPI's spokesman said, the critics said "we don't believe that you can consistently score writing. It's not like math where the answer is either right or wrong. Grading writing takes an opinion." With 80,000 papers to grade, a great many graders would be needed and they'd all have different opinions of what constitutes good writing.

With those concerns in mind, DPI set out to train the people who would grade these tests. They were told what DPI had decided was "good writing" and they were held to grading on those standards. Each student's paper was graded by two people and about 75 percent of the papers had two identical scores. Almost all the other papers had scores no more than a point apart. About 1 percent of the papers had to be rescored by supervisors because the two original scorers differed significantly.

This year's scores won't affect a student's graduation or advancement. Instead, it will be used to identify those students who have writing problems so they can be helped.

Next year, the scores begin to take on extra importance and, therefore, a highly reliable system of scoring becomes imperative. The ninth graders who took the exam this year take it again next year as part of another trial competency exam. When those same children get to 11th grade, the writing test will be for real and they'll have to pass it to get their diplomas.

That competency test will be different from the tests given this year, however. A student's knowledge of grammar will be tested in a multiple choice exam and writing will be graded on a pass or fail basis rather than with four separate grades as given this year.

—Elisha Douglass— Strength For Today

A man picked up a hitchhiker some time ago and in the course of their conversation the man who was driving the car asked the hitchhiker whether or not he belonged to a church. "No, I don't," replied the hitchhiker, "but I am going to join a church soon." And then he added with a smile, "It seems the safe thing to do."

Religion to this man was a fire escape. He believed that somehow or other if he joined a church he could fix things up with God and be on the safe side in case the worst should happen. The president of a luncheon club in introducing a minister as the guest speaker remarked facetiously, "It gives me personally a great deal of satisfaction to welcome a minister as our speaker today because I happen to be in the fire insurance business also."

How contrary all this is to the real significance of the Christian faith. "I came," said Jesus, "that they might have life and might have it more abundantly."

Practices That Go Astray

NEW YORK (AP) — As George Lodge sees the American economy, we are lifting our voices in praise of old ideologies while refusing to recognize that our practices have gone far astray.

We are, says Lodge, a professor at Harvard Business School, ignoring the realities of a world in change. It is a sickness, he says, a psychological disorder, an American disease.

There are symptoms everywhere, he says — the notion that big public corporations are owned by investors, that government's economic role is to be only a referee rather than a designer.

"We sing old hymns" with a patriotic or even religious earnestness. But we don't always practice their message. Without a realistic ideology, he says, we tumble chaotically when we should be pursuing our goals directly.

We mythologize about ourselves as fiercely independent individuals, for example, but in reality we are interdependent.

We view unions and management as adversaries, weakening in the process the very corporate institutions each depends upon for a livelihood.

We honor private enterprise in the abstract but violate it in practice by constantly seeking protection and privilege through regulation.

In effect, he says, Americans don't know themselves and their institutions, and as a consequence suffer from failing industries, unemployment, stagnant productivity and overseas competition — and don't know what to do about it.

The professor, who lost to Sen. Edward Kennedy in his bid for the Senate, offers a message that might shock a lot of political candidates who claim to know what is best for America:

Recognize openly that we are a

"communitarian" society, a nation of interdependent people whose individuality is best expressed cooperatively, a nation gradually moving from contract to consensus.

"How do you obtain individuality?" he asked in an interview. "You get it at IBM. You get it by being part of an organization that provides you with rewards and an identity."

He continues: "Individual self-fulfillment and self-respect are givens. The question is how you attain them in contemporary America. Most of us have them as part of a team, group, community."

"The other way is to be a John Wayne. Some people can do it if they are willing to pay the price. But there is no security, no pension, no insurance — which are parts of communitarianism."

The very idea shocks those Americans who choose to maintain that they are in the individualistic tradition of Wayne, in spite of real-life experiences that are very different.

We must become consistent with reality if we are to deal with the nation's problems, says Lodge. Otherwise, he suggests, we do more damage than good.

The real world is difficult to discern, according to Lodge, because dusty ideology hides the fine print. To understand where we are going, he says, we must understand what ideology we follow.

Does President Ronald Reagan — admirer of individualism, advocate of free enterprise, seeker of less government involvement in the economy — sing old hymns or does he deal with reality?

This is Lodge's view: "Ironically, President Reagan's radical 1981 economic program ... may signify the beginnings of an explicit recognition that the U.S. economy requires government planning, if not a planned economy."

—Clay Richards—

Choosing A Running Mate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Walter Mondale picks a running mate he must decide which is more important and beneficial — to take the conventional, safe course; make a dramatic move; or bow to need for party unity.

One of the complaints about the former vice president is that he never strikes out with a bold initiative when there is a safe, traditional path to follow.

The safe course in picking a vice president is to choose a man who will bring some political balance to the ticket. Those on the frequently mentioned list in this category are men like Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, who would bring their big home states, and possibly others in the region, into the Mondale column.

The other safe course is to pick a conservative Southern Democrat to balance Mondale's Northern liberal image. In this category are the likes of Sens. Sam Nunn of Georgia and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

But Mondale may decide that the most important step he can take to prepare for the uphill battle against President Reagan is to make a dramatic move toward party unity by picking Sen. Gary Hart as his running mate.

In 1980 Reagan picked his chief primary rival, George Bush, and in 1960 John Kennedy picked former foe Lyndon Johnson.

By picking Hart, Mondale would be making an appeal to the millions of voters he didn't get in the Democratic primaries — especially the young and better educated Democrats and independents.

But there are those who argue that would not be enough of a coalition to lift Mondale over Reagan and he has to do something more dramatic. The most dramatic move Mondale could make of course would be to name a black and or a woman running mate.

One of the problems is that there are no blacks or women currently in the Democratic Party with the credentials of some of the most frequently mentioned white males.

There are many who are probably just as well qualified, but they don't carry the recognition some say are needed. There are no blacks or women in the Senate and only one governor — Martha Lane Collins of Kentucky, who is just beginning her term and is still an unknown.

While there are several frequently mentioned, the short list of women candidates often comes down to one name — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York. She is not yet a household name, but she has a lot in her favor to add to the Mondale ticket.

Dick McKee, president of Evergreen of Greenville, met with commissioners and asked that the county consider funding a portion of the economic development group.

McKee said Evergreen is designed to "eliminate deterioration and blight" in downtown Greenville by providing loans at "70 percent of prime, plus one point" to investors in the redevelopment area designated by the City Council.

"Go in partnership with the city in this effort," McKee urged, saying the city has pledged $20,000 a year for a three-year period to the private non-profit group.

The board agreed to consider the Evergreen request at a budget workshop session.

Commissioners also approved the sale of items donated for the victims of the March 28 tornado to Robert Tugwell of Greenville for a bid of $1,601. The clothing and other items are stored at the New Greenville Warehouse and must be moved by Saturday.

The $1,601 will be added to $8,414 collected at a yard sale held several weeks ago and placed in the county's disaster relief fund which the county, as trustee, holds for the victims of the storm.

Ed Garrison, director of social services, said while the bid seems low, the county could spend several thousand dollars moving and storing the 10 to 12 18-wheeled truck loads of clothing and not be guaranteed recovery of the cost.

County Manager Reginald Gray, reporting on a letter received from George Harper, a member of the State Board of Transportation, told commissioners that the DOT will extend secondary road 1148 in front of Pitt Community College, to the school's southern property line.

Gray said the transportation board appropriated funds for the project at a June 8 meeting, but said the school will have to pay for the installation of curb and gutter.

Gray said Harper indicated that the extension of SR 1708 along the school's southern property line would be included in the county's secondary road allocation in fiscal year 1985-1986.

In other business Monday, commissioners approved a request by the Greenville Jaycees for a fireworks display at Carolina East Mall on June 30, and approved a 10 percent increase in a Federal Aviation Administration grant for drainage work at Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Airport Manager Jim Turcott said the FAA was increasing a $98,920 grant to a total of $108,020 for fund drainage in a safety area for one of the airport runways.

A hearing was held at 7 p.m. to provide the public an opportunity to comment on the proposed 1984-85 budget.

A half-dozen people voiced support for mental health programs and Council on Aging activities. Only one person voiced support for spending for education, which accounts for about 70 percent of the funds raised by local ad valorem taxes.

Sue Zadeits, a member of the Greenville Board of Education, who said she was speaking as a citizen and parent, urged increased support for the schools.

attorney Phil Dixon present. No action was taken during executive session.

The school board will have a workshop meeting on Monday, June 25 to study the budget figures being compiled by Blinson and Mrs. Edwards.

Approval was given for Blinson to draw up a contract for the sale of the Rose High Live Project house to Robert L. and Maureen Fox for a price of $63,000. The house, constructed by students in vocational classes at Rose, is located in Cambridge Subdivision.

Two insurance policies were approved for contract. One is the student-football insurance with Youthguard, the low bidder for the 1984-85 school year. The schedule of fees with Youthguard is $5.50 per student for school-time coverage, $36 per student for 24-hour coverage, and $36 additional for those requiring football coverage. The other insurance program is for multi-peril insurance for the school system. Buchanan Insurance Association Inc., was the successful low bidder. Under the Buchanan plan, buildings are insured for $23,681,000; contents, $2,252,300; and liability, $500,000 as a combined single limit on comprehensive general liability. The premium for the three areas of coverage totals $14,002.

Three budget amendment were approved — No. 3 in the School Food Service to add $47,882 in additional U.S. Department of Agriculture grants; No. 12 in current expense fund to reflect an increase of $6,821 which constitutes a bookkeeping process to get this amount into proper budget codes; and No. 2 in capital outlay funds in the amount of $8,392. This is a transfer from Category III to Category II capital outlay funds to provide money to help pay for the recently approved purchase of band uniforms. Blinson noted that under legal definition, uniforms can be considered equipment.

Charles Ross, director of education, presented reports on the N.C. Annual Writing Test results for grades 6 and 9, and on the N.C. Annual Testing Summary for grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 9. Ross noted that significant improvement has been noted in both categories of testing, but that much still needs to be done, with future plans hinging on the extent of budgeting for remedial work and other programs. Ross noted that in the writing results that Greenville sixth grade students ranked second highest in the state, after Chapel Hill.

Though the total income gain in May was the same as in April, comparing those two 0.6 percent gains would be misleading for the vast majority of Americans who are not farmers.

Wages and salaries actually increased $8.7 billion in May, well under half the $21.5 billion gain of April, the report said.

Women Pigging Out In Name Of Science

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Three women have begun a major sacrifice for the sake of science: indulging themselves for three weeks with ice cream, milk shakes, whipped cream, cookies and cakes — and getting paid for it.

The closely monitored experiment at the University of Rochester Medical Center will determine how much added weight comes from doubling calories consumed.

On Monday, the women checked into Strong Memorial Hospital. They will receive $800 each to give scientists a graphic example of exactly what pigging out does to the human body.

Sue Kinear, Sharon Masseth and a woman who requested anonymity expect to gain about 11 pounds each as they eat a rigidly controlled, balanced diet and undergo continual tests of their blood, urine, hormones and lean-to-fat ratio.

They begin with a week of eating normal amounts to establish how much food they need to keep their weight even. But next week their diet becomes top-heavy with desserts.

Barbara Lipinski, the research dietician on the study, said she has learned from earlier experiments that the only way to get people to double their caloric intake is to load them up with sweets.

"Kool-Aid, gelatin, whipped cream, ice cream, milkshakes, pound cake, that type of thing. All kinds of cookies," Miss Lipinski said.

The inconvenience includes a rule that they eat every crumb off their plates. If they can't eat their meal in a single sitting, they will be allowed to finish it later.

And if the mere sight of food begins to nauseate the women by the end of the month, Dr. Gilbert Forbes, who heads the study, has a plan.

"I'm going to tell them, 'If the men can do it, you can do it, too,'" he said, referring to similar past studies done with men.

As long as they promise not to eat or drink anything on the outside, the three will be allowed to leave the hospital a maximum of four hours a day. If they want a sip of water, they must drink from a measured bottle.

ESCAPEE SEARCH — Vermont State Troopers Jaime Constantine, left, and Mike Jennings prepare to open a car trunk Monday at a state police roadblock near Franklin, Vt. Police have been searching the northern

Vermont rural areas for Linwood and James Briley, who escaped from Virginia's Death Row prison complex May 31. (AP Laserphoto)

Vermont Troopers Check Cars For Virginia Escapees

FRANKLIN, Vt. (AP) — Two state troopers stood in the rural road, their guns pointed at the trunk of a car. The trunk was opened. No one was inside.

Wearing bullet-proof vests, the troopers repeated the scene dozens of times as each car passing through this thickly wooded section of northern Vermont was checked in a search for two men who escaped from death row.

Troopers Jaime Constantine and Mike Jennings had given up their day off to join more than 50 other state troopers in the hunt for convicted killers Linwood Briley and his brother James. Authorities were pessimistic, however, about locating the pair.

"There is just too much area there, you can't look behind every stump," state police Sgt. Donald Ravenna said Monday. "There's definitely a chance they might not be captured."

Asked whether there was a 50-50 likelihood of finding the inmates, considered extremely dangerous, Ravenna said, "I would not even give it that much."

The Brileys have been convicted of a total of nine murders in the Richmond, Va., area during the 1970s.

They were awaiting execution at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center near Boydton, Va., when they escaped with four other men May 31 by donning guard uniforms and carrying a fake bomb past prison officers.

Two of the escapees were captured June 1 in North Carolina and two more were arrested June 8 in Vermont.

The search for the brothers was concentrated Monday in a 5-square-mile area. Also participating were between 15 and 20 U.S. Border Patrol agents.

On the Canadian side of the border, 50 officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Quebec Provincial Police were sweeping the woods for the escapees, said Ravenna.

"If they were to just sit still in the woods, even if you were to put a thousand men in there you could walk right by them 10 feet away," Ravenna said. "It's kind of like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Martha Olmstead, town clerk of Franklin, population 1,006, said she and her neighbors are afraid.

"When you see the police cars going up and down Main Street two at a time you know something is brewing," she said. "Of course we're all pretty nervous."

Police thought they had isolated the convicts Sunday morning following a tip from three women who spotted the pair.

Reagan Passes Up Mayors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Reagan's decision to skip the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors does not mean he doesn't care about urban America, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce said.

"I don't think that means he's insensitive," Pierce told reporters on Monday, responding to criticism from several mayors at the Democratic-dominated conference.

"He sent two cabinet officers to this meeting to represent him. Just because he doesn't go somewhere personally doesn't mean he doesn't have concern."

Today's final session of the four-day gathering was to be highlighted by an address by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the only presidential candidate to accept an invitation to speak.

Also scheduled to address the final session of the 52nd annual meeting of the big-city mayors was banker David Rockefeller.

San Juan, P.R., Republican Mayor Hernan Padilla was to be named today the conference's new president, succeeding Nashville, Tenn.

Democratic Mayor Richard Fulton.

Reagan sent a letter to the conference lauding his administration's urban record, and he sent Pierce and Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler to address the convention in his place.

Reagan's letter, read aloud to the convention by Pierce, cited the administration's accomplishments in bringing down unemployment and creating jobs. It pressed the idea of creating urban enterprise zones which has been bottled up in Congress for three years.

The message concluded that his administration is "fulfilling my commitment to return governing authority to the individuals who are best able to serve the needs of the American people — local elected officials."

On Monday, seven Democratic mayors lashed out at President Reagan, saying that his absence at their meeting was an insult to urban

America and a sign that he is insensitive to the urban poor.

"To borrow a phrase from the greeting card folks, Reagan didn't care enough to send his very best," said Scranton, Pa., Mayor James McNulty.

Reagan's failure to attend personally was called "the key disappointment of the entire convention," by Chicago Mayor Harold Washington.

But the same mayors who blasted Reagan for staying home refused to criticize former Vice President Walter F. Mondale or Sen. Gary Hart, both of whom also declined invitations to address the convention.

The conference, though nominally nonpartisan, has a 2-1 Democratic membership, a fact reflected by the attacks on the Reagan administration as well as open and behind-the-scenes efforts by Democratic mayors to rally support behind Mondale.

Shuttle Is Ready For First Launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery and its six-member crew are ready for launch June 25 on the ship's maiden voyage around the Earth, NASA announced.

The nation's second woman astronaut will take part in the mission of Discovery, America's third reusable space plane, the space agency said.

Experts at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, Johnson Space Center in Houston and at NASA headquarters in Washington gave the go-ahead for the mission Monday after assessing all aspects of the flight — the shuttle, its payloads, tracking stations and other support systems — in a closed circuit television conference.

"They reviewed everything and found no restraints to launch," said Hugh Harris, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We're all set to go next Monday."

Discovery is to lift off at 8:43 a.m. EDT with a six-member crew that includes Judy Resnik, America's second female astronaut, and Charles Walker, an engineer employed by McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Walker is to separate biological materials in an electric field to produce an undiscovered drug which will be tested on animals and humans by the Ortho Pharmaceuticals Division of Johnson & Johnson.

The other crewmembers are commander Henry Hartsfield, pilot Michael Coats, and mission specialists Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane.

During a week in space, they are to deploy a communications satellite for the U.S. Navy, erect and test a 105-foot solar panel which may provide power for future space stations, and take thousands of pictures of Earth with a powerful mapping camera.

Presser Leads Unions In Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventeen U.S. labor leaders were paid $100,000 or more last year, with Teamster President Jackie Presser topping the list at $491,055.59, government records show.

But while salaries paid to top labor leaders generally dwarfed those of the rank-and-file, the typical union president's pay of about $85,000 to $90,000 was below the average pay of major corporate executives.

Far from the top of the list of union salaries was the $72,504 paid last year to Owen Bieber, president of the 1.2 million-member United Auto Workers. Several other leaders of major unions fell short of the $100,000-a-year mark, according to the records.

For example, John Sweeney, president of the 750,000-member Service Employees International Union, was paid about $98,000 — just about the same as in 1982. And the salary paid to the president of the United Steelworkers of America — reflecting depressed conditions in the industry — has dropped from over $90,000 to about $75,000.

Those figures are contained in reports the unions must submit to the Labor Department each year. Some of the organizations, such as the AFL-CIO, submitted figures based on a budget year that begins July 1 and runs through the following June 30.

Lane Kirkland, president of the 13.8 million-member AFL-CIO, the umbrella federation for nearly a hundred individual affiliated unions, was paid $110,000 in the year ended June 30. By contrast, Jackie Presser, president of the 1.8 million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters got more than $173,000 — and that was for just over eight months in that union's top job.

These records also show that Presser, 57, was paid $216,000 for his position as secretary-treasurer and executive officer of Teamster Local 507 in his hometown of Cleveland; $42,500 as head of the 120,000-member Ohio Conference of Teamsters, and $59,500 as president of Teamster Joint Council 41 in Ohio. These salaries totaled $491,055.59.

Bill Pugh, a spokesman at Teamsters headquarters here, said the union "will have no comment" on Presser's salaries.

Presser has defended his income, saying what he earns is commensurate with his duties at the Teamsters. A union official may lawfully hold more than one paying position.

Ranking second behind Presser in total pay was Harold Friedman, a close Presser ally whom Presser named to the Teamsters international executive board earlier this year.

IRS Says Rich Americans Paying Greater Tax Share

WASHINGTON (AP) — New statistics from the Internal Revenue Service confirm high-income Americans are shouldering a greater share of the tax burden but the figures do little to end the debate over the fairness of President Reagan's tax program.

The IRS reported taxpayers with incomes of $100,000 or more paid 17.4 percent of federal income taxes in 1982, up from 15.2 percent a year earlier. The number of taxpayers in the highest-income group also grew — from 654,652 to 740,206 — and accounted for about 7 of each 1,000 returns.

The tax share paid by the big middle-income group — those earning between $15,000 and $50,000, who file 410 of each 1,000 returns — dropped to 56.3 percent from 57.8 percent in 1981. The lower-earning half of all taxpayers — with incomes of $15,000 or less — paid 7.9 percent of the taxes in 1982, down from 8.8 percent.

The number of couples and individuals with incomes of $50,000 to $100,000 grew from 3.4 million to 3.76 million; their tax share rose from 18 percent to 18.2 percent.

The figures were released three months after the IRS made its first preliminary estimate of how the across-the-board tax reductions recommended by Reagan and approved by Congress were affecting the tax burden.

The newer figures support the contention by Reagan and his supporters that the cuts are stimulating greater investment and effort by higher-income people.

But they also show the obvious: that when all tax rates are cut an average of 23 percent for rich and poor alike, the rich will save more dollars than will the poor. Democrats criticize Reagan's program on grounds it restricts government spending programs affecting lower-income people while giving big tax cuts to those at higher incomes.

The IRS report covers only the 1981 and 1982 installments of the tax cut.

Reagan May Ask Exemption Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is likely to propose an increase in the $1,000 personal exemption in the federal income tax either this year or in 1985, the Washington Post has reported.

The newspaper, in today's editions, quoted unidentified White House officials as saying the exact amount of the increased exemption has yet to be determined. But the officials said the exemption would be on top of "indexing" that starting next year will allow taxpayers to offset inflation in figuring their personal exemptions.

According to the officials cited by the Post, the merits of the proposal are still under active discussion.

Depression Forms In Gulf Of Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression with top sustained winds of 30 mph was moving slowly northward from the southern Gulf of Mexico, the National Hurricane Center reported.

Hurricane forecaster Gil Clark said that the depression, first reported at 3 p.m. EDT Monday, was in a "very slow, evolving-type stage."

The depression was located 375 miles southeast of the southern tip of Texas.

"If any development occurs, it will be very slow," Clark said. "The pressure is very weak, so it won't move very fast."

The weather service said the depression was south-southeast of Brownsville, Texas, this morning, moving toward the north-northwest at 8 mph.

If the system's winds reached a sustained speed of 39 mph or more, it would be classified a tropical storm and named Arthur. Hurricanes have winds of 74 mph or more.

The tropical depression was the second in as many weeks of the 1984 Atlantic hurricane season. The first one wandered harmlessly into northeast Florida last Wednesday.

Clark said the previous system, which died as it went inland over St. Augustine, didn't have as much potential for strengthening as the current system.

Host Killed

DENVER (AP) — Alan Berg, a combative but popular radio talk show host who liked "to stick it to the audience," died of multiple gunshot wounds after being ambushed outside his downtown condominium, officials said today.

Denver Deputy District Attorney William Buckley said police found 10 .45-caliber shell casings next to Berg's body after the shooting at about 10 p.m. Monday.

Berg, 50, was featured earlier this year on a segment of CBS' "60 Minutes."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened broadly higher today, extending Monday's sharp advance.

Nearly two stocks rose in price for every one that fell in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which shot up 22.75 points Monday in its steepest gain in more than two months, advanced another 2.76 points to 1,112.41 in the opening half hour today.

The renewed buying on Wall Street followed a selling wave last week that dragged down the blue-chip average to its lowest level since Feb. 22, 1983, and analysts were uncertain on whether the gains would stick.

Traders have been preoccupied with interest rates, which rose in late May to their highest levels since 1982. Interest rates have since retreated from those peaks, but still remain high.

Analysts say hopes for relief from another spurt in interest rates are pinned to a slowing down of the pace of economic growth to a more sustainable rate.

On Wednesday, the government will release its "flash" estimate of economic activity for the yet-to-be-completed second quarter. Financial economists are looking for the growth to drop below an annual growth rate of 5 percent from the 8.8 percent surge of the first three months of the year.

Today's early prices included Citicorp, down 1/8 at 30; American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/8 at 16 1/2; R.J. Reynolds Industries, up 1/8 at 56 1/4; Eastman Kodak, up 1/8 at 68; and General Electric, unchanged at 53 1/2.

On Monday, advances outpaced declines by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 94.90 million shares from 85.46 million Friday.

Candidates Spent Over $1 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — Eddie Knox and Rufus Edmisten spent more than $1 million on the four-week runoff campaign leading to Edmisten's selection as the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, according to the state Board of Elections.

The latest spending reports show Knox and Edmisten spent a total of $4.3 million on their campaigns. Based on a total turnout of 678,629 votes in the runoff, the candidates spent approximately $1.59 per vote between May 12 and June 8.

Edmisten led a field of 10 Democrats in the May 8 primary but did not garner enough votes to avoid the runoff with Knox. In the June 5 runoff, Edmisten collected 352,351 votes compared to 326,278 votes for Knox, according to vote totals certified Monday by the elections board.

Knox, the former Charlotte mayor, led spending for the runoff with bills of $582,905.32, compared to $494,721 spent by Edmisten. Knox launched a runoff advertising blitz that questioned Edmisten's effectiveness in fighting higher utility rates and noted Edmisten's conviction for failure to pay state income taxes while working for former Sen. Sam Ervin in Washington.

Edmisten led fundraising efforts with contributions of $539,976, compared to donations of $496,014.68 for Knox. The reports, due Friday, also showed Knox had loans of $75,000.

To date, the attorney general has spent $2,123,340, raised $1,834,906 and obtained loans for $398,300.

The reports say Knox has spent $2,204,510.21, raised $1,793,770.93 and borrowed $461,000.

In the runoff for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, John Carrington far outspend Frank Jordan. Carrington, from Raleigh, received 23,648 votes to defeat Jordan, who had 17,502 votes.

Carrington spent $9,281.90 toward the runoff, bringing his total campaign spending to $132,974.20. He raised $2,303.40 for the runoff, bringing his total contributions to $135,408.40. Carrington borrowed no money but contributed $122,959.40 himself.

Jordan raised and spent $55 on the runoff. He raised $1,696.25 for the total campaign and spent $1,716.38. Jordan contributed $1,640.36 of his own money.

State Sen. Dick Barnes, D-Forsyth, outspent incumbent Labor Commissioner John Brooks in his unsuccessful race for the Democratic nomination for labor commissioner.

Barnes collected 257,683 votes compared to 311,426 votes for Brooks in the runoff. Barnes raised $49,918.47 and spent $76,224.50. He reported loans of $37,671.97.

Brooks raised $19,432.75, spent $29,220.37 and reported $11,000 in loans.

Secret Voting Illegal

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal to elect officers of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors by secret ballot violates the state's open meetings law, the N.C. Attorney General's Office says.

The opinion, written by senior deputy attorney general Andrew A. Vanore Jr., was requested by board chairman John R. Jordan Jr. of Raleigh. Jordan had ruled against a proposal for secret ballots by board member R. Phillip Haire of Sylva.

At a board meeting in Wilmington earlier this month, Haire said the board's code did not outline a specific procedure for nominating and electing officers. He offered his proposal, which included a written balloting process for the board's chairman, vice chairman and secretary.

Vanore said Monday that voting by secret ballot violated both "the letter and the spirit" of the open meetings law.

"The Board of Governors is clearly a public body within the open meetings law, and the statute is equally clear that secret ballots are not only frowned upon, but simply not allowed," Vanore said.

Haire said Monday he was not aware of the opinion, but would abide by it.

"The secret ballot was not the integral part of the proposal," he said. "That was not the whole purpose of the thing...My proposal was not set in concrete. The only thing I was trying to do was stimulate some discussion among the board to establish some sort of election procedure."

Zoeller Walks Away With Open Title

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — The crowd loved Fuzzy Zoeller, and the feeling was mutual.

"I watched all the great players, guys like Arnold Palmer," Zoeller said after winning the 1984 U.S. Open.

"They loved him. I don't know what it was. His charisma, I guess. He gave something to his fans, and I picked that up at a very early age.

"If it weren't for them, I'd be playing golf in front of a bunch of trees for a couple hundred dollars."

Frank Urban Zoeller returned that affection Monday as he walked away from Greg Norman of Australia in an 18-hole playoff for the 84th U.S. Open title.

Zoeller shot 67 over Winged Foot's monster west course, a 6,930-yard, par-70 layout ringed by huge trees and deep rough with small, undulating greens protected by pothole bunkers.

That was eight shots better than Norman, who struggled to a 75, first losing his putting touch, then watching his driver go awry.

The playoff margin was the largest in U.S. Open history and Zoeller's score the lowest. Zoeller's

'THE DAILY REFLECTOR'

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 19, 1984

67 also was the 31st subpar round shot at this Open, compared to eight subpar scores when it was last played here in 1974.

Zoeller and Norman began the day tied at 276, 4-under-par after 72 holes. They each birdied the first hole in a light drizzle, and then Zoeller made his move.

Zoeller, who won the Masters in 1979, birdied the 411-yard, par-4 second hole by sinking a 70-foot downhill putt. Norman drove into the right rough behind a tree, was short in two, pitched on and 3-putted from about 20 feet for double-bogey. Zoeller led by three.

"To be perfectly honest with you, I didn't feel like I had this one locked up until I hit a 5-iron onto the 18th green," Zoeller said. "I wasn't going to leave any doors unlocked."

Each player bogeyed the third hole, a par-3. Zoeller then parred out, while Norman went bogey-par-birdie, bogeyed Nos. 7 and 8 and parred the ninth.

Zoeller made the turn in 34; Norman in 39.

"I feel hollow," Norman said, "and disappointed — to come so close and finish so far away."

Norman, a big blond nicknamed the "Great White Shark," said he may have been too laid back.

"I didn't want to get too pumped up today," he said. "I didn't want to get jumpy. But it might have been the other way. I may have been too relaxed."

The two players matched birdies on No. 12, a 535-yard par-5, but Zoeller picked up another two shots on the 14th, a 418-yard par-4. Zoeller birdied with a 20-25 foot putt, while Norman bogeyed after his second shot was in the deep grass to the right of the green.

Zoeller led by seven strokes at that point.

"From there on, it was just too much," Norman said.

Zoeller parred the rest of the holes, while Norman finished the final four holes going bogey-bogey-birdie-par.

Despite Norman's problems, the Kemper Open winner never lost his sense of humor. Zoeller, certainly, never lost his.

On the 18th tee, Norman asked Zoeller: "Want to play double or nothing?"

Zoeller replied: "Only if you put your second shot where you hit it yesterday."

Norman forced the playoff on Sunday when he sank a 50-foot putt for par after hitting his second shot into the greenside bleachers. Zoeller, playing in the twosome behind Norman with Hale Irwin, 2-putted for a par that left the golfers tied and forced the first U.S. Open playoff since 1975 when Lou Graham beat John Mahaffey.

"Before Fuzzy played 18, I felt I had done enough to win with that putt," Norman said. "But that's the way golf is. I'm not going to cry over spilled milk."

Irwin, who led or shared the lead through the first three rounds, shot a 9-over 79 Sunday to finish well off the pace at 284.

Walking down the 18th fairway Monday, the popular Zoeller was hailed as a conquering hero.

"They won the America's Cup, but they can't take the U.S. Open," someone hollered from the crowd.

"Fuzzy, Fuzzy, Fuzzy," the gallery chanted.

Zoeller walked over to the gallery and kissed a woman wearing an "I Love Fuzzy" T-shirt.

"Everybody is a little different," Zoeller said of his antics. "I have different ways, and I'm sure some people look at me and say there's no way he can concentrate being as crazy as he is.

"But I know my limitations, and I try to play within them."

With the victory, Zoeller earned an Open record $94,000, while $47,000 went to Norman, who didn't join the PGA Tour until last year.

"He's a jovial character," Norman said of Zoeller, with whom he had dinner Sunday night. "I'm my kind of character, and he's his."

"Like, on the first tee, he has this telephone in his golf bag, and he asked me if I wanted to make a phone call. I thought a snake was going to drop out."

Zoeller said the phone was just a joke with a good friend.

"I asked him if he wanted to make a last call."

The implication was that Zoeller was ready to put the lights out.

"This is something that sinks in over a period of years," Zoeller said of winning the Open. "When I won the Masters, it didn't sink in for about two weeks, and I'm still learning what it's all about."

Niekro's Knuckler Baffles Anderson

By The Associated Press

When he was managing in the National League, Sparky Anderson had all he could handle with Phil Niekro's knuckleballs.

That hasn't changed now that both are in the American League.

"He's throwing the same as I've always seen him," the Detroit manager said after watching Niekro lead the New York Yankees to a 2-1 victory over the Tigers Monday night. "He hasn't changed in 15 years. He's a great competitor — a guy like that, I'd expect to see do well."

At 45, the former Atlanta Braves' pitcher is off to the best start of his career, and admits it's been a bit of a surprise to almost everyone.

"I'm really not through," Niekro said after improving his record to 10-3. "I'd say there are some people that are surprised in Atlanta. And I'm sure there's probably some in the front office here (New York) that are surprised. I'm off to the best start in my career, and I don't think anybody expected that."

In other American League games, it was Texas 6, California 2; Chicago 8, Seattle 4 and Oakland 10, Kansas City 2. Rain washed out the only National League game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Montreal Expos.

After giving up a first-inning home run to Kirk Gibson, Niekro allowed just two other hits — singles by Gibson and Lou Whitaker — but came out of the game after issuing two walks in the ninth. Jose Rijo got the last out, recording his second save.

"I thought I had him," said Niekro, reflecting on Gibson's homer, "but he's so strong that he just turned the bat over and it was upstairs. That's the last time that I throw an off-speed knuckler to a left-handed batter."

Losing pitcher Milt Wilcox, 7-5, struck out seven and walked three in seven innings, but fell victim to seven New York hits, including doubles by Willie Randolph, Don Mattingly and Bobby Meacham. Randolph also had a single and scored two runs for the Yankees.

Rangers 6, Angels 2

Frank Tanana, backed by a four-run first inning, combined with Dave Schmidt on a seven-hitter to lead Texas over California.

Tanana, 8-6, was in command in the eight innings he pitched, giving up five hits and the first California run on an RBI single by Doug DeCinces in the eighth. The left-hander walked three and struck out five before Schmidt pitched the ninth, giving up an RBI single to Rob Wilfong.

The Rangers scored all the runs they needed in the first inning on an RBI single by Larry Parrish, a wild pitch, and run-scoring base hits by Alan Bannister and Ned Yost.

White Sox 8, Mariners 4

Richard Dotson won his ninth game with a six-hitter and Harold Baines drove in four runs as Chicago defeated Seattle.

Baines hit a two-run triple in the first inning to help Dotson, 9-3, take a 4-0 lead, then later belted a two-run homer as the White Sox broke open the game with a three-run fifth.

Dotson did not allow a hit over the final five innings, striking out six and walking two. Loser Matt Young, 4-5, departed after Vance Law's homer in the fifth.

A's 10, Royals 2

Davey Lopes, Dave Kingman and Rickey Henderson all hit home runs to power Oakland over Kansas City.

Lopes' homer in the sixth inning was the first inside-the-park job by an Oakland player in nearly four years. The last Oakland player to do it was Henderson on July 6, 1980 in Chicago.

Kingman's homer, a two-run shot, highlighted a three-run Oakland rally in the seventh inning. The A's added insurance in the eighth on Henderson's three-run homer, his sixth.

"In all honesty, I thought it was a triple," said Lopes. "And then I saw that left arm (of A's third base coach Clete Boyer) go around and I said, 'Oh, my goodness.'"

Panthers Earn USFL Playoff Berth

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Panthers are back, at least that's what some of the defending United States Football League champions are saying after they handed the Oklahoma Outlaws their ninth straight loss to qualify for the playoffs.

Bobby Hebert, returning to the lineup after more than a week's absence because of a strained right knee, fired four touchdown passes Monday night to lead Michigan to a 34-24 victory over the Outlaws.

It was only the Panthers' third victory in 11 games, but it raised their record to 9-8, good enough for one of the two Western Conference wild-card playoff berths. Oklahoma, already eliminated from playoff contention, is 6-11.

Houston edged San Antonio 29-26 in the only other game Monday night.

"We've been struggling and struggling," said Michigan nose tackle Dave Tipton. "I think we've finally got the corner turned.

"We haven't had a game like this since Denver (a 28-0 victory) and that was the third game of the season, where the offense and everybody put it together," Tipton added.

Hebert, who has been booed by Panthers' crowd since the team began playing poorly after winning its first six games this season, returned to his old form just before halftime. He hit six straight passes, including a 12-yard strike to Anthony Allen to tie the game 14-14.

"I think Bobby's got his confidence back," said linebacker Ray Bentley. "Once he started hitting them, he was the same old Bobby, and that was good to see."

Hebert broke the game open in the third quarter, hitting Mike Cobb on a 25-yard scoring strike and Derek Holloway on a 69-yard scoring bomb. Allen also caught a 5-yard TD pass from Hebert in the final quarter.

"Coach (Jim) Stanley said it's either do or die time now, and we got to win to get into the playoffs. I just wanted to contribute," said Hebert.

Michigan grabbed a 7-0 lead in the opening quarter when linebacker Kyle Borland returned an Ernest Anderson fumble 38 yards for a touchdown.

Oklahoma tied the score 7-7 late in the quarter when Rick Johnson threw his first USFL touchdown pass, hitting Al Williams on a 10-scoring toss. The Outlaws made it 14-7 with 8:22 left in the first half when Sidney Thornton scored on a 10-yard run.

Efren Herrera added a 42-yard field goal for Oklahoma in the third quarter, while reserve quarterback Mike Loyd hit Williams on a 64-yard TD pass late in the game.

Gambler 26, Gunslingers 26

Quarterback Jim Kelly, despite throwing four interceptions and being sacked three times, rallied the Houston with a 30-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Sanders with 1:15 to play against San Antonio.

Houston, 12-5, extended its winning streak to six games and clinched the home-field advantage throughout the upcoming league playoffs. San Antonio dropped to 6-11.

Houston got its final chance for victory with 1:48 remaining. Kelly, the league's leading passer, hit Gerald McNeil with a 49-yard bomb to the Gunslingers 30 on the first play. On the next play, Sanders split two defenders and caught the winning touchdown.

Houston's comeback nullified four field goals by San Antonio's Nick Mike-Mayer, whose kicks of 40 and 49 yards had given the Gunslingers a 26-21 lead.

San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel upstaged Kelly early, leading the Gunslingers to a 17-point first quarter. He hit Don Roberts with a 15-yard touchdown pass, Mike Hagen scored on a two-yard run and Mike-Mayer kicked a 19-yard field goal.

'Family' Silent As Swale Laid To Rest

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — No one spoke as the eight-foot square box holding the body of Swale was lowered into the ground beside the grave of Triple Crown winner Gallant Fox.

The 50 or so members of the "Claiborne family" just bade a silent farewell Monday to the colt that brought them Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes trophies. Swale, never the victim of any known illness, died Sunday at Belmont Park.

"Each man in his own mind said his farewell. Everybody was standing there. It was very simple and very quick," said John Sosby, general manager of the famed breeding farm in nearby Paris. "If anyone had said anything, I probably would have been called on to do it."

"And if I'd tried, I probably would have started crying," Sosby said.

Veterinarians originally suspected a heart attack, but said a post-mortem showed no signs of cardiac failure.

Senate Urges Tax Cut

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate rushed to the defense of tobacco Monday night, unanimously passing a resolution that urges Congress to drop the cigarette tax from 16 cents to 8 cents per pack.

"I can't believe they will continue to take that unfair advantage of a crop that does that much for this country," said Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who introduced the bill with Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham.

"It's not only affecting tobacco growers themselves but (tobacco-related production) workers like in Durham," Royall said.

The 8 cents per pack tax was doubled to 16 cents per pack in 1982, but the tax is scheduled to expire Sept. 30, 1985.

The U.S. House already has approved a reduction in the tax to 12 cents. The Senate agreed to let the additional 8 cents tax expire, putting the matter before a House-Senate conference committee.

The resolution, approved 43-0 and sent to the House, says that a tax of 12 cents or 16 cents will hurt North Carolina's economy. It says the tax increase brought a $25 million loss to the state's leaf growers.

The state Senate resolution notes the importance of tobacco to North Carolina — N.C. growers had cash receipts from tobacco of more than $1 billion in 1983, that 147,000 North Carolinians are working in tobacco production and about 50 percent of American cigarettes are made in North Carolina.

In other legislative action:

The Senate voted 42-0 to enact a resolution honoring the late Sam Bundy, a longtime lawmaker from Pitt County who died Jan. 19, 1983.

Environmentalists say they don't think bills pending in the House and Senate will solve North Carolina's hazardous waste problems.

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Conservation Council and the N.C. Sierra Club, said he is worried because the bills would let the state build and operate a waste disposal facility. He said the state would wind up regulating itself.

Holman said his groups support standards for locating waste disposal facilities and limits on use of landfills for such waste outlined in the bill.

He urged the Legislature to take additional steps including expansion of pollution prevention programs, spending more money to monitor the wastes and allowing the state to enact waste regulations that are stricter than federal laws.

Rep. David Bumgardner, D-Gaston, introduced a bill seeking $1,092,000 for the coming fiscal year for National Guard pension benefits.

A group of Buncombe County legislators introduced a bill in the House seeking permission to establish a security force in the Department of Human Resources to police the Black Mountain Center, the Alcohol Rehabilitation Center and the Juvenile Evaluation Center.

Barfield Moved To Security Unit

RALEIGH (AP) — Velma Margie Barfield, scheduled Aug. 31 to become the first woman executed in North Carolina, has been moved to Central Prison for security reasons, officials said.

Mrs. Barfield was taken from the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women in Raleigh at 7:30 p.m. Monday, said Patty McQuillan, public information officer for the North Carolina Department of Correction.

Ms. McQuillan said the 51-year-old grandmother and Sunday school teacher is in a single cell away from male death row inmates and will be allowed the same exercise and visitation privileges afforded other convicted prisoners.

"Central Prison provides the highest level of security in our system," a news release issued by the correction department said.

Superior Court Judge Robert L. Farmer on June 13 scheduled Mrs. Barfield's execution date after a stay of appeal was lifted and her latest appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court denied.

If the execution is carried out, Mrs. Barfield would be the first woman to be executed in the United States in 22 years.

Mrs. Barfield was convicted in 1978 in the poisoning death of her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. At her trial in Bladen County, Mrs. Barfield testified she had also poisoned at least three other people, including her mother.

Funding Levels Endorsed

RALEIGH (AP) — Some $185 million in federal block grants probably will be spent much the same way in fiscal 1984-85 as this year, a legislative budget leader and a state official said after a public hearing.

The House-Senate Appropriations Committee conducted the hearing Monday to hear suggestions for distributing next year's federal allocation. The General Assembly is adjusting the budget approved last year and will consider the block grants with other expenditures.

"Basically, we've got the same money to work with as we had last year," said Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget officer. "We see no real (need) for changes unless they (lawmakers) want to make a transfer from one program to another."

Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee, predicted few revisions.

"I generally felt that the sentiment ... will be to go along as is," he said.

The public hearing involved four programs for which hearings are required under federal law before the money's spent.

Most of the discussion centered on the Community Services program administered by the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. It received some $8.6 million in federal funds this year and a similar amount has been recommended for 1984-85.

The program funds local agencies that help the poor improve housing, manage money, find jobs, get education, and deal with emergencies such as weather-related property damage.

Churches Survive In Union

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
When the tiny Presbyterian and Methodist churches in the Danbury community folded a year ago, their congregations got together to form a church that would cross denomination lines.

The merger of the two struggling congregations reflects a trend among small churches with dwindling memberships, religious leaders say.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," said the Rev. James Mauldin of Mount Airy. "It is not only a practical idea in good stewardship, it's just good theology in that we are one in Christ ... This is a powerful witness, I think."

Mauldin, 46, is pastor-designate of the Danbury Community Church, a union of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches that folded when they could no longer afford to operate separately.

Located in a Stokes County community of about 150 people, the church's 30 or so members met to find a way to continue worship services and Sunday school classes, Mauldin said. They eventually decided to form a union church.

The new church, which expects to be fully organized by July 22, won final approval Saturday from the Concord Presbytery, the governing body of Presbyterian churches in Piedmont and western North Carolina counties.

Earlier this month the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the USA approved the merger, while the General Conference of the United Methodist Church in May adopted new bylaws allowing for such unions.

Mauldin said Danbury church members will keep their separate identities as Presbyterians and Methodists but will form a single congregation. The Presbyterian minister said the church's pastor will rotate, with the next one being Methodist.

Since there are few differences in the worship services and the teachings of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, Mauldin said, the union should be smooth.

But until the Danbury Community Church can "get going," the Presbyterian and Methodist churches will each pay $2,500 a year to supplement Sunday collections.

State Officials Take Issue With Helms Ad

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's tax collections increased steadily throughout Gov. Jim Hunt's two terms, state officials and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms' campaign committee agree.

But they differ sharply on whether that's good or bad — and on how the Tar Heel tax burden stacks up against those of other Southern states.

State Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch and Deputy Budget Officer Marvin Dorman said Monday that a television advertisement sponsored by the Helms for Senate Committee had falsely suggested Hunt had instigated massive tax increases. They also disputed the ad's contention that North Carolinians pay the highest taxes in the South.

Portraying North Carolina as a high-tax state could hurt its image with industrial prospects, the Democratic officials warned.

"We're in better financial shape than any other Southeastern state by far," said Lynch.

Tax revenues increased during Hunt's administration primarily because of economic growth and inflation, Lynch said. State tax collections increased 10.6 percent from 1977, when Hunt took office, through fiscal 1983-84, he said. However, he added, they increased 11.6 percent over the previous 13 years or between fiscal 1964-65 and 1976-77.

He presented U.S. Census Bureau statistics that he said showed North Carolina's taxes ranked seventh-highest among southern states.

"The TV ad bears no resemblance to reality," he said. "I ... have felt morally compelled to set the record straight."

Lenoir, Martin Workers Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — A State Bureau of Investigation agent who saved a girl's life by plunging into an icy reservoir to pull her from an overturned car was one of six North Carolina employees honored Monday for their service to the state.

Douglas Branch of Cary said he was on his way home one snowy afternoon this past February when he forced himself into the car and saved the girl's life.

The 32-year-old Branch said he "didn't do anything all that great," and said the award is a tribute to every emergency worker in the state.

"The way I justify it is that I think of it as symbolism," Branch said. "The governor and the administration are paying homage to all emergency personnel. ... They risk their lives every day."

Branch has been with the SBI since he graduated from Campbell University in Buies Creek 10 years ago.

A seven-member commission chose the recipients from 44 nominations submitted by state agencies and universities. Each honoree received a plaque embossed with the state seal and a pin.

Other recipients were:

- Marilyn M. Cogdell of Kinston, associate director of campus life at Dobbs School in Kinston. She received the award for devotion to duty.
- LeRoy Williams, a food service employee at the Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf in Wilson for eight years. Williams received the human relations award.

F.L. Britt, director of the Northeast Regional Education Center in Williamston. He was given an award for innovations and devotion to duty.

Dudley E. Flood of Raleigh, associate state superintendent with the Department of Public Instruction. He received the award for devotion to duty, human relations and public service.

Judith A. Parrot of Kinston, director of residential services at Caswell Center in Kinston. He received the devotion to duty, innovations and public service award.

Mike Farrell Portrays JFK On PBS

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Hal Holbrook was widely acclaimed for his one-man show "Mark Twain Tonight" on CBS in 1967, as were Henry Fonda for his characterization of Clarence Darrow on NBC in '74 and James Earl Jones for his portrayal of Paul Robeson on public television in 1979.

Those actors enjoyed a certain advantage over Mike Farrell, who plays the late John F. Kennedy in "JFK — A One Man Show," Wednesday night on public TV. Few in the audience could compare those actors, in speech and mannerism, to the men they brought to life on stage.

Millions watching at home, on the other hand, would recognize Kennedy. And at times in the 90-minute production, Farrell does, indeed, look and sound like the late president.

"I like most of it," the actor says of the show. "I have a great affection for the piece, but I'm still aware of the mistakes. There are a couple of times when the accent is not right on."

Farrell, who played B.J. Hunnicutt on CBS' "M-A-S-H," says he worked with a voice coach on that, and his JFK hairpiece (by Ziggy, according to the credits) is at least believable. Whatever shortcomings the actor perceives don't necessarily detract from the show, which is entertaining, funny when it's supposed to be, and at times riveting.

Farrell's approach to the show is mildly startling.

"JFK" opens with Kennedy preparing for a news conference. Once before the assembled, although unseen reporters someone shouts for his attention, "Mr. President!"

"Mr. President, you were assassinated on the 22nd of November, 1963, in Dallas, Texas. You were 46 years old. Your death shocked the world. Your administration, your life, have become legend."

"Yes," Kennedy replies, "Camelot. All that. I was the knight on a white horse to a lot of people, for a long time."

"The question, sir," the reporter continues, "is, 'What is your response to the current wave of attacks on the legend, your womanizing, the ongoing influence of your father?'"

"Kennedy," the president answers, "the prime example of hype, hypocrisy and daddy's dough."

The technique, from then on, is more or less conventional, and chronological.

Farrell's JFK considers all the well-known highlights of Kennedy's life — his election to Congress and later the Senate, his marriage to Jackie, his campaign for president and inaugural address, the Bay of Pigs invasion, the Cuban missile crisis. Rather than avoid the controversial, he attacks popular rumors head-on:

— Did Kennedy write "Profiles in Courage" or pay someone else to do the work for him? "I wrote the book," he says, "every damn word of it."

— Was he soft on McCarthy? "By and large," he says, "the answer is yes. At least I wasn't hard on McCarthy." The senator from Wisconsin was a friend of his father's, Kennedy explains: "He played softball with us. Badly, I might add. He couldn't catch a fly ball."

"Our original intention," Farrell says, "was to answer unanswerable questions and innuendo. We chose to do it in an offhand manner. We didn't want to be smarmy and take the 'True Confessions' approach."

Nor is "JFK — A One Man Show" overly sentimental in Kennedy's recollection of the more poignant moments in his life:

"West Virginia was more than a campaign stop for me," he recalls of the race of the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960. "It was one of the turning points in my life. ... Jackie, Bobby and me, it was the first real experience any of us had had with poverty. ... None of us was ever quite the same again."

"You wonder why Bobby was always so passionate on the subject of the hungry and the poor? West Virginia."

"JFK — A One Man Show" is not without flaw. The production, Farrell says, was originally planned for two hours, and the editing is at times heavy-handed, with the transition from one situation to another rough or, at times, nonexistent. And Walter Cronkite's introduction seems more intrusive than helpful.

But Farrell is credible as Kennedy, and that's an accomplishment.

"Sometimes," the actor says with characteristic candor, "I looked like Ted, sometimes I looked like Jack. But most of the time, I looked like me."

'Ghostbusters' Setting The Pace

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Ghostbusters" and "Gremlins" more than held onto the two top spots at the box office last weekend as "Indiana Jones" hustled his way over the $100 million mark in third place.

The order of the weekend's top seven grossing films was unchanged from the previous week, but the disparity between the leaders and the rest of the field continued to grow.

Columbia's "Ghostbusters" grossed $15.2 million compared to $1.6 million for Fox's "Romancing the Stone," the seventh-ranked film.

Both grosses were up over the previous weekend, but "Romancing the Stone" improved by a mere $100,000 compared to a $1.6 million jump for "Ghostbusters."

Warner Bros.' "Gremlins" grossed $13.9 million for second place and the $9.1 million grossed by Paramount's "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" bumped its four-week total to $103.5 million.

"Star Trek III" gave Paramount fourth place as well with $6.6 million.

Far down the money ladder, but in fifth place, was "Beat Street." The Orion picture grossed $2.9 million. Tri-Star's "The Natural" held onto sixth place with $2.5 million over the weekend.

Here are the top seven grossing films last weekend, with studio, number of weeks in release, weekend gross, and total gross:

"Ghostbusters" Columbia, two weeks, $15.2 million, $38.3 million.

"Gremlins" Warner Bros., two weeks, $13.9 million, $34.8 million.

"Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" Paramount, four weeks, $9.1 million, $103.5 million.

"Star Trek III" Paramount, three weeks, $6.6 million, $45.9 million.

"Beat Street" Orion, two weeks, $2.9 million, $9.8 million.

"The Natural" Tri-Star, six weeks, $2.5 million, $33.6 million.

"Romancing the Stone" Fox, 12 weeks, $1.6 million, $62.2 million.

DJ Locks Self In Radio Booth

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A flood of phone calls to the governor's office resulted when a disc jockey locked himself in a broadcast booth for eight hours and demanded tax breaks to get Michael Jackson to perform in New Orleans.

Disc jockey Guy Broady was talked into unlocking the door Monday afternoon by a psychiatrist, said Janet Brown, owner and general manager of WTKL-AM.

The 30-year-old disc jockey was immediately suspended, said Mrs. Brown.

A spokeswoman for Gov. Edwin Edwards said that Broady's appeal prompted about 300 phone calls.

Jackson and his brothers begin a 12-city, 42-concert tour in Kansas City, Mo., on July 6.

Valli To Wed

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — Frankie Valli, whose ringing falsetto voice helped make the Four Seasons one of the best-selling pop groups of the 1960s, is getting married for the third time, a spokesman for the singer said.

Valli, 49, will marry Randy Clohessy, 23, on July 7 at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, Dan Acree, a spokesman for the singer in Los Angeles said Monday.

Atom Spies?

Julius and Ethel Rosenberg died in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison on this day in 1953. Accused of stealing the secret of the atomic bomb for the Soviet Union, the Rosenbergs became the only Americans ever executed for espionage by judgement of a civil court. Despite testimony against them by Ethel's brother, David Greenglass, the Rosenbergs insisted upon their innocence to the end. Even today, this case continues to spark controversy.

DO YOU KNOW - What term describes the splitting of the nucleus of an atom?

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Beneath all the surface problems, requiring a considerable amount of time on your part, there is a relentless sweep forward that gives you the chance to make worthwhile arrangements.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get into those private matters that are important for you to handle now, and then listen to what clever partners have to suggest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day for making plans with friends who will help to gain you your fondest wishes. Think logically.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may find it rough sledding where your vocation is concerned today but fine friends can come to your rescue.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Talks with close ties can get rid of irritations quickly, and you can get new ideas across to others nicely.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Look to good friends for the assistance you need in order to put deals across wisely, otherwise it would be difficult sledding alone.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Although partners may not be very cooperative today, some bigwig can be most helpful to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your plans to the attention of those who are in power since you are thinking big and can profit greatly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure you handle whatever important matters you are working on with others before you go out for amusement with friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) The home situation could be unsettling but associates and friends can be of real assistance. The evening is a joyful one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get the OK of higher-ups where your job is concerned and take care in communicating and/or travel affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't get tied up with monetary matters today and take time to have some pleasure that will relax you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are tempted to go off on some tangent, but if you ally yourself with wise persons in business you make progress instead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be capable of gaining favor of bigwigs who can assist your youngster to make a big success in life, even though your progeny has to buck the jealousy of those of own age. Almost a genius in this chart. Handle with care.

Beware of loose doubles. If your action points the way for declarer to make his contract, the swing is enormous.

This deal was played after an evening of great festivity — food was abundant and wine flowed freely. As a result, both North and South seemed to think they possessed an ace more than they actually held, which accounts for the final contract. West's double was equally incomprehensible, but there was nothing the matter with South's handling of the contract.

After West led the 10 of spades, declarer carefully inspected dummy. Had there been no double, he would surely have gone down — the sensible way to play the contract would have been to surrender a trump trick and then rely on the diamond finesse.

The double, however, drew a roadmap for declarer. Unless West held both missing trumps, in which case there was nothing that could be done to save the hand, he surely had the king of diamonds and was expecting to collect a diamond trick in addition to the ace of trumps. He was soon proved wrong.

Declarer won the king of spades, cashed the ace of spades for a club discard, and ruffed a spade. After ruffing a club on the board, and dummy's last spade in hand, South was ready to administer the coup de grace.

He exited with a trump. West captured his partner's king perforce, and was faced with a Hobson's choice. A diamond lead would be into declarer's major tenace; a club would allow him to discard dummy's diamond loser while ruffing in hand.

As the cards lie, the contract should have been defeated. At trick one, West should have led the ace of hearts! Now he can exit safely and sit back and wait to score his king of diamonds for the setting trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy, send $1.75 to "Goren Four-Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07048. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

59.1 percent, Florida at 55.5 percent, Virginia at 50.7 percent and South Carolina and Georgia, both with 49.8 percent.

Of North Carolina's eligible whites, 67.2 percent had registered to vote by April, Sherman said, compared with 65.5 percent two years ago.

In 1982 and this year, North Carolina's white voter registration has matched regional rankings of black voter registration. In 1982, whites ranked eighth among the 11 Southern states in registration of eligible white voters. This year, North Carolina is sixth.

Salvadorans Get Prison Sentences

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A criminal court judge, in what he called a "triumph for Salvadoran justice," sentenced five former national guardsmen to the maximum 30 years in prison for killing four U.S. churchwomen in 1980.

Judge Bernardo Rauda Murcia, who presided over the 20-hour trial that ended May 24, issued the sentences Monday and said he would notify the guardsmen's lawyers and the prosecutors today.

"For me it has been a triumph, and it has been a triumph for Salvadoran justice and all those who believe in it," Rauda Murcia said in a telephone interview.

The long delay in bringing the murderers of the three nuns and one lay worker to trial had jeopardized U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

At the trial, a jury of five civilians found each guardsman guilty of four counts of murder. It was the first major case of human rights abuses to end in conviction since the leftist guerrilla war began 4½ years ago.

Human rights groups have blamed most of the more than 43,000 civilian deaths in the civil war on rightist death squads linked to military and paramilitary groups.

On the war front Monday, guerrillas threw bombs in residential neighborhoods of San Salvador and sabotaged power lines and telephone installations in the capital and three eastern provinces.

The military answered a series of rebel hit-and-run attacks with anti-guerrilla sweeps in Cabanas province in the north and in the eastern provinces of Usulután and Morazan.

In Morazan, long a rebel stronghold, government troops moved into the town of Perquin, 126 miles northeast of the capital, for the first time since December.

A military source said the drive in Morazan aims to establish a permanent government presence north of the Torola River, which the rebels have held for three years.

Rauda Murcia said he had actually imposed sentences of 86 to 125 years on the guardsmen to conform with the penal code. Then he reduced the sentences to a maximum of 30 years to abide by a constitutional reform passed last December. The penal code hasn't been amended to conform with the new constitution yet.

The judge said the guardsmen would have two years discounted from their sentences for time in prison while awaiting trial and would be eligible for good-conduct parole after serving 20 years.

Maryknoll nuns Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 49, of New York, and Ursuline Sister Dorothy Kazel, 41, and Roman Catholic lay worker

Jean Donovan, 27, both of Cleveland, were intercepted by the guardsmen while driving from El Salvador airport to the capital Dec. 2, 1980.

Their bodies were found two days later in a shallow grave near the highway. Medical reports indicated some of the women were raped before they were shot.

Iranian Offensive Expected

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Iranian and Iraqi soldiers are moving into the swampy, southern Iraq border area in preparation for a major battle, both governments say.

"Indications in Baghdad show the (Iranian) offensive is imminent, with the Iraqis bracing to crush it," the Gulf News Agency in Bahrain reported Monday.

Iran's state radio said "thousands of zealots" were converging near the Iraqi city of Basra, where for weeks Iran has been expected to launch a major human-wave assault.

Iran reportedly has massed an estimated 400,000 troops and revolutionary guardsmen near Basra, the Iraqi city closest to the Persian Gulf, and the government report Monday indicated that thousands more volunteers were pouring into front-line locations there.

The Gulf News Agency said Iraqi enlisted men and college students were thronging to the southern front and more volunteers have been training for service with the 500,000-man Iraqi army.

The "grand offensive," as the Iranians call it, has been expected to begin June 5, the 21st anniversary of the peasants' revolt that preceded the Islamic revolution and the rise to power of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Western sources speculate that Iran has delayed the offensive for several reasons, including fear of new Iraqi weapons, manpower problems, differences in the Iranian leadership over strategy and the prospect of high casualties.

Iraqi military commanders have vowed to "annihilate" the Iranian offensive, citing the power of their Soviet-made surface-to-surface missiles and French-made Super Etendard warplanes.

Prosecutor Cites Bulgarian Plot

ROME (AP) — A state prosecutor said today he is convinced that Bulgarians, with possible Soviet support, masterminded the 1981 assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II.

"That's the conclusion of my investigation," said Antonio Albano in an interview. The 47-year-old prosecutor has turned in a 78-page report to Judge Ilario Martella, who has headed the state inquiry into the May 13, 1981, shooting by Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca.

Albano confirmed that he recommended to Martella that three Bulgarians and four Turks be tried in connection with the attack, which seriously wounded the Polish-born pope.

Agca was tried by a Rome court and sentenced to life imprisonment for the attack.

Albano said his report was covered by judicial secrecy and that copies have been given only to the investigating judge and defense lawyers.
