FBI Captures Brileys At Philadelphia Shop

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Twenty heavily armed FBI agents took two escaped death row inmates from Virginia by surprise thanks to "patience and intensive surveillance" around the home of the convicted murderers' uncle, authorities said.

James Dyrel Briley and Linwood Earl Briley were arrested without a struggle Tuesday night outside a car repair shop in a poor residential neighborhood of north Philadelphia.

The arrests ended a manhunt from North Carolina to Canada that began May 31 when the Brileys escaped from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center near Boydton, Va., with four other convicted murderers.

The Brileys were to be arraigned today before a U.S. magistrate on charges of unlawful flight to avoid confinement, said FBI agent John L. Hogan. He said they probably would waive extradition to face the charges in Virginia.

The Brileys' uncle, Johnnie Council, 45, of Philadelphia, was also to be arraigned on a charge of unlawful harboring of a fugitive, said Hogan.

The FBI agents moved cautiously in the final hours of their quest to capture the Brileys, who were convicted of nine murders between them, fearing one slip-up would doom their efforts at rounding up the last of the six escapees, Hogan said.

"It just took some patience," he said. "Through patience and intensive surveillance, we came up with them."

The May 31 escape was the largest death row breakout in U.S. history. Two of the escapees were captured in North Carolina on June 1, and two more were caught June 8 in Vermont.

On Tuesday, authorities called off a search for the Brileys in a heavily wooded area of northern Vermont and across the Canadian border that began over the weekend with a reported sighting.

Hogan said agents believe the Brileys had been in Philadelphia since June 1.

Court Accepts Guilty Plea

Greene Faces Minimum Of Life Sentence For Bethel Murders

By JANE WELBORN

Attorneys presented their opening statements to the jury and several witnesses testified as the sentencing phase of the Harvey Lee Greene Jr. trial began in Pitt County Superior Court this morning.

Greene changed his plea to guilty Tuesday in the murder and robbery of two people in Young's Cleaners in Bethel Dec. 19.

In the sentencing hearing the jury of five men and seven women will decide whether Greene will be sentenced to life in prison or penalized by death on the two charges of first degree murder.

The 23-year-old Bethel man had originally pleaded innocent to the robbery and beating deaths of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, an employee, and customer John Michael Edmondson, 33.

Judge Thomas S. Watts accepted Greene's guilty plea Tuesday after evidence in a pretrial motion was concluded.

Greene stood calmly and clearly answered "yes, sir" when Watts asked the defendant if he understood the charges and if he wanted to plead quilty.

The judge overruled a defense motion to suppress evidence in the trial. Watts ruled that Greene's constitutional rights had not been violated by law enforcement officers.

Witnesses with the State Bureau of Investigation testified Tuesday that Greene was informed of his rights before he made a statement of his guilt to the investigating officers.

SBI agent William Earl Godley told the court that he read Greene his rights and told him he did not have to take a polygraph test. Greene agreed to take the "lie detector" test, which he "failed." After the polygraph test was completed, Greene told the agent that he was involved in the robbery and murders.

Godley testified that Greene said he went into the cleaners with a toy gur and he had not planned to hurt anyone. When the clerk and the customer fought him, Greene told Godley he had picked up a pipe and had beaten them.

Greene had then supposedly given an oral statement to officers, which Bethel Police Chief Jerome K. Ratley had written and Greene had signed.

Greene entered a guilty plea to two counts of common-law robbery and two counts of first degree murder under the rule of felony murder, a murder that is not premeditated and occurs during another offense.

Watts said the robbery charges would be absorbed by the first degree murder charges, so Greene will not be sentenced for the robberies.

Watts informed Greene that the minimum sentence he would receive for the first degree murder charges was life imprisonment, and that he

PCC Study Shows Median Age Of Students Climbing

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The median age of community college students is rising and many women are branching out into male dominated fields, according to a Pitt Community College study that is part of a pilot student recruitment project for North Carolina.

PCC officials said these two findings "were not surprising" and are typical of what the study has revealed in terms of PCC's student population. "The study has reinforced many preconceived ideas," project coordinator Pat Chenier said. "For example, women are interested in a short-term sharpening of marketing skills and branching out into traditional male fields. Young, white males are going into the fields where they can make the most money. Young black males make up the group with the lowest skills levels."

The project targets what officials call "non-traditional" students — those age 20-80 that come to the college "for a variety of reasons." Traditional community college students, say officials, are those entering school directly after high school.

Hospital Reports Declining Census

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

May's patient days totaled 12,631, down from 13,120 reported in May last year, Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees were told Tuesday night.

Because of the continuing lower census, development of the budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is conservative, Fred Brown, hospital vice president, reported. This year's budget is running 7 percent under projections and expenses are 9 percent under, it was reported.

The trustees heard a report from Dr. Randolph Chitwood, a veteran of the cardiac surgery program at Duke University Medical Center, who has been retained as chief of the cardiac surgery program at PCMH. It is expected that this service for eastern North Carolina will increase usage during the coming year, they heard, as will the opening of the radiation therapy center here in October or November. The first heart surgery is planned for on or about July 9.

A resolution of appreciation was presented to Warren J. McRoy, chief financial officer of the hospital, who is resigning. He has served "in an exemplary manner" for 10 years, PCMH President Jack Richardson said.

A five-year lease of the physicians' lounge now being constructed was approved. The lease allows the physicians themselves to furnish the lounge as they see fit.

Personnel committee chairman Gene Paramore reported that recent

Shriner Executed

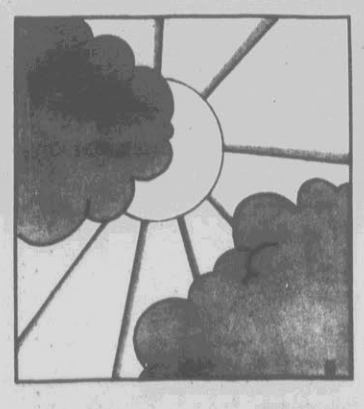

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Carl Shriner, a boyish-faced drifter convicted of killing a convenience store clerk during a robbery in 1976, was executed today in the electric chair at Florida State Prison.

Shriner, 30, was put to death shortly after 7 a.m. for the Oct. 22, 1976, shooting of Judith Ann Carter in nearby Gainesville.

He became the 20th person in the nation and the sixth in Florida to be executed since the U.S. Supreme Court lifted its ban on the death penalty in 1976. Shriner's last-ditch bid for a reprieve was denied Tuesday by the high court.

About 35 opponents of the death penalty held a candlelight vigil in a pasture across from the prison, while about 10 supporters of capital punishment gathered in an adjoining field.

The youthful-looking Shriner met overnight with a public defender, death penalty opponents and the Rev. Fred Lawrence of Gainesville before sitting down to his last meal, a steak dinner, said Department of Corrections spokesman Vernon Bradford.

GUC Reports Record Demand

As the calendar heads for the first day of summer on Thursday, people locked in the pre-summer heat wave of the last few days have headed for the air-conditioner dial for some relief from the 90-degree-plus weather.

While the thermometer soared Tuesday to a high of 98 degrees Fahrenheit, Greenville Utilities reported a highest-ever for June peak electrical demand of 150 megawatts. "This is August weather, not June weather," said Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's electrcial department. "We (GUC) saw loads higher yesterday than we've ever seen in June," said Green. "Normally we have peaks of 130-135 megawatts on a June day. Tuesday's was 11 percent higher than this normal level."

The only time GUC had a peak higher than 150, said Green, was August, 1983, when usage peaked at 160 megawatts. GUC expects high peak demand in August, he noted, when bulk tobacco barns are in use and students are in town. "This is not normal for June. The last few days have been really hot for this time of year." Green said this morning he did not expect peaks to go as high today.

On Tuesday GUG used its load management equipment for three hours on a rotating basis, Green said. "I can't say how much (money) the load management saved us yesterday but from January it saved the commission $276,000," he noted. This saving is passed onto customers who have load management equipment on heat pumps and hot water heaters in the form of credits on utility bills.

According to GUC's weather station, highs have remained in the 90's since Saturday, peaking with a 98-degree reading Tueday. No rainfall has been recorded since Saturday, when GUC measured .73 inch. The only other rainfall of the month was .3 inch recorded on June 6. A spokesman for GUC noted that both measurements were for Greenville only, and that these amounts were "extremely varied throughout the county."

According to Pitt agricultural officials, the need for rain is currently critical for area crops. The corn crop is experiencing a great deal of twisting from dry conditions, say officials, and most vegetable crops are also suffering from the drought. In addition, late-planted soybeans will not germinate properly without some rain, officials report.

Sax Says, 'Simpler Is Better'

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The simpler I get, the better the food is," chef Richard Sax said at a cooking demonstration at an Alaska Seafood Marketing Institute news conference in New York.

Among the recipes he prepared were steamed fish steaks and fillets, a crab and fish stew and deviled salmon cakes made with canned salmon.

The simplest was salmon steaks or fillets steamed with gingerroot, tarragon and rice wine vinegar:

3 tablespoons finely shredded scallion greens, about 1 inch long

1 tablespoon coarsely chopped fresh tarragon leaves (or ½ teaspoon dried)

1½ to 3 teaspoons of minced fresh ginger

2 salmon steaks or fillets, about 6 ounces each

1 tablespoon rice wine vinegar, or to taste

2 thin lemon slices

Combine prepared scallions, tarragon and ginger in a small bowl. Scatter half the mixture on an oiled, heat-proof plate. Lay salmon steaks or fillets on top, and scatter remaining seasonings on salmon.

Set plate in a steamer or a wide, covered pot with a rack set over gently boiling water; water should nearly reach level of rack. Cover tightly, and steam just until salmon is opaque in center — allowing about 10 minutes per inch of thickness, measured at thickest part.

Sprinkle salmon with the vinegar, then transfer to heated serving plates and garnish each serving with a thin slice of lemon. Makes 2 servings.

Sax's deviled salmon cakes are based on traditional crab cakes.

2 7¾-ounce cans or 1 1-pound can salmon, well drained

2 or more tablespoons unsalted butter, divided

½ cup finely chopped onion

One-third cup finely chopped celery

1 egg, lightly beaten

¼ cup mayonnaise, preferably homemade

Juice of ½ lemon, or more if needed

3 tablespoons chopped fresh dill weed

1½ to 2 teaspoons dry mustard

Salt and freshly ground pepper

¼ cup fresh bread crumbs

Flour

1 tablespoon oil

Dilled sour cream (optional; recipe follows)

Place drained salmon in mixing bowl. Flake into large pieces. Break up skin and bones and include, if desired.

Heat 1 tablespoon of the butter in a small skillet. Cook chopped onion and celery over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until softened but not brown — 5-7 minutes. Set aside to cool briefly.

In a small bowl, stir together the egg, mayonnaise, lemon juice, chopped dill, 1½ teaspoons of mustard and a little salt and pepper. Add this mixture, the bread crumbs and the onion mixture to the salmon. Toss gently, preferably with your hands, to prevent breaking up the fish too much. The mixture should be quite moist. Taste, and correct seasonings, then chill the mixture, covered, at least an hour.

Place a sheet of waxed paper near the stove and spread it with a layer of flour. Heat 1 tablespoon each of oil and butter in a wide skillet, preferably non-stick. Carefully flour both sides of fish cakes, handling them gently and shaking off excess flour. Saute the cakes over moderate heat until they are golden, shaking pan occasionally to prevent sticking. It should take 4 minutes on the first side and about 3 on the second side. Repeat with remaining cakes, adding butter and oil as needed, and keeping browned cakes warm. Squeeze a little lemon juice on each salmon cake before serving. Makes 4-6 servings.

Dilled sour cream:

3 tablespoons chopped fresh dill

¾ cup sour cream

Stir both ingredients together in a small serving bowl. Cover and chill.

Clowning Career's Been Built on Smiles

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MAGNOLIA SPRINGS, Ala. (AP) — Behind Ronlin Foreman's childlike mimics and round cherry-red nose are many hours of rehearsal for a performer whose career is built on smiles.

He's a clown.

The 31-year-old's mime and clown acts have taken him across the country and this fall he goes into the classroom. He'll be teaching character and improvisation at the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Clown College at Venice, Fla.

"I've been performing in mime work for 10 years, but my solo clown work has been developing for the past five years," Foreman said as he prepared to leave last week for a performance in Milwaukee, Wis.

Although his reputation as a performer appears to be growing, Foreman said he plans to raise his family in the rural Alabama coastal countryside of Magnolia Springs, where his wife grew up.

He said it may become necessary to keep an apartment in New York in the future. Foreman's twin brother, Donlin, is a principle dancer with the Martha Graham company in New York.

"Some of my mime work is very movement oriented, but it's still not termed dancing," said Foreman.

Ronlin and Donlin are from nearby Foley. Ronlin began to pursue his interest in the performing arts at Foley High School, where he was a drum major and helped design sets for plays. He later earned an undergraduate degree in fine arts at the University of Southern Mississippi.

His clown work is centered on the child and a fascination with "light and shadow and the things that hide in our imagination."

His two-act show, he said, "reaffirms joy and sorrow."

Funny, but he makes you cry.

Offstage, there's the reality of paying bills. Security is a "big factor" to consider before deciding to become a clown, he said. "I've worked for 10 years and not done anything else. I do graphic design on the side. But basically we support ourselves in the theater. I've just stayed with it."

His wife, Lauren, designs his costumes. She traveled with Foreman, performing in small roles, before the birth of their first child, Lila. They are expecting their second child later this year.

Foreman said he teaches a lot, but he's never taught clowns, as he will at the Florida school.

"My work with the clowns comes out of the background as an actor, their work with clowns comes out of the circus, with all the accouterments of makeup and garish costumes and circus technique," he said.

Foreman said he'd choose to be on stage, if it came to a choice between teaching and acting.

"It's been more beneficial for me to accept teaching situations in the past. As my reputation grows, I'm accepting less teaching and more performance," he said.

After his performance at the Milwaukee Performing Arts Center's Festival of Mimes and Clowns, he goes to West Virginia for the International Mime and Clown Festival, and later to Lincoln Center for a Labor Day performance.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

An ideal kitchen can be any size or any shape. What makes it ideal is its efficiency and cleanability and both require careful planning.It starts with studying exisiting conditions to determine how they are being used. Work areas may have to be reorganized to remove clutter, to make area more efficient and perhaps to add more storage space.

Many hours are spent in the kitchen, whether it's used as work place or social center, so it should also have a pleasant atmosphere. If your kitchen has become cluttered, even frustrating, to work in, perhaps it is time to determine how the room is being used and what can be done to make it more efficient, as well as easier to keep clean.

Every kitchen should have three major work centers — food preparation (refrigerator-freezer), clean-up (sink and dishwasher) and cooking (range). They should be placed at the points of a triangle and reasonably close to each other with enough counter space in between to perform the necessary work. In many instances, the counter space is shared between two centers.

There may also be supplementary work centers. These centers are optional, but help tremendously in making a kitchen more versatile and serviceable. They may include a mixing or baking center, a secondary cooking area for appliances such as a microwave oven, a planning center, an eating area, even a laundry or sewing center. Keep in mind the need for convenience in cooking if the kitchen is large enough for other work areas. An eat-in kitchen, for example, should not obstruct the normal movements necessary in food preparation. Put the furniture out of the way.

Each center requires storage space for the supplies and equipment to be used in that area. Convenient locations save steps and time. Arrange the kitchen accordingly. For example, put paring knives, vegetable peelers, colanders and cutting boards near the sink. Keep fry pans, cooking utensils such as tongs, ladle, turner, spoon, pot holders in the cooking area.

Some items are used in several locations and could be stored on the basis of where they are used first or last. Cleanup may be faster if glassware, dishes and flatware are stored close to the sink and dishwasher. But they can also be kept in a cabinet close to the dining area. You may decide that glasses are more conveniently stored near the refrigerator. The best place, then, becomes a matter of which works best for you. It may be helpful to consider purchasing duplicate sets of items that are relatively inexpensive such as measuring cups and spoons, spatulas and bowls to keep in several work centers.

Fill previous space in any work center with items that are used most frequently. Don't keep a blender on the counter if it is used only occasionally. Stow it away. Reserve counter space for a food processor, can-opener, ccoffee-maker, whatever it used frequently or daily. Consider moving appliances off the counters, perhaps to another lcoation. A toaster or coffee-maker near the breakfast eating area is one possibility. Another is to store the unit, particularly a mixer or food processor, in a base cabinet designed with a swing-up shelf.

Cabinet space can be savedf by hanging cookware on a rack or on pegboard installed on an unused wall. Displaying attractive looking pots and pans also adds a decorative touch to any kitchen.

Other decorative changes may not only improve the appearance of the room, but may also contribute to easier cleaning. For example, consider mounting a self-sticking washable paper on walls or installing metal or ceramic wall tiles around the range and sink as possible alternaties to painted surfaces.

There are a variety of storage aids to expand existing space. Many are relatively inexpensive and simply require placement or an easy installation. Door racks; hanging shelving units; cup hangers; shelves and rack of all types of condiments, cans, plates, lids, vegetable bins and lazy Susans are just some of the many answers for expannding storage space. Check housewares departments in stores for displlays of units available to solve innumerable storage problems.

Double-duty items save space and time. A portable storage cabinet with a butcher block top can be used as an island work surface in the kitchen and for the storage of dishes underneath. The cabinet could also double as a transportable sideboard to cart to the dining area the dishes for setting the table and the food to be served.

Arranging a kitchen to be more efficient is well worth the time and effort. You'll find that the results pay off in the saving of many hours in preparation and cleanup time in a kitchen that also looks more attractive.

Psychologist Says

Michael Brings Out Child In Each of Us

BOSTON (UPI) — First it was Sinatra, the 1940s Voice surrounded by swooning bobby-soxers.

It was Elvis the Pelvis in the '50s, swinging hips and breaking hearts, combining the down-home look of backwoods Mississippi with smoldering sensuality.

In the '60s and '70s, groups like the Beatles took over and adolescents and music lovers took their idols in bunches.

Now Michael Jackson of the androgynous look and falsetto voice is in his reign. Such an individual music sensation, whether you like him, has not been known for years.

Jackson may be a media creation, a David Cassidy flash-in-the pan. But some psychologists and music experts think he has staying power.

The Boston Pops might yet have John Williams lead them through "Billie Jean."

The Beatles were bigger, of course, and so were the Rolling Stones, and probably even The Who during the "Tommy" rock opera heyday. But little Michael is in that select group of entertainers instantly identifiable by first name.

Jackson is an enigmatic entertainment phenomenon whose appeal is defined by some Massachusetts psychologists as giving adults a second chance at childhood.

"Jackson represents the child in all of us that somehow through him we experience being a child," said Dr. Peter A. Wish of Framingham, Mass., a psychologist who runs an institute of family relations and is on the media advisory board of the American Psychological Association.

"That's the reason kids are so crazy about him and adults too, because of the playful nature of his personality," Wish said in an interview.

Jackson, who grew up as the youngest member of a family singing group, didn't have a chance to explore childhood normally, Wish said. Neighbors in Indiana say he was a kind and sensitive loner who didn't play with kids.

Somehow, Wish said, Jackson now is living that childhood and giving housewives, yuppies, children, and adolescents of all ages license to be silly and move to the groove of songs like "Beat It."

Wish noted that Jackson's home is decorated with Disney-like characters. "He's living in a fantasy world. Everyone caught ub the hectic pace of life would like very much to live in a fantasy world a little."

Dr. Robert Brooks, a Harvard Medical School psychologist, said he thinks Jackson is so popular because "he has both masculine and feminine qualities that some teens find comforting ... one could identify with both aspects."

Brooks said Jackson's dancing is "very sexual," and Jackson is a different kind of role model for rock: someone who neither drinks nor uses drugs.

Jackson is also a performer whose musical works support his appeal, said Larry Monroe, chairman of the Performance Studies Department at Boston's Berklee College of Music, the alma mater of Jackson's friend and mentor Quincy Jones.

"It makes everybody feel good," Monroe said of Jackson's songs.

"Michael represents a kind of 10 to 12 to 15-year amalgam of what's gone before in Motown, rhythm and blues and funk movement, and elements of Australian and Engish influx," he said.

"The tunes are strong, they are melodic, You can whistle them after hearing them a couple of times, they are quite alive and you can dance them, the lyrics are up to date," Monroe said.

Picnic Packing Can Be An Art

NORWICH, Conn. (UPI) — There's an art to packing a picnic that will make your family outing easier to prepare and more enjoyable for everyone.

Cherry Read, picnic consultant to the Thermos Company, makers of popular coolers, has tips for picnic packers that will enable them to serve delicious, refreshingly cool and attractively presented meals away from home.

Choose the right size cooler for the occasion, Miss Read says. A cooler should have suficient capacity to hold food, drink and implements but it should not be so large that the contents are not held firmly in place by each other. She suggests a 55 quart cooler for a family of four or five.

Squared off plastic containers are best for packing picnic coolers, rather than round containers, because more will fit inside.

Prepare all foods the day before, Miss Read advises. Pack them in containers and chill overnight in the refrigerator. Chill beverages in their cans and bottles overnight. Chill the cooler separately by placing ice inside the night before and closing it.

Make a list of all the non-food items you will need, she says. The basics are salt and pepper, knives, forks and spoons, can and bottle openers, corkscrew, plastic or paper glasses and plates, table cloth, paper towels, napkins, hand-wiping towelettes, garbage bags and ties, and insect repellent.

Just a little trouble in choosing your accessories for eye appeal will pay off in a more pleasurable picnic. Choose color-coordinated paper goods and utensils that are attractive and lightweight for easier carrying.

The day of the picnic take out your cooler and empty it of ice. You can add fresh ice on the bottom, or better still, use pre-frozen brick coolers available at hardware stores and supermarkets to help maintain the cold temperature within.

Miss Read advises putting chilled beverages on the bottom first. Next pack your containers of food, large ones first and smaller on top and between the others to keep each other firm and steady. Be sure to pack crushable foods such as fruit in rigid containers.

Pack non-food items in plastic bags on top of the food, or pack on the shelf on the upper level of the cooler. If there still are spaces between items, fill them in by packing a few small towels to fill the gaps and prevent spills. Take desserts that come in individual disposable containers such as yogurts or puddings.

Homemade iced tea, prepared the night before and chilled in a rectangular pitcher container with a tightly closed top, provides a refreshing change from the bottled sodas usually served at picnics. These pack best into a bottom corner of the cooler.

Remember, keep your cooler closed until picnic time for the best results.

For those who like wine with their picnic fare, Miss Read suggests a personal size (7 quart capacity) cooler with ice. At the picnic site, place either one jug or one or two bottles of wine upright in the open cooler among the ice cubes for a perfect outdoor ice bucket.

Abortions May Be Chosen If Adoption Records Opened

DEAR ABBY: On "Hour Magazine," you told Gary Collins that you were not certain of the number of states that permit sealed adoption records to be opened.

Abby, there are several states that permit the violation of confidentiality promised the birth mother at the time she signed the adoption papers. Can you imagine the terror of thousands of birth mothers who see this national push to open the records in the remaining states? Provisions can always be made for medical information to be made available to the adoptee, but to tell a young woman now that her name will be revealed in 18 years could drive many straight to the abortion clinics.

Efforts are being made in our state legislature to try to get a bill through to close the loophole inadvertently created in order to protect the privacy of Pennsylvania birth mothers.

CONCERNED IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR CONCERNED: Other states where birth records are opened without the mutual consent of birth parents and adoptees are Alabama and Kansas. In Pennsylvania (and eventually in the remaining 47 states), at issue is whether or not adoptees have the right to know the identity of their natural parents, even if the parents do not wish to be identified.

I personally feel that only if all concerned parties want to meet should a meeting take place.

As it stands today—and I am not condoning it—the only way a prospective unwed mother can be absolutely certain that her unplanned pregnancy will never be disclosed is to opt for an abortion.

Far Ahead

Job hunting still is not easy for former students who have just graduated from college, but things are better.

ECU Director of Career Planning and Placement Furney James says the market for graduates is 10 times better than it has been in recent years, although still very competitive.

James expects 70 to 75 percent of the ECU grads to have jobs by September. Some won't because it is still a competitive market and some job seekers are limited by geographic considerations, family ties and other factors. The search is competitive because some 30,000 graduates from various North Carolina colleges and universities are now in the job market.

But, James said, positions are to be found. "Quality graduates will find jobs."

In contrast to previous years there are some teaching jobs but some nursing graudates are concerned about employment. A few years back nurses could take their choice of job offers. Now cutbacks in the health care field have created a different situation.

Those who use initiative will likely find jobs, however. James suggests studying the firm or field and then going after a particular job.

It is obvious that jobs will be found by graduates this year who go seeking them. The days are long gone when a number of offers were available to every graduate, but that doesn't mean there is not adquate opportunity. Even with the factor of having to job hunt, those with college degrees are still far ahead in the search for a better occupational future.

Benefits Repaid

On June 22 the GI Bill of Rights will be 40 years old. That realization might come as a shock to many WWII veterans; it changed the lives of most of them, and it changed America.

It was the revolutionary brainchild of the American Legion and the model for similar programs provided veterans of conflicts that followed in succeeding years.

Briefly, the GI Bill extended educational opportunities, vocational and on-the-job training, readjustment allowances, loan guarantees to help buy homes, farms or small businesses, a review of discharges, adequate hospitalization, settlement of claims, mustering-out pay, effective employment placement service, and the concentration of all veterans functions in the Veterans Administration. It was all-encompassing.

Never before had any nation assured its veterans such comprehensive rehabilitation; and never had any nation restored its servicemen to a position comparable to those who had not served. Never had a nation offered its veterans such opportunities for improvement and prosperity.

It staggers the imagination to reflect on how many millions received education and training in every field, from aeronautics to zoology, from electrical engineering to plumbing, auto mechanics, and truck driving. (We have heard professors say again and again that as a group their veteran students were the finest, most dedicated students they had known.)

The billions of dollars devoted by a grateful government to assuring their former servicemen's future turned out to be an investment repaid many times over.

The dividends are all about us.

Mondale Takes No. 2 Seriously

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale's mating dance with potential vice presidential nominees is a political ritual that reflects his belief in the importance of the job as well as his instinctive desire to reach out to interest groups.

There is little doubt that Mondale is sincere when he describes the choice of someone to fill the second spot on the Democratic ticket as the most important decision he will make.

Mondale served four years as vice president under Jimmy Carter and, by most accounts, was a high-level participant rather than a figurehead who did little more than break ties in the Senate and attend funerals.

Mondale also is uniquely sensitive to Democratic Party constituent politics, those special interests that were a mixed blessing to his campaign during the primary season.

And that sensitivity inevitably raises the question whether much of the public show taking place in Minnesota during this pre-convention period is designed more to satisfy interest groups than to find a vice president.

During the campaign, Mondale often promised that no one would be excluded from consideration for vice president, particularly not because of race or sex.

He's keeping that promise as the invitations start going out to potential candidates to come to Minnesota and talk about the job.

The interview method is reminiscent of how Carter went about his search in 1976.

But Mondale is not limiting his interviews to white males. The three candidates announced were Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, a black; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, a conservative Democrat from a key state, and Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco, a Jewish woman.

Bentsen has long been considered a possible Mondale running mate, but neither Bradley nor Mrs. Feinstein are considered likely choices.

In fact, the journey the two mayors will make to Minnesota is considered more an effort to convince their constituencies that Mondale is not leaving them out.

Two senators, both white males, and one woman, are the names most often mentioned for the job.

They include Gary Hart, who remains in the race for the top spot on the ticket, and Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

The woman is Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, who visited with Mondale on Saturday in her role as chairman of the Democratic Party platform committee. Mondale said they did not discuss the vice presidency.

Mondale described her as "one of the stars of the Democratic Party."

The next day he met with Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky, who will be presiding officer of the convention and, once again, said they did not discuss the second spot on the ticket.

He called her "someone I admire a great deal."

Doing It All For Nothing

A group of cub reporters was sitting in a bar in Washington when several old-timers from the 1984 Democratic Primary Veterans Association came in.

We watched in awe as they ordered their drinks.

Mike Gretschel said to one of them, "I guess you guys saw a lot of action."

The grizzled vet said proudly, "We saw it all. From the caucus halls of Iowa to the exit polls of Newport Beach. We were there in the snows of New Hampshire, and we fought in the peanut furrows of Georgia. But we're not heroes. We were just doing our job. Someone had to cover the Democratic presidential primaries, and better us than our wives and children."

"What do you mean wives and children?" a woman vet wearing a network baseball cap said "I was there too."

"Sorry, Sarah," the vet apologized.

"What was it really like, sir, covering Mondale, Hart and Jackson?" a young reporter asked.

A vet loaded down with campaign pins stared in his beer and said, "I'd rather not talk about it."

The vet standing next to him whispered to me, "He lost his best friend at a Hart fund-raising barbecue in Waco, Texas."

"What happened?"

"The friend was listening to Gary Hart explain how he differed from Mondale on the nuclear freeze for the 165th time, and he freaked out. They took him away in a straightjacket."

One of the vets held up his glass and said, "Here's to Johnny Appleseed."

The other vets all solemnly lifted their glasses, drank, and then smashed them against the fireplace.

"Who was Johnny Appleseed?" one of us asked.

"He was the greatest," a TV veteran said. "He threw himself on a Mondale mimeograph machine which was turning out a press release on Hart's credibility gap and saved all our lives. He was awarded the Media Medal of Honor posthumously."

Another vet was wearing combat ribbons from Syria, Canada and Mexico.

I asked the man next to me. "Where did he earn those?"

"He covered Jesse Jackson's campaign, and was one of the few reporters who saw action in the Democratic primaries outside the United States."

I turned to the Jackson vet, "I guess you were in the thick of it."

The Jackson vet said, "I saw enough to last me a lifetime. You never know when you wrote a story about Jackson whether the Reverend Farrakhan would threaten your life. We had to wear bulletproof vests everytime we attended a rally. I guess those of us who covered Jackson saw more action than anybody else. When it came to campaigning he was another George Patton."

I bought a Mondale vet a drink. "It's hard for someone on the home front to imagine what you people went through."

"You don't think about it until it's over," he said. "Mondale was always sniping at Hart, Hart was always dropping bombs on Mondale, Jackson's people engaged in hand-to-hand combat for delegates, and all three were trying to burn the Democratic Party to the ground. Everyone took the low ground. Whoever said, 'Democratic primaries are hell' know what he was talking about."

"I can't wait to cover one," I said.

"That's because you've never seen a primary close up. All you saw is what they showed you on television, and what you read in the paper. They never showed you the boredom between the speeches and the debates. You never saw us huddled in Holiday Inns and airport waiting rooms waiting for something — anything — to happen. You never heard the same speeches a thousand times. No one who has been there would ever want to do it again."

"But at least you have something to tell your grandchildren."

"I doubt it. Who the hell will care in 20 years what the Mondale, Hart, Jackson war was all about? Nobody even cares now."

Advice To Mondale: Pull Away From Jackson

WASHINGTON — No sooner had Walter F. Mondale clinced the presidential nomination in New Jersey than the wise heads of his party, acting independently, prepared this crucial advice for their new leader: publicly distance yourself from Jesse Jackson.

That message will soon be conveyed to Mondale's closest aides and the candidate himself. They will be told that Mondale need offend neither the Rev. Jackson nor the aspirations of blacks. But to prevent a hemorrhage of white voters, he must explicitly separate himself from Jackson, particularly on Middle East policy. What's more, say the wise heads, separation must come well before the July 16 San Francisco convention — preferably within two weeks.

This is no mere tactical ploy. Although key to Mondale's hope of defeating Ronald Reagan, it also addresses the Democratic's Party's continued majority status. But what is being asked of Mondale is so alien to his style and personality that it must be seen as a first critical test of his new leadership.

At this moment, nothing is farther from the priorities set by most of Mondale's men than moving him away from Jackson. They concentrate instead on ways to convince Sen. Gary Hart that an active, last-ditch campaign cannot win him the nomination but will do lasting damage to himself, Mondale and the Democratic Party.

But Democratic leaders across the nation, while annoyed by Hart, are frightened by Jackson. They have come to believe that his advent into Democratic politics threatens to alienate more white voters than it can possibly attract newly registered blacks. The tipping point for Jackson's influence from plus to minus may have been his reckless mission to Mexico City.

Whether wishful thinking or not, Democratic leaders believe Jackson is about to enter a conciliatory phase at San Francisco in which he will lower his voice and reduce his demands. But even if that is correct, they still see a need for Mondale, who became Fighting Fritz in bludgeoning Hart, to stop walking on eggshells in dealing with Jackson.

The soft-gloved handling is viewed as "patronizing" by one Jackson critic and Mondale admirer, New York's Mayor Ed Koch. "He should treat Jackson the way he treats Hart," Koch told us. Many other Democrats, speaking privately to us, made the same point in discussing various Mondale scenarios.

These scenarios are remarkably similar: The nominee, after conferring Jackson, would make a public statement proclaiming their agreement on a wide range of domestic and foreign policies — especially equal rights. Then Mondale would carefully enumerate "other" issues on which the two disagree, issues divorced from either the economic well-being or civil rights of minority groups.

One "other" issue is Mondale's view that defense spending must be gradually increased (albeit much more slowly than President Reagan wants) while Jackson demands cuts. Another is Mondale's refusal to support Jackson's call of abolition of runoff primaries in the South in order to nominate more black Democrats in majority white constituencies. Emphasizing these differences would help Mondale with defense-oriented moderates and white Southerners — voters trending to Reagan.

But the most important "other" issue the wise heads want Mondale to emphasize is his pro-Israel position in the Middle East, in direct conflict with Jackson's.

Strength For Today

Have you ever seen a surgeon preparing himself for an operation? He scrubs his hands until you would think that he would scrub the very skin off them. Then he sterilizes his hands. Last of all he puts on sterilized rubber gloves. Only then is he ready for his work. Without this preparation many of his patients would die of infection.

Transfer this scientific process into the field of the spirit and you will see that the miracles of a spiritually powerful life arise from cleanness of heart. Sound theology without sincerity is as futile as skillful surgery without clinical cleanness. Wash the soul clean of evil desires and you have made it possible for God to perform miracles in your life, and through your life in the lives of others.

It is amazing, is it not, how the truly big issues of life depend on small and apparently insignificant matters.

NEEDED, A GOOD RAIN — Corn crops, along with tobacco in Pitt County, are badly in need of rain. The run of hot, dry weather without rain has caused corn to begin to curl up and in some instances leaves are turning brown at the bottom of corn stalks, according to Pitt County Agriculture Extension chairman Leroy James. James is shown here examining a typical growth of corn on a farm between Ayden and Grifton that is suffering from lack of rain. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

City Schools Run Into Competition In Hiring Top Minority Graduates

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The effort by Greenville school personnel to recruit minority student graduates for the school faculty is running into a primary problem, that of intense competition to hire outstanding minority graduates.

During a discussion Tuesday night at the school board meeting, Freager Sanders Jr. presented a report of recruitment efforts made as part of the school system's affirmative action plan. The affirmative action guideline incorporates a directive to annually conduct extensive, active recruitment efforts to insure that to the greatest extent possible, the school system's faculty is staffed with teachers and other personnel from minority groups — American Indian, Hispanic, Oriental and Black.

This spring, Greenville teachers, administrators and principals contacted 28 colleges and universities in North Carolina and adjoining states as part of the total recruitment effort. Following verbal contact with schools, the recruiting teams visited 19 of the 28 schools during career days/teacher fairs held at the schools. At that time they talked to prospective teachers, providing them with information about the Greenville school system, giving them application forms to fill out and submit in the event they were interested in further contact and discussions.

"It's a very competitive situation now," Sanders told the board. "At several of the colleges visited we would have as many as 100 at one setting to talk to. The big problem is that lots of recruiting people from larger school systems and from businesses are also looking for promising people. Some of the bigger places, like Charlotte and Greensboro, are offering supplements, something we can't do.

"We're in another of the up and down cycles of the number of students available to apply for teacher jobs," Sanders commented. "At this time applicants have a wide choice to choose from. Later, the cycle will probably swing the other way. There's a surplus of graduates in some fields who are going back to school to get into the education field."

Board member George Williams, a faculty member in the department of physical education, East Carolina University, pointed out that in many instances the number of students majoring in education had dropped drastically in recent years. ""For the school year 1981-82 we had 82 graduates in one area of our department," he said. "This year the number of graduates in that area was only 36."

Charles Ross, director of education for the city schools, explained that "the number of student teachers scheduled by ECU for the first semester of the coming school year is the smallest in a long time. Where usually we will have 25 to 30 assigned to the city schools for grades K-6, there are only four in K-3 and 5 in grades 4-6 being assigned to regular classrooms as student teachers."

In response to a question about the causes of this significant drop in numbers, Ross said "it is not a matter of shortage of money to fund the student teachers. It's simply that many students are going into other areas. They are aware that in addition to relatively low pay, there are real demands on what is expected of teachers. There's a lot of stress."

Aycock Junior High principal Kay Whitehurst, who along with Rose High principal Howard Hurt made a recruiting visit to North Carolina Central University in Durham, said "on our visit, Howard and I encountered recruiting people from as far away as Chicago and Florida. These people have more to offer than we do, offers we cannot think of matching. I also agree with Ross that young people going into teaching are placed under tremendous stress."

In his report, Sanders provided a list covering 10 colleges and universitites visited — nine in North Carolina, one in Virginia, with the names of the schools, the recruiting personnel from Greenville, and a listing of the names of the 111 students who were given individual interviews.

Commenting on expectations for success of the recruitment efforts, Superintendent Dr. Delma Blinson said "we have not received recommendations from our recruitment people for prospective people to identify as ones to try to put on contract immediately, however, every effort has been and will continue to be made to recruit some outstanding people."

Blinson added "last year, we were able to hire four people as a result of the recruitment program carried out."

Kenly Plans Tobacco Festival

KENLY — Organizers of the Tobacco Museum of North Carolina in Kenly are hosting the first "Pride in Tobacco" festival on Saturday. Kenly, which bills itself as Tobaccoland, U.S.A., is located in an area where within 50 miles half of America's annual harvest of about a billion pounds of flue-cured tobacco is grown.

A full day of free activities gets under way in downtown Kenly at 10 a.m. Attractions scheduled include a boat show, a motorcycle and three-wheeled vehicle show, an antique car show and a farm equipment show.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. will send a "Pride in Tobacco" Caravan traveling display and a bandstand truck. Live country music will be performed by recording artist Bill Lyerly and Band and by Al Batten and the Bluegrass Reunion.

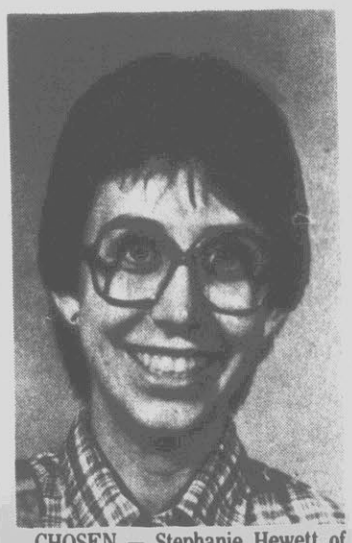

Mac Burnette, the 1981 world tobacco auctioneering champion, will make a guest appearance. Race fans will be able to inspect the Wood Brothers-prepared Winston Cup Grand National stock car to be displayed. Other activities will include kiddie rides, arts and crafts, a puppet show, a flower arranging competition, and cornshuck doll construction.

One of the principal goals of the organizers of the festival is to begin raising funds to construct a permanent home for the Tobacco Museum. The museum is currently housed in a van and in a building that was once a restaurant.

Kenly is located between Wilson and Selma on U.S. 301 where it meets Interstate 95. It is about 50 miles from Greenville, via Wilson or the same distance on a backroads trip through Farmville, Saratoga, Stantonsburg, Eukreka, and Fremont, taking NC 222 from Saratoga.

President Says 'Carnage Must End'

ORADELL, N.J. (AP) — President Reagan said today he reversed his position against punishing states that fail to adopt a minimum drinking age of 21 because "the carnage must end, and now."

In a speech prepared for students, faculty and parents at River Dell High School here, Reagan acknowledged that his decision may appear to be "at odds with my philosophical viewpoint that state problems should involve state solutions — and it isn't up to a big and overwhelming government in Washington to tell the states what to do."

But teenage drunken driving is "more than just a state problem," Reagan said. "It's a national tragedy involving transit across state borders. We just can't tolerate this anymore."

Reagan said he had hoped states with legal drinking ages below 21 would act on their own to follow the national standard advocated last year by his commission on drunken driving.

But only four of the 23 states that have considered the issue in recent months agreed to go along.

"Now it appears that things have stalled," Reagan said.

Referring to his decision a week ago to support House-passed legislation to withhold part of a state's federal highway funds for failure to go along, Reagan said this was a case in which "the problem is so clear cut and the benefits are so clear cut" that he had "no misgivings about a judicious use of federal inducements to encourage the states to get moving."

With about half the states accepting the 21-year standard and about half with drinking ages ranging from 18 to 20, Reagan said the nation has become "a kind of crazy quilt of different state drinking laws, and that has led to what have been called 'blood borders,' with teenagers leaving their homes to go to the nearest state with a lower drinking age.

"And they drink — and get drunk — and careen on home — and get into trouble of all sorts, including auto accidents."

He said statistics show that people 18 to 20 years old are more than twice as likely as any other age group to be involved in an alcohol-related traffic accident.

In an aside in which he urged his audience not to use illegal drugs, Reagan reflected on his life in Hollywood and Los Angeles, where he said he "saw a lot of people who were living fast lives.

"As a man who has lived 73 years and who has seen a lot," the president said, "I just want to tell you: Don't take drugs. ... Don't fall for that stuff about 'life in the fast lane.' That's where all the worst crashes are.

"Many of us who are older have lost friends to one addiction or another. And some of you have lost — or will lose — friends to drugs, to the addictions that will squeeze them, to death or the impairment that will make them make the wrong move in a fast car. Your generation has lost some of its favorites, like John Belushi and so many others."

From New Jersey, Reagan was flying to Hartford, Conn., to promote his administration's anticrime program at a convention of the National Sheriffs Association.

Six months ago, when his commission proposed cutting federal highway aid to states failing to adopt the 21-year standard, Reagan's spokesmen dismissed the idea as another example of the federal government meddling in a matter better left to the states.

The 1980 Republican Party platform, which Reagan championed, had called for repeal of similar legislation used to set 55 m.p.h. as the national speed limit.

White House spokesman Anson Franklin said Tuesday that, although the administration "has not changed its position" on the speed limit, it is awaiting the outcome of a National Science Foundation cost-benefit study due in August.

That study is expected to link the decline in highway death rates to the reduced speed limit.

Franklin and deputy press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said a sharp decline in the number of young people killed in auto accidents in states that have raised the legal drinking age to 21 helped persuade Reagan to support legislation to penalize states that permit people under 21 to buy alcohol. A bill already had passed the House overwhelmingly a week before despite Reagan's opposition. It now awaits Senate action, perhaps this week or next.

The Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., would withhold 5 percent of federal highway aid money from states that fail to adopt 21 as the minimum drinking age by 1987. The penalty would climb to 10 percent of the 1988 allocation.

A White House paper distributed on Tuesday said that in New Jersey, which raised its legal drinking age from 19 to 21 on Jan. 1, "analysis has shown a significant impact in reducing nighttime single-vehicle driver fatalities among those affected by the legislation." Among 19- and 20-year-olds, the statement said, deaths dropped 26 percent.

Paper Says Principal Ill-Advised

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A high school valedictorian who was stopped by her principal from delivering part of her graduation speech got a much larger audience when a newspaper printed the text in full to protest censorship.

The San Jose Mercury News published the speech in its entirety Tuesday opposite an editorial which called the principal's action "an arrogant and foolish mistake."

Lizette Espana, the top student in her class at San Jose High School with a 3.93 grade point average, had prepared a six-page speech titled, "Images of Orwell," referring to George Orwell's book, "1984."

Principal Sam Rodriguez objected to parts of the address critical of the school administration.

FDA Will Allow Artificial Heart Implants

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Long-delayed government approval of new guidelines for artificial heart implants means the world's second such operation could come the day after a suitable candidate is found, a doctor says.

"We are now in the process of finding a patient for the next clinical (implantation) of the artificial heart," said Dr. William C. DeVries.

DeVries, the only surgeon authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to implant the plastic pump in a human, inserted the device that kept Barney Clark alive for 112 days.

Dr. Richard Lee, coordinator for the heart team, said it was hard to predict how long it would take to find an implant recipient. It took nine months for doctors to select Clark, but Lee said he didn't expect it to take so long the second time around.

Their comments followed approval Tuesday by the FDA of revised guidelines that will allow doctors at the University of Utah Medical Center to select a healthier implant candidate than Clark.

The 62-year-old Clark received an artificial heart Dec. 2, 1982, and died March 23, 1983, of multiple organ failure that doctors believe was unrelated to the fist-size polyurethane device.

"This has been a long time coming," Dr. Robert Jarvik, who invented the air-driven heart, told a news conference. "We can move ahead ... in a larger group of patients without having to have a review after each case."

Jarvik referred to the FDA's go-ahead for six more implants. However, DeVries emphasized university approval still would be required for each of the operations.

The second implant could take place "within the next day, if possible" after a candidate is selected, DeVries said. "We are ready right now, at this moment."

He said he did not yet have a candidate, although "hundreds" had inquired about the pioneering procedure.

"Until the approval came from the Food and Drug Administration, we did not feel it was morally or ethically right to begin a list," DeVries said. But he added one would be started immediately.

The lenghty process that led to FDA approval of a second implant caused frustration and some anger among members of the school's artificial heart team. Jarvik said several prospective heart recipients died while waiting for the approval sought by DeVries and by Jarvik's company, Kolff Medical Inc.

But elation reigned when the surgeons learned Tuesday they had been granted their wish to put the device in a healthier patient. Clark was near death from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative heart disease, when he underwent the all-night implant surgery.

The FDA also said DeVries could experiment for three-hour periods with the portable 10-pound Heimes Heart Driver, which would allow a recipient more freedom than the wheeled, 375-pound compressed-air drive unit to which Clark was tethered by 6-foot hoses.

The revised guidelines also eliminates an eight-week waiting period during which a patient must be in Class IV of the New York Medical Association's method of classifying heart patients.

That category represents the most critically ill cardiac cases.

DeVries said that doing away with the waiting period could give heart recipients a better chance for survival.

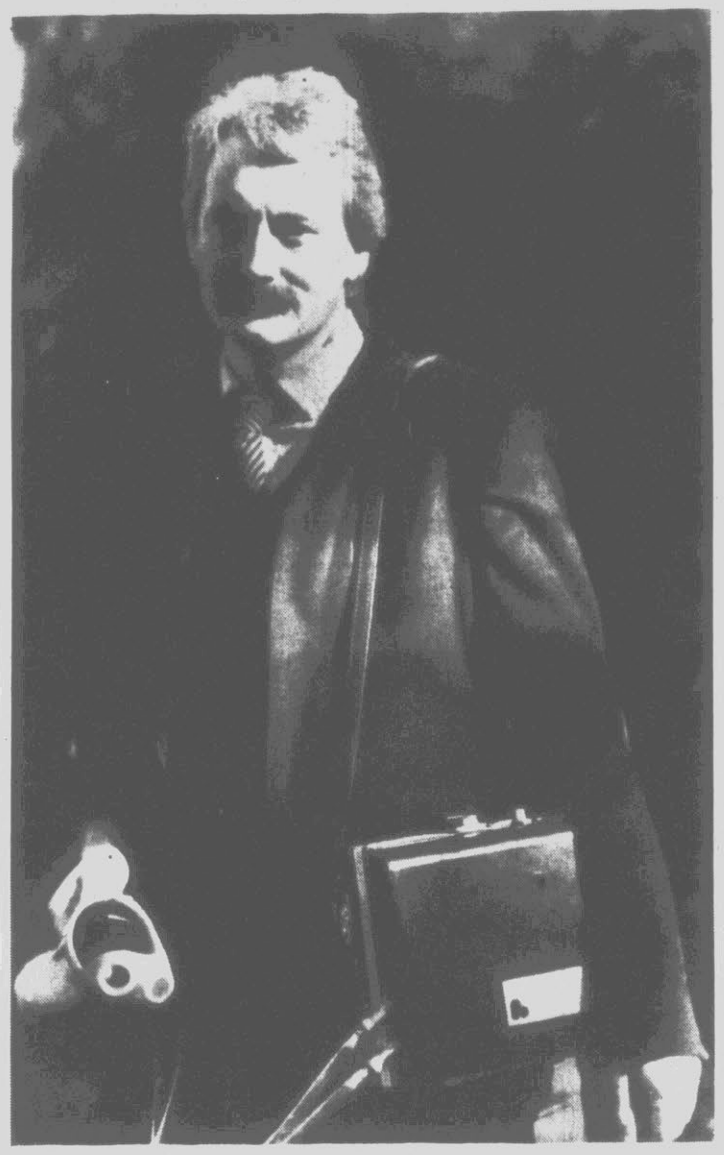

Further, the FDA is allowing DeVries to choose from candidates who cannot be weaned from a heart-lung machine following serious cardiac surgery.

With the new protocol in hand, DeVries said he now could look for candidates "who have healthy bodies but very sick hearts."

Lee said selecting the next candidate "depends on how many patients are referred and how suitable they are. We assume it won't take that long this time, due to the publicity about the first implant."

However, Lee said the publicity also could restrict interest in the procedure.

"People are aware that Barney Clark did not go home, so they may not be particularly anxious," he said.

PORTABLE HEART UNIT — Dr. Peter Heimes holds a portable heart-drive system, which he invented. He has a cut-away artificial heart in his right hand. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration gave approval Tuesday for doctors to implant another artificial heart in a human, using Heimes' portable system. (AP Laserphoto)

Depression Breaks Up Over Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — A soggy tropical depression slipped slowly into the mountains of northeastern Mexico after building winds of only 30 mph during a two-day, one-night ocean voyage, forecasters said.

The storm system, the second of the young Atlantic hurricane season, moved inland late Tuesday near Tampico, Mexico, according to a statement released at 10:30 p.m. EDT.

The poorly defined center of the depression was estimated to be about 200 miles south-southwest of Brownsville, Texas, the National Weather Service statement said.

The statement said that the system is expected to continue moving northwest at a rate of about 9 mph and should dissipate over the mountains of northeastern Mexico on Wednesday.

"It's moving slowly northwest," said forecaster Gil Clark of the Hurricane Center. "It's no big deal. At least we haven't seen anything to make a big deal about."

Rain was expected to spread north from the system, and the weather service issued a small craft advisory from Baffin Bay, Texas, to Brownsville.

The depression was first reported in the southwestern Gulf of Mexico at 3 p.m. Monday by an Air Force weather reconnaissance plane.

Tropical depressions aren't classified as tropical storms and named until winds reach a sustained speed of 39 mph or more. Hurricanes have winds of 74 mph or more.

The first depression of the 1984 Atlantic hurricane season fizzled after it reached Northeast Florida last Wednesday.

Hunt-Helms Debates To Be Discussed

RALEIGH (AP) — Representatives for Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms agreed Tuesday to invite a spokesman for the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters to attend negotiations for a series of debates in the U.S. Senate campaign.

Hunt, a Democrat, is challenging Republican Helms' bid for a third term.

Hunt spokesman Gary Pearce said there remain a number of details to be resolved before any debates take place but said "good progress" was made during an almost three-hour meeting Tuesday.

Pearce said both sides want a broadcast representative to meet with them to "help arrange a series of debates to guarantee the widest possible coverage."

No specific date was set for the next meeting in the series of negotiations.

Pearce said he remains hopeful there will be as many as 10 debates.

Military Pullout Threatens Shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A threatened loss of space shuttle business from its best customer, the Air Force, would seriously hurt NASA's efforts to bring down the cost of flights to commercial clients, says the head of the space agency.

"I think the most serious threat we have to the shuttle is losing the military payload," NASA administrator James M. Beggs told the House subcommittee on space science and applications Tuesday.

The Defense Department has said it wants to buy 10 expendable launch vehicles to use as a backup to the shuttle. Total reliance on the shuttle "could represent an unacceptable national risk," Air Force Undersecretary Edward C. Aldridge Jr., told Congress earlier this year in asking for $10 million to develop an expendable rocket.

Any loss of military payloads would have a detrimental effect on NASA's costs, Beggs said, adding: "It's serious."

But he said, the military are saying they still consider the shuttle to be their primary system.

The Air Force began looking for single-use launch vehicles to boost some intelligence satellites into orbit last year after a faulty booster rocket nearly lost the huge, expensive Tracking and Relay Data satellite launched by the shuttle.

The satellite was salvaged by using small steering rockets to boost it to its work station.

The booster — an Air Force rocket called an Inertial Upper Stage — has not been used since that April 1983 flight, and military missions that depended on it have been postponed.

In unrelated incidents, two communications satellites that were carried aloft by the shuttle and then launched after being released, also have gone into wayward orbits. They used a different kind of rocket to boost them to a 22,300 mile high altitude.

"The loss of a significant part of the military market would hurt because this system is uniquely sensitive to flight rates," he said. "The larger number of times you fly, the more you can spread what is in essence fixed costs."

NASA had expected the Air Force to book fully one-third of its flights but after 11 missions, the shuttle has yet to carry its first Defense Department payload. The fourth flight was dedicated to military experiments.

"What we are talking about is a backup, and I cannot gainsay their need for a backup," Beggs added. "If, for national defense purposes they require there will be a standby capability to insure that they have access to space, then certainly they should have it.

"But I would hope that if they do that, they would still count on the shuttle to carry the bulk of their payload."

One military flight last year and two this year have been canceled. The next military mission is set for Dec. 9.

After that, said, Beggs, "I hope we will be seeing a routine use of the shuttle by the Defense Department."

And, he added, "Once they get to use the shuttle, they'll find a lot to like about it."

Spray Halts Roach Births

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says a new chemical spray stops cockroaches from reproducing, and with no heirs, the pests die out in a few months, never to return.

Officials said Tuesday that the chemical — hydroprene — was developed by Zoecon Industries Inc. of Dallas and underwent testing for a year at the USDA's research facility at Gainesville, Fla.

In one test, a single spraying of a 100-unit apartment complex in Gainesville cut the roach population by 95 percent in eight months.

The tests were conducted by Richard S. Patterson of USDA's Agricultural Research Service and another entomologisit, Philip G. Koehler of the University of Florida.

When roaches come in contact with the chemical during their nymph stage — a period of immaturity — they still grow and live out their normal life spans, Patterson said. But their matings produce no offspring.

"Hydroprene looks promising for controlling roaches in places where conventional spray programs have not worked well, particularly large apartments, warehouses and military complexes," Patterson said.

Cockroaches, which have survived millions of years and repeated onslaughts by human enemies, are not usually eliminated by one-shot remedies, he said. After being sprayed with conventional chemicals, some roaches "pick up only sub-lethal doses" while others learn to avoid contact with sprayed surfaces.

Jackson Labels Mondale Search For Veep Candidate A 'Charade'

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

As Walter F. Mondale prepares to interview a parade of prospective vice presidential candidates, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is denouncing the process as a public relations charade that will not result in a black or a woman on the Democratic ticket this year.

Mondale made a brief foray to San Francisco Tuesday to criticize President Reagan as "out of touch" with the American people and then returned to Minnesota, where the probable Democratic presidential nominee has scheduled meetings this week with possible running mates. Among them are Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, a black, and San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, a Jewish woman.

"Right now, we have this PR parade going on as if they're prospective candidates. But the whole world knows that that's what it is," Jackson said in Philadelphia.

"Absolutely not," was his response when asked whether Mondale would buy the popular idea of a black or female vice presidential candidate.

Mondale expected to get more advice about a running mate today from state party chairmen and vice chairmen from about 40 states who are gathering in St. Paul to also discuss strategy for the fall campaign against President Reagan.

With more than enough delegates to win the nomination, Mondale is sounding confident and acting like the party's nominee, although the Democrats don't convene in San Francisco for another month.

Mondale's main rival throughout the primary season, Gary Hart, is keeping a low profile with only occasional public appearances, and Jackson admitted Tuesday that "The race is over."

Mondale said he would meet with Hart "in the next 10 days," although he did not say what the two would discuss.

Some Democratic leaders believe a Mondale-Hart ticket would be the best combination to challenge Reagan in November. "Hart's name comes up from time to time," Mondale campaign manager James Johnson said Tuesday.

Jackson found a receptive audience to his complaints about unfair party rules in a commission of House Democrats on Tuesday. Jackson has long complained about rules that gave him just 10 percent of the delegates while he pulled about 20 percent of the primary votes.

"The intent (of the rules) was not to be unfair but the impact has been to be unfair," Jackson said after meeting with the commission on Capitol Hill. "The consequence has been to lock out a body of newly inspired Democrats who we need to carry us to victory in November of this year."

One commission member, Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, said adding delegates to the convention roster for Jackson would remedy the problem, although she admitted that would be "a little sticky."

Democratic platform writers continued to struggle with a draft to hand over to the full platform committee today. Mondale's majority on the drafting committee directed the decisions; many votes were 8-7, a reflection of Mondale's eight members on the committee pitted against Hart's five supporters and Jackson's two.

In one such encounter Tuesday, Mondale forces rejected a platform proposal by Hart stating that "the Democratic Party will not involve American land forces in a futile war for oil in the deserts of the Persian Gulf." Mondale has declined to make such a blanket statement.

In another 8-7 vote, the panel turned down a Hart "new idea" to let workers set up tax-free accounts for future job retraining with matching funds from employers. "All new ideas aren't necessarily good ideas," said Mondale supporter Barbara Mason of Michigan.

Some Hart and Jackson proposals were allowed onto the draft platform, however, in a gesture of conciliation designed to head off floor fights at the July convention in San Francisco.

The Republicans, too, are trying to avoid disputes at their national convention in Dallas in August. President Reagan has let it be known that he doesn't want the GOP platform to endorse a flat tax or an increase in the personal exemption.

"We don't want to dictate the platform from the White House, but we do want it to be consistent with the president's policies and that's how we think it will end up," said White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III.

Republican

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to avoid a dispute over the Republican Party platform at the national convention in August, believes the document should not specifically endorse a flat tax or an increase in the personal exemption, a senior White House official says.

The White House and the Reagan-Bush '84 Committee have already offered their suggestions for the issues document, the official said Tuesday, speaking on condition that he remain anonymous. A draft of the platform document is making the rounds of GOP constituencies.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said, "We don't want to dictate the platform from the White House, but we do want it to be consistent with the president's policies and that's how we think it will end up."

While there was a push to include a specific reference to a flat tax, the White House told the committee it didn't believe that would be consistent with the president's policy since the Treasury Department task force studying tax simplification won't report its proposals to the president until December. In the past, Reagan has spoken highly of a flat tax, which calls for all taxpayers to pay federal income taxes at the same rate.

If the platform committee came out for a flat tax, this official said, "that would not be the president's policy because we are not there yet."

However, the official indicated the White House stopped short of telling the committee that it would actually oppose such a declaration in the platform.

The same goes for efforts to include specific references in the platform to any White House intention to increase the $1,000 personal exemption.

On another platform issue, the president said last week he would favor language calling for military parity with the Soviet Union, rather than superiority, as was endorsed in the 1980 platform.

In addition, a second White House official, also speaking anonymously, said the White House opposes proposed language that would call for moving the United Nations out of New York.

Democratic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mondale majority on a panel of Democratic platform writers is doling out consolation prizes to Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson by incorporating some of their ideas into the party platform while standing firm behind front-runner Walter F. Mondale on pivotal issues.

The 15-member platform drafting committee, dominated by Mondale forces with eight seats to Hart's five and Jackson's two, was to complete its work today with a draft to offer the full 184-member Platform Committee.

In two days of work, Mondale supporters have been conciliatory toward the Jackson and Hart camps on all matters except those in which Mondale has staked out a sharply different position — and then they're sticking with Mondale.

On Tuesday, the panel rejected, by an 8-7 vote, a proposal by Hart that the platform state "the Democratic Party will not involve American land forces in a futile war for oil in the deserts of the Persian Gulf."

Mondale has declined to make such a blanket assertion in his campaign and the issue has been a major difference between the former vice president and Hart. "Mondale will not commit himself in advance to the non-use of force," said Rep. Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., head of the Mondale team on the panel.

Although Hart forces picked up the two Jackson representatives on the issue, all eight Mondale supporters voted against it.

On another 8-7 vote, the panel rejected a Hart proposal to allow workers to set up tax-free accounts to provide for their own future job retraining — with employers providing matching funds.

"This is one of the new ideas of the Hart campaign that has gotten a lot of support around the country," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn, a Hart supporter. "I find it incredible that the Mondale campaign would reject this."

"All new ideas aren't necessarily good ideas," countered Mondale supporter Barbara Mason of Michigan.

However, the committee was generous to both Hart and Jackson camps when it came to other parts of the platform.

Delegates Freed To Vote Choice From Kentucky

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Martha Layne Collins today released Kentucky's 33 uncommitted Democratic delegates and urged them to support the candidate of their choice at the party's national convention in San Francisco.

Mrs. Collins, chairman of the July convention, said in a news conference that former Vice President Walter F. Mondale apparently has more than the 1,967 delegates he needs to win the presidential nomination.

Mrs. Collins, who met with Mondale on Sunday in Minnesota, said today's action was aimed at "promoting Democratic Party unity."

Mondale won 20 of Kentucky's 63 delegates in caucuses earlier this year. Seven delegates went to the Rev. Jesse Jackson and three went to Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado. The six Kentuckians named to the convention's standing committees on rules, credentials and platform included three Mondale delegates and three uncommitted delegates.

Upon accepting the convention chairmanship in January, Mrs. Collins requested that the bulk of the Kentucky delegation remain uncommitted.

"As I have said often in recent weeks, I would ask them to remain uncommitted until such time that it was in Kentucky's best interest to do otherwise," she said.

"In recent days, it has become apparent that Walter Mondale, in fact, does have more than enough delegates to assure his nomination at the San Francisco convention. In releasing Kentucky's delegates, I urge each of them to support the candidate of their choice."

Mrs. Collins pledged early to remain neutral, saying the convention chairman "owed it to the Democratic Party to stay out of the primary campaigns."

But she came under fire in recent weeks from Jackson supporters who said the black candidate deserved more Kentucky delegates, based on caucus turnout, than he received.

One Jackson delegate, state Sen. Georgia Powers of Louisville, later called on Mrs. Collins to resign the convention chairmanship, pointing out that there were no black employees in either the governor's office or state Democratic headquarters.

'Golden Fleece'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal money for the territory of Guam went to pave parking lots for a nightclub and an apartment building, while more taxpayer money went to a pre-election hiring binge as a result of the Interior Department's lax management, Sen. William Proxmire charged today.

Proxmire, D-Wis., presented his monthly "Golden Fleece of the Month" for June to the Interior Department for "gross mismanagement" of millions of dollars the department funneled to Guam.

Citicorp Struggle Brings 'Youth' To Forefront

NEW YORK (AP) — John Reed, a youthful field commander in the banking revolution led by Citicorp, has emerged from a three-man power struggle as the next chairman of the world's largest banking organization, a company source says.

Reed, 45, will replace Walter B. Wriston, who is widely respected within the industry as a crusader against Depression-era banking regulations. Wriston, 64, is scheduled to retire at the end of August.

The selection of Reed, which was made by the board of directors Tuesday, according to a Citicorp executive who asked not to be identified, ended a battle between Reed and two other vice chairmen handpicked by Wriston in 1978.

Telephone calls to Citicorp staff seeking confirmation of the executive change were not returned Tuesday night, but the source was considered to be in a position to know about the move.

Bankers worldwide speculated for months over which of the three vice chairmen would be Wriston's successor.

Reed, an engineer from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, joined the organization in 1965 and has held various domestic and foreign positions. In 1974, he was charged with making the Consumer Services Group turn a profit. With a huge commitment to high technology, that goal took 10 years to accomplish and was one of the most massive investments in banking history.

Under Reed's stewardship, Citibank, the prime subsidiary of the holding company, has become one of the best-known retail banks in the country and the largest credit-card issuer. Reed's division alone, with deposits of $26 billion, would be the 10th largest bank in the country.

The other two men considered contenders for the chairmanship were Thomas C. Theobald, 46, in charge of the Citicorp's Institutional Banking Group, and Hans H. Angermueller, 59, chief legal officer.

With assets of $134.7 billion, Citicorp is easily the nation's biggest banking organization, ahead of second-ranked BankAmerica Corp. Citicorp reported 1983 profits of $860 million — up 19 percent from the $723 million in profits of a year earlier.

Known for its bitter competition for key positions, Citicorp and Citibank executives and underlings had been lining up behind one — or more — of the "big three," not anticipating a final decision on a Wriston successor until the July board meeting.

Analysts expected Theobald and perhaps Angermueller to quit rather than remain on as losers.

"Theobald walks, that's a given," said Thomas H. Hanley, chief bank stock analyst for the investment firm of Salomon Brothers. The selection of Reed is also expected to send shock waves through the many Citicorp officers who lined up behind the losers.

Wriston, who earns $1.2 million a year in salary and benefits, joined Citicorp in 1945.

Citicorp directors include the chairmen of such companies as Exxon, Xerox and Union Pacific. But it was widely held that the final choice on his successor would be made by Wriston alone.

Wriston, once considered a frontrunner to be President Reagan's treasury secretary, had been mentioned by industry insiders as a possible successor to Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker.

Wriston is best known for advocating a "level playing field," on which all players, banks and "non-bank bank" financial institutions, can equally compete.

Banks for more than a generation have faced restrictions on competition with insurance companies, securities houses and the like.

One of Wriston's greatest campaigns has been against restrictions on interstate banking.

In fact, Wriston's organization has moved a credit-card operation to South Dakota, which has no ceiling on credit-card interest rates; boasts of conservatively listing the risk to shareholders on foreign loans, such as those to Latin America; has applied to open limited banking operations in nine states; and by virtue of its mammoth resources has been called upon by the federal government to rescue failing savings institutions in Florida, California and Illinois.

Avon Will Sever Ties With Tiffany

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps Tiffany diamonds and makeup sold door-to-door simply were never meant to be worn together.

Avon Products Inc., queen of living-room cosmetics sales, said Tuesday it is putting Tiffany & Co., the Fifth Avenue jeweler whose very name connotes wealth and opulence, on the auction block.

The move had long been expected in the business world.

"There is no logical fit in the world" between Tiffany's precious gem business and Avon's cosmetics busines, said Daniel J. Meade, an analyst with First Boston Corp.

Avon picked up Tiffany five years ago for about $100 million in stock.

Tiffany, established in New York City 144 years ago, is headquartered at its landmark building in midtown Manhattan. It operates stores in Chicago, Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, Beverly Hills, Calif., San Francisco and Kansas City, Mo.

Besides fine jewelry, Tiffany sells silver, china, crystal and timepieces. Its distribution and production facilities are in Newark and Parsippany, N.J.

The sale, Meade said, has "been talked about as something they should do for a long time. It's a good move. They have an awful lot of assets that are generating very little money."

In the five years Avon has owned Tiffany, the Tiffany image has been tarnished by overexposure, from its broadened distribution system to its sale of air rights over its headquarters building, some analysts say.

"Earnings today are probably below the level of five years ago," said Jeffrey Ashenberg, an analyst with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin.

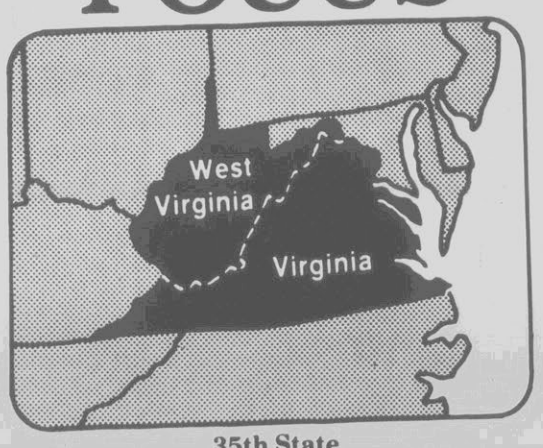

More than 25 companies and individuals have indicated an interest in buying Tiffany, according to Hicks B. Waldron, Avon's chairman and chief executive officer. He added there is also a chance that Tiffany management may buy the company.

Avon had considered making Tiffany the flagship of a specialty retailing division. But, Waldron said, Avon has decided to concentrate on expanding its beauty, health care and direct mail businesses.

"If a different owner can do more with Tiffany — and is willing to pay a fair price — then divestiture would be in the best interests of Tiffany & Co and of Avon shareholders," Waldron said.

William R. Chaney, chairman of the board of Tiffany, said he supported Avon's decision.

West Virginia became the 35th state on this day in 1863. Splitting off from the Confederate state of Virginia, West Virginia joined the Union side in the Civil War. Originally explored by George Washington and Daniel Boone, the state adopted the motto "Mountaineers are always free."

New York Man Held In Palm Sunday Deaths

NEW YORK (AP) — A man accused of killing eight children and two women on Palm Sunday in a case of misplaced jealousy was being held in "extreme protective custody" today in a special jail ward for notorious killers.

Police believe Christopher Thomas, 34, single-handedly shot the 10 victims to death at close range at their home in one of the city's worst mass murders. He has been in police custody since June 9 on unrelated charges.

The slayings, discovered by relatives and a neighbor who found a baby crawling amid the corpses, originally were thought to have been the result of a soured drug deal because drug paraphernalia was found in the home.

But at a news conference Tuesday night, Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward said Thomas apparently killed "in the erroneous belief ... that his estranged wife was having an affair with Enrique Bermudez," the owner of the house where the killings occured.

Bermudez' pregnant girlfriend and two of his children were among those who died in the attack in a first-floor flat in a predominantly black and Hispanic section of Brooklyn.

"At this time we believe he acted alone," Ward said. "We have no evidence that there was anyone else involved."

Ward said detectives used "old-fashioned pounding the pavement" to place Thomas at the scene of the crime. "Physical evidence" inside the house indicated he was the killer, he said.

"It was the physical evidence that we believe will be the most telling," the commissioner said, declining to elaborate.

Asked how one person could have accomplished the killings, since police said two guns were used, Ward replied, "There were 10 people, but there were only two adults."

He added that Thomas, who is 5-foot-11 and weighs 175 pounds, had known the victims for about a year.

Thomas has been in police custody since June 9, when he was arrested in his hometown of the Bronx for sodomy and attempted rape, police said. He was not formally charged with the murders Tuesday night, but Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman said she had authorized the filing of 10 counts of murder and two of criminal weapons possession against him.

Ward said police had lodged a "detainer" against Thomas which would keep him from being released on bail until a grand jury could indict him in the murder case.

Thomas was taken from the Bronx House of Detention to the 75th Precinct in Brooklyn. Shortly before midnight Tuesday, as a large crowd outside the precinct headquarters howled and jeered, the goateed suspect was led into a patrol car and taken to the jail at Rikers Island.

Corrections Department spokesman Edward Hershey said Thomas "will be held in extreme protective custody, in light of the nature and notoriety of the charges against him."

Hershey said the suspect would be kept in a special ward in the jail infirmary which was established for Mark David Chapman, the killer of John Lennon. The ward has been used several times since to hold prisoners who were unusually notorious or whose lives would be in extreme danger among other inmates, he said.

Chief of Detectives Richard Nicastro said Thomas has a criminal record which includes "diverse arrests, some convictions," and one acquittal in a 1981 New Jersey murder case. He did not elaborate.

Bomb Kills Motorist In Vienna

VIENNA, Austria, (AP) — A bomb exploded near the Turkish Embassy today in a car registered to an embassy employee, killing a person in the vehicle and seriously injuring three people nearby, police said.

Police refused to comment on the identity or nationality of the body found inside the demolished car, which was blown up on a side street next to the embassy.

The fiery blast, which shattered windows on nearby buildings, seriously hurt two passersby and a policeman on duty outside the building, police said.

"The policeman is critically injured," said a radio reporter on the scene. "His hair and most of his clothes have been burned away."

The explosion occurred about 8:30 a.m., according to police, who said there were no immediate claims of responsibility.

Police said the demolished vehicle belonged to Oeczen Erdogan, a Turk employed by the embassy. A man answering the telephone at the embassy confirmed that the car was registered in the name of an embassy employee but declined to provide further details.

According to an initial police reconstruction, the blast occurred as the driver of the car was about to leave his vehicle, parked in a zone reserved for embassy employees.

Police said onlookers told them the police officer on duty stepped close to the vehicle and greeted its occupant moments before its destruction.

The officer was reported in critical condition. He and two other seriously injured people were hospitalized. Police said many passersby were lightly cut by flying glass splinters.

"It is likely that it was a remote-control bomb," said Gustav Hochenbichler, the senior officer conducting the investigation.

"I went to look at the body and it was unrecognizable," said a man who was driving by when the explosion occurred. He said his car windshield was showered with broken glass and debris.

Plant Wants Use Humans In Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is investigating a complaint about a textile company's plan to use humans in work site research into the causes of brown lung disease.

Acting Assistant Labor Secretary Patrick R. Tyson said Tuesday that "we will look at what kind of protections are being provided" to participants in the planned experiment at a Danville, Va., plant of Dan River Inc., a major U.S. textile firm with operations in several Southern states.

Tyson confirmed that OSHA is looking into a complaint filed by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union. This came as the director of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health in Atlanta voiced concern about worker safety in Danville.

In a telephone interview, Tyson said executives of Dan River had asked federal officials for a variance from the cotton dust health standard.

They wanted to delay compliance with a new federal regulation requiring installation of $7.5 million worth of ventilation controls at the Danville plant, to permit time for the experiment, he said.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today and tonight are times to be especially careful that you do not break any promises. Avoid uncertainty during the day and forcefulness during the evening.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The morning finds you confused in your thinking, but after lunch you could be too sure of yourself. Stay at home tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A new contact is wondering just what you have in mind concerning him or her in the morning. Keep any promise you have made.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Keep steady at career jobs even though you are tempted to make changes, and then try not to be forceful with a good friend.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You are not certain about that new project, and later you want to make radical changes, but be wise and relax.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) An obligation seems difficult for you to handle, so relax for awhile, and later do not argue with your mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is important to comprehend what an associate expects of you and then handle your part of any agreement wisely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Everything seems to be going wrong at work and partners are not very cooperative either.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A friend could be very upset today and make some thoughtless remark, so forget it quickly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You find that kin are not cooperative today, even as to matters of entertainment, so await a better day for such.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be careful of taking any risks while driving any time during the day or night. Avoid arguments at home. Be more objective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Much care is required today when handling monetary affairs. Don't be too sure about a bill; go over it.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It is confusing to know what it is you want in the morning, but later your mind clears. Tonight, be sure you are not overly demanding.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will like to daydream a lot and needs everything spelled out clearly; this could be taxing on your nerves, but be patient and then your progeny will wake up to reality and become a veritable human dynamo.

Amnesty Proposal Debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents are staging a last-ditch effort in the House to kill a plan to grant legal status to millions of illegal aliens living in the United States.

That vote is the final major decision the House has to make before completing work on a mammoth immigration control bill, the nation's first major revision of immigration law in 30 years.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. D-Mass., says that the bill will not survive if the amnesty provisions are stripped from the bill. President Reagan has said the measure is vital to a nation that wants to regain control of its borders.

Amnesty foe Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., has put forward an amendment to do away with any type of amnesty, charging that it amounts to a "slap in the face" for those who have waited years to enter the country legally and "rewards lawbreakers."

Advocates insist it is the only way to deal with much of the "shadow population" within our borders — estimated between 3 million to 6 million — and that large-scale roundups and deportations would not only be repugnant to today's society, but unfeasable.

After approval, the House bill goes to a conference committee where differences will be worked out with a similar measure passed by the Senate last summer.

The House bill allows illegal aliens who can prove they have been living and working in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982, to be given legal resident status. Those who cannot prove this could be deported.

The Senate's version is stricter, and sets up a two-tiered system. Under that approach only aliens who have continuously resided here since 1977 would be eligible for permanent resident status, and those who entered before 1980 would be granted temporary status.

An attempt to make the House bill comply with the Senate's was defeated by a 245-181 vote on Tuesday. The president has said he prefers the Senate version.

The House approved an amendment that would give illegal aliens temporary status for one year. After that time, the illegal immigrant would be entitled to become a permanent resident if he is not convicted of a major crime or three minor offenses, if he enrolls his children in school and if he has or is studying to attain a rudimentary knowledge of English and of civics and U.S. history.

Paper Says Saudis Prepared To Shoot

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Saudi Arabia has ordered its air force pilots to "shoot on sight" planes intruding into its air space, a Kuwait newspaper reported today.

The independant newspaper Al-Anbaa, quoting unidentified "highly-placed" Persian Gulf sources, said pilots were told to "shoot without recourse to the (Saudi) military command or the political leadership."

In another gulf-related development, an Iraqi general said Tuesday that his troops had recaptured more territory around the Majnoon Islands from Iranian forces and had flooded areas still in Iranian hands.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein vowed to crush any new Iranian offensive in the 45-month-old Iran-Iraq war, and said his country has enough weapons to "flood all rivers and coasts of Iran." He was scheduled to meet today in Baghdad with King Hussein of Jordan, who Arab diplomats in Bahrain said was expected to offer Iraq more military assistance in the face of an anticipated Iranian assault.

The orders to Saudi pilots were issued in the wake of a new arrangement under which U.S.-made airborne warning and control system radar planes in eastern Saudi Arabia communicate information they detect directly to the Saudi air force, the Kuwaiti newspaper said.

The AWACS, manned by U.S. pilots and Saudi navigators, previously had sent their information to the Pentagon, which relayed it to the Saudi air force. The sources said that system was too slow.

Arab diplomatic sources in Kuwait and Bahrain said the orders were deemed necessary because of Iranian air attacks on Saudi and Kuwaiti oil tankers in neutral waters about 300 miles south of the Iraq-Iran war zone. On June 5, Saudi Arabia shot down an Iranian jet which U.S. officials said was looking for oil-bearing ships.

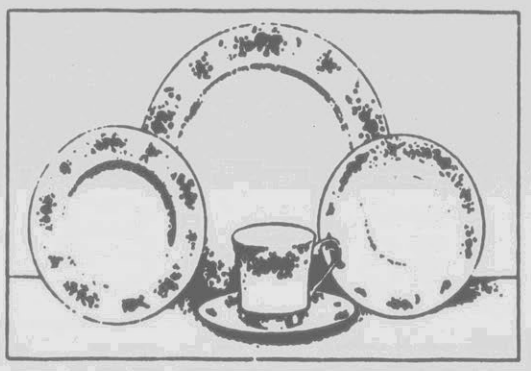

The Iranian attacks have been in retaliation for Iraqi attacks on ships in the war zone. The two countries have been at war for $3\frac{1}{2}$ years.

Maj. Gen Maher Abdul-Rasheed, commander of Iraq's Third Army, was quoted Tuesday by Aleph Baa, the magazine of the governing Baath Party, as saying his forces had retaken more of the Majnoon area that Iran seized in an offensive last February.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market sold off sharply today as interest ratessurged on word of stronger-than-expected economic growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed almost 29 points in the week's first two sessions, fell back 12.47 to 1,103.36 in the first half hour today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-lised issues.

Before the market opened, the Commerce Department issued an estimate of 5.7 percent growth in the Gross National Product, at an annual rate after adjusting for inflation, for the quarter that ends this month.

The "flash" estimate figure was well above expectations on Wall Street, and came atop an upward-revised 9.7 percent growth figure for the first quarter.

Today's early prices included International Business Machines, down ¾ at 102; General Electric, down ⅞ at 52¾, and Digital Equipment, off 1⅝ at 85¼.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials rose 6.18 points at 1,115.83.

More than three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume slipped to 89.00 million shares from 94.9 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .52 to 88.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .53 at 200.34.

Midwest Struck By Storms Again

By The Associated Press

Powerful thunderstorms battered the Midwest today, flooding one South Dakota town with up to half a foot of water after raking the state with 85 mph winds and dumping up to 7 inches of rain on saturated farmland in Iowa.

Dixie, meanwhile, simmered overnight after baking under record temperatures that pushed the mercury to near 100 degrees.

Floods that damaged more than 2.5 million acres of farmland in six states, causing more than $80 million in damage in Kansas and Missouri alone, remained high enough today to keep most of the more than 2,000 evacuated residents away from home another day.

In Des Moines, Iowa, where the surging Des Moines River is expected to continue rising at least through Thursday, crews worked around the clock piling sandbags against waters that have already invaded City Hall.

The mercury climbed to 99 in Charleston, S.C., Tuesday, the hottest it's ever been there on June 19. Records were also set or tied in Columbus, Ga., where it was 98; Wilmington, N.C., 98; Huntsville, Ala., 94, and Cape Hatteras, N.C., 92.

Thunderstorms blasted central and eastern South Dakota on Tuesday, toppling power lines and trees with winds recorded at Brookings as high as 85 mph, the National Weather Service said. Up to 7 inches of rain was reported in about three hours Tuesday in Kingsbury, Hamlin and Beadle counties, washing out many local roads, the weather service said.

Floodwaters swirled half a foot deep today through the town of Mount Vernon, S.D., and National Guardsmen were called out to operate pumps and stack sandbags. "The sad part of it is that the water isn't receding yet — it's coming up," said Davison County Deputy Sheriff Doug Kirkus.

PCC ...

The project is being conducted with a $30,000 grant from the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges. PCC was selected as the pilot school, according to Dean of Students Edgar Boyd, because of its "past track record throughout the (community college) system in reaching that group of students."

"There needed to be a model developed for recruitment for those students 20-80, those which some call the 'new community college student,'" said Boyd. "We (PCC) have a fairly high number of such students (65 percent of the student body) so we were selected to conduct a year-long pilot project and develop a plan that can be applied across the state."

Ms. Chenier and Boyd have been examining the population of Pitt County, the student population at PCC, and identifying particular sub-groups that make up the 20-80 student age group. "Basically we've been identifying groups and looking at the needs of these specific groups in the past few months and in the next few months we'll be mapping out a plan of action — an approach to these poeple," said Boyd.

One fact the study has revealed, said Boyd, is that the median age of the community college student is rising. The median age is now 29, he said, compared to 25 a few years ago. "We feel this is because of the constant need to continue schooling and to update skills to keep them state-of-the-art in order to continue to be competitive in the job market," he said.

"A few years ago individuals were labeled if they changed jobs, especially if they changed several times," Boyd said. "Now its accepted — if you get a better opportunity, you go for it, and this requires a constant updating of skills in many fields."

According to the study, there are four basic groups of "non-traditional" students at PCC. They are:

•Students who began education at a four-year institution and left school before graduation and came to a community college. This group includes, said Boyd, some students who have four-year degrees but want different skills.

•Students who are employed but need to upgrade skills to retain their present jobs and those who are improving their skills for their own professional advancement.

•Students who became unemployed and need skills to get back in the work force. Boyd said this group includes the "displaced homemaker — a very large group of students who as wives or mothers who have been out of the job market and have let their skills date for 15-20 years." This group also includes the chronically unemployed.

•Students who are employed but take courses because they want to learn about a particular subject or skill.

PCC has a high number of these groups of students, said Boyd, because "we've put a great deal of emphasis in the past on being out in the communities and finding out the needs of the people."

"We maintain a close relationship with business and industry to keep in touch with their needs and we meet with community groups frequently for the same reason," he said. "We've done this for many years and we think we've done a better job of it than most schools."

Besides the benefits the model program will provide for the community college system, Boyd said, it will give PCC a "strong factual base to draw from in terms of student needs."

"We will be more efficient in what we do, we feel, because we can reach more people since our understanding of them and their needs is greater," he said. "We can also use this information to grow with the communities in the county."

Waves Buffet Cruise Vessel

HONOLULU (AP) — Ten passengers received minor injuries when a cruise boat carrying more than 400 people was tossed by large waves as it returned from a tour of Pearl Harbor, officials said.

"The tail end was out of the water twice from the size of the waves," said Thomas George, one of the passengers on Tuesday's cruise aboard the 128-foot Pearl Kai. "I mean, it was bad."

The large waves jostled the ship as it was entering the channel of Honolulu's Kewalo Basin, where it docks.

The injured were treated and released from Queens Medical Center, officials said.

The ship suffered some broken plexiglass, but was put back in service and an afternoon cruise took place as scheduled, said owner Ron Howard.

The Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office planned to investigate the incident.

public attention given employees of the hospital who have been arrested on drug charges has prompted two actions: the planned posting of hospital policy on drug use and abuse by employees in prominent places throughout the hospital and the placing of the policy statement in hospital employee paychecks. The policy is already stated in each employee's employee handbook, he pointed out.

Approval was given for the spending of not more than $700,000 on the minimal care beds section of the hospital on which bids were recently let. The bids came in at $680,140, Richardson said.

Additions to the Neonatal Intensive Care area of the hospital are expected to cost $123,904, he reported.

A change order extending the emergency department entrance canopy was approved. The ambulance entrance to this department will be planned for drive-through, not backup to a platform, Richardson said, expediting traffic and decreasing risk of accidents related to backing.

Purchases of $386,224 were approved. These included $25,000 for a microscope; $219,973 for a gamma camera; $20,500 for the creation of a pediatric park (this was a donation run through the budget) $9,475 for a ureteral renoscope telescope and related equipment; $75,000 for the buyout of radiology equipment previously leased; $20,000 for a blood gas analyzer; $10,000 for a 4-door station wagon, and $6,276 for 64-seat table-seat combinations for the dining room.

Greene ...

could receive a death sentence on either or both of the two charges of first degree murder.

Officers testified that Greene was questioned after rolled coins thought to have been taken from the dry cleaners were cashed in by Greene. Officers said that Greene was asked to take the polygraph test due to conflicts in his statements concerning the coins.

As the sentencing phase of the trial began this morning, District Attorney Tom Haigwood recommended the death penalty for Greene in both cases, saying Greene "senselessly, needlessly and without any mercy whatsoever" beat Miss Bland and Edmondson "with an iron pipe, smashing the back of their heads many, many times with no reason or excuse."

Continuing his opening statement to the jury, Haigwood said, "I ask you to remember that there are two people involved in this case that today are not present."

Defense lawyer Jeff Miller suggested that the jury recommend life imprisonment for Greene.

"I ask you to remember this is a serious matter. You realized that yesterday when you were told that Harvey Lee Greene Jr. had admitted his guilt."

Miller stressed Greene's cooperation with officers investigating the murders and said Green admitted his own guilt.

Until Jan. 1, 1984, Miller said, there was no evidence in the possession of state that Greene was involved in the case. "He admitted it to them," Miller continued, and said the killings were not premeditated.

The first two witnesses to testify this morning told of seeing Miss Bland at the cleaners on the night of Dec. 19. They said she was alone and nothing was happening.

The third witness said she saw Edmondson at a Bethel church practicing for a choir program on the night he died.

Akeem, Bowie Top 1984 NBA Draft

Barkley Bowie Olajuwon Perkins Jordan

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Rockets believe they got a nearly finished player in Ralph Sampson last year. In Akeem Olajuwon, they hope they received an uncut diamond.

"When we got Sampson, he was a polished player, whereas Akeem represents raw talent," Ray Patterson, general manager of the Rockets, said Tuesday at the National Basketball Association draft. "He's got that incredible ability to block a shot before it's a foot away from a shooter's hands. With a little experience, he should be outstanding."

The Rockets took the 7-4 Sampson first in the 1983 draft, and then got the No. 1 pick again this year after Sampson was the NBA Rookie of the Year. Olajuwon, nicknamed "the Dream" during his outstanding career at the University of Houston, said being picked first "feels like a dream. I just want to be the best I can be, to play hard every time out. I know I can help, that I can rebound and block shots."

"He's the quickest big man I've ever seen," Patterson said.

Olajuwon, a Nigerian, shared the draft spotlight with two Kentucky players who decided not to try out for the Olympics and eight American Olympic finalists who were selected with the first 18 picks.

After Olajuwon, 7-0 center Sam Bowie of Kentucky was taken by the Portland Trail Blazers with the second pick, and his "Twin Tower" teammate with the Wildcats, 6-11 Melvin Turpin, was the sixth selection, taken by the Washington Bullets. The rights to sign Turpin later were traded to Cleveland in a three-team deal.

Bowie was on the 1980 U.S. team that wasn't able to compete because of the boycott of the Moscow Olympics. He said he was worried that Americans would question his patriotism, but he decided not to try out because "I just didn't have the desire and motivation that I felt I needed to make the team."

The run of Olympic finalists started when the Chicago Bulls, picking third, took 1983-84 college Player of the Year Michael Jordan of North Carolina, and Dallas selected another Tar Heel, Sam Perkins, with the fourth choice.

Sixteen players are working at the Olympic basketball training camp in Bloomington, Ind., in an effort to make the final 12-man U.S. Olympic squad.

Other first-round selections who are among the final 16 were Alvin Robertson of Arkansas, No. 7 by San Antonio; Lancaster Gordon of Louisville, No. 8 by the Los Angeles Clippers; Leon Wood of Fullerton State, No. 10 by Philadelphia; Tim McCormick of Michigan, No. 12 by Cleveland; Jeff Turner of Vanderbilt, No. 17 by New Jersey, and Vern Fleming of Georgia, No. 18 by Indiana.

In the same deal that sent Turpin's draft rights to Cleveland, McCormick's rights were traded to Seattle, which also acquired veteran Ricky Sobers from Washington. The Bullets acquired veterans Gus Williams from Seattle and Cliff Robinson from Cleveland in the three-way deal.

Two other players who made the final 20 at the Olympic tryouts, but later were cut, also were taken in the first round. Charles Barkley of Auburn, a sensation with his quickness and leaping ability despite carrying 272 pounds on a 6-6 frame, was the No. 5 pick by Philadelphia, and John Stockton of Gonzaga was taken 16th by Utah.

Marty Blake, the NBA's director of scouting, said he was not surprised by the potential Olympians drafted early, although some of them are not well-known.

"They were outstanding players in the first place," Blake said. "It's a credit to their ability that they were picked so high, but it proves also that the judgment of (Olympic Coach) Bobby Knight coincides with the judgment of the top brains of basketball."

The Nets' selection of Turner, a 6-9 forward, was greeted by boos from the large gallery of fans at the draft headquarters at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

"I'm getting a lot of exposure at the Olympic camp that I didn't get at Vanderbilt," Turner said. "I hope I can earn the respect of the fans in New Jersey."

As a Nigerian citizen, Olajuwon isn't eligible for the U.S. Olympic team. But he was happy to be staying in his adopted American home.

"I feel very lucky to stay in Houston," Olajuwon said. "I've enjoyed my three years in Houston a great deal. I don't think there'll be any problems with the contract."

The 250-pound Olajuwon said he needs to increase his strength to meet the physical play and 82-game travel demands of the NBA.

"In college, I played the game I wanted to play," he said. "In the pros, it'll be different, but I know I'll want to play in the paint (near the basketball). Ralph and I will have to learn to play as a team."

Philadelphia, with three first-round picks, took guard Tom Sewell of Lamar with the 22nd selection in addition to Barkley and Wood. The 76ers later traded the rights to

Bulls Anxious For Jordan

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan, the College Player of the Year out of North Carolina, will not turn around the Chicago Bulls' franchise immediately, but General Manager Rod Thorn had no qualms about making him the No. 3 pick in the National Basketball Association draft.

"I only wish he were 7-1," said Thorn whose club still is in need of a solid pivotman in hopes of making the playoffs, something the Bulls have not been able to do the last three seasons.

Selecting Jordan on Tuesday was easy, according to Thorn, after Houston had taken Akeem Olajuwon of Houston and Portland opted for Sam Bowie of Kentucky.

"In the past there has been a lot of trades but we were 98 percent positive on Jordan," said Thorn. "The fans will enjoy watching him play and we expect we'll have an easier time signing him than we have had in signing other draft choices.

"We would like to sign him as soon as possible," said Thorn. "If we had received good offers for a trade, we would have made it, but it would have taken an overpowering offer."

Jordan, 6-6 and 195 pounds, was not personally available for comment since he is in Bloomington, Ind., working with the Olympic team under Coach Bobby Knight, but he did appear on cable television.

"Hopefully, I will fit in well," said Jordan, who can play two positions at big guard or small forward. "Wherever I can contribute. I am not looking forward to going in and living up to everyone's expectations."

Coach Kevin Loughery said he would most likely use Jordan at guard and added, "I think he'll be an outstanding defensive player. He's a great athlete who can run and has quick feet. He's also a good rebounder from the guard spot."

Thorn, having already talked with Jordan, said, "He told me he'd be very happy to play for the Chicago Bulls. We know all college players would like to play for the (Los Angeles) Lakers, the (Boston) Celtics or the (Philadelphia) 76ers, but that can't be. Jordan didn't say anything negative and likes the chance to make a lot of money. He's happy to be in the NBA, he's a very positive person with a lot of charisma."

There's a feeling that now that the Bulls have Jordan, they might make a pitch for Joe Barry Carroll, a 7-foot center with Golden State.

"We're pursuing several things right now, but there's also the salary cap problem if we're able to retain David Greenwood," said Thorn. "We'll just have to wait for a while."

Thorn and Loughery held up a Bull's jersey with the No. 23 under the name of Jordan for picture purposes.

While the Bulls would like to have Jordan as soon as possible, Thorn thinks the Olympic experience will make Jordan a better player.

"Olympic ball is rough," said Thorn. "After the Olympics, he'll be as visible as any player in America. I'm convinced Jordan will be a great player, and you can't pass up a great player considering the position our franchise is in right now. He's a leader type, charismatic and can only enhance the team and the francise."

Can Jordan turn around the Bulls, a team that hasn't made the playoffs in three years?

"Hopefully," said Jordan, "I'm looking forward to that."

ABC Seeks Olympic Rebate Over Soviet-Led Boycott

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Citing an obligations to ABC's stockholders and its own insurance policy, ABC News and Sports President Roone Arledge says he wants a rebate from the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee because of the Soviet-led walkout from the Summer Games.

Arledge told a press conference of TV writers that he would meet soon with LAOOC President Peter V. Ueberroth.

He said ABC intended to arrive at a "fair" price and characterized press speculation of a $60 million to $90 million return as high.

Ueberroth had labeled that money range as inaccurate.

By law, the LAOOC cannot operate at a deficit. Arledge said concern about driving the Games into the red could be a consideration in the negotiations.

Arledge said he preferred to assess damage of the Soviet boycott, which is ABC's contractual right, following the completion of the Games on Aug. 13, when ABC's rating results are known.

But he said he would attempt to negotiate an agreement before the Games because the LAOOC needs to know the extent of its operating budget.

Ueberroth, speaking Monday to the TV writers, was adamant that the negotiations be concluded before the Games begin July 28 or the dispute would go to arbitration.

Ueberroth said the LAOOC would lose leverage after the Games.

According to ABC's contract with the LAOOC, the outstanding $65 million of ABC's $225 million broadcast rights fee is to be paid off with a $20 million installment by July 1, $30 million by Aug. 1 and the rest by Sept. 1.

If a rebate agreement hasn't been reached by July 1, Arlexdge said there is "no reason to assume why we wouldn't" pay the first installment.

Arledge would not predict whether the Games will average the 25 percent of the nation's TV homes in prime time that ABC's sales department has forecast to advertisers.

But he said he has high hopes for the Games' success.

"The Russians have not devastated these Games," he said.

Arledge announced that the scheduled 185 hours of Olympic broadcasts have been cut to 180.

Weekday coverage will start at 11 a.m. (EDT) rather than 10:30 a.m. each day, he said.

Arledge predicted that ABC will make "a reasonable" profit from the Games.

ABC's insurance policy only becomes operative if the network loses money.

Owners To Vote On Drug Issue

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball team owners are scheduled to meet in Kansas City Thursday to vote on the antidrug program that has already been ratified by the players, a spokesman for the owners said Wednesday night.

The program was worked out earlier this year between representatives of the owners and the Major League Baseball Players Association and was overwhelmingly ratified by the players.

A majority vote of the owners, including at least five owners in each league, is needed to put the program in action.

The owners had been scheduled to vote once before on the program, but that meeting was postponed by Lee MacPhail, who heads the owners' Player Relations Committee, when a close vote was expected.

Johnson, Hardison All ECAC

East Carolina University sophomores Winfred Johnson and Greg Hardison have been named to the first team All ECAC-South baseball squad for 1984.

Johnson was named as both a pitcher and designated hitter, and he shared the Player of the Year honor with Steve Ianinni of Georgetown.

Johnson posted a 10-3 record on the mound including a victory over Florida State in the NCAA South Regional at Tallahassee, Fla. He tied a school record for single season victories and finished with a 3.30 ERA.

At the plate, Johnson batted .321 and ripped 18 homers to set an ECU single season mark and lift his career total to 29 — also a school record. He also set single season records for runs batted in with 46 and total bases with 115.

Hardison batted .319 and tied a Pirate record for season at bats with 191.

Murray's Slam Erases Dismal Start

By The Associated Press

For seven innings, it was a game that Eddie Murray would like to forget . . . then he made it one to remember.

A strikeout victim his first three times at bat, the Baltimore first baseman suddenly turned things around with a grand slam home run in the eighth inning, then punched a two-run single in the ninth to help the Orioles pound out a 9-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Tuesday night.

"I hadn't looked that bad in a long time," Murray said of his three strikeouts. "We were really flat early in the game, but then everybody contributed in the last couple of innings."

Murray's homer came on a pitch from reliever Bob Stanley and sailed about 450 feet, over the Boston bullpen and about 15 rows into the bleachers in right-center in Fenway Park. It was his 14th homer of the season and the eighth grand slam of his career.

"I hit it good and I knew it was gone," Murray said. "But I don't think it went as far as the one I hit here off Luis Tiant in my second year (1978). That one was about halfway up the bleachers toward the clock."

In other AL action, it was Detroit 7, New York 6; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 5; Cleveland 7, Minnesota 4; Texas 4, California 2; Kansas City 6, Oakland 2, and Seattle 8, Chicago 2.

After being handcuffed by Boston starter Bob Ojeda, Murray, the American League's RBI leader with 60, homered to cut the Boston lead to 7-5.

In the ninth, after Cal Ripken drove in a run with a bases-loaded single, Murray lined a two-run single off Steve Crawford, giving Baltimore an 8-7 lead. Ken Singleton later doubled home another run to complete a four-run inning.

The victory went to Bill Swaggerty, 2-1, who pitched a perfect eighth as the third Baltimore hurler. Tippy Martinez protected the lead in the ninth for his ninth save. Stanley, 1-6, took the loss.

Murray's heroics overshadowed the performance of Boston's Jim Rice, who drove in four runs with his 13th homer and a single.

Tigers 7, Yankees 6

Rusty Kuntz's two-run single highlighted a four-run eighth inning to boost Detroit over New York.

A one-out single by Larry Herndon with the bases loaded had tied the game at 4-4, and Kuntz followed with his single off Yankee left-hander Ron Guidry, 5-5, to score the winning run.

The Yankees came back with two runs in the ninth, one on an error by Barbaro Garbey at third and another on Toby Harrah's groundout.

The Yankees had taken a 4-2 lead in the fifth on a leadoff single by Willie Randolph and Don Mattingly's 11th home run of the season off right-hander Carl Willis, who was making his major league starting debut. Reliever Doug Bair came on to retire the side, and later gave way to Aurelio Lopez, 6-0.

Detroit picked up a run in the seventh on an RBI double by Tom Brookens.

"He didn't run out of steam; he was throwing good," Yankees Manager Yogi Berra said of Guidry. "They just had a few hits that were 'seeing eyes.' You got to hit him to get on."

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 5

Jim Sundberg singled in the winning run with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to lead Milwaukee over Toronto and end the Blue Jays' winning streak at five games.

Cecil Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons hit consecutive two-out, run-scoring singles in the fifth inning to pad the Brewers' lead to 5-1.

But Buck Martinez brought the Blue Jays back with a two-run triple in the sixth to narrow the margin to 5-3. The Blue Jays added a run in the seventh on an RBI single by Willie Upshaw and George Bell tied the game 5-5 when he led off the eighth inning with his ninth homer of the year.

Indians 7, Twins 4

George Vukovich drove in three runs with a home run and two singles and Mike Hargrove and Gerald Willard each knocked in a pair as Cleveland beat Minnesota.

Winner Bert Blyleven, 5-3, retired the first 12 batters and wound up scattering seven hits in 7 1-3 innings, striking out three and walking two. Mike Jeffcoat and Ernie Camacho finished up, the latter giving up a sacrifice fly to Dave Engle before closing out the eighth.

Loser Ken Schrom, 0-2, lasted just two-thirds of an inning when the Indians raked him for five of their 14 hits.

Rangers 4, Angels 2

Gary Ward slugged a two-run homer and Dave Stewart and Odell Jones combined on a five-hitter as Texas downed California.

Ward, continuing to fight off a season-long slump, followed a fourth-inning walk to Larry Parrish with his sixth homer of the season and second in two games to give Texas a 3-0 lead and the Rangers' eventual winning run.

Stewart, 4-8, walked three and struck out four in 8 1-3 innings before Jones came on to post his second save. Stewart gave up a homer to Reggie Jackson in the fifth inning, his 11th, and surrendered another solo shot in the seventh to Brian Downing, his ninth.

Mariners 8, White Sox 2

Spike Owen's two-run homer snapped a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning and Phil Bradley added a bases-loaded triple as Seattle pulled away to defeat Chicago.

Owen's second homer of the season came off Chicago starter Britt Burns, 2-8, and highlighted a three-run sixth inning that enabled Seattle to take a 5-2 lead.

The Mariners added three more runs in the seventh on Bradley's triple.

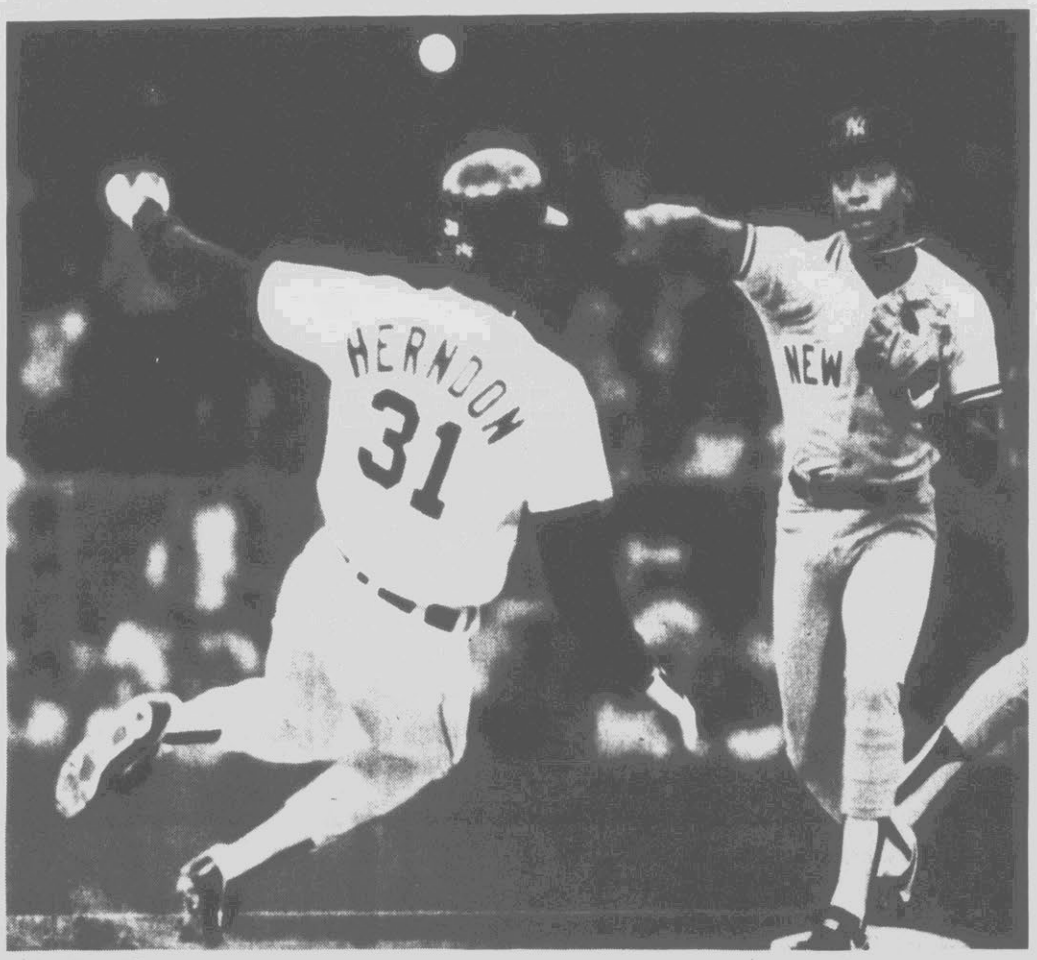

Seattle's Jim Beattie, 6-7, and Mike Stanton combined on a five-hitter as the Mariners beat Chicago for the first time since June 28, 1983. Chicago had won eight straight.

Royals 6, A's 2

Jorge Orta drove in four runs, two on a fourth-inning home run that put the game out of reach, as Kansas City defeated Oakland to snap a five-game losing streak.

Bud Black, 7-5, got the victory with relief help from Dan Quisenberry, who pitched the final 2 2-3 innings to notch his league-leading 17th save. Oakland starter Chris Codiroli, 4-3, lasted only two innings and took the loss.

The Royals were leading 3-1 in the fourth when George Brett drew a two-out walk and Orta swatted his fifth homer of the year, off A's reliever Lary Sorensen for a 5-1 Royal lead.

Alternative Games Set

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist nations boycotting the Los Angeles Olympics have set dates for 34 sports competitions to be held in eight countries as an alternative to the Summer Games, a Polish sports official said today.

No events are scheduled between July 28 and Aug. 12, the dates of the Los Angeles Olympics, said Jerzy Staron, spokesman for the General Committee for Physical Culture and Sports.

"The idea to organize these events included one basic condition — that they not conflict with the dates of the Olympic Games," Staron said in a telephone interview.

Holding international sporting events at the time of the Olympics is a violation of the Olympic Charter.

The sports official said he did not know whether any countries in addition to the 14 boycotting the Olympics would take part.

Berra Intends To Stay Until Fired From Post

NEW YORK (AP) — Yogi Berra, whose job as manager of the New York Yankees is the subject of almost-constant media speculation, reportedly has told club owner George Steinbrenner he will leave his post only if he is fired, and will not quit.

The New York Times, in today's late editions, quoted unidentified sources as saying Berra and Steinbrenner had a heated confrontation at a staff meeting Sunday.

The newspaper said Steinbrenner was unhappy with the attitude of some of the team's players. It also reported that Berra called the Yankee owner a liar because Steinbrenner had said the team as constituted was the team Berra wanted.

"If you don't like it, get another manager," the usually unflappable Berra was quoted as saying.

"Are you quitting?" sources said Steinbernner asked.

"No," said Berra. "If you want to get rid of me, you'll have to fire me."

Neither Berra nor any spokesman for the Yankees would comment on the report when queried in Detroit prior to the club's 7-6 loss to the Tigers on Tuesday night.

The newspaper said Berra at an earlier meeting had told Steinbrenner he should bear the responsibility for the lack of production by certain players.

"I didn't sign those free agents; you did," the newspaper quoted Berra as saying.

The Yankees, despite the presence of Dave Winfield and Don Mattingly, the two top average hitters in the American League, are 19 games behind the pace-setting Tigers in the AL East. Winfield is batting .348 and Mattingly .340.

Berra, who was named last winter to replace Clyde King as Yankee manager, is in his second term as field boss. He led the Yankees to the 1964 AL pennant, but was fired after losing the World Series to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Berra, who made the Baseball Hall of Fame as a catcher for the Yankees, also managed the cross-town Mets to a National League pennant in 1973.

McEnroe Riles British Press

LONDON (AP) — When John McEnroe steps onto the court at Wimbledon next week, judgments will be made not only on his shots but also on on his behavior.

Less than a week before play at Wimbledon begins, McEnroe and the British press battled over the fiery New Yorker's latest temper tantrum.

En route to losing the second set Sunday at the Queen's Club final to unheralded Leif Shiras, McEnroe exploded at umpire Roger Smith for overruling a line call that had gone in the defending Wimbledon champion's favor.

In a 10-minute tirade, McEnroe berated Smith, summoned referee Jim Moore and Grand Prix supervisor Kurt Neilsen for a tongue-lashing, and shouted at them, "You just sit there like two bumps on a log and do nothing."

When asked about the outburst, McEnroe was anything but apologetic.

"When people look back in 10 years, they are going to thank me for improving the level of officials," he said.

Asked about McEnroe's Queen's Club behavior, Wimbledon referee Alan Mills said Monday, "The rules of the code of conduct will be firmly but fairly applied at Wimbledon — to all players in the championship."

Under the code of conduct, players get three warnings before being thrown out of a tournament. First they are just warned, then they lose a point, then a game, and finally they are disqualified.

Diqualification was foremost on the minds of the British press. London newspapers agreed McEnroe should have been ejected from the Queen's Club final.

"No one should be permitted to voice such contempt for a fellow human being and get away with it," wrote David Irvine of The Guardian.

The Mirror said the "sad thing" is that "not a single official anywhere has the guts to tell McEnroe that unless he shuts up or sees a psychiatrist, he will be sent off the court."

Daily Mail columnist Ian Wooldridge was more adamant: "It is obscene . . . McEnroe's transgressions came so thick and fast that his feet should never have touched the ground on the way to the exit."

Harry Greenway, a Conservative Party member of Parliament, attacked McEnroe's "consistently appalling behavior," which he said was setting a bad example for "millions of youngsters." McEnroe, he said, should be banned from sports for two years. "He should be hit where it hurts most, in his pocket."

McEnroe presents the game of tennis with a unique problem: how to discipline him without losing the income the superstar's appearances generate, and how to avoid any lawsuit he might file over loss of income resulting from a disqualification.

Domed Stadium Decision Depends On Jets' Move

NEW YORK (AP) — The key to deciding whether to build a new domed stadium here rests on whether the National Football League Jets will return to New York and play in it, the chairman of the state Sportsplex Corp. says.

The statement by William Stern, who also heads the Urban Development Corp., also inflamed an ongoing verbal battle Tuesday with state Sen. Thomas Bartosiewicz, who is pushing Coney Island as the best site for a new stadium.

Stern and UDC Vice President Peter Johnson said they had learned through football sources that the Jets would not be willing to consider the Brooklyn site.

"Nobody can advocate anything yet," Stern said. "Anybody who advocates and makes a recommendation now is either a fool or playing political games."

The front-running site at this point is Flushing Meadow, opposite Shea Stadium, the ballpark the Jets abandoned for the Meadowlands in New Jersey, where the football Giants also play their home games.

Bartosiewicz has denounced that choice, asking whether Sportsplex's purpose was "to provide only suburban white high-income fans with the opportunity to attend events at the UDC dome."

Stern said Bartosiewicz was trying "to politicize our process" and "divide New Yorkers."

During the board meeting, Stern twice cut off the Brooklyn Democrat when he tried to make a pitch for the Brooklyn site.

Stern said Gov. Mario Cuomo was going to speak to Jets owner Leon Hess about the team's intentions.

"If we all vote to have a stadium and no team will go into it, what purpose have we served?" Stern asked.

Ron Cohen, a Jets' spokesman, said any statement on the matter would have to come from Hess. Hess' secretary said he was out of the office at a meeting and unavailable for comment.

Pointing to the NFL rule that forbids more than two teams in the same television market, Stern said:

"The best shot for getting a team is to get the Jets. Either that or you would have to restructure the entire way the NFL is put together."

Bartosiewicz told reporters the board was committed to Flushing Meadows and "catering to the carriage trade . . . this pristine crowd of tail-gaters." The reference was to spreading pre-game picnics on the tailgates of station wagons in the parking lots of suburban stadiums.

"We will not permit Bill Stern and a few people of his staff to make this decision," he said.

Sutcliff Wins First Outing For Cubs

By The Associated Press

Rick Sutcliffe's first National League appearance in more than three years was a success thanks to a wing and a prayer.

The wing was the sturdy right arm of Chicago relief ace Lee Smith, who put down a three-run uprising in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday night and retired four-time batting king Bill Madlock on a pop fly with the bases loaded to preserve the Cubs' 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The prayer came from Sutcliffe, who sought some divine intervention as Smith was in the scary process of walking three batters to force in Pittsburgh's final run.

"I said a little prayer," said Sutcliffe, who blanked the Pirates on four hits over the first eight innings. "The greatest thing about it is being in a pennant race again. I can't wait to pitch in Chicago. This was a lot of fun, but there's a long way to go."

In other NL games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the New York Mets 6-4, the San Diego Padres blanked the Houston Astros 2-0, the Atlanta Braves outslugged the San Francisco Giants 11-6, the Cincinnati Reds thumped the Los Angeles Dodgers 10-4 and the Montreal Expos downed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3.

Sutcliffe, who was acquired from Cleveland in a seven-player trade last week, struck out nine and walked three before giving way to Smith in the ninth after a walk, an error and Tony Pena's RBI double. Smith yielded a sacrifice fly to pinch-hitter Doug Frobel and walked three batters before nailing down his 13th save.

Keith Moreland drove in a pair of runs with a triple and a double for the Cubs against John Tudor. Grounders by Gary Matthews and Ron Cey produced Chicago's other two runs as the Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak and remained two games out in the NL East.

The save was Smith's 13th in 16 such situations, which explained why Manager Jim Frey didn't have anyone warming up despite Smith's wildness.

"If you look at his statistics, you know why," Frey said. "He's done as good a job as anyone in the league. Normally, he doesn't have control problems."

Phillies 6, Mets 4

Mike Schmidt and Ozzie Virgil hit home runs and Juan Samuel drove in three runs to help Philadelphia extend its winning streak to six games and move 1½ games ahead of the second-place Mets in the NL East. Ex-Met Jerry Koosman allowed four hits and two runs in seven innings as the Mets lost for only the fourth time in their last 15 games. Al Holland pitched the last two innings and allowed home runs to Ron Gardenhire and Hubie Brooks.

Virgil hit a two-run homer off loser Ed Lynch in the second inning and Schmidt hit a solo shot in the fifth. Samuel singled home a run in the fourth inning and two more in the eighth for a 6-2 lead.

Padres 2, Astros 0

Eric Show hurled the second two-hitter of his career and allowed only three baserunners, one on a walk. Houston's hits were singles by Jerry Mumphrey in the second inning and Enos Cabell in the seventh. The Padres scored a run off Bob Knepper in the second inning on singles by Graig Nettles and Terry Kennedy and a double by Carmelo Martinez. They added a run in the fifth when Show singled, was sacrificed to second, took third on Tony Gwynn's single and scored on Steve Garvey's sacrifice fly.

Braves 11, Giants 6

Rookie Brad Komminsk's first major-league grand slam offset two home runs by San Francisco's Bob Brenly as Atlanta rallied after spotting the Giants a five-run lead in the first inning. The Braves scored three times in the bottom of the first and trailed 5-3 when Komminsk connected against reliever Jeff Cornell. It was his third home run since being called up from the minors May 30. Brenly's two-run homer capped the San Francisco first and he added a solo shot in the eighth.

Reds 10, Dodgers 4

Ron Oester, who brought a .198 batting average into the game, doubled home three runs to cap a seven-run fifth inning that gave Cincinnati an 8-3 lead and saddled the Dodgers with their sixth consecutive loss. Loser Fernando Valenzuela took the brunt of the attack, allowing a two-run single to Eddie Milner to tie the game and a go-ahead single to Dave Concepcion. Carlos Diaz relieved with the bases loaded and surrendered Oester's bases-clearing double. Eddie Milner and Dann Bilardello homered for the Reds, while Pedro Guerrero connected for Los Angeles. Valenzuela struck out three to increase his league-leading total to 101, but walked six and threw two wild pitches, one of which let Gary Redus score Cincinnati's first run. Reds starter Joe Price scattered 10 hits over six innings for his first victory since April 27.

Expos 6, Cardinals 3

Tim Wallach slammed a two-run double and Jim Wohlford added a two-run single in a five-run third inning that carried Montreal to its fourth straight victory. The Expos sent 10 men to the plate in the inning, chasing Ken Dayley, who was making his first start since St. Louis acquired him in a trade with Atlanta last week. Rogers won for the first time since May 7, ending a personal four-game losing streak. He left in the sixth and Bob James allowed two hits over the final four innings. James also drove in the sixth Montreal run with a single.

Premier Grand Slam

Zoeller Taking His Time Assessing U.S. Open Win

ATLANTA (AP) — It will take some time — a week or so, maybe much longer — for Fuzzy Zoeller to really assess his new role as the United States Open Golf Champion.

"I never expected to win the Masters or any of the majors," he said.

"When I won at Augusta (in a playoff with Tom Watson and Ed Sneed), I figured that was the greatest thing that had ever happened to me playing golf.

"I never expected anything like that to happen again.

"It was great.

"I'd be playing a tournament, or a pro-am or an exhibition or anything, and they'd announced 'Fuzzy Zoeller, the former Masters champion.'

"I never expected to have that title by my name.

"Now they can add 'U.S. Open champion.'

"It'll take time for it to sink in.

"It took me years to realize what winning the Masters really meant. It'll take time, maybe a lot of time, for me to realize what winning the Open means. I don't know yet. It's been too soon. There's been too much happening. It'll take time."

Frank Urban Zoeller, who found his nickname in his initials, said he had made a network television appearance and fulfilled an exhibition commitment between his devastating playoff victory over Greg Norman in suburban New York on Monday and his arrival in Atlanta for the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic. The tournament begins Thursday on the hilly, 7,007-yard, par 72 Atlanta Country Club course.

Lewis Aiming At Fourth Event

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials are proving no tribulation for the amazing Carl Lewis.

In the pressure-packed tests during which the slighest error can cost an athlete an Olympic berth, sprinter-long jumper Lewis has confidently — and spectacularly — nailed down spots in three events on the U.S. team.

"Three down and one to go," a smiling Lewis said Tuesday night after he'd long jumped 28 feet, 7 inches, fourth best ever outdoors, to win the trials final.

Earlier in the day, he blazed to a 19.84-second clocking in a qualifying heat of the 200 meters. That was the second fastest ever in a 200 not run at high altitude, topped only by his 19.75 of last year. The world record of 19.72 was set by Italy's Pietro Mennea in the high altitude of Mexico City.

Lewis had won the 100 meters Sunday in 10.06 to earn berths in the sprint and on the 400-meter relay team. Now, only the 200 semifinals and final on Thursday, following a day's break in the trials today, stand between him and the chance to realize his dream of duplicating Jesse Owens' four gold medal performance in the 1936 Olympics.

"Carl feels pretty confident now with just one more (final) coming up," said Joe Douglas, a track coach who is Lewis' manager. "I think the key to his performances here has been relaxation; he seems able to relax despite the pressure."

Lewis' talent and versatility also received a tribute from another quarter while he was competing Tuesday. The Chicago Bulls selected Lewis, who earlier had been picked by the Dallas Cowboys in the pro football draft, on the 10th round of the National Basketball Association draft.

"Soccer's next," he quipped.

Lewis' rather remarkable peformances Tuesday were only part of an impressive show enjoyed by the Los Angeles Coliseum crowd of 21,081. Two American records, including one that had stood for a decade, also fell.

Winner Earl Jones and runner-up Johnny Gray each were timed in 1 minute, 43.74 seconds in the men's 800-meter final, shattering the record of 1:43.91 set by by Rick Wohlhuter in 1974.

Chandra Cheeseborough won the women's 800 meters in a national record of 49.28, bettering the standard of 49.83 set by Valerie Brisco-Hooks just 10 days earlier. Brisco-Hooks also ran faster than her old mark, finishing second in the final in 49.79.

In other highlights, Kim Gallagher took the women's 800 meters in 1:58.50; gold medal favorite Greg Foster won the men's 110-meter hurdles in 13.21; Karin Smith won the women's javelin with a throw of 200-9; and Paul Cummings ran a 27:59.08 to win the men's 10,000 meters.

In the men's 800, the 19-year-old Jones beat a field that included seven-time national champion James Robinson. Robinson finished fourth to just miss an Olympic berth, although his time of 1:43.92 was identical to that of third-place finisher John Marshall. Another accomplished veteran, Don Paige, finished fifth in the extremely close race.

"I concentrated on the American record. I'm just happy to get the record and I'll try to do better in the Games," said the unheralded Jones, a sophomore at Eastern Michigan University. "Being unknown was to my advantage. The British runners will be the favorites in the Olympics and I would like to go in as the underdog again."

Cheeseborough, unlike Jones, didn't have a record on her mind, and in fact doesn't even like the event in which she rewrote the national mark.

"I wasn't going after the record; I was more concerned about just winning," said Cheeseborough, who prefers the sprints and hopes to earn a 200-meter spot on the U.S. team. "I still don't like the 400 any better than I did before. I think the 400 is a painful race."

High-hurdler Foster said he was elated to be a member of the U.S. Olympic team, commenting, "If I get a world record and a gold medal, I wouldn't ask for anything else."

In the men's 10,000, former miler Cummings outdueled Craig Virgin on the final lap. Virgin, plagued by injury and illness during the past two years, was clocked in 28:02.27.

Cummings, who was grinning even before the finish, said, "I looked over my shoulder with 120 to go and I knew I had it. I had reason to smile."

NCAA Investigator Angers Judge In Tarkanian Trial

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An angry judge threatened NCAA official David Berst with a contempt of court citation and later blasted him for referring to basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian as a "rug merchant."

District Judge Paul Goldman lashed out Tuesday at Berst, who was under cross-examination by Tarkanian's attorneys during his third day on the witness stand.

"This witness has continually been non-responsive or over responsive," Goldman charged. "He apparently thinks he'll try the case himself. I'm not going to let him do that."

Goldman's outburst came after Berst spent much of the morning session on the stand under fire from Tarkanian attorney Sam Lionel.

Berst also drew Goldman's wrath for admitting he had referred in the past to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas coach as a "rug merchant."

"The name of the plaintiff in this case is Tarkanian. The name of our chief justice of the state Supreme Court is Noel Manoukian. The governor of the state of California is George Deukmejian. And I suggest there is not a rug merchant among the three," Goldman said before storming out of the court and slamming the door to his chambers.

Berst, who heads the NCAA's investigative division, testified under questioning by Lionel that at least one allegation by the NCAA against UNLV and Tarkanian in 1977 hearings involving the university was not backed up by facts.

"I can't call what I had evidence and I did write it (the allegation)," said Berst.

The allegation was included in nearly 80 charges brought by the NCAA investigative staff against UNLV. The charges were presented to the NCAA's Committee on Infractions in 1977, and 38 of them were upheld.

Berst said he no longer presents allegations against schools to the committee unless they are based in evidence. But on this occasion, he said he "had conflicting reports" about the travel of two recruits to a basketball tournament and wanted to hear the university's response.

"During that period of time it would have been normal to have such allegations," he said. "But you need to have specific evidence to have a finding (against the university by the committee)."

The NCAA eventually hit UNLV with a two-year probation and ordered it to suspend Tarkanian for the same period of time. Tarkanian won an injunction blocking the move and the case languished in the court system before finally coming to trial last week.

Also testifying Tuesday was J. Meils Thompson, a University of Texas professor who was president of the NCAA during 1976-1977.

Thompson testified that, during the time the UNLV charges were presented to the Committee on Infractions, he thought the committee and the NCAA's investigative staff worked too closely together.

According to Thompson, NCAA officials later moved to separate the staff and the committee to avoid the appearance that they were teaming up to go after various schools. He said some people might have thought the committee simply accepted staff charges on face value.

"They don't even have drinks together anymore," he said.

Earlier, Berst testified he drew up the final confidential report detailing infractions and the committee response and laying out penalties for the university. Berst said he relied on notes from the committee's chairman in making the report, which was the NCAA's official determination of the charges.

Curry Cancels Title Fight

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Donald Curry, the World Boxing Association's welterweight champion, has canceled his scheduled July 14 title defense against Italian Nino LaRocca, according to a published report.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram said today that Curry has been unable to work out since June 3 because of a viral infection suspected to be mononucleosis.

"The fight's off, definitely," David Gorman, Curry's manager, said Tuesday after making a last-ditch attempt to persuade the champion into reconsidering his decision.

Curry's scheduled 15-rounder against LaRocca in Monte Carlo, Monaco, was to have been the fourth defense of the 147-pound title he won on Feb. 13, 1983. With a $415,000 guarantee, the ABC telecast would have produced Curry's biggest pro payday.

LaRocca is rated No. 2 by the WBA and by the World Boxing Council.

Gorman said Curry refused to reconsider despite the possible loss of a million dollar package to fight former undefeated WBA junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor in September.

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., the firm with the promotional rights to the Curry-LaRocca fight, appeared incensed by Curry's decision.

Shiras' Dream Ends

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Giant-killer Leif Shiras finally ran out of luck, stamina and good tennis.

The 24-year-old Shiras, who ousted Ivan Lendl from last week's Queen's Club tournament and took John McEnroe to three sets in the final, fell Tuesday to a strong serve-and-volley game from Miroslav Mecir in the $100,000 West of England Tennis Championships.

Mecir, 20, the Czechoslovak national champion who will represent his country at the Los Angeles Olympic Games demonstration tournament in August, ousted Shiras 6-3, 1-6, 6-4.

"I took a long time to wake up," said Shiras, a native of Milwaukee. "I anticipated a tough match and got it."

Shiras, a tall blond who became a local sensation after his Queen's Club victories, said he still hasn't come to terms with the excitement.

NBA Draft Eases 1984 Concerns

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

If you were wondering about the caliber of the U.S. Olympic basketball team that Coach Bobby Knight has under construction in Bloomington, Ind., the National Basketball Association draft should ease your concerns.

Of the 16 finalists for the Olympic team, eight were eligible for the draft. All of them — Michael Jordan (Chicago), Sam Perkins (Dallas), Alvin Robertson (San Antonio), Lancaster Gordon (Los Angeles Clippers), Leon Wood (Philadelphia), Tim McCormick (Cleveland and traded to Seattle), Jeff Turner (New Jersey), and Vern Fleming (Indiana) — were selected in the first round by the NBA Tuesday, scooped up in the first 18 picks.

That is a ringing endorsement by the pros of the talent Knight has assembled to go for the gold in Los Angeles. Add to the NBA eight the Olympians who were not available in the draft like underclassmen Chris Mullin, Pat Ewing, and Wayman Tisdale and you get some taste for the kind of team Uncle Sam will field in LA.

It might have been even better.

Sam Bowie of the University of Kentucky, picked by Portland as the draft's No. 2 player, is just the sort of multi-talented center who would have suited Knight's kind of game. The scouting report is just about perfect. Over 7 feet tall. Unselfish. A good passer. A hard worker. No discipline problem. He fits the profile.

Bowie, however, will not be in LA because he passed on the Olympic Trials. "My main concern is that people understand I didn't skip the trials because I'm unpatriotic," he said. "My heart is with the team and I support it. But I had been through a lot. There was a two-year ordeal with my leg and the death of my father."

Bowie was an Olympian in 1980 when the U.S. boycott kept the team at home. By 1984, though, his view of basketball had been altered and playing in the Olympics was not quite as important as completing his degree requirements. So he went back to school after the season.

The stress fracture of Bowie's left shin began to develop in the summer of 1981 after his second season at UK. "It was a gradual thing that seemed to build slowly. It was no particular play, no particular time."

Then, as he tried to solve the leg problem, Bowie's world was jolted again.

In August of that year, his father, Benjamin, died. "He was 45," Bowie said, a touch of sadness in his voice. "A cyst on his lung burst and he died from internal bleeding."

Those two events changed Sam Bowie's perspective, his view of life.

"When I went to Kentucky, I thought I'd play two years and then turn pro, Bowie said. "But the leg and my father's death — I think those things matured me."

He worked hard to rehabilitate his leg and went after his degree in communications, supported by his mother and his coach, Joe B. Hall. He earned his diploma and his recovery was complete enough to make him the second player drafted, right behind Houston's selection of Akeem Olajuwon.

"I am sound," he said. "That area (of the leg) won't be injured again. The bone graft is like welding two pieces of metal together."

The Trail Blazers sent him through seven hours of tests and were convinced.

"I waited when they said 'Sam.' I almost expected them to say 'Perkins.' When they said 'Bowie,' I said, 'Hey, that's me,' and I went up there."

And as he was congratulated and interviewed on television, Bowie took a moment for a personal message.

"Ma," he said, "We made it."

African Boycott Support

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta (AP) — Resentment of the English rugby tour of South Africa continues to mount.

Calling Tuesday for a total African boycott of British sport, the Executive Committee of the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa urged its members to refuse all sports contacts with Britain except during the Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

The Committee agreed that the British government's failure to stop the tour was a violation of an agreement reached at in 1977 under which all British Commonwealth members accepted a commitment to discourage future sports links with white-minority-ruled South Africa.

The Committee's unpublished resolution, subject to approval by Ethiopia's President Mengistu Haile Mariam, current chairman of the Organization of African Unity, urged all African countries to keep out of sports events in Britain or those involving British teams, to bar British-manufactured sporting equipment or builders of sports facilities from Africa, and to ban British athletes and British trainers from all sports events in Africa.

New Movie Rating Set For Youth

NEW YORK (AP) — A new rating aimed at keeping pre-teens out of some PG-rated movies deemed too violent for them will probably be approved by the end of next month, the New York Times reported today.

The heads of several major studios told the Times they had already approved the new rating — PG-13 — and other studios were expected to follow suit. The rating would fit between the current ratings of PG and R, and would bar youths under 13 from certain movies unless accompanied by an adult.

"The polling is going on now, but it isn't all in yet," said Frank Yablans, vice chairman of MGM-United Artists.

The move comes in response to complaints that certain films with PG ratings contained violent scenes which, while not warranting an R rating, did not deserve a PG. The summer releases "Gremlins" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" were cited by several critics as undeserving of the PG ratings they received.

According to the Times report, Steven Spielberg, who produced "Gremlins" and directed "Indiana Jones," was instrumental in pushing for the new rating.

"A key creative force, Steven Spielberg, has been enormously helpful," said Barry Diller, chairman of Paramount Pictures and one of the most vocal supporters of the new rating.

Film History Of Sakharov Airs Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sakharov," the made-for-cable movie that HBO is showing four months ahead of schedule because of pleas by the Soviet dissident's family, is a classy but restrained production that would have benefitted from more Cold War heat.

Pay-cable's Home Box Office will broadcast the $4 million film one time only tonight, then hold it until its previously planned multiple showings in September.

The story covers a period in the 1970s to 1980 when Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov turned activist, speaking out against his government's restrictive policies and human rights violations.

HBO says his activities then and his recent well-publicized hunger strike against the Soviet regime demonstrate the qualities its audiences desire in movies.

"Our concept testing showed that viewers wanted to see heroes and stories about man against the system," said HBO President Michael Fuchs. "We couldn't make up anything to match the real Sakharov story."

But in documenting Sakharov's one-man stand, HBO gives a coldly clinical account that lacks tense, dramatic conflicts and prevents a good film from becoming great, robbing an important and serious work of some of its wallop.

It appears that producers Herbert Brodkin and Robert Berger ("Holocaust," "Missiles of October") were so intent not to make an overly sensational film that they ended up with bland entertainment.

That approach affects Jason Robards' performance as Sakharov. Sakharov is depicted as a laconic man whose inclination is to follow and not lead, but Robards' energy level is so low that he seems to be playing the same dazed character who was suffering from the effects of fallout in "The Day After."

Robards sees no special significance in having two of the most politically charged roles in recent TV movies. "These are the roles that came up," he said matter-of-factly in an interview.

Glenda Jackson gives the film's best performance. She is superb as Sakharov's militant wife, Ylena Bonner. Miss Jackson brings a much-needed emotional boost to the film.

The movie begins with Sakharov springing forth as a full-grown dissident without any insight into his radicalization process. After all, this was the man who had given the Soviet Union the hydrogen bomb.

As Sakharov begins to speak out more, Soviet authorities respond with systematic harassment and psychological pressure against Sakharov, his family and friends, even threatening that he could be stamped insane and placed in an asylum.

The Soviet officials are clearly the enemy, but they are not treated in a heavy-handed way. To its credit, "Sakharov" is not an anti-Soviet diatribe. There are no scenes of physical torture, no cartoonish heavies.

In one scene, Sakharov contemplates ending his protests to protect his family. But his wife talks him out of it. "That won't stop them from punishing other people's children," she says.

In one effectively lasting image, the internationally known physicist is shown on the outside of a fence looking in at his old workplace. "Your clearance has been withdrawn," he is told.

Sakharov is not allowed to leave the Soviet Union as authorities fear he will divulge military secrets to the West. In 1980, he was arrested for "activities directed towards undermining the Soviet system" and exiled to the town of Gorky, which is closed to foreigners.

Berger said 75 percent of the film's source material comes from members of the Sakharov family living in the United States. Sakharov's stepson, Efrem Yankelvich, served as a consultant.

It was Yankelvich who requested that HBO show the film as soon as possible, hoping the publicity would galvanize support and pressure the Soviets to allow the ailing Sakharovs to leave the country.

"Sakharov" was filmed in Austria after the filmmakers' request to shoot in Finland was denied.

An interesting footnote:

The film uses documentary footage to show Mrs. Bonner, who had temporarily left the Soviet Union for an eye operation, accepting her husband's 1975 Nobel Peace Prize.

But the long shots of Mrs. Bonner's speech and the follow-up candlelight ceremony aren't really of her. Berger said there was no film available of that ceremony. Instead the footage shows another freedom fighter: Lech Walesa's wife, Danuta, accepting his Nobel Prize.

Director

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Zubin Mehta, music director of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, will direct the Florence May Music Festival beginning next year, Florence Theater officials announced.

Mehta's contract as music director will run for three years, theater officials announced Tueday.

He will replace Riccardo Muti, the director of the Philadephia Orchestra who will assume the directorship of Milan's La Scala theater in 1985.

TV Stations Show Increase In Number

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in history, the number of television stations is expected to exceed the number of daily newspapers this year in the United States.

In addition, radio stations will soon number more than 10,000 as more and more go into operation and an extraordinary number of existing stations change hands.

Those trends in broadcasting were charted by The Associated Press through a compilation of statistics maintained by the Federal Communications Commission and through interviews with several top FCC officials. What emerges is an amazing picture of growth that is surprising agency officials.

"All of this is absolutely phenomenal in an age when broadcasters are facing more competition," says James C. McKinney, the chief of the FCC's Mass Media Bureau. "And it is rather strange. It seems the more competition that's offered within and from outside the free radio and TV marketplace, the better off the existing entrepreneurs are becoming. We obviously have not reached the saturation point yet, and I find that rather remarkable."

Indications of broadcasting's vitality abound within the AP survey. Consider:

—As of May 31, there were 888 full-power commercial TV stations licensed in the United States. There were also 285 non-commercial stations, for a total of 1,173 full-power TV stations on the air.

—Besides the full-power TV stations, there were another 272 low-power TV stations on the air, McKinney said. A low-power station broadcasts with reduced power to a smaller area than a conventional station, but it does provide original programming instead of merely rebroadcasting the signal of an existing station.

—FCC statistics show large numbers of construction permits for both conventional and low-power TV stations currently outstanding. There are 273 full-power TV stations now under construction, plus another 210 or so outstanding construction permits for low-power stations.

—Adding together the number of licensed stations plus those under construction, the number of TV stations will easily pass the 1,700 mark sometime this year. According to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, there were 1,701 daily newspapers being published as of Jan. 1, 1984. Even excluding low-power, there are now 1,446 full-power TV stations either on the air or under construction.

—If low-power television is not excluded, the pace of growth for over-the-air television will be even more dramatic. Barbara Kreisman, chief of the FCC's low-power TV branch, says the commission expects to issue between 100 to 300 more low-power permits in 1984 alone.

—As of May 31, there were 4,747 commercial AM radio stations licensed in the United States; 3,594 commercial FM radio stations, and 1,144 non-commercial FM stations, for a total of 9,485. Just as significantly, according FCC statistics, there were 170 outstanding construction permits for AM stations; 418 for FM stations, and 173 outstanding permits for non-commercial FM stations. When those stations go on the air, the number of radio outlets in the United States will total 10,246.

—And finally, unpublished statistics show the FCC approved 1,661 ownership changes for radio stations in the year ending Sept. 30, 1983, plus another 310 ownership changes for TV stations. The total of 1,971 broadcast stations undergoing ownership changes compares to a total of 1,496 during the previous year and 1,201 in fiscal 1977.

Legislative Panel OK's Spending Plan; State Pay Raises Included

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt is praising a legislative committee's $590 million spending plan for 1984-85 that contains a pay raise for teachers and state employees but says he'll keep working for a better pay increase for school superintendents.

The joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee approved $590 million in additions to the 1984-85 budget Tuesday. They include a 10 percent pay raise for state employees, a 15 percent raise for teachers and principals and money to reduce the size of classes in grades four through six.

But the committee trimmed the raise for school superintendents and school central office personnel from 15 percent to 10 percent to save $5 million.

"Overall the Appropriations Committee approved the vast majority of my (education) package and I am very grateful for their action to help us take a giant step forward in the public schools of North Carolina," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

"My full proposal on reduction of class size in grades four through six is included in the budget at this point as is a full 15 percent salary increase for teachers and principals. I will continue to work to see that superintendents and central office personnel are included in that 15 percent pay raise," he said.

Hunt said some of the smaller items eliminated from the budget might be phased in using other funds and he said the state Board of Education will be looking at that.

House Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee Chairman William Watkins, D-Granville, said the package leaves about $10 million for special pork barrel bills. Budget leaders said the package could reach the House or Senate floor as soon as Friday.

Watkins promised that budget leaders would try to find $5 million to lift the superintendents' raise to 15 percent and $1.6 million to eliminate the lowest pay grade for state workers, the focus of concern voiced by several committee members.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said he doubts there will be money left to repeal or phase out the intangibles or inventory taxes this session, changes sought in separate House and Senate bills.

"It's doubtful," Hardison said of the move to repeal the taxes, "because you've about earmarked your available money."

The intangibles tax generates an estimated $60 million a year and the inventory tax accounts for at least $30 million.

Lawmakers last week compiled about $630 million in proposed additions to the 1984-85 budget but legislative analysts predicted that only $602 million would be available to spend. The list of proposed reductions presented by budget leaders Tuesday sparked lengthy discussion but no changes.

Elimination of the lowest pay grade for state workers would have raised the lowest annual salary from $7,650 to $8,664 and boosted the minimum hourly wage from $3.65 an hour to $4.17.

Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, said she was afraid the lowest paid people would go on Welfare without the increase.

"It's disgraceful for anyone to work for the state fulltime for less than the poverty level," she said. She said the current salary of $7,650 is $2,600 below the poverty level.

During a lengthy exchange on pay raises, Watkins explained that superintendents' increases were cut to give everyone who works directly with children a salary increase.

"It bothers me to some degree that the people who serve food and carry the kids to school in the low paying salary jobs are being slighted by 5 percent," said Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank.

But Watkins said that teachers and state employees have received raises that closely follow those in private industry and said he doubted the benefits in private industry were as good as those for state workers.

Budget leaders had considered giving teachers a 10 percent across the board pay raise and a $900 salary adjustment. Watkins said they decided to go with the governor's plan instead because it not only helped attract better teachers but would help to keep them too.

The budget still contains $31 million to reduce the size of classrooms in grades four through six, $2 million for high school textbooks and $2.3 million for expanding vocational education programs.

There also is a $20 million reserve for community college construction, $46 million for university construction needs and $664,100 to increse the per student aid to private college students.

Among the approved cuts in school programs are a $2.7 million reduction in reserves for staff development, $5.3 million cut in money for computer labs and elimination of funding for an Office of School Discipline, a discipline task force, dropout prevention and compensatory education.

The committee agreed to reduce funding for the universities by $1.3 million because of tuition increases to out-of-state students.

An allocation of $1 million to compensate victims of crime was eliminated as was $150,000 to repair the roof of the Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst.

The committee also cut out $4.1 million for a reserve to establish biotechnology research programs and facilities and almost $7 million to reimburse counties for contributions to the Law Enforcement Officers' Retirement system for local law officers.

Bear Leads Chase Across Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 200-pound black bear wandered into the city and led wildlife officers on a chase across the roofs of buildings and through traffic before being brought down with a tranquilizer gun, according to officials.

The bear was first seen at about 5 a.m. Tuesday by Keith Jones, a Southern Bell lineman who was working on a platform atop a power pole near the Greensboro Coliseum.

"The platform suddenly shook," Jones said. "I thought it was my boss coming up. When I looked down, I thought I saw the biggest black dog I had ever seen. Then I realized it was a bear."

The sighting excited residents and brought out shotgun-toting police, who blocked intersections as they searched for the bear.

"We've never had a bear run loose — never," Greensboro Police Capt. C.F. Allen said.

Allen said the closest bears had been known to live was about 100 miles away in mountainous Alleghany and Wilkes counties. Officers said they believe the bear wandered in from the wilds.

Police flushed the bear out of the woods about 8 a.m. but didn't open fire. Then the chase began in earnest.

"He went up the side of a building like it wasn't there," said police officer D.N. Pleasants.

The bear climbed onto the roof of one building, then jumped off before darting across one street during noon traffic.

"Cars were screeching to a halt so they wouldn't hit him," said Cindy Pegram, a bank employee who spotted the animal coming across a parking lot. "The poor little bear looked scared to death."

But the bear somehow got away.

Around 12:30 p.m., the renewed earch narrowed to a dense thicket. Officers entered the brush, forcing the bear out, and a state wildlife officer shot the animal with a tranquilizer dart.

The bear was taken to a wildlife commission facility in Caswell County, where it wll stay until the wildlife commission decides what to do with it, officials said.

Vance Industry Adds 300 Jobs

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Tuesday that a new industry is locating in Vance County, while four existing firms there are expanding.

The new company and the expansions will bring Vance County about 300 new jobs with a total payroll of $3 million by the end of the year, Hunt said. The industrial investments will add about $8 million to the county's tax base beginning in January 1985.

Local workers will fill the vast majority of the new jobs, according to Benny Finch, executive director of the Henderson-Vance County Planning Commission.

The governor's announcement came at 11:30 a.m. at the groundbreaking ceremony for the new company, which will be called Eastern Block Inc. A crowd estimated at 50 people gathered at the site, located on the U.S. 1-Bypass adjacent to Eastern Minerals Inc., the parent company of the new firm.

Expansion plans were announced for Harperprints Inc., Durham Drapery Co. Inc., Parkway Homes Co. and another unidentified firm. Finch said the latter firm is definite about its plans and the name is expected to be announced in a few weeks.

Election Clouding Project

By The Associated Press

The May election of three opponents of Polk County's experiment with an extended school year to the school board has cast doubt on the continuation of the three-year program, officials say.

The impact the new majority will have on the five-member board is not yet clear, but without academic proof that the experiment is working, it might be in jeopardy.

"The program will (start) in the fall," newly elected board member Norman Morgan said this week. He wouldn't say, however, whether the board will continue the program when the new members step in this December.

"We'll do whatever is necessary when we take office to implement the public's wishes," Morgan said, adding that the program is "a waste of taxpayers' money. I think they could have used the money in a lot of other ways to better education in North Carolina."

Under the experiment, children attend school 200 days instead of the state-mandated 180 other school districts observe. Their days are seven hours long — 30 minutes longer than students in the rest of the state. The experiment with learning meant Polk students start school Aug. 13. They finished the first year of the experiment June 14.

Halifax County also took part in the experiment, which cost the state $2.2 million in its first year. The General Assembly is expected to appropriate another $2.2 million for the two counties for a second year.

In Polk County, opponents complained students would have to spend too much time in hot classrooms that weren't air-conditioned. Some argued that the plan would interrupt family vacations.

Under district policy, Polk students are sent home early if temperatures reach 88 degrees by 1 p.m. That happened 16 days in the past school year.

Parents in both school districts last summer sued county and state school boards to block the plan but could not stop it.

The three new Polk board members — Morgan, Craig McSwain and Phillip Fischer — are plaintiffs in one of the lawsuits, now pending in the N.C. Court of Appeals.

"It's not a very popular matter," state School Board Chairman C.D. Spangler said Tuesday. "Parents don't like it for some reason or other. Students don't want to go to school longer. Very few administrators would choose to be in school longer. I haven't found any fondness for the idea in the legislature. It's not an idea whose time has come in North Carolina. That doesn't mean it isn't right."

In Polk County much of the opposition to the experiment was sparked when the board committed to it without consulting residents or holding a public hearing.

Polk Superintendent James Benfield said that during the first year of the experiment, as administrators studied how teachers used school hours, they found ways for "wise utilization of time."

At Polk Central High School, the only senior high in the district, Benfield said, the experiment allowed for seven class periods each day, instead of six.

For most students, Benfield said, that provided time for a study hall, not an additional full-time course. But with more class periods, additional courses were added, including advanced math and chemistry, he said.

Bill Lets States Protect Wrecks

WASHINGTON (AP) — States would have the right to protect historic shipwrecks in their territorial waters and oversee their salvage under a bill now on its way to the House floor.

The measure, aimed at resolving conflicting federal court decisions, was approved Tuesday by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., proposed the bill, which makes it clear that in the case of historic wrecks within the three-mile state territorial limit, states can regulate the way salvage operators and sports divers operate.

Some courts, including those in Massachusetts and Maryland, had ruled in favor of state control, but federal courts in Florida had decided that federal salvage laws applied to those wrecks.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said that has meant in some cases professional treasure hunters have recovered valuables from sunken pirate ships or galleons without regard to the historical or archeological factors of a salvage operation.

The bill would continue to keep all wrecks in federal waters under federal jurisdiction and would have no effect on salvaging ships that have sunk recently.

Fieldcrest Tops Profit List In N.C.

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

Fieldcrest Mills Inc. leads major North Carolina companies in profits growth for the first quarter, but company officials say that's mainly because the previous quarter was relatively low.

"It was a good quarter but not our best," said Bill Fraser, chief financial officer for the Eden textile company.

Profits were up 111.7 percent in the first quarter to $3.06 million from $1.45 million a year earlier.

"The compared quarter was mediocre, with 39 cents a share compared with 78 or 79 cents a share," Fraser said. "In first-quarter 1979 we had profits of $1.22 a share — our all-time record."

Fraser said the most important factor in profits growth for the first three months of 1984 was a 19 percent sales growth fueled by better merchandising and styling.

"But I think it's going to continue to be volatile," he said. "The economy is volatile, the world is volatile."

Another textile company, Burlington Industries Inc. of Greensboro, was second in first-quarter profits growth among North Carolina companies in the Jenks Southeastern Business Letter list of the top 50 companies in the Southeast.

Burlington's profits were up 68.3 percent from $19.88 million to $33.47 million, according to Jenks.

Third in profits growth among North Carolina companies was Nucor Inc. The Charlotte steel company reported a 52.1 percent rise in first-quarter income, from $3.51 million to $5.34 million.

"The major growth markets for Nucor's products are non-residential construction and other capital goods," Nucor president F. Kenneth Iverson told stockholders. "Their growth normally occurs later than the growth of consumer goods in a period of economic recovery. Accordingly, we anticipate continued improvement in our business."

Lowe's Cos. Inc. of North Wilkesboro had profits of $12.73 million during the first quarter — up 46.8 percent from the $8.67 million reported a year earlier.

Rounding out the top five North Carolina companies in first-quarter profits growth is Food Lion Inc. of Salisbury, up 27.4 percent to $7.2 million.

R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. leads the top 50 southeastern list in sales with about $3.2 billion in first-quarter sales. Reynolds also reported a 4.4 percent increase in profits to $166 million.

Warrant Cites Illegal Export

By The Associated Press

Sherman Emery Lee, former director of the Cleveland Museum of Art and an adjunct professor at Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is named in an international arrest warrant alleging the illegal export of a French painting.

The warrant, issued Tuesday by a French magistrate, accused Lee of complicity in the illegal export of the 17th century painting "The Holy Family On The Steps (La Madone a L'Escalier)," by Nicolas Poussin. The Cleveland museum bought the painting in 1981 for $2.2 million.

Lee, 66, said in a telephone interview from his home in Chapel Hill that he was outraged by the warrant.

"I'm sorry I can't be more forthcoming, but that's the way it is," Lee said.

For the past 18 months, Magistrate Jean-Pierre Michau has been investigating the export of the 1648 painting, which belonged to the family of French businessman Philippe Bertin-Mourot, a director of companies in Switzerland and in Canada, where he now lives.

According to a 1941 French law, removal of art treasures from the country may take place only after national museums are given a chance to bid for the works.

Cleveland museum officials have maintained the painting was obtained only after consultation with French counsel.

The Cleveland museum issued a brief announcement Tuesday, saying the painting was put on exhibit within a month after its acquisition in April 1981, showing that officials believed their purchase was legitimate.

Where's People?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Clara Peller, the feisty 82-year-old actress who growls the line "Where's the beef" in commercials for Wendy's restaurants, asked "Where's all the people" when she visited the chain's first outlet.

Mrs. Peller posed the embarrassing question Tuesday to Wendy's founder Dave Thomas as they toured a nearly deserted Wendy's in downtown Columbus that first opened its doors in 1969.

'Midsummer Day' Is Losing Its Magic

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Midsummer Day arrives this week, once an occasion for magic and frolicking, now merely the formal beginning of summer.

Known as the Summer Solstice, the event occurs officially at 1:02 a.m. (EDT) Thursday, when the sun turns the corner of the seasons.

In the old meaning of the word, solstice was the time when the sun stood still — which is the way it appeared, although scientists now know that it is in constant motion.

The word is still used, though, perhaps because people still wish time could be halted for a while, the late nature writer Hal Borland speculated in his book "Twelve Moons of the Year."

"We would have summer, the lush, warm days of sweet luxuriance and green achievement, for weeks and months on end. At the year's meridian, we would linger and have the sun, and time itself, stand still," he wrote.

The solstice is used to mark the beginning of the summer season in the northern hemisphere — although residents of the Eastern states have already sweltered through plenty of summer heat. South of the equator this solstice marks the start of winter.

In Medieval England this longest day of the year was known as Midsummer Day, marking a festival centered on magic and merrymaking.

William Shakespeare immortalized the festivities in his play "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which lovers are caught up in the magic web spun by the moon, the forest and fairy creatures on that special night.

At this time the sun does seem fixed in the sky. The length of the day remains constant until Sunday, when sunrise will come a minute later and the days begin to shorten, a tiny bit at a time, heading toward autumn's advent with the equinox in September.

What actually occurs at the solstice is that the sun reaches its northernmost point in our sky.

This can be seen by looking at that odd figure-eight diagram on most globes. That is called an analemma and it traces the path of the sun overhead through different seasons of the year. At the summer solstice the sun is directly above the line of latitude touching the northernmost point of the analemma.

That line is the Tropic of Cancer, named because in ancient times the sun appeared to be in the constellation Cancer at this time of year. Because Earth wobbles slightly on its axis that is no longer true; the sun now is in the constellation Sagittarius.

While this day is generally considered the official start of summer, not everyone agrees. Meteorologists count June 1 as the beginning of the summer season.

And, weather historian David Ludlum points out that if summer were defined as the 93 warmest days of the year it would last from June 6 to September 7.

ECU To Premier Tape Thursday

A video tape production of the creation of "Dimensions of Time and Space," a performance piece for the East Carolina Dance Theater, will be premiered Thursday in the Messick Theater Arts Center of East Carolina University.

Copies will be presented to ECU officials by producer Janet Gaino of Diversified Media Production. The production, which highlights the work of creative artists within the university community, was funded by the Office of Academic Affairs to use for recruitment activities and for presentation on statewide PBS.

Directed by Dave Balch, the production is a documentary of a collaboration between choreographer Patricia Pertalion of the dance faculty of the ECU Department of Theater Arts and Tom Grubb, an M.F.A. graduate of the school of art. Using kinetic sculptures fashioned of bamboo and rope, Grubb's work provides a dynamic setting for the dance work with a cast of five men. The production captures the two artists at work in their studios, the installation of the sculptures in McGinnis Theater for the first rehearsal period with the dancers, and the in-concert performance of the work.

The production offers an insider's view of the nature of a collaboration between two artists who work in time and space with different materials but who are committed to an endeavor to coalesce their work into an artistic whole. To achieve this, the dancers interact with the kinetic sculptures as well as with each other, and the bamboo and rope sculpture moves past the traditional stage space defined by the proscenium arch.

Performed by the East Carolina University Dance Theater in their 1983 concert, "Dimensions in Time and Space" received an enthusiastic response from audiences and acclaim by local reviewers.

Foot Shock Can Be Problem Later

CHICAGO (AP) — Excessive foot shock, when sustained over a long time by runners, joggers or other athletes, can contribute to a number of injuries to the feet, legs and lower back, according to a foot specialist.

Jumping and running on hard surfaces puts enormous pressure on the feet and knees — as much as two to five times total body weight, notes Dr. Charles J. Gudas, clinical professor of surgery in the orthopedic section of surgery, University of Chicago.

"Although the human foot is a very effective natural shock absorber," he says, "excessive shock, especially when it causes the foot to strike the surface at an unnatural angle, can cause a number of injuries.

"After long periods of stress, the feet become less able to counteract the pressures of gravity," he adds, "and these abnormal pressures transmit the force upward toward the legs, knees, back and spine — parts of the body quite susceptible to excessive stress."

People involved in medicine and sports have begun to realize the effects of excessive foot shock, notes Gudas, who also serves on the Dr. Scholl's Foot Health Council, and a number of new products are being designed to neutralize these effects, such as a shock-absorbing shoe insert of rubber polymer material.

"We can anticipate that as these products are improved and perfected, the number of sport-related injuries in this country can begin to decrease," Gudas says.

Nixon Has New Grandchild

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Richard Nixon has a new grandchild and the former president wasted no time hurrying over from his New Jersey home to see the bouncing baby girl born to his daughter Julie Eisenhower.

"I think Julie wanted a girl," Nixon told a reporter Tuesday as dozens of people crowded around for autographs. "I'm partial to girls because we had two girls."

The baby, Melanie Catherine, was born Monday night, the third child of Julie and David Eisenhower. She was about two weeks later than expected and Nixon joked that the late birth might have been the reason for her size — 9 pounds, 8 ounces.

Nixon said Julie called him herself to report the good news.

Officials at Phoenixville Hospital said both the mother and daughter were in good condition.

British Dance Troupe To Perform

DURHAM — The London Contemporary Dance Theater, Britain's leading modern dance troupe, will bring its 20-member company to Page Auditorium when it comes to the American Dance Festival (ADF) at Duke University in Durham on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The company, which made its American debut at the ADF in 1977 and performed last year at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, will this week bring to the festival works by three choreographers — two Americans, Robert Cohan and Tom Jobe, and one British, Siobhan Davies.

The program for Thursday and Friday includes three American premieres — "Run Like Thunder" by Jobe; "New Galileo" by Ms. Davies, and "Songs, Lamentations and Praises" by Cohan.

The program scheduled for the Saturday performance include "The Dancing Department" by Davies; and two pieces by Cohan, "Forest" and "Class."

The London Contemporary Dance Company was formed in 1967 when a small group of British dancers led by artistic director Robert Cohan, former co-director of the Martha Graham Dance Company, and accompanied by two guest artists from the Graham Company, gave their first public performance as a company.

The company was the brainchild of Robin Howard, a London hotelier who saw the need for a British-based modern dance company and proceeded to build the company founded on Graham technique.

The troupe has become Britain's modern dance tradition and performs in London's Sadler Wells Theater as well as across Europe.

All performances will be at Page Auditorium on the Duke University campus and begin at 8 p.m. Tickets range in price between $8.50 and $13. For more information and ticket reservations, call the box office at 684-4059.

Encores

NEW BERN — Due to sell-out performances of the Saax Bradbury Playhouse production of the musical "Annie," two encore performances have been scheduled at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday and Friday at the playhouse on Pollock Street, downtown New Bern.

Tickets are priced at $5 in advance and at $6 at the door if any tickets remain. The box office will open at 5:30 p.m. on each of the two days. For more details and reservations, call 638-3633 or 633-0567.

Reporter Wins Emmy

Ron Gollobin, a native of Elizabeth City and investigative reporter for WCVB-TV, Metromedia, in Boston, recently won a New England Emmy Award.

Gollobin, who worked as a reporter for The Daily Reflector in 1968, won his Emmy for a news story he covered on the dedication of the Vietnam War Memorial.

WCVB-TV won 17 other Emmys, which are awarded annually by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The station was cited in the news, programming, public service, and individual achievement divisions. For the seventh consecutive year, since the regional competition began, WCVB led in the number of awards won.

Gollobin, in addition to his Emmy award, has won several other honors including UPI and AP awards. He lives in Brookline, Mass., with his wife, Helen, son Clay, and daughter, Kelly.

AWARD WINNER ... Elizabeth City-native Ron Gollobin is shown with the TV Emmy Award he won as a reporter for WCVB-TV, Metromedia, in Boston in a recent New England Emmy Award ceremony. Golobin was a reporter at The Daily Reflector in 1968. With him is a WCVB news anchor, Natalie Jacobson.

PTA Wants Labels

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Records and tapes that have sexually explicit, profane, violent or vulgar lyrics should be required to carry warning labels, the National PTA declared in a convention resolution.

The resolution got overwhelming approval Tuesday at the 88th annual convention of the 5.4 million-member National Parent-Teachers Association. It called for a ratings system to warn an "unsuspecting public" of music unsuitable for children.

The PTA said it "respects recording artists' First Amendment rights to free speech to record what they desire," but said the recording industry should be responsible for warning "an unsuspecting public."

On Tuesday, the convention approved resolutions urging new legislation to protect "children at risk" of child abuse.

Another resolution urged television networks to "eliminate unnecessary scenes depicting drinking of alcoholic beverages from TV programming when not related to the story line."

"Research surveys document that alcohol far outdistances other beverages consumed by TV characters in top-rated prime-time TV programs," a PTA document said.

Boozing on television tends to "glamorize and moralize drinking" and may lead children to think alcohol is a way for adults to handle social problems.

Dolly Says She 'Made Money'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music super singer Dolly Parton says making a movie with Sylvester Stallone was more fun than working with Burt Reynolds but, she says, "I made money off of both of them."

Miss Parton said she enjoyed working with Stallone "because we got a chance to get more involved and have more of the energy in the songs ..."

The singer-songwriter turned actress made her remarks Monday at the Nashville premier of the movie "Rhinestone," in which she co-stars with Stallone.

THE REAL ESTATE CORNER

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.
As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries; 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.
Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.
And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.
Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you—well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 7-14.

HOUSE

VIETNAM — The House passed, 295 for and 96 against, a bill (HR 4772) granting a federal charter to the Vietnam Veterans of America. If the Senate goes along, the 17,000-member VVA will be able to deal with government agencies on equal footing with pre-Vietnam veterans' groups.

Opposition was spurred by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, conservative lobbies and others who say the VVA under leader Robert Muller has been "unpatriotic" in its post-war statements and actions with respect to Hanoi.

Supporter Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., said that after suffering severe wounds in Vietnam combat, Muller "has earned the right to express his personal feelings on any issue, even though I may disagree strongly with his views."

Opponent John McCain, R-Ariz., said it was "inexcusable" for a VVA delegation to Vietnam to lay a wreath at the tomb of Ho Chi Minh.

Members voting yes favored a federal charter for the VVA.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Britt, D-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: James Broyhill, R-10.

Not voting: James Martin, R-9.

HIRING — By a vote of 120 for and 304 against, the House refused to gut the enforcement section of the immigration reform bill. This vote killed an amendment to eliminate civil penalties, of up to $2,000 per hire, on employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. The sanctions are aimed at growers, restauranteurs and others who present employment practices encourage undocumented workers to flock to the U.S.

The vote occurred during marathon debate on the first overhaul of federal immigration law in 32 years. Supporters say the bill (HR 1510) will enable the U.S. to regain control of its borders, over which millions of job-seeking illegal aliens have passed in recent years.

Supporter Norman Mineta, D-Calif., said sanctions "would encourage employers everywhere to discriminate against individuals solely on the basis of their appearance."

Opponent Peter Rodino, D-N.J., said "once you do away with employer sanctions, you are saying...let the employers continue to employ illegally and exploit (the workers)."

Members voting no wanted penalties against employers to be the key enforcement mechanism of the immigration bill.

Voting yes: Walter Jones.

Voting no: Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

SEARCHES — By a vote of 133 for and 285 against, the House rejected an mendment to enable immigration agents to conduct warrentless raids on open fields. Such dragnet searches for illegal aliens now are permitted under Supreme Court decisions. The pending immigration bill (above) would outlaw warrentless searches on cropland.

This vote was applauded by western growers and other interests who generally oppose the bill. But it was denounced by the Administration, which says warrentless field searches are a constitutional, effective activity of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., who sponsored the amendment, said obtaining a warrent will alert growers that they are to be raided and enable them to shift illegal workers to other properties.

Opponent Don Edwards, D-Calif, said the Fourth Amendment "says that the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects shall not be violated..."

Members voting yes wanted to continue the present law that permits warrantless government searches of open fields.

Voting yes: None.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill, Clarke.

Not voting: Neal.

SENATE

STAR WARS — By a vote of 45 for and 48 against, the Senate rejected an amendment giving the president a freer hand in ordering tests of anti-satellite (ASAT) missile defense systems now being developed by the Pentagon. This occurred during debate on the fiscal 1985 military authorization bill (S 2723).

As envisioned, the space-based "star wars" weaponry would enhance national security by safeguarding U.S. satellites and destroying enemy missiles long before they posed an atmospheric hazard to the U.S. However, critics call the ongoing U.S. and Soviet development of highly-experimental ASAT systems a dangerous extension of the arms race into outer space.

After rejecting this pro-White House amendment, the Senate voted to permit full testing of ASAT weapons only if the president convinces Congress he is seriously attempting to negotiate with the Soviets over banning such weapons.

Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., who sponsored the amendment, asked: "Who runs this country? This Congress or the leader of the Soviet Union?"

Opponent Joseph Biden, D-Del., said "if we let technology go full speed while diplomacy is idling, we may soon find ourselves less secure..."

Senators voting yes were opposed to limiting the president's hand in testing anti-satellite weaponry.

Both John East and Jesse Helms voted yes.

ENTITLEMENT — By a vote of 72 for and 20 against, the Senate approved creation of a peacetime GI education program. It was included in the fiscal 1985 defense authorization bill (above), which was headed for final passage. The previous GI program expired in 1976.

The new entitlement program is estimated to cost taxpayers up to $840 million over four years. After completing two years of military duty, service personnel would be eligible for education payments of up to $18,000 over four years, provided that they supplement them for two years with $250 monthly of their own money.

Supporter John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the program "addresses the major problems that the military has right now in attracting people ..."

Opponent Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., asked: "How many of us have said the (deficit) woe we are in now is because we passed these entitlements?"

Senators voting yes wanted to create a new entitlement program providing educational payments to military personnel.

Both East and Helms voted yes.

Infrastructure repairs to the nation's drinking water systems could be paid for without government subsidy or grants, according to the American Water Works Association. Water rate increases averaging 27 percent would raise the near $30 billion required over the next 10 years, the association calculates. That would raise the national average water bill from $1.03 a thousand gallons to $1.30.

Students Fly Paper Planes For Research

CINCINNATI (AP) — Majors in aerospace engineering at the University of Cincinnati play for real when they make paper airplanes.

The business of combining work and play has led to an almost annual student competition where would-be engineers gather in the university fieldhouse to match the flying abilities of their best designs for paper airplanes.

"It's mostly for fun," said Steve Labbe, a senior from Akron. "Last year, one of our professors made it an exercise and made us analyze the paper airplane we designed."

This year, students invited the general public to take part in the competition "to let them know there's more going on up here than crunching numbers," Labbe said. He doesn't regard himself as an expert on paper airplanes, although some of his colleagues have demonstrated some expertise.

The student chapter of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics sponsors the paper airplane contest. Labbe is the local chapter president, so he inherited the job of organizing the contest.

The contest offers $10 prizes to the plane builder whose paper craft either flies the longest distance or shows maximum endurance.

There is a technique for constructing paper airplanes to prevent them from taking quick nose dives, Labbe said.

"The problem is that the wings have no thickness to them, so as soon as they tilt up, there's no way to get them to recover," he said. "There's a few tricks some people have come up with."

One involves putting a short, stabilizing wing — known as a canard — near the nose of a paper airplane and moving the larger wings to a location near the rear. The canard on real, large airplanes, is usually attached to the tail to provide stability.

Participating in the paper airplane contest can pay academic rewards, Labbe said.

"Our professor last year gave a guy 25 extra points for his grade," he said.

Labbe has landed a job as an aerospace technician with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, starting this summer. But will the paper airplane contest give him any useful experience for the NASA job?

"I have a feeling we're in the wrong environment," he said.

Publisher Jailed

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Gregoire Eugene, publisher of the weekly newspaper Fraternite, has been arrested at his home, police reported.

No details of the arrest this week were revealed, but Eugene had failed to comply with an order by Interior Minister Roger Lafontant banning political parties and party newspapers until approval of legislatioon allowing them to operate. Eugene also is president of the Christian Democrat Party.

Eugene was exiled in 1980, and returned to Haiti after President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier offered amnesty to exiles in a speech Feb. 22.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

We've never quite understood why anyone should want to climb a mountain simply "because it's there." Certainly at the bridge table you don't want to do anything just because you can—you need a sounder reason.

Normally, 13 points opposite 10 will not produce a game. However, when West announced possession of most of the high cards with his overcall, North-South could afford to be aggressive in the auction—knowing the location of the high cards is a boon to declarer in the play. So North-South pushed to the limit and reached the heart game.

West led the king of spades, and declarer made his first good technical play by holding up the ace. West continued with a spade. Declarer won the ace and cashed one high trump. It was tempting to ruff a spade immediately, but declarer realized that would produce only nine tricks, unless clubs divided 3-3 and the king was favorably located.

The ruff was needed as an entry to the table in case clubs broke 4-2. Declarer did not draw a second trump. Instead, he took the club finesse. When the queen held, as expected, declarer came back to hand with a trump and was delighted when both defenders followed. A club to the ace was followed by a club ruff, and declarer's foresight was rewarded when West discarded on this trick.

Now declarer put his spade ruff in dummy to good use as the extra entry. He ruffed another club to set up the board's long card in the suit, crossed back to the table with the ace of diamonds and led dummy's remaining club, on which he discarded a diamond. East could score his master trump whenever he felt so inclined, but that and a diamond to go with the spade trick they had already collected were all the defenders were entitled to.

Offices Sacked

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Supporters of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe have burned down a provincial headquarters of their main political rival and demanded the arrest of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo, the state-owned television reported.

Witnesses also said Mugabe's supporters sacked offices of Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union and two other opposition parties in three cities.

About 20,000 members of Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union marched on Nkomo's headquarters in the Midlands province town of Gweru and set it ablaze, according to the television report.

Prisoners Die

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The Martial Law Command says three jailed leftists who had refused food for 2½ months in a bid to be classified as political prisoners died at a hospital last week.

A statement said the three alleged terrorists, held in Istanbul's Metris and Sagmalcilar military prisons, were hospitalized May 30 in weakened condition and continued to refuse food and medical treatment.

All States Enact Laws On Children

CHICAGO (AP) — Legislation that discourages parental child-snatching and prolonged court battles over child custody has been enacted uniformly in all 50 states.

This year Massachusetts becomes the final jurisdiction to adopt the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (UCCJA), according to John McCabe, legal counsel for the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL).

The NCCUSL, an organization of practicing lawyers, law professors and judges, drafted the UCCJA in 1968, in response to the growing incidence of parental "kidnapping." This frequently involved a divorced parent who, having been denied custody of a child, abducted him or her to another state, hoping to obtain a more favorable judgment.

The UCCJA was designed to:

— Penalize parents for child-snatching, by allowing courts to deny access to parents who engage in "abduction or other unilateral removals of children."

— Allow custody cases to be heard in the state with the "closest connection" to the child — such as the state where the child has his or her home.

— Encourage binding court decisions, so as to discourage lingering controversy.

— Promote cooperation between courts of different states on jurisdictional questions.

According to Patricia M. Hoff, a District of Columbia lawyer who headed the American Bar Association's Child Custody Project, the act's adoption everywhere means "there is a very good chance a judge will not hear a case when a child has been wrongfully removed. This would not have been the case before the UCCJA."

Morever, she adds, "there is a much greater likelihood that a custody decree entered in one state will be recognized in another."

Ms. Hoff also pointed out that the UCCJA "laid the groundwork" for the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act, enacted by Congress in 1980, which also improved the enforceability of child custody decrees.

The NCCUSL is a confederation of state commissions on uniform laws. Its 300 members meet to draft and urge enactment of legislative proposals designed to solve problems common to all states.

Scouts Sell Bird Houses

DE QUEEN, Ark. (AP) — Bluebirds searching for a home in southwest Arkansas would love this town of 4,594. Bluebird houses are springing up everywhere with the effort of a Chapel Hill man and a Boy Scout troop.

Walter Friday of the Chapel Hill community near De Queen developed an original bluebird house with a design that is simple and functional. He turns the houses out in kits that he builds in his workshop.

A few pieces of plywood, a pipe, a clamp and a steel post are in the kit. The plywood is cut with slots in the right spots so that the box slides together and only two nails are needed for the whole assembly. The nails go in pre-drilled holes in the roof. A special feature of the birdhouses allows easy cleaning, he said. With a gentle pull toward the front of the house, Friday said, the floor section can be removed. The front can be pulled down and the house cleaned out in a matter of seconds.

The design is protected by common law documents filed in the Sevier County Courthouse, Friday said.

Friday prefers simply to build the houses. That's where the Boys Scouts came in. He asked Scoutmaster Bobby Dodd if Troop 55 would be interested in selling the birdhouses to raise money.

Dodd said in a recent telephone interview that the money raised by the project would be used to buy tents and camping equipment for the troop. Any money left over goes to help send scouts on trips.

Dodd said the scouts get one-third of the money. Another one-third goes for materials and one-third for Friday.

Plaque Replaced

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — A plaque listing the names of the Pilgrim Fathers who sailed to America from Plymouth aboard the Mayflower in 1620 has been replaced by one honoring the Pilgrim Mothers as well.

The local council in this southern England port commissioned the new plaque after complaints about the omission of the names of women who made the voyage to Plymouth, Mass.

"We thought it very unfair that only the men should be remembered," said Rosemary Jeffrey, former president of Plymouth's Soroptomists group of businesswomen
