Senate OKs Defense Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate early today finally approved a Pentagon spending bill after asking America's European allies to increase defense spending but refusing to threaten a major withdrawal of U.S. troops from the continent if they do not.

At 3:57 a.m., the Senate voted 82-6 approval of the measure authorizing the Pentagon to spend $291 billion in fiscal 1985. That is a 6.9 percent increase, adjusted for inflation, over the current approved spending.

The measure now goes to a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differences from the House version passed three weeks ago.

The bill gives the Pentagon almost all the weapons President Reagan wanted, except for nerve gas and the MX missile. Reagan was turned down on nerve gas and won only 21 MX weapons after seeking 40.

The Senate voted 55-41 late Wednesday to kill a move to pull out 90,000 American troops from Europe by the end of the decade if the 15 other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization don't improve NATO's non-nuclear military power.

Then the Republican-controlled Senate gave 94-3 approval to a proposal that would limit U.S. troop strength in Europe to the current total of 326,414, blocking planned Pentagon increases. It also calls for more NATO spending.

In other votes, the Senate:

—Approved 77-22 a call that Reagan try to negotiate with the Soviets a comprehensive ban on all nuclear tests, one of four provisions added by the Senate to press Reagan on arms control issues.

—Approved by voice vote creation of a "peace academy" to study conflict resolution.

—The refusal to approve the troop withdrawals came after two days of heavy lobbying by President Reagan and other top U.S. officials, along with European leaders. They all argued that it was the wrong way to get NATO to spend more money.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chief advocate of the withdrawal, said later "the lobbying by the White House had a very large effect."

The voting capped six hours of debate in which all senators who spoke expressed frustration with NATO's refusal to meet earlier pledges to increase spending. But opponents said the Nunn plan was not the way to win hikes.

Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said, "We're not here just to defend the blue-eyed Europeans. We're here to defend our own national interests."

Soviets Say 'No Chance'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin's chief spokesman said today there is no chance for a U.S.-Soviet summit until the United States changes its policies.

At a news conference to brief reporters on the Soviet view of French President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Moscow, Leonid Zamyatin was asked about President Reagan's statements last week on a summit.

Reagan said his administration's door "is always open" to a summit, but he did not say what conditions he would attach to such a meeting.

"We are serious about summits and we consider those kind of meetings as very important," Zamyatin said.

Candidate Seeks Less Controls

By STUART SAVAGE

David Bergland, the Libertarian Party candidate for president, was in Greenville today as part of a campaign tour of North Carolina that will end with the party's state convention in Charlotte on Sunday.

The 12-year-old Libertarian Party is the third largest political party in America, and according to Bergland, is "the only nation-wide political alternative to the older, traditional parties. We're unique in American politics..."

An Iowa native, Bergland was raised in Southern California and practices law in Costa Mesa. Although he has never held an elective office before, Bergland was selected as the party's 1984 candidate at the national presidential nominating convention in September.

"Most Americans are Libertarians," Bergland said this morning. "They just haven't discovered it yet."

The party's main goal, Bergland said, are "to help American citizens regain control of their own lives," first, by "reducing the size and cost of the federal government," and, secondly, by "protecting the constitutional rights (of citizens) from violations by state and local government."

Bergland suggested that the United States should "adopt a foreign policy of neutrality," establish a policy of free world trade, and work toward the reduction of nuclear arms and "withdraw its military forces from around the world."

"Bring our troops home and defend America," Bergland said, adding that the United States should let other countries decide for themselves what their defense needs are and let them pay for it.

The Libertarian candidate said the United States should "rely on submarine and bomber-carried nuclear missiles" as a deterrent and that land-based nuclear missiles should be eliminated.

Bergland said the elimination of land-based missiles would "improve the security of America by removing potential targets."

The economy could be improved by reducing taxes with the ultimate goal the elimination of all income taxes, Bergland said. And taxes could be reduced by a reduction in federal spending and elimination of budget deficits.

Other measures that could be taken to improve the economy, according to Bergland, would be to "establish a solid monetary system," first by returning to a gold standard and then by removing

Baldree Named Conley Principal

County school officials announced today that Ike Baldree has been named principal of D.H. Conley, Pitt County's largest high school, effective July 1.

Baldree, who has served as principal of Grifton School since 1970, will succeed Bob Caraway at Conley. Caraway, according to Superintendent Eddie West, will assume "another administrative position in the county" school system.

Nannelle Congleton, currently assistant principal at Grifton, will become principal of the school beginning July 1, West said.

Baldree is a native of Pitt County and graduated from Ayden High School. He received his bachelor's and master's degree from East Carolina University and taught at schools in Dunn and Havelock before returning to Grifton High School as a teacher and head coach. Baldree also served as a supervisor in the Pitt County school system for two years before becoming principal at Grifton.

Testimony continued this morning in the sentencing phase of the trial of Harvey Lee Greene Jr., who has pleaded guilty to murdering two people in Bethel in December.

Greene changed his plea to guilty and Superior Court Judge Thomas S. Watts accepted that plea earlier this week.

The jury of five men and seven women must now decide whether Greene will receive life imprisonment or the death penalty for the first degree murders of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, at Young's 1-Hour Cleaners Dec. 19.

Ten witnesses testified Wednesday, among them Judy Bland, mother of one of the victims, and Frances Young, wife of the owner of Young's Cleaners. Some of the witnesses broke into tears as they spoke.

Mrs. Bland cried as she testified that her daughter, a senior at North Pitt High School, worked at Young's Cleaners after school and usually returned home by 6:20 p.m. after closing the store. Her daughter did not return on Dec. 19, Mrs. Bland said, and she and her husband became worried and went to search for her, finding the police and rescue squad at the cleaners when they arrived.

Mrs. Young fought back tears as she described finding the bodies of Miss Bland, a clerk at the cleaners, and Edmondson, a customer. She said she noticed that the lights were on at the cleaners an hour after the 6 p.m. closing time. She went in and found the bodies of Miss Bland and Edmondson lying face down in a pool of blood behind a partition.

When pictures of the two victims where shown to the jury, spectators in the courtroom sobbed. The defendant sat with his chin in his hand throughout most of the testimony.

A dozen color photographs of the crime scene were shown to the jury and described by special agent Dennis Honeycutt of the State Bureau of Investigation's mobile crime laboratory. Honeycutt testified that blood splatters on the partition near the bodies reached a height of 2 feet 10 inches.

Robert Young, owner of the Day-Nite Lunch Restaurant in Bethel and co-owner of Young's Cleaners, testified that Harvey Lee Greene Jr. had cashed several bad checks in the restaurant; he said the checks were made out to Harvey Lee Greene Jr. and were signed with the name of the defendant's father.

Sgt. Jesse Gardner of the Bethel Police Department testified that a 27-inch steel pipe had been given to him by Herman Daniels. Daniels told Gardner that the pipe had been found in the hedge at his mother's house on South Main Street.

Bethel Rescue Squad Capt. Sam T. Carson testified that when he entered Young's Cleaners around 7

Open Danish Sandwiches Satisfy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Visitors to Denmark for the first time are likely to fall in love with the hundreds of versions of open sandwiches (Smørrebrød) served there. I know I did. And their appeal was just as alluring on my second and third visits.

Interestingly enough, the open sandwiches are so attractive and satisfying because they are so simple. The Danes, in their forthright way, like the flavor of the main ingredients to be complemented, not overwhelmed, by the "trimmings."

Modeled after the Danish ones, here is a recipe for an open sandwich whose main ingredient is sardines — an excellent source of calcium, a nutrient many American teen-agers and women are deficient in.

OPEN SARDINE SANDWICHES

- Two 3½-ounce cans brisling sardines in oil, drained
- 2 tablespoons sliced scallion
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- Lettuce leaves
- 4 slices pumpernickel or rye bread
- 1 cup cherry tomatoes, halved or sliced
- 1 cup sliced cucumber
- Fresh dill, for garnish

In small bowl mash lightly with a fork 1½ cans of the sardines, the scallion, mayonnaise, lemon juice and mustard. Arrange lettuce leaves on buttered bread. Top with sardine mixture, then with tomato, cucumber and remaining whole sardines. Garnish with dill. Makes 4 servings.

Dear Abby

Pastor Worried: Loves A Man

DEAR ABBY: It makes me blush to write this, but I have to unload on someone. I can't talk to a minister because I am my own pastor.

I have a wonderful wife and family. The problem is me. I am in love with someone besides my wife. The person I am in love with is another man. He lives in a town nearby, and he is also married. We see each other once a week. I can't understand my feelings—I only know that this man makes me feel more loved than I've ever felt in my life. I suppose that makes me a homosexual.

My wife is a fine person, but I doubt that I was ever really in love with her. Sex was never very important to her, and when we did have sex, she didn't seem at all interested. Could that be the reason I have turned to another man for love?

I know the rights and wrongs of what I am doing, so please spare me the lectures. Thank you for letting me get this off my chest.

FEELS BETTER IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR FEELS BETTER: If "unloading" on someone has helped you to feel better, then your letter has served its own purpose. You did, however, ask a question that deserves an answer. You turned to another man for love not because your wife seemed disinterested, but because of an unfulfilled sexual urge. You, my friend, are not a homosexual—you are a bisexual.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to "Needs Answers in Alabama." (She said her son had dated three different girls in the last two years and all three had babies and each claimed her son was the father.)

Just because her son "dated" these girls doesn't prove their babies were his. I'm sure he wasn't the only guy they ever dated. You told that lady that her son needed to learn self-control. I'll bet he didn't force those girls to have sex with him!

Come on, Abby, if someone was giving out free milk, wouldn't you be glad to accept a free gallon or two?

UPSET IN TEXAS

DEAR UPSET: Not necessarily. I'd wonder what was wrong with it.

DEAR ABBY: I am another mother-in-law who never dreamed she would be writing to you. My problem is my son-in-law. He is a fine young man who is extremely casual in his dress. When I invite him for Sunday dinner, on a warm day he comes to the table with bare feet and no shirt. My daughter, who knows how I feel, says, "Mom, leave him alone—he's comfortable that way."

So for the sake of peace, I say nothing, but it certainly is unappetizing to eat at a table with a man who is naked from the waist up.

Please tell me how to handle this. Or am I overly sensitive?

FRUSTRATED IN MAINE

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not overly sensitive; your son-in-law is overly insensitive. Handle it this way: Say: "Charlie (or whatever this 'fine' young man's name is), will you please wear some kind of shirt when you have dinner with us? I know it's warm, but everyone else is fully dressed, and I'd appreciate it if you were, too."

criminal. This new breed includes members of my own family who slip in from nowhere and strip down my refrigerator in 30 seconds flat, leaving no fingerprints, no telltale evidence and no legal recourse.

My husband and I haven't seen an ice cube in 20 years. Trays? Oh, sure, but not one single, stinking cube. The same goes with ice cream. We have gallon boxes of every flavor you can imagine in the freezer, but take off the lids and they're empty.

A cold pork chop left unattended has a shelf life of possibly six minutes, tops. A piece of leftover pie will be lifted before the door is allowed to close.

One night one of the T-shirt bandits couldn't stay for dinner. By the time he took a few things with him, we couldn't either.

When the refrigerator was new, there were little plastic accessories like a butter dish and an egg holder. They're gone now, too. My theory is that someone ate them.

Naturally, I've tried to combat these thefts by trying to think as they do. Sometimes it works. I was able to hang onto a bag of Halloween candy by putting it under a dish towel on the countertop. No one ever disturbs that!

Occasionally, I will dress up a leftover as something else so that it will seem unattractive and not worth stealing. Like the other night, I put a mound of coconut on top of a cold chicken breast which I was saving to put with rice. (My kids were all too lazy to chew coconut.)

I opened up the refrigerator. The T-shirt phantom had struck again. My husband said, "I've got a suspect whose breath smells like chicken and coconut. You want to press charges?"

"How long would he get?" I asked. "Probably three years in our custody."

It was too big a price to pay for justice.

Wagstaffs Were Wed in Ayden

The wedding of Sherry Ann Cromartie and Jeffrey Alton Wagstaff was solemnized Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Ayden First Baptist Church by the Rev. Gilbert Mister.

Escorted by her brother, the bride was dressed in an ivory organza and schiffli lace dress with fitted ruffled-at-the-shoulder bodice. The full organza-trimmed flounced skirt went into a chapel-length train. She wore a matching headpiece of schiffli ivory illusion with fingertip-length veil. The bridal bouquet was white rosebuds with ivy.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Wharfield of Fayetteville and Mr. and Mrs. James T. Wagstaff Sr. of Ayden. Mr. Wagstaff served his son as best man.

The matron of honor was Rhesa Hufford, sister of the bridegroom, of Winterville. She wore a pink and white dress of organza over taffeta with fitted waist, ruffled shoulders and white lace trim. She carried three long-stemmed pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Georgeann Coward of Greenville; Sandra Liverman, sister of the bridegroom of Plymouth, and Kim Cromartie and Shelia Cromartie, sisters of the bride, of Fayetteville. Their dresses were like that of the matron of honor, as were their flowers.

The flower girl was Paige Nelson of Ayden. She wore a pink dress like those of the honor attendants.

The ringbearer was Josh Hufford, nephew of the bridegroom, of Winterville and Damien Cromartie, nephew of the bride, of Fayetteville.

Nora Lee Craft was the wedding director. Mac Swanson played the organ and Helen Hill sang.

Ushers were Jimmy Wagstaff of Charleston, brother of the bridegroom, Kevin Nelson of Ayden, Wesley Beppard of Mount Olive and Dennis Carter of Myrtle Beach, S.C. Junior ushers were Scott Liverman of Plymouth and Brad Hufford of Winterville, nephews of the bridegroom, and Steve Sharfield of Fayetteville, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the church. Lois Murray cut cake and Bobbie Brandon poured punch.

The bride is a graduate of East Bladen High School. She attended East Carolina University and is the manager of an Arby's Restaurant in Fayetteville. The bridegroom is an Ayden-Griston High School graduate who graduated from East Carolina University with a B.S. degree in business administration. He is assistant department manager of Best Products in Fayetteville.

Crime has become so sophisticated in this country that you really have to go some to keep ahead of the criminal mind.

Twenty years ago, everyone dropped their key in the mailbox. The rationale was that a mailbox was U.S. government property and a stranger could get into more trouble stealing your key than he could robbing your house.

For awhile, we hid keys under the doormat or the milkbox, but that was before someone stole all the doormats and the milkboxes.

Why, I can remember when all we locked was the car. Now you have to lock your gas tank, tape deck and attach your battery and transmission to an alarm system or it can be stripped down for parts faster than you can start a motor without a key.

I can handle all of that. The thing I cannot deal with is the T-shirt

Grant Welcome

Wastewater treatment is a phenomenon of the 20th century, but it has rapidly become essential to our modern society.

In other times most communities were built on waterways and, if a sewage system was provided, the waste simply ran off into the nearby stream. Then it became obvious that we were polluting and destroying our rivers and streams and communities began the expensive task of treating the effluent before it reached the streams.

The cost of treatment plants is considerable and thus we can understand the pleasure that Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway expressed in the possibility that the town will receive a $1,745,250 grant for expansion of its wastewater treatment facility.

Bethel was included on a list of possible recipients of funds announced by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. Bethel could receive a grant of 75 percent of the total cost of the plant expansion. Hemingway said the present plant was constructed in 1967 and was projected to meet needs for 25 years. However, enlargement of the facility must be carried out after only 17 years.

Adequate wastewater treatment means a cleaner environment for residents of the area, and having enough capacity will allow the community to accept desirable new industry as it comes. The possibility of obtaining early a wastewater treatment facility expansion grant is certainly welcomed in Bethel.

Fight, Or Pay

Something that is shaping up for Greenville citizens is a charge for garbage collection.

It is in the proposed budget and unless the public reacts it could very well be a fact by next week.

Some citizens showed up Monday at a public hearing on the budget to protest the garbage collection charge.

City Manager Gail Meeks reported that the fees would bring in an estimated $496,000 annually although the full effect would not be felt in the next fiscal year.

The fee schedule calls for households to pay $3 monthly for garbage collection and there would be a $12 monthly charge for business container pickup. The charges would be placed on customers' utilities bills.

As has been noted in a public forum letter the fee paid for garbage collection is not deductible on state and federal tax returns as are municipal taxes.

There you have it. This is a charge that local citizens will be paying, unless they protest to City Hall. We can fight it or we can pay it.

Leadership Produces A Few Surprises

—Paul O'Connor—

RALEIGH — A senator who is not a member of the Upper Chamber's ruling elite sat in the gallery of the Appropriations Committee room dreaming of possible future glory. "I want to be where the decisions are made first," the senator said, "because I'm tired of hearing about everything out in the hallways."

On that first day of full budget committee hearings on the supplementary 1984-84 budget, that senator, and most other members of the committee, were about to hear what decisions had already been made for them. The budget leadership had not held a full committee meeting for the first week of the June session while it formulated its own package of recommendations. When the committee finally heard what those recommendations were, you could hear some of the gasps all through the auditorium-sized room.

The list included some well-aired proposals. For example, there was funding for 31 new positions in the state's training schools. A study commission has found that the school staffs are so overworked that staff morale and physical well-being are at dangerously low levels. There were requests for extra funds for programs which had their budgets cut last year, or whose budgets weren't fully funded when times were lean.

But there were also recommendations that seemed to have come out of thin air. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, House committee chairman, was presiding at the time. He said all the recommendations came from "the governor, the agencies or someplace else." That "someplace else" appears to have been responsible for the more controversial requests.

For example, there was the request for a recurring appropriation of $8,500 for longevity pay for judges who previously served as utilities commissioners. When asked who had requested this extra money and who would benefit from it, Watkins said he'd try to find out. Probably came from "someplace else."

Then there was the longevity pay for utilities commissioners who'd been on the job more than five years. That prompted Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, to complain that other state employees don't get that payment until they've been on the job 10 years. And another legislator quipped, "People fight for those jobs. We don't have to encourage them to take them." Still, the request was in the leadership's package.

(Politicians are funny. Here they've spent the past six months complaining about the utilities commission and now the legislative leadership proposes to reward current and previous commissioners with windfall retirement or longevity pay.)

Finally, there was the question of the roof on the Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst. It's leaking and someone figured the state should pay $150,000 to fix it. So, it went in the package. When startled legislators asked why the state should pay for repairs to a private building, the apparent sponsor stood up. Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, said the man who could really explain it was Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham. The committee, which sits in awe and fear of Royall, went "oooh!" after Royall explained that "if we don't do something to this roof, we're going to lose this tourist attraction."

There were voices of dissent. Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said he was tired of spending money on some of the stuff pushed by the leadership when real needs, like more farmer's markets, went unmet.

But in the end, Watkins said he expected that every item of the list would be approved by the committee — so long as there was enough money. And it looked like the leadership had a revenue projection that would provide just enough.

It's Not The Size That Matters

NEW YORK (AP) — Based on a recent standard set by the Federal Communications Commission, it appears that a business no longer qualifies as small if it has more than one telephone, says John Sloan.

If the corner pharmacy or grocery store has just two phones, for example, the FCC standard puts them into the same category as multibillion-dollar corporations. As a result, he says, small businesses are paying inordinate telephone fees.

Small-business people say it's part of the same old story of government discrimination against smaller businesses, a condition against which they've been fighting for at least a couple of decades.

Once again, says Sloan, president of the 560,000-member National Federation of Independent Business, Uncle Sam has failed to distinguish between small businesses and large. The result, he says, is official discrimination.

He asks that you consider this situation:

Under the new FCC rate structure, a business that uses more than one telephone line must pay the local telephone company a monthly "access charge" that, depending on the state, may be as much as $6 for each phone.

As a gesture to small businesses the commission exempted one telephone. But, says Sloan, the typical member of his federation uses three to five lines. He contends that only "minute" companies use but one telephone.

The typical federation member, therefore, must pay an access fee on two to four telephone lines, which can amount to as much as $144 to $288 a year for, Sloan contends, no improvement in service.

Not all companies are typical, of course. A California personnel placement company, for example, told the federation it has 66 phones and that, unlike a billion-dollar company, it could be seriously damaged by the new fee.

Sloan also points out that small businesses make far fewer long-distance calls than do big businesses, and that the effect of the access fee is to push a disproportionate share of telephone costs onto independent business people.

Moreover, he continues, big businesses have the wherewithal — unavailable to small companies — to use alternative communications systems. Small businesses have almost no option but to see their phone bills rise.

Why, then, he asks, has the FCC set a fixed rate for businesses regardless of size? The decision, he claims, seriously burdens smaller companies. Wouldn't it be fairer, he asks, to exempt six phone lines rather than just one?

More than 2,500 federation members complained to Congress, and 200 members of Congress complained to the FCC. The FCC response to the congressmen was "curt," said Sloan. And the federation, he said, "hasn't heard a peep."

"I believe they thought they could politically justify this and that they could get away with it," said Sloan, who joined the organization last August after having been chief executive of First Tennessee Bank in Nashville.

Better organized than they were in the 1960s, independent business people have been winning a few battles in recent years.

Strength For Today

Sometimes mistakes are little pebbles under our feet. Or they may be barriers of some size which impede our progress. Once in a while a mistake is an avalanche. It roars down the hillside of our experience and piles calamity completely over us.

It is easy to talk about other people's troubles. It is easier to give a cheap "cheer up" when the barbs and thorns of life are not lacerating us. But, given all the wounds of trouble, isn't it true that we sometimes learn more from our mistakes than from our achievements?

Others can see that we grow by making mistakes and rising above them. Real life and triumph comes when we observe this outcome amid the disappointments and devastations of our own experience.

We can learn if we will even from mistakes.

States Will Act On Their Own

within the legislative powers of the states.

My objection is to the whole insidious business of conditioning "federal aid" to the precise terms of federal law. For one example, if the states do not comply with a maximum speed limit of 55 miles per hour, they stand to lose 5 percent of their federal aid. A 55-mile limit probably makes sense on two-lane roads in congested areas; it makes no sense on superhighways in the West. The states are heavily dependent upon federal highway aid; about one-fourth of all funds spent on highways in 1983 came from federal sources. Who pays the piper, says the proverb, calls the tune.

We see the stick of federal control in aid to education, both at the elementary and secondary level and in the colleges as well. This was the big issue in February in the Supreme Court's decision in the case of Grove City College in Pennsylvania. The court refused to go along with the most extreme advocates of federal control. Now a move is underway in Congress to deny federal aid to any institution, public or private, that fails to eliminate the last vestige of racial or sexual imbalance in every one of its programs.

The same tool — this threat of denial — has served as a lever for federal power in housing, in hospitals, in public welfare, in airport construction, in the laying of local sewerage, in every conceivable area in which federal largesse is distributed. The money is addictive.

—Maureen Santini—

Remarks Bring Sharp Response

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House and the Justice Department aren't happy with the jubilant remarks by some administration officials over a recent Supreme Court ruling against preserving jobs of minorities at the expense of seniority.

According to knowledgeable government sources, Attorney General William French Smith chided Solicitor General Rex Lee and Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds for their public expressions of enthusiasm over the decision. And the White House wasn't too happy, either.

Reynolds, who was in hot water a few months ago with President Reagan's daughter over a separate court case involving women, called last week's Supreme Court ruling "an exhilarating decision." And he said the Justice Department may reopen existing anti-discrimination agreements involving the government.

Lee, who argued the administration's position before the Supreme Court, called the decision a "slam dunk," adding: "If you want to attribute to me a statement that this is one of the greatest victories of all time, I would not dispute you."

Smith was reported to have told Reynolds and Lee that their comments made it appear that the administration was taking delight in the misfortune of others and that those comments were simply inappropriate.

When the decision was handed down last Tuesday, organized labor generally approved of it, while women and blacks, who stood to lose jobs, disapproved of it. But after Reynolds had issued his statement, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland attacked Reynolds and his interpretation of the ruling, saying it didn't justify the administration's assault on hard-won gains by blacks and women.

"There is nothing in this decision that justifies the Reagan administration's all-out attack upon civil rights through its assistant attorney general for civil rights," Kirkland said. "We are confident that the courts will reject the administration's unconscionable program to reopen old cases and old wounds."

The issue that previously got Reynolds in trouble occurred when he said he was leaning toward recommending that the government join in challenging a federal court ruling in Washington state that ordered that women should receive equal pay for jobs of comparable worth.

After hearing Reynolds' comments, Maureen Reagan, who serves as an adviser on women's issues to the Republican National Committee, said: "I don't think Brad Reynolds speaks for women. And frankly, I don't know why he speaks at all."

As a result, the department has yet to take a firm stand on that issue.

Study Says Competition Hinges On Efficiency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with fierce overseas competition for sales, America's businesses must improve relations between managers and workers and emphasize product quality, a presidential commission has concluded.

The White House Conference on Productivity also said the government must continue to ease regulatory burdens, attack federal budget deficits and restructure taxes to encourage more investment in plants and equipment.

The conference report, which cost $500,000 and was the result of more than two and a half years of work, was being presented to President Reagan today.

Reagan, saying that "the challenge of greater productivity growth is of supreme importance to America's future," appointed the blue-ribbon commission headed by former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon to investigate declining U.S. productivity growth in recent years.

Productivity, the major gauge of U.S. workplace efficiency, measures the relationship between the value of goods and services produced and the cost of producing them.

"Improving productivity is not a simple task, but it need not be encumbered with the trappings of formal programs," said the commission, comprised of government, business and labor representatives.

"It can begin simply with defining and rewarding good performance and emphasizing quality."

Among the recommendations were these:

—Businesses should provide employees at all levels "with necessary access to technology useful in developing new products ... and keep their skills current ..."

—The president and Congress "must resolve to maintain a stable, non-inflationary economic environment and to reduce" government spending.

—The president and the Congress "should resist making further piecemeal changes in our tax laws and develop a specific plan for tax reform."

—Labor and management should "promote joint labor-management initiatives through committees and councils to consider work place problems such as plant closings, restrictive work practices, training for new skills and employment security."

The conference also asserted business should "recognize the role that labor unions must play, in organized plants, in working cooperatively with management to improve productivity and the competitiveness of the enterprise."

Business productivity advanced at an average annual rate of 3.4 percent from 1947-65, but has been in decline ever since, leaving the United States trailing several other industrialized nations.

In 1979 and 1980, there was negative productivity growth.

U.S. non-farm business productivity rose at an annual rate of 3.2 percent last year after registering only a fractional, modest gain the year before.

"Since 1973, the rate of productivity growth in the U.S. has been lower than the rate of any other major developed country, except for Canada," the report said.

"Attempts to use trade protection as a defense against an eroding competitive position in domestic and international markets have been futile in other countries," it said. "There is no reason to believe similar policies would be any more successful here."

The report said that "... productivity has been rising rapidly as the economy has come out of a recession, as it always does during this part of the business cycle. It is still too soon to confirm a reversal, however."

It noted that many recommendations made so far by the Simon commission already have been adopted and that many others are under consideration by the White House Council on Economic Policy.

Reagan Favors War On Crime

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — President Reagan, whose political career has been built on the bedrock of fighting big government, now is promoting a new federal agency to fight violent crime.

In a speech Wednesday to the nation's sheriffs gathered in Hartford for their annual conference, Reagan announced creation of a National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime.

He said it would use "the latest computerized technology for detective work" to identify and track "repeat killers," murderers who kill again and again, usually preying on a particular group or community.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said after Reagan's speech the new center actually would concentrate on solving several kinds of crimes, including child abduction and molestation cases, sexually oriented homicides, rapes and arsons.

Many such crimes, he said, are committed by nomadic criminals who drift across the country, passing from one police jurisdiction to another.

"The next jurisdiction (where a crime is committed) starts all over," Fitzwater said. "The last one never follows the criminal. We've always had trouble relating a crime in one state to a crime in another state."

The new center, he said, will "focus on behavior patterns" and attempt to establish nationwide crime patterns that suggest a single person is involved.

"Often these are particularly vicious or repetitive crimes, and it is possible to identify patterns," the spokesman said. He added that seemingly "motiveless murders" are among the center's targets because such cases often stump local police forces accustomed to solving crimes by determining who had a motive for committing them.

One administration official familiar with the new program, asking that he not be identified, said the various local and state police authorities throughout the country "traditionally have been very protective of their turf" and reluctant to cooperate with each other. "This is an effort to overcome those problems," he said.

Fitzwater said the center, which will be located at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., will cost about $2.5 million to set up and start operating during the next 16 months. After that, he said, it is expected to cost about $1.5 million a year.

Asked how Reagan could justify establishing a new agency to do work traditionally left to state and local government when he has campaigned so long against government interference in local affairs, Fitzwater said: "Occasionally, the facts warrant it," the same rationale Reagan had used earlier in the day to justify his new-found support for legislation that would penalize states which fail to adopt 21 as their legal drinking age.

But most of Reagan's speech to the friendly audience of law enforcement officials was devoted in this election year to what he calls his administration's war on crime and to blaming unnamed liberal Democrats for holding up an anticrime bill in Congress.

Reagan said reported crime dropped 4.3 percent in 1982, the first decline since 1977.

"Now I know there are a few people who want to attribute the encouraging downward trend in crime to a statistic, the fact that fewer members of the population are now in the crime-prone age group," Reagan said. "Well, a coincidence isn't a correlation."

Astronaut To Raise Solar Sail

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Like a sailor at sea, Judy Resnik, America's second space woman, will spend a lot of time raising and lowering a sail during the next space shuttle mission.

No ordinary sail, however. It's a solar sail that is folded during launch into a canister just four inches high, but which, under Miss Resnik's guidance, will unfurl to the height of a 10-story building in space.

The sail, 13½ feet wide and just millimeters thick, is a prototype of a device that one day may capture energy from the sun to provide power for permanent space stations or to extend the orbital life of a space shuttle.

"The primary objective of the test is to understand how a very large, very lightweight, very flexible structure behaves when it's attached to a moving spacecraft," Miss Resnik said in a recent interview.

Over a period of four days, she is to raise and lower the sail several times to gather data on its structural, electrical and dynamic performance. She will control the device, located in shuttle Discovery's open cargo bay, from a inside the cabin, observing it through a window.

"I'll basically operate it at two levels — at 70 feet and at full extension of 105 feet," Miss Resnik said.

"To extend the solar array, a boom is driven by motors out of the canister, and as it comes out it becomes a rigid form and it pulls with it the sail blanket and unfolds it," she explained. "To retract the array, the mast motors are run in reverse, which pulls the mast down. The blanket comes down with it and folds into bunches until, when we get to the bottom, the blanket panels will be compressed neatly into their box."

She said it takes 9½ minutes to unreel to 70 feet and another 3½ minutes to reach 105 feet.

Several times while the sail is raised, pilot Michael Coats will fire some of Discovery's small jet thrusters to check the affect on the array. Miss Resnik said she expects the firings will cause the sail to sway or twist slightly.

"If the wobbling is greater than we think, we'll just sit there and let it damp," she said.

Gary Turner, manager of solar array programs at Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., which made Miss Resnik's sail, said it is less costly, three times lighter and 10 times more compact when folded than solar panels which have been flown to date, such as those on the Skylab space station.

He said weight is saved by using a lightweight material called Kapton which contains printed circuits that allow wraparound solar cells to be welded directly to the blanket.

Turner said a sail this size could produce a steady 12.5 kilowatts of power, enough to supply the power needs of four average households.

Hispanics Oppose Immigration Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Encouraged by a near victory, Hispanic leaders say they will keep working to kill immigration legislation that has passed both the House and Senate.

The bill's sponsors, however, predict they will prevail and send President Reagan a bill he will sign.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., said he was elated by the narrow 216-211 vote in the House on Wednesday. Liberal Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., who shares Roybal's feeling the bill will lead to discrimination against Hispanics said: "The ball game's not over."

The bill still faces several hurdles — major differences must be ironed out in order to reconcile the House and Senate versions. Both chambers must vote again on final passage.

The measure seeks to stop the influx of illegal aliens by making it a crime to hire an undocumented worker, but it also provides the first mass amnesty for those who can prove they have lived and worked in this country for several years.

"It's probably a legislative miracle that we have come this far," said Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., the primary sponsor of the bill. He said he believed it will survive and be signed by Reagan.

Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., another sponsor, said the measure contains "some things in there the administration doesn't like, but the administration wants something."

Reagan has said he would sign the more stringent version of the bill passed by the Senate last summer.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.,

sponsor of the Senate bill, said he was pleased by the House vote, but that several "tough issues" separate the two chambers.

The House rejected by a 233-195 vote an attempt to strip the amnesty program from the bill, which now calls for bestowing legal status on those who can prove they came here before Jan. 1, 1982.

The Senate version outlines a less generous system. It calls for granting temporary residency status to those here prior to 1980 and permanent status to those here before 1977.

Simpson said his goal "is not to have anything in the bill that would attract a (presidential) veto." He said this meant some kind of compromise on the date for providing amnesty, but that he was confident one could be worked out.

Another major problem, Simpson said, will be the "guest worker" program tacked on in the House, which envisions bringing hundreds of thousands of foreigners into the country annually to pick crops.

"I will not be part of any open-ended guest worker program," Simpson stated flatly. He said nations such as France and West Germany have set up such programs, only to find years later that they have a population of foreigners unwilling to leave.

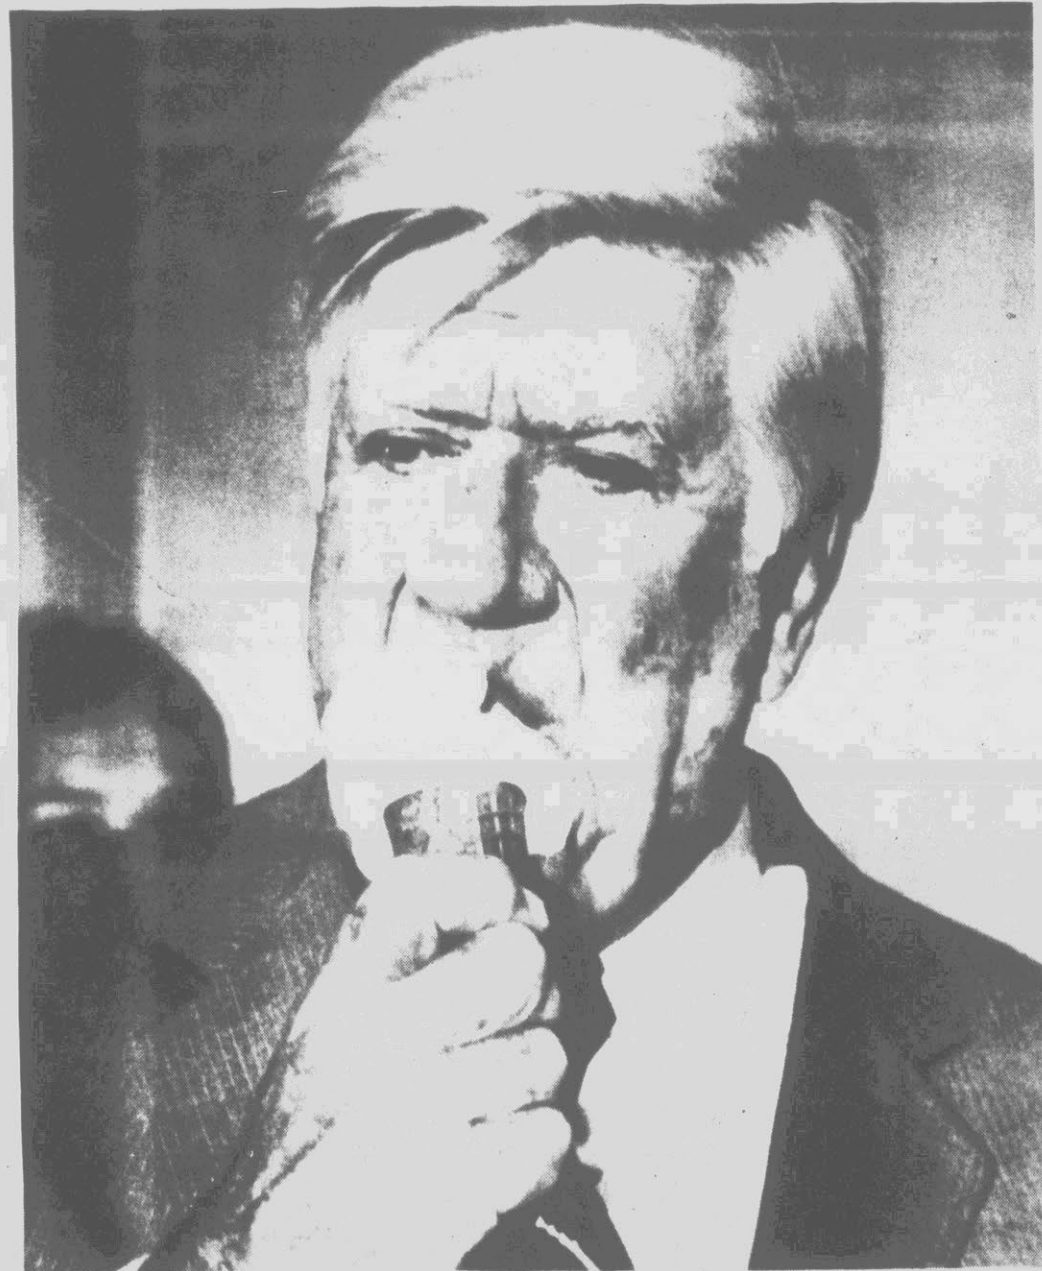

The senator said he would prefer to place a limit on the number of such workers, or hoped that proponents of the program would agree to a compromise under which growers might be given five years to phase out their use of illegal aliens. The Senate bill would allow a three-year phase out.

The AFL-CIO switched its stand on the bill because of the guest worker program and announced its opposition one day before the vote.

Mazzoli said the move "hurt" the bill's chances. The Chamber of Commerce has also come out against the measure because of the penalties against employers who hire illegals.

The 110,000-member League of United Latin American Citizens opposed the measure, arguing that employers would be loathe to hire even legal Hispanics, for fear of the penalties. They said the outcome of the vote "should serve notice to the Hispanic community that we cannot look to the Democratic and Republican parties to protect our interests."

CONE FOR TIP — House Speaker Tip O'Neill takes a bite from his ice cream cone Wednesday on Capitol Hill. The second annual "Ice Cream for America" campaign will begin in July and the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers was in Washington looking for support. The association wants Congress to designate July as "National Ice Cream Month." (AP Laserphoto)

House Unit Recommends Reprimand For Hansen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted felon Rep. George V. Hansen says the House ethics committee's recommendation that he receive the lightest form of congressional punishment is "very satisfying" and proves he's "innocent of any personal wrongdoing."

The committee recommended to the full House Wednesday that the Idaho Republican receive a reprimand for violating a financial disclosure rule. The punishment consists of a resolution criticizing his conduct.

The panel, formally known as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, made its decision in closed session after holding a public disciplinary hearing. The panel rejected a proposal by special counsel Stanley Brand that Hansen also be fined $10,000.

The committee based its recommendation for punishment solely on its finding that Hansen violated a rule spelling out the types of financial dealings a congressman must disclose. The panel said it reviewed evidence from Hansen's criminal trial before reaching its decision.

Hansen was convicted in U.S. District Court of failing to report $333,978 in loans and other transactions on four consecutive financial disclosure statements. He is appealing the verdict and a sentence imposed last Friday: 5-to-15 months in prison and a $40,000 fine.

In a one-paragraph announcement of its recommendation, the committee made no mention of its report last week that Hansen also violated other House rules.

In a statement, Hansen contended the committee "reversed its decision" of last week by "rejecting four recommended charges of its own special counsel, thereby clearing me of any taint of wrongdoing relating to my ethics report filings.

"The sole remaining basis for action by the committee was the technical charge of failing to properly file which I will continue to challenge. Nonetheless, it is very satisfying to have the committee find that I am innocent of any personal wrongdoing."

Paul J. McNulty, a staff counsel for the committee, said Hansen's statement was his own interpretation and not necessarily correct. But he refused to elaborate on the committee's action.

However Brand, the House's chief lawyer until resigning earlier this year for private practice, denied that the committee reversed itself. He said the committee found the multiple rules violations occurred, but on Wednesday was "dealing only with punishment."

The House is not obligated to accept the recommendation. The next highest penalty, a censure, is similar to a reprimand, but the member must have the resolution read to him by the speaker while standing at the front of the chamber — an event that could be watched live by millions of Americans who receive House broadcasts on their cable television systems. The most severe punishment is expulsion.

Hansen, raising his voice and pounding his fist on a table, told the committee before its closed session, "you ought to pay me, not fine me" for spending $135,000 of his own money to finance his conservative legislative program.

He said his attempt to pay off his personal debts has led to public humiliation and commented, "They called my wife Tin Can Connie."

Hansen told the committee that after spending $350,000 in legal fees, a $10,000 fine would be "like a flea," adding:

"I should have robbed a bank. I probably would have had the money and not as big a penalty as for screwing up a government form."

AMA Says Doctors Need 'Thinking' Pay

CHICAGO (AP) — Medical costs might moderate if doctors were paid as much for thinking about their cases and exercising judgment as they are for performing tests and surgery, say doctors at the American Medical Association's annual meeting.

The doctors persuaded the AMA's policy-making House of Delegates to support a resolution calling for "more equitable reimbursement" from insurance companies and the federal government for services requiring mostly judgment and knowledge.

In a separate resolution, the policy-making body Wednesday called for voluntary ethics committees in hospitals to offer advice and information on troubling issues, such as what steps should be taken to save severely deformed babies.

On the question of payment for judgmental skills, the AMA proposal stopped short of recommending specific changes in fee. Instead it called for the AMA to promote the concept and study it again in December.

One example is a family practitioner who spends an hour diagnosing a case of appendicitis, but is paid only a small fraction of what a surgeon gets for an hour spent removing the appendix.

"This reimbursement discrepancy may contribute to high medical care costs by rewarding physicians for ordering tests and procedures and by penalizing them for spending time with patients and deciding not to order costly procedural services," according to the resolution, approved Tuesday.

Most payment systems provide low allowances for such services as taking complete histories, doing physical examinations, making office and home visits and consulting, the doctors said. The same systems provide high allowances for expensive tests, surgical procedures and manual skills.

Reagan's Campaign Tops Treasury List

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's well-heel'd re-election drive has hit a plateau never before reached by a presidential candidate: his campaign now has received the maximum $10.1 million in federal matching funds.

The Federal Election Commission on Wednesday approved the final $59,110.92 installment on that amount for the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign, which had received $10,040,889.08 previously. This is the third presidential election campaign in which candidates have been eligible for matching payments from the Treasury. Reagan hit the maximum by raising half of the $20.2 million pre-nomination spending limit in amounts of $250 or less.

The FEC also approved $436,461 Wednesday for Walter F. Mondale, who has claimed victory in the race for the Democratic nomination. That boosts his total matching funds to $7.25 million.

The Mondale campaign, in its latest spending report filed with the FEC Wednesday, reported spending $16.7 million and having debts of $3.1 million as of May 31. Its debts were offset by about $1 million in cash on hand and money owed to the campaign.

The Reagan-Bush '84 campaign, in its May report, listed $10.6 million cash on hand, and overall expenditures of just over $11 million. That means the campaign will be able to spend $9 million in June, July and August on advertising and other activities to help the GOP ticket in the fall as Reagan marches unopposed toward renomination at the Republican convention in Dallas.

The FEC had not received the May reports by the close of business Wednesday from Mondale's rivals, the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado.

The FEC approved $190,679 more in matching funds for Jackson on Wednesday, giving him a total of $1.9 million. It also approved $24,593 for Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a dropout from the Democrat race who has debts of more than $3 million. Glenn has received just over $3 million in matching funds.

Despite the GOP's image as the party of wealth and big givers, Reagan has garnered his funds in average contributions of only $56 from 300,000 contributors, according to John Buckley, deputy press secretary for the Reagan re-election drive.

Some individuals gave up to the legal limit of $1,000, Buckley added. In addition to the $20.2 million that can be spent on political activities, the law allows candidates to spend $4 million on fund raising and unlimited amounts on legal and accounting expenses to comply with the federal law. Buckley said that contributions over $250 were applied to those ends.

By law, the entire general election campaign is public financed, with the exception of $6 million that the Republican and Democratic national committees can each spend on their candidate's behalf.

Reagan got $6.3 million in matching funds in 1980, when the spending ceiling was $14.72 million and the maximum in matching funds would have been $7.36 million. The man he ousted from the White House, Jimmy Carter, got only $5 million in matching funds.

In 1976, when Reagan narrowly lost the GOP nomination to Gerald Ford, Reagan got $4.47 million in matching funds, or just $31,000 less than Ford. Carter qualified for $3.7 million that year.

The Reagan-Bush campaign used a massive direct-mail appeal to generate most of its funds.

The latest round of matching funds raises to $30.9 million the amount the Treasury has paid directly to presidential campaigns this year.

Taxpayers get a tax break for money they contribute to the candidates.

Procter & Gamble Wants Court To Halt Raids By Cookie Bakers

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Three cookie companies cooked up schemes including infiltration, aerial surveillance and disguise to get their hands on a new baking process for moist, chewy cookies, Procter & Gamble Co. charges in a set of lawsuits.

The target of the alleged industrial espionage was the secret behind P&G's Duncan Hines Ready-to-Serve Cookies. The company said a newly developed baking process for the product results in the "ideal ready-to-eat cookie" with "a soft inside and crunchy outside."

Procter & Gamble was awarded a patent for the process Tuesday, and immediately filed separate patent infringement lawsuits in U.S. District Court against Nabisco Brands, Keebler Co. and Frito-Lay Inc.

It asked the court to forbid the companies from infringing on its patent and to award unspecified compensatory and punitive damages.

Nabisco and Frito-Lay on Wednesday issued statements denying any patent infringement. A spokesman for Keebler reserved comment until seeing the lawsuit.

The suits allege a cookie jar full of crumby activities.

A Nabisco employee illegally entered a P&G manufacturing plant and gained access to trade secrets "on or around June 1983," Procter & Gamble says.

The suit against Keebler says that on Nov. 9, 1983, a Keebler employee "falsely represented his identity and purpose, rented an airplane and took aerial photographs of P&G's" cookie making plant then under construction in Jackson, Tenn.

"A Frito-Lay employee on March 30, 1984, falsely represented himself as a supervisor of a potential customer to a P&G salesman and sat in on a confidential sales presentation referring to Duncan Hines cookies," the suit against that company alleges.

The Duncan Hines Ready-to-Serve Cookies were test marketed in Kansas City, Mo., beginning in February 1983, while the patent application was being considered by the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office.

"These companies started test markets of crisp and chewy cookies in 1983 and 1984 following the introduction of Duncan Hines cookies. We want businesses and individuals to know we have a patent on Duncan Hines cookies and we want others to respect it," said Patrick J. Hayes, a P&G spokesman at the company's headquarters in Cincinnati.

The cookies involved in the suit are Nabisco's Chips Ahoy, Chewy Chips Ahoy and the Almost Home Cookies; Frito-Lay's Grandma's and Grandma's Rich 'n Chewy, and Keebler's Rich 'n Chips, Chips Deluxe, Coconut Chocolate Drops, Chocolate Chips 100's, Biggs and Soft Bach.

Elliot Bloom, manager of media relations for Dallas-based Frito-Lay Inc., issued a statement saying the company "does not violate any valid patent. We intend to contest this suit vigorously."

He said Frito-Lay, a subsidiary of PepsiCo Inc., plans to continue national expansion of its product, introducing it into six additional states in the next six weeks.

Craig Stevens, general counsel for Keebler Co., the Elmhurst, Ill.-based subsidiary of United Biscuits Ltd. of Middlesex, England, said, "We have no comment at this time. We have not received a copy of the lawsuit, therefore we have no idea of what the lawsuit contains."

Nabisco issued a statement Wednesday saying it "categorically denies" infringing on any valid patent. It said it planned a countersuit "to establish that P&G's patent is invalid."

Debtor Nations Say Banks May Endanger Democracy

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Colombian President Belisario Betancur today formally opens a conference of 11 debtor nations, some of whom are warning that pressure from Western banks could endanger democracy in Latin America.

Cabinet ministers of the 11 countries, which together owe foreign banks and governments nearly $350 billion, are expected to adopt a joint declaration when the conference closes Friday night.

Despite some predictions that the countries might form a debtors' cartel that would default on loans, several participants said the declaration probably will just appeal for more time to pay the debts.

Present are representatives from Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, Bolivia, Ecuador and the Dominican Republic.

Officials of some of the countries have been arguing for weeks that austerity measures often required as a condition for refinancing loans can result in civil strife.

They point to the Dominican Republic, where belt-tightening measures demanded by the International Monetary Fund resulted in higher food prices that triggered riots in April in which 55 people were killed.

"We consider after the experience we have had that we have to adjust our economy, but at the same time preserve our democratic order," Foreign Minister Jose Augusto Vega of the Dominican Republic said Wednesday at a Cartagena news conference.

The International Monetary Fund, an organization of 146 nations, loans money to countries, often on the condition that the recipient get matching loans from other sources.

Also, the IMF usually requires countries with heavy debt burdens to cut spending sharply as a condition for loans. Private banks in turn frequently wait until a country complies with IMF austerity plans before loaning it money. Venezuela's foreign minister, Isidro Morales, said here Wednesday that his country will not seek additional help from the IMF to pay its $35 billion foreign debt.

He said the IMF rules for borrowing money were "narrow" and that the fund must face up to "political realities," an obvious reference to the belief that too much austerity causes social upheaval.

Argentina, which owes foreign creditors $43.6 billion, already has rejected IMF conditions that it cut government spending.

During the two days of work so far on the draft of the joint declaration, minor officials of the 11 conferees governments have suggested that Latin America is in a "highly dangerous position" as a result of belt tightening, the Bogota daily newspaper El Tiempo said Wednesday.

A Colombian presidential press officer, Alfonso Martinez, told The Associated Press that the report was accurate. The report apparently was leaked to the country's most important newspaper by government officials.

A popular feeling in Latin America about "belt tightening" was expressed last year in a political cartoon published in a Caracas newspaper. It showed a peasant, seated for dinner and listening to a broadcast appeal by a government official to tighten belts.

The peasant had his belt on his plate, knife and fork hovering over it.

Treasury Says Criminals 'Laundering' $40 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, saying organized crime may be laundering as much as $40 billion in cash a year, are asking Congress to strengthen the nation's banking laws.

"Money laundering has grown tremendously since 1972," says John M. Walker Jr., assistant Treasury secretary for enforcement. "To some extent, this growth appears to have paralleled the increase in drug trafficking."

Appearing Wednesday before the general oversight subcommittee on banking, Walker and other officials urged approval of legislation that would toughen the 14-year-old Bank Secrecy Act. That law requires financial institutions to report cash transactions involving more than $10,000 to the government.

Walker said that although bank compliance with the law and prosecutions have increased in recent years, amendments are "urgently needed" to "remedy particular weaknesses."

He testified that "many criminal organizations are moving large amounts of cash directly out of the country," bypassing banks and the required U.S. Customs Service reporting forms.

John C. Keeney, deputy assistant attorney general from the Justice Department's criminal division, said it is estimated that organized crime hides and launders as much as $40 billion a year in offshore banks.

"For example, money launderers may purchase cashiers' checks in assumed names, create phony corporate bank accounts and send money out of the country to foreign banks, only to have it re-enter the United States as purported return on legitimate investments or disguised as foreign loans," Keeney said.

He said the maximum criminal penalty for violating the Bank Secrecy Act should be increased from one year in prison and a $1,000 fine to five years and a $250,000 fine.

Keeney also said that attempting to move money out of the country illegally should be a crime. He said that now, officials can act only after the money has actually been moved abroad.

He called for permitting rewards of up to $150,000 to people reporting illegal cash transactions and giving Customs officers specific authority to conduct warrantless searches if they reasonably believe someone is illegally taking money into or out of the country.

U.N. Team To Check Iran-Iraq Fighting

By The Associated Press
A diplomat said today a United Nations team had arrived in Iraq to monitor an agreement with Iran against attacks on civilian areas, and the two warring countries accused each other of violating the accord by shelling major cities.

would be stationed in the Iraqi capital and a second would be located near Iran, entering that nation when it contends Iraq has violated the moratorium on civilian attacks.

Iran does not want observers based within its borders, Sills said. Each of the teams will consist of three military observers and one civilian, Sills said. The participants will come from Ireland, Finland, Sweden, Ghana, Austria and Malta.

Iran and Iraq, at war since September 1980, agreed on June 12 not to attack one another's civilian areas. The moratorium had been proposed by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Iran on Wednesday also denied Iraqi claims that part of the Iranian-occupied Majnoon Islands had been recaptured.

The diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a four-man U.N. team arrived in Baghdad on Wednesday.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said in New York that one monitoring team

Refugees Funding Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam's communist government in Hanoi is taking in millions of dollars in U.S. currency by pirating money Vietnamese immigrants in America send back to their relatives, Congress has been told.

Witnesses told a Senate Banking subcommittee Wednesday that the money, up to $200 million annually, is a major source of badly needed foreign currency for the regime. The panel heard testimony from detectives, customs officers and Vietnamese immigrants.

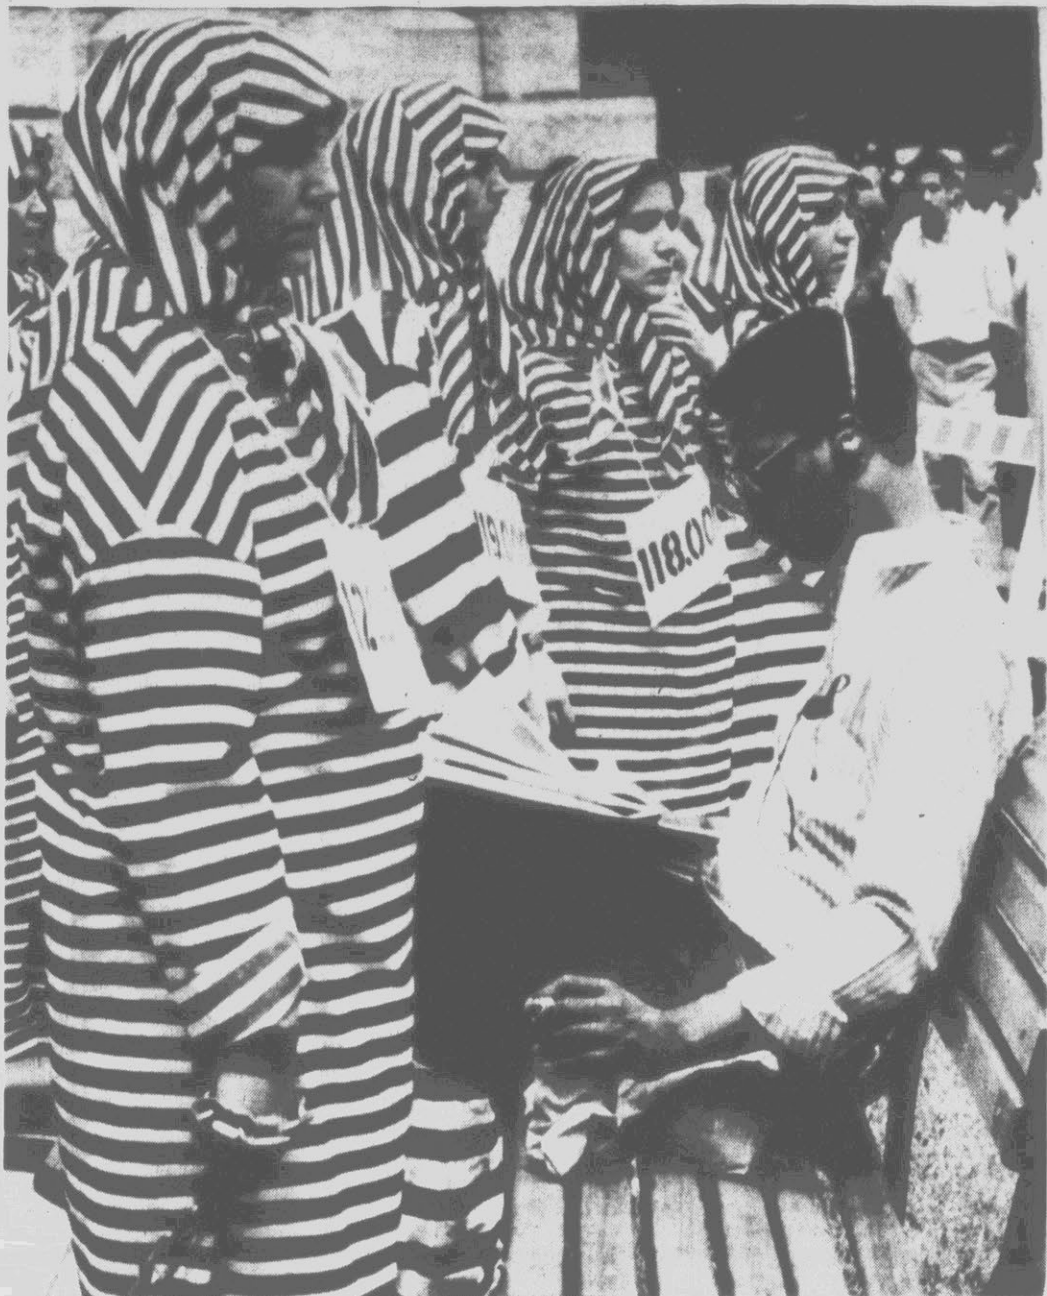

One witness, a 32-year-old former naval officer of the defeated South Vietnamese government, was identified only as "Mr. X." He said he was wearing a blue mask to avoid being recognized by other immigrants who fear publicity for the flow of cash and goods might prompt the U.S. government to halt the community's effort to help distant families in accordance with Asian tradition.

Other masked Vietnamese witnesses said they had received anonymous telephone calls warning them not to appear before the subcommittee on financial institutions.

Subcommittee chairman Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said the Hanoi government has organized citizens in a position to receive money from America into "small, easily-monitored groups" which periodically make "orchestrated appeals" to relatives in the United States.

He quoted as his source Vietnamese he has talked to, and said the hearing was called to determine whether a Hanoi-controlled "economic exploitation system actually exists and if so, how it works."

The panel also wants to determine whether proposed legislation totally banning export of funds to Vietnam would be justified, Armstrong said.

Maryland Notes 350th Birthday

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The arrival of the Duke and Duchess of Kent in Maryland today marks the beginning of a four-day celebration highlighting the state's yearlong commemoration of its 350th birthday.

The duke, 15th in line of succession to the British crown, and the duchess were invited to Maryland to add a little glitter to the activities planned through Sunday in Annapolis, the Eastern Shore, Baltimore and St. Mary's City.

The first English colonists landed at St. Mary's City aboard the Ark and the Dove on March 25, 1634.

This week's festivities are one of two highlights of the 350th birthday party. The first took place in March on the anniversary of the landing of the Ark and the Dove.

But planners of the celebration, mindful of the uncertain weather in March, saved the big event for June. That turned out to be a wise move, given the chilly temperatures, rain and high winds which put a damper on the March activities at St. Mary's City.

Those with a taste for titled nobility have several chances this week to get a glimpse of the duke and duchess.

While most of the events in Annapolis today are private, including dinner at the governor's mansion hosted by Gov. and Mrs. Harry Hughes, the Duke and Duchess were scheduled to visit the Statehouse at noon and to take a brief walking tour in downtown Annapolis about 4 p.m.

Other activities scheduled for today included a luncheon sponsored by the city of Annapolis at St. John's College and a cruise on the Severn River.

Directors Resign

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The board of directors of Turkey's semi-official news agency, Anatolia, has resigned in protest against the government's decision to put the agency under control of a state office.

In a resignation letter Tuesday, the board charged that the agency, which is a public corporation, could not function as a semi-autonomous body after it was put under control of a newly established directorate of press, publications and information.

Duties of the new directorate include gathering information for the government, determining strategy to promote Turkey abroad and monitoring what it considers anti-Turkish propaganda in foreign countries.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in an erratic session today, hesitating after the rally of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 44 points from Monday through Wednesday, slipped back 1.33 to 1,130.30 by noontime today.

But gainers held a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Wednesday's late upsurge was attributed partly to rumors that International Business Machines might be preparing to make an offer to buy back a chunk of its stock. No such announcement was forthcoming, however.

IBM shares, up 5 1/2% Wednesday, slipped back 1 1/2 to 106 3/4 today.

Nevertheless, analysts said many traders were impressed by the strong showing of the market so far this week. In the last three days, the Dow Jones industrial average re-couped all of a large loss posted last week.

Petrolene led the active list and jumped 5 1/2 to 19. Texas Eastern said it reached an agreement to acquire the company for $20 a share.

The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 89.25. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.04 at 201.84.

Volume on the Big Board came to 54.03 million shares at noontime, against 39.32 million at the same point Wednesday.

government control of the Federal Reserve System.

Bergland also said all subsidies to any business and government regulation of business should be eliminated.

Bergland said if taxes are eliminated, "voluntary alternatives" could be used to finance government operations, such as "a national defense lottery" to fund the military, or the establishment of a national endowment funded through the sale of government land or other assets such as the U.S. Postal Service.

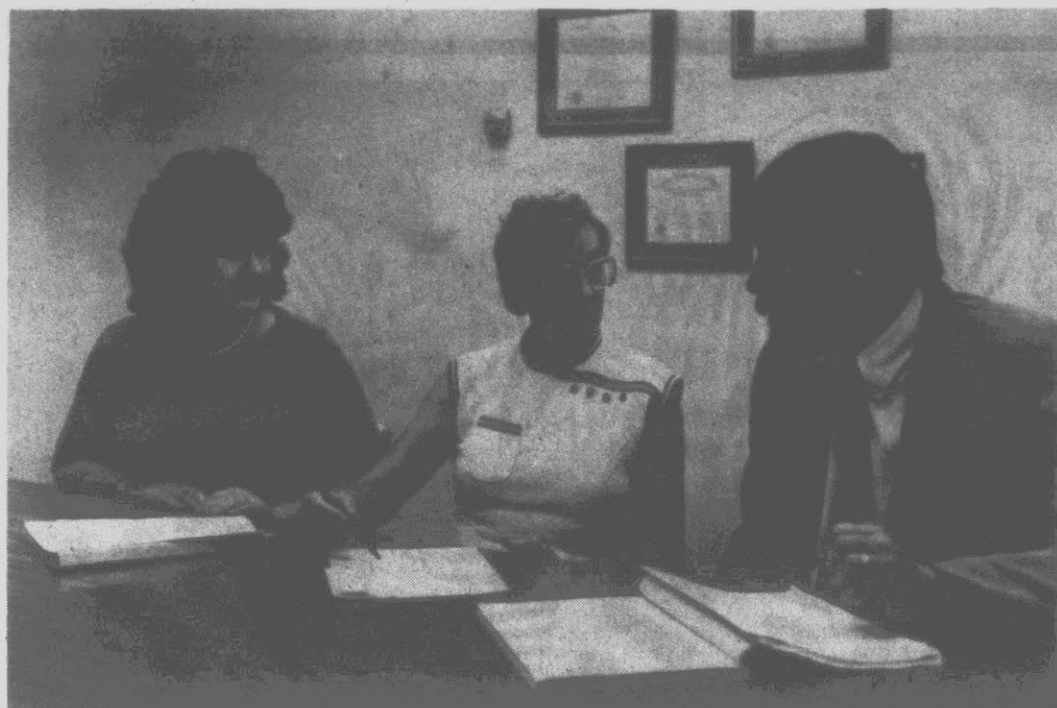

Burgland used tobacco as an example of Libertarian philosophy, saying taxes on tobacco should be eliminated, as well as government subsidies, acreage-poundage control, regulations requiring health warnings on cigarette packs, and regulations prohibiting cigarette ads on television.

Burgland, saying North Carolina "is the 34th state I've been in and it's a pleasure to be here," said that in 1980, Libertarian presidential hopeful Ed Clark received a million votes. "It was the first time in American history," Bergland noted, that a Libertarian candidate for president had been on the ballot in all 50 states.

In 1982, Bergland said, 5 million votes were cast for Libertarian candidates nation-wide. "Growth is continuing," he said.

Bergland noted "what I have seen in my travels" is that Americans feel the "government is too large, taxes must be cut," people "want a lot less government interference in their personal lives" and Americans are concerned about the economy and the nation's involvement overseas.

Bergland suggested that the Libertarian platform would help address those concerns.

In opening statements Wednesday, District Attorney Thomas Haigwood told the jury that it has an "awesome responsibility" in deciding Greene's sentence. Haigwood said the state would prove that there are aggravating circumstances in the case and that the state asked the jury to recommend a sentence of death.

In defense attorney Jeff Miller's opening statement, Greene was described as an indigent who could not find a job and needed money to cover bad checks he had written in his father's name. Miller said

Opposes Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter joined critics of a proposal to move the U.S. Embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

"In my opinion, such a decision by our country would be a devastating blow to the prospects for further progress toward peace in the region," Carter said in a letter to two House subcommittees holding hearings on the issue. Earlier, President Reagan and former President Richard M. Nixon denounced the plan.

Poor Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are more than 13 million poor children in America, a 31 percent increase in the last five years, the Children's Defense Fund says.

"This represents the sharpest poverty rate increase for children since poverty statistics have been collected, Sara Rosenbaum, child health director of the fund, told the Senate Finance Committee. "Today, one in every five American children is poor."

Late-Inning Heroics Save Orioles

By The Associated Press
 Yogi Berra may have coined the phrase "It ain't over until it's over," but Joe Altobelli's Baltimore Orioles are making it come true.
 The Orioles won their third game in a row, downing the Boston Red Sox 4-1 Wednesday night. And for the third game in a row they did it with some late-inning heroics.
 Granted it wasn't as spectacular as Sunday's 6-2 victory over New York with Gary Roenicke's grand slam capping a five-run eighth-inning rally. And it certainly paled next to Tuesday night's 9-7 triumph over Boston, a game in which the Orioles trailed 7-1 after seven innings but scored four times in the eighth on Eddie Murray's grand slam and four more in the ninth.
 This time, Baltimore did it with a four-run seventh, highlighted by Mike Young's three-run, two-out double, after Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitched six hitless innings.
 "It was a ballgame he deserved to win," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "The kid pitched as good as you can pitch." Instead, the 4-1 setback was Boston's seventh in a row.

 In other American League games, Detroit outslugged New York 9-6 in 13 innings, Texas edged California 3-2, Milwaukee nipped Toronto 5-4, Chicago shaded Seattle 5-4, Oakland trounced Kansas City 8-1 and Minnesota thumped Cleveland 8-2.
 Boyd retired 16 batters in a row after walking Cal Ripken Jr. with two out in the first inning and was staked to a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Tony Armas' 17th homer. But he hit Wayne Gross on the arm with an 0-2 pitch to start the seventh and the Orioles took advantage of the mistake.
 "I didn't want to hit Gross; I had two strikes on him," Boyd said. "He's supposed to get out of the way on that pitch. I just wanted to move him back and then try to get him with the changeup."
 Ripken then doubled off the wall in left-center and Murray was walked intentionally to fill the bases. Boyd struck out John Lowenstein and Ken Singleton, but Young sliced a high drive — "An ordinary fly ball in most places," Houk said — that scraped the wall for a double, scoring all three runners. Young scored on Lenn Sakata's single.

Tigers 9, Yankees 6
 Howard Johnson hit a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning, Detroit's fourth home run. Alan Trammell, Lance Parrish and Chet Lemon also connected as the Tigers boosted their lead in the AL East to 7½ games over Toronto. Dave Winfield homered for the Yankees.
 After Ray Fontenot pitched five hitless innings, Jose Rijo took over in the 13th and issued a leadoff single to Parrish. Lemon, who had two singles, a double and a home run, sacrificed and pinch-hitter John Grubb was intentionally walked. Lou Whitaker lined out before Johnson blasted his fifth home run of the season off the facing of the right-field upper deck.

Rangers 3, Angels 2
 Larry Parrish belted a one-out homer off Geoff Zahn in the ninth inning, setting a club record by driving in a run for the 11th straight game. Parrish's 12th home run erased the club record of 10 consecutive games with at least one RBI originally set by Jeff Burroughs in 1974. The streak is two short of the AL record set by Taft Wright of the Chicago White Sox in 1941. Oscar Grimes of the Chicago Cubs holds the major-league mark of 17 straight games in 1922. Charlie Hough hurled a four-hitter in handing the Angels their fourth consecutive setback.

 "It's a pretty good streak for me personally," said Parrish, who has driven in 18 runs during the streak and 50 for the season. "Things have been falling my way with guys getting to second and third for me, and tonight I got lucky with a homer."
Brewers 5, Blue Jays 4
 Jim Gantner singled home a run in the ninth inning to give Milwaukee its second consecutive ninth-inning victory over Toronto. Bill Schroeder opened the ninth with a single off starter Doyle Alexander and pinch-runner Rick Manning was sacrificed to second. Jimmy Key relieved and walked pinch-hitter Mark Brouhard before Gantner delivered a soft single to center for his third hit of the game. The Brewers tied the score in the eighth when Ben Oglivie singled home Cecil Cooper, who had doubled Willie Upshaw's two-run homer keyed Toronto's three-run fourth inning.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4
 Consecutive seventh-inning doubles by Joel Skinner and Julio Cruz snapped a 2-2 tie and LaMarr Hoyt scattered eight hits in 8 2-3 innings. With one out in the seventh, Skinner doubled high off the left-field wall and Cruz followed with a double down the right-field line. He eventually scored on Tom Paciorek's sacrifice fly. Chicago added an unearned run in the eighth and it proved decisive when Seattle scored twice in the ninth, once on Dave Henderson's homer.
A's 8, Royals 1
 Dave Kingman walloped his third grand slam and major league-leading 19th homer of the season. Kingman, who leads all active players with 14 career grand slams, tied Joe DiMaggio for 30th on the all-time home run list at 361.

Michel Hurls, Slugs Pitt County Victory

WILSON — Pitcher Billy Michel drove in four runs including the game-winning RBI as Pitt County pounded Wilson 10-6 Wednesday in American Legion baseball at Fleming Stadium.
 Toby Fischer scored twice and drove in two runs in leading Pitt County with a 3-4 performance at the plate. Michel, Jackie Conway and Mike Kinley added two hits for Pitt County.
 Woody Mercer went 3-4 and Rusty Dail 2-4 to lead Wilson.
 Fischer walked after one out in the first, and Doug Coley reached first on an error before Michel drove in the runners with a two-out single.
 Wilson tied the score in the bottom of the frame as Dail walked and later scored on a passed ball, and William Chatman reached on an error and scored on a fielder's choice.
 In the third, Fischer, Coley and Eric Woodworth singled to load the bases before Michel's hit put Pitt County in control 4-3.
 Moye walked and later scored on Fischer's second hit of the night in the fourth for a 5-3 edge, but Wilson added a run in the bottom of the frame.

 Pitt County added three more runs in the fifth and two in the eighth to put the game out of reach.
 Pitt County, now 11-2, travels to Kinston Saturday night and hosts Wayne County Sunday afternoon.

Snow Hill Errors Aid Rocky Mount

SNOW HILL — An error on a grounder by Mike Morris in the top of the third allowed two runs to score as Rocky Mount took advantage of eight errors by Snow Hill for a 15-8 victory Wednesday in American Legion baseball.
 John Adams led Rocky Mount with three hits in five trips to the plate, while Neil Avent, Danny Isbell and Carl Blackmon had two each.
 Nat Norris and Anthony Russo paced Snow Hill with a pair of singles.
 Rocky Mount took a 1-0 lead in the first, but Snow Hill rallied with a pair of runs in the second. Joey Stepple singled and moved to second on a sacrifice by Rick Radford. Todd Grant singled in Stepple and went to second on the throw to the plate. A single by Norris drove in Grant for a 2-1 Snow Hill edge.
 Isbell opened the third with a triple and scored on a fielder's choice. Blackmon and Donnie Bobbitt singled, and Todd Goins walked to load the bases. Morris' grounder put Rocky Mount ahead to stay, and Eddie Naylor plated another run with an infield single.

 Rocky Mount increased its lead to 8-4 after six innings, then put the game out of reach with five in the seventh and two more in the eighth.
 Snow Hill, now 7-7 on the season, hosts Wayne County tonight. Rocky Mount improved its record to 6-6.

Andujar Wins Without Cards' Hitting Support

By The Associated Press

For a pitcher who doesn't get much hitting support from his teammates, St. Louis right-hander Joaquin Andujar isn't complaining. All he's doing is winning.

For two straight games, the Cardinals didn't give Andujar a single run to work with. And Wednesday night, that's the way it was until the ninth inning when David Green finally socked a two-out, two-run homer to power a 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

"Everybody knows we're going to score runs sooner or later," said Andujar, who improved his record to 11-6 with a four-hitter. "We don't have a great hitting team but we have good enough hitting. I don't worry about the hitting. I only think about throwing strikes and doing my job."

After a 6-16 record in 1983, Andujar has been doing his job rather well. He is tied with Charlie Lea of the Expos and Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers in the American League for the most victories in the majors. Andujar's four shutouts and nine complete games both top the National League.

In other NL action, it was Atlanta 6, San Francisco 5; Pittsburgh 5, Chicago 1; New York 7, Philadelphia 4; Cincinnati 4, Los Angeles 2, and San Diego 6, Houston 2.

Montreal reliever Jeff Reardon, 3-2, who entered the game in the ninth after starter David Palmer tossed a six-hitter for eight innings, retired the first two batters he faced. But Tom Herr singled and Green then belted the first pitch to him for the game-winning homer.

"Galen said it was my hardest fastball," said Reardon, referring to Galen Cisco, the Expos' pitching coach. "I must have supplied the power. I thought it was just a fly ball. When the ball left Green's bat I started walking to the dugout. The pitch was a foot outside. I can't believe he even got the bat on it."

Braves 6, Giants 5

Len Barker pitched seven strong innings and Atlanta scored five times in the sixth inning with the help of wildness by San Francisco pitchers to beat the Giants.

Barker, 6-6, left the game after giving up the sixth San Francisco hit, a leadoff homer in the eighth by Johnnie LeMaster. He struck out 10 and walked four in his seven-plus innings of work.

Gene Garber and Terry Forster finished up, the latter recording his fifth save after giving up a run-scoring grounder to Steve Nicosia and RBI base hit to LeMaster in the ninth.

Rookie San Francisco right-hander Jeff Robinson, 3-8, did not allow the Braves a hit until one out in the sixth, when Rafael Ramirez singled sharply up the middle. Robinson then came unglued, leaving the game as the Braves scored five times with the help of a hit batsman, an error and three walks, two of which forced in runs.

Pirates 5, Cubs 1

Jose DeLeon held Chicago hitless for 5 2-3 innings before settling for a three-hitter as Pittsburgh, with the help of a key run-scoring double by Dale Berra, beat the Cubs.

DeLeon retired the first nine batters he faced until Bob Dernier drew a lead-off walk in the fourth inning. Dernier promptly stole second and came home on fly balls by Ryne Sandberg and Gary Matthews to tie the score at 1-1.

Dernier then touched DeLeon, 4-4, for the Cubs' first hit, a two-out single in the sixth.

With the score tied 1-1, Tony Pena singled off loser Chuck Rainey, 5-6, to start the Pirates' fourth, then stole second. Berra followed with a two-out RBI double for the winning run.

Mets 7, Phillies 4

Darryl Strawberry hit a three-run homer and Mookie Wilson a two-run shot as New York beat Philadelphia to move within a half-game of the East-leading Phillies.

Ron Darling, 7-3, gained his first victory over the Phillies after three defeats with relief help from Doug Sisk, who gained his eighth save. Darling worked 6 2-3 innings, allowing eight hits and three earned runs. He struck out six and walked four.

Steve Carlton, 4-4, was the loser, pitching seven innings and giving up all seven runs. He struck out only three.

Strawberry's homer, which highlighted a four-run third inning, was his ninth of the season.

Reds 4, Dodgers 2

Jeff Russell knocked in the winning run with a fourth-inning single and scattered six hits for his first victory since May 11 as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles.

Russell, 3-8, snapped a personal five-game losing streak with his first complete game of the season, handing the Dodgers their seventh consecutive loss. It's the Dodgers' longest losing streak since they dropped eight in a row in 1982.

Winning for only the sixth time in the last 21 starts, the Reds scored twice in the fourth off Alejandro Pena, 7-3, for their go-ahead runs.

Dave Parker singled to lead off the Reds' fourth and took second when right fielder R.J. Reynolds bobbled the ball for an error. Nick Esasky doubled Parker home to tie the game 2-2, and after an intentional walk to Ron Oester, Russell singled to score Esasky.

Padres 6, Astros 2

Triples by San Diego pitcher Tim Lollar and Tony Gwynn and two errors by Houston highlighted a three-run sixth inning that boosted the Padres over the Astros.

Lollar, 6-5, tripled to start the rally and scored on second baseman Phil Garner's error. After Alan Wiggins reached base on an infield hit, Gwynn tripled to score Wiggins and Steve Garvey singled home another run. The rally helped the Astros pull away from a 3-2 lead.

Joyner went the distance on the mound for Kiwanis, allowing eight hits and striking out 10.

The Lions took a 3-1 lead after three innings, but Kiwanis plated eight runs in the fourth to take control. Kiwanis added five more in the top of the fifth, while Lions responded with five in the bottom of the frame.

True Value..... 4
Carroll & Associates..... 3

Gamal Hunter singled in a pair of runs in the top of the first as True Value cruised to a 4-3 win over Carroll & Associates in Tar Heel Little League baseball.

True Value managed just four hits in the contest, but Joel Daughtry went 2-3 to lead Carroll & Associates at the plate.

Both teams managed three runs in the first, but True Value plated the only other run in the top of the second.

Joyner, Sherwood Wilder and Scott Bond had two hits each for Winterville.

Winterville, now in first with a 7-2 record, plays Chicod Saturday.

Swale's Death Still A Mystery

KENNETT SQUARE, Pa. (AP) — Despite a microscopic examination of tissues, the death of Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Swale remains a mystery.

Dr. Helen Acland, head of the Laboratory of Large Animal Pathology at the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center here, said Wednesday that her "gut reaction" was that Swale died from heart failure.

Swale died Sunday at Belmont Park following a routine 1 1/2-mile gallop.

Acland participated in both the autopsy in New York and the tissue examination at Penn's renowned animal research facility in this southeastern Pennsylvania com-community.

She said the next step in the scientific probe of Swale's death will be a brain tissue examination that will take 10 days to two weeks. She said routine toxicologic studies are underway.

Acland said the possibility of foul play in the death of the 3-year-old colt was small.

"Their was no injection sign that we could see. And history suggests the animal was under very close supervision and all the people handling him were very fond of him," she said.

She added, however, that while the possibility of foul play seems small, "I have a bit of trouble defining small. I'd like to defer that question until we've gone through some testing. That part only now has been put into action."

Acland ruled out the possibility of heatstroke, which she said can kill small animals like dogs but not large animals such as horses.

'Country Boy' Likes Attention

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earl Bell, the first American pole vaulter to clear 19 feet outdoors, likes the attention he receives as a good old country boy. He doesn't think it would be the same if he were a city slicker.

Bell grew up and still lives in little Jonesboro, Ark., a city of about 30,000 in the northeast corner of the state. He enjoys the easy, laid-back life there, rather than that of a big city like Los Angeles, where he will be competing tonight in the pole vault final at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.

"There is a big difference between an athlete living here and one living in Arkansas," said Bell. "In LA, people expect you to do well, and if you don't, they say, 'That bum really blew it.' In Arkansas, they hope you do well, but if you don't, they feel sorry for you."

When Bell set the American outdoor record in the pole vault June 9, clearing 19 feet, one-quarter inch in the USA-Olympic Championships at San Jose, Calif., breaking the mark of 18-11 held by Mike Tully, the Arkansas newspapers gave the story smashing play.

"It got the biggest headlines since (former President Richard) Nixon resigned," Bell recalled with a smile.

"Would Tully (who lives in the Los Angeles area) have gotten that kind of headline here?" he asked.

Although Bell has spent most of his life in Jonesboro, he was not born there.

"I was born in Panama, in the Canal Zone," he said. "So I could be competing for Panama in the Olympic Games."

"But I didn't feel right about it. It was a thought, but I stopped that idea. I could have done it though. You have to skip one Olympiad and not compete for the United States team for three years, and I had not competed in the 1980 Olympics (because of the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games)."

Panama's loss probably will be a gain for the United States.

Bell is having his finest season since moving into top-class competition as a freshman at Arkansas State University in 1974.

In addition to his 19-foot vault, he cleared 18-8½ in an indoor meet at Rosemont, Ill., his best height until the recent National Championships.

In tonight's final, Bell will be facing a crack field that includes Billy Olson, the only American to clear 19 feet indoors; Tully, last year's Pan American Games champion; 1980 Olympian Dan Ripley; former American record holder Jeff Buckingham, and NCAA champion Joe Dial.

Tonight's other finals are the men's 200 meters, the women's 400-meter intermediate hurdles, and the men's 400-meter dash. There was no competition in the Trials Wednesday.

Bell will be seeking his second Olympic berth. He made the team in 1976, when he set the world record of 18-7¼ and won the national championship.

He finished sixth in the Montreal Games, as Taduesz Slusarski of Poland won the gold medal at 18-0½.

"That won't even make the (U.S.) team this year," he said.

If Bell makes the team, he could run into a problem in the Olympics because of a specially constructed shoe he wears to build up his left leg — his takeoff leg — which is between a half-inch and three-quarters of an inch shorter than his right leg.

He doesn't think it will cause a controversy. But as a precaution, he has asked Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress and a member of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the national and international governing bodies for the sport, respectively, to check the matter.

"I'm wearing it for a medical reason," he said. "Nobody's ever challenged it. But the total thickness of the shoe is over the (allowable) limit (for international competition)."

Bell said he didn't wear the shoe during the 1976 Games because he was about 10 pounds lighter than his present weight of 175 pounds, "and there was not as much stress on my body."

He said he first realized he had the problem many years ago when "I had trouble running without pain in my left leg."

A shoemaker built up the sole of his shoe, and now nearly all of his dress shoes, house shoes, sandals and sneakers are built up.

Another problem that Bell — and the other vaulters — could face tonight and in the Games is the fickle wind currents in the cavernous Los Angeles Coliseum.

To help combat that problem, Guy Kochel, Bell's former coach at Arkansas State, and now the head of the U.S. Olympic Development Pole Vault Committee, took his protegee and several other vaulters to the Coliseum for a three-hour workout after a meet at nearby UCLA last month.

"Now, I'm not scared of the winds," said Bell. "I know what to expect. The wind circles the stadium and goes in the opposite direction on the floor. It's amazing how much wind is whipping around."

"But this is a good place to jump. The runways are new, the track is new, the infield is new."

"The main thing now is to get to the Olympic Games without a cast on my foot," said Bell, who was plagued recently by severe leg injuries that threatened to keep him out of the National Championships and the Trials.

Landry Aids White In Assault Trial

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry came to the defense of Danny White during the quarterback's misdemeanor assault trial, testifying that he might also slap a teen-ager if he felt his family was threatened on the highway.

Landry also told jurors Wednesday that White's job with the National Football League team is not in jeopardy because of the trial, which was scheduled to enter its fourth day today.

White is charged with assaulting Plano High School football player Jon Michael Clark. The 17-year-old says the Cowboys signal-caller tried to run him off a rural road for no apparent reason and then punched him in the nose at a stop light.

White claims he slapped Clark in self-defense after Clark instigated a dangerous game of speeding up and slowing down and almost forced White's van, carrying three of his children, into a head-on collision at 80 mph.

White faces a year in prison and a $2,000 fine if convicted.

Landry, called by the defense as a character witness and mobbed by autograph seekers during a recess, testified that he believed White wouldn't have hit Clark without provocation.

Landry said if he and his children were "under the same type of stress situation that Danny was under, I might do the same thing."

White testified that Clark's Camaro kept accelerating as he tried to pass on the two-lane road, leaving the van in the lane of oncoming traffic.

His actions on the roadway were scrutinized Wednesday during cross examination by prosecutor Randall Blake.

"You had at least two very reasonable alternatives — you could have slowed down and fallen in line behind the Camaro or you could have pulled off the road," Blake said to White.

White, 32, responded that there was no indication Clark wouldn't have continued to slow down with him and that there was no safe place to stop on the side of the road.

"You were in a race with him, weren't you?" Blake asked.

"No sir," White said.

Duran Insists 'No Mas'

PANAMA CITY (AP) — The Roberto Duran who was all but unbeatable in the lightweight division for much of the 1970s hasn't been around for some time. Now it looks like he won't go another round.

Duran, whose "Hands of Stone" carried him to successive boxing championships in the lightweight, welterweight and junior middleweight divisions, announced Wednesday at a news conference at the Panama City airport he is retiring from the ring. The development came just five days after his 33rd birthday last Friday, the day of his last fight.

"I don't think about boxing anymore. I am thinking now about having fun, good clean fun," Duran said following a flight here from Miami.

When Thomas Hearns stopped Duran in the second round of their World Boxing Council super welterweight title bout in Las Vegas, Nev., last Friday, he became only the second man to knock Duran down, and the first to knock him out.

"I was fighting a legend," Hearns said afterward. "He was the greatest fighter I've ever faced."

The retirement announcement is the second made by Duran in four years. This one almost certainly will stick.

The first time the Panamanian said he was finished fighting was the night of Nov. 25, 1980. On that night, in the Superdome at New Orleans, Duran quit in the eighth round against Sugar Ray Leonard and lost the World Boxing Council welterweight championship.

It was the "No mas" fight, a defeat that will remain a part of the Duran legend and will be discussed always along with the Panamanian's great victories, such as his lightweight title triumph over Ken Buchanan on June 26, 1972, and his WBC welterweight title victory on a 15-round decision in Montreal over Leonard on June 20, 1980.

There are two distinct segments to the 33-year-old Duran's career. He burst on the boxing scene when he knocked Benny Huertas in the first round of his 24th fight Sept. 13, 1971.

From March 8, 1967, through the first Leonard fight, the one-time streetfighter was 71-1, with 55 knockouts.

His only defeat in that span came at the hands of Esteban DeJesus on Nov. 17, 1972 in New York. Knocked down for the first time in his career during the fight (a 10-round decision), Duran returned to his hotel with tears streaming down his face, beat his fists against the wall and vowed never to lose again.

It didn't look as if Duran would ever lose again until that fateful night against Leonard in one of the most baffling moments in ring history.

Following the victory over Leonard, Duran won five of his final 10 fights, only two by knockouts.

But those knockouts saved his career. One was a fourth-round KO over Pipino Cuevas, a former World Boxing Association welterweight champion. The other came in the eighth round at Madison Square Garden in New York against Davey Moore for the WBA junior middleweight title on June 16, 1983 — exactly one year before his demise against Hearns.

"I was born again," said Duran. "After last night, I forget whatever happened in the past. I'm thinking of the present and the future."

The victory over Moore was important because in the eyes of Duran and his fans it provided redemption for his quitting against Leonard.

Then came a 15-round fight against Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion. Duran's bid to become the first man to win world titles in four weight classes ended in defeat, although it was a close but unanimous decision. Duran fought cleverly, but many observers thought Hagler was overly cautious.

Against Hearns, the tricks of the trade learned over the years were not enough to save Duran. The end came at 1:07 of the second round as he lay face down after a third knockdown in the desert heat at Caesars Palace. The referee didn't even bother to count.

Soto, Washington Suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — For the second time in three weeks Mario Soto has been suspended and fined by the National League. For the first time, he has appealed the decision.

Soto, Cincinnati's right-handed pitching ace, and Atlanta's Claudell Washington, each received a suspension and a fine Wednesday from National League President Chub Feeney for their part in a brawl June 16.

Soto was suspended for five days and Washington for three, but both have appealed the punishments.

The most recent incident involving Soto occurred June 16 in Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium in a game with the Braves.

Washington hit a home run in his first at-bat, and Soto threw a brush-back pitch that put Washington in the dirt on his next plate appearance.

Later in the game, Washington let his bat fly near the mound on a swing, and a fight broke out as he walked out to get the bat. During the exchange, Soto flung the baseball at a pile of players, hitting Braves coach Joe Pignatano and umpire Lanny Harris.

Soto was reprimanded for fighting and throwing a baseball into a pile of players. Washington was fined and suspended for pushing an umpire to the ground and starting a fight.

It was the second suspension this season for Soto, who was given a five-day sentence following an incident May 27 against the Chicago Cubs.

Soto, who has a 7-1 record and a .251 earned run average, was suspended for five days then and given an unspecified fine for bumping an umpire and later charging onto the field after being ejected from the game at Wrigley Field.

Soto was unable to pitch because of a finger blister, and the Reds decided not to appeal that suspension.

Feeney also set a $5,050 fine for Soto, according to the Reds, while the Braves said Washington's fine was $1,000.

Appeals Court Refuses Request In Raiders Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city of Los Angeles and the Super Bowl champion Raiders received a big boost from a state appeals court, leaving Mayor Tom Bradley and Raiders officials confidently declaring that the Raiders are in Los Angeles for good.

The city will "continue efforts to expose the duplicity and absence of fairness" in the National Football League's legal battle against the Raiders, Bradley said Wednesday, adding that the Raiders' court victory bodes well for the Los Angeles Clippers.

The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco voted 2-1 on Tuesday to decline the NFL's request that it reconsider its February ruling in which it upheld a lower court's decision.

The court had upheld a decision by a Los Angeles Superior Court that ruled that the Raiders did not violate antitrust laws in relocating from Oakland.

The NFL, which has indicated that it will pursue its appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, is pushing for Congressional antitrust legislation that would overturn the lower court's decision.

Raiders Executive Assistant Al LoCasale hailed the decision as a victory and termed the legal efforts by the NFL and Commissioner Pete Rozelle "unconscionable."

"We won because the NFL knowingly violated the antitrust laws, losing on bad faith and unfair dealings," LoCasale said in a prepared statement.

Bradley said that the 9th Court's ruling will boost the efforts of the National Basketball Association's Clippers, who played last season in San Diego but have moved to Los Angeles. The Clippers face a suit by the NBA which would return them to San Diego.

"Now it appears the NBA has not learned the costly lessons of the National Football League," Bradley said. "This is a suit which the NBA will surely regret."

Bradley criticized the NFL for opposing the Raiders' move while remaining silent when the Los Angeles Rams left for Anaheim.

Professional sports teams have historically "moved with impunity," Bradley said, and he cited the flights to the suburbs of the New York Giants, Dallas Cowboys, Detroit Lions, New York Jets and the Boston Patriots.

Jackson Calls For Platform Summit

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart are sending a compromise Democratic platform draft to the full 184-member Platform Committee with their blessings, but the Rev. Jesse Jackson is calling for a "summit" among the three rivals to discuss the document.

Jackson, who didn't get nearly as many of his ideas into the platform draft as the other two, said the three candidates should spend "two or three days" together discussing party issues for the fall campaign. So far, neither Hart nor Mondale has agreed to a three-way meeting, although supporters of both say the idea is intriguing.

A 15-member panel dominated by Mondale delegates completed three days of work on the platform draft Wednesday evening. Both Mondale and Hart supporters claimed the document can heal wounds opened during this year's primaries.

The full committee was to begin three days of work on the draft today. The finished document will be submitted to the Democratic National Convention next month.

Hart forces said they may fight before the full committee for several initiatives rejected by the drafting panel, such as his proposal for a new program for retraining unemployed workers and language opposing any use of U.S. forces to protect oil supplies in the Persian Gulf. But generally they said they were happy with the compromise draft.

The spirit of conciliation between the two camps appeared to all but eliminate the chance of a bitter convention floor battle between the two candidates like the 1980 fight in New York between supporters of President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mondale platform drafters agreed to incorporate a number of the "new idea" themes of the Hart campaign into the platform, while steering clear of endorsing specific programs or legislation.

The draft calls for efforts to revitalize the nation's aging heavy industries and endorses the removal of trade barriers to open up new markets abroad for U.S. goods, all central themes to the Hart campaign.

"The whole flavor of the platform has changed a great deal. I think it's quite remarkable and it shows we've moved beyond conventional Washington thinking," said Hart delegate Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., leader of the eight Mondale delegates on the 15-member committee, said there were no problems working out the compromise, despite several heated exchanges. "They should be happy. We found ways to put in a lot of their language," he said.

"I think the party's beginning to heal up and come together in recognition that we have a candidate who is going to be the nominee and we'd better get together," Barnes said.

The platform draft sounds a number of traditional Democratic themes — a move toward jobs for all American workers who want them, ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment and protection of homosexual rights.

It also advocates the naming of a special U.S. envoy to Northern Ireland, proposed by both the Hart and Jackson campaigns; and it calls for a move toward stabilizing relations with Cuba, an attempt by the platform writers to address Jackson's call for complete normalization of relations with Cuba.

Several issues were left unresolved for the full committee to grapple with.

One was a call by Jackson for the party to support elimination of runoff, or "dual" primaries in some Southern states, a system Jackson says discriminates against minority candidates.

Also left for the full panel to resolve was whether the Democratic Party should flatly or partially repudiate the use of racial quotas to achieve affirmative action goals.

Mondale and Hart factions agreed at Wednesday's session on nearly all foreign policy and defense issues, including adopting a compromise plank on Central America.

Although the panel rejected Hart's insistence on an end to all U.S. military training exercises in the region, it agreed to put the Democratic party on record advocating: "We must halt those U.S. military exercises in the region which are being conducted for no other real purpose than to intimidate or provoke the Nicaraguan government or which may be used as a pretext for deeper U.S. military involvement in the area."

But Hart delegates failed for a second time on Wednesday to get the panel to adopt a plank vowing never to use U.S. ground forces to protect oil supplies in the Persian Gulf. Mondale forces said the former vice president would not commit himself in advance to using or not using military force in any part of the world.

Instead, the panel adopted, 10-3, a Mondale-supported version stating:

Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veteran Brazilian diplomat Joao Baena Soares, the new secretary-general of the Organization of American States, says it is a "historical imperative" that hemispheric nations rely on diplomacy instead of force to resolve their differences.

Baena Soares, the sixth OAS secretary-general and first Brazilian to hold the office, set an optimistic tone Wednesday in his inaugural address as he took charge of the 31-nation hemispheric body, succeeding Alejandro Orfila of Argentina.

Don't let an apparently easy hand lull you into a false sense of security. Even seemingly laydown hands can run into a foul lie of the cards or bad distribution.

South thought fleetingly about slam prospects over his partner's jump to game. However, he was wise to dismiss those thoughts—North's double jump showed good distributional features but limited high-card assets.

West led the jack of clubs and the contract looked so simple that declarer relaxed involuntarily. He captured the king of clubs with the ace, cashed the ace of spades and then ran the nine of diamonds. East won the ten and shifted to a heart.

It was time for declarer to try his second finesse. The queen of hearts lost to the king, a diamond came back and declarer had to lose two more diamond tricks for down one.

South bemoaned his lack of luck—four cards had to be wrong to assure his defeat. Actually, his trouble was that his hand was too good—had his queen of hearts been a low card, he almost certainly would have landed the game.

Suppose, after winning the king of clubs and drawing the outstanding trump, declarer were to cash the queen of clubs and then simply play the ace and queen of hearts. If East wins the king, he is end played there and then.

As the cards lie, West wins the king of hearts. Now, his only safe return is a diamond. Declarer simply covers any diamond that West leads on the board. East must win, but he is end played. The defenders will collect another high diamond, but the contract is safe.

Senate May Give Ax To Intangibles Tax

RALEIGH (AP) — A five-year phaseout of the intangibles tax has a good chance of winning state Senate approval, although the Legislature isn't setting aside money to fund tax reforms, influential lawmakers say.

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved the phaseout 10-2 and sent the bill to the Senate floor, where a vote was expected today.

Although many legislative leaders support repeal of the intangibles tax, few have predicted that it would happen during the short session. That's because all of an estimated $616 million surplus is expected to be spent, with no money set aside to compensate for revenue losses that tax cuts would cause.

But after the Finance Committee acted, Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall said that "enough people signed the bill to indicate ...

that it will pass."

The bill's prospects far less optimistic in the House. "All I can say is, time is running short," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the House Finance Committee.

The intangibles tax, a levy on savings accounts, stocks and bonds, provides local governments with some $60 million annually.

Under the bill, sponsored by Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, the state would at partially reimburse cities and counties for their losses during the five-year phaseout period of 1984-88 and possibly longer.

Currently, the intangibles tax is 10 cents per $100 on savings accounts of $1,000 or more and 25 cents per $100 on stocks and bonds.

Under Lawing's plan, the levy would decrease from 10 cents to 8 cents on savings and from 25 cents to 20 cents on stocks and bonds this year, the first of the phaseout.

The tax on savings would decrease by 2 cents per year and the levy on stocks and bonds by 5 cents per year through 1988.

"I loathe, abhor, detest and despise the intangibles tax," said Lawing. "I've gotten more calls and visits about that thing in my 14 years here than on any other one, two or even three things."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said repeal of the tax would be such a boon to industrial recruitment that revenue losses would be more than made up by economic growth.

"Look at this as an investment, not a drag on (revenues)," said Boyles.

But Ron Aycock of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners said getting rid of the intangibles tax would merely shift the burden to other taxpayers — especially property owners, whose payments of property taxes fund the bulk of local budgets.

"The demand for services doesn't go away just because the tax is not there," said Aycock.

Sen. Vernon White, D-Pitt, agreed, saying that people who invest in stocks and bonds be taxed on their earnings just as those who invest in real estate.

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, tried to send the bill to subcommittee along with a bill sponsored by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, that would end the intangibles tax immediately.

Lawing protested, saying that sending the bill during the short session would spell its doom. The committee voted down the subcommittee proposal 7-6.

Gastonia Woman Honored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut Sally Ride, FBI Director William Webster and businessman J. Peter Grace are among 10 public and private citizens being honored for serving the American people.

The men and women were chosen to receive the Jefferson Award of the American Institute for Public Service, which the group's president, Samuel S. Beard, called a "Nobel Prize for public service."

The awards ceremony was scheduled for today in the East Conference Room of the U.S. Supreme Court.

A fourth national award winner is Maude E. Callen, an 85-year-old nurse from Berkeley County, S.C.

Local recipients of the honor are Virginia Clemmer of Gastonia, N.C.; Campbell and Frances Cutler of Flint, Mich.; Margaret Marshall of Indianapolis; Betty Taylor of Atlanta; and Donna Velvick of Nampa, Idaho.

National winners receive $5,000 apiece, and the six local winners share $5,000. Each receives a gold-on-silver medallion.

Mrs. Clemmer, 71, honored for "pioneering service to the mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped in North Carolina," the institute said, helped organize a special education program that is now part of the Gaston County school system.

Cannon Mills Leader Calls For Unity To Fight Imports

LANDIS, N.C. (AP) — American ingenuity is no longer enough to get the textile industry through the onslaught of modern machinery and cheap foreign labor, North Carolina textile officials say.

David Murdock, owner of Cannon Mills, told textile leaders from Cabarrus and Rowan counties Tuesday that inexpensive imports and better equipment will chisel away American jobs unless private industry and government leaders take action.

"I've said we don't want government help," Murdock said. "However, I feel that it's time we do a lot more."

Charles Dunn of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association said other governments promote their textile industries.

Murdock added that in China, the provinces have set up committees to study what can be made.

"They're going into textiles because they have lots of people, and you know it takes a lot of people to make textiles," he said.

Dunn said there are precedents for government support of industry in North Carolina.

State-supported research in agriculture has meant tremendous strides for Tar Heel farmers, he said. "One of the state's best investments has paid off."

Another example is the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina in Research Triangle Park to promote research for technical industries, he said.

More government support is necessary in trade regulation, Dunn and Murdock said.

"Some in government seem determined to cripple the textile and apparel industries," Dunn said. "Trade policies are based more on politics than economics. We give and they take."

The United States imports textile and apparel products from more than 100 countries, he said.

"We are almost the last country that adheres to anything like free trade. Our competitors raise barriers that prohibit our products from being imported into their markets until their industries reach a certain level."

Dunn said a bill freezing textile imports at last year's levels has little chance of passing this year. The bill would also require textile imports to be licensed and set up a system of quotas geared to American market demands.

President Reagan could put some of the bill's provisions into effect by executive action, Dunn said, and if public hearings are held on the bill, some pressure might be brought on him to do something.

A bill that does have a chance of passage this year, Dunn said, would require all American-made textile products to carry a "Made in U.S.A." label or the "Crafted With Pride in the U.S.A." star label.

Consumers look for American-made products and will buy them if the labels are there, he said.

Murdock said some domestic companies are helping foreign competition by importing their products.

N.C. Wilderness Added To Preserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed legislation establishing more than 211,000 acres of federal wilderness preserves in four states, including 68,750 acres in North Carolina.

The president signed the legislation Tuesday afternoon. It also designated 24,339 acres as wilderness areas in Wisconsin, 77,000 acres in New Hampshire and 41,260 acres in Vermont.

Wilderness acres are to be preserved in their natural state. They are open to non-motorized recreation, such as hunting, fishing, camping, hiking and canoeing, but are off-limits to motorized travel and development.

Asked about environmentalists' criticism of his record, Reagan said, "They don't know what they're talking about."

The designated North Carolina land includes:

— About 4,790 acres in the Uwharrie National Forest to be known as the Brikhead Mountains Wilderness.

— About 7,600 acres in the Croatan National Forest to be known as the Catfish Lake South Wilderness.

— About 3,680 acres in the Nantahala National Forest to be added to the Ellicott Rock Wilderness.

— About 2,980 acres in the Nantahala National Forest to be added to the Joyce Kilmer Wilderness.

— About 3,400 acres in the Pisgah National Forest to be added to the Linville Gorge Wilderness.

— About 7,900 acres in the Pisgah National Forest to be known as the Middle Prong Wilderness.

— About 11,000 acres in the Croatan National Forest to be known as the Pocosin Wilderness.

— About 1,860 acres in the Croatan National Forest to be known as the Pond Pine Wilderness.

— About 9,540 acres in the Croatan National Forest to be known as the Sheep Ridge Wilderness.

— About 5,100 acres in the Pisgah National Forest to be added to the Shining Rock Wilderness.

— About 10,900 acres in the Nantahala National Forest to be known as the Southern Nantahala Wilderness.

Probe Requested

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A legislator says he has asked the Organization of American States to investigate the disappearances of hundreds of people in Peru and will request a congressional probe.

Javier Diez Canseco, deputy chairman of the House of Representatives' Human Rights Committee, said Tuesday he asked the OAS for the investigation while he was in Washington, D.C., last week, but had not yet received a response.

Summer Solstice

Today, the Summer Solstice marks the beginning of summer in the Northern Hemisphere. There are more hours of daylight on the Summer Solstice than on any other day of the year, as the sun rises and sets at its northernmost points on the horizon. Fairbanks, Alaska celebrates the Summer Solstice with an annual Midnight Sun Baseball Game, played without artificial light.

DO YOU KNOW? — What are the two days that fall midway between the Summer and Winter Solstices?

First Woman Executed In This State Thought Reprieve Was On The Way

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
On the night of Dec. 31, 1942, Rosana Phillips sat in her cell and waited for a reprieve, convinced that North Carolina would never execute a woman.

But the next morning, the 26-year-old Durham County woman became the first female put to death in North Carolina since the state took over executions in 1910.

Only one other woman has been put to death since Mrs. Phillips died. If the scheduled execution of Velma Margie Barfield is carried out Aug. 31, she will become the first woman in 40 years, and the first white woman, to be put to death.

Rosana Phillips died 7 minutes and 20 seconds after a cloud of cyanide gas began rising in the death chamber. Prison officials at the time said it was the quickest death since the state switched from the electric chair to the gas chamber in 1936.

Mrs. Phillips died 49 minutes after her husband, Daniel Phillips, was executed in the gas chamber. Both had been convicted of murder in the ax slaying of their landlord, 64-year-old Harry Watkins.

Daniel and Rosana were married two days after the Aug. 3, 1942, murder, police said.

To the end, each blamed the other for the killing. Daniel said Rosana killed Watkins with an ax and he hit the man a second time after he was dead. She said Daniel killed Watkins but she helped put the body in a well where it was later found.

Daniel was executed first at the request of parole officials, who believed he might make some statement that would justify a reprieve for his wife. But Daniel made no statement, except to tell 15 other prisoners on Death Row goodbye.

Prison chaplain L.A. Watts said the couple met for a few minutes before their executions and "forgave each other." He said Mrs. Phillips believed to the end that she would get a reprieve.

A report of the executions in the News and Observer of Raleigh said Phillips appeared calm as he sat in the death chamber, even after a spring releasing cyanide pellets malfunctioned, forcing prison officials to re-enter the gas chamber and reset the mechanism.

The same report said Mrs. Phillips seemed "terrified" as prison officials strapped her into the chair.

Bessie Mae Williams, the only other woman executed by the state, entered the gas chamber on Dec. 29, 1944, dressed in a blue-striped, short-legged pajama outfit.

Outside the chamber, 28 witnesses and five ministers watched as the crying 19-year-old was strapped into the death chair and a leather hood pulled over her head.

Two prison matrons who had escorted the convicted murderer into the chamber stood in a corner, holding each others' hands as the straps were fastened.

Eight minutes after a cloud of cyanide gas began rising in the chamber, the girl was pronounced dead.

She was one of three people who died that day in the gas chamber.

After her body was removed, Ralph Thompson, who was convicted in the same slaying that sent Ms. Williams to death, was executed.

A second woman sentenced to death in the same case, 15-year-old Annie Mae Allison, had her sentence commuted to life in prison. Gov. John Melville Broughton said he commuted her sentence "wholly on the grounds of the age of the prisoner."

Cleve Johnson, the fourth member of the group that killed Charlotte taxi driver Mack Minyard, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, turned state's evidence and was sentenced to 25-30 years.

Ms. Williams told prison chaplain L.A. Watts before her execution, "I feel I'm saved. I'm guilty of being with them, but not guilty of cutting him (Minyard)."

"I did take the two half dollars off the (cab) seat," she said. "God has answered my prayers. I'm ready now."

Thompson admitted knifing Minyard in a dispute over the cab fare.

Macklenburg County Sheriff Mack

Riley said the killing of Minyard was "the most brutal murder that I have ever known in my many years as a police officer and sheriff."

Eight people were scheduled to die in the gas chamber that day.

No Health Hazards Found On Campus

RALEIGH (AP) — Two North Carolina State University buildings in which four cancer victims worked have been given a clean bill of health by investigators for the state Occupational and Health Division.

"The Division of Health Service, the N.C. Department of Human Resources, conducted an investigation on the reported cases of cancer at these two halls and found no basis for suspecting either an increased incidence of cancer among the buildings' occupants or an epidemiologically significant cluster of any type of cancer," said a report by Michael D. Ragland, deputy commissioner for health and safety with the state Department of Labor.

N.C. State Chancellor Bruce

Poulton said the report on Winston and Tomkins halls had been reviewed and approved by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

"No health hazards were found at either of these halls," Ragland said in a letter accompanying the report. "Sampling for air, water and surface contaminants showed chemical levels either below the detectable limit or at background levels."

Benjamin White, Guy Owen and Thomas N. Walters each had offices in the buildings and died of cancer in the past three years. Raymond Camp, who worked with Owens and Walters, suffered a malignant tumor which was removed from his bladder in February.

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS scored a "slam dunk" with its telecast of the National Basketball Association championship game and got assists from seven other programs in the Top 10 to win undisputed first place in the Nielsen ratings.

The previous week CBS had tied NBC for first. Its only other claim to first since the end of the regular season was a narrow squeak past ABC in May.

ABC was second and NBC finished third.

The week's highest-rated show was the seventh game of the National Basketball Association finals in which the Boston Celtics defeated the Los Angeles Lakers. CBS in all had eight shows in the Top 10.

The CBS shows, in addition to the NBA game, were: "Simon & Simon," second; "Trapper John, M.D.," third; "Magnum, P.I.," fifth; "Newhart," tied for sixth with ABC's "20-20," "60 Minutes" and "Alice," tied for eighth; "Cagney & Lacey," tenth.

Completing the Top 10 was the NBC movie "Angel Dusted," which was fourth.

CBS won with a network average of 12.7 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey for the week ended June 17. ABC was second with 11.9 and NBC was third with 11.8. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 12.7 percent of the TV homes were tuned to CBS.

The bottom of the ratings took on the look of a "mom and pop" operation. NBC's "Father Murphy" was the lowest-rated show of the week and CBS' "Mama Malone" was second from the bottom. The five bottom shows in descending order were: ABC's "Ripley's Believe It or Not," CBS' "Welcome to Paradise," ABC News "Closeup: The Rise of Syria," CBS' "Mama Malone" and NBC's "Father Murphy."

CBS also kept its long undisputed claim to first among the evening news shows. CBS won the week with a rating of 10.0. NBC was second with 9.0 and it was the closest it has gotten to CBS since the week ended June 14, 1982. ABC was third with 8.2.

Here are the week's 20 top programs:

1. NBA Championship Game No. 7, CBS, a rating of 19.3 or 16.1 million households.
2. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 18.3 or 15.3 million.
3. "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, 17.1 or 14.3 million.
4. Movie—"Angel Dusted," NBC, 17.0 or 14.2 million.
5. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 16.9 or 14.1 million.
6. "20-20" ABC, 16.4 or 13.7 million.

7. Tie—"Newhart," CBS, 16.4 or 13.7 million.
8. "60 Minutes," CBS, 16.2 or 13.5 million.
9. Tie—"Alice," CBS, 16.2 or 13.5 million.
10. "Cagney & Lacey," CBS, 16.0 or 13.4 million.
11. "Facts of Life," NBC, 15.6 or 13.0 million.
12. "Matt Houston," ABC, 15.1 or 12.6 million.
13. Tie—"One Day at a Time," CBS, 15.1 or 12.6 million.
14. Tie-Movie—"The Big Fix," ABC, 15.1 or 12.6 million.
15. Tie—"Cheers," NBC, 15.1 or 12.6 million.
16. Movie—"Tomorrow's Child," ABC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
17. Tie—"Remington Steele," NBC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
18. "The Jeffersons," CBS, 14.4 or 12.0 million.

19. "Family Ties," NBC, 14.3 or 11.9 million.
20. Tie—"Riptide," NBC, 14.3 or 11.9 million.

Papers Saying No To Jackson's Ads

By The Associated Press
The Michael Jackson concert tour may be the hottest ticket in the country this summer, but several Midwest newspapers are refusing to run the tour promoters' "public service" advertisements containing ticket applications.

"My feeling is that this is an opportunistic venture to try and get free advertising ... to make more millions for the Jacksons and their promoters," said Bob Haring, executive editor of the Tulsa World, which refused to run the half-page ad.

Asking newspapers to run the coupons free was the only way to give "a cross section of America" an opportunity to attend the concerts, the tour's promoters said Wednesday.

The Jacksons Victory Tour, which includes the pop music superstar and his five brothers, opens in Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium, July 6-8, and will continue with 39 more concerts in 11 cities. So far, only two other concert sites have been announced — Texas Stadium in Dallas, July 13-15, and the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., July 21-23.

"There is only one way to buy tickets. And this is it," say the ads newspapers are being asked to run.

It says tickets are $30 each, they'll be sold in lots of four and those getting tickets will be selected at random by computer.

Applications must include a $120 U.S. postal money order and the coupon, which promoters have said would be available in most major newspapers. Ticket-buyers will not be allowed to request dates, only cities. Those applicants not selected will have their money refunded four to six weeks after the concert.

In Kansas, the Wichita Eagle-Beacon and the Topeka Capitol-Journal refused to run the advertisement.

Assembly Readies Budget

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislators are pushing to enact a $4.4 billion state budget for 1984-85 this week that gives teachers as well as administrators a 5 percent pay raise and lays groundwork for a teacher career development plan by 1986.

The package, which contains approximately $606 million in additions to the bare bones budget enacted in 1983, was approved Wednesday by the House-Senate Appropriations Committee after it restored money to give school superintendents 15 percent more pay instead of a 10 percent pay raise.

Expansion Budget Chairman Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said he might try to suspend the House rules on Thursday to get immediate consideration of the bill, clearing the way for possible adjournment next week.

"When you once pass the appropriations bill you're heading home," Watkins said. "If we can pass this bill we're heading home. We came down here for a short budget session and I'm trying to keep it short."

For the first time that budget leaders could remember, the appropriations bill will be considered separately from spending provisions.

Watkins said the special provisions have become too voluminous to handle at the same time and it would delay the session to try to consider them at the same time as the budget.

In a work session Tuesday, the Appropriations Committee agreed to give teachers and principals a pay raise of approximately 15 percent and to give administrators, non-certified school personnel and state workers a 10 percent pay raise.

Budget leaders said they thought they could save approximately $5 million by giving superintendents a smaller raise.

But Watkins returned to the committee Wednesday and explained that there might be enough money to give superintendents, supervisors, directors and coordinators the 15 percent raise after all.

He said the educators would get a 10 percent across-the-board raise and a salary reclassification that amounts to 4.8 percent.

"I was amazed but they said it could be done," Watkins said.

Between Tuesday and Wednesday money also was found to spend more than $1 million on vocational education for the handicapped, more than $1 million on machinery for Baptist Hospital.

Committee debate Wednesday focused on a spending provision that asks the state Board of Education to "develop a career growth program for teachers designed to give teachers increasing responsibility, recognition and pay as they gain experience and professional ability."

The provision as submitted by budget leaders called for implementation of the program by July 1, 1985, and said no money for teacher salary raises would be appropriated until the career plan was in place.

Base Budget Committee Chairman Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said that withholding money for salary raises until the plan was implemented would ensure its speedy establishment.

Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, said it would be impossible for a new pay plan to be implemented that quickly and she succeeded in amending the implementation date to July 1, 1986.

"There is no way in this world ... the state is going to be ready," she said. "You are going to have the most disgruntled educators in the state of North Carolina that you've ever had."

The provision also mandates that the career growth program include methods for annual evaluations with peers participating in the reviews and development of methods for determining what warrants different salaries and when dismissal of tenured teachers is appropriate.

The Education Policy Council, chaired by Ms. Foster, already has introduced a bill seeking a career growth plan from the state Board of Education by November. The bill was scheduled for a House vote today.

Robb Denies Any 'Ruse' In Long Search For Brileys

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Gov. Charles S. Robb says there was "never any ruse to deliberately mislead" law enforcement officials who were searching locations other than Philadelphia for escaped murderers James and Linwood Briley.

The Brileys, last of six death row inmates to be recaptured since their breakout from Mecklenburg prison May 31, were arrested Tuesday night at their Philadelphia hideout without incident by FBI agents and Philadelphia police.

At a news conference Wednesday, Robb denied that futile searches were maintained in Canada, Vermont and North Carolina to lull the Briley brothers into false security.

"There never was any ruse to deliberately mislead law enforcement personnel anywhere," Robb said.

The governor emphasized that while evidence increasingly pointed to the Brileys having been in Philadelphia for "some period of time," there was no positive confirmation until Tuesday night.

"If there had been positive confirmation before then, the other searches could have been abandoned," he said.

But without proof of the Brileys' whereabouts, he added, "all leads had to be pursued. It was a matter of weighing the evidence."

An FBI agent said evidence indicated the brothers had been there since the day after their escape.

Robb said he was "pleased and relieved that the Brileys are back in custody without any bloodshed."

If they waive extradition, he noted, they should be back in Virginia "in a day or two."

Robb praised law enforcement officials for keeping the Philadelphia search a secret.

"I was pleased there were no leaks. It was important we keep everything under wraps," he said.

At the same time, however, he acknowledged that if the Brileys whereabouts had been confirmed but they had continued to elude capture, "there were plans for considerable publicity in the Philadelphia area."

Robb icily spurned any suggestion he would heed James Briley's post-arrest request to protest his innocence of the crimes for which he was convicted to the governor personally.

"Their situations will be handled through established procedures. Any communications to me would be reviewed in the normal manner," Robb said.

Robb also said there are no plans to reimburse law enforcement agencies in Canada or the other states which took part in the costly and prolonged manhunt for the escapees.

"Every state has an obligation to do what is necessary to protect its own citizens. We in Virginia would do the same for any convicts who escaped elsewhere and came here," he said.

Attorney General Gerald Baliles told the news conference there are no efforts under way to withdraw or modify legal motions made by the state to dismiss the appeals pending on behalf of the six escapees at the time of the breakout.

"The matter is still pending in the courts," he said.

Denied further appeals, presumably the executions of all six would be expedited. The only one with an execution date already set is Linwood Briley. He is scheduled to die in the electric chair at the State Penitentiary here Aug. 17.

Robb noted, however, that constitutional rights would have to be accorded and "there is nothing that can stop an attorney for any of them from filing an appropriate motion with the courts."

The governor was asked if the mass escape, the largest of death row inmates in the nation's history, had convinced him that justice should be more swift.

"The entire law enforcement community would agree that sentences more expeditiously carried out would increase public confidence in the system," he said.

"What might be done in this regard is on the minds of many of us," he added.

Lawyer Says State Trying To Isolate Velma Barfield

CARY, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Correction took "extraordinary steps" to isolate convicted murderer Velma Margie Barfield after the media began reporting information "the jury never knew," her attorney says.

"The question is should the state take extraordinary steps under extraordinary conditions that were never taken until Velma's side began being heard," said Jimmy Little at a Wednesday news conference, two days after Mrs. Barfield was moved to Raleigh's Central Prison.

Mrs. Barfield, scheduled to be executed Aug. 31, was moved to a cell across the hall from the death chamber Monday night on the order of Correction Secretary James Woodard. Mrs. Barfield is the only inmate in the section, which is separated from male prisoners in Central Prison.

Little said the move requires Mrs. Barfield "to do what no other inmate in North Carolina is being put through; living without any contact with other inmates in an isolated area for an extended period of time."

Little said he had been informed by correction officials that his client would not be moved until a few days before her execution date.

He said the only thing that changed since then was that, "... in the past two weeks, members of the state and national media have had one-on-one personal interviews with Velma and have presented to the public information about Velma and her background that the jury which convicted her never knew."

Patty McQuillan, spokeswoman for the correction department, said officials never told Little that Mrs. Barfield would remain at the Women's Correctional Center. She also said arrangements were being made with the media to allow interviews with Mrs. Barfield.

Ms. McQuillan said representatives of two television stations, two radio stations, two newspapers and two wire services will be allowed to meet with Mrs. Barfield each Friday morning as long as Mrs.

Barfield agrees to the interviews.

The N.C. Press Association and the N.C. Association of Broadcasters will choose the newspaper, television and radio reporters each week, she said.

"We've been getting calls from France, Germany, People magazine, the London Times," Ms. McQuillan said. "We've just been inundated with calls and we had to have some firm rule. We just don't have the staff to let the media in whenever they want, or even every day."

Little said Mrs. Barfield was upset by the move and that the isolation could aggravate her angina. But Ms. McQuillan said conditions were not as bleak for Mrs. Barfield as Little made them sound.

"In essence, it's a matter of semantics," Ms. McQuillan said. "She is not being fed her meals in her cell. She's out in the dayroom with one corrections officer beside her and another in the control booth. That is not isolation; there are two other human beings there."

Legislative Roundup

Support Grows For State Panel To Pick Waste Treatment Sites

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Environmentalists and lobbyists for industry have united behind a bill to establish a commission to choose sites for hazardous waste treatment facilities, and little opposition is expected to its passage.

"North Carolina is 11th in the nation in production of hazardous wastes," said Sen. Joseph Thomas, D-Craven, before the Senate tentatively approved the bill 41-2. "We have a responsibility to handle our own hazardous wastes."

The final Senate reading was expected today.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said untreated wastes were polluting North Carolina's rivers, lakes and streams and could be catastrophic for future generations.

The bill, he said, would ensure that no dangerous wastes are stored for long periods without being treated — which in most cases means being reduced to ashes.

"The hope is we will never have to bury any hazardous wastes," said Swain.

Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said he was concerned that if waste was buried, a disproportionate number of landfills would end up in western North Carolina.

The bill calls for creation of a nine-member commission that would recruit a private builder and operator of a treatment facility. If none is found, the state would construct and run the facility.

The bill also requires various state agencies to conduct in-depth studies of the thornier problems posed by hazardous wastes, such as whether state regulations can be more stringent than those imposed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and whether landfills should be banned.

The only votes against the bill were cast by Sens. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, and Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. Barnes said he was upset to learn that his area was being considered as a site for a hazardous waste incinerator.

"My ox is being gored," said Barnes, who said a Kentucky firm may build a facility near Goldsboro because of its "central location" and good roads.

"Those are not the criteria I thought we were working with," he said.

He said he had no argument with the bill, but wanted to make a statement that "we should be unusually careful" in dealing with the hazardous waste issue.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said he was "unalterably opposed" to government operation of the treatment facility. "Everything the state or federal governments touch sort of turns sour," he said.

If approved today, the bill will go to the House, where some proposed amendments are expected. Sponsor Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, has vowed to fight any attempt at major change, saying the industry-environmentalist compromise is so fragile that revision could destroy it.

In other legislative action:

A citizens group lobbied the General Assembly for $500,000 Wednesday to fund a one-year experiment offering passenger railway service through the Piedmont.

"We believe passenger rail service in our state is viable for our future," said Laurie Tyler, director of the Citizens Railway Council. "In the long run it will save our state money."

She said the rail service could delay the need to widen Interstate 85 and repave Piedmont roads, while attracting tourists and reducing air pollution that would otherwise be generated by automobiles.

"Passenger train service is a great bargain for North Carolina," said McNeill Smith of the Council. "This is one of the few states without day passenger service."

He said that state-owned railroad properties generate $600,000 a year, more than enough to fund the experiment.

But Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, House Appropriations chairman, said that he was unsure whether there would be money in the budget for the train. He said consideration of that item would come later.

The passenger train would connect Raleigh and Charlotte with stops in Durham, Burlington, Greensboro, High Point, Salisbury and Kannapolis. It also would connect with national service to Washington and New York through Richmond.

Amtrak has offered to put up $500,000 for the project if the state contributes an equal amount. If the experiment is successful, Amtrak might incorporate the route into its national system and assume costs.

The Senate State Government Committee approved a House bill that would delay the start of the 1985 session for three weeks, making it the first Tuesday in February. The later date would be a one-time experiment.

Under current law, the session begins the first Wednesday after the second Monday in January after lawmakers are elected.

Legislators have hurried to transact business as the pace of the session accelerated this week and predictions spawned about possible adjournment next Friday.

"I think we've got a real good chance to get out before the 4th of July," said Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland. "There is an outside possibility we can get out at the end of next week."

Base Budget Committee Chairman Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, said the General Assembly might adjourn next week if the appropriations bill was passed Thursday. The Appropriations Committee was trying to put the finishing touches on the bill Wednesday.

Among the House bills introduced Wednesday were proposals to raise levels for reimbursing counties to house prisoners and to spend $300,000 to compensate victims of crime.

Another House bill introduced would give members of the N.C. Association of Educators and N.C. School Board Association a choice whether to participate in the teachers' and state employees' retirement plans.

Several representatives introduced a bill to permit assignment of state employees' wages to pay child support.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, introduced a resolution asking Congress and President Reagan to support Social Security disability reforms. Thousands of North Carolinians have been cut off from disability payments and more than two-thirds of those who appealed the terminations had benefits restored.

Sen. Jim Edwards, D-Caldwell, introduced a bill to permit interstate mergers and acquisitions of savings and loans within the Southeast. He said the bill is similar to the regional, reciprocal interstate banking bill being considered by a Senate subcommittee.

The House and Senate approved a resolution honoring the late Sen. Julian Allsbrook, a longtime legislator who died in May. Allsbrook, a Halifax attorney, was known for his knowledge of the state Constitution. He chaired the Senate Judiciary I Committee for many years.

Governor Agrees To Grant Reward

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Gov. Lamar Alexander has heeded the recommendations of law enforcement officials and granted a $5,000 reward in a Tennessee prison escape to an elderly blind man.

The reward will go to Rassist Harvey, 68, whose wife died of a heart attack soon after Fort Pillow State Prison fugitive Ronald Lewis Freeman broke into the couple's Marion, N.C., home, the governor said Wednesday.

Alexander offered the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Freeman, who fled the West Tennessee facility with four other inmates on Feb. 18.

Although Freeman was killed in a shootout with North Carolina authorities on March 7 and did not face trial, Alexander said he approved the reward because, "It seems to be the only right thing to do, under the circumstances."

The governor added, "Because of the report of the entry into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey, Ronald Freeman was killed."

Harvey's wife, 63-year-old Molly Harvey, died of a heart attack soon after Freeman was killed once he fled the couple's home.

Alexander said he would consider payment of an additional $5,000 in the case of one of Freeman's accomplices, James Clegg, as soon as Clegg's Tennessee trial on escape, kidnapping and murder charges is over.

The Harveys' son-in-law, Jerry D. Knighton of Marion, N.C., has claimed both the rewards on behalf of Harvey because of information he supplied authorities after Freeman was seen at the Harvey home.

Alexander said he was told by Knighton that a trust fund will be established for Harvey and that the money should be sent directly to the Marion, N.C., bank which will handle the fund.

Sheriff Bobby Haynes of McDowell County, N.C., said in a letter to the governor, "Rass Harvey is blind, on a very low income, and has incurred many expenses due to the death of his wife during the ordeal. His whole family was very instrumental in the location of the fugitives."

Arzo Carson, director of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation, also urged Alexander to grant Harvey the reward.

Clegg, recaptured March 7, faces trial in the Feb. 21 fatal shooting of Brownsville, Tenn., businessman Paul Windrow, 59.

Two of the escapees were recaptured soon after the breakout and the last was caught March 25 in California.

Study Urges Change In Farm Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farm policy should be changed so that large-scale commodity support programs are scrapped in favor of aid to individual farmers, says a report from the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

The report, released by the panel Wednesday, concludes that the present farm program has grown too costly to support.

"There may be substantial social and economic benefits of a 'smaller farm policy' which is more farmer-oriented and less volume- and commodity-based," the report said.

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, chairman of the committee, said farm programs have cost an estimated $50 billion during the past four years and could cost that much during the next four.

"A potential $100 billion in eight years. Never has so much done so little," Jepsen said.

The report concluded that eliminating support programs could jeopardize some 900,000 family farmers but that current market manipulation policies, exemplified by the payment-in-kind program of 1983, are ineffective.

"These farmers will suffer greatly if the public's current disenchantment with farm programs results in less federal assistance," the report said. "Large, successful farms merely will be denied the windfall to which they currently are entitled."

The $9.7 billion PIK program paid farmers not to plant by reimbursing them with surplus grain instead of cash.

The Reagan administration has been critical of many federal farm programs and has urged a more flexible, market-oriented approach to price supports. But the administration is not expected to make specific recommendations for revisions before the November elections.

Commodity price support programs have bolstered farm income by 25 to 40 percent in the past, the report said, but "the job simply has become too big and too unmanageable."

In 1973, agriculture's best year on record, the report said, 39 percent of the nation's farmers suffered losses. The 1982 farm program cost an estimated $12 billion, triple the previous year.

The committee listed the major options suggested by witnesses at 30 hearings conducted during the past three years.

Flooding Ruining Fall Crops

FORTESCUE, Mo. (AP) — Ray Morris and his neighbors won't have to worry about the price of soybeans, corn and wheat this fall.

Farmers in northwestern Missouri won't be getting a crop out of their Missouri River bottom land because the fields they had planted lie beneath two to three feet of water.

"Was looking pretty good until this," said Morris, sitting in the cab of his pickup truck Wednesday. The crop of soybeans he'd planted has gone to waste.

Morris and a few friends chatted near a dike keeping water from their small hometown. Without the dike, Fortescue — like a half dozen other communities around here — would be under water, they said.

On June 10, the rising Missouri River breached levees all along the northwestern edge of Missouri. The Missouri and its tributaries have flooded nearly 200,000 acres in northeastern Kansas and northwestern and north-central Missouri.

Estimates of agricultural damage top $80 million and are expected to go much higher. Officials say it could be next week before the water recedes.

In Fortescue, Morris said it would be at least a month before things dry out enough for him to enter his fields. His only option for making it through the year, he said, was "to go to the bank" and ask for another loan.

His lifelong friend, Bud Catron, added, "And cry and cry and cry."

The banks won't be eager to lend, because it would be at least 18 months before farmers would have a crop to sell, said Catron, a former banker.

Most farmers probably will plant wheat this fall in fields they normally planted with beans or corn, because they can harvest the wheat a few months earlier than other crops, Morris said.

"Be the quickest crop they can get. I'm thinking of doing that here," he said.

Forty miles to the southeast Wednesday, Don Chapman and Butch Wood rode in the rain toward Chapman's home. The pair followed a road near the town of Bean Lake, riding in a boat because the asphalt, which supported cars two weeks earlier, had disappeared under water.

The Missouri River had breached a levee at the lake, burying its namesake town.

Chapman pointed to an antique steam tractor in water up to its wheels. "It don't look like it's in too bad shape," he said. "But it's sitting on a trailer."
