Discovery Set To Go Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Countdown clocks at the Kennedy Space Center began their backward march Saturday for the maiden launch Monday of Discovery, the nation's newest $1.5 billion orbiter.

The traditional "call to stations" at the windswept launch pad came at 3 a.m. EDT when the countdown began toward Discovery's blastoff, scheduled for 8:43 a.m. Monday.

Shuttle commander Henry Hartsfield and co-pilot Michael Coats spent the morning practicing landings at the spaceport's 3-mile-long runway in a jet trainer rigged to mimic the shuttle's precise handling demands.

Swooping down from cloudy gray skies for repeated "touch and go" landings, the jet's roar shattered the morning calm at the sprawling spaceport. Three miles away, Discovery stood waiting.

Hartsfield, Coats and crewmates, Richard "Mike" Mullane, Steven Hawley, Judy Resnik and Charles Walker, arrived at Cape Canaveral Friday afternoon to begin final preparations for their seven-day mission.

If all goes well, the orbiter will glide to a touchdown on a dry lakebed landing strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on July 2.

Radio Use Upgraded By Police

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Less than 30 years ago Greenville policemen out on the street had to use street call boxes — telephones — to contact the station if they needed assistance.

Glenn Cannon, who retired as chief of the department a year ago after 27 years service, remembers most of the work was done by foot patrolmen. "We had to walk beats," equipped with only a gun and blackjack, he said.

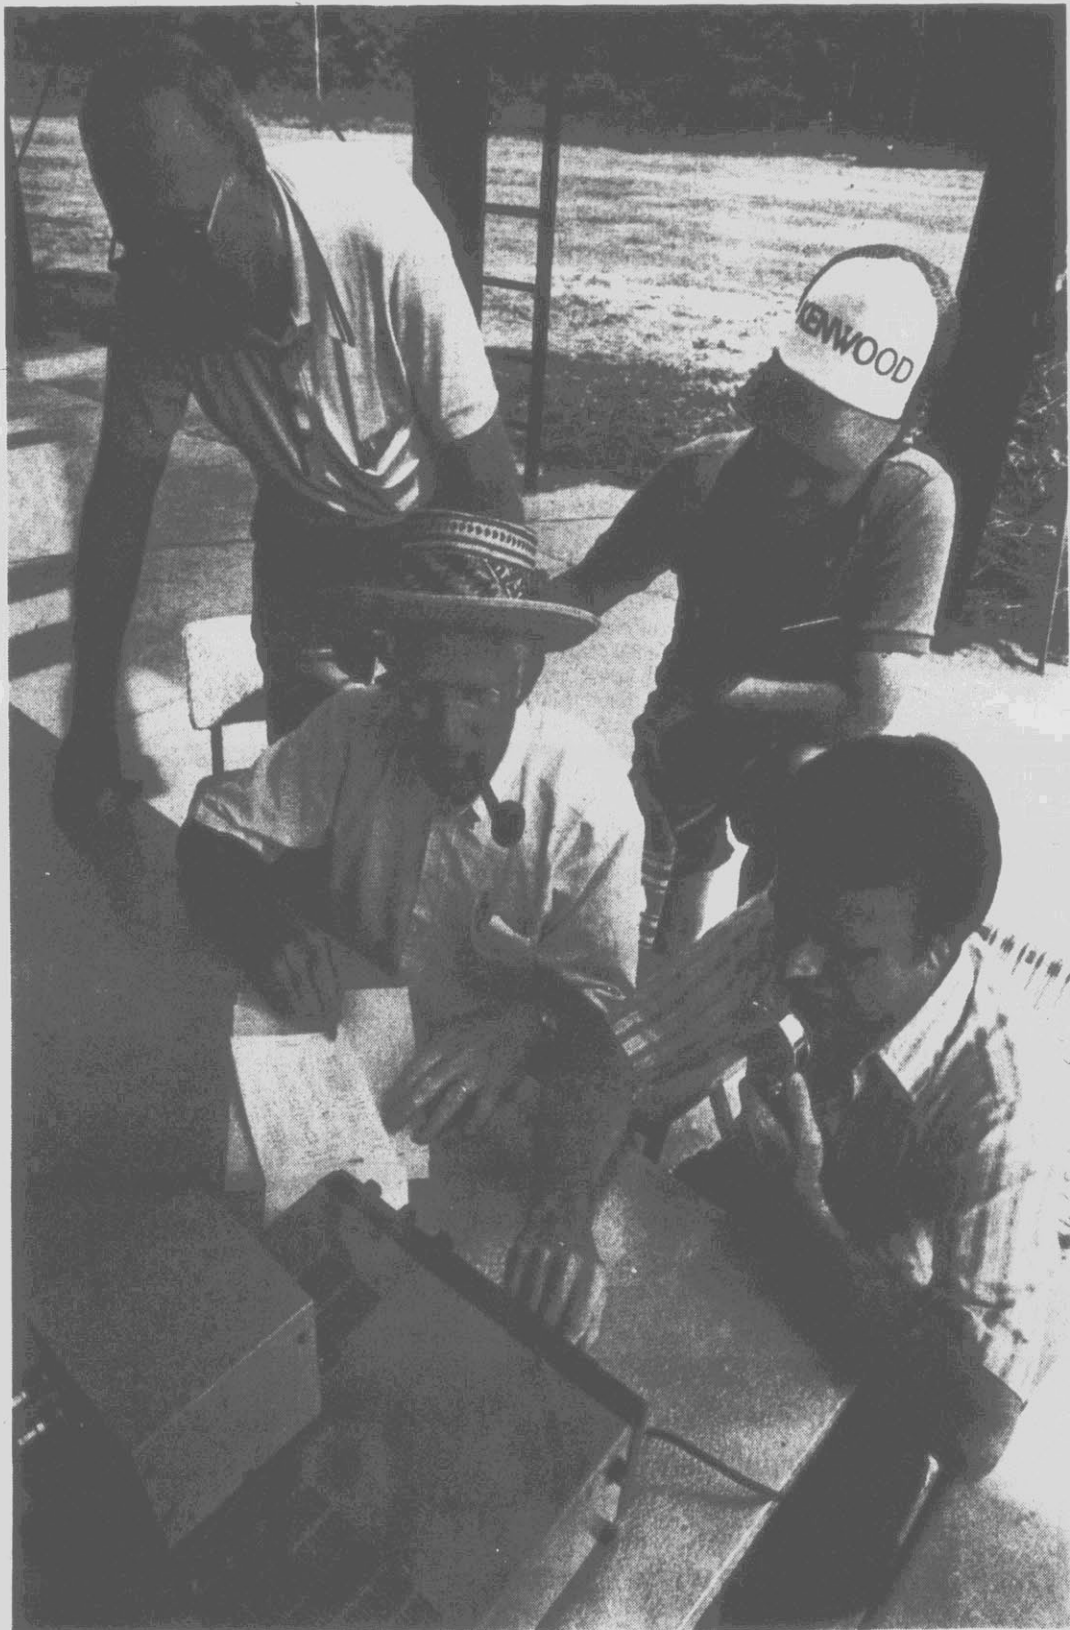

"If we arrested a drunk, we had to walk him to a telephone" placed on buildings at various locations throughout town for police use, "and call for a car to come and pick him up, or walk him down to the station."

If someone at the station wanted to contact an officer on a beat, they dialed the call box number and hoped the officer would hear the ring.

Today, police officers in the field use cars to patrol their beats and are linked to the station by radio.

Chief Ted Holmes said Greenville now has about 30 radio-equipped cars, and in the past year has bought "enough hand-held radio units so each patrol officer is furnished a hand-held unit while on duty."

emergency power sources. Pitt County amateurs were active in the wake of the March tornadoes, providing communications during the emergency and clean-up. Hams across the U.S. were taking part in the field day events sponsored by the American Radio Relay League. The Greenville organization has about 65 members. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Green Trial Resumes Monday

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Harvey Lee Green Jr. was convicted of attempted rape during a court-martial on July 26, 1982, while serving in the Army, according to a document presented at his sentencing trial Friday afternoon by District Attorney Thomas Haigwood.

Green, who changed his plea from innocent to guilty earlier this week, is charged with the beating deaths of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, in Young's 1-Hour Cleaners in Bethel on Dec. 19, 1983.

The jury of seven women and five men must decide whether Green will receive the death penalty or life imprisonment for the first degree murders. Testimony is to resume Monday in Pitt County Superior Court.

In testimony Friday, clerks at a grocery store in Bethel testified that Green had cashed rolled coins on two occasions. Previous testimony has indicated that rolls of coins were taken from the dry cleaners on the day of the murders.

Green used a roll of pennies to pay for five eggs which he purchased at Whitehurst's Grocery in Bethel Dec. 22, according to the store's operator, Olivia Bradshaw. She testified that she had Green sign his name and address to the roll of coins and later turned the roll over to the Bethel Police Department.

Cigarette Tax Cutback OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference committee of the U.S. House and Senate Saturday upheld an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., that will cut the tax on cigarettes from 16 cents a pack to 8 cents a pack next year.

The agreement came after a 21-hour marathon session to iron out 280 differences between tax bills passed by the House and Senate.

Helms voted for the 1982 bill doubling the cigarette tax, but added the sunset provision limiting the tax increase to three years. Under the amendment, the tax will return to 8 cents a pack Sept. 30, 1985.

"I feel sort of vindicated because my sunset amendment was upheld," Helms said this morning. "I am deeply grateful to (Sen.) Bob Dole and the Senate conference committee for standing by me. Bob Dole (R-Kan.) doesn't grow a stalk of tobacco in Kansas."

"I'm utterly delighted," said Helms. "We fought the cigarette tax for an entire day."

Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., said he was "delighted" with the agreement.

"It's what we've been working on for several months now," Martin said.

Dole, who had pressed Helms to provide a key vote to double the tax in 1982 said in an interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh he was trying to help Helms in his re-election battle with Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, who has used the cigarette tax issue in the campaign.

"It's not illegal to help somebody," Dole said.

The House had approved a bill that would have cut the cigarette tax from 16 cents to 12 cents a pack.

Shortly after midnight, House members of the committee proposed to stick with the 12-cent tax and agree to a Senate proposal not to raise the tax on hard liquor.

The Senate responded by proposing to eliminate both the cigarette and liquor tax provisions of the legislation.

Under the agreement, the cigarette tax will drop to 8 cents a pack and the current liquor tax of $10.50 per proof a gallon will rise to $12.50 on Sept. 30, 1985.

The full House and Senate must still vote on whether to accept the conference committee's agreement.

GOP Delegates Say 'Out' To Reporters

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Emotions ran high as the state Republican Party ended its convention Saturday after temporarily expelling reporters for a newspaper which some delegates said unfairly reported on the party.

The expulsion of two reporters for The News and Observer of Raleigh prompted a curt exchange at the back of the convention floor between Congressman Jim Martin, the GOP nominee for governor; Carter Wrenn, executive director of the National Congressional Club; and supporters of Sen. Jesse Helms who suggested the reporters be escorted off the convention floor.

Helms was not at the convention Saturday.

Not all delegates agreed with the expulsion of the reporters on Saturday morning.

"Some people got carried away and I'm not talking about two reporters...." Martin said. "The convention made a mistake. I'm glad they invited them back."

At a luncheon, Martin explained that there was "red meat on the floor and we went for it."

David Tyson, a Wake County delegate and Helms for Senate Committee worker, suggested the reporters be expelled because of a "shameful" front-page story Saturday on a possible plot by right-wing Salvadorans to kill the U.S. ambassador.

In the article, the newspaper quoted Helms as denying a published report that President Reagan had called him into the Oval Office to tell him that his activities were inflaming a delicate situation in El Salvador.

Tyson charged that the newspaper deliberately omitted quotes from Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., that Baker had arranged the meeting and that there was no reprimand from the president. Baker spoke at the convention banquet Friday.

The two reporters — Rob Christensen and Dan Hoover — declined to comment. Publisher Frank Daniels Jr. also had no comment.

Newspaper editor Claude Sitton was out of town and could not be reached for comment Saturday by

Runaways Have 'All Kinds Of Reasons'

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

When I was 7, I ran away. Not far though. I stopped just down the street about 100 yards from the bus stop. I was on my way to Raleigh, but I didn't have any money and the bus didn't run after 9 so I sat on the curb for what seemed like hours waiting for Mom and Dad to come looking for me.

They didn't. So I sat some more. To kill time, I opened the suitcase and inspected my supplies — a nightie, two cans of green beans and ... no can opener.

I didn't even have a coat. It was spring, but to my childish mind, going home to get that coat was as good an excuse as any to sidle up to the house and listen from behind the bushes for upset sounds. They'd be frantic if they loved me ... surely they'd come looking for me sooner or later?

They didn't. Instead, they patiently waited me out; waited for me to come to my senses. They didn't say a word when I finally crept back through the back screen door and tiptoed to my bedroom.

I never tried running away again — most kids don't — but each year about two dozen Pitt County-Greenville children do and get quite a bit farther than the bus stop down the street. Some get as far as Atlantic Beach, others hang around town at clubs and arcades while some hole up at friends' houses, according to Lt. Nelson Stater of the Greenville Police Department.

Their reasons? "I've heard all different kinds of explanations, kids who said their parents were too authoritarian, kids who wanted to be out on their own, kids who were crying out for attention, cases where drugs, abuse or family break-ups were involved, or maybe the kid was in trouble at school and didn't want to face his parents. There're all kinds of reasons," the veteran juvenile officer said.

Tim's disappearance during the summer of 1980 was based on practically all of the reasons cited by Stater. To protect his anonymity, Tim's name and some of the circumstances have been changed for this report.

"I had to get away, everything was bad," he said. "I was doing poorly in school, my parents were having troubles and because of that I felt they were on my back the whole time, taking it all out on me." Tim, now 19, ran away when he was 15 to a town in the North Carolina foothills — a 265-mile trek.

"I knew it wasn't right, but I had to do something," Tim explained. "They just wouldn't listen to anything I said. I was wrong, I was doing bad things, that's all they could see, they just didn't listen. Well they finally did after I got into more trouble. I guess I did the wrong things for the right reasons. I realize that now, but sometimes no other alternatives work," Tim said.

A situation like Tim's is not uncommon, according to Eve C. Rogers, chief court counselor for Pitt County. However, runaway situations do not always indicate that the parents or children are bad, Mrs. Rogers said.

"More often than not it's a problem in communication. Parents need to really listen to kids, not be undiplomatic authoritarians. Parents need to listen and realize that their children have feelings and good bases for those feeling just as adults do."

"However, sometimes it's rough to be a parent. It's tough to be open-minded as well as firm, but we must do these things. And parents, as well as children, must realize that they can get help to deal with impossible or seemingly impossible situations," she said.

The city and county offer help for parents and children through several agencies including the Pitt County Department of Social Services, Pitt County Court Counselors and the Pitt County Mental Health Center. If there's trouble at home, juvenile officers at the Greenville Police Department or the Pitt County Sheriff's Office can help, too.

Parents can also head off potential runaway situations by using the following methods, Stater said:

•Always let your children know where you are going and know where your children are going.

"This means officers can more freely get out of their cars to do foot patrolling, make inspections in bars ... just talk to people. This means they are available all the time, even when they're away from their vehicle on another call, and it improves officer safety considerably," Holmes said.

In addition to improving safety and accessibility, the radios provide officers in the field with information they need through the department's Police Information Network terminal, which Holmes describes as a "computerized link with the Department of Motor Vehicles," to access drivers license and vehicle registration information, and "ties with computerized criminal history data through NCIC (the National Crime Information Center).

This means that within seconds, policemen in the field can secure information on cars and drivers from North Carolina and other states, find out if a vehicle or other property has been stolen, find out if a person is wanted by another law enforcement agency.

The PIN system also allows the local department to exchange information and messages with other law enforcement agencies on an individual basis, supplementing the department's radio system which links Greenville police with other area departments, the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and the N.C. Highway Patrol.

But improvements are needed. "The technology and equipment (included in the main dispatching

•Have your children call when leaving from or arriving at a location.
•Enforce curfews and make sure children stick to well-lighted, well-traveled areas.

Stater also strongly suggested that parents have their children fingerprinted. Both the police and sheriff's departments fingerprint upon request. However, Stater suggested that parents purchase a fingerprinting kit from a local department store. "The kits use a different type of ink than we do, but they reproduce very, very well. Having a kit in your home will allow you to keep updated prints on your child," he said. Parents should also keep a current photo of their child along with the fingerprint card for identification purposes.

These measures are not only wise, but they serve as additional indicators of your love for your child, Stater said. They fulfill the often quoted phrase: "If they loved me, they'd worry about me," Stater said.

If a child does not show up and you either suspect that he or she has run away or that foul-play is involved, Stater advised that you immediately contact the police or sheriff's department.

"I don't know where people ever got the idea that you have to wait 24 hours before reporting a missing child," Stater said. "If you have reason to suspect that the disappearance is out of the ordinary, you need to call us as soon as you can so we can get to work before too much time passes — before the kid gets to Ohio or something."

Pitt County Deputy Brooks Oakley added that, as soon as a report is filed, law enforcement officers will go to the home, gather information on the missing child and begin the search. Most children can be found at a friend's house, at a favorite hangout or at the home of an admired adult friend, but if it becomes necessary, law enforcement agencies in neighboring towns and cities are notified, Oakley said.

Joe Davis, testified that when he left the cleaners at 1 p.m. on Dec. 19, seven to nine rolls of coins were on the shelf under the cash register. Davis said that when he returned to the cleaners the morning of Dec. 20, there were no rolled coins.

Herman Daniels testified that he had found a metal pipe on Dec. 24 while picking up litter in the yard of his mother's home at 314 S. Main St., Bethel. Daniels said the pipe was lying against the roots of the hedge and that he placed the pipe in a storage shed. He later turned over the pipe to the Bethel Police Department on Dec. 30.

The state rested its case after 20 witnesses testified about the incident at the cleaners and the events leading up to Green's arrest.

Evidence for the defense began late Friday. Defense attorney Jeffrey Miller questioned two Army sergeants about Green's conduct while he was stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. Both witnesses said Green had been dependable while he was under their supervision and that Green had been given much responsibility.

In a statement which Green is purported to have given to investigating officers, Green stated that he had needed money to cover bad checks he had written in his father's name, had entered the store with a toy pistol and had asked the female clerk (Miss Bland) for money. The statement went on to say that Green had fought with Miss Bland and a customer (Edmondson) and had hit them with a metal pipe Green picked up in the cleaners.

Green later led the officers to a hedge where he said he had placed the pipe after the murders and gave the officers the clothing he said he was wearing the night of the murders.

Earlier this week, Dr. Stan Harris, regional medical examiner, testified that both Miss Bland and Edmondson died as a result of "blunt injuries to the head" which could have been caused by being hit with a metal pipe.

Forensic specialists with the State Bureau of Investigation in Raleigh testified Friday morning that there were splashes of human blood on the pants Green said he had worn on Dec. 19 and that the hair fragments found on the metal pipe turned in to the police could have come from Edmondson's head. A specialist testified that no fingerprints were found on the steel pipe.

Motorist Injured

Hsueh-Ching Lin Wang of 2505-B Dickinson Ave. was slightly injured in a collision of his car and a vehicle operated by Mamie Jo Harrell of 116-A Riverbluff Road on Dickinson Avenue, according to Greenville police reports.

Wang was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released. Damages to the Wang car were estimated at $8,000 and $25 to the Harrell car.

telephone.

Tyson's suggestion brought cheers from the crowd and a standing ovation. Without further debate or a vote, convention chairman Barry McCarty of Elizabeth City asked the sergeant-at-arms staff to escort Christensen and Hoover outside.

More than a half dozen party staffers surrounded the writers and took them out as the crowd jeered and applauded.

"The cancer has been surgically removed," McCarty announced, adding that the newspaper had abused the party and its members with inaccurate stories. "If they can't get it right they won't get it at all."

Former Congressman Gene Johnston of Greensboro then asked that the reporters be allowed to return and told delegates their actions were "very much like those who burn books."

State Sen. William Redman, R-Iredell, said the newspaper articles did not bother him because he felt most North Carolinians could see through them to the truth. He called on the delegates to be "mature people" and allow the reporters back.

James Cain of Forsyth County asked that delegates support an alternate motion to readmit the reporters but express disapproval at the newspaper for "disregarding the truth" and unfairly reporting convention activities.

The delegates agreed to readmit the writers but they had left the building and did not return until later in the afternoon.

After the expulsion, Martin confronted Cain and Wrenn and demanded to know what was happening.

"A group of young conservatives are concerned that the N&O has never told the truth," said Cain, GOP platform committee chairman.

"I wished you'd consulted with me and with Jesse," Martin responded. "This is a terrible mistake."

Wrenn said everyone agreed the newspaper was biased against Republicans and said, "Let's just break this up."

"It was an emotional thing," said Party Chairman Dave Flaherty. "I jumped up too before I thought about it."

He said the action reflected a "deep-seated frustration" and thought many delegates had "been taking it from them (the newspaper) so long it was good to give it to them... I think we overreacted because of the heat of the moment."

Wrenn said the group made its point and said it was not planned before the convention.

"The whole thing was symbolic," he said.

Another emotional peak of the convention was the election of a national committee woman. Mary Alice Warren of Winston-Salem was narrowly re-elected.

Gulf Military Leaders Meet

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Military chiefs from six Persian Gulf nations held an emergency meeting in Saudi Arabia Saturday to work out a strategy against attacks on gulf shipping in the Iran-Iraq war.

Meanwhile, Iran rejected an Iraqi claim that Iranian gunners had shelled Iraqi border villages in violation of a U.N.-mediated moratorium on civilian attacks.

The start of the private meeting in Riyadh by military chiefs of staff from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman was held up until after the completion of the daylight observances of Ramadan, the Moslem holy season.

One of the goals of the meeting was expected to be creation of a joint command against Iranian air attacks on commercial shipping in the oil-rich region.

Arab diplomatic sources viewed the meeting as yet another step in a Saudi-led trend toward military preparedness, along with diplomatic action, to try to prevent a widening of the Iran-Iraq war, which began in September 1980.

The six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council decided to have the meeting after a dogfight June 5, in which Saudi Arabian jetfighters shot down an Iranian warplane over Saudi waters.

The council's secretary-general, Abdullah Bishara, said Saturday the meeting in the Arabian capital, was in line with the "political resolution of the GCC summit conference, which underscores self-reliance and development of indigenous defense capabilities."

Bishara said the meeting was "of special significance in view of the crucial stage the gulf region has been passing through. The meeting underscores the determination of the GCC powers to defend their interests and safeguard their own security."

In recent months, both Iran and Iraq have attacked commercial vessels to each other's block crude oil exports.

Three Kuwaiti and one Saudi oil tankers were raided by Iranian warplanes in recent weeks, prompting the Saudis to import more weapons from the United States and define an air defense zone broader than their territorial limits.

Pitt Board Oks Budget For PCC

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners moved a step closer to adopting a budget for the 1984-85 fiscal year Friday by giving tentative approval for funds for Pitt Community College.

The board also looked at portions of the city and county schools' budgets, but withheld approval. A review of those budgets will continue in the coming week.

The community college had requested $2.65 million for the coming year, including $2.08 million in capital outlay funds. That compares with $600,368 commissioners gave the school this year (plus an additional special appropriation of $2.16 million to fund a new building).

But County Manager Reginald Gray recommended a budget totaling $674,958 for 1984-85.

Friday, commissioners gave tentative approval to trimming an additional $79,262 in capital outlay money from what Gray had recommended, leaving a total PCC budget of $595,696 for 1984-85.

The Pitt County school system had requested local funds of $5.94 million for current expenses for the coming year ($5.19 million this year), including several new positions needed to maintain Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools accreditation standards. And Gray told the board Friday that he would recommend the $5.94 million.

While the county system's request in current expense amounted to a 9.15 percent increase, the city system's current expense request for $3.4 million in 1984-85, represents a 50.24 percent increase over the $2.26 million funded by the county this year.

The city's requests included $462,875 in what school officials termed "equalization" funds.

Gray told commissioners that he cut the requested $462,875 in equalization money, as well as another $82,200 from the city systems' request in making his recommendations.

While taking no action on the schools' budgets, commissioners seemed to agree with Gray's recommendations.

The board also discussed placing capital outlay funds requested by the two school systems for new construction in a capital reserve fund, rather than giving it directly to the schools in the coming year, although again they took no action.

Gray reminded commissioners that his recommendations for the two school systems for the 1984-85 included $1.8 million, or 23 percent, more local funds in the coming year than the systems received this year.

About 70 percent of the money raised through property taxes in Pitt County is spent for education, including support for the two public school systems and PCC.

Commissioners are to continue their work on the budget Monday morning, and have scheduled a meeting with the two boards of education for noon Monday.

Pitt Memorial Thriving Despite Patient Decline

It is not surprising that the patient census is down at Pitt County Memorial Hospital — from 13,120 in May 1983 to 12,631 in May 1984.

The downward trend follows that which is occurring nationally as revised medical policies cut down on hospital stays.

We are happy to see that hospital administrators are taking the situation into account in preparing their budget. Fred Brown, hospital vice president, said that, while this fiscal year's budget is running 7 percent under projections, expenses are 9 percent under.

Equally important, Brown said that the budget for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1 is being projected on the conservative side.

Even though patient load is down at the hospital there is growth in other areas. A new chief of cardiac surgery has been retained and the first heart surgery is planned for early July. The currently under construction radiation therapy center is also expected to open in October or November.

These and other services will continue to develop Pitt County Memorial as a regional medical center. The availability of new services will mean that people living in eastern North Carolina will be able to come here for procedures rather than traveling to far-off medical centers. That in itself promises growth for the hospital.

Alternative Needed For Disaster Relief

The County Commissioners last week accepted a bid of $1,601.99 for the remaining items which were collected for victims of the March 28 tornado.

Since a mountain of material, mostly used clothing, remained, that might not appear to be a great amount of money.

Still the county was faced with the problem of moving the items from New Greenville Warehouse before the tobacco selling season gets under way. It was pointed out that it could cost thousands of dollars to move the 10 to 12 truck loads of material to a new storage place and with no assurance that it could ever be used.

The huge amount of relief material was the result of outpourings of sympathy all over the nation. It should not be forgotten that much of it was distributed to the tornado victims when it was most needed. A giant yard sale raised $8,414 for the victims and the proceeds of the final sale will be added to this.

No one anticipated so much donated material coming in for disaster victims. Perhaps in the future we should consider this possibility and provide for shipping any surplus to other disaster areas, or making it available to the needy.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court wrestled the other day with as tough a problem as you are likely ever to find in criminal and constitutional law. The problem is this: How may we protect society from the really vicious child? And how, then, do we protect the child?

The questions arose in the context of a New York law that permits the "preventive detention" of juveniles in certain cases. Every state in the union has such a law, and the courts of eight states have upheld them. But until June 4, in the case of Schall v. Martin, the Supreme Court never had passed upon the matter. The effect of the court's 6-3 decision is to give juvenile courts a little more leeway in dealing with youngsters who present "serious risk" to the community.

The opinion leaves me of two minds. On balance, the decision merits applause. It is high time we began to think more about protecting

A call recently came into Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"How do you fix strawberry preserves?" the lady caller asked.

"Ma'am, this is the hospital," the operator answered.

"Well," said the lady indignantly, "As big as this place is surely someone knows how to fix strawberry preserves."

No doubt somebody there does.

We get calls for diverse reasons, too.

RALEIGH — Some people, when they get a little extra money, go right out and spend it. Others take that extra money and pay off some debts.

It's pretty safe to say that, collectively, the North Carolina General Assembly is more like the first group than the latter. Faced with a $600 million surplus this year, the Legislature has plans for spending every penny of it.

But one influential senator thinks the Legislature ought to begin acting like the people who use their extra money, their unexpected windfalls, to pay their bills. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, wants the Legislature to take $100 million and set it aside in a reserve fund that would be used to pay off the state's bonded indebtedness.

Rauch's proposal is contained in Senate Bill 733 which was filed on June 12. Under the proposal, the $100 million would be invested by the state treasurer and the earnings — probably about 12 percent or $12 million annually — would be used each year to help pay the state's debt of $590 million in bonds and $289

And someone called wanting to know the ferry schedule from Swan Quarter to Ocracoke.

And there was a business call from a man in Chicago. When we finished discussing business, he asked about the weather.

"Hot," we told him. "It's in the mid-90s here with little relief in sight."

"Well," he laughed. "We consider ourselves in a heat wave. It's been in the low 80s."

"We would call that a cold wave," we told him.

Staff writer Jerry Raynor was to attend a city school board meeting at the Greenville Middle School one evening last week. Jerry lives close by so he decided to walk across a field rather than drive.

He traversed the field and, to his surprise, found that an eight-foot chain link fence had been erected around the property. It was a long walk around and Jerry concluded that he could climb the fence, just as he had done as a youth.

He took off his shoes and threw them over and then commenced to climb the fence. Alas, his clothing caught on the sharp bars at the top and there was no going over or coming back. Fortunately some boys were playing ball nearby and they helped the victim off the fence, even throwing his shoes back over to him.

Jerry decided to take the long walk around the fence. He got to the meeting a little late and, to the delight of those attending, told the story of how he got off the fence. One of those there subsequently related the story to your columnist who has faithfully recorded it here.

million in interest. Now, the state appropriates money every year from the General Fund and plans to set aside $76 million for debt service this year. Rauch figures his $12 million in earnings would help ease the strain debt service puts on the General Fund.

Why not just take $100 million, pay off some bonds and avoid their interest? You can't do that, Rauch said. "The bonds are non-callable," he said. Besides, the state pays an average of only 8 percent on its bonds while it would earn 12 percent on its $100 million investment, he said.

"Any business person knows that when you have unexpected profits or a windfall that the smart thing to do is put a little away for a rainy day," Rauch says in arguing for his proposal. "Well, the state didn't expect a $575 million surplus so, now that we have it, it would make good business sense to put $100 million away that can be used for future needs."

There are some other benefits to Rauch's plan. First, putting that amount of money aside would impress the Wall Street bankers who lend money to the state and probably assure that the state keeps its top bond ratings which mean lower interest rates.

Also, if the $100 million isn't spent on programs which will be continued each year, then it won't be sitting in the base budget needing to be funded again next year. That would provide some added flexibility to budget-makers next year. They'd also have $12 million less in debt service to worry about.

While Rauch's idea is out of the mainstream of legislative planning this year, it doesn't come from outer space. There is precedent in North Carolina lawmaking for just such a debt retirement fund. In 1945, as World War II wound down, the Legislature put aside $55 million — a much healthier sum than the inflation ridden $100 million which Rauch proposes today — to retire debts. The plan worked and the state's debt was paid off, he says.

Dwight Quinn, chairman of the House Finance Committee, said he thought Rauch's plan "makes a lot of sense." But Quinn only smiled when asked if the proposal had any chance of passage.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the South turned its back on native son Jimmy Carter in the 1980 election, it looked as if the conservative old confederacy might be locked up in the Republican column and taken for granted for years to come.

But with the rise of Jesse Jackson as a Democratic presidential candidate, and presumably Democratic registration, among blacks, the South appears to be a make-or-break region for Reagan in 1984.

There are now enough new black, and presumably Democratic, voters in the seven Southern states the GOP narrowly won in 1980 to tip the balance away from Reagan.

So Reagan, as he begins contemplating a strategy for amassing the 270 electoral votes needed for re-election, must figure out a way to hold the South, and that means either dampening the black turnout or increasing the white turnout.

And in this day and age, open appeals to white voting blocs on the basis of race are passe, at least at the presidential level.

That leaves the Reagan-Bush '84 committee with few options.

In the South, as everywhere else, the Republicans are using their vast financial advantage over the Democrats to buy computer time to identify every possible GOP voter — using drivers' license information, mailing lists and zip codes as prospecting devices.

They also have recognized that America is more mobile than ever, and that when people move from a prosperous suburb in one state to prosperous GOP territory in another, they may have forgotten to re-register. In addition to gathering in unregistered natural Republicans, the party is taking advantage of easier state rules for absentee voting, planning to bombard likely absentees with mailings on behalf of Reagan.

Absentee ballots are used by invalids or others who are too ill to vote, or, in most cases, those who are away from home on business or pleasure on Election Day. That latter category tends to be heavily Republican, and it is the type of voters that put California Gov. George Deukmejian over the top after it appeared last election night that Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley had defeated him.

But there is one other way that Reagan can go after the Southern white vote without appearing to be racist. And that is to campaign extensively in the region before crowds that by the nature of the event they are attending are sure to be almost all white.

The tip-off is Reagan's upcoming travel schedule. At the end of June, he will be in Baltimore — in certain respects still a Southern city — to attend the National Square Dance Convention.

And on the Fourth of July, Reagan will celebrate Independence Day in Daytona, Fla., at the Firecracker 400 stock car race.

Court Faces Two-Pronged Question

society from murderous young punks and less about protecting the punks' precious civil liberties. But we ought also to reflect that these liberties are indeed precious, and that bad judges may abuse them.

These were the facts: In December 1977, a 14-year-old named Martin was charged with first-degree robbery, second-degree assault and criminal possession of a loaded gun. Another 14-year-old, Kenneth, was arrested in 1978 for attempted robbery. A third 14-year-old, Luis, was charged in 1979 with an attempted armed robbery in which he and four others were accused of putting a gun to a man's head; this was Luis' fourth appearance on felony charges, including the knifing of a student. In each case the evidence of guilt was overwhelming. At arraignment, each of the youths was put under preventive detention, one for eight days, one for 13 days, the third for 21 days. The Family Court found that each of the defendants presented a serious risk that, if released, he would commit new crimes before trial. The three cases were lumped together for Supreme Court review.

In writing for the high court, Justice William Rehnquist posed two questions: Does the New York statute serve a legitimate state objective? Are the procedural safeguards sufficient to accord the juvenile offender the protections known as "due process of law"?

WASHINGTON — New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo is pushing hard for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to keynote the Democratic National Convention, but he may end up with the job himself — thanks to Walter F. Mondale's personal preferences.

In a private chat with Kennedy here recently, Cuomo told the senator he would add "music and poetry" as keynotes in San Francisco. Kennedy did not say no (and his aides say he would accept if asked). Still smarting over criticism that his truculence at the 1980 New York convention got Jimmy Carter's re-election campaign off to a bad start, he is eager to assist his party in whatever it asks.

Cuomo then pushed Kennedy for keynoter in a telephone talk with Mondale during which the governor definitively removed himself from consideration as vice president. But Mondale, in effect, asked, "Why don't you speak for yourself, Mario?" by suggesting him for keynoter speaker.

A press backgrounder by national security adviser Robert McFarlane during the London summit angered Secretary of State George Shultz and top aides — the one sour note inside the Reagan delegation at the otherwise successful session.

Shultz was sore that McFarlane ended weeks of agonized worry about the fate of Andrei Sakharov, the famed Soviet dissident and nuclear physicist, by giving full credibility to Soviet claims that he is well and safe. Shultz and his diplomats are not all that sure. A footnote: Treasury Secretary Donald Regan infuriated President Francois Mitterrand's French socialist government by saying it had realized its mistake in forsaking capitalism and would not follow Reagan's American example. To a man, the U.S. delegation praised Reagan for one-upping Paris for a change.

Rejecting advice from many Democratic politicians, Walter F.

Mondale's managers are confronting their Jimmy Carter problem, head-on by scheduling the former president for a prime-time appearance at the Democratic National Convention.

They figure that since Mondale's role as Carter's vice president is going to be a campaign issue anyway, there is no way to "hide" the ex-president. With Mondale the putative nominee, scheduling of convention speakers is in his hands.

Although party insiders are divided about how to handle Carter at the convention, there is a clear consensus that Mondale blundered by inviting vice president prospects to Minnesota to be interviewed

To the editor:

Physicians' concern for the well-being of the citizens of North Carolina was indicated by your editorial on May 10. You specifically mentioned three resolutions recently adopted by the North Carolina Medical Society House of Delegates: 1) required use of seatbelts, shoulder harnesses and headrests in moving motor vehicles, 2) forbidding off-road motorcycle racing by those under 16 years of age, and 3) stronger curbs on drunk driving. It is noteworthy that the seatbelt resolution originated in the Pitt County Medical Society.

A number of additional constructive resolutions were adopted at the annual North Carolina Medical Society meeting in Pinehurst. For example, it was urged that all North Carolina Society members sign living wills and encourage others to do likewise. A living will is a legal document expressing one's wish not to prolong life unnecessarily by artificial and extraordinary means when one is terminally ill. This resolution also was authored by the Pitt County Medical Society.

In addition, the State Medical Society passed resolutions supporting 1) a one-year voluntary freeze on physician fees, 2) improvement of maternal and child health care, 3) preservation of local Boards of Health, 4) increased health education in schools, and 5) equitable DRG rates for urban and rural hospitals (Pitt County Memorial Hospital currently is classified as rural and reimbursed at a lower rate than the other three major teaching hospitals in North Carolina).

Again, thank you for the "good press" concerning the Medical Society's role in enhancing the quality of life in North Carolina.

To the editor:

Today, children, is Current Events. And the topic is: How shall we kill Grandma Barfield? How many of you have heard of Grandma Barfield? H-m-m, not many. Well, Grandma Barfield killed three people with rat poison, and now she is in jail and we are going to kill her next month. We can kill her in an electric chair that will shock her to death, or we can give her a shot like a flu shot except that it will be poison and will kill her. Does anybody have anything to say about how we should kill Grandma Barfield? Annie?

'How about with rat poison? Like she did.'

'Oh.'

'Billy? You raised your hand?'

'Yes, ma'am. I heard my mama and daddy talk about this, and my daddy says if Grandma Barfield had an electric chair, would it be OK if she had killed those people in her electric chair?'

'Billy! That's silly!'

'That's what mama said. But daddy said killing is killing, no matter how. But mama said we're killing Grandma Barfield to punish her for killing. Then daddy said, who is going to punish us for killing Grandma Barfield?'

'And what did your mama say to that?'

'Mama said Grandma Barfield did bad. And daddy said, that's right. But daddy said (it) like this: He said God made everybody and God is in everybody because he is the father of everybody. And he said God is in Grandma Barfield. He said if we kill Grandma Barfield we are killing God, too.'

'Billy! That's shocking! Oh, my! Thank you, Billy. My! Well, class, how should we kill Grandma Barfield? Betsy?'

Only The Cause Is Lacking

earlier part of the decade was much like that in the sleepy 1950s.

Today, student activists are again confined to the fringe. Their issues are diverse. As many identify with anti-abortionist goals as oppose U.S. businesses with interests in South Africa.

The difference lies mostly in the lack of a unifying cause. Integration and environmental protection, for example, emerged as battles to win. Working for Ralph Nader was akin to working on a presidential campaign; there was so much to do, and seemingly so little time.

Now that most of the major work is done, special interests have taken over. Mass movements have become institutions. Even Nader's causes have lost some of their immediacy and, consequently, their appeal to bright college students has deteriorated.

Presuming that college campuses, like the nation as a whole, undergo swings between activism and complacency, the American student could retake center stage by the end of the decade. If accompanied by a draft, major U.S. military intervention in Central America or elsewhere would be a likely catalyst. Many issues today — rampant ethics-law abuses by an administration, for example — might find a bigger constituency than they're enjoying now.

In the meantime, colleges may have to sustain whatever public interest spirit flickers in students. That means, in part, emphasizing the correct mix of self-interest and common interest in career choices. It also means that schools support those students who want to do good works, even if not in the swamplands of Mississippi.

One example of what colleges can do comes from Stanford University. This year, Stanford awarded its first "public service fellowships" to 14 of 72 applicants to help underwrite some, if not all, of the expenses of their summer-long, public-interest projects.

Under Stanford's program, which grew out of a public service conference held last winter, one student plans to work with Salvadoran refugees in Los Angeles; another will work at a clinic on an Indian reservation. Several students will work in clinics dedicated to children of battered wives. Two are even scheduled to aid Mother Theresa's Nobel Prize-winning efforts in Calcutta, India.

Stanford President Donald Kennedy has not committed his school to reauthorizing the program next year, but even he has termed the program's popularity evidence of "a yearning to serve which we are just beginning to tap..." That statement may indicate that he's willing to give the program an extended try. Other schools may want to follow suit.

It's no secret that students went without subsidies to help fight segregation. But the economics have changed since then. Were more students rolling in cash, more might also be dedicating their free time to righting social wrongs. The little assistance that academia can provide could help bring public interest and self-interest back into balance.

Timing

The successful test of an anti-ballistic missile against a dummy one in space could not come at a better time for President Reagan's campaign to get more funds for his "Star Wars" program.

It also vindicated the lifetime work of Professor Grindle Grindlewald, who was the first to put forward the theory that anything man could put into space he could also shoot down.

Ridiculed in the scientific community for years, Grindlewald may now go down in history as the Father of World War III.

I found the old man in his home in Falls Church, Va.

He took me into his garage and showed me sketches dating back to 1962 covered with mathematical calculations, and then told me his story.

"After the Soviets launched Sputnik, everyone in America panicked except me. I went to see Kennedy's people in the White House and said, 'There is only one answer to Sputnik. We have to launch a crash program to shoot it down.' They told me the president had a better idea. America would develop satellites of its own, and compete peacefully with the Soviets in space. Space, Kennedy insisted, must not be used as a launching pad for war.

"So he created NASA and sent manned and unmanned satellites into the sky, without giving any thought to their military value. Every time I saw one go up I got sick.

"Pretty soon there were hundreds of satellites swooping around the sky. It made me furious. While other space scientists were working to get more of them into space I decided to devote my life to shooting them down."

"You were way ahead of your time."

Grindlewald said, "First I went to NASA and asked them if they would finance my research. No one would listen to me. They said the space program was man's last chance to improve the quality of life on earth and to unlock the secrets of the universe.

"Then I went to Congress with my dream. I asked them to let me shoot down one communications satellite to prove that it could be done. My timing was off because our astronauts had just landed on the moon and the country was brainwashed into believing this accomplishment was the dawn of a new civilization. I had to laugh.

"What finally saved me was Vladimir Richevsky, a Soviet scientist who also had deep hatred of using space for peaceful purposes. We met at 'Star Trek' convention at Disneyland and exchanged views. I told him if he would let me steal his anti-satellite weapon plans I could prove the Soviets were going to use space to launch first-strike attack on the U.S. Then Congress would give me funds to develop my program. In exchange I would let him steal my plans so he could prove to the Kremlin we were working on a top-secret strategy to shoot down their satellites. Then he could get all the rubles he needed from the Kremlin to finance his research.

"He naturally agreed, and now thanks to that meeting the U.S. and U.S.S.R. are on a collision course in space."

"Weren't you afraid of being arrested for exchanging secrets with the Soviets?"

"What secrets? Satellites are sitting ducks. All you have to do is aim a laser beam at one and it goes POOF!"

"You gave the space program a whole new lease on life," I said.

Grindlewald said modestly, "I never doubted we could do it. Once I proved the Soviets were up to their ears in space warfare research I had President Reagan's ear."

Greenwich Plays It Seriously

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The idea of Greenwich Meridian Day is to see how quickly time flies, whether or not the participants are having fun as they mark the 100th anniversary of the creation of the landmark from which time is measured.

There will be fun to spare Tuesday morning in the London, England, borough of Greenwich as Royal Air Force planes fly overhead and children below hold hands to form a human chain at the longitude of zero degrees, zero minutes, zero seconds longitude.

"That's where time begins," said Diana Chessel, a spokeswoman for the British Post Office, sponsor of festivities on that side of the Atlantic Ocean.

The British celebration "is really for children and for the children at heart," Ms. Chessel said.

But 72 degrees, 35 minutes and 56 seconds of longitude west, in Greenwich, Conn., things will be somewhat more solemn as officials speak to the importance of the day and the technological accomplishments of man over the past century.

The big excitement here will occur at the main post office when Postmaster Bill Line of Greenwich, England, arrives dressed in garb typical of 1884 and hand-carrying a letter from the mayor of England's Greenwich to Roger J. Pearson, first selectman of Connecticut's Greenwich, a New York City suburb named after the British borough and chartered in 1854.

The trip, via supersonic Concorde and Rolls-Royce touring car, is to take about 8½ hours, far less than the minimum three days it takes for letters to reach one Greenwich from the other by conventional mail.

Without considering the five-hour time difference between the two cities, the letter will arrive in Connecticut about an hour after it leaves London's Heathrow Airport.

As noted in local times, it is to leave a special mailbox at the Greenwich Observatory in England at 8 a.m., the airport at about 10 a.m. and arrive in Connecticut by 11:30 a.m. EDT.

The outside envelope will have four specially designed stamps depicting the significance of the meridian, which was established June 26, 1884, as the base from which the world's 24 time zones are measured.

Greenwich, Conn., Postmaster Victor F. Mann Jr., who designed a special cancellation mark for the commemorative stamps, will accept the letter from Line and co-deliver it to Pearson. To him, the job is not to be taken lightly.

"We're taking this seriously," Mann said. "I wouldn't say it's funny. This is serious. It's the 100th anniversary of the Greenwich Meridian and that's never been celebrated before.

"It's going down in history in this country. The U.S. government takes everything seriously."

Smithsonian Pulled A Hoax

Back in November 1932, a 60-foot granite shaft was dedicated at Kitty Hawk to commemorate the flights there by Wilbur and Orville Wright.

Orville Wright was present that day to accept the monument on behalf of himself and his brother, who had died 20 years before. Speakers included Secretary of War Patrick Hurley, Governor-elect J.C.B. Ehringhaus and Rep. Lindsay C. Warren. A letter of congratulations from President Herbert Hoover was read.

One major ingredient, however, was missing. The Kitty Hawk, the fragile craft in which the brother had ushered in the air age there on Dec. 17, 1903, was not present. It was hanging in the British Science Museum at South Kensington in London. Orville Wright had sent it there after the Smithsonian Institution gave the credit for the invention of the first airplane to Samuel P. Langley, a noted scientist and a former secretary of the Smithsonian. In doing this, the U.S. government museum in Washington was guilty of an outright hoax. This came after Langley's death and involved chicanery he would not have approved.

According to history, Langley had a contract with the Army to develop a flying machine, which he called the aerodome and which he tested in Washington on Oct. 7, 1903, while the Wrights were working feverishly at Kitty Hawk to get their craft into the air. It was a complete fiasco. According to newspaper accounts, Langley watched as the aerodome sped down a 70-foot track and then plunged into the Potomac River, like the proverbial lead balloon. Charles Manly, the pilot, had to be fished from the river.

"At no time was there any semblance of flight," said the New York Times which labeled Langley's aircraft "a complete failure." Langley tried again on Dec. 9, only eight days before the Wrights' first successful flights in a powered, heavier-than-air craft. This time, the failure of the Langley machine was even more ignominious. This time it had barely cleared the end of the track before its wings collapsed and it sank into the river. This time Manly was trapped in the wreckage and had to be rescued again. "Buzzard a Wreck," read the Washington Post headline.

The chicanery came 11 years later after the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rendered a decision in favor of the Wright Co. in its patent infringement suit against Herring-Curtiss Co. and pioneer aviator Glenn H. Curtiss. The decision recognized the Wright patent and enjoined Curtiss from manufacturing or selling airplanes in which two ailerons operated to produce different angles simulta-

Whereupon Curtiss proposed to the Smithsonian that he be allowed to restore the Langley plane and demonstrate that it was capable of flying. He presumably figured that if he could prove the Wright plane was not really the first plane capable of flight, his cause would be strengthened and the Wright case weakened when a follow-up suit was filed. The Smithsonian accepted the offer and agreed to pay $2,000 for the restoration.

In April 1914, Langley's plane was removed from storage and taken to the Curtiss plant at Hammondsport, N.Y., where it was rebuilt. However, the restored plane was not a fair replica of the Langley craft. The New York Times said that Curtiss made 35 structural changes in the plane and Orville Wright said some of the changes embodied aeronautical principles which he and Wilbur Wright had discovered. Curtiss did manage to get the restored plane off the ground twice for about five seconds each time.

Whereupon, the Smithsonian Institution proclaimed in its 1914 annual report that Curtiss' tests had demonstrated that Langley's aerodome "with its original structure and power ... is capable of flying with a pilot and several hundred pounds of useful load. It is the first aeroplane in the history of the world of which this can be truly said." That statement sparked a dispute between Orville Wright and the Smithsonian which was climaxed in 1928 when Wright shipped the Kitty Hawk to England, touching off a furor in the United States.

The dispute continued until 1942 when the Smithsonian finally caved in. Dr. Charles D. Abbott, who had succeeded Dr. Charles E. Walcott as the institution's secretary in 1928, finally wrote Orville Wright that "it is everywhere acknowledged that the Wright brothers were the first to make sustained flights in a heavier-than-air machine at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, December 17, 1903." Abbott went on to say that the flights of the Langley plane at Hammondsport, "having been made long after flying had become a common art, and with changes in the machine indicated by Dr. Wright's comparison ... did not warrant the statement published by the Smithsonian Institution that these tests proved the Langley machine of 1903 was capable of sustained flight, carrying a man."

Orville Wright was satisfied, the place of the Wright brothers in history as inventors of the airplane was buttressed and the way was cleared for the return of the Kitty Hawk plane to the United States six years later.

Oil Is The Key Factor

Here are some questions and answers about Persian Gulf oil:

Q. What makes the Persian Gulf so important?

A. About 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil supply, or about 7.5 million barrels daily, is shipped south out of the Persian Gulf through the narrow Strait of Hormuz.

Iran, which has been at war with Iraq since September 1980, borders the gulf to the north and east. Its main oil terminal at Kharg Island is in the northern section of the gulf and some tankers headed to and from the island have been attacked by Iraqi planes. Iranian aircraft have attacked commercial ships in neutral waters to the south of Kharg Island in retaliation. Iran also has threatened to block all shipments out of the gulf if its shipments are halted.

Other gulf nations, all oil producers, are Iraq, located to the northwest; and Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, all on the western border. The Persian Gulf flows into the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea through the Strait of Hormuz at Oman.

Q. How has the stepped up fighting affected oil shipments?

A. Insurance rates on shipments of oil from northern regions of the gulf have soared. Iran, to keep its business, has offered discounts of up to $2.50 a barrel to reimburse customers for the added expenses. Kuwait has started shuttling oil in its own tankers to the relative safety of the Gulf of Oman for loading onto customers' tankers.

Meanwhile, the United States has provided escorts for oil tankers chartered to haul fuel in the gulf for the Navy.

Viets Stage Partial Withdrawal

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — After a day-long journey, some 3,000 Vietnamese soldiers arrived here Saturday in a partial troop withdrawal from Cambodia that officials said was proof of improved security in that nation.

Foreign journalists invited to witness the ceremonies on the convoy route from the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh to Ho Chi Minh City — formerly Saigon — saw about 150 military trucks and jeeps carrying troops waving Vietnamese and Cambodian flags. Trucks towed half a dozen pieces of artillery and there were several armored personnel carriers in the caravan.

Vietnam has said this withdrawal, when completed by the end of the month, will bring out about 10,000 soldiers. Western intelligence agencies estimate that Vietnam has 150,000-170,000 troops in Cambodia. About 10,000 soldiers also were withdrawn last year, according to the Vietnamese government in Hanoi.

Skirmishes along the Cambodia-Vietnam border exploded into a full-scale invasion by Vietnamese troops in December 1978. The Communist Khmer Rouge, whose radical regime had forcibly resettled city dwellers into the country to grow crops and was blamed for widespread atrocities, were overthrown the next month and a Vietnamese-backed Communist government was installed.

Since then, Vietnamese and Cambodian government troops have been trying to stamp out an alliance of Khmer Rouge guerrillas and anti-communist forces loyal to Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Son Sann, leader of the Khmer National People's Liberation Front.

A coalition of the opposition groups is recognized by the United Nations as Cambodia's government.

ACLU Cites 'Violations' In Sect Raid

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A state police raid aimed at gaining temporary custody of 110 children of a reclusive religious sect was a "massive deprivation" of citizens' rights, a civil liberties leader said Saturday.

The children were taken from their homes by 90 state troopers just after dawn Friday in an effort to determine whether church elders had physically abused them. The church acknowledges it disciplines youngsters by striking them with wooden rods.

The operation was foiled by state

District Judge Frank Mahady, who refused to give the state 72-hour temporary custody to examine the children. The youngsters, who waited in an armory in nearby Newport while the judge heard each case, were sent home hours later.

Seventy of the children were identified during the court proceedings, and although the state's request for custody was rejected, the cases were continued, officials said. Parents of 40 other youths refused to reveal their identities, prompting Mahady to dismiss those cases outright.

"It's probably the most massive deprivation of the rights of citizens of Vermont in Vermont's history," said ACLU director Scott Skinner. "Clearly, I would imagine if these people wanted to pursue legal action against the state...they would have a fairly strong claim for damages."

A second round of court hearings for the children who were identified is expected to begin within a month. During those proceedings, the judge would determine whether the children were abused. A third hearing would determine how the state should care for the children.

"I think the raid was partially successful," David Wilson, Vermont administration secretary, said Saturday. "We have begun ... ascertaining what we need to know about two-thirds of the children and I think we have learned a whole lot more in terms of the conditions these children were living under."

Wilson said top state officials would meet in the next few days to plot strategy.

The fundamentalist church group, which has been in Vermont for five years, has about 350 members. Nearly half its members are under 18, while about 70 are under age 5.

Church policy is set by a group of 12 elders who punish misbehaving children. One of the church's leaders, Charles "Eddie" Wiseman, has been charged with simple assault for the alleged seven-hour beating of a 13-year-old girl who was left with 89 welts on her body. The girl's parents said their daughter was beaten because she lied.

"I think the state did the right thing," said state Rep. Frank Manning, a Republican who represents the 1,500 people of Island Pond, a community about 20 miles from the Canadian border. "I'm disappointed in the outcome of the case. This cult is a cancer on our community."

A four-person team from the state attorney general's office has been investigating the church for more than a year. The investigation centered around the handling of the children and questions of abuse and truancy.

The sect, founded in Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1972, operates 11 businesses in Vermont, including a 24-hour restaurant.

Diplomat Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Provided only with a copy of a photograph, police on Saturday investigated the disappearance of an East German diplomat last seen entering his midtown apartment three days before.

Police leads to the whereabouts of Dietmar Wahl amounted to "nothing. Absolutely nothing," said Sgt. Peter Ruane, a police spokesman. He and Brian Carlson, a State Department spokesman in Washington, said officials had no reason to think Wahl had defected.

Ruane said the East German mission to the United Nations, where Wahl works as an attache, provided police only with a photocopied photograph of the 38-year-old diplomat.

The mission reported Wahl missing Friday, two days after he last was seen entering his midtown apartment.

Barge Hits Causeway

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A tug that had just passed under the Lake Pontchartrain Causeway turned and smashed a barge into the 24-mile bridge Saturday, knocking down 168 feet of the northbound roadway. No one was hurt.

A computerized radar system to guard against such accidents is due to be installed next month, said Causeway General Manager Earl Broom.

Traffic was rerouted onto the parallel but separate southbound bridge.

No cars went over when a barge pushed by the tug Seelos rammed pilings, pulling down two 84-foot-long concrete slabs of the major connection between New Orleans and parishes across the lake, Broom said.

"We have eyewitnesses to the collision and no vehicle went overboard," he said.

Pilings supporting two sections of the northbound bridge caved in, taking the concrete deck slabs with them.

Veering Car Hits People In Food Line

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A speeding car veered out of control and plowed into a crowd lined up for a food giveaway at a church Saturday, killing two people and injuring at least 16 in a bloody scene one official said resembled a "war zone."

People were lined up outside the New Psalmist Baptist Church on the city's north side to receive cornmeal, flour, honey and powdered milk from a federal food distribution program when the accident occurred at 12:24 p.m.

The car apparently turned a corner at high speed and veered across the street onto the sidewalk, then struck the steps at the side door where the food was being passed out. Witnesses and hospital officials said those killed were a 63-year-old man and a 3½-year-old boy, who were not identified.

The uninjured driver, identified as Sammy Bates, 33, of Philadelphia, was arrested at the scene after officers smelled alcohol on his breath, said police Lt. Bob Paskevicius.

Bates was charged with drunken driving, two counts each of homicide by vehicle and involuntary manslaughter, and 21 counts each of aggravated assault, simple assault and recklessly endangering another person, said Cpl. Michael Dwyer.

Sgt. Ray Carpenter, the first officer on the scene, said 25 to 30 people were lying on the concrete sidewalk when he arrived. Three people were pinned under the bronze 1975 Buick involved in the accident.

"I didn't know who to help first," said Carpenter. "It's the worst (accident) I've seen in my 15 years."

After the most seriously injured were taken to hospitals and police cleared away bystanders, the sidewalk remained covered with shoes, clothing and pools of blood. The concrete steps leading to the side door where the food was distributed were broken and pushed several feet by the force of the vehicle.

The car's windshield was smashed and the left bumper and fender were crinkled by the accident. Paskevicius said a woman passenger in the car was taken to a hospital for a head injury.

Seven people, including one man who later died, were taken to Episcopal Hospital, said Pia Sanders, the hospital's administrator on call. She declined to give the names of any victims, saying relatives had not been notified.

The six surviving victims at Episcopal all appeared to be seriously injured, many with fractures, Mrs. Sanders said.

Parents Face Jail Rather Than Testify

HOUSTON (AP) — Bernard and Odette Port aren't talking about the stains police say were found on the stairs in their home, the bullet hole in the photo on the wall.

The Ports say they are willing to go to jail rather than testify in the case of their 17-year-old son, accused of murdering a female postal worker.

Twice, they have refused to answer a grand jury's questions about the woman's death, even though a judge granted them immunity and ordered them to testify.

The Ports say they believe the same protection granted spouses against incriminating each other should be extended to parents and children. They also say the laws of their religion, Judaism, prevent them from testifying against a family member.

If on Wednesday they refuse to testify again, the Ports could be charged with contempt of court. They would face jail while their son remains free on $20,000 bond.

David Port pleaded innocent to murder Friday. He also waived his right to a grand jury hearing in the hope of keeping his parents from going to jail.

But prosecutors say they are going to continue the grand jury investigation because they have no other witnesses who could testify to key facts of evidence.

Randy Schaffer, an attorney representing the Ports, said the state could be fishing for facts that could turn the murder charge into a capital murder indictment. Under Texas law, a person convicted of a murder committed in the commission of a felony can be executed.

"If they speak, it could mean that the state could kill their son," he said.

The Ports also believe, he said, that family rights are superior to the needs of the state, and that to preserve civilization, civilization must first preserve family.

Prosecutors have denounced the Ports' arguments as a desperate ploy to withhold information the state may need to prosecute their son.

"Why should we cut them (the Ports) some slack and let them go running around free ... shooting a finger at the court's order?" Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. said.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said that to complete the murder investigation the state needs information only the Ports have.

The Ports' nightmare started June 7.

That afternoon, in their fashionable west Houston neighborhood, Debora Sue Schatz, a 23-year-old Postal Service worker, was reported missing. Postal authorities said the woman disappeared while helping deliver mail on a route that included the Port home. Her delivery vehicle was found nearby.

David did not return home that night. The next morning, his parents reported him missing.

By then, police had used bloodhounds to trace the path Miss Schatz took while delivering mail. The scent ended at the Port home.

Police asked to search the home, and Port at first granted permission.

After calling a lawyer, however, he told officers to leave, said an affidavit filed by Police Officer D.L. Collier.

Investigators obtained a search warrant and returned. They found stains and bullet holes, one of them through a picture of Port, and a collection of weapons, the affidavit said. Port gave them a .22-caliber pistol that recently had been fired and said he found it in David's room, it said.

Oil Truck Explodes

HIALEAH, Fla. (AP) — A tanker carrying 8,300 gallons of gasoline swerved to avoid a car, struck a utility pole and exploded Saturday, killing the truck's driver and destroying one house, authorities said. About 50 people were evacuated from a four-block area while about 100 firefighters battled the blaze for three hours, said Hialeah Fire Department spokesman Hugh Caines. Witnesses told authorities they heard the truck driver, trapped in his cab, scream for help but were unable to get him out of the truck because of the intense heat.

The heat was so intense, residents reported they could feel it one block away," said Caines.

Damages from the fire were estimated at between $250,000 and $500,000, Caines said.

An elderly couple in a house that Caines said was destroyed by the flames escaped unharmed after four men — two ambulance drivers called to the scene and two passersby — kicked down the front door and rescued them before the roof caved in.

"They went to the next house to check, but they found only a parakeet," said Caines. "They took the parakeet out."

Heat from the truck's burning fuel, which spread nearly a block in each direction, destroyed five parked cars and caused fire and smoke damage to five other homes, Caines said.

"All five of those cars were burned to a crisp," he said. "They were totaled."

The accident occurred around 6:30 a.m. EDT after the driver of the truck tried to avoid running into a car that apparently ran a stop sign, Caines said.

The identity of the truck driver was being withheld pending notification of relatives, Caines said.

Caines said the driver of the car, identified as Lazaro Victoriano, 22, of Miami, suffered compound fractures to his right arm.

Mayor Says Woman Leader Possible

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, the first woman interviewed by Walter F. Mondale as a possible running mate, said Saturday that a female president "is no longer incomprehensible" to most Americans.

The mayor conceded that she once thought that being a Jewish woman from a controversial city might be too much of a political handicap.

"Obviously, there would be some who would make a decision based on my religion and say, I'm sorry, I can't go that way," she said.

But she said a number of people told her that "Jack Kennedy went through it for everybody and people are looking at the White House differently."

Kennedy was the first Catholic elected president.

People are changing their views and "it is no longer incomprehensible to think of a woman as chief executive," she said.

Earlier Mondale talked with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and while conceding that they differ on several issues said, "I'm not looking for a homogenized ticket."

"I will speak my views and I'll be candid about them and I think that's important," said Bentsen. "I don't think any president ought to be surrounded just with yes people."

While Mondale moved ahead with his search for a running mate, aides disclosed that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy planned to appear with him on Monday, presumably to endorse Mondale for the presidential nomination.

Mondale agreed with Ms. Feinstein that "in the last 20 years something is happening in this country and I think it's good."

Americans have said this is a bias that's costing this country too much ...

"The American people are saying we want a woman included in the search for vice president."

When Mondale and Bentsen met with reporters after their two-and-one-half hour meeting, the questions centered on their differences on issues and on the perception that the Texas senator is a colorless campaigner.

Bentsen defended his campaign style by pointing out his record of overwhelming victories in Texas, most recently in 1982.

"Pizazz, yuh, he's got a lot of it," said Mondale.

Bentsen supported much of the Reagan economic program in 1981 and also differs with Mondale on the nuclear freeze and the B-1 bomber.

"On many of these fundamental economic questions, there's a lot of common ground," said Mondale.

"On arms control, he supports SALT II. He agrees with me on the annual Soviet summit conferences."

On the nuclear freeze, Bentsen said he backs an initiative that was supported by President Reagan that called for a freeze only after the United States was certain it had achieved parity with the Soviets.

Bentsen added that "just the other night, I voted to shelve the MX missile." The senator supported continuing research and development but not production. Mondale is flatly opposed to the MX.

"On the B-1 bomber, we disagree," said Bentsen. "I support the B-1 bomber."

Said Mondale: "I'm not demanding that someone have identical views with me."

Bentsen said he would speak out in the inner councils of a Mondale administration and then would support whatever decision the president made.

Asked whether he wanted the job, Bentsen replied, "I don't want the job if it's just going to be pomp and circumstance."

Maxine Isaacs, Mondale's press secretary, confirmed that Kennedy would fly to Minnesota Sunday night and make a public appearance with Mondale on Monday.

She refused to say whether the Massachusetts senator would endorse Mondale, but other campaign sources said that was the purpose of the trip.

Miss Isaacs said Kennedy would stay at Mondale's home Sunday night.

In Washington, meanwhile, the 184-member platform committee rejected a plank offered by supporters of the Rev. Jesse Jackson calling for the elimination of "dual primaries" in Southern states. The panel adopted milder language that favored elimination of runoff only in states where it could be demonstrated they were held to prevent the nomination of black candidates.

Jackson flew to Panama early Saturday for meetings with Panamanian officials participating in a four-nation effort to work out a peace plan for the Central American region. He also plans visits to Nicaragua, El Salvador and Cuba.

"Rev. Jackson's trip and his support of the Contadora process is important and appreciated and helps that process to move forward," Panamanian President Jorge Illueca said after a 90-minute meeting with Jackson.

"The visit ... is very important for the Central American and Latin American regions since we have confirmed he is one of the best interpreters of the Contadora group's objectives," he added.

Michael Jackson Could Get Millions

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoters for the event of the summer, the "Victory Tour" of pop singer Michael Jackson and his brothers, and the U.S. Postal Service could make more than $4 million from fans who won't even get in to the concerts.

Almost half that money could come from interest on money orders cashed and eventually returned to the Postal Service, which would have a remainder in money order fees from those fans.

The Jacksons tour will stop in 12 cities for 42 concerts, with the first scheduled for July 6 in Kansas City at Arrowhead Stadium. Tickets at $15 each, must be purchased in lots of four and will be allocated by a random selection process.

Promoters have estimated that 12 million fans will buy money orders worth $1.5 billion and mail them to New York.

Only about one in 100 fans will receive tickets, the promoters say.

The money orders must be mailed about two weeks before the concert to be considered. With the delay of returning the money, the promoters or the Postal Service will have most of the money for six to eight weeks.

Assuming the tour will cost $1 million in tickets, as the promoters have estimated, $1.4 billion will be returned. In a commercial bank market deposit account, the money, which pays about 7 percent interest, that money would earn $100,000 a month, or about $600,000 in a two-month period.

"There will be a float in there. There has to be," said Bob Sullivan, staff director of Stadium Management Corp., national promoter for the tour.

Depositing the money orders in a bank escrow account, he said, "is the only way the money can be safeguarded." The promoters have not calculated how much interest they would receive, Sullivan added in an interview in New York.

Jim Murray, public relations director for the company, said at a Kansas City news conference that "it's my understanding the interest will be eaten up by the cost of the process itself." The tour, however, includes a $1 million charge.

Applications for tickets will include a $120 fee per money order, which costs $15 each. Fans purchase the money orders at post offices will collect the fee. In all of 1983, the Postal Service collected $124 million in fees on money orders.

In just three days last week, the Postal Service said, more than 27,000 money orders for Jackson tickets were sold in Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

Until a money order is cashed, the Postal Service also has use of the money in the same way a consumer has use of his money until his check clears the bank. That is known as float.

As the money orders arrive in New York, they will be deposited in an escrow account at Bankers Trust and the selection process will be monitored by an accounting firm, Sullivan said. "This is a fair way of allocating the tickets," he added.

After Kansas City, the tour moves to Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas, for concerts July 13-15. The third stop is the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., July 21-23. The remaining concert locations have not yet been announced.

Budget Work Now Turns To Pet Projects

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The focal point of the short legislative session — a package of $594.6 million in additions to the 1984-85 state budget — no sooner became law than budget leaders began dividing another $10 million among pet projects.

The state Senate approved the budget additions by voice vote Friday after Appropriations Committee Chairman Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, explained that more than $271 million will go for education next year.

Budget leaders have moved quickly to compile additions to a bare bones budget enacted in 1983 and the size of the package has varied with each explanation.

It was described to House members Thursday as being worth $602 million but Hardison corrected that figure to $594.6 million on Friday.

Lawmakers submitted requests for funding their pet projects Friday. The Appropriations Committee was to meet Monday to begin dividing up the remaining $10 million among the projects and to start approving guidelines for spending the nearly $7.1 billion budget during the fiscal year that starts July 1.

The package of budget additions includes many recommendations from Gov. Jim Hunt's Commission on Education for Economic Growth — money to give teachers and school administrators a 14.8 percent pay raise and to reduce the size of classes in grades four through six from a maximum of 33 students to 29 pupils.

"No state in the country has taken as strong a stand on behalf of its public schools," Hunt said of the budget in a prepared statement. "Our legislators can take great pride in the very clear message they have sent — in North Carolina, our children come first."

The budget package also includes money to give state employees a 10 percent pay raise and retirees an 8 percent increase in benefits.

But it was one of the smallest items — $650,000 for a pay equity study — that drew the most fire Friday. The study would examine whether men and women in state government are earning comparable amounts for similar work.

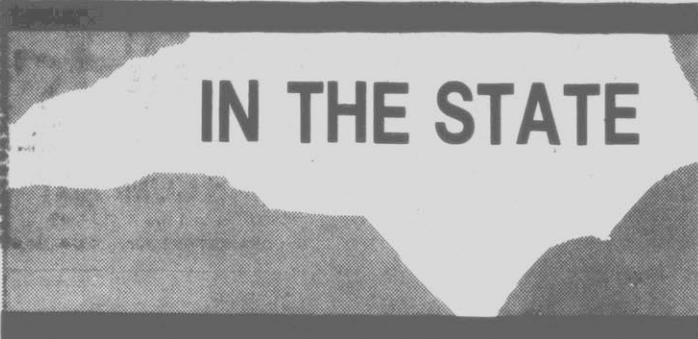

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Gaston, tried twice to amend the bill to require the study include the supply and demand of applicants for various jobs. He withdrew his amendments when he won guarantees that special budget provisions to be submitted next week will require the study cover supply and demand in the job market.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said similar studies have been done in private industry and warned that without such a study, "the state will be under fire from many lawsuits."

Sen. William Redman, R-Iredell, said a recent lawsuit in Washington resulted in the state paying back wages to women. He warned that such a study could be costly in North Carolina because judges might interpret it as acknowledgement that the state was not paying men and women equally.

The Senate also rejected an effort by Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, to restore $6.9 million to the budget to help pay for local law enforcement officers' retirement.

Allred said it was unfair to delete the money at this time but Hardison said local governments are getting up to $50 million in the budget bill and that was a "pretty good trade" for losing the retirement help.

Barfield Family Hopeful Hunt Will Grant Clemency

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The children of convicted murderer Velma Margie Barfield say there may be valid reasons for appeals, but they're pinning their hopes for keeping their mother out of the death chamber Aug. 31 on clemency from Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Most of our hopes lie with Gov. Hunt," said Ron Burke, Mrs. Barfield's 32-year-old son by her first marriage. "While we feel Jimmy (Little, Mrs. Barfield's attorney) has a valid claim with the U.S. Supreme Court, our hopes are with clemency."

"I'm sure there are other appeals being pursued, but my thoughts now are with the clemency process and what we can do to make that decision," said Kim Norton, 30, Mrs. Barfield's daughter.

Burke, of Charleston, S.C., and Mrs. Norton, of Lumberton, spent two hours with their mother Saturday. It was their first visit since Mrs. Barfield was moved from the Correctional Center for Women to Central Prison's Death Row.

"I feel like she's not happy where she is," said Burke, "but that she's reconciled herself it's going to be that way. I'm not sure she has hopes of getting back to the women's prison."

"My problem is not that she has to go there (Death Row)," Burke said. "I understand she's a Death Row prisoner and that she's not going to get treated nicely all the time. But to move her this far in advance, that's what gets to me."

Burke said he had not told his 8-year-old son, Tommy, about Mrs. Barfield's scheduled Aug. 31 execution, and said he did not want his son to see Mrs. Barfield in the Central Prison visiting room, where he would be separated from her by a wall of glass.

Mrs. Norton, too, said she did not want her children to remember their grandmother in the Central Prison visiting room. She said she had tried to explain the execution to her 8-year-old daughter, Stacie, but not to 4-year-old Wendy.

"We've tried to explain it (to Stacie) as best we can," she said. "She knows the execution date has been set. She saw it on television and came and asked me what execute meant."

"I told her it meant her grandmother might die," Mrs. Norton said. "She sat in my lap and we both cried for about 10 minutes."

Mrs. Norton said it has been a "torturous six years" since her mother was convicted in the poisoning death of her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls.

"There's very seldom a day goes by I don't cry," she said. "It's on my mind in the morning when I get up and in the evening when I go to bed. I've tried to prepare for it, but how can anyone accept the death of their mother?"

Burke said he had been preparing for the worst since the 1978 trial.

"Several people have told me they're concerned for me because I seem to be taking it so well," Burke said. "From December 1978, I've been preparing for this possibility, so maybe I'm a little better prepared. It takes a toll, though, every time I visit."

Mrs. Barfield is being held in the section of Central Prison used for the "death-watch" of prisoners about to be executed. She was transferred to the prison Monday night and was placed under visitation and other rules that are more strict than at the women's prison.

Salvadoran Plot Heats Helms-Hunt Race

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Senate race between Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. got a little hotter Saturday following reports of an assassination plot against Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador.

"If those reports are correct, Sen. Helms' meddling in El Salvador's internal politics may have endangered the life of Ambassador Pickering," Hunt said in a statement.

The New York Times, quoting intelligence sources in Washington and El Salvador, reported Saturday that Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson, whom Helms has supported, was implicated in a plot to assassinate Pickering. The newspaper said the plot was uncovered by U.S. intelligence last month.

The assassination plot apparently was to be carried out in revenge for the alleged CIA support of Salvadoran President Jose Duarte, who defeated d'Aubuisson in the recent presidential elections.

D'Aubuisson is head of the extreme right-wing National Republican Alliance Party, known as Arena. He was traveling in the United States and could not be reached for comment immediately.

A top administration aide told United Press International that U.S. officials were concerned about plots to kill American diplomats in El Salvador, including Pickering. But the official offered no comment on the Times report that d'Aubuisson allegedly was involved in the plot against Pickering.

The Times also reported President Reagan told Helms he had acted irresponsibly in public in calling for Pickering's resignation.

"He met with the president and decided to withdraw his opposition" to Pickering and Duarte, apologizing to Reagan for any problems he might have caused and offering to help El Salvador in restoring democracy, the official said.

Helms discounted the Times' report in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"That's sleazy journalism, because there's not a word of truth in it, insofar as the president calling me down to the White House and... chiding me," he said.

Helms said he met with Reagan at the request of Sen. Howard Baker, D-Tenn., and that Reagan, Baker and Secretary of State George Shultz "asked me to participate in a scenario where the secretary of state would talk to Duarte and I would talk to d'Aubuisson." He did not elaborate.

Helms said any suggestion that d'Aubuisson was involved in a plot to assassinate Pickering was "an absolute falsehood."

"There is no evidence that I have seen that he has even been said to be linked to. This is all fabrication, insofar as I've been able to check, by the various newspapers," Helms said.

Any suggestion that his office said to did anything that would have encouraged an assassination plot is "sleazy journalism," he said.

Hunt called on Helms to "wake up and acknowledge the reality of right-wing violence in El Salvador." "It is also time for Sen. Helms to disavow his past support of d'Aubuisson and to come clean about his role in establishing El Salvador's right-wing party," Hunt said. "The people of North Carolina have a right to know about Sen. Helms' backing for right-wing forces who are now charged with plotting to kill the U.S. ambassador."

U.S. Was Aware Of Plot To Kill

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence received a report last month that right-wing elements, including a politician linked to death squads, were plotting to kill Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, a Reagan administration official said.

The report was taken seriously enough for the administration to send its roving envoy, retired Gen. Vernon Walters, to El Salvador to meet with Roberto d'Aubuisson, the politician said to be involved in the assassination plot, the official said.

Speaking on condition he not be identified, the official said Friday night: "Is it conceivable that d'Aubuisson was involved in such a plot? Yes. Is it probable? I don't know."

D'Aubuisson, the unsuccessful right wing candidate in the May 6 El Salvadoran presidential runoff election, complained bitterly during the campaign that the United States, through its embassy, was giving financial assistance to his opponent, Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Pickering, 52, a career diplomat had denied he was taking sides, asserting that the United States only wanted free, open and honest elections to help establish democracy in El Salvador.

An intelligence source told the AP last month, however, that a portion of $2 million in U.S. assistance to El Salvador went to Duarte and other parties opposed to d'Aubuisson's National Republican Alliance. U.S.

officials had expressed concern about a D'Aubuisson presidency because of allegations he was linked to death squads that have killed thousands of people in recent years. D'Aubuisson has denied the charge.

In addition, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., accused Pickering of trying to throw the election to Duarte and wrote a letter to Reagan asking him to fire the envoy.

The New York Times reported in Saturday editions that d'Aubuisson's supporters planned to kill Pickering because they were outraged by the aid to Duarte and that Helms' letter contributed to their anger.

On learning of the reported death plot, Reagan called Helms to the White House to tell him he had acted irresponsibly, according to a source in El Salvador quoted by the Times.

Ironically, the first public report of a death plot against Pickering came from d'Aubuisson himself at a May 18 news conference in San Salvador.

D'Aubuisson told reporters he heard about it from an aide to Helms, who called to say that Reagan had learned of an attempt and that there was talk in Washington that D'Aubuisson was behind it.

"They should give the maximum security to Ambassador Pickering to avoid this maneuver," D'Aubuisson said. Pickering normally travels with several armed security guards.

At the time, Pickering's spokesman, Donald Hamilton said he could not confirm or deny there was a plot to kill the ambassador.

Shortly afterward, Walters and Pickering met d'Aubuisson, in what appeared to be a conciliation effort, at the ambassador's residence.

The U.S. diplomats urged d'Aubuisson to accept the outcome of the election and told him he had a legitimate place in Salvadoran politics as an opposition leader if he chose to take it.

Opponents Picket GOP

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Women criticizing the feminist movement and women supporting it held simultaneous but separate demonstrations Saturday outside the Raleigh Civic Center, the site of the state GOP convention.

A small group of women called Southern Ladies Against Women rallied behind the slogan, "A lady does not need equality," to support the GOP and call for the right of women to vote to be repealed.

A larger group from the state chapter of the National Organization for Women voiced its criticism of President Reagan's budget cuts, saying they called for "an inequality of sacrifice."

Deborah Swain, a spokeswoman for Southern Ladies, said her group believes a lady's place is in the home. Ladies should be given roses, not raises, she said.

President Reagan is "a fine gentleman who understands that women should not get into the mainstream because it takes jobs away from men," Mrs. Swain said.

Women who do not believe that "just don't know their place," she said.

Southern Ladies' objective was to make certain that the Republican Party saw both sides of the women's viewpoint, Mrs. Swain said. She said many women believe in the ideals of the GOP.

Meanwhile, members of the state NOW chapter carried signs reading "Stop Helms now" and "ERA yes, Reagan no."

Shock Waves Smash Kidney Stones

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A hydraulic stretcher lowered the naked man into a stainless steel tub of warm water. Kaboom! Kaboom! Kaboom! Inside his left kidney, shock waves smashed a stone the size of a penny.

"What do you feel?" asked Dr. Stephen P. Dretler.

"It feels like a rubber band snapping me in the back," replied the patient, Robert D. Casavant. "Nothing I can't stand."

Casavant, 58, of Lewiston, Maine, was the 21st patient to receive this experimental treatment at Massachusetts General Hospital.

In a sound-proof room at the hospital, the machinery made a noise like firecrackers exploding under water. It is called an extracorporeal shock-wave lithotripter, Greek for stone crusher. After using it for three weeks, Dretler was a believer.

"This is absolutely revolutionary," he says. "Kidney treatment will never be the same again."

It is fast and safe. Nothing is inserted into the body. Instead, a spark plug in the bottom of the tub generates shock waves, which converge on the stone in the kidney. The waves blast the stone to smithereens without hurting bones, blood, organs or skin.

When it's finished, the stone is reduced to sand that the patient gets rid of, mostly painlessly, in his urine over the next few days.

The machine costs $2 million, a high price even by today's sky's-the-limit standards of medical gadgetry. Yet it may actually save money by reducing hospital stays and getting people back to work sooner.

Until now, such kidney stones typically required major surgery. They often were hard to find. Scarring and kidney damage could result.

In West Germany, where the machine was invented, it effectively crushed stones and eliminated surgery 99 percent of the time. The Food and Drug Administration requires that the machines be tested independently before they are sold in the United States, so it has authorized six institutions — Massachusetts General, Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, New York Hospital, Baylor University Medical Center in Houston, the University of Florida in Gainesville and the University of Virginia at Charlottesville — to try them out.

After Casavant was lowered into the water, Dretler lined up the kidney stone in the cross hairs on an X-ray screen. In one hand, he held the trigger, a box the size of a TV remote control switch.

Kaboom! Kaboom! Kaboom! The dull explosions went on with the rhythm of a beating heart. They were timed to go off between each heartbeat to avoid the slim chance of damaging the patient's heart.

After 100 beats, Dretler took a new X-ray. The sharp outline of the stone had softened. One fragment had floated three inches away.

"It's not an explosion," Dretler says. "The stone is not blowing up inside his body. It's an implosion with a crumbling effect."

The doctor lined up the stone again and blasted away. Then he went searching for little shards that had broken off, pulverizing them.

After 50 minutes and 1,100 blasts, it was all over.

Besides the machinery, the treatment required urologists, nurses, anesthesiologists, and technicians. All this makes it pricey: $3,800 for one patient. But surgery is even more expensive.

The bills for four typical patients who got the treatment averaged $6,877 for four days in the hospital. The average cost for comparably sick people who have surgery is $9,476, and they are generally hospitalized for 13 days.

NEA To Release School Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest teachers union, accused by critics of being a drag on education reform, will share its vision of what American schools should be in the 21st century at its annual convention.

For four days beginning Sunday, the 1.7 million-member National Education Association will meet in Minneapolis.

As usual, the gathering will feature Democratic Party favorites; Walter Mondale is to address the more than 7,000 teacher delegates Monday.

But the convention will also mark the end of a year in which its president, Mary Hatwood Futrell, has struggled to get the public to understand and sympathize with the role her union has played in the current ferment over educational reform.

A new Associated Press-Media General poll, for instance, found overwhelming public support for merit pay and for competency testing of veteran teachers, two ideas the NEA vigorously opposes.

"The public doesn't understand these issues," Ms. Futrell argued in an interview here last week.

In part to redress that, the union will release "An Open Letter to America on Schools, Students and Tomorrow," a 36-page report from the union's task force on educational excellence that includes a lengthy passage on "Education in the Year 2001."

It is intended to add the voice of teachers to the debate on how to cure the "mediocrity" that other reports have found in the nation's public schools.

The solutions the NEA offers in its report are, for the most part, predictable — like average starting salaries of $24,000 (about $10,000 above the current average), smaller classes, more federal education spending.

Critics in the Reagan administration and in the rival American Federation of Teachers have peppered the NEA with criticism this year, suggesting the giant union is soft on school discipline and quality education, caring only about getting more money for its members.

But Ms. Futrell, a 44-year-old former high school business teacher from Alexandria, Va., insisted in the interview that her union had supported "90 to 95 percent of what's in the education reports because that's what we've been saying for the last 10 to 15 years."

She said her union had been in the vanguard of efforts for better classroom discipline and raising overall educational quality.

"We have taken some heat on our stands," she said. "But people forget that we supported the reports from Day One. But all of that was overshadowed because of the fight over merit pay, and the fight in Arkansas over testing teachers."

"People want to paint us as a bad guy. And I don't mind being painted as a bad person. I'd rather people understand us. But if understanding means we have to compromise to the point that we really don't stand for anything, I wouldn't want that," she said.

USOC Paints Bright Picture

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the boycott of the Soviet Union and its political allies and the threat of future defections, U.S. Olympic Committee officials painted a healthy picture Saturday for the 1984 Summer Games.

"Despite the 12-nation boycott, a record 142 nations will be represented when the Games open in four weeks. I believe we will still have a great Games," predicted USOC president William Simon.

The Soviet Union, citing security reasons, announced on May 8 that it would not attend the Summer Games. The Soviet bloc nations in Eastern Europe, Cuba and Ethiopia subsequently withdrew from the Games.

"I believe we have contained the spread of this," said Harry Usher, a representative of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. "But there are no givens. Nothing is etched in stone. We must be vigilant. It is not unprecedented to see other countries walk out, even after they have arrived at the village. It is not over."

Holding their final meeting prior to next month's games, USOC officials also took time Saturday to name Houston as the site of the 1986 National Sports Festival.

On other issues, USOC Executive Board Director F. Don Miller said:

"The USOC proposed liberalization of amateur rules to enable Olympic athletes to profit from their sport other than by direct payment for competition. Under A USOC report, to be presented later to the International Olympic Committee, would allow athletes to accept money for television appearances and endorsements provided they do not involve a performance in the athletes' sport. The USOC recommendation would further not make an athlete ineligible to participate in the Olympics for merely signing a contract or having an agent.

•The USOC had received $13 million from corporate sponsors to date, about 18 percent of the total cost of the Games.

•The Olympic committee had raised $21.9 million from the sale of commemorative coins, with an estimated revenue of up to $35 million.

•Local charities would realize $10 million, including $1 million for the Special Olympics, from the cross-country trip of the Olympic Torch.

•The USOC would again seek congressional passage of a tax checkoff to raise additional funds. The tax checkoff, which would allow taxpayers to earmark $1 of their tax return for the U.S. Olympic effort, was recently defeated in a congressional committee.

•Approval had been given for participation of the two demonstration sport teams — baseball and tennis — in the opening ceremonies.

Speaking with newsmen, Miller also took exception to a federal judge's ruling on Friday in Chicago to lift the International Weightlifting Federation's suspension of weightlifter Jeffrey Michels.

The weightlifting body suspended Michels after tests showed him with an abnormally high level of testosterone after the Pan-American Games in Venezuela last summer.

Evoniuk Earns Slot On Squad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marco Evoniuk, winner of the 20-kilometer walk in the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials a week ago, captured the 50-kilometer title Saturday and gained his second place on the United States team.

Evoniuk, 26, from Longmont, Colo., was timed in 4 hours, 2 minutes, 25 seconds for the 31-mile jaunt which began and ended in the Los Angeles Coliseum. Between the start and the finish, the race wandered through the streets of Los Angeles.

Vince O'Sullivan of New York finished second in 4:14:04 and Carl Scheuler of Silver Spring, Md., took the last spot on the U.S. Olympic team, placing third in 4:15:06.

Jim Heiring and Dan O'Connor, who had finished 2-3 behind Evoniuk in last Saturday's 20-kilometer event, were among the early leaders Saturday, but each was disqualified for running.

The walk was the first of seven finals on Saturday's program on the next-to-last days of the eight-day Trials.

Meanwhile, the four 70-foot shot putters in the men's 21-man qualifying field advanced to Saturday night's final. Michael Carter, the seven-time NCAA champion — four indoor crowns and three outdoor titles — from Southern Methodist University had the longest throw, 67 feet, 8 1/4 inches.

John Brenner, this year's NCAA outdoor champion from UCLA, qualified at 65-10 1/4. Dave Laut, the

McDonald Tournney Adds Four

Four celebrities have been added to the field for the Ronald McDonald House golf tournament to be played September 10 at Brook Valley Country Club.

The four are former UNC football greats, Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice and Art Weimer, and former major league baseball standouts Gaylord Perry and Enos "Country" Slaughter.

The tournament, a superbowl event, will attract 42 teams of four plus a celebrity each, according to tournament chairman Reynolds May. Invitations for the tournament field went out this past Monday, with a deadline for returning them on July 1. A $150 entry fee is charged for each of the golfers.

Already announced are three professional golfers, Jerry Pate, Tommy Aaron and LPGA member Terri Luckhurst.

Perhaps no one football player in North Carolina ever excited the fans the way Charlie Justice did in the late 1940's. Twice selected to the All-America team, he was one of the most honored Tar Heels in history, making All-America units selected by Collier's, the Associated Press, United Press, the All-America board, Sport Magazine, Williamson, Paramount, Bill Stern and the International News Service. He has been selected to the College Football Hall of Fame and the Helms Hall of Fame.

Justice still holds several Tar Heel records, including most career yardage, 4,883, and most touchdowns responsible for in a season, 23, and a career, 64.

Over the past few years, Justice has become of the leading voices in calling for an annual renewal of the East Carolina-North Carolina football series.

Art Weiner was a contemporary of Justice's, also receiving All-America honors as an end in 1948 and 1949. He was selected to the units chosen by Grantland Rice, the New York Daily News and the New York Sun. He, too, still holds several Tar Heel records, including most passes caught in a season, 52, and in a season, 106. He also has a record of catching a pass in 17 consecutive games, the last two in 1947, all ten in 1948 and the five of 1949. His career yardage of 1,733 still stands as do his 18 career touchdown receptions.

With Justice, Weiner made the Tar Heels an almost unbeatable team as the 40's came to a close.

Breathes there a man alive in Eastern North Carolina who does not know of the exploits of Gaylord Perry? The Williamston righthander retired from the majors league last season after becoming the only man to ever win a Cy Young award in both the American and National Leagues.

Perry won his first at Cleveland after being traded away from the San Francisco Giants as "too old," in 1972. Then, after moving on to the San Diego Padres, he won the National League award in 1978. He also pitched a no-hitter against the St. Louis Cardinals while a member of the Giants.

His colorful career was constantly overshadowed by the charges that he used a "spitter," but Perry seemed to revel in it, using all kinds of motions to decoy the batter — along with television personalities to tried to find an illegal substance on him. He was never caught but was ousted from a game late in his career at Seattle for supposedly doctoring a ball.

He finished his career by surpassing the great Walter Johnson in strikeouts, although he was unable to be the first, finishing his career with 3,534 strikeouts.

Enos Slaughter, a veteran of many years in the major leagues, still awaits the honor due him of being selected to the Baseball Hall of Fame. Despite his honors as a player, and a lifetime batting average of .310, Slaughter's outspoken attitude toward the writers who would have selected him to the Hall probably worked against him. Now, his only chance of selection would come at the hands of the Veterans' Committee.

During his successful tenure with the Cardinals and New York Yankees, he was the original "Mr. Hustle," gaining enduring fame in scoring from first base on a single in the World Series, for the winning run against Boston.

During his later years, Slaughter served for a time as the head baseball coach for Duke University.

Additional celebrities for the tournament will be announced in the future.

Funds raised by the tournament will go to aid in the construction and maintenance of the Ronald McDonald House of Greenville.

Area Runners Take First In Jr. Olympics

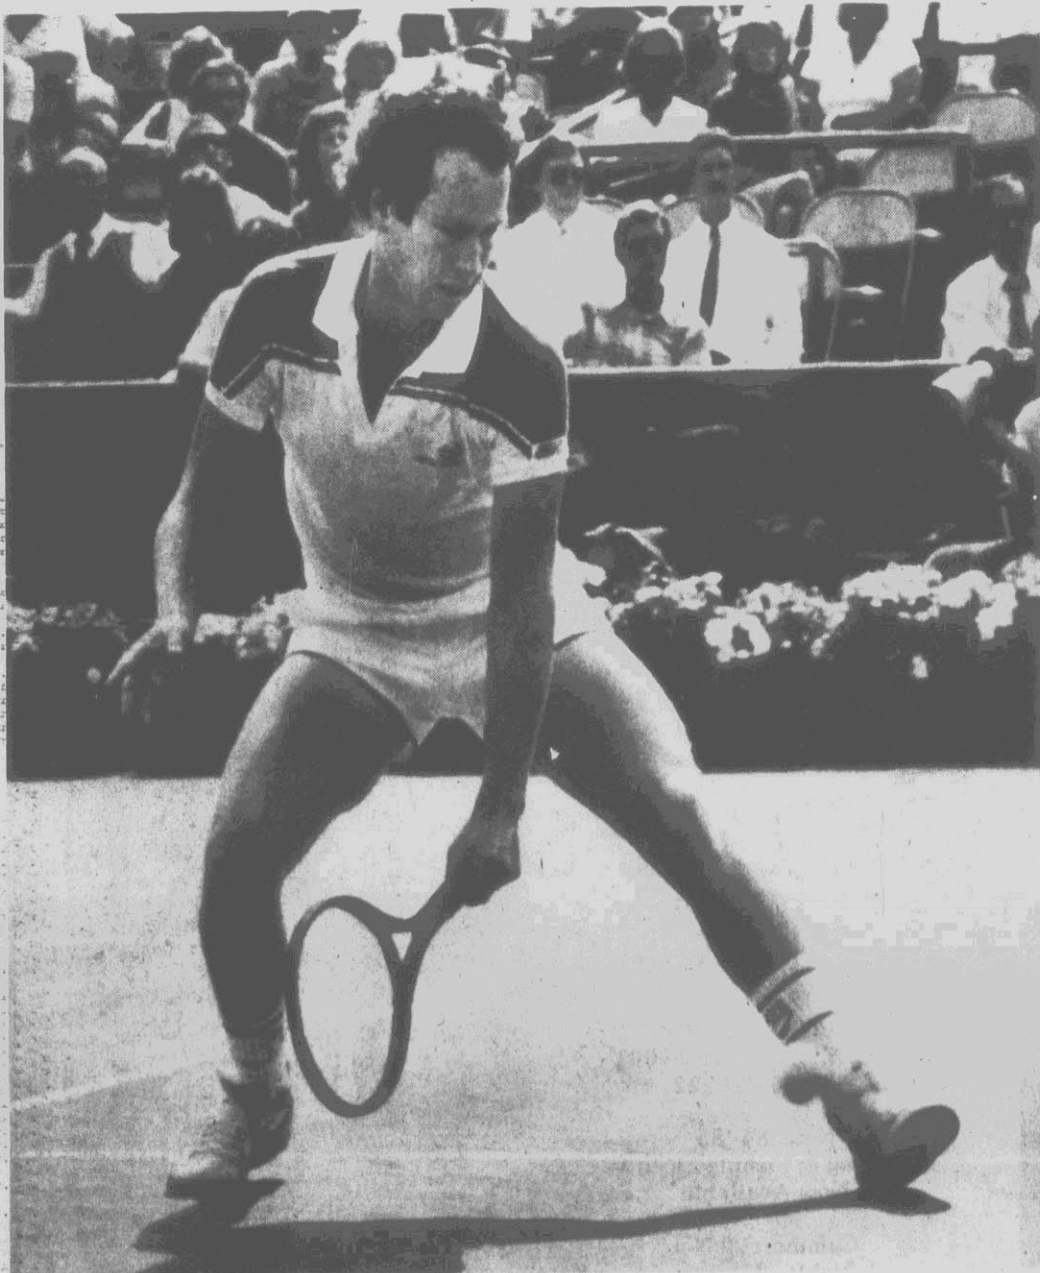

RALEIGH — Edison Pitt and Tedric Howard of Bethel won first place in 10-and-under events, while Mike Brown and Lisa Lang of Farmville placed among in 13-14 year olds at the State Junior Olympics held Saturday at North Carolina State University.

The top four places in each event qualify for the Regional TAC Junior Olympics to be held at N.C. State July 7-8. The top two at the regionals advance to the National Junior Olympics in New Orleans the last weekend in July.

Pitt won the 100 meters and ran a leg of the victorious 4 X 400 relay. Howard won the 200 meters, and David Williams of Bethel took third in the 400. Howard and Williams also ran the 4 X 400 relay.

Bobby Manning of Bethel claimed fourth place in the shot put of the 10-and-under age group.

Lang placed first in the 200 meters, while Brown was won the long jump and finished second in the triple jump competition. Farmville's Thomas Joyner was third in the triple jump, while Gary Moore was third in the 100 meters.

McEnroe Returns

Defending champion John McEnroe returns to the grass courts of the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club next week hoping to retain his title. Martina Navratilova will defend her crown in the women's draw.

Wimbledon

McEnroe, Navratilova Look To Defend Singles Titles At 'The Championships'

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
WIMBLEDON, England — In the view of British bookies, sober businessmen in a country where betting is a legal national passion, John McEnroe and Martina Navratilova are the hottest favorites to win Wimbledon since before World War II.

At this year's All England Lawn Tennis championships, which open Monday, the question seems less whether the top seeds and defending champions will hold their service than whether McEnroe will hold his temper.

The fiery New Yorker already has had a major blow-up at an umpire in a Wimbledon tuneup tournament and a series of clashes with Fleet Street, London's newspaper row, which has urged tennis officials to clamp down on his tantrums.

After McEnroe heaped abuse on umpire Roger Smith at the Queen's Club tourney — he called Smith an "idiot" and a "moron" — the Guardian newspaper said, "No one should be permitted to voice such contempt for a fellow human being and get away with it."

The tabloid Daily Mirror declared: "In a four-letter word, he is a LOUT. Or, as he would describe umpires, the pits. A moron."

McEnroe defended his behavior by saying the officiating in tennis is the worst of any major sport. Asked by a British reporter if he had any regrets about his actions, McEnroe replied, "What I regret is (having) to deal with people like you."

Wimbledon referee Alan Mills said he plans to "firmly but fairly" enforce the code of conduct, which provides for, in order, a warning, a point penalty, a game penalty and finally disqualification for any player infringing the rules. Similar warnings have been made before at Wimbledon with little effect.

What is in no doubt is that McEnroe is playing some of the best tennis of his career, despite his loss to Ivan Lendl in the finals of the French Open.

The Paris defeat was McEnroe's first this year, after winning 42 straight matches. At 25, he is serving with precision, volleying decisively and covering the court like a fox on a scent — all elements that make for winners on the finely manicured lawns at Wimbledon.

McEnroe has said the French Open loss, in which he had Lendl two sets down but let his concentration slip, still haunts him. "It's going to be tough to put the defeat in Paris out of my mind," he said. But he added, "Winning, in time, heals wounds."

Lendl, the No. 2 seed, dislikes playing on grass. McEnroe beat him in the semis here last year. This year, just 48 hours after his triumph on the Parisian clay, Lendl was ousted from Queen's Club on grass in the first round.

If the seedings hold — for the first time this year, they're based solely on computer rankings — Lendl will also face a major obstacle in two-time Wimbledon champ Jimmy Connors, seeded third and in Lendl's half of the draw.

The top prize money for the men is $137,000. For the women, it's $123,300 dollars. The total purse is $2 million.

Women's tennis at Wimbledon is celebrating its centennial this year, and Navratilova, who has won the singles title two years running, is so heavily favored that most debates seem to be whether she'll be able to complete the Grand Slam — the conquest of the French, Wimbledon, U.S. Open and Australian Open in the same calendar year. Her French Open triumph completed that sweep, which began in 1983 — not a true "Slam," but worth a $1 million bonus nonetheless.

The No. 2 seed, Chris Evert Lloyd, has won three times at Wimbledon, but her baseline game is nowhere near as suited to grass as Navratilova's serve-and-volley.

None of this, of course, means that Wimbledon holds no surprises. Quite the contrary — surprises are as much a tradition here as strawberries and cream.

Two years ago, it was Texan Zina Garrison reaching the quarter-finals against Navratilova on her first try. This year Garrison is the fifth seed.

Last year, it was unseeded New Zealander Chris Lewis fighting his way to the finals against McEnroe.

This year, who knows? Perhaps George Livingstone Leif Shiras?

Who is he?

That's what the London papers were asking when Shiras felled the newly crowned French titlist Lendl at Queen's Club.

Five days later, they weren't asking that about the 24-year-old Milwaukeean when he took McEnroe to three sets in the final.

Shiras, a lanky blonde who admits to liking the nightlife just a bit too much and who says his training regimen involves running up flights of stairs in his girlfriend's apartment building, says he's beginning to like this winning business.

Healthy Wilcox Leads Tiger Victory

DETROIT (AP) — A healthy shoulder and an improved mental outlook are two ingredients that could help Detroit Tigers pitcher Milt Wilcox regain his early-season form.

Wilcox, who dropped five of his last six decisions after starting the season with six straight victories, stopped the Milwaukee Brewers on four hits through eight innings Saturday as the Tigers posted a 5-1 victory.

"My last three or four games, I've really felt like I'm in a groove again," said Wilcox, 8-5, who was backed by a three-run home run by Howard Johnson and a solo shot from Kirk Gibson.

"I had some shoulder problems and wasn't throwing the ball well," Wilcox explained. "It's tough when the soreness is on top of your shoulder, because you can't get on top of your pitches."

"I also had a talk with (pitching coach) Roger Craig, and he helped me with the mental part. I hadn't been challenging the hitters," Wilcox said.

Wilcox did not allow a runner past second base until Milwaukee scored its only run in the eighth inning. He struck out four and walked two. The 34-year-old right-hander missed the chance for his first complete game of the season when Manager Sparky Anderson replaced him with Doug Bair in the ninth.

"Milt had thrown 99 pitches, and I'll always save my starters when they have a secure lead," Anderson said. "That way they'll be rested for the final run."

Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann was impressed with Detroit's clutch hitting.

"They scored four runs with two outs," Lachemann said. "We had opportunities to score with two outs, and we didn't score any runs."

Gibson, who also had a pair of singles, belted his ninth home run of the season with two outs in the first inning. Detroit got three runs in the second, also with two outs, when Larry Herndon singled, Dave Bergman doubled and Johnson followed with his sixth home run of the season.

Detroit added a run in the third as Gibson singled and scored on Lance Parrish's hit-and-run double, which chased Milwaukee starter Chuck Porter, 5-3. Porter was removed from the disabled list and activated Friday.

Milwaukee spoiled Wilcox's shut-out bid in the eighth when Ed Romero led off with a double and later scored on Jim Gantner's sacrifice fly.

Toronto.....9
Boston.....3

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran catcher Buck Martinez of the Toronto Blue Jays hit two home runs in a game for the first time in his major league career Saturday in a 9-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Martinez, who played his first major league game for Kansas City in 1969, had no trouble recalling his last two-homer game.

"It was in 1967 in the last game I played as an amateur in Sacramento (Calif.)," he said with a big grin. "I hit a grand slam and a three-run homer. The next day I went to Eugene, Ore., and joined the Philadelphia Phillies' rookie team."

Martinez usually platoons with left-handed hitting Ernie Whitt, rarely getting to hit against right-handed pitchers. However, with Whitt injured, Martinez is getting regular duty.

"I was struggling for quite a while, but now I'm getting a few more at bats," he said. "It's a little easier playing regularly."

Texas.....1

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The lineup read Tom, instead of Tim, Conroy and the southpaw on the mound didn't pitch like Tim Conroy had all season.

But the Oakland A's think they've found the real article at last after watching Conroy fire fastballs past the Texas Rangers and allow only one hit in eight innings for a 5-1 victory Saturday.

"That's the Conroy we've been waiting on," said A's skipper Jackie Moore, who returned him to a starting role June 12 two weeks after taking over as manager. "We felt all along there was no doubt about his arm and his ability. It was just a matter of his confidence."

"One of these days we expect him to be a dominating pitcher."

Conroy, 24, certainly was that against the Rangers, whose only hit was a solo homer by Alan Bannister on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the fifth inning. Conroy walked two and struck out five before tiring in the eighth but he got hitless relief help from Bill Caudill in the ninth.

"This was what we all needed," said Conroy, 1-3. "I had a good fastball, tailing away, and that's almost all I threw."

It was Conroy's best game since coming up from the minors late in the 1982 season. He had a complete game five-hitter last season against Toronto, but against the Rangers he threw consistently hard and around the strike zone.

"Every inning got easier and easier," Conroy said. "It's fun when you throw strikes."

"It's been a struggle not throwing on a regular basis, relieving or starting, but you've got to do what they want you to do. There's one thing that I'll never lose again and that's my confidence."

The victory snapped the A's five-game losing streak against the Rangers.

Lee Watson blasted a two-run homer in the seventh to ignite a five-run First Federal rally and spark an 11-7 victory over Pepsi Cola in Tar Heel Little League baseball action Saturday.

Watson, Drew Johnson, Michael Cox and Michael Hollis each finished the game with two hits for First Federal. Johnson and Cox combined for a five-hitter on the mound.

Will MacKenzie and Greg Hunt each had two hits in three at bats for Pepsi.

Pepsi jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first, but First Federal knotted the score with two runs in the second and a pair in the fourth.

First Federal took the lead with two in the top of the fifth, but Pepsi rallied to even the score in the bottom of the frame.

Johnson walked to open the seventh, and Watson followed with his game-winning RBI homer.

True Value.....5
Wellcome.....0

Ken Sawyer and Craig Willoughby combined for a three-hitter as True Value blanked Wellcome 5-0 Saturday in Tar Heel Little League baseball.

Willoughby and Matthew Cagle had two hits each for True Value.

Willoughby led off the bottom of the first with double, and Cagle followed with an RBI-triple. Aaron Tschetter singled in Cagle for a 2-0 True Value edge.

Byron Johnson doubled after one out in the second and later scored on an error.

True Value added two more runs in the fifth, as Cagle and Sawyer had RBI singles.

Jaycees.....7
Coca-Cola.....6

The Jaycees copied the strategy used by Optimist Friday night and went on to take a 7-6 upset over Coca-Cola Saturday in North State Little League baseball.

The Optimist intentionally walked Walter Gatlin four times Friday, but the Jaycees put him on base just three times Saturday en route to breaking a tie for the league lead. Jaycees are currently in the cellar of the division.

Carlester Crumpler had three hits to lead Jaycees at the plate, while winning pitcher Chris Warren scattered eight hits.

The score was even at 4-4 after three innings, but Coke rallied for a run in the fourth and another in the fifth to take a 6-4 edge.

In the top of the sixth, Rodney Williams walked and Chris Warren reached first on a fielder's choice before Crumpler ripped an RBI-single. Cliff Ferrell followed with a two-out double to give the Jaycees a one-run advantage.

Coke had runners on first and third after two outs, but Warren got the final out on a pop fly to the infield to record the victory.

Sportsworld.....18
Kiwanis.....1

Tim Moore and Jason Wing combined for a no-hitter on the mound and Tye Fickling ripped a three-run homer to lead Sportsworld to an 18-1 thrashing of Kiwanis Saturday in North State Little League baseball action.

Wing went 4-5 at the plate to lead Sportsworld, while Moore was 3-3. Fickling and Jamie Brewington each went 2-4.

Sportsworld took command with nine runs in the top of the first, the added three in the second on Fickling's homer.

Moore struck out 11 batters in four innings, while Wing struck out the final batter of the game.

Billy Turcotte had two hits to lead Shop-Eze, while winning pitcher Frankie Pugh threw a five-hitter.

Billy Bob Anderson walked after one out in the fifth and later scored on an error to give H&D a 1-0 lead.

Cox tripled in the sixth and scored when Pugh reached first on an error.

Shop-Eze managed its only run in the bottom of the seventh, as Eric Daniels drew a leadoff walk, stole second and scored on a single by Todd Taylor.

Sandberg's Homers Lift Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg was "Speechless. I never even dreamed about having a day like this. I'm happy we came out a winner."

Sandberg rattled out five hits, including game-tying homers in the bottom of the ninth and 10th innings, and drove in seven runs Saturday to help rally the Chicago Cubs to a 12-11 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

He had already driven in four runs with three singles in a game in which the Cardinals once led 9-3 when he came to bat to lead off the ninth with the Cardinals leading 9-8 and Bruce Sutter pitching.

Sandberg crashed his eighth homer to tie the score and send it into extra innings.

Willie McGee, who already had driven in five runs with a bases-loaded triple, a two-run homer and a single, doubled in the tie-breaking run in the 10th to hit for the cycle and eventually scored an insurance run on a pair of infield outs to make it 11-9.

Sutter then retired the first two batters in the 10th and then walked Bob Dernier. Up came Sandberg, who walloped his ninth homer to again tie the game.

The Cubs finally won it in the 11th on a bases-loaded pinch single by Dave Owen but that seemed anticlimactic.

"I was just trying to make contact and hit the ball hard someplace," said Owen, a utility infielder and the last position player Manager Jim Frey had on the bench.

Sandberg has been a terror of late. He now has 12 hits in his last 16 at-bats and already has equaled his entire extra-base total of last year.

Sandberg was so impressive that Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog said, "Ryne Sandberg is the best baseball player I've ever seen."

What? "Ryne Sandberg is the best baseball player I've ever seen as far as I'm concerned," said Herzog. "Mr. Sandberg and Mr. McGee had themselves a great day. We had it won three times but gave it away with too many walks."

McGee, the first Cardinal to hit for the cycle since Lou Brock did it in San Diego in 1975, admitted, "It was my greatest game but we lost, you have to be philosophical about it. I just go out and do my best every day."

Sandberg, who had six at-bats in the game as did McGee, is out to prove himself on offense this year.

"I'm working on it," said Sandberg. "The last two years I proved myself defensively. I wasn't trying for home runs but Sutter got his pitches up and he usually comes in on a right hand hitter so you have to try to pull the ball."

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Bernyi, in only his second start for the New York Mets since being obtained from the Cincinnati Reds on June 15, and Doug Sisk combined on a three-hitter to pitch the New York Mets to a 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

"The trade came at a perfect time," explained the 29-year-old Bernyi, 4-8, who scattered three hits while striking out two and walking three in seven innings. "I was going nowhere, at least as far as the Reds were concerned. Thank God the Mets didn't feel the same way.

"I'm relying on my fastball more than ever before, and now there is a totally different feeling as far as I'm concerned."

Keith Hernandez, the Met captain, said, "It was a great trade. It made our starting staff. Bruce has a 90 mph fastball, so why not use it? I feel coming to us will turn around his career."

Darryl Strawberry drove in the first run with a two-out double in the first inning after Wally Backman led off with a single.

Danny Heep, playing left field in place of George Foster for the second time in the last three games, hit a 380-foot homer over the right-center field wall for his first home run of the season.

"I'd love to get him more time," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson. "However, that doesn't mean Foster is going to the bench. I have no immediate plans to do anything."

Sisk, in registering his 10th save, hurled hitless ball over the final two innings to lower his earned run average to 0.55 in 48 2-3 innings this season as he saved his fourth game in his last four appearances.

Martina Sweeps Eastbourne Final

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Forty-eight hours before the start of Wimbledon, Grand Slam champion Martina Navratilova claimed her third straight Eastbourne grass court tennis title Saturday with a commanding 6-4, 6-1 victory over fourth-seeded Kathy Jordan.

Jordan, who ousted second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd in straight sets in Friday's semifinals, went into the match apparently full of confidence but suffered a setback when Navratilova broke her service in the first game.

The 27-year-old Czechoslovakia-born American never looked back.

It was a sharp contrast with Friday's semifinals, in which Navratilova was extended to three sets by West Germany's Claudia Kohde.

"I felt a lot more confident today," Navratilova said. "But then I always do when I'm in a final. Getting there is usually more of a problem because it is always on your mind. But in a final I'm always more relaxed."

The service break clearly rattled Jordan, and there was no repeat of the precise serve-and-volley game that ousted Lloyd.

The 24-year-old from King of Prussia, Pa., wasn't helped by Navratilova's pinpoint serving.

In the first set, Navratilova conceded just four points in five service games. Three of those came in the 10th game, which she closed out on the first advantage point with a winning forehand volley to take the set in 39 minutes.

"I really could do very little," said Jordan. "Even when I was putting in good serves, Martina was hitting me with some incredible passing shots. She had a go at everything I did and made it very difficult for me."

"I was upset at losing the very first game of the match, because I think I hit three very good serves, which she somehow got winners from."

Navratilova kept the pressure on at the start of the second set when she broke Jordan's serve to 15 and held her own to love to go 2-0. She quickly reeled off another three games before inexplicably dropping her serve at 5-0.

But Navratilova quickly recovered her form to end the contest on her second match point when Jordan charged in and hit a smash straight at the net.

Navratilova earned $28,000 for her victory, while Jordan had to be content with $14,000.

Later, in the doubles finals of this $175,000 event, Navratilova and partner Pam Shriver ousted Britain's Jo Durie and Ann Kiyomura 6-4, 6-2 to win the $11,000 top prize. The runners-up get $5,500.

The singles victory was Navratilova's 31st in a row since losing to Hana Mandlikova in Oakland in January and her sixth tournament title.

With the All England Lawn Tennis championships due to start Monday at Wimbledon, Navratilova was asked how she was approaching the tournament.

"Having won the Grand Slam, everybody keeps asking me if I'm thinking about the next one," she said. "That's a pretty tall order. My next goal is to win at Wimbledon, and obviously that feels much more realistic."

Jordan, asked about her chances at Wimbledon, replied, "I think I'm playing well and must have a good chance there. However, if Martina plays the way she did today, she will win the title."

"Nobody else can play that way. But if she has an off day, I think Pam Shriver, Hana Mandlikova and myself could have a good chance against her."

Kite Holds Slim Atlanta Lead

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Kite, holding a one-shot lead going into Sunday's final round of the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic, has a goal in sight.

"I've never won two tournaments in a year. That's one of my major goals for the year," said Kite, who collected the sixth PGA Tour title of his career in Florida three months ago.

That victory set the steady little man off on another of his streaks of extremely strong play and consistently high finishes. Since then, he's been ninth or better in seven of 10 starts.

"I've been playing very well. I feel like I've been playing very solidly."

"It's nice to come back with a good, strong tournament after a very disappointing week," said Kite, who missed the cut last week in the U.S. Open.

He also had a major disappointment in the Masters—where he was in title contention until he hit into the water on the 12th hole of the final round—but came back with a runner-up performance the following week.

"I'd just like to finish one place higher than that," he said Saturday after a no-bogey, 6-under-par 66 had given him the third round lead in this event. He finished three trips over the 7,018 yard Atlanta Country Club course in 202, 14 under par.

Don Pooley, twice a runner-up in this tournament, held second going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize. He was at 203 after a third round 67.

Pooley, playing in the same group with Kite, had a 2-shot lead after he scored four consecutive birdies beginning on the 11th hole, but lost three shots to Kite on the next two.

He regained a share of the lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th, but could not match Kite's birdie-4 on the water-guarded final hole.

Tommy Valentine, the hometown boy who held the second-round lead, had to work hard to salvage a round of par 72 and drifted back to third at 205.

Scott Simpson, a winner at Westchester two weeks ago, vaulted over 53 players with his brilliant 63 that left him at 206.

Simpson, whose 36-hole total of 143 was the figure necessary to qualify for the final two rounds, played with the new U.S. Open champion, Fuzzy Zoeller, in the first group off the tee.

"I wasn't in contention when the day started. Now I am. And that's a good feeling," he said.

He was tied with Mike Donald, who had a 69.

Payne Stewart was alone at 207 after a 69 that included an eagle-3 on the 18th.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw could do no better than a 73 and was 10 shots back of the leader at 212. Zoeller also had a 73 and was at par 216. Hale Irwin withdrew because of an illness in the family.

Kite, winner of the Doral Open earlier in the season, holed three long putts — 25-35 feet in length — reached a par-5 in two and 2-putted for birdie, but still was losing ground to Pooley's strong effort.

Pooley, who calls this "my favorite course," went two shots clear of the field with a wedge shot to seven feet on the 14th hole, his fourth consecutive birdie.

On the 15th, however, Pooley drove into deep trouble, had to play a shot away from the hole to get back in the fairway and made bogey-5. Kite birdied the hole from 10 feet. The 2-shot swing tied them.

And when Pooley bogeyed the 16th from a bunker, Kite led alone.

On the 17th, however, Pooley got it in to about 10 feet and made birdie while Kite had to play a good, long bunker shot to save par. It was still another tie.

Kite, however, went for the green with a 3-wood second shot on the par-5 finishing hole, got it in green-high in the rough, chipped close and birdied.

"I was just on the borderline of doing it," Pooley said. "Today I didn't. Tomorrow, I would."

He made a routine par that left him one back.

Layden Named NBA's Executive Of The Year

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Frank Layden, who earlier was named the National Basketball Association's Coach of the Year after directing the Utah Jazz to its finest season ever, Saturday became a double winner by earning the league's Executive of the Year award.

Layden, who also is the Jazz general manager, received 31 votes from a 76-member panel of sports writers and broadcasters who regularly cover the NBA.

The runner-up was Norm Sonju, the Dallas Mavericks' general manager, with 14½ votes. Boston Celtics President-General Manager Red Auerbach and Detroit Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey tied for third with eight votes apiece. Seven other team executives received one vote each.

The announcement was made here at the NBA's annual meetings and during a luncheon where the jovial Layden was the object of a roast by his peers.

The league's coaches, general managers and front-office personnel held meetings throughout the day, but did not take any major action. The meetings resume Monday, when the league will announce its most valuable player.

The league's Board of Governors, composed of the owners of the 23 teams, will meet Tuesday and Wednesday.

Layden said he was surprised at receiving the executive award and he reeled off the names of others he believed had earned it.

"I don't know if I deserve this more than Red Auerbach, who put together a championship team, or that I'm a better coach than (Boston's) K.C. Jones," Layden said.

"But I'm happy I got it and I'll cherish it. I doubt it'll happen again, so I'm going to savor it," he said.

The Jazz never had known success in 10 years in the NBA and the club was expected to repeat its woeful pattern during the 1983-84 season.

But the 52-year-old Layden and the Jazz shocked the league, compiling a 45-37 record and winning the Midwest Division championship this past season. The Jazz also advanced into the playoffs for the first time and lost to Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals.

"This was the year of the Jazz, so that's why I'm going to really savor this," Layden said.

Layden assumed the dual role of coach and general manager in December, 1981, replacing Tom Nissalke. Utah finished 25-57 that season.

The Jazz wound up 30-52 a year ago.

Track Trials...

former American record holder at 72-3, had a qualifying throw of 66-4¼ and Augie Wolf, the 1984 national champion, threw 66-1¼.

Missing from the field was Brian Oldfield, the American record holder at 72-9¼. The 39-year-old Oldfield lost his legal battle to try out for the Olympic team when a federal appeals court in San Francisco refused Friday to order him entered in the Trials.

Oldfield competed as a professional in the International Track Association from 1973-76. In 1975, he had a 75-0 throw, farther than the present world record of 72-10¼ by East Germany's Udo Beyer, but it never was considered for record recognition because professional marks are ineligible.

A controversy developed during the qualifying of the men's high jump leading up to Sunday's final.

The automatic qualifying height was 7-4½, but the jumpers had been told that if 12 (the number generally moved along into the final), did not meet that standard, those clearing 7-3 would make it.

Eleven jumpers cleared 7-4½ and 11 cleared 7-3. That would mean a huge field of 22 for the final.

But the Games Committee ruled that only those who went over 7-3 on their first attempts and had no misses at lower heights would be admitted to the final. That eliminated six competitors — James Cunningham, Dave Puvogel, Brian Whitehead, Marshall Broadway, James Frazier and Dale Davis.

Of that group, only Cunningham cleared 7-3 on his first try, but he had missed once at 7-1½.

"I had been told by three members of the Games Committee all week that they would take all (to the final) who cleared 2.21 (meters), the equivalent of 7-3 if there were not 12 over 2.25 (7-4½)," said two-time Olympian Dwight Stones. "That's per IAAF (International Amateur Athletic Federation) rules and the way it's always been done ... the way the World Championships (last year) were run. If it's any other way, it's unfair."

"If they're not allowed to qualify, it will be a total disgrace," added Stones, who was not affected by the decision since he had cleared 7-4½, "and an example of the Games Committee running roughshod over the athletes. The Games should be for the athletes. There should not be a lot of last-minute decisions by the Games Committee."

Jimmy Howard, the national champion and considered one of the favorites to make the final, also was not affected by the ruling. He cleared only 7-1½, and said, "My timing was off."

In the women's discus qualifying for Sunday's final, American record holder Leslie Deniz led the way with a toss of 198-7. She was followed by Carol Cady at 193-6 and Lorna Griffin, the winner of the shot put Trials, at 187-6.

Protect Your Boat From Theft — Each year, over 12,000 boats are stolen annually: 214 were reported stolen in North Carolina in 1982. A little extra care on the part of boat owners, however, could reduce this rate considerably. Insurance companies say the following precautions can reduce the risk of boat theft.

- Every boat made after 1971 is required to have a hull-identification number permanently affixed to the hull. Be sure to record this number for your records — it is often the only positive identification that enforcement officials can use to determine ownership of a stolen boat. Although manufacturers are required to "permanently affix" this number to the board, methods of doing this vary widely. It's a good idea to inscribe this number on the hull in a hidden spot which thieves will overlook.

- Note all pertinent data about the boat. This would include year of manufacture, length, beam, color, identifying scratches and dents, and other information. Also, take some pictures of the boat which clearly illustrate these features.

- Outboard engines should be securely locked to the boats at all times. If possible, remove your outboard and store it in a safe place when not in use.

- Use a steel chain or cable and lock to tie up your boat. Avoid leaving boats at unattended docks, especially at night. Also, don't leave small boats or canoes unlocked on docks or on the shore.

- When parking a trailered boat, remove a wheel or attach a lock to the trailer hitch. If you store your boat in a garage, keep the garage closed and locked.

- Install an alarm on your boat's engine and have a second "hidden" switch installed in case a thief bypasses the first alarm.

- Always remove the key from the ignition of your boat when it is not in use.

Reece Designs Quail Print — The International Quail Foundation, a non-profit organization, is proud to announce the selection of Maynard Reece's painting, Bobwhite Quail, as its third annual Quail Research Stamp Print. Reece, an internationally renowned wildlife artist, has gained prominence through his waterfowl paintings but is also considered a premier quail artist.

The signed and numbered quail print by Reece follows designs by Owen Gromme and David Maass. The series, which began in 1982, is now recognized as the nation's number one conservation organization stamp-print collection.

Edition size of the 1984 print is 3,000, with only 50,000 stamps issued. February 15, 1984 was established as the release date for first day covers and souvenir cards.

Bobwhite Quail has an image size of 6½ X 9 inches and is available for $130 from the foundation or a local art dealer. Single stamps are $5 each, with $20 for plate blocks and $50 per sheet of 10 stamps.

IQF prints and stamps are voluntarily purchased by sportsmen and collectors to help bring about a halt to the continued decline of America's quail populations. Because of the success of the stamp-print program, the foundation has provided over $150,000 in research grants to colleges, universities and educational projects in the last two years.

For more information, write: IQF, P.O. Box 550, Edgefield, S.C. 29824-0550, or call (803) 637-3169.

Fishing Report — The Tar River has finally returned to almost normal. This past week the river yielded good catches of both striped bass and bream. Danny Joe Humphrey of Kinston caught a limit of eight stripers with the largest weighing 10½ pounds. Catfish have also been biting nightcrawlers and cutbait well. With the river slightly below normal, the fish are more concentrated and fishing should be great until the next heavy rain.

Coastal fishing has slowed due to the hot weather. Flounder are still biting, as are the grey trout in the inlets.

Clemens Shuts Down Jays

By The Associated Press

Boston rookie pitcher Roger Clemens was anxious to finish what he had started this week in Toronto.

Clemens, a 21-year-old fastballer, mowed down the Blue Jays 8-1 Friday night as the host Red Sox snapped an eight-game losing streak, their longest since 1977. The right-hander scattered six hits, struck out nine and did not walk a batter.

Last Sunday, in Toronto, Clemens pitched four innings, allowing just one hit, and struck out seven before a 1½-hour rain delay forced him out of the game.

"We just didn't get to him, which usually you should do the second time around against a pitcher," said Toronto's Lloyd Moseby. "Give him credit."

Said veteran Boston Manager Ralph Houk: "He's the best looking young prospect I've ever seen. He's so mature it's almost unbelievable."

In other AL games, Texas stopped Oakland 4-0, Cleveland trounced Seattle 13-3, California bopped Kansas City 8-1, Detroit downed Milwaukee 7-3, Baltimore beat New York 5-4, and Chicago topped Minnesota 8-6.

The Blue Jays scored in the first inning on Willie Upshaw's RBI single before Clemens shut them down while the Red Sox bats went to work.

Boston unleashed a 17-hit attack that included Tony Armas' three-run homer, his 18th, in the first inning and Jim Rice's solo shot, his 14th, in the fifth. Bill Buckner drove in two runs with a single and a double.

Rice, in left field, and Buckner, at first base, also contributed a couple of fine catches apiece.

"Before the game, Jimmy (Rice), Tony (Armas) and just about everybody else told me to go right at the hitters," said Clemens, now 3-1. "They told me they'd track down the balls that were hit."

Clemens, who pitched Texas to an NCAA championship a year ago, got his first victory at Fenway Park just one day after the first anniversary of the date he signed his contract with Boston.

"I know I've come a long way in a short time," he said. "Everything is so exciting, but I've got so much more to do."

Rangers 4, A's 0

Texas won the game, even though Larry Parrish, who had driven in runs in 11 straight games, did not get an RBI.

Parrish entered the game two short of the AL record for consecutive games with an RBI, set by Taft Wright of Chicago in 1941. (The major-league record is 17, set by Oscar Grimes of the Chicago Cubs in 1922).

Parrish hit a double in the first inning with Pete O'Brien on first, but the relay from center fielder Dwayne Murphy to shortstop Tony Phillips to catcher Jim Essian nailed O'Brien at the plate.

Rookie left-hander Mike Mason took a three-hitter into the ninth before giving up two singles to start the inning. Dave Tobik got the final three outs in Oakland for his fifth save.

Indians 13, Mariners 3

Cleveland got better production from its 16 hits than Seattle got from its 15. Chris Bando belted a solo home run, his first of the season, along with a three-run double to highlight the Indian attack. Tony Bernazard, who had four hits, and Brett Butler each drove in three runs while Carmelo Castillo added a solo homer for visiting Cleveland.

Barry Bonnell homered for the Mariners.

The victory was not one that Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales got to enjoy in person. He was ejected by plate umpire Mark Johnson in the first inning for arguing balls and strikes while Al Cowens was batting. Cowens went on to bang an RBI double that gave Seattle a 1-0 lead.

Tigers 7, Brewers 3

A crowd of 48,497, the largest at Tiger Stadium since Opening Day, saw Detroit raise its record to 50-18.

Larry Herndon's two-run single keyed a five-run first inning that got the Tigers going.

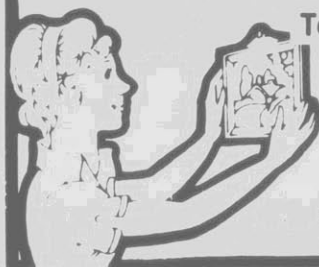

Dave Rozema, 4-0, got the victory by going six innings, his longest outing of the season. Willie Hernandez went the final 2 1-3 innings for his 13th save. Ben Oglivie homered for Milwaukee.

Kriek Wins Bristol Title

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Defending champion Johan Kriek outlasted Brian Teacher 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 Saturday to win the $100,000 West of England tennis tournament and complete his warmup for next week's Wimbledon championships.

It took the South African-born naturalized American 2 hours and 2 minutes to beat the 29-year-old from Los Angeles.

Kriek, 26, pronounced himself "happy and completely mentally attuned" in his preparations for the All-England Lawn Tennis tournament, which begins Monday. "I was a bit apprehensive at the beginning of the week. But my form has gotten better and today's tough match was just the sort of preparation I wanted."

The two fought a close first set and Teacher won the tiebreaker after Kriek had asked the umpire to tell a spectator to extinguish a cigar, whose smoke was wafting across court.

"I am totally against smoking," Kriek explained. "I hate it, and I go crazy when I see it. The smell of this cigar was making me feel sick."

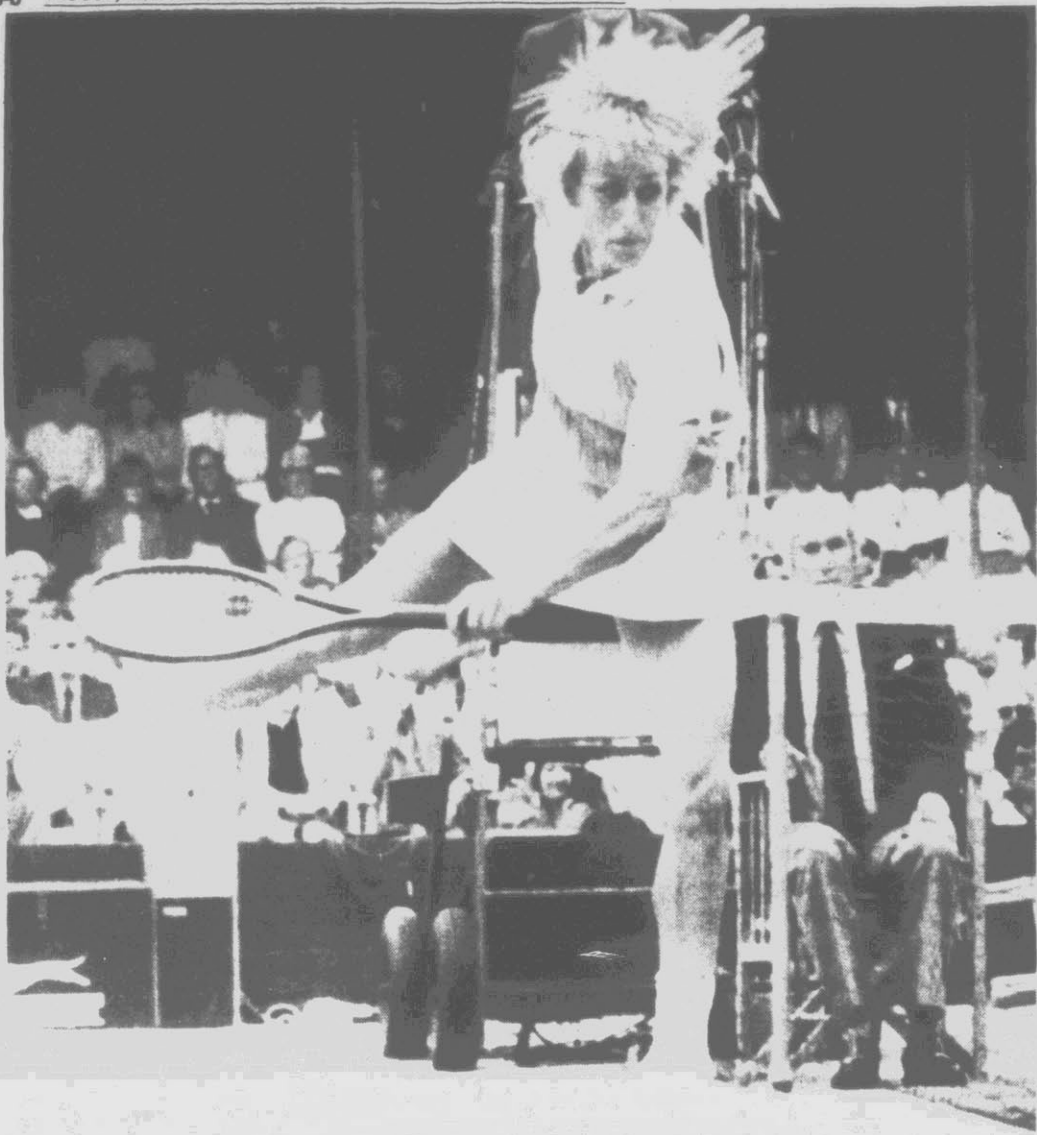

In the second set, Teacher came back from 2-5 to tie at 5-5, saving four set points along the way. But Kriek won the first three rallies of the tiebreaker and took it going away.

In the final set Kriek was 5-1 up but again Teacher rallied to take three games in a row. In the 10th game, Kriek hammered two aces and two service winners to take the game to love and keep his crown.

After the match, Kriek said he saw "no reason at all why I should not make the top 10 and stay there."

With his world ranking hovering now between 14 and 18, he said, "I only have to produce perhaps another four victories in a year — not an impossible task when you are playing well."

In major recent tournaments, Kriek has found it difficult to get past the quarterfinals, when he has run up against John McEnroe or Ivan Lendl. "and they always go on and win the tournament," he said.

Work Remains After Olympians Defeat Indiana Alumni Squad

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — It was a homecoming, a sendoff and another step on the road in a bid for Olympic gold as the U.S. Olympic men's basketball team opened its exhibition schedule.

Coach Bobby Knight, the man directing the team, sent his charges against an Indiana University alumni squad dominated by players who helped him win two NCAA basketball titles, a National Invitation Tournament crown and seven Big Ten championships.

The 124-89 triumph Friday night by the Olympians will mean little to participants on either squad. And after the game, Knight and his players agreed there's a lot of work ahead before the gold medal can be claimed in Los Angeles.

"We've been playing against each other all week in practice. I think it (the game) was like a relief," said Chris Mullin of St. John's, who ignited an early surge by the Olympians that left the Alumni scrambling for the rest of the night. "We had a lot of fun out there, got a good workout and now we can judge where we are now and where we have to go."

Mullin had 10 of his 14 points in the game's first seven minutes as the Olympic team opened an 18-9 advantage. The Alumni never drew closer.

"We've got a long way to go. I think we're making strides forward. More time is going to help us out," Mullin said.

Knight, who decided to give his club a break from practice today, agreed.

"Defensively there was quite a bit of overuse of hands," said Knight, who will next send the team into combat against a National Basketball Association All-Star squad in Providence, R.I., Thursday.

"We tended to mishandle the ball here and there (28 turnovers). Our defense didn't react to situations where we really had to," Knight said. "We committed too many perimeter fouls and lacked good foot usage. In particular, we didn't react well to their offensive movement."

Knight tried to give each of the 16 players contending for the 12 available spots on the team an equal amount of playing time. The plan worked well with everyone receiving from 11 to 19 minutes of action. As a result, the scoring was balanced.

All-American Michael Jordan of North Carolina led the way with 16 and Mullin finished with 14. Vern Fleming of Georgia and former Michigan star Tim McCormick each scored 12 for the winners.

"We've been playing against each other all week," said All-American Sam Perkins of North Carolina, who started at forward along with Mullin. "It's kind of hard to judge how well we're doing. I think for a negative part, we didn't really get back on the transition. They really killed us."

"And if we want to win the gold, we're going to have to stop some of the European teams that do outlet real quick and get back. We found our weaknesses out and we did do positive things, but just couldn't get it going."

Butch Carter of the Indiana Pacers and Isiah Thomas of Detroit each scored 17 to lead an Alumni team that shot only 45 percent while being outrebounded 56-30.

"They've got a good crop of guards because they're all interchangeable," said Thomas, who had 10 of his team's 30 turnovers. "They're all good passers. They're all consistent."

Perkins made a big impression on Thomas, a college opponent when Indiana defeated North Carolina for the 1981 NCAA championship.

"The thing that impressed me the most with Perkins was the range on his shot. I didn't know he was that good a shooter," Thomas said. "He can really shoot it. He was the guy I was most impressed with."

"This is our 13th practice since coming back Friday a week ago. In retrospect, I think the week went well for us," said Knight, who has been using some of his former players in practice.

"I really don't want to get into individuals right now," said Quinn Buckner of the world champion Boston Celtics, one of those who has been helping Knight. "I think it's early. They've made some tremendous strides in trying to get some things set up today."

"That's the most important thing. They're taking advantage of situations. That's what they're going to have to do."

The Alumni led briefly early before two Mullin field goals put the Olympians up for good at 6-5. Perkins and Fleming followed with field goals as the Olympians scored eight unanswered points.

Kent Benson of the Detroit Pistons then hit two free throws for the Alumni. Mullin answered that challenge with a jumper and a lay-in, igniting a 10-2 spurt that left the crowd of 17,113 at Assembly Hall realizing their former heroes were in for a long night.

The Olympians led 58-38 at the intermission.

Jordan Downs Lloyd

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Kathy Jordan handled the physical challenge of Chris Evert Lloyd. The next obstacle was breaking the "psychological barrier" set by Martina Navratilova.

Jordan, 23, ended Lloyd's Grand Slam hopes last year in the third round at Wimbledon. Friday, she played a near-perfect serve and volley game despite a fierce wind and defeated Lloyd 6-2, 6-4 in the semifinals of the $175,000 Eastbourne tennis tournament.

Navratilova, who also experienced difficulties with the conditions, had to come from behind to beat Claudia Kohde of West Germany 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 in Friday's other semifinal.

Looking ahead to today's championship match with Navratilova, the top seed and two-time defending champion, Jordan said: "Martina is obviously the favorite. She has not lost very many matches but I'm going out not just to win a set, but to try and take the match."

Earlier this week, Jordan spoke about a "psychological barrier" that Navratilova had built up over the other players on the circuit.

After beating Lloyd, she said: "I hope I can go some way to breaking that down."

Lloyd, the No. 2 seed, had problems serving throughout the 84-minute center court contest against Jordan. She held serve in the opening game of the match but then lost her next seven service games.

"Kathy played great under the circumstances and conditions," conceded Lloyd, the world's No. 2 player. "She was much smarter than me. I felt awkward because of the wind and I did not play at all well."

Jordan, from King of Prussia, Pa., served for the match at 5-2 in the second set but suddenly had an attack of nerves, double-faulting to give Lloyd a break. Earlier, Lloyd saved a match point with a forehand pass.

"I'm very pleased with the way I played, considering the difficult conditions. Obviously this is a great win and there is a lot of satisfaction because people doubted my win at Wimbledon last year," said Jordan.

Kohde, 20, ranked 14th in the world, won only one game when she faced Navratilova in the fourth round of the French Open earlier this month. But she came out full of confidence despite a 1-8 record in previous matches against the world's No. 1 woman player.

She broke serve in the opening game and then kept Navratilova under pressure with her fierce serve and powerful volleys at the net. When she took the opening set in 37 minutes, it was only the fifth time this year that Navratilova had dropped a set.

Navratilova stormed back and took the second set in just 18 minutes to level the match.

Hopkins struck out nine after giving up a single to the second batter in the top of the first.

Demetrius Carter singled and Lang reached first on a fielder's choice in the bottom of the first before Powers' game-winning RBI.

Carroll & Associates....9
Exchange..... 1

Michael Sutton threw a five-hitter and drove in the game-winning run to lead Carroll & Associates to a 9-1 win over Exchange Friday in Tar Heel Little League baseball action.

The loss knocked Exchange out of the battle for the league lead and gave True Value Hardware the regular season championship.

Toure Claiborne went 2-3 to lead Carroll & Associates, which finished with just seven hits.

Three errors by Exchange in the second inning helped C&A score four runs. Claiborne singled, Chad Adams reached first on an error and Hank Thompson advanced the runners with a sacrifice before Sutton's RBI-fielder's choice.

Everette's 1

Tim Clark fired a three-hitter and Greg Jones slapped a two-run triple to lead Planters Bank to a 3-1 win over Everette's Friday in Babe Ruth League baseball.

Tom Taylor led Planters with two hits in three trips to the plate, while Eric Jarman went 2-4.

Jarman led off with a single in the bottom of the first, and Tim Clark reached first on an error. Jones two-out triple proved to be the only offense Planters would need, as Everette's managed a lone run in the third.

Dodgers Continue To Master Braves

By The Associated Press

There's something about playing the Atlanta Braves that brings out the best in the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers beat Atlanta 11 times in 18 meetings last year and won the National League West flag by three games over the Braves. They have managed to survive a staggering run of injuries and hang in the race this season thanks in no small measure to a 4-1 advantage over Atlanta, including Friday night's 10-4 laugher. It was their second victory in a row after a seven-game losing streak.

"We went through a terrible storm, those seven losses in a row," said Manager Tom Lasorda. "But if we can get this team healthy, they'll hear from us all over the league. It's all the players. They went out and got us nine runs (in Cincinnati) last night and tonight they get us 10. It makes us all very, very happy."

In other NL action, Cincinnati nipped San Diego 8-7, Montreal edged New York 2-1, Pittsburgh swept a double-header from Philadelphia 10-3 and 7-6 in 13 innings, Chicago trounced St. Louis 9-3 and Houston whipped San Francisco 10-3.

Los Angeles jumped on Pete Falcone and knocked him out in a five-run first inning. Steve Sax hit Falcone's first pitch for a single and one out later R.J. Reynolds homered. Pedro Guerrero followed with a double — the first of his four hits — Mike Marshall walked and Steve Yeager's single made it 3-0. Candy Maldonado's RBI single chased Falcone and Rick Camp surrendered a double to Bill Russell.

Bob Welch scattered 11 hits in eight innings and contributed an RBI single in the third. Maldonado homered in the fifth as the third-place Dodgers climbed within 4½ games of front-running San Diego. "You ain't seen nothing yet," said Lasorda.

Reds 8, Padres 7

A throwing error by San Diego center fielder Luis Salazar on a single by Dave Parker allowed Duane Walker to score the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning. After Eddie Milner's two-run triple off Padres relief ace Rich Gossage tied the game in the bottom of the eighth, Walker opened the ninth by drawing a walk from Gossage, the 10th base on balls given up by San Diego pitchers. Parker followed with a single to center and Salazar's throw to third caromed off Walker and rolled to the dugout railing as Walker continued home.

Graig Nettles and Steve Garvey homered as the Padres built a 6-2 lead after three innings. It was Garvey's first since May 13. Walker's seventh homer ignited a three-run fourth for the Reds.

Expos 2, Mets 1

Andre Dawson, who hit hit 32 home runs last year, hit only his third of this season, but it was a two-run shot in the fourth inning as the Expos defeated rookie sensation Dwight Gooden, who held them to five hits and fanned 11 to take the NL strikeout lead.

Pete Rose got the first Montreal hit, singling off Gooden's ankle to lead off the fourth inning. Dawson then hit Gooden's next pitch over the fence in center field for his first home run since May 5. Meanwhile, winning pitcher Bill Gullickson scattered eight hits in 8 2-3 innings before needing last-out help from Gary Lucas.

"It's been a frustrating year for me, but physically I'm feeling better," said Dawson, who has been hampered by ailing knees and brought an embarrassing .211 batting average into the game. "I've been working with our hitting coach, Billy DeMars, trying to straighten out a few mechanical things."

Pirates 10-7, Phillies 3-6

Dale Berra's long fly ball single with one out and the bases loaded in the 13th inning gave Pittsburgh its sweep. Jason Thompson hit a two-run homer — his first since May 14 and Pittsburgh's first at home in 11 games — and Lee Lacy drove in three runs with a double and single in the opener while Larry McWilliams scattered 10 hits and did not allow an earned run. Thompson's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning tied the second game 6-6.

In the 13th inning of the nightcap, Rafael Belliard greeted reliever Bill Campbell with a line shot that center fielder Von Hayes dropped for a three-base error. Campbell issued two intentional walks to load the bases and got Jim Morrison to ground into a force at the plate before Berra lifted a towering fly that landed on the left-field warning track. The sweep gave the Pirates a four-game winning streak and extended the Phillies' skid to four games, dropping them a full game behind the Mets in the NL East.

Milt May drove in three runs for Pittsburgh in the second game with a single and his first home run of the season, while Philadelphia's Sixto Lezcano slammed a three-run homer.

Cubs 9, Cardinals 3

Keith Moreland's three-run homer in the first inning and two-run shots by Jody Davis and Ron Cey highlighted a 13-hit Chicago attack. Winner Rick Reuschel scattered eight hits in 7 1-3 innings and Lee Smith notched his 14th save.

"There'll be times when I'll struggle," said Moreland, who has two doubles, a triple, three homers and 10 RBIs in six games since regaining the right field job on a full-time basis following last week's trade of Mel Hall. "But it's different when you're playing every day. You're relaxed, you see the ball better, you're more aggressive and you know the strike zone a lot better."

Astros 10, Giants 3

Mike Scott scattered 11 hits in 8 2-3 innings and Bill Doran drove in four runs with a single and two triples. Houston broke a 1-1 tie with four runs in the fourth off loser Mike Krukow on singles by Harry Spilman, Jose Cruz and Kevin Bass, Ray Knight's sacrifice fly, a walk to Mark Bailey — he homered in the second inning — and singles by Scott and Doran.

"I'm choking up quite a bit, that's something I've never done before," said Doran, who was hitting only .206 prior to the game. "Choking up on the bat has shortened up my swing. It's allowing me to get the barrel of the bat on the ball. I feel a little uncomfortable at the plate, but it seems to work. I feel like I'm getting better bat control."

Brisco-Hooks Earns Second Spot On Olympic Track Unit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Valerie Brisco-Hooks cradled her young son and waved an American Flag as she walked back past the Coliseum stands, smiling broadly.

She had good reason to be happy. By winning the women's 200-meter final at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials Friday night, she earned her second berth on the U.S. team and a possible shot at four gold medals.

Brisco-Hooks ran the third fastest 200 ever by an American, 22.16, after claiming a spot on the U.S. women's 400-meter team with a second-place finish behind Chandra Cheeseborough on Tuesday.

Florence Griffith finished second in the 200 in 22.40, and Randy Givens was third in 22.59 to earn the other two berths on the American squad in that event.

In Friday's only other final, John Crist nipped Tim Bright by four points, 8,102 to 8,098, in the decathlon with a better time in the final event, the 1500 meters. Jim Wooding finished third at 8,072 to also win an Olympic berth.

Although Hooks has won only two berths, there's a possibility that she also could run on two relay teams in the Games because of ailments suffered by the top two American sprinters, Evelyn Ashford and Cheeseborough — who were ranked 1-2 in the 200 but withdrew.

Ashford, the Trials 100-meter winner, pulled up with a tender hamstring muscle in the earlier 200 qualifying, while Cheeseborough left before the final with what was thought to be a mild case of bronchitis.

"With Evelyn out, it opened up my chances (of competing in the short relays)," said Brisco-Hooks, a Los Angeles native.

Brooks Johnson, coach of the U.S. women's team, has said he will not name his relay teams until after a two-week camp at Santa Barbara in mid-July. Should Ashford not feel up to run a relay in addition to the 100, Brisco-Hooks quite possibly could be named to the 400-meter relay team.

No woman has won four gold medals since Fanny Blankers-Koen of the Netherlands accomplished it in 1948. Wilma Rudolph's three golds in 1960 were the most ever by an American woman in track and field.

Brisco-Hooks, who is married to wide receiver Alvin Hooks of the Buffalo Bills, said she tried to take the Trials in stride.

NFL Clears Schlichter For Return To Indianapolis

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Art Schlichter says he views his reinstatement to the National Football League as just one step on his road to rehabilitation.

The former Ohio State University quarterback learned Friday that his 14-month suspension for gambling had been lifted and he could join the Indianapolis Colts for summer training camp that gets underway June 13.

"It's just a start, but it's a good start, and something that I have worked for for over a year now," Schlichter, 24, said.

Colts spokesman Bob Walters said Schlichter will be one of five players competing for the starting quarterback position.

Schlichter was suspended from the then-Baltimore Colts in May 1983 after he told law enforcement authorities that he had run up a $389,000 gambling debt, including wagers on NFL games.

According to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, the quarterback admitted placing "sizeable bets on at least 10 NFL games during the 1982 season and post-season" and on other pro team sports.

Schlichter said, however, that he had never bet on or against the Colts, never attempted to influence the outcome of a game or accepted money from those interested in doing so.

After the suspension, Schlichter entered a program for treatment of compulsive gambling and says he expects to be in therapy for some time.

He also said he has been working out frequently and feels his physical condition is as good as ever.

"I hope to find the strength to overcome my past difficulties ... and prove I can make it back," Schlichter said, adding that he expects public criticism upon his return.

"I'm going to have mixed reviews," he admitted, "but I will go and do my best and hope, day by day, to be able to cope with them."

Schlichter said that he met with Rozelle about six weeks ago and had hoped to hear from him earlier this month, but learned only Thursday that a letter would come Friday.

The letter, which informed him of his reinstatement, contains guidelines he must follow, but Schlichter would not elaborate on them.

"I really don't want to get into that too much, but it just basically was to continue treatment and represent the NFL as well as I possibly could and within the integrity ... of the league and that's what I intend to do," he said.

"I can't describe what I've been through in the past year," he said. "I want to thank the commissioner for having faith in me and giving me the opportunity to play again. I had thought at one time that I wasn't going to get the opportunity to play again, and for him to show the faith and give me a hand and say 'come on and try again' is an uplift toward me and gives me an ample desire."

Griffith Signs Over Control Of Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Saying it was time to step aside, but not out, Minnesota Twins owner Calvin Griffith signed a letter of intent Friday that contains the offer by Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad to buy a majority interest in the American League team.

Griffith, his sister and co-owner Thelma Haynes and Pohlad signed the document at home plate of the Metrodome before the team's game against the Chicago White Sox. The final contracts have not been worked out, however, and Pohlad will not officially own the team for several weeks.

Tears flowed from Griffith as the Twins players came on the field to offer their goodbyes.

Griffith, presenting Pohlad with a baseball, said, "I hope there's not a lot of curves in it."

The soon-to-be Twins owner held the ball aloft, saying, "This is probably the most expensive baseball in the world."

Details of the agreement have not been released, but Pohlad is reportedly offering about $32 million for 52 percent of the Twins stock. Another 42 percent of the stock was sold by its owner, Gabe Murphy, to a group of Tampa, Fla., investors, but the American League owners have not approved the sale, and Pohlad says he is talking with Murphy about buying the stock.

The agreement ended a long and highly publicized search for a buyer that would keep the team in Minnesota.

"We got down to one person that we feel that's going to do the job for the community. We're very, very happy to be with Carl. He's been after me for 10 years to buy the ballclub," Griffith said at a news conference before the signing.

Pohlad said he will not drastically change the organization's structure and will not be involved himself with the day-to-day operation of the team.

"We want to field a team that the state of Minnesota and the entire Upper Midwest region is going to be proud of," Pohlad said. "I don't play to lose, I play to win."

Pohlad has said he isn't a great baseball fan and doesn't know a lot about the game's details, but he told reporters his attitude has changed recently.

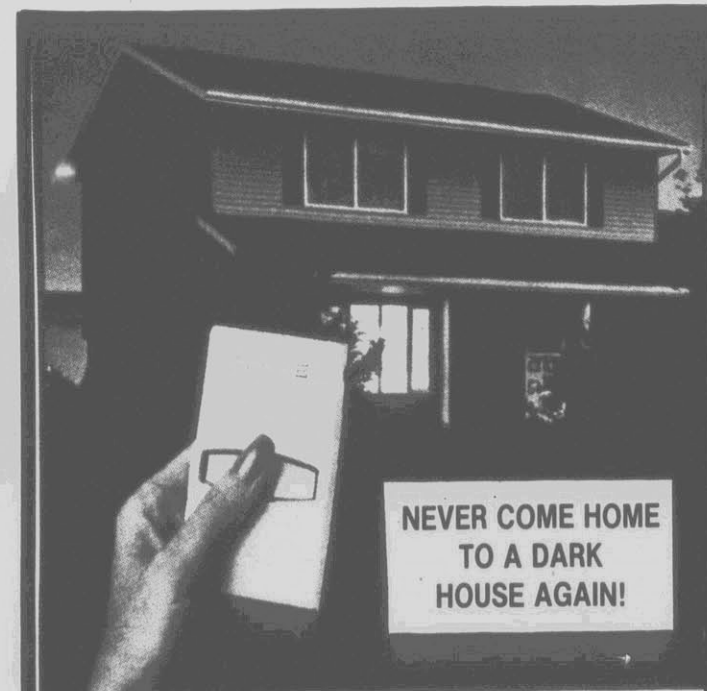

"Since I got involved, particularly the last week or two, I've developed a great deal of pride in being a part of baseball. I never thought I'd develop it to the degree I have in such a short period of time," he said.

Part of the agreement is that several members of the Griffith family, including Calvin, will continue in the teams' management, but the exact roles of the Griffith family members have not been determined.

Asked if he had any advice for the new owner, Griffith told Pohlad, "Be very careful what you read in the papers."

Griffith has faced considerable criticism in the media his refusal to pay high salaries to players like Rod Carew, Larry Hise and Dan Ford, all of whom left the team. Griffith said he wouldn't miss being in the limelight.

"If I could keep my name out of the paper for a year, I'd be the happiest guy in the whole world," he said.

Industry Marked By Competition

Supermarket Unions Forecast

By ROGER GILLOTT

AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fiercely competitive supermarket industry is likely to be marked by more mergers and new features as it tries to grow and respond to exploding demographic changes such as one-person households and working wives, officials say.

"I believe we will see a further consolidation," said Mike Miller, spokesman for Salt Lake City, Utah-based American Stores Inc., which operates such chains as Saks, Alpha Beta, Acme Markets and Rea & Derick.

Earlier this month, American agreed to pay $1.15 billion for Chicago-based Jewel Cos., creating the nation's third-largest chain of food and drug stores.

In March, Oakland-based Safeway Stores, the country's largest supermarket operator, bought 23 Southern California outlets from Thriftmart of Los Angeles.

Asked if more small chains would be gobbled up by the majors, Miller replied, "It's not a matter of bigness or smallness. If a small company is successful, it has a lot of potential for growth."

He said takeovers usually offer a more economical means of expansion than new construction.

But at the same time as the move to expand, high operating costs, including wages, force cutbacks in some areas, said Safeway spokeswoman Felicia del Campo. Safeway earlier this month warned it may close 76 stores in its Sacramento division unless they show a profit.

Last year, the industry posted a modest increase of 7.6 percent in retail sales, according to the Washington, D.C.-based Food Marketing Institute.

Meanwhile, the food industry is trying to cope with sweeping demographic changes.

"Their impact on our industry is dramatic," Allen Bildner, president of Kings Supermarkets of Irvington, N.J., told a convention of the food institute in Dallas in May. "After all, we see every family in America at least once a week."

Those changes, outlined by the institute's executive vice president, Timothy Hammonds, are:

—The single-person household is the fastest-growing group in the country in this decade. By next year, half of all households will have either one or two people.

—The majority of all women above the age of 16 now work outside the home, and the number of two-income households is steadily increasing.

Those changes put more pressure on markets to provide convenience food and quick service.

"What we have is a picture of very busy people for whom time-convenience becomes very important," said Karen Brown, a spokeswoman for the food institute.

"There are more working women with less time but more money," said Safeway's Ms. del Campo. "We are trying to offer them one-stop convenience by building bigger stores with such things as delis, florists, natural food bars, automated bank tellers and a lot more special features."

She said the bigger markets — dubbed "superstores" in the industry — sprawl over 40,000 square feet. That's 45 percent larger than the 27,600-square-foot stores Safeway built a decade ago.

In addition, economy markets — those that eschew frills, have small staffs and let customers bag their own groceries — are taking a bigger bite out of the consumer dollar, the food institute said.

Of the 158,000 food stores in the nation, economy stores, which began coming into vogue because of high inflation in the late 1970s, now account for 9.1 percent, according to the institute. About 19 percent of the total stores are supermarkets.

The use of electronic checkout scanners also is allowing store operators to more quickly spot a drop-off in sales and changes in the types of products being sold, so stores can be tailored to consumer preferences.

"Customers are fragmenting into more and more diverse groups, from Yuppies to Guppies to Hispanics to Hush Puppies. All have their own special needs," Hammonds said. Yuppies is a term used for young urban professionals. Guppies are gay urban professionals; Hush Puppies, Hammonds said, are technical workers.

IBM Price Cuts Hit Me-Too Lines

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM's price cuts on its personal computers are quickly rippling through the industry.

The most notable effect is on those companies that make computers compatible with software designed for International Business Machines Corp.'s own desktop computers.

The success of these "plug-compatible" makers depends on their ability to sell me-too products at a lower price than IBM's own computers, or at least to offer a similarly priced machine that has more features than IBM's.

But IBM recently threw those companies a curve by slashing prices by up to 23 percent across its entire personal-computer line.

Industry trackers said the plug-compatible makers had no choice but to follow suit, and some did this past week.

ITT Corp. in New York cut prices on some of its Xtra personal computers by up to 24 percent. Corona Data Systems Inc. of Thousand Oaks, Calif., dropped prices from 11 percent to more than 20 percent on its computers and from 22 percent to 34 percent on add-on products.

A week earlier, Columbia Data Products Inc. of Columbia, Md., reduced prices on its entire line of IBM-compatible computers 10 percent to 15 percent below IBM's new lower prices.

Crop Reports Bring Price Declines

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Government reports of larger-than-expected soybean stocks and a smaller-than-expected decline in hogs prompted sharply lower prices for frozen pork bellies, live hogs and soybeans in futures trading Friday, analysts said.

On the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, live hogs and frozen pork bellies fell the maximum allowed in one day's trading. Soybeans for delivery in July fell the 30-cent limit at the Chicago Board of Trade.

The major factors influencing grain and soybean prices were weather and a report on grain inventories released Thursday by the Agriculture Department.

Additional rain fell in Western Iowa and Nebraska, where more than 1 million acres of crop land are already under water. Concern that conditions there will reduce the size of the crop prompted buying that supported corn and soybeans for delivery in the fall.

But the grain stocks report disclosed that soybean stocks as of June 1 were larger than the market anticipated and that prompted many traders to sell soybeans for delivery in July and August. Pressure on those contracts spilled into others as well and pushed soybeans lower across the board despite the support from weather concerns.

Soybean prices fell early, rallied sharply later in the session and finally plunged near the close.

"It was a wild and wooly session," said Victor Lespinasse, a floor trader with Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc.

The report said corn and wheat stocks were about what analysts had expected and had little impact on prices.

Wheat settled 2½ cents to 4¼ cents lower with the contract for delivery in July at $3.53¼ a bushel; corn was ¾ cent lower to ¼ cent higher with July at $3.53¼ a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 1½ cents lower with July at $1.80½ a bushel; and soybeans were 1½ cents to 30 cents lower with July at $7.77¼ a bushel.

A report on hog and pig inventories released Thursday by the USDA pressured prices throughout the livestock markets.

The report said farmers have 9 percent fewer hogs than a year ago. Prices fell sharply despite the decline because analysts had expected a drop of 11 to 13 percent.

"The market just wasn't ready for the disappointment," said Phil Stanley, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc.

After the close of trading, the USDA reported that 127 million pounds of pork bellies are in warehouse storage freezers, a 97 percent increase from last year. Total stored pork supplies were up 50 percent.

Total red meat supplies, which include beef and pork, are up 31 percent from last year. The report disclosed conditions as of June 1.

Stanley said the report is likely to put additional pressure on the pork complex Monday.

Cattle prices also were under pressure, since the additional pork supplies will put more product on the market to compete with beef for the shopper's dollar.

Live cattle settled .25 cent to .50 cent lower with the contract for delivery in August at 63.05 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .37 cent to .70 cent lower with August at 65.37 cents a pound; live hogs were 1.50 cents lower in all delivery months with July at 55.87 cents a pound; and pork bellies were 2 cents lower in all delivery months with July at 69.87 cents a pound.

Market Investors Difficult To Please

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If there was ever any doubt, stock-market investors have made it plain lately that they're a tough bunch to please.

The economy right now looks, on paper at least, like a classic picture of prosperity. Its growth is strong and persistent, and inflation remains at bay.

In a "flash" estimate issued Wednesday, the Commerce Department put growth of the gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, at a 5.7 percent inflation-adjusted annual rate for the second quarter of the year.

At the same time, it raised the figure for growth in the first quarter from 8.8 percent to 9.7 percent.

To top that off, the department calculated the annual inflation rate for the second quarter at 2.8 percent, down from 3.9 percent in the first quarter. No sign of "overheating" there.

President Reagan called the latest report "remarkably good news." Many analysts said his elation was understandable, since it seemed to reinforce his chances for re-election in November.

But the response to the numbers, which were a lot stronger than just about everyone expected, was much different on Wall Street. Bond prices tumbled, sending long-term interest rates higher, and stocks sold off, too, although they recovered within a few hours.

Many analysts say the disparity between the current state of the economy and the markets can be explained partly by the perspective investors take. They focus not on the present, but on the future — what is likely to occur three, six or nine months ahead.

With the vast amount of economic analysis now done on Wall Street, and the expanding role of investing institutions in the markets, some observers believe market participants may be looking farther into the future than ever before. For months now, a lot of economic study in the financial world has concentrated on 1985.

Under this line of thinking, a case can be made that the stock market did indeed respond to today's upbeat news — a year to 18 months in advance. The surge in stock prices between August 1982 and last summer may be viewed as a correct anticipation by investors of the robust recovery now taking place.

Apply the same reasoning to the market's recent behavior, and you get a picture of a much less healthy economy by, say, the first few months of 1985. That assumes, however, that stock market investors are as accurate in their appraisal of the outlook now as they have been in the recent past. And that last point is open to debate.

The mood in the stock market brightened a bit in the past week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 44.17 to 1,131.07, bouncing back from a 44.35-point drop the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.90 to 89.07, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 2.83 at 202.01.

Big Board volume averaged 100.95 million shares a day, against 77.16 million the week before.

The widespread, and much-publicized, view on Wall Street of the economy right now is that it is overindulging in growth, enjoying a euphoria that must almost inevitably be followed by a "morning after" malaise. The symptoms, many observers say, are already showing up in high interest rates that are straining the delicate international financial system.

What is needed, people who take this view argue, is a degree of slowing in the economy that can allow for lower interest rates without straying into recession. That slowdown, as the latest GNP figures demonstrate, has proved elusive. But a good many economists believe it has begun.

"The economy is settling down to cruising speed," maintains the investment firm of Shearson Lehman-American Express. "A more moderate, but still solid, rate of economic expansion should be apparent over the next few quarters."

Plant Expansion

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (UPI) — IBM says it will build a 300,000 square foot building at its site in the Research Triangle Park.

The addition will boost the company's Research Triangle Park complex to almost four million square-feet of office, development and manufacturing space on 827 acres.

Merged Approved

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Shareholders of State Bank of Raleigh have voted to merge with United Carolina Bank. The merger will take effect Sept. 1, subject to approval by regulatory authorities.

Nissan Plant Marks 1st Anniversary

By MARTA WARNICK
Associated Press Writer

SMYRNA, Tenn. (AP) — From his front porch, Richard McClary can scan several hundred acres where soybeans grew and cattle grazed before Nissan cultivated a $660 million truck plant.

The land McClary's great-great grandfather settled is fertile ground for a crop of trucks by Japan's No. 2 automaker and soon will be the production site of new Sentra cars as well.

A year after the first truck rolled off the assembly line June 16, 1983, Nissan predicts a profit for its U.S. subsidiary in 1986.

Asked about expansion plans, Marvin T. Runyon, president and chief operating officer of Nissan Motor Manufacturing Corp. U.S.A., said, "Anything's possible."

Like other Japanese automakers, Nissan is making the most of voluntary quota restrictions that limit the number of Japanese-made cars that can be brought into the United States for sale.

By producing cars in this country, a company avoids import quotas. Light trucks have no quotas but do carry a 25 percent duty charge.

"The Japanese auto plants springing up all over the United States are a creature of protectionism," said David Healy, auto analyst for the New York securities firm of Drexel, Burnham, Lambert Inc.

The Smyrna plant is among several factories opened in the United States by foreign automakers.

Honda Motor Co. builds Accords in Marysville, Ohio. Toyota Motor Co. will assemble cars in Fremont, Calif., in a joint venture with General Motors Corp.

An estimated 10.4 million cars are sold each year in this country, 8 million of them made here, 2.4 million made abroad, according to industry analysts and Ward's Automotive Report, the industry's weekly business publication. Japanese carmakers want a bigger slice of the pie.

Jim Alexandre, an analyst with the securities firm of Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette, believes these plants represent "a real threat" to American carmakers because "they seem to be able to run those plants better than American plants."

"For one thing, the UAW (United Auto Workers Union) has had trouble making inroads. They tend to be newer plants and better designed plants," he said. "They encourage a community attitude and seem to be able to motivate their employees."

With the introduction of the Sentra in April 1985, the Smyrna plant will be producing at capacity — 240,000 trucks and cars annually.

Production has increased from six trucks on that first day to a daily average of 450. "Job 1" was the first truck off the assembly line last year. The last off the line in time for the first-year anniversary was "Job 64,932."

In Smyrna, an unassuming town with a population of 8,800, residents are still learning to cope with the changes wrought by such a bustling industry.

"Before Nissan, Smyrna was a small nice, quiet community. Now it's a bigger nice, not-so-quiet community," said McClary, whose family made more than $1 million when they sold 200 acres to Nissan.

For years, Smyrna was a stop on the railroad line between Nashville and Chattanooga. It took its name from the closest public building, the Smyrna Presbyterian Church.

The town's economy was bolstered when the U.S. Air Force established a base here in World War II, but it closed in the late 1960s.

"When the Air Force picked up and left, people around here thought that would be the end of this place," said Calvin Scott, who grew up in Smyrna and now works for Nissan. "But Nissan turned things around."

At one time, Smyrna was known for its speed traps and resultant fines. Now the town's claim to fame is Nissan. And it doesn't have to rely on speeding tickets now that Nissan has brought 1,900 jobs and will add an additional 1,100 next spring to help produce the Sentra.

"I want to stay here," said Scott, a 26-year-old Nissan technician. "I hope this will be my last job."

Nissan, which is putting an additional $85 million into the $660 million plant to gear up for the Sentra production, seems confident about the future.

"Sales would have to drop 50 percent before we would lay off anybody," Nissan's Runyon said.

Runyon, 59, who dresses in the same blue uniform that his technicians wear, kicks off his shoes and leans back against a sofa in a plush sitting room at the Smyrna plant as he warms to the subject.

"We've proven that we're capable of producing quality goods. Most of our technicians didn't come from an automobile background. But not only is the quality of our trucks as good as the ones built in Japan, it's better," Runyon said.

Runyon, a Texas native and former Ford Motor Co. executive, criticizes the "perceived need for quotas," meant to give U.S. automakers a chance to catch up with their Japanese counterparts.

FACE PAINTING ... was one of the activities at the summer solstice celebration Thursday evening at River Park North. Here, Mary Ruth Spagnolo paints a rainbow and clouds on the face of young Joe Hannon.

Summer Solstice Is Celebrated

The once-popular summer solstice celebration often goes unobserved today, but a group of people gathered Thursday in Greenville for festivities in honor of the ancient event.

"We are trying to remember something that we as humans have done for thousands of years by observing the rituals of the changing seasons," Amy Hannon, coordinator of the celebration, said.

Ms. Hannon, who became interested in the event from her former career of teaching philosophy of religion, has been master of ceremonies at the celebration since she began sponsoring the event last year. These solstice activities have been held at the Town Commons four times, but this one marked the first held at a new location — River Park North.

Ms. Hannon coordinates the ritual four times each year at the changing of the seasons. Summer solstice, usually observed on June 21 or 22, is the moment in the northern hemisphere when the sun is closest to the earth, which creates the longest day of the year.

"Summer solstice is one of the four major celebrations that ancient people (pre-Christian agricultural people) observed. Since Christianity mid-summer celebrations have mostly diminished," said Dr. Charles Sullivan, folklorist in the English department at East Carolina University.

Sullivan said the old celebrations were similar to today's Halloween activities when spirits are abroad and strange things occur. He said most of the celebrations involved bonfires, dancing and feasting.

"It signifies the first day of summer and I suspect that at one time it had a lot to do with what the farmers did — some sort of signal concerning their crops and their lands," he said.

The River Park ritual began when the group formed a circle to listen to words about the event from Ms. Hannon. Each person, in turn, then told the others a word that reminded him of summertime. Several participants read poetry and sang, followed by dancing by all.

Some participants, mostly children, had their faces painted with their favorite animals and plants and a feast followed in the park's picnic shelter.

"Summer solstice is a powerful day for magic," Dr. Sullivan commented.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There are four kinds of people who buy garments with a label inside that reads, "DRY CLEAN ONLY."

There are those who don't sweat, those who do not declare all of their income to the government, and those who cannot read a word of English.

I belong to the fourth group. We're idealists who never believe a bird will spritz us when we are indoors. We never imagine there will be a fresh blueberry (for which there is no antidote) on a park bench. We never consider the odds of reaching for salt and having our bosom drag through the gravy on our roast beef.

No, we just dance along the yellow brick road like we have some sort of immunity to the stains and spots of life. Clothing manufacturers wait for people like me to be born — people who pick up a garment that looks like you can throw it in the washing machine and who never read the label until we have fallen in love with it and taken it home.

I would like to think I am the same person when I wear a DRY CLEAN ONLY as I am when I'm wearing a MACHINE WASHABLE, but who am I kidding? I'm as tense as a bullfighter entering the arena with irregularity problems. As I slide a pure silk dress over my head (that I THOUGHT was polyester when I bought it), I pinch my lips together until they turn white. Not good enough — I still get lipstick on the collar.

As I wash my hands, water splashes down the front of it. The oil from the car door grabs at it. When I walk into a room, friendly dogs come out of nowhere and small children with sticky fingers throw their arms around my neck. Speaking of necks, I am careful not to put makeup on it, yet it secretes a ring-around-the-collar that cries for the work of a professional cleaner.

What's a woman to do? I bought a little cotton jacket the other day that I thought was "safe." It was one of those casual, perma-wrinkle things where you pushed the sleeves up and wore it over slacks. I threw inhibitions to the winds. I ate tomatoes in it and an ice cream bar. I stood under trees, pumped my own gas and brushed my teeth while wearing it. When I went to toss it into the washer, I saw the label, "DRY YOU KNOW WHAT."

As a friend of mine said when I gave her a handpainted bib at a baby shower that said, "DRY CLEAN ONLY" ... "Erma, you're a loser."

Walsh-Clifton Wedding Held Saturday

Amy Lou Clifton and Theodore Barnum Keating Walsh, both of New York City, were married Saturday at 4 p.m. in St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, Greenville.

John R. Price, Janice Edmiston and Denis Ring officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William H. Clifton of Greenville and the late William H. Clifton. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John N. Walsh Jr. of Buffalo, N.Y.

Given in marriage by her brother, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white silk taffeta designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped reembroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice was overlaid with reembroidered alencon lace interspersed with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. Long-fitted puff sleeves were fashioned by imported English net and alencon lace appliques beaded with pearls extending into calla points. From the dropped waistline fell the full gathered skirt and attached chapel train of taffeta. Her walking length veil fell from a cap of alencon lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascade of lilacs and lilies.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Cecil Hale III, sister of the bride, of Greenville. The bridesmaids were Mrs. John N. Walsh III of Buffalo, N.Y., sister-in-law of the bridegroom; Mrs. Robert Ayres of Concord, Mass., sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. David Clifton of New Bern, sister-in-law of the bride; Ms. Helen Ruth Fleming of Greenville;

Ms. Kathy McDonough of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Rodney Sawyer of Charlotte; and Mrs. W. Timothy Locke of Alexandria, Va.

They wore formal-length gowns of rosette linen designed with an open neckline and miniature rolled fabric straps. The gowns were complemented with short linen jackets styled with short gathered sleeves and shoulder tucks. They carried cascades of spring flowers.

The junior bridesmaid was Miss Ursula Ayres of Concord, Mass., niece of the bridegroom; the flower girl, Miss Kyle Walsh of Buffalo, N.Y., niece of the bridegroom. They wore white cotton dresses designed with square necks outlined by white ruffles trimmed in rosette silk. The fitted bodices were accented by short puff sleeves.

Ushers were John N. Walsh III of Buffalo, N.Y., brother of the bridegroom; Michael K. Walsh of Buffalo, N.Y., brother of the bridegroom; David Clifton of New Bern, brother of the bride; Edward F. Walsh Jr. of Buffalo, N.Y., cousin of the bridegroom; Henry A. Justice of Atlanta, Ga.; William J. Whelan Jr. of Berkeley Heights, N.J.; and Christopher Kiggings of Charlottesville, Va. The junior usher was Michael Dickerson of Greenville, nephew of the bride.

The organist was Dr. Rosemary Fischer; the soloist, Mrs. Julie Tucker. Mrs. Joseph O. Clark directed the wedding.

A reception was given by the bride's mother at the Sheraton Inn. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stocks. A wedding brunch was given by William H. Clifton Jr., brother of the bride, at his home. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a cocktail party and rehearsal dinner at the King and Queen North. Mrs. Joseph Clark and Mrs. Rodney Sawyer entertained the bridesmaids at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Van C. Fleming Jr., Miss Helen Ruth Fleming, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Young entertained at a cocktail buffet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fleming.

After a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga., and Canada, the couple will live in New York.

The bride is an associate in corporate finance at Morgan, Stanley and Company in New York. The bridegroom is president of investments at Penn Columbia, Inc. She graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; he from Williams College in Williamstown, Mass. Both received master's degrees in private and public management from Yale University.

Transplants Expensive
Organ transplants are becoming more common, but the cost still is high, says the Health Insurance Association of America. The going rate for a heart transplant is about $70,000, including surgery, doctor and hospital fees. A kidney transplant is in the $60,000 range and the newly developed liver transplant procedure might cost up to $100,000.

Balding Is Tough For 22-Year-Old To Accept

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

more involved psychologically than meets the eye.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for two years to a wonderful man. He's intelligent, handsome, affectionate and is very good to me. We love each other dearly and have a fantastic sex life.

My problem? He has to have another woman on the side. He always lets me know when he is seeing someone else so he doesn't have to sneak around. (I'd rather know.) So far it's never gotten out of hand or robbed me of my time with him.

I used to have an open mind about his other women on the side, but lately I've begun to suffer pangs of jealousy.

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: You feel threatened. And with good reason. Very few people are able to share the one they love with another.

Counseling for both of you might help resolve your problem by curing your jealousy, or eliminating his need for other women.

It might also bring to light the reason your husband feels compelled to "let you know," and your reason for "wanting to know"—although you find it painful.

It's time to tell your husband that the "other woman on the side" deal you agreed to some years ago is not working.

DEAR ABBY: I love birds, and was encouraged to know that at least one other reader was offended by the expression "for the birds." How it came to mean something undesirable, I do not know, but I offer this poem that deals with that subject:

No rocket in the weightlessness of space

Can rival their efficiency and grace

As over valleys, plains and hills they ply

The cloud-embracing currents of the sky.

They scour every crevice, cleft and hole,

Devouring pests no poison can control.

Their balance countless wild ecologies

And scatter showers of music through the trees.

KATHY WINKLER, DULUTH, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: My sister's son is the problem I'm writing about. There must be something wrong with him. He steals ladies' underwear. When he was a little boy, he used to steal ladies' underwear from the neighbor's clothesline, but now that he's older, he steals ladies' underwear from stores. He has been in and out of jail for this reason.

My sister took him to two doctors, and they told her there is nothing wrong with him, but they must be mistaken because that's all he ever steals.

Right now, he's sitting in jail again for this very same reason. Now you can't tell me that kid isn't sick in the head.

I'll be looking for your answer.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Stealing anything is a crime, but when a male steals ladies' underwear, the act takes on a special meaning.

Your nephew is not necessarily "sick in the head," he's just hung up on ladies' underwear. A psychologist or psychiatrist should explain this to your sister and her son. With treatment, he may no longer be hung up on what's hung up on clotheslines.

DEAR ABBY: I ride to and from work with a woman who smokes in the car. It's her car. I don't pay her for the ride, but I do fill the tank occasionally.

Although she cracks the window, the fumes still bother me. It's hard for me to talk because of the smoke. Sometimes she leaves the cigarette burning in the ashtray.

How can I let her know that I am gagging from the fumes? I have to ride with her daily, so I can't cause too much friction. Is there a tactful way of handling this? I know she enjoys her cigarettes, so I hate to tell her how I feel.

Exciting Fascination In Trapeze 'Flying'

By JENNIFER GAVIN
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Shake hands with petroleum engineer Mark Sexton, and you'll be grasping one of his "wings" — he lives to fly trapeze, where his life is as much in his hands as the bar on which he swings.

Bernadette Pace works, by day, as a researcher in genetics. By night, at the Denver Central YMCA trapeze class, she plays with kinetics.

Art student Lucia Ausilio checked out the trapeze class because the Y wasn't offering gymnastics. Suddenly, her sketches were alive with images of people unfettered by gravity.

"I called my cousin in Italy to let him know about this," says Lucia, 24, of Naples, who attends the Rocky Mountain School of Arts. "He's the kind of guy who tries everything."

"He was amazed, he was totally upset, because he wanted to do it."

"He was jealous."

A tinge of basketball players' sweat still hangs in the air Wednesdays and Fridays when the fliers move in to set up their aviary. The 30-foot net is rolled out on a dolly and hooked by heavy cables to giant eyes bolted into the corners of the gym. With a heaving of ropes and a propping of four-by-fours, the net is stretched taut, about seven feet from the floor.

The perch, hauled up out of the way by ropes, is lowered and Bernadette Pace, 40, of Denver climbs up the unanchored ladder.

That duty wins her the first flight of the night, a graceful arc starting from 24 feet up.

"I run for my body, but I fly for my soul," says the wiry, sparkled-eyed "Bernie," a researcher in DNA and RNA at National Jewish Hospital in Denver.

Like many of 20 or so regulars, Bernie simply stumbled across the class six years ago while attending some of the Y's more commonplace activities.

She wasn't sure she'd stick with it until she learned to do a "knee-hang," which leaves the arms free to connect with those of a "catcher" who swings upside down from another bar.

"I was really hooked then," she says.

When she moves to Indiana later this year, a trapeze rig will go with her, to be installed at home.

From time to time, a stranger will enter the gym, sit down on one of the sideline benches and stare up, incredulous.

"You should try it. It looks like a lot of fun, and it is," says Mark Sexton, 28, of Littleton, who joined the class four years ago after watching once.

Now, the oil industry engineer for the Denver office of the Norwest Bank of Minneapolis says, "What I live for is the trapeze. Everything else just helps to pay the bills."

Mark — slim, with shoulders like a weightlifter — has had offers to fly professionally. "Probably the main reason I'm not flying professionally is I'd be making about 20 percent of what I make now," he says.

He had a trapeze rig in his yard last year. One day, the county zoning people called.

"They said, 'Well, we think you ought to tear it down.' I said, 'Have you got a good reason?' And they said, 'Well, we've got this obscure little ordinance that we've never enforced.'"

Mark took the rig down in November, when it was too cold out to use.

Fliers say it is hard to stay emotionally at arm's length from people you count on to seize your forearms at 30 mph, upside down.

"There's a sense of camaraderie that you get in few things," Mark says. "They're some of my best friends in the city. And there are always people trying it for the first time — we try to make them feel welcome, teach 'em how to do it."

It took Lucia some unpleasant falls into the net before she learned how to glide from the perch. New-comers are "let off," or held around the waist so they can get both hands on the bar. But people learning to grab the heavy bar one hand after the other while hopping off the perch usually leap out too far.

Their own weight rips their fingers from the bar, and they hit the net feet first, face next.

Lucia worked through that stage after attending class off and on for three months — she was determined to "fly to the catcher." She kept at it until she could hook her knees over the bar on the first swing out, let go with her hands on the next swing back, and be plucked from the bar into a long, thrilling arc at the top of the next swing out.

There was applause when she made that first catch and she leaped off the net into a bunch of hugs. Then she broke free and danced, grinning, the length of the gym floor.

"I've never been very afraid of it," she says. "I brought one guy down here. He was amazed, he was shaking. That's when I realized the thing was kind of strange. This big, huge guy, he does a lot of sports and everything, and I mean he was shaking."

After they've rolled the net and hauled the perch back into the rafters, the group goes to a downtown Denver bar for beer.

Tony Carpenter, 29, of Denver, who did a stint with a circus, tells about the time a Bengal tiger decided to rub up against him like a housecat and offers tips on how not to offend elephants.

The fliers compare notes: torn ligaments, broken arms, dislocated shoulders.

Manuel Crespin of Denver, an English teacher at Merrill Junior High School, did some work in trapeze acts when he was in school. He says he's been coming to the class since the mid-1950s.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
 AP Newsfeatures

Q — We are troubled by too much humidity in the house and, consequently, condensation forms everywhere it can — on the window panes, cold water pipes, the bathroom toilet tank, and so on. I blame it on the fact that my husband takes very long showers with hot water. When he gets through, everything in the bathroom is wet and it is impossible to see into the mirror on the medicine cabinet. I maintain it is this humidity that travels through the house and causes our problems with condensation, but he says the water vapor stays inside the bathroom. Who is right?

A — There is no doubt the moisture formed in the shower can travel anywhere in the house. Does he keep the window in the bathroom open while taking the shower or, at the very least, as soon as he finishes, especially before the bathroom door is opened? If there is a reason why it is not opened, even a bit, then you might be wise to get an exhaust fan for that room.

Of course, there are other things in the house that can cause excessive moisture besides the shower. Among them are cooking, a wet basement, the drying of clothes and even nothing more than a day in which the humidity is very high.

Your best protection against the formation of condensation is ventilation and situations in which warm, moist air is not permitted to settle on cold surfaces. The ventilation will eliminate the moisture. Preventing moist air from settling on cold surfaces will not do away with the moisture, but it will stop condensation while means are taken to allow the moisture to escape or be trapped.

Q — I bought a second-hand coffee table. The top was not in good shape and I put two coats of clear shellac on it. It seemed to be all right until I put a dish on it, at which time I discovered the top was still tacky, as though the shellac had never dried properly. What caused this and how can it be corrected?

A — One possible cause is that the shellac was not fresh. Shellac which has been around a year or two should not be used, although sometimes it will be all right. Make a point of buying only as much shellac as you will use in six months or so. Another possible cause of the tackiness is that you applied the shellac on a finish from which accumulated wax or polish was not thoroughly removed.

In either case, wipe the top completely with denatured alcohol. Rub vigorously and go over it two or three times. When you are absolutely sure no residue of wax or polish remains, apply a coat of shellac, thinned 50 percent with denatured alcohol. Wait until the next day, sand very lightly and apply a second coat. Be sure this time the shellac is fresh.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain remover, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Fire Studied

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — The Shell Oil Co. has sent a team of experts to investigate the cause of a fire that killed three men and injured six others working on a North Sea oil rig 200 miles northeast of the Shetland Islands.

The company said the workers were carrying out maintenance when they were trapped in a utility shaft on the Brent-Bravo production platform.

More Homeowners Installing Pools

By BARBARA MAYER
 AP Newsfeatures

A recent survey by the National Spa and Pool Institute reveals that about 250,000 above-ground swimming pools were installed in 1983.

This is a 25 percent increase over 1982, about 50,000 more pools, according to Judy Ramminger, NSPI's director of communications.

The trade group, which speaks for the swimming pool industry, attributes the increase to the release of pent-up demand occasioned by a fall in interest rates. The coming of age of the baby boom generation, who are now adults in their 20s and 30s, is also a factor, added Ms. Ramminger.

"Although something that costs $1,000 and up can scarcely be considered an impulse purchase, more above-ground pools get purchased and installed in the summertime," she said. As a result, the group predicts this summer will be a banner one for above-ground pools.

Since construction is relatively quick — less than a week is often sufficient — the pool can be used quickly enough to gratify an immediate desire.

Other reasons for the popularity of the prefabricated pools include their ease of transportation and installation. They can often be delivered to the home site in a station wagon or small truck and special building permits are rarely required. Furthermore, as a movable structure which can be trucked to another site and re-erected, the pools rarely lead to an increase in property tax assessment, she noted.

About half of those who buy the pools put them up themselves. As a result, manufacturers and dealers have developed step-by-step instructions to make the job understandable to a do-it-yourselfer. And one authority has estimated only about three days were required to erect a simple pool after the basic site work was completed.

Nearly all above-ground pool manufacturers make a variety of pool sizes and accessories. Most are available in kit form. The customer selects the size and shape of pool, and the dealer then puts together a package which includes the necessary accessories and information on how to put the pool up. Generally, you can also opt for installation by the dealer or a contractor.

Typical kits include the vinyl liner and prefabricated panels or walls of aluminum, steel or wood. Other components include fasteners, filters and a skimmer. Accessories such as underwater lights, heater, automatic vacuum cleaner and pool steps are also available.

Most pools are about four feet deep. However, options that make the above-ground pool more versatile include angled bottoms which slope gradually to provide a deep end for diving. One version is known as a hopper liner. Its bowl-like shape on one end is eased into an excavated hole to a depth of seven or eight feet. In order to use a pool for diving safely, authorities stress that a minimum depth of seven feet is required.

In addition to the pool and accessories, you will need to buy chemicals to keep the water clean and tools such as a hand skimmer. Maintenance chores will not differ significantly from maintenance of an in-ground pool.

Above-ground pools are generally not governed by building codes as are in-ground pools. Fencing which is often required for the latter is generally not a legal requirement. The typical four-foot height of the pool walls is considered adequate.

However, if decking is used and small children will have access to the pool, fencing may be a good idea to prevent accidents, according to NSPI.

Above-ground pool costs vary widely depending on pool size, necessary site preparation and landscaping and decking choices.

Garden Clinic

Q. When should fall tomatoes be planted in the garden? (I.R., Greensboro)

A. Plant fall tomatoes in the garden from late June through mid-July.

Q. I have seen a tree called leuceana or white popinac leadtree advertised. It is supposed to grow very fast. Will it grow in North Carolina? (S.D., Tryon)

A. Leuceana is a tropical tree in the legume family. Claims of "supertrees" that grow 20 feet per year may be true for the tropics but highly exaggerated for North Carolina. If you want shade in one season, build an arbor and plant kudzu rather than planting one of these trees.

Q. What is a good fertilizer for dahlias? (A.T., Greensboro)

A. Any complete fertilizer (one containing nitrogen, potassium and phosphorus) should do all right. Provide ample water for dahlias throughout the summer.

Q. How do you care for the houseplant called queen's tears? (W.H., Fayetteville)

A. Queen's tears is a type of bromeliad whose botanical name is Billbergia nutans. Queen's tears likes a soil that is rich in humus. Unless you are keeping the plant in a south window of your home, it is probably not getting enough light. Queen's tears likes bright light (can take the morning sun) and needs plenty of fresh air. Queen's tears benefits from regular fertilizing with a general-purpose houseplant fertilizer. Do not overfertilize. Keep the vase at the center of the leaf rosette filled with water. The plant needs lots of water during growth and much less water in the winter. Divide queen's tears when offsets form.

These days, most major team tournaments are played with a screen diagonally across the table. As a result, each player can see only one opponent—his partner and the other opponent are hidden behind the screen. This is done to eliminate the "intangibles" from the game, and one day the ultimate will be reached—each player will be in a separate room operating an electronic control board to make his bids and plays. It will be nearly impossible to cheat in any way, and an important element of the game will have been removed in the process—the ability to "read" your opponents.

One of the finest examples of table presence that we know of is this one from a rubber bridge game by the late, great Pierre Albarran of France. His four hearts was a two-way bid—he expected to have a play for it, and there was always the chance the opponents would venture a sacrifice.

West led a spade and Albarran won the jack. The normal line would be to strive for a spade ruff in dummy. That would succeed if West held the 10 of hearts or the singleton king, or if East held K-10 doubleton. In that case declarer would hold his losers to a trump, a diamond and a club.

However, when dummy came down, East inspected it rather carefully and then sat back in a contented fashion. Albarran sensed East's complacency, so he decided East could overruff dummy twice. Reading the situation was only half the problem—South had to find a way to make use of the information.

Albarran continued with the king and ace of spades. He discarded a club from dummy as East ruffed. East shifted to a club. Declarer rose with the ace and led his eight of spades. West covered with the 10 but, instead of ruffing, declarer discarded dummy's last club.

His objective had been achieved—he had transferred his ruff from spades to clubs. West completed the defensive book by cashing the ace of diamonds, but declarer ruffed the diamond continuation, ruffed his club in dummy and then successfully finessed the jack of hearts. When that held, the rest of the tricks were there for the taking.

Arrested

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The wife of an Argentine leftist guerrilla leader has been arrested on an Argentine charge of weapons possession, one day after Brazil's Supreme Court voted to extradite her husband.

Maria Firmenich's lawyer said she was arrested when she entered federal police headquarters to visit guerrilla chief Mario Eduardo Firmenich, who has been in custody here since February. The attorney, Jose Paulo Sepulveda Pertence, said she could face extradition proceedings.

Firmenich, 41, was leader of the Montoneros, a terrorist band blamed for many kidnappings and killings in the chaotic period in Argentina prior to a 1976 military coup.

Survey Shows Mothers Seek Career-Type Toys

NEW YORK (AP) — Women want to see more toys that would help children understand the role of the working woman, a recent survey of 10,000 female executives has revealed.

The survey, conducted by the National Association for Female Executives (NAFE), found that three-quarters of members polled wanted to see children's products that provide a positive role model for the working woman.

"I want toys for my daughter that would make it as natural for her to 'play office' as it is now to 'play house,'" said one member.

Items these female executives would like to see on the market included toy offices, briefcases, non-discriminatory books on careers, more action-sports toys for girls, and miniature versions of traditional adult products, such as computers, typewriters, and filing systems.

Nurse Practitioners Taking Care To Ill In Rural Areas

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The telephone rings during the night with a mother asking how to bring her baby's fever down. A worried teen-ager stops by for advice about her first pregnancy.

In rural areas where doctors are scarce, Betty Compton and other nurse practitioners in North Carolina live and breathe medicine.

"I'm not drowned or inundated all weekend, although there was a time when I thought I couldn't leave home," said Mrs. Compton, who is based at the Orange County health clinic. "But I overcame that."

"When somebody's dying in the community, I'll be called. I'm just sort of a community caretaker."

In Cedar Grove in rural Orange County — where the nearest hospital is 30 miles away — Mrs. Compton has been providing care for the community since she became one of the state's first nurse practitioners in the early 1970s.

The state's first nurse practitioners were trained to diagnose illnesses, take medical histories, give physical examinations and prescribe medicines.

The idea was to find nurses with roots in small farming communities, train them as nurse practitioners and send them back into the community, said Mrs. Compton.

Leaving her job at Watts Hospital School of Nursing in Durham, Mrs. Compton and another nurse practitioner opened the state's first rural health clinic in Prospect Hill, another Orange County farming community.

"So I was the 'model' because I lived in the community," she said.

Today, some 350 nurse practitioners and 32 health clinics are bringing medical care to rural North Carolina, although there are still a few remote areas where doctors and nurses are hard to find, she said.

"But I think that we certainly have a state that has a lot more access to good health care than we ever had before," said Mrs. Compton. "You couldn't ask for a better team (of doctors and nurse practitioners)."

The role of nurse practitioners is changing because of the increasing number of them and with doctors beginning to move into rural towns, Mrs. Compton said.

"We filled a need in the 70s by placing physician's helpers or nurse practitioners where a physician would not go ... when there was a cry for physicians to go to rural areas," she said. "We're having to work a little more on the role for nurse practitioners."

She said nurse practitioners are beginning to specialize, such as working with the elderly or adolescents.

"There's certainly a recognition that nurse practitioners do have a lot to offer," she said.

RIPE FOR HARVEST . . . Heavy heads of filled-out winter wheat are ripe for June harvesting. Most wheat grown in this area is a soft variety wheat, more suitable for cultivation in areas with high humidity. Winter wheat is planted in the autumn months and harvested during the month of June.

IN OPERATION . . . A combine with a harvesting sweep of 22 feet moves across a wheat field in the St. John's Community a short distance south of Grifton. The grain is stored in the bin behind the driver, with the cut wheat straw ejected back onto the field from a chute at the rear of the machine.

June Is The Harvest Season For Winter Wheat

Formerly a crop little cultivated in this area, winter wheat is increasingly becoming a major crop in Pitt County and in other areas of eastern Carolina.

THREE MEMBERS . . . of one crew helping cultivator J.H. Mills harvest about 6,000 acres with seven machines during June are shown at a mid-afternoon break. The three, left to right, are Tammy Mills, her husband Nicky Mills, and Vic Corey. Nicky and Vic operate harvesters; Tammy keeps the two and truck driver William Coward supplied with refreshments and assists them via radio contact.

"Not so many years ago only a few Pitt County and area farmers planted wheat and in small acreages," explained Pitt County Agriculture Extension Chairman Leroy James. "But in the past few years, winter wheat has become an important crop in our area."

James said winter wheat this year "is somewhere around 18,000 acres in the county, which makes it a substantial farm crop."

Since early June, Pitt County farmers have been harvesting the fields of ripe, golden grain. The dry weather during the past couple of weeks, while not helpful to the growth of corn and tobacco at a critical stage, has on the other hand been ideal for wheat harvest.

One Pitt County wheat grower, J.H. Mills of the Chicod Community of Pitt County, is one of the county's leading growers of winter wheat. "I cultivate about 6,000 acres of wheat," Mills said. "To harvest the crop, I'm running seven combines. We've been harvesting since June 3 and expect to finish up in a day or so."

On Tuesday afternoon when James and I visited the site where Mills was harvesting several small fields of wheat adjacent to each other, Mills and his crew were taking a brief mid-afternoon break, complete with fried chicken and Pepsi Cola, around the tailgate of a pickup truck parked beneath the cool, dense shade of huge old oaks of an abandoned homesite.

His crew at this site consisted of Vic Corey and Nicky Mills, operators of two harvesters; Nicky's wife, Tammy, and truck driver William Coward. (Nicky Mills, a resident of the Chocowinity area, is no relation to J.H. Mills).

Tammy Mills said "my job is to get the men fed and supplied with water and soft drinks. I also use the radio to keep in contact and take them parts and gasoline if they need these things while in the field." She said she uses "only the pickup truck for my rounds. I've not yet tried to operate one of the harvesters," she laughed.

High Yield

"We've had some good yields in this season's harvest," said Corey, a young man bronzed by outdoor work in the hot June sun. "Some fields have produced 40 to 50 bushels to the acre, and one field came up with a high yield of 69 bushels to the acre."

James said the average yield based on last year's crop was 28 bushels per acre. "It may be somewhat higher this year. It looks like a good wheat year from what I've seen so far."

Nicky Mills, a tall, muscular young farmer, noted that the two combines he and Corey were operating "are both John Deere pieces of equipment. One is an 8820 model, the other a 7720. We can harvest 75 to 80 acres a day per combine."

The big machines, at first appearance lumbering monsters, moved across the fields with surprising grace and ease of maneuverability. One cut a swath 20 feet wide, the other a 22 foot sweep.

"You might say these machines are a farm on four big wheels," J.H. Mills commented. "And they're expensive pieces of equipment too. Each involves an investment of about $125,000."

James added the combines "fortunately are designed to harvest corn and soybeans as well as wheat. This makes them operative most of the year."

Nicky Mills explained "they are diesel operated, with each unit using about 90 gallons of diesel fuel daily."

Corey mentioned a factor that will perhaps surprise non-farmers. "The nights this June have not been very good for night harvest," he said. "Although we've had considerable dry weather, the humidity at night has been high, which is not ideal for best harvesting conditions."

The combines perform a number of functions in wheat harvest. The huge rotary blades in front of the machines cut the wheat straw, which then is fed into the combine where the grain heads are separated from the straw. The grain then is fed into a large storage bin behind the driver while the straw is ejected from a wide chute at the back of the machine back onto the field.

"The operator has clear sight viewing. He can visually see the grain pile up into the bin behind his driver's seat," J.H. Mills explained. "When the bin is full he switches from cutting and drives the combine to where he loads the grain into a waiting truck. The bin capacity is about 175 or 180 bushels."

At the truck, the combine operator positions a long tubular projection over the truck bed, turns on a switch, and in a matter of seconds the harvested grain is off-loaded onto the truck.

When a truck is full, the driver delivers the grain to a buying station. "There's several in the area," J.H. Mills said, "places like Parker's in Ayden and Webb's in Greenville."

James said "farmers take different approaches to handling the wheat straw. A few burn it off, most move in with balers to bale the straw."

One rewarding note in this year's harvest that James mentioned "is the going price of wheat at this time, $3.30 a bushel. That's a big improvement over prices in the past few years. At times it has been as low as $1.80 per bushel. If the good price prevails, I think you'll see more farmers planting wheat next year."

If this year's Pitt County winter wheat harvest of about 18,000 acres averages 30 bushels per acre for a total of approximately 540,000 bushels, and if the $3.30 price holds up, that will mean a market value of more than $1.7 million for the 1984 wheat harvest.

This does not put wheat in the same upper bracket as the harvest value of tobacco, corn, soybeans or peanuts — it does however, add a substantial figure to the overall crop value in the county.

"One of the best things about growing winter wheat," James said, "is that with a June harvest, farmers can turn around and plant a late crop of soybeans, which is what most Pitt farmers do."

Transporting Grain To A Waiting Truck

UNLOADING THE GRAIN . . . When the grain bin of the harvester is filled, the operator drives to a waiting truck and in seconds unloads the approximately 175 bushels accumulated in the harvester. When a truck is fully loaded, it is taken to a grain buyer in Ayden, Greenville or some other grain-buying site.

Faculty Receives Back Pay In Sex Discrimination Case

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, (AP) — Wilma Schriver's discrimination holds special meaning for her. In a sense it represents about $1.5 million and the rights of women professors.

Mrs. Schriver was one of 82 women faculty members at the University of South Alabama who received back pay in a federal sex discrimination case against the school.

The university, which vigorously contested the matter, recently paid $1.5 million in faculty back pay, attorneys' fees and interest. Lawyers say the figure may reach $2 million before some remaining issues are resolved.

"I always said when we won this case I was going to buy one thing, and every time I thought about it, I could say, 'We won. We won.' I had a large diamond solitaire. And I bought the showiest diamond insert ring for it you've ever seen," said Mrs. Schriver.

"It was a long, bitter fight," said the education professor, who retired in 1978 after 20 years at South Alabama and who received about $20,000 in back pay and interest.

She said that, following a landmark sex discrimination suit at the state university got her the cold shoulder from some professors, including some women.

"I insisted that women should have equal pay and equal opportunity for equal training and experience," she said.

"As far as we concerned, there's no bitterness," said South Alabama President Frederick Whiddon. "We've tried to treat everyone alike."

Whiddon described the litigation as "confusing and complex." But opinions about the case have varied as the university community and its 600 faculty members.

Indeed, the sex discrimination case brought into court a cast of scholars and educators, some who fought on the front line of the litigation while others watched the issues settled with satisfaction.

Larry Mencher, one of the attorneys representing the women, said representing estates concern additional interest on back pay and "affirmative action" questions.

Senior U.S. District Judge Virgil

Pittman, whose orders in the case were upheld on appeal, has been asked to fine the university more than $300,000 for contempt of court for allegedly failing to abide by a consent decree on affirmative action.

Under the 1978 consent decree, according to court documents, the affirmative action plan would include "fair, measurable criteria for decisions relating to faculty salaries, appointments, promotion in rank, tenure, and promotion to administrative positions."

It also called for annual reviews of the plan's effectiveness.

The judge also has been asked to pool the contempt fine in a fund that would be shared by the women faculty members involved. So the case is expected to linger into the fall.

University attorney Cecil Gardner said there was little legal precedent to begin with to settle the dispute.

"There was lots of case law about people on assembly lines, but very little guidance on comparing university professors," he said.

Gardner said a university committee compared the plaintiffs to other faculty members with the same backgrounds. "The committee recommended that the procedure not be used again. They told us it was not consistent with the real world."

The women plaintiffs were employed during 1975-78. For some, the settlement represents peace of mind.

Ann Leatherwood, who teaches English and came into the case after it was declared a class-action, said she wishes the salary difference between the sexes didn't exist.

"I have more of a notion of enduring it," she said. "It took somebody other than my personality type to do something about it." She said that "all women benefit from a case like this that another woman brings."

Mrs. Leatherwood said the $17,000 in back pay she received would give her some peace of mind in dealing with health problems in her family.

Special education teacher Gale Lambright said she never felt "unequal" to men "professionally."

"I think every university I've taught at has that same pay problem," said Miss Lambright.

A Different View Of Breaker Morant

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Though a symbol of the fight against injustice and hypocrisy and celebrated as a hero in a book and film, Breaker Morant was really a ruthless killer, according to the man who helped immortalize him.

Kit Denton wrote "The Breaker" 14 years ago. The novel was a fictionalized account of a group of Australian officers put on trial in 1902 for killing prisoners during the Boer War in South Africa. It and "Breaker Morant" — the critically acclaimed Bruce Beresford film that followed — caught the imaginations of millions with the story of an Australian soldier unjustly executed by the British.

Since writing the novel, Denton has discovered a petition signed by 61 soldiers in Morant's unit protesting the "crimes" of their officers along with evidence showing Morant was more often an executioner than a soldier.

Denton has written a new book, "Closed File," about the Morant issue.

A search into Morant's past showed him to be a ruthless, violent man who could kill for excitement, Denton said. "He was a man not capable of understanding conventional right from conventional wrong," he said in an interview.

Tearing down a hero, Denton said, can be more difficult than creating one. Many Australians have not been pleased at seeing Morant besmirched, especially by the writer who helped to exonerate him.

"You'd be astonished at the abuse I've received since 'Closed File,'" he said. "I've been accused of diminishing the Australian character."

Denton believed his first novel was a true story. "Morant lived, wrote, fought and died pretty much the way I've pictured it," he wrote in the preface of his book.

Australians who remembered Harry Harbord Morant, nicknamed Breaker because of his horse-breaking skills, thought he was sacrificed after a rigged trial by British generals eager to appease complaints about war atrocities.

But there were some unanswered questions about what had happened and Denton wanted to know more. He searched for documents before the novel was published, but didn't have enough money to continue. The success of the book allowed him to dig some more and eventually discover a very different Morant.

"Morant was a much more complex character than I had him in the novel and a much less likeable character," Denton said.

In "Closed File" Denton writes: "However interesting and popular my novel may have become, its emphases and suggestions were in many cases wide of the mark."

He first heard about Morant from a veteran of the Australian forces that served in South Africa at the end of the last century. Denton tried to check further only to find little was known beyond the legend.

"It was amazing to discover such an alarmingly good story and then find nothing was known about this remarkable man," he said.

He returned to England and sought the official records of the case. After weeks of futile waiting, he decided British officials were concealing the facts and he began to accept Australian claims that Morant had been sacrificed as a colonial subject.

He went back to Australia and wrote a screenplay about Morant. It didn't sell, but a publisher suggested the novel. Denton was not involved with the film.

Denton hopes he has set the record straight, but says there is nothing to apologize for and the first book is still a very readable novel. "I've told the story faithfully as to what happened. If people don't like it, I don't care," he said.

After two books Denton wants to put Breaker Morant behind him. Still, there are a few nagging questions.

"I have reason to believe there is still a record of the court martial," he said. "That's something I've been pursuing for 12 years, and until I know if it exists or not, the thing will certainly not be dead in my mind," he said.

The memories of a golden operatic voice are joining two countries in the issuance of new commemorative stamps. In a melodic (and philatelic) tribute to tenor John McCormack's 100th birthday, the U.S. Postal Service and the Irish Postal authorities have issued new stamps of almost identical design for the occasion. The U.S. stamp is a 20-cent and the Irish adhesive is 22 pence.

Born in Athlone, Ireland, in 1884, John McCormack began his singing career at age 18 in Dublin. Soon after that, he won the gold medal for singing at the National Irish Festival and traveled to the U.S. to represent Ireland at the 1904 St. Louis Exposition.

McCormack first performed with the Manhattan Opera Company in New York in 1909. Subsequently he sang with the Metropolitan, Chicago, Boston and Monte Carlo opera companies. He received further popularity as a singer of Irish folk songs and ballads throughout the world.

He became a U.S. citizen in 1919 and continued his career until retiring in 1938. He died at the age of 61 in Booterstown, County Dublin.

The joint stamp design effort features a large portrait of McCormack and a small image of the tenor in one of his operatic roles at the lower left side of the stamp. The U.S. version is part of the Performing Arts Series.

By agreement between the two postal administrations, the Irish stamps will be sold by the USPS for 25 cents and the U.S. stamp will be sold in Ireland by the Irish Post Office. In addition, the USPS will sell both McCormack stamps on special first-day covers. The single cover will bear the Irish stamp and cancellation only, and the combination cover will have both the Irish and U.S. stamps affixed, each bearing the cancellation of the respective country. They will be sold for 41 cents and 61 cents (combination).

First-day cancellations may be ordered in the usual two methods.

You may purchase the U.S. stamp at your local post office and affix to your own envelope. To prepare combination covers, you may obtain the Irish stamp by mail order from the Philatelic Sales Division at L'enfant Plaza, Washington, D.C. The U.S. stamp must be placed in the upper right corner. Requests must be postmarked no later than July 6. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Boston, MA 02205-9991.

If you prefer to have the USPS affix the stamps, enclose a money order of 20 cents for the U.S. stamp and 25 cents for the Irish stamp. Send to: John McCormack Stamp, Postmaster, Boston, MA 02205-9992. The deadline for posting is July 6.

Stamps In The News

U.S., Ireland Honors Beloved Singer

The Hall of Stamps, a permanent philatelic exhibition located adjacent to the Philatelic Center of U.S. Postal Service Headquarters in Washington, D.C., is now open to visitors. Some of the exhibits will be devoted to the designs of artists who have prepared items for U.S. stamps. They will be changed every three to six months. Other displays in the Hall of Stamps feature production, postal progress, airmail service and space events. Rare covers from moon missions and other space flights will be on display. One such cover was flown on the Challenger Mission that carried thousands of covers last August. It is unusual because a marginal imperforate single from a press proof was affixed and canceled.

Here is some information on two new stamps on the agenda for 1985 and 1986. A block of four commemoratives featuring duck decoys will be issued in 1985. The block will be the first additions to the Folk Art Series in nearly five years. In 1986 the USPS will issue a stamp recognizing the important role of public hospitals. It will be released at Bellevue Center in New York City. Bellevue, which will celebrate its 250th anniversary in 1986, is the oldest public institution of its kind still in operation.

For collectors of Polish stamps, word comes from the Polish Ministry of Communications that a two-part series of stamps is being issued to feature that country's folk musical instruments. Depicted on the first set are the following: a dulcimer with striking sticks, a drum with clankers and a kettle drum, a Polish three-row, three-stringed double bass from the 18th century, a bagpipe from the Wielkopolska District, and wood carvings of a folk band.

David Burney Chief Designer

RALEIGH — David Burney of Raleigh has been named chief designer and head of the Department of Design and Installation at the North Carolina Museum of Art. Another museum appointment is that of Pamela Myers of Raleigh as head exhibition designer.

Formerly a graphic designer with the museum, Burney, a native of Leland in Brunswick County, replaces Patrick Sears, who recently accepted a position in Washington, D. C. Before coming to the museum staff in 1983, Burney was design director at Advent Communications, Raleigh.

Ms. Myers, a native of New York, previously held museum design positions at four museums — in Palo Alto, Berkeley, and San Francisco in California, and in Ithaca, N. Y.

Bolivian officials said in 1967 that the body of slain Cuban guerrilla leader Che Guevara had been buried in a secret grave.

Summer Theater Opens July 2

Rehearsals began June 18 for the 17th season of Broadway musicals to be presented by the East Carolina Summer Theatre. Producer/Director Edgar Loessin has announced the names of the leading performers who will appear throughout the month of July.

Selected from more than 1,500 singers, dancers and actors from up and down the Eastern Seaboard, the company represents seasoned Broadway performers as well as aspiring younger actors embarking on their first professional engagement.

Appearing in the title role of season opener "Annie," running July 2-7, is Melissa Barfield. She is an honor student in school and immediately after her appearance with the Summer Theatre plans to study acting in New York.

Annie's leading man, Daddy Warbucks, will be played by veteran character actor Jack McCutcheon. McCutcheon has had a varied professional acting career including feature musical comedy roles in New York, London, Chicago, Boston and Washington, D.C. He is also a published author, journalist, producer and a former principal of Ridgewood High School in New Jersey.

Opening on July 9, and running through July 14, will be the song and dance spectacular "Chicago." Featured will be Maureen Kerrigan, who made her summer theatre debut as Sally Bowles in the 1982 production of "Cabaret." She has appeared in several New York productions including "The Gingerbread Lady," "Miss Lonely Hearts" and "Silence." She has also performed leading roles at the Kennedy Center in Washington, The Loeb Drama Center in Boston and numerous dinner theatres across the country. Her film and television credits include "The Miracle Worker," "Diner" for MGM, and Goldie Hawn's upcoming film "Protocol."

Directing "Chicago" will be veteran Broadway performer Jay Fox, who returns for his third season with the Summer Theatre.

"Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" will play July 16 through 21, and will feature Bruce Ewing in the title role. A native of New York, Ewing is a graduate of the Hartt School of Music. His acting credits include the title role in "Pippin," "Company," "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "South Pacific" and "The Fantasticks."

Co-starring with Ewing will be Barbara Gulan, also a veteran of the Hartt School of Music. She has performed leading musical roles in "Carousel," "Kiss Me Kate," "Applause" and "Pippin."

Rounding out the season for the Summer Theatre will be "The 1940's Radio Hour," July 23-28. Featured in this nostalgic evening of swingtime tunes will be a trio of actors, two of whom have appeared with the Summer Theatre in years past. Returning for his second season will be John Kuhn, who performed in last season's productions of "Pippin," "A Little Night Music" and "They're Playing Our Song." Kuhn has worked in various theatres in Missouri, Arkansas and Florida, and holds an MFA in acting from Ohio State University. In the fall, he will join the drama department faculty at St. Joseph's University in Missouri.

Also making a return from last year will be Jane Barrett Underhill, who is an ECU alumna now living in Williamsburg, Va. with her husband Roy, the host of "The Woodright's Shop" on PBS. Ms. Underhill has had leading roles in "Gypsy," "How to Succeed in Business" and last year in "A Little Night Music."

Making his debut with the Summer Theatre will be ECU Theatre Arts faculty member Donald Biehn. A ten-year veteran teacher of acting, Biehn has performed with three professional repertory companies and directed off Broadway.

In discussing this season's company, Loessin said, "We were very pleased to find so many talented local children to perform in 'Annie.' We are also delighted to have so many fine adult performers who have impressive and distinguished credits in musical comedy on stage, film and television. All in all, this should be one of the finest acting companies we've had in quite some time."

The directorial staff for the theatre includes Loessin for "Annie" and "The 1940's Radio Hour." He is the founder of the theatre with numerous directorial credits to his name; and Jay Fox, "Chicago" and "Joseph."

Returning to the Summer Theatre for a second season will be choreographer Terry Rieser from New York. Ms. Rieser has performed on Broadway, network television and in a number of national commercials.

'Liberty Cart' Outdoor Drama Now In Its Ninth Season

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Randolph Umberger's historical outdoor drama, "The Liberty Cart," now in its ninth season, portrays eastern North Carolinians' struggle to make the state what it is today, according to Emily Killete, promotional director of the play.

Produced by Duplin Outdoor Drama Society Inc., the play is staged each summer on the William R. Kenan Jr. Memorial Amphitheater in Kenansville. The action takes place from 1755 to 1865, mostly in Duplin County from Surecta to Kenansville (which used to be called Golden Grove).

"The pride of North Carolina's heritage beams throughout the entire script," William Hollingsworth, the lead actor, said.

Hollingsworth, who portrays Phenius Pickett, is from Lynchburg, Va., and is one of 20 professional actors in the drama. Other characters are portrayed by local actors and actresses.

"Phenius is the narrator. He takes the play through history, introduces the characters and presents facts of history related to eastern North Carolina," Hollingsworth said.

A peddler who travels the Carolina back roads, Phenius is proprietor of the "liberty cart" and sells spring water, firearms, piece goods and pots and pans. He trades food for news of war.

"Phenius is timeless. He's not rooted in the traditional ancestry of our past. He's kind-hearted, compassionate and on the side of right,"

Hollingsworth said.

David Thomas of Duplin County, who is in his third year as director of the drama, said the outdoor stage offers a natural setting decorated with holly and pine. He added that the background music is live singing, with the exception of some pre-recorded dance music.

"The Liberty Cart" plays July 13 through Aug. 25 each Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening at 8:15. Tickets, which cost $5 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12, are available from The Liberty

Cart, P.O. Box 470, Kenansville, N.C. 28349.

"The War Brides," a mystery play set in a boarding house for ladies during World War I in Montgomery, Ala., will also be performed at the amphitheater. It opens July 25 and plays for five consecutive Wednesdays at 8:15 p.m. until Aug. 22.

A children's theater production, "The Wind in the Willows," is also staged at the theater and opens July 29. This play is performed four consecutive Sunday evenings at 8:15, closing on Aug. 19.

Tickets for these productions are also available from the address listed above. For more information call (919) 296-0721.

Sprightly Celebration Of Today's Woman

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was "a great fishing expedition," says Joan Micklin Silver, describing the search for material to include in "A ... My Name is Alice," a spritely celebration of today's woman currently holding forth at the Top of the Gate, a Greenwich Village nightclub.

But instead of the Great White Whale, the bespectacled and enthusiastic Mrs. Silver and her co-director Julianne Boyd went stalking songs and sketches to include in a genial feminist revue, an idea that had been germinating for more than a year, since the women worked together on a benefit for the National Abortion Rights Action League.

"It came to me that I wanted to have a chance to work on more materials that had to do with women," says the Nebraska-born Mrs. Silver, best known for the mark she's made in the male-dominated world of film directing. She had earned her spurs as a filmmaker for educational television and a Hollywood screenwriter, before guiding such films as "Hester Street" and "Chilly Scenes of Winter."

"Often I have found very good material about men and haven't found an equal amount about women that interested me," Mrs. Silver says.

What she wanted was something very special that dealt with a woman's families, friends, children. And she wanted it to be fun. She found that humor in the show's two dozen songs and sketches that deal with everything from a women's basketball team — the Detroit Persons — to a woman's confrontation with her child's kindergarten teacher.

"Women want things that connect with them," Mrs. Silver says. "I just thought of the years I'd been listening to male comedians. There's such a scant amount of material that really deals with women.

"I personally don't relate to the kind of humor that some women (comedians) do, such as my body's falling apart or gynecologist jokes. That's dealing with women who belittle themselves, spending a lot of time talking about the ravages of age on their bodies," she says.

But she found some of her inspiration in one female funny person.

"Lily Tomlin's one-woman show had a lot to do with my thinking about this show," Mrs. Silver remembers. "I was almost in tears because she did a sketch about a 7-year-old who falls in love with her teacher."

"She describes this little girl going to school and the little girl has bluebirds on her barrette and she had a pique dress. Well, I had bluebirds on my barrette when I was little," she says.

Mrs. Silver said she was looking for such ideas about women's common experiences that would let them be more relaxed, more self-confident and allow them to laugh at themselves. And she wanted to get past the defensive, sometimes bitter attitudes of the early days of women's liberation.

The enormous amount of material surprised her.

And finding one writer led to another. More than 100 writers, men and women, submitted material. Eventually 28 people, ranging from comedian Anne Meara to mostly unknown writers and composers recommended by such Broadway veterans as "Annie" creator Martin Charnin, contributed to the revue.

"Not only was there existing material but there was a great pent-up desire on the part of a lot of writers to write about experiences that hadn't, up until now, found an arena," Mrs. Silver said. "We felt we had tapped into something very special."

A Dance Of Trances

By DALIA BALIGH
Associated Press Writer

OMDURMAN, Sudan (AP) — Every Friday, as the sun creeps low into the western desert, dozens of men dressed in bright green dance, whirl and leap in rituals that date back to the dawn of their Islamic faith.

They are the "whirling dervishes," members of mystical Sufi sects which command their followers to withdraw from the world and its pleasures in search of religious purity. Members of Sufi sects are known as "el darwish" in Arabic — or "dervishes" in English.

The colorful Friday dances, which last about two hours and end with some of the dancers prostrate in religious frenzy, attract hundreds of curious Sudanese and even foreigners to a stark, sand and rock cemetery where a former sheik of this sect is buried.

"When a person feels he is afraid of God and would like to serve him and pray to him, leaving behind worldly pleasures, he comes and lives with us until he proves his true belief and the sheik allows him to wear the green robe," said 40-year old Sheik Kazzam, who has been a dervish for 13 years.

This sect follows Sheik Hamad el-Nil and Sheik Abdallah el-Seedy, and is one of at least 50 Sufi groups operating in Sudan alone.

This particular sect, whose exact membership is unknown even to the sheiks, has been holding these weekly rituals for nearly 30 years. But Sufi orders and their mystic rituals date from the eighth century, some 200 years after the prophet Mohammed died.

Sufi sects can be found all over the Middle East, but are most prominent in Sudan, Egypt and Iraq. Sufis wear bright green, the color of the dome of the prophet's tomb.

The religious dance begins with the dervishes moving in a wide circle, swaying softly and chanting the Koran's "99 names of God" to the steady beat of drums. As the beat quickens, some of the dancers become absorbed in the ritual, whirling around and hopping on one leg. Some fall to the ground semi-conscious.

At this point, Sudanese onlookers, including children, usually join in the procession, which ends at sundown with everyone going to the mosque next to their leaders' tomb for prayers.

"The dervishes' actions during the procession are spontaneous," said 68-year old Fadl el-Dokhy, who has been a dervish for 30 years. "The dervish usually loses control of himself."

The dervishes range from teenagers to elderly men who because of their rituals remain in good physical condition. They are very secretive, refusing to reveal their personal reasons for joining the sect other than saying that it was "God's will."

Members of this sect of dervishes hold no steady job. Along with their families, they live in the mosque built near their sheik's tomb, dependent on donations and odd jobs.

The directors had started with women playwrights, but found it wasn't as fertile a field as they'd hoped.

"The essence of sketch writing is compression. Most playwrights are used to a more leisurely amount of time to develop their ideas while a sketch is usually three or four pages," she says.

But the word got out that they were looking for material and everyone knew someone who somehow passed the information along. People began calling Mrs. Silver and Ms. Boyd.

"They're the kind of people you could call up and say, 'Look, everything's working but the third line in the third verse.' So they started working on the third line," she says.

"They were very eager to make the show work. They all believed it was a good idea, and they liked being part of it. I think composers who have spent years working on a long musical enjoy just doing one number. Usually musicals take so long from start to resolution."

A first workshop was given last fall at the American Place Theater, a small space tucked in the basement of midtown skyscraper. Songs were changed, numbers were dropped and performers replaced.

The final cast of five — Roo Brown, Randy Graff, Mary Gordon Murray, Alaina Reed and Charlene Woodard — also made contributions. From the beginning, Mrs. Silver and Ms. Boyd knew they wanted an integrated cast, as well as actresses ranging from young to middle-aged.

By February, a second workshop was held. The reaction was favorable, and the show moved to Greenwich Village in April.

"I just saw the show again the other night, and there was that connection between the material and the performers," she says. "You know that distance when you feel, 'Oh, that's very well done. Oh, that's good.'"

"I think the best thing that happened to make the show possible was that we found such fabulous writers," Mrs. Silver says.

Abmititious Efforts To Restore Istanbul's Historic Center

HISTORY REDATED — Pottery recently unearthed by a graduate student digging in volcanic ashe at the Nueva Era site near Quito, Ecuador, indicates that pottery, like these samples from Chicago's Field Museum's collection, could be backdated from 400-800 A.D. to 600-1,500 B.C. The pieces, obtained from the deepest yet dig into the volcanic ash, indicate the existence of a highly sophisticated civilization wiped out by a series of Pompeii-like disasters, according to archeologists. By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer
ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's best-known promoter for art restoration is engaged in an ambitious effort to preserve and restore remnants of Istanbul's historic center.

"There is not much left to save, so many old buildings have been torn down and concrete apartment blocks have been erected in their place," lamented Celik Gulersoy, the restorer.

"But I'd like to see the ancient Byzantine Hippodrome restored to its former glory."

Gulersoy is using his job as head of Turkey's Touring and Automobile Club, a private organization promoting tourism, to finance restoration projects.

After years of pleading and persuading, he won government approval in 1971 for a plan to charge every car entering or leaving Turkey a fee the equivalent of $22. The club's net proceeds, totaling about $1 million a year, go to art restoration.

The square on the European side of the city, where the Marmara Sea joins the Bosphorus, is now known as Sultan Ahmet Square, after the Ottoman sultan who built the famed Blue Mosque in the 17th century.

For more than a millenium the area was unequaled in riches as the center of two major empires, the eastern Roman Empire and later that of the Ottoman Turks.

"This is a unique place where two cultures flourished around the imperial palace," Gulersoy said in an interview.

It is the same area where Emperor Justinian built the St. Sophia Cathedral at the north end of the square in 6th century. The Ottomans, who conquered the city in 1453, erected the sprawling Topkapi Palace nearby.

Because it is a major tourist attraction, the square has been relatively well looked after, with the Topkapi Palace and the St. Sophia Cathedral turned into museums. But the area surrounding the square decayed after the Ottoman sultans moved to a Western-style palace in Dolmabahce on the Bosphorus in 1853.

On one side of the Topkapi Palace now stands a prison. Ringing the square are tottering old wooden houses, cheap hotels, narrow streets clogged with traffic and baphazardly built office buildings.

Gulersoy, 54, a lawyer and self-taught art restorer, recently finished restoration of the 19th-century mansion of an Ottoman government functionary which stands between the Blue Mosque and the cathedral.

The building has become a 19-room hotel furnished with period pieces Gulersoy collected at auctions over the past 10 years.

The hotel's bridal suite has a Turkish bath complete with marble floors and fountain. For $70 a night, guests can sleep on the gold-and-white bed which once belonged to Serasker Riza Pasha, a defense minister of the last Ottoman sultan.

Adjacent to the hotel is a domed and porticoed 14th-century building that once was a school for higher education in Islamic tradition. Gulersoy's architects are at work to transform it into an arts and craft bazaar which will be rented to practitioners of traditional arts such as engraving, wood carving and miniature painting.

Nestled against St. Sophia's wall is a row of 18 dilapidated Ottoman wood houses with jutting second floor windows.

Gulersoy plans to turn them into tourist inns, with small restaurants or pubs on the ground floors. The biggest house has been chosen as the site for a library for 4,000 rare books on Istanbul that Gulersoy has collected from a dozen countries over the past three decades.

Gulersoy turned to restoration of Istanbul's historical sites after he took over as director of the automobile club in 1966.

At the start, there was not enough money for any big projects or sufficient knowledge on restoration. Gulersoy said he traveled throughout Europe to see how countries there handled such work.

The club's first work was to restore Yildiz Park, the grounds for the palace of Sultan Abdulhamid II on a wooded hill overlooking the Bosphorus. Abdulhamid was deposed by young army officers in 1908.

Gulersoy and his team have restored two modest mansions in the park as cafes. The lawns are once again neatly trimmed, and the park teems with visitors on weekends.

Similar facelifts have been made at the Camlica and Emirgan parks along the Bosphorus.

A new project, expected to be finished next year, is the restoration of the Khedive Palace on the Anatolian side of the Bosphorus.

Matisse Exhibit At GMA

In viewing the current exhibition at the Greenville Museum of Art of 50 prints by renowned French artist Henri Matisse, the thought comes to mind that if the grand old man of nude female drawings and paintings were alive today, he might have problems finding suitable models.

Matisse liked to sketch and paint women who were pleasantly plump, with pronounced, if not overwhelming, rolls of stomach fat, and substantial thighs. One can imagine his consternation if he had to audition models from today's trim victims of aerobics and jazzercise.

This exhibit, formed by the Weatherspoon Art Gallery of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, is from the gallery's collection of Matisse works. The collection was formed by Dr. Claribel Cone and Miss Etta Cone of Baltimore, sisters of Moses H. and Ceasar Cone, who came to Greensboro in the 19th century and founded Cone Mills.

Before she died at her home in Blowing Rock in 1949, Miss Etta Cone, at the suggestion of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Cone of Greensboro, left the duplicates in her collection to the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, now UNC-G. A total of 69 lithographs and etchings by Matisse dating from 1903 to 1929, along with six small bronzes of 1901 to 1918, constitute the Matisse collection at Weatherspoon.

In the 50 works on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, Matisse's range of studies of women, while predominately of nudes, includes also a number of garbed and partially garbed females, as well as a few studies of heads.

In style they include fully detailed, strong black and white prints, with particular emphasis on the Matisse's work of the 1920s, in a period of his long life when he concentrated on depicting Moroccan harem women in rich adornments of jewelry, transparent veils, and intricate designs of costume material and furniture.

Other examples are nudes drawn in the simplest of quick-sketches lines — studio studies which the artist felt were worthy of preservation. These abbreviated sketches today are collected with as much fervor as are his more complete female studies.

This exhibit offers area viewers an opportunity to study in detail the female figure phase of Matisse's work. The 50 pieces are displayed in the north and in both south galleries and will be up through July 13.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays, closed Sundays, Mondays and on major holidays. Admission is free.

Stage Costumes Featured In Major New York Exhibit

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway costumes are a special breed of cloth.

Taken out of the theater, they can appear ordinary without the benefit of performers, sets and lighting.

That's not the case in "Fashion and Broadway," a major costume exhibit on view in New York through Sept. 15 at the Fashion Institute of Technology, located in the city's Garment District.

A good costume must suit the character, allow the performer freedom to work, be authentic to its period and be durable as well," says John Latham, curator of the exhibition that celebrates what the famous wore when they stepped on stage and what the audience wore to watch them.

From a black cloak and tunic worn by Edwin Booth in "Hamlet" in 1860 to Harvey Fierstein's kimono from "Torch Song Trilogy" in 1982, the exhibit covers more than 100 years of theatrical history.

It juxtaposes the sacred — Mary Martin's wedding dress from "The Sound of Music" — and the profane — Anita Morris' naughty black body stocking that stopped the show nightly in "Nine."

And it includes such readily recognizable items as Julie Andrews' ball gown from "My Fair Lady," designed by Cecil Beaton, and Freddy Wittop's red sequined outfit and feathers worn by Carol Channing when she sang the title song in "Hello, Dolly!"

At one time, costumes were thought to be a readily expendable commodity, and Latham found his choices for the exhibit limited simply by what was available. Nobody saved what actors wore.

"People didn't think they'd be valuable or interesting," he says. "And producers or people who owned the costumes began selling them to costume companies for rental to high schools, universities and other productions."

"Then costumes began to get rather valuable and so people sold them," Latham says.

Today, through such costume collections as the one at the Museum of the City of New York, people are more conscious about giving costumes to museums for posterity.

Even so, some of the costumes were in various stages of disrepair when Latham received them. He put the Fashion Institute's restoration and conservation department to work.

For example, a red robe and cape worn by Booth when he played Cardinal Richelieu in 1882 were disintegrating. They were cleaned and restored by FIT and when the exhibit closes, "they will be returned to the owners in far better condition than we received them," Latham says.

It was Latham who originally had the idea for the exhibition, timing it to honor the 100th birthday of the theater magazine Playbill.

Latham always had an eye for costumes and glamour. Born in San Francisco, he found his way to Hollywood when he worked as stand-in for stars on movie sets from "Show Boat" to "The Duke of West Point."

"It was a rather slap-happy kind of job. You'd just sort of stand there and wait for them to set the lights and then they'd call the star and you'd step out," he says.

But it did help him realize what looked good on actors and what was right for their characters.

"I learned what was graceful on the body, what colors seemed to be right with the set and that the costumes didn't thwart the movement of the actor or actress. I think that's the most important," he says.

Latham thinks audiences should notice costumes on stage.

"I think they enhance the value of a production. I think the clothes in 'The Real Thing' — one of Broadway's current hits — are stunning and so right for each character. They're not glaring. They don't stop the action in any way or stop your thought process, but they are just so right," he says.

Now he sometimes goes to the theater to savor the costumes.

In "Plenty," David Hare's drama, Kate Nelligan wore a short, black evening dress "that I will remember longer than the play itself, mostly because it was so right and she wore it so well," Latham says.

But the exhibition has more than a parade of costumes worn by stars.

Marty Bronson, director of galleries at FIT, has installed three dressing rooms, including the backstage digs of Edwin Booth, Ethel Merman and the husband-and-wife acting team of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

And there is a Broadway matinee line of sorts, chosen by Laura Sinderbrand, director of FIT's design laboratory. It shows what theatergoers wore from 1884 to the present with elaborate silk or woolen dresses and suits giving way to designer blue jeans.

Ms. Sinderbrand also picked an elaborate array of first-night costumes, what the privileged wore to opening nights over the past 100 years. It's a tradition Latham fears has all but died out.

"Life is much too casual now. You leave the tennis court and then you rush to a cocktail party and then you tear off to the theater," Latham says. "It's hard to dress when you have to pay $90 for two theater tickets."

Christopher Rex To Be In Concert At Brevard Center

Cellist Leonard Rose has canceled his appearance at the July 15 Brevard Music Center concert because of illness.

Rose's place will be taken by Christopher Rex, principal cellist of the Atlanta Symphony, who has appeared at the music center several times in past years.

Rex is a 1979 Artist Winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs, the youngest cellist ever to receive this coveted award for strings. A native of Florida, he is a former member of the Philadelphia Orchestra, the New Chamber Players of Philadelphia, and the Philadelphia Chamber Ensemble.

For ticket and reservation information, call 704/884-2019, or write P.O. Box 592, Brevard, N.C., 28712-0592.

Two New Exhibits At Tarboro Gallery

TARBORO — Two new exhibitions are currently on view (through July 31) at the Pittman Memorial Gallery located in the Blount-Bridgers House, 130 Bridgers Street, Tarboro.

The two artists with work being shown are Sarah Benham, photographs, and Jeremiah Miller, paintings and drawings.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

NEW YORK (AP) — Two new exhibitions of materials from The New-York Historical Society's Library will go on display this spring and summer. "Treasures of Manuscript Americana," a selection of documents from the permanent manuscript collection that represents three centuries of American life, will be on display from May 18 through July 1. "Early Temperance Movements" will be on display from July 6 through Sept. 3, to celebrate the bicentennial of the publication of the first important temperance pamphlet to be published in America.

MODERN ART

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard E. Oldenburg, Director of the Museum of Modern Art here, announced the Museum's opening of its enlarged facilities to the public. The opening marks the completion of a four-year, $55 million expansion program which has resulted in the doubling of the museum's exhibition, library and study center space, as well as a number of new visitor amenities.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

Among the new books at the library are several titles that will make great reading for the summer.

Judith Michael, author of the best-selling "Deceptions," has written a second novel that is sure to be a hit with her fans. "Possessions" is a sophisticated, poignant novel of love and illusion, loyalty and betrayal, society and family. The story centers around a universal fear — the loss of a most cherished love and security. Out of that loss comes the universal dream — the chance to rebuild a shattered life, to make it richer and more meaningful.

When Craig Fraser suddenly vanishes, he leaves Katherine with two children, a stack of bills, a house she cannot afford and no job. She soon learns that her husband had disguised his name and background and unknowingly she is married into the wealthy Hayward family of San Francisco. Though she allows herself to become entangled in the feuds and fortunes of the influential Haywards, she is determined to remain independent, to support herself and her children with her own work — and to hold on to the past and her love for Craig. Circumstances eventually force her to find the strength to claim the most valuable possessions of all — someone with whom she can share love and trust and a family that offers her a place to belong.

In "Southern Women," Louis Battle writes about three women of three very different generations born to the myths, expectations and conflicting demands of the Southern tradition, yet living in a world where manners and monogamy are rare.

Cordy Simpkins had accepted the standards of womanhood with which she was raised and became the well-cared-for dependent wife. Yet at thirty, her marriage shattered; fearful of her ability to earn a living or raise a child alone, she returns home to Savannah — home to Eunonia Grace, the sharp-tongued 83 year-old matriarch of the family, and to Lucille, her pampered, still beautiful mother, who has found sanctuary in the protective cocoon of male adoration, luxury and respectability. Rich in characterization, "Southern Women" is about the bonds of family and the struggle for personal freedom; of rebellion and tradition; kinship, allegiances and love.

"The Movie Set" by June Flaum Singer, the best-selling author of "The Debutantes," tells the story of five young women who bid farewell to their college days at Ohio State — two decades ago, and today are lured by the seductive promises of Hollywood and caught in the frenzy of life in California. Moving in the most exclusive circles of all, they are part of the movie set. The story of these five women and the divergent courses their lives take after leaving Columbus is a compelling and mesmerizing story about the enduring friendship between women, the kind that can survive distance, infidelity, failure, success and even life in the most cut-throat town of all.

Rhododendrons In Peak Flowering

Like the turning of autumn leaves, late June's bloom of rhododendron is one of the premier natural spectacles of the southern Appalachians. This summer, national park and forest officials are predicting the most profuse flowering in five years.

"It looks like we're in for a real good bloom," says Pisgah National Forest District Ranger Bob Carey who manages the Rhododendron Gardens on Roan Mountain. "This will be one of the better years by far."

A Grandfather Mountain representative says "we've never seen the bloom so profuse here," and Blue Ridge Parkway resource manager Larry Freeman echoes the same good news for parkway sites like Mount Mitchell and the Craggy Mountains just north of Asheville. "This should be a far better than average bloom year," Freeman says. "Probably the best in four or five years. The plants aren't at all spotty. Each bush seems to be covered with flowers."

Though no one can be sure why this summer's rhododendron flowering is so good, there are a number of probable causes. Freeman speculates that "the last few hot, dry summers may have something to do with it. The poor bloom lately may have been caused by those drought conditions. Now that we've had plenty of rain, the plants are coming back strong from the stress, like a pine will do by producing a lot of cones."

Though rhododendron has already bloomed at the lowest mountain elevations, popular viewing sites at high elevations like Roan Mountain, Grandfather Mountain and the Craggies are expected to blossom through the end of June. Bob Carey says Roan Mountain should be at peak bloom from June 20 to June 30. And Freeman predicts that Grandfather Mountain and the highest parkway locations will be at their best between the weekends of June 16 and June 23.

With rhododendron bushes likely to be loaded with blooms, it should be easy this year to see why the plant's name was derived from the Greek meaning "rose tree." Whether or not the legend is true, some still say that the ancient Catawba Indians challenged all the tribes of the earth to a battle on Roan Mountain and the rhododendron blooms red each June to honor the deaths of the victorious Catawba warriors.

To receive a free area guide map to the High Country rhododendron sites mentioned above, call toll free 800/222-7515 in N.C., 800/438-7500 in eastern U.S., and 704/264-2225 local and outside WATS zone.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second writers meeting for the month of June will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Helen Parks, 1609 Oaklawn.

Anyone interested in any form of creating writing — fiction, non-fiction, poetry — may attend. There are no fees involved.

England Celebrates Wimbledon Centennial

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

Little has changed at Wimbledon, even after 100 years. There's still the rain, the swaying grass, the polite crowds, the rackets pounding against a floating white ball. And as always, beginning June 25, the best players in the world will be vying for one of tennis' most coveted titles.

This year is the centennial celebration of women's tennis at Wimbledon, and to mark the occasion, HBO has prepared a series of five specials featuring the most memorable moments of a most memorable century. All of the five-minute spots will be shown during the first five days of tournament play.

Tom Braine, now in his eighth year as producer of HBO's Wimbledon telecasts, put together the package, which includes sketches of the first ladies finals. There's also film footage of Maureen Connolly vs. Doris Hart; Margaret Court vs. the King herself, Billie Jean; and Martina Navratilova vs. Chrissie Evert-Lloyd in 1978.

This is in addition to HBO's usual 27-hour, same-day, midweek coverage. "We really have come a long way," says Braine. "When we first started covering Wimbledon, we only did the quarters and semis. After a few years, as we got bigger, we decided to cover that first week, which is when most of the upsets take place anyway."

Braine's has only one concern about this year's tournament. "I just wish," he says, "that someone was good enough to beat Martina. With her, we don't keep score anymore, we just keep a stopwatch. But you never know. Every year, there's always a surprise."

Barry Tompkins, Larry Merchant, BBC commentator John Barrett, Arthur Ashe and Miss King will be the on-camera players following Braine's off-the-field commands.

They are all, indeed, quite fortunate, for they will be covering one of the best sporting events of the year — tennis, under cloudy skies, surrounded by tea-drinking spectators and with the constant threat of an upset. They will be there watching professionals at the top of their game playing for the special honor of becoming the 100th champion in a tournament that has managed to place its crown on all of the game's greats.

Deanie Loomis (Melissa Gilbert) and Bud Stamper (Cyril O'Reilly) have a rough time making their relationship work in the strict environment of pre-Depression Kansas, in the TV adaptation of "Splendor in the Grass," airing Friday, June 29, on NBC.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I'll swear that the mother on "Eight Is Enough" was written off the show because the actress who played her died in the arms of John Travolta. All this time I thought it was Betty Buckley, but now I see Betty is very much alive. Is it possible that Betty Buckley played a stepmother, and the actress who played the real mother is the woman who died? — Sue Barrett

To Sue: You've answered your own question. Actress Diana Hyland originated the role of Joan Bradford, the kids' real mom, on "Eight Is Enough." Miss Hyland died of cancer on March 27, 1977. Her romance with John Travolta blossomed while filming the TV movie "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble." Travolta was devastated by her death, and threw himself into his work with a fervor by filming the 1977 hit "Saturday Night Fever." The next year he starred with Olivia Newton-John in "Grease" and with Lily Tomlin in "Moment by Moment" (ironically, a story concerning an affair of an older woman with a younger man). Not even Marilu Henner of "Taxi" fame could dispel Travolta's sorrow. As for the series, Joan was initially described as "being away." The following season (1977-78), Tom Bradford, portrayed by Dick Van Patten, was suddenly a widower. Enter schoolteacher Abby (Betty Buckley), and the new Mrs. Bradford was born.

DEAR MICHELE: Is John Schneider of "The Dukes of Hazzard" married to Tawny Little of "Eye on Los Angeles"? — Mary Payan

To Mary: John and Tawny were married last July. The former Miss America, Tawny Little Schneider, is said to be fuming over a recent item in a New York paper that revealed she and her hubby were reportedly headed for splitsville, but the reports of marital discord keep coming. For now, it looks like the couple will celebrate their upcoming first anniversary.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Filmmaker Peter Gimbel and his co-producer wife, Elga Andersen, made headlines when their expedition to find the sunken Italian luxury liner, Andrea Doria, resulted in the successful recovery of the ship's First Class bank safe and resolved the question of whether a missing watertight door contributed to its sinking.

Immediately upon their return from this hazardous mission, U.S. Customs sealed the safe. It was then transported to the New York Aquarium, where it has been on public display under 24-hour guard. Over the years rumors have persisted about the safe's contents.

The two-hour film, "Andrea Doria: The Final Chapter," will be telecast nationally (and by satellite around the world) on Aug. 16 — climaxed by the eagerly awaited opening of the safe, live on the air. I am giving you advance notice of this event in order that you may circle your calendars — it will be televised nationally on an ad hoc network, so watch your listings.

Bill Moyers will be joining "The American Parade" when it returns on CBS on Wednesday, June 27. A new format will also be introduced.

Maureen Stapleton and Charlotte Chandler, author of "The Ultimate Seduction," were midtown when a tricycle-rickshaw pedaled by The Columbia student said it was for hire at $3 per person. The two got in.

At a slight hill in the road the two passengers got out and trotted alongside while the tri-shaw struggled solo over the incline. "We were just too fat," says shy Miss Stapleton.

Wheeling Through Detroit

By Willie Schatz

On Ken Squier's degree-of-difficulty scale, the Detroit Grand Prix gets high marks.

"This is the hardest event I broadcast all year," says Squier, who will anchor CBS's announcing team for the network's telecast today of the third annual Detroit Grand Prix. Squier will share the microphone with Chris Economaki, David Hobbs and Ned Jarrett.

"It's a totally different exercise than doing stock cars," Squier says. "The drivers are all of European extraction. The cars are much smaller and you can barely see the numbers. Each team has two cars painted identically, which makes it even harder to tell the cars apart. I usually identify the drivers by their helmets."

Fortunately, Squier has 16 cameras to help him along the twists and turns of the 181.3 mile course that winds through the streets of Detroit. If his monitor breaks down, he is in big trouble. Because of all the barriers around the artificial course, an announcer actually sees the cars for about 5 seconds of their 105-second laps.

"It's like covering a political convention in wartime," Squier says. "Culling out the really significant events isn't easy to do. And you can be assured that once during the show the monitor will give out and so will the color, which means the blue car becomes a green car."

Sunday, June 24.

Wimbledon Special, NBC. This is the 100th year they've allowed women on the hallowed grounds of the All-England Club. NBC will commemorate the occasion with a centennial glance at the females who have made their grass greener — and some members' hair grayer — at Wimbledon.

SuperBouts, ESPN.

Part two of this summer-long rerun series. Tonight you get two Sugar

Ray Leonard bouts. First comes Leonard's only loss, to Roberto Duran on June 20, 1980. That's followed by the Sugar Ray we all know and love, as he knocks out Ayub Kalule on June 25, 1981. ESPN announcers will provide voice-overs. They won't change the results, though.

U.S. Olympic Team Trials, ABC. Live coverage of track and field from the L.A. Coliseum. Al Michaels, O.J. Simpson, Marty Liquori and Renaldo (Skeets) Nehemiah will talk as others run and throw. A very impressive cast behind the microphone. The United States hopes the athletes on the field are as good.

Monday, June 25

USFL Football, ESPN. The regular season finale (did I just hear a sigh of relief?) between the Memphis Showboats and the Houston Gamblers. It's too bad neither team is as good as its nickname.

Friday, June 29

U.S. Olympic Team Trials, ABC. Swimming finals from Indianapolis. Former gold medal winners Mark Spitz and Donna DeVarona will share the microphone with Jim Lampley and Anne Simon.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended as a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area, and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Actress
Diane
Lane

YOURSELF

GIBSON: IT'S BACK TO THE OUTBACK FOR MEL MAY ME!

Mel (The Bounty) Gibson acted out a year of living dangerously, but now he knows the consequences of driving dangerously from personal experience. He recently had his license suspended for vrooming under the influence of a bountiful quantity of alcohol while on location in Ontario filming Mrs. Soffel with Diane Keaton. Fortunately, the suspension will be scotched in Australia where Gibson was raised and where he's headed, appropriately enough, to make the sequel to The Road Warrior.

David Hasselhoff, 31, the star of NBC's Knight Rider, found a lady love, but he confesses he was a bit nervous about playing the role of a White Knight in real life. "I was scared about the commitment of getting married [to Catherine Hickland of the CBS soap Capitol], and whether I'd be able to live up to her expectations. The day of my wedding I realized I had people who love me, a couple of million bucks, a beautiful woman, health, happiness, and I was still messing it up with partying a little too hard and not really taking care of myself."

Her most famous film outfit consists of a full skirt and a simple shoulder-tugging peasant blouse pulled down to THERE. In her off-screen life, it's hard to imagine her shopping anywhere but the most exclusive, expensive boutiques. But come September, patrons of J.C. Penney may look up from the dress racks to stare right into the luminous eyes of Sophia Loren. The actress has agreed to visit four Penney outlets as part of the chain's month-long "Salute to Italy" promotion campaign. Loren is sure to make a splash signing autographs in the San Francisco, Dallas, Atlanta and Washington, D.C., stores, and promoting her signature fragrance, "Sophia," by Coty. Though she hasn't agreed to endorse any other products yet, can a line of peasant blouses be far behind?

It used to be that music videos were the province of rock stars. But, as Jimmy Durante once so sagely put it, "EVERYBODY'S tryin' to get in on the act." There are exercise videos, there are video parodies like "Eat It," Weird Al Yankovich's send-up of the Michael Jackson hit "Beat It." Now here comes Phyllis Diller with a satire of you-know-who's "Thriller." It will be called "Diller," and is said to feature a monster chorus wearing Phyllis masks, dancing to music that sounds a lot like the tune it's mocking. Dean Martin is also scheduled to put out a video, and we wonder what he has in mind... something like "Billy Dean"?

We hear through the grapevine that when it comes to pressing matters, Jane Wyman, the mendacious matriarch of CBS's Falcon Crest, has been very helpful to the show's younger cast members, particularly to William R. Moses, 24, who plays her grandson Cole. What sort of counsel does the former Mrs. Ronald Reagan dispense? "Her best advice to me was, 'Don't get married,'" recalls Moses, who has a steady girlfriend whom he sees when he's away from the vineyards. "She thinks it would complicate my life." On the show, however, he's not only married, but he's also the father of an illegitimate son. Where was Jane when the guy really needed her?

BERNADETTE PETERS

Star of Broadway's Sunday in the Park with George

What's the nicest compliment you've ever had? — N.C., Little Rock, Ark.

When George Burns told me, "Kid, if I were a girl, I'd look just like you." One of the first things he let me know was: "Some people think life is a bowl of cherries. It's not. It's a bowl of pickles." Another great compliment was Carol Burnett's friendship. There was an eight-month period when I was not working. She believed in me and often asked me to be a guest on her show.

LARRY HARMON

A.K.A. Bozo the Clown

What's the hardest trick for a clown to perform? — G.L., Santa Fe, N.M.

Because the major part of his life is mime, a clown finds it very difficult to talk even on a light conversational level. Also, because clowns clown around, one doesn't associate them with serious topics. Would you, for instance, think of sitting down with a clown in full regalia to discuss acid rain, nuclear problems, taxes or old age? Of course not! What clowns long for is to get their teeth into a really meaty discussion.

Hard work and talent can overcome a lot

By Joyce Wadler

Her face evokes the young Grace Kelly. You know the look: the tiny button of a nose; the tea rose mouth; the profile so perfect, it couldn't have been sculpted with a knife—you'd need a laser to cut a line like that.

But when Diane Lane opens her mouth, the comparison ends. Grace Kelly would not talk tough. Nor would Grace Kelly arrive at the opening night party of a New York rock club in a sequined tank top and pants so tight that men clutch at their hearts and roll their eyes.

And then there's the private life. For Grace Kelly and other ingenues of the time, it all seemed to be just fine and dandy. Diane Lane, 19 years old, the ingenious ingenue, feels no obligation to tell you that everything was "wonderful, wonderful," either during her last moviemaking experience or during her childhood. She had the sort of family life, after all, that is the stuff of soap operas: kidnapping, nervous breakdowns, alcoholism, running away from home, custody battles. When she was 7 her father hid her from her mother; when she was 16 her mother abducted her back. She has barely talked to her mother in the last two years.

"I got a letter from my grandmother saying she [her mother] stopped drinking and smoking," Lane says. "I can't imagine it. We'll see how long it lasts."

Are you familiar with her face, by the way, or, as so often happens with the ingenue crop, do features blur? Diane's probably don't. The daughter of an acting coach/cabdriver and an actress/Playboy centerfold, Diane has been working in the theater since she was 6 and made her film debut, opposite Laurence Olivier in A Little Romance, when she was 13. (Sir Laurence, impressed with the profile, was one of the first to call her, "the next Grace Kelly.")

At 14 she was singled out for the cover of Time magazine for a story on clean. But when she speaks, she's cynical about beauty; a bit too cynical.

"There's no such thing as a Marlboro Woman," she says. "I've got about 10 years and then it's like..."

She doesn't finish the sentence.

"The Marlboro Men —" she says, "they always age so well."

And in discussing her career, the high-pressure, business of making movies, she emphasizes that all is not picture perfect. "Hysterical" is the word she uses most often; "insecure" comes in second. She suggests that her entire career was the doing of her father, Burt, and that she is not certain she wants it.

"This is my whole identity bag — The Actress," she says. "It's my brass ring and I'm holding on with both fists. But I still feel obliged to continue at the pace that I'm going because I don't want to hear from him, 'I changed your diapers.' He can pull that one out of the bag anytime he wants to and I can't argue with that."

Can't she?

"It's not worth it, believe me," she says. "He was the captain of the debating team in military high school. Five hours later you're still sitting there."

It's also evident that whatever the pressures of the movie business, Diane Lane carries with her a high-pressure chamber of her own. In Streets of Fire, given a "PG" rating despite its language and violence, she plays rock 'n' roll star Ellen Aim — who, interestingly, gets kidnapped — and she had wanted very much to do her own singing. The studio "spent like eight grand" on the coach. She practiced for six weeks. And then — but let her tell it:

"I sang one of those songs for Jimmy Iovine [supervisor of special music for Streets of Fire]," she says. "It was a bomb. I just left crying. I was like sobbing all the way home. It was like driving in a rainstorm without windshield wipers... it was like that... I have this incredible insecurity about singing... It's like this neurotic buzz — 'Sing for me, Diane.' And I want to cry. And I just did."

Could it have anything to do with the fact that her mother was a failed singer?

"Well, exactly," she says. "My mother wanted me to be a singer and she used to drag me out and make me sing in front of the piano with her — not make me, but I felt like I had to... She wanted to be the white Billie Holiday. She felt victimized by voice coaches. They tried to transform her into Ethel Merman. So it just never happened for her. She would always sing by the piano, 'Light My Fire'... and she was really vamping it up... Whew; it mortified me a little bit. I felt the pain she should have felt."

Her mother, Colleen, had an up-and-

"Hollywood Whiz Kids" and later starred in the movies Rumblefish and The Outsiders. But it was in 1983 that things came together to make Lane a potential superstar. She filmed both the rock fable Streets of Fire (which opened this month) and the new Francis Ford Coppola film, Cotton Club, her 13th motion picture, in which she stars with Richard Gere (due out at Christmas-time). It was nine months filming back to back, and having finished up at 6 a.m. the day before Christmas, Diane felt the need for a vacation. She chose, she'll tell you with some amusement, what was supposed to be one of the most beautiful spots on earth. Don't expect her to romanticize it, though.

"I went to Bali, Indonesia, with a girl I met at a rock 'n' roll party on New Year's Eve," she says. "Richard Gere told me that was the place to go and I had checked it out. A lot of people go there to get inspired, like The Police and David Bowie and the Stones. So I went there and I really expected it to be my dream beach. And it's black sand. Insects — the walls are breathing with them, and when you turn out the lights, they just come diving for you... I would have stayed, because when you pay that much money you don't just leave, but the girl that I was with couldn't stand it, so after four days we came back and stayed on Waikiki Beach. We could have spent $200 getting there. Instead we spent 10 times that... and they frisked us down at the airport because this girl's got a tattoo on her arm and we looked terrible. We'd been flying for two days. And we'd gotten drunk on the plane because we were so depressed. It was a little bit suspicious."

Lane says this, cheerfully enough, in an elegant hotel bar in Manhattan; she does not do interviews in her home. It's a curious thing, this one nod to privacy, for in other areas of her life Lane is guileless — even raw. She comes to the interview punctually, professionally. She is dressed as informally as any 19-year-old might be, in a casual sweater, corduroy jeans. Her beauty is astonishing. Gazing at her across the room, you know she's something in the entertainment business — a model, an actress. It's a face that very nearly predestines one to act — so perfect, so down life of her own. The daughter of a several-times-married Southern evangelist, she left home at 16 to try her luck as a model and lounge singer. In 1957 she was a bubble-bathing Playboy centerfold. The same year, she enrolled in Burt Lane's acting class. They married four years later. Within two years of marrying, Colleen was in Las Vegas establishing residency for a divorce. But she was an emotionally volatile woman; hearing "their" song on the radio, she phoned her estranged husband and announced that she wanted to have a child. Thirteen days after Diane was born, Colleen filed for divorce. Diane stayed with her father until she was 4 or 5, then traveled from New York to California with her mother, who was looking for work. Eventually, though, Diane went back to live with her father; she cannot tional. But it may have been, with debating champ Burt, the only answer she could have given. She remembers one fight in particular — at the time she was going into the seventh grade, exhausted from a schedule of schoolwork and the theater, wanting to "quit the play, quit everything, and see how far I could excel academically on my own."

"This play came up and he was like, '[Just] do the play'; and I said, 'You'd have made me into an actress if I was born with two heads.' That's the way it remember the exact age, she says. "In my mind I was always in transit anyway." When Diane was 6, her mother was hospitalized for a nervous breakdown. Following her release she tried to kidnap Diane — and a nervous Burt kept the child with his family in New Hampshire until the matter of custody was resolved. Colleen voluntarily gave up custody then.

Burt had by then given up his actors' workshop and was driving a cab — but he had not given up his show business dreams entirely. A family friend suggested that Diane try out for a place with the experimental La MaMa troupe; She appeared in New York for three years with them, spending the summers traveling throughout Europe. At 12, she performed in The Cherry Orchard with Meryl Streep at New York's Lincoln Center; the part in A Little Romance followed. And behind her was father Burt. Working for her. Letting her know he was working for her:

"If you want to do something exceptional with your life, I'll invest my life in it," he said. "If you want to be just average, that's OK, too. Then I can go out and have some fun, and you'll get a babysitter."

FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH FOR WOMEN & MEN

Here's a fast, sure program to get you looking and feeling better than you have in years. Trim, tone, and shape your middle with just a few minutes of exercise each day.

The youthful look of a narrow waist—it's yours if you want it! So get ready to flatten your stomach with the New 7-Day Flatten Your Stomach Program from Consumer Guide.®

Yes, this new program gives you a different exercise plan for every day of the week. You alternate days of lighter exercise with days of more vigorous exercise. And on the seventh day you ease up with a special maintenance-level routine (perfect for the weekend!).

The secret is in the way each day's exercises work together so that all—and not just some!—of the four major abdominal muscles get toned up. Some of these muscles run up and down. Others run side to side. And some crisscross the abdomen at an angle. If you exercise only one of these muscles (say, by doing sit-ups) your stomach may be hard. But it won't be flat!

The New 7-Day Program, however, has been designed to produce balanced muscle development and shaping, while avoiding injury and soreness. Do these simple, easy-to-follow exercises each day and see if you don't feel more fit, energetic, self-confident and attractive in just a few short weeks.

Easy To Use

This book has simple exercises with easy-to-follow directions illustrated in full-color on 64, large 8½" x 11" pages which are spiral bound to lie flat and stay open. So now what's your excuse?

So don't put off the day when you can start enjoying a slim, firm waistline. Order the New 7-Day Flatten Your Stomach Program now.

DIANE LANE

felt at the time. One minute I felt like it was mine and he didn't deserve to stick his nose in, then the next minute I felt like it was his and I wished I had no part of it and he could go act — fine, it was his dream. It still shifts around...."

The quarrels continued as did the professional successes. She filmed Cat in the Hat and Little Britches in 1979. Then, fighting bitterly with her father, she left home. The dependency was such that he had "sort of a breakdown" when she left, and started therapy. She went to live with her mother on and off in Georgia for a stormy two years. Mother then became her legal guardian, setting the grounds for a financial dispute over Diane's earnings that is still in the courts. When Georgia became too constricting, she fled to Los Angeles, then back to New York and her father, though she chose to live with friends. At 16 she was abducted by her mother, who had supposedly come to New York just for a visit. Relating the story, Diane is still incredulous.

"She just said, 'There's somebody waiting for you in the car,'" says Diane. "And when I got there, there were no door handles on the inside of the car. There was my cat waiting for me — and this thug. She'd driven the cat up from Georgia to lure me into the car and brought me some flowers. That was kind of bizarre. I was hysterical. I was screaming. We were just supposed to go down to Howard Johnson's and have breakfast and talk and work things out... and she has to drag me out of the state."

With the aid of juvenile authorities who were contacted by Burt's lawyer, Diane "escaped" and legally returned to Burt's custody. You might even say she put together a normal life. She became involved with a musician, whom she's been seeing for more than two years now. She went into therapy with her father — same therapist, as a matter of fact. She moved into her own one-bedroom apartment next door to her father's building. Burt had her boyfriend install an intercom so that "he could buzz me anytime he wanted.... I had to stop everything and talk to him. He didn't seem to grasp that. I'd say, 'Hey, I'm washing my face now. Can I call you back?' He'd say, 'It's important.'"

In a move their analyst should have admired, she lost patience one day and threw the intercom out of the window. Now Diane has another apartment a block away from her father.

Burt remains her manager. Diane strains to be somewhat her own boss. Though the old conflict — how much to struggle to be special — seems to linger.

"I'd like to take some time off, take guitar lessons, go back to art classes, take up psychology and economics and politics and apply them to a college credit later on, because I'm 19 and going to be 20 any minute now," says Diane. "You've got to keep the momentum going...."

One just keeps wondering how much of the push is for Burt Lane and how much is for Diane Lane.

A laugh.

"So do I," says Diane. And after a moment: "I don't have to do anything. I can quit tomorrow."

Could she really?

"No," she says. FW

BEAT STRESS — AND GIVE YOUR HEART A BREAK

and Dennis L. Breo

The American Medical Association recently told Congress that one-half of our nation's $325 billion annual health bill would be preventable if Americans adopted healthier lifestyles. Nowhere is this more true than in my specialty, cardiology. I have found that controlling unnecessary stress is the key to warding off heart attacks.

What role does stress play in promoting heart-related diseases? It stimulates two responses in the body: an "acute alarm" reaction that prepares us for fight or flight, and a "chronic vigilance" reaction that readies the body for long-term endurance. Both of these are positive when extra strength and endurance are used to meet physical demands. But they can be highly destructive when they are stimulated repeatedly in response to life's everyday mental stress. What nature designed for survival becomes suicidal, and there's nothing for you to do but stew in the juices you've produced.

The alarm reaction, usually prompted by a challenge to one's control over a situation, is powered by adrenaline; vigilance, initiated by a loss of control, is triggered by cortisol. These stress chemicals, singly or in combination, can be deadly, contributing to problems such as high blood pressure, atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and blood clots. Excess adrenaline can also overcontract and rupture heart muscle fibers, weakening the heart and making it vulnerable to an electrical short circuit.

Worst of all on the heart is the combination of purposeless alarms and vigilance. It's like a 1-2 punch to the heart's three systems — muscles, arteries and electrical — and it can cause sudden death.

Unfortunately, there's no special form of protection to safeguard your heart against the effects of stress. We have found, though, that stress is usually related to a perceived loss of control and that the best solution is to regain a sense of control over your life. All of the anti-stress solutions provided here relate to the idea of taking control of your life.

Here are seven basic anti-stress tips:

1. Clarify your values. It is not important to run on the fast track. Learn to live ac-

To avoid burnout, proper leisure to renew your commitment to work and recharge

ording to your values, not those of your parents.

My favorite exercise: Pretend you have only six months to live. Now, make three lists: (1) the things you have to do; (2) the things you want to do; and (3) the things you neither have to do nor want to do. Then, for the rest of your life, forget everything in category 3. You can greatly reduce your stress by learning the word no. Start to give yourself a break.

2. Improve your "self-talks." You are constantly speaking to yourself, and many of these conversations are unnecessarily negative. You give emotional meaning to events that are otherwise neutral. Begin to cool down your reactions so, on a scale from 1 to 10, your body responds to stress as a cool-reacting "3" or "4," not as a hot-reacting "8" or "9."

Most damaging are the irrational self-talks such as "should," "ought to" and "must." Nowhere is it written that you "must" do anything.

HEALTHY HEART

3. Learn how to relax. Relaxation therapy can be a life-saver. All you need is a quiet room and the discipline to close your eyes, breathe rhythmically (preferably abdominal breathing) and blot out outside distractions for 10 to 15 minutes.

Think of something that relaxes you and let the world go away. Many people recharge themselves and escape stress simply by a relaxation break twice a day, just like a coffee break.

4. Exercise regularly. First get a go-ahead from your doctor, especially if you are over 40 years old. Then follow this formula: Exercise aerobically at least three times a week for 20 minutes at 70 percent of your maximum predicted heart rate. To determine your maximum heart rate, subtract your age from 220. Thus, a 40-year-old man has a maximum heart rate of 180. If he exercises until his pulse rate reaches 126, or 70 percent of 180, and sustains this pace for 20 minutes, three times a week, he will condition his heart. Select an aerobic exercise (such as running, swimming or dancing) you enjoy. You are much more likely to stick with something you like.

5. Realize that you need both leisure time and social support. The best way to avoid burnout is to allow yourself proper leisure to renew your commitment to work and recharge your batteries. If you are a workaholic, look at it this way — you owe it to yourself to take time out. If you don't give yourself a break, you'll be jeopardizing your chances of sticking out a tough job over the long haul.

Similarly, you need social support to buoy yourself up for the everyday stress of life. Scientific studies consistently show that people with adequate social support — a loving spouse, friends and a supportive work environment — as well as enjoyable hobbies and outside activities, cope with stress much better than those who are alone and lonely.

6. Set dietary goals. Maintain normal weight and lower your cholesterol and salt intake by following eating habits that fit comfortably into your normal social situation.

Try to limit fat to no more than 30 percent of your diet, substitute complex carbohydrates for simple sugars, get the salt out of the kitchen, or use salt substitutes whenever possible. Also, eat breakfast. If you do nothing else but start having breakfast, you will have made an important dietary gain.

7. Avoid the "chemical haze." One definition of stress is loss of control and the need to acquire control through artificial means, such as drugs. Break those habits that are harming your heart.

As a cardiologist, I am one of the high priests of medical technology. And yet, I have learned that the most powerful therapy can be a physician's words. In conclusion, let me state the ultimate defense against stress:

Rule No. 1: "When it comes to the small stuff, don't sweat it."

Rule No. 2: "It's all small stuff!" And, if you can't fight and you can't flee, learn how to flow.

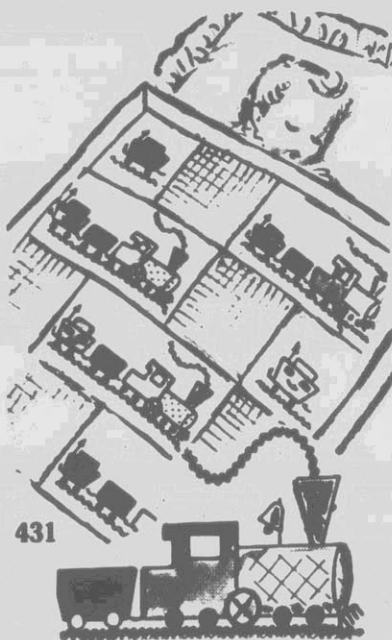

Even if you're losing a job or ending a love affair, you can control the level of stress. Give yourself the saving prescription: It's not worth dying for. FW

THE ALL-IMPORTANT SELF-ESTEEM FACTOR

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If your sex life is on the blah side, it may be because you're selling yourself short in the self-esteem department.
2. How success or failure affects you depends on your self-esteem.
3. How a child feels about himself is likely to depend on how his mother feels about him.
4. Your social class determines to a large extent your self-esteem.
5. Owning a pet increases your level of self-esteem.

ANSWERS

1. True. The California School of Professional Psychology surveyed 98 subjects (49 married couples) on self-concept and sexual problems. Those with problems differed from the others in that there was a marked discrepancy between their real and ideal self-concept. These findings suggest that a person's love life can improve if he reconciles this difference. In short, people who are satisfied with themselves tend to be better lovers.
2. True. A group at the State University of New York studied the effects of self-esteem on success and failure. Ninety undergraduates were monitored following both successes and failures arranged for by the researchers. The students who had scored high on tests designed to measure self-esteem performed equally well following success or failure. Students with low self-esteem performed significantly better after a success than they did after a failure.
3. True. The findings of University of Tennessee researchers showed that actions that communicate acceptance and approval to children had a positive impact on a child's self-esteem. Pressure to achieve also had a salutary effect. Punishment, however, even though the child might feel it is deserved, has a negative effect. And while punishment is sometimes necessary, the findings suggest that if it is used sparingly and thoughtfully it will enable a child to maintain a more positive self-concept.
4. False. Research was conducted at the University of Santa Clara (Calif.) and the University of Texas on the relationship between social class and self-concept. Subjects of various ages and from all social classes were surveyed. The results showed no relationship between social class and self-concept; the self-esteem level averaged the same for all classes.

5. False. In a study conducted at Wright State University (Ohio), male and female college students — pet owners and non-owners included — were given a battery of psychological tests. The results indicated that "differences in self-esteem were insignificant, but that pet owners do tend to have higher empathy scores (ability to put oneself in another's place and see the world as he sees it), and higher interpersonal trust scores (more trusting of others)." PW

A BREAKFAST YOU'LL REALLY FLIP OVER

By Marilyn Hansen

Summertime, and the living is easy. So is this charming breakfast we've created for you. For an extra special touch, serve it on the patio or terrace. The puffed, golden pancake, dusted with confectioners' sugar and topped with fresh fruit, makes a marvelous presentation. So get out your best china, spread a lace or linen cloth, and put a rose in a crystal vase. Oh, and take the phone off the hook. After your first sip of Mimosa in the glorious summer sunshine, you won't want anything to interrupt you!

MIMOSAS

2 cups orange juice, chilled
1 bottle champagne, chilled

2. Just before serving, open champagne and fill glasses completely. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings

BIG BAKED PANCAKE

1. 1 tablespoon unsalted butter or margarine
 2. 2 eggs
 - 1 cup milk

 - $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt, or to taste
 - $\frac{1}{4}$ cup confectioners' sugar
 - $\frac{1}{2}$ cup unsalted melted butter or margarine, as desired
1. Preheat oven to 450°. Place 1 tablespoon butter in 10-inch quiche pan or 12 x 7½ x 2-inch pan; place in oven for about 5 minutes or until butter is melted.
 2. In medium-sized bowl, beat together the eggs and milk. Add the flour and salt; beat with a wire whisk until batter is smooth.
 3. Pour batter into the hot, butter-coated pan. Bake for 15 minutes, reduce heat to 350°; bake about 7 minutes longer until puffy and golden brown. Sprinkle as desired with confectioners' sugar. Cut into squares or wedges. Serve with melted butter and additional confectioner's sugar, as desired. Makes 4 servings

 - $\frac{1}{4}$ cup confectioners' sugar

ON HOW WE LIVE

DRESSING DOWN

By Harriet Van Home

Barbara's mother, who is not the crying type, was near tears as she told us about Barbara's first date. In the family annals the date will one day be catalogued under "Disasters, major."

Barbara is not quite 14 and, as her mother explained, every social event is a grand ball. "She spent an entire day getting ready. She took a bubble bath. She washed her hair twice. Her hot rollers never cooled down. She tried on every dress in her closet. She sprayed and polished and preened."

And then The Boy arrived. The Boy had clearly not spent his day getting ready for Barbara. The Boy clearly lacked — along with a bath, brush and razor — a sense of occasion. Barbara's mother winced as she remembered his attire. "Nasty, tattered old jeans. Scuffed boots. Long, messy hair, of course; a stubbly chin, and one of those greasy, padded jackets."

And there was Barbara, squeaky-clean and radiant, smelling like a flower. If she found The Boy offensive she didn't say so. "He likes to be sort of casual," said Barbara.

"Casual," to millions of parents and teachers, may be too elegant a term for the way some youngsters — especially males — are dressing these days.

Now, we all expect a certain untidiness in teenagers. It's part of the youth rebellion, something that rises out of those fizzing hormones. But there are limits.

Rejection of conventional dress — by the young and the middle-aged who ape the young — has created some nasty problems for hostesses, head waiters, and all who prize decorum. Some restaurants now post signs at the door: "Jackets are required." In summer resort areas another sign has been added: "Shoes must be worn." Shoes? Well, what can you expect in a country where a Congressman told an interviewer that one of the punishments of his job was having to wear a necktie in the House of Representatives?

If you accept the view of psychologists that clothing is a language, then today's Sloppy Joes are sending us a message. I don't read it as healthy or particularly happy. Dress is one of the ways we define ourselves: We state our feelings about society and about our self-image. Classically, it used to be said that women dressed for seduction, men for swagger. Now both sexes seem to dress for slovenly ease and defiance of convention.

Dressing hobo-fashion, sociologists tell us, is an inevitable part of the "destabilization of belief systems." The belief that "clean and pressed" is preferable to rumpled and dirty was destabilized in the '60s. Now, in the '80s, we know better, and the old values are coming back. "Self-actualization" — whatever that may be — has not been found in freakish fashion.

Looking dressed for a midnight fire at sea does not liberate the soul. Those brazen T-shirts emblazoned with four letter words — or some blasphemy such as "Jesus Rocks!" — do not proclaim the wearer a brave rebel, spitting in the eye of stuffy bourgeois convention. To some eyes they proclaim the wearer one sick kid.

To the generation that remembers "dressing up," the last 20 years have been painful. Most parents understand youth's aching need to be different, to question the ornaments as well as the pieties of Nice People. But a lad who comes to dinner in muddy boots, a smelly sweater and an unweeded Charlie Chan mustache isn't a questioner, or a gallant figure of defiance.

Some of the old rules are beginning to sound eternal. Among them is the one that says you must master all the conventions before you can be successfully unconventional. Then, like that famous 300-pound gorilla, you may do as you please.

Meantime, evidence abounds that too many of us assume gorilla prerogatives without making the weight. I refer to the men who strip off their jackets in cocktail lounges, to the girls who go bra-less in their snug sweaters, to the rogues with roving eyes who wear clanking gold jewelry on their hairy chests and let their hair grow long and greasy.

We all know that times are hard, and fine clothes costly.

But soap is cheap, hair can be trimmed at home, and there's nothing to the rumor that clean blue jeans will make you sterile. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

MAMMOTH UNDERTAKING

The next time you catch Godzilla vs. the Smog Monster on the late show, don't laugh. We may not have seen the last of some of those creatures from yesteryear. Scientists in Russia and America have developed something right out of science fiction called "retrobreeding."

The story starts in Russia, where Dr. Sverbighooze Yasmilov of the University of Irkutsk extracted the nuclei from the egg cells of a woolly mammoth that had been found frozen in Siberia. He sent the nuclei to Dr. James Creak, an expert in the study of DNA at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who mixed the DNA from the woolly mammoth cells with the DNA of a modern elephant.

Creak's work was a success, and it was back to Yasmilov, who had equal success fusing the mammoth's egg cells with sperm from an Asian elephant. The experiment succeeded in a, uh, large way, producing eight fertilized eggs, which were then implanted into Indian elephants. Six miscarried, but two hybrid animals — males that are probably sterile — were born. The "mammontelephases," as they are called by some, look very similar to elephants but are covered with yellow-brown hair and have jaws that are rather like those of the mammoths that stalked the earth for the last time over 10,000 years ago.

A MODEL MAN

When it was all over — the swimsuit, the evening wear and the talent competitions as well as the question and answer session — the winner, a 20-year-old junior from Loyola University in Chicago, was given a bouquet of roses and took a walk down to the end of the stage. His name was Carey Smolensky. His name?

The event, held in early April, was the first Mister United States Contest, a pageant patterned on that other, more famous event they've held in Atlantic City for the past 63 years.

Don't confuse this pageant with other "Mister" or bodybuilding competitions. Says its founder, Larry York: "I wanted something with substance, something rather conservative — not a beefcake show."

This contest focused on the whole man and hoped to "celebrate the man of the '80s." Well, what about the man of the '80s who won? Smolensky is studying to be a dentist, enjoys bodybuilding and sports, and does some acting and modeling. He says his victory is "one small step for men's liberation."

WORKING IT OUT

A new study released by Ohio State University offers parents some good news and some bad news. The good news? High school students who hold down part-time jobs do just as well academically as students who don't. The words of caution? Part-time workers are more likely to use drugs.

The researchers interviewed 12,000 high school students once during each of their four years of school, from 1979 to 1983. One of the more disturbing findings was that 59 percent of the boys who held down jobs had tried marijuana by the time they finished their education, compared to just 48 percent of the jobless youths. With the girls the ratio was 59 to 36.

Ron D'Amico, a researcher on the project, sponsored by the U.S. Labor Department, says, "We believe it's partly because they can afford drugs. It may also be due to the greater independence that working gives them."

In addition, the study showed that more teens than ever are now working. Seventy-five percent of the seniors surveyed worked at least once a week — double the figure for the early '60s. And since few of the seniors worked to help support their families, it appears that there is a whole new moneyed class.

BEDSIDE READING

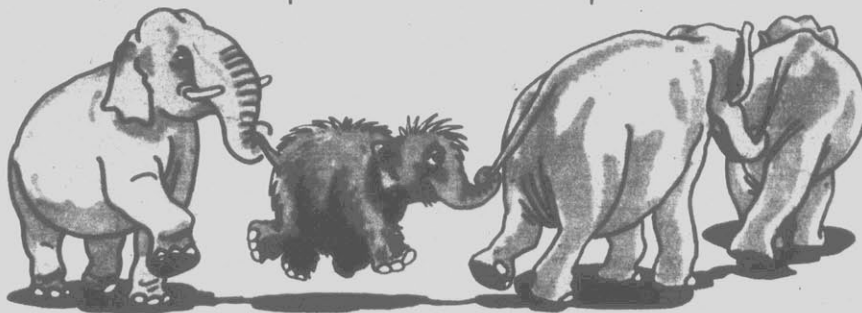

What do people around the country read before they switch out the light and retire for the night? We wondered, so we called and asked.

The Rev. Andrew Greeley, Professor of Sociology at the University of Arizona and author of the recent Lord of the Dance.

Mr. Greeley keeps up with fiction as well as sociology and theology, and is currently in a mystery phase. He is reading Gregory MacDonald's Flynn's In and First Hit of the Season by Jane Dettinger as well as Saul Bellow's Him With His Foot In His Mouth and Other Stories.

The Rev. John Donnelly, Christ Church, Greenwich, Conn.

Along with the major periodicals, Mr. Donnelly regularly reads mysteries and science fiction. He is now working on Gaudy Night by Dorothy Sayers and The Wind from the Sun by Arthur Clarke.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

● Log Jam! Names of four of these six trees — ash, oak, elm, pine, cedar, maple — make up the whole of this letter forest: EMIAPOELNAKEPML. Which four?

● Sum Time! If X squared minutes past seven o'clock is the same as seven times X minutes before 8 o'clock, how much is X? Answer quickly.

● Riddle-Me-This! What animal tosses coins? The flip-o-potamus. Why did the natives swear by the tourists? It was their cuss-tom. What Roman was famous for musical marches? John Philip Caesar.

HOW OLD IS GRANDPA?

Hey Junior, how old is Grandpa? Here's a way to find out:

Subtract your own age from 99 and state the difference aloud. Ask Grandpa to add this amount to his age and to add the first digit of the total to the figure formed by the remaining digits. The sum achieved in this conversion plus your own age will reveal Grandpa's age.

Ex.: Say you are 16, Grandpa 65. Then 99 less 16 is 83; 83 plus 65 is 148. Convert 148 to 49; 49 plus 16 is 65, his age.

AS HE DOES SO HIS LANCE BEGINS TO WAVER. MARCUS STRUGGLES TO TRAIN THE WEAPON ONCE MORE UPON ITS TARGET, BUT IT IS TOO LATE. HE MISSES HIS OPPONENT ENTIRELY. ALP ARSLAN, HOWEVER, DOES NOT. WITH A TERRIBLE JOLT MARCUS IS HOIST FROM HIS SADDLE.

KAREN RUNS TO HER FALLEN BEAU. "OH, MY POOR, POOR MARCUS," SHE CRIES. THE MAIN INJURY APPEARS TO BE A BRUISED EGO, AND KAREN'S DOTTING PRESENCE MAKES IT HURT ALL THE MORE. IRRITABLY, MARCUS PUSHES HER AWAY. "JUST LEAVE ME ALONE," HE DEMANDS.

"ME, TOO," SAYS SIR TRUEHEART, REMOVING HIS HELMET. KAREN BLUSHES IN SHAME TO SEE ALP ARSLAN STANDING THERE.
