Leaders Say School Plan Could Work

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Greenville Board of Education are expressing pleasure with a county school board endorsement of consolidation of the two school units.

The county school's endorsement of consolidation came at a noon meeting Monday by the three boards.

Mark Owens, chairman of the county school board, told the gathering "the County Commissioners mandated that something be done to resolve the serious problems" facing the two school systems.

"The County Board of Education has been die-hard opposed to the term merger. We had a system that was functioning, growing, and didn't want additional problems.

"We still feel that way. But the ball was thrown to the County Board of Education," Owens continued.

Some board members, Owens said, "are and have been opposed to merger." But he said the board has "tried to rationalize, be realistic."

Consequently, the county school board, the chairman said "came to the conclusion that something must be done to solve the problems ... concluded what we feel is for the benefit of all the children in the county ... one school system within the county."

Owens continued by saying the county board position is for the consolidated school system to be headed by a 12-member board, including eight from the present county attendance area and four from Greenville, with "five major attendance areas" centered around the present high schools.

Owens also said it is the position of the county school board that priority capital outlay needs of the two school systems be provided for before consolidation of the two systems is completed.

The capital outlay needs listed in the county school board's position statement was not accompanied by an estimated cost. But a Research Triangle Institute study, which recommended consolidating the two school systems, contained a similar list of needs and estimated the cost at $20 million for the county and $10 million for the city.

Owens, referring to the Board of Commissioners, said "the board has been generous with the taxpayers' money" but, he said, "to resolve the problems will take even more money."

"You do not accomplish anything if you stand still," Owens said. "So, for both units, in light of what we have before us, try to have the best educational system for all of our youth. This is a manner in which we can continue to grow."

Bob Martin, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, responded to Owens' comments by saying, "I think you have risen to the occasion."

Citing the county school board's endorsement of merger, Martin said, "It's just wonderful ... magnificent. You are to be commended."

Martin then told the two school boards that the Board of Com-

Budget Plan Approved

Council Opts To Raise Taxes; Junks New Fee

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council elected Monday night to increase taxes instead of initiating fees for garbage collection to raise money needed for city operations in the coming year. Along with the tax increase came approval of the city's proposed $16.5 million 1984-85 fiscal budget.

Council members unanimously agreed to increase the property tax rate 7 cents following urging from Councilman Louis Clark. The 7-cent increase will raise property taxes to 60.5 cents per $100 valuation and will bring in an additional $243,000 per year.

Clark, who has been long opposed to the creation of a garbage fee, suggested that the council also consider looking for needed revenues elsewhere in the budget. "We may need money, but I'll be dog-goned if we can do it in one fell swoop" with a garbage fee, Clark said, adding that it would be wrong to charge the citizens for a service their taxes already pay for.

Despite the council's decision to take $25,000 from the street resurfacing program, $50,000 from the contingency fund and $72,000 from the capital reserve to balance the budget, the city still needs an additional $50,000 to cover its new police retirement program. The council did not know until Friday that the state would be handing over police retirement programs to all North Carolina cities.

City Manager Gail Meeks, who was directed to find the needed $50,000 "somewhere in the budget," said she would meet with city department directors this afternoon and find the money before Wednesday morning.

"I don't think that this will jeopardize any of our planned improvements too badly," Meeks said when asked if implementing the proposed alternatives would hurt the city's growth plans.

In part, Capital Improvements designated in the 1984-85 budget include partial renovation of the police department, City Hall and community building, cemetery development, major street and highway maintenance, and the building of a science and nature center at River Park North.

The council also approved a $46,918,000 budget for the Greenville Utilities Commission during the meeting.

Common Market Resolves Row Over British Funding

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (AP) — Leaders of the Common Market today resolved a longstanding dispute over Britain's contribution to the 10-nation trading bloc's budget, French and Dutch officials said.

The dispute had left the European Economic Community, the world's largest trading bloc, in a state of paralysis for more than a year. It led to the collapse of the past two Common Market summit conferences.

The latest round of arguments came as the Common Market was running out of money. Officials have said the trading bloc will be at least $2.5 billion in the red by the end of the year, the first deficit in the group's 27-year history.

Michel Vauzelle, a spokesman for the French delegation that is presiding at the two-day summit meeting, said the Common Market leaders agreed today on a new system for determining Britain's share of financing the market's budget.

"Each made concessions — the British, the Germans, the French and the others," Vauzelle told reporters. "There were no winners and no losers."

He said the British issue was "irritating, but finally secondary" and "the road is now open to build the Europe of the future...It was not possible to begin to relaunch Europe politically with the ball and chain of the British contribution locked onto the feet of the Ten," he said.

Bart de Bruyn Ouboter, a spokesman for the Dutch delegation, also said the accord was achieved.

Ouboter said that under terms of the agreement, Britain would receive a rebate.

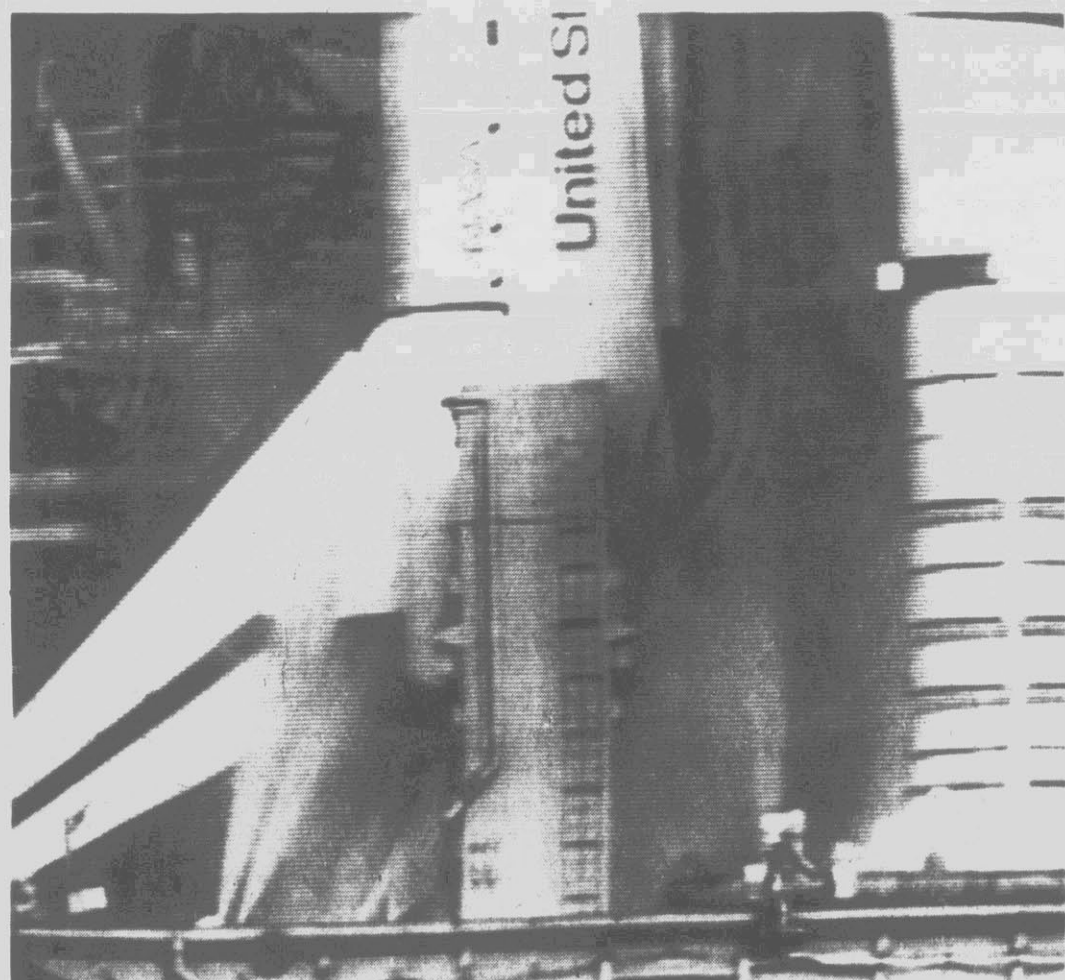

Donnelley To Hire 350

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Donnelley Marketing, which assembles and prepares cents-off coupons and advertising materials, will employ up to 350 workers at its new $3.5 million facility in Beaufort County.

Gov. Jim Hunt announced Monday that the company will initially employ 150 people during the facility's start-up phase, with employment expected to rise as high as 350.

The facility, Hunt said in a news release, is "evidence that our state's efforts to improve high technology training and education are paying off with numerous career opportunities for our citizens."

The jobs at the Washington facility will primarily involve operating specialized mailing equipment and shipping the final product, according to company officials.

Shuttle Engine Fails

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The delayed debut of space shuttle Discovery was aborted just four heart-stopping seconds before liftoff this morning when computers detected a questionable fuel valve and stopped the engine firing in mid-sequence.

It was one of the most agonizing scrubs in U.S. space history, with a six-person flight crew sitting atop 500,000 gallons of volatile fuel.

Engine ignition started a small gas fire at the base of the rocket, but it was quickly extinguished and officials said the astronauts were never in direct danger. The crew — five men and a woman — faces a launch delay of several days to several weeks.

Precisely on schedule, just before 8:43 a.m. EDT, two of Discovery's three engines flashed to life. But a computer saw an errant signal from a fuel valve and sent out the command to shut down. One of the engines had not kicked in and never did. The others closed off immediately and NASA said there was no physical damage to the new ship despite the small fire that flared immediately.

It was the second scrub in as many days, but bore no connection to Monday's — forced by a bad computer that was replaced and operating today.

The engine that did not fire — No. 1 in the NASA designbook — was borrowed earlier this month from sister ship Challenger, but the fuel valve apparently was located on No. 3.

Both engines have flown flawlessly in previous shuttle missions.

"We had a clear go and we were well underway," when the last engine did not kick in, said shuttle operations director Thomas Utsman.

Discovery's six-person crew was safe and left the ship about 45 minutes later. "Riding a rocketship is not something like riding down the freeway," Utsman said. Nonetheless, he contended, "the crew was not in any danger. We had developed the procedures to prevent the situation from getting out of control."

Asked about the possibility of the astronauts making an emergency exit from Discovery, Utsman said, "We considered it, but we never saw the data" that would make this necessary.

Discovery's commander is Henry Hartsfield, pilot of the fourth shuttle flight, along with an all-rookie crew. They included rookies Judy Resnik, the second woman to fly on a U.S. spaceship, and Charles Walker, the McDonnell Douglas engineer. The others are pilot Michael Coats and mission specialists Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane.

For the second straight day the crew waited out the countdown while lying on their backs in Discovery's cabin.

Utsman said launch controllers carefully monitored fuel tank pressures to make sure levels were not endangering the astronauts.

"I feel it's in the several days category," Utsman said of the delay before attempting another launch. But it could be as long as two weeks, he added.

Damage to the launch pad alone mandated a 48-hour delay, but the engine system trouble indicated a longer postponement than that, of 48 hours.

Not since the Gemini program of the 1960s has an American spacecraft come so close to liftoff only to be aborted.

Green's Brother Testifies

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Character witnesses took the stand to testify in the trial of Harvey Lee Green Jr. this morning in Pitt County Superior Court.

Green pleaded guilty last week to first degree murder in the Dec. 19 deaths of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, in Young's 1-Hour Cleaners in Bethel.

Bobby Ray Green, the 17-year-old brother of the defendant, testified that his brother came to live in Bethel with him and his father in October 1983. During that time, Green said he and his brother looked for jobs but were unable to find employment.

Green said his father, who worked for J.H. Hudson Construction, gave them no money but "sometimes" bought food; Green said there were periods of time when he and his brother had nothing to eat.

Under cross-examination by District Attorney Thomas Haigwood, Bobby Ray Green said that his mother occasionally visited them and brought them food.

Green testified that his brother did not finish school at D.H. Conley because he was suspended for fighting.

Harvey Lee Green's statement to police, read into the court records earlier in the trial, indicated he went to the dry cleaners with a toy gun. In his testimony today, Bobby Ray Green said a cap pistol was left at their house by a cousin. "It was black and looked like the gun Magnum P.I. (on television) uses," he testified. Green said he didn't know where the gun is now and that he had not seen it since before Thanksgiving.

Other character witnesses said that Harvey Lee Green was quiet and introverted.

McLawhorn Says Helms Made 'Mistake'

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms made "one whale of a mistake" when he voted for an additional 8-cent cigarette tax last year, said Sam McLawhorn of Grifton, a member of the N.C. State Board of Agriculture.

"The one tax that has hurt North Carolina and agriculture the most is the tax on cigarettes, which Helms swore he wouldn't vote for. But he passed that tax between midnight and day," McLawhorn said while campaigning for Gov. Jim Hunt, who is opting for Helms' Senate seat.

Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, voted for the 8-cent increase in the cigarette tax — boosting the total federal tax to 16 cents a pack — last year after agreeing to a temporary levy. He recalled that pledge last week when he obtained a vote from a Senate committee to eliminate the additional 8-cent levy in September 1985.

"Since Helms has been chairman of the Agricultural Committee, agriculture has gone down, down, down over the years," McLawhorn said. "In 1980 he made a lot of promises to eastern North Carolinians and none of them have been fulfilled.

"Some say Helms saved the tobacco program, but he came as near to losing it as anyone in the history of North Carolina," he emphasized.

McLawhorn said there was "no excuse" for such a fierce campaign between Hunt and Helms.

"The Senate campaign has gotten dirty and nasty. It doesn't need to be, but it is. Helms denies things and lies about Hunt, even on television. If he'll lie like this he'll lie about anything. He makes things sound like he wants them to sound or the public wants them to sound. He would blow a polygraph up," he commented.

McLawhorn feels that Helms' support for U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop is detrimental to North Carolinians because of the general's statement of wanting a "smoke-free society by the year 2000." He said Helms supports him only because of his stand on abortion.

McLawhorn said Helms has not dedicated enough time to agricultural concerns.

"He has put most of his time on foreign relations, prayer in school and abortion issues, which are far-fetched from agriculture. Helms and his staff were in El Salvador supporting guerrillas. Instead of working with President Reagan he was working with (President Jose Napoleon) Duarte. He was working with death squad people and people who were secretly trying to find a way to assassinate ambassadors from the United States," he said.

President Reagan, he said, "came down on Jesse for this and spoke sharply to him about his action in El Salvador. If he was a Democrat he would have been expelled from the Senate."

McLawhorn said imported farm products are replacing eastern North Carolina's products.

"Everything we send out, we receive an export duty on. Helms needs to work on this type of stuff. He cannot survive much longer," he added.

McLawhorn said if Helms is re-elected to the Senate, "he will carry no prestige or respect and will be useless to the state. Hunt carries the respect and prestige and he would be able to work much easier with senators from other states."

Iranian Airline Jet Hijacked

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An Iranian passenger jet was hijacked during a domestic flight today and forced to land in Qatar, the official Iranian news agency reported.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, in a report monitored in Nicosia, said reports reaching Tehran, the Iranian capital, indicated all passengers and crew members of the Boeing 727 were safe.

There was no immediate independent confirmation of the IRNA report.

IRNA said the airliner had been on a flight from Tehran to Bushehr on the eastern coast of the Persian Gulf when it was taken over by hijackers. The identities of the hijackers and their demands were not disclosed.

The jetliner was taken to Qatar on the west coast of the gulf, and the pilot was "forced" to land at Doha airport, the news agency said.

IRNA said the airliner could carry up to 138 passengers. The number of people actually aboard was not known.

Eleven days ago, four Iranians commandeered an Iranian Navy plane and fled Iran. They landed first in Egypt and then went on to Italy and France in search of refuge.

The plane and four other Iranians who wanted to go home were returned to Iran last weekend.

France has not said if the four men will be granted the political asylum they seek. The four were being held under police protection near Bordeaux, France.

MASONIC NOTICE
Bright Star Lodge No. 385 will hold a regular meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at the Galloway Crossroads Masonic Hall.

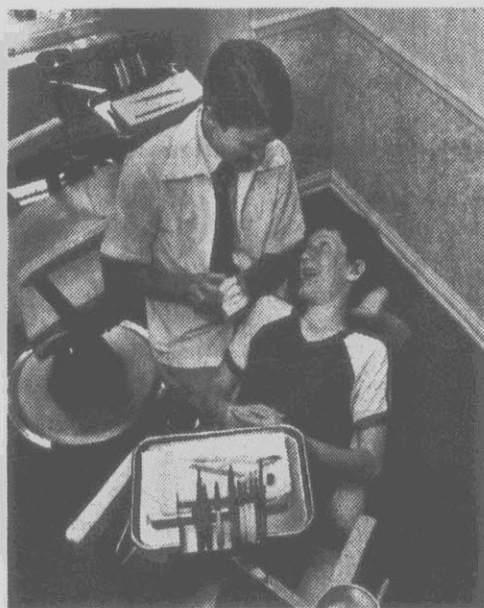

People with orthodontic problems usually consult an orthodontist concerning their need for orthodontic treatment. As a dental specialist, an orthodontist has elected to limit his or her practice to a specific area of dentistry. An orthodontist has completed two or more years of continuous training beyond dental school in an advanced orthodontic program approved by the American Dental Association.

The family dentist is eminently qualified to handle the preventive measures and many of the treatment procedures needed for good dental health. While many problems in dentistry do not require a specialist, most dentists refer their patients with orthodontic needs to a specialist.

For those seeking orthodontic treatment, competent care will prove the most beneficial and least expensive in the long run. The best dental health program results when the patient's dentist and the orthodontist work together to achieve a long-term, healthful condition in the mouth. The quality of orthodontic treatment is enhanced when conducted by a qualified orthodontist.

Readers Respond To 'That's For The Birds'

DEAR READERS: A bird lover wrote: "I love birds, and for many years now I have been offended by the expression 'For the birds.' When people want to express a negative opinion of something, they say, 'That's for the birds.' Where did that disparaging expression originate?" Bird lovers (and haters) offered the following:

DEAR ABBY: The expression "For the birds" came from an old joke that's been around for at least 50 years. It goes like this: Two squirrels were making love in a tree. They became quite rambunctious, and the female fell to the ground. The male scampered down the tree and ran to the side of his fallen lover, asking, "Are you all right?"

The dazed squirrel replied, "I'm all right. But I learned one thing ... making love in the trees is strictly for the birds."

L.B. SMITH, BIGELOW, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: The saying "For the birds" originated with flight instructors. When a student would do something foolhardy or unsafe in the air, the instructor would say, "That kind of flying is for the birds!" This is one way of saying that birds were created to fly naturally; men were not, so they had better not try anything too fancy.

PILOT'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: If you have ever tried to sit in Pittsburgh's pigeon-infested Market Square, where a flock of misguided bird-lovers go to coddle and feed those stinking, parasitic, disease carriers, you would understand what we mean when we say something is "for the birds."

WORTH SEYMOUR, SEWICKLEY, PA.

P.S. If you ever come to Market Square, bring an umbrella.

DEAR ABBY: When we were kids, there were many horse-drawn delivery wagons on our streets—the iceman, milkman, breadman, etc., and it was a common sight to see sparrows gleaming the undigested kernels of grain from the piles of horse droppings. Naturally we concluded that the birds had to be quite desperate to seek such foul rations, so whenever anyone wanted to put something down and couldn't use the vulgar four-letter word for horse manure, he'd say, "That's (beep) for the birds," hence the expression "It's for the birds."

YOU ASKED FOR IT IN SALT SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Originally, the expression was "... for the small brown birds," and referred to the close relationship of horses and sparrows. They are the only two that can live as cheaply as one.

EDWIN IN HONOLULU

DEAR ABBY: In GI language, "It's for the birds" meant "Save the horse (bleep) for the birds," or "That horse (bleep) is strictly for the birds."

Explanation: Horse droppings contain undigested grain that birds feast upon.

The idea is nicely expressed in an old Arab saying: "If you feed the sparrows, you must first feed the horses."

Continuing Process

It is a matter of concern to the public at large (and their lawmakers) that the burden of taxation be fairly shared. Insuring that fairness puts an extra burden on lawmakers who have to contend with formulae that meet national needs as well as that ill-defined concept of what is "fair".

For most of us it is a matter of opinion; and complaints are commonplace from the ranks of the wealthy, the middle-income majority, and the poor. (Even definitions as to who belongs in which grouping vary.)

In recent days a set of statistics from the IRS suggest high-income Americans are shouldering a greater share of the tax burden; but the debate will go on.

The Internal Revenue Service study said taxpayers with income of $100,000 and up paid 17.4 percent of the federal income taxes in 1982 ... up from 15.2 percent a year earlier.

Couples and individuals with incomes of $50,000 to $100,000 saw their tax share rise from 18 percent to 18.2.

The big middle-income group ... those earning between $15,000 and $50,000 ... saw their share drop from 57.8 percent to 56.3. They filed about 410 of each 1,000 returns.

Lower-earning taxpayers (incomes of $15,000 or less) paid 7.9 percent of the taxes in 1982; down from 8.8 percent in 1981. They represent something around half of all U.S. taxpayers.

An accompanying report (from The Washington Post) said an increase in the personal exemption is being considered for the near future ... an item of special interest to the low and middle-income taxpayer.

The data makes clear that efforts toward fair play in the income tax bite are a continuing process and leads one to believe elements of success are being reached in that direction.

Basis Of Fact

One aspect of North Carolina's famous outdoor drama "The Lost Colony" that keeps its audiences returning year after year (it's in its 44th season) lies in the quality of change.

No, nothing so far-out as bringing in the colonists via BOA or solving the mystery of their disappearance with introduction of a UFO. The story is unchanged, only the presentation sees occasional modification.

The changes come, we suspect, with subtle differences of concept among directors ... made possible by variations in talents among cast members. It is a happy circumstance for the drama as well as for audiences.

The level of enthusiasm on both sides of the footlights is a constant that keeps the seasonal spotlight on Manteo.

It is the opinion of the drama's general manager that this year's cast "is the best we've ever assembled" ... a statement that is almost tradition, with one unusual facet: a basis of fact.

Paul Green's story of the plight of the first English settlement in the New World remains forever green.

Prison Population Growing Again

RALEIGH — Bad news from the Department of Correction. The state's prison population has started rising again.

The prison population, according to Correction Secretary James Woodard, stood at 16,500 in early June — an increase of 1,000 inmates since the beginning of this year. Woodard said the big jump in population came almost entirely in January, February and March and that the population has leveled off since the beginning of spring.

North Carolina has long had the dubious honor of having one of the highest per capita incarceration rates in the country. From 1976 to 1982, the state had the highest rate three years and finished no lower than third in any of the other years. But, in 1983, North Carolina dropped to eighth as the state's prison population dropped.

At its high point, the prison population reached 17,500. Then, about 18 months ago, the population began to fall dramatically. At first, corrections officials couldn't explain why it was falling. (People weren't disappearing, they were being released and others weren't taking their places as quickly.) The population fell to 15,500 and suddenly a state which had experienced prison overcrowding for years actually had a population that was less than the system's planned capacity.

Woodard says one factor that explains the temporary population drop was a Paroles Commission decision to alter "good time" policies for those inmates not convicted under the Fair Sentencing Act. That act allows inmates far more opportunity to earn their way out of prison early through good behavior and when it was applied to those convicted before the act's implementation, it pushed up parole eligibility for a number of inmates.

The commission also reviewed parole eligibility for a number of inmates in the latter stages of their sentences. Many inmates convicted of non-violent offenses were released early, Woodard said.

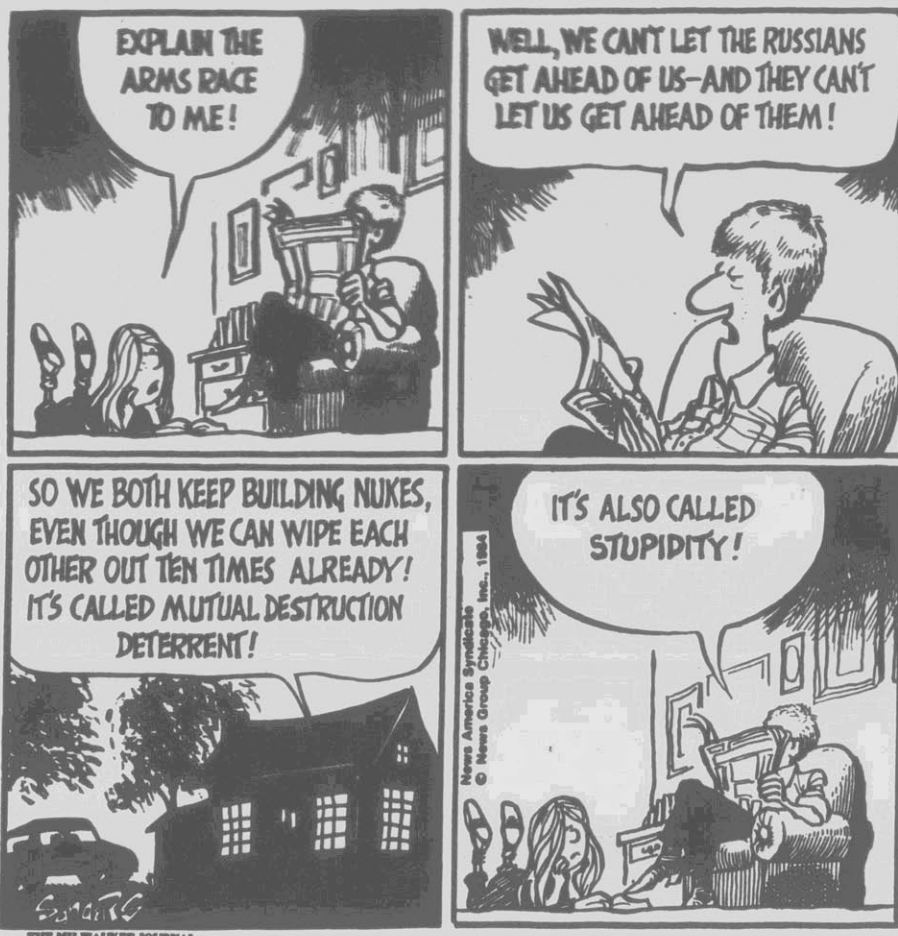

Finally, the Fair Sentencing Act's shorter sentences for some crimes helped reduce the population, he said.

So why is the population rising again? Woodard says the three factors which led to the drop will continue to keep the population below where it might have been. But, in terms of actually lowering the population, they had only a one-time effect. Now the many factors which drove up the population before 1983 are again increasing prison populations.

A bigger prison population could be extremely expensive to state taxpayers. During the respite from overcrowding, the state brought two new medium security prisons and the new maximum security Central Prison into operation. That increased capacity to 16,685. As long as population stays below capacity, the state need not worry that the federal courts will take them over due to overcrowding.

But if the population rises above capacity, that federal threat is real. The solution is to build new prisons or reduce the population. A study being conducted by the Governor's Crime Commission estimates that a new 480-bed medium security prison will cost $30 million to build and $8 million to operate, each year, by the time it opens in 1990. The commission projects that the prison population will reach 20,000 by that year and that five such prisons would be needed to handle the increase.

Faced with those numbers, the commission will again ask the legislature to authorize alternative means of criminal sentencing which would punish those convicted of less, non-violent offenses without sending them to prison where the taxpayer must pay his room and board. Efforts to promote such alternatives had limited success in the 1983 assembly.

Security Still Prime Israeli Concern

QIRYAT SHEMONA, Israel — Pasting a "soft-on-Arabs" label on the Labor Party seems outlandish, but Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and flamboyant Gen. Ariel (Arik) Sharon see it as the best hope to stem the tide running against their Likud Party in the July 23 election.

That explains Shamir's stunning charge here on the Lebanese border recently that the Labor Party is infested with peaceniks who want to pull the Israeli army out of Lebanon. Addressing a crowd of 2,000 in this famed frontier town that used to get hit by Katyusha rockets from the high, scenic ridges of Lebanon, soft-spoken Shamir delivered the punchline: "Labor says, 'Give us a date for withdrawing the army.' We will not do it because that would be telling the terrorists when to come back with their Soviet weapons."

The quiet, determined little man who inherited the Likud leadership last year when Menachem Begin resigned did not bother with details. The truth is that in the 10-month period before Sharon invaded Lebanon two years ago, the cease-fire arranged by Begin with the PLO in South Lebanon held fast without a single attack on Israel.

But inconvenient details are not the stuff of national political campaigns anywhere. Let the Labor Party deal with that. Shamir's concern must be to portray the 1982 Lebanon war, the only unpopular war in Israel's history, as the destroyer of the PLO, bringing tranquility to this beautiful land of Upper Galilee.

Shamir attacked leading lights of the Labor Party — but not Shimon Peres, Labor's leader, or his top colleague, Yitzhak Rabin, hero of the Six-Day War — for trying to undermine Likud's fundamental policies in dealing with Israel's Arab neighbors.

As for Sharon, who opened his campaign in the Negev city of Beersheba far to the south, the attack was harsher, even menacing. To raucous cheers of "Arik, Arik," the general who lost his portfolio as defense minister in the political outcry following the Sabra and Shatila slaughter of Palestinians came close to calling Labor the party of treason.

"Labor helped the PLO during the war in Lebanon by holding demonstrations in the streets of Israel," he said in his bold, strong voice. "Can it be said that they (Labor Party) are in the national camp of Israel?" The crowd thundered back, "No, no."

Quoting New York Times editorial page editor Max Frankel as his source, Sharon then leveled a serious charge at Labor Party elder statesman Abba Eban. He said the former foreign minister had secretly urged reduced U.S. aid to Israel "because that would weaken Begin."

Reaching deeper, he charged that a leading West Bank Arab had said that the PLO has halted all acts of terror during the campaign to prevent an anti-terrorist backlash from helping Likud win the election.

Sharon's acid attack, and the softer indictment of Shamir, betray what many Israelis take as fact: that Labor, out of power for the past seven years, will win the election unless the campaign is violently stirred up on the security issue. With inflation now close to the 400-percent-a-year mark — a rate that makes monthly wage indexing a mockery — Likud has no other option than to go all-out on the question of which party can best protect the state.

Despite the unpopular Lebanon war, Israel's security has particularly rich and emotional meaning both here and in Beersheba, "development towns" heavily populated with Sephardic Jews. The Sephardim who came from the Arab world feel special hostility for Arabs not always shared by the cultured Ashkenazi Jews of Eastern Europe, like Abba Eban, who have long dominated the Labor Party. Thus the Likud campaign is driving a deeper wedge into the class and cultural differences that Begin brilliantly began to exploit when he took power in 1977.

Sharon's wildly enthusiastic reception in Beersheba proved that to his Likud idolators there was more crucifixion than disgrace when he was unfrocked as defense minister. Though feared and hated by Labor, Sharon in his campaign opener gave at least some confirmation to Shamir's political judgment in making security his No. 1 issue. That is doubly true of his decision to turn Sharon loose to exploit it as only he can.

Strength For Today

It is said of Helen Keller, the blind and deaf girl who became a woman of considerable fame, that when first told about the existence of God she responded quickly and said, "I thought there must be someone like that. I just didn't know his name."

Look at the vast scheme of nature. Look up at the heavens and over the landscape, look into our own hearts and the hearts of others, and there comes over us the firm conviction that there must be someone behind all this. The created world and universe did not just happen. He fashioned it in the beginning. He causes it to operate now that it is created.

We have different names for this someone, but the important thing is not his name but his existence and his activity. Everything we are, have, and do goes back to that someone, and the knowledge of this is implicit in all of us, just as it was in Helen Keller.

The Saint Lawrence Seaway was jointly dedicated by President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Queen Elizabeth on this day in 1959. The Seaway, a 189-mile system of locks and canals, opened up 2,342 miles of Great Lakes shipping lanes to large ocean-going vessels. The longest canal of the ancient world was the Grand Canal of China. It took 1,867 years to build, and it extended 1,107 miles. At one time, the estimated work force on this canal reached 5 million.

West Germany Halting Escapes

BERLIN (AP) — West German diplomats have closed the main door to their mission in East Berlin in an effort to end the stream of up to 20 East Germans per day seeking an "escape hatch" to the West.

Informed sources said the embassy is now crowded with about 45 East Germans seeking a way to reach West Germany. Officials of the Bonn government have tried with little success to persuade the East Germans to leave, Hans Otto Braeutigam, head of the mission, told Western reporters Monday.

West German officials refused to specify how many East Germans are inside, but government spokesman Peter Boenisch told a news conference in Bonn that the mission had reached the limits of "what is technically and physically possible."

A drop in the number of emigrants allowed out of East Germany in the past month apparently prompted dozens of East Germans to seek help from the West German government.

"We have had up to 20 shelter-seekers a day," Braeutigam said. "We decided last Thursday to henceforth conduct talks with all visitors at the front gate. The door to the main building is closed."

All visitors will be restricted to a small room at the main gate, he said.

"We are no longer able to give any shelter. The mission is no escape hatch. The crisis of the mission must not become a political crisis," Braeutigam said.

About a dozen people were seen in the small room Monday, talking to a West German diplomat through a screen.

Relations between West and East Germany have improved in recent years, and earlier this year the Communist authorities allowed about 25,000 East Germans to emigrate.

The East Germans have refused to grant passage to those who have entered the West German mission in the last month seeking a route to the West. East German authorities had given assurances that those who sought shelter would not be punished, Braeutigam said.

Prime Rate Boosts Debt

By The Associated Press
Latin American nations that owe billions of dollars to foreign lenders were confronted today with hundreds of millions in additional debts because of the latest rise in the prime interest rate charged by U.S. banks.

The foreign minister of Chile, whose $20 billion debt is modest compared with sums owed by some neighbors, said a time will come when "no country will be able to pay its debt."

Many of the debtor countries are trying to carry out austerity programs designed to help them repay some of what they owe and win approval from the International Monetary Fund of loans to pay off interest.

Last week in Cartagena, Colombia, representatives from 11 Latin American nations issued a document calling for "a drastic and immediate reduction" in interest rates charged by foreign lenders.

In Mexico City, the official news agency Notimex quoted Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog as saying the rate increase announced Monday could be considered a reprisal for the Cartagena declaration. Mexico's $87 billion foreign debt is the second largest after Brazil's.

It is estimated by World Bank experts that every one-point rise in the U.S. prime rate causes a $2.5 billion increase annually in the interest costs paid by poor nations. Thus, the new increase — from 12.5 percent to 13 percent — means $1.25 billion more in Third World interest costs annually.

Brazil, faced with a $100 billion debt that is the largest owed by a developing nation, "is examining the subject and its implications," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday night in response to the increase.

Democrat Sets Lonely Trail To Senate

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — You have to hand it to Edythe Harrison. She got what she went after. Some say she got it because nobody else would take it. Edythe Harrison says that's poppycock.

"What I did took planning," she says. "I saw a year ago what was happening and went to work. Just because others couldn't see it doesn't mean I won by default. They backed off when they discovered the grass roots support in Virginia belonged to Edie Harrison. That's why nobody would challenge me."

What Mrs. Harrison won, however she won it, was the Democratic nomination to run for the U.S. Senate. Her opponent will be the incumbent Republican, John Warner.

Most Virginians know who John Warner is. He used to be married to Elizabeth Taylor. But who is Edythe Harrison?

They know her around Norfolk well enough. She moved here 28 years ago from Michigan, as a 21-year-old bride, and has been on the go ever since, ringing doorbells, telephoning, tooling around town in one cause or another in a car with EDIE H license plates. Her husband, Stanley, is a Norfolk real estate investor.

"I'm a professional volunteer," she said. Just so. She fought for integrated schools, voting rights, health issues, women's issues. She raised money to found the Virginia Opera Association. She also served a term in the Legislature and generally got on the nerves of the Old Dominion's more establishment-type politicians.

But this time she's in a statewide race. Nobody has to tell her it will be tough.

Warner is on a ticket headed by a president regarded as popular in Virginia, a state that hasn't voted for a Democrat for president since 1964 or a Democrat for senator since 1966 and has never, in its entire history, elected a woman to statewide office.

There's more. Warner, a wealthy man himself, had already raised $1.4 million for the campaign before he knew who his opponent would be or even whether he would have one.

When Gov. Charles Robb, titular head of the state Democratic party, tried to recruit prominent Virginia Democrats to take Warner on, six of them, in turn, said no dice. Nobody asked Mrs. Harrison. "I'm not one of the boys," she said.

"But since when," she said, dark eyes flashing, black eyebrows lifted, chin tilted, "should somebody have to ask permission to run for the United States Senate?"

Sipping coffee with this feisty lady, in the book-lined study of her home in a leafy Norfolk neighborhood, it is transparent that "can't" is not in her vocabulary. That also, it seems, was the governor's conclusion. He had tried to talk her out of running, he said, but "she refused to take no for an answer."

So he went ahead and endorsed her, at the state convention, but only after there was nobody left to oppose her. At this point at a Democratic convention — it is practically a parliamentary requirement — there occurs the ritual singing of the party's unifying anthem, "Happy Days Are Here Again." This time, the candidate had to stand up and lead the singing herself.

All this overwhelming support has left Mrs. Harrison with a problem. Money. It is considered essential in a political campaign, and at least a show of enthusiasm by political chieftains is considered helpful in raising it.

Mrs. Harrison has made a pitch to the Democratic National Committee in Washington, but there's a rub there, too.

"They want to put their money in races that are winnable," she said. "On the other hand, their money could make it winnable. It's Catch-22.

"But I'll get the money," she said. "I'm a born fund-raiser. And I'll get the votes. I decided a year ago that John Warner was vulnerable at the grass roots level. A coalition of Independents, women, others who care about issues, could beat him. I began organizing people in precincts all across the state.

"It wasn't the traditional way to win a nomination in Virginia, either, but it worked, and it will work in the election. I'm not a traditional person."

That much, at least, is undisputed.

Exchange Of Data Revived

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to revive a long dormant scientific exchange program on the environment, the head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said today.

EPA chief William D. Ruckelshaus said the U.S. and Soviet delegations attending an environmental conference in Munich on acid rain met Monday night and agreed to revitalize the information exchange.

A 1972 agreement provided for trading information and research on environmental problems, such as acid rain and toxic substances, Ruckelshaus told The Associated Press.

He said there had been four meetings of American and Soviet scientists under the agreement in the 1970s, but the exchange has lain dormant for several years.

Ruckelshaus said he thought the last time there had been a meeting under the agreement was in 1979. He said a date has not yet been set for the next meeting.

The Americans knew the Soviets wanted to revive the arrangement and Ruckelshaus said he got the go-ahead on the project from President Reagan before heading to the Multilateral Conference on the Environment in Munich.

Ruckelshaus said there were four Americans and four Soviets at the Monday night meeting, which lasted several hours. The Soviet delegation is led by Yuri A. Israel, head of Moscow's state committee on the environment.

When approached by an Associated Press reporter, Israel said he did not want to make any comments until Wednesday.

Ruckelshaus said reviving the environmental exchange should benefit the United States.

"The more exchange there is, the more we can build up a sense of good will, and we can learn from each other," he said.

Ruckelshaus described the overall East-West atmosphere at the 31-nation Munich congress as positive.

"Certainly our conversations have been very friendly," he said.

However, representatives of the United States and Soviet Union clashed Monday at the conference, when the Soviets and three of their allies brought up the subject of the arms race, saying it is damaging to the environment.

Ruckelshaus said the United States was ready to resume nuclear arms talks with the Soviet Union at any time in a proper forum.

The Soviets walked out of arms reduction talks in Geneva, Switzerland, last year after the NATO alliance began deploying new nuclear missiles in Europe.

N.Y. To Require Use Of Seat Belts

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo is expected to decide "fairly quickly" whether to sign a bill approved by the state Senate and give New York the first law in the nation requiring the use of seat belts in automobiles.

Supporters say the bill approved Monday by a 38-22 vote will save at least 400 lives annually in the state. Opponents say it is an intrusion by government into the lives of individuals.

A similar measure passed the Assembly last week by an 82-60 margin. The vote Monday sent the legislation to Cuomo, who is on record as favoring the concept.

Cuomo spokesman Gary Fryer said moments after the Senate vote that he expected the governor would act "fairly quickly."

While no state in the nation currently has a mandatory seat belt use law, such laws are in force in more than 30 countries including Great Britain, Australia, Sweden, Japan and Israel. Also, six of Canada's 10 provinces require seat belt use.

Other states — including Illinois, Michigan and Delaware — are considering similar legislation.

Following the Senate's action, the bill's chief sponsor, Senate Transportation Committee Chairman Norman Levy received a congratulatory telephone call from U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

The mandatory seat belt legislation has the support of the nation's automobile manufacturers, who are hoping that Mrs. Dole will decide next month that air bags won't have to be installed in cars to be sold in states with such laws.

Supporters of New York's seat belt bill claim it could save 400 to 500 lives annually and prevent up to 14,000 serious injuries a year. They have said $530 million would be saved annually in terms of lower medical costs and fewer work hours lost.

Opponents say it smacks of more government intrusion, likening it to "Big Brother" in George Orwell's novel, "Nineteen Eighty-Four."

"Russia is another country that has a mandatory seat belt law," declared an opponent of the legislation, state Sen. Hugh Farley. "I can't think of a single issue which has so offended my district."

Farley's complaints echoed those of many other legislators representing upstate areas where cars are considered a necessity.

Under terms of the New York measure, the driver and all front seat passengers would be required to wear seat belts. Children under age 10, sitting anywhere in the vehicle, would be required to wear a belt or be restrained in special child safety seats. The measure would apply to any motorist entering the state.

The measure would take effect Dec. 1, but for the first month violators would receive verbal warnings.

As of Jan. 1, violators would be subject to fines of up to $50. When it comes to those fines, drivers would be liable for themselves and anyone under age 16 in the vehicle. Those age 16 and over would have to pay any fine themselves.

Poll Shows Public Supports Tests, Merit Pay For Teachers

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans support merit pay for good teachers, but an even greater number believe teachers should pass competency tests to get and keep their jobs, according to an Associated Press-Media General poll.

An overwhelming 95 percent of the 1,243 respondents in the nationwide telephone survey said public school teachers should be required to pass competency tests on the subjects they teach. Three percent disagreed and 2 percent said they were not sure.

Eighty-five percent said teachers should have to pass such exams periodically in order to keep their jobs.

Eighty-three percent said all students should be required to pass standardized test before they can graduate from high school.

A majority of those polled — 61 percent — said that teachers should be required to have an education degree even if they are well trained in their subject.

Thirty states now require teachers to pass competency tests before working in their public schools — double the number in 1982. Twelve other states are considering similar testing requirements for teachers.

Teachers unions generally oppose competency testing as a condition for remaining a teacher because it is not required for most other professions. They also argue that many of the skills required to be a good teacher cannot be tested.

On the question of pay, 72 percent of the respondents in the poll supported a merit pay system for teachers, with bonuses for better teachers; 22 percent said they do not support a merit pay system for teachers, and 6 percent said they were not sure.

Merit pay is supported by President Reagan and a growing number of state and local politicians throughout the nation who see it as a way of encouraging excellence in the classroom. Teachers unions, on the other hand, argue that higher pay for all teachers will attract more able men and women to the profession.

Respondents in the poll included a random, scientific sampling of adults across the country June 7-19. As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-Media General telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,200 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of additional reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

U.S. Threatens Halt To Funds

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Reagan administration says it will halt millions of dollars in aid to the U.N. Fund for Population Activities unless the agency pledges that the money will not subsidize or promote abortion.

The warning was delivered by Undersecretary of State Gregory J. Newell in a speech Monday at a meeting of the U.N. organization.

Jordan Gets Delay On Amendment

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, flexed his political muscles Monday as the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor at least temporarily delayed a move to repeal gubernatorial succession.

The delay could prove fatal as lawmakers rush to adjourn this week.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth

Royall, D-Durham, wants voters in November to decide whether the governor and lieutenant governor should serve one four-year term, one six-year term or two four-year terms.

Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green are the first men to take advantage of the constitutional amendment approved in 1977 allowing succession. Hunt has strongly opposed any efforts to repeal the amendment.

Jordan said he told Royall and Green before the Senate convened Monday that having the constitutional amendment on the ballot in November would not help Democratic candidates. He acknowledged that Hunt spokesmen asked him to oppose the amendment but said he already had made that decision.

"My position is related more to timing than how I feel about the issue," Jordan said. "Democrats have enough to do fighting Republicans this fall than to be fighting each other."

Royall asked the Senate to suspend the rules Monday night to immediately consider a resolution paving the way for introduction of the constitutional amendment.

IN THE STATE

State May Ax 41 Towns

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina may soon have 41 fewer municipalities, but state officials say there's no need to panic because the official removal comes years after some of the towns died out.

In towns like Old Sneedsborough, Cashiers and Scuffleton, government disappeared when the economic or cultural reasons for founding them vanished. State officials studying incorporated towns without active governments have asked the Legislature to revoke or reactivate the charters.

"Occasionally someone gets all up in arms because of the historic interest in the charter," said Ellis Hankins, assistant general counsel to the N.C. League of Municipalities. "But the charter will still be there for any historian who wants it."

Old Sneedsborough in Anson County was laid out in 1795 to be a principal port on the Pee Dee River. But the boom in river traffic didn't develop as planned and the town declined. The post office closed in 1883 and the town was eventually abandoned.

Cashiers in Jackson County was originally named Cashier's Valley when a post office was established in 1839. In 1881, the name was shortened. The North Carolina Gazetteer says the town may have been named for a horse named Cash that grazed there.

Scuffleton in Greene County was settled prior to 1756, according to the North Carolina Gazetteer, and was supposedly named from a disagreement among members of the local Free Will Baptist Church.

Sarecta in Duplin County was incorporated in 1787 — the oldest town on the list — and was named for the Soracte Mountain near Rome, on which a temple to Apollo stood in ancient times.

Other towns being considered for the cut now include Contentnea and Maury, both in Greene County; Atlantic, in Carteret; Deep Run and Graingers, both in Lenoir; and Coakley, Lawrence, Mildred, Old Sparta, and St. Lewis, all in Edgecombe County.

The towns now being considered survived a cut in 1979 when the General Assembly repealed the charters of 95 towns.

Rose Says He And Helms OK'd Labeling Bill Delay

By The Associated Press

Political jockeying and an attempt to pressure cigarette makers to buy more U.S. tobacco led to another postponement of a U.S. House vote on legislation to toughen the health warning labels on cigarettes.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Monday that he and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., agreed to the delay.

"Sen. Helms and I agreed that we shouldn't move the bill until we see what the (tobacco) companies are prepared to do about the 1984 tobacco crop," Rose said. "We have not wanted to move the bill until we were clear what the Senate was going to do."

Rose said Rep. John Dingle, D-Mich., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, where the bill has already won approval, also met with Helms.

"Congressman Dingle has agreed to wait until late July or possibly even Labor Day to bring the bill up," Rose said.

Tobacco companies had agreed to support the House proposal under the threat of even tougher labeling legislation next year. It would require four separate warnings to be rotated on cigarette packs and advertising.

Rose said he plans to meet with officials of several tobacco companies to encourage them to buy more of this year's crop and cut back on the amount of imported tobacco they use.

American tobacco not bought by the companies goes into the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp., with farmers currently paying 7 cents on each pound of tobacco they sell to support the co-op.

Stabilization now has a huge stockpile of leaf from the last two seasons. Rose and others have said they are concerned another year with large amounts of leaf going under loan to Stabilization could weaken the organization and end up costing farmers more in fees.

"I have a meeting scheduled with RJR (R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.) the first week in July and another with Phillip Morris the second week in July to talk about the 1984 crop and explain to them if the program goes down or is seriously weakened, so will my ability to help them in Congress with issues like smoking and health, and taxes," Rose said.

Helms Defends Rightist

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, angered by news accounts suggesting that Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson had plotted to kill the U.S. ambassador in El Salvador, says the scheme was initiated by forces from an unidentified third country.

Helms said d'Aubuisson is "not a suspect" in the purported plot on the life of U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering and that he sought d'Aubuisson's aid in protecting the envoy's life.

With d'Aubuisson due here Wednesday, Helms seemed eager on Monday to defend his ally against the recent spate of reports depicting d'Aubuisson as a would-be killer of a leading American diplomat.

Helms, meeting with reporters after a picture-taking session with President Reagan at the White House, said, "I saw two classified cables (about the plot). I can tell you what was not in them; d'Aubuisson's name was not mentioned, (nor) his party."

Helms' account contradicted that of other administration officials who have said privately that they have information linking d'Aubuisson to the plot.

Asked whether the differing accounts could be reconciled, one senior official said Monday night,

Inventory Tax Bill Goes Back To House Committee

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposed two-year income tax deduction for businesses that pay inventory taxes is in trouble, the plan's chief advocate in the state House said after a crucial vote was delayed.

The House voted 75-25 Monday to return the bill to the Finance Committee after Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, submitted an amendment to phase out the tax over five years.

Although the Finance Committee was scheduled to meet today, the bill's sponsor, Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said time was running out as legislative leaders are predicting the summer session will conclude Friday. The bill has yet to reach the Senate.

"It's quite obvious that this ... will jeopardize its chances," said a disappointed Lilley.

Under the bill, manufacturers, retailers and others who pay the inventory tax — a property tax on inventory — could claim a 15 percent deduction on state income taxes in fiscal 1985-86 and a 17 percent deduction in fiscal 1986-87.

Lilley and other supporters hope the experiment would boost industrial recruitment and encourage a future Legislature to repeal the inventory tax.

The Watkins amendment, in effect, would rewrite the bill. It would phase out the tax between fiscal years 1988-89 and 1992-93, resulting in a loss of some $454 million by local governments. The phaseout would apply only to manufacturers.

Reynolds To Help Fund Museum

KENLY, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has pledged a $50,000 challenge grant to the Tobacco Museum of North Carolina to help fund construction of a permanent home for the museum here.

The grant was made during Kenly's first "Pride in Tobacco" festival, held over the weekend by the museum committee to raise funds and to celebrate the area's tobacco heritage.

The challenge grant from Reynolds gives $1 for every $2 raised by the museum. An additional $25,000 was raised from festival activities. The committee will continue trying to raise $150,000 total.

The museum is temporarily located in a borrowed restaurant building on U.S. 301 at Interstate 95.

SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Four youths jailed in Myrtle Beach, S.C., were charged Sunday with the Saturday night armed robbery of a Brunswick County man.

Freeman Gause of Shallotte was robbed at gunpoint Saturday night and "hogtied" in the front room of his home on U.S. 17 in the Thomasboro community south of Shallotte, said Det. Lindsay Walton of the Brunswick County Sheriff's Department.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened lower today after a mixed performance in the previous session. Retail, airline, financial and oil-service issues led the early losers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off a fraction on Monday, fell another 5.30 to 1,125.22 after 30 minutes of trading today.

Declines jumped out to nearly a 2-1 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers said the market's mixed showing Monday reflected the crosscurrents of good and bad news that preceded the opening bell.

During the weekend, congressional tax writers reduced the capital-gains holding period for securities to six months from one year, which some analysts said was bullish for stocks.

Before trading began, however, major banks began raising their prime lending rates to 13 percent from 12½ percent. It was the fourth increase in the base lending charge this year, and it has risen to its highest level since October 1982.

On the NYSE today, K mart topped the active list and fell ¾ to 31. International Business Machines lost ½ to 105, and Black & Decker fell ¼ to 23.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 0.55 to 1,130.52.

Losers held a slim lead over gainers on the NYSE, whose composite index fell 0.25 to 88.81.

Big Bond volume slowed to 72.85 million shares from 98.40 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.21 to 201.80.

State Unemployment Rate Lowest In Over Four Years

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate fell to its lowest level in more than four years in May, the Employment Security Commission reported today.

The state's total unadjusted rate for May was 5.8 percent, the ESC said. The May rate has not been matched since April 1980. Compared to April 1984, the total unadjusted rate is down .5 of a percentage point. The national unadjusted rate was 7.2 percent.

An estimated 175,400 workers were unemployed in May, down 11,500 from April and down 104,900 (37.4 percent) from the May 1983 number of unemployed, according to the ESC.

North Carolina's labor force reached an all-time high of more than 3 million in May, with total employment also reaching an all-time high of 2,841,000, up 41,600 jobs over April 1984, the ESC reported.

In the nonmanufacturing sector, employment rose 8,900 over April. The most significant gains were made in trade, where jobs increased by 6,100 and in construction, where the increase was 2,300.

Manufacturing employment declined by 100 jobs over the previous month. But it increased by 31,400 jobs compared to May 1983. Durable good added 1,200 workers since April, offset by a decrease of 1,300 workers in nondurable goods. Compared to May 1983, durable goods employment is up 23,400 and nondurable goods employment is up by 8,000 jobs.

Manufacturing production workers averaged 40.1 hours weekly in May, a slight decrease from April's 40.3 hours. Average weekly hours were up slightly compared to May 1983, when they were 40.

Average hourly earnings of $6.97 remained unchanged compared to April revised figures. May 1984 earnings were up 34 cents from May 1983.

Court Rejects Restrictions On Charity Fund-Raisers

WASHINGTON (AP) — States may not impose spending limits on charitable fund raising even when exceptions to the limits are made to keep the fund-raisers operating, the Supreme Court said today.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that a Maryland law generally barring charities from spending more than one-fourth their income on fund raising is an unconstitutional restraint of free speech.

"Significant fund-raising activity protected by the First Amendment is barred by the percentage limitation," Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote for the court.

He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Byron R. White, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor dissented.

Writing for the dissenters, Rehnquist called the decision "not merely strong medicine but bad medicine."

The Maryland law, similar to those in many states, was challenged by the Joseph H. Munson Co., which runs fund-raising events in the state for various chapters of the Fraternal Order of Police.

An FOP contract with the Munson company was canceled when the police union feared risking prosecution for exceeding the state spending limit. Munson's charge for the fund raising would have been more than 25 percent of the revenues.

The Maryland Court of Appeals, ruling on Munson's challenge, struck down the law. The nation's highest court upheld that ruling today.

The law was designed to prevent fraud by charities, but Blackmun relied heavily on a 1980 Supreme Court decision to rule that the Maryland law was unconstitutional "overbroad."

In the 1980 decision, the court ruled that charities cannot be barred from door-to-door fund raising just because they spend more than a specified percentage of the money for expenses and other non-charitable purposes.

The court in that decision struck down a village ordinance in Schaumburg, Ill., that outlawed door-to-door soliciting unless at least 75 percent of the proceeds was used for charity rather than expenses, staff salaries and administrative costs.

The Maryland law, however, authorized the secretary of state to waive the 25 percent limit for charities that would be effectively barred from raising contributions by it.

"The possibility of a waiver may decrease the number of impermissible applications of the statute," Blackmun said, "but it does nothing to remedy the statute's fundamental defect."

He said the Maryland law "in all its applications operates on a fundamentally mistaken premise that high solicitation costs are an accurate measure of fraud."

Rehnquist, in dissent, said the law really was aimed at regulating professional fund raisers and not charitable organizations.

Benjamin Johnson, who knew Green when he was younger, said, "With the proper leadership ... he could have been much like his father, a well-respected man."

A seventh-grade teacher said Green was an average student and that he did not have any discipline problems. Deputies with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department said that Green has been a "good inmate."

The jury of seven women and five men must decide whether Green will get the death penalty or life imprisonment for the first degree murders.

Hill Boosts Pitt Past Edenton

By JIMMY DuPREE

"It's only been three weeks and I was supposed to be out four; you know how it goes."

The four weeks was supposed to give the bone fracture in his right foot time to mend, but Paul Hill's return to a starting role yielded a pair of doubles at the plate and a seven-inning, four-hit effort on the mound as Pitt County pounded Edenton 8-2 Monday in American Legion baseball.

Toby Fischer went 2-3 at the plate with four stolen bases, while Jackie Conway went 2-4 for Pitt County.

Pitt County improved its record to 12-3 in the league race and will play Rocky Mount at SouthWest Edgecombe tonight. Lefthander Mike Kinley is scheduled to start for Pitt County, which returns home Wednesday against league-leading Wayne County.

"That's the first time Paul's started for us, and he gave us a great effort," Pitt Coach Bruce

Rhodes said. "I've got to have him in the playoffs."

After walking the leadoff batter in the first, Hill recorded two out before giving up another base on balls. Edenton had two more runners in scoring position with one out in the second, but Pitt County closed the door with a pair of tappers to the mound.

Pitt County took the lead with a run in the first, as Conway opened with a single, moved to second on a walk to Fischer, stole third and scored on a sacrifice fly by Doug Coley.

Chuck Rousseau ripped a leadoff single in the third, Brian Bunch walked and Rich Thatch reached first on an error to fill the bases for Edenton. A fielder's choice by Todd Hunter drove in Rousseau, but Hill struck out Paul Whidbee to end the inning.

Hill slapped the ball off the fence in center field to lead off the bottom of the frame and hobbled into second for a double. Hill went to third on a single to left and later scored on another sacrifice fly by Coley for a 2-1 Pitt County edge.

In the fifth, Rousseau ripped a leadoff double and later scored on an infield out by Thatch to tie the score 2-2.

Pitt County scored three runs after two outs in the sixth to take control of the game. Traye Fuqua singled to left, but a sacrifice by Steve Mills and a grounder to the mound by Moye gave Pitt two outs. Keel's RBI double drove in Fuqua, and Hill followed with his second double for another run. Conway reached first on an error, and a single by Fischer drove in Hill for a 5-2 Pitt County lead.

Two errors in the seventh allowed Pitt County to increase the lead to 7-2 in the seventh. Michel singled, stole second and went to third when the catcher's throw went into center field. Michel scored when Mills reached first on an error, and a double by Moye drove in Michel.

Fischer doubled after one out in the eighth, and Eric Woodworth's pinch-hit single plated the final Pitt County run.

Doug White went the distance on the mound for Edenton, allowing 11 hits but just three walks.

"We got swing the bats tonight," Rhodes said. "(White) kept us off stride most of the time. (Edenton) battled back; they've had a lot of trouble hitting the ball, and injuries have hurt them a lot."

Bottled Up

Memphis Showboats running back Alan Reid (34) is bottled up for a one-yard loss by Houston Gamblers' tackle Tony Fitzpatrick (62) despite the collar by blocker Mickey

Gamblers Stun Showboats Early With 37-3 Finale

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Gamblers learned that they can't win by tossing their United States Football League division title on the field.

The Gamblers, remembering a week ago when they narrowly beat the underdog San Antonio Gunslingers, stunned Memphis with a 17-point first quarter Monday night and rolled to a regular-season ending 37-3 victory.

"We didn't have a good game last week so we wanted to look good tonight and get ready for the playoffs," said running back Todd Fowler, who scored twice in the rout.

The victory sends the Gamblers into Sunday's first round of the USFL playoffs with a seven-game winning streak, a 13-5 record and plenty of momentum.

The Gamblers will host the Arizona Wranglers in the Astrodome Sunday in a first round matchup.

"We're excited," Gamblers Coach Jack Pardee said. "In six days we'll have a real battle in the Astrodome against the Arizona Wranglers. We're not in awe of them but we have respect for them."

"We have a week to work and I'll be surprised if we're not tuned up and ready. They've played the best football in the USFL for the past five weeks."

Fowler plunged one yard, Kelly tossed a 21-yard touchdown pass to Scott McGhee and Toni Fritsch kicked the first of three field goals for a 17-0 first quarter lead from which the Showboats never recovered.

Record-breaking quarterback Jim Kelly retired to the sidelines for much of the second half.

"We wanted to keep the momentum," Kelly said. "We need all the help we can going into the playoffs."

Fowler dove two yards in the second quarter for a 24-0 halftime lead, rookie Gerald McNeil returned a punt 43 yards for a third quarter touchdown and Fritsch added 37 and 29-yard field goals in the fourth quarter.

The Showboats, finishing their season with a 7-11 record, averted a shutout with six seconds to play of Alan Duncan's 18-yard field goal.

"Their defense has improved," said Memphis quarterback Mike Kelley. "They're not giving up as many points and it looks like they've had some change in their personnel."

Showboat Coach Pepper Rodgers said last week's loss lingered.

"We were very tired tonight," Rodgers said. "We played hard last week in our game against Birmingham and we just didn't have much left tonight."

Boyette Is Academic AA

Stacey Boyette, a sophomore pitcher from Hopewell, Va., has been named to the Division I All-America Academic softball team for East Carolina University.

Boyette is the first-ever academic All-American selection for the Pirates, either male or female.

Recruited as a freshman with a mind toward the change-over to fast pitch softball this past season, Boyette put together a 12-2 record in leading the Pirates on the mound. A four-year letter winner at Hopewell High School, she led her team to the district championships. She was 20-1 as a senior with 168 strikeouts and a 0.82 earned run average.

As a freshman, she was selected as the Outstanding Freshman Chemistry Student at East Carolina, and that helped her to reach the all-American plateau this spring as she carries a 4.0 average.

Boyette is a major in chemistry.

It is estimated that Olympic sprinters, running at top speed, travel faster than 27 miles per hour.

Hernandez' Blast Boosts Mets

By The Associated Press
An impatient Keith Hernandez couldn't find a pitch to his liking, so after fouling off eight offerings from Jim Kern he simply lashed the ball the other way.

It carried farther than anyone would imagine, considering Hernandez is not known as an opposite-field power hitter, and came to rest beyond the left-field wall for a three-run, fourth-inning homer that propelled the New York Mets into an 8-1 lead Monday night. They parlayed that into a 10-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies to move into a one-game lead in the National League East race. "It wasn't the pitch I wanted," Hernandez explained, noting that Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium is an inviting hitter's park. In most other parks it would have been a sacrifice fly, he figured. "I'm hitting consistently now like I did when I had my good years in 1979, 1980 and 1981," said Hernandez, who also doubled and scored three runs. "Also, it helps when the No. 1 (Wally Backman) and No. 2 (Mookie Wilson) men are getting on base."

Hernandez, who shared the NL Most Valuable Player Award with Willie Stargell in 1979, finished the night hitting .307 with 35 runs batted in. He has 13 RBI in his last 14 games and is 11 for 22 in his last six games. "He's simply been outstanding," said Mets' Manager Davey Johnson. "He's just a quality hitter. When he's swinging good nobody hits better."

a three-run shot. Nettles' homer, a two-run blast in the seventh, was his 11th. Kennedy hit his seventh lead-off of the fourth.

Pirates 3, Cubs 0

Ailing Bill Madlock slugged a pair of solo home runs and Jose DeLeon, 5-4, hurled a four-hit shutout while fanning nine Chicago batters. Madlock, facing elbow surgery at the end of the season, connected twice off Chuck Rainey, 5-7.

"I never try for home runs in this ballpark, and that's why I'm successful in Wrigley Field," said Madlock, a four-time batting champion who entered the game hitting .251 with just one home run.

Astros 8-4, Braves 5-6

Catcher Mark Bailey cracked two home runs and drove in the game-winning run with a grounder as Houston extended Atlanta's losing streak to five in the first game.

Mike LaCoss, 2-0, pitched five innings to win the opener. Frank DiPino halted an eighth-inning rally by the Braves to collect his eighth save. Len Barker, 6-7, took the loss.

Rick Mahler, 6-2, scattered four hits over 7 1-3 innings and walked just one batter in pitching the Braves to victory in the nightcap with Donnie Moore collecting his fifth save.

Bruce Benedict keyed the decisive five-run second inning with a two-run double. Dale Murphy hit his 17th homer for Atlanta, while Terry Puhl belted his first for Houston. Mike Madden, 2-3, was the loser.

Cardinals 5, Expos 4

Willie McGee raced all the way home from first on a bases-loaded single by Darrell Porter to cap a five-run, third-inning rally by St. Louis.

Porter's blow greeted Montreal reliever Dan Schatzeder after the Cardinals battered Montreal starter Steve Rogers, 3-6. The comeback enabled Cardinal right-hander Joaquin Andujar, 12-6, to become the National League's first 12-game winner. Bruce Sutter earned his 17th save with two innings of shutout relief.

Reds 2, Giants 1

Wayne Krenchicki's one-out homer in the top of the ninth inning spoiled an outstanding performance by San Francisco's Bill Laskey, 4-7, who went the distance and extended his walkless streak to 36 2-3 innings.

Laskey had surrendered a first-pitch homer to Cincinnati's Eddie Milner. It was Milner's sixth homer and second in as many days leading off the game.

Reliever Ted Power, 4-4, was the winner, blanking the Giants over the last two innings.

Injury Forces Johnson Out

Former D.H. Conley standout James Johnson aggravated a shoulder injury suffered at the International Wrestling Championships in Concord, Ca. and was forced to withdraw from the tryouts for the 1984 Olympic team held at Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Despite the first degree shoulder separation, Johnson won a bronze medal in the 198-pound division at the International Championships.

"It's a big disappointment for me, but I learned a lot from it," Johnson said. "I had beaten most of the guys who finished ahead of me."

At the Olympic trials, Johnson defeated his first two opponents. But by the third match, "my shoulder was bothering me so bad I couldn't move it."

"I just don't have the full range of motion in it to wrestle," Johnson said.

Johnson is considering job offers in sports public relations, as well as a new professional wrestling league.

"I've had coaching offers, too," Johnson said. "My shoulder and my health is important. Right now, I just want to take some time away from wrestling. I'm not sure if I want to compete in wrestling. But want to thank everyone in the area who supported me, not just from Greenville but all of North Carolina."

HOMETOWN FAN
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Thomas, the long-time star of television, stage and movies, roots for his hometown wherever that happens to be. He is currently a fan of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

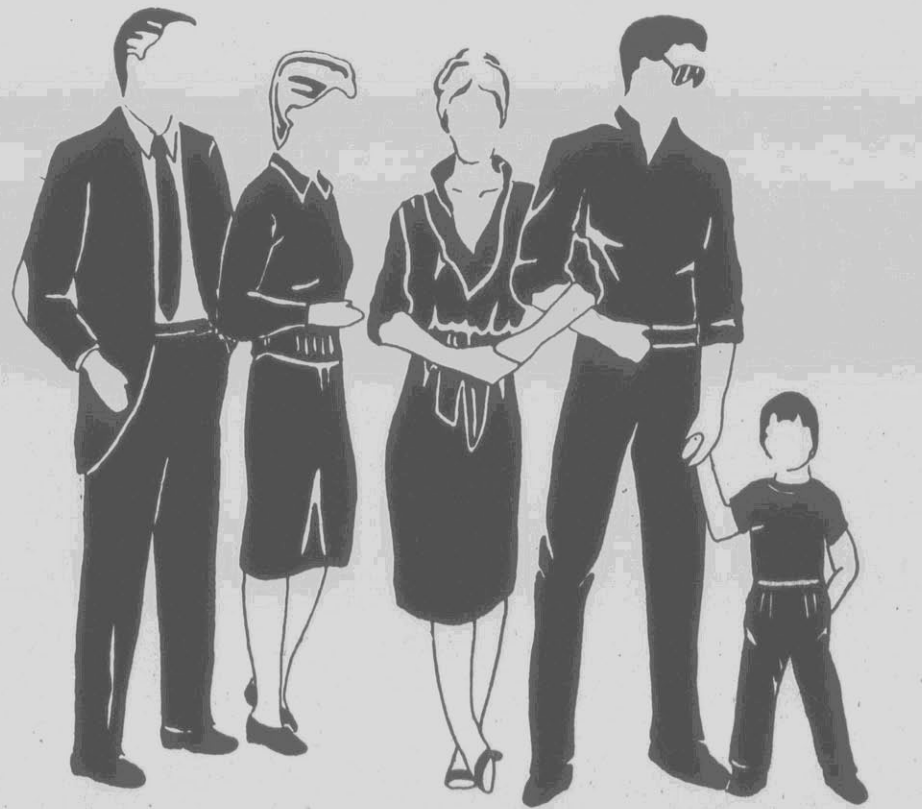

"I've had 'Baseball Fever' for many years," Thomas said. "I played sandlot ball in Toledo, Ohio, and even remember the Toledo Mudhens when Casey Stengel was manager. When we moved to Detroit, I became an avid rooter for the Tigers. Then, it was on to Chicago where I fell in love with the Cubs. When I arrived in Hollywood, I became a supporter of the Dodgers. As the years have gone along my baseball fever has not declined."

Gubicza, Royals Embarrass A's

By The Associated Press

The last time rookie Mark Gubicza faced Oakland, he was humiliated. This time, Gubicza's Kansas City teammates did the embarrassing.

The Royals handed the A's their worst loss since moving to Oakland from Kansas City in 1968 with a 16-0 pounding. The Royals had 17 hits to back Gubicza's three-hit gem, giving the youngster some rare offensive support — his teammates had scored a total of six runs in his seven losses.

But Monday night, Gubicza, 4-7, was up 8-0 after one inning.

"In the dugout, they kept asking me if I had enough runs now," he said, recalling that in his last start at Oakland he had faced a 4-0 deficit before recording an out en route to an 8-1 loss. "The whole week I was geared up for this game. I was terrible that last start against Oakland. They pretty much embarrassed me. I wanted to show them I was a better pitcher. An eight-run lead in the first inning takes a lot out of a team."

The 8-0 margin was built around a three-run homer by George Brett and Don Slaught's two-run single against Oakland starter Bill Krueger, 5-3, who did not record an out. Reliever Gorman Heimueller gave up the Royals' second eight runs — including a three-run home run by Steve Balboni.

Things got so out of hand that Heimueller was lifted with two out in the seventh for right fielder Garry Hancock. Hancock, who last pitched in an amateur league in Florida, retired all four batters he faced on a grounder and three fly balls.

"I used two pitches," he said, "my fastball and my deadfish fastball." The deadfish fastball, he explained, changes speeds.

"The only problem with that," teased teammate Bill Almon, "is your dead fish fastball is as fast as your regular fastball."

"Hancock has thrown batting practice for us and has done a good job of getting the ball over the plate," said A's Manager Jackie Moore. "It was sit-back-and-bite-the-bullet-time."

Elsewhere, Dave Winfield upped his major-league leading batting average to .368 with a 5-for-5 night as the Yankees downed Detroit 7-3; Boston beat Baltimore 7-4; Texas took California 5-4 in 11 innings; Milwaukee swept a doubleheader from Toronto 2-1 and 9-4, and Seattle upended Chicago 6-1.

Yankees 7, Tigers 3

Winfield, who hit .383 against Detroit last season, is 13-for-19 (.684) this season against the Tigers. Winfield's two-run double tied the score 3-3 in the bottom of the seventh, and he raced home from second with the go-ahead run when Detroit failed to complete an inning-ending double play. An inning later, he came through with a bases-loaded, two-run single to complete his third five-hit night of the year.

"I'm knocking the tar out of the ball," Winfield said. "It was just a matter of hitting everything — inside, outside, breaking balls, fastballs, a screwball."

"Winfield was super tonight," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "He put on quite a show. Whatever it is, we don't pitch him right."

Red Sox 7, Orioles 4

Tony Armas extended his hitting streak to eight games with a third-inning triple, then added a two-run double in the sixth following a 53-minute rain delay in Baltimore. Armas, who has a career average of just .205 against Baltimore — 52 hits in 254 at bats — has found the range for 17 home runs and 40 runs batted in against the Orioles in 47 games.

Armas started the game tied for the American League home run lead with 19 and has driven in 20 runs in his last 17 games for a total of 53. He is hitting so well that not even the inclement weather bothered him.

"When you're swinging the bat pretty good," Armas said, "I don't think rain can stop you."

Mark Clear picked up his first save of the season and the only Red Sox save by anyone other than Bob Stanley.

Ken Singleton singled for his 2,000th major league hit in the seventh inning.

Rangers 5, Angels 4

Pete O'Brien singled in Gary Ward in the 11th inning to give host Texas the victory. Ward opened the inning with a single to right. After Buddy Bell — who had singled, tripled and homered in his previous at-bats — grounded out, sending Ward to second, Larry Parrish singled and O'Brien lined Doug Corbett's first pitch to right to win the game.

Brewers 2-9, Blue Jays 1-4

Milwaukee upped its record to 4-0 against Toronto, using timely pitching and explosive hitting for the sweep of the visiting Blue Jays.

Rookie right-hander Jaime Cocanower went 8 1/3 innings with a five-hitter before needing last-out relief from Rollie Fingers, who picked up his 13th save in the opener. Milwaukee got its winning run in the sixth on Ted Simmons' run-scoring single.

In the nightcap, Mark Brouhard ignited a four-run second inning with a two-run single and the Brewers scored nine times on nine hits.

Mariners 6, White Sox 1

At Chicago, Jim Beattie hurled his sixth complete game this season, scattering eight hits despite not having his best stuff. He lost his shutout when Scott Fletcher singled home Ron Kittle in the bottom of the ninth.

"It must have been my deceptive motion because my pitches weren't that good," said Beattie. "I threw 90 percent fastballs but I moved it around. I had good defense the whole game. I need those guys behind me."

Jarryd Falls In First Round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — In sharp contrast with last year's tournament, when a host of seeds went tumbling out on opening day, this year's Wimbledon tennis championships began much kinder to the top players.

Just one seed was tripped up in

Souchak Inducted Into Hall Of Fame

PINEHURST (AP) — A former Duke football player who won 16 PGA Tour events was one of three golfers inducted into the Carolinas Golf Hall of Fame Monday night.

Mike Souchak, a former Durham resident who now lives in Largo, Fla., was inducted along with Marge Burns and Bill Harvey, both of Greensboro.

Souchak competed on the Professional Golfers' Association tour out of Durham for 20 years. One of his victories came in the 1955 Texas Open, where he shot a PGA record 27-under-par 257.

Monday's first-round matches — No. 10 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, felled by Scott Davis of Santa Monica, Calif.

Form appeared in little danger today. The women's competition — celebrating its centenary — was to take Center Court with Martina Navratilova opening defense of her title against Peanut Louie, the 23-year-old right-hander from San Francisco.

The British bookies have made Navratilova, the French Open and Grand Slam champion, the most prohibitive favorite since World War II to regain her crown — and begin her quest for yet another Grand Slam collection of Wimbledon, the U.S., Australian and French titles.

Perhaps the only extraordinary development took place off court, when top seed and defending champ John McEnroe called an official of the All-England Lawn Tennis club "very nice" and then declared to reporters that from now on, he was going to "let my racket do the talking."

The kind words were for Buzzer

Haddingham, chairman of the All-England club, who had just written a letter to the fiery New Yorker's father promising no "witch hunt" at Wimbledon over John's notorious tantrums at line calls.

McEnroe certainly gave no cause for any Monday as he bested Paul McNamee 6-4, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1.

But afterward, McEnroe refused to appear at the obligatory postmatch news conference until the television cameras were switched off. He explained that at a previous news conference, a British TV reporter had purposely tried to stir him up and then aired his responses out of context. The club said it "expects to resolve the matter in the near future."

As to his match with McNamee, McEnroe said there were "a few bad line calls, but it was not in my best interest to say anything at the present time."

But there was a word of warning: "I have no idea if I'll continue to hold back."

As McEnroe was dismissing McNamee on Center Court, next

TV Guide Picks 'Lace' As Season's Worst Offering

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — ABC-TV's melodramatic movie "Lace," the story of an abandoned daughter-turned-porn queen in search of her natural mother, has been cited by TV Guide as "Trash Wallow of the Year."

On the other end of the scale, the magazine's annual review of the past television season cited NBC's "Hill Street Blues," PBS's "Vietnam: A Television History" and CBS's "Dallas" as the best shows of their type.

"The Best and Worst We Saw," assembled by a team of TV Guide editors, was announced Monday and appears in the June 30 issue of the magazine.

"Dallas" was picked as the best prime-time soap opera, while "Hill Street" was the best overall series and "Vietnam" was cited as the best documentary series.

The editors also noted some big bombs, calling "AfterMash" on CBS the biggest disappointment, "Bay City Blues" on NBC the Strikeout of the Year and "Master of the Game" (CBS) and "The Last Days of Pompeii" (ABC) as the worst miniseries.

ABC's "The Day After," about a nuclear attack on a Kansas community, was honored for causing the Biggest Chain Reaction of Controversy Before a Telecast.

Television's Good Deed of the Year was Morley Safer's "60 Minutes" (CBS) piece on Lenell Geter, a black engineer jailed for a crime he did not commit. He was subsequently freed.

Sir Lawrence Olivier was honored as the best actor in a special for his performances in "King Lear" and "A Voyage Around My Father," both on the Mobil Showcase Network.

Ann-Margret was picked as best actress in a television movie for her role in ABC's "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Joan Collins was rated the Most Over-Exposed Actress for her myriad television, book and magazine appearances.

Home Box Office's "Not Necessarily the News" was picked by the editors as the Most Consistently Funny Series (Not Necessarily on Cable).

'Ghostbusters' Sets Pace

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A trio of new films opened to moderate success at the box office over the weekend, but Columbia's "Ghostbusters" stayed on top with $13.3 million in receipts.

Of the newcomers, Fox's "Rhinestone" did the best. The country western comedy starring Dolly Parton and Sylvester Stallone grossed $5.4 million over the first weekend of summer, good only for fourth place.

"The Karate Kid," a Columbia release about a boy who changes his life by learning martial arts, totaled $5 million for fifth place, while the Paramount comedy "Top Secret!" eased into seventh with a gross of $4.4 million.

Warner Bros.' "Gremlins" stayed firmly in second with $11.4 million and Paramount's "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" remained third with $7.7 million.

Only "Star Trek III" suffered from new releases, dropping from fourth to sixth place with grosses of $4.8 million.

Jackson Interest To Pay Refunds

NEW YORK (AP) — Because not everyone who mails money for a ticket to the Jacksons Victory Tour will get one, interest on the $1.5 billion promoters expect to receive will be used to send ticket refunds, according to a Jackson spokesman.

Tickets to the tour of Michael Jackson and his brothers are $30 each and must be purchased in lots of four by U.S. Postal Service money order. They will be allocated based on a random selection process.

Interest on the $1.5 billion worth of money orders that promoters expect 12 million fans to buy will be cover handling and postage costs to mail refunds, Howard Bloom, of The Howard Bloom Organization, the tour's publicist, said Monday.

Only one in 10 applicants will get a ticket; the others will get their money back.

"The interest on a single order would come to less than a dollar and it costs more than a dollar to process the application," said Bloom.

The tour promoter, Stadium Management Corp., has hired a firm to supervise the collection and return of money orders from ticket applicants, Bloom said.

Counting the interest, the firm, Supershows, would lose a nickel on the processing of each returned application. But it will earn $1.70 from each accepted application, providing their revenue, according to Bloom.

A $2 handling fee is included in the $30 ticket price. For each application accepted, that means $8 in handling charges.

By winning the Trials last month in Memphis, the team of Malcolm Brachman, Bobby Goldman, Bob Hamman, Bobby Wolff, Ron Andersen, all of Dallas, and Paul Soloway of Bothell, Wash., qualified to represent the U.S. in the World Team Olympiad, to be held in Seattle in October.

In the final they defeated Edgar Kaplan, New York, Norman Kay, Philadelphia, Bill Root, Boca Raton, Fla., Richard Pavlicek, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Jeff Meckstroth, Pinkerton, Ohio, and Eric Rodwell, Indianapolis over 128 boards in a match that was close until the final stretch.

When the players held today's hand, Soloway and Goldman, sitting North-South, reached four spades on the auction shown. (East's no trump jump after the takeout double was a limit raise in hearts.) While the only sure losers are two clubs and a diamond, the 4-1 trump break combined with the 5-0 diamond split is more than declarer can handle, so one down would seem to be the normal result.

Declarer won the ace of hearts and immediately ran the queen of diamonds. West ruffed and now it looks as if routine defense will defeat the contract two tricks—the defenders are entitled to two club tricks and a diamond, and declarer will be hard pressed to escape another loser if West exits passively with a trump.

Instead, West chose to underlead his ace of clubs. The idea was that if East held the king-jack of clubs, both cards would be entries and West could score two diamond ruffs. Unfortunately, East elected to play his partner for the ace of trumps rather than the ace of clubs, and he inserted the 10 of clubs. Declarer won the jack and returned the suit. All would still have been well had West risen with the ace and returned a club. But West placed declarer with the king of clubs, so he took his ace and exited with a heart.

Declarer now played masterfully to make his game. He ruffed the heart with the nine of spades, led the seven of trumps to dummy's eight and ruffed the last heart with his ace. A spade to the jack enabled declarer to draw trumps, and the only other trick for the defense was a diamond.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC

ON PROPOSED ISSUANCE OF BONDS AND APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL OF AN INDUSTRIAL AND MANUFACTURING PROJECT IN PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a public hearing will be held by the Pitt County Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Financing Authority (the "Authority") on July 12, 1984, at 1:00 o'clock P.M., local time, at the Pitt County Industrial Development Commission, Conference Room, 119 South Cotanche Street, Greenville, North Carolina.
Reed National Corp. and Rubbeek Realty Corp. (collectively, the "Company") have requested that the Authority finance the construction of a 28,000 square foot addition to the Company's existing plant at Field Street, Greenville, North Carolina, and the acquisition and installation of equipment for use in the manufacture of industrial type gas-fired heaters (the "Facility"). The facility is expected to provide employment for approximately 20 additional residents in Pitt County, North Carolina. On May 18, 1984, the Authority executed a preliminary indenture with the Company. The approximate cost of the entire Facility is anticipated to be $750,000.00.
The Authority proposes to finance the Facility by issuing its industrial development revenue bonds in an aggregate principal amount of $750,000.00. The bonds will be sold in the form of bonds of the State of North Carolina, and the interest on the bonds will be exempt from federal income tax pursuant to Section 103(b)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the "Code").
The Facility will be financed by the Authority under a financing agreement (the "Agreement"). The Agreement will require that the Company make payments equal to the debt service on the bonds and make certain other payments.
The bonds will be a special obligation of the Authority, payable solely from revenues derived from the financing of the Facility. THE BONDS SHALL NOT BE A DEBT OF THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA OR ANY POLITICAL SUBDIVISION THEREOF. IN CLUING WITHOUT LIMITATION, PITT COUNTY, AND NEITHER THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA NOR ANY FEDERAL SUBDIVISION THEREOF, INCLUDING WITHOUT LIMITATION, PITT COUNTY, SHALL BE LIABLE FOR THE PAYMENT OF THE BONDS.
The Authority will at the above stated time and place hear all persons with views in favor of or against the issuance of the bonds, and the proposed Facility, and will accept written comments concerning the Facility and the bonds. The Authority will also accept written comments concerning the Facility and the bonds. The Authority will also accept written comments concerning the Facility and the bonds.
A report of the hearing will be made available to the Commissioners of the Board and the Department. Approval of the issuance of the bonds by the Board, is necessary in order for the Authority to issue the bonds. The Authority will also accept written comments concerning the Facility and the bonds.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Early go to see advisers who have been helpful in the past and gain more good ideas from them.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact clever friends and state your aims; they can help you to attain them. Shop around awhile before purchasing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be efficient at whatever reports you have to make and show that you are precise. State your desires to the one you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to what others have to say today even though you usually monopolize the conversation; learn a good deal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy and use every angle you can so that you become more proficient at your regular work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to plan future recreations that will ease tensions, but get something set up for the evening also.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Although the situation at home is not exactly as you want it to be, you can turn adversity into benefits.

Executions Reported

LONDON (AP) — At least 1,699 people were executed in 39 countries in 1983 and the true figure could be much higher because of secret executions, Amnesty International said today.

The Nobel Prize-winning human rights group said China, Iran and Iraq had the most known executions last year, accounting for 1,399, or 82 percent, of the total.

Mondale, Hart Discuss Compromise

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter F. Mondale and Gary Hart are holding a political summit amid indications that the Democratic Party is moving toward a peaceful nominating convention in San Francisco and a united front in the campaign against President Reagan this fall.

Mondale and Hart met over breakfast today to discuss a compromise struck over possible challenges to Mondale's delegates to the July convention and the Colorado senator's proposals for major changes in rules for choosing the 1988 presidential nominee.

With the agreement brokered by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the two Democratic presidential rivals moved significantly closer to one another Monday, although Hart said he will continue to seek the nomination.

Before their meeting, Mondale said he and Hart agreed that the agenda would not include a discussion of Hart's possible selection as Mondale's vice presidential running mate.

Their meeting was scheduled for the Upper East Side home of wealthy Democrat Arthur Krim.

Mondale stayed at Krim's home while campaigning in the New York primary.

Arriving in New York late Monday, Mondale was asked what he and Hart would say about the sometimes bitter exchanges they had during their televised debate before the New York primary. He grinned and said, "We'll get around to that."

While Hart and Mondale planned their meeting, the third Democratic presidential hopeful, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, was in Havana on his Latin America tour. He was greeted by Cuban President Fidel Castro upon his arrival Monday night, and Castro said the visit "possibly" would lead to improved U.S.-Cuban relations.

Jackson met Monday in El Salvador with Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte and conveyed an offer from Salvadoran guerrilla leaders to discuss a cease-fire.

The Mondale-Hart agreement followed several days of delicate negotiations in which Kennedy, a presidential contender in 1980 when Mondale was vice president, played a personal mediating role from Mondale's home in.
