TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

103rd YEAR NO. 155 GREENVILLE, N.C. THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 28, 1984 24 PAGES PRICE 25 CENTS

RADISSON INN — Completion of the first phase of the six-story Radisson at 207 W. Greenville Blvd., involving 147 guest rooms, is scheduled for late this year. The architecture of the hotel will feature full reflective glass accented by curtain walls. The facility is owned by Leisure Development Inc. of Greenville.

Radisson To Build Hotel Here

Construction has begun on the Radisson Inn, a new six-story hotel complex that will be built in two phases at 207 W. Greenville Blvd. adjoining the Nichols Discount City property.

Groundbreaking ceremonies marking the construction kick-off were held today with area officials, business leaders and representatives of the developing firm taking part.

Leisure Development Inc. of Greenville, headed by Dr. Howard Satterfield and Jim Carter, recently secured a $3.74 million building permit for the facility, which is scheduled for completion late this year.

According to Carter, phase one of the complex will involve 147 rooms while plans call for expansion with 200 additional rooms in the second phase.

Carter said the Radisson will have facilities that will serve 550 people banquet style and 750 people theatre style. The hotel's restaurant and lounge will offer combined seating in excess of 1,000 people, he said.

The spokesman said the Radisson will also have a concierge service featuring continental breakfast and hors d'oeuvres with a concierge on duty from 7-9 a.m. and 5-7 p.m.

Sanjay Inc. is the general contractor.

The Radisson Hotel Corp., based in Minneapolis, was formed in 1962 when businessman Curtis L. Carlson bought the original Radisson Hotel in downtown Minneapolis. The private corporation reported annual sales last year in excess of $2 billion.

As of January, there were 29 hotels in the Radisson franchising network.

Judge Charges Jurors In Green Trial

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Closing arguments took up the entire day in court Wednesday as the sentencing trial of Harvey Lee Green Jr. entered its last days. This morning the jurors were instructed by Judge Thomas S. Watts about the law and their decision of the death penalty or life imprisonment for the murder of two people in a Bethel dry cleaners.

Watts told the jurors that it is "your duty" to recommend the death penalty or life imprisonment, and that the jury's recommendation would be "binding on the court."

The jury was expected to begin its deliberations early this afternoon.

Green, 23, pleaded guilty to the first degree murders of Sheila Marlene Bland, 17, and John Michael Edmondson, 33, in Young's 1-Hour Cleaners in Bethel Dec. 19. The two were beaten to death with a pipe.

The jury of seven women and five men must decide whether Green will receive the maximum penalty of death in each murder, or life imprisonment.

During the closing arguments, the state, represented by District Attorney Thomas Haigwood and his assistant Nancy B. Aycock, argued for the death penalty for both deaths. Green's court-appointed lawyers, Howard Cummings and Jeffrey Miller, argued for life imprisonment for Green.

Cummings told the jury, "This defendant is here for two reasons — first, he committed the crime, and second, he told the police about it.

"You've got to decide whether this case is so bad that Harvey Green deserves to be killed for it. He killed two people ... he broke the law, but is that the solution, to kill him and keep on killing?"

In his closing argument Wednesday morning, Haigwood recounted much of the testimony presented in the sentencing trial, and asked the jury, "What manner of man is this who would rape, murder and steal from his daddy?"

Haigwood quoted a psychiatric report of Green made at Dorothea Dix Hospital as stating Green was "self-centered, immature and impulsive" and with a "low tolerance for frustration." The report said Green had a history of impulsive and anti-social behavior, but that he could distinguish right from wrong.

Haigwood said Green's statement of what happened in Young's Cleaners on Dec. 19 was not supported by the physical evidence and he questioned certain parts of Green's statement.

Haigwood said "This is a man who says in one breath 'I had to rob this place cause I had written checks on my daddy'" but in the next breath says he "purchased a beer, a pack of cigarettes and gambled away the $20" he took from Edmondson.

"Is this what the life of Edmondson and Sheila Bland was worth?" Haigwood asked.

About Green's admission of his guilt, Haigwood said, "I argue to you he didn't have any choice. The evidence is overwhelming."

Nancy Aycock of the district attorney's office, argued, "Harvey Green is real to you because he's sitting there. You've never seen Sheila and you've never seen Mike and you never will. From now on, they're going to be the two bodies found in a cleaners on Dec. 19."

Ms. Aycock went on to contend that the defendant has "utter and absolute lack of remorse for his actions. Look at his demeanor in the courtroom. I ask you to find a shred of remorse for what he did to those people."

Ms. Aycock asked the jury to "Look through and see that man's dark side. We ask you to protect

Jackson Seeking High Level Talks Over Cuban Trip

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, preparing to escort 26 Cuban and 22 American prisoners back to the United States, says he wants to brief President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz on his meeting with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

The White House said it would consider a meeting with Reagan.

Jackson, concluding in triumph a five-day visit to Latin America, said snags might occur only if the State Department balks at granting visas to the 26 Cuban political prisoners.

But a State Department official who spoke on the condition he not be named said today in Washington that the 26 would be admitted.

"Arrangements are being made to process them," said the official when asked if they would be granted visas.

The 22 Americans, who were jailed in Cuba for various criminal offenses and freed by Castro after his meeting with Jackson, needed only their passports to return to the United States.

"Now the ball is in the court of our State Department," Jackson told reporters on a flight to Managua from Havana on Wednesday.

The Democratic presidential hopeful says he wants to meet with Reagan and Shultz on Friday because "there are some rather definite things we must share with them from the meeting with Fidel Castro ...

"We would hope President Reagan would be willing to listen and engage in dialogue about our findings," he said. "Apparently we have been able to move substantially further than the diplomats and the messengers who have come this way."

At the White House today, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said there was no meeting now scheduled between Reagan and Jackson. "We would like for Jesse Jackson to be debriefed at the State Department and that's the first step. If there's a need or desire to meet with the president, then we will consider it," he said.

As for the Americans being released, spokesman Bob Sims said there was "definitely a small number" of the 22 who will face charges in the United States. He said he did not know what the charges were.

And, referring to the Cubans, Speakes said, "We assume something will be worked out between the State Department and private groups for where they will go and what they do when they get here."

Jackson was in Managua overnight for meetings with various government officials. It appeared unlikely that he would talk with junta leader Daniel Ortega during the trip. Jackson spoke to university students when he arrived on Wednesday night.

Jackson looks on the prisoner release and other parts of a 10-point statement he and Castro drew up as a first step in normalizing relations with the island just 90 miles from the United States. The two countries have not had formal ties since 1961.

But the Reagan administration says it is not interested in re-establishing diplomatic relations until Cuba gives a sign that it changes its military practices in other countries. Withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola and Ethiopia would be a good start, administration officials said.

President Reagan did not react publicly to the prisoner release agreement.

A variety of issues have irritated the relationship between the United States and Cuba, with immigration matters among the sorest. Jackson got Castro to say he would talk with the United States immediately, in-

Israelis Exchange Prisoners

KUNEITRA, Syria (AP) — Israel today exchanged more than 300 Syrian military and civilian prisoners for six Israelis who had been held by Syria, the first prisoner transfer between the two countries in 10 years.

Israel released 291 Syrian soldiers captured during Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon. Israeli officials said 20 Syrian civilians imprisoned on security and espionage charges also were freed.

Also exchanged were the bodies of two Israelis and three unidentified war casualties who may be among Israelis missing in action from the Lebanon war. Israel returned the remains of 72 Syrians.

A HOTLINE TRIBUTE

I would like to pay tribute to Bill Dorey, a science teacher at Ayden-Grifton High School. He was convinced that a micro-video system which projects images of micro-organisms on a video screen would help his science students, particularly those having trouble using conventional microscopes. The cost of the system was $8,800 and there was no money in the school budget for its purchase. With the permission of the school administration and the help of the Ayden-Grifton Key Club, the Science Club, private citizens and business, Bill Dorey raised the funds for the system, using his free time to call on businessmen and others. School teachers are lazy? A few, perhaps, but not Bill Dorey and thousands like him. Teachers like him need our continuous support, not our criticism. Mrs. E.H.

Allen-Garris Wedding Vows Are Exchanged

Lou Ellen Garris and Willman Eugene Allen were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the First Wesleyan Church. The Rev. Greg Kennedy performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Wilbur Asa Garris of Ayden and Betty Jean Ruffin of Bethel and Mr. and Mrs. Daune Allen of Ayden.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown which was hand-crocheted by the mother of the bridegroom. The gown featured a square neckline and Princess Anne sleeves with pearl buttons on the cuff. It was trimmed with pearls around the neckline and cuffs. She wore a chapel length veil with lace trim and hand-crocheted lavender and rose garland. Her flowers were also crocheted lavender and white carnations.

Sara Doub was organist and Debbie Leupen and Janis Crane were vocalists.

Barbara Garris of Greenville, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Yvonne Stith of Bethel was maid of honor and the matron of honor was Vickie Harris of Ayden, sister of the bride.

The best man was Nicky Nichols of Bethel, brother of the bride. Ushers were Lennie Harris of Ayden, brother-in-law of the bride, Bud Garris of Bethel, brother of the bride, and Mike Clendenen of Simpson.

Each of the attendants wore a long blue gown and carried hand-crocheted nosegays pf pink, blue and white carnations.

A reception was held at the church and was given by ladies of the church.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride graduated from North Pitt High School and is employed by Anaconda Wire and Cable. The bridegroom attended Ramona High School and served in the U.S. Navy for four years. He works at Vermont American in Greenville.

MRS. ALLEN

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Something is happening to my body clock and I can't seem to be able to do anything about it.

When the kids were small, I'd have given away the house in exchange for an extra hour of sleep. But no, there were lunches to pack, clothes to press, boots to find, breakfast to make, the car to warm up and the dog to put out.

Now that the kids are gone, I wake up at 5:30 in the morning ready to start my day. Big deal. There's nothing to do at 5:30 in the morning except sit there fully dressed listening to the hog and grain markets on radio and watching the driveway lights go off.

How cruel to present me with several hours and nothing to do in them.

It's the same way in the evenings. In my youth I was told when to go to bed and how late I could stay out. Now that I'm in command of my own life, I can stay awake all night if I want to. But what for? I no longer have an active social life.

As long as I'm complaining about inequities, I might as well get it all out of my system. Why is it when I wore a size 8 dress, I couldn't afford them? Now that I can afford them, I no longer fit into them.

Ah, youth. I could have fed it every 15 minutes with ice cream, pizza, chips, dips and chocolates if I had had a bigger allowance to blow. Now I can go to the store and fill a cart with junk food, but I can't afford the calories.

And why, at the age of 15, couldn't I have been secure enough to talk to the opposite sex on their level instead of hiding behind sarcasm and frustration? Now, when I have the ability to talk to men and enjoy a comfortable rapport . . . I'm married.

I can afford a seat in the first row of a concert if I want to. I can let the dog sleep in my bed if I want to. I can go bare-legged in the winter. I can lose my watch and the world won't come to an end. I can talk on the phone and no one will be hanging over me waiting. And all the years I didn't have enough time for term papers, car pools, dental appointments or lunches with my friends or to myself . . . I now have the time.

Why now?

Could it be maturity is the only age that has the wisdom to appreciate time as it was meant to be? At leisure . . . one second at a time?

Could it be that's why I notice rabbits scurrying back to safety, quail prowling the desert, the sun splashing the mountains with light . . . as I listen to the hog and grain markets?

Miss Riggs, Mr. Persinger Speak Vows On June 16

Susan Elizabeth Riggs and Jeffrey Ross Persinger were married June 16 at 3 p.m. in a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Willis Wilson. The outdoor ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Sutton, aunt and uncle of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Riggs of Ayden. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. David L. Persinger of Ayden.

The bride wore a street length white gown in a brocade fabric styled with a full skirt, scoop neck and petal sleeves. She carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers and wore a matching spray in her hair.

A pig picking followed the ceremony and was given by parents of the bride and her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Sutton. Joseph Echel, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, provided music.

The couple will live in Henderson after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride graduated from Pitt Community College and is a radiologic technologist at Maria Parnham Hospital in Henderson. She attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The bridegroom attended PCC and is in managerial training with Bojangle's Restaurant.

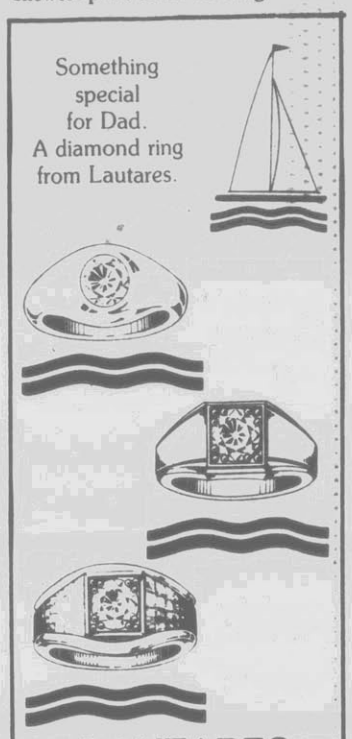

The bride was honored at several showers prior to the wedding.

Dear Abby

Nettled Housewife's Ditty Is Not A Plea For Pity

DEAR ABBY: I came across this write-up I've saved since my kids were little. Women are still being put down because they don't hold a job outside their homes. Give this another run, will you, please?

JUST A HOUSEWIFE IN FORT MYERS, FLA.

DEAR JUST: You bet:

DEAR ABBY: I know you'll never print this because you career women have the idea that we housewives are second-class citizens, but I've kept this poem for a long time and want to share it with you. (I never did find out who wrote it.)

Just a Housewife

Hello, Mrs. Jones, I've just called to say,
I'm sorry I cried when you phoned today.
No, I didn't get angry when your call came at four,
Just as eight Cub Scouts burst through the door;
It's just that I had such a really full day.
I'd baked eight pies for the PTA
And washing and ironing and scrubbing the floor
Were chores I had finished not too long before.
The reason I cried and gave that big yelp
Was not 'cause you phoned just to ask for my help.
The comment that just about drove me berserk
Was, "I'm sure you'll have time because you don't work."
Sign me,
A HAPPY HOMEMAKER

DEAR HAPPY: I think the poem is great. And for the record, before I became "Dear Abby" (age 37) I, too, was a Cub Scout den mother, and I also baked my share of pies for the PTA.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law hates me. She has never liked me from the day I started going with her son. I know I have my faults, but I want people to know where they stand with me, so I just say what's on my mind. If they don't like it, that's just too bad.

For our wedding gift, my mother-in-law gave us two sheets, two pillowcases and a bedspread. I thought that was pretty cheap for a woman who goes to a beauty shop twice a year for a perm, so I called her up and told her so. She got mad and hung up on me.

Was I wrong to tell her? And what do you think about her hanging up on me? I asked my husband, and he said, "Leave me out of it."

SPEAKS MY MIND IN DETROIT

DEAR SPEAKS: Were you wrong to tell her? Yes. What do I think of her hanging up on you? She probably did it to keep from telling you what was on her mind. It's all right to speak one's mind, providing you're not unkind or insulting. You were both.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a photographer who does wonderful photographs of weddings.

A good customer of ours booked him to take pictures of his daughter's wedding. He and his wife invited me to attend the wedding. I accepted, although I know it is a paid job for my husband.

For our wedding gift, would a gift certificate for a larger print of their choice of one of the photographs taken at the wedding be in poor taste? We don't want to come off looking tacky.

FOTOG'S FRAU

DEAR FRAU: I think it's a splendid idea. No gift given in good faith can be considered tacky.

Range Of Options

Farmers all over the land should be buckling their seat belts. A rough road awaits them in Congress.

For starters, the Joint Economic Committee of Congress comes up with a report that the present farm program has grown too costly to support. The report does not like the farm economy record, pointing to 1973 which is regarded by many as agriculture's best year, and also a year in which 39 percent of the nation's farmers suffered losses. Also, there is head-shaking over 1982 when the farm program cost Uncle Sam an estimated $12 billion, triple the previous year.

Chairman Sen. Roger Jepson of Iowa says the farm programs have cost an estimated $50 billion during the past four years and could cost that much more during the next four. "A potential $100 billion in eight years," says Jepson. "Never has so much done so little."

The panel suggests there may be substantial social and economic benefits in a "smaller farm policy," which is more farmer-oriented and less volume- and commodity-based.

The report concludes eliminating support programs could jeopardize some 900,000 family farmers, but that current market manipulation policies (exemplified by the payment-in-kind program program of 1983) are ineffective.

Witnesses offered the committee a broad range of options in 30 hearings conducted over the past three years. We will be hearing more about them in the weeks and months to come. Each will inspire some head-scratching and uncertainties about which way the congress might turn in seeking better answers.

With the kind of cost-effective record cited by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, other congressional committees are going to seize on that record for their own studies and remedial steps.

We said it once, and we'll say it again: buckle those seat belts.

Stop The Quibbling

At a recent press conference, President Reagan made it clear he was prepared to meet with Soviet leaders.

Obviously such a meeting could be helpful in at least starting the process to reaching solutions to problems between the two superpowers and the world in general.

Last week an apparent answer came from the Kremlin. Its spokesman said a U.S. Soviet summit will not be held until the United States changes its policies.

But then maybe Lionid Zamyatin left the door cracked a little, too.

He was quoted as saying, "We are serious about summits and we consider those kind of meetings very important."

Important they are — important enough to proceed with them without quibbling over obvious differences in policies.

Special Treatment Gets Out Of Hand

RALEIGH — The best way to win yourself a special interest tax break or hand-out in Raleigh these days is to make the argument that it will help the state's economic recruitment. "Give me more money," the argument goes, "and General Motors will bring 200,000 jobs to the state."

When a group of retired federal employees came to Raleigh this month looking to lower their own taxes — and no one else's — they used that kind of argument. If the state would just give them a big tax deducation, then retired federal employees from around the country would pack their bags and move to North Carolina. They'd bring with them all their wealth, pay big income taxes here and prosperity would reign.

"We strongly believe that enactment of this law will encourage future retirees to come here," Charles Alexander of Gaston County, president of a federal retirees group, said.

The retirees want a $5,000 tax exemption on their pensions from the federal government. That would be an increase from the current $3,000 exemption. That means they would pay no state tax on the first $5,000 in federal pensions which they receive every year. It would help 35,000 North Carolina taxpayers and cost the state treasury an extra $3.9 million a year.

Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, said the bill was only fair since there are six groups of local, state and federal government employees who already receive a complete exemption on their pensions. Besides, Jenkins added, the $3,000 exemption was set in 1969 and if inflation is considered the state should really raise the exemption this year thousands of dollars more.

But Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, horned in on the fairness debate. The bill doesn't include retired military personnel and that's not fair. He wanted an amendment that would give them the same $5,000 tax exemption. So now the bill would cost the treasury $10 million annually. And, since the bill is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1983, Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham noted that it would really cost three times that much in the first year.

Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, thought about fairness for a minute and then asked legislative economist David Crotts if retirees from private sector jobs got any such exemption. Crotts said no. In this case, government retirees were getting preferential treatment from the state and it's costing $17.2 million a year.

"I don't think they ought to be given an exemption at all," Allred said later, "without extending it to all retirees." He argued that the average government employee makes more than the average North Carolina wage earner and they didn't need a special tax break in retirement.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenior, probably sounded the bill's death knell when he said, "If we're going to do it for one group, we ought to do it for all of them and we can't afford to do that."

But Jenkins said the retired government employees do need special treatment. "People who work for the government and dedicate their lives to the government aren't paid the same salaries and benefits that private employees are paid." To get capable people in government jobs, he said, retirement incentives need to be provided.

The "fairness" debate between the military and civilian federal retirees got a bit out of hand and the bill was sent to a subcommittee. The "fairness" debate between government and non-government retirees didn't get any more mention than a question by Allred. If the bill comes back to the full committee, he says he'll file an amendment extending the exemption to all retired people.

Getting In Line

I was walking down the street minding my own business when I passed the "Mondale for President" headquarters building. There was a long line out front and I asked a man what was going on.

"The candidate is interviewing people to be his vice president," he replied.

"What did he do — put an ad in the paper?" I asked.

"Not exactly. But he put out word to all the leaders of the unions, women and minority groups that he'd talk to anyone who wanted the job. I heard about it from my cousin who works with 'Hispanic Joggers for Mondale.'"

"I didn't know Mondale had time to see everyone who wanted to be vice president."

"He has nothing else to do until the July convention. By interviewing vice presidential candidates he can keep his name in the paper. You want to get in line?"

"It looks awfully long."

"That's what I thought, but it moves pretty fast. Every once in a while a volunteer brings out coffee and doughnuts so it isn't as bad as you would think."

I had nothing to do for the afternoon so I went to the end of the line. There was a woman senior citizen in front of me.

"You going to go for it?" I asked her.

"Why not?" she said. "He's going to need a woman on the ticket, and he also needs the senior citizen vote. I could be twofer."

"Do you think you're up to being vice president of the United States?"

"As far as I can tell, a vice president'a main function is to go to funerals, and I go to a lot of funerals."

"I understand the vice president also serves on the National Security Council."

"I thought it was the Social Security Council," she said. "That was one of the reaaons I came down for the job."

"Not to worry," I assured her. "You have to go along with the president on national security anyway, so you just agree with everything he says."

"I hear the job pays pretty good."

"You don't get what you would as vice president of General Motors, but you won't starve to death."

"Well, that's better than being on Social Security."

Two hours later I was escorted into the candidate's office. He was surrounded by advisers.

He shook my hand and told me to take a seat. "What can you add to my ticket?" he asked.

"Well, sir, the way I see it the only way you can beat Reagan is if you have the media behind you. If you make a newspaperman your running mate, I can deliver CBS, ABC, NBC, and George Will."

Mondale seemed interested. "Are you sure?"

"I have the Eastern Establishment media in my pocket," I told him. "We've been dying to have one of our own in the White House for years."

"Well, it's something to think about. I'm very impressed with your qualifications. Leave your name with my secretary and we'll get back to you."

"Thank you, sir," I said and left.

I met the little old lady out on the sidewalk. "How did you do?"

She said, "He was very impressed with my qualifications and told me he'd get back to me. Do you think he means it?"

"I'm sure he does. But I wouldn't give up your Social Security check until you see what happens in San Francisco."

Fund Cuts Hurting Libraries

WASHINGTON — On three occasions recently, one of us has attempted to visit our neighborhood public library. In each instance, he's encountered a "sorry, we're closed" sign. The furstration, meanwhile, has come at the improbable times of 10:30 a.m. Thursday, 1 p.m. Wednesday, and noon on Saturday, and each time in the presence of an impatient 7-year-old nephew.

To be sure, luring a kid away from a soccer field in the summer is no small feat. But try to explain to a 7-year-old how "budget cuts" have shaved the neighborhood library's hours and you will discover what true challenge is. As the nephew asked pointedly, "If the place is so great, why isn't it ever open?"

Five years ago, this city's 21 public libraries were open 1,365 hours a week, every day, most of the day.

Today, the open-hours are down to 832 per week. The library system's schedule is as confounding as any airline fare guide. While one library will be open Monday, Wednesday and Friday, another will only be open on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Their hours, too, will vary. To maintain this tricky schedule, library personnel rotate from branch to branch.

Though the federal government provides local public libraries with only 5 percent of their funding, (80 percent of their support comes from local sources and 15 percent from state governments), its retrenchment on non-entitlement programs has helped squeeze operational budgets at all levels of public services. For the third straight year, meanwhile, the Reagan administration has requested no funding under the Library Service Construction Act, which offers federal assistance to support innovative library programs that have been designed to reach out to the less fortunate.

Reagan's cutback in domestic library funding is part of an administration-wide infogate, of course. The president has reduced the number of information officers at different agencies by the hundreds. He has slashed archives funding, impeding the flow of "interloan traffic" between the National Archives and the nation's libraries. He has also canceled thousands of government publications for the lack of profitability and drastically increased the price of others.

Four years ago, for example, the Congressional Record cost $75 a year and enjoyed 7,500 subscribers. Today it costs $218 a year and has only 3,500 subscribers. Meanwhile, only 15 copies are offered for public sale each day at Washington's four Government Printing Office bookstores (two of the original six bookstores have been closed since 1982).

Oddly enough, the library scourge has come hand-in-hand with an all-fronts Reagan administration effort to promote information overseas.

Now, almost twice as prosperous fiscally as it was under Jimmy Carter, the United States Information Agency (USIA) has undertaken a White House suggestion to step up the international "war of ideas" abroad with an expanded book-distribution program. In an April 4 memo, Robert McFarlane, the president's assistant for national security affairs, told USIA Director Charles Wick that the United States had been "virtually unilaterally disarmed in this field." He asked Wick to prepare a report by July 1 that would make specific budgetry recommendations to reduce the "book gap."

It's no secret that the purpose of an expanded USIA book project — the agency dispatched 581,000 volumes last year — is to bolster U.S. interests, not to promote the classics. As Wick admitted recently, "It's important that the national interest find ways ... to use book programs more effectively to support American foreign policy."

But when at least a quarter of all Americans are illiterate, using the written word to promote the U.S. seems as honest as the Soviets opening their churches to foreign delegations. Doesn't the Reagan administration recognize that it has a primary obligation to a free access of ideas at home, too?

As the Public Library Association says in its statement of principles, a library must "provide free access to, and promote communication of, ideas and information so that individuals on their own behalf, and groups ... can take active control of their lives and affairs.

"They (public libraries) provide a place where inquiring minds may encounter the rich diversity of concepts so necessary for a democratic society whose daily survival depends on the free and competitve flow of ideas..."

Unfortunately, at a time when libraries may be more vital than ever, they've found themselves increasingly struggling to hold their place in the community. Unless their works are made more accessible, with a little help from the federal government, literacy may become more privilege than right.

Public Forum

To the editor:

If County Manager Reginald Gray is fairly represented in Stuart Savage's June 12 story on the county budget plan, Gray needs to be relieved of his job, forthwith. The county manager, as represented in the many direct quotes from his budget message, sounds like an arrogant and insensitive dictator. Mr. Gray calls the budget request of Greenville city schools "so unrealistic it doesn't deserve further comment." I have trouble believing the city schools' board of education and administrative staff are so dumb as to produce a budget that deserves "no comment."

I recall a few European dictators and I wonder if our County Commissioners are so awed by or independent upon Mr. Gray as to fail to see the characteristics.

Another sign of the dictator or self-proclaimed benevolent monarch is Mr. Gray's statement, "I think I have been very generous with the schools, and have provided them with sufficient funds for an excellent school system." If Gray has done all this, he won't need your taxes and mine I suppose. He seems to overlook reality: he is a servant of the people, a high-powered bookkeeper and technician. He is, by no means, my benefactor nor yours. He seems to have forgotten that we all pay his salary and that he is expendable. If he can forget that badly, he is a dangerous servant.

Unfortunately, I don't get to vote for or against county managers. But if our County Commissioners are so insensitive as to tolerate the arrogance Mr., Gray revealed in his budget message, we need some different commissioners.

I don't live in Greenville, but if I did I would certainly be burning up the telephone trying to help parents of children in the city schools wake up. They have big problems and they don't all revolve around merger.

Strength For Today

The word "worry" comes from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "to strangle." Worry is an attitude of mind whereby we strangle ourselves and our happiness. It is a wonderful thing to stand up on a bracing morning and take in deep breaths of invigorating air. Strangulation, the death which comes from lack of air, must be dreadful in all its aspects.

How would you like to go through every day of your life breathing about half the amount of air needed to keep you feeling well and vigorous? Yet the worrier does just this, and he does it to himself. Sometimes he succeeds in persuading others to strangle themselves. He makes an unholy mess of his own happiness, and if he can do so, he messes things up for everybody else.

Strangulation is horrible, but strangulation of mind and mood through worry is about the worst form this horrible reality can take.

MANTEO — Edgar R. Loessin of Greenville has been presented the Roanoke Island Historical Association's Morrison Award, a recognition given annually to a leader in the cultural life of North Carolina.

The award, named in honor of Emma Neal Morrison, former producer of "The Lost Colony" and past chairman of the RIHA, and her husband, Dr. Fred W. Morrison, goes to someone who has "demonstrated the highest standards of excellence, significant achievement and creative accomplishment" in any of various aspects of the performing arts.

Past recipients of the Morrison Award include "The Lost Colony" author Paul Green, the drama's director Joe Layton, actors Sidney Blackmer and Andy Griffith, composer Robert Ward, and Robert Lindgren, dean of the school of dance at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem.

Dr. John M. Howell, chancellor of East Carolina University, presented the bronze and brass medalion to Loessin in a ceremony held on the stage of the Waterside Theater on Roanoke Island in Manteo just prior to a performance of "The Lost Colony."

In his remarks, Howell referred to the theaters and play productions which have come from ECU as "cherished treasures given us by Edgar Loessin and the people who have followed his direction in creating one work of art after another.

Loessin established the drama department at ECU in 1963. Today the department has a faculty of 20 with about 250 students majoring in theater, dance or broadcasting. It has three theaters that are completely state-of-the-art due to a recent $4 million renovation project.

In addition to many resident theater, touring company and outdoor drma credits as director, Loessin has also staged virtually all of this country's major musicals at the East Carolina Summer Theater which he founded in 1964. He lives in Greenville with his wife, Amanda, an actress who has performed in numerous theatrical works, including ones at ECU.

Earlier in the month, on June 15, Lucille Winslow of Hertford was the recipient of the RIHA Distinguished Service Award. This award is given periodically to an individual who has given outstanding support and service to the RIHA and its production of "The Lost Colony."

Mrs. Winslow first became associated with "The Lost Colony" through her efforts to involve the Works Progress Administration (WPA) in the 1937 opening season of the first outdoor drama in America.

The award was presented to Mrs. Winslow by former Gov. Terry Sanford, now president of Duke University.

Family Awaits Son From Cuba

YAUPON BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A Yaupon Beach mother of a man being released from a Cuban jail because of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's visit with Prime Minister Fidel Castro says she thinks Jackson is a "great diplomat."

Elizabeth Ely, the mother of Mark M. Ely Jr., who was jailed in November 1981 on charges of "illegal entry" after ditching his plane offshore from the Caribbean nation, said in a telephone interview that she was elated to learn of her son's release.

She and her husband Mark, a security guard at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant near Southport, had spent more than two years phoning andf writing letters to "senators we never heard of" to try to win their son's release, she said.

Jackson, who went to Cuba this week, has secured the release of 22 prisoners, Cuban officials said.

"I think it's wonderful," said Mrs. Ely, who added that she voted for Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., in the Dmeocratic presidential primary. Jackson, she said, "is a great diplomat, he's a Christian, a preacher, and he did this for a humane thing.

"I believe Jesus spoke through Jesse Jackson to Fidel Castro. I really do," Mrs. Ely said.

Mrs. Ely said her son grew up in Southport and that the family moved to Florida about two years ago. She and her husband since have returned. Their son often flew near the Bahamas, she said.

Mrs. Ely said that no official word had yet come from federal authorities but that her husband planned to go to Washington today in hope of meeting Jackson's party.

"We were tickled to death," Mrs. Ely said of the news. "I've been praying for 30 months."

Winterville To Adopt Budget Friday

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Winterville aldermen will meet Friday to approve a budget for the town totaling $2,041,166, which is an increase of $360,366 from the 1983-84 budget.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said the tax rate would remain the same, which is $.40 per $100. The income from the taxes levied is based on an estimated total valuation of property at $35,856,000, with an estimated 85 percent collection rate.

The report said there would be no increase in the water or sewer rates for the coming year. Tap rates would change as follows: three-quarter inch taps for water would increase to $200 from $165 and four-inch sewer taps would increase to $200 from $135. Nobles noted that all outside city water and sewer rates will remain double the in-town rate.

The only indication of an electric rate increase would be on the mercury-vapor security light which would be raised from the present $6 monthly extra charge to $8.

Nobles said new budgeted items would include a new administrative position, three vehicles; police vehicle, sewer department vehicle and an additional trash truck. Also included in the proposed budgeted items was $30,000 to remodel the present Town Hall, $20,000 for a new sewer pump for the main lift station on Champman Street, $30,000 for shelters for the maintance building, $75,000 for street inprovements and a salary adjustment for all town employees.

Nobles also said a $1.50 vehicle charge would be charged for the year beginning July 1, 1984, through June 30, 1985, with an increase to $3 per vehicle beginning after July 1, 1985. This tax would relieve vehicle owners from having to purchase license plates or stickers.

Approve Budgets

Budgets for fiscal year 1984-85 have been approved by governing boards in Bethel, Robersonville, Williamston and Martin County, three with an increase in the total dollars budgeted, one with a decrease in total dollars, and one with an increase in the tax rate.

The budget adopted by the town of Bethel for 1984-85 totals $594,345 which compares to the 1983-84 budget of $479,938. The new tax rate adopted is 49 cents per $100 valuation of property, up 7 cents from the 1983-84 tax rate of 42 cents. The increase is designed primarily to cover a budget item of $50,000 for a proposed expanded water and sewer program.

The budget for the Martin County town of Robersonville reflects a slight increase to $2,141,140 for 1984-85 over the current budget total of $1,960,790. The $50,000 increase is designed to cover a five percent raise in salaries for town employees. The tax rate of 77 cents per $100 valuation remains unchanged from 1983-84.

Williamston, county seat and largest town in Martin County, has a 1984-85 budget totaling $3,063,729, which is $200,000 less than the 1983-84 budget of $3,264,500. The lesser amount reflects the fact that property revaluation in Williamston has not been made in recent years. However, a new valuation will take effect for fiscal year 1985-86. The tax rate of $1.10 remains unchanged.

The budget for Martin County is $12,775,285 for the 1984-85 fiscal year. This is an increase of slightly more than $1 million over the 1983-84 budget total of $11,720,762, with budgets for both years based on a tax rate of 90 cents per $100 valuation.

Bill Seeks Change In Conspiracy Law

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, has introduced a bill that would change the laws under which Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was indicted last year on bribery and conspiracy charges.

State prosecutors immediately moved to block the changes, charging the proposals would drastically weaken the state's ability to prosecute drug trafficking, organized crime and white-collar crime.

"There's a lot of strong support and a lot of strong opposition," said Rep. H. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, who chairs the House Judiciary III committee where the bill was sent. "If it gets out of committee, I expect there'll be a fight on the floor. My guess is that if it passes the House, it won't have much trouble in the Senate."

Green, who presides over the Senate, was acquitted in Wake County Superior Court of charges that he took a bribe and agreed to take more.

Adams, whose term expires this year, said Wednesday Green was treated badly and that the law should be changed to prevent recurrences.

"I said last year that I hoped I would be in the General Assembly long enough to see that nobody is subjected to the type of treatment the lieutenant governor was subjected to," Adams said. "I think everybody was offended by the injustice that was done."

The bill addresses specific issues used by Green's defense attorneys during the trial.

It calls for the addition of a new element to existing conspiracy laws, requiring that the person allegedly involved in a conspiracy must commit "at least one overt act to carry out an objective of the conspiracy." Green's attorneys argued that Green never did anything for undercover FBI agents involved in the Colcor investigation.

Adams' proposal would also amend the state bribery statute to say an official is guilty of bribery if he receives anything of value in exchange for performing or agreeing not to perform an official act "which lay with the scope of his official authority and was connected with the discharge of his official and legal duties."

Green's attorneys argued he didn't have the legal authority to do what the FBI agents said he promised to do — influence state and local Alcoholic Beverage Control boards.

The Adams bill would also allow a defendant to use a defense of entrapment if a law officer "induces or encourages another person to engage in conduct...by employing methods of persuasion or inducement which create a substantial risk that such an offense will be committed by persons other than those who are ready to commit it."

Under current law, a defense of entrapment is not available to a person who is predisposed to commit a crime and commits it only because an officer affords him the opportunity. Green's attorneys argued the FBI hounded him and refused to take no for an answer.

Prosecutors say the entrapment provision is the most far-reaching change and could jeopardize drug investigations.

Wade Barber, district attorney for Orange and Chatham counties, also said the bribery changes would narrow the scope of influence peddling laws.

"North Carolina already has a very narrow statute," Barber said. "I'm shocked that someone is proposing to narrow the limitations on influence peddling by public officials in North Carolina, rather than broaden it."

Delays Over Intangibles Tax Proposal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A House-Senate spat that stalled a proposed intangibles tax phaseout and other important bills appears to be ending, but influential lawmakers say hopes are fading that the Legislature will adjourn this week.

After sitting on a Senate bill to phase out the intangibles tax for nearly a week, the House Finance Committee decided Wednesday to consider the proposal Friday. The bill's powerful sponsor, Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, returned the favor by dropping his threat to delay all House bills before the Senate Rules Committee, which he chairs.

Meanwhile, the Senate gave tentative approval to a comprehensive reform of North Carolina's public education system. Also, a compromise was reached on a bill to foster competition among telephone companies that provide in-state, long-distance service.

Finance Committee Chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, said several legislators were drafting amendments to the intangibles tax bill to "make it more acceptable to a lot of people."

Lawing scheduled a meeting of his Rules Committee for Thursday, adding that he did not care whether the House amended his intangibles tax bill as long as it didn't die without a vote.

"This is all the opportunity in 14 years that has presented itself to do anything about it," Lawing said. "There will never be another one in my lifetime."

There still was no movement on two other bills — a House proposal to limit phosphates in detergents and a Senate bill to permit interstate banking.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, didn't schedule a meeting of his Banks and Thrift Institutions Committee to examine the banking bill, although he said there would be a meeting "in the very near future."

The banking bill bogged down after the Senate Special Ways and Means Committee refused to act on Evans' phosphate bill, instead scheduling a public hearing for Saturday.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, practiced shuttle diplomacy as he moved from the House to the Senate trying to dislodge the stalled bills.

Royall said he still was working on the phosphate-banking situation and saw no reason the General Assembly could noot adjourn by Friday.

"We came here to do the budget and all this other stuff are things that should not keep us here," Royall said.

Most other legislative leaders, however, predicted adjournment would be Tuesday — the day before July 4.

In other legislative action:

The Senate Special Ways and Means Committee approved the telephone bill, under which the North Carolina Utilitiies Commission would regulate competition between AT&T Communications and other companies.

A floor vote was scheduled for today.

Sponsored by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, the bill won unanimous House approval last year. But it remained bottled up in the Senate committee for most of the current session while AT&T and independent firms argued over proposed amendments.

A blueprint for "excellence in education" calling for tougher courses, better teachers and improved funding methods won tentative approval of the state Senate. A final vote was expected today.

"We think this is an opportunity to set us on the path toward excellence in education in North Carolina," said Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston.

Under the bill, the State Board of Education would develop a "rigorous" standard course of study that would emphasize competency in the basic-skill areas "necessary to cope with contemporary society" but would include electives that "aren't cotton candy courses," Warren said.

Included in that plan would be minimum school-day lengths, standards for passing and flunking, guidelines on class sizes, and a stipulation that guidance counselors be provided in lower grades.

The state board also would be directed to develop plans for teachers and administrator career development, setting forth qualifications for advancement and competency standards. However, that provision was watered down by an amendment stipulating that it wouldn't apply to people hired before July 1 of this year.

The Senate approved 44-0 a House bill that allows the Department of Revenue to hire agencies to collect delinquent taxes in other states. The bill would not affect collection of taxes in North Carolina.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, has estimated that nearly $5 million is owed North Carolina by people living out of state but that currently there's no way to get the money.

Fire Kills Man Strapped In Chair

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Authorities are investigating the cause of a fire that killed a 95-year-old invalid who was strapped to a chair while his housekeeper went to lunch.

Irving Wallach was found dead by firefighters Sunday afternoon, police said. The blaze affected only his apartment.

Lou Betchell, the housekeeper, told police she restrained Wallach so he wouldn't remove a catheter while she was away.

Ms. Betchell said she had no idea how the fire started, police said. Although she said Wallach didn't smoke, investigators found old cigars in his nightstand.

Patrol Says Speeders Boost Deaths

By The Associated Press

While drug- and alcohol-related traffic deaths are declining, North Carolina's highway fatalities have not declined because motorists are driving more and at higher speeds, the state Highway Patrol says.

According to the Department of Motor Vehicles, there have been 16.4 percent fewer alcohol-related accidents in the first four months of 1984 than in the comparable period in 1983, yet the total number of accidents has dropped by only 1.7 percent.

"That spells speeding to me," said Lt. Arnold Rector of the Highway Patrol. "People are beginning to nibble on the speed more. They've gotten used to paying the high rates for gasoline. That shock has worn off. Now, they're traveling more — and they're traveling faster."

Statistics show alcohol-related crashes resulting in death or injury dropped 11.4 percent for the first four months of 1984 compared to the same months last year, but in the same period accidents involving injuries or fatalities jumped 10.2 percent.

Officials say the numbers show new anti-drunken driving laws that took effect last fall are working, but that only emphasizes deaths due to other causes.

"It's really beginning to concern us down here," said Rector. "We had a big drop-off (in fatalities) last year and now we're going back up again."

Despite the change in figures, Rector maintains that "speed and the drinking driver" remain the top two concerns for law enforcement officers.

"I don't think we can relax the importance of DWI," Rector said. "It's going in the right direction, now we just have to slow the people down again."

Dr. B.J. Campbell, director of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said highway fatalities historically are related to the economy.

"When the economy improves, highway fatalities always seem to go up," Campbell said. "When people have more money to spend, then they do more driving for non-essential reasons like recreation. And that leads to more traffic fatalities."

Rainfall Could Cut Leaf Yield

By The Associated Press

Lack of rain may jeopardize predictions that North Carolina tobacco growers would produce 100 percent of their effective quota, said John Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the state Department of Agriculture.

"We are reaching the crucial point in which we must receive some rain or the crop will begin to deteriorate very rapidly," Cyrus said, adding that weather for the next two or three weeks will determine the size of this year's crop.

Cyrus said 272,000 acres of tobacco have been planted this year.

N.C. Agricultural Extention Service agents questioned in major tobacco-producing counties of Pitt, Johnston and Wake said some farms received scattered summer showers in recent weeks while others nearby were missed.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Advisory Committee is scheduled to meet in Raleigh Monday to set this year's marketing schedule.

Because the average support price remains frozen at $1.69 a pound, most farmers hope to produce a high-yield, high-quality crop that brings better prices, Cyrus said.

He said high-yield was vital this year to take advantage of changes in quota.

Soldier Gets $1,000 Reward

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Army Pfc. Patrick Henry Carey, who chased down a man who allegedly stole 13 handguns from a pawn shop, was surprised but happy when he was awarded $1,000 and a plaque for his efforts.

"I never expected such a big deal about it," Carey said Wednesday. "It really is unnecessary, but thanks a lot."

Carey said he was driving home after finishing a 3-mile run Tuesday morning when he heard an alarm and saw a car backed up to the front entrance of B&B Pawn Shop.

"That's what really caught my eye," Carey said. "I saw a guy crawl out of the broken glass door and throw a white five-gallon bucket in the back of his car."

In the ensuing car chase, the suspect caused several cars to skid to a halt before hitting a stop sign and coming to a halt, Carey said.

The 6-foot-1 Savannah, Ga., native jumped out of his car, pulled the suspect from his car and held him on the ground until the sheriff's deputy arrived.

The entire chase seemed to last only about a minute, but Carey, 22, remembers thinking about one thing.

"I was wondering whether he was armed or if I could catch him. It just seemed like the thing to do," he said. "Anybody there would have done the same thing."

"It's very seldom we get any help like this from citizens ... and it's good to know we've still got people on the outside ... who don't mind going ahead and helping," said Sheriff Ottis Jones.

John Beard, owner of the pawn shop and himself once a law enforcement officer, gave Carey a check for $1,000, saying, "There aren't many people who would do what you did."

Compromise Deficit Bill Wins Approval

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Urged on by President Reagan, Congress has approved a compromise deficit-reduction package of more than $50 billion in tax increases and about $13 billion in spending cuts that will be felt by everyone from welfare recipients to wealthy corporate executives.

The Senate, voting 83-15, gave the measure final congressional approval Wednesday night, clearing the way for the president to sign the package into law. The House approved it 268-155 earlier in the day.

Reagan sent letters to legislators Wednesday reiterating his "support for this major element of the deficit-reduction package," adding it "will help ensure that the economic recovery now under way is sustained in the months and years ahead."

Under the package:

— The one-year holding period on capital gains will be cut in half.

— Federal liquor taxes will rise about 40 cents on a 100-proof fifth. Beer and wine will not be affected.

— An existing 3 percent excise tax on telephone use, which had been due to end after 1985, will be extended through 1987.

— The federal cigarette tax will drop from 16 cents to 8 cents a pack, as previously scheduled.

— The diesel fuel tax will go up 6 cents to 15 cents a gallon.

— Tax write-offs for real estate investors will be reduced.

— The authority of states to issue tax-exempt industrial development bonds will be limited.

Spending provisions call for nearly $8 billion in Medicare spending cuts over the next three years — including a premium increase for most recipients. But the bill loosens welfare regulations and provides new Medicaid coverage for some poor women and children.

Passage of the tax and domestic spending measure, along with previous actions, represents about two-thirds of the election-year action Congress and the president have contemplated to make a modest "down payment" on reducing the $600 billion in federal budget deficits expected through 1987.

Still to be decided are savings to be made in the Pentagon budget.

Despite the support of Reagan and congressional leaders, only 76 Republicans in the House voted for it and 86 opposed it. Democrats split 192-69 in favor of the plan.

Senior senators scrambled to make sure that there would not be similar defection in that chamber.

On the final Senate vote, 38 Democrats joined 45 Republicans to pass the measure. Six Democrats and nine Republicans opposed it.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the top Democrat on the Finance Committee, told his colleagues, "It would be a disaster to this country for word to go out that Congress will do nothing" about lowering the deficits.

But there were opponents in both chambers.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., denied the bill will do anything to bring down interest rates. "Let's keep this economy going, let's not raise taxes," he said.

"Raising taxes is becoming increasingly the preoccupation of Congress and we have yet to address (reductions in) spending," said Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill.

While the tax increases in the measure primarily affect businesses and upper-income investors, one-fourth of the money raised would come from eliminating a new tax break for savers and by reducing the tax benefits available from income averaging.

It also would make it more difficult to take a tax write-off for expensive cars used for business and for home computers and other property used partially for personal use. It would grant a tax exemption to most common employer-paid worker fringe benefits, stretch out tax benefits for investment in most real estate and restrict use of tax-free bonds for commercial purposes.

At the same time, the measure would lower taxes for certain low-income working families with children by increasing the earned-income tax credit, and cut in half the minimum 12-month period that an asset, such as stock, must be owned before profits from its sale qualify for preferential tax treatment as a capital gain.

This was the third major tax increase Congress has passed in three years.

After Reagan took office in 1981, he and Congress agreed on the largest tax cut in history. That was followed by a 1982 tax increase worth $101 billion over three years. Last year there was a major boost in Social Security taxes.

Meanwhile, further deficit-reduction action this year is stalled by a battle over military spending, resulting in House-Senate negotiations seeking to draft an overall spending blueprint being on the verge of collapse.

Senate Republicans and the Reagan administration are seeking a roughly 7 percent increase in the defense budget. House Democrats have endorsed a 3-percent boost.

Tax Changes Hit Most Citizens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under a broad package of tax changes and spending reductions approved by the House and Senate, a tax break of up to $450 a year to encourage saving, set to take effect in 1985, will be repealed.

The provision would have allowed a taxpayer to avoid taxes on 15 percent of interest earned after subtracting interest paid for anything except a home mortgage or business.

It was one of the hundreds of tax changes in the package approved Wednesday by the House and Senate. Here are others:

INCOME AVERAGING: It will be harder for farmers, writers and others whose incomes fluctuate from year to year to save on taxes by averaging a high earning year against lower-earning years of the past. The old law permitted averaging if current income exceeded 120 percent of the average earned in the last four years; the bill changes the threshold to 140 percent of the last three years.

CAPITAL GAINS: A new tax break for investors will reduce to six months the 12-month minimum period that an asset, such as stock, must be held before profits from its sale qualify for preferential capital-gains tax treatment.

FRINGE BENEFITS: Most employer-paid worker fringe benefits will be exempt from federal taxes. Fringe benefits that are not specifically authorized by law, but which are now generally offered by employers, will be exempt from income and Social Security taxes. But it will be more difficult for new benefits to gain a tax exemption in the future.

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT: This benefit for low-income working families with children, an incentive for staying off welfare, now is limited to $500 a year. The bill raises the credit to 11 percent of the first $5,000 of income — a maximum of $550 — starting next year. The benefit drops gradually as income exceeds $6,500 and ends at the $11,000 level.

TELEPHONES: The 3-percent excise tax on local and long distance service will be extended through 1987.

LIQUOR: The tax of up to $10.50 a gallon, depending on proof, will rise to $12.50 on Oct. 1, 1985, meaning a fifth of 86-proof liquor liquor will cost 34 censts more; 100-proof, 40 cents more. Beer and wine are not affected.

HIGHWAY TAXES: The 9-cent-a-gallon tax on diesel fuel will rise to 15 cents Aug. 1 but drivers of cars and light trucks will be able to get the full 6-cent increase rebated. Trucks weighing less than 55,000 pounds will be exempt from highway-use taxes. Use taxes for the biggest trucks will be cut to $500 a year, compared with a maximum tax under current law that is due to rise to $1,900 in 1988.

BUSINESS PROPERTY: Tax benefits will be restricted for cars costing more than $16,000 and bought for business use, and for personal property, such as home computers, used partially for business and partially for personal use. For example, a computer used less than half the time for business will have to be written off over 12 years; a use log will have to be kept.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: A one-earner couple will still be allowed to set aside only $250 a year in a tax-deferred Individual Retirement Account for the unemployed spouse, in addition to the $2,000 permitted for the employed spouse. The Senate wanted $2,000 a year for the jobless spouse.

MEDICAL EXPENSES: Lodging expenses of up to $50 a day in connection with out-of-town outpatient treatment, such as chemotherapy for a cancer patient, may be counted when calculating a deduction for uninsured medical costs. A parent or spouse accompanying the patient also may claim up to $50 daily.

REAL ESTATE: Investors in most real estate will have to write off their investment over 18 years, rather than 15 years under present law. That means a lower tax benefit. Depreciation on low-income housing remains 15 years.

COMPLIANCE: Anyone receiving mortgage interest of more than $600 a year or taking $10,000 or more cash in a business transaction will have to identify the payer to the IRS. Fraudulently filing a certificate to avoid tax withholding could bring a stiffer penalty. Failure to withdraw a frivolous Tax Court suit could result in a $5,000 penalty. Any charitable contribution of property valued at more than $5,000 would have to be accompanied by an appraiser's statement.

Medicare Affected By Spending Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit-reduction package Congress has approved includes some $13 billion in social spending cuts, of which about $8 billion are in the Medicare program.

Major provisions of the bill would:

— Require Medicare participants in the portion that covers doctor bills to pay higher premiums for this coverage. The premiums would rise to an estimated $19.10 in 1986, instead of $17.70 under current law, and $21.30 a month in 1987, instead of $18.60 under current law.

— Freeze the amount Medicare pays physicians for their services for 15 months. Medicare pays doctors 80 percent of whatever fee the system sets as reasonable for a particular service and patients are billed for the rest. The legislation contains incentives and penalties designed to discourage doctors from charging patients any more than the required 20 percent of that set fee. The penalties include fines and removal from the Medicare program for a time.

— Require employers to extend health care coverage to the over-65 spouses of workers.

— Limit the rate of increase in hospital fees paid by the government for Medicare patients.

— Set up a fee schedule of what the government will pay for all outpatient diagnostic laboratory tests for Medicare patients.

— Provide up to 15 months of Medicaid coverage for recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children who now lose eligibility for the health program for the poor when they accept jobs.

— Extend Medicaid coverage to poor women meeting other AFDC eligibility requirements in their first pregnancy and to poor women and children in two-parent households where the principal wage earner is unemployed.

Society Says Watt Helps Its Cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Watt as interior secretary was the bane of environmentalists, but getting him back in the post would stimulate the cause, says the head of the Wilderness Society.

William A. Turnage, executive director of the society, told reporters Wednesday nothing has changed under Watt's successor, William P. Clark.

Clark would return to the White House if President Reagan wins re-election, Turnage predicted, and in that case "it wouldn't be impossible to have James Watt come back."

From the point of view of environmentalists, Watt would be preferrable because "everybody in the country knows his stripes ... it would probably assist our cause."

Watt, loudly accused of being too pro-business in his tenure, resigned last fall in the outcry over what was seen as a slur on women, ethnic groups and the handicapped.

Several environmental groups enjoyed rising membership and contributions during the time Watt was at Interior and Anne Burford headed the Environmental Protection Agency, only to see a slackening after their departures.

The Wilderness Society's two-volume 1982 "Watt Book" was influential in mobilizing the opinion of environmentalists.

Turnage was releasing an update of his organization's assessment of the Reagan administration's environmental policies, with emphasis on the Interior Department. The organization has little expertise in most areas of concern to EPA, he said, though the report did excoriate the administration for failure to act against acid rain.

New 'Street' Voters May Seek Public Shelters In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operators of a shelter for homeless people are trying to galvanize the newest electoral constituency in the nation's capital — residents who sleep on park benches, heating grates or sidewalks.

The Center for Creative Non-Violence, which recently helped homeless people win the right to register and vote in the District of Columbia, now wants them to support a proposition that would require the city to shelter any resident who needs a roof over his head.

"We shouldn't let people live like animals in the streets, it's just not humane," said spokesman Mitch Snyder.

The ruling this month that allows homeless people to vote is believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

To enroll more homeless voters and celebrate their newly won right, the center served lunch in a downtown park Wednesday where about 100 people registered, frolicked in a nearby fountain and ate sandwiches, ice cream and cake donated by local merchants.

"I believe everybody's got that right," said Charles Ross, a 36-year-old shelter resident who signed up to vote. "They even gave the right to vote to ex-convicts, why not to street people?"

The group, which has collected 10,000 more signatures than are required to place the shelter proposition on the November ballot, discovered homeless people couldn't vote when it began its petition drive last spring, Snyder said.

In April, five homeless men tried to register to vote by listing park benches or heating grates as their addresses. "When they realized that they were not going to be allowed to vote they were outraged," Snyder said.

City officials estimate there are 5,000 homeless residents in the district but the center claims there could be as many as 10,000.

"For them to say I don't have the right to vote simply because I am here on the streets, that seems like an archaic or outmoded thing to me," said Ray Lamb, 48, who professes to prefer life on the street.

"Just because I don't live in a house, I still have the right to vote," said Lamb, one of the five homeless men who successfully challenged the city's election rules.

Election officials rejected their applications because they didn't have fixed addresses. "They sent us a letter to tell us that they couldn't get in touch with us," said Lamb, adding that the notice was nevertheless delivered to him in care of a shelter for homeless men.

Willie Jenkins, 58, who shares a heating grate with Lamb just five blocks from the White House, recalled the anger he felt when his application was rejected.

"I lost my lawful place of residence but I didn't lose my citizenship," he said. "When I was disenfranchised I decided to fight it."

With the help of the center and Covington and Burling, the city's largest law firm, the five men appealed to the Board of Elections and Ethics.

On June 4, the board voted unanimously that city law did not prohibit homeless people from voting if they resided at a fixed location and furnished a mailing address.

"So long as an individual is at a fixed location so he can be assigned to a precinct and participate in less than jurisdiction-wide elections and you have a way to communicate with him... there is no basis to deny the homeless the right to vote," said Edward Norton, the board's chairman.

Election officials said only a small number of homeless people have registered to vote since the decision.

Lamb, a former air traffic controller who was fired in 1981 during the illegal strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said his life is much simpler now that he lives on the street.

"I'm glad I am where I am and I'll never go anywhere else. I'm right at home now."

Even though he was fired by President Reagan, Lamb said he may vote for the president's re-election this fall.

"He's the best thing that ever happened to me."

Texas Parents Spend Time In Jail, Refuse To Testify Against Their Son

HOUSTON (AP) — The parents of a teen-ager accused of murdering a mail carrier won't testify against their son despite spending 5½ hours in jail after being held in contempt of court, their lawyer says

Bernard and Odette Port, the father and stepmother of David Port, 17, were released Wednesday afternoon on $1,000 bond on order of the Texas Court of Appeals in Austin, court clerk Thomas Lowe said.

David Port is free on $20,000 bond on a murder charge filed in the June 7 slaying of Debora Sue Schatz. Ms. Schatz, 23, was found shot to death in a remote area of northwest Harris County on June 9.

State District Judge William Hatten found the couple in contempt of court Wednesday morning for refusing to testify before a grand jury. He fined them $500 each and sent them to Harris County Jail, where they spent 5½ hours in separate cells.

Despite the fine and brief stay in jail, attorney Randy Schaffer said the Ports' "will not testify against their son."

"What are they going to do — hang them by their thumbs? They are not going to torture them into doing something against their conscience," Schaffer said.

The Ports say the protection that allows spouses not to testify against each other should extend to parents and their children. Texas law does not provide for parent-child privilege.

They also claim the laws of their religion, Judaism, prevent them from testifying against a family member. But two rabbis testified last week that the Jewish law applied only in religious courts.

David Port pleaded innocent last week to the murder charge and waived his right to a grand jury indictment in hopes of keeping his parents from going to jail.

Prosecutors said they will proceed with the investigation because they have no other witnesses who could testify to key facts. The grand jury was scheduled to meet Friday.

"The public interest is served by seeing that justice is done and that the truth is presented to the grand jury," said Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers.

But Schaffer argued that the Ports' testimony would violate their Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination and that "the state has attempted to abuse the grand jury process by compelling them to testify."

Schaffer has said prosecutors may be seeking the testimony to turn the murder charge into a capital murder indictment.

"If they speak, it could mean that the state could kill their son," he said.

Jack Zimmermann, David Port's attorney, said prosecutors would have obtained an immediate indictment if they had enough evidence for a capital murder charge.

Miss Schatz disappeared June 7 while delivering mail in the Ports' affluent west Houston neighborhood. Two days later, her body, shot three times in the head, was found in a remote, wooded area of northwestern Harris County.

Investigators searching the Port home said they found bloodstains, bullet holes and a collection of weapons. Officers said the elder Port gave them a recently fired .22-caliber pistol found in his son's room.

Senate OKs Regigious Meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Student religious meetings in public high schools have won overwhelming Senate approval, prompting a leading supporter to forecast a change of heart in the House, where the concept failed once amid concern about church-state separation.

The Senate voted 88-11 Wednesday in favor of the measure, which is designed to permit voluntary religious student groups to meet in school facilities on the same basis as other extracurricular student groups.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., told reporters he expects the Senate version of the religious meeting proposal "to be much more acceptable to the House" than the one defeated there last May when it fell 11 votes short of the two-thirds needed under a special procedure.

"A sealed door has had its seal broken," Denton said. Down the road, he added, "we can probably get it to grade schools."

The Senate attached the student meeting measure to a bill providing nearly $1 billion over two years to strengthen mathematics and science teaching in schools. The overall bill passed by voice vote after the Reagan administration abandoned attempts to tack onto it a sub-minimum wage proposal for teen-agers.

The Senate version required a simple majority. Its approval meant the measure could be considered by House-Senate negotiators on the math-science bill without returning for another House floor vote. The final math-science bill produced by that conference committee, however, would have to be passed upon by each chamber.

The Senate version was broadened to prohibit schools from barring a student meeting on the basis of "religious, political, philosophical or other content of the speech." That was done to meet the objections of some that it elevated religious speech to a level of protection not given other forms of speech.

Death Date

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — Convicted killer Gerald Gallego has been handed a second execution date, this one Sept. 10 for the hammer beatings of two teen-agers.

A jury found Gallego guilty of abducting two 17-year-old girls from a California shopping mall in 1980 and driving them to Nevada, where they were beaten to death with a hammer. The execution will be stayed to allow the state Supreme Court to consider an automatic appeal. Gallego maintains his innocence.

Gallego faces death in California for the slayings of two college students. His wife has implicated him in the deaths of six other women in what she said was his search for a perfect young sex slave.

CIA Shuffles Top Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA, facing mounting congressional resistance to covert aid for Nicaraguan rebels, is transferring four top-level officials, including the head of its clandestine operations and chief Capitol Hill lobbyist.

The shifts, scheduled to take effect Sunday, were described by a CIA spokesman as a "routine rotation." But the moves come as support in Congress for President Reagan's aid to the anti-government rebels continues to erode and some administration officials concede additional aid this year is unlikely.

CIA spokesman Dale Peterson said Wednesday night that John Stein, director of CIA clandestine operations, which oversees covert actions, will become the spy agency's inspector general. Stein will be replaced by Clair George, currently head of legislative liaison.

In addition, Charles Briggs, the agency's executive director, will be made the CIA's chief congressional lobbyist, and the agency's inspector general, James Taylor, will move to executive director, the agency's No. 3 job, Peterson said.

Reagan Cites Conscience

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is warning the Soviet Union that its treatment of Andrei Sakharov and other dissidents will affect U.S.-Soviet cooperation "because our conscience ... will have it no other way."

"The persecution of these courageous, noble people weighs very heavily on our hearts," the president said Wednesday in a speech in the East Room of the White House.

"It would be wrong to believe that their treatment and their fate will not affect the ability to increase cooperation," he said. "It will, because our conscience and that of the American people and freedom-loving people everywhere will have it no other way."

Reagan's remarks on the plight of Sakharov, his wife, Yelena Bonner, and other Soviet dissidents appeared to be a change of strategy. He had recently soft-pedaled the situation for fear that any comment from him would make matters worse for the dissidents.

A White House official, speaking anonymously, said Reagan was using Sakharov as a symbolic example of the Soviet handling of human rights. The physicist reportedly began a hunger strike in early May to protest the refusal of Soviet authorities to allow his wife to seek medical treatment outside the Soviet Union.

U.S. Sees Imports Fall Off In May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's foreign-trade deficit narrowed to $8.84 billion in May, the smallest so far this year, as imports of oil and manufactured goods slowed, the government reported today.

Exports by U.S. companies also helped by rising slightly, the Commerce Department report said.

May's narrowing in the deficit followed four straight monthly records, culminating in the $12.2 billion imbalance in April.

The deficit for the first five months of the year stood at $50.85 billion, running at a pace that would bring a trade imbalance of about $122 billion for the year, far above last year's record $69.4 billion.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said this morning on the NBC-TV "Today" show that he still expects the final 1984 figure to be as high as $130 billion, representing the difference between imports of merchandise flowing into the United States and exports going abroad.

And department economist David Lund said after the report was released, "The monthly deficits will be higher (than in May) before they get lower."

Asked about the May slowdown in manufactured imports, he said, "It probably is an indication of some slowing in the economy, but the economy is very, very strong."

If U.S. economic growth is actually slackening, as most recent statistics seem to indicate, that would presumably lead to less demand for foreign goods.

Lund said it was too soon to predict whether next year's deficit would be higher or lower than this year's.

In May, the report said, imports totaled $26.79 billion, down 9.8 percent from the April level. That included a big drop in imported oil — to 4.9 million barrels per day from 6.2 million in April. And there was a $1.4 billion decline in manufactured goods, including decreases for steel plates and sheets, clothing, non-Japanese autos, footwear and organic chemicals.

Exports rose 2.4 percent to $17.95 billion, including increases for such wide-ranging items as oil products, power generating machinery, auto and tractor parts, wheat and fertilizers.

Government officials and private analysts have said the deficit has been driven higher by the relatively high value of the U.S. dollar and by the fact that the American economy has revived more quickly from the recession than have other nations'. Those factors have made American goods more expensive for foreigners who had relatively little money with which to buy the goods.

However, the same economists have said they expected an easing in the situation later this year as the dollar declines and other economies gain strength.

Israelis Stage Air Strike On Island Used By PLO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Twelve men were killed and at least 20 wounded in an Israeli attack on an island near Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli, police said. Israel said its navy destroyed a "terrorist boat" today near the island.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said the attack Wednesday night was directed against a Palestine Liberation Organization base used as a launching point for guerrilla attacks against Israel. It was the 12th Israeli air raid on Lebanon this year.

Twenty-five people were reported missing after Wednesday's attack.

Fighting broke out near the island again today when an Israeli ship on routine patrol detected a boat that was acting suspiciously, the Israeli military command said.

Five Israelis were slightly wounded by rifle fire coming from the boat, military officials in Tel Aviv said. The Israelis destroyed the boat, the officials said, but they did not say how or give any estimate of casualties.

Police said at least two gunboats teamed with Israeli jets in hitting the tiny island intermittently over a four-hour period Wednesday.

Most of the victims in the raid were fishermen who have long used the island three miles northeast of Tripoli as an anchoring area for their boats, according to police. They did not provide a specific figure, however.

Some Beirut newspapers said today that PLO chairman Yasser Arafat had left only one political representative in Tripoli when he evacuated Lebanon's second-largest city with his guerrillas last December after a siege by Syrian-backed PLO mutineers.

But one conservative Moslem newspaper, Al-Liwa, said Arafat had left a seaborne unit on Palm Island. Al-Liwa also said a ship carrying arms and ammunition to Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group, was hit in the attack, but it provided no further details.

Seven Crewmen Die

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Seven crewmen were killed in the Iraqi missile attack on the Swiss-chartered oil tanker Tiburon, and ship was still on fire in the Persian Gulf near Iran, shipping sources said today.

The casualty toll, if confirmed, would be the highest reported in a single raid since commercial ships began coming under attack in the gulf four months ago as an outgrowth of the Iran-Iraq war.

The shipping sources said the 260,000-ton Tiburon, hit by Iraqi warplanes Wednesday, was burning today near Iran's Kharg Island oil shipping terminal. They said an undetermined number of crewmen were injured.

The Tiburon, owned a Swiss-based company and registered in Liberia, was crippled by an Iraqi rocket close to the Iranian port of Bushehr, after it lifted a load of crude oil at Kharg, the sources said.

Rescue tugboats sped from Bahrain to the Kharg area, but radio communications operators said contact with the vessel was cut.The Tiburon never wired a distress signal, but marine salvage company sources in Bahrain said a tugboat in the vicinity alerted them about the tanker's attack with its own radio signals.

Iran and Iraq have been at war for 45 months.

U.S. Aid Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department is offering $82 million in electronic equipment to Kuwait to upgrade the Persian Gulf nation's to use of U.S.-made Hawk missiles against air attacks.

The package of air defense equipment announced Wednesday in a formal notification to Congress included no Hawk missiles beyond the 200 sold to Kuwait in the mid-1970s. Earlier, the Pentagon had turned down a Kuwaiti request for short-range, shoulder-fired Stinger missiles.

Kuwait's arsenal of Hawks is now deployed in four batteries in the oil-producing country, which has felt threatened by Iran because of Kuwait's support for Iraq in the Persian Gulf War.

The Defense Department said the sale would " demonstrate the continuing willingness of the United States to support the Kuwaiti effort to improve the security of the country and thereby increase the stability of the Persian Gulf region."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mostly lower today after recording its third straight loss in the previous session.

Airline and steel issues were among the early losers, while several mining and oil-service stocks rose.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 14.35 so far this week, edged up 0.77 to 1,117.49 in today's opening half-hour.

But declines jumped out to a 3-2 lead over advances among all New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Stocks remain under pressure from the prospect of higher interest rates, although some economists are hopeful that the economy's expansion will slow in the coming weeks, reducing the threat of rising lending charges.

Still, many institutional investors are said to be selling certain stocks as they revamp their portfolios in preparation for the end-of-the-quarter re-ports.

On the NYSE today, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/8 to 16 3/4. Chrysler gained 1/8 to 25. General Motors fell 1/4 to 63 3/4 and Burroughs lost 1/4 to 52 1/4.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 6.07 to 1,116.72.

Losers led gainers 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index fell 0.57 to 87.58.

Big Board volume slowed to 78.84 million shares from 82.60 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.30 to 198.92.

Court Reinstates Power To Restrict Travel To Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today reinstated the Reagan administration's authority to drastically limit travel by Americans to Cuba.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that the restrictions are justified because they prevent the flow of U.S. tourist dollars to help finance Cuban "armed violence and terrorism in the Western Hemisphere."

Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said, "Cuba also maintains close to 40,000 troops in various countries in Africa and the Middle East in support of objectives inimical to United States foreign policy interests."

The travel restrictions do not violate the constitutional rights of U.S. citizens, Rehnquist added.

"We think there is an adequate basis ... to sustain the president's decision to curtail the flow of hard currency to Cuba — currency that could then be used in support of Cuban adventurism — by restricting travel," he said.

The ruling overturned a May 1983 decision by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that declared the travel regulations illegal and said they may not be enforced.

The high court upheld the Reagan administration's contention that Congress authorized the president to restrict travel to Cuba as part of a broad trade embargo with the Caribbean island nation.

The administration had also contended that its options in dealing with North Korea, Vietnam and Cambodia could be restricted if the appeals court ruling was allowed to stand.

The United States imposed a trade embargo against Cuba in 1963 and most aspects of it were not at issue in today's case.

The current controversy was over Treasury Department regulations issued in April 1982 effectively limiting who may travel to Cuba.

The rules allow visits by those engaged in official travel, close relatives of Cubans, journalists and researchers. Also permitted is travel paid for by the Cuban government or by Cuban organizations.

The regulations were directed against tourists and other U.S. visitors to Cuba who would spend their own money there.

The Reagan administration decision rescinded in part a policy adopted in 1977 by then-President Carter removing restrictions on Americans' travel to Cuba.

The appeals court said that under 1977 amendments to the 1917 Trading with the Enemy Act, Reagan may impose the travel restrictions only if he declares a national emergency and lets Congress vote on the validity of such a declaration.

But the Supreme Court today said the appeals court misinterpreted Congress' intent in amending the 1917 law.

The court said that a "grandfather" clause in the amendments preserved the powers of the executive branch to restrict Cuban travel.

Rehnquist said the president's authority to regulate all property transactions with Cuba, including travel-related transactions, was in force at the time the amendments were enacted and therefore was preserved.

The restrictions were challenged by professors at Harvard and Boston universities, other hopeful tourists and organizations seeking to improve understanding and relations with Cuba.

They said the administration's linking of American tourist dollars to Cuban adventurism was farfetched and too tenuous to justify restraining the freedom to travel of U.S. citizens.

They also said that the 1977 amendments to the Trading with the Enemy Act were intended to reduce presidential power over American travel to Cuba.

Rehnquist rejected the claim by the would-be travelers that only a dire national emergency would justify curtailing travel to Cuba.

They "apparently feel that only a Cuban missile crisis in the offing will make area restrictions on international travel constitutional," Rehnquist said.

But, he added, "relations between Cuba and the United States have not been 'normal' for the last quarter of a century." And, he said, "those relations have deteriorated further in recent years due to increased Cuban efforts to destabilize governments throughout the Western Hemisphere."

Under such circumstances, the travel restraints do not violate freedom of travel rights protected by the due process clause of the Constitution's Fifth Amendment, Rehnquist said.

He was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, John Paul Stevens and Sandra Day O'Connor.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said the majority demonstrated "utter confusion" over congressional intent.

society from him and do it in the proper fashion."

Defense attorney Jeffrey Miller told the jury, "We have spend several of the most important days in the life of Harvey Green. Harvey Green's life has value ... You're going to have to decide what that value is."

Miller focused on Green's positive attributes in his closing argument. He mentioned Green's military commendations, his cooperation with law enforcement officers and his admission of guilt.

"The act of pleading guilty by Harvey Lee Gree makes a statement. It is a statement of accepting responsibility and giving up rights to a jury trial," Miller argued.

He stated that Green "didn't intend to kill" anyone at Young's Cleaners. "He intended to rob, but I submit to you, he did not intend to kill.

"He doesn't have a criminal mind," Miller continued. "He didn't design to cover up his crime."

Millertold the jury, "Harvey Green has made the biggest mistake in his life, but he has come forward and confessed his guilt. How many people do that?

"There is no way you can know everything about 23 years of a man's life in two days," Miller continued, "just as you can't condemn a man based on two days of his life."

Johnson Draws 30 Days In Jail

Judge James Ragan Wednesday sentenced Raymond Andrew Johnson of Winterville to 30 days in jail on charges of soliciting to commit a felony (an unnatural sex act), and carrying a concealed weapon.

Johnson, 18, of 112 N. Church St., was found guilty of the soliciting charge in District Court Tuesday, and pled no contest to the weapons charge. Ragan found Johnson not guilty of a third charge, loitering.

Johnson was to report to the Pitt County jail at 9 a.m. this morning to begin serving the jail term.

Johnson and three other persons were arrested on soliciting charges in separate incidents May 11 and May 12 as a result of an undercover investigation by the Greenville Police Department's special investigations unit.

The other men are scheduled to be tried July 19.

stead of after the election in November, about repatriating some Cubans detained in the United States after the Mariel boatlift. Castro also agreed to discuss easing visa restrictions to make contact easier between family members in the two countries.

In addition to the 26 Cubans and 22 Americans, Castro agreed to allow a former CIA operative who is no longer in prison to leave the country. Andres Vargas Gomez was being allowed to leave for "humanitarian reasons," Castro said.

Jackson visited the American prisoners at a prison about 15 miles outside Havana. He prayed with them and told them, "We do not come casting judgment about why you are here. That's something the judicial process must handle. You are Americans and you're ours and we're going to take you home to your families."

One man cried and hugged Jackson. Others seemed stunned. Most of them were imprisoned for offenses related to drug trafficking which carries a penalty in Cuba of 17 years in prison.

John Ferch, head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, said most of the Americans had been held for about two years.

Castro said that 18 of the Americans had been tried and sentenced and four were awaiting trial.

Is It Blessing Or Catastrophe?

CHICAGO (AP) — College officials, given license by the Supreme Court to make their own deals in televising football games, are in heated debate about whether the ruling is a blessing or a catastrophe.

Where will the big television dollars go? Will the rich get richer? Will the poor get poorer? Will the major college football powers become weekly fixtures on television?

College football administrators began to face these questions and many more today at a meeting here of the 105 NCAA Division I-A schools, the top football-playing institutions. The session is scheduled for two days, but it could stretch into Sunday before decisions are reached on what to do with the newly awarded freedom.

"What happens in Chicago this weekend could turn out to be history-making in college football," said Wayne Duke, Big Ten commissioner, following the Supreme Court's ruling Wednesday.

Regardless of what the major powers decide in Chicago, officials at many small schools believe the court's decision to strike down the NCAA's centralized controls of football telecasts spells disaster. The NCAA policy guaranteed a share of the television revenue and occasional television appearances for smaller schools.

"I think it's going to hurt college football because there are a lot of schools that depend on that revenue from the NCAA," said Lew Perkins, athletic director at Wichita State.

"Those schools that are attractive and in demand will be helped, and those schools that are not attractive and in demand may not be," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne.

The majority of the I-A schools and almost all lower-division institutions, fearful of unrestrained appearances by the major powers, have cheered on the NCAA in the three-year legal battle. But in a 7-2 vote in an antitrust suit brought by Oklahoma and Georgia, the high court struck down NCAA controls and voided NCAA contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN totaling more than $150 million for the remaining two years of a four-year contract. Every school was freed to make whatever football deal it wants. The ruling does not mean a substantial loss for the NCAA, which derives most of its operating revenue from the basketball tournament.

The expected 300 delegates to the Chicago meeting will be trying to avoid the chaos that most believe would result from an absence of centralized television controls. The NCAA may offer a voluntary plan in competition with one by the College Football Association. And if a new bureaucracy is set up to administer a new national plan, someone must be put in charge.

"Obviously, there will be a lot of scrambling around now," said Jim Tarman, Penn State athletic director. "Nobody really knows what kind of plan will emerge. The worst scenario is that everyone is on their own."

For the television viewer, it probably means more regional games and roughly the same number of national telecasts.

"The quality of football on television will improve," said Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association. Neinas, a central figure in the challenge to NCAA controls, said the NCAA's policy of guaranteeing television appearances for less attractive teams harmed television ratings.

"More of the attractive games will be seen," he predicted.

Others, such as Grambling football coach Eddie Robinson, fear the worst.

"I go with the Constitution and what the Supreme Court thinks, but I think it's going to have a negative effect on the future of Division I-AA, Divisions II and II," said Robinson. "We aren't going to be able to get a piece of the television pie."

ABC and CBS are assured of retaining rights to national telecasts this year under tentative agree-

Pitt Rips Wayne Again

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Maybe it could go down as a moral victory, but to Pitt County's American Legion baseball team, last night's 5-1 win over Wayne County probably didn't mean much.

Oh, it kept the Pitt team in the running — at least in theory — for the regular season championship, but there's not really that much hope.

Wayne County has waltzed through 17 games of the 18 game schedule with only three losses. All three of those were handed them by Pitt County. Wayne has one game left: against Edenton, which has won but once this year.

Pitt County, meanwhile, despite its domination of Wayne, has a 13-4 record with one game left, tonight at Snow Hill. It must win to boost its record to 14-4 and to have any chance.

If it all comes about, Pitt winning and Wayne losing, the two would tie for the title, but Pitt would get top seeding in the tournament which starts July 5.

But don't bet on it happening.

"This was still a good win for us, and it does mean something," Coach Bruce Rhodes said. "It gets us back after a bad outing against Rocky Mount, and it starts us into the playoffs. Tonight's game with Snow Hill is a big game for us too."

Rhodes wasn't that worried about not winning the regular season title. "Everybody is in the playoffs. And I'd just as soon keep playing," he added in reference to the first round. In that first round, the number one team gets a bye, while the rest open play. The second place team — which would appear to be Pitt — will meet the number seven team — apparently Edenton — in the first round's best of three series.

For a few minutes there, it looked like Wayne might break the spell Pitt has held over it, as it scored a run in the top of the first and appeared on the verge of doing more.

But Darryl Edwards bounced back, allowing only a total of three hits in the game — two of those not getting out of the infield. He struck out nine and walked six.

"Darryl did a real good job," Rhodes said. "He kept the ball down and stayed ahead of most of the batters."

Janson Evans opened the game, drawing a walk. Stan Mozingo followed with a double down the left field line and Evans scored when the ball was bobbled on the pickup. Mozingo later moved to third on a passed ball, but got no further. A strikout, a popup and a ground ball ended the threat.

The second hit off Edwards came in the second on a bunt single by Brad Reaves. The only other hit came in the seventh when Sean Sullivan singled off Edwards' glove and reached before the ball could be chased down. No one advanced past first base after the first inning.

For Pitt, all the action came in the first two innings. Three of those runs scored in the first.

Jackie Conway opened, reaching on an error and Toby Fischer sacrificied him up. Doug Coley singled to score Conway and Eric Woodworth singled. Billy Michel also singled, loading the bases. A hit by Mike Kinley brought in Coley, and Traye Fuqua walked, forcing in Woodworth for a 3-1 lead.

Pitt added two more in the second. Conway led off with a single and stole second. Fischer walked but was thrown out at second on Coley's infield grounder. A balk by relief pitcher Glenn Fortner scored Conway and moved Coley to second, and a passed pass advanced him to third. He scored on Michel's single to left.

Pitt threatened in the fifth when Michel walked and Kinley singled with two away, but nothing further occurred. Pitt also advanced men to second in the sixth and seventh but they got no further.

Michel and Kinley each finished the game with three hits for Pitt. "Kinley did a good job with the bat with two strikes and Billy did a good job too," Rhodes said.

They were the only players to collect more than two hits in the game.

Pitt closes out the regular season tonight at Snow Hill at 8 p.m. — going for a win — and hoping for an upset.

Pitcher Suffers Injury To Eye

JAMESVILLE — Rusty Holliday, who led Jamesville High School to the 1-A State Baseball Championship, may learn today whether he will retain the vision in one of his eyes, struck by a batted baseball Friday night.

Holliday, who was 16-0 with the Bullets this past season, has been playing American Legion baseball with Edenton, and Friday night was on the mound when his team faced Snow Hill. A line drive off the bat of Farmville's Nat Norris struck him almost directly in the eye, causing some damage.

According to Jerry Ange, coach of the Jamesville team, Holliday suffered a cracked cheek bone, and possibly other bone damage. A glass contact lens in the eye shattered, but Holliday sustained only a slight scratch from that.

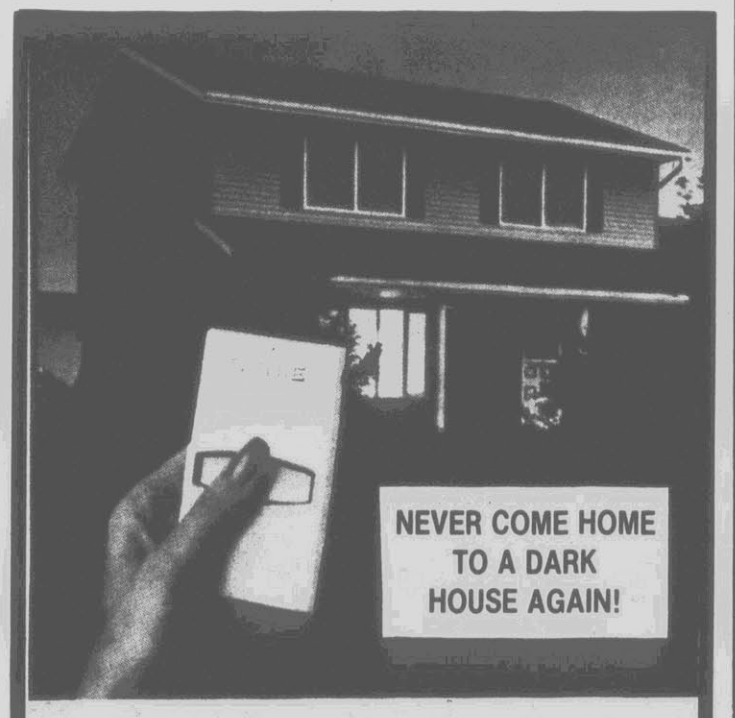

However, the force of the ball striking directly on the eye has caused a great deal of swelling and bleeding into the eye. Ange said that a Washington doctor said that there did appear to be some tissue damage and that surgery was almost a certainty. Ange added that the doctor said it would be some days — and possibly after the surgery — before Holliday would learn whether he would lose vision in the eye. "The doctor said right now, he's say there was a 50-50 chance," Ange said.

Holliday, who compiled a 29-1 record over the past two years with Jamesville, was to return to the doctor today for further examination and a possible decision on surgery.

"Rusty had just signed a grant-in-aid to play baseball at Mount Olive College," Ange said. "I don't know how this well affect his future, but he's maintained a good attitude about the whole thing."

Hall Shows Why Indians Traded

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

The Cleveland Indians have patiently been waiting for Mel Hall to produce. And finally, the young outfielder they acquired in a recent trade showed why his new team was so anxious to get him.

Hall cracked a two-run double in the eighth inning and then belted a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 10th Wednesday night to rally the Indians past the Minnesota Twins 6-4.

"Having him in the lineup has helped the whole club," said Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales of the 23-year-old Hall, whom they got from the Chicago Cubs in a multi-player deal two weeks ago.

Hall, who finished second in the National League rookie of the year voting last season, had not driven home a run in his first six games with the Indians.

But he cracked a two-out, two-run double off reliever Ron Davis in the eighth inning to pull Cleveland into a 3-3 tie. Then, after the visiting Twins scored in the top of the 10th on Randy Bush's sacrifice fly, Hall came through again with his home run, also off Davis, 3-6.

"I told Ronnie to try to get the pitch up-and-away," said Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner. "I guess he tried to, but he got it in the same place as the pitch he hit for the double."

In other American League games, New York rallied past Detroit 5-4, Chicago jolted Seattle 9-7, Oakland trounced Kansas City 9-5, Baltimore held off Boston 3-1, Milwaukee topped Toronto 5-1, and California nipped Texas 2-1.

Hall said he took extra batting practice before the game and worked with hitting coach Bobby Bonds.

"Mainly I worked on getting my hands out front," said Hall, a late-swinger as of late.

He said he enjoyed coming to plate on two occasions with the Indians needing a big hit.

"You get pumped up," he said. "Showtime. That's when you battle. It's a good feeling."

Andre Thornton belted a leadoff homer in the seventh, his 15th, to pull the Indians within 3-1. But Thornton lined out to set the stage for Hall's double in the eighth, and then popped out to leave it up to Hall in the 10th.

"Andy was generous tonight," Hall said.

Yankees 5, Tigers 4

Roy Smalley hit a sacrifice fly to cap a three-run rally in the eighth inning as New York was able to shake up Detroit's bullpen. It was only the second time in 42 games this season that the Tigers had led in the seventh inning and eventually lost.

Carl Willis, who relieved Detroit starter Dave Rozema after six innings, walked Butch Wynegar to start the eighth. Don Mattingly then singled, making him 3-for-4 and raising his average to .349. Don Baylor doubled home one run off Willis, 0-1, and then Doug Bair yielded an RBI groundout to Steve Kemp and Smalley's sacrifice fly.

The Yankees were without Manager Yogi Berra, who is suffering from a viral infection. Coach Jeff Torborg ran the team.

White Sox 9, Mariners 7

Harold Baines crashed a two-run, two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to make a winner of Chicago and reliever Salome Barojas.

But when Seattle left Comiskey Park, the Mariners took Barojas with them, having acquired him in a trade for two minor leaguers.

Baines' 12th homer came off Ed Nunez and landed in the upper deck in right field.

Seattle had scored once in the top of the ninth on Barry Bonnell's RBI forceout to make it 7-7.

Ron Kittle belted a pinch-home run, his 17th, for the White Sox and Dave Henderson homered for the Mariners.

Angels 2, Rangers 1

Texas starter Mike Mason retired the first 19 California batters. But in the seventh inning, he lost his perfect game when Dick Schofield doubled. One out later, he lost his shutout when Doug DeCinces cracked an RBI single.

And in the ninth, Mason got charged with the loss when Mike Brown tripled with one out and Brian Downing hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Tom Henke to produce the tie-breaking run.

California's Mike Witt also pitched well. He left in the ninth inning after a walk and a one-out double by Bobby Jones, the fifth hit by the Angels. Reliever Luis Sanchez intentionally walked Donnie Scott to load the bases, but then struck out pinch hitter Marv Foley and got Curtis Wilkerson on a forceout for his eighth save.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 1

Scott McGregor, shelled in his previous two starts, was in and out of trouble all night in Baltimore. Yet he and the Orioles led 3-0 going into the top of the ninth.

Boston then loaded the bases with two outs and Dwight Evans singled to pull the Red Sox within 3-1 and finish McGregor. Sammy Stewart was summoned to face Jim Rice with the bases still loaded. Stewart earned his second save by getting Rice on a flyout.

A's 9, Royals 5

Oakland scored in every inning but the eighth, helped by two home runs from Dwayne Murphy and solo shots by Davey Lopes, Rickey Henderson and Dave Kingman, who leads the majors with 20. Kingman finished with three RBI.

The A's took the final three games of the series in Kansas City after suffering a team-record 16-0 loss on Monday night.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 1

Milwaukee scored five runs in the first inning and breezed the rest of the way to complete a four-game sweep of visiting Toronto.

Robin Yount, Ceil Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons delivered consecutive RBI singles as the Brewers raked Blue Jay starter Jim Clancy and reliever Jim Acker.

Chuck Porter, 6-3, went five innings for the victory and Tom Tellmann went the final four for his first save.

WTBS Set To Make Deals

ATLANTA (AP) — The Supreme Court decision freeing colleges to make their own deals to televise their football games opens the way for WTBS-TV to get back into the college football business.

The Atlanta UHF station, available via cable in more than 30 million households nationally, concluded a two-year contract with the National Collegiate Athletic Association last season.

But the U.S. Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the NCAA's control over television contracts violated federal laws, saying in a 7-2 decision that schools had the right to peddle their own football games.

"This is not an unexpected decision," said Mike Oglesby, director of public relations for WTBS, which is owned by Ted Turner.

"For the last eight months, Terry Hanson, our director of sports, has been traveling around the country, exploring the possibility of having games" on the station.

Oglesby said the station already has made three bids for college games.

"Bid No. 1 is with Notre Dame for their six home games.... Bid No. 2 is with the Southeastern Conference for a game-of-the-week type. And Bid No. 3 is with the CFA (College Football Assocation) game of the week," Oglesby said.

And he said the station may make other offers.

Oglesby called Notre Dame the "America's team of college football." WTBS already broadcasts most of the games of the National League's Atlanta Braves, also owned by Turner and billed as "America's Team" by the station.

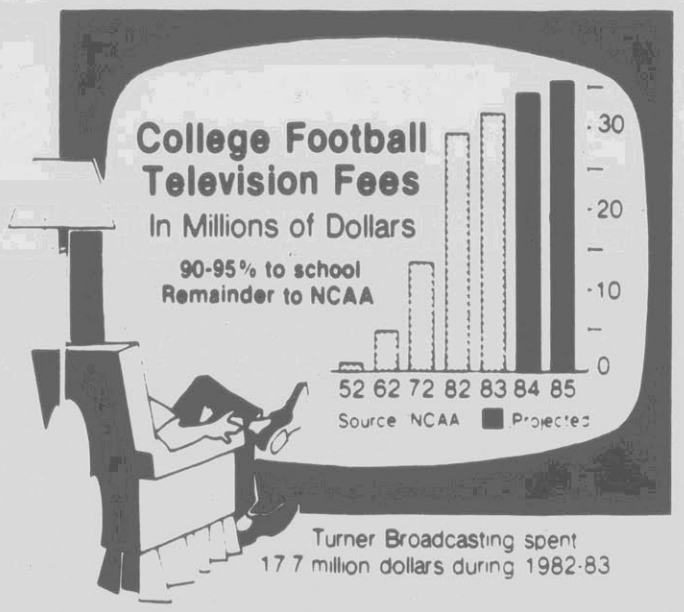

In addition to the Braves, Turner recently announced the station had reached agreement with the National Basketball Association to be the only cable outlet for the league's games.

Oglesby said the station was not trying to replace the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network — which Turner recently tried to buy — and the USA Network as the main cable sports outlet, "but with Ted Turner at your helm, sports is your middle name."

He said sports make up about 12 percent of the station's programming and he did not expect college football to increase it beyond 15 percent.

One of the arguments put forward by those who favor NCAA control of television was that smaller schools would be overlooked in the rush to grab the big-name schools and conferences.

Oglesby agreed that was possible, but said, "they can perhaps now make a deal with a local cable system" to show games.

TV Decision...

ments reached earlier by the CFA and Big Ten and Pac-10 schools. The CFA and the Big Ten-Pac-10 coalition has hammered out a tentative plan along the lines of the NCAA program, with one major exception:

An "open window" period will be set aside, probably during the evening, when schools and conferences may market their games. The afternoon time slot on Saturdays, under the tentative agreement, will be reserved for national telecasts.

Many believe the court's decision might also accelerate what seems to be gathering sentiment for a college football playoff, although the soonest a playoff could be adopted would be 1985.

"It's a mess. It's not a good thing," said Bob Karnes, athletic director at Drake. "Basically, the TV networks are going to be the winners. What they're paying $280 million for now they'll maybe get for $25 million to $30 million because they'll get the schools to bid against each other."

It's his feeling that "The poor will get poorer, but the rich will not get as rich as they would like."

Osborne agreed with those who believe the decision could allow "the rich to get richer and the poor to get poorer."

"This could result in more financial imbalance," which would damage the game, Osborne said.

For years, small-school administrators have maintained that an imbalance in the football television situation could even hurt their enrollment and state appropriations.

"It's going to affect our enrollment. It's going to give them (the big powers) more advantage in recruiting, more financial advantage," said Robinson, the winningest active college coach. "Those of us wemendous disadvantage."

William S. Banowsky, president of the University of Oklahoma, predicted change will come gradually.

"It will not affect us a great deal this fall," he said. "Whatever we do in 1984, we'll do it a little differently in 1985, and a little more differently in 1986. It will be a refining process."

Network officials declined comment until they studied the opinion. But they have made it clear the price for national football telecasts will drop substantially if they are made to compete with regional or conference games.

There is also some question whether the coalition between the CFA and the Big Ten and Pac-10 will be able legally to put together a national package.

"That's one thing we're most worried about as a result of this," said Duke. "If the NCAA's plan is illegal, who's to say any national plan won't be legally vulnerable?"

Babe Ruth League

Everett's.....6
Planters Bank.....5

Everett's Pest Control got only one hit, a two-run double by Jason Lee, but it used 14 walks to pull out a 6-5 victory over regular season champ Planters Bank in the second round of play in the Babe Ruth League post-season tournament last night.

The win boosts Everett's into the third round of the winner's bracket, facing Wachovia Bank on Saturday at 1 p.m. Planters drops into the losers' bracket and will face Brown & Wood at 8 p.m. Friday night.

Planters pushed over one run in the first inning and added a second in the second. They made it 3-0 with a run in the fourth and got another in the fifth. In the bottom of the fifth, Everett's came up with three, and while Planters got one in the sixth, Everett's got two, tying the game at 5-5.

It stayed that way until the eighth when Everett's got the winning run. Joel Pierce walked as did Brent Moore and Roosevelt Taft, loading the bases. Then, with one away, Axel Smith drew another walk, forcing in Pierce with the game-winning run.

Eric Jarman, who took the loss, fanned 13, but the walks got to him. He also led the Planters hitting with two.

Wachovia Bank.....16
Pepsi-Cola.....4

Scott Davis and Travis King hit back-to-back home runs to pace Wachovia Bank to a 16-4 romp over Pepsi-Cole in the second round of the Babe Ruth League's post-season tournament last night.

Wachovia will now face Everett's Pest Control in the next round of the winners' bracket in the double elimination event, Saturday at 1 p.m. Pepsi falls into the losers' bracket, taking on Coca-Cola at 6 p.m. Friday night.

Wachovia pushed over six runs in the first inning for all it needed. Terry Warren led off with a single and stole both second and third. He scored when Dallas McPherson singled. Davis singled, and an error on the play let McPherson score. King singled to score Davis. Kenny Barnes singled in King and Mike Kelly got a hit. David Tinglestad singled to drive in both Barnes and Kelly.

Wachovia added one in the third, and got five more in the fourth. In that inning, Davis hit a two run homer and King followed with a solo shot. Four more crossed in the fifth.

Pepsi scored twice in the first and got single runs in the third and fifth.

Davis led the Wachovia hitting with three, while Warren, McPherson, King, Kelly and Lee Eakes each had two hits. Tim Bland held Pepsi to only two hits.

Exchange.....4
Pepsi-Cola.....0

Kevin Sugg hurled a no-hitter at Pepsi-Cola as the Exchange gained a 4-0 victory in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

Sugg struck out ten and walked four along the way to the no-hitter.

Exchange got only two hits off Bill Blizzard, but they proved enough.

Exchange got all it neeeded in the first, scoring once. Maurice Battle walked and stole his way around to score.

Exchange added one each in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

No one had more than one hit in the game.

Coca-Cola.....3
Union Carbide.....0

Coca-Cola kept its fading championship hopes alive in the North State Little League yesterday with a 3-0 victory over Union Carbide.

Coke, now 14-3 on the year, can take the title with a victory over the Lions on Saturday — but only if the Lions upset Sportsworld today. A win by Sportsworld, 15-2, would wrap up the title for that team.

Walter Gatlin hurled a one-hitter for Coke against Union Carbide in getting the shutout victory. He struck out nine and walked two. The lone hit came in the first inning as Andre Hopkins got a single.

Coke scored the winning run in the first inning, getting one run. Gatlin walked with two away and advanced on a wild pitch. He scored on a double by Derrick Hines.

Coke added the other two runs in the fifth.

Gatlin had two hits to lead Coke to the win.

Bullets Finish Fourth In Cup

Jamesville High School was the lone area school to place in the top ten of its respective classification in the 1983-84 Wachovia Cup race.

Phillies Shell Met Rookie Hurler

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia Phillies, who had not faced New York's rookie strikeout artist Dwight Gooden in 11 previous meetings between the National League East leaders, seized the opportunity and shelled the 19-year-old Met sensation.

While the record will show that the Phillies beat the Mets 5-1 Wednesday night night to move into first place, they didn't come away unimpressed with Gooden.

"If he continues that way he's going to be a great one," said Phillies' Manager Paul Owens. "He has a good fastball, breaking pitches and poise."

"He's one of the hardest throwers I ever faced," said rookie outfielder Jeff Stone, a .471 hitter whose triple drove in the first run in Philadelphia's decisive five-run third inning. "But he didn't get the fastball in enough on my triple."

Gooden, second in the league in strikeouts to Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles, surrendeded six hits in the fifth to absorb his fifth loss in 11 decisions. He left for a pinch hitter in the sixth after striking out six batters to raise his total to 113.

"I didn't think I threw that badly," Gooden said. "Sometimes you have good stuff and guys hit you anyway. Sometimes you get by without anything. It's all part of the game."

The fifth-inning blitz made a winner of Marty Bystrom, 4-4, who has labored in virtual obscurity since posting a 5-0 record in the stretch drive for the 1980 world champion Phillies. He was touched for seven hits in 6 2-3 innings, struck out three and walked none. Larry Andersen finished up to gain his second save.

"It was a big game. Everybody was talking about Gooden so much. I just tried to relax and throw strikes," said Bystrom, who retired the first 12 batters.

Elsewhere, it was Chicago 8, Pittsburgh 7; San Francisco 14, Cincinnati 9; Atlanta 6, Houston 4; Montreal 4, St. Louis 2, and Los Angeles 5, San Diego 4.

Philadelphia's Juan Samuel, who had three hits, ran a routine single to left field into a double with one out in the fifth and scored when Stone tripled. Then Von Hayes singled through a drawn-in infield to score Stone.

Hayes stole second before Mike Schmidt walked, and they executed a double steal before scoring on Tim Corcoran's single. Garry Maddox and Ivan DeJesus added run-scoring singles.

The Mets, who have scored just nine times in Gooden's five losses, got their only run in the sixth on Mookie Wilson's fifth home run of the season. They have scored one run in each of Gooden's last two starts.

Dodgers 5, Padres 4

Valenzuela struck out 11 batters to raise his Gotal to 120, but barely won the game after pitching 8 2-3 shutout innings. Valenzuela, who gave up seven hits, retired 14 out of 16 hitters in one stretch to even his record at 8-8.

Steve Garvey singled to start the Padre uprising. Carmelo Martinez doubled for one run and Graig Nettles singled for another to finish Valenzuela. Reliever Tom Niedenfuer hit Champ Summers with a pitch and Bobby Brown followed with a two-run single before Niedenfuer got his 11th save by fanning Kevin McReynolds to end the game.

Steve Sax singled home the Dodgers' first run in the fifth inning. Franklin Stubbs and Dave Anderson had run-scoring hits in the sixth and the Dodgers scored two unearned runs in the seventh on Steve Yeager's single after Nettles made his second error of the game.

Cubs 8, Pirates 7

Chicago's Ryne Sandberg, who drove in three runs with his 10th homer and a single, led off the 11th inning with a double off Rod Scurry, 1-4, and scored the winning run when Scurry walked Jody Davis with the bases loaded.

A run-scoring double by Gary Matthews broke a 6-6 tie in the eighth inning, but the Pirates tied it in the ninth when Jim Morrison, who hit his first home run earlier, tripled home Tony Pena.

Davis hit his 13th homer for the Cubs and Lee Mazzilli hit his third for Pittsburgh.

Tim Stoddard, the fourth Cub pitcher, worked two scoreless innings to up his record to 5-1.

Giants 14, Reds 9

Chili Davis slammed a pinch-hit grand slam homer to cap a five-run fifth inning that reclaimed the lead for San Francisco, which earlier blew a 5-0 bulge.

Cincinnati bunched five hits in a six-run fifth, scoring four unearned runs following an error by center fielder Dan Gladden. Randy Lerch, 4-1, who got the final out of the inning, was the winner in relief of Mike Krukow.

The winning rally started on Al Oliver's leadoff double off loser Bob Owchinko, 3-4. Oliver advanced on a passed ball and Dusty Baker walked with one out. Joel Youngblood's single tied the game and Bob Brenly walked to load the bases.

Charlie Puleo relieved and Davis, given a reprieve when Wayne Krenchicki was unable to catch his pop foul in windy Candlestick Park, slammed a 2-2 pitch into the right-field seats for his 11th homer and a 10-6 lead.

Braves 6, Astros 4

Pascual Perez won for the eighth time in 10 decisions with ninth-inning help from Donnie Moore, who collected his sixth save. Atlanta took advantage of a two-run error by Houston right fielder Terry Puhl to build a 4-1 lead in the first.

Gerald Perry hit his third home run on the first pitch to open the third against Mike Scott, 4-5. Chris Chambliss, who had an RBI single in the first, added a run-scoring double for the Braves' final run in the third.

Perez allowed eight hits and retired 11 in a row during one stretch, but left when Mark Bailey walked and Enos Cabell singled with one out in the ninth. Moore retired Bill Doran and Craig Reynolds to end the game.

The Astros broke on top in the first when Reynolds hit his fourth homer of the season.

Expos 4, Cardinals 2

Bill Gullickson, 4-5, pitched 8 1-3 innings and retired 14 straight batters in one stretch en route to his fourth victory in his last five decisions. Jeff Reardon, the third Montreal pitcher, got the last two outs to pick up his 11th save.

The Expos took a 2-0 lead in the first inning against St. Louis rookie Ralph Citarella, 0-1. Mike Stenhouse doubled home one run and Doug Flynn followed with an RBI single.

Montreal's Pete Rose played in his 3,308th game to tie Carl Yastrzemski for the most games played in history.

Darrell Porter had three hits for the Cardinals.

DUNN JUMPS HIGH

DENVER (AP) — T. R. Dunn, the crack guard of the Denver Nuggets, seems to play basketball on a trampoline. He has led the Nuggets in rebounds the last two seasons, although he is only 6-4, hardly the desired height for rebounding.

In the 1983-84 season, Dunn came down with 574 rebounds, only 13 less than the total for the great Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers. Abdul-Jabbar is 7-2, 10 inches taller than Dunn.

Fishing Tournament Was Successful

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

The first annual River Park North Fishing Derby "was very successful and will be bigger and better next year," said Howard Vainright, supervisor of the park.

Co-sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Deapartment and the Outdoor Shop, the derby was held Saturday at the 365-acre park on Mumford Road. Vainright said over 100 fishermen tried their luck at catching bass and bream in the spacious four-pond park.

Prizes were awarded for catching the first tagged bass and bream, and for catching the largest fish. The competition was divided into categories for children, teenagers and adults with prizes and trophies given in each area.

The tournament began at 8 a.m. when Vainright read the rules and gave the starting signal. Each participant then scurried off with his favorite bait to find a suitable fishing hole. The deadline for fish entrees was 4 p.m.

Within 35 minutes, Jim Hardin of Greenville had caught the first tagged bass and won a 10-foot john boat. However, those who were optimistic about catching the first tagged bream for a $50 gift certificate were disappointed at the end of the day. Although at least 20 bream had been tagged and scattered in different ponds, none were caught.

Other winners in the tournament were:

Adult Division

First Place Bass — Dexter Tart — 3 pounds, 5 ounces.
Second Place Bass — Jim Hardin — 2 pounds, 1 ounce.
First Place Bream — Wade Faulkner — 9 ounces.
Second Place Bream — Robert Britton — 7 3/4 ounces.

Teenage Division

First Place Bream — Hunter Clark — 6 1/2 ounces.
Second Place Bream — Dennis Tart — 5 3/4 ounces.
•Note: No bass were caught in this division, so prizes were divided between bream winners.

Children's Division

First Place Bream — Shawn Futrell — 8 ounces.
Second Place Bream — Kevin Rogerson — 8 ounces.
•Note: No bass were caught in this division, so prizes were divided between bream winners.

Catskills: Haven For Fly Caster

ROSCOE, N.Y. (AP) — To the devout disciple of Izaak Walton, dreams of Nirvana go something like this: Morning mist swirls upward as sunbeams dance through hemlock boughs; a pair of mergansers zips by on stiff wings; a fifth of Glenlivet waits on the mossy bank; and a wily trout rises to a Quill Gordon deftly dropped on a sparkling Catskill pool.

The streams and rivers of the Catskill Mountains, about 100 miles north of New York City, are renowned among those whose hearts quicken at the flash of the silvery scales.

It is upon these magical waters, they say, that the first American dry fly was cast a century ago — and countless thousands have been cast ever since.

So beloved is this territory that more than $9 million has been spent since 1979 to amass private land preserves, to stave off the threat of development. And about 2,000 people are working to build a public flyfishing museum on 34 acres near Roscoe, a village at the confluence of the renowned Beaverkill and Willowemoc rivers.

The largest private conservation effort is being made by Laurance S. Rockefeller, grandson of the late oil baron and philanthropist, John D. Rockefeller. He owns most of the land along the upper Beaverkill, where he has a farm and a recently-renovated 19th-century inn.

More than 200,000 fishermen spend nearly $80 million a year pursuing their pasttime on Catskill rivers, according to state figures. And more than $9 million of that is spent on the Beaverkill alone.

To the non-fishing traveler, this is pretty country, but not spectacular. Most of the rivers are more like broad, rocky brooks.

But as Austin M. Francis writes in his recently-published book, "Catskill Rivers: Birthplace of American Fly Fishing," there is a certain irresistible mystique about Catskill streams.

"You come to fish them," writes Francis, "and you are taken in not only by their natural beauty and wildlife, but also by the realization that you are joining in a procession of anglers who have created one of the richest traditions in flyfishing history."

On 100 acres of forest and meadow rising from the Beaverkill just down the road from Rockefeller's Beaverkill Valley Inn, is the home and flyfishing school of Lee and Joan Wulff.

Nature Discoveries In Early Summer Days

A WINDSONG OF GRASS . . . Stiff, slender blades of a swamp grass in Hoffman National Forest in an area between Kellum and Belgrade rustle its gentle music each time a breeze sweeps the blades together. The lyrical growth pattern of the grass calls to mind paintings of grasses by Oriental artists.

SILKY BLOSSOMS . . . of mimosa trees glisten in summer sunlight. By stretching the imagination a bit, the flowers could be said to resemble birds of paradise ruffling their feathers, or even a modern fanciful hairstyle of the type made popular by Phyllis Diller and contemporary rock stars.

CULTIVATED ROSES . . . constitute a favorite flower garden for homes, parks and other landscaped areas. The cream-colored rose and bud shown here were photographed at a community cemetery in Lowland.

Suddenly, spring days have passed as the latter days of June usher in summer months in eastern North Carolina. Gone are the gentle pastel colors and the near infinite varieties of wild and cultivated flowers of spring, the temperate freshness of cooler days.

June is the first month of true Southern weather, when soaring temperatures direct the thoughts of most people to refreshing hours in shady places or lazy hours on one of North Carolina's spacious beaches.

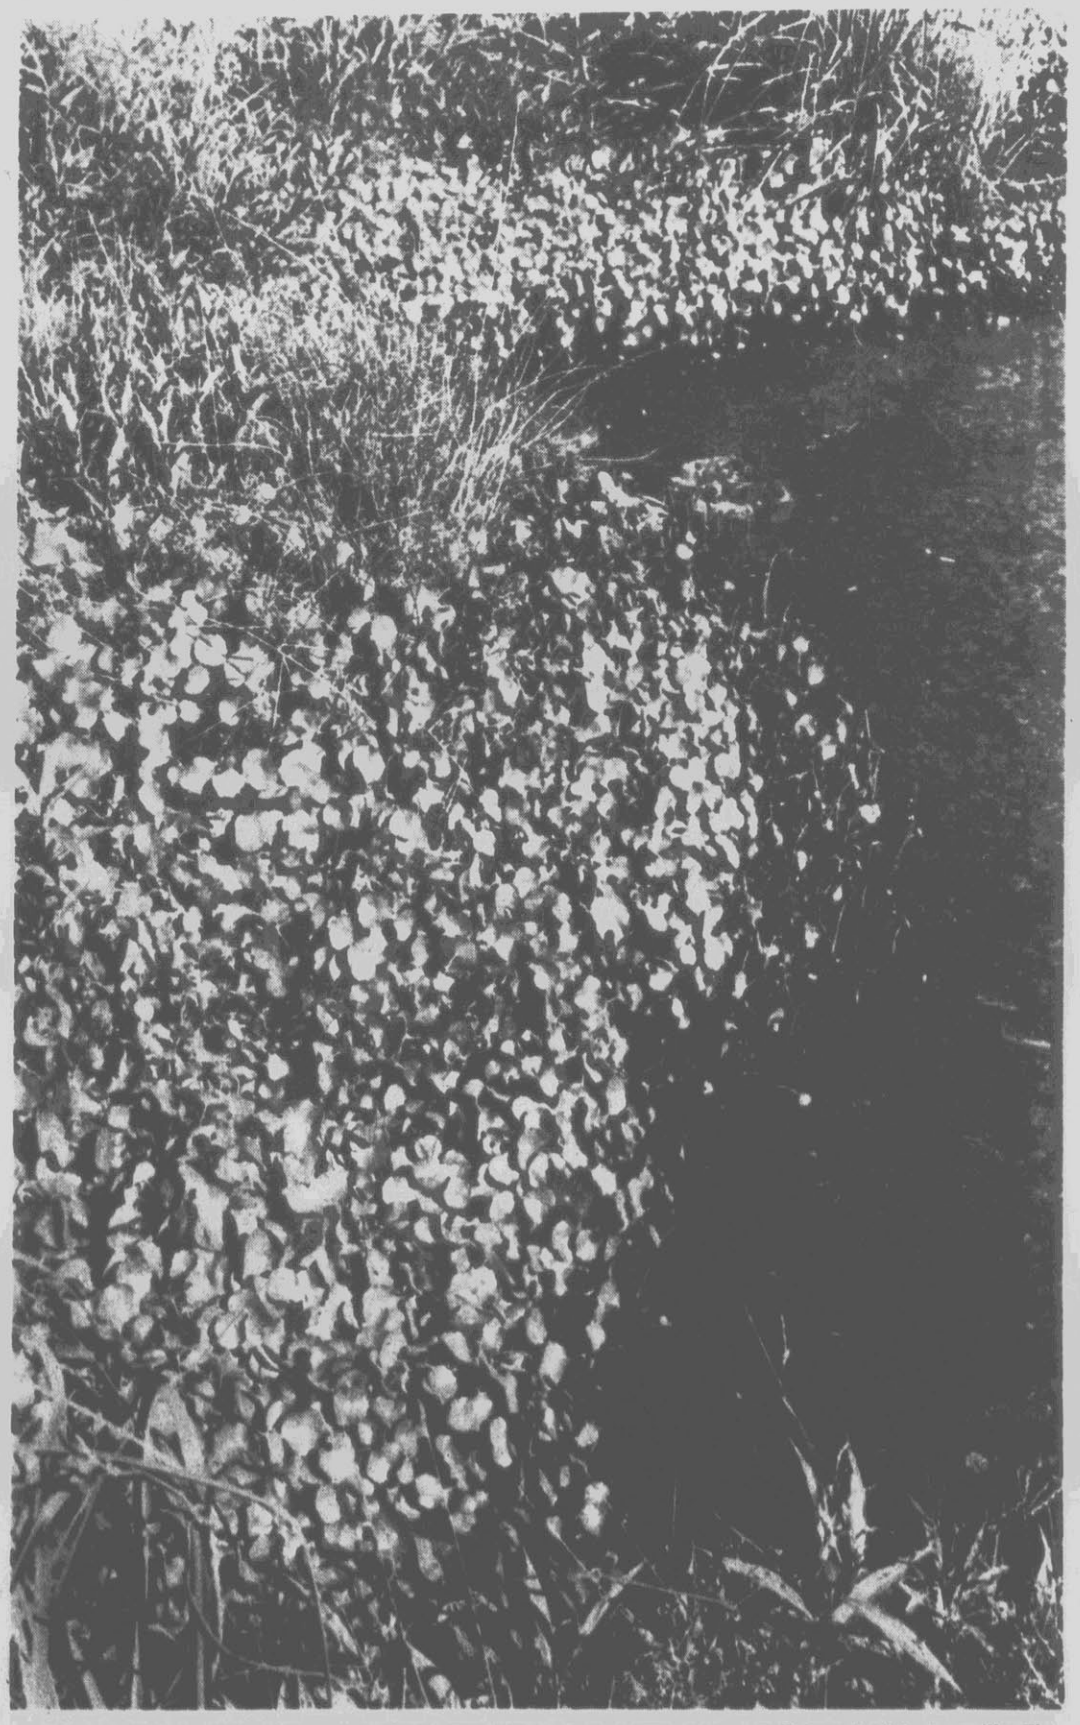

Yet, early summer is a good time to devote to discovering facets of nature in evidence during this time — tight new cattails in damp areas; new growths of bracket fungus spreading over the surface of decaying wood; a bewildering array of North Carolina swamp and field grasses before they turn from green to gold; the large, showy flowers of mimosa, devil's riding sticks and elderberry; a new population of colorful butterflies and dragonflies; and in gardens, the brilliance of roses, geraniums, and hollyhocks.

Each segment of a season in North Carolina reflects a changing face in nature. Early summer in eastern North Carolina has an ambience all its own.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

A BOUQUET OF STUMP FLOWERS . . . An interesting range of shapes and colors are found in this group of bracket fungus breaking down the dead wood of a stump in an old cemetery in Bayview. The leathery, flower-like shapes are in colors of cream, tan, olive green, brown and black touched with orange and red.

AN ABUNDANCE OF GREEN . . . A thick growth of the coin-shaped leaves of dark green pennywort borders a small pond of brackish water in Hoffman National Forest at a point a few miles north of Jacksonville. The green of the pennywort leaves contrast with the yellow-green surface of the stagnant water.

With only 16 boards left to play in the final of the Trials to select the U.S. team for the 1984 World Bridge Olympiad, the Brachman team led Kaplan by 45 IMPs. This was the third board of the final session. The auction shown is that of Richard Pavlicek, North, and Bill Root, South, for the Kaplan team.

Once the club fit was discovered, Pavlicek took a shot at a grand slam in clubs. West led the king of spades, and try as he might declarer had no way of coming to 13 tricks. He ended up taking five trump tricks, four diamonds, a spade and two hearts for down one. Since in the other room the Brachman team had settled in six clubs, the Kaplan team lost 14 IMPs on the deal and, with them, any chance of a comeback.

At first it might seem Pavlicek's leap to the grand slam was a touch of the high life, dictated by the state of the match. Before being too harsh on him, however, let's look at what would have happened had declarer's length in the minor suits been reversed, as was quite likely from the bidding. Suppose that South held:

♠ 6 4 ♡ J 6 ◇ K Q 8 6 3 ♣ A Q J 5

Assuming normal distribution, declarer would win the spade lead, draw trumps in three rounds, take his five diamond tricks to discard dummy's two spades and, after cashing the ace-king of hearts, he would be able to crossruff the last two tricks to bring his total to 13.

This hand highlights the trick-taking potential of the 4-4 fit. When declarer holds five trumps in his hand, he can score five trump tricks. If we reduce his holding to four opposite four, he can still make five trump tricks by ruffing in each hand. Long side suits can then be used to discard losers.

Arnold Helping Son's Hospital

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Veteran singer Eddy Arnold is lending his famous voice to an Alabama hospital that helped his son survive brain damage from a car accident 13 years ago.

Arnold went to Birmingham, Ala., to make a television-radio commercial Wednesday for Lloyd Noland Hospital, where his son Dick spent 7½ weeks being treated for critical head injuries.

"The hospital helped me, my son and my family," Arnold said before leaving. "I'll never forget them."

Dick Arnold, 35, had been out of the University of Alabama just two weeks in 1971 when he was hurled into the car windshield near Bessemer, Ala. He recovered and now works in the records section for Metro Nashville government.

The 66-year-old Arnold has sold more than 60 million records during the past 40 years. His biggest hits include "Make the World Go Away," "Anytime," "Bouquet of Roses," "Cattle Call" and "You Don't Know Me." In May, he received the "Pioneer Award" from the Academy of Country Music during a nationally televised awards ceremony in Los Angeles.

War to End All Wars

World War One began and ended on June 28. Gavrilo Princip shot Archduke Ferdinand of Austria-Hungary and ignited the war on that day in 1914. Exactly five years later, the Treaty of Versailles was adopted. The treaty cut Germany's size by an eighth, its farm land by a sixth, and its population by 6,500,000. The first German officials sent to sign it resigned when they learned the terms of the agreement, and the U.S. never ratified this harsh treaty.

DO YOU KNOW — What prototype of the United Nations did the Allies establish after World War One?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Albert Einstein developed the Theory of Relativity.

FCC Drops Regulation For TV News And Commercials

By NORMAN BLACH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television viewers don't need to worry that programming will change because federal limitations on commercials and requirements for news shows have been repealed, broadcasters say.

"We don't anticipate TV stations making any changes at all because of this," said Edward O. Fritts, the president of the National Association of Broadcasters, referring to the Federal Communications Commission's decision Wednesday to repeal minimum requirements for news and local programming along with a 16 minute-per-hour cap on commercials.

"The universe of TV stations out there has long performed at levels superior to what the FCC expected and they're going to continue to serve their communities in the future as they have in the past," he added.

Fritts also described as proper another decision by the commission Wednesday, dismissing the idea of drafting rules to control loud commercials on television. The agency said it didn't know how it could enforce such rules, and Fritts asserted the industry is addressing the problem on its own.

"I think there are fewer loud commercials now than there were a few years ago," Fritts said. "Broadcasters are sensitive to this because if a commercial is too loud and objectionable, people will tune away from it."

Members of the FCC, led by chairman Mark S. Fowler, joined broadcasters Wednesday in saying the TV deregulation order would not affect programming. Studies by the commission staff show TV stations are uniformly airing much more news and local programming than the FCC had specified and are also carrying fewer commercials than they could, Fowler said.

The action was immediately condemned, however, by a host of public interest groups and Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., the chairman of the House communications subcommittee. They contended the FCC had abandoned its legal responsibility to ensure that all TV stations serve the public interest by meeting certain minimum standards.

Unlike the radio industry, which won the same type of relief from the FCC three years ago, "there has not been the same specialization among TV stations," said Beverly Chain, the director of the United Church of Christ Office of Communications.

CBS Wins Most Daytime Emmys

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS dominated the 11th Daytime Emmy Awards show by taking honors in eight major categories, but ABC's long-running "General Hospital" was cited as the season's best daytime serial for the second time.

Larry Bryggman of CBS' "As the World Turns" and Erika Slezak of ABC's "One Life to Live" won the best actor and actress awards Wednesday. Justin Deas of "As the World Turns" was best supporting actor, and Judi Evans of CBS's "The Guiding Light" was best supporting actress.

"General Hospital," the top-rated afternoon soap opera for the past five seasons, last won the Emmy for outstanding drama in 1981. "The Guiding Light" won in 1982 and "The Young and the Restless," also on CBS, won in 1983.

In other major awards, CBS' "The $25,000 Pyramid" won for outstanding game show, the syndicated "Woman to Woman" won for best talk show and the syndicated "Merv Griffin Show" won for outstanding variety series.

CBS' "Captain Kangaroo," starring Bob Keeshan, tied with NBC's "Smurfs" for outstanding children's entertainment series. On Tuesday, CBS announced that "Captain Kangaroo," a network fixture since 1955, would not return next year. Keeshan is trying to take the show to public television or syndication.

Of the major awards, CBS won eight, ABC four, syndicated shows four and NBC one.

Third-rated NBC, which is disputing the Emmy voting procedures, did not participate in the awards. An NBC spokesman said that meant NBC officials did not join voting panels nor supply information to the Emmy organization.

Other winners included ABC's "The Great Love Experiment" for entertainment special; CBS' "Dead Wrong: The John Evans Story" for informational special; "ABC Weekend Specials" for informational series; Bob Barker of CBS' "The Price Is Right" as outstanding game-show host; Gary Collins of the syndicated "Hour Magazine" as top talk-show host; Merv Griffin as best variety-show host, and Dick Van Dyke of CBS' "The Wrong Way Kid" as outstanding performer in children's programming.
