Court Upholds Pitt Ruling On Gaskins

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey has upheld a decision by the Pitt County Board of Elections which certified Charles Gaskins as the winner of the Democratic nomination for a seat on the Pitt Board of Commissioners.

Bailey issued his ruling in Wake County Superior Court Friday afternoon on a petition for judicial review filed by Jim Rouse, a candidate for the Greenville Township seat on the Board of Commissioners, appealing the decision of the county elections board.

Rouse, who ran second behind Gaskins in the May primary, claimed in his petition that the elections board's action in excluding votes for an ineligible candidate in figuring the majority "is not supported by any evidence or competent evidence of record."

Rouse petitioned the court to order a new primary election for the Greenville seat or to declare that a new primary election for the position be held.

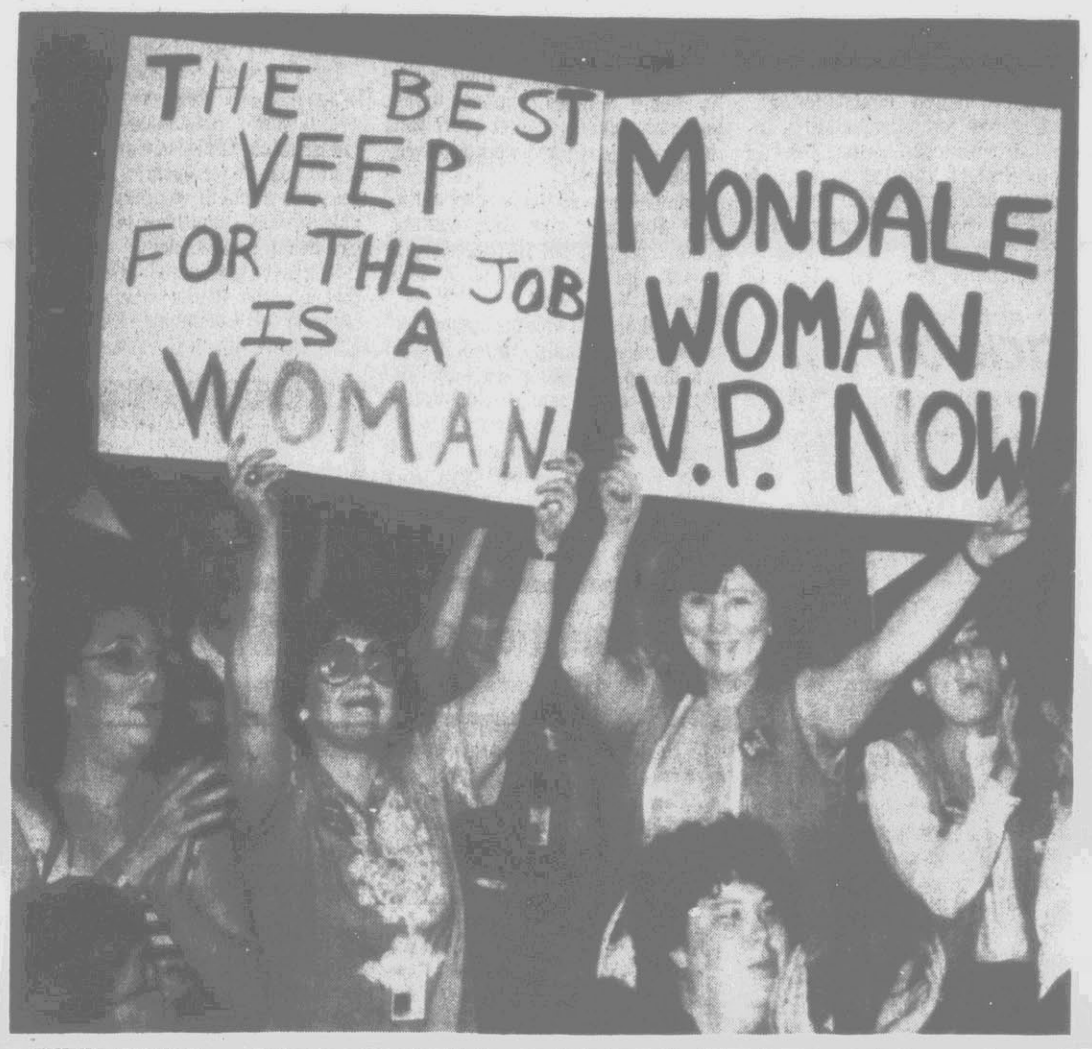

Frank Grooms, whose name was on the primary ballot, was disqualified on the day of the election when it was determined he was not a resident of Greenville Township.

The Board of Elections, in a decision that was later upheld by the State Elections Board, ruled that votes cast for Grooms should not be counted. The board's stance on the matter was based on an opinion by the state attorney general.

Rouse had called for a runoff with Gaskins, contending that votes cast for Grooms should be counted in figuring an overall majority. If the board had counted Grooms' votes, Gaskins would have fallen short of a clear majority and Rouse would have been entitled to a runoff.

Jim Wallace of the attorney general's office said the staff has advised county elections boards for over 20 years on similar matters and no one had appealed the local rulings to the courts during that period.

"It's a relief to us to get the issue before the court and to have some type of ruling," said Wallace. "Naturally we are glad that Judge Bailey upheld the (Pitt) board's decision."

President Kidnapped

Bolivian Military Stages Futile Coup

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Right-wing military officers kidnapped President Hernan Siles Zuazo Saturday in a bid to trigger a coup, but search teams found them in a La Paz warehouse and freed the president unharmed after intense negotiations, officials said.

"The kidnappers, dressed in civilian clothes, were holding a pistol to his head when we found him, and threatned to kill him," said Jorge Crespo, foreign affairs undersecretary.

Crespo said he and Finance Minister Oscar Bonifaz negotiated for 15 minutes with the kidnappers at the warehouse to gain the president's release 10 hours after he was taken from his bedroom at the presidential palace. Siles Zuazo became Bolivia's first popularly elected president in 18 years when he was installed in 1982, ending military rule.

In Washington, State Department press officer Joseph Reap said embassy reports in La Paz indicated the situation in La Paz and other major Bolivian cities was calm with "no reports of violence or public disorder."

The State Department said U.S. Ambassador Edwin G. Corr, acting "on instructions from Washington," had offered public assurances of "the support of the United States for the constitutional order in Bolivia."

Also in Washington, a meeting of the Council of the Organization of American States was hastily summoned. The United States joined 20 other nations in unanimously condemning the abuction and expressing "support to Bolivia's democratic institutions and to all democracies in the Western hemisphere."

Government leaders in Spain, Argentina, Colombia and Peru had issued statements before Siles Zuazo was freed, condemning the kidnappers and stating their concern for the president's safety.

Siles Zuazo spoke of six men holding him captive at the warehouse, but government officials said as many as 60 soldiers and policemen may have been involved in the plot.

Commuting Time Isn't All Wasted

By ANGELA LINGERFELT

Most Greenville residents who commute to their jobs in other towns say they welcome the drive because it gives them the opportunity "to think about the day ahead before arriving at work," but at the same time, it has its drawbacks.

Rosemary Hunt, who rides 45 minutes to an hour each day to Caswell Center in Kinston, said she likes the ride most of the time, but some days she doesn't.

"In the mornings, I have time to think about the coming day and in the evenings, I have time to wind down. But some days the thoughts of driving aren't good. Sometimes I wish I could get to work in five minutes," she said.

Don Hall, a veteran commuter to the Beaufort County Department of Natural Resources in Washington, said he does not like driving the distance at all.

"I don't exactly enjoy it and I wish I were closer to work. It gets old after a while," he said. Hall has been commuting to Washington for six years.

Several commuters find that carpooling is an enjoyable alternative to driving the stretch

Mondale Holds Back 'Yes' In Talk To NOW Delegates

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, facing chants of "run with a woman, win with a woman," told feminist supporters Saturday he has already made history by considering a female vice presidential running mate and didn't commit himself beyond that.

After the expected Democratic presidential nominee addressed a raucous convention of the National Organization for Women, he met with three congresswomen and NOW President Judy Goldsmith. Afterward, they said they would support Mondale regardless of his choice.

"We think the best means to defeat Ronald Reagan is to have Vice President Mondale as our candidate and a woman on the ticket," said Rep. Mary Rose Oakar of Ohio. "But whatever happens, we're fully supportive of defeating Ronald Reagan. He's the enemy."

Ms. Oakar and Reps. Barbara Kennelly of Connecticut and Barbara Mikulski of Maryland said they had urged Mondale to choose Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York — a Roman Catholic with strong support among professional politicians.

"I said all along that I didn't want the best man to be my vice president — I just wanted the best," Mondale said in his speech. "I am considering a number of women not because they're women, but because they're among the best. And if I choose a woman it will be because she is the best."

He added: "Considering women is a first — but it is not the last. We have broken the barrier. Never again will the way to high office be barred to women. And never again will a nominee make headlines by considering women; next time, headlines will be made only if women are not considered."

Jackson Says Demos May Still Be Fighting

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson urged Democratic National Convention delegates Saturday to "vote, not by candidate, but by conviction and by conscience," as he warned of continuing fights over justice in the party despite compromises last week on the issue.

The presidential candidate sent unmistakable warnings that he might stage a series of disruptive floor fights in San Francisco, telling supporters they should ignore party rules if necessary to raise their issues there.

And he said his "Rainbow Coalition" has earned a voice in the

Jellyfish Hit Bogue Swimmers

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Beach authorites say they may have to temporarily ban swimming on Bogue Banks after more than 30 swimmers were stung Saturday by Portuguese man-of-war jellyfish.

"I'm going to go out and check it in the morning, and if necessary we'll ban swimming (Sunday)," Atlantic Beach Police Chief Wade Pelletier said in a telephone interview Saturday. "It's a bad situation. And it will be just as bad tomorrow."

Pelletier said at least 33 people had been stung by the jellyfish. Two of the victims attacked on Bogue Banks were being treated at Carteret County General Hospital for "toxic shock," according to medical personnel at the Atlantic Beach Med Center, a private emergency treatment clinic.

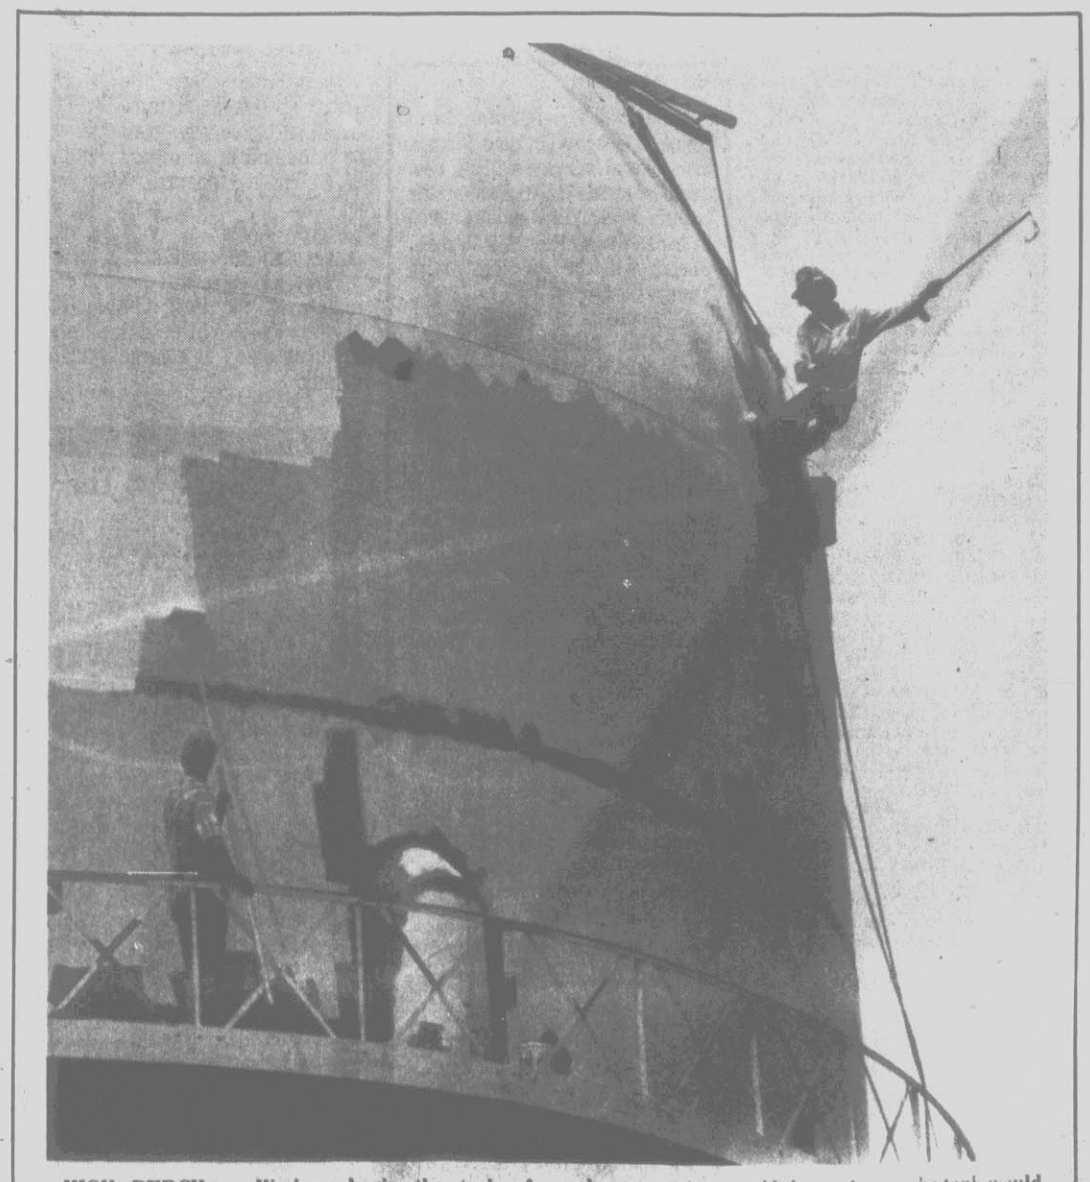

Officials at both the hospital and the med center refused to identify the victims or say what their conditions were.

Pelletier said the man-of-wars were being pushed ashore by moderate winds from the south. Bogue Banks is near Cape Lookout and faces south, which makes it more vulnerable to jellyfish washing ashore.

"We usually don't have any trouble with them until late July or early August," he said.

Pelletier said the man-of-wars were as large as 12 inches across, while others were only a few inches in diameter.

"But both will sting you," he said.

Police Use Gas To Disperse Rally For Year-Long Strike

CLIFTON, Ariz. (AP) — Riot-equipped police, saying they were attacked with a Molotov cocktail, fired tear gas canisters into a crowd at a rally Saturday marking the first anniversary of a bitter strike by copper unionists.

The incident came after carloads of copper workers were pelted with rocks in a renewal of the violence that has torn this mining community throughout the strike against Phelps Dodge Corp.

"Somebody (in the crowd) threw a Molotov cocktail," said DPS Director Ralph Milstead of the order to fire tear gas.

A hail of rocks followed and more tear gas was fired.

One strike supporter took off his clothes and walked naked into the phalanx of gas-masked officers, onlookers reported. He and several others were arrested.

About 75 Arizona Department of Public Safety officers blocked U.S. 666, effectively cutting off the southern part of town.

DPS Capt. William Reutter told the crowd before the confrontation grew violent that they were an unlawful assembly. He said they had to disperse because their march permit expired at 5 p.m. The melee broke out at 5:41 p.m.

The rock-throwing earlier Saturday came as hundreds of unionists gathered for a strike rally.

No workers were injured and no one was arrested in the earlier rock throwing, said Sgt. Allan Schmidt, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety, which had roadblocks on both sides of this town of 4,200 people.

Tornado Relief Forms Processed

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina authorities are busy processing thousands of applications received from victims of the 14 counties declared disaster areas after tornadoes swept through the state in late March.

The deadline for victims of the March 28 tornadoes to apply for federal assistance was June 15. Already, hundreds of people have been helped in their requests for aid, ranging from temporary housing to grants to low-interest housing loans.

A total of 517 families from 1,301 applications were helped through the temporary housing program, according to Russ Edmonston, spokesman for the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Of those, 262 were placed in federally owned mobile homes, Edmonston said. Another 19 are living in government-owned housing, he said.

Of the remaining qualified applicants, 188 families are living in private property and the federal government is paying their rent. Another 48 families continued living in their homes, which received minimal damage and were repaired with federal funds.

Edmonston said the balance of the 1,301 applicants met their housing needs through other resources, such as insurance and moving in with relatives.

A total of 1,751 victims applied for individual and family grants, which provide up to $5,000 in funds that do not have to be repaid, Edmonston said. The grants are awarded only after victims' applications for all other types of aid have been processed and their records show all other sources of financing have been exhausted.

alone and most agree that it cuts expenses at least in half.

Brenda Flint, who has commuted to the social services department in Tarboro for eight years, feels that carpooling is "better than riding by yourself. There is someone to talk to and keep you awake on sleepy days. It also helps gas wise,"

Ms. Flint said she drives twice a week for her three-person carpool, which saves her over half of what she would normally spend on gas.

Ms. Hunt said her experiences with carpooling over the years have helped her make friends and remarked that one of her closest friends was made carpooling. However, she said the wrong person can make the upcoming day miserable.

"Carpooling is worth it if you're riding with the right people, but not worth it if you're not. It can be miserable if you're riding with a moody or quiet person. Depending on the person, you can get in a postive or a negative mood for the rest of the day," Ms. Hunt said.

Hall feels that many carpools begin "uneasy" until the co-riders become more acquainted with each other. "Once you get to know everybody, you get along pretty well," he said.

Donna Caverly, who travels to Eagle Brand Snacks in Robersonville each day, said she carpools occasionally but prefers to drive alone.

"I'd rather drive by myself. That way if I'm in a bad mood no one has to put up with it. Besides, we all tend to come and go at different hours so it doesn't work out," she said.

Most local commuters said they rarely have car trouble during their daily trips, but sometimes have problems driving in the snow.

"We don't get to leave early enough when it snows and it's a bad drive back to Greenville. We've been really lucky for the past eight years though — we haven't had any accidents," Ms. Flint said.

choice of the Democratic vice presidential candidate by Walter F. Mondale.

"If I make the most sense, then vote for me. No matter who paid for your ticket, remember who sent you there," Jackson said at the headquarters of PUSH, the black self-help organization he founded. "When we get to the convention, you must vote, not by candidate, but by conviction and by conscience."

Warning of a lack of enthusiasm in the fall, Jackson seemed to brush aside the compromises last week — agreed to by his aides — that left the fight over rules for a commission to be deal with sometime after 1984.

"If you want us to vote in '84, we want justice in '84," he said.

"We must let the convention decide this and the nation observe it. The convention has the power to make any decision it wants to make," Jackson told the convention of his "Rainbow Coalition" late Friday night.

He made clear he will make demands of Mondale, the likely presidential nominee, when the two meet next Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo.

One will be a timetable for the end of apartheid in South Africa and U.S. actions to encourage such moves, he said, but there were others as well.

"The Rainbow has earned the right to help determine the vice president nominee. We have earned the right to help determine who will be the secretary of state. And we have earned the right to help determine who will be the secretary of defense," Jackson said Friday night.

And he warned that his supporters are not automatic Mondale voters in November.

"They think the votes I earned are automatically going somebody else without serious negotiation?" he said. "We're not begging. We're bargaining."

Sunday Opinion

Party's Unison Is One Subject For Discussion

The Democratic Party now has its unity. Or does it? Democrats still have three presidential candidates — although Jesse Jackson has become more of an international candidate in his travels to the Mideast and now Latin America — and there are still challenges to the party's convention procedures.

Gary Hart and Walter Mondale met over coffee and bacon recently, then announced jointly that all is well. Hart left in smiles, went to New England and resumed the kind of talk that is aimed only at getting the nomination for himself.

Jackson has made it plain, from day one, that he will be in there to the end.

It would appear that Mondale, at least, is at peace. He apparently has the delegate vote necessary for nomination, and at this point seemingly can relax his vigilance against attacks from Hart and Jackson and concentrate on finding a running mate. And he's doing that in grand style, a style that some justifiably have compared to that a king would use in calling in his subjects for choice favors.

It has been a long time since all of the Democratic hopefuls started pre-announcing and finally announcing their candidacies more than a year ago. Now, it seems all so futile.

Mondale picked up his convention support on a popular vote that gave him about 500,000 votes more than Hart collected across the nation. Does that make Mondale the mandated choice? Jackson's share of the delegates falls far short of his share of the popular vote. Is that the way nominees are chosen?

And still to come is the nominating convention, with some delegates forced by their state's laws to vote a certain way on the first or second ballots but then free to vote the way they choose. What's the use of sending delegates? Just say North Carolina votes 20 for Mondale, 15 for Hart, 5 for Jackson, and let it go.

And with all that, many of our public schools still went ahead and dropped civics as a standard course for all students. Perhaps civics didn't include the words "party unity."

Only The State Knows For Sure

Most of us probably would be saddened about a proposal urging the state to repeal Scuffleton's charter — that is, we would be concerned if we had known Scuffleton had a charter.

The little Greene County community, which runs along the banks of Little Contentnea Creek and the Pitt County line, has been in existence since at least the mid-1700s, or so the story goes. The name, according to the same story, came from spats — scuffling, so to speak — within the congregation of the local church.

According to the folks in Raleigh, Scuffleton became a town a few years later. But just when it ceased to have a government is a different matter. No one seems to know.

Scuffleton's neighbor to the west, Maury, has only recently — in relative terms — given up the governmental ghost. But it, too, is scheduled to be chopped off the list of chartered towns.

The one consolation in all this, of course, is that the communities will be there still — along with other once-thriving "towns" such as Old Sparta, Gold Point, Atlantic, Graingers and Deep Run. Only the state will know the difference.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

A man and his wife and four children were being checked out at the cash register of a local store.

Among the purchases was a baseball bat for one of the little boys.

The clerk eyed the bat and then, with a twinkle in her eye, told the youngster, "When your father gets out of line, you can tell your mother where the baseball bat is."

The man winced and said, "That thing's not coming in the house."

The little boy, having never seen a baseball bat used for anything but hitting baseballs, looked puzzled by it all.

Well, there was a time when popular comic strips depicted the nagging wife as hitting her wayward husband over the head with a rolling pin. Unfortunately rolling pins aren't used all that much anymore in modern kitchens so that method of punishing husbands seems to be out.

Of course, it once was in fashion to show the wife hitting the husband over the head with a frying pan. That was in the days when the wife had exclusive possession of the frying pan. Now the husband might be using it as much as the wife.

Modern women might not need a baseball bat, or a rolling pin or a frying pan. Some of them take up karate or other methods of defense. The husband who gets out of line today could just get a karate chop.

Then again maybe the best thing to do between modern couples is simply to talk it out.

Want to put your life and limb on the line on the highways?

Simple, try driving the speed limit of 55 miles per hour on U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson.

Your columnist set the cruise control on 55 mph one day last week. Soon the monstrous grill of a tractor rig loomed in the rear view mirror. The tractor-trailer passed me and was quickly far down the road.

A few miles farther and I was wedged in between two trucks. The feeling was, move along or be overrun.

The 55 mile per hour signs were along the highway just as they are along all highways of the nation, but you can conform at your peril.

Then there is the other side. I came back by way of N.C 42 to Pinetops. On that road the thought seems to be how to run less than the speed limit. The road is fairly winding and it is difficult to get around the slow moving vehicles and you can bet the yellow line will appear in your lane when you slow for a car ahead of you.

There's a consolation, though. At times you can spot work under way on the new U.S. 264. Perhaps there, there will be a lane for all speeds.

Nose In The Trough

James J. Kilpatrick

SCRABBLE, Va. — The electric power that lights the lamp on my desk comes from a rural electrification cooperative. A quarter of a mile away from my place, at Jimmy Falls' hog lot, is a line from the investor-owned Potomac Edison Power Co. From time to time I think about that hog lot. Willy-nilly, because a consumer cannot escape from his assigned turf, I am a subsidized customer of the Rappahannock Electric Co-op. I have my nose in the federal trough, and I don't like it.

My guess is that many of the 10 million co-op consumers feel exactly the same way. Not one in 20 of these consumers has any idea of the raid on the taxpayers that now is being urged in their. name. What is being proposed in Congress is a kind of legislative and financial shell game in which nearly $8 billion worth of REA notes would be made to disappear. The bill ought to be defeated out of hand.

Once upon a time, a convincing social and economic case could be made for the REA. Back in 1935 fewer than 5 percent of American farms had electricity. There was no profit for private utilities in serving the boondocks. The REA co-ops, financed by 2 percent and later by 5 percent loans, changed the face of the nation. It was a great idea, and it worked.

Today the REA is a solution without a problem. Ninety-nine percent of our farms are served by electricity. Most of the 1,000 cooperatives, with perhaps 50 exceptions in Alaska, Arizona and the Dakotas, are getting along splendidly. Two audits last year by the inspector general of the Department of Agriculture found that 110 of 117 co-ops under study actually were in stronger financial condition than their neighboring private or municipal utilities.

We think of an "REA Co-op," and the thought evokes an image of farmhouses nestled in a pastoral landscape. The vision is a vision of overalls, apple pies, contented cows, and a power line that brings to these humble abodes the pleasures of electric lights, flush toilets, self-cleaning ovens and Monday night baseball on TV. All this is true of many, perhaps most, of the co-ops.

But the co-ops have grown to be big business. Collectively they have assets of nearly $16 billion. At least 54 co-ops have more than half their customers in standard metropolitan areas; another 150 are "rural" in name only. Some co-ops sell most of their power not to farm families but to large industries. The Duncan Valley Co-op in Arizona, for example, sells 95.4 percent of its power to copper mines. In Kentucky, the Henderson-Union Co-op's biggest customer is Anaconda Aluminum. The Moon Lake Co-op in Utah sells 80 percent of its power to Chevron Oil. My own little co-op in Virginia sells 58 percent of its power to large commercial and industrial consumers.

Given these facts, I submit there is no reason under moon or sun to continue the REA program. My local co-op borrows money from the Treasury at 5 percent. Potomac Edison must go to the private market at 15 percent. What have we country boys done to deserve this special privilege?

The whole outdated, unnecessary business should be financed through the co-ops' own National Rural Utility Cooperative Finance Corp. As a less desirable alternative, the co-ops' rate of interest should be raised to 9 or 10 percent. That would still be less than the 13 percent the government is paying on other long-term notes, but it may be all the political situation would accommodate. At 9 percent, the typical residential consumer would pay two cents more per day for his power.

Get us out of the trough! These subsidized REA loans are wrong in principle — and wrong in principal, too.

Anti-Terrorist Plans Proposed

Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The good news is that terrorism is declining in the United States.

The bad news is that while evidence of a terrorist network grows, the world's democracies are still groping for ways to form their own network against violent groups that have struck at such disparate targets as Pope John Paul II and Israeli school children.

"The time has come for all democratic countries to join together, in an appropriate forum, to take practical and coordinated steps to combat international terrorism," the Jonathan Institute conference said in a closing statement last week.

Various speakers, including Secretary of State George P. Shultz, former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel and Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., suggested various ways the democracies might coordinate intelligence and other resources to counter terrorism.

There was considerable sentiment, for instance, for going on the offensive. Shultz said governments opposed to terrorism ought to do a better job of infiltrating terrorist groups and be willing to take "appropriate preventive or pre-emptive actions."

Defense Minister Moshe Arens of Israel, whose country has had to cope with the Palestine Liberation Organization for 20 years, said "to exclude the option of taking the offensive is as suicidal in the case of terrorism as it would be in any other form of warfare."

And yet, it would have been impossible to forge a consensus on a plan for joint action at the three-day conference and none was attempted.

Here, at home, countering terrorism raises serious constitutional questions. The Reagan administration's package of anti-terrorist legislation, particularly bills to list terrorist organizations and to make supporting them a crime, is meeting stiff resistance on Capitol Hill.

A leading liberal, Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, has said the list measure would "trample on our human rights" and is "a throwback to the McCarthy era."

Moynihan, while proposing at the conference that the United States join with other countries to form "a special agency devoted to stopping the spread of international terrorism," registered his concern about some aspects of the worldwide campaign against terrorism.

"Terrorist incidents," he said, "must be addressed through lawful procedures and due process, lest the terrorists win by inducing a kind of counterterrorism."

At the same time, there evidently is no way to make society, or at least the democratic variety, completely secure against terrorists.

Robert Kupperman, a scholar and national security consultant who served in the Johnson and Nixon administrations, urged dealing with terrorism "in non-hysterical ways."

While Kupperman advocates reinforcing the defense of major security installations, he said "we've got to recognize we're going to take some losses."

The decline in terrorism in this country was noted by FBI Director William Webster. He reported only five incidents, and none fatal, so far this year. If the rate holds up, 1984 will record a new low — far better than the 29 in 1980.

"This shows law enforcement investigations with proper intelligence can prevent terrorist acts from occurring," Webster said. "We have a good handle on terrorism in the United States."

Dunks

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — The most impressive slam dunk seen in this town during 1984 wasn't made by any Tar Heel, Wolfpacker or Blue Demon. It came miles away from the hardcourt of Reynolds Auditorium in the appropriations room of the Legislative Office Building.

The dunkers were the six or seven men who make up the legislative leadership. The dunkees were the other 163 or so legislators who sat by passively while the dunkers jam-slammed a $590.2 million supplementary budget for 1984-85 right down their throats.

The leadership pushes the rank-and-file around every year, especially in the short budget sessions of even-numbered years. But several veteran legislators said the out-and-out gall of the slam jam this year was worse than they'd ever seen. The leadership put the budget before the membership — sometimes known as the "legislative lambs" — and told them to swallow it whole, or else.

In late May, the Appropriations Committee began meeting even before the Legislature came into session. Committee members arrived to find a package of supplementary budget items all ready for them. Several members grumbled privately that it looked like someone had already decided what the state's "surplus" would be spent on.

Over the first few weeks of the June session, the items were all discussed and it was determined that there was $41 million more in spending requests than in money to spend. So the leadership told the lambs to go home and think about ways to cut the package.

The leadership met secretly somewhere and decided how to cut the $41 million. When the June 19 committee meeting opened, Presto!, all the decisions had been made. Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, committee chairman, allowed some discussion of the package but ruled that anyone wanting to cut or add anything either had to come up with the money for new spending or with a way to spend any money they'd saved.

Two items were discussed. First, Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, complained about an unexplained decision to cut a $1.6 million appropriation to raise the salaries of the lowest paid state workers — people who earn a wage that rests below the poverty line. Other legislators joined her.

Then Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, rose to oppose a principals' training program which he said was a waste of money. Better to spend it, he said, on raising the salaries of those low-paid employees. All of a sudden, it looked like the leadership's package could be cut up. Sens. Wilma Woodard and Joe Johnson, D-Wake, asked Watkins for time to look for cuts that would offset the pay raise they wanted. But Watkins said a vote had to be taken that morning. Then Sen. Woodard outfoxed Watkins by calling for adjournment, thus buying herself four hours to politick.

Later that afternoon, the committee returned and approved the leadership's package without change. A deal was cut with Johnson and Sen. Woodard and some money will be found to pay for their pay raise. As one legislator said, the leadership "can't afford to lose a battle in (committee), to lose on something on the surface. They can afford to compromise and they had to because they knew we had the votes."

Public Forum

To the editor:

A few weeks ago, local and area blacks gathered at York Memorial Church to heal and bandage severe wounds created by the gubernatorial runoffs in the opposing camps. Another purpose of this meeting was to create a greater unity among blacks through progressive and harmonious efforts emphasizing total involvement and community concern.

Following a barrage of speeches by concerned citizens, statements of facts aroused deep concern and involvement such as (1) black representation on city and county school boards does not reflect the black population; (2) black representation on decision-making boards is very low; (3) local governments, boards and commissions have been and continue to be run by the majority population; (4) in the establishment of city-county governments, blacks and minorities have been systematically excluded from the governmental process; (5) boards, etc., and other governmental subsystems have not adhered to an affirmative action policy or plan, and (6) how do decisions of the County Commissioners affect blacks since there is no representation (black)?

These are just a few concerns.

I can appreciate the concerns expressed at this meeting and I, therefore, see a need for greater unity to correct these ends. I am, therefore, committed to peaceful, progressive and harmonious efforts to sit at the table of brotherhood and discuss these concerns with the proper sources. I praise the political courage and willingness of Jesse Jackson to seek formulas to solve the problems and tension of the world. Now join me as we attempt together to do the same in our city and county.

I, therefore, solicit the help of all city-county organizations, congregations and citizens to resolve these many items of concern through progressive efforts.

Johnny Wooten, Chairman
The Black Coalition Movement

To the editor:

Our City Council is to be commended for "trash-canning the garbage tax!" However, I feel that only half of the battle is won. The taxpayers should know that Parks and Recreation will gobble up the equivalent of 6 cents of the 7 cents per $100 tax increase. Their operating budget was increased by $187,294 (a 21 percent jump). In addition, they are to receive $250,000 for a Nature Center at River Park North. On top of that, they are to receive $47,000 more under capital improvements. That's a total of $484,000 in new money going to them in ONE year!

Our football team has to "beg" for a stadium to play in. Our performing artists (music, drama, etc.) don't have an auditorium to practice or perform in. And yet, Greenville is going to get a Nature Study Center, whatever that is ... Now wouldn't that $250,000 be better spent on an auditorium at our high school? Or on our new fire station?

Parks and Recreation's 1984-85 operating budget is over $1 million (over 12 cents of your property tax dollar). Why can't our City Council say "NO" to this $250,000 Nature Center? That move alone would save the taxpayers 3 cents of the planned 7-cent increase in our tax rate.

Citizens of Greenville, wake up! Or the next thing you know, you'll be paying $300,000 for a golf course at the old landfill site! Yes, you read right: Parks and Recreation wants to build a nine-hole golf course at the old landfill for $300,000. They are really taking our new slogan (Greenville Has It All) seriously, aren't they?

Randy Martin
Greenville

To the editor:

When I was a young girl in high school I remember that now and then all of us students had to go into our auditorium for about 30 minutes, for our principal to give us a speech and we were asked to sing the song called "America the Beautiful." Now that I am 70 years young, I have been trying to put the pieces together as to why our times, attitudes and actions just don't fit this song any more. What is happening to you, America?

Where has the love, unity and happiness gone to? I feel now, for what time I have left, that I can appreciate this America for its beauty and freedom. What can I do to keep you beautiful, America? May God continue to bless you, because I love you, America.

Mondale May Turn To Hollings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Will Walter Mondale pick a Southern running mate?

Democratic party chairmen from the region urged him to do just that at a meeting at Mondale's Minnesota home last week. They tried to bolster the long-standing, sometimes questioned political axiom that presidential tickets should have a geographical balance.

"We did not mention any names to the former vice president," said Richard Lodge, Tennessee's Democratic party chairman. "But we stressed a general, very strong desire that a Southerner be on the ticket."

Lodge said, however, that most of the chairmen would be happy with Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Arkansas Sen. Dale Bumpers, Florida Gov. Bob Graham or South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings.

Other names mentioned include Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, Virginia Gov. Charles Robb and Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia.

Many of those can be stricken from the list of possibilities, however.

Graham is said to be more interested in running against Sen. Paula Hawkins in 1986. "I am not a candidate for the vice presidency. I am not interested," he said in Tallahassee last week.

Hunt is certainly not going to abandon his quest for the Senate against Jesse Helms to run with Mondale.

Nunn said he told Mondale operatives last week he, too, was not interested. Robb withdrew his name and recommended Mondale pick a woman.

Of the others, the best odds are probably with Bentsen, the chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. However, there are those who question whether Bentsen could even deliver his home state to the Democrats, considering President Reagan will also have a Texan on the ticket in George Bush.

Bumpers is also a favorite of many observers, but he may be perceived as the second liberal on a left-leaning ticket. Whether Bumpers can appeal to conservatives in the Deep South may be a question Mondale won't risk asking in November.

Mrs. Collins has less than a year's experience in her job and is not well known nationally. Her odds would have to be considered poor.

There's one Southerner who truly seems to want the job, even after he said repeatedly he'd go to Mexico and fight extradition if it were offered. Hollings would join the Mondale ticket if the offer comes, said Mike Fernandez, the senator's press secretary.

A radio report by CBS anchorman Dan Rather lit the phone lines in Hollings'office last week. Rather reported he was told by an unnamed source that Mondale had already made up his mind and it was Hollings. What made the radio commentary so intriguing was that Rather said he was quoting the same source who told him correctly in 1976 that Mondale would be Jimmy Carter's pick.

Rather said he didn't go with the Mondale story then because he couldn't confirm it. But this time, he said he was airing the source's story as "speculation."

"The basic rationale for Hollings is that Hollings could, unlike Bentsen, certainly carry his own state and perhaps help carry other states in the South," said Fernandez. "He is respected by and is a close friend of Jesse Jackson."

Fernandez went on to say that Peatsy Hollings and Joan Mondale are already tennis buddies. No problem there.

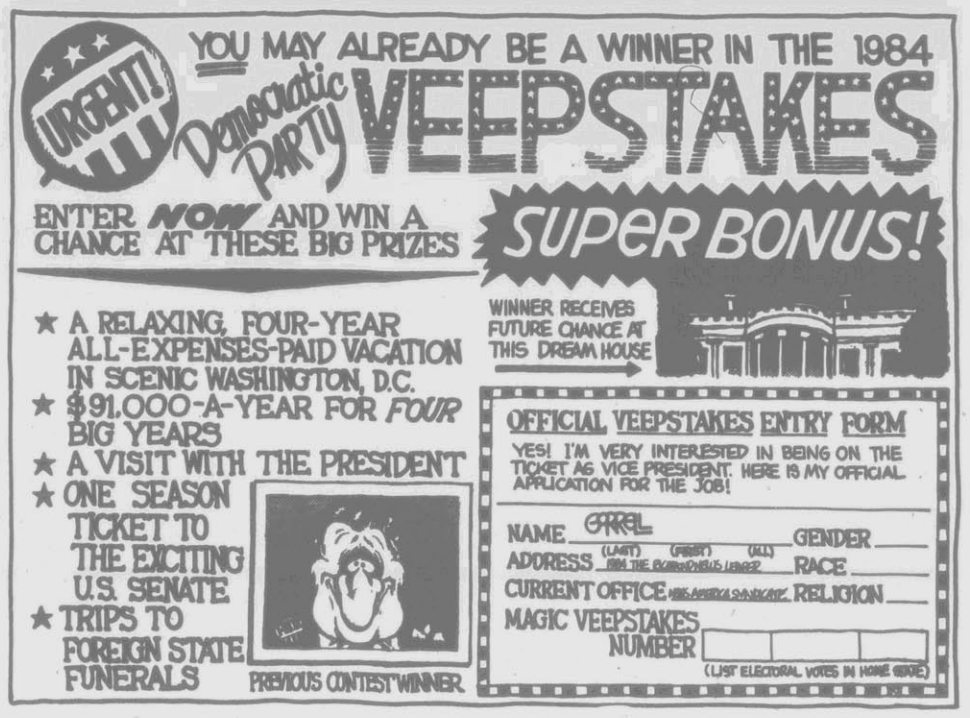

The Hollings camp doesn't think their man will be hurt by the fact he endorsed Gary Hart after Hollings' own presidential campaign folded. They think Hollings' conservative stance and his folksy, humorous style on the campaign trail would be an asset to Mondale.

Lodge likes that aspect, in particular.

"Hollings or Bumpers would bring one thing to the ticket that would be very attractive — a strong and pleasant personality ... somebody who is fun to listen to and says what he means."

So if Mondale wants to offer "the other Fritz" a trip to Minnesota to talk about the job ...

"Well, I haven't been getting invited to many places these days, but I think I would go," said Hollings.

Reagans Previewed GOP Ads

The Reagan-Bush Campaign Committee's first $2 million worth of television commercials went on the air without pre-broadcast testing, except for a private audition by two special viewers: Ronald and Nancy Reagan.

To save money, Reagan-Bush leaders declined to test the spots by the thorough but expensive method perfected by pollster Richard Wirthlin. Before they aired, however, the "it's-morning-in-America" commercials were viewed by the Reagans in the privacy of the White House living quarters. When a tear welled up in the president's eye, no doubt remained that the commercials would run.

Wirthlin's post-broadcast polls suggest a public reception less enthusiastic than that of the Reagans, which might give credence to the need for pre-broadcast testing. However, the answer by Wirthlin's critics in the campaign is for pollster Robert Teeter to preside over strategy for the next set of commercials.

U.S. Treasurer Katherine Ortega was selected as Republican keynoter only after she promised presidential aides to work hard at improving her speaking style prior to the August convention in Dallas.

Party insiders were split between U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole for keynoter, a job earmarked for a woman this year. But Michael K. Deaver, the powerful White House deputy chief of staff, wanted not only a woman but a Hispanic.

The problem was that presidential aides learned of Ms. Ortega's deficiencies as a speaker. With campaigns building for Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Dole, Ms. Ortega's selection had to be announced quickly. So, the White House won from her the commitment that, using video tape and expert coaching, she would turn herself into a first-class convention speaker.

The reason no markup of the defense appropriations bill has been scheduled in the House appropriations subcommittee and won't be any time soon is the fact that the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Joseph Addabbo, is fighting for his political life in the New York Democratic primary Sept. 11.

The 12-term congressman could lose his Queens district, now half-black, to an impressive black challenger: Simeon Golar, a wealthy real estate developer with wide experience in New York City government and politics. Golar is riding the coattails of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who carried 63 percent of the vote in Addabbo's district.

Two conservative Southern Republican stalwarts on the House Ways and Means Committee — Reps. Bill Archer of Texas and W. Henson Moore of Louisiana — engaged in a shouting match behind closed doors that some witnesses thought just missed fisticuffs.

At issue was the old congressional bugaboo of seniority, especially annoying today to junior members of the House Republican minority.

Moore is 10th in seniority out of 12 GOP members on Ways and Means but one of the tax-writing committee's more involved members. Complaining that only three House Republicans would sit on the Senate-House conference to decide the final version of this year's tax bill, Moore suggested junior Republicans replace their elders in conference for their speciality areas.

Checking The Record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says his commitment to civil rights is "firm and far reaching."

He also told his black appointees that "contrary to a lot of demagoguery that we're hearing, our administration has moved with vigor and vision on this front."

But the administration's record does not completely bear out this dedication to the promotion of equal rights for minorities, according to a bipartisan panel of former government officials.

The private panel, called the Citizens' Commission on Civil Rights, issued a 184-page report urging Reagan to reverse what it described as "open hostility or lukewarmness" toward affirmative action programs.

The group said that affirmative action remedies, with the backing of several past administrations, led to significant improvement in the occupational status of minorities and women.

"Beginning in 1981, the executive branch reversed its position," said panel chairman Arthur Flemming, former secretary of health, education and welfare and a former chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

"Our strongest recommendation is that President Reagan re-examine his position of opposition to affirmative action policies developed and implemented by his five predecessors," the report said.

It said the administration's stance "has encouraged opposition and decreased the protections of the law available to persons who have been subjected to discrimination."

Reagan opposed a 25-year extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act but changed his position when the political repercussions became clear.

He also fought against setting aside Martin Luther King's birthday as a national holiday until faced with the inevitable that it would pass, and it did.

The president has been philosophically opposed to busing and quotas, believing that the racial injustices would be solved through education, employment, bringing blacks into the mainstream.

But the drive to wipe out discrimination against minorities in American society has represented a turbulent part of the nation's history. The laws were enacted against strong resistance and as a result of civil rights activists who led the struggle for equality.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Democratic ticket would gain in appeal among rank-and-file Democratis if likely presidential nominee Walter Mondale were to select a woman as his running mate.

About 4 in 10 Democratic voters nationwide (41 percent) say that a woman as the vice-presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket would not affect their vote one way or the other. But of those to whom it would make a difference, nearly twice as many say they would be more likely (32 percent) rather than less likely (18 percent) to vote for such a ticket. These findings closely parallel those recorded in a survey conducted last September.

Interestingly, Democratic men are nearly as likely as women to say they would be more likely to back a Democratic slate that included a woman.

Among the crucial block of Independent voters, who represent almost one-third of the electorate, the addition of a woman to the Democratic ticket would probably hurt as much as it would help. About 4 in 10 (43 percent) say a woman in the number two spot would not affect their vote, while 17 percent say it would increase their likelihood of voting for the Democratic ticket and 24 percent say it would reduce their attraction to this ticket.

If the Democratic presidential nominee were to select a black, any additional support might be offset by those who would be less likely to vote for this ticket. A total of 25 percent of Democrats say they would be more likely and 23 percent less likely to vote for a Democratic ticket with a black in the second slot.

Among Independents, the situation is almost a standoff, statistically speaking, with 20 percent saying they would be more likely to vote for a Democratic ticket with a black and 26 percent saying they would be less likely. These findings also parallel those recorded last September.

Following are the questions and key findings:

"If the Democratic presidential nominee selected a woman to be his vice presidential running mate, would this make you more likely or less likely to vote for the Democratic ticket?"

Woman On Democratic Ticket

	Democrats	Independent
More likely	32%	27%
Less Likely	18	24
No difference (Volunterred)	42	43
No opinion	9	6
Total	100	100

"If the Democratic presidental nominee selected a black to be his vice-presidential running mate, would this make you more likely or less likely to vote for the Democratic ticket?"

Black On Democratic Ticket

	Democrats	Independents
More likely	25%	20%
Less likely	23	26
No difference (Volunteered)	45	49
No opinion	7	5
Total	100	100

The findings are based on telephone interviews with 377 Democrats and 364 Independents out of a total sample of 1,011 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 6-8.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 7 percentage points in either direction.

Banks Faced Irate Patrons

Back in November 1930, 15 banks in western North Carolina closed their doors in three days time after depositors lined up demanding their money in the wake of the failure of the big Central Bank and Trust Co. at Asheville.

On Nov. 22, the Associated Press carried a dispatch from Asheville indicating that the banking crisis in the mountain area had subsided. As evidence of this it cited the fact that only three banks had closed that day. Officials of Asheville and Buncombe County were quoted as saying that, although millions of dollars of public funds were deposited in the closed banks, they did not think it would be necessary to close the public schools and they were hopeful it would not be necessary to curtain governmental services.

The bank closings were evidence of the truth of assertions I heard as a youth growing up in western North Carolina that the Great Depression arrived there a couple of years ahead of the rest of the country because of the collapse of a real estate boom at about the same time that a land bubble in Florida burst.

Another AP story on the following Feb. 11 said that during a preliminary hearing in federal court witnesses "painted an amazing picture of frenzied finance" involving four Asheville bankers charged with violation of the banking laws.

The story said one of the bankers did not appear in court because he was in Mission Hospital recovering from self-inflicted wounds. The dispatch said he was prevented from committing suicide by the intervention of his mother when she found him slashing his throat with a razor blade.

Ultimately, Wallace B. Davis, president of Central Bank and Trust, and former U.S. Sen. Luke Lea of Tennessee, and his son Luke Lea Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., were convicted in North Carolina courts on a conspiracy charge and served time in Central Prison in Raleigh. Davis and the Leas were among nearly 20 persons, mostly bankers, who served time on charges growing out of the closing of nearly 100 state and national banks in North Carolina in 1930 and 1931.

All of this came months before the banks of North Carolina and the nation went through their worst crisis in February and early March of 1933. As the crisis worsened, folks lost confidence in their banks and lined up at depositories throughout the nation to withdraw their savings. Scores of banks were forced to close.

A banking holiday for North Carolina was what Raleigh reporters expected to hear on the night of March 2, 1933, when Gov. J.C.B. Ehringhaus summoned them to the Executive Mansion. They believed North Carolina was going to follow the example of 30 other states which had already declared holidays.

The reporters waited while Ehringhaus, other high state officials and banking authorities conferred. After several hours, the newsmen learned they had been premature. The governor and his advisers concluded that a banking holiday could be avoided in North Carolina if the people were not driven to hysteria. The governor asked the press to cooperate, and it did. Not a word about the conference was printed. It was a voluntary censorship, but its futility was quickly demonstrated.

All over North Carolina on Friday, March 3, lines of depositors stormed bank tellers' windows, clamoring for their deposits. The runs on strong banks were just as great as on weak ones. Some of the weak ones were forced to restrict withdrawals. Some of the stronger banks never limited withdrawals, but this did not appear to mollify their customers. They wanted their money and wanted it now.

At the century-old Capitol, the most disturbed Legislature since Reconstruction gathered solemnly and within an hour enacted a law that gave Banking Commissioner Gurney P. Hood almost dictatorial powers over North Carolina banks. Then, as the lawmakers went down Fayetteville Street to their rooms in the Sir Walter Hotel, they saw throngs of persons lined up outside the doors of Raleigh banks.

On Saturday, March 4, Ehringhaus went to Washington to witness the inauguration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and to hear the president proclaim that "all we have to fear is fear itself." The governor had arranged to keep in touch with the situation in North Carolina by telephone. He was told the assault on bank tellers' windows continued unabated.

On Sunday, March 5, banking leaders met all day in the Capitol. They agreed to advise the governor, still in Washington, that a banking holiday was necessary to prevent the complete draining of the resources of North Carolina banks as the result of closed banks in other states. Between 3 and 4 p.m. Sunday, Ehringhaus proclaimed a three-day banking holiday. North Carolina was the last state to do so. At about the same time, President Roosevelt proclaimed a national holiday. The following day, not a bank in North Carolina or the nation opened its doors.

That experience prompted Roosevelt to push through Congress one of the most far-reaching of his New Deal measures, the federal deposit insurance law which has virtually eliminated the spectacle of depositors lining up outside banks demanding their money. Since their deposits are insured by the government, the people are no longer panicked into withdrawing their funds and forcing their banks to close in times of economic adversity.

Engineer Establishes Program

A foreign exchange studies program to foster world understanding has been established at East Carolina University through an endowment by a Greenville businessman, his family and other benefactors.

ECU Chancellor John M. Howell said Thomas W. Rivers, a local engineer and his wife, the late Izabel Bethea Rivers, established the fund through gifts to the ECU Foundation Inc. The Rivers family has been closely associated with the university and its development for nearly 70 years, Howell said.

The program, which will be known as the Thomas W. Rivers Foreign Exchange Endowment Fund, will be administered by the ECU Foundation.

Awards will be made from earnings of the endowment to full-time students at ECU, or of any other college or university in the United States or abroad, to participate in the foreign exchange program.

Maximum awards will be $2,500 a year for tuition, books, meals, lodging and transportation, and for travel in foreign countries.

In addition to the initial contributions establishing the Rivers Endowment, Rivers said the benefactors encourage the active solicitation of contributions and grants from other individuals, clubs and organizations, institutions and universities.

Chamber Endorses Merger

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, chairman of the coard of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said Saturday the chamber's board of directors has approved a resolution supporting consolidation of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems.

Tingelstad noted in a letter to the boards and officials involved with the school systems that the chamber board has representation from the Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Greenville and Grifton areas.

The board's resolution expressed the belief that the consolidation will enhance the quality of education in Pitt County and will thereby enrich the quality of life of all the citizens of Pitt County.

The resolution concluded by urging the County Commissioners to take appropriate action to assure that appropriate funding will be made available to accomplish the proposed merger.

Arkansas Trooper Killed

DE QUEEN, Ark. (AP) — An Arkansas state trooper was shot and killed Saturday when he stopped a driver, and authorities said a man sought in the killing was arrested after a shootout with police in neighboring Oklahoma.

Trooper Louis Bryant, 37, died after the incident on a rural stretch of U.S. Highway 71 near De Queen, about 20 miles from the Arkansas-Oklahoma border, said Lt. John Chambers of the state police headquarters in Little Rock.

An alert was issued for the fleeing vehicle, and police in Broken Bow, Okla., chased and stopped a van matching its description. When a man emerged, firing a semi-automatic rifle at officers, they returned the fire, authorities said.

Bullets from the .223-caliber rifle struck two police cars, but officials said the only one wounded in the shootout was the fleeing driver.

A spokesman for the McCurtain County, Okla., sheriff's office identified the man as Richard Wayne Snell, 54, of Muse, Okla., and said he was wounded four or five times.

Snell was taken to St. Michael's Hospital in Texarkana, Ark., for treatment, police said.

No charges were immediately filed against Snell.

Officers didn't know why Bryant had stopped the van or if he had returned the gunfire.

Protesters Stop Parade

GIESSEN, West Germany (UPI) — Baton-swinging police fought running battles Saturday with anti-American protesters who threw themselves in front of tanks, disrupting a July 4 U.S. Army parade. Four policemen were hurt and one protester was arrested.

Police said the 500 protesters hurled stones and other objects — including blocks of rancid butter — at the 400 policemen lining the route of the annual parade in the garrison town of Giessen, 35 miles north of Frankfurt.

Giessen police said the trouble began when demonstrators surged through the police lines, then threw themselves on the road to block the advance of tanks and other military vehicles in the parade.

Police at first just pulled the protesters off the road and dumped them to one side, but the violence escalated with demonstrators showering officers with a variety of objects and the police retaliating with baton charges.

"U.S. soldiers and police were bombarded with all kinds of stinking missiles, including the butter. Police had to intervene," said the police spokesman.

"The protesters were chanting and had banners bearing anti-rocket and anti-U.S. arms race slogans," he said.

The spokesman said four policemen were hurt by flying objects and one demonstrator was detained. He was later released but his name was recorded for possible future prosecution.

Many Americans from the Giessen area, where there are several U.S. Army bases, turned out for the parade, which continued through the town after the hour-long melee.

Opposition Social Democrats in the town, whose administration is controlled by members of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, had called for a boycott of the parade and few West Germans turned up to watch it.

The boycott call reflected opposition to the siting last year of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany as part of NATO's plans to deploy 572 new medium-range weapons in Europe within five years.

Assembly To Take Up Phosphates Bill Tuesday

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposed ban on phosphate detergents was hailed as a first step toward cleaning up the state's waterways and denounced as a useless hoax Saturday in a public hearing before a state Senate committee.

Over 200 people packed the auditorium of the Legislative Building as the Special Ways and Means Committee heard testimony from scientists, lobbyists, officials and housewives on both sides of the issue.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, chairman of the committee, said it probably would take up the bill Tuesday — the day legislative leaders hope to adjourn the short session.

Swain wouldn't predict the outcome of the vote, but acknowledged that when the panel first considered the bill last Tuesday only one member favored it. No vote was taken then.

In fact, some observers viewed Swain's scheduling of a public hearing as a stalling tactic designed to kill the bill, since it had been anticipated that the Legislature would adjourn Friday. Last-minute snags in completion of a $10 million pork-barrel budget and delayed action on interstate banking bills prolonged the session until this week.

Earlier, the bill overwhelmingly passed the House after winning approval of the House Natural Resources and Economic Development Committee.

Supporters of a phosphate detergent ban say phosphates cause algae blooms that clog the state's waterways, siphoning off oxygen and killing fish. Opponents say a ban wouldn't get rid of enough phosphates to make any difference and that phosphate-free detergents don't clean clothes well.

Those positions were reiterated during Saturday's hearing, at which 22 ban supporters and 15 opponents spoke.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, cosponsor of the bill, said that a phosphate detergent ban has widespread support, citing a University of North Carolina poll showing that 91 percent of those surveyed favored it.

"We need to listen to the people of North Carolina, not the well-financed soap and detergent industry which is headquartered out of this state," said Evans.

He warned that unless the bill passes, state and local governments might have to spend millions of dollars to equip municipal wastewater treatment plants to remove phosphorus. Several mayors and town council members endorsed the ban for that reason.

Robert Cox, president of the state chapter of the Sierra Club, denied opponents' claim that phosphate-free detergents are more expensive. "It's just common sense that if you don't put the phosphates in the detergent, you don't have to recover the cost," he said.

Susan King, a housewife, and Jan Ramquist, second vice president of the League of Women Voters of North Carolina, were among several people who said they had used non-phosphate detergents for years without lessening the cleanliness of their laundry.

"I have seen no dingy clothes in my house," said Mrs. King.

But Judith Mock, an economist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, said consumers in states that have imposed bans complain that their clothes don't get as clean and wear out faster than before.

A textile professor at UNC-Greensboro, Melvin Hurwitz, said his studies showed a "clear distinction" between the cleanliness and comfort of garments washed with and without phosphates.

Former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, who represents the Soap and Detergent Association and FMC Corp., said his company was "a good corporate citizen" and defended several scientists who criticized the bill and claimed personal neutrality despite having been paid consultants.

"Well, (show) me an expert witness who's ever been on the witness stand who isn't paid," said Morgan. "That doesn't discredit their testimony."

Displaying a carton of eggs, a package of bacon, a loaf of bread and other grocery items, he said, "These all contain phosphates. ... What we're talking about is something we all use."

The Legislature should await the outcome of several independent studies of the effects of phosphates on water bodies before acting, he added.

Representatives of hospitals, restaurants, grocery stores and other businesses warned that a ban would boost costs and cost jobs. Lucius Pullen, vice president of Texasgulf Chemicals Co., said North Carolina is the East's second-leading producer of phosphates, with an output last year of 5.7 million pounds.

If approved, the bill would take effect July 1 and levy a $500 fine on anyone selling phosphate detergents.

Black Professionals Say Fight Continues

RALEIGH (AP) — Although black professionals are no longer a rarity in the American workplace, some doctors, dentists and lawyers meeting in Raleigh say the fight for equality in those fields still continues.

The groups are meeting this weekend at Conjoint '84, the third annual gathering of three statewide professional societies; the N.C. Association of Black Lawyers, the Old North State Medical Society and the Old North State Dental Society.

"I don't think you can say the fight is over," said Gastonia attorney Ralph Gingles Jr. in between sessions at a Raleigh hotel. "There is still the attitude that we have to work harder and prepare ourselves more to get the same credit as others."

Even after all the work, Gingles said, "because of history, some people will still think what you do is not as good as what somebody else could do."

Gingles added that he thought it was a problem time could correct.

"I think it's a matter of demonstrating over and over again that you can be professional and do a good job," he said. "And hopefully, after some years, when my children are practicing medicine or whatever they're doing, they won't have to deal with that response."

Dr. Jerry Wiley, the state's consultant on Medicaid programs, said obstacles still face blacks in training for the professions.

"Of course, there are more horizons out there," he said. "I couldn't say in general that blacks have achieved equity in medical opportunities."

The percentage of medical students who are black has dropped from "around 2.6 percent to 2.4 percent," Wiley said.

Because of a nationwide glut of doctors, Wiley said medical schools are beginning to cut their admissions, which means fewer blacks will be admitted.

Wiley said a federally-imposed quota system and more federal aid to students in professional schools may be an answer to the problem.

"As long as Reagan is in office, improvement in the near future is not likely," he said.

Dr. Ernest D. Eason of Burlington, a specialist in internal medicine, said blacks have made some gains in medicine, but now their progress has slowed.

"Things aren't getting worse," Eason said, "just staying the same."

Eason also sees time as a solution. As young blacks get better preparation in public schools, they will have an opportunity to enter professional schools later.

"One problem we've had is the secondary education system has to catch up to society," Eason said. "We are now reaching the point where kids have gone through 12 years of fully integrated school systems."

A&T Alumni Dissatisfied With Fort

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Edward Fort, chancellor of North Carolina A&T State University, does not understand the school's mission and should not continue as chancellor, some alumni say.

The A&T National Alumni Association plans to send a delegation this week to confront Fort about his leadership, alumni President John Maye of Charlotte said.

Maye said his group will not take an official position on whether Fort should remain as chancellor until after the meeting. He said the group simply wanted to let Fort know its concerns.

But Chris Onyemem, 1983-84 student body president, predicted the complaints would lead to Fort's ouster.

"I think he's going to lose it (the chancellorship) soon," Onyemem said. "If someone doesn't do something soon, he will bring this university down in ashes."

Maye said there is a "strong perception that Dr. Fort just cannot handle the job that has been given to him, that it's too big for him."

"We feel that he doesn't understand the mission of a historically black land grant institution," Maye said.

The mission is to nuture culturally deprived students who have potential but need extra help and support to develop it, he said.

"I feel personally that Dr. Fort does not foster that caring, nuturing environment," he said.

Critics said besides their complaints about Fort's concept of the university's mission, their grievances center on his resistance to trustee and student involvment and his handling of faculty employment issues.

Onyemem said Fort has shut out the community and trustees. He said Fort "spends all of his time trying to determine the limits of the board's power so he can get around them."

Fort inherited a university plagued by complex management, financial and academic problems. He succeeded in turning around the university's troubled nursing program, and officials say he is making progress toward sorting out its financial problems.

He declined to comment specifically on the complaints.

"It is inappropriate for the leadership of this university to find himself embroiled in a discussion of this nature in the public media," Fort said. "My job is to keep my eye on goals of this university."

Fort said his only reaction to the complaints "is to say that the administration of a large university whose mission is critically essential, as is A&T's, requires the type of devotion that I absolutely believe I am rendering and will continue to render."

Onyemem, who as student body president sat on A&T's board of trustees, said several trustees shared his dissatisfaction with Fort's leadership. But trustees contacted by The Greensboro News & Record referred questions to chairman McArthur Newell.

Newell said Friday he was aware of the dissatisfaction with Fort, but he would not say whether trustees have discussed Fort's performance or his possible removal.

Edmisten Will Appeal

GREENSBORO (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten will appeal the dismissal of his suit seeking to consolidate constitutional challenges to North Carolina's driving while impaired law.

Judge Henry V. Barnette Jr. dismissed the lawsuit in Wake County Superior Court. Barnette said that a ruling on the matter would not ultimately settle the controversy involving the tough new Safe Roads Act, which took effect in October.

Special Deputy Attorney General Ike Avery said Edmisten wants the state's case taken before the N.C. Court of Appeals or the N.C. Supreme Court.

Edmisten was unavailable for comment Friday.

The suit was filed in May against 22 defendants, including seven district court judges who objected to the DWI law on constitutional grounds.

The suit sought to consolidate several cases involving constitutional questions and settle the matter quickly by getting a clear interpretation of the law and a ruling from the Superior Court that the DWI law was constitutional.

Edmisten's suit also asked that district court judges be barred from raising constitutional objections to DWI.

Barnette said said Friday that he could not rule on criminal cases already pending before other courts and said legal arguments and constitutional objections to DWI must be decided through the appelate process.

Avery said some questions raised in the suit already have been settled, but "hopefully, we will appeal the main issues to the Appeals Court of try to bypass them and take it to the Supreme Court."

Jury Awards Family $10 Million

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A jury on Saturday awarded $10.1 million to a couple whose 11-year-old daughter was killed when a Pan Am jetliner plunged into their home in the second-worst air disaster in U.S. history.

Jennifer Schultz was among eight people on the ground who were killed along with all 146 people aboard the Boeing 727 when it crashed July 9, 1982.

A seven-member federal court jury awarded the damages to the girl's parents, Christopher and Barbara Schultz of Kenner, La. Eight other lawsuits arising from the crash had already been tried, including one in which $2.6 million was assessed against Pan Am.

Delegates Back Woman For Veep

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Associated Press survey of delegates to the Democratic National Convention indicates broad support for a woman for vice president, with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York mentioned far more than any other candidate.

Nearly 3,000 of the 3,933 delegates have responded to a detailed survey of vice presidential preference, and other questions.

Of the 1,640 who stated a vice presidential preference, 54 percent said they wanted a woman on the ticket and Ms. Ferraro was singled out by 360, or 22 percent of those stating one preference.

In addition, several dozen delegates expressed more than one choice and listed Ms. Ferraro among them.

Walter F. Mondale has the loyalty of about 90 more delegates than the 1,967 he needs to win the nomination, according to the AP delegate count. The count is more complete for the presidential nomination than the No. 2 spot because about 900 delegates on record with a presidential preference have yet to respond to the more detailed survey.

Of those who have responded to the broader survey, 1,297 or 44 percent, expressed no preference for the No. 2 spot on the ticket or said they have yet to make up their minds.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, a distant second to Mondale in the delegate chase for the presidential nomination, was listed as the vice presidential choice of 173 delegates, or 10.5 percent of those with a preference for a specific candidate.

Some 72 delegates, or 4.3 percent, said Mondale himself should take another crack at the job he held for four years under President Carter.

San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein, who will host the convention that opens July 16, was cited by 66 delegates, or 4 percent.

Mondale is interviewing Ms. Ferraro for the job Monday and has already talked to Ms. Feinstein about it.

The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, who is still seeking the presidential nomination, was the choice of 55 delegates, or 3.4 percent, for vice president.

Some 248, or 15.1 percent, stated flatly that they wanted a woman on the ticket, but did not specify which one.

Nearly 41 percent — 666 — mentioned one or more other possibilities, including 209 who listed women among their choices.

The latter included Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, set for an interview with Mondale next Friday, and former Texas congresswoman Barbara Jordan, as well as Ms. Ferraro and Ms. Feinstein. One delegate suggested former first lady Rosalyn Carter and another favored feminist Gloria Steinem.

All told, women were mentioned by 883 delegates, or 53.8 percent of the 1,640 who expressed a preference.

Woman On The Ticket

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The woman-for-vice president movement has washed over the National Organization for Women's convention like a wave, drawing even the most conservative feminists into its tide.

The prospect of a getting woman on the ticket is practically the only thing anyone is talking about. The 16th annual gathering wasn't planned as a one-issue convention, but that's the way it's turned out. And whether it's a case of collective optimism taking hold or an accurate reading of changing events, many of the women here are starting to think it could really happen.

Earlier morning joggers along the beach wore green patches that read: "Woman VP. NOW"

And private predictions turned into public demonstrations Saturday when 1,200 women greeted the man they've endorsed for president, Walter F. Mondale, with a prolonged chant: "Two-four-six-eight, a woman VP cannot wait."

When Mondale smiled and waved, the chant changed to song: "Run with a woman, win with a woman."

For many of those who fought for decades for women's equality — and cried two years ago this weekend when the deadline passed without ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment — the current mood is sweet.

"I think, finally, we have a shot at it," said Eleanor Smeal, a Washington political consultant who presided over NOW during the ERA's defeat. "We sent him (Mondale) the strongest message we could."

Ann Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee, who has insisted for weeks that there was only a one-in-five chance Mondale would name a woman to the No.2 spot, now puts the odds at 50-50.

"The perception is changing," she said.

Nancy Shares President's Mike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan shared her husband's radio microphone Saturday to proselytize against drugs and alcohol that are "everywhere available and everywhere abused."

"Cocaine, PCP, marijuana, alcohol, speed — these are the enemies of our children. They're cunning and treacherous and oh, so very patient," said Mrs. Reagan, speaking from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

She said drugs and alcohol "are everywhere available and everywhere abused. And now people are waking up to that fact."

It was the second time Mrs. Reagan shared her husband's radio microphone to talk about drug abuse. In October 1982, the president's wife told the nation that "few things in my life have frightened me as much as the drug epidemic among our children."

Wachovia is creating better ways to borrow.

Whatever your reason for borrowing, and however you prefer to borrow, Wachovia has new ways to lend you money you won't find anywhere else – ways that offer you lower interest rates and better terms.

Wachovia BankLine℠

Wachovia BankLine is a personal line of credit from $2,500 to $25,000 at rates that are determined monthly, based on Wachovia's Prime Rate.* BankLine is as easy to use as writing a check. And the rate you pay is based on your credit line, not on the amount you borrow (see chart below).

While BankLine can be unsecured or secured by liquid assets (such as stocks and bonds), Wachovia also offers Equity BankLine, which gives you a line of credit of $10,000 or more based on the equity you have in your home. It's prearranged, so you can use it wherever and whenever you want, simply by writing a check, without having to reapply for a loan. And like BankLine, the interest you pay is based on Wachovia's Prime Rate.*

	Your credit line:	Your interest rate:	APR for June was:
BankLine (unsecured or secured with liquid assets)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 1%	13½%
	$5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%	14%
	$2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%	15%
Equity BankLine (secured by real estate)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 2%	14½%

If the Prime Rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the Prime Rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged on unsecured lines is 18%; on secured lines, 15%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

While there are no loan origination fees (or "points") charged for Equity BankLine, the borrower pays mortgage loan closing expenses at the time the line is established and at every 10-year anniversary.

Wachovia Prime-Plus Installment Loans

Wachovia Prime-Plus Installment Loans offer prime-based rates lower than our fixed-rate loans. And that means lower payments.

The rate you pay is based on Wachovia's Prime Rate* and can vary monthly, but the amount of your payment remains the same. Any changes in interest rates will result in adjustments to the number of payments you make, not to the monthly payment amount. If rates fall, your loan will be paid off earlier. Rising rates may require additional payments.

You have the protection of an interest rate ceiling established at the time you take out the loan. So you'll know in advance both the maximum and minimum interest rate you could be charged.

Wachovia Home Equity Loans

Your home is probably worth more than you paid for it. Wachovia offers ways that you can borrow from the equity you've built up, with affordable monthly payments.

A Wachovia Home Equity Loan is an excellent way to borrow at favorable rates for major expenditures, such as home improvements, education or retirement property.

Your Personal Banker can help you decide on the terms and options – including our new Equity BankLine – that fit your budget best. So when you think of borrowing money, think about putting the money in your home to work with a Wachovia Home Equity Loan.

*"Prime Rate" refers to that interest rate set by the Bank from time to time as an interest rate basis for commercial and consumer borrowings. The Prime Rate is one of several interest rate bases used by the Bank. The Bank lends at interest rates above and below the Prime Rate.

'Romance' Novels Are Set In Gold

DETROIT (AP) — There's a gold mine in the steamy love scenes, unrequited passion and tangled relationships portrayed in modern romance novels.

It's a $450-million-a-year lode, mined mostly by women writing for an overwhelmingly female audience of 20 million worldwide — 3.5 million in the United States alone — according to industry figures.

"The reader knows what they want," said Nora Roberts, 33, a romance heavyweight since "Irish Thoroughbred" hit the stands in 1979. The book is in its fifth printing. "They want to sit down and read that book and feel good. The world's still there when you go back — but you may go back to the world feeling better."

Five-hundred members of the 2,000-member Romance Writers of America gathered in Detroit for the group's fourth annual convention, which ends Sunday.

Aspiring writers and veteran writers mingled with top editors of major publishing houses and reaffirmed the formula that's made romance novels a success.

Romance writers target an audience of women 18 to 45 years old, who spend between $60 and $150 a month on "romances."

Publishers issue about 140 new titles monthly in half a dozen sub-categories. They include "young adult" stories of first love; lengthy historical novels; "category contemporary" novels with modern themes and situations; and "inspirational" tales with a spiritual theme.

Many publishers issue aspiring writers explicit guidelines, including length, plot themes, character development and the amount of sexual content.

Writers are encouraged to have characters speak naturally, using contractions, but profanity is out. Older readers don't like it.

The Soviet Union, Middle East or Africa should be avoided as backdrops, because readers hear enough about those countries on the nightly news.

Having several sexual partners sometimes is acceptable. So is violence, if it doesn't overshadow romance. Children are OK if they are minor characters. Drug use is forbidden.

Above all, the formula stresses commitment to a lasting relationship, not gratuitous bed-hopping.

"Women want more than a roll in the hay," said Margaret Carnes of Harlequin Books. "Love is more than the titillation when a sexy guy comes into one woman's life."

Original plots, believable characters and credible motives are more important than any formula, said Ms. Roberts, a Keedysville, Md. resident, whose only previous writing experience was in high school composition classes.

"If you can't tell a story, it doesn't matter whether you have guidelines or not," said Ms. Roberts.

Spy Trial Ends With Conviction

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Convicted spy Ernst Ludwig Forbrich is a "mischievous," carefree man and prone to exaggeration, not the "big fish" of espionage portrayed by government prosecutors, his brother said Saturday.

Forbrich, a 44-year-old West German auto mechanic, was convicted Friday on two counts of espionage for trying to buy a list of secret U.S. defense intelligence documents for delivery to East Germany.

He faces life in prison for trying to pass classified information to a foreign government, and 10 years for obtaining it. Sentencing was set for July 27.

"If they are intelligent, they must know he is not a big fish," said Falko Forbrich, 40, who left his home in San Jose, Calif., to attend his brother's trial.

"It's a possibility he might have done something small, mischievous, like phone books," Forbrich said. "He's the kind of guy who could do it just to see if it could be done.

"He exaggerates things. He always does. It's a dumb habit. And he takes the opposite side in something. If someone says something can't be done, he'll say 'I can do it or I know somebody who can do it.'"

During the weeklong trial, no one disputed the fact that Ernst Forbrich took the document. A key piece of evidence was an FBI videotape showing him paying $550 to an undercover agent he believed was a U.S. Army officer.

Assistant U.S. Attorney George Tragos portrayed Forbrich as a professional spy who used his garage in Goeppingen, West Germany, near a U.S. military base, to contact servicemen who could help him get information.

The defense argued that Forbrich was coaxed into it, set up by the undercover agent who "put it in his lap." But the jury agreed with the prosecutor who insisted that "being set up" was no defense.

Forbrich remains "frustrated" and denies being a "master spy," Falko said.

It wasn't until the the end of the trial, when the jury heard Forbrich discuss on tape his "15 or more years" in espionage, and talk about NATO and Warsaw Pact materials and the purchase of "secret" documents, that he began to worry, Falko said.

He also worried when the prosecution's last witness, retired Maj. Gen. Richard X. Larkin, testified that Forbrich's "preoccupation" with personnel rosters and telephone books revealed that he was a "sophisticated" spy, not "a man off the street."

Larkin, a consultant to Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger and former deputy director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, said such information identifies personnel and lets the enemy know about troop

Reagan To Sign Package

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday he will sign legislation to cut budget deficits by about $63 billion over the next three years, but he urged Congress to take further action to reduce the red ink.

"My approval of these measures should not by any means be considered the final action on deficits this year," the president said in his weekly paid political radio broadcast.

He said he was "ready to use my veto" to make sure Congress restrains spending to "help our economic expansion continue."

"Spending restraint and personal incentives for growth are the two greatest deficit reduction weapons we have," said Reagan, speaking from Camp David, Md.

"That's why the ultimate solution to budget deficits must be a mandatory restriction on the Congress' ability to spend and the simplification of the entire tax system, enabling us to broaden the tax base and lower personal income tax rates for all you who work and earn."

The Democratic response to Reagan's broadcast was delivered by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said that Reagan "doesn't tell you ... that it's his deficit. ... He doesn't tell you that his administration, for all the rhetoric about fiscal responsibility, has never presented to Congress a balanced budget proposal."

Congress completed action Thursday on the deficit-reduction package, which includes $50 billion in tax increases and $13 billion in spending cuts over the next three years. Reagan said he will sign the legislation on Wednesday.

When enacted into law, it will be the third major tax increase in three years and will erase about 10 percent of the $600 billion in federal budget deficits projected through 1987.

Ship Takes On Water

CAMPBELL RIVER, British Columbia (UPI) — A 502-foot cruise ship ran aground, began listing and took on water early Saturday but the 780 passengers aboard got off safely at the north end of Vancouver Island, officials said.

Curtis Stock, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in Seattle said the Bahamian-registered "Sundancer" began taking on water about midnight but made it to Campbell River on Vancouver Island, where the passengers got off safely.

A Coast Guard helicopter from Astoria, Ore., was dispatched to help pump water from the vessel, which was reported still listing.

Many of the elderly passengers on board were examined in hospitals. No injuries were reported.

Other passengers were taken to hotels in Campbell River.

Stock said the cruise vessel's point of origination or destination were not immediately known.

The incident was the second involving a pleasure boat in the area this week.

On Wednesday the Tacoma, Washington-based yacht Royal Princess sank off the Queen Charlotte Islands. All 20 passengers were forced to abandon ship but were plucked safely from life rafts in the sea.

The battered hull of the sunken luxury liner popped up and was towed to harbor on Friday.

Ford Will Pay Family $47 Million

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has agreed to pay more than $47 million to the family of a man killed when his car's fuel tank burst into flames after it was struck from the rear by a drunken driver.

State District Judge Walter Dunham Jr. on Friday approved the out-of-court settlement reached between Ford and Jeanette Henrichson, 27, of Alice and her 9-year-old daughter, Chastity Marie.

According to the settlement, the daughter will receive up to $47 million in the form of an $850,000 cash payment, which will be held in trust until she turns 25, and an additional $9,000 a month starting July 1 and continuing every month for the rest of her life.

Mrs. Henrichson will get an undisclosed amount of money.

Both Mrs. Henrichson and her daughter received serious burns in the 1976 collision of their 1968 Ford Galaxy, which killed James Henrichson, 19.

Chastity has undergone at least 15 operations since the accident and still needs additional surgery, Mrs. Henrichson said.

Ford officials said the settlement was neither an admission of legal liability nor an admission of a defect in the car.

Although Mrs. Henrichson said she was pleased with the settlement, she said she wished the accident had never happened.

"I would like to give all the money back and have the life I had before the accident," she said. "Nothing can bring back the husband I lost or my little girl before she was burned."

Mrs. Henrichson sued Ford to recover damages for extensive burn injuries both she and her daughter received near Alice on Sept. 5, 1976. Her husband died of his injuries 37 days after the accident.

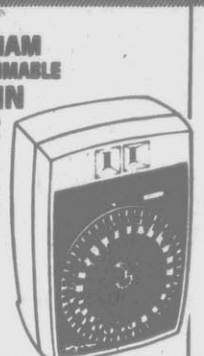

According to Mrs. Henrichson's suit, the car driven by her husband was struck from the rear while attempting a right-hand turn.

Cagney Up After Attack

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Maine (UPI) — James Cagney, the 84-year-old legend of the silver screen, emerged from the hospital Saturday two weeks after suffering a mild heart attack, officials said.

Sources said Cagney was wheeled out of St. Andrews Hospital at about 7:30 a.m., and immediately was whisked away in his car. Cagney returned to the Fisherman's Wharf Inn, where he was stricken June 16 while vacationing in the scenic coastal resort town.

Cagney was expected to remain in Maine for several days while he recuperates, said Marge Zimmerman, his agent. The screen star then is expected to return to his home in upstate New York.

The actor and his 81-year-old wife, Willy, were staying at the hotel, owned by Cagney's longtime friend Jack O'Keefe, when Cagney complained of difficulty in breathing and shortness of breath, Ms. Zimmerman said.

As a precautionary measure, Cagney was rushed to St. Andrew's, where he was treated in an isolated area, buffered from the flood of reporters and inquiries of well-wishers.

Although very little official information was released, hospital administrators confirmed that Cagney had suffered what was termed a mild heart attack.

He has been able to get up, walk around, and watch television, one source said.

"Doctors say he's having a fine recovery," the source added.

Cagney, a song-and-dance man who rose to fame in his 70-film career playing tough-talking gangsters in movies like "Public Enemy," won an Academy Award in 1972 for a role in "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Soviet Dancer Seeks Asylum

TOKYO (UPI) — A Soviet dancer, saying he yearns for more artistic freedom, slipped away from his visiting Moscow ballet troupe and requested political asylum in the United States, officials said Saturday.

The dancer, identified as 25-year-old Yuri Aleshin of the Moscow Philharmonic Classical Ballet, defected Friday morning by slipping into the U.S. Consulate in Sapporo, 500 miles north of Tokyo, officials said.

U.S. officials said Aleshin asked for political asylum and was turned over to Japanese authorities who transferred him to Tokyo and put him in "protective custody."

The U.S. Embassy refused to say if it was considering Aleshin's request for asylum, maintaining that the dancer's case was "now a matter between Japan and the Soviet Union."

However, Japanese officials said Aleshin, not well known in Soviet ballet circles, met with U.S. Embassy officials in Tokyo Saturday and that his asylum request was "under consideration."

Aleshin also met separately with a Soviet Embassy official but reiterated his intention to defect, saying there is "no artistic freedom in the Soviet Union," a Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The Soviet Embassy refused to comment on Aleshin's defection, which came as the 32-member Moscow ballet troupe was concluding a 10-day tour of Japan. The rest of the group returned to Tokyo from Sapporo Saturday before its departure for Moscow on Sunday.

Many Soviet dancers have defected to the West, including Mikhail Baryshnikov, who sought asylum in the United States in 1974 at age 24 and has since become one of the leading ballet star in the world.

NAACP Holds March To Promote Voting

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NAACP, preparing to commemorate its 75th anniversary this week, staged marches here Saturday aimed at boosting black voter turnout in the November election.

Meanwhile, the civil rights group's executive director, the Rev. Benjamin L. Hooks, said he has invited controversial Nation of Islam minister Louis Farrakhan to a meeting to discuss their differences.

Hooks addressed a voter registration rally that preceded Monday's scheduled opening of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People annual convention. The event is expected to draw up to 15,000 people.

"Peace in the world and stability at home, that's what we ought to be concentrating on," Hooks told about 100 people at the rally in Kansas City, Mo.

He called on blacks to use their power at the polls to help solve the problems of black unemployment and what he called "the rollback of civil rights progress."

The leader of the non-partisan NAACP repeated his call for the defeat of President Reagan in November.

Hooks praised Democratic presidential contender Jesse Jackson, who will speak at the convention Tuesday, for "articulating the issues.

"The white press for the first time in history focused for a sustained period of time on a black person and the black community, and I think that it has made the job of (voter) registration somewhat easier."

One purpose of the so-called "Overground Railway March from Slavery to Freedom" was to register voters, and Hooks said he was not disappointed that only 100 people completed the trek to the eastern side of the Missouri River.

Marchers followed by a 13-vehicle motorcade started the parade through Kansas City, Kan. Several demonstrators carried a small pink casket to symbolize their goal of countering voter apathy and encouraging more blacks to register.

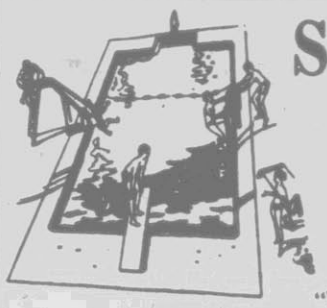

Besides Jackson, speakers expected to appear at the convention include Democratic presidential candidates former Vice President Walter Mondale and Colorado Sen. Gary Hart. U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole is scheduled to speak on behalf of President Reagan.

U.S. Wants To Link Space, Nuclear Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Soviet Union sets a date for talks, the Reagan administration wants to use a Kremlin proposal to ban anti-satellite weapons as a lever to also reopen the nuclear arms-control negotiations called off by Moscow late last year, U.S. officials said Saturday.

A response is expected after Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin goes home for consultation. An official at the Soviet embassy said he probably would leave later this week.

The U.S. move came in quick response to a Soviet offer to start talks in Vienna in September on "blocking" development and deployment of all space weapons.

The administration had resisted similar Kremlin proposals in March and again in early June.

But this time, the While House decided to jump on Chernenko's latest offer. Officials said it might be the way to resume talks on nuclear arms without forcing the Soviet leader to abandon his insistence that U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles first be withdrawn from Western Europe.

The Soviets walked out of the Euromissile talks in Geneva in late November in anticipation of the deployment of the U.S. intermediate-range weapons. Separate negotiations on curbing longer-range nuclear arms were suspended in early December.

Playwright Dies

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — Playwright Lillian Hellman, a woman with "a dazzling mind" whose "The Little Foxes" became a classic portrayal of a wealthy and rapacious Southern family, died Saturday at the age of 79.

Miss Hellman, whose work also was the basis for the movie "Julia," died of cardiac arrest at Martha's Vineyard Hospital, near her summer home on Vineyard Haven Harbor, said nursing supervisor Katie DeHertogh. She had been taken to the hospital Friday night.

Peter Feibleman, an author and close friend, said in Los Angeles that Miss Hellman had been seriously ill for about 1½ years and was in "pretty severe discomfort."

Miss Hellman's career lasted five decades, from her first success as a playwright with "The Children's Hour" in 1934 to her eventual dissatisfaction with the commercial theater and her resurgence with books based on reminiscences of her life.

She wrote at least three books that might be considered memoirs: "Pentimento" in 1973, "An Unfinished Woman" in 1969 and "Scoundrel Time" in 1976.

The movie "Julia," which starred Vanessa Redgrave in the title role, Jane Fonda as Miss Hellman and Jason Robards as mystery writer Dashiell Hammett, Miss Hellman's companion and lover, was based on a chapter from "Pentimento."

Top Seeds Roll At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe kept his temper under control and moved into high gear Saturday, breezing past Australian Wally Masur 6-0, 6-4, 6-3 and into the fourth round of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

In women's competition, three-time Wimbledon champion Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second this year, also moved into round four but had a tough time beating 17-year-old British junior Annabel Croft 6-3, 6-4

Other winners in the bright sunshine at the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club included sixth-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 11 Kevin Curren of South Africa, Pat Cash of Australia and four Americans — No. 14 Bill Scanlon, No. 15 Vitas Gerulaitis, John Sadri and Terry Moor.

Also advancing were No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 10 Jo Durie of Britain, No. 12 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, No. 14 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 15 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and Steffi Graf of West Germany, who, at 15, is the youngest player in the tournament.

McEnroe sparkled, both in his play and his deportment, sweeping through the first set in just 18 minutes, dropping just 10 points.

On the second point of the second set, McEnroe slipped and fell as Masur slashed a winning cross-court forehand. The tournament's top seed got up smiling and quickly took the next three points to grab a 1-0 lead.

He again delighted the Centre Court crowd when he flashed another grin when Masur, who had been completely outclassed to that point, punctuated his first winning game with an ace.

Then, in the fifth game with the score tied 15-all, Masur won nine consecutive points, breaking McEnroe's serve and serving a love game to grab a 4-2 lead.

But McEnroe, catching the lines with his deft touch and ripping winners whenever Masur was out of position, swept through the next four games to go up 2-0 in sets.

It was in the final game of the second set that McEnroe's pristine demeanor showed signs of cracking. Masur won the first point on a ball that appeared to be long. McEnroe stared at the linesman, but kept quiet.

In the second game of the third set, a serve by Masur was weakly netted by McEnroe as a fault was called. But umpire Bob Jenkins overruled the call and awarded the point to the Australian.

McEnroe hit an apparent service winner in the third game, but a late fault call nullified it and he went on to lose the point.

When the New Yorker put a first serve into the net in the seventh game, he exclaimed, "Good, John, good!" And the breaks began to even up when a linesman called a Masur forehand down the line good but was overruled by Jenkins.

In 1 hour, 34 minutes, McEnroe had his victory and a fourth-round berth against Scanlon.

"Things are starting to get interesting now," McEnroe said. "But there are tough matches to come, including the next one."

Scanlon and McEnroe have had a growing feud over the past year, and on Saturday had sharp words for each other. Scanlon said that "apart from playing each other, we don't know each other. We don't go out to dinner; we don't socialize.

"I am not going to say I dislike him because I don't know him ... We played a match in Tokyo which he won in straight sets, and afterward he just walked off without shaking my hand. Why should I care? Do you think that I'm dying to be his friend?"

Asked about the incident, McEnroe replied: "I don't recall not shaking his hand in Tokyo. I am looking forward to the match. I expect a hard match, but expect to win."

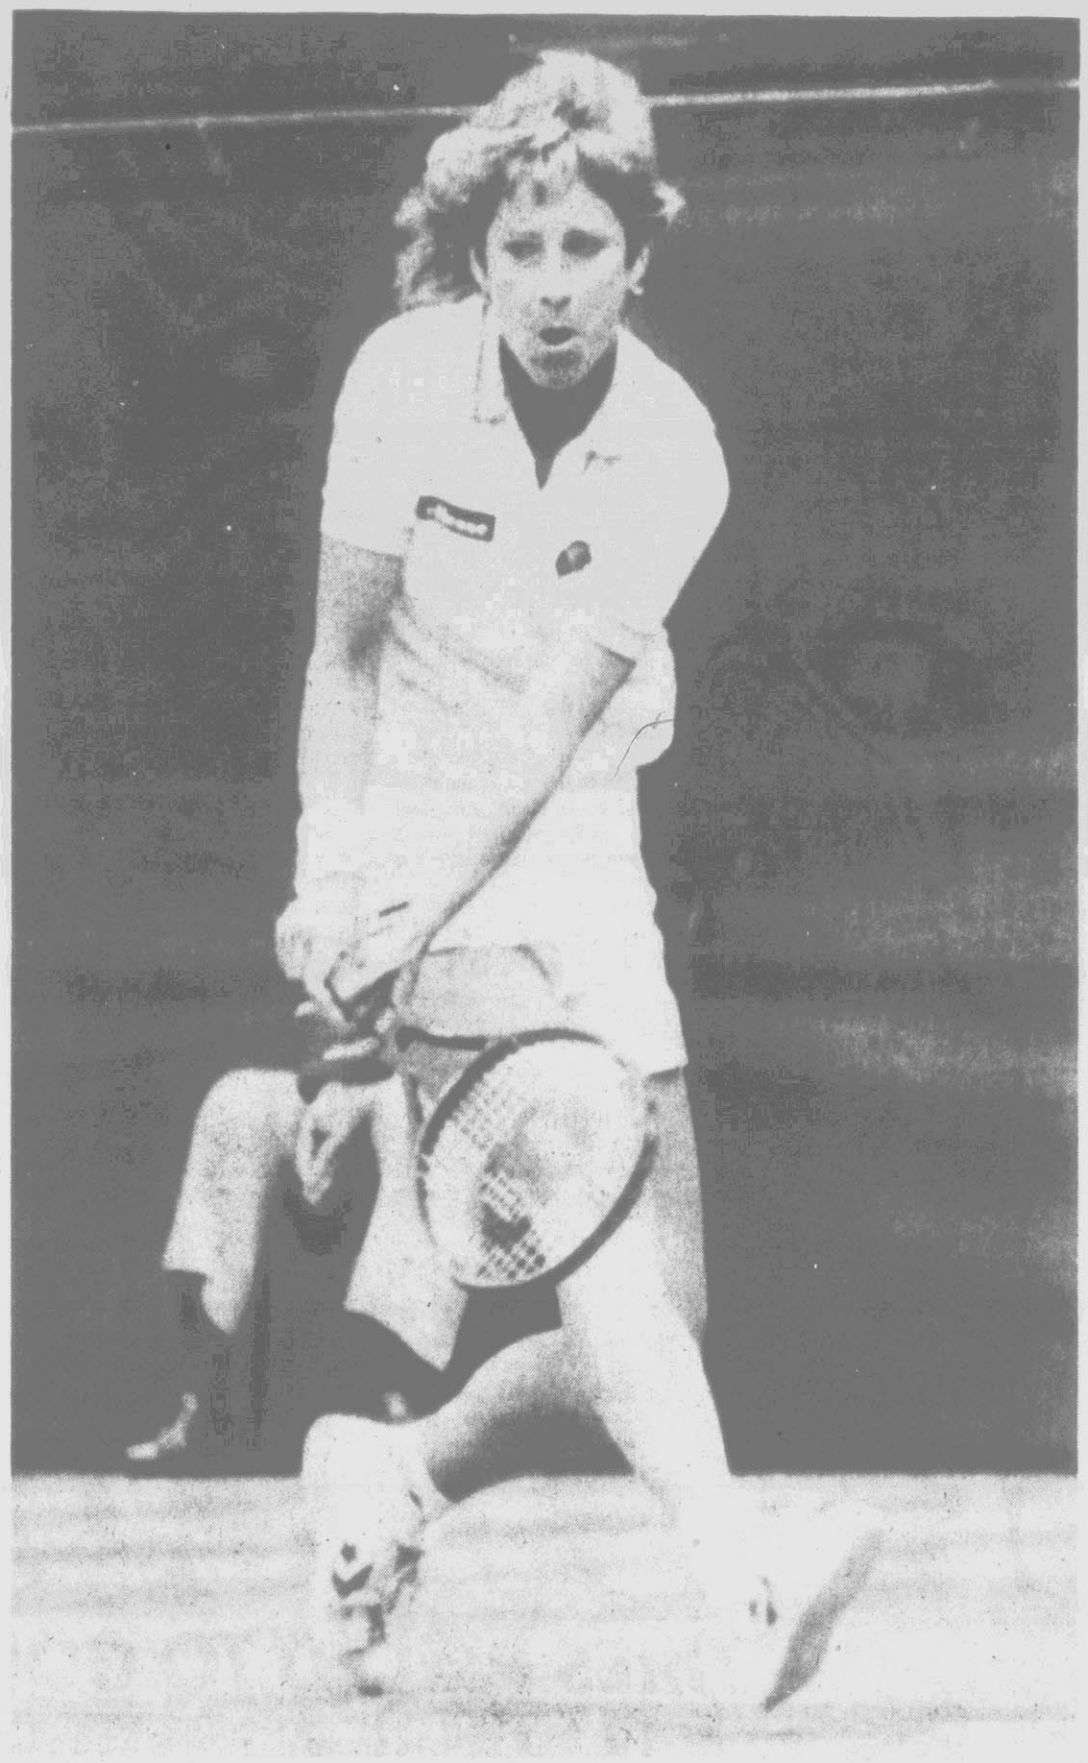

Lloyd, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., committed an unusual number of unforced errors against her stubborn opponent — most of them forehand approach shots and forehand drop shots.

She served for the match at 5-2, but Croft saved one match point as she broke serve. She then held to pull to within 4-5, saving another two match points with cross-court volleys.

Then Lloyd served again for the match. This time she was successful, the final point coming when Croft netted a backhand.

"I came in more than usual for me, especially on her backhand," said Lloyd. "She is a good player

Evert Lloyd Rips British Net Media

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd on Saturday called the media's intrusion into the players' private lives "horrendous" and said it's lowering the quality of play at this year's Wimbledon tennis championships.

The adopted sweetheart of Britain's tennis fans, Lloyd joined in the fray between the media and a number of players, including the tournament's top seeds, Martina Navratilova and John McEnroe.

McEnroe earlier this week barred television cameras from his post-match interview after a series of press attacks on his on-court behavior. Navratilova, angered by reports that a Texas woman is her new "companion," said she will no longer play tournaments in Britain except for Wimbledon.

Others whose private lives have been on the news pages of London's newspapers in the last month include American Jimmy Arias, alleged to be dating Canada's Carling Bassett, and Bettina Bunge of West Germany, reportedly dating McEnroe. Both reports were hotly denied.

"I think that the press, for some reason, this Wimbledon has been really horrendous and really picking on the players and their private lives," Lloyd said in a post-match interview after beating Annabel Croft of Britain in the third round.

"Martina and I are staying (near the All-England Club) and we have photographers camped out. They're taking pictures of me leaving for practice and pictures of her.

"The players don't really want to come in here, to tell you the truth. And it's not only the British. There are a lot of American publications that are really stooping very low also."

Asked if the press coverage was worse this year than in the past, Lloyd, a three-time Wimbledon champion who is seeded second in the women's singles and also is the president of the Women's Tennis Association, said yes.

"Some of the stories I've read have no element of truth," she said. "If they were true, you could understand why the public would be curious about these players' private lives. But some of the stuff — most of the stuff — is not even true.

"Tomorrow I'll probably get ripped to pieces after this, but I think all a player can do is let the press know how the players are

THE DAILY
SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1984

While the golf course might not be the best place to see Dean Smith in action, the highly successful coach of the University of North Carolina's basketball team will be on view on the fairways this September in Greenville.

Smith, who will begin his 24th season at Chapel Hill this fall, is the latest celebrity entry into the Ronald McDonald House Golf Tournament, to be played at Brook Valley on September 10.

A field of 42 teams, each consisting of a celebrity golfer and four area golfers, will tee off in the Superball style event which will raise funds for the Ronald McDonald House to be built in Greenville near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The field for the tournament has been filled now, according to tournament director Reynolds May, who said a standby list has also been made in case there are any late dropouts.

Dean Smith is no stranger to anyone who's even heard of basketball — not to mention the frantic followers of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball. He holds a career mark of 524-156. That percentage of .771 places him fourth on the all-time list of winnest major college coaches with 20 or more seasons. He trails only Clair Bee, Adloph Rupp and John Wooden.

Smith also has to his credit having coached an NCAA champion, an NIT champion and an Olympic Gold Medal team. Only one other coach, Pete Newell has earned that honor, although Bobby Knight will after that last honor this summer, becoming the third in that select group. Smith and Knight are the only NCAA winning coaches to have played on an NCAA winner also.

In the last 18 years, few teams have come close to Smith's record. The Tar Heels have reached the final four seven times and the Tar Heels have made the NCAA field each of the last ten years, the longest existant steak in the country.

In the last 18 years, Smith's teams have won 12 regular season titles and been second the other six times. Two of those runners-up went on to win the ACC tournament title, among nine total titles.

Twelve times his teams have won 25 or more games, passing the legendary John Wooden, who had 11 25-win seasons. And his 20-win seasons, now 14 in a row, ranks as th longest 20-win streak in history. In each of those 18 years, too, Smith has carried the Tar Heels to a post-season tournament.

Former Tar Heels have been quick to go to the pros too. Prior to this year, a total of 26 have gone on to play pro ball in the NBA, with a number of others playing outside the country. This year, Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins were high draft choices, while Matt Donerty and Cecil Exum, the only other seniors, were also drafted further down the line.

And — he's had more All-American players than any other active coach, and three of them gained National Player of the Year honors, Phil Ford, James Worthy and Jordan.

And as might be expected from his plans to play in the McDonald House tournament, one of Smith's spare time pursuits is golf.

Gray's TD Ends Longest Game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mel Gray's 24-yard touchdown run three minutes, 33 seconds into the third overtime period ended the longest game in professional football history and gave the Los Angeles Express a 27-21 victory over the Michigan Panthers in a United States Football League playoff game Saturday afternoon.

In each of the first two overtime periods, Michigan kicker Novo Bojovic missed field goal attempts wide to the left.

The Express and the Panthers played 93 minutes, 33 seconds of official time, breaking the old mark of 82:40 set by the Miami Dolphins and the Kansas City Chiefs in a 1971 National Football League playoff game.

With 52 seconds left in regulation play, Kevin Nelson scored his second touchdown on a one-yard run to bring the Express to within 21-19. On the two-point conversion, quarterback Steve Young rolled around left end into the end zone to tie the score 21-21 and send the game into overtime.

With the victory, the Express advance into next Saturday's Western Division final against the winner of Sunday's first-round game between the Arizona Wranglers and the Houston Gamblers.

Stars Advance Past Generals

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kelvin Bryant ran for two touchdowns and caught a pass for another and Garcia Lane scored on a 70-yard punt return as the Philadelpha Stars crushed the New Jersey Generals 28-7 Saturday in the first round of the United States Football League playoffs.

The Stars will meet the winner of Sunday's contest between the Birmingham Stallions and the Tampa Bay Bandits for the Eastern Division championship.

Philadelphia, the runner-up in the USFL playoffs last season, avenged two earlier losses to the Generals, the only team to beat the Stars during the regular season.

Bryant, the league's second-leading rusher, finished with 117 yards on 23 carries and caught two passes for 33 yards.

The Generals outgained the Stars by 26 yards, 179-143, in the first half but the Stars stingy "Doghouse" defense held the Generals scoreless as Philadelphia exploded with three second-quarter touchdowns.

Philadelpha's Pete Kugler sacked Generals quarterback Brian Sipe forcing a fumble, and linebacker John Bunting recovered the ball at the Generals' 49-yard line to start the Stars' second-quarter rampage. Quarterback Chuck Fusina completed two passes to the New Jersey 10 and Bryant scored three minutes into the second quarter.

When the Generals' next drive stalled, Bob Grupp booted a 55-yard punt that Lane caught on the run and returned for a touchdown with 10:35 left in the quarter.

American Influence Shows In Olympics

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Olympic basketball will have a more American look four years from now at the 1988 Summer Games in Seoul, Korea.

"More and more they are moving towards the U.S. NCAA rules and that's the action we've been striving for," said Dr. Edward Steitz, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee and athletic director at Springfield College.

Among the American innovations adopted by the international committee at its meetings last week in Munich are the three-point goal and a series of foul shot changes aimed at cutting down the roughness of the international game, said Steitz.

"These are seven really significant changes that we have been seeking for a number of years," said Steitz who has been in charge of the NCAA basketball rules committee for the past 27 years. "They should help the small person and also the defense."

The Olympic three-pointer — at 21½ feet from the center of the basket — will be closer to the shot used by the National Basketball Association than those U.S. colleges have experimented with in recent seasons, which have been as short as 19 feet or the top of the key.

Players fouled in the act of shooting a three-pointer will get three foul shots, he said, but gone will be the three-chances-to-make-two foul shot rule that currently is in effect in international play when a player is fouled in the act of shooting. It will be replaced by the American two-shot rule.

The number of fouls before a team goes into the one-and-one bonus also has been decreased from eight to seven; the U.S. five-second rule on defensive violations has been adopted, and the penalty for a technical foul called on a coach has been raised from one free throw to two.

Price Strokes Four-Shot Lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — South African Nick Price has a four-shot lead and a major challenge facing him in Sunday's final round of the 75th Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"It will be difficult — very difficult. I know it will be difficult," Price said Saturday as he looked ahead to the final 18 holes of the chase for a $94,500 first prize and the Canadian national championship.

The difficulty lies in the formidable figure of Jack Nicklaus, the legendary Golden Bear himself, on the prowl for the one important title that has eluded him in an unparalleled career.

Nicklaus, frequently a challenger but not yet a winner of this event, moved into a tie for second with a third-round 69 — despite a three-putt, bogey-6 on the final hole — and a 211 total.

That placed him within four shots of the lead when the struggling Price hit into the water on the final hole and made bogey. Nicklaus will be paired with Price in the final group off the tee in Sunday's play.

"I know the people will be wanting to see Jack win, just because he is the man himself," said Price, who held a six-shot lead at the start of the day's play, but could do no better than a struggling 73 and completed 54 holes at 207, nine shots under par on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"I'll just have to put myself in my own little shell, play my own game, try not to worry about what's going on around me. It will be difficult," Price said. "I know it will be difficult."

Nicklaus, eight shots off the lead after 36 holes, halved that margin despite the three-putt lapse on the last hole.

"I just hate to lose that last stroke," Nicklaus said. "That means I have to go out tomorrow and try to get it back.

"Four strokes is not too far back. And there's only one man in front of me.

"If I play a good round tomorrow, I have a chance. But I have to have a good round to have a chance. We'll see.

"It's a position I've been in here before," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles but not yet a winner of the Canadian Open. He's been a runner-up in this event five times and was third twice, including last season.

Nicklaus, 44, winner of the Memorial tournament four weeks ago, shared the No. 2 spot with defending title-holder John Cook and Greg Norman, the long-hitting Australian known as the "Great White Shark."

Norman had a 2-under-par 70 in the bright, sunny weather and Cook shot a 71.

Mark Pfeil was next at 66-212 and was followed by Clarence Rose at 72-213.

Lee Trevino, a three-time winner of this event, had a 70 and was tied with Canadian Dick Zokol and rookie Corey Pavin at 214, nine shots back. Zokol had a 71 and Pavin struggled to a 74.

"I didn't drive it very well, and that was the cause of most of my trouble today," said Price, who led from wire to wire in winning the World Series of Golf last fall and has led all the way in this one.

"Maybe it will be a good lesson to me for tomorrow. On this course you simply must drive it in the fairway."

He matched four birdies against as many bogeys over the first 13 holes but had to struggle coming home.

After driving into deep rough on the 14th, Price had to make a six-footer to save par. On the par-5 16th, he got his second into the back bunker, but took three from there and walked off with a par. The 17th was another drive into the rough and another one-putt par.

Strangely enough, it was not the drive that cost him on the 18th. He got his tee shot in the fairway and had 210 yards to the pin.

"I just came off a 4-wood shot and got it right," Price said. And there's nothing but water in that direction.

"I wanted to make birdie on the hole. A six-shot lead is a lot better than a four-shot lead, but I guess you have to take what you get," Price said.

Giants Continue Streak

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates and San Francisco Giants sit at the bottom of the heap of major league baseball, but they're going in opposite directions at the moment.

The Giants won their fourth straight game and third straight over the Pirates with a 7-5 victory Saturday, as the Pirates replaced the Giants with the worst record in baseball, suffering their fifth straight loss.

"We've got to make a move now," said Giants Manager Frank Robinson, whose team is 15 games out of first place in the National League West. "There's no better place to do it than at home."

Robinson may soon need to find a permanent spot in the order for rookie Dan Gladden, who scored three runs and drove in two with a homer to spark the Giants once again. Since joining the Giants from their Phoenix farm club, Gladden is batting .444 with two homers.

"He played real well for us last year at the end of the season," said Robinson, "but it's just an unfortunate situation for him that we have depth in the outfield. He's a hungry young man."

The Pirates used five different pitchers to try to keep the Giants from taking another win. But it all proved futile when Al Oliver's seventh inning single broke a 4-4 tie and Chili Davis' two-run single in the eighth gave the Giants some needed insurance.

Davis has six RBI in the last two at-bats after hitting a pinch-hit grand slam earlier in the week against Cincinnati.

Frank Williams, 6-1, pitched two innings to pick up the victory and Gary Lavelle worked the last two innings for his eighth save. He allowed a run in the ninth on Amos Otis' RBI grounder.

With one out in the seventh, Gladden drew a walk from Pittsburgh reliever Cecilio Guante, 2-3, and stole second. After Johnnie LeMaster flied out, left-hander Rod Scurry came on to face Oliver, who hit the first pitch up the middle to score Gladden.

Davis delivered his two-run single off Kent Tekulve in the eighth, although the runs were charged to Scurry.

The Pirates had rallied from a 4-0 deficit to tie the game in the sixth. Tony Pena drove in the first run with an RBI single and Jim Morrison drilled a three-run homer, his second, off Williams to cap the rally. Giants starter Bill Laskey left in the sixth after walks to Lee Mazzilli and Bill Madlock and a single by Jason Thompson loaded the bases. One run scored on a grounder before Morrison's game-tying homer.

Gladden singled in the first inning, stole second and scored on Jeff Leonard's two-out single off Jose DeLeon to give the Giants a 1-0 lead. Gladden hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to key a three-run uprising as the Giants took a 4-0 lead.

Laskey walked and Gladden hit his second homer of the year to give the Giants a 3-0 lead. LeMaster then doubled and scored on Leonard's single.

Pryor Powers Royals Over Yanks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Greg Pryor can play every infield postion for Kansas City, but the New York Yankees are finding out that he can sting you with his bat, too.

Pryor slammed a three-run homer to back the six-hit pitching of rookie Mark Gubicza as the Royals hammered out a 6-2 decision.

"He's been a good player; he's been an outstanding player since I've been here," Royals Manager Dick Howser said of Pryor. "He beat Baltimore with a home run and now he does this."

Pryor, who is platooning with Buddy Biancalana while second baseman Frank White is injured, hit his only other home run this season April 25 against the Orioles. The homer Saturday capped a tie-breaking four-run outburst against Ron Guidry, 6-6, in the fourth inning.

"I've played first, second, third and short," Pryor said. "It's ny fourth year of doing it. I've gotten used to doing it. I'm not a Frank White or a George Brett, so I can accept my role here."

Pryor is batting .190 against the rest of the American League and .563 against the Yankees with nine hits in 16 at-bats.

Gubicza, who also benefited from solo home runs by Steve Balboni and Butch Davis, said he felt stronger as the game went on.

"I've adjusted to going nine innings every time out," he said. "Even in high school, the first two innings have been a struggle for me. But I always seem to get stonger after that. I should be able to finish a game with a lead like that."

Gubicza, 5-7, walked four, struck out six and allowed only three hits after the second inning, including Steve Kemp's solo home run in the seventh.

With the score tied 1-1, Hal McRae walked with one out in the fourth, took second on Darryl Motley's single and scored when Slaught singled. Pryor followed with his home run into the left-field seats.

Davis gave Kansas City a 6-1 lead with his first home run of the season in the fifth inning. It was the 14th home run surrendered by Guidry in 129 1-3 innings. Guidry allowed all the Kansas City runs in his five-inning stint and saw his earned run average swell to 4.11.

TORONTO (AP) — Doyle Alexander had his bread-and-butter pitch, the changeup, working to perfection Saturday.

"It's like a fastball that kinda dives," the veteran right-hander said after scattering seven hits in the Toronto Blue Jays' 6-2 victory over the Oakland Athletics. "The key to a good changeup is having the same arm speed as you have on a fastball.

"A lot of people think a changeup is a so-so fastball, but I consider a changeup to be a separate pitch and you've got to spend as much time on it as you do the rest of your pitches. The arm speed is the key."

Alexander, 6-4, walked two and struck out six in pitching his second complete game of the season.

Shortstop Tony Fernandez, starting for only the seventh time, had a double and a two-run single despite a pregame batting average of .091.

"He's been so consistent that you expect to win any time he touches the rubber," Manager Bobby Cox said of Alexander. "He can hang tough with the best of them. He makes a living off that changeup."

Toronto scored its first run off Bill Krueger, 5-4, in the opening inning. Damaso Garcia walked, moved to second on an infield out and scored on Cliff Johnson's infield hit which shortstop Tony Phillips fielded deep behind second base.

Toronto made it 2-0 with an unearned run in the third inning. Fernandez led off with a ground-rule double that bounced over the right-field fence and went to third on Lloyd Moseby's grounder. George Bell followed with a grounder to third baseman Carney Lansford, who bobbled the ball and then threw into the dirt at first as Fernandez scored.

Three more runs in the fourth inning made it 5-0. Jesse Barfield led off with an infield hit. Barfield stole second and one out later Buck Martinez walked.

Seattle.....2

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Beattie, plagued by shoulder tendinitis for more than a year, is back on track for the Seattle Mariners.

"I think his problems are behind him," Seattle Manager Del Crandall said Saturday after Beattie scattered six hits, struck out seven and didn't issue a walk in a 2-1 victory over Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd and the Boston Red Sox.

"I didn't have my best stuff, but I know how to pitch here (Fenway Park)," Beattie said. "They've got a tough lineup and you've got to pitch inside and keep them off-balance. You can't let (Jim) Rice, (Tony) Armas and (Dwight) Evans extend their arms and twist an outside pitch. There's no room in left field to make mistakes."

Beattie, a former Dartmouth College star who will be 30 on the Fourth of July, also has another pitching theory.

"My attitude going into every game is that I lost my last start because I don't want to lose two in a row," he said.

And he hasn't lost two in a row since he dropped three straight between May 18-28, when his record was 3-6 as he struggled to overcome his shoulder trouble.

In outdueling Boyd, who allowed only four hits and struck out seven, Beattie posted his fourth victory in a row. He compiled a 5-1 record with a 2.23 earned run average during the month of June, making him 8-7 over-all with a 2.87 earned run average.

Boyd, 2-6, took another tough loss as Dave Henderson broke up the pitching duel with a tie-breaking homer with one out in the seventh inning. Henderson's sixth home run sailed far over the high screen atop the left-field wall for his sixth homer.

"I feel like I won," said Boyd, who was given a standing ovation after striking out the final batter in the ninth inning.

Veteran Wade Loses Battle Against Sweden's Karlsson

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Virginia Wade, who's been playing at Wimbledon for nearly a quarter of a century, battled a sprightly 20-year-old from Sweden for 2 hours and 16 nail-chewing minutes Saturday and lost.

The victor was unheralded Carina Karlsson, a stockbroker's daughter and Federation Cup player who gained entry to Wimbledon through the qualifying round.

Asked if she would return to the famed grass courts next year, Wade said: "I don't know. I take it as it comes. I have spent the last 10 years saying I don't know. I'm too tired now to think about things like that."

For Wade, who on Friday ousted No. 5 seed Zina Garrison on Centre Court, the shoe was on the other foot.

In 23 years at Wimbledon — an all-time record as the tournament celebrates 100 years of women's tennis — the 38-year-old from the south England port of Bournemouth has seen a lot of fresh young faces.

"She really just went for it," Wade said. "She has a good all-around game, quite a lot of potential. If she played this well all the time ..."

Karlsson now faces Andrea Temesvari of Hungary, who beat Susan Leo of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

Karlsson scored breaks in the third and seventh games to take the first set in 21 minutes, then saw Wade claw back in the second to win on a service break in the final game.

The last set pitted Wade's experience and volleying against the brute force of the young Swede's passing shots. After yielding a pair of service breaks each, the two held serve until 8-8, when Karlsson broke, Wade broke back, Karlsson broke again, and Wade finally succumbed 6-2, 4-6, 11-9.

"I was aware that I broke a lot of English hearts," Karlsson said afterward. "I had all my friends spread out on both sides of the court. And I could hear them, too."

It was a sad end to this year's singles tournament for Wade, the 1977 women's champion and a surprise quarter-finalist last year.

"It drives me crazy to spend three hours" — it must have seemed that long — "on court and all that aggravation and still to have lost," she said.

In victory, Karlsson was magnanimous. "She's still a good player," she said as she basked in reporters' questions about her background, coaching and heroes.

"I like Ilie Nastase — he has so much fun on the court," she said. "I also admire Chris Evert and the way she plays."

Then, being Swedish, she added, "and Bjorn Borg."

Karlsson began playing tennis in her native Orebro at age 10. She turned pro at 17 and is currently ranked 182 in the world.

Just three weeks ago, Karlsson qualified for her first major tournament, the French Open, only to lose to Bettina Bunge of West Germany in straight sets in the opening round.

After Saturday's marathon third-round match, televised live in Britain, she told reporters:

"I kept telling myself it was just a game — be calm and stay cool. This is the best win of my career.

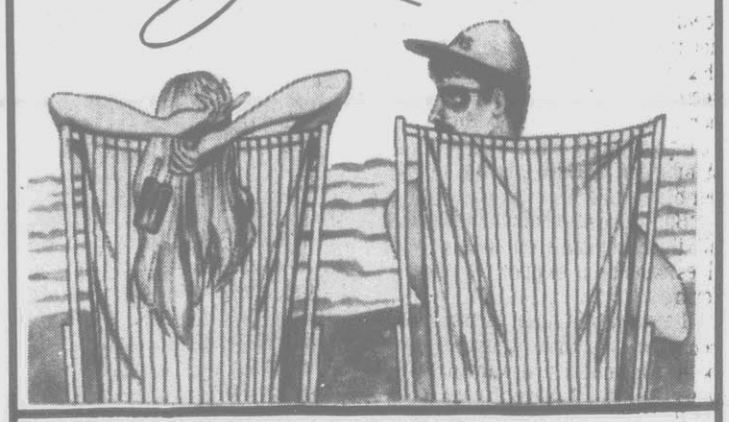

"After I got into the tournament, I thought my chances were maybe getting through one or two rounds if I was lucky. Now, I'm happy for each round that I win."

DiCarlo Tops Eight-Year Old Mark

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George DiCarlo of Denver brought U.S. freestyle swimming out of the doldrums by breaking Brian Goodell's 8-year-old American record for 1,500 meters as the U.S. Olympic Trials concluded Saturday.

Before this week, no American had broken 15 minutes and 17 seconds at the longest Olympic swimming distance, since 1976. But DiCarlo was timed in 15:13.11 in Friday's preliminary heats and challenged the 15-minute barrier in Saturday's final with a 15:01.51 clocking.

That surpassed Goodell's U.S. mark of 15:02.40 set at the 1976 Olympics. On Thursday, DiCarlo smashed Goodell's 7-year-old 400 freestyle American record.

Meanwhile, Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., finished fourth in the women's 200 backstroke and had to settle for swimming in three individual events at the Los Angeles Games. She had been in one individual event each day of the six-day Trials.

Amy White of Mission Viejo, Calif., won the 200 backstroke in 2:14.41 and Tori Trees of Louisville, Ky., got the other Olympic spot in the event by finishing second in 2:15.34. Caulkins was timed in 2:15.68.

Twenty-four men, nine of them 1980 Olympians, and 19 women, including seven from the 1980 team and one from the 1976 Games, will represent the United States in swimming at the Games.

"I kind of knew I was on American-record pace," DiCarlo said of the 1,500 final. "I made a move at the 700-meter mark. I tried to see the clock to see the splits (for each lap) but I was only able to see it on the last lap when I saw 14-something."

Asked how he felt after the grueling race, DiCarlo said, "The time didn't hurt as bad as the 15:13 I did yesterday. The noise of the crowd really helped in the last 400 meters."

DiCarlo said he was prouder of the 1,500 record because it came second and meant he had won both distance freestyle races.

"I wanted to win this one badly because I have never won both the 400 and the mile in the same meet," he said.

Valdimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union is the only man to break 15 minutes for 1,500 meters and he holds the world record of 14:54.75.

Mike O'Brien, who just graduated from high school in Mission Viejo, Calif., pushed DiCarlo all the way and placed second in 15:04.49. The 1-2 finishers in each event at the six-day Trials earned a berth in the Olympics.

In other events Saturday, Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Ky., posted the fastest time this year in the women's 200-meter butterfly and swamped the competition in the event.

Meagher, who finished second in the Trials 100 butterfly to also earn an Olympic berth in that race, was timed in 2:07.53 to beat second-place finisher Nancy Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla., by 3.72 seconds.

Hogshead also will swim the 200 butterfly at the Los Angeles Games in addition to the 100 freestyle and 200 individual medley.

Meagher, the 10th of 11 children, holds the world record in both women's butterfly events. Her world mark in the 200 is 2:05.96 and she also has the next five fastest times in history in the event.

with a weapon. Her forehand was impressive and I had to work hard for my points. She didn't give me anything."

Lloyd later ripped into the press for focusing too much on players' private lives. She is currently separated from her husband, British tennis star John Lloyd.

"I think that the press for some reason this Wimbledon has been really horrendous and really picking on the players and their private lives," she said. "The players don't really want to come in here, to tell you the truth. Some of the stories I've read have no element of truth.

"It would just be nice for the second week for the press to just write about tennis ... and treat the players a little more fairly. Because if you want to see great tennis, then don't try to upset us," she said.

Curren, who walked onto the grass courts of Wimbledon shortly after learning of his father's death, bested India's Ramesh Krishnan 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, 7-6, taking the last two sets in identical 7-3 tiebreakers.

His father, Ron Curren, died at his home in Durban, South Africa, Friday following a heart attack.

Scanlon was leading 6-2, 2-6, 7-6, 1-2 when his opponent, Boris Becker of West Germany, tore ligaments in his left ankle and had to retire. Becker was taken to a hospital where his leg was placed in a cast.

"He had hit the first volley, I think, and I hit a passing shot and he was on the ground," Scanlon said of Becker. "When I looked at his ankle, it was like it had swollen a couple of inches. It looked like he had golf balls stuck in his sock."

Scanlon will meet McEnroe next in a rematch of last year's Wimbledon, which McEnroe won, and the 1983 U.S. Open, where Scanlon won.

"He's the No. 1 player in the world, but I don't think he will take me lightly because of how I played in the U.S. Open," the Dallas native said of McEnroe.

Besides the Scanlon-McEnroe battle, other fourth-round matchups on Monday will send Gerulaitis against Sadri, Cash against Curren, Moor against Gomez, No. 2 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia against American Scott Davis, No. 3 Jimmy Connors against No. 16 Tim Mayotte, No. 12 Johan Kriek against fellow American Paul Annacone, and No. 5 Jimmy Arias against No. 13 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia.

In the women's draw, it will be No. 1 Martina Navratilova against Australian Elizabeth Sayers, No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria against Britain's Anne Hobbs, No. 4 Pam Shriver against No. 13 Barbara Potter, No. 6 Kathy Jordan against No. 9 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, Durie against Graf, Sukova against Mandlikova, Karlsson against Temesvari and Lloyd against Kohde-Kilsch.

Karlsson's hard-earned victory eliminated Wade, Britain's last Wimbledon singles winner. It was Wade's 64th match on these grass courts and her 22nd loss in a tournament she first entered two years before Karlsson was born.

"I was aware that I broke a lot of English hearts," said Karlsson, whose accurate baseline game was augmented by aggressive play that saw her take the net from the serve-and-volley specialist.

feeling abut it. Not in a derogatory, not in a bad way, saying you're all this and that, which some players seem to do, but just to say we're here, this is the most important torunament in the world, Wimbledon, and we all want to play our best tennis.

"But we're also human beings and all this rubbish about our private lives should be stopped. It is interfering.

"I see players upset in the locker room and, you know, it just seems to be in England. I just wanted to tell you guys how the players feel.

"It would just be nice for the second week for the press to just write about tennis and get all the quotes right — what the players say — and treat the players a little more fairly. Because if you want to see great tennis, then don't try to upset us."

Alfaro, Abner Pace U.S. Win

CINCINNATI (AP) — Second baseman Flavio Alfaro drove in three runs and right fielder Ben Abner belted a pair of solo homers to power the U.S. Olympic baseball team to a 9-1 exhibition victory over South Korea at Riverfront Stadium.

The U.S. team belted a total of four homers to finish with a 4-1-1 mark in its series with the South Koreans and improve to 11-1-1 overall on a 33-city exhibition tour in preparation for the Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

Abner, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., drilled solo homers in the first and sixth innings, his second and third of the exhibition tour.

Alfaro, of San Fernando, Calif., lashed a two-run single for a 3-0 lead in the second.

U.S. starter Pat Pacillo, the Cincinnati Reds' top pick in this year's amateur draft, walked one and struck out one in two hitless innings. Reliever Drew Hall of Rush, Ky., surrendered the Koreans' only run on a bases-loaded walk in the fourth.

Alfaro's infield single scored another U.S. run in the bottom of the fourth. B.J. Surhoff of Rye, N.Y., belted a three-run homer in the fifth for the U.S. squad, his second homer in the last two games, for a 7-1 lead.

Rookies Help Seattle Win, 5-3

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The distance from Lynn, Mass., to Boston isn't very far as the crow flies. But as the baseball flies, it's much farther from the Class AA Eastern League to Fenway Park and the majors.

Two years ago, third baseman Jim Presley and first baseman Alvin Davis were pounding the ball for nearby Lynn. Now, the fellow rookies are a large part of the Seattle Mariners' future.

And the future may not be too far away if they keep hitting. Presley belted his first major-league homer and Davis delivered a two-run single in the seventh inning Friday night, rallying the Mariners to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"I suppose the homer is a thrill, but I guess it really hasn't dawned on me yet," said Presley, who was called up from the minors last weekend and has two doubles, a triple and his homer to go with a .300 batting average in six games. "In this ball park, you just have to get a pitch you can drive. The first two times up I missed a couple of fastballs. Then I got one up and I hit it hard."

In other American League games, Detroit beat Minnesota 7-5 after dropping the opener of a twi-night double-header 5-3, Milwaukee nipped California 1-0, Chicago edged Baltimore 2-1, Oakland shaded Toronto 2-1, Kansas City squeaked past New York 3-2 and Cleveland outslugged Texas 13-12 in 13 innings.

Seattle trailed 3-1 when Presley homered over the high screen atop the 37-foot wall in left-center. With two out, Spike Owen walked and went to third on Jack Perconte's single. Barry Bonnell walked to fill the bases and Davis singled off loser Bobby Ojeda to score Owen and Perconte. Al Cowens homered for Seattle's first run and the Mariners picked up an insurance run in the ninth on a wild pitch by Steve Crawford.

Seattle starter Ed Vande Berg allowed seven hits, including Mike Easler's 13th homer, in 6 2-3 innings before leaving with a blister on his pitching hand. Vande Berg ended a personal five-game losing streak with relief help from Salome Barojas.

Twins 5-5, Tigers 3-7

Kirk Gibson's second two-run homer, a tie-breaking shot in the ninth inning off Pete Filson, powered the Tigers to their victory in the nightcap. Ruppert Jones and Chet Lemon also homered for Detroit, while Tom Brunansky and Tim Laudner homered for the Twins. Minnesota took the opener with the help of a two-run homer by Andre David, who became the 50th player in history to homer on his first major-league at-bat. He teed off on Detroit ace Jack Morris. The split enabled the Tigers to boost their lead in the American League East to 10 games over Toronto.

Minnesota's victory in the first game snapped an 11-game winning streak against the Twins by Morris, 12-4, who hadn't lost to them since Sept. 6, 1980. "I was excited," said the 26-year-old David, who signed with the Twins in 1980 and joined the team last Saturday. "I don't know, I can't explain the feeling. I don't know who was more excited, me or the rest of the guys.

"This is like a dream. You wouldn't even imagine trying a thing like that. I wasn't nervous so much as just overcome by the situation. You know, 44,000 fans in the stadium and facing the best pitcher in the American League."

Brewers 1, Angels 0

Rick Manning drove in the game's only run with an eighth-inning single and Moose Haas, with last-out help from Rollie Fingers, hurled a five-hitter to outduel California rookie Ron Romanick. Ted Simmons opened the Brewers' eighth with a single and pinch-runner Charlie Moore was sacrificed to second by Jim Sundberg and advanced to third on Ed Romero's deep fly. Manning then stroked a single to left for the run.

White Sox 2, Orioles 1

Richard Dotson hurled a three-hitter for his 10th victory and Ron Kittle hit his 18th homer. The White Sox scored the winning run off Dennis Martinez in the bottom of the fourth when Greg Walker led off with a single and Kittle walked. The runners advanced on Mike Squires' infield out and Walker scored on a sacrifice fly by Scott Fletcher. Kittle homered in the second inning and Baltimore's Mike Young tied it with a fourth-inning homer. Chicago first baseman Tom Paciorek suffered a broken right hand when he was hit by a pitch in the first inning.

Athletics 2, Blue Jays 1

Joe Morgan singled home Rickey Henderson with the winning run in the eighth inning. Henderson led off the eighth with a single off Dave Stieb, stole his 35th base and moved to third on an infield out by Dwayne Murphy. Morgan followed with the game-winning hit. Oakland's Mike Heath homered in the fifth inning to tie it 1-1. Winning pitcher Ray Burris allowed five hits over seven innings and Bill Caudill pitched the last two innings for his 16th save.

"It (the AL West race) looks like it's going to be a dogfight to the end and it looks like we're preparing ourselves to be part of it," said Oakland Manager Jackie Moore. "I have to give my guys credit. They just kept battling back. We've lost some tough ballgames, but they just

The Optimists pushed over a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to nip the Jaycees, 9-8, in their final regular season game of the year in the North State Little League. The Optimists finished the season with a 10-8 mark while the Jaycees were 3-15.

The Jaycees took the lead in the first on a solo homer by Carlester Crumpler, only to see the Optimists rally for two in the bottom of the frame. The Jaycees came back with five in the second inning, while the Optimists scored four times to tie it at 6-6.

The Jaycees added one in the top of the third, regaining a 7-6 lead, but the Optimists tied it up in the fifth.

Then, in the bottom of the seventh, Terrance Smith walked and stole both second and third. After Heath Clark walked, Park Williams singled, driving in Smith with the game-winning run.

Smith led the Optimist hitting with three, while Clark, Kendall Hardee and Mitchel Jones each had two hits. Crumpler and Jonathan West each had two for the Jaycees.

Chris Christopher hurled a three hitter and hit a grand slam homer as the Moose romped to a 10-1 win over First Federal in the final regular season game of the year for both in the Tar Heel Little League.

Both teams finished the year with 5-13 records.

The Moose pushed ahead for good in the first inning, scoring four times. Jonathan Foley walked as did Al Debias. Charles Rogers also walked, loading the bases. That set the stage for Christopher, who drove the ball out of the park for the grand-slam.

The Moose added one in the third, three in the fourth and two more in the fifth. The lone First Federal run scored in the second.

Christopher was the game's only player with more than one hit, getting three.

Division I-A Nixes Grid Playoff

CHICAGO (AP) — The championship of major college football will apparently remain a mythical title.

Delegates to the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I-A legislative meetings adjourned Friday after dealing a setback to those who hope to stage a national championship game in major college football. In addition, the three-year battle over television rights moved to within two weeks of another major showdown.

The delegates from the top football-playing schools heard the committee report on the playoff possibility which was first aired in a meeting in Kansas City in May. By a show of hands, the football officials clearly opposed the idea of a one-game national championship.

If it had been approved, the NCAA Council would have put the proposal on the ballot at next January's convention and a national championship game could have been played as early as January 1986.

"Based on this, I would presume that the council will no longer pursue the matter at this time," William Baughn of Colorado, chairman of the meeting, said after the vote.

Division I-A football is the only upper-division sport in the NCAA which does not sponsor a national championship.

Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, who helped prepare the report on the national playoff concept, lamented the negative vote. Dooley had endorsed a one-game playoff, to be held one week before the National Football League's championship game, as a potential boon to other school sports.

Opponents feared it would create an even greater rift between the big and little schools.

Stephen Horn, president of Long Beach State, said he feared that without a championship game many schools could lose millions in revenue because of this week's Supreme Court decision striking down NCAA control of football telecast rights.

Juan Burciaga, the New Mexico district judge who blistered the NCAA with the ruling that was subsequently upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, will be asked next week to allow the NCAA to offer a voluntary television plan to its members.

The NCAA said it would try to put forth a 1984 national television rights plan even as the College Football Association voted to mail out commitment forms to its plan by July 12. This would put the two camps in direct competition for the support of the majority of schools.

"Nobody knows what is going to happen now," said Otis Singletary, president of the CFA and the University of Kentucky. "But the time has come to make a decision. We're just two months away from the start of the season and nobody believes we can go any later than July 12 without having something to take to the networks."

The CFA is actually hoping to win approval of a "coalition" plan which would bring the Pac-10 and Big Ten under its television banner. Those conferences are not CFA members and have supported the NCAA in the protracted battle over TV rights. However, the widespread belief is that everyone would be better under the same plan and representatives of the CFA and Big Ten and Pac-10 worked out a coalition package last month.

The NCAA first must get approval from Burciaga in Albuquerque, N.M. It was Burciaga who ruled against the NCAA in an antitrust case brought by the Universities of Oklahoma and Georgia which was upheld on Wednesday by the Supreme Court. His original order included an injunction prohibiting the NCAA from ever entering into another television agreement and that order must be lifted before the NCAA can proceed.

The Big Ten and Pac-10 would opt for NCAA administration, spokesmen for both conferences said. The relative handful of the other 105 I-A members, which include the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and the Mid-America Conference, would do the same.

The swing votes would come from within the CFA, which includes militant anti-NCAA institutions such as Oklahoma and Georgia, a core of moderates and a few staunch NCAA supporters.

Walter Byers, NCAA executive director, said "a substantial majority" of I-A schools will opt for the NCAA plan if given a choice.

come back the next day and turn it around. If nothing, we're going to have some fun."

Royals 3, Yankees2

Willie Wilson drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Bud Black combined with Dan Quisenberry on a four-hitter. Black handcuffed the Yankees on one hit until the seventh inning when rookie Brian Dayett hit a two-run homer. Wilson singled home runs off Phil Niekro in the third and fifth innings and Don Slaught delivered a bases-loaded sacrifice fly sixth for what proved to be the winning run. Quisenberry came on with one out in the ninth and posted his 20th save, tops in the majors.

Indians 13, Rangers 12

Brook Jacoby singled through a drawn-in infield with none out in the bottom of the 13th inning for the winning run. Dave Tobik walked Jerry Willard leading off the 13th and pinch-runner Joe Carter went to third when George Vukovich singled. Jacoby then ripped a single between third base and shortstop.

Andre Thornton hit two homers for Cleveland, which also got home runs from Mel Hall, Jerry Willard and Mike Hargrove. Thornton, Hall and Willard hit consecutive homers in the sixth inning. Thornton's was his 18th of the season, sixth in his last six games and 12th in the month of June. Buddy Bell and Pete O'Brien connected for Texas.

Horton Finally Upstages Chicken

By The Associated Press

Ricky Horton finally upstaged The Fabulous Chicken.

An overflow crowd of 45,468 turned out Friday night in San Diego to attend the 10th anniversary of baseball's most popular mascot and watch the Padres take on the St. Louis Cardinals.

Yet it was Horton, making just his fourth major-league start, who attracted most of the attention as the rookie left-hander held the Padres hitless for 7 2-3 innings before finishing with a two-hitter in a 5-0 victory.

"He must have been funny tonight, but I don't really know because I had more important things on my mind," Horton said.

The 24-year-old hurler — to his displeasure — had seen the dancing bird before.

"It's the first time I've lasted past the third inning when the chicken was in town," Horton said. "I pitched a couple of times last year (with St. Louis' Class AAA team in Louisville) when he drew a big crowd and I got to watch most of his act because I was out of there early."

Kevin McReynolds ended Horton's no-hit bid by lining a double off the left-field wall with two outs in the eighth inning. The hit barely eluded left fielder Lonnie Smith.

"I lost the ball when I jumped," Smith said. "I heard it hit the wall."

Said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog: "If he'd caught it, it would have been a helluva catch."

In other National League games, Montreal halted Cincinnati 7-3, Atlanta topped New York 5-3, Philadelphia belted Houston 7-2, Los Angeles stung Chicago 7-1, and San Francisco beat Pittsburgh 3-0.

Horton, 4-1, had allowed just one baserunner — a walk to Carmelo Martinez on a 3-2 pitch in the fifth — before McReynolds belted a changeup for the double.

"I had to reach to hit it," McReynolds said.

Horton allowed a one-out single to Alan Wiggins in the ninth before getting Tony Gwynn to bounce into a game-ending double play.

Lonnie Smith delivered an RBI single in the first inning off Eric Show, 8-5. The Cardinals added two runs in the fifth, and Lonnie Smith and Ozzie Smith cracked run-scoring singles in the sixth.

Games Played Leader

Montreal Expos first baseman Pete Rose waits in the on-deck circle prior to his first at bat during the first inning of the Expos game against Cincinnati Friday in Cincinnati. Rose became the all-time major league leader in games played, playing in his 3,309th game of his 22-year career. (AP Laserphoto)

Horton, who struck out five and walked two, made an easy assessment of the game.

"I didn't feel any pressure. I'm in the seventh or eighth inning with a no-hitter — why not enjoy it?"

Expos 7, Reds 3

Charlie Lea overcame a rough start and then settled into a groove to shut down the Reds.

Lea, 12-4, retired the last 19 batters in Cincinnati and finished with a five-hitter. No Red reached base after Dave Parker's RBI single in the third.

The triumph enabled Lea to tie St. Louis' Joaquin Andujar and Jack Morris of Detroit for the major league lead in victories. Lea also became the first Montreal pitcher ever to win his 12th game of the season in June.

Tim Wallach drew a bases-loaded walk in the third inning for the Expos and cracked a two-run homer in the seventh, his 12th of the season. Parker hit a solo home run in the second, his sixth.

Montreal's Pete Rose set a major league record by playing in his 3,809th game, surpassing former Boston slugger Carl Yastrzemski.

Phillies 7, Astros 2

Philadelphia spotted visiting Houston an early 1-0 lead before exploding for six runs in the fourth inning.

Ozzie Virgil's two-run homer, his 11th, sparked the outburst. Garry Maddox cracked an RBI single and Glenn Wilson then capped the uprising by belting a three-run homer, his fifth.

Winner Steve Carlton, 6-4, gave up seven hits through the first eight innings. He left the game when Kevin Bass opened the ninth with a line-drive single off Carlton's right shin. The injury was not believed to be serious.

Carlton struck out 10, raising his all-time major league-leading total to 3,798. The victory was the 305th of his career, moving him past Eddie Plank into second place on the all-time list of left-handers behind Warren Spahn's 363.

Braves 5, Mets 3

With Len Barker sidelined with a tender elbow, Atlanta Manager Joe Torre was in need of a starting pitcher — and Steve Bedrosian got the call.

Bedrosian, making his first start of the season after 27 relief appearances, went seven innings and gave up four hits for the victory. It was the sixth career start for Bedrosian in 177 appearances. Bedrosian raised his record to 5-5 and Donnie Moore got his seventh save.

The visiting Braves outhit the Mets 15-6. Rafael Ramirez had four hits for Atlanta, which scored three runs in the second inning and two more in the fourth.

Dodgers 7, Cubs 1

Rookie Orel Hershiser, 3-3, scattered nine hits and struck out eight as Los Angeles saddled Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe with his first loss NL in three decisions since being acquired in a trade with Cleveland.

Steve Sax keyed the Dodger attack with a pair of triples. He led off the game with a triple and then stole home as part of a double steal after R.J. Reynolds had walked.

Giants 3, Pirates 0

Jeff Robinson pitched a five-hitter for San Francisco's first complete-game shutout of the season. Robinson, 4-9, struck out seven got the help of four Giant double plays, the most they've turned in a game this year. Robinson needed just 90 pitches.

Rookie Dan Gladden, playing his fourth game since being recalled to replace the injured Jack Clark, hit his first home run of the season and drove in another run with a single.

The start of the game was delayed 57 minutes because of the failure of a computer that controls the lights at San Francisco's Candlestick Park. It was the first time a game was delayed because of a light problem at Candlestick since it opened in 1960.

Palmer Set For TV Duty

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Baltimore Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer has ended speculation by saying he'll spend the summer in ABC's box as a commentator instead on trying out for the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I've been throwing and I feel fine, but the timing just doesn't seem right," Palmer said Friday from Baltimore.

Martinson Uses Training

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Martinson was not about to let a year of training go to waste.

At stake Friday was one of the eight berths in the Olympic 1,500-meter wheelchair race to be staged as a demonstration event in Los Angeles Aug. 11.

Martinson, a 37-year-old double amputee from Puyallup, Wash., was the favorite to win one of the two semifinal races on the final day of competition at the third International Games for the Disabled at Mitchel Park.

A tactical mistake — moving out of the inside lane while in the lead — almost proved costly for Martinson. The Army veteran, who lost both legs in Vietnam, held on to finish third in 4 minutes, 17.8 seconds in a race won by Jurgen Geider of West Germany in 4:16.9. Andre Vigen of Canada was second in 4:17.1.

The other semifinal was won by Pol Van Winkel of Belgium in 4:07.1, the fastest time of the night. Peter Trotter of Australia was second in 4:09.4 followed by Mel Fitzgerald in 4:10.1. The remaining two spots, decided on the next fastest times from the two races, went to Randy Snow of Terrell, Texas, 4:12.3, and Rick Hansen of Canada, 4:17.3.

"Don't worry, the finals are in Los Angeles and I'll be there," said Martinson, who manufactures wheelchairs for athletic events. "The big thing was to qualify tonight. No question, I shouldn't have given up the inside lane.

"I really don't have any explanation. It was just a tactical error, but I was determined to make it to the Olympics."

Martinson who won a gold medal in the 100-meter sprint earlier Friday, and also picked up a silver in the 800 and a bronze in the 400 during the 12-day competition.

"The 1,500 is my best event," Martinson said. "I trained 75 to 100 miles a week and spent two days on the hills. Making the Olympics is important to me. It gives handicapped athletes the opportunity to perform in the world arena. And also should open the eyes of countries not doing anything for their disabled athletes."

The Americans qualified three women for the 800-meter wheelchair race, also to be held in Los Angeles on Aug. 11.

Sharon Hedrick of Champaign, Ill., led the way in 2:23.9, followed by Sacajuwea Hunter, of Washington, D.C., in 2:40.24 and Canace Cable of Huntington Beach, Calif. in 2:32.21.

British Women Roll At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The British women are enjoying their best year at Wimbledon since 1975.

Four female players from Britain have advanced to the round of 32 and one of them — Anne Hobbs — has already moved to the final 16 with a 7-6, 3-6, 6-4 victory Friday over No. 16 Carling Bassett of Canada.

The three other British players — Jo Durie, Virginia Wade and Annabel Croft — were all scheduled to play their third-round matches today.

However, first up on center court today was to be John McEnroe, the defending men's champion, against Wally Masur of Australia, to be followed by Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia against Catherine Tanvier of France in women's play.

On Court No. 1, Kevin Curren of South Africa was to meet India's Ramesh Krishnan, followed by Croft against Chris Evert Lloyd, the No. 2 women's seed, who defeated Betsy Nagelsen 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 in a second-round match Friday that had been pushed back one day because of a rain delay.

"Wimbledon seems to be the only time the British girls do really well. The rest of the year, they are mediocre," said Bassett. "This time, they've really gotten psyched up. It's as if God is putting a spell on them."

Hobbs, 24, lost to Bassett in three close sets in Hawaii last year, their only previous meeting.

How did she explain the limited success of British players in the past?

"We just seem to reach our peak much later than the other girls," Hobbs said. "The British will never be able to turn out young players like the Americans at 15- and 16-years-old because we do not have the climate, facilities or coaches. They also get so much more match play because they have college tennis."

Hobbs, ranked No. 47 in the world, won four doubles titles last year but has yet to make the grade in singles. Against Bassett, she dropped two set points in the opening set before winning the tiebreaker.

"I always knew I would take time to mature. If I had played this match a year ago, I would have panicked," she said. "Everyone has gotten so down on British players in the past, I think it is tremendous we are all proving we can play with the best."

Twenty-four hours before Hobbs' victory, the queen of British tennis, Virginia Wade, sent the center-court crowd into a frenzy by eliminating another seed, No. 5 Zina Garrison of the United States.

Before Wimbledon, Wade had played only six tournaments this year and had won only one match and that was in February. Playing in a record 23rd consecutive All-England championships, the 1977 Wimbledon champion was scheduled to meet Carina Karlsson of Sweden, a qualifier.

If Wade wins her match, Britain should have a third representaive in the final 16 when Durie, the No. 10 seed and her country's top-ranked player, meets another qualifier, Kim Steinmetz.

But Croft almost surely come to the end of the road. The 17-year-old British junior has made up more than 100 places in the world rankings in the past year but now is to come up against Lloyd.

"It's been my ambition to play her. I've got absolutely nothing to lose," Croft said.

On Friday, No. 3 Jimmy Connors, Wimbledon champion in 1974 and 1982, broke the all-time record of singles victories here as he advanced to the fourth round with a 6-4, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4 victory over American Marty Davis. The triumph was Connors' 65th singles victory in 14 years and broke the old mark of 64 set by Britain's Arthur W. Gore between 1888 and 1927.

"It is an honor to have won the most matches at Wimbledon than any other male player, but I play to win tournaments, not matches," Connors said. "Maybe if I had won three or four more matches, I would have won this tournament a lot more. Hopefully, I am not finished yet."

Other seeded players who advanced to the fourth round included No. 2 Ivan Lendl and No. 13 Tomas Smid, both of Czechoslovakia, and Americans Jimmy Arias, No. 5; Johan Kriek, No. 12, and Tim Mayotte, No. 16.

In the women's singles, top-seeded Martina Navratilova moved into the fourth round, as did fellow Americans No. 5 Pam Shriver, No. 6 Kathy Jordan and No. 13 Barbara Potter; No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria and No. 9 Wendy Turnbull of Australia.

Three seeds were upset Friday, including No. 9 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden, who was ousted by Australian Mark Edmondson 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-7, 8-6 in a second-round match that began on Thursday but was halted by darkness after four sets.

Tagged Shrimp — North Carolina fishermen will start catching brightly-colored tagged shrimp this week.

Orange, yellow, red, blue or green streamer tags will be placed in shrimp by biologists and technicians of the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries.

Division pernonnel hope to tag some 15,000 shrimp this summer in the tributaries of Pamlico Sound, Neuse River and in waters along the southern part of the coast. They will tag shrimp three inches and larger (140 count heads off and largers). The study will continue for the next three years.

The purpose of the tagging is to obtain information on migration and harvest. Dennis Spitsbergen, biologist in charge of the tagging program, stated, "The last tagging of shrimp was in the early 1970s. There are a lot more fishermen shrimping now, and different groups of people now shrimp. Shrimping equipment had changed. Our management efforts have changed. We would like to get a better idea about how our management practices are working."

Early shrimp tagging in North Carolina was accomplished by injecting shrimp with colorful dyes. Plastic streamer tags are now being used because biologists can obtain more information from this type of tagging. In addition, this method of taggin could have less adverse affect on the shrimp than the dye method.

A reward of one dollar is offered for each returned tag and accompanying catch information. Envelopes will be distributed to fish houses so fishermen can easily return tags and information.

Successful Tournament — The first-annual River Park North Fishing Derby was held this past weekend and was a great success, according to the participants.

The day-long event drew 125 anglers, making it the largest fishing tournament ever held in Greenville. Held in conjunction with National Fishing Week, the tournament was co-sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and The Outdoor Shop.

Adult Division
Bass: Dexter Tart (first); Jim Hardin (second)
Bream: Wade Faulkner (first); Robert Britton (second)

Teenage Division
Bream: Hunter Clark (first); Dennis Tart (second)

Children's Division
Bream: Shawn Futrell (first); Kevin Rogerson (second)

Fishing Report — Fishing has pretty much settled into the summertime cycle. Most of the fish are being caught early in the morning and late afternoon. The Tar River continues to produce good catches of bream, catfish and a few rockfish.

Jack Cox had an 18-foot thresher shark eat everything he hooked last weekend off Beaufort Inlet. The shark also made a pass at Jack's boat. Maybe its time to go shark fishing!

Bill Reductions

Robert Snedaker Jr., board chairman of the United States Telephone Association and president of United Telephone System Inc., told a U.S. House of Representative task force recently that the Federal Communications Commission's access charge plan will reduce the bill of the average telephone user.

Snedaker said the average United Telephone small business customer now pays less than $13 a month in end-user charges and saves about $4.20 a month in interstate long-distance charges because of the FCC's plan. He said the savings will increase as the access charge plan is implemented next year.

Carolina Telephone, which serves over 600,000 customers in eastern North Carolina and the Piedmont, is part of the United Telephone System.

Activity Declined

The level of business activity in North Carolina declined slightly in May to 129.8, down 0.2 percent from the revised figure for April, according to the Wachovia Business Index.

Wachovia said the decrease resulted from a lower number of building permits issued coupled with an increase in initial claims for unemployment insurance. The number of new business starts was up sharply in May, following three consecutive monthly declines, and non-agricultural employment moved upward slightly.

The employment gains came from the non-manufacturing sector with increases registered in trade, services and government employment.

The Shoney's system had 1,085 restaurants in operation on May 13.

Franchise Plan Debuts In N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A franchise system for service and trade companies that selected Charlotte for its Southeast debut allows firms to be independently owned but have big company status, officials say.

The concept, known as DIAL ONE International Inc., was founded in California by the former owner and president of Century 21. It operates on the same principle as the large real estate franchising system but involves services from property management to chimney cleaning.

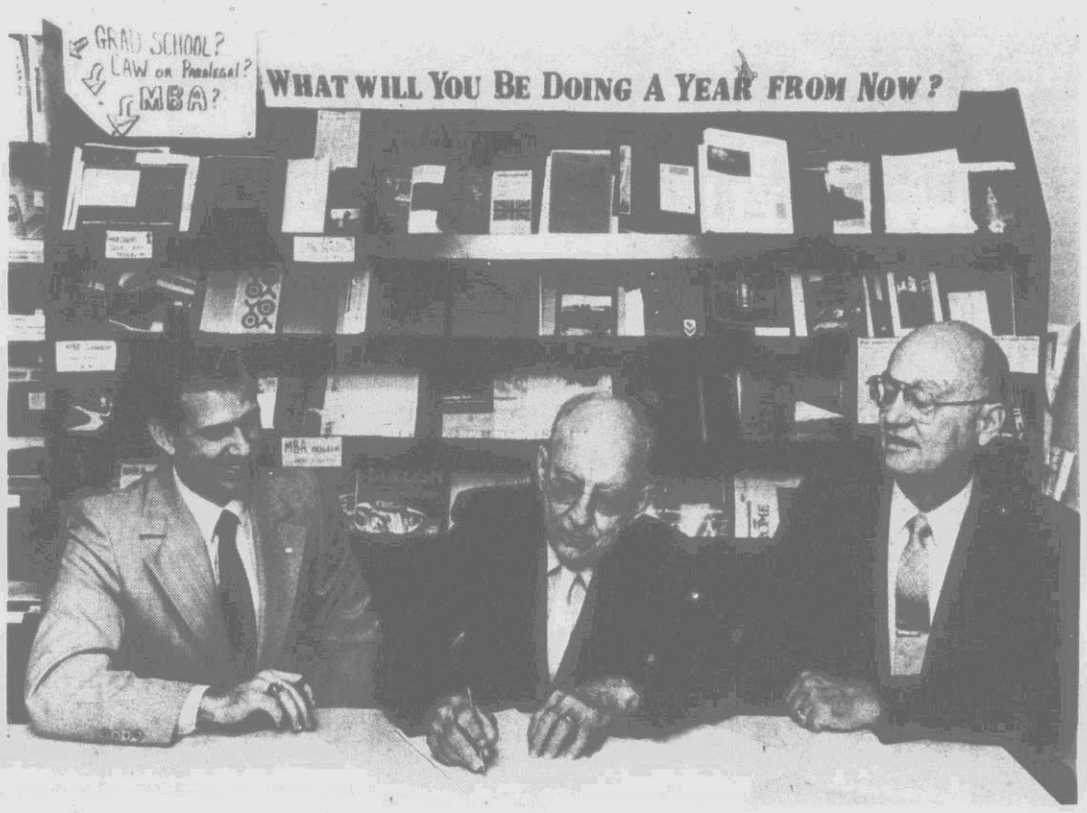

"It provides a big company name, but the firms are independently owned and operated," said William H. Kroske, the company's president, chief financial officer and chairman of the board of directors.

Businesses accepted into the system convert their vehicles to the DIAL ONE look by painting them white and adding the red and blue logo. They also are listed in the telephone book's yellow pages under DIAL ONE.

"They have had extensive training but they have not had the opportunity to be businessmen."

Not just any firm can belong to the system in which the companies "live and die by the referral business," the 46-year-old Kroske said.

ECU Careers Fund Established

Hannis T. Latham Jr.'s concern about helping young people choose their life's work — a decision he says many youngsters put off until they are well along in their education, sometimes until after graduation — has prompted him to establish a careers program fund at East Carolina University.

The careers fund, named after Latham's uncle, the late Greenville attorney Fordyce C. Harding who was one of the early backers of ECU, will sponsor activities for coordination of career planning at all levels.

"I am making this my personal crusade," Latham said. "It (the program) can have far-reaching effects by pooling and coordinating what is available in this field, and by working together to make career choosing a more meaningful, more rewarding process."

Latham, a resident of Washington, is currently the director of a careers information center which he established at the public library in Washington.

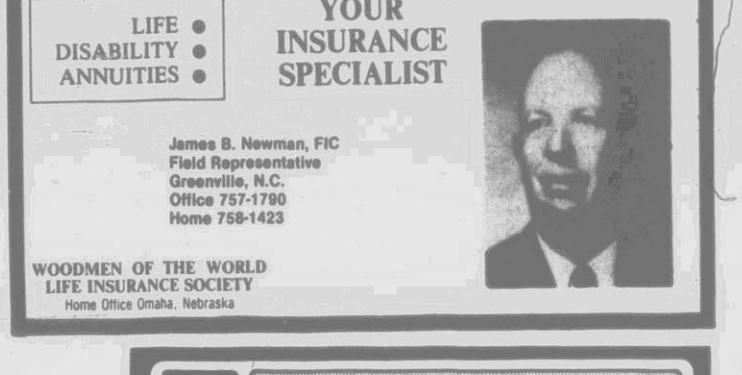

While he recognizes that "there are many fine services" available in the public schools, libraries, and in colleges and universities to assist individuals in making career decisions, he said there is need for better coordination of these services. "Career guidance should be a developmental experience," Latham said. Instead of a sporadic, spur-of-the-moment episode, he said it should be "ongoing over the years."

One of the first graduates of the ECU counselor in education master's degree program, Latham was a public school counselor at Chocowinity. A later career, which lasted nearly 20 years, was in sales of science and resarch materials for a company which has since become a subsidiary of International Business Machines (IBM). IBM will match Latham's gifts to the careers program fund.

Furney James, director of career planning and placement services at ECU, will be director of the F.C. Harding Careers Program Fund and will chair a committee to determine the nature, scope and duration of the program. Latham has requested that the fund be used to disseminate information among available counseling, guidance and career planning agencies and groups, including trade and professional societies and associations.

The Democratic primary in New Hampshire and the Democratic caucuses in Iowa, so important in the selection of the Democratic presidential candidate over the years, are conducted in largely Republican states that supply only 2 percent of the delegates to the 1984 Democratic National Convention.

Early '84 Economy Outdoes Forecasts

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — During the first six months of 1984, the economy clearly outperformed the economists.

As the year began, economists were predicting growth would slow, inflation would rise, the dollar would fall and interest rates would be little changed.

Instead, the economy surged, inflation was held to a 17-year low, and the dollar reached new heights this past week.

And all of that was accomplished despite a leap in interest rates to the highest levels in two years, including another jump in the prime lending rate last Monday.

"I'd give the economy an A-plus and I'd give the economists a D," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., a New York-based investment firm.

In retrospect, some economists now say the robust growth of the economy should not have been unexpected.

"It is principally the huge fiscal stimulus of Reagonomics — approximately $600 billion in personal and business tax cuts from 1981 to 1986 and $250 billion of increased military spending. Their effects have far more than offset the drag of high interest rates and any reductions in nondefense spending," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at the New York securities firm Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc.

"In addition, the fiscal stimulus has been like a 'time release' capsule, set for the greatest impact over 1983 to 1985," Sinai said this past week in remarks prepared for an economic conference in Las Vegas, Nev.

The brisk pace of the expansion slowly unfolded during the past six months as government growth figures kept being revised higher and higher.

First-quarter economic growth, first estimated in March at an annual rate of 7.2 percent, was later put at 9.7 percent. Analysts had been expecting growth of between 5 percent and 6 percent.

Predictions for the second quarter had ranged from no growth at all to 5 percent, but the government estimated the economy expanded at a 5.7 percent annual rate between April and June.

Since the recovery from the last recession began in late 1982, the economy has grown at a 6.7 percent average annual rate, the strongest six-quarter rise since the Korean War, said CM&M Group Inc., a New York investment firm.

While the economy has been rebounding, unemployment and business failures has been tapering off.

The civilian unemployment rate, at a post-Depression high of 10.7 percent in November 1982 and at 8.2 percent at the end of last year, had fallen to 7.5 percent in May. The labor force, meantime, expanded to a record 105.3 million, and the number of civilian non-farm jobs in the economy was growing at a faster rate in the first five months of this year than a year earlier.

Dun & Bradstreet Corp., a private business-information concern, reported this past week that its index of business failures has fallen for nine straight weeks, "suggesting that business failures finally may be on a sustained downward trend following four years of the most dramatic growth of failures since the Depression."

What made the growth even more impressive is that it came despite record growth in the nation's foreign trade deficit and sharp increases in interest rates.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that imports exceeded exports by $50.85 billion over the first five months of the year. Trade deficits set records for four straight months before the trade gap narrowed in May.

The government is projecting the trade deficit will swell to $130 billion by year's end, nearly double last year's record $69.4 billion.

Meanwhile, as a business and merger boom led to an explosion in private borrowing and as the government continued to tap credit markets to finance large deficits, interest rates climbed steadily higher.

The prime rate, the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term business loans, rose four times. Last Monday, banks adopted a 13 percent prime rate, the highest level since October 1982.

The yield on 30-year Treasury bonds, a bellwether for such long-term borrowing charges as mortgages, soared from 11.7 percent in January to 14 percent in late May before edging slightly lower.

Follow The White Blaze To Adventure

Strong Legs, A Sturdy Back And A Sense of Humor: Essentials For The Appalachian Trail

To the west, a thunderhead covered the horizon, outlined by a rose hue that signaled the end of day. A chill mountain wind blasted around the rocks, rattling rhododendrons. To the east, a bright blue sky winked goodbye to daylight.

Above, lay only sky and air. Below, the comfort of human laughter eased the chill of the stiff breeze.

This has got to be the best of both worlds, I thought, as I perched atop a boulder on Rhododendron Gap, watching the sky, delighting in the solitude yet enjoying the sound of human companionship below. I briefly pondered why I had decided to spend my few days of vacation walking with 40 pounds on my back, sleeping on rocks and getting wet and dirty.

Suddenly, the wind blasted colder, the light faded, and in the distance ridges that were not visible before lined the horizon, each a different shade of the blue-green haze that earned these mountains the name Blue Ridge. Underneath my layers of clothing goosebumps popped up. I knew why I'd come.

Backpacking can get you cold, hot, wet, dirty, tired, blistered and hungry. It can also restore your sense of humor and teach the value of human companionship.

As one of 10 backpackers on Greenville Recreation and Parks recent "Week on the Appalachian Trail" trip to southwestern Virginia, I became one of thousands of walkers to set foot on the A.T., the longest continuously marked foot path in the world, in 1984. For me it was a week cut short by sickness but crammed with beauty and challenge.

Beginning at Grayson Highlands State Park near Damascus, Va., we had blue skies, heavy packs and no blisters ... yet. After two miles, I stopped to put moleskin, the hiker's balm, on my heels.

We went at our own pace. Through this section, wild ponies grazed in open meadows, oblivious to passing foot traffic. We stayed on the ridgeline for the whole hike. Views were spectacular in every direction.

A midnight thunderstorm left us soggy and the sky cloudy the next morning. A mile-long sidetrip up Mount Rogers, the highest point in Virginia, was misty and we had no view when we reached the summit. But the walk up was cool and the forest was carpeted with moss and ferns and rich with the odor of spruce trees split apart by winter winds.

That afternoon, after a climb up Whitetop Mountain, we were drenched by a thunderstorm that lowered visibility to about 20 feet. As we emerged from the tree line into the open of the mountain bald, lightning popped around us. Water worked its way through the zipper in my rain gear and through my twice-waterproofed leather boots.

At the top, under a rain fly pitched by members of the group that arrived earlier, we shivered out the rest of the weather drinking hot chocolate and chicken soup, trying to dry out and warm up. Temperatures dropped from the 80s to the low 60s. Jokes became the most popular topic of conversation and once again, laughter punctuated the silence of the forest.

The weather was still unsettled and it was a another three-mile walk to the next sheltered campsite. We shouldered our loads and squished off in the now-cold air. At the end of the walk, another downpour caught us and we pitched the tent in the pouring rain, ate a quick bowl of tuna surprise and collapsed into sleeping bags, thankful for the much needed, if soggy, rest.

A day later, fog closed in on the peaks and temperatures plunged. Our breath made heavy vapor trails. Because of a sore throat and chills, my husband and I bailed out.

After leaving the trail and walking to a highway, we sought a place to drop our packs for the eight-mile hike to the truck. We asked a couple sitting on their front porch if we could leave the packs and pick them up later. They said yes, then as we walked away shouted for us to come back, saying our walk was a long one and they'd give us a ride to the truck, packs and all.

Wilma, the wife, hoisted our packs into the back of an ancient station wagon. Her husband opened the back doors for us and commandeered his son to drive. As I got into the car, Wilma took my hand and squeezed it. "I'm glad you stopped by," she said. "Glad to meet you."

After a warm, dry 20-minute ride full of good conversation, we were at the truck. Our mountain friends would take no money for the ride nor would they take what was left of our snacks. We waved as they drove away, and stood there, listening to the nearby stream flow, our hearts and our eyes full.

The short ride was worth the long trip.

Backpacking is only one activity in the Greenville Recreation and Parks outdoor recreation program, according to Bill Twine of the department. Canoe trips, rock climbing, whitewater rafting, skiing and bicycling are others.

In addition to GRPD-sponsored trips, Twine said he or someone in the department help groups plan their own adventures. "I would like to pass onto people who are interested that anyone in the (recreation) program will work with groups planning any type of activity they are intested in," he said. "Whether we actually lead (the trip) or just provide information, we can help."

"We feel this (planning) service is important because I'm sure there are people around that are interested (in outdoor activities) and don't know how to get started." Twine said GRPD also offers equipment groups can rent inexpensively, including tents, backpacks and sleeping bags.

According to Twine, the outdoor recreation programs serve a group of people that other GRPD programs do not reach. "The people that participate in the outdoor recreation, especially the backpacking, are people that normally don't participate in other activities. They are not softball players, or basketball players, for the most part.

"We feel there must be a great need for these programs," Twine said, "Because there is a great demand for them."

THE VICTIMS...AND THE CULPRIT...The author's feet, above, adorned by moleskin, take a brief break from the grind of lifting four-pound boots across mountain miles on the Appalachian Trail. After the second day I considered wrapping an 8x10 sheet of moleskin around each foot. The real fun was removing the moleskin after the trip — without also removing the monumental blisters underneath and peeling my feet to shreds. At left, for several miles the Appalachian Trail follows Whitetop Laurel Creek, a trout stream that features good swimming holes for tired backpackers

Text And Photos By Mary Schulken

HIGH WINDS, MISTY MOUNTAINTOP...Cold was the only way to describe the second half of the trip, with blustery winds, mist-shrouded vistas and near-freezing nighttime temperatures. Early-risers were greeted by a thin coating of ice one morning.

WHAT A VIEW!...And later, what a storm! After a three-mile hike the first day, the group set up camp at Rhododendron Gap, a meadow-like mountaintop with spectacular scenery. A short climb up a nearby rock formation provided even more impressive views. The campsite's beauty did nothing, however, to protect backpackers from a midnight thunderstorm that roared through. One tent and a tarp were blown down by the squall.

The marriage of Robertha Francine Tillery and Christopher Garret Knight took place Saturday at 5 p.m. in a double ring ceremony performed by Elder Lonnie Tillery, brother of the bride.

The ceremony took place at the Tarboro Inn in Tarboro. Charles Dudley was pianist and Linward Dudley and Myra Parker were vocalists.

The bride is the daughter of Robert Tillery of Greenville and the late Ella V. Tillery. Juanita Timmons of New London, Conn., is the mother of the bridegroom and he is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Knight of Tarboro.

Ernestine Harris of Greenville and Loraine Dilahunt of Grifton were honor attendants and bridesmaids included Daphne and Tyra Knight of New London, Conn., sister and cousin of the bridegroom respectively, and Sharon Cross of Jamesville. The flower girl was Tiffany Dilahunt of Grifton.

The best man was the bridegroom's uncle, Eddie Knight, of New London, Conn. Ushers included Ronnie Cox, Daniel Willis and James Clemons, all of Greenville, and John Roland of Raleigh.

The bride wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie designed with an open portrait neckline edged in scalloped chantilly lace and beaded with pearls. The fitted bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace accented with pearls. Full bishop sleeves were fashioned in matching lace and finished with cuffs of scalloped chantilly lace. The full circular skirt fell from an empire waistline and extended into a chapel train. Flowing accordian pleats of silkened organza enhanced the center front of the gown. Her tiered veil of illusion was held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in chantilly lace and embellished with seed pearls to complement her gown. She carried a cascading bouquet of mixed blue, white and pink flowers.

The honor attendants were dressed in formal gowns of polyester with fitted bodices and empire waistlines with accordian pleated skirts in pink. Each carried a single blue carnation with pink and blue ribbon.

The flower girl was dressed like the honor attendants and carried a white basket filled with petals.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and Pitt Community College. She works at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended Tarboro High School and works at National Spinning in Washington.

Couple Marries Saturday Evening

The wedding ceremony of Dawn Abigail Vail and Jerry Theodore Price took place Saturday evening at 7:30 in St. Joseph United Methodist Church in Pikeville.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Allen Vail of Pikeville and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Price of Fremont and the late Mr. Price.

The Rev. Gerry Davis performed the double ring ceremony. Gloria VanHoy was organist for the ceremony. Stephen Bridgers of Greenville was pianist while Mark Johnson of Fremont was soloist.

Donna Vail Morgan of Austin, Texas, was honor attendant for her sister while Karen Maness of Asheboro was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Pam Jones of Augusta, Ga., Cam Ward of Rose Hill, Nell Eason of Greenville and Lugene Crawford of Pikeville.

Connie Price of Fremont was best man for his brother and ushers included Lt. Martin Allen Vail Jr. of Chambersburg, Pa., brother of the bride, Richard Gilbert of Greenville, Reed Warren of Goldsboro, David Dubberly of Fremont and Glenn Lancaster of Stantonsburg.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of candlelight heirloom satin and imported chantilly lace fashioned with a fitted bodice of satin closing in back with bridal buttons, lace yoke and a bertha of lace embroidered with seed pearls. The long sleeves ended with ruffles of lace embroidered with seed pearls. Three tiers of satin in the back extended into a cathedral tain. Her fingertip mantilla of bridal illusion was bordered by scalloped lace flecked with pearls. She carried a candlelight satin covered prayer book which her mother also carried on her wedding day. It was centered with a cattleya orchid, English ivy and stephanotis showered with candlelight satin and lace ribbons tied with love knots. She wore diamond earrings given to her by the bridegroom.

Each attendant wore a gown of ivory chiffon over taffeta styled with a jewel neckline, chiffon petal sleeves, natural waistline and floor length skirt. Petals of chiffon in an asymmetrical design accented the bodice. Each carried a colonial silk nosegay of ivory sweetheart roses, burgundy roses and lilies tied with ivory bridal lace with bordeaux and ivory satin streamers tied in love knots. They wore circlets of ivory gypsophila banded with satin ribbon.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crawford greeted guests. Cake was served by Louise Edgerton. Mrs. Horace Rose and Mrs. Robert Parks, aunts of the bridegroom, poured punch. Assisting were Pattie Joyner, Fran Jordan and Angie Jordan. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Pike also assisted. The reception was directed by Mrs. Albert Vail Jr., aunt of the bride.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C. and Kiawah Island.

The bride is a registered dietitian at Pitt Memorial Hospital and attended Peace College. She graduated from East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and is a third year student in the ECU School of Medicine.

Bird seed packs were distributed by Jessica Dubberly and Heather Langston.

Following the rehearsal Friday night the mother of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Goldsboro Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Trip Purcell entertained the wedding party after the rehearsal dinner at their home in Fremont.

The bridal couple was entertained at several parties, showers and a pig picking prior to their marriage.

Greene Co. Child Is "Annie"

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Melissa Barfield has lived and breathed "Annie" since Rachel Parrish, her second grade teacher, took her West Greene Elementary School class to see the movie, "Annie" two years ago. Tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. the rising fourth grader opens in the title role of "Annie" being presented by the East Carolina Summer Theater.

She competed with nearly 150 youngsters auditioned in Greenville, Chapel Hill, Manteo, Washington, D.C., and Richmond for the part.

"I came home from that movie in love with 'Annie,'" 8-year-old Melissa said. "And I got my parents to buy me the album."

"Soon she'd learned every song," her mother, Ann Barfield, said. "Then we bought the sheet music, too, and not long afterward she asked to be enrolled in voice lessons, all with the intention of singing "Annie" songs better. Her voice teachers have been Jackie Marin of Greenville and Angela Coates of Snow Hill."

Last fall Kenneth Ginn, Greene Cultural Arts Council director, heard her belt out a tune and invited her to join high school students in a performance of "A Christmas Celebration." She soloed with "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus." Then in January tryouts for "Annie" were opened in Snow Hill and Melissa auditioned in competition with 34 other girls and got the part.

For the Summer Theatre role, Melissa has been under contract to practice 10 hours a day seven days a week. "It's at least that long, sometimes longer," she said, "but I don't get tired, because I love what we're doing. I love singing and I like the people. They're from all over, most of them grownups, and they're so nice to me."

Her mother accompanies her to every practice and her father sometimes stops by to visit.

A housemover, Tommy Barfield obtained bit parts in the Greene County "Annie" to be with his daughter — his stage debut. Melissa's twin brother, Michael, also took part. Eleven-year-old brother Thomas prefers swimming and baseball to the stage.

In July and August, Melissa and her mother will go to New York for a month-long children's acting school. Her parents have been promised that, with this background and an agent, she'll be eligible for commercial and other parts. She's loved New York since her parents took her there to see three Broadway musicals in May.

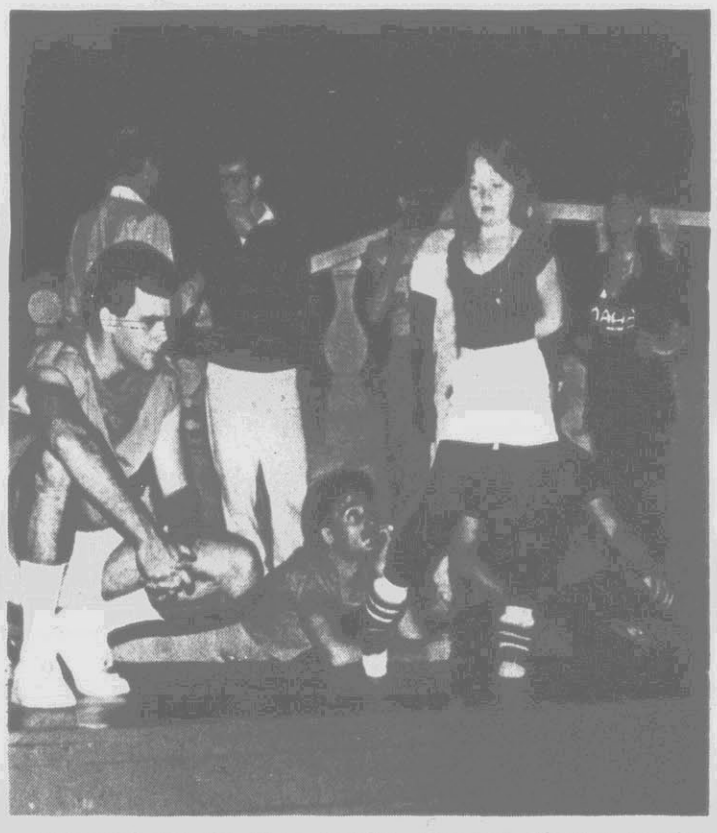

An honor roll student, Melissa has another passion besides the stage. She likes politics. She performed at the Greene County Democratic Rally and keeps a scrapbook of her correspondence with former N.C. Democratic Party Chairman Betty McCain, President Reagan, Gov. Hunt, and others. She has also assisted with campaigns for local public servants like Greene County School Board member Durwood Murphy.

Gov. Hunt has asked her to send him her schedule so he can find a coinciding free time for them both. He says he wants her to sing for him and Mrs. Hunt.

"Annie" will be performed six nights this week at McGinnis Auditorium. As of Friday morning, only 83 seats were still available for the production.

Her love of "Annie" has won 8-year-old Melissa Barfield the role twice and led her into a singing and acting career.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Our children have never understood what "kind of people" come home from a vacation to a stack of newspapers that have been piling up for three weeks.

They say a newspaper is perishable. It's like pigging out on leftovers that have turned green.

My husband and I are those "kind of people."

We crawl around the spoutings, in the bushes and tall grass until we have harvested a stack of rain-soaked, sun-bleached newspapers. Then we sit down and absorb what has happened in our absence.

I read reviews of movies that are no longer showing, horoscopes that mean nothing, funerals there were held, and sales I have missed.

My husband reads about games that were played, stocks that have soared or plummeted, government policies that were made without him and weather that has passed.

Sometimes it takes days to scan the columns, the comics, and the ads. When we emerge, what do we have to show for it besides hands stained with ink?

It's sorta hard to explain.

Being informed are the dues we pay for living in this country.

If we are indifferent to what goes on, we give up our right to criticize, to complain, to offer advice, or to take pride.

I remember the summer our family had had it up to our necks in bad news. This country was going to hell in a bushel basket. We needed to escape it for awhile, go off to a place where the streams ran cool and the only sound was the wind rustling through the trees. We packed the kids in a trailer and took off for an entire summer in Canada.

It was utopia. No newspapers, no radios, no television. We basked in innocence and ignorance. Then one day we were having lunch in a restaurant and we heard a news program reporting on riots. Detroit was in flames and unrest and violence was at a peak.

We both felt as I imagined Philip Nolan felt in "The Man Without A Country." He got his wish to "never see or hear of the United States again." We hit for home.

Our country didn't need us. We needed it. It's like a child who you love during the good times and commiserate with during the bad. What can you do? You can feel.

Maybe that's why we surround ourselves with a stack of newspapers. They chronicle our history, and if we want to be a part of it, we have to feel.

I told you it's hard to explain.

Computer-Designed Bikini Is Rage In Florida Resort

PENSACOLA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The latest rage in swimwear at this Florida Panhandle resort sprang from the mind of a computer programmer rather than a fashion designer.

Women have bought more than 400 computer-designed bikinis since systems analyst Blane Land and his partners brought their mini-computer to the Gulf of Mexico shore two months ago.

Computer Designed Swimwear Inc., of which Land is president, guarantees .every bikini will fit regardless of the customer's size.

The computer, linked to a video camera, acts as an "electronic tape measure," as Land put it. Each customer is measured nine ways to within less than a thousandth of an inch. The measuring takes about three minutes as the camera scans the customer.

The computer also adjusts for material stretchability. The customer can choose a style, color, type of material and how much she wants the suit to reveal before the machine spits out a numerical pattern.

A seamstress can then produce a form-fitting bikini within an hour. Prices range from $39.95 for a standard model to $164.95 for leather.

"It feels like air," Ms. Flanigen said.

Land said he worked for months to develop the program and link it to the right kind of equipment.

He predicted it would be the forerunner of computer-designed clothing of all types. Land is working on programs for one-piece and men's suits and the company wants to find an entrepreneur willing to open another shop elsewhere on an experimental basis before making a decision on further expansion.

Gerber Garment Technology, a subsidiary of the Gerber baby products conglomerate, has expressed an interest in the invention, Land said.

It all started last summer with a bet Land made with his wife, Glenn. He offered to buy her the bikini of her choice if she lost five pounds.

She did, but Land discovered that paying off wasn't so easy. Mrs. Land spent a full day trying to find a suit that would fit.

"It was a moment inside one of these bathing suit stores," Land said, when he decided there had to be a better way.

House Clears Up Canal Funding

WASHINGTON — The U.S. House of Representatives acted last week to clear up a quirk that has prevented the United States from receiving millions of dollars due it under the terms of the Panama Canal Treaty of 1979.

The rate of interest on the American investment in the canal — an investment estimated at $187 million in 1979 — is set annually by the secretary of the treasury. The interest, derived from canal revenues, is then paid into the U.S. treasury.

However, the 1979 treaty implementing legislation did not specifically provide for this, so the money has been collecting in the Panama Canal Commission Fund, Rep. Walter Jones explained.

In addition to shortchanging the treasury by nearly $10 million each year, this has also reduced the total U.S. investment on which the interest is paid.

"As a practical matter, the result has been that interest payments have decreased the principal.

"I think everyone would agree that this is an undesirable situation," Jones, chairman of the House merchant marine and fisheries committee, said.

Jones said a bill passed by the House this week "mandating that the part of the canal revenues attributable to interest in the U.S. investment be deposited in the general treasury," cures the defect in the current law.

An 'Aida' Spectacular In The Cornfields

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP) — These things may be commonplace in New York or Chicago, but central Iowa has never seen the likes of what Douglas Duncan and the Des Moines Metro Opera have laid on for next month.

On July 6, a gaudy caravan of 30 ancient Egyptian soldiers, 50 peasants, 40 Ethiopian captives, 35 priests and a dozen muscle-bound bearers, together with an elephant, two zebras, a brace of camels and maybe a Bengal tiger will troop onto the Des Moines Civic Center stage.

Only the tiger is a doubtful starter as the oversized troupe prepares to stage "Aida," by far its most ambitious production.

The opera is making a determined bid to win respect in the Midwestern cornfields for a company that has already won a modest spot on the national opera map.

"Just 10 minutes ago I got a call from the animal trainer asking if he can substitute a grizzly bear because the tiger is acting a little skittish around people," said Duncan, the opera's managing director.

"I don't know if grizzlies lived in Ethiopia," he mused. "But on the other hand, why would anybody be bringing captured camels to Egypt either?"

That was typical of a host of novel puzzles Duncan is having to unravel in order to mount the opera's first production outside its home stage, the 500-seat Blank Performing Arts Center at Simpson College 15 miles south of Des Moines.

For example, the show had only a handful of bearers and soldiers until Duncan advertised locally for weight lifters and other body cultists who wanted to appear in loincloths before an audience of 2,750.

"Wimps need not apply," the ad said. Duncan put a soft-voiced operator to work taking waist and bicep measurements over the phone, and the cast is now amply stocked with glistening beefcake.

But all that skin requires plenty of makeup. "I got a bill for $480 just for body makeup to make these guys brown," Duncan said.

The animals alone will cost $6,250 out of a total production cost approaching $300,000, more than half the opera's annual budget.

Bob Hale of the 5-H Ranch in Cape Girardeau, Mo., is the beastmaster, and his price includes trained handlers with "a theatrical way of making sure the animals don't do anything disgusting on stage."

All the same, the company has upped its liability insurance from $2 million to $5 million. And Duncan said his backstage conducter was "neurotic as heck about having all those animals back there. He wants a gun, and I think he's serious."

For Duncan, problems on this scale are a far cry from the opera company's birth 12 years ago, when he and artistic director Robert Larsen struggled to stretch a $20,000 budget into eight performances.

Now the company boasts 15 soloists, 40 apprentice singers, a 45-piece orchestra, a dozen coaches and directors and its own technical crew. Guest stars have told Duncan that only St. Louis and Santa Fe, N.M., have regional operas that rival that of Des Moines.

But most of the performers come from out of state, and Duncan said the company is far better known in New York than in Iowa. He and Larsen are hoping "Aida" will expand their local audience and at the same time make fund raising possible at the national level.

So far, it looks promising. Both 2,750-seat performances on July 6 and July 8 are close to being sold out. If the scenery arrives on time from San Diego, if the costumes from Toronto fit and if the animals don't stampede in tight backstage quarters, Duncan looks for a big success.

In many ways, "Aida" was the perfect vehicle. Larsen and Duncan chose it for its lavish spectacle, its familiarity to non-opera goers and its crowd-pleasing plot, dripping with violence, betrayal and star-crossed love.

"Operas have the greatest stories, some of the trashiest stories anywhere," Duncan said. "They sometimes make soap operas seem like fine novels."

SEEN THROUGH A SCREEN — The Spirit of Detroit, a much larger-than-life size statue that symbolizes the strength and wealth of the Michigan automotive manufacturing city, is seen through the screen of a chain link fence.

Harrawood was selected for his work in the category of leather art.

Myrtle Beach Expects 11 Million Tourists This Summer

By BRUCE M. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A line of gleaming high-rise hotels fronts a beach where cows once wandered seeking relief from the hot South Carolina sun. Tall forests of fragrant pine have given way to waterslides, amusement arcades and miniature golf courses built for frolicking youngsters.

The Grand Strand — one of the nation's fastest-growing resort areas — will attract 11 million visitors this year to its 60 miles of white beaches.

The population of the Grand Strand, at 48,000 permanent residents, skyrockets to 380,000 on peak summer weekends.

Numbers tell much of the story of this booming vacation wonderland. The Grand Strand boasts 50,000 rooms, 11,000 campsites, 700 restaurants, 36 golf courses, four major amusement areas and more than 40 waterslides, bingo parlors and arcades.

Last season, visitors pumped a record $1 billion into the local economy. Tourism officials predict another 15 percent to 20 percent increase this year at a time when tourism spending nationwide is expected to be up only between 3 percent to 8 percent.

"If we don't do at least 15 percent, I'll be disappointed," said Ashby Ward, executive vice president of the Myrtle Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, which spends $1.5 million each year to attract vacationers.

The growth began modestly at the turn of the century when the Conway, Coast and Western Railway pushed a line to the shore and the Seaside Inn opened its doors amid a small cluster of summer homes. The area was dubbed Myrtle Beach after the myrtle trees then growing along the shore abundantly.

In those days, the Burroughs and Collins Co., a timber and turpentine concern, offered beachfront lots for $25 to vacationers who would journey by train from Columbia or Charlotte, N.C.

Today, $25 will buy only a fraction of an inch of beachfront property, which goes for about $6,000 a foot when available.

In the 1930s, the Grand Strand became better known but was generally considered a stopping-place for Florida-bound northerners. Myrtle Beach was incorporated in 1938 and experienced gradual growth through the 1960s.

The boom hit late in the decade as local officials worked to shed the beach's image as a summer spot for only Carolinians and mounted an aggressive campaign to attract vacationers from throughout the East.

Golf courses bloomed as the business community sought to extend the tourist season into the spring and fall months.

Between 1965 and 1977, the number of yearly visitors tripled to 6 million. Nine million people flocked to the beach last year. And there's no sign the growth will slow.

Construction crews seem to be a permanent part of the landscape amid the high-rise hotels and condominiums on Ocean Boulevard. About $100 million worth of building permits were issued in the area last year, a figure that could jump to $250 million this year.

Local officials credit the Grand Strand's favorable location, subtropical climate and reputation as a family beach for the area's prosperity.

"Geographically we can't get much better," Ward said. "We're half the distance a New Yorker would have to travel to Florida.'"

"The most important thing is that it's a beach area that's clean, and very well free of drugs," said Wim Pastoor, vice president of the local hotel and motel association which, with more than 400 members, is one of the largest in the nation.

"It's a total family atmosphere where everybody can have a good time. A sophisticated person can have a good time and the kids can have a good time."

The big attraction continues to be the sun, sand and surf, but local leaders aggressively promote other area attractions. The fall and spring seasons are promoted as the time to come to the beach for conventions and golf.

And the Grand Strand is becoming "the biggest shopping mecca in the Southeast" with hundreds of stores and boutiques, Ward said. Waccamaw Pottery, a complex just outside town that offers pottery, linen, brass, china, glassware, clothing and more, attracted 4 million visitors last year.

Ernie Southern, who has watched the changes take place at the beach for years, headed the Horry County Development, Planning and Tourism Commission for two decades before retiring last year.

"The growth has been phenomenal," Southern said.

"It isn't as noticeable living here as if you visited five years ago and came back five years later. It's like watching your children grow. Someone who hasn't seen them in a few years will realize just how much they've grown."

A full 72 percent of those who visit return the following year, according to Ward, who says it's probably due to the variety of activities.

"Somebody may come one year and stay downtown and return the next year and stay at a more remote location," he said. "Some people think the beach is a big amusement park. But it's really the center of a 60-mile area with large diversity."

Meanwhile, the permanent population on the Strand continues to increase, spurred by a large number of retirees who find South Carolina less costly than Florida. Planners project a 25 percent increase in the year-round population by 1986.

But rapid growth has brought concerns.

One is the need for better highway access to ease traffic snarls that plague vacationers most summer weekends. Officials are pushing for a new interstate link between the Grand Strand and Interstate 95.

Improved air service out of the Myrtle Beach Jetport is also a priority.

Myrtle Beach Mayor Erick Ficken said the city has had to wrestle with increased demand for water and sewer services and has passed landscaping and sign ordinances "that will make Myrtle Beach a little different than Main Street U.S.A."

He noted evidence of "the drawbridge syndrome" among some beach residents who want to close the door on future growth but said most people realize the economic prosperity of the area depends on vacationers. The city has opted for a policy of balanced growth.

Ficken predicted the boom will continue because the area is becoming more well-known.

"We're already one of the most popular resorts in the United States," added Ward, who notes that visitors, who once came mainly from the Midwest, South and Northeast, now come from across the country.

Pastoor agreed that the beach boom shows no sign of slowing.

"We have gone through recession periods when the beach increased in revenue and volume. I can't see anything outside of an act of God like a hurricane stopping the increase," he said.

Riccardo Muti Prefers Conducting Music Without Theatrics

By DON BEMAN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A friend once pointed out to Riccardo Muti, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, that a little podium theatrics had done a lot for other maestros' careers.

"I don't need that," Muti replied curtly. He prefers to concentrate on the music without outward flamboyance. His concentration is so complete that recently, making his way to the podium in the Academy of Music, he seemed startled by the applause, although he's certainly accustomed to the sound.

He works quietly, with complete absorption. When something goes wrong, he shows no emotion; he looks.

"We call it his death ray," one senior orchestra member once said, referring to Muti's "fix that" stare.

Muti took it as a compliment. "The conductor must have strong ideas," he said. "He must not prostitute his ideas because he wants to favor this musician or that singer, or to please a record company."

His musicians like that in him, and it's a big reason why others aspire to the Philadelphia Orchestra, which Muti describes as "one of the world's greatest."

"I waited two years for this and it was worth it," said guest conductor Richard Dufallo of New York following his first performance with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

The Philadelphia sound was the accomplishment of Eugene Ormandy, the conductor Muti succeeded four years ago. Ormandy headed the orchestra for 44 years.

What Ormandy developed, Muti has nurtured carefully. Since Muti took over, the subscription season has been sold out. The Academy of Music seats 2,229 people. At the beginning of the 1983-84 season, the concert program was amplified to raise the number of performance seats from 30,000 to 33,000.

Muti's tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1982, its first without Ormandy, was deemed a triumph. He's just completed a European tour this year. One stop was La Scala Opera House in Milan, where Muti becomes music director in 1986 even though his contract with Philadelphia runs two years beyond that.

In the meantime, lacking a concert hall suitable for recording, Muti has set up a temporary hall in another building to begin replacing a recording portfolio still featuring Ormandy. Not many Muti recordings are available yet and this has produced a drop in recording revenues.

With all these activities, Muti is being asked incessantly if he intends to live in Philadelphia, as his two predecessors did — Leopold Stokowski in 1912 and Ormandy in 1936.

Reader's Feathers Ruffled By Post Office Inaccuracy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Every time I go to the post office to get my mail, I become infuriated when I see our national bird, the American bald eagle, depicted with a white head, a white neck and a dark rump and tail.

That is incorrect, Abby. Anyone who knows anything about eagles knows that a mature eagle with a white head and white neck should have a white rump and a white tail! When I see these eagles on the U.S. Postal Service mailboxes, mail trucks and postal employees' uniforms, it upsets me.

I wrote to all six South Carolina congressmen and to both our U.S. senators to complain. I also wrote to the White House twice, and the only person I heard from was Sen. Strom Thurmond. He promised to look into the matter and see what he could do to correct it. I am still waiting.

Can you help this cause along, Abby? I suppose it would run up in the millions of dollars to change all those eagles, but in the interest of accuracy, it should be corrected.

EDWIN KERRISON JR.,
LUGOFF, S.C.

DEAR MR. KERRISON: I think you may have hit upon the reason our legislators are slow to move on this. It's too expensive. Considering what's going on in the Middle East and Central America, plus the threat of a nuclear war, I doubt if I can drum up much interest in correcting the color of the rump and tail on our national bird. Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Call Me Mrs.," the older woman who resented being called "Kathy" by her doctor:

I'm on your side. I'm an older woman, too, and here's how I handled the same situation when my doctor of many years retired and a younger doctor took his place:

When he greeted me with, "Good morning, Lucille," I responded, "Good morning, Bobby." (His name was Robert.)

He was quick to get the message. From that time on, I was "Mrs. Hastings" to him, and he was "Dr. Wittingham" to me.

Try it. And if he doesn't catch on, change doctors. He's an idiot.

MRS. HASTINGS

DEAR MRS. HASTINGS: Wonderful. Read on for another solution:

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I'm addressed by my first name and I don't especially like it, I say (with my best smile), "My name is Celeste, but it's perfectly all right with me if you call me Mrs. Hatcher."

CELESTE B. HATCHER,
ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: I keep seeing letters in your column asking whether pregnant women should be in a wedding party as bridesmaids, matrons of honor, etc. You always say, "Why not?"

I will tell you why not: My sister-in-law (married to my brother) was my dearest friend. I was her maid of honor and I asked her to be my matron of honor. She accepted when she was in her fourth month, knowing that she would be somewhere in her seventh month at the time of the wedding. (It was her first baby.)

Well, the morning of my wedding she "thought" she had a few labor pains, but didn't want to "spoil" my wedding, so she didn't say anything. She just made it down the aisle at a 4 p.m. wedding, with her pains coming three minutes apart.

You guessed it. Her water broke, she fainted and the priest interrupted the ceremony to ask if there was a doctor in the house. Fortunately, there was, and my matron of honor took the best man (her husband) with her, and she delivered a 5-pound "preemie" an hour later.

So Abby, next time someone asks if a pregnant woman should be in the wedding party, say, "Not if she's more than five months along at the time of the wedding." Thank you.

Pit Viper Venom Can Often Bring On Amputations

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — "It felt like a big sting," said 10-year-old Clint Cecil, recalling the day he was bitten by a diamondback rattlesnake, an event that almost cost him a finger.

The fifth-grade student and a 12-year-old friend were picking blackberries in a drainage canal near their homes on May 1 when an Eastern diamondback sank its fangs into Cecil's left middle finger.

"The snake got a perfect strike," said Cynthia Cecil, the boy's mother. "Both fangs went in and he got a whopping dose."

Although Cecil and his friend probably saved his life by acting calmly and seeking help at a convenience store, he has had to undergo several operations to save his finger, which suffered massive tissue damage from the venom.

"Where the venom was, it just ate the skin away like if you had poured acid on it," Mrs. Cecil said. "It had eaten to his tendons."

Cecil is among an estimated 8,000 Americans who are bitten by poisonous snakes each year. Although only 10 to 20 people die from such bites, many lose arms, legs, hands and feet because of tissue damage that leads to gangrene, said Dr. Charlie Watt of Thomasville, an expert on the treatment of snakebites.

Watt, a general surgeon who has practiced medicine for 30 years in the heart of the Eastern diamondback country, said he treats about 15 to 20 snake victims a year. He was not involved in the treatment of Cecil.

Watt said there are about 115 species of snakes in the United States, of which 19 are poisonous.

Most of Georgia's poisonous snakes are pit vipers such as rattlesnakes, cottonmouths and copperheads, whose venom destroys blood cells, Watt said.

Pit vipers got their name from the depressions found in front of their eyes which enable the snakes to sense heat being radiated from other creatures, making it easier to locate prey.

Among the pit vipers, the most dangerous is the Eastern diamondback, the largest rattler in the country, reaching lengths of six to seven feet and packing the most venom, Watt said.

Since the development of antivenin, the antitoxin used to treat snake bites, deaths have been greatly reduced in the United States. But Watt said it should only be administered by a physician — never in the field by an unqualified person.

"It's a somewhat dangerous drug," he noted. "You can really kill people with this if you don't know what you're doing. You have to weigh the danger of giving it with the danger of the bite. And yet, I'm a big antivenin man.

Dr. Whit Gibbons, a herpetology instructor at the University of Georgia, said about 46 species of snakes, including six that are poisonous, live in the state.

"Snake venom is extremely complex protein and each species varies from one to the next," said Gibbons, who studies snakes at the university's Savannah River Ecology Laboratory. "How an individual person is going to respond is going to vary."

In Georgia, snakebites claim only about one life a year, but Gibbons noted that in southeast Asia, cobras and kraits cause 30,000 deaths annually.

"They have neurotoxic venom and there's a lot of big ones," Gibbons said.

One of the few U.S. snakes with neurotoxic venom is the brightly colored coral snake, which is closely related to the cobra and lives in the southern part of the country, according to Watt.

He said neurotoxic venom attacks the nervous system and can cause paralysis of the respiratory system. For this type of bite, Watt said, "Do practically nothing ... Get to a doctor as soon as possible."

"We've had several coral snake bites," he said. "These snakes tend to chew. They damage nerves and are very dangerous, but are only 25 percent successful in their bites."

In Cecil's case, doctors gave the youth six doses of antivenin and used a special skin graft to save his finger, according to his mother.

Mrs. Cecil said doctors cut slits in the skin of his abdomen, slipped his finger through the slits and stitched it in place. The abdominal skin grew around the injury, forming a skin graft, she said.

The finger was surgically freed about six weeks after he was bitten. Additional surgery may be required to make the finger look normal.

Mrs. Cecil said her son's experience has alerted other parents to the dangers of snakes in their residential neighborhood.

"It has really made other children and the parents aware," she said. "None of us really thought of snakes as being a problem in our area."

Watt recommended the following first-aid measures for pit viper bites:

1. Move away from the snake.

2. Apply a constricting band approximately 2 inches wide snuggly but not too tightly about 2 to 4 inches above the bite.

3. If it is possible to cut and suction the bite, do it within three minutes after the bite occurs. A single cut should be made on each fang mark along the length of the affected limb. The cuts should be no more than one-quarter inch long and one-eighth inch deep.

4. If possible, immobilize the affected limb with a makeshift splint, but don't let this delay the trip to a doctor.

5. If the snake can be killed, bring it to the doctor to help determine the type of bite being treated.

Watt said first-aid manuals used to recommend cooling the wound with ice, but that has been dropped from most reputable manuals because "blood vessels have been damaged due to the venom, and if you add cooling to the arm or leg it constricts the blood vessels and increases the chances of deformities due to inadequate blood supply."

Hobbyist Restores Old Organs, Pianos

SHARON, Tenn. (AP) — Mike Mount is making music. And if he ever opens up the volume of his four-keyboard, 61-rank Wurlitzer theater organ, he could serenade the area's 1,500 residents and they wouldn't even have to leave their homes.

Mount, 31, is an employee of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. plant in nearby Union City, but he's also a master pipe organ technician whose hobby is collecting and restoring organs, player pianos and nickelodeons.

"It really hurts me to see a beautiful instrument destroyed," Mount said.

But he said he's seen many old pipe organs crushed as churches and theaters were razed to make way for progress.

Since he couldn't save all of the old organs, he said, he decided to find and restore what he considered the best.

"The Wurlitzer I have restored is even larger than the one in Radio City Music Hall (in New York City). The one they have has only 49 ranks and mine has 61," he said.

A pipe organ's ranks are made up of metal pipes, and when properly tuned, they can revroduce the sound of just about every musical instrument, he said.

Finding all the parts for the restoration was not easy, Mount said.

"I had the help of other journeymen. We found parts in Kansas, Dallas, New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Diego. It seemed when the organ was no longer in use in one city, the parts had been shipped to other theaters where repairs were being made, or the pipes were just stored," he said.

"I've crawled through basements looking for parts when the only light I had was a flashlight and I could hear the rats and dozers right behind me," he said.

Each part sought by Mount and his friends had the serial number of the organ etched into it. The number is duplicated on the organ's 3,000-pound mahogany console which once graced the orchestra pit of an 8,000-seat theater.

When the pipe organ parts began arriving in Sharon in 1973, Mount said he knew he had another problem. Although he had the knowledge to put the gigantic instrument into operation, he didn't have a place to put it.

"I offered it to Mom and Dad's church, but they told me they already had an organ," he said.

Anyway, he said, it was too big for the sanctuary.

"I knew once I got the organ together, I would be using it to make tapes, so I had a 30-by-54-foot metal building constructed behind the house," Mount said.

He lined the building with six inches of sheet rock and two thicknesses of fiberglass to soundproof the structure and keep from bothering his neighbors.

"At least I hope they can't hear. If it bothers them they haven't complained," he said.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES

We have sales opportunities for people who really believe in free enterprise.

Membership sales for The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is a gratifying way to earn a good living with a three week, salary paid training program to teach and show you our well-proven sales techniques.

Success will NOT be automatic and you must be prepared to work with determination, for which you can look forward to earning more than $25,000 in your first year. In addition, advancement to management from within is the rule at The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, not the exception. Territories now open include Eastern North Carolina and vicinity.

If the idea of selling a unique "product" appeals to you, forward your resume to:

It's Time We Set The Record Straight.

An apple never can be an orange.

But recent comparisons of real estate organizations treat apples like oranges.

By treating franchise systems the same as corporations.

And there is no comparison.

The facts are: the CENTURY 21® system has more than twice the residential market share of our closest competitor.

We outsell them by billions of dollars, with more than four times the real estate transactions last year alone.

We have thousands more Sales Associates working in thousands more offices.

So no matter who else says they're Number 1, only one real estate organization can truly make that claim. The CENTURY 21 system.

In fact, the CENTURY 21 system is involved in one out of every nine homes sold by brokers in the U.S.

How 'bout them apples?

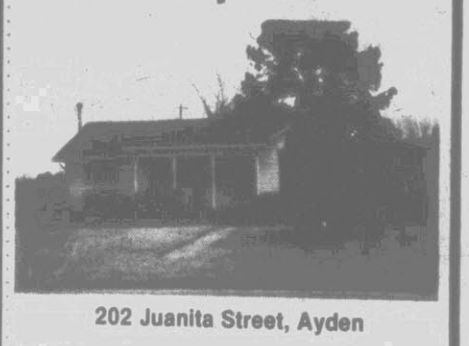

Put Number 1 to work for you.™

The American Flag, Symbol of Man's Ideals

THE AMERICAN FLAG . . . often called "Old Glory," or "The Grand Old Flag," will be flying proudly all across America on Wednesday, when America marks the 208th anniversary of the Declaration Of Independence.

The 50 stars on a blue field, and the seven red and six white stripes of the American flag is a stirring sight when our national emblem flies in the breeze.

Our nation's flag is a stirring sight as it flies in the wind. Its color and design represents this country's land, people, government and ideals. The white signifies purity and innocence. Red stands for hardiness and valor. Blue represents vigilance, perserverance and justice. The stripes in the flag stand for the thirteen original states. The stars represent each state within the union now, a total of 50 altogether, with the addition of Hawaii to the union in 1960.

So strong is its impact that it can stir people to joy, courage and sacrifice. Many men and women have died to protect our national flag from dishonor and disgrace, but none have been so brave throughout the annals of our history as the flag bearer, or as he's more often called, the "colorbearer."

Colorbearer

The colorbearer has carried our country's flag on many battlefields over the years. In films and paintings that depict historical moments, he could always be found amid the fighting, the smoke of the guns, the organization and the disorder as well, flying the colors of our nation. These soldiers carried the flag high, for the generals watched the flags to see where the troops were.

Unfortunately, the flag bearer was also easily visible to the advancing enemy as well, and for that reason, there was a 99 percent chance that he would lose his life upon that battlefield...and lose it quickly.

However, the position of the colorbearer was a coveted and honored place in the ranks of soldiering. Usually, the most outstanding soldier in the regiment carried the flag. Men would fight for this honor. Sometimes it was settled by drawing lots. If that didn't work, and the position boiled down between two men, they simply fought it out with their fists. The one left standing would carry his nation's flag.

A flag bearer would do anything to protect his country's emblem. Naturally, the flag was the first thing to be shot at since it was considered a disgrace to lose your colors. Soldiers would rally around, forming a tight circle in order to protect the flag bearer and his flag. It has even been known for troops to take to the woods and tear the flag into tiny shreds rather than have to surrender it to the enemy.

It was not uncommon, either, for a man to fake a dead fall onto the flag in order to keep opposing troops from locating it on the battlefield. If the flag was captured, many soldiers would automatically give up the fight. Thus, the flag itself has often played a major role in wars.

Some colorbearers carried the flag in a specially fitted belt. Others simply hauled it up freehand. When the flag bearer was killed, the man closest to his country's fallen colors would hoist them high and continue to march into the heat of the battle.

Popular Name

"The Stars and Stripes" is the most popular name for our national flag, but it is not known where this name originated. Francis Scott Key first called the United States flag "The Star-Spangled Banner" in 1814 when he wrote the poem which became our national anthem. William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Massachusetts, gave the flag another popular name, "Old Glory," when he took command of a ship in 1831.

In certain situations, other flags also represent the United States, such as the "Navy Jack," a blue flag with white stars which stands for the United States whenever it flies from a U.S. Navy ship.

During the youth of our country, Americans fought under many different flags. The first American flag to receive a salute from another country was the "Grand Union Flag," which flew over George Washington's headquarters in Boston.

Some historians believe that a Philadelphia seamstress named Betsy Ross made the first U.S. flag. This claim was made by her grandson and based upon sworn statements from several persons, including members of her own family. Historical records show that she did make flags for the government in 1777, but it is doubtful that she made the first United States flag.

Rules And Regulations For Displaying The Flag

Every person should know how to display and salute his country's flag. Owning a flag and displaying it properly are marks of patriotism and respect. Flag customs vary from one country to another, but in the United States there are strict rules and regulations for this process, called flag codes. A joint resolution adopted by Congress in 1942 established a uniform code for the display of the national flag.

Some of the rules follow:

• No flag may be displayed in a position above or equal to the position of the U.S. flag. The only two exceptions ot this rule are the United Nations flag and the church pennant flown during naval services at sea.

• The national flag is usually displayed outdoors only in good weather, between sunrise and sunset. Our flag flies over the capitol every day, whether or not Congress is meeting. It may be flown at night on special occasions, such as over the White House. It flies day and night in several places — the eastern and western entrances to the U.S. Capitol, above the grave of Francis Scott Key and over Fort McHenry, near which Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner."

• It should be displayed prominently at every polling place on election days. There are special state and national holidays which call for flying our country's flag, such as Flag Day, Memorial Day and Veterans Day.

• Salute the flag at the moment it passes in a parade or is raised or lowered as part of a ceremony. All persons present should face it and stand at attention. A man or woman in military uniform should give a hand salute. A man not in uniform salutes by removing his hat with his right hand and holding it at his left shoulder with his right palm inward over his heart. A man without a hat salutes by placing his right hand over his heart. A woman also salutes by placing her right hand over her heart. For other nation's flags, you should stand at attention, but need not salute.

• When marching, carry the flag to the right of any other flag in a procession. If there are many other flags, carry it alone it front of the center of the line.

• With grouped staffs, place the flag at the center and the highest point. Withcrossed staffs, put the flag on its right, its staff of top.

• On a car or other vehicle, hang the flag free. Tie it to the antenna or clampits staff firmly to part of the car. Never drape it on the car.

• As a colorbearer, hold the staff at a 30 degree angle in front of your body, or carry it with one hand, resting the staff on your right shoulder.

• From a building, hang the flag on a staff or on a rope over the sidewalk, with its canton away from the building.

• Over the street, hang the flag with its canton to the east on a north-south street or to the north on an east-west street.

• Behind a speaker, hang the flag flat against the wall. Do not gather or drape it on the rostrum.

• On a platform, or in the chancel of a church, put the flag in a stand in the position of honor on the right of the speaker or minister. Any other flag should go on his left.

• Off a platform, or outside the chancel of a church, stand the flag in the position of honor on the right of the audience or congregation itself.

•At half-mast, hoist the flag to the peak before you lower it to half-mast as asymbol of mourning. Raise it to the peak again before lowering it at the end of the day. Citizens may salute and pledge allegiance to the flag when it fliesat half-mast. The U.S. flag flies at half-mast for thirty days after the death of a President of a former President, for ten days after the death of the Vice-President, the Chief Justice or a retured Chief Justice, or the Speaker of the House of Representatives. Other state and national office holders are also honored in a similar way.

• Never hang the flag upside down unless you mean it as a signal of some serious emergency. It is a recongnized distress signal. (The Philippine flag is always flown upside down in time of war.)

• The national flag should be hoisted (run up) briskly and lowered slowly. It should be gathered and folded before it touches the ground.

• "Breaking" the flag means unfurling it dramatically at the top of the staff. The flag is folded or rolled loosely. Before it is hoisted, the halyard (rope) is tied loosely around it and when pulled sharply, the flag unfolds.

• "Striking" the flag means lowering it at sea or taking it down in battle as a sign of surrender.

Prohibited uses include never using our flag for carrying, receiving, holding or delivering anything. It should not be part of a costume or athletic uniform. it should not be embroidered on such articles as cushions or handkerchiefs. It should not be printed on paper napkins, boxes, or other items that will be discarded. The U.S. flag should never be used for advertising purposes. There are stiff penalties for persons who use it improperly.

Almost all flags are made of cloth. Most flags that fly outdoors are made of fabrics blended with nylon and wool. These fabrics are light, strong and color-fast. Special ceremonial flags are almost always made of silk, which is richer-looking and more colorful than the other fabrics.

A flag must be carefully made, preferably by hand, to be worthy of honor and respect. In most countries, private firms make all the flags, although some governments make their own.

A national flag may be mended, dry-cleaned or washed. When it is no longer fit for display, it should be destroyed in some dignified way, preferably by burning.

Blind Couple Display The Flag Each Day

Blind Martin County Man Flies Flag Daily

Thousands of people in this country pay respect to their nation's flag every year, but perhaps none more than one man who lives in the Farm Life area of Martin County south of Williamston. Anyone can fly a flag, but for Jim Manning, who is totally blind, it's a special feat.

Jim and his wife, Ruby, live in Griffins Township in Martin County, and operate a small country store with living quarters attached. They've been married for 30 years. Each is totally blind. Jim began to lose his sight in his early youth, and by his late teens could barely distinguish night from day. Because he already had so little to lose, in 1946 he chanced a cataract operation. The hemorrhaging during surgery caused him to lose what little sight he had left, and he has been permanently blind ever since.

Ruby has been blind since age six months, when a severe case of flu took away her sight.

Jim attended public school as a child until about age 14 when he could no longer see well enough to continue. One of the last things he remembers seeing was the American flag flying briskly in the wind by the side of the little school he attended.

Memory Recreated Daily

That was the last time he ever saw his country's colors. But the memory is recreated each day when his hands touch the flag because he still vividly recalls the sight of it from his youth. Through the years, Jim has accomplished much with his life, and has not let his blindness interfere with the business of making a living and being a kind and considerate neighbor. And his handicap hasn't interferred with his ability to fly his country's flag.

For over 15 years he's been running up the colors on a flag pole erected in front of his store. The only time his flag isn't flying is when he is gone from his home or when the weather does not permit it.

. The first flag he had was fastened to a piece of molding, which in turn was tied to a water pipe he pushed in the ground to anchor and hold his flag higher. At dusk, he simply untied the molding from the pipe and brought his flag inside to standin a corner until the next morning.

Eventually, his Sunday School class erected a pole and flag which they purchased for him. After a number of years, it rusted badly, and the Farm Life Ruritans gave him a new pole and flag which he now uses every day. "They just came out here and started digging," he said. "I guess they knew how much that flag meant to me."

Several years ago, the postman stopped one day to inform Jim that he had his flag flying upside down. Jim immediately went outside and changed it. It order to prevent this from occurring again, he has fastened a small pin in one corner so that he will know exactly which end of the flag to fly near the pole. His sensitive hands feel for it each morning. After opening his store, he takes the folded flag from its resting place and finds his way to the pole near the ditch in front of his store.

Jim and Ruby can't see their nation's colors flying in the blue sky in front of their home, but they can hear the flapping that the flag makes when it catches in the wind...and the sound is music to their ears.

Their feelings about The Stars and Stripes can best be summed up in Jim's own words: "I just thank the Lord for America. I'm so grateful for being able to go in a church and know my country's flag is there. This country was founded on the freedom of religion, and I'm honored to be able to show my appreciation to live in such a great place as the United States. When my country called me many years ago. I could not go because I was blind. But all this time I've done what I could to let her know that I'd fight if I could, I'd help if I could, and I'd honor this great land of mine any way I could. I couldn't do anv of those things, but I can sure fly her flag every day. That seesm to be a mighty little bit, I know, but it's the least I can do just to let everybody who passes by here know I'm proud to be an American."

It's folks like Jim Manning who make us proud of our country, and of our flag...especially when we see it silhouetted against a blue sky...and know with assurance that it's a free sky that offers it a place there.

Changing Times In American History Are Reflected In Various Flag Designs

A Review

A Book To Hook The Reader

Lace. By Shirley Conran. New York Pocket Books. 1983. Paper. 599 pages. $3.95.

"All right, which one of you is my mother?"

Any book that poses such a direct question in the first chapter has this reader hooked.

Shirley Conran displays many techniques that make "Lace" a best-seller. The plot is superbly developed with the lives of four women interlaced with the life of one of their daughters.

In a Swiss boarding school the goal of the four women is to fall in love. One result is Lilli, whose own efforts to love are flaunted becuase she doesn't know who her true mother is.

Ms. Conran's understanding of human nature is exemplified in her development of friendships between the women whose "networking" helps them to achieve other goals. In fact, it is through this lace that the reader can identify with the characters regardless of when one grew up or whether or not one ever wore Gucci shoes or slept with a king.

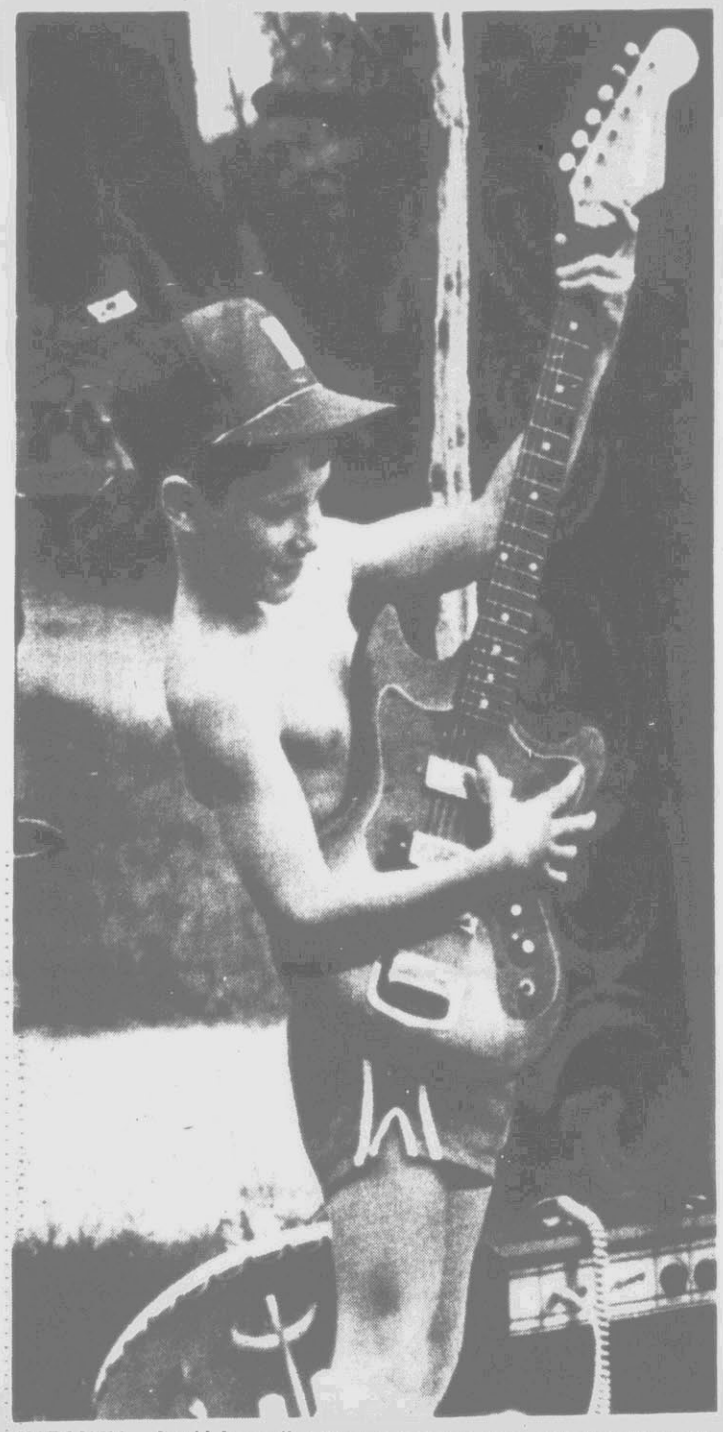

The love scenes are titilating to say the least but are not for everyone. Lilli is used by men and other admirers while her undeclared mother is making her "grab for power...lunge for money...lusting after someone else's job."

When Lilli's mother is finally found the author's explanation of her parentage is believable but not so the tale of her conception.

The last few chapters are suprisingly brief considering how much description is spent on the rest of the book. This reader was disappointed by the lack of warmth — not so much as a touch of the hand — when mother and daughter are reunited after almost 30 years.

This is a book that I could put down while I was reading it but it is also one that I would read again. There is much more to "Lace" than sex and name-dropping.

Tornado Article By Local Writer To Be Published

WINTERVILLE — Mrs. LaRue Evans, a freelance writer and a member of the Greenville Writers Club, has had an article on the March 28 tornado accepted for publication by a national hospital publication.

The article, written from the viewpoint of non-medical supervisors in ways of coping with an emergency of this nature, has been accepted by the editor of Hospital Supervisor's Bulletin of Waterford, Connecticut.

"I interviewed seven individuals at the hospital for this article," Mrs. Evans commented. "It will appear in the November 15, 1984 issue of the magazine. I was informed there will be no byline as the publication's policy is not to use bylines, nonetheless I'm pleased the editors are going to use it. They say that supervisors throughout the nation can benefit from the experiences of those at Pitt County Memorial Hospital on the night the tornadoes swept through our area."

Mrs. Evans authored a first-hand account of emergency room activities that night for The Daily Reflector. She has also written a number of feature articles for The Daily Reflector.

Ballet Master

HOUSTON — Artistic director Ben Stevenson has announced the appointment of principal dancer Dennis Poole as ballet master for the 1984-85 season of the Houston Ballet. He will also continue as principal dancer.

Pitt Writers Win Three Awards Each

Two writers from Grifton, Maxine Harker and Jane Lambert, have each won three awards at the 24th Annual Dixie Council Writing Workshop held in Georgia June 17-23. The workshop, a leading writers event in the South each year, is held at Epworth-by-the-Sea on St. Simons Island, Georgia.

Both are students in the creative writing class at Pitt Community College taught by Patsy Baker O'Leary. Mrs. Harker, a member of the Greenville Writers Club, has written feature articles for The Daily Reflector, and has been published in several publications, including Good Housekeeping.

Mrs. Lambert is a several times prizewinner for Haiku poetry and is the author of a book of Haiku poems.

At the writing workshop, Mrs. Harker placed first in the competition for the Barbara Cameron Contemporary Romance Novel Award for "Heart Tides." She won second place for an article, "From Here to There," in the Morel Brown Inspirational Article Award category. A portion of a novel titled "Magnolia," received third place in the Frances Patton Statham Award division.

Mrs. Lambert received first place in the Jo Ann Yeager Adkins Award for short stories with her story, "Pearls for Bianca." She took second place for a poem, "The Whistle Wish" in the Poet Laureate Award of Poetry division for poems written especially for children; and placed third for an excerpt from a beginning work of non-fiction. The third place award was in the Dr. James C. Bryant Non-Fiction Award category and was given for an excerpt from a biography of her father she is at work on, "Many Moons Ago."

Mrs. Harker and Mrs. Lambert were among four writers from Pitt County who attended the 24th annual writers workshop at St. Simons. This is the third consecutive year that Pitt County writers have garnered multiple awards in the competition. This year more than 140 writers from a large number of states, mostly from the South, attended and entered the competition.

Recollections Being Sought

TARBORO — The recollections of older people who remember what it was like before electricity came to the farms are now being solicited. The rememberances of times past are being sought for possible inclusion in a history of the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) in North Carolina.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Nelms

Biographies are always favorite reading material for the summer months. Two new biographies about very different people have been recently added to the new book shelves at Sheppard Memorial Library.

"Waylon: A Biography" by R. Serge Denisoff describes the life of country music singer Waylon Jennings. From his earliest recordings, the haunting baritone of Jennings has marked him as an extraordinary and individualistic music artist.

This book describes his rise from the cotton fields of Texas to stardom in Nashville. It portrays his early career as a protege of rock star Buddy Holly, and traces the bumpy road he has followed to his present high level of success.

The singer's stormy association with RCA, poor management and years of hardship on the road turned him into a "telecaster outlaw," challenging Music City's recording empire. He bacame a key figure in an outlaw fad that was spurred by cultural and economic forces within and beyond the Nashville scene. His 1976 release "Outlaws" became the first platinum album in the history of country music.

Denisoff, a professor of sociology at Bowling Green State University, provides a clear view of the personal side of Jennings. His explanations will help country music fans develop a greater appreciation of the many moods of this popular recording star.

Light years away from the world of Waylon Jennings is the life of Robert E. Howard, the creator of "Conan," the archetypal fantasy hero of books and movies. "Dark Valley Destiny" by L. Sprague deCamp, his wife Catherine and child psychologist Jane Whittington, recounts the life of this strange and tragic writer.

Readers of the "Conan" books and viewers of the movies of the same name will find a very unlikely creator of the hero. Robert E. Howard was born in Texas in 1906. Dominated by his mother as a child, he moved with his family to various small Texas towns during the first third of this century.

Limited in his reading and lacking formal education beyond high school, he strived to become a writer of pulp fiction. Out of this background, he created "Conan," a strong hero who has entertained readers for fifty years.

At age 30, after selling several of his works, he appeared on the brink of genuine success as a writer. It was at this time that he learned that his mother would not recover from a severe case of tuberculosis. Unable to continue his life, he committed suicide.

The authors of "Dark Valley Destiny" delve deeply into the life and psyche of Robert E. Howard. They show how his personality was formed and how it worked to create the fantasy hero of his writings. Ultimately, these same forces caused him to take his own life.

Bagpipes At New Bern's Fourth

NEW BERN — The sounds of the bagpipe will welcome visitors to historic Tryon Palace on July 4 when the North Carolina Highland Regiment performs throughout the day.

The palace gardens and grounds are open free, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., on this commemorative day. It was 206 years ago, July 4, 1773, that New Bernians first celebrated their independence from Britain, becoming the first town in North Carolina to do so. The tradition continues.

The Highland Regiment from Fayetteville will camp out on the great lawn, cook, drill, give demonstrations of their musketry, and even serve duty in the sentry boxes of the colonial capitol and royal governor's mansion.

For a quieter moment, visitors can tour the gardens of the Tryon Palace Complex, designed in the intricate and intriguing style of the late 1700s. The gardens are bright with flowering tobacco, hollyhock, vinca, partulaca, impatiens, and many other flowers.

Visitors can also glimpse Gov. or Mrs. Tryon coming and going from the palace. They are members of the resident acting troupe presenting Kermit Hunter's "The Rising Splendor" during the summer. You can meet them and many other characters out of the past on the interior drama tours, which supplement the regularly scheduled tours by museum guides.

All of the one and one-half to two hour interior tours of Tryon Palace are priced at $5 for adults and $1.50 for students (grades 1-12). Children under 6 are free.

When the main gate closes shortly after 4 p.m., activity shifts from Tryon Palace to five blocks east at Bicentennial Park downtown on the Trent River. Visitors attending the late afternoon and evening events should bring their own blankets or lawn chairs.

Family-oriented recreational games, including sack races, money toss, and egg toss, will be staged in the late afternoon.

At 7 p.m., the ladies of Craven Civitan will coordinate the traditional Independence Day flag-raising. The band concert this year will be by the 35-member Washington Community Band, under the direction of Tom Secor. Their performance begins at 8 p.m. on the stage in the Bicentennial Park. The concert will end at dark with the first burst of a major fireworks display over the historic waterfront.

Wine Awards Winner

MADRID, Spain — Duplin Wine Cellars of Rose Hill, N.C., 40 miles south of Goldsboro, has received a Gold Medal presented by "Oro Verde," an international wine magazine published in Madrid.

The award ceremony was held on June 12 in Madrid. The presentation occurred during a gala dinner at the Hotel Melia Castilla. The banquet was attended by Spanish authorities, foreign ambassadors and personalitites in the hotel and restaurant world.

Duplin was selected to receive the Gold Medal in recognition of the quality of its wine and brandy. The three products receiving recognition were Duplin Magnolia, a soft white dry wine; Sparkling Scuppernong, a champagne made from native Scuppernong grapes, and Duplin Scuppernong Brandy.

The winery was founded in 1975 and is the oldest and largest of North Carolina's four wineries. Duplin produces approximately 100,000 gallons of wine per year and uses native North Carolina vitis rotundifolia grapes. There are 1,500 acres of grapes withing 50 miles of the winery.

Carolina Hiking Trails Served By Llamas

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A llama carries more gear than a man, sounds better than a mule, preserves the trail better than a horse and smells better than all three, says a woman who operates a llama hiking service in the North Carolina mountains.

"They're well suited for their jobs because of their ability to negotiate terrain other pack animals would not dream of covering," said Penny Alsop, who opened Noah Llama Treks Inc. in Boone this year with partner Judy Fee.

Llamas have been used as pack animals for 3,000 years in South America and for several years in the U.S. West, but this is the first commercial llama packing service east of the Rockies, said Ms. Alsop.

"The llamas carry everything, and we provide everything ... food, tents and sleeping bags," she said. "You provide the rain gear, toothbrush and a change of underwear."

Noah Llama Treks (named after the women's favorite llama) offers trips of two to six days each for about $65 per day per person.

The outfit has eight llamas, although only five usually go out on each trip. Each animal carries about 75 pounds, including its own feed — about one or two pounds of grain per animal per day.

Llamas not only are more cooperative than mules, they also are easier to listen to, communicating with each other in soft hums, she said. When they're alarmed, they sound like a cross between a horse whinny and a dog bark.

"They're much like cats," said Ms. Alsop. "They're very independent — if you approach one, he might turn away. But as soon as you turn around, he's following you around to see what you're doing.

"They often spot wildlife along the trail that we humans are too busy to see," she said. "They'll turn their heads. Sometimes we'll be unable to identify the source of their curiosity, but sometimes it'll be a deer or a bear.

"They're very attached to one another. If you move one of them away, the others will be upset and stand there until the llama returns. They recognize human companionship but don't seek it like a dog."

Because llamas are lighter than horses — about 400 pounds — and because they have padded feet rather than hooves, they don't tear up the trails as horses often do. "Unless the soil is extremely moist, you can't even tell if they've been on the trail," she said.

"They do have an odor, but it's very pleasant — even when they're wet," she said.

Ms. Alsop and Ms. Fee, both Florida natives, moved to North Carolina three years ago and started a farm. They became interested in the possibilities of llamas after carrying their own packs along the Appalachian Trail.

After a year of guiding paperwork along rocky bureaucratic trails, they obtained their llamas from northern California, Colorado and New Mexico and began training them and scouting out trails.

Training takes from three to six months, and the most crucial part is letting the animal get used to having its head and legs touched, said Ms. Alsop.

Llamas are used to the cool, dry weather of the Andes, but they don't seem to mind the occasional heat of the southern Appalachians.

Ms. Alsop estimated that there are about 6,000 llamas in the United States, but that the number might increase as their potential is realized.

"There's a good possibility of using the animals as pack animals for maintaining trails — carrying chain saws and equipment to areas inaccessible by jeep or truck," she said.

In addition, llama wool can be made into beautiful scarves and sweaters and currently sells for about $2 an ounce, she said

Pilobolus Dance Theater Seeks New Creative Opportunities

By PETER S. HAWES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Like the fungus it was named after, the Pilobolus Dance Theater continues to expand and contract in amoebic fashion as its five founding members age and seek new creative opportunies.

"Isn't it strange the way life mimics nature?" muses Jonathan Wolken, one of the dancers who formed the unorthodox troupe 13 years ago at Dartmouth College.

"Pilobolus is growing," he said."The amoeba is larger and maybe it's evolved into new creatures. We don't know. ... But we know more what we want and our lives have taken more definite shape. We're settled more. We no longer want to live out of suitcases — that started about five ears ago. The question then was, 'Is there life outside of touring and dancing?'

"The answer is, 'Yes.'"

Based in rural northwestern Connecticut, Pilobolus has spent almost two years battling neighbors and the town's zoning board over plans to open a studio and school.

In the meantime, with younger Pilobolus dancers touring the United States, Europe and Far East, the five founders — now in their 30s — have stuck around Connecticut's hills, not far from where they grew up.

They're arranging projects both for the troupe and for themselves that cross the already soft boundaries of their peculiar form of stage dance and into movies, video productions, music composition and education.

Born in an age of rebellion and the youth counterculture of the late '60s and early '70s, Pilobolus has dazzled audiences around the world with its innovative use of space, movement and sound — its melding of dance and gymnastics. When they perform, bodies move in and out of pretzel shapes and freeze in living sculptures.

"It seemed that what we had was powerful, creative, innovative, easily grasped by all those who watched — nontrivial, all those good things," said Wolken.

At first, when the original "Piloboloids" graduated from Dartmouth, they were vegetarians. Many were draft resisters and all appreciated country life. They lived together in a farmhouse on 40 acres in Norwich, Vt., an experience that translated into the smooth but offbeat nature of their dances.

They toured as much as they could — skipping mostly from one New England college campus to another — writing, choreographing and dancing, setting up and tearing down their own stages, as well as handling all administrative and public relations chores.

"You travel, you unpack, you set up, you rehearse, you dance, you pack and you go. That's what our early beginnings were like," the 34-year-old Wolken said.

Still, it was that lifestyle that held Pilobolus together, allowing its longevity and the perpetuation of its creativity.

Within five years of its inception, Pilobolus was touring Europe. It picked up diverse support, including sponsorship by designer Pierre Cardin. The company also won critical acclaim and became a darling of the modern dance community.

The group's current dancers are Michael Tracy, Carol Parker, Tim Lada, Cynthia Quinn, Joshua Perl and Peter Pucci. Of the directors — Wolken, Moses Pendleton, Alison Chase, Robert Barnett and Tracy — only Tracy, who joined Pilobolus in 1974, still dances.

The others stick closer to home. Wolken has dabbled in auto racing, is producing a dance for the Royal Danish Ballet and is working on his own short film about motion — a "dance for the camera" called "Going."

Miss Chase and Barnett are choreographing a new Pilobolus piece commissioned for the 50th anniversary of the American Arts Festival. Pendleton is working on a new duet for Pilobolus.

"Pilobolus is the kind of creature that has benefited from its loose structure and nature. We have always kept some of the collective impetus," Wolken said. "We still have meetings; we still sit down and argue among ourselves as to what the best way to do things is.

"The philosophy changes," he said. "We change the rules because the game is ours. We continually change the rules, sometimes without telling each other. But that's OK.

'Annie' Opens The 1984 ECU Summer Theater Season Monday

ANNIE AND SANDY ... Eight-year old Melissa Barfield has the title role in "Annie," the Broadway musical opening tomorrow night at McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus. Tickets are sold out for tomorrow, but are available for other performances Tuesday through Saturday. This is the first of four musicals to be presented in the 1984 Summer Theater season. (ECU News Bureau photo by Les Todd)

Tomorrow night the curly haired orphan with the flaming red dress and a mutt named Sandy will come to Greenville in the East Carolina Summer Theater production of the Broadway musical for the entire family: "Annie." Scheduled for a six night run, through Saturday, the overture will begin at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater, corner of Fifth and Eastern streets, on the ECU campus.

With tunes such as "Tomorrow," "Easy Street," and "You're Never Fully Dressed Without a Smile," "Annie" is based on the cartoon character Little Orphan Annie. The show opens with 11-year old Annie, played by Melissa Barfield, as a foundling in a New York orphanage run by mean old Miss Hannigan, Janice Schreiber, who hates all the world's cute little girls, especially Annie.

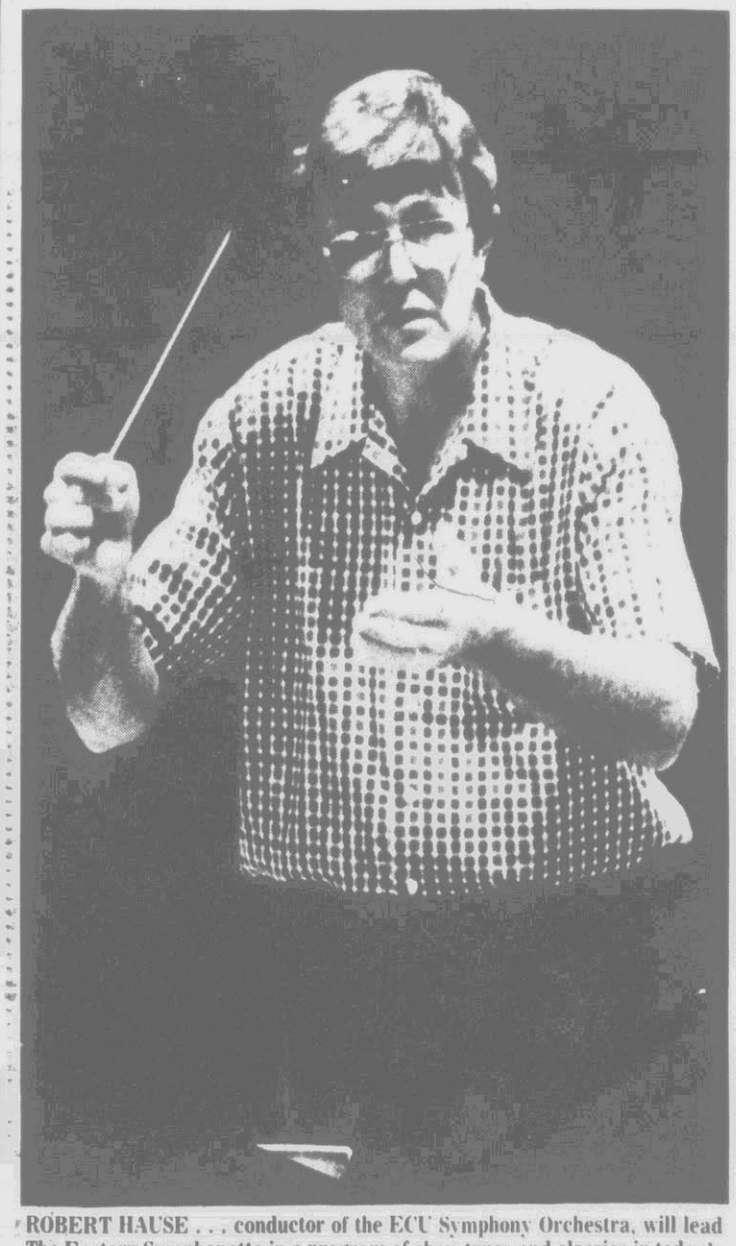

Luckily for Annie, she's taken away from the "wicked witch of the East" by billionaire Oliver Warbucks, Jack McCutcheon, who yearns to adopt her but nobly joins in search for her real parents. The search becomes the focus of the story as Annie, Sandy, FDR and half the U.S. government traipse up Fifth Avenue and down Broadway to the White House until the show reaches its climax on a Christmas morning.

"Annie" has 12 sets, 185 costumes, a full pit orchestra and one of musical theater's tiniest chorus lines of young ladies ranging in age from 7 to 12. The girls of the chorus are Susan Bramley, Marty Brannon, Cheryl Buck, Courtney Dansey, Julie Garrison and Emmye Taft, Annie's roommates-in-misery at the New York Municipal Orphanage. They have two show-stopping numbers, "It's The Hard-Knock Life," which they perform while scrubbing the floors of the orphanage at 4 a.m., and "You're Never Fully Dressed Without a Smile."

"Annie" ran four years on Broadway, earned seven Tony Awards, a Grammy, Five Outer Critics' Circle and seven Drama Desk Awards. It has generated a major motion picture starring Carol Burnett and Albert Finney, and a series of books and shows in some 20 countries including Mexico where she's called "Anita." In its review of the Broadway opening, Newsday said "'Annie' is a joy, a delight, a bonanza and a boon to mankind in the same league as fire and Womankind."

Monday night is sold out; however, tickets for Tuesday through Saturday are available and may be purchased at McGinnis Theater in Greenville, corner of Fifth and Eastern streets, Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., or reserved by calling 757-6390.

Sunday In The Park

ROBERT HAUSE . . . conductor of the ECU Symphony Orchestra, will lead The Eastern Symphonette in a program of show tunes and classics in today's Sunday in the Park program. The concert begins at 7 p.m. and will be held in the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street.

Today's Sunday in the Park concert will feature the sounds of show tunes and classics as Robert Hause conducts the Eastern Symphonette in a selection of music from Broadway shows, operas and symphonic music.

Hause, a member of the East Carolina University School of Music faculty, is the regular conductor of the ECU Symphony Orchestra.

Today's concert will be hosted by James Rees, a faculty member with the ECU Drama Department.

Music to be performed on the program include a special arrangement of "The Star Spangled Banner;" selections from two Broadway shows, "The Sound of Music" and "A Chorus Line;" and Grieg's "Norwegian Dances."

Also, the first movement of Beethoven's "First Symphony;" the Triumphant March from Verdi's opera "Aida;" excerpts from Gounod's opera "Faust;" and the overture to Rossini's opera "William Tell."

Sunday in the Park is presented on eight consecutive Sundays at 7 p.m. at the Sunday in the Park site, the grassy slope adjacent to Reade Street between Third and Fourth streets. The program is funded by the city of Greenville and is under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

In the event of rain today, a rain date for the concert has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday.

Director Excited About Washington School Bands

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Norfolk native Ralph Keith is now nearer his birth place than he has been in years. In November 1983 he moved to Washington to be director of the bands at P.S. Jones Junior High and Washington Senior High School.

"My father was a career Navy man, a chief petty officer who retired in 1977. In addition to Norfolk, while I was growing up we lived in Puerto Rico, Texas, Florida, Ohio, and Tennessee," Keith said.

RALPH KEITH

His parents, Charles and Elsie Keith, are now living in Gainesville, Ga. "After he retired, my father went into the ministry," Keith commented.

Keith, whose primary instrument is the alto saxophone, went to Tennessee to pursue his musical career. "I attended the University of Chattanooga where I majored in music education," he said. "It was there I met my wife, Christine Roane of Chattanooga.

"Christine is a violinist. She was a performer with two Chattanooga musical groups, the Chattanooga Symphony and the Chattanooga Opera Association Orchestra. She really enjoys performing, but we are the happy parents of a 10-month old daughter, Amy Lynn, so Christine enjoys staying at home now, being a housewife and mother."

Keith said "we have found life in Washington a good life. It's a pretty town, a water town. We've enjoyed being with the people we work with and others we've met. It took us a little time to adjust to being in flat land after living in the hills of Tennessee. Now we love it."

Activities the couple enjoy are "camping, this is a good area for it, our church work, and of course getting accustomed to being parents."

With two bands and 124 students to work with, Keith admitted "it's truly a full-time situation. I work with a beginning band, an eight and ninth grade band, as well as concert, marching and jazz bands. I also teach a class of music theory and improvisation.

"This summer I was not able to have a summer music program. It takes time to get things organized. I do have a short pre-band enrichment class for beginners. Next summer I hope to have a full program of activities.

"One of the things the schools may be able to add in the future is an assistant's position. Other programs we are considering and hope will be possible is adding a class for instrument repair, and possibly a winter color guard course to teach the art of flag and rifle twirling. Students enjoy these things, and they add a nice flourish to performances."

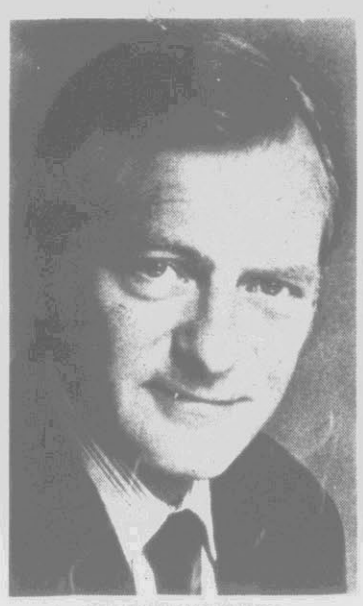

Unlike many schools in eastern North Carolina, the Washington schools, according to Keith, "have no problems in uniforms at this time. We're in a good situation. Our uniform inventory is in good shape at this time, we should be OK for the next three years.

"The Washington Band Boosters Club is certainly a big help to the city band programs. For some time, they had lots of little fund-raising projects, but this year they have focused on five bigger fund-raising projects, which has improved their efforts."

Jazz, Keith admits, "is my favorite kind of music, the sounds of big bands and swing. I especially enjoy the music of Count Basie and Toshiko Akioshi. I like classical music as well, particularly that form the Romantic period."

With his first full year as director of bands for the Washington city schools coming up, Keith admits "there's a lot of hard work, time involved in a program of this scope, but I'm really very excitied about the possibilities."

Guest Stars For 'Lost Colony'

GEORGE GRIZZARD

MANTEO — Colleen Dewhurst and George Grizzard, each a Broadway and film star, will appear this summer as guest artists in "The Lost Colony."

Ms. Dewhurst will portray Queen Elizabeth I in the Paul Green drama in all performances between July 3-7. Grizzard will play the comic role of Old Tom from July 7-12. The only night the two will appear on stage together is July 7.

Mark Sumner, producer of "The Lost Colony," and Joe Layton, the drama's director-choreographer, announced the appearance of the two as special guest performers.

Layton notes that "the young professionals who make up our cast will benefit by being able to work closely with artists of this stature, both on stage and in our Professional Theater Workshop."

Colleen Dewhurst's career includes triumphs on and off-Broadway, in films and on television. Recently she co-starred with Jason Robards Jr. in a revival of "You Can't Take It With You." Also on Broadway, she has become closely associated with performing in the plays of Eugene O'Neill, including "More Stately Mansions," "Mourning Becomes Electra," and "A Moon for the Misbegotten" for which she received a Tony Award as best actress. Among her film credits are "The Dead Zone," "Annie Hall" and "Ice Castles."

On television she has starred in specials and plays including Arthur Miller's "The Price" and "The Crucible."

Among George Grizzard's many Broadway successes are "The Desperate Hours," "The Disenchanted," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," "The Glass Menagerie," "Crown Matrimonial," and Noel Coward's "Sweet Potato."

Grizzard's regional theater credits include the title roles in "Henry V" plus leading roles in "Saint Joan," "Volpone," and "The Three Sisters" at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis. He toured in the thriller, "Deathtrap." Movies in which he has appeared include "Comes A Horseman," "Advise and Consent," and "From the Terrace." On television, he has performed in the PBS production of "The Adams Chronicles," "The Shady Hill Kidnapping" for American Playhouse, and "The Oldest Living Graduate," for which he won an Emmy Award.

Muscles And A Keen Mind

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Besides all those muscles, Arnold Schwarzenegger possesses a shrewd Austrian mind, as he has shown with his growing financial empire.

The four-time Mr. Universe and six-time Mr. Olympia also graduated from the University of Wisconsin in business administration and international economics, and in recent years he has involved himself with books, videotapes, real estate, TV commentary, bodybuilding events as well as acting. Now he appears to have a semi-permanent job as the screen's powerhouse Conan.

Two years ago Schwarzenegger starred in Dino De Laurentiis' "Conan the Barbarian." The $20-million spectacle grossed $100 million worldwide, naturally resulting in a sequel.

"As soon as the picture appeared successful, Dino exercised my option for 'Conan the Destroyer,'" said the actor-muscleman. "Next summer we'll film the third one.

"The new picture cost only $16 million because it was made in Mexico where filming is cheaper," he said. "I think it will gross more than the first one, which was rated R for the violence. In 'Conan the Destroyer' the violence has been cut down. The rating is PG this time, so that means more children will be able to see it."

"Conan the Barbarian" has been around since 1932 as the hero of magazines, books, comic books and strips, posters and calendars. Not until 1982 did he reach the screen, when De Laurentiis discovered the perfect body for the role. But even Schwarzenegger's classic proportions were not enough for Richard Fleischer, director of "Conan the Destroyer."

"Dick wanted me to put on 15 pounds of muscle weight so I would look more like the figure in the comic books," said Schwarzenegger. "So I went into training just as I would for competition, lifting weights and working out two hours in the morning and two hours at night."

"Conan the Destroyer" features two of the most offbeat castings in recent times: basketball great Wilt Chamberlain as the warrior Bombaasa, guardian of the Princess Jehnna (English actress Olivia D'Abo); and rock star Grace Jones as the Amazonian fighter Zula.

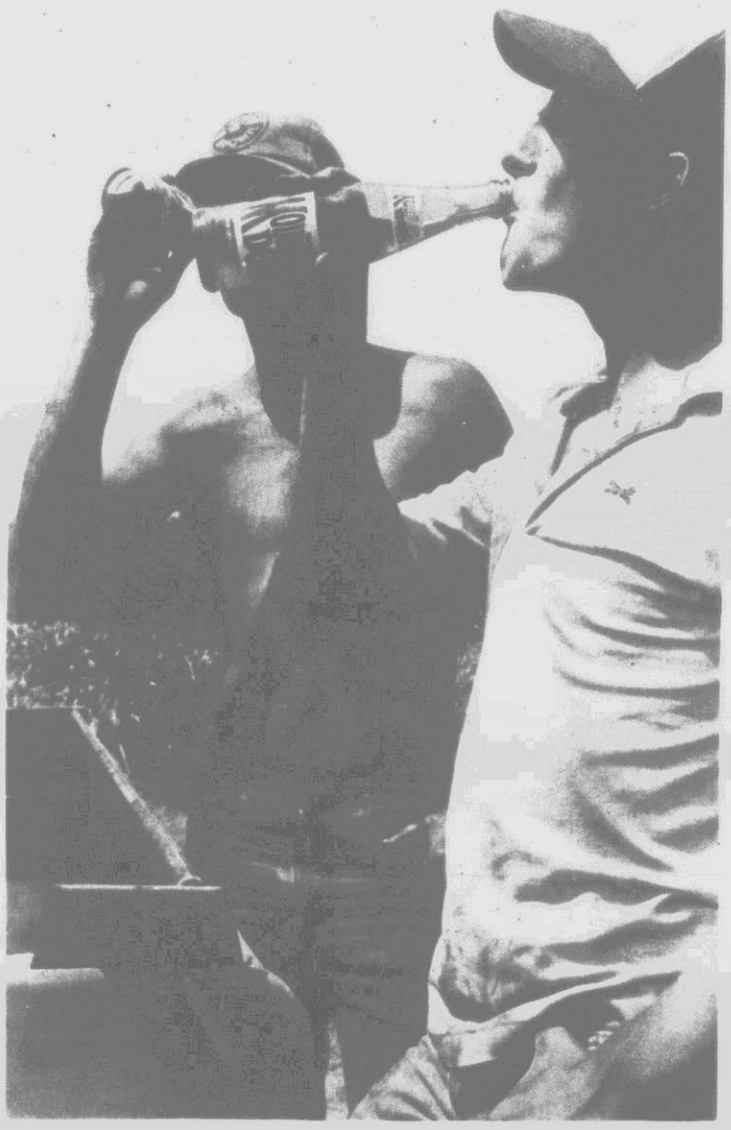

"They were both new to acting, but they had no trouble with the characters; Wilt and Grace are totally nuts," said Schwarzenegger, both in awe and admiration. "The only accidents on the picture came when Wilt got carried away with his sword and started hacking people. And Grace knocked over a few people with her stick during her fight.

"I couldn't believe Chamberlain. Here was a man nearing 50 ... He plays volleyball and lifts weights, and he has tremendous strength. He was awesome."

He recently completed a film for Hemdale Productions, "Terminator," and will do "Outpost" for the same company next January.

Go the GREAT way! The City transit system will take you all over town. Call 752-4137 for information on rates and bus routes.

There's Not Very Much To Do In Loafers Glory

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer

LOAFERS GLORY, Ark. (AP) — You can't get here from there.

Even if you could, you couldn't be sure you had, and if you did you wouldn't find just a whole lot to do.

Yes, there is a here. In red letters in square B-5 on the 1984 Arkansas Highway Commission map. Two heres, in fact. That's where here is now but not where it was, and no roads go there. Either place.

About the best you can do is make your way to where here used to be and get Charles Young to explain. That's Morning Star, a signless unincorporated widespot of 200 souls on Arkansas 14 in Searcy County where Young and his missus run a country grocery. It used to be Loafers Glory, the crown of a hardscrabble ridge suited for little but cattle hardy enough to graze the rock-studded hillside pastures.

"Had to be probably 25 to 30 year ago that they changed the name," Young's wife, Billie, says. "I think the greatest amount of people wished they had left it alone."

Her 53-year-old husband, the closest thing the community has to a mayor, takes a chair beside the cast-iron woodstove. "I guess it was because there were so many loafers here," he says. "Back then, nobody thought anything about it. There were so many loafers. They sat around and whittled, played dominoes and horseshoes. They didn't have anything else to do so that's what they did."

The loafers once gathered in a shed on Young's property, a place with a roof but, for a long time, no walls. The years took their toll of loafers and Young eventually tore the place down. A few yards up the road at Treadwell's Grocery still sits, though disused, the successor, a small building that bears the legend "Coon Hunters and Domino Players Headquarters."

Doyne Watts, 76, Young's grade school teacher, remembers Loafers Glory's heydays. "Back in that day and time, when I was a boy, you didn't have any place to go for entertainment except church and Sunday school. There wasn't much to do after the crop was gathered except gather round and chew tobacco and smoke and tell tales and things like that. And they took to calling it Loafers Glory."

Why does Loafers Glory stay on the map cheek-by-jowl with Morning Star? Because when the state acquired two tracts of land nearby for a wildlife management area, it appropriated the Loafers Glory name. The tracts total 1,400 acres, are accessible only by foot and are about as worthless as their borrowed monicker suggests.

"It is very rugged land up there. This is even worse than most of it," Don Ragland, the local wildlife officer, says. "As far as wildlife, there is very little on it. They do a little 'coon hunting on it in the winter time. But it is really good for nothing."

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 1, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Two contradictory influences are in effect today, and you would be wise to carefuly differentiate between the different aspects of the day. Do not force issues.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your bills carefully for any possible errors, but if correct, make out checks. Family ties can give good advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't get angry with a partner you may feel is not doing right by you, or big trouble ensues.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't argue with a coworker, but get your own work done well, otherwise there is apt to be trouble. Be practical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be careful otherwise you could be extravagant where entertainment is concerned. Improve your appearance.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid that possible argument with a family tie by controlling your temper. Be more concerned with your mate and be happier.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Control your temper and avoid lashing out at a good friend over some private worry and you can save the relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Arguing with a good friend over some financial affair could have bad results, so handle the matter quietly by yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be only with those you know and trust today and avoid loss of reputation by some stupid gossip. Drive carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find the best way to make an impression on a business person and don't get into some questionable business venture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to cooperate with a sensible partner and not be carried away by some new acquaintance who is pushy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) An argument between a partner and a higher-up could spoil some plan, so keep quiet and it will soon be over.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't make those changes in work or routine responsibilities otherwise you can get into big trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a dual nature and will be constantly fighting with the self over material ambitions and then with the highly romantic side of the nature. Teach that each has its proper place and time. One who could make a lot of money.

Teaching Tactics Make Difference

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Good teaching involves discipline as well as enthusiasm, several University of Rochester professors agreed in a recent seminar for high school teachers.

"We must require students to learn the basics, even if they're not 'interesting,'" said Jack Kampmeier, a chemistry professor.

KDKRPDQEF QOJ REGQPNRG ODSWF GQ GRSW JNDKWF.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: K equals V

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Troupe Planning Unusual Version Of Opera 'Aida'

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP) — These things may be commonplace in New York or Chicago, but central Iowa has never seen the likes of what Douglas Duncan and the Des Moines Metro Opera have laid on for next month.

On July 6, a gaudy caravan of 30 ancient Egyptian soldiers, 50 peasants, 40 Ethiopian captives, 35 priests and a dozen muscle-bound bearers, together with an elephant, two zebras, a brace of camels and maybe a Bengal tiger will troop onto the Des Moines Civic Center stage.

Only the tiger is a doubtful starter as the oversized troupe prepares to stage "Aida," by far its most ambitious production.

The opera is making a determined bid to win respect in the Midwestern cornfields for a company that has already won a modest spot on the national opera map.

Prices, And Quality, Are Going Up For Good Outdoor Furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

If you have been shopping for outdoor furniture and equipment this spring, you may have noticed that prices are higher than you remember from years ago.

Where once you might have expected to pay under $500 for a sturdy table and four dining chairs, today the same quality could cost at least that or more, according to sources in the outdoor furniture field.

This helps explain why outdoor and casual furniture sales, estimated at about $500 million last year, have been going up while the actual number of units sold has remained relatively stable.

"We are selling more units in the upper end, but not necessarily more units overall," Jonathan Lamp, president of Medallion Furniture, told a home furnishings trade publication recently.

In partial compensation for these higher prices, technology appears to be providing improved performance from furniture and other equipment for outdoor living.

For example, a manufacturer of children's play gyms said the development of a new non-toxic pressure treatement for wood had made its possible for the company to offer a 15-year warranty against rotting and insect damage.

Electrostatically-applied powder coatings are being used to make aluminum furniture durable over a longer time period and new synthetic fabrics that resist fading and destruction through moisture are available.

Several fabrics are being used for cushions. Among them are "Textilene," a PVS-coated polyester that is unusually weather-resistant and "Dralon," an imported synthetic that feels like cotton but offers the longevity of synthetics. In addition, strapping for outdoor furniture often has ultra-violet ray inhibitors to stand up longer under the punishment of sunlight.

Besides the traditional aluminum, wrought iron and redwood-type furniture that has been a staple, you will find on the market furniture of newer materials such as PVC and injection-molded pieces of synthetic resins.

Families shopping for outdoor play gyms for children will find a more varied selection. Keeping up with the times, some manufacturers have appropriated space-age themes. For example, one is offering, under license, the "Scout Walker Command Tower." The tower has a battery-operated, electronic "command console" that produces four sounds of the future — for a more realistic fantasy, apparently.

When shopping for a gym set, select one that is reinforced with heavy-duty metal braces at the corners to maintain rigidity. Braces should be constructed in such a way that a child's fingers cannot get caught. Climbing and swinging should be well separated to prevent children from bumping into one another, according to Murry Froikin, an executive for Creative Playthings.

In addition to play equipment, another outdoor "must" is a barbecue grill. Besides the simple, inexpensive grills that are adequate for those whose cooking will be restricted to steaks, hamburgers and hot dogs, there are large kettle cookers which can be used for roasting, baking and even smoking food.

In addition, gas and electric units offer the convenience of fast heating and freedom from having to buy and tote charcoal.

With prices up for outdoor needs, it has become more important to take care of the pieces so they last a long time.

Manufacturers of the more expensive furniture generally provide use and care instructions. They often advise cleaning frames with a mild soap or detergent on a regular basis to avoid dirt build-up. Periodic waxing of the furniture frame is sometimes also recommended.

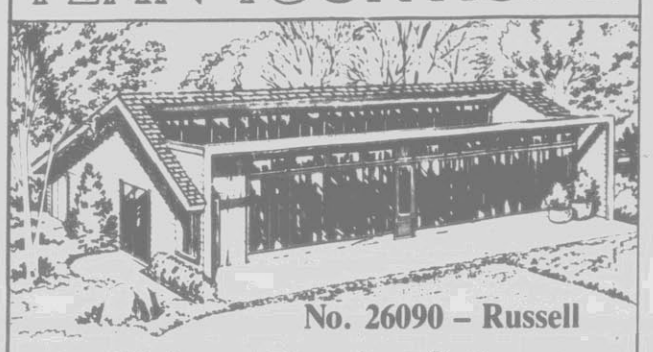

When shopping, make sure you obtain adequate information on care. Often, you will find it on hangtags attached to the pieces or in brochures available at the retail store.

Ask whether the pieces you buy can be repaired if they break. Ask also if replacement parts and extra cushions and strapping are available and if they can be self-installed.

Most outdoor furniture that has a colored finish can be touched up if the paint develops a chip or scratch. It is a good idea to obtain a spray can of touch-up paint in the right color when you buy the furniture.

If you need to use it, wash the area, then sand it lightly, clean and dry the area and apply several light coats of the paint as directed.

Unique Passive Solar System Utilized

by Jerry Bishop

The Russell was designed specifically for use with the One Design Waterwall passive solar system across its southern side. Mounted easily between studs like insulation, it is then filled with tap water and the sun does the rest. Decorating possibilities are endless. Other solar features include a northern trombe wall heated by the sun's rays through clerestory windows, an air-lock entry and concrete slab floor construction. Exterior walls show 2 × 6 studs with R-19 insulation.

The floor plan of the Russell features an L-shaped two-story great room-living area, overlooked by the clerestory, three bedrooms and one and a half baths. The kitchen is very open and details an angled island sink area with a built-in dishwasher. An extra outside room provides extra storage, and there is a house-long patio across the front.

ON THE HOUSE

AP Newsfeatures

The gutters and downspouts around your house get tested every time there is heavy rain. That's why it's a good idea every so often, when such a rain is in progress, to go outside with the proper gear and see how everything is working.

Signs of trouble include water flowing over the top of the gutter, leaks at seams and other places, sagging gutters, damaged downspouts, corrosion and evidence of loose spikes and straps.

When the gutter-downspout system isn't functioning properly, you'll pay for it sooner or later. Water that fails to drain away from the house will cause damage to the structure in the form of leaking and flooding, which are the very things gutters and downspouts are designed to prevent. Even when there is no actual damage to the materials that make up the system, it is important to see that the water that moves through it is not deposited close to the foundation — hence, splash blocks and sometimes drainage tiles leading to dry wells.

Gutters often overflow simply because leaves and other debris have settled into the channels and prevent the passage of water which, having no other place to go, pours over the sides. Worse still, the water sometimes overflows on the side nearer the house, damages the siding and causes leaks and stains.

A twice-a-year inspection is essential to prevent accumulations and to follow through with removal of the unwanted matter. This involves taking the leaves out by hand or with a garden hose and, in cases where safety is a factor, having the job done professionally. Various types of screening material can be purchased to prevent clogging of the gutiers. Overhanging branches should be clipped.

A garden hose also comes in handy to determine whether the gutters are pitched properly to allow water to flow to the downspouts. Generally, when this flow is interrupted, it is because one or more sections of the setup is sagging. And that is because the gutter fastening to the house fascia has come loose. This fastening usually is a spike or a strap of either metal or plastic. A strap can often be realigned merely by placing a shim under one part of it, but if the trouble is with a spike, it's usually better to remove and reposition it. Examine the place where the spike went into the fascia to determine whether any rotted wood needs patching.

You can, of course, purchase new straps and spikes at any dealer who sells gutters as well as at regular hardware stores or departments. Sometimes, when reinserting a spike is not practical, you can switch to a strap at that point.

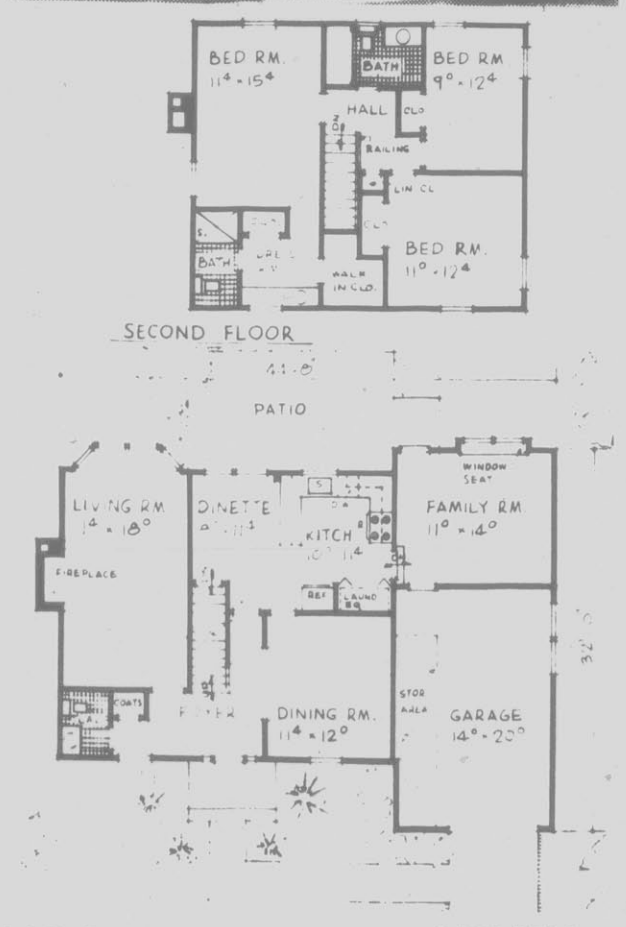

Openings in gutters are often the result of rust or corrosion, which you won't get with aluminum or vinyl. When it occurs with galvanized metal, scrape off as much of the rust as possible and apply a rust primer. In doing any kind of patchwork, regardless of the gutter material remember you must do it on the inside of the gutter, not the outside.

If the opening is fairly small, roofing cement alone may work. But with wider gaps and if you want to do an extra good job, get one of the patching kits easily available these days. A kit contains fiber glass patching tape, with full instructions on how it should be applied. When the leak is at a seam, the patch is the same, except that some stores carry a special seam tape.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the Answer

Q. — Our kitchen counter doesn't have a backsplash. As a result, water seeps into the cracks where the counter meets the wall. We would like to seal the cracks to prevent further damage, but aren't sure whether ordinary caulking material will do the job. Can you advise?

A. — Many caulking compounds will solve your problem. Just be sure the one you select is intended for use in a kitchen where it will be subjected to continual contact with water. Also, if you intend to paint the caulk to match the counter or the kitchen decor, get the kind that can be painted. Some can't.

Before you start, clean away any loose material from the opening and wash away dirt and grime. Use soap and water for the cleanup. Follow with a household disinfectant to remove all traces of mildew, rinse well and allow to dry. A squeeze-type tube will be easiest to handle. Apply the caulk with some pressure so the crack will be filled completely. You can be sure the caulk will be leveled out and the excess material removed by running a wet finger along the crack. Allow to dry 24 hours, then paint if desired.

Q. — I have been reading about stopping a slight leak that is coming from a kitchen faucet, but not the regular kind of leak. This one is taking place at the nut under the handle. I followed the advice I saw in a book about tightening the nut, but that doesn't seem to help. Now I want to loosen the nut and remove what is called "the old packing" from the threads. The book says to replace the old packing with new. Just what is packing and how do I replace it?

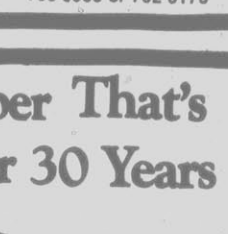

A. — Packing is a stringlike material that is wound around the threads before you tighten the nut. Tell your local hardware store what you want and what it will be used for, and he will give you the right product. Don't worry if it doesn't look exactly like the kind you took off. Different manufacturers make slightly different kinds, but they all resemble strings or heavy sewing threads and they all serve the purpose.

Q. — I have been told the faucet in our old basement sink is a fuller and that it is so old-fashioned I probably will not be able to buy a necessary rubber ball to fix a leak. I hate to get a new sink because it is used so seldom.

A. — Plenty of fuller faucets are still in existence in old houses. Many hardware stores and departments in supply centers carry the rubber ball that goes into such a faucet in place of a washer, but if you can't find the right place, a plumbing supply house most certainly will have it in stock, especially in a neighborhood where there are a lot of old houses.

(Leaky faucets, clogged drains, balky toilet tanks, noisy pipes and condensation drips are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. I rooted some geramium cuttings and I want to plant them outside. How much sunlight do geraniums need? (F.F., Burnsville)

A. Although six to eight hours of sunlight per day are usually sufficient, most varieties of geraniums will grow and flower best in areas of full sunlight. They can be planted in locations having light to moderate shade, but the flowering may be reduced.

Q. When is the best time to take azalea cuttings? (A.L., Harris)

A. The time to take azalea cuttings is not as much dependent on a calendar date as it is on the stage of development of the cuttings. Cuttings should be taken from current season's growth that has toughened but is still pliable and not brittle. This is usually around the first of July to the middle of July.

Q. How can I get rid of powderly mildrew on roses? (E.E., Cherryville)

A. Powdery mildew is a powdery fungus that is white to light gray that covers succulent stems, leaves, buds and flowers of many ornamental plants. Roses, crepe myrtle, phlox and zinnias are especially susceptible. The fungus can be controlled by spraying with benomyl (Benlate) according to directions on the label.

Q. How are yuccas propagated? (I.D., Clinton)

A. Yuccas are readily grown from seed, but varigated forms will not come true by this method. If the plant produces offsets, you can remove these from the mother plant. If you want to produce a large number of plants, dig up the plants and cut the large roots into one or two inch segments. Allow these cuttings or segments to callus by letting them dry a few hours. This will prevent them from rotting later. Place the cuttings in a moist medium to root.

State Wants Osprey To Return

JACKSON'S GAP, Ala. (UPI) — It took Joseph Meyers less than five minutes to climb a 16-foot utility pole and put two 1-month-old ospreys in an artificial nest, but he hopes the simple action will eventually lead to the rare fish hawks being seen across the state.

Dr. Meyers, the coordinator of the Alabama Department of Conversation and Natural Resources' nongame wildlife program, is trying to reintroduce osprey to Alabama. Once native to the state, the osprey population dwindled in the mid 1960s when pesticides ruined their reproductive systems.

Wednesday afternoon, Meyers moved four pairs of ospreys brought from the coast of North Carolina to four inland sites in Alabama — Lake Martin, Lake Eufaula, Guntersville Lake and Elk River. He said if the ospreys learn to fly in Alabama, they will also hatch their eggs here.

Getting the orange-eyec birds to adapt to their new surroundings may be more tricky than it was getting them into their nests. Meyers said caretakers using long poles will dump fish into the nests twice a day.

BREAK THOSE 'RULES'

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

We have often remarked that the many bromides that are quoted about the game are well and good, but they are only generalities. Specific situations need special treatment. In this hand, the late Harold Ogust, West, and Boris Koytchou, East, broke almost every 'rule' they could to defeat an opposing no trump game.

The bidding was straightforward. Note, however, that South stopped to show his major suit en route to three no trump in case his side had a 4-4 fit.

The cliche governing opening leads against no trump contracts is: "Fourth highest from your longest and strongest." Ogust decided there was little future in a club lead. It seemed far better to look for his partner's long suit, and the auction suggested that it was almost certain to be hearts, so he attacked with the nine of hearts.

Declarer played low from the table. Rule two that came into play was: "Third hand high." Had Koytchou won the trick with the king and returned the suit, declarer would have had an easy time making his contract. Instead, Koytchou signaled encouragement with the seven.

Declarer won and led a diamond. The third adage says: "Second hand low," so naturally Ogust jumped in with his king and led another heart. Declarer played low again from dummy. This time Koytchou won the king and continued with a heart to knock out declarer's last stopper in the suit.

Perhaps declarer should have tried for his ninth trick by finessing the 10 of clubs, but that was doomed to failure as the cards lie. In any event, he decided that a better chance was to hope West had started with both missing diamond honors. When he led another diamond, East was able to win the ace and take two more heart tricks for down one.

We will remind you one more time: Those wise saws will work on many occasions, but they are no substitute for common sense.

Fire Destroys Set For Movie

LONDON (AP) — A fire started by an explosion at Pinewood Studios destroyed a $2.7 million set for the science fiction movie "Legend," studio officials report.

Two stage hands and four firemen were treated for burns, smoke inhalation and shock, but no one was seriously hurt in the blaze, fire services reported.

More than 100 firefighters were called in to fight the blaze, which began after nearly 200 actors and workers left for lunch. The cause of the explosion was not known.

The stage, claimed to be the world's largest, was built in 1976 for "The Spy Who Loved Me" and was used to shoot four James Bond movies and the Superman films.

Networks Readying Fall Backup Series

By Andrew J. Edelstein

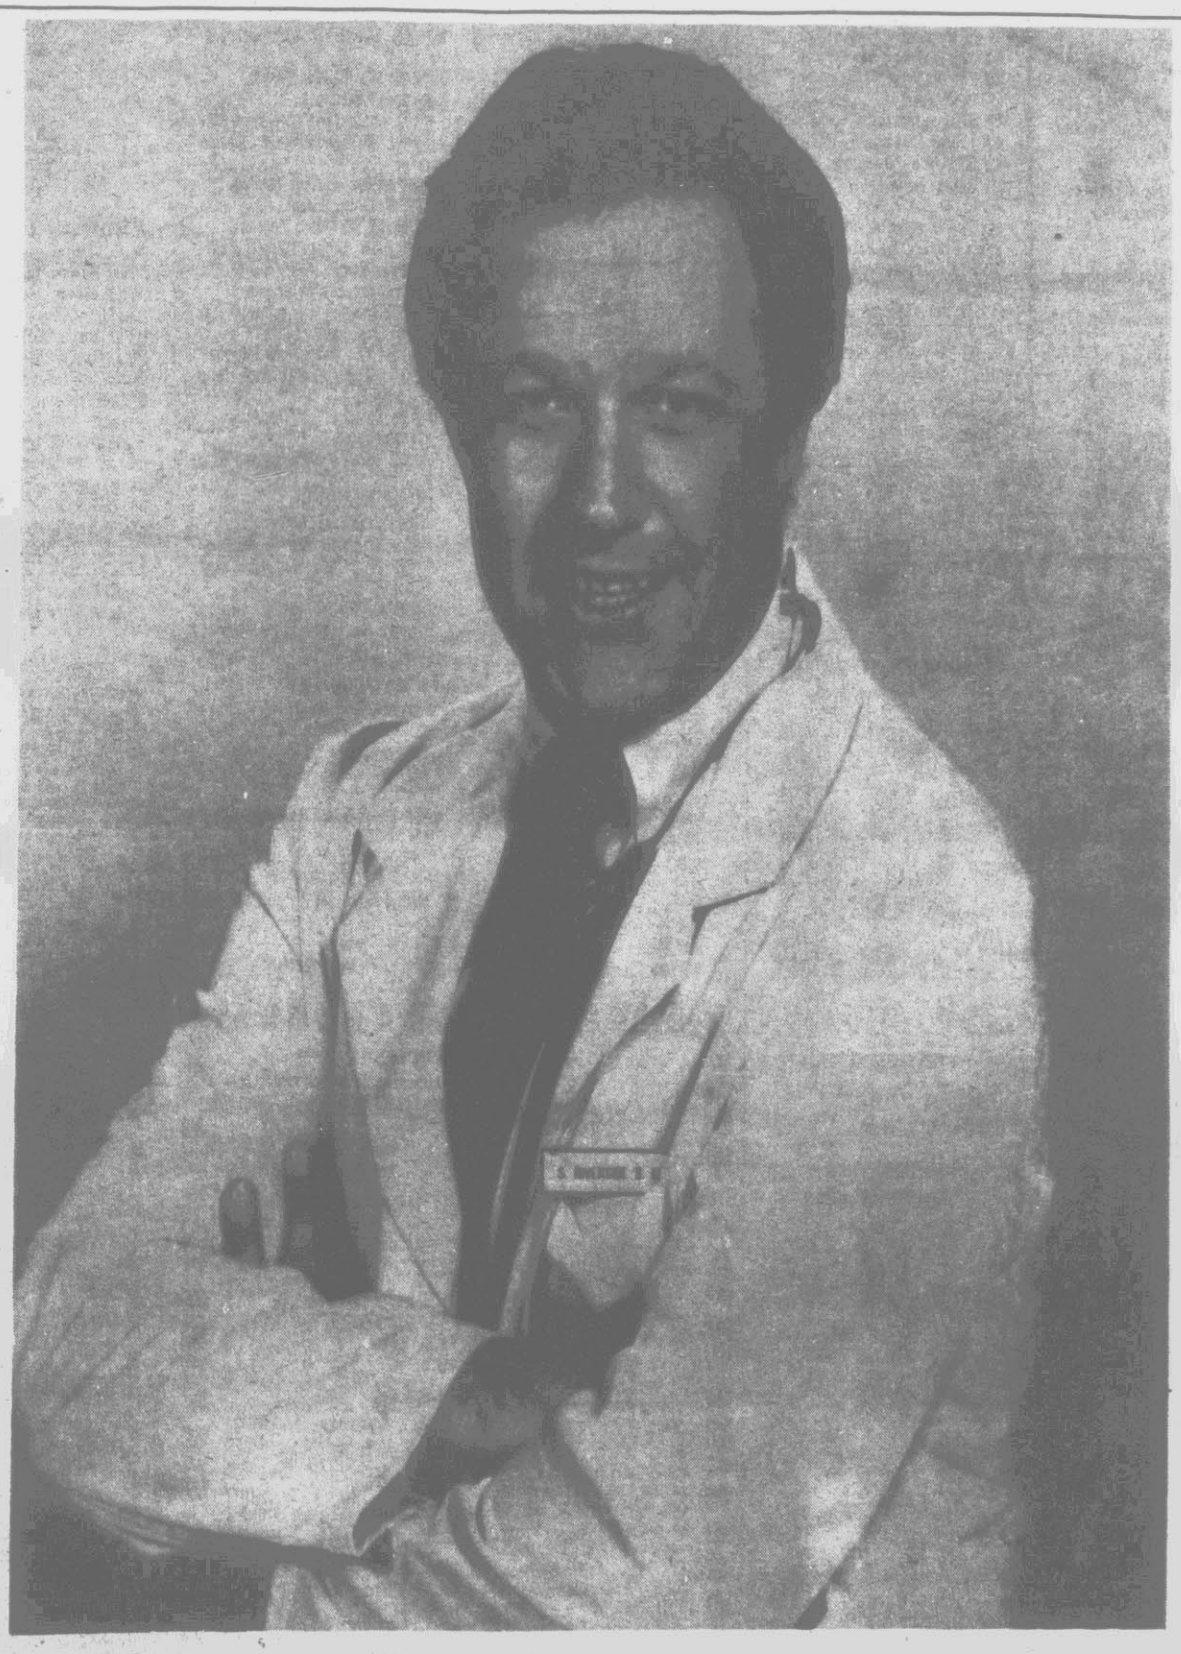

Although it's still about eight weeks until the networks begin the fall season, replacement series are already being announced — a sure sign of lack of confidence network execs have in their new shows.

CBS has announced two new backup series. "Crazy Like a Fox" features Jack Warden and John Rubenstein as a father-and-son detective team. The comedy-drama reportedly received the "most favorable rating" when CBS test-marketed its new pilots. The second CBS backup series is "Other World," a science-fiction show about a family who suddenly find themselves in outer space.

CBS also has plans to use Suzanne Pleshette in a replacement series. A network spokesman says it has not been determined whether Miss Pleshette will be featured in a new series or in an altered version of "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs," the short-lived, but critically praised series in which she played a newspaper reporter.

Meanwhile, NBC has announced its first two backup series. The most promising is "Berenger's," produced by David Jacobs, creator of "Dallas" and "Knots Landing." The show focuses on a family who owns a chain of swanky department stores, similar to Bloomingdale's. Like Jacobs's other series, "Berenger's" will be a continuing serial. Sam Wanamaker will play the clan's patriarch. Ben Murphy ("Lottery!"), Yvette Mimieux and Jeff Conaway ("Taxi") are also featured.

NBC is also readying "Making Out," a drama about the pressures and challenges faced by high-school students and teachers. The series' best-known cast members include Janet Eilber ("Two Marriages") and David Packer, who played the turncoat Daniel in the miniseries, "V." The series is produced by Seth Freeman and Michele Gallery, who won Emmys for their production work on "Lou Grant." Incidentally, the series was originally called "High School Confidential," the same title as a 1958 B-film about drugs and juvenile delinquency that today is a cult favorite.

Charles Siebert stars as Dr. Stanley Riverside on CBS's "Trapper John, M.D." The medical series, which combines humor and drama, will return for its sixth season this fall.

Name change

NBC's new Saturday morning show, "The Hot Rock," scheduled to premiere in September, has had a name change. The series will now be known as "Kidd Video." The program will focus on the adventures of a young rock group, three boys and a girl, in both live and animated action. A highlight of each show will be an original rock-music video and two or three of the current top-40 songs.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I'd like to know if Rockwell, the man who sings "Somebody's Watching Me," is related to Michael Jackson. — Jennifer La Borde

To Jennifer: Don't look for singer-songwriter Rockwell on the Jackson's Victory Tour this summer. Rockwell has powerful connections, but he is not one of the Jacksons. The Jackson Brothers consist of Michael, Tito, Jermaine, Randy, Jackie and Marlon. Twenty-year-old Kennedy Gordy, who is known professionally as Rockwell, is the son of Motown's merchant of music, Berry Gordy Jr. According to Rockwell, he was visiting the Jackson estate when Michael asked to hear one of his compositions. The Jacksons loved "Somebody's Watching Me," Michael asked to sing backup, and the rest is Motown history.

DEAR MICHELE: How many times has Linda Evans been married, and to whom? Is it true she is dating Richard Chamberlain now? — Tina Winfry

To Tina: Forty-two-year-old Linda was twice married and divorced. Her first attempt at matrimony was with John Derek, who dumped her for the then 15-year-old Bo. She later married real-estate tycoon Stan Herman, divorced him, and now is single. Miss Evans has been romantically linked to the ever-so-handsome restaurateur George Santo Pietro, and most recently to Richard Chamberlain, with whom she made her feature film debut in "Twilight of Honor." Both gentlemen have squired her around town, as well as out of town, but no wedding bells have been heard: Linda is reportedly altar-shy.

DEAR MICHELE: I've been told by a friend that Judy Carne was married to the late Peter Duel. Is he right? — Glenda Ellis

To Glenda: Only on celluloid. Judy and Peter starred as the young newlyweds, David and Julie Willis, in the 1960's sitcom "Love on a Rooftop." The series also featured comedian Rich Little as married neighbor Stan Parker.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

During June, I attended the semiannual television critics' press tour in Phoenix and Los Angeles. We previewed new fall program offerings from the various cable networks, PBS and the three broadcast networks, ABC, CBS and NBC.

The tour opened with a three-day look at what's new on cable, featuring most of the major basic - and pay-cable services. Cable has something for everyone, offering a multitude of choices to the viewer. I will confine my views to those services offering what I consider "family entertainment."

The Arts & Entertainment Network presents dramatic series, movies, comedies and selected programs on the visual and performing arts. It's worth looking into.

The Disney Channel is enchanting. A must see is its DTV, which features music videos created by setting animation from the Disney library to contemporary music. Everyone in the family will find something to watch here.

Jo Anne Russell: A Winner In The Booth

By Willie Schatz

Think of it as trading Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova for millions of television viewers. When NBC made the offer, Jo Anne Russell took it.

"I've been trained for this job all my life, because talking's easy for me," says Miss Russell, one of the tour's most ebullient personalities, who will offer commentary on this year's Wimbledon championships on NBC. Anchoring the network's record 27 hours and 45 minutes of coverage (which includes 15 minutes of highlights each night beginning tomorrow) are the urbane Dick Enberg and the noisy but knowledgeable Bud Collins.

"I prepare the same way for television as I do for a match, although playing tennis is easier," admits Miss Russell, who recently worked the French Open for NBC. "I just follow Dick and Bud's lead. They made the French Open easy. We do much more at Wimbledon, so I could be telling a different story after that. But I don't really see any reason why I should be nervous."

That doesn't mean NBC won't be. The French Open is one thing. Wimbledon, which accounts for half of NBC's total 1984 tennis broadcast time, is quite another. The network is sending 90 production, technical and management people to England for the big event.

With an estimated 80 million people watching some part of the coverage, NBC is rooting for a repeat of the 1981 final, when John McEnroe broke Bjorn Borg's five tournament winning streak to the tune of a 7.9 rating and a 33 share. The last thing the network wants or needs is another 1983, when McEnroe dispatched Chris Lewis before folks had a chance to finish their orange juice. That match scored a meager 4.4 rating and 18 share.

Either way, after Wimbledon, the No. 34-ranked Miss Russell will go back to playing on the circuit.

Inherited humor

Steve Allen, the talk-show host and comedian, didn't just decide to become a comedian — he was destined to become one. He credits his mother, Belle Montrose, a vaudeville headliner, for his sense of humor. Milton Berle has called her "the funniest woman in show business."

NEW! Rest-A-Matic ...Adjustable Bed...

Copyright, 1979, Rest-A-Matic® Adjustable Beds

Rest-A-Matic —so versatile, so advanced it makes ordinary chairs, sofas, and beds practically obsolete for leisure activities, relaxation, and sleep!

Here's an amazing discovery that enriches the hours you spend at home...making the most of healthful relaxation. REST-A-MATIC®... An engineering marvel that makes (what looks like) a conventional bed... into an ADJUSTABLE BED... that changes to literally hundreds of restful positions. Quiet electric motors concealed in the understructure of the REST-A-MATIC® do your bidding at the touch of a button.

The Rest-A-Matic® Adjustable Bed provides the ultimate in comfort and relaxation in your home...where you can enjoy extra leisure hours the most.

Now your bedroom is not just for sleeping! With Rest-A-Matic® ...it becomes a center for your most rewarding leisure-time activities... reading, studying, sewing...watching TV... or even breakfast in bed!

People of all ages...in all walks of life are now finding new ways to enrich their lives with healthful, vigorous activities...for a renewed spirit of enjoyment, physically and mentally. And equally important to this renewed activity...is the enjoyment of total relaxation!

Rest-A-Matic® lets your mind work while your body rests. You may actually be able to add extra hours every day to your active life because you'll be more comfortable... more relaxed, yet wide-awake. you will soon find that muscle tension will be relieved in every part of your body.... because your body weight is more evenly distributed and supported than in any chair or ordinary bed.

Couples can now enjoy these extra pleasant hours spent together... each enjoying a preference of relaxed activities. With the new Dual-King model, for example, you can sit up watching television, perhaps, while your spouse can lie back even further for relaxed conversation... or just a pleasant rest.

How does Rest-A-Matic do all this for you?

Programmed to raise or lower different sections of the bed, the Rest-A-Matic® is the product of extensive engineering design and testing... All toward the ultimate aim of providing you with a "free-floating" kind of support you could never experience in chair lounges, sofas or conventional beds. Since the Rest-A-Matic® adapts to literally hundreds of restful positions, you can actually distribute body weight more evenly to help relieve muscle tension, back fatigue, tired legs. Comfort is yours to command whether you just want to relax or adjust to a position for increased circulatory action.

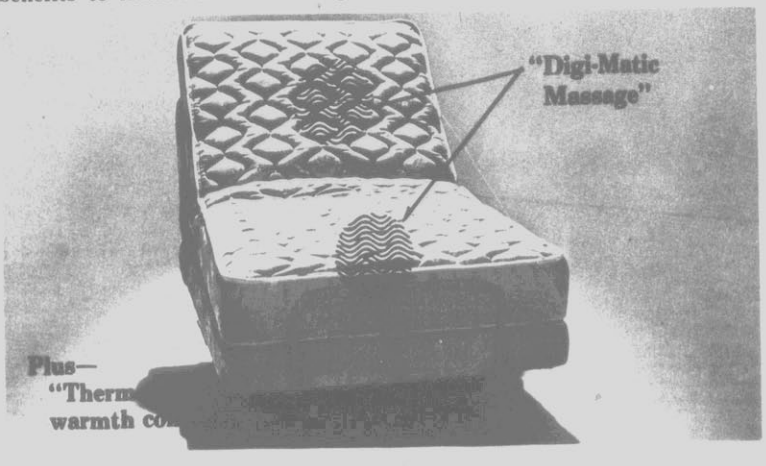

Inside the Rest-A-Matic® frame and mattress is where the engineering magic has been concealed. Simply plug the cord into a regular electric outlet and the Rest-A-Matic, with its silent electric motors and scientifically structured framework ...is ready to do your bidding at the touch of a button.

When made up, your Rest-A-Matic® bed looks like any other elegant conventional bed. Can be used with your present headboards and comes in the usual sizes; Twin, Full-Sized, Queen and King, and Dual-King (two twin beds that accommodate king-size bedspreads).

Let's talk about health...

Refreshing relaxation and increased circulation offer many obvious benefits to health and well-being.

Since the Rest-A-Matic® Bed adjusts to many positions, you can now choose exactly the right amount of lift or support for healthful relaxation. For example, you can lower the head support and raise your legs... for a healthful surge of circulatory action. With legs elevated, back completely relaxed... and your head slightly lower than the rest of your body... you can almost feel the pressures and tensions of the day slip away!

Enjoy "cradle-comfort" even in the sitting-up position, since only about one fifth of your body weight rests on the hips. Just one of thousands of restful positions you can command.

A miracle answer for the bed-ridden...

Rest-A-Matic® can automatically be controlled by the patient to change positions to relieve the monotony, aches, nervous tension and soreness from remaining in one position too long. In addition, by adjusting the bed to "activity" positions the patient can keep self-entertained or engaged in other activities such as reading, writing, with virtually no assistance from others.

"Digi-Matic Massage"

"Thermo-Matic Heat"

Another optional feature is the Thermo-Matic Warmth Control, a heating unit for your Rest-A-Matic® that is imperceptible to sight or touch. With its own control that lets you select the level of heat you prefer, "Thermo-Matic" is far more efficient than an electric blanket since the heat rises from the mattress and is retained by the lightest of blankets above.

IS BOY GEORGE CORRUPTING OUR YOUTH?

ASK THEM YOURSELF

JOHN: KEY TO COMMUNICATION

Elton John, who probably wears out 10 piano stools a year with his on-stage antics, has no intention of wearing out his voice on long-distance telephone calls. You see, Elton takes rather literally the advice to "reach out and touch someone." If he's in his native England and wants to chat with an important friend in New York or California, Elton has him or her flown to Europe. Face to face is ever so much better than phone to phone. And consider: With Elton's system, one doesn't have to worry about static and trans-Atlantic operators, just mid-air turbulence and cloud cover.

While the Soviet-bloc boycott of the Olympics has softened the home rental market in posh Beverly Hills and Bel-Air, the boat leasing business out of various L.A. harbors hasn't sunk very much. Producer Peter (Flashdance) Guber has his $2.5 million yacht on the block for $15,000 a week — including crew and continental breakfast, five bedrooms, an on-deck pool and spa, sauna and electric piano. The nice thing about a boat, of course, is that you can pull anchor any time the gymnastics and javelin throw become tedious and set sail for more invigorating ports. Maybe even to South Korea, the nation scheduled to host the Games in 1988.

Anglophiles might want to stick around, however, because the British frigate Brazen, which will lay anchor at Long Beach during this summer's Olympic games, is going to be harboring some heavyweight cargo: the occasionally brazen Prince Andrew. Randy Andy has already locked up shore leave for assorted equestrian events, but he'd be well advised not to get tethered to any undesirable young filly. After all, Andy is going to be saddled with the company of his sister Princess Anne and father, Prince Philip, who will certainly see that he stays on the straight and narrow bridle path.

There are two things cagey Nicaraguan Barbara (Never Say Never Again) Carrera will never say anything about: her age and the precise number of carats in her diamonds. "Age is the last thing on my mind," says Barbara, who is married to Nickolas Mavroleon, an international businessman some 10 years her junior. "It's a man's philosophy and life in him that counts," she adds, declaring that this union is forever. "In any event, if I live to be 200, I'll give my age as 100. I started modeling at 16, so I learned the tricks of the trade very early on."

Remake fever is burning with such fervor that Columbia Pictures is planning to bring back the slapstick act of the Three Stooges, all of whom are deceased. The film's working title is 003 Stooges, which means that if it ever gets onto celluloid, it will be in the computer-age mode. The movie's producer, Norman Maurer, is the son-in-law of the original Stooge, Moe Howard, and he and co-executive producer Howard West have quite a task before them: to find a new Larry, Moe and Curly. May we suggest a trio of the fellows currently running for high public office?

MOE AND LARRY: MORE SLAPS AND MORE SCHTICK

Blade runner Dorothy Hamill, who will be skating in a ballet at New York City's Lincoln Center next month, doesn't figure on an end to her ice age anytime soon. "I had no idea I'd still be skating eight years after the [1976] Olympics, and loving it as much as ever — actually more. When I trained for the Olympics, all I did was eat, sleep and skate; now I have new projects that are more challenging and creative. I'll probably be skating in some form for the rest of my life — I can't see giving it up completely." One such challenging project: starring in a TV movie on the life of Olympic champ, movie star — and Nazi sympathizer — Sonja Henie.

What factor determines whether you accept or refuse a role? — E.V., Corpus Christi, Texas

Truthfully, it isn't the money. I went into The Real Thing because of the people I'd be working with. I have the deepest respect for Jeremy Irons, my co-star, both as a man and as an actor. Very often when performers work together they're great friends for the engagement, but then never see each other again. In this case, we'll be friends for life.

LEONARD NIMOY

director of Star Trek III: The Search for Spock

Do you have a burning desire to go into space? — R.O., Fort Myers, Fla.

A warm desire, not a burning one. The prospect of venturing into space is fascinating. I am impressed by what our astronauts have been doing; it was a great accomplishment when our first space shuttle landed. But space is for astronauts and performing is for actors. They do what they do and enjoy it, and I am doing what I like to do — and enjoying it.

IS BOY GEORGE CORRUPTING OUR YOUTH?

By Benjamin De Mott

What makes Boy George prance?

The man wears dresses, floppy hats, costume jewelry, braids, rouge and mascara. On national TV he proclaims himself to be a "drag queen." The foreign press is full of the scrapes he gets into on his travels. His passport says male, but his garb and makeup say female — enough to nonplus any border guard. The manager of the Brigham Young University bookstore in Provo, Utah, removed the Boy's albums from the shelves after some customers complained that the records promote homosexuality. But never mind — the Boy's star keeps rising.

Does his triumph mean that feminization is taking command? Is heterosexuality on the skids? Or is there a different kind of secret hidden in this phenomenon — one which, when aired, opens up neglected truths about what it's like to be young nowadays?

Whatever the answer, it's clear that this lead singer with the sensationally popular rock group called Culture Club is indeed a phenomenon. Culture Club took a Grammy last season as the best new rock group of the year. Each of Boy George's last seven singles has won a place in the Top 10. Joan Rivers not only welcomes the Boy to The Tonight Show, but also brings him over to the desk after his number for conversation about his London upbringing, his family, his earliest dressup games. The Boy is featured in People and Newsweek cover stories. And Culture Club is planning a United States tour for sometime this fall.

Some rockers have earned their fame by being voices of cultural and political protest in America and abroad — protest against sexual inhibition (Elvis Presley), against the Vietnam War (The Grateful Dead and dozens of other groups), against racism and social injustice generally (The Rolling Stones, Bruce Springsteen). Boy George does have a tenuous connection with earlier rock rebellions. He's told interviewers that he wants to "sing like a black singer," and his smooth-tenor, pop-soul sound brings to mind the voice of Smokey Robinson. Sometimes, as in a Culture Club song called "White Boy," he goes so far as to treat whiteness itself as a badge of kneejerk conformism ("White boy dance like an enemy").

Yet despite all this, the political content in his act is actually quite low. Boy George's desire to "sing black" seems to have little in common with similarly phrased desires expressed by earlier rock stars. The Rolling Stones, for example, in such songs as "Brown Sugar," tried to imagine and embody the black attitudes and experiences that gave birth and continuing life to the blues. Boy George's approach — like that of the rock group The Police — is via form rather than substance. "I'm a man of no convictions," George sings, imitating a black singer but not probing minority experience. Culture Club hits are love ballads with an accent on sweetly unrequited feeling; hints of genuine radicalism are almost nonexistent.

What's the secret, then? What sets the Boy's fans screaming? Ask one of them that question and you'll more than likely be told, simply, "George is fun." And nobody who's been to a Culture Club concert or listened to the group or watched and listened, say, to the video of "Karma Chameleon," one of Boy George's biggest hits, can be in any doubt that the group and its leader really do purvey a fun experience. Mayhem, violence, aggression, threatened sexual assault — these rock-show staples don't figure into Culture Club performances. Boy George's getup is simply goofy, and as he prances about the stage, he's all smiles, gentle camaraderie, playful self-enjoyment. The world of bad news, pollution and corruption is momentarily banished; in its place stands a human being who seems to be the very incarnation of happiness, prepared to offer an on-stage bliss-out. Rare stuff in the '80s.

But it would be a mistake to conclude that sunniness alone holds the key to this performer's success. What we need to take note of is the special message — unique to the Boy — that his particular cheer communicates. Boy George creates a sense of fun not merely by appearing happy, but also by speaking indirectly yet forcefully to at least two of the weightiest anxieties that now beset young people.

The first of these anxieties is fear of humiliation in the mating game. Western youth, male and female, is continually harassed by the media about socializing with the opposite sex: hurried into mating competitions, hounded into worrying about achieving popularity, encouraged to agonize ceaselessly about capturing the boy or girl of one's dreams. (Hide those zits. Wear these jeans. Say only this certified OK phrase.) For beautiful or handsome or naturally charming kids, the mating hype is a gas; they can't lose. But for the other 95 percent of us, the pressures — real-life jealousy, envy, fear of a boyfriend's or girlfriend's treachery — can be serious, and the dream of release is enticing. What would it be like to be unpreoccupied with who's in and who's out? Would you be struck down by miserable loneliness?

Not at all, is Boy George's answer. Being out of it in the ordinary sense is actually a lot of fun. Look at me. I'm obviously and totally out of it and having a ball — larking about, enjoying myself . . . no sweat. Part of the reason Boy George's fans delight in him is that his guileless, open, plainly noncompetitive and untormented manners send a reassuring signal: If you were to drop out of the whole boy-girl popularity racket tomorrow, you'd manage perfectly. You'd survive!

It's a fantasy, sure, but it's a fantasy that meets a need — the need for imaginative escape from real-life hurts that are harder for the young to endure, probably, than for any other age group in society.

There's one other equally painful fear that Boy George eases: namely, the fear that all avenues of escape from the frustrations of growing up have been closed off for good. It's true that even repressive parents are less repressive than they were in earlier generations. Many school systems and some churches offer counseling services to pupils out of sync with teachers and studies. In the adult world there's an increasing alertness to the possibility that anguish can touch the young.

But, despite all this, despair can and does arrive, and coping with it — dealing each day with a parent who "just doesn't understand" or turns down (or shuts off) one's stereo or is rude to one's boyfriend or hogs the TV or invariably sides with the teachers — isn't easy. And the worst of it on some days is one's own sudden suspicion that there may well be no way out. People in their teens are as conversant as their parents with the danger of cutting and running. They know that jobs are difficult to find, that pimps prey on runaways, that the papers and TV are full of scary stories about fates worse than being caught and sent home that befall kids who run away. And that knowledge can intensify anguish.

Once again Boy George helps. Here's somebody who, on the face of it, must have said to himself: I've had it. I've got to get out, far out. But Boy George's act incarnates optimism, not gloom. His fans aren't incited by his example to think of running away. They are, instead, invited to consider the living proof that life is by no means a jail. After all, what happened to the Boy? Well, fame, money and happiness happened to him, that's what. Things worked out beautifully. Plenty of ways to party on this earth. Surviving is easy.

It's tempting, to be sure, to ignore these dimensions of Boy George's success, and to package him neatly into the trend called "feminization." Signs abound on the contemporary scene that the unisex idea that emerged in the countercultural late '60s and early '70s is gaining ground. Pierced masculine earlobes are becoming a norm. Jockey-style briefs for women are marketed in full-page ads stressing that men "like to see you in their clothes." Phil Donahue runs an increasing number of discussions of female impersonators and Mr. America pageants on his TV show. Tootsie was a huge box-office bonanza, and Michael Jackson doesn't exactly qualify as a macho hero. Conceivably the influence of feminization and gender-bending is on the rise in the general culture.

But viewing the burgeoning affection for Boy George as evidence of that influence doesn't, finally, make sense. Pensive, puckish, unfrightening, amused, this performer is above all somebody oddly — but persuasively — in touch with the fun of life. In a secret code that's not uncomplicated but often charming, he tells his fans that, even when existence would appear to have you licked, you can talk back. Tough times at home, nuclear-disaster flicks coming thick and fast on the tube, a problem with a faithless boyfriend — but still the bluebird flies, happiness isn't totally elusive. The deepest secret whispered by the man wearing a dress and lipstick is, in short, just this: Nobody but nobody need ever give up hope. FW

WHIZ QUIZ

ARE YOU AS GOOD-LOOKING AS YOU THINK?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. You're only as pretty as you feel.
2. An attractive man reacts differently to the opposite sex than an attractive woman does.
3. Regardless of a person's other qualities, physical attractiveness is influenced by physical features alone.
4. Most people sell themselves short where good looks are concerned and don't realize they're as attractive as they really are.
5. Physically attractive individuals tend to be better adjusted and possess more positive personality qualities than others.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a study of Facial Expression as a Determinant of Physical Attractiveness, University of Illinois investigators found that people with happy facial expressions were judged to be appreciably more physically attractive than those who looked unhappy. The findings thus suggest that one's degree of attractiveness depends on his or her emotional mood, at least as it is reflected in one's face.

2. True. In a University of Rochester study of Physical Attractiveness in Social Interaction, male and female college seniors completed a diary of social interactions over an extended period of time. They also were given tests which measured fear of rejection and willingness to trust as well as levels of either assertiveness or social avoidance. Photos of the subjects were then rated for physical attractiveness by other undergraduates. The findings showed that males who were judged to be attractive were more assertive and were less afraid of rejection by the opposite sex. But women thought attractive were less assertive and were less willing to trust men.

3. False. Psychological studies at California State College have shown that physical attractiveness is not influenced by a person's good looks alone, but can also be influenced by factors unrelated to the person's actual appearance, such as likeability, social poise, confidence and competence.

4. False. In a study at the University of Houston, men and women ranging in age from 20 to 56 were asked to rate themselves on an attractiveness scale of 1 (not at all good looking) to 5 (very good looking). One week later the same subjects were rated on the identical scale by an impartial group of observers. The subjects tended to rate themselves significantly better-looking than the observers did.

5. False. A study conducted by a team of Utah State University investigators showed that though "physically attractive individuals are assumed to possess more socially desirable attributes than others, the present data failed to confirm that relationship. Rather, they suggest that attractive persons may be thought to have certain personality characteristics that they do not possess." FW

OFFICE POLITICS

DON'T BE BLUE IF YOU'RE GREEN AT WORK

Eric Cartier

Experts say fading into the wallpaper at a new job can cloud a person's future.

By Peggy Schmidt

Whether you're a recent college graduate or an experienced manager, if you've just started a new job, you're probably feeling some pressure. Most experts agree that it takes anywhere from three to six months for new employees to feel "at home." They add, however, that it's possible to make the situation work for you from your first day on the job.

To begin with, it pays to ask questions. Many people are embarrassed to demand detailed directions or information from a boss because they're afraid they'll be thought of as unresourceful. It's far better, however, to swallow your pride and learn to do a job right than to perform badly because you're unsure of what's expected, says John D. Erdlen, executive director of the Employment Management Association. Moreover, you don't always have to ask your supervisor for guidance: Often, a colleague on your level or even someone who works for you can clear up procedural questions.

Whatever your questions about a task, you should be sure to accept early assignments without complaint. No matter what your job level, it's important to establish from the start that you're flexible and cooperative. Studies by social scientists indicate that if our initial impression of someone is positive, we are more likely to view his future behavior in a favorable context.

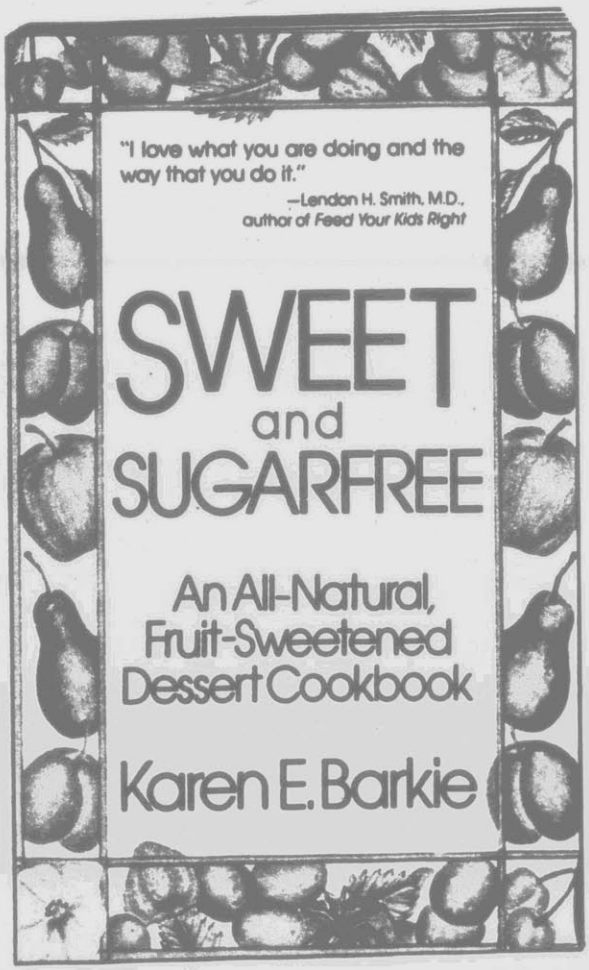

On the other hand, being cooperative should not mean sitting back passively and becoming part of the wallpaper. Take cues from co-workers. Do staff members at all levels participate at meetings? Are informal suggestions encouraged by your supervisor?

Participating as fully as you can will help you demonstrate that you fit in. It's also important to assert yourself socially. Getting along with your co-workers is critical, says Dr. Milton Hakel, president of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology. Know the people with whom you work. If it's appropriate, ask them to lunch. You can also get to know co-workers by expressing interest in them. Inquire about a family photograph on someone's desk or ask advice about lunch spots and services in the area. Signing up for company-sponsored seminars or courses, joining the softball team, even volunteering to collect for an organization like the United Way are all good ways to become acquainted with colleagues and get noticed.

At the same time, don't expect that getting noticed will mean instantly moving ahead. Even if you've been told that there's plenty of room for upward mobility, you'll still have to prove yourself before you'll be given more responsibility. Recent college graduates often have high expectations about how quickly they'll be able to scale the success ladder, but the reality is that moving into a desirable position takes years, not months. The best way to avoid disappointment is to realize from the start that winning promotions entails hard work, enthusiasm and, above all, patience. FW

DINING BY ROMAN CANDLELIGHT

By Marilyn Hansen

For the glorious Fourth of July weekend, there are unlimited possibilities for eating in the great out-of-doors. A picnic or carefree patio supper during the fireworks is definitely in order. I recently had the pleasure of tasting a colleague's Chutney Chicken Salad. The unusual blend of flavors was so delightful, I asked her (Jane Salzfass Freiman) to share it with us. The salad can easily be adapted to picnic service: Chill thoroughly at home and carry to the picnic site in a cooler. Pack lettuce in a covered plastic bowl and a selection of fruit accompaniments in another, so that guests can compose their own salads as they choose.

Country Maron

CHUTNEY CHICKEN SALAD

1 medium garlic clove, minced
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
¼ cup whole blanched almonds
2 lbs. skinned, boned chicken breasts, cooked, cooled, and cut into 1-inch cubes
3 medium celery ribs, thinly sliced
½ cup mango chutney, chopped
1 egg
1 tablespoon imported curry powder
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
⅛ teaspoon ground pepper
Several dashes hot pepper sauce
½ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup whipping cream
Fruit accompaniments: whole strawberries, cantaloupe balls, halved purple plums or peeled kiwi fruit

1. In a medium-sized skillet, heat garlic and oil until garlic begins to cook. Add almonds and cook on low heat, stirring frequently, until almonds are lightly browned, about 30-35 minutes. Remove almonds with a slotted spoon and set aside; discard contents of skillet.

2. In a large mixing bowl, combine chicken cubes, celery and chutney. Add cooled sauteed almonds; set bowl aside.

3. To prepare dressing, in a food processor or blender, combine egg, curry powder, salt, pepper and hot pepper sauce; process, or blend, until mixed. With motor running, add vegetable oil in a thin stream. Add cream and process until mixed.

4. Thoroughly mix curry dressing with chicken mixture. It will be quite thick, but will thin slightly as it stands. Chill well. Stir and season to taste (if necessary) before serving. Serve with fruit accompaniments.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

Save Hours Each Week On Housework

How To Have A Cleaner House In Less Than Half The Time You Now Spend On Housework

Don Aslett is a professional. Cleaning houses and offices quickly and efficiently is his job. He believes that your house-work is also a "job" — not a chore — and, like any other job, there is a right way and a wrong way to do it.

The right way is easy. The wrong way is hard. Chances are you are doing it the hard way.

Aslett knows what he is talking about. He is President of Varsity Contractors, a professional cleaning company working in 14 states. He has trained hundreds of workers to get the job done fast — now he shares his knowledge and secrets with you in his book IS THERE LIFE AFTER HOUSEWORK?

Most Of The Time You Now Spend Cleaning Is Wasted — The Only Thing You Get From It Is Tired!

You waste because

1. You have the wrong attitude.
2. You are doing the job the wrong way.
3. You are using the wrong cleaners.
4. You have too much junk in the house.

Most Cleaning Jobs Are Done With The Head, Not With The Hands!

Hard work alone won't get your house clean. Aslett's approach to housecleaning is 10% technique and tools and 90% attitude and feeling. The most important thing is to have the right mental attitude and to take pride in how you work.

Work Smart, Not Hard

You are probably cleaning your house in much the same way your mother did. Let Don show you how to use professional methods instead.

Professionals use a squeegee for floors and windows — two of the worst jobs — do you own one? How many sprays that don't work are taking up space under your sink? Professionals buy safe, reliable cleaning supplies from a janitorial supply house — Don tells you where you can buy them too.

Do you know about the two-bucket system for washing dirty walls that lets the cleaner do the work?

Do you know that spring is not the best time to clean? Fall is the right time for major cleaning.

If you follow Aslett's advice in this book you will have a clean and attractive home everyone will be proud of and save as much as three-quarters the time you now spend housecleaning.

The Easiest Cleaning Is The Cleaning You Don't Have To Do!

The best way to clean is to prevent dirt from entering the house in the first place.

Public building have mats at the doors that stop most of the dirt on shoes and clothes from entering the building. If you want to stop working so hard on cleaning floors, do what the professionals do — put down a mat!

How To "De-Junk" Your Home And Your Life

One third of a housewife's time is spent sorting junk and cleaning up clutter and litter.

Some junk is easy to spot — old magazines, clothes that don't fit, and radios that don't work. But a lot of junk is more difficult to spot — power tools, sports equipment, hairdryers, floor polishers, bicycles, mixers and fondue dishes that are never used and never will be used. All these things take up space and make the house cluttered and hard to clean.

Remember: If you don't keep it, you don't clean it.

Take Pride In The Most Important Job In The World

The condition of your home tells the world what you think of yourself and tells your family what you think of them.

You can do your housework better, faster and easier by following the simple but effective professional cleaning methods in this book. You will see how to plan your work, choose your tools and get the most done in the shortest possible time with the least effort.

Lack Of Organization — Not Lack Of Time Or Energy — Is Your Problem

The right mental attitude — mostly knowing that the job will be quickly done and the results will really look good — is the most important thing Don will teach you. The professional way to clean is amazingly simple when you learn how — it is also cheaper and faster than your current routine.

This is one of those important books that come along very rarely — it really can make a difference in your life. It can let you find time for yourself — time which is now wasted due to your non-professional approach to housework.

Order IS THERE LIFE AFTER HOUSEWORK? now — the price is low — the benefits huge!

Another new book by Don Aslett... DO I DUST OR VACUUM FIRST?

Don has more help available! His new book Do I Dust Or Vacuum First? gives you specific detailed answers to 100 of the most common cleaning problems. You'll learn: How to keep dirt paths out of carpets. Is lemon scented, sudsy or plain ammonia best? How to clean a fiberglass shower door. The best way to clean ovens and much more. Order it now.

FLATTEN your STOMACH

FOR MEN ONLY

Come on guys! Get ready to flatten your stomach with the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program from the Editors of Consumer Guide®.

Yes, even if you watch what you eat. Even if you engage in some kind of sport or exercise, your stomach may still bulge and sag because your abdominal muscles are not properly toned.

That's why you need a program of exercises that work together so that all — and not just some — of the four major abdominal muscles get toned up. Some of these muscles run up and down. Others run side to side. And some crisscross the abdomen at an angle. If you only exercise one of these muscles (like most men do when they do sit-ups) your stomach may be hard. But it won't be flat.

The new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program, however, has been designed to produce balanced muscle development and shaping, while avoiding soreness and injury. It gives you seven different routines, one for each day of the week. Each routine becomes more vigorous as you move through the program. You may do the entire series in one week. Or get in shape gradually by staying on one routine for several days before you move on to the next. But either way, you'll end up with a stomach that's both hard and flat.

So take action now. Try these simple, easy-to-follow exercises and see if you don't feel more fit, energetic and self-confident in just a few short weeks. Order the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY today.

Easy To Use

This book has simple exercises with easy-to-follow directions illustrated in full-color on 64, large 8½" x 11" pages which are spiral bound to lie flat and stay open. So now what's your excuse?

HOT AIR AND RADIALS

HOW TO GET A GOOD GRIP ON THE ROAD

By Don Sharp

"Daddy," said the child, wide-eyed at the television commercial, "if radial tires are so good, why does anybody make other kinds?"

"A good question," said the father. "We'll have to look into that before we get new tires for the vacation trip."

A wise man. As with many other automotive questions, broad generalities about radial tires have obscured details that may indicate radials are not always the better choice.

The layers of cord in a bias-ply tire run from side to side, but cross at about a 45-degree angle. The crossed plies make a tough but relatively rigid tire. In radials, often higher-priced, the side-to-side cords run parallel to each other and are surrounded by a belt, usually of fine steel wire or synthetic cord, that is wound around the tire in the direction of travel. This method of construction produces a highly flexible tire that makes a flatter "footprint" on the pavement. Also, its outside edge tucks under less when taking curves at relatively high speeds. However, the radial method also demands much more precision in manufacturing.

The absolute advantage claimed for radials is that they offer improved traction under all conditions. True, but only for the best radials, and the improved traction hardly matters in normal circumstances.

A radial tire, because it has less bulk, generates less heat than a bias-ply tire and dissipates that heat better. Here again, though, specifics contradict the generality. The U.S. Dept. of Transportation Tire Grading System shows that many radials, especially the cheaper ones, have less heat tolerance than the better bias-ply or bias-belted.

Finally, radials are touted as "fuel savers." More flexible than bias-plies, they don't consume as much energy because they constantly change shape from a circle to a flat area on the ground and back to a circle. The energy saving is arguable, with estimates running from 1 to 5 percent, but even those figures are calculated at highway speeds. At urban speeds, radials may actually increase fuel consumption because they demand less torque from the engine, and a low-torque operation mode is less fuel efficient.

Radials do have one advantage: They can be run (at moderate speeds) at quite low pressure, say if a slow leak occurs, without being damaged. But again, this only applies to the best.

Now, what radials won't do: First, their thin sidewalls won't last long if scraped against curbs or gouged by rocks. A vehicle used on rough terrain shouldn't have radials. Second, they do not tolerate overloading or overinflation well.

Say you inflate your tires to 30 pounds and drive 100 miles on an interstate highway in July, then stop to check the tires. The heat may have raised the pressure to as much as 45 pounds: a 50 percent increase. A bias-ply tire will stand a fair amount of that sort of thing, but cheaper radials will start shedding their belts and treads.

Bias-ply or radial, if the pressure is too high, take a break for a few minutes to let the tires cool, then drive 5 mph slower when you get back on the road. As the day cools off near sundown, you can pick up speed again.

In regard to overloading, look at the weight and pressure specifications on the side of the tire or in the car owner's manual. Now, let's say one tire will support 1,200 pounds at 32 pounds of pressure, and the car weighs 3,200 pounds. You add family, Irish setter, luggage, and travel trailer on the rear bumper and calculate that the rear tires are right at their limit. A bias-ply tire will be more comfortable at the limit than a radial, which will be inclined to shed its belt.

Last, the importance of precision in manufacturing: Too often, a cheaper radial does not wear its belt straight and it makes an elongated-S path as it rolls along the road. This produces annoying vibrations at the steering wheel and may cause growling noises in the drive train.

None of this is intended to disparage the genuine benefits of the better radials. However, if high-quality radials seem to cost too much, remember that a normal driver can drive quite well on bias-ply or bias-belted tires — better than on cheap radials.

"So what are you going to do, Daddy?" asked the child.

"We'll put the less expensive bias-ply tires on my going-to-work car," answered the father. "That way we'll save enough money so we can put the best radials on your mother's car — she's always hauling you kids around." FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

BOWLED OVER

If the number of people who participated in a sport were the only qualification for making a pastime an Olympic event, bowling would head the list. For, as Jack Reichert, chairman of the Skokie, Ill., office of the Brunswick Corporation, points out, "More than 100 million people in 75 countries participate in this sport — far more than in most sports that have Olympic status." But popularity is not a prerequisite, and bowling remains the Rodney Dangerfield of sports: It gets no respect.

So Reichert has gotten a striking campaign rolling to get the sport some attention. At the same time that the Summer Games are taking place in Los Angeles, an international amateur bowling tournament has been scheduled in Las Vegas. What's more, the U.S. Olympic Committee recently conferred delegate status on the American Bowling Congress and the Women's International Bowling Congress. Both groups will push to have bowling included as a demonstration sport in 1988 and as a medal sport in 1992. No effort will be spared.

SOUR PLUS

Some people, it seems, will brag about anything. Atomergic Chemicals Corporation of Plainview, N.Y., claims to have created the most bitter substance ever: denatonium saccharide.

The stuff is a white powder that will stay extremely bitter even when it's diluted to only one part per 100 million. It will be used in animal repellents and may be employed in a new anti-nail-biting formula.

And it really is the bitter end. Mel Blum, general manager of Atomergic, recalls: "One of our scientists went home without realizing he had a tiny trace on the outside of his lip. When he kissed his wife, she almost threw up." Now, is that something to brag about?

KNOCK ON WOODPECKERS

What kind of wood would a woodpecker peck if a woodpecker could choose wood? Most likely it would be the side of your house. It seems that woodpeckers are finding easy peckings . . . er, pickings in the wood siding of homes. Most wood siding has grooves into which tasty little insects burrow. As a result, the sharp-beaked birds drill holes into your house in order to get at their lunch.

Across the country the birds did a lot of damage last year, including that incurred by the headquarters of the American Plywood Association after an "attack" by a bunch of woodpeckers. After that, the APA suggested that homeowners put up decoy owls to scare the birds away. If, however, like one homeowner, you find a woodpecker perched on your wooden owl's head, pecking away at the house, you might hang up "plastic snakes that dangle and twirl with fangs extended." Or, says the Plywood Association, use a plain garden hose.

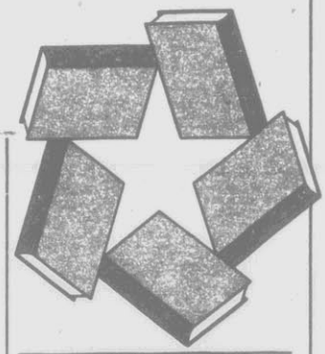

STEEL WOOL

There are some odd looking beasts in a field just outside of Cambridge, England. They have the wool fleece of sheep but the knobby knees, curved horns and ornery expression of goats. A great scientific advance? A way of producing tougher wool?

Well actually, these "geeps" were kind of a mistake. Researchers at the Institute of Animal Physiology have been experimenting with births accomplished after transferring the embryo of one species into the uterus of a female of another species. The point of these experiments is to advance technology that is designed to preserve endangered species.

And there have been some successes. In the same series of experiments that produced the "geeps," three lambs were born of goats and one goat kid was born of a sheep. The New York Zoological Society has made use of this technique in an attempt to help preserve a rare species of wild ox called a gaur by transplanting the embryo into a common dairy cow. What next, eh?

Prince® Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: IN THE WEEKS AFTER PENTECOST THE AIR AT CAMELOT IS SHARP WITH ENMITY. PETTY, PASSING HATREDS PRICK LIKE BRAMBLES. PROUD MARCUS SHINES HIS TARNISHED SELF-ESTEEM BY PICKING FIGHTS FOR FANCIED SLIGHTS -- BUT HE AVOIDS ALP ARSLAN, WHO SMOOTHES HIS OWN RUFFLED FEATHERS WITH VALETA'S WILLING HELP. AND KAREN?

ASHAMED AND HURT, THE OTHER TWIN REMAINS ALOOF, SHUNNING BOTH THE MEN WHOSE FAVOR UNTIL LATELY SHE ENJOYED. IT TAKES WORK.

MEANWHILE, HER TEMPER SMOLDERS. ONCE, WHEN SURPRISED BY ALP, IT ERUPTS LIKE MOUNT ETNA. THE BLAST IS WITHERING, AND ALP IS RELIEVED TO BE SENT BACK TO THE MISTY ISLES, THE QUEEN'S BUSINESS DONE. HE IS SAFER AMONG THE CORSAIRS AT SEA.

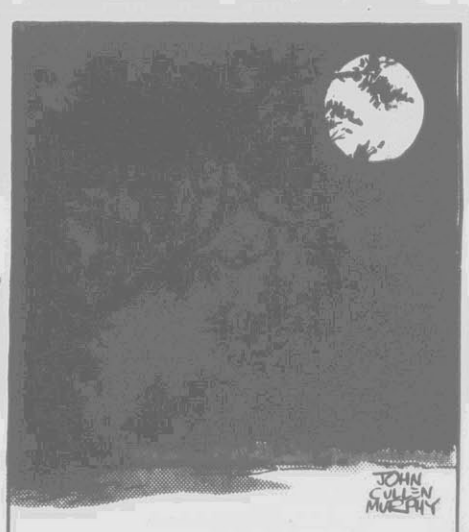

"YOU REALIZE ALL THIS TROUBLE IS YOUR DOING... SIR TRUEHEART," ALETA SMILES. "DON'T DENY IT. MORGAN TODD TOLD ME EVERYTHING. BESIDES, I THOUGHT YOU WERE VERY GALLANT." VAL GAZES AT THE GOLDEN-HAIRED PRINCESS HE CARRIED OFF SO MANY YEARS AGO.

WHO HAD ENSLAVED WHOM? HE WONDERS. "THEY SAY THE FOREST IS ENCHANTED ON MIDSUMMER'S NIGHT," PRINCE VALIANT SAYS. "LET US LEAVE ALL THESE SULKING YOUNG FACES BEHIND AND BEGUILE THE NIGHT AWAY." THE SUMMER SKY IN BRITAIN WILL STAY LIGHT FOR HOURS AFTER SUNSET. THE FOREST INVITES, VAL AND ALETA ACCEPT.
