Governor Considering Lawsuit

Publisher Issues Apology To Jim Hunt

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt received an apology Saturday from a Chapel Hill publisher who printed rumors about Hunt's personal life.

"I was dead wrong to publish the article about Gov. Jim Hunt that appeared in the July 5, 1984, issue of The Landmark," said Bob Windsor, who read a prepared statement in front of his newspaper office. "I have asked God to forgive me this transgression and believe he will. I hope that the governor and those of you whom I have offended do so also."

Hunt said Friday that he would file suit against Windsor's paper if an apology and retraction were not issued. Hunt also charged that Sen. Jesse Helms, his Republican opponent in the November Senate race, was involved with publication of the story.

"The governor will make his decision on any legal action after he and his special counsel (Phil Carlton) review Windsor's apology and the retraction that he has promised to publish," said Will Marshall, press secretary for Hunt's Senate campaign.

During a news conference Friday night in Wilson, Helms said the story was "repugnant and unfair and has no place in a political campaign."

The story in Thursday's issue of The Landmark said unidentified sources alleged Hunt had a girlfriend while in office and a gay lover. The article said the allegations were rumors and that the paper had made no effort to check them.

Windsor, speaking to a crowd of 30 reporters, said he wrote the story in the middle of the night toward the end of 72 straight hours of work.

"At no time did I say Jim Hunt is homosexual," Windsor continued. "Both the story and the ad shock and draw attention to statements that have no basis in fact. Regardless of my outrage, two wrongs do not make a right. I was wrong."

Windsor said he would offer space in his next edition for Hunt to make a statement.

"Hunt believes Bob Windsor has every right to strongly support Sen. Helms in this campaign," Marshall said, "but he feels this kind of personal attack is one of the ugliest aspects of politics, for it fosters a disgust and distaste among the public for the political process."

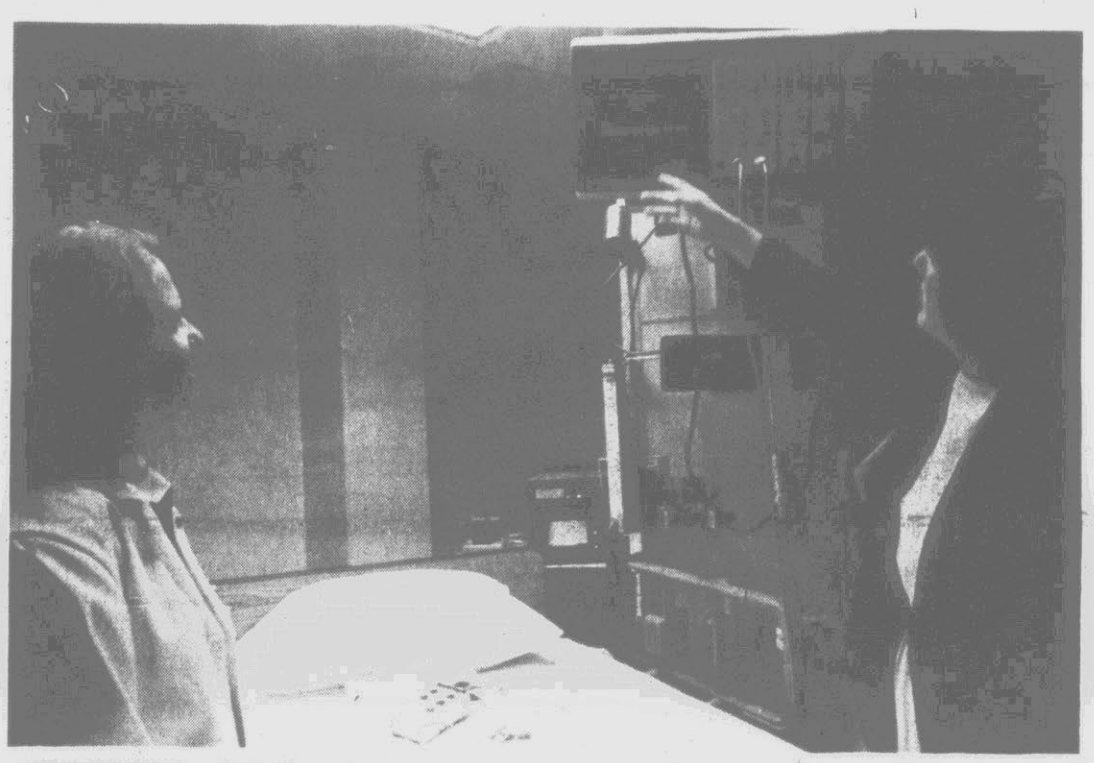

Meanwhile, Helms said that Windsor's apology "ought to put it pretty much on balance."

"The next move is up to the governor," Helms said in a news conference Saturday in Lumberton, where he was campaigning.

Helms also denied Hunt's charge there is a connection between his campaign and The Landmark.

"The next thing the governor is going to blame me for is the Bubonic Plague," he said, "and I didn't have anything to do with that either."

Helms' campaign announced Friday it would no longer advertise in Windsor's paper. But Helms said Saturday he "wasn't prepared to say" whether the ads would resume now that Windsor had apologized for the article.

ECU To Institute Open Heart Surgery

The East Carolina University School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital will institute full-scale open heart surgery at the Greenville Medical Center later this month.

The startup of the cardiac surgery program represents a major addition to the medical school's education, service and research activities, according to Dr. William E. Laupus, ECU Vice Chancellor and dean of the School of Medicine.

Heading the cardiac surgery program will be Dr. W. Randolph Chitwood Jr., 38, who recently completed a 10-year residency in cardiac surgery at the Duke University School of Medicine. The Duke residency program is the longest and among the most repected in the nation.

"We are fortunate to have obtained the services of a heart surgeon and scholar of the caliber of Dr. Chitwood," Laupus said. "His experience and demonstrated skill will provide the brand of creative leadership we seek in developing a truly first-class academic heart surgery program. I am confident the program will flourish under his guidance."

Cardiac surgery is presently offered at the state's three other major academic medical canters and at a large urban hospitals in Raleigh, Charlotte, Greensboro and Asheville.

Chitwood said the cardiac surgery team he has assembled will begin performing coronary artery bypass surgery immediately. The bypass procedure is a fairly common one in which blood is rerouted around blockages in the major arteries nourishing the heart muscle. From there, the team will move into the replacement of damaged heart valves and other corrective procedures.

Chitwood estimated that he will perform 125 operations during the first year of the program, better than two per week. That number should increase rapidly when a second cardiac surgeon joins the program after the first year. Within three years, Chitwood expects the team will be performing at least 300 procedures annually.

At Pitt Memorial two operating rooms devoted to cardiac surgery are being added in the general expansion of the surgery, radiology and emergency departments begun last winter. The first floor of the hospital's north patient tower has been rennovated to serve as the cardiac intensive care unit with six intensive care, six intermediate care and six general care beds.

These facilities, Chitwood said, have been equipped with the best available open-heart surgical and monitoring instruments, including a "superb" heart-lung machine and an intra-aortic balloon pump.

Lawmakers End Session With Business Unfinished

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State legislators headed homeward Saturday after ending a month-long session that produced $300 million worth of education improvements but left unresolved the explosive issues of phosphate pollution and tax reform.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey rang his bell and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green rapped his gavel at 4:56 p.m., officially adjourning the summer budget session. Lawmakers — their ranks thinned by numerous early departures — cheered and bade each other farewell. The General Assembly is scheduled to reconvene Feb. 5, 1985.

Adjournment followed another day of feuding between House and Senate. A stalemate that threatened to prolong the session indefinitely was broken around midday when the House abandoned efforts to force Senate action on bills limiting detergent phosphate levels and rewriting administrative regulations.

The Legislature then speedily approved bills permitting interstate banking and allocating more than $22 million for pork-barrel projects.

Legislative leaders pronounced the session a success, but said too much had been attempted in too short a period.

'We came down here to do something good for education, and we did," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. "But there were other matters that never should have been brought up."

The House met for 23 days and the Senate 22 days, during which 238 bills and resolutions were passed.

Along with adjusting the $7.1 billion fiscal 1984-85 budget, the Legislature permitted competition among companies for in-state long-distance telephone service, enacted a framework for regulating hazardous wastes, rewrote the state's bribery and conspiracy laws and fine-tuned the Safe Roads Act.

But three of the most controversial bills didn't pass, victims of what many lawmakers acknowledged was a power struggle between the House and Senate leadership.

The House on Friday gutted a bill to phase out the intangibles tax over five years, passing instead a bill to leave the tax in place but raise the income levels at which assessments begin. The bill's sponsor, Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, angrily rejected the House version and the Senate unanimously backed his refusal to request a joint committee to seek compromise.

Lawing retaliated by holding in the Senate Rules Committee a House bill to appoint administrative judges to hear cases of people accused of violating regulations written by executive agencies and boards.

The bill was designed to continue a

Sunday Blue Law Hearing Planned By City Council

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

In 1966, the Greenville City Council enacted a law limiting the sale of certain items on Sundays. Since that time, the trade restraint — commonly known as the Blue Law — has received its share of questioning and revision although attempts to repeal the law have never been wholly successful.

The Blue Law will be brought before the citizens of Greenville once again Wednesday when the council will sit to hear public opinion on proposals now under consideration that call for further amendment or repeal of limitations on Sunday sales.

The public hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the third floor council chambers of City Hall. Citizens wishing to speak at the hearing will be asked to limit their comments to 3 minutes as the council is anticipating a full house, City Manager Gail Meeks advised.

"Every time the Blue Law comes up, we have a major crowd with as many for as against, that is ... the city is pretty evenly mixed on the issue," Meeks said.

In addition to a proposal to completely repeal Blue Law stipulations from the city code, the council is looking into adoption of a provision that will make it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, offer or expose for sale any goods, wares or merchandise in the city between 1 a.m. and 1 p.m. Sunday, unless the place of business is expressly allowed to engage in business by the provisions of the law.

The provisionary opening consideration would allow the following places of business to remain open and offer any item in stock for sale: grocery stores, convenience stores, drug stores, hotels, motels and boarding houses, restaurants, newspaper and magazine stands, farmers markets, fruit and vegetable stands or other locations selling produce, movie theaters, bowling alleys,

Local Reactions Varied To Merger Funding Proposal

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

There was varied reaction to a proposal made by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners last week to appropriate $3 million a year for school capital improvement needs in an effort to speed up consolidation of the city and county school systems.

Commissioners, for a number of years, have encouraged the Pitt County and Greenville city boards of education to work toward consolidating the school units. But the efforts have met open opposition by one or the other boards until recently.

Last year, commissioners funded a study by the Research Triangle Institute which said the problems facing the two school units could best be met through consolidation, and recommended merging the city and county schools.

Both school boards have now endorsed consolidation. But a position statement approved by the county board of education late last month would phase in consolidation as certain capital improvement needs in the two systems are met.

Wednesday, in an effort to have the schools consolidate as soon as possible (school officials say consolidation could be effected by July 1985 if not tied to a capital improvement schedule), commissioners adopted a resolution committing the board to appropriate $3 million a year until the capital improvements are completed.

Both boards of education are to consider the commissioners' resolution at meetings over the next two weeks.

Mark Owens, chairman of the county board of education, when asked his opinion of the commissioners proposal, said "I should wait and let them (school board members) hear it," before commenting.

However, county school board member Ann McGaughey said "my opinion is that the county commissioners are the ones who have the responsibility where the money is coming from.

"The board of education expressed the needs and what must be met in order for us to consolidate. The money is not up to us.

"It's written into the document (the position statement). When those needs are met, consolidation will take place. My personal opinion is ultimate consolidation will not take place until those needs are met. But I don't know what the board would choose to do."

Ferrell Blount, another county school board member said "I can't speak for the board (but) we came up with a proposal and there is not a whole lot of negotiating as far as I'm concerned.

"We tried to come up with what we felt was fair for everybody ... to assure our needs are going to be met as well as the city's needs.

"As far as I'm concerned that's not adequate," Blount said of the commissioners' proposal.

"Our feeling was an up-front committment," county school board member Robert Halstead said, "... a committment up-front.

"I would like to see the board (of education) and commissioners go back together and air it a little. I'd like for the boards to get together," Halstead said.

Members of the city board of education seemed pleased with the commissioners efforts to speed up consolidation.

Board Chairman Jack Wall said, "Our board is going to look at this proposition next Friday at lunch. Personally I feel it is an excellent proposal by the commissioners and our board will have a reaction to the proposal after the meeting next Friday."

"I'm delighted they are working like they are," Wilson Rhodes said, "trying to keep taxes down and pay the way as they go. I really see no reason why the merger situation can't move on (by) working with all the people. That's my reaction."

Another board member, George Williams, said "I certainly would like to thank the commissioners for putting forth this effort ... dedicating themselves to trying to meet the capital improvement needs," of the two school units.

"I'm certainly in favor of the consolidation process (and) hope things can be worked out."

athletic clubs, health spas, gymnasiums, swimming pools, tennis courts, and any other place of business providing entertainment or recreation.

Under the current Blue Law, the following items may not be sold on Sunday: clothing and shoes, furniture, dishes, hardware, tools, paint and paint supplies, building supplies, jewlery and jewlery items, silverware, watches, clocks, luggage, musical instruments, records, record albums, tapes, sports equipment, toys, games, costumes, hobby kits, small appliances, office supplies, kitchenware, television sets, electronic equipment, cloth, patterns, sewing items, cameras, film and camera equipment and household furnishings.

According to Mrs. Meeks, Greenville's Blue Law was first enacted in response to religious beliefs. Historically, the law also carries religious connotations. According to Webster's Third Unabridged International Dictionary, blue laws date to Puritan times in Colonial New England and are defined as "numerous extremely rigorous laws designed to regulate morals and conduct ... (through) work, commerce and amusements on Sundays."

The current Greenville Blue Law is quite a bit removed from its "extremely rigorous" ancestor and has been amended several times since its inception, Mrs. Meeks said.

In 1976, a major amendment adding emergency repairs and services, personal hygeine material, medicinal and therapeutic supplies and household maintenance supplies was approved by the council.

The law was further amended in 1978 when fruits and melons, grocery stores, convenience stores and curb markets were added to the list of goods and stores that could be sold and opened on Sunday. Plants and gardening supplies were taken off the list of non-saleables in 1982.

Mrs. Meeks added that Greenville enforces Blue Law restrictions upon complaint, but said that the city "does not have adequate personnel to police every store in town."

"But we do make it a point to make periodic checks," she said.

Those attending the Blue Law public hearing will be presented informational packets when they enter the council chambers. The packets will contain current and historical information on Greenville Sunday sales limitations as well as an outline of advantages and disadvantages that council members have already gone over in workshop sessions.

process begun last year of updating the Administrative Procedures Act, under which some 18,000 rules are being studied by a legislative committee for revision or elimination by next summer.

Meanwhile, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, refused Friday to convene his Senate Special Ways and Means Committee for another vote on a House bill to limit detergent phosphate levels. During a meeting earlier this week, a motion was made to approve the bill but Swain ruled that it died for lack of a second — although under Senate rules no second was required.

Sources said Saturday that House and Senate leaders privately had reached a deal under which the House would approve the Senate's interstate banking bill and Swain would release the phosphate bill from his committee, allowing the full Senate to vote it up or down.

However, at some point the agreement collapsed. Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said he never promised more than to "try to get the (phosphate) bill to the floor. That's a lot different than promising it would pass."

Saturday morning, the House attached the phosphate bill to the banking bill and sent it to the Senate for concurrence. A short time later, the House sent the Senate a bill combining pork-barrel expenditures with the Administrative Procedures Act.

When senators learned what was happening, the Rules and Special Ways and Means committees quickly convened and voted to kill the phosphate and administrative bills.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green then ruled that the bills sent by the House contained incompatible material. The Senate voted to send them back.

Action in both chambers ground to a halt as influential lawmakers negotiated by phone and in offices and halls of the Legislative Building. The Senate refused to budge, and finally the House voted to remove the amendments and return the banking and pork-barrel bills to the Senate, where they were approved.

"It is obvious that the presiding officer of the Senate (Green) does not wish for a vote to be taken on (the phosphate bill)," said its sponsor, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare.

Green denied that he had scuttled the bill. "I never said I didn't want a vote taken," he said in an interview. "I don't know where he (Evans) got that."

Watkins denied that the House had backed down, but said the Senate's hard-line approach reflected a desire to reclaim its power in light of widespread assertions that the House was the dominant chamber during the 1983-84 session and Ramsey the Legislature's most powerful member.

"Jordan was kind of flexing his lieutenant-governor muscles before he had the job," said Watkins, referring to Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor.

Jordan said the Senate had no such motives, but added, "The rumors are that the House has been dominating over the last few months, so I think it's nice that the Senate stuck together today."

Royall said the Senate was offended by the House's attempt to combine unrelated bills.

Referring to the banking-detergent combination, he said, "You're going to clean the money before you spend it? Is that what they're saying?"

Royall also complained that the House had given the Senate practically no time to study the administrative-rules bill. Watkins called the failure to enact the bill "a blow to the state, not to me."

Lawmakers differed on whether the feud was more bitter than during previous sessions. They acknowledged that hard feelings would remain, but said House-Senate relations weren't strained beyond repair.

Police Officer And Family Stabbed, Beaten At Beach

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A policeman and his family were terrorized on a Mexican beach early Saturday by five assailants who stabbed the officer and his wife and threatened their children while demanding money, police said.

San Diego Police Lt. Bob Rogers was beaten and stabbed in the hand and shoulder during the attack, said San Diego police Officer David Russell. Rogers' wife, Terry, was stabbed five times when she lunged at a man who held a knife at her 18-year-old daughter's throat, Russell said.

Rogers, 43, was listed in fair condition Saturday following surgery at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in San Diego, said a nurse who asked not to be identified.

Mrs. Rogers, 42, was listed in good condition at Bay General Community Hospital in nearby Chula Vista, hospital nurse Jojo Ballestamon said.

equipment we're working with. It's first rate," Chitwood said.

Chitwood's cardiac surgery team will include three members with whom he has been associated during his years at Duke — the head nurse for cardiac care, the head cardiac operating room nurse, and a perfusionist (operator of the heart-lung machine) with 15 years experience in heart surgery. Other team members include a nurse clinician responsible for patient education and Chitwood's assistant, a surgery resident in training at Pitt Memorial.

Chitwood will also be active in teaching the School of Medicine's general surgery residents and will be responsible for developing a cardiac research laboratory over the next few years.

"One of my jobs," Chitwood said, "is to set up an environment in which all this can flourish."

Among the people Chitwood cited who have played a major role in preparing for cardiac surgery at the medical center are Dr. Walter J. Pories, chairman of the surgery department; Dr. Laupus; Dr. Jack Welch, chairman of the anesthesiology department; Pitt Memorial officials Jack W. Richardson, Fred T. Brown Jr., Dave C. McRae and Marilyn Rhodes, and the hospital's board of trustees.

Chitwood, who describes himself as the product of "a family of country doctors" from the small mountain town of Wythewille, Va., earned his medical degree from the University of Virginia and later joined the surgical residency program at Duke. He was the teaching scholar in cardiac and thoracic surgery during his final year at Duke. He and his wife, Tamara, have two children.

Agents Eye Turtle Egg Thefts

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — State and federal wildlife officers have stepped up efforts to stop poachers who steal and sell sea turtle eggs from nests along Georgia's coast.

"Right now, we cannot estimate the degree of poaching on the barrier islands," said Richard Daigle, spokesman for the Department of Natural Resources. But he added, "anytime a single egg is lost, it is significant."

Sea turtles are endangered species and any trade in their eggs or bodies is forbidden by federal and state law.

Tuesday, agents made the first of what they hope will be several arrests, apprehending two men on charges of dealing in sea turtle eggs at a local nightclub.

According to Cpl. Mike Evans of the DNR, agents watched eggs sold at the club. After obtaining a search warrant, agents found 479 sea turtle eggs in an ice chest behind the bar.

Authorities declined to identify the men arrested, saying that doing so could threaten the investigation.

Evans said loggerhead turtle eggs are a very popular food among certain segments of the population.

Ford Once Worked For Room And Board

ELKHORN, Wis. (AP) — Actor Harrison Ford has become a household name thanks to his film portrayal of the swashbuckling Indiana Jones, but 20 years ago Ford was trying to remember his lines at a local theater.

Ford stars as the adventurous archaeologist in the current hit movie "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," the sequel to the box office hit "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Lois Blakesley, formerly of Elkhorn, acted with Ford two decades ago and remembers the brash screen hero as a quiet guy who worked for room and board and a small stipend as the resident actor of the Belfry Theater.

"I was the high school kid at 16 and Harry was the professional actor at 22," she said.

Airline Rehires Part Of Fired Work Force

MIAMI (AP) — Air Florida has rehired 115 of the 1,200 employees it laid off last week when the airline filed for protection from its creditors under federal bankruptcy law, a spokeswoman said.

Most of the employees recalled are supervisors, secretaries and clerical workers who will be helping the carrier try to get back in the air, said spokeswoman Robin Cohn. A "minimal" number of those employees have been rehired to staff several airport stations, including London's Gatwick, she added.

"That's mainly managerial support and some station managers," Ms. Cohn said Friday. "Those were the people who have been brought back since Tuesday."

Shortly after Air Florida filed for Chapter 11 Tuesday, U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler granted the Miami-based carrier access to $6 million in its accounts receivable to cover salaries and administrative expenses.

A hearing is scheduled for Monday morning before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Thomas C. Britton in Miami during which the carrier is expected to ask for access to $27 million more in accounts receivable. Air Florida has said that without the additional money, its reorganization process will be endangered.

Meanwhile, Air Florida ticket agents have retained Miami attorney Ellis Rubin to represent them in the company's proceedings and to find out what has happened to employee payroll deductions, supposed to help fund the carrier's medical benefits program.

"I have indications that Air Florida's public statements to the media about paying (back pay) to its employees are not accurate and that it is not happening," Rubin said.

11 Die As Riverboat Capsizes In Alabama

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — An old-time riverboat on a leisure cruise capsized Saturday on the Tennessee River after being hit by a freak wind gust, killing 11 of the 18 people aboard, officials said.

The victims apparently drowned after being trapped in the triple-deck stern-wheeler, 90 feet long, when it turned belly up, said Assistant Madison County Coroner Bob Berryhill.

"We have 11 fatalities. We feel like that will be the total," Berryhill said. The seven other people aboard survived, officials said.

Divers and rescue crews spent about three hours at the scene.

Roy Lee Cunningham, a Huntsville resident who was boating on the river, said the storm came up suddenly, capsizing the paddlewheeler about 1 mile north of Ditto Landing and sending his own 22-foot craft smashing into the shore.

He said there were two or three people on the top level of the boat, but didn't see anyone jump off.

The boat, owned by the electronics firm SCI Systems Inc. and named The SCItanic, was used by employees and guests of the company for two-hour trips on weekends, said Betty Barley, an SCI operator.

Ms. Barley said the boat could hold as many as 100 passengers, but authorities said only 18 were on board Saturday, including the crew.

The National Weather Service reported wind gusts of more than 70 mph in the storm that moved through the area about 11:30 a.m. J.C. Davenport of the state Emergency Management Agency said the boat had three decks.

The storm hit suddenly and the captain apparently steered the boat into the wind for safety, said John Clifton, an Alabama marine policeman, who added that the accident is under investigation. He said, however, that the wind is believed to be the cause.

A crosswind hit the vessel broadside and "when it did, the boat started lifting," Clifton said.

Cunningham, who was about 100 yards from the sternwheeler when the storm hit, said the weather was fine just moments before the accident.

He said he received a friend's radio report of the storm's approach, and immediately began heading toward shore.

Moments later, he said, "a big gush of wind hit. I thought it was a tornado."

Four passengers and three crew members were rescued, said Warren McAdams of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary. One was in the water, he said, and the others were on the overturned hull.

Jim Hanson, a communications officers with the state troopers, described the boat as "an old-time paddle boat with a wheel on the back." He said he got a call about noon that it had overturned.

Four bodies were taken to a morgue set up at Huntsville Hospital and the others were taken to a funeral home, said Jerry McCoy, assisant hospital administrator.

McCoy said one person was being treated, but he wasn't sure about the nature of the injury.

The names of the victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Lightning Death

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 29-year-old Mecklenburg County man was struck and killed by lightning on Friday night while jogging at a junior high school track, police said.

Keith Roderick Bailey of Charlotte was jogging at McClintock Junior High School when he was struck, police said. He was running with Jim Merritt, a friend, at the time.

Marty Peterson, 12, who was riding his bicycle in the area, said he saw Bailey lying on the track about 8 p.m.

"I rode down by the track, and I saw a man lying there," he said. "He was lying on his back, and he looked like he was in shock. Then there was a guy behind him ... he was yelling for help."

Capt. M.C. Moore of the Charlotte Police Department said that Bailey was pronounced dead at the scene.

Peppard has also appeared in such films as "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "Five Days from Home."

Patric Dorsey For Secretary Of State

The Pitt County Republican Party enthusiastically supports Mrs. Patric Dorsey, candidate for Secretary of State. Mrs. Dorsey is from New Bern and is chairman of the First Congressional District Republican Party. In 1982, she was appointed by President Reagan to The National Advisory Council on Adult Education.
About her candidacy, Mrs. Dorsey says, "Family issues, the economy, education and the quality of life for all of us particularly affect the hearts of women. It is only natural that women have, not only the desire, but the responsibility to become involved in politics."
The office of Secretary of State functions primarily as the master record keeper for government and industry in North Carolina. Corporations, Publications, Uniform Commercial Code, Securities and Notary Public are the five departments which make up the office of Secretary of State. Patric Dorsey will revitalize and expand the usefulness of this little understood and largely ceremonial office. For more information, contact:

Work Still Lies Ahead In Getting Adequate Route

A long-held dream appears to be coming true for much of the east as work progresses on U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville.

The dual-laned highway, being built on a new corridor, will provide access to the throughway portion of U.S. 264 and U.S. 64 which leads to Raleigh, where it will connect with interstate highways.

A later project will dual lane U.S. 264 from Greenville to Washington along the present route.

The Wilson-Greenville segment of U.S. 264 is being built in stages and the various sections will be completed over 1985 and 1986. It can be expected that the completed project will vastly improve traffic movement to the west.

It would be a mistake, though, to assume that the long fight for an adequate east-west highway is won for our area. In the first place, though work on various segments of the highway is under way, a critical section at Farmville is not due for construction until 1992. This is far too long to wait for construction of an integral part of the new highway and we should do all we can to move up the construction date.

Secondly, the interchanges along the route were dropped so that road crossings will be at grade level. That will not be acceptable in handling the amount of traffic that is clearly ahead for this highway. We must work hard to see that U.S. 264 is upgraded to interstate standards.

If Pitt County does not have adequate highways it is likely to lose out in the constant competition for high quality industry on which our growth depends. At this point, even with construction under way, we do not have the highways that we need to compete. We must fight for what we have to have.

Knox' Qualities Lose Their Luster

Eddie Knox, the defeated candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, seems to have analyzed his defeat and blamed everybody but himself.

Knox, a long-time friend of Gov. Hunt, blames Hunt for not allowing Administration Secretary Jane Patterson and Transportation Secretary Bill Roberson to work for him in his campaign. In an interview he cited his previous support of Jim Hunt and said, "Friendship is supposed to go two ways."

Knox, who won a place in the second primary, and ran well in losing to Rufus Edmisten, has only begrudgingly given his support to the Democratic ticket. He declined to ask his supporters to vote for Rufus Edmisten, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, in November. His wife and his brother have come out for Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in his race against Jim Hunt.

This newspaper supported Knox in his campaign for governor but we now have to wonder where those qualities of leadership we then saw have gone. The most difficult thing for any leader to do is to rise above defeat. Yet it has been done countless times by those in politics and elsewhere. Often those who accept their defeats with graciousness and class come back to win another day.

Eddie Knox fought a good fight in the recent primaries. Even now it is not too late for him to accept defeat with style. Perhaps the rift has gone too far but we can only hope that Knox will make his peace with Gov. Hunt and other party leaders and then give his best to support the party which he only recently sought to lead.

Sunday Morning Notes

Don Schlienz, who recently retired from his news editor duties with The Daily Reflector to concentrate on writing, took a few days off to have an operation.

We got this note from him soon after:

"You will remember my mentioning with a happy smile the doctor's saying the hernia patch-up would be a 'piece of cake'?

"To me it was a most reassuring note and it was relayed to friends and family so there would be no rush to find the 'Living Will' hidden in the pocket of my 1965 suit coat hanging in what used to the boys' bedroom closet.

"I knew something was wrong when I woke up after surgery. I had been given a crash course in 'hurt.' When my head cleared (several days later) an explanation dawned: I thought the doc was telling me it was a piece of cake for the patient, me; instead, he was saying it was a piece of cake for the people involved in doing body repair work. (Little things like that can turn the whole picture around.)

"The earlier prognosis is now revised. Hopefully, the neat stapling job will be removed next Thursday."

Hurt or not, Don was up and around in a few days, and, after all, what feels better than an operation that is over and done with.

Laurie Roebuck of Stokes reported that she had killed a snake at her home.

That's not so unusual in a rural area, but Mrs. Roebuck reported that this snake was a six foot moccasin and it was stretched out at her back door.

Well, they grow that big around here.

But Mrs. Roebuck reports that she is a 86-year-old widow.

"I went out to sweep and I saw the snake along the outside wall," she said. "I got a hoe and said a prayer and killed him."

If snakes can communicate, no doubt the word is out not to mess around Mrs. Roebuck's house.

A jogger was huffing and puffing along a rural road east of Greenville.

A small boy on a bike pulled up.

"You going to Brook Valley?" the boy asked.

The pained runner, who looked like he didn't want any company, only grunted.

"Good," said the little boy. "I'll have someone to ride along with."

We're not certain, but we think we heard from the runner the W.C. Fields line, "Get away, boy. You bother me."

Justification

WASHINGTON — The story is told of Sisyphus, king of Corinth, who offended Zeus and was sentenced to endless labor in the underworld. His task was to push a heavy stone up a hill, but as he neared the summit, the stone always slipped from his grasp and rolled back down. Members of the U.S. Congress are suffering the same torment today. Every time they attack the federal deficit, events roll down upon them.

Thus House and Senate conferees worked valiantly in mid-June to find agreement on ways to cut spending and to raise taxes. They agonized over Medicare and Medicaid and they hacked at the budget for defense. They wrestled for days with taxes on liquor, cigarettes and company-owned cars. And on June 25, just as they finished their labors, word came from New York: The big banks had raised their prime rate again, this time from 12.5 percent to 13 percent.

The White House, suppressing its anger, coldly termed the action "disappointing." The word is inadequate. This was the fourth raise in four months. A better word would have been "unconscionable," or as an alternative, "indefensible." The greed of the big bankers knows no bounds.

This latest increase cannot possibly be justified in terms of the cost of money to the banks, for their costs have not increased proportionately. Neither can it be defended in the name of potential inflation, for the rate of inflation remains gratifyingly low. At 13 percent, the prime is now nine points above the rate of inflation. If this new rate of interest holds, or goes higher, the bankers themselves will be contributing materially to rising costs of living across the board.

The familiar excuse is that federal borrowing is so massive that private borrowers are compelled to compete furiously for the 30 percent to 35 percent of savings that may be left. When demand for money is high and the supply is low, we are reminded, the price of money goes up. That glib contention simply will not wash. Business borrowing in 1984 will increase by less than 15 percent over 1983. So modest a demand could be accommodated profitably at the interest rates that prevailed until this past March.

As the bankers drive up the cost of buying a new home, a new car and a factory expansion, the Treasury's burden of interest payments must increase also. Just five months ago the president's budget advisers predicted that the government's costs of interest would increase only from $108 billion in 1984 to $116 billion in 1985. Those estimates were based upon a prediction that the rate on 91-day bills "will decline steadily from an average of 8.6 percent in 1983 to 6.2 percent by 1987." So much for five-month-old predictions.

The abrupt and unwarranted rise in the prime has to be halted. How to do it? The prospective deficits — now made all the more worrisome by the higher cost of federal borrowing — must be attacked even more vigorously. The House has proposed a combination of tax hikes and spending cuts that would better the situation by $182 billion over the next three fiscal years. The Senate's package would achieve savings of $140 billion. A package of $225 billion to $240 billion would make more sense.

Such a combination would not permit us to approach a balanced budget. Far from it. But if the prospective deficits could be cut to perhaps $100 billion a year instead of $180 billion to $200 billion a year, the debt would be manageable. Such dramatic action by Congress may be the only way to halt the destructive climb of interest rates, but make no mistake: No such reductions could be achieved without a walloping increase in taxes and a dismaying stretch-out of spending on national defense.

Congressional leaders, who must be as weary as old Sisyphus, can do nothing more in 1984 than they are attempting to do now. They have neither the deliberative time nor the political inclination. The current July recess will be followed by a few work days and then by another recess in August. Congress expects to adjourn on Oct. 4. For good or ill, the figures for fiscal 1985 are now pretty well fixed.

No matter who wins the presidential election in November, the government's budgetary problems must have top priority next year. The urgent need is for a system of taxation that will be simpler, fairer and more productive of revenue. Simultaneously, every dollar of unnecessary spending must be squeezed out of the budget. The prospects aren't pretty, but the results of a profligate life seldom are.

Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's latest landmark decision is being hailed as "good common sense" by law enforcement authorities and political conservatives while liberals pan it as a crushing defeat for the individual rights of all Americans.

The court's 6-3 decision Thursday carved out for the first time a good faith exception to the 70-year-old "exclusionary rule" that bans illegally obtained evidence from criminal trials.

Closing out its 1983-84 term, the court said evidence seized by police with defective court warrants may be used at trial.

In other words, when judges or magistrates make mistakes that clear the way for police to violate someone's Fourth Amendment rights — and police reasonably rely on those court actions — the exclusionary rule generally should not come into play.

"Today's decision gives the American people a result we have sought for some time," Attorney General William French Smith said. "The court's decision will help restore respect for the criminal justice system by allowing the use of some of the most reliable and relevant evidence in the fact-finding process."

Wayne Schmidt of Americans for Effective Law Enforcement praised the decision as "a return to good common sense."

"The court does not want to punish society for technical errors," he said.

But Barry Tarlow, a Los Angeles lawyer who helped represent the defendants in the California case used by the court to create its new exception, called Thursday "a sad day for every citizen who is concerned about individual rights and liberties."

"It is ironic that the death knell of the exclusionary rule comes the day after the Fourth of July," Tarlow said.

In fact, the decision is limited to those occasions in which police bother to get court warrants. But Justice Byron R. White's sweeping language in the court's majority opinion could lead lower courts to apply the decision to situations in which police acted in the reasonable — but wrong — opinion that no warrant was needed.

"I would not be surprised to see the current court expand at some future date the good faith exception to cases in which no warrant was obtained by police who thought they were acting in accordance with the Constitution," Georgetown University law professor Edward McMahon said.

The exclusionary rule was first fashioned by the Supreme Court in 1914 as a means of deterring misconduct by law enforcement agents.

Although it is invoked in only a tiny fraction of all criminal cases, it has become a political lightning rod.

Kirkland OKs Hart Race

WASHINGTON — In a note to Walter F. Mondale hastily scrawled on a napkin during a recent political meal, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Big Labor would have no objection to Sen. Gary Hart for vice president "if it helps" defeat President Reagan.

A Mondale-Hart team is clearly not first choice of Kirkland, who accused Hart of "labor baiting" in his primary campaigns against Mondale. But the labor chief is so eager to defeat President Reagan he will take almost anyone who strengthens the Democratic ticket.

A footnote: Mondale has warmed to Hart significantly since the senator's decision not to wage an all-out fight for the nomination. But key Mondale insiders are arguing against Hart, contending he would add nothing to the ticket.

Chrysler executives see the possibility that Chairman Lee Iacoca may endorse Walter F. Mondale for president as leverage on the Reagan administration to extend the limitation on Japanese auto imports.

Detroit is fascinated by published reports that Vice President George Bush has been assigned to babysit Iacocca to make sure the popular automotive tycoon does not formally embrace the Democrats. In fact, no such assignment has been given Bush. Some key administration officials have written off Iacocca as a Mondale backer, based on his sharp public criticism of the president.

Some automotive industry strategists, viewing a probable second Reagan term, would like to see the Chrysler chief keep out of politics. As for Iacocca, he may wait until two or three days prior to the Democratic national convention in San Francisco before deciding whether to attend.

Ex-Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, one of the Republican Party's most respected operatives, has been assigned by President Reagan's political high command to ride herd on the platform committee that White House aides fear could run out of control.

Lewis originally was supposed to return this summer from his New York-based corporate executive's job to run the Reagan re-election effort, but has been squeezed out by the White House staff. The platform liason mission gives him seomething to do and also interjects a major-league politician to calm down congressional conservatives who are using stronger rhetoric in the platform drafts than the president's men prefer.

Lewis' name alone may not be enough to prevent a convention floor fight on the platform, but not that many voters may notice it.

To the editor:

This July marks 208 years since a small group of dedicated men declared American independence. Perhaps it is appropriate to remember our heritage by reflecting on the price they paid.

Twelve signers had their homes ransacked and burned. Five were captured by the British, branded as traitors, and tortured before they died. Two lost their sons in the Revolutionary Army; another had two sons captured. Nine of the 56 fought and died from wounds or the hardships of the Revolutionary War.

Carter Braxton of Virginia, a wealthy planter and trader, saw his ships swept from the seas by the British Navy. He sold his home and properties to pay his debt, and died in rags.

Soldiers or vandals looted the properties of Ellery, Clymer, Hall, Walton, Gwinner, Heyward, Ruttledge, and Middleton.

Thomas McKeam was so hounded by the British that he was forced to movce his family almost constantly. He served in Congress without pay, and his family was kept in hiding. His possessions were taken from him, and poverty was his reward.

Francis Lewis had his home and properties destroyed. The enemy jailed his wife; she died within a few months.

John Hart was driven from his wife's bedside as she was dying. Their 13 children fled for their lives. His fields and grist mill was laid wasted. For more than a year he lived in forests and caves, returning home after the war to find his wife dead, his children vanished. A few weeks later he died from exhaustion and a broken heart.

These men were not reckless agitators. They were quiet, soft-spoken men with means and education. They had security ... they valued freedom more!

Environment Isn't Major Factor

WASHINGTON — Last month a traditionally nonpartisan conservation group issued its report card on the federal government's handling of environmental issues. Its verdict: New laws and policies are needed to address mounting threats from acid rain, toxic wastes and other pollution problems that defy traditional remedies.

Unfortunately, the Conservation Foundation added, "Environmental policy at mid-decade is suspended between progress and retrogression, between cooperation and polarization." The group says that new approaches would be required to break the impasse.

This warning may best explain why the environment won't be a major factor in this year's presidential elections. It might also underscore why conservation issues deserve increased consideration in the selection of public officials around the nation.

Understandably, the Democrats have tried to blame President Reagan for the stalemate. Walter Mondale's aides intend to exploit conservation issues in areas where off-shore drilling (California), acid rain (the Northeast) and hazardous waste dumps (New Jersey in particular) have incited the search for bogeymen. Mondale, for example, is expected to hire Rafe Pomerance, the newly-departed president of Friends of the Earth, to assist the campaign in the fall.

Duane B. Garrett, Mondale's national co-chairman and top fundraiser, says that environmentalists in California were, as a constituency, among the candidate's biggest financial backers. Their support, Garrett contends, should translate into political dividends.

But Mondale's political exploitation of the environment would have succeeded were Anne McGill Burford and James Watt still running the Environmental Protection Agency and Interior Department, respectively. Their less-contentious replacements, the Williams Ruckelshaus and Clark, have effectively neutralized the personality issue, and therefore the opposition, without making substantive changes in policy.

Indeed, given Reagan's comfortable spread in the polls, environmental issues are likely to have little to do with presidential prospects in November. While such pernicious problems as acid rain may cut deeply in some states, "that's not the same thing as saying it's a powerful enough issue to cause people to vote against somebody they agree with on everything else," Ruckelshaus contends. Polls show that even younger voters don't seem to judge Reagan up or down on the environment alone.

But at the Congressonal level and below, the environment is expected to influence voters' choices in many states. One can see the influence of the environmental lobby in New England and such states as New Jersey and New York, where ratings by the League of Conservation Voters have risen for Republicans as well as Democrats during the last four years. In 1982, some victors, including Democratic Rep. James Florio of New Jersey, attributed their success to the grass-roots efforts of such groups as the League, Friends of the Earth and Sierra Club.

In many Northern states — Iowa and Michigan, for example — environmentalists have worked hand-in-hand with the arms control lobby.

This year, the envirnomental lobby has already begun to duplicate its previous effort and more. Both the Conservation Voters and Friends of the Earth have decided to direct their money and manpower to approximately 50 House and Senate races. Most of their preferred candidates, including at least 10 Republicans, are running in the Northeast and Far West.

Mess

RALEIGH — North Carolina's speedy trials law is a mess that is being undermined by both defense and prosecution attorneys.

That's the verdict of a Superior Court judge who chairs the Courts Committee of the Governor's Crime Commission. Judge Robert Collier of Iredell County says that as many as 50 percent of the state's criminal trials are being conducted outside of the state-mandated 120 day speedy trial period.

"Our speedy trial law is a well motivated goal," Collier recently told the commission. "But with the amendments added by the Legislature, it now has some loopholes that allow a smart district attorney or a clever defense attorney to virtually delay any case as long as they want."

The Speedy Trial Act is one of two cornerstones in Gov. Jim Hunt's crime agenda. It is Hunt's philosophy that punishment for crime ought to be "swift and sure." So, Hunt proposed speedy trials — within 120 days of arrest — to make sure punishment came swiftly. To assure that it was "sure," Hunt successfully pushed the Fair Sentencing Act, which carries presumptive sentences for each crime, through the Legislature.

"The whole speedy trials low is based on the premise that the defendant is entitled to trial within 120 days," Collier said in an interview. "But he doesn't want that. If he has a weak case, his defense attorney will do as much as he can to delay the trial."

There are plenty of ways to delay a trial under the current law, Collier said. For example, one provision says a trial can be delayed if a critical witness can't appear on the day of the trial. A smart defense attorney "can always find someone who won't be available" if he doesn't want the case going to trial, Collier said.

Many times it is to the advantage of a defense attorney to delay a trial. If he knows his client is guilty, he'll want to delay the inevitable, Collier said. Maybe he'll get lucky and something will happen that undermines the prosecution's case. Maybe a prosecution witness will leave town, die or just forget what he or she saw. Maybe some evidence will get lost. Maybe the district attorney will lose the next election and his successor will offer a better deal on a plea bargain.

It can also be to the advantage of the district attorney to seek a delay, he said. Many have caseloads that are well backed up. They just don't have the time to try all the contested cases within 120 days. So they schedule a case for a session of court and they don't get to it. Then they ask the judge for a waiver of the speedy trial provision because the case couldn't be reached during that term of court.

Prosecutors have also been accused of holding back on a case in the hope of trying a particular case in front of a judge who may be a bit more partial to the state than is the judge who is currently in town.

There are also some good reasons why trials get delayed. For example, the state's crime labs are overworked and often can't return evidence to prosecution and defense on time.

Collier says he wants the Legislature to tighten up some of the law's loopholes and promises to have some specific recommendations rise out of his committee in time for the 1985 General Assembly.

"It's a little bit of a sham on the public to say that we have a speedy trials law in this state when you have very few cases being tried within 120 days," he said.

Road Router Kept Parkway In N.C.

A group of folks gathered near Soco Gap on the Blue Ridge Parkway on a June day in 1970 on an unusual mission. They were there to name a mountain in honor of R. Getty Browning, who laid out the parkway and lived to see it develop into one of the world's most beautiful scenic drives.

State and federal officials, friends and relatives assembled in the shadow of the 6,200-foot peak — now identified on the state highway map as Browning Knob — to hear U.S. Rep. Roy A. Taylor describe Browning as "the architect" of the parkway.

"Of course," Taylor said, "in a project of this size and complexity, many people contributed their time and talents. Yet, I do not think any of them would dispute that title being given to R. Getty Browning, the man who walked the length of the parkway in North Carolina and loved every foot of it."

Browning came to North Carolina in 1922 from his native Maryland where he had directed the building of many roads and bridges, including the Hanover Street Bridge. He arrived at a time when Gov. Cameron Morrison was embarking the state on its first big highway construction program, and became chief state locating engineer in 1925, a job he held nearly 40 years. He saw 10 governors come and go while he filled one of the most politically sensitive jobs in the state — routing state highways.

But, he said once in an interview, "politicians have not been a bother. Good engineering is good politics. A road properly located speaks for itself."

To ensure that the roads he helped build were properly located, Browning insisted on walking the entire length of every proposed highway.

Despite the hundreds of maps, aerial photographs and reports of surveying parties at his disposal, Browning felt these hikes were necessary to get the complete picture. An article in the Saturday Evening Post during the 1950s, titled "The Pathfinder of the Moonshine Mountains," described him as the last of the great on-the-spot highway locators.

The article said that Browning, then 66, a red-faced, white-thatched man with twinkling eyes and a ready smile, could outwalk men half his age. And when he reached his destination, could outtalk them, too. The occupational hazards of this walking that took him into every county of the state included encounters with bears, rattlesnakes, trigger-happy backwoodsmen, storms, fogs, scorching heat and freezing mountain winds.

The hundreds of highways he laid out in addition to the Blue Ridge Parkway, included the Pigeon River route by which I-40 and U.S. 70 climb the mountain into Asheville. These were engineering masterpieces which drew inspection visits by engineers from all over the United States.

But the high spot in Browning's career came when he persuaded Interior Secretary Harold Ickes that a North Carolina routing for the Blue Ridge Parkway would be superior to a routing through Tennessee. It was in 1934, Browning recalled.

"It looked like North Carolina had lost and Tennessee was going to get the parkway. Mr. Ickes' committee had turned in its report recommending that the Parkway turn away from North Carolina near Grandfather Mountain and enter Tennessee by way of Carver's Gap near Roan Mountain. Many North Carolinians who had fought hard for the parkway felt that this report ended North Carolina's chances. There were others ... who still felt that North Carolina should make one last effort."

Some of these men felt that Browning, as an engineer, might be able to present Ickes some new engineering data that might cause him to reconsider.

Ickes agreed to go over the route. However, when opposition developed, the trip was called off in favor of a hearing before Ickes in Washington at which each state was given one hour to state its case. The hearing was scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Interior Building auditorium, and Ickes walked in on the dot.

"Mr. Ickes was not a man noted for his paitence and all of us realized it and kept the speeches short," Browning said. "When my turn came, we still had 23 minutes of our hour left. I showed Mr. Ickes what the view would be on this side and that side of various locations and I watched Mr. Ickes. Soon, I realized he was getting tired so I whispered to him that I would stop if he had heard enough, but I had lots more evidence. He whispered back, 'File it.' I did."

Browning said a couple of months later, Ickes notified him he had decided to run the parkway through North Carolina.

"But that was not the whole story," he continued. "There was a catch to it. Mr. Ickes said that if we didn't get the consent of the Cherokee Indians ... he'd be obliged to divert the parkway into Tennessee at Blowing Rock. That was a shock, but I told him we'd get their consent, I was sure of it. You see, I knew the chief. He was a friend of mine and I felt I could convince him of the benefits his people would receive from the road running through the reservation.

Browning said he went to Cherokee to see his friend the chief, Jarrett Blythe, who told him he could not help because he had decided not to seek re-election. Browning told him the state was prepared to pay $40,000 for 1,800 acres of right-of-way and persuaded him to run again. Still, his troubles weren't over. He had to clear the matter with an 11-member Indian council.

After an interminable debate, the council agreed that the Indians would sell the right-of-way to the state. Thus, the way was paved for work to start on the Blue Ridge Parkway which now funnels millions of tourists into western North Carolina every year. You can thank R. Getty Browning that those tourists didn't wind up in Tennessee.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — If the American people were voting today in a nationwide referendum asking 21 the minimum drinking age, the overwhelming majority — including a substantial majority of young adults — would vote "yes."

In a new survey, 79 percent say they favor a national law raising the legal drinking age in all states to 21. Even in the age group that would be most affected, 18 to 24 year-olds, 61 percent back the proposed law.

Among residents of states where 21 is already the legal minimum drinking age, 85 percent would like to see the law apply to the nation as a whole, while 73 percent of residents of other states support the proposed legislation.

The latest findings were virtually the same as those recorded in 1983, when 77 percent favored and 20 percent opposed a national 21-year legal drinking age.

Nearly two-thirds (63 percent) of persons favoring the national drinking age proposal also approve withholding some federal highway funds from states with minimum drinking ages below 21.

A bill that would reduce federal highway aid to states that refuse to raise their minimum drinking age to 21 in the next two years is now awaiting President Reagan's signature, having passed in the House and Senate.

The bill's passage is largely the result of a national lobbying campaign against drunk driving. Backers of the bill point out that drivers under 21 account for a disproportionately large number of alcohol-related traffic accidents and fatalities. Twenty-seven states currently allow drinking before age 21.

After a two-year grace period ending October 1, 1986, the government would withhold 5 percent of a non-complying state's federal highway aid in fiscal 1987 and 10 percent in fiscal 1988. With the federal highway program estimated at $13 billion or more per year, large sums are at stake.

Opposition to the measure has been led by restaurant owners fearing a loss of business, and by student groups which contend the bill discriminates on the basis of age.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,195 adults, 18 and older, conducted in scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 22-24.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random rffects could be 4 percentage points in either direction.

Livelier Economies Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new international study is warning about the struggles ahead for poor countries if the economies of the United States and other industrialized nations don't pick up the lively growth pace experienced two decades ago.

To achieve that growth, the World Bank study is urging industrialized nations to focus on reducing government budget deficits which would ease pressures on inflation and interest rates.

"If the industrial countries fail to regain the growth rates they managed in the 1950s and 1960s, many countries in the developing world will have great difficulty making progress in the years ahead," said World Bank President A.W. Clausen in a foreword to the annual study released Thursday.

In particular, he said, the "prospects for much of sub-Saharan Africa will be particularly grave." Countries in the southern part of Africa have been hard hit by a series of droughts that have devastated their economies.

The report took note of the lengthy recession, the world economy is recovering from and said that, despite its hardships, the downturn "provided many valuable lessons for economic policy because it highlighted longstanding weaknesses in every economy and in international arrangements."

"Unless policymakers learn from its lessons, the recovery now under way will not mature into sustained and rapid growth of the kind the world enjoyed for 25 years after World War II," it said.

Clausen said the future picture for the world economy "is full of uncertainties." It would brighten, he said, "if every nation took steps to improve its own domestic economic performance."

The World Development Report also took a look at the effect of an expanding population on poorer countries.

"The main cost of such growth, borne principally by the poor in developing countries, has been and will be faltering progress against what is still high mortality, and lost opportunities for improving people's lives."

In the section on economic growth, the report set out two scenarios for the world economy in the decade of 1985-95: One projected slow growth for the industrialized nations and the other healthy expansion like that of the 1950s and 1960s.

Amtrak Train Crashes, Killing At Least 4

By DAVID KARVELAS
Associated Press Writer

WILLISTON, Vt. (AP) — An Amtrak passenger train with 278 people aboard derailed while crossing a washed-out culvert Saturday, tumbling cars into a streambed, killing at least four people, injuring more than 130 and trapping passengers in a crushed sleeping car.

Workers using a crane and blowtorches rescued at least five people from the crushed car, but an undetermined number remained trapped inside more than 12 hours after the accident. Rescuers used stethoscopes against the side of the sleeping car to detect movement within, but they said there were no signs of life.

Nine cars of the 13-car Montrealer jumped the weakened track around 7 a.m., officials said. Three cars were mangled as they piled into each other after plummeting down a 30-foot gully in northwestern Vermont.

Three people were pronounced dead at the scene, said state police Sgt. Nick Ruggiero. A fourth person died at the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont in nearby Burlington.

The death toll was expected to go higher once rescue workers were able to open up the crushed car at the bottom of a three-car pile-up.

"Bodies were just falling every which way. People were screaming for help," said passenger Frank Coles of New York City.

One worker who was able to crawl close to the bottom mangled car said he spotted several bodies. Witnesses said they saw at least two bodies taken to a baggage car, which was being used as a temporary morgue.

A crane was brought in by late afternoon to try to free the crushed car and allow rescue workers to get inside. The plan was to use the crane to lift two cars from the crushed car, making it possible to reach the passengers, authorities said. The operation was expected to take several hours.

"They've accounted for most of the people," said state police Lt. Truman Way.

Helicopters and buses were used to ferry out the dead and most seriously injured from the remote, hilly, muddy site. An estimated 300 rescue workers, including 150 National Guardsmen, removed the passengers, many on stretchers, after passing them through train windows.

"I have never seen anything like this," said Gov. Richard Snelling, coordinating the rescue effort at the scene.

About 82 people were taken to the Medical Center Hospital in Burlington; 57 others were taken to the Fanny Allen Hospital in Colchester. Most people were treated and released.

Another 140 people with slight injuries or no injuries were taken by bus to the Williston Armory.

"We have never had anything of this magnitude," said Beverly Rutherford, a spokeswoman at the Medical Center. Some of those injured suffered broken backs, crushed limbs or sprained muscles, she said.

Nine of the 13 cars on the northbound Montrealer derailed when the train apparently hit a section of track over a culvert that had been washed out by overnight flooding, according to state police and civil defense officials.

The train had been en route from Washington to Montreal.

It was the first fatal Amtrak accident this year.

Among those killed Saturday were Charles Crawford, 35, of Takoma Park, Md., an Amtrak worker based in Washington, D.C., and Central Vermont Railway conductor Vernon H. Church, of St. Albans, according to Amtrak officials.

"The train was heavily booked," said Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black. Black confirmed two deaths but said, "It appears as if there are more fatalities."

The speed limit was between 55 and 59 mph on the section of tracks where the accident occurred, Black added.

The rescue workers used torches to peel back the sides of some cars in an effort to free passengers. Two cars were dangling in mid-air.

Most of the passengers were asleep when the train buckled.

"First there was a jerk; then a bang, then a big bang," said Coles.

"We were out in nowhere," said Charles O'Connor, a passenger from Arlington, Va. "Most of us were sleeping; I was half asleep, and all of the cars started to shift. The sleeping cars were hit the worst; they were up front."

The accident occurred along the Winooski River, a few miles east of Burlington, in muddy, hilly terrain. Ambulances and emergency vehicles were unable to get to the derailment, but rescue workers carved roads through the mud to carry vehicles as close as possible.

"It happened at a difficult terrain," said O'Connor. "We had to walk 100 yards in the mud. There was water there, a bridge. We tried to crawl out the best we could."

Amtrak reported there were 262 passengers aboard the train, 11 Amtrak crew members and an estimated five crew members from Central Vermont Railway, which operates Amtrak trains in the state.

Flooding last month prompted Amtrak to suspend its Montrealer service through Vermont for several days because of weakened track beds.

"There was a lot of flooding in that area overnight, a number of roads are closed and there was water over Interstate 89 at Williston," said George Lowe, head of Civil Defense.

Amtrak opened a toll-free telephone line for relatives or friends seeking information on the accident. The number is 1-800-424-7960.

Hart and Ferraro Make Liberal List

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans for Democratic Action ranked Sen. Gary Hart and Rep. Geraldine Ferraro "equally acceptable" as liberals Saturday, but said other prospective vice presidential candidates rate higher on a liberal scale.

ADA, which has rated members of Congress for years on a "liberal quotient" index, said both the Colorado senator and the New York congresswoman had cumulative marks of 79 percent during their congressional service.

"We see no major ideological difference between Senator Hart and Representative Ferraro," ADA director Leon Shull said in a statement. "Each would be equally acceptable on that level."

However, the group noted that former Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, a past ADA president and its designated "favorite daughter" for the vice presidential nomination, had a 94 percent liberal rating during her years in Congress.

The ADA offered these rankings for other present or former members of Congress mentioned for the vice presidential nomination: Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., 90 percent; Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., 87 percent; Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., 83 percent; former Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas, 83 percent; Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., 73 percent; Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., 68 percent; Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, 63 percent; Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, 46 percent; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, 35 percent and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., 28 percent.

Unrated because they never served in Congress were San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros and Govs. Mario Cuomo of New York and Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky. With the exception of Cuomo, all have been interviewed by Mondale for the No. 2 spot.

ADA earlier endorsed Walter Mondale for the presidential nomination. It noted that he had an ADA rating of 92 percent.

Tiny Wire Caused Shuttle Problem

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A microscopic, broken wire in a backup computer forced NASA to scrub the maiden voyage of the space shuttle Discovery last month, a spokesman for the computer's manufacturer said Saturday.

The broken wire was in an integrated circuit within one of the Discovery's five identical computers, which control all the ship's functions, including communications, navigation and guidance, said Joe Militano, spokesman for International Business Machines.

"Engineers isolated the problem to an opening in an integrated circuit in a memory core unit in the computer's input-output processor," Militano said.

Discovery's maiden voyage as the third shuttle in National Aeronautics and Space Administration's fleet was set for June 25, but a backup computer failed just a half hour short of take-off.

The next day, engine failure grounded Discovery just four seconds before a rescheduled launch.

IBM scientists in Owego, N.Y., studied the defective computer removed from Discovery and determined the problem had been "a random part failure," Militano said.

He said engineers still were trying to find out why the wire broke.

Four of the shuttle's computers perform specific tasks. The fifth, which suffered the broken wire, is a back-up that can replace any of the other four.

"Any one of the five computers can fly the shuttle," Militano said. "But when the four computers detect an impulse that there's a problem with the backup, they'll vote to stay on the ground."

Wine Drinkers Set New Mark

NEUSTADT AN DER WEINSTRASSE, West Germany (AP) — A merry crowd of 75,000 wine drinkers established a new entry for the Guinness Book of World Records Saturday when they formed a wine-tasting line about 50 miles long.

The event was a prelude to next year's 50th anniversary of the Weinstrasse, or Wine Road, and 160 balloons marked the length of the wine-sipping line from Bockenheim through the Haardt mountains to Schweigen on the Franco-German border.

Police, who closed off the entire length of the Weinstrasse to motor traffic, estimated that at least 75,000 persons attended and tasted the region's wines.

They paid 72 cents each for an ornamental glass, and local producers in the 35 towns and villages along the Weinstrasse filled the glasses free of charge with the zone's four major wine varieties.

"In July 1935, a few men assembled around Josef Buerckel in the 'Inn to the Bavarian Hunter' at the wine-growing town of Schweigen where they took the decision about which friends of wine and the countryside are glad to this day," a booklet from the local winegrowers association said.

It did not mention that Buerckel was the region's top Nazi leader and a friend of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler.

Police said the only protest against the "Nazi connection" was a small display in the town of Klingenmuenster.

Buerckel and his "few men" inaugurated the Weinstrasse as a promotion to ease the critical economic situation of local winegrowers in the mid-1930s.

It apparently worked. In 1935, Germans drank an average of 1-1½ gallons of wine per person per year. Today, West Germans drink five times that quantity.

In Bad Homburg, some 60 miles to the north, organizers claimed another mark for the Guinness Book of World Records after setting up what they called the longest banquet table in the world, measuring 2,372.7 yards for 15,000 diners.

Mayor Wolfgang Assmann said it beat the old record by 550 yards, and proceeds would be donated to a fund for handicapped children.

Fish Story

SEATTLE (AP) — In an effort to learn why salmon are disappearing from their usual migration routes up the Columbia River, biologists have devised a more humane way to track the fish.

The old method of tagging fish — implanting them with bits of marked wire — meant killing the fish to extract the information. The new method is to implant the fish with tiny computer chips that transmit its identification code number whenever it passes through one of a series of wire loop antennas along the river.

Fire Marshal Doubts Tenant Caused Blaze

BOSTON (AP) — A fire marshal investigating a rooming house fire that killed 14 people dismissed a report that a former tenant might have been the arsonist, but agreed with a study that said fires sometimes are set by mental patients hoping to be returned to institutions.

State Fire Marshal Joseph O'Keefe said Wednesday's fire at the Elliott Chambers rooming house in Beverly, home to several people placed there by state Mental Health ofpatients, was "deliberate arson."

At least seven people living at the Elliott Chambers were placed there by the Department of Mental Health, officials said.

He said investigators are questioning former tenants but have no suspects.

"I've worked on cases where people have set their own homes on fire," O'Keefe said. "It seems to be some way they can resolve issues, a way to get back to the institution."

A study by researcher Jeffrey Geller termed such fires "communicative arson," and O'Keefe said he did not doubt its conclusions but insisted there's no arson "epidemic" among deinstitutionalized patients.

Geller, of the Western Psychiatric Institute at the University of Pittsburgh, detailed the cases of 14 patients at Massachusetts' Northampton State Hospital who set fires.

Reporting in the April issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry, Geller said as many as seven fires were set by patients wanting to change their residence. Five wanted more restrictive settings.

One patient set fire to his parents' home "to come back to the state hospital," he said. Another said, "Now you are going to send me home to my parents," after burning mattresses in a residential treatment school.

A woman with a history of arson set one fire because she wanted to move to another state; she started another blaze to return to a locked facility, and a third fire to win commitment to a community residence, Geller reported.

Officials need to watch those with a history of "communicative arson," Geller said.

The Boston Globe, in Friday's editions, quoted an unidentified source as saying authorities were investigating the possibility that a former tenant set the fire in anger.

"We're looking at people who have lived there in the past, but we do not have a suspect," O'Keefe said.

Some friends and relatives of tenants accused the state of providing too little supervision. "They didn't belong there," said Virginia Newcomb, whose cousin escaped the fire with third-degree burns.

O'Keefe questioned whether former patients would know what to do in a fire. "There's a question whether they have the attitude, the mental capacity and the ability to get out of a building," he said.

But Geller said supervision is not the answer.

"How can you require these people to be supervised?" he asked. "They have the right not to be supervised as you and I do."

After a 1977 consent decree gave patients the option of treatment in community settings, the state hospital census declined 48 percent in the five years, said Dr. Robert M. Okin, the former state mental commissioner.

But Geller stressed arson is not a widespread problem among former mental patients.

"Nobody has data to show that arson is epidemic because of deinstitutionalization," Geller said. "If you ask any fire marshal of any large city, my guess is he'll say there's more arson for profit than arson set by psychiatric patients."

Fishing Ban Upheld

MIAMI (AP) — A government-imposed ban on commercial fishing at Everglades National Park has been upheld by a federal judge who said the regulations were not unconstitutional as fishermen claimed.

U.S. District Judge Sidney Aronovitz had ruled in 1980 in favor of the U.S. Department of the Interior, the National Park Service and Everglades National Park. But Aronovitz's ruling had been suspended until the National Park Service finished a series off meetings with the Organized Fishermen of Florida and others who sued.

On The Alert

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A lifeguard can watch over your swimming pool 24 hours a day from inside your home.

As protection against unauthorized users of the pool, Honeywell Protection Services suggests it be hooked up to the security alarm system guarding the home.

This double duty protects property from trespassers and pool crashers and also may save the lives of small children who wander into the water area unattended.

The alarm system should be connected not only to the pool facilities but also to the backyard fence and gate.

General Assembly Enacts Interstate Banking Bill

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly opened North Carolina's doors to interstate banking Saturday after the Senate crushed House attempts to merge the banking bill with a proposal to limit the amount of phosphorus in laundry detergents.

The House voted 83-2 and the Senate voted 37-1 to enact interstate banking legislation similar to existing laws in South Carolina, Florida and Georgia.

The law will allow bank holding companies in 13 Southeastern states and the District of Columbia to acquire North Carolina banks if N.C. banks have similar rights in those states. A similar law also was passed for savings and loans.

Voting against the bill Saturday were Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, and Reps. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, and Hugh Lee, D-Richmond.

The North Carolina law will be the first to take effect when it is implemented Jan. 1, 1985. But portions of legislation in Georgia and Florida could advance the date the laws take effect in those states from July 1, 1985, to Jan. 1, 1985.

Banking industry lobbyists were delighted with the outcome.

"The parliamentary procedure is a new experience for me and a difficult one to live with," said Ted Sumner, chairman of First Union National Bank. "It came out right and that's what's important for the state."

Industry lobbyist John Jordan said the state's economy would have been penalized if the Legislature had waited until next year to act on the matter.

He said N.C. banks already are being contacted by their counterparts in other states. Jordan predicted that negotiations toward acquisitions will begin next week.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, proposed the House amend the banking bill to include a phosphate detergent bill that he had introduced. House Speaker Liston Ramsey ruled the amendment was germane to the bill because it also changed the title of the bill.

The amendment was adopted 52-35.

The phosphate bill introduced by Hackney was resting in the Senate Special Ways and Means Committee, which held a public hearing and several meetings on the bill without bringing it to a vote.

Supporters of the phosphate limit thought they had 26 of 50 votes for the bill on the floor.

While the House was considering the phosphate amendment, the Senate committee met and rejected the phosphate bill.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green then ruled the banking bill containing the phosphate bill could not be considered by the full Senate because the phosphate amendment was not germane to the banking bill.

The Senate has no rule on such matters so he referred to the U.S. House of Representatives rule book in making the call. Those rules say amendments must be germane to the fundamental purpose of the original bill.

The Senate returned the bill to the House, where the amendment was removed and the banking bill approved. Only 10 House members voted to keep the phosphate amendment in the bill.

"Many of our senators want to vote on this issue and have been unable to," Hackney said. "This will give our senators the opportunity to vote."

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said House leaders thought they had an agreement with Senate leaders about the two bills. Adams said the House agreed to pass the bank bill without an amendment permitting regulation of bank holding companies. He said the Senate agreed to consider the phosphate bill on the floor.

"We have done our part," Adams said. "We have not gotten our end of the bargain.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, said he opposed the amendment because phosphates are "making money for the people of North Carolina." He said 70 percent of the material shipped from the state port at Morehead City is phosphorus mined nearby.

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, said very little of the phosphorus from North Carolina goes into detergents.

Chapin tried to get the House to adjourn after it approved the amendment and before it voted on the banking bill but that motion failed, 19-67.

Most House members blamed Green for the Senate adjourning without ever voting on a phosphate limit.

"If the presiding officer does not want them to vote he can think of all sorts of things," said Adams.

Evans agreed, telling House members it was "obvious that the president of the Senate did not want that vote to be taken."

Ramsey said Senate members could have debated Green's ruling or suspended their rules to consider the bill anyway.

"The Senate did have a chance to vote up or down," Ramsey said. "They all probably were not aware of their rights but there's nothing I can do about that."

Customer Warning

RALEIGH (AP) — State records indicate that owners and operators of five water systems failed to notify customers that their systems exceeded the maximum contaminant level, according to the state Department of Human Resources.

Officials also said another 69 public water systems failed to notify their customers in writing and did not provide the state Division of Health Services' Water Supply Branch with a copy of the notice with 90 days of the date that a violation occurred.

Federal and state laws require owners and operators of public water systems to submit samples of drinking water each month to a certified laboratory for testing to see if the water was contaminated.

Bus Lines Form New Firm

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Three North Carolina bus lines have joined together to form a new Greensboro-based company called Carolina American, according to company officials.

The new company — a consolidation of Wilson Bus Lines, Asheboro Coach and Moore Brothers Transportation — will provide charter and tour service to more than 250,000 passengers per year, officials said Friday.

The company is the largest of 20 privately owned bus companies in North Carolina. With 80 coaches and 200 employees, the company is also the largest privately-owned bus line on the Eastern Seaboard, according to the American Bus Association in Washington.

Carolina American, owned by McGuill Inc. of Greensboro, provides travel to every state and Canada on its 47-passenger buses. The company has offices in Salisbury, Fayetteville, Wilson and Asheboro along with Greensboro.

North Carolina Writer Enjoys His Secluded Life On The Outer Banks

SOUTHERN SHORES, N.C. (AP) — David Stick is almost as hard to find as the lost colonists of North Carolina he has written about so often.

His house is deep inside a coastal forest in this Outer Banks community near Kitty Hawk. Stick is relaxing in his study. Sunlight pours in through a picture window.

A deer darts across the backyard. A gray squirrel sneaks onto the porch looking for snacks. Two quail stroll in the nearby rutted sandy road leading from the outside world.

To many, David Stick is the personification of North Carolina's Outer Banks. He wrote the book on the place, many books: "The Graveyard of the Atlantic," "The History of Dare County," "The History of the Outer Banks" and a booklet on North Carolina lighthouses.

His most recent publication, "Roanoke Island, the Beginnings of English America," was written especially for the 400th anniversary celebration of the first English voyages to America between 1584 and 1587.

"We needed a history — concise, written for the average individual. They couldn't get anyone else to write it, so I wrote it," he said with a straight face. He's donating the royalties to help fund the three-year 400th celebration, which officially begins July 13 in Manteo, 20 miles from Stick's home.

Stick was born in New Jersey, in 1919. He came to the Outer Banks as a boy and departed only for a brief try at higher education, a stint with the Marine Corps in the South Pacific and a few years writing in New York.

He travels widely, "but I have never been on a trip where the best part wasn't hitting one of those bridges coming home," he said. "I like the smell of the Outer Banks, the broadness, the sounds."

He knows every legend, every tale, almost every shipwreck. And he has done plenty of detective work on what he calls the world's leading history mystery — the story of the Lost Colony. Stick's neat desk holds an old Royal manual typewriter with a stack of typewritten pages next to it. The top paper is a book preface that Stick is writing. So is the second page and the third and the four and so on. False starts.

His house is filled with so many books, periodicals, maps and charts about North Carolina that it has become an important research library.

As a boy, Stick wouldn't have been caught dead poking around history books.

"I didn't like history in school," he said. "I couldn't remember dates and places. The teachers were both uninspiring and uninspired."

He happened upon history, he said, in his small boat in the ocean off Kill Devil Hills, diving for the sheephead fish that thrive off barnacles on old shipwrecks.

"I speared a thousand sheephead and explored every wreck I could find and began wondering how they got there," he said.

Shipwrecks led to a broader interest in the Outer Banks, which the Indians discovered, the English first explored in 1584 and whose beauty and isolation have attracted visitors for centuries.

Stick also was inspired by his father, Frank Stick, who drew illustrations for Field and Stream magazine and other national publications. The elder Stick first came to the banks on fishing trips. He invested in beach property and eventually moved to Kill Devil Hills.

David Stick went to high school in Manteo on Roanoke Island, then to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"I flunked out after a year and hitchhiked across the country," he said.

He worked for a newspaper and a radio correspondent, then went to the South Pacific as a Marine Corps enlisted man.

After the war, he worked for the American Legion magazine for several years in New York before returning to the Outer Banks to write. His first effort never was published.

In the early 1950s, he began work on "The History of the Outer Banks" but was sidetracked by his shipwreck classic, "Graveyard of the Atlantic," which he completed in 1952. Stick finished the Outer Banks history — with stories about its fishermen, whalers, remote towns and customs, its lifesaving stations — in 1958.

But by this time, he was married and involved in business, civic and political pursuits, including service on the Dare County Board of Commissioners.

"I had three sons and debts, so I quit writing for basically the next 20 years," he said "At one time, I was running seven businesses: real estate development, real estate sales and rental, a motel, a book shop, a map publishing company and a contracting business."

To be honest, he did write two books during this period: A short history of Dare County, using a grant from the Babcock Foundation in Winston-Salem. Given a year to complete it, after eleven months, "I hadn't touched it," he says. "I was so damn busy with other things."

He took his portable typewriter to Florida, checked into a motel, "and wrote it in a weekend."

The same was true for a pictorial book about Cape Hatteras National Seashore Park. Stick cranked out the text during a three-day lockup in a Raleigh motel.

In 1976, he sold the last of his businesses — the company that developed Southern Shores on land which Stick's father acquired. The years since then have been free for writing and civic pursuits.

Thunderstorms Bring Floods To Northeast

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

Stormy weather thundered over much of the eastern half of the nation Saturday, causing flash floods that washed away cars, chased people into trees and apparently contributed to a fatal train wreck.

During the night thunderstorms dumped 3 inches of rain in just an hour on a North Carolina community, and peppered an outdoor play in Arkansas with hail that slightly injured 18 people.

Flood warnings were posted for parts of New York and New Jersey, and a flood watch was in effect for all of Vermont.

A 13-car Amtrak passenger train with 278 people aboard derailed early Saturday near Williston, Vt., when it apparently hit a flood-weakened section of track, and at least one person was killed. "There was a lot of flooding in that area overnight, a number of roads are closed and there was water over Interstate 89 at Williston," said Civil Defense official George Lowe. State officials and federal safety officials said they believed the weather caused the derailment.

A paddleboat overturned Saturday in bad weather on the Tennessee River near Huntsville, Ala., and at least one person was killed, state police said.

Storms brought heavy rain to much of New England and along the middle Atlantic Coast, and storms were scattered over Georgia and the southern Appalachians and from Arkansas across Kansas and Missouri into Nebraska.

Flash floods hit Pennsylvania's Montgomery and Chester counties, north and west of Philadelphia. Perkiomen Creek rose so quickly that cars were swept down roads and fire companies had to rescue stranded people.

"It was a hectic night, the kind you can't forget," said state police Trooper Don Martin. "We've had major flooding all over, and the Perkiomen is giving us big trouble. We've had numerous rescues all night. Some cars were washed down the road for 100 yards. There were people in trees that had to be rescued."

At 7 a.m. Saturday the rain had stopped "but the Perkiomen is still rising," he said.

The National Weather Service said an average of 3 inches of rain fell over the area during the night, with one gauge registering about 4 inches from 1 a.m. to 3 a.m.

Parts of southwestern Missouri got more than 3 inches of rain early Saturday, triggering flash floods in the town of Aurora that forced some families from their homes.

Aurora police dispatcher Kay Evans said city crews evacuated several residential areas of the city of about 8,000 people, where water was reported as deep as 8 to 10 feet.

She said the flood carried away some cars and accompanying hail and wind damaged several homes and businesses. No injuries were reported, she said.

Elsewhere, Livingston, N.Y., got 4.5 inches of rain overnight and Carthage, N.C., got around 5 inches, including 3 inches in one hour, the weather service said. The agency said it got an unofficial report of 6 inches of rain near Underhill, Vt. Napanoch, N.Y., got 2.67 inches of rain in less than an hour late Friday and El Dorado, Kan., got 1.6 inches in about 35 minutes.

New York City had a record 3.13 inches of rain early Saturday, and up to 6 inches of rain in suburban Westchester County north of the city closed major highways. Flooding halted subway service on one line in Harlem, and Long Island Lighting Co. said about 3,000 customers lost power.

Thunderstorms caused minor local flooding Saturday in Connecticut and about 14,000 Northeast Utilities customers were blacked out during the morning, said company spokesman Emmanuel Forde.

Friday night's outdoor performance of the Great Passion Play at Eureka Springs, Ark., was disrupted by a sudden hail storm that sent 18 members of the audience to a hospital with minor injuries. The religious production depicts part of the life of Jesus Christ.

"The hail was golf ball-sized," said Don Davis, dispatcher for the Eureka Springs Police Department. Hail that size also was reported Friday at Graber, Okla., Dorado, Kan., and Racine, Mo.

Cool air settled over the upper Midwest and record low temperatures mostly in the 40s were recorded Saturday morning at about a dozen cities in Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois and Ohio. Duluth, Minn., had a brisk record-matching 38 degrees.

But out west, California's San Joaquin Valley has had 100-plus temperatures for most of the past two weeks.

Jimmy Carter Discusses Veep Post With Mondale

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Walter Mondale discussed vice presidential candidates with former President Jimmy Carter Saturday and later met with Rep. Barbara Mikulski, the new co-chairman of his campaign.

Mondale, vice president under Carter, said his former boss did not give him any advice on who to choose for a running mate during breakfast at a Minneapolis hotel. He said the two spent part of the hourlong session discussing what Carter will say in his speech to the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco July 16.

Later Mondale met with his top staff members, including campaign chairman James Johnson and press secretary Maxine Isaacs.

Also at the session was Ms. Mikulski, a four-term congresswoman from Baltimore who was named Friday to be co-chairman of the Mondale campaign.

Jim Abbott, a spokesman for Ms. Mikulski, said the meeting was "about the convention and the vice presidential selection."

"She thinks it's an excellent opportunity to play a formal role in the campaign and not just be a loose adviser. She's extremely pleased," he said.

The meeting, at a hotel near St. Paul, lasted three hours.

Prominent women politicians who met with Mondale last week had pressed to get more females into the top ranks of his campaign and some also are pushing him to pick a woman as his running mate.

Mondale's press secretary, Maxine Isaacs, was asked Saturday if the appointment of Ms. Mikulski might mean that Mondale had decided to name a woman as a top adviser instead of as a running mate.

"Barbara Mikulski is an old and dear friend of Mondale's," Ms. Isaacs replied. "She's a very trusted adviser. She's a very effective spokesperson for the campaign, has worked hard for the campaign and is somebody we want to involve. There is no mystery to it."

Mondale's other campaign co-chairman is Dwayne Garrett, a San Francisco attorney who has helped in several fund-raisers.

Mondale planned to spend the weekend at his North Oaks, Minn. home and aidessaid he would meet there Sunday afternoon with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, to discuss the campaign and other political issues.

Gary Hart, who is still seeking the Democratic presidential nomination and also is considered a possible running mate for Mondale, was in Washington where he gave a radio response to President Reagan's weekly broadcast that focused on his proposals to crack down on crime.

Reagan said Americans are "fed up with fear in our streets" and urged them to write their congressmen to prod them into acting on his package of bills.

"For too long politicians have shouted "law and order" as if merely doing so will produce solutions to our serious crime problems," Hart said. "That may win votes, but it will not make us more secure in our homes or in our streets. We can and must do more to reduce crime but not with political rhetoric."

Hart told reporters he will continue to press his own presidential campaign and is looking at a lot of names of potential running mates, "including Mr. Mondale's."

"I haven't discussed it with him at all," Hart said, adding he probably will wait until the convention to name a running mate, should he get the nomination.

Hart also said when he characterized Mondale's vice presidential selection process as "pandering" in an interview with The Denver Post, editors were pressing him to characterize the Mondale campaign. "I said if it went on for some period of time, it might appear to people to be having that quality (of pandering)," Hart said.

Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, is fueling speculation that he may move back to South Carolina, the state of his childhood, to run as an independent this fall against Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond.

"I have not determined when I will return home," Jackson said Friday. "All my options are alive."

Thurmond, who has been in the Senate since 1954, has declined to comment on a possible Jackson bid. He faces nominal Democratic opposition this fall.

Reagan Urges Americans To Back Anti-Crime Bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan said Saturday Americans are "fed up with fear in our streets" and urged them to write their congressmen to prod them into acting on his package of bills to crack down on crime.

It was the second time in as many days, and the fourth time in recent weeks, Reagan raised the issue, sounding a popular campaign theme used to great effect by President Nixon in his 1968 campaign.

Citing a drastic drop in crime during his tenure, Reagan said in his weekly paid political radio address from Camp David, Md.:

"Believe me, we in the administration are trying to speak up for you, the millions of Americans who are fed up with crime, fed up with fear in our streets and neighborhoods, fed up with lenient judges, fed up with a criminal justice system that too often treats criminals better than it does their victims."

He said, "Too many Americans have had to suffer the effects of crime, while too many of our leaders have stuck to the old discredited liberal illusions about crime, illusions that refuse to hold criminals responsible for their actions."

He made the same speech, although in more detail, in an appearance Friday before the Texas Bar Association in San Antonio, and two weeks earlier before the National Sheriff's Association in Hartford, Conn. He made a similar speech in a radio address earlier this year.

Reagan was referring to a 42-part package of crime measures the House wants to act on individually. The Senate already dropped some of the most controversial measures, such as relaxing the "exclusionary rule" of evidence, reinstating the death penalty for federal crimes and limiting state prisoners' rights to appeal to federal courts.

His bill would allow judges to refuse bail to suspects, not on the basis of their likelihood to show up for trial but on the likelihood of their committing another crime and would give police more power to seize evidence.

"All of these reforms are badly needed and constitutionally sound," Reagan argued.

"We're not about to quit on the crime bill," Reagan said. "We're going to do what we've done in the past. We're going out to the heartland. We're taking our case to you, the people.

"Please send a message to the House leadership. Tell them to stop kowtowing to the special interests and start listening to you, the American people. Americans wants this anticrime legislation, and they want it now."

The House, however, has not totally blocked action on crime.

Legislation is moving on three major Reagan administration crime proposals: limits to the insanity defense and sentencing and bail reforms.

Democratic House leaders contend failure to act on such controversial measures is not a sign they are soft on crime, as Reagan alleges.

Democratic leader James Wright of Texas has argued that many of Reagan's proposals actually would do little to stop street crime.

Ga. Heart Transplant

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Doctors at University Hospital flew to Florida on a military jet Saturday to remove the heart of a donor for a Georgia patient selected as the state's second heart tranplant recipient.

Norma Patterson, spokeswoman for the hospital, said the transplant candidate, 35-year-old Fred Davis, was transferred to University Hospital from Eisenhower Medical Center at nearby Fort Gordon in preparation for the surgery, scheduled for Saturday night.

The organ procurement team flew to Fort Myers, Fla., where a woman donor was located Friday, according to Dr. G. Lionel Zumbro, a thoracic surgeon who heads the transplant team.

Davis, whose wife is soldier at Fort Gordon, was listed in serious but stable condition before the transplant.

Mrs. Patterson said the organ procurement team planned to return to Augusta to begin the transplant by 8 p.m. or 9 p.m.

SUN SETS ON SHRIMPING FLEET — An evening sun sets on the shrimping fleet at Bayou La Batre, where more boats have joined the Alabama fleet because of the promise of a bountiful harvest. When the season opened this year, an estimated 1,500 boats were shrimping off the Alabama coast. Shrimpers have complained that it takes five days to catch what normally was once caught in one-half day. (AP Laserphoto)

Shrimpers Always Looking For Trip To Pay The Bills

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

BAYOU LA BATRE, Ala. (AP) — Before a shrimper goes "toes up" in the evening, he has to worry about fuel prices, cost of equipment, boat repairs, the weather, but most of all — The Catch.

The catch requires long hours of work, dragging the Gulf of Mexico with expensive nets and, for many, plying the waters simply to make ends meet.

"We always hope for a good trip to pay everybody we owe," said George H. Peyregne, a longtime shrimper in Bayou la Batre, a fishing town on the Alabama Gulf Coast.

Steve Heath, a biologist with the Conservation Department at Dauphin Island, said the "big boom" in shrimping that hit a peak in 1977 brought many new boats into the industry with a promise of big payoffs.

"It had the effect of convincing a lot of people that a lot of money was in the seafood business," Heath said.

But the shrimp harvest turned bad in 1980, and sent many shrimpers into bankruptcy. Still, he said, the overall fleet has increased every year since 1977.

When the season opened this year, an estimated 1,500 boats were shrimping off the Alabama Coast. That number has thinned out, since some fishermen have returned to Florida or Louisiana.

"I think the year before last was 100 percent better than this year or last," said Walter Patronas, still dragging nets even though he's more than 80 years old. "There's about three times more boats. That's more production, but you can't compete with that in one boat during a season."

Patronas said the new boats "go day and night."

"They're catching more pounds overall, but poundage is down per boat," said another shrimper, Irie Johnson.

Shrimpers complain that it takes five days to catch what normally was caught in one-half day.

"It's hard since the doctors and lawyers got into it," said another shrimper who declined to give his name. He also resented Vietnamese fishermen in the area.

Heath said the investment in boats by non-fishermen, including lawyers and physicians, became popular in the late 70s. He said the complaints about Vietnamese fishermen abound, but are mostly unfounded.

"A certain amount of it is plain old jealousy," said Heath, explaining that Vietnamese fishermen are "very, very hard workers."

He said most of the Vietnamese in the Alabama coastal area were working in fish processing plants, with the Vietnamese shrimping boats probably coming from Mississippi and Florida.

Although more shrimpers are in the area, Heath said there's little chance the shrimp supply could be depleted.

"Each female lays millions of eggs," he said.

Heath said the threat to the shrimp population from freshwater flooding, which can destroy their saltwater habitat, was greater than the threat posed by excessive harvesting.

But he said the shrimp population has not suffered any great harm for this season by flooding from the rivers that feed into Mobile Bay and the Gulf. He said there is "good salty water all the way up into Mobile Bay."

Black Muslim Farrakhan Threatens To Sue Papers

By JAN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan, denouncing the news media as "wicked liars," vowed Saturday to sue any newspaper which reported that he described Judaism as "a gutter religion."

"If I have said something wrong, naturally it's right that I apologize. But I cannot apologize for the press' lies," he told a cheering crowd.

"I announce here today that I am suing the Chicago Sun-Times, the Chicago Tribune, the New York Post, the New York Daily News, The New York Times and all the other papers in America that have said that I said Judaism is a gutter religion," Farrakhan said. "You'll be forced to show cause why I shouldn't sue you and all of the media combined. We must put a stop to this."

Farrakhan said he would seek $110 million in damages "because I am suffering much from your lies."

Speaking to a standing-room-only audience at Indiana Black Expo, the 51-year-old spiritual leader of the Nation of Islam declared: "I never made no such statement, you wicked liars." He blamed the television networks and major newspapers for intentionally distorting his message.

The disputed comment came in a radio broadcast Farrakhan made last month. The Chicago Sun-Times obtained a tape recording of his speech and reported that Farrakhan used the word "gutter," but he says he used the term "dirty religion." Others who have heard the tape say the word used cannot be determined with certainty.

Farrakhan's appearance as keynote speaker at Black Expo, an annual event that focuses on the achievements, goals and problems of the black community, sparked protests from white political leaders and local Muslims.

Mayor William H. Hudnut III did not attend the event, citing a long-planned family outing, and told his staff to avoid any official contact with Farrakhan.

The Muslim minister ridiculed Hudnut, putting on an exaggerated dialect: "Yassuh, Mr. Hudnut. Did you say, Mr. Hudnut, that we shouldn't go near that Farrakhan fellow? That's not brotherhood. That's the plantation again."

There was heavy security for Farrakhan in the Convention Center-Hoosier Dome. Men and women were separated into different lines to file through metal detectors. Purses and briefcases were searched. Photographers were barred from taking any pictures of the security measures.

Inside, six Muslims sat in a row in front of the dais, their eyes searching the crowd. When a television crew member tried to remove her microphone from the table, one of the men physically restrained her.

Often during his two-hour speech, Farrakhan spoke directly to reporters who were seated near the front of the hall. Repeatedly, he denied making disparaging remarks about the Jewish religion.

Farrakhan came into the national spotlight as a supporter of the presidential campaign of the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Jackson has repudiated Farrakhan since the alleged remark about "gutter religion," which Farrakhan says was actually "dirty religion."

Clean-Up Finished On Key Beirut Roads

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Protesters demanding the release of Beirut's kidnap victims closed the only road linking the divided city for the second day Saturday, smashing the windows of cars that tried to pass and complicating efforts to reunify the capital.

Soldiers and public works employees cleared away the last land mines, unexploded shells and barricades from key city roads and runways at Beirut airport as work went ahead on implementing a security plan for Beirut, the first step toward ending nine years of civil war.

Tourism Minister Walid Jumblatt, leader of the Druze Moslem militia, announced that Beirut's port and Beirut airport will reopen early Monday.

The airport, port and all but one crossings of the Green Line, a no man's land separating Moslem west Beirut from the Christian east, have been closed since a Moslem revolt in February.

Quoting official army spokesmen, Beirut radio also said three main Green Line crossings would be reopened to civilian traffic Sunday.

But efforts to implement the security plan were hampered Saturday when angry parents and friends of Lebanese kidnapped by the city's rival Christian and Moslem militias used barbed wire, burning tires and piles of rocks to block the only open road across the Green Line.

"Some carried clubs and smashed the windows of the few cars which tried to cross from the Moslem to the Christian side of the city," a witness said.

The demonstrators warned they would stage revenge kidnappings if their relatives were not released soon.

A delegation of protesters met with government leaders and militia representatives Friday, when the road was closed for four hours, and received assurances the kidnap victims would be freed at a "zero hour" that was not released.

Despite the promise, the protesters showed no signs of ending their demonstrations.

"They have enough used car tires to burn for days if they want to," a witness said.

There are no official figures on the number of people kidnapped by Beirut's rival militias. Most of them were taken after the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon but some have been missing since 1975, when civil war broke out.

A government official said the parents of the victims have produced a list with more than 4,000 names of people still missing, although the militias say they are only holding 300.

Unemployment Fell

RALEIGH — Unemployment in North Carolina decreased to its lowest level in more than four years from mid-April to mid-May, according to figures released recently by the N. C. Employment Security Commission (ESC). Unemployment rates decreased in 76 counties and increased in 18.

The state's total unadjusted rate for May was 5.8 percent — compared to the national unadjusted rate of 7.2 percent.

The 5.8 percent unemployment rate for Pitt County in May placed it on a par with the state level. Pitt County in May had a total current labor force of 49,330 of which 2,840 were unemployed.

Counties in North Carolina with the highest unemployment rates during May were: Swain, 14.5 percent, with 690 unemployed; Graham, 13.2 percent, 530 unemployed; and Wilson, 11.7 percent, 4,230 unemployed. Two other counties, Bladen and Tyrrell, each had an unemployment rate in the 11 percent bracket.

The employment picture during the period in the eight standard metropolitan statistical areas of North Carolina was good, with six experiencing a decrease and two showing only a slight increase in unemployment. Unemployment rates for the eight metropolitan areas are: Raleigh/Durham, 3.1 percent; Jacksonville, 4.3 percent; Charlotte/Gastonia, 4.4 percent; Greensboro/Winston-Salem/High Point, 4.8 percent; Asheville, 5.6 percent; Fayetteville, 6.5 percent; Wilmington, 8.1 percent; and Hickory/Salisbury/Concord, 5.2 percent.

Restored Egypt-Soviet Ties Not Likely To Weaken Links

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The decision by Egypt and the Soviet Union to restore full diplomatic relations after a series of overtures by Moscow does not signal any major shift by President Hosni Mubarak away from the West, Western and Egyptian sources said Saturday.

The two countries announced Saturday they had agreed to exchange ambassadors. The announcements gave no indication when the envoys would take up their posts. Egypt withdrew its ambassador in 1978 after the Soviets criticized peace overtures to Israel by the late President Anwar Sadat.

Sadat expelled Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Polyakov in 1981 for alleged involvement in Moslem-Christian strife. The two countries have maintained embassies in one another's capitals under charges d'affaires.

The Egyptian Foreign Ministry announcement said in full: "It was officially announced Saturday that the governments of Egypt and the Soviet Union have agreed on the return of their mutual ambassadors to resume their work in the capitals of the two countries."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said that Alexander Belonogov, 58, who was first secretary at the Soviet Embassy in London from 1965 to 1967, would take up the post in Cairo in August. Egypt has not announced its choice for envoy to Moscow.

Western diplomats and well-informed Egyptians said the decision to exchange ambassadors had been delayed for nearly two years to give Mubarak time to reassure the Reagan administration of Egyptian intentions and to play down speculation that Egypt was moving back to the Soviet camp.

"I don't expect any major changes," said one Western diplomat, who refused to be identified under rules of his embassy. "It appears the announcement was timed to make the least possible impact in the United States and Israel, since both are pre-occupied with their own elections."

In advance of the formal announcement, Mubarak's adviser, Osama el-Baz, told reporters the exchange of envoys was "a step toward formalizing relations between Egypt and the Soviet Union. It should not be given any further significance."

"Needless to say, this step, when finalized, will have no bearing whatsoever on our relationship with any other country," el-Baz added.

Under the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser, Egypt was the Soviet Union's staunchest friend in the Arab world. Moscow provided large-scale economic aid as well as the weapons used to fight Israel in 1967 and 1973.

Relations began turning sour in 1972 when the Soviets withheld arms shipments. Nasser's successor, Sadat, expelled 17,000 Soviet advisers in retaliation and began steering Egypt toward the United States.

Sources said the Soviet Union had been seeking a reconciliation since early 1982, shortly after Sadat was assassinated by Moslem extremists.

The pro-government magazine Al-Mussawar said the Soviet ambassadors in Canada and France conveyed to Egyptian embassies that Moscow was willing to restore full relations on a basis of "mutual self-respect."

As a gesture of goodwill, the Soviets agreed in early 1982 to send 66 technicians to work in steel mills, an aluminum factory and the Aswan Dam, all built with Moscow's assistance in the 1960s.

When Mubarak visited the United States for the first time as president in 1982, he sought to assure congressmen and administration officials that the return of the Soviet technicians did not mean Egypt was breaking away from the United States, Al-Mussawar said.

To avoid problems with the Americans, sources added, Mubarak decided to delay an exchange of ambassadors until Washington had more confidence in him.

Western sources said the contacts between Moscow and Cairo continued in early 1983, including behind-the-scenes negotiations on increasing trade and economic links. In late 1983, thw two countries signed an economic agreement increasing bilateral trade by 25 percent.

According to Al-Mussawar, Mubarak tentatively decided to restore full relations in late 1983 but postponed the move again so as not to make the announcement in the midst of U.S. policy failures in Lebanon.

A Western diplomat told The Associated Press at that time that Egypt believed an announcement after the Oct. 23 truck bombing of U.S. and French military garrisons in Beirut would have been seen as an overture to pro-Soviet Syria, whose forces in Lebanon were involved in armed clashes with U.S. troops.

Steps toward reconciliation intensified when former Prime Minister Mamdouh Salem led the Egyptian delegation to the funeral of Soviet President Yuri Andropov in February. During Salem's Moscow stay, Egypt agreed to a visit by Polyakov, who had since been promoted to chief of the Middle East department in the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

During Polyakov's visit in April, sources said, the two sides agreed in principle to exchange ambassadors and begin negotiations on a timetable.

Faulty Balcony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A wooden balcony that collapsed beneath 50 people watching fireworks at a Fourth of July party, seriously injuring several, was built illegally, a city spokesman said.

The balcony of the Woodland Hills house was built without a building permit and without being subjected to inspection by city officials, a city Building and Safety Department spokesman said Friday. "You'd have to call it illegal construction," said the spokesman, who commented only on condition that he not be identified.

The home's owner, Ronald F. Dusing, said Friday that when he bought the house in May 1980, the balcony was already in place.

Mad Patrons Shoot Up Bar, Kill Bouncer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Two men enraged because they were thrown out of an oceanside bar for fighting sprayed the crowded nightspot with bullets Saturday, killing a bouncer and injuring three customers.

The gunfire — shot from a speeding car across two lanes of busy Highway A1A — panicked dozens of patrons at Penrod's bar, some of whom stampeded, trampling those who ducked for cover, police said. Another person was injured in the melee.

"It was crazy here," said an employee at the bar, not far from Fort Lauderdale's popular oceanfront "strip" where college students flock annually for spring break.

"There was screaming and running and people started running all over the place," she said.

Ken Raab, 23, of Hellertown, Pa., a law student at Nova University near Fort Lauderdale, was killed. Raab had been working his way through college as a bouncer at the popular nightclub.

He died at North Beach Medical Center about an hour after the shooting. Police said it was not clear whether he was one of the bouncers who ejected the gunmen, but he was standing near the door when the shots were fired.

The injured included two vacationing British paratroopers stationed at Salmaca, Belize, in Central America, police said. They were identified as Keith Edwards, 19, and Andrew Powell, 20.

Edwards, shot in the forearm, was treated and released from Broward General Medical Center. Powell, hit in both legs, was listed in fair condition Saturday, said hospital spokeswoman Louis Maple.

Robert Moon, 21, of Tipp City, Ohio, was shot in the thigh. He also was treated and released, Ms. Maple said.

Detective Don Deehan said police were searching for two men, possibly of Latin descent, who fired into the bar from a light-blue 1981 or 1982 Toyota or Datsun.

Deehan said one of the men, who appeared to have suffered a broken nose some time ago, got into a scuffle shortly after midnight.

"The guy with the broken nose started a fight with one of the customers, shoved the customer and then shoved the customer's girlfriend," Deehan said. "The bouncers jumped in right away and they shuffled these guys on out.

"About five minutes later — they had made threats on the way out they were going to come back and shoot someone — they did just that," Deehan said.

The shots came from a "large-caliber" handgun, police said. Five bullets were fired into the crowd.

Police spokesman Bill Lumm described the nightclub as chaotic by the time officers arrived.

The person hurt by the rush of the crowd, as well as a man who fought with one of the gunmen before they were ousted from the bar, were treated for minor injuries at Broward General Hospital, he said.

Burglar In Bold Escape

SUFFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A burglar described by authorities as "a one-man crime wave" dove headfirst from a second-story window in a courthouse bathroom and fled, authorities said.

Gene Lorenzo Crocker, who turned 23 on Friday, the day of his bold, daylight escape, is suspected in two robberies committed within three hours of his escape, authorities said.

Officers in Virginia and North Carolina still sought Crocker Saturday.

Crocker escaped about 11:20 a.m. About 12:30 p.m., a woman was robbed at knifepoint two blocks from the courthouse in her home. Ninety minutes later, authorities said, an elderly man was threatened and robbed in a nearby cemetery.

Investigators believe Crocker fled the city in a car stolen from another victim.

Crocker, who pleaded guilty in May to eight counts of burglary and six counts of grand larceny, was to testify in Circuit Court on the second floor of the municipal building against a defendant charged as one of his accomplices.

Crocker was being held in a jury room guarded by a deputy, Sheriff J. Irving Baines said.

While Crocker used a restroom adjacent to a jury room, Deputy William Cole watched him through a crack in the door. Crocker stoood next to an unsecured window. He then slid headfirst through the window, Cole said.

The deputy grabbed Crocker by his ankles, yelled for help, but was unable to hold on.

"I got hold of his legs, but he was too heavy, I couldn't hold him," Cole said.

A witness said Crocker dropped to the ground and landed on his head, but still fled.

Capt. S.B. Chapman said he was probably injured in the fall.

Crocker is described as a black man, about 5 feet 11 inches, of medium brown complexion and with a slight mustache.

Jacksons Launch Lavish Victory Tour

By DOUGLASS DANIEL
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Jacksons' Victory Tour has hit the road with eye-popping special effects and high-energy performances by Michael Jackson and his brothers, opening a 13-city, 37-concert tour hailed by promoters as the largest and most expensive to travel America.

For most of Friday night's 45,000 concert-goers, the Jacksons' tour-opener was a thrill even without the hit "Thriller" and even though it was an hour later and an hour shorter than many expected.

Jackson and brothers Jermaine, Tito, Marlon and Randy hardly missed a beat as they sang, danced and went through several changes of their sparkling costumes. Michael Jackson removed his trademark sequined glove after the first number, but slipped it back on near the show's end.

The production designed by the Jackson brothers dazzled the eye and ear with red and green lasers, explosions, fireworks and even a mechanical spider-like creature crusted with lights. The 159-foot-wide stage, said by promoters to be the largest ever built for an outdoor concert, stretched from the 25-yard line to the end zone.

"I was afraid we wouldn't get our money's worth, but their showmanship, their professionalism ... it was great, astounding," said Irene Doll, 33, of Shawnee, Kan.

"It took a few minutes for the Jacksons' Victory Tour to get rolling ... but once it did there was no stopping it," The Kansas City Times said in a review.

The concert began with a bizarre prologue. As a narrator spoke of a mythical king in a prehistoric land, an actor in gleaming white — later discovered to be brother Randy — pulled a glowing sword from a stone and slew one of several strange beasts. Moments later a small platform carrying all five brothers rose into view at center stage accompanied by sparkling explosions and red and green laser beams.

Style and energy were a great part of the concert in Arrowhead Stadium. Even when Michael seemed to be gasping for breath while trying to sing, dance and jump all at once, fans continued cheering and clapping their hands.

The audience gave its most enthusiastic response when he performed "Beat It" and "Billie Jean," the two No. 1 hits from his album "Thriller," in a dynamic back-to-back sequence.

Jermaine, who has had a successful solo career and currently has an album on the charts, was greeted warmly when he began "Let's Get Serious," one of his two solos.

The group also performed some of their hits from their days as the Jackson 5, including a medley of "I Want You Back," "Stop the Love You Save" and "I'll Be There."

But the night belonged to Michael. Shrieks and screams from the fans as the 25-year-old superstar sang and danced evoked memories of the bobbysoxers' craze over Frank Sinatra in the 1940s and the adulation Elvis Presley and the Beatles once received.

"He's got all the moves, he's got more energy," said Cynthia Cartwright, 42, of Kansas City. "I thought he was gorgeous."

A notable omission from Michael's solo numbers was the title tune of the album "Thriller," which broke all records by selling more than 35 million copies and was translated to an opulent 14-minute music video. Also absent was "PYT (Pretty Young Thing)," another of the album's hits.

And while the tour's name corresponds with the Jacksons' new album, "Victory," which went on sale last week, no songs from it were performed because, tour officials said, the brothers believed no one wanted to hear songs that weren't familiar.

As a group, the brothers have sold more than 100 million records worldwide since achieving national fame in 1969.

The concert of about 20 songs lasted one hour and 45 minutes after getting started just before 10 p.m., about an hour late. Although word had spread that the show would last 2½ hours, tour officials said it never was advertised at that length.

"Everything worked as it was supposed to work," said national promoter Chuck Sullivan. "Everything that was planned to be included was included."

Some were disappointed they didn't get more, but few said the Jacksons didn't put on a spectacular show.

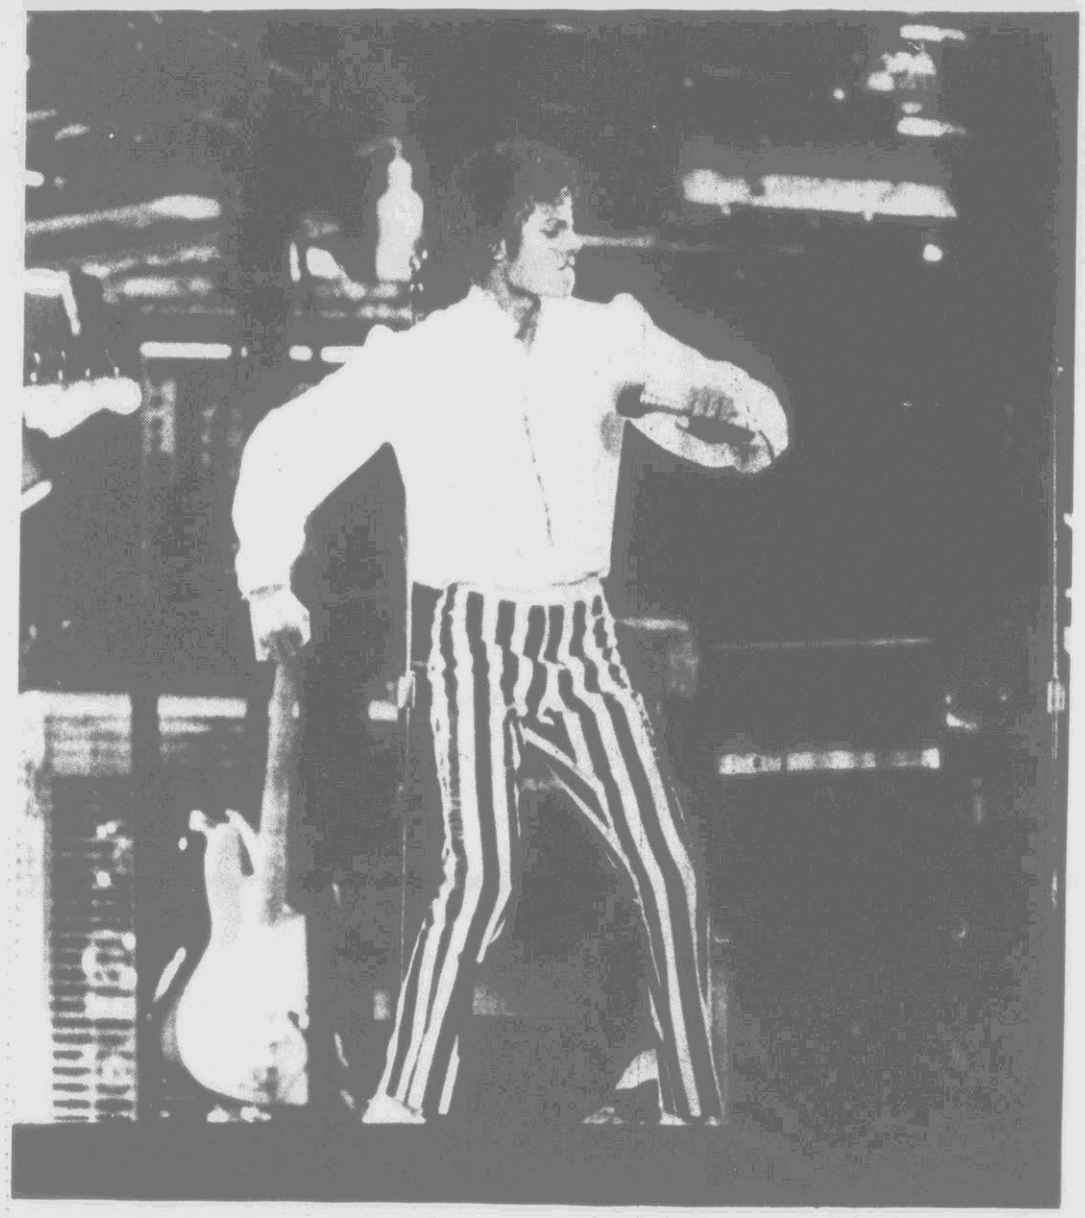

"My kids were disappointed it wasn't longer. They've been to a lot of concerts, and they thought it would be longer, but they loved it anyway," said Dorothy Osborne, 41, of Leawood, Kan.

"I thought it was great," said 12-year-old Theresa Doll of Shawnee, Kan. She said it was worth the ticket price of $30. Many fans had grumbled about the relatively high price, along with a complicated and since discarded mail-order distribution system that required purchase of four tickets for a total of $120.

Jackson announced Thursday he had asked promoters to arrange a new ticket-distribution process, and tour officials said tickets for future concerts probably will be sold over the counter, although the $30 price would not change.

Jackson also announced he would donate to charity his share of earnings from the tour. Published reports have placed the amount the Jacksons have been guaranteed by tour promoters and sponsors as high as $40 million.

The stadium was patrolled by a security force of about 500 people, double that of a Kansas City Chiefs football game, but no problems were reported. The audience included middle-aged and parents with young children, looking more like Sunday afternoon baseball fans than a late-night rock concert crowd.

Princess Anne Begins Visit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Great Britain's Princess Anne was scheduled to begin a round of appearances Sunday with a news media meeting, followed by a luncheon with Olympic Arts Festival officials.

The princess, fifth in line of succession to the British throne, was expected to arrive in Los Angeles Saturday afternoon. She will attend an "A-Team" stunt show and visit children who live in Skid Row hotels.

The intinerary of the princess, daughter of Britain's Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip, is designed to promote British industries and show concern for underprivileged children, the British Consulate announced Friday.

Princess Anne will begin her visit with a social gathering with the news media, followed by a private luncheon with Robert Fitzpatrick, director of the Olympic Arts Festival.

She will then visit Para Los Ninos, a non-profit agency serving children whose parents live on Skid Row. The children plan to give the princess gifts for her son and daughter, and put on a breakdancing demonstration.

"We're going nuts, we're so excited," said Tanya Tull, founder and executive director of the group. The princess is president of the Worldwide Save the Children's Fund.

"Whenever she visits abroad, she always asks to see poor children, and the British Consulate chose us," Miss Tull said.

Anne's brother, Prince Andrew, drew criticism after spraying a group of reporters with a paint gun at a construction project while visiting the black and Hispanic neighborhoods of Watts and east Los Angeles during his visit to Southern California last spring.

"We don't want to make any comparisons between the princess' and Prince Andrew's visit," said Angus Mackay, a consular spokesman. "We hope the visit will be a complete success."

Princess Anne will deliver a short speech Sunday night welcoming the Royal Opera of Covent Garden, which is making its first North American appearance at the Music Center in the Olympic Arts Festival.

On Monday, she will visit the Hollywood studios of Capitol Records, owned by Britain's Thorn-EMI, and watch singer Steve Miller record an album, followed by a visit to an exhibit of French Impressionist paintings at the County Art Museum.

Her visit ends next Wednesday when she leaves for Atlanta and Raleigh, N.C., for appearances and she is to return to Los Angeles July 28 for the opening of the Olympics.

Regional Tour For Shultz

HONG KONG (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz arrived in Hong Kong Saturday on the first leg of a 30,000-mile regional tour aimed at strengthening U.S. ties with the non-communist nations of Southeast Asia.

During the 22-hour flight from Washington, Shultz criticized Rev. Jesse Jackson's trips last month to Cuba and Nicaragua, as well as his reported plans for a trip to Moscow in an attempt to convince the Soviets to release dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov.

"When you go abroad to castigate your own country, it's not a very admirable thing to do," Shultz said of Jackson, a Democratic presidential candidate.

In Cuba, Jackson met President Fidel Castro and secured the release of 48 American and Cuban prisoners. After Jackson's return, President Reagan hinted the trip was illegal.

Shultz also discussed some of the problems pending before proposed U.S.-Soviet talks on space weaponry being.

The United States has agreed to Moscow's proposal to hold talks on space weapons in Vienna in September, but the Soviet Union has accused Washington of making unacceptable preconditions by suggesting the talks also include the stalled Geneva negotiations on nuclear arms.

Shultz called verification problems "very difficult" but said the United States "wouldn't have said we'd go to Vienna if we didn't think there are at least some things that are negotiable."

of his two-week Asian tour playing tennis and recovering from his long flight.

The only official event scheduled during his two-day Hong Kong stopover was a dinner Sunday night with Sir Edward Youde, the governor of Hong Kong. The two men are expected to discuss the 1997 Chinese takeover of the prosperous British colony.

After Hong Kong, Shultz will visit Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Australia, and New Zealand.

In Jakarta, Shultz is scheduled to attend the meeting of foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). The alliance is made up of the main six U.S. allies in the region.

Although the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia has dominated past meetings, Shultz may also face questions from ASEAN leaders concerned by U.S. plans to sell arms to China.

Fired Guards Vow To Fight For Jobs

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Mecklenburg Correctional Center guards fired as a result of the breakout of six death row inmates say they're scapegoats and are vowing to fight to regain their jobs.

Three of the five guards said in interviews published Saturday in the Richmond Times-Dispatch that they are being sacrificed by administrators and politicians embarrassed by the mass escape, the largest breakout in U.S. history.

"The firing was totally wrong; it makes you feel worthless," said James Fitts, 30, of Henderson, N.C., who was held hostage at knifepoint during the breakout and who was one of the guards at the facility in Southside who was fired Thursday.

The guards acknowledged that they erred during the May 31 breakout. They said they did not while top officials were exonerated or lightly punished.

"We've already been humiliated; it's something you'll never forget the rest of your life," said Fitts. "They didn't even call me to tell me about (the firing) — that's ridiculous — they're looking for a scapegoat."

In Richmond, former Attorney General Marshall Coleman also suggested the guards were being used as scapegoats. Coleman, a Republican who lost his gubernatorial bid to Gov. Charles Robb, renewed his call for a bi-partisan commission to study conditions in the entire Virginia penal system.

"If there wasn't support for it before, there should be now," Coleman said.

Coleman earlier criticized Robb's administration after the escape, saying it raised questions about the governor's priorities in spending and

PUBLIC NOTICE
Sunday Closing (The Blue Law)

The Greenville City Council will conduct a public hearing on the blue law at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 11, 1984, in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building. At the public hearing, citizens of Greenville will be provided an opportunity to present comments on the proposed ordinance. Comments should be limited to three minutes per person.

Current Blue Law

1. General Statutes 160A-191 grants municipalities the authority to regulate Sunday closing.
2. Current blue law adopted on March 10, 1966, and has been amended four times - August 5, 1971, June 3, 1976, January 12, 1978, and April 8, 1982.
3. Summary of items which may and may not be sold on Sunday under current ordinance:

MAY BE SOLD	MAY NOT BE SOLD
Christmas greenery	Clothing, shoes
Christmas decorations, wrapping paper, ornaments, accessories	Furniture
Emergency repairs and emergency materials (automotive, etc.)	Dishes
Tobacco products	Hardware
Newspapers, magazines, greeting cards	Tools
Fruit stands	Paint and paint supplies
Ice cream, dairy products	Building supplies
Gasoline, oil	Jewelry and jewelry items
Groceries, food items	Silverware
Ice	Watches, clocks
Medicine	Luggage
Personal hygiene items (shampoo, bathroom tissue, toothpaste, disposable diapers, etc.)	Musical instruments
Picnic supplies (napkins, plates, tablecloths, utensils, etc.)	Records, record albums, tapes
Flashlights and batteries	Sports equipment
Household maintenance supplies (cleaning supplies, light bulbs, paper towels)	Toys, games, costumes, hobby kits
Ladies hosiery	Office supplies
	Plants and plant supplies
	Kitchenware
	Televisions, electronic equipment
	Cloth, patterns, sewing items
	Cameras, film, and camera equipment
	Household furnishings

Note: The current blue law does not regulate the sale of alchoholic beverages as municipalities do not have the authority under North Carolina law to regulate the sale of alcohol.

The proposals under consideration are summarized below:

Blue Law - Option 1

1. Proposed blue law would generally prohibit retail sales activities between 1:00 a.m. Sunday and 1:00 p.m. Sunday. The proposed restriction on opening and closing times is generally known as the "1 o'clock rule". Cities which have similar ordinances are Greensboro, High Point, Gastonia, Kinston, Rocky Mount, and Winston-Salem.
2. Provisions of proposed blue law are as follows:

"Section 11-8-2. Restrictions on Sunday Sales.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, offer or expose for sale any goods, wares or merchandise in the City between 1 a.m. Sunday and 1 p.m. Sunday, prevailing time, unless the place of business is expressly allowed to engage in business by the provisions of this Chapter.

Section 11-8-3. Unrestricted Sales Activities.

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 11-8-2, the following places of business may remain open and offer for sale any item in stock:

1. Grocery stores
2. Convenience stores
3. Drug stores
4. Hotels, motels, boarding houses
5. Restaurants
6. Newspaper and magazine stands
7. Farmers markets, fruit and vegetable stands or other locations selling produce
8. Movie theaters, bowling alleys, athletic clubs, health spas, gymnasiums, swimming pools, tennis courts, and any other place of business providing entertainment or recreation

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 11-8-2, the following items may be sold at any time:

1. Christmas greenery"

Blue Law - Option 2

1. Completely repeal the blue law provisions of the City Code.

Advantages of Blue Law Options

1. Proposed ordinance will promote the free enterprise system by providing local merchants with the opportunity to decide for themselves whether they want to open or close on Sunday, rather than being regulated by government.
2. Proposed ordinance may be administered by Police Department with less difficulty.
3. Proposed ordinance will provide local merchants the opportunity to increase profits through increased sales.
4. Proposed ordinance will increase economic base of City by allowing Greenville citizens an opportunity to shop in Greenville on Sundays.
5. Proposed ordinance should create additional employment opportunities if local merchants elect to open on Sunday.

Disadvantages of Blue Law Options

1. If merchants elect to open on Sundays, the cost of operations would be more for seven days rather than six days.
2. Some employees of stores would work on Sundays, rather than have the day off.
3. Proposed ordinance may be construed as interfering with religious beliefs.

The Washington Monument Turns 100

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A century has passed with that mighty stone column rising from the land, attracting millions with its massive grace and memorializing an earlier towering figure, George Washington.

The Washington Monument has been the focus of politics, patriotism, debate, bigotry, tourism and terrorism since its completion a hundred years ago.

In December 1982 an anti-nuclear pacifist threated to blow up the monument, after driving a truck he said contained explosives to the base of the tower. The truck was empty, and the protester was killed.

In 1854, with the spire only one-third done, a flurry of religious bigotry dried up public support and bringing a two-decade halt in the project.

The work was finished in 1884. The actual anniversary is in Decemer, but special ceremonies are scheduled July 11, sponsored by the National Park Service and National Society of Professional Engineers.

The idea of a memorial to Washington is nearly as old as the nation. The Continental Congress voting in 1783 to erect an equestrian statue. The plan was "the most pleasing reflection of my life," Washington wrote to a friend. But in his lifetime, the idea was bogged down in Congressional wrangling over design and cost.

In 1832 Congress approved a marble statue, to be sculpted in Europe. But it drew ridicule when was erected in the Capitol 11 years later, showing Washington in a toga, naked from the waist up. It was eventually carted off to the Smithsonian Institution in 1908.

Private citizens formed the Washington National Monument Society in 1833, and Robert Mills, who also designed the Treasury Department, the old Patent Office and the Washington Monument in Baltimore, was paid $200 for his design for the monument in the nation's capital.

He conceived a sort of national pantheon, to include statues of many presidents and other national heroes. At the base would be a circular colonnaded building 100 feet high; at the front, a colossal figure of Washington in a chariot driving four horses.

With $87,000 on hand by 1847, the society decided to start building. The marble cornerstone was laid July 4, 1848. The spot chosen by city designer Pierre L'Enfant for a statue of Washington was a swamp then, so the site was changed to the nearest solid ground, 390 feet to the southeast.

At the elaborate ceremony were President James K. Polk, former president Martin Van Buren and future presidents James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Johnson and Millard Fillmore.

But contributions totaling $230,000 had been exhausted by 1854 with the monument 154 feet tall. In lieu of money, some donated stones, and one such stone from the Vatican almost scuttled the monument.

An anti-Catholic group called the Know Nothings vowed the so-called "Pope's Stone" would never be part of the monument. Culprits surprised a watchman, tied him up, stole the stone from a nearby shed and destroyed it.

By the following February the Know Nothings had taken control of the society itself, halting contributions and construction. In 1858 the Know Nothings returned the enterprise to the original society officials. But construction halted as the Civil War loomed.

Interest in the monument revived after the war. In the enthusiasm over the nation's centennial in 1876, Congress appropriated $200,000 'to resume work, with the Army Engineers in charge.

The foundation was reinforced, then work resumed on the tower. Although the marble used to finish the monument was taken from the same Maryland quarry as that used in the bottom, it is slightly different in color, showing where work was halted for so long.

The 100-ounce aluminum cap was put in place Dec. 6, 1884. It had taken 36 years, five months and two days, and the final cost was $1,187,710.

Millions of people have visited the monument since it was opened to the public on Oct. 9, 1888. Many climb the 897 stairs that wind past 190 donated memorial stones. Most walk down after taking the 70-second elevator ride up the 555-foot shaft.

The stones are gifts from cities, states, foreign governments and individuals. Hawaii's stone is the newest, set in 1935.

When the sun heats the monument on one side and shade cools it on the other, the temperature difference — up to 40 degrees on a summer day — can curl the monument three inches, imperceptible to visitors.

A 30 mph wind will sway the tower less than one-250th of an inch.

NOT MUCH CHOICE — When drivers reach this intersection in Siler City they don't have much of a choice turning left or right. The signs are located on N.C. 421 in the northern section of town and warn motorists of the dead end streets in both directions. (AP Laserphoto)

'Strong Protest' Is Issued By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says that if two U.S. diplomats detained by the Soviet Union are expelled, the United States will retaliate, possibly by expelling Soviet diplomats of higher rank or a greater number of them.

A second "strong protest" was relayed to the Soviet Union on Friday to emphasize American unhappiness over the incident and make clear U.S. demands "that this doesn't happen again," said State Department spokesman Alan Romberg.

He said the Soviets have not said anything yet about expelling the two Americans, John Purnell, a political officer, and George Glass, a consular officer.

But other U.S. officials said privately they regard the incident as a "set-up" arranged by Soviet police, possibly to prepare for expulsion of the diplomats.

The men were taken into custody while talking to a Soviet citizen and held for two hours on Wednesday.

"Our officials did nothing wrong," said Romberg. "They were not engaged in any improper activity. And we do insist on the right to maintain normal contact with Soviet citizens."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass said Purnell and Glass were meeting secretly with a Soviet woman who was gathering information "hostile to the Soviet Union" and "of interest to American intelligence and centers of ideological sabotage."

The woman, identified as L.B. Tumanova, was taken into custody and "is being called to account in accordance with Soviet laws," Tass said, though it did not specify what charges the woman faced.

A U.S. official who asked not to be named said the incident could set off tit-for-tat expulsions that could affect the ability of the two countries to carry on normal diplomatic contacts at a time when Washington and Moscow are beginning to renew contacts in a number of areas.

The American position is that the universally recognized diplomatic immunity of the two diplomats was violated.

Garage Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — A garage sale is a good way to get rid of unwanted household items and make money at the same time.

To make the most of the sale, it is best to make all the items look good. In some cases, just a thorough cleaning will do the job. But a quick spray of paint on other objects, such as outdoor furniture, can triple their value, while aerosol paint removers and lacquer can help restore old furniture to a much more profitable condition.

World's Fair Overcoming Initial Woes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The world's fair, clouded by both financial and attendance problems since it opened May 12, is beginning to see some sunshine, with attendance on the rise and a new bank loan in the works to pay overdue contractors' bills.

In addition, the price of some tickets is dropping, season ticket sales have soared, and taxi drivers want to lower their rates for trips to the fair, said Petr Spurney, president of Louisiana World Exposition Inc.

Spurney said a consent decree is now being processed for a $17.5 million loan.

"The governor, the mayor, banks and the contractors will all sign ... I think we are talking about early next week," he said Friday. "The only things outstanding are very minor."

In addition to obtaining the state-guaranteed loan, the consent agreement also would eliminate $16 million in liens filed against the fair by unpaid contractors, Spurney said.

This, in turn, would clear the way for Rouse Co. to proceed with a $55 million project in which it plans to convert the fair's International Hall into a complex of shops and offices after the fair ends. Rouse has said it could not buy the building until it is free of liens.

Spurney said the fair will get from $2.5 million to $4 million from Rouse, depending on the outcome of negotiations, and the money will go toward paying fair debts.

The fair owes about $26 million in construction bills.

New Orleans Mayor Dutch Morial and Spurney, countering critics who called it a rich people's fair, also announced a special two-week ticket deal to give the less affluent a break.

Beginning July 9, ticket prices will be cut to $8 for children or adults after 6 p.m., Monday through Thursday. The usual price is $15 for adults, $9.95 for children — highest in world exposition history.

"Attendance is on the upswing and we want those who live in New Orleans — black or white, young or old, male or female, construction worker or office worker — to be in the number," the mayor said.

If the City Council agrees, taxi fares that were boosted in anticipation of heavy business also will come down.

The council had classified the fair as a special event, enabling cabbies to charge $3 a head for any trip to the fairgrounds, even one of just a few blocks.

Andre Neff, director of the city utilities department, which supervises taxis, said the special rate was meant to compensate taxi drivers for delays expected by predicted traffic congestion. "Simply put, this has not happened and the traffic problems have not materalized," he said.

Under the proposed change, which can't come up for a vote until August, taxis would charge the regular meter rate for one person and either 25 cents or $1 for each additional rider.

The sale of season passes has been the fair's biggest success. Spurney said the sale, at prices which ranged from $99 to $150 depending on when they were bought, exceeded all expectations.

Nearly all season passes were bought by people who live in or near New Orleans. The original projection was that 120,000 would be sold. Spurney said 165,055 had been sold at last count, for $14.3 million.

"It was our turning point," said George Williams, vice president of marketing.

Md. Clinic Is Bomb Target

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A bomb exploded in front of a Planned Parenthood clinic Saturday, blowing a 16-square-foot hole in the wall of the building, knocking out all the windows and ripping out a sidewalk, police said.

Two people were inside the building when the bomb exploded around 1:30 a.m., but no one was injured, Sgt. Richard Brown said. The two were employees of an air cargo firm with offices in the building.

Brown said no one claimed responsibility for the bombing, which was being investigated by federal agents from the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms as well as state fire marshals and local fire and police departments.

Brown said soil samples and fragments of the bomb had been taken to the federal agency's lab in Rockville for analysis.

A "massive bomb" that police said had the potential to blow up the three-story NAF headquarters building in southeast Washington malfunctioned and caused moderate damage when it detonated at 11 p.m. Wednesday.

Linebacker Situation Said Shaky For 1985 Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series of stories on the prospects for the 1984 East Carolina University football team. Each story will cover a specific area of play. Today's first story is on the linebackers.)

While East Carolina's defense against the run was one of the strong points of the Pirate team, this year's could be questionable simply because of a lack of overall experience.

And the linebacker crew is one area where experience isn't that great.

In 1984, East Carolina held its opponents to only 134.2 yards per game, a healthy statistic. Only 11 touchdowns — an average of one per game — were scored on the ground. Mike Grant, one of the inside linebackers, was the leading tackler with 111 for the season, while P.J. Jordan was third with 90.

However, Grant is among the missing this year, with Jordan being the lone starter back at the four positions. In addition to Grant, outside linebacker — or defensive end as it is sometimes called — Jeff Pegues was also among the senior losses.

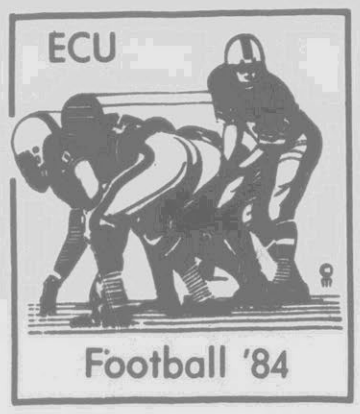

"In a word, I'd call the linebacker situation shaky," defensive coordinator Tom Throckmorton said. Throckmorton handles the inside linebackers, while Waverly Brooks handles the outside crew.

"We lost the top four kids (at defensive end)," Brooks said, "but we have some good young kids coming along. We've gotten an extra year for Curtis Wyatt (6-2, 219, Sr.), but he didn't have that great a year last season. He could be a big asset because of his experince, however."

Another possibility is Randy Watts (6-6, 229, So.), but his eligibility is in question right now and it will be later this summer before the staff will know whether he will be available.

"We have two different spots at defensive end," Brooks said, "one is the drop end, who goes back to work against the pass or who hangs in to work against the sweep, and the rush end, who goes after the quarterback or runner.

"We have three at drop end who did a good job in the spring." They include Vinson Smith (6-1, 210, Fr.), Dave Thomas (6-0, 205, Sr.), and Essray Taliafero (6-0, 200, Fr.). "I couldn't really say who might be the starter. Vinson is probably the best athlete of the group, but Thomas has the experience. Essray had a good spring at times."

At the rush end position, Brooks feels four or five players have a chance to be number one. Kevin Banks (5-10, 220, Sr.) is coming off an injury but has the experience to hold down the starting spot. Ron Gilliard (6-2, 222, Fr.) and John Williamson (6-2, 218, Fr.) had good springs before the former suffered an injury. Willie Mack (6-0, 215, Jr.) started the spring at drop end, but was moved to rush end and Brooks said he did a good job at times.

"Our biggest problem is a lack of experience," Brooks said. "I don't think we'll be as good early as we were, but I have a lot of confidence in these kids. They're just going to have to come to the top and play like juniors instead of freshmen."

Brooks does not anticipate any incoming freshmen helping out this year. "But these kids that are freshmen now (redshirt and incoming) will be better in two years than the group we lost. They just have to get their feet wet."

Replacing Grant at inside linebacker could be tougher than just replacing his position. "Mike was a great leader," Throckmorton said, "and that leadership is going to be missed."

Tyrone Johnson (6-0, 230, Sr.) returns and is expected to do a good job. "He played a lot last year, and good got experience." The Reid twins, Donald (6-0, 226, Sr.) and Ronald (6-1, 225, Sr.) also will be back and Throckmorton said he was impressed by their progress both on and off the field. "Donald did a great job for us last year and was probably our best pass defender. He has a good feel for the pass. Ron, well, I'd give anything to keep him healthy. He's still struggling with injuries and if he can be a spot player for us, I'll be happy. He does a great job in coverage and he'll put a lick on you."

The lone returning starter is P.J. Jordan (6-2, 226, Sr.) but — he must overcome some academic difficulties to be eligible, and there is some question as to whether he can do it. "He's got the talent and speed, but I just don't know if he'll be available." It will be later this summer before his future is known.

Larry Berry (6-2, 230, So.) has a knee problem and Throckmorton isn't sure if he can overcome that without surgery. He also could be used for spot play if he is healthy.

"It's quite likely we're going to be playing a lot of people. It's going to be a situation where you play a couple of downs, then come out and rest. Last year we had four people who played two-thirds of the time and the rest played about one-third. This at least, gives us some experience and that will help us this year, so maybe it's not as bad as it seems."

Throckmorton is also hopeful that some of the younger players, such as Steve Jacobs (6-2, 215, Jr.) can come along and be helpful. "I'd like to redshirt some of them, but I just don't know now." Another who could help is Bruce Simpson (6-2, 205, Fr.), a redshirt.

"One thing we did last year was to work hard on underneath (pass) coverage. Everyone looks at the secondary, but there are really three things to pass coverage: rush, the secondary and the underneath coverage. After the second game last year, we emphasized underneath coverage and it paid off for us. We got better as the year went on.

"We're a zone team and people are going to complete passes on us. But we feel if we can hold them to 150 to 200 yards passing, we've done a good job. That, and keep them out of the end zone. The stuff between the 20's is not that important."

The Pirates open the 1984 season on September 1 against Florida State, and Throckmorton isn't sure what to expect from the Seminoles. "We don't know who their quarterback is going to be or what they're going to run. We've heard that they're going to be more option oriented this year, so we just have to be ready for anything."

Next week: The Specialty Game.

Four Top College Golfers Join McDonald House Field

Four of the top collegiate golfers in the Atlantic Coast Conference will be among the celebrity golfers participating in the Ronald McDonald House Tournament in September according to tourney director Reynolds May.

The tournament will be held on September 10 to benefit the contruction of the Greenville Ronald McDonald House — a home-away-from-home for the families of children hospitalized in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A total of 42 teams will play in the Superball format tournament, each of which will consist of four local golfers and one celebrity guest.

The collegiates will include two members of the Wake Forest golf team, Jerry Haas and Billy Andrade, while the other two are University of North Carolina stars, Davis Love and John Inman.

Haas is the second of his family to play at Wake, following in the footsteps of brother Jay, now on the pro tour. A former Illinois state high school champion, Jerry was a high school All-America. He has tied for second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship for the past two seasons, while winning the Guilford Invitational last fall.

Andrade, a rising junior, is from Rhode Island. He was the American Junior Golf Association's Player of the Year and won the national junior championship. At Wake, he's won the Palmetto Invitational and Iron Duke Classic, and is considered the top golfer on the Deacon team. Just prior to the ACC tournament, however, he suffered a back injury, and played the rest of the season at below his usual game.

Inmnan, brother of tourning pro Joe Inman, is the defending NCAA champion, having broken the collegiate record of Ben Crenshaw in winning the tournament in Houston this past spring. Inman fired a 17-under-par total to take the national title.

Inman finished in a tie for fifth in the ACC tournament, and has won the Augusta College Invitational, while being the runner-up in the John Ryan Memorial at Duke and the Hilton Head-Palmetto Dunes.

His teammate, Davis Love is the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champ, capturing a four-stroke win with his three-under par finish. Davis also won the Hargrove B. Davis Tournament at Campbell and the Andy Bean-Green Lefe Invitational. The 1983 Long Drive champion of the NCAA, Love was unable to compete this year.

Davis is a rising junior at Chapel Hill, while Inman has completed his collegiate career but will aid with the UNC golf program this coming fall.

They will be accompanied by their coaches, Jesse Haddock of Wake Forest and Devon Brouse of North Carolina.

Navratilova Roars Back, Wins Third Straight Title

THE DAILY
SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 8, 1984

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rising to the challenge, Martina Navratilova roared back from a 3-0 first-set deficit to defeat Chris Evert Lloyd 7-6, 6-2 Saturday for her third consecutive Wimbledon women's singles title and her fifth overall.

She later teamed with Pam Shriver for a fourth straight women's doubles crown, defeating Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith 6-3, 6-4.

In the men's doubles final, Americans John McEnroe and Peter Fleming successfully defended their title, defeating Australians Paul McNamee and Pat Cash 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

McEnroe will go after his third Wimbledon singles championship and his second straight when he takes on fellow American Jimmy Connors in the men's final on Sunday. Connors also is a two-time Wimbledon champion.

Navratilova's victories came on the 100th anniversary of the first women's contest played on these hallowed grass courts and marked her fifth consecutive Grand Slam tournament triumphs in singles and doubles.

"You see all those past champions and they've done it three or four times, maybe, and here I've done it five times," she said. "It's hard to believe really."

The left-hander had nothing but praise for her opponent, who has won the singles title here three times.

"I told her at the (post-match) ceremony that she still has one more Wimbledon (championship) in her," she said of Lloyd, seeded second here and ranked No. 2 in the world behind Navratilova.

Indeed, Lloyd played one of the best games of her 14-year career and ripped through the opening three games, breaking Navratilova in the first and third games in the blistering heat on Centre Court.

"I finally reached the form I have been looking for all year. It's finally here and now I can say I want it again," Lloyd said. "After playing this final, it makes me want to play more this year.

"But I did not play a good game at all at 3-0. I got a little tentative, and with Martina you do not get many chances. Then when I did get a chance, she served great."

It was Navratilova's return of service that helped her win the coveted crown.

She won three of the first four points in the fourth game to take a 15-40 lead. But an unforced backhand error saved one break point for Lloyd, and she pulled to deuce when Navratilova rifled a backhand passing shot down the line.

Navratilova's opening-match jitters had disappeared by then, and she hit a backhand passing shot that bounced just inside the corner. Then she closed out the break with a forehand volley.

She closed out the next game at love, serving her second ace on the final point. That brought Navratilova to 2-3, and when she broke Lloyd in the eighth game at 30 the set was level at 4-4.

Lloyd saved one set point, but Navratilova held serve on the second with a smash.

The two then battled into a tiebreaker, and Navratilova took a 2-0 lead with a mini-break on a perfectly executed backhand drop volley.

But Lloyd refused to fold. A forehand pass down the line put the tiebreaker back on serve. Navratilova, however, won the next two points against Lloyd's serve, taking a 5-2 lead.

While Lloyd continued to play superbly, Navratilova raised her game, providing the only service breaks of the second set. Those came in the third and seventh game.

"She was hitting the balls really deep and she was coming in on the right balls and volleying very well," Navratilova said of Lloyd. "She has a very good volley and is more than adequate at the net."

In the eighth game, Navratilova, serving for the match, moved out to a 40-love lead, giving her triple match point. And still Lloyd refused to fold, battling back to deuce and reaching break point with a cross-court forehand service return.

Lloyd saved a fourth match point with a cross-court forehand passing shot. But Navratilova continued the pressure, and on her fifth match point she closed it out with a backhand cross-court passing shot.

"I will be thinking about that first set for a long time," Lloyd said. "I played unbelievably in those first three games ... I came in well and returned serve well when I wasn't being aced.

"Her serve is a great weapon and really helps her game. She was serving bullets, like McEnroe, and you find yourself just picking a side and guessing," Lloyd said.

It was the fourth time the two have met here in the final, and the fourth time Navratilova has won. They have split their 60 career meetings with Navratilova having captured the last 12.

"Nobody has played that many times," Navratilova said of her long-time rivalry. "I wish we could quit right now and never have to play each other again.

"I really wish we could end up even because we have played so many times on so many different surfaces, and it's not fair for one to come up better than the other."

In the men's doubles, McEnroe and Fleming were playing in their sixth Wimbledon final. They won in 1979, 1981 and last year.

The American Davis Cup pair needed 2 hours, 22 minutes to down the Australian duo as McEnroe never lost his serve.

McNamara, who won here in 1980 and 1982 with fellow Australian Peter McNamee, had never lost a doubles match at Wimbledon to McEnroe-Fleming until Saturday.

"I felt we had pretty good control but got a little bit careless at times," McEnroe said. "We played well enough. I don't think we should have lost the sets we lost.

"Playing doubles helps me. Both times I have won the singles I have won the doubles. It's good practice for the return and serve, which basically on grass are the most important shots."

Watson Treads Shark Infested Waters

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Greg Norman, who turned back Jack Nicklaus for the Canadian Open title last week, now goes head-to-head with Tom Watson over the last 18 holes of the Western Open.

Norman, the long-hitting Australian known as the "Great White Shark," cruised into the third round lead Saturday, salvaging a one-under-par 71 after a slow and uncertain start.

Watson, tied with former U.S. Open and PGA champion Larry Nelson a single stroke back going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize, insisted it's more than a 2-man race.

"The field is too bunched up," Watson said after a glance at the scoreboard, which showed 13 players grouped within four strokes of the top spot.

"There's too much trouble, too many hard holes on this golf course, too many players too close, to start playing match-play. It'll probably go down to the last couple of holes."

But it was Norman, and his 209 total, seven shots under par on the Butler National Golf Club course, that claimed Watson's attention.

"It was just a matter of time before he started producing the way he's been here recently," Watson said of the man who has won twice, lost a playoff for the U.S. Open and had a 10th place finish in his last four starts, a period in which he's won more than $200,000.

"He'll be a hard man to beat.

"He's riding the crest of a wave, just coasting right now," Watson said.

"I'm a confidence player," Norman said. "When I win a golf tournament I get more relaxed, maybe 10 percent more relaxed. Once I get that confidence, I feel I can do anything with a golf ball.

"And that's the way things are going right now."

Watson, twice the winner of this old title and currently the game's leading money-winner, and Larry Nelson finished three rounds at 210, a single stroke off the pace. Those three players, Norman, Watson and Nelson, will form the last group off the tee in Sunday's final round.

"That's good. I can see what he's doing," Watson said after his hard-won 70 that he described as "a struggling round, an interesting round. I putted great — and that's the only reason I shot 70."

Nelson had the best round of the tournament and was within a single stroke of the course record with a 7-under-par 65 that included 10 one-putts and a chip-in for a birdie.

Two strokes back at 211 were George Burns, who matched par 72 in the mild, sunny weather, and T.C. Chen of Taiwan, who had a 74. They were followed by Curtis Strange, Dave Ogrin and Scott Hoch at 212. Strange closed up with a 68. Ogrin birdied the last two holes for 72 and Hoch had 73.

D.A. Weibring, who shared the second round lead with Chen, slipped to a 76 and was in a group at 213 that included PGA champion Hal Sutton and defending title-holder Mark McCumber. Sutton had a 69 and McCumber 71.

Norman, whose vast length off the tee and sun-bleached white hair has made him a popular, recognizable figure with the galleries, said the big crowd helped get him started.

"I couldn't get going," he said. "I was just walking in the park for the first six holes. The gallery picked me up. I started talking to myself, saying they'd come to see me play and I owed it to them to do better than this.

"My concentration picked up and I played pretty well the rest of the way," he said.

Norman, two over par for the day, immediately hit a wedge shot to six feet and birdied the seventh, got to within a stroke of the lead with a little chip to 30 inches for birdie-4 on the 12th, tied Watson for the lead with an 18-footer on the 14th and got the lead alone when Watson missed the green and bogeyed the 16th.

Peterson 3-Up On Nancy Lopez

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Lauri Peterson came within inches of a $5,000 ace, fired a women's course record 7-under-par 65 and assumed a three-stroke lead over Nancy Lopez Saturday in the LPGA Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

The 24-year-old Arizona State University product, seeking her second pro golf victory in 10 months, made up eight shots in the first nine holes and 10 strokes in all on faltering 36-hole leader Dianne Dailey.

Peterson, playing the front side of Glengarry Country Club in 5-under-par 31, posted a 54-hole total of 205, 11 strokes below par.

However, she had to survive a back-nine charge by Lopez, bidding for her 29th career victory. Lopez, who started the round seven shots behind Dailey, dipped 6-under par in a six-hole stretch to pull even with Peterson.

Peterson regained the sole lead with a birdies on the 14th and 15th holes and stayed on top the rest of the way.

Lopez shot a 66. She stood at 8-under-par 208 heading into Sunday's final round in the battle for the first prize of $26,250.

The previous course record were the 68s by Peterson and Dailey in the first round Thursday.

Peterson, playing head-to-head with Dailey in the last threesome of the cool, cloudy day, birdied five of her first nine holes, but the most spectacular came at No. 8.

Her tee shot hit in front of the hole, bounced once in the cup and bounded 15 inches past the hole. She tapped in the putt to take the lead for the first time.

That put Peterson 8 under for the tournament and gave her a two-shot swing on Dailey. Her playing partner hit into a bunker and took a bogey 4 to drop back to 6 under for the event.

If Peterson had aced the 182-yard hole, she would have earned a $5,000 bonus in the $175,000 tournament.

Dailey, winless in her five pro seasons, started the round with a two-shot lead. She struggled to a 76 and fell into fourth place with a total of 213.

Dailey, never higher than third in her pro career, built a three-shot lead with a birdie on the second hole. However, she drove into the woods on the fifth hole for a bogey and then bogeyed the eighth and double bogeyed the ninth hole to fall off the pace.

Then it was Lopez's turn to mount a charge. The wife of Houston Astros infielder Ray Knight birdied holes 7, 8, 10 and 11 and then posted an eagle 3 on the 432-yard 12th hole.

Marlene Hagge, 50, the oldest active player on the current LPGA Tour, was third with 70-211.

Patty Sheehan, this year's No. 1 money-winner, shot 73-215 while Amy Alcott, the winner at Hershey, Pa., last week, had 70-216.

Chris Won't Forget Her Lost Chances

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "I will be thinking about that first set for a long time," Chris Evert Lloyd said after losing to Martina Navratilova in the women's singles final Saturday at Wimbledon.

"Martina does not give you many chances and I certainly had one or two." Lloyd, 29, written off for the final by some players and observers because of her 11 successive defeats by Navratilova, played magnificently for long periods in a high-quality title game.

At the start, when she ripped off passing shots and service returns, she broke her opponent twice and led 3-0.

But the defending champion got her powerful service together, edged home in a tiebreaker and then took control to win 7-6, 6-2.

"It seemed when I did have chances she served great," said Lloyd. "It's a great weapon she has. When she serves like that, you just have to pick a side and guess.

"I tried to take the net away from her and every time I got a second serve I felt I could win the point. But her first serve just kept hitting the lines.

"In this match, I felt I could win as compared to previous matches when I went on the court thinking that I just wanted to win some games and give Martina a good match.

"I knew I was playing well. This is the form I've been looking for all year, and it wasn't there. Now it is."

A revitalized Lloyd said she was particularly pleased with her mental attitude during these championships.

"It's been a long time since I've really wanted to go out there and play great tennis. It came back this Wimbledon. I'd tried to talk myself into it but it just hadn't been there. That's the best I've played all year," she said.

"I've been a lot calmer here. At the French I was a wreck for some reason. I just felt a lot of pressure on me. The last few days, I've been relaxed. When you hit well in practice, it encourages you in matches."

Lloyd said she was confident of maintaining and even improving on her new-found form — and of getting back at Navratilova.

"If I keep my nerves in check and control them, there's no reason why I can't play great again. I still feel I can get a little bit better and that she (Navratilova) cannot. In that case, there is nowhere for her to go except to stay the same or go down whereas there are still areas of my game I can work on."

Asked why she had not been playing so well this year, Lloyd replied: "I have not been as singleminded as I could have been. The mental part of my game is 80 percent. I can't fall back on my physical prowess because I'm not as good an athlete as a lot of these girls. My strength is mental."

Lloyd said her goals now were "to improve and win another Wimbledon or U.S. Open. If I can hold on to the game I played today, I can play a level higher than I have been recently."

She said her new determination had been prompted partially by the disparaging remarks of a group of other players.

"It's ridiculous to write off anyone who has been at the top. I question the intelligence behind it. But It backfired, didn't it? They just got me fired up."

Martina: Anyone Could Do Same

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Five-time Wimbledon champion Martina Navratilova said Saturday that other women tennis players can perform as well as she does — with a little more effort.

"They are all capable of doing the things I do," she said after winning her third consecutive Wimbledon single's crown with a straight-sets victory over Chris Evert Lloyd.

"They can go out and run on the track, lift weights, play basketball, eat the right foods — which helps — and practice three or four hours a day," she said when asked how much her powerful physique contributed to her success.

"I was gifted 10 years ago, I was gifted five years ago, but I didn't do much with it," said the 27-year-old Czechoslovak, now a U.S. citizen.

"Nobody complained then. Suddenly, I started winning and everybody is saying I'm too strong, too fast. They've got legs, too. It's time for them to start working and raise their game. I just work harder at it," said Navratilova, who needed just 84 minutes to defeat Lloyd 7-6, 6-2.

"Years ago, I was doing the same as everybody else, using the tournaments to get into shape. Then I started rethinking and started working out before the tournaments. It paid off.

"The fact people say I'm too strong just doesn't hold water," she said.

Navratilova became only the third woman and the fifth player of all time to win the elusive Grand Slam of tennis when she captured the French Open last month.

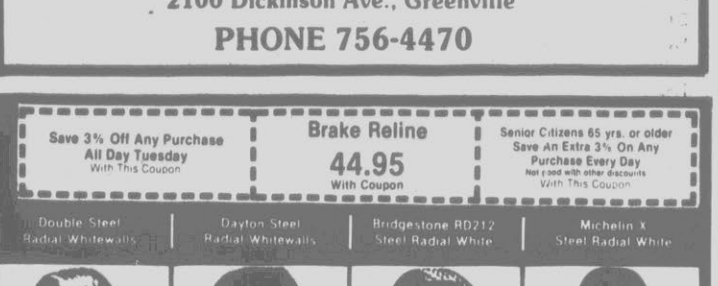

When she beat Lloyd on Saturday, she started on the Grand Slam trail again but there were times when she was in deep trouble, especially in a closely fought opening set.

Navratilova lost her first two service games and trailed 0-3 before putting her game together. She edged her opponent in the first set tiebreaker and went on to win the second set comfortably.

"When it got to the tiebreaker, I was just happy to be there," she said. "She had been zeroing in on me and my first serve in those opening games was pathetic. I haven't seen Chris move as well for a long time."

"The last few times we played, I thought she was too passive. But today she was hitting really deep and coming in on short, mid-court balls."

Cowens Guides Mariners To Win

TORONTO (AP) — Al Cowens is wearing out Toronto pitching.

The Seattle right fielder was hitting .474 against Toronto this season prior Saturday's game. He promptly added to his numbers with a three-run homer in the first inning and later added another and an RBI grounder in helping the Mariners snap a six-game losing streak by defeating the Blue Jays 8-4.

"I don't care who it is I'm facing," said Cowens. "I just want to get my hits any way I can."

His homer in the first inning was an opposite-field shot to right-center.

"I was just able to get it up into the wind," Cowens said. "The wind helped it a lot. But you've got to go with the elements. He (Jim Clancy) threw me a good breaking ball which I fouled off, then a fastball outside which I rode out."

The setback also ended Toronto's four-game winning streak.

"It isn't exactly relief," said Seattle Manager Del Crandall. "But when you've lost a few in a row, it's certainly worth waiting to win that one."

Toronto Manager Bobby Cox, meanwhile, is showing patience with Clancy, who lasted only 2 1-3 innings in dropping his fourth start in a row and became the first 10-game loser in the American League.

"You keep pitching him and hope that the balls are hit at the fielders," said Cox. "I know he pitched great earlier. That's the reason you don't give up on him."

Clancy ran into trouble into the first inning when Jack Perconte and Spike Owen singled, putting runners on first and third. Clancy retired the next two batters, but Cowens tied into a 1-0 pitch for his ninth home run of the season.

The Mariners chased Clancy in the third when they scored three runs on four hits. With one out, Al Davis and Pat Putnam singled. Jim Acker took over and, after striking out the first batter he faced, yielded an RBI single to Steve Henderson. Jim Presley followed with a two-run double that glanced off the glove of right fielder George Bell.

Seattle's Mike Moore, 4-6, allowed nine hits and four runs in 8 2-3 innings before Mike Stanton came on to register his fifth save.

Toronto came back with three runs in the bottom of the third on Alfredo Griffin's solo homer and a two-run shot by Lloyd Moseby, his 14th of the season.

The Mariners made it 8-3 in the fourth on a run-scoring double by Owen and an RBI grounder by Cowens. Toronto, which began play six games behind Detroit in the AL East, scored its final run in the eighth on Bell's double and a single by Rance Mulliniks.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eddie Murray hit a grand slam home run after Baltimore stranded three earlier runners on third base and Scott McGregor scattered eight hits as the Orioles defeated the Kansas City Royals 6-2 in the opener of Saturday's twi-night double-header.

With Baltimore leading 2-1, Murray connected for his 17th homer of the season off Larry Gura, 9-5, in the seventh inning after the Orioles loaded the bases with two out on two walks and a single by Floyd Rayford.

Baltimore's first two runs scored in the second on a two-out double by Benny Ayala after Murray singled for the first of his three hits and left fielder Butch Davis dropped Gary Roenicke's routine fly ball.

McGregor, 10-7, who allowed 11 hits in each of his last three starts, eased out of several jams while being helped by three double plays.Willie Wilson grounded into a double play in the third inning after singles by Greg Pryor and U.L. Washington and Roenicke then made a spectacular over-the-shoulder catch of a drive by Davis to the left-field fence. Another twin-killing preceded a single by Hal McRae in the sixth.

Kansas City scored its first run in the fifth on a double play grounder by Washington after loading the bases on a walk to Steve Balboni, a single by Dan Slaught and a bunt single by Pryor. George Brett opened the ninth with his eighth homer for the Royals' other run.

Knight Set To Name His Starters For Olympics

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — U.S. Olympic basketball Coach Bobby Knight said Saturday that he still has not selected his starting lineup, but will make the decision shortly before Sunday afternoon's exhibition game between the Olympians and an NBA squad.

"I've already said I don't have them (picked)," Knight told persistent reporters during a Saturday afternoon press conference at the University of Iowa's Carver-Hawkeye Arena. "I'll have them tomorrow."

Assistant Olympic basketball Coach George Raveling, who is the head basketball coach at Iowa, confirmed that Knight had not yet made up his mind about starters by Saturday. Raveling said the announcement will come shortly before Sunday's game, which will be televised nationally by NBC starting at 2 p.m.

"I think the players are also interested in seeing the starting lineup," Raveling said.

"The starting team Bob puts on the floor in Iowa City will be our starting lineup" going into Olympic competition, Raveling said.

While Knight's starting team has been an ongoing topic of speculation, the National Basketball Association team grabbed headlines Friday when it was revealed that several of the stars reported to be playing for the pro team were not coming to Iowa City.

Larry Fleischer, an official of the NBA Players' Association, blamed NBC for erroneously reporting that all-stars Magic Johnson, of the Los Angeles Lakers, and Isiah Thomas, of the Detroit Pistons, would be playing in the exhibition game. The network also erroneously reported that Fred Brown, who played his college ball at Iowa and now plays for the Seattle SuperSonics, would be appearing, Fleischer said.

Asked if the changes in the NBA team's lineup present a problem, Knight said he doesn't keep track of who is scheduled to play.

"I imagine they'll (all) play very hard and that's the only thing I'm interested in," he said.

Knight said he's been very pleased with the NBA players in two previous exhibition games, both of which the Olympians won. The Olympians also won their other exhibition game, against a squad of Indiana University alumni.

The team has five more exhibition dates after Sunday's game. Their first Olympic competition, against China, is July 29.

The NBA players who will be in Iowa City Sunday include Danny Ainge, of Boston; Derek Harper, Dallas; Dominique Wilkins, Atlanta; Kelly Tripuka, Detroit; Clark Kellogg, Indiana; Buck Williams, New Jersey; Clyde Drexler, Portland; Mike McGee, Los Angeles; and Bill Walton, San Diego.

Yarborough Wins Second IROC Run

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran stock car driver Cale Yarborough, who finished last in the first round of the International Race of Champions (IROC), took the second event in the four-race series on a road course at Burke Lakefront Airport Saturday.

His last-place finish in the opener at Michigan International Speedway June 16 gave him the pole position Saturday.

"That's the way I had it figured," joked the NASCAR driver. "I figured if I was running last at Michigan I could start off real good."

But Yarborough let Indy car driver Tom Sneva move into the lead on the first lap of the 30-lap race around the 2.48-mile, 12-turn course, surging ahead on the 25th lap and winning by eight seconds over Britain's Derek Bell, with an average speed of 99.053 miles per hour for the 74.4-mile distance.

When Sneva spun out on the eighth turn in lap 25, he cut his right rear tire and had to go to the pits. IROC regulations required him to have all four tires changed and he was penalized a lap, resulting in his finishing last in a 12-car field.

"Everything was going fine — I was on a Sunday drive conserving my brakes when I cut the right rear tire on the apex of the curve," said Sneva. "A lot of guys were doing the same thing. I came out a little worse."

"It's been five years since I've been on a road course," said Yarborough. "I figured to let Tom go there for a while and maybe give me some good lessons...I knew I'd make my move later."

Yarborough said he went into the race figuring on letting someone else move into the lead.

"I didn't want to lead the first lap," he said. "The few practice laps I had were the first time I ever saw this road course. I felt like if I had jumped out in the lead more than likely I might have overdid it somewhere, and I wanted to make sure I had all my markers down good before I started going harder."

The IROC series, in which all drivers use identically prepared Chevrolet Camaros assigned to them by lot, features five NAS-CAR stock car drivers, four from the Championship Auto Racing Teams Indy-car circuit, two sports car drivers and a former Formula One champion.

Stock car driver Neil Bonnett, who won the first race in the series, finished sixth Saturday and held a one-point lead in the IROC standings over Benny Parsons, another NAS-CAR driver, who was fourth. Bonnett had 30 points, Parsons 29 and Indy car driver Gordon Johncock, who finished third behind Bell, had 28.

Yarborough's victory moved him into fourth place with 24 points and Bell and Darrell Waltrip were tied for fifth with 22. Waltrip finished fifth Saturday.

Barber, Funseth Tied In Seniors

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Miller Barber, looking for his second consecutive senior tour victory, remained tied for the lead with Rod Funseth Saturday after the second round of the Greater Syracuse Seniors Pro Golf Classic.

Both fired 1-under-par 70s to finish the second round at 3-under par 139, two shots ahead of John Kalinka and Gardner Dickinson, going into Sunday's final round.

The winner of the 54-hole tournament, being played on the 6,672-yard par 71 Bellevue Country Club course, will claim $30,000 for first place.

The seniors golf tour is open to professional and amateur golfers 50 years of age and older.

In Saturday's round, Barber, who edged Arnold Palmer by two strokes last week to win the Senior Open in nearby Rochester, opened with a birdie on the 425-yard par 4 first hole. He birdied three holes on the front nine, but bogeyed two consecutive holes on the backside to finish tied with Funseth.

Funseth, whose last tour victory was in May 1983, duplicated his front nine total of 35 on the backside with a birdie on the 190-yard par-3 13th hole.

Torre's Move Pays Off For Braves

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Atlanta Manager Joe Torre made a significant change about a week ago, moving Claudell Washington back from third in the batting order to the leadoff spot.

Washington has hit .333 since the move, including his 11th home run Saturday in the Braves' 5-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Hitting first is my favorite," said Washington, who also walked twice and scored the first run of the game."I'm more selective hitting first. I concentrate better. The books show I hit 100 points higher leading off."

Washington said that as leadoff man he looks for a walk.

"I'm more patient, try to get on base anyway I can. When I hit third I'm more aggressive and tend to pop up more. Batting third I don't accept a walk unless the pitcher is wild. It means a lot when you get a man on first with no outs. Eight out of 10 times he scores in that first inning."

Washington, who has led off the first inning with a home run five times this year, said he also gets much better pitches in the leadoff spot.

Torre said he plans to keep Washington in the leadoff spot because "he makes things happen."

Washington surprised the Phillies in the first inning by going from first to third on an infield single by Randy Johnson after walking on four pitches. He scored when third baseman Mike Schmidt booted Rafael Ramirez's grounder.Johnson went to third on the error, Schmidt's 18th of the season, and Ramirez wound up on second.

Second baseman Juan Samuel then caught Dale Murphy's looping fly in short right field and doubled Ramirez off second, but Johnson tagged up and scored on the play.

Atlanta scored again in the third when Washington led off with his home run and the Braves it 4-0 in the fourth on a single by Glenn Hubbard, who scored when right fielder Sixto Lezcano let Alex Trevino's single get past him and roll to the wall.

Atlanta starter Rick Camp, 4-1, pitched 5 2-3 innings and earned the victory with relief help from Gene Garber and Donnie Moore. Shane Rawley, acquired recently from the New York Yankees, suffered his first defeat as a Phillie after winning his first start.

The Phillies got their first hit with one out in the fourth when Tim Corcoran doubled. Lezcano then singled him home one out later. They picked up an unearned run off Garber in the eighth on a two-base throwing error by third baseman Johnson and Ozzie Virgil's single. Atlanta added a run in the ninth on pinch-hitter Rufino Linares' sacrifice fly.

Moore, who pitched the ninth for Atlanta, allowed a one-out double to Von Hayes but struck out the side and recorded his ninth save.

It was the sixth loss in eight games for the Phillies, who began play in third place in the National League West, three games behind Chicago.

San Francisco.....7
Chicago.....2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chili Davis, who was back in the minor leagues trying to fight his way out of a batting slump one year ago, much prefers his current status as a big-league All-Star.

"I'm soaking it up. I love it," the San Francisco outfielder said Saturday after a 3-for-3 performance in the Giants' 7-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Rookie outfielder Dan Gladden also had three hits in the victory, which ended a four-game losing streak. The Giants totaled 14 hits to support pitcher Mike Krukow, who allowed six hits in 8 2-3 innings before needing last-out help from Gary Lavelle.

Davis was named to the National League All-Star team after Thursday night's game with the Cubs. He got two hits Friday night and on Saturday he raised his average to .298.

"I'd like to go into the All-Star Game as a legitimate All-Star, batting .300. I can't go in batting .288," Davis said, referring to his average at the time of his selection.

Davis had a fine rookie season with the Giants, batting .261 with 19 homers and 76 RBIs in 1982, but slumped to .233 last year and spent a few weeks in Class AAA.

The All-Star Game will be played Tuesday night in the Giants' home park.

Besides Krukow's strong pitching, he drove in the lead run with a sacrifice fly in the third inning.

The Cubs had a four-game winning streak broken and fell out of first place in the National League East, four percentage points behind the New York Mets, who played Cincinnati on Saturday night.

The Giants took a 3-1 lead with two unearned runs in the fourth inning off Cubs starter Rick Reuschel, 4-5. Krukow's bases-loaded sacrifice fly field broke a 1-1 tie and Dan Gladden followed with an RBI single.

Krukow, 5-7, retired 13 straight batters after the Cubs scored in the second on a triple by Thad Bosley and a single by Ron Cey. Dan Rohn hit his first major-league home run, a pinch-hit shot, in the eighth inning for Chicago. It was his first at-bat of the season. Gary Lavelle got the last out for San Francisco.

Jeff Leonard drove in San Francisco's first run with a groundout in the first inning and added an RBI single for the first of three runs in the eighth. In the fourth, Cubs left fielder Gary Matthews dropped a line drive by Brad Wellman to load the bases and set up the Giants' opportunity for the two unearned runs. Joel Youngblood was hit by a pitch and Johnnie LeMaster singled before Wellman reached base.

Davis singled in the fifth and eventually scored on a single by Scot Thompson.

The Giants wrapped it up with three runs off Warren Brusstar in the eighth on RBI singles by Leonard and Thompson plus Youngblood's run-scoring double.

Coke, True Value Win

Little League

Coca-Cola.....1
Sportsworld.....1

Coca-Cola, despite not winning the North State Little League regular season title, proved again its mastery of champ Sportsworld Saturday with a 1-0 win for the league's post-season tournament championship.

The victory, Coke's third in four tries against Sportsworld, sends it into Monday's City Championship, a best-of-three series against Tar Heel winner True Value Hardware.

Walter Gatlin tossed a three-hitter in the shutout. He had a no-hitter until the third when Jason Wing broke that open. The other two hits came in the sixth inning. Gatlin struck out 13, walked four and hit one along the way.

Meanwhile, his teammates were having trouble finding the ball also, getting only two hits off loser Tim Moore. Moore fanned 14 and walked four.

The game's lone run came in the third inning. Derrick Clark got the game's first hit with one out. A wild pitch moved him to second and with two away, Gatlin came to his own cause, banging out a single to score Clark with what proved to be the game's only run.

True Value.....3
Carroll & Assoc.....1

True Value Hardware, the victor in the regular season race in the Tar Heel Little League, downed Carroll & Associates, 3-1, Saturday afternoon to claim the league's post-season tournament title also.

The win boosted True Value into the best-of-three series for the City Championship, starting Monday. True Value will face North State winner Coca-Cola for the championship.

True Value pushed ahead with a run in the first inning, then added the clinchers in the third.

Matthew Cagle got a one-out single and with two away, Ken Sawyer cracked a home run for a 3-0 edge.

Carroll & Associates came back with a run in the fifth, but could rally no further.

C&A got only two hits off the pitching of Sawyer, who struck out 13 and walked nine. Sawyer led the True Value hitting with three, while Cagle added two.

13 Babe Ruth

Pitt County.....4
Washington.....3

Jim Faulkner drove in Ty Little with a triple in the top of the seventh inning to allow Pitt County's 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League All-Stars to nip Washington, 4-3, Saturday afternoon.

The win moved Pitt County into round three of the winners' bracket of the double elimination tournament, to face the winner of Sunday's Greenville-Nash County game on Monday at 6 p.m.

The Greenville-Nash game, scheduled for Saturday, was rained out and will be played today at 3 p.m. Greene County and Washington play at 5 p.m., followed by Martin County and the loser of the Greenville-Nash game at 7 p.m.

Pitt County inched into the lead in the second inning with a run. Anthony Harrison singled and stole second, moving to third on a passed ball. He scored on Darrell Moye's ground out.

Washington came up with three runs in the bottom of the third, taking a 3-1 lead. Pitt then rallied for two in the sixth.

Bronswell Patrick reached on a single and moved up on a wild pitch. Harrison singled and stole second. Kervin Vines struck out but when the ball got away from the catcher, Patrick scored on the throw to first to get the batter. Moye then doubled to drive in Harrison.

Little got a one out single in the seventh and scored when Faulkner tripled to give Pitt the win.

Windy Return To Candlestick Park

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The last time baseball's All-Star Game was played at Candlestick Park there were seven errors, a sudden gale blew a pitcher off the rubber, 95 fans suffered heatstroke and cries were heard to ship the national pastime to Russia.

It was 1961. Roger Maris had 33 of his record 61 homers when baseball paused for the first of two "midseason classics" that summer.

He was joined on the American League squad by six other New York Yankees — Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra, Moose Skowron, Tony Kubek, Elston Howard and Whitey Ford.

The National League boasted a lineup that included Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Roberto Clemente, Warren Spahn and Sandy Koufax, all eventual Hall of Famers.

The Nationals scored twice in the 10th inning to beat the Americans 5-4 as six NL pitchers held the AL hitters to four hits and struck out 12. Three weeks later, in Boston, the second All-Star Game ended in a 1-1 tie when rain halted play after nine innings of a forgettable affair.

But the first game that year will be remembered forever as the one in which Stu Miller, San Francisco's lanky junkball pitcher, balked when he was jolted by a gust of wind in the ninth inning.

Miller's balk — he claimed he was nudged by a 60 mph blast — was the first of his career. It set up the tying run and capped a day that one scribe called "an exercise in inefficiency."

The game started in humid 81 degree weather, and 22 of the 44,115 fans succumbed to the heat by the second inning, five with apparent heart attacks after climbing "cardiac hill" to the ballpark.

"It was a perfect day, the best day I'd ever seen at Candlestick," said Miller, who gained the victory when Aaron, Mays doubled and Clemente singled in the 10th.

"We were sitting in the bullpen, nice and warm, then about the seventh inning the wind started kicking up and it got cold. It was like two different days," recalled Miller, who will throw out the first pitch along with Hall of Famer Carl Hubbell at Tuesday's All-Star Game at Candlestick.

Fifty years ago, Hubbell gave one of the game's finest performances when he struck out, in order, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin.

As the wind and chill settled into Candlestick in the seventh inning in 1961, the pitchers in the bullpen tossed blankets over their feet to keep warm. Dust storms swirled around the infield. Napkins, hot dog wrappers and cups whipped across the stadium.

Al Kaline, who took over for Mantle, complained that "even running for a ball in center field fine particles of sand get in your eyes."

The Nationals led 3-1 after eight innings, but the Americans were threatening in the ninth with one run in, Maris on first and Kaline on second when NL Manager Danny Murtaugh brought in Miller to relieve Koufax.

"Rocky Colavito was the batter," the gray-haired but still lean Miller said as he spoke in the liquor store he owns 15 miles south of Candlestick. "I took my position and checked the runners. All of a sudden the wind pushed my shoulder forward.

"The umpire behind the plate, Stan Landes, couldn't see that it was a balk but I could hear the players and coaches yelling from first base and third."

Landes consulted with the other umps and called the balk, telling the 167-pound Miller it didn't matter that the wind had caused his movement.

Miller stood behind his store counter and demonstrated how he was blown forward.

"I was not blown off the mound, like most people think," Miller said. "It was just a slight motion forward. My feet didn't even move. I get blown farther off the mound every time someone tells the story."

That's the way he remembers it now. Back then, observers saw his feet leave the pitching rubber, and Miller was quoted after the game as saying the wind "lifted me right off the rubber."

The runners advanced into scoring position. Ken Boyer, one of the game's all-time fielding third basemen, then committed the first of two embarrassing errors when he booted Colavito's grounder, sending Kaline home with the tying run.

After the Nationals failed to score in the bottom of the ninth, Boyer made a wild throw in the 10th that allowed Nellie Fox to score all the way from first base. The wind also was blamed for that error.

Miller went back to the dugout thinking he'd be the losing pitcher, but he wound up the winner with the hits by Aaron, Mays and Clemente.

The clutch hitting was virtually forgotten afterward and all the talk was about the wind and Stu Miller.

"For my sake, it was the best thing that ever happened to me," Miller said. "People would always say 'Stu, who?' before that game. Now they remember me as an All-Star, the one who got blown off the mound."

It was to be his only All-Star appearance, despite a 9-1 start several years later and a generally good career.

And if some baseball writers at the time had their way, it would have been the last All-Star Game ever.

"It would be an enlightened act of propaganda if we, as a nation, relinquished all claims to baseball," wrote syndicated columnist Jimmy Cannon. "International respect for the Soviets would diminish in the neutral lands if we conceded this was a game the Russians invented. After watching the All-Star Game yesterday, as a patriot, I want those bums to keep it forever."

Bethel Youths Are Qualifiers

RALEIGH — Tedric Howard of Bethel won the 200-meter dash for 10-and-under at the Regional Junior Olympics held in Raleigh on Saturday.

Two other Bethel youths also joined in placing in the event, also in the 10-and-under age group.

Howard took the championship in his age group with a timing of 29.5 seconds.

Pitt and Williams joined with Nick Cease and Matthew Jones of New Bern to win second place in the 4x400 meter relay.

Fernando Joins NL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Joaquin Andujar was scratched from the National League All-Star roster Saturday and replaced by Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Andujar, who has a 13-6 record and a league-leading four shutouts, has returned to his native Dominican Republic due to the serious illness of his grandfather, it was announced by National League officials here.

Left-hander Valenzuela, who led the league with 128 strikeouts after Friday's games, was named to the NL roster for the fourth consecutive time. Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens, who will lead the National League squad, chose Valenzuela as Andujar's replacement.

The 55th All-Star Game will be played Tuesday night at Candlestick Park.

Pitt Completes Sweep Of Edenton

EDENTON — Doug Coley banged out four hits and hurled Pitt County to a 13-3 victory over Edenton Friday night and a sweep of their best-of-three series in the first round of the American Legion Area I East playoffs.

Coley, who went eight innings, scattered seven hits, walked one and struck out eight in claiming his fourth win against one loss this year.

Pitt, in capturing the second game of the series, moved past Edenton in two games, taking the the first game, 4-3, in 15 innings Thursday night.

Post 39 will now take on Snow Hill in the second round of the series. That, also a best-of-three series, is scheduled to get underway Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field in Greenville. The second game is to be played Wednesday at Snow Hill, with a third game, if needed, on Thursday, back in Greenville.

The winner moves on to the Area I East finals, a best-of-five series. Wayne County, the regular season winner, will be facing the winner of the Kinston-Rocky Mount series (tied 1-1 after Friday's second game) in the other semifinal series.

Edenton, which had taken the lead early in the Thursday night game, did the same on Friday night, getting a run in the first and two more in the third. But this time, Pitt didn't wait around until the ninth to tie it up, scoing three times in the third then storming ahead in the fifth.

Doug White, as he had Thursday, led off Edenton's half of the first with a base hit and Chuck Rousseau followed with a single. An error on the play let White move on to third and he scored on a passed ball.

Rousseau, who had advanced to third on the play, died there, however.

Pitt moved ahead in the top of the third, scoring three times. With one away, Toby Fischer walked and Coley doubled him to third. Billy Michel's sacrifice fly scored Fischer and Mike Kinley singled in Coley, moving to second on the relay home. Traye Fuqua followed with a double, scoring Kinley for a 3-1 lead.

But Edenton rallied for two of its own in the bottom of the inning, tying it up. Rousseau walked and with two away, Rich Thatch grounded back near the mound and Coley fell fielding the ball and lobbed the ball to first from a sitting position, only to have it errored. Scott Dizon followed with a double, scoring both runners.

Only one other runner reached as far as second base for Edenton the rest of the night.

Pitt moved ahead for good in the fifth, scoring four more times. With one away, Coley doubled and scored on a single by Michel, who moved up when the ball was errored on the relay. Kinley singled and Fuqua singled in Michel, then stole second. Roger Moye's sacrifice fly scored Kinley and Daniel Keel doubled in Fuqua for a 7-3 lead.

An eighth run scored in the sixth. Fischer reached on a two-base error, scoring on Coley's single.

Pitt added three more in the seventh. Moye singled and stole second with Keel getting a hit. Steve Mills walked and Jackie Conway reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Moye. An error on the play let Keel score two. Conway and Mills pulled a double steal with Mills scoring.

The final two crossed in the eighth. Michel singled and Fuqua walked. Moye singled in Michel and Keel walked. Mills reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Moye with the final run.

In addition to Coley's four hits, Michel, Kinley, Fuqua, Moye and Keel each contributed two. Rousseau led the Edenton hitting with a pair.

Snow Hill Wins Series In Two

WILSON — Randy Daniels hit a three-run triple and Billy Godley had a two-run homer to highlight a seven-run outburst by Snow Hill in the fourth inning Friday night as Snow Hill downed Wilson, 12-4, in American Legion playoff action.

The win gave Snow Hill a sweep of their best-of-three series in the first round of the Area I East playoffs. Snow Hill won Thursday's opening game, 3-0.

Snow Hill now advances into the second round of the playoffs, facing Pitt County, a winner in two games over Edenton.

That series, also a best of three, is scheduled to get underway on Tuesday at Greenville.

Wilson took the initial lead in the game, scoring once in the first inning. David Allen walked and Rusty Dail reached on a bunt single. William Chapman then singled to load the bases and a sacrifice fly by Tommy Boswell plated Allen.

Snow Hill tied it up in the top of the third. Randy Daniels singled and moved up on a fielder's choice. He was balked to third and scored on a wild pitch.

Wilson went back out in the bottom of the frame, scoring one more run, but that lead was short-lived — and the last for the team.

Snow Hill came roaring back in the top of the fourth to score seven times. Joey Steppe reached on an error and Todd Grant singled. With two away, Kevin Langston walked to fill the sacks. Nat Norris singled in Steppe and Anthony Russo singled to score Grant.

Daniels followed with a triple, driving in Langston, Norris and Russo. Godley then capped the inning with his homer, also scoring Daniels. That gave Snow Hill an 8-2 lead, and Wilson never overcame it.

Snow Hill added two in the sixth and two more in the eighth, while Wilson picked up two more in the seventh.

Daniels led the Snow Hill hitting with four, while Russo and Godley each had three, one of Godley's a double. Norris and Grant each had two. Dail led the Wilson hitting with three.

Itchy Nose?

Jimmy Connors of the United States holds his nose in disapproval during his semifinal match against Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia on Wimbledon's Centre Court Friday. Connors, warned for unsportsmanlike conduct, claimed he was just scratching his nose. (AP Laserphoto)

Two Old Foes, McEnroe And Connors Reach Finals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Two old foes who know all about each other's game meet again Sunday in an all-American men's singles final at Wimbledon.

Since 1977, John McEnroe, the defending champion, and Jimmy Connors have met 26 times, with McEnroe holding a 14-12 edge.

Connors, however, leads in matches played at Wimbledon. He has won two of their three meetings at the All England championships, including a marathon five-set final two years ago.

Saturday, Connors and McEnroe were going to prepare for battle in entirely different ways.

While Connors was planning to "put my feet up," McEnroe was to be on Centre Court defending his men's doubles title with Peter Fleming against Australians Pat Cash, who lost to McEnroe in Friday's semifinal, and Paul McNamee.

McEnroe, after dispatching Cash 6-3, 7-6, 6-4 in a two-hour match Friday, reflected on the five-set defeat he suffered against Connors two years ago.

"I played a bad match," the 25-year-old New Yorker said. "My emotional level was bad. I just wasn't ready for a long match. Jimmy could see that. Jimmy is good at seeing when a guy's not really at his peak."

"The key is not to get over-emotional. That's the way Connors likes to play his matches. He likes to build it to that pitch."

McEnroe may have lost only one match this year and may have beaten Connors in their last five meetings — including a 6-2, 6-2 drubbing on grass at Queens just before Wimbledon, but he's not taking Connors lightly.

"One thing about Jimmy. He's always trying his hardest, even at the end of the match. He always plays his best when people write him off. I think he likes to be counted out."

Connors' great strength, his return of serve, nullified Ivan Lendl's thunderbolt serve in Friday's other semifinal as Connors prevailed 6-7 (7-4), 6-3, 7-5, 6-1. Connors then said he hoped he could repeat the performance against McEnroe.

"I have a 50-50 chance. If I didn't think I could win, I would not be here," he said.

Connors said he might practice a little, but said relaxation was the most important therapy.

"I'm going to go home and take it easy — put my feet up and hope I can play as well as I did today."

QUARTET OF KATHYS

CHICAGO (AP) — Marty Hawkins, the coach of the women's basketball team at Loyola of Illinois, thought he was caught in a stampede.

"Kathy, come here," he shouted. And then he was all but run over. Four Kathys on the team responded at the same time — Kathy Anderson, Kathy Meyers, Kathy Leyden and Kathy Tokarz.

Bronswell Patrick hurled a no-hitter at Martin County as Pitt County opened the 1984 13-year-old Babe Ruth District Tournament with an 11-0 victory Friday evening.

Patrick walked six batters, the only ones to reach base against Pitt, while striking out ten.

Pitt, with the win, advances into the winners' bracket of the double elimination tournament, and was to face Washington Saturday. Washington received a first-round bye. Martin County falls into the losers bracket and will play today at 3 p.m. against the loser of Saturday's Greenville-Nash County contest, with the loser there heading home.

Pitt had little trouble in the contest, pushing over the winning runs in the second when they came up with four runs. Patrick started it off with a single and after two were away, Darrell Moye singled to score Patrick. Anthony Harrison reached on an error and stole second, and both runners scored on Kevin Vines' triple. Ty Little followed with a double, scoring Vines for a 4-0 lead.

Pitt added two more in the fourth, two in the sixth and three in the seventh to wind up the scoring.

Greene County.....3

Greenville's 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth All-Stars jumped on Greene County for five runs in the first inning and went on to record a 17-3 victory Friday in the first round of the District Tournament.

Greenville was to face Nash County, which drew a first-round bye in the double elimination field, on Saturday. Greene County will face the loser of Saturday's Washington-Pitt County game on Sunday at 5 p.m.

Chris Fuqua led off the first for Greenvile, reaching on interference. Billy Turcotte followed with a bunt single and John Bolen walked, loading the bases. An error allowed Fuqua to score and Darrell Moore doubled, driving in both Turcotte and Bolen. Chris Brown singled to score Moore, and then stole both second and third. Julius Smith walked and got caught in a rundown between first and second, with Brown scoring on the play.

Greenville added three more runs in the second, and scored seven times in the third. Two more crossed in the fourth.

All three Greene County runs crossed in the third inning.

Bolen, Moore and Brown each had two hits to lead the Greenville hitting. Kenneth Spruill led Greene County with two of their four hits off Moore.

Kiwanis.....5

Tim Moore hit a solo homer and scored four times as Sportsworld rolled to an 11-5 victory over the Kiwanis in the North State Little League semifinals Friday afternoon.

Sportsworld was to meet Coca-Cola for the championship of the post-season tournament Saturday with the winner advancing into the City Championship against the Tar Heel Little League winner.

Sportsworld took the initial lead in the first, scoring once, but the Kiwanis came back with five runs in the second for a 5-1 lead.

Sportsworld rallied, however, scoring five times in the bottom of the second to take command for good. With two away, Ledowick Johnson singled and Jason Wing got a hit. Moore walked as did Jamie Brewington, forcing in Johnson. Kelvin Yarrell singled in Wing and Moore. Jay Kuykendall reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Yarrell with the go-ahead run.

Sportsworld added one in the fourth on Moore's homer, then picked up four more in the fifth.

Johnson and Wing each had two hits to lead Sportsworld, while the Kiwanis got only two hits off the pitching of Yarrell and Brewington.

Lions.....0

Derrick Clark tossed a no-hit shutout at the Lions Friday as Coca-Cola rolled up a 15-0 win and advanced to the North State Little League tournament finals.

Coke was to face Sportsworld on Saturday for the championship, and the winner advances into next week's City Championships.

Clark struck out 15, hit one and walked three on the way to the shutout and no-hitter.

Coke got all it needed in the second inning, scoring once. Edwin Manning walked as did Bill Gorham. Gene Brown singled and Jimmy Lee reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Manning.

Coke added two in the third, six in the fourth, including a grand-slam homer by Walter Gatlin; two in the fifth and four more in the sixth.

True Value.....13
First Federal.....3

Regular season champion True Value Hardware moved into the finals of the Tar Heel Little League tournament Friday with a 13-3 romp over First Federal.

True Value was to meet Carroll & Associates Saturday afternoon for the title, with the winner moving into next week's City Championship against the North State winner.

True Value got all it needed in the first inning, scoring eight times. Craig Willoughby walked and stole second. An error allowed him to come the rest of the way. Matthew Cagle walked and moved to second on a wild pitch. Aaron Tschetter also walked and Ken Sawyer reached on an error, scoring Cagle. Clarence Hammonds walked and a wild pitch let Tschetter score. Gamal Hunter reached on an error, scoring Sawyer and Whitt Thomas walked. Willoughby doubled in both Hammonds and Hunter, and Cagle walked. Tschetter singled in Thomas and a wild pitch let Willoughby score the eighth run.

True Value added two in the second, one in the third, one in the fifth and one in the sixth.

First Federal scored single runs in the first, third and fifth. The first and last came on solo homers by Michael Cox.

Cox's two homers were half the hit total of First Federal off Willoughby. No one had more than one hit for True Value, which also got only four hits.

Carroll & Assoc.....13
Moose.....0

Joel Daughtry tossed a two-hit shutout at the Moose as Carroll & Associates moved into the finals of the Tar Heel Little League tournament, 13-0.

C&A was to face True Value Hardware for the league title on Saturday, with the winner advancing into the City Championship tournament.

C&A pushed over eight runs in the first inning to put the game on ice. Marvin Gay singled as did Travis Williamson. Daughtry doubled, driving in Gay, and Toure Claiborne also doubled, scoring Williamson and Daughtry. Chad Adams followed with a two-run homer.

Hank Thompson kept it going with a single and Jason Smith also got a hit, scoring Thompson, who had advanced on a passed ball. Smith, who moved up on an error, scored on Gay's double. Williamson singled in Gay.

C&A added one in the second on a solo homer by Adams, his second round-tripper of the game. The other four scored in the fifth.

Gay, Smith and Claiborne each had three hits for Carroll & Associates, while Williamson, Chris Holland and Adams each had two.

Pentathlete Cleared On Charges Of Bout Fixing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Olympic pentathlete Rob Stull was acquitted early Saturday of charges he conspired with his competitors to rig fencing bouts in the Olympic trials.

Stull, who was holding a fencing foil when the verdict was read, leaped from his chair and waved the sword, then hugged a fellow athlete.

"I knew in my heart it would turn out like this," he said. "We're going to LA and we're going to win."

Stull, 23, of Damascus, Md., could have been kicked off the four-member Olympic pentathlon team if he had been found guilty of the charges.

Stull was accused of cheating by arranging for competitors to let him win in the fencing bouts in the March and May trials, held at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

An informal hearing on the charges was held Friday before an independent panel of sports representatives.

After 12 hours of testimony, the panel took just 10 minutes to decide Stull was innocent.

"I am pleased an independent panel has weighed everything and come to the conclusion there was no wrongdoing," said Daniel Steinman, president of the U.S. Modern Pentathlon Association.

The association selects the United States Olympic pentathlon team.

"I am delighted for Rob personally," said Steinman, whose organization presented prosecuting evidence against Stull.

Stull denied any collusion with competitors, saying, "I never had deals with anybody — no way."

He was accused of agreeing with three players — John Moreau, John Helmick and Chuck Michaels — that they would throw him fencing bouts.

But Stull said during his testimony that he told his father he was being railroaded.

"I told my dad if I win, I lose, if I lose, I lose. I'm getting screwed here," he said.

Darling, Niekro Win 7th Straight

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

Seven wins in a row for a pitcher is always extraordinary, but not always unique.

Ron Darling of the New York Mets and Joe Niekro of the Houston Astros each accomplished the feat Friday night. Darling tossed a four-hit shutout and blanked the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the Mets' double-header sweep. The Mets came back to win 6-5 in the second game.

In the first game of the league's other twi-night double-header, Niekro held the Montreal Expos to five singles and two runs as the Astros won 8-2. The Expos saved the evening with a 7-5 victory in the nightcap.

"That was a different era. So far I haven't proved anything," stated the 23-year-old Darling of Seaver's record of 10 straight victories, set in 1969. "I'm only a rookie and it would be nice if I tied the record, but I've got a long way to go to match anything Seaver accomplished."

Darling, 10-3, denied any bitterness over his omission from the All-Star pitching staff, which teammate and fellow rookie Dwight Gooden, 7-5, was named to Friday.

"A lot of pitchers, including myself, are going to be bypassed when only eight are selected," explained Darling. "I have no feelings one way or the other. It's just a matter of circumstances."

Hubie Brooks' 10th home run of the season in the seventh inning gave Darling the only run he needed.

In the nightcap, Kelvin Chapman, inserted into the game as a pinch-hitter in the fourth inning, drove in a pair of runs including the game-winner in the ninth inning as the Mets overtook the Reds for a sweep.

Jesse Orosco, 6-2, who pitched two innings of hitless relief, was the winner in the second game.

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta blanked Philadelphia 5-0, San Diego topped Pittsburgh 7-3, Chicago edged San Francisco 5-4, and Los Angeles went to 12 innings to beat St. Louis 3-2.

Niekro found it hard to win early in the season, as he got off to a 2-7 start. Now he finds it hard to lose. He shared blame and credit, respectively, with his teammates.

"In my first 12 starts, I think I had 13 runs to work with," said the 39-year-old pitcher. "I've got about 90 runs in my last nine starts."

The Astros have actually scored 79 runs in Niekro's last eight outings.

"A pitcher's job is to keep his team in the game as long as possible," said Niekro, who allowed only five hits and was backed by two-run singles from Harry Spilman and Denny Walling. "I feel that I've done that in most of the games."

Derrel Thomas had four hits in the second game, including a double and single that drove in runs. Tim Raines had a pair of RBI singles, one in the Expos' four-run first inning.

Dan Schatzeder, 3-2, gave up eight hits and two walks and struck out five over 7 2-3 innings for the win in the second game.

Jose Cruz swatted his fourth home run of the season in the first game, and Alan Ashby hit his first in the nightcap.

Braves 5, Phillies 0

Pascual Perez rebounded from four off outings with first shutout of the season and second of his two-year career. The win raised his record to 9-3 and apparently marked the end of problems with the middle finger on his pitching hand.

"The last four games I haven't pitched well. My finger has been bothering me. I haven't been able to get rotation on my slider," Perez said.

Perez said the finger was fine Friday night and allowed him to throw the slider effectively all game.

NL home run leader Dale Murphy made it 5-0 in the seventh with his 20th of the year, over the 408-foot sign in Veterans Stadium's center field.

Padres 7, Pirates 3

Ed Whitson had problems with his middle finger, and said it helped him to his first complete game. A blister on the finger made Whitson resort to his palm ball, with great success.

"I couldn't throw a much harder slider," Whitson, 10-4, said after winning for the eighth time in his last nine decisions. "I threw it (his palm ball) more this game than I've thrown the whole year. I could have never survived with just hard stuff."

Carmelo Martinez's three-run shot was the first home run for the Padres since June 25.

Dodgers 3, Cardinals 2

Pinch-hitter Mike Vail singled in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning, his first hit since the Dodgers signed him as a free agent a month ago.

It came off Jeff Lahti after Los Angeles had loaded the bases off Neil Allen, 4-3.

Mike Scioscia walked and went to third on two wild pitches by Allen. Franklin Stubbs and Bob Bailor were then walked to load the bases and Lahti brought in to pitch. Scioscia scored as Vail singled over the head of third baseman Art Howe.

Darrell Porter's two-run homer off Los Angeles starter Fernando Valenzuela sent St. Louis ahead 2-1 after Valenzuela's first homer of the season.

Cubs 5, Giants 4

Rookie Dave Owen, who entered the game in the sixth after Larry Bowa bruised his foot, hit a two-run single in the seventh to keep the Cubs atop the NL East standings.

Reliever Tim Stoddard worked out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the sixth to raise his record to 6-1. Lee Smith worked the final two innings for his 17th save.

License Renewal Time — As of June 30, all annual hunting and fishing licenses expired. These licenses authorize fishing, hunting or trapping generally within the state or county of residence during a license year (July 1-June 30).

Generally, resident state licenses may be used only by those who have resided in the state for six months or who have been domiciled in the state for 60 days. When domicile is used to establish eligibility, the applicant must complete a certificate available from license agents or the commission, certifying that he has maintained his residence in a county of the state for at least 60 days with intent to reside there permanently or indefinately. Resident county licenses are limited to residents of the county indicated.

Exceptions to the license requirements:

•A youth uner age 16 accompanied by a properly licensed adult may enjoy those privileges conveyed by the licenses held by the accompanying adult.

•A land owner or persons leasing land primarily for cultivation, his spouse and dependents under 18 residing with him may hunt, trap and fish on such land without a license.

•A fishing license is not required to fish in a private pond.

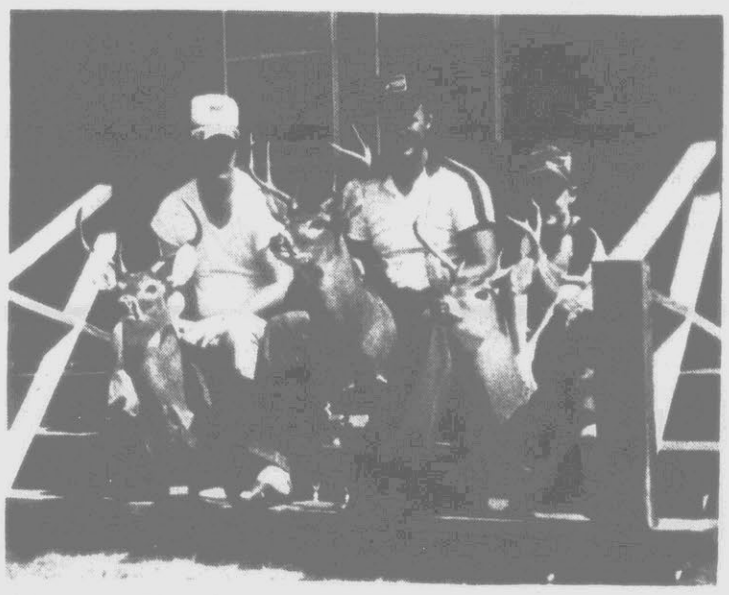

•A resident may fish with natural bait in his county of residence without a basic fishing license. "Natural bait" is any bait which may be beneficially digested by fish.

The license fees for the 1984-85 season are: state fishing $11.50, state hunting $11.50, state trapping $11, combination $15.50, sportsman $30, county fishing or hunting $6, county trapping $8.

Check the 1984-85 regulations digest for additional license requirements for specific types of hunting fishing and trapping.

Fishing Report — The nice catches of bream, bass and catfish ceased last week when the Tar River retained its usual high, muddy look. For about two weeks, a lot of fish were caught using redworms, night crawlers and crickets.

As of this report, James Hudson of Greenville was in third place in the annual Cap'n Fannie's Billfish Tournament held out of Morehead City. Hudson landed a 72-pound blue marlin Tuesday while fishing aboard his boat, the "Pollyanna."

Hunting Winners

Non-Stars Perform Like Them Anyway

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The fact that they weren't chosen to the American League All-Star team didn't seem to bother Luis Leal, Ron Kittle or Harold Baines. They all continued to perform like All-Stars anyway.

Leal threw a five-hitter, losing his shutout in the ninth inning on Pat Putnam's two-run homer, as the Toronto Blue Jays shelled the visiting Seattle Mariners 9-2 Friday night. Leal is now 9-2, tying him for the team lead in victories with Dave Stieb, who did make the AL squad for Tuesday's All-Star Game in San Francisco.

Kittle went 4-for-5 with three runs scored and a two-run homer and Baines contributed a three-run double in Chicago's 11-6 decision over Cleveland. The victory boosted the White Sox into a first-place tie in the West Division with Minnesota, which took New York 9-4, and California, which was nipped in Boston 8-7.

Kansas City beat Baltimore 6-2, Texas stopped Detroit 5-3 and Oakland swept a double-header from Milwaukee, 7-6 and 11-0.

"I'm happy because Dave's going to the All-Star game," said Leal, who threw 116 pitches. "If they had selected me before, then I'd be happy too.

"But Stieb will do a good job too and I'm just trying to help the team."

Leal certainly has done that. And he got plenty of help from Jesse Barfield, who slammed two home runs, George Bell, who had a three-run job, and Garth Iorg, who ripped two doubles and a triple for three RBI.

"I haven't been hitting as good as I can and, hopefully, this will be the start," said Iorg, who came into the game batting .248 with no homers and only 10 RBIs in 133 at bats. "It's a big day for me.

"It may not be a big day for Jesse (Barfield), who got two home runs, but it's a big day for me."

White Sox 11, Indians 6

Kittle finished off his big night with a two-runhomer in the eighth. Baines got his team-leading 10th game-winning RBI as host Chicago won its fifth straight.

Was Kittle, an All-Star as a rookie last year, trying to show the rest of the AL that he belonged in the All-Star Game?

"Not necessarily," said Kittle. "I try to do my best every night.I'm going to enjoy my three days off."

Sox Manager Tony LaRussa felt Baines should have had some consideration.

"He's one of the finest players in the league and he's having a good year," said LaRussa of his right fielder, who leads the White Sox with 49 runs batted in, is second in homers with 13 and tied for the club lead with 14 doubles.

Twins 9, Yankees 4

Kent Hrbek's monstrous three-run homer capped a seven-run fifth inning that carried host Minnesota to the first-place deadlock and gave Frank Viola his fifth straight victory.

Hrbek, who drove in four runs with three of the Twins' 17 hits, slammed his 11th homer of the season 449 feet to right field. Hrbek has six of the 22 home runs hit into the Metrodome's upper deck.

"It doesn't sound right," said Hrbek after the Twins moved into first place for the first time this late in the season since 1977."We aren't the team of years ago. We have some hungry young guys. We're starting to prove ourselves a little bit. I think it started by splitting four games with Detroit, taking two of three from Baltimore and now two from the Yankees."

Red Sox 8, Angels 7

Tony Armas continued his hot hitting with his 22nd homer to extend his career-high hitting streak to 19 games.Rookie right-hander Al Nipper picked up the victory but it took three relievers in the ninth to end the game. Juan Beniquez hit a two-run homer in the ninth to chase Nipper. Steve Crawford surrendered a solo homer to pinch-hitter Jerry Narron. After he issued walks to Rob Wilfong and Gary Pettis, Crawford was replaced by John Henry Johnson. But pinch-hitter Brian Downing singled to bring California within 8-7.

Royals 6, Orioles 2

his 15th of the season and 10th in the last 14 games. Dan Quisenberry picked up his 23rd save and, with a 3-2 record, has figured in 26 of Kansas City's 38 victories, a whopping 68 percent.

"When I wasn't hitting home runs, I was hitting for average," said Balboni. "I never did both at once . . hit homers and hit for a real good average."

Which would he rather do?

Rangers 5, Tigers 3

Texas handed Detroit its fifth defeat in six games, the Tigers' worst streak of the season, as BuddyBell's two-run double highlighted a three-run third inning.

Bell also was thinking about the All-Star Game, for which he was selected.

"I wanted to go," said Bell. "But not at the expense of LP (Larry Parrish) and Obie (Pete O'Brien).

"I haven't had a lot of RBI," said Bell. "I'm more of a situation hitter than anything. We have been moving runners over and LP and Obie have been hitting the ball."

A's 7-11, Brewers 6-0

Rickey Henderson's two-run homer in the eighth inning won the opener. Curt Young threw a nine-hitter for his first major-league complete game and Mike Heath drove in three runs in the second contest.

RULAND WORKS HARD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody, but nobody, works harder at the game of basketball than Jeff Ruland, the 6-11 star at center and forward for the Washington Bullets.

Moses Malone, the great pivotman of the Philadelphia 76ers, will testify to that. "I love somebody who makes me work harder on the court when playing against me," Malone said. "But sometimes Ruland does seem to overdo it."

The coach of the New York Knicks, Hubie Brown, also is impressed by Ruland. "He isn't fancy, he isn't pretty and he certainly isn't timid," Brown said. "He says: 'Here I am, try to stop me!'"

Ruland's own comment on the way he plays:

"I haven't run across anyone, as yet, who can stop me."

The first pinch-hit home run in an All-Star game was hit by catcher Mickey Owen of the National League in 1942.

Stars Won't Take Stallions Light

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Stars, trying for their second straight United States Football League championship berth, say they don't intend to take the Birmingham Stallions lightly in the USFL playoffs, even though the Stars routed the Stallions 43-11 two months ago.

"Birmingham is one of the better teams in the league and they're going to play a lot better than they did against us before," Stars quarterback Chuck Fusina said of Sunday's showdown.

Philadelphia hosts the Stallions at the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field for the Eastern Conference title and a ticket to the USFL championship July 15 in Tampa, Fla. Last season the Stars lost the title game to the Michigan Panthers 24-22.

The Stallions, whose defense is ranked 14th of the 18 USFL teams against the pass, are worried about injuries.

"We're a no-name defense, and we do the best we can," Birmingham defensive coordinator Carl Resse told reporters this week. "Some of the guys have played outstanding football, better than what they are. But we have had to scramble."

Reese said he has four healthy players in his defensive secondary, when he needs five or six. "I feel good about our defensive front, and I think we'll handle the run," he said. "But I don't know who will play in the secondary."

Stallions Coach Rollie Dotsch acknowledged that Philadelphia has a size advantage over his defensive front. "I don't believe we can match up man to man with Philadelphia," he said. "So we're going to have to come up with some other options."

Dotsch closed practice this week, saying his players needed to concentrate as they prepared for the Stars.

"I close them to everybody," he said. "I try to cut down the players' appearances and keep their mind on the game. If there's one thing I learned from Chuck Noll (Pittsburgh Steelers coach), it's how to get ready for the playoffs."

Dotsch said he wouldn,t know until today whether quarterback Cliff Stoudt, who has a sore shoulder, would be able to play. But there was no doubt in Stoudt's mind. "I'll do whatever it takes to get ready for the game," he said.

Stoudt finished the season with 212 of 366 passes for 3,121 yards and 26 touchdowns and seven interceptions. Fusina completed 302 of 465 passes for 3,837 yards and 31 touchdowns with nine interceptions.

Sunday's game also features a matchup of the two top USFL running backs. Birmingham's Joe Cribbs, the league leader, had 1,467 yards on 297 carries with eight touchdowns during the season. Philadelphia's Kelvin Bryant finished second with 1,406 yards and 13 touchdowns on 297 carries.

Home Sales Dipped

The U.S. Commerce Department reported that the annual rate of new home sales declined during May for the third consecutive month, pushing the inventory of unsold units on the market to its highest level since September 1982.

The department said new homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 612,000 during May, down 4.4 percent from April. Sales declined in all regions except the Northeast where sales rose almost 34 percent. Sales fell 27 percent in the North Central region, 3 percent in the South and 9 percent in the West.

During the first five months of 1984, 292,000 new homes were actually sold. The median price of new homes sold during May was $80,900, up from the $79,400 price recorded in April.

Athletic Club Planning 8,000-Square-Foot Gym

Athletic Clubs Inc., owners of the Greenville Athletic Club on Oakmont Drive, has announced that construction has begun on a 10,000-square-foot expansion project at the facility including a new multipurpose gymnasium.

The firm secured a building permit from the city calling for additions valued at $618,750 to the present facilities, which opened in November 1981.

Pete Paradosi, director of the Greenville club, said the gym will involve about 8,000 square feet and feature a regulation size basketball court that will also be lined for volleyball competition. Paradosi said the gym, which will be utilized for various events and activities in addition to sports, will have a "highly rubberized" Eurathane surface designed to dissipate shock.

The gym will be constructed at the rear of the existing facilities, he said.

The spokesman said an "ultra moderrn" aerobic exercise room will be included within the gym additiion and the overall project also includes expansion in the existing nursery and locker room areas.

Paradosi said the club hopes to occupy the new sections by Oct. 1.

Athletic Clubs Inc. also operates a unit in Wilmington

Insurance Task Force To View Regulations

CHARLOTTE (AP) — As state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram prepares to leave office, a group representing 1,100 independent insurance agents in North Carolina are planning to take a stronger position on regulatory issues.

The Raleigh-based Independent Insurance Agents of North Carolina Inc., headed by president Joe Kluttz, an Albemarle insurance agent, has formed a task force to gather members', opinions about changes needed in the state's insurance regulation.

That increased activism comes at the same time a legislative study commission has been formed to examine the state's insurance regulatory system. The study's results could lead to changes in insurance affecting most North Carolinians, such as the state's 5 million registered drivers, said Richard Brantley, executive director of the Independent Insurance Agents.

"We've had many concerns that Ingram didn't bother to concern himself with," Brantley said. "We've been on the defensive for 12 years ... We've been notably quiet."

Ingram is leaving office in January after making an unsuccessful run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination earlier this year.

When he first took office in 1973, Ingram made an initial effort to meet with insurance industry representives, said Ingram's press secretary, Oscar Smith. "But then the industry went to war with him as soon as he was inaugurated."

The repeated battles Ingram has had with the insurance industry in court and at the General Assembly were necessary "because the insurance laws in this state were in a mess and needed to be changed," Smith said.

Brantley said, however, that the court battles have meant the state's insurance industry has been regulated "by court decision."

Both Smith and Brantley agree, however, that further changes are needed, prompting the renewed examination by the agents and legislators.

Expensive Move

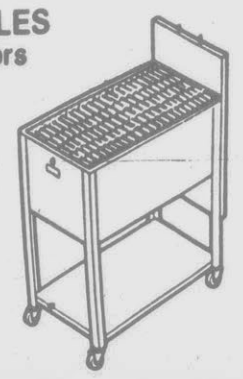

NEW YORK (AP) — Being transferred to a foreign city without adequate salary compensation is likely to be expensive, according to an annual cost-of-living survey of 20 major cities worldwide.

In Hong Kong, the most expensive city surveyed, an executive at the $40,000 income level would have to spend $89,051 to maintain a comparable U.S. lifestyle.

Chicago Board of Trade Sees Fluctuating Prices

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Corn and soybean futures prices were mixed and wheat was higher Friday in very choppy trading at the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices fluctuated during the volatile session, with uncertainty about price direction the main factor, sources said.

Several factors encouraged selling in the soybean pit, said Dale Gustafson, a grain analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert. Influence from other commodity markets combined with the weather to put pressure on prices, he said.

But prices had fallen so sharply in the previous three sessions that further selling was limited. Some traders who had sold contracts earlier in the week were buying contracts back to close out their positions with profits before the weekend, sources said, and that partially offset the pressure.

Wheat and corn prices were generally steady.

Gustafson noted that reports of wheat purchases by the Soviet Union and rumors of possible purchases by China have been supporting wheat prices.

Wheat settled 1¾ cents to 3¼ cents higher with the contract for delivery in July at $3.44¾ a bushel; corn was 1½ cents lower to 6 cents higher with July at $3.42¾ a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 1½ cents higher with July at $1.88½ a bushel; and soybeans were 5 cents lower to 7 cents higher with July at $6.77 a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were mixed in moderate trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Prices of live cattle have been supported recently by higher prices on cash wholesale markets for carcass beef, but in the last two days, traders have begun to think about the seasonal decline in consumption, said Chuck Levitt, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Shearson LehmanAmerican Express.

Levitt said consumption generally declines in late summer when the weather becomes hot and humid, which should put pressure on futures prices.

But anticipation that two Agriculture Department reports will show declines in the number of cattle later this month have been supportive for prices.

Hog and pork bellies both traded in the same trends. Contracts for delivery in the next few months were higher while those for delivery in later months were lower.

The number of hogs available for slaughter is down from last year.

Levitt said the slaughter this week was 20 percent below that of a year ago, a development that prompted higher wholesale prices for pork products such as loins, pork bellies and hams. He noted that meat packers are losing money on their operations and are being forced to cut back the slaughter.

Contracts for delivery later on were lower, though, because of indications that hog producers plan to start rebuilding their herds this summer, which will put more animals on the market early next year.

Live cattle settled .12 cent lower to .15 cent higher with the contract for delivery in Au-gust at 64.45 cents a pound; feeder cattle were unchanged to .62 cent higher with August at 66.97 cents a pound; live hogs were .53 cent lower to .30 cent higher with July at 55.12 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .70 cent lower to 1.02 cents higher with July at 61.87 cents a pound.

Gold prices were under pres-sure from selling by speculators who were faced with requirements to deposit additional funds to cover losses stemming from the decline in prices Thursday, said Bill O'Neill, a metals analyst in New York with Rudolph Wolff Commodities.

Traders who watch trends on price charts joined the selling and put additional pressure on the market, he said.

Gold settled $14.40 to $17.10 lower with the contract for delivery in July at $345.10 a troy ounce; silver settled 18.2 cents to 38.5 cents lower with July at $750.8 a troy ounce.

Heating oil prices were slightly higher in dull trading on the New York Mercnatile Exchange.

Heating oil settled unchanged to .32 cent higher with the contract for delivery in August at 77.19 cents a gallon.

Tramiel Likely To Shake Up The Home-Computer Industry

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The home-computer industry has been rather quiet this year after being wracked by severe price wars in 1982-83 that so bloodied some competitors they fled the market.

But the lull is likely to end now that Jack Tramiel is back, industry observers said after Tramiel acquired Atari Inc. from Warner Communications Inc. this past week.

"Clearly we'll see stepped-up competition," said David S. Lawrence, an analyst with Montgomery Securities in San Francisco.

It was Tramiel who guided

Age-Old British Class System Survives

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — In 1938 the humorist Pont of Punch Magazine took a long look at his countrymen and observed:

"The British with their tidy minds,
"Divide themselves up into kinds.
"The common kind they call the masses,
"The better kind, the upper classes."

The class system, long the bane and the backbone of British society, suffered a severe body blow when Eton schoolboys began mining coal in World War II, when the queen abolished the debutantes' ball and a duke scrubbed the floors of his stately home as a publicity stunt to lure in the paying public.

The system survives, however, for it is as much a part of English landscape as fish and chips or the chimes of Big Ben. But many of its extremes have been softened by mass communications and equal voting rights.

Children raised in the age of legislated equality have different accents from their parents, and a gentleman no longer is distinguished by whether he parts his coattails when he sits down.

Although it was World War II followed by the social revolution of the 1960s that did most to transform the class system, the first portents of change could be traced to the turn of the century.

The death of Queen Victoria ended an era in which the stratifications of class were at their most rigid. Thirteen years later, World War I dealt a savage blow to British society. It cost 850,000 British lives and killed off many of the young upper-class generation which otherwise would have moved into power.

But the British public clearly doesn't think class is dead. A 1984 survey by Social and Community Planning Research, a non-government institution, found that 70 percent of Britons believe the class system still shapes their lives.

Most sociologists say class is still important in Britain. Its the definitions they disagree about. Some insist outright that class prejudice still exists. Others say it doesn't, but what's important is that people think it does.

And then there are those who use terms of class to describe what in most countries would be matters of style, status and snobbery.

According to the research institution's survey, class barriers are felt most strongly by Labor Party voters. A steelworker interviewed on television will often begin by declaring self-consciously: "I'm a working-class man and proud of it." A union boss who recently refused to back striking coal miners was publicly branded "a traitor to his class" by a fellow union man.

"Prosperity has, despite all the predictions, only dented the emotional self-identification of the British working-class," said The Economist, one of Britain's most respected analytical journals.

Although the proportion of home-owners has risen from 40 percent to 60 percent in 20 years and the proportion of Britons holding bank accounts from 25 percent to 60, "class is still a psychological condition, built upon your occupation and accent and district and the time you eat your meals," The Economist added.

"Class still matters to the average British person," says Oxford University sociologist John Goldthorpe. "In a very tacit, unspoken way, most people know where they are placed on the social ladder."

Peregrine Worsthorne, a leading conservative columnist, has written: "The class system is Great Britain, as much as are the White Cliffs of Dover or the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace."

Joseph Priestley, the English novelist and social observer, wrote 10 years ago, when most everyone else was proclaiming class a dead issue, that "an accepted class system may be easier, more comfortable, even cosier for most people than what passes for an egalitarian society. Such people, we might say, wear their own shoes and are not forever trying to squeeze their feet into other people's."

A lordly title is still a passport to directorships and a good table in a crowded restaurant. But a 1977 survey showed that of 30 chief executives of leading companies, 18 were in the middle or working class and went to ordinary state schools and had no inherited wealth.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, although staunchly conservative and surrounded by upper-crust colleagues, is herself the daughter of a small-town grocer.

She typifies the change forced on the Conservative Party, once the pillar of the upper class, by World War II.

The war demanded a gigantic all-class effort. The first post-war election, which swept the Labor Party into power, reflected the pressure on the Establishment to acknowledge the changes wrought by the war. No longer would the worker let himself be bossed willy-nilly by the arrogant Tory squire.

The Labor government set up the world's most elaborate welfare system and gave the unions sweeping strike powers. It hit the upper classes with such heavy income tax and duties on inherited wealth that aristocrats had to get jobs or open their mansions to paying visitors.

Many of the external trappings of class were abolished. Queen Elizabeth II stopped hosting the annual debutantes ball, when young society ladies curtsied to Her Majesty and thus assured their lifetime sinecure in the upper class.

The gentlemanly sport of cricket acknowledged changing times when its authorities withdrew the official distinction between "gentlemen" — wealthy amateurs playing for fun — and "players," the professionals who competed for their living and had to enter some playing fields by a separate gate.

The youth revolution of the 1960s meant some young working-class mechanics and plumbers suddenly made more money than middle-class teachers or even upper-class landowners.

The aristocracy began giving way to a meritocracy of educated working-class people who today dominate the computer industry, cinema, television and advertising. They are particularly noticeable in the multinational corporations, where class distinctions count less.

But old habits persist.

At British Aerospace in Manchester, worker Paul Murphy complained in a television program, "There's a special mess (dining room) for the directors, there's a mess for the middle management, there's another mess for supervision and ultimately the large canteen for the shop floor. And yet when things go wrong the directors tell us we're all working for the same company."

John Harvey-Jones, chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries, blames class prejudice for Britain's lack of good industrialists. A gentleman farmer is still "more socially desirable" than a manufacturer, he says.

In most European countries unions and government cooperated to create economic miracles out of the rubble of World War II. Britain lagged behind, debilitated by old-fashioned management and labor's resistance to automation. Many blamed it on "the us-and-them" division between workers and bosses, another form of class barrier which only now is beginning to be crossed relatively freely.

Those crossings are poignantly noted by Hunter Davies, a novelist with working-class roots, who wrote recently: "Our children are strangers to us because they are now middle class....My dad knew what it was like to be me and his dad knew what it was like to be him....But my children are very foreign to me."

Marilyn Gaunt, a 38-year-old daughter of the Yorkshire working class, recently made a film about a reunion of her schoolmates and found that almost all had married white-collar men and owned their homes.

Being northern and working-class had become acceptable, she explains. "It was even fashionable. That was something the Beatles did for us. It changed the status of our accent." The Beatles came from working-class Liverpool.

Accent has always been the cornerstone of class in Britain.

"It is impossible for an Englishman to open his mouth without making some other Englishman despise him," George Bernard Shaw wrote in his preface to "Pygmalion," a play about a young cockney woman who wins acceptance by the upper classes through elocution lessons. It was the basis for the musical "My Fair Lady."

Mrs. Thatcher seems to bear out Shaw's 70-year-old observation. Her upper-class Tory colleagues are said to look down on her because her family are tradesmen, even though she went to Oxford University. Her working-class enemies claim, without any proof, that she took elocution lessons to upgrade her accent.

She commits cardinal social sins such as calling TV interviewer Sir Robin Day just plain Robin. She boasts about turning Britain into a "go-getter society." One is not supposed, in genteel circles, to sound so ambitious and businesslike.

Mrs. Thatcher represents a new class of Briton — people of humble origins who have come up by their own talents, accumulating a good deal of rancor along the way, rancor against strikers, welfare chiselers, immigrants.

This class, says Ralf Dahrendorf, director of the London School of Economics, looks to Mrs. Thatcher's Tories because it is "dissatisfied, therefore striving for new horizons, and clearly representing a different world from the upper class which has ruled Britain for so long."

Britons today divide themselves into all sorts of wierd and wonderful packs: loutish Skinheads prowling the slums, twittering Sloane Rangers congregating around fashionable Sloane Square, Punks in hair dyed to look like traffic lights, Young Fogeys in three-piece suits riding bicycles, affecting a contempt for such modern amenities as automobiles and polyester jackets.

Some observers say this represents the replacement of the class system with the tribal system.

But it hardly matters what you call it, so long as it keeps those tidy British minds content.

Banker Guilty

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A federal jury has convicted the former chief executive of Pan American International Bank in a money-laundering case but acquitted the ex-chairman of the board.

George Gebrayel, who faces sentencing Aug. 25, was convicted Friday of conspiracy, failing to file currency transaction reports and making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, while Rafael Acosta was found innocent.

Prosecutor Don Campbell, chief of the U.S. Justice Department's Las Vegas Task Force, said agents received information that the bank laundered drug money through its single branch.

The executives' July 13 arrest stemmed from their alleged failure to report $295,000 in cash deposits made by an undercover federal agent posing as a Mexican police official, Campbell said.

Banking laws require deposits in excess of $10,000 to be reported to the IRS.

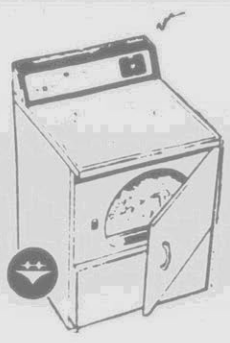

Gebrayel's attorney, Frank Cremen, told jurors the men had acted on the advice of a banking expert who contended the money didn't have to be reported.

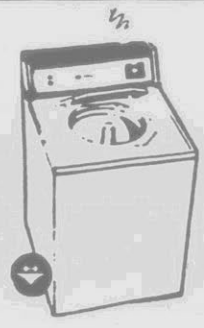

A third defendant, former head cashier Richard Rodriguez, had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and was placed on three years probation after he testified that Acosta and Gebrayel directed him to set up bank accounts under phony names.

Pan American President John Dedolph said Friday that Acosta only owns about 7 percent of the bank and there's "no reasonable possible chance" Acosta would be put back in any position of control.

Acosta's acquittal "will in no way affect the composition of the board," he said.

Fans Considered As Art Objects In The Orient

In Europe, the fan served as a fashionable ornament and a coquette's weapon; in the East, the fan not only cooled its owner but played an important role in social and ceremonial life as well. Another striking difference between East and West lies in the role of the fan as an art object. "In China and Japan, fan painting paralleled the history of the fine arts and ofen commanded the artistry of the greatest painters," says Ann Yonemura, assistant curator of Japanese art at the Smithsonian's Freer Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

In Japan, folding fans are called "ogi," the rigid handscreen type, "uchiwa." The uchiwa originated in China more than 20 centuries ago and consists of a handle supporting a disc, most commonly of silk or paper. Folding fans of cypress wood were used by male aristocrats in Japan in the eighth century. By the late 10th century, a paper mount had been added to the folding framework. For a time, this type of fan was often called komori, or bat. There is — among the many myths about the origins of the fan — a legend that its inventor was inspired by a bat's wing. The folding fan was also used in China and eventually found its way, on the heels of the handscreen, to the courts of Europe.

For generations in Japan, the fan was used by men, women and children at every level of society. Its design indicated the rank, position and profession of the owner: the godlike emperor, the comely courtesan, the common laborer. At court, fans beat time to music, concealed embarrassment or laughter and served as an elegant extension of the owner's hand. In the 19th century, fan sellers carrying stacks of uchiwa did a brisk business in the streets, at the theater or at sumo wrestling matches, where the referees carried — and still do today — a fan symbolizing their authority.

Fans were given as gifts on any and every special ocasion, between friends, lovers, family, patrons and protegees. There were souvenir fans, advertising fans, fans that served as maps and newspapers, fans for the tea ceremony, fans for weddings, fans for funerals. A strict fan etiquette forbade using one in the presence of carefully arranged flowers, lest the draft distrub their perfection. And it was customary for a good host to keep a supply of elegant fans at his door for his guests' use.

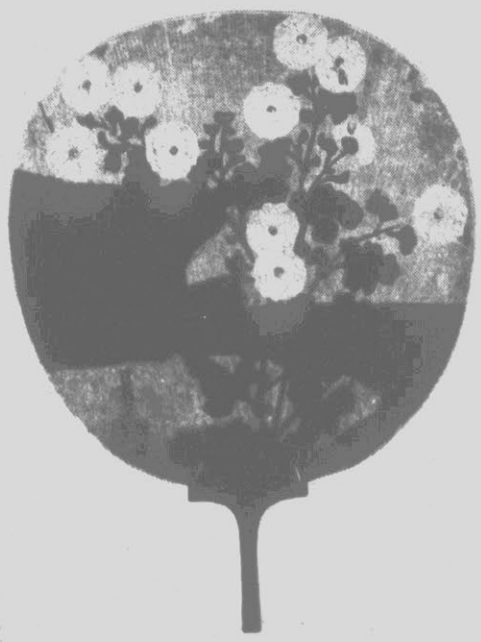

War fans were used to signal in battle. Framed of iron, these fans would have made formidable clubs if necessary. A fan was as important to a samurai's costume as his sword.

Dancers, actors and puppeteers still spend long hours studying the manipulation of the fan, which in the conventions of Japanese theatre can sugegst emotions, images and actions ranging from the rising of the moon to riding a horse.

"Fan painting was an important art form and a lucrative business: some Japanese artists started their careers in a fan workshop," Yonemura says. These artists drew on the worlds of nature, myth, literature and a cultural store of traditional symbols and emblems. Each season had its proper colors and motifs — plum and cherry blossoms for spring, for example. Battle fans displayed a red sun or silver moon. "Fans were made to complement, not to match clothing, and it was very important to carry a seasonally appropriate fan. Even today, with westernized fashion, the rules for color are still observed," Yonemura says.

The finest painted fans were treasured and collected. In China, the silk or paper mount might be removed and put in an album or on a scroll for safekeeping and for future appreciation. In Japan, by the late 15th century, screens showing floating or wind-scattered fans had become popular. This enduring theme was based on a story telling how an attendant to the Shogun accidentally dropped his open fan into a river, creating a sight so picturesque that others in the procession were moved to toss theirs after it. Af first, artists painted fan motifs on the panels; eventually, used and new mounts were pasted on the screens. "The arrangement looks random, but it's carefully calculated," Yonemura points out, "As in flower arranging, there is great art behind the 'natural' appearance."

Millions of fans and fan sticks were manufactured in the Orient for export to the West during the 18th-century passion for "chinoiserie" and the late-19th-century vogue for things Japanese. The craftsmanship of these items ranged from superb to shoddy, but even the most exquisite were designed to meet Western taste rather than Oriental standards of beauty. The true spirit of the art is evoked in the words of an 11th-century Chinese poet, Huang T'ing-chien, who wrote of a revered artist: "Kuo Hsi may be old, but his eye is still sharp. Even in his small fan ... the rivers and mountains are made complete. A fragment of mist — which stretches 1,000 miles : It parts as the bright moon follows a traveler's trail."

The millions of fans made for export in China and Japan during the 18th and 19th centuries were created to please European tastes. Oriental traditions of fan decoration and use were very different from those of the West. Not least among those differences was the role of the fan as an art object, worthy of the attentions of great artists. Japanese master Ogata Korin (1658-1716) decorated this fan with white chrysanthemums against a gold ground, appropriate for the autumn season.

A History Of Fans Reveals Their Allure East And West

The first fan was probably a leaf, clasped by a human seeking relief on a prehistoric summer day. Today, on the rare occasions when modern air-conditioning fails us, we make do with theater programs, hats, newspapers — and convenient vegetation. The sight of a woman with a fan in her hand is rare indeed. But it was not always so.

"Fans are fascinating," said Lenore Gershuny, curator of "Fanfare," an exhibition at the Smithsonian's Renwick Gallery in Washington, D.C. "They are really very practical devices, yet they have such charm and beauty — and such a romantic history."

The oldest type of fan is the rigid "handscreen" — probably evolved from that prehistoric leaf — made of painted wood or fabric of feathers mounted in a handle. Such fans have been employed through the centuries not only to cool their users in hot weather, but also to shield ladies' faces — and wax-based make-up — from the fire.

The folding fan, with its radiating sticks bearing a "leaf" or "mount" of paper, skin or fabric, came to Europe, also from the East, four centuries later. "Brise" folding fans carry no mount: The sticks, bound together by a ribbon, form the whole fan.

The cockade fan, which dates back to medieval times, is something of a hybrid. It is made of broad overlapping sticks or of pleated paper which can be spread into a full circle; when open, it becomes a round handscreen.

When Pocahontas posed for her portrait in 1616, dressed as the fashionable Virginia planter's wife she was, she held a feather fan of the handscreen type. But in 1675, one John Hall wrote from London to his mother in Ipswich, Conn., in reply to her request for a feathered fan, "none but very grave persons (and of them very few) use it." The folding fan had supplanted the cockade and handscreen as the fan of choice. It was to be an indispenseable item in the wardrobes of 12 generations of well-dressed women.

The painted fans from Italy prized in the late 17th and early 18th centuries were not only practical and decorative. "If conversation lagged, you could always talk about the image on the fan," Gershuny says. Fan painters took their themes from paintings and frescoes, and such classical topics as the Rape of the Sabines and Diana and Endymion provided plenty of food for talk.

"By the mid-18th century, a French fan was the thing to have — partly because so many fine Italian craftsmen emigrated to France," Gershuny says. Decoration became lighter, with an emphasis on pastoral scenes, aristocrats at play or romantic subjects.

Europeans also became fascinated with the Orient, although "the Orient they painted was a fastasy," she adds. During the vogue for "chinoiserie" and on through the 19th century, Oriental workmen accommodated the fantasy by creating for export millions of fans and fan sticks — many of them exquisitely beautiful, but bearing no resemblance at all to the fans prized in China and Japan.

Church fans displayed suitable themes from the Bible. "One of the Smithsonian's church fans from the period displays the edifying scene of Abraham sacrificing Issac — but it also has peep holds in it so the used could look at her neighbors, yet maintain a pious posture," Gershuny explains. And souvenir fans were common: Many travellers returned from the Grand Tour with fans depicting sights such as the 1789 eruption of Vesuvius.

The 18th century was the heyday of both the painted fan — a perfect marriage of intricately carved and gilded sitcks with delicately colored, embroidered and sequined leaf — and of the art of its manipulation. "What daring bard shall e'er attempt to tell, the powers that in this little engine dwell?" asked one poet. "What verse can e'er explain its various parts, Its num'rous uses, motions, charms and arts? Its shake triumphant, its virtuous clap, its angry flutter, and its wanton tap."

Satirist Joseph Addison pronounced in 1711: "Women are armed with fans as men with swords, and sometimes do more execution with them." (The quote remined so timely that Benjamin Disraeli borrowed it more than a century later.) "There is scarce any emotion in the mind which does not produce a suitable agitation in the fan," Addison asserted, and proposed an academy to teach "the exercise of ... that modish little machine."

In the 18th century, courting couples had little if any privacy. A "language of the fan" made it possible for a lady to deliver a variety of specific messages at a distance. For example, letting the fan rest on her right cheek signified "Yes," on the left cheek, "No." Twirling it in the right hand meant "I love another," while putting the handle to the lips said "Kiss me." There wasn't much secrecy, since the signals were common knowledge. But an enterprising couple could certainly have devised a private code.

If the lovers could sit together, a fan with questions and answers — chiefly romantic — inscribed on the sticks or mount made it possible to carry on a silent conversation simply by pointing to the appropriate phrases: "Do you care?" "Perhaps."

Good quality printed fans became available in the mid-18th century. These were especially suited to commemorative or ephemeral subjects. Whatever was news, from balloning to the bloody events of the French Revolution, appeared on fans: They bore political cartoons, plans showing show who sat in what box at the theater, advertisements, horoscopes and instructions for complicated dances like the quadrille, where a misstep meant disaster.

Puzzle fans were also popular. Opened in the "wrong" direction, these revealed hidden images — sometimes salacious, sometimes politically dangerous. After the French Revolution, a Royalist lady might carry a fan which displayed the motto "Vive le Roi" — but only when open to a specific point — or a plain paper which, when held to the light, revealed in the watermark portraits of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

The Revolution meant the demise of the luxurious, painted fan, but France continued to dictate the fashions. In the very early 19th century, spangled textile and gauze fans had all the glitter — and none of the politically dangerous connotations — of jewels. Fans also dwindled in size as well as importance with the advent of the narrow, high-waisted neo-classical fashions. "Some were so small — two to four inches long — that they were called 'imperceptibles,'" Gershuny says. Other fans were cunningly designed to fold up or telescope; cockade fnas could be slipped into a small handbag or carried unobtrusively. Ivory brise fans, carved or plain, were much in voque — tiny ball fans with uncarved sticks and a pencil attached served as dance programs.

When fans again became important to fashion in the 1840s, they returned to the Victorians' delight in variety, profusion and eclectic ornament. Fans became a fashion necessity — even for dolls — and rapidly changing styles kept manufacturers busy adjusting to the demand. Fan makers took advantage of the new machine technology, but, Gershuny laments, with "typically disastrous consequences" to the beauty of fans.

Sticks thickened, partly because of heavier design values, partly to support the weight of elaborate textiles and embroidery. Fans also grew in size. By the 1880s, they were often 16 inches long. That meant a spread of nearly a yard when opened. Needless to say, rapid manipulation of such creations was difficult if not impossible. The artistry of 18th-century coquettes was not revived, although the language of the fan was published by one manufacturer for his customers' enjoyment.

Any fabric or material that could be used in a fan was, from exquisite lace to rubber. Painted fans came back in voque, and period fans were copied and imitated — some with obvious flaws, some so well that, like one fan in the Smithsonian collection, they have been mistaken for authentic 18th-century work.

Godey's Lady's Book provided readers with instructions for creating handscreens, cockade and folding fans. (Those who recycled old sticks left a legacy of confusion to collectors.) One article began: "Firescreens composed of the wings of pheasant of other game are both pretty and useful ... The wings must be cut off when the bird is fresh killed."

The Victorian passion for feathers, which decimated the world's bird populations, was not confined to women's hats. Fan makers stole plumage from the exotic peacock and the humble turkey. One folding fan recreates the spread wing of an American eagle; a screen fan displays a hummingbird mounted in its center. The beautiful ostrich feather fans which came into fashion in the 1880s endured to the end of the fan's span.

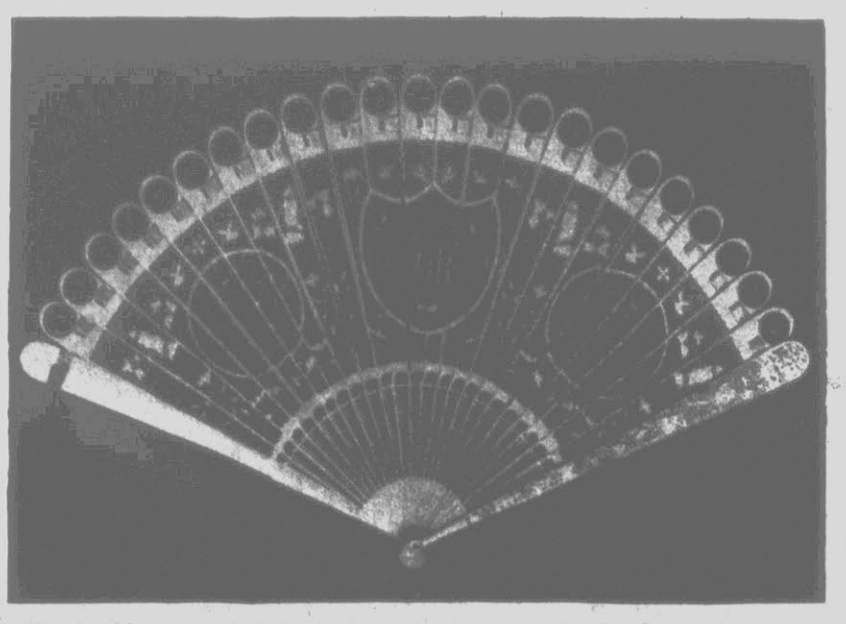

The first World War dealt a lethal blow to the way of life that held a place for the fan as a work of art, an ornament and a feminine prop. In the 1920s and '30s, fans were designed for practical cooling, for advertising the virtues of such sponsors as Moxie and Pan American Airways, for special evening costume or the exotic dances of Sally Rand. The flapper had plenty to occupy her hands — her cigarette holder, cocktail glass and handbag — and the working girl's fingers were firmly planted on her typewriter. The change in women's lifestyles proved to be permanent. But one can still be intrigued by the fan's beauty and the days when women were mistresses of that "modish little machine."

Fans grew larger and larger during the Victorian era. Ostrich feathers became popular late in the 19th century and remained a favorite until the era of the elegant fan passed with the 1920s.

Millions of fans were made in the Orient for export in the 18th and 19th centuries. The initials in this exquisite 18th-century ivory brise fan, carved and pierced in China, indicate that it was made to order.

Freezing For Fresh Taste

For fresh-picked flavor in February, follow these guidelines when freezing foods, says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension foods and nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

•Freeze only young, tender, tasty vegetables. The results can be no better than the vegetables were when they were first frozen.

•Work quickly. Don't let a bushel of beans sit around overnight. Pick only as much as can be put up immediately.

•Always follow blanching directions carefully. If the food isn't blanched properly it may spoil, develop a musty taste or become tough.

•Use a moisture, vapor-proof freezer container. Poor packaging will give a poor produce. Vegetables packed in a sandwich bag will not spoil, but they will lose quality and flavor.

•Make sure the freezer is no higher than zero degrees. Put packages to be frozen in the coldest sections (on the freezer floor or against a side wall) so they freeze quickly. Do not overlaod the freezer with too much newly-packaged food at one time.

Freeze Fruit First For Jelly

Many women balancing a job outside the home and family responsibilities, also try to preserve food in the winter months. Whether this is done to save money or to please the family's taste buds, the working woman's time is short, says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension foods and nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

Planning is very important when canning on a time budget. "If you make sweets like jams and jellies, you can save time by freezing the fruit and making your jellies later in the year. This not only helps save time during the busy season, but you'll have better-flavored products," Dr. Tope says.

Remember that nutritional value and taste starts to decrease as soon as a product is picked. Buy or pick only the amount which can be preserved right away. If a product must be held overnight, keep it cold.

Check equipment ahead of time. Make sure the pressure canner works properly, and have the gauge tested at the county extension office. Purchase lids and prepare them as directed by the manufacturer. Check jar rims for nicks and select rings that are not rusty.

Andrews-Pollard Vows Said

Candace Gray Pollard of Greenville and Randy Duane Andrews of Winterville were united in holy matrimony at 8 p.m. Friday in a candlelight ceremony. The Rev. Jerry Johnson, the bride's pastor, performed the double ring ceremony in the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Gray Pollard of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Russell Gilbert of Winterville

A program of wedding music was presented by Teresa Jordan, pianist. Margie Pollard sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer." David Allen sang "More."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of coin-dotted English net over satin designed with an open neckline outlined in a double ruffle with satin roses. The fitted bodice was enhanced by a pleated sash of satin encircling the waist and forming a long bow at the scooped back. Long puffed sleeves were fashioned of self-fabric and the full skirt and attached chapel train featured multi-tiers edged in taffeta with satin bows on the side. Her fingertip veil of illusion, edged in satin, was attached to a headpiece of lace and pearls. The bride wore a pearl necklace and earrings, a gift from her parents. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations, baby's breath and long streamers.

Lynn Nelson, maid of honor, wore a formal gown of blue sheer polyester linen in acetate taffeta with a jewel neckline, attached lace caplet and a raised waistline with long satin bow in back. It had a full skirt with a lace flounced hem.

Bridesmaids were Debbie Brown of Ayden, Brenda and Dawn Pollard, all sisters of the bride of Greenville, and Deannie Gilbert, sister of the bridegroom of Ayden. Each wore a gown of blue sheer polyester linen acetate taffeta, polyester lace trim with scoop neckline trimmed with triple tiered lace and fitted bodice. The skirt had a flounced hem. Each carried a brass lamp with lighted candle with mixed flowers, baby's breath and long streamers.

The bride's mother wore a formal misty mauve gown of lustrous polyester knit with a stand-up collar. The mother of the bridegroom selected a full lavender gown of polyester knit with spaghetti straps. Each carried a lighted candle to the altar and placed them on each side of the unity candle. After the vows, the couple lighted the unity candle.

Ushers for the ceremony were Mark Pollard and Carl Gaskins of Greenville, Dino Gilbert of Winterville and Johnny Brown of Ayhden. The best man was Billy White of Greenville.

The bride graduated from North Pitt High School and the bridegroom attended D.H. Conley High School. Both attended Pitt Community College. She is presently working at Lynn's Hallmark and he is associated with his father at Pitt Welding.

The wedding was directed by Sherry Grant, cousin of the bride. Magdalene Jones, aunt of the bride, presided at the register.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Margie Pollard served wedding cake and Margie Hart poured punch. Assisting were Barbara Pollard, Pat Pollard, Mrs. Arnold Tingen and Alma Moore.

Inspired Couple Leaves Tract In Place Of A Tip

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I eat out a great deal in many different places, and tipping has always been a problem for us. (Is it necessary to tip someone who is already drawing a salary to wait on you? And if so, how much is sufficient?) Anyway, you might be interested in our solution to this problem.

Several years ago, while the wife and I were waiting for a table in a busy restaurant, we overheard one waitress ask another waitress how she could afford a vacation in Hawaii. "I saved my tips," was the answer.

I told my wife, "We should do that, too." So since then, instead of leaving a tip, we leave a beautiful religious tract. These inspiring spiritual messages are a great force for good, and I'm sure they've had a wondrous effect on the many waitresses we left them for.

We put our "tip" money into a cigar box, and last year we took a trip to Jamaica!

Through this simple solution, we feel that we have made everybody happy. Pass it on.

LOVES TO TRAVEL
IN OAK PARK, ILL.

DEAR LOVES: While inspirational messages may have a "wondrous" effect on some, legal tender may be preferred by those who rely on tips to pay their bills. So before you make any more waitresses "happy" by leaving a religious tract instead of money, consider this:

As of Jan. 1, 1983, federal law requires tipped employees to pay taxes on a minimum of 8 percent of the restaurant's gross sales whether they actually received that much in tips or not.

DEAR ABBY: If a woman marries a widower with children, she then becomes the stepmother to his children, right?

What happens if they get divorced and he marries again? Is wife No. 2 still considered the stepmother? Or does wife No. 3 become the stepmother? So what happens to wife No. 2?

CONFUSED IN VERMONT

DEAR CONFUSED: The woman to whom the man is married is the stepmother of his children. If that marriage is dissolved, the stepmother becomes a former stepmother, and the next wife (if there is one) becomes the stepmother.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Hates High School Reunions" prompts this.

When my 50th high school reunion was announced, I really didn't want to go because I had let go of all my yesterdays and hadn't kept up with anyone from my class. Besides, they weren't my happiest days. The organizers called me several times because they wanted as many as possible to attend.

My husband, John, insisted that I go. He went with me, and now I'm so glad we didn't miss it.

Abby, I never had a date in high school. I remember feeling very out of it on Monday mornings when the other girls would be talking about the fun they had at the Coconut Grove, Biltmore Bowl or Palladium.

At the reunion, some men I would have given my eyeteeth to date in high school came up to me and told me how much they had admired me, saying they had been awed by my height and athletic ability. (I was 6 feet tall and being trained by Johnny Weissmuller to swim in the Olympics.) They said they regretted not asking me for a date, and it was their loss.

That made up for all the pain I had felt as a dateless teen-ager. John and I went to that reunion with a sense of adventure, and it was wonderful! Attitude is everything.

DEAR ABBY: We recently had some cousins visit us from Italy. They were two sisters, and the gentleman friend of one of the sisters. The sisters were school teachers and the gentleman was a psychiatrist. He spoke some English, but the sisters spoke none.

They said they wanted to see Chicago, so we offered to show them around. They declined, saying they preferred to see it by themselves. Then they asked if they could use our car. We said no, but we offered to help them rent one. They declined.

Two days later they packed up and went back to Italy. Before they left they said we didn't treat them very well!

Abby, were we wrong to refuse them the use of our car?

CAR TROUBLE

DEAR CAR TROUBLE: No. There was more than "car trouble." There was a four-door, seven-cylinder communication gap. Capisce?

Each attendant wore a formal gown of frost rose organdy over matching peau de soie. The fitted bodice featured an open sweetheart neckline to which short puffed sleeves were attached. The gathered skirt fell from a slightly raised waistline and was accented with a satin ribbon sash. The overskirt featured a draped effect trimmed with satin bows. The underskirt was designed with a deep flounced hem. Each carried a hurricane lamps surrounded by lavender and pink lilies and white daisies. The honor attendants carried bouquets of matching flowers.

Flower girl was Candice Boyd of Pinetown, cousin of the bride. She wore a pink full length dress with a gathered skirt and a fitted bodice designed with a scoop neckline edged in a ruffle accented with white lace. The gown also featured short puffed sleeves and white ribbons accented the waistline. She carried a basket filled with flowers in colors matching those of the attendants.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were James Brame of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Roy and Timmy Simmons, both cousins of the bridegroom from Greenville, and Ivy Harris, David Dickerson, Mike Bragg and Mike Allen, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a rose polyester lustreglo gown fashioned with a V-neckline. The mother of bridegroom wore a full length lavender floral print rayon over taffeta dress featuring a gathered jewel neckline. Both mothers were remembered with corsages.

A bridal dinner was given Thursday at the Holiday Inn by the bride's great- aunt, Christine Humble of Fayetteville, in remembrance of her grandmother, Undine Weeks Mills. A bridal luncheon was given by Della Dixon at her home on the river Friday. Several showers were held in honor of the bridal couple.

The bride is a graduate of Greenville Christian Academy and is currently enrolled in the nursing department at Pitt Community College. She works part time at Kiddie Kollege Day Care Center. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt High Shool and is employed by Yale Inc. in Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Winterville.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Julie Hicks

To accompany her husband's presidential memoirs, "Keeping Faith" (published in 1982), first lady Rosalynn Carter recalls the story of her own early life, her marriage and her family, her part in her husband's political career, and the four years of the Carter administration. "First Lady From Plains" is the story of a small-town girl from Georgia who inspired the nation with her independence and commanded the world's attention when she traveled the globe as a special presidential envoy. Moreover, it is the story of a love affair that carried two childhood sweethearts through years of hard work, family campaigning, and ambitious preparation, into the White House.

Intimate recollections form the bulk of the volume, ranging from social to foreign affairs, from political life to more domestic moments. Mrs. Carter tells of her youth spent in the rural South; the courageous strength that her father demanded of her; the handsome man whose picture she fell in love with months before they actually met; the challenges of being a Navy wife and young mother; and her position as a partner in the family peanut business. She comments on the turbulence in the South during the earliest years of her political efforts, the exhausting congressional and gubernatorial campaigns that she helped run and her personal trials as a shy housewife thrust into the spotlight as a public figure in the Georgia governor's mansion.

Her later achievements as First Lady of the United States were marked by determination, spirit and commitment. She offers insights into such critical events as the Camp David summit meetings between Sadat and Begin and the hostage crisis in Iran. In addition she takes the reader behind the scenes at the White House, from the festivities of state dinner's to a very personal tour of the mansion and its many treasures. She speaks out candidly about the loving partnership with her husband that expanded her independence and nurtured her political acumen, and about the central role that her religious beliefs and family have played in her life. Despite the fact that she and her husband have faced extraordinary responsibilities and are living a life they never dreamed of, the author insists that "we are the first and foremost always Rosalynn and Jimmy Carter from Plains, Georgia." "First Lady From Plains" is a revealing portrait of the Carter's shared love and ambition.

Remains An Exercise

Sea Story. By Ken Hele. Illustrated by Karl Fanning. Greenville. Terrydale Publishing. Pages, 148 pages. $2.95.

Ken Hele's "Sea Story" began, according to the author, as "an exercise in writing comedy." The work is energetic and determined, but — due to a lack of artistic coordination, pacing, and adequate editing — in its final form remains an exercise rather than a piece of comedic literature.

Hele's first novel works out on fictional if familiar equipment. His eccentric characters (most of them Merchant Marines, shipbound for much of the story) include a pseudo-bad guy (the captain), a hero (a wise/naive young man), an inept con man, and an object of sexual derision (a hot transvestite who serves as the ship's medical officer). This is, with minor changes, the equipment M*A*S*H, Mr. Roberts and Catch-22 worked out on. But despite tried and true equipment, "Sea Story" works against itself from beginning to end and finally exhausts itself.

A twisting, unevenly time plot turns the eccentric but two-dimensional characters of "Sea Story" into inconsistent caricatures. In turn, underdeveloped characterization renders what might have been, with adequate editing, a workable plot not disjointed and unbelievable. Without sufficient characterization and plot development, "Sea Story" is a comedy that limps at best and atrophies at worst.

Hele has chosen a difficult and demanding craft. Comedy can take many shapes, but it is always a craft of timing. And timing requires exercise.

The object of exercise is to strengthen, and hopefully "Sea Story" succeeds as an exercise. As a novel and a finished piece of comedy, it does not.

A Different Concept

Inside the Criminal Mind. By Stanton E. SAmenow,. Ph.D. New York. Times Books. 285 pages, $15.50.

Beyond the intriguing title of this book is an interesting and provocative study. A member of the President's Task Force on victims of crime, Dr. Stanton Samenow, clinical psychologist now in private practice in Alexandria, Va., sets out to destroy the basic myths about criminals and crime.

During his eight-year association with the late Dr. Samuel Yockelson at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C., Dr. Samenow came to believe that contrary to basic myths, criminals do know right from wrong; they are not hapless victims of oppressive social conditions, and they do not turn to crime because they are rejected by society or because they watch too much violence on television. He refutes the idea that crime is contagious, as well as the idea that crimes of passion are cases of temporary insanity.

In dismissing all of the 20th-century views of criminal behavior and its causes, Dr. Samenow believes that psychiatrists are so busy trying to explain the criminal's behavior that they never try to understand the criminal's view of the world.

He contends that they never refer to the criminal as a human being who makes choices.

Although Dr. Samenow agrees with other psychologists that so far the search to nail down crime's causation has been futile, he also emphatically states that criminals cause crime — criminals who were born with a way of thinking that starts to get them in trouble in elementary school when they begin trying to "build themselves up by tearing others down." Even that early, the future criminal with a grandiose view of himself is a liar, victimizer — an individual with a storng will who takes charge and expects everyone to give in to his desires.

And he also admits, contradictory to his previous denial of the "insanity plea" which criminals use, that it takes a "particular kind of mentality" to break into a woman's home, rape her and then stay for 45 minutes discussing religion as one of his patients did.

Even with these contradictory acknowledgements, Dr. Samenow believes that criminals enter the world trapped by their own most radical impulses. He says: "Although criminals differ in the crimes they find acceptable, they are carbon copies of one another in their view of themselves and the world." Thus, the only way to reduce crime is to change the way criminals think.

Dr. Samenow attempts to change the criminals's thought-patterns in the intense one-on-one program patterned similar to that of Alcopholics Anonymous. His no-games approach unmasks the criminal, letting him know that all his scheming manipulations have been uncovered. He tells the criminal none of his hard luck stories are relevant; the circumstances of his life are of no concern. He makes the criminal painfully aware of himself as a victimizer rather than a victim.

After the criminal is unmasked, he joins a highly structured group where is instructed to keep daily notes of his thoughts. From these notes, the criminal reports without embellishing, editing or omitting, what he has been thinking. Along with note taking, in order to remain in the program, he must sever relations with other criminals; he can have no drugs, no alcohol, no one-night sexual encounters, and he has to attend meetings everyday. The heart of the meeting is the daily report of the criminal's thinking.

Unlike conventional psychologists who encourage patients to express anger, Dr. Samenow asserts that the angry criminal does too much damage ventilating his habitual response of anger. He believes that for the criminal, "Anger is a malignancy that must be remvoed before it spreads and results in a crime."

However, Dr. Samenow says that neither ventilation nor suppression is an adequate solution. The major task with the criminal is to help him gain a realistic view of himself and of the world so that fewer things bother him and that he doesn't over-react when things go wrong. He must learn to "benefit from criticism, cope with rejection, and roll with life's punches."

Although Dr. Samenow tends to overstate through superficial generalizations made from a few repetitious criminal case histories, his program may have great value in reducing crime. Dr. Samenow believes, like Alcoholics Anonymous, that once an erring person learns how good it feels to be in control of himself, he will not let himself backslide into behavior which lowers his self-esteem and threathens his more productive way of life.

Seeking Poems About Collards

ECU News Bureau

AYDEN — Lovers — and haters — of collard greens have less than a month to express their feelings in poetry if they want to enter the Collard Poetry Competition being held in celebration of the tenth annual Ayden Collard Festival. Contest deadline is July 20.

Poems of all types are welcome, in either the adult category ($1 entry fee) or the children's category (no entry fee). Judges are Alex Albright and Luke Whisnant, both writers themselves, who teach English at East Carolina University.

Since the mid-May announcement of the contest, some 120 poems have been received, Albright said. "We've had poems sent from Tennessee, South Carolina and Georgia, lots of entries from Virginia and throughout North Carolina, but none from the town of Ayden so far."

Whisnant, noting that the poets' ages range from 90 on down to eight years, observe that while most of the children's poems are decidely "anti-collards," older poet-contestants generally write of their great liking — or even love — for collards.

Selected entries in the collard poetry competition will appear in a book, "Leaves of Green: The Collard Poems," scheduled for distribution during the festival, Sept. 3-9. The contest anthologies will be sold for a dollar per copy, or $1.50 if ordered by mail from the judges, in care of the ECU English department.

Along with contest poems, the book will feature a poem by Greensboro poet Fred Chappell, the contest's guest celebrity poet, who's contributing a piece about a collard-shaped lapel pin worn by jazz musician Thelonius Monk, a collard-lover and former resident of Rocky Mount.

"Cash prizes will be awarded all winners in both categories," said Albright, who admits that he personally loathes the taste of collards.

"In the adult category, first prize is $25 and a plateful of collards. Second prize is $15 and two platefuls of collards.

"Third prize is $10 and all the collards you can eat."

Contest entries may be mailed to "Collard Poetry Contest," Department of English, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

N. C. Pottery — A Rich History

RALEIGH — When the first English settlers arrived in the New World 400 years ago, they found the native Americans cooking in "earthen pots," a fact that is really not surprising since pottery, like fire and hunting implements, is a basic tool of civilization.

In fact, native pottery has been found in every culture of the world but two — in New Zealand and Australia.

More than likely, the first examples of North Carolina pottery were made by the Indians pounding clay made from pulverized quartz, sand and crushed shell; shaping the pots from coils or strips of clay until the vessel reached the desired shape and then smoothing them by hand. Certainly, this method of pottery was typical of native American pottery of the time.

Pottery was and remains a widely practiced folk art in North Carolina, one that has evolved from one of the most basic utilitarian crafts.

The earliest European settlers in the state relied on the pottery they brought with them or what they could fashion themselves. Since early transportation methods were unreliable for safe transport of fragile earthenware, many successful settlements also had skilled potters, and North Carolina with its rich and varied soil was no exception.

The potter's art which still flourishes in the state today has a rich tradition of master craftsmen.

The European potters' skills were first imported to North Carolina with the Moravian settlements of the early 18th Century. The most famous early potter was Gottfried Aust who worked at Bethabara from 1756 to 1771 when he moved to what is now Old Salem where he operated until 1788. Bethabara continued its pottery tradition with Rudolph Christ and Gottleib Krause, both of whom also worked at Old Salem. The Moravian pottery was ornate stoneware and is highly prized by collectors today.

English potters arrived in Moore County in the mid 1700's where they established a community called Jugtown. Also involved in stoneware production, Jogtown pottery was less ornate than the Moravian designs in the Forsyth County area. After 1850 animal and bird designs in a "flowing blue" pattern became a popular design. Peter Craven was the best known early Jugtown potter.

North Carolina had some 50 small kilns in operation in 1897. One of the potters in the Steeds area was James Fox who was exempted from service in the Confederate Army to manufacture medicine jars and telegraph insulators in the war effort.

Other potters of note were Thomas Rhodes of Lincolnton, the Hilton family at Hickory and the Cole family at Seagrove.

Most of these potters produced salt glazed crockery — pickle jars, teapots, and churns. One North Carolina addition to pottery was stoneware tombstones in the form of inscribed jugs. The earliest is dated 1838. The most famous is marked with the following tribute to a deceased spouse: "She done the best she know'd how."

Because of the varieties of clay available in the state, there are a variety of pots and glazes available. North Carolina soil has also helped to contribute to some of the most famous dinnerware in the world — in 1767 Thomas Griffith on commission from Josiah Wedgewood bought five tons of potters earth from a source near Franklin and returned it to England.

At Salem, English Queensware — a fine pottery resembling porcelain — was produced until 1786.

Porcelain or the type of pottery called china today was not produced domestically before 1900. The Chinese began making it in the 8th Century. Europeans didn't discover the process until the 18th Century, but the equipment was expensive and most Americans who could afford it preferred English imports.

Among the active potteries in North Carolina today are Old Salem, Inc., Seagrove Pottery, J.B. Cole's Pottery, M.L. Owens Pottery, Jugtown Pottery, Joe T. Owen Pottery, Teague's Pottery, Cole's Pottery, Brown's Pottery and Evan's Pottery. They are found in Forsyth, Randolph, Montgomery, Moore, Lee and Buncombe counties.

North Carolina maintains an active pottery community today. Many have inherited their family traditions. Some still operate kilns dug into the earth in the tradition of the earliest potters.

Beautiful in its simplicity, North Carolina pottery ranks among the best examples of an early American tradition that is still practiced and developing today.

North Carolina pottery and pottery techniques are on display at Old Salem in Winston-Salem, Seagrove Pottery Museum in Seagrove, the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte, the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, and the Greenville Museum of Art, among other places.

THE TOO WET TO PLOW . . . Band (above) is one of two attractions to perform today at 7 p.m. at the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street. The second group on today's program is the Swift Creek Cloggers of near Gardnersville.

Sunday In The Park

Members of a Greenville group, the Too Wet To Plow String Band, and members of the Swift Creek Cloggers of near Gardnersville are the entertainers being featured in today's Sunday in the Park program at 7 p.m. at the Sunday in the Park site.

The summer Sunday program, funded by the City of Greenville under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, is held on the grassy slope east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth Streets. There is no admission charged, and the public is invited to bring along folding chairs or other items to make listening more comfortable.

The Too Wet To Plow String Band, a quartet, is composed of Earl White, fiddle; Nancy Sluys, banjo, fiddle and vocals, Bill Sluys, bass, and Charlie Pickford, guitarist. White is a native of Greenville; Nancy and Bill Sluys are from Connecticut and have lived in Greenville for the past two years; and Pickford, from New Jersey, has lived in Greenville for five years.

Plans for today's concert include the appearance of Mike Wells as a special guest.

The Swift Creek Cloggers is a relatively new group to the Pitt County area. The group, based in the Seift Creek community of Gardnersville, has performed together for a little over a year. The original members formed the group after receiving lessons from Karen Roberson of the Green Grass Cloggers.

Past appearances by the Swift Creek Cloggers include ones at the Ayden Collard Festival, the Cerebral Palsy Telethon, Green Grass Clogger Day, Greenville Spring Fest, and the Bluegrass Association in Kinston.

?The group now has 11 members — Brenda and Jimmy Foreman, Jo Ellen and Kincy Reel, Lisa Stancil, Teresa Stancil, Pam Dixon and Robert Halstead, Jr. are the eight who formed the original group. Linda and Ken Loud, formerly of the Cane Creek Cloggers of Chapel Hill, joined after moving to the Greenville area. Chad Reel, the newest and youngest member, learned to clog from his parents and other members of the group.

'Chicago' Opening Tomorrow

MAUREEN KERRIGAN

The East Carolina Summer Theatre will present "Chicago," a "musical vaudeville" for a six-night run, Monday through Saturday, at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theatre on the ECU campus.

Chicago of the late 1920's, the days of flappers, gangsters, bootleg booze and flaming youth, is the focal point of this musical. It was the gin age, the jazz age, the age of passion murders and Roxie Hart saw it all. A boozing club singer, Roxie kills her faithless lover, is thrown in jail and at the trial is defended by a slick lawyer who tries to capitalize on the publicity for the sake of acquital, a stage career, fame and fortune — almost. This story was made into a film called "Roxie Hart" in the 1940's, with Ginger Rogers in the title role.

Bob Fosse, the entertainment industry's first Triple Crown winner — a Tony, an Oscar and an Emmy — all in the same year, is the person behind the musical version of "Chicago."

Starred as Roxie Hart, the singer who's a killer, will be Maureen Kerrigan, who returns to the Summer Theatre after her role as Sally in "Cabaret" two seasons ago. Her sidekick, a vaudeville girl with high hopes and a hot temper will be Barbara Gulan as Velma. David Heckert is Billy Flynn, the lawyer who helps pretty girls get away with murder.

Production director and choreographer is Broadway veteran Jay Fox. Scenic designer is Ropert Alpers, and Barry Shank is music director. Others in the cast will be Janice Shcreiber as Mrs. Morton, the jail matron; Gary Lamb in the role of Amos Hart, the husband; and J. Loeffelholz as Mary Sunshine. Slayers who share Roxie Hart's jail will be performed by Su-Su Corbitt, Connie Yoder, Jamie Wilkerson, Paula Johnson, Patti Weeks and Jennifer Paulson.

Tickets are available for all performances Monday through Saturday, and may be purchased at McGinnis Theater at the corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets, Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. until 8:30 p.m., or reserved by calling 757-6390.

'Sleeping Beauty' Coming To Town

The children's classic, "Sleeping Beauty," by the Brothers Grimm, will soon be performed in Greenville by Vincent Anthony's Vagabond Marionettes.

The tale is of a young princess enchanted by an evil fairy, Demonia. On the princess' 16th birthday she pricks her finger on a needle and falls asleep for 100 years. The prince must rescue her and the castle from a dragon who prevents anyone from entering.

Performances will be given at Jaycee Park Auditorium on Cedar Lane on July 12, with shows at 2 and 7 p.m. Admission is $1. Advance tickets may be purchased at the Jaycee Park Administrative Office.

In 1979, Cuban President Fidel Castro visited New York for the first time in 19 years. Castro delivered a speech to the U.N. General Assembly.

Dance Video Tapes Presented To ECU

ECU News Bureau

Television viewers across the state may soon get an insider's look at the making of an unusual work of art by a Greenville sculptor and East Carolina University dance professor.

A professionally produced video tape exploring the creation of the East Carolina Dance Theatre piece "Dimensions in Time and Space" recently premiered in a special showing on the ECU campus and is available for presentation on the Public Broadcast System (PBS) network.

The piece features a dance program choreographed by ECU professor Pat Pertalion that is performed within a framework of kinetic sculptures made especially for the event by Tom Grubb, an MFA graduate of the ECU School of Art.

In the performance, an athletic cast of five male dancers moves across the stage interacting with each other and with the bamboo and rope sculptures. At the conclusion of the piece, the dancers join completely with the sculptures, stringing colored ropes from the structure overhead.

The video production shows Grubb and Pertalion at work in their studios, the installation of the sculptures in ECU's McGuinnis Theatre, and a concert performance of the piece. Frequent comments by the artists and others involved in the performance give the viewer a clear picture of the thought and preparation required to bring the project to life.

The video was directed by David Balch, assistant director of medical communications at the ECU School of Medicine, and produced by a Greenville firm, Diversified Media Productions. Janet Gainos, president of the production company, presented copies of the video to ECU officials during the premiere showing.

Funding for the production was arranged through the ECU Division of Academic Affairs. The video will be used for recruitment activities as well as for presentation on the PBS network.

Highland Games Set

LINVILLE — The 29th Annual Granfather Mountain Highland games and Gathering of the Scottish Clans will be observed this year on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 13, 14 and 15.

The Gaelic festivites actually begin on Thursday evening at MacRae Meadow with the invoking of the spirit of the clans. The ancient torchlight ceremony begins at twilight and is one of the magical moments of the Scottish celebration. No admission is charged.

During the 1984 opening ceremonies a proclamation will be made to herald the celebration of 400 years of British colonization in the New World with festivities beginning on the coast the same weekend. A party of guests from Plymouth, England, will visit Grandfather Mountain during the week which follows the annual gathering of the clans.

Activities on Friday begin with a piping concert at William's Gymasium on the campus of Lees-McRae College in Banner Elk at 7 p.m. Tickets at the door will be $2.

The Ceilidh begins at the college's Lees-McRae's Hayes Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults and $2 for children under 12 and will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis at the door. The Ceilidh is a collection of music, dance, and celebration of Scottish folklore. Because of interest in this event in past years, a second Ceilidh is scheduled for Saturday night.

At 9 p.m. Friday, a program of Scottish Country Dancing is being offered at 9 p.m. at William's Gymnasium. The fee for those wishing to receive lessons is $10, and for viewers the tickets are $3.

The main events of the festival take place Saturday at MacRae Meadows at the base of 6,000-foot Grandfather Mountain on US 221 two miles north of Linville and one mile from the Blue Ridge Parkway. The large field is encircled by colorful tents which shelter over 100 individual Clan information and meeting plaes, as well as information booths where visitors can trace their Scottish lineage and identify their appropriate loyalties.

At about 9 a.m. Saturday, the sounds of bagpipes begin to filter through the hills as many of North America's top Highland athletes prepare for a day of competition originally devised by Clan Chieftans to determine who from their tribes were the fiercest, strongest and best suited to lead the Clan into battle.

Among demanding competitions facing the brawny athletes are tossing a tree-trunk, tossing a 16 lb. bag of hay over a bar more than 20 feet above ground, throwing weights of 22, 28 and 56 pounds, and Highland wrestling.

Other colorful events include the dancing and piping competitions that take place all day with the Atlantic International Open Dancing Championships as one of the highlights; and an exhibition of shepherding skills; a track and field meet.

Activities on Sunday, the final day of the Highland Games revolve around the "Gatheirng of the Clans." At 9:30 a.m., the Scottish worship service begins at the Meadow and includes "The Flowers of the Forest," a memorial to friends who has died, and a "Kirkin o the Tartan," or blessing of the Tartans.

Guests of honor scheduled to be on hand Sunday are The Right Honorable the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, head of the family of Bruce; Roderick Grant Francis MacKenzie, Earl of Cromartie and Chief of Clan MacKenzie; and Charles Hunter of Hunterston, younger son of Neil Hunter, 29th laird and Chief of Clan Hunter. Chief of Games N. J. MacDonald will preside as honored guests are saluted with the Parade of Tartans and by the massed pipe bands that pass in review. Five bands will take part in the parade.

Following these pageantries on Sunday there will be additional exhibitions of Highland athletics, sheep dog shows, dancing and fiddling competitions, and competitions in the Kilted Mile Run and Tug o War. Closing ceremonies are set for 4 p.m.

Tickets to MacRae Meadows are $7 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Pets are not allowed. For more information on the Highland Games call the High Country Host at 800/222/7515.

ECU Student Quincy Scarborough's Hobby Is Cultivating Colorful Cacti

Unusual And Attractive, Easily Grown

WATER IN THE DESERT ... This barrel cactus is a source of emergency water in the desert. The round green cactus can grow up to 4 feet in diameter and has large spikes.

Text By Jane Welborn, Photos By Jerry Raynor

Orchid cacti are found in areas of South America, and the yellow-flowered prickly pear is the cactus native to North Carolina.

TEDDY BEAR CACTUS ... This 75-year-old "Teddy Bear" cactus in Scarborough's collection has brown "hair." This type of cactus is avidly sought by collectors.

There is a cactus that can save your life if you are trapped on the desert, according to a local cactus grower.

When you are dying of thirst in an arid climate, look for a Golden Barrel cactus (Echinocactus grusonii), said Quincy Scarborough, a Greenville resident. This particular cactus contains a liquid which will not harm humans.

Not only can a cactus save your life, but also the hardy plants are easy to care for and are interesting and unusual house plants. Because it can grow in severe environments with little care, a cactus can live many years.

The cactus is the only plant that is native only to North America, although it has been transported to other areas, said cactus collector and grower Scarborough, an East Carolina University psychology major. There are over 10,000 different varieties of cacti, some with stiff spines, some with hairy spines, few with leaves, most with bright flowers.

"The word cactus comes from the Greek word meaning 'thistle,'" he said. "The cacti are named with Latin words because Latin is a dead language and will not change. But all cacti have a common name, often based on what they look like." Among the varieties Scarborough owns are "Old Men" cacti with long white hairy "beards," rotund "Old Women" cacti with white hair and "brain" cacti, round and made up of entertwined thin, contorted segments.

Satterwhite said all cacti are succulents, plants that store water in their stem or leaves. Because a cactus can store water, the plant needs liquid only once a month in the cooler months and twice a month during its growing period in the warmer months. He said the roots of the cactus are close to the top of the soil to trap the moisture easily.

"You should drench the cactus real good and let it dry out before watering it again," Scarborough said. "Most cacti like arid areas and only need a few hours of light, so they are perfect indoor plants."

Scarborough said the cacti thrive best in a partially sandy soil (half sand, half potting soil) and only need a mild fertilizer. He added that the pot the cactus is planted in should have holes in the bottom so water can drain through, and clay pots are ideal for cacti.

"Most species of cacti are found in Mexico and the southwest United States — Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California," Scarborough said. "But some species grow all the way up to Canada. The prickly pear is the cactus that is native to North Carolina.

"Most people think cacti only grow in the desert. This is a misconception," he added. "The orchid cactus grows in the trees of South America in a wet climate. Some cacti can survive cold temperatures."

Scarborough said cacti can be distinguished from other succulent plants because cacti have areoles, a spine cushion located at the base of the spine. New growth and joints of the cactus begin at the areole.

Cacti species have different shapes, Scarborough said. Some cacti, such as the saguaro cactus, grow 30-40 feet high, while others remain small. Some cacti are round, like the barrel cactus, but can grow to a diameter of 4 feet.

Usually a cactus flowers between May and July, during the cactus' growing period. There are some species, however, like the Christmas cactus, Thanksgiving cactus or Easter cactus, that bloom at different times of the year.

The flower falls off the cactus, leaving the fruit, which contains seed from which new cacti can grow. Some cacti flower when they are a year old, others take 30-40 years before they flower. Cactus flowers, depending on the species, can be yellow, red, orange, pink, purple or white. Some flowers bloom at night. The flower of the saguaro cactus is the state flower of Arizona.

Scarborough began collecting cacti four years ago. "I like plants," he said. "I found that cacti were easy to keep. They are interesting and unusual."

He said that he soon had 100 different species of cacti, including a 75-year-old "Teddy Bear" cactus highly sought by collectors.

His hobby has turned into a business, due to the easy propagation of cacti. The "babies" that grow on the cactus or around its base can be broken off and planted directly in soil and will root in a few weeks. The joint segments that grow from the base of the cactus can also be rooted in this manner. Cacti can also be propagated by planting the seed that comes from the fruit.

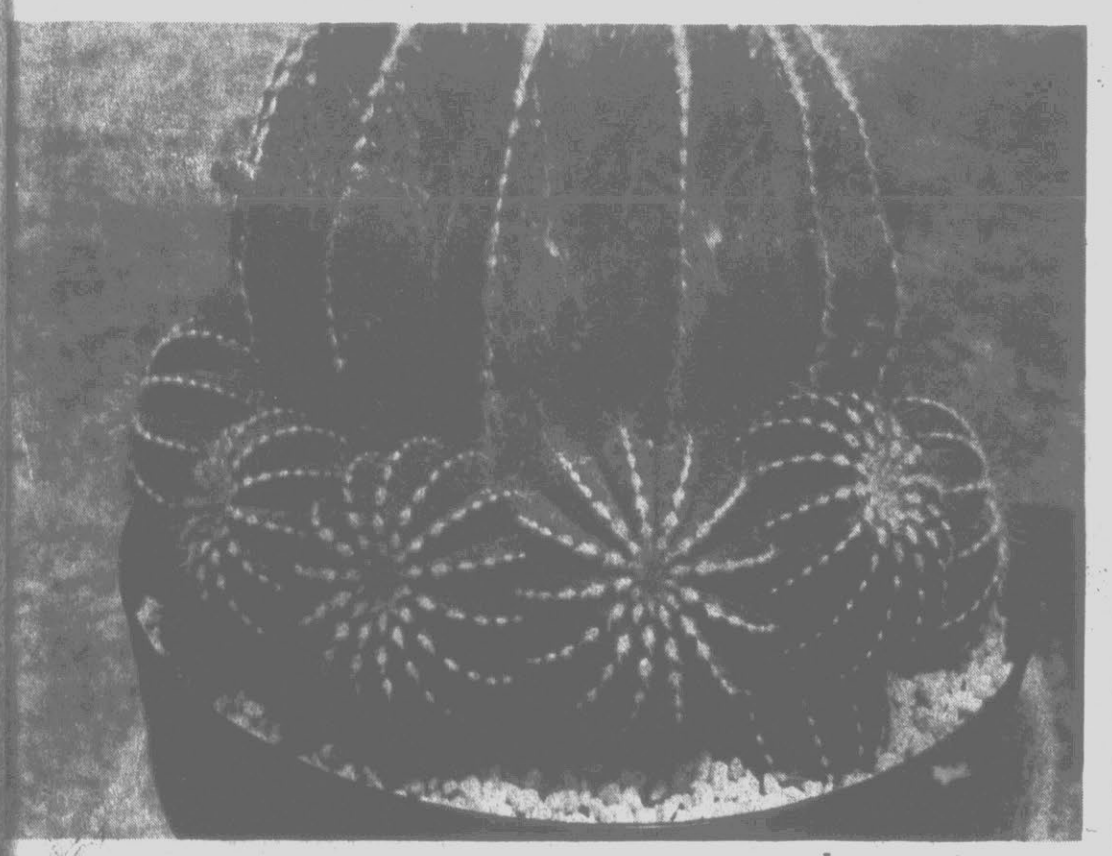

Scarborough said that besides being ornamental plants, cacti have other uses. The collector said the prickly pear is edible, and the fruit of some cacti tastes like tomatoes or apples. Some cacti are used for cattle feed. The liquid found in the cacti has been used for medicinal purposes.

The white hair found on some cacti were used as thread by Indian tribes. Indians also used the buttons of cacti in their rituals; the buttons of the peyote cactus contain a hallucinogenic substance that sends the user into a trancelike state. There are laws concerning the use of this drug.

Scarborough warned that the milky sap found inside some cacti is poisonous to humans, and the spines on some cacti can bury in the skin.

Some cacti are quite rare and are endangered. State parks in the Southwest have been set up to protect cacti.

Scarborough said that because cacti are easy to maintain, even someone who doesn't have a green thumb should have no problem growing the plants. The many different varieties of cacti make unique dish gardens or can be used for outdoor landscaping.

BABY CACTI ... Baby cacti cluster around the base of the "Notocactus Magnificens." Each baby can be placed in dirt and will develop its own root system in a few weeks.

SPINEY CACTUS ... The spines on this "Curiosity Plant" cactus are sharp and offer the plant protection. Areoles are located where the spine grows from the plant.

West Germany Is Planning To Give Capital City An Overdue Facelift

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Plans are being made to give Bonn a facelift 35 years after it became the make-do capital of West Germany.

Although charming in a Rhine River setting, Bonn has never seemed grand enough for its duties as the political center of Western Europe's most powerful country.

But the West German government finally is going to do something about it, starting with a few well-placed construction projects, including renovation of the Parliament.

"We want to help Bonn fulfill its capital function," Building Minister Oscar Schneider told a news conference in the latter part of June.

Schneider's ministry, which is mapping the facelift, has a lot to do to bring government facilities up to par.

There is still not enough space in federal buildings for each deputy in Parliament to have his own office.

There is no official guest house, and no appropriate memorial for a visiting head-of-state to lay a wreath or speak a few solemn words.

The Parliament building is a former teachers' college that now is cramped, and government ministries are scattered all over town, with some of them in former army barracks.

Among the few attractions in Bonn, a city of 295,000 people, is the house where Beethoven was born and a provincial museum holding the skull of Neanderthal man. But there is no art or history museum for the thousands of tourists, including many students, who visit each year.

Bonn's deficiencies are the result of its peculiar history. The small university city was made the "provisional capital" after the West German state was founded in 1949 from the three postwar zones formerly occupied by the French, Americans and British.

In the first years, when reunification with East Germany seemed a distinct possibility and not the distant dream it is now, little was built in Bonn.

Now, with the "provisional" status more permanent, the government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl is moving to add more office space and some of the other things Bonn has done without.

The government plans to build a "House of History," meaning post World War II history; an art museum, and a monument for wreath-laying along the Rhine, Schneider said.

Plans are also being made to expand office space for parliamentarians and to renovate the chamber itself, while keeping it in the same modernistic white building.

While the renovation is going on, Schneider said, Parliament will meet in an old brick water works adjacent to the current building, a few yards from the Rhine. The move probably will occur late in 1985 for what could be a two-year stay.

Although there was talk of building an imposing new Parliament building, that plan was scrapped recently for financial reasons, said Harald O. Hermann, Parliament spokesman.

Even with the less ambitious renovation, it will cost up to 10 million marks ($4 million) to fix up the waterworks for its temporary function, and some 20 million marks ($8 million) to renovate the old Parliament chamber, Hermann said.

But there are no plans to construct a sizeable guesthouse for foreign visitors, who must now stay at their embassies or the small, moated Gymnich Castle rented by the government. Built in 1547, the castle is 18 miles out of town.

A few years ago, the Bonn government paid 20 million marks ($7.4 million) for the nearby Petersberg Hotel, an elegant building that has been a stopping off place for many foreign dignitaries, with the idea of making it a guesthouse.

But when it was determined that renovation would cost an additional 100 million marks ($37 million), the plan was shelved, according to the Foreign Office.

Bonn also has capital-sized traffic problems with little hope of a quick solution. Some 150,000 automobiles clog its streets daily, and 600 trains pass through the center of town every day on one of the busiest stretches of track in the country.

"We want Bonn to live up to its special spiritual, historical and cultural responsiblity," Schneider said.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We want to put down a flagstone path in our backyard, which extends outward to several hundred feet from the house, but we don't want to bother with using mortar. Can you tell us how this is done? We don't mind physical work, which we understand is necessary to keep the path maintained year after year. Please tell us what you know about that aspect of the project.

A. — Installing flagstone without mortar is not much different from installing them with mortar as far as maintenance is concerned, since both call for inspection and attention at periodic intervals. To lay the flagstones without mortar, dig out the area where the stones are to be placed to about 3 inches. Place sand on the ground so that most, but not all, of the depth is covered.

Use flagstones which are not thicker than the sand, setting them firmly and tapping them down with a mallet or some tool that will not split the stones. Work with a level so the stones are set evenly. Step on each stone to be sure it is firmly in place. Leave small spaces between the stones.

Once all the flagstones are set, spread sand over the entire surface, sweeping it into the joints. Water with a sprinkler, so the pressure from the hose does not dislodge the sand. After watering, inspect the entire job and see where extra sand is needed between the joints. It's a good idea to do this job when the weatherman predicts some fair weather for a day or two. A very heavy rain immediately after completing the job can mean extra work.

Q. — The hallway in our converted barn leaked after recent heavy rains. We called in a roofer, who said he could put some roofing cement where the leaks are, but could not get to putting on a badly needed new roof for a few months. We are agreeable to this if no new leaks occur. What is your opinion?

A. — First, it is hoped something was done before this, since we have had some new heavy rains in the past few weeks. Generally, temporary patches hold for months, but this is by no means a certainty. Have you had a second opinion on whether a new roof is needed? Presumably, though, you have reason to believe this is so, probably because the roof is very old. When leaks begin occurring in old roofs, the patches may last but new leaks take place in other locations. If you have confidence in your roofer, he has to be the authority on the subject after making a personal inspection.

(Everything you should know about roofing, including an asphalt shingle color guide, is included in Andy Lang's booklet, "The Selection of Quality Roofing," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest are answered in the column.)

Q. What could cause okra pods to be bent or twisted? It looks like there are small punctures on the bent sides. (R.G., Silk Hope)

A. Okra pods may be bent or twisted due to stink bug feeding injury. Stink bugs can be controlled by spraying with malathion according to instructions on the label.

Q. What are some varieties or cultivars of Southern magnolia? (L.L., Wadesville)

A. "Goliath" is a variety with large flowers — some up to 12 inches across. "St. Mary" blooms when it is young. "Samuel Somer" is a variety that grows rapidly. Other varieties are available with different characteristics such as the shape of the leaves or the color of the underside of the leaves.

Q. What is the difference between a cantaloupe and a muskmelon? (V.M., Wendell)

A. Muskmelon and cantaloupe are common names that are used interchangeably in America for all muskmelons. More technically, however, a true cantaloupe is a type of muskmelon with a hard, warty rind. Its botanical name is Cucumis melo variety cantalupensis. It is grown in Europe but is not usually grown in America. What we ordinarily call a cantaloupe is another muskmelon, Cucumis melo variety reticulatus.

Q. Mexican bean bettles are always a problem on my beans. How can I control them? (R.T., Faison)

A. Both larvae and the adults of Mexican bean beetles feed on beans, peas and some other plants. Damaged plants have a characteristic lacelike or skeletonized appearance. Since damage is usually most severe during July and August, very early maturing varieties and fall plantings may be grown with little injury. Prompt removal of old pods and destruction of old plants are suggested as insurance against population buildup. Spraying or dusting with Sevin according to instructions on the label will offer further control.

A Boat Dream Fulfilled

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Clarke Taylor decided when he was a youngster in Anderson, Ind., that he would one day own a boat to enjoy. And he knew then exactly what it would be.

Fifty years later, he has his first boat — just as he always dreamed — docked behind his home on the Intracoastal Waterway here.

But Taylor's vessel, "Joe Jr.," has little semblance to the yachts and sailboats parked on this affluent channel.

That's because his is probably the only 50-ton tugboat that's being used as a pleasure craft in South Florida.

"At least no one runs over you in this boat," he says laughingly as a small yacht passes by, its occupants waving and pointing to the tug.

Taylor reaches for a lever in the wheelhouse to respond with a couple of short blasts on the ship's horn that reverberate across the waterway.

It was last year, Taylor recalls, that he decided to fulfill his childhood dream of owning a tugboat.

"When I was a kid, my family would take me twice a year to visit relatives along the Ohio River about 200 miles away. That's where I first saw tugboats. They're something to take a shine to."

His search ended in New Orleans where he found "Joe Jr.," about to be retired from years of pulling fuel barges on the Mississippi River.

The 50-foot ship was built in 1957 at Houma, La., and is powered by a V8 diesel engine. Its beam is almost 15 feet and it draws 6½ feet of water.

While most yacht owners are particularly proud of some electronic or luxurious fixture aboard their crafts, Taylor's pride and joy is "Joe Jr.'s" power.

"It has a 48-inch propeller and a 300-horsepower engine with a 5-to-1 reduction gear. That gives it 1,500 horsepower! It's a water-going bulldozer."

Another advantage of having a tug, explains Taylor, is the cruise range it provides.

"Joe Jr." carries 2,500 gallons of fuel and averages one mile per gallon. "That gives me 2,500 miles," he adds proudly. "And I carry 5,000 gallons of water."

Plush it isn't.

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

In the finals of the 1947 Spingold Team Championship, the Goren team trailed Schenken by 2,460 points with only 14 boards to play. (In those days, team matches were scored by total points.) The pundits had already conceded the match to the powerful Schenken squad, but our group had other ideas. We whittled away at their lead, and it grew steadily smaller. This deal was one of the last of the match.

Sitting South was "The Baron" — Waldemar von Zedtwitz. He and his partner, Lee Hazen, were not prepared to sell out to the opposition, and Waldy bought the hand at six clubs doubled.

West made the unfortunate choice of a heart as his opening lead. Declarer took dummy's ace and got rid of his diamond loser. Since his only loser was the ace of trumps, the slam made.

It is easy to argue that, in the light of the bidding, West should have chosen a diamond lead, but we feel that is hindsight. However, West should certainly have led the ace of trumps. That would have given him a look at the dummy, and his lead to trick two would have been marked.

In the other room the Schenken team also reached a club slam, and Helen Sobel also led a heart. However, the opponents were in seven clubs, so Helen probably felt she had something in reserve.

Our team gained 1,190 points on the deal, and that proved to be just enough. We won the match by 40 points. But we would have hated to be in Helen's shoes had we lost by 140 points, for in that case her failure to beat the slam two tricks would have cost us the match.

Reservists Offered $900 Re-Up Bonus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has set a program in motion under which the armed services can offer bonuses of up to $900 for reservists signing up for an additional three years in a manpower pool for mobilization.

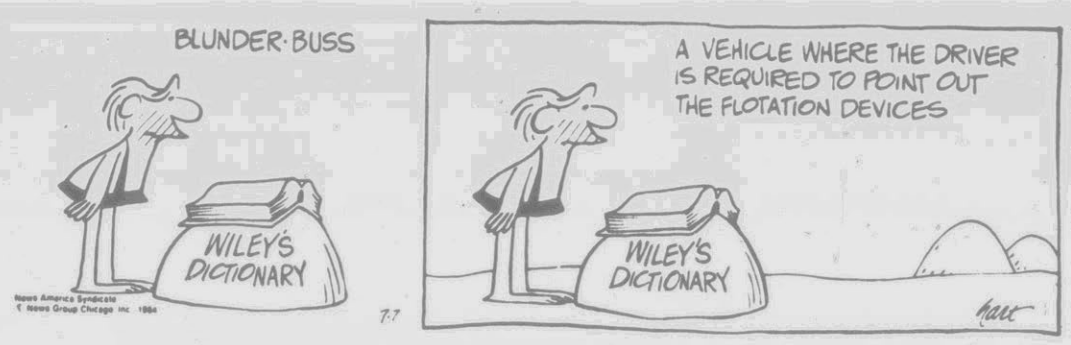

The program started Tuesday is aimed at building up a pool of trained reservists who would be ordered to fill up understrength regular service and national guard or reserve units early in a war mobilization.

The pool, officially called the Individual Ready Reserve, is about 158,000 short of estimated needs in the event of a war crisis.

In the absence of a draft, this pool is virtually the only source for the quick strengthening of U.S. armed forces which can be sent overseas in the first 90 days of a war.

The pool is made up of men and women who have completed a six-year military obligation split between active duty hitches of up to four years and an additional two years in the national guard or reserve. A month ago, that obligation was extended for two additional years, adding that much to the time a former serviceman or woman would remain in the individual reserve pool.

Rare Books Sold

By NICK LUDINGTON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A collection of rare Hebrew books and manuscripts, some of which survived Nazi Germany, brought $1.45 million at auction after a legal maneuver failed to prevent the sale until it could be proven the books were not obtained illegally.

The controversy was not evident at Sotheby's auction house the night of June 26 as buyers bid vigorously by raising hands, eyebrows or numbered paddles.

"There was obviously no sign of animosity in the crowd," said auctioneer David Redden.

Both the state attorney general's office and the city Department of Consumer Affairs tried to delay the auction when Jewish groups argued that more than 30 of the volumes in the 60-item sale came from a Rabbinical seminary in Berlin closed by the Nazis in 1942 and could not have passed voluntarily into private ownership.

But state Supreme Court Justice Jawn Sandifer refused to block the sale saying he was "not convinced" the origin of the documents was in question.

George Snyder, Judaica expert at Sotheby's, said the prices were "extraordinary." Most items were sold well above the estimated prices printed in the sale catalog.

The highest price, $176,000, was paid by a New York dealer for an illustrated manuscript of scriptural explanation created in Vienna by the scribe and artist Aron Wolf of Gewitsch in 1730.

Sotheby's had refused to disclose the names of the consignors, citing a policy of confidentiality.

But James J. Lally, chief operating officer of Sotheby's North America, said the auction house had established to its own satisfaction "that all the items in the auction were free of any moral taint" and "that ownership was clear and title could be passed."

The lawyer for Sotheby's, Marjorie Stone, said she showed the judge in private conference an affidavit "from the individual who brought these materials to this country in 1939."

Ms. Stone said the materials were given to someone by the head of the College for the Scientific Study of Jewish Culture in Berlin. Between 1939 and 1942, when the school was closed, a man named Ismar Elbogen conveyed most of the materials to Hebrew University in Jerusalem for safekeeping.

The Department of Consumer Affairs, meanwhile, had served a subpoena on Sotheby's demanding information about the books. At meetings on Tuesday, Sotheby's complied, revealing the names and addresses of the present and past owners and the consignor, said department spokeswoman Pam Cohen.

"They told us everything we want to know," said Ms. Cohen.

She said the department had agreed to honor the confidentiality of the information, but she said it led officials to believe the past and present owners had come into possession of the volumes legally.

Spokesman Tim Gilles said the attorney general would persist in his lawsuit to uncover the owners of the material.

Roanoke Voyages Stamp Being Issued

The U.S. Postal Service will release the first in a series of Explorers' stamps July 13 honoring the 400th anniversary of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Voyages. The 20-cent commemorative stamp was designed by one of America's foremost maritime artists, Charles Lundgren of New Milford, Conn.

The Roanoke voyages of Sir Walter Raliegh included three trips from England to the New World. The first took place on March 25, 1584, when Queen Elizabeth I granted Raleigh permission to establish an English colony in the New World. Raleigh formed an expedition and placed Philip Amadas and Arthur Barlow in command. On July 13, 1584, they landed on what is now the coast of North Carolina and took possession of the new land in the name of the Queen. Pleased with reports of the expedition, Queen Elizabeth knighted Raleigh.

One year later, in 1585, Raleigh outfitted an expedition of 108 men who sailed from Plymouth, England, to Roanoke Island. Plagued by food shortages, inadequate housing and Indian hostitlity, the colonists were forced to return to England.

In 1587, Raleigh dispatched a second group of colonists — 91 men, 17 women and nine children — to Roanoke Island where Virginia Dare, the first child of English parents in the New World, was born on August 18, 1587. In 1590, a ship carrying supplies to the colony landed, but no evidence of the colonists could be found. Today, the fate of the Lost Colony remains one of history's most intriguing mysteries.

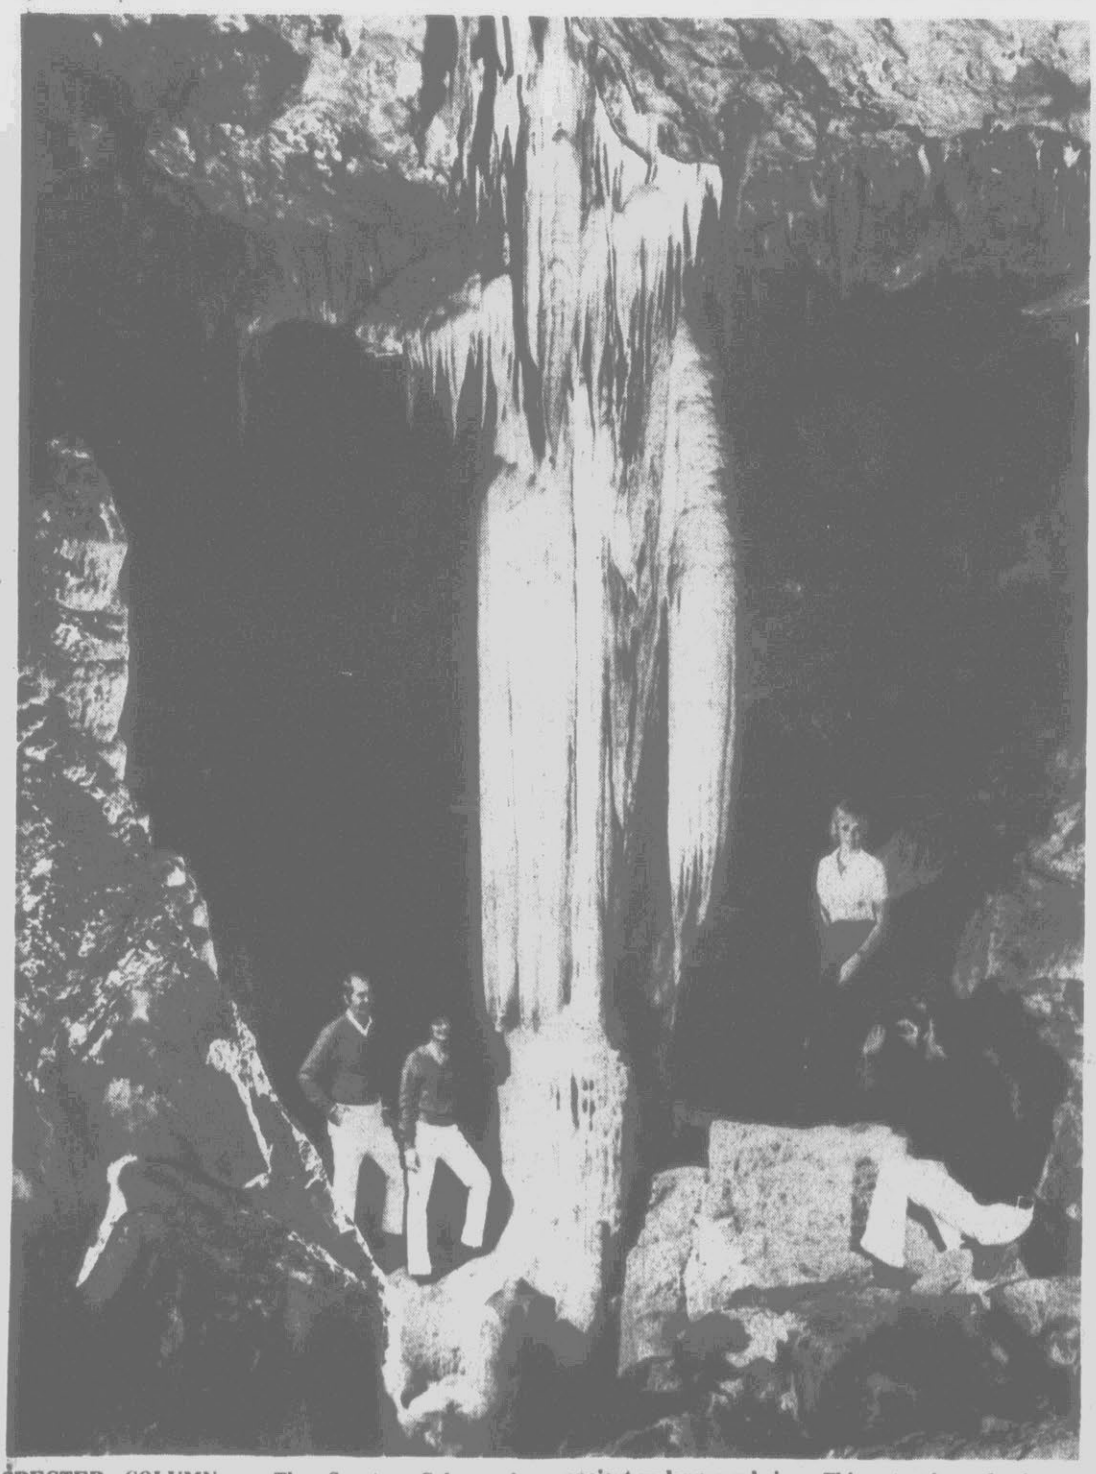

Since no original plans or specifications exist for any of the vessels of the Roanoke Voyages, Lundgren based his desgin on a description of a representative vessel, the Elizabeth, in an account of the 1585 voyage.

The modeler of the stamp was Richard C. Sennett of the American Bank Note Company, which printed the vertically oriented stamps on a gravure press in yellow, red, blue, brown and black. On the selvage of each pane of 50 stamps appears a five-digit plate number preceded by the letter "A". That letter has preceded the plate numbers of all stamps which have been printed since 1979 by private companies under contract with the Postal Service.

• Customers affixing stamps — Customers are encouraged to purchase stamps at their post offices and affix them to their envelopes. Covers bearing customer-affixed stamps will be given preferential service. All envelopes must be addressed on the right side at least 5/8-inch up from the bottom. Peelable return address labels are recommended for this purpose. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right edge. A filler of postal card thickness should be inserted in each cover. Requests should be postmarked no later than August 12, and addressed to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Roanoke Voyages Stamp, Postmaster, Manteo, NC 27954-9991. No remittance is required.

• Postal Service affixing stamps — Except for affixing stamps and addressing orders, follow the procedures listed above. The cost is 20-cents for each stamp to be affixed. Personal checks will be accepted for orders up to the limit of 50 covers. Do not send cash. Postage stamps are unacceptable as payment. Orders should be postmarked no later than August 12, and addressed to: Roanoke Voyages Stamp, Postmaster, Manteo, NC 27954-9992.

SPECTER COLUMN — The Specter Column in Virginia's Luray Caverns is viewed by visitors from the head of a chasm 500 feet long and 90 feet deep. The chasm is believed to have been the main channel of an ancient underground river. This natural wonder is open to the public every day of the year. Cave temperature remains constantly at 54 degree in all seasons.

NYALA NURSERY — Female nyalas are often seen "baby-sitting" for young belonging to other herd females, and the "day care" system at Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla. is being tested to the limits right now. Nine baby nyala were born in April and more in May before the birthing season slowed down for the summer months.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 8, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning finds an element of charm and warmth present about you and you would be wise to utilize this advantageously by helping those in distress. Maintain poise.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning can be very happy with the one you love by being very affectionate, but don't be too demanding.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Some special thought for an outside partner who looks to you for assistance is wise. Don't waste time foolishly

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can get some service rendered where it is important before you get into the difficult tasks awaiting your attention.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Decide on the amusements you like most, and make the necessary appointments early, but let them be within your means.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Keep your mind focused on whatever is pleasant in the morning; although later you may feel cynical, don't let on to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be sarcastic, but show your good friends that you are kind and even-tempered, since they are testing you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make decisions on pleasant matters early and forget the practical for awhile. Concentrate on how to make more money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are feeling fine and can accomplish a good deal in the morning, but later don't be forceful with others or you get into trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early contact a trusted advisor, and don't permit others to change your mind. Don't run away from an annoying situation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can gain a favor from some good pal, but don't make this a habit later on. Plan to have a greater income.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more concerned with your reputation and do nothing that could ruin it in some way. A fine day for prayer and introspection.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Early morning inspiration should be jotted down so that you do not forget it, since later you may not be thinking so clearly.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who early in life will have a number of advantages but should not be spoiled, otherwise later in life could prove very demanding and thoughtless of others, and then the life could prove to be very disappointing.

Baseball's Star Game Brightest Of All

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

It's the only one that counts. Baseball's 55th annual All-Star Game, to be played Tuesday July 10, remains the only professional gathering of its kind that has not lost its luster, not caved in to the modern malaise of boredom and indifference that plagues games from other sports. ABC airs the game from San Francisco's windy Candlestick Park, beginning at 8 p.m. (ET).

Football's Pro Bowl, for example, is played after a long and arduous season. A fan's emotional level is at its lowest and a player's only desire is to go home and rest. The NBA All-Star Game does offer some excitement, but it lacks that extra coat of historical varnish that makes baseball such a special affair. And no serious sports fan cares, one way or the other, about who wins or plays in the NHL All-Star Game.

The very words themselves — all-star game — have, in fact, become synonymous with baseball. It is the only game with a tradition and for that reason, it stands apart from the others.

The difficulties the game has encountered in past years (players refusing to play, fans selecting sentimental favorites and not those truly deserving a place in the lineup) are small when matched against the overall importance of the game. It has grown beyond petty grievances, beyond any political machinations, beyond the sensitivity of a fan. Each year it is played with an anticipation that something great, something spectacular, will happen.

Ted Williams of Boston taking a Rip Sewell "ephus" pitch and placing it deep in the gut of the ballpark (1941).

Reggie Jackson, then of the Oakland A's, sending a rocket out of Tiger Stadium, leaving Pittsburgh Pirate hurler Dock Ellis standing stunned on the mound (1971).

Lorraine Downes, Miss Universe 1983, will crown her successor — chosen from 80 contestants from nations around the globe — when "The 1984 Miss Universe Pageant" airs live from the James L. Knight International Center in Miami, Fla., Monday, July 9, on CBS.

Clearing the air

Recent statistics show that if a teenager hasn't started to smoke seriously by age 15 or 16, chances are he or she won't become an addicted smoker. "Breathing Easy," a new variety special to be broadcast by PBS later this year, will encourage teens to join the "non-smoking generation." Joan Van Ark, Mark Harmon, Paul Reiser, Casey Kasem, LeVar Burton and Robert MacNaughton will star in the one-hour special.

Final gift

This September, when secondary schools all across America receive their free classroom materials on the seventh and final season of "The Shakespeare Plays," the event will mark the end of the most extensive distribution of these free teaching tools in America. It is estimated that more than 285,000 packages, costing more than $1.4 million, will have been distributed.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: I'm a big fan of Linda Gray of "Dallas." What's the scoop on her and her young lover? — Kaye Grant

To Kaye: Believe it or not, last season Miss Gray was extremely unhappy about her "Dallas" storyline, which featured an illicit affair between Sue Ellen and college boy Peter Richards (portrayed by Christopher Atkins). Miss Gray felt the relationship was in poor taste. In real life, however, she's currently having an affair with a man 11 years her junior, Paul Costanzo. Miss Gray divorced her husband of 21 years, art director Ed Thrasher, last year. The settlement took close to $2 million out of her "Dallas" earnings. Since then, she claims she's stronger and more assertive than ever. In the meantime, Paul has all but moved into her Beverly Hills digs, and their once hush-hush trysts are out in the open.

Women in Hollywood are setting a real trend — they're romancing and marrying younger men. For instance, last November, Mary Tyler Moore, 46, married cardiologist Dr. Robert Levine, 29. Oliva Newton-John's live-in love, Matt Lattanzi, is 10 years her junior. Peter Sellers' ex, Britt Ekland, recently married rock star Slim Jim Phantom, and he's 21 years younger than she. Another "Dallas" beauty, Victoria Principal, was recently married to actor Christopher Skinner, eight years her junior. And Miss Principal's jilted — and younger — boyfriend, Andy Gibb, is yet another example.

DEAR MICHELE: Is Michael Landon Jewish? I've heard that his real name is Michael Orowitz. — Debbie Jones

To Debbie: Michael Landon is Jewish and was indeed born Eugene Orowitz, on October 31, 1936, in Collingswood, New Jersey.

DEAR MICHELE: What is the name of the theme song for the series, "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer"? I say it's "The Blue Danube." — Ethel Donaldson

To Ethel: Are you ever off-key on this one! The theme for the "Hammer" series is "Harlem Nocturne."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

TV critics were sent into orbit last month when CBS launched threw a lavish party for its epic 13-hour miniseries, "Space," now in production. On hand at the Virginia Robinson Gardens in Beverly Hills were the stars of the miniseries — James Garner, Susan Anspach, Harry Hamlin, David Dukes, Bruce Dern, Melinda Dillon, Michael York, Blair Brown and James Sutorius. Also present were tve book's author, James Michlner, and real-life astronauts Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper, Richard Gordon and Russell Schweickart.

The highlight of the evening was a performance by 11-year-old Shanice Wilson, who sang "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," the miniseries' opening song.

"Dreams," the new CBS series starring John Stamos and Cain Devore as members of a rock band, will introduce Valerie Stevenson as Lisa Copley, the band's lead singer. Miss Stevenson should soon have everyone humming "Dreams," the series' theme song — it's that good.

Donna Reed, who is replacing Barbara Bel Geddes as Miss Ellie on "Dallas," will not appear until after the first six weeks of the new season. It will be explained that she and Clayton (Howard Keel) are on their honeymoon.

All-Star Night On ABC

By Willie Schatz

Ever since San Francisco's Candlestick Park was announced as the site of this year's baseball All-Star game (airing Tuesday on ABC), Al Michaels has been waiting for the first pitch.

"This game has special meaning for me," says Michaels, who, as always, will have the trying task of announcing the game and maintaining decorum between Howard Cosell and Earl Weaver in the broadcast booth. "I was excited when they announced the site three years ago. I announced the Giants from 1974-76 and I've lived in the Bay Area since '74. I feel like I'm doing a home game."

This will be Michaels' first All-Star game where he won't have to share the play-by-play microphone. He pplit the pLay-by-play chores with Keith Jackson when ABC televised the 1980 and 1982 games.

So don't expect a heavy infusion of managerial strategy from Weaver. Do plan on more Cosell stories, though Michaels promises to check him if he gets out of hand. And count on enjoying the game.

"Sure, there's pressure because so many more millions watch than on Monday night," Michaels says. "But it's not going to ruin your day if your league loses. It's just a very pleasant evening of baseball. If I weren't announcing, I'd just relish the chance to watch."

He won't be the only one.

Sunday, July 8

Breakfast at Wimbledon, NBC. It's going to be tough to serve a better morning meal than the McEnroe-Lendl croissant of four weeks ago at the French Open, but give NBC credit: Its tennis coverage is top rate.

Dallas Grand Prix, CBS. The ninth stop on the Formula One circuit and the second and last stop in the United States this season.

SportsWorld, NBC. The U.S. Olympic basketball team takes on the NBA All-Stars in Iowa City, Iowa. Brought to you by Don Criqui and Al McGuire, who will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

USFL Conference Championship, ABC. Either the Western or Eastern final. The winner goes to the championship game. The loser goes to the beach.

INDY KING

Question: Who has appeared in the most Indianapolis 500 races?

Answer: A.J. Foyt has made the starting grid an unprecedented 27 times, from 1958-84. Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock have each raced 20 times.

12 days of SALE

July 9 thru July 21

WHY— Sale periods seem to us to be long drawn out, awkward periods for both the store customer and the store itself. No one ever seems to know when the sale is going on or where it ends. Service to the customer sometimes becomes a forgotten matter. The customer and the salespeople both get tired and disgusted.

WHO— YOU, the customer, are the one who will benefit because from DAY ONE of our sale you will get the lowest possible prices. We will only take markdowns once and prices will be as low on DAY ONE as on DAY TWELVE.

WHAT— Unbelievable bargains on 1st quality men's clothing all chosen from our regular stock. Our sales do not represent manufacturers' mistakes or special manufacturer closeouts. On our sale you will only find our regular top quality merchandise offered at greatly reduced prices by our experienced sales staff.

- All sales for this Semi-Annual Clearance will be for cash only or your credit card. All alterations are extra.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

BARRYMORE: E.T. STEVE?

In light of NASA's projected program to put the first civilian in space aboard a shuttle — the date of the first journey is tentatively set for fall of 1985 — we asked several celebrities whom they'd like to see on the pad. See if you agree with the choices or if you think some of the responses are a bit, well, out to launch.

Professor Robert Jastrow, physicist, author, professor of astronomy at Columbia University: "I would put into space that fellow in Russia, whoever he is, who gave the order to build those missiles that are pointed at us and at Western Europe. And I'd leave him there."

Frank Gifford, sports commentator: "John Denver and David Hartman because they both want to go. If they get bored, David can interview experimental mice — and Denver can sing them to sleep."

Marie Osmond: "The only man who has done everything on earth, who has conquered every frontier. He is out of this world, and deserves the ultimate experience. I am referring, of course, to the one and only George Burns."

Bob Barker, game show host: "I would send Col. Muammar Khadafy. I think it would solve a lot of problems in the Middle East."

Phyllis Diller: "Bo Derek, simply because we need fewer of her kind (that means less competition) here on Earth."

Drew Barrymore, child actress: Steven Spielberg. "He has brought so much of outer space to us, and I think it would be nice if we could give some outer space to him. It would give him more ideas to make more wonderful films like Close Encounters of the Third Kind and E.T."

Isaac Asimov, science-fiction author: "Anyone but me. I don't like to fly in a plane, to say nothing of a spaceship. I suppose it is important to get scientists into space but whoever wants to can go with my blessing — and my ticket."

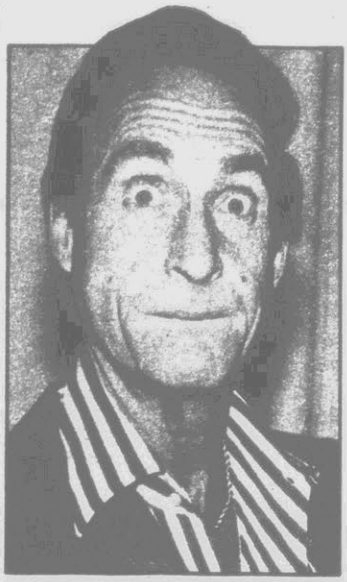

OSMOND: GEORGE IS HER CHOICE FOR MAN ON THE MOON

Nothing personal, you understand, but veteran butler Alan Fisher has handed in his notice to his employers, a couple perhaps best known as Chuck and Di. The Prince and Princess of Wales will be interviewing a replacement for Fisher, who missed "the relaxed living in California." The native Brit began his long love affair with the warm-weather West Coast when he worked as butler to Bing Crosby. It's surprising that Fisher managed to stay in Der Bingle's employ when you consider he never lost the chance to tell the crooner that Perry Como was his favorite singer.

Sid Caesar, 61, who in his salad days practically invented TV sketch humor, now spends most of his working time lecturing on "The Crisis in Comedy." Indeed, Caesar ought to know. Aside from a few minor movie roles and television spots, Sid hasn't managed to reprise his stardom of the 1950s. The personal problems chronicled in his autobiography, Where Have I Been?, provide a partial explanation. Another reason: TV just doesn't seem to do Caesar's brand of comedy. "Everything's the DEAL," he explains. "It's the Package — never mind about the SHOW." According to Caesar, the tube today is "all stand-up or sit-com. The stand-ups rely on blue material." As for sitcoms, "Nobody over 14 can watch them."

CAESAR: NO LAUGHING MATTER

There's a perfectly logical reason why Karen Allen doesn't appear in Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, now breaking records at the box office. Set in 1935, the Paramount film is a "prequel" to Raiders of the Lost Ark, which was set in '36. "Karen's character [Marion Ravenwood] would have been stuck up in the mountains of Nepal," says a source in the George Lucas film complex. But since Lucas and director Steven Spielberg have decided that there will be a third Indiana Jones saga, Karen may return as Marion. "We have a few more tricks," says Spielberg, who knows that moviegoers will certainly want to keep up with Jones.

DEBBIE MORGAN

star of TV's The Jesse Owens Story

What was the hardest part of making the film? — D.J., Asbury Park, N.J.

Thinking, "which Jesse do I mean?" when I said, "I love you, Jesse." That's because I'm involved with two Jesses — the one in the movie [airing this week] and the Jesse character who's my husband on the soap All My Children. And one part of the aging process was tough. Playing a young girl is a piece of cake. Being old wasn't hard either — older people don't walk as fast and speak slowly. But middle age was an unknown to me. [Morgan is in her late 20s.] There aren't many physical things on which to draw.

NORM CROSBY

comedian

If you ever won an award and could thank only one person, whom would it be? — E.N., Redondo, Calif.

Bob Hope. In 1959, when I was a struggling young comic (now I'm a struggling old comic), I had supper in a coffee shop prior to opening in a small club. As I paid, the cashier gave me a little gold elephant, saying that Bob Hope had given it to her for good luck. "Take it, perhaps some of his luck will rub off on you," she said. I put it in my pocket, and had a good opening. Now I don't go on stage without it.

HOW SAFE IS AMERICA?

An Exclusive Interview with FBI Director William Webster

David Hume Kennerly/Gamma Liaison

At age 60, William Webster is the seventh director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Nominated by President Jimmy Carter in 1978 to fill the position vacated by former Kansas City Police Chief Clarence Kelly, who retired, Webster immediately embarked on a program of reform and modernization of the sometimes controversial Bureau. Today, in the fourth year of the Reagan presidency, Webster, though he is not without his critics, has generally won high marks as a forward-thinking, modern-age FBI director. Regarded as a capable administrator and cautious innovator, Webster came to the position after serving as a federal judge for three years in the U.S. District Court in eastern Missouri and for five years in the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals — a background that helped broaden and inform his perspective as head of the Bureau and as titular head of American law enforcement in general. Director Webster was interviewed recently in his office in the J. Edgar Hoover Building in Washington by FAMILY WEEKLY Editor Thomas Plate. What follows is a verbatim interview, slightly edited for grammatical sense and continuity, and condensed for space.

Plate: The Justice Department recently reported a decline in household crime. Is this actually a meaningful drop? Is the country slightly safer?

Webster: I think that's a fair way to put it. Earlier this year we released our uniform crime reports — the provisional reports for 1983. The final figures will be out [next month]. They reflected a 7 percent drop in the crime-rate index [last] year. The previous year they reflected a 3 percent drop. That's the first time since 1960 we've had two successive drops and they're fairly significant. The last quarter of 1983 reflected a 10 percent drop in the major crime index — a measure of larceny and burglary and so forth.

[Also,] there were more arrests during this period even though crime was going down. And the prison population is way up so I think it's reasonable to infer that more career criminals are [being kept] in prison than in the past; sentences on crimes that are often repetitive are getting longer and judges are getting tougher, particularly on drug-related crimes. So people who could make the numbers go up by just going out and committing crime after crime are tending to stay in jail.

Beyond that, what I have observed, and [what] I like to think I've been part of, is a better interrelated system of federalism in which state and local law enforcement [groups] are working better and better with federal agencies in dealing with joint problems. I go back a fair stretch over the years — I was a United States Attorney under Eisenhower — and I cannot remember a time when there was more awareness between the federal and state officials of their respective problems, more actual sitting down and working things out, more sharing of intelligence and training and, particularly in drugs, a kind of everybody coming together at the same time.

Q: Is there anything the average citizen can do to help make America safer? Are people willing to help or would most "rather not get involved"?

Webster: I have never seen a time when you had more vigilant citizens — not vigilantes, but vigilant citizens willing to do something about crime — actively involved in local organizations supporting law enforcement efforts. Then because we are demonstrating successes in some of these tough cases which are clearly life threatening, like the Wilder case — the fellow was running around killing young women [across] the country — we're getting more and more people willing to come forward [to testify], and that's also true in public corruption cases. They say, "Well, here's an agency that will do something so I'm willing to stick my neck out." More and more people are saying, "It's my responsibility to give information and to testify and do other things." Even if they can't testify they can come forward and give information on a confidential basis because they know that law enforcement agencies are willing to take on the problems. So it's a combination, and I think it's the same combination that can whip the drug problem if we can keep the momentum going. We work the supply side and the citizen groups work to reduce demand, by education and by very attentive parents accepting the responsibilities.

Q: So you would in effect give a flat "yes" to the question: Is the country slightly safer today?

Webster: I certainly would. At least in terms of the types of crimes that affect your sense of security in your home. But there are other types of crimes that affect the nation as a whole: major organizations that are ripping off the government at all levels; con men; organized criminal enterprises involved in gambling, loan sharking, narcotics, that take those proceeds and invest them and ultimately control legitimate businesses. Those are major threats to our society. The white collar criminal is just as dangerous to the quality of life as the blue collar criminal who assaults or mugs. I suppose if you [took] a poll [on] which is worse, [people] would probably say the white collar criminal is worse in theory, but in terms of which one they want to be victims of, they'd rather be victims of the white collar criminal. So I think you're right in saying that it's physically safer, but the challenge is still there to [curtail] those that are running our taxes up, our costs up. Corruption is often a by-product of white collar crime. The arsonist doesn't corrupt and the rapist doesn't corrupt. The organized criminal and the white collar criminal do corrupt.

Q: The spread of pornography throughout the United States has a syndicated nature to it and it's a national problem. Is this something that you have given a high priority to?

Webster: For five years I was chairman of the St. Louis County Decent Literature Commission. I was appointed by the Supervisor of St. Louis County. I said, "Why me?" And he said, "It takes one to know one" (laughter). So this is not something I know nothing about.

We have identified two areas that we think are most deserving of our attention and we're giving those two areas full investigative effort. One is organized crime and pornography, and we have used RICO [a statute authorizing the FBI to investigate "racketeering influence and corrupt organizations"] in attacking major groups in which criminal enterprises are producing and profiting from pornography. The other is the exploitation of children. They're victims in the sense that they're being photographed or utilized or abused by the photography rings. That type of thing gets our full attention.

Q: Supposing there's a young kid out there, a girl or boy, who wants to be an FBI agent. What would you advise him or her to do in terms of the courses that he or she takes in school?

Webster: I'd advise them to take the courses that they do best [in], that they are interested in. There isn't any special pre-FBI course to take. We have biophysicists, English majors, former journalists, lawyers, accountants. We have about 1,500 masters degrees, 60 Ph.D.s and so on. They're going to need a college education — a four-year accredited college degree.

If they don't have a law degree, a graduate degree or some degree in science or language, they'll need three years of what we call executive experience in earning a living, working for the military, or at some other place where they get maturity and additional experience. My own sense of it is that they ought to be as broad-gauged as they can be, or if they have a very real specialty, such as something in engineering or science, they ought to feel free to pursue it. We're looking for curiosity, resolve, the ability to stay with something until it's been completed, and high character and performance. We call it the broadband selection system. We have test scores that measure their cognitive function [and] aptitude for this kind of work. We also look at what they've done with their lives. That's very important to us.

Q: Is the jury still out on the issue of women in policing or is there a verdict?

Webster: I think there's a verdict. In my own mind there's clearly a verdict. We've gone from 93 to over 500 female agents since I became director, and we're still increasing the numbers — not under any court order but because we want them and we like what they're providing for us. They have the same requirements as a male special agent, with one exception: They get to chin themselves differently because of a different center of gravity. It's both an intellectual and a physical exercise and in many cases the women are equaling or exceeding men in physical training competence. That doesn't mean that in a given situation any woman can do any job. We look at them as people, not women or men. We have one woman on our hostage rescue team but she is not in the group that does the busting in . . . is there a name for that?

Q: The assault?

Webster: The assault. She's not part of the assault [team]. The reason is that in competitive strength tests she doesn't have the strength. Now there might be some other woman out there who would. And one of our crack sharpshooters is a woman, Chris Kaporch in Alexandria [Va.] — a supervisor. So we find they're earning respect. There are still only a few in supervisory positions right now but that's because they really have only been here for the last five years, and so there [aren't] a lot to pull from. Blacks and other minorities have [also] taken major positions.

Q: This interview will appear a week before the start of the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco, and three weeks before the summer Olympics in Los Angeles. You're probably bored to tears with this question, but how serious is the terrorist threat? Has it been overdramatized? Are we prepared?

Webster: Well as of today we have had five terrorist events this year. Those are violent incidents in which someone has identified the purpose as being political — to effect social change. When you consider what's going on in the world, five incidents in five months in which no one has been killed is not a bad record. However, one big terrorist incident with the Olympics could wipe that out. So obviously we are concerned that we be prepared, in the first instance, through massive intelligence efforts in cooperation with all the free countries of the world, to identify any international terrorist incident that might come to our shores in time to stop it from happening.

If that does not succeed, and there is no guarantee that it will, we have the capability to deal with almost any conceivable hostage or other terrorist event. The hostage rescue team is now fully trained and operational, providing a 50 man and woman civilian response capability. We hope we would never have to call on the military to provide a military response in this country.

Q: But you are working with other law enforcement groups. How is that coordinated?

Webster: We are working with some 25 or 26 agencies in the Los Angeles area, most particularly of course with the LAPD [Los Angeles Police Department] and the L.A. Sheriff's office, to provide a coordinated response, which includes sharing and dissemination of intelligence, logistical aspects and so forth. We also have game plans for the World's Fair which just opened [in New Orleans], the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco and the Republican Convention in Dallas.

Last year we had 31 terrorist incidents. That contrasts with 51 terrorist incidents in 1982. Some of the things that we're doing have helped to reduce those numbers. Still, we have to be careful about all this because the catch-22 is that one big incident will wipe out all the other figures, and we don't want that one big incident to happen. Terrorism is theater and particularly the international groups look for an occasion when they can call attention to their cause. Nothing is more likely to attract the media around the world than the Olympics, and to a much smaller extent, the same could be said of the other three events. In Los Angeles we've got 125 miles of athletic events scattered all over the place.

Q: Summertime always raises the question of urban disorders. In the '60s, the McCone Commission discovered that major catalysts behind those eruptions included police overreaction and poor community-police relations. Do you feel that the maturity of the urban police departments has increased enough so that if there are some tense moments they will not have the kind of overreaction that can make a problem worse?

Webster: I believe so. Part of [the prob-

FAMILY MATTERS

WHEN TEENS WON'T TALK

By Susan Lapinski

"When I tell my mom I've got a problem, she just gets upset," says 15-year-old Jodie, tugging at the sleeve of her Michael Jackson t-shirt. To avoid a scene, Jodie says, she often takes her problems to her girlfriend.

Jodie's attitude is a common one, according to professionals who have been researching the way teenagers communicate. A study last year of 2,000 young people, ages 13 to 19, found that they often took questions about school, sibling relationships, or future careers to parents. But when it came to touchier subjects, such as dating, sex, religion or moral standards, the kids were likelier to discuss their views with their friends.

"Kids know that parents won't always approve, whereas friends are more accepting," says Jacqueline Smollar, Ph.D., a psychologist who co-authored the study with James Youniss, Ph.D., at Catholic University's Center for the Study of Youth Development in Washington, D.C.

Most parents realize that adolescent children need to develop a new sense of independence, and that friendships during the teen years can be beneficial. On the other hand, it can be harmful when a teenager retreats into silence or withdraws behind closed doors to talk on the phone for hours. As one mother of a 14-year-old confesses: "When Adam treats me like I'm nonexistent, I just want to yell at him."

At those times, it helps to "pull back and remember how hard it was to be a teenager," says Ruth Bell, co-author with Leni Zeiger Wildflower of the recent book Talking With Your Teenager (Random House).

Parents can help, Bell says, by communicating with their teenagers "in a way that lets them know you care about them."

One way to do this is by respecting a teenager's privacy. "Don't barge in when a door is closed," Bell advises.

But even as they try to give a child some room, parents must also find ways to stay close — or face the consequences. Problems are less likely to occur when parents set down a clear set of rules — on such issues as curfew, dating, drug and alcohol use — and state what the consequences will be if rules are broken. They also need to stay in touch with what is going on at school and among a teenager's friends by asking such candid questions as: "Are there drugs at school? Are there kids who need help?"

There are no easy answers to keeping channels open. But becoming a good listener and refraining from hasty negative judgments can be helpful. So can spending special time with a teenager. Bell suggests dining out in a favorite restaurant without other siblings present, or regularly sharing a sport or activity that you both genuinely enjoy. FW

THE GOOD THE BAD AND THE UGLY

IS A FAD BUY A BAD BUY?

By Dr. Lewis Berman

Why oh why does a specific animal become a fad buy? Why would anyone spend $2,000 on a Sharpei, a very wrinkled old Chinese war dog that often needs an eye-lift to prevent its droopy lids from damaging its eyes? And why did people buy ocelots and margays 10 years ago? Or baby alligators that grew into giant reptiles lounging about in bathroom tubs? Who's to say why iguanas, lizards and Siamese cats are on the wane, but Abyssinian cats are unquestionably in?

A fad buy isn't necessarily a bad buy, if you're a responsible owner. But you can't treat a fad animal like fad clothes or a fad car — loving it one year, discarding it the next.

The biggest fads, I suppose, are dog fads. You know your client's something of a fad buyer if he bought his Sharpei because he saw one on the cover of Life magazine a few years ago. Or a German Shepherd because, as a client told me with pride the other day, "He's a descendant of Rin Tin Tin!" Or if he bought a dog that weighs 125 pounds, instead of your average 25, because he saw one like it on The Tonight Show or heard a celebrity guest say he owns that kind of dog. I've never heard anyone confess to buying an Akita because, let's say, Linda Ronstadt has one. But people do — treating Ronstadt's Akita for some rat poison Molly ate around the Broadway theater where her owner was doing The Pirates of Penzance, I remember thinking: "This may boost the Akita boom."

Not everyone who owns a fad dog is a faddist. Nor are very fashionable breeds necessarily fads. The French Poodle, Cocker Spaniel, Lhasa Apso, Shih Tzu and Dachshund have been lucky enough to build a loyal human following over many years. An unrecognized English breed called the Cavalier King Charles Spaniel is a long-time favorite among some of my clients, like Arthur Schlesinger Jr. (and his Polo), Lauren Bacall (whose Blenheim accompanied her across country on her Woman of the Year tour until he died), and William F. Buckley Jr., who has four (Blenhie, Beep, Fred and Sam). These people genuinely love this particular breed of dog.

Unfortunately, not everyone who buys a dog just wants a best friend. I worry in particular about some of those who go in for huge dogs, such as the Chinese Chow Chow, which jumped from thirteenth to twelfth place on the American Kennel Club's popularity list last year, and the German Rottweiler, who rose in favor by a full 43 percent!

A large fad dog can turn into more than you bargained for. Consider the Akita, the hot new import from Japan that's replaced the Afghan Hound as the latest rage. For $800 to $1,000 or more, you get an adorable, fuzzy bear-like puppy. Then you go into shock when it grows big enough to make a German Shepherd seem the size of a Toy Poodle, and you can barely hang onto it with a leash. Worst of all, your precious little puppy metamorphoses into a killer dog almost overnight. There's no way another dog can defend itself against an aggressive Akita, and neither can you — or your friend, in which case you'd better have a broad insurance policy to cover the medical bill for his mangled arm.

Trying to control a large fad dog like an Akita, or Rottweiler, or Chow, is like trying to control a horse — you can't, unless the dog's properly trained. But maybe you don't have the expertise required to train a big dog, and can't meet the expense of hiring a professional for the job. Big dogs can be big babies if they're not trained.

I have nothing against people buying fad breeds. All I say is, know what you're getting into. Investigate the breed you think you may want by spending a day at a dog or cat show talking to breeders and to people who own that type of animal. Compare different breeds you're interested in. Find out which breeders are reputable and which to avoid. With a little education you can make a better choice.

One last point: Some people just aren't cut out for fad pets. I know a very down-to-earth man who got an Akita, but he's so embarrassed to have a fad dog that he tells people it's some kind of mixed-breed Shepherd. If you're self-conscious, why not go for a simpler dog? Just because you only have to pay a license fee, and the pet doesn't need an eye-lift — or isn't some current favorite among celebrities — doesn't make him an underdog. PW lem] is the stress that existed at the time. . . letting some ethnic minorities feel that they [couldn't] get a fair shake in the courts, and so on. But community relations have come a long, long way. My favorite example is Detroit in 1980. [During] the Republican convention there, [a high] percentage of the young black males were unemployed and there was not a single incident. [Detroit Police] Chief William Hart is one of the foremost exponents and practitioners of community relations. The "keep it cool" atmosphere that prevailed there was a great model for other officers, for other cities. We had a recent acquittal down in Florida, if you recall, and there were 100 or so people out on the streets but there was no major rioting. This is not due to the police getting fierce but rather [due to] a greater understanding of crowd and community psychology and dealing with the problem firmly but fairly.

Q: You feel that police officers are using more restraint in carrying out their duties?

Webster: The excessive use of deadly force has been a problem for law enforcement for a long, long time but it is a diminishing concern. There are just a few pockets of the problem [left]. And that comes from a certain setting of standards. We like to think that we have set the standard in that area. Our agents are trained and disciplined not to draw their weapons unless they have been the subject of an assault or some third person is in danger of assault or guns have already been used. When we do draw our guns our agents are trained to shoot them so that they do what they're intended to do and not injure innocent bystanders and other things, [that] cause people in the community to think police are overreacting or careless. And I like to think that that standard is getting more and more prevalent around the United States. It's a matter of discipline.

Q: Would you say the public perception of the police has improved since the '60s?

Webster: The same national resolve that I talked to you about before, when I said there are more and more community organizations involved with law enforcement, brings the community a little closer to the police: It helps make the police feel [they are] inside the community, and not a hired gun. There are over 45,000 young high school members of the Law Enforcement Explorer Scouts Program in the United States. I chaired the conference last year in Fort Collins [Colo.] of 3,000 representatives of those groups. That reflects 45,000 kids knowing more about law enforcement, knowing more about the police, and policemen knowing more about them.

The key is a community's regard for its police department and the police officers' acceptance of their responsibility as members of the community. [This helps create a] mutual understanding of each other's jobs [and encourages] witnesses — citizens who see things, hear things, know things — to cooperate without fear. All that not only helps solve crimes but also pushes the specter of civil disturbance way into the background. If the police are viewed as part of the community the prospect of people taking the law into their own hands or reacting to a police action is much, much smaller. FW

*IBUPROFEN NOW IN NONPRESCRIPTION STRENGTH.

ADVIL™ (ibuprofen) is a different pain medication from any you've ever been able to buy before. And it's the first really new nonprescription pain reliever that's been made available since 1955, when Tylenol® (acetaminophen) was introduced.

Proven by Prescription.

"ADVIL" isn't Tylenol or any other non-aspirin product and it isn't aspirin. Advil contains ibuprofen, the same medicine that's in the prescription drug Motrin.® But now it's available in nonprescription strength. It's been proven effective in relieving many types of pain. It's so effective that doctors have already prescribed it over 130 million times.

A Real Alternative.

ADVIL can be used instead of aspirin or acetaminophen for relieving headache pain, minor arthritis pain or menstrual pain. In fact, just one Advil tablet has been proven as effective as 2 regular strength aspirin, yet gentler to the stomach. However, Advil should not be taken at the same time as aspirin or acetaminophen.

Learn More About It.

ADVIL should not be taken if you've ever had a severe allergic reaction to aspirin or any other pain reliever without consulting your doctor first. Pregnant or nursing women and children under 12 should take Advil only under a doctor's supervision. Further, if you're currently taking a prescription drug for any serious condition or if you've ever had any serious side effects from taking any nonprescription pain reliever, consult your doctor before taking Advil. Use only as directed.

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

LILLIAN GISH

THE QUEEN OF THE SILENT MOVIES SPEAKS UP

Although Lillian Gish became an international celebrity back in 1915 when she appeared in the silent film Birth of a Nation, her career hasn't quieted down much with the years. Recently, the American Film Institute presented Gish, 84, with its Life Achievement Award for more than seven decades as a stage and movie actress. This summer's Hambone and Hillie is her 102nd feature film. Gish acted in some of America's greatest early cinema classics, including La Bohème and The Scarlet Letter as well as the recent movie: A Wedding, and the television film Hobson's Choice. She spent years in the company of such legendary Hollywood celebrities as Greta Garbo, Mary Pickford and Rudolph Valentino. In a FAMILY WEEKLY interview with writer Andrea Darvi, Miss Gish was outspoken about movie stardom, marriage and today's "sexy" television shows.

Past: The Bettman Archive; Present: Vera Anderson

Darvi: On the dedication page of your autobiography you write, "To my father, who gave me insecurity." How was that such a marvelous legacy?
Gish: That insecurity was good because it forced me out into the world at the age of 5, and I found the world and the people in it to be beautiful. Papa was too young to be married and have children, and he couldn't take care of us financially. He disappeared from our lives when I was a small child. Mother went into the theater and I was booked on the stage as Baby Lillian.

Q: So you never studied acting?
Gish: The only lesson I learned was that if I didn't speak loud and clear, they'd get another little girl. I've been speaking loud and clear ever since.

Q: How have you managed in your 80-year career to escape from becoming a Hollywood has-been?
Gish: I never had a press agent. I always felt that the less your name was in print, the longer you'd last. When I objected to Mary Pickford paying her press agent so much money, she said, "But he created the title of America's Sweetheart!" The problem with a title like that is you have to live up to it. So when Mary didn't look like a little girl anymore, she just left the world and went to bed.

Q: You still speak about films with such enthusiasm. Didn't you ever wonder if you should pursue something else?
Gish: No, because I didn't know anything else. I never went to school. My education was being in a business in which I traveled and lived all over the world. What else would I have done?

Q: You might have married and had a home life. Why didn't you?
Gish: I worked 12 hours a day, 7 days a week. I was the man of the Gish family. Now, what kind of a wife would I have made? I'm glad I never ruined the lives of all those dear men who would have given me their names.

Q: Do you watch television?
Gish: Not much. I listen to the radio more because they speak English better. For television they don't pick voices, they pick faces that all look alike. Love, sentiment and tenderness have disappeared. Sex is beautiful, but what you see now is lust, which is rather hard to look at.

Q: What words of advice do you have for actresses starting out?
Gish: I would tell them to be like that child at Princeton, Brooke Shields, because she looks like herself. You can't fool the camera. John Barrymore said if you sit in front of it long enough it not only tells who your ancestors were but what you had for breakfast.

Q: In Chicago you befriended the stage actress Edith Davis, whose daughter Nancy married Ronald Reagan. What do you think of actors going into politics?
Gish: When I was a child, the boarding houses had signs that said, "No dogs or actors allowed." Now there's an actor in the White House. Isn't that wonderful? FW

FANCIFUL FEASTING

THE ROMANCE OF FOOD

By Marilyn Hansen

Barbara Cartland is today's most prolific romantic novelist as well as an historian, lecturer, playwright, political speaker and television personality. She has written more than 370 books and sold more than 370 million copies.

This year, Miss Cartland published a cookbook, The Romance of Food. Each

recipe is followed by a note on ingredient information, serving tips, historical background, or reputed health or aphrodisiacal qualities. In a recent interview, Miss Cartland, dressed in a shocking-pink suit, confided that on weekends she indulges her passion for amusing company, and entertains enthusiastically.

The following luncheon menu is one of her favorites.

MENU

Chicken With Orange Surprise
Ice Cream In Brandy Snap Baskets
Cheese Coffee

CHICKEN WITH ORANGE SURPRISE

1 teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon sea salt
Freshly ground black pepper
3 lb. roaster chicken
1 tablespoon butter or sunflower oil
1 onion, sliced
4 thin-skinned oranges
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¾ cup orange juice
¾ cup hard cider or cider
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
6 wishbones for garnish

1. Mix together the ginger, salt and pepper; rub into chicken. Roast in 350° preheated oven 1 hour. In medium saucepan, melt butter; saute onion and finely shredded peel of ½ orange until clear. Blend cornstarch with a little orange juice; add to pan with the remainder of the orange juice and the cider. Bring to a boil, stirring; blend in corn syrup.

2. Cut chicken into slices. Place on a serving dish; top with sauce. Garnish with the remaining oranges, peeled and divided into segments. Arrange wishbones down the center of the dish.

Makes 4 servings

Note: To prepare the wishbones, scrape all flesh from them, then soak and wash well in a mild bleach solution; rinse well.

Comments from Barbara Cartland: "Oranges were introduced into the western hemisphere by Christopher Columbus when he established a settlement on the island of Hispaniola in 1493.

"A tisane of orange leaves is good for all nervous afflictions; the juice is antiseptic and induces sleep and so do the flowers."

ICE CREAM IN BRANDY SNAP BASKETS

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
¼ cup flour
Pinch of ground ginger
½ teaspoon brandy
Melba Sauce*
¾ cup heavy cream, lightly whipped
1½ cups vanilla ice cream
1½ cups strawberry ice cream or other flavor, if you prefer
Fresh fruits for decoration

1. In a small saucepan over a low heat, melt the butter, sugar and corn syrup. Stir in the flour, ground ginger and brandy.

2. Place teaspoonfuls of mixture well apart on greased baking sheets; bake for 8 minutes at 350°.

3. Remove from the oven, leave them to cool and set a little, then loosen with a spatula. Then, working quickly so they don't have time to set hard, shape each one around an orange to form a basket.

4. Place spoonfuls of Melba Sauce (recipe follows) on 6 dessert plates. Put a spoonful of lightly whipped cream on top and draw a knife through to form wheel spokes. Put the brandy snap baskets on top of the sauce, fill with small scoops of ice cream and decorate with fruit.

Makes 6 servings

*MELBA SAUCE

1 pint raspberries, washed and pureed
¼ cup currant jelly
6 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon arrowroot
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier liqueur

1. In small saucepan, mix together raspberry puree, currant jelly and sugar; bring to a boil.

2. Blend the arrowroot with a little water, mix well until smooth, stir in a little of the raspberry mixture, and add to the saucepan. Bring briefly to a boil and add the Grand Marnier.

Makes about ¼ cup

Comments from Barbara Cartland: "Vanilla is known to be an aphrodisiac and stimulant. As a medicine it is prescribed for fevers and hysteria.

"The Scarlet Strawberry was introduced into England in 1629 and came from Virginia. Medicinally the strawberry treats the Mesenteric glands, cools the blood, and dissolves tartar on the teeth."

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

DEATH OF A SALESMAN

Would you buy a car from this man? Not anymore. It seems that the archetypal fast-talking, hard-selling salesman is going the way of the gas-guzzling V-8s he used to sell. That kind of salesman, according to researchers Herbert and Jeanne Greenberg, "simply cannot succeed in today's market."

The two sales sleuths came to this conclusion after asking 207 salesmen and 200 sales managers from across the country — all of whom were among the top 25 percent in sales performance — to rate themselves on a variety of selling techniques. The results were compared with similar research done in the early 1970s. Their conclusion, published in Marketing News, is that persuasive ability is still important, but that as cars, computers and just about everything else get more complex, the ability to give detailed information is the most important function of a salesman. Do you buy that?

ROOM SERVICE

Video screens, we're sorry to say, are taking over the world. Yes, it's true. Pretty soon you may be doing your shopping from your living room and maybe even from the bathroom. Is nothing sacred?

For $25, households with a modem-equipped computer (one that hooks on to your telephone) can join Comp-U-Card International's Comp-U-Store. You just type in orders from among 60,000 brand-name items, including top meat cuts from Omaha Steaks International, the Neiman-Marcus line of gourmet foods, and an extensive line of pharmaceuticals.

Theoretically, any room in the house can be wired for electronic retailing, even the bathroom. So says Steven B. Weissman, assistant publisher of Video Print newsletter, who's enthusiastic about such a possibility. "There's not a whole lot to do in there and, as such, there's a real need to be filled," he says.

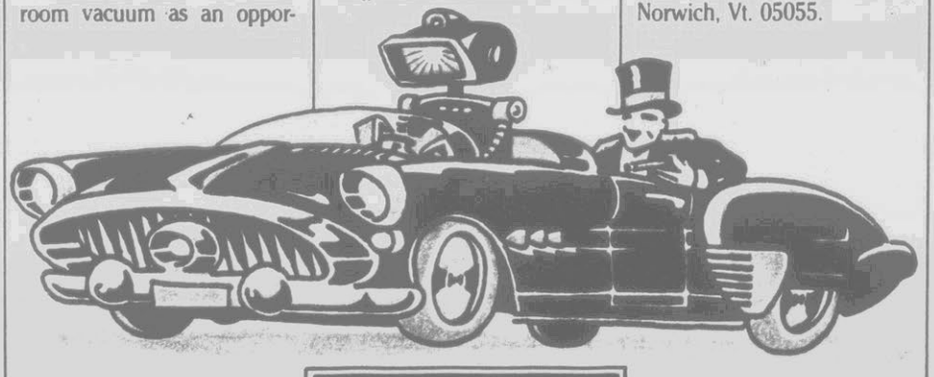

Weissman sees the bathroom vacuum as an opportunity for some entrepreneur to bowl over his competition by introducing a video option to the magazine rack. "Videotex," he says, "would be a marvelous alternative. The audience is captive. Europeans have advertised on their rolls of toilet paper for years. Installing videotex terminals simply provides a state-of-the-art way to do it."

DARN ROBOT DRIVERS

Look out! The controls are being taken right out of your hands. And they're being put into industrial robots and even automobiles. If International Resource Development Inc. is right, the next stop will be cars that drive themselves.

Honda, the Japanese auto firm, has been working on self-navigating machinery for some time. In the most basic stages, navigational systems will be installed in industrial robots, like the ones they already use to put together their cars. So instead of having to bring each car to a stationary robot, the robot will be designed to toddle over to the car and do its work.

The one bug yet to be worked out is that the robots sometimes don't know where they are. This is particularly unsettling when it comes to the self-driving cars that Honda hopes to have ready in the next decade. These cars will depend on a locational "fix" from an orbiting navigational satellite once every 90 minutes. But between signals the car will depend on sonar, radar, or some other navigational system. Once that is perfected, watch out!

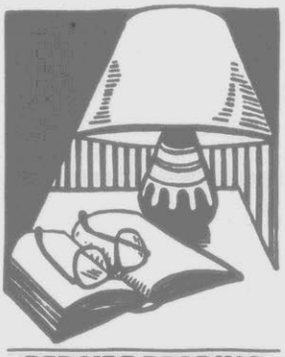

PUZZLE PALACES

Jigsaw puzzlers, you may have met your match in Stave Puzzles. These games are both beautiful (they are handcrafted and custom-made) and devastatingly difficult to put together.

Steve Richardson is the man behind them and they are true works of art. Each puzzle has several individual pieces cut in the shape of an animal, person or something that has to do with the theme of the puzzle's ultimate design. But art can be difficult. Some of Richardson's top-of-the-line puzzles are so challenging that he throws in a bottle of aspirin.

And then there are such pieces de resistance as the Dollhouse Puzzle Village. When put together, its 2,300 pieces depict the village of Pleasant Bluffs, Mass., at a length of 8 feet. Interested? Send $5 for a catalogue to Stave Puzzles, Main Street, Norwich, Vt. 05055.

BEDSIDE READING

We wonder what people read before they switch out the light and retire for the night. Two reports:

Marvin Mitchelson, Divorce Attorney, Los Angeles, Calif. He stayed up all night recently to finish Ingrid Bergman: My Story by Ingrid Bergman and Alan Burgess. He says that although he remembered most of the events recounted, the book fascinated him so much that he is considering the possibility of trying to make a movie about Bergman's life.

Bruce T. Leitman, Attorney, Pontiac, Michigan. Mr. Leitman, who is a Lew Archer addict, has just finished The Zebra-Striped Hearse, a novel featuring Archer by Ross MacDonald. It's a great book, he reports, and the ending was a complete knockout.

A RE-SOUNDING SPELLING BEE

In this rather unusual spelling bee you are asked to spell out an 11-letter word letter by letter from phonetic equivalents in other words.

To begin, sound out the letters ieu in lieu and you have U, the initial letter. Now, add in order the single letter equivalents of: kn in knight, gh in rough, eau in beau, rrh in myrrh, phth in phthisic, ew in yew, mp in comptroller, eigh in weigh, ght in plight, ie in thief.

What word results?

The word is "unforgettable."

Our Story: IN THE OYSTER LIGHT OF A NORTHERN SUMMER NIGHT THE FOREST SEEMS ALIVE WITH A STRANGE POWER. ON MIDSUMMER'S EVE THE WOODS CAST THEIR SPELL ON ALL WHO ENTER. THE CHRONICLES DO NOT SAY WHAT PRINCE VALIANT AND QUEEN ALETA TALK ABOUT, ONLY THAT THEY TALK AS THEY HAVE NOT FOR MANY MONTHS, AND ARE HAPPY.

ONCE VAL'S EYES DART TO A BRANCH ON A NEARBY TREE. HAD HE SEEN A MOVEMENT? NO, HE DECIDES, THE NIGHT IS PLAYING TRICKS.

ANOTHER TIME THEY SHUDDER AS A FOUL MIST ENSHROUDS THEM. FOR A MOMENT THEIR HEARTS ARE FILLED WITH THE PAIN OF ALL THE BADNESS IN THE WORLD. VAL DRAWS ALETA CLOSE. THEN THE EVIL BLOWS BY LIKE A WET WIND, AND THE AIR IS WARM AND DRY AND GOOD AGAIN.

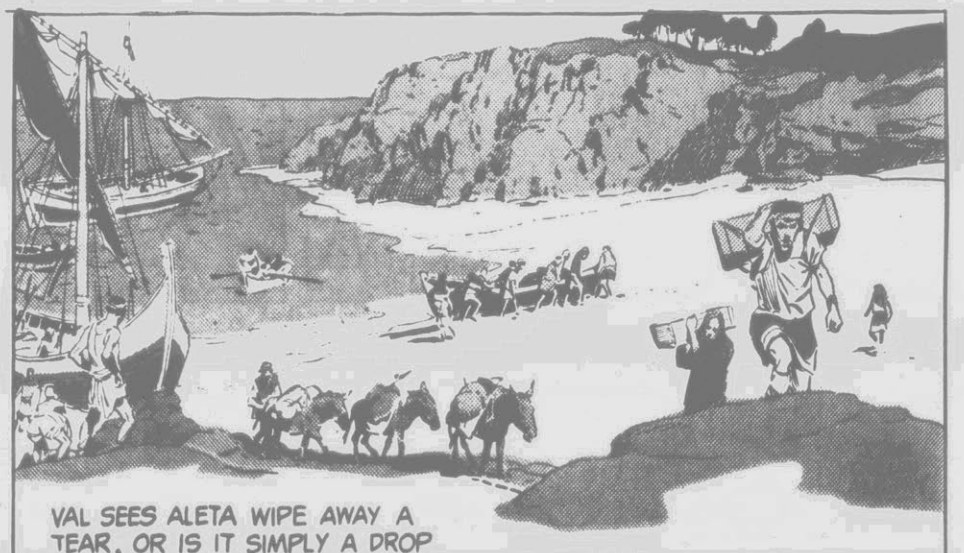

THEY COME UPON AN OLD MAN CURSING HIS CANE. "WELL, FOR ONCE," SAYS THE MAN'S WIFE, "YOU CAN NOT RUN ALL OVER THE WORLD ASKING FOR TROUBLE." THE OLD MAN SIGHS. "THE ONLY QUEST I WOULD NOW ACCEPT IS A QUEST FOR MY YOUTH." HIS EYES SETTLE ON VAL.

"WHY, I THINK I'VE FOUND IT!" HE WINKS AS HE HOBBLES BY. "COME ALONG, DEAR," HE CALLS. "THAT OLD CRACK IN MY ARM SAYS RAIN."

VAL SEES ALETA WIPE AWAY A TEAR. OR IS IT SIMPLY A DROP OF THE RAIN THAT HAS BEGUN TO FALL? BENEATH SOME ARCHING FIRS THEY SPEND THE NIGHT.
