WASTE WATER PLANT ... Construction of the city's new waste water treatment plant is ahead of schedule. The facilities include (from lower left to upper right) sludge drying beds, two sludge holding tanks, three in-line clarifiers where solids are allowed to settle out, and three aeration tanks.

The building between the sludge holding tanks and clarifiers is the blower building, while the maintenance and control buildings are across the access road. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Mine Fire Traps 133 On Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Fire swept a coal mine northeast of Taipei today and police said they feared 133 miners were trapped in a tunnel. It was Taiwan's second mine disaster in a month.

Police said an early report that three miners had made their way to safety was incorrect. Authorities said no miners escaped the tunnel where the fire occurred.

Police said the blaze appeared to have been set off by an electrical short circuit in a compressor less than a mile from the entrance of the Mei-shan coal mine at Juifang, 31 miles northeast of Taipei.

Interior Minister Wu Poh-hsiung and Economic Minister Hsu Li-teh went to the Mei-shan coal mine today to supervise rescue efforts. Officials said they were trying to pipe oxygen into the tunnel.

The fire, which began about 2 p.m., was the second in a Taiwanese coal mine in less than a month. On June 20, a blaze at the Hai Shan coal mine southeast of Taipei killed 74 miners — the worst mine disaster on this East Asian island.

After the fire at the Hai Shan mine, Premier Yu Kuo-hwa ordered safety checks on coal mines. He threatened to close unsafe and inefficient mines, and Economic Ministry officials said at least 80 mines might have to be shut down.

Taiwan's mines produce about 2 million tons of coal each year, supplying about 24 percent of the 8.4 million tons consumed by domestic industries last year. The Mei-shan mine has a monthly production of 4,500 tons.

Soviet Fleet Stricken

LONDON (AP) — A series of explosions at a major Soviet ammunition depot disabled the Soviet navy's northern fleet and killed at least 200 navy personnel, Jane's Defense Weekly reported today.

The May 13 blasts that rocked the Severomorsk base on the Kola Peninsula, about 60 miles from Norway, destroyed about two-thirds of the northern fleet's surface-to-air and ship-to-ship missiles, Jane's said.

In its report, the authoritative defense publication said destruction at the base, about 900 miles north of Moscow, "represents the greatest disaster to occur in the Soviet navy since World War II."

Jane's said the loss of much of the fleet's missile arsenal meant it "will not be a viable force for the next six months."

"It is also conservatively estimated that it will be two years before the facility is fully operational again," Jane's added.

The publication cited informed Western naval sources with access to intelligence reports as the sources of its report, the first detailed description of the disaster at Severomorsk.

Informed NATO naval sources in London, also with access to intelligence material, said the Jane's report was "substantially correct." They declined to elaborate.

U.S. intelligence analysts indicated to The Associated Press three weeks ago that information on the explosions was too "sketchy" to determine the effect on the northern fleet. But they said the Soviets had adequate stocks of surface-to-air and anti-ship missiles that could be shifted from other fleet base areas to Severomorsk, as well as weapons already aboard the roughly 300 surface warships and submarines in the northern fleet.

There has been no Soviet comment or confirmation on the reports.

Water Plant May Be Ready Early

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Work on the city's new waste water treatment plant is ahead of schedule and the plant may be in operation as much as three months early, Greenville Utilities Commission officials said this morning.

GUC Director Charles Horne said work on the $10.4 million project, which began in August 1983, is 65 percent complete. According to the contract, workers have until August 1985 to complete the facility, but Horne said the plant may be on line "ahead of schedule ... possibly sometime around April."

"All the concrete tanks are complete (and) equipment is now being installed" in those, Horne said, while work on the influent structure is almost complete.

Work on the sludge drying beds is 80 percent complete, while work on the three main buildings at the site — the control building, the maintenance building and the blower building — ranges from 50 percent to 75 percent complete, according to Horne.

"The main work left to be done is the installation of equipment. It's coming along great as far as we're concerned," Horne said.

The new plant, located on a site north of the Tar River and east of the Eastern Bypass, is designed to handle 10.5 million gallons of waste water a day.

"An excellent thing about the whole thing," according to Horne, "is not that there will be a new plant, but that land is available to expand to 20 million gallons a day ... for long-term growth ... 20 or 40 years in the future. We won't be locked in like we are at the present plant."

Planning for the new facility began in 1973, but changes in regulations and federal red tape delayed the completion and final approval of preliminary plans until mid-1981.

Detailed plans for the new plant were completed in 1982, at a cost of $505,000 in local money.

Final approval of the plans and approval of a $7.86 million federal grant to help fund construction came in April 1983, along with a $1.3 million grant from the state.

Some 1.3 million in local funds will complete the normal 75 percent federal-12½ percent state-12½ percent local construction costs formula.

AIR, WATER, OIL CAN OPENERS?

Should there not be a legal requirement for establishments selling gasoline and motor oil to provide basic service requirements? Many of the establishments, particularly 24-hour outlets that sell gas and oil, do not even have devices to open the oil they sell. The majority of the 24-hour establishments do not provide a water faucet or air for tires. It seems only logical that outlets selling fuel products for vehicles should be required by law to also provide minimum maintenance self-services for customers. J.R.

Local and state government's authority is to regulate business only in the interest of health, safety and welfare and it's the opinion of Mac MacCarley, Greenville assistant city attorney, that what you're talking about does not come under any of these headings. He said he agrees with you that it would be good customer service for air for tires, water for radiators, and oil can openers to be provided by sellers of gasoline and oil, but he does not believe that government regulation is the answer.

Mondale Cools Speculation While Looking To Convention

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is moving quietly to orchestrate the Democratic National Convention next week that apparently will give him the party's presidential nomination while he publicly tries to cool speculation over who his running mate will be.

Mondale was remaining secluded at his suburban Minneapolis home today, but he has been busy attending to convention details and the search for someone to fill the No. 2 spot on his ticket.

In an interview taped Monday and broadcast today on ABC's "Good Morning America," Mondale predicted the convention will be "one of the most unified conventions in recent Democratic Party history," but added, "I'm talking about the Democratic Party — there's always a certain irreducible rumble level."

Sen. Gary Hart, Mondale's chief rival for the presidential nomination, will address the San Francisco convention on July 18 under arrangements worked out between aides for Mondale and Hart.

The Colorado senator will deliver his speech shortly before the delegates are expected to cast their votes for Mondale as the presidential nominee.

Details of Hart's appearance were settled Monday, according to Tom Donilon, Mondale's convention operations manager.

Hart's name is expected to be placed in nomination, but Mondale and his aides are so confident of the outcome of the balloting that they are asserting control over the convention agenda.

But Hart, who was flying to Atlanta today to deliver a foreign policy speech, wasn't conceding the nomination.

He told supporters at a fund-raising reception Monday night in McLean, Va., a Washington suburb, that he still expects to win the presidential nomination. He cited recent Gallup, Harris and New York Times-CBS polls as "factual support" for his claim to be the strongest Democrat against Reagan in the fall.

"Even in a period of time when the national media has given this nomination away, once again, the people of this country still believe, the people of this party still believe, that I have the best chance by far of defeating Ronald Reagan," Hart said. "... And because of that evidence we are going to win this nomination."

Jury Seated To Hear Trial In Plowshare Nuke Protest

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A six-man, six-woman jury is hearing the federal conspiracy case against eight nuclear protesters who broke into an Orlando defense plant, damaging missile components and defacing the walls with blood.

The six men and two women defendants, calling themselves the Plowshare Eight, say they are fighting the charges to demonstrate the "immorality" of manufacturing and deploying nuclear missiles such as the Pershing 2.

U.S. District Judge George C. Young Monday denied a request to move the trial out of Orlando because of extensive publicity. The judge noted that the defendants themselves had generated most of the publicity.

The defendants are Per Ingmar Herngren, 22, Syracuse, N.Y.; Christin Marie Schmidt, 24, Baltimore; Todd Kaplan, 26, Washington; Paul Joseph Magno Jr., 27, Washington; Patrick O'Neill, 28, Greenville, N.C.; Timothy Allen Lietzke, 32, Richmond, Va.; James Lyman Perkins, 45, Baltimore, and Anne Montgomery, 57, a Roman Catholic nun from New York.

The eight face up to 15 years in prison if convicted of conspiracy and causing more than $100 damage to U.S. Army property during the Easter Sunday break-in at the Martin Marietta plant.

Following the federal trial, the eight will stand trial in Orange County Circuit Court, where they are charged with two counts of burglary, felony criminal mischief and possession of burglary tools.

"Nuclear Weapons are Against God," read a large red banner carried by one of about two dozen supporters of the defendants outside federal court early Monday. The demonstrators marched around on the sidewalk, passed out leaflets and talked to reporters and passersby about the "immorality" of building and deploying nuclear arms.

The demonstration drew criticism from Young, who told the defendants that the signs, banners and supporters had been seen by every potential juror who walked into the courthouse. The demonstrators were gone later in the day, but most of them jammed the courtroom when the jury selection process finally began.

The out-of-state protesters, many of them veteran demonstrators at other installations around the country, admit to cutting a hole in a chainlink fence and breaking into the plant.

They forced a door and entered a building where the Pershing 2 missiles are assembled, hammered on missile components and smeared their own blood all over.

GROUNDBREAKING — Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church broke ground Sunday for its new church, shown in the sketch above, on U.S. 264 bypass near the Pactolus highway intersection. Construction is to begin immediately on the 18,000-square-foot-building. The Rev. Larry R. Stevens said the sanctuary will seat 570.

Snyder Bequests Over $750,000

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Three institutes of higher education, two churches, relatives and friends are among the beneficiaries of the estate of the late Helen Achenbach Snyder, who died in Greenville on May 23, 1983. The total value of her estate is valued between $750,000 and $850,000.

The largest bequest, 30 percent of the estate, was to Ursinus College in Collegeville, Pa. According to the will, the $227,820 bequeathed from Mrs. Snyder's estate will be used by the college in a manner to be determined by the board of directors.

Mrs. Snyder was a 1923 graduate of Ursinus College. Following graduation, she taught English at the Allentown Junior High School until her marriage to W. Harry Snyder, a classmate and Ursinus graduate. Later, she taught in Montclair, N.J.

"The college's board of trustees will decide on the disposition of the bequest at a later date," said Debra Kamens, director of communications for Ursinus College.

Two churches — Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church in Greenville and Salem United Church of Christ in Allentown, Pa., are each receiving 25 percent of the estate. The bequest to Jarvis Memorial is that the gift be a memorial to her husband, and that the one to Salem United Church of Christ be a memorial to her late mother, Laura M. Achenbach.

"We are delighted that Mrs. Synder has remembered Jarvis Church," said Lyman Ormond Jr., chairman of the board of trustees of Jarvis. "We will be using some of the funds to refurbish the church organ. The trustees will make and present to the administrative board suggestions for other usages of the fund."

"Mrs. Snyder was always supportive of church work at Jarvis. Many of the members, like myself, remember her fondly from the days years ago when she was a house mother on the ECU campus."

The will stipulated that each of the two churches would use the funds as directed by the governing boards of the churches.

The bequests to East Carolina University and to Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., each for

MRS. HELEN SNYDER

10 percent of the estate total, requested that the funds be used to establish memorial scholarships in her name. A spokesman at the office of Institutional Advancement and Planning at ECU, which handles gifts and bequests made to the university, said that to date two distribution of funds had been received totaling $84,500.

"We are grateful and delighted to have these scholarship funds from Mrs. Snyder," said ECU Chancellor Dr. John Howell. "This is a substantial scholarship gift which I expect will provide three nice annual scholarships of about $2,500 each." Howell added the scholarships will be derived from interest earned on the principal which will be invested.

Mrs. Snyder is buried with her husband in the Achenbach Family Cemetery in Plainfield Township, Pa.

Missionary Barbara Sharpe will preach during anniversary services at New Hope Holifess Church near Parmele tonight at 8 p.m.

First Bids Recommended

WINTERVILLE — Town board members Monday night heard a report from John Robertson of Talbert Cox Associates concerning bids recently opened on three Community Development Block Grant projects.

Robertson said the bids were higher than the first set received on the projects and recommended that the board accept the first bids. He also pointed out guideline changes for rental property under repair.

Alderman John Weathering made a motion to make the changes on the rental property, but an increase in rent cannot take place before 24 months. The board approved the bids and the administrative changes.

In other business heard by the board, a request by local developer Bill Clark was reviewed. Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said the town had met with members of the Greenville Utilities Commission and the commission had turned down the request by the town to supply the subdivision electricity. Nobles said the town had been asked to extend water and sewer service to the property, which will include about 200 customers in single and multifamily units.

Winterville had asked GUC to turn over a portion of its service area so the town could supply electricity. Nobles also pointed out Clark requested the area be annexed by the town. Weathering made a motion that the water and sewer system be made available to Clark. The motion passed.

The board also approved the reappointment of William Elbert, Tommy Forrest, Willard Finch, Clifton Brock and Robert Briley Jr. for three-year terms on the Winterville Planning and Zoning Board. Nobles requested the board approve the funds for the county data processing center to process the town's tax bills for 1984. The board approved the request.

Walter Dail presented the board a site plan for three tracts of land on Boyd Street extension off N.C. 11. The proposed three tracts would be used by the Winterville Kiwanis Club, Duxol Gas and Herring Implement Co. The board recommended to Dail that the information be carried to the Planning and Zoning Board for rezoning.

Approval was also given for the audit contract for Farley, Prescott and Mizelle for the year ending June 30, 1984, for $4,185.

The Winterville Jaycettes asked for permission to hold a men's and women's softball tournament Aug. 17-19 on both ball fields, with proceeds from the games going to the Ronald McDonald House. The board approved the request.

Norman Worthington requested that the board give approval for town equipment and manpower to mark off the parking spaces at the Winterville Christian Church with the church paying the cost. The board approved the request, when the town crews had the equipment available.

The 401 (k): A Retirement Answer?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a pension plan that begins with a cut in take-home pay but could end, if all goes as planned, in a relatively bountiful payoff on retirement.

It may be the pension plan of the future, if not now.

Tagged with a name so non-descript it could be applied to a generic medicine or a part in a warehouse, and once little understood even by those whose business it is to know, the 401(k) lay dormant for a couple of years.

Now it is booming. T. Rowe Price, a money-management organization which designs and administers 401(k)s, estimates that 80 percent of the largest industrial corporations will have them by the end of the year.

The action now, says John Rockwell, a Price vice president, is with the next lower tier of companies and even with much smaller enterprises.

In effect, a 401(k) transfers to employees the tax benefits that accrue to corporations under the most common pension plans, called defined benefit plans, which specify if not guarantee a set sum on retirement.

The 401(k) guarantees nothing, but it does give employees a tax deferral on as much as $30,000 of income a year. The money is deducted from the paycheck before any federal tax, including that for Social Security.

It means, for example, that an employee in a 30 percent tax bracket would experience a net paycheck reduction of only $70 for every $100 contributed to the 401(k) plan. No taxes are assessed on earnings until retirement, disability or death, and in certain hardship events participants can withdraw money while still employed. On separation from the company, the money can be taken without a 10 percent penalty, as with IRAs — although the funds are then liable to taxes.

A 401(k) is nothing more than a company pension program allowing a worker to contribute before-tax deductions through a payroll deduction program. The company, if it desires, may also contribute on behalf of the employee.

But why the burst of interest now? One factor is that vendors — banks, mutual funds, brokers, insurers — have really only begun to package and exploit their products. But probably as, or more, important is a change in the corporate environment.

Many companies, that is, have found their defined pension plans have grown enormously, bigger in fact than the potential need, because of increases in their stock investments and because of high interest earned on bonds.

Those funds have tempted some companies to tap their pension funds for corporate purposes or end them altogether. They — the funds — have tempted others too: Corporate raiders.

Whatever the reasons, some companies seem anxious to get out of the pension business, and others seek to share the risk with workers. One reason often cited is that workers should be more involved in their retirements, especially if Social Security fails to come up to their expectations.

But there is at least one more reason, according to Rockwell.

Defined benefit plans — as opposed to defined contribution plans, such as 401(k)s — cost corporations dearly, one reason being that the pensions are all but guaranteed even if the company or the economy do poorly.

Rockwell estimates that such pension plans sometimes cost 6 percent to 10 percent of payroll. He says the newer, 401(k) plans cost considerably less, and may be the least expensive of all to administer.

A Victorian Technique

COUNTED BEAD EMBROIDERY — A Victorian needlework technique has been revived in which a double mesh canvas is completely covered with colored glass beads — either matching the colors painted on the canvas or working from a stitch chart. The decorative purses, cushions, bellpulls, etc. are highly prized today and may occasionally be found in antique or auction houses. The new technique takes advantage of the evenweave fabrics available today. Pictured are designs completed by Lucille Sumrell, supervisor of arts and crafts for the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I have reached the age of "You look wonderful!"

In my 20s it was, "Hi, what's happening?"

In my 40s it was "What are you up to these days?"

In between those two greetings were a lot of, "What have you done to yourself?", an occasional, "How's it going?" and a smiling "I don't have to ask how you are." (These were rare.)

There is something vague about, "You look wonderful." I've never trusted it. I can't figure out if it's the look on the faces of the people when they say it or whether I'm just becoming paranoid. It's probably a little bit of both. The greeting never seems to change. I can either roll out of bed or be rolled into a recovery room and I get the same line, "You look wonderful."

When I ask, "Compared to what?" I just get a little nervous laugh and a playful punch in the arm. No one is ready to explain what they mean by it.

Why do I mistrust the compliment? Because I use it myself. Automatically when I meet someone over 50, my lips say, "You look wonderful!" while my mind is saying, "My God! What happened?"

A few years ago at a gathering, I saw a woman who was 97 years old. She looked like an inflatable doll that had sprung a leak as she sat in a big chair. Without exception, everyone who hugged her bony shoulder said, "You look wonderful!"

A revealing thing happened at a funeral last year. The same people who hugged me and said, "You look wonderful!" then turned to the coffin and remarked, "She looks wonderful!" How do you think that made me feel? (Of course, most of them were the kind of people who also left and said, "Have a good day," so what did I expect?)

Now you're going to say, "Okay, if you don't like 'wonderful,' what are some alternatives?" "You look interesting" would get my attention. And so would "You look like you're trying." "You look better than I had hoped," would be flattering. And what about, "The years have been extremely charitable?"

I like, "You have defied the laws of gravity — and won!" And if all else fails, how about, "You look... like you could use a drink."

"You look wonderful" has become a cliché... a one-size-fits-all snack for the mind to fill in between hello and goodbye. Yesterday I met a friend I hadn't seen for awhile and she said, "You look wonderful! Honest!"

Maybe I should have been happy with "How do you look wonderful" when I had it.

EDUCATION

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — In the next six years, some 27 million children in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades will not get a proper foundation in science and mathematics, according to Charles Kittrell, executive vice president of Phillips Petroleum.

Kittrell says it will take until 1990 to raise enough taxes, train a new generation of superior teachers, and design the proper materials necessary for modern instruction.

This year, Phillips says it will channel $8 million into education, much through company-sponsored math and science educational films. Says Kittrell, "Education clearly is our No. 1 civic responsibility."

Woman Thinks Company May Have Her Number

DEAR ABBY: I am a 44-year-old divorced woman executive presently working for a large, prosperous company, where I have advanced in position and salary beyond my wildest dreams.

When I applied for this job I lied about my age because I was afraid that they would not hire a woman my age. Believe it or not, I put "29" on my application when I was 41—and I got away with it.

I need to know how I can change the date on my birth certificate. I've heard it is possible. You see, my company is sending some of their top people out of the country. I'll need a passport, and if my right age is on the passport, they will know I lied about my age on my job application.

I'm healthy, bursting with energy and look young enough to pass for 32, so what harm would it do?

KEEP ME ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Deliberately lying about your age on a job application is a minor infraction compared to lying about your age when applying for a passport. That, my friend, is a federal offense, punishable by a fine and/or imprisonment.

Today it is illegal to ask a woman her age when she applies for a job. (That's called "discrimination.")

Play it straight. Use your right age for your passport. No one except the immigration officers are likely to see it. And they won't care.

DEAR ABBY: There's a lot of talk about how rude teen-agers are today. I would like to tell you about an incident that took place not long ago.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Some friends and I were in McDonald's having lunch after final exams. We were conversing normally—not shouting or making any kind of a disturbance—when a woman at the next table called over to us, and in a very nasty tone yelled, "Will you kids shut up? I have a baby who is trying to sleep here!"

I thought (but did not say), "So why did you bring your baby to McDonald's during the rush hour?"

Abby, who was rude? And do you think that woman would have spoken that way if we had been a table of adults?

JUST A TEEN-AGER

DEAR JUST: The woman was rude. And I doubt if she would have spoken that way to a table of adults.

DEAR ABBY: My wife's sister and brother have not spoken to me since the death of their mother two years ago. At the age of 91, that beautiful lady had lived a long and righteous life and had many lifelong friends.

My sister-in-law, who was the executor of her mother's estate, decided on a private funeral. Consequently, a dimly depressing funeral with only family members present was held.

As my only means of expressing my outrage and disapproval of the secretive means her family used to bid that dear, beloved lady Godspeed to her heavenly reward, I declined to attend the funeral.

As a consequence of my action, I expect that my wife and her family will hold a grudge against me for the rest of my earthly days.

Was I wrong in thinking that funerals should be open to all who wish to bid a loving farewell to one they shall never see again?

OSTRACIZED IN COLORADO

DEAR OSTRACIZED: You are entitled to your opinion concerning what you think funerals should be, but you showed an inexcusable lack of respect for your wife and her siblings by refusing to attend their mother's funeral for whatever reason.

Give And Take

The Pitt County Commissioners have acted quickly to implement the remarkable plan for school merger which was recently presented by the Pitt County Board of Education.

The county school board plan represented a conditional endorsement of merger, provided extensive capital improvements projects were funded by the County Commissioners.

Last week the commissioners proposed funding of approximately $3 million annually until the building needs of the school systems have been satisfied.

Obviously there are still some differences. The county school plan called for merging in steps with the final merger being accomplished only after all the requested capital improvements needs have been carried out. The County Commissioners seem to feel that merger should be done at the soonest, based on the annual commitment to the capital improvement needs.

The county school board has developed an outstanding plan, which required considerable study, many meetings and much work with the community advisory committees. It is a commendable effort.

The County Commissioners have also developed a good plan for financing capital improvements, one which will not require a bond issue at today's exorbitant interest rates. It is likely that the financing will provide the money as rapidly as it can be wisely spent.

The merger process should move quickly, based on the County Commissioners' pledge of capital improvements financing. The money can be spent more logically by a unified board looking at all the county's school needs.

The boards and officials involved have worked diligently on this very difficult problem. The county school board plan is sound and the County Commissioners have given us a good financing plan. With only a little give and take the merger can be effected, vast improvements can be made to the schools' physical plants and we can put a major educational concern behind us.

No Problems

Now that the Pitt County Commissioners have purchased electronic vote tabulation equipment, the voters of the county have a new responsibility. That is to learn to use the equipment properly.

Some electronic equipment was used in selected polling places in the May primary and those who voted there seemed to have no trouble adjusting to it. Of course, various types of tabulating equipment are now being used throughout our state, and most successfully. Thus there is no reason to think that Pitt County's conversion to electronic tabulators will not be successful.

Actually very little will change for the voter. Each will receive a printed ballot listing the names of all the candidates. The voter will mark the candidates of his or her choice. Then the voter will insert the ballot in the tabulator which will count and retain it.

We can see no unusual difficulties for Pitt County voters in adjusting to the electronic equipment.

Legislature's Leadership Will Change

RALEIGH — When the 1985 Legislature convenes, the leadership of one house will look very familiar while that of the other should be very different.

Don't expect much change in the officers' corps that supports the general of the state House, Speaker Liston Ramsey. There'll be only one change. His favorite liberal, Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, chairman of the Base Budget Committee, is retiring and will have to be replaced. Bets are that Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett, a veteran Appropriations subcommittee chairman, will take Adams' place at Ramsey's side. Etheridge will bring a more rural-oriented agenda to the job and therefore the House leadership will be a bit more conservative next year.

Rep. Bill Watkins, D-Granville, will most likely return as chairman of the Expansion Budget and Rep. Allan Barbee, D-Nash, as speaker protem.

In the Senate, the shake-up should be extraordinary. Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, is the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor and the closest thing to a sure winner in November that politics can offer. Jordan has promised to move people around in the Senate and to open up the process of the heretofore closed chamber.

For the years of Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, a clique of three senators, Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, Ken Royall, D-Durham, and Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, has run the Senate at Green's direction. All three of those senators supported Jordan and it would be foolish to think that any will be pushed aside by the new lieutenant governor. But as Jordan says, "Those three men will not be in the same positions next year."

Who will rise in the Senate? Most certainly Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, will get a good job. He and Jordan ran from the same 17th Senatorial District and he worked very hard in Jordan's campaign. Expect him to get one of the top two or three jobs.

Same with Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, a Jordan co-campaign manager who recruited considerable female support for him. If she survives a July 17 primary, she might be the state's first female Appropriations chairman.

Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, the Senate's only black, was the other co-manager and is likely to win a good job. With only one term of experience, however, a finance or Appropriations chairmanship is unlikely.

Three Democratic lawyers are likely to get important posts. Sens. Tony Rand of Cumberland, Dennis Winner of Buncombe and Charlie Hipps of Haywood counties, look like possible Judiciary committee chairmen. Hipps and Winner face tough general election fights, however, and might not get back to claim their prizes.

Sens. Marvin Ward, D-Forsyth, and Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, were strong supporters of Jordan who are likely to keep their posts as Appropriations subcommittee chairmen. Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, is expected to get a spot where he can greatly influence the Senate's course on education.

In an interview, Jordan says he plans to insist that the process is opened up. The interview was conducted after Jordan had left a closed meeting where legislative leaders were deciding which budget provisions they'd cram down the throats of the membership. Jordan said he'd insist that, in the future, more of the budget be discussed in open committee. He said he's also considering disbanding the Ways and Means Committee, a chummy little death squad which Green and Royall have used to give themselves veto power.

The powerful president pro tem's job is open with Sen. J.H. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, the leading candidate. But he faces a tough primary and, should he lose, Royall could possibly step in.

Hussein Wants Total Withdrawal

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein's warning that Jordan cannot make peace in exchange for "partial" Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank is discounted in Washington as a bargaining gambit, but Secretary of State George Shultz may be in for a surprise.

"The king has said total peace for total withdrawal," a key Hussein adviser and intimate told us. "That has never meant partial peace for partial withdrawal."

There may indeed lurk a small bargaining counter or two in the "total withdrawal" formulation. No one in or out of the king's government truly believes that the Labor Party victory so fervently hoped for here in the July 23 Israeli election could actually lead to complete withdrawal from the 1967 borders.

But Hussein is adamant against any deal that gives Israel more than relatively minor border changes. That most definitely is not what a new Labor government would have in mind if the long-awaited negotiation between Israel and Jordan finally begins.

The Labor Party is still viewed from the king's palace as a serious negotiator with Jordan, together with representative Palestinians, on the territory-for-peace issue. The Likud Party most definitely is not.

"If Likud wins on July 23," an authoritative insider told us, "the West Bank will be absorbed into Israel and there will be an Israeli effort to drive the Palestinians out." King Hussein goes further than that in private. He fears that the U.S. will do little to obstruct the expected Likud drive to depopulate the West Bank of Arabs and fill it up with Jews. Anything less than a Palestinian exodus would pose embarrassing demographic and political problems for a democratic state unwilling to grant full citizenship to all its inhabitants.

Such an exodus could destroy Jordan. It would destabilize the precarious balance of population between the king's ruling Hashemite minority and the Palestinians driven into refuge here after Jordan's losing wars with Israel.

Despite Jordan's obvious stake in a Labor Party victory in Israel, Shultz's aides should protect him from being snookered by false hopes over King Hussein. Shultz's delusion about getting Israel to end its occupation of Lebanon led him to predict an Israeli withdrawal by Christmas of 1982. If Hussein's desperate hope and need for a Labor victory in Israel convinces Shultz that the king will be a soft touch in making a West Bank deal with a new Labor government, he is in for another surprise — and the U.S. for another Mideast pratfall.

Major players in the explosive Jordan-Israeli arena agree the United States was brutally wounded here by its humiliation in Lebanon. But Hussein perceives more than a solitary example of American humiliation. To him, Lebanon was a litmus test of U.S. strength to stand up to Israel. In his opinion, the United States failed the test.

That dictates his toughened bargaining position, including the warnings against false U.S. hope that Jordan will agree to "peace" for "partial" Israeli withdrawal. Hussein's bargaining position includes other hard elements. He will insist that Syria be invited to the table on the issue of the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights. Hussein knows that without an invitation, Syria would torpedo Jordan's West-Bank negotiations.

Syria's disruptive capacity rests on its immense military superiority over Jordan. It is a regular recipient of advance Soviet weapons. As for Israel, its military strength measured by high-performance aircraft, missiles and tanks is believed to have almost doubled since the invasion of Lebanon, thanks to the United States.

But Jordan is routinely denied high-tech weaponry by the United States because Israel says no. Hussein still relies on the old F-5 as the workhorse of the air force, an almost vestigial aircraft compared to the F-15 and F-16 and late-model Soviet MiGs. Jordan's air-defense missile system is static, stuck in concrete and wholly vulnerable to Israeli or Syrian attack.

Hussein's military impotence reduces his bargaining flexibility, a point he has made to Washington without much effect. Instead, U.S. policy seems aimed at squeezing him into a corner and then forcing him to sign whatever terms Israel dictates.

The king is saying he will not be victimized and he appears to mean it.

Why Change The Constitution?

WASHINGTON — After a long snooze, the pending D.C. amendment to the Constitution suddenly came to life last month. Louisiana and Delaware became the 15th and 16th states to ratify this misbegotten proposition. Doubtless these legislators meant well, but his amendment is a bad piece of business. It ought to be permitted to die in peace.

In case you've forgotten, Congress approved the D.C. resolution back in August of 1978. The measure is worded so clumsily that it ought to be rejected on stylistic grounds alone. Truly we do not need to mar our beautiful Constitution with this graffiti.

Section One, in its bungling way, says that "For purposes of representation in the Congress, election of the president and vice president, and Article V of this Constitution, the District constituting the seat of government of the United States shall be treated as though it were a state." What this means is that the city of Washington, D.C., would get two members of the U.S. Senate and one member of the House. The district's

City Council, born again as a quasi-state legislature, would be able to vote on constitutional amendments.

Section Two, stumbling along, says that "The exercise of the rights and powers conferred under this article shall be by the people of the District constituting the seat of government, and as shall be provided by the Congress." It is hard to say what is spelled out by that spaghetti. The Constitution in its more unequivocal clause already vests in Congress the power "To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" in the District of Columbia. That provision would not be repealed. As not-exactly-a-state but more-a-less-a-state, the district would dwell in a constitutional limbo all its own.

The ostensible justification advanced for the amendment is one of simple fairness. The people of the District of Columbia are taxed by Congress as others are taxed; they are subject to the same military service; the are bound by every federal law that binds the rest of the nation — but they have no voice in enacting those laws. They suffer taxation without representation, and as James Otis is supposed to have declared in 1763, this is tyranny. If there were no other solution to this inequity, this amendment might be defensible — but there is another solution.

An unspoken justification for the amendment lies in the political disposition of the district's voters. They went 78.1 percent for McGovern in 1972, 81.6 percent for Carter in 1976 and 74.9 percent for Carter in 1980. It is a lead-pipe cinch that the district would send two ultraliberal Democratic senators to the Hill. In a closely divided chamber of 100 members, two more far-left Democrats could make a dramatic difference.

Statehood for the district is no answer.

The unfairness is unfortunate, but it cannot justify the sloppy tinkering with the Constitution here proposed. The period for ratification runs out in 13 months. Let it run.

Strength For Today

Would you believe it if someone told you that the Bible, under certain circumstances, urges men and women to be cowards?

But it does. It says that there are things in the world of which we should definitely be afraid, and of these things, of course, nothing is more threatening than sin. The Bible speaks sometimes about resisting sin, but it speaks more often of avoiding temptation. It says, "Flee idolatry." It also says, "Flee fornication."

and, "Flee youthful lusts."

A person is foolhardy who lingers in any danger zone where temptation can snipe at him. When it comes to the sins of the flesh, the way to circumvent them is to avoid them. So when you see certain temptations approaching, don't prepare for a fight; tighten your shoe laces and be ready for some fast sprinting. Here is a situation where cowardice and speed are definitely called for.

NASA May Combine Two Trips For Shuttle Discovery

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A new date for Discovery's maiden space launch is expected by Wednesday, with NASA leaning toward combining the shuttle's aborted first flight and its second flight into a single mission, sources report.

The decision will be made by space agency administrator James M. Beggs, who has two major options: reschedule the aborted launch with the same flight plan, or combine it with a Discovery flight that had been planned to begin Aug. 29.

If the original two-flight schedule were retained, Discovery's debut could come in the last half of July, but the second mission would slip into mid-September and scramble the future shuttle launch schedule, which, starting in October, includes at least one flight a month for the foreseeable future.

A combined trip would not lift off until late August, with Aug. 20 the earliest possible date, but would keep the remainder of the schedule intact, barring any additional mishap. This option has become increasingly attractive during the week it has been studied, said the sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

NASA public affairs representatives have been reluctant to discuss the planning, and some have indicated NASA management is telling them to keep quiet until a decision is made.

This contrasts with the space agency's usual and highly praised openness. Some observers say the tight-lipped attitude results from what top NASA officials felt was adverse media coverage of the back-to-back Discovery postponements last month. The officials reportedly also became upset when word leaked last week that a combined mission was being studied.

Discovery's problems began June

25, when a launch attempt was halted just nine minutes before liftoff because of a faulty computer. The next day, another launch attempt was aborted in the final four seconds when a computer detected a failed valve and ordered the engine start sequence to shut down.

NASA officials looked at the potential impact on the future launch schedule, which has several paying customers, and last week began seriously considering the combined flight. Working in their favor was the fact that the first mission was to have flown with a half-empty cargo bay because a problem with a booster rocket had forced Telesat of Canada to withdraw a communications satellite from the manifest.

A combined mission would keep the Leasat communications satellite, a solar panel package and a miniature drug-making factory from the first manifest and include two communications payloads from the second mission. Pushed off to a later flight would be a second Leasat satellite planned for Flight 2.

The crew for a combined mission probably would be the one named to the first flight, commanded by astronaut Henry Hartsfield. The crew selected for Flight 2, headed by astronaut Karol Bobko, would be reassigned to a later shuttle.

Fugitive Lawyer Surrenders

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Stephen Bingham, the fugitive lawyer accused of aiding in San Quentin Prison's bloodiest escape attempt, said he surrendered after 13 years because of "homesickness" and his belief that he now can get a fair trial.

Bingham, 42, turned himself in to authorities at the Marin County Jail on Monday after a San Francisco press conference in which he denied smuggling a gun to prison revolutionary George Jackson.

"I'm happy to be back and begin my life again and to end this nightmare," he told reporters.

He was wanted on a no-bail warrant, but attorneys were expected to ask for bail or a bail hearing during his arraignment today before Superior Court Judge David Menary.

Bingham faces five counts of murder and one count of conspiracy stemming from the violent breakout attempt in August 1971, which ended with the deaths of Jackson, two other inmates and three guards.

"I can only say that I never smuggled a gun nor anything else into San Quentin, and I intend to testify under oath to that effect," he told reporters.

Bingham, the scion of a wealthy and politically prominent Connecticut family, talked with a cracking voice of being haunted by loneliness, "a permanent homesickness for family and friends, which you can never imagine," during his years underground.

He said he had settled in a city, which he declined to name, "where I learned construction skills, went to school and continued to engage in progressive political activity." However, he said he was not part of any underground activity.

"I wanted to come back since the day I left, but it has taken all this time before I feel I would get an open and fair trial in America," Bingham said. Since Watergate, he added, "people now feel that government officials can do wrong."

He said he felt a "deep sorrow for the senseless deaths" that occurred at San Quentin. But he added, "I am not guilty of the charges against me and I have come back to gain my acquittal."

Prosecutors allege that Bingham, then 29, concealed a 9mm automatic pistol and ammunition clips in a tape recorder and slipped them to Jackson during a lawyer-client visit.

Officials said Jackson hid the weapon in a large Afro wig he was wearing, and minutes later drew the gun and unlocked 26 convicts from their cells.

In the ensuing bloodbath, three guards and two inmates who refused to join the escape were killed. Jackson was gunned down by prison guards as he sprinted to a 25-foot prison wall.

Bingham disappeared three days later. Under California law, an accomplice to a crime can be charged with the same offense as the person who committed it.

Bingham denied that he smuggled the gun, saying a female legal investigator, whom he did not identify, had loaned him the tape recorder inside the prison.

He also alluded to a belief by many Jackson supporters that authorities had set up the black leader. When asked why the legal investigator was not interviewed by the state or called to testify, Bingham responded, "The only conceivable answer is that the authorities knew she was not guilty of anything."

Paul Harris, one of Bingham's attorneys, said later that he was only "raising those questions" when asked if he and his client were alleging that prison authorities planted the weapon.

Bingham, a graduate of Yale University and the University of California's Boalt Law School, is the grandson of Hiram Bingham, a former Connecticut governor and U.S. senator. His father, Alfred, who is a Connecticut judge, attended the press conference.

Reagan Tries To Improve His Environmental Image

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's trip today to Maryland's Eastern Shore was designed to help polish his administration's tarnished image on environmental issues.

Interior Secretary William P. Clark and Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Ruckelshaus briefed Reagan on Monday in preparation for the helicopter trip to Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge on Maryland's Eastern Shore and Tilghman Island in the Chesapeake Bay to talk to watermen and eat some of their crab and oyster catch.

The refuge is one of the last remaining habitats of the endangered Delmarva fox squirrel and a prime area for seeing bald eagles. Reagan's visit was to include a briefing on endangered species.

The outing was the first leg of three days of public displays of concern for environmental issues by the president whose policies over the course of his administration have raised the ire of many environmental groups.

Hard-core activists have battled with him since his casual remark four years ago asserting that 93 percent of the nitrous oxides polluting the air come from trees, not automobiles, and a formal statement the same week that air pollution was substantially under control.

Since the 1980 campaign and the remark that came to be known as Reagan's "killer trees" speech, the battleground has shifted to Washington, where both of the president's first choices to head the Interior Department and EPA were forced to quit under fire after long-running disputes with leaders of the environmental movement.

On Monday, as Reagan was being briefed on his administration's achievements, an environmental

U.S. Soldier Gored By Bull In Street

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — An American army paratrooper was badly gored by a 1,100-pound bull today during the week-long running of the bulls in this northern Spanish town.

Officials at the Navarre provincial hospital identified the injured man as Capt. Stephen Townsend, 22, of Nashville, Tenn., who is based in Italy.

He was gored as a herd of bulls ran through Pamplona's narrow streets from their pens to the bullring, with hundreds of men running in front of and behind them as part of the annual San Fermin festival.

A spokesman at the U.S. air base at Torrejon outside Madrid said Townsend was in stable condition, but that doctors at the Navarre hospital told the base's flight surgeons he could not be moved before Wednesday.

Townsend was gored in his left leg, from the knee to the middle of the thigh. Doctors said he had lost a great deal of blood and needed several transfusions.

David Crowned, 44, an Englishman living in Spain, was also treated for minor wounds in the right leg, doctors said.

Every morning for the seven days of the festival six bulls and hundreds of young men run about a half mile through the city's narrow streets, from the bullpens to the bullring in a ritual that dates back to the 16th century.

The bulls are featured later the same afternoon in bullfights.

A paratrooper friend of Townsend, who asked not to be identified, said he and the injured serviceman had been running together between the fourth and the fifth bulls when the fourth bull stopped short and turned on its heels toward Townsend.

"The bull looked at me, and I looked at the bull and scrambled up a fence," the friend said, "But the fifth bull got Stephen."

Townsend made the run Monday without incident, his friend said.

"The problem here is not the bulls, it's the people," he said. "It's just too crowded and everyone stumbles over everyone else."

Missile Strikes British Tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A British tanker was hit by two missiles fired from an unidentified warplane in the Persian Gulf today, according to marine shipping sources and the ship's insurer, Lloyd's of London.

The international insurer confirmed that the vessel, the 133,000-ton British Renown, was hit in gulf waters east of Bahrain.

Marine sources here said the attack took place 72 miles northeast of Bahrain.

One of the two missiles bounced off the deck while the other hit oil loading equipment and ignited a small fire, said the sources, who agreed to give information if they were not identified.

The vessel was on its way to the area off the Bahrain coast where the Swiss-owned tanker Tiburon was towed last week. The Tiburon was hit by Iraqi jetfighters near Iran's Kharg Island on June 27, after loading 250,000 tons of crude oil from Iran.

Roger Lowes, a spokesman for Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence List, said Bahrain Radio monitored in London reported picking up a message from the ship, which said a fire had broken out on board and had been extinguished.

Sect's Public Meet Leads To Shouting

ISLAND POND, Vt. (AP) — Leaders of a reclusive church sect which called a public meeting after allegations of child abuse told angry townspeople that a "lost generation" will result unless youngsters — even babies — are "properly spanked."

The 3½-hour gathering Monday was called by the Northeast Kingdom Community Church to discuss its religious beliefs, but degenerated into a shouting match between Bible-quoting church elders and more than 150 townspeople demanding to know whether members of the fundamentalist Christian sect beat their children.

"You say our children are possessed by the devil," said resident Theresa Desbiers. "They're not possessed by the devil, they are good kids. And I don't beat them."

The meeting came two weeks after the state seized 112 children from the church commune to have them examined for signs of physical and psychological abuse. However, the youngsters were released within a few hours after a judge ruled there was not enough evidence to warrant the emergency detention.

Ex-school teacher Mary Hare asked the elders at what age sect members begin disciplining their children.

"If you wait until a child is able to reason, then you have waited too long," church elder Charles "Eddie" Wiseman replied. "Even little babies have a fallen nature ... and need to be disciplined."

"We are going to raise a lost generation of children ... unless they are properly disciplined and properly spanked," he said.

But Ms. Hare drew applause when she shouted back, "I have no question you can crush the will and spirit of a child."

Seven church elders, sitting at a table facing the overflow crowd in town hall, began the session by saying they would speak their minds and then give the audience a chance to ask questions. But residents weren't willing to wait, interrupting with questions about reports of child abuse at the commune.

The elders first refused to respond, but then tried to explain their disciplinary practices.

"We discipline our children because disciplining children is part of the standard of God," said Wiseman, who faces charges that he beat a 13-year-old former church member for seven hours.

"Serve the Lord with fear," Wiseman added, quoting the Old Testament's Book of Psalms and shaking his finger at the audience. He denounced the state raid as illegal and also quoted the Vermont Constitution.

But state Rep. Francis Manning shouted at Wiseman: "You should read the Vermont Constitution: How come you say you are above Vermont law, which the rest of us live by?"

Two audience members asked church elders about the sect's burial practices. Church member Robert Chamber, who was convicted of illegally burying his stillborn daughter, said he refused a state request for an autopsy because it was "a beastly act."

Besides residents, about 50 adult church members and 50 members of the media crowded into the hall.

Defense Halts Surplus Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has ordered a halt in disposal of surplus items believed worth hundreds of millions of dollars until problems in the disposal system are corrected.

The action by Assistant Defense Secretary Lawrence J. Korb follows an Air Force announcement June 15 that its inspectors had discovered some purchasing offices bought back spare parts from contractors after those items were declared surplus and sold by the government.

Air Force officers then estimated that up to $700 million a year in Air Force spare parts and equipment had been declared surplus.

Korb's order, put into effect July 2, stemmed from the investigation conducted by the Air Force inspector general at three logistic centers in the United States and several overseas.

While Air Force Secretary Verne Orr already has ordered reform of Air Force disposal policies, Korb's directive applies to all of the armed services.

Defense officials said they had no dollar estimate of the items involved in surplus disposal, but they estimated that spare parts and equipment covered by Korb's order cost about $3.5 billion when they were bought new.

"Although the Department of Defense believes current disposal policies are sound, even minor procedural discrepancies affecting the multibillion-dollar defense inventories can have significant dollar impact," Korb said in a statement.

"Our objective is to catch and correct these discrepancies before they become major problems."

Abortion Rate Shows Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The first decline in the nation's abortion rate since a 1973 U.S. Supreme Court ruling setting forth a constitutional right to abortions may be partly due to women "becoming more careful about contraception," a researcher says.

The number of abortions performed in 1982 decreased by about 3,400 over 1981, according to a national survey published Monday in Family Planning Perspectives, the magazine of the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

The decrease from about 1,577,300 to 1,573,900, was "statistically insignificant as a downward trend," according to Barbara Parks, an institute spokeswoman.

But the decrease did show a continued stabilization of the abortion rate that began in 1980, according to the article.

The abortion rate had risen steadily from 16.3 in 1973 to 29.3 in 1980, held at 29.3 in 1981 and then dropped in 1982, the survey said.

Stanley K. Henshaw, co-author of the survey and senior research associate at the institute, theorized a reason for the drop was that more women may be using the birth control pill, a relatively effective means of contraception.

In general, he said, "There's always the hope that women are becoming more careful about contraception."

The survey, which covered hospitals, clinics and physicians' offices that provide abortions, found that abortions per 1,000 women aged 15 to 44 fell from 29.3 in 1981 to 28.8 in 1982.

Last week the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reported a small increase in the number of abortions during 1981. The Guttmacher survey for that year also noted a small increase.

Both the center and the magazine article agreed that the increase in the abortion rate had leveled off since 1980, but neither said why.

Nurses Accept Pact

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Hospitals were gearing up today to return to full operations after registered nurses overwhelmingly ratified a three-year contract to end the largest nurses' strike in U.S. history.

Nurses voted 3,014 to 37 on Monday to approve the pact with 18 hospitals, including the 16 that were struck for five weeks, according to the Minnesota Nurses Association, which represents 6,300 nurses.

"Our immediate reaction is relief that it's over," said Cynthia Hunt, chairwoman of the union negotiating committee. "We're very elated with the response of our nurses."

The acceptance vote "equated strongly with the strength of our strike," Miss Hunt said. More than 90 percent of the affected nurses had been off the job since the walkout began June 1, she said.

The union planned to have nurses back on the job as early as today, President Karen Patek said. Under the agreement, the nurses will be called back on the basis of seniority.

Both sides said they got what they wanted in the contract. The nurses received improved job security with strengthened seniority provisions, while the hospitals won more scheduling flexibility.

"The job-security things were the primary objective we set out for," Ms. Patek said. "Now we head into the task of making it work."

Hussein Calls For Broadened Effort

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein says Middle East conflicts have reached their most dangerous stage and is urging European countries to join a broadened search for peace following the failure of U.S.-sponsored plans.

"We have learned a lesson after the collapse of peace efforts," Hussein said Monday, referring to failed U.S. efforts. "That is that it is not possible to allow one country to handle initiatives single-handedly."

At a banquet in honor of visiting French President Francois Mitterrand, Hussein said chances for peace in the Middle East appear remote.

"The region has never before reached such a dangerous stage. At its eastern end, there is a deadly war (between Iran and Iraq) that is about to spread to the other nations in or outside this area," he said.

"At the western edge of the Middle East, the situation is equally explosive. Israel has been occupying southern Lebanon for two years and is practicing colonization in the (Israeli-occupied) Syrian (Golan) Heights and in the West Bank and Gaza."

Mitterrand, who also spoke at the banquet, called for self-determination for Palestinians. He said talks between Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization are "positive and must be encouraged."

Hussein repeated his proposal for a conference on the Middle East to be attended by the PLO, Israel and the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council. Israel and the United States have refused to deal with the PLO.

Mitterrand's visit, at Hussein's invitation, comes at a time when Hussein has been unusually critical of U.S. policies in the Middle East. The pro-Western king has accused the Reagan administration of bias toward Israel.

Mitterrand said he hoped that parties involved in the Middle East conflict would "sit together around a table" because he believes that all problems in the region "should be resolved through dialogue and not by force."

Shortly before the banquet, the two leaders held their first round of talks. No details were disclosed. Officials said they would hold at least three sessions during Mitterrand's 48-hour visit.

Protesters End Delay In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Families of civil war hostages today ended four days of protests that paralyzed Beirut with burning tires and barricades of junk, allowing the seaport, airport and major traffic crossings to resume normal operations.

The army command said four roads linking Christian east and mostly Moslem west Beirut were clear of the debris that had kept them closed. The protests had stalled the government's plan to reunify the city and halt the nine-year civil warfare between rival militias.

The crossings were declared open to two-way traffic this morning, and four ships from Europe and Latin America sailed into Beirut's harbor, carrying grain, iron bars and paper.

Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national carrier, said regular flights to and from Europe and the Middle East had resumed.

An airline spokesman said planes brought 479 passengers into Beirut and departed with 30 passengers on Monday, the first day of operation after a five-month shutdown.

Operations were expected to be heavier today after the protesters called off a blockade of all roads leading to the airport, saying they would give the government time to deal with the issue of hostages and missing people.

Police said Libya's chief diplomat in Lebanon, Mohammed Feitouri, who was kidnapped Monday in Beirut, was freed unharmed near the Syrian border in eastern Lebanon.

Police said a group calling itself the "Sadr Brigades" claimed responsibility. It demanded that all Libyans leave Lebanon within 48 hours.

Feitouri was the second Libyan diplomat to be kidnapped by the same group in three weeks, apparently to protest the disappearance of Imam Mousa Sadr, spiritual head of Lebanon's Shiite Moslem sect, during a 1978 visit to Libya.

The other abducted diplomat, Mohammed Moghrabi, was freed by Shiite militiamen who stormed his kidnappers' hideout in west Beirut.

In another development, Lebanon's state radio said Jawad khalife, the mayor of the southern coastal town of Sarafand, was killed today in a booby-trapped car explosion.

The radio said the blast occurred when Khalife turned on the ignition of his car in front of his house in Sarafand, 30 miles south of Beirut in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon. The report did not suggest any motive for the bombing.

Sandinistas Oust 10 Foreign Priests

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government, in its latest confrontation with the Roman Catholic Church, has expelled 10 foreign priests it accused of anti-government activity.

The action was announced following a march Monday by more than 300 people, led by Managua Archbishop Miguel Obando y Bravo, in support of a priest accused of aiding anti-Sandinista rebels.

The march, the first such protest led by church officials, was held despite restrictions on demonstrations under a national state of emergency imposed in 1982 because of increasing attacks by the rebels.

The Foreign Relations Ministry said in a communique that the 10 foreign priests were "taking part in plans to provoke a confrontation between the church and the state."

However, Obando y Bravo said the expulsion "is the answer from the Interior Ministry to our march. This is evidence that Marxism is trying to eliminate the church in Nicaragua because Marxism is the enemy of the church."

It was not clear whether any of the foreign priests had taken part in the protest march.

U.S. Cuts Off Jets To Greece

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, while trying to calm a dispute with the Socialist government of Greece, is making it clear there is a "great deal of unhappiness" over recent anti-American rhetoric.

The U.S. Embassy in Athens confirmed plans have been dropped for Greece to obtain a squadron of second-hand American-built F-5 jet fighters from Norway. One U.S. official called the action "a political signal."

"If there is no F-5 sale, that would be an action which would carry its own explanation," said another State Department official, who also spoke on condition he not be identified by name.

The official indicated the decision on the F-5s would not necessarily mean future aircraft deals would be precluded. "Obviously we are not trying to alter the basic relationship, but there are some problems which concern us."

Richard Burt, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, laid out some of those concerns in a recent appearance before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee.

Other officials complain of a lax Greek attitude towards terrorism.

And Burt spoke disparagingly of "inflammatory" rhetoric by high Greek officials.

Turner Calls For Elections

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister John Turner has launched Canada on an eight-week election campaign, putting himself at risk of becoming one of the shortest-serving leaders in the country's history.

Turner, who won the Liberal Party leadership last month and took over the government on June 30 from Pierre Elliott Trudeau, announced Monday that he had selected Sept. 4 as the date for national elections.

"It is in the best interests of Canada for a government to have a fresh mandate," Turner told a nationally televised news conference. "I am prepared to take that risk and earn that mandate from the Canadian people."

His risks are reduced by favorable opinion poll standings for the Liberals. The latest Gallup survey found 48 percent supporting the Liberals to 37 percent for the Progressive Conservatives and 11 percent backing the socialist New Democratic Party.

Turner said unemployment, running at 11.2 percent, the sinking Canadian dollar and a growing public debt forced his decision.

"Any government, to take the kind of steps required by current economic circumstances, needs a clear and fresh mandate from the Canadian people," he said.

Turner, 55, who has been a corporate attorney in Toronto since quitting Trudeau's government in 1975, declined to specify what he would do about the economy.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in early trading today as interest rates rebounded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 11.48 points Monday, retreated 3.53 points to 1,130.52 in the first hour of trading today.

But slightly more stocks rose in price than fell at midmorning on the New York Stock Exchange.

On Monday, a rally in the credit markets helped the stock market fashion a mixed showing to recover from early losses. As bond prices rose sharply, yields on 30-year Treasury bonds tumbled to 13.19 percent from 13.48 percent in the previous session.

But bonds retreated in the early going today and interest rates nudged higher.

Big Board volume reached 19.86 million shares in the opening hour, against 16.04 million in the same period Monday.

City Investing rose ¾ to 41½ in trading that included a block of 400,000 shares changing hands at 41½ a share.

St. Regis, which has sued publisher Rupert Murdoch in an attempt to block him from expanding his stake in the forest products company, jumped 1½ to 41½ on top of a 2½-point gain Monday.

Other active issues included the Big Three automakers, with General Motors down ½ at 67¼, Chrysler off ¼ at 26 and Ford up ¼ at 37½.

The NYSE's composite index slipped 0.08 to 88.33.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.02 at 196.60.

Flynt Released

BUTNER, N.C. (AP) — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt has been released on bond from the Federal Correction Institution in Butner and admitted for treatment at Duke University Medical Center.

Flynt, who is serving a 15-month prison term for contempt of court stemming from a hearing in the John De Lorean cocaine case, was released on an appeal bond July 5, said Charlie Stuart, executive assistant to the warden at FCI.

Flynt is scheduled for trial July 17 on charges he obstructed and impeded justice in November when he screamed obscenities at the U.S. Supreme Court justices.

Ayden Board Plans Session Over Fees

AYDEN — The Town Board of Commissioners will meet with Ayden's commercial solid waste customers at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, commissioners have announced.

The meeting was set at the board's monthly meeting Monday. Fees for collection of waste will be discussed, say town officials, along with collection dates and times.

In other business:

•The board approved a contract with the Department of Justice for use of a Police Information Network (PIN) machine.

•A contract with town attorney Robert Booth for title work on Ayden's community development program was approved.

•The town agreed to examine a tree on Third Street that Commissioner Carl Speight reported was diseased and possibly dangerous. "The tree looks very bad," said Speight. "I've had no complaints but I'm sure we will. It (the tree) looks as though it won't be standing too much longer."

•A specially-trained five-man squad from the Ayden Police Department demonstrated for the town board techniques for dealing with potentially dangerous situations. According to Police Chief Tommy Burney, this team has received individual training in police control of hostage and riot situations. In Monday's simulated situation, the officers had been given a description of four "escapes" from the Maury prison unit and the car they were driving. The car drove by the officers and they searched it, found the escapees and took them into custody without harm. Burney reported that he will attend an upcoming hostage negotiation school to increase the department's ability to handle emergency situations. "These type of incidents are happening more frequently around here," he said, "and it is important that we deal with them as effectively as possible."

Heart Transplant Patient Remains On Serious List

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Fred Davis, who became Georgia's second and third heart transplant recipient over the weekend after his first transplanted heart failed, is in serious but stable condition at University Hospital.

The 36-year-old man opened his eyes Monday but was "very sleepy" and was breathing with the aid of a respirator, said Dr. G. Lionel Zumbro, who heads the cardiac surgery team that performed the back-to-back operations.

"He's still on the respirator and probably will be for several days," said Zumbro. Davis was listed in serious but stable condition early today.

Davis, who had suffered from hardening of the arteries and a degenerative heart disease, was the second person to undergo heart transplant surgery in Georgia.

Tyronze Ingram, a 31-year-old employee of an Augusta-based golf cart manufacturer, received a new heart in a June 27 operation at University Hospital. Ingram took his first walk Sunday and was listed in "serious but improving" condition early today.

Davis, identified only as the husband of a Fort Gordon soldier, underwent his first transplant Saturday evening, but the new heart failed. He was kept alive with drugs, a temporary pacemaker and a heart-lung machine until a second triggered by "too many munitions ... stored too close together," Jane's said. It said one initial explosion touched off "sympathetic detonations around the whole complex." Western intelligence sources have ruled out sabotage and believe the most likely cause for the explosions was "carelessness."

The Soviet navy's northern fleet, based in Murmansk, is the most powerful of the Soviet navy's four fleets. It is spearheaded by an aircraft carrier and comprises 148 cruisers, destroyers and other warships with 190 of the Soviets' 371 submarines.

In wartime, the northern fleet would be responsible for pushing into the Atlantic Ocean and for amphibious operations against Norway, NATO's northern flank.

Jane's said the blasts destroyed an estimated 580 of the fleet's 900 SA-N-1 and SA-N-3 surface-to-air missiles, nearly 320 of the 400 SS-N-3 and SS-N-12 long-range surface-to-surface missiles.

The SS-N-12s are supersonic cruise missiles able to carry nuclear warheads. Jane's said the "complete stock" of about 80 SS-N-22 missiles, also capable of carrying nuclear warheads, and an "indeterminate number" of SS-N-19 nuclear-capable, anti-ship missiles were destroyed. Some SA-N-6 and SA-N-7 SAMs were damaged, it said.

Jane's said the missiles could be replaced by drawing from the arsenals of the adjoining Baltic Fleet. But it said that this would "leave the supply line vulnerable to attack," and noted the destruction at Severomorsk means the northern fleet has only limited storage and testing facilities.

Now — Can AL Win Two In A Row?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The winds of change are swirling around Candlestick Park, where tonight the American League hopes to blow away the recent past and breeze back into an era of All-Star Game prosperity.

Up until last year, the midsummer night's dream game for fans had become a nightmare for the AL — 11 straight losses and an embarrassing 19 setbacks in 20 tries.

But following last season's convincing 13-3 triumph, marked by a seemingly new get-tough approach, the AL outlook has improved.

"There can be a pendulum swing," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli, who will guide the AL in the 8:40 p.m. EDT matchup.

Prior to last year, the most recent AL victory had come in 1971, when Frank Robinson, now the manager of the San Francisco Giants, was the most valuable player. Then it was back to normalcy for AL with a 4-3 loss the next year.

The last time the AL won two straight was in 1957-58, when its lineup featured Ted Williams, Mickey Mantle and Al Kaline.

"Things must have changed since I played," said the AL's honorary captain, Hank Greenberg, a Hall of Fame slugger with the Detroit Tigers when the AL dominated the game in the 1930s and 40s. "When I played, we didn't even bother taking batting practice."

The National League leads the rivalry 34-19-1 and while players often downplay the game, saying it is merely a one-night showcase, NL Manager Paul Owens of Philadelphia offered a different viewpoint.

"The difference between our All-Star Game and the one in other sports, I think, is that ours is played to be won," he said. "There's a National League and American League pride that has to be answered."

Adds Mike Schmidt, the NL's starting third baseman: "I understand the importance of this game to baseball, the fans, and the league presidents."

Just what happens at tonight's 55th All-Star Game may depend more on the weather than on the players.

"Once the wind starts blowing here, we as players don't determine who wins," said St. Louis' Ozzie Smith, a fielding whiz who will start at shortstop.

The only time the All-Stars came to Candlestick was in 1961, when a near-gale led to a record seven errors and blew relief pitcher Stu Miller off the mound before the NL prevailed 5-4 in 10 innings.

Tricky winds and poor visibility created by a twilight start, which will enable ABC-TV to televise the game in the East during prime time, won't help.

"Everyone in the National League knows that when they come to Candlestick, it will be cold and windy," said reserve catcher Bob Brenly of the host Giants.

Several AL players got their first look at Candlestick during a Monday workout.

The verdict? "You just can't take your eye off the ball," said shortstop Cal Ripken of Baltimore, shaking his head. "You don't know where it will come down."

Ripken is one of four AL players, along with second baseman Lou Whitaker, center fielder Chet Lemon and catcher Lance Parrish, a trio of Tigers, making their first All-Star starts.

Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell pulled out of the game Monday because of an arm injury. Alfredo Griffin, who had traveled here with teammate Damaso Garcia, an AL reserve, replaced Trammell.

"It's crazy," Griffin said. "My wife was out-of-town and his wife was out-of-town, and he could bring a guest, so Damaso said why not come out to see the game. Today, I was sitting in the hotel room watching TV and I got a call asking if I wanted to play."

While some say the weather will play the major role in the game and others home runs should to decide it, some say pitching is the key at tonight's game, to be played before a sellout crowd of 58,000 and broadcast by CBS Radio.

"In an All-Star situation, the pitchers definitely have the advantage," said St. Louis reliever Bruce Sutter. He has been in four All-Star games, winning two and saving the other two, while pitching 6 2-3 scoreless innings.

"The hitters haven't seen what you throw," said the split-finger fastball specialist. "And once they see it, they only see it once. They don't have time to gauge it."

Phil Niekro, the New York Yankees' 45-year-old knuckleball wizard, brought along one of the team's oversized catcher's mitts to help his new batterymates corral his knuckleball.

"I hope I can catch it," said Minnesota catcher Dave Engle. "I sure can't hit it."

Mario Soto, the Cincinnati Reds' fireballer, has always made it clear that he doesn't back down from a challenge. But he might hope to sidestep one.

"Reggie Jackson is one of my favorite players," Soto said, naming the AL's starting right fielder, against whom Soto said he had never pitched.

Ross, Tart New Charger Coaches

LITTLEFIELD — Chris Ross of Greenville has been chosen as the new head baseball coach at Ayden-Grifton High School, while Dwight Tart will fill the football vacancy for the Chargers.

Ross attended North Carolina State University for one year before transferring to East Carolina University. He received a bachelor's degree in history after student teaching at Farmville Central High School last spring.

Ross assisted Farmville Coach Bill Davis with the 1984 Jaguar squad which finished second in the Eastern Carolina 3-A race and went on to the state playoffs. He lettered for three years in baseball at Rose High School.

"Chris is just a top flight young man who has a burning desire to coach baseball," Ayden-Grifton Principal William Wiggins said. "He will assist with football and will teach social studies."

Tart replaces Dixon Sauls, who moved to Farmville Central to coach football, and will assist head basketball Coach Bob Murphrey in addition to his football duties and physical education teaching.

Tart comes from Armstrong Junior High School at Eastover in Cumberland County. He coached for one year at Chocowinity and Washington and filled out a year at Aurora.

After playing football and basketball for four years at Dunn High School, Tart was recruited by East Carolina and played a year at offensive tackle. He transferred to Concordia Junior College in Texas and played power forward on the basketball squad for one season. He then returned to East Carolina to finish his education.

"I'm very proud to have him join our staff and faculty," Wiggins said. "We interviewed seven applicants, and he was the one I recommended out of the seven."

Ayden-Grifton still has a vacancy in physical education or driver's education left by the departure of Athletic Director Claude Kennedy, who left to become vice principal at D.H. Conley High School.

"We're looking to fill that position with someone strong in football," Wiggins said. "But the person will have to deal with softball and maybe basketball as well."

Lea, Stieb Draw Mound Duty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National League starting pitcher Charlie Lea has his own catcher and an array of "junkball" pitches that could lead to a parade of pop-ups and groundouts.

American League starter Dave Stieb, whose split-finger fastball travels 95 mph in various directions, has the distinction of winning last year's 13-3 romp and cracking the National's 11-year dominance.

From north of the border, Lea of Montreal and Stieb of Toronto top impressive pitching staffs in tonight's All-Star Game which combine speed and guile, youth and experience.

Lea will be backed up by Dwight Gooden, the smooth, fastballing rookie from the New York Mets, and veteran starters Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles and Mario Soto of Cincinnati. For relief help, Manager Paul Owens of Philadelphia has his own Al Holland and San Diego's Goose Gossage, along with Orosco.

The American League bullpen includes 45-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro — the second oldest player ever to appear in an All-Star Game after Satchel Paige — Mike Boddicker of Baltimore, 12-game winner Jack Morris of Detroit and relief aces Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City and Bill Caudill of Oakland.

"One thing to my advantage is having my own starting catcher in Gary Carter," said Lea, the major league leader in victories with a 13-4 record. "He knows my pitches and how I work. The main thing, though, is my teammates know I can pitch."

Despite his success at Montreal, Lea hasn't garnered the national attention that Stieb and Morris have this season, and he said he was surprised to be named by Owens as the starter.

"It's an honor, I'm excited," Lea said. "I didn't expect it. I didn't even think along those lines. I'll approach it just like any other game. I've never been in any All-Star Game, much less started one, so I don't know any other way to approach it."

Lea said he's had some good games at wind-cursed Candlestick Park, including the second shutout of his career.

"I've never had any trouble with the wind as far as throwing pitches, just keeping the ball in the park," he said. "I had trouble once with the fog. I couldn't pick up the catcher's signals."

Stieb, 9-3, said he also was surprised he was selected to start by AL Manager Joe Altobelli.

"I hope I go out there and do as good as I did last year," he said, recalling the three innings of no-hit pitching that started off the AL victory. Stieb gave up an unearned run, walked one and struck out four.

"Last year I was under a little bit of pressure because of the streak," he said, referring to the National League's 11 straight victories going into the game. "I got off to a shaky start, then we came out and got a few big hits and we got started."

Stieb came to the game this year on a sad note. He flew to Anaheim from Toronto to attend his grandfather's funeral Monday and arrived here after practice.

"I have mixed emotions now because I heard my grandfather died on Friday, then just a little while later I heard I was on the All-Star team," Stieb said.

Altobelli, surprising some by not picking Morris as the starter, said of his choice of Stieb:

"I wanted to go with the same horse that got us here last year."

NCAA Seeks Okay For New Pact

CHICAGO (AP) — Hat in hand, the NCAA went before a special meeting of its 203 Division I football-playing schools, hoping to replace the court-loosened iron grip on its members' television property rights with a voluntary agreement that would allow it to stay in the TV business this fall.

On the heels of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling barring the NCAA from operating as the sole bargaining agent for its members, the most powerful force in college athletics has been reduced to trying to line up enough volunteers to replace the four-year, $263.5-million package killed by the high court's decision.

That package — with CBS and ABC — as well as a new two-year, $11.1-million deal with ESPN, ended with the court's finding that the NCAA's packaging of college football was in violation of federal antitrust laws. That ruling two weeks ago upheld a decision by U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga in a lawsuit brought by the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma.

On Monday, however, attorneys for those two schools asked Burciaga to bar the NCAA from participating in the TV sweepstakes altogether. In a motion filed in U.S. District Court in Oklahoma City, where Burciaga's original ruling was issued, the attorneys charged that the NCAA is "incurably" committed to destroying the free market in college football TV.

The motion was a response to a motion filed last week by the NCAA asking Burciaga to modify his original injunction which barred the NCAA from future TV packages.

The latest Georgia-Oklahoma motion said, "The NCAA has illegally monopolized football television for so long (33 years) that the NCAA should be sidelined for a few years to permit competition to normalize."

"If our proposal is defeated, I guess we're out of the television business," NCAA spokesman Jim Shaffer said Monday. "At our last meeting, the majority of the schools said they favored some sort of plan. Now, we'll find out how seriously they meant it."

Waiting to pick up the pieces should the NCAA plan fail to gain approval are the College Football Association, whose 63 members include every major power except the Big Ten and Pacific-10 conferences, and the Football Television Planning Committee, a compromise coalition which enfolded the CFA, but also includes the money-making Big Ten and Pac-10.

Both groups are offering plans designed to limit the exposure of college football on television this fall — exactly the kind of arrangement that caused the NCAA package to be challenged.

"Even if the NCAA plan passes, you could see the CFA split and still sell the games on their own," said Frank Broyles, athletic director at CFA member Arkansas and an ABC-TV football commentator. "The NCAA package went further than it had to because it still needs approval from the court."

"We're testing new waters and we have no restraints," he continued. "In one sense, we wish we could be back where we were — with limited exposure and big rights fees. I think we can get closer to that by bargaining than the NCAA can."

Broyles was among several dozen athletic directors arriving in Chicago on Monday to hold informal sessions with conference members and other schools. Many also arrived early to offer amendments to the NCAA proposal before an 8 p.m.

EDT Monday deadline.

The NCAA proposal sent out to members would allow schools to negotiate their own television packages with any and all comers — with two notable exceptions.

Under the first, schools agree to make no more than four appearances on national network TV during the 1984 regular season. That stands in contrast to the six appearances allowed over two seasons in the last NCAA pact.

The second major difference is that 20 percent of the fees resulting from nationally televised games during a 3½-hour time slot on Saturday would be turned over to the NCAA.

The proposal calls for 4 percent of the money to go to NCAA football-related programs — promotion, postgraduate scholarships and the like — with the remaining 16 percent apportioned among the members who sign the proposal.

Trades Change All-Star Game

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Baseball fans tend to approach the All-Star Game as an absolute, scientific test of the superiority of one league or the other.

That is exactly what it is not. There was a time when the leagues had very distinct, separate identifications and flavors. Trading between the two was prohibited and players who came up in one or the other usually stayed there for their entire careers.

All that has changed, of course. Trades and free agent signings have homogenized the leagues, players moving freely between them.

The AL may have better shortstops at the moment with people like Cal Ripken, Jr., Alan Trammell and Robin Yount, although you must wonder about the choice of .241 hitting Alfredo Griffin over Yount to replace the injured Trammell. It was made out of convenience since Griffin happened to be in town.

But the NL may have better pitching.

The AL may have better first basemen with no room on the squad for hot-hitting Kent Hrbek and Willie Upshaw. But the NL may have the better second basemen.

There are outfielders aplenty in both leagues.

So who has the edge?

There are seven players in tonight's 55th All-Star game who have seen service in both leagues. Did their talent magically change when they switched from one to the other?

Of course not.

Two of the All-Star pitchers swapped leagues last winter in related free agent signings. Longtime American Leaguer Goose Gossage moved from New York to San Diego. To replace him, the Yankees signed Phil Niekro, who had spent his entire career in the National League.

So it seemed reasonable to ask them to compare their old leagues with their new ones. Both agreed on one constant. Games in the National League go faster.

"I noticed that right away," said Gossage, who has contributed four victories and 15 saves to the Padres' five-game lead in the National League West. "Over there (in the AL) we never seemed to play a game in under three hours. Here they go much faster."

Could it be the designated hitter rule, which adds offense, and, as a related result, time to AL games?

"Maybe," Gossage said. "But I just think the players get on and off the field faster here, too."

"He's right," Niekro said. "It seems the games are longer. More runs are scored with the DH over here. There's not as much bunting, squeezing, hit-and-run and double steals in the American League."

Like Gossage, Niekro has flourished in his new surroundings. With 11 victories, he has been a beam of sunshine in an otherwise overcast Yankee season.

"In the National League, there's a tendency to pitch around the seven and eight hitters to get to the

Nash County.....4
Pitt County.....1

Nash County's 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League All-Stars gained a 4-1 victory over Pitt County last night and moved into the finals of the district tournament being played here.

Pitt, meanwhile, falls into the losers' bracket finals against Greenville tonight. The winner will then meet Nash County for the championship. Should a second title game be needed, it would be played Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Donnie Whitley held Pitt to only five hits in the game and scoreless until the seventh inning.

Nash charged ahead with two runs in the second inning. With one away, Tony Leonard reached on an error. He scored on Terry Newell's double, and Kris Walters reached on an error, scoring Newell.

Two more crossed in the third. Tim Marshmon walked and stole second. Tracy Coppedge singled and also stole up a base. Both scored on Whitley's single.

The lone Pitt run came in the seventh. David Lyons singled and Gray Mills singled. Both moved up on a balk and Lyons scored on an error on an attempted pickoff play.

Coppedge led the Nash hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Pitt.

Greenville.....18
Washington.....5

Greenville's 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League All-Stars kept their district championship title hopes alive last night with an 18-5 romp over Washington in the losers' bracket of the tourney.

Greenville will face Pitt County tonight at 6 p.m., with the winner advancing to face unbeaten Nash County at 8 p.m. Should a second game be needed to decide the title, that game would be played at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Greenville took the lead in the first inning, scoring twice. Chris Fuqua singled and stole second. Billy Turcotte did the same, scoring Fuqua. John Bolen walked and Darrell Moore's infield grounder was errored allowing Turcotte to score.

Three more crossed in the second. Andy Miller walked and was sacrificed up. Fuqua reached on an error, scoring Miller. Turcotte singled in Fuqua and a double by Bolen plated Turcotte.

What proved the difference scored in the third. Miller walked and came around when Fuqua reached on an error.

Greenville added six more in the fifth and another half-dozen in the sixth.

Washington scored three in the fourth, including a solo homer by Franz Holscher, and two in the fifth.

Turcotte, Moore, Chris Brown and Joe DeLoach each had two hits for Greenville. Washington got only two hits off the pitching of Bolen and Duane Williams.

Little League

Coca-Cola.....1
True Value.....0

Walter Gatlin outdueling Craig Willoughby from the mound and Coca-Cola inched to a 1-0 win over True Value Hardware in the first game of the City Little League Championship series. The contest took eight innings.

The best-of-three series for the title continues today at 6 p.m. at Elm Street Park.

Gatlin, hurling for the North State champs, allowed only two hits during the afternoon, both off the bat of Brooks Honeycutt. He struck out 16 and walked five.

Willoughby, trying to pull the Tar Heel winners through, allowed four hits, three of them by Derrick Clark. He struck out 17 and walked four.

True Value had chances in both the sixth and eighth innings, loading the bases in both, but failed to score.

Coke, meanwhile, left a man on second in the second, and on third in the third. But it was the eighth before they finally scored. Clark led off with a double and scored when David O'Neal followed with a single.

The Little League All-Stars have been chosen for the 1984 playoffs. The District IV, Area II playoffs will be held at Roanoke Rapids, starting Monday, July 23. Greenville's Tar Heel League team will face Tarboro at 3 p.m., while the Greenville North State takes on Roanoke Rapids at 5 p.m. The championship game will be played on Tuesday at 5 p.m. with the winners moving on to New Bern for the District championship game against the Area I winner on Friday, July 27.

Those chosen to the teams are as follows:

North State: Abram Lang and Andre Hopkins, Union Carbide; Heath Clark, Terrance Smith and Park Williams, Optimists; Tim Moore, Jamie Brewington, Ledowick Johnson and Kevin Yarell, Sportsworld; Kirk Welch, Lions; Derrick Hines, Walter Gatlin and Derrick Clark, Coca-Cola; and Pat Joyner, Kiwanis. Alternates are Carlester Crumpler, Jaycees; Jason Wing, Sportsworld; Jason Bizzaro, Kiwanis; and Rodney Baker, Lions.

Tar Heel: Kenneth Sawyer, Craig Willoughby, Matthew Cagle, True Value Hardware; Joe Daughtry, Travis Williamson, Toure Claibourne, Carroll & Associates; Michael Cox, Lee Watson, Drew Johnson, First Federal; Maurice Battle, Chris Bland, Grant Harmon, Exchange; Chris Christopher, Moose; Blake Stallings, Wellcome. Alternates are Jennifer Stoneham, Exchange; Shonte Moya, Bill Blizzard and Eric Huber, Pepsi-Cola.

"I might get a little nervous facing him," Soto said.

Jackson has some concerns of his own. Even though he was elected by the fans as an outfielder, Jackson has been a designated hitter all season has not once played the field.

"Knowing Reggie, he'll rise to the occasion," Altobelli said. "If he does have a problem, maybe on a pull hitter we can put the third baseman out there with him."

Stieb started and got the victory for the AL last year.

"I'm going with the horse that got us there," Altobelli said.

He said Detroit's Jack Morris or Chicago's Richard Dotson probably would follow Stieb.

The NL batting order is: Tony Gwynn of San Diego in left field, Ryne Sandberg of Chicago at second base, Steve Garvey of San Diego at first base, Dale Murphy of Atlanta in center field, Schmidt, Darryl Strawberry of New York in right field, Gary Carter of Montreal at catcher, Smith and pitcher Charlie Lea of Montreal.

"The last time I pitched here, the fog rolled in and I had trouble seeing the catcher's signs," Lea said. "The wind here has not affected my pitches, but I have had some trouble keeping balls hit against me in the park."

Owens said Lea probably would be followed by the three leading strikeout pitchers in baseball, Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles, 19-year-old Dwight Gooden of New York and Soto.

And while Alvin Davis won't be starting, the Seattle rookie was more than overjoyed just to be named to the AL team.

"I'm so excited I can't tell you," said Davis, whose .287 batting average, 18 home runs and 65 runs batted in earned him more write-in votes than any other player in fan voting.

"When I read the media guide last night and saw who was here, I began searching for a notebook so I could get some autographs."

Sweden's Entry Is New 'Miss Universe'

MIAMI (AP) — Miss Sweden, a 21-year-old registered nurse who "never dreamed" it could happen, wore the jeweled crown of Miss Universe 1984 today after outshining 80 other beauty queens from around the world.

"I can't believe this, I'm so happy that my parents are with me," Yvonne Ryding said tearfully Monday night after winning the pageant, and the $175,000 in cash and prizes that go with the crown.

Miss Ryding, who weighs 114 pounds and stands 5-foot-7, was the runaway leader at all stages of the contest, scoring highest in both the swimsuit and evening-gown categories.

She also was the favorite of the other contestants, who gleefully surrounded her after the coronation, saying "I told you, I told you."

First runner-up was Miss South Africa, Tisha Snyman, 20, of Durban; second runner-up was Miss Venezuela, Carmen Maria Montiel, 19, of Maracaibo; third runner-up was Miss Philippines, Dess Verdadero, 21, of Manila; and fourth runner-up was Miss Colombia, Susana Caldas, 20, of Cartagena.

The five finalists had been asked what they would tell women throughout the world if they won the pageant. Miss Ryding said she would encourage all women to "have their own personality."

The new Miss Universe's first official act was to reign over a coronation ball early today. She was to make a "breakfast-in-bed" appearance for the media, followed by an awards ceremony.

Miss Ryding also was to select a $5,000 prize wardrobe from an exclusive shop in Bal Harbour, north of Miami Beach, before leaving Miami on Wednesday for appearances in New York.

Her title became official Monday night when host Bob Barker pronounced Miss Ryding the winner and the 1983 Miss Universe, Lorraine Downes of New Zealand, placed the jeweled crown on her head.

Sten and Agneta Ryding quickly pushed through a crowd of photographers to stand at their daughter's side.

"It's unbelievable," said Ryding, holding the heavy Miss Universe cup for his daughter. "I've never seen such a thing before. The people in Sweden can't understand what this is."

Asked if he expected his daughter's victory, the proud father replied, "No, I didn't. There were so many girls, she was lucky." Miss Ryding said she "never dreamed" she would win. She said that after her year of activities, she would probably return to her job as a registered nurse in Sweden.

Miss Bermuda, Rhonda Wilkinson, said most of the contestants had picked Miss Ryding as their choice for Miss Universe 1984.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make decisions in the morning about the policies under which you wish to live. Then later, you have a chance to organize them so they can work on practical level in the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Early go over new ideas and put the most practical ones in operation after lunch. A new contact can help you with a workable plan.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Early study the promises you made to others and know how to handle them efficiently after lunch. State your ideas.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Come to a fine understanding with business persons and then you can work out contacts, etc. Show what you are on the ball.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Improve your surroundings so that you can feel happier and work more efficiently. Show your appreciation in some tangible way.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early decide which philosophy you wish to follow and tonight put it into practice. Don't neglect important business matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Have that fascinating talk with a close tie in the morning. Extend invitations to whomever you want as guests in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Decide how best to handle your work and then full speed ahead. Get correspondence handled wisely. Learn much from them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle monetary affairs early so later you can confer with others regarding your other assets. Try to get your real estate in order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Decide what it is you want in personal matters and then do any practical work connected with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find a better way of progressing in the days ahead and put a new plan to work quickly. Join worldly-minded friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure you know what it is you most want and then get at the facts and figures connected with such.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do whatever will safeguard your talents in the morning and later friends will be glad to help you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who can learn a good deal during the early years of life, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can and add foreign languages to the curriculum. The right spiritual training is important early in life.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THE ADMITTEDLY LETHARGIC SINGERS COULD ONLY HO-HUM.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals N

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Frank Stewart, a bridge teacher from Birmingham, Ala., has been appointed Associate Editor of the ACBL "Bulletin." Stewart has contributed articles to many of the world's foremost magazines, and his first book, "Bridge for the Advancing Player," has just been published by Prentice-Hall. (Paperback, 234 pp. Available from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025 for $6.95 plus 75 cents postage & handling.) A second book is in the works.

The book is directed to the duplicate player, and some of the conventions used might appear strange to many of our readers. However, the selection of hands is very good indeed, and the problems will prove challenging to most players. The book is written in an easy style and will reward study.

On this hand from the book, South might easily have passed North's one heart opening rather than respond one no trump. Stewart makes a valid point that the fact that South's honors are concentrated in one suit makes the hand better than the 5 points it counts. Note North's good judgment in bidding three no trump rather than four hearts.

West leads a diamond and the defenders quickly take their book as declarer sheds a club on the fourth round of the suit. West then exits with a spade. Declarer has eight tricks. Should he try for his ninth by overtaking the king of spades and trying the club finesse, which means he will be down two if that fails because the opponents can cash the queen of spades? Or should he win the king of spades and rely on a 2-2 heart break, in which case the third heart will be an entry to the ace of spades in the closed hand?

It is a simple matter of percentages. The club finesse is a 50 percent shot. The odds on a 2-2 heart break are 40 percent. So overtake the king of spades with the ace, finesse the queen of clubs and claim your contract!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Hunt, Helms Trade Barbs Over Policy

By The Associated Press
Gov. Jim Hunt says butter, not guns, will keep Central America from turning communist, but his U.S. Senate opponent, incumbent Republican Jesse Helms, says Hunt is ignorant of foreign policy.

Hunt, a Democrat, said Monday in Durham that America must pull Central American nations out of poverty and despair to stop the spread of communism there.

Foreign policy has become a focus of the Senate race between Hunt and Helms, as Hunt in recent weeks has run television advertisements highlighting Helms's ties to Roberto D'Aubuisson, the defeated right-wing candidate in El Salvador's presidential election in May. Hunt has said D'Aubuisson directed right-wing Salvadoran death squads.

Helms, however, has called D'Aubuisson's opponent and winner of the Salvadoran election, Jose Napoleon Duarte, a socialist, and has accused the U.S. State Department of rigging the election to assure Duarte's victory.

Helms has also warned that communist victories in Central America could prompt an influx of more than 10 million refugees into America.

Hunt said Monday that if rebels fighting the Salvadoran government were not communist now, they could become communists if they came into power. He said that the best way to keep countries from favoring communist revolutions was to provide $1 million a year in economic aid for five years so that Central Americans could buy farm supplies, and build farm-to-market roads, water treatment plans and medical facilities.

Helms, in a press release issued Monday in Raleigh, said, "I am constantly astonished at how little Jim Hunt knows about foreign policy."

"What he is saying is that it's wrong to oppose communist regimes around the world — and that he, if he were a senator, would continue to dump billions of dollars of the American taxpayers' money into foreign aid program that have done more harm than good."

Hunt's proposal is less than the five-year, $8 million aid program recommended by the Kissinger Commission, a presidential panel headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

But Hunt's support for $5 million in Central American aid differentiates him from Helms, who opposes non-military economic aid to foreign countries.

Hunt made few specific proposals for military aid to the region, saying that the United States should provide the military aid necessary to stop the spread of communism. Hunt also said he approved of U.S. military maneuvers in Honduras as long as the U.S. presence does not "overwhelm the country."

Hunt said he emphasizes human rights, democratic elections and economic aid while Helms emphasizes only military aid.

In other political action Monday, David T. Flaherty, state Republican Party chairman, told a news conference in Raleigh that President Reagan's economic policies helped reduce the nation's unemployment.

Flaherty said Hunt backed the economic policies of former President Jimmy Carter.

"It's time for the voters to take a close look at which Senate candidate supported the disastrous Carter-Mondale policies and which candidate fought to implement the Reagan economic recovery program," Flaherty said.

"Jim Hunt was one of the biggest supporters of Jimmy Carter's disastrous economic policies and a leading opponent of President Reagan's" program, he said.

"On the other hand, Sen. Jesse Helms has been one of the strongest supporters of President Reagan's economic policies. ... He's championed President Reagan's spending cuts, tax cuts and tax indexing plan."

Will Marshall, the Hunt campaign's press secretary, said, "It's not surprising that Jesse Helms and the Republicans would rather run against Jimmy Carter, but unfortunately for them their opponent is Gov. Jim Hunt."

If Helms wants to claim credit for the economic recovery, he also should accept blame for "the $200 billion deficit, runaway interest rates and widespread waste coming from indiscriminate Pentagon spending," Marshall said. "He can't have it both ways."

Weapons Found

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Police are questioning nine foreigners who were seized in police raids at three local hotels where automatic weapons, grenades and explosives were found.

Police Commissioner Werner Liebhart said the identities of the prisoners had not been determined, although they held British passports when arrested Friday. He said it was believed they were Pakistanis because they spoke only Urdu and Pushtu, making the interrogation difficult.

On this day in 1938, ace aviator Howard Hughes completed an around-the-world flight in a record 91 hours. Hughes had already set a transcontinental speed record in his sleek monoplane, the H-1. Although the U.S. Army rejected the H-1 as a model for its World War II fighters, this monoplane may have inspired Japan's deadly Zero fighter planes. Soon after Hughes' brainchild gained fame, Japan produced the Zero — dramatically similar to the unique H-1.

Army's Proposal For Burning Gas Upsets Residents

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Ky. (AP) — It's a picture of the pastoral.

Cows graze on the rolling pastures of the Blue Grass Army Depot, and osprey flit through its woodlands.

But beneath the wind-swept grass, the depot is a storehouse of deadly chemical weapons.

Army officials want to build a $42 million incinerator on the depot — less than a mile from homes, schools and farms — to destroy 70,000 small World War II-era missiles equipped with nerve gas agents.

Richmond, a college and farming community of about 22,000 people, and neighboring Berea, with 8,200 residents, don't like it.

"I can't say enough about what it might mean to the future of Madison County," said Betsy Ney, one of the most outspoken opponents of the incinerator. "That's a very bad calling card: home of the $42 million nerve gas incinerator."

"People are getting knowledgeable about things like this. And the more people get to know, the more they try to stay away from places like that," Mrs. Ney said. "How many parents are going to want to send their children to Eastern Kentucky University or Berea College when there's an incinerator here?"

About 400 people attended a public hearing in Richmond last winter to voice indignation over the proposal. Madison County's Fiscal Court demanded a congressional investigation, and teachers at Clark Moore Middle School signed a petition against the incinerator.

A citizens panel appointed by U.S. Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., meets periodically with Army officials to gather facts, talk over alternatives and learn about a prototype incinerator now testing the process at Tooele Army Depot in Utah. The group will tour Tooele at Army expense in August.

"Most everyone agrees we have a problem ... we have to get the nerve gas out of Madison County," says state Sen. Robert Martin, a Democrat.

Former Klansman Commits Suicide

GREENSBORO (AP) — A "despondent" former Ku Klux Klansman who attended the 1979 rally at which five anti-Klan demonstrators were shot to death has committed suicide, authorities said Monday.

Brent Fletcher, 38, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, the Guilford County Medical Examiner's Office ruled. His body was found in his Greensboro home Saturday.

"He had threatened suicide a number of times," said Sheriff's Capt. Carleton Richards. "He was despondent. He was just another victim of the (Vietnam) war more than anything else."

Fletcher, who stepped on a land mine and lost a leg and part of the other foot in Vietnam, allowed several Klansman and avowed Nazis to meet in his house on Nov. 3, 1979.

The group, including Fletcher, formed a caravan and drove to eastern Greensboro, where a "Death to the Klan" rally was in progress. Words were exchanged, a fight broke out, and shots were fired.

Five members of the Communist Workers Party, which sponsored the rally, were killed.

Six Klansmen and Nazis were charged with murder but a state jury acquitted them in 1980. A federal jury acquitted nine Klansmen and Nazis this year on civil rights charges stemming from the incident.

The only charge levied against Fletcher was engaging in a riot. It was dropped after the 1980 trial. Fletcher, who testified in this year's trial, told authorities he drove one of the vehicles in the caravan. He said when the fighting broke out, he fired a shot from a .12-gauge shotgun into the air and sped away.

"I couldn't believe it," he said in a 1979 newspaper interview. "I had no idea this would happen. I figured a little name calling and we would be gone."

Former Klansman Edward Dawson, a close friend of Fletcher's and a defendant in the civil rights trial, said Fletcher was jilted after returning from Vietnam by a woman who "told him that she didn't want to marry half a man."

Fletcher later married and fathered a child, but the marriage broke up in 1979, leaving him deeply depressed, Dawson said.

Dawson said Fletcher spoke often of the shooting incident. "When I would stop by his house to talk, the conversation always ended up at Nov. 3, 1979," Dawson said.

Local Anniversary Events Set

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

With all the hoopla attached to the celebration of America's 400th anniversary on the North Carolina coast this week, counties in other parts of the state might feel left out.

But they won't, says Barri Welles, county coordinator for the America's 400th Anniversary Committee in Raleigh, because a host of activities have been planned for the counties.

"We're really trying to say that this is for the whole state of North Carolina, not just for the east," Ms. Welles said.

And the counties, she said, are responding well.

Not all the counties have activities planned for this year, she said. "But this will go on for three years so those who haven't done anything yet will," Ms. Welles said.

Friday marks the 400th anniversary of the landing of English explorers on the North Carolina coast. The state's observance of the anniversary will continue until Aug. 18, 1987, the 400th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, the first child of English parents born in the New World.

Black-tie galas, quilts, cloggers and essays are all part of the celebrations planned in county's across the state, Ms. Welles said.

Alexander County, for example, will hold an essay contest on North Carolina history with the winners taking a train ride across the county.

That contest is one of several events that ties in with the main purpose of the first year of the anniversary celebration — education, Ms. Welles said. Another way of educating people has been to teach fourth- and eighth-grade students, who study North Carolina history, about the state's 400 years, she said.

"We want to make children aware of their heritage, especially English history, and show there's a tie-in," she said.

Counties are on their own to devise ways of celebrating the anniversary, she said. Many are finding ways to celebrate both the local and state heritage.

Many counties are using the 400th anniversary as a theme to make people aware of local history or to use at annual events such as the Sneads Ferry Shrimp Festival, or Carolina Street Scene in Winston-Salem, she said.

And that's fine with the 400th committee members.

"They have some 400th recognition and that makes people aware," Ms. Welles said.

In Mecklenburg County, the University of North Carolina at Charlotte will sponsor a series of lectures from Sept. 24 to Dec. 5.

Other special events in Mecklenburg this summer and fall include a Victorian costume display at the Mint Museum of History July 8 and a rare book and manuscript collection at UNC-C's library.

Ms. Welles said books published about the anniversary will be one of the best artifacts of the anniversary celebration. Eighteen brochures written by historians are also being placed in public and school libraries, she said.

Orange County will hold Festival Week Oct. 8-13. Events include University Day, with the speech geared around the 400th anniversary, a new drama production at Paul Green Theater, a new show at the Morehead Planetarium, a performance by the North Carolina Symphony and lectures at the North Carolina Botanical Gardens.

Cumberland County will present Sunday in the Park 1984 to celebrate the anniversary. On each Sunday in July, traditional music and dance from the British Isles and North Carolina will be presented at a city park.

Other events include: the "Strange Seafood Exhibition" July 16 in Carteret County; a "History and Baseball" celebration in Perquimans County Aug. 5-11; and a wagon train on Great Wagon Road from Virginia to Bethabara in Stokes County sometime in October. It was this road that brought Moravians to the area.

Farmers Protest Offers

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — More than 100 angry tobacco growers from nine counties have protested insurance adjustment procedures by W.R. Grace Co. for tobacco damaged by fertilizer tainted with herbicide.

"Here we are — knocked down again," said farmer Frank Bryant at a gathering in Carthage on Monday. "I represent the disturbed. I've been a farmer of tobacco for all my life, and I'm disturbed by the low-key concern of all the officials and the people we have put our trust in."

Meanwhile, in Raleigh, Grace officials said they have enough insurance to satisfy claims of customers whose tobacco crops were damaged.

Lloyd L. Jaquier, executive vice president of Grace and executive of the company's Agricultural Chemicals Group, said at a press conference that adjusters will visit each farm claiming damage before harvesting.

After misshapen leaves appeared last month on some tobacco leaves, analysts said they found traces of dicamba, a broadleaf herbicide, on plants that were treated with the fertilizer. The company has denied there is positive evidence that the herbicide came from the fertilizer.

In a letter to farmers released Monday, Jaquier said the company is still investigating the source of the herbicide.

"Since we have never had dicamba or any similar product in our fertilizer plants, this contaminant came from an outside source which we have not identified as yet," Jaquier's letter said.

"There is no positive evidence that this is the result of our fertilizer," Jaquier said. "When you have such minimal quantities, it takes real detective work to find out where it came from."

"Agricultural authorities have indicated that much of the tobacco exposed to the dicamba will suffer little damage and that it should be marketable," he added.

Jaquier said the company had received 836 individual claims for damage. The exact number of affected acres was difficult to determine, he said, but his guess was 5,000 to 10,000 acres.

Jaquier said adjusters were using a formula that took $1.85 per pound as the average price for 1984 tobacco. He said the cost farmers would save by not harvesting affected leaf would be deducted from the settlements.

While Jaquier said farmers should not expect to make a profit from the incident, farmer James Needham in Carthage said he expected the worst. He said after an adjuster finished making allowances for labor, leases and other overhead costs avoided by not harvesting, he would get only 77 cents per pound of damaged leaf. He said that after subtracting his costs for renting the land, that would mean a net of 17 cents per pound.

Security Tight For Princess

RALEIGH (AP) — An inspector from Scotland Yard, U.S. Coast Guard officers, State Bureau of Investigation plainclothesmen and a team of divers will be part of the web of security surrounding Princess Anne's visit to North Carolina, officials say.

"The sheer logistics of this thing ... poses some unusual problems to us," said Gary Griffith, supervisor of special operations for the SBI, which is coordinating security for the visit. "You must allow public access to the dignitaries and press access to them. The fact that it is a public and a media event ... poses a different problem."

Some 100 law officers, including state Highway Patrol troopers, national guardsmen, Coast Guardsmen, sheriff's deputies and local police, will be stationed throughout Manteo and along the waterfront when the princess arrives as part of the 400th anniversary of America's first English settlement.

"It's a joint effort of all law enforcement agencies so no one gets entirely stripped of their manpower," said Griffith.

SBI plainclothesmen will work the crowd, estimated at 20,000 or more, for the ceremonies commemorating the arrival of Sir Walter Raleigh and the first colonists to Roanoke Island in 1584.

Divers from the state Transportation Department will inspect a footbridge for underwater explosives before the dignitaries cross to Ice Plant Island to dedicate the new Elizabeth II State Historic Site on Friday, Griffith said.

Princess Anne is scheduled to land on a corporate jet Friday morning at Manteo Airport in the company of U.S. State Department officials and an inspector from Scotland Yard, said Griffith. They will join Gov. Jim Hunt in the brief dedication.

State wildlife and marine fisheries personnel will patrol the waterways, while the U.S. Coast Guard will control access to the inlet and supervise boat traffic during the weekend celebration.

National Park Service workers will secure the Elizabethan Gardens, where Princess Anne will take a tour and attend an invitation-only luncheon before departing for Atlanta.

Dare County Sheriff Bert Austin said he doesn't expect any problems during Princess Anne's stay.

"This looks real good," he said. "It's very well covered from all angles ... any time you're going to have dignitaries visiting like that you prepare for it."

Smokers Rights Defended

RALEIGH (AP) — Businesses with economic interests in tobacco are being asked to display decals showing a burning cigarette and the slogan "My Pleasure. My Choice" in a new campaign stressing smokers' rights.

"We've come up with an idea we think will help the public see the rest of the story and are encouraging everyone in the tobacco family to participate," said F.H. Shackelford Jr., president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, in a prepared statement issued Monday.

"The purpose is to ... remind people that smokers do indeed have some rights also and secondly, that tobacco does generate a great amount of income in North Carolina," said Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the group.

The decals will be part of a month-long drive starting Sunday, and Blalock said nearly a million of the four-inch stickers had been sold in the past year. The emblem has also been sold on bumper stickers, coffee mugs, hats, T-shirts and cigarette lighters, he said.

Shackelford said the symbols, available in eight languages, would "serve as a reminder that a participating firm believes smokers do have some rights and tobacco is contributing to the economic well-being of the company."

About 25 companies from the United States and six other countries already have agreed to participate.

Atlantic Tobacco Co., a Raleigh-based cigarette wholesale distributor that employs about 125 North Carolinians, is taking part.

"We feel more people must be made aware of the tremendous economic contribution tobacco makes to our society," said Kenneth Fields, the company's vice president for branch operations.

Tobacco, North Carolina's No. 1 cash crop, represents about 52 percent of the total income derived from farming in the state, Blalock said. Also, about 7 percent of all jobs in the state are directly or indirectly related to tobacco.

"And so there are no alternative sources that could generate $1 billion a year like tobacco does (in North Carolina)," he added.

James Bond Car Sells For $80,000

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The gray Aston Martin DB5 with retractable machine guns that actor Sean Connery drove as James Bond in the movie "Goldfinger" has been auctioned off for $80,000.

Race driver Dick Barbour of Cypress, a 1980 winner in the 24 Hours of LeMans race, said Sunday he bought the car "because I love James Bond movies the best of all."
