Train, Tanker Collide In S.C.

MCBEE, S.C. (AP) — Two people were killed this morning in an explosive collision between an Amtrak train and a gasoline tanker truck, prompting evacuation of the downtown area in this small Chesterfield County town, authorities said.

It sounded like "a pistol shot, and then a bomb, a big explosion," said witness Mrs. Leroy Mauldin.

Flames shot "straight up in the air," said Mrs. Mauldin, who said she was going out her front door to pick tomatoes when she saw the northbound train hit the front end of the truck about 7:30 a.m.

The train engineer and the truck driver were killed, said Cliff Black, an Amtrak spokesman. A fireman in the cab with the engineer was injured, he said.

No injuries were reported among the 309 passengers aboard the 14-car Silver Star, which was northbound from Tampa to New York, Black said.

School buses were sent to help evacuate passengers and townspeople, said

Dennis Hansen, chief of emergency operations for Chesterfield County. All were taken to McBee High School and a Baptist church.

"They were going to send as many as they had mechanics to take them down," said Hansen, who estimated five or six buses were sent to the town of less than 800 residents.

A fireman from nearby Cheraw said officials at the scene told him the truck exploded after being hit by the train and the resulting fire threatened two gasoline storage tanks nearby.

The truck was owned by Railwater Transport Co., Black said.

"They're just letting it burn out," said Peggy Griggs, who was working as dispatcher in the sheriff's office. "The engine of the train caught on fire but they did contain that."

Agencies at the scene included emergency preparedness workers, the sheriff's department and firefighters from McBee, Jefferson, Pageland and Darlington County, the sheriff's secretary said.

Street Repairs Will Receive Top Priority In New Budget

By SUE HINSON

In coming months, citizens of Greenville will see capital improvements provided for in the city's new 1984-85 fiscal budget begin to take shape. Among improvements included in the city's $16 million budget are road repairs and maintenance, renovation of city buildings and expansion of Parks and Recreation facilities.

The first of the intended $766,586 of improvements to receive attention will be the city's streets, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

"Some people thought that we had already begun working on the roads because of all the construction activity taking place around the city and county. That work is being done by the state ... we will begin work by the end of July," Mrs. Meeks said.

Approximately $312,450 of the 1984-85 fiscal budget has been designated to maintain and improve city roads. Specific items include a thoroughfare plan update, $12,000; mapping update program, $30,000; final sand mine payment, $16,250; street resurfacing, $75,000; drainage improvement program, $15,000; installation of railroad crossing signals at 14th Street and Seaboard Railroad, $8,000; Hooker Road bridge replacement, $129,000; installation of traffic signals at Fifth and Elm and Fourth and Elm streets, $26,000; and a CBD traffic signal system to coordinate the signal system in the central business district, $1,200.

The next most costly item provided for in the budget is a Science Nature Center which will be built at River Park North some time in the future. According to Mrs. Meeks, the council's $250,000 appropriation "reflects the city's commitment to construct and establish a center which will be an educational attraction for the general public."

She said, however, that the city's pledge will cover only part of the expected construction expenses. "We're hoping that the remainder of the money that will be necessary for the center can be raised through contributions," Mrs. Meeks added that development of the center could not be put on a time table at this point because "there is a lot of planning work to do yet ... we still have to come up with a design for the building, contact the architects," etc.

Other capital improvements that will take place this year include renovation of the first and second floors of the Police Department, $56,000; renovation of restroom facilities at City Hall and the Community Building to meet handicapped requirements, $24,650; remodeling of the mayor's and clerk's offices at City Hall, $6,000; remodeling of the first floor of the Community Building, $40,000; repairs to the roof at

GUC OKs Purchase Of Tract

By STUART SAVAGE

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night approved the purchase of a building and lot at 212 W. Fifth St. for $105,000.

The Bowen Building, owned by the J.F. Bowen heirs and adjacent to property on which the utilities building is located, includes a 7,980 square foot lot and 3,538 square foot office building built about 1962.

GUC Director Charles Horne said the Bowen property will prove "valuable for long range planning" by providing "more flexibility" for the modification and continued use of the present utilities building.

"We'll keep the building there and rent it out until we have use for the property," possibly as a customer parking lot, Horne said.

Commission members also awarded a contract for the design of a building to house the commission's engineering department to Dudley, Shoe & Hite Architects for $27,000.

The new engineering building will be located on property at the commission's operations center on Mumford Road.

ECU Regains Full Accreditation

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Officials of East Carolina University announced during a news conference this morning that the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education has restored full accreditation to all teacher education programs at ECU.

In 1983 it was directed by NCATE that the governance structure of teacher education at ECU had to be corrected if NCATE accreditation were to be retained. According to Chancellor John Howell, who called the news conference, the quality of the university's nearly 50 teacher education programs was never questioned and the NCATE action did not at any time affect certification of ECU graduates.

He credited Dr. Charles Coble, dean of the school of education and director of teacher education, with shouldering the responsibility of bringing the governance structure into line with NCATE recommendations. "Dr. Coble and many, many of our faculty did the job," he said. "We owe them a debt of gratitude."

He gave special recognition to Dr. Tom Chambliss and Dr. Katye O. Sowell, professors of education, who prepared the university's self-study documents for perusal by the NCATE prior to accreditation consideration visits.

The letter indicating that accreditation is restored retroactively to the past 1983-84 academic year and forward through September 1990 was written by George Denmark, NCATE interim director. He expressed appreciation "for the fine cooperation from the faculty, staff and administration of your institution." (Please turn to page 16)

PROBLEMS ... Farm agent Mitch Smith identifies Granville wilt on a tobacco plant near Pactolus. The bacterial disease can be found in most fields in Pitt County, Smith said, but varies widely in its severity. The plant above, Smith said, is a textbook case of the disease because the right side of the plant has begun to wilt and the left shows normal growth. Eventually the entire plant will droop. Pitt Tobacco Growers Face Granville Wilt Infestation

By MARY SCHULKEN

As if herbicide-contaminated fertilizer, a sopping spring and a bone-dry summer aren't enough, Pitt County tobacco farmers are now struggling with the bacterial disease Granville wilt, say local agricultural officials.

"You can count on seeing Granville wilt in just about every field in the county," Mitch Smith, Pitt extension agent, said. "It ranges from affecting just a few stalks to seeing complete fields devastated."

Granville wilt is the second leading tobacco disease in North Carolina, Smith said, and it causes problems annually in Pitt County. "It seems like we have a Granville wilt problem each year, and that's because poor drainage encourages the disease and we have some wet fields in the county," he said.

The bacteria enters a tobacco plant through a wound in the root system, Smith said. Often, this wound is caused by damage to the root by too much water. Once inside, the bacteria blocks the plant's vascular system and restricts water movement, Smith said. "One side wilts, then eventually the whole plant wilts and dies," he noted.

Growers who identify Granville wilt in their fields this year can do nothing to alleviate the problem except improve drainage, the farm agent said. "The best thing they can do for themselves this year is recognize they have the problem and take measures to prevent it next year since the bacteria winters in the soil of a field," Smith said. "Planting varieties of tobacco resistant to Granville Wilt, rotating crops and using multi-purpose chemicals are the most effective means of controlling the disease."

The recent rainfall means growers will see more of the disease, Smith said, since water will cause root damage and allow the bacteria to enter. Wounds can also be caused by cultivation, rapid growth and nematodes.

Also-Rans Will Be At Session

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Askew, Cranston, Glenn, Hollings, McGovern. When the roll is called in San Francisco, they'll be there. The five Democrats who dropped out of the presidential race all plan an active role in the party's national convention opening Monday.

Former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the only one of the group who has been at a convention as his party's presidential nominee, expects to have his name placed in nomination and then withdraw in favor of Walter F. Mondale.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the first candidate to pull out of the race, plans to speak on behalf of the nuclear freeze, which he made the keystone of his campaign.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, a Gary Hart supporter who is skeptical of his party's chances in November, will be proposing a compromise on the touchy issue of runoff primary elections.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a front-runner in the early going, will be preaching party unity and raising money to pay off his $3 million campaign debt.

And former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, back practicing law in Miami, says, "My purpose in going out is really a show of support and unity for the party and its nominee."

Cranston, Glenn and Hollings are among 25 senators chosen by the Senate Democratic Conference as delegates to the convention. Hollings endorsed Hart after dropping out of the race March 1. Cranston, who dropped out Feb. 29, and Glenn, who withdrew March 16, have made no endorsements.

For McGovern, who has endorsed Mondale, San Francisco will be a far cry from the hard-fought convention in Miami Beach, Fla., in 1972 at which he won his party's nomination only to go on to a crushing defeat by President Richard M. Nixon.

"That was a different era," he recalled in an interview. "All of the other candidates ganged up against me. I must say it wasn't very helpful. I don't see that kind of a divisive convention this year."

McGovern withdrew March 15 but held onto his 23 delegates. He said he expects to release them after a speech "explaining why at this point I support Mondale" and outlining his concern about the nuclear arms race, deepening U.S. involvement in Central America, what he describes as a crisis in American agriculture and the need for programs to put the unemployed to work.

McGovern will also be a commentator for ABC Television's "Good Morning America" program and for the Mutual Radio Network during the convention.

Murray Flander, Cranston's press secretary, said Cranston will deliver a welcoming address to the delegates on behalf of California Democrats. Beyond that, the Californian plans to speak on behalf of the platform's peace plank, which calls for immediate steps leading "promptly to the negotiation of a comprehensive, mutual and verifiable freeze on testing, production and deployment of all nuclear weapons."

Pitt County Demoractic Women Promote Party Unity At Reception

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Showing a spirit of unity and cooperation within the Democratic Party in Pitt County was the aim of the Democratic Women at a reception Tuesday afternoon.

"The reception was planned after the second primary," said Grace Carraway, president of the women's group.

"This organization (Democratic Women) will be working in every way possible to insure the whole Democratic ticket a big winner in November," she added.

Spouses of Democratic candidates — Carolyn Hunt, Linda Edmisten, Sarah Jordan, Becky Renfrow, Nancy Brooks, Cathy Taft, Joan Warren and Joe Anne Jones — were honored guests.

Brief interviews were conducted with Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Edmisten and Mrs. Jordan.

"Replacing the present senator in Washington and getting representation for the people in North Carolina by winning the U.S. Senate race is the important issue facing us now," said Mrs. Hunt.

When asked about the recent story concerning her husband in a Chapel Hill weekly paper, she said, "It was so ridiculous, there's really no way to comment on it. I was shocked to death. We are even more determined to work that much harder in this campaign. The entire family is working — we are all staying in Raleigh for a successful campaign."

Mrs. Hunt also visited the University Nursing Home in Greenville. Nursing homes are a personal interest of the first lady, who visited the residents there. On Tuesday morning, she was in Williamsburg, Va., with Gov. Hunt at the Southern Governor's Conference. She flew to Raleigh and then was driven to Greenville.

Prior to the primary, Mrs. Jordan campaigned fulltime across the state for seven weeks in a mobile home. "I did everything on the campaign trail Bob did — speeches, interviews, etc. The one thing we didn't do was being in the same town or place at the same time," she said.

"This was his first statewide campaign and we had to get him known in a short period of time. We felt to know the family, was to know the man. Our children, Robert, Janie, Becky and her husband, Ward Simmons, all campaigned. One of our campaign stories was about Becky. When she moved to Charlotte, we told her to get involved in the Young Democratic Club, which she did and then eventually married the president, Ward Simmons," she commented.

Mrs. Jordan is still campaigning — "but not as intensively at this point."

"This is the first campaign I have been involved in and it is quite an experience," said Mrs. Edmisten.

"The nicest thing about campaigning is the people. People across North Carolina have been very nice and the hospitality is just outstanding. Since criss-crossing the state beginning in January, I have realized North Carolina is a state to be cherished and looked after. I grew up all over the country and there's really no place like this state," she said.

Mrs. Edmisten is employed by the Raleigh Planning Department and is still balancing her time, which is important. "It takes a little planning, but no more than that of a working mother of three school-aged children," she replied.

Greeting guests at the reception was Gladys Howell and Mrs. Carraway introduced the receiving line. Others assisting were Ramona Ensley, Nancy Aycock, Mrs. Hoover Taft, Catherine Lang, Myree Hayes, Janice Faulkner, Jo Ball, Freddie Jacobson, Artemis Kares, Judy Sadler, Betty Speir, Rebie Crandol and Dr. Lala Steelman.

Tips on Sewing for Children

If you do or would like to do a lot of sewing for your children, not just the occasional dress-up outfit, the following tips from Simplicity's "Sewing Research Laboratory" could be a big help.

Sewing for children can be both fun and creative. Whether you are a beginner or an expert sewer, you will fall in love with the cute styles, adorable fabrics, and the large variety of trims available for children's clothes.

Children lead a rough-and-tumble life — and so do their clothes. That plus the fact that kids seem to grow an inch a day, means you could spend a small fortune keeping them clothed. If you're economy-minded and value your time, you'll appreciate the following tips on sewing children's wear.

Choosing a Size: Determining the size of your baby, toddler, or child is easy if you know wome general rules. For best results, choose the size according to the weight for babies, and for toddlers the size closest to the chest measurement. For children select the size that most closely matches the chest and back waist length measurements.

Pattern and Fabric Selection: When selecting patterns and fabrics, keep in mind that children's activities usually require comfortable, durable clothes. On each pattern envelope, you'll find various fabric suggestions, such as cotton types, corduroy, denim, woolsens, stretch terry, jersey, and cotton knits. You may also want to purchase dotted swiss, eyelet, or velveteen for those special-occasion outfits. Stretch wovens are particularly good for children's clothing because they "give" a little as the child moves.

Consider the care and maintenance of the fabric. Because children's clothes need frequent cleaning regardless of whether the garment will be worn for special occasions or everyday, chose washable fabrics whenever possible. If you are sewing sleepwear, look for fabrics treated with flame retardant finishes.

Notions: Besides buttons, there are many other closures to choose from. Some, such as self-gripping fasteners, are especially easy for kids to open and close. Snaps and snap tape enable you to change an infant's clothing quickly — a great time-saver when diapering. The closures most often purchased are zippers, hammer-on-snaps, buckles, toggles, and self-gripping fasteners. Don't restrict yourself to one particular type; experiment.

Seams: Kids' clothing must have strong, sturdy seams to make clothes last longer. Flatfelled seams are good for straight seams on playwear. With wrong sides together, stitch a plain seam; press to one side. Trim the underneath seam allowance to one-eighth inch (3mm). Turn the top seam allowance under one-fourth inch (6mm) and pin or baste it over the trimmed edge. Topstitch close to the fold. Topstitched seams can be used almost anywhere. Stitch a plain seam and press it to one side. Then on the outside, topstitch one-eighth inch to one-fourth inch (3mm to 6mm) from the seam through all layers. Welt seams are excellent for outerwear made of bulky fabrics. Stitch a plain seam and press it to one side. Trim the underneath seam allowance to one-fourth inch (6 mm). Then, on the outside, stitch one-fourth inch (6 mm) from the seam, catching the untrimmed seam allowance. Double-stitched seams wear well on knits. Stitch a plain seam. Then stitch again one-eighth inch (3mm) away in the seam allowance, using straight or zigzag stitching. Trim the seam allowance close to the second stitching; press to one side.

Reinforcements: Keeping a child's clothes intact may seem impossible. To protect areas that are likely to receive strain, you can build wear resistance right into the garment. Just add patches of iron-on interfacing to the knee and elbow areas on the inside or outside of the garmet. If you add patches to the inside, be sure they are large enough to include the edges in the side seams. Strengthen pockets by stitching a square, triangle, or bar tack at the top corners. For even greater strength, baste small, folded pieces of seam binding to the wrong side of the garment under pocket corners. Then stitch the pocket in place. Reinforce buttons with heavy-duty thread and sew a square of seam binding or another button on the inside of the garment directly under the outside button. Strengthen buttonholes by placing 2 inches (5 cm) squares of interfacing between the garment and the facing; then stitch around the buttonhole twice. A sturdy, machine-stitched hem is an excellent choice for casual clothes. Stitch five-eighth inch (1.5 cm) from the edge. Press the edge under to meet the stitching, then press the hem up along the stitching. Stitch in place close to the inner fold. You can also make topstitched, narrow, or machine-blindstitched hems.

Shrine Members Have Picnic

Greenville Shrine No. 7 had its annual picnic Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fenner Allen. Ethel Allen was hostess for the event.

Jean Tharp, Worthy High Priestess, presented special readings for children and adults.

A special tribute was paid Martha Forrest and Eva Corbett, who are 90 years old, and to Lyla Harbour, who will be 90 in the near future. Receiving speical recognition were Mrs. Allen, Ruth Harris, John Heuay, Lillie McLawhorn and Estelle Tucker, who are 80 years of age or over.

Mrs. McLawhorn entertained the group by presenting a number of original poems. She is poet laureate of Greenville Shrine.

Patients are spending about the same amount of time in community hospitals today as they did 20 years ago, but the average costs have increased more than eight times, according to the Health Insurance Association of America. It says the average cost to the hospital was $38.91 per patient day in 1963. By 1982, it had risen to $327.40 per patient day.

U.S. Doctor 'Talked' To People In Russia

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Candace Corson has returned from a visit to the Soviet Union with a message for Americans: "We can talk with the people of the U.S.S.R. The people in my party did talk to them. We must talk to them if all of us are to survive."

The Edenton family physician visited Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev along with 60 other Americans who are members of Physicians for Social Responsibility, a 30,000-member organization composed mostly of physicians who feel it is their duty to educate themselves and their patients about the utter devastation that use of nuclear weapons would wreak on the earth and its inhabitants.

Dr. Corson works for the U.S. Public Health Service in Edenton. Until recently she also taught in the East Carolina University School of Medicine. She and her husband, Dr. George Knowles, also a physician, have two sons, Ben, 5, and Dave, 3.

"I really hesitated about taking this trip," Dr. Corson said, "because my first commitment is my family. But part of my commitment to my family is my commitment to the prevention of nuclear warfare. My husband urged me to go ahead and assured me that he and the boys would be fine. He'd been to the U.S.S.R. before while he was a Russian language student and he wanted me to have the experience. I'm so glad I went."

Prior to going to the U.S.S.R., Dr. Corson acted as a delegate from the Southeastern United States at a meeting of the PSR House of Delegates in Cambridge, Mass. She then attended a 5-day meeting of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War in Helsinki, Finland.

"This was an exciting meeting," she said of the scientific sessions held for physicians from 53 nations in Helsinki. "We heard reports of the studies of scientists who have used projected data to describe what the planet will be like when nuclear winter sets in after approximately 1 percent of the present U.S. and U.S.S.R. nuclear arsenals are detonated. This condition will result from the extreme cooling of the earth that can be expected after the detonation of approximately one percent of the current nuclear arsenal of the United States and the Soviet Union. The sun will be blocked out by the dust and smoke of the burning of cities and forests to such a degree that all plant and animal life will die."

She said she felt safe on the streets and in the subways of Moscow and Leningrad. A little of the Russian she'd learned in school many years ago came back, she said, but mostly she found that enough Russians speak English that getting directions was not difficult. "They all were so nice," she said, "One person even walked several blocks out of his way to direct our group."

"Everywhere we went and talked with people, they told us how much they like the American people and how afraid of the nuclear capability of the American and the Soviet governments they are. They told us they know what war is and they don't want to experience it again. Nearly everyone there has direct experience of losing loved ones during World War II, when 20 million people, most of them civilians, died.

She visited a maternity hospital in Kiev, a regional referral center for high risk mothers and babies. There she was touched when a little girl, upon meeting her and another group of Americans, gave her her own doll to bring home with her.

Dr. Corson said she sees people-to-people communication like she experienced during her visit to the Soviet Union as the major hope for averting nuclear war. She would favor every kind of exchange from students to medical personnel to government officials. She'd also like to see the treaties and pacts between our governments taken out of legalese and written in real and understandable terms.

She points to the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War as a people's effort that has worked because two men, one an American, one a Russian, were working for a common goal. Dr. Bernard Lown, a cardiologist at Harvard University School of Medicine and Dr. Yevzei Chozov, a cardiologist and private physician to Leonid Breznev, were consulting on

The two together founded IPPNW and are its co-presidents. Dr. Chozov has written a book, "The Danger of Nuclear War," read throughout the world. He is working in his own country as Dr. Lown and others are working here to warn against use of nuclear weapons.

Dr. Corson said she is available for talks about the dangers of nuclear war before area church and civic groups. Her address is Route 4, Box 389, Edenton, N.C. 27932. A New Low

The recent rumors published in The Landmark, a Chapel Hill weekly newspaper, concerning Gov. Jim Hunt brought a strong reaction from him and a subsequent apology from the publisher.

The story in the paper was absolute trash and deserves no further embellishment.

Its publication, however, was labeled a new low in North Carolina politics by some political observers, and that cannot be disputed.

The question remains as to how something so brazenly false could be published in North Carolina in the midst of the heated U.S. senatorial campaign.

We are afraid it is but the logical conclusion of a trend which started in North Carolina politics back during the Willis Smith and Frank Graham campaign for Senate in 1950. Then and since anonymous hate literature has been injected into bitter campaigns. Frequently it involved racism or attempting to depict a candidate as soft on communism. Always the principals in the races denied involvement. Given that element in politics it should not be surprising that slur on Gov. Hunt cropped up last week.

What now? Some lament that with four more months to go in the present U.S. Senate campaign, we have seen only a sample of what is to be ahead. We think not. The publication of this piece has backfired badly. It was rejected in North Carolina because of the basic decency of our citizens which we never doubted was there. It has properly brought strong denials from all concerned with the Senate race.

It must be clear to anyone in North Carolina politics now that our citizens will not buy the smear. Consequently this incident could mean a breath of fresh air. We hope the message is there, and if it is not we believe our citizens will deliver it with their votes in November.

'Tis The Season

There are still "big ones" off the North Carolina coast. A story out of Atlantic Beach recounts the experience of one Jimmy Boswell, fishing for marlin during a tournament. Boswell is no amateur in the search for big fish. Over the years he has entered marlin tournaments up and down the East Coast and even "worked" Hawaii.

We are all familiar with the reputation of fishermen for tall-tale-telling, but Boswell had proof of his experience in early June.

He had hooked a "biggie" and was working it toward the boat when his prize was hit by a shark that might have been a match for "Jaws."

With the help of another crew the marlin was finally boated with a "full third of the marlin" missing (thanks to the shark); and the catch still tipped the Morehead City scales at 572 pounds ... giving us an estimate of around 760 pounds as its original weight.

The salt-water predator's size was never determined, although a .45 calibre bullet was seen to hit its head and "just sort of spread apart. It didn't faze him." To Boswell, it was a great white shark.

We pass the story along "because it is the season," and adds to the legends and lore of all who ever have dropped a line over the side and dreamed. The oceans are big enough to effectively hide the most unexpected of monsters.

Always A Place For Lettuce

WASHINGTON (AP) — At one end of Independence Avenue is the Congress, where taxpayers' money is spent. At the other end is the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where their dollars are printed.

But in the middle is where the lettuce grows.

Amidst the towering rows of grey concrete buildings is this terrific little garden planted in a triangle smack-dab across from the National

Air and Space Museum.

The 2,500-square-foot plot owned by the government probably could bring a fortune if ever sold. But now it's crammed full with spinach, cabbage, basil, tomato plants, and squash — a refreshing oasis that seems to puzzle tourists as they pass by to see the more spectacular historical sites.

A sign says it's an example of a "working urban vegetable garden" and a local horticulturist oversees the crop.

And for some reason the unfenced garden, which would be easy pickings for vandals or hungry street people, appears as unscathed as a wheat field in North Dakota.

Employees of the U.S. Postal Service's office in the Capitol have joined the sticker fad with an entry kids would call "awesome."

The new sticker, which is 2½ inches wide and 7½ inches long, lets the recipient of a letter know that it's been security checked for explosives, says Robert V. Rota, head of the hill's postal branch.

The rather menacing looking stamp announces in bold red letters: "X-RAYED." Rota says that mail has actually been X-rayed since 1972 but congressional personnel, for peace of mind, recently asked that some mark of identification be put on envelopes to let them know they're free of dangers.

Nothing is spared treatment. Postal workers even X-ray the Federal Register, a dull publication in which federal agencies daily publish their proposed rules and regulations.

What does the Senate do when it thinks there might be too many committees?

It forms another committee to study the situation, of course.

How To Please A Parent

I walked into Sullivan's house and found him in a serious conversation with his 12-year-old son, David.

"Am I interrupting anything?" I asked.

"No," replied Sullivan. "We were just discussing going to a movie together. What would you like to see, David?"

"I'll leave it up to you, father," David said. "If you think a film is too violent or has sexual content not suitable for someone of my age, then I would hope you would not let me see it."

Sullivan was very perplexed. "You're not helping me much."

"The decision is not mine to make. After all, you're my parent, and you now what is best for me."

Sullivan picked up the newspaper with the theater listings.

"How can I tell what is in the movies if I haven't seen them?" he said.

"You must be guided by the Motion Picture Association ratings. At my tender age I certainly would not expect you to take me to a film with an R rating, since it would contain improper language, excessive violence or even nudity that we both would find morally offensive." Sullivan said, "Yeh, I guess you're right."

"We can also eliminate X-rated movies since you couldn't take me to one even if you wanted to."

"Who said anything about talking you to an X-rated movie?"

"I was just making it easier for you to select the right film for me. You can forget the G category as we'd both be bored, even if we could find one," David said.

"So what we're looking for is a PG or Parental Guidance film?" Sullivan said.

"That would be a good place to start. Of course, there is a new rating, PG-13, which is a warning to you that there is more violence and sex in it than a PG film, but not enough to rate an R."

"Would you like to see a PG-13 picture?"

"The question is not whether I would like to see one, but whether you and mother would want me to view it," David replied. "It's a grown-up decision that, as a child, I don't feel I should be a part of."

"Every film in this paper sounds like either a sophomoric college joke or a stupid comic strip adventure. What kind of guidance can I get from that?" Sullivan complained. David said, "You can't blame the motion picture producers. Grownups don't go to the movies, and therefore Hollywood no longer has to pander to their tastes."

"Where the heck did you hear that?" Sullivan wanted to know.

"I saw Jack Valenti on the 'Today' show and he said it while defending the rating system," David replied.

"What else did he say?"

"The PG-13 rating places an even larger guidance responsibility on the parent. You, in effect, Dad, are the final arbiter as to how much violence or sexual permissiveness I will be exposed to in my developing years."

I could see Sullivan was losing his patience. "If it was up to me I wouldn't let you see any of these idiotic movies," he said, throwing down the paper.

"I may not agree with your assessment of the current crop of summer films, but as a 12-year-old, I respect your right as a parent to protect me from them."

"Here's five bucks," said Sullivan. "Go see anything you want."

Jackson Rankles Diplomats

WASHINGTON — When the Rev. Jesse Jackson entered the executive suite of the U.S. Embassy in Managua June 25 to confer with U.S. Charge d'Affaires Roger R. Gamble, he was accompanied by two unexpected helpers: a bodyguard supplied by Nicaragua's Marxist government and a Cuban female translator he had brought with him from Havana.

The brief conversation between Jackson and Gamble began with the American presidential candidate urging the U.S. to switch to support of the Sandinistas. Gamble replied by describing the lack of Nicaraguan guarantees for free elections and the "Marxist-totalitarian" nature of the regime.

That did not faze Jackson, who said both the U.S. and Nicaragua should strive for peace and revealed his intentions to form a worldwide peace organization. U.S. Embassy officials, who were barred by the Nicaraguan government from attending Jackson's airport welcoming ceremony or from sitting in on his meetings with Sandinista officials, were enraged by Jackson's performance.

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's prospects for the Democratic vice presidential nomination all but vanished after her disastrous interview with Walter F. Mondale at his Minnesota home.

Mondale privately complained that the New York City congresswoman's comments in their private chat were something less than precise. But what really bothered his aides were Mrs. Ferraro's public comments about the "political" nature of the vice presidential selection, seeming to contradict Mondale's assertion that he would choose the best qualified person.

Accordingly, Mrs. Ferraro gave way as the most eligible woman to Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky, whom Mondale found to be much more impressive. In fact, however, intense pressure from feminist groups has reduced the chances that Mondale will pick any woman and thereby be accused of bowing to pressure.

The hottest reading material on former Prime Minister Menachem Begin's desk is "Caveat," the outspoken memoir of former Secretary of State Alexander Haig which contains strong hints that Haig may have given Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon a wink-and-nod of approval.

Begin is far from the used-up old warrior described as too tired to keep up with current events. While reading the memoir of good friend Al Haig, he keeps up with Israeli newspapers and talks on the phone to old political pals.

But no one knows whether he will call the Labor Party spineless defeatists and praise Likud as Israel's savior. That is what embattled Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Begin's own favorite, ex-defense minister Ariel Sharon, are praying for to give Likud the big lift it needs.

Strong recommendations by his political advisers convinced Sen. Jesse Helms not to sign a highly critical letter from two other senators charging President Reagan with violating his own 1980 edict against "unilateral" U.S. observance of SALT II.

Strength For Today

How much do we know? Very little.

We look up into the heavens at night and realize that the nature and significance of the heavenly bodies is practically beyond our comprehension. We never know from one day to another what may happen to us. We have not the slightest idea what this thing called life consists of. Our knowledge is like the area of a grain of sand compared with the area of a continent.

But cheer up, this is no cause for discouragement. If God has given us only a few powers and opportunities, then He expects us to use only what we have. These we must use if we are to escape the censure of heaven.

The only thing we need to know is that the universe is governed by law, that a good God made it and controls it, and that the triumph is sure if we live and act with fidelity.

"Thank you, father," David said. "What are you going to see?" I asked David as we left Sullivan steaming in the living room. "Indiana Jones," he whispered to me. "We go through this charade every week." (c) 1984, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Public Forum

To the editor: Although we were just short of our goal, the turnout of donors during the annual Liberty Bloodmobile at the Greenville Moose Lodge was tremendous. I would like to pay tribute to everyone who came out to donate. Without you, the loyal donor, any type of blood program would be nonexistent.

A special thanks goes out to volunteers like the Greenville Service League, whose members gave untold hours to the Pitt County Blood Program; the Pitt County Blood Services Committee, whose preliminary planning assures success at every bloodmobile, and, of course, the individual volunteers and Red Cross staff members who help make the process run smoothly.

As we begin a new year of blood collections in Pitt County, I challenge the regular donors to continue support; and to those who have never donated, give it a try — you might like it!

See you at our next public bloodmobile visit August 7, 1984, at Carolina East Mall.

Barry Gaskins, Chairman
Pitt County Blood Services Committee

To the editor: Having just scanned my July issue of Moral Majority Report, I find myself thankful for such as the Reflector and the News and Observer.

The Moral Majority Report has come to be little more than a bellows (lots of hot air) to fan the flames of old fears, animosities, ignorance and prejudice. But can you believe it claims to promote the family and a "spirit of caring and love for our fellow man."

Try this: on page 1, Rev. Falwell is "determined to see that the traditional family is represented in this year's Democratic platform no matter what the cost." He plans to conduct a family forum in San Francisco the week before the Democratic convention. But all the its speakers look like a Republican Club meeting.

Jerry, let's be honest; you're trying to borrow some of the publicity and hoopla of the Democrats and the conference smacks of promoting your family folks who hope to intimidate any moderate Democrats around.

Then try this: the conference theme is "I am my brother's keeper!"

I've suggested that this smells too much like either a babysitter or a jailer. Though not appropriate to Falwell's purposes, his theme would be more in the spirit of Jesus if it were "I Am My Brother's Brother." There is a world of difference!

William C. Byrd Sr.
Route 3, Greenville

To the editor: Greenville has races, games, tons of watermelon, beautiful fireworks — everything that goes with a traditional Fourth except the local oratory; and perhaps there was enough rhetoric on television.

Still, I'd like to add an eloquent (though not local) statement of traditional American values. It comes from President Roosevelt's proclamation of Brotherhood Week in 1943. It is prominently displayed in the National Infantry Museum at Fort Benning.

"We are fighting for the right of men to live together as members of one family rather than as masters and slaves. We are fighting that the spirit of brotherhood which we prize in this country may be practiced here and by free men everywhere. It is our promise to extend such brotherhood earth-wide..."

This sentiment bears pondering today, when Americans are tempted to believe that our domain ends only at the boundaries of the Soviet Union and its satellites.

Edith Webber, member
Greenville Peace Committee

To the editor: I would like to point out to classical music lovers in the Greenville area that Craven Community College is now on the air with a classical format. I called WTEB recently and was informed by the program director that the station hopes to extend its service to 24 hours a day within six months.

I personally would like to congratulate Craven Community College for taking the initiative and filling a long-standing void in our area. For those of you interested in listening to this fine station, the frequency is 89.5 FM.

First Heart Surgery

The first open heart procedure to be performed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital occurred early Tuesday morning.

A 47-year-old Rocky Mount man underwent triple coronary bypass surgery, which lasted approximately four hours. He is currently in good condition and resting comfortably in the hospital's cardiac intensive care unit, said Dr. W. Randolph Chitwood Jr., chief cardiac surgeon at the East Carolina School of Medicine.

The cardiac surgery team, developed in a joint effort by the medical school and the hospital, will perform approximately 125 operations in the next 12 months, Chitwood said.

Theft Investigated

Officer D.C. Johnson said Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a break-in at 810 Langston Park apartments which was reported about 6:52 p.m. Tuesday.

Johnson said a camera, two lenses, a camera bag and a box of jewelry were taken from the dwelling.

Robber Escapes

Greenville police have the gun, but are still looking for the man who used it in an armed robbery at the Citgo service station at 1025 Dickinson Ave. about 9:58 p.m. Tuesday.

Officer B.M. Highland said a man walked up to the station and asked the attendant for a beer. When the attendant started to make change, the "customer" produced a .38 caliber pistol and demanded the money from the cash register.

Highland said after handing the robber the cash, the attendant grabbed the pistol and took it away from the robber, who then ran away.

Grand Jury Acts

Maude Knox Rosenbaum, 52, of Ayden, was indicted by a Pitt County grand jury Monday on two charges of illegally obtaining goods donated to aid the victims of the March 28 tornado.

One of the false pretense charges alleges that between March 30 and April 3, Mrs. Rosenbaum obtained "a large quantity of assorted canned goods and foodstuffs" from volunteer Ayden disaster relief fund workers without making proper compensation "by describing herself as a representative of the Pitt County Salvation Army who was making food deliveries to tornado victims."

The second false pretense charge alleges that on April 1, Mrs. Rosenbaum obtained scouring pads, disinfectant, liquid soap and plastic wrap from an Ayden grocery after telling the clerk the Salvation Army would pay for the merchandise.

Mrs. Rosenbaum is scheduled for arraignment on the charges on July 16. If convicted, she could receive up to 10 years in prison on each of the two counts.

Rated Excellent

Two Aycock Junior High School ninth grade students, Hope Barwick and Shannon Howard, received a rating of excellent for their skit portraying sisters during the Civil War. The two received the rating in the National History Day finals competition held at the University of Maryland in College Park, where more than 1,500 students from across the nation competed.

Hope is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jim Barwick, and Shannon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Howard. Alan Pearce was the sponsoring teacher for the two students.

City Museum Of Art Gets Federal Grant

Mary Anne Pennington, director of the Greenville Museum of Art, has announced the award of a general operating support grant in the amount of $5,700 by the Institute of Museum Services.

The institute is a federal agency that provides financial support to the nation's museums. A total of 1,245 museums nationwide made application for the grant, and the Greenville museum was one of 530 to receive the award for fiscal year 1984-85.

"This is the first federal grant awarded to the Greenville Museum of Art," Ms. Pennington commented. "The grant funds will be used to benefit museum exhibitions and educational programming while the museum seeks to broaden its base of local support.

"The institute support recognizes the quality of services and programming provided by the Greenville museum and this grant award will enhance the museum's efforts toward establishing an endowment fund for operating expenses."

The Greenville Museum of Art, located at 802 South Evans Street in downtown Greenville, is a public museum of art serving the needs of the Pitt-Greenville community. It was established in 1939 as a federally-funded WPA gallery.

Dutch Writer Will Stand Trial In Land Fraud Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Dutch financial writer accused of helping run one of the biggest frauds in U.S. history has pleaded innocent to charges of selling virtually worthless American land to Dutch investors.

Rienk Hendricus Kamer, 41, was ordered to go on trial in September along with his alleged partner, Southern California real estate developer Bernard Whitney.

Kamer was arraigned Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Richard Gadbis on 57 counts of conspiracy, mail fraud, wire fraud and foreign transportation of the proceeds of a fraud, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Henry Rossbacher.

The felony indictment involved undeveloped land in the Antelope Valley north of Los Angeles, and in Utah, Texas and New York.

Rossbacher said the alleged scheme represented the largest fraud in U.S. history and cost investors between $200 million and $2 billion.

Kamer, who had been in custody since his arrest Oct. 11 in Belgium, was returned to the United States over the weekend.

"He was extradited to the United States over his objections on Saturday and he arrived in the United States on Sunday," Rossbacher said, noting that he will ask Gadbis to retain Kamer's $5 million bail at a hearing Friday.

Kamer was held at Terminal Island Federal Correctional Institution.

The judge scheduled Kamer to go on trial Sept. 18 with Whitney, 65, a Manhattan Beach attorney and real estate developer.

Whitney, who pleaded innocent to the charges last October, is free on $750,000 bail, Rossbacher said.

The indictment charges that Kamer induced Dutch investors seeking tax shelters to purchase the land, including property he did not own, and charges Whitney with illegally sheltering the profits in foreign bank accounts.

Both men were charged with the same 57 counts in the indictment returned last July 27. But Rossbacher said Kamer's case is different.

"Whitney is an American, has lived here continuously since 1939, has a family here," he said. "Mr. Kamer has no ties here, no family here, was brought here against his will after being arrested as a fugitive."

Kamer began his career as a journalist by working as an errand boy for the Amsterdam bureau of The Associated Press in 1962.

In 1976, Kamer started to build his financial empire with the American Land Program, for which he was indicted.

A prolific writer on financial matters, Kamer published four books in the late 1970s and early 1980s. Most successful was "Everything About Money," a layman's guide to investment containing the warning never to buy real estate unless one had actually seen it.

The Wall Street Journal in 1981 hailed the Land Program as "one of the most successful investment companies in the United States."

On Feb. 21, 1983, Kamer was arrested by Dutch authorities for investigation of fraud, embezzlement and forgery after complaints of investors that the tax break he had promised through the investment was not being accepted by Dutch tax authorities. They also complained the real estate was virtually worthless.

In April 1983, a Dutch court ordered Kamer's release for lack of evidence.

Carteret Agencies Set Anniversary Events

Crossing the Atlantic was just one of the challenges the first English settlers of America had to face. When they reached the shores of what is now North Carolina, they had to navigate the constantly changing shoals and estuaries of the Outer Banks.

To get a better idea of just how the settlers did get themselves ashore in 1584, history enthusiasts can attend a weekend of events Friday through Sunday sponsored by the Hampton Mariners Museum/North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort, in cooperation with the Beaufort Historical Restoration and the Carteret County 400th Anniversary Committee.

America's 400th anniversary is a celebration being hosted by North Carolina from this year until 1987 to commemorate the Roanoke Voyages of 1584-87. These voyages brought the first English settlers of America to the Outer Banks, where they settled on what is now Roanoke Island, North Carolina. During the commemorative period, every county in North Carolina will be paying tribute to these settlers as well as commemorating events in its own history.

The big sailing ships that crossed the Atlantic couldn't be brought all the way to shore, so the early settlers used a ship's boat about 24 feet long to row or sail to shore. The public can watch as just such a vessel is being built for the Friends of the "Elizabeth II" at the Mariners Museum's Watercraft Center, 322 Front Street, Beaufort. There will be a public reception Friday from 2-5 p.m.

As well as viewing the actual construction of the ship's boat by the museum's maritime researcher and master boat builder, visitors will be able to look at background research, tools and woods relative to the project.

The use of the ship's boats by Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Voyages has been interpreted in oil paintings hanging at the Watercraft Center. The artist is John Elder, a member of Carteret County's 400th Anniversary Committee. He has also painted 20 illustrations of 1580s exploration and settlement of the Outer Banks; these paintings hang at the Hampton Mariners Museum, 120 Turner St., Beaufort.

A vignette from "On These Shores," a play by Carteret 400th

Committee member Ruth Barbour, will be presented by the Carteret Community Theater at noon on Friday, 1 and 3 p.m. on Saturday and 3 p.m. on Sunday at the Beaufort Restoration Grounds adjacent to the museum. The scene portrays Sir Walter Raleigh appealing to Queen Elizabeth to allow him to accompany his Roanoke Voyages to the new world.

Reproductions of historic charts of the new world showing the Carolina coast will be on display at the Josiah Bell House on the Restoration Grounds. The collection, a contribution of the Duke University Marine Laboratory, depicts cartographers' changing perceptions of coastal geographic features as well as actual geologic changes in the last four centuries.

Coastal Indian artifacts will be exhibited at the Carteret Regional Library in Beaufort, 210 Turner St. The pottery and arrowhead collection is a contribution of John and Ester Valentine, Carteret County 400th Anniversary committee members.

There will be an exhibit of literature pertaining to 16th and 17th century exploration and colonization of the Carolinas at the Carteret Regional Library and at the N.C. Marine Resources Center at Bogue Banks.

Arsonist Blamed For West German Hotel Fire

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Two hundred guests, many of them American tourists, fled from a six-story hotel in Munich before dawn today in a fire police blamed on arsonists.

Firemen said that all occupants were evacuated because fire had been set in three different places in the Europa Hotel, near Munich's Sendlinger gate. No one was injured, police said.

Guests, roused by fire alarms at 4 a.m., initially found shelter in tour buses parked near the hotel. They were allowed to return to their rooms an hour later after the fires were put out and firemen checked the building.

Police said damage was estimated at $17,800.

The hotel also housed people from Pakistan, Poland and Czechoslovakia who were seeking political asylum, police said.

The Munich prosecutor's office said they had no immediate suspects.

Hart Insists He's 'In The Race To Stay'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

Just five days before the Democratic National Convention convenes in San Francisco, Walter F. Mondale struggled to gather the elusive threads of party unity while his year-long opponents, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, continued to walk their independent paths.

Hart took on President Reagan in a hardhitting foreign policy address and insisted, "I'm in the race to stay." Digging in his heels, he said he too has a list of potential running mates, and Mondale's on it — along with former Rep. Barbara Jordan.

On the heels of his complaint that Mondale was catering to the Jewish community in not considering him for the No. 2 spot, Jackson said he would soon meet for discussions with Jewish leaders.

Despite the potential for convention week discord, a Mondale aide said the former vice president was confident there would be convention unity. Jackson's complaints "raise questions, but there is not a deep concern that we're going to find ourselves in a contentious convention next week," said spokesman Don Foley.

Mondale brushed aside concerns from some Democrats that his running mate selection process has damaged him politically, saying, "I'm doing exactly right and I'm going to be in a far better position to pick the best nominee."

Having no convention nor running mate worries, President Reagan is out mending fences with environmentalists. Brushing aside the latest Anne Burford controversy, he insisted that his long-standing interest in the environmental movement is been "one of the best-kept secrets" of his Republican presidency.

Mondale's roster of candidates for the No. 2 spot was shortened Tuesday with the announcement by Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas that he does not wish to be considered. Bumpers was not among those interviewed by Mondale, but he figured heavily in the handicapping nonetheless.

Three weeks ago, Bumpers was asked if he were interested; he demurred, and Mondale asked him to think it over. Tuesday Bumpers said he had "considered the matter very carefully" and notified Mondale of his non-interest.

The Mondale camp sought to put the best light on the Jackson's criticism that Mondale had bowed to Jewish pressure because he has not interviewed Jackson for the vice presidential slot.

Jackson reasoned that "based on vote-getting ... if I'm not being considered ... no black is being seriously considered."

One of the reasons for Mondale's decision to ignore him, Jackson said, "is that threats to Mondale by a significant number of Jewish leaders are very evident." Mondale interviewed two blacks during his search for a running mate, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode.

Mondale spokesman Foley said the campaign has "received both private assurances and public assurances from Rev. Jackson that he is interested in a unified convention and a unified party."

Said Foley: "We still believe those private assurances are good and he intends to keep them."

Jackson told CBS News he plans to meet with Jewish leaders "very soon."

Jackson conferred with advisers Tuesday and said he met Monday with Judy Goldsmith, president of the National Organization for Women, and Kathy Wilson, president of the National Women's Political Caucus. In a statement, he said they "came away committed to pursuing a mutual beneficial strategy for the rainbow coalition and their organizations, including women of all races."

Hart, who falls far short of having enough votes to win the nomination, has nonetheless begun his own list of possible running mates.

Hart insisted that he retains hopes of besting Mondale, saying, "I am in the race to stay. My name will be placed in nomination and I don't quit."

The Colorado senator said he would consider several women, but that it would be "nonsense" to nominate one merely for political advantage.

"If I or somebody else were to pick a woman, that is a one-day story," he said. "It is a big story, but it's a one-day story. The second-day story is, 'What does that individual woman know about East-West relationships? What is that woman's economic program? What is that woman's experience in or out of politics?'"

Without revealing his feelings about Hart as a possible running mate, Mondale sought to smooth over the antagonisms that developed over the difficult winter-spring campaign.

"I like him; I think he likes me," Mondale said in an ABC-TV interview. "Gary Hart and I have real differences and I think those differences ought to be admitted. He's a person who feels strongly about his views; so do I. That doesn't diminish either of us."

His aides also announced a "homecoming reception" at Elmore, Minn., on Friday before Mondale flies to Lake Tahoe, Calif., for the weekend.

Mondale said again he may name his choice before the convention convenes next Monday. He countered criticism that the process has damaged him politically by saying: "I'm doing exactly right and I'm going to be in a far better position to pick the best nominee."

Hart traveled to Atlanta Tuesday and provided an attack on the Reagan foreign policy, while Reagan himself toured a national wildlife refuge in Maryland on the first of three days of campaign events.

Hart said Reagan was using "rhetoric for results" to hide foreign policy failures in Central America, the Mideast and arms control.

"A second Reagan administration will lead almost inevitably to the direct involvement of U.S. troops in a military morass in Central America," Hart said.

The president caught a glimpse of two wild bald eagles and chatted with Chesapeake Bay fishermen on a visit to Tilghman Island, Md., and said, "The environmental movement has always been a great interest of mine."

But Reagan's reply to a question about Anne Burford — appointed to a national advisory commission on oceans and atmosphere — was cut short by presidential spokesman Larry Speakes. Mrs. Burford resigned as Environmental Protection Agency director last year in a scandal at the agency involving allegations of mismanagement, conflicts of interest and "sweet-heart" deals with polluters.

Aide Meets Rep. Ferraro

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale's chief adviser on his search for a running mate met Tuesday with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, considered a top contender for second place on the Democratic ticket, a Mondale spokesman confirmed today.

John Reilly, a Mondale law partner, flew to San Francisco to meet with the New York congresswoman.

Dayton Duncan, the deputy campaign press secretary, refused to characterize the meeting as a "follow-up" to the earlier session between Ferraro and Mondale.

Mrs. Ferraro was one of seven potential running mates interviewed by Mondale since mid-June.

Another woman interviewed by the assumed Democratic presidential nominee was San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein. James Johnson, the Mondale campaign chairman, met with her last weekend.

However, Mondale aides have insisted that not too much should be read into such conversations between aides and potential running mates.

Duncan did acknowledge that Reilly asked Mrs. Ferraro if there was anything in her background that could be a problem if she were the Democratic vice presidential candidate.

Mondale was remaining secluded at his home again today, tending to details of the Democratic National Convention, which begins Monday, and working on his nomination acceptance speech.

Mondale has made no public appearances since last Saturday when he briefly met reporters after a breakfast meeting with former President Carter at a Minneapolis hotel.

White-Collar Workers See Salaries Going Up Slower

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures show the salaries of white-collar workers grew over the past year at their slowest pace in more than a decade.

A report released Tuesday by the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics showed pay for the year ending in March increased between 3 and 6 percent for most of 25 occupations analyzed.

In contrast, salary increases averaged about 7 percent a year during the 1970s and rose to more than 9 percent in 1981 and 1982, the figures showed. They began their fall in 1983.

Wage moderation among white-collar workers reflected a broader trend across the whole spectrum of the economy. But the decline in the growth of wages among this class of workers was less severe than that for blue-collar workers in America's heavy manufacturing industries.

The study of white-collar salaries, excluding top managerial and executive positions, was based on a once-a-year survey of private business pay scales for a host of jobs ranging from engineers to accountants and secretaries, including step-ups for seniority.

The figures show the slowdown in the rate of wage gains among certain classes of white-collar workers has been dramatic in recent years. Among stenographers, for example, average annual salaries rose at a 5.5 percent clip from March 1983 to March 1984, down from 8.6 percent from 1982-3 and 13.8 percent from 1981-82.

The largest gains from March 1983 to March 1984 were registered by auditors, whose average salaries rose 8 percent, while the most modest gains were made by typists, whose average annual salaries rose only 2 percent.

Precise comparisons of white-collar and blue-collar wage trends are difficult because of the methods used by the BLS for gathering this information.

But among workers covered by contracts negotiated by unions in 1983, however, the average first-year wage increase was 2.6 percent, the lowest in 15 years. The figures were brought down because of the negotiation of contracts which provided some union members with a pay cut or freeze in wage rates.

In contracts negotiated for unionized workers in the first quarter of this year, the first-year wage gain was 3 percent, one-third as high as when these workers last negotiated a new contract, the BLS has reported.

Among the findings in the white-collar survey were:

- Engineers, the largest professional group studied, had average annual salaries ranging from $26,163 for college graduates in trainee positions, to $70,788 for people who run complex engineering programs.
- Chemists salaries ranged from $21,609 at the bottom of the scale to $63,072 at the top.
- Auditors ranged from $19,843 to $37,378.
- Computer systems analysts averaged $27,084 a year, with the highest pay reaching $53,917.
- Entry-level lawyers in business legal departments averaged $28,918, while those at the highest level averaged $87,568.

AT&T Freezes Management Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says its decision to freeze management salaries through 1985 to save $184 million will allow it to compete more efficiently in the newly deregulated communications industry.

The freeze, which applies to 114,000 employees at all levels of management, comes at a time of transition for AT&T, which was separated from its local Bell System operating subsidiaries Jan. 1 and freed to enter new, unregulated lines of business.

Although there will be no overall increase for the salary schedule, the freeze will not affect raises for changes within salary classifications or commission and special incentive compensation plans, the company said.

It also does not affect AT&T's 236,000 non-managerial employees.

Government Calling For Air Bags Or Automatic Seat Belts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government plans to order air bags or automatic seat belts in new cars beginning with some 1987 models, but will let automakers off the hook if enough states pass mandatory seat belt laws, according to administration sources.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole was said by aides to have struggled to develop a plan that would be accepted by all sides in the 15-year-old controversy. But advocates and critics of air bags agree no matter what the proposal is, it likely will be challenged in court.

Even though the proposal had yet to be formally announced, consumer and auto-safety advocate Ralph Nader already was criticizing it as "a snare and a delusion."

"It postpones for several more years needed safety protection in cars and carries with it a high vulnerability to auto industry lobbying later this decade," Nader said.

A news conference was scheduled for today to provide details of the new regulations.

Administration sources, speaking on the condition that they not be identified by name, said the rules include a requirement that air bags or a safety harness that automatically wraps around a car occupant be phased in beginning with the 1987 model cars. All cars would have to be equipped with the devices by 1990.

But the administration provided the automakers, who have fought federal requirements for passive restraints for many years, with a way out by saying the requirement would be waived if states representing three-fourths of the population enact laws requiring the use of seat belts.

One source said that the rules also would relieve the automakers of having to equip cars with the passive restraints if they meet certain government crash protection standards without restraints.

General Motors Corp., for example, has been developing interior designs — so-called "friendly interiors" — on some model cars that the company claims could meet government crash protection requirements without either air bags or a seat belt.

The proposal also was expected to call for a continued campaign for passage of mandatory seat belt laws similar to the one recently enacted in New York state, and possibly to include incentives for states that enact such laws.

Spokesmen for the big three automakers — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — declined to comment on the reported proposal, saying they would make their response known after the rules were announced.

One industry representative, speaking on the condition that neither he nor his company be named, said, however, that the automakers' strategy will be to push hard for enactment of mandatory seat belt laws in enough states to circumvent the federal passive restraint requirement.

Meanwhile, there are signs that the proposal to link the federal regulation with state action on seat belt use will not be received well by passive restraint advocates.

Recently, William Haddon, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, said several proposals that include such a link "are both unworkable and irresponsible."

For Mrs. Dole, who has attempted to make safety a cornerstone of her tenure as transportation secretary, the air bag decision has been described as agonizing and exceedingly difficult.

The decision, probably the most controversial one made by Mrs. Dole since she took over the department 15 months ago, represents a reversal from the administration's hard-line position against passive restraints 2½ years ago.

In October 1981, the Transportation Department angered highway safety advocates by rescinding regulations that would have imposed air bags or passive belts in some cars by 1982 and in all new cars this year.

But the Supreme Court later ordered the Transportation Department to take another look at the matter, saying that the decision to rescind the rule was not supported by the facts and was therefore illegal.

For years the auto industry has staunchly opposed either air bags or the passive belts. The manufacturers claim that the automatic belts will not be accepted by the public and that air bags are too expensive and do not protect as well as manual belts — when worn — in all types of crashes.

De Lorean Trial Goes To Defense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two years after federal agents targeted John Z. De Lorean in a "sting" operation, prosecutors rested their case in the automaker's drug trafficking trial, with defense attorneys proclaiming "the government case has fallen apart."

De Lorean stood by silently Tuesday as his attorneys confidently predicted victory, saying they would ask Thursday for acquittal on grounds of insufficient evidence but were prepared to call "a lot" of witnesses if the motion were rejected.

"There's been no decision on whether De Lorean himself will testify, defense lawyer Howard Weitzman said.

"I don't think the case presented by the government proves John De Lorean committed any crimes," Weitzman said at a news conference moments after Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh abruptly declared the prosecution's case at an end.

"Your honor, at this point the government would rest," Walsh, the veteran prosecutor who has devoted the past two years to the De Lorean case, said Tuesday. The announcement came as a surprise, because attorneys had predicted at least another week of government testimony.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi called a one-day trial recess today for attorneys to prepare and file written motions.

De Lorean, 59, is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to save his financially troubled sports car company. If convicted of all charges, he could face up to 72 years in prison.

FDA Joins In Defense Of Product

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are joining the maker of Nutrasweet in defending the low-calorie sweetener against a consumers group which says safety data used to approve it may have been flawed.

The Food and Drug Administration and G.D. Searle & Co., the company which sold $336 million worth of Nutrasweet last year, contended Tuesday that the allegations by Common Cause officials Fred Wertheimer and Florence Graves aren't new and have been answered before.

Wertheimer and Ms. Graves, president and vice president of the non-profit citizens lobbying group, stopped short of calling Nutrasweet a health hazard and refused to offer consumers advice about using soft drinks, cereals, beverage mixes and nearly 70 other products that contain it.

But they urged Congress to look back at the way the FDA handled aspartame, the chemical name for Nutrasweet, during about 10 years of regulatory review before its approval in 1981.

"We don't see in the public record the basis on which FDA should have gone ahead on this," Wertheimer told reporters.

"We are talking about a process over 10 years that was flawed, step by step," added Ms. Graves, who conducted the research on the project. The group's findings were published in Common Cause Magazine.

Common Cause's main complaint was with the way the FDA investigated tests conducted through the mid-1970s and submitted by Searle. The FDA had questions about 25 tests on seven products. Eleven tests involved aspartame and three were pivotal in deciding to approve it.

Ms. Graves argued that the questions raised about Searle's testing practices never were adequately answered and issues raised by other scientists about safety data haven't been addressed.

But both the FDA and the Skokie, Ill.,-based company dispute this.

"FDA, in its own view, at every turn of the road gave objectors every benefit of the doubt and every opportunity to show any real safety questions," FDA spokesman Bill Grigg said. "In our judgment they failed to do so."

Dr. Frank Sturtevant, director of Searle's offices of Scientific Affairs, said the questions raised by Common Cause have been answered before. "I don't see that anything will be gained by spending the taxpayers' time and money on an investigation," he said.

He said that Searle's aspartame tests were authenticated by a review conducted for the FDA by the Universities Associated for Research and Education in Pathology.

The FDA and the Centers for Disease Control are examining about 600 complaints received from consumers about side effects allegedly associated with using aspartame.

The side effects include headaches, dizziness, menstrual irregularities, rashes and some cases of seizures.

FTC Says Used Car Buyers Must Find Defects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission wants used-car dealers to say whether a vehicle carries a warranty, but the FTC is leaving it up to tire-kicking buyers to separate the cream puffs from the lemons.

The agency, hoping to end an eight-year battle over bringing federal regulation to the $85-billion-a-year used-car business, voted Tuesday to scrap its controversial plan to require dealers to warn customers in writing about a used car's known mechanical defects.

Instead, dealers would have to provide information about warranties, suggest a customer get the car checked by an independent mechanic and warn buyers that they should get dealer's promises in writing.

The revised used-car rule, still subject to final action, was hailed by the National Automobile Dealers Association, criticized by consumer lobbyists and called a "buyer beware" approach by a dissident FTC member.

Tuesday's 3-2 vote scrapping the known-defect proposal and tentatively adopting the new rule found the FTC clearly divided between Reagan and Carter administration appointees.

Carter holdovers Patricia Bailey and Michael Pertschuk pushed for the stronger requirement, which the dealers have challenged in court, but they were outvoted by the Reagan commissioners, chairman James C. Miller III, George Douglas and Terry Calvani.

The new language, which could become final upon a second FTC vote within 60 days if the auto dealers drop their legal challenge, would require used vehicles to carry stickers that:

—Spell out the terms of any warranty on the car or state that the car is sold "as is." If there is no warranty, the sticker must specify that repairs are the buyer's responsibility.

—Suggest the customer obtain an independent inspection of the vehicle.

—Bear a warning that because spoken promises are difficult to enforce, dealer assurances should be obtained in writing.

Scrapping the known-defect plan was recommended by the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection, which said it would confuse car buyers because a blank form could lead a purchaser to believe there were no defects.

Carol Crawford, director of the bureau, said that Wisconsin has a known-defects requirement and that consumers there "are no more satisfied with their cars than buyers elsewhere."

Miller said the rejected proposal would have put honest dealers at a competitive disadvantage, encouraged customers to rely too heavily on a dealer's word and raised "serious problems of fairness and enforcement."

The revised approach, he said, "will give used car buyers the information they need to protect themselves from dealer misrepresentations."

Mrs. Bailey, noting that the known-defect rule had been suggested by dealers fearing even stronger regulation, called the warranty disclosure language a

"buyer beware rule. ... We're relieving the dealers of any obligation."

"This rule, without the known-defects provision, is little more than a consumer education campaign masquerading as significant, industrywide regulation," she said.

Pertschuk said that "a used-car rule without a defects disclosure requirement is like a used car with no engine or brakes. ... The political pressure brought to bear by this politically potent trade has consistently borne fruit."

James P. Jennings, president of the dealers association, praised the FTC's action. He called the known-defects rule "misleading to the consumer, unworkable for dealers, unenforceable by the FTC and expensive for America."

The move was criticized by Jay Angoff, a staff attorney with Congress Watch, one of the organizations under the umbrella of Public Citizen, a group founded by consumer activist Ralph Nader.

"This administration is not corrupt, but its ideology is rigidly anti-regulation regardless of how innocuous a regulation is or how much it helps consumers," Angoff said. "It shows they care more about used-car dealers than used-car buyers."

The known-defects proposal was first adopted by the FTC in 1981. Under heavy lobbying by the industry, Congress prevented its implementation through a legislative veto process since struck down by the Supreme Court.

After Reagan appointees gained control of the FTC last year, the consumer agency ordered further study of the proposal by its staff.

Protester Sets Self On Fire

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A woman carrying leaflets reading "Stop Porn Now" poured gasoline over her head in a bookstore and apparently set herself ablaze in what may have been a "silent protest" against pornography, witnesses and authorities said.

Ruth Christenson, 25, suffered second- and third-degree burns over 60 percent of her body, according to a nursing supervisor at Hennepin County Medical Center, where the woman remained in critical condition today.

"I felt a wave of heat and heard a whoosh sound and when I turned around, she was on fire," said Marc Robertson, 24, who was standing near the woman in Shinder's bookstore Tuesday night. "I turned around when the pillar of fire hit the floor."

Store clerks and customers doused Ms. Christenson with fire extinguishers and smothered the blaze with carpets, witnesses said.

Ms. Christenson told nurses that she set herself on fire, but investigators had not confirmed that, said Noel Lutsey, a Minneapolis fire battalion chief who responded to the call.

She did not say anything or cry out when she was on fire, but a stack of hand-written leaflets saying "Stop Porn Now" was found among firecrackers and gold-colored bullets that fell from a backpack she had been wearing, witnesses told the Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

Fire and police officials could not confirm or explain the bullets and firecrackers early today.

Minneapolis has been embroiled in a controversy over pornography, with the City Council considering several proposals to control pornography through civil rights legislation.

Thomas Dolan, a clerk at Shinder's, which has a section devoted to adult magazines and books, said he saw the woman pour gasoline over her head about 7 p.m. near the front of the store. He said he didn't see her light a match, but she was immediately enveloped in flames.

"If it was a protest, it was a silent protest," Lutsey said. "It's purely conjecture right now that it was a protest."

FBI Sets Up Special Unit To Handle Serial Murders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI agents in charge of a new Justice Department effort to capture killers who repeatedly prey on strangers say the so-called serial murderers are "much smarter than we give them credit for."

"They are good at what they do," said FBI agent Roger DePue as the department launched its new National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime with briefings here and at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., on Tuesday.

The center will be a part of the FBI behavioral sciences unit which DePue runs at Quantico. It will concentrate initially on serial murderers but next year will be helping state and local police capture serial rapists and child molesters and by 1986 also will be tracking serial arsonists.

Serial murderers repeatedly kill strangers over a period of time, often in widely varied locations, baffling local police who usually concentrate on any connections between murder victims and suspects and rarely hear about similar murders elsewhere.

"We're going to save a lot of lives," said Pierce Brooks, a former Los Angeles detective chief, who will run the effort to actually capture serial murderers.

DePue estimated that "at least 10 percent of the 5,400 unsolved murders in the United States each year are the work of systematic, intelligent, transient killers." He refused to estimate how many serial murderers are loose in the nation today, but one department consultant last fall put the number at about 35.

DePue's unit, which for a number of years has been producing psychological profiles of murderers, assassins, kidnapers, rapists and extortionists, has been interviewing what he called "38 of the most notorious murderers incarcerated today, who murdered time and again."

Nozzle Failure Delays Decision On Launching Shuttle

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The decision on when to reschedule space shuttle Discovery's aborted maiden launch has been delayed by the failure of a rocket nozzle during a test in St. Louis, NASA reports. The mishap occurred just as shuttle managers had decided to combine Discovery's first and second missions into a single flight to save time. Now they may have to fly the missions separately, perhaps putting the second off several months. The Star-48 solid fuel rocket nozzle failed during a test Monday night at the Astronautics Division of McDonnell Douglas Corp. in St. Louis.

Star-48 rockets are on two communications satellites that would be part of the cargo on a combined mission. After a payload has been deployed from the shuttle, the rocket propels it to stationary orbit 22,300 miles high.

Super-heated air was pumped into a chamber to simulate the heat and pressures the nozzle would be subjected to during a rocket firing. After the eight-second test, McDonnell Douglas engineers noted a layer of nozzle material had separated.

A company statement said "both test results and test conditions are being examined."

Star-48 rocket nozzles were at fault last February when two communications satellites were propelled into the wrong orbits after being successfully released by shuttle astronauts. Since then, McDonnell Douglas has been conducting an extensive test and correction program.

Officials felt the problem was resolved last month when two Star-48s fired successfully in boosting a navigation satellite into orbit from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., and after another underwent a successful full-duration test-firing on the ground.

Because of the nozzle problem, Telesat of Canada pulled a communications satellite with a Star-48 motor from the manifest of Discovery's planned first flight.

That maiden voyage was scrubbed June 26 when a computer detected a valve failure and ordered shutdown of the engine start sequence just four seconds before the planned blastoff.

After deliberating several days, shuttle managers were about to announce they had decided to combine Discovery's first and second missions for a launch in late August. They had even ordered Discovery rolled back from the launch pad to its hangar so two communications satellites from the second mission could be installed in the cargo bay.

But both the new satellites employ Star-48 rockets, and the rollback was put on hold. Another communications satellite, part of Discovery's original cargo, employs a different type rocket to reach the high stationary orbit.

If the St. Louis nozzle failure can't be resolved soon, Discovery's original flight plan may stand, with an early August launch date likely.

The second Discovery trip then would have to be delayed perhaps for several months. That's something NASA would like to avoid, because, starting in October, the shuttle launch rate is to accelerate to one a month and by combining the two Discovery missions, a bunching up of the schedule could be avoided.

Trio Arrested In Probe Of Alien Marriages

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Federal and state officials are investigating at least 40 marriages involving foreign students and Americans to determine if the marriages were fraudulently arranged to gain the students U.S. citizenship, officials said.

The investigation follows the arrests of a 28-year-old Iranian student at North Dakota State University and a Fargo woman, U.S. Attorney Rodney Webb said Tuesday. "We feel this is just the beginning of the case, not the end of it," he said. "Certainly not all the other cases that are being checked will result in arrests, but we do expect some more. We are concerned about it."

In Houston, meanwhile, a federal grand jury has indicted a Filipino man who allegedly offered to pay a woman $500 to marry him so he wouldn't be deported and another $500 after he received permanent status and they were divorced.

Foreign people married to Americans automatically become permanent resident aliens. Through marriage, they avoid working restrictions, certification requirements and citizenship quota limits, Webb said.

He said Reza Maleki was being held on $10,000 bond after being charged with making false statements to federal immigration officials about his marriage.

Faith E. Young, 31, was charged with aiding and abetting and was free today on $4,500 bond, he said.

Webb described Ms. Young as the "arranger" of the marriage between Maleki, of nearby Moorhead, Minn., and Susan N. Hadley.

According to a complaint filed Tuesday by Webb and Gerald Coyle of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Ms. Young helped arrange the marriage and received $100 for her part in coaching Ms. Hadley on what to tell INS investigators during an interview.

World's Population Boom May Bring 'Chaos'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world population explosion is threatening to "plunge countries into chaos" by halting development in the poorest, developing nations and threatening the quality of life in others, World Bank President A. W. Clausen said today.

Clausen, attending a population seminar in Africa, said if the bank's projections are correct, the world population would rise from almost 4.8 billion today to nearly 10 billion by the middle of the next century. "For the poorest countries, development may not be possible at all unless slower population growth can be achieved soon," he said.

In the better-off developing countries, he added, a continued high growth rate "could prolong indefinitely the long wait for development to improve measurably the quality of their lives."

Clausen pointed out that a 3 percent annual growth rate means the population grows eight-fold in 70 years, and at only 1 percent, the population doubles in that time.

"One might well ask whether population increases of this order would not put unbearable strain on existing social fabric and plunge countries into chaos," he said.

His speech was prepared for delivery in Nairobi, Kenya — the country where the number of people is probably growing faster than anywhere else. Kenya has a population of 19,700,000 and it will grow by some 750,000, or 3.8 percent, this year.

Copies of the remarks were distributed in advance to reporters in Washington.

"By the time the world's population stabilized at over 11 billion in about the year 2150, the population of India would be 1.8 billion, making it the most populous nation on earth. And Kenya's population would have risen...to a staggering 160 million, a situation surely as impermissible as it is unimaginable," he declared.

In the United States and other more prosperous countries, population now grows at less than 1 percent a year. Of the 80 million by which the world's population is increasing annually, more than 70 million live in poor countries, Clausen said.

"Until the 20th century, prosperity and population increase went hand in hand," he told the National Leaders Seminar on Population and Development. "But in this century, and particularly since 1950, population growth has been faster where income is low...."

"No one would argue that slow population growth alone will assure progress. But the evidence... seems conclusive. Poverty and rapid population growth encourage each other."

Clausen noted that according to a survey made in 1977 and 1978, Kenyan families would like to have about seven children but each mother was having an average of eight.

Studies by the World Bank show that people in poor countries want large numbers of children:

- Because traditionally so many babies die.
- To support them in old age.
- To help in farm work.

To counter that, Clausen called for better health service to reduce infant mortality; better education; old age insurance and family planning services.

He said 26 countries have no family planning services — almost half of them in Africa where incomes are the lowest, population growth the highest and potential benefit from such services the greatest.

Clausen said there are proper policies for governments to reduce fertility, even though private rights are paramount, and that many poor countries have shown that quick and effective measures can be taken to enforce such policies.

He cited Colombia, China and Thailand as countries that have achieved population declines in the past 20 years.

Donors to family planning programs have provided more than $7 billion for population aid since Sweden made the first grant in 1968, Clausen said. He said the United States was the biggest supporter, furnishing about 40 percent of the total, although its contributions have fallen since 1970. The U.S. government is providing about $240 million this year.

In an unrelated development, an analysis of new Chinese census figures released Tuesday concluded that 27 million Chinese died from disastrous food shortages resulting from Mao Tse-tung's "Great Leap Forward."

Professor Ansley J. Coale of the National Academy of Sciences and Princeton University told reporters that the new figures quantified the impact from Mao's 1950s policy of favoring industrial development at the expense of agriculture, which caused severe food-distribution problems.

OPEC To Avoid Iran-Iraq War

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC ministers said today that the war between members Iraq and Iran will not be a factor in their discussions of how to keep oil prices from falling despite a weak global market.

"It's not the duty of OPEC to discuss such matters," Iraqi Oil Minister Qasim Taki al-Oraibi told reporters as he entered the cartel's conference in a Vienna hotel for the second day of talks.

Etienne Guy Mouvanga Tchoiba of Gabon said the Persian Gulf conflict had not been discussed in the five hours of talks Tuesday. Iranian Oil Minister Mohammad Gharazi said he was only interested in discussing a $5 per barrel increase in the price of oil.

The conference was expected to end today with the 13 oil ministers reaffirming the base price of $29 a barrel and extending for another six months their overall OPEC production limit of 17.5 million barrels a day.

Today's session convened following reports of two new attacks Tuesday on tankers in the Persian Gulf. A warplane believed to be Iranian attacked a British oil tanker, and Iraq claimed it destroyed a ship near an Iranian oil field.

Iraq has attacked ships near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in an effort to restrict Iran's oil exports. Iran has said that if its exports are restricted, it will use force to cut all oil shipments out of the gulf.

Iran sought an increase in OPEC's price back to the $34 a barrel level it abandoned more than a year ago in an effort to prevent a collapse in the oil market. Observers considered Gharazi's request mostly rhetorical.

Iraq Says Jets Destroyed Ship

By The Associated Press

Iraq says its jetfighters and navy ships destroyed a large ship, presumably an oil tanker, near an Iranian oil field in the northeast end of the Persian Gulf. Its claim followed an attack, allegedly by Iran, on a British tanker in the gulf.

There was no immediate confirmation of the Iraqi attack and no word on the nationality of the stricken vessel, which an Iraqi military spokesman late Tuesday referred to as a "big naval target." That phrase when used by the Iraqi military usually refers to an oil tanker.

Neither Iran or Iraq commented on reports earlier Tuesday from shipping sources in Kuwait and Bahrain who described an attack on the British tanker in international gulf waters.

Lloyd's of London, the British vessel's insurer, said the identity of the attackers was still unknown. But shipping sources in Bahrain said the attacking jet was believed to be Iranian.

British Petroleum, which owns the tanker, said none of the crew of 24 Britons and two Maltese were injured.

One missile reportedly ricocheted off the deck, and the other was said to have ignited a small fire, which the crew quickly put out.

In reporting Iraq's claim of destroying a vessel near Iran's coast, a military spokesman said over the state radio in Baghdad that the Iraqi jetfighters and navy ships returned to their bases safely after hitting the target and setting it afire. He did not say if there were casualties.

The Iraqi communique said the attack on the vessel "underlines our determination to maintain and tighten the sea blockade imposed on Iranian ports."

Greek Ocean Liner, Soviet Ship Collide

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — A Greek ocean liner carrying 812 passengers collided with a Soviet freighter today outside Copenhagen's harbor, tearing open the Soviet ship and causing its stern to sink, shipping officials said.

The Greek ship sustained only minor damage, and no injuries were reported.

Kim Enrum of the C.K. Hansen Shipping Agency said the Greek vessel Royal Odyssey was able to sail the remaining five nautical miles into Copenhagen.

Per Thorsager-Jensen, managing director of the Christian Jensen shipping agency, said the Soviet ship Vasya Alekseev lay partly submerged in about 35 feet of water in the sound that separates Denmark and Sweden.

Harbor officials said the mishap occurred in calm but fogbound waters as the Soviet ship passed north from the Baltic to the North Sea and the Greek vessel south on a voyage from Tilbury, England, to Leningrad.

Enrum said the Royal Odyssey apparently rammed its bow into the Vasya Alekseev, opening a hole in the aft section of the hull.

ATTENTION! GREENVILLE CITIZENS!

During July, August, and September, City Inspectors will conduct on-site structural inspections in the "Heart of the City" urban development study area. These inspections are being performed in order to determine the need for a local economic revitalization project in the downtown area.

Urban Development Study Area

General Description of Area: Bounded on the east by Charles Boulevard, East Carolina University, and Reade Street; on the north by the Tar River; on the west by the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad, Pamlico Avenue, and Grande Avenue; and, on the south by the Southern Railroad right of way.

A public meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 18, 1984, in the City Council Chambers, Third Floor of the Municipal Building, at which time members of the City's Planning and Community Development Department and Engineering and Inspections Department will be available to answer any questions.

Inquiries may be made by calling the City Planning Department at 752-4137.

FOCUS

Something to Look Up To

Today, Americans celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Washington Monument. This memorial honoring our first President took 36 years to build. Completion of the great cathedral of Notre Dame took 137 years. And 20,000 men worked more than twenty years to finish the Taj Mahal. In 1830, British officials planned to tear down the Taj Mahal and sell its marble facing to the English gentry. Lack of demand for the marble convinced them it wouldn't be worth it.

Rescuers Reach 5 In Mine

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Five miners were rescued today from an underground coal mine where they and 119 other workers were trapped by a fire Tuesday.

Officials said rescuers also recovered the bodies of four miners killed by the fire, which prompted the government to order all of Taiwan's mines closed for safety checks.

The 124 miners were trapped in the Mei-shan Coal Mine, 31 miles northeast of Taipei, when the fire broke out, and today's rescue spurred search crews to probe deeper into the tunnel despite heavy smoke and lingering coal gas.

Two of the rescued miners were in critical condition, suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning and wounds suffered when the tunnel they were working in collapsed during the fire, officials said.

One of the survivors, Wu Lung-kwai, 38, told officials at the Keelung Provincial Hospital, "I am very tired, and am feeling very bad." Doctors said he had inhaled poisonous gas in the tunnel but was not in serious condition.

Officials said the five survivors were located after rescuers dug through a segment of the collapsed tunnel and heard cries of help. The miners and their dead companions were close together, officials said, and rescuers were hopeful they might find other miners alive elsewhere in the tunnel.

Crowds of relatives and friends, many crying and praying continuously, maintained a vigil at the mine's entrance. Police erected a barrier to allow the rescuers to work without interruption.

Chen A-Feng, the wife of one trapped miner, tried to break through the police barrier, but authorities stopped her. "I only want to see my husband," she cried.

Initial reports said 133 miners were trapped in the tunnel more than a half-mile from the mine's entrance. However, officials said today they later discovered that nine miners had escaped, groping their way to safety through thick smoke.

The fire at the Mei-san coal mine, 31 miles northeast of Taipei, was the second mine disaster in Taiwan in less than a month. On June 20 a fire killed 74 miners at the Hai Shan mine, southeast of Taipei.

That was Taiwan's worst mine disaster, but officials feared the toll from Tuesday's fire, apparently caused by a short circuit in a compressor, could be higher.

Reconstruction Commissioner Huang Ching-feng and Kao Chin-fu, director general of mines, submitted their resignations to assume responsibility for the latest accident. Officials said their resignations were not accepted.

Rescuers tried to pump air into the mine shaft, but their efforts were hampered by collapsed sections of the mine shaft, billowing smoke and high temperatures. Two rescuers were hospitalized after they inhaled coal gas, but doctors said they were not in serious condition.

The government ordered all 124 of Taiwan's coal mines to suspend production for at least a day beginning Thursday to permit safety checks.

After the June accident the government ordered safety checks on 40 coal mines. It closed three mines, partially closed seven others and fined nine coal mine executives for failing to install proper safety equipment. Officials said the Mei-shan Mine, which employs about 250 miners and is privately owned, had not undergone inspection.

The Mei-shan mine is located in Juifeng, a city of 60,000 surrounded by 18 mines.

British Hold 4 In Kidnapping

LONDON (AP) — Magistrates today ordered three Israelis and a Nigerian to remain in custody pending a July 19 hearing on charges they kidnapped and drugged Nigeria's most-wanted fugitive, former Transport Minister Umaru Dikko.

The four were arraigned today in a bullet-proof British courtroom at Lambeth Magistrates Court in south London. They are charged with abducting Dikko from his $520,000 London home last Thursday and taking him to an airfield where customs officials found him in a crate.

Police mounted a major security operation around the fortified courthouse. Armed police with binoculars ringed the building, where terrorist suspects have been arraigned regularly in recent years, and other officers manned windows at a police hostel across the street.

Officers with dogs trained to sniff out explosives patrolled the streets around the courtroom, and a police helicopter flew overhead when the four defendants arrived in a green paddy wagon escorted by two squad cars.

Dikko, 47, was found drugged last Thursday in a crate ready to be loaded onto a Nigerian cargo plane.

Wartime Letters Highlight Tension For FDR, Churchill

NEW YORK (AP) — The complete wartime correspondence between President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill shows previously unsuspected tensions between the leaders, experts say.

The 2,000 telegrams, letters and memoranda spanning 5½ years during World War II are to be published in early October by the Princeton University Press.

The collection "reveals strains in the ... relationship as they've never been revealed before," Princeton Professor Arthur Link said.

According to the documents, among the issues on which the two men differed were independence for India, strategy for dealing with the Soviet Union and a guarantee of elections for Poland, The New York Times reported today.

The documents came from the Public Record Office in London, the National Archives in Washington and the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, N.Y. and were edited by Warren F. Kimball, a professor of history at the Newark College of Rutgers University.

The growing strains between the two leaders are revealed in the changing form of address as Roosevelt and Churchill began to move from war strategies to the planning of the postwar world, the newspaper said.

Roosevelt no longer addressed Churchill as "Former Naval Person" or "My Dear Winston," but simply called him "The Prime Minister," while Churchill dropped "My Dear Franklin" for the formal "The President."

One dispute involved Roosevelt's desire to set up a free market in civil aviation after the war, with the British seeking to retain their share of the market.

In a cable, Roosevelt wondered about the chances of the two countries "working together to keep the peace if we cannot even get together on an aviation agreement."

The correspondence also shows that Roosevelt tried to prod the British into giving India something "tantamount to self-government" during the war. Churchill's reply was that independence for India should not be discussed during wartime.

University of Kentucky Professor George Herring said the correspondence shows that Churchill's memoirs, which paint a rosy relationship between the two men, "gave a skewed impression of how Churchill and Roosevelt worked together ... and they gave a skewed portrait of Churchill's own role."

Prosecutor Says U.S. Bases Face Terrorists

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — The Red Army Faction plans new terrorist attacks on American military bases and high-ranking officers in West Germany, Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann warned today.

Papers confiscated from six Red Army faction members and sympathizers July 2 in Frankfurt included detailed sketches and descriptions of U.S. installations and the NATO fuel pipeline in south and central Germany, Rebmann told a news conference.

Club houses for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls and the private residences and bureaus of high-ranking officers were listed among the potential targets, the prosecutor said.

One sketch showed how to reach the office of the U.S. Army's 5th Corps commanding general in Frankfurt at the large headquarters complex, about two miles from the terrorists' hideout.

Rebmann said West German authorities concluded from the sketches that the extremist left-wing Red Army Faction plans "an offensive against the infrastructure of the military machine."

A timetable for specific strikes was not in the confiscated material, he said.

The papers were taken in a West German police raid on a Frankfurt apartment where four of West Germany's most-wanted Red Army Faction terrorists and two suspected sympathizers were captured without resistance.

Seven large-caliber hand guns, several hand grenades, time fuses, radio equipment, a large amount of cash and stolen identification papers were found in the apartment, the Federal Criminal Office announced a day after the raid.

The four suspects — former West German university students wanted for murder and bank robbery — were identified as Christa Eckes, 34, Ingrid Jakobsmeier, 30, Stefan Frey, 24, and Helmut Pohl, 40.

HIGH MAYOR — Raleigh Mayor Avery C. Upchurch strikes a regal pose in his office. Upchurch will wear the Elizabethan garb during the ceremonies in Manteo this weekend marking the start of North Carolina's observance of the 400th anniversary of the Roanoke voyages. (AP Laserphoto)

Lodging Available For Roanoke Events

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
Visitors to this weekend's celebration of the 400th anniversary of the first English colony in America should make sure they have a room before arriving in Manteo, officials say.

Margie Rogerson, assistant to the manager of the Dare County Tourist Bureau, said lodging may still be found along the Outer Banks in Kitty Hawk, Kill Devil Hills, Hatteras Island or Nags Head. Or tourists could try Edenton, Elizabeth City, Williamston or Norfolk, Va., she said.

"There's nothing left in Manteo as far as rooms go ... we are expecting a capacity weekend," Ms. Rogerson said, adding that Manteo's four motels and three tourist homes are full and area campgrounds should be packed.

John Bone, executive vice president of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce, said he didn't expect the area to be swamped — even with the 400th celebration.

"We have not had as strong a July as we had hoped," Bone said. "We still have plenty of rooms out here — there's still some available."

While most of the tourists are coming from other parts of North Carolina, a large number of people from other states is expected, Ms. Rogerson said.

The weekend's festivities will include a visit Friday by England's Princess Anne, who will help Gov. Jim Hunt unveil a historic marker and commission the Elizabeth II as a state historic site.

Friday afternoon will feature an Elizabethan street festival on Manteo's waterfront, including jugglers, mimes, magicians, puppet shows, dance, music and dramatic vignettes. There also will be craft demonstrations and food vendors.

The festival will continue Saturday and end in a fireworks display. About 5 p.m. that day former CBS anchorman and avid sailor Walter Cronkite will lead a flotilla of boats from Elizabeth City into Manteo's harbor.

On Sunday a heritage service will be held at Fort Raleigh, Roanoke Island, followed by a performance by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

"A lot of people are going to try to see the princess and the governor Friday morning," she said. "Friday afternoon and all day Saturday, I think, is going to be a strong drawing card ... and, of course, a lot of people want to see Walter Cronkite and the flotilla come in."

No estimate has been made on the economic impact of the 400th celebration this weekend on the Outer Banks.

"We haven't been able to get a good handle on what it will mean in terms of dollars," said Ms. Rogerson.

"We hope that this is going to bring people's attention to the Outer Banks and that they'll come back after this is all over," Bone said. "We feel that it's certainly going to have an impact."

Smokers Protesting

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A new directive by Wisconsin's health secretary has hundreds of state workers making more trips to the bathroom these days, hunting for an acceptable place to take a puff on a cigarette.

The directive banning smoking at desks, which affects the 10,500 employees of the state Department of Health and Social Services, was just issued this week but already has drawn gripes from smokers.

"I'm offended by it," one worker, refusing to give his name, said Tuesday as he lit up in the men's room. "It makes you feel like a child. Now I'm back to smoking in the bathroom."

"I feel like I'm a true drug addict," he said, "like I'm shooting up."

Secretary Linda Reivitz, a non-smoker, said she issued the directive Monday "not to compel people to quit smoking" but to "protect those people who do not smoke from the irritating and harmful effects of contaminated area."

Many employees agree with Ms. Reivitz, but a number who were informally surveyed voiced resentment over the inconvenience and adverse effect on productivity they say the directive is causing.

Because of friction between smokers and non-smokers in many offices, most of those interviewed asked that their names not be used.

"Things are tough enough without creating more bad feelings," said a one-pack-a-day smoker, who said she resented the rule.

"You're made to feel like you have leprosy," she said.

Mary Evans, a secretary, said she had experienced guilt feelings while standing in the women's room with other smokers.

"I feel like I'm in school again," she said. "Just standing there with other smokers makes you feel guilty."

Ms. Evans said she was able to get away from her desk often enough to smoke because she took two seven-minute breaks in the morning instead of a 15-minute coffee break, and did the same in the afternoon.

Electronic Guide

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The longtime standard airline guide, as indispensable as a credit card to the business traveler, has gone electronic.

Because the guide cannot update its printed pages fast enough to accommodate the 36,000 changes in air fares and schedules a day, its publishers have put data from some 700 airlines into an electronic edition, according to MIS Week.

Hunt, Helms Accept Five Debates Prior To Election

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, already embroiled in one of North Carolina's most expensive and inflammatory campaigns, have agreed to five debates before the Nov. 6 election for U.S. Senate.

Spokesmen for both candidates seemed relieved Tuesday at the chance to get the campaign out of the trenches.

"We're ecstatic about (Tuesday's agreement)," said Claude Allen, spokesman for the Helms for Senate Committee. "This will give the public an opportunity to see the two candidates together, speaking out on the issues ... and give the voters a chance to make an intelligent, educated decision on whom they want to represent them in Washington."

"I think everyone, including Gov. Hunt, has been a little frustrated that the TV ads have seemed to dominate the discussion so far," said Hunt spokesman Will Marshall. "We're looking forward to getting in on a one-on-one, face-to-face debate with Sen. Helms where canned 30-second answers won't do and glib answers won't be sufficient."

The North Carolina Association of Broadcasters announced that two of the debates will be broadcast statewide on television and radio, one in late July or early August and the other Oct. 13.

Dates have not been set for the other three debates to be broadcast regionally, nor have locations, formats or moderators been determined.

Helms, seeking his third Senate term, and Hunt, finishing his second term as governor, are engaged in a race that could end up costing $20 million. Helms set the previous cost record in 1978 by spending $7.6 million.

A Gallup Poll reported in May showed the race still a virtual dead heat with Helms collecting 50 percent, Hunt 46 percent and a 4 percent margin of error. However, Hunt's favorable job performance record dropped from 68 percent to 55 percent.

Tax Collections Up 20 Percent

RALEIGH (AP) — General Fund tax collections in North Carolina were nearly 20 percent higher in May than during the same month in 1983, state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said.

Lynch reported Tuesday that $327.2 million was raised for the General Fund in May, compared with $272.9 million during the same month in 1983. That's an increase of $54.3 million or 19.89 percent.

During the first 11 months of the 1983-84 fiscal year, net General Fund collections were $3.53 billion, compared with $3.06 billion for the same period in fiscal 1982-83, for an increase of $470.5 million or 15.37 percent.

Meanwhile, the state's Highway Fund raised $52.5 million in May compared with $43.8 million during the same month in 1983, for an increase of $8.7 million or 19.96 percent.

Gasoline tax receipts amounted to $34.9 million in May compared with $31.2 million in May 1983, an increase of $3.7 million or 11.96 percent.

Net Highway Fund collections for the first 11 months of the 1983-84 fiscal year were $551.8 million compared with $495.9 million during the same period in fiscal 1982-83, an increase of $55.9 million or 11.27 percent.

During the 11 months, gasoline tax collections were $366.3 million compared with $347 million raised during the same period in fiscal 1982-83, an increase of $19.3 million or 5.57 percent, Lynch said.

Autopsy Shows Man Given Blood Thinner

By The Associated Press
A 61-year-old Aberdeen woman has been charged with murder in the death of a man she lived with after an autopsy showed the victim died because he was given a blood thinner instead of a prescribed drug to help stop internal bleeding.

Marion G. Bordwell, 61, was charged with first-degree murder, four counts of practicing medicine without a license and five counts of practicing pharmaceutical medicine without a license, said Aberdeen Police Chief Charles Campbell.

Theodore Victor Bross, 53, died Feb. 27, five days after he had been admitted to Veterans Administration Hospital in Durham for treatment of heavy internal bleeding.

Campbell said Bross, a former Marine and bartender, and Mrs. Bordwell had lived together for about 10 years.

Bross died from poisoning caused by the prescription drug Coumadin, the North Carolina Medical Examiner's Office said. Coumadin thins the blood, which would accelerate internal bleeding. Bross had been taking another drug to help his blood coagulate.

Campbell would not say how Bross received the drug and declined comment on a possible motive for his death.

"Yes, there is a motive, but I can't discuss that until the trial," he said. "It's an unusual case."

Freed Tar Heel Ready Try Again

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Mark Ely Jr., back in North Carolina after 29 months in a Cuban prison and 11 days in U.S. custody, says he's ready to start over again.

"There ain't no better country in the world than the United States of America," he said Tuesday night at New Hanover County Airport, after he and his mother returned from Florida.

"I just want to relax, go home and start all over again," he said.

Ely was reluctant to discuss conditions in the Cuban prison, but said he was happy that presidential candidate Jesse Jackson helped arrange the release of Ely and 47 other American and Cuban prisoners.

"I appreciate his efforts to get me out, but I still don't agree with some of his policies," he added.

Ely paused only briefly before getting into his father's car to go to his parents home in Yaupon Beach near Southport. Ely, 27, had grown up in Fayetteville. His family moved to Michigan but returned to North Carolina.

Mark Ely Sr., waiting for his son's plane to touch down, said, "It's a reality now. We've got him back now."

The reunion brought to an end a wait which began in October, 1981, when the private plane Ely was flying malfunctioned and landed off Cuban shores. Ely was charged by Cuban officials with smuggling marijuana and illegal entry into the country, and was imprisoned.

Ely and the other prisoners were released on June 27 after Jackson met with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

After arriving in Washington, D.C., on June 29, Ely was arrested on drug charges and taken into custody by U.S. officials. After being held by authorities in Virginia and Florida, Ely pleaded guilty Monday in Florida to possessing and trafficking in marijuana and was sentenced to five years probation to be served in North Carolina.

The family, including Ely's sister, Sharon Williams of Fayetteville, is planning a reunion Sunday in Yaupon Beach, the father said.

The elder Ely said he lost count of the number of times he visited his son in Cuba.

"(It was) 10 or 15 times," he said. "So many stamps and visas, I've lost track."

The Town of Bethel is an equal opportunity employer and encourages bidding by small and minority businesses.

HELPING HAND — Billy the beaver nudges against his surrogate mother, Joan C. Tate of Efland. Although beavers normally avoid contact with humans, Ms. Tate has managed to get the beaver to sit in her lap and to accept petting. The animal's dam has been used to provide water for irrigating farm crops. (AP Laserphoto)

Pet Beaver's Dam Saves Crop

EFLAND, N.C. (AP) — Since Billy the beaver took up residence in rural Orange County, his dam and pond have helped his human foster parents grow tobacco while encouraging wildlife to relocate nearby.

"Billy's dam probably saved a large portion of a farmer's tobacco crop in an unusual drought," says Joan Tate. "About eight acres of tobacco is irrigated with the water in Billy's pond."

"More fish, frogs, turtles and wood ducks live in the pond because of the raised water table that Billy has made possible," she added.

When Billy is not busy, which isn't often, he sometimes climbs into Ms. Tate's lap for some hand feeding.

"He's a pet," she says, stroking Billy's back and feeding him apples. "You are spoiled, aren't you Billy?"

Ms. Tate noticed the beaver family two years ago when she was walking out by the pond. Two adults and a small family of babies apparently immigrated from the nearby Eno River, she believes.

The babies, which are called kits, were raised to carry on the jobs of their parents. But only Billy and a female beaver remained at the little pond. Ms. Tate is not sure what became of the others.

"People are bad about killing them," Ms. Tate said. "Farm kids are taught that wild animals are to hunt."

Although Billy is gentle with humans, Ms. Tate has learned that beavers don't like dogs or other threatening animals.

"We brought our English Bulldog, Pricilla, out here one day," she said, "and Billy's father broadsided him into the water."

Ms. Tate plans on feeding and befriending Billy as long as he complies. She started training him by experimenting with different types of fruits.

"He loves apples. I tried strawberries and carrots at first, but he didn't like them. In fact, he was insulted when I gave him the carrots."

Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's flue-cured tobacco crop is expected to yield about 791 million pounds, 4 percent less than the 1983 harvest, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said that would be the smallest flue-cured crop since 1943. Officials recently estimated 1984 flue-cured acreage at 396,000 acres, the smallest on record.

Yields were forecast at an average of 1,997 pounds per acre, down seven pounds from last year.

Firm Says Will Meet Dust Rules

DANVILLE, Va. (AP) — Dan River Inc., a huge textile firm, says it will abandon efforts to delay meeting federal cotton dust standards and will suspend related efforts to win federal support for an experiment that labor groups say would have made guinea pigs of employees.

The announcement came Tuesday in a joint statement from Dan River and the Virginia Department of Labor and Industry in Richmond.

Dan River had sought to delay the installation of about $7.5 million in equipment designed to meet cotton dust standards.

The decision, which state officials said followed the intervention of David W. Johnston Jr., Dan River board chairman, came as the likelihood dimmed that Dan River and medical researchers would receive federal funds for an experiment seeking the causes of brown lung, a crippling disease found in textile workers.

In a letter last month to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, J. Donald Miller, director of the National Institutes for Occupational Safety and Health, called it "inappropriate to permit workers to be subjected to unnecessary hazards while the merits of this research project are considered."

Virginia OSHA officials had granted Dan River a reprieve in May from installing the federal- and state-mandated controls to limit cotton dust, although the industrywide standards had been upheld in 1980 by the Supreme Court and were to have been in place by March.

The Virginia AFL-CIO charged that Dan River's request for the delay was "an obvious pretext to avoid compliance with the standard and to save some money while using its employees as guinea pigs."

Neither Dan River nor the Department of Labor and Industry gave a reason for the decision to begin installation of the engineering equipment.

Eva S. Teig, commission of the department, and Dr. Betty J. Diener, secretary of commerce and resources, quoted Johnston as saying he was very concerned about what he termed misdirected sentiment against the company because of allegations of human experimentation.

Company and state officials had said the experiment, which could have lasted two years and which sought to isolate a little-understood bacterium as a possible cause of brown lung, offered a potential scientific breakthrough.

Banks Oppose Citicorp Move

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Bankers Association will resist an attempted takeover of a Burlington bank by Citicorp, the nation's largest bank holding company, says John B. Harris Jr., president of the association.

James S. Currie, state commissioner of banks, said New York-based Citicorp applied Friday to acquire the Morris Plan Industrial Bank, anticipating the General Assembly's passage of a law allowing interstate bank mergers and acquisitions involving Southeastern states.

In a letter to Citicorp's lawyers, Currie said the association would review the application.

Harris, however, said, "I'm sure we would oppose (Citicorp's application) if there is legal means to oppose it."

He said the law was designed to allow Southeast regional banks to merge and grow before national interstate banking begins and the regional banks have to compete with Citicorp and other industry giants.

Robert E. Oakes, chief executive officer of Morris Plan Industrial Bank, said he wasn't sure whether the new North Carolina law would apply to Citicorp's proposed acquisition of his bank.

An industrial bank has all of the powers of a commercial bank except that it cannot accept checking accounts. Morris Plan Industrial Bank, with $7.4 million in assets, is the only such institution in North Carolina.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, extending Tuesday's decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 5.41 to 1,121.47 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The bond market has been setting the tone for stock prices so far this week.

On Monday, blue-chip issues rallied as long-term interest rates fell in the credit markets. But since then, bond interest rates have moved back up and the stock market has turned weak.

Brokers also said the stock market in general was unsettled by a sharp drop in the shares of ITT Corp., which tumbled 7 to 24 in heavy trading.

Late Tuesday the company projected sharply lower second-quarter earnings and cut its quarterly dividend from 69 cents to 25 cents a share.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.17 to 1,126.88.

Losers led gainers by about 7 to 6 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 74.01 million shares, compared with 74.83 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .22 to 88.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost to 196.49.

The major problem with the governance structure, Dr. Coble said, was that it was decentralized to various departments. The establishment of a Council for Teacher Education and the appointment of Dr. Coble as director of teacher education in effect brought the various programs together under one responsible coordinating entity. There are more than 40 teacher certification programs located in the school of education, the school of allied health and social work, the school of technology, the school of home economics, the school of art, the school of music, and the college of arts and sciences.

Coble also pointed out that East Carolina has the largest teacher education program of any school in North Carolina and one of the largest in the United States. "That's one reason we feel this is such an accomplishment," Dr. Angelo Volpe, vice chancellor for academic affairs, added. He said the short-term effect of the 1983 announcement that the NCATE was withholding accreditation unless certain standards could be met was not favorable, but that the long-term effect has been excellent. "We're more procedurally strong than we've ever been," he said. "And we're going to continue to improve our programs."

Coble said the faculty will not be content through 1990 with the restored accreditation. "We'll be vigilant," he said, "keeping aware of new NCATE requirements and seeking on our own to offer the opportunities we offer our students and our faculty."

Howell said "visions of the teacher education programs of the future are already being demonstrated." He cited projects of the university's Rural Education Institute and said the university's teacher education program itself has already become a model to implement teacher-professor exchange programs encouraged by the 1983 General Assembly.

Dr. Volpe called the entire accreditation restoration effort, "an example of how much can be accomplished by good teamwork."

Pitt Residents Attend Reunion

Three Pitt County residents were among relatives from six states and the District of Columbia who attended the Lowe family reunion in Columbus, Ga., July 6 and 7.

Mrs. Willard Griffin and Mrs. Johnnie M. Carney, both of Greenville, and Minnie Chance of Bethel, daughters of the late Lonnie and Lula Lowe of Columbus, were the senior members of the family attending the affair, which included a reunion dinner and business session.

Columbus Mayor Pro-Tem A. M. McClung presented a proclamation designating July 7 as "The Lowe Family Day."

The descendants of Lonnie and Lula Lowe will hold their 1985 reunion in the Virginia Beach area.

Defendants Claim Upheld 'High Law'

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Eight nuclear weapons protesters say they committed no criminal act, but were merely upholding a "higher law that governs all men," when they broke into a defense plant and damaged nuclear missile equipment.

The eight defendants, accused of conspiracy and damage to U.S. Army property, are conducting their own defense with the assistance of two lawyers, who act as advisers.

Two of the defendants, Roman Catholic nun Anne Montgomery and James L. Perkins, previewed the defense for the six men and two women in opening statements in U.S. District Court in Orlando on Tuesday.

The other defendants are Per Ingmar Herengren, 22, Syracuse, N.Y.; Christin Marie Schmidt, 24, Baltimore, Md.; Todd Kaplan, 26, Washington D.C.; Paul Joseph Magno Jr., 27, Washington D.C., and Patrick O'Neill, 28, Greenville, N.C.

Sister Montgomery, 57, is from New York. Lietzke, 32, is from Richmond, Va.; and Perkins, 45, is from Baltimore.

The Easter Sunday demonstration at the Martin Marietta plant which smashed Pershing 2 missiles was "within a higher law that governs all men," Sister Montgomery told a 12-person jury.

"We substantially agree that we did these acts," Perkins said. "The question really is, did we go to Martin Marietta to commit a crime?" "It isn't enough for the government to prove we did some specific act. It has to prove we did a criminal act," Perkins maintained.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Turner said the defendants, who call themselves the Ploshware Eight, have admitted violating the law and should be punished for it.

Prosecution witnesses reviewed evidence which showed that missile launcher components had been damaged by hammers and other tools and blood had been smeared throughout a "Pershing Kit" work area at the plant.

Sister Montgomery and Perkins tried to justify their actions as a symbolic statement to publicize the anti-nuclear cause.

U.S. District Judge George C. Young, who has prohibited blatant "political" testimony as a defense tactic, warned the two that they were getting into "irrelevant areas," and that their statements were not to be treated as closing arguments.

The protesters took turns cross-examining a list of 13 witnesses presented by the prosecution.

The defendants — most with a history of similar protest demonstrations — are being tried for conspiracy and damage to government property in excess of $100. They face up to 15 years in prison if convicted.

Moyewood Daycare Center, $21,000, cemetery development, $48,486; and the addition of a computer system, $81,048.

Funds for all capital improvements will come out of the city's revenue sharing fund, the general fund and the Powell Bill fund.

Also included in the city's budget are provisions for continuation of the merit program which will be reviewed in the fall, and 11 new full-time and five part-time positions. Full-time positions include a clerk typist, two engineers, a planning technician, an animal control officer, an equipment operator for parks and recreation, three sanitation equipment operators and a cemetery equipment operator. Part-time positions include a laborer in the engineering and inspections department, two park attendants and two laborers in the right-of-way division of public works.

No new revenue producing endeavors (other than a 7-cent increase in property taxes — opted for in lieu of establishing garbage collection fees) were enacted with the 1984-85 budget. However, when the Council elected not to create a garbage collection fee, a $196,199 shortfall was created. Mrs. Meeks and her staff were instructed to find the $196,199 somewhere in the budget.

According to Meeks, the following measures were taken to balance the budget: $8,000 was taken from the unemployment compensation insurance fund, the contingency fund was reduced by $43,000, $25,000 was taken from the street resurfacing program and $16,514 was taken from the city cemetery development.

Other bids awarded Tuesday night include: $10,350 for 150,000 pounds of caustic soda to Eence Chemical Sales Inc.; $25,920 for 480,000 pounds of aluminum sulfate to American Cyanamid Co.; $34,200 for 192,000 pounds of chlorine to McKesson Chemical Co.; $49,796 for 100 distribution transformers to Hesco Inc.; $22,230 for 15 padmount transformers to Robert W. Chapman Co.; $34,400 for 40,000 feet of cable to Hesco Inc.; and $19,875 for 15,000 feet of cable to Rigby Electric Supply Co.

National League Turns Back Clock

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In the twilight zone, the All-Star clock turned back 50 years. Only it wasn't Hubbell but Valenzuela and Gooden, and the victims, disappearing quickly into the dusk, weren't Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin, but Winfield, Jackson, Brett, Parrish, Lemon and Davis.

"I heard over a loudspeaker what was going on," said Dave Winfield, the top hitter in the major leagues. "What could we do?"

Not much, as the National League took advantage of power pitching, power hitting in the form of home runs by Most Valuable Player Gary Carter of Montreal and Dale Murphy of Atlanta and the lengthening shadows Tuesday to record a 3-1 triumph over the American League in the 1984 All-Star Game.

It was the 12th victory in 13 games for the NL and its 20th in the last 22 — a dominance symbolized by the pitchers Tuesday night.

Five NL hurlers struck out 11 batters, five AL pitchers fanned 10, and the combined 21 strikeouts eclipsed by one the record for a nine-inning All-Star Game set in 1968.

But what had both teams and a crowd of 57,756 at Candlestick Park buzzing started in the top of the fourth inning.

With Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela pitching, New York's Winfield, hitting .370, stepped up to lead off the inning.

Winfield went down swinging at a fastball.

"I was the one who started it," Winfield said.

Next up was Reggie Jackson, the slugger for the California Angels. He fanned on a half-swing.

"Right now it is real difficult to see," Jackson said after leaving the game. "I know Dave Winfield said the same thing."

Up stepped Kansas City's George Brett, whose home run in the second inning accounted for the AL's only run. Brett was called out on strikes, looking at a Valenzuela screwball.

"When you are facing the best pitchers in the world, a lot of guys are going to strike out," Brett said. Valenzuela, second in the majors in strikeouts but a late replacement for injured Joaquin Andujar on the NL roster, gave way to 19-year-old rookie Dwight Gooden, the strikeout leader, to start the fifth. Different pitchers, different batters, but same results.

Lance Parrish of Detroit struck out swinging.

"It was not my best day," said Parrish, who had fanned against starter Charlie Lea of Montreal in the second.

Detroit's Chet Lemon struck out swinging.

"It was hard to pick up the rotation of the ball," Lemon said. "But you had the best there are out there, and they were pitching like that."

Next was Alvin Davis and history. The Seattle Mariners' rookie, pinch-hitting for AL pitcher Jack Morris, went down swinging on a 2-2 count.

"When Gooden came in, it didn't look like he was throwing that hard," Davis said. "But when I got to the plate, it was fast."

"I felt like I was on him. I just didn't hit him. He throws as hard as anyone I've seen."

The six consecutive strikeouts by Valenzuela and Gooden brought the record set singlehandedly 50 years ago to the day by Carl Hubbell against future Hall of Famers Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in the 1934 Game.

Hubbell, now 81 years old, threw out the first ball before Tuesday's game. The pitch bounced before reaching the plate. It only got better for the NL after that.

"All we were thinking about was Hubbell's record," said NL Manager Paul Owens of Philadelphia. "We knew we were striking them out, but we didn't really realize we were putting them all together."

With the NL dugout shouting to Gooden to "get another," Detroit's Lou Whitaker ended the strikeout string by grounding out to start the sixth.

"I wasn't trying to strike out anyone," Gooden said. "I just wanted to throw strikes and not walk anyone."

"I was a little nervous before my first pitch, but after that, I felt fine."

Owens said he had planned to use Valenzuela in the third and fourth innings after winning pitcher Lea, and then follow with Gooden. Cincinnati's Mario Soto pitched a hitless seventh and eighth innings, striking out one, and Rich Gossage of San Diego fanned two in the ninth for a save as the NL finished up with three fastballers against a league where breaking-ball pitchers dominate.

"I knew it would be getting dark out there and hard to see," Owens gleamed. "I'm not 60 years old for nothing."

The AL pitchers also did well, especially Oakland reliever Bill Caudill, who pitched the seventh inning and struck out the side.

Valenzuela, Gooden and Caudill became just the fifth, sixth and seventh pitchers in All-Star history to strike out each of the three hitters they faced in an inning.

"The time of day made it tough to see," said Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken following the game, which started at 5:40 p.m. in San Francisco. "You also have to look at who was on the mound. I faced three different pitchers today (Lea, Soto and Valenzuela) and I didn't feel comfortable against one of them."

Prior to the game, more was made of the tricky winds at Candlestick than the starting time. In the last All-Star Game in Candlestick, played in 1961, there were a record seven errors.

There were only two errors this time and both were committed by the AL in the first inning, which led to an unearned run off Toronto's Dave Stieb, the starter and winner in last year's 13-3 victory by the AL, which snapped an 11-game losing streak.

Mills, Kinley Lead Pitt County Past Snow Hill 11-5 In Series

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

Steve Mills ripped a bases-loaded, two-run single to spark a four-run rally in the second inning, and Pitt County cruised to an 11-5 victory over Snow Hill in the opening game of their best-of-three American Legion baseball series at Harrington Field Tuesday.

Billy Michel gave up four earned runs on eight hits and struck out six in seven innings to earn the victory on the mound. Paul Hill came on in the eighth to close the door without incident.

Mike Kinley drove in a pair of runs with three hits, while Mills finished the night with three runs batted in. Traye Fuqua had two hits, a pair of RBIs and scored twice for Pitt County.

Jerry Butler led Snow Hill with three hits, while Billy Godley drove in two runs with two hits. Nat Norris and Randy Daniels added a pair of hits each for Snow Hill.

Southpaw Darryl Edwards is scheduled to pitch for Pitt County and will oppose Godley when the series resumes tonight at Snow Hill.

"We came back in the second inning with a couple of key hits," Pitt County Coach Bruce Rhodes said. "We only made one error and that was the key. I think if we only make one and it's not too costly, we'll win most of the time."

"We got seven good innings out of Billy (Michel), and that's what we wanted. He did everything we asked of him. We knew we could come back with Paul Hill."

Michel hit the second batter he faced, Anthony Russo, but the Pitt County defense erased the threat with its first double play of the game.

Kinley, Fuqua and Roger Moyer singled to load the bases with no outs in the second, and Mills followed with a two-run hit up the middle. When Mills stole second, the throw from catcher Todd Grant bounced away from Daniels allowing Mills to take third and Moyer to score. Mills scored on a fielder's choice by Daniel Keel for a 4-0 Pitt County edge.

Pitt County's only error was by Fuqua at shortstop on a grounder by Rick Radford allowing the runner to take second on a wild throw. A fielder's choice by Billy Braswell and another by Norris scored Radford for Snow Hill's first run.

Snow Hill loaded the bases with one out in the fourth, but Michel struck out Grant and Radford popped out to end the inning.

Toby Fischer reached on an error, moved to second on a grounder by Doug Coley and was safe at third on a fielder's choice by Michel. Kinley followed with a two-run triple down the right-field line, and a sacrifice fly by Fuqua drove in Kinley for a 7-1 Pitt edge.

Norris opened the seventh with a single, Michel hit Russo for the second time and Daniels singled to load the bases. Godley doubled in two runs, and grounders by Joey Steppe and Jerry Butler plated two more as Snow Hill trimmed the margin to 7-5.

But Pitt County rallied for three more in the bottom of the frame.

After one out, Michel, Kinley and Fuqua singled for the first run. Moyer walked, and Mills followed with a fielder's choice to drive in Kinley. Another throwing error by Grant on a pickoff attempt at second allowed Fuqua to score from third.

Jackie Conway led off with a bunt single in the eighth, moved to second on a passed ball and took third on a wild pitch. A sacrifice fly by Michel plated Conway with the final Pitt County run.

"They had a couple of big innings for us," Snow Hill Coach James Fulghum said. "Kinley hurt us every time tonight. They bunched their hits and got some when it counted."

"You've got to win two sometime (in a three-game series). (Tonight) is the most important for us now."

Meanwhile, Wayne County defeated Rocky Mount, 16-9, in the opening game of their best-of-three series. The two winners will meet, starting Sunday, in a best-of-five series for the Area I East title.

Claybrook New Conley Cage Coach

HOLLYWOOD — Walter Claybrook has been named head basketball coach at D.H. Conley High School.

Claybrook succeeds Shelly Marsh, who is now at Havelock.

"Shelly started and carried on quite a tradition with Conley basketball," Claybrook said. "It's going to be a challenge to carry on. I'm just thankful for the opportunity."

A four-year baseball and basketball player at Ayden High School, Claybrook was named All-East in both his senior year. He was selected All-State by the Greensboro Daily News for American Legion baseball.

Claybrook earned a bachelor's degree in health and physical education at East Carolina University in 1970 and began teaching at Conley that fall.

After coaching the girls basketball team his first year, Claybrook served the past 13 as a full-time varsity assistant. He served as jayvee coach the past three years, with a total of five years in that position in three different tours.

Claybrook served as head baseball coach for seven years but resigned four years ago. He assisted Alan Wilson this season with Conley's first Coastal 3-A Conference championship squad.

ECU Cage Slates Announced

East Carolina University's men will play 13 home games, including seven against ECAC-South opponents and such non-conference foes as Virginia Commonwealth and Boston University. The Pirates will also face ACC opponents Wake Forest and Duke, both on the road.

Meanwhile, East Carolina's Lady Pirates will play host to 14 home foes, including Old Dominion, South Carolina and several ECAC-South opponents.

The women, however, are yet to have a new head coach named. Coach Cathy Andruzzi resigned last spring to enter private business. ECU Athletic Director Ken Karr said he expected to name a new coach by July 1, but various problems have set that date back. Officials at the university say they hope to have a new coach shortly.

Coach Charlie Harrison's third offering will play three home games in the first month of the season, and will also participate in the First Tulsa Classic in Tulsa, Okla.

The ECAC-South slate grows by two this year with the admission of American University and UNC-Wilmington into the league, giving a total of eight teams in the conference. East Carolina will play each of the seven others twice, on a home-and-away basis.

In addition to VCU and Boston U., the Pirates play host to Central Connecticut State, Christopher Newport, Winthrop and Campbell. Other road foes include Drexel, Campbell, Wake Forest, Duke, and Howard.

The ECAC-South Tournament will be played at William & Mary, March 7-9.

The Lady Pirates open their season on November 23-24 at the Dogwood Classic in Fayetteville, a doubleheader against N.C. State and North Carolina.

Home opponents all of the ECAC-South except Navy on a home and home basis. Other home foes include Fayetteville State, Howard, Old Dominion, South Carolina Ion, Campbell, South Florida and Hampton Institute.

On the road, the Lady Pirates also face UNC-Charlotte, South Carolina, Morehead State, Marshall, and Radford.

The ECAC-South tournament will be held March 1-3 at a site still to be announced.

The Men's schedule:
Nov. 27 Central Connecticut State.

Dec. 1 Virginia Commonwealth; 4 at Drexel; 8 Christopher Newport; 13 at Campbell; 19 at Wake Forest; 28-29 at First Tulsa Classic.

Jan. 3 Boston U.; 7 George Mason; 9 at Duke; 12 William & Mary; 19 at Richmond; 21 at Howard; 26 Navy, 28 James Madison.

Feb. 2 at George Mason; 6 at UNC-Wilmington; 9 at William & Mary; 11 American; 13 Winthrop; 16 Richmond; 18 at Navy; 20 at American; 23 UNC-Wilmington; 27 Campbell.

March 2 at James Madison; 7-9 ECAC-South Tournament at William & Mary.

The Women's schedule:
Nov. 23 N.C. State at Fayetteville; 24 North Carolina at Fayetteville; 28 Fayetteville State. Dec. 1 at UNC-Charlotte; 4 Howard; 7 Old Dominion; 15 at South Carolina; 18 at Morehead State; 19 at Marshall.

Jan. 2 South Carolina; 5 Iona; 9 Campbell; 12 at William & Mary; 14 at Richmond; 19 George Mason; 21 American; 26 at Radford; 28 at James Madison; 31 UNC-Wilmington.

Feb. 2 South Florida; 5, Hampton Institute; 9 at American; 11 at George Mason; 16 William & Mary; 18 James Madison; 21 at UNC-Wilmington; 24 Richmond.

March 1-3 at ECAC-South Tournament.

Tradition Key To NL's Success

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In the second half of this century, from 1950 until last night, the National League has beaten the American League 31 times in All-Star Games.

The Americans have managed only seven victories and one tie in that span, including just two wins in the last 22 years.

From Gary Carter, winner of his second Most Valuable Player award, to Darryl Strawberry, an All-Star for the first time, the word used most often in the National League locker room was "tradition."

"The (MVP) trophy should go to the National League as a whole," Carter said. "We wanted to come back from last year's thrashing, and we did. I was a small part of being a National League tradition."

Call it tradition, or call it dominance, but if All-Star competition is any measure of league quality, the senior circuit might more aptly be called the superior circuit.

Carter scored the decisive run in NL's 3-1 victory Tuesday night with a line drive homer far over the left field fence.

The Montreal catcher also called the signals for a brilliant pitching staff that notched 11 strikeouts, including a record six straight by Fernando Valenzuela and Dwight Gooden.

After seeing their 11-year winning streak snapped last year with an embarrassing 13-3 defeat, the Nationals played this one hard and dirty. Nothing illegal, mind you. They just weren't afraid to mess up their uniforms.

Steve Garvey was typical of that attitude, crashing into catcher Lance Parrish in the first inning to give the Nationals a 1-0 lead. Garvey had singled with two out, then hustled to second when rightfielder Reggie Jackson let the ball dribble through his legs for an error.

Dale Murphy followed with a single to left and Garvey never stopped running. Not the fastest man in baseball, Garvey was beaten at the plate by left fielder Dave Winfield's perfect one-hop throw to the plate. But the ball popped out of Parrish's glove just as Garvey bowled him over and crossed the plate.

"I got a pretty good piece of him," Garvey said of Parrish. "When he is blocking the plate without the ball, there is only one thing to do — go right through him. I wanted to set the tone of the game early by being aggressive."

The tone was picked up by the rest of the hitters, who grabbed an All-Star record four stolen bases, and the pitchers, who used a dazzling assortment of sliders, screwballs and plenty of fastballs to frustrate the American League.

Starter and winner Charlie Lea, Valenzuela, Gooden, Mario Soto and Goose Gossage teased the Americans, and sometimes simply overpowered them.

"It's a great feeling to have," said Gooden, at 19 the youngest player ever in an All-Star game. "It's something I can always fall back on and remember."

Gooden and Valenzuela combined to set an All-Star record of six strikeouts in a row by one team, beating the five straight set singlehandedly by Carl Hubbell 50 years ago to the day.

"This would be one heck of a team to play for," said Bob Brenly, the San Francisco catcher who warmed up the pitchers in the bullpen. "We could win 160 games. Dwight wasn't really airing it out in the bullpen, but when he went to the mound he added about 10 mph more."

"I don't know how they even touched the ball. A kid like that, 19, barring any physical problems he's gonna set a whole lot of records. I was surprised anytime anybody made contact."

Strawberry, Gooden's teammate on the New York Mets, also played in his first All-Star game and came away with a familiar feeling among National Leaguers.

"It's more for fun," he said. "But it's a winning tradition."

Fike's Harvey Reid Has Made Great Comeback

WILSON (AP) — The basketball record of Harvey Reid reads like a fictional success story: 670 wins in 35 years, perhaps the most in state history; seven state championships, including the 1984 4-A title; North Carolina coach of the year for 1983-84 and conference coach of the year on 17 occasions.

Despite those accomplishments, Reid's most impressive victory was of a different sort: a comeback win over a heart attack he suffered almost five years ago.

For a few moments on Sept. 7, 1979, the Fike High School head coach was technically dead. Only cardiopulmonary resuscitation administered by a hospital orderly saved his life.

Early that day, while working in his office, Reid, 53 at the time, began "feeling bad." A short while later, he experienced severe chest pains while teaching class. He asked someone to keep an eye on his class for him, and he went back to his office to sit on the sofa.

"I grabbed a student in the hall and told him to go get my wife," Reid said. His wife, Vandahlia, is a guidance counselor at Fike. "She didn't realize how serious it was so she told the student to wait. Then I got a coach and sent him after her. He told her just to go straight to the car and drive it around by the coaches' offices."

By the time she arrived, Reid was in terrible pain. "I was sweating all over," Reid said. "I felt like there was a balloon inside of me and someone was blowing it up and it was expanding. It was very excruciating pain."

With the help of the coach, Reid struggled to the car. On the way to the hospital, he experienced three more sharp pains. The final one didn't go away. From that point on, Reid recalls little.

He remembers thinking that he was having a heart attack. He vaguely remembers being given the life-saving CPR. And he recalls asking a doctor if the heart attack would be fatal. "Let me be honest with you," the doctor said. "The next 24 hours will determine that."

Four days after the incident, Reid asked his doctor how close he had come to dying. The doctor replied, "You died."

He recovered in time for Fike's first basketball game in 1979 and did not miss a single game throughout the season.

"I was fortunate," Reid said. "My faith in God has grown and really helped me. I know now that whatever is going to happen to me is going to happen for the best. So I don't worry about it."

Reid's successful recovery has made him a strong advocate of cardiac rehabilitation, an exercise and recovery program for heart attack victims.

An apprehensive Reid decided to join the program soon after his release from the hospital. Within a year, he had progressed from walking once around the gym to jogging around several times. Reid was told he was healthy enough to leave the group. He enjoyed it so much, however, he asked to stay for six more months.

Following his 18-month tenure, Reid began working with the group on a volunteer basis for one year. He was then named the program's exercise leader, a position he has held, and treasured, for two years.

"The cardiac rehabilitation program has meant more to me than any one thing in my whole recuperating process," he said. "I can relate my experiences to others and help them. When they asked me to be the exercise leader, I knew it was right down my line."

"It's a tremendous help to everyone concerned," he said. "I've never heard anyone say that this program has not helped them. A group of people with common ailments can relate to each other by doing the same rehabilitation work. People become attached to each other. It is one great big family."

About 40 people participate in the hour-long sessions, which are held three nights a week. At least one doctor and a few nurses are always present, along with some volunteers and the exercise leader.

National...

Garvey singled to right and continued to second when Jackson, who has been a designated hitter all season and had not played the field, lost the ball in the NL insignia painted on the grass and let it skip between his legs for an error. Murphy followed with a single through the hole to left, and Garvey scored when catcher Parrish dropped Winfield's strong one-hop throw for an error.

"It was a boom-boom play," said Parrish. "If I had hung onto the ball, he would have been out."

Said Garvey, who knocked into Parrish after the ball had been dropped: "I got a pretty good piece of him. When he is blocking the plate, there is only one thing to do — go right through him."

Brett's one-out homer tied it the second before Carter drilled a Stieb pitch over the left-field fence in the bottom of the second.

Carter's home run earned him MVP honors, only the second player, along with Garvey, to win the award twice, as the NL, stealing a record four bases, stretched its overall lead in the series to 35-19-1.

The AL mounted a threat against Valenzuela in the third when pinch hitter Andre Thornton of Cleveland led off with a single and went to third on Whitaker's single. California's Rod Carew then hit a chopper that first baseman Garvey gloved, tagged first for one out and threw home to Carter to nip Thornton at the plate for a double play.

Murphy homered off Detroit reliever Willie Hernandez in the eighth for an insurance run.

Gossage, who allowed a two-out double to Winfield in the ninth when left fielder Tim Lincecum just missed a diving catch, wrapped up the victory by striking out Oakland's Rickey Henderson. Gossage had faced Henderson nine times in the past — striking him out eight times while once walking him with the bases-loaded.

The victory earned Owens a hug from NL President Chub Feeney after the game.

"He was tickled to death," Owens said. "I told our guys before the game that they were playing for National League pride and that nothing came before that."

"You could really feel the intensity. They really wanted to win."

Ayden Holds Pro-Lady

AYDEN — Host pro Tim Smith and Buddy Lang of Raleigh, each shooting 71, tied for low pro honors in the 1984 Ayden Country Club Pro-Lady Golf Tournament yesterday.

Tying for third place in the pro field were Jim McDermott of Ayden, Eddie Pinnix of Ahoskie, Ronnie Parker of Jacksonville, Denny Sullivan of New Bern and Tom Johnson of Havelock, all shooting even par 72.

Lang also guided his team in the event to a tie for first place with a net of 57. They tied with a team headed by John Raines of Ahoskie.

Teams headed by Joey Noble of Fuquay-Varina and Parker tied for third with a 58, while Sullivan had his team in fifth place with a 59.

Pitt Gains Finals; Coke Is Champ

13 Babe Ruth

Pitt County.....6
Greenville.....5

Pitt County pushed over a run in the bottom of the sixth inning to down Greenville, 6-5, and move into the finals of the 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League District Tournament.

The loss, the second for Greenville, eliminated the host team from the tournament. Pitt went on to face unbeaten Nash County in the tournament finals.

Pitt took the lead in the first inning with one run. Bronswell Patrick walked and moved up on a single by Mark Smith. He took third on a fielder's choice by Anthony Harrison and scored on a hit by Brian Bullock.

Greenville came roaring back in the second, scoring four times for a 4-1 lead. Jon Chambliss singled and Andy Miller walked. Joe DeLoach singled to load the bases. Chris Fuqua singled to score Chambliss and Billy Turcotte got a hit, driving in Miller. John Bolen grounded out to score DeLoach, and Fuqua scored when Darrell Moore reached on an error.

Pitt County rallied with two in the third and two more in the fifth, taking a 5-4 lead. Greenville tied it up once more at 5-5 in the top of the sixth, but Pitt then got the winning run in the bottom of the frame.

Patrick tripled with one away, and scored on Mark Smith's base hit.

Patrick led the Pitt hitting with three, while Smith and Bullock each had two. Turcotte had three for Greenville, while Bolen added two.

Nash County.....5

Pitt County put itself squarely into the championship picture in the 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League District Tournament last night with a 9-5 win over previously unbeaten Nash County.

The result left both teams with one loss each in the double elimination tournament. They will meet tonight at 8 p.m. to settle things, with the winner advancing to the state tournament.

Nash got the lead with a run in the top of the first, but Pitt countered with one in the bottom of the frame.

Pitt then charged ahead in the third, scoring four times. Jim Faulkner singled and Ty Little walked. Bronswell Patrick reached on an error, scoring Faulkner. Mark Smith also reached on an error, letting Little and Patrick score. Ropbie Nichols added the other run when his errored ball let Smith cross.

Nash, however, rallied to tie it up scoring four times for a 5-5 tie in the fifth.

Pitt proved the better team, however, scoring four times in the sixth. James Woodard reached on an error and scored on Derrek Ennis' triple. An error let him score. Patrick doubled and Smith walked. Anthony Harrison singled in Patrick and a hit by John Tyndall brought in Smith with the final run.

Harrison led the Pitt hitting with two while Tim Marshmon had two hits to pace Nash County.

Little League

Coca-Cola.....5
True Value.....4

Coca-Cola rallied for two runs in the bottom of the fifth inning and pulled out a 5-4 victory over True Value Hardware yesterday, sweeping the Greenville City Little League Championship.

The win gave Coke a two-game sweep of the best-of-three series between the two Little League champions. Coke won the first game, 1-0.

True Value threatened to bounce back in this one, scoring four times in the first inning. Craig Willoughby walked and moved up on a wild pitch and then stole third. He scored on an error. Matthew Cagle walked and Aaron Tschetter also walked. Ken Sawyer singled in Cagle and an error on the relay scored Tschetter. Brooks Honeycutt walked and Clarence Hammonds reached on an error, scoring Sawyer.

Coke came back with two in the third. Derrick Clark singled and Walter Gatlin walked. Derrick Hines singled in Clark and a wild pitch let Gatlin in.

Coke added two more in the fourth to tie it up, but True Value went back out in the fifth, scoring once.

But in the bottom of the sixth, Coke rallied for the winning runs. Clark reached on a fielder's choice that left one out and David O'Neal was safe on an error. Gatlin singled in Clark to tie the score and Hines walked, loading the bases. Edwin Manning then singled to drive in O'Neal with the game — and title — winning run.

Clark had two hits to lead Coke, while no one had more than one for True Value, which got only three hits off Clark.

Tissue Damage Could Be Cause Of Death

KENNETT SQUARE, Pa. (AP) — Minor tissue damage could have led to an irregular heartbeat and the death of the Kentucky Derby winner Swale only eight days after he also had won the Belmont Stakes, according to veterinary pathologists.

The damaged areas, or lesions, were discovered in the last week as pathologists sought to unravel the mystery of Swale's death on June 17, veterinarians at the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center said Tuesday.

Tissue damage was found in Swale's left ventricle, one of the heart's two lower chambers, and in the wall separating the ventricles, according to the pathologists.

Either area of damage could have produced an erratic heartbeat — an arrhythmia — that could have caused Swale's heart to stop pumping normally and resulted in his sudden death, said veterinarian Carol Lichtensteiger.

"It's true, we can't say this is the cause of death. But it's quite conceivable. It would fit the way he collapsed," she said. "We can say that this was in the heart and it could have caused an arrhythmia."

Lichtensteiger assisted Dr. Helen Acland, head of New Bolton's Laboratory for Large Animal Pathology, in the autopsy, which was conducted at Belmont Park the day Swale died.

A New Bolton spokeswoman said Tuesday that no damaged tissue had been found in the colt's brain. In addition, toxicology studies were nearly complete and had found no poison in the 3-year-old colt's body, the spokeswoman said.

Swale, a tall, thin son of Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, won the Belmont easily on June 9 and was being let down gradually from his peak fitness for a summer-long rest.

He collapsed at 6:45 a.m. on June 17, only minutes after completing an untaxed, 1½-mile gallop around Belmont's main track.

Tuesday's announcement of heart damage tended to rule out foul play in Swale's death. Extensive investigations by both the New York Racing Association and the New York Racing and Wagering Board turned up no evidence that Swale had been poisoned or drugged.

Preliminary microscopic examinations of Swale's heart tissue initially failed to disclose any damage. But as the examination of the brain continued, the pathologists returned to the heart, Lichtensteiger said.

Those inquiries under the microscope turned up two very different areas of damage.

Woodson Is Leader

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State first baseman Tracy Woodson led the nation in three batting categories and the Wolfpack was ranked in five team categories, according to final 1984 baseball statistics released by the NCAA.

Woodson, drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers in the third round of the spring draft, was first in runs batted in per game averaging 1.93, home runs per game with 0.63 and slugging percentage with .930.

The second-team all-America was the only player to finish first in more than one of the 14 listed categories.

N.C. State, which finished 32-8 and placed third in the Atlantic Coast Conference, led the nation in home runs per game with an average of 1.95 per game. The Wolfpack finished second to ACC foe Georgia Tech in scoring, averaging 9.9 runs per game to 10.3 for the Yellow Jackets, and ranked fifth in doubles, with 2.18 per contest, and ranked 14th in team batting average at .332.

Athletic Directors Nix NCAA Plan

CHICAGO (AP) — After 32 years of determining which teams played college football on TV on which Saturdays, the NCAA has been banished from the television business — at least for the time being — by members who voted to take matters and revenue into their own hands.

By a 66-44 vote Tuesday, the football-playing institutions of Division I-A voted down a hastily arranged, one-year NCAA plan that would have replaced the one killed recently by the U.S. Supreme Court. "My own gut feeling is that it came down to there being too much uncertainty and too little time," said NCAA President John Toner. "The vote also tells me that there was no way to keep everyone — and I mean everyone — together in one group."

But waiting to pick up the pieces, as well as most of the revenue, were the College Football Association, which claims 63 members, including most of the traditional powerhouses, or the Football Television Planning Committee, a coalition that enfolds the CFA as well as the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences.

The consensus among athletic directors attending the special meeting was that the coalition would likely emerge as the pivotal bargaining agent in the fall television picture.

The CFA already counts most of the traditional conference powers such as Alabama, Georgia, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas, as well as independent powers such as Notre Dame and Penn State among its number, and the inclusion of the Big Ten and Pac-10 would add enough key television markets to make the group almost as strong as the NCAA had been.

"This clearly demonstrated our inventory is a powerful show," said Otis Singletary, president of the University of Kentucky and chairman of the CFA's television committee. "There's no way of knowing for sure if the coalition will come through, but it's been our position that would be the No. 1 choice."

The CFA and coalition groups set Thursday as the deadline for formal commitments from institutions that elect to participate in their respective plans for 1984. Before Tuesday's vote on the NCAA proposal, CFA members voted 60-0 with three abstentions to commit to either the CFA or the coalition plan.

"If we're not part of the coalition, we'll be part of the CFA," said Gene Corrigan, athletic director at Notre Dame, considered the one school that could write its own ticket because of consistently high TV ratings. "I think what ended the NCAA plan's chances were the worries that it would be everybody against everybody else. There wasn't enough to keep people in line."

Corrigan, who chairs the coalition's television committee, said its plan mirrors many of the CFA proposals, but added, "There's a lot still to be worked out."

The CFA plan would not guarantee any national appearances and would limit any school to no more than four in the upcoming season. It also would grant some "exclusivity" to national networks on Saturdays — similar in many ways to the NCAA plan which the courts found to be in violation of federal antitrust laws.

The CFA also plans to turn over about 4 percent of its revenues to the NCAA to continue administering football-related programs, Singletary said.

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said he expected conference members to make a decision on whether to join the coalition "within 24 hours."

"Whatever plan evolves, the Big Ten will continue to play a dominant role in college football," he added.

Pac-10 Executive Director Tom Hansen said, "We'll still discuss the coalition plan, but we're going to examine other options. The whole sports industry is slipping on TV and I'm afraid of what this will mean when we go in for renewals down the road."

John Swofford, athletic director at the University of North Carolina and chairman of the NCAA Television Committee, conceded the organization's plan was "very rushed," coming less than two weeks after the Supreme Court upheld a lower court decision and ruled that the NCAA could not continue as the sole bargaining agent for its members.

That decision killed a four-year, $263.5 million deal between the NCAA and the CBS and ABC networks, as well as another two-year, $11.1 million package with ESPN.

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said after the proposal was defeated, "If you took a poll, the votes would be overwhelmingly in favor of the NCAA plan that was struck down by the court. But the difficulty is the extreme lateness.

There was just too much uncertainty."

Had its proposal succeeded, the NCAA plan still would have required approval from U.S. District Judge Juan C. Burciaga, who originally ruled that the organization had violated federal antitrust laws.

That ruling came in a lawsuit brought by the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma. The suit was the outgrowth of a two-year dispute between the NCAA and CFA, which negotiated a $180 million contract with NBC two years ago but failed to gain approval from a majority of its members who feared reprisals from the NCAA.

"Some people may feel vindicated, but I don't think the CFA feels that way," said Singletary. "You don't want to misread the vote. It's not anti-NCAA. What it shows is that there was uncertainty and pressure because they (the NCAA) would have had to go back to court to get it approved and the opening game is only six weeks off."

Church League Putt Winners

Immanuel Baptist, Jarvis Memorial and Farmville Presbyterian were the winners in the seventh round of the annual Church League Tournament at Putt-Putt Golf and Games last night.

Immanuel Baptist, led by Alan Mizelle and Sandy Williams, slipped past Arthur Christian by 12 strokes. The duo both finished with scores of one over par 73.

Farmville Presbyterian eased by Salem Methodist despite a 13-under par effort by Salem's Ray Taft. Taft combined scores of 30 and 29 to finish with a 59. Farmville was led by Mel Williams and Mark Williams, who finished with three under par 69's.

Jarvis got its fifth victory of the year by virtue of a default by Hooker Memorial. Jon Jolley shot a ten-under par 62 for Jarvis.

LIFTS TO SHOOT
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marques Johnson, the brilliant scoring ace of the Milwaukee Bucks, took up weightlifting and says it has helped his shooting, much to his astonishment.

"I used to think it would affect your shot adversely," Johnson said. "But I watched Sidney Moncrief doing it and without any ill effects. So I tried it. What I found out was that I had some of my best games after lifting weights. The trick is to go right out and play after you have pumped some iron."

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

We are grateful to Australian internationalist Dick Cummings for this hand from a major tournament in his country. East-West were on their way to a magnificent defense, but stumbled at the critical point.

Despite the fact that he had only three low spades, South had no better response than two no trump. Since that bid denied a major suit, North settled for the no trump game.

West led his fourth-best spade, and declarer might have had a better chance had he risen with the ace in an attempt to block the suit. Instead, he played low and East made the brilliant play of the nine. After declarer held up the ace when East continued with the king of spades, East shifted to a heart.

Declarer played low from hand, West won the king and reverted to the queen of spades, forcing out the ace as East sluffed a club. Since declarer could not come to nine tricks without the diamond suit, he led a low diamond from the table. East played low, declarer won the king and, reading the position perfectly, he ducked a diamond. East won the queen and, since he could make no damaging return, declarer was home in comfort.

Naturally, we expect our eagle-eyed readers will have spotted the defensive slip. On the third spade, East must discard the queen of diamonds! Now there is no way declarer can set up the diamonds without giving West the lead, and the jack of spades will be the setting trick.

Observe that it will not help East to rise with the queen of diamonds when that suit is led from the board. Declarer simply allows East to hold the trick, and his contract is again safe.

Drug Brings 'Turnarounds' In Alzheimer's

By JANICE PERRY

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Some victims of Alzheimer's disease testing an experimental drug have had "dramatic turnarounds" and families whose lives are devastated by the disorder are pleading with doctors to allow continued use of it.

The University of Utah is one of six U.S. institutions testing CI-911, which belongs to a group of memory-enhancing drugs. In animal tests, CI-911 has improved memory and learning, said researcher Dr. Martin Higbee.

In the study, patients are given varying combinations of drugs or placebos, pills that contain no medication. The last patient has started a six-week regimen and when he finishes, results will be tallied.

"Nobody (including the researchers) knows who's getting what," said Higbee, a pharmacist.

"We have seen people have dramatic turnarounds, but we don't know why," he said. "We hope when we break the code (revealing which drugs or placebos were given to which patients), those with improvements will be those who received the drugs."

Alzheimer's disease wreaks havoc on families as victims become less and less rational, forget people they once knew, lose track of where they are, act and dress inappropriately and become depressed, anxious, and even belligerent.

Higbee, who with Dr. James Wood are the principal investigators in the one-year contract with Warner-Lambert pharmaceutical company, said the marked improvements in some patients brought pleas from families for continued use of the drugs after their six-week test ended.

"People really get desperate," Higbee said. "They want those little blue capsules."

He noted one New York cardiologist whose mother improved dramatically on the drug at another testing center contacted Warner-Lambert in an attempt to continue the treatment.

But Higbee said the U.S. Food and Drug Administration would take the pharmaceutical company to task if it gave out unapproved drugs on a non-experimental basis.

"What we hold out for these people is that if we go to a long-term study, we would invite them back to participate in that study," Higbee said.

Wood said his office was swamped when he first started looking for volunteers, but only a small portion of the total was selected. The drug is still not available to the public.

"We don't want a stampede at the door," he said. Higbee said doctors do not know what causes Alzheimer's disease — nor do they know what mechanism in CI-911 improved intellectual capabilities in rats and monkeys.

"That is true for the large portion of medications used today," Higbee said. "How does aspirin work? We don't know."

Alzheimer's disease occurs in a severe degree in more than 1 million people annually in the United States. Most are over 65, the age group that comprises 12 to 15 percent of the population. Researchers think the disease may afflict nearly three times as many from a mild to moderate degree.

"It is the fourth- or fifth-leading cause of death in the United States," Wood said. "The progressive disorder shortens life expectancy by 30 to 50 percent."

Initial studies of CI-911 in normal human volunteers revealed very few side effects, most often mild headache and dizziness, Wood said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 3 million children under age 18 in the United States, or 9 percent, are living with a divorced parent, according to Pediatric News, a medical publication.

The number of children affected by divorce increased between 1980 and 1981, the latest year for which figures are available from the National Center of Health Statistics.

The number of children whose parents were divorced each year increased 55 percent between 1950 and 1960, 88 percent between 1960 and 1970, and 36 percent between 1970 and 1981.

Kids Learn Break Dancing As New Form Of Exercise

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Local children taking classes at Elm Street Center have been learning the pop, the dive worm, Russian lift and knee spins, then adding the steps together to make their own break dances.

The classes, taught by April Maxam of Greenville, are a relatively new concept in children's exercise because the break dancing fad is just beginning to make its debut in eastern North Carolina.

Sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, the classes are for children 6-12 years old and filled up the first night of registration. Each class, consisting of 6-7 children, lasts a half-hour.

"Break dancing is a good exercise for children because it increases their hand-eye coordination, confidence, agility and flexibility. Their own personalities are put into it," Ms. Maxam said.

Break dancing involves a series of movements, like the ones mentioned above, with rapid or slow breaks between them. Every step may have 20 variations which can be molded by the child until the dance feels comfortable to him.

"Each kid has a chance to change and rearrange the moves according to his individual body structure and personality. I have broken each step into about six different parts, so it's simple and safe. I also go slower by increasing the breaks," Ms. Maxam said.

Break dancing is done to disco music and Ms. Maxam warns that parents should censor some of this music because the language may not be good for children. Some appropriate groups, she said, are Huey Lewis and the News, Journey, Fleetwood Mac and Michael Jackson.

Ms. Maxam, a recent East Carolina University physical education major, began teaching the classes after she got the idea from a gymnastics class she taught.

"During one of my classes I saw a lot of kids spinning. After classes, I started having five-minute practices in break dancing and the kids picked up on it," she said. Ms. Maxam also experimented with break dancing classes while student teaching at Chicod Elementary School.

The only equipment needed to break dance is knee pads. Ms. Maxam advises her classes to cut off the tops of old socks to use as knee pads instead of buying them for $15 or $20. Most people break dance barefoot.

Each class begins with two sets of physical conditioning exercises consisting of jumping jacks, running in place and stretches. During this time, the kids are also practice landing softly.

"After exercising, we do break dance steps such as the hand glide, backslide, pop, sideslide, American start, seat spins and knee spins. For safety reasons I don't teach head spins," she said.

After practicing the steps, the children break dance individually for about eight minutes before the class ends with static stretches.

Sound System Helps Hearing

The East Carolina University Summer Theater and the ECU Program for the Hearing Impaired have installed a wireless FM sound system in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus in Greenville. The system is designed to allow theatergoers with hearing problems to enjoy any performance in the theater regardless of the seating location.

The Phonic Ear Theater FM System includes a transmitter and an audio control device which are patched into the existing sound equipment. The system is designed to assist patrons with a hearing loss regardless of whether they wear a hearing aid.

Upon arrival at the theater, customers in need of hearing amplification may rent for that evening a personal wireless FM receiver and one of three listening accessories from the house manager. The receiver may be clipped to a belt or a shirtpocket or held in the hand. The receivers and listening accessories are inconspicuous and are worn below the ears; they do not interfere with hairstyles or the vision of patrons sitting behind. The units will be rented on a "first-come, first-served" basis and may not be reserved in advance.

According to Tony Schreiber, director of the ECU Program for the Hearing Impaired, "At this point, there are 14 units available for use each evening, but we hope to be able to obtain additional units in the near future. The $2 rental fee will help defray some of the costs for the additional units and keep the system in good operating order."

For further information about the mechanics of the system, call the ECU Program for the Hearing Impaired at 757-6729.

Sea Lore Convention Scheduled

The first annual Sea Heritage convention, for people interested in the arts and humanities of the sea, will be held in New York City on Oct. 27.

Sponsored by the Sea Heritage Foundation of Glen Oaks, N.Y., a non-profit tax-exempt organization for the preservation of sea lore, the convention will feature seminars on the collecting of sea art, antiques and antiquarian books. Other activities will include an antique show and a tour of the South Street Seaport Museum.

The foundation publishes the Sea Heritage News — including articles on such topics as sea history, sea music, maritime art, knot-tying, ship models — for distribution to its members, and offers a series of cassette tapes featuring traditional folksongs of the sea from the days of windjammers.

The foundation's latest cassette, volume nine of the sea heritage library of sailing songs, features 13 ballads.

Sea Heritage Foundation is supported by grants from charitable foundations as well as the sale of books, tapes and records, and memberships which range in grade from able-bodied seaman ($12) to a commission as Captain in the Sea Heritage fleet ($250).

For more information about the foundation or the convention write Sea Heritage Foundation, 254-26 75th St., Glen Oaks, N.Y. 11004; or call (212) 343-9575.

Pilobolus Troupe To Perform

DURHAM, N.C. — The familiar faces of several Pilobolus Dance Theater alumni including Robert Barnett, Michael Tracy and Alison Chase will be seen on stage at Duke University's Page Auditorium Thursday, Friday and Saturday when the troupe arrives to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the American Dance Festival.

The company, noted for its humor and the surprising images it creates, will be premiering an ADF 50th Anniversary Golden Commission work as well as presenting some of its greatest hits.

The ADF Golden Commission, as yet untitled, was made possible by contributions from AT&T Foundation and Paul Schupf.

Other works that will be seen over the three-night run will be "Molly's Not Dead," "Day Two," "Ciona," "A Miniature," "Walklyndon," "Stabat Mater" and "Mirage."

Pilobolus, which takes its name from a genus of phototropic fungi, has been commissioned and supported by the ADF since its inception in 1972. It has received many awards and commissions including twelve commissions from the ADF.

The group, which choreographs most of its dances collectively, has appeared on PBS programs as well as television programs in France, Denmark, Canada and Bangladesh.

Changing Usage

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio City Music Hall, famous for its Rockettes, lavish stage productions and screen offerings since its opening in December 1932, is rocketing to prominence in the business world, notes an international travel industry journal.

The Music Hall, centerpiece of the Rockefeller Center complex, also is being used in the creation of special programs, including corporate meetings, new product introductions, and multimedia presentations and productions for commerce and industry, according to The Travel Agent.

Patient Recruits Voters

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Minnie Kerzner, 74, has a mission: she wants to sign up her peers to vote in the coming November presidential election.

She is a former volunteer on the Board of Inspectors for the Democratic Club of Middle Village in the borough of Queens, New York City. As such, she knows firsthand the issues that concern the elderly, the fastest-growing segment of the population.

"For 35 years I ran affairs for the Democratic Party," says Mrs. Kerzner, who nine months ago suffered a stroke. "Now, I can't do as much."

While undergoing rehabilitation at the Jewish Institute for Geriatric Care (JIGC) in New Hyde Park, she spends a good part of her day speaking to other patients. She has been helping run a voter registration table in the lobby of the 527-bed voluntary, not-for-profit facility.

"Patients and staff must be taught that their vote counts," Roberta Salshultz, supervisor of the Activities Department, points out, adding that she hopes to "spark a light of enthusiasm for the election."

Throughout the months before the election, the Activities Department has invited candidates to speak to patients.

According to Edith Shapiro, director of the department, government statistics have shown that only 35 percent of eligible voters with income below $7,000 will vote in any presidential election. Many elderly are among those low-income earners.

Many frail elderly don't realize how important their vote is in challenging policies, adds another patient, 93-year-old Natalie Krackow.

"You are losing your rights if you don't vote," Mrs. Krackow told an elderly passerby. "Just read about the issues and you'll see why you must continue to vote — forever."

At JIGC, both short- and long-term patients meet weekly to discuss issues relevant to the elderly and their families.

"The opportunity to talk politics opened up a new world for me here," says Marian Whitestone, 77, who came to the institute for rehabilitation following a hip fracture in April.

"I have always voted," adds the former teacher, who spends many hours talking with other patients about voting.

Mayor Says Future OK

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Dayton Mayor Paul Leonard talks about his hometown as a city looking ahead with enough experience to profit from the past.

It's also a city competing for diversified industries which other manufacturing communities want.

"Diversification is the key to the future," he said. "I don't want people just to see Dayton as a factory town."

Dayton lost one-fourth of its population and 35,000 manufacturing jobs in the 1970s, but is recovering, Leonard said. Federal census figures show its population dropped from 243,000 in 1970 to 193,300 in 1980.

"There were a lot of people who were too quick to pronounce the death of a Midwestern community like Dayton," and who didn't believe the city could move in a different direction and recover, Leonard said.

Population is beginning to show signs of leveling off, and Leonard finds it heartening that "We haven't lost any major industries in the 1980s. As a matter of fact we've gained. We're not growing as fast as a Houston or a Phoenix or a San Diego, but we are recovering."

Leonard, in the third year of his first mayoral term, feels Dayton's age and experience give it an advantage over newer and faster growing sunbelt cities which are competing for new industry.

"The new communities that are undergoing terrific growth at this present time have not been through the problems that this city has seen in the 1930s, '40s and '50s. We've got the experience."

"There isn't one problem that could occur in a city in the United States that Dayton hasn't weathered. We are an old community and we have seen it all," he said, adding that the city has shown it "can profit from the good times and the bad times."

"This will always be a General Motors and manufacturing town. It will never again be a town which almost totally relies on those industries," he said.

He is quick to acknowledge the importance of the greater Dayton community's No. 1 employer, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

"Wright-Patterson Air Force Base and the defense-related industries in this community have been underestimated in their importance for years and years," he said. "They more than anything else signify technology and scientific development in this community."

Leonard, a 40-year-old bachelor who has held elected office almost 11 years, is puzzled by his popularity.

New Episodes Added To PBS Reading Series For Children

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A familiar cry will beckon young television viewers for a second summer season beginning July 16: "Take a look! It's in a book! 'The Reading Rainbow!'"

"Reading Rainbow," one of television's most charming and effective efforts to inspire children to read, premiered last summer on public television with 15 episodes. This summer, the original 15 will be repeated, and five new episodes have been added — each with the same winning format, starring LeVar Burton, the young actor who achieved fame as Kunta Kinte, the proud African in "Roots."

Each episode will be broadcast as many as three times a day by some PBS stations. After the first five shows have run, the original 15 episodes will be broadcast.

"Reading Rainbow" urges young viewers to read, read, and read some more with a zeal that makes other TV reading pitches seem half-hearted. Yet "Reading Rainbow" manages almost miraculously to remain easygoing, never preachy.

It's no accident that the program is shown in the summer. The aim is to encourage youngsters to fill those non-school months with books.

For uninitiated children and parents who missed the series last year, the programs run a predictable course. Each offers a dramatic reading of a featured book, actively engages children in exploring the book's themes, and winds up with children giving quick reviews of books they've read with similar themes.

The first new episode features "Hot-Air Henry" by Mary Calhoun, about a cat named Henry who takes an unexpected solo flight on a hot-air balloon. The July 17 program is about "Simon's Book" by Henrik Drescher, a story of how a young boy's drawings come to life.

"Ox-Cart Man," the episode scheduled for July 18 based on poet Donald Hall's charming book about life in colonial America, opens with Burton driving through snow-lined New England and arriving at Old Sturbridge Village, the restored colonial village that is a leading tourist attraction in Massachusetts.

When his car stalls in front of the village gate, Burton hitches a ride on a real ox cart and begins to read Hall's book. And so do we — as actor Lorne Greene narrates the book accompanied by still-life illustrations. We learn that life in colonial America seemed simpler, and that people felt closer to each other and more in control of their lives because so much of their immediate environment — their clothes, food, shelter — was made with their own hands.

Setting the program in Sturbridge Village is a clever way to bridge 300 years and bring the themes of "Ox-Cart Man" to life. Burton tours the village and learns how to barter and how oxen are trained, and helps a blacksmith forge a door handle. The show concludes with several youngsters reviewing "Round Trip," by Ann Jonas, "A Winter Place," by Ruth Jaffe Radin and "Wagon Wheels," by Barbara Brenner — books with pioneering themes similar to "Ox-Cart Man."

The remaining new programs this summer season are "Mystery on

NBC Leads Nielsen Rating But '20-20' Is Top Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's "20-20" newsmagazine, featuring a report on serial murderers, was last week's most-watched show, but NBC took network honors in the prime-time ratings.

NBC, with an overall A.C. Nielsen Co. rating of 11.0 and no shows among the top five for the week ended July 8, squeaked past CBS, which had a 10.9 rating. ABC, represented among the top 10 only by "20-20" and 10th-place "Webster," lagged with 10.1.

The networks say that means that in an average prime-time minute, 11 percent of the nation's 83.8 million television households were tuned to NBC, 10.9 percent to CBS and 10.1 percent to ABC.

It was NBC's second straight week on top, and its fourth win or first-place tie in six weeks.

With its Thursday night competition consisting of series reruns, ABC's "20-20" has spent most of the summer in or near the top 10. But network officials said they couldn't remember the last time the show was No. 1.

The main feature on the July 5 "20-20" was a report on serial murderers, including an interview with Henry Lucas, the drifter who has confessed to hundreds of killings.

CBS picked up the next four slots with reruns of "Cagney and Lacey," second place; "Simon & Simon," third; "Trapper John, M.D.," fourth; and "Magnum, P.I.," fifth.

CBS also had the only other non-rerun in the top 10, "60 Minutes" at No. 9. In the second 10, CBS' pre-Fourth of July special, "Salute to Lady Liberty," was the sole first-run show, in 15th place.

NBC's top 10 entries were "Remington Steele," sixth; the television movie "Children of Divorce" and "Hill Street Blues" in a tie for seventh; and "The A-Team," tied for 10th with ABC's "Webster."

Last place went to NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA" — a newsmagazine that scored a scant 3.6 in the second week of a trial run. Of the bottom five, only CBS' "Mama Malone" was a rerun.

The five lowest-rated shows, in descending order, were: "Crossroads," CBS; "America at the Olympics," CBS, and "The ABC Comedy Special: Earthlings," (tie); "Mama Malone," CBS; and "Summer Sunday, USA," NBC.

There was little change in the network evening news figures. "CBS Evening News" maintained first place with a 9.3 rating, "NBC Nightly News" was next with 8.3 and ABC was third with 8.1.

Here are the week's top 20 programs:

1. "20-20," ABC, a rating of 16.7 or 14 million households.
2. "Cagney and Lacey," CBS, 16.3 or 13.7 million.
3. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 16.1 or 13.5 million.
4. "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS, 15.2 or 12.7 million.

5. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 14.9 or 12.5 million.

6. "Remington Steele," NBC, 14.5 or 12.2 million.

7. Tie—"Children of Divorce," NBC, 14.4 or 12.1 million.

7. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 14.4 or 12.1 million.

9. "60 Minutes," CBS, 14.2 or 11.9 million.

10. Tie—"The A-Team," NBC, 13.9 or 11.6 million.

10. "Webster," ABC, 13.9 or 11.6 million.

12. "Newhart," CBS, 13.8 or 11.6 million.

13. Tie—"Scarecrow and Mrs. King," CBS, 13.3 or 11.1 million.

13. "One Day at a Time," CBS, 13.3 or 11.1 million.

15. "Salute to Lady Liberty," CBS, 13.1 or 11 million.

16. Tie (three-way)—"Riptide," NBC, 12.6 or 10.6 million.

16. "Hart to Hart," ABC, 12.6 or 10.6 million.

16. "Benson," ABC, 12.6 or 10.6 million.

19. Tie—"Diff'rent Strokes," NBC, 12.4 or 10.4 million.

19. "Silver Spoons," NBC, 12.4 or 10.4 million.

Center Serves As Computer Clearing House For Organs

By MARK LAZENBY
 RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — For transplant patients seeking human organs that will thrive in their bodies, all roads lead to Richmond. Behind sleek glass doors in the city's downtown business district beats the heart and hardware of the United Network for Organ Sharing — UNOS — the nation's centralized computer system for organ sharing.

"Virtually every tissue transplant organization is on this system," said Dan Ferree, manager of The Organ Center, an agency funded with federal grants based with UNOS. The center collects data needed for tissue placement — such as the minimum acceptance criteria of hospitals seeking organs. The center also arranges immediate transportation of organs through its airline computer terminals and helps hospitals requesting assistance.

The computer is being moved to downtown Richmond in a modern, glassed-in suite for two reasons: to make room for planned expansions in data capacity and to ensure a consistent flow of electricity.

UNOS has operated 24 hours a day near the city's Fan District, where electrical service is not as consistent, according to the system's computer specialist, Rick Colyer.

Ferree doesn't like to think about 40-hour workdays, but he remembers the days before UNOS with weary clarity. He is a former organ transplant coordinator at Florida Hospital in Orlando.

Ferree remembers the days when matching a human organ with a donor whose genetic makeup could accept it and arranging transportation between the points on short notice was a grueling task that often meant nights without sleep.

Hospitals lacked the coordinated exchange of data, he said, a void that demanded long hours on the telephone and equally grueling hours of transportation.

"That system itself worked surprisingly well," said Ferree. "But you'd call until you found someone who accepted the organ."

Doctors for a kidney patient in Birmingham, Ala., might find the ideal donation from an accident victim in St. Louis, but not without time and expense.

With UNOS, doctors with a kidney can punch in its exact genetic makeup, its condition, the number of arteries and lymph nodes connected and the age of its donor. In seconds they can have a list of potential recipients whose genetic needs parallel those specifications.

The bulk of transplants made in America are kidneys, because patients are able to be kept alive by dialysis, and the federal government provides liberal funding, Ferree said.

That funding in the early 1970s gave rise to dramatic increases in the number of transplants, Ferree said, and enhanced the need for centralization.

The computerized matching service was started in 1975 by the Southeastern Organ Procurement Foundation, the largest of several geographic groupings of transplant centers pooling information. The organization, about 45 southeastern hospitals, is based in Richmond.

The system grew with data contributions from other regions and in 1979, the organization purchased its computer equipment. Today about 165 hospitals across the country are linked with the system, which operates around the clock.

Demand for transplants, said computer systems analyst Rick Colyer, "happens like popcorn."

Today about 5,000 to 6,000 transplants are performed annually. About 96 percent of people who need kidneys are in the computer system.

UNOS also keeps information on other organs, such as livers, but kidneys remain the high demand item.

Ohio College Has Degree For Equestrian Program

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — Classrooms in the biggest part of Findlay College tend to be dusty and smell like horses, but the 70 students in an equestrian studies program couldn't imagine it any other way.

The college has offered an equestrian studies program since 1975. It recently bought a 70-acre farm nearby which had hosted the program since the beginning.

"Now that we actually own the property, a lot of people associated with the college feel more comfortable coming out here," said Jo Gellert, an administrative assistant who doubles as barn manager, tractor driver and counselor.

Mrs. Gellert's husband directs the equestrian studies program, one of about 15 nationwide that offers a degree program.

"We've got one of the largest indoor training arenas around ... but when you get 30 kids all going in different directions at once, you wish it was bigger," she said.

Mrs. Gellert said equestrian studies was no snap course.

"We're here to produce people for the horse industry," she said. "It's not a place for someone to come to learn to ride. They must have some sort of horse background."

A year in the program costs about $10,000, including room and board.

"It's not an easy program. You have got to be dedicated," she said. "A dropout rate of 10 percent in the first year is not unusual."

Women outnumber men in the program about 10 to one, though equestrian studies students usually stick together because of their common interest, Mrs. Gellert said. "One definition of true love is whether or not your boyfriend will help you clean stalls," she said.

Such maintenance chores are a daily task for students in all stages of the curriculum. Each student has up to five horses under his or her care in a semester.

The college owns some trained horses, but most of the animals are privately owned and brought to the college to be broken. Students in advanced classes are encouraged to bring their own horses in for training.

"You can keep a business going that way. I rode five horses this semester and I've had up to seven before," said Deborah Lynn Ward, a senior from Carrollton, Ohio. Miss Ward said she would probably work for a horse trainer in Minnesota when she graduates.

Jobs are plentiful in the horse industry, Mrs. Gellert said. "The horse industry itself is growing, primarily for recreation. I have more jobs than I have students."

The college has three full-time riding instructors, a barn manager, a blacksmith and a farm manager. There is room for up to 300 horses with about 230 on hand most of the time.

Study Links Alcohol Base To Hormones

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Plant hormones in ingredients used to make liquor and other alcoholic beverages could be acting like human female sex hormones on the drinker's body, an effect long attributed to the alcohol, a researcher says.

Judith Gavaler, a research associate at the University of Pittsburgh, said studies with rats show that so-called "phyto-estrogens" in wheat, corn, rice or hops used to make liquor and beer have potential for causing biological effects similar to female hormones.

"The animal data, although preliminary, indicates that exposure to phyto-estrogens causes an estrogen effect," she said in an interview. If it works the same way in people, then many of the effects long attributed to the alcohol itself may be caused by phyto-estrogens.

Chronic use of alcohol, known as ethanol in its pure form, is associated with impotence and sterility in men, she said. A few impubes even develop such "feminine" characteristics as slightly enlarged breasts.

Women who consume a lot of alcohol can experience reproductive dysfunction and early menopause, and are at increased risk of certain types of breast cancer.

Similar effects could be caused by abnormal doses of estrogens, but few researchers have looked at other ingredients in alcoholic beverages because ethanol is the most obvious active substance, Ms. Gavaler told a seminar sponsored by the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

Women who consume the equivalent of four mixed drinks daily statistically are at a higher risk of developing breast cancer, she said, and some of these cancers are linked to estrogen exposure. Removal of the ovaries, the chief source of estrogen, sometimes is used as a treatment for estrogen-dependent cancer.

Research has not proved that alcohol or phyto-estrogens cause breast cancer, she added, but it does suggest that these substances could have a role in the disease.

Three phyto-estrogens have been found in alcoholic beverages and all three — beta-sitosterol, biochanin-A and genistein — have been identified in some breast cancer tissue, she said.

To test the effects of alcoholic beverages without the alcohol, Ms. Gavaler and colleagues removed the ethanol from bourbon and mixed the non-alcoholic bourbon into the daily drinking water of female rats that had their ovaries removed.

Since the animals no longer had their major source of estrogen, the researchers looked for any estrogen-linked responses. They found that the uterus and fallopian tubes of each of these rats, which shrink in the absence of estrogen, increased in weight after exposure to the special bourbon.

Because of results like this, she said, future studies looking at alcohol and disease will have to separate the effects of ethanol from those of the phyto-estrogens.

Ms. Gavaler said humans are exposed to phyto-estrogens from many sources, including from grains, vegetables and vegetable oils from peanuts, olives, soybeans, corn and other plants.

"I suggest that we are constantly exposed to phyto-estrogens, but that it is not necessarily bad," she said.

Both estrogens and alcoholic beverages are known to increase blood levels of a type of cholesterol that seems to protect against heart disease. These increases in high-density lipoprotein cholesterol may stem from phyto-estrogen exposure, she said.

Thinner Man Sadder; Lost Hope, Wife

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — A man who cut his weight from 400 pounds to 200 pounds says he also lost his ambition, drive, hope — and his marriage — and wouldn't diet again.

"People see me as the guy who has everything," said Chuck Grachanin, who lives on a farm outside New Castle, Pa. "But I really don't have what I want: happiness."

Eight years ago, exercise for Grachanin was getting up from in front of the television to go to the kitchen for a sandwich. Today, he runs five miles daily, works out three times a week and enters male beauty pageants.

"Before I started the diet, I never really thought of myself as fat," he said. "But someone thought my wife was my daughter, and she wanted to go dancing and do things I really didn't think I could do fat."

Grachanin lost the weight in 316 days, in the six months before his 10-year high school reunion.

"When I went to the reunion, I was about 200 pounds thinner than anyone in my class had ever seen me," he told The Youngstown Vindicator in a recent interview. "And no one recognized me."

But afterwards, Grachanin's personality changed, because of the letdown of achieving his lifetime goal of being slender.

"I emotionally died and was physically reborn," he said. "I don't feel like there is that much else that I want to do."

"And the diet itself cost him his marriage."

"I became so obsessed with myself and losing weight that I became numb to everything else," he said. "I was truly obsessed with everything I ate and what I did so that I forgot about everything else."

Record Harvest
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are rapidly harvesting what new government figures show to be the third-largest winter wheat crop in U.S. history, a huge output that will add to the nation's stockpile and put further downward pressure on grain prices.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the days before the current House and Senate recess.

HOUSE

DEBT — By a vote of 208 for and 202 against, the House passed a bill (HR 5953) raising the government's legal borrowing limit by $53 billion, to $1,573 billion or $1.57 trillion. The new ceiling will hold through August. The Senate also approved the measure, but refused to hold a record vote on the politically embarrassing issue.

Debate revealed that interest on the national debt will cost taxpayers $164.5 billion next fiscal year, and that the agency that manages the debt has 2,500 employees and an annual budget of $196 million.

Supporter Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., said "if we want to cut down federal spending we should do that before the debts are incurred."

Opponent George Miller, D-Calif., called it "obligatory" to reject the bill "if the House is going to stand up for reducing our outrageous national deficit ..."

Members voting yes wanted to raise the national debt ceiling.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, D-4; Charles Rose, D-7; James Broyhill, R-10, and James Clarke, D-11.

Those voting no were Tim Valentine, D-2; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Britt, D-6, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Rep. James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

EX-PRESIDENTS — By a vote of 180 for and 232 against, the House rejected an amendment to cut $890,000 from the $1.17 million appropriation for supporting former presidents Carter, Ford and Nixon in fiscal 1985. The outlay covers their $83,000 pensions, Secret Service protection, staff allowances and other expenses.

The vote occurred during debate on HR 5798, later sent to the Senate. On a separate vote, the House cut the $1.17 million figure by $147,000.

Sponsor Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., noted that former presidents can parlay their government experience into huge lecture, book and corporate fees. "If you are making $1 million a year, you ought to at least be able to pay your secretary ... your office rent," he said.

Opponent Silvio Conte, R-Mass., told Jacobs that "fighting for the little guy, toppling the kings of our day, makes great press" but overlooks the legitimate expenses faced by Carter, Ford and Nixon as former chiefs of state.

Members voting no were opposed to the proposed 76 percent cut in 1985 outlays for former presidents.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill and Clarke.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET — The House approved, 253 for and 157 against, the conference report on a bill (HR 5753) appropriating $1.55 billion to run the House, Senate and congressional agencies in fiscal 1985.

Conspicuously missing was a 2 percent across-the-board cut the House had inflicted the first time it considered the bill. This was knocked out by the Senate (below) and replaced by lesser cuts. The bill increases House and Senate spending for salaries, travel, perks and other congressional expenses by $77 million over 1984 levels. Since 1970, Congress has quadrupled spending on itself.

Supporter Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., said the House should refrain from "self-flagellation" over a bill that represents only a tiny fraction of total federal spending.

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said defenders were using "some-what deceptive" arithmetic in justifying the bill as fiscally responsible.

Members voting yes favored a $1.55 billion 1985 budget for congressional operations.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Those voting no were Valentine, James Martin and Broyhill.

SENATE

CUT — The Senate voted, 39 for and 36 against, to eliminate a House-approved 2 percent across-the-board cut in the fiscal 1985 legislative branch budget. As later signed into law, the bill (HR 5753) raises spending for the House, Senate and congressional agencies by 5 percent over 1984 levels, to $1.55 billion.

Jake Garn, R-Utah, said he favors item-by-item spending cuts rather than an indiscriminate across-the-board approach.

Opponent Don Nickles, R-Okla., said: "For crying out loud, people have been telling us to get our house in order ... we have to make some sacrifice ourselves if we are going to ask others to make sacrifices as well."

Senators voting yes were opposed to a 2 percent across-the-board cut in the legislative branch budget.

North Carolina Sen. John East, R, voted no. Sen. Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

DRINKING — By a vote of 81 for and 16 against, the Senate approved legislation that pressures states to raise their minimum drinking age to 21 years. States not complying by 1987 stand to lose 5 percent of their federal highway money in fiscal 1987 and 10 percent in fiscal 1988.

The provision was attached to HR 4616, which was headed for the White House and President Reagan's signature. The bill also provides financial incentives to encourage states to enact mandatory sentencing of drunk drivers.

Supporter Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said the higher drinking age will "help put an end to the carnage on our nation's highways."

Calling the legislation "coercion and blackmail by the central government," opponent Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said "I believe it to be repugnant to the Constitution, inconsistent with sound principles of federalism, and not in the best interest of our country."

Senators voting yes wanted states to set 21 as their minimum drinking age. North Carolina senators East and Helms both voted yes.

SUBSTITUTE — By a vote of 35 for and 62 against, the Senate rejected an attempt to water-down legislation (above) to bring about a nationwide minimum drinking age of 21 years.

The substitute proposed that financial incentives, rather than penalties, be used to encourage compliance by states. And it enabled states to keep lower drinking ages as well as full federal highway funding if they significantly cut traffic deaths by other means.

Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who supported the substitute, said the use of federal penalties "raises serious constitutional questions about states' rights in our federal system."

Opponent Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said adoption of the substitute would mean "business as usual" on the nation's highways.

Senators voting yes wanted to soften legislation to bring about 21 years as the legal drinking age in all states.

East voted yes. Helms voted no.

Quacks Increasing

PEKING (AP) — Producers and sellers of quack medicines are increasing so rapidly that the Communist government has decided to prosecute them, the China Daily reported.

The official English-language newspaper said a new law, providing heavy penalties, will supercede 1978 regulations that provide loose restrictions on pharmaceutical purity and do not specify punishments for violators.

Priest Has Extra Ace In Sleeve

By ANDREW KATELL
Associated Press Writer
LIMESTONE, W.Va. (AP) — Demetrios Serfes spends most of his time saving souls at St. Xenia's Russian Orthodox Church, but when the siren sounds at the Limestone Volunteer Fire Department, his work takes a more worldly form.

Serfes, 38, sheds his priest's cap and robe, fetches his firefighter's hat and jacket from the trunk of his car and heads up a winding road to the firehouse a few hundred yards away.

"It could happen four times a week at any time of the night — most fires seem to occur after midnight," he says.

The unpredictability can cause problems for Serfes, such as the time the siren blared on Holy Friday this year.

"We were having a service. At 7:30, the alarm rings and everybody looked at me and asked if I was leaving."

Serfes opted to stay with the matter at hand and pray that his fellow firefighters would be able to handle the situation on their own. But when he is available, Serfes finds himself helping with more than just a firehose and ladder.

"The firemen seem to feel very secure when I'm with them. I'm glad, 'cause it is a very dangerous situation. They always turn to me and say, 'Oh father, please pray.'"

The faith of his colleagues did not come easily, however. Most of them, Lutheran miners and farmers, had never heard of the Russian Orthodox Church and also were skeptical of unfamiliar religions because of the Krishna devotees who had founded a massive community 1 1/2 miles away.

"When I went there they didn't know who I was. Then they got to know me. They said, 'What is this — another cult? Are you a Communist?'"

But his warm personality and humor soon won over the suspecting firemen. "They even elected me secretary," he said, flashing a broad smile.

Adding to the confusion about Serfes is his appearance. The Lowell, Mass., native — he speaks with a New England accent — sports a 5-inch-long black beard and mustache that, when accompanied by jeans and cowboy boots, make him look more like a 1960s hippie than an Orthodox priest.

Once in a local supermarket, upon seeing Serfes in his long robe and cross around his neck, a bewildered child yelled, "Look Ma, there's Jesus Christ!"

But Serfes is not deterred by confusion or skepticism.

When he came to Limestone three years ago there was no church — just a tiny trailer where he lived and conducted services.

"I just moved all the furniture out," he said as he pointed around the trailer adorned with icons and photographs of other bearded priests.

Serfes channeled his energy into getting a church built on donated land next to his trailer. The original nine members — the count is now 35 — sought construction bids but the cost was too great.

"We had a meeting and decided to do it ourselves. A lot of people said, 'You can't do it.' But we had a lot of faith."

Three months and $22,000 later, a tiny blue and white wooden building with a gold onion dome was standing on the site, dwarfed by the surrounding hills. Dozens of tourists drive by on their way to the Krishna community and its ornate Palace of Gold, one of the state's biggest tourist attractions. Serfes proudly shows them around his own holy land.

"Usually they screech the brakes when they round the bend and see this. I'm happy that they're interested," he says.

And if one doubts that this son of an ice cream salesman firmly believes in his God, he says he has proof. He cites his high success rate at fighting fires.

"Since I've been here, no one has died. I consider that a blessing from God — and St. Xenia helped, too."

The namesake of the church, he notes, was known for working miracles — including helping people put out fires.

Border Exchange

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany and France will eliminate routine customs and passport checks at their border for Common Market citizens beginning next week, the Bonn government announced.

Citizens of the 10 Common Market countries who show a special card will be "waved through" border checkpoints on the French-West German frontier and will not have to stop. Bonn government spokesman Peter Boenisch told a news conference.

The announcement came after representatives of the two countries agreed on details of an accord drafted by the West German and French governments in May to relax border controls, Boenisch said.

Some Convention Goers Scraping For Funds

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Allison Butolth of Middlebury, Vt., worked for Gary Hart's presidential campaign for five months and became a delegate to the Democratic National Convention.
Now, she may be too broke to get to San Francisco to cast a vote for her candidate.
Shirley Warren of Milwaukee, Wis., a mother of three, campaigned hard for the Rev. Jesse Jackson and was elected a delegate.
With less than a week to go before the convention opens, Ms. Warren doubts that she can raise the money to pay for the trip to California.
Minton Brooks, also a Jackson delegate from Milwaukee, said he will somehow scrape together the money to attend, but adds: "I'll just be broke the rest of the year."

Brooks said the $170-per-night cost of the hotel where the Wisconsin delegation is staying is by itself enough to keep some delegates home. "That's outrageous," he said.
A significant number of the delegates to the Democratic convention simply cannot afford the airfare, hotels, food and other expenses associated with choosing their party's presidential nominee.
Hart campaign official Carol Casey said at least 50 of the senator's delegates are having trouble scraping together the cash to finance a five-day trip to one of the most expensive cities in the country.

"All our delegates are not Yuppies," Ms. Casey said, referring to the young urban professionals who formed the core of Hart's supporters. "They are not as upwardly mobile as we would like them to be, particularly the students."
"They all thought how wonderful it would be to go to a national convention and did not realize how expensive it would be."
She said the Hart campaign, itself in debt by well over $2 million, is trying to provide $200 each for hard-pressed delegates.
No estimate was available from the campaigns of Walter F. Mondale or Jackson on how many of their delegates are finding it hard to finance the trip to San Francisco.
But an estimated 550 Mondale delegates are labor union members whose costs are all or partially subsidized by the unions to which they belong.
Delegates who are members of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, for example, will be fully reimbursed for their airfare, six days in a hotel, convention fees plus $50 a day for expenses.
Similarly, delegates who are members of the American Federal of State, County and Municipal Employees Union, including a handful of Hart and Jackson supporters, will be reimbursed for expenses.

In contrast, Jackson delegate Brooks said he believes a large number of his candidate's delegates are financially pinched.
"It's really going to be difficult because just by the nature of the Jackson following, they are those with the least income," he said.
Ann Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee, said in an interview that under the national Democratic charter, state parties are required to make some effort to raise funds for under-financed delegates.
She said many delegates are doubling up in hotel rooms, and low-income housing is being made available for those who would otherwise have no place to stay.

But the Democratic Party itself is near broke. So, while some states have tried to help, many others have not.
In Vermont, for example, Ms. Butolth said she was told the party was able to help only black or other racial minority delegates.
After borrowing money from her brother to pay for a plane ticket, she has raised $94 toward the cost of staying in San Francisco, where many hotels begin at daily rates of $100.
Most of the $94 came from other Hart supporters.
"Right now, I am sort of tapped out," she said, "I don't really think it's fair that if you're rich enough to go you go, if not, you don't. Everybody should be able to participate."

At the time she decided to run as a Hart delegate, Ms. Butolth said she did not think about the costs of attending the convention.
"I thought it would be a group effort," she said. Ms. Warren said the Democratic Party in Wisconsin has promised to buy her a plane ticket and provide some help toward hotel costs, but it is not enough.
"I don't think it's fair that we go to the convention as second class citizens," she said in an interview.
Had she known of the cost of attending the convention, she said, "I would not have run as a delegate."

Florida Oldtimers Look At Early Days

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
TASMANIA, Fla. (AP) — It might be said that the only similarity between the island of Tasmania and this central Florida flatlands area given its name by a seafaring man is the eucalyptus tree.

Tasmania, the island, is off the southeastern corner of Australia and is famous as a vacationland. Florida's Tasmania flourished a century ago during the homesteading days and became a part of the state's cattle ranges.

What was loosely referred to as Tasmania is about 20 miles due west of Lake Okechobee in Glades County. These days, most of the land is covered with palmetto, scrub pine and eucalyptus. Homes are few and far apart — simple one-story structures with shade trees nearby, some flower beds, vegetable patches, an idle tractor and herds of cattle basking in the midday sun.

In one of these homes off County Road 731 live Lula and Sam Farabee — she's 82 and he's 89. Both have spent their lives around Tasmania.

"Years ago I visited other states, but I'm not fond of mountains," Farabee says, sitting on the front porch during a visit with old friends. "I always liked the level land."

A new acquaintance asks Farabee how he spends his sunset years. A suggestion he might be watching a lot of television causes him to chuckle.

"I'm busy all the time — fixing a fence and taking care of the place. There's always something to do."

There has been little idle time in the lives of the dwindling number of oldtimers remaining around Tasmania. Their roots here began in 1862 when Congress passed the Homestead Act.

The community grew to several hundred people and spread over miles, each homestead connected by a dirt path or road. Its center, recalls Farabee, was a country store and post office and a one-room schoolhouse.

"They came from everywhere," says Joe Nolan, tall and rangy at 86. "They got 40, 80 or 160 acres and tried to farm it for a living."

Nolan has been a cowboy all his life. He prefers to call himself a wrangler or rangerider. He's also a professional hunter and has served as a deputy sheriff.

Despite his age and a "bad leg," Nolan keeps four horses and still rides. His appearance reflects a lifetime on the range — tanned, leather-like skin, the ever-present cowboy hat, straight hair hanging down the back of his neck and a drawing speech.

The two men remember when the area was called "Fisheating Creek" for the narrow waterway that cuts through this portion of the state.

In 1916, it was time for a change. One resident, who is remembered only as "Captain Johnson," had been a ship's captain until he retired here. Of all the places in the world he had visited, Nolan says, Tasmania intrigued him most. Homesteaders approved a petition and the place became Tasmania.

As the United States prepared to enter World War I, Tasmania's demise began — caused, in part, by a lack of good roads linking the farming community with busy Florida cities. Young men left to fight in the war and never returned. Tasmania became a ghost town.

Tom Gaskins is another fixture in the area. In the Depression years, he moved from Arcadia to the northwest to Palmdale several miles from here. He still operates his Cypress Knee Museum on U.S. 27 and holds a patent on the natural wood sculptures he sells.

At 75, he remains in good health, rarely wears shoes and runs two miles each morning.

When Farabee, Nolan and Gaskins get together, the conversation among them becomes a series of, "Do you remember...?"

But the most common subject of discussion is wild turkeys, prevalent around Tasmania. All three are skilled hunters, while Gaskins is world famous for the turkey-callers he makes.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's oncoming full moon gives you a big chance to get all of your worldly and practical affairs on a secure structure; this is aided by those in position of prominence.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good day to contact the most influential persons of your acquaintance and gain their support so you can reach your goals faster.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be alert to the opportunities around you so that you can advance in your career. Making new contacts will add to your knowledge.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Concentrate on the finest way to add to present income and property and have a more secure foundation to build for the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Stop being nervous and be more cooperative with your partners and get fine results now. Make the evening a happy one.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You like to think big and get into magnanimous projects, but today is best for handling details thereof. Relax tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on the cost of any entertainment you want to indulge in and then you can make the right arrangements for such.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Bring to mind the promises made to kin and be sure to keep them in a most meticulous way. Forget moochers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Think over just what you want to say to others and then do so in a plain and concise manner, be it orally or in writing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can solve practical and financial problems very well, so put your mind to it early and do so conscientiously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do some clever angling and gain those personal wishes that are yours, so concentrate on own affairs exclusively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are naturally gregarious but now should concentrate on the practical and building up your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to the advice of a friend who means well, but accept only the best of such. Stop all that daydreaming.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be capable of knowing what the needs and desires of the public in general are and would do very well in any capacity that will serve said public. One who will appeal to persons in very high brackets. Teach during childhood not to boss playmates around but to be more cooperative.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Miscarriage
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick says a U.N. tribunal's refusal to restore the U.N. job of Soviet defector Vladimir Yakimetz was "a serious miscarriage of justice." The three-member tribunal, with representatives from Hungary, India and Britain, denied a petition for Yakimetz' continued employment at the United Nations. He was granted political asylum in the United States in February 1983 and dismissed from his U.N. job as economic program planner when his five-year contract expired last December.

Kroger now redeems all Food & Drug Store Coupons!

1. Check all the food & drug store ads in your Greenville newspaper and in your mail this week.
2. Clip all item and price coupons you want from those ads.
3. Bring all the coupons to Kroger Sav-on regardless whose ad the coupons are from.

• We ask that you meet all requirements as stated in each ad or coupon, i.e. Limit one with $10 or more purchase, etc.
• If we don't have the brands named in your coupons we will substitute the most comparable brands available.
• We reserve the right to limit quantities.
• We will continue to redeem manufacturers coupons at face value.
