THE CHOICE — Rep. Mondale Picks Woman

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, an establishment Democrat ready to break with tradition, was poised today to announce his choice of a woman — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York — as his vice presidential running mate, campaign aides said.

The announcement was set for noon CDT at the Minnesota state capitol, four days before the Democratic National Convention was convening in San Francisco.

"If selected, I will work very hard for the campaign," Ms. Ferraro told reporters before a Wednesday night speech in San Francisco. She was positively buoyant, but gave no verbal hint of her selection, except to say, "I am glad there is no longer a sign 'White Males Only Need Apply.' It's our time folks."

Mondale's press secretary, Maxine Isaacs, confirmed that Mondale's vice presidential choice arrived early this morning at Mondale's home in North Oaks. Later, campaign sources said Ms. Ferraro had flown from California to Minnesota in a private jet, arriving around dawn.

Without naming Ms. Ferraro, Ms. Isaacs said the assumed vice presidential nominee's family would arrive later in the morning.

If the convention delegates confirm Mondale's choice, Ms. Ferraro would become the first woman vice presidential candidate on a major party ticket. She represents a blue-collar district of Queens in New York.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who campaigned against Mondale in the primaries, said Mondale's apparent decision to select Ms. Ferraro is "a step in the right direction and as far as I'm concerned, it's a victory for the 'rainbow coalition.'" Jackson had dubbed his own campaign the "Rainbow Coalition."

"We've now moved a step closer to realizing a new dream in the Democratic Party," Jackson said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show. "I must say, overall, I'm quite excited about this new direction."

In New York, John Zaccaro, Ms. Ferraro's husband, said his wife was "terrific," and added: "We're going to do what we have to win."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who had endorsed Ms. Ferraro for the ticket, called the New York congresswoman "a great choice." In an interview from Massachusetts, O'Neill said, "I think she'll be a great asset ... to all of us who are running on the Democratic Party (ticket) for office across the nation."

A Ferraro partisan had suggested that Mondale seemed ready to take a gamble with his vice presidential choice.

Hearing Backs Blue Law

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

More than two-thirds of the people attending Tuesday night's public hearing at City Hall on Greenville's Blue Law indicated by a show of hands that they were opposed to changing or repealing the existing law.

Of the crowd of approximately 85 people, 28 spoke — 7 for repeal and 21 against — and all but two of the 18 local store owners or managers in attendance said they were in favor of keeping the Blue Law as is.

Carolina East Mall Manager Lou Canakes, who spoke in favor of the current Blue Law, told the members of the City Council that repealing blue laws in other areas of North Carolina has not increased store revenues. "While revenues may have been increased by repeal in other states, that has not been the case in North Carolina. All repeal has done in North Carolina is to drive up overheads," he said.

Canakes added that the only time of year Greenville stores could possibly realize a profit from Sunday sales would be during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Local merchants and store managers in attendance concurring with Canakes included: Jesse Moye of White Concrete; Carl Carlson, Lowes; Bill Hopper, J.C. Penney; Joe Packwoods, Sears; Richard H. Crapps, South Roanoke Baptist Association and local merchant; Herman Johnson, K-Mart; Bill Jones, Rose's; Frank Steinbeck, Steinbeck's; Herb Wilkerson, Globe Hardware; John Shannonhouse, White's Stores; Don Edwards, president Downtown Greenville Association and area merchant; Ray Craft, Computerland; Banks Cozart, Cozart's Auto Supply, and Doug Locklear, Nichols Discount City.

Moye, who identified himself first and foremost as a Christian, told the council that "Sunday is a day of spiritual refreshment and rehabilitation. Sunday is a day for physical rest as well ... and I would actually like to see the Blue Law stiffened," he said.

Packwoods, manager of Sears at Carolina East Mall and formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, said he has been in cities where blue laws have been repealed and that opening stores on Sundays did not increase profits. "What actually happened is that administration became more difficult and overheads grew after an initial burst of interest on the part of shoppers."

Jones, manager of Rose's, also said he would like to see the law stay as it is. "The solidarity of our families needs to be protected. If I had to work on Sundays, sure I could take another day off during the week, but then my kids would be at school and I wouldn't have any time to spend with them," he said.

According to Edwards, the Downtown Greenville Association voted unanimously to recommend retention of the Blue Law. "All 42 of our members said if the law was (Please turn to page 16)

Audit Shows $791,000 Error

The East Carolina University Financial Audit Report for the year ended June 30, 1983, reveals a $791,607 error in billing by Pitt County Memorial Hospital to the ECU School of Medicine which has since been corrected.

The auditors reported that an examination of payments to the hospital in connection with the School of Medicine Teaching Cost Agreement revealed overpayments totaling $298,743. This finding was discovered by examining all payment in excess of $7,000, which amounted to 59 percent of the total dollar amount of such reimbursements and 5.4 percent of the total number of patients, the report said.

School of Medicine employees then examined the remaining payments and discovered additional overpayments totaling $492,864.

The overpayments reportedly took place between July 1, 1982, and Dec. 31, 1983.

Dr. William Laupus, school of medicine dean, contacted this morning, said, "As large as the amount seems, these apparently were relatively routine billings that were made to the medical school that should have been made to other third-party payers. The error was discovered last March and refunding was complete by late May.

"Overpayments and underpayments go on all the time and there is a constant shifting of funds between the hospital and the medical school."

The money recovered was deposited in the current operations fund of the medical school as designated by the Office of State Budget and Management.

Warren McRoy, the hospital's chief financial officer until June 1, acknowledged that the authorization to repay the medical school had been made.

But McRoy termed the overpayments "a gray area ... not black and white. It was their (the state auditor's) interpretation."

McRoy said "the final results come out the same anyway. The medical school has about $3½ million to pay to the hospital. The hospital has more bills than that anyway."

Fred Brown, senior vice president at PCMH said "we work with the medical school very closely. When tracking as many patients as we do through the system," errors can occur. "When they are discovered, they are paid back."

"We are continuously auditing, reviewing, passing money back and forth."

"It's a monstrous fluid system," Brown suggested.

University officials said the audit report was received about two weeks ago from the office of the state auditor.

RECONNECTION FEE ASSISTANCE

The United Way, through its member agency, the Red Cross, is prepared to pay the telephone reconnection fee for March 28 tornado victims. Lou Folger, United Way director, said. United Way officers became aware through reading a recent Hotline item that the phone company did not waive the reconnection fee for tornado victims as some other utilities did. Folger suggests that any tornado victim who found paying a telephone reconnection fee a hardship bring bills or receipts for this service to the Red Cross office, 221 Cotanche Street, Greenville. Call the Red Cross, 752-4222, for more information and to determine a good time to go in.

Deputy Appealing Beating Conviction

A Pitt County deputy sheriff was found guilty of simple assault in District Court here Wednesday in connection with the beating of a teen-ager following a Feb. 14 auto chase through Greenville.

Deputy Jimmy Evans was found guilty and given a 30-day jail sentence by Judge William A. Creech of Wake County. However, Evans gave notice of appeal of the conviction to Superior Court.

The deputy was charged in March with assaulting 15-year-old James Gwin of Odenville, Ala., a passenger in a car chased from Cocominity, through Greenville, to Winterville, on Feb. 14.

Evans, who told the court Wednesday that he never struck Gwin, was suspended for 30 days without pay and demoted several days after the chase.

At the time Evans was charged, the boy's mother, Susan Gwin, said her son suffered a bruised kidney, two black eyes and a hairline fracture of his skull. "My son was the one that actually stopped the car," Mrs. Gwin said. "He pulled the wheel, jerked it off the road and pulled the (emergency) brake up."

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning that Evans will "continue on vacation ... he'll be on vacation, with pay," until the case is heard in Superior Court.

Tyson said Evans has enough vacation time to "carry him through about six weeks."

Knowledge Could Mean More Food

The knowledge Colombian geologist Paco Zambrano gains in Greenville this week could put food in the mouths of his countrymen, many of whom fear for the very survival of themselves and their children.

He is representing the Colombian Institute for Geological Research of Bogota at a conference on phosphate as both a presenter and a student. His is one of three South American countries that have found phosphate deposits and he and other geologists agree that, based on the correlation between geological conditions in certain areas of his country and parts of the world where phosphates have been found, more are probably there. Phosphate, a mineral essential for the production of fertilizer, has also been found in Mexico and Venezuela, two other countries represented at the conference. Fertilizer is a (Please turn to page 16)

Double Ring Ceremony Is Performed On Saturday

Goler Memorial AME Zion Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Melanee Gail Wheeler and Brian Keith Mills. The Rev. James Hunt Jr., the Rev. William Moore and the Rev. James French performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Oliver L. Wheeler Sr. of Winston-Salem and Pauline Mills of Route 1, Winterville, and the late Simon Mills.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Jill R. Turner of Winston-Salem. Bridesmaids included Katrina B. Wheeler, sister-in-law of the bride, and Rhonda D. Brannon, cousin of the bride, both of Winston-Salem, Shawn E. Duncan, cousin of the bride of Washington, D.C., Elaine Tyson of Greenville and Barbara Mills of Winterville, sisters of the bridegroom, Renee Mills of Grimesland, cousin of the bridegroom, Mynette J. Burney of Lynchburg, Va., Sheila A. Williams of Winston-Salem, Marva L. Monroe of Philadelphia, Pa.

Edward C. Mills of Weldon, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen included Louis Delaine of Clayton, Fleming Long of Greensboro, Earl Moore of Goldsboro, Fred Whitfield of Greensboro, William Mills of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, Oliver L. Wheeler Jr. of Winston-Salem and Quentin G. Wheeler of Washington, D.C., brothers of the bride, Harris Dixon Jr. of Greensboro, James Stone of Sedalia and Wayne Smith of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom.

Dr. Robert Morris was organist and Adrian Swygert was soloist.

Ushers and candlelighters included June A. Miller of Winston-Salem, Donna H. Jackson of Burlington, Lisa L. Dye of Hollis, N.Y., Anita J. Brannon, Pamela Hairston and Angela Hairston, all of Winston-Salem and cousins of the couple.

The bride wore a formal ivory gown of old-fashioned embroidered chuffy lace. It featured long full sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. From the empire bodice flowed a full lace skirt with a cathedral train.

She wore a fingertip veil attached to a lace covered cap and carried a cascade of ivory roses.

Each of the attendants wore a formal ivory dress with chiffon overlays styled with short sleeves and ruffles extending from the neckline. A satin bow tied at the waistline. Each carried a bouquet of lavender orchids with a hurricane lamp.

A reception was held in the church social hall where a color scheme of ivory, lavender and peach was carried out. Kim Bratton provided violin music.

The couple will live in Greensboro after a wedding trip to the Bahamas.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and received her M.A. from A&T University. The bridegroom graduated from A&T University. She is a counselor at Winston-Salem/Forsyth County school system. The bridegroom is self-employed.

A wedding brunch was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Dew, godparents of the bride and a pig picking for the wedding party and out-of-town guests was held at the home of the bride after the reception.

A buffet dinner was held after the rehearsal and a pool party was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. Long. The couple was also honored at several pre-nuptial parties.

DOGWOOD DON'T BARK
WARM SPRINGS, Ga. (AP) — Why is the pretty dogwood tree called a dogwood?

According to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm, the dogwood was named by American colonists who found it similar to a British tree which produces a chemical used as a medicinal cure for mange on dogs.

WOMEN AND CARS
NEW YORK (AP) — Women now account for 40 percent of new car buyers in the United States, according to an industry survey.
In 1972, they accounted for only 20 percent of new car sales.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Smart Hubby Discovers He Didn't Know What He Had

DEAR ABBY: I believe you were a bit too polite in your reply to "Pittsburgh Pete," who said, "I'm engaged to marry a girl who is 'dumb,' but that's OK with me because she knows she's dumb, so she keeps her mouth shut."

It's obvious that this "girl" is about to marry an egotist who feels he is much too good for her. Chances are that he will remind her of this constantly while never allowing her to be an equal partner. I worry about any woman who winds up with a man with such a sexist attitude toward marriage and family.

I know, Abby. I was there. But I was the guilty party. My first wife was no dumb bunny by anybody's standards, but I believed myself so smart that for years I failed to recognize her intelligence. My superior sexist attitude prevailed. By the time I realized her abilities, her feelings toward me had changed, and it was too late to show her that I considered her an equal partner.

I married again. My wife is as smart as I and provides a fresh challenge every day. Often I find it difficult to keep up with her. We each have different talents and each can defer to the other in the other's particular area of expertise. We still have our differences that result in battles—verbal, not physical—but we know we are battling an equal.

"Pittsburgh Pete" said his fiancée knows she's dumb so she keeps her mouth shut. Let's hope if she is smart enough to realize she may have some limitations, she is smart enough to understand what marriage to Pete will be like.

TEXAS CITY EDITOR

DEAR EDITOR: If she's smart enough to foresee what marriage to "Pittsburgh Pete" will be like, she won't marry him.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "All Washed Up in Atlanta" made my day. For years I have refused to eat in fast-food restaurants where the cashier also handled the food.

I once worked as a cashier in a health food store. That's where I learned how dirty money really is. On a busy day I would have to wash my hands every two hours because my fingers would be black from the money!

Also, I was constantly amazed to see where people kept their money. I've seen customers pull money out of their underwear, shoes and socks!

DEAR ABBY: Very often I see letters in your column from women whose major complaint is a husband who has lost all interest in sex. Your stock answer: Send him to a doctor.

That's not always the answer. I should know. I'm divorced now, but I was married for 30 years to a woman who could have been the centerfold for Playboy magazine when I married her.

Twenty-nine years and 70 pounds later she complained because I had lost all interest in sex.

Abby, if you take a 65-year-old man and put him in bed with a 25-year-old girl with a nice-looking shape, you would find that he has not lost interest in sex at all.

So, before sending the husband to a doctor, send the wife to a spa.

Start At Home

Officials in the two Carolinas agreed recently that a Charlotte Observer poll on public schools shows the time is ripe for reform.

Forty-three percent of the participants said public schools were doing only a fair to poor job in educating children, 46 percent rated schools from good to excellent and 11 percent said they didn't know.

The complaints were all familiar, and from our vantage point they are dated.

There's no way we could pass judgment on how other school districts have been facing up to complaints over their work in other parts of the Carolinas; but for well more than a year our own area educators have been both concerned and doing something toward improving schools. There is no reason to think other systems have not been doing likewise.

No quick-fix is possible. The arena is too big, the stakes are too great. One false move could result in costly and long-lasting damage. We lean toward local assessments; for most systems have a degree of individual variations. (State responsibilities involve a more far-reaching role.)

The premise that parental and family roles in the education of children is a major factor in success or failure continues to dominate our thinking. It's too much to ask for our teachers and school systems to do their jobs as educators and also have to play roles of father, mother, big brother, big sister, Uncle Ed and Aunt Min — or Grandpa and Grandma.

School reforms are in the works; but how about some changes closer to home?

Helping Hand

Maybe the departed and unlamented James Watt wasn't all bad. At least part of the Beach Boys' resurgence as a big concert attraction might be laid at the door of the former interior secretary when he barred them from an Independence Day program on Washington's Mall.

With a too-familiar touch of insensitivity and ignorance of his subject, Watt opined the musicians attracted "undesirable elements." That teed-off millions of Beach Boys' old fans and fueled fires of the anti-Watt establishment.

So the rock group again became a hot ticket on the playing fields of entertainment. After two decades their talents had not waned and their music would have been welcome in any event; but with Watt's help their talents were spotlighted to the delight of promoters and the songsters themselves.

Mr. Watt incautiously cast his bread upon the waters, and it came back "cake." Thanks, Jim.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assuming that Walter F. Mondale claims the Democratic presidential nomination next week in San Francisco, all the traditional political measurements will point to President Reagan as an overwhelming favorite to win a second term.

The economy continues to show dramatic improvement and there is a truce, however uneasy, in Lebanon. Opinion polls say Reagan is leading Mondale by margins as high as 19 percentage points.

Mondale's advisers are aware of Reagan's strengths, but they insist the president is vulnerable. They cite the gender gap and Reagan's low standing among blacks who are voting in unprecedented numbers.

The question is whether Mondale can exploit those vulnerabilities and convince voters who are disenchanted with the president to support the Democratic ticket.

That such opportunities exist was demonstrated anew last week when Reagan enraged environmentalists by naming Anne Burford, who quit under fire as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, to a $100-a-day part-time job as head of a national advisory commission on environmental issues.

"The Burford appointment, in itself, offended a lot of people who in many ways support much of what Reagan is doing," said Jay Hair, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, whose 4.1 million members voted for Reagan by a 2-1 margin in 1980.

But when asked if many of those Reagan supporters would defect to Mondale, Hair said, "probably not in droves."

The potential for such defection is there. The question is whether Mondale can convince people to switch to him.

The Democratic convention next week will be a major test of the Mondale candidacy.

In its usual methodical way, the Mondale staff has built an impressive organization to keep track of every phase of the convention. More than 400 Mondale aides will be in constant contact with delegates.

No political fire, however small, will go unnoticed or untended. The telephones and the walkie-talkies will work. The Mondale staff knows when every delegate will arrive in San Francisco and each will be met by a volunteer who will present a Mondale-For-President tote bag.

It will take more than telephones and tote bags to give Mondale the boost he needs from the convention.

Tom Donilon, Mondale's convention operations manager, said the goal is to have the four-day meeting demonstrate that "Walter Mondale is a strong leader who has pulled this party together."

In addition, he said, the convention should demonstrate that "the Democratic Party stands for something in sharp contrast to what is in the White House today."

But can Mondale get through four days without Gary Hart or the Rev. Jesse Jackson lighting political fires? Can the nominee choose a male running mate without touching off a bitter floor fight by disappointed women delegates? Or if he chooses a woman, will he be seen as pandering to a special-interest group?

So far, Mondale is doing better than Jimmy Carter was able to do in 1980 when he limped out of the convention with the image still fresh of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy reluctantly coming to the podium for a standard gesture of unity.

Mondale has worked hard at making peace with Hart and Jackson. Donilon said he followed two principles in his dealings with the opposition within the party — "We were not going to give up any delegates. We were going to be as conciliatory as possible on everything else."

He added that "we intend to be gracious winners at the convention."

As for a potential feminist revolt, Donilon conceded that if Mondale chooses a man for his running mate, keeping the peace will depend, in part, on the fact that most of the women at the convention will be Mondale delegates.

It also will be a test of how persuasive a case Mondale can make for his choice.

The single most important moment for Mondale will come Thursday night when he delivers his acceptance speech. That is when he must reach out as the Democratic candidate to the American voters and convince them that he would be a better president than Ronald Reagan.

Public Forum

To the editor:

When I read in Sunday's paper about the "Blue Law," my feeling was, "Oh, no, here we go, wasting our tax money and valuable council time to beat this dead horse again." I attend Sunday School and church every Sunday, as do my friends.

I do occasionally go to the grocery store on Sunday afternoon; also, the drug store, golf course, swimming pool, beach, fishing pier, restaurant, movie or concert. My husband enjoys an occasional sports event on television. Most of my friends and acquaintances enjoy many of these same activities. A lot of our church family has Sunday dinner at a restaurant regularly. Our church also treats our youth, college students and others to dinner out after worship services.

My point in writing this is to illustrate our Pharisaic tendencies. Christ was brought to the Crucifixion primarily because of the evidence presented that He was desecrating the Sabbath by working. Christians often see people shopping as a desecration of the Sabbath, but fail to see that paying someone to wait on us, feed us, or entertain us is truly the same thing.

We pay our gladiators (football players, etc.) exceedingly well to entertain us on Sunday afternoons. We've even renamed one Sunday "Super Bowl Sunday." Is shopping more sinful or desecrating than football or eating out? I feel that unkind words, gossip and hurtful attitudes are the real Sabbath and other-day desecrations. For those who wish to close the shopping areas, look to your heart. What do you do on Sunday which causes someone else to work? If you are without sin, then cast the first stone.

How much better to spend our time working to alleviate the pain and suffering of this world and praising God. Keeping the Sabbath holy is a commandment that must be done within one's heart. It is a state of mind, not a state of the union.

To the editor:

For many years safety engineers struggled with the problem of locomotive engineers dying at the throttle. Eventually they came up with what is now known as "dead man's throttle." The instant that a locomotive engineer relaxes his grip on the throttle, the engine starts to decelerate and the locomotive comes to a stop. Obviously, this device has saved many lives and prevented many accidents during the years it has been in use.

Now it appears that automotive engineers have reversed the trend by inventing "cruise control." If the driver of an automobile is stricken, and the automobile is in the "cruise control" mode of operation, the automobile (or truck) becomes a deadly projectile. It is not even controlled to some extent by tracks as is the locomotive. It will go wherever the laws of physics dictate, and at the speed previously selected by the stricken driver.

I think the U.S. Department of Transportation, or the Congress, or both, should outlaw "cruise control" in order to make our highways safer.

Committee Chairmen Hold The Power

RALEIGH — Every once in a while, a legislative fight erupts which peels back the assembly's civics book wrappings and exposes to the public how the Legislature really works. In the short session, the tremendous power wielded by committee chairmen was particularly evident in the battle that erupted over the bill to ban phosphate detergents.

The civics books would tell us that a chairman is responsible for seeing that each bill is thoroughly studied by his committee. It should be judged on its own merits and then sent to the floor of the House or Senate carrying a recommendation either to pass or defeat it. Chairmen don't normally vote on bills in committee and as their committee reviews it, they're supposed to remain objective.

The phosphate ban's path through the 1984 session should be enough to convince the civics book writers to start over. The chairmen of the two committees which handled the bill were far from objective and the sponsor of the bill used his power as chairman of another committee to build support for the ban.

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, chaired the House Natural and Economic Resources Committee which first reviewed the bill. Ethridge, usually an open go-by-the-rules fellow, decided to ram the bill through his committee and get it to the floor quickly. He was asked to order a hand count — technically called "division" — or a voice vote and he refused. By denying both requests, he denied opponents of opportunities to sidetrack a bill which he wanted passed.

When the bill got over to the Senate, however, it ran into a legislative death squad known as the Senate Special Ways and Means Committee. Chairman Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, unlike Ethridge, didn't like the bill.

First Swain called for the public hearing which, by Senate rules, couldn't be held for five days. That meant a hearing date after the scheduled adjournment. But that little trick failed because the assembly missed adjournment by a country mile and was still in session when the hearing was held. Next Swain called for a fiscal note on the bill, a maneuver chairmen use quite regularly but a move for which Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, Senate floor leader for the ban, was unprepared. That delayed it some more. Swain then bought more time by calling for a legal opinion on the constitutionality of the bill.

But Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, also had time on his side. Evans, sponsor of the ban, is chairman of the House Banking Committee and he decided to do to the Senate-passed interstate banking bill what Swain was doing to his bill. He started playing around with the bank bill, canceling committee meetings and adding amendments. When it finally got out of committee, he quite unabashedly told reporters, "I have control of the bill." He would hand it over to the membership of the House when he darned well pleased, when it would be beneficial to the phosphate bill.

The travels of the phosphate bill therefore showed that through the many manipulations available to him, a committee chairman can pretty much kill any bill that enters his turf. Of course, in doing so, he runs the risk of having the same done to bills he favors — and that fear of revenge is the grease that keeps the machine rolling.

Abortion Needs Counseling

men into the process.

Though it's been a decade since husbands started assisting wives in hospital delivery rooms, American men are still banned from the operating and recovery rooms in almost 90 percent of all abortion facilities. Meanwhile, few clinics offer men advice on how to prepare, mentally and emotionally, for life and commitment after the fact.

There were approximately 1.6 million abortions in the country last year. And in those cases, 85 percent of all males learned that their partners had become pregnant. But of that informed group of males, only half accompanied their partner to an abortion clinic.

Of course, many medical authorities argue that a hands-off practice is proper. An abortion, after all, is not a celebration of life and commitment.

But the consequences of such a deeply shrouded, let's-not-tell-anyone approach may be more destructive to men and women than previously thought. Some psychologists contend the lack of counseling helps to explain why 35 percent of all unmarried couples split up after an abortion, and why 25 percent of the men who accompany their partners to abortion clinics are repeaters.

Abortion, the experts say, is a far greater crisis for men than researchers had previously realized.

But abortion clinic administrators say there's no room for men. They say their top priority — and rightly so — is the treatment of the woman, and that leaves little time or money for men's problems. Moreover, some administrators argue, most men would be unable to witness an abortion procedure without a high level of trauma themselves.

Yet, while abortion clinics may suffer limited resources, they always counsel a woman before she has an operation. Why can't they include the male in such counseling?

Meanwhile, if men elect to receive counseling or, if not, witness, an abortion, might not the experience improve their chances of learning a lesson from it?

Today, men and women are working more closely together in the office and at home. They're sharing experiences that decades ago were thought to be exclusionary.

But abortion is not one of those experiences. Were there a greater degree of sharing, both partners' trauma would be reduced. Abortion might still be a grim fact, but the number of repeaters would diminish.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm looking at two letters that deserve an answer ... but I can't decide what it should be.

One is from a woman in Illinois who says, "Could you please write something about people who go to visit family or friends for a couple of days and the first thing they do is load you in a car and show you every monument, park and traffic light in the whole city? All we want to do is kick off our shoes and relax and have a nice visit."

The other one is from a woman in California who writes, "Maybe you could get a column out of people you visit who say how glad they are to see you and then go about their business and let you sit and watch television for the next four days. If I wanted to watch TV, I could stay at home. What happened to good old-fashioned hospitality?"

It occurs to me the rules of social grace have always been rather loose where visiting relatives or friends are concerned, so maybe it's time to make some.

1. When you hear the hostess on the phone making inquiries as to whether a tongue transplant is covered under Blue Cross/Blue Shield, you know you've hung around the house talking too long.

2. When your guests complain of blisters on their knees, maybe you should cancel the afternoon excursions to the Kangaroo Farms.

3. When someone tilts you over backwards to vacuum under you, dusts your ankles and fluffs up your cheeks, maybe you should stir around a bit.

4. If your visitors are beginning to walk like Groucho Marx, maybe the schedule is a death march.

A lot of it is common sense. When a guest times his visit with you in Los Angeles July 28 through Aug. 12, I think you can safely assume he's not there to buy fresh squash at the Farmer's Market or to watch the street being repaired on Little Santa Monica Boulevard. He will find something to do.

My best advice is communicate! We visited friends a few years ago and said, "Look, all we want to do is to visit with you for the next three days. We want to know about your life, what's been going on, and get caught up on all we've missed."

Fifteen minutes later as we nodded, we said, "Is there a car wash in town to watch? A waterbed sale? An owl sanctuary? An opening of a computer center? Maybe we could pack a lunch!"

When I recently used a recipe for Lemon Sherbet whose ingredients were eggs, sugar, lemon juice and cream, a reader faulted me for calling it a sherbet. To her, a frozen dessert calling for egg and cream should not be called a sherbet.

According to Webster, however, a sherbet is a water ice to which milk, egg white or gelatin is added before freezing.

And an ice-cream expert has this to say: "The two words 'sherbet' and 'ice' are often mistakenly used for the same mixture. There is a simple distinction between them. An ice is a frozen sweetened fruit juice or mashed or pureed fruit that is generally diluted with water and frozen ... A sherbet is similar to an ice except that milk or another dairy product is used in place of all or part of the water."

By whatever name the following frozen peach dessert is called, it's extremely refreshing because it's on the tart rather than the sweet side.

FROZEN PEACH DESSERT

- 2 pounds fresh ripe peaches
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cups sour cream
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- Sliced sweetened fresh peaches

Cover the peaches with boiling water and let stand a minute or two — just until the skins slip off easily. Remove the skins, halve and pit. Puree in a food processor with the metal blade; turn into a 2-quart electric ice-cream freezer; set aside.

Without washing the processor bowl, process together the sugar, sour cream and lemon juice until blended; add to peach puree. Freeze according to the manufacturer's directions. Pack into freezing containers — you can use four 1-pint or two 1-quart size. Place in freezer to have firm and to store. Before serving, let soften briefly in the refrigerator or at room temperature. Serve with the sliced peaches.

Makes 2 quarts.

Ferraro: Hard-Nosed, Old-Fashioned Assets

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer
FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is the kind of woman politician that men feel comfortable with. She's pragmatic, tough, forthright. She's been through the mill. Life hasn't been easy.

As a girl, she wanted to be a doctor. But she knew that girls didn't become doctors. She settled for teaching school. "That's what women were supposed to do," she said.

Now she's about to become a vice presidential candidate. That's what no woman has ever done, in either major political party.

Ms. Ferraro brings some hard-nosed, old-fashioned assets to the ticket. She's a Roman Catholic and the daughter of Italian immigrants. That cannot hurt Walter Mondale in his attempt to win back for the Democratic party its old New Deal working class, ethnic base.

Ms. Ferraro represents a workaday district in the Queens, a borough of New York City. She was elected in 1978, when Rep. James Delaney, a conservative Democrat who usually got the Republican endorsement, too, retired.

It was assumed the seat would go to a conservative Republican, but Ms. Ferraro proved to be a strong campaigner. "I gambled and I won," she said.

Her name surfaced last fall when the idea of a woman as a vice presidential candidate first came up. She said she was flattered and, she said, if lightning did strike, she'd probably say, "Oh, my God, I'm in the right place at the right time."

She was in San Francisco — sort of making her presence felt — when lightning struck. It is a violation of custom for anyone to campaign for the vice presidential spot. But Ms.

Ferraro let it be known that she'd be around.

She was the favorite of the National Organization for Women, of some of her fellow congresswomen and of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. It could be that NOW's championing of her cause worked to her detriment. Walter Mondale could not afford the appearance of having anyone dictating his choice to him.

Ms. Ferraro, 48, was born in Newburgh, N.Y., and moved to the South Bronx with her mother and older brother after her father died when she was 8. The big family house was replaced by a small apartment near relatives. Her mother got a job sewing in New York City's garment district.

The loss of her father was devastating — "She was sick for a whole year," her mother says — but her childhood otherwise was a normal one with tea parties and outings with the Girl Scouts.

Ms. Ferraro got bored teaching second and fourth grades in public school, so she enrolled herself in Fordham Law School in Manhattan, going to classes at night while still teaching during the day.

She married her suitor, John Zaccaro, now a successful real estate developer, after she passed her bar exam.

She practiced law from home for 13 years while raising three children, Donna, 22, John Jr., 20, and Laura, 18.

That done, she became a Queens assistant district attorney in 1974, specializing in prosecution of cases of child abuse, domestic violence, rape and crimes against the elderly.

"It was emotionally draining," she said. "It's a very difficult thing to look someone in the eye (who has been physically abused) and tell them they have to testify, to go through the whole process."

She was ready to resign in 1978, when the Delaney seat opened up. She jumped at the chance. Against the advice of friends and without the support of the county Democratic organization, she entered the race and won first in a primary and then in the general election.

In Congress, she made a hit with the men who run things. They installed her as secretary to the House Democratic caucus, the panel which sets legislative priorities and makes committee assignments. Last year, she was named to the influential House Budget Committee.

She used her position on the Public Works and Transportation Committee to get bread-and-butter rewards for her district — water and road projects. She also has been an advocate of noise control measures since her district is next to two major New York airports.

Ms. Ferraro is more liberal than her district, which voted substantially for Ronald Reagan over Jimmy Carter in 1980. She supports the Equal Rights Amendment and, significantly, for a Roman Catholic from a predominantly Catholic district, she votes for government-supported abortions for the poor — and gets away with it.

"I never heard that girl say she was tired," her mother said. "Workaholic — that's what my daughter is, right?"

The mother-daughter admiration is mutual. Well before it became a common practice, Ms. Ferraro kept her maiden name as a signal of salute to her mother.

Jackson: Ferraro Is Demo 'Plus'

By The Associated Press
The Rev. Jesse Jackson today said the expected announcement of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as Walter Mondale's vice presidential running mate was "a plus," and feminist leaders praised the choice as "a whole new step in American history."

"Fundamentally, it's a step in the right direction. In Ms. Ferraro, a woman, a congressperson, an Italian-American from New York, a lot of pluses," Jackson said in an interview on the "CBS Morning News."

Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, a Democrat who had been considered as a vice-presidential nominee herself, said Ms. Ferraro is "extremely well qualified. She's a dynamic person with a great deal of enthusiasm."

And House Majority Leader Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, an early backer of Ms. Ferraro, said from Harwichport, Mass., "She's got all the qualities of leadership. She's an extremely able, talented person. ...It's a breakthrough for the women of America."

"A nation 53 percent female and a Democratic party 53 percent female had to have a breakthrough and allow women to have first-class status. I think it's a rather courageous and exciting move that (former) Vice President Mondale has made," said Jackson.

Jackson said he has advocated a woman vice presidential candidate from the beginning of his own campaign for the Democratic nomination, and that Mondale's selection of Ms. Ferraro means the "issue now become the real direction of our party. I think it's a plus."

"As far as I'm concerned, it's a victory for the rainbow coalition," Jackson said in another interview, this one with ABC's "Good Morning America."

"This is a whole new step in American history," said former U.S. Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y.

"She is very good on the issues," said feminist leader Gloria Steinem, who like Ms. Abzug was interviewed by CBS. "And she is a member of the club, which will help her to deal with the party politics."

Jackson pointed to the leadership positions held in the past by other women.

"We now have women mayors and governors and senators and supreme

Reagan Defends Environmental Record

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — President Reagan, the target of an unrelenting weeklong attack from environmentalists, declared today that his administration rescued national parks from disrepair and reversed a loss of enthusiasm in the government's conservation efforts.

Hitting the conservation trail for the third consecutive day, the president chose a convention of recreational vehicle operators to issue his most aggressive defense yet of the environmental record that has produced such stiff criticism.

"In recent years, our environmental efforts began to lose some of their energy and direction," the president said in remarks prepared for delivery to the National Campers and Hikers Association.

"Indeed, by the time our administration took office, the federal government had become negligent in its care of our natural heritage," he said. "Our parks had suffered funding declines for maintenance and were in disrepair."

Although Reagan said he was preoccupied during his initial months in office by an economic crisis and by foreign policy matters, he asserted that "even while we moved to address these twin crises we were determined to move quickly and effectively to deal with the federal government's lagging efforts to preserve our environment."

The president addressed the convention at the Beech Bend campground after touring the 54-degree Mammoth Cave at the Mammoth Cave National Park near by.

"Make no mistake, the American land belongs to the American people, and we intend to keep it open for the people," Reagan said. "We believe, in short, that you can be a friend of the people at the same time that you are a friend of the land."

Reagan told his audience that past administrations had tried to deal with energy shortages by attempting to ration gas "and trying to keep you from using your recreational vehicles or RVs. At one point, the Department of Energy even proposed a Sunday ban on motor boating. ...

"The proposal symbolized a gov-

Regan Says Savings Plan Faces Step Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has made great strides in updating the way the government collects money and pays its bills, but much more needs to be done, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said today.

Regan, in prepared remarks, said that advances so far in cash management had resulted in savings of $568 million in fiscal 1983. He predicted savings would reach $822 million by 1985.

But he said this was "still only the tip of the iceberg" with much more needed to bring the federal government's procedures in line with private industry.

Regan said part of the problem was the sheer size of the undertaking. The federal government collects $857 billion annually and pays out over $1 trillion.

"That's a daily cash flow of over $7 billion — just shy of $1 billion each hour in the business day," he said in his scheduled remarks.

Regan said the government each year writes 646 million checks, which he called "an inefficient and labor intensive task" accomplished with old-style computer punchcard checks.

These checks, which private industry stopped using in the 1970s, will be phased out beginning next year in favor of paper checks, Regan said, at an annual saving of $5 million.

He said the eventual goal should be to scrap checks where possible in favor of the computerized "electronic funds transfer" process. The government is making 200 million payments annually this way now, Regan said.

Regan said that direct deposit of the $91 billion annually the government pays to individuals through such programs as Social Security would translate into large savings for the government. He said the administration will seek legislation in the future to expand the use of the direct deposit program.

He said the administration also planned a "complete overhaul" of the Treasury Department's tax enforcement system in an effort to clamp down on the estimated $81.5 billion annual "underground economy" which escapes taxation.

Work also is progressing, he said, on efforts to "dramatically" improve the security of the government's fund transfer systems against thieves tapping into the computer systems.

ernment that had grown arrogant and intrusive, a government that believed the American people should be kept away from their own lakes, rivers and parks," he contended.

"Forgive me, but our administration takes a different view," he said. "We believe that the environment includes people, and that they, now and always, have a right to enjoy the American land."

He said that with his energy policy, "we should never again face a severe shortage of gasoline ... but if we do face a gas shortage, this administration will never respond by trying to keep the American from enjoying the great outdoors."

In the speech, Reagan said there had been a decrease in power plant sulphur emission despite an increase in coal-fired electric generation capacity during the past 14 years.

He also said his administration was acting to combat water pollution, to reduce lead poisoning, to research the causes of acid rain, to protect wetlands, to preserve wild life and to refurbish national parks.

"Like everyone who has ever seen them, we view our national parks as the crown jewels of the American land," He said his administration reversed a four-year decline in appropriations for the upkeep of national parks and began a $1 billion improvement effort.

He also said that, by the end of the year, the Environmental Protection Agency expects to have initiated "more than 400 actions to address contamination threats" and reiterated his commitment to seek an extension of the $1.6 billion Superfund toxic-waste cleanup program.

At the 300-mile-long cave complex, Reagan was to view the Frozen Niagra formations of flowstone, stalactites and stalagmites.

On Wednesday, the president went to Theodore Roosevelt Island, a wooded park in the Potomac River between Washington and Virginia, to sign an environmental report and to insist that environmental concerns had to be tempered by other "legitimate social goals."

"Quality of life also means a good job, a decent place to live, accommodation for a growing population and the continued economic and technological development essential to our standard of living, which is the envy of the whole world," Reagan said.

The speech angered environmentalists, who already have accused the president of being sympathetic to industrial polluters.

On Tuesday, the president visited the Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge on Maryland's Eastern Shore and denied he was making three environmental appearances just to win votes.

"I'm not doing it from that standpoint," Reagan told a reporter. "I know you won't believe that."

Four Hurt As Tennessee Inmates Take Over

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Maximum-security inmates were back in their cells today at the main prison in Tennessee's beleaguered correction system after a guard was stabbed and another held hostage for 1½ hours in an uprising that left four people injured.

About 75 inmates, some armed with homemade knives, seized control of cellblock No. 1 at the Tennessee State Prison on Wednesday, taking guard James McAdams hostage, officials said.

McAdams was released unharmed after 90 minutes, and inmates returned to their cells about an hour after that, said Correction Department spokesman John Taylor.

Correction Commissioner Ernest Pellegrin said the inmates

"basically were raising Cain." "They didn't have any demands. They didn't try to escape. It was a spontaneous thing," Pellegrin said. "They are people who will do any darn thing they want to do. These are the absolute worst of the worst in the system."

After McAdams was released, prison officials were prepared to storm the cellblock to restore order, but the inmates returned to their cells when ordered, the commissioner said. "We would have gone in there and put them back in their cells forcibly" if necessary, he said.

The disturbance began when prison guard Joe Havis opened inmate Roger Bowlin's cell for dinner, and Bowlin attacked Havis with a homemade knife, Pellegrin said. Havis was in guarded condition today at Vanderbilt Hospital, where he was being treated for stab wounds in the back and chest.

In the scuffle that followed, Bowlin was struck on the head by a guard wielding a night stick, another guard was struck and an inmate was stabbed by another inmate, Taylor said. At the same time, McAdams was taken hostage, he said.

Inmates used Havis' keys to unlock the cells in the block, which houses about 170 maximum-security prisoners, Taylor said. Inmates were "milling around on the floor and trying to get other inmates to join them," he said.

Guard Jack Fann was hit above the eye as he carried Havis from the cellblock in the initial stages of the outbreak. Taylor said Fann received "a few stitches."

Inmate Harry Butts, 34, was stabbed by another inmate after the disturbance began and was sent to the prison hospital with superficial wounds, Taylor said.

Bowlin, serving 150 years for armed robbery and aggravated assault, was also treated for superficial injuries.

About two hours after the disturbance began, Warden Mike Dutton ordered the prisoners to return to their cells and lie on their bunks, Taylor said.

About 45 members of the prison's tactical unit then entered the cellblock and conducted a shake-down search, he said.

Taylor said the cellblock had been in a state of unrest all day Wednesday, although prison officials did not know why.

Homemade wine, known as julep, was a contributing factor to the disturbance, Taylor said. The prisoners make the wine from fruit juice, which the prison must provide for nutritional purposes as part of a federal court order, he said.

In addition, the temperature reached 94 in Nashville, and the prison, which houses 1,200, is not air-conditioned.

A federal judge has ordered the prison system to reduce overcrowding and idleness after finding that conditions constituted cruel and unusual punishment.

There have been more than 25 escapes from Tennessee prisons this year, and 11 people have died as a result of the breakouts.

In the most recent escape, three inmates fled the medium-security Turney Center in only on July 1. The search for the trio, including a double murderer, is continuing in Virginia.

Airline Indicted By Jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — Financially ailing Air Florida has been hit by yet another downdraft: a federal indictment charging the airline illegally raised and fixed air fares between the United States and Central America during 1982 and 1983.

A federal grand jury indicted Air Florida, grounded last week by financial problems, and three Central-American airlines on charges they unreasonably restrained trade in violation of the antitrust Sherman Act, which prohibits price fixing.

The maximum penalty on conviction is a $1 million fine.

The other defendants cited were TACA International Airlines of San Salvador, El Salvador; Transportes Aereos Nacionales, S.A. de C.V., of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, and Servicio Aero de Honduras, S.A., of Tegucigalpa.

The four, along with unnamed and unindicted co-conspirator individuals and firms, combined and conspired to increase fares for air travel between the United States and Central America and eliminated various promotional fares previously available, according to the federal charges filed Wednesday.

The indictment said as a result of the illegal activities, U.S.-Central American air fares were fixed and maintained at artificial, non-competitive levels which denied the public the benefits of free and open competition.

A spokeswoman for the airline, Robin Cohn, said "Air Florida does not believe that it violated any federal statute in the course of carrying out its operations." She said the airline had cooperated with the grand jury.

The routes involved were between Miami, New Orleans and Houston and San Salvador, Belize City, Belize, and Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula, Honduras.

Under the law, air carriers may set fares collectively with immunity if they have received the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board. The grand jury said the defendants did not seek or receive such approval.

Air Florida filed July 3 for protection from its creditors under federal bankruptcy laws. The carrier's financial difficulties began not long after one of its jetliners hit a bridge and crashed into the Potomac River shortly after takeoff from Washington National Airport on Jan. 13, 1982. Seventy-eight people were killed.

News of the indictment reached Miami soon after Air Florida announced a "nearly unanimous" agreement by flight attendants to accept 25 percent pay cuts if Air Florida resumes service by an unspecified date.

Ms. Cohn said Air Florida does not know when its employees will be called back to duty, or what routes the carrier will attempt to serve.

Dollar Maintains Growth

By The Associated Press
Expectations of rising interest rates and continued moderate inflation have helped propel the dollar to new heights in foreign exchange trading, while plunging the stock market to its lowest level in four months, an analyst says.

The dollar set all-time highs against the Canadian dollar and French franc on Wednesday, and it reached a new high for a second day in a row according to a Federal Reserve Board index.

But on Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 18.33 to 1,108.35, for its poorest daily showing since it dropped 22.82 points on Feb. 28.

David Arbesman, a first vice president at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, said the dollar was driven by "a perception that U.S. interest rates are not going to come down."

But at the same time, rising interest rates have hurt the stock market as investors turn from stocks to high-paying bonds.

In a development which could brighten prospects for low inflation, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries wound up a two-day meeting in Vienna on Wednesday by deciding to hold oil prices at current levels, rejecting a suggestion that the price should be lifted to $34 a barrel from $29.

A leading member of the cartel, Saudi Arabia, said it would reduce its oil production to allow cash-strapped Nigeria to sell more.

BRIDGE COLLAPSE — A portion of a bridge on Interstate 20 in Fort Worth, Texas, lies atop a car after falling at noon Wednesday. The driver of the car was not injured, authorities said. Police said a tank truck struck the bridge supports, causing the collapse. (AP Laserphoto)

Death Toll Climbs to 100 In Collapsed Mine Tunnel

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Rescue teams recovered 67 bodies from a collapsed coal mine tunnel in northern Taiwan today, raising the death toll to 100 in Taiwan's worst mining disaster.

Officials said 22 of the 125 men who were trapped in a tunnel when fire swept through the area Tuesday had been rescued. Rescuers were pressing their search today for the three missing miners.

Twelve of the survivors were in critical condition, suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning or injuries sustained when sections of the tunnel collapsed, doctors said. They said the others were in surprisingly good condition.

The death toll at the Mei-Shan Coal Mine, 31 miles northeast of Taipei, surpassed the 74 killed June 20 at the Hai Shan Mine, southeast of Taipei, the nation's worst previous mining accident.

Doctors said most of the fatalities resulted from carbon monoxide poisoning.

The government ordered all of Taiwan's 124 mines shut down today for safety checks and those found to be unsafe are to be closed permanently. President Chiang Ching-kuo also threatened severe punishment for any government official or mine executive found guilty of ignoring safety regulations.

Mine officials today revised from 124 to 125 the number of men believed to have been trapped in the tunnel, about one-half mile from the mine's main entrance, when the fire started. Initially, they had reported that 133 men had been trapped.

Hundreds of relatives and friends of the trapped miners camped at the mine's main entrance, shouting with joy or despair as rescuers emerged from the tunnel with survivors and victims throughout the night.

At one point, members of several families tried to attack a mine executive, complaining that the rescue operations were progressing too slowly. Police intervened to protect him.

Officials said rescuers were hampered by heavy smoke, lingering coal gas and several cave-ins that had blocked sections of the tunnel. A power blackout, resulting from an overloaded generator, also halted rescue operations for about 30 minutes during the night.

Chiu Chuang-huan, governor of Taiwan province, said families of dead miners would receive a compensation payment of about $28,750.

Wu Lung-kwai, 38, the first miner rescued Wednesday, told officials there was hysteria and terror in the tunnel when the fire started. Officials said initial reports traced the fire to a short circuit in an electrical air compressor.

Wu, who spent 27 hours trapped in the mine, said some miners yelled for help, while others shouted the names of relatives and pleaded for mercy.

"One man shouted, 'This is surely hell,'" Wu recalled.

He said he stripped off his underwear, soaked it in water and breathed through it when he detected carbon monoxide in the tunnel. Later, he said, he discovered a ventilation vent and huddled there until he was rescued.

Officials said Wu fainted when he was rescued.

Korean General Dies In Helicopter Crash

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A four-star general, one of the South Korean army's three top field commanders, was killed today along with three other military men in a helicopter crash, the Defense Ministry announced.

Three other men aboard the UH-1H aircraft were reported seriously injured in the crash, which occurred near Yongdong, about 125 miles southeast of Seoul.

The Defense Ministry spokesman, Brig. Gen. Park Jong-shik, said the helicopter had been caught in "freak weather." No other details were available, but rain and fog covered much of the Korean Peninsula during the day.

Park identified the field commander who died as Gen. Kim Hong-han, 59. He was reported to have been observing counterinfiltration operations at the time of the crash.

There were five officers and two enlisted men aboard the helicopter, Park said, including the pilot and copilot.

Kim previously held various key posts in the army and Defense Ministry, including service as a regimental commander and corps commander. He most recently had served as army vice chief of staff.

Rebels Hit Freight Train, Attack Bus In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas blew up a freight train north of the capital and sprayed machine-gun fire at a bus on the PanAmerican Highway after setting up roadblocks there, officials said.

The rebels had broadcast a warning on clandestine Radio Venceremos that highway traffic in eastern El Salvador would be attacked, and reports from the region said roads were nearly deserted Wednesday.

In another development, a member of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista junta acknowledged that relations between the government and the Roman Catholic Church were "tense" but said, "we are doing everything possible to improve them."

The Sandinistas were denounced by Pope John Paul II, U.S. officials and several Central American clergymen, among others, after they expelled 10 foreign priests from Nicaragua on Monday for alleged anti-government activities. The last of the 10 priests arrived in Costa Rica on Wednesday night.

A Salvadoran military source said five passengers were seriously wounded when their bus was attacked Wednesday near Mercedes Umana, 78 miles east of San Salvador.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the guerrillas set up roadblocks on the PanAmerican and Coastal highways, the country's two main east-west roads.

A freight train bound for the San Salvador and loaded with 400 tons of cement was blown up by a mine 15 miles from the capital, a state railway spokesman said. The town is near Guazapa volcano, long a guerrilla stronghold.

The spokesman said the six crewmen on the train were unhurt.

Most of the fighting in the 4½-year-old war against the U.S.-backed government has been in eastern El Salvador.

One soldier was killed and four wounded when their patrol vehicle ran over a rebel mine on a road in eastern San Miguel province, said a military spokesman in the capital. The spokesman also said three guerrillas were killed in a firefight with a military patrol near Nueva Concepcion, 42 miles northeast of the capital.

Nicaraguan junta member Sergio Ramirez, visiting Bogota, Colombia, on Wednesday, said his country was "not hounding the church."

Earlier in the day, Pope John Paul II denounced the expulsion of the priests and asked the Sandinistas to reverse the decision.

Ramirez said that "relations between the Nicaraguan government and the Catholic church are tense, but we are doing everything possible to improve them."

He added: "The foreign priests were involved in internal politics in Nicaragua, something that is punished with expulsion in countries everywhere."

Relations between the Sandinistas and the church have deteriorated rapidly in the past month since the government accused a priest — not one of the 10 clergymen expelled — of supplying explosives to U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels.

The Rev. Benito Laplante, a Canadian who was among the priests expelled, said after his arrival in Costa Rica that he did not know why he was deported. He said he never became involved in politics during his 14 years in Nicaragua. The Sandinistas seized power in 1979.

Nicaragua's only opposition newspaper, La Prensa, did not publish Wednesday because the government censored stories on the priests' ouster and the Vatican's reaction, said Carlos Ramirez, an editor. The paper did not publish Tuesday because censors ordered the paper to withhold a story on the expulsion of the priests and their photographs.

Senior Show

David McGuire Clayton of Cullowhee, a student in the East Carolina University School of Art, will present his senior show July 15-22 in the Whichard Building gallery on the ECU campus.

The show will consist of acrylic, oil and watercolor paintings. Clayton is a candidate for the bachelor of fine arts degree with a major in painting. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Clayton of Cullowhee.

Participants

The Office of Child Day Care Licensing in Raleigh is offering a special program to nine home day-care providers in Pitt County, two in Edgecombe County and two in Greene County. The program, which was organized by the Frank Porter Graham Child Care Center in Chapel Hill, is being administered by Millicent Aldridge.

The program consists of 12 packets, each pertaining to a specific topic related to family day care and child development.

Those participating in Pitt County are June Jones, Frances Jones, Lora Gaskins, Delores Langley, Lillian Lamm, Betty Johnston, Connie Adams, Lila Bell and Nora Gatlin. Greene County participants are Doris Barrett and Jannie Darden. Shelby Whitehurst and Esther Casper of Edgecombe County also are participating.

Kennedy Named

Claude Kennedy, former athletic director, teacher and coach at Ayden-Grifton High School, has been named assistant principal at D.H. Conley High School, according to county school officials.

The Pitt County Board of Education will formally approve Kennedy's transfer, school officials said, at its monthly meeting Tuesday.

Science Day Camp Drew 120 Children

ECU News Bureau
Approximately 120 eastern North Carolina children, aged 5-9 years, participated in the annual K-3 Science Day Camp offered at East Carolina University by the ECU Department of Science Education.

The children were enrolled in either or both of the camp's two week-long sessions. This year's camp focused on aspects of earth science, including the study of weather, minerals and fossils.

Campers also traveled by bus on field trips to Croatan National Forest and the Aurora Fossil Museum.

Drs. Carol and Carolyn Hampton of the ECU science education faculty were camp directors.

Local science camp participants follow:

CHECK PRESENTED — Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes, left, and CrimeStoppers coordinator Sgt. Doug Jackson receive a check from Marie Davis and Blanche Forbes of the Pitt-Greenville Board of Realtors for $3,500. Jackson said this morning that CrimeStoppers has received a total of 187 calls, paid 21 rewards, totaling

$1,605. This is the second time the Pitt-Greenville Board of Realtors has presented the program with a contribution. The money was raised through a prayer breakfast, golf tournament, trash and treasure sale and a raffle of a microwave oven. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Kennedy has resigned his position at Ayden-Grifton.

A native of Kinston, Kennedy received his bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina University. He taught in Wayne County and then came to Grifton High School. In 1971 he accepted the head baseball coaching position at Ayden-Grifton and served as athletic director for the past five years.

Kennedy is a member of the First Christian Church in Grifton. He and his wife, Faye, have one son, Joey, and reside on Brassie Drive in Grifton.

New Professor

Dr. Robert G. Carroll has joined the East Carolina University School of Medicine faculty as an assistant professor of physiology.

DR. ROBERT G. CARROLL

Dr. Carroll earned his undergraduate degree at the University of Notre Dame and his doctorate at the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

Formerly of Lebanon, Pa., Carroll was involved in postgraduate training at the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson, Miss., before joining the ECU School of Medicine.

Carroll's research interests include regulation of blood pressure over extended periods of time and the study of disease states such as hypertension, with particular regard to the role played by renal nerves in hypertension.

Steel Plan Is Nearly Completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last hurdle in a seven-month fight for industrywide protection against steel imports may be the biggest: a president who doesn't believe in import quotas.

By the end of the month, President Reagan will have on his desk an elaborate package of temporary quotas and tariff increases narrowly approved Wednesday by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

His options are to accept, reject or modify the politically sticky proposal by Sept. 24 — six weeks before the election.

Top administration trade officials maintain that quotas would aggravate tensions with trading partners and drive up steel prices.

But Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America, which petitioned the ITC for the import protection, say domestic producers need temporary quotas in order to modernize and become competitive.

"I would judge there won't be a statement until the president is ready to act on it," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said after the ITC vote.

Splitting 3-2, the commission approved a plan that would limit four types of steel imports to an average 15.5 percent share of the American market for three years. The maximum market share would rise to 17.1 percent in the fourth and fifth years.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said he would strongly urge Reagan to adopt the ITC recommendation "in its entirety, so that we can get American steelworkers back on the job rather than leaving them on the street where too many of them are right now."

More than 170 steel facilities have closed in the last two years and some 90,000 steelworkers are laid off. The USW estimates another 100,000 have permanently lost their jobs.

Heinz, the major Senate proponent of a bill establishing an across-the-board 15 percent quota on steel imports, said he would pursue the bill only if Reagan does not implement the ITC recommendations.

The chairman of the House Steel Caucus, Rep. John Murtha, welcomed the ITC vote but said he would continue to push for the legislation "because it is more comprehensive and a surer way to the quota goal."

British Strikes Escalate

LONDON (AP) — Striking dockworkers voted to block the movement of cargo through nearly all British ports today and were backed by railway and seamen's unions, escalating the nationwide labor strife linked to the four-month-old coal miners' strike.

"If they (the dockworkers) come out for any length of time, the economic recovery will be throttled," Britain's National Chamber of Commerce said in a statement.

The dock strike began Tuesday as a spinoff from a strike by the National Union of Mineworkers. By Wednesday, it had closed 78 of the nation's 204 ports.

Dockworkers' delegates from the 1.5-million-member Transport and General Workers Union voted at a conference in London Wednesday to try to extend the stoppage to the remaining 126 ports today and Friday.

Port officials said there was a "heavy buildup" of freight traffic today as exporters rushed to move as much cargo as possible before dockers start blocking all freight aboard the ferries. About 80 percent of British trade is by sea and only about 20 percent by air.

"It is our intention wholly to stop the movement of cargo through all ports where broke down Tuesday night. No new talks were scheduled."

The 150,214-member National Union of Railwaymen has instructed its 4,000 members who work in the docks not to cross transport union picket lines to go to work.

The 25,000-member National Union of Seamen told its members not to handle freight aboard the 24 ferries operated by the Sealink company owned by British Rail, the state-owned corporation that runs the nation's rail network.

The 940,312-member General, Municipal, Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union also called out its 1,500 members who work in the docks.

The 78 ports so far closed include those in London, Liverpool, Bristol, Glasgow, Hull, Southampton and the inland port of Manchester, linked to the sea by a ship canal. Together the 78 handle more than two-thirds of all British imports and exports.

Authorities at Dover and Folkestone, the major ferry terminals on the English Channel, reported all services running normally today, aside from the buildup of freight traffic.

Georgia Sends Inmate To Chair

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Convicted killer Ivon R. Stanley went calmly to his death in the electric chair today minutes after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to stop his execution for the robbery-killing of a man who was buried alive after pleading for his life.

As Stanley became the 21st person to be executed since the Supreme Court restored the death penalty in 1976, two convicted murderers in Florida, originally scheduled to die at sunrise today, were locked in isolation cells under a last-minute reprieve.

A hearing was set for 9:30 a.m. EDT today in Florida for Jimmy L. Smith, who killed a North Florida mother and daughter. He and David L. Washington, a triple-murderer from Miami, awaited the outcome of appeals that delayed their executions Wednesday.

The slightly built Stanley, 28, was convicted of the 1976 murder of Clifford Floyd, a Bainbridge insurance collector who was beaten with a shovel and hammer and buried alive.

Stanley walked quietly into the execution chamber at 12:07 a.m. in the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center after refusing last rites and a final statement.

About a half hour earlier, the Supreme Court had denied Stanley's request for a stay, reaffirming a decision by the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles and a three-judge appeals panel in Atlanta.

Stanley watched closely as six guards attached the leather straps that bound his arms and legs to a wooden chair.

Asked if he had any final statement, he shook his head. Asked if he wished to have a prayer said for him, again he shook his head.

At 12:15 a two-minute jolt of more than 2,000 volts coursed through his body, and he was pronounced dead nine minutes later, his fists clenched as 11 witnesses watched.

Stanley, who had worked at a Decatur County sawmill, was the second person put to death in Georgia since 1964 and the first black in more than 20 years. The U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. John Eldon Smith, a white inmate, was executed last December for killing a newlywed couple.

Wallace Cato, then district attorney and now a judge in Decatur County, said Floyd begged for his life when he was robbed by two men and was "still trying to talk" as they buried him in a shallow grave.

Stanley had maintained that Joseph E. Thomas, now on Georgia's death row for the same crime, was the killer.

The condemned man twice refused to see a minister Wednesday. He was not religious "and made no pretense about it," said Fred Steep, a prison spokesman for the prison system.

"He says he's not guilty, and I believe he's not guilty," Stanley's grandmother, Eliza Yulee, said Wednesday after visiting her grandson, who she said was in good spirits and was reminiscing about his childhood.

About 50 death penalty opponents and members of Stanley's family met Wednesday night in Atlanta to pray for him. After a church service, the crowd moved to the steps of the state Capitol across the street where they held a 20-minute demonstration.

Outside the prison a group of demonstrators stood with reporters in an area designated for spectators.

Florida had scheduled the nation's first double execution since the death penalty was restored in 1976.

GENUINE U.S. GOV'T. MORGAN SILVER DOLLARS

ALL COINS UP TO 100 YEARS OLD

U.S. COIN RESERVE

U.S. Coin Reserve has found over 15,000 Original Morgan Silver Dollars dating as far back as 1878. These treasured coins will be released to the American Public for one week only at a guaranteed price of $34.90 each...an incredible $50.10 less than a major national advertiser. Orders received later may not be honored due to volatile fluctuations in the precious metals market, and checks may be returned uncashed.

CONGRESS MELTS MORGAN SILVER

Created by the U.S. Mint over a century ago, more than 270 million Morgan Silver Dollars were melted down during World War I by the Federal government increasing the value of these coins dramatically. After only one more minting, Morgan Silver Dollars were never issued again. Their silver content then as today is almost one Troy ounce of .900 fine silver. Despite fluctuations in the price of silver, Morgan Silver Dollars have had an average annual appreciation of 26.5% in value over the last 10 years alone!

PRIVATE INDUSTRY MELTS MORGAN SILVER

In January of 1980 silver hit a record breaking $50.00 dollars per ounce, triggering a second massive melting of Morgan Silver Dollars. The combination of these two major meltings has resulted in the Morgan Silver Dollars being more scarce than ever. We have been approached by the European Markets for these rare coins, but we feel they should be in the hands of the American Public. In consideration of the fewer number of these coins available, we predict an increase in value that could be over 100% yearly. Which means in five years they could be worth up to Five Hundred Dollars a piece.

MORGAN STOCKPILES FOUND

Our find of over 5,000 original Morgan Silver Dollars will be released from guarded vaults to the American public only through this notice! Most coins are up to 105 years old and guaranteed to be in uncirculated condition. Also, these coins are guaranteed to be genuine U.S. Gov't. Issue and are accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity to that effect. We can only guarantee this price for one week due to the volatility of the precious metals market.

STRICT LIMIT

Since our price of $34.90 each is an incredible $50.10 less than a major national advertiser, we expect an avalanche of orders to come pouring in. Therefore, we advise you to get your order in early before the strictly limited supply at this price is sold. We offer a 4 day examination period for each coin; coins returned within that time will receive a full refund. A limit of one hundred twenty coins per order will be strictly adhered to! So, avoid disappointment. Act now!

Dates will be selected at random.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 53.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few percent of the loads were offered. The market is weak and the live supply is moderate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,853,000, compared to 1,610,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn slightly lower at 3.88-4.00 in East and 3.92-4.05 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans lower at 6.49-6.56 in the east and mostly 6.30-6.54 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.34-3.39; (new crop corn 2.79-3.22; soybeans 5.95-6.19).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly again today in a carryover of selling from Wednesday's sharp drop.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 1.55 to 1,107.00 in the first half hour.

Losing took a 2-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was still unsettled by the jolt of a dividend cut announced late Tuesday by ITT Corp.

After the poor showing by the markets over the past several months, brokers said investors were highly sensitive to any unpleasant surprises.

ITT shares, owned by more than 500 investing institutions, fell 9 3/4 in Wednesday's trading. They recovered 7 1/2 to 22 in early trading today.

In addition, market-watchers noted that high interest rates, and the resulting high yields available on investments like Treasury bills, remained a formidable competitive obstacle for stocks.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.33 to 1,108.55.

Declines outpaced advances by more than 5 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 89.54 million shares, against 74.01 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 1.23 to 86.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.89 at 194.60.

commodity now hardly used by the poor subsistence farmers of most Latin American countries, one that could greatly enhance their ability to grow food and possibly even income-producing crops.

The U.S. Geological Survey is holding the conference in conjunction with the geology department of East Carolina University, which is acting as host to geologists from Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Guatemala, Honduras and the Dominican Republic. The workshops are technical, sharing in detail the correlations between known phosphate deposits like the large Pungo River deposit the group viewed at Aurora early this week and the geology of areas of each of the countries represented.

"These are learned people," Beth Partin, East Carolina University graduate student in geology, said of the participants in the conference being coordinated by Dr. Stan Riggs, an ECU geology professor and researcher who is co-director of the phosphorites section of the worldwide International Geological Correlation Program. "They're also highly placed government officials and trusted scientists within their own countries, who hopefully can go home and institute research projects to find the phosphates so sorely needed by their people."

A similar conference was held by the U.S. Geological Survey in Bangkok, Thailand, last year for Southeast Asian countries and something similar has also been done in Senegal in Africa.

"In most of these countries," U.S.

PACO ZAMBRANO

Geological Survey head geologist Dick Sheldon said, "only the plantations which grow large crops for export use fertilizer. The small farmer who tries to raise enough food for his family cannot afford fertilizer, an expensive imported product. Local fertilizer manufacturing that could grow out of the finding of these deposits we believe are there could hopefully make fertilizer more available and affordable."

Zambrano says he's excited about the possibilities that this conference opens for creating more phosphate discovery and mining programs in Colombia. He's also pleased with the associations he's made with other scientists who share his hope for the future of Latin America.

residents Barbara Eden and Naomi Stancill.

"Everything is so confused like it is," Ms. Stancill said. "You go to the store and put this or that in your basket and then they tell you you can't buy that on Sunday. Abolish it all, it would be the best thing for the city. I mean they sell greeting cards and such, but if I have to go out of town and need luggage, I should be able to buy it," she said.

Tommy Carawan, owner of Carawan Oil Co., also said he would like to see the Blue Law repealed. "What do we do if people run out of oil on Sunday? Am I outside of the law if I give them oil so they won't be cold? The Blue Law as it stands entirely interferes with the fair trade that we expect to carry on in this country. Government should not meddle in other people's business so long as it's a legitimate business," Carawan said.

Seventh Day Adventist Bob Tyson told the council that the Blue Law is a violation of the constitution. "If a man has religion, I don't think he needs a law to make him keep it. I feel that in a land of liberty it would be breaking the constitution to make laws governing working and religion. We are not to look to the laws of America in the realm of religion," he said.

Opinions aired at the public hearing will be taken in consideration by council members who will rule whether to repeal, amend or leave the law as is at a later date.

Walks Let Snow Hill Rally, 5-4

SNOW HILL — A bases loaded walk brought in the tying run, and a wild pitch let the winning run score as Snow Hill bounced back to take a 5-4 victory over Pitt County in the second game of their best-of-three series in American Legion baseball last night.

The win tied the series at one game each and sent the second round contest back to Greenville tonight at 8 p.m. for a final game.

Wayne County, which won the regular season title — losing only to Pitt County in each of their three meetings — swept its series with Rocky Mount, winning the second game last night, 8-5.

The survivor of the Pitt-Snow Hill series will meet Wayne County in a best-of-five series starting Sunday in Goldsboro.

The end of the game became controversial when two Pitt pitchers, starter Darrell Edwards and reliever Paul Hill, walked a total of three batters in the final frame. Pitt Coach Bruce Rhodes complained over the calls — Pitt had walked but five in the previous eight innings — but it did no good as the walks helped bring in the tying run.

Up 4-3, Pitt got the first batter out on a ground ball before Michael Warren walked on four straight pitches. Nat Norris followed with a single, and Randy Daniels walked on five pitches, loading the bases.

Hill was brought on to face Anthony Russo and he issued a walk on four pitches, forcing in Warren with the tying run. Hill got Billy Godley on a swinging strike three for the second out, but then issued a wild pitch with a two-two count on the next batter, allowing Norris to score the game-winning run.

Snow Hill pushed into the initial lead in the first inning, scoring once. Daniels singled and Russo also got a hit. Godley hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Daniels for a 1-0 lead.

Pitt rallied for three runs in the third, moving ahead 3-1. With one away, Toby Fischer singled and advanced on an error on the play. Doug Coley walked and with two away, Mike Kinley singled, scoring Fischer. Kinley stole up and both he and Coley scored on a hit by Traye Fuqua.

Snow Hill got one back in the fourth. Joey Stepe walked and Jerry Butler reached on a fielder's choice that was errored, allowing Stepe to take third. Todd Grant then hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Stepe.

Snow Hill tied it at 3-3 in the fifth. With two out, Daniels doubled and moved to third on a passed ball. Russo walked and Godley singled, driving in Daniels.

Pitt moved back into the lead in the seventh. That came when Edwards hit an inning-opening homer.

Snow Hill missed on a chance to tie it up in the eighth when Butler, who had walked, was thrown out trying to score from first on Grant's double.

Thus, Pitt held the lead until the ninth when the walks and wild pitch brought Snow Hill back from the brink of extinction.

Fischer led the game's hitting, collecting four for Pitt, while Coley and Roger Moye each had two for Post 39. Daniels was the lone Snow Hill player with two hits.

Stars, Allen Set To Clash

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — George Allen, the most recognizable name in a largely no-name cast that will compete for the United States Football League's second championship, isn't shy about letting people know that his coaching is the main reason his Arizona Wranglers qualified for the finals.

But to Chuck Fusina, one of the reasons Philadelphia is the USFL's winningest team, Allen will be irrelevant when the Stars meet the Wranglers for the USFL title Sunday night at Tampa Stadium.

"I've got nothing against George Allen. He gets a lot of media attention and a lot of publicity and that's great for our league," Fusina said after Wednesday's practice, the Stars' first since arriving here from Philadelphia.

"But when I get out on that field Sunday night, I'm not going to be worried about George Allen. I'll be a lot more concerned with Stan White and Bruce Laird and the other guys on the Arizona defense."

Still, it's hard to avoid noticing the impact that Allen is having on this championship, which will be televised nationally by ABC at 8 p.m. EDT.

For one thing, the Wranglers are not a typical USFL team — a high-priced former college star at a key position or two mixed with a core of low-paid unknowns.

They are, instead, a George Allen team — a "the future is now" bunch, the kind Allen coached in Washington, replete with veterans like White, Laird and Wilbur Young (13 professional seasons each), quarterback Greg Landry (16) and other well-seasoned veterans like Luther Bradley, Carl Allen, John Lee, Karl Lorch, Doug Dennison, Joe Ehrmann, Frank Corral, Eddie Brown and Kevin Long.

Allen maintains that Arizona's biggest problem this year was adjusting to the pre-season move from Chicago to Arizona — the Wranglers are last year's Chicago Blitz, which switched cities with last year's Wranglers.

In fact, the Wranglers hardly figured to be here, losing eight of their first 14 games before winning their final four to qualify for the playoffs. Then they upset Houston 17-16 and Los Angeles 35-23 to get here.

For which Allen, reportedly on the brink of dismissal several times, takes full credit.

"When things were going bad, there was talk that we were working too hard, that I needed to change my ways," he said Wednesday. "But I'm a believer that you get the right kind of people, people with character, and that you stick with them and they stick with you."

By contrast, the Stars are a low-key bunch, led by Coach Jim Mora, who coached them to a 16-2 record in the regular season after a 15-3 mark last year and a two-point loss to Michigan in the USFL championship game.

Leaning casually against the wall of a gymnasium at Hillsborough Community College Wednesday, Mora quietly pondered each question directed at him by reporters. He was polite as could be, giving Allen full credit for Arizona's comeback and declining to be dragged into a war of words with Allen.

Instead, he talked about his quarterback, Fusina, whose computer ranking was tops in the USFL but who finished a distant second to Houston's Jim Kelly in the Associated Press' Player of the Year voting.

"A lot of people say 'he can't throw, he can't run at all,'" Mora said of Fusina, who joined the Stars last year after being cut by the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League.

"I think he's got physical ability. I don't think he's an overwhelming talent, but I think he's a good athlete."

"But the guy's a winner. He's got something in his head. He's a competitor and he can get the job done."

Pate Trying Golf Comeback

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Jerry Pate's golfing career could be on the line this week in the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"I'll give it a try. That's all I can do: give it a try and see what happens," said Pate, a former U.S. Open champion who has been sidelined most of the last two seasons with a severe neck and shoulder problem.

"The doctors said that it would never heal until I took at least three months off, took three months and just did nothing, just rested it."

"Well, that's what I've done. I've taken three months off. Now we'll give it a test and see what happens," Pate said Wednesday as he prepared for today's first round on the 6,746-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course.

It is his first start since March 29, at the Tournament Players Championship, where he missed the cut. He has not completed a full four rounds of tournament play since Doral, early in March.

Pate, a brash and breezy character who won the U.S. and Canadian Opens as a rookie in 1976, gained international attention when he celebrated a victory in the 1982 Tournament Players Championship by shoving PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman and course architect Pete Dye into a lake by the 18th hole before diving in himself.

Later that year, however, he suffered a severe neck pull. And the injury has bothered him since. He played infrequently in 1982, finishing only eight of 17 starts.

Now he's trying a comeback. And, he was asked, what happens if the injury persists.

"I don't know," he said.

Big Schools Divided On TV Pacts

CHICAGO (AP) — College football will look the same, but what viewers likely will end up watching on Saturday afternoons this fall is nothing less than a poker game with a multimillion-dollar pot.

The U.S. Supreme Court set the table rules two weeks ago when it opened the door and told the NCAA to exit the TV business. But it's likely the justices had no idea how closely free enterprise would resemble a free-for-all by the time it reached the screen.

The two biggest players will be ABC and CBS, two networks which paid dearly in the past to share in a pie that the NCAA carefully prepared to minimize exposure and maximize revenue.

The networks may be paying less for games, but they'll be risking more — after losing about $7 million annually from their TV contracts with the NCAA over the past two years. And how much more the cable powers could drain off has yet to be determined.

The major backer for one network, likely CBS, will be a coalition of the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences and it will hand over drawing cards like Michigan, Ohio State, Southern Cal and UCLA. The other network, probably ABC, will be dealt the likes of Notre Dame, Penn State, Oklahoma and Nebraska by the College Football Association.

It's conceivable — even likely, considering how deep the emotions are running between the two football groups — that any combination of those teams could show up in the same time slot on different channels.

And the only guaranteed winner is the armchair quarterback.

"I think a lot of people's opinion was that we shot ourselves in the foot. I know plenty of people wish we were back the way we were," Frank

Broyles, an ABC commentator and athletic director at CFA-member Arkansas, said. "That was, in a lot of ways, the best."

But those days ended Tuesday when the NCAA's last-ditch attempt failed to replace the two existing packages sold to CBS, ABC and ESPN for almost $275 million. The ones the Supreme Court found were in violation of federal antitrust laws.

"I don't care what anyone tells you, that vote was not against the NCAA plan, but against the NCAA," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said Wednesday. "It was calculated simply to replace the NCAA with the CFA."

Following the NCAA's defeat Tuesday, many of the universities' athletic directors believed the Football Television Planning Committee, a coalition that would have included the 63-member CFA as well as the Big Ten and Pac-10, would emerge as the dominant bargaining agent in college football.

But that proved impossible, even given the tremendous increase in revenues and bargaining powers that such a coalition would have enjoyed.

Considering the clash of personalities, philosophies and the bad blood that had circulated between the CFA and the Big Ten and Pac-10 conferences — among the NCAA's staunchest backers — some people were surprised the two groups even met.

"It wasn't until we got back into the room," said a source who requested anonymity, "that we realized how far apart we really were."

Added a network source, "The (NCAA) vote was a battle between Wayne Duke, who holds the NCAA dear, and Chuck Neinas (executive director of the CFA), who wanted to see the NCAA out of it at almost any cost."

"It was hard to expect the two would ever sit down and work anything out," the source added. "It's likely that you'll see them want to go head-to-head on the TV to see who will hold the audiences."

The NCAA-CFA dispute began in 1981 when the CFA negotiated a $180 million contract with NBC but failed to win the approval of its members, who feared reprisals from the NCAA. It heated up when two CFA members, Georgia and Oklahoma, filed the federal court lawsuit that led to the Supreme Court decision.

The CFA set today as the deadline for commitments from any institution wishing to participate in its package. Before the vote on the NCAA plan, CFA members voted 60-0 with three abstentions to commit to either the CFA or the coalition.

"The CFA may not be as cohesive as that vote suggests," said the network source. "I think more than a few people cast ballots because they thought the coalition was a sure bet."

Neinas was en route from Chicago to the organization's Boulder, Colo., headquarters Wednesday and could not be reached for comment.

Gene Corrigan, athletic director at Notre Dame, considered the one school that could write its own TV ticket because of consistently high ratings, said in a statement Wednesday: "We have always hoped that we could put together a coalition. . . . If not, we will be members of a CFA TV plan and, at the same time, we will pursue other opportunities with syndicates and cable television."

Because CBS had backed the NCAA plan supported by both the Big Ten and Pac-10, that network was thought to have the inside track on any package engineered by the two leagues. CBS already televises basketball games of both conferences.

ABC, which had expressed serious reservations about the NCAA's plan, is believed to have an edge on any CFA proposal.

But sources at both networks said the dollar figure is what determines which signature ends up on the bottom line of which contract.

"We're heading into uncharted waters and there's no way to know right now how well certain games will play in certain places," said the network source. "But I'll promise you this — we won't go on losing money."

Golfers Recall The Babe

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Thirty years ago, two of the sports world's all-time greats met at Salem Country Club.

Babe Didrikson Zaharias and Ted Williams hit it off immediately.

Zaharis was back playing golf just 15 months after undergoing surgery for cancer. Williams was slugging his way into baseball's Hall of Fame with the Boston Red Sox.

Williams also spent spare hours helping the Jimmy Fund, raising money to combat cancer. He was impressed by Zaharias' athletic ability, more so by her courage.

For a laugh, the two put on a golf driving show. It was no surprise that she outdrove him by a few yards. She was a heavyweight slugger with a driver. Williams wasn't a golfer, even though he could hit any ball, thrown or stationary.

The Babe went on to win her third U.S. Women's Open championship by a whopping 12 strokes, a U.S. Golf Association record for both men and women.

Zaharias died in 1956, but her meeting with Williams and lopsided triumph — despite a score of 291 — were recalled by old fans today as the Women's Open returned to the Donald Ross-designed club founded in 1895.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson, leading money-winner Patty Sheehan and most of the other top golfers on the LPGA Tour headed a field of 150 for the 72-hole test.

Times have changed dramatically since the USGA became sponsor, at the request of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, of the Women's Open in 1953. That year the prize money totaled just $7,500.

The purse now is $225,000, with a check for $36,000, plus many endorsements, waiting for the winner.

However, one thing is the same as when Zaharias won here three decades ago. The 6,285-yard, par-72 course is still very, very tough.

"I'm predicting 293 will win," host pro Billy Ziobro said. "I don't think more than five players will break 300."

Eye On The Ball

"I think the scores will depend on the weather, but I think even par might win it," Stephenson said after a practice round Wednesday. "The course definitely favors the long hitter. I'm not a long hitter, but my long irons are the best part of my game, so I hope to do well."

"The fairways are fine, but the course is playing long," said Sheehan, who set records in winning the LPGA championship for the second straight year last month. "When the course gets faster, it will get even tougher. Whoever wins here will earn it."

Sheehan, who has won $177,752 in prize money, plus $500,000 as a bonus for capturing the McDonald's Kids' Classic the week following the LPGA, said she would settle for a four-round total of par 288 "and I'd sit right here." She added that she might even accept 290.

Stephenson, who ranks 17th among this year's money winners with $61,000, is winless on the 1984 tour, blaming outside commitments which followed her victory in the 1983 U.S. Open.

She is bidding to become only the fifth player to win consecutive Open championships. The others are Mickey Wright in 1958-59; Donna Caponi, 1969-70; Susie Berning, 1972-73, and Hollis Stacy, 1977-78.

Stephenson won the championship a year ago by edging Sheehan and JoAnne Carner by one stroke at Cedar Ridge Country Club in Tulsa, Okla. Carner, the U.S. Open champion in 1971 and '76, has been second in the event four times, tying Louise Suggs for the most bridesmaid finishes.

Pat Bradley, who set the Open record of 9-under par 279 in winning in 1981, is right behind Sheehan among the leading money winners with prize money of $151,868.

Juli Inkster, a three-time U.S. Amateur champion, already has set an LPGA record with earnings of $121,457 as a rookie this year. She is seeking to become only the sixth woman to win both the U.S. Amateur and Open titles, joining Carner, Zaharias, Suggs, Patty Berg and Catherine Lacoste.

The field, which includes qualifiers from a record 558 entries, will be cut to the low 60 and ties for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Illinois, NCAA To Meet On Breaking Of Rules

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Officials of the University of Illinois, accused of violating football rules, will meet the NCAA infractions committee next week, the Champaign-Urbana News-Gazette reports.

The meeting, which begins Monday in Boston, is the next step in a process that could end with sanctions against the university, the newspaper said.

The meeting will last several days, the committee's decision will be put into writing, and Illinois will have 15 days to decide whether to appeal, the paper reported Wednesday.

"I have explained that we hope to have the process completed by Aug. 21, and it is running on schedule up to this point," said UI spokesman John Burness. "We'll have no statement until the entire matter is completed."

The NCAA inquiry began in 1982 after the recruitment of two California athletes — Elton Veals and Delton Edwards, who remained on campus for only a few days. The probe then expanded to include all aspects of Coach Mike White's football program, the News-Gazette said.

The newspaper said the NCAA charged Illinois in February with more than 150 infractions, but neither the NCAA nor UI officials would reveal the details.

Questions To Be Answered

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Can the Mets and Cubs stage a repeat of the 1969 pennant chase? Will the Tigers hold off the charging Blue Jays? How far can Rich Gossage's fastball take the Padres? And just where will those kids on the Twins finally finish?

The answers to these questions figure to dominate the sports pages as the 1984 baseball season starts its second half today.

For the first time in their history, the New York Mets — the youngest team in the majors — stood in first place at the All-Star break.

"The interesting thing about the Cubs and us," says Mets general manager Frank Cashen, whose team holds a one-half game lead over Chicago in the National League East, "is that they've gone the exact opposite path from us. We've relied heavily on our farm system, and they don't have one regular who came out of their system."

Two of the youngsters most responsible for the Mets' surge are 19-year-old Dwight Gooden, who leads the majors with 133 strikeouts, and right-hander Ron Darling, 10-3.

The Cubs may not have one regular from their system — but general manager Dallas Green traded for several from the Philadelphia Phillies.

All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg is hitting .335 with a league-leading 118 hits and center fielder Bob Dernier is hitting .316 with 30 stolen bases. Both are former Phillies.

In the NL West, the restructured San Diego Padres have emerged as front-runners over the Los Angeles Dodgers and Atlanta Braves, holding a five-game lead at this point.

San Diego has never finished closer than eight games out of first in the West.

The addition of Gossage, a right-hander, and left-hander Craig Lefferts have provided the bullpen that seems to be the missing ingredient the Padres have been looking for in their pennant search.

Gossage has 15 saves and a 2.92 ERA with 40 strikeouts in 59 innings.

The Dodgers and Braves have been among the more disappointing teams this year, due to sub-par performances from key players and more than their share of crippling injuries. Atlanta third baseman Bob Horner broke his wrist and will probably be out for the season.

The Dodgers' pitching has been steady (3.37 team ERA) but injuries to key players like first baseman Mike Marshall and a porous defense have kept Tom Lasorda's crew a step back.

In the American League, the Detroit Tigers, who ran away from the East Division in the opening weeks of the season, may, in opposition to Satchel Paige's famous credo, be looking back.

The Tigers who started off with a 35-5 surge are 22-22 since and currently hold a seven-game lead over Toronto.

With a 50-34 record, the Blue Jays have the second-best record in baseball and at their current pace, the Jays will win 98 games, a long way from their 54-107 record in their first year as an expansion team in 1977.

"Before the season started, I didn't think anybody in our division would win 100 games," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "Now, I'm thinking it will take 100 wins to have a chance to win."

The defending World Champion Baltimore Orioles are in third place, 11½ games back.

The most disappointing team thus far has been the New York Yankees. The Yankees at 36-46, 20 games behind Detroit, have their worst record at this point of the season since 1966 when they finished last in a 10-team league.

New York's problems, however, can't be blamed on outfielder Dave Winfield, who leads the majors with a .370 average and a .558 slugging percentage.

In contrast to the American League East, the AL West has developed into the closest of the four division races.

At the All-Star break, Chicago held a tenuous one-game lead over both the California Angels and the surprising Minnesota Twins and only 7½ games separated the White Sox from the last-place Texas Rangers.

The Angels held first place in the West for most of the first half before a recent slump allowed the White Sox to sneak into first with a modest 44-40 record.

"It's almost a carbon copy up to this point," says Roland Hemond, the White Sox' general manager, noting that his team was only one victory under last year's total at this point. "I hope it's a carbon copy when it's over."

The White Sox finished 99-63 to win the AL West going away in 1983.

The Twins have added two solid starters, Mike Smithson, 9-7, and John Butcher, 6-6, to an already potent offense to get into contention in the West.

One of the strong additions to the Twins, however, has been center fielder Kirby Puckett. Puckett is hitting .341 and has a strong throwing arm, leading major-league outfielders in assists.

Braves Must Do Better Against Dodgers, Padres

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves lost 12 out of 15 games to the Los Angeles Dodgers and the San Diego Padres in the first half of the 1984 season, and "that's got to stop."

Atlanta catcher Alex Trevino said the pattern must change if the Braves are to overtake the first-place Padres in the second half.

Atlanta lost six of seven to the Dodgers and six of eight to the Padres. The Braves are in second place in the National League West going into today's home game with the New York Mets. They trail the Padres by five games. The third-place Dodgers are 6½ back.

"The schedule says it's us," Trevino said. "But that doesn't do it all the time."

Trevino referred to the Braves' second half home schedule, in which they play 40 of their remaining 75 games in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. But to take advantage of that edge, the Braves will have to improve their 21-20 record at home.

"This team has to come home and start taking two out of every three and even sweeping a few," Trevino said.

The Padres will hit the road for 50 of their last 79 games, including an 11-game road trip to St. Louis, Chicago and Pittsburgh that starts Thursday.

The Padres played 51 of their first 81 games at home, including 18 of 24 home games in April. Their 31-21 home record is the best in the league.

But the Padres have eight doubleheaders waiting for them in the second half. That will put the San Diego pitching staff to the test, said Atlanta General Manager John Mullen.

"To me, eight doubleheaders could be devastating to the Padres," Mullen said. "We've had a lot of doubleheaders (five), and look how it's messed with our starting rotation."

"With that schedule, and even the way baseball is, you can catch a club so fast it will make your head spin. We could be in first place in two weeks."

If the Padres can hold off the division, they will remove the distinction of being the only team in the NL West that hasn't won at least one title since divisional play began in 1969.

"We really don't know how they'll react in the second half," catcher Bruce Benedict said.

Although San Diego's home record is 10 games better than Atlanta's, the two teams are almost even in the other statistical categories.

The Padres' pitching staff's earned run average is 3.55, slightly better than Atlanta's 3.75. San Diego has seven complete games to Atlanta's 10. The Braves' bullpen has 29 saves, while Goose Gossage and the Padre firemen have 25.

The Padres are hitting .267 to the Braves' .261, but Atlanta has outscored San Diego 380-366.

The Braves will play 10 more games against the Padres. San Diego will come to Atlanta for three games Aug. 10-12, while Atlanta will visit San Diego in late September before closing out the season at home against the Padres Sept. 28-30. The final series could be a showdown for the division title.

All-Star outfielder Dale Murphy, who hit his first All-Star homer in the National League's 3-1 victory over the American League Tuesday night, says the Braves have to play well until they meet the Padres again.

"We have to play consistent baseball until then, and then we have to do better against the Padres," Murphy said. "It's pretty obvious what we have to do. We can't let the Padres and the Dodgers beat us like they have."

Bryan Sparking Stars Title Drive

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kelvin Bryant has found it a little harder in his second year in the United States Football League, but he's giving the Philadelphia Stars a big burst of speed down the stretch.

In two USFL playoff games, the 6-foot-2, 205-pound Bryant has rushed for 269 yards — more than the entire Arizona Wranglers' team, the Stars' opponents in the USFL title game, gained on the ground during the playoffs. Bryant also has scored five touchdowns.

"It's always harder the second time around, because everyone knows what you can do. But I'm not doing anything different. If the people up front do their job, it makes it easy for me," Bryant said recently.

"I think I played better this season than last. I would have gotten more yardage if I'd been able to play more, and not been hurt."

The game he's been waiting for is Sunday night, when the Stars, 18-2, take on the Wranglers, 12-8, for the USFL championship in Tampa, Fla.

As a rookie from North Carolina, Bryant was named the USFL's Most Valuable Player last season, finishing as the league's second-leader rusher with 1,442 yards and 102 points as the Stars compiled a 16-4 record. He also caught 53 passes for 410 yards.

This season, despite missing three games, he was again second in the league with 1,406 yards.

Stars Coach Jim Mora calls his star running back a great competitor. "When you have to have it done, he does it," Mora said.

"Being without him is like the Boston Celtics being without Larry Bird," added quarterback Chuck Fusina earlier in the season.

The Stars had to do without Bryant three weeks when he was sidelined with a knee injury. Then he was benched the first half of the last regular-season game, against the New Jersey Generals, for being late to team meetings.

"I thought I was giving myself enough time to get there," he said. "But the coach had to do what he had to do." Mora called it "no big deal."

"I told him he was dragging his feet in the morning," said James Bryant, Kelvin's father.

In Tarboro, N.C., Bryant's family has seldom missed a chance to attend his games or watch him on television. He is one of 10 children in the family, and his father says Kelvin did not lack for advice on his career.

"We went to all his games in college. Sometimes we'd stay up until 3 or 4 in the morning talking about the game," said the elder Bryant, who works at the Tarboro high school. "We all gave him advice, told him to stay alert when he's running that ball, not to slack off."

Jim Brett, Bryant's high school coach, describes Bryant as deceptively strong. "He can go either way — put a move on you or move over you," Brett said. "I think he's learned more grit in the pros."

"He's got real good lateral vision that makes it awful hard to get a good grip on him."

Bryant is the first to pat his teammates on the back and credit them rather than himself. "That's always been his style. He's that kind of a leader," Brett said. He is shy, the coach said, but "only until you get to know him."

In his father's eyes, the experience in the USFL hasn't changed Kelvin Bryant. "He hasn't changed a bit," the elder Bryant said.

But the running back hopes to change the outcome of the championship game this time. Last season, Bryant was held to 89 yards when the Stars lost the USFL title to the Michigan Panthers 24-22.

Softball Tourney Set

FARMVILLE — A Men's Class C Softball Tournament will be held in Farmville on July 21-22. The tournament is sponsored by the Super Shocks of Farmville.

An entry fee of $65 is charged and the field is limited to the first 16 teams to enter. Deadline for entries is July 16.

USSSA rules will be in effect and a 15-player roster must be turned in prior to the first games. Each home team is to furnish a new ball and the visitors must furnish a playable ball.

Trophies will be awarded to the team and individuals on the championship team, to the second place team and to the most valuable player.

Elizabeth II Planning Spring Tour Of Coast

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The Elizabeth II, now a centerpiece for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of America's first English colonists, will lift anchor from Ice Plant Island and sail the North Carolina coast next spring.

"A vessel has to be worked to be kept up and that's what we intend to do ... keep her moving," said Capt. Horace Whitfield, skipper of the replica of the 16th century vessel that helped colonize Roanoke Island.

During the spring and fall, starting next year, the Elizabeth II will sail along the coast to help promote other North Carolina port cities, Whitfield said.

Whitfield, 33, has spent the last two years researching the fundamentals of navigation and ship-board life 400 years ago.

"Many of the techniques of sailing the ship have been lost in time," said Whitfield. "My fascination is with sailing the ship."

Whitfield quit his job as an English teacher about eight years ago to become a shipbuilder and sailor and supervised the Elizabeth II construction starting in 1982.

Lindsay Warren Jr., chairman of the America's 400th Anniversary Committee, said he hoped the vessel would help educate people about their origins.

"My hopes are greater and just for the ship ... that we create an awareness of our proud English history," said Warren. "I think we will have failed if we don't do that."

The Anniversary Committee originally intended the Elizabeth II to be a full-time sailing ship. But after consulting naval architect William Baker, who had designed several replica ships, including the Mayflower II, the group agreed that was not feasible.

Warren said the ship will remain about 85 percent of the time in the bay where visitors can see a slide presentation about the Roanoke Voyages before touring the vessel.

Once aboard, visitors are greeted by the captain and six costumed crewmen who portray Elizabethan seamen. The crewmen, most of whom are actors and teachers, speak only in a Devon brogue or with a cockney accent, depending on their character.

needle and thread he uses to repair the sails, while the master's mate scampers up the rigging to keep watch in the crow's nest.

Below deck in a crude galley, the cook prepares a modest meal on an open fire, while the only "gentlemen" aboard criticize the soft pork and hard biscuits he says should be fed to the rats.

Princess Attends Atlanta Fund-Raiser

ATLANTA (AP) — A garden party attended by Princess Anne to help raise money for the British Olympic Committee apparently succeeded in its goals.

"In terms of fund-raising, it had to be a success," said Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, who attended with his wife Wednesday night. "There are about 300 British firms represented here."

Paula Erwin, a representative of the Northwest Hilton, which catered the event, estimated attendance at 300.

The princess' schedule today called for dedicating the Lakeside Center office park, a development of the British-owned Laing Properties Inc., as well as a visit to Marconi Avionics Inc., a subsidiary of the Marconi organization in Britain.

She was to travel to Raleigh, N.C. this evening for ceremonies marking the 400th anniversary of the first British settlements in North Carolina.

Wearing a green evening gown and long white gloves, the princess, the daughter of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, mingled with the guests Wednesday night at the Swan House, a 1920s mansion now owned by the Atlanta Historical Society.

The princess did not speak for publication but was scheduled to make some remarks at the office complex dedication today.

Although reputed not to enjoy small talk, and despite British press reports earlier in the day that her marriage was in trouble, the princess smiled and spoke amiably with the guests for more than an hour on the hot, muggy evening.

The guests, primarily people connected with British firms, paid up to $250 apiece. They were guaranteed an introduction to the princess, who was a member of the British equestrian team at the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

The 33-year-old princess, mother of a 6-year-old boy and a 3-year-old girl, was married in 1973 to Mark Phillips, then a lieutenant in the Queen's Dragoon Guards.

Phillips, who helps his wife run a farm in western England, denied reports Wednesday that their marriage was in trouble.

The latest story in the British tabloid, The Sun, said the couple would travel to the Olympics in Los Angeles separately and stay in separate hotels.

Phillips, who will be a commentator on the games for an Australian television station, said, "The only reason we are flying out separately is because the day Princess Anne has to leave, I will be at a seed mill in Gloucestershire."

He said he would be staying with the television crew during the Olympics.

Buckingham Palace spokesmen refused comment.

Man Pretended To Be IRS Agent

GREENSBORO (AP) — Charles Edward Bostic pleaded guilty to impersonating a federal officer and was sentenced to 26 months in prison, the Internal Revenue Service reported.

Bostic, of High Point, also was ordered to pay $155 as restitution. U.S. District Court Judge Frank Bullock dismissed another count against him.

IRS inspector John Bonner testified that Bostic pretended to be an IRS agent and collected $112 as claimed payment for inheritance taxes due on an estate.

Roanoke Festival Seeks Realism

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A team of consultants from Winston-Salem vetoed hot dogs and soft drinks at events celebrating America's 400th anniversary as part of their commitment to keeping an Elizabethan flavor to the festivities.

"There won't be any Coke, Pepsi or ice tea," said Douglas L. Barger, 39, a partner in the firm Historically Speaking. "There will be cider, water and ale."

The food preparations are for an Elizabethan street festival that will begin Friday after England's Princess Anne and Gov. Jim Hunt dedicate a Manteo historic site dominated by the Elizabeth II, a replica of a 16th century sailing ship.

Hot dogs and hamburgers will be replaced by corn on the cob, meat pies, crabs, mashed beans, grits and sunflowers.

Barger and his partner, Nicholas E. Hodsdon, 42, helped design most of the scenes visitors will see as well as the costumes.

They coached crewman of the ship in Elizabethan English and designed street games, still walking, dancing and singing to give visitors a real taste of times and culture that opened the New World.

"Authenticity is important to me because without it people have a false idea of what life was like," Barger said. "The real things are so much simpler to do and so much richer than things we invent."

"The more people understand about their origins the better," Hodsdon added. "It's more fun to be authentic. There are delightful things they did in the 16th century that have dropped out of our lives, like singing."

Barger said the electronic recording industry has pushed music and singing by the average person into the background.

In their act as troubadours, Hodsdon and Barger coax audiences into singing — something they have instructed Elizabeth II crewmen to do as well.

Crewman were also coached on "building a character from inside their person," Barger said. "Once they get into their costumes they start talking in Elizabethan. They call back and forth in their Elizabethan names. They each have a story that fits their character."

Prosecutor Obtained Death Penalty 32 Times, Including Velma Barfield

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Over the past 10 years, District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt has convinced juries 32 times to recommend a death sentence for the people he prosecuted.

One of those he sent to Death Row was Velma Margie Barfield, convicted in 1978 of the poisoning death of her boyfriend. Her execution, scheduled for Aug. 31, was stayed last week by Chief Justice Warren Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 33 death sentences have been returned against 24 defendants, some of whom received multiple death sentences or were retried and sentenced to death a second or third time for the same crime.

None have been executed. "That ought to tell you something about our justice system," says Britt, whose office in the Robeson County Courthouse is stacked with case files, court calendars and boxes of the long, dark cigars he invariably lights outside the courtroom.

His ability to secure the death sentence was recognized in the 1979 Guinness Book of World Records, which listed him as the country's "deadliest D.A." It is a title that still brings a look of chagrin five years later.

Britt, a vocal advocate of capital punishment, has attracted national attention as a supporter of the death penalty, both with the Barfield case and others.

But he has not tried to use that exposure or the district attorney's office as a launching pad for a judgeship or higher office.

"Why should I give up being a prize fighter to become a referee?" he says.

The prize-fighter image is one he carries into the courtroom.

Standing ramrod straight, he towers over the prosecution table and hammers away on cross-examination with questioning that is sometimes ferocious.

Attorneys are not allowed to approach witnesses on the stand, but Britt combines limited movement with a voice that always attacks to shake witnesses. He leans forward to drive home a question or turns toward the jury to draw their attention to a specific point or give an answer an incredulous look.

He frequently tells juries in murder cases that he and the state must speak for the victim who is no longer alive to speak for himself. His impassioned jury arguments have sometimes led to new trials for defendants or cautions from judges.

His fiery arguments and his fierce questioning have sparked criticism from some groups who oppose capital punishment.

"I've got this notion that the best politics for a public person is no politics," said Britt. "I get criticism from some of the liberal activist groups. They're always nipping at my heels."

"Of course, some of the groups now are amateurs compared to those in the 60s," he said. "Then, the liberal activist groups really knew how to put the heat to you."

But through 10 years as the elected district attorney for Robeson and Scotland counties, the heat hasn't bothered him.

"I've got the second best job in the world," Britt says. "The best job in the world is being one of my assistants."

Britt has maintained a relatively stable corps of assistants who argue cases through 66 weeks of superior court a year, double the time routinely assigned to Robeson County.

Britt says the stability of his staff is unusual, particularly with the demands he puts on them.

"We've got some unusual rules around here," he said. "I demand flexibility from them. If we've got a special session of court going, I don't want to hear about one of my assistants and his wife having tickets to go to the Bahamas."

"We don't allow vacation days to accrue," he said. "The time has to be taken when there's no court pressure."

District attorneys are allowed to pay assistants whatever salary they wish, as long as the average salary works out to a figure set by the Legislature. Britt's assistants all receive the same salary.

"We pay everybody here exactly the same," Britt said. "When you give one guy a raise, that means somebody else has to make less. And sometimes the one making more starts becoming a prima donna and becomes more difficult to handle."

Britt says he looks for assistants who are dedicated to the prosecution side of the legal profession.

"A lot of young lawyers go into prosecution to get experience and get exposure," Britt said. "It's a good job for that."

"But it means the taxpayers of this state are picking up the tab for the post-graduate education of a lot of lawyers," Britt said. "I try to hire people that are dedicated to the business of prosecuting and who want to live in the courtroom."

Britt backed into the prosecution business, starting with a private practice in Tampa, Fla., and then returning to Lumberton to set up a private practice. The district attorney at the time needed some help, so Britt became a part-time prosecutor.

"I just sort of eased into it, but it became like wine to me," Britt said. "I found it to be very satisfying."

"Sometimes when prosecutors get together, we talk about how much easier it would be to be outside of the prosecution business, the financial rewards and so on," he said. "But some things transcend the economic gains you can achieve."

"There are things in life that are of a grander scope," he said. "That's why we stay in it. What we do is important to society."

Prosecutor Says State Slow To Act

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Federal prosecutors say they were puzzled at North Carolina's reluctance to prosecute Asheville contractor Baxter Taylor, who has pleaded guilty to a bid-rigging charge.

"That aspect of the case has perplexed all of us," said Kenneth Andresen, assistant U.S. attorney who handled the Taylor case with U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer.

Taylor, president of Asheville Contracting Co., entered a plea bargain Wednesday enabling him to plead guilty while maintaining his innocence. Four other counts against him were dropped.

U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow Jones fined Taylor $100,000, gave him a two-year suspended prison sentence and put him on probation for three years.

Taylor originally was charged with three counts of mail fraud, one count of conspiracy and one count of violating federal anti-trust laws.

The charges stemmed from a $20 million contract Taylor obtained to pave a stretch of U.S. 25-70 in Madison County.

Testimony in the case indicated the state attorney general's office knew three years ago about allegations that Taylor participated in highway bid rigging, but took no criminal action.

Al Cole, special deputy attorney general, testified Tuesday that Attorney General Rufus Edmisten learned of Taylor's alleged involvement in bid rigging shortly before Ted Phillips, president of Phillips and Jordan Inc., pleaded guilty in July 1981 to rigging one of two bids for construction of U.S. 25-70 from Weaverville to Marshall.

Cole said Wednesday the state did not pursue Taylor's case because evidence was "wishy-washy" and bid-rigging probes were routinely referred to the federal government, which was investigating bid rigging nationwide through its anti-trust division of the Department of Justice.

Cole said Taylor was not indicted at the conclusion of an investigation in November 1982 because "Asheville Contracting had been investigated and they had not violated any law."

In March 1983, Phillips was asked to sign an affidavit detailing Taylor's activities. A federal grand jury investigation in New Bern followed, but Taylor was not indicted. A new witness — Taylor's former estimator — joined the prosecution camp in 1984, and an indictment was returned.

Investigator Says Boxcars Blocked Vision At Tracks

McBEE, S.C. (AP) — Empty boxcars parked near a crossing blocked the view for a gasoline truck driver who drove into the path of an Amtrak passenger train, killing two people and injuring five others in the ensuing explosion and fire, a state investigator says.

The Amtrak Silver Star, en route from Tampa, Fla., to New York, was traveling 65 mph Wednesday when it smashed into the tanker crossing the tracks at a detoured route, which had no lights or gates, officials said.

The truck driver, John Coker, 39, of Coward, S.C., and the train engineer, Earl Pate, 60, of Hamlet, N.C., were killed, and the train's fireman and four of the 309 passengers aboard were injured, officials said.

The train was blackened by flames from the truck loaded with 8,900 gallons of gasoline, which burned for more than seven hours.

It was the second fatal collision between an Amtrak train and a truck in South Carolina in a week. Pate had also been engineering the Silver Star on July 4 when the train collided with a pickup truck near Elgin, killing a man and woman in the truck. The State newspaper of Columbia reported today.

On Saturday, an Amtrak train derailed in northwestern Vermont, killing five people.

Officials from Amtrak, Seaboard Systems Rail, which employs the train crews, and the National Transportation Safety Board were trying to determine what caused Wednesday's accident, but said an investigation would not be completed for several weeks.

Highway Patrol Trooper E.C. Liles, who investigated the accident, said he concluded the parked rail cars hampered the vision from the crossing.

"I would have to say that vision was obscured by them. By the time the truck's driver saw the train, it was too late," Liles said.

But Owen Pride, a Seaboard spokesman, said the truck driver failed to stop before crossing the tracks as required by state law. "We believe that if he had pulled up short of the track and stopped, he could have seen the train," he said.

When asked about the lack of lights and signals at the crossing, a detour for busy S.C. 151, Pride said, "The standard railroad crossing markings are there which require vehicles to stop.... I do not see where it's obstructed for a safe driver."

Residents said Wednesday's explosion shook their windows and knocked china off shelves. Passengers said the train jolted to a stop and they saw flames and smoke covering the Silver Star and billowing from the tanker.

Mrs. Theo Mauldin was gathering tomatoes in her yard near the tracks when she saw the train plow into the gasoline-loaded tanker.

"When it exploded, the flames were higher than that pine tree out there," said 72-year-old Mrs. Mauldin, pointing to a 25-foot tree. "I came in hollering and screaming and praying."

Passenger Mark Ascher said he was sitting down to breakfast at about the same time.

"All of a sudden, I felt a combination of a brake, simultaneously and like a collision sound," Ascher said. "As the train slowly went to a stop, all I saw was flames at the window."

The passengers were taken to a nearby high school and then bused to Washington later in the day, Amtrak spokesman Frank Smelt said.

EPA Restricts Preservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do-it-yourselfers and farmers soon will be unable to apply three types of wood preservatives to their sundecks and fenceposts. The Environmental Protection Agency is restricting sale of those compounds to reduce the risk of cancer and birth defects.

EPA said Wednesday that starting Feb. 1, only people holding state pesticide licenses will be able to buy and use creosote, inorganic arsenic compounds and the class of chemicals known as pentachlorophenols.

The agency also announced strict requirements for workers handling those products.

About 1 billion pounds of those chemicals are sold every year, according to 1982 statistics, out of about 3.7 billion pounds of pesticides of all kinds. They are used in everything from utility poles to particleboard, and confer major economic benefits by extending the service life of wood products to five times the life of untreated wood.

EPA said it was unable to estimate the total benefits, but noted that railroads alone would face $2.4 billion a year in higher costs if they had to use concrete cross-ties instead of treated wooden ties.

Jay Feldman, spokesman for the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides, said, "It's not adequate and won't protect the public. They won't be able to enforce the rules."

Feldman said the agency "should have moved much closer to a ban. ... A consumer shouldn't be able to get treated material."

Consumers may still buy wood treated with those compounds — as outdoor furniture, for example. But manufacturers of the preservatives will be required to send information folders on proper handling to every place selling treated wood.

Those fliers will warn, among other things, against burning treated wood in home fireplaces, against sawing it without wearing a face mask or "frequent and prolonged contact" with wood treated with creosote or pentachlorophenols unless two coats of a sealer have been applied.

Explaining "frequent and prolonged contact" at a news conference, John A. Moore, assistant EPA administrator for pesticides, said he would not hesitate to sit in an unsealed but treated chair, for instance. But "if you sit in it eight hours a day all through the summer, you might want to be prudent and shellac it or something," Moore said.

Manufacturers of other wood preservatives, which EPA estimated have about 3 percent of the market, will be asked to provide health data to the agency, Moore said.

Those compounds, whose sale and use is not being restricted, were identified only by their chemical names — bis (tri-n-butyltin) oxide, copper-8-quinolinolate, copper naphthenate, acid copper chromate, chromated zinc chloride, sodium tetrachlorophenolate, zinc naphthenate, 3-iodo-2-propynyl butylcarbamate and barium metaborate.

Some of the new EPA regulations will ban some uses of the preservatives on wood intended for use inside homes and other rules will permit other uses as long as two coats of a sealer are applied.

The major focus of EPA's concern, Moore said, was the 10,000 to 20,000 workers in the construction and wood products industries who handle treated wood or preservatives.

The new rules will require, in many instances, protective clothing, respirators and processing in closed systems.

Though the agency did not give estimates of how many cancers or other illnesses its actions would prevent, background documents distributed at the news conference said the risk of developing cancer faced by the most exposed workers should fall a hundred-fold or a thousand-fold, from about four chances in 100 to between four in 10,000 and four in 100,000.

Paul R. Lapsley, chief of the review branch of the agency's office of pesticide programs, said, "It would be irresponsible" to try to estimate prevented cancers in society as a whole because "the exposure data are so uncertain."

The agency said it was acting on the basis of evidence that showed creosote caused cancer in laboratory animals and had been associated with skin cancers in workers; that animal studies showed pentachlorophenols and arsenic compounds caused birth defects; that arsenic has been shown to be associated with human cancer among people who drank contaminated water or breathed contaminated air; and that a major contaminant of pentachlorophenol, one of the dioxin compounds known as hexachlorodibenzop-dioxin or HxCDD, was a cause of cancer in animals, though only about 1 percent as powerful as the most potent dioxin, TCDD.

No TCDD has been found in preservatives, Moore said.

Industry spokesmen generally said they could live with the new rules.

Clouds Reflect 18-Hour Cycle

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The clearest photographs yet of Neptune and its giant clouds have enabled scientists for the first time to precisely determine the length of a day on the solar system's eighth planet — 17 hours and 50 minutes.

The new photographs show three 5,000-mile-diameter cloud patches in Neptune's outer atmosphere in the planet's middle latitudes.

The clouds are believed to rotate at the same speed as the entire planet, so the photos "allowed us to measure the length of the day on Neptune by watching cloud features move all the way around," Richard J. Terrile, a Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientist, said Wednesday.

Terrile said it's the first time scientists have directly measured the length of a day on Neptune.

"These are some of the clearest pictures ever taken of Neptune," he said. "... It's the first time we've been able to see the rotation of the clouds in Neptune directly."

Previous observations by telescope showed changes in the brightness of sunlight reflected by Neptune's clouds as the planet rotated — changes that led scientists to conclude that a day on the planet lasted somewhere between 17 and 18½ hours, Terrile said.

The latest series of photos, while still fuzzy by earthly standards, clearly shows the cloud patches and their movement as the planet rotates. Terrile said he calculated that a day on Neptune is about 17 hours and 50 minutes long.

The clouds, probably made of frozen methane, likely are relatively fixed features of Neptune's atmosphere, like the giant red spot in Jupiter's atmosphere, Terrile said. So the clouds' 17-hour, 50-minute rotation corresponds with the rotation speed of the planet, he added.

But if winds make the clouds move at a different speed than the planet itself, the actual length of day could be different, Terrile said.

Even newer photographs of Neptune await examination to determine if the clouds remain stable, he said.

Neptune, at a distance of nearly 3 billion miles from the sun, is not visible to the naked eye on Earth, even though it is the fourth largest of the solar system's nine planets with a diameter of 31,000 miles. By comparison, Earth's diameter measures some 8,000 miles.

Jet Propulsion Laboratory operates America's unmanned space exploration program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. JPL scientists expect to learn much more about Neptune in August 1989, when the Voyager 2 spacecraft encounters the planet and its moons.

Terrile and Bradford A. Smith of the University of Arizona took the detailed photographs of Neptune in May 1983 using the du Pont telescope at the Carnegie Institution's Las Campanas Observatory in Chile. The photographs, which recorded light at nearly infrared wavelengths invisible to the human eye, were not released until Wednesday because "it takes a long time to interpret them" and the researchers were busy with other studies, Terrile said.

Researchers already believed clouds existed on Neptune, but Terrile said the latest photos were "exciting because clearly there's evidence of weather patterns in the (planet's) atmosphere."

Mother Forced Kids To Steal

MOORHEAD, Minn. (AP) — Two children who slipped a note to a store clerk saying they would be beaten if they didn't steal something had been forced by their mother to shoplift merchandise worth thousands of dollars over several months, authorities said.

The children, a 16-year-old boy and his 12-year-old sister, were in temporary foster homes today after telling authorities about the shoplifting scheme they said was masterminded by their mother, officials said.

The mother, a 36-year-old rural Moorhead resident, remained at large, said Clay County Attorney Larry Mickelberg, who refused to identify the woman or her children. Mickelberg said his office planned to charge her today with possession of stolen property.

The children told officials their mother sent them into department stores in Moorhead and nearby Fargo, N.D., over a period of months with instructions to steal merchandise, Mickelberg said. She threatened to beat them if they returned empty-handed, he said.

"Most abusive parents beat their kids if they steal," said Mickelberg. "It's uncommon that she would beat them for not stealing. It's amazing."

Clay County Sheriff's Deputy Larry Costello said the children helped Fargo police and Clay County detectives recover about $3,000 worth of stolen property Tuesday from their home north of Moorhead.

Stereos, appliances, lawn and garden tools, books, wall hangings and balls of yarn were among the items confiscated in the search, Costello said.

Officials would not disclose how the children managed to shoplift often bulky items without being caught. "One of the kids said he was good, and it would appear he is," Costello said.

Many stolen items were returned to the stores for cash, so the cache found at the home does not include all the merchandise stolen by the children, Costello said.

The plan came to authorities' attention Friday when one of the children handed a note to a Fargo store clerk. The note said they were in the store to shoplift and that their mother, who was outside, might beat them if they came back without any merchandise, Mickelberg said.

The clerk arranged a safe place for the children to stay and called police, who placed them under foster care, Mickelberg said. In the meantime, the mother fled, he said.

Later that day, she was arrested and sent to Bismarck, N.D., where she was wanted on an unrelated charge, Mickelberg said. But she was released on bail Tuesday, just moments before Clay County authorities notified Burleigh County authorities about the shoplifting, he said.

The children's stories "appear to be credible," Mickelberg said. "If they didn't, we wouldn't be proceeding with this case."

The children will not face prosecution, he said.

Liberty Cart Drama To Open

KENANSVILLE — The Liberty Cart historical outdoor drama opens its ninth season Friday with the traditional supper-in-the-pines at 6:30 p.m. The Cripple Creek Cloggers will perform in the William R. Kenan Memorial Amphitheatre at 7:30 and the drama begins at 8:15 p.m.

"The Liberty Cart," Randolph Umberger's outdoor drama about the development of eastern North Carolina during colonial and civil war times, plays each Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening through Aug. 25. Group rates are available on tickets and the Liberty Tour, which includes a tour of historic Kenansville and Liberty Hall, dinner and a performance of the show. Tickets may be reserved and tours must be booked in advance through "The Liberty Cart" office, P.O. Box 470, Kenansville, N.C. 28349; 296-0721.

NATURAL AND MAN-MADE APPEAL ... of Shipyard Landing in southeastern Bertie County is evident in the flowering spike of a pickerel weed, whose flower shadow is dramatically reflected by the sun on one of its leaves, left; and in the view the curved water of Cashoke Creek and two of the landing's remaining shore ring of buildings.

A Favorite Place For Fishermen, Travelers And Artist Francis Speight Bertie County's Shipyard Landing

There are four ideal times of the year to visit Shipyard Landing in southeastern Bertie County — in the winter when the bare branches of trees reflect graphically in the dark water; in spring when the area is bathed in new pastel green and song birds carry out their courtship; in summer when golden light bathes lush growths of lily pads, pickerel weed and cattail, and in autumn when the water mirrors the red, gold and russet of foliage.

It is no wonder that this lovely curve of water and trees on the short Cashoke Creek is a favorite landscape painting site for North Carolina artist Francis Speight, native of Bertie County and now a resident of Greenville.

"Strangely enough, I had never visited Shipyard Landing during my youth in Bertie County," Speight recalled. "My home place is in central Bertie County, northwest of Windsor, and for some reason in my earlier years I never ventured in that area except once briefly in 1928."

Speight remembers that it was in 1961, after his return to Greenville from Pennsylvania that he and his wife, Sara, first began making trips to Shipyard Landing. "At that time it was still a very active place, much changed from what it is today. That was before highway 308 was extended from Windsor and joined to highway 45 south of Merry Hill, which was then extended to cross the rivers near Shipyard to Plymouth." (A long modern bridge a short distance south of Shipyard Landing spans the Cashie, Middle and Roanoke rivers at the point where they empty into the Albemarle Sound).

"On one visit, Francis and I and our daughter Elizabeth used one of Mr. Smithwick's boats to travel to the end of Cashoke Creek," Sara Speight commented. "We wanted to view an ancient cypress tree said to be located there. It was a lovely trip, we paddled our way to the spot and saw the huge old cypress. Later, Francis decided to try to reach the site of the tree by going through the woods. He got into an area that was marshy and had real difficulty getting out."

For the past 20 years, Francis Speight has returned time and again to Shipyard Landing to paint the scene there. "I've done considerable sketching at the site, as well as several paintings," Speight pointed out. "One of the Shipyard paintings is owned by the Greenville Museum of Art. It has been loaned to East Carolina University for a traveling show which was recently on view at St. John's Gallery in Wilmington. I understand it will later be shown at Gray Greenville on campus and will then go to Green Hill Center in Greensboro before coming back to the museum here in Greenville."

Speight said another of his Shipyard Landing paintings is to be shown at Wingate College.

Other paintings of Shipyard Landing are in private collections, including a large one owned by Dr. Stephen White of Greenville.

"I suppose it was inevitable that once the connecting highway to Plymouth was put in, it would affect the place," Speight said. "The dense forest behind the landing was cut to make room for the road. The huge cypress tree that for years was a landmark at Shipyard is now gone, as is Smithwick's store, which served the fishing and visiting public."

Speight said the name Shipyard comes from the days of the Civil War. "It is my understanding that during the war, a number of Confederate boats were built at a small shipyard located there. These boats were transported by connecting water routes to the bigger waters of the Albemarle Sound."

Shipyard Landing today is still used by local fisherman as a launching site for their boats. However, the number of fisherman using the site has constantly dwindled as they have turned to modern wildlife access stations with their efficient boat-launching ramps. Four of the older buildings still stand, their weathered wood becoming more silver-gray each year.

Today's activity at Shipyard is a far cry from past years when Shipyard Landing was the land's end point for the southeastern tip of Bertie County, a gathering place for area fishermen who fished in the waters of Cashoke Creek, Cashie, Middle and Roanoke rivers as well as the western end of Albemarle Sound.

Nevertheless the old buildings, their porch-type moorings, and a varied display of trees and flowers retain much of the charm of this spot, which is easily overlooked by motorists speeding their way between Windsor and Plymouth.

In July, the water's surface at shore's edge is bedecked with the saucer-like leaves and the golden flowers of the cow or spatter dock lily. Thick stands of pickerel weed with their prominent triangular leaves and bluish-purple flower spikes add a royal touch of color to the scene; and mixed in with them are the tall growth of cattail displaying slender green leaves and the circular chocolate-colored cylinder composed of tightly-packed minute female fruits.

Full-foliaged trees overhang the dark water and long scarves of silvery Spanish moss hang from tree branches and sway in each breeze.

One plant to be avoided at Shipyard, however, is the poison ivy vine which climbs in abundance around some of the trees along the water's edge at one point.

For the artist, the cameraman, the fisherman or those who enjoy rural sightseeing, Shipyard Landing still provides enchanting vestiges of a once more active rural attraction.

Getting There From Greenville

There are two principal routes to Shipyard Landing from Greenville. One is via Williamston to Windsor, taking the downtown bypass to U.S. 17, turning right on the outskirts of Windsor on 308, then turning right on 45 for the short distance to Shipyard Landing.

The other route is through Pactolus, turning left at the first road past the VOA road off 264, proceeding to U.S. 17 near Old Ford, traveling north one-quarter miles on 17, then taking 171 from Old Ford to Jamesville, Plymouth and picking up 45 north 3 miles east of Plymouth.

Either approach is about 60 miles distance from Greenville.

Be watchful, the turnoff to Shipyard from 45 is unmarked and is easily missed.

An America's 400th Anniversary Feature

ONE OF THE AREA'S BEAUTIES ... to be found away from the water's edge is the gold-petals and orange fringe of St. John's wort. This showy flower is not common to coastal Carolina, being more prevalent in the mountain and piedmont areas of the state.

PLANTS AND WATER ... combine to present a fascinating detail of colors and shapes. At left are slender cattail leaves, at bottom the tips of pickerel weed leaves, and on the water's surface the light-reflecting leaves of cow Lilies.

A SINGLE BOAT ... is sheltered under a porch mooring that extends from one of the buildings out into the water of Cashoke Creek. Note the rank growth of pickerel weed growing between a small tree fallen into the water and the tin-covered building.

Passports Bring Long Lines

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the longest lines in New York these days has nothing to do with a Broadway show or the Michael Jackson tour. The reward for the toughest wait in town is a dark blue passport.

With American tourism abroad at record levels, the State Department has been handing out passports at a furious clip. In May, the latest month for which figures are available, the government issued 53 percent more passports nationwide than in the same month last year.

Nowhere has this sudden surge of wanderlust been more evident than outside the New York Passport Agency on Fifth Avenue and 50th Street in Rockefeller Center, where passers-by continually ask: "What's everybody waiting for?"

The answer is that people are waiting to save time. Mail-order passports are available through post offices and county clerks' offices, but they take four to six weeks to arrive. At the 13 passport agencies around the nation, passports are mailed out the day after people apply.

So those in a hurry have found themselves waiting in the summer sun, each consoling the next with the words: "I had no choice."

The New York agency has been processing passport applications at a rate of slightly under 1,000 a day. The line starts before dawn, stretches two blocks by 7 a.m. and creeps along.

It is amusing to some, infuriating to many others.

"They try to bribe you," said a bemused security guard, Levern Tillery, 27, whose job is to keep the line in order. One guard succumbed and took $50, he said.

"That was his last money," said Tillery. "He's unemployed now."

People often wait in line half the day only to be turned away at closing time, 3:30 p.m. They're back in line the next day.

Gena Giobbi, 24, of Manhattan, got into line shortly after 10 a.m. Tuesday and was told to go home three hours later. She left, came back Wednesday at 6:45 a.m. and "was nervous that I was late."

She made it to the passport counter a little more than four hours later, relieved but angry. So did another man just ahead of her, who left his house in New Jersey at 5:30 a.m. after waiting eight hours in line the day before.

"There have been delays and waits at various offices in our peak season, which began in March," said Richard Weeks, a press officer for the State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs in Washington. "But there is no other office experiencing problems comparable to those in New York."

The reasons for the passport crush are numerous, but most experts agree that the keys are the health of the economy and the strength of the dollar abroad.

"The economy is much better than it has been," said John St. Denis, regional director of the Passport Agency in New York. "The dollar is stronger, the airlines are coming up with good, inexpensive tours, and there has been a lot more emphasis on overseas travel. Look at the Sunday travel sections — the heavy emphasis appears to be on foreign travel."

St. Denis said lines began at the passport office in February, started spilling onto the sidewalks in late May or June, and have been growing steadily since. He insisted that most people in line could have gotten passports through the mail.

"If you're going overseas, you have got to know two months ahead of time," he said, with a touch of exasperation. "You just don't pick up and go on an overseas vacation on three days' notice."

St. Denis apparently has not been talking to the people in front of his office.

"I just became sure that I had the time to travel about four days ago," said Warner Fite, 23, a Manhattan investment banker who is bound for Nairobi, Kenya, in the next two weeks. "There wasn't enough time to do it through the mail."

"I had no other option," echoed his neighbor in line, Skip Snow, a 25-year-old Manhattan artist who is going to Germany and Italy. "I just became absolutely positive that I was going to travel about two days ago."

And Carolyn Horne, 31, who took the day off from her job in a Manhattan public relations agency, said she decided "at the last minute" to take her 6-year-old son on a trip to Italy and needed to get him a passport — fast.

Mrs. Horne was angry about the line, but resigned to the wait. "I don't have a choice," she said.

Call of the Wild

Philosopher and nature-lover Henry David Thoreau was born on this day in 1817. Famed for his efforts to live simply, "to suck out all the marrow of life," Thoreau's love affair with nature was not always harmonious. Flames from his camp fire once spread out of control, destroying 300 acres of forest. Another forest played a role in his death. While studying tree stumps, Thoreau caught a cold, triggering the tuberculosis that eventually killed him at age 44.

New York Governor Shaken In Wreck

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo was "shaken up" but unhurt when his car was involved in a seven-car, chain-reaction accident, a spokesman said.

Cuomo's car was struck Wednesday afternoon as he was going to a hotel in suburban Cheektowaga, said a spokesman for the governor, Timothy Russert.

The governor, who has a bad back, was "shaken up" by the accident but did not require hospitalization, said Russert.

Cuomo is to give the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention on Monday.

An aide, Gary Eiseman, was taken to a hospital after the accident, Russert said. Eiseman was riding in the car ahead of the governor's and suffered a cut.

FmHA Increases Funding Available For Farm Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from members of Congress and farm-state governors, the Reagan administration has made more money available for farm operating loans by the Farmers Home Administration this fiscal year.

The additional funds — totaling $250 million — were announced Wednesday by Agriculture Secretary John Block. The money is being shifted from other FmHA loan programs to help the agency meet farm operating loan demand through the end of this fiscal year on Sept. 30.

Block had asked White House approval for the transfer of $350 million from other FmHA accounts, including $100 million for farm ownership loans in addition to the $250 million for operating loans.

The transfer announced by Block includes $150 million in direct-lending funds from FmHA's single-family housing program, and $100 million in loan guarantees from business and industry loans.

"This move will help ensure that farmers' needs for credit to finance this year's production will be met," Block said. "These funds are in addition to a record high $1.91 billion already budgeted for operating loans this year for Farmers Home Administration."

According to the agency, only $49 million remained in the FmHA's operating loan fund as of June 30, including $30.7 million for direct loans and $18.3 million for guaranteed loans.

Officials said they had no indication whether the Office of Management and Budget had approved or would approve the $100 million balance that had been requested for farm ownership loans.

However, the FmHA farm ownership program, appropriated at $675 million this year, still had $73.7 million available as of June 30, including $51.1 million in direct loan funds and $22.6 million in guaranteed money.

A similar situation arose last year when FmHA juggled about $400 million from other programs to replenish the farm operating loan account. However, only about half of that transfer was actually needed.

Palace Dynamited

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — Police say leftist guerrillas dynamited a 15th century Inca palace that was being restored by the government in the Andes of southern Peru.

The stone palace of Tupac Yupanqui, the warrior-king who ruled from 1471-93, is near the village of Vilcashuaman, 75 miles southeast of Ayacucho.

The region has been the center of activity by the Maoist-oriented movement Shining Path, which has been fighting the government for four years.

Police said the main door of the Kallanka Palace was badly damaged in the attack Sunday and two yards of wall were destroyed. It was the first report of a guerrilla attack on a Peruvian archaeological site.

Political Movies Assured Of Prime-Time TV

NEW YORK (AP) — When the lights go out at the political conventions this summer, television has little choice but to shut up and watch the movie.

A darkened convention hall in prime time means show time, when organizers serve popcorn to the public with propaganda films boosting their party and presidential nominee.

"When the lights go out, we're kind of helpless," said David Brinkley of ABC, a veteran convention broadcaster who understands the symbiotic relationship between TV and politics.

These films are not basement productions. The Republican National Committee had a film crew recording key cinematic moments — some of it exclusive — during President Reagan's trip to China and his 1983 summit with world leaders in Williamsburg, Va.

The Democrats, who meet next week in San Francisco, have scheduled commemorative films about Harry Truman and Eleanor Roosevelt, and the media consultant for Walter Mondale is expected to have a message movie ready before the candidate's acceptance speech next Thursday night.

The networks need light to operate. Without it, they are all but obligated to go along with the convention program, which means rolling the political film.

"But I really don't find that objectionable," said Brinkley. "Everybody knows what a convention is, and they know that the parties are putting on the film to do themselves as much good as possible."

The networks will say, on air, that the films are party puff pieces. This is one way of keeping a journalistic distance. Other ways are saying a "spontaneous" demonstration has been staged and aggressively reporting major controversies and dissenting viewpoints.

During the movies, the networks can show taped interviews, find live interviews outside the hall or go to commercial. But they usually don't.

Even when the lights are back on, TV can only react to what the politicians do. "We're there to cover the event, not be the event," said Dan Rather of CBS.

"The TV networks are passive in terms of developing the story," said NBC's John Chancellor, a longtime convention reporter, anchor and, now, analyst. "The story comes to us."

The biggest change in the TV-political relationship is that party leaders understand TV better and are more adept at controlling the images.

"Politics is communication, and TV is the best medium for delivering our messages to the largest number of people," said Anita Dunn, communications consultant to the Democratic National Committee. "Until 1968, we didn't realize how effective a tool it was."

If, for example, the Democrats want to reach women voters, Ms. Dunn said, the party would schedule some speeches on the Equal Rights Amendment in prime time.

Then there is TV's understandable fascination with the most eyecat-ching parts of the convention. TV loves a parade.

On cue, usually when the most viewers are available in prime time, the parties will strike up the bands, unleash thousands of balloons from the rafters and paint themselves red, white and blue with rehearsed demonstrations of support.

"Visually, you're looking for a happy convention with placards waving, crowds screaming and hats flying through the air," said Ms. Dunn. "Traditionally, the balloons are released from the ceiling on the last night. Hopefully, they'll drop this year. In 1980, they got stuck up there."

Jackson Dons Disguise, Goes On Tour Of Shopping Center

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Jackson, in town for the second stop of his nationwide concert Victory Tour, strolled through a shopping mall for about 20 minutes disguised as an old man with a mustache and beard, until he was recognized.

"Everyone knew he was in the building, all of a sudden, and then he left," George Lancaster of the marketing department of the Galleria shopping mall on Dallas' north side said Wednesday.

Later, Jackson did some door-to-door visiting for the Jehovah's Witnesses, of which he is a member.

A caravan of 24 semi-trailer trucks has moved the Jacksons' tour — complete with lasers, fireworks and dazzling costumes — to Dallas from Kansas City, Mo., for a three-concert stand beginning Friday night.

The superstar singer left his trademark white sequined glove and Sgt. Pepper jacket at his hotel during his shopping trip.

But the "old man" dressed in a raggedy hat and brown-and-white checked jacket had heads turning for a second and third look all along the mall, passers-by said. Word quickly spread from Saks Fifth Avenue to Marshall Fields that Michael Jackson and a brother and sister were in the mall.

Randy Jackson was casually dressed in beige pants and shirt when he strolled through the mall with two bodyguards about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Yolanda Williams, a clerk at a beauty salon, said she thought Randy was Michael.

Randy stopped and asked her if she planned to attend one of the concerts, she said.

"I told him, 'No, I couldn't afford it,'" she said.

Earlier Wednesday, the Dallas Morning News filed, then withdrew, a theft complaint against a security guard for the Jacksons, alleging that he confiscated a reporter's notes. The notes were returned eight hours after the incident, the newspaper said.

Howard Bloom, the tour's publicist, said the guard thought the notes contained information that would threaten the Jacksons' privacy. But Burl Osborne, senior vice president-editor of the News, said the "laws against theft and other Constitutional guarantees are not suspended for the Jacksons."

After his mall visit, Michael Jackson spent a couple of hours in a north Dallas neighborhood with members of a Jehovah's Witness congregation.

DYNAMIC DUO — Actresses Joan Collins and Elizabeth Taylor arrived together, causing somewhat of a sensation, at a premier in Beverly Hills, Calif., earlier this week. They attended the debut performance of "Comfort and Joy" for the British Academy of Film and Television Arts. The performance also was attended by Britain's Princess Anne. (AP Laserphoto)

ECU Holds Band Camp

ECU News Bureau
Approximately 350 school-aged musicians from the Carolinas and Virginia participated in East Carolina University's annual Summer Band Camp June 24-July 6.

The students lived on campus while attending camp sessions. These included full ensemble and sectional rehearsals, music clinics, workshops, music classes and performances. Campers also took part in recreation facilities available on campus, such as films, sports and social events.

Campers, performing in camp bands, presented two public concerts during the two-week program. Awards were given for outstanding performance at the conclusion of the camps.

ECU's Summer Band Camp is the largest summer program for pre-college youth held on campus each year. It is open to student instrumentalists aged 12 years or older upon the recommendation of their band directors or music teachers.

Names and schools of local Summer Band Camp participants follow:

AYDEN — Ayden-Grifton High School; Ginny Baldree.

GREENVILLE — J.H. Ans. to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-12

EKDFZFWHD KB-PWLCKHKLN, XH
GXND GXPSD, KBTSWHPKC EFWH-
DKL'N EZHTSKN

Yesterday's Cryptquip CHARMING COUNTERFEITER-TURNED-SMITHY IS GOOD AT FORGERY.

Today's Cryptquip clue: We equals A

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 13, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds it necessary for you to use extreme care where your career and credit is concerned, so do nothing that can lessen your standing in the community.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get your regular work done very well today and gain more benefits from it, then you can have a happy time in the evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't take any risks with that new venture you think will be so great, and tonight you can get off to a good time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your responsibilities and handle them in a meticulous, sure way. Don't argue with your mate in the morning.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Avoid any arguments with outsiders and maintain the peace. Tonight you can get some interesting work done well.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get your work done in a most accurate way in the daytime, and tonight meet with associates. Take any necessary health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take care you do not get into amusements that are more expensive than you can afford. Plan the coming week's activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study home conditions and know how to improve them quietly, then tonight be with good friends at entertainments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be careful with regular allies today and don't speak unkindly otherwise there will be trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be careful with financial affairs during the day since many mistakes could easily be made. Make phone calls tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You feel depressed over lack of progress in daytime, but smile in the evening. Rid yourself of personal anxiety.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Every opportunity is yours during the daytime to show you have patience and can solve problems wisely.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Find the right way to assist a friend in trouble who looks to you for assistance. Get your affairs in order in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will understand what different problems are and should have a fine education in order to know how to solve them wisely. Provide cheerful surroundings for your progeny to grow in, otherwise a depressive can emerge here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

In the good old days, when you used the closed hand to ruff and dummy's trumps to draw the trumps, the technique was called a "dummy reversal." Because of transfer bids, these days declarer often has the short trump hand, so here is a "déclarer reversal" from a recent Wales vs. Ireland match.

The bidding sequence shown is that of the Irish pair. We are not sure what North intended bidding had his partner shown a king—possibly seven no trump for safety.

There are 12 top tricks, and the Irish declarer relied on his traditional luck for the 13th—he attempted the heart finesse. Down one.

The Welsh declarer was Patrick Jourdain, editor of the International Bridge Press Association Bulletin. He also reached seven spades, but he chose a considerably better line.

He won the ace of diamonds in hand and immediately ruffed a diamond in dummy. To test trumps, he cashed the ace of spades and then crossed to hand with the queen. When both defenders followed, the hand was a near laydown. He ruffed another diamond low, returned to hand with the ace of clubs and ruffed his last diamond with the king of trumps. Now he came back to the closed hand with the ace of hearts and used the jack of spades to draw the last outstanding trump, discarding a heart from the board on this trick. The table was left with nothing but club winners. Making seven-odd.

Note that the defenders could have prevailed had West led a club. That attacks one of declarer's entries before he can put it to use. If he wins in hand, he is an entry short for the reversal. If he wins in dummy, he has no entry back to the clubs after ruffing diamonds and drawing trumps.

Income Rises

CHARLOTTE (AP) — First Union Corp.'s second quarter net income rose to $20.4 million from the 1983 second quarter amount of 11.9 million, the company announced.

On a per share basis, net income increased 53 percent to $1.13, compared with last year's second quarter amount of 74 cents per share.

For the first six months of 1984, net income increased 31 percent to $38.5 million from the $29.3 million earned during the same period last year. On a per share basis, net income increased to $2.13, compared to $1.89 per share for the first six months of 1983.

Salvadoran War Affecting Public Education

By CHRIS ANGELO

Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — At a school in the north, pupils sat on the floor, their desks boards resting on top of bricks. In a town in the south, there was one teacher for 300 pupils. Everywhere, textbooks were a rarity.

Shortages of funds, facilities and teachers and a high dropout rate are chronic in Salvadoran education. Although these are common educational problems in most of the Third World, the struggle to learn to read and write in El Salvador is worsened by the country's 4½-year-old civil war.

"This morning we heard shots, six bullets," said a teacher in Soyapango, a city teeming with refugees on the outskirts of San Salvador. "We're used to hearing them, like we're used to hearing rockets."

The gunfire did not stop class that morning. In other parts of the country, where bullets and town takeovers by leftist guerrillas are even more common, educators say classes are suspended when there are clashes and resumed when they're over.

More than 800 schools are believed to be closed this year because of the war, an Education Ministry statistician said.

"There is a double effect," a university investigator said of the war. "The closing down of schools in rural areas has been almost massive and there has been migration of teachers from rural to urban and the eastern to western part of the country."

Like most sources in El Salvador, they asked not to be identified to avoid reprisals.

Fighting is concentrated in the east and north and is mostly in rural areas, where it's always been difficult to attract teachers.

About 275 members of the National Teachers Union have been killed in political violence accompanying the war, many of them because they were considered leftists, teachers and the investigator said.

The fighting also forces families to migrate.

"The enrollment changes are endless," the director of 14 schools in an outlying area of San Salvador said. "Students leave because of family problems, because of economic and political problems. Those who cannot find work go somewhere else. Every month tons of children leave and tons of children come."

Nonetheless, classes have been available to at least 70 percent of the refugees, according to Luis Hernan Conde, El Salvador's director of basic education.

A school at El Amatillo, on the Honduras-El Salvador border, had "one teacher last year, two the year before and this year it's closed," said the local director of a voluntary agency with programs in the east. He said he knew of schools that had one teacher for 200 pupils last year, none this year.

He asked not to be identified to avoid reprisals against the agency's projects and workers.

"The teacher in the rural school is much more resourceful," said Norman Tattersall, a Canadian who is local director of World Vision, another voluntary agency. "They are not waiting for chalk for the blackboard. They're out writing on the ground."

Another agency planned to donate desks, blackboards and notebooks to the pupils using brick and board desks in Copinolito, Chalatenango, and to other schools in the northern area.

At the school in Soyapango, sitting atop a curve in the rocky street, a gray-haired teacher counted the small pile of bills and coins on the wooden table that serves as her desk.

"We're taking up a collection for the classrooms we're building," she said. "We've been trying to build these three classrooms for three years." It added up to $27.50, short of the $95 needed.

The war also has eaten away at education funds. The country's education budget dropped from the equivalent of $144 million in 1979 to $108 million this year, Conde said.

El Salvador's constitution guarantees free education, but most pupils still must find the money to buy at least uniforms and supplies.

In a country where the average per capita income is estimated at $475, many cannot afford it. Many children must work instead of study; economic factors remain a bigger obstacle to education than bullets.

Nine years of education are required. But of those who enter first grade, only 19 percent finish ninth, Conde said. The figure is unchanged from 1960, except that more finish sixth grade now, he said.

Literacy was estimated at 62 percent of the adult population in 1981. Enrollment in the first through ninth grades dropped after the start of the war but increased to 852,000 in 1983, still below the 1979 level.

Bone Disorder Keeps Child From Active Life

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — At age 5, Hilary Trout doesn't know the simple joy of running with her friends, playing hide-and-seek or climbing on a backyard playset.

Instead, she must live the fragile life of a child with abnormally brittle bones, the result of a rare disorder.

While doing nothing more than standing in church or turning in her mother's arms, the Strasburg girl has broken more than a dozen bones.

She has been in a body cast four times, in traction for three-week periods and now is forced to use a walker.

While there is no cure for Hilary's osteogenesis imperfecta, her parents' church has rallied with a fund drive to help offset medical and other expenses.

No fund drive goal has been set by the Lampeter United Methodist Church, but money raised will help pay for full-length, plastic leg braces that will protect Hilary's limbs as she grows older.

The cost: between $1,200 and $1,600.

The daughter of Barry and Joan Trout, Hilary has recently been in an 8-pound cast from mid-abdomen to her toes. The cast was needed because, as it had in the past, her right thighbone had broken simply from the weight of her body.

"We were standing in church," recalled Mrs. Trout, 30. "All of a sudden, she grabbed her leg and said, 'Mommy, I think I broke my leg.'"

On another occasion, a leg bone broke when Hilary turned while lying in her mother's arms. As in that instance, most of the breaks have been in Hilary's legs and feet, although she has fractured her skull and suffered a broken wrist, her mother said.
