Pitt In Top 10 Hazardous Waste Counties

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County is one of the 10 largest hazardous waste-generating counties in North Carolina, according to a report issued by the North Carolina Department of Human Resources, but local authorities say disposal procedures eliminate danger to the public.

The hazardous wastes produced in this county are treated before waste water reaches the public and are therefore no danger to the consumer, a Greenville Utilities official said. The solid wastes disposed of by Pitt County Memorial Hospital and certain industries in the area also afford little danger to the public, spokesmen said, because the wastes are treated on the site of production.

Pitt County ranks ninth in the state with 37,037,200 pounds of hazardous waste produced in 1983, according to the annual "Report on Hazardous Waste in North Carolina." Mecklenburg led the state with 5,729,029,659 pounds of waste produced. The other leading counties, in order of amount of hazardous waste produced, are Wake, Lee, Nash, Surry, Person, Gaston, Davidson and Iredell. Neither Greene nor Martin counties produced any hazardous wastes in 1983.

Most of the waste generated in North Carolina was toxic, corrosive or reactive. Toxic wastes contain metals, organic chemicals and pesticides that are poisonous, such as arsenic, barium or mercury. Corrosive wastes can eat through materials such as steel and include sulfuric acid, battery acid and electroplating solution water. Reactive wastes are solvents and other organic chemicals which generate toxic fumes.

O.W. Strickland with the state's Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch said in a telephone interview that 95.9 percent of the waste generated in North Carolina is treated on the site at which it is produced.

"Most of the wastes are treated to remove the hazardous constituents (parts) and the (dangerous) residue is sent out of state for burial," Strickland said.

According to Strickland's reports, the largest generators of hazardous wastes in Pitt County (those that produce 1,000 kilograms or more hazardous waste per month) are Winterville Machine Works, Burroughs Wellcome, McGraw Edison, the N.C. Department of Transportation, Union Carbide and Vermont American.

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities Commission, said hazardous wastes cause no problem in the local waste water system because area industries must pretreat the waste water they produce before it is discharged into the local water system.

Horne said the industries in Pitt County which produce hazardous wastes are restricted by rules and regulations as to what the industry can dump into the local system. These industries remove the toxic materials by treating the wastes to remove any harmful substances.

Horne said all local industries comply with the standards. "The hazardous waste doesn't come into our sewer system knowingly," Horne said.

Horne added that the large amount of solid wastes produced by Pitt County Memorial Hospital must be disposed of, and the hospital does (Please turn to page 12)

Council Rejects Zoning Petitions

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

By a vote of 3-2, the Greenville City Council Thursday night denied zoning requests by local contractor Collice C. Moore to allow for high density residential and residential/agricultural developments on acreage near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

This was the second time Moore's requests concerning the zoning of two tracts of land located on the southwestern corner of N.C. 43 and SR 1204 had been before the council. During the council's regular June meeting, Moore's request was continued when three unexpected petitions opposing the zoning proposals were submitted. However, the council later found that the petitions were invalid, because the land in question was not within the city's extraterritorial limits. Mayor Janice B. Buck made a public apology to Moore at the meeting for the error and delay.

Council members voting in favor of Moore's request were: Judy Greene and Stuart Shinn. Councilmen William Hadden, M.W.

Aldridge and Mayor Pro-tem Ed Carter denied Moore's request.

Referring to arguments presented at the meeting by people owning land adjacent to Moore's property, Aldridge told the council, "I feel I must deny this request after hearing what I've heard here tonight."

Hadden added that he also had serious reservations about allowing Moore to place townhomes on the land in question, because overpopulation problems could arise.

Speaking for the 17 land owners in attendance who were opposed to Moore's request, Julian White (Bubba) Rawl, a land owner himself, told the council that people in the area objected to Moore's request for several reasons. He said the projected building of 153 units at the site would bring an additional 428 people into the area which would generate 1,071 additional car trips per day in an area that is already congested. (All the figures above, Rawl said, are approximations based on city information.)

He said the addition of those extra people and vehicles would further (Please turn to page 12)

Storms Startle County

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

If you awoke in the wee hours with your house shaking and fireworks flashing through your bedroom curtains, you know about the super-charged thunderstorms that ambled through Pitt County early today.

Despite the storms' sharp lightning, sleep-startling thunder and inch to inch-and-one-half rainfall, little damage was reported, although an employee of a local industry was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital after reportedly being stunned by lightning.

A man identified as Donald Haislip was holding onto a chain hoist at Yale Materials Handling Corp. when lightning struck nearby, stunning him, Yale personnel director Larry Hamby said. Haislip was transported to PCHM by Greenville Rescue but according to Hamby he was "not seriously injured." Haislip was working the 4:30 p.m.-3 a.m. shift at Yale.

GUC experienced only minor damage from the storm according to Malcolm Green, superintendent of the electrical department. "We had a 30-40 minute outage in the industrial park area that interrupted power to Burroughs Wellcome, Fieldcrest Mills, etc.," said Green. "We believe we just had so many lightning strikes that every time the system would recover, it would get hit again."

Green said a direct lightning hit on a power line on the Briley Road near Wellcome Middle School blew an insulator and shut down power to area residents during the night. "We had no serious outages from the (Please turn to page 12)

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

SURVEYER DISCLAIMER

The East Carolina University Department of Sociology has again asked Hotline to let it be known that someone apparently is placing random telephone calls in this area claiming to be employed by the ECU Sociology Department. The caller says he's conducting a survey and begins during the course of it to ask personal sexually oriented questions. Dr. David Knox, a member of the sociology faculty, said this "surveyer" is in no way associated with the department and he suggests that those called by him hang up and immediately contact the Greenville Police Department relaying any information that might assist the police in determining who the caller is.

HUMANE SOCIETY APPEAL

Kitten and puppy boom season is here and the Pitt County Humane Society is in urgent need of households willing to serve as Humane Society foster homes. Anyone who can keep animals until they are adopted is asked to call the Humane Society president Bobbie Parsons, 756-1268. The society also appeals for the donation of dog houses for use at foster homes.

Collard Poetry Extols Greens' Virtues

It may never rival Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," but poets are compiling a book about collards, the leafy greens that Southerners either love or loathe.

Alex Albright and fellow East Carolina University English professor Luke Whisnant are collating poems for next month's 10th Ayden Collard Festival. And Albright said contest entries for "Leaves of Greens: The Collard Poems" reflect both strong feelings about collards.

"I have a lot of bad memories from my childhood associated with collards," he says. "I remember not being able to leave the table until I finished all the collards on my plate, which meant a lot of long nights at the table. I also remember trying to slip them into the trash and getting caught."

Not so for H. Fairfax Conquest, a Richmond, Va., physician who was inspired to write three collard poems. One of them goes: "I just love my collards."

The dolls of cabbage patch. And pray each time I eat them, 'Lord, plant me one more batch.'" Walt Titchener of Tarboro was somewhat less enthralled.

"Collards are good vegetables, I think.

The only thing is they're green and they stink."

And Shirley M. Dennis, who will prepare all the festival's collards at her family's restaurant, wrote:

"Collards, collards, as strange as it seems,

I make my living selling collard greens.

When we take them up, they're collards at their best.

They're what the old folks call a good mess."

Albright said he was surprised at the response.

"We'd hoped to get 100 so we could reject at least a few of them," he said. "But we've now got more than 200 and we keep getting four or five more a day."

Fred Chappell, guest celebrity poet for the festival and an English professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, was resigned to finding fame as a collard poet.

"Over a long literary career, it was inevitable that I would be asked to write a poem about collards," he said. "It was bound to happen. I expect soon to be writing about tomato worms and nematodes. It's the next logical step."

Costabile Campaigns In Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. John Costabile of Wilson, a former member of the Wilson County Board of Commissioners, campaigned in Pitt County Thursday in his bid for the Democratic nomination for the 6th District seat in the state Senate.

The primary election for the new district, which includes portions of Pitt, Martin, Edgecombe and Wilson counties, will be Tuesday.

Costabile faces R.L. "Bob" Martin of Bethel, current chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, Vernon Morton of Wilson, and Shelly Willingham of Edgecombe County in the primary.

A practicing optometrist with offices in Wilson, Tarboro and Robersonville, Costabile was named Optometrist of the Year in 1975 by the American Optometric Association. He is also a former member of the board of trustees of Wilson County Technical Institute and former chairman of the Wilson Industrial Council.

Speaking of the campaign, Costabile said "I'm glad it's a short one. This is work, I found out."

Costabile said he expects a light turnout Tuesday. "It's hard to motivate people," especially since they've "been going to the polls it seems like, for ever," this year. "It just doesn't seem fair."

The candidate predicted "a very close race" because of the projected light turnout of voters and a high probability of a second primary. But he suggested, "if people get out and vote, that will make a difference."

"I see serving in the Senate as an opportunity for public service."

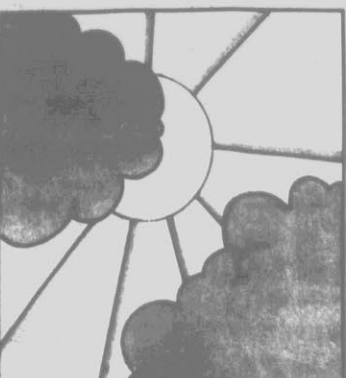

Costabile said, an extension of his 8 years as a county commissioner.

Costabile said as a senator, there are "many things you can do" to provide "leadership in setting policy that ends up bettering the people of the state."

The candidate voiced support for improved industrial growth, to provide jobs for unemployed area residents and high school graduates not going on to college.

"We need to take a fresh look at new approaches," to attract industry, Costabile suggested.

He also voiced support for public school and community college or technical school education, saying the quality of education needs to be improved and "make sure we get our dollars worth for what we're spending."

N.C. Branch President Installs Benevolent Circle Officers

Mrs. Tom Bartik is the president of the new Benevolent Circle of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons.

She was installed by Mrs. C.D. Scott, president of the N.C. Branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters.

Other officers installed are Mrs. Graham Nahouse, vice president; Annie Turner, treasurer; and Mrs. Ben Weaver, secretary.

Mrs. Scott gave a brief history of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons and welcomed the new circle as the seventh one in the state branch. She also presented each officer a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the state branch.

Mrs. Lillian Brame, state chairman of the life membership committee, was also an honored guest.

A covered-dish luncheon was held prior to the installation at the home of Mrs. R.E. Corbett Jr. She was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. John A. Mayo Jr. of New Bern.

Figures Given On Costs Of Children

It now costs the average family over $100,000 to raise a child, according to a recently released report.

"Before families panic, it should be realized that this is an exaggerated figure," says Dr. M.L. Walden, extension economist, North Carolina State University.

"Most of the $100,000 will be paid in the future, when inflation is higher, making each dollar worth less. Also, families will be earning more in the future," Dr. Walden says.

On the other hand, the $100,000 is only the "money cost" of raising a child. Any parent knows that another major cost is time, and time is valuable.

"The time cost, particularly for the mother, is one reason that children are more expensive today, and many families have decided to have fewer children. Having and raising a child means giving up the income from a job or paying for a baby sitter or daycare," Dr. Walden says.

Economically speaking, a child is probably less beneficial today than years ago. Children are less important as a source of farm labor or as a financial source for elder parents.

"But, of course, the greatest benefit of children is emotional, and families will continue to have children despite the cost," the extension specialist says.

In Hong Kong, the most expensive city surveyed, an executive at the $40,000 income level would have to spend $89,051 to maintain a comparable U.S. lifestyle.

In Tokyo, the figure is $60,000; Geneva $65,000, and Paris $52,000.

MRS. CRAWFORD

Parents of the bridegroom and friends entertained at a pig picking for the couple and their friends at the Crawford's home in Swansboro following the rehearsal. Several pre-nuptial parties were held prior to the wedding.

Sneezing Hubby Risks Getting Belted

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who has a sneeze like no other I've ever heard. His sneezes sound like a massive explosion, resembling a horrible bark!

It seems to me that everyone has some kind of warning that a sneeze is coming on—if only a few seconds—but that should be ample time to muffle it to some extent.

Yesterday my husband was right behind me in the kitchen and I wasn't aware of it until he let go with one of his thunderous sneezes. I nearly scalded my feet with a kettle of boiling water I was holding! His surprise outbursts affect me as though a firecracker had suddenly gone off right next to my ear. I'm afraid one of these days I will automatically start swinging and hit him in the mouth. Any advice?

KERCHOO IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

he should give you a "yoo-hoo" so you'll know he's there. And when he feels a kerchoo coming on, have him either head in another direction, muffle it or risk a punch in the mouth.

DEAR ABBY: How would you define "bedroom eyes"?

JOHN, ANNETTE,
JULIE AND KRIS

DEAR JOHN, ANNETTE, ETC.: Bedroom eyes are the kind of eyes that suggest mattress acrobatics. (P.S. "Bedroom eyes" often lie in the eye of the beholder. And sometimes they just lie.)

DEAR ABBY: I want to warn women against psychotherapists who have sex with their patients. It happened to me, and a year later, I am still devastated.

Two years ago I went into psychoanalysis because of some recent personal tragedies that I couldn't handle. After many sessions, my therapist started to touch me—beginning with friendly pats and affectionate hugs. I didn't see what was coming. I was "in transference" at the time—projecting onto him the love that other important men in my life had rejected.

Then an entire session of "therapy" was spent rolling around on the floor of his office locked in embraces. (He billed me for that hour!)

I was in a state of emotional shock, terminated the analysis immediately, and sought help from an ethical analyst, the local rape and assault committee and a lawyer. I also filed a malpractice suit for these reasons:

When a woman is in therapy she's like a child—emotionally at the mercy of her therapist. (I read that 5 percent of psychiatrists admit to having sex with their patients—which means there are probably more, but they won't admit it.)

The American Psychiatric Society has taken the official position that once sex occurs with a patient, the therapy is destroyed. Few women take action against their therapists because they feel so ashamed.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.

DEAR GRATEFUL: All licensed therapists (psychiatrists, psychologists and counselors) are accountable for their professional conduct.

Patients should call their local mental health association to learn where to address their complaints. And they should do so promptly.

Cooking Is Fun

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

It has been called the workhorse of the nut family, and today it is among the most popular nuts on American supermarket shelves. Recipes for everything from Cheddar cheese spread to Indian chutney feature America's black walnut.

Cultivated for centuries in the Mediterranean region, the walnut is said to have been popular in Italy as far back as the first century A.D.

The ancient Persians gave the nut great prestige and proclaimed that it could be eaten only by royalty. With the fall of the Persian Empire the nut spread throughout the Old World and its luster grew. The kings of Olympus consecrated the walnut to the god Jupiter and in Rome it was regarded as a symbol of fertility. The first tree food eaten by man, it was hailed in the scrolls of Solomon.

Walnuts became linked with alchemy and outright witchcraft during the Middle Ages, and they were believed to possess great healing powers.

Somewhere along the line, the nut traveled to North America and the Indians made it a basic feature of their diet. When the Spaniards and Portuguese came to California in the late 1700s, they introduced other varieties. But eventually the Indian black walnut predominated.

The black walnut was exploited commercially in California in the 1860s, but for some reason it was a slow starter, lagging behind its European cousins for more than seven decades.

Then, in the 1940s, something happened, and consumers across the country began to show a preference for the black walnut as an ingredient in baked goods and confections. Production soared during World War II when the growing regions in Europe suspended output of the nuts.

Long a favorite in traditional American dishes, walnuts are now emerging in more interesting roles, from pasta to goat cheese pizza. Americans put walnuts in fish dishes, beef stews, salads and, of course, desserts.

Here is a novel recipe for spiced walnut bits as an outdoor snack.

Ingredients:
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon Italian herb seasoning
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
Dash cayenne pepper
1 egg white
2 cups walnut halves
In bowl, combine cheese, parsley, herbs, garlic salt and cayenne. Set aside. Beat egg white until frothy. Add nuts, tossing to coat. Then add nuts to cheese mixture and mix thoroughly. Spread in single layer on lightly oiled baking sheets. Bake in 250-degree oven about 30 minutes, until golden and crisp. Cool. Store in airtight container until ready to serve. Makes about 2 cups.

Evaluate Older Person's Life Before Intervening

When is it time to intervene in an older person's life?

"When you notice a person becoming isolated and having trouble with routine daily activities, such as cleaning the house, preparing meals or balancing the checkbook," says Dr. Robert Atchley, director of the Scripps Foundation Gerontology Center and professor at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

But some families take over rather than offering support. Intervention should be limited to helping with specific problems, Dr. Atchley told 300 professionals and volunteers at the Eloise S. Cofer Family Living Seminar held recently at North Carolina State University. The extension service, extension homemakers and NCSU Division of University Studies sponsored the seminar.

Most elders value their independence. They want "intimacy at a distance." This means living on their own, visiting family members, but not for too long, and spending time with grandchildren, but not too much time. This should be preserved for as long as possible.

Dr. Atchley recommended an objective and professional evaluation before this independence is taken from an older person. He also discussed the touchy subject of placing a loved one in an institution.

"There is a point beyond which families should not provide care or it will destroy the family," Dr. Atchley told the group. He pointed out that researchers have found that the elderly person's health usually improves after he or she is placed in an institution.

Heartening Success

The preliminary report — and introduction — of open heart surgery at Pitt Memorial Hospital can only be called heartening. (Sorry, we weren't about to let that get away.)

Even laymen can appreciate the extensive and expensive adaptations necessary for cardiac surgery: specially equipped operating rooms, an assortment of intensive care units ... to say nothing of varied surgical and monitoring equipment essential to the specialty.

And all of that is dwarfed by selection of the people who will actually perform the life-saving and life-extending service. Together they represent many years of accumulated knowledge and experience. To find and acquire the most promising of specialists in the field is no small achievement.

The big point in this very large investment in money and knowledge is that cardiac surgery has been brought closer to a part of North Carolina's population who would otherwise be relatively remote from such centers in other parts of the state.

It is estimated some 125 operations will be performed in the first year of the program — better than two per week. And we are told that number should increase rapidly when a second cardiac surgeon joins the program after the first year. The head of the program expects the facility will be performing at least 300 procedures annually within three years.

That tells you something about the need that will be filled by the Pitt County facility.

The addition to the medical school's education service and research activities are more than frosting on the cake.

We are witnessing something great being launched here with the cardiac surgery program.

Perspective

The Supreme Court decision involving student aid eligibility and draft law registration was pretty much expectable.

As argued by the Justice Department — and they had the words of the law to confirm their stance — draft-status disclosure in order to obtain education loans or grants does not include information as to whether the aid applicant is a late-registrant or early registrant. So on the face of it, the law was a rational step toward encouraging (rather than compelling) compliance.

The maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine for failure to register within 30 days of one's 18th birthday was not at issue. The question was whether the threat to withhold student financial aid was constitutional. The penalty proviso is apt to become a future target for challenge.

It galls us to think there are any American students looking to their government to help underwrite their higher education but object to meeting their responsibilities to that government. Whatever happened to "ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country?"

A Taste Of Loss

RALEIGH — Bob Windsor had carved himself a personal niche in North Carolina political journalism and now he's blown it. Not only will Windsor suffer. Unfortunately, all North Carolinians will be denied the kind of writing which Windsor could have delivered.

Windsor is editor and publisher of The Landmark, a weekly published in Chapel Hill. The paper is unconventional to say the least. It is one long editorial — sometimes extremely flattering of politicians, more often excruciatingly critical. Windsor makes no pretense towards the objective school of journalism practiced by the wire services and news writers of North Carolina's mainstream press. His paper fits a different journalistic category, a category with a fine tradition of its own: personal journalism.

Windsor started his paper on a shoestring and contends that he's got little more than a few pennies after several years of hard work. But he's built a following. He distributes the paper in and around the Triangle for free and then mails it to leading political and journalistic figures across the state.

He has appealed to a conservative audience which finds the mainstream press too liberal and another audience that enjoyed his

The Reverend Jesse Jackson has indicated he would like to be secretary of state. He claims his recent meetings with leaders of left-wing and totalitarian governments is evidence of his diplomatic skills.

Maybe. But there could be an argument made that the reason he is welcomed by all the adversaries of the United States is because he is NOT secretary of state.

Let us suppose that Mondale wins and he appoints Jackson as his secretary of state.

"This is Secretary of State Jackson. I'd like to speak to Fidel."

A third-rate Cuban foreign office functionary says, "Castro is in a meeting. I don't know when he'll be out and he told me to tell you he has nothing to say to you, so stop calling him."

"But when I saw Fidel that last time he said his casa was my casa."

"That was before you became secretary of state. Now that you have official status, he considers you part of the American pig policy to overthrow his revolution and continue CIA efforts to destroy our economy."

"How can he say that? I told him how impressed I was with great strides he has made for peace, and if I had anything to do with it we would resume normal diplomatic relations."

"What did you want to talk to him about?"

"I'd like to arrange another political prisoner release, which will show Americans Fidel has the human rights of his people at heart."

"You must be joking. The only reason Fidel agreed to give you the ones he did was to put the screws to Reagan. He has nothing to gain by giving you any prisoners now. And he isn't going to take back the 1,500 criminals he sent you with the boat people either."

"But he promised he would."

"That's because you were a private citizen. Now he considers you just another pinstripe American diplomat who has lost touch with the people."

Secretary Jackson hung up.

Then he told his secretary to get President Assad of Syria on the phone.

"Mr. President," said Jackson. "This is Jesse. I want to meet with you about Lebanon."

"We have nothing to discuss," Assad said coldly. "Why did you give Israel 24 more F-15 fighter planes?"

"I didn't give them to Israel. President Mondale did."

"You're the secretary of state."

"The secretary of state doesn't make foreign policy. He just advises the president of the United States what it should be."

"So why should I see you if you have no power in stopping planes from being shipped to Israel? When I gave you Lt. Goodman you were your own man. Now you're just a flunky of Mondale's pro-Israeli policy. I should have suspected you'd sell out for a fancy title."

"I'm doing the best I can, but I not only have to deal with the president, but Congress as well."

"So who needs you?" Assad said. Jackson heard a click and the line was dead.

The secretary said to one of his aides, "Did Gromyko return my call?"

"No sir, and neither did Arafat."

"I don't understand it. When I had no official capacity, I could see anyone I wanted to. Now that I'm secretary of state no one will talk to me."

"Sir, I believe there is a simple explanation. Before, you were a powerful voice whom the Third World thought was speaking for the American people. But since you became secretary of state, you've lost all of your credibility because you can no longer embarrass Ronald Reagan."

Poll

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pollster Peter Hart, who does research for Walter Mondale, conducted a public opinion poll in Illinois last month that President Reagan and Mondale might want to look at closely while plotting their campaigns for the White House.

Just released, it shows considerable concern among the voters over the nation's future, with more than half holding the belief that the world is less safe than it was four years ago — despite Reagan's assertion his military buildup has tended to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

While attitudes toward arms control apparently are still in flux, 80 percent favored a mutual freeze on the testing and production of nuclear weapons. In fact, 61 percent would have the United States be the first to unilaterally impose a one-year ban on all weapons tests and pressure the Soviets to follow the lead.

Hart's research firm chose Illinois for the survey because the state may be the most pivotal in America. The sponsor was John A. Harris IV, a Republican businessman, and not Mondale, his campaign managers or the Democratic party.

There are good reasons for picking Illinois. It has a wide mixture of towns and big cities, diverse ethnic and religious groups, agriculture and industry. Presumably, the voters there are paying even more than usual attention to the issues in 1984 because Illinois also has a close Senate race, between Charles Percy and Paul Simon.

Since 1916, Illinois has gone for the winner in every presidential election with one exception, 1976. The state could be 1984's political barometer. The lengthy telephone survey of 755 likely voters in Illinois between June 9 and 11 suggests Mondale might be able to close the gap by focusing on war-and-peace issues.

By the same token, of course, Reagan might salt away his reelection if he takes the kind of stand on those issues that the voters in Illinois seem to want.

Enter a note of caution, however. While nearly as many voters in the Hart survey, 34 percent, are inclined to replace Reagan as to re-elect him, 37 percent, the president has done vastly better in other surveys.

Two weeks ago, for instance, a Gallup Poll of 908 registered voters taken June 22-25 showed Reagan with a 19 percent lead over Mondale. Another poll, by Gordon S. Black for USA Today, showed Reagan ahead by 23 percent and suggested Mondale could be "the Alf Landon of 1984."

But a Washington Post-ABC poll, conducted from July 5-8 and released Wednesday, shows Mondale trailing Reagan by only seven percentage points.

Four years ago, Reagan called for a stronger defense as he ousted Jimmy Carter from the White House. Now, as a result of the big boosts he ordered in military spending, Reagan is saying that "maybe the world is a little safer than it has been in the past."

The Hart survey indicates the voters do not necessarily agree, at least in Illinois.

According to the poll, 57 percent of the electorate believe they live in a less safe world than four years ago, while only 22 percent think the world is safer. Similarly, 50 percent see Reagan policies as leading America closer to war, 29 percent say they are moving the country closer to peace.

Four years ago, Reagan took a skeptical view of some past arms control agreements, particularly the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty signed by Carter. He called it "fatally flawed."

As president, Reagan gradually moved toward the middle of the road. He proposed sharp reductions in strategic nuclear weapons on both sides, and offered to keep new U.S. missiles out of Western Europe if the Soviets scrapped their SS-20 force.

Bashing The Fed

WASHINGTON — When Paul Volcker and his central bank colleagues decide later this month whether to further tighten the screws on a dangerously deflationary economy, President Reagan's policy-makers will be off-stage as impotent — and very worried — observers.

The administration has blinked first in its brief confrontation with the Volcker-led Federal Reserve Board. Unable to push the Fed toward accommodating the Reagan recovery, the president and his men are reduced to hoping. There is not much hope. The only disagreement at the White House is whether the prime interest rate will climb one or two additional points before the election.

The Fed's next closed-door policy-making session of its Open Market Committee (FOMC) July 16 and 17 will do nothing to push interest rates lower, and might well send them higher. The president is a passive onlooker even though spiraling interest rates could overcome Democratic ineptitude sufficiently to tighten up the election.

Reagan's advisers are well aware of this. When the CBS Evening News dwelled on the impact of the latest boost in the prime rate to 13 percent, the West Wing winced. But winching is not the same as handling the problem. "We have no monetary policy, and we have no monetary strategy," one high-ranking administration official told us.

There is no shortage of either policy or strategy on the Federal Reserve's professional staff, whose monomaniacal fear of resurgent inflation ignores sliding commodity prices which connote deflation rather than inflation. The Fed staff wants the screws tightened further on money at the July FOMC meeting, and it may succeed. Their position is being pressed by Lyle Gramley, a former Fed staffer named to the board by Jimmy Carter in 1980.

Vice Chairman Preston Martin, Reagan's first Fed appointment, who has courageously stood alone against the rest of the FOMC beginning last December, will have one ally at the July meeting. Dr. Martha Seeger, a conservative Republican and Reagan's second Fed governor, was given a recess appointment this week after the Democrats launched a fight against her confirmation. Despite equivocations at Senate hearings in an effort to get confirmed, her pertinent sentiment was her declaration about Reagan when nominated May 31: "I support everything he's doing."

But two votes are not enough. The key is Volcker, and he agrees with the Fed staff. That means overlooking today's deflation that threatens small-business men and farmers instead of worrying about tomorrow's inflation that haunts Wall Street bond traders. Whether or not the FOMC tightens further, it will not agree to a loosening that the administration wants to keep the recovery going.

When Volcker addressed a closed-door caucus of House Republicans June 14, his demeanor was widely described as "arrogant." Brushing off falling prices of gold and other commodities, he asserted that his own expectation of inflation was more important. His contempt for congressional critics suggested no fear of sniping from the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Indeed, when Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told a Cabinet-level meeting June 21 there would be no more "Fed-bashing" (that is, criticism of Volcker), he was enunciating a policy set many days earlier at the White House. The non-aggression policy derives not from agreement in principle with Volcker but from fear of his support among industrialists and financiers. In the Reagan administration, their views come before those of small-business men and farmers.

Reagan political strategists say Volcker's popularity makes him a risky target (though in fact their own polls indicate he is unknown by 60 percent of all voters and is no match for the Great Communicator in seeking popular support).

Strength For Today

Many years ago a poet wrote, "Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these — 'It might have been.'"

Vain regret! And how vain indeed it is! There is not a single person in the world who does not carry about in his mind a discouraging sense of regret over things that happened in past years.

We allowed a friendship to fitter itself away and now wish we had that friendship. If we had only taken the job offered us twenty years ago and summarily turned down, everything might have been better. A colleague made an investment we refused to make. Now he is rich, and look at us.

Regret is a vain thing. We cannot bring back lost opportunity, loved ones who have departed, fortunes which have slipped through our fingers. Let us not waste time trying.

The future lies ahead. There is opportunity there if we will grasp it.

willingness to say the outrageous.

The special attraction — and the special promise — of The Landmark was Windsor's willing to get tough. Bob doesn't worry about being polite. He doesn't worry that his writing will be attacked as biased. It was biased, to his way of thinking and his strong wording left no one wondering how he stood on things.

But Windsor went too far earlier this month. He stepped over the boundaries of fair play and accuracy on a subject that is darned serious. In a front page story that attracted statewide attention, he questioned the sexual preferences of Gov. Jim Hunt and then stated that his reporting was based on rumor. Even Hunt's political opponent, Sen. Jesse Helms, felt the need to immediately brand the reporting as "preposterous" and to disavow any further relationship with Windsor.

Religious leaders and fellow conservatives also criticized Windsor, saying his credibility with conservative readers was damaged. "I think it may have hurt his credibility especially when (the Helms campaign) took their ads out of (future editions of) his paper," said Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell. Other conservative legislators who said they had liked Windsor's paper made similar comments, but privately. Max Veale, press secretary to Rep. Jim Martin, the Republican candidate for governor, said he expected Windsor's credibility will be hurt with "more thoughtful people."

The Hunt camp has complained for months that Windsor's reporting has been off base.

Joins Boycott

D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the National Association the Advancement of Colored People, said the local NAACP is joining a boycott of the Food Lion supermarket chain.

Garrett said the NAACP's national directors voted July 5 to boycott Food Lion, based in Salisbury, after negotiations designed to provide blacks with better employment opportunities broke down last month. Garrett said the negotiations were part of the NAACP's "Fare Share" program, started in 1981, to improve opportunities in employment, promotions, procurement contracts and access to corporate boards of directors.

New Book Looks At Retardation

ECU News Bureau

The rights and respect owed to mentally retarded people is the subject of a new book by two faculty members in the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

"Ethics and Mental Retardation" is edited by Dr. Loretta Kopelman and Dr. John C. Moskop, faculty members in the medical school's humanities program. Published by Reidel, the book is one in a series dealing with a broad range of issues and problems in medical ethics, treated from a variety of philosophical perspectives.

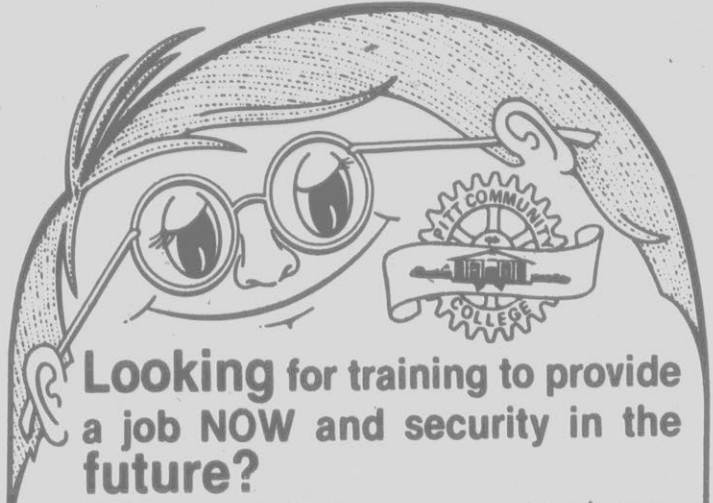

"Ethics and Mental Retardation" is a compilation of 20 essays dealing with what has been a largely neglected topic in philosophical literature — the moral standing of mentally retarded people. In relation to this standing, contributors consider the mentally retarded with respect to basic human rights, legal rights and public-policy, and issues of valuing and labeling.

The book grew out of a 1981 symposium on the same subjects held at the ECU School of Medicine.

Drs. Kopelman and Moskop co-authored the introduction and each wrote a chapter for the book. Chapters were also contributed by two other medical school faculty members, both from the department of pediatrics, Dr. Arthur Kopelman and Dr. Theodore Kushnick.

The new book is available through the East Carolina University Book Store.

Train-Truck Collision Fatal

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — A freight train slammed into a pickup truck at a railroad crossing, killing the truck's 26-year-old driver, the Highway Patrol said.

Robert Earl Dawkins of Hamlet was killed around 5:45 p.m. Thursday as the Seaboard System train, traveling at about 40 mph, dragged the truck about a quarter of a mile, Trooper R.P. Norton said.

Norton said Dawkins was driving on a small, dirt road that crosses the tracks near Rockingham. The crossing is marked and offers a clear view in both directions but has no gate or flashing lights, he said.

HBO Premiere Has Stars, Little Appeal

By TOM JORY

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Give Home Box Office an "E" for Effort, though it is hard to believe that "Draw!" is the kind of made-for-pay motion picture that HBO's subscribers are clamoring for.

If you start with the premise that Kirk Douglas and James Coburn, on mere talent and force of personality, could not make a bad movie, then "Draw!" certainly is passable.

Trouble is, naughty language and Douglas' bare behind (sadly, elements that distinguish cable from network TV) can't do much for a hackneyed tale of the Old West, scheduled to premiere Sunday night.

"Draw!" follows closely two previous HBO Premiere Films, "The Far Pavilions" and "Sakharov."

Douglas plays Handsome Harry Holland, an aging outlaw holed up in the hotel in Bell City. Coburn is former sheriff Sam Starret, a legendary, though drunken, lawman who is bound and gagged and pulled into town on a horse-drawn litter to bring Harry to justice after he kills the first sheriff.

From the opening scene, in which Harry shoots a hole in his hat, one wonders, is this movie supposed to be funny? There seems to be consensus that "Draw!" is at least hyphenated comedy, as in comedy-adventure or comedy-drama: HBO calls it "tongue-in-cheek," and Douglas says it's "a Western with humor."

A twist at the end is at least amusing. But most of the humor is of a rather juvenile variety, relying frequently on name-calling and the like for laughs.

Harry isn't looking for trouble when he arrives in Bell City. "Yeah," he says, "I done a few things way back that wouldn't win no church prizes. But I paid for it."

All he wants is a little place over the border in Mexico, where he can eat, sleep, maybe work the farm from time to time and, he says, "watch the sun come up and go down."

Ultimately, though, he's forced into a gunfight with the town sheriff, during which he takes a slug in the thigh. The sheriff isn't so lucky.

"Dead?" Harry wonders. "Sheesh. I guess my eyes ain't what they used to be."

Harry takes an upstairs room, where he is tended by Bess (Alexandra Bastedo), a traveling thespian with the healing touch.

The town is outraged: "Holland is over in that hotel terrorizing that girl he took prisoner," Wally Blodgett, the surviving deputy (Graham Jarvis) wails. "No tellin' what he's doin' to her."

They're making love, of course.

Sam, meantime, would just as soon talk with Harry — over a glass or two of whisky, of course — than shoot it out. And Harry is about to turn himself in, and face trial, when he learns that "Hanging Judge" Fawcett is on his way to Bell City.

A "High Noon" shootout, though maybe a bit earlier in the day, seems to be the only way out. The climax is entertaining, if not exciting, but is it worth waiting for?

"Draw!" was shot on location in and near Edmonton, Alberta, and the natural setting is appealing.

The motion picture doesn't necessarily mark the return of the small-screen, or even large-screen Western, but as Douglas says, "I think it's a classical reservoir of films, of material for films."

BAD FALL — Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kollek was put in a cast this week after he tripped and fell on a broken bottle. Kollek was carrying the bottle of brandy, a gift from political supporters, as he left the Israel

Museum in Jerusalem. Observers said he tripped in the dark and fell, shattering the bottles, cutting his arm and breaking his leg. (AP Laserphoto)

Actor Surrenders On Assault Charge

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, who plays the taciturn pilot of an attack helicopter on CBS-TV's "Airwolf," turned himself in and was charged in connection with a bar fight that left a man unconscious.

The 38-year-old actor, accompanied by his attorney, was booked for investigation of misdemeanor assault Thursday at the Malibu sheriff's station, Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy John Broussard said.

Vincent was released on his own recognizance.

'Big Picture' Promo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Gregory Peck, singer Pat Boone, comedian Rich Little and a host of other notables are joining an estimated 15,000 people to pose for promotional "snapshot" of the city's skyline.

Billed as an historic "Big Picture" — a 140-degree crowd shot framed by the city skyline and an arch of balloons — the photograph will be "a time capsule of what life in Los Angeles was like in 1984," said the promoter, Nann Miller.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite early delays in putting your original ideas across, you find you have the ability to achieve much of value until the late afternoon, so do your best work then. Avoid disputes later.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You fail to understand the views of a friend early in the day, but don't lose control and tonight it is clear to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your reputation may be assailed if you do not view matters from a new standpoint within the community in which you reside.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your obligations and know which partner is best able to help you with your problems, and contact early.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) An outside partner can pose a problem but a co-worker comes to your aid, and all works out well.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Look to some attractive person to assist you with some public work you are doing and get good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Whatever amusements you want to get into could prove disappointing, but a family tie gives you an idea that is much to your liking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation at home is not ideal but if you contact an expert, you can remedy it considerably. Don't lose your hard-earned assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you study new ideas you can advance more rapidly in your career. Don't waste too much time in long, unimportant conversations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Not a good day to get into the practical since others can be greedy and you could lose much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to understand why you have not gotten ahead faster and get rid of whatever has been deterring your progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate on how to get ahead faster in the future and forget all that gadding about for today. Be with one who makes you laugh.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have a private anxiety that is becoming an obsession with you, so forget it, and be more hopeful for the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be worried all the time about something if you do not easily have serene and cheerful persons around who can show your progeny the importance of being modern and sure of self instead of delving into antiquated ideas and superstitions.

Princess Tops Manteo Cast

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Organizers braced for thousands of spectators to watch England's Princess Anne dedicate a $700,000 replica of a 16th century ship that brought colonists to the New World.

"It's starting to look a lot like a Hollywood set," Della Basnight, Dare County chairman of the 400th Anniversary Celebration of the Roanoke Voyages, said Thursday as workmen completed last minutes details around the Manteo waterfront.

Workers from the the North Carolina Department of Transportation have mowed vacant lots in Manteo and even trimmed resident's lawns where spots were missed, Ms. Basnight said. Other workers nailed boards for scaffolding and stages and cleaned the grounds around the site of the Elizabeth II

Organizers hoped for a crowd of 20,000 to 30,000 for today's dedication. A street fair and tours of the ship Saturday were expected to draw 40,000 people, Ms. Basnight said.

The schedule for the event called for Princess Anne and Gov. Jim Hunt to unveil a marker commemorating the voyages of the 1580s on Manteo tiny waterfront.

Princess Anne arrived at Raleigh-Durham Airport Thursday afternoon and dined with Hunt and his wife, Carolyn, in Chapel Hill.

After the unveiling, the princess, Hunt and a procession of Elizabethan soldiers, a color guard, the Montreat Scottish Pipes and Drum's, scouts and 4-H representatives were to cross a wooden footbridge. The bridge leads from the waterfront to Ice Plant Island, a piece of land created by dredging spoils and the site of the town's old ice plant.

The Elizabeth II is moored at a dock on the island and is the newest of the state's historic sites.

Even before the ceremony began, Louis Midgett was directing operations at the Elizabethan Gardens, where a luncheon for as many as 700 dignitaries and the princess was planned.

Midgett, superintendent of the Gardens, said the buffet-style luncheon included steamed shrimp, crab meat seasoned with herbs, summer chicken, ham biscuits, salad and melon sections.

Tables arranged under yellow-striped cabanas and spreading oak trees were decorated with begonias, lillies, Queen Anne's lace and marigolds.

"She likes white flowers," Midgett said. "We're going to take her through part of the garden on the way in. Then if she is interested in seeing more ... we're going to take her through after she eats."

The ceremony recognizes the Roanoke voyages, so-called because they landed near Roanoke Island where Manteo is located.

Englishmen sailed across the Atlantic Ocean and first landed on North Carolina's Outer Banks July 13, 1584. Although the hoopla will end after the weekend, the 400th anniversary celebration will continue through Aug. 18, 1987, the 400th birthday of Virginia Dare, the first English child born in America.

Man Mistakenly Shoots His Wife

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro lawyer accidentally shot and killed his wife Thursday morning when he mistook her for a prowler, a Guilford County Sheriff's Department official said.

Shannon Fields Smith, 22, was dead when rescue personnel arrived at the scene after the 1 a.m. shooting, said Capt. Carlton Richards, commander of the Sheriff's Department criminal investigations division.

Her husband, Danny Eugene Smith, 27, probably will not be charged, Richards said. After a preliminary investigation, the shooting was ruled an accident, he said.

"He woke up and in his sleep determined there was a light on in the living room and assumed his wife was with him in bed," Richards said. "The light went out, and the door to the bedroom opened. Thinking it was a prowler, he drew his gun and fired, hitting his wife one time."

Richards said information from neighbors indicated that the Smiths' were happily married.

Morehead's Council Pushing Bridge Fight

MOREHEAD CITY (AP) — The Morehead City Council has voted to keep fighting for a new $24 million bridge west of the existing drawbridge to Bogue Banks and against a Department of Transportation plan for a $12.5 million drawbridge replacement.

The council voted 2-1 Tuesday night to continue the city's appeal of a state Superior Court decision that gave the state the right to build the bridge over city objections.

"I advised the council that I think we still have a viable appeal," said city attorney Nelson Taylor. "Generally, the rule is that the legislation is not retroactive unless it specifically states that it is. This legislation does not state that it is retroactive."

The city had asked the court for an interpretation of a state law, which was changed by the General Assembly in June. State Assistant Attorney General Robert Webb said the sole purpose of the change "was to clear up any possible ambiguity in the existing law if ever there was any."

The law now reads that the state Department of Transportation may include city streets as "part of the right-of-way of a state highway system street, highway or bridge."

The city contends that the state should be required to get permission from the city before using any city streets.

Webb, representing the state in the fight about where to place the bridge, said the law enacted June 28 does not need to be retroactive because the contract hasn't been let for the bridge yet.

"We take the position that the contract hasn't been let to build the bridge yet and you don't need a retroactive act to cover something that hasn't happened," he said.

One council member — Sonny Geer — voted against continuing the fight because of the expense involved. But Mayor Bud Dixon said the city has spent only $5,000 on the legal battle in addition to the usual retainer paid to Taylor.

Ingram Confers With Farmers

RALEIGH (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram met with over 100 farmers Thursday and advised them on filing claims for losses resulting from use of contaminated tobacco fertilizer purchased from W.R. Grace Co.

Ingram called on Grace to answer more of farmers' questions. He said he was receiving complaints daily from as far west as Surry County and as far east as Columbus County.

Ingram said he had sent Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham a letter seeking his assistance in obtaining more information from Grace.

Farmers have said that tobacco grown with Grace's fertilizer is of poor quality and might not sell.

Driver Killed

LA GRANGE, N.C. (AP) — A Salisbury man was killed and two other people were injured in a head-on collision on U.S. 70 two miles east of LaGrange in Lenoir County, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Walter Dean Hughes, 60, of Route 9, Salisbury, died after the car he was driving collided with a car driven by 22-year-old Kelvin Donnelle Lewis of LaGrange, said trooper K.P. Parker.

Lewis and a passenger in the Hughes vehicle, 19-year-old Bruce Davis of Salisbury, were taken to a Kinston hospital.

Peacekeepers Return

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 80 soldiers returned Wednesday from the Sinai peninsula where they served for six months as part of the Multinational Peacekeeping Force.

The group was made up mostly of soldiers from the 1st Battalion of the 325th Infantry, along with some aviation pilots and their crew chiefs. They will be followed by an estimated 250 men a week in the next three weeks. The soldiers will be replaced by soldiers of 101st Airborne Division, said Major Barry Willy, a public affairs officer with the 82nd.

The men arrived at Pope Air Force Base still wearing their desert camouflage uniforms and received a welcome from post commanders and family members.

Major Frank Clubb called the experience "a very good, very real mission of observation and patrol of a 120-by-18-mile sector of extremely mountainous terrain" along the Egypt-Sinai peninsula border.

"I think the mission called for a lot of discipline because of the volatile political situation," he said.

"Besides aerial, foot and vehicle patrols, some of the men had to camp for 39 days in extremely desolate spots," getting rations once a week, Clubb said.

"PLANET OF DINOSAURS"

Party Leaders Say Mondale Choice 'Uplifting'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Walter F. Mondale has robbed the Democratic National Convention of all suspense, but party leaders say that tapping Geraldine Ferraro as his campaign partner gives the Democrats a lift and enhances their chances of capturing the White House.

The Fritz-and-Gerry ticket is going on the road today, to Elmore, Minn. for a hometown salute to the local boy who used to work at Emerson's grocery store after school.

Then, after a weekend amid the snow-capped mountains at Lake Tahoe, Calif., the Democratic team flies to San Francisco on Monday before the gavel falls to open the four-day gathering.

Mondale's never-say-die rival, Gary Hart, was arriving in the convention city today, still claiming to be in the running for the nomination.

"I've been running for president for 70 weeks, and will continue for at least one more week," Hart said.

He hailed the designation of Ms. Ferraro as Mondale's running mate as "as significant advance for women" and promised to do all he could to elect a Democratic president this fall "whoever is the nominee."

Mondale has 127 more delegates than he will need to be nominated, and he is expected to pick up scores more before Wednesday night's balloting for a presidential candidate.

Arriving delegates pinned on "Mondale-Ferraro" buttons, but there were a few sour notes about Mondale's choice, even among Democrats. Republicans called Ms. Ferraro inexperienced.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., termed the selection of a woman "premature politically" and said the question is whether America is ready for a female vice president.

And Colorado Gov. Richard D. Lamm said Hart would have made a stronger candidate and called the Ferraro selection "a high-risk, high-gain strategy."

Ann Lewis, the political director of the Democratic National Committee, dismissed such misgivings.

"The first time you do something new a few people have trouble moving into the future," she said in an interview. "Any American child can look at the news today and say, 'I could be president.'"

And Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt estimated that the addition of a woman would boost the Election Day turnout by 1.7 million to 5.4 million voters.

Asked if he thought such an additional turnout could tip the election to the Democrats' favor,

Manatt said, "If 80 percent of that were Democratic strength, and we fashioned a strong crossover of people, especially women who have had some form of Republican identification in their voting patterns, you bet."

More cautiously, Robert Strauss, one of the party's old professionals, said the Ferraro selection improves the Democrats' chances in November.

But a scattering of polls offered few assurances that a woman vice presidential contender will help the Democratic ticket.

"Preliminary indications are that she doesn't add to the ticket," said Laurily Epstein, poll consultant for NBC News.

For Hart, the nearly universal assumption that all the big decisions have already been made meant he must choose between quietly accepting the inevitable or trying to buck the tide.

He sounded like he'd do the latter. And Rep. Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, co-chairman of Hart's presidential campaign, said: "He can give a go-for-it speech and go out in flames."

Hart will address the convention Wednesday night, immediately before the balloting. The fact that the Mondale camp agreed to that timetable is evidence of its confidence Hart will not rock the boat.

Falwell Protesters Get Violent

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A four-hour protest by nearly 2,000 people against Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority turned violent with flying bottles, rocks and firecrackers, resulting in eight arrests and eight injuries as riot police struggled to maintain order.

Police Chief Cornelius Murphy said the demonstration signaled the beginning of an expected series of protests centering around next week's Democratic National Convention.

"This is not a large demonstration like you'll see next week," he said. "If it's a preview, then based on what you saw tonight, we're prepared to handle it."

The demonstration was made up of several separate groups which gathered outside a Union Square hotel where Falwell's Family Forum III conference was being held. Protesters were critical of Moral Majority positions, including its stances against abortion and homosexuality.

The protesters, who waved banners and chanted anti-Falwell slogans, came "very close to becoming a mob," Sgt. Michael Pera said Thursday.

More than 200 police in full riot gear made eight arrests and medics reported treating eight people for injuries during the demonstration.

One of the injured was Naomi Schapiro, a volunteer medic who was hit over the head by a police baton as she helped an injured woman, said Mary Isham, a fellow medic. The woman was treated and released from Children's Hospital, an emergency room spokeswoman said.

Asked about the charge, Pera said, "These things happen. We won't know exactly what happened until we sort out the confusion."

Earlier Thursday, Falwell decried homosexuality in opening remarks for the two-day conference, but told listeners that he hadn't brought his conservative group to San Francisco for a confrontation with the gay community, estimated at 15 percent of the city's 705,000 residents.

"We came here because the Democratic leadership chose San Francisco as the place for their convention," which begins Monday, he said.

Among the demonstrators were gays, punk rockers and members of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition. Others protested U.S. involvement in Central America. In addition, striking Macy's department store clerks had picket lines set up in the area.

One banner read, "Falwell Out of Politics Out of Our City."

As the crowd pushed to the police barricade around the fashionable square, police issued a declaration of unlawful assembly, warning the demonstrators to retreat.

The gathering was tense at times as some protesters clashed with mounted police and knocked over officers on motorcycles.

"Sieg Heil, honey," one protester shouted at a policewoman.

Florida Executes Three-Time Killer David Leroy Washington

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — David Leroy Washington, who admitted killing three people and said he'd rather die himself than rot in jail, was executed today in Florida's electric chair.

Washington was the second U.S. death row prisoner to be executed in as many days.

His death was announced at 7:09 a.m. by corrections Sgt. Don Gladish to the 42 witnesses in death chamber.

"I would like to say to the families of all of my victims, I'm sorry for all the grief and heartache I have brought to them," Washington told the witnesses shortly before he died. "If my death brings them any satisfaction, so be it."

Addressing the 220 other condemned inmates in the prison, he said, "I'd like to say to all the guys on death row, don't bow to defeat, don't bow to a victory, don't bow to a defeat without a fight."

"I'm kind of nervous. That's all."

A chin strap was placed over his mouth, a skullcap was tightened over his head and a black rubber mask dropped over his face.

At 7:04 a.m., the jolt of 2,000 volts of electricity made his body jump briefly, and sweat darkened his shirt. He tightened his fist, and the fist remained closed throughout the 85-second cycle of electricity.

About 30 people demonstrated outside the prison against the death penalty, while a half-dozen showed their support.

The U.S. Supreme Court late Thursday rejected last-ditch pleas by Washington's lawyers to step in and halt the execution, voting 7-2 against further argument.

Washington was under his third death warrant for killing University of Miami student Frank Meli, elderly Miami resident Katrina Birk and minister Daniel Prigden in an eight-day murder spree in Miami in 1976.

As he waited in a holding cell near the death chamber at Florida State Prison, Washington was "stoic" when told of the high court's decision, a prison official said.

His appeals were based on a lawyer's claim that the death sentence was arbitrary and discriminatory.

A second Florida inmate also scheduled for execution today was spared by the high court.

Most After-Tax Incomes Rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuts in government assistance have lowered the income of families headed by women, even as most other households were getting a boost from President Reagan's tax program, new government statistics show.

After-tax income for American households climbed 1.7 percent to an average $18,906 between 1981 and 1982, the Census Bureau reported Thursday.

But families headed by women, with no husband present, suffered a 3.8 percent income decline to an average of $10,868, the report disclosed.

Cuts in Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other assistance programs may be at least part of the reason for this drop, said Charles T. Nelson of the Census Bureau. He noted that eligibility rules for several programs had been tightened, eliminating some participants and thus lowering average income for women.

Nelson stressed that many of these families also receive non-cash benefits such as Medicaid, food stamps, housing subsidies and school lunch programs, which are income but are not counted in his statistics.

Several of those programs have also been cut, however, Catherine East of the National Women's Political Caucus pointed out.

She cited a Congressional Budget Office report that showed that families with incomes of $10,000 or less lost money under the administration tax program, while those with higher incomes gained.

The Census study showed that taxes paid by households with incomes of under $10,000 rose 4.2 percent, while taxes paid by all other income groups fell.

Some 55.4 percent of households with children, headed by women, no husband present, had incomes under $10,000 in 1982.

The Congressional Budget Office study showed that cuts in cash benefits reduced income to low-income families by $250 a year, Ms. East said, and another $390 was lost to reductions in non-cash programs such as Medicaid and food stamps.

But for most Americans the news from the new Census study of after-tax income was good.

"The tax cut, you could really see the difference it made," Nelson said in a telephone interview.

Average household income had declined 2.6 percent from 1980 to 1981, before the income tax cuts took effect, the report showed.

The biggest increase from 1981 to 1982, 5.2 percent, affected the elderly, with average household incomes rising to $13,767 after taxes. Nelson noted that indexing of Social Security income helps this group, with payments rising along with inflation.

And he observed that there has been an increase in interest income in recent years as banks and savings institutions offer a wide variety of high interest savings accounts.

Older families are more likely to have savings to invest in such accounts than younger people, he commented, and thus may have benefited from more interest income.

Nelson also observed that the effect of children on family finances was illustrated in the study.

Married couples had an increase in after-tax incomes of 2.3 percent to $22,934, Nelson pointed out. But for couples with children the after-tax income rose only 0.8 percent to $23,307, a change so small as to virtually be the same income as a year earlier.

There have been discussions of increasing the federal tax deduction for children and these statistics would tend to support those proposals, Nelson said.

White couples average income rose 1.7 percent during the year, to $19,606, the study reported.

Blacks had an 0.8 percent rise to $12,955 and Hispanic families saw their income fall 2.9 percent to $15,297. However, because of the small sample the change in income for blacks and Hispanics was not considered statistically significant by Census officials.

The largest regional growth was in the South, where household incomes rose 2.4 percent to $18,399, although that was still the lowest in the nation. The Northeast had 1.9 percent growth to $18,915.

Incomes grew 1.4 percent to $19,953 for families in the West, while the average North Central families had income growth of 1 percent to $18,754.

Soviets Say U.S. Wants To Avoid Talks On Weapons

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says the United States is maneuvering to avoid serious talks on limiting space weapons or other arms because they would jeopardize a multi-billion-dollar rearmament program.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in an editorial today, said the Soviets are still waiting for a positive response to their June 29 proposal to begin talks in Vienna this fall on banning space weapons.

"Continued maneuvers" by the Reagan administration demonstrate that it does not really want the talks, Pravda said.

The official Soviet news agency Tass distributed excerpts from a related article in the government's foreign policy analysis magazine, New Times.

"Washington, which is whipping up the arms race, predictably does not wish any serious talks on the limitation of arms," New Times said. "It is feared there that they (talks) could prevent the implementation of the program for a rearmament of America, which is worth many billions of dollars."

After the Soviets proposed the talks, State Department officials initially said the United States would participate only if the agenda included other arms issues. However, last week they said they would go to Austria without preconditions but would bring up any other matters they consider relevant.

The State Department, in a statement responding to the Pravda editorial, said the U.S. position has not changed.

"We have accepted without preconditions the Soviet offer of talks. We have made clear that we are prepared to discuss the issues they raised. We will continue to discuss details of those talks with the Soviets through diplomatic channels. These quiet channels continue to offer the best prospects for results," the statement said.

The latest Soviet statement made no mention of the diplomatic efforts the State Department said are under way.

The Soviets want the Vienna meeting limited to discussions of space weapons and have called for an interim suspension of development and production of such systems.

U.S. officials said Moscow already has such weaponry and a freeze would only insure that the Kremlin retains its advantage.

Pravda did not say whether the Soviet Union will begin the talks if the United States continues to insist on its right to raise other issues than space weapons.

"They in the U.S. capital are creating the impression that they are all but packing their bags to go to Vienna and trying to feign support for the proposed talks although in reality they do not want them," Pravda said.

"They in Washington behave as if they are going to talk to themselves. Putting it forthrightly, it is not a serious approach to a question of extreme importance," Pravda said.

In hoping to expand the agenda of the proposed Vienna talks, the United States is seeking a way to reopen the Geneva negotiations on reducing strategic and medium-range missiles, Pravda said.

Shuttle Set For Aug. 24

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery's twice-delayed maiden launch has been rescheduled for Aug. 24 as a 2-for-1 mission, combining payloads that had been planned for the ship's first two flights.

This will eliminate one flight and keep the accelerating shuttle schedule on track following back-to-back last-minute postponements of Discovery's debut in June, NASA said Thursday.

The combined mission will keep a Leasat communications satellite, a solar panel package and a miniature drug-making factory from going aloft on Discovery's first mission. But two communications satellites scheduled to be carried up on the second flight will go up early.

Delayed until later trips are a large Earth-mapping camera from Flight 1 and a second Leasat satellite and a scientific package from Flight 2.

Chester M. Lee, NASA's director of shuttle customer relations, said the second Leasat will be flown on a November flight.

The six-person crew for the combined mission will be the Flight 1 crew, which experienced the June postponements. The members are commander Henry Hartsfield; pilot Michael Coats; mission specialists Judy Resnik, Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane, and payload specialist Charles Walker.

Jesse W. Moore, NASA's acting shuttle director, said the crew for the eliminated Flight 2, commanded by astronaut Karol Bobko, will be reassigned as quickly as possible.

"This plan will put the program back on schedule by the Oct. 1 launch," Moore said Thursday in Washington.

The planned Oct. 1 launch of shuttle Challenger will mark the beginning of a period in which there is to be at least one flight a month for the foreseeable future.

Discovery's debut was scrubbed June 25 just nine minutes before liftoff because of a faulty computer. The next day, the ship was within four seconds of blastoff when a computer detected a valve failure and commanded a cutoff of the engine start sequence.

Moore said the computer problem was caused by a liquid contaminant and that contamination also is suspected in the valve failure.

"We're satisfied the engine problem is not generic," he stated. "We have high confidence in the engines."

Another potential problem cropped up Monday when a Star-48 rocket nozzle failed in a test chamber at the McDonnell Douglas Corp. plant in St. Louis. Star-48 rockets will be used to boost to higher orbits the two communications satellites added to the manifest.

Military Crash Kills 9

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Nine Americans were killed when a U.S. C-141B transport plane burst into flames and crashed shortly after taking off from a naval air station, U.S. officials report.

The plane, which carried a crew of eight and one military passenger, crashed Thursday after a refueling stop at a U.S. base near Catania, said Lt. Cmdr. Ron Donovan, a spokesman for the base.

"There are no known survivors and no known civilian injuries or deaths," Donovan said. The air base is in eastern Sicily.

The crew was from the 315th Military Airlift Wing Reserve Associate assigned to the Charleston, S.C., Air Force Base. It was on a routine flight to Nairobi, Kenya, on a resupply mission, base officials said.

The four-engine jet crashed in a field outside Lintini, 15 miles southwest of Catania, witnesses said.

Donovan said a board of officers will investigate the crash. He would not comment on a possible cause of the crash.

An Italian air force official, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press that shortly after takeoff the plane's pilot radioed that an engine was on fire.

"He tried to land but crashed onto a field," the official said.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted witnesses as saying they saw the plane take off, circle, and fall in flames minutes later.

Police cordoned off the area while firefighters put out a fire that spread for a quarter of a mile around the plane.

Italian Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini's office said the minister had sent a telegram to U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger expressing condolences for the deaths.

Another base spokesman, Staff Sgt. George W. Johnson, identified eight of the victims as Maj. Allen L. Wilson, 39, the commander, of Miami; 1st Lt. Michael K. Hodge, 28, co-pilot, of Mt. Pleasant, S.C.; 1st Lt. Steven A. Grapperhus, 26, co-pilot, of Isle of Palms, S.C.; Staff Sgt. Darnell Gardner, 27, of North Charleston, S.C.; Tech. Sgt. James M. Kightlinger, 37, of Dade City, Fla.; Tech. Sgt. James E. Simpson, 38, of Ladson, S.C.; Master Sgt. Refugio Rivera, 50, of Summerville, S.C.; and Tech. Sgt. John H. Dasenbrock, 29, of Pochahontas, Ill.

Johnson said the base still was trying to notify the next of kin of the ninth victim, and his name would be released later.

Pitt Advances In Legion Tourney

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It wasn't pretty by any means — but it was a victory and that's all Pitt County wanted as it downed Snow Hill, 10-5, to take their best-of-three series in round two of the American Legion playoffs last night.

The victory, giving Pitt a 2-1 edge in the series, moved Post 39 onward in the Area I East playoffs to the finals against Wayne County. That series starts Sunday night at 8 p.m. in Goldsboro and will be a best-of-five. The winner there moves into the Area I championship series.

Game two in the Pitt-Wayne series returns to Greenville on Monday night, then back to Goldsboro for game three on Tuesday. Should a fourth game be needed, it will be in Greenville on Wednesday, and a fifth, if needed, in Goldsboro on Thursday.

Snow Hill held the lead for more than an hour early in the contest — but it was a lead of time only — it lasted less than an inning in actual playing time. Anthony Russo provided Snow Hill with a 1-0 lead on a home run but before the bottom of the first was completed, a downpour stopped the game for nearly an hour.

And when play resumed, it was all Pitt County after that.

The game was a sloppy one, however, as each team committed five errors. Of the 15 runs scored in the game, only five of them were earned because of the misplays, four by Pitt and one by Snow Hill.

"We bounced back (from Wednesday's loss) well," Coach Bruce Rhodes said. "We did the things we had to do to win. We did what we had to do after they took the lead. I thought Doug (Coley) pitched a good game too."

Rhodes said he didn't think the long delay had an effect on the game, and he also didn't credit the errors to either the rain or the jitters. "I don't know what caused 'em."

Snow Hill took the lead on Russo's blast with one away in the top of the first. Russo sent the ball out of the park in left easily clearing the fence.

After getting one out in the bottom of the first, Snow Hill had to wait until the rain cleared to continue the action and when the teams came back out on the field, Pitt was ready.

Although Toby Fischer made the second out, it was on a hard liner to third. Coley then followed with a single to left and Billy Michel doubled to left. Mike Kinley singled to right, scoring Coley and Traye Fuqua reached on an error allowing Michel to score the go-ahead run. Roger Moyer then tripled, driving in both Kinley and Fuqua. Steve Mills followed with a single, driving in Moyer for a 5-1 lead.

Snow Hill cut it to 5-2 with one in the top of the third. Nat Norris beat out a bunt single. Mills made an outstanding diving catch of a shot by Russo to rob him of a hit and Norris took second on an infield out. Billy Godley reached on an error, scoring Norris.

But Pitt came right back to score in the bottom of the frame, for a 6-2 lead. With two away, Mills singled and Daniel Keel got a hit. Walks to Jackie Conway and Fischer brought in Mills.

Snow Hill again rallied for two in the fourth, closing it to 6-4. Todd Grant arrived on an error and Joey Stepe walked. Kevin Langston also walked, loading the bases. Norris' sacrifice fly to left scored Grant and Russo singled, reloading the bases. Randy Daniels walked, scoring Stepe.

Again, however, Pitt rallied to match the Snow Hill runs for an 8-4 lead. With one away, Kinley reached on a bounce just over first base. Then, as he broke for second, Snow Hill pitcher Jerry Butler fired to first, only to have the ball get past the fielder allowing Kinley to go all the way to third. He scored on Moyer's single to right. Mills and Keel followed with singles, driving in Moyer with the eighth run.

Pitt then added two more in the fifth. With two away, Coley reached on an error and Michel dropped one just over the fence in left for a two-run homer. That gave Pitt a 10-4 lead.

Snow Hill came up with one more run in the seventh. Godley doubled and when Moyer attempted to pick him off the ball was overthrown, letting him go on to third. He scored when Mills overran the ball in center trying to make the pickup play.

Kinley and Moyer led the Pitt hitting with three each, while Michel and Keel each had two.

Snow Hill was led by Russo with three.

"It's a whole new season now," Rhodes said of the upcoming series with Wayne County. Pitt beat Wayne in each of their three meetings during the regular season, but Rhodes said that means nothing now. Those three losses were the only ones Wayne has experienced this year — in regular season and playoff action — against Area I East teams.

"We can't look back at those three wins. We have to try and get off to a good start by winning Sunday night."

Jordan Leads Olympians Over NBA

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — The U.S. Olympic basketball team has romped to six straight victories over various all-star competition this summer, but the coach of the latest victim says the team shouldn't start counting its gold medals just yet.

Coach Bobby Knight's team swept to a 96-85 victory over a group of National Basketball Association stars in Greensboro behind Michael Jordan's 25 points. It was the fifth straight triumph over the NBA players after the Olympians opened their exhibition schedule with a 124-89 rout of former Indiana University stars.

Billy Cunningham, the Philadelphia 76ers' coach who led the NBA team in its latest outing, was impressed with the performance before a crowd of 15,771 at the Greensboro Coliseum. But he doesn't think the team can start thinking gold.

"They had some great spurts of basketball," Cunningham said. "The only thing I'm concerned about is that they don't get a false sense of security. It's going to be a lot different in the Olympics. They're going to play against teams who have played together for many, many years.

"If they just keep improving as a ball club and keep that intensity, they'll do pretty well," Cunningham added.

Jordan's play might mark the beginning of the improvement phase for Knight's club. The University of North Carolina star, who was named college basketball player of the year last season, had been mired in sub-par shooting for the last several weeks. He entered the sixth game at 46 percent from the field.

His outside touch was still rusty, but Jordan's inside game delighted the audience, many of whom cheered him on as a collegian. With an array of layups, reverse moves and dunks, Jordan finished 10 for 19 from the field, including an eight-for-14 effort in the second half.

"My role is no different here than it was at North Carolina," said Jordan, who forfeited his final year of eligibility to become a first-round draft pick of the NBA's Chicago Bulls. "I'm trying to get inside, penetrate and draw fouls."

His success at getting inside was partly due to Knight's decision to try Jordan at forward, a switch from the guard post he held down for three years for Coach Dean Smith at Chapel Hill. The result was his best outing in the exhibition series and the highest scoring performance to date.

"I'm getting adjusted to it," Jordan said. "I'm playing against a lot bigger guys. I have a little advantage with my quickness."

Quick is the best way to describe the U.S. start. After Steve Stipanovich scored on a jumper from the right of the lane, the Olympians ran off eight straight points. Georgetown's Pat Ewing scored four of the points, while Jordan had two free throws and Indiana's Steve Alford canned a 10-foot jumper.

Kenny Carr broke the four-minute NBA drought with two free throws with 15:17 left before intermission. The U.S. raced off again, however, and scored seven unanswered points. One of the points was Alford's free throw, the result of a technical foul called on Cunningham, who spent a lot of time yelling at officials Joe Forte and Dave Dodge.

"I thought there were situations when the officials just ... called

The Senior Babe Ruth League will hold its 16- and its 17-18-Year-Old District Tournament in Greenville, starting tonight, while the Babe Ruth 13-15 District Tournament opens this afternoon at SouthWest Edgecombe High School near Pinetops.

The Senior Babe Ruth tournaments will be played at Guy Smith Stadium with two games Friday and Saturday night, and again on Sunday, if necessary. One game will also be played on Monday, and on Tuesday, if needed.

The 16-Year-Old tournament involves only two teams, the Coastal Plains North and the Coastal Plains South. They will play at 6 p.m. Friday and 5 p.m. Saturday, with a third game, if needed at 5 p.m. Sunday. That series is a best two-of-three.

The regular Senior Babe Ruth Tournament will have three teams. Coastal Plains North drew a bye while Coastal Plains South faces Roanoke Rapids at 8 p.m. Friday in the first game. The winner takes on Coastal Plains North on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The losers of the first two games meet Sunday at 7:30 p.m., with the survivor facing the lone unbeaten at 6 p.m. Monday. Should a final game be needed to complete the double elimination format, it will be played immediately afterward.

The winners advance to state tournament play starting July 20. The 16-year-olds go to Eastern Wayne near Goldsboro, while the 16-18's go to White Oak near Jacksonville.

The Babe Ruth League tournament starts at 4 p.m. today with Tarboro meeting Washington. Greenville faces Greene County at 6 p.m., with Pitt County colliding with Nash County at 8 p.m.

Three more games are set for Saturday. At 4 p.m. the Tarboro-Washington winner meets Martin County, which has a first round bye. The other two winners meet at 8 p.m., with the losers of the Greenville-Greene and Pitt-Nash contests squaring off at 6 p.m.

Three more games are set for Sunday at the same times, with two on Monday, and either one or two, depending on the outcome, set for Tuesday.

The winner moves on to the state tournament, set for Elizabeth City starting July 20.

College TV Plan Worries Washington State Coach

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The landmark decision of U.S. District Court Judge Juan Burciaga, upheld by the Supreme Court, cutting the colleges loose from the restraints of the NCAA and sending them off to dine in the enticing vineyards of free enterprise television, creates a new sport — laissez faire football.

But Jim Walden, football coach at Washington State, wonders if it's quite as wonderful as the folks at the universities of Georgia and Oklahoma, who initiated the action, believe it is.

"I didn't think things were so bad before," Walden said. "Certainly, they weren't at Georgia and Oklahoma. They sell out their stadium for every game — 80,000 at Georgia, 76,000 at Oklahoma (compared to Washington State's 40,000). All season tickets. They can buy and sell my school. Why did they need more than they were getting?"

"What was their beef? How much money did they need? That's my question. What were they looking for? To be on television six or seven times? For what purpose? How much more revenue could they need?"

"At Washington State, I don't have half and I don't have a third of what they have (in their budgets), but I have all I need to be competitive. "Two of 105 (Division I-A) schools were dissatisfied. If it was that bad, wouldn't it have been more than that?"

The problem now, says Walden, is no one is quite sure what the impact of the decision will be on the smaller schools. They routinely shared in NCAA television revenue, almost all of which was generated by the major powers. College football free agency changes all that.

"We're a good example at Washington State," Walden continued. "We're bigger than the smallest, not as big as the biggest. I need the big guys. Not as bad as Wyoming and Bowling Green do, but I still need them and the support the NCAA provides. It's nice to open the morning mail and find a (TV share) check for $25,000."

That will continue to happen for Washington State because of the school's affiliation with the Pacific-10 Conference. Pac-10 and Big-10 Conference games will be marketed by TCS-Metrosports, originally conceived as a supplemental service for the conferences but, at the moment, their primary outlets.

Washington State's TV take last year was more than $1 million. "We probably won't make as much now, but I know we'll get something. I'm secure knowing that," Walden said.

When the NCAA was in control of television rights, it served as sort of a super conference for unaffiliated schools, distributing revenue to them. Now, there will be no TV money for that body to distribute.

By The Associated Press

Just back from a good performance in the All-Star Game, Gary Carter continues to look like an all-star for the Montreal Expos.

Voted the most valuable player after belting the game-winning home run for the National League on Tuesday night, the Montreal catcher swung the bat with comparable authority Thursday night as he led the Expos to a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Carter drove in all three runs for the Expos with his 16th homer and a two-run single that broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning.

"We're not out of this race by any means," Carter said of the fourth-place Expos, currently 7½ games behind the front-running New York Mets in the NL East. "We finished off the first half with a flourish against Nolan Ryan (of the Houston Astros) and we're keeping things going."

In other NL action, it was Chicago 3, Los Angeles 2 in 10 innings; Pittsburgh 6, San Francisco 3; New York 8, Atlanta 6; San Diego 4, St. Louis 1, and Philadelphia 5, Houston 3.

Carter's homer off Cincinnati starter Joe Price, 3-6, in the fourth inning gave the Expos a 1-0 margin that stood until the fifth, when Carter's first error in 92 games allowed the Reds to score their only run.

Skeeter Barnes had opened the inning against Bryn Smith, 7-7, with a walk. He advanced to third when Ron Oester followed with a single. As Brad Gulden struck out, Carter tried to pick Barnes off third, but his throw hit the runner and rolled into left field.

"It would have been nice to get through the season without an error," said the Montreal catcher. "Because I was being aggressive, I was charged with an error."

Carter quickly atoned, however, with a bases-loaded single in the sixth for the winning runs.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 2

Ryne Sandberg homered to lead off the bottom of the 10th inning, lifting Chicago over Los Angeles. Sandberg smacked his 12th home run of the season to pin the loss on Tom Niedenfuer, 1-5, who had relieved Dodger starter Alejandro Pena.

Chicago's Steve Trout and Pena had duelled through eight innings. Tim Lincecum, 7-1, pitched scoreless ninth and 10th innings to gain the victory.

This was the 11th time this year that the Cubs have won in their last at-bat.

"I had two strikes on me and I was choking up on the bat, trying to get solid contact," Sandberg said. "I was fortunate it went out."

Pirates 6, Giants 3

Jose DeLeon struck out 12 batters in eight innings and Tony Pena's run-scoring double capped a three-run fifth inning as Pittsburgh beat San Francisco.

DeLeon, 6-4, fanned seven batters in the first three innings and struck out 10 for the fifth time in his one-year major league career and the second time this season.

With the Pirates trailing 2-1, Marvell Wynne, Lee Mazzilli and Bill Madlock lined consecutive one-out singles in the fifth inning, with Madlock's single driving in Wynne. Jason Thompson followed with a sacrifice fly off loser Bill Laskey, 4-9, to score Mazzilli before Pena doubled.

DeLeon gave up six hits and walked three before needing relief help in the ninth from Kent Tekulve, who posted his eighth save.

Mets 8, Braves 6

Keith Hernandez and Mike Fitzgerald each drove in a pair of runs in a five-run ninth inning to lift New York over Atlanta.

After the Braves scored three runs in the eighth to take a 6-3 lead, pinch-hitter Rusty Staub led off the Mets' ninth with a double. Wally Backman then walked, chasing Steve Bedrosian, Atlanta's third pitcher.

Hall dropped Mookie Wilson's fly to allow the Mets to load the bases, Hernandez singled to score John Stearns, who was running for Staub, and Backman.

After Darryl Strawberry struck out, George Foster singled home Wilson with the tying run. One out later, Fitzgerald doubled to score Hernandez and Foster. Jesse Orosco, 7-2, picked up the victory in relief while Doug Sisk pitched the ninth for his 13th save. Donnie Moore, 0-1, who relieved Bedrosian, absorbed the loss.

Padres 4, Cardinals 1

Kevin McReynolds hit his 12th home run in the sixth inning and Eric Show and Craig Lefferts combined on a four-hitter, leading San Diego over St. Louis.

McReynolds' home run capped the San Diego attack off Joaquin Andujar, 13-7, giving them a 4-0 lead. Show, while winning for the first time since June 19, struck out three and walked the same number before giving way to Lefferts in the seventh inning.

The Cards chased Show, 9-6, by loading the bases with one out in the bottom of the seventh. But Lefferts quelled the threat after a run scored on pinch-hitter Tito Landrum's force-out grounder and went on to post his fourth save.

Phillies 5, Astros 3

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter through seven innings and drove in two runs with a double, and Ozzie Virgil and Tim Lincecum each homered as Philadelphia defeated Houston.

Carlton, 7-4, struck out four and walked one as he won his fourth game in his last five decisions. Al Holland collected his 18th save, pitching the final two innings.

Joe Niekro, 9-8, was the loser, snapping a personal seven-game winning streak.

The sixth was the big inning for the Phillies. They produced four runs, two on Carlton's double, and took a 5-2 lead.

Petty Still Modest After 200 Wins

RANDLEMAN, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty, who recently won his 200th NASCAR stock car race, basked in the glow of hometown fans at the expense of ABC's Good Morning America.

Petty postponed the Wednesday television appearance as state, county and city officials took turns praising his accomplishments both on and off the track.

"After 200 victories, Richard Petty is still the same modest, unassuming man," said Add Penfield, WZOO radio sports director. "He never lost the common touch. He's a far cry from the prima donnas we hear of in sports today."

Also appearing were Randleman Mayor Lib Swain, Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, fellow Randolph County Commissioner Richard Pugh and former U.S. Rep. Gene Johnston of Greensboro.

When Petty took the podium, he described the day with the 200th victory that included a meeting with Ronald Reagan.

Pitchers' Night In The American

By The Associated Press
For the young and the old, the right-handers and the lefties, it was a pitchers night in the American League.

From 45-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, the oldest player in the majors, to 24-year-old Frank Viola, and from one Baltimore ace (Scott McGregor) to another (Storm Davis), the pitchers were in paradise Thursday night and the hitters were in despair.

The knuckleballers had a terrific time. New York's Niekro tied Detroit's Jack Morris for the American League lead in victories with his 12th and has a 1.88 earned run average after he combined with reliever Dave Righetti on a 5-2 Yankees victory over Kansas City.

In Texas, Charlie Hough threw a four-hitter for his seventh win in the last eight games and AL high 10th complete game as the Rangers belted Cleveland 7-2.

Viola used more classic stuff to win his sixth straight start, 4-2 over slumping Detroit, lifting the Twins into undisputed possession of first place in the West.

The Orioles swept a doubleheader from the White Sox behind the strong hurling of Davis and Sammy Stewart in a 2-1 opening-game victory and a four-hitter by McGregor in a 3-0 decision in the nightcap.

California's Mike Witt threw a five-hitter as the Angeles beat Milwaukee 5-2. Seattle rookie Mark Langston three-hit Boston for eight innings but needed ninth-inning relief in a 3-2 decision.

Oakland beat Toronto 7-4.

Niekro scattered seven hits over seven innings, then Righetti threw a perfect two innings for his 11th save.

"I had to stay right on top of them," said Niekro. "They are the type of team that if you give them an inch, they will take a yard."

The Yankees built a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Butch Wynegar started it with a walk and Dave Winfield singled. Don Baylor followed with a check-swing single to right, scoring Wynegar and moving Winfield to third, and Roy Smalley and Don Mattingly lined run-scoring singles.

KC came back with two runs in the third on RBI singles by Darryl Motley and Steve Balboni.

"I said to myself after that inning, 'That's all, they're not going to get any more,'" Niekro admitted.

They didn't.

Winfield's two singles raised his major league-leading batting average to .371.

Rangers 7, Indians 2
Buddy Bell drove in four runs with a double, single and sacrifice fly to aid Hough, who says his strong work is based on strong confidence.

"If a player has doubts of what he's capable of doing, he's not going to be a major leaguer for very long," he said. "It's just a matter of keeping your head and continuing to work hard."

Twins 4, Tigers 2
Viola gave up just one run on five hits over eight innings to win his fifth consecutive game since the birth last month of Frank John III. He allowed only a solo homer to Barbaro Garbey before pulling himself from the game with a stiff shoulder after the eighth. Ron Davis pitched the ninth for his 17th save.

"Maybe I ought to be a daddy more often," Viola said. "Maybe it's the added responsibility or maybe it's just that I'm not sleeping at night so I walk out there and don't know what I'm doing."

A three-run seventh was decisive for host Minnesota. Gary Gaetti's RBI double and run-scoring singles by Houston Jimenez and Kirby Puckett did the damage.

East-leading Detroit is 22-23 since its torrid 35-5 start.

Orioles 2-3, White Sox 1-0
Chicago had won seven in a row before journeying to Baltimore, where it was stymied by Davis, Stewart and McGregor. Eddie Murray and Wayne Gross homered in the first game and Cal Ripken Jr. had a home run and triple in the nightcap.

While Hough spoke of confidence, McGregor thought concentration was the key as the Orioles picked up 1 1/2 games on Detroit to trail by 10.

"Concentration is the key to everything," said McGregor. "Once you get your mind in the right frame for the second half of the season, you can roll along pretty good."

Once the Orioles "know it's time to go, that's when you start rolling up the victories," he added.

A's 7, Blue Jays 4
Oakland won its fifth straight, a season high, thanks to a six-run seventh that was capped by Dave Kingman's major league-leading 24th home run. Just prior to the homer, Kingman had swung and missed at a Roy Lee Jackson pitch but it got past catcher Buck Martinez, allowing Rickey Henderson to score from third.

Bill Caudill earned his 19th save with two innings of relief for the host A's.

"I just missed it, it sailed right on in and I didn't get it," said Martinez.

"It was a fastball that was really running. We gave them six runs in that inning. If you play that, you're going to get beat. We don't play like that very often."

Angels 5, Brewers 2
Witt won his fourth in a row and increased his league-leading strike-out total to 105 in going the route for

Mariners 3, Red Sox 2
Langston, who three-hit Boston on July 1, gave up singles to Marty Barrett and Jackie Gutierrez and Dwight Evans' 17th homer, leading off the ninth. At that point, Mike Stanton came on and, after he gave up a home run to Mike Easler, was replaced by Paul Mirabella, who picked up his third save.

CFA Members Commit To TV Package; Seek Outlet

By The Associated Press
The jumbled status of televised college football in 1984 has become somewhat clearer — although there still is uncertainty regarding who will be showing what games.

On Thursday, all 63 members of the College Football Association filed a commitment form that binds them to following the CFA's television package.

Those members did so after disdaining efforts by a separate coalition of the Big Ten and Pac-10 Conferences, which tried to get some Southern and Eastern independents to join their group in an attempt to widen its base of support.

The CFA membership consists of the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big 8 Conference, the Southeastern Conference, the Southwest Conference, the Western Athletic Conference and 19 major independents including East Carolina University.

"Naturally, we are pleased with the unanimous vote," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the CFA.

The Supreme Court two weeks ago upheld a ruling that struck down two existing NCAA packages sold to CBS, ABC and ESPN for almost $275 million, saying they were in violation of federal antitrust laws. On Tuesday, college football's major schools turned down a last-ditch proposal by the NCAA for a TV package that would have been based on voluntary cooperation.

An attempt to get the CFA and Big Ten-Pac-10 to consolidate efforts failed earlier this week.

Neinas said the basic CFA television plan provides for a national marketing effort in two times period on each date — offering those games to national networks and national cable — as well as an open period for conference and institutional telecasts in the afternoon, which would be used for local and regional broadcasts.

"The CFA Television Committee will commence discussions with all interested television entities at the earliest possible date," Neinas said.

Regardless of their affiliation, schools can still negotiate deals for themselves on top of any arrangement they may make with either the CFA or Big Ten-Pac-10.

The Southeastern Conference has said it will start negotiations next week with WTBS, Ted Turner's national cable network, on broadcast of a game-of-the-week for 1984.

"We may have something resolved in a week or two," said Mississippi State Athletic Director Charley Scott.

Some schools that joined the CFA said they felt there was nothing else they could do.

"We have a major market for football, to be sure, but we certainly are not in a position to make that fly on a national level," said Dr. Ed Bozik, athletic director at the University of Pittsburgh.

"We're committing to the CFA. It's the only choice we have," he said. "The CFA had agreed to try to make a coalition with the Pac-10 and Big Ten. We committed to that proposition first. We initially supported the NCAA plan, but that doesn't exist anymore. It was voted down by the members."

Joe Kearney, commissioner of the nine-member WAC, said his schools had "only one choice."

"As a member of the CFA, you could go forward with the CFA plan of 63 members or go on as a conference. I think our feeling was the largest group we could join was the best. There was absolutely no choice to go out on your own as a conference."

"I think everybody has said that the best plan that was there was the NCAA plan that was declared null and void by the courts," he said.

Professor Frank Remington, who represented the University of Wisconsin at a meeting of Big Ten athletic directors in Chicago this week, said "the general feeling was that the CFA plan was unsatisfactory because it, too, raises serious antitrust issues."

To The Editor:
The 13 year old All-Star District Championship tournament was held in Greenville in Guy Smith Stadium July 6 thr 11th. Teams from Washington, Greenville, Greene County, Nash County, Martin County and Pitt County participated.

The Greenville team placed third, Nash County second, and PITT COUNTY WON THE DISTRICT CHAMPIONSHIP!!!

The Daily Reflector is in Greenville which is in Pitt County. Yet when these two home teams made it to the finals, no one from the Daily Reflector staff felt it newsworthy enough to be there. I feel that it's a shame that the local newspaper doesn't have enough pride to be there to record this accomplishment that our local youth achieved.

I am very disappointed in the Daily Reflector but we sure our proud of the teams!! Congratulations go to Greenville on their accomplishment. And to Pitt County all we can say is 'WAY TO GO!! We'll be in Havelock to cheer you on!!

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PETULANT EX-GARDENERS, IN FIST FIGHT, EXCHANGED PLANTER'S PUNCHES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
2NT Pass 6NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

We have often remarked that those contracts that seem to be laydowns require more care than difficult hands. If you relax, it is easy to make a wrong play from which you cannot recover.

The auction was brief and accurate. South showed a balanced hand of 22-24 points, and North used simple arithmetic to arrive at the conclusion that a small slam should be bid.

The play was brief, at least the early part where it mattered, but hardly accurate. When dummy appeared, declarer announced: "No problems, partner." He won the spade in hand, laid down the ace of hearts and, when West showed out, declarer found that 12 tricks were beyond him. (We know that there is a double dummy way to recover, so don't write. But you may get some fun out of trying it.)

There is a way to play this particular heart combination for a sure four tricks. Win the spade lead in dummy and lead a low heart. Regardless of whether East follows or not, insert the 10.

If East follows and the finesse loses, the rest of the suit is good. If the finesse wins and West shows out, cross to the king of hearts and repeat the finesse, and you have four tricks in the bag.

If East shows out, West can capture the 10 with the queen. You win any return in hand, and take the marked finesse of the eight to assure four tricks. If West refuses the first heart, simply continue with a heart toward the K-8, and no matter what West does you are guaranteed four tricks in the suit.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. TOGETHER AGAIN . . . Christine, Phyllis and Dorothy McGuire, known for their hit songs in the 1950s and 1960s, get together recently in Phyllis' Las Vegas, Nevada home to harmonize. They say a chance reunion in New York lured them out of retirement back to the bright lights.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The McGuire Sisters, who captivated the music world with a volley of hits in the 1950s and 1960s before retiring in 1968, say a chance reunion in New York has lured them back to the bright lights.

"The three of us were in New York together for the first time in many years recently," Phyllis recalled from her Las Vegas home. "We were sightseeing, shopping when we heard our records being played. The three of us became excited that the public was excited and we said 'Well, why not?'"

The three — Phyllis, Christine and Dorothy — are the latest to capitalize on a nostalgia craze that is sparking the return of many groups from the 1950s and '60s.

Singers Helen O'Connell, Margaret Whiting, Rosemary Clooney and Martha Raye toured recently in a revue billed as "4 Girls 4." Other acts scoring comebacks are Teresa Brewer, the Righteous Brothers, the Everly Brothers, Jan and Dean, the Platters, the Four Freshman, the Coasters and the Imperials.

"We are not playing 'follow the leader,' so to speak," Phyllis said. "We are simply coming back because we have a strong desire to perform again, plus we feel so enthusiastic about this endeavor. We feel that we have a freshness because we haven't been working all these years and we are charged!"

The three say they like some of today's music; dislike some. They say there are great songs being written today and "great artists to perform them."

But they'll opt mainly for their standards, updating versions of their hits such as "Goodnight, Sweetheart, Goodnight," "Sincerely," "Sugartime," "Picnic" and "Just Because."

The sisters, who started their singing careers as pre-schoolers in the Miamisburg, Ohio, Church of God choir, rocketed to music fame after winning a spot on the old Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts.

They became regulars on his show, appeared on numerous other TV spots and chalked up 30 hits on the Billboard charts. They also headlined at major Las Vegas showrooms and at night clubs across the nation for nearly 20 years before pursuing separate careers in 1968.

They say they are currently weighing several comeback offers and would also like to return to the record business.

"We love recordings and especially the way it is done today. We have gold records that are 78s, so that should tell you something."

Phyllis, 51, lives in Las Vegas; Dorothy, 54, is from Scottsdale, Ariz. Christine, 56, calls both cities home.

NEW IMAGES . . . Christine McGuire helps coil her sister Dorothy's hair while other sister Phyllis beautifies herself in the mirror. Their plans for a comeback spring from a decision made during a recent reunion in New York.

TENNIS PLAYERS . . . The McGuire Sisters — Christine, Phyllis and Dorothy indulge in tennis in Las Vegas. The trio is currently weighing several comeback offers, hoping to return to the recording business.

IN GREAT SHAPE . . . The three McGuire Sisters work out in Las Vegas with an unidentified instructor recently, as part of the process of getting in shape for a planned comeback to the music world. The trio headlined at major Las Vegas showrooms and nightclubs across the country for 20 years.
