'Mario, Mario' ... Cry Of Future?

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

A News Analysis
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — On another night, in another convention hall, Democrats may once again chant the name: "Mario, Mario, Mario." Then it will be for a candidate, not a keynote speaker. For New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, the man who would not consider second place on the ticket this year, may aim one job higher in 1988.

Convention. He came on like the candidate he isn't, heralded by a biographical film, the story of an immigrant's son come to high station. He offered the ritual denunciations of President Reagan, the traditional recitation of Democratic accomplishments. It was not an address of memorable slogans or punch lines. But it worked. It was oratory to rival the skills of a Reagan. The cheers were real, not on cue. More than once, Cuomo talked past what would have been an applause line, or put out a hand to hush the convention hall so that he could go on. The governor who traced his origins to the other side of the New York City tracks offered the ritual forecast of Democratic victory, saying that there will be a new president next year, "a Democrat born not to the blood of kings but to the blood of immigrants and pioneers." Cuomo's nationally televised speech Monday night put him on the national stage he had shunned when Mondale was auditioning vice presidential nominees. He said he would not run this year, would instead complete his first term as governor.

hence. Cuomo's name likely will be on any list of 1988 prospects, and not just because he made a fine speech. A spot on the list is almost automatic for a popular, successful governor of New York. Cuomo's age is about right; 52 now, 56 then. Four of his predecessors made it to the White House; others, in both parties, tried. As lieutenant governor, then governor, he's proven himself an adept campaigner. He upset Mayor Edward Koch of New York City to win the Democratic nomination in 1982, then beat a big money Re-

Mondale, Rivals Hold Joint Talks To Repair Union

By MIKE FEINSILBER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As Walter Mondale courted his two opponents face to face, the Democratic National Convention embraced a new hero in New York's Mario Cuomo, who rallied the party to his vision of the future and his vow — "Democrats did it, and Democrats can do it again." The payoff for Mondale's dramatic move — a personal session alone with his two rivals for the nomination — could come tonight if the convention sidesteps a brawl over philosophical differences as it drafts a platform. Aides to the three candidates — Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson — are to meet today to see if they can resolve their bosses' differences over party planks on the use of force abroad, on justice, jobs and peace. But Monday night belonged to Cuomo, New York's governor, a new face on the national scene, pegged by the professionals as a likely presidential contender in the some future Democratic convention.

He electrified the delegates by recalling their party's vision of a compassionate government that honors hard work. His delivery and timing rivaled the artful Republican in Washington, Ronald Reagan. "In our family are gathered everyone from the abject poor of Essex County in New York to the enlightened affluent of the gold coasts of both ends of our nation," rang out Cuomo, son of immigrants. "And in between is the heart of our constituency — the middle class, the people not rich enough to be worry-free but not poor enough to be on welfare, those who work for a living because they have to." Away from the humid subterranean convention hall, where their delegates bathed in oratory, Mondale, Hart and Jackson held their first joint meeting since the primaries. The site: neutral ground — a hotel suite atop breezy Nob Hill. "No nominee can be elected without help," said Mondale, addressing 300 reporters after the hour-long session. Hart said he thought a compromise could be

Martin Says Campaign Is 'Going Real Strong'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Jim Martin, the Republican candidate for governor, began a campaign visit to Pitt and Martin counties this morning that will end with a rally and dinner at the Moose Lodge from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Martin attended a social hour with members of the Golden K Kiwanis Club, toured the Pitt County Mental Health Center, and visited his Pitt County campaign headquarters before traveling to Robersonville for an 11:15 a.m. hand-shaking visit to Kent's Corner. A 12:30 p.m. lunch at Parker's Barbecue Restaurant was scheduled to be followed by visits to the Greenville City Hall, the courthouse, a tour of the Procter & Gamble Paper Products plant, and a fundraiser reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Ray Joyner on Circle Drive. Martin, who will face Democrat Rufus Edmisten in the November general election, is serving his sixth term in the U.S. House of Representatives. Martin said this morning that his campaign is "going real strong now." But the candidate suggested the pace should pick up in the near future as a major advertising campaign gets under way. "We've spent $100,000 so far" on advertising since the primary elections, "while Edmisten has spent $1 million," Martin said. He also said fund raising activities are increasing. "In June, we doubled our average for the past 10 months," Martin said, adding that contributions during the month of July should be even better. "One of the most exciting things," according to Martin, is to "see so

Storms Bring 3-Inch Rainfall

Area residents endured a gray, rainy day today and face the prospect of the same Wednesday as summer storms continue to move heavy rain and after-severe lightning through eastern North Carolina. A whopping 2.05 inches of rain was recorded by Greenville Utilities from 7 a.m. Monday until 7 a.m. today. Unofficial measurements in the Ayden-Gritton area, however, recorded over three inches of rain during the same period. According to Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's electrical department, a direct lightning strike during Monday's storm to a power transfer unit that serves Pitt County Memorial Hospital interrupted electrical service to one-third of the hospital for over an hour. No part of the hospital was actually without power, Green said, because the facility immediately transfers to generator power during an outage. Direct lightning strikes on GUC's electrical system have been so frequent and intense in the past few days that system damage has occurred, Green said. "We recorded 50 direct (lightning) hits just in town (Greenville) during Friday's storm," he said. "The system is designed to take this but after a while you get system damage. The storms take their toll." Green said

STRANGER ASSISTED HER

On July 3 about the middle of the afternoon I was driving my old Dodge Dart on Arlington Boulevard. Just as I turned into Pitt Plaza, my radiator burst with a bang and hot steam came pouring out. This frightened me badly. The nicest young man came to my rescue — phoned the service station across the street and offered to drive the car over there for me. I was certainly very grateful. Of course, he had to walk back to his car parked at Pitt Plaza. In my upset state, I failed to get his name, but I shall always be grateful. M.M.

CORRECTION

The phone number for Careline and the name of the person to ask for when calling Careline about listing self-help mutual support groups with the state were given incorrectly in Monday's column. The correct name and phone number are Janie Hinson, 800-662-7030.

Youth Turns In An Alarm

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

A ripe tomato and a smoke detector have been given to Marc Whichard of Ayden for his concern about a neighbor's house. Last Tuesday evening Rebecca Whichard was walking with her sons, Marc, 8, Matt, 2 and Tyler, 7, months. Marc went home to put up his Hot Cycle and get his bicycle. He then found his mother and decided to go home. "When I got home, I heard a beeping noise while I was in my driveway. I didn't know what it was and I kept riding in front of the house. I heard the beeping two more times and I knew it was a smoke alarm. I went to the home of Walter Curry and heard the smoke alarm inside the house. My house was locked so I rode my bike to the only place I could think of to get help — Odham's Store," said Marc. "I told him (Billy Odham) the house was on fire and that he needed to call the fire department. He called the police department and Officer W.G. Callicut, and Chief Tommy Burney came around and investigated. They saw a pot of potatoes on the stove. Louie Tyndall, another neighbor, found a key and they went in the house — turned off the stove and removed the pot of potatoes. Mrs. Curry had left the house to go to church. There was a lot of smoke in the kitchen and there was also a little bit of a fire flaming," Marc said. "Mrs. Curry came over to my house and gave me her first ripe tomato," Marc added. She also gave Marc a smoke detector. "I'm glad I did what I did and would do it again if there are any fires. I hope my teacher reads this because she lives in Greenville," he said. Marc's parents are Marcus and Rebecca Whichard of Ayden. He is a third grader at W.H. Robinson School. Marc has decided he would like to be a police officer when he is old enough because, "It looks like fun to ride around in a police car." In addition to riding his bike, Marc enjoys playing hide and seek and going swimming and skating with his aunt, Lou Anne Baldrge.

Assistant Manager

Tommy McKnight has been appointed assistant manager/placement supervisor of the Job Service office (Employment Security Commission) in Greenville.

A native of Salisbury, McKnight holds the bachelor's and master's degrees from Appalachian State University. He taught in the Edenton-Chowan school system for four years before joining the ESC staff in Williamston in 1980.

McKnight replaces Gordon Allen who has been promoted to manager of the Edenton Job Service office.

Eagle Scout

Scott D. Plueddemann, son of Juanita and Bill Plueddemann of 209 Cherrywood Dr., has earned the Eagle Scout Award.

He was recognized in a ceremony held Sunday during the morning worship service at St. James United Methodist Church.

A member of Troop No. 340, Plueddemann is one of about 2 percent of all Boy Scouts who attain the Eagle rank, according to Ken Litteken, scoutmaster.

RECEIVES GIFT — East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell voices his appreciation for a $10,000 gift from Sperry Inc. of Wayne, Pa., to the ECU School of Business and recently formed Center for Applied Technology. Sperry representatives Jack Murphy (left), director of field marketing, and Ray Richardson, area

His brother Mike is also an Eagle Scout.

Preaching Service

A preaching service will be held at 7:30 p.m. today at Holy Mission Church, 1811 S. Pitt St., with the Rev. Ronnie McNair of Robersonville as the speaker.

Youth Tax Credit

Greenville area employers can save tax dollars under the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) for summer jobs by employing 16- and 17-year-olds from economically disadvantaged families for the summer, according to Jim Hannan, local office manager for the Employment Security Commission.

He said the tax credit is for 85 percent of the first $3,000 paid an eligible employee for a 90-day period between May 1 and Sept. 15. At the end of the 90-day period, the employer may request that the employee be recertified under another target group.

If the employee meets eligibility criteria for another group, the employer can receive regular TJTC tax credit for continuing to employ the individual.

The total period of eligibility for TJTC, including the time the individual is certified as a summer youth employee, cannot exceed two years, said Hannan.

For more information, call Tammy Moore at the ESC office, 756-2686.

OSU Graduate

Cynthia Marie Martin of Williamston recently graduated from Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Youth Revival

Youth revival will be held at Cherry Lane Free Will Baptist Church Wednesday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. The speaker will be the Rev. Joe Dixon.

Choirs performing each night include: Wednesday, English Chapel No. 2 Choir; Thursday, Whichard's Chapel Young Adult Choir, and Friday, Maury Chapel Choir.

Regional Conference

Six members of the Alpha Iota chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, international sorority of women educators, recently attended a southeast regional conference in Charleston, S.C.

Attending were Mickey West, Lile Avery, Sarah Allen, Vivian Mills, Barbara Finch and Peggy Rowlett.

Activities included workshops, tours of Kiawah Island and Fort Sumpter, and speeches by artist/naturalist Anne Richardson and author Madeline Hantske.

Vehicles Damaged

Greenville police reported more than $2,000 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated Monday afternoon.

Officers said cars driven by Michael Hamilton Wiggins of 110A River Bluff Road and Regina Cheryl Williams of 206 N. Summit St. collided about 2:23 p.m. on Tenth Street, 300 feet west of River Bluff Road, causing an estimated $1,200 damage to the Wiggins car and $25 damage to the Williams vehicle.

Police said a car driven by Virginnelle Vines Ashe of Country Paradise Estates collided with a parked car owned by Charlie Hemby Jr. of 408 Darden Drive about 5:24 p.m. on Darden Drive, 120 feet south of the Third Street intersection.

Damage from the collision was set at $700 to the Ashe car and $100 to the Hemby auto.

Beach Business Came In Short

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. (AP) — Motels, restaurants and gift shops in Manteo did a brisk business over the weekend, but tourist businesses in nearby Outer Banks communities say crowds for the 400th Anniversary celebration fell below their expectations.

There were vacancy signs in front of several seaside motels that had expected to be full for the weekend celebration and empty seats in restaurants that had expected long lines.

"It was a dud," said Mrs. Armand Muller, a Kill Devil Hills motel operator. "There was too much publicity which said there weren't going to be enough accommodations."

The celebration began Friday with the arrival of Princess Anne of Great Britain and ended Sunday with a memorial service and concert.

County Offers To Sell Building

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday approved a resolution offering the Tucker Building, at the intersection of Third and Greene streets, for sale, and approved a contract for design work on a new mental health building.

The sale of the Tucker Building, at public auction, was set for Aug. 24 at noon at the courthouse door.

Commissioners decided to offer the property for sale after the board was told that it would be too costly to renovate the building for use as county offices.

The board also awarded a contract for design work for a new building at the mental health center to architect

J.G. Hite for $9,840. The new building is expected to cost close to $400,000, with the state providing about a third of the costs.

In other business Monday, commissioners appointed Ed Stanley to the Mid-East Private Industry Council to replace Frank Grooms who resigned and reappointed J. Paul Davenport to a 3-year term on the county Alcoholic Control Board.

The board was told that some 723,400 gallons of water was used to fight a fire at the landfill two weeks ago and that the rental of equipment, food and other costs involved amounted to some $7,323.

ECU Planning To Purchase Lot

Plans are being made for the purchase by East Carolina University of a lot on the north side of East 10th Street. The state Legislature recently authorized purchase of the land for a sum of $250,000.

"The property adjoins university property on the back of the lot," said Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs Cliff Moore. "The Council of State has approved the purchase, and the purchase request has been turned over to the attorney general's office for a title search."

Moore said purchase of the land "should be completed this month. At this time we have not formulated plans for use of the land. That will come at a later date."

A recent purchase of a lot on East Fifth Street, across the street from the university's administrative office, "will be used as a parking lot site," Moore said. "We have a pressing need for a visitor's parking space near the administrative office for use by prospective students and their parents. This is an ideal location for that purpose." The property has a house, now vacant. It adjoins the property of the Howard House, currently being used as the security office for the campus.

"We have let a contract for the house to be torn down," Moore said.

In another ECU building plan, the $14 million classroom building will have the south end of the building adjacent to one side of the former power plant. "At the time plans for the classroom building site were announced," Moore commented, "there were some complaints because the construction will involve cutting some trees. But anywhere you build in eastern North Carolina," he added, "it's usually necessary to cut a few trees. We haven't had complaints on this recently."

Thousands Rush To Order New Proven Diet Tablet

Remarkable Results Without Dieting

SANTA BARBARA, CA (NTP News Service)—A revolutionary diet tablet—NUTRI-THIN—that lets you eat what you want, when you want, is taking the country by storm.

This amazing formula lets you lose weight without agonizing exercise, calorie counting or tasteless powdered supplements.

Pounds Fade Quickly, Easily
According to reports throughout the country, Nutri-Thin users have lost 10, 20, 30 pounds or more in surprisingly short time by taking one tablet with a glass of water before each meal.

"Pounds and fatty tissue seem to fade away," says a satisfied user, "and I can eat decent meals...with no hunger pangs!"

Unique Formula Melts Body Fat
The keys to Nutri-Thin's proven and tested formula are glucomannan and papain. Glucomannan is an astounding fiber derived from the Konjac root. It reduces caloric intake and works wonders upon the digestive tract, speeding up the burning of excess fat.

Papain is the natural enzyme of papaya, which greatly accelerates the digestion of food. In addition, Nutri-Thin contains a diuretic which helps eliminate body fluid, a primary contributor to obesity.

Works Automatically
Nutri-Thin operates automatically in the system. The user's "biological clock" tells it when to work its weight-reducing magic.

All Nutri-Thin ingredients are 100% natural—no drugs, preservatives or caffeine. It contains all the USRDA minimum daily vitamin requirements. Look good and feel good! Get in shape and lose those unsightly, unattractive extra pounds quickly and easily. Order Nutri-Thin today.

No Risk Guarantee

Park Reports Net Rises 26 Percent

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Park Communications, a publishing, broadcasting and advertising company, announced Monday that net income for the second quarter rose 26 percent, compared with a 14 percent increase in the same quarter last year.

The company, which owns 24 daily newspapers, 47 weeklies, seven television and 14 radio stations, outdoor advertising companies and real estate firms, reported a second-quarter net income of $3.74 million, or 41 cents a share, on revenues of $27.4 million, compared to earnings of $2.98 million, or 35 cents per share, on revenues of $23.95 million for the second quarter of last year.

For the first half of 1984, Park Communications earned $6 million, or 65 cents a share, on revenues of $50.68 million, compared to $4.83 million, or 57 cents per share, on revenues of $44.7 million during the first half of 1983.

"We are keeping the momentum going during the first half of our first full year as a public company," said President Roy H. Park, adding that "volume will exceed $100 million for the year 1984. Historically, our business does better in the second half of a calendar year."

Park said the company is installing a new transmitter to double the power of WBMG-TV in Birmingham, Ala., in time for the fall premiere of CBS programming. He also pointed to increased ratings at the Park station in Richmond, Va., WTVR-TV, which is first in all news categories, as is another Park station, WNCT-TV in Greenville, N.C.

Couple Marries In Base Chapel

Cynthia Ann McLawhorn and Christopher Harold Ginn were united in marriage July 7 in Jacksonville, Ark., at the Little Rock Air Force Base Chapel. The Rev. William J. Marshall performed the double ring ceremony at 10 a.m.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. R.A. McLawhorn Jr. of Route 1, Greenville. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ginn of Route 2, Snow Hill, and his father was best man. Ushers included Barry and Gary Ginn, brothers of the bridegroom of Route 2, Snow Hill.

A program of organ music was presented by Cynthia Marshall. Dave Elston was vocalist.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and chantilly lace. The fitted chantilly lace bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline etched with seed pearls and full length lace puff sleeves. The full length bouffant skirt extended into a chapel train. Chantilly lace motifs etched with seed pearls scalloped the organza skirt bordered with a lace ruffled hemline. She wore a two tiered veil of illusion bordered with scalloped chantilly lace flowing from an organza caplet applied with chantilly lace motifs outlined with seed pearls and accented with crystals for her headpiece. She carried white silk roses accented with light blue silk flowers and light blue ribbons.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Ramada Inn and was given by the parents of the bride.

The bride was employed by the American Red Cross Blood Services, Tar River Blood Center in Greenville. She graduated from Greenville Central High School and attended Pitt Community College.

The bridegroom is an airman first class in the USAF in Jacksonville, Ark. He graduated from Greene Central High School and attended Lenior Community College.

The couple will live in Jacksonville, Ark.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

A striking cardinal in a cherry tree turns an everyday necessity into an elegant accessory with basic needlepoint stitches, acrylic yarn and easy-to-handle plastic canvas.

With such a needlepoint cover, you can bring an inexpensive wastebasket out of hiding and make it into a conversation piece — or delight a friend who has everything with a gift of a wastebasket cover. It would also be ideal for bridge, golf or tennis tournament prizes or could be the hit of your charity bazaar. It is fairly quick to make, worked on seven-to-the-inch plastic canvas.

To obtain directions for making the Cardinal Wastebasket Cover, send your request for Leaflet No. NL-0715 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. N-0715 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, plastic canvas and all necessary yarns. The wastebasket is not included.

NEEDLEPOINT...wastebasket cover is a quick and easy project for decorating and gift giving.

Dear Pat: Why is it that graph charts for needlepoint show the stitch symbols in the "holes" rather than crossing the lines as stitches actually do? I find this very confusing when deciding just exactly how far to come in from a particular edge or corner.

— Debbie T., Harrisburg, Pa.
For those who have not worked from graph charts, perhaps a word of explanation would be in order. When you start with blank canvas, unless you are a talented artist, you will need a guide or "map" of where to place the various colored stitches in order to stitch a picture onto the canvas.

A graph chart is used to represent the canvas with the chart lines representing the canvas threads or ribs and the blank squares denoting the canvas holes.

Symbols then are drawn on the chart to represent the color of the stitch to be used in a particular place on the canvas. For example, X may represent red and O may represent green, with all blank squares to be worked in white. Therefore, you will work one red stitch for each X, one green stitch for each O and one white stitch for each blank square.

Usually in this type of needlepoint, the simple tent stitch (variously known as half-cross, continental or basketweave) is used, crossing one mesh or intersection of the canvas diagonally.

It would seem more logical to place the symbols directly over the intersection of the lines and I have used both methods in charting. I find it is no more difficult for the chart maker to do it one way than the other. But the stitcher usually finds it easier to see and follow the symbols when they appear in the squares.

If you will think of the symbol position as the hole in which your needle comes up, you should have no dif-iculty finding the proper placement for the stitch itself.

The surest way to center your design properly is to start in the exact center of both design and canvas.

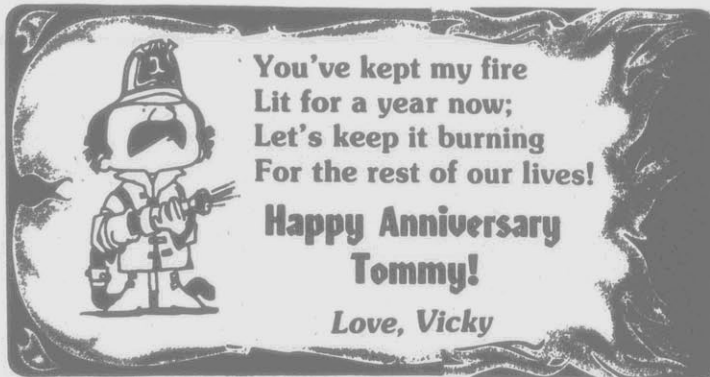

On your graph chart, draw lines at the outer edges of the top, bottom and sides of the design. Then, draw a vertical line halfway in from the edges and a horizontal line halfway between the top and bottom line. The point where these two lines cross is the design center.

Fold the fabric or canvas in half first in one direction and then the other. The point where the fold lines meet is the center of your working material. Start by working the stitch that shows at the design chart center and work out from there in all directions.

needs to a specialist. For those seeking orthodontic treatment, competent care will prove the most beneficial and least expensive in the long run. The best dental health program results when the patient's dentist and the orthodontist work together to achieve a long-term, healthful condition in the mouth. The quality of orthodontic treatment is enhanced when conducted by a qualified orthodontist. For a free brochure, additional information, or a list of qualified orthodontists in your area, please write: American Association of Orthodontists, 460 North Lindbergh Boulevard, St. Louis, MO 63141.

Who should treat orthodontic problems?

The family dentist is eminently qualified to handle the preventive measures and many of the treatment procedures needed for good dental health. While many problems in dentistry do not require a specialist, most dentists refer their patients with orthodontic conducted by a qualified orthodontist.

Readers Sink Teeth Into Public Brushing

DEAR READERS: "Grossed Out in Georgia" expressed disgust with people who brush their teeth in public washrooms. I defended the brushers. Many readers bristled.

Some letters straight from the readers' mouths:

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to "Grossed Out," who couldn't stand the sight of someone brushing his teeth in a public restroom:

As a dental assistant for four years, I have seen many mouths that might have needed a lot less dental work had their owners done a little more brushing.

Tell "Grossed Out" that he needs to brush and floss only the teeth he wants to keep.

KEEP SMILING
IN MISSION VIEJO

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Grossed Out," I was prompted to write in defense of brushing teeth in public.

At the age of 30, I finally got enough nerve to get braces to correct my teeth. Anyone who's had braces knows that food tends to adhere to the teeth and braces.

I brush my teeth in public restrooms after eating because I think it would look far worse to have food particles dangling from my braces.

Also, it's especially important while wearing braces to brush so decay doesn't destroy the teeth under the braces.

BRUSHING IN PUBLIC

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to comment on your answer to "Grossed Out," who objected to people brushing their teeth in a public washroom. Oral hygiene is important, but to have healthy teeth in the first place one must practice good nutrition. If you have poor teeth to begin with, it doesn't matter how often you brush and floss.

Children who live on candy bars, soft drinks, cookies, ice cream and other junk foods are asking for rotten teeth. There are no substitutes for fresh fruits, vegetables and plenty of dairy products to ensure healthy teeth.

NUTRITIONIST

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Grossed Out" is utterly dismaying. Instead of being put down, the practice of public teeth brushing should be encouraged—the same as the frequent washing of hands.

As any dentist could tell "Grossed Out" (and I'm sure a lot of them will), mouth bacteria like nothing better than immediately going to work on tiny bits of food lodged between their victim's teeth, and they're not about to wait until he is in the privacy of his own home.

And on purely aesthetic grounds, does "Grossed Out" find it less objectionable to encounter people (strangers or not) with bits of lunch clinging to their teeth? And how about breath that smells of onions and garlic following lunch at the deli down the street?

One wonders about the writer's own oral hygiene habits. Gross, no doubt.

ILL-MANNERED WITH HEALTHY TEETH

DEAR ABBY: You told "Grossed Out" that the sooner one brushes and flosses his teeth after eating, the healthier his teeth will be. Abby, that shows that you have fallen for the commercials of the teeth care industry. There is no real proof that brushing and flossing will make teeth last longer. Let me tell you why I say that: My grandfather never owned a toothbrush and he never heard of dental floss. When he died at 88, he had all his own teeth and they were in wonderful condition. My mother brushed her teeth but never flossed, and she also kept all her teeth to a ripe old age.

I do a little better: I brush my teeth once a day and have my teeth cleaned once a year. At age 72 I still have all my teeth plus a few fillings.

On the other hand, my husband was a fanatic about brushing his teeth and flossing them, too. He saw his dentist every six months, but he lost all his teeth before he was 60.

So, I have concluded that if you want healthy, long-lasting teeth, you must choose the right parents. Nothing else counts.

M.K. IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from the bride with three fathers: She was undecided as to which one should give her away. None of these men own her, and her husband will also not own her. She is her own person and does not need "giving away." That is a custom based on ancient societies where women were owned by fathers until they were owned by husbands.

Instead, if this is a large wedding with a professional, the bride should walk down the aisle with her fiancé.

METHODIST PASTOR
IN CHICAGO

DEAR PASTOR: It has also been suggested that for those who find the "giving away" ritual in the marriage ceremony offensive, it may be deleted. And the marriage will be no less valid for its omission.

(If you put off knowing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Training School Held In Raleigh

The N.C. Jaycee Women Local Officer's Training School was held in Raleigh for Jaycee Women leaders. Courses were offered in public speaking, public relations, individual development, effective meetings, parliamentary procedure, communications, personal growth and goal setting.

Doris Gosnell, president of the U.S. Jaycee Women organization from Lexington, was one of the guest speakers. Paula Turlington, also of Lexington, president of the N.C. Jaycee Women, was hostess for the weekend.

Officers of the Greenville Jaycettes attending were Jane Harrison, president, Marilyn Danford, external vice president, Amy Weir, secretary, and Pattie Michael, external director.

Other state leaders from across the state were in Raleigh during the weekend for their annual training school of local chapter officers. The primary purpose of the meeting is to train officers to be prepared to lead in their community, chapter and with their local Jaycees.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

FIRE ANTS
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Fire ants not only inflict sharp, painful stings to humans and pets, but their burrowing and nesting can damage lawns by uprooting and smothering grass.

To remove the ants, the makers of Spectracide suggest treating the ant mounds with a fire ant killer, preferably in the early morning or late evening when the temperature is cooler.

Spread a half-cup of the chemical around a six-foot radius of the mound, then water the area thoroughly.

Gift, Inheritance Taxes Changed

Wishing List

In the closing days of the legislative budget packaging all the lawmakers knew there would be some funds left for their "wish list," otherwise known as pork barrel projects.

There are two objections to the custom. One, voiced by legislators (and which we share) is that the pork barrel items are held to the end of the session ... some say as a "threat" to encourage lawmakers to vote certain ways on other bills earlier in the session.

We grant you this: If the leadership did not have some means of maintaining discipline their brethren could become an unmanageable mob marching to the beat of different drums and heading off in every direction. Still, we wish there was a better way.

Secondly, we have strong suspicions that in the late flurry of activity there are fundings adopted for highly dubious projects which slip through the net. That's not good, either.

On scanning some of those special spending projects dear to the hearts of certain legislators, they are basically good stuff.

They include sums for museums, festivals, fire departments, rescue squads and libraries for back home; there was a number of cultural projects included, as well as athletic field lights for NCCU (which must, by now, be long overdue), sums for public radio, an artificial reef, for Alzheimers disease support groups, historic sites, study projects (medical cost containment, public education policy council, the need for money to acquire land or develop existing state park facilities; funds for severely retarded children and area mental health centers). The list is long; and as one observer noted, it seems to grow larger each session.

It has occurred to us that many of the projects could (and should) have been tackled earlier in the session. If we are to assume there is no duplication, they all sound reasonable and valuable contributions to the public good.

Call them pet projects, a wish list or pork barrel ... on the whole the above are good, and if the state has the money we'd rather it was spent on improving the quality of life for Tar Heels.

Even so, we would prefer those fundings were given something more of a status than as afterthoughts. Those projects we know about are too important to be filed under "p" for pork barrel.

Repairs Welcome

It's party time.

Greenville has almost $312,500 to "maintain and improve" its city streets. You can see some of the preliminary steps already taken around manhole covers and the marking of depressions in the pavement which require filling-in.

The actual work begins later this month.

That "washboard effect" on some stretches of paving will be eliminated and old patch-up temporary repairs covered over. New traffic and crossings signals will be installed, more drainage measures instituted. It's like having an off-season Santa Claus visit.

All this is coupled with area repairs, upkeep and improvement work by state road crews.

If there is a fatted calf awaiting some special occasion, this could be it.

Proxmire Flings The Fleece

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Greek mythology, the Golden Fleece was an armload of ram's wool that Jason had to snatch from under the eye of a sleepless dragon and bring back to Greece.

Sen. William Proxmire has used the story for 10 years to symbolize what he considers outstanding examples of wasteful, ridiculous or ironic government agencies.

And in granting his Golden Fleece awards he is given to flights of rhetoric and fancy figures of speech to make his point.

Just this month, for instance, the Wisconsin Democrat said an advertising program of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. was "an example of federal spending that wasn't proper, came a cropper, and turned out to be a whopper."

Not content with this, he said the program "did not amount to a hill of beans." Furthermore, he said, such expenditures "run against the grain" of most taxpayers. He said he did not know whether the crop insurance ads were "just too corny to work" but it was clear the corporation had not been able to "separate the wheat from the chaff."

This kind of thing isn't new for Proxmire, either. As long ago as 1977, when the Smithsonian Institution spent $89,000 in public money to produce a dictionary of Tzotzil, an obscure Mexican tongue, the senator said the expenditure "doesn't make sense in any language."

"I don't know how to say, 'We've been had' in Tzotzil, but that about sums up my feelings," he said.

Here are more samples of Proxmire's prose:

— When President Reagan's inaugural committee used military personnel to squire visiting dignitaries around Washington, he said the committee was "taking the taxpayers for a ride."

— When the National Science Foundation spent $144,000 on a program using pigeons to test human economic behavior, he said, "The researchers coo while the taxpayers get billed."

— When the Agriculture Department spent $40,000 on a study linking social characteristics to food preferences, Proxmire said it was "guaranteed to cause a mighty case of indigestion for the poor taxpayer."

— When the National Endowment dollars in revenue for the state beginning this year and tax breaks for some citizens.

The cuts which the general public will notice the most came in gift and inheritance taxes.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1985, North Carolinians will be able to receive a gift of up to $10,000 without having to pay taxes on that money. Currently, any amount greater than $3,000 is taxable as income. Also, so long as the gift was not between spouses, a couple can share their personal gift tax exemptions with each other. Those two changes in state law will mean a $1 million loss in revenue to the state in fiscal 1984-85.

On the inheritance tax, the amount of property a surviving spouse can exempt from taxation beginning on Jan. 1 was raised to $130,000. As the survivor figures his or her taxes, that exemption is worth $4,650 in taxes which do not have to be paid. That cut will cost the treasury $4.1 million annually.

In families where the inherited property was held in joint tenancy, the surviving spouse can no longer be taxed on more than half of the property inherited so long as the survivor shows that he or she provided one-half or more of the estate.

A tax cut was provided for adult children who take care of elderly parents who are unable to take care of themselves. The adult children can take a $3,000 tax deduction on their parent if a number of conditions are met. The parent must be over 65, must have an income below $9,000 annually and not be in a public facility.

Parents raising a child suffering from cystic fibrosis will now be allowed to take an extra dependency exemption. Such a tax break already exists for families in which members suffer from other catastrophic diseases.

If a farmer allows his fields to be gleaned for crops that will be given to the poor, he can take a tax credit equal to 10 percent of the market value of the food.

The assembly decided to extend the state's six-cents a gallon refund on gasoline taxes until 1992 and, at that point, to raise the exemption to 8.5 cents. Also, garbage truck operators are now eligible for an eight-cents a gallon tax refund on any fuel used off the road. Duke Power will get to use a tax exemption on nuclear materials which it found in the statute books for one more year, then that loophole will be closed.

Solar tax credits were passed for both corporate and individual taxpayers who install solar equipment for the production of heat that will then be used either in manufacturing or service processes of a business.

Finally, any corporation or individual who purchases conservation tillage equipment will be eligible for a tax credit equal to 25 percent of the purchase price. There is a $2,500 cap on the tax credit, however.

Your view of the 1984 assembly may be colored by your qualification for any of these tax cuts.

Reader Wants To Honor Physician

To the editor:

I understand Greenville has a motto, "Greenville Has It all." Greenville has a medical school of high technology and it also has a wonderful children's doctor, Dr. Fred Haar. He was my doctor as a child and he used to come out to the house to see how the kids were coming along. Not many of the specialists of today would be that interested in a patient, I feel.

A few years ago my wife and I had a child named Brenda who had a birth defect. The specialists told us she'd live only three months. If it had not been for Dr. Haar and my wife, she wouldn't have. As it is she lived 7 years, 27 days.

Greenville should recognize Dr. Haar and name a part of the hospital after him. My wife and I would like to get up a petition to present to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board to name a wing of the hospital for Dr. Haar. Anyone who would like to join us is welcome.

tality it has provided in the person of Bonnie Ruth McCormick. I came here from Chicago to be with my father who recently died. I have been in and out of Pitt County Memorial Hospital over the past decade visiting my father and, through the years, Bonnie Ruth McCormick has given phenomenal energy, hospitality and networking, not only to my specific experiences, but to many others.

I thank Pitt County Memorial Hospital for gifting this community with the services, the charisma and commitment of this very unique human being. I am sure that PCMH will have a name for hospitality in the future because this individual has touched so many in her own way. Thank you for providing Bonnie Ruth and people like her on its staff. Her services lowered stress factors in our particular experiences. That is an incredible and essential ingredient in pastoral care and hospital healing, isn't it!

To the editor:

The Social Security program as presently structured is a blatantly illegal pyramid scheme. The first people in are all winners and the last people that participate will always lose whatever they put in.

This is happening in the Social Security program because unfunded obligations for an ever-increasing group of Social Security recipients are being financed by a non-enlarging group of workers. The result is that contributions made by both employers and employees are increasing at an exponential rate that cannot be sustained. This spells disaster for the program.

As an example, the projected yearly contribution into Social Security by a non-self-employed individual earning in excess of the taxable maximum will be $12,500 in the year 2000 and $36,000 in 2010. The projected individual contribution in 2030 will be a maximum of $290,000.

Because self-destruction of the existing Social Security program is assured, the program must be quickly transformed into a savings program similar to the Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

An individual must receive an income-tax credit equal to his or her Social Security contribution, provided that that amount is actually invested in an IRA. Likewise, the employer must also receive an income-tax credit if that amount is invested in a defined-contribution pension plan for the employee. This will alleviate the problems caused by the delay in vesting and lack of portability associated with defined-payment pension plans.

Present Social Security recipients should have their payments taxed as ordinary income. Relief to low-income retired people can be achieved by allowing an additional income-tax exemption at five-year age intervals. At the age of 70, three exemptions are allowed, four at 75, etc. Is this not having compassion for the retired people?

This letter does not address the dilemma of the explosion in health care costs or increasing longevity. Health care costs can be reduced through preventive medicine where we reduce the intake of toxins into our bodies. By enacting a "sin tax" on sodium in processed foods and on toxic chemicals which enter our ecosystem, their use can be contained. Within 500 years, man's lifespan will approach 200 years, so it will be foolish to fix the retirement age at 65.

Robert A. Dahlquist

To the editor:

There appears to be a major move in our country now to divide us as much as possible. In every factor from religion to government to race to business and even the family unit, the rifts of division are becoming greater. Special interest groups are using the election year to squeeze out for themselves all the special self-interest they can and it is usually without regard for what's best for all and what the consequences will be 10 years down the road. Special interests are often looking for the greatest amount of immediate self-profit even at the expense of others and the future.

We have so schooled ourselves to believe that there is no absolute truth or right that an atmosphere of "anything goes" now prevails. True unity will never take place until we come back to an accurate knowledge of the integrity of God's Word. Only when individuals set aside their previous teachings and conceptions and take an honest look at God's Word will they find the answers to life and the true principles of conduct that lead to prosperity and peace for all who will to believe. Man needs a reference of truth outside of himself upon which to stand and that reference is God's Word.

Strength For Today

The law against murder is based on the general principle that since a man cannot confer life, he has no right to take it away. Man is made in the image of God. The murder outrages that image when he commits his ruthless act. God is the Almighty Sovereign, and He alone may terminate life. He plans human life and terminates it in accordance with His divine ordering of all things. If man steps in and terminates life at some earlier time, he defies God and puts himself in open rebellion against Him.

Murder is the worst of all sins, and the state has always regarded it as such: Steal a man's possession's and you deprive him only of the things with which life is garnished. But when once a life is taken away, man's God-given opportunity is destroyed.

For these reasons, murder and suicide constitute the complete and utter flouting of God's will.

Ferrara Toast Of The Town

'Woman Is On The Ticket'

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Round little yellow and blue stickers are sprouting all over town, boasting, "A woman is on the ticket." As the Democratic National Convention unfolds, Geraldine Ferraro is outshining Walter F. Mondale.

Mondale, the apparent presidential nominee, and Ms. Ferraro, his handpicked choice as running mate, arrived here together, but the focus inside and outside the convention hall has been on her.

"When 200 years of bigotry ends, it makes a big bang," said Rep.

Barney Frank, D-Mass. Democrats hope the noise will last until November.

"What this ticket is all about is not what America can do for women but what women can do for America," Ms. Ferraro said Monday in a joint appearance with Mondale at a fund-raiser for female candidates at the San Francisco Opera House.

She used the opportunity to demonstrate the pizzazz that party leaders hope she will bring to the uphill campaign against President Reagan.

Looking at the women in the audience, many of whom were crying and cheering at the same time, Ms. Ferraro yelled, "Are you with us?"

The women shouted back, "Yes!" Ms. Ferraro exhorted, "Then let's go."

Charles T. Manatt, the party chairman, opened the convention Monday exclaiming, "Oh, how exciting it is to make history," an understatement reflecting how Mondale's landmark choice of Ms. Ferraro will be a centerpiece of the four-day convention.

"How proud Eleanor Roosevelt would be to be here with us tonight," he said. "On the 100th anniversary year of the birth of that most compassionate and committed woman, isn't it just what it should be to finally have a woman on the way to the vice president's office here in the United States?"

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo also touched on the theme in his keynote address to the convention.

"We will have America's first woman vice president. The child of immigrants, she will open with one magnificent stroke a whole new frontier for the United States," Cuomo told the cheering crowd.

Although some delegates were still smarting over Mondale's handling of the firing and rehiring of Manatt as party chief over the weekend, there has been virtually universal praise for the choice of Ms. Ferraro and satisfaction with the publicity accompanying it.

"The best way to use her is to send her out to as many media markets as possible. ... She will be an attraction," said Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa.

He added that the nomination of Ms. Ferraro might cut across party lines and attract women voters who also find themselves rising in their careers.

Meantime, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland is dismissing suggestions that millions of blue-collar unionists are male chauvinists and would vote against a male-female ticket.

"I know this movement," Kirkland said. "We are the agents of change and progress in this country."

The AFL-CIO president, appearing at a caucus of some 800 labor delegates and alternates to the convention, said Monday, "There are those who think that working people represent a problem accepting Ms. Ferraro's nomination."

"I take offense at that," he said.

"There are two kinds of people in the labor movement," he said. "Women, and people who like women."

Delegates and party strategists point to the match as one that helps both candidates, making Mondale less dull and Ms. Ferraro less brassy.

One House Democratic leadership aide, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said, "It's like when the movies teamed up Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. He gave her class and she gave him sex, and they both needed it."

Carter Has Bit Role

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When former President Carter arrived at his hotel to attend the Democratic National Convention, he was applauded by passers-by across the street.

When he arrived at the convention center to address the delegates, he received a nostalgic standing ovation. And when it was all over — a reception that failed to reflect any bitterness against the man who led the Democrats to defeat four years ago — some of Carter's former aides were suggesting he could play a serious role in the campaign of likely nominee Walter F. Mondale.

Carter, who imposed his will on the last two conventions, returned as a bit player for the 39th quadrennial convention.

Addressing the delegates and a national TV audience, Carter said Monday night the world must know that America champions peace and that the highest officials must get personally involved in working out differences without unnecessary resort to military force.

"Here I go again," he said, quoting a line made famous by President Reagan during their 1980 debate. "And I'm still talking about the same things ... about economic and military security; about peace backed by American defense forces but derived from diplomacy and statesmanship, about simple human justice and basic human rights."

home from Vietnam, 61 of them were from North Carolina, a congressional source said Monday. However, the state's MIA list stands at 39 because some relatives moved to other states, she said.

Hollings Angers Jackson's Group

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Remarks by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., that the Rev. Jesse Jackson's "rainbow coalition" employed misguided tactics and that blacks "have their place" in the state party organization have left some South Carolina Democrats angry and upset.

Hollings spoke Monday at a meeting of state delegates to the Democratic National Convention shortly after Jackson had told the gathering about wanting to return to his native South Carolina.

Jackson, who moved away after high school and now lives in Chicago, has hinted before that he might return to run for the U.S. Senate as an independent against Republican incumbent Strom Thurmond.

Hollings said he admired Jackson's dynamism, ability and intent. But he said he would like to advise Jackson on political strategy.

"I remember when Jesse came forward with 'I am somebody,'" Hollings said, referring to a standard Jackson exhortation. "Before he went to Cuba, before he went to Nicaragua, we talked together.

"I said, Jesse get on back to 'I am somebody,' not 'I am some race,'" Hollings said, explaining that a "rainbow coalition" of people voting on the basis of race or ethnic background could undermine the state Democratic Party.

"I never have believed too much in the so-called rainbow in the sense that you have to be some color, some race," he said.

Hollings urged the delegates to support candidates because "of the content of their character" rather than the color of their skin.

Jackson delegates, already angry at Hollings for comments several weeks ago about Jackson's political aims, protested the remarks. Several of them heatedly told Hollings he didn't understand the "rainbow coalition."

One delegate, Louis Fleming of Sumter, told Hollings the coalition was trying to send a message that "the Democratic Party has not always responded with fairness and full participation."

Jackson Leads Peace Protesters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 15,000 demonstrators joined the Rev. Jesse Jackson in chanting "give peace a chance" outside the Democratic National Convention, hours after police arrested 84 anti-nuclear protesters who were sprawled on a downtown street.

In a scene reminiscent of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination this year, Jackson led the crowd Monday night in shouts that echoed off the walls of Moscone Center, where New York Gov. Mario Cuomo was addressing convention delegates.

"We must declare the Western Hemisphere to be a war-free zone," Jackson told the youthful crowd.

"If we have the strength of our own convictions, we can stop killing abroad and start healing at home. I will not be silenced as long as there is injustice in this world," he said.

In his keynote speech, Cuomo also condemned the escalation of the nuclear arms race and "the largest defense budget in history."

Police earlier in the day arrested at least 84 people, including six juveniles, who lay on the pavement to block entrances to two buildings in San Francisco's financial district, a half-mile from the convention site.

They were booked for investigation of felony conspiracy to block traffic and were being held in lieu of $2,500 bail each, police said.

The demonstrators were members of the so-called "War Chest Tour," an arm of the anti-nuclear Livermore Action Group which regularly demonstrates at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, a government-financed lab southeast of San Francisco where nuclear weapons research is conducted.

Two demonstrators were treated at hospitals for cuts and scrapes, along with another protester who fainted in a police station.

In the Moscone Center demonstration, activist Daniel Ellsberg, who gained fame in the early 1970s when he leaked the State Department's "Pentagon Papers" to The New York Times, told the crowd before Jackson appeared that the coming election represents a chance to turn around the arms race.

"We have the choice this fall between a man who has promised to accelerate the nuclear arms race and a man who has promised to end it. If we give Reagan the power, he will make the arms race irreversible," he said.

Ellsberg told the group that this year's presidential campaign shows the effect of the anti-nuclear movement's rise because Democratic candidates have been eager to support a weapons freeze.

"There were no rallies like this in '80.... They've felt the heat of our bodies packed into squares all across America," he said.

MIA Families To Receive Medals

By The Associated Press
The families of 39 North Carolina soldiers listed as missing in action in Vietnam will receive bronze medals from the U.S. government during a ceremony Monday at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro.

The medals were authorized by Congress in September 1983 for MIA families across the nation in the wake of controversy over medals given to the U.S. hostages in Iran. They will be awarded at ceremonies in all 50 states during the summer.

Scrapped Nuclear Plants May Hike Bills

By The Associated Press
Consumers Power Co.'s decision to scrap a twin-reactor Michigan nuclear power plant and a Tennessee Valley Authority staff recommendation to abandon construction on four others could cost consumers billions of dollars in higher electric bills, officials say.

But Michigan's attorney general, Frank Kelley, will challenge the directors of the nation's 10th largest utility if they try to charge customers for too much of the $3.9 billion spent on the uncompleted Midland, Mich., project.

"They've gambled and they've lost, and we would certainly oppose any attempt to impose the cost on the customers," said Chief Assistant Attorney General Stanley Steinborn on Monday in Lansing, Mich. "That's not to say they would not be entitled to something. We don't want the company to go broke."

Meanwhile, the Tennessee Valley Authority board scheduled an Aug. 29 vote on a staff recommendation that four nuclear reactors under construction at two locations be scrapped because they would cost more than the price of the TVA's entire present power system.

The TVA will turn to the ratepayers to write off the estimated $4 billion price tag for the partly completed reactors, said Chairman Charles H. "Chili" Dean.

"There's nobody to pay for it but the ratepayers," Dean said. "Who else can pay for it?"

The TVA and Consumers are the latest casualties in an industry that two decades ago looked to nuclear power as the fuel of the future. But utilities overestimated the coming demand for electricity, underestimated the cost and speed of constructing nuclear plants and couldn't anticipate the backlash of protest over the safety of nuclear power following the 1979 accident at Three Mile Island.

Nationwide, 105 reactors have been canceled since 1972, according to the Atomic Industrial Association in Bethesda, Md. There are 79 operating reactors, three have been shut down and six are gearing up for full production.

The Michigan project was shut down in a conference conducted by telephone from the corporation's Jackson, Mich., headquarters, immediately after Consumers' largest industrial customers rejected proposed modifications to a plan to finish the 15 percent remaining on the plant.

Cancellation of the Midland plant lent new urgency to Consumers' efforts to find funds for its operations.

Chairman John Selby said that if the company cannot get a rate increase to persuade bankers to make short-term loans, it might seek protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Rate increases to reimburse Consumers for the $3.6 billion spent so far on the Midland project, as well as $300 million in nuclear fuel costs, must be approved by the Michigan Public Service Commission, which regulates utilities.

Selby said directors have not decided how much reimbursement they'll request from the commission.

When it was started in 1967, the Midland project was expected to take eight years and $350 million to complete. But in the 17 years since, the generators have put electricity onto the grid for only 10 minutes — during a non-nuclear test of the turbines last month.

Michigan Gov. James Blanchard urged talks on ways to return Consumers to prosperity.

"They're going to need a rate increase to survive financially," Blanchard said from the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco. "It just would have been twice as high with Midland."

"My concern now is that the parties return to the table quickly and negotiate a financial stability plan so that this company can continue to provide reliable energy to Michigan," Blanchard said.

Consumers provides electricity to nearly 1.4 million customers and gas to some 1.2 million in Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

In Tennessee, Hugh G. Parris, power manager of the TVA, told the utility's directors Monday that canceling rather than deferring work on reactors at Hartsville, Tenn., and the Yellow Creek plant near Corinth, Miss., would be the "lower cost alternative for our ratepayers."

The Yellow Creek plant, with an estimated cost of more than $10 billion, "alone would be more than what we spent to build the entire power system in operation today," Parris said.

Under a plan proposed by Parris, ratepayers would absorb $2.73 billion over 11 years.

Electricity rates during that period would rise 2 percent to 4 percent above any increases for other reasons, he said.

Reagan To Sign Drinking Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, a recent convert to linking federal highway aid to the drinking age, is signing legislation denying money to states which refuse to raise the age for consuming alcohol to 21.

The signing ceremony today was to be attended by representatives of several groups that helped lobby the bill through Congress, including Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Students Against Drunk Driving and Remove Intoxicated Drivers.

The legislation would give extra highway safety funds to states that enact automatic jail terms and license revocations for people convicted of drunk driving. It also includes extra highway safety money for states that establish a computerized traffic record-keeping system and that pass laws against those who drive while under the influence of drugs.

Marlin Fitzwater, deputy White House press secretary, said Monday that Reagan always favored raising the drinking age but originally opposed withholding highway money to force the issue.

"But the evidence of the successful drop in the death rate in those states that have it, plus the interstate nature of the problem, convinced him to support withholding of highway funds," Fitzwater said.

He said that almost 60 percent of fatally injured teen-age drivers were found to have been drinking. Fitzwater also said that fatal accidents at night involving 19- and 20-year-olds dropped 26 percent in New Jersey after that state raised its drinking age to 21.

Under the legislation, a state must enact a 21-year-old drinking age by Oct. 1, 1986, or lose 5 percent of its road construction allocation from that point until Sept. 30, 1987. From Oct. 1, 1987, through Sept. 30, 1988, the rate would jump to 10 percent.

States that raise the drinking age later would get back any money that had been withheld, according to Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., the chief sponsor of the measure. But states that did not raise the drinking age by the end of the penalty period would not get their money back.

At this point, 23 states already have a minimum drinking age of 21. Twenty-seven states allow those under 21 to buy at least some alcoholic beverages.

Under the new law, some states stand to lose more than $30 million unless they raise the drinking age.

Pakistanis Face Munitions Charge

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted three Pakistanis on charges they tried to ship high-speed switches used in nuclear weapon triggers to their country.

Nazir Ahmed Vaid, Salim Ahmed Mohamedy and Ilyas Ahmed Mohamedy were accused Monday of conspiracy, giving false statements to federal officials and violating U.S. munitions export laws.

Vaid, 33, was arrested in Houston on June 22 by Customs agents while allegedly trying to ship 50 switches to Pakistan. He is being held under $200,000 bond.

Arrest warrants have been issued for the other two men.

The high-speed switches were seized June 22 at Houston Intercontinental Airport, from where they allegedly were to be sent to Pakistan.

Vaid's arrest came after a five-month investigation that was part of a government operation designed to stop the export of strategic weapons from the United States, Customs officials said.

Federal and defense attorneys would not comment Monday because of a judge's gag order.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Sam Longoria said shortly after Vaid's arrest, "We strongly suspect Mr. Vaid is operating at the instructions of the Pakistani government and that the purchase of the krytrons (switches) was for Pakistani use in obtaining a nuclear bomb."

The Pakistani government has repeatedly denied reports it is trying to build atomic weapons. But President Zia ul-Haq has refused to open his country's nuclear facilities to inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The indictment alleges Vaid tried to purchase the switches from E.G. & G. Electro-Optic of Salem, Mass. — their sole U.S. manufacturer — in October, but the company refused the sale because Vaid lacked the required State Department certificate.

Airliner, Air Force Tanker Pass Within Quarter-Mile

By The Associated Press
An Eastern jet carrying 29 people passed within a quarter-mile of a military plane, apparently due to controllers' error, and a Northwest jet plunged suddenly in turbulent weather, causing passengers to burst into tears and injuring five of them, authorities said.

"I've been flying for 25 years, and I've never seen (a plane pass) that close," Capt. Ed Edelen, the pilot of Eastern Airlines Flight 92 from Miami to Chicago, said after Monday's incident.

The Air Force KC-135 was so close he could see into its cockpit, he said.

"It was over and we had hit the (KC-135's) jet wash before I could hit the controls," Edelen said.

The military plane and the Eastern Boeing 727 were flying at an altitude of 35,000 feet about 11 a.m. Monday when they passed within a quarter-mile of each other just north of Atlanta, said Jack Barker, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

"It appears there was an error committed in the air traffic control system, one or more errors," Barker said. "We don't like our aircraft to be less than five miles apart at the same altitude."

An investigation into the incident was under way, he said.

In the second incident Monday, five people were injured "and a lot of people cried" when a Northwest Airlines flight out of Winnipeg, Manitoba, ran into air turbulence and suddenly dropped altitude.

Flight 338, a Boeing 727 with 91 passengers, landed at the Grand Forks, N.D., airport about 3:20 p.m. Monday on its way to Minneapolis-St. Paul.

All five of the injured were treated at United Hospital and released and made the replacement flight to Minneapolis at 7:15 p.m.

Howard Peterson, airline station manager in Grand Forks, said the plane was climbing through a bank of light clouds when it was jolted. He said pilots were caught by surprise, as nothing on their radar screens had indicated turbulence.

Bomb Damages Armored Truck

CHESAPEAKE, W.Va. (AP) — Two men living in a tent with a cache of 75 pounds of dynamite were arrested after a bomb was set off "within a foot" of a cash-laden armored truck, misfiring and causing only minor damage, authorities said.

The bomb was detonated Monday afternoon by two men on a motorcycle wearing ski masks and camouflage clothing, police said. Three other bombs were found at the scene and disarmed later in the day.

Billy Gene Young, 29, and Lloyd G. Hiner, 40, who had been living in a tent in the woods near Winifrede, were arrested about a mile away, said agent John Spidell of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

"They were riding in the Chesapeake area on a motorcycle after the incident," Spidell said. "We spotted them and stopped them."

Charged with possession of an unregistered destructive device, the two men were held at the Kanawha County Jail pending a hearing today before a U.S. magistrate, Spidell said.

The truck was carrying a "very, very large sum of money," said Kanawha County Deputy John Johnson, who declined to disclose the amount.

Brothers Dig To West Germany

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Two East German brothers tunneled all night under a chain-link fence fortified with automatic shooting devices and escaped into West Germany this morning, Bavarian police said.

The brothers, ages 28 and 19, used a collapsible shovel to dig in a spot where the East German authorities had not yet buried blocks of cement to prevent tunneling, said police spokesman Heinz Snee.

The two dug the whole night through. Time was limited and they were under pressure because they had to consider being detected," Snee said.

The exact location of the escape was withheld for security reasons, he said.

The older brother is an electrician and his younger brother is a locksmith, police said. Snee said they told police they were dissatisfied with the lack of freedom in East Germany and asked for asylum.

It was the second tunnel escape into Bavaria from East Germany, Snee said. About two years ago an East German man used his bare hands to tunnel under the fence, he said.

After learning of the escape, Communist authorities started placing 19-inch thick cement blocks in the ground under the fence, which runs along Bavaria's 252-mile border with East Germany, Snee said.

Meanwhile, West Berlin police reported that two people were caught by Communist guards in East Berlin after apparently attempting to escape over the Berlin Wall early today.

Residents of West Berlin's Neukoelln section, located near the wall, called police early this morning to report hearing a gunshot, a police statement said.

Officers saw two people wearing civilian clothes being marched away with their hands over their heads by six armed East German guards, the statement said.

Police said distance and poor visibility made it impossible for them to determine whether the two were men or women or if either had been injured.

U.S., Australia Say Ports Needed

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The United States and Australia said today that U.S. military forces must continue to have full access to New Zealand's ports and airfields if their three-nation defense pact is to survive.

A communique issued after two days of talks among the alliance partners said, "access by allied aircraft and ships to the airfields and ports of the ANZUS members was reaffirmed as essential to the continuing effectiveness of the alliance."

ANZUS stands for Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz met privately later in the day with David Lange, who will become New Zealand's next prime minister following the victory of his Labor Party in Saturday's elections.

The party has pledged to ban visits by U.S. nuclear-powered warships and conventional warships carrying nuclear weapons, and Lange says all U.S. warships will be banned if the United States continues its policy of refusing to say which warships carry nuclear weapons.

Shultz said the talks were "cordial and worthwhile" but declined to give any details. "I think the net of it is that we'll work together cooperatively, across the board..." he told reporters before starting his return trip to the United States.

Lange said there would be a continuing "association and dialogue" between the two nations. However, Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden, who met with Lange just before Shultz did, said the New Zealand leader made it clear he would stick to the nuclear ban.

The defeated New Zealand National Party took part in the ANZUS talks with U.S. and Australian officials because the Labor Party has not had time yet to take power. The talks were scheduled long before a date was picked for New Zealand's elections.

Lange contends that visits by U.S. nuclear forces make New Zealand a possible target for a Soviet nuclear attack. He says the Labor government wants to stay in the alliance but without any nuclear involvement.

U.S. officials are concerned about losing access to New Zealand's ports, and warn that Labor's policies could mean the end to defense ties between the two countries, said a well-placed source at the talks who declined to be identified.

Restrictions by New Zealand could encourage other U.S. allies to follow suit, conference officials have said.

"It is obviously essential to any alliance that the military forces of the countries involved be able to have contact with each other," Shultz told reporters.

Shultz declined to say what action the Reagan administration would take if New Zealand does limit or ban U.S. warships. However, he did say the administration does not plan any retaliatory trade restrictions.

Shultz said he thought a careful review of the benefits of the alliance would convince Lange of its value.

Nuclear weapons play a vital role in ANZUS and Western defense, he said.

Hanoi Returns GIs' Remains

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam today turned over grayed bones believed to be those of eight U.S. servicemen, and U.S. officials put them on a cargo plane headed for a military identification center in Hawaii.

The bones, packed in separate wooden crates, were checked briefly at Hanoi's Noi Bai Airport by U.S. specialists and loaded onto an Air Force C-130 transport plane.

A dozen foreign journalists were invited to witness the simple ceremony at the Hanoi airport.

Officials from both countries said they soon will resume quarterly technical meetings to discuss Americans listed as missing in action in the Vietnam War.

Richard Stevenson, a public affairs officer with the U.S. Pacific Command, said the talks most likely would resume by the end of August. They were interrupted last year by Vietnam, which was angry over U.S. criticism that Hanoi was dragging its feet on the issue.

Vietnam also had postponed the return of the bones, which originally was scheduled for April.

Cu Binh Ba, head of North American affairs in the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry, told the U.S. delegation today that Hanoi delayed returning the bones because China attacked the Vietnamese border during President Reagan's visit to China earlier this year.

Ba said the people of Vietnam would not cooperate with the search for remains of American servicemen if they suspected anti-Vietnam collusion between the United States and China.

The remains will be examined at the headquarters of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hawaii. The U.S. delegation was led by Col. Joe Harvey, head of the center.

Hanoi previously has returned the remains of 88 Americans. It returned nine sets of bones last June, and eight of them were later identified as those of Americans listed as missing in Vietnam.

U.S. officials say there are 2,440 names on the official missing in action list. About 560 were reported missing in Laos, 83 in Cambodia and the rest in Vietnam. Ba said five of the sets of remains handed over today were found early this year in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas. He said the remains initially were identified by Vietnamese officials using documents provided by the United States.

The other three sets of remains were recovered late last year, Ba said. Two were found along with servicemen's identification cards in the Giallatoatun Plateau of central Vietnam, and the other was found by chance in a cemetery in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, he said.

Officials said those bones, found along with some personal belongings, were those of an Army sergeant killed in Da Nang on Dec. 10, 1964.

Iraq Claims Jet Downed On Border

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi air defense units today shot down an Iranian jetfighter in the southern sector of the border area, an Iraqi military spokesman said.

The spokesman, reading a communique over the state radio, said the Iranian warplane "tried to violate Iraqi air space in the southern sector" of the 730-mile border separating the two countries, which have been at war since September 1980.

"Iraqi air defenses confronted the enemy jetfighter and downed it. The plane crashed into Iranian territory opposite to the forwardmost Iraqi positions," the spokesman added without further elaboration.

There was no independent confirmation of the claim.

In another development, Arab officials and diplomatic sources said Monday that Iran has proposed a regional conference to keep the Iran-Iraq war in check. They said Saudi Arabia and its five allies in the Gulf Cooperation Council were considering the Iranian suggestion.

If the council approves, the conference would be held without Iraq in either Damascus, the capital of Syria, or Algiers.

The Saudi deputy foreign minister, Abdel-Aziz al-Thunayyan, flew to Kuwait on Saturday and broached the idea of a conference with Iran for peace in southern and western Persian Gulf regions, where shipping has been attacked by Iranian and Iraqi warplanes.

The Kuwaiti leadership responded favorably, according to the sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The sources said Iran's undersecretary for foreign affairs, Mohamed Hussein Lavassani, advanced the proposal when he secretly visited Saudi Arabia and Qatar last week.

The Gulf Cooperation Council of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman is a regional alliance designed to foster economic integration and collective defense.

In Baghdad, President Saddam Hussein said Monday that Iraq is "seriously considering a new plan to extend a new pipeline across Turkey to export oil...in addition to another pipeline for gas exports."

He said in an address to the nation marking national day on Tuesday that oil exports through the present trans-Turkey Iraqi pipeline "have been increased since July 1983." He did not disclose figures, but according to a reliable source, who spoke on the condition he not be identified, Iraq now ships about 900,000 barrels of oil a day across this pipeline.

Iraq's oil terminals in the gulf have been out of action since Iran and Iraq went to war in September 1980.

Foreign reporters in Baghdad said that Iranian prisoners of war flung shoes and chanted for 10 minutes Monday to protest repeated visits by journalists to their camp of detention, 66 miles east of Baghdad. The Iraqi Information Ministry organized visits over the previous four days for correspondents in Iraq to cover national day celebrations.

Soviets Execute Store's Manager

MOSCOW (AP) — The former manager of Gastronom No. 1, an ornate pre-revolutionary food store that is considered one of Moscow's best, has been executed for corruption, a Soviet newspaper reports.

Yuri K. Sokolov was put to death after the Supreme Soviet rejected his appeal for clemency, the newspaper Vechernyaya Moskva reported. It did not say when or how he was executed, but the Soviet Union generally uses a firing squad for death sentences.

In a recent edition, the newspaper said Sokolov was executed for "systematically receiving and giving bribes of especially large sizes."

The store managed by Sokolov is located on Gorky Street and is also known to Muscovites as the Yeliseyevsky. After the man who owned it before the 1917 revolution. Its large selection of foodstuffs and drinks makes it popular among Muscovites, while its vaulted, gilded interior makes it a tourist attraction.

The case, first reported in the official press in April 1983, was considered a major achievement of the anti-corruption drive launched under the late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov.

Sokolov was arrested in November 1983 and found guilty of taking bribes "over a long period of time," according to a Tass news agency dispatch at the time.

Four other men received unspecified prison terms after being convicted along with Sokolov of "abusing the duties of their positions and committing different illegal machinations with the foodstuffs."

Nicaraguan Party Names Candidates

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An opposition party named its presidential and vice presidential candidates for the Nov. 4 election but said they would not run unless the leftist Sandinista government promises the balloting will be honest.

The Sandinistas said Monday night that they would announce their candidates today. Sources within the Sandinista National Liberation Front said the presidential candidate was expected to be Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the junta.

The opposition Social Christian Party nominated Adan Fletes, 39, for president and Magdalena de Rodriguez, 50, for vice president, party secretary Luis Vega Miranda said Monday.

Fletes, a University of Nicaragua graduate, was a student political leader. Mrs. de Rodriguez teaches in Esteli province, north of the capital. Both actively opposed pro-American strongman Anastasio Somoza, who was overthrown by the Sandinistas five years ago this week.

Nicaraguans also will vote in November for a 90-member National Assembly to write a new constitution.

Vega Miranda said the selections were made Sunday by party's ruling committee.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today after a late rally in blue-chip prices in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which has risen nearly 12 1/2 points in the past two sessions, was down 1.44 at 1,115.39 after the first half-hour of trading.

But advancing issues took a slim lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.96 to 1,116.83.

Declines slightly out-numbered advances in the overall tally on the NYSE.

Big Board volume was totaled 73.42 million shares, against 75.48 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 26 to 87.34. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .46 at 193.06.

publican campaign to withstand the Reagan tide and win the election. He called the shots in Mondale's crucial New York presidential primary victory this year.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado surely would seek in 1988 the nomination he could not wrest from Mondale. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts forewore candidacy in 1984, but said he wants to be president. Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey has said he won't leave the Senate to run for president, but politicians have changed their minds before. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, Mondale's chosen vice presidential nominee, could be a candidate, depending on her performance in the campaign ahead. And there would be others, out of the Senate and out of the state houses.

All of that is a long way off; Cuomo's speech was to rally the party for Mondale, who hasn't even been nominated yet. Besides, past keynote speakers, even the best, have wound up as footnotes in party history. The records go back to 1832; not one has been elected president. Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky did get as far as the vice presidency, after keynoting conventions three times.

Gov. Frank C. Clement of Tennessee stirred the 1956 convention, asking how long America would tolerate President Dwight D. Eisenhower's leadership along "the green fairways of indifference." His political star vanished as quickly as it rose.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, an early loser in the 1984 Democratic campaign, shared the keynote platform in 1976, when both he and Mondale were on Jimmy Carter's list of vice presidential prospects. Glenn flopped. Mondale became vice president.

Now Cuomo has had his night, hailing past triumphs, urging a Democratic future. "Democrats did it," he said, "and Democrats can do it again." Applauded over and over again, he was summoned back twice to acknowledge the cheers that sounded when he was done.

"These people just have a weakness for Italians from Queens," he said.

Mondale ...

reached on his plank — seeking to pledge a future Democratic president to commit no U.S. forces in Central America and the Mideast unless U.S. interests are jeopardized.

Jackson was ambiguous. "We reserve the right to be competitive to the very end," he said. But he also said: "There is now a need more and more to cooperate."

His planks cover jobs, justice and peace. He seeks an absolute cut in defense spending, not merely the slow growth that Mondale advocates.

Jackson, who won 18 percent of the primaries' votes, addresses the delegates tonight, something candidates for the nomination used not to do.

His speech could answer the question of his role in November. Party professionals think Jackson is capable of delivering millions of votes from newly registered blacks.

Meantime, supporters of George McGovern, the anti-war nominee buried by Richard Nixon in 1972, said they are trying to gather enough signatures to put him in nomination — giving him a chance to lay out his views.

Hart, still gamely in the race, borrowed an old idea from Mondale — Geraldine Ferraro.

The Colorado senator said that if he were nominated, his running mate would be Ms. Ferraro, Mondale's campaign partner.

"An extraordinary thing has happened in the party and in the nation," Hart told delegates from California, a state he carried big.

"And that is a consensus has formed not only for a woman on the ticket, but a specific woman on the ticket."

Earlier in the day, Ms. Ferraro brought tears to the eyes of overjoyed delegates at a $150-a-ticket fundraiser for women political candidates.

"Are you with us?" she asked. "Yes," they shouted. "Then let's go!"

Ms. Ferraro sent her husband, real estate developer John Zaccaro, and Mondale sent his wife, Joan, as their representatives to the convention.

The delegates found room in their hearts to forgive Jimmy Carter for his 44-state defeat in 1980 — and found themselves shouting for Cuomo, whose keynote address compelled them to take their seats and listen.

Wife Rosalynn at his side. Carter — the trademark toothy grin as broad as ever — got a nostalgic two-minute ovation.

He opened with a line that Reagan had used against him in their October 1980 debate. "Here I go again," he grinned. And he accused Reagan of trampling on human rights.

Cuomo moved them even more.

"It is time to lock arms and move into this campaign together," the New Yorker told his party. He accused Reagan of favoring the rich, overlooking the poor, mortgaging the future and engaging in "macho intransigence."

He recited achievements of Democratic presidents from Roosevelt to Carter, and said, "Democrats did it, and Democrats can do it again."

The Democrats loved it. They called him back for two curtain calls.

Storms ...

other utility companies across the state have experienced system damage from recent severe electrical storms.

One of GUC's biggest problems from the storms is the loss of the computer that monitors the system's substations. Green said. The computer locates trouble spots for GUC personnel and identifies potential problems. "We had a direct lightning strike on the computer, which took it down," he said. "Now we can't monitor these occurrences that happen in the substations. We are having to check out problems manually and that is a lot more time consuming. It removes a great deal of our flexibility." Green said he hoped the computer would be repaired and operating today.

Local agricultural officials say they don't think the heavy rainfall will adversely affect area crops. "It's ideal in terms of soybeans and late-planted corn," Mitch Smith, Pitt extension agent, said. "Tobacco farmers who have't made allowances for this much rain might have some problems and the water may delay some harvesting a few days since machinery tends to mire up when it rains this wet.

"I don't think there'll be anybody harvesting out there today," he said.

According to the National Weather Service, scattered thunderstorms will once again dominate the weather picture across the state through Wednesday. The chance of rain tonight and Wednesday remains at 60 percent.

Abbott Returns With Five-Hitter

By The Associated Press
When a 10-year major league veteran gets sent down to the minors, it could mean the end of the line. Glenn Abbott didn't let that happen to him, however. Optioned to Evansville on June 15 after several ineffective performances, Abbott made his first start since his July 15 recall Monday night and pitched a five-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 7-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"The last two times I pitched down there I felt I was getting to about where I wanted to be," said Abbott of his month-long demotion to the minors. "I really felt I had my stuff together."

He certainly did Monday night, retiring the first 13 batters en route to the Tigers' fourth straight victory.

Detroit improved its lead in the AL East to eight games over Toronto, a 3-0 loser to California.

Angels 3, Blue Jays 0
Jim Slaton pitched a seven-hitter for his first shutout since 1979 to lead California over Toronto.

Slaton, 3-3, surrendered two singles in each of the first two innings, then retired 16 of the next 17 men on his way to his first complete game since Sept. 16, 1979, when he had three shutouts as a Milwaukee pitcher. Slaton didn't walk a batter and struck out three.

Orioles 3, Twins 1
John Shelby and John Lowenstein broke out of long slumps with solo homers and Eddie Murray also belted a homer in support of Storm Davis' five-hitter as Baltimore beat Minnesota.

The Orioles have hit 14 homers while winning five of their last six games, and 20 of their 24 runs in the last seven contests have scored on roundtrippers.

Shelby was 5-for-58 when he connected for his fourth homer in the third off Mike Smithson, 9-8, to forge a 1-1 tie. Lowenstein, 6-for-44 after his first two trips, rapped his seventh homer in the sixth. And Murray gave the Orioles an insurance run by banging his 20th home run of the season leading off the eighth.

Royals 3, Indians 1
Mike Jones pitched eight innings of one-hit ball and George Brett and Hal McRae stroked RBI singles in the eighth as Kansas City snapped a five-game losing streak with a 3-1 victory over Cleveland.

Jones, whose career was almost ended by a 1981 auto accident, struck out three and walked two in notching his first major league victory in almost three years. Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth for his 24th save, giving up the Indians' second hit.

After a series of errors let Cleveland score a run in the fourth, the Royals came back to tie the game in the bottom of the inning on Steve Balboni's 16th home run, off Don Schulze, 1-3.

"I just went out there and everything came together," said Jones. "Tonight was a great confidence-builder for me because I hadn't done well the two starts before. The thing was, I made key pitches when I needed to and I didn't walk a lot of guys."

Yankees 9, Rangers 8
Roy Smalley's one-out, run-scoring single capped a four-run ninth inning to give New York a wild victory over Texas. After Texas fought back with four runs in the top of the ninth on two-run doubles by Bill Stein and Pete O'Brien to take an 8-5 lead, New York responded in the bottom of the inning against reliever Dave Schmidt, 3-4.

Omar Moreno opened with a triple and scored on a wild pitch by Schmidt. Willie Randolph then reached first on the first of second baseman Wayne Tolleson's two errors in the inning and took second on a passed ball.

One out later, Don Mattingly collected his fourth hit and second RBI with a single. Dave Winfield, who had hit a grand slam homer in the first to help the Yankees build a 5-4 lead, reached base when Tolleson booted his routine grounder and Ken Griffey singled to score Mattingly.

Mariners 11, Brewers 2
Ken Phelps and Dave Henderson each drove in five runs, powering Seattle past Milwaukee.

Phelps belted a three-run homer in the first inning and a two-run shot in the fifth to give him 14 this season.

Henderson drilled a two-run single in the third and a three-run homer in the seventh, his ninth.

Salome Barojas, making his first major league start after 13 relief appearances, allowed both Milwaukee runs in the first, but only three hits over the next six innings in the longest outing of his major league career. He walked one and struck out none.

Red Sox 4, A's 1
Bruce Hurst continued his mastery over the Oakland, beating the A's with Bob Stanley's ninth-inning relief help.

Hurst, 9-5, checked Oakland on six hits, struck out a career-tying eight batters and walked five before needing help in the final inning from Stanley, who recorded his 15th save. Hurst has a 6-0 lifetime record over the A's, including three victories this season.

Boston had eight hits off A's starter Lary Sorensen, 3-10, but three of them were in the second when the Red Sox took a 2-0 lead on a sacrifice fly by Rich Gedman and RBI single by Marty Barrett.

The Red Sox also got a homer in the ninth from Tony Armas, his 24th.

Manwaring Chosen Lady Pirate Coach

Emily Manwaring, head basketball coach at San Francisco State University the past six years, has been named to fill the vacancy at East Carolina University, Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr announced Tuesday.

Manwaring, 35, succeeds Cathy Andruzzi, who resigned as the Lady Pirates' coach after six years to enter private business.

"I'm really looking forward to coaching the elite athletes that East Carolina attracts," Manwaring said. "I'm sure my coaching philosophy will differ somewhat from my predecessor's, but this is an established program and I think it's at a good stage right now."

Manwaring led Division II San Francisco State to a 19-12 record and the Northern California Athletic Conference Championship during the 1983-84 season. The championship granted her squad a berth in the NCAA West Region Playoffs.

A native of Tecumseh, Mich., Manwaring received her bachelor's and master's in sports administration from Michigan State University where she was also a graduate assistant coach.

Manwaring coached three All-Americans at San Francisco State and compiled an impressive 97-56 record. During her six years, Manwaring's teams never suffered a losing season.

"We are very happy with the situation and feel Emily will do an outstanding job," Karr said. "I have confidence she will continue the fine tradition that East Carolina has built over the years."

Manwaring becomes only the third coach of the Lady Pirates since the program's inception in 1969. Joining Manwaring as assistant coach is Jo Anne Bly, who served in the same capacity under Manwaring at San Francisco State the past three years.

Norman Gives Warning After Kemper Open Win

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Greg Norman gave fair warning of what was to come.

"Look out," was all he said.

Norman made that statement at the Congressional Country Club in suburban Washington, D.C. a couple of months ago. He had just scored his first American triumph, a front-running, never-headed, five-shot victory in the Kemper Open.

"This has been a barrier for me, winning the first one in the States. Now I've crossed that barrier. I've proved I could beat these guys. I've proved it to myself."

"Now that I have, look out."

"I'm going to be hard to handle."

And the brash Australian, with his harshly hooked nose, sun-bleached white hair and awesome length off the tee, promptly proceeded to fulfill that prediction, embarking on a rampage of such magnitude that Tom Watson was prompted to announce:

"Right now, Norman is playing the best golf in the world. He's riding the crest of a wave. He has to be considered among the favorites, probably the favorite, for the British Open."

And Norman, the man called the "Great White Shark," will not deny that label going into the 113th British Open Championship Thursday on the ancient links of the Old Course at St. Andrews.

"I'm looking forward to it," said the 29-year-old who has abandoned his role as a dedicated globe-trotter and established a permanent home in the United States.

"I'm a confidence player," Norman said.

"Right now I have the confidence I can do what I want with the ball. I know I'll play well. It's a matter of getting the right breaks at the right time, the right bounces at the right time."

"I like St. Andrews. I've played it maybe 30 times. I know its humps and hollows. All the trouble is on the right. They say it's not a fader's course. But that's not true. You just start it to the left and bring it back."

"I'm playing well and I want to play. It's a great feeling to wake up in the morning and want to get to the golf course, just can't wait to get out there and play golf."

He's rested and refreshed after a one-week break from competition, in which time he's shaken the last traces of the flu which hampered him during the last round of the Western Open, when he lost a playoff to Watson's putting magic.

That tournament ended a five-week stretch in which Norman dominated North American golf in the same spectacular fashion he had won around the world in earlier years.

A former Australian Open champion and two-time winner of the World Match Play title, he led the European tour in money-winnings in 1982 and won seven titles around the world in 1983.

This year, he started off with two Australian titles, then scored his American breakthrough in the Kemper.

From there, he took Fuzzy Zoeller to a playoff before losing in the U.S. Open, recorded a 10th-place finish in Atlanta, turned back Jack Nicklaus in a head-to-head confrontation for the Canadian Open title, then, the following week, went one-on-one with Watson.

Norman's official earnings for that five-week period, in which he had the hottest hand in the game, were $244,200.

Test Gear Subject Of NASCAR Controversy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A special rear end gear confiscated last weekend by NASCAR officials has been the subject of considerable controversy for the past year.

The gear, which has been available only to Bobby Allison and a few other NASCAR drivers this season, provides a sharp boost in power for cars coming off tight turns, especially on short tracks such as Darlington and Rockingham.

The gear is still experimental and drivers say no one has been able to go more than 250 miles without it breaking. Based on a Ford Motor Co. design which is widely used — at very low rpm and not the 7,500 rpm race cars normally turn — the gear is found in government four-wheel drive vehicles, including the tractors that pull large airplanes.

NASCAR confiscated the part Friday night, but NASCAR Competition Director Bill Gazaway refused to comment when asked who was caught and if there would be any penalty levied in the incident.

Bud Moore said on Saturday morning perplexed NASCAR officials inspected all of his gears to see if he had any of the trick parts.

"I've heard all the rumors about me using them, but we haven't," said Moore, who also denied that Ricky Rudd won at Richmond with the gear or that Rudd's Ford broke at Darlington because of failure of the gear.

However, Allison's crew chief Gary Nelson admitted he had used the gear.

"But it broke on us at Bristol (after Allison had lapped the field) and then again at North Wilkesboro, so we gave up on it."

Gazaway, asked about an illegally oversized 24-gallon gas tank reportedly found by NASCAR officials during a routine pre-race inspection, declined comment on who had been caught and what penalty might be assessed.

DiMaggio Credits Owners For Baseball Salaries

DADEVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Former New York Yankee great Joe DiMaggio blames big salaries for the turmoil in major league baseball and he holds Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner accountable.

But DiMaggio said he could still play for Steinbrenner "if he paid me enough money."

DiMaggio, who had a 56-game hitting streak in 1941, said team owners were much tighter with money in his heyday.

"When I played I had a helluva a hard time getting $5 from those guys," DiMaggio said. "It was just not coming. So today, when I see players getting all this money, it's the other way around. The owners are paying the players too much. I wish I'd have had that chance."

DiMaggio made the remarks during an invitational golf weekend at Still Waters resort hosted by Auburn football coach Pat Dye.

The 69-year-old slugger said salaries paid by owners such as the Yankees' Steinbrenner, Atlanta's Ted Turner and Gene Autry of the California Angels have created much of the turmoil in baseball today.

"The money is behind all the turmoil," DiMaggio said of Steinbrenner and the Yankees. "It's not just him. It's these fellas that have all that money who create the turmoil — Turner, Autry. Strangely enough, though, those teams paying all that money aren't 10 to 15 games ahead in the standings."

DiMaggio said he could play for Steinbrenner "if he paid me enough money." He defended the Yankee owner's method of dealing with his employees.

"Everybody goes to him because he's the highest bidder," DiMaggio said. "Then, after they sign and get all that money, they say they're dissatisfied. Craig Nettles was the last one."

DiMaggio said he is opposed to any further expansion of major league baseball.

"Play is at a level where it should be now and that would be a terrible mistake, in my opinion, if they expand," he said.

He called former Detroit Tigers second baseman Charlie Gehringer "the best baseball player I ever saw" and said former Boston slugger Ted Williams was the best hitter he ever watched even though the two had different philosophies.

"Ted said he believed the best way to hit the ball was to undercut it," said DiMaggio, whose famous hitting streak occurred during the same year Williams hit .406. "I never wanted to disagree with him, because like I said, he was the greatest hitter I ever saw. But I always swung down on the ball."

Walk Hurls Pirates Past Dodgers, 4-1

By The Associated Press
The up-and-down career of Bob "Whirlybird" Walk is back up again. Walk won his first major league game in two seasons Monday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates halted the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 for their seventh straight victory. The game also wrote a new chapter in Walk's odyssey.

In 1980, as a rookie with a spinning windup for the Philadelphia Phillies, Walk racked up an 11-7 record and went on to win the first game of the World Series for the eventual world champions.

In 1981, he was traded to the Atlanta Braves and pitched sparingly in the majors and minors because of a rib injury. In 1982, he was one of the Braves' main starters and went 11-9.

Then, prior to the 1983 season, he was sent to the minors and, admittedly in a poor mental state, lost his first six games as his earned run average ballooned to over 10.00. The right-hander finished the season 11-12 at Triple-A Richmond and made one start for Atlanta.

Prior to this season, he was released by the Braves.

"I don't know why Atlanta let me go," he said. "It's hard for me to look back and figure it out."

Walk called nearly every team in the majors and found that the Pittsburgh Pirates were the only ones interested. The Pirates signed him and sent him to Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League, where he went 9-5.

Last week, the Pirates recalled him and on Monday, he was activated when Amos Otis was put on the disabled list.

He came through in his first start by allowing just five hits before straining his right elbow with one out in the ninth inning, which forced him from the game.

"Why did Atlanta let him go?" quizzed Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. "I don't know. Baseball is an opinion."

"He was very nervous early in the game," Tanner said. "Probably more nervous than he was pitching in the World Series. But he threw the ball great. The reports we got on him in Hawaii were that he should be pitching in the majors."

The Dodgers seemed to agree.

"He threw hard and he threw strikes," said Mike Marshall, whose home run accounted for the lone Los Angeles run.

Added Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda: "Maybe he found something he didn't have before."

Jim Morrison and Dale Berra cracked solo home runs for the Pirates to pin the loss on Rick Honeycutt, 7-4.

Mets 13, Astros 3
George Foster banged out four hits, including a double, and drove in three runs. Mike Fitzgerald knocked in three runs with a double and two singles. Darryl Strawberry singled, doubled and tripled and Wally Backman contributed three hits.

It all added up to 22 hits for New York — the NL's high this season and one short of the team record set in 1964.

The barrage at the Astrodome featured triples by Strawberry, Mookie Wilson and Danny Heep, plus five doubles.

Rookie pitcher Sid Fernandez was the beneficiary of the Mets' offensive outburst. He went seven innings to earn his first major-league victory. Fernandez, 1-0, allowed eight hits, struck out six and did not walk a batter.

Mike Scott, 4-7, took the loss. Mark Bailey homered for the Astros.

Giants 7, Cardinals 6
Jeff Leonard and Dusty Baker had two singles and a double apiece as San Francisco raced to a 6-1 lead in St. Louis.

The Cardinals went into the eighth trailing 7-4, but scored twice on an error by first baseman Scot Thompson and an RBI single by Tom Herr. St. Louis had the bases loaded with two out, but reliever Greg Minton came into the game and got pinch hitter Art Howe to line out to third, ending the threat.

Minton pitched the ninth in getting his eighth save.

Bill Laskey, 5-9, got the victory and Rick Ownbey, 0-2, took the loss.

Padres 4, Cubs 0
Mark Thurmond allowed four hits in eight-plus innings before Rich Gossage took over and finished up without giving up a hit as San Diego won at Wrigley Field.

Bobby Brown's two-run homer in the second inning got the Padres rolling against Dick Ruthven, 2-6, who was making his first start since May 17 after undergoing arm surgery.

Phillies 7, Reds 2
Mike Schmidt and Garry Maddox each singled, doubled and belted a two-run homer to carry visiting Philadelphia.

In all, the Phillies finished with 13 hits off Tom Hume, 3-9, and two relievers.

Kevin Gross, 5-4, allowed seven Cincinnati hits in pitching his first complete game of the season. The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the first on an RBI single by Dave Concepcion, who had three hits, before the Phillie took control.

Schmidt's homer in the seventh was his 18th of the season. Darriessen homered for the Reds.

Expos 3, Braves 1
Dan Schatzeder, normally a middle reliever, continued his success as a starter while Atlanta's Dale Murphy continued having his problems.

Schatzeder, 4-2, has started three games this season and won all of them. He gave up three hits through eight innings and left when Claudell Washington led off the ninth with a double.

Bob James got the final three outs for his fifth save. Rick Camp, 4-2, took the loss.

13-Year Old Babe Ruth

Pitt County.....4
New Bern.....3

HAVELOCK — James Woodard walked and scored on a wild pitch in the bottom of the sixth to break a tie and lift Pitt County to a 4-3 victory over New Bern Monday in the Eastern North Carolina 13-year old Babe Ruth League Championship Tournament.

Bronswell Patrick went the distance on the mound for Pitt County, struck out seven, walked three and scattered eight hits to record the victory.

Anthony Harrison paced Pitt County with two hits, while Monty Brown three hits for New Bern.

The score was knotted 3-3 after three innings, and Pitt County waited till the sixth to put runners in scoring position. Woodard opened with a base on balls and moved to second on a fielder's choice by John Tyndall. David Lyons singled putting runners on first and third. After Lyons stole second, a wild pitch with Ty Little at bat scored Woodard.

Patrick struck out two in top of the seventh as Pitt County advanced to meet the winner of the Raleigh-New Hanover game tonight at 8 p.m.

Blue Jays Suffer Through Second Place Frustration

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Remember a racehorse named Sham? Or one called Alydar? Do they sound familiar? Bobby Cox, the manager of the Toronto Blue Jays, remembers them. He can empathize with those creatures as his club chases the Detroit Tigers in the American League's East Division.

How about a colt named Secretariat? Or one named Affirmed?

Now the light upstairs might be getting brighter.

When Secretariat won thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown in 1973, Sham became known only as the horse that finished second. Alydar was accorded the same recognition as Affirmed won the Triple Crown in 1978.

In this year's charge to the winner's circle in the AL East, the Toronto Blue Jays are getting a taste of the same mud that Sham and Alydar tasted.

"Yes, there's a little bit of that," Cox admits.

The Blue Jays have been second to the Detroit Tigers in the division since April 28, and they haven't made up any ground despite playing better than .600 ball.

"The way Detroit has been playing, we just feel fortunate right now — happy that we're not any farther back," Cox says. "We could have been buried."

"We still feel if we play great baseball, there's time enough. Other than that, we can't do a darn thing about it. My hat's off to the Tigers."

On May 24, the Tigers set a major league record for a 40-game start, winning for the 35th time. Four days later, Toronto moved within five games of the Tigers after winning 31 of its first 45 games.

Despite being shutout 3-0 in Monday night's game at California, the Blue Jays were 17 games over .500. They entered the game as winners of three straight and seven of 10. Since their 40th game, the Tigers have played at a pace only three better than .500, yet the Blue Jays have fallen to eight games back.

Prior to play Monday, the Tigers playing .500 the rest of the way, would win 97 games. The Blue Jays would have to play at a .594 clip to win that many.

"Coming out of spring training, our goal was to win six or seven more than the year before, and we won 89," Cox said. "I felt maybe 96 would do it. I didn't think anybody would have a shot at winning 100 because our division was so well balanced, but Detroit is having an incredible year."

Cox said he and his players have tried to keep the word "frustration" from creeping into their vocabularies.

"When the scores are flashed on the scoreboard, we take a peek, and anytime Detroit's behind, it's inspiring to the ballplayers to keep going," Cox said. "But we've got a real good makeup on this ballclub. Our own team philosophy of play is to be consistent, win a series or split, don't lose a series or ever get swept. That's our philosophy. We don't get too high, and we don't get down."

Since the Tigers' incredible start, the Blue Jays have virtually matched win-for-win and loss-for-loss with Detroit. Of the seven games between the two clubs this year, the Blue Jays have won four. They do not meet again, however, until Sept. 7, the start of a three-game series in Toronto.

"It's entirely up to the clubs behind Detroit now," Cox said. "It's a big lead, but things can happen."

Cox pointed to 1978 when the Yankees were 14 games behind Boston in August before staging a wild comeback that included a one-game playoff victory over the Red Sox to win the division. The Yanks went on to beat Los Angeles in six games in that year's World Series.

"All it takes is four or five hot days by your club and four or five cold ones by the other one, and things can get close," Cox said. "That's what we're hoping for. It doesn't mean it will happen, but it can."

Hull Returns To L.A.

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The last time they staged the Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Col. Don Hull was a frustrated young boxer who had failed to make the U.S. team. So he hitchhiked his way across the country and watched the competition from the stands, wishing he could have been in the ring instead.

This time, Hull will have a better seat and a less strenuous trip to the Games. That's only appropriate since he is, after all, president of the International Amateur Boxing Association, the only American to head an Olympic sports federation.

Hull has managed to keep a delicate balance between the political interests of the 142 countries who make up his federation. Diplomacy is the main prerequisite for his job and he has a generous supply of that important commodity.

Despite the Soviet-led boycott, his ability to deal with sports officials of other nations helped Hull nearly convince Cuba to send heavyweight Teofilo Stevenson as a one-man team to try for a record fourth gold medal, breaking the mark he shares with Lazlo Papp of Hungary.

"They almost went for it but in the end, they decided it wouldn't be fair to other world class Cuban athletes," Hull said.

So Stevenson will stay home along with a number of other potential boxing medal winners. "Of the top four rated fighters in each weight class from around the world, 25.1 percent will miss the Games because of the boycott," Hull said. "That is an impact, but not as much as in most of the sports."

The irony is that while the boycott will keep athletes away, officials from those countries are still coming to Los Angeles. The boxing tournament will include judges and jury members from Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Cuba. And, Hull insists, there will be no political hanky panky in the decisions.

"If we feel that an official is leaning one way or the other on the basis of politics or geography, he's out," he said. "We just will not tolerate any of that."

Hull never has responded well to the peculiar occurrences that occasionally take place in Olympic boxing rings. There was the matter of Ingemar Johansson's silver medal in 1952 and Al Robinson's gold in 1968.

Johansson had reached the finals of the tournament against Big Ed Sanders, an American who outweighed the Swede by about 30 pounds. Johansson was not anxious to get hit by Sanders and eventually was disqualified by the referee for non-action and denied his silver medal.

Hull argued that the fight was for the gold medal and that the Swede had already earned his silver with earlier victories. The protest fell on deaf ears but Hull would not give up the fight. He spent 30 years on the crusade and finally convinced the International Olympic Committee that Johansson had been treated unfairly. Two years ago, the IOC staged a single medal ceremony and presented the boxer with his silver medal.

Robinson, far ahead on points, had been ruled out of the 1968 competition in the final fight by a Russian referee, who charged him with a phantom butt against Mexican Antonio Roldan.

Hull saw injustice in that decision, too, and a videotape of the fight supported his case. Again, he convinced the authorities to right a wrong and Robinson also eventually received his gold.

Hull's diplomatic approach includes handing out a "Free Fight Ticket" to people he meets.

"It is not good for anything," the ticket says. "It is just free."

And at the bottom, there is an added warning.

"The fight part starts when you try to gain admittance with it."

Shannon Puts Off Pro Boxing Career

By ED SCHUYLER JR., AP Sports Writer
 He was member of the Olympic Boxing Team with no place to go in 1980. So Robert Shannon went fishing.
 Did he ever.
 "The hell with boxing, I'm turning pro," thought Shannon after he earned the 106-pound spot on the Olympic Team, which didn't go to the Games at Moscow because of a U.S. boycott.
 "But friends and my family wanted me to go for the gold. 'You're too small,' they said."
 The 21-year-old Shannon has grown, and he will turn pro, but not until he represents the United States at 119 pounds at the Olympics in Los Angeles.

 Shannon's decision to wait for the 1984 Olympics wasn't an immediate one.
 "I went to Alaska and worked on a fishing boat -- sometimes 24 hours a day," recalled Shannon. "I spent a lot of time with myself and I decided to wait for the 1984 Olympics."
 "I decided I would come home," said the resident of Edmonds, Wash., "go back to school, get my high school diploma and go to trade school."
 "I graduated from barber's school last December. I'll go for my boards (state license examination) after the Olympics. I can give a haircut or a perm."

 He also can throw a mean right hook ... the punch that put down world champion Floyd Favors twice in the Olympic Box-Off and clinched for Shannon a berth on the team.
 The left-handed Shannon, the only member of the 1980 Olympic Team still competing as an amateur, appears to be going into the Los Angeles Games at the top of his game, which began officially 10 years ago. Unofficially it began with unscheduled fight against his older sister, Kelly.
 "She used to beat up on me until I got too big," recalled Shannon.

"But she got some big boyfriends." But the road to the '84 Games has not been without its bumps for Shannon since he made the 1980 team. He was beaten in the 112-pound quarterfinals of the U.S. Amateur Championships in 1982, and in 1983 he lost in the semifinals of that tournament and failed to make the Pan American Games team in 1983.
 "After 1980, I moved up to 112 and had a lot of trouble. Then I moved to 119 pounds after I got a weight problem," said Shannon. "I also had problems with flat feet and (the fitting of) my mouthpiece."
 Then after losing a 3-0 decision against Vyacheslav Sholepko of the Soviet Union in a dual meet earlier this year, Shannon, coached by Troy Summers of the Everett Fire Fighters club, put it together.

 "I moved in with my coach a month before the Trials," said Shannon.
 Shannon opened the Trials at Fort Worth, Texas, with a 5-0 decision over Michael Hick, eking out a 3-2 verdict over Todd Greenman in the semifinals, then scored a 5-0 championship decision over Jesse Benavides, who was ranked No. 8 in the world by the International Amateur Boxing Association as of April 15. Shannon wasn't ranked.
 Against Favors, invited to the Box-off as Shannon's "most noteworthy opponent," Shannon got tagged with a hard right to the head in the first round, but he had the champion missing mostly.

In the second round he knocked down Favors with a right hook, then he did something that could cost him dearly in the Olympics ... he got wild. In amateur boxing, it's the number of punches landed, not power that counts. A knockdown punch counts no more in the scoring than a jab, unless, of course, the man doesn't get up.
 "I messed up everything," said Shannon. "I got excited. I thought, 'man, I'm going to knock him out early.'"
 If the fight had gone to a decision it might have been close. But it didn't. Shannon knocked down Favors with another right hook in the third round, and the referee stopped the bout just as the bell rang.
 If you can mess up and win, you're good. If you can admit you messed up, you're smart.
 Robert Shannon has an excellent chance of what his family and friends told him to "wait and go for" four years ago -- Olympic gold.

Ncube Upsets Field In International Classic

BURNABY, British Columbia (AP) -- Unheralded Zeph Ncube of Zimbabwe, nearly rejected as an entrant for the Harry Jerome International Track Classic, has suddenly thrust himself into the Olympic picture for the 5,000-meter race.
 The 27-year-old Ncube came to Monday night's meet at Swangard Stadium, just outside Vancouver, with the Australian Olympic track and field team, with whom he has been training at San Jose, Calif.
 The meet promoters didn't let him in the meet until the last minute and even then wouldn't give him his own hotel room, and he wound up staying with Pat Clohessy, coach of Australia's distance runners.
 Running a race typical of many African distance runners -- throwing in a series of surges -- Ncube scored a stunning upset victory in the sparkling time of 13 minutes, 24.07 seconds.
 "I like to run with the surges," said the excited Ncube. "It breaks the field up."
 "I was really happy with the run," added Ncube, who began running in the Zimbabwe coal mining town of Wankie and joined the Australian Institute of Sport after the 1982 British Commonwealth Games at Brisbane, Australia.
 "Training with the Australian team has helped me."
 Not only training with the team at San Jose, but also with Rob DeCastella, the world champion in the marathon, with whom he has been training at Canberra, Australia. DeCastella still is in Australia and won't join his teammates in California until next week.
 Ncube's time in the 5,000 was about 17 seconds below his previous best and one of the fastest in the world this year, although far behind the 1984 world-best of 13:04.78 by Said Aouita of Morocco. In comparison, the fastest clocking by an American was 13:26.34, by Doug Padilla, winner of the Olympic Trials.

 Paul Cummings, winner of the U.S. Trials at 10,000 meters, and Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, the former world record holder at 1,500 meters, also were in the 5,000 field, but they couldn't handle the upstart Ncube.
 Bayi set most of the early pace before fading in the closing stages and finishing fourth in 13:41.09, behind Ncube, Dan Henderson of the United States and Paul Williams of Canada. Henderson, also little known -- he is a 1980 graduate of Wheaton College -- was timed in 13:24.75, well under the year's U.S. best by Padilla, and Williams was third in 13:29.18.
 Cummings also wilted in the closing laps and wound up seventh in 13:47.06.
 While Ncube's series of surges, the last taking him past Henderson on the final turn, delighted the crowd, the finish of the men's mile excited the fans -- and upset second-place finisher John Walker of New Zealand.
 Walker, the 1976 Olympic gold medalist at 1,500 meters and former world mile record holder, thought he had overtaken Mike Hillardt of Australia with a lean at the tape.
 But after meet officials looked at pictures of the finish, they determined that Hillardt had won in 3:52.34, the fastest mile ever run in Canada and the second-fastest in the world this year.
 Walker was awarded second place in 3:52.37.

However, after the race, Walker looked at a sheet that he apparently thought was the official result, and it listed him first, making him think he had won. Instead, it was the start list, in which he was listed as No. 1.
 He didn't realize he was second until the first three finishers were lined up for the introductions at the awards presentation stand.
 After the ceremony, Walker became even angrier because he felt the difference between he and Hillardt was not as large as three-hundredths of a second.

Terps Move Clemson Tilt

BALTIMORE (AP) -- The void of the Baltimore Colts in the fall schedule of Memorial Stadium has led Mayor William Donald Schaefer to make the University of Maryland an offer it couldn't refuse.
 The chancellor of the University of Maryland is expected to announce Tuesday that the school will switch its Atlantic Coast Conference football game Nov. 17 with Clemson from Byrd Stadium in College Park to Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.
 The University stands to make more than $100,000 by moving the game to the 33rd Street Stadium.
 "It's a financial deal next to amazing," said Dick Dull athletic director for the Terrapins. "It's rent free, and we get a percentage of the concession. The city has also reportedly offered to bus Maryland students to the game for free."
 Maryland has also committed to moving its 1985 game with Miami to the Memorial Stadium.

Officials Blame Coaches For Poor Sportsmanship

LAS VEGAS (AP) -- A majority of members of the National Association of Sports Officials said in a survey that coaches are the greatest obstacle to good sportsmanship in athletics, according to conductors of the study.
 The survey was commissioned by Lite Beer from Miller and conducted by Drs. John C. Pollock and Lawrence S. Falkowski.
 Of the 250 members of the National Association of Sports Officials attending the group's convention in Las Vegas, 229, or 92 percent, responded to the survey. Of those, 60 percent said coaches' negative influence outweighs that of parents and fans. And 50 percent said they were disturbed by the actions of coaches and others on the bench during a game.
 "Most of our members feel that the bad example set by some coaches has a disruptive effect on participants in many sports," Barry Mano, executive director of NASO, said in a release. "Coaches can also be a strong force for good sportsmanship if they set a good example for their athletes."
 On the other hand, officials who have worked both men's and women's competition said by a 3-1 margin that women show better sportsmanship during a game.
 Of those surveyed, 90 percent said that fans had little or no understanding of the roles of officials. The media came in for similar criticism from 79 percent.

In other findings:
 *54 percent said athletes should be role models.
 *79 percent said drugs should not be allowed for the purpose of increasing body weight or strength, although only 47 percent called for pre-game testing.
 *55 percent consider professional sports a mixture of entertainment and competition.
 The survey was conducted over a 10-hour period with the assistance of four micro-computers, enabling convention delegates to study their collective responses during their meeting.

FOCUS

Down on Main Street

On this day in 1920, a little-known writer named Sinclair Lewis took a manuscript of his new novel, "Main Street," to publisher Alfred Harcourt. The book is a withering satire on the narrow-mindedness and lack of culture in a "typical" American small town. Yet the typical American reader seemed not to take offense. While Harcourt predicted sales of about 20,000 copies, "Main Street" sold an amazing 180,000 copies in its first six months alone.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the author of the satirical American novel, "Babbitt"?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Vladimir I. Lenin took control of Russia's government in October, 1917.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you very much out of tune with the little affairs and duties of life and in these you are actually likely to have poor judgment and would be unwise to take risks.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget those private worries and get busy on whatever is of a practical nature and get ahead faster.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be patient in going after your goals since there are bound to be delays and obstacles in the path of your progress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't take any risks in business affairs during the daytime since conditions are a bit tense and in the evening your goals are easier.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) That new idea needs further study before putting in operation, so don't push it early. Be happy with your pals.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be careful not to argue with a business partner during the daytime and then tonight you can make new contacts that are worthwhile.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may have trouble with partners if chances are taken by anyone and promises not kept, but tonight you can fulfill them nicely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You find it slow sledding at work in the morning, but associates later give you the support you need. Be carefree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may find entertainments disappointing so don't expect very much, and in the evening you can plan future activities well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't start any arguments at home today and later you can go out for entertainment. Look to your mate for solace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early give attention to whatever is important and don't let routine work deter you from this. Be careful in driving with a friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study present costs well and try to shave them and be sure not to add any other expenses. Not a good day to seek advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You find it difficult to know how to handle an intimate affair so just let it work itself out. Improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will require much in spiritual and ethical training early otherwise your progeny could become confused. Then the life can become very successful, especially if a good education is provided. The forte is business here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Democrats, CBS Beat TV Clock

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Democratic Party has learned how to tell time and convert it into Prime Time on television.

In 1972, the Democrats' presidential nominee, George McGovern, gave his acceptance speech in relative secrecy at 3 o'clock in the morning. This time, during Monday's opening session of their national convention, the Democrats showed they could beat the clock.

Here's some evidence:
— Former President Jimmy Carter, originally scheduled to speak at 8:30 p.m. EDT when CBS was showing "Scarecrow & Mrs. King" and NBC was showing "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes," gave his speech at 9:30 when the three major networks had their live cameras trained on the Democrats.

CBS anchor Dan Rather said "Jimmy Carter got himself moved" for the benefit of greater TV exposure.

— The summit meeting of presidential candidates Walter F. Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson occurred after the networks ended their prime-time convention coverage. Thus, it did not deflect attention from the packaged TV show, featuring New York Gov. Mario Cuomo's rousing keynote speech.

— Many of the Democratic Party bigwigs, the ones floor reporters race to interview, didn't arrive at the convention until the network stars came out at 9 p.m.

All of this benefitted the more limited coverage of ABC, CBS and NBC over the fuller exposure of Cable News Network, which is billing itself at this convention as "America's Network of Record."

That's an admirable approach for an all-news service, but, based on a side-by-side monitoring of CNN's six hours of convention coverage against CBS' two hours, CBS had the more entertaining and exciting TV show, while CNN's gavel-to-gavel treatment, particularly the early hours, was loaded with dead wood.

The CBS coverage showed less flab, and its viewers didn't miss anything significant. For the first time since 1952, CBS and NBC did not have gavel-to-gavel coverage, and the republic is still standing today.

With more comprehensive coverage, CNN had more of the ceremonial pomp and circumstance. But, strangely, its so-called gavel-to-gavel coverage didn't document the opening gavel, when party chairman Charles Manatt officially opened the convention at 5:02 p.m. EDT.

While CNN's anchors Bernard Shaw and Don Farmer were busy chatting, CNN's cameras were focused on the empty seats and milling delegates, who also seemed to be ignoring Manatt.

Since the significant party leaders seemed to be waiting for ABC, CBS and NBC to christen the convention, CNN was reduced to showing funny hats and placards and talking to some minor delegates who would be fascinating only to their closest relatives.

CNN floor reporter Tranette Ledford criticized the view of the podium from one delegation. She was challenged by a delegate, who said: "I think this is great." Trouble was, CNN's cameras couldn't find Ms. Ledford. When she signed off, she said: "That's about it from here." But where was here?

Another CNN floor reporter, James Allen Miklaszewski, cornered Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode, who excused himself for the delegates' public recital of the "Pledge of Allegiance." Goode put his hand over his heart, and Miklaszewski sheepishly covered his chest with his clipboard.

CNN has always been at its best during breaking news stories. CNN had the opportunity to cover Mondale's 7 p.m. press conference live and did so for a short time. But then it cut away for a Freedent commercial. When it returned, it went to commentator John Connally, the Democrat-turned-Republican and former Texas governor, who said the "focus of the world" is really at Mondale's hotel.

Once again, CNN was here when it should have been there.

(Incidentally, Connally was greeted by calls of "kick John out" from the Texas delegation.)

When CBS came on at 9, Rather needed less than 10 minutes to acquaint viewers with the day's major convention news. CNN, meanwhile, was showing the Democrats' cinematic homage to Harry Truman, narrated by actor Hal Linden.

CNN's convention performance improved markedly, though, when the party leaders became available. CNN had an interview with Hart and aggressively pursued the issue of a possible floor fight over the platform's jobs plank with Chicago Mayor Harold Washington.

CNN and CBS covered Cuomo's speech from start to finish. He was the prime-time star on both broadcasts. And that was just how the clock-conscious Democrats must have planned it.

President's Daughter Is In Play

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — President Reagan's actress daughter, Patti Davis, has made her musical comedy debut in the Birmingham Summerfest production of "The Pajama Game."

About 1,000 people greeted Miss Davis with polite applause on opening night Monday. In the show she plays Babe and performs duets opposite co-star Richard Kline, who plays the ubiquitous neighbor on television's "Three's Company."

In addition to acting, Miss Davis is planning to wed Aug. 14 and is working on a record album.

"It's half finished," she said of the album. "We're having some business problems with the present company, but whether it's with this company or another one, there will be an album."

Her biggest musical success has been co-writing "I Wish You Peace," which was recorded by the Eagles. "So far," she said, "nothing else has clicked, but I'm trying."

In an interview before her opening, she said having her father in the White House hasn't much helped her career.

"It's a double-edged sword," she said. "It's been more negative, and it's a hard cubbyhole to break out of."

Miss Davis said the same thing probably would have been true if her father had continued his acting career and not entered politics. But, she said, "Politics are more vicious. It's a completely bizarre concept for me."

Miss Davis said her goal is to build a career on her own.

"I changed my name several years ago. I wanted my own identity. It makes me feel better having my own name," she said.

Hollywood Sign Getting Facelift

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The idea of turning the 450-foot-wide "HOLLYWOOD" sign into a giant lightshow for the Olympics hit Rick Rutherford and Egils Vigants in January.

"We got a lot of $5 and $10 bills when we told our friends about it," said Rutherford, a 30-year-old professional lighting executive.

Their dream appears ready to become a spectacular reality on July 28, the day the Olympics open, when dozens of floodlights — 10 colors in all — turn the 61-year-old landmark into a flashing rainbow.

Beamed to a worldwide television audience, more than 2 billion viewers could see the 61-year-old mountainside symbol splashed in color for the first time.

"It will be the world's biggest animated billboard," Rutherford said Monday.

From 9 p.m. to midnight, for all-16 nights of the Summer Olympics, the 45-foot-high letters will radiate the official color scheme of the Games: magenta, aqua, chrome yellow, lavender, violet, pink, blue, vermilion, info yellow, and light blue.

A "chaser" light will dart back and forth, drawing attention to the illuminated landmark, which is traditionally solid white.

"She's going to be gorgeous," said Andy Williams, a park ranger who keeps watch over the famed letters propped on the side of Mt. Lee, Hollywood's familiar backdrop.

British TV Bans 'Star Trek' Episodes

LONDON (AP) — British children won't be joining Capt. James T. Kirk and Mr. Spock on four of their journeys to explore new worlds and go where no one has gone before.

The British Broadcasting Corp. will not televise four "Star Trek" episodes because they are not suitable to be shown on early evening television when children watch, Ann Rosenberg, BBC publicity officer, said Monday.

The BBC received complaints after the broadcast of "Miri," in which the Enterprise crew, led by William Shatner's Kirk and Leonard Nimoy's Spock, saves the surviving inhabitants of a planet where everyone dies upon reaching puberty, she said.

Tiny Tim Sings For TV Couple

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tiny Tim, the warbly-voiced singer whose nationally televised marriage ended in divorce, returned to TV to serenade a couple who had just exchanged wedding vows on the show.

Tiny Tim appeared Monday on KYW-TV's "People Are Talking," after the wedding of Diane Barker, 27, and Thomas Norris, 42, of Wilmington, Del.

Tiny Tim reminisced about his marriage to "Miss Vicki" on the "Tonight Show" in 1969 and sang "I Love You Truly" to the newlyweds as he strummed his ukulele.

Tiny Tim said he married "Miss Jan," a graphic artist from New York City, on June 26 at the Imperial Palace in Las Vegas, Nev.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle: REFFXUX WXTM UEXZ ZWEJJSQU; RTDDSZ GWX MXTQ'Z FSZG.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-17

REFFXUX WXTM UEXZ ZWEJJSQU; RTDDSZ GWX MXTQ'Z FSZG.

Yesterday's Cryptokuip - THE GLUM LUMBER-JACK CUT JUMBO TREE; TOOK A BOUGH.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: E equals O

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

lowest spade to the first trick when he should have encouraged vigorously. Declarer received a reprieve when West shifted to the king of hearts at trick two. Declarer won the ace and now he had to run eight more tricks without surrendering the lead. To accomplish that, he needed to score at least three club tricks. The recommended method is a finesse, so declarer led the queen of clubs and, when West played low, he rose with the ace to fello the king and bring home his contract with two overtricks.

The French have a saying: "The king of clubs is always singleton!" And the Rabbi's rule states: "When the king is singleton, play the ace!" But neither of these was the reason for declarer's play. West had already shown the ace-king of spades and the king-queen of hearts with his first two leads. Had he held the king of clubs as well, he might have entered the auction. In any event, East was entitled to hold a card or two, and the only card of any importance not accounted for was the king of clubs. Hence the winning, if anti-percentage, play.

Just as you can give away gratuitous information about your hand in the bidding, you can reveal your holding in the play of the cards. Cease and desist - the enemy is waiting to use that information against you.

North-South were using a 15-17 point no trump. Although North's hand was worth more than the 9 HCP it counted, a jump to game was still somewhat of a stretch. We would have been content with an invitational raise.

As it was, North-South reached three no trump with a spade stopper that, at best, can be described as shaky. South was Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City, and he was not enamored of his prospects when West attacked with the king of spades. Fortunately for him, the defenders may have had a mix-up in their signalling methods, for East played his

Buttons Galore

SAN FRANCISCO — The brother-sister team of Jimmy and Meagan Warlick doesn't care whether you're a delegate for Jesse Jackson, Gary Hart or Walter Mondale — as long as you advertise your preference with a button.

The Asheville, N.C., pair manufactures buttons of the political variety and they've brought their business to the Democratic National Convention. They're setting up shop in hotels, on street corners, at receptions and in the convention center itself.

Miss Warlick, who is taking a semester off from Appalachian State University to concentrate on the campaign button business, says the biggest seller here is a $5 button with photographs of Mondale and his vice presidential choice, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, beside the Capitol.

Shortage

FAYETTEVILLE — North Carolina farmers having trouble finding enough migrant field hands to pick their vegetables are losing some of their crops, a state official says.

Jim Wells, supervisor of the state's Rural Manpower Service in Raleigh, said farmers have had problems finding migrant labor since the beginning of June. But, he said, the crop losses so far haven't been major.

Wells said he expects the situation to ease in mid-August when the South Carolina peach season ends and more migrant farm hands will be available.

Lawsuits

RALEIGH — Doctors are providing better medical care, but more and more of them are facing lawsuits with expensive settlements likely, the executive director of the N.C. Medical Society says.

"One of the reasons for high medical costs is the fact that we do live in this litigious society and that doctors must often practice 'defensive medicine,'" said George E. Moore.

He said a "defensive" physician might order additional tests and procedures more to protect himself from lawsuits than to help him diagnose or treat a patient.

AMA figures show that professional liability claims against physicians have increased from an annual average of 3.3 per 100 physicians to 8 per 100 since 1978, the society's statement said. In some parts of the U.S., physicians in some specialties pay almost $100,000 per year for professional liability coverage, the statement said.

Marchers

SAN FRANCISCO — Several North Carolinians participated in a gay and lesbian rights march before the Democratic National Convention to demonstrate their support for the groups.

Joseph Herzenburg of Chapel Hill, a delegate supporting Walter Mondale, was one of those at the march and rally Sunday.

"Gay people and gay politics are not limited to residents in California and New York," Herzenburg said.

He said North Carolinians have participated in a gay caucus that's part of the convention and they will be active in the fall elections.

"It is a year in which there will be increasing political activity and increasing attacks on the gay community," Herzenburg said.

'Good Faith'

RALEIGH — W.R. Grace & Co. is making "a good faith effort" to ensure that North Carolina tobacco growers whose crops were damaged by fertilizer laced with herbicides will be repaid, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Monday.

Graham, after a meeting with Grace officials, said in a press release that the company had agreed to handle farmer claims on an individual basis and would begin settling claims after the market opens.

Earlier, Lloyd L. Jaquier, executive vice president for Grace, asked that North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram "stop his systematic harassment," which he said was impeding attempts to help farmers.

Ingram last week asked Graham to help get more information from Grace about how farmers would be reimbursed for damages. Ingram said Grace's formula for compensation was unfair.

Train Death

SWANNANOVA — A 21-year-old Black Mountain man was killed by a train early Monday while sitting on the railroad tracks in Bumcombe County eating Polish sausages, officials said. Deputy R.M. Davis said Joe Harold Raines was hit by a Southern Railway train.

A jar of the sausages was found beside the tracks where Raines was believed to have been sitting, Davis said.

Tar Heel Delegates Tend To Support Mondale Ticket

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than one-half of the 88 North Carolina delegates to the Democratic National Convention say they will vote for presidential candidate Walter Mondale on the first convention ballot.

A telephone survey by the Associated Press of all 88 delegates found that 48 delegates said they would back Mondale on the first ballot.

The survey also showed that 18 delegates say they will vote for presidential candidate Sen. Gary Hart on the first ballot, 16 will vote for the Rev. Jesse Jackson and six are uncommitted.

In North Carolina's presidential primary May 8, Mondale led a field of eight candidates with 36 percent of the vote. He was followed by Hart with 30 percent and Jackson with 25 percent.

When delegates were allocated, 43 of the 75 pledged delegates or 57 percent went to Mondale. Hart got 17 delegates or 23 percent and Jackson got 15 delegates or 20 percent.

Mondale, confident he has enough votes to win on the first ballot, already has named U.S. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York as his running mate.

Among the Mondale delegates representing North Carolina are former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, former Raleigh Mayor Clarence Lightner, former Gov. Terry Sanford, Congressmen Charlie Rose and Robin Britt and state party chairman David Price.

The Hart delegates include state Rep. Charles Evans of Dare County and Administration Secretary Jane Patterson.

The Jackson supporters include state Rep. Annie B. Kennedy of Winston-Salem and LaVonia Allison of Durham, who helped coordinate Jackson's campaign in the state.

Uncommitted delegates are Gov. Jim Hunt, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, state Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, former state party chairman Russell Walker, U.S. Rep. Stephen Neal and Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt.

If Jackson is not the nominee, most of his delegates are undecided who to support. Of the Jackson delegates, three say their second choice would be Mondale, two support Hart and the other 11 have no preference.

Eleven of the Hart supporters say they would vote for Mondale if Hart were not in the running. The other seven were undecided.

Senate Contenders Report Fund Raising

RALEIGH (AP) — In the nation's most expensive non-presidential race, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has raised $8.4 million for his re-election bid, while his Democratic opponent, Gov. Jim Hunt, has raised $5.2 million.

Spokesman Will Marshall said the Hunt campaign still was short of its goal — $5 million "over and beyond our fund-raising costs."

"With Senator Helms expected to raise at least $15 million, we can't afford to let his three-to-one spending advantage grow any wider," said Marshall.

"We can't hope to match Senator Helms' fund-raising power, but Governor Hunt is proud of the tremendous outpouring of support from North Carolinians, who have given

$2.5 million to his campaign."

The updated Helms report, filed with the Federal Elections Commission Monday, included 338 pages of contributors, listing about 2,600 names. The Helms camp said it had raised $2.02 million during the second quarter while spending $2.009 million.

The Hunt campaign reported raising $1.7 million from 35,855 contributors between April 19 and June 30. The campaign has spent just over $3.9 million, the report said.

The report showed the National Congressional Club, Helms' political organization, contributed $4,500, and the Republican Senate Majority Fund donated $5,000.

CP&L Requests Retail Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. needs a $151.6 million rate hike to stay attractive to investors whose money will help finish the Shearon Harris nuclear plant, a CP&L official told the N.C. Utilities Commission Monday.

"This is a very difficult time for an electric utility with a nuclear power construction program to be raising capital to be completing that program," said company President Sherwood Smith Jr.

Monday was the first day of hearings on the utility's request for a rate increase that would boost the typical user's monthly bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours 13.2 percent. The average bill would rise from $69.98 to $79.28 in the winter and from $71.98 to $81.28 in the summer.
