Mondale Appeals For Unity

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, even as he prepares to accept his hard-won presidential nomination, is acting swiftly to pull the Democratic Party together for his campaign to oust Ronald Reagan from the White House.

The Democratic presidential nominee planned to take time out from polishing his acceptance speech to attend a victory luncheon today with Senate and House Democratic campaign officials as part of his effort to achieve maximum cooperation among party candidates at all levels.

Defeated rival Gary Hart planned to meet with Mondale in the nominee's hotel today, with one subject being Hart's more than $3 million campaign debt, said an aide to Hart who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

In his post-victory visit to the convention hall, Mondale reached out to supporters of Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"I also want to say a word to those of you who supported other candidates," he said, appearing on the podium less than an hour after his first-ballot victory.

"Sometimes it doesn't feel very good to lose," he added. "I know, because it's happened to me in the past. I not only ask the support of those of you who've given me your support, but I've got to have the help of everyone ...

"It's not just my cause, it's our cause."

The night he became his party's presidential nominee was a moment Mondale had fought for years to achieve.

He first sought the presidency in 1974 but dropped his bid after concluding he didn't have the stomach for the ordeal of a two-year campaign. Two years later he was Jimmy Carter's choice for vice president.

Within days of the Carter-Mondale ticket's defeat in 1980, Mondale met with top aides in his White House office and told them to put him in a position to be nominated for president in 1984.

The road to that nomination was rougher than Mondale or his aides expected.

Wednesday night, as he reached his goal, Mondale sat with his family in a 35-floor hotel suite that looked down on the Moscone Center.

Four television sets were stacked, two-by-two, on a table in one corner. A few feet away, Mondale and his wife, Joan, sat on a couch; their sons, William and Ted, were seated nearby. Later, daughter Eleanor Mondale, joined her parents on the couch.

They watched the roll. "Alabama ... Alaska ..." All good states for Mondale.

But then came the C's: California, Colorado and Connecticut — big victories for Hart, who soon led Mondale by nearly 100 delegate votes.

But Mondale knew this was to be his night. There was no need to worry. Tiny Delaware gave Mondale 13 votes to 5 for Hart.

"There's a trend," quipped the candidate.

But it was Illinois that brought the first loud cheers and applause from the Mondale family, as Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, announced the state had given 39 votes to Jackson, 41 to Hart and 114 to Mondale.

That put him back in front of Hart, and he never again fell behind.

When it was New Jersey's turn, Rep. Frank Guarini, was seen stepping to the microphone.

OVER THE TOP — Walter Mondale punches his fist in the air in jubilation Wednesday night as delegates to the Democratic National Convention assured him nomination for president. Mondale will officially accept the nomination tonight. (AP Laserphoto)

Massacre Gunman Kills 20 People

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — A fired security guard shouted "I've killed thousands and I'll kill thousands more" as he turned a McDonald's into a slaughterhouse, shooting 20 people to death before police killed him. It was believed to be the worst one-day massacre by one man in U.S. history.

Twenty others were injured, four critically, in Wednesday's rampage, which lasted 90 minutes before a police marksman felled the gunman, James Oliver Huberty, 41, authorities said. His targets ranged from an infant girl to a 60-year-old woman.

Huberty, clad in jungle fatigues and a black T-shirt, burst into the border-town restaurant with a semi-automatic rifle, a shotgun and a handgun and began methodically firing at diners, employees and passers-by, pausing to reload each time his weapons were emptied, authorities said.

When he died, he still had a shoulder bag full of ammunition and "more ammunition out in his car.... If he had not been shot, he would have injured a lot more people," said San Diego police Lt. Paul Yberrando.

Police sharpshooter Charles Foster was able to pick the gunman off as he wandered through the bullet-riddled, blood-splattered restaurant.

"It's a slaughterhouse. They're just executed," said Lt. Bill Nelson.

Authorities knew of no motive for the shootings.

Huberty lived with his wife and daughter in an apartment 200 yards from the restaurant and had moved to the San Diego area seven months (Please turn to page 7)

Weather Clearing Over Pitt

Pitt County basked in the first day of sunshine in three days today as dry, blue skies replaced the sodden cloud-filled skies that made many people wonder if the sun would ever shine again.

Another 1.2 inches of rain Wednesday put the final touches on a whopping 4.5 inch week-long rainfall, according to the Greenville Utilities weather station. On Monday 2.05 inches of precipitation fell and on Tuesday another 1.2 inch was recorded.

Unofficial reports have placed the total rainfall higher in some areas of Pitt County this week.

Area streams and ditches are filled to capacity, but according to local Soil Conservation Service officials, no major flooding has been reported. "As far as the storms and rainfall and flooding goes, we have no more than can be expected," Lonnie Faulkner of the Pitt SCS said. "We have some minor flooding around homes and highways but nothing unexpected for this type of rainfall."

The Tar River, according to GUC's measurements, has risen 2.4 feet since Sunday, "a significant rise" according to Ron Elks, an employee of GUC's water plant, where local weather data is collected.

"The (river) level is not only indicative of local rainfall but rainfall in other parts of the state," Elks said. "When we have this much rain across the state, we expect the (river) level to rise quickly," said Elks. At 8 a.m. today the river stood at 8.6 feet, compared to a 6.2-foot level Sunday, a 7.2-foot level Monday and an eight-foot level Tuesday.

Elks said 14 feet is flood stage for the Tar River and that for July, a 3.5 foot level is considered normal.

Sunny and warm weather will be the rule Friday, forecasters said today, although shower and a few thunderstorms will linger along the coast. Afternoon highs will reach into the low to mid 80s and overnight lows will be in the 60s.

Runoff Scheduled For 6th Senate Seat

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A runoff election in the 6th district N.C. Senate race will be held Aug. 14 between Shelly Willingham of Tarboro and R.L. (Bob) Martin of Bethel.

Willingham requested the runoff Wednesday because no candidate received a majority of the votes in Tuesday's primary election in the newly reapportioned district.

Martin received a total of 5,633 votes and Willingham garnered 3,721 votes. Others in the race were John D. Constable, who received a total of 2,435 votes, and Vernon Morton with 220 votes.

After the results of the primary were made known, Martin issued a statement which said in part: "While the results of Tuesday's primary election are unofficial, the returns indicate clearly the support I have to be the Democratic nominee for the 6th District Senate seat. I am very grateful to all those who campaigned in my behalf and to those who voted for me. With a new (Please turn to page 6)

FATAL WRECK ... Greenville real estate salesperson Sue Henson died Wednesday afternoon in a two-vehicle collision on N.C. 33 east of Greenville. Winterville brick contractor Floyd McDaniel and his sons, Jeff and Chris, were injured. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Head-On Collision Kills Woman

A Greenville woman was killed and a father and his two sons were seriously injured Wednesday in a head-on collision on N.C. 33 east of Greenville.

Highway Patrolman John Tomer identified the fatally injured driver of one car as Sue Taylor Henson, 54, a Greenville real estate salesperson. She was driving alone headed west toward Greenville.

He said the driver of the other vehicle, a pickup truck headed east, was Floyd McDaniel, 51, of Route 1, Winterville, a self-employed brick contractor. Riding with McDaniel were his two sons, Jeff McDaniel, 25, and Chris McDaniel, 21. Floyd McDaniel is listed in critical condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. His sons are both in intensive care at Pitt Memorial, but are considered less seriously injured than their father.

The accident occurred in a curve a half-mile east of the Simpson turn-off, State Road 1756.

According to Mrs. Henson's employer, Jack Duffus of Duffus Realty Inc., she had been in Washington earlier in the day and was apparently returning to Greenville at the time of the 2:30 p.m. accident. According to a spokesperson at the McDaniel home, the McDaniels worked at a job site in Greenville until rain began and were headed toward a river home they were building at Blount's Creek in Beaufort County at the time of the accident.

Trooper Henson quoted a witness identified as Robena Alligood of Chocowinity as saying Mrs. Henson's vehicle crossed into the left lane prior to the accident and that the truck driven by McDaniel veered sharply as he apparently tried to avoid hitting the oncoming car.

Investigation is continuing, Trooper Tomer said.

Candlelight Wedding Performed

Summer flowers provided the setting in the Wesley Methodist Church for the candlelight ceremony uniting in marriage, Wanda Kay King and Paul Howard LaGant Sunday at 5 p.m. The Rev. James Howard of Morehead City, grandfather of the bridegroom, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Connie Earl King and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Squires, all of Farmville.

Kitty King of Farmville and Linda Meeks of Conetoe presented music. Mrs. Meeks sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer." Both are aunts of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a quincenera tiered chapel length gown of white lace lined in acetate taffeta with a front and back sweetheart neckline. She wore a circlet in her hair with satin rosebuds and pearls and beads with shoulder length veil of white illusion. She carried a bouquet of white and blue carnations. She wore a pearl necklace and earrings, a gift from her parents.

Donna King Hart, cousin of the bride of Farmville, was honor attendant and wore a crepe blue gown and capelet of chiffon.

Mark LaGant of Richmond, Va., was best man for his brother. Ushers included Aaron King, brother of the bride, and Marvin Wilkerson, both of Farmville.

The mother of the bride wore a sheer ruffled crepe dress and the mother of the bridegroom selected a silk flowered lavender outfit. Each wore a corsage of white carnations and were presented a long-stemmed carnation during the ceremony the bridal couple.

Grandmothers of the bride, Mrs. Bill King of Farmville, and Hazel

Meeks Tolson of Tarboro, were given miniature carnation corsages.

Hilda Little Smith directed the wedding. Geraldine Bagley, aunt of the bride, presided at the church register assisted by the bride's sister, Barbara King, and her cousin, Melody King, who also gave out wedding scrolls and rice bags.

The bridal couple attended Farmville Central High School. She is assistant manager at Cato's in Farmville and the bridegroom is employed by Air Cargo Services at the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The couple will live in Farmville after a wedding trip.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth and decorated with white tapers in silver candleholders with a silver bow holding spring flowers. Jessie Mae James and Mrs. Felton Wilson, aunts of the bride, served wedding cake. Geraldine Bagley poured punch. James and Sylvia Howard, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom, assisted.

The bridal party and guests were entertained at an after-rehearsal party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry King. The couple was entertained at several pre-nuptial parties.

Homemaker Camps Still Offer Getaway Holiday

By MARY KANE
DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — There's no ringing telephone, no crying children, no one around but about 45 women with card tables, chairs, fans, snacks, games and three days to themselves.

Welcome to a homemaker's camp, an annual outing that has less to do with the great outdoors than with offering women a worry-free getaway.

This year's Montgomery County Cooperative Extension Service scheduled its camp for July 29 to Aug. 1 at 4-H Camp Graham. Women from Montgomery and six other surrounding counties are eligible to attend. Other such camps are held in the state and around the country, said Mdn Cadle, assistant home economic agent for the extension service.

The camps sprang from the need during the Great Depression to offer farm wives an affordable vacation away from the fields. Now the camps draw working women as well as housewives, but the purpose is the same — a temporary retreat from everyday pressures.

"There's no telephone here, you don't have to watch reruns on TV, you don't have to cook," said Helen Puterbaugh, 60, of Brookville.

Mary Jonas, 84, has been attending homemaker's camps in one form or another for 53 years. This year will be no exception.

A farm wife with three small children in 1932, Mrs. Jonas attended her first camp that year and initiated a tradition by standing up around the campfire and singing "Second Hand Rose."

"I still sing it at every camp," she said.

"I like to go back to the camp because I've made some wonderful friends," said Mrs. Jonas, who lives in Liberty, a rural area southwest of Dayton. "I go for the fellowship and the enjoyment. I like it."

"A lot of people think it's funny that I go, as old as I am. They think it's kind of funny that I can stand it," she said.

Mrs. Jonas brings an electric fan, crafts, a card table, clothes and "seeds of food" to the outing. Card games usually last late into the night. During the day there is swimming, craft classes and other scheduled activities, but the women don't have to take part in all of them.

Men could probably participate also if they insisted on coming. Ms. Cadle said a man who was taking care of the home while his wife worked wanted to attend one year.

"His wife wouldn't let him come," Ms. Cadle said.

For Janet Holl, 36, of Randolph Township, the camp is an opportunity for her husband to spend some time taking care of their children, ages 9 and 6.

"It's good for my husband to see that he can manage them," said Mrs. Holl, a full-time nurse.

"I go because it's fun. It's a neat thing to do to get away for a few days without a big expense," she said.

A mix of women attend the camps, and she is not the only working woman to participate in the coupon and recipe exchanges that take place.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Miss Rose, Mr. Ricks Marry Saturday

Teresa Yvonne Rose and Joseph Alan Ricks were married Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in the arboretum at East Carolina University. The Rev. Everette Harper performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Elizabeth P. Rose of Garner and the late James D. Rose and stepdaughter of Nancy Zachary Rose of Garner. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis L. Ricks of Greenville are parents of the bridegroom.

Cynthia Latham Wilson, cousin of the bride, and Rachel Jensen Harrison, both of Greenville, were bridesmaids. Steve Everette of Greenville was the best man and Vann Latham of Greenville was usher.

Kathryn Lynn Ellen of Greenville was violinist for the ceremony.

The bride wore a street length voile dress with a white background and floral border of pink, green and blue. She wore a white wide brim straw hat with a matching ribbon band and carried a spray arrangement of baker's fern, fuji mums, carnations and baby's breath with white ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids wore street length dresses in pastel colors complementing the bride's dress and their bouquets were similar to the bride's.

The couple will live in Garner.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vann Latham, aunt and uncle of the bride. Guests were greeted by the bride's stepmother, Nancy Zachary Rose and invited into the living room by Mr. and Mrs. James Rose Jr. of Charleston, S.C., brother and sister-in-law of the bride. Elizabeth Rose, mother of the bride, poured punch and wedding cake was served by Mrs. Eddie Rose, sister-in-law of the bride of Princeton. Mrs. Scottie Rose, sister-in-law of the bride of Washington, N.C., assisted in serving.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday evening. Guests included members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests. The bridesmaids entertained at the home of Mrs. Wilson Saturday afternoon honoring the bride.

Teacher Attends Writing Project

RALEIGH — Lydia B. Latta of Greenville, a teacher at Southwest Edgecombe High School in Pinetops, has been named a fellow in the Capital Area Writing Project now underway at N.C. State University.

She is among the 25 teachers in the four-week workshop codirected by N.C. State and Peace College. The workshop continues through July 24.

Sessions are included on topics such as the evaluation of writing, use of computers in teaching writing and the relationship between reading and writing.

During the next school year the teachers will act as consultants for the schools in their districts by sharing with their colleagues what they learned at the workshop.

GARAGE SALE

NEW YORK (AP) — A garage sale is a good way to get rid of unwanted household items and make money at the same time.

To make the most of the sale, it is best to make all the items look good. In some cases, just a thorough cleaning will do the job. But a quick spray of paint on other objects, such as outdoor furniture, can triple their value, while aerosol paint removers and lacquer can help restore old furniture to a much more profitable condition.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Now that cooks in various parts of the United States have taken Tex-Mex cooking to their hearts, I've been asked how to barbecue fresh pork spareribs with a really fiery sauce.

BARBECUE RIBS
4 to 6 pounds fresh pork spareribs
Tex-Mex Sauce, recipe follows

Divide ribs into 2 to 2½-pound portions. Place each portion on a double thickness of heavy-duty foil, adding ¼ cup water to each packet. Seal tightly, allowing room for heat circulation and expansion. Place packets on a barbecue grill over hot coals. Grill for 45 minutes; do not open packets during this period. Remove packets from grill; open slightly and drain off fat. Now open each packet entirely and, with tongs, place ribs directly on grill over medium-low coals. Cover grill and cook until tender — 30 minutes to 1 hour; baste with Tex-Mex Sauce the last 10 minutes of grilling.

TEX-MEX SAUCE

1 small onion, finely chopped
1 large garlic clove, finely chopped
1 teaspoon dried crushed oregano
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
½ cup water
1½ tablespoons vegetable oil
1½ teaspoons all-purpose flour
One 10-ounce can hot enchilada sauce

Salt to taste
In a small bowl thoroughly stir together the onion, garlic, oregano, cumin and water. In a 1-quart saucepan over low heat, heat the oil; add the flour and stir until bubbling and a golden color. Off heat, stir in the onion mixture. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly,

Good Outlay

We have been told North Carolina's celebration of the first English voyagers to America will cost the state $13 million. It sounds like a lot; but it didn't all go down a drain.

With any kind of luck at all, tourists will bring more than $13 million into the area — perhaps before the year is out; and the beautification, added attractions, better accessibility and improvements are long-lasting measures. Coastal Carolina (as well as the state as a whole) should reap benefits from the outlay for years to come.

Highway improvements represent the lion's share of state spending for the celebration, and Tar Heels who have visited that segment of their long coastline would be the last to say those improvements were unneeded.

Completed and planned dredging of channels was another highly desirable step which will be appreciated by yachtsmen, a notorious breed of travelers who relish visiting sites of tradition and filled with historic backgrounds. We only wish the improved channels had some assurance of long life; but experience tells us otherwise.

The refurbishing and beautifying of Manteo and neighboring coastal communities should re-inspire North Carolinians who visited the area in other years to go again and again

The thought, too, of $170,000 devoted to planting crepe myrtles and oaks ... a modest sum for the vast returns in beauty they promise ... is a touch natives and visitors will appreciate for a long time.

No, $13 million was not an overly large sum to invest in convenience and attractions. It takes money to make money, they say, and to our way of feeling it was and is a well-advised outlay.

Without Trust

We instinctively anticipate a con job when the word "notwithstanding" crosses our line of vision.

To begin with, it is three words (despite Webster) piled together because the writer had ulterior designs.

"Not" is a perfectly good word. Kids learn it early, as well as "no," "stop it" and "don't." It is a very negative expression.

"With" is another word of quality; frequently used to describe worthwhile combinations such as strawberries with cream, turkey and dressing with cranberry sauce, or "two aspirin with a glass of water, please." Everybody knows about "with."

"Standing" is self-explanatory. It describes something or somebody not sitting, lying down, kneeling or moving around. The word poses no problem nor grounds for misunderstanding.

"Notwithstanding" is one of those unfortunate combinations of letters and words with shady parenthood. And when we say "shady," we mean it casts a shadow.

In terms of value we rank it with counterfeit money ... because in its own way it's a counterfeit word. You can't trust it.

—Walter Mears—

Voters Judge People, Not Pieces Of Paper

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The thing to remember about party platforms is that almost nobody does.

They are widely forgotten soon after they are written.

The one the Democrats have just adopted is not likely to be an exception. Republican campaigners surely will point with alarm to some of its provisions. Democrats will do likewise after the GOP convention next month.

Come the campaign, voters judge people, not pieces of paper.

Platforms are debated with fervor, challenged, compromised. Rival politicians have been known to argue over synonyms and compromise on commas. But platform disputes and platform deals are important primarily for their impact, if any, on the one major decision every national convention renders: the choice of a presidential nominee. The positions that count are his positions, whatever the platform says.

Negotiators for Walter F. Mondale, Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson bargained all night on the language the Democratic National Convention adopted on Tuesday. Mondale compromised with Hart on one disputed plank and with Jackson on another. Then, on the convention floor, his side showed his delegate command in electronically tallied votes that rejected three more Jackson challenges.

It was one of the better tactical performances of the Mondale camp, giving on one point, confronting on another — just enough muscle to show who was in charge, just enough give to avoid confrontation that might have produced an embarrassing setback.

"Gary Hart won one, Jesse Jackson won one, and we did what we needed to do and maintained our votes on the other three," said Mondale's campaign chairman, James Johnson.

Overall, the Democrats adopted a platform mixing the themes of all three campaigners for the nomination, but largely tailored to Mondale. His people controlled a drafting committee that was headed by Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, who will be his vice presidential nominee.

Mondale yielded to Hart, the stronger of his two convention rivals, on a plank in which the party spurns the use of military force unless U.S. goals are clear and exhaustive diplomatic efforts to settle the problem have failed. Mondale had objected that the language was vague — which isn't all bad. But he dropped his opposition rather than fight it out with Hart's delegates on the convention floor.

No harm done. Mondale can live with that language. President Reagan probably could live with that language; he certainly could argue that U.S. goals are clear, U.S. interests are threatened and diplomacy futile in the Central American conflict that prompted the platform plank.

Jackson raised more intractable platform challenges. He wanted parable worth argues, however, that the assembly's actions are setting up all the conditions which will lead North Carolina to the same disaster.

This issue arises from the fact that jobs traditionally held by women are generally paid less than jobs traditionally held by men, even if the qualifications for the woman's job are more rigorous than those for the man's. Under comparable worth, an objective point system which compares the worth of all jobs would be developed and people paid according to their position on the ranking, proponents argue.

The General Assembly has appropriated $650,000 to hire a private consultant to actually put a point value on each job. Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, a leading comparable worth advocate, says the state "could be sued now. I hope that by the state showing a good faith effort to immediately get into this and to make changes that the suits will not come forth. If that's the case, we have two years. It's coming."

But Rep. Charlie Hughes, R-Henderson, an opponent of comparable worth, says the assembly is making the same mistakes Washington made.

"I can see every element in the suit against Washington developing here," Hughes said. Washington's mistake, Hughes said, was conducting a detailed study of sexual bias in job classifications before it decided to implement such a program. Washington did the study, decided not to implement the recommended comparable worth changes, and the got sued. The plaintiffs used the state's own study against it, using it to prove there was discrimination. They won.

Two decisions are involved here. One is a policy decision: "Should North Carolina develop a comparable worth salary schedule?" The other is a nuts-and-bolts decision: "Where do we rank all these jobs?" Hughes contends that the General Assembly has decided to answer the nuts-and-bolts question first and that will, as in Washington's case, just give anyone with a lawsuit the ammunition to win in court.

Hughes has a different proposal — one which was shot down in the June session. He would like the Legislature to study the issue from a policy perspective and then come back and vote on it. If the assembly decided, as a matter of policy, to implement such a program, then it would go ahead and do the nuts-and-bolts study.

Comparable worth has been studied by a state task force — albeit one with a considerably favorable bias. The Council on the Status of Women conducted that study prior to the opening of the 1984 session. Hughes thinks a legislative committee would take a more balanced look at the question.

Mrs. Woodard says the state already knows the fair course to take. "This is not a study to see if people are not being paid what they ought to be. This will put in place a system which will point it out — that they aren't being paid what they ought to be paid."

She says the courts are just waiting to tell us that. Hughes, on the other hand, says the assembly is simply making a good case against itself.

A Different Trend

WASHINGTON — For the better part of 15 years, since Warren Earl Burger became chief justice, American conservatives have been praying for the day when the Supreme Court would turn decisively from the judicial liberalism that characterized the court of Earl Warren. In the term that ended July 5 their prayers at last were answered.

Such labels as "conservative" and "liberal" cause judges much pain. They insist, with some merit, that these tidy classifications lie in the eye of the beholder. One man's strict construction is another man's bold activism. A decision that Minnesota may compel the Jaycees to admit women members, for example, could be read as old-fashioned conservative federalism on the one hand, or an innovative liberal egalitarianism on the other. You pays your money and you takes your choice.

When that has been acknowledged, trend was clearly discernible both in civil and in criminal law.

Five cases during the term dealt with the exclusionary rule. This is the rule, devised by the court in 1914, that says evidence must be excluded from a jury's consideration if the evidence has been illegally obtained. The purpose of the rule is to deter misconduct by law enforcement officers, and that purpose is everywhere applauded. But in recent years the rule has been absurdly extended. Like medieval theologians counting angels on a pin, the judges engaged in solemn disputation over glove compartments, suitcases, sniffing dogs and green plastic bags. In the process, the court lost sight of the purpose of the rule, and it lost sight of the whole business of the guilt of the accused.

In its series of rulings in the term just ended, the court did not abolish the exclusionary rule. The hysterics of Justice Brennan to the contrary, the court did not cave in to the cops. A majority of the court held that if officers rely in good faith upon a magistrate's search warrant, evidence so obtained need not be excluded from trial if it develops that the warrant was defective. This is common sense.

In the same fashion, the court turned away from rigid, ritualistic application of the Miranda warnings: If the public safety is in danger, police may briefly question a suspect before reading him his rights. The court turned from its knee-jerk deference to some supposed "wall of separation" between church and state. In the Memphis firefighters case, involving layoffs for economic reasons, the court refused to exalt the doctrine of affirmative action.

These and a dozen other significant decisions will win applause from my side of the political spectrum. They came about because the court's four relatively consistent conservatives — Burger, Rehnquist, O'Connor and Powell — finally got their act together.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

More than a hundred years ago Thomas Chalmers, the eloquent Scottish preacher, delivered a sermon on the topic, "The Expulsive Power of a New Affection." His theme was that the way to displace from the human heart is by exchanging an old affection for a new one. He held that it is fruitless to try to drive an unworthy desire from the heart unless one does so by substituting a new and better desire in place of the old one. The way to clear the heart of evil desires is to crowd them out by a multitude of good desires.

This is something for everyone to ponder who is wrestling with some powerful temptation. The best way to drive anything evil out of the human heart is to overwhelm it with good.

Here is a therapy in which modern psychology and eternal morality meet. Moreover, it is characterized by a robust common sense.

Frustrated Caller Adopts This Credo: Let Phone Ring!

DEAR ABBY: Please do us older people a favor and print this. I cannot describe my frustration at picking up my telephone just in time to hear the caller hang up on me!

Why in the name of heaven would anybody make a telephone call and hang up after the third or fourth ring? Unless one carries a cordless telephone around, it takes at least five or six rings before most people can answer it. Sometimes I'm in the laundry room or busy elsewhere and can't hear the phone ringing until it has rung three or four times.

When I call a friend, I always let the phone ring at least 10 times. Then if nobody answers, I assume he's not home.

DEAR GIVE: Here's your break; hope it helps. I wonder how many people have broken arms, legs, shoulders and hips because while they were in the bathtub, the yard, in the middle of scrambling an egg or otherwise occupied, the telephone rang and they ran to answer it?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I haven't had any sexual relations for seven months. He doesn't even kiss me. Says he's too tired. I've tried to talk to him about it, but he says there's nothing to talk about, he's just getting old. (He's 38 and I'm 33.) This is the second marriage for both of us.

We've been married for three years. For the first two years, he couldn't get enough of me. Now, nothing! I love him very much and will not seek sexual fulfillment elsewhere.

I know he's not cheating on me because he never goes anywhere except to work, and then he comes directly home. He has become very slovenly about his appearance. He takes a bath only at my insistence—about every two weeks.

He will not admit there's a problem, but there must be. He says he feels fine, but he seems depressed and unhappy. Please help me.

DOWNHEARTED

DEAR DOWNHEARTED: Yours is one of the most difficult problems a faithful, caring person has ever had to face—getting someone who is obviously sick but refuses to admit it to a doctor.

Beg, plead, bribe, threaten. Do whatever is necessary to get him into his doctor's office, including calling the doctor and asking his advice. Your husband needs a thorough physical examination.

DEAR ABBY: I learned in school that when Columbus discovered America, the American Indians were already here, but I would like to know where the Indians came from.

LIKES TO LEARN
(12 YEARS OLD)

DEAR LIKES: The Encyclopedia Britannica says that the North American Indians probably migrated to the Americas from Asia. Some 15,000 to 25,000 years ago they crossed from northeast Asia to the Bering Strait. By the time the Europeans arrived in the 15th century, waves of these Asiatic migrants had spread over the Americas.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I drove my mother downtown for a doctor's appointment. I have stickers on my car signifying that it's used to transport a disabled person, but I was using my husband's car that day. My mother is 52 and the picture of health, but she has a very serious medical problem and can't walk very far, so I parked in a space reserved for the handicapped.

As we were getting back into our car, a woman who was pulling out of a space not reserved for the handicapped stuck her head out of her car window, and did she ever open up a mouth at us!

She shouted, "You two strong, healthy women should be ashamed of yourselves—taking a parking space reserved for some poor crippled person!" Then she shook her finger in our faces and drove off.

Abby, please tell people that not all handicapped people wear braces, walk with crutches or use a wheelchair. Some disabilities are not visible.

Guide Tells Parents How To Deal With Kids' Crises

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Little kids fall out of trees they're not supposed to climb. They get shocks from sticking things into electrical outlets. Some get sick from munching cosmetics.

Accidents are the most common cause of death among children, so every parent should bone up on ways to deal with medical emergencies resulting from illness or accident.

A new 128-page, illustrated guide seems to fit the need. "The Parents' Emergency Guide" (Facts on File, $6.95) tells what to do in the critical first minutes that may make the difference between life and death.

Credit for the quick-reading directions on how to handle dozens of emergencies goes to The Diagram Group, a consortium of artists, illustrators and researchers whose popular books include "The Human Body," "Man's Body," "Woman's Body," and "Child's Body."

Here are some samples of what are described as "instant answers" to important questions.

Q. Should I induce vomiting if I think my child swallowed poison?

A. Make the patient vomit only if: a. he is fully conscious, and, b. he is not convulsing, and, c. you know for certain that the poison is not an acid, alkali or liquid petroleum product.

Q. Should I try to move my child if he is unconscious?

A. Provided that there is no possibility of neck or spinal injury, persons who are unconscious but breathing should be placed in the recovery position: stomach down, head turned to one side; and arm and leg on that side pulled up 'til the thigh is at right angles to the body, and the hand level with the jaw. DO NOT put a pillow under the head.

Accidents that kill or cause serious disabilities include falls, poisoning and burns.

"Strange as it may seem, the majority of accidents happen in the home rather than outside," "Parents' Emergency Medical Guide" says.

"Pre-school children are particularly at risk from accidents in the home. A young baby may choke on food or a small object; an exploring toddler may fall down stairs, pull a scalding pan from the stove, swallow a household poison such as bleach, or even suffocate in a plastic bag.

"As a child grows older the type of risk changes: school children perhaps are more prone to accidents outside the home such as falls, swimming accidents and, of course, traffic accidents."

A basic first aid kit recommended in the guide can be kept in a box or metal container, unlocked but out of reach of children.

"It should be complete in itself — don't depend on kitchen scissors, for example," the guide says.

"Its medicines and lotions should be clearly labeled, its dressings kept well wrapped. A basic first aid pamphlet or copies of this book and a notepad and pencil should be kept inside, and emergency phone numbers pasted to the lid.

"It should be sealed with adhesive tape, to keep it clean and dry and help keep out children. Similar kits should be kept in cars, boats and campers."

Contents should include: adhesive tape; 2 1/2-inch bandage; 1-inch bandage; an acetaminophen, that is, Tylenol and children's Tylenol; aspirin, for adults only unless prescribed by a physician for a child.

Also: gauze dressings, scissors, tweezers, safety pins, eyecup, antihistamine cream, antiseptic cream, adhesive dressings, petroleum jelly, rubbing alcohol and cotton.

"Towels, handkerchiefs, tissues are useful for cleaning and covering wounds," the guide says.

Other household staples that may help include vinegar, salt, salad oil and bicarbonate of soda.

"Vinegar may be applied to wasp stings and bicarbonate of soda to other stings and burns," the guide says.

Break-In Arrests

Two men have been arrested by Pitt County deputies and charged in connection with a break-in reported Saturday at the home of Jeff Stocks on Route 1, Winterville, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Charged with breaking, entering and larceny were Jeffrey Todd Smart, 20, of Route 1, Hookerton, and Jodie Heath, 18, of Route 1, Farmville. Bond for each man was set at $1,000.

Tyson said items valued at $3,521 were reported missing from the Stocks home, including a microwave oven, turntable, speakers, amplifiers, cassette recorder and tapes, a shotgun, rifle and binoculars. He said most of the property has been recovered.

Church Officers

Officers were elected Sunday by the newly organized Peace Presbyterian Church. Elders are Ann Barnhill, Larry Beaty, Mary Cochran, Gary Danford, John Grier, Jim Hicks, Gene Parker, Jean Sasser, Jeff Scarborough, Rachel Sturz, Del Tulloch and Henry Wood.

The congregation is meeting temporarily at the Ramada Inn. The organizing minister is W.C. Goodnight Jr.

House Entered

Pitt County deputies are investigating a break-in reported Tuesday at the home of Jimmy House, Box 245, Stokes, that resulted in the theft of $1,500 in property and money. Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported.

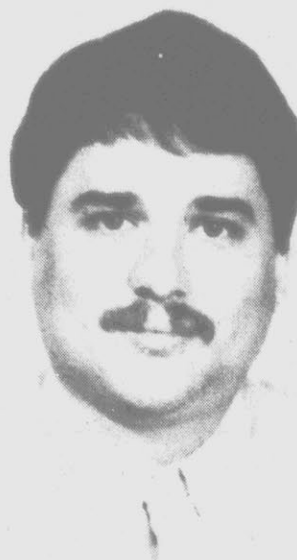

Tyson said House told deputies three rifles, a shotgun, an automatic pistol, two scopes, a camera, high school ring and $200 were taken from his home.

Entrance was apparently gained by breaking out a rear window. Tyson said.

Fulbright Grant

Timothy John McMillan, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill student, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct research in Kenya, according to the Board of Foreign Scholarships and the U.S. Information Agency.

McMillan is a 1977 graduate of Rose High School. He earned a bachelor's degree in anthropology and a master's degree in European archaeology at UNC before beginning research into the impact of colonialism in Kenya as a dissertation topic.

TIMOTHY McMILLAN

McMillan will be in Kenya from September of this year to March 1986 to conduct research on "Modernization in Kericho District, Kenya: Biological and Social Variables."

He is one of about 2,100 graduate students, teachers and professors being sent abroad for the 1984-85 academic year under the Fulbright exchange program.

district and an unusual election date. I believe that all those who turned out to vote should feel proud of themselves. The 6th District is new, and, as such, will present both an exciting challenge and opportunities for its new senator.

Contacted this morning by telephone, Martin had no comment about the runoff election.

Martin is a longtime member and current chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners. He served as president of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners and was recognized by the association as the Outstanding Commissioner of the Year in 1981.

He is a member of the board of directors of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners and a director of the National Association of Counties, as well as a director of the N.C. Association of Social Services Board Members. Martin is chairman of the Pitt County Board of Social Services. He is serving his second term as director of the North Carolina Telecommunications Board.

Martin currently is the owner of a farm and has served as the mayor of Bethel for three terms. He is a retired railroad employee.

Willingham, a newcomer to races involving non-local offices, said in a telephone interview this morning that he has additional campaigning to do before the runoff.

"I am a little disappointed that I didn't carry my home county of Edgecombe," Willingham said. "I have to give credit to Martin for campaigning so hard in Edgecombe County. I am going to have to do some more campaigning."

"There was also low turnout in Wilson County where they had a little over 2,000 to come out," he said. "I had campaigned in Wilson County and I think if more people had come out to vote, I would have received more votes."

"I appreciate all those who came out and voted for me," he added. "I am looking forward to the runoff Aug. 14. I know it is asking a lot for people to come out and vote for the fourth time."

Willingham said, "With just two people in the race now it is easier to define issues and appeal to the people in the district. I will be campaigning for those votes in the upcoming runoff."

An Edgecombe County native, Willingham has been a member of the Rocky Mount school board, has served as a housing commissioner in Kentucky and has been a member of the Louisville Economic Development Corporation, president of the board of a medical center and a VISTA volunteer.

Willingham is president of the private Mary E. Horne Foundation. He serves as a member of the board of the Rocky Mount Boy's Club, the board of the Eno County Day School in Durham and the Edgecombe County Extension Advisory Board. Active in church work, Willingham is a member of the male choir and is on the usher board of his church. He also is vice president of the Layman's League and is on the state board of the Layman's League.

In his career, Willingham has been the personnel manager for a large oil company, a financial analyst with an investment company and a police officer in Washington, D.C.

"All my involvements have been dealing with people and dealing with problems that people face every day," Willingham said, "experiences a person serving in the Legislature would need."

Voter turnout was low in the Tuesday primary, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Election. Only Democrats were eligible to vote in the 6th district Senate race; 20.5 percent of those eligible voters cast their ballots. In the 6th district House race, 22.6 percent of the eligible voters voted.

The canvass, usually held two days after the election, will be held Monday at 11 a.m., due to Board of Election members being out of town. The canvass will be held in the Pitt County Courthouse hearing room on the third floor.

Pay ...

however, will not reflect merit and across-the-board increases until university decisions on how the extra 3 percent will be distributed are approved.

"The reason SPA employees will get their increases earlier is because their raises were across-the-board; there was no paper work to do. We still have to decide where the money designated for faculty merit and related increases will go, and then those recommendations will be sent to the university Board of Governors for final approval," Volpe explained.

Volpe added that he doesn't anticipate an increase in faculty member's checks until September, "but when they do increase, we expect they will be made retroactive to July 1."

Dr. William Bloodworth, chairman of the ECU English Department, said he was pleased that the state decided to give university employees a pay raise, but he said he wished "they'd given us some more."

"Higher education in North Carolina has fallen behind in salaries in the past five to 10 years to the point that it is becoming difficult to stay competitive in the job market," Bloodworth said.

"I think that most people in the university system would agree with that and probably most of those people also would have liked to see university teachers receive the same amount as was provided for our public school teachers."

North Carolina public school teachers recently received an across-the-board 15 percent pay raise.

Dr. Raymond H. Dawson, UNC system vice president for academic affairs, said Wednesday that the $37.8 million faculty raise was decided on in a closed session of the UNC Board of Governors committee on personnel and tenure in early July.

Gunman Was Always 'Talking About Shooting Somebody'

MASSILLON, Ohio (AP) — The man who killed 20 people and injured 20 others in a rampage in California "was always talking about shooting somebody" and once threatened to "take everyone with him" after losing his job, a former co-worker says.

James Oliver Huberty, 41, lived with his wife and two daughters in this northeastern Ohio city for about eight years before moving to Southern California seven months ago. He became bitter when he lost his job with the closing of the Babcock & Wilcox power plant in Canton, said Stark County sheriff's Deputy Terry Kelly, who worked with Huberty.

"He said that if this was the end of his making a living for his family, he was going to take everyone with him," Kelly told the Akron Beacon Journal in a copyright story. "He was always talking about shooting somebody."

Huberty had been fired last week from his job as a security guard at a condominium complex near the McDonald's restaurant where his terror spree unfolded Wednesday afternoon, said San Diego, Calif., police Lt. Paul Ybarra.

"I've killed thousands, and I'll kill thousands more," Huberty yelled as he opened fire in the fast-food eatery just 200 yards from his home in San Ysidro, according to one survivor of the carnage. Huberty was killed by a sharpshooter.

When Huberty lost the Babcock & Wilcox job, which he had held for about 10 years, "he says, 'Hey, I got nothing to live for. I got no job or anything,'" Kelly said.

A friend of Kelly's who visited Huberty's home in Massillon "said he had a gun in every corner of his house loaded," the deputy recalled.

Lee Stanford, who was Huberty's foreman at the plant, described Huberty as a loner who did not associate much with other workers.

Kelly described him as a "radical" who worried about nuclear war and Soviet aggression and a survivalist who bought and hoarded "thousands of dollars of food."

"He talked about the end of the world," Kelly said. "He said he and his family were going to be the only ones left. He talked about going off into the woods."

But Stanford also said Huberty was a willing worker who did not pose any more problems than other workers. He estimated that Huberty earned $25,000 to $30,000 a year at B&W, including overtime.

Massillon Patrolman Donald R. Witmer told the Beacon Journal of an encounter with Huberty.

"I distinctly remember him coming roaring out of the house, carrying a Remington BDL rifle and threatening to shoot every dog in the neighborhood," Witmer said.

In October 1980, Massillon police said they arrested Huberty on a disorderly conduct charge stemming from a neighborhood quarrel. They did not know, however, whether he was convicted.

Witmer said: "I went through a lot of stuff with him. I knew him well. There were incidents when he exhibited a lot of violence, not only toward the neighbors, but also toward the police."

Huberty's California neighbors did not know him as well, but some also detected disturbing signs.

Huberty "was very reserved, quiet," said Ralph Barajas, manager of the Cottonwood Apartments, where Huberty, his wife and two daughters, ages 11 and 14, lived from January to June.

He "seemed like he was always mad at somebody," said Sandra Martinez, assistant manager at the Cottonwood Apartments. "He was always frowning." After leaving Cottonwood Apartments in June, Huberty's family moved to the the Averill Apartments but not many residents there knew him well, one neighbor said. "He wasn't here that long. He was a very quiet person and didn't speak to many people," said the young woman, who refused to give her name.

Another Cottonwood resident said gunfire coming from the Huberty apartment awakened her several times, the Los Angeles Times reported in Thursday editions.

One of the daughters stayed with neighbor Karl Hasely and his wife during the shooting and told them, "Mom and Dad had a big fight," Hasely said.

Huberty "came across to me as cold," neighbor Tim Keller was quoted as saying. "He looked like your average guy except for his facial expressions. I never saw a smile on him."

Hasely recalled that when the Huberty's elder daughter recently came to baby-sit for his children, she "had welts on her face. I asked her what happened and she said her dad hit her. That was the first indication I got that he was violent."

Another neighbor recalled that one night "somebody was trying to steal (Huberty's) motorcycle, and he fired a shot at them to scare them off," the Times said.

Mark Pacheco, 20, a landscaper whose home is adjacent to the Averill Apartments, said he had a run-in last month with a man who fit Huberty's description.

"I was skating with some friends and the guy started shooting at me with his slingshot from that terrace over there," Pacheco said.

"I got mad and started charging toward him. I told him if he wanted to fight come on down and do it. He said, 'Careful, boy,' then he just turned and went inside."

ago from Ohio, Ybarra said. He was fired last week from his job at a security guard at a condominium project, Ybarra said, describing Huberty as "possibly psychotic."

A neighbor told The Los Angeles Times that Huberty's daughter said her parents had fought earlier in the day. Other neighbors said Huberty was a reserved but angry man and recalled incidents in which he had fired guns.

He was "a quiet man who seemed like he was always mad at somebody. He was always frowning," said Sandra Martinez, assistant manager at the Cottonwood Apartments, where Huberty lived.

Another neighbor said Huberty had once fired a shot to scare off someone he thought was trying to steal his motorcycle.

More than two dozen customers and employees were in the McDonald's on busy Interstate 5 when Huberty entered and began "shooting everyone in sight," both inside and outside the restaurant, police Commander Larry Gore said.

Motorists jumped from their cars seeking cover, and the freeway was closed, as was the San Ysidro border crossing to Mexico, one mile away.

Oscar Mondragon, 27, a customer who escaped the gunfire by hiding with a companion under a table and then dashing to safety when the gunman's attention was diverted, said they had just finished their hamburgers when Huberty entered, yelling "Everybody down!"

"I've killed thousands, and I'll kill thousands more," Mondragon quoted Huberty as saying.

He came in and just said, 'Freeze,' and then he just started shooting," said a teen-age employee who hid in the back of the restaurant.

If anybody moved, he just shot them," another employee said.

Seventeen people, including the gunman, died inside the restaurant, and four more were killed outside, Ybarra said. Ten people inside the restaurant escaped without injury.

There are two kids who just rode up outside and they were killed instantly. There was a man and a woman walking up to the door, and they were offed just like that," Nelson said, snapping his fingers.

Off-duty police Officer Juan Echavarria, who lives near the restaurant, was driving by and tried to help three injured youngsters he saw outside.

"I got out of my truck and started to go toward them, and one kid, the one sitting down, he says, 'Please help us,'" Echavarria said. But as he tried to administer first aid, "I heard glass breaking and ... I just started running."

The three boys were later pronounced dead at the scene, lying near their bicycles.

The shooting left the restaurant windows shattered and bullet holes in a nearby fire truck. Bloodied bodies remained outside the restaurant as night fell, and later were wrapped in yellow plastic and carted away.

Among the wounded was a 6-month-old girl who witnesses said was passed to bystanders by her mother, one of the shooting victims, with a plea to "take care of her." The infant was in critical condition after undergoing surgery Wednesday night; the fate of her mother was not immediately known.

Huberty also fired on police and fire vehicles when they arrived at the scene, said police spokesman Bill Robinson. "He continued firing alternately from a rifle and a handgun, reloading one when the other ran out," Robinson said.

After 90 minutes, police sharpshooters were able to get a clear aim at Huberty and fired a total of five times, striking the gunman once, Ybarra said.

Wednesday's rampage was believed to be the worst massacre in a single day by a single gunman in U.S. history.

On Aug. 1, 1966, sharpshooter Charles Whitman killed 16 people and wounded 30 others in a 96-minute sniping spree atop a tower at the University of Texas campus at Austin. The night before, the 24-year-old had killed his mother and wife.

On Sept. 25, 1982, George Banks shot and killed 13 people in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., including five of his children, four mothers of the children and three other people related to a former girlfriend.

Officers Press Hunt For Father-Son Team

BIG SKY, Mont. (AP) — A heavily armed 12-man tactical squad began a helicopter search today in rugged mountains for a father-son team of "mountain men" suspected of kidnapping a woman athlete to make her the younger man's bride, then killing a would-be rescuer.

"They took off at 4 a.m.," said Jo Anne Lane, a dispatcher with the Madison County sheriff's office.

Don Nichols, 53, and his son, Dan, 19, vowed not to be taken alive when they fled into the mountains after the woman, Kari Swenson, 23, was shot and wounded and one of two searchers, Alan Goldstein, 36, was shot to death.

The special weapons and tactics team from Billings, armed with sophisticated weapons and equipment including night-vision goggles and night-vision rifle scopes, moved out by helicopter to search in six suspected hiding places.

A second tactical unit was standing by in Helena, 150 miles north, Madison County Sheriff Johnny France said.

Miss Swenson, a member of the U.S. women's biathlon team, was abducted while jogging Sunday several miles from the ranch where she worked. She was chained to a tree when Goldstein and another searcher arrived at the Nicholoses' camp Monday morning.

Communists Quit Mitterrand Government

PARIS (AP) — The French Communist Party, dissatisfied with the economic policies of the nation's new premier, announced today it is quitting the government of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

The Communists, junior partner in a Socialist-led coalition since 1981, have been urging a change in the government's economic and industrial policy that would focus on growth and reduce unemployment, now at 2.3 million.

But after unsuccessful talks on the employment issue Wednesday with newly appointed Premier Laurent Fabius, the Communists decided to withdraw from the Cabinet. They said they would continue to support the Socialist majority in the National Assembly.

Fabius, a 37-year-old former industry minister with a reputation as a fiscal conservative, was expected to announce a new Cabinet today to replace the one that resigned Tuesday along with Premier Pierre Mauroy.

There were four Communist ministers in Mauroy's 41-member

Cabinet, but the party's value as a political ally diminished after it polled just over 11 percent in the recent European Parliament elections.

In a statement released after a meeting that lasted until 3 a.m. today, the Communist Party Central Committee said the seating of Communist ministers "in this or that ministry...can't constitute in itself a guarantee. We must recall that we are not looking to occupy posts but to participate usefully in the realization of a good policy for France."

The Communist entry into the government after the legislative elections of June 1981 marked the first Communist presence in the Cabinet in 34 years.

The popularity of Mitterrand and his government has been declining steadily, and polls show that if parliamentary elections were held now, the left would be ousted from the National Assembly.

That would not legally affect Mitterrand, however, whose seven-year term runs until 1988.

Legislative elections are scheduled for 1986, but Socialists received only 21 percent of the votes in the European Parliament elections last month.

The Socialists have an absolute majority in the National Assembly without the Communists, but Mitterrand brought them into the government immediately after his election in 1981 in an effort to unite the left.

The Communist presence in the government also was seen as a way of keeping an eye on the unions, particularly the Communist-run General Confederation of Labor.

That was important in a period when France is attempting to modernize its industry, at the cost of tens of thousands of jobs, and carrying out a stiff austerity program that has cut into purchasing power. Fabius was one of the chief architects of the modernization program.

Scramble

TOKYO (AP) — U.S.-designed F-15 Eagle jet fighters added just this week to the Japanese Air Self Defense Force scrambled today against a Soviet armed forces transport plane, a military spokesman said.

The two F-15s sent aloft were among four that had been stationed Monday at Nyutabaru Base in southern Japan.

In the scramble operation, the two F-15s neared a Soviet Ilyushin-62 transport plane which was flying on a northerly course above international waters off Kyushu, Japan's southernmost main island, the spokesman said.

Japan has a total of 40 F-15s, which are manufactured here under license from the United States. Besides the United States and Japan, only Israel and Saudi Arabia have the advanced fighters.

Sandinistas Mark Anniversary

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinistas today celebrate the fifth anniversary of their rise to power, but opposition groups and the Reagan administration used the occasion to assail the ruling junta.

Sandinista officials said they expected 150,000 people to turn out today for a rally marking the anniversary of their overthrow of rightist President Anastasio Somoza in 1979 after a guerrilla war.

However, opponents of the government predicted the crowd would be only a third of that size, and they again threatened to boycott elections scheduled for Nov. 4 unless the Sandinistas ease restrictions on freedom of press and other liberties.

Today's celebration in Managua was to be highlighted by a speech by Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the Sandinistas' junta and their candidate for president in the Nov. 4 elections. Festivities were scheduled for a $25 million redevelopment project under construction on the shores of Lake Managua in front of a mausoleum that will hold the bodies of Sandinista revolutionary heroes.

The anniversary comes as Nicaragua faces growing economic problems, a U.S.-backed guerrilla movement and increasingly strained relations with the United States and the Roman Catholic Church. There are shortages of groceries and some other basic items.

The slogan for the celebration is "Everything for the war front, everything for the combatants" — an indication the two-year war against U.S.-backed rebels is foremost in the minds of the Sandinistas.

The Sandinistas marched into the Managua five years ago, toppling the 42-year pro-U.S. reign of the Somoza family. A half-million people gathered on the first anniversary.

Relations with the United States have declined steadily. The Sandinistas say a U.S. invasion is possible and President Reagan accuses the Sandinistas of exporting revolution to other Central American countries, particularly El Salvador.

In Washington, Reagan said Wednesday the Nicaraguan people are "trapped in a totalitarian dungeon" and urged Congress to approve assistance to the anti-Sandinista fighters.

The Sandinistas also have been at odds with the church, and last week it expelled 10 foreign priests on charges of anti-government activities.

Mental Health Perspectives

Schizophrenia

Schizophrenia, one of the most common and least understood major mental disturbances, is actually a group of disorders characterized by disturbed thinking and emotional barriers that may lead to withdrawal from other people and the real world. Schizophrenia may either appear suddenly with severe symptoms or develop gradually over a long period. It can affect anyone at any age.

The person who is schizophrenic may experience severe and persistent symptoms such as: distorted reality, isolation, disordered thinking, fear, delusions and hallucinations, or numb or inappropriate emotions. Some may be quite rational most of the time.

Authorities suspect that any of the following may contribute to development of schizophrenia: inheritance, social class, family relations, biochemical imbalance, or birth defects.

Treatment for schizophrenia is available through outpatient therapy, partial hospitalization, or inpatient hospitalization. The main types of therapy used to treat schizophrenia are drugs and psychotherapy. The goal of treatment is to return the schizophrenic person to the community as quickly as possible.

If someone you know shows signs of serious mental disturbance, take action to get professional help, accept and support your friend, and stay involved after treatment begins. Your attitude is very important.

Myths and misunderstandings can add to a schizophrenic person's problems. Remember, people with schizophrenia have the same hopes, needs and fears as everyone else.

Cosmonauts Party In Space Station

MOSCOW (AP) — Six Soviet cosmonauts, including the first woman to embark on two space missions, held a party to celebrate the successful docking of a spaceship with the orbiting Salyut 7 station, Radio Moscow said today.

Cosmonaut Svetlana Savitskaya and her two crewmates, Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Igor Volke, linked their Soyuz T-12 spaceship with the orbiting complex and stepped aboard at 11:17 p.m. Wednesday, Moscow Time, the official news agency Tass said.

The three arrivals were "warmly welcomed" by cosmonauts Vladimir Solovov, Oleg Atkov and Leonid Kizim, who have been working aboard the Salyut 7 for nearly six months, Radio Moscow reported on its English-language world service.

Radio Moscow said the Salyut 7 crew brought presents and letters from home for the orbiter cosmonauts.

"After that, the six cosmonauts had a party. In the morning, the cosmonauts will start joint research to explore the natural resources of the earth and test space technology and also conduct some medical and biological experiments," Radio Moscow said.

The report provided no further details about what kind of experiments would be conducted in space.

The mission is part of a space program devoted for the most part to studying the effects of long stays in space, with the ultimate goal of establishing a space station manned by permanent crews who would return to Earth only for brief periods.

As of today, the crew of Solev, Atkov and Kizim was 50 days short of the Soviet-set endurance record of 211 days in space. There was no official word on how long they would remain in orbit.

Tass and Radio Moscow reported that the flight of Soyuz 12 and the docking proceeded normally and on schedule.

Last year two missions were aborted when the complex, largely automated docking maneuvers failed.

Ms. Savitskaya, a veteran test pilot, spent nine days in orbit aboard Salyut 7 in August 1982.

In the past, Soyuz spacecrafts have linked with Salyut 7 after about a day in space. The three cosmonauts were launched into space at 9:41 p.m. Tuesday, Moscow Time.

Protein May Lead To Cancer Growth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists today announced the discovery of a new protein and its possible role in causing a common form of leukemia, and experts hailed the latest "breakthrough" in learning how cancer may be triggered by genes.

The study by researchers from the University of California at Los Angeles shows how a genetic change may cause a common type of leukemia in adults called chronic myelogenous leukemia, or CML. The disease strikes an estimated 10,000 new victims each year in the United States, according to one of the researchers, UCLA microbiologist Owen Witte.

Genes, the basic units of heredity, control characteristics of all living things and direct the growth and development of normal body cells and tissues. But scientists have identified 20 to 30 genes — called oncogenes — that they believe sometimes cause cells to become cancerous.

The UCLA study demonstrated for the first time how a suspected oncogene called "abl" produces a previously undiscovered protein that functions abnormally.

Because such abnormal activity already has been shown to cause a wide variety of cancers in animals, researchers believe the protein may cause the abnormal cell growth seen in human CML patients.

The study by Witte and colleagues James Konopka and Susan Watanabe was published today in the July issue of the journal Cell.

Because the new protein can be detected easily, its discovery may eventually lead to a new method of diagnosing CML, a cancer of the bone-marrow cells that normally produce various kinds of blood cells, Witte said.

The new study "is a very important step forward," said Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist David Baltimore, Witte's former boss and winner of the 1975 Nobel Prize in physiology and medicine for research that set the stage for the discovery of oncogenes. He spoke in advance of publication of the findings.

MIT's Robert Weinberg, another leading researcher of cancer-causing genes, said Witte's study "is one of half a dozen such breakthroughs over the last several years" that have clarified how cancer-causing genes might work.

"We've begun to understand a number of specific, molecular changes that happen inside cells when they become converted from normal cells into tumor cells," Weinberg said. "What Witte's group has done is to identify the 'abl' oncogene as a potentially important player in causing certain kinds of human leukemia."

Previous studies showed that 95 percent of CML patients have an abnormal chromosome — a string of genes — that contains the "abl" gene. Abnormal chromosomes are common in many cancers, so researchers speculated that the abnormal chromosome somehow converted normal, non-cancerous "abl" genes into cancer-causing "abl" genes.

The UCLA study suggests that the abnormal chromosome common in the leukemia patients creates the cancer-causing "abl" gene, which in turn produces the new protein. That protein then acts abnormally and probably helps cause the leukemia.

"Diseases may go down a certain path," Witte said. "What we've done is to pull together certain parts of a pathway so that we better understand the path that leads to one form of human leukemia."

Geoffrey Cooper, an oncogene researcher at Harvard University's Dana Farber Cancer Institute, agreed that Witte's study "opens the potential for a new diagnostic test" for CML. But he added, "A great deal more clinical and scientific work would be required before this could be realized."

Study Says Fathers Pass On Diabetes

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists studying the puzzle of how juvenile diabetes is passed from generation to generation reported today that youngsters are four times more likely to inherit the disease from their fathers than from their mothers.

"The occurrence in the offspring of the fathers is pretty much what we would have expected," said Dr. James H. Warram. "The unexpected finding was that it was so much rarer in the offspring of the women."

Juvenile diabetes usually strikes during childhood and is marked by a chronic deficiency of the hormone insulin, which helps the body use sugar and other carbohydrates. It is also called insulin-dependent diabetes, since victims must take daily injections of the hormone to stay alive. There are about 1 million victims in the United States.

Although experts believe that the disease is inherited, no one knows exactly how. Most victims do not have diabetic parents.

In the latest study, researchers compared the offspring of diabetic parents. To their surprise, they found that 6.1 percent of the children of diabetic men developed the disease by age 20, compared with only 1.3 percent of those with diabetic mothers.

They cannot explain why this sex difference exists. Some genetic defect may be transmitted more often by men than by women, they say. Or diabetic mothers may tend to produce babies who die around the time of birth if they are susceptible to the disorder.

The study, conducted by Warram and colleagues at the Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"The finding of a sex difference in the transmission of IDDM (juvenile diabetes) from parent to offspring is new evidence that can be applied in the effort to understand the role of heritable factors in the origin of IDDM," they wrote.

Sons and daughters of the diabetic men faced an equal risk of getting the disease.

If genes do account for the sex difference, this would make diabetes unique among inherited diseases. No other genetic trait is known to be preferentially transmitted by a father to children of both sexes, although two relatively rare genetic disorders — phenylketonuria and mitochondrial cytopathy — are usually passed on by mothers and affect both boys and girls.

Another possibility is that the sex difference results from some sort of surveillance system in the womb.

Jackson Pledges 'Rainbow' To Live On

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign for the presidency is over, but he vows the "Rainbow" lives on.

"The Rainbow Coalition will not go away. We are here to stay. We shall grow and build," Jackson told his supporters at their own "rainbow convention" two weeks before the main event here.

"Beyond San Francisco" has been the black civil rights leader's cry for the past three weeks as he sought to maintain enthusiasm facing the certain defeat that came Wednesday night on the nomination roll call at the Democratic National Convention.

Now Walter F. Mondale is the Democratic presidential nominee and Jackson is an ex-candidate after a hectic seven months' campaign.

Jackson vowed to build an ongoing political machine to push what he calls "the progressive agenda."

"We will institutionalize the Rainbow Coalition state by state and nationally," he said.

"It's going to be hard," says

Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry, a key Jackson supporter. "The key elements of the rainbow will continue ... and become a viable part of the Democratic Party."

But the major question remains unanswered: What will Jesse do now?

Jackson is on leave as head of PUSH, the human rights group in Chicago that he founded. And he certainly could go home again, as an enthusiastic welcome there two weeks ago demonstrated.

But Mondale and Democratic Party leaders hope Jackson will do in the fall of 1984 what he did in the late spring of 1983 — register as many black voters as possible.

And Jackson says he wants to do that.

"My basic focus this fall has to be part of a massive voter registration drive, a massive turnout and continued energy to expand the Rainbow Coalition to give us sufficient votes to turn out the repressive Reagan regime by the people who have been rejected by it," Jackson said Sunday, before the convention opened. "I'm going to spend my time trying to get 3 million new voters on the books."

But there are other items on Jackson's agenda as well.

The most intriguing one now is the possibility of an independent race for the South Carolina Senate seat held by Republican Strom Thurmond. "I could run a good race in South Carolina," he said Wednesday.

Jackson supporters in his home state have been circulating petitions to get his name on the ballot by the Aug. 1 deadline and Jackson had not rejected the possibility, calling it "a live option."

"I look forward to working with you more in the days to come. I feel the need to come back home," Jackson told the South Carolina delegation Monday. "I've been away in exile. I was just rejected — I didn't have the right to vote. I just had to leave to grow and develop."

"I'm going to move back to South Carolina. I'm going to put most of my presence in the South," he declared Wednesday. Jackson's mother still lives in Greenville.

Walker Solomon, chairman of the Jackson presidential campaign in South Carolina, said he believes Jackson may move back in order to set up a network for a regional voter registration drive, but Solomon thought a Senate race highly unlikely.

"I don't think it's ever been in consideration," said Solomon. "From my understanding of it, he's not interested in the seat. I don't want him to run for it. I think it would be a waste of his time."

"I don't think he's going to" run, said South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley. "The party structure has already been followed in a long and laborious process and has been concluded. I certainly think it would not be consistent with Jesse's unifying speech ... for him then to run as an independent in November."

"I think that is not going to happen so it really is a non-issue."

Asked what would happen with PUSH in Chicago, Jackson replied: "PUSH is a national organization. It is everywhere."

Mondale Buys Acceptance Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Walter Mondale bought a $415 designer suit to deliver his acceptance speech tonight and got a lecture from the store owner on what his stars hold.

Mondale's stars match almost perfectly with Geraldine Ferraro's, said Kurt Gronowski, owner of the Jay Briggs men's store in downtown San Francisco. He said Mondale also bought two identical "lively maroon" ties to go with the Ralph Lauren charcoal grey worsted suit with soft charcoal stripes.

The total bill was about $500.

Gronowski, who founded Jay Briggs 30 years ago, said he was asked Monday to bring a new selection to Mondale's suite at the Meridien Hotel. He took along eight suits and 30 ties.

"Before, we made sort of little side bets of what he was going to buy and the suit that we all figured that he would buy, he did buy," Gronowski said.

The store owner said Mondale wears a size 42 regular and is an easy fit. "He's a 42-inch chest with about a 34-inch waist — a small waist and a big chest."

When Mondale tried on the finished product, Gronowski said, "he looked in the mirror, waved his arms — you could see what he's going to say by the movement. He was smiling."

RAINBOW WILL LIVE — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, shown speaking to the Democratic National Convention Wednesday night, plans unity meetings with his supporters to head off internal party bickering.

However, Jackson says his efforts to create a so-called "rainbow coalition" promoting his philosophies will continue beyond San Francisco. (AP Laserphoto)

Hart Says Cause Will Prevail But Offers Show Of Party Unity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a gesture of unity giving Walter F. Mondale the Democratic presidential nomination by acclamation, Gary Hart pledges to devote "every waking hour and every ounce of energy" toward defeating Ronald Reagan. But Hart says his cause of new ideas for a new generation will prevail "if not now someday."

"There is a time to fight and a time to unite," Hart told cheering delegates to the Democratic National convention. "Our party has made its choice and we must now speak with one voice."

Hart made an unusual decision late Wednesday to dash in a motorcade from his hotel to the convention hall barely in time to interrupt the balloting just as Mondale reached the 1,967 delegate votes needed for the nomination. He called on the delegates to make Mondale their choice by acclamation.

Although facing an uncertain future, the Colorado senator appeared in good spirits in the final moments of a presidential campaign that startled the experts early this year and forced Mondale to run for his political life.

Almost as if on cue, buttons promoting "Hart in '88" went on sale in the hall. At rally for supporters later, there were chants of "Eighty-eight. Eighty-eight. Eighty-eight."

But he must first win re-election to the Senate in 1988 in a conservative state where there has been criticism of his presidential campaign.

He must also retire a $3.5 to $4 million debt accumulated in the presidential drive.

Throughout Hart's earlier prime-time televised speech to the delegates, his theme was conciliatory despite a five-month campaign built principally on his differences with Mondale.

Then there is his talk of more foreign trips — to the Soviet Union to try to get better treatment for Andrei Sakharov and his wife and to South Africa and the "frontline" black states to press for an end to apartheid.

It is clear that Jackson — "the man who wouldn't wait," who raced across the nation with energy that never seemed to be used — will be active for years to come. He put it this way:

"Beyond San Francisco, much more is to be done — there are still more people to be registered, more youth to be inspired, more issues to be raised and a greater sense of consciousness that 'must be heightened.'"

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Trend is 50 to 75 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 52.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 52.25; Wilson 52.00; Rowland 52.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 43.00; Fayetteville 42.00; Whiteville unreported; Wallace 43.00; Spivey's Corner 43.00; Rowland 43.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. The final weighted average is 50.90 cents f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is generally steady and the live supply is moderate for a light to mostly moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,773,000, compared to 1,853,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn slightly lower at mostly 3.76-3.90 in East and mostly 3.92-4.00 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans higher at mostly 6.94-7.00 in the east and mostly 6.93-6.95 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.35-3.40, (new crop corn 2.79-3.23; soybeans 6.03-6.27).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined again today, adding to Wednesday's losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.31 to 1,108.33 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said strength of the economy and talk of possible credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve kept investors wary about the outlook for interest rates.

On Wednesday the government reported that housing starts rose 5.3 percent in June. The figure surprised many analysts who had expected a decline or a flat showing at most.

Brokers also said traders were expecting the Fed's weekly report on credit conditions, due after today's close, to show a large increase in the basic measure of the money supply.

Ramada Inns led the active list, down 1/2 at 6. A 774,800-share block traded at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 11.26 to 1,111.64.

Declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 76.64 million shares, against 82.89 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .51 to 87.25. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .99 at 192.65.

East-West Troop Talks End Again

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Talks between NATO and the Warsaw Pact on reducing troops in central Europe broke for the summer today with no tangible progress. Each side blamed the other for the impasse.

The talks are now in their 11th year.

"We are going home disappointed," said Ambassador Jan Hein Van de Mortel of the Netherlands, speaking for NATO. "We feel the ball is in your court," he said at a news conference, in remarks directed at Warsaw Pact negotiators.

"I think the ball cannot be in our court, because it wasn't thrown by the West," retorted negotiator Krzysztof Stronczynski of Poland, speaking for the Warsaw Pact. He said recent North Atlantic Treaty Organization proposals "lead simply nowhere."

The talks convened in October 1973. Disagreement on troop strengths and ways of verifying any reductions have proved the main obstacles to agreement.

The talks are the only remaining disarmament forum along East-West lines. The Soviets last year broke off two sets of nuclear missile talks with the United States after NATO began deployment of new medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

At Vienna, this year's talks resumed March 16 after a three-month lapse. On April 19, NATO suggested new ways of counting troops and less stress on verification. But the Warsaw Pact rejected the proposals in the latest seven-week round of discussions.

The Western initiative "did not move the negotiations forward and in important aspects even drew them backward," said Stronczynski.

Moscow and its military allies say troop parity exists. The West says it is outnumbered, with 800,000 ground forces in West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg to about 980,000 Pact soldiers in East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

NATO suggested April 19 that the two sides count only combat troops and leave out service forces, in an attempt to reduce the discrepancy.

Van de Mortel termed this "a clear demonstration of Western political will to engage in a major effort in Vienna to resolve the remaining obstacles to an agreement."

Reagan Denounces Nicaraguan 'Sham'

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — President Reagan told a summit of Caribbean leaders today that the American invasion of Grenada stopped a "communist power grab" in the region but warned that the Soviet Union and Cuba still are sponsoring "enormous resources ... undermining our liberty and independence."

In the administration's toughest language yet, the president also denounced November elections planned in Nicaragua as "a Soviet-style sham."

Reagan flew here to join representatives of 15 Caribbean nations and territories at a conference sponsored by the University of South Carolina.

White House officials said in advance that the region's economic problems would be the main topic of the speech and insisted the trip was not designed to blunt Walter Mondale's victory as the Democratic presidential nominee. "We're not trying to steal anybody's headlines or do anything dramatic," one White House official said privately on Wednesday.

But Reagan's speech instead focused heavy criticism on the Soviet Union, Cuba and Nicaragua.

Reagan thanked the Caribbean officials "for your courage and leadership in turning back the communist power grab in Grenada last fall" by supporting the American invasion staged by a force of 7,000. "We can be proud that, thanks to the unity and determination of our democracies, we saved the people of that troubled island, we restored their freedom, we revived their hope in the future and we prevented danger and turmoil from spreading beyond Grenada's shores," Reagan said.

The president's strategists regard the invasion last October as a huge political plus for the president's re-election campaign. Indeed, there had been talk — later scotched by Reagan himself — that he would travel to the tiny island in the weeks before this November's presidential election for an anniversary of the U.S. landing and the fall of Grenada's Marxist government.

The four Caribbean countries that opposed the invasion — Trinidad, the Bahamas, Belize and Guyana — did not send representatives to South Carolina. Cuban President Fidel Castro was not invited.

Reagan said the Marxist control of Grenada "was not an isolated incident. The Soviet bloc and Cuba have been committing enormous resources to undermining our liberty and independence."

"Nowhere is this threat more pressing than in Nicaragua, a country which today marks the fifth year of Sandinista dictatorship," the president said.

Accusing Nicaragua's leftist government of reneging on its promises of democracy, Reagan said the Sandinistas "have worked systematically to establish a dictatorship firmly allied with Cuba and the Soviet Union."

Noting that elections have been called in Nicaragua for November, Reagan said, "We would wholeheartedly welcome a genuine democratic election in Nicaragua. But no person committed to democracy will be taken in by a Soviet-style sham election."

NOTICE

The Greenville City Council, on July 12, 1984, passed an ordinance amending penalties for parking violations effective immediately. Notice is hereby given that all overtime parking fines not paid within 10 days of issuance will increase from $2.00 to $5.00, and if not paid within 30 days of issuance will increase from $5.00 to $10.00. All illegal parking fines not paid within 10 days of issuance will increase from $5.00 to $10.00, and if not paid within 30 days of issuance will increase from $10.00 to $15.00. Furthermore, all violations not paid within 30 days will be subject to civil court action as prescribed by law. This action has been necessitated by the lack of voluntary compliance with established parking rules, regulations, and payments of fines. Please direct questions on this matter to the City Tax Office, located at 205 W. 5th Street.

Watson Sets Sights On Sixth British Open Title

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson arrived at the historic fairway of St. Andrews for the 113th British Open golf championship with his sights set on a record-tying sixth title.

"This place has a special meaning for me," Watson said Wednesday as he prepared to open defense of his title today in the chase for the $65,000 first prize.

"It is the most important place of all to win the Open championship. When people think of golf in the United States they think of Pebble Beach," he said referring to the California golf course. "Over here, it's St. Andrews."

Watson, listed as a 5-to-1 favorite to equal Harry Vardon's 60-year-old record of six British titles, entered the British Open with three 1984 victories, including the Western Open — his last tournament before St. Andrews. He currently leads the PGA Tour's earnings list with $426,959.

"Right now, I'm playing well enough to win. But there are a lot of good people standing in my way," Watson, 34, said.

One of those considered a threat is Watson's playing partner today, hard-hitting Australian Greg Norman, recent winner of the Canadian Open.

Norman has yet to win a major tournament but he lost the U.S. Open last month in an 18-hole playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller and is considered by his peers, including Watson, as being ready to break through here.

Norman has won 31 tournaments worldwide and has been the hottest golfer in the United States in recent months, winning two of his last five starts and coming desperately close to capturing the others.

"I'm a confidence player," Norman said, "and right now my confidence is sky high."

Watson and Norman were scheduled to play alongside West Germany's Bernhard Langer.

Jack Nicklaus, having dispelled British press reports that he could miss the tournament because of illness, said he had gotten over a cold following a good night's sleep and that he played "reasonably well" during his final practice session on Wednesday.

Nicklaus has not won a major title in four years but has had a long-standing love affair with St. Andrews, winning on his last two visits here in 1970 and 1978.

Nicklaus said past experience has shown that current form was not necessarily paramount to winning at St. Andrews.

"In 1970, I had not won a major for three years and did not come here hot by any means. In 1978, I had not played particularly well either," he said.

"A lot of people have suggested that if I would win (a third time) here, I would probably retire from the game," said Nicklaus, 44, nicknamed The "Golden Bear."

"I don't think I'm smart enough to do that. I enjoy playing golf too much."

He then smiled and added: "But I'd like to be able to have the opportunity on Sunday to have that option."

IRS Announces Sale Of Henderson Ring

DALLAS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has scheduled an auction to sell off the 1978 Super Bowl ring of Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the flamboyant former Dallas Cowboys linebacker now imprisoned in California.

Earlier this year, Henderson said he was in such financial trouble that he would be willing to sell the ring — valued at about $5,000 — and two National Football Conference championship rings, to pay off his debts.

Since then, the IRS confiscated Henderson's Super Bowl ring and plans to auction it Aug. 1 at the IRS office in Mesquite in an attempt to recover $156,881 in delinquent income taxes, the Dallas Times Herald reported Wednesday.

Henderson and his former wife,

Wyetta, owe $143,776 in taxes for 1979 and $13,105 for 1980, including interest and penalties, the IRS says.

Henderson's lawyer, Arnie Gold of Los Angeles, refused to comment on Henderson's tax problems.

Henderson, 31, is serving a 4½-year sentence in California after pleading no contest to a charge of sexually assaulting two teen-age girls and then offering them a bribe not to testify against him. Henderson has blamed his problems on cocaine and alcohol.

Blyleven Hurls Tribe Past Kansas City, 2-1

By The Associated Press
Bert Blyleven showed once more why he owns the Kansas City Royals. John Butcher did the same against Baltimore. And Luis Leal showed the California Angels stuff they'd never seen from him.

Blyleven, Butcher and Leal each hurled their teams to victory Wednesday night. The Cleveland Indians got a solid 7 1-3 innings from Blyleven in a 2-1 decision over Kansas City. Butcher posted a six-hitter to guide Minnesota past Baltimore 3-1, while Leal hurled a five-hitter in Toronto's 8-2 shellacking of California.

No pitcher in the 15-year history of the Royals has been more devastating against them than the red-hot Blyleven. The veteran curveball specialist notched his fifth straight victory this season to up his record to 9-3. Blyleven is 23-14 lifetime against KC, including 4-0 this year.

"I've pitched against them many times, and I enjoy pitching in this ballpark," said Blyleven, who struck out six and walked two before yielding to Ernie Camacho in the eighth inning. Tom Waddell came on in the ninth for his third save. "They have so many good hitters, it's always a challenge."

Not many AL batters have challenged Blyleven lately. In his previous start, at Texas, he one-hit the Rangers.

It was the eighth loss in nine games since the All-Star break for the Royals.

Twins 3, Orioles 1
Butcher won his fourth game of the year against Baltimore — clinching the season series 7-5 for Minnesota, the first time since 1976 the Twins have mastered the Orioles. It was his fifth consecutive victory against Baltimore.

"I don't know what it is," said Butcher, who is 18-23 lifetime. "I just throw strikes and they're swinging away, hitting my sinker. I don't do anything differently. I pitch the same way against them as I pitch against any club."

"I like pitching in this park (Memorial Stadium)," said Butcher. "I like the mound, the grass and everything about it."

Kent Hrbek homered as the Twins snapped a five-game losing streak and the Orioles' three-game winning streak.

Blue Jays 8, Angels 2
Leal, 11-2, leads the league in winning percentage. But his record against the Angels was 1-7 — 0-5 in Anaheim — before Wednesday.

The right-hander from Venezuela took care of that streak in style and was helped by Toronto's five-run second inning, in which the Jays bunched four singles.

"After that, I just tried to throw the ball on the corners and keep them from hitting it too hard," said Leal. "My change, slider and especially the fastball were all working. I was able to hit the inside and outside corners with my fastball, and then made them hit the breaking pitch."

White Sox 10, Tigers 6
Greg Luzinski, who is having a rough year, poked four hits, drove in a pair of runs and ignited a three-run fifth again Detroit ace Jack Morris with a leadoff double.

"Once you win everybody forgets what kind of season you had," said Luzinski, who is batting .236. "I just want to contribute to a winning team. People remember you as winners."

Morris no-hit the White Sox April 7 but has a 7.64 earned run average in his last five starts.

"You can't expect a guy to do it every time," Luzinski said. "You've got to give the other team credit. I thought we were just swinging the bat well tonight."

A's 7, Red Sox 2
Oakland, which scored nine runs during a five-game losing streak, jumped to a 5-0 lead in the first inning and cruised past visiting Boston.

Leadoff batter Rickey Henderson walked, Tony Phillips doubled and Dwayne Murphy had an RBI single. Dave Kingman followed with a sacrifice fly, Carney Lansford ripped a single, sending Murphy to third, and Murphy scored on a grounder by Bruce Bochte. Then Mike Heath belted a two-run homer to end Dennis Boyd's pitching day.

Kingman, who leads the majors with 26 homers and 82 runs batted in, connected in the bottom of the seventh, soon after Tony Armas of Boston hit his 25th homer in the top of the inning.

Yankees 3, Rangers 1
New York won its seventh game in eight starts since the All-Star break as Don Baylor homered and Ron Guidry combined with Jay Howell on a six-hitter.

The visiting Rangers' only run came on Ned Yost's home run in the second inning.

Guidry has won two straight decisions to up his record to 8-7 in what has been the worst season of his nine-year career.

Brewers 5, Mariners 2
Ted Simmons had three hits and drove in a pair of runs at Seattle. Don Sutton evened his record at 8-8 as he surrendered seven hits, struck out four and didn't allow a walk in eight innings. Rolie Fingers pitched the ninth to earn his 20th save.

Rain Delays Tournaments

The rain which has delayed baseball tournaments this week forced a number of schedule changes.

Pitt County's American Legion team is still waiting to get the second game of its series with Wayne County for the Area I east title. Schedule conflicts have forced games which were originally slated for Harrington Field to be shifted to Greene Central High School in Snow Hill.

The 16-year old Babe Ruth League Tournament was to be decided today at 2 p.m. with Coastal Plain North playing Coastal Plain South at D.H. Conley High School.

Both Coastal Plain South and Roanoke Rapids were awarded bids to the state 17-18 year old tournament which begins Friday in Jacksonville.

Porter's Slam Powers Cardinals

By The Associated Press
Darrell Porter, tired of arguing, let his bat do the talking.
With two out in the bottom of the 11th inning, Porter belted a grand-slam homer Wednesday night to power the St. Louis Cardinals past the San Francisco Giants 8-4.
The slam, the sixth of Porter's career and his ninth home run of the season, came after a disagreement with San Francisco Manager Frank Robinson.
In the eighth inning, Brad Wellman collided with the St. Louis catcher in front of the plate on an attempted sacrifice bunt. Plate umpire Bob Davidson called Wellman out because of interference, prompting Robinson to argue and play the game under protest.
In the top of the 11th, Johnny Rabb led off with a single and took second on a sacrifice. Manny Trillo then singled and Rabb tried to score, but Porter took the throw from center fielder Andy Van Slyke and tagged out Rabb—twice.
"Frank asked Bob on the play if I had tagged the runner coming and why I tagged him twice," Porter recounted. "I said, 'Frank, sometimes the umpire's going to miss the first tag.' He said, 'You have no business talking to me.'"
"It was really strange," Porter said. "I hate to admit it, but after all that took place, I was a little more contented than I would normally be."

In other NL games, Atlanta nipped Montreal 3-2 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh stopped Los Angeles 5-2, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 7-5, New York downed Houston 3-1 and Chicago defeated San Diego 4-1.
Tommy Herr, whose RBI single in the ninth tied it for the Cardinals, started the 11th with a double off reliever Bob Lacey. Van Slyke then bunted and Lacey fielded it and threw mistakenly to third as Herr stayed at second. George Hendrick followed with an infield hit to load the bases.
Lacey got David Green to pop out and Terry Pendleton to bounce into a forceout at the plate before Porter belted the first pitch for his slam.
Robinson, still testy after the game, said the dispute with Porter had nothing to do with the game-winning blow.
"That had nothing to do with how he hit the ball," Robinson said. "If he hadn't had his catcher's mask on, I would have punched him in the nose. And you can tell him that."
Dave Von Ohlen pitched the 11th inning and won his first decision of the season. Rick Horton started for the Cardinals and gave up Jeff Leonard's 13th home run of the season in second.
Leonard's solo homer was his third of the season off Horton and came in his fourth official at-bat against the St. Louis rookie.
Phillies 7, Reds 5
The last time the Philadelphia

Phillies had swept a three-game series in Cincinnati was July 1956, when the Reds played in Crosley Field.
But Mike Schmidt drove in four runs with a pair of homers and a bases-loaded single to give the Phillies their first three-game sweep in the 14-year history of Riverfront Stadium.
Schmidt's two-run single came during a burst of six straight singles with two out in the third inning off Jeff Russell, 4-11. Schmidt hit solo homers in the fifth and seventh, giving him 20 for the season.
Shane Rawley, 3-1, took a two-hitter and 7-0 lead into the sixth. But the Reds chased him by scoring five times in the seventh, three on Nick Esasky's seventh homer.
Braves 3, Expos 2
Dale Murphy, known for his slugging, won the game for Atlanta with his baserunning.
With two out in the 10th inning, Murphy singled off Bill Gullickson, 6-7. Ken Oberkfell then hit a grounder that Montreal second baseman Doug Flynn reached in short right field but could not hold. When Flynn retrieved the ball and threw to second, trying to get Oberkfell, Murphy sprinted home with the winning run.
Gullickson had a perfect game going through six innings. Gerald Perry stroked Gullickson's first pitch of the seventh into right field for a single.

Gary Carter hit his 17th home run in the first inning to put host Montreal ahead 2-0.
Steve Bedrosian, 6-6, pitched two innings for the victory.
Mets 3, Astros 1
New York managed just three hits, but one of them was a two-run homer by Keith Hernandez that capped a three-run uprising in the fifth inning.
Hernandez smacked his ninth home run of the season with two outs following an error by Houston hurler Nolan Ryan. The error made all three runs unearned.
Ryan, 7-6, went seven innings and gave up all three Mets hits.
Walt Terrell, 8-7, and Jesse Orosco, who got his 19th save, combined on an eight-hitter at the Astrodome.

Pirates 5, Dodgers 2
Larry McWilliams allowed six Los Angeles hits and issued seven walks, yet he improved his record to 6-8 with the help of two double plays and a fine throw by right fielder Doug Frobel.
Jerry Reuss, making his first start for the Dodgers in seven weeks because of elbow problems, retired just one batter as he was roughed up by the host Pirates.
Jim Morrison cracked an RBI double and Tony Pena and Brian Harper had run-scoring singles as Pittsburgh took a 3-0 lead in the first inning.
Pena's single off Reuss, 2-4, extended his hitting streak to 16 games.
The Pirates led 5-0 in the fifth before the Dodgers loaded the bases with two out. R.J. Reynolds singled home two runs, but Steve Sax was cut down by Frobel while trying to go from first to third.

Cubs 4, Padres 1
Rick Sutcliffe pitched a strong six-hitter and helped his own cause with two singles. The right-hander, 6-1, struck out six and walked one.
Chicago took a 3-0 lead in the first inning in chasing San Diego starter Ed Whitson, 10-5.
Bob Dernier led off the Cubs first with a single and scored on Ryne Sandberg's 12th triple of the season. Leon Durham doubled home Sandberg and Jody Davis added an RBI single.
Carmelo Martinez homered, his 12th of the season, for the Padres' run in the seventh.

Johnson Not Concerned By Oquendo Interview

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Whether Jose Oquendo blasted Dave Johnson or not doesn't matter to the New York Mets manager.
The flashy-fielding shortstop denied he had given an interview published here Wednesday which accused Johnson of personal favoritism in his managerial moves, particularly in the Mets' demotion of Oquendo to the minor leagues during the All-Star break.
Johnson, contacted in Houston before the Mets' game with the Astros, said he didn't care whether Oquendo made the comments.
"I'm not angry if he said it or didn't say it," said Johnson. "I can understand the context of anything he said. I have his best interests in mind."
"If Jose said he didn't say it, I believe him. Even if he did say it, it doesn't bother me."
In the interview, published in the Spanish-language El Nueva Dia, Oquendo, now with Tidewater of the International League, was quoted as saying that Johnson was biased in favor of Ron Gardenhire, who played for Johnson at Tidewater last year.
"Johnson has always favored Gardenhire, since spring training, but since he couldn't find any excuse to leave me in the minors he had to use me," Oquendo said.
"But I think he waited too long to send me down, if that's what he planned to do all along, as I believe. Now he has no excuse, because my average has gone from around .180 to around .220."

He also accused Johnson of riding him continuously, and not just about his weak batting.
"If somebody made a bad throw he'd say I could have gotten to the ball," Oquendo said.
"But what bothers me is that he never said the same thing to Gardenhire. He (Gardenhire) and (second baseman) Wally Backman are two of his favorite players."
The shortstop also criticized his new teammates. Oquendo was quoted as saying about the Tides players, "all they're after are individual stats, to bat .300 . . . without caring whether the teams wins or loses."
"There's been a lot of pressure on me, mostly from Johnson," he said.

"If I went 0-for-2 in a game, right away they wanted to change my batting stance. That's why I was a better hitter in Winter League ball (.279) and in spring training, because there wasn't any pressure on me."
Mets batting coach Bill Robinson was also criticized. "If he wanted to help me so much, like they've been saying in the newspapers, he had the opportunity to do his job and he didn't do anything," Oquendo said.

'Publicity Assistant' Aided Garden

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

The obituary pages routinely noted the passing the other day of Morris Ladisky, 88, who was retired for some years from the business of boxing.

His associates might have missed it, though, because they never knew him by the name Morris Ladisky.

To them, he was Mushky Jackson, raconteur, man about town, master of the malaprops, and genuine Broadway character.

If he hadn't lived, Mushky would have to have been an invention of Damon Runyon or Ring Lardner. He was their kind of guy, a court jester complete with a profile that looked like an old glove, a man who massaged the English language in a raspy voice that sounded like two pieces of sandpaper being rubbed together.

Jackson referred to himself as a "Publicity Assistant," for the boxing department at Madison Square Garden. Less kind observers would describe him as the Garden's gofer. He would provide anything you needed, from philosophy to fighters.

Once, sitting in the Garden's boxing office, Jackson was listening to a discussion involving the misappropriation of a rather large sum of cash by some neighborhood ne'er do well.

"He swindled $250,000," one man said.

Always a student of economics, Mushky's ears perked up at the number.

"When did it happen?" Jackson asked.

"Five years ago," he was told. "Ahhh, he's all right then," Mushky decided. "The Statue of Liberty's run out."

Before turning to philosophy, Jackson managed a stable of less-than-outstanding boxers. One of his guys was Stanley Poreda and in 1934, during the depths of the Depression, Jackson escorted Poreda to Chicago for a bout against a young heavyweight named Joe Louis.

They were traveling by air on what might be described as a tight budget and each time a stewardess came by with a meal, Poreda and Jackson sat frozen in their seats.

Finally, the stewardess asked if they wouldn't like something to eat. "It's compliments of the airline," she explained.

"You mean it's free?" said Jackson.

"Yes," she replied.

With that, the manager elbowed Poreda in the ribs and said, "Eat, Stanley, eat!"

Another time, Jackson got an urgent call from a local boxing club in New York. The arena was desperate for a heavyweight to fight a four-rounder that night. It was short notice but the purse was $25 and for that kind of money, Jackson knew where to look.

He rushed over to a local restaurant, which employed a 6-foot-6 doorman. "When's your supper hour?" Jackson asked.

"Eight o'clock," the doorman replied.

"Come with me," Mushky commanded.

The doorman followed obediently, took a quick dressing-room boxing lesson from Jackson and arrived in the ring. One punch later, he was on his way back to the restaurant.

Later that evening, when members of the boxing community rendezvoused at the restaurant for nightcaps, they thought they recognized the doorman.

"Naaah," advised Jackson, "you ain't never seen him before."

For his trouble, the doorman had earned $5. The other $20 went to Jackson. Call it a finder's fee.

Jackson commuted daily from Madison Square Garden to Little Silver, N.J. He rarely, however, paid railroad fares. That was because he knew all the conductors, they liked the fights and Mushky knew where to get tickets.

One of the irritations of his life was another Garden boxing employee, Morris Krasnick, performed similar functions and called himself Mushky McGee. Jackson objected to sharing his nickname with Krasnick and they feuded for years.

"I am the original Mushky," Jackson insisted.

To be sure.

Stars Add Luster To Hunt's Yachting Fund-Raiser

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some famous faces paid $500 each Wednesday night to help North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt fatten his campaign purse for his match against Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in the fall.

Special guest aboard the Lisa Marie Yacht was actor Hal Linden, who said he was helping Hunt raise money because "my overwhelming concern is to bring government into the 20th century."

"I have no intention of telling the people of the state how to vote," Linden said. But he added that the Hunt-Helms race is "probably one of the most important Senate races."

Linden, better known as Barney Miller on the television series by the same name, was among some 50 people — including only a few North Carolinians — who chatted with Hunt as they cruised around the San Francisco Bay.

Host for the party was California Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy.

A number of other celebrities on the yacht, harbored in the foggy bay near some of San Francisco's most exclusive homes, included actor Robert Foxworth of the TV series "Falcon Crest," California Sen. Alan Cranston and New Jersey Sen. Frank Lautenberg.

McCarthy said he had met Hunt several times and has competed with him to lure high technology industries to his state. North Carolina has tried to establish its own Silicon Valley like the one in California.

"North Carolina is one of California's toughest competitors in high technology business," McCarthy said. "What Hunt has done with the Research Triangle Park is phenomenal."

Cranston said he was interested in the race because, "Jim Hunt would make a great senator. I don't think Jesse Helms is a great senator."

He said the importance of the race is heightened because control of the Senate is at stake for Democrats and Republicans.

Guests on board the yacht, which is owned by friends of McCarthy, were served poached salmon, filet of beef, California shrimp and an array of California wines and cheeses.

Hunt attracted the attention of another television star, Bonnie Franklin of the series "One Day At A Time," on the floor of the convention Tuesday. Ms. Franklin went down to speak to Hunt about his upcoming race.

She told WRAL-TV of Raleigh that she thinks Helms' re-election is a national issue because "of the power Jesse Helms has and the negative power I believe he has."

Mondale Gets N.C. Majority

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fifty-three of North Carolina's 88 National Democratic Convention delegates voted with the majority to nominate Walter Mondale for president Wednesday.

Mondale's margin of support grew when four of North Carolina's five uncommitted delegates decided to vote for him.

Losing candidate Gary Hart received 19 votes, including one from state Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery. Jordan, also the party's nominee for lieutenant governor, had been uncommitted and until the last minute planned to abstain from voting.

The other unsuccessful candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, received 16 votes from the North Carolina delegation.

The uncommitted delegates switching to Mondale were Gov. Jim Hunt, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, Congressman Steve Neal and Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt.

In North Carolina's May 8 primary, Mondale led a field of eight candidates with 36 percent of the vote. Hart collected 30 percent and Jackson had 25 percent.

The rainbow of political placards in the delegates' seats turned to a sea of blue Mondale posters as the former vice president captured the party's nomination.

Delegates for all three candidates promised to work for the nominee but predicted Mondale will have to find a way to spark the enthusiasm of minorities and new voters.

Gubernatorial nominee Edmisten introduced Hunt to announce the state's vote. He presented Hunt as the state's next U.S. senator, which brought loud applause and cheers.

Hunt said he decided to support Mondale because he was, "satisfied he will work to reduce the deficit and get moving toward balancing the budget." He said he is convinced Mondale has learned a great deal in the last few years about fiscal responsibility.

Gantt said he thought his vote was symbolic because Mondale was certain to win the nomination.

Neal said he supported Mondale because "it is time for us to unify and I think Mondale offers us the best chance of winning."

IN THE STATE

Jordan said he had planned to abstain from voting but none of the other delegates was doing so.

"There were no uncommitted votes and I was leaning toward Hart," Jordan said.

Jordan, state Administration Secretary Jane Patterson and state Rep. Charles Evans of Nags Head were the highest elected officials to go with Hart.

Mondale attracted the support of a number of top state officials — Hunt, Edmisten, Rep. Robert Hunter of Marion, former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, former Gov. Terry Sanford and Congressmen Steve Neal, Charlie Rose and Robin Britt.

The top elected official voting for Jackson was Rep. Annie B. Kennedy of Winston-Salem.

Frances Cummings, a Robeson County teacher and black delegate for Mondale, said Tuesday she would vote for Jackson on the first ballot as a symbolic show of support for his campaign themes. The convention's Black Caucus passed a resolution urging minority delegates to make the gesture.

But Mondale campaign leaders in the state returned time and again to speak with delegates in an attempt to hold their votes.

Mondale delegate Almetta Armstrong of Candor was replaced by Mondale alternate Nancy Neal of Hamlet. Ms. Armstrong, who is black, had raised questions in delegation meetings about how Mondale could better appeal to minorities.

"I cast my vote with my pledged candidate," Ms. Cummings said. "I still reaffirm my commitment to Jesse Jackson."

She said she realized Mondale "made my ticket here" and that she had made a commitment to support him.

Hart supporters were concerned Mondale could not maintain enthusiasm among some of the new voters Hart attracted.

"I have no problem with Walter Mondale," said Kirsten Nyrop of Raleigh, a Hart delegate. "It's just going to be so tough in November. Getting voters to see that Mondale is still a viable alternative is going to be a real trick."

Evans said he'll continue to work for Mondale as hard as he worked for Hart but he was not sure whether new voters would feel the same way.

Methodists Pick First Black Bishop

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Ernest W. Newman, the first black bishop elected by the United Methodist Church's Southeastern Jurisdiction, says the milestone doesn't impose any special role on him.

But Newman, a Deland, Fla., district superintendent elected Wednesday night, said he was determined to follow the church's policy of integration and strengthening local black churches.

"I don't like to think in terms of a particular role in light of the fact that I'm the first ethnic elected bishop in the conference — it's historic, but it doesn't give me any specific responsibility other than what the office calls for," he said.

Newman recalled his own struggles to integrate the church: from 1972 to 1977 he was pastor of an all-white, 2,200-member church in Plantation, Fla. And he said he would be happy to serve in racially conservative Mississippi if he is assigned there.

Newman, 56, a native of Kingstree, S.C., and a 1965 graduate of Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, said the election of a black bishop was a "long expected thing" among southeastern delegates.

Blacks See Little Change In Numbers For Legislature

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — If black North Carolinians hoped this year's legislative redistricting would instantly increase their numbers in the General Assembly, they may end up disappointed.

No black candidate finished first in Tuesday's primaries in seven House and Senate districts. The elections came two months late because legislators redrew the districts in March upon orders of federal judges who ruled that the previous reapportionment plan diluted minority voting strength in violation of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Ironically, the only black who emerged Tuesday with a chance of winning must rely on the runoff system decreed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson as racially discriminatory.

Two districts were seen as offering blacks an opportunity to boost their numbers in the Legislature.

Veteran white incumbent J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, overwhelmed two black opponents in the 2nd Senate District. In the 6th Senate District, R.L. Martin led a field of four candidates, while black consultant Shelly Willingham finished a distant second and called for an Aug. 14 runoff.

The 6th District for many years was represented by Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, who died in May. As altered by the Legislature this year, the district includes most of Edgecombe County, six townships in Pitt County, three townships in Wilson County — including the town of Wilson — and one Martin County township.

Martin, a white 71-year-old Pitt County commissioner, received 47 percent of the vote. Willingham got 31 percent, followed by John D. Costible with 20 percent and Vernon Morton with 2 percent.

Harrington, meanwhile, said he was pleasantly surprised at his strong victory in the 2nd District. The Legislature altered the district's borders to the extent that it was over 60 percent black.

Harrington received 57 percent of the vote, while Ahoskie attorney William R. Lewis got 26 percent to 17 percent for the Rev. John B. Moore of Weldon.

"It appears that I got a good 40 to 50 percent of the black vote," said Harrington. "It made me mighty happy."

The sprawling but sparsely populated 2nd District is bordered on the north by Virginia and stretches west to Vance County, south to Martin and Bertie counties, and east to Gates County.

Harrington, who has been in the Legislature for 22 years, said he campaigned vigorously in Halifax and Warren counties, which were added to the district this year. "This has been an educational process for me," he said. "Most of my appeal was to blacks. I had to get in there and convince them of what I had done for the district and ... that I have always treated blacks and whites the same."

Harrington said most of his constituents — black and white — didn't base their choice on race.

"You've got blacks and whites who will definitely vote on account of color, but the growing concept is ... who can do the job," he said.

Willingham said he would emphasize experience and geography, not race, in his runoff campaign. He said his success would depend on getting more votes from Edgecombe County whites.

"I'm going to ... tell them it's (Edgecombe's) turn to get someone in the Senate," he said.

Twister Overturns Rodanthe Trailers

By The Associated Press
A tornado flipped three trailers at a Rodanthe campground, injuring three people, and two water spouts were sighted as rough weather hit the state for the third consecutive day.

The spout sounded like a "big bang" when it struck, said Eivin Fowler of North Huntingdon, Pa., one of those slightly injured at the KOA campground. Fowler's wife, Lbis, also was injured, but their daughter, Sharon, was not hurt. The name of the third person injured was not known.

Elma Twyne, dispatcher for the Dare County Sheriff's Department, said two water spouts were reported in Pamlico Sound.

Gaston County officials cleaned up

Wednesday after Tuesday night storms knocked out power in Dallas and caused a Gastonia water line break.

Meanwhile, the Dallas Police Department logged about 38 complaints about power outages and full service was not restored until 9 a.m., said Town Clerk Nick Vlaservich.

The cold front whose eastward movement prompted Wednesday's storms was expected to be off the coast today, making way for high pressure from the Midwest and clearing skies, the National Weather Service reported.

A few showers may linger on the coast, but otherwise skies should be sunny through Friday with high temperatures in the 80s and lows in the 50s and 60s.

Farmers Seeking Talks On Damages

By The Associated Press
Farmers whose tobacco fields were apparently damaged by contaminated fertilizer are seeking a meeting with W.R. Grace & Co. officials and the firm's insurance carrier to discuss damage settlements.

Copies of the letter were sent to CNA Insurance Co., state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and the state attorney general's office.

If they do not receive a response, the farmers say they'll ask Ingram to hold hearings on the matter.

Grace voluntarily removed three of its fertilizers from the market and is working to settle with farmers. The company said claims would be settled after the market opens, when farmers can determine if they'll be penalized in the marketplace for damaged leaf.

Grace officials said the company could buy newspaper advertisements later this week to explain its procedures to farmers and would meet with dealers to explain the settlement process.

Meanwhile, Moore County tobacco growers say they have discovered a problem they believe is associated with the tainted fertilizer, which tobacco maturing in one week rather than three or four, according to the leader of a grower's committee.

Moore is one of about 20 North Carolina counties where growers using Grace fertilizer reported damage such as stunted growth and rolled and curved leaves.

Ernest Harris' group was formed last week because of dissatisfaction with Grace's efforts to settle the more than 800 claims filed for fertilizer damage.

State agriculture officials toured tobacco fields near Vass in Moore County early this week to see leaf affected by the ripening problem.

Harris said 28 of his 35 acres of tobacco — all fertilized with Grace products — show the ripening problem.

Raleigh Returns Check Uncashed

RALEIGH (AP) — A $12,000 check from Red Springs to Raleigh for disaster aid given the tornado ravaged town has been returned uncashed as a gesture of good will by the Raleigh City Council.

Raleigh received the check from Red Springs as payment for volunteers and equipment the city sent to help remove debris after the storms hit in March.

Red Springs officials felt obliged to pay Raleigh for its assistance after the town received federal disaster relief funds, said Dempsey E. Benton Jr., Raleigh city manager.

Council members voted Tuesday to return the check contingent on whether the federal government can reclaim the unspent money.

Airport Losing Service By Jets

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Negotiations with two jet carriers have left Smith Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem with no real prospect for jet service, airport manager William B. Rankin II said Tuesday.

Eastern Airlines notified him this week that it was no longer considering jet service to Winston-Salem, Rankin said.

New York Air also decided recently it would not serve the airport. Smith Reynolds have been trying to replace Piedmont Airlines, which topped serving the airport last fall.

Brothers in Crime

On July 21, 1873, Jesse James staged the world's first train robbery in Adair, Iowa. The notorious James Gang went on to rob six more trains, three stage coaches and 11 banks. The haul from this first train hold-up was about $3,000. Even today, the average bank robbery still nets only about $3,000. By comparison, Al Capone made $105 million in 1927. His business card identified him as a "Second Hand Furniture Dealer."

DO YOU KNOW — Which former member of his gang shot and killed Jesse James?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Charles Lindbergh made the first solo trans-Atlantic flight in 1927.

Clay Sheriff May Give Up His Post

ASHEVILLE (AP) — In an ongoing probe of vote buying in western North Carolina, a federal grand jury has subpoenaed an undisclosed number of bank records.

Meanwhile, Clay County Sheriff Howard Barnard, who has remained in office despite his vote-buying conviction last year, may step down from his $18,000-a-year job today, officials said.

A confidential letter obtained by the Asheville Citizen newspaper said that no vote-buying indictments were handed down during the July term of the grand jury, but the investigation is continuing.

Heading the vote-buying investigation, U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer declined comment Wednesday, citing U.S. Justice Department regulations. "We don't talk about investigations," he said.

But a letter Brewer sent to people who were interviewed by the FBI and whose bank records have been seized, provides details of the probe.

The subpoenas grew out of allegations made by a "confidential informant highly placed in one of the political parties," according to the letter.

The unnamed informant saw a political campaign official handling "large sums of cash money and checks made payable to third parties" which were not reported as required by federal law. The political campaign and the official were not identified.

In the letter, Brewer said his inquiry is focusing on whether unreported campaign funds were used for vote-buying. "This investigation has implicated people in both political parties," Brewer said. "Neither party will be immune from this investigation or from prosecution."

Several people, including Barnard and other Clay and Cherokee county officials, have been indicted and convicted on vote-buying charges in U.S. District Court from the 1982 elections.

Barnard, 44, who is free on bond and has continued his sheriff's duties pending disposition of his appeal, refused to say Wednesday whether he planned to resign. He faces a 30-month prison sentence, a 30-month suspended sentence and a $3,000 fine.

"There are indications he will resign tomorrow," George Anderson, county manager and chairman of the county's Democratic Party, said Wednesday.

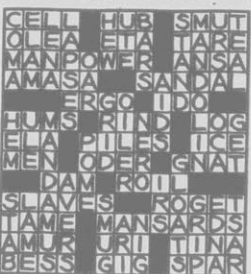

Barnard's September vote-buying conviction was upheld by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on July 9. The two weeks in which he had to file a petition with the Court of Appeals for a re-hearing end Friday. Barnard would not say Wednesday whether he will file for a re-hearing.

Barnard's refusal to resign pending his appeal set off a controversy because of a state law prohibiting convicted felons from voting or holding public office.

Scientists Called In To Study Whale

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Scientists from the Smithsonian Institution have been called in to examine a whale that washed ashore at the Emerald Isle Fishing Pier last weekend.

Several fishermen spotted the 17-foot, one-ton whale at 7 a.m. Sunday, said Tim Handsel, aquarium director for the Marine Resources Center at Pine Knoll Shores.

With some teamwork, the whale was pushed back into the water, where it swam around in the breakers before beaching itself again.

The fishermen were unable to push what they believed was a porpoise back into the water and contacted the Marine Resources Center.

"Having a whale wash ashore is not an unusual event," Handsel said. "We get at least one whale a year that washes up somewhere on the North Carolina coast."

Terry Pollock, education director of the center, said the whale was a juvenile male of the beaked variety and it could be a rare type.

"We won't know that until the jawbone is dissected for a positive identification," Ms. Pollock said.

The whale, which died shortly after the marine researchers arrived at the scene, was trucked to Carteret Quick Freeze, a seafood packing house in Beaufort for storage.

"Depending on what kind of whale it is, the men from the Smithsonian might just do some tests or decide to preserve the skeleton and put it on display. It's just really hard to say at this point," Ms. Pollock said.

The reasons for the whale washing ashore are unknown, but Ms. Pollock said the whale did not die a natural death. The whale was relatively young, she said, and didn't die from old age or exhaustion while swimming against currents.

There were no wounds on the whale, leading staff at the center to theorize the whale could have suffered from an inner ear infection that scrambled its sense of direction.

Wreck Leaves 5 Hospitalized

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A head-on collision on N.C. 65 between Rural Hall and Bethania that injured 11 people left five of them remaining in hospitals Wednesday.

The wreck occurred when a car driven by Francis X. Bryan III, 17, of King, apparently went out of control, crossed the center line and hit a van driven by Allen Grey Porter of East Bend, the state Highway Patrol said.

The van was carrying nine passengers en route to work at an R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. plant, the patrol said.

Bryan was in satisfactory and stable condition at Forsyth Memorial Hospital Wednesday.

Three of Porter's passengers were treated for injuries at Forsyth and released, a hospital spokesman said. Porter was in satisfactory condition Wednesday at Baptist Hospital with leg fractures and facial lacerations, a hospital spokesman said.

Six of Porter's passengers also were taken to Baptist. Three passengers were treated for minor injuries and released but three others were admitted, the spokesman said.

Cabooses Get Cut

GREENSBORO (AP) — Southern Railway has joined a movement to derail the rear addendum to freight trains — the little red caboose.

A growing number of railroads has begun phasing out the trailing cars in lieu of a 35-pound device that includes a warning light and brake tester.

The switch is evident in Greensboro, where southbound freights drop off cabooses required by Virginia law and northbound trains pick up the trail cars before heading back to the Commonwealth.

No poems, stories or songs are likely to tout its replacement — called an "electronic caboose." But railroad owners were attracted to the device because it's cheaper, requires far less service than a caboose and doesn't need an engine to get it from place to place.

"A caboose will run $70,000 to $80,000, said Bob Auman, spokesman for Norfolk Southern Corp., parent company of Southern and Norfolk & Western railroads. "These devices cost less than one-tenth of that."

For years railroad lobbyists have been pushing for an end to cabooses, contending the crossover could save the railroad industry $400 million, a year without compromising safety.

"We always point to the excellent safety record that the Florida East Coast railroad has had for a decade without cabooses," says Auman.

TV Images May Not Be Full Story

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Network television photographed the Democratic Party as mostly black Tuesday night and decidedly blonde and brunette Wednesday night.

TV tells stories through pictures, and the predominant people images during the speeches of the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Sen. Gary Hart the past two nights emphasized each politician's major support but also suggested, once again, the enormous influence and power of the roving TV eye.

To veteran CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite, the camera shots pointed up the potential of TV to inform and, possibly, to mislead.

During the Democratic convention, TV focused on black faces during Jackson's impassioned address Tuesday night, then concentrated on female faces the next night during Hart's speech. Cronkite wondered out loud Tuesday night whether the TV directors' choice of reaction shots, while newsworthy, might not be telling living-room viewers the full story.

"We in the networks," said Cronkite, "are inclined to focus — and I think we have, that's where the story was — on the black delegates and their emotional reaction to their leader, Jesse Jackson ... But you would have thought, sitting at home, that 95 percent of the delegates to the Democratic convention were black, instead of 18 to 19."

Cronkite said the dominant image of cheering, crying blacks might be construed differently in different parts of the country. In some places, he suggested, the TV pictures could even have hurt the Democrats.

"I wonder," said Cronkite, "if in Texas, in the southern part of the United States and elsewhere, whether the reaction (might be): Have they taken over the party?"

Tony Verdi, the director who selects which pictures get on the air during NBC's convention broadcasts, said he doesn't take lightly that responsibility.

"Basically, we're trying to advance the story, not editorialize," he said before Hart's speech Wednesday night. "If Hart's talking, and one delegate is dozing off, I won't give you that shot. I know there are 8,000 delegates, and most of them are watching that speech."

He said he had an advance copy of Hart's comments, "but I'm purposely not going to read it. It would be easy to do cutaways of Indian faces when he's talking about Indians. But that would take away from the spontaneity. If I'm too slick, that's not good."

Asked about Cronkite's concerns that certain pictures don't tell a full enough story, Verdi, who has covered conventions for the past 20 years, said:

"I tried particularly hard not to overbalance the coverage. A lot of blacks had waited a long time for that speech and there were a lot of good tears. But there also were a lot of white people moved and we showed a lot of those faces, too."

Hart's speech Wednesday night was originally scheduled for 8:30 p.m. EDT, 30 minutes before ABC, CBS and NBC were to begin their convention coverage. It's no longer any surprise that Hart didn't appear on the podium until several minutes after 9.

Whenever Hart's speech was interrupted by applause, the TV coverage, monitored here on NBC and ABC, would break away for reaction shots from the delegates. There was an abundance of pictures of young females and bearded males. Only a handful of the photographed delegates were black.

And it wasn't until 15 minutes into the speech that NBC showed a subdued, cigar-chomping delegate. That image, which presumably better personifies the support for nominee Walter F. Mondale, should get better play tonight.

In contrast to the full coverage of Hart's speech, each network cut in and out of the address by two-time candidate George McGovern. There were hardly any reaction shots, probably out of courtesy, since there seemed to be limited interest in the arena.

As Verdi said, presidential candidates are entitled to their dignity. ABC's Sander Vanocur, though, found irony in the fact that McGovern's acceptance speech in 1972 came close to 3 o'clock in the morning, while his concession speech Wednesday night was in prime time.

Chuck Connors Gets 'Star' in Sidewalk

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chuck Connors, the fast-shooting Lucas McCain in "The Rifleman" television series and the star of more than 35 motion pictures, has received a star in Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

Connors' star was unveiled Wednesday in the sidewalk outside the Paramount Theater on Hollywood Boulevard in noontime ceremonies sponsored by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

"People can walk all over me now," the square-jawed, 6-foot-5 actor quipped to family members and celebrity onlookers that included "Rifleman" co-stars Johnny Crawford, Patricia Blair and Joan Taylor, plus Los Angeles Lakers coach Pat Riley.

Connors, 60, who most recently costarred in "The Yellow Rose" on NBC-TV, was the 1,783rd celebrity to be honored in the Walk of Fame. His star was placed between those previously dedicated to Pearl White and George Gobel.

Born in New York City, Connors' starred as "The Rifleman" from 1958 to 1963. He has had numerous TV guest-starring roles, and won an Emmy nomination in 1976 for his part in TV's "Roots" mini-series.

Theater Owners Say New Film 'Rip-Off'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Eddie Murphy's billing as "strategic guest star" in "Best Defense" is a studio ploy to disguise his minor role, say disgruntled theater owners who claim they were led to believe Murphy was a full-fledged co-star.

In the Paramount comedy scheduled to open Friday, Murphy briefly portrays a soldier who field-tests a tank developed by an engineer played by Dudley Moore, the main character.

"It's a rip-off," an executive with a large Midwestern theater chain told The Los Angeles Times.

"It was quoted to me as an Eddie Murphy-Dudley Moore movie," added the executive, who asked not to be identified by name. "But Murphy's in it for about 15 minutes, and it's obviously a secondary story line."

The Times said other theater owners who booked the film say Paramount's description of the film exaggerated Murphy's role in order to drum up buyer interest.

A Paramount "bid letter" sent to exhibitors early this year began:

"Dudley Moore and Eddie Murphy — two of the screen's hottest and funniest comic giants — join forces...." But the two actors share no scenes in the film.

Despite the criticisms, a Paramount spokesman said the studio has been "extremely meticulous" not to overstate Murphy's role.

Meanwhile, the district attorney's office Wednesday said that Murphy will not be charged in connection with a bar fight in which he was slightly hurt. Murphy's manager, Robert Wachs, said Murphy was caught in the middle Saturday when a woman being pursued by a bar patron tried to hide behind the 23-year-old entertainer.

Tour Opens

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Former Pink Floyd bass guitarist Roger Waters treated fans to a melange of Floyd hits dating back to 1968 and a one-hour multimedia presentation of his new album as he opened his first solo North American tour this week.

Waters' Hartford shows Tuesday and Wednesday nights were his first in North America since Pink Floyd's last tour.

Board Overruled

DALLAS (AP) — The blood, decapitation and general mayhem contained in the newest Arnold Schwarzenegger movie "Conan the Destroyer" is suitable for children under age 16, a jury said in overruling a city movie board.

"It was nothing compared to 'Ben Hur,'" Pat Chancey, one of the 12 jurors, said after the panel voted 10-2 Tuesday to overrule the Motion Picture Classification Board's rating of "not suitable" for children under 16.

Opening lead: Seven of ♦.

Today, we are going to offer a piece of advice that might seem gratuitous to a number of our readers. It is this: when playing a slam contract, count your tricks to see whether you have 12. If you think we are harping on the obvious, consider declarer's play on this hand.

Although North has a very fine hand opposite partner's opening bid, his decision to jump shift is debatable — it takes up too much bidding space. However, no damage was done. South showed his second suit and then cue-bid his ace of diamonds. North needed to hear no more.

With only 10 tricks in fast winners, declarer went after the clubs. He won the opening lead in dummy and finessed the queen of clubs, losing to the king. West returned another trump, declarer won, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club.

When the suit did not break evenly, declarer found that, as the cards lay, he had no way of coming to a 12th trick.

Had declarer followed the advice given in the first paragraph, he could have claimed his slam after the first trick. He has six spade tricks, two hearts and a club, for a total of nine. And there is no way he can be prevented from scoring three diamond tricks to bring his bag up to the required dozen.

Declarer should win the opening lead and first cash the ace of diamonds. Now he draws as many rounds of trump as is necessary to exhaust the opponents' supply, ending on the board, and leads the queen of diamonds from the table. When East does not cover, declarer simply discards a club. West wins the king of diamonds, but that is the only trick for the defenders — there are just enough diamond and heart winners in dummy to take care of the rest of declarer's losers.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy, send $1.75 to "Goren Four-Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make check payable to Newspaperbooks.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Early part of the day is good for studies, looking into new business and personal relationships and for discussions to bring a new accord with other persons.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy pushing your talents and making fine progress during the daytime. In the evening a problematical affair at home arises.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An advisor can give you fine ideas in the morning on how to handle that financial affair so follow it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good pal assists you to gain an aim that is vital to your welfare but be careful later not to spend too much money. Be happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Contact experts who can advise you about your present financial status, and later avoid one who is depressing.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You get many fine thoughts how to improve your personal advancement in the morning, but be patient in the face of some limitation later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make right arrangements for weekend activities some time during the day with your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A partner has a fine idea that will help you gain your cherished wishes. Steer clear of a higher-up who could be irate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) One of power will help you in some service work you want to do, but later avoid that person who is greedy. Be of assistance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are more broad-minded and can go after your aspirations and gain them easily. Do something thoughtful for your mate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Talk over with family ties just how best to handle joint matters in the days ahead. Cheer up a depressed partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Early handle that communication with an associate with whom you want to have more contact in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get your environment beautified in some way and feel happier in it. Then be happy in the company of your wife.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will know how to improve natural talents so be more than encouraging in this during early life. One who will have a dynamic quality which can be retained throughout the lifetime if the health habits are good and plenty of sports are indulged in.
