East Presents Purple Heart To Area Veteran

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Sen. John East presented a Purple Heart Award and plaque Friday to a 90-year-old Army veteran from Bear Grass who was wounded in action during World War I.

William Ashley Brown, who began serving in the Army in 1917, was wounded on Sept. 3, 1918 in Belgium and was hospitalized until the end of the war. The Purple Heart Award, a pendant, was given to the man during a press conference in East's Greenville office.

"It is the pleasure of my office to pursue this matter of awarding the Purple Heart after, to my calculations, 66 years. The bureaucracy has been too long and negligent on this matter," he said.

Brown, who drove himself from his home in Martin County to accept the award, said he "appreciated the occasion and I was proud to serve my country and trying to do what I could."

Following the presentation, East said he called the press conference because he has "been home for two weeks and during this time I have been campaigning for Sen. (Jesse) Helms and the president. And I intend to do this down to the wire until November for these two important races."

East said the key issues when the Senate resumes Monday from its three-week recess will be the national deficit, foreign policy and defense spending.

"These three things are the prominent matters we will be facing. Others will crop up but those will be the main ones," he said.

East praised Reagan for his "commendable record" and cited figures that indicated inflation, interest rates and unemployment had been lowered during the President's reign.

"The President has helped us out of the recession we were in during (Jimmy) Carter's administration. I for the life of me don't see how Mondale can make much of that. The President is strong on economic and defense issues and has also had strong, resolute leadership on foreign issues," East commented.

The principal cause of the national deficit, East asserted, is the "spending of the Mondale types who represent the extreme left wing of the Democratic Party. They started

Miss America Ponders Request To Resign

By ROBERTWADE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — One reigning Miss became a Mrs. One contestant was a mother, and another posed for a statue. And now nude photos of Miss America will be published in a men's magazine. The latest revelations have contest officials scrambling to protect the pristine Miss America image.

Pageant officials were ready to talk Saturday to callers about their unprecedented decision to ask the reigning Miss America, Vanessa Williams, to abdicate. They also were keeping in close contact with the contest's four corporate sponsors — Gillette Co. of Boston, American Greetings Corp. of Cleveland, Pillsbury Co., of Minneapolis and Beatrice Foods Co., of Chicago — about the action, said Albert A. Marks Jr., executive director of the pageant.

Marks said public sentiment about the decision to ask Miss Williams, 21, of Millwood, N.Y., to step down was "98 percent" in support of pageant officials.

"I've gotten a number of Mailgrams and a number of telephone calls, most of them supportive," he said.

"I did get two or three telephone calls from people who said, 'What right have you to do this to a woman who was only modeling?' My answer was it would be very nice for you to reserve judgment until you have had a chance to see these pictures for yourself. Then say if we made the wrong decision."

Miss America officials said they asked Miss Williams, the first black woman to wear the crown, to be the first ever to give up her title because the photographs of her in intimate positions with another woman, to appear in the September issue of Penthouse magazine, dashed the Miss America image of a wholesome, "ideal," American woman.

They will allow her to keep the approximately $125,000 she has made so far in personal appearance fees, but have canceled all her public appearances on behalf of the contest.

Miss Williams, who refused to talk to reporters Friday, could not be located Saturday for comment despite attempts to reach her at her parents' home or through her spokesman. But the spokesman has said Miss Williams will hold a news conference Monday in New York City.

It was not the first time the 63-year-old contest has been rocked by the actions of either its contestants or winners, although it surely is the most serious scandal, Marks said.

Pageant observers say the incident reflects again that the contest is short on rules that would prevent such adverse publicity.

Marks said Friday that the latest incident would "add five pages" to the contract each Miss America contestant signs upon reaching the national finals.

Officials explained that they thought Miss Williams violated the provisions in her contract that she has "not been involved in any act of moral turpitude" and promised not to conduct herself "in a manner which, in the opinion of the Miss America pageant, does not uphold and maintain the dignity and the honor of the title Miss America."

Frank Deford, author of the book, "The Life and Times of Miss America," said the shock expressed by pageant officials last week over word the photographs is nothing new.

"They have always been sort of surprised," when faced with compromising situations and no rules to cover them, Deford said.

But, he added, "Where do you draw the line? You could make too many rules. You could end up with nobody being eligible."

Some of the past scandals included one in 1935, when Henrietta Leaver, Miss Pittsburgh, was chosen Miss America. Soon afterward, a sculptor for whom Miss Leaver said she had posed in a swimsuit unveiled a statue of her in the nude.

Miss Leaver maintained she always wore a swimsuit and that her grandmother was present at all studio sessions.

But the damage was done and Miss Leaver, embarrassed by the display, eloped with her childhood sweetheart and failed to return to crown her successor the next fall.

She did not, however, resign. Barbara Jo Walker, Miss Memphis, Tenn., and Miss America 1947, came to Atlantic City seeking the title with an engagement ring on her finger. She married in the month of June during her reign.

Sixty years ago, Mildred M. Prendergast, the wife of an attorney and mother of a 7-month-old baby, came here as Miss Boston. The pageant had no rules at that time prohibiting married women from entering, but

County Planning To Add Mental Health Building

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A building to provide additional space for programs of the Pitt County Mental Health Center is being planned for by the county administration.

The Pitt County Commissioners have approved the retention of an architect to design a facility of about 10,000 square feet to provide space for the Willie M day treatment program for aggressively emotionally disturbed youth, the Partial Hospitalization program for emotionally disturbed adults and an education-rehabilitation area. Included in the education-rehab area will be classroom and office space for several programs of the center including the education program for driving-while-impaired offenders and some vocational rehabilitation clinics.

The new building will be located between the Mental Health Center which faces the Stantonburg Road and the Gaskins-Leslie Building on the Pitt County Memorial Hospital grounds. A breezeway will connect it with the Mental Health Center.

"It's going to be a simple rectangular building, I understand," Dr. Stephen Creech, mental health center director said. "Ralph Hall, the hospital engineer did a lot of preliminary work on it. Its design is going to be similar to that of the Gaskins-Leslie Building the hospital added recently."

Some $118,000 of the money for the building is coming from the State of North Carolina as part of a construction allocation to the county for its acceptance of responsibility for the Willie M program which serves several eastern counties. The county plans to provide the remainder of an approximate $400,000 the building is expected to cost.

Once completed, the mental health center expects to be able to vacate the A wing of the county office building and the old nurses home annex on the county office building grounds it now occupies, as well as the Pitt County Boys' Club which houses the Willie M program a portion of the year.

Hite is being paid $9,840 for the design work for the building.

Security Plan Extension Doubtful In Wake Of Clash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanese troops and Druze Moslem militiamen Saturday clashed in the worst fighting to hit the Beirut area in two weeks, dampening hopes of extending a security plan from the capital to the Shouf mountains.

The two sides battled with tanks, motars and machine guns for seven hours at positions near Beirut International Airport and in the Shouf mountains, Druze radio said.

No casualties were immediately reported.

The fighting began before dawn about 1 mile from Beirut's newly reopened airport on the southern edge of the capital and spread quickly into the Druze-controlled mountains, Christian Phalange radio said.

Soldiers and Druze militiamen face each other over an 8-mile front line in the mountain region.

A truce was arranged after seven hours of fierce clashes but scattered sniper fire was exchanged throughout the day, the radios said.

A cease-fire had been observed by soldiers and militiamen in the Shouf mountains since July 4. Saturday's fighting was the worst since then.

The fighting dampened plans by Lebanese leaders to extend the 2-week-old Syrian-backed security plan in the capital to the Shouf.

The security plan, the first step toward reuniting Lebanon and ending more than nine years of civil war, was approved by the country's new "national unity" Cabinet, which includes leaders of the country's rival factions.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel held separate talks with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and Defense Minister Adel Osseiran Saturday to discuss extending the plan but no announcements were made, Beirut radio reported.

Until Saturday's fighting, the security plan had given the Beirut area its first lasting cease-fire since last February, when Moslem militiamen staged a revolt against Gemayel's Christian-led government and took control of the western half of the capital.

Under the plan, rival Christian and Moslem militias have withdrawn from positions in the heart of the city and authorities have reopened Beirut port and the airport for the first time since February.

Vernon Tyson And His Wife Frances Attended D-Day Ceremonies In June

Nostalgic Return To Normandy

THE TYSONS TODAY . . . Vernon and Frances Tyson were photographed in their store on Dickinson Avenue recently. The couple, like millions of other American servicemen and their girl friends or wives, carried on a long-distance correspondence during World War II. (Reflector Staff Photo)

D-Day, June 6, 1944

Text By Jerry Raynor

MEMORIAL SITE . . . A huge sculpture, several times life size, representing the Youth of America who fought in Europe during World War II, soars above the Normandy American Cemetery near Omaha Beach in France. It was here that the Tysons witnessed special ceremonies on June 6, marking the 40th anniversary of D-Day. U.S. President Reagan, French President Mitterand and other dignitaries took part in the ceremony. Vernon Tyson was one of numerous Normandy veterans attending. (AP Laserphoto)

" . . . We were in a convoy all night long . . . As we approached the French coast, we could see clouds of smoke, even in the early dawn hours.

" . . . When we touched shore . . . I saw dead bodies and splintered pieces of earlier boats all about, in the water and on the shore.

" . . . I was hoping to run across one of my wartime buddies . . . For years, several of us had kept in touch, but as the years passed we drifted apart, stopped writing."

To historians the date of June 6, 1944, was a historic date marking a significant step forward on the road to Allied Victory in World War II. To the average GI taking part in the landings on Normandy on the north coast of France 40 years ago, the date is recalled as the climax to months of rugged training and waiting.

Vernon Tyson of Greenville, with his wife Frances were among contingents of Americans visiting the area during the 40th anniversary of the Normandy landings in early June this year.

The Tysons are owners-proprietors of Tyson Furniture Store on Dickinson Avenue.

In Second Wave

"I was in the second wave coming into Omaha Beach on the morning of the sixth," Tyson recalled. "I was a member of the Army engineers, a young soldier who'd been in service since November '41.

"The day before, the fifth of June, we had left the English Channel port of Falmouth and had gotten about half way across the channel, then turned around and went back to the port of Plymouth. When we left Plymouth late on the afternoon of the fifth, there were destroyers on each side of us, so we all knew the real thing was underway.

"We were in a convoy all night long of the fifth, under the cover of darkness and a barrage of balloons. As we approached the French coast, we could see clouds of smoke, even in the early dawn hours."

Tyson said the second wave landed about three hours after the first wave had gone in. "Because we were engineers and had lots of heavy gear aboard, we were on the type of landing craft, a LCT, that went all the way up on shore. When we touched shore, and the ramp of our craft was lowered, I saw dead bodies and splintered pieces of earlier boats all about, in the water and on the shore. Naturally, that sorta got to me."

Tyson was a member of the 121st Combat Engineers attached to the 29th Infantry Division.

Infantrymen, Tyson noted, "really had the roughest of it, carrying everything on their backs. As engineers, our cargo consisted of many different items — jeeps, demolition material, ammunition, bangalores."

After getting safely ashore, Tyson decided to go to the top of a hill to get a better view of what was happening. "But some snipers got after me, so I went back down the hill without losing time. The next day at dawn, all of those in our unit got together again."

Wounded July 10

"After Omaha," Tyson said, "our unit moved on inland. We went through the hedgerows around St. Lo, which in itself was a real frustrating situation. After pushing our way through the hedgerows, we were busy building a CP (command post). The Germans waited until we had finished it, then zeroed in on us and blew it up.

"That was the 10th of July. I received shrapnel injuries in my hands and was flown back to England, where I was hospitalized for six weeks before being returned to my unit."

When he returned, he recalls "my unit had reached Aachen just inside the German border (where Belgium, The Netherlands and Germany join each other). We moved on to the Ruhr River, where we laid mines. After that we continued to advance, moving into the province of Bremen in northern Germany, then further east where we joined up with the Russian forces at the Elbe River in the last days of April, 1945."

A few days later, in May, 1945, the German forces surrendered. Five months later, Vernon Tyson was back in the U.S. "I was discharged in September 1945," Tyson said, "just two months short of four years service."

A YOUNG SOLDIER AND HIS JEEP . . . Army engineer Vernon Tyson was photographed beside his trusty vehicle, a jeep, in Plymouth, England during April 1944, just two months prior to the Normandy invasion. (Photograph by E. Morgan, Plymouth, England)

A fond memory of wartime England recalled by Tyson was that of service provided to GIs by the Red Cross. "Some people may put the Red Cross down," he said, "but I will always remember the many times they came out on the moors to serve us tea, doughnuts and coffee."

Many Wartime Letters

When Vernon Tyson went to England for duty, he was a single soldier who left his girlfriend Frances Cash behind. Frances, a native of Wendell in Wake County, was a graduate of East Carolina University teaching in Raleigh. "We met before Vernon went overseas," Mrs. Tyson said. "And believe me," she laughed, "I must have written a million letters during the time he was in England and later in Europe."

The Tysons are the parents of two children. One is deceased. The other, a son, William Vernon, Jr. now lives in Houston, Texas.

Journey Of Remembrance

When the American Legion announced that on the 40th anniversary of the Normandy invasion, former servicemen were being encouraged to visit Normandy and other areas of the World War II days of 1944 and 1945, the Tysons decided they wanted to make the trip.

"I really wanted to go back, to see Omaha Beach, the cemetery there, the chapel, to see what I could remember about the area, how and what had changed," Tyson said.

"We're glad we made the trip," Mrs. Tyson commented. "It turned out to be an exciting experience for both of us."

The tour began in London. "Most of the men in the tour were veterans of D-Day. Many of them had revisited Normandy somewhere along the way before, and most of those we talked to on the tour were men who had been wounded in action," Tyson related.

"I was hoping to run across one of my wartime buddies," Tyson added, "but I didn't. For years, several of us had kept in touch, but as the years passed we drifted apart, stopped writing."

Highlight Events

In France, the highlight events were on Wednesday, June 6. Commemoration services held at the memorial site of the Normandy American Cemetery were attended by President Reagan, French President Mitterand, the Duke of Luxembourg and other dignitaries.

Wreaths were laid at the foot of the huge sculpture of a young man with arms uplifted symbolizing the Youth of America, all those who fought and who died in the 1944 invasion.

"After going to the ceremony at Normandy, we went to the cemeteries in Ardennes and at Bastogne," Mrs. Tyson said. "At Bastogne the memorial is in the shape of a star with the names of states inscribed on it."

Another place visited was the cathedral city of Reims, in France. "We saw Ike's headquarters," Tyson said. "The room where General Eisenhower worked has been kept the same as it was at the time. It gave me a rather strange feeling to be in that room."

Vivid Impressions

The sounding of taps at the June 6 ceremony, according to Mrs. Tyson, was "really awesome. There was not a sound, not a stir among all the people there. It was certainly a very emotional experience."

Another sight which Mrs. Tyson remembers vividly was that "of walking along the wall where a wreath had been laid for the son of President Theodore Roosevelt. (Brigadier General Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. died in Normandy on July 12, 1944). The area was crowded with people of all ages.

"One woman, an American, told us she had come to visit the spot where her father died on D-Day, which happened also to be his 20th birthday. She had come to be with him at his grave on what would have been his 60th birthday."

"Many of the death dates on tombstones were July 10 and July 11, 1944. The 10th was the day I was wounded, so I realized how fortunate I'd been to be among the wounded who survived," Tyson commented.

Personal Encounters

There were also many personal encounters, some of a happy nature, some sad.

"Time and again people told us how they idolized Patton," Tyson said. "People at Malmedy, in Belgium, where an American platoon was ambushed and slaughtered.

People in Luxembourg. A man in one small town related that the village was bombed 30 times, with only 15 houses left standing."

Mrs. Tyson expressed pleasure about their trip to the small principality of Luxembourg, "where the mayor of Luxembourg city, a lady, gave the American visitors a warm welcome. They planned a special ceremony just for us, and their were also several receptions given us during our visit there."

"One man, an engineer for Goodyear told us the story of being hidden by his father when he was a 16-year old boy. The Germans had begun recruiting men and boys from Luxembourg to serve in their army, and the people of Luxembourg went on a national strike protesting this. The Germans took 10,000 men from the country, forcing them into service. Many never returned to their homeland."

Mrs. Tyson delighted in mentioning one man they met, a veteran of both World Wars I and II. "He was 91, from Wisconsin. Despite his age, he was spry and didn't miss a trick. He told us he had left his girl friend back home, that he wanted to be unattached on the trip."

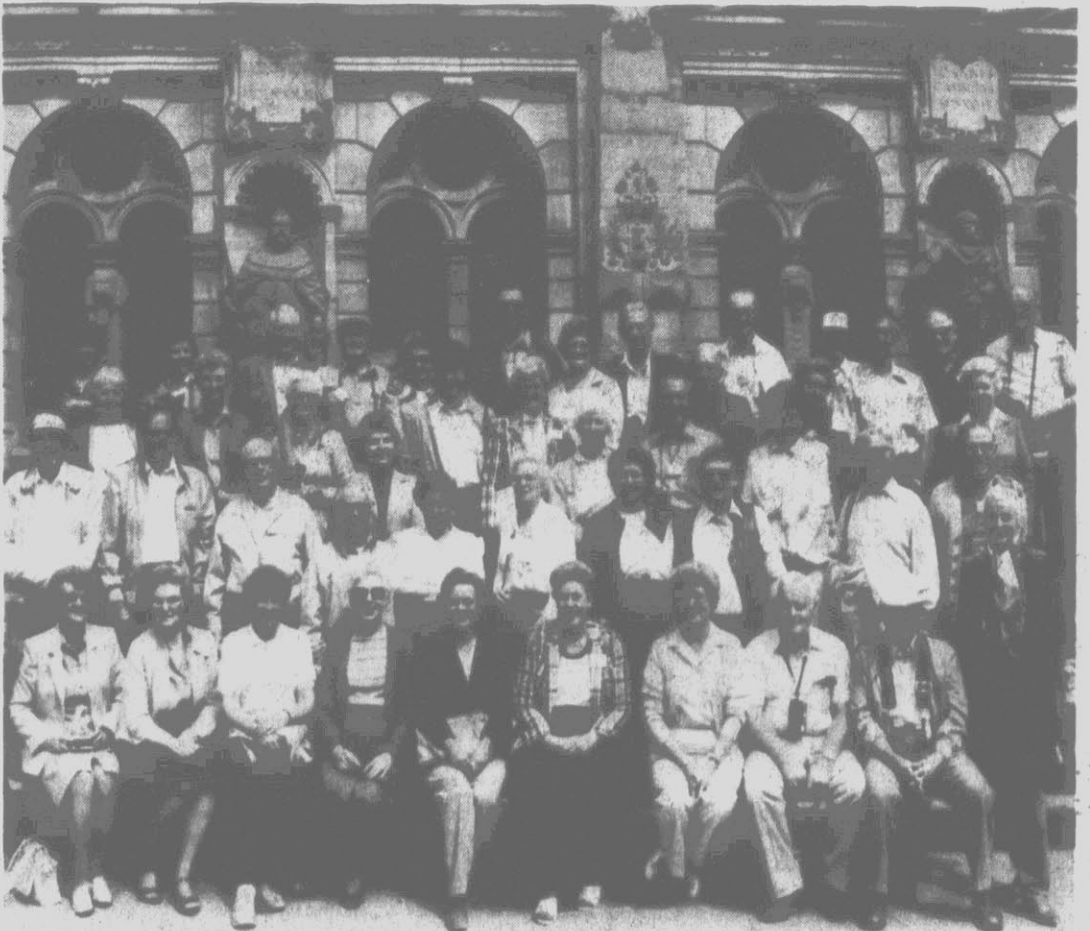

Tyson noted "most of the men I talked to were from the mid-Western states. I did meet one veteran from Greensboro and one from Eden as well as one from West Virginia and one from Georgia."

Tour In Two Phases

The tour was divided into two phases — "D-Day Plus 40," focusing on commemorative activities marking events of June 6, 1944; and the second phase, "The Road to Victory." It was on the second phase that the Tysons visited in Belgium, Luxembourg and parts of West Germany.

"We visited Paris and London," Mrs. Tyson said. "In London, we made a special visit to St. Paul's Cathedral, where the dean of the cathedral welcomed our group and said prayers for the dead. There's an American chapel in St. Paul's."

"We're both glad we made the trip," Tyson concluded. "It brought back many memories for me, and gave me a chance to share with Frances some of the places I'd been to under entirely different circumstances. Someday, we may want to go back for another visit."

A SOUVENIR PHOTOGRAPH . . . The Tysons were among a group of World War II GIs and family members who attended D-Day ceremonies and later joined a nostalgic "Road to Victory" tour in Belgium, France and Germany. Here the group poses on the steps of Heidelberg Castle, West Germany. Frances Tyson is second from left on the front row; Vernon Tyson is in the second row directly behind his wife. The security plan, the first step toward reuniting Lebanon and ending more than nine years of civil war, was approved by the country's new "national unity" Cabinet, which includes leaders of the country's rival factions.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel held separate talks with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and Defense Minister Adel Osseiran Saturday to discuss extending the plan but no announcements were made, Beirut radio reported.

Until Saturday's fighting, the security plan had given the Beirut area its first lasting cease-fire since last February, when Moslem militiamen staged a revolt against Gemayel's Christian-led government and took control of the western half of the capital.

Under the plan, rival Christian and Moslem militias have withdrawn from positions in the heart of the city and authorities have reopened Beirut port and the airport for the first time since February.

the spending and they will have to figure out a way to solve the problem."

East said he feels Reagan is "more in the mainstream of thinking of the Southerners. With agriculture being a critical issue, not only in the South but in the Midwest, Reagan and Helms should stand up strong."
 In reference to the extensive amount of money spent on the Senate race between Helms and Hunt, East said Helms had to spend a great deal of money campaigning because "all the big city editors are constantly working against him. Just read the Raleigh News and Observer on any given day. It takes money to change this disinformation and distortion. The governor gets a free ride."
 Helms said Gov. Hunt was obtaining his campaign money while "out hustling money from Hollywood big wigs." He added that the Gov. Hunt's defenders "speak out of jealousy, such as the editorial pages of the News and Observer."

 She filed suit for $5,000 in damages. Only then did pageant officials write the no-marriage clause, Deford said.

And throughout several recent pageants, some of the contestants, including Miss California Debra Sue Maffett, who became Miss America 1983, have admitted to having breast implants and nose jobs to look more attractive in their quest for the crown.

Deford said he thought pageant officials had to ask Miss Williams to resign for the good of the pageant.

"I feel very sad for her personally. On the other hand, I don't see how they can leave her in that position," he said.

No Leads

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Authorities seeking three fugitives from a Tennessee prison said Saturday they had no leads on the whereabouts of the men.

"We don't have any manhunt or anything like that because we don't have any central area to concentrate our efforts in," said Capt. George Erwin of the Henderson County sheriff's department.

"We don't have anything positive to say they're in the area. For all we know they could be laying up in the woods somewhere," he said. "We are taking precautions as if they were in the area."

Erwin said investigators had received several reported sightings of the fugitives since Friday, but there was no positive identification from witnesses.

Michael Hartsock, 26, William Prentice, 29, and Lohman Mays, 41, were said to be armed and dangerous. They escaped July 1 from the Turney Center prison in Hickman County, Tenn., by picking the locks on their cell doors and scaling a 12-foot fence topped by razor sharp wire.

Hartsock was serving two life sentences for murder, Mays was sentenced to life as a habitual criminal and Prentice was serving a 30-year term for armed robbery.

Mondale Relaxes With Fishing Pole

GRAND MARAIS, Minn. (UPI) — Walter Mondale, the Democratic presidential nomination finally in his hand, sought a few days of solitude Saturday in one of his lifelong passions — fishing.

Mondale, his wife, children and an old fishing buddy, flew in small planes to this small outpost on the edge of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area wilderness after spending one night at home in North Oaks, a suburb of St. Paul-Minneapolis.

He was to spend five days or more in total isolation on a lake, a far cry from the hubbub and hoopla of the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco where he accepted his party's nomination on Thursday.

"Over the next few days I'm going to do the one thing that Minnesotans do best," said a visibly tired Mondale. "I'm going fishing."

Asked if he will come out of the wilderness when he has caught enough, Mondale said, "That would be the very first day because I'm a very good fisherman."

Mondale said he will remain in seclusion for about five days before beginning a series of campaign forays beginning the last weekend in July and going through August.

"We won't start — quote — a campaign right away," he said. "I don't think Americans want that. But the effort will begin very early."

Mondale has never been to the lake near the north shore of Lake Superior in the northeastern finger of the state, although he has fished over most of northern Minnesota. The lake was discovered by Mondale's old friend, Duluth television station owner, Fran Befera.

Befera has been a Mondale fishing buddy for more than 25 years, dating back to when Mondale was Minnesota attorney general.

The two go fishing in the area's many lakes every summer, and chop through 18-inch thick ice to go ice fishing in the winter.

Befera has told reporters that Mondale can sit silently for up to 12 hours, concentrating only on fishing. The main fish in the lake are walleye, one of Mondale's favorites, and lake trout, although Mondale said he can catch anything.

"My specialty is walleye, northern, bass, lake trout and anything else that's in there," he said.

The lake is in the 1,075,500-acre Boundary Waters Canoe Area wilderness, created Oct. 21, 1978 by Congress. It was an area much travelled by early French Canadian trappers and others.

Sub Commissioned Honoring Rickover

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — An attack submarine named after Retired Adm. Hyman G. Rickover was commissioned Saturday, as the man known as the father of the nuclear Navy became the third person to have his name grace a Navy vessel while he was still alive.

Rickover, 84, and his wife, Eleonore, attended commissioning ceremonies at the Navy Submarine Base at which he was praised as a "truly remarkable American."

In the principal address, Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., lauded Rickover's demands for quality and honest cost practices.

The Soviets, he said, "can never be sure if they are in the cross-hairs of one of Rickover's boats."

"The Federal government has had few individuals to crusade so successfully against fraud, waste and abuse in the shipbuilding industry," Bennett said.

Wreck Injury

An estimated $600 vehicle damage and one injury resulted from a collision investigated by Greenville police Saturday.

Police said the accident occurred when a vehicle driven by Edna Virginia McLawhorn of 1108 E. 10th St. struck the rear of a vehicle driven by Diana Marie Pearson of 132J Oakmont Drive. Police charged Ms. McLawhorn with a safe movement violation. Approximate damage to the McLawhorn vehicle was $400, while damage to the Pearson vehicle was placed at $200.

'Achievers' Met Celebrities At AAA Event

By LORETTA GRANTHAM
Reflector Staff Writer

Former President and Mrs. Jimmy Carter, John Travolta, Ray Charles, Louis L'Amour, Howard Schnellenberger, Ted Turner, Dr. William DeVries, Ed Asner ... just a few of the many celebrities that Derek Dickens and Kelly Hobgood met recently at American Academy of Achievement's Banquet of the Golden Plate weekend.

The annual "Gathering of the Greats," held in a different city each year, brings selected high schools students and famous adults together for a weekend of insight into the world of accomplishment.

American Academy of Achievement, according to a prepared statement, is a "non-profit organization dedicated to the inspiration of youth." Minneapolis, Minn. was the scene for this year's July 5-7 convention. The guests stayed at the Hyatt Regency Hotel where most of the symposiums for the honorees took place.

Carolina East Mall and Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. sponsored Dickens and Hobgood and picked up the bill for all expenses. After returning home, the students appeared on WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" to discuss the trip. Later, the two will receive Golden Scroll Awards designating them as "Young Leaders of Tomorrow."

Derek Dickens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickens of Greenville, is a 1984 graduate of J.H. Rose High School. He was Student Government Association president and a National Merit Commended Student. He will be a freshman at N.C. State University in the fall where he plans to pursue a pre-med major.

Dickens said while the students were there they enjoyed lavish meals. "I even ate breakfast with Chuck Yeager."

When asked which guest celebrity impressed him most, Dickens replied, "Ted Turner, because he had an unusual solution to the nuclear arms race. He said the United States should have a happy hour with all drinks on the house every Friday and invite the Russians. 'Now who would blow up a country that gives you free drinks?' Turner said."

Dickens said the group had an outing at Lake Minnetonka complete with boat rides, volleyball and the U.S. Air Force Singing Sergeants. He said he had the opportunity "to make friends with people from all over the country."

As far as the celebrities are concerned, Dickens said he "was impressed by each person's drive and unique sense to achieve." He said that John Travolta sounds just like he does on television and Ted Turner is somewhat of a "loud southerner."

"It sometimes seemed as if each person was trying to tell a better rags-to-riches story than the others," commented Dickens.

"I hope to go back as an honored guest one day," he said, "and eventually be able to finance the trip for others."

Kelly Hobgood, valedictorian of the Farmville Central High School Class of 1984, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Britt of Farmville. Hobgood will attend East Carolina University in the fall to major in biology. He also intends to go into the medical profession.

Hobgood said he was surprised when he learned he had been selected for the trip. "I didn't quite know what to expect," he said, "because I wasn't totally familiar with the program."

"I found out that the famous people there were just normal and not over your head," Hobgood explained, "they talked about things just like everyone else does."

He said the weekend was filled with meetings during the day and dances for the students at night. "There wasn't a whole lot of free time," Hobgood said, "because we were kept busy every minute."

The students were allowed to go up to a microphone and ask the celebrities questions during the symposiums, Hobgood said. During meals and activities the honored guests mixed freely with the young people so there were opportunities for casual discussion.

Hobgood said his favorite adult achiever was Judge Amalya L.

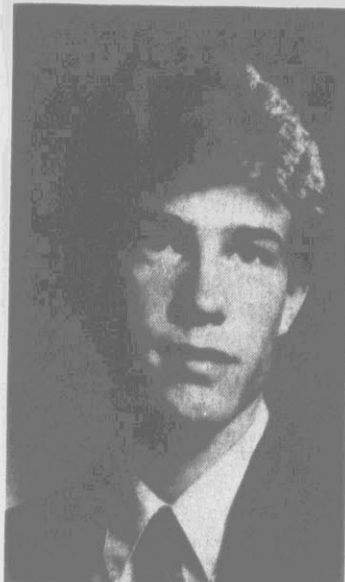

Kearse, a federal court of appeals judge. "She didn't give up just because she had two things against her — being a woman and being black. I was very impressed when she spoke to us."

On a lighter side, Hobgood said there were a variety of accents present because there were guests from all over the country. "People kept asking me to talk so they could hear my southern accent," he laughed, "I never thought I had one."

Hijack Attempt Averted

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A man wielding a phony Molotov cocktail tried to hijack a jetliner carrying 147 people from Abu Dhabi to Beirut Saturday, but the pilot flew on to Lebanon where all aboard were released unharmed and the suspect surrendered.

About 30 minutes after Middle East Airlines Flight 419 took off on a midday flight, a Lebanese man upset over Abu Dhabi's refusal to grant him a visa demanded the pilot return, said Osman Osman, director of Lebanon's Internal Security Forces.

"A man pushed through to the cockpit holding a bottle wrapped up in paper, which looked like a Molotov cocktail," passenger Hussein Ali Abboun said. "Everyone was very afraid."

But MEA pilot Samir Hasbini said he only had enough fuel to fly to Beirut, and the hijacker — whose bottle contained only orange juice — agreed to let the Boeing 727 land in Beirut, police said.

The plane landed at Beirut International Airport on schedule at 2 p.m. local time. Its occupants were released in two batches after two hours of negotiations with the would-be hijacker, who then surrendered to police.

"Women and children were crying," said a witness who saw the passengers released. "Some were near hysterics, hugging their relatives."

As anxious relatives greeted sobbing passengers and crew members, reporters and photographers were shoved aside in a scuffle with Lebanese troops.

Christian Phalange-operated radio identified the hijacker as Aatef Zein, 45, a Lebanese native. Witnesses said he was released "scot free," but security officials later said he had been questioned and detained at the airport.

Lebanon's national airline, which resumed service July 9 after fighting had kept the airport closed for five months, said the jet carried 138 passengers — including the hijacker — and a crew of nine.

The suspect had flown Friday from Beirut to Abu Dhabi, where the government detained him and put him on the first available flight back to Lebanon, about 1,300 miles northwest of Abu Dhabi.

While Lebanese security officers negotiated with the hijacker, jets landed and took off at the airport.

During the negotiations, Lebanese and foreign correspondents and broadcast crews were repeatedly jostled, shoved and threatened by unruly soldiers, security men and Shiite Moslem militiamen who control territory around the airport.

"It's total chaos with nobody in charge," said one correspondent, who was punched in the stomach during the scuffle.

In a particularly tense moment, a

Lebanese soldier grabbed NBC cameraman Gary Fairman by the neck, shoved him backward and then cocked his Kalashnikov automatic rifle. He later uncocked the weapon and swaggered away, laughing with his fellow soldiers.

MINNIE SAVAGE... (right), staff psychologist and head of the therapy department of the Walter B. Jones Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center, has received the Secretary's Award for Excellence for her work at the center. The award was presented by Dr. Sarah Morrow, state secretary of human resources (right). Mrs. Savage is a resident of Fort Barnwell in Craven County and a graduate of East Carolina University with master's degrees in education and clinical psychology. She has been employed at the ARC in Greenville for 10 years.

Hazardous Waste Disposal System Bears Watching

The bad news is that Pitt County is one of the top hazardous wastes producing counties of the states. The good news is that the county seems to be handling well the hazardous waste disposal problem.

The North Carolina Department of Human Resources reported that Pitt County produced 37,037,200 pounds of hazardous wastes during 1983. Even though it is far lower than the 5.7 billion pounds which Mecklenburg produced it is still a major amount and something that should be of concern.

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, says the hazardous waste is no problem for the waste water treatment facilities because area industries are required to pretreat such waste before it is discharged into the sanitary sewer system.

Hazardous wastes are not accepted at the Pitt County landfill and the supervisor, H.C. Kinsaul, said that if any is dumped it is returned.

Thus hospitals and industries which have a solid hazardous waste product to dispose of rely on contractors to remove the wastes to special hazardous wastes disposal sites. These are in other states.

Medical and industrial processes inevitably produce wastes which cannot be handled in community waste water treatment facilities or local landfills. The question is whether the waste water receives adequate pretreatment and solids are disposed of properly. This seems to be the case in Pitt County, but it is a situation which bears monitoring.

Historic Sentinel Could Be Helpful

A letter writer expressed concern about the destruction of a home on East Fifth Street to make way for a parking lot to be used by ECU visitors.

Maurice C. York suggested that university administrators should utilize the houses rather than destroy them. It was suggested that otherwise a historic properties commission or proper zoning should be instituted to prevent the destruction of homes.

The Tar River Neighborhood Association expressed objections to the destruction of the home.

It is the classic dilemma of a growing university in a growing city. Clearly East Carolina University has used up most of the available space in the campus and as a result it is expanding into nearby residential areas. Expansion cannot take place without removing the older homes in the area. There is no other way for the university physical plant to expand.

We, too, have become more conscious of the destruction of many of the city's oldest homes, but we have to accept the fact that all older homes cannot be preserved, particularly without any firm commitment for their maintenance.

Residents of the area from Fifth Street north to the Tar River have shown that they want to keep the neighborhood livable and that is to be applauded. Nevertheless, part of the reason that the area has remained good residential property is the proximity of the university campus. In this case the area had to give a little due to the advantages of having the campus close by.

As for the future it might be well to have a public body to identify truly historic homes well in advance and suggest ways they can be preserved and maintained.

Chris Baker, 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Baker, has a 14-week old puppy named Dusty.

From the date the puppy came into the Baker home Chris began asking for the puppy to sleep with him. His parents explained that Dusty was too young and he would have to sleep in the kitchen.

Chris kept asking, however, and finally his parents gave in. The night came and Dusty was taken to Chris's bedroom at bedtime.

With Chris and Dusty tucked in and the lights out, his parents went back to the den.

All was not quiet, however. Soon the Bakers heard giggles from the room and the growlings of a puppy. That went on for a time with the parents resisting the temptation to look in. Then came a loud thump which sent them hurrying to the room to see what had happened. It seems Chris has put the blanket over his head and Dusty was tugging on it. The puppy let go and the thump came when Chris fell back and hit his head on the wall.

Sunday Morning Notes

His parents decided the experiment was over. Neither Chris, nor Dusty, nor they would get any sleep. Dusty went back to his accustomed sleeping place in the kitchen. Everybody got a good night's sleep.

And a lady picked up a $15 cooked ham in a local supermarket and asked the butcher to grind it up.

The butcher looked puzzled and said it was a first such request but he would do it.

As he took it in the back the lady laughed and explained it was her way of making ham salad for a large crowd. "It beats cooking a ham and then chopping it up," she said with a laugh.

Soon the ham came back looking like ground hamburger.

Not a bad way to arrive at ham salad.

Those who like rain got all they wanted last week. The Pitt County area, along with most of eastern North Carolina, was soaked by the heavy downpours of the week. At times streets were flooded and kids found new places to play as the rising waters created ponds.

As usual at least one vehicle was caught in the rising waters of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad underpass on Dickinson Avenue during one of the deluges. That prompted one observer to comment, "Sooner or later they'll have to develop cars that float for use on Dickinson Avenue."

Maybe. There also might be money to be made providing quick ferry service at the underpass.

PACs

RALEIGH — The chief of the new state employees association thinks state workers are on the verge of organizing their political activities.

Arch Laney, acting director of the newly formed 45,000-member State Employees of North Carolina Inc. (SENC), predicts that a state employee political action committee will be formed when the group holds its first convention in September. SENC came into operation on July 1, the result of a merger of the old N.C. State Employees and the N.C. State Government Employees associations.

For years, those two groups each debated the idea of forming affiliated political action committees (PACs). The constitutions of both groups forbade association donations to, or endorsement of, political candidates. But the constitution of the SENC does not. Formation of a PAC tied to SENC would make it possible for state employees to exercise those two political options, and would, theoretically, increase their political clout.

Creation of a PAC before merger could have created more confusion than clout for state employees, Laney said in an interview. "Imagine the confusion you would have had if one group had had a PAC and the other had not. Endorsement of a candidate by one group would have made it appear to political people that all state employees in general were supporting the candidate. That wouldn't have been the case."

Laney says numerous other confusing situations could have occurred with either of the two, or both, having PACs. "I said all along that if we were going to have a PAC, it should represent both groups," he said. Now that there is only one major state worker group, the fear of such confusion is eliminated and that will lift some folks' opposition to a PAC.

But there are other factors which lead Laney to figure a PAC is in the cards this year. The first is success of the N.C. Association of Educators in this June's legislative session. "The teachers, even picking all the wrong statewide candidates, came out real good." (NCAE backed a bunch of losers in the primaries.)

State employees opposed to forming a PAC generally express the concern that they would be easy targets for retribution from any politician who was elected despite their having backed another candidate. NCAE's experience this year should help relieve that fear. But, in a sense, another group has taken away their option.

The State Employees Political Action Committee (SEPA) was formed several years ago after the two major associations refused to form their own PACs. The founders of the group were loyal to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and, they endorsed Edmisten just before the May 8 gubernatorial primary.

Rough Time

WASHINGTON — In Chief Justice Burger's first term on the Supreme Court, back in 1969-70, the court disposed of 4,200 cases and handed down 88 signed opinions. In the term that ended a couple of weeks ago, the court disposed of 5,100 cases and handed down 151 signed opinions. The court's staff has increased over this period, but the number of justices has held constant at nine. They are badly overburdened, and their work shows it.

It was not a happy or congenial court that said its farewells after an afternoon session on July 5. The chief justice was nursing a couple of cracked ribs. Justice Powell, thin to the point of emaciation, looked exhausted. Justice Stevens could not restrain himself from a bitter dissent: "Of late the court has acquired a voracious appetite for judicial activism. . . . Justice Brennan was so angry over a criminal case that he denounced his colleagues' 'gradual but determined strangulation' of the exclusionary rule."

It is an old sport at the high court for the justices to jab at one another in dissent, but this term saw some rough stuff. Justice Marshall bitterly assailed his colleagues for failing to approve a free speech case involving a proposed sleep-in at Lafayette Park across from the White House. Chief Justice Burger, for his part, snapped that the case demonstrated a "trivialization" of the law.

Justice Stevens may have broken all records for dissent. He disagreed with the majority on 50 of 91 divided votes, and he actually wrote 30 dissenting opinions. This was on top of a dozen dissenting statements — some of them long, long statements — on denial of review. In the course of this disagreement he lambasted opposing opinions as unnecessary, inexplicable, disturbing, perverse, confused, confusing, inconsistent, unwise, singularly peculiar, fundamentally wrong, and little short of irresponsible.

The justices had a bad way of charging off in all directions. During the hectic last two weeks of the term, when 38 opinions came raining down, we witnessed an explosion of finicky statements and unhelpful concurrences. The court struggled laboriously over an unimportant case involving the photographic reproduction of U.S. currency. (Sports Illustrated had carried a cover showing $100 bills in a basketball hoop.) White wrote an opinion for the court, but he was the only one who liked all of his work. Justices Brennan, Marshall, Powell, Blackmun and Stevens dissented from one part or another, and concurred in one part or another. The vote was roughly 4-5 to affirm in part and reverse in part. In a June opinion on illegal aliens, the split was not 6-3, but rather 3-6.

The court's most serious problem may be summed up in a phrase. Relatively speaking, the justices have no time to think. Yes, their law clerks can handle the great bulk of a thousand petitions "in forma pauperis" — the pathetic and usually futile appeals from persons, mostly convicts, who are too poor to pay the court costs. And, yes, the justices do take a three-month "vacation" in the summer. But in the end the justices still have to vote individually on the disposition of every case, and the flood of litigation knows no dry spell in August.

The court needs help — not in the form of more staff, but in relief from the main burden of hearing oral argument and writing full-blown opinions in 150-odd cases a year. Chief Justice Burger has urged the creation of a new court, drawn from among federal circuit judges, whose purpose would be to resolve inter-circuit conflicts on questions of statutory construction. During this past term at least 40 cases could have been so resolved. These cases did not cry out for Supreme Court consideration. The important thing was finally to settle the 40 issues one way or another.

Burger's proposal is for a five-year experiment with such a special court. If the experiment works, fine; if it fails, something else might be tried. The experiment would cost the taxpayers no more than nickels and dimes. A bill embodying the Burger idea is languishing in the Senate. It ought to be revived and passed. Eight tired men and one tired lady deserve better treatment — and when one looks ruefully at the quality of this court's work in 1983-84, it has to be said that the law of the land deserves a better treatment too.

When The Tables Are Turned

WASHINGTON — One can safely say that the press asks for it when the tables are turned and the reporter is on the receiving end.

The recent two-hour broadcast of the ABC News special, "Viewpoint," is a good example. When a panel of network newsmen invited questions from an audience here, it was hit with charges of liberalism, racism, sloth, sensationalism and even bribery, among others.

To an extent, the 90-minute-plus session brought confessions from ABC's representatives. Yes, Barbara Walters received a wristwatch from the late shah of Iran (though she gave it back); yes, said David Brinkley, and yes, Geraldo Rivera conceded, ABC covers soft news as well as hard (though the trend is in favor of hard news).

But the panelists responded defensively. Not once did they admit unconditionally that a criticism was correct. Instead, they tried to refute almost every contention, using phrases often reserved for court trials and evasive politicians. It was almost as if a little bit of Herbert Schertz, Mobil's combative media strategist, was in each one of them.

That night, ABC News reported that while 79 percent of the American public approves of television network reporting in general, most of those surveyed also criticized some network practices.

However, by directing their complaints to a panel of obviously self-interested panelists, members of the "Viewpoint" audience were asking for trouble and frustration.

In the 18 states that completed their primaries by June 12, the number of women nominees for legislative office was 18 percent higher than in 1980, according to the National Women's Education Fund. The organization also says that there are seven female nominees for the U.S. Senate, up from three in 1982. Two women are running for senate nominations that have yet to be decided.

While Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, has announced plans to lecture next year at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, don't bet that he will. Tower, who is not seeking re-election this year, also wants a Cabinet post in a second Reagan administration.

At a recent press conference in Dallas, Texas' senior senator acknowledged that he would give "serious consideration" to an offer of a "high-level government position."

Who says special-interest politics doesn't work? More than 60 percent of Walter Mondale's delegates come from three organizations: The National Organization for Women, National Education Association and AFL-CIO.

A child's concern about nuclear war is linked to his or her class standing, according to Harvard professor Robert Coles. In a forthcoming book, "The Moral Life of Children," Coles writes that middle- and upper-class children have the strongest fears about nuclear war.

Children of the poor don't share those fears, he says, because their parents are too busy fighting for economic survival to infuse them with such worries.

To the editor:

I recently attended a meeting where I was privileged to hear Dr. Kent Gilbreth speak on our nation's economy. He is a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

This board is usually referred to by banks as "the Fed" and these are the people who decide what our interest rate will be, as well as many other decisions affecting our economy.

I was in awe of someone who carried such power and I listened carefully to every word. He made one statement which impressed me greatly. He said, "The New England area is growing like wildfire, primarily because of its superior primary educational system."

The importance of a high quality primary educational system cannot be overemphasized. I congratulate our County Commissioners, the county school board, the city school board, and all others who have been instrumental in taking such large strides in further improving our schools. Industry will continue to look with favor on our area for we "have it all," including the finest school system, which is being made even finer.

The Same

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After almost four years in the White House, Ronald Reagan — the self-proclaimed outsider, leader of a conservative revolt against the trend of government over the last 40 years — is still running against Washington.

Listening to his campaign speeches, a Rip Van Winkle awakening from four years of peaceful slumber might never realize Reagan had become part of the same "big government" establishment he ran against as an outsider in 1976 and 1980.

This is not 1980. But the passage of four years has done little to alter the Reagan campaign battle cry. He remains a self-described voice of rationality, pitted against the vested interests and veteran politicians of Washington.

His targets are still "the liberals" in Congress and Jimmy Carter, the latter presented in the form of Walter Mondale. It's an "us vs. them" theme that strikes at the Democrats, but hits Republicans as well.

Reagan lashes out at "those in Washington" who oppose his proposal for tuition tax credit, as if to gaze at the political debate from afar and to see only Democrats on the opposite side. He belittles "those born-again budget balancers" in Congress, but neglects to mention Republican anxiety over the huge deficits that have accumulated during his first term.

Reagan, whose "Teflon-coated" image is a frustration to Democrats, is able to mock the political environment he has called home for the last 3½ years.

During a campaign trip to Iowa in February, he told a crowd of cheering supporters that coming to Des Moines from Washington was "a little like landing in the real world after an extended visit to the Twilight Zone."

In Texas, he attacked "the smart sayers and seers" and "grasping politicians and indifferent bureaucrats" in Washington. Borrowing a phrase from George Wallace, he blamed years of "liberal leniency and pseudo-intellectual apologies" for a "crisis of crime in America."

For Reagan, this anti-Washington theme is one that plays well in the heartland.

At a Fourth of July celebration in Alabama, where he stirred passions by waxing patriotic about men and women in uniform and the struggle between totalitarianism and democracy, Reagan said he has felt that "if we just slipped out — we in government — and closed the doors, turned the key and disappeared for a while, it would take you a long time to miss us."

No word on what would happen to the millions of people, in Alabama and elsewhere, whose livelihoods depend on government outlays for guns and butter.

The refrain is not a new one for Reagan, who for years has regarded government — especially the federal government — as the antithesis of a society devoted to individual liberty.

His view of official Washington and residents of its political fraternity is a throwback to the "time for choosing" speech he delivered in support of Barry Goldwater at the 1964 Republican National Convention, which completed his transition from show business to conservative politics.

"Two contrary philosophies divide us in this land of ours," Reagan said. "Either we believe in our traditional system of individual liberty, or we abandon the American revolution and confess that an intellectual elite in a far distant capital can plan our lives for us better than we can plan them ourselves."

And as he looks ahead to the possibility of four more years in that same "far distant capital," Reagan may be reminded of what he told a group of concrete industry representatives back in 1971, while still governor of California.

"I just returned from a trip to Washington, D.C.," he said, "and have to say it's a great place to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there."

Even someone with such die-hard principles as Reagan is entitled to change his mind.

Interest Levels Can Surprise

NEW YORK (AP) — While the dream still sparkles in their eyes, a good many rather new homeowners are receiving invitations to reality in their mail. Their mortgage rates are going up.

For many, the damage won't be great, since a 1 percent increase in a 13 percent adjustable, 20-year, $40,000 mortgage comes to less than $30 a month. But some home loans are going up as fast as the borrower's blood pressure.

Those who were teased or seduced into taking first-year rates at 9 percent, for example, might find themselves broadjumping 5 percentage points after just a year, which works out to a potentially devastating $137.50 a month.

Such teasers, says Felix Beck, this year's president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, are no good for anyone, an opinion not likely to be contested by either borrower or lender. Bad loans give both a bad time.

Teasers aside, adjustable rate mortgages still give a bad time to many borrowers and a bad name to many lenders, and Beck therefore is urging his 2,000 institutional members this year to go "beyond disclosure."

Beyond disclosure means putting all the information, the good and the bad, on the table. It means telling borrowers about such things as negative amortization. It means helping them equate loan to income. It means educating borrowers.

And more. Typically, a lender gives about 45 days notification that a borrower's rate will be going up. Beck wants to see it extended, the purpose being to allow borrowers to adjust and prepare for the higher payments.

This, many people will argue, is only fair because, in marked departure from five decades of practice, there has been a shift in risk from the lender to borrower. More like a sharing of risk, to be sure, but a shift nevertheless.

In the "old" days, two years or so ago, most loans were made on the basis of fixed interest rates. Thus if interest rates soared, the buyer was protected though the lender might be threatened with bankruptcy.

As recently as the first quarter of 1982, for example, the percentage of fixed to adjustable rate mortgages was 3-to-1. But by May of this year, 62 percent of all mortgage loans made were at adjustable rates.

Some critics view this as an anomaly. In keeping with the trend toward more consumer protection, they say, almost every industry in American has taken on added responsibilities for such things as product safety and quality.

Some of this, of course, has been forced upon them by legislation, but much has been willingly assumed because, reasonable people agree, the purchaser is essentially an amateur while the seller is usually a professional.

In contrast, according to critics, development of the adjustable rate mortgage has transferred more risk to the amateur buyer and lessened that of the professional lender.

But the adjustable rate loan has done many things "for" — as opposed to "to" — both buyers and lenders. Most importantly, it has enabled many buyers to get into houses they wouldn't have had a chance of buying just a few years ago, and it has kept the lending industry alive and ready to make loans.

Beck, who heads Margaretten & Co., mortgage division of Berg Enterprises of Iselin, N.J., contends that if Americans have had a love affair with the fixed-rate mortgage, they have something more than an infatuation with ARMs.

But, he agrees, that infatuation must be backed by facts. He feels that the worst thing for either lender or borrower is for the latter to wake up too late to the details of his loan and then blame the lender.

What the borrower wants, he asserts, are 1. a relatively low first-year rate, 2. a qualification rate less than that being charged on fixed-rate loans and 3. consumer safeguards in the form of interest rate caps.

The interest rate caps would apply both to the number of percentage points by which the rate could rise during the adjustment period — generally one, three or five years — and a lifetime cap as well.

Both borrower and lender, for example, might agree to the fairness of an existing loan on which the adjustment cap was set at 2 percent and the lifetime cap at around 16 percent, said Berg.

But, he says again, if the mortgage industry's integrity is to be retained, it behooves lenders to spell out the conditions for borrowers, make sure they understand, and educate them if they do not.

Republicans 'Content'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a few days to think about it, President Reagan's advisers have decided they are "content" with the Democrats' selection of Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro as the first female vice presidential candidate on a major party ticket.

An administration official said recently that Reagan, in his quest for re-election, is ready to stress his clear philosophical differences with the Democratic ticket, headed by former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, in campaign appearances that will begin even before the Republican convention Aug. 20. Ms. Ferraro has compiled one of the most liberal voting records in Congress.

Mainly, the president is expected to maintain there are vast differences in the two parties' candidates when it comes to issues, experience, merits, and where they are willing to fight for electoral votes.

But there are other factors at play as well. While they may not be eager to admit it, there are certain factors about the selection of Ms. Ferraro, besides the fact that she's a woman, that Republicans could have done without.

Namely, Ms. Ferraro happens to be an Italian Catholic, an ethnic group considered a major swing group in the important battleground of the Northeast.

Just as there is no way to know for sure whether women will be inclined to vote for Ms. Ferraro because she's a woman, neither is it possible to tell whether the nation's 12 million Italians, or whether Catholics, will tend to favor one of their own.

If they do, Reagan could be in trouble in some of the Northeast states he is targeting for victory, such as New Jersey and Connecticut. Republican strategists concede that New York, which was leaning toward the Democrats even before Ms. Ferraro was on the ticket, will be more difficult than ever for the Republicans now.

Like the rest of the country, it took a while for Reagan's aides to decide what they thought of Ms. Ferraro.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — If American voters had their way, this year's Democratic and Republican conventions would be the last. Two-thirds of persons interviewed recently said presidential candidates should be chosen in a nationwide primary election instead of by political party conventions as at present.

In the latest Gallup survey, 67 percent of Americans today favor the new plan while 21 percent are opposed and 12 percent are undecided, figures that closely parallel those recorded in 1980.

The plan has had bipartisan backing each time it has been put to the public. Currently 68 percent of Democrats, 62 percent of Republicans and 70 percent of Independents vote in favor of a nationwide presidential primary.

Here is the question asked since 1952:

"It has been suggested that presidential candidates be chosen by the voters in a nationwide primary election instead of by political party conventions as at present. Would you favor or oppose this?"

Here are the latest results, nationwide and by political affiliation:

	Favor	Oppose	No Opinion
NATIONAL	67%	21%	12%
Republicans	62	28	10
Democrats	68	18	14
Independents	70	19	11

American voters also favor, but by a smaller, 45 percent to 30 percent ratio, changing the present primary election system to a regional system in which four individual regional primaries would be held in different weeks of June during presidential election years.

The public's current views closely parallel those recorded in 1982 when 44 percent voted in favor while 33 percent were opposed.

The chief arguments given by those who favor a nationwide presidential primary are:

1. Under the present system, many Americans are denied the opportunity to vote directly for the candidate of their choice.
2. Current primaries frequently do not give a true measure of a party's strongest candidate because not all candidates enter each state primary.
3. The American people became jaded with presidential campaigns, which do not stretch over the better part of a year. Surveys are found the public to favor shorter campaigns, such as those conducted in England.
4. The present primary system is a grueling process leaving the candidates physically exhausted and their funds depleted.
5. Cross-over voting confuses the true support for candidates. In certain states, for example, Republican voters are able to vote in Democratic primaries and Democratic voters in Republican primaries.

Arguments Against National Primary

Those opposed to the idea of a national presidential primary offer these arguments:

1. Under the present system a candidate has to face up to many trying situations — his mettle is tested — and the public can size him up better.
2. The generally low voter turnout for the state primaries suggests that if there were a run-off in a nationwide primary, voter participation would be lower than it is now — that voters would resist having to go to the polls a second time. This would result in an even smaller proportion of the electorate selecting the candidates than is now the case.
3. A nationwide primary would tend to favor nominees who were well known to voters and have large financial resources, excluding "dark horses" who can gradually work their way into public familiarity under the state primary system and thus gain financial support.

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,522 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 22-25.

Keeping The News Accurate

There's been a spate of mea culpas in the press recently by reporters who admitted they had embroidered the facts at times to make their reports more readable and, they contended, more honest.

New Yorker magazine writer Alistair Reid started the epidemic when he told a group of students at Yale last year of some of the techniques he had employed in preparing ostensibly factual articles. He admitted that "a small fly-blown bar" he described in a 1961 "Letter from Barcelona" in which Spaniards were described as openly jeering a televised speech by dictator Francisco Franco no longer existed at the time of the broadcast. He also admitted that two of the characters he described were composites of persons he had actually met and that opinions allegedly voiced by Spaniards were his own musings. Reid told the New York Times that he was seeking "a larger reality," and was serving "truth" as he saw it.

The writer's revelations were widely reported in the news media. Some editorialists denounced the liberties Reid admitted he had taken with the truth, and Time Magazine asserted such fabrications, no matter how honestly motivated, are violations of journalistic ethics. It quoted Reid as saying he now regarded his inventions as "an error, without qualification."

Michael Gartner, president of the Des Moines Register, summed up the attitude of many newsmen by asserting, "Anybody can be a good writer if you don't have to deal with the facts."

However, the incident reflected the anxieties that have troubled honest reporters since jesting Pilate posed the question, "What is truth?" However, I personally concluded long ago that it was more honest to be faithful to the tenor of a meeting, a convention, a trial or other event than to be factually accurate in every detail.

That did not mean it was OK to get your facts wrong, but it did mean that the less important facts could be omitted from a report while the more important facts could be emphasized. Nothing could be duller than a gavel to gavel report of a political convention or a legislative session. So, a reporter must pick and choose which facts to report. This is a subjective process which requires the newsmen to exercise judgment, and subjects him to the risk of being called biased and unfair if he is not extremely careful.

By the same token, I soon realized it was much more important, in quoting a person involved in the news, to report accurately and honestly what he intended to say instead of trying to set down slavishly the actual words he used. In the first place, many people frequently stumble in talking so that they say one thing when they mean another. In the second place, it's impossible for a reporter to write down in his notes exactly what a speaker said — unless he has a tape recorder, which did not exist until a few years ago.

Another lesson a reporter soon learns is to ignore meaningless technicalities and to strive to write an objective report that tells the reader in simple language what happened and, more importantly, what is signified. This is a reporter's most difficult task. He walks a tight rope as he strives both to be fair and not to lean over backwards in doing so.

I got a pointed reminder of this in the gubernatorial campaign between Kerr Scott and Charles M. Johnson. I actually favored Johnson and voted for him, but two Johnson supporters accused me of bias. After the campaign was over, one of the two withdrew his accusation. It was the only time in nearly 50 years of reporting for the Associated Press that I was so accused.

Another hazard confronting a reporter as he strives to be fair is the need to be succinct and brief — to write about highly involved and complex matters in the fewest possible number of words. Sometimes, trying to be brief gets you in trouble, as I learned to my sorrow in a story I wrote years ago about Dr. Frank Graham, beloved president of the University of North Carolina who was appointed to the U.S. Senate by Kerr Scott. Graham was challenged for re-election by Raleigh attorney Willis Smith, a campaign that Smith won after one of the bitterest campaigns in North Carolina history.

In preparing a story about Graham years later, I interviewed — along with several others — Dr. Louis R. Wilson, UNC librarian. Wilson told me flatly that Smith supporters distributed a leaflet in eastern North Carolina bearing a phony photograph of Mrs. Graham dancing with a black man. In writing my story, I first wrote that Wilson said such a leaflet was circulated by the Smith people. But in trying to shorten a lengthy story, I eliminated the phrase "Wilson said."

CBS Says Kidnapper Seeking $1 Million

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations for the release of a woman kidnapped from a bridge tournament are under way, CBS News said Saturday night.

Attributing its information to unspecified "law enforcement sources," the network said the talks followed receipt Friday of a demand for a $1 million ransom for Edith Rosenkranz, 60.

Mrs. Rosenkranz, wife of the multi-millionaire founder of Syntex Corp., a major pharmaceutical firm, was abducted at gunpoint from the garage of the Sheraton-Washington Hotel late Thursday night.

Police spokesman Joseph Gentile, asked about the network report, said, "I can neither confirm nor deny it."

Lt. William White said earlier in the day that detectives and FBI agents had shifted the focus of their investigation from a search of the hotel.

White declined to say what leads investigators were pursuing. He told reporters at the hotel there was "nothing of any significance" to report on the investigation.

Robert Bonomi, public relations director for the American Contract Bridge League, sponsor of the tournament, said that as a result of the kidnapping, some contestants were being more cautious.

"I would say they're probably being more careful in their passage outside the hotel," he said.

Bonomi said, however, that the 10-day tournament — now in its ninth day — was continuing despite the abduction, and he indicated that no participants had withdrawn.

Mrs. Rosenkranz's husband George Rosenkranz, the retired chairman of Syntex Corp. whose team was seeded third among 119 playing in the tournament, continued to stay in seclusion at the hotel. His teammates have played without him since Thursday night in a private, undisclosed room.

Bonomi said that after the kidnapping, there had been "a very great outpouring of sympathy for Dr. Rosenkranz" from his fellow players.

By Saturday morning, most bridge buffs and players at the tournament appeared to be absorbed in the final matches, talking little of the kidnapping.

"I don't think it's affected the tournament particularly," said Shirley Silverman, an author of bridge books who was selling her own works and other publications in the hotel lobby.

Mrs. Rosenkranz, who along with her husband resides in Mexico City, was abducted at about 11:50 p.m. as she and a 23-year-old woman from McLean, Va., were walking on the fourth floor of the parking garage, police said.

The assailant, armed with a handgun, led Mrs. Rosenkranz down an exit ramp after refusing an offer by the woman to take their purses.

Police would not identify the younger woman, who was left behind unharmed.

They described the kidnapper as a slim black man, about 28 years old.

Postal Workers Turn Down Proposal, Break Off Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Union negotiators turned up their noses at the U.S. Postal Service's final offer Saturday — dubbing it "the same garbage ... in dirtier paper" — and broke off talks as contracts covering 500,000 workers expired.

No strike was called — strikes by federal employees are illegal — and union leaders said they would decide the next move at union conventions next month. But union leaders have said a strike was unlikely.

The contract expired at 12:01 a.m. EDT Saturday. Shortly afterward, union negotiators stalked out of negotiations.

"Shame on them," shouted Moe Biller, who heads the American Postal Workers Union.

Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, announced: "The talks are off. The negotiations are over."

"We're walking out with our heads high," Biller told reporters.

"Their last offer was the same garbage as before, wrapped in dirtier paper," he said.

Postmaster General William Bolger called the Postal Service's final proposal "reasonable." Both sides accused the other of not bargaining seriously.

The impasse could result in arbitration on the nation's largest labor contract. Federal law provides for fact-finding and arbitration if no agreement can be reached in 90 days.

An APWU spokesman said the Postal Service's final offer was a 3-year wage freeze and a two-tier wage structure curbing wages of new employees wages by 22 percent.

"The bargaining process has not been able to work because the presidents of the (two unions) never seriously bargained," Bolger said.

The average postal worker's salary is $23,000 a year.

Some regional postmasters directed supervisors to regard it as a job action if any employee called in sick Saturday. But national Postal Service officials denounced the action and apologized to the unions, saying the regional officials acted independently and without Postal Service approval.

A Postal Service spokesman said there was no indication that more workers than usual called in sick Saturday.

Earnings Dropped

Branch Corp., parent holding company of Branch Banking & Trust Co., reported consolidated net income for the six months ended June 30 of $7,725,000 compared with $8,728,000 for the first half of 1983. Net income was $3,984,000, down from $4,738,000 a year earlier.

Total assets of the corporation on June 30 were $1.90 billion, an increase of 22.2 percent over the total reported at the end of last year's second quarter. Loans outstanding showed a growth of 29.6 percent and deposits increased by 23.2 percent over the balance reported last June.

Video Interest Down

By The Associated Press
While some trend watchers say video games are going the way of the hoola hoop, some North Carolina video arcade owners say the problem of diminishing interest in Pac Man and Frogger is a mixture of poor management and overkill.

"Interest in video games hit a peak and then began to decline," said Bob Hood, vice president of Greensboro's MVA Amusement Co.

"I don't think it's a fad, and I don't think it's dying," Hood said. "We've just reached an oversaturation point on the market. There are too many manufacturers pumping out games right and left."

Hood said. "But it didn't work. Nobody wants to pay $5,000 for a video game that will lose popularity."

Regular video games sell for about $2,220 each. Manufacturers now sell kits to convert the more expensive machines into new games.

The APWU and the Letter Carriers union, together, represent 500,000 postal workers across the country. They will hold simultaneous conventions in Las Vegas Aug. 20, when they will discuss their next move. Union officials said no action would be taken until then.

SLEEPING PEACEFULLY — Milton Birkhead's hands made a comfortable bed for his granddaughter, 1-year-old Stephanie Davis. Stephanie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Davis of Charlottesville, Va. (AP Laserphoto)

Blair Norris, vice president of Brady's Distributors, a regional distributor of coin-operated video machines in Charlotte, said people just don't stay as long and the machines don't make as much money.

"It used to be that you could earn $100 per unit each week," Norris said. "Now if you're earning $40 or $50 a week for each game, you're doing well."

The trouble started two years ago, when video games were the hottest amusement property going. Arcade owners, prospering from the games' popularity, wanted more machines.

Atari, Bally Midway and other manufacturers obliged by flooding the market with games. But in their eagerness to oblige, they released mostly repetitious games instead of new, more difficult ones, according to Paul Barkley, executive director of The Depot, a Greensboro teen center which uses video games.

As players became more skillful, the earnings capabilities of each game decreased.

"A game only stays popular for seven to nine weeks now, instead of months," Hood said.

Some say video companies can't do much about the problem. Games with sophisticated laser disk graphics and stereophonic sound, like Cinamantronics' Dragon's Lair, represented one revival attempt.

Hood said it failed miserably.

"Dragon's Lair was supposed to be to video what Michael Jackson was to the recording industry,"

Fatal Wreck

QUANTICO, Va. (UPI) — The driver of a military truck that overturned on a rural highway, killing one marine and injuring 21, reacted too forcefully when the truck's front wheel jumped off the road in a curve, authorities said Saturday.

Prince William County dispatcher S.B. Hayhurst said the investigating officer, Sandy Exum, determined the cause after interviewing a passenger in the truck's front seat.

The wreck, which occurred Friday about four miles from the entrance of Quantico Marine Base, left two officers training candidates in critical but stable condition. All but two were officer candidates.

The passenger, who was not identified, said the driver jerked his steering wheel after the 3-ton truck jumped off the right side of the road, Hayhurst said. That caused the driver to jerk back the wheel and send the truck into a skid that caused it to turn over, Hayhurst said.

A fire believed to have been caused by friction began on the truck's canvas covering, said Maj. Rick Stepien. Hayhurst quoted Exum as saying the fire after the wreck caused injuries, but Stepien said he did not have reports of fire-related injuries.

Stepien identified the driver as Lance Cpl. Lee Badgley, of Streamwood, Ill., who was listed in good condition. Hayhurst said it is not known whether charges will be pressed.

Several Factors Involved In Project

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A lot of planning and leg work, in addition to actual labor, is involved when a city undertakes as large a street resurfacing project as Greenville will be beginning Monday, according to City Engineer Tom Tysinger.

The resurfacing project, part of a number of roadway improvements scheduled for fiscal 1984-85, will involve approximately 18 miles of the city's streets as well as the time and skills of nearly 40 city and Barrus Construction Co. employees.

Those won't be the only people involved, however. As Tysinger points out, everyone in Greenville will at some time be affected by the $587,185 project, being paid for by revenues generated through the recent sale of municipal bonds. Because such a large population is involved, he said the city is seeking the cooperation and understanding of all who use the city's streets.

To make the project run as smoothly as possible, city employees will be notifying residents of the dates their streets will be worked on to allow adequate time to arrange for alternate parking and travel arrangements. Flyers will also be placed under doors and on car windshields several days before a particular street is to be resurfaced and temporary no parking signs will be erected.

Approximately 120 street segments will be refurbished in the project, with first priority going to areas around East Carolina University. "It's imperative that we get work around the college done before school starts," Tysinger explained.

He added that most work will be done during the regular work week, but that resurfacing on major traffic routes such as Fifth and First streets will have to be done on Saturdays.

Although a definite finishing date has not been set, Tysinger said that everyone is shooting for early fall completion.

Improvements will also be made at several intersections within the city, Tysinger said. A $1,300 CBD traffic system designed to coordinate traffic progression will be hooked up to signal lights in the downtown district and traffic signals at the intersections of Fourth and Elm and Fifth and Elm streets will be upgraded to meet state requirements.

"The state requested that we put in additional lights at the Elm Street intersections and we plan to do some work on turning lane timing at those intersections as well," Tysinger explained. He said upgrading the traffic light systems at the intersections will cost approximately $50,000 and will be paid by both the state and the city. Greenville's share of the cost is $26,000.

The state is also providing partial funding for replacement of the Hooker Road Bridge, Tysinger said. "The state will be providing approximately 80 percent of the total cost of $129,000. But everyone's probably noticed that the city has that amount entered in the budget for this year. We do it that way for bookkeeping purposes. The city pays as the project goes along and then the state reimburses in one lump sum," Tysinger explained.

He added that motorists need not be concerned about the condition of the bridge. "It's safe. No one will fall through. The state just felt that the bridge warranted replacement, because maintenance costs were beginning to mount too high. It's a cost ratio type situation."

If you have any questions about the resurfacing program, contact the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Kennedy Mom Is 94

HYANNISPORT, Mass. (UPI) — The Kennedy family gathers at its Cape Cod compound today to celebrate the 94th birthday of matriarch Rose Kennedy, who is in grave condition with a stroke suffered earlier this year.

Mrs. Kennedy has been confined to her bedroom on the second floor of her summer home since suffering the stroke. She is fed intravenously and receives oxygen to help her breathe.

Nurses are at her side constantly, doctors see her daily and a priest says mass by her bedside on Sundays and several other days each week. Mrs. Kennedy, a devout Catholic, is given communion, but only a morsel of the wafer.

One of her daughters — Patricia Lawford, Eunice Kennedy Shriver or Jean Smith — is at the compound at all times to supervise her care.

The routine was established after she was brought north for Mothers Day from her winter home in Palm Beach, Fla., said a close family friend privy to the comings and goings inside the compound of Kennedy homes.

Many of her five children, 28 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren were expected this weekend at the compound of sprawling summer homes overlooking Nantucket Sound.

Ferraro's Shopping No Longer Routine

NEW YORK (UPI) — Geraldine Ferraro went shopping at her neighborhood grocery store Saturday, as she does every week, and caused a commotion.

Her first day back home in Queens, the newly nominated Democratic vice presidential candidate and her husband returned a bagful of soda bottles to collect a $2.45 deposit and began loading up a cart with items that included dog food, detergent, applesauce, soda, imported beer, chicken and bug spray. Trailing behind them were aides, Secret Service agents and a mob of reporters as other shoppers stopped to greet the three-term congresswoman at Key Food near her home in the exclusive Forest Hills Garden section of Queens.

"She's regular, ordinary — like us," said Jennie Kirchner, 18, who had expected the store to be empty because it was raining.

Ms. Kirchner had Ms. Ferraro, who was wearing diamond ear studs, pants and a trench coat, autograph her shopping list.

Ms. Ferraro has a housekeeper who cooks and cleans while she is in Washington during the week but the congresswoman does her own marketing on Saturdays.

"All Queens women do the shopping," said Pat Malon, an economics professor at C.W. Post College and friend of Ms. Ferraro's for 15 years, who also was doing her shopping.

"You have got to give this woman a lot of credit," Mrs. Malon said. "She's done what everyone thinks is impossible."

"And put in a good word for John (Zaccaro)," she said. "There are not many husbands as supportive."

Zaccaro, wearing a red plaid shirt and casual slacks, told TV crews jammed around the checkout counter, "Everybody help pay the bill," which totaled $119.13.

Told that Ronald Reagan had taken a similar trip to his butcher shortly after becoming president, Ms. Ferraro retorted, "Had he done it every week for the previous 24 years?" That is how long she and her husband, a real estate developer, have been married.

Home to relax after the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco, Ms. Ferraro said she was perturbed at the commotion she was causing in the supermarket.

"I'm not going to do this every week with you guys," she told reporters. "You are going to lose votes for me. Do you see their faces? They want to do their shopping."

Surveying the fuss, shopper Jane Horton said "I'm glad I'm not running for anything."

"I can't see her doing this in Washington when she's vice president," said Agneela Inzerillo, a checker who said she planned to register when she turns 18 next month so she can vote the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

"I think you should have been nominated for president," said Vinnie Salerno, a butcher. "I'm very proud of her," said Salerno, a child of Italian immigrants, as is Ms. Ferraro. "I'm proud because she's a woman and her heritage and the way she was brought up. It really is the American dream."

Only a few shoppers grew exasperated at the trouble they had pushing shopping carts through the crowd.

"I think she should have sent somebody else. This isn't helping me get my shopping done," complained Barry Blaine, 28.

Ms. Ferraro is spending a few days relaxing at home, before returning to Washington, and then eventually on to Minnesota to map the campaign with Walter Mondale.

Guards Quell Attica Uprising

ATTICA, N.Y. (UPI) — Guards at Attica Correctional Facility, scene of the nation's bloodiest prison revolt in 1971, early Saturday quelled a seven-hour uprising touched off when a guard shot a bat-wielding inmate.

The all-night rebellion in the crowded prison began after an inmate was shot in the arm for striking a guard with a metal baseball bat and refusing to drop it. The guard was not seriously hurt, and there were no other injuries.

Officials said 182 inmates, or 9 percent of the prison's population, refused to return to their cells until dawn, when they relented peacefully.

Inmate Andre Porter, 22, of Rochester, was in serious condition at the Erie County Medical Center in Buffalo, where he underwent seven and a half hours of surgery on knife wounds to the abdomen and a bullet wound in his right arm.

Porter was serving a five- to 15-year sentence for assault.

A second inmate, who was not identified, was placed in solitary confinement pending an investigation. The second inmate was thought to have stabbed Porter.

Hobby Gains Prison Sentence Cut

RALEIGH (UPI) — Wilbur Hobby, former president of the state AFL-CIO, has won a reduction of his prison sentence for misapplying federal job-training funds. U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt last week cut Hobby's sentence from 18 months to one year. Britt said the action would preserve his original intent to require Hobby serve six months to one year in prison before being eligible for parole. With the reduction, Hobby could be released from prison after nine or ten months. He would have been required to serve at least 14 months under the original sentence.

Hobby, the state AFL-CIO president for 12 years, was convicted in 1981 of fraud and conspiracy involving funds for a federal CETA job-training program he administered. Britt sentenced him to 18 months in prison, citing federal parole guidelines making him eligible for parole after serving six to 12 months. He reduced the sentence after Hobby's lawyers pointed out different parole guidelines are used for fraud cases. Hobby, 59, remained free pending appeals, but the Supreme Court upheld his conviction earlier this month.

In a motion filed July 13, attorneys David S. Rudolf and Donald H. Beskind asked the sentence be reconsidered because federal parole guidelines for cases involving fraud would have required Hobby to serve at least 14 months in prison. The attorneys said the guidelines would make Hobby's sentence substantially harsher than Britt intended. Britt said Friday he could not recall if he knew about the different guidelines for fraud cases when he sentenced Hobby, but he only intended for Hobby to serve six to 12 months.

The attorneys also asked Hobby be imprisoned at a federal community treatment center in Durham so he could qualify for work release and keep his job at American Tobacco Co. Hobby has worked there since he losing his union re-election bid. Britt's order did not respond to that request. Federal officials have not determined where Hobby will serve his sentence. If Hobby is forced to quit his job to go to prison, age and poor health would prevent him from finding a new job upon his release, his lawyers said.

Sale Talks Suspended By Liggett Officials

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina farmers were among the first to find that they could pluck profits from pick-your-own operations, and South Carolina farmers are now cultivating the same idea. In the early 1970s, North Carolina became one of the first states in which growers started pick-your-own operations on a large scale, according to Edmund Estes, an extension economist at N.C. State University. By 1978, the last year in which a survey was conducted, there were 846 North Carolina growers involved in direct marketing. Estes estimates that there are 1,000 such farmers in the state now. By contrast, South Carolina farmers did not get into the pick-your-own business in earnest until the past five years, according to Ansel King, a Cooperative Extension Service specialist at Clemson University. The extension service issued a direct markets directory in January that listed 400 South Carolina farmers who are actually in direct marketing. But King said that is only a small percentage of the farmers who are actually in the business. Experts estimate that there are at least 1,400 pick-your-own or direct marketing operations in the Carolinas, in which farmers bypass wholesalers and go straight to the consumer with roadside stands, farmers markets or, increasingly, by allowing the customer to pick their own fruits and vegetables.

N.C. Farmers Like Pick-Your-Own Idea

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Negotiations to sell Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. to its management and employees have been suspended by Liggett and its parent company. The talks were halted indefinitely because of new developments in the cigarette market, a Liggett spokesman said Friday. "Basically, it has to do with competition," said Carol Jova. "Right now, we're concentrating our resources on fighting the competition." Liggett's parent company, GrandMet USA, and Liggett officials seeking to purchase the tobacco subsidiary jointly agreed to call off the negotiations. GrandMet is continuing to support the company, a major producer of generic cigarettes.

In January, GrandMet announced it was negotiating to sell the tobacco company to management and employees. A proposed purchase price of $325 million was reached in May.

Delegates Stumped For Locals

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — North Carolina delegates went to the Democratic National Convention to nominate a president, but they also took steps to elect a governor, a senator and other Democrats back home. Some of the state's top elected officials — Gov. Jim Hunt, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and state Sen. Bob Jordan of Montgomery County — used the event to raise money and organize the 88 delegates on the assumption that they are some of the state's most active Democrats. Hunt staged three events to raise money for his U.S. Senate campaign against Republican incumbent Jesse Helms. His aides urged delegates to wear their campaign buttons as walking advertisements seeking money and assistance from other states' delegates. Hunt, who announced the state's presidential balloting, received loud applause from the full convention when Edmisten introduced him as the man to replace Helms. "We're taking a group back that knows each other, is unified and understands why the Democratic Party is important and can work with lots of success," Hunt said. "They have learned about the party, gotten to know the candidates and feel like they're responsible to them." Hunt acknowledged, however, that his race would be boosted by a good convention. "If the party comes out united here my race would be well served," he said. State Party Chairman David Price said his goals for the convention had more to do with North Carolina than with the national party. He said he wanted to build a "cohesive delegation" that knew delegates Edmisten, Hunt, Jordan, Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt and Congressmen Charlie Rose, Robin Britt and Steve Neal well. "It was an inspiring week," Price said. "I think we better appreciate the things we share." Edmisten, the party's gubernatorial nominee, and Jordan, the candidate for lieutenant governor, met with minority delegates to enlist their support for the upcoming fall elections. Edmisten also hosted a breakfast for the delegation. Edmisten, who was involved in a bitter runoff for the nomination with former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, wanted to keep peace and build unity in the delegation. "There are people at this convention who did not support me in the first or second primary," Edmisten said. "But I don't know anyone now who doesn't support me." Edmisten also went with Hunt to a meeting of Southern governors, where he made friendships he hopes will be beneficial later. The unity in working to defeat Republicans does not mean unity in all other matters. LaVonia Allison of Durham, a Jackson delegate, wanted a national party platform that talked more about jobs, peace and justice. She sees little reward for minorities in the platform or nomination of Walter Mondale. She wants blacks to make a greater impact on the campaigns of Hunt, Edmisten and Jordan. "Women now have (vice presidential candidate) Gerry Ferraro as a concrete example of what their participation (in the political process) has done," Ms. Allison said. "They must do the same for the most loyal Democrats the party has had." Jackson delegate James Mitchell said he went to the convention to "be part of the political process." But he feels more successful said he thinks he helped some people realize there may need to be modifications to the party platform.

Victims' Fateful Day Is Reconstructed

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — It was the longest day in the life of 11-year-old Joshua Coleman, but not because he got up before 5 a.m. to go fishing.

By the time he finally got to sleep last Wednesday night — with the help of sedatives, for the first time in his young life — Joshua had a dozen buckshot pellets in his body.

He also had played dead for an hour on the broiling asphalt parking lot outside a McDonald's restaurant where a madman with guns killed 21 people. The dead included two of Joshua's best friends, crumpled before his eyes alongside their bicycles after the three boys made a fatal decision to get ice cream.

Last Wednesday was the shortest day in the life of 41-year-old James Oliver Huberty. It ended at 5:17 p.m., when a police sniper's bullet killed him by tearing his aorta away from his heart.

For the first time in his life, Huberty had made a mark. He had gone beyond what Henry David Thoreau called the "quiet desperation" with which most people lead their lives. The private demons that haunted him, that spoke to him and gave him visions, exploded in a 70-minute fusillade of bullets that hit 20 people — the 21 dead plus 19 who were wounded.

Huberty was a tall, thin, balding, lonely, sad, bitter man fascinated with guns. He left no legacy other than the martial arts he taught his young daughters. And his many victims.

He left his family, the relatives and friends and neighbors of the people who were shot, and, finally, everyone in Southern California and the United States and the whole world who heard about the tragedy and wondered what could possess one human being to so senselessly destroy so many others.

For Joshua Coleman's friends, Omar Hernandez and David Flores, both 11, last Wednesday started as an ordinary day. It was another of those relentlessly warm, sunny summer days in southernmost Southern California, though the unusually high humidity had many people complaining in this predominantly Hispanic, low-income San Diego suburb only a mile north of the Mexican border.

Omar and David spent much of the day, as usual, riding their bikes through the neighborhood. Around three o'clock in the afternoon, they went to the house where Joshua, who had formerly lived in the neighborhood, was visiting his grandmother.

He was showing her the barracuda and six bass he had caught on a deep-sea fishing expedition that morning with relatives and friends. The boys asked Joshua if he wanted to bike down the hill to San Ysidro Boulevard and get something to eat. He asked and was given permission, and the three boys rode off.

It seemed a normal day to other people, too. Lawrence "Gus" Verslius, who was to retire two days later after 38 years as a truckdriver, made his daily late afternoon stop for a coffee break at the McDonald's on San Ysidro Boulevard. Jackie Wright Reyes, 18, with her 8-month-old son Carlos, stopped at the restaurant for a snack after a routine shopping trip.

Miguel Victoria, 74, and his wife Alicia, 70, paid their usual Wednesday afternoon visit from their home just across the border in Tijuana to relatives in San Ysidro. Neva Denise Caine, 22, a petite and beautiful bride of a promising young chiropractor at their wedding a month earlier, reported on time to her job as manager at the McDonald's, a solid, low, dark-brick structure with the familiar golden arches growing out of a playground popular with neighborhood children.

All those people are now dead, victims of the unfathomable rage of James Oliver Huberty.

Later, Huberty's wife, Etna, described the first part of Wednesday as "normal." For them, that meant going to court for a minor traffic violation — crossing a double yellow line. It was a successful venture since, pleading ignorance, they were not fined.

On the way home, Huberty abruptly suggested that he and his wife and their oldest daughter Zelia, 14, who had gone to court with them, turn around and go to the San Diego Zoo. Huberty had recently been fired from a job as a security guard at a condominium complex — the latest in a long series of failed careers that included embalming and welding — and had used his last paycheck to buy a year-long family pass to the zoo.

"He was quiet," his wife said later. "He looked at the animals. There were no arguments." But she also confessed a sense of dread. Huberty had been becoming more and more emotionally erratic in the seven months since they had left their home in Massillon, Ohio, after he lost two factory jobs and another job as a security guard.

"He told me God was 2 feet tall and had a big, long, gray beard," she said. He heard voices and sometimes talked back to them. He played with his guns, his "toys," his wife said.

On Tuesday, the day before the massacre, Huberty told his wife he had called a local mental health center for an appointment, but no one had called him back. "Society had their chance," he muttered. Officials later said they had a record of Mrs. Huberty calling to see if her husband had asked for an appointment, but no record of him calling for one.

At home after the zoo, Huberty went to the upstairs bedroom he shared with his wife in their two-bedroom, pale-yellow apartment in an adobe-style complex a block away from and overlooking the McDonald's. Mrs. Huberty did the dishes and went to the other bedroom, shared by Zelia and Cassandra, 10, to rest.

Huberty came in wearing camouflage-style fatigue pants and a black T-shirt and said, "I want to kiss you goodbye."

She said, "I want to kiss you, too."

Then she asked, "Where are you going honey?"

He replied, "I'm going hunting humans." Or something like that, said. His mother had promised to take him to a movie that night, probably "Gremlins," and he would need his strength to stay awake.

A few minutes later, just after 4 p.m., Huberty burst through the door of the McDonald's brandishing a semiautomatic rifle, a shotgun, a pistol and a shoulder bag full of ammunition. "I've killed thousands," he screamed. "Down." As people ducked down, Huberty began spraying fire, shooting even those lying supine.

Joshua, Omar and David rode their bikes down the hill to the Yum Yum doughnut shop, where the other two boys had one doughnut each and Joshua, hungry from his long day of fishing, had two. "A chocolate and one with some flaky stuff on it," he said. His mother had promised to take him to a movie that night, probably "Gremlins," and he would need his strength to stay awake.

The boys remounted their bikes and took a few pedals to get to the next parking lot, McDonald's. As they got off, Joshua heard someone across the street shout a warning in Spanish. And then he was hit by a shotgun blast. At first he thought someone had thrown a glass at him. Then he thought whoever had shouted at him from across the street was shooting at him.

He finally realized the fire was coming from inside the restaurant. "Omar fell down and was throwing up," Joshua said in an interview two days later at the hospital where he was listed in fair condition. "David fell back and blood started coming out of his head and his eyes rolled back."

Joshua tried to stand up but his legs buckled just as another blast went over his head. He lay down, trying not to whimper. An honors student who participated in an experimental "Kids in College" program last year when he was in fifth grade, Joshua decided his only hope was to play dead.

He gradually wormed himself so that his head was lying on the curb being overspread by his friends' blood. He lay there nearly motionless, occasionally peeking without fully opening his eyes. He waited for the SWAT team that he knew would come. "From TV," he said.

And he waited while the shooting continued intermittently for more than an hour. "I was just wondering if he was going to shoot me again," Joshua said.

Held up by rush-hour traffic, the Special Weapons and Tactics team was not in place until 4:45 p.m., three-quarters of an hour after the shooting began. The order for the police marksmen to draw their sights on Huberty and shoot to kill was given, withdrawn and reinstated eight minutes later, at 5:13 p.m.

Four minutes later, sharpshooter Charles Foster, from the roof of the Post Office adjacent to the McDonald's, got a clear view of Huberty through a broken window and squeezed off a shot that was true.

Police later said they did not begin shooting earlier for several reasons. They were afraid hostages were inside. They were afraid Huberty might have dressed someone else in his clothes. They were afraid a shot through the glass would be refracted off the mark and possibly hit a victim.

In addition, authorities said the eight-minute delay made no difference since all the victims were apparently shot and all 10 people who escaped, most of them McDonald's employees who hid and then sneaked out the back door, were safe in the 10 minutes after Huberty began firing.

Yacht Burns

CAROLINA BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A 45-yacht caught on fire off the southern North Carolina coast on Saturday afternoon, forcing the 13 people on board to jump to safety, authorities said.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Dennis Barber said that no one was injured.

"As far as we know ... all the people safely swam to shore," Barber said in a telephone interview.

The yacht caught fire about 3:45 p.m. along the Intercoastal Waterway off the coast of the New Hanover County town of Carolina Beach, he said.

It was not known what caused the fire or who the owner of the yacht was, Barber said.

Jackson Tour Continues

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — About 100 tickets remained unsold early Saturday as superstar singer Michael Jackson and his brothers prepared to open the third stop of their spectacular Jacksons Victory Tour.

Officials, however, predicted all 45,000 tickets available for the performance at the Gator Bowl would be sold by showtime at 9 p.m. About 17,000 tickets were still available for shows Sunday and Monday.

The Gator Bowl holds 60,000 people for football games, but the Jacksons' sound stage, which stretches from the 30-yard-line to the goal line, blocks out about 28,000 seats.

Three Miami women drove up Thursday and slept two nights in their car waiting for the celebrated performance, which uses 18,000 amps of electricity — an amount tour publicists say is enough for a small town.

"People said there was going to be lots of traffic and people camping out, but when we got here, we were the only ones here," said Sonia Ordenez, 18, who made the seven-hour drive from Miami with her sister, Sandra, 21, and Marlene Castillo, 18.

"We're the true fans," said Ms. Castillo.

Stadium security included metal detectors to screen fans for contraband — anything from cameras to guns, knives and recorders. Fans also were forbidden to bring in umbrellas, coolers, bottles or cans.

More than 200 security officers, including Jacksonville deputies and troopers from the Florida Highway Patrol, were on duty. Officers also were assigned to helicopters and boats in the nearby St. Johns River.

About 5,000 tickets still were available for the Sunday show, and about 12,000 were unsold for the Monday show, said Bob Sullivan, staff director for the Jacksons' Victory Tour '84.

Dan Lee, deputy director of the sports complex, said he expected all the concerts to sell out. Fans of the hit group were still adjusting to the recent switch from mail-order ticket purchases to over-the-counter sales, he said.

"Jacksonville is the first over-the-counter stop and I think we're still catching up from the impact of that," he said.

Tickets for the Jacksons' first two stops on the tour — at Kansas City, Mo., and Irving, Texas — were available only by mail in $120 blocks of four. Widespread complaints prompted Michael Jackson to ask promoters just before the tour's kickoff performance July 6 for a new ticket distribution system.

"I believe after they (fans) see the performance and the setup, they're going to realize why the tickets are that high," Lee said. "It's not just for the money that the Jacksons are making. It's a mammoth production."

Inventor Has Doubts About Laser's Use On Missiles

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The man who built the first operating laser doubts the concentrated beams of light can be used against ballistic missiles, as envisioned in President Reagan's "Star Wars" plan for nuclear defense.

Theodore H. Maiman's achievement 24 years ago was trumpeted, erroneously, in newspapers around the country as "the invention of the death ray."

But Maiman, 57, said it is as wrong now as it was in 1960 to equate the "splendid light" with death-dealing weaponry.

"The priorities then and now place weapons at the bottom of the list of uses," said Maiman, who advises companies using the laser in aerospace work, fiber optics and medicine.

Maiman's ruby-laser inspired a myriad of other lasers, with hundreds of uses ranging from science and medicine to communications and heavy industry.

He called the laser's many applications "sensible, practical, necessary," but said "there is some question about whether it would ever be practical," for use as a space-defense weapon.

Serious obstacles stand in the way of a laser-beam weapon, he said in a recent interview.

"Lasers, in the first place, are inefficient in converting energy," he said. "There is size in order to carry a large amount of energy. It would get pretty unwieldy... There are cost considerations, too. It's a touchier, more complex weapon."

"I really question — and many people question — the practicality of lasers themselves as weapons."

However, he said the laser's promise makes it "difficult to ignore."

"There might be some breakthroughs in lasers, some technology, that would make it practical. But considering current technology, there are serious questions," Maiman said.

He would recommend, instead, the continued development of "smart bombs" or "smart weapons" that use a laser beam as a guidance system. These already have been proven effective, he said.

Maiman's success with the first laser, when he was only 33, was greeted with "some skepticism and sour grapes" by other, better financed scientists in large laboratories, he said, "until they took my calculations and proved them by reproducing it."

Maiman worked for the Hughes Aircraft Co.'s research laboratories, and officials there wanted to stop the program after hearing that some people had worked with the ruby crystal and dismissed it as impractical.

"They said I was beating a dead horse. But I got pretty persistent and stuck my neck out 20 miles," Maiman said.

The controversy over Maiman's ruby laser came about "because it was so different than what the prominent scientists had predicted," he said. "Many had doubts" until Bell Laboratories copied and reproduced his results, he said.

He was criticized, too, by some of his colleagues because the prosaic announcement of the achievement — couched in scientific terms — was blown up out of proportion by the reports that he had invented a death ray.

"It was really misleading. And I was angry about it. But that's what caused the intense interest," he said.

Maiman, a member of Control Laser Corp.'s board of directors here, was inducted this year into the National Inventors Hall of Fame, joining such figures as Thomas Alva Edison, Alexander Graham Bell and the Wright Brothers.

The hall in Arlington, Va., honors individuals "who conceived the great technological advances which this nation fosters through its patent system."

Asked about other dramatic future uses of the laser, Maiman was most enthusiastic about its medical applications.

Using the laser to treat cancer and clear blocked arteries, which could eliminate the need for heart bypass operations, are "two of the most dramatic uses within the realm of possibility within the next 10 years."

Moon Adjusts To Prison Life

DANBURY, Conn. (UPI) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, leader of the Unification Church, Saturday adjusted to his small room and the regimen of prison life, while his followers accused the United States of "jailing an innocent man of God."

Moon, 64, arrived at the Federal Correctional Institution at 11 p.m. Friday — an hour before the midnight deadline imposed by a federal judge to begin an 18-month sentence for income tax evasion.

"He's doing well," a prison spokesman said.

Moon arrived in a sedan, accompanied by a station wagon and two other sedans, at the minimum security camp atop the picturesque hills of western Connecticut, 65 miles northwest of New York.

Inmates lead a regimented life, though more relaxed than in a traditional prison. There are no cells, walls or fences in the camp for 200 inmates in a dormitory style setting. Two inmates share bunk beds in an 8-by-8 foot room.

Moon, who spent his last hours of freedom at his $625,000 mansion in Irvington, N.Y., will share a room with his associate, Takeru Kamiyama, who was also convicted in the case and ordered to serve a six-month sentence at the prison.

After checking into the facility Moon was fingerprinted and photographed and ordered to exchange his business suit for institutional clothing — surplus khakis and fatigues.

Warden Dennis Luther said starting Monday Moon will begin work as a janitor or in the prison kitchen. Because of the Korean evangelist's difficulties with English, Luther said Moon probably could not work in the prison library or textile industry.

In his free time, Moon can use the multi-purpose recreational room with a gym, weight-lifting equipment and ping pong tables. There are two television rooms open 24 hours a day, video cassette movies and a recreational field outside.

After Moon entered the prison, leaders of his church criticized the federal government's case.

"The United States has just incarcerated an innocent man of God. May God forgive this country," said Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church.

Durst said, "The United States has never been kind to religious or racial minorities, and with Rev. Moon they have a double indemnity. The Rev. Moon seeks only God's blessing on this nation."

Moon, who claims his religious mission came directly from Jesus Christ, said in a statement issued by church officials he was innocent and was being persecuted by the government.

Durst said the Unification Church plans to open a small office in Danbury, although the church headquarters will remain in New York city.

Moon was convicted in 1982 for not paying taxes on $162,000 in interest earned on nearly $2 million deposited in New York banks. His appeal to the Supreme Court was refused May 14.

No Kisses, Hugs For New Teams

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Smile, wave, gesture, applaud, shake hands — but never, never embrace or kiss.

If you watch closely as Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro conduct their campaign for the White House, you'll see it is page one of their "Book of Etiquette."

No hugs. No kisses. Not even a little peck on the cheek.

A held hand is taboo.

When Mondale and Ferraro stood before thousands of cheering, flag-waving delegates at the Democratic National Convention Thursday night after Mondale gave his acceptance speech, they were close together — but not too close.

A memo by the Mondale staff, obtained by NBC-TV, outlined the orders:

"WFM (Walter F. Mondale) remains on right side of rostrum and applauds Ferraro as she comes on stage from left; they shake hands at rostrum and the two candidates wave together at rostrum with outstretched arms."

Then — in words underlined — it added: "No joined hands held aloft — now or at any time during demonstration."

The first sign of a determined effort to avoid any possible suggestion of a romantic tie came in Minneapolis when Mondale announced her as his vice presidential selection.

It was awkward, with each appearing not exactly sure what to do. But they did not embrace.

Olympic Torch Awaits Games

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of people cheered Saturday as football great O.J. Simpson relayed the Olympic Torch to a 7-year-old cerebral palsy victim, bringing the eternal flame to the doorstep of Los Angeles.

The torch, nearing the end of its 82-day, 9,000-mile journey to the Summer Games, was carried through exclusive Malibu along the Pacific Ocean, bound for its first pass through Los Angeles.

Earlier, a tattooed Hell's Angel carried the torch through Ventura County as fellow bikers rode behind, and he said it made him think about "being American."

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley was to be host of an official welcome for the torch in Santa Monica later Saturday before runners carried it through his city and Beverly Hills.

Thousands of spectators lined the Pacific Coast Highway on Saturday morning as the torch continued its journey through Southern California. Simpson carried the torch up the steep California Incline, which leads from the highway up a cliffside to Ocean Avenue in Santa Monica.

As he reached the top of the incline to hand off the flame to cerebral palsy victim Michael Bailey of Santa Monica, hundreds of cheering people broke through police lines and surrounded them.

Michael, who ran his kilometer wearing a special brace, was sponsored by former Beatles' drummer Ringo Starr and his wife, actress Barbara Bach.

Against the ocean background, Olympic volunteers released thousands of multicolored balloons.

People stood on balconies of luxury high-rise apartments, while others lined the streets. Twenty-seven people, including a mother and baby, stood on one Santa Monica police car for a better view.

The torch is scheduled to continue its trip through Los Angeles Sunday, then pass through other Southern California cities before returning to mark the opening of the Games on July 28.

The flame began its journey in New York City on May 8 on a tour of 33 states and the District of Columbia.

On Friday evening, a flag-bedecked parade of Hell's Angels cheered one of their own, who bore the torch through Ventura County, about 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The tattooed arm of George Christie, 37, president of the motorcycle club's Ventura chapter, raised the torch aloft as fellow bikers rode behind or lined the roadway with throngs of tourists and local residents.

Christie, who described his one-kilometer run as "pretty exhilarating," passed the flame to another runner as the relay continued into exclusive Malibu, the first stop in Los Angeles County.

Surrounded by congratulatory, black-jacketed bikers after his run, he said that while carrying the torch he "started thinking about the country, being American."

"Some people thought we might want to cause a problem at the Olympics," Christie said as he signed autographs.

Wayne Co. Ends Pitt Season, 7-2

Do Yol Lim ripped three hits and John Thomas doubled in three runs to lead Wayne County to a 7-2 rain-shortened victory over Pitt County Saturday at Harrington Field to advance to the Area I American Legion baseball playoffs.

Glenn Fortner hurled a five-hitter without giving up a run, struck out five and issued one walk to record the win.

Anthony Jernigan had two hits and a pair of RBI, while Lim drove in two runs.

Doug Coley paced Pitt County with two hits, including a two-out double in the bottom of the first.

The game was held up twice by rain and finally halted after Wayne County batted in the top of the seventh.

Pitt County got into trouble from the start, as pitcher Billy Michel walked the first two batters and Jernigan reached on an error of a sacrifice attempt.

Thomas grounded into a double play to drive in Jansen Evans, and Lim ripped a double down the line in right for the second run.

Pitt County got one run back in the bottom of the second. Roger Moyer singled, but when he stole second the throw from catcher Brad Reaves sailed into center field allowing Moyer to take third. The ball rolled under Jernigan's glove, and Moyer raced home for the Pitt run.

But Wayne County iced the game with four more runs in the third off reliever Paul Hill. After one out, Evans singled, Stan Mozingo walked and Jernigan singled in Evans. Thomas' double drove in Mozingo and Jernigan, and Lim singled in Thomas for a 6-1 edge.

Michel reached on an error in the fourth and later scored on a single by Steve Mills for the other Pitt County run.

Wayne County set the final margin in the sixth, as Fortner singled and scored on a hit by Jernigan.

CFA Grants ABC 'Exclusive' Rights

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC-TV said Saturday it had reached an agreement with the 63-member College Football Association, giving the network exclusive rights to broadcast games played by most of the major football powers this season.

The network said it will carry 20 CFA games.

The CFA is comprised of five major conferences — Southeastern, Southwest, Atlantic Coast, Big Eight and Western Athletic — as well as major independents such as Notre Dame, Pitt, Penn State, Miami and Boston College.

ABC's announcement finally clarified the TV football picture after two weeks of confusion following the Supreme Court decision to uphold a lower court ruling that voided the NCAA's contract with ABC and CBS.

As a result of the high court's ruling, a school or conference could negotiate with any network, station or groups of stations to carry its games. Some conferences, anticipating the ruling, had already sold games to packagers to sell to individual stations.

But the CFA-ABC deal provides a reasonably clear picture of what viewers will see this fall.

It means that in the television "window" allocated to the networks — from 3:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Eastern Time each Saturday — ABC will televise CFA games while CBS will carry games involving schools from the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences, the two major conferences that split from the CFA.

There will also be two other television windows — from noon until 3:30 p.m., when local stations may carry games sold to them by individual schools and conferences; and from 7 p.m. on, when college games can be carried on cable television.

The contract with the CFA does not permit any "crossover" games — games between CFA schools and those from the Pac-10-Big Ten group — to be shown on another network during the late-afternoon time period.

But Jim Spence, vice president in charge of ABC Sports, said ABC has the right to negotiate separately for such games, such as the traditional Notre Dame-Southern California contest that has usually been televised nationwide.

The agreement with the CFA calls for 20 games to be televised between Sept. 8 through Dec. 1, a total of 13 weeks, compared to 10 weeks and 14 games in the CBS contract with the Pac-10-Big Ten, for which it paid an estimated $8 million.

Spence said ABC also had a "position" with the CFA that presumably would give it the right to extend the contract beyond this season.

The price for the CFA package was reported to be approximately $15 million, less than half the $34.5 million each network was paying the NCAA for the rights to the contract that was thrown out by the courts.

Spence would not disclose the amount but said ABC, which lost money last year and had expected to lose money this year on its NCAA telecasts, was in a "tremendously improved" financial position.

The new contract also allows the network to show any school three times this year with the provision for two wild-card games, which would allow a team to be shown a fourth time.

Under the NCAA contract, a school was limited to five appearances in two seasons and that provision, in fact, was one of the reasons for the suit filed by the universities of Georgia and Oklahoma.

Adams, Nichols Lead Receivers

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

The central figure of East Carolina University's "Flip Over The Pirate Attack" football promotional campaign is flashy kick returner Henry Williams who performs a forward somersault after each touchdown. But when ECU puts the ball in the air on offense, Williams will have to share the limelight with two other veteran receivers — Ricky Nichols and Stefan Adams.

The senior trio combined for 39 of the 91 catches for the 1983 Pirate squad that finished 8-3 with a Top 20 rating by the Associated Press. "We have a little bit of experience," chides ECU assistant Coach Ken Matous. "Those three kids are hard workers. I believe if a guy's working hard and doing the things you ask him to, he's going to play. Ricky and Stefan have been here three years, and Henry transferred in last year.

"There are others who are going to play some, but those three seniors are going to play most of the time."

Adams led the Pirates with 20 receptions for 277 yards, including several keys catches in the final series against eventual national champion University of Miami. It was Adams who caught the pass from Kevin Ingram as time expired, only to have the ball knocked away by teammate Norwood Vann.

"We used him in a lot of medium range passes last year, and he made some big catches for us," Matous said. "We're expecting to use him a lot this year, but we'll put him in a couple of different formations. We want to put him in a situation where he can get away from double coverage."

Williams and Nichols are "a toss-up" at flanker, but Matous said he "looks for Ricky to play the bulk of it." Nichols had 15 catches for 222 yards last year and two touchdowns in 1983, while Williams grabbed four for 62 yards.

"Ricky is a pretty intelligent football player," Matous said. "He does a lot of things naturally. Henry isn't refined enough, but he's going to succeed because he's determined."

Once the ball gets in the hands of one of the Pirate receivers, the trouble for the defensive secondary begins. Williams qualified in the 200 meters for the NCAA Track Championships last spring — and the other aren't far behind.

"Henry's been clocked at 4.2 in the 40," Matous said. "Ricky is about a step behind him, and Stefan's about a step behind Ricky. So they'll give people some trouble one-on-one. We have speed pretty much all the way down the line with our receivers."

Depth is imperative in college football, and the Pirates will count on sophomores Amos Adams and Chris McLawhorn and junior Brent Holbrook. Amos Adams — Stefan's younger brother — is the biggest of the receivers at 6-1, 196. McLawhorn, a Greenville Rose High School graduate, ran track along with Williams and newcomer Craig White.

University Pirate football squad with 20 receptions. He returns in 1984 as one of three starting receivers.

Ripkin Helps Orioles Snap Streak

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. might never have a bad year.

Ripken banded out three hits to drive in a run and score a run and Rich Dauer broke a 3-3 tie with a sixth-inning double as the Orioles snapped a three-game losing streak with a 4-3 victory Sunday over the Kansas City Royals.

"I don't believe in it (having a bad year)," said Ripken, who came into the game batting .304 with 18 home runs and 53 runs batted in.

"Maybe you might not have the same kind of year you had the last year, but if you make adjustments you should be successful," he said. "I just go out and try hard and be successful."

Ripken and first baseman Eddie Murray have been the highlights of a Baltimore team hitting a collective .226 in 20 games since June 20. Ripken is batting .426 over his last 13 games with five home runs and 13 RBIs.

"I've been swing the bat well, but I guess it really didn't seem like my performance was that outstanding today," Ripken said. "It just seemed like I very quietly got three hits. It helps having Eddie back there because the pitcher starts thinking we've got Eddie coming up next and they can't walk me. It gives you better pitch selection."

Ripken is putting together his third solid season in a row after winning American League Rookie of the Year honors two years ago and the AL Most Valuable Player award last year. He committed a rare throwing error Sunday — his ninth — but went into the game leading AL shortstops with a .958 fielding percentage.

"I'm satisfied with my career progress, but I just want to get better, to improve, to get consistent," he said.

Orioles center fielder John Shelby, coming into the game with a .188 batting average, hit a first-inning homer, No. 5, then threw out Willie Wilson at the plate when he tried to score from second on a single by Dane Iorg in the bottom of the inning.

Ripken followed Shelby's homer with a double off the left-field wall and scored when Gary Roenicke singled.

Receivers...

"Amos will play both sides," Matous said. "All of our receivers have to know both positions. (Amos') problem in the past has been maturity, but now he's stepping up and taking responsibility seriously."

"Hobbrook ended the spring really good. He swapped over from defense last year, and we expect him to contribute in different ways than some of the others."

"Craig White has been a running back at a small school, and he's going to contribute in time. He's got that long hurdlers stride, so he's as fast as anyone we could put out there. If he has the desire, he's going to be quite a decent receiver for us."

The Pirates have put numerous players in the ranks of professional football over the past few years, and Matous indicates more receivers could be signed this year.

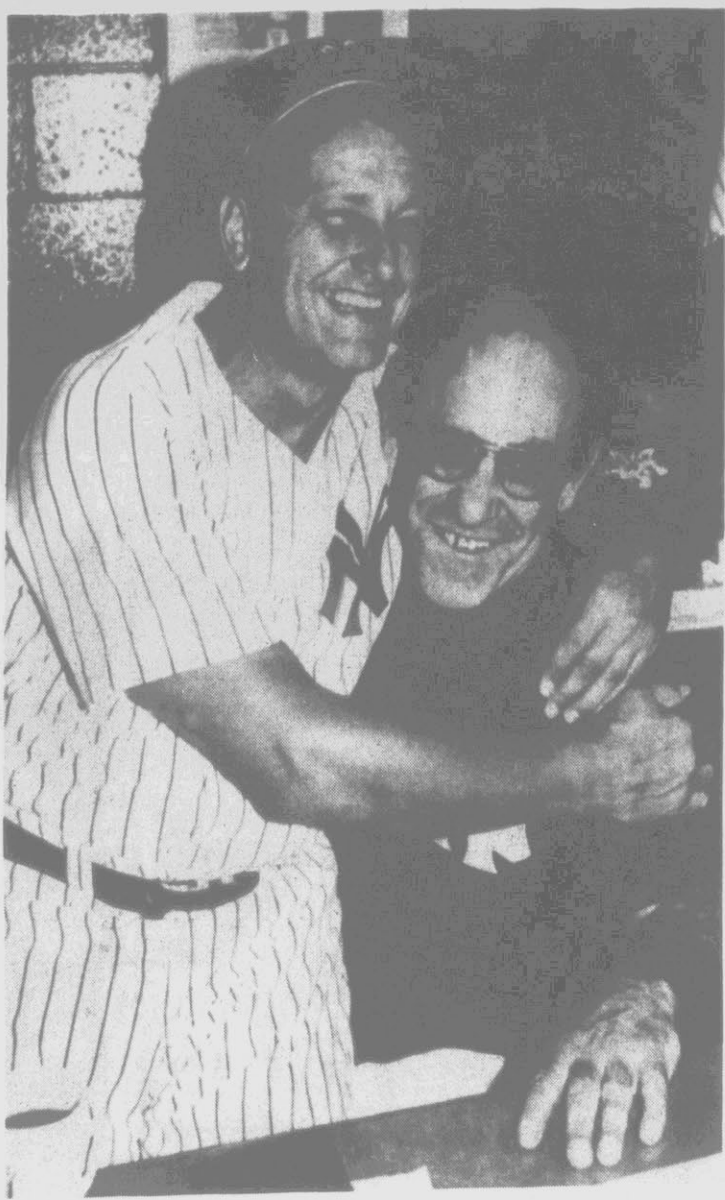

"I think all of the kids will be considered (by pro teams)," Matous said. "Stefon is the slowest of the three — if you can call him slow — and he has the best hands. Henry is fast and would be considered for just kick returns if not wide receiver. There's a lot of receivers smaller than (Ricky)."

"I've talked to them about it, and they're all interested. They've seen some of the guys who have gotten the big contracts over the past few years."

"If the game continues the current trend, the value of running backs is going to go down. If pro football continues to throw the ball more, the value of receivers will go up. I think any of them can make it with the right team."

Matous said ECU will try to throw more this season but conceded that the running game will be the Pirates' forte.

"If we can 8-3 and not throw a pass, I'll take it," Matous grinned.

Chicago.....4 Cleveland.....3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chicago White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa is looking for 41-year-old Ron Reed to help spark a White Sox pennant drive.

"Ron's important to us. I can't think of a club in baseball that hopes to win a lot of games without that late-inning stopper," LaRussa said after Reed saved the White Sox 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

"That definitely qualified as a tough save for Ron today — getting Andre Thornton out with a man in scoring position and then getting a ninth-inning double play after a bad break."

For Reed, who has been hampered by nagging injuries, the save was only his sixth this season to go with an 0-4 record and a 3.88 ERA.

He relieved Jerry Don Gleaton with two outs in the eighth inning, a runner on second and the dangerous Thornton up. In their last confrontation two weeks ago, Thornton homered.

But Reed fanned Thornton on a "slider away in a good spot. I won that battle but he won the one two weeks ago."

Reed's job was still not done, however. Don Carter bounced a soft single off Reed's glove with one out in the ninth, but the crafty right-hander induced Chris Bando to ground into a game-ending double play.

"I threw Bando a sinking fastball down and away. The ball ran for me, and again it was in a good spot. Those are the kind of pitches (to Thornton and Bando) that I haven't been throwing frequently enough this season," Read said.

Gleaton, 1-0, picked up his first major league victory Aug. 14, 1981, in Jamie Quirk's sacrifice fly brought home the winning run. Both Gleaton and Quirk were recalled from Chicago's Triple-A in Denver affiliate on Thursday.

With the score tied 3-3, Vance Law started the winning rally with a one-out walk from Tom Waddell, 2-3. Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston then doubled to send Law to third and knock out Waddell in favor of Ernie Camacho.

Quirk then hit a sacrifice fly near the warning track in left, allowing the White Sox to move over the .500 mark at 48-47.

Gleaton, 1-0, pitched 1 2-3 hitless innings for the victory.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Julio Franco, Mike Hargrove and Mel Hall, but Chicago starter LaMarr Hoyt retired the next 15 Cleveland hitters.

Ron Kittle tied the score with his 23rd home run, a second-inning solo shot, and the White Sox took a 2-1 lead in the third on singles by Rudy Law, Roy Smalley and Greg Luzinski.

The White Sox extended their lead to 3-1 in the seventh. Scott Fletcher started with one out, and after Cleveland starter Steve Comer walked Smalley with two out, Harold Baines greeted reliever Mike Jeffcoat with a run-scoring double.

Hall got the first hit off Hoyt since the first inning when he singled to lead off the seventh. Don Carter singled Hall to third and took second on Law's fielding error in center. Hoyt was lifted in favor of Gleaton, who gave up consecutive sacrifice flies to Carmen Castillo and Brook Jacoby, tying the score 3-3.

Minnesota.....5 New York.....3

NEW YORK (AP) — For someone who concentrates on batting average, Kent Hrbek is developing into quite a slugger.

Hrbek drove in three runs with a two-run home run and a double to power the Minnesota Twins to a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

"I think over the years I'll come to mature as a home run hitter, but something I always wanted to do was hit .300. That's been my goal since I've been in baseball," Hrbek said.

Hrbek's 14th home run this season left him just two short of his home run total for last season, but he said that fact is not particularly special.

"I've got one thing about hitting," the 24-year-old first baseman said. "It goes up there and back at it. If it goes out, fine. If somebody's on base and I knock in a run that way, that's fine, too."

Hrbek is hitting for both power and average (.329) thus far in his third full major league season.

"We got him out of Class A ball. He's starting to adjust and know his victory total for last season when he was 10-14 before being traded by the Texas Rangers."

Rick Lysander took over in the sixth inning, after Steve Kemp's two-run home run and Mike Pagliarulo's double, to earn his first save with 3 2-3 innings of hitless relief.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Dave Engle's double off Ray Fontenot, 3-6, a walk to Hrbek and Tim Teufel's two-out single to left.

Boston.....16 California.....4

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A lot of action preceded and followed Bill Buckner's grand slam homer, but when it was all over, that sixth-inning blow stood apart as the Boston Red Sox defeated California 16-4 Saturday.

"We were already ahead in the game, but I guess that iced it," Buckner said of the big hit that gave the Red Sox an 11-4 lead.

"If I can get a few RBI, it's quite a thrill. I've been having a little trouble getting base hits recently."

Rookie right-hander Curt Kaufman had set the stage for Buckner by issuing an intentional walk to Mike Easler, also a left-handed batter.

"I don't ever remember having a hitter walk ahead of me who swings from the same side," said Buckner. "Especially with two outs. But Mike is a good fastball hitter and the guy pitching, I guess, was a fastball pitcher."

But Kaufman got one of his fastballs up high to Buckner, who promptly punctuated a wild affair that featured five homers and 20 Boston hits off three Angel pitchers.

Although the issue had long been decided, Bruce Hurst hit Reggie Jackson with a pitch in the ninth inning. Jackson took off for first base but when catcher Gary Allenson caught his attention with a remark, Jackson made a U-turn and both benches quickly emptied.

The teams mixed it up for a few minutes before the umpires could restore order. Boston pitcher Rich Gale reportedly suffered an eight stitch gash on his chin while California outfielder Mike Brown had a gash on the back of his neck.

Milwaukee.....7 Oakland.....4

OAKLAND (AP) — Jim Gantner, who wasted an opportunity to win the game one inning earlier, stroked a two-out, two-run single to break a 10th-inning tie and give the Milwaukee Brewers a 7-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Chuck Rainey, 0-1, gave up a leadoff single to Ben Oglivie and Ed Romero's sacrifice bunt moved Oglivie to second. After Sundberg struck out, Rainey walked Dion-James and Rick Manning to load the bases, setting the stage for Gantner's single to right. Robin Yount drove in the third run of the inning with a single.

Rick Waits pitched 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief to even his record at 2-2, and Rollie Fingers got the final out for his 22nd save.

The Brewers, trailing 4-1, rallied for three runs in the eighth off four Oakland pitchers.

Watson Earns Share Of Lead

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson used "one of the best rounds of golf I've ever played" to move into a tie for the third-round lead and take another step toward golfing history Saturday at the 113th British Open.

The defending champion, a five-time winner of this ancient event but never at St. Andrews, crisply stroked his way to a 6-under-par 66 on the historic Old Course.

Watson, who started the day five shots off the pace, completed 54 holes over the centuries-old links in 205, 11 shots under par, to tie with Ian Baker-Finch, the 23-year-old Australian who led after two rounds.

Baker-Finch, winner of two titles in his brief career, nursed home a 71 in the brisk breezes and saved a share of the top spot with an escape from the Valley of Sin, the deep depression in front of the 18th green.

The two will be paired together in the last group off the tee in Sunday's final round — Watson, trying to equal a record of six British Open victories, and a previously obscure player making his first appearance in one of the game's Big Four championships.

"I've never been in this position before," said Baker-Finch. "I'm not surprised to be leading."

"But, he added, "I'll be surprised if I win."

Watson, however, was taking nothing for granted going into a match-up that appeared to be heavily weighted in his favor.

"He'll be trying to do what he wants to do best — win the golf tournament," Watson said. "So will I."

Only two shots back and still very much in the race were Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who were tied for third at 207.

Langer had a third-round 68, which included a spectacular save of par on the 17th, the Road Hole, where he had to play a third shot from an extremely awkward position while standing in a deep bunker.

Ballesteros, twice a Masters champion and a previous winner of this title, had a 70.

It was another five strokes back — and seven back of the co-leaders — to the trio tied for fifth at 212, Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa, Lanny Wadkins and veteran Lee Trevino.

Baiocchi had a 70 in the brisk, cool breezes. Wadkins had a 73.

Any hopes the 44-year-old Trevino may have had of achieving a third British Open crown were dashed when he drove into one of those dreadful little pot bunkers on the 13th fairway, which led to a double-bogey 6.

He lost another stroke on the next hole, the par-5 14th which both Watson and Jack Nicklaus said featured "the most difficult pin position I've ever seen."

That pair of 6s sent Trevino reeling to a 75.

Nicklaus, who had won the last two British Opens played here, managed a 68 that was, he acknowledged, too little and too late. He was at par 216.

Nick Faldo of England, playing in the last group with Baker-Finch, had an embarrassing 76 before a record British gallery of 38,000 and was at 213.

Masters title-holder Ben Crenshaw was 70-217 and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller was 71-214.

Greg Norman, the Australian who had been on such a rampage through the American Tour and shared the first-round lead here, had a 74 and was out of it at 215.

Scotsman Bill Longmuir took himself out of the race with a 79-217.

Watson, the only three-time winner on the American Tour this season and in his customary position as the year's leading money-winner, will attempt to equal the record of six British Open crowns set by Harry Vardon with his last victory in 1914.

"Any thoughts of what it means, any thoughts of winning the championship, winning the sixth British Open, equaling the record, winning at St. Andrews, will have to come after the fact," Watson said.

In addition to Watson only James Braid and J.H. Taylor — contemporaries of Vardon — and Australian Peter Thompson have won this title five times.

"I'd hate to be the one to keep Watson from the record," Baker-Finch said, "but I'll be trying."

Watson has an opportunity to accomplish a feat unique in history — a sweep of the Scottish courses used for this championship, which he calls "the World Series of Golf."

His previous British Open triumphs have come at Carnoustie (1975), Turnberry (1977), Muirfield (1980) and Troon (1981), all in Scotland, and last year at Royal Birkdale in England.

Now he's in position for a shot at still another one.

"That's the best round I've played this year," he said. "The round the day before is No. 2. I just hope that progression continues."

After matching an opening birdie with his only bogey of the day, he began his move toward the leading Baker-Finch with a 10-foot putt on the third hole.

He reached the par-5 fifth in two and 2-putted for birdie. On the next two, he flipped sand wedge second shots inside of 5 feet, birdied both and reached the turn in 32.

He drove the green on the 342-yard 10th hole and 2-putted for birdie, then got another sand wedge shot to point-blank range on the 12th and birdied again.

Then, coming back to the great stone pile that is the clubhouse of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, with the wind in his face, he parred home.

Third round scores Saturday in the 113th British Open Golf championship on the 6,932-yard, par 36-72 Old Course at St. Andrews: (a-denotes amateur)

Stabler Set To Play One More Season

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ken Stabler, most accurate passer in National Football League history, said Saturday that he will retire from professional football after one more season with the New Orleans Saints.

"It's just something inside says it's time," Stabler said at a news conference at preseason training camp here.

Stabler, whose lifetime passing percentage is 60.5, said he had not yet told Saints Coach Bum Phillips of his decision. "He'd just try to talk me out of it," Stabler said.

Phillips said he was surprised but not convinced that Stabler would stand by his decision.

"I didn't know you planned these things a year ahead of time, especially when you're making $500,000 a year," Phillips said. "It hasn't appened yet. People who retire can unretire."

Stabler actually did that after the 1981 season. Stabler was locked in a dispute with the Houston Oilers and said he was leaving football.

However, Phillips got in touch with him and worked out the deal that brought Stabler to the Saints.

"If he has the kind of year that he thinks he'll have and I think he'll have, he might say, 'Hey, I lied,'" Phillips said.

Stabler's role as the Saints' starter is being challenged this season by Richard Todd, obtained in an offseason trade with the New York Jets, and Dave Wilson, a first-round draft choice in 1981.

Stabler said it was not fear of their challenge that prompted his decision to retire.

"I'm going to compete for the job this year," he said. "I'm going to win the job this year, and then I'm going to retire."

He said he doubts that anything that could happen this season might cause him to change his mind.

"I think it's hard for all athletes who've played a long time and had pretty good success to know when it's time," he said.

"Sometimes you wind up going too long. I don't want to do that. I don't want to go out with a bad taste," he said.

He said he became more involved in real estate and horse breeding during the last year and will devote more time to those interests.

Stabler began his professional career at Oakland in 1970, moved to the Houston Oilers in 1980 and to the Saints in 1982.

Stabler played hurt most of last year, sustaining rib injuries in the first game and getting both knees banged up during the season.

However, he said, he feels better now than he has in several years.

"I've had both knees operated on. I've lost 15 pounds. I feel great," he said.

Hoch, Heafner Share Lead

COAL VALLEY, III. (AP) — While everybody was watching Vance Heafner and Dave Stockton fight for the Quad Cities Open golf tournament lead Saturday, Scott Hoch crept up from behind and almost stole the show.

Hoch carded a brisk 4-under-par 66 in sweltering 90-degree heat Saturday to move into a first place tie with Heafner at 10-under-par 200 through 54 holes.

Stockton, the second-round leader, slipped a stroke to 9-under at 201.

Hoch, Heafner and Stockton played together Saturday, with Heafner carding a 69 and Stockton 71.

"I feel fortunate to have caught the leaders today," Hoch, 28, the 1980 champion from Orlando, Fla., said.

"I'm hitting a lot of greens but not putting that well," he added.

Hoch did make the putt he needed, sinking a 15-footer on the 18th hole to move into a first place tie.

Heafner said he was out to disprove the "pro-am jinx" during the final round.

He shot 65 to win the pro-am portion of the tournament Wednesday, and may need a similar score to win Sunday.

Camp Set 'Record' In Braves Win

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves' Rick Camp, who doesn't get a great many strikeouts, had a career-high seven in a 5-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

"But it wasn't strikeouts I was thinking about," said Camp, who left the game after issuing his seventh walk leading off the eighth inning. "I was more concerned with movement on the ball."

The walk was to Mike Schmidt, who had struck out his first three times.

"I got him twice on cut fastballs and once on a slider," said Camp, who allowed only two hits in his seven official innings. "But I'm really not a strikeout pitcher. I know that."

The Phillies took a lead on a two-run double by Jaun Samuel in the first inning and Camp admitted he was struggling early.

"I threw more than 50 pitches in the first two innings," he said. "I walked a lot of batters, but I'll take the movement on the ball."

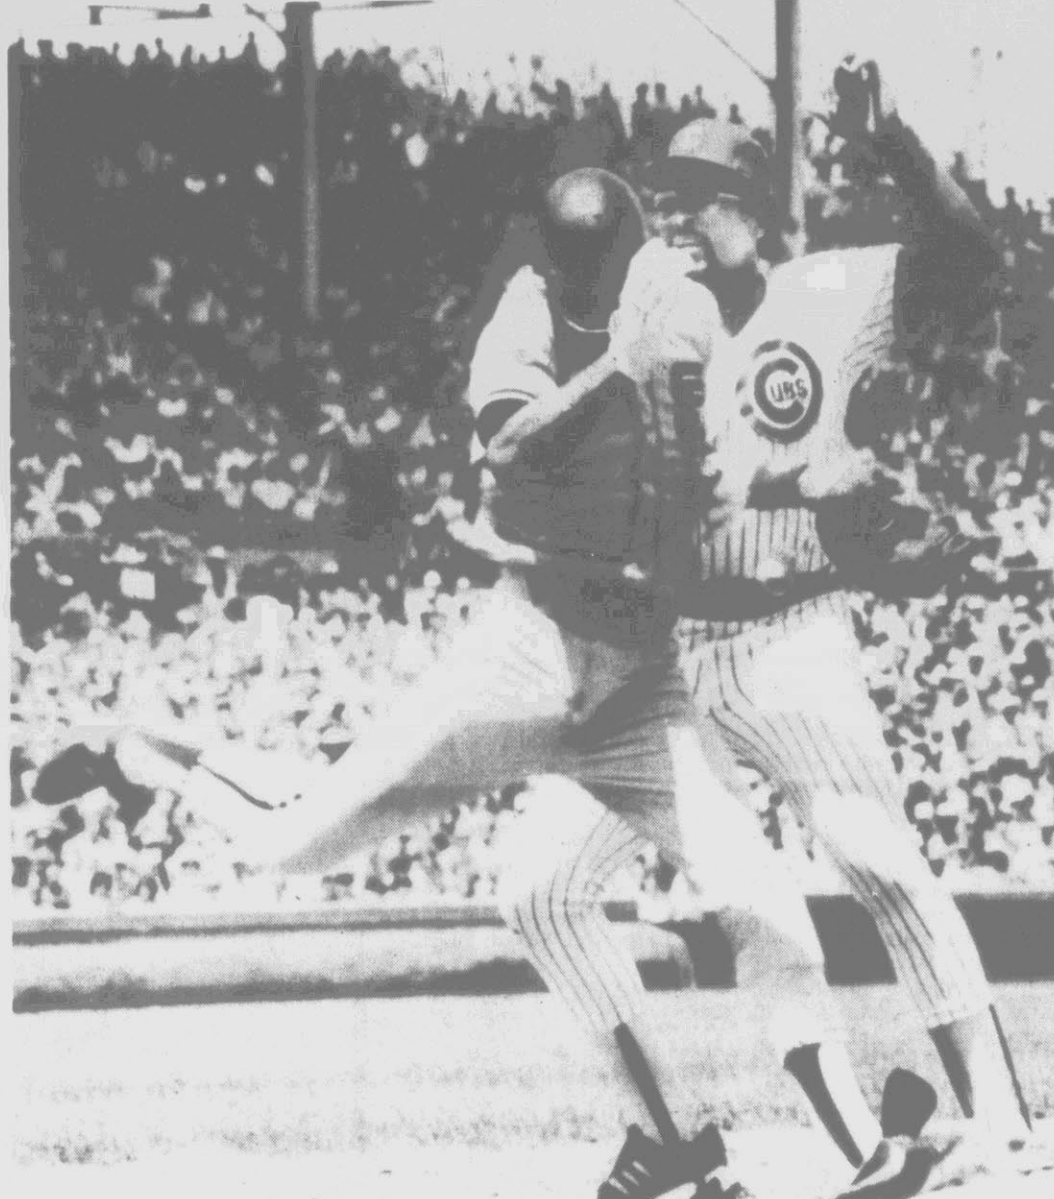

Camp, 5-2, fell behind early when Samuel hit a two-run double in the first inning, but he allowed only one other hit before leaving the game. Donnie Moore earned his 10th save by checking Philadelphia on two hits over the final two innings.

With the Braves trailing 2-1, Glenn Hubbard led off the fifth with a single against Philadelphia right-hander Kevin Gross, 5-5. One out later, Hubbard was sacrificed to second by Camp.

Hubbard scored the tying run on a single by Jerry Royster. Ken Oberkfell's single sent Royster to third, and Royster scored on Washington's single.

The Braves got their first run in the second on Brad Komminsk's RBI groundout.

Atlanta got two insurance runs in the sixth on Chris Chambliss' leadoff homer, his ninth, and an RBI single by Bruce Benedict.

Chicago 4 San Francisco 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Thad Bosley hit a tie-breaking single with two out in the 11th inning, powering the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

With one out in the 11th, Jody Davis singled and was forced when Larry Bowa bunted. Bowa then stole second and scored as Bosley lined a single down the left-field line off loser Greg Minton, 1-7. Rick Bordi, 4-1, was the winner.

The victory kept intact the Cubs' perfect 7-0 record in extra-inning games. The Giants are now 4-8 in overtime.

Dusty Baker's two-run single off Lee Smith with two out in the eighth inning tied the score 3-3. With one out, Gene Richards, hitting for pitcher Bill Laskey, singled. One out later, Manny Trillo doubled, and both runners scored when Baker singled to left.

The Giants' rally denied Dick Ruthven, who worked seven innings, a chance to break a personal six-game losing streak.

Ruthven had retired 10 straight and was working on a shutout before Baker singled in the seventh. Chili Davis forced Baker, went to third on a double by Scot Thompson and scored San Francisco's first run as Steve Nicosia grounded out.

The Cubs scored a run in the second when Leon Durham doubled, stopped at third on a single by Keith Moreland and scored on a single by Ron Cey.

Bob Dernier tripled in the third for the first of his three hits and scored as Ryne Sandberg grounded out. The Cubs added a run in the sixth on singles by Gary Matthews and Durham and a sacrifice fly by Moreland.

Ruthven, who has not won a game since April 14, was making only his second start for the Cubs since going on the disabled list May 20 for arm surgery.

Los Angeles.....3 St. Louis.....1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When Rick Honeycutt took the mound for Los Angeles Saturday, he had not won in seven previous starts, but neither he nor Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda was worried about the drought.

Honeycutt, 8-4, scattered eight hits in a complete-game effort to help the Dodgers to a 3-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals for the left-hander's first win since June 4.

"You think about it," Honeycutt said about the long winless period. "But I wasn't worried. I think maybe I was pitching too defensively, trying to overthrow the ball."

"Today, I just threw nice and easy, kept the ball down and the guys made super plays behind me," he added.

"I wasn't worried about him," added Lasorda. "His shoulder had been bothering him, but he's feeling good now and throwing like the Honeycutt of old."

Honeycutt struck out two and issued just one walk, and that was intentional.

"They (the Cardinals) were helping me somewhat by hitting a lot of first pitches," Honeycutt said.

Honeycutt's counterpart, Joaquin Andujar, 13-9, pitched 5 1-3 perfect innings before the Dodgers reached him for all three of their runs in the sixth. Steve Sax, who snapped an 0-for-17 slump, had the big blow, a two-run triple.

It was Andujar's fourth straight attempt at winning his 14th game.

The Cardinals took the lead in the fourth on Chris Speier's leadoff triple and a one-out single by Andujar.

Andujar had set down the first 16 batters he faced when Anderson doubled with one out in the sixth on a soft drive that bounced over left fielder Lonnie Smith's head.

Honeycutt followed with a single, sending Anderson to third, before Sax ripped his triple to left-center. R.J. Reynolds brought in Sax with a sacrifice fly.

Whitworth Seeks LPGA Mark

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, seeking a record 85th professional golf title, shot a 71 Saturday to move into a 1-stroke lead over streaking Rosie Jones and faltering rookie Cathy Marino after three rounds of the Rochester International LPGA golf tournament at Locust Hill Country Club.

Whitworth overcame a four-stroke lead held by Marino, who ballooned to a 76, as she moved into position to break out of a tie with Sam Snead as the winningest professional golfer of all time.

She stood four strokes under par after rounds of 73, 68 and 71 on the par-72, 6,162-yard course. The third round was played under sunny skies on dry fairways and fast greens.

Jones, who lost the U.S. Women's Open last weekend on the final hole, birdied the tough par-4 14th hole to move into a tie with Marino, the leader for two rounds. She added a birdie at the 16th to go ahead, but then bogeyed the 18th by missing a four-foot putt to fall a stroke back. She finished with a 2-under-par 70.

Whitworth, playing in a threesome with Marino and Lauri Peterson, narrowed her four-stroke deficit after two rounds to two strokes on the first three holes, then marched ahead of the faltering Marino in spite of bogeying the fifth and 10th holes.

Whitworth's birdies came on the 1st, 3rd and 16th holes.

Marino, 23, of Enid, Okla., 36th on the LPGA money list, topped her fairway shots for bogeys on the 13th and 14th holes to lose her lead over Whitworth and Jones.

Marino and Jones were one stroke behind Whitworth at 3-under par, followed by Betsy King, who stood alone at 2-under after shooting a 71. Sandra Haynie, Cathy Morse and Myra Van Hoose were tied at 1-under par.

Marino's 36-hole score of 137 had been a personal best and just two strokes off JoAnne Carner's record in the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Lauri Peterson, who had shot a second-round 67 to move into a five-way tie, blew to a 76 to stand 1-over par. Dale Eggeing and Kathryn Young, who also had been in the second-place tie with Whitworth and Jones, shot 75s to stand at even par in a group with three other players.

Missing from the tournament are defending champion Ayako Okamoto, who dropped out complaining of a sore shoulder after a pair of 76s; three-time winner Nancy Lopez, who did not enter; and Jan Stephenson and U.S. Women's Open winner Hollis Stacy, who withdrew after Friday's round.

Running Author Dies Of Heart Attack

HARDWICK, Vt. (AP) — Jim Fixx, whose best-selling "The Complete Book of Running" helped push millions of people into sneakers and the jogging craze, collapsed and died of a heart attack while jogging in northern Vermont, authorities said Saturday. He was 52.

Fixx collapsed Friday on Route 15 in this rural village and died immediately of a heart attack caused by serious heart disease, said Vermont's chief medical examiner, Dr. Eleanor McQuillen, who performed an autopsy on Fixx Saturday morning.

His body was found by a passing motorcyclist at 5:30 p.m., police said, about 50 feet from the motel where he checked in an hour earlier.

Fixx's best-selling book on the mechanics of running was a huge success in the United States in 1978 and was translated into 12 languages. It earned him over $1 million, and put the former magazine editor — who used to smoke two packs a day and got into running when he hurt a leg — in great demand as a lecturer on running.

Lake, according to his second former wife, Alice Kasman Fixx, who said he ran 10 miles a day.

"He had serious heart disease affecting two major arteries to the heart. They were completely blocked off," Ms. McQuillen said.

She said Fixx apparently didn't have any warning signals that usually accompany a heart attack, such as severe chest pain, that he apparently didn't know of his condition and that he died immediately.

"He never had any warning. If he did, he ignored it," she said. She said other than the heart problems, Fixx was in "fine, excellent shape."

Mrs. Fixx, divorced from her husband since 1982, said she was certain he had no idea he suffered any heart problem.

"I'm sure he didn't know. As a matter of fact, I urged him to get regular medical checkups. He really was negligent in that area and rarely went to a doctor. He didn't even have a regular one."

She said he raced regularly and probably ran his last race only a few days ago.

"A passing motorcyclist discovered him laying alongside the road," Hardwick police Sgt. George Brierley said Saturday.

Brierley said that when he arrived passers-by were attempting to revive Fixx, but he said Fixx had no heartbeat.

He said Fixx was dressed only in a pair of jogging shorts "so we had no idea who he was."

He said when Fixx didn't return to the Village Motel for some time, authorities took photographs of the body and showed them to David Smith, owner of a lodge in nearby Greensboro and a friend of the author. He said Smith identified the dead person as Fixx. Smith said he later went to Copley Hospital in Morrisville to identify the body. Fixx was wearing a ring with his name inscribed on the inside, he said.

Pattie Dickson, a clerk at the motel, said Fixx had checked in around 4:30 p.m. Friday and asked her about local restaurants. She said she did not see him go out jogging.

According to Smith, Fixx was in Vermont for a vacation and had planned to spend August in a cottage on Caspian Lake. Smith said Fixx had been in Vermont last month for a two-day running workshop in Greensboro, where he was an "old-time summer resident."

Born James Fuller Fixx in Queens, New York, on April 23, 1932, Fixx studied at Indiana University and was graduated from Oberlin College in 1957.

After a brief tour as a $75-a-week reporter on the Sarasota (Fla.) Journal, Fixx became a feature editor for Saturday Review. He left that post in 1966 to become executive editor of McCall's Magazine.

He also served as a consulting editor to The New York Times and MBA Communications, and as managing editor of Horizon magazine from 1974 to 1976.

Fixx became a runner in 1967 by accident. He was a portly, two-pack-a-day smoker when he injured his leg, and tried running to get in shape. He started feeling better, younger, and went from 220 pounds to 159.

Fixx played on his high school tennis team but didn't go out for track. In fact, he confessed to being not much of an athlete.

His best time at a marathon — Boston, 1975 — only put him in the middle of the pack, three hours, 10 minutes.

"There's nothing like writing a best-seller about running to have your running go down the drain," he said.

In 1980 he wrote "Jim Fixx's Second Book of Running." He wrote two other books before his first book on running, "Games for the Superintelligent" and "More Games for the Superintelligent."

Commenting on the success of "The Complete Book of Running," Fixx told an Associated Press reporter during an interview in 1980:

"In American life, there is this whole apparatus out there ready to pounce on you when you've done something like this. It was an insight into the kinds of lives celebrities must lead, a look into the world of television.

"It was a fascinating process of discovery, watching it all. It sometimes felt like a sociologist. When people ask for my autograph I can't help wonder, what sort of transaction is that? I've signed my name so many times to no particular applause, I don't know what the value is."

In the interview, Fixx also spoke of the transitory nature of fame:

"As the book began to sink lower on the best-seller lists, I could see myself starting to slip back into the obscure kind of life I had led before. That was fine for me, but I wonder what it does to a celebrity dependent upon always being on the top."

His writing success brought Fixx scores of offers to endorse running goods, but he decided "to stay pure in case I ever did decide to write another book on running."

Stars Down Tampa In England

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — A week after they won the United States Football League title, the Philadelphia Stars posted a 24-21 victory over the Tampa Bay Bandits Saturday in the second-ever U.S. pro football game ever held in Europe. Quarterback Tim Riordan threw three touchdown passes to lead the Stars.

The postseason exhibition game at London's Wembley Stadium was a distinct disappointment to organizers. The game drew just 21,000 fans, compared with 37,000 a year ago when the Minnesota Vikings and St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League clashed on the same turf, scene of the annual British soccer championships.

The turnout belied the increasing acceptance of the American game in soccer's heartland. Highlights of NFL games are now a regular fixture on Channel 4, Britain's second independent TV network, and the first amateur league started this spring.

After the Bandits took the field clutching British Union Jack flags and the two teams stood at attention for the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "God Save the Queen," Tampa Bay struck first.

Gerald Healey took a 10-yard pass from John Reaves to cap a 73-yard scoring drive, the Bandits' first possession. With six seconds left in the half, Wyane Peace tossed a 4-yard pass to fullback Marv Christian, and Zenon Andrusyshyn converted to give Tampa Bay a 14-0 lead.

But the league champions battled back, scoring on a pair of Riordan tosses, one of 3 yards to Victor Harrison at 6:00 of the second period and a 15-yarder to Herbert Harris at 9:35 of the third.

Tampa Bay regained the lead on a 40-yard pass from Jimmy Jordan to wide receiver Spencer Jackson.

But the Stars pulled away on a 27-yard field goal from Dave Trout, who had earlier missed from 44 yards, and a 15-yard TD pass from Riordan to tight end Ken Dunek at 8:20 of the final frame.

The contest was peppered with fumbles and interceptions.

"It's postseason, of course, and we're trying to get some of the younger players some playing time," explained Stars spokesman Bobby Moore.

But the British fans seemed to enjoy it.

Comaneci To Attend Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nadia Comaneci, the Romanian gymnast whose feats won the hearts of fans around the world in the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal, will be a special guest at the Summer Games in Los Angeles.

"We believe her being here will not only enhance the quality of our presentation of the gymnastic event, but will be an inspiration to our staff," Charles Cale, group vice president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said Friday.

"I'm sure recognition of her name is as great or greater than any other name in sports," he said.

Romania is the only Warsaw Pact nation to defy the Soviet-led boycott of the Games. Its team will arrive Monday.

Comaneci, now retired at age 22, will be a guest of the LAOOC and will live in the Olympic Village, where she will help the Romanian team prepare for the competition, officials said.

Comaneci's visit has been in the planning stages since Romania announced it would come to the Los Angeles Summer Olympics, which begin July 28, officials said.

"It's really physical," said Roy Isleworth, 24, who described himself as a diehard backer of the Tottenham Hotspur soccer team of the English League. "I like the way they really crunch on the tackles. You can hear the sound of it way up in the grandstand."

Other soccer stalwarts, though, said football American style seemed a bit slow-paced. "There's all these stoppages of play," Bill Courtney observed during one, a television time out — the game was being broadcast on cable in the United States, as well as in Germany and the Philippines.

"Every time they gain a few yards, the whistle blows and play grinds to a halt. And the changing of squads seems interminable."

The biggest roars were reserved for the cheerleaders.

Unlike last year, when women were recruited at U.S. air bases, local talent was hired. Twenty British dancers, models and aspiring actresses were personally chosen by promoter John Marshall for their "looks, length of leg and dancing ability."

Londoner Caroline Hemming, 23, said it was all "good fun." Debbie Boreham, 21, of Romford, said it wasn't just the 150 pounds ($200) that attracted her: "You can't say no to meeting all those strapping footballers."

Jays, Mariners Combine For Record

By The Associated Press

Neither the Toronto Blue Jays, who scored 11 runs, nor the Seattle Mariners, who scored four, knew when to quit in combining for an American League record 15 runs in the ninth inning.

Tony Fernandez's two-run single snapped a 3-3 tie as Toronto exploded for 11 ninth-inning runs to come from behind and defeat Seattle 12-7 Friday night.

"It was the wildest game I've ever seen," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox, who was ejected in the seventh inning by first base umpire Durwood Merrill for disputing a balk call. "Everytime we hit the ball it found a hole."

Seattle made its own comeback bid in the bottom of the ninth when Alvin Davis slugged a grand slam, his 19th homer. It was the rookie's second grand slam this season.

"I wish I had never had to hit," Davis said. "What can you think, you just want to get out of it."

In other AL action, Cleveland downed Chicago 6-3, New York beat Minnesota 4-3, Kansas City beat Baltimore 4-3, Detroit shaded Texas 3-1, Boston defeated California 4-3 in 10 innings and Milwaukee bested Oakland 9-7.

Trailing 3-1 going into the ninth inning, Toronto collected 11 hits, ten of them singles, against four Mariner pitchers.

Lloyd Moseby, who opened the inning with a triple to right-center, also singled and scored twice. Jesse Barfield also singled twice in the ninth.

With Moseby on third and none out, Willie Upshaw struck out, but 10 of the next 11 Toronto batters singled, the other drawing a walk, before Garth Iorg forced Alfredo Griffin on a fielder's choice at second.

Toronto's Jim Acker, 3-5, who came on in the eighth, picked up the victory. Roy Lee Jackson pitched the ninth for the Blue Jays.

The 11 runs in one inning represent a club record for Toronto. The Blue Jays also panned out 17 hits.

The previous record of 14 runs in the ninth was set on July 25, 1939 by the Philadelphia Athletics (5) and the Cleveland Indians (9).

The major league record for most runs in the ninth inning is 17 set on June 20, 1912. In that game the Boston Braves scored 10 runs and the New York Giants seven.

Tigers 3, Rangers 1

Dave Rozema pitched Detroit to a 3-1 victory for his 15th consecutive win at Tiger Stadium. Rozema has not lost in Detroit since May 23, 1981. His victory over Texas ran his 1984 home record to 3-0.

"I wouldn't mind pitching here every night, but you can't," said Rozema, who allowed six hits and didn't walk a batter to improve his record to 7-1.

With the game scoreless, Howard Johnson started the Detroit third with a single, moved to second on Lou Whitaker's sacrifice bunt and took third on a groundout. Barbaro Garbey followed with his fourth home run of the season off Texas starter Frank Tanana, 9-9, to give the Tigers a 2-0 lead. Chet Lemon slugged his 13th homer leading off the Detroit fourth.

Indians 6, White Sox 3

Rookie Roy Smith and Ernie Camacho combined on a seven-hitter and Julio Franco drove in three runs as the Indians won for the seventh time in their last 10 games.

With the game tied 2-2 in the sixth inning, Cleveland's George Vukovich drew a one-out walk from losing pitcher Richard Dotson, 11-6. Brook Jacoby lined a two-out single, sending Vukovich to third, before Tony Bernazard drove home Vukovich with the tie-breaking run on a ground single. Brett Butler singled home Jacoby and took second when Bernazard beat right fielder Harold Baines' throw to third. Franco then lined a two-run single up the middle, knocking out Dotson and giving Cleveland a 6-2 lead.

Willie Randolph drilled a one-out single into the left-center field gap to score Ken Griffey and cap a two-run ninth inning.

Trailing 3-2 entering the ninth, Mike Pagliarulo walked with one out off Minnesota reliever Ron Davis, 4-7. Pinch-hitter Griffey dropped a bloop single to left to advance Pagliarulo to second and Omar Moreno singled to right to score Pagliarulo. Randolph followed with his game-winning single.

Jay Howell, 4-4, the third Yankee pitcher, picked up the win, pitching the final two innings.

Kent Hrbek and Tom Brunansky homered for Minnesota.

Royals 4, Orioles 3

Don Slaught tripled in the eighth inning for his fourth hit and scored when Onix Concepcion hit a sacrifice fly for his third RBI.

Slaught, who also had two singles and a double, connected off reliever Tippy Martinez, 4-6, leading off the eighth. One out later, Concepcion lifted a fly ball to left field and drove in Slaught for the third time. Concepcion also had two run-scoring singles, scoring Slaught each time.

Bret Saberhagen, 4-8, got the victory with two innings of scoreless relief. Dan Quisenberry picked up his major league-leading 25th save by pitching the ninth.

Red Sox 4, Angels 3

Jim Rice's 10th-inning double broke a 3-3 tie. Jackie Gutierrez led off the 10th with a single off reliever Don Aase, 0-1. Wade Boggs bunted and Gutierrez beat third baseman Ron Jackson's throw to second with Boggs reaching first. Dwight Evans, who ripped a two-run homer in the third, fanned, before Rice punched his double down the right-field line to score Gutierrez. The win went to Bob Stanley, 6-6, who pitched the last three innings.

Brewers 9, Angels 7

Ed Romero sliced a two-run, game-winning single over third base in the ninth inning, wrapping up a five-run rally.

Wayne Homers Topple Pitt Co. Legion, 13-2

GOLDSBORO — Jansen Evans and Don Pate blasted three-run homers and Do Yol Lim ripped a solo shot to lead Wayne County to a 13-2 thrashing of Pitt County Friday to take 2-1 edge in the Area I Eastern American Legion baseball playoffs.

Anthony Jernigan and Stan Mazingo slapped three hits each as Wayne County tallied 14 hits off the Pitt pitching staff.

Paul Summerlin went the distance on the mound for Wayne County, scattering nine hits with five strikeouts and two walks. Doug Coley started the game and sustained the loss, yielding 10 runs — though only six earned — off 11 hits in five innings. Mike Kinley closed the game giving up three runs on three hits.

Jackie Conway and Roger Moyer had two hits each for Pitt County.

Pitt took the lead in the top of the first as Toby Fischer walked, went to second on a single by Coley and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Kinley.

But Wayne County took control in the bottom of the frame, with Evans leading off with a walk and scoring on a double by Mazingo. Jernigan followed with a bunt single, and Thomas singled in Mazingo. Jernigan scored on an error by first baseman Daniel Keel.

Pitt County trimmed the margin to 3-2 in the second when Moyer doubled and later scored on a wild pitch.

Wayne County plated three runs in the fourth, and Lim opened the fifth with his homer. After two out an runners on first and second, Evans ripped the second pitch from Coley over the fence for a 10-2 margin.

Pate's blast in the sixth came with Jernigan and Lim on base.

A.J. Foyt Doesn't Like 'Follow-The-Leader'

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — A.J. Foyt, whose career has been in decline for several years, has issued a warning to his competitors.

"I don't like playing catch-up or follow-the-leader," Foyt said Friday after being added the lineup as a promoter's option for Sunday's Michigan 500. "I'd like to get back the edge like we used to have, and we're going to try to do it over the next two or three years. We're going to go do some testing and get things back together the way they were."

The man who leads all Indy-car drivers with 67 victories — 29 head of Mario Andretti, his nearest rival — has won just once since 1979, that coming in the 1981 Pocono 500.

"I don't want to use my mother and father as an excuse," he said, referring to the deaths of his parents over the last three years. "But I've just kind of laid back the last couple of years. I didn't know how much I wanted to race and I'm just now getting my head back on my shoulders."

"I still have the desire to win or I wouldn't be here," the 49-year-old added.

Foyt, entering only his third Indy-car race of the season, actually qualified in the opening session of time trials Thursday at a respectable 200.535 mph. But his March was disqualified when the rear wing was found to be set back one-half inch too far from the rear axle on one side.

"Rules are rules," Foyt said. "We all have to live by them. But that don't mean I have to be happy about it."

It was a virtual certainty after the disqualification that Foyt would be offered a promoter's option. But the often irascible Foyt didn't make up his mind until after Friday's practice and qualifying sessions.

The decision, he said, was based on what he feels is his ability to be competitive in the 500-mile race at Michigan International Speedway.

"I think we got a shot," he said. "I wouldn't be racing if I didn't think we did."

"We tried some different wings and tunnels out there, and I must of run at least 40 laps. We got the car running pretty good, running laps a little over 200, which ought to be good in the race."

The only four-time Indianapolis 500 winner was sixth there in his only previous Indy-car action this season. He was entered at the Meadowlands at New Jersey, but withdrew because his team could not get the car running competitively.

Foyt was too slow to make the New Jersey race, but he was expected to be offered a promoter's option there, too. He said, "I ain't going to run if I don't earn it."

Asked Friday why he would turn down a promoter's option at the Meadowlands, but accept one at Michigan, Foyt replied: "I drove 200 miles an hour here. I earned it. It's just the rules that kept me out."

Another development Friday involved defending race champion John Paul Jr., who has been out of a ride since May, when the VDS team folded.

Paul drove from Atlanta after being summoned by the Primus team to be a substitute starter for Chris Kneifel, who came down with the flu and a stiff neck last week.

He managed to qualify his car Thursday at 193.444 mph, but decided he couldn't drive Sunday.

"I drove about 25 laps (Thursday) and my hands were shaking," Kneifel said. "But there are no excuses in this business."

Paul, who finished second in the season-opener at Long Beach in his only 1984 start, still is under exclusive contract to VDS and negotiations were being conducted Friday night in an effort to get permission for him to drive here.

"There's no bad blood," Paul said. "It's just that I'm in the contract and they're holding me to it."

Paul, 24, would start 33rd, just ahead of Foyt, if he is able to run Sunday. If he is not able to drive for Primus and Kneifel does not recover suddenly, a team spokesman said the car likely would be withdrawn.

The final four spots in the race lineup were filled Friday, with Danny Ongais leading the way with a fast lap of 203.442. He was the 21st qualifier over 200 and the only one Friday.

Soviets Push For New 1992 Events

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A top Soviet member of the International Olympic Committee met in strict privacy with 11 other members of the IOC Program Commission to discuss adding new sports to the 1992 Games, officials said.

Vitaly Smirnov, one of several Soviet Olympic officials attending the Los Angeles Games, presided Friday over the IOC Program Commission's meeting, according to officials who requested anonymity.

The officials said the 12-member commission discussed proposed new sports — including softball, water skiing and martial arts — for the 1992 Games, to be held either in Paris or Barcelona.

Other IOC officials, who also requested anonymity, said a threatened Soviet bloc boycott of the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea, also was probably discussed. The commission's meeting was held under tight security and reporters were banned from the floor of the Biltmore Hotel where it was held.

The commission is one of 18 IOC subsidiary groups and the only one with a Soviet-bloc chairman.

The two Soviets seated on the IOC, Smirnov and Constantine Andrianov, had an informal meeting Thursday with IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch of Spain.

Samaranch's personal assistant, Jose Sotelo, said the two Soviet officials requested the meeting, which he described as "strictly private and informal."

Sotelo declined to say what was discussed.

The Soviet Union and its allies have no diplomatic relations with South Korea and have warned that they might repeat their boycott in 1988.

Piney Green.....7 Coastal Plain South.....6

GOLDSBORO — Piney Green pushed two runs across the plate in the bottom of the seventh to take a 7-6 victory over Coastal Plain South in the state 16-year old Babe Ruth League All-Star Tournament.

Robbie Ehrmann and John High had a single and a double each for Coastal, while Lee Hardee, Eddie Brown and Shannon Peede had two hits each. Larke Weatherington suffered the loss on the mound.

The score was tied 5-5 after five innings, but Coastal took the lead in the top of the seventh. Peede and Curtis Perkins walked, and Peede went to third when High grounded out. A wild throw to first allowed Peede to score for a 6-5 Coastal lead.

But Piney Green rapped four consecutive infield hits, and Meadows drove in a pair of runs with a single for the final margin.

Astrodome Continues To Haunt Montreal's Rogers

By The Associated Press
The question used to be about Steve Rogers' ability to win 20 games. Now it is how many the injured pitcher will lose.

The 34-year-old right-hander dropped his ninth game in his last 10 decisions, giving up five runs in three innings as the Houston Astros toppled the Montreal Expos 8-4 Friday night.

Rogers has not won in the Astrodome since May 24, 1975 and owns a 1-11 career record in Houston.

But this season, Rogers' difficulty in Houston is par for the course. Friday's appearance ballooned an already-fat earned run average to 5.79 and lowered an already-imperished record to 3-10.

The same Steve Rogers who won 36 games over the past two seasons has given up 102 hits in 87 innings and walked 44 while striking out only 28. The comeback trail from this spring's shoulder injury has been all uphill.

"I've had such bad outings this year. I've had to force myself to come back, at times," said Rogers. "If I wasn't throwing crisply, I might have some doubt. But I felt good out there."

The Astros felt better. Bill Doran opened the Houston first with a double, preceding Reynolds' triple and an RBI single by Denny Walling. Walks to Jose Cruz and Jerry Mumphrey loaded the bases before Enos Cabell and Terry Puhl drove in a pair of runs with fielder's choice grounders.

Two singles and a walk in the third inning gave the Astros a fifth run before Rogers departed.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco beat Chicago 3-2. New York edged Cincinnati 3-2 in 11 innings. St. Louis routed Los Angeles 10-3, and Atlanta embarrassed Philadelphia 13-1. Pittsburgh and San Diego split a doubleheader, with Pittsburgh winning the opener 4-3 and San Diego the nightcap 3-2.

After scoring three or fewer runs in their previous eight games, the Astros collected 10 hits en route to their eight-run outburst.

"It's nice to get out to a big lead like that," Doran said. "That took the Expos out of their game. They like to run a lot and they couldn't run tonight."

Even reliever Bill Dawley chipped in offensively, smacking a run-scoring triple in the three-run Houston eighth and scoring when Expo second baseman Doug Flynn threw wildly to the plate. Dawley batted in Puhl, who drove in two runs in the game, one with a single preceding Dawley's triple.

The Expos scored their first run in the sixth when Jim Wohlford scored on a fielder's choice grounder by pinch-hitter Pete Rose.

Montreal cut the lead to 5-3 in the seventh against winning pitcher Bob Knepper, 9-8, on a single by Derrel Thomas and Andre Dawson's seventh home run of the season.

Gary Carter stroked his 18th home run of the year in the ninth.

Giants 3, Cubs 2
Manny Trillo made three standout plays in only his second game at third base and singled to launch a three-run rally in the third inning.

Jeff Robinson, 5-11, picked up only his second victory in his last 14 starts. Greg Minton pitched the last two innings for his tenth save.

Trillo, a four-time Gold Glove winner as a second baseman, made his three exceptional plays in the sixth inning.

Trillo robbed Ryne Sandberg of a double when he grabbed his smash down the line and threw him out, made a fine play on Gary Matthews' grounder and then made a diving catch of Leon Durham's line drive.

"I didn't want to play third base," said Trillo. "Everytime I play third base I lose 10 pounds."

The game was delayed by rain at the end of the seventh inning for an hour and a half.

Pirates 4-2, Padres 3-3
Tony Gwynn's three-run homer in the eighth inning ended John Tudor's shutout bid and rallied the Padres to a split of a two-night doubleheader.

Jim Morrison and Doug Frobeld led off successive innings with homers and starter Rick Rhoden drove in the go-ahead run as the Pirates won the opener 4-3.

The nightcap loss was just the second for the Pirates in their last 12 games while the West-leading visitors ended a three-game losing streak.

Tony Pena had a pair of hits in the first game to run his batting streak to 18 games, but lost the string in the second.

Mets 3, Reds 2
Wally Backman's double and Keith Hernandez's sacrifice fly in the 11th inning raised the Mets' extra-inning record to 6-0 this season and Jesse Orosco's record to 8-2.

"We have been very proficient at it (extra-inning play), mainly because we've had outstanding pitching," New York Manager Dave Johnson said. "We had it again tonight."

Darryl Strawberry drilled his 14th homer of the season leading off the second inning for the game's first run, and the Reds tied it with an unearned run in the bottom of the inning.

Hubie Brooks' single put the Mets ahead 2-1 in the seventh. But the Reds tied it in the eighth off Dwight Gooden on Ron Oester's line single to center.

Cardinals 10, Dodgers 5
David Green and George Hendrick each homered and combined for five hits and five RBI.

The Cardinals jumped on Fernando Valenzuela, 8-11, for three runs in the first inning and erupted for five runs off three Dodger pitchers in the seventh.

Hendrick belted his seventh homer of the year to give the Cards a 4-2 lead in the third. Green rapped his fifth homer in the sixth to give the Cards 5-2 advantage.

Braves 13, Phillies 1
Brad Komminsk hit two home runs and Dale Murphy one, and the Braves took advantage of three Philadelphia errors to score eight unearned runs.

Mike Schmidt homered in the fourth to tie the score 1-1 and take the league lead with 21, but Murphy's shot in the bottom of the inning tied him with Schmidt again.

South African Newspapers Banned From Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There'll be about 8,000 media members attending this year's Los Angeles Olympic Games — but none of them will be representing South African newspapers.

A spokesman for the International Olympic Committee (IOC) said Friday that reporters and photographers for South African newspapers will be excluded from the Los Angeles Olympic Games under a 14-year-old Olympic ban against their country.

The ban was imposed at the IOC's 1970 session in Amsterdam in answer to South Africa's apartheid regime and has remained in force ever since.

Press credentials are allocated on request from recognized national Olympic committees, the spokesman said. Where no national committee exists or is recognized by the IOC, "there can be no question of press credentials for that country," the spokesman said.

"Of course, nothing prevents a South African journalist buying tickets to the public stands or an accredited journalist from another country reporting to South African newspapers," the spokesman added.

The statement from the IOC spokesman coincided with a story out of Johannesburg, South Africa, quoting a newspaper as being refused permission by the "United States Olympic Committee" to cover the Games.

J.A. Robertson, foreign editor of the 10-newspaper Argus newspaper group, said the company's New York subsidiary applied through regular channels, but USOC executive director, F. Don Miller, refused the Argus application made last January. Miller told Argus to apply through the South African Olympic Committee, Robertson said.

Applying through the national body is the routine way to secure press passes, but the South African committee is not recognized by the international group.

The Argus Bureau Chief in North America, Ramsay Milne, said Friday by telephone that Miller then told Argus there was no available seating.

Field Records Set At Soviet-Bloc Games

BERLIN (AP) — On a day when world records were the aim of a group of Soviet-bloc athletes, two competitors found the mark.

East Germany's Uwe Hohn threw the javelin 343 feet, 10 inches — becoming the first man to break the 330-foot mark — and Bulgarian Ludmila Andonova cleared 6-9 1/2 in the women's high jump competition, both world records set Friday at the "Olympic Day" Soviet-bloc track and field meet in East Berlin.

The meet is an annual event stressing East Germany's support of the Olympic movement. The competition this year took on a combative tone after the Soviet-led withdrawal from the Los Angeles Games — purportedly to protest U.S. groups planning to picket the communist athletes.

Organizers of the meet let it be known that athletes would be trying for world records to stress that the boycott was depriving the Los Angeles Games of many of the world's top competitors.

World records had seemed out of reach Friday because of the unseasonably cool weather during the evening. Until the two records were set, most athletes appeared hampered by the chill.

Hohn, a 22-year-old soldier, hurled an American javelin to erase the standard of 327-2 set by Tom Petranoff of the United States on May 15, 1983, in Los Angeles.

Hohn's previous best toss had been 326-6 last May in Potsdam, a Berlin suburb where the "Olympic Day" competition was to wind up today.

"I knew I could surpass 100 meters (330 feet) but this wasn't a Beamon mark. I know I can throw even farther," Hohn said referring to the 29-2 1/2 long jump of Bob Beamon in the 1968 Olympic Games.

Minutes after Hohn set his mark, Andonova entered her name in the record books.

Competing alone after former world record holder Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union failed to clear 6-7 1/2, Andonova astonished the crowd by clearing 6-9 1/2 on her first attempt.

The height was initially announced as 6-9, but a remeasurement showed she had cleared 6-9 1/2.

Andonova, who recently gave birth to a daughter, raised her arms and jumped in glee after she cleared the bar.

"It was tough to compete only against the bar," Andonova said referring to the lack of competition. Her best previous jump was only 6-6 1/2, so her improvement was a startling 3 1/2 inches.

Andonova was born in Rostov in the Soviet Union to a Bulgarian father and a Russian mother. They moved to Bulgaria when she was 2-months-old.

The 24-year-old athlete began competing in 1978. She gave birth to a daughter last October and didn't resume training until January. Her husband Atavan is the Bulgarian decathlon record holder.

Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union, the world record holder in pole vault at 19-4 1/2, didn't come close to clearing 18-1 1/2 on his three tries.

The Dicamba Problem And How We're Solving It.

Ever since early June, when extension specialists began to report instances of dicamba damage to tobacco crops, W.R. Grace & Co. has been working with the growers to resolve the problem quickly and fairly.

A letter precisely describing the claims settlement procedure has already been sent to every grower whose crop has suffered damage from traces of the herbicide dicamba found in some Grace fertilizer products produced at Wilmington, NC.

Insurance adjusters are in the process right now of visiting every single grower who has filed a claim. In the meantime growers should continue to cultivate, harvest and cure their crops as usual.

As the assessment procedure clearly indicates, settlements are being sought on an absolutely individual basis.

Adjustments will be based on the full market value of poundage losses due to dicamba damage, with fair allowances for the location of the damaged leaves on the plants, since the higher leaves normally command higher prices.

Growers will also be compensated fairly in instances where they will be unable to recover losses of carryover poundage. Where a loss of carryover poundage is recoverable, however, its value will be taken into account.

If you have not received a letter in response to your claim, or if you have any questions, call us toll-free at 1-800-672-9300, Ext. 290; or call our insurance carrier CNA, collect, at (919) 782-3606.

We've been meeting the needs of tobacco growers since 1904. We're not about to stop now.

Soviet Pullout Affects Olympians

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Benita Fitzgerald-Brown, one of the top American women's high hurdlers, readily admits that her Olympic prospects changed drastically when the Eastern Bloc nations decided to boycott the Games.

"With them out, it shed a whole new light on things," said Fitzgerald-Brown, among the leading entrants for tonight's Sacramento International Summer Games. "Before the boycott, I was hoping I could make it to the final (of the 100-meter hurdles) like I did at Helsinki (Finland) last year (in the World Championships)."

At Helsinki, Fitzgerald-Brown finished last in the eight-women final.

"I was a little scared then," she recalled.

But she added that the experience gained during the pressure-packed World Championships should be very beneficial for the Olympics, in which the American trio of Fitzgerald-Brown, Kim Turner and Pam Page, plus Britain's Shirley Strong, now rate as the top contenders in the women's high hurdles.

"At the World Championships, I had to run the semifinal, then about two hours later, I had to run the final," she said. "I just didn't have it (physically). I was pooped."

"But after the boycott was announced, I became very optimistic (about winning an Olympic medal)," continued Fitzgerald-Brown, who married Laron Brown, a wide receiver on the University of Tennessee's football team, on March 3.

"I realized had a better shot at a gold medal, and I had to change my thought processes.

"My quest for the gold medal is here now," she added. "It's there for the taking."

Fitzgerald-Brown, the runner-up to Turner in the U.S. Olympic Trials in a dramatic race in which the first four finishers wound up within one-hundredth of a second of each other, is not concerned about the medal being tainted.

"I don't think people will look back and see that you won in 1984 and not everybody was there," she said. "I don't think the Russians put any less importance on the gold medals they won in 1980 (at the Moscow Olympics, which the United States boycotted)."

Fitzgerald-Brown, the 1983 Pan American Games gold medalist, the USA champion and the NCAA champion from the University of Tennessee, said, "I am in the best shape of my career ever at this time of year."

Stephanie Hightower, the fourth-place finisher, behind Turner, Fitzgerald-Brown and Page in the Trials, is the American record holder at 12.79 seconds.

Fitzgerald-Brown is the No. 2 performer at 12.84.

Fitzgerald-Brown thinks she has solved her technical problems — concentrating on quickness over the hurdles and not running up on hurdles at the end of a race — and recently has been working on her speed.

"I'm going to go for a (fast) time Saturday night," she said.

She said the 10-lane track in Hughes Stadium at Sacramento City College is very fast.

"It's bouncy and responsive," she said. "You can stay on top of the surface. You don't feel like you're running in mud."

Fitzgerald-Brown's chief opposition Saturday night should be Candy Young of the United States and Karen Nelson of Canada.

While much attention will be focused on the women's 100, the event expected to provide the most fireworks is the men's long jump. Carl Lewis, owner of the best mark ever at sea level, 28 feet, 10 1/4 inches, is supposed to take a strong shot at beating the world mark of 29-2 1/2, set during the 1968 Mexico City Olympic Games by Bob Beamon of the United States.

Lewis, a member of the U.S. Olympic team in the long jump, 100-and 200-meter dashes, and the 400-meter relay, also will run in the relay with Olympians Sam Graddy, Ron Brown and Calvin Smith. This is Lewis' last meet before the Games.

Mike Conley, the NCAA champion from the University of Arkansas, and Australia's Gary Honey are considered Lewis' strongest rivals in the long jump.

Other leading men's entrants include four-time U.S. Olympian John Powell in the discus throw; Jamaicans Bert Cameron, the world champion in the 400 meters, and Don Quarrie, the 1976 Olympic champion at 200 meters; Conley and Britain's Keith Connor in the triple jump; 19-foot pole vaulters Earl Bell of the United States and Thierry Vigneron and Pierre Quinon of France; high jumper Milt Otty of Canada, and Earl Jones and Johnny Gray, co-holders of the American record in the 800.

Oldenburg Loses Control Of Express

LOS ANGELES (AP) — J. William Oldenburg, a former vacuum cleaner salesman who rose to become a self-proclaimed "self-made billionaire," apparently has lost control of his United States Football League team, the Los Angeles Express, officials said.

With Oldenburg's financial empire apparently crumbling, the USFL this week joined negotiations to sell the team, according to Express spokesman Paul Sewell.

The Express had confirmed longstanding rumors Wednesday that the USFL franchise was on the auction block.

In the face of Oldenburg's mounting financial and legal problems, the Express spokesman did not address the possibility that the guaranteed multi-million dollar contract of quarterback Steve Young could be affected.

USFL spokesman Jim Burns, reached at his home in New Jersey, added, "We are very aware of the financial problems that Mr. Oldenburg is having."

Burns stopped short of saying the league was in control of negotiations to sell the Express, but he said Oldenburg "isn't actively involved."

Sewell said the league entered the picture "because of the financial problems and difficulties Bill Oldenburg has experienced."

Oldenburg's flagship company, San Francisco-based Investment Mortgage International Inc., has been decimated by staff cutbacks in the past several weeks, going from 159 workers at the start of June to about 30 currently.

In addition, Oldenburg and IMI are named in at least two lawsuits.

Sewell and Burns said the team's president and general manager, Don Klosterman — rather than Oldenburg — is representing the Express in the team sale.

Aaron Wins Anniversary HR Contest

TOKYO (AP) — Hank Aaron beat Japanese slugger Sadaharu Oh 4-2 in a home run hitting contest 10 years after beating him in their first encounter.

Aaron's homers, which came on 10 swings, reached the left field seats. Oh, who belted more home runs than anyone who ever swung a professional baseball bat, hit one of 10 pitches into the rightfield stands and another out of the ballpark.

The contest, before 25,000 spectators, preceded an all-star game between old-timers of the Central and Pacific leagues. In the first home run contest held in 1974 at the same Korakuen Stadium, Aaron beat Oh 10-9. Both were active players at the time.

Aaron, 50, passed Babe Ruth's record of 714 home runs in April 1974 and retired from the game with 755.

Oh, 44, retired with 868 home runs in 1980 after 22 seasons with the Yomiuri Giants. He took over as the team's manager this season.

Elliott Takes Like 500 Pole

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — The qualifying run for Sunday's Like 500 at Pocono International Raceway left even Bill Elliott surprised as he secured the pole position in almost record time.

Elliott, of Dawsonville, Ga., ran the 2.5-mile tri-oval in 59.139 seconds Friday in his Coors-Melling Ford — a time good for 152.184 mph, just a few ticks off of Darrell Waltrip's June 1983 track record of 152.315.

"That's the engine in there that we ran in the race for Nashville last weekend," Elliott said. "We weren't really gunning for this one, and we really didn't think we could sit on the pole."

"It's not exactly that you don't try every time you go out there," said Elliott. "You try, whether you've got everything working well that day or not. I just didn't think we had that good of a shot at it today."

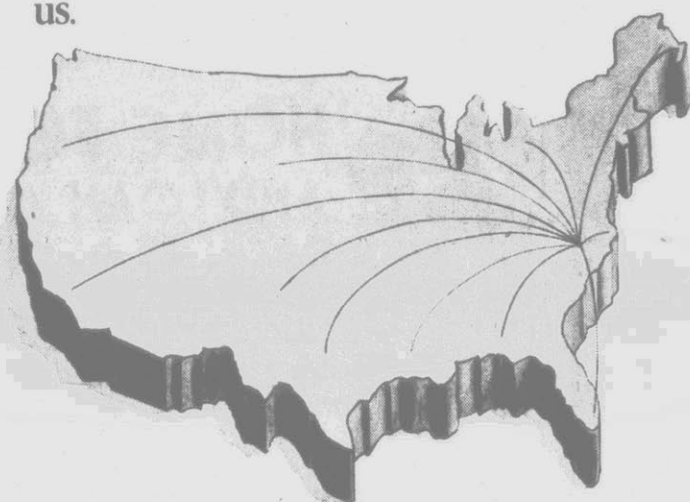

Neil Bonnett of Bessemer, Ala., driving a Chevy, was second with 151.964 mph. He was followed by Harry Gant of Taylorsville, N.C., in a Chevy at 151.299, and Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., in a Chevy, at 151.103.

For the past three years, 500 miler at Pocono have become fuel economy runs. Those able to go longer between refueling stops — most often Bobby Allison and recently Cale Yarborough — have been the winners.

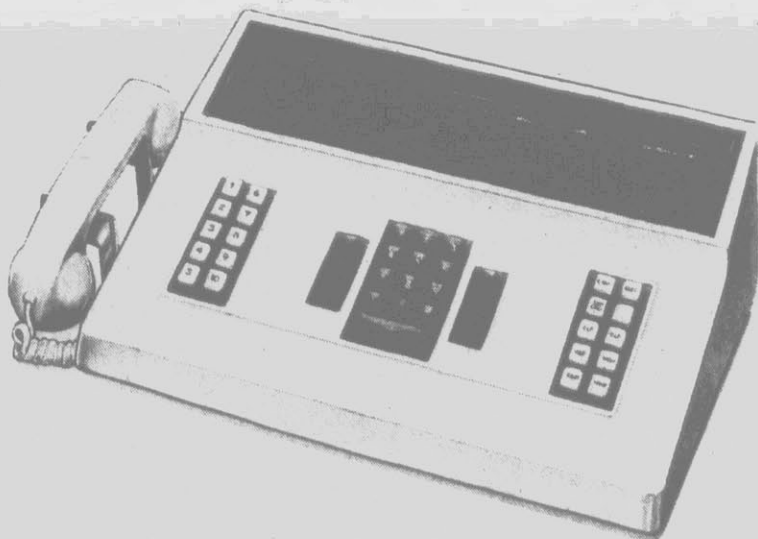

On Friday, 20 people qualified for the main event. Another 20 were to be named in the final qualifying round at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Game Creates Unusual Pennant Races

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
LANCASTER, Pa. — Make-believe managers, would-be big leaguers and statistics freaks feed their baseball habit with a board game that vicariously creates the heat of the hottest pennant race.

It's called APBA, a 33-year-old game played with dice and cards that lets strategists command Dale Murphy, George Brett, Cal Ripken Jr. and immortals like Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig on a tabletop diamond.

"It's more than just a game," said APBA devotee David Eisenhower, grandson of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower and son-in-law of former President Richard M. Nixon.

"The beauty of APBA is it lets you participate in something you couldn't ordinarily participate in. There just couldn't be a better board game. In some ways, it's better than the game on the field," he added.

"There's a little bit of frustrated general manager in everybody. In another life, people would like to be running the Toronto Blue Jays or the Philadelphia Phillies," said Eisenhower.

Vice President George Bush and New York Mayor Ed Koch are among the 500,000 Americans who play APBA (pronounced app-bah rather than as individual letters). There is a monastery league in Alabama, a movie actors league in Hollywood, a housewives league in New York, a sportswriters league in Chicago and mail leagues that cross international boundaries.

Eisenhower has played in a Philadelphia circuit founded 17 years ago. The 14-team league, which has its own commissioner and annual player draft, includes lawyers and investment bankers who play an 81-game season and a World Series on paper.

"There's no other game that even comes close to this kind of involvement. It's the nearest thing I know to physical combat," said Thacher Longstreth, a Philadelphia city councilman and former head of the Chamber of Commerce.

"It's an opportunity for us frustrated owners and frustrated big leaguers — and believe me, there are a hell of a lot of us — to play baseball. You can be Connie Mack or Dallas Green, screaming, grumbling or throwing the dice," added Longstreth.

The game has no fancy visual effects, but relies on a series of charts and symbols triggered by the roll of the dice. The dice correspond to one of 66 numbers on a player card, which is based on a major leaguer's performance from the preceding season.

The numbers dictate what a hitter will do against different pitchers depending on the number of outs, baserunners and game situations like a drawn-in infield.

A player's batting average, fielding ability, speed and arm are fed through a secret formula devised by Richard Seitz, the founder and president of the APBA Game Co. in Lancaster.

Seitz, a former purchasing agent for a trucking company, developed the game with seven high school chums in 1932 and sold it commercially in 1951, when he sold out all 200 sets. (The game gets its name from the original league — the American Professional Baseball Association.)

"I guess it's the same thing that makes model railroads so popular. The player has a piece of life reduced to miniature that he controls. It reproduces real life on your table top," said Seitz, 69.

"The game is the type that feeds the imagination. The Walter Mitty syndrome affects us all. Where else can you hold Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle in your hand?"

As in real life, Mike Schmidt smacks lots of home runs, Bill Madlock hits for a high average and Nolan Ryan strikes out a lot of batters.

APBA even capture subtleties. In a master game produced for experts only, a left-handed pull hitter has a better chance of getting a hit if the first baseman is holding a runner on base. There can also be suicide squeezes, steals of home, balks, rainouts, injuries and ejections.

In a 1971 APBA clubhouse game, Philadelphia Manager Frank Lucchesi had his volatile shortstop Larry Bowa, now with the Chicago Cubs, thrown out for arguing an out call on an attempted steal. Said Lucchesi: "You dummy, you even get ejected in a tabletop game!"

APBA also makes football, basketball, golf, bowling and horse racing games. Seitz won't divulge his sales, except that about 40 to 50 percent of his business comes from baseball. One business analyst estimated annual gross sales of $750,000.

Braves Make Coaching Changes

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves announced Friday they have hired Eddie Haas, manager of their AAA farm team in Richmond, Va., as a hitting coach.

Haas, 49, will be the National League club's first base coach and work with the batters along with Manager Joe Torre, the club said in a statement. He has been in the Braves' organization as a player, coach and minor league player since 1958, and served as Atlanta's first base coach from 1974 through 1977.

The move will enable Joe Pignatano to move from first base coaching duties back to the bullpen and Rube Walker to move from the bullpen back to the bench to work with the pitchers along with Bob Gibson, the statement said.

Greenville Manager Bobby Dews will take over as Richmond manager and Greenville pitching coach Leo Mazzone was named acting manager at Greenville. Part-time Atlanta hitting instructor Luke Appling will resume his previous duties as a roving minor league hitting instructor, the Braves said.

Haas has managed the Richmond Braves since 1981 and led the club to the International League pennant in 1982. He played in the majors in 1957, 1958 and 1960, the later two years with the Milwaukee Braves.

The baseball game sells for $24.95, and a nine-inning contest can be played in 30 minutes, alone or against a competitor. "It's the greatest game God ever put on the earth."

Some Economists Say Tax Jumps A Certainty

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are not used to hearing a presidential candidate tell them their taxes are going up.

Nonetheless, a blunt Walter F. Mondale says they are going up regardless of whether he or President Reagan is elected in November.

Some economists agree, though not all.

In the meantime, the economists say the mere promise of higher taxes by Mondale probably will not change Americans' financial habits unless Reagan flatly agrees with him — an unlikely event — and the discussion gets very specific.

"Usually you need more than just a vague notion that taxes are going up to change consumer spending," Ted Gibson, senior economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said Friday.

As for the Reagan administration, "we will let Walter Mondale do the talking about raising taxes," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said.

No decision will be made until results of tax changes under study at the Treasury Department are released after the election, Speakes said. But he added: "There is no secret plan to raise taxes."

Some taxes have already been raised. A day before Mondale made his proclamation, Reagan signed a bill covering a variety of measures that raises about $50 billion and cuts spending by $13 billion over the next three years.

The object of all the tax talk, of course, is federal budget deficit, which is expected to total about $170 billion or more for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

Many credit analysts say the heavy Treasury borrowing needed to finance the deficit, together with rising private borrowing stemming from the strong economy, will keep interest rates high.

Subsequently, the high rates have lifted the dollar to record levels, resulting in a record U.S. trade deficit.

Mondale, in his acceptance speech for the Democratic presidential nomination Thursday night, said taxes "will go up, and anyone who says they won't is not telling the truth to the American people."

While he was not specific in the speech, observers believe he is interested in a minimum tax for corporations, elimination of the third year of the 1981 tax cut for individuals earning more than $50,000 or $60,000 a year, and a surcharge on people earning more than $100,000 a year.

Some economists suggest there are certain tax increases with a strong chance of being implemented next year by either Mondale or Reagan.

"There might be more moves to close more loopholes and weaken some of the deductions that many people are able to take," said Gibson. "I don't think we'd be talking about repeal, but some weakening of them."

Robert Sinche, chief economist for the New York investment firm of Bear, Stearns & Co., agreed and said that, for example, the amount of interest on a mortgage or car loan that can be deducted from taxable income might be reduced.

Gibson said that should Reagan win in November, he will "attempt to rely more on spending reductions rather than tax increases, as has been his theme all along. But a tax increase will definitely be necessary."

Not necessarily so, said Robert J. Genetski, chief economist of Harris Trust & Savings Bank in Chicago.

"My guess is President Reagan is going to talk at worst about not increasing taxes, and at best about getting them down," Genetski said, adding he applauded such a move.

"To promote economic growth you cannot have high tax rates."

Martin Feldstein, who recently resigned as Reagan's chief economist, said if a tax increase "fell specifically on savings and investment, then that could be worse than a continuing deficit."

"But if we have a general tax increase, a tax that falls more heavily on consumption and spending, then that would be better from a long-term productivity point of view than continuing deficits," he said.

In any case, Reagan probably will keep evaluating possible tax increases only so long as spending cuts are examined first, Feldstein said.

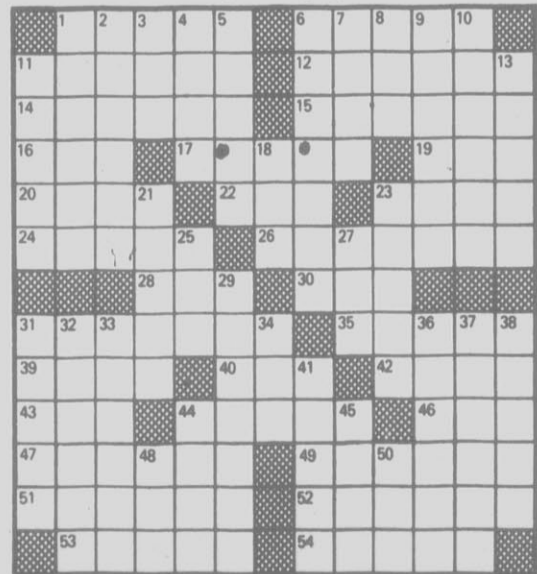

"But he's not going to start by saying, 'Let's solve the problem with a tax increase,'" Feldstein said.

"Whether we're going to need more taxes will depend, if he is elected, on reducing spending."

Debutantes Planning For September

By LORETTA GRANTHAM
Reflector Staff Writer

Eleven local young ladies will join others from across the Tar Heel state to participate in the 58th annual North Carolina Debutante Ball sponsored by the Terpsichorean Club of Raleigh.

The event, to be held at the Raleigh Civic Center on the evening of Sept. 7, will be a memorable one according to the recently interviewed debutantes.

Clark

Janet Davenport Clarke, a Roanoke High School graduate and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woolard

JANET DAVENPORT CLARK

Clark, is from Williamston.

A rising sophomore at N.C. State University, Miss Clark is a charter member of Chi Omega sorority. Engineering is currently her choice for a major, but she said this could change in the future. During her freshman year at NCSU, she participated in the Society of Women Engineers.

In high school, Miss Clark was on the tennis team, the annual staff and in the Monogram Club. Additionally, she was National Honor Society president and salutatorian her senior year.

Miss Clark's father, as chief marshal, will escort her at the ball and Robert Smith, a rising senior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will be her assistant marshal.

Tennis, reading and water-related activities such as swimming take up much of Miss Clark's leisure time.

She said she is the first debutante in her immediate family, so she is "really looking forward to getting to know more about it."

Johnson

A George F. Hankins Scholar and rising sophomore at Wake Forest University, Rebecca Jane Johnson is the only debutante from Robersonville. The Roanoke High School graduate is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Russell Johnson.

Miss Johnson, who was a varsity cheerleader, Senior Beta Club and Monogram Club member, and basketball player in high school, is majoring in business with an emphasis in marketing. She is minoring in biology and hopes to go into a medically related sales career. Last year Rebecca served on the Student Government Health and Counseling Services Committee.

This summer she is working at Creative Temporaries in Raleigh and said, "I'm learning quite a bit about what all is involved with business. ... It's been a good experience."

Miss Johnson's free time activities include jazz and aerobic dancing, swimming, skiing and gourmet cooking.

Miss Johnson's father will be her chief marshal, and Ronald L. Bevins, a Pulaski, Va., native who attends Emory and Henry College, will be her assistant marshal. In discussing the Terpsichorean event, Miss Johnson said, "I think it's exciting to be a part of the only state ball — it makes you feel especially proud to be a North Carolina girl."

Lanier

A rising sophomore and Alpha Xi Delta sorority member at East Carolina University, Rebecca Evelyn Lanier is the second North Carolina debutante in her family. Her sister, Laura, attended the Raleigh ball several years ago, and Miss Lanier said she learned more about the event from her sister's experiences.

Miss Lanier, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Conrad Lanier Jr. of Greenville, attended Arendell Parrott Academy in Kinston for two years before graduating from J.H. Rose High School in 1983. She participated in a variety of committees at Rose and was also in Keywanettes for a year.

She plans to major in business at ECU and then pursue a career in "some type of business." Miss Lanier said she is "leaning toward accounting."

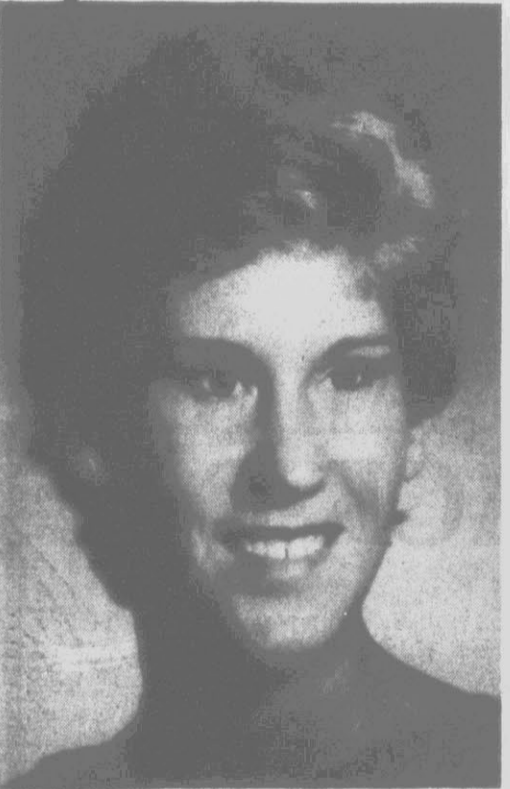

Her hobbies include spending time at the beach and cross-stitching.

Miss Lanier's father, a Greenville lawyer, will be her chief marshal. It will be his ninth time, she said, because he began serving as a marshal in college. Rick Hardee, who works at Garner Wholesale, will be her assistant marshal.

"I'm really excited about it all," Miss Lanier said, "and I'm looking forward to the parties."

Lee

Caroline Desmond Lee, wearing her mother's wedding dress, will make her debut in September. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webster Lee of Greenville, Miss Lee is the third debutante in her family, following her sisters, Bonnie and Cora.

BARBARA ANNETTE LITTLE

A J.H. Rose High School graduate of 1983, she participated in cheerleading for three years, in track and in gymnastics, where she won the state championship. Additionally, Miss Lee has played the piano for 12 years.

She is currently a Chi Omega sorority member at Appalachian State University where she will be a sophomore majoring in elementary education this fall.

Because she is working at McDonald's this summer, she has to juggle a busy schedule of work and debutante responsibilities. "With everything there is to do," Miss Lee said, "I've really had to learn to budget my time."

When there is time to spare, she enjoys waterskiing, snowskiing and jogging.

Miss Lee's father will be her chief marshal, and Doug Miskew of Florida, a rising sophomore at ASU, will serve as her assistant marshal.

She said in addition to the many parties and activities, "meeting the other girls" has been "exciting" in itself.

Little

Daughter of Barbara Jean Taylor of Grifton and James Thomas Little Jr. of Greenville, Barbara Annette Little feels being a debutante has taught her a great deal "about etiquette and how to act." She said the ball will be a learning experience.

Miss Little, who graduated from J.H. Rose High School in 1983, was involved in many extracurricular activities, including National Honor Society, Keywanettes, Student Government Association and the tennis team. She will be a sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this fall where she intends to major in business administration. Her degree, she hopes, will prepare her for a profession in advertising or personnel.

Polly Little, Miss Little's grandmother, is very active in the Greenville community, and Barbara said this was helpful in the debutante selection process. "It was really an honor to be chosen," she concluded.

Miss Little's father will be her chief marshal while Keith Stocks, a Rose High graduate and rising junior at UNC, will serve as her assistant marshal.

This summer she is working at C. Heber Forbes clothing store. In her free time, Miss Little likes to play tennis, waterski, cross-stitch and do aerobics.

Moye

Farmville debutante Dorothy Suzanne Moye is a rising sophomore at Salem College in Winston-Salem and graduated from Salem Academy there.

She has not yet determined her college major but is possibly interested in international affairs or history. This past year, she was involved in a National Model United Nations Program held at the United Nations in New York.

The program, which includes colleges and universities across the United States, sparked her interest in history and political science.

This summer Miss Moye is working as an assistant head counselor at Camp Seafarer at Arapahoe.

She is looking forward to the debutante activities in September because it will be a family occasion. "It will be a very memorable weekend for my parents, grandparents, brother and me," she said.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Williams Moye Sr., her father will be her chief marshal. Her brother, Moses Williams Moye Jr., will be her assistant marshal. He is a rising senior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Owens

The first debutante from Fountain and a rising sophomore at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Melissa Carol Owens is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark West Owens Jr.

She is a 1983 graduate of Farmville Central High School where she was involved in cheerleading for two years, National Honor Society, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Keywanettes. The Morehead Scholar nominee has also taken dance lessons for 14 years and has continued her dance studies at UNC.

While Miss Owens is unsure of her major, she is considering either medicine or law. She said she has thought of being "everything from a pediatrician to an attorney." Because she is working in her father's law firm this summer, Miss Owens said she is currently favoring law as her career choice.

"I think being a debutante is a very good experience," Miss Owens said, "because you meet so many people."

While her father will accompany her to the ball as her chief marshal, her twin brother, Michael, will be her assistant marshal.

Tennis, cross-stitch and waterskiing are among Miss Owens' free time activities.

Craft Markets Are Growing

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures
Towards the end of the 19th century, vacationers in the Adirondack and Catskill Mountains of New York would hike the mountain paths with the aid of a tall white-ash walking staff.

The great hotels of the day sold the sticks for 50 cents as souvenirs. The hotels are gone now and most of the old sticks have disappeared, but 20th-century hikers can buy a handmade reproduction for $30 or $35 from Al Fromberger of Poestenkill Hiking Staff Mfg. Co.

Fromberger, who is a naturalist by training, sold 495 staffs last year mainly through the mail. His attendance at a craft market this June is likely to help him meet his goal of selling twice that number this year. He joined about 1,000 of his fellow craftsmen at three separate craft markets in West Springfield and Springfield, Mass. The event, which began about 19 years ago as an informal effort among 60 craftsmen to sell their wares, has moved three times to larger quarters and has become a large business which generates millions of dollars in sales. It attracts crafts retailers from all over the country.

As founder and president of American Craft Enterprises, a subsidiary of the American Craft Council, Carol Sedestrom has been responsible for the growth of the ACE-sponsored fairs now held in June, September, February and April at sites around the country.

After 10 years at the Dutchess County Fairgrounds in Rhinebeck, N.Y., this year the June Fair (ACE's largest) was moved to West Springfield where larger quarters provided space for about 575 craftsmen's booths and more room for customers. In honor of the occasion, the Governor of Massachusetts and his wife turned up to say welcome.

Gov. Michael Dukakis said the fair, which will be held again next year at the Eastern States Exposition Center, could bring as many as 100,000 visitors and was an important part of the effort to build tourism in his state.

Yet another sign of vitality was the growth of satellite craft events run by others. Two such shows held during the wholesale portion of the ACE show put the wares of about 500 more craftsmen on display. It was at one of these that Fromberger found space for his walking staff.

Despite the trappings of success, craft fairs are still marketplaces in which the individual who made the goods on display is on hand to answer questions about them. A chance to rub shoulders with the makers is one of the most appealing aspects of a craft fair, said Ms. Sedestrom.

It gave the chance to learn from Fromberger, for example, that hikers today find carrying a walking staff immediately identifies them as hikers and helps insure a friendly reception.

The fairs also provide an opportunity for individual craftsmen to develop a business. A number of experienced craftsmen at the ACE show, for example, recalled that the first fair they attended helped them generate enough orders to keep going. Fairs are still providing the same opportunity for younger craftsmen.

For Pamela Hill, a quilter from Amador City, Calif., who was attending her first East Coast ACE fair, the opportunity to meet retailers was only one aspect of her pleasure at being there.

"I am in an isolated area and work pretty much on my own. When I come to the ACE shows I get a strong sense of community with other craftsmen. I see work that challenges and stimulates me and I have made contact with other craftsmen who are very generous about letting me know of exhibitions and other opportunities," she said.

SANDRA ANNE CHAMBERS...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Chambers of Norfolk, Va., who announces her engagement to Elroy Vonzell Spencer of Greenville. The wedding will take place Dec. 1.

For some people, the sales realized at a fair help to keep other activities going. The Women's Studio Workshop of Rosendale, N.Y., for example, showed its handmade paper and artist-made books. The group was established 10 years ago by four women artists to provide exhibition opportunities for women.

Vows Said In Evening Ceremony

David Carol Bronstein and Joseph Carl Ward III exchanged wedding vows in the First Presbyterian Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. David Jenkins.

A program of wedding music was presented by Julian Miller, organist, and Don Stewart, trumpeter. Mrs. Samuel Hunter sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Edward Bronstein of Goldsboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carl Ward Jr. of Lumberton.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal designer gown of white tissue taffeta fashioned with a portrait neckline outlined in re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice was overlaid with imported re-embroidered alencon lace and embellished with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The long fitted puffed sleeves were fashioned of imported English net and alencon lace appliques beaded with seed pearls and iridescent sequins extending into calla points. The A-line taffeta skirt flowed into a full chapel train. She wore a chapel length veil of silk illusion scattered with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace and seed pearls. It was held in place a cap featuring alencon lace appliques encrusted with pearls. She carried a bouquet of cymbidium orchids, white sweetheart roses, pink apple blossoms, stephanotis and baby's breath tied with white bridal satin.

Kristy Troutman of Greenville was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of aqua matte taffeta. The sleeveless gown featured a sweetheart neckline with Oscar de la Renta bows on the shoulders. The full skirt was designed with an apron flounce. She carried an arm bouquet of pink lilies, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with white and pink ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Kay Daughtry, Lura Edgerton and Diane Bronstein, cousin of the bride, all of Greenville, Harriett Watkins of Oxford and Paula Tye, cousin of the bride of Lowell, Mass. Each wore a dress identical to that of the maid of honor and carried identical bouquets.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were John Richard Ward, brother of the bridegroom, and Donny Douglas, both of Lumberton, David Bronstein, brother of the bride of Washington, Max Joyner Jr. of Greenville and Phil Hoft of Raleigh.

The mother of the bride wore a full length chiffon gown in cerise. The mother of the bridegroom selected a full length mauve gown. Grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. J.C. Ward, of Rowland was remembered with an orchid corsage.

A reception was held at the Walnut Creek Country Club. Music was furnished by Sea Breeze. Guests were greeted by Aubrey and Suretta Bronstein. Mrs. Jack Bell presided at the guest register. Mrs. Thurman Taylor poured punch and cake was served by Mrs. John McDonald.

A wedding luncheon was given Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Bronstein and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Tye.

A rehearsal dinner was given Friday night by the bridegroom's parents at the Walnut Creek Country Club followed by a rehearsal dance. Music was provided by Mac Stewart.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given Friday at the Goldsboro Country Club by Mrs. John C. McDonald, Mrs. Charles P. Gaylor III, Mrs. Gerald Daughtry, Mrs. Norman Edgerton, Mrs. Aubrey Bronstein and Mrs. Donald Gubten.

Several pre-nuptial parties honored the couple. The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is currently

Gerras with author-editors Camille Cusumano and Carol Munson (Rodale, $21.95) is "The Joy of Cooking" of the health and fitness generation.

Its 899 pages and more than 1,500 recipes make it a truly basic volume, including even mail order sources for special ingredients and kitchen equipment; charts telling how best to store all manner of ingredients; recipes for homemade yogurt, kefir and buttermilk; and directions for removing waxes and pesticide residues from produce whose origins are uncertain.

Recipes include traditional dishes and some of today's darlings, such as hot chicken salad rolled in lettuce leaves and chili con carne salad, aka taco salad in many areas. "Jet Fuel," by Jeanne Jones (Villard Books, $12.95) should be required reading for dieters who keep making excuses for their lapses. As Ms. Jones says in Chapter 2, "The occasional junk-food freak-out never killed anyone ... or made anyone fat. It is one's total food and life-style strategy that is important."

Ms. Jones is an advocate of trade-offs such as: "If you have butter or margarine on your toast for breakfast, use less salad dressing on your salad at lunch."

If you clean and dry fresh fruit and vegetables before storing them, she says, you'll eat them more often than you would if you must stop to clean them when you're hungry.

Among her book's few recipes are snacks such as tortilla and potato chips baked instead of fried, and garbanzo nuts, made with the high protein beans known also known as chick peas or ceci.

Herman, ex-chef of the Pritikin Longevity Center, with Bill Lawren (Simon & Schuster, $15.95) and "Deliciously Low," by Harriet Roth, former director of the center's cooking school (New American Library, $17.50).

Some of Herman's recipes use poultry or seafood, but no meat, unlike Mrs. Roth's, which include some game or red meat. Her recipes include nutritional data and are designed to be low in sodium, fat, cholesterol and sugar content. Both authors often use frozen apple juice concentrate to replace some of the usual sugar content of recipes.

Until all processed food contains sodium labeling, "Salt: The Brand Name Guide to Sodium Content," by Dr. Michael Jacobson, Bonnie F. Liebman and Greg Moyer (Workman, $5.95) makes a fine stopgap guide for people on restricted diets.

For Pritikin followers: "The Official Pritikin Guide to Restaurant Eating," by the guru himself, Nathan Pritikin, and his wife Ilene (Bobbs-Merrill, $11.95) contains more than 13 pages of endorsements by satisfied clients, along with recommended restaurants and hotel dining rooms, tips for ethnic dining at home and abroad and strategies for following the authors' stringent regime away from home.

New Cookbooks And Nutrition Guides Augment Health Regimes

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans' interest in health and fitness is increasingly reflected in cookbooks and nutrition guides.

New titles in recent months have included five books of either vegetable or vegetarian recipes, nutrition guides in layman's language and a slew of low-salt, low fat and/or low-cholesterol cookbooks.

One of the latter is based on a 10-year clinical study of heart disease risks at 12 American and Canadian universities and the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation, in Oklahoma City. Another is "Light and Healthy Chinese Cooking," by Daniel Jue and Teresa Chew (Bobbs-Merrill, $16.95) and a third is "Low-Salt Cooking," a Better Homes and Gardens book (Meredith, $5.95).

The condiment recipes in the Better Homes book include a soy sauce substitute that resembles the real thing in color only. It is the consistency of pancake syrup and tastes like low-sodium bouillon sweetened with molasses, both of which it contains.

Main dish recipes are along the lines of sesame chicken, pizza, chili and meat loaf containing apples and oatmeal, with an apple butter glaze.

In the Chinese book, Jue and Chew have modified traditional recipes to lower their fat, cholesterol and sodium content. In some cases they substitute baking for deep-fat frying; in some they use reduced sodium soy sauce.

Other features include nutritional data with each recipe and advice on incorporating Chinese dishes into western menus.

Most of their recipes contain 250 or fewer calories per serving.

Jue is a former chef. Chew is a dietitian and nutritionist at San Francisco State University. Together they teach cooking classes in Castro Valley, Calif.

The other low-cholesterol cookbook is "A Taste for Health" (Penfield Press, 215 Brown St., Iowa City, Iowa 52240, $5.25; $9.25 for two copies or $13.25 for three; all are postpaid).

The recipes are based on the moderate cholesterol-lowering diet used by 3,806 middle-aged men with high cholesterol levels in a project coordinated by a nutritionist of the National Institute of Health, in Washington, and the director of the Nutrition Resource Center of The University of Iowa.

The more than 200 simple, appealing recipes were collected, edited and tested by a committee from the cooperating universities. They cover a broad spectrum, including New England clam chowder, Jewish matzo balls (dumplings made with meal from unleavened bread), Greek Easter bread, eggplant parmesan, pizza and Chinese fried rice.

Although no attempt has been made to provide low sodium recipes, the committee offers a pageful of tips on reducing sodium content.

Nutritional information includes the amount of meat, oil or other fat or egg or dairy equivalent per serving.

Two good buys in nutrition books are "The Lifelong Nutrition Guide," by Brian Morgan, an assistant professor of preventive dentistry and nutrition at Columbia University, in New York (Prentice-Hall, $14.95 hardbound, $7.95 paperback) and "A Handbook of Commonsense Nutrition," by Sue Rodwell Williams, a dietitian and member of the field faculty of the University of California, at Berkeley (Mosby, $8.95). Both are straightforward, readable guides.

They discuss, among other things, the role of good nutrition as it relates to age groups and various diseases in which diet is believed to be a factor.

"Cooking from an Italian Garden," by Paola Scaravelli and Jon Cohen, (Holt Rinehart Winston, $18.95) illustrates how sophisticated, delicious and satisfying a vegetarian diet can be.

Among the more than 300 classic meatless dishes from this husband and wife team are a tomato, cheese and olive flan (custard pie), artichokes with egg sauce, pasta mold with spinach and mozzarella and a tomato sauce and calzone, which the authors call "a pizza folded in half, filled, sealed and baked."

"The Southern Heritage Vegetables Cookbook" (Oxmoor House, $9.95) is part of the publishers' southern cooking series, reflecting current and traditional preferences.

Green beans boiled to death with ham hocks, salt pork or bacon coexist side by side with quickly cooked vegetables and regional fare such as poke shoots, field cress, collards and hominy. All the books in the series are beautifully illustrated with black and white and color drawings and photographs.

"Farm Journal's Best-Ever Vegetable Recipes" (Doubleday, $14.95) are for more than 40 vegetables, including leeks, jicama, salsify, celeriac (celery root) and sugar snap peas, as well as more common varieties. Recipes also include fried potato skins, plain or with cheese, Mexican or pizza toppings, falafel (Middle Eastern bean fritters) and hummus (Middle Eastern chick pea dip).

"The New American Vegetarian Cookbook," by Paulette Mitchell (Rodale, $13.95 hardbound, $9.95 paperback) is vague on meal-planning strategies for adequate protein intake, but balanced menus begin each chapter. Recipes are easy to follow and use dairy products as well as nuts, seeds and tofu.

Desserts also contain significant amounts of nutrients from fruit, nuts and dairy products. More than 200 of the recipes are salt-free. Recipe examples: carrot corn muffins, broccoli almond souffle and tomato yogurt soup.

Only about 150 recipes are in "Vegetariana," by Nava Atlas (Dial Press-Doubleday, $12.95). The rest of the book contains line drawings by the author, plus history, folklore and trivia. Recipes include frittatas (omelets), salads, oriental stir-fried dishes and the almost obligatory pasta chapter.

Other guides to healthful eating include:

Better Homes and Gardens' "Cooking with Whole Grains" (Meredith, $4.95), a collection of simple, interesting recipes for such foods as barley salad, some Middle Eastern favorites and a homemade dry wheat cereal that poses no threat to the commercial manufacturers. It was dry and floury tasting and the peanut butter in it contributed little flavor.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

The wedding of Deborah Rae Wynne and Terry Lee Ludwick, both of Stokes, was solemnized Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Mount Pleasant Christian Church. The Rev. John Simpson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by pianist Barbara Plummer. Andrea Wynne, sister of the bride, sang "There Is Love" and "You Look At Me," accompanied by Jarrett Wynne, brother of the bride, she sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ralph Wynne of Stokes. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William Ludwick Jr. of Winchester, Va.

The gown featured a stand-up neckline with a sheer yoke and a V-shaped flounce with satin ribbon trim. The full skirt, which fell from a basque waist, extended to lace flounced at the hemline with cascading tiers of lace from waist to hemline in the back. She wore a wreath of orchid silk flowers with satin bow trim in her hair. She carried a white wicker fireside basket filled with pink miniature carnations, white and lavender daisies, yellow lilies and purple statice interspersed with white baby's breath. The basket featured lavender and white ribbon with showers of purple picot ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Julie Ludwick of Winchester, Va., sister of the bridegroom, and Wanda G. Branch of Greenville. The bridesmaids' gowns, silk flower wreaths and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

Flower girl was Laticia Wynne of Stokes, niece of the bride. She wore a formal gown of sheer orchid polyester lined with taffeta. The dress featured a jewel neckline with an attached lace capelet. The dress was enhanced with a satin bow at the raised waistline and the full skirt fell to a lace-flounced hemline. The dress was worn over a hoop slip. She wore a wreath of orchid silk flowers trimmed with a satin bow in her hair. She carried a white basket with a spray of mixed flowers and lavender ribbon filled with flower petals.

Best man was David Braswell of Grandmothers of the bridal couple were remembered with a corsage of a single phalaenopsis orchid.

The wedding was directed by Dorothy Simons, aunt of the bride, and Lois Simmons Carwin of Monte Rey, Calif., cousin of the bride.

Skiles-Cox Wedding Vows Said

Joan Allison Cox and Ricky Louis Skiles were married Saturday at 3 p.m. in the First Baptist Church in Elizabeth City. Dr. Brightie E. White Jr. heard the wedding vows.

The gown featured a Victorian neckline with a yoke of English net and schiffli lace, empire bodice designed with chantilly lace. The A-line skirt fell into a chapel length train fashioned with a flounce of chantilly lace. She wore a bridal hat enhanced with schiffli lace and imported silk illusion.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Dirty Money Gets Clean Bill From Restaurateur

DEAR ABBY: "A Friend in Millbury, Mass." wrote to say that money is a notorious germ carrier—that each time paper money passes from one pair of hands to another, it becomes filthier. "Friend" went on to say that he would not eat in an establishment where the person who handles the money also handles the food.

As a 30-year owner of a fast-food restaurant, I have heard this story many times. It is not true. To support my statement, I submit this article that appeared in the Rochester (N.Y.) Times-Union in April 1973:

"MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Greenbacks dirty? No more than the silverware you eat with.

"A year-long study by Memphis and Shelby County health officials of 150 Memphis restaurants and food stores concluded that dollar bills are often cleaner than the knives and forks. 'Frankly, I was flabbergasted,' Don Daffron, who directed the study, said this week. 'Everything I had studied in microbiology told me money was always covered with bacteria. But it was relatively clean.'

"He said $1 bills average 8,686 organisms per half side, less than knives and forks checked by food inspectors.

"Dimes and pennies averaged only 63 organisms per side, while quarters had 1,050, nickels 1,430 and half-dollars 268.

"Daffron theorized that there were fewer bacteria on pennies and dimes because copper and silver may retard bacterial growth.

"Daffron said the investigation was designed to find out how much bacteria was being spread by food servers who also run cash registers."

—TOM WAHL, AVON, N.Y.

DEAR MR. WAHL: Now we know there's no need to launder dirty money. Thanks. And keep the change.

DEAR ABBY: While I agree with "A Friend in Millbury, Mass." that food service personnel who handle money should not handle food without washing their hands, your writer might be interested to know that all U.S. currency (paper bills only) is treated with an antibacterial agent that leaves it germ-free for the life of the bill.

Definitely Worth Calling For Good Service

Incidentally, the United States is the only country in the world to so treat its currency.

—PETER FULTON ROSS, AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR MR. ROSS: It's good to know that U.S. currency is germ-free. But if it weren't, even a germ would have a hard time living on a dollar these days.

DEAR ABBY: The summer season is here again for us "fortunate" folks who have a place at the lake. I've decided to enjoy ours, and not be a hostess all summer as in previous years.

In case "friends" don't know it, it takes a lot of work to ready a cottage for the summer season. It's not like "On Golden Pond" where they just walk in, uncover everything and start living!

The place has to be cleaned from top to bottom. Water pipes need to be drained and cleaned. The boats need motors checked and oiled and the dock has to be repaired and painted. When that's done, there's the mowing and raking. No friends ever show up to help with these tasks, but every weekend they appear on Saturday a.m. through Sunday p.m. with their kids, minus beach towels, swimsuits, beverages and food.

Next year we may start going to our lake place on Monday morning and returning to the city on Friday evening to rest!

I might add that our summer drop-in friends never invite us to their homes during the winter months.

Please print this, Abby. It applies to a lot of folks.

—FED UP IN MINNESOTA

DEAR ABBY: The letters from all the "forgotten mothers" following Mother's Day cause me to comment on the other side of the coin. For years I remembered my mother on Mother's Day, dreading her reaction to my gift because I knew I could never please her.

Double Ring Ceremony Held

Susan Elizabeth Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Donald Kennedy of Bath, and Alexander Erroll Markus Schatz, son of Dr. and Mrs. Abdel-Hamied Zayed of Selma, were married Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Greenville Church of Christ.

Carl Etchison performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The father of the bridegroom was best man.

Nancy Etchison of Greenville was honor attendant. Ushers included Alan Keys and Vern Roberts, both of Greenville, Andy White of Fayetteville and Chuck Hester of Selma.

A program of wedding music was presented by a chorus including Judy Ziehr, Linda Shuman, Kim Vasper, Karen Beehler, Katherine Pugh, Cary Cavender, Bob Jacobson and Rocky Ziehr. Glen Cannon was director.

The bride wore a waltz length gown of schiffli embroidered English net over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline encircled with schiffli embroidered lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of English net edged in scalloped Brussels lace. The puffed sleeves of embroidered English net extended to a band of scalloped schiffli lace. The gathered circular skirt was designed with tiers of embroidered net over peau de soie. A sash of white bridal satin enhanced the natural waistline. She wore a portrait hat of imported French chantilly lace embellished with pearls. A veil of illusion extended over the hat and a pouf of illusion enhanced the back.

The honor attendant wore a tea length gown of lavender georgette designed with a high jewel neckline and small asymmetrical tucks that fastened at the shoulder with matching buttons. Full bishop sleeves extended to a cuff at the wrist. The gathered skirt fell from a natural waistline and was enhanced by a belt of matching lavender georgette.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the church.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Bermuda.

The bride is employed by Westbrook Corp., Ramada Inn in Greenville. The bridegroom is employed by the department of residence life, East Carolina University.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Glen Cannon.

The couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Forrest at their home in Ayden.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Children drive their parents crazy. That's a fact.

But do you know what single complaint drives them there faster than anything else? Kids who don't clean their rooms.

I know, you thought you were the only mother who discovered life under their bunk bed. I felt guilty for years because I wouldn't allow the dog to kiss the kids for fear the dog would get sick.

Sometimes I think we're just spinning our wheels harping about it. I've read all those articles that guarantee instant conversion from resident pig to princess. They tell you to put down easy-care vinyl tiles in the bedroom. (I haven't seen the floor in 15 years.) They tell you to select mini-blinds and shutters rather than curtains. (How about painting the windows black?) They tell you to make the most out of storage space under the beds. (Where do they think I found the sherbert glass that walked and talked?) I don't think any of that works. I've never met a born-again slime fighter.

It's my theory that it's all tied up with a child's rebellion toward adult lifestyles. You can lead a child to a white-canopied bed, giraffe clothes tree, little shelves of books, and balloons painted on his waste can, but you can't make him clean it.

Everywhere in the house there are rules of cleanliness and order. Rinse the dishes and stack them in the sink. Fold up the afghan and put it back on the sofa where you found it. Flush. Hang up that dish towel. Close the refrigerator door. Get that wet glass off the table before it turns white. Flush. Straighten up that rug before someone trips over it. Push the chairs under the table. Wipe up those crumbs. Flush.

Their room is the only place they can thumb their noses at tradition and health standards.

When does this period end? I knew you'd ask that. Every parent wants to know. And that's the part I'm still working on. Sometimes, a little thing will trigger their realization that this is no way to live. Their fish aquarium will catch on fire. They will awaken in the night and be unable to breathe. Their rooms will become so small, they can no longer maintain their present weight and climb into bed. Occasionally, a partner they are about to marry will turn their attitude around, or a landlord will threaten eviction.

A great scholar once said, "Dirt is not dirt... but only something in the wrong place." For a long time I couldn't figure out what that meant. Now I know. We moved last year... and never told the kids where we were going.

Country singing is among the talents that have helped Dolly Parton become a celebrity. Not as well known is the fact that she is an accomplished songwriter. She wrote 14 songs of "Rhinestone," a 20th Century Fox movie in which she co-stars with Sylvester Stallone.

Debutantes Planning

Peel

A Williamston High School graduate, Fanny Manning Peel is not the first in her family to be involved in Terpsichorean activities. Her brothers, Cooper and Robert, have both served as marshals in the past. Miss Peel, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. William Robert Peel, is working this summer as a swimming instructor at Camp Hardee, a Girl Scout camp by the Pamlico River.

In high school, she played tennis all four years and was a member of the Monogram Club, Keywanettes, National Honor Society and the band. She will be a senior at St. Mary's Junior College in the fall. Miss Peel's father will be her chief marshal and her brother, Robert, will accompany her as assistant marshal.

"I'm looking forward to the parties with my St. Mary's friends and others and to my large family and friends congregating in Raleigh on September 7," Miss Peel said. "My family has attended the deb ball for the last five or six years, so it won't be new to us — but it'll be different with us participating in the many activities there."

Taylor

Adelia Rives Ellis Taylor, the third debutante in her family following sisters Lauren and Liza, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor of Greenville.

A 1983 graduate of St. Mary's High School in Raleigh, she will be a senior at St. Mary's Junior College in the fall. Currently Miss Taylor is enrolled in summer school at N.C. State University where she is studying mathematics and communications to prepare for a future career in business.

In both high school and college, Miss Taylor was involved in various clubs and activities.

Tennis, sailing, snowskiing and water sports are among Miss Taylor's pastimes.

Her father will serve as her chief marshal, and Miss Taylor said, "I'm looking forward to all the summer activities, and I'm very excited about spending time with old friends and having the chance to make new ones."

Winstead

Third generation debutantes and daughters of Dr. and Mrs. John Lindsay Winstead Jr. of Greenville, Linda Fleming Winstead and Susan Butler Winstead will be making their debut together.

Their father and their brother, Lindsay, will be chief marshals for both girls. Linda's assistant marshal will be Frank B. Layne, a rising sophomore at Appalachian State University. Thomas B. Tompkins, who will be a senior at N.C. State University in the fall, will serve as Susan's assistant marshal.

The Winstead twins graduated from J.H. Rose High School in 1983 and are rising sophomores at East Carolina University.

Linda, who was involved in Juniorettes and a variety of sports teams at Rose, plans to major in the business/accounting field. This summer, in addition to attending school for a session, she is working with the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department as a coach. "Working with the kids is great," she said. "I'm really enjoying my job."

Besides swimming and sailing, Linda said she is a prolific reader during her free time.

"At first I was unsure about being a deb," Linda said, "but since Susan and I are doing everything together, it's been sort of special. I'm glad I decided to do it."

Susan also participated in sports in high school as well as Juniorettes and Keywanettes. She worked at Greenville Villa Nursing Home during her senior year and is currently a nursing major. The work experience, Susan said, taught her a great deal about the career she plans to pursue.

Sailing is Susan's favorite hobby in addition to swimming and cross-stitch.

When asked about becoming a debutante, Susan said, "It's quite an honor. I've heard that when you attend all the parties and the ball, you meet friends that you'll keep running into and doing things with again and again."

The Olympic Peninsula — a part of Washington state's northwest corner — is believed to have a geologic origin different from that of the rest of North America, according to National Geographic. Some geologists think the peninsula was born as part of an offshore oceanic ridge, then swiveled into its present position during a massive tectonic shift.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE, Associated Press Food Editor

Once upon a time Club Sandwiches — filled with sliced chicken, bacon, lettuce, tomato and mayonnaise — were made with white bread. Not always any more. These days mixed grain loaves, now widely available in supermarkets, are likely to be used.

Hearty eaters will want their Club Sandwiches made with 3 slices of bread — the old-time way. Others, like me, prefer the filling with only two slices of bread whether the bread is white or the new mixed grain.

And now a new way to use mixed grain bread in an openface sandwich that's unusual and delicious.

MIXED GRAIN OPEN SANDWICHES

- Avocado Dressing, recipe follows
- 8 slices bacon
 - 4 slices mixed-grain bread
 - Mayonnaise
 - 4 slices Swiss cheese (4 ounces)
 - Alfalfa sprouts
 - Sliced tomatoes

Make the Avocado Dressing. Cook the bacon until crisp; drain and keep warm. Toast the bread lightly; spread one side of each slice with mayonnaise. Top with the cheese, making sure it covers the bread edges; place under broiler just long enough to soften the cheese. Sprinkle generously with alfalfa sprouts; spoon 1/4 cup of the Avocado Dressing over the sprouts on each slice.

Top with the bacon. Serve at once with the tomatoes, extra alfalfa sprouts and the remaining Avocado Dressing as a side dish.

AVOCADO DRESSING
Medium-large ripe avocado (12 to 14 ounces)
4 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup thinly sliced scallion
Salt and pepper to taste
Halve, seed and peel avocado; puree. Mix with lemon juice and mayonnaise until blended. Stir in scallions, salt and pepper. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

Final Summer Theater Show

An unforgettable era of crooner and cooers comes alive in the East Carolina Summer Theater production of the Broadway musical hit "The 1940's Radio Hour," on Monday through Saturday at 8:15 nightly in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus.

Complete with an 11-piece "studio" orchestra playing those great old songs made famous by Glenn Miller, Duke Ellington and Artie Shaw, flashing applause signs, sound effects booth and authentic commercials about Pepsi Cola for a nickel and the 15-cent pack of cigarettes, "The 1940's Radio Hour" conjures up a December 1942 radio broadcast "live from the Algonquin room of the beautiful Hotel Astor in New York city."

Highlighting the show is a panorama of memorable swingtime tunes including "Chattanooga Choo-Choo," "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy," "Tuxedo Junction," "Ain't She Sweet," as well as singing commercials, contests, comedy routines and smooth-talking banter.

If station WOV (V is for victory) and its "Mutual Manhattan Variety Cavalcade" are slightly second-rate, the 13 characters who inhabit it are decidedly full of life, ambition and verve that marked the wartime era.

"The 1940's Radio Hour" follows them through one characteristic night of backstage shenanigans, on-the-air sparkle and the kind of elaborate dance numbers that home audiences never actually saw. During the broadcast portion of the show, the theater audience itself plays a character, becoming the "studio audience."

The entire cast of the show are now veterans of the East Carolina

Summer Theater. Doug Mitchell as "Pops" Riley, the crusty stage doorman; Don Biehn as Clifton A. Feddington, the glib-talking producer and announcer; John Kuhn as Johnny Cantone, the slender and sexy star who's on Sinatra's bandwagon; Jane Underhill as Ann Collier, the aloof singing beauty who's never quite made it big; Barbara Gulan as Connie Miller, a 17-year-old bobbysoxer from Plainville, Iowa, who sings with a bounce; and Jeanne Resua as Ginger Brooks, the screwball blond who can sing like a million.

Says director Edgar Loessin, "We hope to deliver an exhilarating show of singing, dancing and funny commercials about Sal Hepatica, Nash cars and other indispensable products of the '40s. It's all fun and innocence for the entire family."

"The 1940's Radio Hour" is the final offering of the season by the popular summer theater. Tickets are still available and may be purchased at McGinnis Theater, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets, from 10 a.m. until 8:30 p.m., or may be reserved by calling 757-6390.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. - WITN-TV's Sunday magazine, Hospitality House, airing from noon to 12:30 p.m. today, will feature guests Robert Gatling of Manteo, Timothy Parker of "The Lost Colony," John Brooke-Little of England, and singer Gar Travis.

All four guests will speak with hostess Kay Currie on topics related to events on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

One guest is Robert Gatling, co-owner of the Brass Rubbing Center in Manteo, a firm that specializes in an old art revived in recent years. Hostess Currie visits his shop in Manteo for this segment. A former professor of history at Columbia University, he gives brief highlights of the history of the brass rubbing art and notes the world's largest known brass rubbing of Sir Walter Raleigh is on display in his Manteo shop.

New Bern native Timothy Parker, an actor/singer/dancer and graduate of ECU, is a cast member of "The Lost Colony" and composer of the musical score for the Childrens' Theater. He gives details on the production which is now being shown in Manteo two days each week.

Another guest is Englishman John Brooke-Little of the King's College of Arms and member of the Royal Household. The Oxfordshire resident is an authority on heraldry, and discusses the original paper on the Raleigh coat of arms. Brooke-Little has the titles of norroy and ulster in his position with the College of Arms.

The final guest on today's show is Gar Travis, known as the mystery singer of Nags Head, who sings an old Outer Banks ditty.

Still Active At 80

By MATT WOLF Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - Claudette Colbert, Paramount Picture's "working girl" from the 1930s, is still working today at the age of 80 as the star of the London stage revival of Frederick Lonsdale's comedy, "Aren't We All?"

"It's good genes," she said recently to an audience at the National Film Theater, where author David Shipman interviewed her about a career that has included almost 100 films and plays.

"My mother lived until she was 94, and I think she died because she was bored. I try not to be," said Miss Colbert, her legendary twinkle undiminished by years.

Her appearance at the NFT climaxed a week-long retrospective of her work, and was immediately preceded by clips from two 1934 films: Frank Capra's "It Happened One Night" and Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra."

Clark Gable was Miss Colbert's celebrated co-star in the Capra film.

"He had more sex appeal than any other man," she said. "He was sex rampant, everything a male should be."

Miss Colbert said that Constance Bennett and Miriam Hopkins had been Capra's initial choices to play the runaway heiress who finds herself hitchhiking alongside the down-at-the-heels journalist played by Gable.

"I did it, frankly, because I wanted to get within four feet of Clark Gable," she said.

Though the film ultimately won four major Academy Awards including best actress, Miss Colbert said that she did regret several of her career choices.

"I turned down the one film that gave Rosalind Russell her chance, 'His Girl Friday,'" she said. "My agent was furious, and he was right, but I wanted to do 'Arise, My Love,' so I had a good reason.

Childrens' Theater In Manteo

MANTEO - The Childrens' Theater production being featured by The Lost Colony cast this year is "Hans Christian Anderson and Company." A musical adaptation of three of Anderson's most beloved fairy tales - "The Emperor's New Clothes," "The Ugly Duckling," and "The Princess and the Pea," will be presented each Wednesday at 10 and 11 a.m. and each Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

The 50 highest peaks in the United States are concentrated in only four states - Alaska, California, Colorado and Washington.

Performances will be given at the Marine Resource Center in Manteo.

Cast members in "Hans Christian Anderson and Company" are drawn from every aspect of "The Lost Colony." The 15 players perform every character from a duckling to a king's throne. The show is produced by Liz Scott, a choir member, who says, "The show will come from the creative energies of the cast. The idea is that the show will be a little different at each performance."

Staging of the tales was conceived by C. C. Banks, the director, who portrays Dame Coleman in "The Lost Colony." The script has been developed through improvisational rehearsals, rather than relying on a standard written text. The director is also responsible for the choreography in the show.

Tim Parker, an actor/technician in "The Lost Colony," composed the original music for the Anderson children's show.

Picasso Painting On Loan To N.C. Museum

RALEIGH — "Woman by a Window," a 1956 painting by Pablo Picasso, is on loan to the North Carolina Museum of Art from the collection of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. The work has been loaned in exchange for Marsden Hartley's "Indian Fantasy," which will be on view in a major exhibition at the Modern this fall.

"Woman by a Window" is considered a significant work from a series of paintings by the artist in which the central figure is Jacqueline Roque, whom Picasso later married. The painting shows the model sitting by a window in his studio in Cannes, France.

It will remain on view in the North Carolina Museum of Art's 20th-century gallery through January 1985.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By HANSY JONES

Mystery lovers will welcome two new thrillers by authors who are widely regarded as masters of their craft.

M.M. Kaye, the spellbinding storyteller who won millions of loyal readers with her enthralling whodunits, "Death in Kenya" and "Death in Zanzibar," returns now with a new work in her classic series of mystery novels that have been compared to the work of Agatha Christie. "Death in Cyprus" has the same rich blend of romance and suspense that made "Zanzibar" and "Kenya" such popular, engrossing tales. This time the exotic locale is Cyprus: a place of olive groves, turquoise seas, weathered villas — and murder.

Twenty-year-old Amanda Derington is on an extended cruise with her uncle when she decides to make a short trip to the sun-washed isle of Cyprus. But even before the ship arrives in port there is a suspicious death. Once on the island, a set of ominous circumstances confirms all the worst suspicions; and what Amanda had meant to be a pleasant excursion quickly turns into something else . . . something that for her may well prove to be a dangerous — even a lethal mistake. Again, M.M. Kaye gives her readers all they ever wanted in a mystery — and more.

Ruth Rendell, the award-winning author who is called by the Boston Globe, "the best mystery writer . . . in the world today," lives up to her reputation in "The Killing Doll."

The summer before he was sixteen, Pup Yearman sold his soul to the devil. For the time being all he wanted in exchange was to grow a bit taller. Dolly, his sister, was always in awe of Pup. She wanted to believe that he had occult powers and could do anything. Diarmid Bawne thought he was invisible. The only place he felt safe was the tunnel under the old railway line. He stayed there all day, and the feel of the hard, sharp edges of his butcher knives comforted him. By the end of "The Killing Doll" the story of the Yearman family and the story of Diarmid Bawne are lethally merged. One woman bleeds to death — an accident of Black Magic? One man falls in front of a subway — or is he pushed? And two terrified people meet at dusk in a deserted underpass. Only one of them comes out alive. An eerie, psychological thriller — not for the faint-hearted.

Collard Poems Comin' In By The Mess-Load

Albright, 33, and Whisnant, 27, confess that they're still not sure what Mrs. Dennis means, and Albright — an avowed collard-hater — isn't anxious to find out.

"I can remember being traumatized by a single plate of collards many evenings in my childhood," he said. "My mama wouldn't let me leave the table till I ate my collards. I'd sit there and sit there and the damn collards would get colder and colder and lumpier and lumpier, and she'd catch me tryin' to dump 'em in the trash, and give me more. I think it's absurd that people even consider 'em food."

Whisnant, on the other hand, has fond childhood memories of his grandmother cooking up collards by the potful. He finds it amusing that Albright — from small-town Graham, N.C. — detests collards, while he grew up a Charlotte city boy and loves the things. Whisnant claims his collard poem, "They Put Up A Mall On The Old Collard Patch," was inspired by a razed truck farm where he picked collards as a boy.

Many called on the collard's unique smell for inspiration, from 80-year-old Annie Ruth Blalock of Memphis's fond memories of "the fresh fragrance of cooking collard greens" to 15-year-old Kim Morgan's flat out

*Collards are green; they're yucky;
They stink.*

"It's hard to talk about collards without talking about the smell," said Albright.

They've had poems celebrating the endless variety of vittles Southerners serve up alongside their collards, from beans, vinegar, hog jowls and Irish potatoes to sardines, pickled hot peppers, peas and tea. "About every third poem will mention fat-back, cornbread and pot likker," Whisnant noted.

They've had enough suggestions on how to eat the leftovers to fill a cookbook: on a buttered biscuit, cold from the refrigerator as a midnight snack, refried in bacon grease.

Here's to the sheen of it!*

At least one entrant, Elizabeth A. Voight of Norfolk, singled out the Collard Capital for down-home praise:

*The town of Ayden I salute
Your festival is really cute.*

The judges are pleased that such a wide range of people were inspired to write for the competition. Some have dug into complex verse forms — one pastor from Washington submitted a collard villanelle, while an ECU professor composed a collard sestina. School children sent manila envelopes full of verses. Two ECU graduate students compiled a 26-page thesis on the history and lore of the collard, including literary classics re-worked around collard themes, and the judges — both teaching American Lit. classes this summer — find themselves caught up in the spirit of things.

"In 'Walden,'" said Whisnant, "Thoreau says, 'What shall I learn of beans, or they of me?' And so we've paraphrased it to, 'What shall I learn of collards or they of me?'"

"Yeah," said Albright. "Those Yankee publishers went through the whole book and changed every single one of Thoreau's 'collard' references to 'beans.'"

Some pretty weird things have shown up in the mail, such as one poem about collards as the source of light and life in the universe, and collard lyrics that the writer noted could be sung to the tune of "Little Jimmy Dickens."

Albright noted with disappointment that they've received few poems from established North Carolina poets. Despite the whimsicality, both judges had hoped for as many serious collard poems as light.

"We haven't had anything on the politics of collards yet, or any haiku," said Whisnant. "And we could use more children's poetry."

"One good thing about this project," said Albright, "is that it does celebrate regional pride, local identity. It is poetry, sort of a common poetry, a folklore. You wouldn't believe how many poems have to do with Southern pride or how Yankees don't know anything about collards." One epic by a Norfolk doctor described how Sherman's attempt to starve out the South during the Civil War was foiled by ... yes ... collards. Paul D. Sanders of Richmond sent another:

*Some folks despise this luscious leaf
Which I never really understood.
Could this be a Yankee trick?
They don't like okra, say it's "slick."*

Whisnant and Albright said they were amazed at the flood of response, which rose sharply when the Associated Press picked up their recent press release. The contest also caught national and international media attention in USA Today. Whisnant and Albright even did a six-minute spot with Alan Garr of the Canadian Broadcast system last week.

The result of all this enthusiasm will be an anthology, "Leaves of Greens: The Collard Poems," which will sell for $1 a copy at the Ayden Collard Festival, Sept. 3-9. Winning entries in both adult and children's categories will receive cash prizes — and platesful of collards, of course.

"This will no doubt be the only collard poetry anthology published in this century, as we've vowed not to do it again until the year 2000," Albright said.

The anthology will also be available by mail for $1.50 a copy. It will contain illustrations by Debbie Adkins, an Ayden native, who says she likes collards.

"This is a labor of love," said Whisnant. "We don't get any money out of it."

"I think I'm doing it to kind of get back, throw collards in the face of the world," added a grim Albright.

Both judges will attend the Festival: Albright likes the collard-eating contest ("I enjoy watching people get sick") and Whisnant plans to enter the eating extravaganza? But until September, how will they choose the winning poems?

"We're gonna put 'em in a big vat of collards and boil 'em, and whichever ones are left at the end will be the winners," said Albright.

"Right," added Whisnant. "First we're gonna crap 'em and then we're gonna look 'em ..."

Luke Whisnant and Alex Albright, two ECU English teachers, got a whole mess more than they bargained for when they sent out a call for poems about collards. "Collard poetry brings people out of the woodwork like you wouldn't believe," Whisnant said.

As they shift through the 300-plus entries received so far, the two judges in the first-ever Ayden Collard Festival Poetry Competition, find they're learning more about the native Southern green than they imagined possible.

They've found, for instance, that putting a pecan in a pot of simmering collards wipes out the smell, that collard "tea" — "pot likker" — is known as an aphrodisiac and that a collard leaf will do in a pinch for toilet paper.

They've received prose poems on paper plates, poems from lawyers — neatly typed on letterhead bond, with a secretary's initials — verses decorated with little crayon pictures. Poems from pickers and cooks, lovers and haters alike have trickled in. One of the entrants even enthusiastically called the kinda-green vegetables as "soul food with a Southern drool." Then there were the collard ballads, collard dialogue, collard parables, collard short stories ...

Whisnant said that the most popular genre is the "Ode to the Collard." Virginia Simmon's entry, like most of the adults', honors the vegetable in flowery rhyme:

dripping with morning dew;
How could anyone not crave for a dish of you?*

And some folks just can't stand them, like Raymond W. Dew Jr. of Raleigh:

*O'Collard, thou foul weed
Thinkst thou could fool me, indeed?*

*Don't bother to look so pretty and green
Thy taste doth rancor me too mean.*

And kids, whether they like 'em or loathe 'em, don't fool around with irregular couplets or Elizabethan diction. Kai-Wei Chung, a 15-year-old from Tarboro High School, gets straight to the point:

*Roses are red
Collards are green
I hate collards
If you know what I mean.*

There's also the didactic collard poem, which tells how to cook, eat, or otherwise deal with collards. This bit of advice came from Shirley M. Dennis, who ought to know — she owns Bum's Restaurant with her husband "Bum". The restaurant is Ayden's biggest mover of collards.

*We 'crap' them, 'look' them, and wash them a lot.
Then we cook them in a great big pot.*

The Judges,

Luke Whisnant and Alex Albright

N.C. Grant For Roanoke Center

MANTEO — The planned Roanoke Island Center for the Arts took a major step toward completion recently when the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina voted unanimously to provide $500,000 in funds aimed directly at construction costs. The appropriation puts the funds in trust, making the grant available when the Roanoke Island Historical Association (RIHA), developer of the center, has raised $1.5 million from other sources.

John P. Kennedy, Jr., chairman of the RIHA, said that while such a matching grant arrangement places an imposing burden on his organization, "it is a good burden, one that will place us in the big league of arts funding while at the same time show our supporters in the General Assembly that their confidence in us has not been misplaced."

Kennedy noted that a prime criterion for obtaining sizeable grants from national and leading private sources is a major show of support from the state.

The General Assembly grant has put the RIHA on the road to raising the $4.6 million the center is expected to cost.

The center is to be built at Fort Raleigh and is expected to help extend the tourist season and to draw in additional thousands of visitors.

Long range plans for use of the planned center include that as a center for public performances of all kinds, rehearsals, television productions, dance and music festivals and various educational programs.

The building would also provide offices for the RIHA and will be made available to county and community organizations as scheduling permits.

It has been designed by Ashok Bhavnani of Johansen and Bhavnani Architects, New York, with assistance from theater consultants Jean Rosenthal Associates of Orange, N. J.

Military Event In Tarboro

TARBORO — Military units and individuals representing the Braxton Bragg Chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) will be in Tarboro Wednesday for a "Carolina Telephone Appreciation Day."

The program, to be held on the telephone company's administrative headquarters grounds, will feature a display of Army helicopters, precision parachuting by the "Golden Knights" parachute team, music by the 82nd Airborne Division Chorus, and a visit by the commanding general of the 18th Airborne Corp and Ft. Bragg.

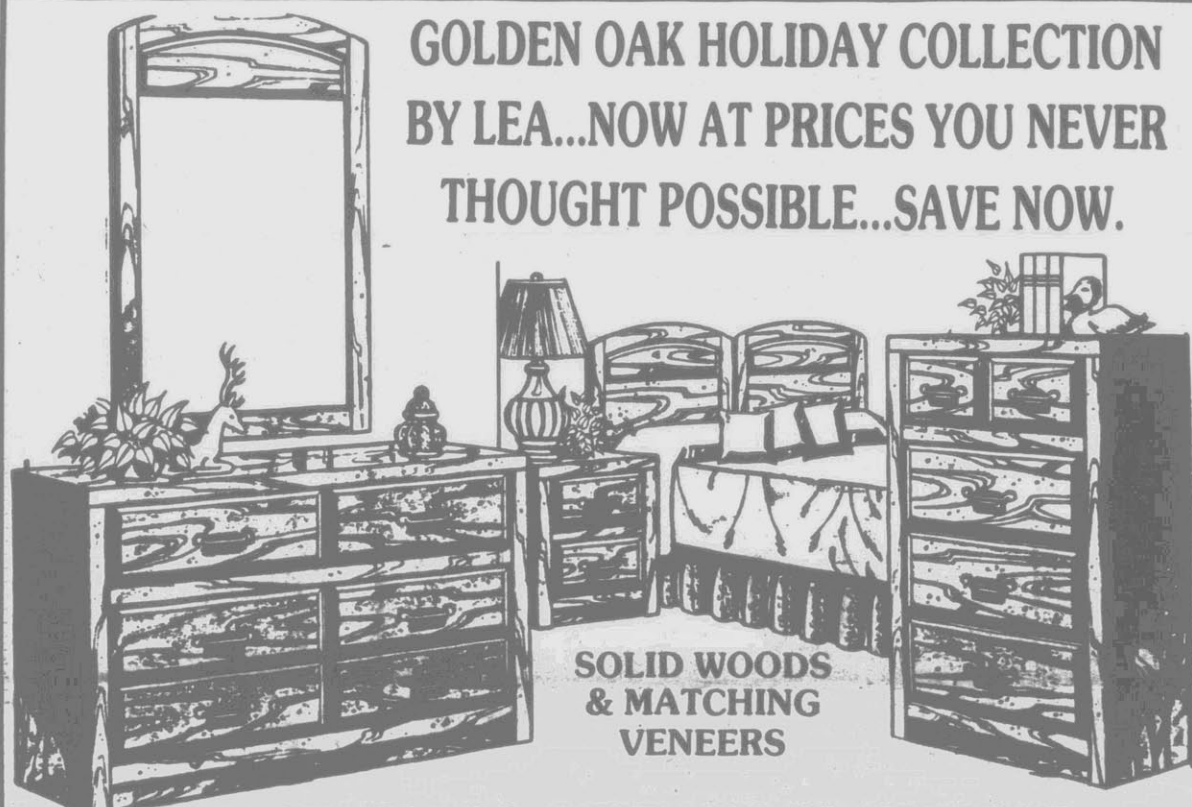

Governor Jim Hunt and the commanding general of the 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune will also be on hand to take part in the event, which is open to the public without charge.

THE END IS NEAR — for Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colony" when a messenger awakens leader John Borden with the news that Spanish pirates have been sighted and are preparing to attack. The scene is from the Joe Layton production of Paul Green's "The Lost Colony."

The outdoor drama is performed at the Waterside Theater in Manteo nightly except Sunday. For ticket reservations and information, call 473-3414. (Photo by Foster Scott, Nags Head)

A drawer that is stuck can test your temper. If you do not stay in control of the situation, a minor problem can turn into a major one. One exasperated tug too many or too strong and you have a broken drawer or damage to the object that is causing the trouble in the first place.

There are lots of reasons for a stuck drawer, among them loose nails, warpage, broken runners, just plain wear and a jammed item inside the drawer. In the latter case, the drawer usually opens a bit, then sticks. If you tug at the drawer gently, it sometimes will come free. If not, don't force it. Use a ruler or some such tool to prod inside the drawer to dislodge the object. Should the drawer not open even the tiniest bit, unusual but not rare, insert the blade of a putty knife into the opening between the drawer and the bureau frame. Do this very gently.

If all efforts to open the drawer without forcing are unsuccessful, see how the bureau is constructed and whether you can get results by taking out the drawer above or below the blocked one. You may even have to take off the back of the piece of furniture, which can be tedious but not difficult.

Most of the time, a drawer acts up in a different way. It just doesn't slide smoothly. Take everything out of the drawer and begin a thorough examination of it and the runners on which it moves back and forth. Check the construction of the drawer.

If you find some loose nails, withdraw them and replace them with similar nails. Follow the same method of attachment as used in the original construction, but when this isn't possible, substitute glue for nails. Don't use screws when nails and glue were the original fasteners. Especially look at the bottom of the drawer to see whether it is pulling away from its frame. Actually, the inspection will reveal, even to a novice do-it-yourselfer, what is wrong and how it can be fixed.

One thing is important. Be very careful not to make any drastic adjustments requiring the removal of very much wood. If you do, you may regret it later when moisture re-enters the wood and swells it. Whenever possible, sand rather than plane.

Sometimes the runners are worn or out of whack. Here again, common sense will reveal that to you, as the drawer is slid in and out. See whether the problem requires sanding or an adjustment or possibly replacement of the slides and runners. In some cases, you may find it advisable to replace old wooden runners with modern ones of metal or plastic, with or without ball bearings to make them work easier.

If any wood is removed at all during the repair job or if the sliding parts have no finish, seal them with a mixture of shellac and denatured alcohol, half and half. When everything is completely dry, apply wax or paraffin or some other lubricant to the slides and runners.

It may be the drawer has to be lifted slightly to open all the way and nothing else is wrong. In that case, place a couple of thumb tacks in the runners at the front end. This will lift the drawer slightly so it slides easily.

Corner joints can be strengthened with wood blocks, glued in place. Most of the time the blocks have to be clamped in place until the glue dries, but check to see whether the clamps are necessary. You may have an adhesive that does not require pressure to keep the parts together during the curing process.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find tips on a variety of repair subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Earthy Home

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A young Blythewood couple hopes to celebrate Christmas 1984 underground.

Judy and Daniel Taylor are building a three-bedroom house 15 feet below ground. Construction began in mid-April, and they hope to move in before the end of the year.

The 2,500-square-foot steel and concrete circular dwelling is located about seven miles east of Blythewood and is a dream come true for the Taylors.

The Taylors, who now live in a mobile home and are expecting their first child in January, visited underground houses in a number of states commercial wood bleach, but a friend tells me buying oxalic acid and mixing it with water will have the same effect and be much cheaper. Can you give me your advice?

A. — Oxalic acid may or may not be cheaper, but the one time I used it, it did not seem to have the same strength as a commercial bleach. In either case, be sure you take all the necessary precautions in the use of a powerful chemical. Most commercial bleaches come with a neutralizer for using on the wood after it has been bleached. If you use oxalic acid, ask the dealer what to use for the necessary neutralization and how.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. — When I get the old finish off some second-hand furniture I bought, I expect to bleach it before refinishing. I intended to use a

Garden Clinic

Q. When should a fall garden be planted? (F.L., Harrisburg)

A. For the most part August is the main planting month. For instance, vegetables that have a 60-80 day maturity cycle should be planted around Aug. 1. Shorter season vegetables, like turnips and greens, can be delayed in seeding until Sept. 1. Gardeners in the mountains need to adjust their planting dates one to three weeks earlier depending on their elevation. Fall tomatoes should be planted by mid-July.

Q. When should daylilies be dug and divided? (I.R., Siler City)

A. For best results, daylilies should be dug, divided and transplanted by early fall.

Q. What are some crops that can be grown in a fall garden? (L.L., Lawndale)

A. Snap beans, beets, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, carrots, collards, cucumber, kale, kohlrabi, leaf lettuce, mustard, radishes, rutabaga, spinach, turnip, squash and Southern peas.

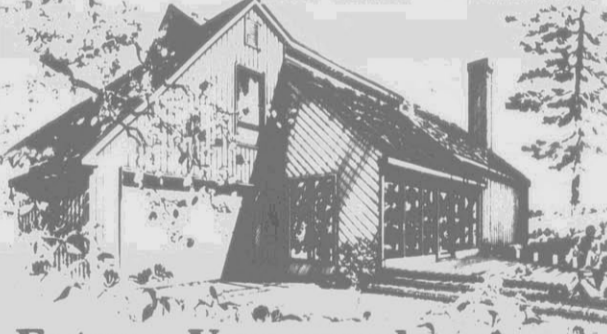

Q. My tomato plants are blooming and have tomatoes on the vines, but they are taking a wilt and dying. What can I do? (A.H., Hickory)

A. There are many things that could cause tomatoes to wilt as you described. Southern bacterial wilt, Fusarium wilt and Verticillium wilt are all possibilities. Root rot, drowning and root-rot nematodes can also cause wilting. Another possibility is walnut wilt which occurs if tomatoes are grown too close to a walnut or butternut tree. The tree secretes chemicals that act as a natural herbicide on some plants. It is impossible to make an accurate diagnosis of what is wrong with your plants without seeing them. Sometimes tests have to be performed to determine the actual cause of the wilting. Have your county agricultural extension agent look at them. He should be able to diagnose the problem and give you recommendations on how to control or prevent the wilting.

Entry a Year-round Solar Greenhouse

by Jerry Bishop

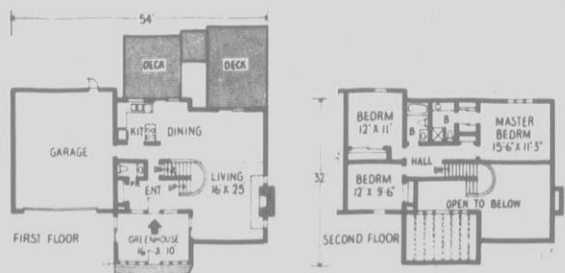

Providing a dramatic entry and yielding passive solar benefits in the Ellsworth, a 16-foot-long greenhouse sparkles at the center of this rough-sawn fir-plywood exterior. Glass doors open to feed solar gain to the house, allowing heat to circulate through the open-plan first-floor.

Convection carries heat to second-floor bedrooms, and circulation might be improved by building the master bedroom as an open balcony. Where the living room ceiling rises two stories, a heat-circulating fireplace creates a focus for seating.

Nearby, a low ceiling sets off a dining area, and an open kitchen doubles as a social area that never isolates the cook from guests.

An open stair ascends in a half turn to the second floor of the Ellsworth, where the master suite and two smaller bedrooms are divided by a sound-muffling core of bathrooms and closets.

THE TALE OF THE DEUCE OF HEARTS

DEAR READERS: Over the years we have had many requests for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes for quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column. Neither vulnerable. His face was flushed and he looked down at the heels as he sat forlornly on the barstool. Obviously, the Two of Hearts had seen better days. We invited him to join us for a drink, and he was quick to accept. The talk got round to bridge, and this is the tale he told us:

"I was not always in this sad condition. Once I was a member of a pack that belonged to a famous bridge expert who lived on Fifth Avenue. In my prime, I was handled by princes, caressed by some of the most beautiful women in the world, but never really loved — after all, I am only a deuce.

"However, every deuce has his day, and mine came at a most opportune moment for my owner. It was in a grudge match played for a considerable amount of money, and there was little to choose between the two sides when this hand came along.

"My owner wasted no time in bouncing into four hearts, but he did not find a favorable dummy. It looked quite possible that he would lose three diamonds and a spade, and there was the lady of my suit to worry about as well.

"The expert to my left led the queen of diamonds, which was ducked all round. He cleverly cashed the ace of spades before exiting with a club. My owner took the ace performe, and there across the table from him were three good tricks in the black suits and no way to get to them. Defeat seemed imminent.

"When my owner cashed the ace and king of hearts, the expert at his left sized up the situation accurately. He followed to these tricks with the six of hearts and the queen! To no avail — my owner lovingly placed me upon the table.

"Despite his unblocking, West's three was forced to capture me. And since West had nothing left but black cards, he was forced to put my owner in dummy, and the two diamond losers went away on the table's winners.

"I can still remember the thrill I felt about being the key element in such a masterful plan. What is more, this hand proved to be the turning point of the match, which my owner won handily."

Art Trust Established

Kevin E. Poe, a soloist dancer with Houston Ballet, and Eleanore A. Tashenberg of Penn Mutual Insurance have recently founded the Arts Family Trust (AFT).

Arts Family Trust is a new plan designed to financially protect people who are in the arts. The trust is to provide early retirement benefits, disability income insurance and a life insurance contract for each participant.

This trust was designed to benefit the specific needs of the professional dancer who may have to retire at an early age and begin another career not related to the arts.

Individuals may continue to participate regardless of what profession they become active in, as long as they were employed in the arts at the time they joined Arts Family Trust. This trust is not restricted to dancers, but is available to anyone who is associated with the visual and performing arts. This includes all artists and support staff.

AFT's program was designed with three notable underwriters: Lloyd's of London, Penn Mutual and Massachusetts Financial Services.

For further information, call Eleanore Tashenberg at (713) 780-0710 in Houston, Texas, or write Arts Family Trust, P.O. Box 27146, Houston, Texas, 77227.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may get an unexpected benefit in the morning, but later take care not to spend it lavishly on some temporary appeal.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can make yourself more attractive in the morning but later don't try to use force in gaining any personal aims.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Morning is fine for meditation that can be inspiring but later you have to handle tasks that must be done.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A good friend who is dependable can give fine advice in the morning, but later close ties are apt to criticize.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You understand how to make a fine impression in higher-ups during the day. Later you can have a change of ideas and are apt to make an error.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can get correct answers from others in the morning, but later you do not go along with the ideas of others. Do not take risks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can be happy with loved ones in the morning but later you have to handle practical affairs that need quick solution.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You come to a better accord with an associate in the morning and then can concentrate on how best to make use of this.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get necessary tasks handled early but then rest up and renew your vigor for the coming week's work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early make that appointment for some kind of entertainment that appeals to you. Avoid quarrelsome persons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be happy at home with kin during the daytime since later there could be some tense moments at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) An early communication can bring much happiness to you, and later if any trouble crops up, forget it.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have benefits crop up unexpectedly and will quickly seize them, but teach early that upon reaching adulthood, he or she will have to work for whatever is desired and should early learn the fine habit of give and take.

Dance Scholars Named

DURHAM — The seven Burroughs Wellcome students at the American Dance Festival have been named for the 1984 50th anniversary six-week school session.

Dancers awarded scholarships are:

David Beadle, a former student at Manhattanville College and the Bronx Community College;

Caryn Heilman, who received a BFA and a MFA from Texas Christian University;

Marsha Pabalis, a BFA student from the University of Michigan;

Paul Sutherland, who holds a BA in dance from Wesleyan University;

Kevin Veiga, a student at the City College of New York and a former student at UNC-Greensboro and the University of Michigan;

Regina Seidman, a recent graduate of the North Carolina School of the Arts; and Alicia Barrs, a student at the North Carolina School of the Arts.

The Burroughs Wellcome Company, which has its corporate headquarters at the Research Triangle Park, began its corporate funding for ADF student scholarships in 1981.

"Burroughs Wellcome is pleased once again to participate in the ADF Scholarship program," said Joan Guilkey, Contributions Administrator at Burroughs Wellcome.

"The ADF has always been associated with the best in dance and we are proud to have these young professionals to come to Durham to learn from the masters. The program is highly beneficial to the community."

Suzuki Festival Held At ECU

ECU News Bureau
More than 150 Suzuki violin, cello and piano students and teachers from 13 states participated in the first North Carolina Suzuki Institute, held at East Carolina University July 8-13.

The institute, sanctioned by the Suzuki Association of the Americas, featured classes for music students aged four to 15 years of age and teacher training courses on aspects of the Suzuki approach to music education.

Also included were teacher and student orchestras and chamber music ensembles, daily solo recitals and regular programs for parents of young Suzuki students.

Directors of the institute were Robert Hause, conductor of the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra, and Greenville violin teacher Joanne Bath.

Institute faculty and staff members included Wendy Harbour of Lyme Regis, Dorset, England; Sue Wak of Lawrence, Kansas; Jane MacMorran of Kingsport, Tenn.; Craig and Françoise Timmerman of Lexington, Ky.; Mary Frances Boyce and Pamela Bath Kelly of Chapel Hill; Mary Jane Kirkendol of Charlotte; Charles Bath and Tricia Bath of Greenville; Scott and Carole Walker of Elon College; Sharon Bead of Nashville, and Valerie Crim and Tracy Daly of the ECU School of Music.

The Suzuki approach to music education was founded by Dr. Shinichi Suzuki of Japan after World War II and introduced abroad in the mid-1960s. Suzuki students begin music study very early, with parents assisting the music teacher. The approach emphasizes development of the musical ear and basic techniques before the student is taught to read musical notation.

Baby Try-Outs For Lost Colony

MANTEO — Details on "try-outs" to find four babies to briefly play the role of Virginia Dare in "The Lost Colony" on August 18 have been announced.

Auditions for the babies will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Lost Colony Building, adjacent to the Elizabethan Gardens on the north end of Roanoke Island. The date of August 18, the birthday of Virginia Dare, is a key event around which the Paul Green outdoor drama is based.

Male and female infants will be considered for the role of baby Virginia. The main criteria will be based on the baby's weight, not to exceed 15 pounds, and the child's reaction to being held by actors on stage.

Each of the four infants selected will appear on stage once during the August 18 production.

Stay healthy and active! Get involved in athletic programs sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Call 752-4137 for more information.

'Staying Alive' Debut Takes On Olympics

By Andrew J. Edelstein

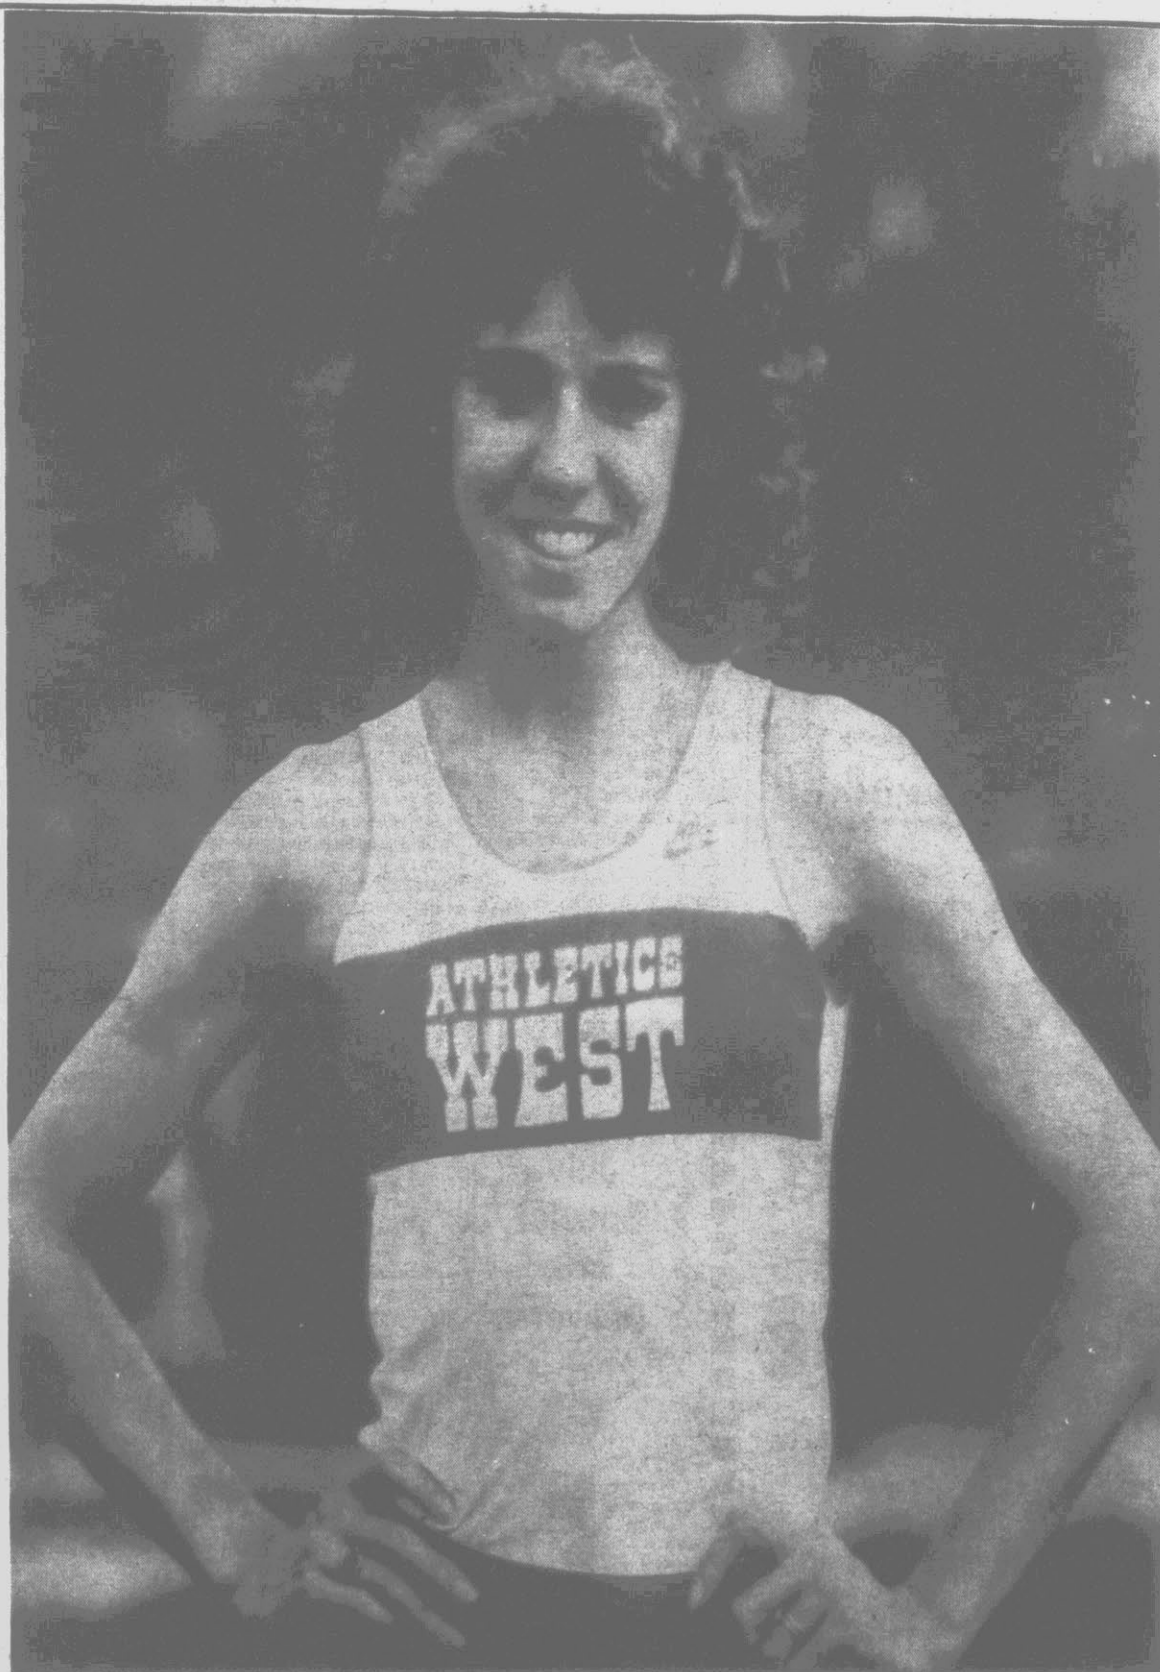

While ABC will be dominating broadcast TV for the next two weeks with the Summer Olympics, the pay-cable channels will be offering programming to subscribers who want a break from endless athletic events.

Showtime-The Movie Channel will offer the first pay-cable showing of "Staying Alive," the 1983 sequel to "Saturday Night Fever." The John Travolta film was the seventh-ranked box-office film of last year, but was blasted by the critics.

In the film, directed by Sylvester Stallone, Travolta again plays Tony Manero, the erstwhile Brooklyn disco king who now seeks fame and fortune across the bridge as a dancer in Manhattan. "Staying Alive" will debut on July 22 and will air various times during the last week of July and in August. In conjunction with the debut of "Staying Alive," The Movie Channel will also air a half-hour special "Dance to the Movies," featuring a look at the new Hollywood rock musicals such as "Flashdance" and "Footloose."

During the last week of July, Cinemax is planning to present a "Joanne Woodward Film Festival," which includes "The Three Faces of Eve" (1957), her Oscar-winning performance as a psychologically disturbed housewife, and the 1981 TV movie "Crisis at Central High," where she played a principled high-school teacher opposing segregation.

The network is also airing what it calls an "Escape from the Future" series. Featured are the Australian cult film "The Road Warrior," starring Mel Gibson as a post-nuclear holocaust survivor; John Carpenter's "Escape from New York," in which Manhattan has been turned into a maximum-security prison; and "Blade Runner," starring Harrison Ford as a detective chasing killer androids through the grime and haze of 21st-century Los Angeles.

Mary Decker, America's best female middle-distance runner, will run for the gold at the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles. ABC will televise the games of the XXIII Olympiad from Friday, July 27 to Monday, Aug. 13.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Please provide me with some background information on Lee Remick, who played Kay Summersby on "Ike: The War Years." — Jim Knowles

To Jim: Lee Remick was born in Quincy, Mass., on Dec. 14, 1935, to businessman and department store owner Frank Remick, and his actress-wife, Patricia. Miss Remick attended the posh Miss Hewitt's School in New York City, where she studied ballet. She soon landed a bit part in the Broadway production "Be Your Age," which was a flop and resulted in her expulsion from Hewitt's for appearing as a professional. At age 16, she entered Barnard College, but the lure of the grease paint was too strong. After studying dance for 11 years, Miss Remick began her dramatic training in the theater and on television. She made her feature film debut in Elia Kazan's "A Face in the Crowd," and copped an Oscar nomination in 1962 for "The Days of Wine and Roses." Married to William Collier in 1957, the couple had two children, Matthew and Kate, prior to their divorce in 1969. In 1970, Miss Remick married British director William Gowans and has since been living in London. Today, Miss Remick chooses her roles with great discretion.

DEAR MICHELE: Please answer a few questions about Richard Dawson. My husband and friends say he recently died. Is this true? What happened? — Katherine D. Jones

To Katherine: Television's kissingest game show host is very much alive. What your spouse and friends may be thinking of is the recent death of his ex-wife, Diana Dors. Miss Dors, who once proclaimed she was "the only sex symbol Britain has produced since Lady Godiva," died of cancer on May 4 at age 52. She married Dawson in 1959, and their union produced two sons. The couple split in 1967, and a year and a half later she married actor Alan Lake, with whom she had one son. According to Lake, her last words were, "This is not the way it was rehearsed."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

A highlight of the recent TV critics' press tour was a two-day tour of ABC facilities constructed to telecast the Summer Olympics from Los Angeles. We saw more than $2,000,000 worth of television equipment, all in place and ready to go. At least 3,500 employees will be involved in the live broadcast, which will reach an estimated 2.5 billion people. ABC begins its coverage Friday with a two-hour preview.

The opening ceremonies, scheduled for Saturday, were still being kept secret. Producer David Wolper has insisted that this event remain a surprise. About 18,000 people, including 9,000 athletes, will take part in the three-hour spectacle. Wolper has said, "The opening ceremonies will be inspirational, uplifting and majestic."

John Wayne's towering presence will be felt in Hollywood once again. A 21-foot-tall, 6-ton bronze sculpture, depicting him astride a stallion, will be unveiled this week in Los Angeles. Western artist Harry Jackson spent three-and-a-half years in his studio in Tuscany, Italy, crafting the monument, called "The Great Westerner."

Gregory Harrison

'Seduced'

Gregory Harrison and Cybill Shepherd will star in "Seduced," a CBS movie now in production for future broadcast on the network. Harrison portrays Mike Riordan, a States Attorney who is offered the presidency of a scandal-racked corporation. Before taking the job, he is driven to solve the murder of the wealthy industrialist who supported him for the post. In doing so he becomes involved with the industrialist's widow (Miss Shepherd). Adrienne Barbeau, Jose Ferrer and Mel Ferrer also star.

Beals on 'Faerie Tale'

Jennifer Beals, star of "Flashdance," has been cast as the title character in the "Faerie Tale Theater" presentation of "Cinderella" on Showtime, the pay-TV network. Also appearing will be Matthew Broderick as the prince, Jean Stapleton as the fairy godmother, and Eve Arden as the wicked stepmother.

'Benson' filming

Production has begun on the sixth season of ABC's "Benson." This year, Benson (Robert Guillaume) will be elected lieutenant governor. In addition, Gretchen Kraus (Inga Swenson) will become his aide, and a special two-part episode will be filmed in Hong Kong.

'Mistress' filming

Robert Urich, Cynthia Sikes, Julianne Phillips and Mark Shera star in "His Mistress," an NBC movie about a young businesswoman who is torn between her love for a wealthy married man and her own sense of pride and morality. The movie will mark the TV debut of Sachi Parker, Shirley MacLaine's daughter.

Lampley Likes Limelight

By Willie Schatz

Even as a rookie reporter roaming college football sidelines in 1974, ABC's Jim Lampley suspected one day he'd be an Olympic anchor.

"This may sound narcissistic, but I did imagine myself being an anchor," says Lampley. In fact, during the next three weeks, he'll share the nighttime anchor chores with Kathleen Sullivan as ABC presents 180 hours of Olympic coverage, which begins with a special preview on Friday evening, July 27.

"My career seems to have worked in logical milestones, and I think given my involvement with the Olympics, it's logical that I'm a central figure," Lampley says.

Still, his is a career that almost never happened. Lampley came to ABC to work off the air in program planning, not on the air with a microphone. The early reviews of his sideline work were not good, but he persevered. He later progressed into the booth, delivering play-by-play accounts of NCAA games, and then acted as a broadcaster for Wide World of Sports. He first became an anchor during this year's Winter Olympics in Sarajevo.

"I've been penalized to some extent because I've been versatile," Lampley says. "There's no advantage to being able to do everything. If I have an identity problem it's that I do so many things that I'm not identified with one."

"I think the host job should help alleviate that. I know I've been mentioned as a successor to Jim McKay. So before Sarajevo I was really tense about hosting and there was a time when I thought Los Angeles would be far and away the most important event in my career. But I've cooled off a whole lot on that in the past few months. I feel a lot better about approaching LA than Sarajevo. I can even have fun this time."

That probably means viewers will, too.

TOP COACHES

Q: Could you tell me who has won the NBA coach-of-the-year award since 1980?

A: 1979-80: Bill Fitch, Boston; 1980-81: Jack McKinney, Indiana; 1981-82: Gene Shue, Washington; 1982-83: Don Nelson, Milwaukee; 1983-84: Frank Laden, Utah. OLYMP-PICS!

FOR TWO YEARS, FAMOUS PHOTOGRAPHER WALTER IOOSS JR. HAS BEEN SNAPPING OLYMPIC HOPEFULS. HERE'S HOW:

2.

"I first took pictures when I was about 15," says Walter Iooss Jr. "I started shooting my friends playing stickball or football. That's where I began to learn how to watch sports. We'd run plays, and I would shoot the same play over and over. It was like a training camp."

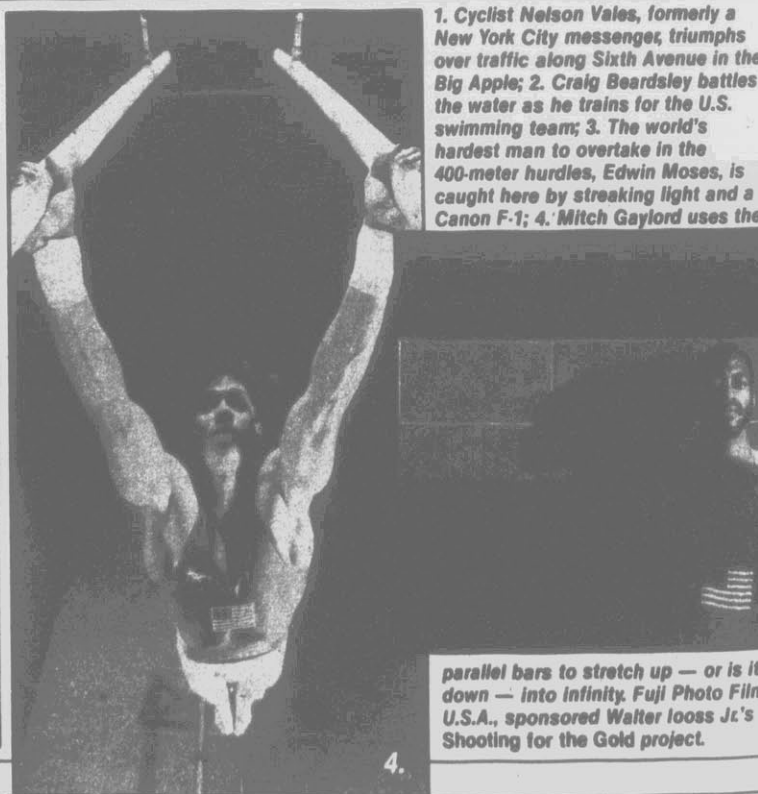

Iooss sold his first picture — one he snapped at the Princeton-Columbia football game in 1961 — to Sports Illustrated when he was 16 years old. He has been taking pictures for the magazine (as well as for national magazines such as Time and Newsweek) ever since.

always

Keeps you cleaner and drier than any other maxi.

Cleaner and drier even on heavy-flow days, new Always gives you a kind of protection that simply didn't exist until now.

Only Always has the silky surface they call Dri-Weave. Wetness passes through the Dri-Weave and virtually all of it stays trapped inside the absorbent pad, away from you. So the surface stays drier and you feel cleaner.

And Always maxi and mini pads are flow-shaped: thicker in the middle than at the ends. So you get protection where you need it most. With the widest adhesive of any pad—to help keep it comfortably in place.

New Always. A cleaner, drier kind of protection than you ever expected from a pad.

assignment of a lifetime," as looss puts it. "I was granted creative freedom and an unprecedented time frame rarely offered to sports photographers." His commission was to spend two years photographing America's athletes as they prepared for the Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The photo on this week's cover of FAMILY WEEKLY and the pictures on page 4 are drawn from looss's Shooting for the Gold exhibit, currently touring the United States. These photos are more than just a sampling of an extraordinary exhibition celebrating athletic excellence; they also provide an opportunity to delve into the creative process and the work techniques of America's premier sports photographer.

Photograph Number One: Cyclist Nelson Vales. "Vales was a messenger in New York," recalls looss — "one of those wild messengers who ride up and down the streets. He grew up in Harlem, and now Vales is one of the top cyclists in America. I'd always wanted to shoot down Sixth Avenue. I ride a bike all through the city, and Thursday is always the worst day for traffic, so that's when I picked it — about 4:30 on a Thursday. I was about two blocks from him on the base of this flagpole, maybe 8 to 10 feet off the ground. Nelson had no problems with the traffic. And then all of a sudden — up he goes with his arms! Nelson almost had a fight with a cab driver. The cabbie tried to nail him, I think." looss used a Canon F-1 camera and a Canon 56mm lens for this shot. He pushed the 400 ASA film to 1600.

Photograph Number Two: Swimmer Craig Beardsley. Imagine trying to photograph a swimmer doing the butterfly. His head and shoulders bob erratically out of the water; his arms follow. You lean down almost to water level, never knowing precisely when his head will reappear. The swimmer comes ever closer, blurring your focus. You try frantically to get that focus right and snap off 14 frames in the second he is above water, hoping that one, just one of them, will turn out. Impossible? Take a look at the one looss got. For this shot he used the Canon F-1 and a 400mm lens.

Photograph on Cover: Diver Greg Louganis. When it comes to diving, Greg Louganis sets the standard by which all other divers are measured. It's not surprising, then, that this photo has come to epitomize looss's Shooting for the Gold project. When looss caught Louganis against the backdrop of the American flag, however, he had no idea that he had anything very special in his sights. "There are some pictures in the show," he says, "that have a larger symbolism. But I didn't necessarily shoot them for that reason. I obviously saw some significance with the Louganis shot. You'd have to be blind, deaf and dumb to miss that. But even then, when I was shooting it, I didn't think it would become so special. It has turned out to be symbolic of the whole essay. It just

HERB HELPERS

PARSLEY, SAGE, ROSEMARY AND THYME

By Marilyn Hansen

Many cooks are experimenting with growing fresh herbs in their own gardens in order to enjoy an added dimension of flavor and color in the preparation of even simple dishes. Local farm stands and city greengrocers offer a selection of cheery pots of herbs to brighten a kitchen window ledge. And now supermarkets are stocking an ever-increasing variety as well. Countless dishes benefit from the addition of fresh, fragrant herbs. Try basil in tomato recipes, dill with seafood, tarragon with chicken, and rosemary with lamb. Fresh oregano or any of the thymes are good in a red-wine marinade for beef or in a salad of cold sliced steak.

HERB AND GARLIC CHEESE SPREAD

- 1 cup (8 oz.) ricotta or farmer cheese
- 1 (8 oz.) pkg. cream cheese, softened
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped rosemary
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped tarragon
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped chervil or chives
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ¼ teaspoon Tabasco

1. In a blender or food processor with metal chopping blade, or in bowl, using electric mixer, place all ingredients. Process or beat until smoothly blended.

 2. Place mixture in a small crock or in a bowl lined with plastic wrap. Cover and chill. Serve directly from crock or turn out of bowl onto plate and remove plastic. Serve with crackers, vegetable sticks or thinly sliced cocktail bread. Makes about 2 cups

Variations: Eliminate the ricotta and use 2 (8 oz.) pkgs. cream cheese. Other herb combinations might be: dill, parsley and chives, or sage, marjoram and thyme. Experiment!

CHICKEN WITH BASIL AND CREAM*

- 2 whole boneless chicken breasts, split, skinned and flattened (about 1 lb.)
- ½ cup chopped green onions
- ¼ lb. sliced Canadian bacon, cut into ½-inch strips
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- 3 slices day-old white bread, dried and rolled into crumbs
- ¼ lb. unsalted butter or margarine
- ½ cup finely chopped shallots
- 2 cups heavy cream or half and half
- ½ cup finely chopped fresh basil leaves
- Salt, to taste
- Basil leaves for garnish

1. Wash chicken. On inner side of each breast half, sprinkle about 2 tablespoons chopped green onion. Place strips of Canadian bacon crosswise down center of chicken. Season with a few twists freshly ground black pepper. Roll each piece lengthwise, securing with soft cord or wooden picks.

2. Coat each chicken roll with the bread crumbs. In large heavy skillet, heat butter until hot but not smoking. Brown chicken rolls slowly in hot butter, turning to brown evenly. When chicken is brown, remove from skillet to baking pan. Add shallots to skillet and saute, stirring, for 5 minutes.

3. Pour shallot butter over chicken rolls and bake in preheated 350° oven for about 25 to 30 minutes, or until cooked through.

4. In a heavy saucepan, heat cream to the boiling point. Reduce heat and allow to simmer over low heat, reducing cream to half the volume. Add chopped basil and season to taste with salt and pepper.

5. To serve: Spoon a little of the basil sauce onto warm plate. Cut chicken roll into ½-inch-thick crosswise slices and place overlapping on top of sauce. Garnish each with a few basil leaves. Makes 2 to 4 servings seems to work." Yes, it does. The picture was taken through a telephoto lens, using 400 ASA film. looss says he's amazed that he was able to push the film to 1600 ASA without having the picture turn out excessively grainy.

Chicken recipe is from the Richard Perry Restaurant in St. Louis, Mo.

Photograph Number Three: Hurdler Edwin Moses. "This is one of my fonder memories of the shoot, something that comes out of a decision you make in a men's room that works out to be one of your best pictures." The day looss went to photograph Edwin Moses, things just weren't going well. "Edwin had gotten to bed very late the night before, and he was really not in the mood for all this. I felt hopeless. He may be the best track and field athlete in the world, period. He's won over 100 races in a row. And I didn't know what to look for. I went to the bathroom to hide for a few minutes. I was standing there, and there was an opening for ventilation and this streak of light was coming in right off the beach. I thought, 'If I could get him to stand on a urinal, I'd get a phenomenal portrait of him with these yellow strips of light.' But then I thought, 'No, he's not in the mood for this.'" Luckily, when looss walked out of the building, the same strip of light was streaking across an outside wall. He took the portrait there. "I knew then that I had the special picture." looss used his customary Canon F-1 camera here, with an 85mm wide-angle lens.

Photograph Number Four: Gymnast Mitch Gaylord. The problem with — or maybe the best thing about — this picture of Gaylord is that looss can't figure out which way is up or down. You flip it over and it still looks right. "We learned in the diving and gymnastics that reality changes with just the way you turn your head. I still don't know which way this one goes." Up or down, what looss likes about this picture is "the way his legs sort of go off into infinity at the edge of the frame." For this picture, the parallel bars were strobe-lit, and looss used a 24mm wide-angle lens.

Using still photography to record subjects whose essence is movement might seem to be missing the point.

But in the hands — and eyes — of an artist like looss, the medium is somehow able to convey that essence and penetrate to the heart of the sport. It captures the moment of truth, while excluding that which is not essential. looss's Olympic photographs constitute a record of a genuine artist at work. PW

"I had been overweight for 10 years, so..."

My friends could hardly believe their eyes when they saw me lose 56 lbs. in only 6 weeks!"

Amazing Japanese weight-loss tablet wins U.S. Patent for its proven ability to flush calories out of your body.

Monica Lee was a "fad-diet junky." She tried everything she could find—the diets, the clinics, the exercise programs. Some of them even seemed to work—but never for long.

"Oh sure, I lost a few pounds here and there, but I always gained them right back. All the programs I tried were so unpleasant or took so much willpower it was impossible to stick with them..."

But then Monica had an amazing stroke of luck that was to change her life, and appearance, forever. She explains, "I was reading my newspaper, and it told about a miracle new diet product from Japan called Mannan-Trim. I thought to myself, 'well, it probably won't work,' but I tried it anyway. Much to my surprise the pounds began to drop away the very first day. I had been overweight for 10 years, so my friends could hardly believe their eyes when they saw me lose 56 pounds in only 6 weeks!" (By the way, that is an average of 1.33 pounds a day!!!)

What is this incredible product? It's a natural extract from the Konjac root, which grows in Japan. It contains no drugs whatsoever and was developed by members of the JMA (Japanese Medical Association). Based upon scientific data demonstrating its effectiveness, it was awarded a patent by the United States Patent Authorities!

The Mannan-Trim Program includes a special diet plan that is protected by U.S. copyright law. The way it works is simple. Reduction of body fat and weight depends on reduced calorie intake. Mannan-Trim helps you absorb less calories in two ways. First, it gives you a natural feeling of fullness. You eat less because you aren't as hungry. But second, this remarkable product surrounds much of the fat, protein and carbohydrate calories you do eat, and then flushes them right out of your body.

How much will you lose? Quite frankly, we don't know. The U.S. Patent discloses the results of a study performed on overweight men and women. With no dietary changes, the average weight-loss for women over a fifteen-week period was 37.5 lbs., and for men 42.5 lbs. The least amount of weight-loss for anyone tested was 33 lbs. Monica Lee followed our entire Mannan-Trim program, and she lost weight even faster. Of course, Monica is one of the most successful people to experience the miraculous results of the Mannan-Trim weight-loss program.

Testimonials do not necessarily show the results you will achieve by using the product. The amount you will lose depends on how much weight you need to lose, and on your metabolism. The Mannan-Trim plan is an extremely fast way to lose weight. But naturally the incredible results described above require that you follow the entire Mannan-Trim plan.

And just imagine what those results can be. Monica went from 168 lbs. down to a trim 112 lbs. She went from a size 16 to a perfect size 7. And she did it all in just six weeks! Just think how you would look if you could carve away up to:

- 6 inches or more off your hips!
- 3 inches or more off your thighs!
- 4 inches or more off your buttocks!
- 8 inches or more off your waistline!

Just think how you would look in your new clothes!

Well, why not? Now, at last, the body of your dreams can be yours. Now, at last, you can do it. You really can. And best of all, there is no need to suffer while you lose. There is no need to exercise.

It's easy to make your dreams come true. With the Mannan-Trim plan you take two tablets about thirty minutes before each meal. Not only is your hunger satisfied, so you eat less, but you have set in motion the powerful process by which a portion of the calories and carbohydrates you do eat are surrounded by Mannan-Trim and flushed from your body. As your calorie intake diminishes, your body:

"MELTS DOWN POUNDS LIKE FIRE MELTS DOWN ICE!"

IMPORTANT NOTICE

As your weight begins to plummet, you should use your good judgment and not let yourself become too thin. Normal directions suggest taking two tablets before each principal meal. However, if you lose weight too rapidly (faster than Monica) it is recommended you limit the tablets to just one before each of these meals.

Or, if you prefer to use your MasterCard or Visa, you can order by phone by simply dialing our toll-free number (800) 854-6917 (California residents call (714) 631-4170), and asking for our new Anti-fat weapon. Either way, your order will be sent promptly by first class mail. Thank you.

NOISE: THE BANE OF OUR EXISTENCE -AND HEALTH

By Harriet Van Home

Anybody out there heard a pin drop lately?

It's not likely, given the booming barrage that surrounds us. These days you'd need the ears of a bird dog to hear a piano drop.

Now, some of this infernal racket — fire engines, heavy construction, jet take-offs — is beyond the average citizen's control. But souped-up portable radios are not. And TV sets whooping at top volume are not.

We're a noisy nation because we have made it a virtue to operate at full throttle. We're also a noisy nation because we do not mind our manners. Not etiquette, manners — best defined as consideration for the comfort and dignity of other human beings.

Lunching with my old friend Anne recently, I was compelled to ask her, "Why are you shouting?"

"It's my new bad habit," she explained. "I've got two deaf heads in the family and we shout at each other."

One of the deaf heads is Anne's father. That's natural; he's pushing 80. The other is Anne's 16-year-old son, John. That's unnatural. John, at this stage in his life, should have the hearing of an Indian scout. But deafness is increasingly common in the young. Street sounds and industrial noise are only partly to blame. Most acoustical experts and otologists — ear doctors — are blaming rock music. John is a rock maniac.

If you live in a house where rock music shakes the very foundations, your vital organs are taking brutal punishment. Anne suffers acute headaches and lately her blood pressure has been zooming upward. Similar symptoms were noted in chinchillas a few years ago after scientists at the National Institute of Health exposed them to recordings of intense noise — including rock music.

At the Noise Research Lab of the University of Tennessee, guinea pigs were subjected to rock music for several weeks, leaving one ear uncovered. The sensory cells in that ear had "shriveled like peas," says the official report.

When does the shriveling start? A hearing test given to 3000 children in Tennessee found that sixth graders had only a 4 percent impairment. By freshman year in college, some students had lost 61 percent of their hearing!

As an irritant, loud noise is one of the top three citizen complaints, according to the American Housing Survey by the U.S. Census. Many cities have set noise limits, with fines of $25 and up for infractions. The noise roars on, however, because the police say they've more important things to do than arrest a kid with a loud radio.

What to do? Focus first on the areas where a diminuendo can be achieved. Local ordinances can require rock concerts and discotheques to reduce their volume. Petition your city council to stiffen anti-noise laws and then see to it that local police enforce those regulations.

We can also turn down the TV set, the stereo, the radio and the blasts of hard rock coming from Junior's room where a small disco operates seven nights a week. Then we will have started a campaign to bring back the peace and quiet every civilized society has a right to expect. FW

ELLIS ISLAND: CELEBRATING OUR IMMIGRANT ROOTS

By Thomas Kessner

Ellis Island today is a forlorn place pocked with dilapidated ruins. Its "Great Hall" is a crumbled shell with rotting roof. Pools of dirty water stand in the historic reception area that welcomed millions of foreigners to the United States. The massive red brick buildings are in disrepair, stripped by vandals and ravaged by time and neglect. Once dense with the drama of life in transformation, it is now a dingy ghost town. Yet this man-made island, a short distance from the New Jersey shore in upper New York Bay, is one of this country's few genuine shrines. More than 17 million immigrants entered the United States through this gateway, hoping to build new lives, fearful of what the future might bring.

Belatedly, Americans are recognizing the import of the island in our nation's history. The neighboring Statue of Liberty, the "Mother of Exiles," was and is a stirring symbol of opportunity for those arriving from distant lands. But Ellis Island was reality; it was the delivery room of their Americanization, and for many it was a painful labor.

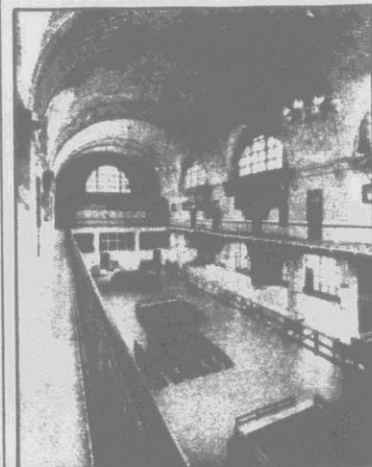

The United States is its immigrants, from the Pilgrim colonists who landed in Plymouth, Mass., in 1620 to the millions who were processed on Ellis Island around the turn of the century to the millions continuing to arrive from around the world today. President Reagan announced in 1982 that the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission would oversee the responsibility of restoring both these shrines. It is fitting that we are finally preparing to make Ellis Island an historical museum, to commit the funds necessary to refurbish it, and to celebrate its centennial in 1992.

For most of the 19th century, admission into the United States was simple. Immigration was encouraged and there were no federal barriers or tests for entry. With time and the massive influx of immigrants, it became necessary to systematize the process and construct reception centers. At first this was done by individual states. After 1882, the federal government took over the responsibility and developed federal guidelines for extensive checks on the work backgrounds of those entering the country.

Ellis Island was opened as a federal immigration station on January 1, 1892. The first immigrant to pass through the reception station was Annie Moore, a 15-year-old from County Cork, Ireland. Officials presented her with a $10 gold piece to mark the occasion — more money, she told reporters, than she had ever seen in her life. That day the reception station took in 2,251 people. As the tide of immigrants grew, the number coming through the island on a given day rose to 5,000. On peak days in 1907, 10,000 to 12,000 individuals might arrive.

In those days, oceans were crossed by ships rather than planes, and millions of people were leaving the industrializing nations of Southern and Eastern Europe. Men and women of modest means imagined a place where life would be easier — less brutally restrictive. They heard of the new world where there were jobs and freedoms and open doors. "America," recalled the Russian immigrant Mary Antin, "was in everybody's mouth. Businessmen talked of it over their accounts. . . . People who had relatives in the famous land went around reading letters for the enlightenment of less fortunate folk. . . . Children played at emigrating. . . . All talked of it. . . ." They came not for gold on the streets, but rather for the opportunity to escape the decaying economies of countries that had spent themselves on war, dogma and the inability to see the world in a new way.

The immigrants all shared the same fears: Will the new land welcome such as us, poor peasants, ignored in our own homelands? Will it be gentle with our foreign ways, or dictate rapid conformity and assimilation? Will it provide the jobs and better futures we are coming for? And what of our deeply held beliefs; will we be able to pass on our religion, culture and language to our children? Or will they become would get them in. A woman with four children, and pregnant with a fifth, said that her husband had been in America 14 years. Gaining admittance was more important to her than what people would think of her unborn child in that era of rigid morality.

Eighty percent of the individuals landing on the island passed through in about four or five hours. If they wished to settle in New York, it was only a ferry ride away. Others boarded barges to the Jersey railroad terminals. One frantic newcomer kept repeating that his destination was Prinvilliamass. An inspector finally understood this to mean Springfield, Mass., and the man was sent on his way.

Of the 20 percent detained for hospitalization or more extensive tests, most were admitted after a few days. Less than 2 percent were sent back to their homelands at the expense of the shipping company, and a good number of those tried their luck again. Still, the scenes of parting, of families being split, were sufficient to legitimize the island's nickname: "Island of Tears."

Ellis Island eventually lost its purpose, and by 1954 the government abandoned it. In 1955 the island was declared surplus and put up for sale. Americans in these years were not yet comfortable with the meaning of their collective ethnic past. Plymouth Rock, not Ellis Island, was considered the one legitimate source for American stock.

Some members of Congress complained that selling the island was a shabby act. And the bids that were submitted added no luster to the effort. A Philadelphian who proposed to build a mansion for himself from which to watch the ships go by offered a nickel. A New Jersey youngster offered $20 and his plans to set up an orphanage. A builder with plans for developing the island offered $201,000. Finally a vigorous effort was initiated to give this 27½-acre site its legitimate place in our land. In 1965, federal law decreed the island a national monument.

We are a synthesized nation, united by our sense that man freed from restrictive governments and outmoded economic systems can flourish, despite differences that had been judged insurmountable. Perhaps Ellis, with its celebration not of native roots, but rather of the process of replanting and remaking life in mid-course, will deepen our appreciation of some of the ideals that lie at the heart of the American experiment. FW

HEAD GAMES

There's a new kind of headgear available to help make those sweltering summer days a little more bearable. It's a solar-powered, ventilated pith helmet. And it can be found in the mail-order catalog of Hammacher Schlemmer, the exotic gift and specialty emporium with stores in New York and Chicago.

On hot days, the wearer of this new sunbonnet flips a switch that activates a little fan attached to the brim. The fan is powered by six solar cells on the crown of the hat, and the ensuing breezes are enhanced by small sponges one can moisten and attach to the sweatband. The helmet also comes with a battery pack for those steamy summer nights — or gloomy, overcast days.

All in all, it makes it a lot easier to keep a cool head.

KISSING OFF CAVITIES

Soon you may be able to kiss tooth decay goodbye. Literally.

Dental researchers at several laboratories are working on new procedures that may enable mothers to protect their children's teeth simply by giving them a kiss. Cavities are caused by otherwise helpful bacteria that grow in the mouth. When bacteria process the sugar in the food we eat, the acid produced erodes tooth enamel.

Now, dental researchers have found a strain of bacteria that not only doesn't produce acid but also discourages harmful bacteria from clinging to tooth surfaces. In laboratory experiments, rats inoculated with the protective bacteria passed them along to other rats during normal animal-to-animal contact.

Researchers thus speculate that reducing cavities may one day involve nothing more than a kiss from mom. Now that's one tooth-decay drill we could handle.

PET BRICKS

We've all heard stories about people who collect weird things. No, not coins or stamps. We're talking weird. Barbed wire, chicken beaks, thermos bottles through the ages — stuff like that. And some collectors are into the really heavy stuff.

Witness the annual get-togethers sponsored by the International Brick Collectors Association, which is based in San Diego. On these weighty occasions, about 200 brick enthusiasts from all over the world meet to swap brick stories and, of course, bricks. Particularly prized specimens are bricks that decorated Kansas City walkways early in this century with the phrase "Don't spit on the sidewalk" inscribed on them; bricks from Illinois that bear a profile of Abraham Lincoln; and those legendary kiln-dried specimens adorned with the letters "OSP," indicating that they hail from the vintage Oklahoma State Prison collection of the 1920s.

To Phil Deckebach, a Michigan printer who edits a monthly magazine for brick collectors titled The Brick Journal, there's nothing weird about his hobby. He sees it as a harmless and, indeed, useful enterprise. Deckebach has built a hearth and is currently putting in a back porch made of the objects he collects. As he might put it, when was the last time anyone built anything useful from bottle caps?

FIRST SONS

Will your first-born child grow up to be a good-for-nothing? Probably not, but it appears that if it's a boy, he's less likely to grow up to be a hard worker than a girl is.

Kathryn Stafford and Margaret Sanik, professors of home management at Ohio State University, contend that first-born sons tend to be "very privileged characters" who do little work around the house. After examining surveys completed by 527 boys and 504 girls between the ages of 12 and 18, they found that first-born girls did 60 percent more work than first-born boys. Second children — whether male or female — were much more willing to help out around the house than their older siblings. But second daughters still do 30 percent more work than second sons.

Further research will be needed to establish just why these work patterns exist. And you can bet that the references of all first-born sons applying for work on this project will be closely scrutinized!

BEDSIDE READING

We wondered what people are reading before they switch out the light and retire for the night. Here are two reports:

Marc Morgenstern, executive producer, CBS Nightly News

Mr. Morgenstern has just finished reading Stick, by Elmore Leonard. Leonard, he says, is one of the wittiest mystery writers he has ever read. He has also recently read The Natural by Bernard Malamud. The book is better than the movie, he says, and he recommends that you read it before seeing the film.

Dick Biddle, chairman of the board, WOWL-TV, Florence-at-the-Shoals, Ala.

Mr. Biddle recently read The One Minute Manager, by Kenneth Blanchard. It was enjoyable but difficult to apply. He finds that his one-minute lectures tend to turn into 15-minute dissertations.

SYNO-METRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Lose Belly Fat Develop a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

with the amazing Speed Shaper Synometrics Program

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes

Exclusive TENSION RING
Lets you adjust Tension Control
Speed Results! Great for Any Age

IN JUST 7 SHORT MINUTES A DAY with the "miracle" we call SYNO-METRICS (scientific concept of ISO-METRIC + ISOTONIC)...the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim handsome body!

In addition to reshaping and toning your body, a FREE accompanying easy to follow diet plan will help speed up weight loss, if weight loss is one of your objectives, to speed away ugly, embarrassing fat & flab.

IKE BERGER explains SYNO-METRICS "...the new EASY speed method for figure beauty. What is SYNO-METRICS? You've probably heard about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics for years. Each method has its own believers and supporters. I used BOTH methods in my daily training. Finally, I developed a special exercise unit that employed BOTH methods AT THE SAME TIME in one device. The effect was simply amazing. I was able to keep in trim, slim shape in only a fraction of the time I previously needed!

The Science of SYNO-METRICS I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNO-METRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is...a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now...build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNO-METRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC. IRON CLAD 14 DAY MONEY BACK GUARANTEE In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results...or your money back promptly and without any question.

Our Story: THE FORCE MORDRED HAS LANDED IS SMALL, BUT IT BEGINS TO GROW AS MORDRED KNEW IT WOULD. FOR THE BRIGANTES TRIBE OF NORTHUMBRIA ARE INDEPENDENT FOLK WHO CHAFE UNDER CAMELOT'S RULE. ADVENTURERS SWELL THE RANKS. SO MORDRED MUST SEEK OUT THE WEAPONS THAT DUNSTAN AND OTHERS CACHED IN CAVES THROUGHOUT BRITAIN....

.... TO ARM THE OLD MEN WHO HAVE SICKENED OF PEACE AND THE BEARDLESS YOUTHS WHO THIRST FOR A TASTE OF WAR.

AS HIS ARMY GROWS LARGER SO DOES MORDRED GROW BOLDER. THE ANCIENT CITIES OF THE NORTH -- VINOVA, ISURIUM, EVEN PROUD EBORACUM, ONCE HOME TO THE IMPERIAL SIXTH LEGION -- FALL INTO THE CONQUEROR'S HANDS. TO BRITAIN'S NORTH, BARBARITY RETURNS ONCE MORE.

IN EBORACUM, THE LAST TO FALL, A QUAKING MAYOR IS HAULED BEFORE THE VICTOR. AS HE HAS DONE IN EVERY TOWN THUS FAR, MORDRED MOTIONS HIS MEN TO PROCEED. HE WATCHES IMPASSIVELY AS THE MAYOR SCREAMS IN AGONY. "SEND THE LEG TO CAMELOT," MORDRED ORDERS WHEN ALL IS DONE.

"LET ARTHUR SEE THE FATE THAT AWAITS HIM FOR WHAT HE HAS DONE TO ME." DAY BY DAY THE GRISLY REMINDERS OF MORDRED'S CONQUEST ARRIVE AT THE CITY OF MARVEL. YET THE ROUND TABLE SITS NEARLY EMPTY, FOR THE FAIREST KNIGHTS OF THE REALM HAD MONTHS AGO LEFT TO HELP THE FRANKS IN GAUL. WHAT IS THE KING TO DO?"

JOHN CULLEN MURPHY

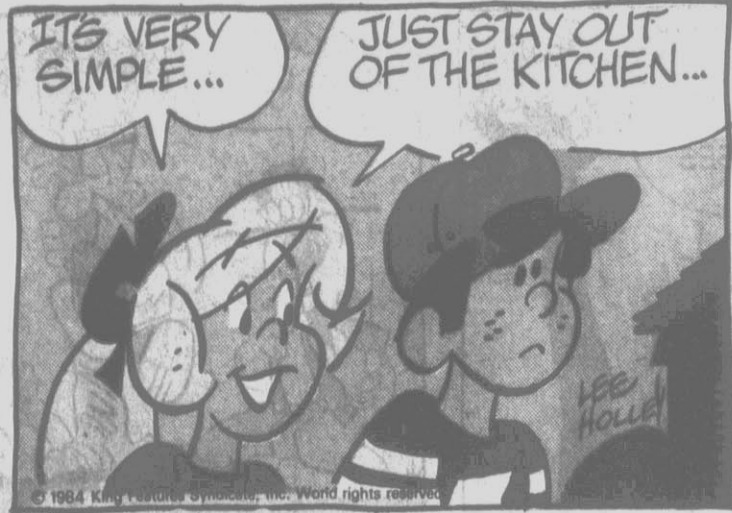

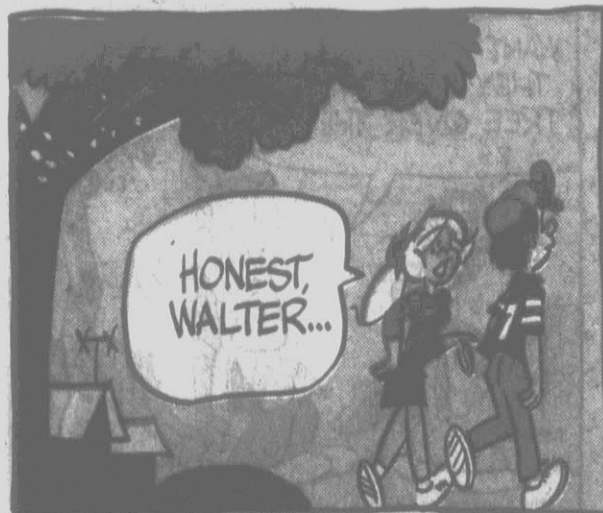

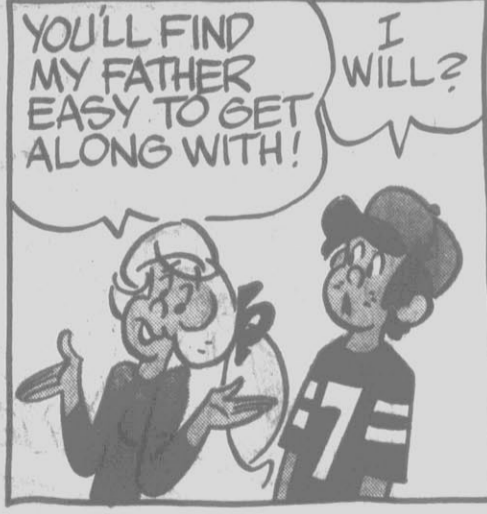

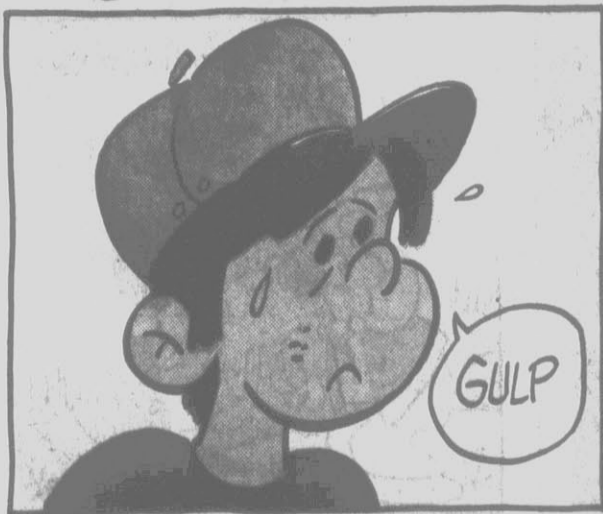

YES, THINKS MORDRED, THE ALLIANCE WITH THE VISIGOTHS HAD PAID OFF HANDSOMELY. THEIR FORAYS INTO GAUL RENDERED CAMELOT DEFENSELESS.
