LEAF CROP RECEIVES SOME DAMAGE — Mitch Smith, Pitt County extension agent, looks over some tobacco that was damaged by the more than nine inches of rain that fallen in the last few days. Smith said a significant amount of Pitt County's 1984 crop had been damaged by the heavy rains. In addition to being harmful to the leaf crop, Smith noted that the rainy weather was making it difficult for the farmers to get into the field to harvest their leaf. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Buying Slow As Tobacco Begins 1984 Sales Season

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Prices eased upward as the flue-cured tobacco sales season opened — but buyers were not jumping excitedly to bid.

"They are just not buying yet," said Joe Boyette, manager of Big Z Tobacco Warehouse in Blackshear.

Buyers are showing a wait-and-see attitude, said Fred Voigt, a Waycross agronomist and tobacco farmer. He blamed the high price supports for slow opening-day sales Wednesday.

"Imported tobacco can be grown a lot cheaper than we grow it here," he said. "They can grow it for half of what it costs American farmers. You can't blame the tobacco companies for buying imported tobacco."

Voigt said the Tobacco Stabilization Corp. has more than 750 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco left over from previous seasons because of the high price supports that have averaged $1.70 per pound the last two years.

"I think you'll see some things change in the next two years if we can't sell this year's crop," he said.

The change could mean the collapse of the tobacco price support program, some observers said.

W.P. Strickland, whose family's tobacco was the first offered at the Blackshear market, said he was pleased federal inspectors graded his leaf X2F, with a price support of $202 per hundred pounds.

But nobody bid for the tobacco and the warehouse finally bought it.

The Federal-State Market News Service reported variations in grade averages were only $1 to $3 in most cases with gains and losses about equal. Primings, which comprised the bulk of sales, generally brought from $130 to $149 per hundred pounds.

More tobacco was graded second and third quality this year, while the percentage of fourth quality decreased. Last year, 5.5 million pounds were auctioned the first day, averaging $140.21 per hundred pounds.

Preliminary sales figures for Wednesday were 3,458,049 pounds at $142.28 per hundred pounds, up $2.07 from 1983. Georgia sales were 2,890,064 pounds at $144.83 per hundred. Florida sales were 567,985 pounds at $129.30 per hundred.

Eighteen percent of offerings went to the stabilization corporation, according to incomplete sales figures. At some warehouses, the percentage was much higher.

More than 80 percent of the early offerings at Douglas went into stabilization.

Government Bails Out Bank With $4.5 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the largest bank rescue ever, the government announced today a $4.5 billion aid package for giant Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., a once-aggressive lender now burdened with a huge portfolio of bad loans.

The agreement calls for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to buy $4.5 billion worth of bad loans from Continental, one of the nation's 10 largest banks, at a discounted rate of $3.5 billion and to pump in an additional $1 billion in capital.

In announcing the agreement, the agency said John E. Swearingen, retired chairman of the board of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, would be the new chairman of Continental Illinois Corp., the bank's parent. He will succeed David G. Taylor, who will resign Aug. 13 as part of the deal.

The bank holding company had assets of $41 billion at the end of March, making it the eighth largest in the country.

Today's statement conceded that "the resulting institution will be smaller" but said it will be "immeasurably stronger and positioned to profitably serve the full range of banking needs of its customers."

Under the government assistance plan, the holding company's assets will fall to $30 billion — a drop of one-fourth the assets it had last spring.

The arrangement caps a two-month search for a way to handle the 127-year-old bank's problems, which began to surface in 1982 when the Penn Square Bank failed in Oklahoma.

Continental, which had pursued a strategy of aggressive lending to its industrial customers, had bought $1 billion in energy-related loans from Penn Square in the late 1970s.

Last spring, Continental's troubles reached the critical point. Rumors circulated in the financial markets of its potential problems, sparking a loss of billions of dollars in deposits.

The federal regulators joined with 28 commercial banks in May to put up $7.5 billion to keep the bank afloat.

Today's announcement puts a more permanent arrangement into place, assuming it is approved by the bank's shareholders. The announcement warned that failure to approve the deal could result in the bank being declared insolvent.

Under the deal:

—The FDIC will take on right away $3 billion worth of loans, written down to $2 billion, and get an additional $1.5 billion over three years. The purchase will virtually free the bank of bad loans. To buy the loans, the FDIC will assume responsibility for repayment on $3.5 billion in loans the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago had granted to the bank.

—The FDIC will inject $1 billion in capital to the bank through its purchase of two series of preferred stock.

In return, the agency will get an 80 percent stake in the bank.

Some industry analysts have described the government action as nationalization, which would be the first of a major U.S. bank. But federal regulators maintain the move falls short of that because they will not own all the bank's stock and because the bank will still be privately run.

—The consortium of 28 banks will continue its $5.5 billion credit line to Continental.

Soviet Woman Walks In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet cosmonaut Svetlana Savitskaya, the first woman to travel into space twice, became the first woman to walk in space when she left the orbiting Salyut 7 space station to perform experiments, Tass reported.

The official news agency said she was joined on the space walk Wednesday by cosmonaut Vladimir Dzhanibekov, and they "went into open space...in accordance with the flight program" for more than three hours.

Miss Savitskaya's achievements stole some of the potential glamor from an American space shuttle flight scheduled for October. During that flight, Kathy Sullivan plans to take a space walk; it will now be the first by an American woman.

Also, Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, will be on the flight, her second into space.

But Miss Savitskaya has already become the first woman to travel into space twice.

Miss Savitskaya, Dzhanibekov and Igor Volk blasted into space last week aboard a Soyuz T-12 space ship. They joined three other cosmonauts, Leonid Kizim, Vladimir Solov'yev and Oleg Atkov, who have been aboard the orbital research station for 168 days today.

Miss Savitskaya had spent nine days aboard the Salyut 7 in August 1982.

In an update on the current flight, Tass said today that Miss

SVETLANA SAVITSKAYA

Savitskaya's "successful performance of unique experiments in conditions of outer space has vividly shown a possibility of women's effective activity in the performance of complex research work not only aboard manned orbital complexes but in the open space as well."

Miss Savitskaya used an electronic beam and control panel to cut, weld and solder metal plates and spray them with a metal coating while Dzhanibekov filmed her, Tass said.

Tass said the two cosmonauts returned safely to the orbiting capsule after 3 hours and 35 minutes of work outside the spacecraft.

Depression May Become Tropical Storm

MIAMI (AP) — Forecasters say a strong tropical depression that has drenched eastern Caribbean islands may soon develop into the season's first tropical storm.

The depression, with highest sustained winds at 35 mph and stronger gusts in squalls, was moving west-northwest from the Leeward Islands at 10:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

If sustained winds reach 39 mph, it would be called tropical storm Arthur, the first tropical storm of the 1984 Atlantic Hurricane season.

Small craft in the area of Hispaniola, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Leeward Islands were advised to remain in port Wednesday night. Hispaniola is the Caribbean island shared by the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

"It's a tropical depression that's close to a tropical storm — on the borderline," forecaster Miles Lawrence said Wednesday night, adding that thunderstorms were soaking eastern Antilles islands.

At 10:30 p.m., the depression was about 350 miles southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico and moving toward the west-northwest at 20 mph. The motion was expected to continue through today, the National Weather Service said.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane early Wednesday found the system better organized than it was Tuesday, just below tropical storm strength.

"We think that it has a potential to strengthen into a storm, but we're not sure," Lawrence said.

Wind squalls Wednesday buffeted the northern Windward and the central and southern Leeward Islands with the threat of flash floods continuing into the night.

Girl Planning For Future Questions His

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old, and for the last four months I've been seeing this guy who is 23. We really care a lot for each other and are getting serious. He is very handsome, treats me well and goes to church regularly. My parents approve of him and think he would make a perfect husband. He doesn't drink or do drugs, and we've never had an argument.

The problem is his job. It doesn't pay much, but he is happy doing it. He never graduated from high school and has no interest in furthering his education.

I plan to go to college, and the career I hope to pursue will pay me many times more than what he makes. Abby, I can't see myself married to a man who makes less than I do. My family isn't rich, but we could always afford what we wanted. I couldn't handle pinching pennies.

Am I making a big deal out of nothing? Sign me ...

HAVING SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR HAVING: If you're having second thoughts, now is the time to air them. Since he's happy in a job that doesn't pay much, and you can't see yourself married to a man who will never make as much as you, you're wise to realize that you need more from a husband materially than this man can give you. Also, by the time you graduate from college, you will be a different person intellectually. He won't.

others who request a copy of a specific item that unless you are able to pinpoint the date (the year and the month), I am unable to accommodate you. Also, when requesting a favor, please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that taxes are the price we pay for living in a civilized society, but enough is enough already. I've had this poem for years. I don't know who wrote it, but I sure hope you think it's worth printing.

—INDIANA READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

DEATH AND TAXES
Tax his cow, tax his goat; tax his pants, tax his coat.
Tax his crops, tax his work; tax his tie, tax his shirt.
Tax his chew, tax his smoke; teach him taxes are no joke.
Tax his tractor, tax his mule; teach him taxes are the rule.
Tax his oil, tax his gas; tax his notes, tax his cash.
If he hollers, tax him more; tax him 'til he's good and sore.
Tax his coffin, tax his grave; tax the sod in which he lays;
Put these words upon his tomb: "Taxes drove me to my doom."
After he's gone he can't relax; they'll still go after inheritance tax.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ONLY ONE PERSON IN WORCESTER, MASS.: I am reminded of a short but meaningful poem from the play, "For Heaven's Sake" by Helen Kromer:

One man awake
Can awaken another.
The second can waken his next-door brother.
The three awake can rouse the town,
By turning the whole place upside down.
And the many awake, make such a fuss,
They finally awaken the rest of us.
One man up with the dawn in his eyes—multiplies.

DEAR ABBY: I've been a faithful reader of your column for many years and now I have a big favor to ask of you.

Will you please send me a copy of a letter you printed many years ago? It was about a wife whose husband had joined the Masonic lodge and she kept nagging him, wanting him to know all the secret goings-on, etc. You told her to quit nagging him or she would lose her husband by degrees. Thank you.

DEAR MASON: I'm glad that you wrote because it gives me an opportunity to tell you and

Special Project To Promote Farm Safety

Promoting farm safety on rural roads will be a special project of Pitt County Farm Bureau this year. Alma Worthington has been named chairman of the project.

The project was planned at the meeting of the board of directors of farm bureau Tuesday night. Mrs. Worthington was appointed by President Jim Galloway.

Sgt. Glenn Swanson and Jogechum Finnemina were special guests at the meeting. A N.C. Highway patrolman. Sgt. Swanson showed a film "Country Roads." Finnemina, an international 4-H youth exchange student from Holland, showed slides of farm scenes in his native country. His guest family is Mr. and Mrs. John R. Lewis of the Farmville community.

NO GREEN THUMBS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — There's no such thing as a green thumb, says Robert D. Phillips, only experience and hard work.

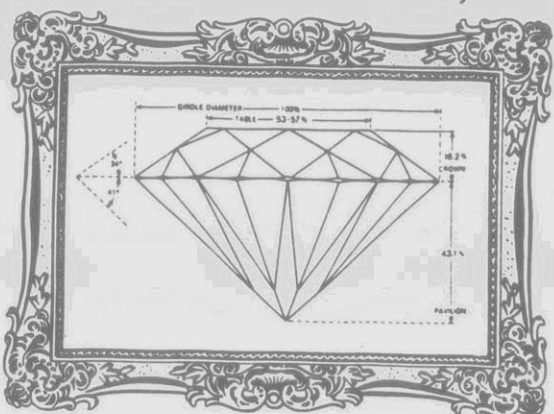

Phillips is responsible for six acres of lawn, 790 trees and scores of shrubs and flower beds at R.J. Reynolds Industries' headquarters here.

His gardening tips: Have soil analyzed every three years by the Cooperative Extension Service; water and fertilize according to the amounts of clay and sand in your soil, and surround plants with mulch throughout the summer. —

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There was a time when the last column I wrote before my vacation was nothing to bring you to the edge of your seat about. I just did my usual thing and then added, "See all of you readers in three weeks."

Sometimes you showed up and sometimes you didn't.

Then television came up with a perfect solution to hanging onto its audience throughout the summer — the cliffhanger.

People couldn't eat during the summer months wondering who shot J.R., and there wasn't a day went by that hundreds of people weren't calling the studios begging to know who died in the fire on "Dynasty." (And that was only the cast.)

This year, they've done it again.

We have Philip and Angela from "Falcon Crest," whose plane went down and we don't know which one of them bought the farm. There is a rumor that it was Philip, who really liked working steady and may just show up at his own funeral if his agent has anything to do with it.

Then, there's the "Dynasty" family, who if they were poor would all be wearing paper bedroom slippers in a home. Alexis is behind bars in a designer dress, suspected of murder. Blake and Crystal are losing their entire fortune, Fallon is in a car crash in her wedding dress and Diahann Carroll has just announced, "Wait until they find out I'm a black Carrington."

As for "Dallas," the production company was so protective over which one was sitting in J.R.'s chair when it was riddled with bullets in the final episode, they filmed four versions of it with all the principals in the hot seat.

Which brings me to my last column before I break for three weeks. You're going to have to help me here, folks. If there's a picture at the top of this column, block it out in your mind and substitute a dazzling woman of 50 or so wearing bright red lipstick and a large-brimmed hat, who has just stored a column in her computer terminal that Art Buchwald, Andy Rooney and Russell Baker would kill for.

Foul play has already been attempted. The wheels of my shopping cart locked unexpectedly last Wednesday. My mother was held captive for five hours by an Amway salesman. My tire went flat in front of a drive-in bank window and I was nearly stoned to death by those behind me.

The column, stored in the computer, is my ticket out of the utility room . . . 19 years of writing about kids, septic tanks, and snapping beans for dinner. Stay with me. My husband makes plane reservations for a second honeymoon. The bank is anxious to get in touch with him over a check I wrote. The column appears on the terminal. Lena Horne appears out of nowhere and starts to speak.

Freeze frame. To be continued.

Career Ahead

Vanessa Williams is noted for being the first black to win the Miss America Pageant.

She is more than that, however. Prior to her resignation, Miss Williams was an extremely popular Miss America who seemed to embody all the traditions that the foremost of all pageants stands for.

It came as a crashing blow to her, those who run the Miss America Pageant and to the public which adores the young women chosen to be the best of American female youth when nude pictures of her with another woman appeared in Penthouse magazine.

The pictures were taken prior to Miss Williams' surge to fame and she said she understood that she would not be recognizable in them. Unfortunately a glance at the September issue of Penthouse shows that the pageant winner is very recognizable.

The Miss America Pageant emphasizes intelligence, poise and character as well as beauty and the upholding of certain principles. Thus it came as no surprise when the pageant committee requested that Miss Williams resign.

It must be said she did that with class, announcing that it would be difficult for her to continue to make appearances as Miss America under the circumstances. She said it was not her desire to injure in any way the Miss America pageant.

At the time the photos were taken it is not likely that Penthouse would have considered using them, nor was Miss Williams considering the possibility of becoming Miss America. Subsequent events made the photos valuable properties and the end result of her reign as Miss America was predictable.

It does not have to end her career as a public figure, however. Miss Williams obviously had the intelligence, poise, confidence and talent to be chosen for the title. None of those characteristics can be taken away from her and all of us should be supportive of her efforts to develop a successful life.

Final Chapter

Irony takes a diversity of forms. One of the more recent involved a dedicated jogger, Jim Fixx, who died of a heart condition while jogging. True, heart attacks can and do strike anyone; but this was completely unexpected.

Fixx, 52, was an expert in the exercise of running. He was widely known among legions of fellow joggers, and a great number of non-runners because of his authoring "The Complete Book of Running", a best-seller. Nobody writes a "complete book" on any subject unless they have reason to think they know all there is to know about the topic. He overlooked one vital element, knowledge of his own body and its weakest point.

In his lifetime Fixx encouraged and taught thousands upon thousands of amateurs what many consider the finest form of exercise. For that he is due a large measure of appreciation.

His unexpected death may also be counted as the unwritten final chapter, the final lesson in his book that admirers and followers should heed: do not overlook periodic physical examinations.

Fixx apparently thought in his case they were unneeded. He couldn't have been more wrong.

RALEIGH — House Speaker Liston Ramsey has a plan to cut the manufacturer's inventory tax and one of the leading proponents of cutting the tax thinks it's a "brilliant" idea.

Repeal of the manufacturer's inventory tax — a local property tax — has been high on the agenda of business lobbyists for years. They say high-inventory industries won't locate in a state that taxes inventories.

But repeal of the tax would cost local governments as much as $100 million annually. Most recent repeal proposals have sought to compensate local governments for any such loss through reimbursement from the state — a provision which Ramsey has called "unfair."

The beauty of Ramsey's proposal is that it would not cost any state revenue and would only reduce local government revenues in those localities which choose to take the loss. Ramsey is proposing a constitutional amendment which would make the manufacturer's inventory tax a local option tax.

Under his proposal, a municipality or a county could choose to drop the tax, or phase it out over a period of time. Those places which wanted to keep the tax could do so.

Ramsey sees his idea as being a recruitment boon to industry-poor areas of the state. "This would help distribute industries throughout the state because counties that don't have industry, they're not collecting the money now." Those counties would presumably drop the tax and they'd be much more attractive to high-inventory business.

Bill Rustin, chairman of the Task Force on the Inventory Tax, a private business group seeking its repeal, called Ramsey's idea "a brilliant stroke of job strategy because it pushes to those willing to take the chances the opportunity to take a bold stroke."

"If I were an eastern county with little industry," Rustin said, "I would repeal the tax immediately and start advertising like heck."

Ramsey and Rustin agreed that under a local option plan, small, industry-poor counties surrounding richer counties could experience warehouse booms. The major plant might stay in Durham or Raleigh but the warehouses would be opened in rural areas to the north or south where the tax might be repealed.

The move is also a brilliant political stroke. The focus of this debate has always been at the Legislature. Legislators are besieged by the business lobbyists but they don't get to spend the money collected by the tax. Local officials collect that tax and they've fought its repeal.

By making the tax optional, the fight would shift to each county commission, each city or town council. The politicians who collect the money would have to take the heat for doing so.

Political Phenomenon

SAN FRANCISCO — Walter F. Mondale reversed his decision to make Bert Lance chairman of the Democratic National Committee after his secret delegate count showed it would block his nomination for president on the first ballot.

A day later, he peeled back from his decision to drop Charles T. Manatt as chairman when big-money men threatened to withhold funds from the presidential campaign. Thus, Mondale's reversal of his two major decisions restructuring the party apparatus was not mere bowing to political pressure. His very nomination and the ability to finance his campaign were at stake.

More than 40 delegates committed to Mondale publicly declared that they would defect if Lance, the Georgia state Democratic chairman, replaced Manatt as Mondale wanted. But the actual number of potential defectors was much higher.

Lance's hopes to become national chairman ended when Tom Donilon, Mondale's ace delegate-counter, delivered a startling report. The shift of national chairman would lose more than 100 delegates, enough to block Mondale's first-ballot nomination.

Mondale inched over the 1,967-delegate mark necessary to be nominated when he won the New Jersey primary June 5. But his delegate-hunters have not been able to build a big majority in the six weeks since then. He entered the convention with a hard lead of slightly more than 100 delegates.

Consequently, Mondale delegates have been wary of any issue that might delay a first-ballot nomination or even produce a convention of negotiation and maneuver. There was no chance whatever of retaining Lance as national chairman once Donilon made his report.

Making Lance "general chairman" of the campaign and leaving the party chairmanship temporarily vacant removed any danger of losing the nomination, but the trouble was not over. More than 30 major financial contributors warned they would renege on previous financial commitments for the fall campaign if Manatt were not there. Mondale insiders feared the number of such financial contributors would rise steadily unless Manatt was kept on as national chairman.

The rebellious money men had been enlisted by Manatt during his four years as national chairman, and some Mondale insiders were certain Manatt had mobilized them to keep him in power. Breakfasting with newsmen this week, Manatt denied that he had asked any of the contributors to threaten to withhold their support.

Manatt was candid, however, in admitting that the power play against Mondale was formed by business and labor auxiliary "councils" he had established. He also admitted that he had urged Mondale operatives James Johnson and Michael Berman to reverse themselves.

The unique phenomenon of the national chairman staring down the party nominee showed how tenuous is Mondale's hold over the convention and the party machinery.

Twisting The Meaning Of A Word

WASHINGTON — The most troubling case of the Supreme Court's recent term did not arise in Tennessee, Iowa or Massachusetts. It arose in Hawaii, where the high court twisted the meaning of "public use" beyond recognition.

It is astonishing that so little attention has been paid to the Hawaii case. Most commentators have concentrated on the court's holding in the matter of the Memphis firefighters; observers have dwelled upon the admissibility of evidence in a Boston murder trial; they have debated the Miranda rule as it applied to the statement of a murderer being taken from Davenport to Des Moines. All these are interesting cases.

But the court's opinion of May 30 in Hawaii Housing Authority v. Midkiff carried ominous implications for the sanctity of private property. First the facts: From the time Polynesian immigrants settled in the Hawaiian Islands, land historically has been held in relatively few hands. First the tribal chiefs held title; then the Hawaiian monarchs held title. At the time Hawaii became a state in 1959, the state and federal governments owned 49 percent of the land and 72 private owners held 47 percent.

This concentration of ownership, or oligopoly, was even more intense than those figures would indicate. Eighteen of the 72 private owners actually held 40 percent of the land. On Oahu, 22 private citizens owned 72.5 percent of the land. Over the years a practice had developed by which the owners leased tracts for residential and commercial construction. Tenants owned their houses but they leased their land. In 1967, Hawaii's legislature concluded this was a bad thing — that the oligopoly skewed the market in real property, inflated prices and "injured the public tranquility and welfare."

Thus emerged the state's Land Reform Act of 1967. The law authorizes the state's housing authority to condemn individual parcels of privately held land and to transfer title directly to the tenants at a price determined either by arbitration or by negotiation. If a lessee does not want to buy his lot, the authority may lease the lot or sell it to someone else.

When the 1967 act was challenged in federal courts last year, the 9th U.S. Court of Appeals held the law unconstitutional. Said the Circuit Court: The act constitutes "a naked attempt on the part of the state of Hawaii to take the private property of A and transfer it to B solely for B's private use and benefit." The 9th Circuit was exactly right.

The Constitution says flatly, in language too clear to require much interpretation, that private property can be taken by the government only for "public use." This is the power of eminent domain. It is exercised constantly for the construction of highways, schools, public parks and public buildings — that is, for things that actually are "used" by the "public."

Only once before, in a 1954 case involving slum clearance in the District of Columbia, has the Supreme Court authorized the taking of land from Owner A to be transferred to Owner B. In that case, a plausible rationale could be constructed in the name of public health and public safety. Justice Douglas, speaking for the court, dwelled upon such considerations as sanitation and physical attractiveness.

No such considerations were present in Hawaii. The legislators simply decided that it was morally wrong for so few to own so much. Ironically, the effect of the particular case decided by the Supreme Court will be to hurt a trust established for the education of Hawaiian children. But the Constitution does not sanction such legislative decisions. The ownership of private property is a right that dates from Magna Carta. It is a precious right — precious to both rich and poor — and it ought to be jealously guarded.

If the Supreme Court's opinion were confined solely to the facts of the Hawaiian situation, perhaps no great damage could be seen. But the broad construction placed upon "public use" raised grave questions for the future. "Government does not itself have to use property to legitimate the taking; it is only the taking's purpose, and not its mechanics, that must pass scrutiny under the Public Use Clause."

What other scarce resources may be confiscated from A and sold to B in the name of "public tranquility"? That question is certain to arise one of these days, and the Hawaiian precedent will come back to haunt us.

Strength For Today

In 17th century Britain, when war had bitterly divided the people, there was built the chapel of Staunton Harold in Leicestershire. The dedication inscription reads: "In the year 1653 when all things throughout ye nation were either demolisht or profaned, Sir Robert Shirley, Barronet, founded this church: whose singular praise it is to have done the best of things in ye worst of times and hoped them in the most callamitous."

The Apostle Paul, writing to the Romans, declared:

"Tribulation worketh steadfastness; and steadfastness approvedness; and approvedness hope; and hope putteth not to shame; because the love of God has shed abroad in our hearts."

Sir Robert Shirley was like the great apostle — in the worst times he attempted to do the best of things.

The chapel remains to this day a temple to the glory of God and a monument to a man who saw hope in times "the most callamitous."

Power Interrupted

Electric power to the U.S. Post Office on Second Street, Wachovia Bank's main office on Washington Street, and The Daily Reflector on Cotanche Street was interrupted for a time when a transformer at the Post Office failed Wednesday night.

Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne said power was interrupted when an underground transformer serving the post office "blew up ... knocking out the circuit," about 8:30 p.m.

He said the damaged transformer was replaced with a temporary transformer which was put in service about 11:30 p.m.

Man Charged

Greenville police Wednesday arrested Mitchell Dean Wooten, 19, of Greenville on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a 1:50 a.m. incident at the Ringgold Towers construction site at the intersection of Seventh and Cotanche streets.

Officers said East Carolina University police saw a man run from the construction site and apprehended him. Police said the intruder was in the process of removing between 25 and 35 pounds of copper wire, valued at $35, from the construction site.

Purse Taken

Police are investigating the theft of $35 from a car parked at Guy Smith Stadium on Chestnut Street which was reported about 10:32 p.m. Wednesday, according to officer F.T. Alston.

Alston said the cash was in a purse taken from a car owned by Gail Parker Blair of Route 1, Farmville.

The purse and an overnight bag also taken from the car were recovered nearby.

Council Donation

The Farmville Community Arts Council has received a pledge of $10,000 from Branch Bank and Trust

Co. to be used on the renovation of the old Paramount Theater building as a community cultural arts center.

Dr. Dan Heizer, chairman of the theater committee of the Arts Council, said, $75,000 is needed to construct a 2,400-square-foot two-story addition to the building to house dressing rooms, rest rooms and property storage space. "Renewed fund-raising efforts will begin soon," he said. "BB&T's contribution gives us a good start," he said.

The building was donated by the J.I. Morgan family in 1980. Approximately $20,000 was spent on painting, upholstering seats, installing a new stage floor, and replacing carpeting, and heating and air conditioning units. Much of the labor and material was donated by local firms. The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation made a donation on the project.

The theft was reported at 2:55 p.m.

Fund-Raisers

The Voices of Zion of York Memorial Church will sponsor a series of weekend fund-raising activities beginning Saturday at noon. A fish and fried crab platter will be sold at Music Unlimited Studios at $1.50 each. On Sunday at 5 p.m. Johnny Wooten will present a concert of gospel music, accompanied by students of the Gospel Workshop of Music Unlimited Studios.

Summer Festival Opens Friday

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Entertainers from Greenville are among area performers to be appearing in the three-day Summer Festival opening Friday and continuing through Saturday and Sunday in Washington.

Most of the activities will be held at the Steward Parkway in downtown Washington on the Pamlico River. All events are free except for the fish fry and the sale of refreshments.

The first Greenville troupe to perform will be the Washington and Greenville Baton Corps presented by Janet Cox featuring soloist LeAnne Jones. They will be on stage from 5 to 6 p.m. Saturday.

The two other Greenville performing groups and an individual will appear on Sunday — the Double Paradox, four doctors singing in a barbershop quartet from 2 to 2:15 p.m.; Phillip Evancho, bass baritone and artist in residence at Pitt Community College from 2:15 to 2:30 p.m., and Class'n Action, a ladies barbershop group from 2:30 to 2:45 p.m.

The Greenville entertainers are only part of a large line-up of varied stage entertainers slated for the festival on Saturday and Sunday.

The Saturday list includes classical pianist Daniel Foster of Belhaven, a student at the N. C. School of the Arts; the Belhaven Break Dancers; guitarist and folk music singer Linda Carver; contemporary composer and ballet dancer Phil Foreman; Terry Gray's Bluegrass Band; Dr. Wilbur Ormond, instructor at Beaufort County Community College who plays a variety of instruments; and the Tar River Twirler Square Dancers of New Bern and Ayden.

Among performers scheduled for Sunday are the Faith Gospel Singers; pianist Penny McCreary; and vocalist Carla Mitchell of Washington.

In addition to these entertainers, the Washington Summer Festival is featuring a wide array of activities.

The opening ceremony is to take place from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Friday with a concert by the Washington Community Band at Stewart Parkway. During this period, there will also be a dedication by Lindsay Warren of Washington's Historic Walking Tour; cannon firing initiating the festival; and the arrival of the Coast Guard cutter "Point Brown," which will be on hand all three days. The Tommy Campbell Big Band Dance will begin at 8 p.m. Friday.

Saturday's calendar includes morning and afternoon festivities of a race and tot run, a 1910 band organ carousel, a magic show, bike tours, lectures, children's story hours, canoe and shell races, Shriner's animated animals, fishing contest, power lifting, a pro-cup tennis match, an arts and crafts show, and an appearance of cast members of the Blackbeard drama from Bath.

Seven Charged In Boston Arson

BOSTON (AP) — Seven men charged with setting 163 fires, in part to halt fire and police department layoffs following a tax cut, caused $22 million in damage and 282 injuries in "the largest arson case in history," authorities said.

An 83-count federal indictment issued Wednesday alleges that the seven, including two firefighters and two housing policemen, began setting fires in trash cans to frighten residents, but later targeted commercial and residential buildings when the smaller blazes failed to attract enough attention.

By the summer of 1982, suspicious fires were so frequent in Boston and surrounding towns that the city became known as the "arson capital of the world," said U.S. Attorney William Weld. Many of the fires broke out on Fridays, and in one four-day period, firefighters answered 131 alarms.

Firefighters said they were stunned by the indictments.

"These guys were sick puppies," said Boston Fire Capt. Matthew Corbett. "Trying to understand their reason for doing this is impossible. They weren't helping firefighters — they were endangering firefighters' lives."

The indictment said the fires were set mostly to force the city to rehire police and firefighters laid off after the state's Proposition 2½, a wide-ranging tax cut aimed at reducing the public payroll, went into effect in July 1981.

"The Proposition 2½ motive was to dramatize the need for more firefighters," Weld said.

However, some fires were set for profit or revenge, and some of the suspects worked for companies that stood to gain insurance money, he said.

Weld said the fires, set between Feb. 19, 1982, and April 27, 1983, caused $22 million worth of damage and injured 282 people, including 65 firefighters. Four people suffered permanent injuries, he said.

The most costly fire was a $13 million blaze at the Spero Toy Co. in South Boston on June 3, 1982, that injured 31 firefighters.

The buildings burned included homes, restaurants, factories, churches, a Marine Corps barracks and the Massachusetts Fire Academy. The men eventually began setting fires outside the city, in five eastern Massachusetts counties, to confuse investigators and avoid being apprehended, the indictment said.

"This is the largest arson case in history, both state and federally, in terms of the number of fires," Weld said.

Stephen E. Higgins, director of the U.S. attorney's Arson Task Force, said more arrests are expected. "People are on the streets still, and this is not the termination of the investigation," he said.

Fireman Manny DeGregorio, 45, who was injured and off the job for a year after an October 1982 fire allegedly set by the men, said he was angry. He has returned to duty, but in a desk job.

"I loved my job, and they took it away," he said.

The indictment alleged the men prowled the streets late at night to find suitable arson targets, using homemade devices fashioned from a cigarette and matchbook fuse.

The arrests Wednesday culminated a two-year investigation by state, federal and local authorities. The charges, which stem from fires reported between Feb. 19, 1982, and April 27, 1983, include conspiracy, arson of interstate facilities, arson of federal buildings, manufacture and possession of unregistered incendiary devices, obstruction of justice, mailing threatening communications and perjury.

White House Studies Religious Meeting Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring President Reagan is "heartened by passage" of legislation allowing student religious meetings in public schools, a White House spokesman says unrelated provisions in the bill must be reviewed before Reagan will sign it.

The religious meeting provisions received final congressional approval Wednesday in a 337-77 House vote, which reversed the chamber's defeat of a similar measure just two months ago.

But the White House review is needed because the measure passed as an amendment to legislation that would provide almost $1 billion over two years to strengthen the teaching of math and science in the schools. The overall bill passed 393-15.

"We certainly are heartened by passage of the equal access bill that the president expressed his strong support for (at his news conference) Tuesday night," said deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. "But because it is attached to another bill we'll have to look at the whole package before making a final judgment."

"Math-science has about a billion dollars attached to it. We've got to consider everything in there."

The Senate had passed the school meetings legislation a month ago by an 88-11 vote. The final version there, sponsored by Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., contained enough modifications to convince dozens of House members to change their votes after opposing the original House version defeated last May.

Denton said he asked supporting groups to lobby House members and "called at least a dozen" himself. The senator added "we really sweated blood" in carefully drafting the bill.

Only 5 Republicans and 72 Democrats voted against the school meetings amendment, compared to 181 Democrats and 156 Republicans who backed it. The House used the same rule, requiring a two-thirds passage, as it did in May when the vote was 270-151 for the bill — 11 votes short of the needed majority.

The advantage of the rule is that it prohibits amendments, which could be used to kill a bill with delays. Opponents had hundreds of amendments ready Wednesday, had they been allowed to offer them.

After losing that tactic, the only weapon opponents had left were the same arguments they used against the measure last time — warnings that bizarre cults would be allowed in schools, that the constitutional separation of church and state would be violated, and that school officials would have to decide what is a legitimate religion.

In one of the most recent cases, the Supreme Court in December 1981 left intact a federal appeals court ruling involving Guiderland High School near Albany, N.Y. Students there sought to hold prayer meetings in an unused classroom before school.

Quarters Taken

JEFFERSON, La. (AP) — The employee in charge of counting coins from his company's vending machines, video games and other coin-operated equipment has been charged with stealing about $20,000 in quarters, Jefferson Parish authorities said.

Richard Matthews, 31, of Slidell, collection manager for ARA Services, was booked Monday for theft, said Lt. Bob Garner, a sheriff's spokesman.

Matthews apparently spent about half the money he took over the past two years, and the rest was recovered from a locker in Mandeville, Garner said.

All coins collected from the ARA machines leased to various businesses went to Matthews, who counted it and made sure the lessees got their share of the money, Garner said.

But Matthews "skimmed off the top" of ARA's share, pocketing small amounts of quarters that eventually added up to nearly $20,000, he said.

Employees grew suspicious because Matthews' "lifestyle was not compatible with his known income," and sheriff's investigators were called in, Garner said.

Detectives checked Matthews' locker at ABC Mini-Storage in Mandeville on Monday and found more than $10,000 worth of quarters — in 10 sacks weighing about 65 pounds each, he said.

Authorities believe the money was taken over the past two years because ARA employees are required to take polygraph tests every couple of years and Matthews, who had no prior arrests, passed his in 1982, Garner said.

Blast Kills 15

ROME, Ill. (AP) — A survivor of an oil refinery blast said he watched a crack develop in a 100-foot-tall propane tower just before the structure exploded, killing 15 people and leaving two others missing in the ensuing inferno.

Wayne Kielma, 36, said Wednesday that he was making a routine hourly check of the tower Monday afternoon at the Union Oil Co. refinery when he noticed vapor coming from a hairline crack near a welded seam.

After he was unable to shut off a pressure valve with the help of several other workers, Kielma said he radioed for Union Oil firefighters.

"We watched the crack getting larger and larger," Kielma said from his bed at Good Samaritan Hospital in Downers Grove, where he was in good condition with second- and third-degree burns.

Kielma said he ran about 100 feet toward a control center to request that the tower be shut off when an explosion knocked him down. He said he then crawled behind a 4-foot-thick concrete pump base for protection.

Union Oil spokesman Wayne Reuter said Wednesday night that investigators probing the maze of blackened, twisted equipment left by the explosion had not discovered what caused the blast.

"I'm not aware of that (the cracked tank) at this time," Reuter said. "It's too soon for them to determine anything."

U.S. Eases Ban On Soviet Fishing Fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet fishermen will be free to fish in American waters for the first time since President Carter imposed a ban to punish Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, the State Department says.

President Reagan decided to ease the ban even though Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan and fighting continues. The decision, announced by the State Department Wednesday, has the twofold purpose of benefiting American fishermen and encouraging improved relations with Moscow.

But Oleg Sokolov, the second-ranking diplomat at the Soviet Embassy here, told reporters upon leaving the State Department where he was informed of the decision that it was "nothing special."

Soviet fishermen will be able to catch up to 50,000 tons of fish in an area of the Pacific Ocean from central California to the Bering Sea. That amounts to only a fraction of the 400,000 to 500,000 tons that Moscow was harvesting prior to the invasion of Afghanistan.

Easing the fishing ban is the second major Carter-imposed sanction — aimed at punishing Moscow for its invasion of Afghanistan — that Reagan has changed. Soon after taking office in 1981, he lifted a ban on U.S. grain sales to Moscow, citing benefits to American farmers.

Other sanctions, stemming both from the invasion of Afghanistan and the Soviet role in the 1981 imposition of martial law in Poland, remain in effect. They include suspension of all Soviet airline service, suspended talks on a joint maritime agreement, and licensing requirements for certain categories of oil and gas equipment and other technology.

In another move apparently intended to signal a desire for improved relations with Moscow, White House officials disclosed Wednesday that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will be welcome to travel to the United States in a Soviet aircraft for the U.N. General Assembly in New York this fall and that Secretary of State George P. Shultz hopes to meet with him.

The State Department said easing of the fishing ban "will provide greater employment opportunities and other benefits for U.S. fishermen," including the expansion of joint U.S.-Soviet fishing ventures.

Since 1976, the Soviet Union has jointly operated a Seattle, Wash., fish processing plant, Marine Resources Co., with American commercial interests. The plant annually processes 160,000 metric tons of U.S.-caught fish valued at $30 million.

Although Moscow has been prohibited from fishing in U.S. waters, it has been able to buy fish from American fishermen to process in the plant. The easing of the fishing ban means an additional $8 million in earnings for participating U.S. fishermen, the State Department said.

The administration said its decision to ease the ban "is governed by our desire to promote the U.S. fishing industry." In addition to more earnings, it will give American fishermen an opportunity "to benefit from Soviet technology and expertise in fishing."

U.S.-Soviet relations, while still tense, have shown signs of improving in recent weeks, and the announcement said the easing of the ban was partly aimed at "promoting a constructive dialogue with the Soviet Union and facilitating non-strategic trade exchanges."

Soviet fishing vessels will be permitted within three miles of the U.S. coast but have been barred from waters near the Strait of Juan de Fuca because of concern over Trident submarine security.

By law, the only fish the Soviets can take inside the U.S. 200-mile economic zone are those not being fully harvested by U.S. fishermen.

Soviet takes will be limited to 40,000 tons off Alaska, mainly of pollock and yellowfin sole, and 10,000 tons off Washington, Oregon and northern California, mainly of hake.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reported today that the administration also has decided to lift some sanctions against Poland as a response to the announcement last week of amnesty for political prisoners.

Citing unidentified administration sources, the Post said the action will include restoring permission for the Polish national airline to make scheduled U.S. flights and resumption of scientific and cultural exchanges. Other sanctions could be removed later if there is evidence Poland is releasing nearly all political prisoners, according to the report. The newspaper said announcement of the action is to come next week from Reagan's home in California.

Castro May Signal His Intentions For U.S. In Anniversary Speech

CIENFUEGOS, Cuba (AP) — Cuba marks the 31st anniversary of the start of Fidel Castro's revolution with nationwide celebrations today and a speech by Castro tonight that may indicate whether he wants better relations with the United States.

The annual 26th of July holiday commemorates the Castro-led rebel attack on an army barracks. The attack failed and Castro was exiled to Mexico, but it established Castro as leader of the opposition to rightist dictator Fulgencio Batista, who was overthrown 5½ years later.

Castro normally delivers a "state of the union" speech on the holiday. In last year's address, he made one of his sharpest attacks on the United States and called President Reagan "the most brutal and sinister" U.S. leader since he took power in January 1959.

John Ferch, head of the U.S. Interests Section in Havana, walked out during the personal attack on Reagan in last year's speech.

But this year's speech — scheduled for this evening — comes just a month after Castro received the Rev. Jesse Jackson on a visit and freed 26 Cuban political prisoners and 22 jailed Americans to go back to the United States with the presidential candidate.

During Jackson's visit, Castro expressed his desire to exchange ambassadors and have high-level talks with the United States.

Two weeks ago, Cuban and State Department negotiators met for three days in New York in the first round of talks on the thorny issue of resumption of Cuban emigration to the United States and the proposed return to Cuba of some 1,000 hardcore criminals sent in the 1980 boatlift. That exodus added 124,789 Cubans to some 1 million who have left Castro's Cuba.

Cuban officials have used the word "signals" in explaining Castro's apparent conciliatory tone. The rout of 750 Cubans from Grenada last Oct. 25 in a U.S.-led invasion after a coup angered Castro, but also raised new fears in Cuba that Reagan might use military force against Cuba itself.

Although Cuba has close ties to the Soviet Union and there are some 10,000 Soviets here, including a 2,500-strong combat brigade, Moscow has never publicly promised to defend Cuba against U.S. attack.

Castro also would want to improve U.S. relations in hope that the trade embargo imposed by President Kennedy in the early 1960s would be lifted. Cut off from the Western Hemisphere's biggest market, Cuba's floundering economy has become increasingly dependent upon Soviet aid, which totals about $4 billion yearly.

Renewed emigration to the United States also would give Cuba's government a release for pressure building up from unemployed youth and discontented people anxious to join relatives in exile.

West Germany Guarantees Loan

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government says it will guarantee a $320 million bank loan to East Germany, which is expected to reciprocate by letting more of its citizens visit the West.

Philipp Jenninger, a minister of state in the chancellery, told a news conference Wednesday that East Germany has agreed to take measures "that we could only dream of years ago."

The Bonn Cabinet voted to approve the loan earlier in the day, Jenninger said.

Lending the money to the Communist country is a consortium of banks led by the Luxembourg subsidiary of West Germany's Deutsche Bank, Jenninger said.

The West German government did not stipulate how the loan was to be used.

It was the second-such big bank loan backed by Bonn without attaching strings. A year ago, after Bonn guaranteed a loan worth about $350 million to East Germany, the East began dismantling automatic guns along its border with the West and allowing thousands more of its citizens to emigrate.

In the case of both loans, the West German government has said it expects East Germany to respond with humanitarian measures. But Jenninger denied that the latest loan was contingent on humanitarian moves.

He said East Germany was expected to announce on Aug. 1 these measures:

—Reducing from $8.77 to $5.26 the amount of East German currency that retired Westerners must buy daily during visits to East Germany.

—Allowing a West German to spend as long as 45 days in the East each year. The current limit is 30 days.

—Doubling the maximum time a retired East German can spend on a visit to West Germany, from 30 to 60 days.

—Allowing retired East Germans to travel to West Germany to visit friends, instead of requiring that they have relatives to visit in the West.

—Being more "generous" in allowing Western literature into East Germany.

Jenninger said Bonn will continue to push for more progress in inter-German relations "without trying to cover up the principal differences between the systems."

Jenninger, who led Bonn's negotiations with East Berlin in recent weeks, said he expects East German President Erich Honecker to visit West Germany this fall.

Men's Earnings Double Those For Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Average earnings for men are double the figures for women, according to newly released census statistics.

For all workers over age 18, men averaged $16,929 while women earned $8,238, according to the data collected in the 1980 census.

Highest salaries go to white males between the ages of 45 and 54 with postgraduate college degrees. The detailed compilation of salaries paid in 1979 lists annual earnings of $36,520 for white males between 45 and 54 with five years or more of college.

White women of the same age and education averaged $15,637. Peak salaries for white women occurred in the 55-to-64 age group, at $16,118.

Peak salaries for blacks, in the same age and educational groups as the highest-paid white males, were $25,801 for men and $17,242 for women.

Average salaries vary considerably in the study, according to education, race, gender and age.

Men with less than eight years of schooling averaged $12,028, while women in that category earned $6,159. With a high school diploma, male earnings rose to $15,368 and women's to $7,749. And with a postgraduate college degree men averaged $27,660 and women $13,471.

Work experience also increased income.

Pay for men aged 25 to 34 averaged $15,584, and for women $8,901. But by the peak age of 45 to 54 it was $23,013 for men and $9,356 for women.

White workers averaged $17,609 for men and $8,263 for women aged 18 and over, the highest income category by race.

Second were Asians, with income of $16,958 for men and $9,573 for women. American Indians ranked third at $12,634 for men and $7,315 for women, followed by Hispanics at $12,356 for men and $7,250 for women.

Black men had the lowest average income at $11,768, but black women averaged $8,113, ahead of American Indian and Hispanic women.

Fed To Let Money Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's central bank, which has been spooking the financial markets for months, finally has done something Wall Street could cheer about.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, making his mid-year trip to Capitol Hill, let it be known Wednesday that the Fed won't tighten up on the money supply for the rest of the year and would only tighten slightly next year.

The news was greeted with sighs of relief on Wall Street, which has been gripped with fears that the Fed would move to restrain an economy that has shown surprising strength all year long.

Such an action on the Fed's part would have sent interest rates, already at high levels, even higher as the central bank clamped down on the supply of money available in the economy.

But Volcker, who was due to return for more congressional questioning today, said the bank planned to hold steady on its current course for the rest of 1984.

Following the announcement, the bond market in New York rallied in active trading, sending yields on 30-year Treasury bonds below 13 percent for the first time in nearly three months.

The good news in the bond market spread to Wall Street where the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted its best daily gain in more than two weeks.

Analysts predicted Volcker's announcement could stabilize interest rates, at least for a short time.

David Wyss, chief financial economist at Data Resources Inc., predicted "stable to slightly downward interest rates" in coming months. He said while Volcker revealed a policy of "gradual tightening" it was not "as tight as had been expected."

Kathleen Cooper, economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, said interest rates were likely to hold steady in the near future, but she predicted they would resume their upward climb as the pressure of the recovery heats up the economy.

Volcker on Wednesday warned against looming federal budget deficits which he said threatened a "relapse into inflationary economic malaise." He said Congress must do more to reduce deficits than the "down payment" made so far.

"The hard fact is, as I am sure the Congress is fully aware, the deficit remains huge ... and absent further action little or no further decline now seems probable for 1985 and beyond, even assuming the economy continues to move to full employment levels," he said.

Volcker denied assertions by critics that the Fed is to blame for high interest rates by its tight-money policies aimed at keeping a check on inflation. He said there was no evidence "the economy has been starved for money and credit."

In its own forecast for economic activity over the next 18 months, the central bank predicted this year's rapid growth for the rest of the year and planned to tighten just a bit next year.

The Fed forecast the gross national product, after adjusting for inflation, would rise by 6.25 percent to 6.75 percent this year, dropping to between 3 percent and 3.25 percent in 1985.

Interest Rates Likely To Stabilize

By The Associated Press

Interest rates will likely stabilize over the next few months, analysts said after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told Congress that the central bank won't tighten its grip on the money supply until 1985.

The financial markets had feared more tightening by the Fed, but now interest rates might even decline slightly, the analysts said Wednesday.

Following Volcker's announcement, the dollar, which has been soaring to record heights against other major currencies, declined somewhat, reflecting the belief that U.S. interest rates are not in for continued increases.

And the stock market, which had declined on fears of higher interest rates, turned around.

The Dow Jones industrial average jumped 10.38 to 1,096.95, erasing the 10.05-point loss on Tuesday that knocked it down to a 17-month low. It also was the measure's best daily gain since it rose 11.48 on July 9.

David Wyss, chief financial economist at Data Resources Inc., predicted "stable to slightly downward interest rates" over the coming months.

Kathleen Cooper, economist at Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, agreed that interest rates should stabilize briefly because of the Fed announcement, but she predicted there would be renewed pressure on the central bank for higher rates later in the year as the economy continues to grow.

As part of its mid-year assessment of economic trends, the Fed predicted that economic growth would turn sharply lower next year, while inflation — which has been lower than expected — would pick up.

Volcker, lobbying for further action on federal budget deficits, said the choice was between "sustained growth in a framework of greater stability or a relapse into inflationary economic malaise."

"The hard fact is, as I am sure the Congress is fully aware, the deficit remains huge ... and absent further action, little or no further decline now seems probable for 1985 and beyond, even assuming the economy continues to move to full employment levels," Volcker said in testimony before the Senate Banking Committee.

The Treasury Department reported Wednesday that the government outspent its revenues by $2 billion in June, a sizable shrinkage from the red ink of the previous month.

Although the monthly deficit was smaller last month than in May, the deficit for the first nine months of this fiscal year was a near-record $142.2 billion.

The June deficit followed a $33.9 billion deficit in May — a record flood of red ink for a single month.

Volcker's comment contrasted with President Reagan's assertion Tuesday night that the recovery would provide strong revenue gains to help whittle down the deficits. Reagan said he had "no plans" to seek tax increases next year, preferring to rely on further budget cuts to reduce the deficit.

In other economic news Wednesday:

—A government rescue package for ailing Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. will provide a "firm base for a healthy but considerably smaller bank" and should be unveiled "very soon," Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee. Government regulators, including the Fed, have been negotiating with Continental officials on a reported $4.5 billion bailout that would be the largest ever for a bank.

—Texaco Inc. reported a 7.6 percent earnings slide in the second quarter, blaming the cost of its $10.1 billion purchase of Getty Oil Co., while Mesa Petroleum Co., which lost a bidding war for Gulf Corp., reported that its earnings soared more than 12 times from a year earlier. Other oil companies reporting April-June earnings included Shell Oil Co., up 7.1 percent; Phillips Petroleum Co., up 36.7 percent; Sun Co., up 1.5 percent; and Tenneco Inc., up 7.3 percent.

Thousands Line Up For 60 Jobs

EAST PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Some lost their Caterpillar Tractor Co. jobs five years ago and have not worked since. Some said they needed better-paying or second jobs. But all of them — nearly 2,000 people — lined up to apply for about 60 part-time jobs at a new grocery store.

Those who filled out applications this week hoped to get past a screening conducted by the Illinois Job Service and into an interview with a Kroger Co. official.

"If they want me to be a bag-boy, then I'll be a bag-boy — and like it," one former Caterpillar engine repairman said while standing in line. "But we're talking about a job, man. You have no idea how important a job is unless you haven't had one for a few years."

Caterpillar employed nearly 35,000 area residents in mid-1979, but now has about 20,000 workers at its downtown Peoria headquarters and five area plants, a spokesman said.

"It was quite a mob," James Robinson of the state Job Service said Wednesday of the Kroger applicants.

A senior, full-time Kroger clerk in the Peoria area earns about $8.70 an hour, under a renegotiated contract ratified 10 days ago by union workers. The pact offered a 14 percent wage cut and other benefit concessions in return for a pledge by Kroger to keep stores open at least another year.

Skin Test Points To Mental Illness

Study Indicates Some Natural Foods May Promote Cavities

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Granola, bananas and raisins may be considered natural foods with generous amounts of nutrition, but researchers say they are also at the top of the list of snacks that can cause cavities.

Researchers at the Eastman Dental Center announced their findings after feeding rats snack foods for the past 2½ years, according to today's editions of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

The study found what is common knowledge — that some snacks cause more tooth decay than others. But the surprises came when snacks were rated according to cavity-causing potential.

Granola, bananas and raisins placed high on the cavity-causing list, said John Featherstone, chairman of the oral biology department at the center. Corn chips, yogurt, gelatin and peanuts did less damage, and some contain fluoride and appear to actually help prevent cavities.

Featherstone and Sheila Mundorff, a research associate at the center, fed rats 17 different snack foods during the project, paid for by a $250,000 grant from the National Institute for Dental Research.

Tooth decay occurs when bacteria in the mouth digest carbohydrates. The process produces acid that eats away at the tooth surfaces. Saliva helps counteract decay by neutralizing the acid and by providing minerals that help rebuild the teeth.

During the study, rats were fed with automatic machines that ensured they took from 12 to 17 snacks a day.

For the most part, the study confirmed information that researchers

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors may someday be able to spot children who are likely to suffer manic-depressive illness later in life by administering a skin test that detects a biological abnormality, says a study released today.

The abnormality, a heightened sensitivity to an ordinary body chemical, is common among people with this form of mental illness, scientists have determined.

Clinical depression and manic-depressive illness are inherited, and scientists have long believed that they result from some biological imbalance in the brain.

It's still not clear whether the newly discovered peculiarity, reported in today's New England Journal of Medicine, actually contributes to the disease. But the researchers speculate that it may be "a factor contributing to vulnerability in a substantial proportion of patients..." with the two problems.

Even if it is not part of the cause, however, they say it could serve as a genetic marker, or warning sign, of trouble to come among otherwise healthy people.

"As a marker, it might be applicable to screening young children in whom the illness cannot be diagnosed prior to its onset, such as the offspring of bipolar (manic-depressive) parents who are at risk of developing the disease," Dr. N. Suzan Nadi said in an interview.

About 1 percent of all Americans suffer from manic-depressive illness and have alternating periods of elation and intense sadness. Depression — a medical term for a severe depressive illness — is more common and may afflict about 15 percent of the population at some time during their lives.

Ms. Nadi's study, conducted at the National Institutes of Mental Health, found that these people appear to be overly sensitive to acetylcholine, a chemical that plays a variety of roles in the body and carries messages in the brain.

Researchers studied 17 people with manic-depressive disease and one with depression alone. They took skin samples and measured the number of cholinergic receptors — chemical hitching posts on the cells that receive acetylcholine.

Victims of the mental illnesses had far more of these receptors than did their healthy relatives or other normal people.

In the brain, acetylcholine is one of many chemicals that shuttle signals between nerve cells. Experts theorized more than a decade ago that depression was linked with heightened acetylcholine activity.

Even if oversensitivity to acetylcholine proves to be a key defect in manic-depressive illness, it's unlikely that this will completely explain the disease. For instance, it's still not clear why the disease comes and goes.

"This marker appears to be there regardless of the state of the illness," said Ms. Nadi. "So there may be a secondary and as yet unknown abnormality that switches on and off and causes the different states of the illness that appear."

She said researchers are now following children of manic-depressives to see if the skin test accurately predicts which ones will develop the disorder.

Early Treatment Needed For Heart Attacks

BOSTON (AP) — Most heart attack victims don't get to the hospital soon enough, and a drug commonly used to prevent recurring attacks can't reduce damage if a patient waits more than four hours before seeking treatment, a study says.

Most victims don't get to a hospital until at least eight hours after an attack, often because they confuse heart attack symptoms with indigestion, said Dr. James E. Muller of Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"The important message is that if you're going to get therapy for your heart attack, get to the hospital quickly," said Muller, a member of a study group commissioned by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute.

In a six-year project, Muller's group studied whether administering drugs called beta blockers as soon as a heart attack victim reached the hospital would reduce the damage from the attack. The results were published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Beta blockers, prescribed for millions of Americans who suffer angina pains and high blood pressure, are used to prevent recurring heart attacks in the years after people survive one.

The medicine works by slowing the heartbeat and thus reducing the heart's need for blood and oxygen. During a heart attack, the supply of blood to the heart is blocked and some of the heart muscle dies.

In the study, 269 patients received either a beta blocker known as propranolol or an inactive placebo between four and 18 hours after the start of their attacks.

Another study has shown a similar beta blocker, timolol, to be effective when used at least three hours after an attack.

But propranolol won't help improve the patient's chances of surviving a heart attack unless used quickly after an attack, Muller said. People who took propranolol and those who received placebos suffered identical amounts of heart damage during their attacks.

Still, propranolol can improve patients' chances of avoiding future heart attacks.

Dr. Robert Roberts, of Methodist Hospital in Houston and a senior member of the study group, said heart attack therapy will now be studied in a new light.

He said future medical solutions will focus on dissolving the clot that blocks the blood's path to and from the heart, instead of slowing the heartbeat with the beta blockers.

Roberts said the therapeutic limitations of propranolol do not conflict with other studies that demonstrate the effectiveness of the drug in preventing future heart attacks when used several weeks after the first seizure.

Gene Mutations Found In Blood

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Researchers have identified some 30 genetic mutations responsible for a blood disease common in Greeks, Italians and American blacks, enabling doctors for the first time to diagnose the disease in unborn children, an expert says.

The illness, known as beta thalassemia or Cooley's anemia, is an inherited disorder which, in its most severe form, can make its victims dependent on monthly blood transfusions and ultimately result in death by age 25.

The disease is marked by a shortage of effective hemoglobin, the substance that transports oxygen through the blood. Patients become jaundiced and may suffer leg ulcers and enlarged spleens.

Until recently, diagnosis of beta thalassemia before birth had been impossible, one of the discoverers of the genetic mutations, Dr. Stylianos Antonarakis of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, said Wednesday.

But now the illness can be identified through amniocentesis, a standard procedure in which a sample of the amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus is tested for evidence of birth defects, Antonarakis told a press conference at Bar Harbor's Jackson Laboratory in conjunction with its annual course on genetics.

Some 8 percent of Greeks and Italians and 1.5 percent of U.S. blacks are carriers of the disease. Of every four children born to a carrier, one will have the disease and two will themselves be carriers, Antonarakis said.

The name thalassemia is based on the Greek word for sea, because the disease was originally observed in people of Mediterranean stock.

Antonarakis and his colleagues, including Haig Kazazian of Johns Hopkins and Stuart Orkin of Harvard Medical School, found that each population group affected with beta thalassemia has unique mutations.

The mutations in Greeks, for example, are different from those in American blacks, among whom thalassemia is the most common inherited blood disorder after sickle cell anemia.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly higher today after a blue-chip rally in the previous session broke the market's string of five straight losses.

Auto, drug and airline issues were among the early gainers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 10 points Wednesday, edged up another 0.55 to 1,097.50 in today's opening half-hour. Advances jumped out to a 3-2 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks drew support Wednesday from a rally in the credit markets. Bond prices sharply rose after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker indicated the central bank would not tighten credit further in 1984, perhaps precluding higher interest rates.

But most of Wednesday's upturn in stocks was limited to the blue chips of the Dow Jones industrial average. And analysts said that upturn could be short-lived if the broader market fails to advance as well.

On the NYSE today, Continental Illinois rose 1/4 to 3 1/8 after the federal government announced a $4.5 billion rescue plan for the Chicago bank holding company.

Exxon rose 1/8 to 41 1/2, Boeing fell 1/8 to 43 3/8 and General Motors rose 1/4 to 65 1/8.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average gained 10.38 to 1,096.95.

Gainers were slightly ahead of losers on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.51 to 85.64.

Big Board volume swelled to 90.52 million shares from 74.37 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.37 to 187.16.

Marijuana Found

Members of the Martin County Sheriff's Department have confiscated marijuana plants at and near a Jamesville home estimated to be worth $3,500.

Two persons, Robert Louis Rabb, 37, and Lena Lilley, 32, both of Jamesville, were charged with manufacturing a controlled substance and have been released on a $500 bond. The marijuana was grown at several locations in and around the Rabb residence, officers said, with some plants found growing in buckets.

Prosecutor Seeks Stiff Sentences

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Leniency will only encourage other anti-nuclear weapons protesters to commit civil disobedience, a prosecutor wrote to a judge in asking for stiff sentences for the Pershing Plowshares.

The eight Pershing Plowshares, convicted earlier this month of vandalizing Pershing II nuclear missile components Easter Sunday, were scheduled for sentencing today.

The eight are Per Ingmar Hengren, 22, of Sweden; Anne Montgomery, 57, a Roman Catholic nun from New York; Patrick O'Neill, 28, of Greenville, N.C.; Christine Schmidt, 24, of Baltimore; Timothy Lietzke, 33, of Richmond, Va.; Paul Joseph Magno, 27, of Washington, D.C.; James Perkins, 46, of Baltimore, Md.; and Todd Kaplan, 26, of Washington, D.C.

The group admitted all along to charges stemming from the Easter Sunday break-in during which blood was smeared over some components and hammers were applied to others at the Martin Marietta defense plant here. But, the protesters argued, they were justified because nuclear weapons are against international law and the laws of God.

"Leniency seems to stimulate such activity rather than deter it," Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Turner told U.S. District Judge George Young in a sentencing memorandum filed Tuesday.

Nearly 350 cards, letters and telegrams, most of them sent by Swedes, have been received by the judge's office. The missives ask Young for leniency and point out the dangers of nuclear weapons. Two of the letter opposed the Plowshares' action.

"The defendants claim to be gentle, peace-loving persons opposed to violence," Turner wrote. "Yet, their own actions were violent in nature, purportedly aimed at focusing attention on the destructive power of nuclear weapons."

"But regardless of one's view of the different sides of the issue, society cannot tolerate the willful violation of its laws by those who are not satisfied with the progress of the political debate."

Turner asked Young to give the Plowshares prison terms on a conspiracy count which carries a maximum penalty of five years. He also asked they be given suspended sentences on the property damage charges, which carry a 10-year penalty, and suggested they be placed on probation during that term.

Should group members be arrested again or violate their probation, they could be sent to prison for an additional 10 years, the attorney wrote.

He further suggested that the eight be ordered to make $40,000 in restitution for damage and administrative costs and receive "substantial" fines.

Southern Cal Tabs McGee As New Athletic Director

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike McGee, named athletic director at the University of Southern California Wednesday, expressed confidence that he could help "regenerate the kind of success that has occurred here in the past."

McGee, 45, becomes the fifth athletic director in the history of Southern Cal. He succeeds Richard Perry, who resigned last May, effective July 1, after serving in the position for nine years.

"I am aware that in the last four or five years there has been some slippage in the men's program and some academic problems," McGee said at a news conference on campus. "I am confident in my ability to come here and work successfully."

After winning or contending for national collegiate championships in football, baseball and track and field for decades, Southern Cal's lone success in recent years has been two national titles by its women's basketball team.

And the school's football team has just finished a two-year probation for rule violations in which it was barred from post-season games and television appearances.

McGee served as the athletic director at the University of Cincinnati the past four years. During his tenure there, the school's football team improved from consecutive 2-9 seasons to 16-16-1 over the last three years.

He was a the 13th player taken overall in the National Football League draft of 1960 when selected by the St. Louis Cardinals after graduating from Duke University, where he was a first-team All-American tackle. He won the Outland Trophy in his senior year as the nation's top college lineman.

McGee finished third in the voting for NFL Rookie of the Year in 1960. A serious neck injury ended his professional playing career in 1962.

He entered the football coaching ranks in 1963 as an assistant at Duke. Later, he was an assistant coach at Wisconsin and Minnesota before becoming head coach at East Carolina in 1970.

A year later, he returned to Duke as head coach, where he compiled a 38-47-4 record in eight seasons. His 1975 team lost to Southern Cal 35-7.

He was a commentator for ABC college football telecasts in 1979 and was named athletic director at Cincinnati in May of 1980.

"I had a truly great experience at the University of Cincinnati, an institution from where I have some difficulty in leaving," McGee said. "Although Cincinnati is a Division I school, it does not have the scope of this institution."

"USC is one of the most prestigious schools in the country because of its unique combination of athletic and academic excellence. I welcome the considerable challenge that serving as the director of this institution presents."

Among the candidates for the position of athletic director was Barbara Hedges, the associated athletic director in charge of women's sports at Southern Cal.

Dr. James Zumbege, the school's president, was asked why McGee was chosen over Hedges.

Royals Down Toronto, Indians Surprise Tigers

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays were lookin' forward to goin' to Kansas City. That's before they knew what was comin'.

Darryl Motley cracked an RBI single with one out in the bottom of the 13th inning Wednesday night, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 5-4 triumph over the Blue Jays and a four-game sweep of their series.

"You've got to feel for a club like that, that comes in here thinking its got a chance to win," said Royals Manager Dick Howser.

The Blue Jays went into Kansas City on Monday to wind up their longest road trip of the season. At that point, Toronto was trailing the Detroit Tigers by nine games — close to striking distance — in the American League East.

But Toronto dropped a two-night double-header Monday, then lost by 5-4 scores Tuesday and Wednesday to fall 11½ games off the pace. The Blue Jays wound up their road swing with a 7-8 mark.

"We got them at the end of a long road trip, we're the fourth city they've been in," Howser said. "They were dragging."

In other AL games, Cleveland stopped Detroit 4-1, Boston edged Chicago 3-2 in 12 innings, New York blanked Milwaukee 3-0, Oakland nipped Minnesota 1-0, Baltimore topped Texas 3-1, and California eked past Seattle 1-0 in 10 innings.

Greg Pryor led off the 13th by singling off the glove of third baseman Rance Mulliniks. John Wathan then sacrificed and Motley followed with a single down the right-field line to pin the loss on Bryan Clark, 0-1.

Kansas City had tied it 4-4 in the eighth on George Brett's run-scoring double with two out.

Dan Quisenberry, 4-2, pitched the final two innings for the victory.

Dane Iorg homered for Kansas City and George Bell homered for Toronto.

Angels 1, Mariners 0

Gary Pettis dribbled a single up the middle with two out in the bottom of the 10th inning, driving in

Juan Beniquez from second base with California's winning run.

Beniquez led off the 10th with a single and took second on Bobby Grich's sacrifice before Pettis came through one out later.

Jim Beattie wne the distance the entire way for Seattle and took the hard-luck loss. Beattie, 9-10, had a one-hitter going through eight innings and allowed a total of five hits while striking out 10.

Ron Romanick blanked the visiting Mariners on six hits through nine innings. Luis Sanchez, 7-2, wiggled out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the 10th for the victory.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2

Mike Easler ended the 3 hour, 34-minute contest at Fenway Park by leading off the bottom of the 12th inning with his 20th home run of the season.

Easler's blast to right-center came on a 1-2 pitch from Jerry Don Gleaton, 1-1, who had just entered the game.

The triumph was the fifth straight for Boston. Mark Clear, 6-2, went 2-2-3 innings and struck out five for the victory.

Red Sox starter Al Nipper went 9 1-3 innings and gave up two unearned runs — set up by his own error — and six hits.

Chicago starter Tom Seaver allowed two runs on seven hits through eight innings.

Indians 4, Tigers 1

In Cleveland, rookie Roy Smith and Ernie Camacho teamed on a five-hitter to cool off Detroit, which had won six straight games.

Smith, 4-2, went 7 1-3 innings, yielding five hits. Camacho got the final five outs for his 12th save.

The Tigers had scored in the second on Darrell Evans' 10th homer before Cleveland tied it in the third on Julio Franco's RBI single.

Pat Tabler put Cleveland ahead by leading off the fourth with his fourth homer. Dave Rozema, 7-2, was the loser, his first loss to the Indians in eight lifetime decisions.

Clark's Homer Lifts North State Stars

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Derrick Clark blasted a two-run homer and Walter Gatlin fired a four-hitter to lead the Greenville North State All-Stars over the Tar Heel 6-4 Wednesday in the Little League South Area II baseball playoffs.

Kelvin Yarrell and Park Williams had two hits each, including a solo homer apiece.

Joel Daughtry and Blake Stallings walked after one out in the second to open a rally by the Tar Heels. After a single by Travis Williamson, Daughtry scored on a passed ball. Drew Johnson singled in Stallings for a 2-0 Tar Heel lead.

Yarrell's homer in the bottom of the second trimmed the margin to 2-1.

Chris Christopher's solo homer in the third increased the Tar Heel lead to 3-1, but Williams blast in the bottom of the frame cut the gap to 3-2.

In the fourth, Daughtry walked and scored on a single by Craig Willoughby.

Jamie Brewington reached first on an error and later scored on another error in the bottom of the fourth. Yarrell singled and scored on a single by Williams to knot the score at 4-4.

Clark's homer lifted North State into the Area championship game against Havelock Friday at 5 p.m. in New Bern.

Mets, Cubs Ride Wave Of Success

By The Associated Press

In the last seven years, the New York Mets have finished either last or next to last in the National League East — except for the second half of the split season of 1981, when they came in fourth. In the last five years, the Chicago Cubs have been either last or next to last — without exception.

Turn those standings upside-down. The Mets and Cubs are first and second and about to begin a four-game weekend series in New York on Friday night.

"There's no pressure on us," second baseman Wally Backman said Wednesday after the Mets ran their latest winning streak to six games by pounding the St. Louis Cardinals 9-3. "The pressure's on them. They have to catch us. We don't have to catch them."

The Cubs, meanwhile, whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 9-4 to remain 3½ games out and Ryne Sandberg, Chicago's second baseman, called it "a good win for us. It's good to have momentum going into New York."

In other NL games, San Diego nipped Cincinnati 6-5, Los Angeles edged Atlanta 2-1, Pittsburgh downed Montreal 3-1 and San Francisco trimmed Houston 7-3.

hot hitting with a three-run homer, his 16th of the season, and an RBI grounder as the Mets ripped St. Louis. Strawberry's fourth-inning homer off Kurt Kephire erased a 3-0 deficit. Hubie Brooks and Danny Heep followed with singles and then executed a double steal, setting the stage for Mike Fitzgerald's tie-breaking sacrifice fly.

"Darryl's proving once again that he's a second-half player," said Manager Davey Johnson. "He proved that last year, and it has been his history, even in the minor leagues."

"Strawberry started to come alive before the All-Star break, but I still expect him to get better yet. No doubt that he has been productive, but as far as I'm concerned he's not in a hot streak. However, he's getting there."

As for the series with the Cubs, Johnson said, "This only hints of things to come. We're going to give people some things to think about. I've got a whole lot of stuff in store for the next series."

Starter Sid Fernandez pitched five innings for his third victory since being recalled from the minors and Ed Lynch pitched four scoreless innings for his second save.

"It just like '69," said Lynch, referring to the Mets' rise from ninth place to the world championship. "You've got two teams that come out of nowhere, losers last year, and all of a sudden — boom! — we're fighting in a pennant race. Pretty incredible."

Cubs 9, Phillies 4

Leon Durham belted a two-run homer, drove in three runs and scored twice while Ryne Sandberg added two RBIs and scored three times. Winner Dennis Eckersley allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Durham's 14th homer off Charles Hudson. Juan Samuel's two-run homer in the bottom of the first tied the score before the Cubs went ahead to stay in the third. Sandberg singled, stole second and scored on Gary Matthews' single. Matthews was tagged out in a rundown, but Durham then walked and scored on Keith Moreland's double.

The Cubs made it 5-2 in the fifth when Sandberg singled and scored on a double by Durham and broke it open in the sixth with four runs off Kevin Gross, including Sandberg's two-run triple, his 14th of the season.

"It's been a long time since we had an outburst like that and it came at the right time," Durham said of the Cubs' 15-hit attack. "We're going into New York and we're going to play some good baseball. I'm just going to keep on swinging the bat and only worry about getting wins. If I don't get my hits, somebody else will. That's the type of team we have."

Padres 6, Reds 5

Luis Salazar's bases-loaded two-run double with one out in the bottom of the ninth drove in the tying and winning runs. The Reds had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the ninth on Dave Concepcion's RBI single off Rich Gossage, but with one out in the bottom of the inning Tony Gwynn got his fourth hit, a single, off Bob Owchinko. Steve Garvey singled Gwynn to second and Brad Lesley walked Bruce Bochy to load the bases. Salazar followed with his double for his first game-winning RBI of the year.

With San Diego trailing 4-2, Gwynn opened the Padres' eighth with an infield single. Garvey singled Gwynn to third and he scored on a single by Terry Kennedy, who homered in the sixth inning. Carmelo Martinez's sacrifice fly tied the score.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1

Mike Marshall slammed a two-run homer and Fernando Valenzuela scattered six hits to snap a personal three-game losing streak and beat the Braves for the sixth consecutive time. Marshall belted his 18th home run in the fourth inning off Len Barker following a leadoff walk to Dave Anderson. It marked the only time the Dodgers got a runner past second base.

Valenzuela lost his shutout bid in the seventh on Brad Komminsk's single, Gerald Perry's double and Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice fly.

Valenzuela, who struck out eight and walked three, termed his effort "one of the best games I've pitched this season."

Pirates 3, Expos 1

Marvell Wynne's tie-breaking, two-out single drove in the first of two ninth-inning runs. Johnny Ray opened the ninth with a single, only the fourth hit off Charlie Lea, and took second when shortstop Argenis Salazar dropped third baseman Tim Wallach's throw that appeared to have Ray beaten at second on Benny Distefano's bunt. Dale Berra sacrificed and, after Ray was thrown out at home on pinch-hitter Milt May's grounder, Wynne singled to score Distefano. Lee Mazzilli's ground-rule double produced an insurance run. Winning pitcher Rick Rhoden allowed seven hits in eight innings.

Giants 7, Astros 3

Chili Davis got three hits and drove in two runs, leading a 15-hit

San Francisco attack. Winner Jeff Robinson allowed nine hits in eight-plus innings while Houston starter Mike LaCoss yielded six runs in suffering his first loss since last July 28.

The Giants scored three runs in the first inning following Dan Gladden's bunt single. Gladden stole second, Manny Trillo singled and Davis singled home the first run.

Brody Named Soccer Coach

Stephen Brody, who served as assistant soccer coach last season, has been named head coach at East Carolina University, Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics, announced Wednesday.

Brody, 23, succeeds Robbie Church, who resigned after two years to pursue other business interests.

"I'm really looking forward to working with the team," said Brody. "As a former player myself, I think I know the strengths and weaknesses of the program."

Brody, a native of Edison, N.J., holds a bachelors degree from ECU. While an undergraduate, he captained the Pirate soccer team for two years. Brody remained involved with the program serving as assistant coach and interim head coach while working towards his master's degree in Business Education.

"We are very happy with the situation and feel Stephen will do an outstanding job," said Karr. "His previous experience with the soccer program and the University in general will prove invaluable."

Pullouts Worry Prep Coaches

GREENSBORO (AP) — The North Carolina Coaches Association is worried about the number of players pulling out of tonight's East-West All-Star High School football game, the group's director says.

Bob Jamieson, association director, said his group met Monday to discuss the problem and would likely meet again today. Both high school and college coaches have said they hope a meeting of the two groups would be arranged.

The 36th annual contest features Associated Press player of the year Darryl McGill of Southern Durham and Antonio Goss of Randleman, but several other players have dropped out of the game to attend college summer school.

In the past month, 11 players on the original rosters — seven from the West and four from the East — decided not to play.

Each player chosen for the all-star game completed his eligibility in 1983, but at least six of the 11 players already are on campus, enrolled in summer school.

Many of them were encouraged by their college coaches to drop out of the East-West game, said West head coach Boyce Deitz of Swain County.

"It's a worse problem than it's ever been," he said. "And it looks to me as if it's going to get increasingly worse."

Deitz said players with academic problems should pass up the game, but he's troubled by the fact that some players might attend summer school to get a jump on their college football careers.

"A couple of my players were told they could play in the East-West game and go to summer school," said East head coach Darryl Allen of Ahoskie. "One of my players was assured he could play and then had to pull out."

The future of the game also worries Deitz.

"They were playing this game before I was born," he said. "And they were playing it before some of the college coaches were born. I kind of think they are fooling with an institution."

University of North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford and North Carolina State football coach Tom Reed said they were ready to meet with the high school coaches to discuss their concerns.

"We would never do anything that would intentionally hurt the games," said Swofford. "If there are any concerns there, I think a meeting with prep coaches would be good," he added. "I think the key is what's in the best interest of the athlete."

Reed said N.C. State did not "twist arms" in advising players. In fact, the Wolfpack has one signee who will play, West running back Bobby Bowens of Asheville Reynolds. Three other future NCSU players withdrew.

Reed warned the situation could worsen.

"The NCAA is going to vote on whether to let freshmen come in the summer," he said. "There's a possibility they could come and we could pay for it. That will compound the problem."

Arias Ready For Revisions After Second Straight Loss

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two straight sub-par performances on the Grand Prix tour, Jimmy Arias says he needs to revise several aspects of his tennis game.

"My backhand didn't feel good and my forehand kind of stunk," the world's fifth-ranked player said Wednesday after he was upset by Stanford University's Dan Goldie in the second round of the $200,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic. Arias, the tournament's top seed, never led in dropping a 6-3, 6-4 decision to the unheralded 20-year-old from McLean, Va.

Arias, of Buffalo, was not the only high seed to be eliminated in the second round. Fourth-seed Juan Aguilera of Spain met a similar fate, falling to Switzerland's Zoltan Kuharszky 6-4, 6-4, and No. 6 Jose-Luis Clerc, the defending champion from Argentina, lost to France's Thierry Tulasne 7-6 (7-1), 6-3.

In other matches involving the top players, second-seeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador easily disposed of Argentina's Roberto Arguello, 6-1, 6-1; Sweden's Henrik Sundstorm, seeded third, beat Spain's Fernando Soler, 7-5, 6-2; and No. 5 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina had to come from behind to top Jimmy Brown 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

Seventh-seeded Aaron Krickstein had little difficulty in his 6-0, 6-3 rout of Chile's Hans Gildemeister. Krickstein beat Arias en route to the U.S. Pro title last week.

After his stunning loss to Goldie, Arias said, "I wasn't moving very well because I'm not in good shape right now. For the rest of this week I'm going to work hard to getting my legs back to where they should be."

The loss, the second in five days for the 19-year-old Arias, came in the wake of his disappointing defeat to Krickstein in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Pro. Arias, runner-up here the past two years, committed numerous unforced errors.

Trailing 4-1 in the second set, Arias managed his only service break of the afternoon, but after he held serve and pulled to within 5-4, Arias could not solve Goldie's service a second time and lost the match.

"I wouldn't mind too much if it was just one bad match, but this makes two weeks in a row," Arias said. "I'm starting to lose my confidence."

Goldie had his spirits lifted by winning the biggest match of his life — despite an admitted bad case of nervousness.

"I tightened up at the end," said Goldie, a local favorite here. "That's the difference between the fifth-ranked player in the world and a college player."

It was the first meeting between Arias and Goldie, although Goldie was used as a practice player for the U.S. Davis Cup team, of which Arias is a member.

Goldie faces 16th-seeded Brian Gottfried this afternoon in the third round of the tournament.

ECU Swimmer In Deaf Games

East Carolina University swimming recruit Christine Holman has earned a berth in the World Games for the Deaf.

Holman, a native of Charlotte, qualified in five events at the World Games tryouts held July 11-14 at Emory University in Atlanta. She placed first in the 100 freestyle (1:00.31), 200 freestyle (2:14.20), 100 backstroke (1:10.52), 200 backstroke (2:31.11) and second in the 400 free (4:49.11).

Holman will compete in the World Games to be held next summer in Los Angeles.

Comaneci Returns To Olympic Glory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nadia Comaneci, the once-perfect darling of the Olympics, arrives today at these Summer Games amid speculation she will carry the torch Saturday night to signal the start of this quadrennial spectacle.

The stoic Romanian became, at Montreal in 1976, the first Olympic gymnast to score a perfect 10 — and wound up with six more of them before those Games ended.

But, just as she had eclipsed elfin Olga Korbut, whose performance at the 1972 Games in Munich had sparked the gymnastics revolution, so did Comaneci's star descend at Moscow in 1980. She recently retired from competition, ending a potential comeback for these Games.

Still, Nadia — she is one of those select few who needs but a first name to ignite instant recognition — is in demand and the assembled press of the world descends upon her today to try to find out whether she has been selected to light the flame in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

"It's going to be someone really well known, or someone chilling — a runner or couple of runners that send goosebumps down the spine," Peter Ueberroth, the president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said cryptically a couple of days ago.

The 22-year-old Comaneci is at these Games as a special guest of the LAOOC — and Romania is the only Eastern-bloc nation here, having declined to join the Soviet-inspired Olympic boycott by 14 countries.

Ueberroth has said the Romanians typify the Olympic ideal, resisting the political pressure of her neighbors and coming to the Games for the sport of it. And wherever they have appeared in public in this Olympic city, the Romanians have been accorded the warmest of welcomes.

These Games are the third in succession to feel the sting of a boycott.

African nations banded together and gave Montreal the cold shoulder to protest the participation of New Zealand, which was maintaining a sports relationship with the Olympic-banned apartheid nation of South Africa. And the United States led a Western boycott of the Moscow Games to protest the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Soviets have never called this year's action a boycott, claiming they are staying away because they believe the security here is inadequate.

The International Olympic Committee is seeking to deal with the threat of future boycotts, particularly in view of the speculation the Soviet Union will refuse to participate in the 1988 Summer Games in Seoul. The Soviets have no diplomatic relations with South Korea.

On Wednesday, though, the IOC put off a decision on what to do about political boycotts until after these Olympics and scheduled a meeting later this year to consider the Games' future.

"The entire membership agreed that the first concern should be the success of the Los Angeles Games," IOC Director Monique Berlioux told a news conference. "It was decided that the future of the Olympics should be discussed after the Los Angeles Games are over."

She said IOC members, sports federations and the National Olympic Committees will be asked to submit suggestions to the special session next November or December in Lausanne, Switzerland, on how to deal with possible future political boycotts.

Berlioux insisted as she has in the past that the IOC will not consider moving the 1988 Games from Seoul because of any boycott threat.

One suggested penalty for boycotting an Olympics would be an IOC-imposed eviction from the succeeding one.

Some IOC members have said privately that it could be difficult to apply to major sports nations. But supporters of such action say, had that kind of penalty been in place four years ago, it might have prevented the boycott of the Moscow Games because it would have resulted in the United States being barred from these Los Angeles Summer Games.

Despite the absence of athletes from the 14 boycotting nations, their Olympic judges can't be denied entry visas to the United States, the State Department said in a letter released Wednesday.

Edward Derwinski, the department's Olympics coordinator, said in a letter to Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., that visas must be issued to all accredited officials in accordance with pledges the United States made as host country.

Biaggi, who two weeks ago requested the visa denials, said Wednesday he felt that "to allow judges from these ... nations to officiate in events involving U.S. athletes and those from allied nations threatens a second and more serious injunction of politics into the Games."

Brisco-Hooks Leads Record Relay Unit

WALNUT, Calif. (AP) — Valerie Brisco-Hooks has had problems running on the United States women's Olympic 1,600-meter relay team, yet she was the key to the Americans breaking an eight-year-old record in the event.

Led by Brisco-Hooks, who ran 48.7 seconds for her 400-meter leg Wednesday night, the Olympic foursome was clocked in a sizzling 3 minutes, 19.60 seconds in a meet at Mount San Antonio College.

The previous American record of 3:22.81 was set by the team of Debra Sapenter, Sheila Ingram, Pamela Jiles and Rosalyn Bryant in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, where the United States finished second to East Germany.

The Americans' clocking was the fourth-fastest ever. East German teams hold the three fastest times, including the world record of 3:15.92, established last month at Erfurt, East Germany.

Brisco-Hooks, running the third leg, hit the inside curb of the track with about 180 meters remaining and nearly fell. But she steadied herself and wound up running the fastest of the four 400 legs.

"Our coach, Brooks Johnson, said that if we could all run better than 51 seconds, we would have a shot at the American record," said Brisco-Hooks.

"So we talked it over and we realized he was right, because at Berkeley (Calif., in a pre-Olympic meet July 15), when I dropped the baton, we came close."

In the Berkeley meet, after Brisco-Hooks recovered the slippery baton, the American team went on to win in 3:25.99 — just over three seconds slower than the American record.

This time, with no faulty baton passing, the team eclipsed the record by more than three seconds.

And Chandra Cheeseborough, who ran the anchor leg, far in front of her opposition, thinks the team can go much faster.

"I tried to go fast, but there was nobody there to push me," she lamented. "It was hard for me to run all alone."

"In the Olympics, with somebody there to push me, we should really get it (the time) down."

The Americans are considered overwhelming favorites in the Olympics, with Canada, Britain, West Germany and Jamaica, none of whom ran in Wednesday night's international meet, rated their strongest opposition.

The United States B team finished a distant second Wednesday night in 3:28.81, with India third in 3:36.14 and Puerto Rico last in 3:38.40.

Preceding Brisco-Hooks and Cheeseborough on the record-breaking team were Lillie Leatherwood and Sherri Howard. Leatherwood led off in 50.7, and was followed by Howard in 50.0, Brisco-Hooks, and Cheeseborough, the American record holder at 400 meters, in 50.2.

"If Cheeseborough can get a good time, I think we can break the East German record, or at least tie it," said Brisco-Hooks.

The record relay performance capped a long meet which produced a mixed bag of results.

Zhu Jianhua of China, the world record holder in the men's high jump at 7 feet, 10 inches, won at 7-7 3/4. But he disappointed the fans when he stopped jumping after clearing his winning height.

"This was enough tonight," he said through an interpreter. "This was just an ordinary height for me. I think I could have jumped higher. I think the winning height in the Olympics will be much higher."

Evelyn Ashford, the American record holder in the women's 100-meter dash, showed she had recovered from a hamstring injury suffered during the Olympic Trials by anchoring the United States A team to victory in the 400-meter relay in an impressive 42.15.

Running the first three legs were Alice Brown, Florence Griffith and Cheeseborough.

"I feel fine," said Ashford. "But I'm disappointed in the time. I thought we'd run in the 41s. I think we'll win the (Olympic) gold medal."

"I had faith that I would be back quickly and I was," added Ashford.

Stephanie Hightower, the American record holder in the women's 100-meter high hurdles but a fourth-place finisher in the Trials in a hotly contested race in which the top four runners wound up within one-hundredth of a second of each other, beat the three members of the U.S. Olympic team.

"Nothing is going to wash away the memory of the Trials," said Hightower, clocked in 12.98.

"I'm using the U.S. runners to get ready for Europe (the highly competitive European circuit after the Games)," continued Hightower.

Harris Wants More Money

Campbell Seeks Protection

By The Associated Press
Franco Harris, No. 2 on the National Football League's career-rushing list, wants more money. Houston's Earl Campbell, No. 9, just wants to start rushing behind an offensive line that includes first-round draft pick Dean Steinkuhler.

"I think what I'm after now is just playing and being consistent," says Campbell, who enters his seventh season with 8,296 rushing yards. "I think I have 5,000 to 6,000 yards left in me."

Campbell's training camp routine has been slowed by off-season arthroscopic knee surgery but he expects to be ready when the season begins.

"If Steinkuhler (the second player selected in the NFL draft) can do anything for our offensive line, it's got to help our football team because the guys that played last year are still here and they did a helluva job," said Campbell, who also thinks new quarterback Warren Moon will make life easier for Houston runners.

"That's going to make guys like Lester Hayes (Los Angeles Raiders) spread out on our receivers a little bit, so hopefully, the linebackers won't be able to play so close on the line of scrimmage," Campbell said.

"I might be getting hit downfield again (instead of at the line of scrimmage)."

Meanwhile, the agent for Harris says chances of a quick settlement to the contract holdout by the 13-year veteran have become more remote.

"We're not close," said the agent, Pittsburgh attorney Bart Beier. "I am not expecting any movement today or in the near future."

Earlier this week Beier was optimistic that differences over Harris' salary and contract terms could be resolved more quickly. But he said the Steelers are "unwilling to be conciliatory."

Harris, who is 363 yards short of breaking Jim Brown's all-time rushing record, failed to report on Friday. He is negotiating his option to play for a reported $385,000 in the coming NFL season.

The Los Angeles Rams and New England Patriots each made moves to bolster their quarterback situation, while the New Orleans Saints signed third-round draft choice Terry Hoage to a three-year contract, leaving eighth-round choice Clemon Terrell as the club's only unsigned draft pick.

The Cincinnati Bengals traded second-year quarterback Jeff

Christensen to the Rams for an undisclosed future draft choice. Christensen was drafted by Cincinnati in the fifth round last year, but didn't play in a regular-season game.

Bengals Assistant General Manager Mike Brown indicated the position of the draft choice obtained for Christensen will depend on how the quarterback does with the Rams.

The Patriots signed quarterback Tom Ramsey, a three-year starter at UCLA who played the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League.

The Patriots also obtained center Robin Ham from the Cleveland Browns for an undisclosed draft choice.

Ramsey, who signed a two-year pact, plus an option year for an undisclosed sum, will back up Steve Grogan and Tony Eason.

Ramsey signed with the Express in 1983 and completed 160 of 307 passes for 1,975 yards and 13 touchdowns while throwing 14 interceptions. He started the 1984 USFL season with Los Angeles and played in four games.

In Miami, veteran guard Bob Kuechenberg was back at practice for a light workout after being hospitalized for dizziness during Tuesday's workout. The Dolphins were still waiting for hospital test results to learn what caused his problem.

Tight end Dave Casper, a Raiders' star in the late 1970s while the team was in Oakland, rejoined the club as a free agent. Casper contacted the Raiders after he was released by the Minnesota Vikings and was not claimed by any team on waivers.

Terms of Casper's contract were not available. The first-round draft pick of the Raiders out of Notre Dame in 1974, arrived in camp while All-Pro tight end Todd Christensen remained away. Christensen is seeking a second contract renegotiation in as many seasons.

The Buffalo Bills had one player undergo surgery while Will Grant, a starter at center since 1980, was headed toward the operating room.

Grant injured his right knee during a blocking drill and was to enter Buffalo General Hospital for arthroscopic surgery Thursday, said team spokesman Dave Senko.

Defensive end Jimmy Payne, who was injured Tuesday, underwent knee surgery and was expected to be out at least three months, Senko added.

Hanill Bowls 281 Game

Denny Hanill of Route 4, Greenville recorded nine consecutive strikes en route to a game score of 281 Wednesday at Hillcrest Lanes.

Hanill, bowling in the Dixie Supply League competition, has bowled just 30 games prior to his feat Wednesday and took up bowling this year.

Qawi Trains In High Point

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Former World Boxing Council light heavyweight champion Dwight Qawi says he will train for his upcoming title fight with Michael Spinks in High Point.

Qawi, 31, will try to take the title away from Michael Spinks, to whom he lost a 15-round decision in a title bout in Atlantic City, N.J., last year. Qawi knocked out then-WBC champion Matthew Saad Muhammad in December 1981 and defended his title three times before losing to Spinks, a 1976 Olympic gold medalist.

"We got a lot of offers from different places and we decided that High Point would be the best place for Dwight to train," said Rock Newman, Qawi's manager. "We wanted a place that was quiet and away from the hoopla, had a nice gym and a good housing offer."

Qawi said he was happy to be in High Point and added that he wouldn't let Spinks keep the title.

"I'm not going to let Spinks get away from me like I did the last time," Qawi said. "Next time, the outcome will be different."

The former champion will train at the Joe Bland Memorial Center. All sessions are open to the public.

Reagan Says Mondale So Far Left He's 'Left America'

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan, launching a sharp political counterattack, is using ridicule and sarcasm in his campaign to convince conservative Democrats that Walter F. Mondale is so far to the left he's "left America."

On the second leg of a trip designed to grab the political offensive away from Democrats, Reagan prepared to deliver his appeal anew today at a political rally in a wealthy Republican enclave 12 miles north of Atlanta.

Mindful that he needs the votes of a quarter of the nation's Democrats and half of the independents to win re-election, Reagan pursued a strategy of portraying Mondale and his running mate, Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro, as too liberal for mainstream Democrats.

"The national Democratic leadership is going so far left, they've left America," Reagan asserted.

He said the fog in San Francisco, where the Democratic convention was held last week, was "so thick out there that it was getting inside their heads."

After the rally at Cumberland Mall in Atlanta, the president was winding up his two-day trip with a spaghetti dinner in Hoboken, N.J., a state his campaign committee has placed on the priority list.

THAT'S COOL — Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro gestures and reacts as she samples a cup of Italian "slush" while touring Boston's North End section Wednesday. At right is Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn. Ms. Ferraro was in Boston to address the National Conference of State Legislators. (AP Laserphoto)

Ferraro Levels Anti-Needy Line Against Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — In her initial vice presidential campaign appearances, Geraldine Ferraro is going after the Reagan administration as a male bastion that is insensitive to the needy and seeks to "paint a white face on all American women."

Ms. Ferraro used her first major appearances since her nomination at the Democratic National Convention last week to sketch themes that are likely to be more fully developed as her campaign picks up steam.

She was doing some work in her congressional office in Washington today and then flying back to her home in New York to relax for the weekend.

Walter F. Mondale, the party's presidential nominee, and Ms. Ferraro plan a joint campaign swing next week, beginning Tuesday at Ms. Ferraro's home and winding through the key electoral states of the industrial Midwest and the South.

She used solo appearances Wednesday to accuse Reagan of pursuing domestic policies that destroy the federal government at the expense of the nation's needy and of the state governments that are left to care for them.

During remarks to about 2,000 members of the National Conference of State Legislatures in Boston she said, "The current administration is embarked on an ill-considered plan to tear down the structure of our system of government."

At the same time, President

Reagan was campaigning in Austin, Texas, saying Mondale and Ferraro threaten to "buy the American dream" with "endless tax increases, deeper dependency, planned protectionism, certain sacrifices and veiled quotas."

Ms. Ferraro, though, said Reagan's policies may be out of the mainstream of both major political parties, since many Republicans are committed to welfare, education and child-care programs he has tried to cut.

"Instead of rationally sorting out who can best do the job and which job, the job of responding to society's needs and of paying the bills has been abruptly dropped in the lap of the states," she said.

"We don't need government on any citizen's back in America, but we do need government on every citizen's side," she said.

She hit at Reagan's tax policies, saying they merely place a greater burden on the states.

"It's great in this business to play the hero, to tell the people that you're going to cut their taxes," Ms. Ferraro said.

"In 1981, the federal government played hero, and ever since then you people in state legislatures have been picking up the tab," she said.

In Washington Wednesday evening, she reached out to black women in an address to a gathering of about 8,000 attending the 75th anniversary meeting of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, the largest sorority for black college educated women.

After a week-long thrashing at the hands of Democrats, the president began striking back at a news conference Tuesday night and on a trip to Austin, Texas on Wednesday.

James Lake, the president's campaign spokesman, said Reagan came to Georgia to accuse Democrats of "reading the boll weevils and southern Democrats out of their party It's a direct insult to them and their judgment."

Lake said Reagan wanted to make sure southerners know that "we want you. We value your support."

The president carried all of the South in 1980 except Georgia, the home of former President Jimmy Carter, and remains extremely strong in the region this year.

Reagan, who is making an attempt to capture Georgia this time, attended a closed strategy session with about 100 state GOP chairmen and other Republicans from throughout the South after his arrival Wednesday afternoon.

In Austin, the president tried on a Stetson and tried out some new one-liners directed against the Democrats and especially Mondale, though he was never mentioned by name.

"I didn't watch all the (Democratic) convention," Reagan said, adding, "There's some punishment you just don't deserve."

Mondale Plans Southern Tour

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

GUNFLINT LAKE, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is opening his uphill campaign to unseat President Reagan in the South, probably the toughest and most critical battleground his presidential candidacy will face this fall.

Mondale will campaign in Mississippi and Texas next week, and with him will be Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, whose selection as vice presidential running mate remains the most popular decision of Mondale's candidacy.

After a week's secluded fishing vacation in northeastern Minnesota, Mondale appeared refreshed and ready to challenge Reagan despite the president's continuing popularity.

Mondale will leave the isolated lodge where he has been fishing for walleye pike, lake trout and bass on Friday, and spend the weekend at his home in North Oaks, Minn., near Minneapolis.

Then, on Tuesday, Mondale will fly to Queens, N.Y., where Ms. Ferraro lives with her family and where both members of the ticket will appear at a rally.

Then in obligatory remarks emphasizing their Northeastern and Midwestern origins, both will speak at the annual Urban League meeting in Cleveland, Ohio later Tuesday.

But Mondale said the real campaign will begin on the statehouse steps in Jackson, Miss. next Wednesday.

Asked Wednesday why he was going South with Ms. Ferraro next week, Mondale said, "I think it's important. I promised Jackson, Miss. I would kick off the campaign there and I'm gonna."

The presence of Ms. Ferraro on the ticket gives Mondale automatic new hope in the industrial Northeast, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

Mondale's own Midwestern roots give him a shot in Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota and Michigan. There is also some new optimism hope for the Democrats in Oregon and Washington.

And there is some discussion with the campaign hierarchy on whether to challenge Reagan seriously in his home state of California.

But even if he and Ms. Ferraro carry all those states, they must also pick up at least 60 electoral college votes in states like Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas to get the necessary 270 votes to deny Reagan a second term.

The best guessing, according to Mondale aides, is that whatever success he has in the South will come without a victory in Florida where Reagan is extremely popular.

But Southern states which Reagan carried in the 1980 election are seen as vulnerable this year, especially if the "new realism" theme on which Mondale hopes to build his campaign takes hold among southern Democrats, especially those who voted in the primaries for Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Gary Hart of Colorado.

And so Mondale will go from Jackson on Wednesday for separate stops in Austin, Houston and San Antonio next Thursday before returning to North Oaks to wait out the Republican National Convention in Dallas.

Almost in counterpoint to Mondale's intentions to go South was Reagan himself who campaigned Wednesday in Georgia and Texas, where he said the Mondale-Ferraro ticket is so far left on the political spectrum that the candidates were no longer in America.

In reply, Mondale said Wednesday after a day of fishing on Lake Superior, "I think he's getting a little desperate. I would recommend a good night's sleep for him."

Bush Says Hispanics Helped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan-Bush campaign is trying to woo Hispanics, who voted Democratic by a two-to-one margin in 1980, by touting a "Reagan recovery that reaches across traditional barriers" and helps all Americans.

In a speech to a Hispanic group Wednesday night, Vice President George Bush broke off from two days of sharp attacks against Democratic opponents Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, and defended Reagan policies he said had "resurrected the economy" and helped Hispanics.

By cutting inflation and unemployment, "we were true to the heart of the Hispanic community," Bush told the National Council of La Raza, a nationwide civic organization representing Americans descended from Spanish-speaking people.

Reagan and Bush won about 30 percent of the Hispanic vote in the last presidential election. They are likely to do well among traditionally conservative Cuban voters in Florida this time, but Mondale is counting on a large majority of Mexican Americans in the crucial states of Texas and California.

In Texas alone, more than 100,000 new Hispanic voters have been registered in the past three years.

Bush's speech indicated the Republican strategy will be to cite figures showing that economic growth has helped Hispanics, not just groups that already had advantages, as Mondale has asserted.

Bush said more than 650,000 Hispanics have found work since the Reagan administration took office and that for the first half of this year 57 percent of all Hispanic adults are working — "a figure close to the historical high."

"Ronald Reagan resurrected the economy through trust — trust in the American people, not in big government or big business," he said.

The audience of about 1,000 people clapped politely at Bush's remarks, but the most enthusiastic applause was given after Democratic Rep. Robert Garcia, a New Yorker of Puerto Rican descent, expressed relief over the apparent failure of Congress to compromise on the controversial Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill.

The legislation is billed by its supporters as a fair way to cut illegal immigration, but Hispanics have denounced it and House Democrats influenced by Mondale's animosity to the measure are expected to bottle it up.

Bush acknowledged the administration had favored some provisions that opponents feared would cause discrimination against Hispanic citizens.

"But I promise you now — this president is not going to sign any legislation that would permit employers to discriminate against Hispanics or anyone else," he said.

After two days of slashing attacks against the Mondale-Ferraro Democratic presidential ticket in his home state of Texas, Bush didn't even mention his opponents in his remarks Wednesday night.

CBS Official Says Convention Coverage Needed

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of CBS News is going on both offense and defense when he staunchly upholds the importance of political conventions, saying it's too soon to write the obituary on television's coverage.

Ed Joyce sounds like Superman, supporting truth, justice and the American way, when he says: "I'm deeply disturbed about the dismissal of the 1988 conventions four years in advance. You can't sit here and say this is the last convention. You have to view each event with flexibility."

But he's also being competitive, attacking the way his rival networks perceive future convention coverage, and he's being protective, contending that, despite low ratings, CBS News should keep the full convention time from the clutches of an entertainment division that wants every hour it can get.

He's saying no news organization worth its nose microphones can justify calling current network convention coverage "a dinosaur," as ABC Vice President David Burke did last week.

He's saying that a news organization doesn't deserve its minicams if it believes that "this mode of coverage is finished," as NBC's convention boss Reuven Frank said last week.

The fact is, just like ABC and NBC, CBS cut back coverage from four years ago to the format of last week's convention broadcasts, which began at 9 p.m. EDT — the first time CBS had not done gavel-to-gavel coverage.

Is it really so shocking that Joyce's competitors are predicting more changes in the process? Are further evolutionary cuts impossible or inevitable? Who's really giving us the inside track on the future?

Joyce certainly is staking out the higher ground for CBS News: "My own vision of future coverage is predicated on the model used this time."

"The voices dismissing the convention coverage as dinosaurs were off the mark. I think the Democratic convention was significant."

Burke and Frank never said that it wasn't significant. That was clear this week when each elaborated on earlier remarks made from San Francisco.

"What I said was that the way we cover the convention is prehistoric," said Burke. "There was, once upon a time, a convention system that was determinative ... The political process in America has changed. Major decisions are now made prior to the conventions. Yet we continue to cover the event with (enormous) manpower and resources."

Burke rejects the contention made by CBS' Dan Rather that televised conventions are "civics lessons."

"We don't have an obligation to do civics lessons," he said. "We're a news organization."

ABC came under intense criticism last week when the network bolted from convention coverage one night for a rerun of "Hart to Hart," then abruptly joined a Tip O'Neill speech in progress, leaving the Harts in the middle of an unsolved crime.

ABC's information at 8:45 was that the Democrats were not going to tighten their schedule, so the Rev. Jesse Jackson would not appear until 10:30.

"We had an hour and half-hour shows available, and we decided there was enough time to go for the hour," Burke said.

Jackson went on earlier, embarrassing ABC into returning after 20 minutes. Even so, Burke said he would make the same decision again. "We think that's the way we should do it in the future," he said.

Frank essentially agrees, although he couldn't resist poking at ABC for not finishing "Hart to Hart." It was Frank who put the plot synopsis of the unfinished show on NBC.

Asked how his bosses reacted, Frank said, "They thought it was pretty funny."

Frank believes future convention coverage might be bulletin interruptions and late-night specials. "It has nothing to do with a dinosaur," he said. "I think news conditions no longer justify the extensive effort we traditionally are used to putting into it."

Even if Walter Mondale didn't have the convention locked up, Frank said previous conditions justifying gavel-to-gavel coverage no longer prevailed. In the 1950s and '60s, conventions were very new to the American public. "People bought sets to watch," Frank said.

"But the most important thing," added Frank, "is that the conventions were the arenas for the expression of fundamental conflicts in American society — civil rights (in 1964), the Vietnam War (in 1968).

"If there's a sufficiently dividing issue that seizes the American public again, we can go back and do that kind of coverage. I'm not saying it's an insignificant event or a dinosaur. I'm saying deploying 600 people, which should only be sufficient to cover World War III, is not necessary."

Lewis Has Broken Leg

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis will be sidelined for at least a week after suffering a broken leg in a jet water ski accident, a spokesman said.

Lewis broke his left leg just below the knee while riding on a jet ski Wednesday at the lake behind his Nesbit, Miss., home, said J.D. Whitten, one of Lewis' managers.

Lewis was taken to Methodist Memorial Hospital after the accident, said Henrietta Darr-Johnson, a spokeswoman for the entertainer's booking agency, In Concert International.

Ms. Darr-Johnson said Lewis' personal manager, Al Embry, told her doctors have ordered Lewis to stay off the leg for a week.

"Barring complications, he will probably resume his schedule the third or fourth (of August) and will appear on stage with his leg in a cast," Ms. Darr-Johnson said.

Lewis, best known for his hits "Great Balls of Fire" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On," will miss concert dates in Abbeville, La., and Fort Worth, Texas, Whitten said.

Lewis still plans to tape a music video entitled "All My Rowdy Friends Have Come Home" next week in Nashville with singer Hank Williams Jr., Ms. Darr-Johnson said.

Lewis' planned West Coast tour will go on as scheduled starting Aug. 9 in Spokane, Wash., she said.

New Miss America Says Talk Is Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moments after winning cheers of adoration from black women, Suzette Charles stared coldly into a forest of microphones and said "I do not want to say anything more" about the scandal that catapulted her from runner-up Miss America to titleholder.

Miss Charles said she would never pose nude. She said she had no qualms about succeeding Vanessa Williams, and she pleaded with reporters to let her reign go on without continuous questions about her predecessor.

In one of her first outings as the new Miss America, the second black to hold the title, Miss Charles, 21, gave unexpected zest to the 51st biennial meeting of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, the nation's oldest and largest organization of black women college graduates.

Shelley Jackson, a spokeswoman for the sorority, said Miss Charles had been invited to the meeting here "nine months ago." The program announcement noted a "special appearance by Miss Suzette Charles, first runner-up to Miss America."

Miss Charles was making a record album Monday when she learned she would be succeeding Miss Williams, who was forced to resign in a brouhaha over a nude photographic layout in Penthouse magazine. She seemed at ease in her brief appearance before more than 2,000 sorority sisters.

The 21-year-old seemed more comfortable on stage than behind the dais. She sashayed onto the

Show Sought

DALLAS (AP) — The welcoming committee for the Republican National Convention is seeking a pre-convention replacement show after the Osmond Family canceled an Aug. 17 concert.

The Osmonds dropped the Dallas date after deciding they didn't have enough time to promote the concert, said Ron Clark, director of public relations for Osmond Enterprises in Orem, Utah.

He said the cancellation "has nothing at all to do with politics. I know they are very much behind Mr. Reagan."

The Osmonds performed at a Washington gala hosted by Frank Sinatra on inauguration night in 1981.

stage, just after sorority sisters concluded a musical salute to prominent and successful black women, and talked of the importance of getting a good education.

"There's no way anyone can tell you you're not qualified," she told the more than 2,000 sorority sisters gathered in the ballroom at the Sheraton Washington.

"Nothing is easy," she added. "I waited 10 months to be Miss America."

Cameramen bobbed and weaved at the front of the stage, snapping Ms. Charles' picture as she sang and marched from side to side to acknowledge the cheers.

A short time later, she was parrying the questions of reporters who wanted to know if she thought racial discrimination lay behind Miss Williams' ouster.

"The situation ... was not a racial problem," she replied. "The situation that occurred was a direct reflection on the individuals involved, and we all have to be accountable for our actions."

Miss Williams, 21, the first black Miss America, was asked to resign by beauty pageant officials following the publication in Penthouse magazine of sexually explicit photos in which she appeared nude with another woman. The pictures were taken before she competed in the Miss America contest and were sold to Penthouse by the free-lance photographer who took them.

Miss Charles said she hoped the nude photo episode "has not tarnished" the image of the beauty pageant and said "I had no question about accepting" the title after it was relinquished by Miss Williams.

Miss Charles said she planned to contact her predecessor soon, "just to ask her how she's doing," but pleaded with reporters to put the incident behind them.

"After today, I will not talk about the whole situation," she vowed.

"Would I ever pose as a nude?" she asked herself.

"No!," Miss Charles replied.

State Baptist Leaders Reject Tobacco Position

By The Associated Press
Resolutions adopted by the Southern Baptist Convention against tobacco growing and female ministers do not mirror the views of North Carolina Baptists, state Baptist officials say.
"We are disturbed by resolutions which seem to denigrate these friends," said a statement released by the N.C. Baptists this week, referring to women and people involved in the tobacco industry. "And we solicit their continuing participation in whatever ways God may lead."

Meanwhile, the N.C. Baptist State Convention's search committee announced Wednesday the Rev. Roy J. Smith is its choice for the convention's general secretary-treasurer. Smith has held the post in an acting capacity since January. The convention will vote on the recommendation at its annual meeting Nov. 13 in Asheville.

The 16-member Executive Committee of the General Board of the Baptist State Convention decided July 10 to make the statement regarding tobacco and women. The committee sets policy and makes decisions for Baptists between yearly convention meetings.

"The reason we had the statements prepared was that we felt the Southern Baptist Convention's actions in Kansas City did not reflect the feelings of many North Carolina Baptists in both of these issues," said the Rev. Gaylord Lehman of Rocky Mount.
"We felt that there needed to be a reaffirmation on our part of the many women who've been ordained as deacons in North Carolina Baptist Churches and also (the 20 to 30) women who currently serve as North Carolina Baptist pastors," Lehman said.

Southern Baptists, at their June convention, approved resolutions against tobacco growing, cigarette smoking and federal tobacco subsidies and discouraging the ordination of women.
Convention resolutions, while not binding, reflect the consensus of delegates voting at that time.

The tobacco question is complex and there are health risks associated with the crop, the state executive committee admitted. But it added that "serious moral and ethical questions are raised by the prospect of economic turmoil which would result if tobacco production should continue to decline."

"This turmoil would be especially difficult for many North Carolinians unable to affect forces far beyond their control," the committee said.

More than one-third of the denomination's 14.1 million members live in tobacco-producing states, including 1.1 million in North Carolina, which is the third-largest state convention.

"In the heartland, they grow tobacco and nothing much else," said William H. Boatwright, director of communications for the Baptist State Convention. "If tobacco is so bad, they're asking why is the convention taking our money?"
Southern Baptist churches donate to the Cooperative Program, which funds denominational programs and agencies.

Program Aids Moms In Prison

DURHAM (AP) — Many women, including mothers, should be offered alternatives to serving an active prison sentence, says a Durham attorney who started a program called Legal Assistance for Mothers in Prison.

"The importance of maintaining the mother-child bond cannot be underestimated," said Christine Herlinger. "It affects the child's sense of self-worth, security, ability to learn and to function as a responsible citizen," Ms. Herlinger said. "It gives the mother an incentive to do better, to hold a job, to stay out of trouble."

Ms. Herlinger says mothers who go to prison face two kinds of punishment.

"Single mothers face an automatic, unanticipated punishment from the time they are arrested, whether they are guilty of any crime," Ms. Herlinger said. "What ends up happening is the woman is tried for two cases, one being whether they are fit to be a parent."

If the women are convicted, they may be taken directly to prison without seeing her children, and the Department of Social Services steps in to put the children in foster homes while she is in prison, she added.

George Bernard Shaw

Playwright George Bernard Shaw was born on this day in 1856. A vegetarian and defender of women's rights, Shaw considered theater a platform for radical social reform. He also pushed for alphabet reform! To Shaw's penchant for paradox we owe such lines as, "My way of joking is to tell the truth; it's the funniest joke in the world," and "There are two tragedies in life. One is not to get your heart's desire. The other is to get it."

DO YOU KNOW — The musical, "My Fair Lady," was adapted from which of Shaw's plays?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Fireflies thrive in humid, marshy areas.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Now you have a day to wind up all kinds of tasks and duties to be done, especially those which are associated or connected with your home and your family affairs.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to please kin more so that the weekend will be pleasant at home and steer clear of an argument with an outsider.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle that pile of correspondence early and solve car and travel problems wisely. Get your affairs in order today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure that your monetary affairs are in order on this last working day of the week, so study banking accounts, etc.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Fine day for visiting the barber or beauty shop for some special attention so that you can look better for the weekend.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have many intimate tasks to handle early and then you can think about next week's activities and plan them wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy at gaining that cherished wish that has been difficult to do ere this and which you had set aside for awhile.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get at those outside tasks so they are soon done and you go on to more important matters. Show that you are clever.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate on that trip you have been wanting to take, and if it is right for you, make the arrangements now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your hunches are fine as to how best to handle practical matters in connection with others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Pick up all loose ends of any contract you make with an associate, so that you do not have any trouble later on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure to handle the minutae of any work you are engaged in and show you are efficient and a perfectionist.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan now for any entertainment for tonight or over the weekend so that all goes smoothly and without delays.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can accomplish a great deal in life once he or she has learned not to procrastinate. Teach to become more objective otherwise the feelings can be hurt easily and a martyr complex will develop.

Yesterday's Cryptogram: OUR JADED JEWELER'S SLOGAN WAS A GOLDEN RULE.

Today's Cryptogram clue: N equals O

The Cryptogram is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

We have tried to impress on our readers the importance of counting their tricks. Often you need no more than a simple exercise in arithmetic to point the way to the winning life.

South had a difficult hand to bid because of the fact he was void in his partner's suit. We think he had just enough to jump shift, and thereafter North-South conducted an intelligent auction to reach their best game.

West led the jack of hearts, and declarer wasted no time in going down. He won the queen of hearts and tried to drop the queen of clubs. When that didn't happen, he conceded a club trick to the lady. Back came a heart and, since declarer had no entry to the table, dummy's high diamonds withered on the vine.

Because of the double, declarer should have taken into consideration the possibility the queen of clubs would not drop. Had he stopped to count his tricks, he would have realized that only eight tricks were available. There were plenty of tricks in dummy if he could get there, and could have used the threat of an entry to the table to his advantage. At trick two declarer should lead the queen of spades. If a defender wins this trick, declarer can force an entry to dummy before the defenders have set up their hearts. So best defense is for West to allow the queen to win.

But now declarer is a trick ahead of the game. He does not need dummy any more. To preserve entries to his hand, declarer should immediately lead the jack of clubs, conceding a trick to the queen. East wins, but declarer now has enough tricks for his contract.

It did not take much to spot the winning line. Those of you who count on your fingers would have had one to spare.

Student Protest

RALEIGH (AP) — State members of Frontlash, a national student group, kicked off a campaign Wednesday against proposed federal legislation to legalize a $2.50-an-hour "subminimum" wage for teenagers.

"If the subminimum wage legislation passes, we as the young generation will not be moving forward," said William L. Eggleston, state director of Frontlash, at a Raleigh meeting. "If it passes, we're moving backward. They'll be telling us to work hard and do a job but settle for lesser pay. It's simply unfair."

President Reagan proposed the cut for youths age 16 to 19, saying it would reduce unemployment among teens.

JUGGLES TIME — Attorney Jimmy Little of Fayetteville works by day on issues for the state Utilities Commission's Public Staff and by night as a defense attorney for convicted murderer Velma Barfield. He has spent four years handling appeals for Mrs. Barfield, who has been scheduled to be executed. (AP Laserphoto)

Lawyer Spends Four Years Handling Barfield Appeal

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Jimmy Little spends his days arguing complex legal questions as a lawyer for the Utilities Commission Public Staff and his nights working on the equally complicated laws governing the death penalty.

Little, the attorney for condemned murderer Velma Margie Barfield, has been using his off-time and leave time granted to state employees to work on Mrs. Barfield's plea for clemency, represent her at hearings and sit through media interviews.

"At least I won't have to worry about taking any expensive vacations," he said in a recent interview at his Raleigh apartment.

Little was a private attorney in Fayetteville when he first became involved with the Barfield case in 1980. Mrs. Barfield, who was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her boyfriend, was then only two weeks away from her scheduled execution.

A Tennessee group that helps appeal death penalty cases contacted him because they needed a North Carolina lawyer to handle the paperwork and be Mrs. Barfield's attorney of record.

"I called several other attorneys trying to find someone, and then ended up signing the dotted line myself," he said. That signature has meant four years of work without pay filing appeals and arguing Mrs. Barfield's case.

In January 1983 he left his private practice to become chief counsel to the Public Staff. The Barfield case came with him to his state job.

"I made sure everyone knew about the case," Little said, "and that I felt like I had to continue working on it."

"Who could you give a death penalty case to?" he said. "Nobody is standing in line to take those kinds of cases."

In March, he stepped down as chief counsel to become a staff attorney on the Public Staff.

Little said he has been careful to separate his state job and time on state cases from the Barfield case, even when her scheduled Aug. 31 execution brought a rush of national and international publicity.

He said he was not prepared for that tidal wave of media attention.

"I thought there would be some curiosity just because it was the first execution of a woman in 22 years," he said. "But when you get calls from France, Holland, Spain, Brazil...it's just a little more than we were prepared for."

"I think what's happened is a lot of people have gotten into the story behind the statistic, if you will," he said.

The execution, which would have been the first for a woman in North Carolina in 40 years, was stayed earlier this month by Chief Justice Warren Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court. The stay was issued while the court considers a petition to rehear Mrs. Barfield's appeal.

Little, who grew up in Fayetteville and graduated from the University of North Carolina and the UNC law school, said he does not consider his work in the Barfield case to be a question of opposing the death penalty.

"We're not talking about being for or against it," Little said. "Capital punishment is a fact of life. The question is when it should be applied and when not. We say in Velma's case it should not."

Little has concentrated on the clemency process, while a co-counsel in Florida has worked on preparing appeal briefs.

He said the clemency process, which allows more information to come out than the rigid rules of evidence in the judicial process, is frequently misunderstood.

"What the clemency process was designed for and meant to do was go outside the rules of the courtroom," Little said. "The clemency process was set up to allow consideration of everything involved because execution is an act that can't be undone."

"Nobody is asking for clemency to forgive Velma for what she's done," said Little. "The central question is whether Velma is worth saving. Can she make a contribution behind the walls of Women's Prison?"

Death penalty cases, Little said, are different from most other cases an attorney faces because of the complexity and the literal life-and-death relationship with a client.

"There are so few of these cases and they involve such an ultimate issue," he said. "The representation of somebody on Death Row is in many respects different from any other case an attorney faces."

"I don't know of any other type of case where you know at the beginning you're going to probably go through every possible appellate level and then the clemency process," he said. "You know at the beginning you're talking about an involvement that will last years."

"There is so much you have to take into consideration at this point, so much to be aware of," he said. "That's especially true in this case where the whole family is a victim. They're looking at a situation where someone they love has gone through this terrible period in her life."

Storms Strike Forsyth

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Severe thunderstorms hit parts of Winston-Salem Wednesday evening, leaving uprooted trees, power outages and property damage in its wake.

While the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning after a funnel cloud was reported south of Winston-Salem, the sighting could not be confirmed and the warning was called off less than an hour later.

However, residents reported high winds, heavy rains and hail the size of golf balls and 2.25 inches of rain fell to the west of the city in a 45-minute period, the weather service said.

In nearby Kernersville, lightning wiped out the phone lines to the town's communication center at 5:30 p.m. for several hours. A Duke Power Co. spokesman said some 1,800 customers in southeastern Winston-Salem lost power between 5:40 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., when most of the power had been restored.

A large tree fell through the roof of R.G. Hopkins' mobile home just outside the city, heavily damaging about half of the home, which was not insured, according to Hopkins' wife, Peggy. No one was injured.

"It felt as though the wind had lifted up the trailer and set it down again," Mrs. Hopkins said. "I didn't even know a tree had fallen on the house."

"It sounded like a jet coming through," said Mrs. Hopkins' son, Robert Hotchkiss.

The heavy winds also uprooted a pecan tree at the home of J.M. Huie and brought it to rest on part of the roof, again causing no injuries.

Show Filmed

ELON, N.C. (AP) — There's nothing racy or risque about the soap opera "Rituals," say Elon College officials who have agreed to let the show be filmed on the school's 150-acre campus.

"We're not snobbish," said Tim McDowell, director of community relations at the 95-year-old school. "The contents aren't going to be anything different than what's on television already. And it's rated G, for the family hour."

The soap's plot revolves around Haddon Hall, a prestigious, private women's college near Washington, and the students there. The program has been sold to 90 percent of the major national television markets and will be shown on prime time when it is released this fall.

Hunt, Helms Set Sunday Debate

By The Associated Press

A campaign spokesman says Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., welcomes a review of his record by Gov. Jim Hunt during the first of five televised debates between the two men.

"Sen. Helms has nothing to hide, so he welcomes a review of his record," said Claude Allen. "But he intends to bring up things on Gov. Hunt's record, which includes many things that certainly aren't known to the general public."

Hunt said Wednesday he was studying his position papers and Helms' voting record to get ready for Sunday's debate, to be broadcast by 12 stations from Asheville to Wilmington.

Hunt, in a brief interview after a news conference, said he was looking forward to the debate, which will take place in the studios of a Raleigh TV station.

"Very much so," he said, adding that he was disappointed that negotiations between his and Helms' camps produced an agreement to have only five debates. Immediately after the May 8 primary, Hunt called for 10 debates.

Helms repeatedly challenged Hunt to debate in the months before the primary, but Hunt refused to discuss the matter until both candidates had won their parties' nominations.

Hunt declined to specify his debate preparations, and said the only image he hoped to project Sunday was "my own image — accurately."

Meanwhile, Helms spokesman Claude Allen said the incumbent Republican was doing little to prepare.

"Sen. Helms is just doing what he's done for the past 12 years," said Allen.
