Democrats File New Complaint Against Club

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

National Congressional Club director Carter Wrenn disputed claims by state Democrats that Sen. Jesse Helms' campaign accepted contributions exceeding legal limits.

State Democratic Party Chairman David Price said he was filing a complaint with the Federal Elections Commission, charging the club with exceeding the $5,000 limit on donations to a candidacy. Price said the Congressional Club, with the Helms for Senate Committee, co-sponsored a television ad that shows Helms plugging President Reagan's re-election.

Helms, R-N.C., faces a challenge for a third term from Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

Price contends Helms received "the full and undivided benefit" of the ad and should have paid all the costs.

"In fact, the ad is transparently an effort by Sen. Helms to help his own candidacy under the pretense of helping the president's candidacy," said Price in a news conference. "It is nothing more than a back-door attempt by the (club) to sneak more money into the Helms campaign than the law allows."

But Wrenn said: "All that legal stuff is just a smoke screen. I really think they're ... attacking Sen. Helms for supporting Reagan."

Helms formed the National Congressional Club, a political action committee, to retire his 1972 Senate campaign debt and for several years was honorary chairman. The club also backs Reagan and other conservative candidates.

The 30-second ad, which began airing statewide July 20, begins by showing Helms watching women's activist Bella Abzug and the Rev. Jesse Jackson on television.

The camera then focuses on Helms, who says, "You know, night after night the liberal news media trot out people like these to speak for all America and to undermine President Reagan, of course. It's not right and it's not fair because Ronald Reagan is making this country strong again."

Wrenn said the club's Washington, D.C., attorneys studied the arrangement with the Helms committee and called it legal. He said the ad would help both the Reagan and Helms candidacies.

"It's no different than if they (the state Democratic Party) and the Hunt people wanted to fund a Hunt-Mondale ad," said Wrenn.

But the Democrats' complaint said Helms could either be seen or heard throughout the ad, while Reagan's picture appeared only near the end. Also, the complaint said, the ad is being shown only on stations "which reach a North Carolina audience."

The complaint is the fourth by North Carolina Democrats against groups or individuals supporting Helms pending before the FEC.

The others are:

— A 1982 complaint by U.S. Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., that the club and Jefferson Marketing Inc., a political advertising agency, were one organization and were making illegal contributions.

On Thursday Rose charged that government delays in acting on his complaint were politically motivated. But he said he couldn't prove the White House was pressuring the commission not to consider the case.

Wrenn said Rose's complaint was "sour grapes."

— A complaint by the state Democratic Party this year accusing Jefferson Marketing of improperly forgiving loans made to the unsuccessful campaigns of GOP gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake and congressional candidate Bill Cobey.

— A complaint by the Democratic Party this year accusing J.C.D. Baily of Rocky Mount of exceeding individual campaign contribution limits by paying for a pro-Helms newspaper ad and billboards.

In other political news, state GOP Chairman David Flaherty Thursday called for the transfer of a State Ports Authority employee from the state payroll to Hunt's campaign payroll.

Flaherty said Hunt has been shielding Mather Slaughter, who co-workers say is paid well but spends little time in his office.

However, Hunt's press secretary Brent Hackney denied any personal or political relationship between the governor and Slaughter.

"Mr. Flaherty ... is just trying to grab a cheap headline," Hackney said.

Also Thursday, campaign spokesmen for GOP Rep. Jim Martin and Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said they were considering four dates in September for a debate between the gubernatorial candidates.

The most likely dates are Sept. 8, 9, 15 or 16, said Martin spokesman Robert Jones.

TOPPLED ... The dinner-time storm that blew through Pitt County Thursday toppled this oak that stood in what is now Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bright's front yard for more than five generations. None of the utility and telephone lines surrounding the tree were damaged when the oak was snapped from its base. The Brights live in the Winterville Township area. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Storm Hits Stately Oak

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The oak tree that stood until last night in the front yard of the Bright's Winterville Township home was no less stately lying on its side than it was over the five generations it provided shade or a crook to sit in.

The 150 (or so) year-old tree was snapped from its base during a storm that "shook and rattled" Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bright's home during the dinner hour Thursday.

"It was something else," Mrs. Bright said. "It was absolutely terrible out here. It rained so hard I could hardly see and then I heard the wind on top of the house, you know how wind sounds when it gets under tin. Then the house started shaking and I told Ralph I believed we were having a tornado so I got under that table in the hallway."

As soon as all was quiet, Mrs. Bright said she came out from her hiding place to take a look around and saw that her tree had been blown down. None of the family pictures atop the table had been disturbed. The grandkids and kids, their images forever fixed by Kodak, smiled the same wholesome smiles.

UNC Chairman

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Philip G. Carson, an Asheville lawyer, was elected board chairman by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors today.

Carson was one of two candidates nominated for the post. Winston-Salem mayor Wayne A. Corpening was also nominated, but David J. Whichard II, who was expected to be the third candidate considered, moved that the nominations be closed after Corpening's nomination. Whichard is the president and co-publisher of the Greenville Daily Reflector.

Carson was elected by written ballot and after the result of the ballot was announced, the board then moved to make the election unanimous.

The 32-member board was meeting today to replace chairman John R. Jordan Jr., who is ineligible to serve again after two terms.

Walter Davis, who nominated Carson for the post said he believed Carson would lead the board in good directions in the next two years. "This is not a vote against Bill Friday, Mayor Corben or anybody," Davis said.

Carson and Whichard are among the original members of the board formed in 1972 by the General Assembly. Corpening joined the board in 1975.

The board also appointed an acting chancellor for Winston-Salem State University and a new chancellor for the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem.

Jane Milley, dean of the fine arts school at California State University at Long Beach, was the choice of William C. Friday, president of the university system, as the new chancellor of the arts school, the Winston-Salem Journal reported today.

Ms. Milley, 44, will become the first woman to head a school in the state university system.

Friday also announced the appointment of Hayward L. Wilson Jr. as acting chancellor of Winston-Salem State University.

Board Continues Work on Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners were scheduled to meet this afternoon to consider increasing the amount of money to be placed in a reserve fund for school capital improvements and to give final approval to the 1984-1985 budget.

The county has operated on a continuing budget resolution, which holds expenditures at the 1983-84 fiscal year level, since July 1. The continuing budget resolution was adopted to give commissioners more time to work out ways to include funding for school construction needs, outlined in a county school board position statement endorsing consolidation of the county and city school systems, in the 1984-85 budget.

Commissioners and members of the county school board met Tuesday to discuss budget issues dealing with the proposed school consolidation, but failed to come to terms on the amount of money needed to move ahead with consolidation.

Later that day, commissioners asked County Manager Reginald Gray to work out figures which would provide a minimum of $2 million for a school capital reserve fund in the 1984-85 budget, while holding the tax rate needed to fund the new budget at 59 cents per $100 valuation — 5 cents per $100 more than the 54 cents rate in effect since 1980.

At a budget workshop session Thursday afternoon, Gray told commissioners that by using money earmarked for a capital reserve fund for landfill equipment; by staggering the employment of new personnel for the sheriff's department, the county communications center, the jail, and the county planning department; and by using some fund balance, the proposed 1984-85 budget could include $2 million for school capital needs, with a 59 cents tax rate.

Following Gray's report, Bob Martin, chairman of the board, suggested that in reality, a merger of the city and county school systems should cost nothing.

"If you merge the (capital) needs will be there. If you don't, the needs are still there."

"The question is how best do we do it. Merger is a side issue as far as capital needs are concerned."

Martin then said, "We've absorbed 5 cents (in tax rate) in mandated programs (such as increases in social service grant programs, pay increases for school personnel, increases in law enforcement retirement) with our growth."

"I'm amazed that you came out with (only) 5 cents," increase in the tax rate Commissioner Charles Gaskins told Gray.

"Do we wait and deliberate more on the needs of the schools?" Martin asked.

"Yes," Gaskins suggested. "Let's see if there is a possibility of speeding up merger."

Gaskins then said the proposed 1984-85 budget includes "$1.1 million more than in 1983-84 for schools," not including the money in reserve for capital projects. "That's 5 cents on the tax rate."

Gray then said that with the proposed $2 million reserve, more than 70 percent of the county's ad valorem tax revenue "goes to the schools."

The board agreed to meet Friday afternoon to consider increasing the amount of the school capital reserve to be included in the new budget and to consider giving final approval to the budget for 1984-85.

In other business, commissioners adopted an amendment to the interim budget resolution to allow county employees to receive the 7½ percent pay hike included in the proposed 1984-85 budget this month; approved a $5,000 a year raise for Gray (including 7.5 percent plus merit), which will increase the county manager's salary from $42,000 to $47,000 a year; and gave approval to a proposal to allow the city and county school boards to furnish two teachers for the nature center at River Park North.

Rebels Kill 13 Soldiers

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels ambushed a military patrol and killed 13 soldiers in a five-hour battle along El Salvador's main highway, military sources said.

The sources said 17 other soldiers were wounded in Thursday's fighting on a section of the Pan American Highway about 75 miles east of San Salvador. They said a "large number" of guerrillas were killed and wounded.

In another development, Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora said an alliance agreement between the two major rebel groups fighting the leftist Sandinista government "is a fraud."

He accused Alfonso Robelo, political director of the Costa Rican-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, of undermining the rebel movement by allying with the Honduran-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force, whose members include former national guardsmen of the late rightist president Anastasio Somoza. Pastora, a former Sandinista commander who helped topple Somoza in 1979, heads the main fighting force of the Costa Rica-based rebels but has split with Robelo over the alliance issue.

As the battle between Salvadoran soldiers and guerrillas ensued, other army patrols rushed to the scene from San Vicente. The reinforcements were backed by U.S.-made A-37 Dragonfly jets and helicopters that bombed and strafed the rebels as they tried to dig in along both sides of the highway, according to sources who asked not to be identified for security reasons. The army also used mortar fire to drive away the rebels.

About 20 miles north of the site of the ambush, several hundred troops pressed a two-day-old anti-guerrilla sweep on a low range of hills called Cerros de San Pedro, military sources in San Vicente said.

Several gunbattles took place, but the military sources said they had no reports of casualties.

The rebels have been waging a civil war against the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government for 4½ years.

In the agreement signed Wednesday in Panama, the two Nicaraguan rebel groups said they would try to install a transitional government in Nicaragua, in cooperation with the Sandinistas, and hold free elections by the end of this year. The Sandinistas, however, have refused to negotiate with the rebels.

Pastora, speaking to a news conference in Costa Rica through a telephone and radio hookup said to be from southern Nicaragua, said that "what happened yesterday in Panama is a fraud."

He said Robelo intends "with this shameful alliance, to usurp the struggle and martyrism of the people of Nicaragua and the combatants that here, in the southern front of the country, give their lives for the definite liberation of the fatherland."

An open split between Pastora, who was wounded in an assassination attempt May 30, and Revolutionary Democratic Alliance developed in the past two months. Pastora was ousted from alliance June 25.

Pastora said his group would keep fighting until the Sandinistas agreed to a political solution to the Nicaragua conflict under a democratic process monitored by international agencies.

The Sandinistas have said they will continue a state of emergency restricting free speech and press until the United States ceases "aggression" against the government.

Volunteers Save Historic Church In Florida Keyes

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

TAVERNIER, Fla. (AP) — The old wooden building on the east side of U.S. 1 here could be called "the resurrected church." To the 2,000 residents of this island city between Key Largo and Islamorada, it's a historic community center used by local clubs and charitable organizations.

To John and Lois Stormont, it represents a labor of love. There's nothing ostentatious about the building or its furnishings nor is it particularly old as churches go.

But for the Stormonts and others who helped in its restoration, it is a part of the keys' history they believe should be preserved.

"I like old buildings and I hated the thought of it being turned into kindling," says Mrs. Stormont, recalling it faced demolition in 1981 when it was located several blocks away on the other side of the highway.

To save the building, the couple formed the non-profit Old Tavernier Town Association and purchased the decrepit structure for $1,000. The money was raised by the Stormonts, friends and sympathizers who put on bake and yard sales, held raffles and asked for donations.

The original church was built in 1890 and was called Barnett's Chapel.

"This was farm country and the church was the focal point for everything," explains Mrs. Stormont, a Grand Rapids, Mich., native who came here from Miami in 1973 a year after her marriage.

The original church was washed away in the Sept. 2, 1935, hurricane, the most intense hurricane of modern times, which struck the midsection of the keys with maximum winds estimated at more than 200 mph. More than 400 people perished.

With the remains of Barnett's Chapel and "lumber scrounged from demolished homes, they built this one and called it the Tavernier Methodist Church," Mrs. Stormont says. In 1959, the Methodists moved to a new building and it was sold to the Masonic Lodge, which used it until Mrs. Stormont learned it was up for sale again in 1981.

She laughs now when recalling the problems the association encountered after the building was purchased.

"First we bought this 75-by-100-foot lot on U.S. 1. That cost $26,000. Then we had to move the building 15 feet from the one it was attached to and that cost $1,000," she explains.

Later that year, it took an additional $4,000 to move the building across the busy highway into a vacant lot and, finally, another $4,000 to transport it three blocks to where it is today.

John Stormont supervised the restoration and did much of the work, aided by volunteers, while the town's women continued with their fundraising activities. Stormont works as an electronics repairman and the couple operate a mail-order underwater movie and slide business from their home. They have an 8-year-old son, Stephen.

The building is usable now, much to the benefit of citizens' groups and town clubs. Mrs. Stormont says blood drives are headquartered here and the place has become a favorite setting for local weddings.

Before the church project was completed, the Stormonts found another building — the old Merlin Albury home. That one cost $7,800 to have moved three blocks to lots donated next to the church. Restoration has begun, but its eventual use hasn't been determined yet.

The house was built in 1928 by Albury, Tavernier's postmaster from 1916 to 1926. He was a son of early homesteaders who came here in 1882.

When the 1935 hurricane struck, the building broke loose from its foundation, was swept 200 feet down the road by torrential wind and rain and smashed into what was then the town's railroad station.

Although these two buildings are not particularly old, Mrs. Stormont points out they represent an era when Tavernier had few modern conveniences.

"There was no electricity here until the 1940s and it was only on for three hours a day," she says. "That's what makes this area so neat."

BEE STINGS

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For one person in a hundred, a bee sting can result in a fatal allergic reaction.

Swelling of the face or an outbreak of hives all over the body after being stung on the hand is one example of an allergic reaction which involves parts of the body beyond the place of the sting, according to the makers of Spectracide insect control products.

Immediate reactions to stings can be characterized by hives, swelling of the blood vessels, inflammation of the nose, dizziness, pallor, fainting, cold skin, stomach sickness and shock. The more quickly these symptoms appear, the more severe they are likely to be and medical attention should be sought quickly.

'Tan, Don't Burn' Is Classic Summer Advice

By HARPER'S BAZAAR
A Hearst magazine

The dean of American dermatologists says you can have a summer tan without worrying that your skin will age before you do.

The trick is to tan without burning, as Dr. Norman Orentreich advises in an interview in Harper's Bazaar's July issue.

"I never tell my patients to stay out of the sun," says Orentreich. "First, because I know they won't listen to me. Second, because a pasty pallor simply is not considered very attractive in today's society."

Moderate sun exposure is healthy, he says, because it helps the body turn cholesterol into vitamin D and helps peel off skin layers that can clog pores. Sunshine improves skin ailments such as acne, atopic dermatitis and psoriasis.

"Of course, all those benefits are lost if you overdo it and get burned," Orentreich warns. "Tan, don't burn, is the classic advice, and it can't be improved upon."

To achieve a safe tan, he advises sunning in the early morning and late afternoon, avoiding the midday sun. Use a sunscreen, beginning with a high SPF (Sun Protection Factor) and working your way down as you achieve a base tan. The fairer the skin, the higher the SPF number needed for safe tanning.

The dermatologist says he would not encourage his patients to get their tans at UVA tanning salons because, although UVA rays "are not the kind that burn the skin ... they do penetrate more deeply into the basal layers of the skin and are damaging as far as skin aging is concerned."

Getting older adds to the ability to tolerate sunshine, with children at the greatest risk of over-exposure.

"As we age," Orentreich said, "we become somewhat less vulnerable ... but not enough to dispense completely with sunscreens and sun-blocks."

Reason For Concern

The North Carolina Democrat leadership may have yet another reason for concern how the party's large majority of voters will actually vote come November. Their ranks may be infiltrated by many of conservative philosophies.

The tradition of party loyalty, already worn thin, could be further strained by the effort to register new voters long after the pre-primary campaign to swell the number of voters in the party ranks.

In that pre-primary registration roundup a number of forces were in the field.

We saw old line loyalists in action; there were the Jackson, Hart and Mondale supporters looking for new voters — and a new element, the Moral Majority, flushing out the unregistered and getting their names on the books. While party membership appears irrelevant to the MM, they are recruiting churchgoers with leanings toward Jesse Helms and Ronald Reagan.

State Elections Director Alex Brock says the Moral Majority is looking for a "small army" of 200,000 new voters in North Carolina before the general election.

That campaign is well-organized and well-financed; the targeted new voters are said to be chosen for their conservative leanings and their fundamentalist ministers are being coached to endorse candidates from the pulpit and then lead their congregations to the polls.

The Rev. Lamarr Mooneyham, a Republican and former N.C. president of Moral Majority, estimates the MM machine has registered about 50,000 new voters; others think it could be twice that number, and the campaign is far from over.

It all goes to make November an intriguing month to look forward to.

Far Apart

Washington is preparing to join a negotiating table in Vienna with the Soviet Union, and does not know for sure if the Russians will be there.

That tells you something about how far apart we are.

To add further to our wonderment, if the Russians do show up in Vienna there is no certainty there will be any negotiating.

The process began with the Kremlin finally proposing talks on a moratorium for space weaponry. That was in June. (Raising the prospect of a far-out "star wars" defense must have touched a nerve.)

The administration said OK, and suggested including other relevant topics. That, said the Russians, displayed U.S. insincerity and constituted a "no" in their eyes.

A new Russian proposal, to prepare a joint statement outlining the purpose of the Vienna talks, ran into similar balking and shying-away.

It is very evident we not only speak different languages, but cannot even agree on what to agree about.

That Iron Curtain is not only almost escape-proof for most of the inmates, it is almost impenetrable to exchanging ideas.

RALEIGH — This may be hard to believe, but there are some people who don't want to stop working when they get the chance. They don't look forward to retirement. They like their jobs and don't dream about the day when they can sleep late, go fishing every afternoon and take long vacations. When the time comes to retire, they fight it.

The General Assembly has just decided that the mandatory retirement age of 70 for state employees isn't needed anymore. In action taken during the 1984 session, they repealed the law that had sent most state workers out to pasture at that age.

"There are many people who are capable and they want to work after the age of 70," says Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, a member of the study committee which recommended the change. "The activity certainly keeps them more involved in the things that they have spent their lives doing."

It was only five years ago, in 1979, that the assembly raised the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70. The age of 65 had been set back in 1935 when Social Security was created under the administration of President Franklin Roosevelt. At that time, life expectancy at birth was only 61. Today, life expectancy at birth is 74.5 years and the average 65-year-old can expect to live to 83.

The committee which recommended repeal of mandatory retirement said, "We do not believe it is the desire of state government to discriminate against senior citizens. ... Everyone should be evaluated on his mental and physical ability and his need and desire to work."

The committee heard testimony that the mandatory retirement age was being used as a cop-out by some state administrators. "Managers do not want to tell a 70-year-old that his performance is not satisfactory" so they let mandatory retirement force the worker out rather than perform an unpleasant task. In its report, the committee reacted strongly: "In-competents should be dealt with when they are determined to be incompetent."

Those who opposed elimination of mandatory retirement said it would hurt the job market for the young. If older people don't step aside, there'll be fewer openings for those entering the workforce. The committee said this was not a valid argument. "Most state employees retire when they have earned enough retirement income to meet their needs," the committee concluded. Most state employees don't stay on to age 65, let alone try to go past 70.

Of all the state employees working in the public schools, teachers included, only 243 were over the age of 65 during 1983, the committee reported. Most people would prefer to retire early and go fishing.

The bill had been proposed early in the 1983 session but had stalled after amendments added by the House proved unacceptable to the Senate. In 1984, a compromise was worked out on those changes. Some employees of the public schools and the university system will still be covered by mandatory retirement provisions.

The assembly approved several other recommendations of the Study Committee on Aging. It appropriated an extra half million dollars for the expansion of the state's senior citizen centers and an extra $200,000 for adult day care. The laws protecting the privacy of the personal records of domiciliary home residents were strengthened and a tax break was provided to adults who take care of their elderly, low-income, parents.

A major proposal which did not gain passage would have raised from $8,500 to $9,500 the property tax homestead exemption for persons over 65 and for the disabled. It would have also raised the income limit for such persons from $9,000 to $10,000.

Burned Out By The News

LOS ANGELES — Carter White House aide Hamilton Jordan was serving in the third set of a tennis match several years ago when a telephone rang at court.

Noticeably upset by the interruption, Jordan hustled to the phone, spoke for no more than two minutes and raced back to the court. With the White House in the background, Jordan's three colleagues curiously asked him what the call was about.

Two 747 jetliners had collided on "some island," the Carter confidant replied nonchalantly, adding with a chuckle that more than 500 passengers and crew members had been "burned like Post Toasties." Six years after that macabre remark about the Canary Islands airline disaster — the worst in history — the largest death toll by a single gunman on record in the United States elicited a similar degree of disinterest from the editor of a newspaper in Southern California. When told that more than 20 people may have died that day at a McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, a California town not far from his own, the editor said, "People down there are always shooting one another up. Don't worry about it."

Both Jordan and the editor came from two professions — politics and journalism — often given to cynicism. They could have been having bad days, too.

But some of us might remember reacting as those two men did. In these days of seemingly regular calamities, too much news can kill any one person's ability to respond.

Consider these latest incidents in a year that has included the Korean Airlines disaster: the arrest of an Illinois man suspected of committing as many as eight murders in the Midwest; the deaths of 116 mineworkers in accidents in two Taiwanese mines; the deaths of 207 Vietnamese in fighting on the China/Vietnam border; the derailment of an Amtrak train in Vermont leading to five deaths and dozens of injuries. (There have been three Amtrak train accidents in July alone.)

As Archibald MacLeish said, "We're deluged with facts but we've lost or are losing our human ability to feel them." Bad news, in fact, runs off our shoulders like droplets of water after a shower.

Instead of whetting our appetites for more information, the technological revolution may have retarded our interest.

The result, in part, is that we almost immediately lunge for soft information. Former Miss America Vanessa Williams' forced decision to relinquish her crown, prompted by photographs published in September's Penthouse, is a case in point. While the Miss America incident may have hurt one individual's fortunes, the announcement and preliminary furor over the scandal almost immediately shoved the San Ysidro massacre into the background.

Another consequence of the bad news glut is a reduced ability to turn destructive incidents into positive action.

For example, the San Ysidro tragedy — wrought singlehandedly by a gun collector who included in his arsenal a semi-automatic pistol, shotgun and Israeli-made machine gun — would seem to give the gun control lobby a tremendous boost. Not surprisingly, Pete Shields of the Washington-based Handgun Control, Inc. was in San Diego on Monday to announce upcoming advertisements by his organization in local newspapers.

But even San Ysidro probably won't turn Congress against the National Rifle Association, because the massacre survivors and Handgun Control will be among the few who remember the incident a year, if not months, from now.

To an extent, our responses to tragedy have been institutionalized.

Image Of 'Fighting Fritz' Fades Into The Sunset

SAN FRANCISCO — Even at the moment of Walter F. Mondale's domination of the convention to a degree not seen in 20 years, his conciliatory pattern — particularly in handling the platform — nurtured doubts whether he is prepared to wage the high-risk campaign needed to catch President Reagan.

Such doubt was prevalent on the convention floor, among party leaders and rank-and-file delegates alike. Although few were worried about the substance of Mondale's left-leaning platform compromises, concern about the nominee's will was energized by his caution in making those concessions — especially on Sen. Gary Hart's plank restricting use of U.S. force abroad. Mondale accepted language that imposes unprecedented restrictions on sending American troops abroad despite warnings that it would signal weakness around the world.

Sen. Chris Dodd of Connecticut, Hart's most prominent backer and a passionate critic of U.S. intervention in Central America, refused to lead the expected floor fight over the troops-abroad issue because he thought his candidate's position went too far. But as it turned out, there was no floor battle. Over the advice of his own national security advisers, Mondale chose caution, not confrontation. To appease Hart, he accepted the plank that most sharply underlines Democratic Party weakness on national security issues.

Fear of how this can affect the Mondale campaign was openly voiced by some prominent Democrats. "There is no place for it (the troops-abroad plank) in the platform," Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware told us. Mayor Ed Koch of New York City predicted "Reagan will try to paint Mondale as part of the radical left."

Those views are backed by dissenters within the Mondale inner circle. "Reagan will drive that (Hart) plank down our throat," said one Mondale aide who had pushed hard for a floor fight against it. Mondale's last-minute retreat may have stimulated Virginia Gov. Chuck Robb's fervent warning from the convention podium Wednesday evening. The Democrats, he said, "cannot become a party afraid to say no, even to our friends."

Some Mondale apologists blame campaign chairman Jim Johnson, who achieved the seemingly unattainable strife-free convention with liberal use of concessions. But more than any other political adviser, Johnson is the trusted aide whose advice Mondale finds most congenial. Moreover, the overriding mood last Thursday in the Mondale camp was jubilation over what can only be described as a formidable accomplishment: a safe-and-sane first-ballot victory with no serious delegate defections in the face of overwhelmingly unfavorable Reagan-vs.-Mondale polls.

Nevertheless, the image of Fighting Fritz would have been enhanced had he followed through on elaborate preparations for attacking the Hart plank head-on. Playing a key role was AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who informed Mondale that he had lined up the United Auto Workers and every other major union except AFSCME against the Hart plank. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, asked by the Mondale camp to help with a rip-snorting speech, was revved up to deliver it when Mondale suddenly surrendered.

Quite apart from domestic political considerations, Mondale's retreat suggests to the world a lack of post-Vietnam American will in Central America and the Persian Gulf, the chief targets of the Hart plank. "When they read this language abroad," a high U.S. diplomat told us, "they'll smell retreat."

That explains Mondale's early and correct decision to demolish the plank on the convention floor. But the decision was reversed when Monale advisers argued that the Moscow Convention Center was stacked with too many delegates afflicted with the Vietnam syndrome — today's isolationists.

Those delegates threatened passage of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's plank promising "no-first-use" of nuclear weapons. Since Mondale strategists considered that fight more critical than the troops-abroad issue, a deal of sorts was struck:

Hart's forces opposing no-first-use in return for Mondale's buying the troops-abroad plank.

The deal hardly seemed necessary after no-first-use lost by almost 1,000 votes. That stuck Mondale with the most restrictive foreign-policy language in a Democratic platform since America's emergence as a world power more than 40 years ago.

Mondale aides promised he would deliver an "explanation" of his agreement on the Hart plank, presumably a personal "understanding" designed to dilute its effect. But no such statement has been announced. When it comes, it will be a forgotten footnote, lost in the presidential campaign.

Gary Hart's effort to hamstring Fighting Fritz Mondale in his conduct of foreign policy is embedded in the party platform, the price the nominee paid for his peaceful convention at the expense of the campaign ahead.

Strength For Today

An American inventor recently spoke on the topic, "Can We Produce Inventors?" His position was that we can indeed do so provided that these men are willing to face perhaps a whole life of failure. He made it plain that most great inventions have been built on the apparently fruitless experiments of many men who seem to have failed and died without seeing brought forth the thing for which they had hoped.

in the Epistle to the Hebrews, the author speaks of those who "having had witness borne them through their faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, ..." Jesus failed in the eyes of his generation, yet this "failure" brought the possibility of spiritual fulfillment to every human soul.

In an age which underscores success, remember that there is such a thing as failing intelligently. And it is a noble achievement.

Running Is Not Disorder

DURHAM (AP) — Compulsive runners have a healthy obsession and not a disorder similar to anorexia nervosa, which affects mostly young women who starve themselves, according to a Duke University Medical Center study.

"Essentially, anorectic patients are as a group more disturbed than runners are; runners as a group are basically well-adjusted," said Dr. James A. Blumenthal, an assistant professor of medical psychology.

Blumenthal was the main author of the Duke report, published in today's special Olympic edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

He and two other Duke researchers used a standard psychological test — the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory — to compare the personalities of 43 compulsive runners and 21 anorectic patients. Twenty-one of the runners were women, while all but two of the anorexia sufferers were women.

"The MMPI gives us an indication about how mentally healthy and well-adjusted a person is," said Blumenthal. "As a group, those with anorexia had more extreme scores than the runners, who appeared to be healthier mentally as well as physically."

The Duke study contrast a 1983 University of Arizona study which found similar personality traits in obsessive male long distance runners and anorectic females.

"Metaphorically the two may be similar, but not psychologically," said Blumenthal. "You can injure yourself by running too much, but, unlike anorexia, it isn't likely to kill you. Running generally enhances health, self-esteem and self-confidence."

Some of the participants, who were recruited on the Duke campus, at area road races and through a Durham athletic club for runners, had competed in Olympic trials.

A compulsive runner is one who has occasional daydreams about running, has feelings of tension, depression or irritability after missed workouts and sometimes runs while sick or injured, Blumenthal said.

He said it would be worthwhile to conduct another study with more participants.

"We still need to know what it is about anorectics that makes them vulnerable," he said. "There still needs to be more work on the motivational aspects of obligatory running."

Mass Jailing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cots were set up side-by-side at the county jail to get ready for the arrival of 200 drunken driving offenders called to serve their 48-hour sentences in the second mass jailing in two months, officials said.

"It's kind of cramped. It'll be crowded ... but there's still enough room for them to be housed," said Marty Szeigis, an administrative assistant to Davidson County Sheriff Fate Thomas.

The jailing is to reduce a backlog of 1,100 cases that has built up since the state passed a tough drunken driving statute in 1982, Szeigis said Thursday.

Under the law, a first conviction for driving under the influence of alcohol carries a mandatory 48-hour jail term.

"Some people said the last time we did it that it was crowded, but most realize it's not going to be a picnic anyway. They just want to serve their 48 hours," Szeigis said.

Most of the first offenders who show up will be put to work, most likely picking up litter around the county or cleaning up the Criminal Justice Center, Szeigis said.

"Everybody who is physically able works," he said. "If they're not able to work, they stay in their area."

"The last time we did this, we sent out 12 trucks of workers who went throughout the county picking up trash along the highway."

About 150 cots have been set up in a 7,200-square-foot recreation area at the Criminal Justice Center to accommodate the influx of first-time drunken drivers.

The sheriff's department jailed about 260 first offenders the weekend of June 1, and had no problems dealing with the crowd, Szeigis said.

Any overflow will be sent to a dormitory at the Metropolitan Nashville Workhouse where there are 50 beds, Szeigis said.

About 50 to 100 people are convicted under the drunken driving law each week, Szeigis said. Between 30 and 50 first offenders usually show up each weekend to serve the mandatory sentences, he said.

Genetic Therapy Coming

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

BAR HARBOR, Me. (AP) — Rapid advances in genetic engineering will soon make possible attempts to treat the growing number of human genetic disorders that have been traced to simple genetic defects, researchers say.

Those first attempts at human experimentation could come within three years, according to Dr. Thomas Caskey of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Caskey said Thursday at a press conference at Bar Harbor's Jackson Laboratory that among the first candidates for treatment is an ailment he studies known as Lesch-Nyhan syndrome.

The disease, which has been traced to a defect in a single gene, is characterized by mental retardation, spastic involuntary movements and self-mutilation, including biting of the lips and fingers.

The proposed treatment would be to stitch working copies of the defective gene into the cells of victims of the disease, a technique that has been accomplished with a hereditary growth abnormality in mice, Caskey said.

While problems remain in applying gene therapy to humans, the outlook is bright, he said. "Everything is pointing in the right direction for it to work."

Nevertheless, he said, "there is a long list of problems, of things we don't really have control over, and I think they're going to be very important before we initiate clinical (human) trials."

Caskey listed some of the recent achievements that are rapidly making gene therapy possible:

— Researchers at various institutions have constructed artificial viruses that can infect human and mouse cells and in so doing can insert human genes into those cells.

— A hereditary growth deficiency in mice has been corrected by injecting growth hormone genes into mouse embryos.

— The gene defect responsible for a variety of human disorders have been identified, and the genes for some of them have been isolated and can be replicated in the laboratory.

Caskey has made artificial viruses that carry the gene that is defective in Lesch-Nyhan syndrome, and he has used them in the laboratory to infect human cells from Lesch-Nyhan patients. When he does so, the cells pick up the gene and the defect is corrected.

The viruses he uses, called retroviruses, have the natural ability to get into human genes and alter them.

A research team led by Inder Verma at the Salk Institute and Theodore Friedmann at the University of California at San Diego are also moving toward therapy of Lesch-Nyhan syndrome.

What the scientists would eventually like to do is to try the experiment in a patient, to see whether the patient's cells will begin to produce the missing enzyme and thereby correct the disease.

Among the difficulties, Caskey explained, are directing the replacement genes to the central nervous system, where the defective genes would normally function. Putting the replacement genes in the wrong parts of the body could be dangerous.

"That's something we're going to have to look at extremely carefully," he said. Furthermore, the genes will have to produce the correct amount of enzyme. As biologists put it, the genes must be properly regulated. It is not yet known how to control that regulation in this kind of therapy, Caskey said.

Other diseases that are likely candidates for gene therapy include hereditary deficiency in adenosine deaminase deficiency, or ADA, which results in a failure of the immune system to ward off disease. Various ailments related to the urea cycle, a chemical process that helps rid the body of waste products, are also candidates for gene therapy, Caskey said.

Such treatment poses difficult ethical questions, Caskey said, but he noted that the use of new and possibly dangerous treatments is not unlike the first use of anti-cancer drugs, which are highly toxic themselves.

In the case of very serious diseases, like cancer or Lesch-Nyhan syndrome, the risks of using potentially dangerous therapies may be worth taking, he said.

James Mason Is Dead

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — James Mason, the distinguished British-born actor whose film career spanned nearly 50 years, died early today at the age of 75, his wife said.

With his urbane manner and silky voice, Mason epitomized the suave British gentleman in dozens of films. But he was capable of a broad range of characterizations, from Humbert Humbert the obsessed pursuer of the nymphet in "Lolita" to World War II German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in "The Desert Fox."

He was nominated three times for an Academy Award.

Australian actress Clarissa Kaye Mason, reached at the couple's home in Corseaux, a small village near the city of Vevey, confirmed a report by Mason's London agent that Mason had died, but did not comment.

The agent, Maggie Parker, told The Associated Press in London that Mason suffered a "massive heart attack" at 2 a.m., and died at the Lausanne University Hospital Center at 7 a.m.

The Cambridge-educated Mason was nominated three times for Academy Awards — for his portrayal of a suave but unscrupulous Boston lawyer in "The Verdict," for his role as a benevolent sugar daddy in "Georgy Girl" and for his role as a declining actor in the 1954 version of "A Star is Born."

Mason's other top films include "Lolita," 1962; "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" 1954; "Julius Caesar," 1953, and "Heaven Can Wait," 1977.

Other top movies included "North By Northwest," and "The Desert Fox." Mason was born in Huddersfield, England, on May 15, 1909, the third son of cloth merchant John Mason and his wife Mabel.

He was educated at Marlborough School and at Cambridge, where he studied the classics. He became an apprentice architect in 1931, but soon left what he considered a confining job in architecture for acting, and arrived in London with the equivalent of about $10 in his pocket.

He answered a newspaper advertisement in 1931 and got his first theatrical acting job, in "Rasputin, The Rascal Monk."

Swiftly he moved to the Old Vic Theater and the Gate Theater in Dublin before going into films in 1935, making his debut in "Late Extra."

He moved from Britain to Hollywood in 1946, where he starred in more than 50 films. He went to live in Switzerland in 1962.

His film career grew quickly after World War II with "The Seventh Veil" in 1945 and "Odd Man Out."

In one of his best-known films he played the visionary Captain Nemo in the film of the Jules Verne classic "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

He also starred in the 1959 film of another Verne story, "Journey to the Center of the Earth."

His last film was a Monty Python farce, "Yellowbeard."

Last year Mason went on tour with the reissued film of "A Star is Born," which starred Judy Garland and Mason as the man who discovered Miss Garland and then fell into suicidal depression after her rise eclipsed his career.

He had two children — Portland Allen and Alexander Morgan — by his first wife, British actress Pamela Kellino. They were divorced.

Amtrak Wreck

GOOSE CREEK, S.C. (AP) — An Amtrak train carrying 360 passengers rammed a pickup truck at a crossing with no warning lights, killing a woman in the truck and injuring her husband in the railway's fifth fatal accident in 22 days, authorities said.

None of the passengers on the northbound Silver Meteor, bound from Jacksonville, Fla., to New York City, was injured in the crash at around 10:30 p.m. Thursday, authorities said.

The train, which suffered only minor damage to the front of the engine, did not derail.

The truck was on the tracks at the crossing when the accident occurred, but preliminary reports conflicted on whether the truck was moving at the time of the crash.

Goose Creek police Chief Richard Ruonala said the truck apparently tried to make the crossing into a subdivision in front of the train. However, Robbie McLaughlin, a general yardmaster for Seaboard Systems, which is in charge of tracks in South Carolina, said information from the engineer indicated that the truck was stopped when the train hit it.

The crossing has a stop sign but no warning lights or gate, McLaughlin said.

The truck was knocked about 150 feet off the tracks into a utility pole and its roof was sliced off, Ruonala said.

Patricia Phillips, 35, of Berkeley County, died of her injuries. Her husband, Michael Phillips, was treated at North Trident Hospital in North Charleston and released early today, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Silver Meteor was stopped for "45 minutes to an hour" while police and Seaboard officials questioned the engineers, then headed north again, McLaughlin said.

Goose Creek is about 15 miles northwest of Charleston.

Thursday's crash was the third fatal Amtrak collision with a truck in South Carolina this month, and the fifth in the nation.

On July 4, the Amtrak Silver Star collided with a pickup truck in Elgin, killing a man and a woman.

On July 11, the train engineer and a truck driver were killed when the Silver Star collided with a gasoline tanker in McBee, setting off a fierce fire.

Charged In Norfolk Abortion Scheme

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A doctor charged in a scheme to perform abortions on women who weren't pregnant claims the problem was misdiagnosis. But officials say over a dozen women were wrongly told they were pregnant — including one who had a man's urine tested.

Dr. Chris Simopoulos, owner of the American Women's Clinic in Norfolk, appeared in court Thursday on a felony charge of attempting to obtain money by false pretenses.

Simopoulos, 46, who was convicted five years ago of performing an illegal abortion in Fairfax County, was arrested at the clinic Wednesday as he prepared to perform an abortion on an undercover policewoman who was not pregnant, police said. The police investigation followed probes by the Tidewater chapter of the National Organization for Women and The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star. After Thursday's court hearing, Simopoulos' attorney, Chris A. Christie, said, "There's a tremendous difference between medical misdiagnosis and a criminal intentional, fraudulent act."

Bad urine samples or incorrect information supplied by patients could lead to an incorrect diagnosis, Christie said.

"Doctors are only human, not only this doctor but many doctors," he said. "If you consider a misdiagnosis as a criminal act, there would be a lot of problems in the medical field."

A report by the manufacturer of the tests, Organon Diagnostics of West Orange, N.J., said chances of a false positive result are less than one in 1,000.

At least four policewomen had urine tests at the clinic on Monday and Tuesday, and three were told they were pregnant, said Capt. W.A. Williamson of the police vice and narcotics squad.

Testing elsewhere showed the three were not pregnant, he said.

One of the policewomen returned to the clinic on Wednesday for a physical examination and an abortion. As Simopoulos prepared to perform the procedure, the officer stopped him, called another officer from the lobby and arrested the doctor, Williamson said.

Sixteen women from NOW and the newspapers got free pregnancy tests at the clinic, and 14 were told they were pregnant, although examinations elsewhere showed they were not.

Among those told they were pregnant were a woman who was surgically sterilized two years ago and another who substituted a man's urine for her own in the pregnancy test.

NOW became suspicious when the clinic sought to take out an advertisement in a newsletter last fall but failed to satisfactorily answer questions, said spokeswoman Susan Fincke. The investigation was begun in May when the group heard repeated rumors of problems at the clinic, NOW said.

The clinic, which opened last fall, is not licensed by the state Board of Medicine and is not inspected by state officials. Under a 1973 U.S. Supreme Court ruling, doctors who perform first-trimester abortions as a regular part of private practice cannot be regulated by the state.

Simopoulos, who owns a similar clinic in Fairfax County, lost his license for 15 months after he was convicted in 1979 of performing an abortion on a 5½-months pregnant teen-ager in his unlicensed clinic. State law requires that abortions after the first three months be performed in licensed facilities.

The Norfolk clinic is under investigation by the state, which received complaints from NOW and from a Portsmouth obstetrician who treated a woman for complications from an abortion, said Gary Anderson, chief compliance officer for the Department of Health Regulatory Boards.

The state Board of Medicine is also considering whether to suspend Simopoulos' license and should complete its investigation within a few days, Anderson said.

Simopoulos, released on $1,000 bond, was ordered to appear at a preliminary hearing Sept. 7. If convicted of the felony charge, he could be sentenced to two to 10 years in prison, Williamson said.

A woman who answered the telephone at the Norfolk clinic Thursday said it was not open. Asked when it would reopen, she said, "It all depends, and there's no comment."

Janice Kohl, a NOW spokeswoman, said the group wants the clinic shut and the Board of Medicine to permanently revoke the licenses of physicians who perform unnecessary abortions.

Although NOW advocates the right to abortion, "we fear that some women who are told they are pregnant may get abortions they don't need," Ms. Kohl said.

Plowshares Sentenced

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A federal judge said the case "does not involve a debate between war and peace" when he gave eight anti-war protesters jail terms for an Easter Sunday defense plant break-in.

The eight, who called themselves the Pershing Plowshares, received three-year terms and $2,900 fines for vandalizing Pershing 2 nuclear missile parts.

"No one will dispute the desire for peace," Judge George Young said. But he told the protesters they cannot "pick and choose the laws you like and disobey the rest."

Young also gave them five years probation after their federal sentences are completed.

The eight out-of-state defendants were jailed after sentencing, declining an offer by the judge to discuss being freed on bail during an appeal filed immediately after the trial.

The protesters admitted the break-in and vandalism at Martin Marietta Corp., which manufactures components of the Pershing 2 nuclear missile but does not assemble them. Damage included the smearing of blood and hammering of missile parts.

They said their acts were in response to a higher, moral law than that of man, but Young said they should have taken their view to "the representatives of the people."

One of the defendants, Roman Catholic nun Anne Montgomery, 57, spoke about a prosecution argument that they had been living in an Alice in Wonderland world.

"I'm under the impression I'm on the wrong side of Alice's looking glass," she said in her presentence statement.

The reason for their acts, she said, was "to walk through the looking glass to the world that is real."

The eight protesters acted as "listening, obedient and responsible people," she added.

Prosecutor Tom Turner, who had asked the judge for stiff jail terms because "leniency seems to stimulate such activity rather than deter it," said he was satisfied with the sentences.

He said he was confident the sentences "will be upheld on appeal."

The eight Plowshares protesters were convicted on July 14. Each defendant was assessed $2,908 or one-eighth of the total of actual damages claimed by Martin Marietta.

Each of them faced a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

All the defendants said they had expected harsh penalties, and there were no outbursts or demonstrations in the courtroom.

Plans Are Made To Reorganize Heart Unit

Plans to reorganize the Pitt County Unit of the American Heart Association were announced today by Reid Hooper of Greenville, who served as acting temporary chairman of the reorganization committee.

The first organizational meeting will be held on August 22 in the Willis Building at 7:30 p.m.

"Last year, over 343 of our county's citizens lost their lives to heart and circulatory diseases. That's 47 percent of all deaths," American Heart Association Regional Director Donna Moulton said. "Many of those had problems which can be controlled if only they had taken the proper measures to reduce their risk."

Several other prominent community leaders are involved in this reorganization of the Pitt County Heart Unit. They are Ed Walker, Jerry Powell, Lib Layne, Dr. Ray Minges, Jim Goes, Jeannette Cox, Joyce Hastings, Anne Edwards, Dr. Ed Monroe, Dr. Jim Jones, Mavis Butts, Janice Faulkner, Dr. Clarence Gray and the Rev. Kenneth Hammond. The group selected Lib Layne to conduct the public meeting on August 22.

"Reduction and proper attention to the risk factors of heart disease will be one of the major goals of the Pitt County Unit," Hooper said. "Our citizens have a right to receive this knowledge first hand. I hope that many of our citizens will join me and become actively engaged in the control of heart disease."

Tobacco Deal

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco leaders are predicting that a $12.5 million charitable contribution made by industry giants in exchange for favorable prices in Venezuela will make U.S. leaf growers angry.

"This sort of report will no doubt upset a great many tobacco growers and organizations that support tobacco growers and probably will lead to new calls for import restrictions on foreign tobacco," Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., predicted.

Rose was responding to revelations that Philip Morris Inc. and British American Tobacco Co. gave $12.5 million to a charity controlled by the wife of the man who was Venezuela's president in 1982 and 1983. In exchange, the Venezuelan government froze prices on tobacco it sold to the companies and allowed the firms to raise prices on cigarettes it bought from them.

Rose, who chairs the House tobacco subcommittee, said he would ask Philip Morris officials to explain the deal when he met with them today in Richmond, Va. He said he had scheduled the meeting weeks ago to urge Philip Morris to buy more domestic leaf.

John W. Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, said the report would be "nothing but harmful to the American tobacco grower."

"It's unfair, and even though the authorities have overlooked this for investigation, if it's of the substance it appears to be, it ought to be further and fully investigated and corrected."

Calls For Transfer

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Chairman David Flaherty said a State Ports Authority employee he claims has been shielded by Gov. Jim Hunt should work for his campaign, but a Hunt spokesman said he doesn't think Hunt knows the man.

Meanwhile, the state ports director says he cannot discuss Mather Slaughter's job at the Morehead City port because it is "related to matters that could involve national security."

"I know of no personal or political relationship between Mr. Slaughter and the governor," said Brent Hackney, Hunt's press secretary. "I don't think the governor even knows Mather Slaughter."

"Mr. Flaherty ... is just trying to grab a cheap headline."

Flaherty said Thursday that Hunt should transfer Slaughter from the state payroll to Hunt's U.S. Senate campaign payroll. Hunt, a Democrat, is challenging Sen. Jesse Helms', R-N.C., bid for a third term.

Slaughter earns $25,068 a year from the ports authority but spends little time in his office. The Greensboro News & Record reported this week.

In the newspaper article, Slaughter's co-workers said he made frequent phone calls but had produced nothing in two years that his bosses could offer as evidence of what he did.

William M.A. Green, director of the State Ports Authority, described Slaughter's job in a memo to Victor Barfield, deputy secretary of the N.C. Department of Commerce, which oversees the ports. A portion of the memo was published in today's edition of the Greensboro News & Record.

"Mather Slaughter was advised by me that his functions would be sensitive and confidential in nature concerning security matters involving the port of Morehead City and the U.S. government," Green wrote.

Barfield said he was "completely satisfied" with Green's explanation. He declined to discuss the memo further.

"The people of North Carolina are sick of their hard-earned taxes being used to supplement Jim Hunt's political coffers," said Flaherty.

Overdue Books

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese officials hurrying to close their embassy after the Imperial Navy attacked Pearl Harbor tried, in the fashion of courteous bureaucrats, to return several library books. Their request that someone collect the volumes arrived this week.

The Library of Congress received a letter, on Japanese Embassy stationery, dated Dec. 12, 1941. It said:

"Please send your messenger to the Japanese Embassy for books which we borrowed from the Library of Congress."

The letter, signed by special attaché Katsuzo Wakukawa, was forwarded to the library by the Inquiry Section of the U.S. Postal Service in Philadelphia.

An accompanying note from Postal Service claims manager Barbara J. Bonaparte suggested that the letter may have been in some individual's personal papers which were being discarded and placed in the mail only recently.

This frequently happens, according to her note, dated July 17. She said in a telephone interview that old mail of this sort comes through her hands fairly often. People may be throwing out old papers or other items, or may merely lose such materials, she said, and the finder will simply drop it in a mailbox for delivery.

Ms. Bonaparte operates the dead letter office for the Eastern United States, which means she handles undeliverable mail for a large area including Washington, D.C.

In her note to the Library of Congress, she wrote that "despite the speculations for the reason the letter just arrived in the Inquiry Section, we are forwarding this letter to your office. For the period involved and the manner in which it is addressed, the postage is adequate."

The Japanese letter, simply addressed, "The Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.," bore a 2-cent stamp. The stamp, in common use at the time, carried a drawing of an anti-aircraft gun and the legend "Army and Navy For Defense."

Memories Revived By Death

PLAINFIELD, Wis. (AP) — The death of the man whose bizarre, bone-chilling escapades put Plainfield on the map — and provided Alfred Hitchcock with his "Psycho" film character — was not an occasion for rejoicing in this central Wisconsin community.

Like every other bit of news about Ed Gein, the model for the deranged killer in "Psycho," his death Thursday after 27 years as a state mental hospital patient only revived painful memories.

"Everybody knows where Plainfield is, but from a bad experience," said village librarian Joan Reid. "Everybody likes to be from someplace known for something good. He made it bad."

Gein, 77, was found dead in his bed at Mendota Mental Institute in Madison at 7:45 a.m., said Joseph Scislowicz of the state Department of Health and Social Services.

Scislowicz said the cause of death was respiratory failure and that Gein had been in poor health for several years.

The story of Gein's escapades began unfolding Nov. 16, 1957 — the first day of deer hunting season — with his arrest for the slaying of Bernice Worden, 58, who had disappeared from the Plainfield hardware store she operated.

Gein's pickup truck had been seen near the store twice that day, and a Wood County deputy drove to Gein's farm to ask if he had noticed anything. Finding no one home, the deputy returned later, looked into a lean-to at the side of the house and found Mrs. Worden's body hanging by the heels, decapitated and "dressed out like a deer."

Authorities searched the home and found preserved human heads, female body parts, a human heart in a coffee can, lampshades fashioned from tanned human skin and a death mask of Mary Hogan, who had operated a rural tavern before disappearing three years earlier.

The room that belonged to Gein's mother before she died in 1945 was found to have been boarded up and left unchanged.

Gein was located in town and taken into custody. Found unfit to stand trial for Mrs. Worden's death, he was sent to Central State Hospital at Waupun.

Robert Bloch, author of the novel on which the 1960 movie by Hitchcock was based, lived about 50 miles from the Gein farmhouse. In the movie, the main character, Norman Bates, is obsessed by his dead mother and keeps her body in a room at his motel.

Authorities alleged that Gein had been robbing graves of recently deceased women who, like his mother, died in middle age. Mrs. Worden and Mrs. Hogan also were believed to resemble his mother in his eyes.

Gein went on trial in 1968 for the death of Mrs. Worden. Ruled insane at the time of the crime, he was found innocent by reason of insanity, and returned to the hospital.

In 1974, he sought a sanity hearing, and asked for his freedom, but Circuit Judge Robert Gollmar sent Gein back to Central State Hospital.

He had been at the Mendota institute since May 1978, Scislowicz said.

FCC Is Praised

By The Associated Press

North Carolina broadcast company owners are praising the Federal Communications Commission's decision to increase the number of radio and television stations an individual or firm may own.

"The action by the committee is a decision whose time has arrived," said Cy Bahakel, president of Bahakel Broadcasting in Charlotte. "Our company is in an expanding position because we are career broadcasters and we will try to acquire the full 12-12-12."

The decision permits individuals or companies to own 36 radio and television stations. Under the old rule, which has stood for 31 years, individuals and companies could own seven AM radio stations, seven FM radio stations, and seven television stations.

The new rule allows owners to operate 12 stations in each of the three categories.

"I believe the old rule was based on the scarcity of services available to the public," said Wallace J. Jorgansen, president of Charlotte-based Jefferson Pilot Broadcasting. "With the technological explosion that has taken place in the communication industry, the public now has a wide variety of choices for radio and television both."

Bahakel Broadcasting owns six AM radio stations, five FM stations and seven television stations. Bahakel said applications to purchase another AM station and two more FM stations brought the company to the old limit. The company owns stations in nine states besides North Carolina.

Jorgansen said he thought the old rule was imposed to prevent domination by a single owner, but he said new opportunities in broadcasting had quelled those fears.

"Personally, I wish they would remove all restrictions altogether," Jorgansen said. "I'm sure they are taking the cautious approach and plan to look at it for a while to see if it works well — and I suspect it will."

UPS Fights 18-Year Battle For Service

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Thanks to state officials who have resisted United Parcel Service's 18-year fight for permission to deliver packages within Texas, Joyce Greenberg's smoked turkeys head east to go west.

"It's very frustrating," said Mrs. Greenberg, whose company in Tyler spends about $6,000 to truck turkeys across the border to Shreveport, La., so UPS can deliver them to Texas customers.

Texas is the only state that bars UPS from using its familiar brown trucks for intrastate deliveries, according to company spokesman Dan Buckley in Greenwich, Conn. UPS handles over 100 million out-of-state packages a year in Texas and is allowed to deliver within major cities.

Since 1966, UPS has pushed for permission to take Mrs. Greenberg's turkeys — and thousands of other Texas packages — between Texas points. But the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates trucking, has ruled that a 1931 law bars the unscheduled, on-demand service UPS offers.

UPS tried to meet state law by submitting a list of the roads it would use. A hearing examiner called the list "a narrative description of the Texas state highway map."

The battle against UPS has been led by Tex-Pack Express, a group of Texas package delivery companies. Tex-Pack's anti-UPS campaign includes appeals to Texans' state pride, referring to Connecticut-based UPS as "the greedy brown giant" and "a giant, automated out-of-state corporation owned by Easterners."

In contrast, Tex-Pack likes to give itself a folksy image. "Community Pride Big Factor with Tex-Pack," says the headline on a company release. Tex-Pack service depends on local agents who "must be solid members of their community," the release says.

"(Tex-Pack agent) Bill Sherman of Rogers serves his town as mayor and is also involved with his local VFW post, civic club, volunteer fire department and volunteer ambulance service," a Tex-Pack release boasts, implying that no one cares more about Texans than a Texan.

"Texas is just an awful lot different from Massachusetts or someplace," said Tex-Pack spokesman Jake Westfall of Fort Worth. "There's a long bunch of miles out there between towns in West Texas.

They demand regular routes and schedules."

But not all Texans believe Tex-Pack is the only "good ol' boy" in the package delivery business. Marc Johnson, owner of a Cranfills Gap tractor salvage company, told legislators he needs UPS service.

"By dang, I'm mad," he said in a letter, adding that UPS has proven through its interstate service that it "delivers down dirt roads and all around the Gap daily and gladly."

Frequent shippers like Johnson know about the restrictions on UPS service in Texas. But Syl Hollman, UPS customer service manager in San Antonio, said many would-be gift-senders are surprised.

"They just don't understand why we can't ship a package within Texas. We explain it to them. I think they understand, but they're rather shocked that in this day and age they can't do it," said Hollman.

Chief Arrested

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Unnerved by the sale of their town's economic stronghold, residents say they fear the arrests of the police chief and two other officials may be just the tip of the iceberg.

"It's a mess," said a clerk at Odom's Home and Building Supply. "They're still digging. There's a lot of stuff going on ... probably a lot more. I'd like to see a clean sweep, get them all out and start over."

The crisis has divided the town's 1,000 residents, 600 of whom work for Burlington Furniture Inc, which was sold to a Lexington company Tuesday.

Few residents interviewed about the police chief would give their names for fear of alienating neighbors or customers on the other side of the issue.

"It's all political," said a Robbinstonville businessman who also asked not to be identified. "They (the Graham County Sheriff's Department) call in these big SBI (State Bureau of Investigation) agents to investigate arson, and all they come up with is a little football board."

Chief Lyonel Charles Lovin, 36, was charged Monday with two counts of operating a game of chance, two counts of possessing a gambling device and three counts of illegally operating a private security business. Police say Lovin ran a football pool and contracted with town businesses for security guard protection.

David Blaine Carver, 36, was also charged with violating state laws on security businesses. Police officer Kent Williams, 25, was charged with stealing gas from the town gas pumps.

All three men are free on bond pending a probable cause hearing Aug. 17. Lovin and Williams are still on duty at the police department by order of the town board of aldermen. The town has five police officers and the sheriff's department has six officers.

Assistant Attorney General Daniel C. Higgins in Raleigh said the three arrests followed an SBI probe into several arson cases in Graham County.

"The investigation involves more than the three arrested so far," Higgins said. "I can't say how many — more than one and less than 100."

The cases included a suspicious fire last December that destroyed Lovin's home, he said.

The anonymous Robbinstonville businessman said he thought Lovin was being harassed by Sheriff A.J. Peterson, who is a Republican, in retaliation for sheriff's department budget cuts ordered by the Democratic county board of commissioners.

"The commissioners cut his budget and he's getting back at them by jumping on the Democratic chief of police," the businessman said. "But it's backfired on the man. If a man can't carry on his duty and has to call in the state, he ought to resign."

But Peterson said: "We don't play politics after an election. Politics has nothing to do with it — not from our standpoint. The commission treated all departments the same — cut every department across the board."

"The investigation came of a fire," he added. "We asked the SBI to come in and help investigate a suspicious fire."

Lovin, Williams and Robbinstonville Mayor Frank Rogers could not be reached despite repeated telephone calls to their homes and offices.

"People are upset," said a Robbinstonville service station owner. "Everyone here knows everybody else."

"This is kind of petty stuff," said an office worker. "The big stuff is yet to come — at least that's the hearsay. This is a real nice town. Nobody knows what's going to happen."

"Little Sure Shot"

Greenville, Ohio, celebrates Annie Oakley Days this weekend. At age 10, Sharpshooter Annie was such a crack shot that she bagged enough game to feed her family of nine. She once shattered 4,772 out of 5,000 glass balls tossed in the air. Annie could shoot pennies from between her husband's fingers and hit the thin edge of a playing card at 30 paces. Even today, tickets with holes punched in them are known as "Annie Oakleys."

HOGS: Trend is steady to 75 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 51.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 51.00; Wilson 55.50; Rowland 51.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 42.00; Fayetteville 44.00; Whiteville 42.00; Wallace 43.00; Spivey's Corner 43.00, Rowland 44.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 49.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 27 percent of the loads offered confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 49.63 f.o.b. dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a light to moderate demand. Weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,604,000, compared to 2,000,040 last Friday.

HENS: Market 1 cent higher. Market steady with a firm undertone. Supply fully adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter was 10 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly higher today after posting a broad advance in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 20.98 over the past two days after hitting a 17-month low, slipped 0.77 to 1,106.78 in today's opening half-hour.

But the Dow Jones transportation average again was up sharply after recording a strong gain Thursday.

Advances took a 5-3 lead over declines among overall New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The early upswing came despite a downturn in bond prices. A rally in the bond market the two previous sessions was widely credited with helping stocks move ahead after five straight losses.

Both markets were encouraged by Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's comments that further tightening of credit would not be necessary in 1984, perhaps precluding another rise in interest rates.

But analysts noted that rates are not likely to show a substantial decline any time soon so long as private credit demand, spurred by the strong economy, remains brisk.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.60 to 1,107.55. Advances led declines nearly 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.70 to 86.34.

Big Board volume totaled 90.41 million shares, against 90.52 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.74 to 187.90.

Tipoff Times Upset Cage Officials

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Basketball is the American sport — and one of the men who runs the amateur version in this country isn't very happy about the way it's being conducted at these Olympics.

Both the men's and women's teams, who cruised through their pre-Olympic tournaments, are being given unfavorable starting times because of television, William L. Wall, executive director of the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America (ABAUSA), complained Thursday.

The women's team, 25-1 in pre-Olympic play, has games scheduled Monday against medal-contending Yugoslavia and Tuesday against Australia, each starting at 9 a.m. PDT. The men's team, unbeaten in nine exhibitions, has two games scheduled to start within 20 hours of each other late next week.

"They don't think about the athletes," Wall fumed. "The game is not sport, it's money and television."

And the Olympics is diversity. The International Olympic Committee, which added the women's marathon to these Games agreed Thursday to add a women's 10,000-meter run to the 1988 Games in Seoul, South Korea, on a trial basis.

The IOC also decided to add three other events to future Summer Olympics on a permanent basis: a women's sprint track event in cycling, a women's 470-class dinghy event in yachting, and either a men's lightweight double sculls, or a coxless four in rowing.

And the Olympics is security. It was tested at UCLA, where a bomb scare forced a 40-minute afternoon evacuation of a dormitory at one of the Olympic villages.

It occurred when a package was discovered in a first-floor restroom during a routine check by police at seven-story Rieber Hall, under closer-than-usual scrutiny because it houses athletes from Israel, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Chile.

The package turned out to be two rolls of toilet paper wrapped in a smock.

Police "haven't had many bomb threats so far. We expected more," said Lt. Dan Cooke, a police spokesman. But "we have found suspicious things."

The Los Angeles-area temperature, which had cooled off the past week after a series of steamy 100-degree days, rose into the 90s Thursday and, according to the National Weather Service, is likely to be there when the opening ceremonies are held Saturday.

The highlight of the ceremonies is the lighting of the Olympic Flame.

Trying to guess the identity of the torch-bearer has become a sport in itself.

For a while, a heavy favorite seemed to be Nadia Comaneci, the Romanian gymnast who, because of her unprecedented perfect marks, became the sweetheart of the Montreal Games in 1976.

Peter Ueberroth, president of the LAOOC, introduced her Thursday at a news conference, welcoming her as a special guest of the committee. He all but assured everyone Comaneci would not be the torch-bearer, saying to select a Romanian could be interpreted as an embarrassment to the 14 Eastern-bloc nations boycotting the Games.

"We would do nothing to hurt anybody's feelings," Ueberroth said. "We couldn't do something like that."

While Comaneci remained as placid before the world's press as she had ever been as a 14-year-old during her electrifying gold-medal performances in Montreal, Zola Budd, the South African-born middle-distance runner appeared rattled as she arrived in Los Angeles from her new homeland, England.

She seemed bewildered by the tumult at Los Angeles International Airport, just as she had been several hours earlier when she was besieged by newsmen at London's Heathrow Airport. "I was absolutely frightened," she said. "Anybody would be in those circumstances."

The 18-year-old Budd, whose native land is barred from Olympic competition because of its policy of racial separation, was granted British citizenship almost immediately after emigrating to England, because her grandfather was British. The move caused an uproar in Parliament.

Another controversial athlete, American weightlifter Jeff Michels, remained in limbo for at least one more day before finding out whether the International Olympic Committee would allow him to be named to the U.S. team.

Michels appealed Thursday to the IOC's Eligibility Committee to reverse sanctions imposed by the International Weightlifting Federation and the United States Olympic Committee after he tested positive last year for banned substances.

Michels, who won three gold medals at the Pan American Games last August, tested positive for testosterone — a natural growth hormone — during urinalysis after the competition and was stripped of his awards.

Tigers, Tide Picked To Lead NCAA

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — When he picked Auburn and Alabama to finish first and second in college football this fall, Playboy magazine's Anson Mount said he surprised himself.

"After weighing all the evidence, it just added up to both of these teams going into their game Dec. 1 in Birmingham playing for the national championship," Mount said.

"Every year I start out with no preconceptions. I just gather all the evidence and study it."

When it came out Auburn and Alabama, he told The Huntsville Times from his home in White Bluff, Tenn., "I was surprised myself. I was as surprised as anyone."

He said he picked the Auburn Tigers because "they have practically everybody back but the quarterback. The quarterbacks they have now have more innate talent if not the leadership quality of last year. They have a lot of redshirts who may beat out veterans."

"Another reason for picking Auburn is Bo Jackson. Gil Brandt (vice president of the Dallas Cowboys) tells me that Jackson may be the best runner in football, college or pro."

Alabama, Mount said, "is like Notre Dame, Texas and Oklahoma in always being loaded with talent. Last year was a transition year for Alabama with Ray Perkins as the new coach. No transition was more difficult than Alabama's. That's why I didn't pick Alabama in my top 20 last year, which upset a lot of people. They had to play well in a bowl game to barely make it in the top 20."

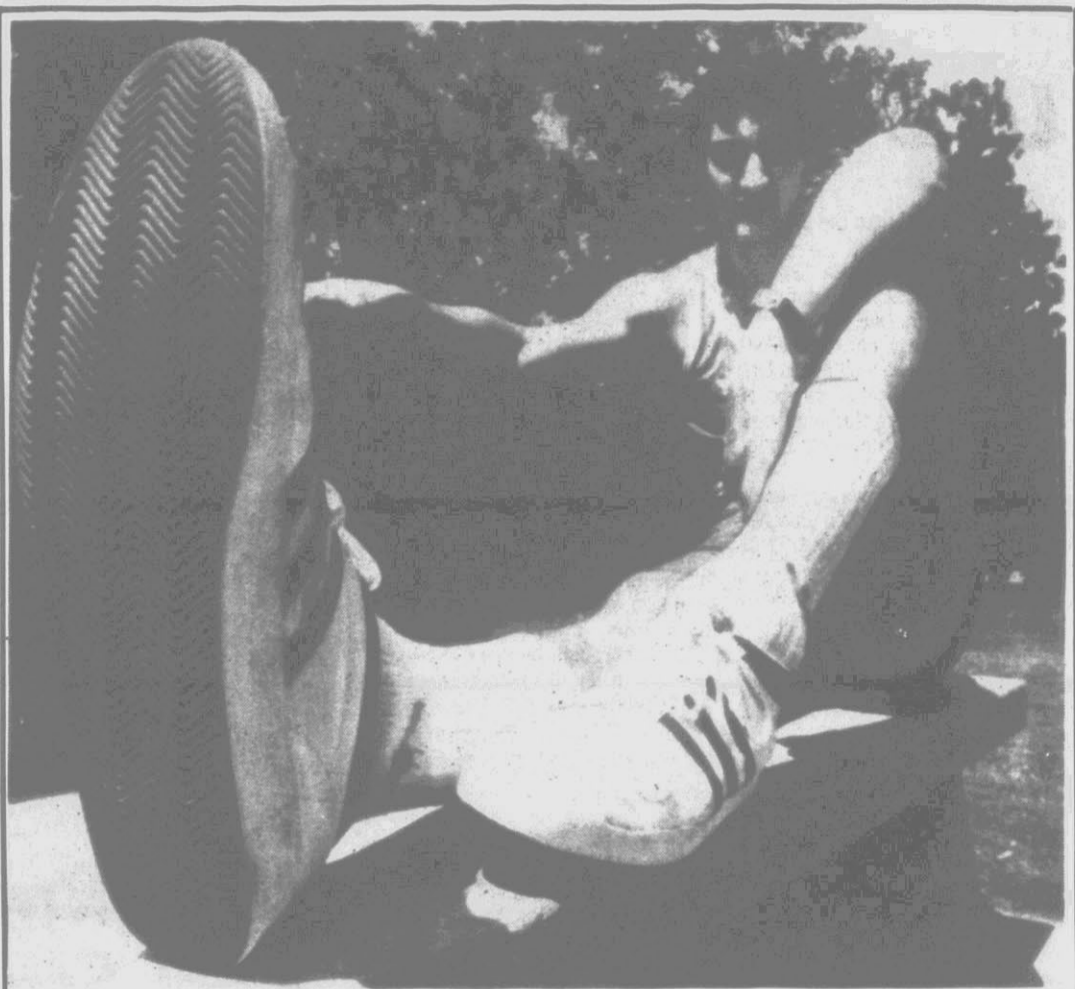

Following Bear Bryant was like a president following Abraham Lincoln. I think Ray Perkins did a magnificent job.

"At the end of the season, Alabama had its act together. They have most of their players back and they've got some good quarterbacks."

"Also, Alabama's schedule is not so hard. It's not ridiculous like it used to be. Alabama does play Penn State again and some other good teams. The schedule is a lot more believable now to the rest of the country."

Mount picked two Auburn players, Jackson and linebacker Gregg Carr, on his All-America team.

Only one other Southeastern Conference team, Florida as No. 17, finished in Mount's top 20 predictions.

Karl Named Cavs Coach

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Since playing his college ball under Dean Smith at North Carolina, George Karl has dreamed of coaching in the pros. Now, at age 33, Karl is getting his first chance in the National Basketball Association.

"I've been a student of the game since as early as my sophomore season in college, when Dean Smith and I talked of me someday becoming a coach," Karl said Thursday when the Cleveland Cavaliers officially made him the youngest coach in the NBA.

"The things he (Smith) taught me are in tune not only with basketball, but also with how to build a program and good human beings," Karl said. "I'm lucky to be his friend. Sixty percent of my basketball philosophy comes from him."

General Manager Harry Weltman said the Cavaliers "went through the most lengthy screening process in NBA annals" before hiring Karl.

"We worked it down to four candidates before going into even more lengthy analysis. Out of this, George Karl emerged as the best candidate as coach of the Cavs," said Weltman, who did not identify the other three finalists.

After leaving North Carolina, Karl was a player five seasons with the San Antonio Spurs, ending with the 1977-78 season. He spent two years as a Spurs assistant under Doug Moe, then three years with the defunct Montana Golden Nuggets in the Continental Basketball Association, where his team twice won a division championship and he twice was CBA coach of the year.

In Cleveland, he is credited with instituting the Cavaliers' youth movement, including this year's acquisition of center Melvin Turpin of Kentucky from the Washington Bullets.

"We want to have a defense-oriented, up-tempo type team," Karl said. "We're going to put pressure on the ball and use more full-court pressure, which will hopefully lead to the up-tempo game."

He indicated that, barring any surprises during the preseason, the Cavaliers will be starting Turpin at center, with Hinson at power forward, Lonnie Shelton at small forward and World B. Free at shooting guard. The point guard job is up in the air, although John Bagley appears to be the leading candidate.

Yarborough Takes Talladega Pole

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Cale Yarborough set a new Talladega 500 qualifying record and captured the pole for Sunday's race with a speed of 202.474 mph, narrowly edging Bill Elliott, who said his repair crew did "two days work in two hours" before the run.

Yarborough led a group of six drivers who cracked the 200 mph mark Thursday.

"We thought we would go a little faster," Yarborough said. "But it was a hot day and that slowed us down. But we ran fastest, and we set a record, and that's good enough."

Yarborough took only one of his two qualifying laps to set the mark.

Elliott ran just a tick behind at 202.422 mph, with Dale Earnhardt third at 201.151. Terry Labonte qualified for fourth, Tommy Ellis ran fifth and Buddy Baker was the last driver to top the 200 mph mark.

"We were really surprised and pleased to be so fast after blowing the engine Wednesday," Elliott said. "We did two days work in two hours... what we did with the car was like cooking spaghetti. We threw things at it and watched to see if it stuck."

Elliott said the difference in his time and Yarborough's "works out to 42 inches at 202 mph around the track. That's pretty close."

The former qualifying record for the Talladega 500 was 201.744 by Yarborough in 1983. He fell short of the 202.692 mph absolute stock car qualifying record he set at the Alabama International Motor Speedway prior to the Winston 500 in May.

Twenty drivers qualified for the 40-car field Thursday. Final qualifying was set today.

To qualify, drivers had to reach 197.688 — the clocking by veteran A.J. Foyt, who is making a rare Winston Cup appearance.

Others qualifying Thursday included Firecracker 400 Richard Petty, defending Grand National champion Bobby Allison, two-time champion Darrell Waltrip and Harry Gant, who won the Like Cola 500 last weekend.

The list of first-day qualifiers also included Neil Bonnett, Benny Parsons, Ron Bouchard, Rusty Wallace, Dave Marcis, Jody Ridley, Lake Speed, Phil Parsons and Dick Brooks.

Yarborough's pole win made him the first driver to score a grand slam on stock car racing's fastest tracks. He earlier won the Winston 500 pole on the same track and the Daytona 500 and Firecracker 400 poles at the Daytona International Speedway.

Allison complained Thursday that some of the racing teams were getting preferential treatment from NASCAR officials.

He specifically criticized the template inspection, which NASCAR uses to check contours of cars, after he was forced to change his car a fraction of an inch. Petty was also forced to alter his car.

"Cale runs a limited schedule and NASCAR kind of lets them do what they want to do, so they ought to run pretty good," Allison said.

The highest scoring opening game in major-league history was on April 1, 1925, when the Cleveland Indians topped the St. Louis Browns, 21-14.

Karl, who served as director of player acquisition for the Cavaliers last season, replaces Tom Nissalke, fired in May after compiling a 51-113 record in two years at the helm of the troubled team.

"Thirteen months ago, I looked at the situation here and felt it was in great trouble," Karl said. "There were talent problems and the draft situation was unenviable. But the organization has done a great job through hard work and a degree of luck, such as getting Paul Thompson in the third round (of the 1983 draft) and Roy Hinson as late as the 20th pick."

Four Native Heels, 13 Others At L.A.

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Four native Tar Heels, including basketball standout Michael Jordan, plus 13 others with North Carolina connections will take part in the summer Olympics in Los Angeles starting Saturday.

Joining Jordan of Wilmington are baseball's Scott Bankhead of Reidsville and handball's Leora "Sam" Jones of Mount Olive. The fourth is North Carolina State women's basketball coach Kay Yow of Gibsonville, who will assist Pat Head-Summit, head coach of the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team.

Coach Bobby Knight's Olympic basketball squad will also feature Sam Perkins, who shared the spotlight with Jordan at the University of North Carolina for three years.

Bankhead's batterymate at Chapel

Hill, catcher B.J. Surhoff, is part of the baseball club that will demonstrate the sport next week. Also from UNC is Karen Shelton, a member of the U.S. field hockey team.

Duke University has five athletes in the Olympics, but one of them is not competing for the United States. Basketball standout Dan Meagher, who led the Canadians to a gold medal in the World University Games, will try to duplicate the feat in the next two weeks.

Although Blue Devil basketball guard Johnny Dawkins didn't make the U.S. basketball team, he will serve as an alternate on the 12-man roster.

Also from Duke are swimmer Nancy Hogshead, wrestler Bert Govig and soccer player Tom Kain.

N.C. State has five current and former athletes going to Los Angeles. Swimmers Trish Butcher and Nikos Fokianos represent South Africa and Greece, respectively, while Wolfpack runner Auguston Young is competing for Jamaica. John Crist is a U.S. contestant in the decathlon, while former Wolfpack runner Joan Benoit is in the marathon.

Also, North Carolina Central University Chancellor Leroy Walker will attend the games, but for the first time since 1960, he will not have any coaching duties. He will serve as U.S. representative to the International Association of Athletic Federations. He will also serve as a host for the athletes, coaches and officials of China who will attend the Olympics.

Jordan scored one of the greatest baskets in Tar Heel history two years ago. As a freshman, his jumper in the championship game of NCAA tournament at New Orleans led North Carolina to a 63-62 triumph over Georgetown, giving coach Dean Smith his first national title after six previous tries. After three seasons of performances that kept the Tar Heels near the top of college basketball, Jordan, 20, forfeited his final year of eligibility and was drafted by the Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association.

In the Olympic trials, Jordan has been fighting off a shooting slump. He broke that drought when he returned to Greensboro two weeks ago, scoring a game-high 25 points to lead the Olympians to one of its nine victories against NBA all-star teams. He followed that with a 27-point effort in Phoenix.

For the Olympics, Jordan will move to the forward spot instead of his normal guard position.

"Playing against a lot of bigger guys, I have a little advantage in quickness," Jordan said. "Where my weakness is is in guarding a big man inside. I'll try to front him and get help where I need it."

Bankhead won 20 games without a loss while pitching for the Tar Heels. He shares the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament record for strikeouts in a single game with 14. He fanned 13 South Korean batters and gave up one hit in an Olympic exhibition game in Durham last month.

The Kansas City Royals made him their first-round draft pick in the most recent baseball draft.

"I've thrown the ball well every time out," said the 20-year-old Bankhead, who combines a blazing fast ball with an effective slider and good curve.

Jones, 23, left East Carolina after four years of basketball. She holds the Lady Pirate record for steals in a single season with 75 in 1981-82. She is the school's ninth leading scorer with 914 points and sixth for her career with a 16-point average.

Instead of pursuing basketball, Jones toured Europe as a member of the U.S. Women's National Handball team. Five foreign countries would like her to play for their national teams when she completes Olympic competition. It is all part of her athletic nature.

"I used to play everything around here," Jones said in an interview at her home. "I was always better than the boys. I was always the first one chosen. I was never left on the side because nobody picked me."

Yow was in on the start of women's basketball at N.C. State in 1975 and has kept the program in the top 20 rankings consistently. She has compiled a 214-65 record at Raleigh and, combined with her years at Elon College, has a career coaching mark of 271-83.

Yow was also an assistant coach at the Pan American Games.

Overexposure Concerns Big Ten

CHICAGO (AP) — Overexposure and a possible drop in gate receipts were causes for concern throughout the Big Ten after CBS announced on Thursday its football television schedule for 1984.

The Big Ten and the Pac-10 conferences recently joined forces as opposed to the College Football Association and signed a one-year agreement with CBS that will carry a series of games nationally involving the two powerful leagues.

"The Big Ten and the Pac-10 have been longtime partners in the Rose Bowl and have become great allies," said Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke, who nevertheless was worried over the new pact.

"We're all concerned," Duke said. "The Big Ten supported the NCAA because of its protective program. We have lost the protection features of the NCAA plan. Now it's wide open. We're going to have to face the possibility of overexposure."

Duke is worried about what the package might do to attendance.

"We played to 96 percent of capacity last year and averaged 67,000 fans a game," Duke said. "We hope this is an experimental year, and we can return to normalcy. Whether it materializes is speculation."

The entire matter stems from the U.S. Supreme Court's recent ruling that the NCAA could not control college football on television. The ruling as a result of a lawsuit brought by the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia under the auspices of the College Football Association, which is made up of all the major football conferences and independents other than the Big Ten and Pac-10.

The CBS schedule begins Sept. 15 with Washington at Michigan and continues through Dec. 1 with the Army-Navy game on national television. There are two doubleheaders included and three other weeks of split games involving starting times of 12 noon Eastern time and 3 p.m. Pacific time.

Cause for concern was rampant Thursday among Big Ten coaches who were attending the Big Ten's annual kickoff luncheon.

"No question in my mind there can be too many games on television," said Mike White of defending champion Illinois. "I saw it happen in basketball, and it can happen in football."

Michigan's ever popular

Wolverines are slated for a possible five appearances. And Bo Schembechler, dean of Big Ten coaches, is worried.

"I still want to see 105,000 people in our stadium when we play at home," Schembechler said. "What did we get from television last year, $700,000? We get over a million dollars in one game from gate receipts."

"Division One college football is in a stage of flux," said Schembechler. "There are two armed camps, and in the middle is the NCAA. Who's going to police college football? I don't know. I hope it's somebody tough. There will be more exposure but less money. It's a great boost for the networks."

While CBS was announcing its schedule, the CFA already had put together a deal with ABC-TV.

Michigan, Ohio State, Iowa and Illinois dominate the Big Ten schedule, while Indiana, Minnesota, Northwestern and Michigan State have been shutout. Washington, UCLA and Southern California are predominant on the Pac-10 side of the ledger.

"We think it's a hell of a schedule," said Neal Pilson, CBS vice president in charge of sports. "It is not written in granite. There could be some possible changes."

On Sept. 22 the schedule has Nebraska at UCLA or Iowa at Ohio State. Nebraska is a member of the CFA and could refuse to cooperate.

The Nov. 24 date is open because that's when Notre Dame plays at Southern California, a game which CBS would like to carry. Again, Notre Dame is a member of the CFA.

Starting times for the Oct. 13 doubleheader with Illinois at Ohio State and Washington at Stanford were listed as to be announced because there could be conflicts with the World Series.

Because the Big Ten shares all television receipts equally among conference members, the teams that will not have their games shown weren't complaining too much.

"I thought it might happen," said Bill Mallory, the new coach at Indiana. "There's talk about supplementary games, but I don't know. We're going to have to get something we can market."

Leon Burnett of Purdue said: "The rich get richer. We also need exposure. That's why there is talk of a supplemental package, but I have no idea of what it will be. Now we are really in the entertainment business."

Gwynn, Padres Pound Reds West Rallies Past East Stars, 18-6

By The Associated Press

Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres has taken to heart the words, if not the bent grammar, of Hall of Famer Wee Willie Keeler, who said: "Hit 'em where they ain't."

Gwynn went 3-for-4 Thursday night — and now has seven hits in his last nine at-bats — as the Padres defeated the Cincinnati Reds 8-2. The three hits raised his National League-leading average to .362.

"It's something that just comes naturally for me," says Gwynn, who has been likened to Rod Carew by Padres Manager Dick Williams.

"I'm just trying to hit where they're not playing."

Gwynn had one-fourth of San Diego's 12 hits against the Reds before leaving the game for a pinch runner after doubling in San Diego's three-run sixth inning. Gwynn scored once and had an RBI.

"He's aggressive. There's no way to pitch to him," Reds Manger Vern Rapp said.

In the rest of the National League, Montreal edged Pittsburgh 5-4, San Francisco defeated Houston 3-2 and Atlanta beat Los Angeles 5-1.

Mark Thurmond, 8-5, won his third straight start for the Padres, who lead Atlanta by seven games in the NL West. Thurmond worked seven innings, giving up two runs on seven hits.

Steve Garvey drove in a pair of runs with a single in the first inning off Jeff Russell, 4-12, who lasted just two innings for the Reds.

Dave Concepcion of the Reds was used as a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning, appearing in his 2,000th major league game. He singled and scored a run.

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Doug Flynn doubled in the winning run in the eighth inning, snapping a 4-4 tie. Montreal tied the in the seventh on Andre Dawson's sacrifice fly and two wild pitches by Pirate reliever Don Robinson.

Derrel Thomas started the winning rally with a two-out double, and Flynn followed with the winning hit off Robinson, 0-4. Bob James, 3-4, pitched the eighth for the victory, and Jeff Reardon got the final three outs for his 14th save.

After the game, the Expos announced they were sending infielders Bryan Little and Argenis Salazar to the minors and recalling infielder Rene Gonzalez and outfielder Max Venable.

Giants 3, Astros 2

Dusty Baker hit his first home run since April and only second of the season to help the Giants beat Houston. Bill Laskey, 6-9, and Frnak Williams combined on an eight-inning. Laskey went seven innings, giving up six hits.

The Giants got only six hits off three Houston pitchers, including starter Mike Scott, 4-9. Scott yielded Baker's first-inning solo homer, then didn't give up another hit until the fifth. Houston scored twice in the seventh on doubles by Enos Cabell, Kevin Bass and Bill Doran.

Braves 5, Dodgers 1

Atlanta won two of three in Los Angeles as the Dodgers committed errors on three consecutive plays in the third inning to help the Braves score four runs. Craig McMurtry, 8-11, held the Dodgers in check on four hits through 6 1-3 innings. One of the hits was a homer by Franklin Stubbs.

Dodgers shortstop Dave Anderson committed a fielding and throwing error, and third baseman German Rivera had a fielding error as the Dodgers defense unraveled in the third. Alex Trevino singled home the first run with two out, and the next three runs of the inning scored on the errors.

Steve Bedrosian worked 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief for his 10th save.

Clemens Returns For Shutout

BOSTON (AP) — Manager Ralph Houk of the Boston Red Sox had a decision to make. With a couple of open dates, one of his five starting pitchers would have to miss a turn.

Houk decided rookie right-hander Roger Clemens, whacked around in less than three innings in Seattle on July 14, was a logical choice. Barring injury or an unforeseen emergency, it may be the last time Clemens is bypassed for a long, long time.

Burt Reynolds To Narrate Bowden Show

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds has returned to football at his alma mater. But instead of playing Florida State University football, as he did in the 1950s, he will narrate it on Coach Bobby Bowden's weekly television show.

"The thing I keep saying is to make sure it says the Bowden-Reynolds show, not the other way around," Bowden said Wednesday. "I tell people that he will be the guy with the mustache."

Reynolds will appear on Bowden's show between highlights of the first and second halves in a segment called "Great Moments in FSU History." In the 90-second to two-minute segments, he will narrate film clips from memorable Seminole games.

The Bobby Bowden Show appears on 10 television stations throughout Florida during football season.

Reynolds will appear on all 12 episodes of the show, highlighting such past games as the 1980 FSU victory over Nebraska, the 1981 victory over Notre Dame and the Clemens, who pitched Texas to the College World Series championship 13 months ago, returned to a starting role with fierce determination Thursday night.

He responded with a four-hit, 11-strikeout effort for his first major league shutout as the surging Red Sox charged to their sixth consecutive victory in a 7-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"This is definitely the best game I've ever pitched, since I first picked up a baseball," said Clemens, who will be 22 on Aug. 4.

"The kid pitched good, his best ball game," said Houk, a one-time catcher who began a pro baseball career 45 years ago. "I really loved the way he pitched. I've seen a lot of talented young pitchers come along and he's one of the best."

"He'll have his bad days, but he's going to be a good one. The shutout is his first, but not his last. He's going to throw a lot of them in his career."

Completing a three-game series sweep, and sending the White Sox down to their 11th defeat in 15 starts, all on the road, since the All-Star break, the Red Sox rolled behind Clemens.

While winning nine of the last 10 starts and 15 of the last 19, Boston has improved its record to 51-46, going five games over .500 for the first time since June 6, 1983.

The Red Sox, insisting they're not looking at the standings, have moved to within 16½ games of the Detroit Tigers, who were rained out at Cleveland in the only other scheduled AL action Thursday.

"I think that missing a turn helped Clemens a lot," Houk said. "He worked on the side and it seemed to calm him down. I had to have one of our starters miss a turn because of two open dates and I decided upon him. It certainly didn't hurt him any."

"He needed that game — and so did we. It couldn't have come at a better time. Now we can go into Detroit for a double-header (tonight) with our entire bullpen ready."

"I've had some some bad times and it was very important for me to get this game under my belt," said Clemens, 4-4 after his first victory in three decisions since June 22. "I needed a good game. I was in a bad rut and when that happens everything seems to go wrong."

"I just went out there to throw as hard and as long as I could. I went mainly with my fast ball, and I threw it well, but I also got my breaking pitches over."

Drug Testing: Olympic Event

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Late at night, following the opening Olympic events on Sunday until the end, two weeks later, a special van with bonded couriers will pull up to the hospital at UCLA.

The couriers will escort the cargo past several security checkpoints, down a maze of corridors and into a million-dollar, high-tech laboratory staffed by white-jacketed professionals sworn to secrecy.

What is this precious cargo? Well, it'll only be 130 or so urine samples each night, hardly the stuff of intrigue. But on those samples, sealed in blue plastic boxes, rest decisions about whether Olympic winners may keep their medals.

There are some 80 banned substances, including stimulants, narcotic pain-killers and anabolic steroids. Even the tiniest amount of these drugs — one part in a billion — in a urine sample is enough to disqualify an athlete.

And if any of the athletes had doubts that the equipment at the drug lab might not be sensitive enough to catch them with small doses, doctors made it clear Thursday that such thoughts are dead wrong.

"It's very sensitive and very sophisticated equipment and there's virtually no chance of error," said Dr. Donald H. Catlin, the lab's director.

The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee has spent some $1.85 million on the equipment and the salaries of more than 30 doctors and technicians who work in the lab until the end of the Games, Catlin said.

The drug testing begins with the collection of samples after each event. The top four finishers each must give about a cupful of urine, which is then poured into two bottles, marked "A" and "B", and closed by the athlete to make sure there is no tampering.

The athlete chooses a number that is etched onto the bottles by an official. Then the athlete watches as the bottles are sealed in blue boxes.

"We don't know who the numbers belong to," Catlin said. "All that is kept secret until we find an illegal substance. Then the athletes are contacted according to a numbered list and they may come down to watch as we re-check their samples."

The lab works first with the samples marked "A" and places the "B" samples in cold storage. If the "A" sample comes out positive, the athletes come in and open the "B" sample themselves, then the tests are run again.

Samples "A" and "B" contain about 50 milliliters each, but the tests are performed on only about half a milliliter each time — about 1-10th of a teaspoon — with the remainder held aside for as many as 15-rechecks.

The raw urine is run through several machines, including a spinning centrifuge, until it is reduced to a clear liquid, free of chemicals that don't interest the drug testers.

This extract is then placed on the conveyor belt of one of eight, $40,000 gas chromatographs, until a syringe dips into the sample and injects a drop into a circular glass tube. An oven heated to between 200 and 300 degrees centigrade turns the liquid into a gas, which is pushed through the tube by helium or nitrogen for about 30 minutes.

During this process, a graph is made to chart when various drugs show up.

"We know how long it takes for each of the banned drugs to appear on the graph, and when we see peaks on the graph at certain times we can see that there may be illegal drugs," Catlin said.

If drugs are suspected, the sample is then run through one of the eight $120,000 to $240,000 mass spectrometers, which bombards the sample with electrons, breaking down the molecules for final analysis. If the presence of a banned substance is confirmed, and reconfirmed after the athlete comes in to verify his "B" sample, his victory will be disqualified.

"The presence of any amount of most of the banned drugs will automatically disqualify an athlete," Catlin said. "For a couple of the drugs there are various levels that cannot be exceeded. Caffeine, for example, cannot exceed 15 micrograms per millileters. You probably couldn't reach that level even by drinking 12 cups of coffee a day. For shooters, alcohol can't exceed a certain amount."

Most of the drug problems are expected to involve stimulants, especially ephedras, which can be found in a variety of cold remedies and herbal teas. U.S. swimmer Rick Demont lost a gold medal in 1972 because of such a stimulant in medication.

A "controversial subject," Catlin said, is testosterone, a natural male hormone. Illegal injections of anabolic steroids can raise the level of this hormone and increase the size of muscles or build an athlete's strength temporarily. Since the hormone is produced naturally, the mere presence of it is not illegal.

The scientists analyze the ratio of testosterone to epitestosterone, another natural hormone which usually exists in a one to one ratio with testosterone. If the ratio exceeds six to one, it is assumed that the increase is because of injections and the athlete is disqualified.

Soviet Media Distort L.A.

MOSCOW (AP) — Headlines scream: "Gunfire Thunders in Los Angeles." Television reports portray a city terrorized by street gangs and run by greedy businessmen. Newspapers complain that "the cream of world sports" isn't in Los Angeles.

On the eve of the 1984 Summer Olympics, the Soviet press campaign over the Games is still going strong with a stream of daily commentary in the newspapers and over the radio and television.

Meanwhile, the state-controlled media have conducted a contrasting promotion of Moscow's own summer games, which begin Aug. 18.

Dubbed "Friendship 84," and boasting a logo that includes an Olympic-type torch, the games are part of competitions among the nations who joined the Kremlin-led boycott of the Summer Olympics.

The Soviet Union has taken pains to point out that its allies are avoiding any violation of the Olympic charter by holding their games before and after the Olympics.

The Soviet press frequently compares the socialist bloc games to the Olympics, painting them in fact as a gathering of better athletes than those in Los Angeles.

The press campaign against the 1984 Olympics began long before the Soviet Union announced on May 8 that it wouldn't send a team. But it has intensified during the boycott, focusing on three central themes: —The Reagan administration

THE PLOTTING OF SANBALLAT!

SANBALLAT, THE HORONITE, WAS A GOVERNOR IN SAMARIA WHEN NEHEMIAH CAME TO JERUSALEM TO REBUILD THE CITY'S WALLS, RENEW THE STRUCTURAL WEAKNESSES, AND STRENGTHEN THE CONVICTION OF THE PEOPLE IN THEIR OLD TRADITIONS! BOTH APPREHENSIVE AND FURIOUS, HE IMMEDIATELY STARTED PLOTTING AGAINST NEHEMIAH AND HIS PLANS. BUT NONE OF HIS MACHINATIONS SEEMED SUCCESSFUL. SO, HE BROUGHT OTHERS INTO HIS PLOTS TO EITHER PREVENT THE REBUILDING OF JERUSALEM'S WALLS OR TO ASSASSINATE NEHEMIAH (NEH. 6:1-4). UNFORTUNATELY, FOR SANBALLAT, EVERY NEW DEVICE THOUGHT OF BY HIM AND HIS CO-CONSPIRATORS FAILED! THE TREMENDOUS WORK PROSPERED IN EVERY DEGREE, CULMINATING IN THE COMPLETE RESTORATION OF THE CITY OF JERUSALEM AND THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE ITSELF! SANBALLAT, FOR ALL HIS DEVIUS SCHEMING, EXPERIENCED IGNOMINIOUS DEFEAT!

CRAFT SHOW — Two youngsters view part of a mural created by classes during summer programs offered by Greenville Parks and Recreation. The classes, which run for two-week intervals four times during the summer, feature games, arts and crafts and music for area children at six locations throughout Greenville. In addition to these programs, Ducky's Fun Wagon visits ten neighborhoods and parks in the Greenville area. The arts and crafts show on display at Jaycee park Wednesday night drew over 100 parents and children for refreshments and a magic show. (Reflector Photo by Chris Bennett)

Professor Files Suit

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 52-year-old N.C. A&T State University engineering professor says he had no choice but to file a race and age discrimination lawsuit against the school and its chancellor.

"We had to take this as a last resort," said Wesley Clark in a telephone interview Thursday night. "We didn't want to ... A&T is very dear to me. I just feel that I have to do this because I like what I was doing."

Clark, who was denied tenure after five years at A&T, is seeking back wages, $500,000 in damages and reinstatement.

Filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court, his suit names A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort, University of North Carolina President William C. Friday, the UNC Board of Governors, A&T Vice Chancellor Nathan Simms and A&T engineering dean Suresh Chandra. The suit specifies that Clark does not seek to recover damages from Friday.

The suit contends a pattern of racial discrimination exists in the School of Engineering's pay scales and hiring practices and in the makeup of its tenure committees. No blacks served on the School of Engineering committee that first recommended Clark be denied tenure, the suit alleges.

The suit charges that the defendants deprived Clark of his rights to free speech, equal protection under the law and due process, unlawfully deprived him of his job and broke the institution's promises to him.

Clark's attorney Jonathan Harkavy said he had not decided whether to file a motion that Clark be allowed to continue teaching at A&T while the case is pending. It frequently takes a year for a case to come to trial in federal court, he said.

A 1955 A&T graduate, Clark joined the faculty in 1979, when he was given five years to earn tenure as a permanent member of the engineering faculty, according to the suit.

Clark began appealing when he first learned a year ago that he would not receive tenure. His contract expired in May without a final decision on his appeal, but he is teaching at A&T on a three-month summer contract.

Clark's quest for tenure has unsettled the A&T campus, prompting student pickets of the A&T administration building in April and leading A&T Trustee Jesse Jackson to charge that the UNC system is seeking to make A&T "white from the top down and white from bottom up."

 We've been waiting patiently for 4 years for our own building. You know how it is when one rents a commercial building—everyone says, "They'll be here today, but gone tomorrow." We want Greenville to know we are here to stay! When Jesus Christ comes back, Faith and Victory Church will be here! The Lord has placed within our hands a large, high-ceilinged, 12,000 sq. ft. building, on 2 1/2 acres of land. The building is located at Carolina Country Day School, on County Road 1708, off of Hwy. 11 South near Pitt Community College. Renovations are currently underway so that we can have the first service on August 5th at 10:00 a.m. EVERYONE MAKE PLANS TO ATTEND!

Yesterday's Cryptiquip - BUYER OF OUR FAULTY AUTOMOBILE NEEDED LEMON AID.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: W equals H

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to forget tensions and obstacles from the past and those who restrict you and look for all kinds of interesting and expansive means by which to express yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Not a good day to get into long-lasting terms with others in business affairs, but fine for studying into something new.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Look to your mate for kindness, since a friend may be trying to berate you for tardiness. Be happy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Forget boring tasks and be with a cheerful partner who can bring happiness your way. Don't confer with a depressing co-worker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You have interesting work to do so forget that pleasure you had in mind and take care of it. Don't be demanding.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Avoid that melee at home and be off to the sports and amusements you like. The evening will be calm at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study well any conversations you have had with others, since they could become adverse to your best interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Financial affairs are apt to be unsatisfactory, so be with good friends and enjoy activities you truly like.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't use force in trying to gain some aim otherwise you lose out completely. Handle practical affairs well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go after your personal aims and stop fussing about what you do not like. Don't be extravagant and all will turn out fine.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Keep away from an overly dynamic friend who can deter your progress, if you permit. Good day to be with one you love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to be well balanced in public otherwise you could get into trouble and be criticized. Be kind with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't go off on any tangent now and be more concerned with bettering your position in life.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have modern and brilliant ideas and can also get along well with bigwigs and thusly can become very successful in life. Make sure that the home conditions are charming and not restrictive so that your progeny can grow and develop graciously and accomplish a very great deal.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

New Plant

RALEIGH (AP) - A West German firm's decision to build a $35 million silicon wafer plant near Research Triangle Park establishes "North Carolina's reputation as a national center for microelectronics research, development and manufacturing," said Gov. Jim Hunt.

Construction of the Dynamit Nobel AG plant will begin in a few weeks and should be completed by late 1985. The manufacturing plant - which will employ some 350 people - will begin operating in early 1986.

The plant, which will be built on a 30-acre site, will make Dynamit Nobel the United States' fourth independent producer of silicon wafers.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Six of ♣.

Being almost right doesn't win a consolation prize at the bridge table. You will rarely have the time to recover from an early miscue.

South had a sound two no trump response to his partner's one club opening bid. Ideally, he would have liked to have had an honor in spades, but then, nothing in this world is perfect.

West led his fourth best heart. Declarer played dummy's jack and allowed East's queen to hold. He won the heart return and, since West was the danger hand, declarer decided to attack his only possible entry - the king of diamonds. South crossed to the table with the king of clubs and tried the diamond finesse.

That lost to West's king, and West shifted to the jack of spades. Declarer rose with the ace, crossed to the ace of diamonds and led the jack of clubs. When West showed out and East allowed declarer to win that trick, the contract was still salvageable (try it, if you like) but South, shaken by the turn of events, was not up to the task.

Declarer had available an almost sure-trick line by which he could have attacked West's entry while guarding against a 4-1 club division. The winning play isn't very hard to find. After taking the heart at trick two, declarer should simply lead the queen of diamonds from hand!

Assume West wins and returns the jack of spades, as before. Declarer rises with the ace, comes to hand with the ace of diamonds and runs the jack of clubs. East can hold up the queen one round if he so desires, but declarer simply repeats the club finesse. This time East must win or lose his club trick.

No matter what East returns, declarer is in control. He cannot be stopped from scoring a spade trick, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs. True, he makes no overtricks, but it would require an "almost" right line of play to make any of those.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. ## Prairie Dogs

GRANTS, N.M. (AP) - City council has decided to preserve a prairie dog colony downtown, but the animals' cousins on the edge of town won't be so lucky.

The downtown colony will be maintained because it is popular with passers-by, the council decided Thursday.

Prairie dogs in an area in north Grants will fall victim to poison, however, because they pose what a state official describes as an "imminent danger" to health.

Ray Madson of the Environmental Improvement Division said the colony is overpopulated and the animals are weakened by lack of food, making them susceptible to bubonic plague. Plague can be passed to humans and pets by fleas from infected prairie dogs, he said.

Most of the 30 people attending the council meeting voiced concern for the downtown colony.

AMA Gears Up To Fight Prescription Drug Abuse

By NICK GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association is mobilizing to fight the burgeoning problem of doctors who illegally prescribe drugs, which kill between 70 percent and 80 percent of all Americans who die from drug abuse each year, an AMA spokesman says.

At the center of the problem are four types of doctors, according to Dr. Joseph Skom, an associate professor of clinical medicine at Northwestern University who chairs the AMA's National Informal Steering Committee on Prescription Drug Abuse.

Skom categorizes them as the "four D's" — dishonest, dated, disabled or deceived.

The AMA is working to identify these doctors while lobbying for stiffer laws that would allow prosecution of the unscrupulous, he said. The program, being launched this year, also is intended to educate AMA members about the problem.

The drugs most frequently misprescribed include diet pills and other amphetamines, Valium and other tranquilizers, and methaqualone, commonly known as Quaaludes, Skom said in a telephone interview Thursday. Between 70 and 80 percent of all Americans who die from drug abuse each year die from illegally prescribed drugs, Skom said.

The smallest group is dishonest doctors — those who knowingly sell prescriptions to drug abusers for profit, Skom said. "That is an abomination in the eyes of the rest of the medical profession, and those people should go to jail."

While the proportion of the nation's 500,000 doctors who are dishonest is a tiny fraction of 1 percent, they supply a large quantity of the illegally used prescription drugs, he said.

Some dishonest doctors set up stress or weight control clinics to dispense drugs, and it can take years to build cases against them, he said.

Skom said inroads are being made against dishonest physicians with the AMA's Prescription Abuse Data Systems Program, a network that enables authorities to pinpoint inordinate amounts of prescription drugs by tracing zip codes. In Michigan, the network has led to eight arrests, Skom said.

In addition, pharmacists are receiving more training on how to spot fake prescriptions, he said.

A dated doctor is one who hasn't kept up with drug research and is improperly dispensing prescriptions, Skom said.

Among the most common mistakes made by dated doctors is prescribing tranquilizers rather than anti-depressants for depressed patients, he said. Tranquilizers can temporarily improve a depressed patient's condition but can mask suicidal tendencies, he said.

Skom described disabled doctors — about 1 percent of the nation's physicians — as those who have become senile, alcoholic or are drug abusers themselves. Drug dealers and users can take advantage of such doctors to get prescriptions, he said.

"An alcoholic doctor may be writing prescriptions poorly because he is sufficiently befuddled by alcoholism that he is not using good judgment," Skom said.

Some doctors who are drug addicts also will sell prescriptions to get money to buy their own drugs.

More Money?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate took President Reagan at his word and passed legislation to assure that Social Security recipients get a cost-of-living pay raise Jan. 1 even if inflation is held below 3 percent.

If approved by the House, the legislation, which passed the Senate 86-3, on Thursday will guarantee that those on Social Security as well as those who receive supplemental security income will get pay raises at the same percentage rate as the increase in the cost of living.

As a money saving measure, current law says cost-of-living increases won't be paid until the Consumer Price Index goes up 3 percent.

As proposed by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the waiving of the 3 percent "trigger" on the increase will be a one-time event.

Moynihan estimated that paying the increase in January, rather than waiting until the following year, will cost about $5 billion.

Assuming that the House approves the idea, the money would go to retirees covered by the Social Security system, their dependents and people getting survivors' and disability payments.

Moynihan said actuaries had estimated that the Social Security Trust Fund could afford to pay the benefits in January because more money was going into the trust fund than had been expected.

Increasing benefits early will also

About 95 percent of such doctors eventually are cured, and many return to active practice, Skom said.

Those in the final category, deceived doctors, act in good faith but are victimized by dishonest patients.

"A person gives us a story that seems reasonable and gets a prescription for a controlled substance that they are abusing," Skom said. "This doesn't mean that every doctor is duped frequently, but most have been duped at one time."

mean increasing the portion of upper income salaries taxed to pay into the fund.

This year, employees and their bosses pay Social Security tax, known as FICA on the first $37,800 of salary. That figure will increase by the same percentage as payments.

Moynihan press aide Lance Morgan estimated the average couple receiving Social Security got a check each month for $700. If the Consumer Price Index goes up about 3 percent, that check would increase to $721 on New Year's Day.

"It's not much," Moynihan said, "but it goes to people who don't have much."

He said it "will keep about a half million elderly and disabled Americans above the poverty line." The estimate, he said, came from the American Association of Retired Persons.

"They deserve — indeed, have earned — this cost-of-living adjustment," Moynihan said.

At his nationally televised news conference on Tuesday, Reagan said he would ask Congress "to permit the payment of a cost-of-living adjustment to the Social Security recipients."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he'd checked and "the White House is very pleased we're taking action on this this evening."

"We're pleased with the concept, obviously, because it reaffirms the commitment the president made at his news conference," said Clare de Real, a spokesman for Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler. But the administration cannot commit itself to supporting the Senate bill until it studies the details she said.

The roll call vote lasted 70 minutes as the call went out to senators who had already left Capitol Hill for the day.

Voting "no" were Sens. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.; John Stennis, D-Miss.; and Bennett Johnston, D-La.

Drug Sentences

NORFOLK (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced two father-son pairs for their involvement in a marijuana-smuggling operation that covered seven years and grossed an estimated $40 million.

U.S. District Judge John A. McKenzie Wednesday sentenced William H. Hewitt Sr., 46, to five years in prison, fined him $5,000 and ordered him to surrender his interest and assets in his business, Hewitt Bros. Seafood in Moyock, N.C. Hewitt's fish house was a relay point for transferring marijuana from boats to trucks for shipment across the country.

Minutes later, William H. Hewitt Jr., 28, was ordered imprisoned for two years and fined $1,000.

"We've heard that the sins of the father are visited on the children," said Gary B. Allison, attorney for the younger Hewitt, who was brought into the smuggling venture by his father.

Allison was seeking probation for William Hewitt Jr. for his role as an off-loader and truck driver in bringing about 39 tons of marijuana through the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

Officials estimate that from 1975 to 1982, the smuggling operation grossed as much as $40 million bringing in more than 190,000 pounds of Colombian marijuana.

The operation was financed by two wealthy Michigan brothers, one a professor at the University of Michigan, and in this region it was run by a Richmond businessman. The financiers and the regional manager have been convicted.

Also sentenced was Michael D. Rogers, 34, a Wanchese, N.C., waterman who skippered his father's shrimp trawler to shuttle the marijuana to shore from larger boats. The cargo then was offloaded at his father's dock at Rogers Seafood in Wanchese. Rogers, described by his attorney as having "a low IQ, borderline intelligence," refused to cooperate with the prosecutor and in May was convicted by a jury.

His father, Ernest E. Rogers was sentenced Tuesday to eight years in prison. Also sentenced Tuesday to eight years for shuttling marijuana was Carroll Z. Tillett, 39, a Wanchese boat captain.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tommy E. Miller, head of the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force for the Eastern District of Virginia, said he believed it was the largest smuggling operation prosecuted in Norfolk. Miller said the investigation of more than two years was continuing and three alleged co-conspirators remain at large.

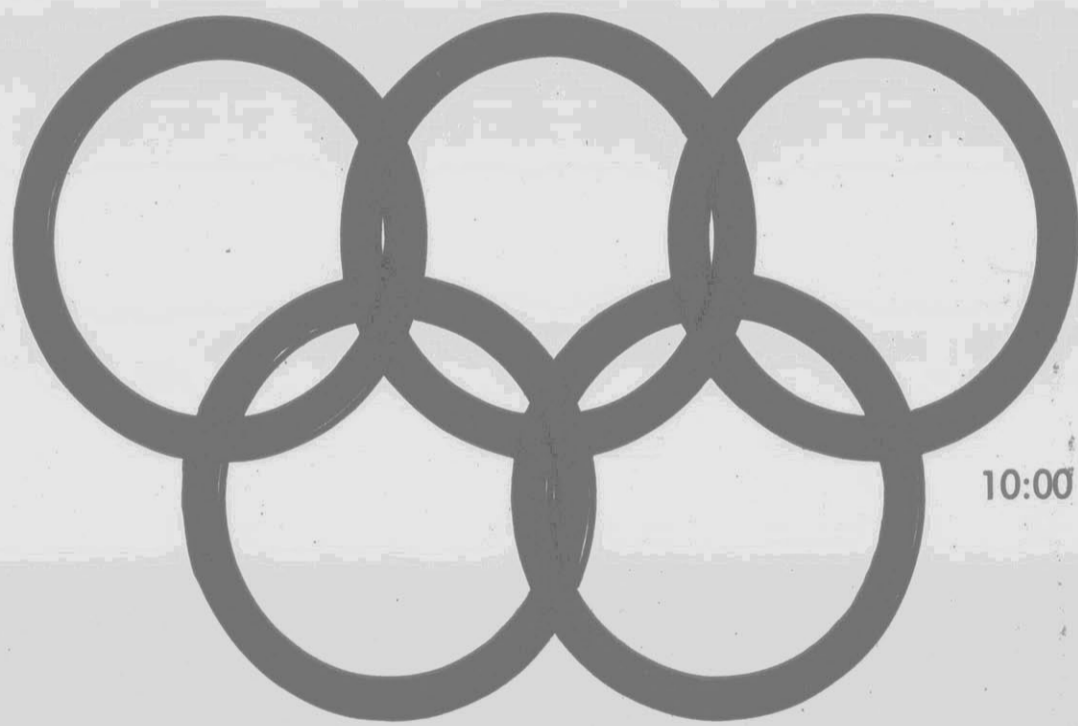

At one point during the sentences Wednesday, MacKenzie mentioned that he had carefully considered the extent of each smuggler's involvement in the scheme. He alluded to the fact that the Michigan financiers, Ned and Fred Shure, had been sentenced to seven years in prison by a federal judge in that state.

"If either of the Shures had appeared before me," MacKenzie said, "it would have been over seven years."

In 1979, the Outer Banks relay point in the smuggling network was set up by Delbert H. Holland, 35, a Richmond restaurant owner. Holland pleaded guilty and awaits sentencing.

Also sentenced Wednesday was Frederick R. Hipley, 41, of Jupiter, Fla. Hipley, who at times piloted

DC-3 flights loaded with marijuana during the smuggling venture, was ordered to serve five years in prison and fined $5,000.
