Hunt, Helms Differ On Debate Results

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Gov. Jim Hunt said his debate with Republican incumbent Jesse Helms proved Helms is "way out on the (political) fringe" but Helms, a national conservative spokesman, said there was no debate winner.

The one-hour debate Sunday, broadcast by almost every major television and radio station in North Carolina, covered topics ranging from Central America to campaign spending.

It ended as Hunt unsuccessfully asked Helms to pledge not to accept out-of-state contributions.

During much of the debate, Hunt attacked Helms' votes during his two terms in the Senate and tried to distance the Republican from President Reagan. Helms argued that Hunt, a two-term governor and former lieutenant governor, did not have his facts straight.

"I think we won the debate," Hunt said. "I think my strong points were in pointing out how he voted against the interests of the people of North Carolina.... He's just way out in the fringe and I think that became very clear tonight."

Hunt predicted the debate would give his campaign a "big boost" because it went deeper into the issues than a 30-second commercial could go.

Helms and Hunt are spending record amounts on advertising. Helms had raised $8.42 million through the second quarter of this year, breaking the national spending record of $7.6 million he set in 1978.

Hunt has raised $5.17 million since the Hunt for Senate Committee was formed July 1, 1983.

"I don't think either side won," Helms said. "It was not the kind of debate where you get down to brass tacks."

"I've been saying from the beginning the more effective debate format would be just the governor and me with a timekeeper like they do in the Senate," he said. "It was so chopped up, I'm sure it was difficult for the viewers at home to follow."

It took weeks of intense negotiations to agree upon the details of the debate, which was to be followed by three regional meetings and a final statewide debate Oct. 13.

The debate was sponsored by the N.C. Association of Broadcasters and originated from the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television studios in Raleigh. At least 15 television stations, two statewide radio networks and one national television network broadcast or recorded the debate.

George Diab of Wilmington, NCAB president elect and president of WWAY-TV, was moderator for the debate. Fifteen journalists and three staff members for each candidate were allowed in the studio. Hunt's wife, Carolyn, was among those present.

Democrats watched the debate at state party headquarters and about 75 people chanted Helms' name from outside the studio.

The debate began with a two-minute opening statement from each candidate. Hunt told listeners that nowhere in the country were the choices between candidates clearer than in his race with Helms.

Diab then asked eight questions, four from the candidates and four from journalists, before the candidates directly questioned each other.

The candidates were not permitted to use props, photographs, charts or other materials.

Hijackers Repeat Threat; Four Americans On Plane

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (AP) — A hijacked Venezuelan jetliner carrying 87 people today departed this Dutch Caribbean island, apparently for nearby Curacao, after the sky pirates angrily repeated their threat to blow up the plane if they did not receive $5 million and a helicopter.

The jetliner left at 8:40 a.m. Curacao was the Aeropostal DC-9's original destination when it was hijacked on a flight Sunday from Caracas, Venezuela. The hijackers had given authorities in Aruba an 8:30 a.m. deadline for meeting their demands.

Most of the passengers on the Aeropostal DC-9 plane were Dutch, but there were four Americans aboard, Venezuelan officials said. The Americans were identified as Marcel and Nancy Perret Gentil and their son, Marcel Perret Gentil, Jr., and Frank Bish. Their hometowns were not given.

After the plane left Aruba, a high government source in the Venezuelan capital said: "We won't make any kind of deal with the hijackers, and haven't even thought of giving them any money." He spoke to Venpres, the official Venezuelan news agency, on condition of anonymity. Authorities said there were from two to five hijackers. A Venezuelan security agent told reporters one hijacker was believed to be a Haitian national. He said the hijackers, when they made their first stop, in Trinidad, at one point demanded passage to Haiti.

The Venezuelan agent, who declined to give his name, said the hijackers were armed with at least two pistols.

The hijackers first forced the plane to stop on the island of Trinidad, and then to fly to Aruba's Princess Beatrix Airport, where it landed Sunday night. The airport was closed to all traffic except planes bringing officials of the Venezuelan Department of Security and Interior Ministry police.

"Where's the damn helicopter?" a man could be heard shouting from the plane via radio today to negotiators from the governments of Venezuela and the Netherlands Antilles.

The angry hijackers then told negotiators they would blow the plane up if their demands weren't met.

"And we don't want to talk about any children," said one hijacker, apparently referring to efforts by negotiators to gain release of the seven children among the 82 passengers and five crew.

The pilot reported that a shot was fired aboard the plane at about 6:30 a.m. Authorities asked him over the radio: "Was anyone hurt?" No reply was heard from the pilot.

No one left the plane in Aruba. The hijackers did not request any food.

Channel 2 television station in Caracas played a recording it said was a radio report from the pilot, Arturo Reina, saying the hijackers claimed they had gasoline and pistols and threatened to blow up the plane if their demands were not met.

In addition to money, the hijackers at one point demanded an arsenal of heavy weapons. They did not mention weapons in their last ultimatum in Aruba.

An Aruba government spokesman said of the hijackers' demands, "We told them Aruba does not have helicopters and we do not have $5 million."

In a communique, the office of Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi said security officials had determined that the hijackers were foreigners, but did not know their identities.

The Venezuelan government said it would not accede to the earlier ransom demand of $3 million and a collection of weapons — including machine guns, rifles and grenades.

A spokesman for the airline said the sky pirates first demanded to fly to the island of Martinique, but because the plane was running short of fuel, they forced it to land at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

EPA Cites Health Threat In Leaded Gas Proposals

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency today proposed regulations reducing the amount of lead in gasoline 91 percent by Jan. 1, 1996, and cut short its normal period for public comment on the new rules.

"The evidence is overwhelming that lead, from all sources, is a threat to human health," EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus said in announcing the proposal.

Leaded gasoline accounts for about 45 percent of refiners' current production.

Normally, such proposed regulations would not take effect until a six-month comment period expires. But the agency, speeding up its time to make the proposal final, said today it will allow only 30 days for public response. The EPA scheduled a public hearing on the proposal Aug. 30 and 31.

Ruckelshaus said the action "will greatly reduce that threat, especially for pregnant women and young children."

He estimated the standard would reduce the number of children with potentially damaging levels of lead in their blood from 97,000 to 47,000 by 1988.

EPA officials also said they are considering a total ban on leaded gas by 1995.

Beginning in 1986, refiners would have to limit the concentration of lead in gasoline to one-tenth (0.1) of a gram per gallon. That is 11 times more stringent than the current standard.

Surveys have shown that up to 17 percent of American motorists whose cars are equipped with catalytic converters use leaded gasoline in violation of air pollution laws.

The 11-fold reduction in lead content could be stretched out to 1988 under an option that EPA officials said is still under consideration.

Ruckelshaus said new evidence shows that adverse health affects from lead exposure may occur at much lower levels than those considered safe heretofore.

"Leaded gasoline is responsible for about 80 percent of all lead emissions to the air," he said, "and we know that there is a direct relationship between lead in gasoline and the amount of lead in human blood."

Ruckelshaus said that the agency intends to allow a small amount of lead to remain in gasoline because the owners of cars made before 1971 need leaded gas to protect their engines. But he said there will be little need for lead as a fuel additive by the mid-1990s.

He expressed dismay that leaded gasoline is still so much in use today.

"Unfortunately, lead used today is significantly higher than projections made in 1982, when the current 1.1 grams per gallon standard was set,"

Ruckelshaus said. "We then predicted that lead usage in 1988 would be 21.4 billion grams, but today's estimates for that year are 35.7 billion grams — 69 percent more than anticipated."

He estimated it would cost refiners about $575 million to meet the new standards.

"But, from a social point of view," Ruckelshaus said, "this expense is more than offset by the $1.8 billion that will be saved during 1986 alone from lower costs for medical treatment and rehabilitation, reduced vehicle maintenance bills and improved fuel efficiency, not to mention a higher quality environment."

Lead is a poison, and tests in recent years have shown that concentrations in the blood of inner-city children closely track the amount of leaded gasoline sold in the area. Though those children get most of their blood lead from eating lead-based paint, EPA scientists believe a sizeable fraction comes from compounds put into the air by automobile exhaust.

In sufficient concentrations in children, lead causes mental retardation. An EPA analysis estimated that the IQs of anywhere from 14,000 to 4 million children could be raised by an average of 2.2 points if lead were removed from gasoline.

Two years ago, former EPA administrator Anne Burford, originally favoring looser rules on lead, changed her mind and ordered concentrations halved to the current standard, no more than 1.1 gram per gallon.

Lead is by far the cheapest way to raise the octane rating of gasoline to

Stabilization Woes Face Leaf Farmers

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

The 1984 flue-cured tobacco crop is looking good, but growers preparing for this week's market opening fear much of it will go under loan to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Cooperative, agriculture officials say.

"Everybody's got the feeling that Stabilization just can't take any more tobacco," said Lenwood Rich, supervisor of the Fairmont Tobacco Board of Trade. "People are concerned about the sale and hoping the companies will come in and take this tobacco."

Farmers will take their tobacco to auction on the Border Belt starting Tuesday, with Eastern Belt markets scheduled to open Wednesday morning. Last year the two belts sold nearly 400 million pounds of tobacco.

"I think the leaf we've got in so far looks just a little bit better than last year," said Jerry Stone, one of the owners of Planters Warehouse in Fairmont. "It's been a little slow because the rains held back some harvesting in the past week or so."

Stone said farmers were concerned about the future of Stabilization, which has more than 750 million pounds of tobacco from previous crops. Stabilization buys tobacco that fails to bring bids higher than the federal support price.

"Just talking to my neighbors and people in the farming community, everybody's a little nervous about it," said Stone. "They're worried what would happen if Stabilization got a lot of tobacco the first few weeks."

"There's going to be a lot riding on the line (this season)," he said. "This may be the year a lot of questions are answered."

This year's growers are offering tobacco that should draw buyers from the tobacco companies, said Dr. Chester Black, director of the Agriculture Extension Service at North Carolina State University.

"We believe we will have a quality crop that will be acceptable to the companies this year," Black said. "I think this season will be critical for the farmer. He needs a good price

USDA Official Plans Market Appearance

United States Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block is scheduled to attend the opening of the Greenville Tobacco Market at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Raynor Forbes & Clark Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue, local chamber of commerce and agriculture officials have announced.

Officials say Block is attending the market opening to enhance his understanding of flue-cured tobacco prior to the upcoming rewriting of the farm bill. Block's son Hans, who manages the Block family farm in Illinois, will accompany his father. Senator Jesse Helms, Senator

John East, Congressman Walter Jones, Congressman Jim Martin, Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell Sr., assistant secretary of agriculture, and George Dunlop, director of the Senate Agriculture Committee, are also scheduled to attend.

State officials scheduled to appear at the opening include Agriculture Secretary Jim Graham, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, Senator Bob Jordan, Senator Vernon White, Representative Ed Warren, Representative Walter B. Jones Jr., and Tom Taft, chairman of the North Carolina Ports Authority.

In The Area

Vehicle Wrecks

Greenville police charged James Andrew Migliorato of New Bern with driving while impaired, following investigation of a 2:25 a.m. collision Sunday on Tenth Street, 25 feet east of the Dickinson Avenue intersection.

Police said the car driven by Migliorato went out of control, hit the curb and ended up on the Seaboard Coast Line railroad tracks, resulting in an estimated $3,000 damage to the vehicle.

Break-Ins Reported

Greenville police are investigating two house break-in reported Sunday.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said a stereo receiver, tape player and turntable and a television set, valued at $1,150, were taken from an apartment at 112D Concorde Drive in a break-in reported at 1:52 a.m.

According to Officer W.A. Moore, a television set valued at $50, and $6 in cash, was taken from a home at 802 Pamlico Ave. in a break-in reported at 12 noon.

Thefts Reported

Police are continuing their investigation into the theft from two cars over the weekend.

Officer J.C. Mulford said 10 stereo tapes were taken from a car parked at the Buccaneer Theater Friday night. That theft was reported at 9:01 p.m.

A radio-cassette player valued at $400 was taken from a vehicle parked at 411 Able St. Sunday, officer E.M. Haddock said. The theft was reported at 11:05 a.m.

Robberies Reported

Three robberies — one Saturday morning and the other two reported Sunday — are under investigation by Greenville police.

Officer B.W. Lewis said F.W. Satterwaite Jr., of 1603 E. Third St. reported at 4:29 a.m. Saturday that he had given a man a ride to Glendale Court apartments.

When Satterwaite arrived at the apartment complex, the man struck him in the mouth and took his wallet, Lewis said.

Officer G.W. Williams said Jack Thomas of 113 Greenway Apartments reported at 12:05 a.m. Sunday that he was robbed of $20 by a man he gave a ride to and drove to the 400 block of East Fourth Street.

Williams said Thomas was hit in the mouth by the robber.

John James Oliver of Hobgood was robbed of $3 in cash and a watch valued at $25 in an incident reported at 10:35 p.m. Sunday, according to Officer D.W. Nichols.

Nichols said Oliver was sitting on the hood of a car near the intersection of Spruce Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, when two men approached, produced a pistol, and demanded his money and jewelry.

Rate Reduction

Allstate Insurance Company announced today that it will reduce its rates for many automobile and homeowners insurance policies in North Carolina.

The premium reductions for auto insurance will average 4.2 percent for private-passenger car policies, with many policyholders receiving premium decreases ranging from 2 percent to 13 percent.

Homeowners premiums will be reduced by an average of 2.8 percent.

The reduction in auto insurance will take effect Aug. 1, while the homeowners rate reduction will take effect July 30. Combined, the reductions will save customers $3.75 million a year in insurance premiums, Allstate officials said.

The amount of reduction in both auto and homeowners policies will vary according to the type and amount of insurance purchased, and in the case of auto coverage, driver classification and driving record.

A comparison chart distributed by Allstate shows that policy holders in Greenville, who now pay $240 for homeowners coverage of $70,000 on a frame dwelling, with a $250 deductible, will pay $223, or 7 percent less, for their insurance when the new rate goes into effect.

Program Open

High school students from Pitt County and throughout the state could be selected to participate in running state government for a day.

During Youth Involvement Day, Sept. 23-24, students will pair up with the governor, lieutenant governor, state attorney general or any one of a number of state officials and work alongside their counterparts.

For application forms and information, contact Sarah Harris at 733-9296 or write the Youth Advocacy and Involvement Office, 121 W. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27603-1334. Deadline for submitting applications is August 13. Cost per student is $34 which includes lodging, two meals and administrative costs.

Serves As Page

Tammie Terrelle Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edwards of Greenville, served as a page in Gov. Jim Hunt's office in Raleigh July 23-27. She is a senior at J.H. Rose High School.

Radio Guests

Guests on the city's radio program, City Hall Notes, during the week of July 30 will be Lee Murphy of the Engineering and Inspections Division and Sammy Mills of the Public Works Transit Division.

Murphy will discuss bicycle safety and Mills will talk about transit operation.

City Hall Notes is aired on WOOV Radio each Tuesday and Thursday at 10:25 a.m.

Briley-Kilpatrick Vows Solemnized

Mary Susan Kilpatrick of Winterville and Walter E. Briley Jr. of Greenville were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the First Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Linwood Kilpatrick, father of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Kilpatrick of Winterville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Briley Sr. of Greenville.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a floor length gown with a chapel train of satin organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline and short puff sleeves. Venise lace motifs etched with seed pearls outlined the neckline and applied the bodice and sleeves. Ruffles accented the shoulders and the skirt was flared. She wore a Victorian designed bridal hat of schiffli embroidery and Venise lace encrusted with seed pearls with a cage veil of illusion. Garlands of Venise lace encircled the brim. Silk flowers accented the turned up brim and hand-rolled bridal illusion streamers accented the back. She wore pearls, a gift of her parents, and carried her mother's Bible which she carried in her wedding. It was accented with lace from her great-grandmother's wedding dress. She also carried her grandmother's lace handkerchief.

Kimberly Kilpatrick of Carboro, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Judi Brown, sister of the bridegroom of Kinston, Mary Ann Lowe, sister of the bridegroom of Robbins, Terry Cobb, Anne Branch of Greenville, Kathy Bailey of Black Jack and Paula Hunsucker of Whiteville. The flower girl was Olivia Brown, niece of the bridegroom. She carried a basket of mixed spring flowers.

Honorary bridesmaids included Renee Powell and Lee Ann Harney. They carried long-stemmed pink carnations.

The attendants wore formal gowns of violet faille taffeta designed with an open neckline. The fitted bodice featured a ruffle of taffeta that outlined the off-shoulder bodice and deep scooped back and cap sleeves. A sash of matching taffeta encircled the modified waistline. Each carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Robert Brown of Kinston, David Lowe of Robbins, brothers-in-law of the bridegroom, Chris Cannon, Jimmy Stallings and Joe Joyner, all of Greenville, and Doug Henry of Carboro.

MRS. BRILEY

The mothers of the couple wore formal gowns and were remembered with corsages.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Ruth Taylor and Catherine Nelson and Tammy Edwards, who sang "The Wedding Song," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Looking Through the Eyes of Love."

Melissa Adams presided at the guest register and Kim Allen passed out wedding programs. Elaine Harrell directed the wedding.

Cake was served by Gail Goins and punch was poured by Amy Waddell at the reception. Vivian King assisted. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner. The couple was honored at several showers and parties.

The bride is a senior in the East Carolina School of Nursing and the bridegroom is a computer programmer for the East Carolina Bank.

The couple will be living in Winterville after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Orlando, Fla.

Couple Marries On Sunday Afternoon

The wedding of Terry Lynn Whaley and Michael Jan Raines, both of Ayden, was solemnized Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Epworth United Methodist Church. The Rev. Richard C. Hill officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by pianist Patricia Haddock. Jill Bland sang "Endless Love," "The Wedding Prayer" and "Looking Through the Eyes of Love."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley F. Whaley of Ayden. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Raines of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal designer gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with appliques of silk Venise lace etched in pearls and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke fashioned in imported English net outlined in a ruffle of chantilly lace bordered in white satin ribbon and pearls. The modified natural waistline was enhanced with a band of chantilly lace edged in oat pearls in a scalloped pattern interspersed with clusters of seed pearls. The full bishop sleeves of lace were trimmed in ruffled lace with pearl and satin trim. Ruffled tiers of chantilly lace with pearl and satin ribbon trim enhanced the skirt and chapel length train. She wore a bridal circlet of white silk flowers interspersed with petals of lace edged in oat pearls. Her fingertip length veil of imported illusion was edged in silk Venise lace flowers. She carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis and ivy tied with satin ribbons.

Wendy Roach of Grifton, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a formal gown of suede rose faille taffeta designed with an open neckline. The fitted bodice featured

Many Trips To Kitchen Annoy Aging Waitress

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a waitress, and my biggest complaint is customers who ask for coffee, and when it's served they say, "Could I have milk instead of cream?"

I go back to the kitchen for the milk, and when I serve it they ask, "Do you have any artificial sweetener?" Then I have to go all the way back to the kitchen again for the artificial sweetener.

Abby, after being on my feet for eight hours, three trips to the kitchen for one cup of coffee is really annoying. When people order coffee, why don't they say, "I'd like a cup of coffee with milk instead of cream, and please bring some artificial sweetener?"

I didn't mind all that walking when I was 20, but I'm 50 now, and I'm tired.

—VERICOSE VERA IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR VERA: Since that's a common problem, when someone orders coffee, simply ask, "... and how do you take it?"

DEAR ABBY: My problem concerns my ex-wife. When we were divorced 15 months ago, I tried to get her to go back to using her maiden name but she refused. We have no children.

After our divorce, she started living a rather wanton and loose lifestyle and I feared that she would embarrass my family, as we are the only family in town with this particular surname. My fears were confirmed when she turned up visibly pregnant—telling people she has no plans to marry the baby's father, whoever he is!

Can she give her child my surname? Some people in town are asking me if I want a boy or girl because they assume I am still married to this crazy lady. After all, she's still using my name.

To make matters worse, I am engaged to a fine woman whom I expect to marry soon. Don't I have any legal rights in this matter? It doesn't seem fair that a divorced woman can continue to use her ex-husband's surname and bring disgrace upon his whole family.

What should I do?

Pay As You Go

Hidden in all the debate about merger of Greenville and Pitt County schools is a trend that means vast changes in the way we finance our public improvements.

Local governments are avoiding bond issues like the plague. The reason is a development with which every individual is familiar; that is the steadily increasing interest rates which governments, businesses and individuals must pay to borrow money. For businesses and individuals, savings are possible through deducting the interest paid from income taxes, but for government entities there is no such savings.

Government bodies are finding now that it is far less expensive to temporarily raise property tax rates to finance needed capital improvements than to issue bonds.

In the case of the school improvements, Pitt County Commission chairman Bob Martin said issuing bonds for 30 years would cost almost as much in property taxes for that span of time as it would cost each year on a pay-as-you-go basis (probably five or six years).

There was a time when local governments turned to bond issues for school improvements, fire stations and other capital improvements. That was a time of low interest, however, and even then long term financing was expensive. Now borrowing money for such projects is virtually prohibitive, and consequently it is far more advantageous to the taxpayer if the financing is done on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Late Study

There is one New York congresswoman who voted in 1981 to scrap the tobacco program and also voted for a farm bill amendment that would have scrapped the peanut program.

She is now a candidate for vice president of the United States. As such, she studied the standard bearer's guidelines and record and converted to becoming a tobacco program supporter.

Too bad the lady had to become a candidate for higher office before doing her homework.

One is tempted to think that during the recurrent congressional tobacco wars all members should be candidates for vice president; they might all become better and wiser congressmen.

We think it fair to say tobacco growers will welcome understanding allies to their cause wherever they can find them; even among ranks of candidates for vice president. Welcome aboard, Rep. G. Ferraro.

—Maureen Santini—

The Way Of A Campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While President Reagan was denouncing Democrats at a campaign rally in Atlanta last week, an Italian-American voter who braved the sweltering heat to see the president voiced his personal dilemma.

"I wish I could vote for him and Ferraro," Bill Brunetti of Cobb County told a reporter.

Brunetti's statement sums up one of the problems Reagan faces as he campaigns for re-election. The president must convince ethnic Catholics and 50 percent of the nation's women, that he deserves their votes even though he is not, by heritage or gender, one of their own.

The president may wince at the notion that he must appeal to the same constituency as Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro, the Democratic vice presidential nominee whom Republican strategists label among the most liberal members of Congress.

But it was obvious from the way he made his campaign pitch last week that Reagan knew that he and Ms. Ferraro will often be competing for the same audiences.

Brunetti said he believed he'd vote for Reagan. "I like what he has done the last three years and I'm not real impressed with Mondale."

But an Italian-American barber in Bethesda, Md., a long-time Reagan supporter, told a reporter recently that Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale "will get the votes of 29 million Italian Americans" because he gave Ms. Ferraro a chance to become the first American of Italian ancestry in the White House.

The barber was exaggerating slightly, since there are only about 12 million Italian Americans.

As the president launched a political counteroffensive last week to regain the spotlight the Democrats enjoyed during their nominating convention, the Reagan camp appeared nervous, at least temporarily.

There was reason to be. Two recent polls show the large advantage Reagan enjoyed over Mondale two brief weeks ago has evaporated, and it is becoming all too apparent that Ms. Ferraro is partly responsible.

A recent Lou Harris poll, for example, shows Reagan beating

RALEIGH — August isn't good politicking time. People are tired of politics. The primary campaigns are still fresh in their minds and the national political conventions are pre-empting their favorite television shows. The weather's nice and the pennant races are heating up. So who cares about the politicians?

That's why most polls will try to lay low this month. They'll do behind the scenes work, they'll rest up and they'll get ready for a big push beginning on Labor Day.

In the state races, all the candidates except John Carrington, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, have set up such a schedule. Carrington began his television advertising in July and his top aides say he'll be going full guns in August. It's an early start precipitated by the fact that Carrington is a longshot.

Carrington, 49, is a native of New Jersey who came to Raleigh nine years ago when he moved his business here. He is a political newcomer who is stressing one political theme: "Taxes are too high."

Of the major Republican candidates in 1984, Carrington is seen as having the smallest chance of winning. For one reason, a Republican hasn't been elected lieutenant governor in this century. For another, the Democrats have a very attractive candidate opposing him in Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery. For yet another, Carrington has few political skills.

When Carrington and Jordan met for the first time at a forum sponsored by the N.C. Press Association, it was evident that Carrington will have a difficult time matching Jordan's political experience and grasp of the issues. At the event, in Pinehurst, Carrington repeatedly answered questions with short but vague answers which showed little insight into the issues. Jordan showed much greater depth. As one newspaperwoman said after the forum, "John didn't do his homework."

It is possible for candidates who have little experience to knock off opponents who have a great deal of it. They need a simple, straightforward message, and they need the ability to excite the public. Carrington has the first. He needs work on the second.

Carrington's anti-tax stand ("This is one of the highest taxed states in the country," he says, and state government is "a casebook of mismanagement") is the message some folks want to hear. Carrington will make it clear that if elected he'll work for lower taxes. That's the kind of message that comes across well on television and it should increase his support with the voters.

But Carrington will have to do more than television and that's where he'll have his problem. He is a lousy speaker and admits it. He gets so nervous speaking in public that he sounds like he has a constant frog in his throat. When it comes his turn to talk at a forum, he looks upset, like a kid in school. Add that nervousness to his lack of familiarity with the issues, and Carrington strikes people — at least several editors interviewed after the forum — as being ill-suited for the job.

Although Carrington's TV has started, the candidate himself is not yet geared up for the fall campaign. Don Penven, an aide, reports that Carrington is still running his business, trying to get things in place so he can take September and October off. He'll only be able to politick part-time until then.

Carrington has long odds against him in this race and he appears to be putting most of his hopes into television advertising. That's why he's breaking out of the gates fast with ads in August.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As close neighbors, we would like to add our voices to those who have recently expressed concern and disappointment over the East Carolina University's demolition of the Coleman house (1003 E. Fifth St.) and its announced plans to locate a parking lot on the property. We are especially concerned about the university's apparent lack of respect for its immediate neighbors and for the city of Greenville in failing to consult with either group before going ahead with the destruction of that handsome, sturdy old home. University officials are surely aware that the city and the Tar River Neighborhood Association have plans to make this area a historic district. Actions like this one suggest that the university wishes to subvert those plans and to acquire property in the area for its own non-residential uses. City officials maintain that the university will need a zoning variance to locate a parking lot on this property. If this is the case, why did the university not request such a variance at a public hearing before it razed the building, thus giving all interested parties a chance to state their concerns and reach an acceptable compromise? As matters stand now, we will strongly oppose the granting of such a variance and we will urge the city to do the same.

Residents of our neighborhood have in recent years worked very hard to reverse a trend toward deterioration and to make our area an attractive, quiet, safe place to live. We are convinced that the increased traffic, noise and lights of parking lot, and the destruction of more fine old homes would be extremely detrimental to the residential character of the area. Therefore, we appeal to Greenville citizens and ECU students concerned about university-community relations to help us persuade the University to reconsider its plans to locate parking lots in our neighborhood.

To the editor:

How much is a human life worth? A few days ago a young man was electrocuted in Greene County. It took 25 minutes for the EMT Rescue Squad to transport him to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department for definitive treatment. He unfortunately was in intractable ventricular fibrillation and could not be resuscitated.

A few months ago, a middle-aged man collapsed at home in Greenville. The EMT Rescue Squad, however, was delayed more than 30 minutes by the train before it could reach the Emergency Department. He also was in intractable ventricular fibrillation and could not be resuscitated. Other occurrences could be mentioned. The lifesaving treatment for ventricular fibrillation, the most common cause (60 percent) for sudden cardiac death, and other heart dysfunctions is electrical countershock. If it is delivered within four minutes, the success rate is 40 to 50 percent. If it is delayed longer than 15 minutes, the success rate is zero.

Thus, definitive treatment must be given early to save lives. This can only be delivered outside the hospital setting by properly trained personnel — namely paramedics. Paramedics competently giving urgent medical care in the field make the difference between seriously ill people arriving at and leaving the hospital alive or not.

Proposals to bring the Greenville EMT's up to paramedic level have repeatedly been made but have fallen on deaf ears. I don't know why — be it political, financial or personal reasons of the local decision makers. Whatever the case, had the time and money been invested, the men mentioned above who tragically died may have survived.

A Place In The Parking Lot

There is now a big real estate boom in parking places in Washington. As more "No Parking at Anytime" signs go up in the streets, people are desperate to have a parking spot they can call their own.

To find out about the boom I went to see a real estate agent who specializes in selling parking spaces. He had color photographs of various garages on his wall.

"I'm interested in buying a parking space," I told him.

"You've come at a good time. We have several outstanding ones that have just come on the market. May I inquire what kind of automobile you own?"

"A 1984 Volvo."

"Then you will want a quality parking spot in the upper range brackets. Here is one that was only used by the original owner. The garage is just five minutes from the Washington Monument, and your place would be on the first tier, right near the entrance."

"How big is it?" I asked.

"It's quite large, 11 by 22 feet. It is marked by lovely gold stripes and decorated with a handpainted RESERVED sign on the wall. Your Volvo will be very happy there."

"How much does it cost?"

"Since the owner wants to sell because he is moving to San Francisco, we can let you have it for $23,000, not including maintenance charges."

"What are the maintenance charges for?"

"Heating, a 24-hour garage attendant, and keeping your space swept clean. Of course, you'll have to be passed on by a board of the other parking space owners, but I'm sure you won't have a problem considering the make of your car and the year."

"Do you have anything less expensive in the garage?"

"I do have one on the fourth level down. It's a charming old parking space but does need some work."

"What kind of work?"
"The concrete is cracked, and the white lines are fading, and during a heavy thunderstorm water seems to gather down there. But if your Volvo has been rust proofed I don't see any problem."

"How much is that one?"

"We can let you have it for $17,000, which is a steal."

"It seems like a lot of money for a broken-down parking space."

"There are several advantages to being down on the fourth tier. Your Volvo won't hear the planes from National Airport overhead, and as you drive down and around you have a lovely scenic view of all the other cars parked in the garage. I have four parties interested in it now."

"Can I get a mortgage on it?"

"You'll have no problem at all. The banks consider parking places in Washington much better collateral than apartments and condominiums."

"Suppose I only want to spend $10,000 for a spot. Do you have anything downtown for that?"

"We have a 9 by 16-foot spot in a dark alley that has just come on the market. The front of your car would look out on a meatpacking plant and the rear would face an empty warehouse. I don't know if your Volvo would feel very safe there or not. Frankly, I would buy something with a roof over it."

"But it seems like so much money."

"You must not look at it as a financial burden. After all, owning your own parking place is now the ultimate American dream."

Strength For Today

We often read of politicians, authors or other well-known personages who respond to propositions put to them "with scoffing." But is this a proper response? Certainly if we do not believe the soundness of a certain proposition, we should deny it, and — if necessary — vigorously oppose it. But we make a mistake when we try to dismiss it as irrelevant and immaterial by "scoffing" at it.

Most propositions which are advanced have a grain of truth to them, and sometimes this grain is important. In panning for gold, for example, after much washing apparently nothing but mud is left on the bottom of the pan. But when this is smoothed out, little specks of gold appear here and there.

So it is with life and its ideas. There may be 10 pounds of mud, but, if the mud is gold country mud, there will be a few grains of gold at the bottom.

Former Teamsters Union leader Jimmie Hoffa was last seen July 30, 1975, outside a restaurant near Detroit. Convicted of fraud, Hoffa had served 58 months before his 13-year sentence was commuted by former President Richard Nixon in 1971. Out of jail, Hoffa endorsed Nixon in 1972 and spoke out for prison reform. He compared prison wardens to the captains of ships — ships on the verge of going under. WHY BITE ON THE RIBBON?

Did you ever wonder why your dentist asks you to bite on a thin piece of ribbon? Actually it is a very fine strip of paper, or film coated with special marking material. What he is doing is checking your bite. He's looking for any high spots on the surface of your teeth which meet prematurely when the uppers and lowers come into contact.

He'll check your bite from several different directions and from the information he finds from the markings on the ribbon, he'll know just how your bite works and whether it needs any bite correction. It may even indicate that certain teeth need building up to meet their opposing partners.

He can also take study models so that he has a permanent hard plaster model of your teeth. From this simple bite test, he can then adjust your bite so that you have a comfortable fit and, as a bonus, save you the possibility of more serious problems in the future. When your friend the dentist says, "bite down", he's doing you and your mouth a favor. Have you thanked him lately?

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JULY 31, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: After a morning's beneficial start, when you have the energy to be resourceful and clever, there enters an influence which can be confusing. Avoid dissipations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You begin the day full of vitality and can accomplish a good deal, but later in the day are apt to be somewhat confused.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make those appointments for pleasure early otherwise there is apt to be friction later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good morning to handle home situation quickly and then let it work out naturally and you have better accord in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Respond quickly to the demands of others and gain fine benefits early otherwise you find it difficult to do anything later.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Make collections and pay bills early in the day since later you have to clear up some confusion connected with your affairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You get a fine idea early for gaining a cherished wish, so follow through on it. Be diplomatic with good friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can get your ideas across to others early, but later they would not understand so readily. Avoid stress and strain.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look to a good pal for a favor in the morning and later guard against some form of deception.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early get busy at career work and later look into conditions that are baffling to you. Attend that charming social affair.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are newly inspired today and can delve into whatever is most interesting and important to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) The morning can be interesting with the one you love and then make a plan to have this last far into the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) An associate will cooperate in the morning, so get your points across then. Take everything with a grain of salt.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have the ability to put ideas across and be a real organizer, so give as fine an education as you can to extend this natural talent. One who is also a born trouble shooter. Sports are a must here.

Alliance Talks Set

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Chaim Herzog will open talks Tuesday with the two major political parties to explore the possibility of a Likud-Labor alliance that would break a post-election deadlock, a top aide said today.

The informal talks will begin even before Herzog receives official election results, said the aide.

The president traditionally holds such talks after the official vote tally and invites one party to try to form a government.

Neither the Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's governing Likud bloc nor the opposition Labor Party received enough votes after last week's election to easily form a coalition of at least 61 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament.

Both parties have agreed to the concept of a Likud-Labor alliance, but each thinks it should lead such a coalition.

Herzog will start formal talks with the two major parties and other parliamentary factions Wednesday, after he receives official election results from the central election committee. Only after completing those talks will he make a formal request that one party try to form a government.

Shamir held negotiations today with the two members of the Orthodox Agudat Israel party, which won two seats in the Knesset. Agudat leader Rabbi Avraham Shapira said his party had not yet decided which way it would lean.

Labor leader Shimon Peres said in an Israel radio interview that despite earlier reports, he believed a second Orthodox party was not yet in Likud's pocket.

Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the four-seat Sephardi Torah Guardians party, known as Shas, said Sunday night his party felt ideologically closer to Likud.

But Peres said he believed Shas decision to negotiate with Shamir did not mean a definite alliance.

Observers Feel 'Professionalism' Of Politics Is Driving Costs Up

RALEIGH (AP) — The skyrocketing costs of campaign spending, evident in the record-setting contest between Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms, place hardships on candidates, say veteran politicians and observers.

"I am dismayed by the tremendous cost that television has added to campaigns," said former governor and Duke University President Terry Sanford. "What it does to the political process is, it just puts outlandish burdens on those seeking office. And that just can't be good for democracy."

In the 1954 U.S. Senate race, Sanford remembered, Democrat W.

Kerr Scott used only one television commercial in his campaign. He bought time to deliver a televised speech and the entire campaign cost about $100,000, said Sanford, who was Scott's campaign manager.

"What we're dealing with is the professionalism of politics that has taken place," Herbert E. Alexander, director of the Citizens Research Foundation, told the News and Observer of Raleigh in telephone interview from his Los Angeles office.

"Any serious candidate for major office has to contemplate hiring a pollster, hiring a campaign manager, an advertising consultant, time buyers and direct mail computer experts," said Alexander, a professor of political science at the University of Southern California. "What we see is the application of high technology to politics."

So far the Helms campaign has reported raising $8.42 million and spending $8.8 million, while the Hunt campaign has raised $5.17 million and spent $3.9 million.

Those figures represent a new record in campaign spending, both in North Carolina and the nation. Helms' fund-raising total has already exceeded the old national record for a U.S. Senate race — $7.6 million set by Helms in his 1978 campaign.

"The price keeps getting pushed up higher and higher — sometimes by candidates spending their own money, sometimes by candidates like Helms who are successful at raising big sums through small contributions by direct mail," said Alexander, who wrote the book "Financing Politics."

Both sides say they are unhappy with the high cost of campaigning.

New Bridge Site Is Eyed By State

RALEIGH (AP) — A preliminary environmental impact statement assessing three possible sites for a proposed third bridge to Bogue Banks should be completed in early August, according to state highway administrator Billy Rose.

Rose said the preliminary statement would be circulated in Carteret County and that a public meeting would be held to gauge reaction to the proposals.

"All of the development on Bogue Banks is making it necessary to build another access point," Rose said. Summer traffic on the two bridges often is congested, Rose said, adding that a new bridge might reduce long travel delays.

The site for the bridge could be selected before the end of the year, he said.

A four-lane bridge is now located west of Emerald Isle on N.C. 58, and a two-lane drawbridge connects Atlantic Beach with Morehead City. The drawbridge has been the subject of controversy between the Morehead City Council and the state Department of Transportation.

The transportation department wants to build a $24 million bridge to replace the drawbridge, but the town council favors a new bridge west of the present location. The council has filed suit to try to block the planned construction of the new bridge, which has been approved by the transportation department.

The first option is a 10,000-foot bridge that would begin almost 3 miles west of Morehead City on U.S. 70, said M.F. Rupp of DeLeuw Cather and Co., which is handling the project. The bridge would touch down in Pine Knoll Shores.

Under the second option, Rupp said the bridge would begin farther west, near U.S. 70 between Newport and Morehead City. The 13,000-foot bridge would span the sound and touch down in Indian Beach, near Salter Path.

The final alternative would begin farther west on a new road off U.S. 70, Rupp said. The 13,000-foot bridge would cross through Croatan National Forest, swing around the headwaters of Gales Creek and land in Indian Beach West.

Reclamation Effort Slowed

SPRUCE PINE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina politics has thrown another wrench into efforts to reclaim about two dozen abandoned mines in Avery, Mitchell and Yancey counties, local and state officials say.

The three counties bordering Tennessee border are rich in mineral mining. But officials say the same rugged mountain ridges that have provided the nation with the bulk of its mica, feldspar and kaolin pour thousands of tons of sediment into major reservoirs in eastern Tennessee.

The Tennessee Valley Authority contends the mines have caused diminished flood control, clogged municipal water systems and a damaged hydro-electric plant in Tennessee.

The North Carolina Legislature appropriated $48,000 this month to be shared evenly among the three counties in filling in the open pits and seeding them with grass, brush and tree seedlings. But each county is required to match the funds in money or services.

In Yancey County, where Democrats hold a two-one majority among registered voters, a special $8,000 "pork-barrel" appropriation cut in half the needed matching money.

For Avery and Mitchell counties, two of only five North Carolina counties with a Republican majority, there was no such bonus.

Mitchell County manager David P. Huskins said the favoritism to Yancey, plus the fact the bill was enacted after the counties had adopted the 1984-85 budgets was like a kick in the teeth.

Ralph C. Heath, chairman of the Mitchell County Soil and Water Conservation District and a member of the Cooperative Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation Committee, said the Legislature's action was "nothing but politics...."

Jack A. Muncy, a TVA reclamation forester, said the agency will have spent $400,000 by Sept. 30 to help reclaim 1,456 acres of abandoned mines in the three counties.

Once that money runs out, TVA has no plans to spend any more on the project, leaving about 24 mines and 100 acres unclaimed, he said.

Life Sentence

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for man convicted of killing a Valdese driver because he was driving too slowly says he is tremendously relieved by the life sentence given his client.

William Moose, 31, was sentenced to life in prison by a Burke County Superior Court judge after the jury was deadlocked over whether to issue the death penalty.

"We're just thrilled and tremendously relieved," said Louis Vinay, one of Moose's two court-appointed attorneys. "It's been a very, very long day and a half," he said, referring to the more than eight hours of jury deliberation last week.

Woman Has Historic Space Trip

MOSCOW (AP) — The first woman to walk in space and her two partners ended a 13-day space mission when their Soyuz T-12 capsule dropped by parachute into a pasture in Soviet Central Asia.

The capsule landed Sunday evening 90 miles southeast of Dzhzhkazuan under a red and white parachute.

Svetlana Savitskaya, who last Wednesday became the first woman space walker, also became the first woman to make two trips into space when the craft was launched July 17, carrying her as the flight engineer, mission commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov and Igor Volk.

The Soyuz craft had docked with the orbiting Salyut-7 space station, occupied by three other cosmonauts, Leonid Kizim, Vladimir Solovyov and Oleg Atkov. They have been circling the Earth since Feb. 9. Today was their 172nd day in space and Tass noted they were approaching the 211-day record set by another Soviet team in 1982.

Soviet television showed the capsule landing in the central Asian republic of Kazakhstan on the Sunday night news program.

The cosmonauts, still in their spacesuits, sat on lawn chairs set up for them on the grassy pasture and spoke with Soviet reporters.

"Our program was fulfilled; and the only thing we are sorry for is that it was a short flight," Dzhanibekov said.

Miss Savitskaya did not mention her record-setting feats, but complimented the crew and others working in the space program for their cooperation and friendship.

A veteran test pilot who made her first space trip in August 1982, she made her space walk along with Dzhanibekov. They spent more than 3½ hours testing a new tool that can cut, weld, solder and paint outside the spacecraft.

Samples of the materials used in the space-walk tests were brought back with the cosmonauts, Tass said.

Tass said all three cosmonauts have been awarded the Order of Lenin and Gold Star medal, and a bronze statue of Miss Savitskaya would be erected at her birthplace to mark her "heroic feat." The 35-year-old cosmonaut was born in Moscow.

Soviet officials have not said how long the Salyut-7 crew led by Kizim would remain in space.

There are three types of pine bark beetles that often cause damage to pines both in the forest and landscape. Usually pines that are under stress are the first and most severely affected. In certain circumstances the beetle infestation can be treated effectively with insecticides but in the majority of cases the affected pines should be cut and removed promptly.

Pine trees are weakened by factors such as drought, lightning, flooding, fire and old age. These factors are all natural ones and can make the tree vulnerable to insect attack. Man-made causes also figure significantly in beetle attacks. Landscaping operations such as bulldozing, land clearing and the use of heavy equipment close to the tree may inadvertently damage trunks or damage the root system by soil compaction or upheaval.

Pine beetles merely complete the job of removing the oldest or weakest trees they can locate. A healthy pine will sometimes "pitch out" some beetles by a strong flow of sap. But weaker trees are usually invaded by a succession of beetles and die within a year of the initial attack.

Pine beetles are of several species and each species attacks the tree in a certain location on the trunk and at a certain stage of the pine's decline. By looking at the tree one can make a fairly accurate determination of what species of beetle is causing damage. Simply stated, there are three species of engraver beetles that attack declining pines from the uppermost reaches of the tree down to the base of the trunk at ground level.

The most commonly noticed "pine borer" or pine bark beetle is the black turpentine beetle. It is the largest of the pine beetles and characteristically attacks the lower 10-12 feet of the trunk of unhealthy pines. Their pitch tubes are large and often have a hole in the center of the vaguely cone-like glob or dried sap. A tree infested with a few black turpentine beetles can be sprayed with linedane. The turpentine beetle is the only beetle that can be controlled with insecticides.

The ambrosia beetle is the bark beetle that attacks trees at the base and produces brown or pinkish sawdust that encircles the trunk. Ambrosia beetles attack pines that are beyond recovery and they introduce a fungus into the tree which does kill the tree. Insecticides are not effective in control of these insects.

The third bark beetle is the Southern pine beetle. These beetles normally attack weakened pines and usually enter the tree about 15 feet up the trunk. They also have smaller pitch tubes than the black turpentine beetle so you can distinguish these two insects by the size and number of pitch tubes and the location on the tree of their attack.

For many pine bark beetle infestations there is no cure. Consequently the affected trees should be removed by a competent individual. It is better to have beetle-infested wood disposed of than stored as firewood. Beetles can leave the firewood and infest nearby pines.

Fertilization of pines is sometimes needed on newly-cleared lots to stimulate root growth. This can be an important means of preventing beetle attacks. Other measures include removal of diseased pines, thinning of crowded stands of pines, avoiding fresh piles of pine firewood stacked beside healthy pines and maintaining healthy young pines as much as possible.

The modified waistline was accented with a sash. She wore a circlet of suede silk flowers with satin ribbon and carried a bouquet of silk flowers in pink, blue and white interspersed with ribbons.

Jackie Moseley, Ginger Haddock and Rita Jackson, all of Ayden, Danette Braxton and Eleanor Wall of Clayroot were bridesmaids and were dressed identical to the honor attendant in a complementing shade of blue and carried identical bouquets.

The flower girl was Tracy Roach, niece of the bride from Grifton. She was also dressed identically and wore baby's breath in her hair. She carried a white basket with a spray of flowers and rose petals.

Tommy Burney III of Ayden was ring bearer and carried a white satin pillow. Candles were lit by Gene Roach of Grifton, nephew of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Steve Raines of Newport, Chris Raines of Southport, brothers of the bridegroom, Tim Moseley and Marcus Carraway of Ayden and Stan Whaley of Clayroot, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a full length gown of blue chiffon and the mother of the bridegroom selected a full length gown of peach taffeta with a chiffon overlay. Mrs. Horace Lancaster of Smithfield, grandmother of the bridegroom, wore a corsage of carnations.

The wedding was directed by Stella McLawhorn of Ayden.

A reception was held at the church after the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Charleston and Kiawah Island, S.C., the couple will live in Ayden.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at their home Saturday night.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and the bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School.

FACING PROBLEMS

Life would be simple if goals could always be achieved with little effort. However, problems are usually encountered which can temporarily prevent one from achieving goals. When problems interfere with goal achievement, it is necessary to accept the problems for what they are and deal with them honestly and responsibly. Some people rationalize or invent excuses to avoid dealing with problems. When people tell others, "I would like to change things, but..." they are really telling themselves, "I would like to change things if I could do so magically without any long-term commitment, work or risk. Rationalization allows many people to avoid dealing effectively with problems. They would do well to accept the fact that there is no short cut or magic in achieving greater satisfaction. People must commit themselves to a realistic and meaningful goal, work on small but concrete steps each day, and give up habits that interfere with achieving their anticipated goal.

permit its use in efficient high-compression engines. Refiners have been using it since 1925.

Originally, EPA thought it would have to do nothing about lead in gasoline.

All cars made since 1975 have been equipped with catalytic converters to reduce exhaust pollution. Lead renders the catalyst ineffective, increasing other auto pollutants by up to 80 percent, so those cars are supposed to use unleaded gasoline.

As these cars made up a larger fraction of the nation's auto fleet, EPA expected the demand for lead gasoline to drop to the point where refiners would stop making it about 1992.

But surveys show that about 17 percent of motorists with catalyst-equipped cars put leaded gasoline in their tanks at least sometime, and the demand for this fuel has remained far higher than expected — in part, officials believe, because it is several cents per gallon cheaper than unleaded regular.

and he needs to move as much tobacco as he can into the commercial trade channels."

Black said dicamba contamination of some tobacco fields, which is being blamed on tainted fertilizer, should not be a problem at markets.

"As far as our research, there will be no problem with the dicamba tobacco," Black said. "We haven't heard any companies expressing concern about it."

Unusually heavy rains in the last several weeks have slowed harvesting in some areas and damaged the crop in others.

"We've had about 11 inches or so, but it really doesn't look too bad," said grower Carson Perry, who raises 40 acres of tobacco in eastern Wake County. "We've been kind of slow coming along. We got off to a slow start with the rain in April."

Perry, like other growers, said he was worried about the future of Stabilization and unsure what would happen when the markets open.

"I've had years when I made good money and then came right back the next year and didn't make a dime," he said. "To be honest, I'm not sure I'll make a dime this year."

"Not too many years ago, you could get $5,000 and put in a crop," Perry said, "but now, you can go through $40,000 pretty fast."

Buck
 Mrs. Fronie Dixon Buck, 83, died Saturday at her home in the Black Jack Community. Funeral services were conducted at 3:30 p.m. today at the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. Cedric Pierce Jr. and the Rev. Floyd Cherry. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Hardy
 Mrs. Delphia Mills Hardy, a lifelong resident of the Haddocks Crossroads community, died at her home Sunday. Funeral arrangements will be announced by Norcott & Company Funeral Home in Ayden.

Lowe
 Mr. John William Lowe, 70, retired federal employee, died at his home, 106 Lamont Road, Saturday. Funeral services and Masonic rites will be held in Washington, D.C.
 Mr. Lowe was born and reared in Washington, D.C. and recently moved to Greenville. In 1964 he retired from the Department of Commerce, where he headed a department. He was a member of Epephany Episcopal Church, Hiram Lodge No. 10, Scottish Rite and was a shiner.
 Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ruth C. Lowe; a son, John W. Lowe Jr. of Greenville; a daughter, Mrs. Barbara Watkins of Enid, Okla.; a brother, Arthur Lowe Jr. of Gaithersburg, Md.; three sisters, Mrs. Ruth Artis and Mrs. Louise Grass, both of Washington, D.C., and Mrs. Jessie Young of McLean, Va.; and four grandchildren.

 The family requests that flowers be omitted and that memorials be made to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire Ave., Washington, D.C., or the Shriner Crippled Children's Home.
 Arrangements are being handled by Joseph Gawler's Funeral Home, 5130 Wisconsin Ave., Washington, D.C., and the Wilkerson Funeral Home.

U.S. Opens Games With Six Gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — United States women and men splashed and wheeled their way to record-setting gold medals and China, an Olympic no-show for 32 years, returned with bull's-eye perfection in both gymnastics and shooting as the Los Angeles Summer Games began.

The U.S. team finished Sunday, the first day of competition, with victories in five of the nine finals conducted. Because of an unprecedented double-gold in swimming, Americans won six of the 10 gold medals distributed.

The American men's basketball team easily defeated China 97-49 in its Olympic opening game. The U.S. women began play today against Yugoslavia.

Mark Breland of Brooklyn, N.Y., the 147-pound amateur world champion, was the only American boxer in action. Despite taking a standing eight count in the second of three rounds, Breland was a unanimous winner over brawling Wayne Gordon of Canada.

Three U.S. teams also got off to a good start.

In gymnastics, the United States, looking for its first team medal since the 1932 Los Angeles Games, took the lead over heavily favored China in a day during which the perfect mark of 10 was touched 10 times.

In volleyball, the Americans defeated Argentina 15-6, 15-7, 10-15, 15-8. And the U.S. soccer team shut out Costa Rica 3-0.

Olympic Medals
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Medals total through Sunday's competition at the 1984 Summer Games with country, gold, silver, bronze and total medals won:
	Gold	Silver	Bronze	Total
USA	6	3	0	9
China	2	1	1	4
W. Germany	1	0	3	4
Canada	1	2	0	3
Australia	0	1	2	3
Sweden	0	1	0	1
Netherlands	0	0	1	1
Norway	0	0	1	1
Japan	0	0	1	1

Americans Carrie Steinseifer and Nancy Hogshead, with an identical time of 55.92 seconds in the women's 100-meter freestyle, became the first competitors ever to share an Olympic gold medal.

And Tracy Caulkins, swimming against competition dramatically diluted by the Soviet-led boycott, easily outdistanced her rivals to win the women's 400 individual medley in 4 minutes, 38.24 seconds.

Steve Lundquist regained the men's 100-meter breaststroke world record he relinquished to John Moffet in the U.S. Olympic Trials, winning the gold in 1:01.65. Moffet, victimized by a pulled groin muscle suffered in the preliminaries, finished fifth.

American cyclist Alexei Grewal, suspended briefly earlier this month for taking a banned substance, outsprinted Canadian Steve Bauer and won the grueling 190-kilometer (118-mile) road race by barely one length in 4 hours, 59 minutes and 57 seconds.

And Connie Carpenter-Phinney, winning the first U.S. gold of these Games, finished the 79-kilometer (49-mile) road race in 2:11:14, a blink ahead of teammate Rebecca Twigg.

Those performances gave the United States its first men's gold and first women's medal of any kind in cycling.

China, making its first Olympic appearance since 1952, won two gold medals.

Xu Haifeng won the men's free-pistol shooting, the first medal awarded in these Games and the first won by China in Olympic history. And Zeng Guoqiang won the 114-pound weightlift.

Also, Li Ning of China, projected as a candidate for the all-around gymnastics title, scored the first 10s in men's Olympic competition and his teammates added six perfect marks in the men's compulsories.

The day's other gold medals went to West Germany's Michael Gross in the 200-meter freestyle swim, who beat Michael Heath of Dallas in world-record time, and Linda Thom of Canada, who won a shootoff against Ruby Fox of Parker, Ariz., in women's sport pistol.

Swimmers had tied for first place before in the Olympics — Sweden's Gunnar Larsson and American Tim McKee did it at 4:31.98 in the men's 400 individual medley — but the ties had been broken by going one digit farther.

Larsson, two-thousandths of a second faster, got the gold then. But before that year was out, the International Swimming Federation decided it was unfair to break ties that were so close. Henceforth, it said, ties would result in duplicate medals.

It fell to Steinseifer, 16, of Saratoga, Calif., and Hogshead, 22, of Jacksonville, Fla., to become the first double winners, coming in .16 of a second ahead of Annemarie Verstappen of the Netherlands. When the two Americans glanced at the scoreboard at the University of Southern California campus, they exchanged high-fives in the water and embraced each other.

"I'm glad it was a tie," Steinseifer said.

"This is the way I wanted it," Hogshead added.

Caulkins, from Nashville, Tenn., was denied a shot at Olympic gold four years ago because of the American-led boycott of the Moscow Games. This time, the Soviet-led boycott denied Caulkins serious competition by the powerful East Germans.

"Before the race," she said, "I thought what it would have been like to swim against them. But I just put it out of my mind. I've dreamed about it (winning a medal) so long, and here it is."

Caulkins finished 9.06 seconds ahead of Suzanne Landells of Australia. With her 4:38.24, she shattered her American record of 4:40.61, set during the 1980 Olympic trials. But she missed the world-record 4:36.10 by Petra Schneider of East Germany.

The 23-year-old Lundquist, from Jonesboro, Ga., barely made the field for the 100 breaststroke final, finishing fifth in the prelims. But he was a winner when it mattered most, beating Canada's Victor Davis and eclipsing Moffet's world mark of 1:02.13. Peter Evans of Australia, who won the bronze in Moscow four years ago, did it again.

"I said my goal was to make the Olympic team and then another goal was to get a gold medal," Lundquist said. "I reached both goals with a world record. I'm very happy."

Gross broke the American monopoly on the swimming gold by breaking his world record in the 200 freestyle. His 1:47.44 surpassed his previous best by .11. Heath, of Dallas, clocked 1:49.10. With his victory, Gross became the first West German man to win swimming gold since his country was partitioned after World War II.

And Grewal became the first American man ever to win Olympic cycling gold after very nearly being bounced off the U.S. team.

The U.S. Cycling Federation slapped a 30-day suspension on him when he tested positive after a race. But he was reinstated two days later when it was ruled the substance had been taken for asthma.

"My plan was just to go like hell from start to finish," said the 23-year-old from Aspen, Colo. "I've been working on this (sprint) for about two months." So, after Bauer made his move, Grewal made his.

Overton Sets Trick Mark

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Kristi Overton broke the U.S. open women's trick record with a score of 7,070 Sunday in the 1984 Southern Regionals.

The previous record was 6,900 by Karin Roberge of Orlando, Fla., and Overton also established a new girl's national mark.

Overton now ranks first among U.S. women trick skiers and fourth in the world, with champion Anna Maria Carrasco of Venezuela holding the mark of 7,790.

Overton also placed second in girls' slalom and jumping, and she was first in girls' overall scoring.

Jackie Rollins of Greenville placed third in girls' tricks and earned her exceptional rating (E.P.) in slalom, qualifying her for the U.S. Nationals in two events.

Jacobsen Remains Steady For Hartford Open Title

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Just before Peter Jacobsen won his first PGA tournament of the year — the Colonial in May — the man who taught him to play golf discovered he had cancer.

Jacobsen didn't even want to play in that tournament; he was too despondent over the illness of his father. But his family urged him to play, and win, and dedicate the victory to his dad.

When he did win, it was his first victory on the tour in more than four years and it taught him that winning wasn't as hard as he'd convinced himself it was.

On Sunday, he won again, playing steady, deliberate golf to fend off the repeated challenges of a former college rival and take the $400,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open by two strokes.

He shot a 1-under-par 70 on the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course — far worse than his third-round course-record 63 — but maintained his composure enough to stay just ahead of Mark O'Meara.

O'Meara birdied the 18th hole Sunday, but four costly bogies kept him from creeping any closer than one stroke all day. O'Meara came in at 13-under-par 271, two strokes ahead of third-place finishers Bill Kratzert and Gary Hallberg.

Jacobsen won $72,000, O'Meara $43,200.

"It's kind of ironic how things can happen to you," Jacobsen said after his victory. "When I won the Colonial and dedicated it to my dad, I thought, 'This isn't so tough' and I went out and won."

Earnhardt Tops Talladega Field

TALLADEGA, Ala., (AP) — Dale Earnhardt was content to let the cameras decide the runners-up. He had no doubt who the winner was.

In taking his second straight Talladega 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race Sunday, Earnhardt put 1.66 seconds between his Chevrolet and Buddy Baker's Ford at the finish line.

The victory, his first of 1984, earned Earnhardt $47,100 of the $415,725 pot and increased his lead in the point standings that determine Winston Cup Driver of the Year.

He has 2,843 points to 2,778 for Terry Labonte and 2,764 for Bill Elliott.

Earnhardt moved to the point on the backstretch of the final lap and got too far ahead for his challengers to slingshot past him at the finish.

Baker and Labonte, battling for second, and Bobby Allison and Cale Yarborough fighting for fourth, were so close that race officials had to look at pictures to determine that it was Baker, Labonte, Allison and Yarborough behind Earnhardt.

His lead was so comfortable at the end, he said, that "I was waving at the crowd."

He did this, he said, when he realized that Baker and Labonte were door-to-door behind him and neither had a chance to catch him.

With the 15 cars in the lead lap at the finish, he said, "I knew I had to be in the right place at the right time. It was one of those races."

Earnhardt, only the second driver to win the Talladega 500 twice in its 16 years, averaged 155.585 mph, with seven caution flags for a total of 38 laps cutting the pace after his 197.443 mph average for the first 10 of the 188 laps.

Darrell Waltrip, the 1979 and 1982 Talladega winner, finished sixth.

A.J. Foyt, four-time Indianapolis 500 victor, dropped out on the 47th lap.

"Our power steering just went out and I can't steer it," Foyt said.

Yarborough had won the pole position by qualifying at 202.474 mph and led for 34 laps. But the draft, involving more than half the 40 drivers at times, allowed the other cars to stay with him.

Lysander Gives Twins Needed Relief

By The Associated Press
If at first your bullpen doesn't succeed, try, try again. And, if need be, again.
First, it was Minnesota bullpen ace Ron Davis who failed in the ninth inning Sunday. His successor, Len Whitehouse, wild-pitched the tying run home.
But the Twins finally got some clutch relief from Rick Lysander, who got Bobby Grich to hit into an inning-ending double play in the 10th inning with two runners on base. He became the winning pitcher when Tim Teufel singled home a run in the bottom of the 10th to give the surprising Twins a 6-5 victory over the California Angels.
"We were bummed in the ninth, holding our heads and wondering why can't we win games in the ninth," said Kent Hrbek, who drove in three runs with a pair of homers off Mike Witt. "Lysander did the job, but this series isn't the World Series."
Nevertheless, the Twins' eighth victory in their last 11 games increased their lead in the American League West to 1 1/2 games over the Angels, who came to Minnesota with a 1 1/2-game lead of their own.

In other AL games, Chicago edged New York 5-4, Kansas City beat Milwaukee 5-1, Seattle downed Oakland 4-1, Detroit blanked Boston 3-0, Toronto trimmed Texas 6-2 and Baltimore shaded Cleveland 3-1.
With one out in the Minnesota 10th, Dave Engle doubled and Hrbek was intentionally walked by Luis Sanchez. Randy Bush grounded out as Engle and Hrbek advanced and Teufel then rapped his game-winning single.
Minnesota starter John Butcher walked Brian Downing to start the Angels' ninth and Bobby Grich greeted Davis with an RBI double. One out later, Rob Wilfong delivered an RBI single. After Rod Carew walked, Whitehouse retired Daryl Scorniers but uncorked a game-tying wild pitch.
"It's a big win because we would have dropped a half-game behind the Angels if we lost, but now we're a game-and-a-half ahead," said Twins Manager Billy Gardner.

"Davis didn't throw hard at all. If he doesn't have good stuff, I'll take him out of there. But he's still got to be our man at the end. Lysander's pitched well. He gets guys to hit ground balls and I'm not afraid to use him in tight games."
White Sox 5, Yankees 4
Harold Baines rapped out four hits, including a tie-breaking two-run homer in the fifth inning, and Ron Reed provided clutch relief in the ninth as Chicago snapped a six-game losing streak. Winner Floyd Bannister allowed one run until the eighth, when Don Mattingly's homer brought the Yankees within a run. Reed came on with runners at first and second in the ninth and retired Willie Randolph, Ken Griffey and Dave Winfield, striking out the last two.
In the Chicago fifth, Baines' hit a 400-foot shot over the center-field wall off Marty Bystrom for his 17th home run. Greg Luzinski followed with his ninth homer and Chicago scored an unearned run in the sixth on Julio Cruz's sacrifice fly.

Royals 5, Brewers 1
Pat Sheridan and George Brett drove in two runs apiece and Mark Gubicza held Milwaukee to three hits in eight innings for his fifth victory in his last six starts. Kansas City took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on Steve Balboni's double and Sheridan's single. The Royals added three runs in the fifth off Moose Haas after Balboni opened with a walk and Don Slaught singled. Two outs later, Sheridan singled to drive in Balboni and Brett followed with a two-run single after the runners moved up on the throw to the plate.
Mariners 4, Athletics 1
Mike Moore scattered six hits and Dave Henderson and Ken Phelps hit solo home runs as Seattle completed a sweep of the three-game series in which Oakland collected only 17 hits and four runs. Henderson homered off Steve McCatty in the second inning and Phelps connected in the fourth. Seattle also got RBI doubles from Al Cowens in the sixth and Spike Owen in the seventh.
Tigers 3, Red Sox 0
Milt Wilcox held Boston to three singles in eight innings for his 11th victory, matching his total for all of last year. Loser Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd hurled a four-hitter, striking out a career high 10 batters, but was nicked for a pair of unearned runs in the second inning after Darrell Evans walked and Chet Lemon singled. Evans scored when Boston third baseman Wade Boggs bobbled Dave Bergman's two-out grounder for an error and Lemon came home on Doug Baker's bloop single to center that Tony Armas had in his glove but couldn't hold after a long run. Detroit scored its only earned run in the eighth on Ruppert Jones' triple and a sacrifice fly by Lance Parrish.

"I was throwing the ball good and moving it around well," Wilcox said. "After the first inning, I think I had them set up because I had my control. That's been the key. I've only walked one batter in the last four games."
Blue Jays 6, Rangers 2
Rance Mulliniks singled home the go-ahead run in a five-run eighth-inning rally and Dave Stieb scattered six hits as Toronto snapped a six-game losing streak. Texas went ahead 2-1 in the top of the eighth on a run-scoring single by Tommy Dunbar.

But the Blue Jays knocked out Danny Darwin in their half of the inning. Lloyd Moseby doubled with one out, Willie Upshaw was walked intentionally and Willie Aikens singled to tie the score. Mulliniks' single put Toronto in front and pinch-runner Jesse Barfield also scored when right fielder Dunbar threw wildly to the infield. Ernie Whitt singled to score Mulliniks and Tony Fernandez's sacrifice fly drove in the fifth run of the inning.
Orioles 3, Indians 1
Mike Boddicker allowed two singles in 8 2/3 innings and Gary Roenicke hit a solo homer. Boddicker allowed singles by Andre Thornton in the second inning and Julio Franco in the fourth. He left the game with two out in the ninth when his arm stiffened.
The Orioles scored d Roenicke plus Rich Dauer's double-play grounder. Roenicke homered in the sixth and doubles by Floyd Rayford and Al Bumbry made it 3-0 later in the inning.

Reds' Hershiser Continues To Roll

By The Associated Press
It was the near-perfect end to Orel Hershiser's near-perfect month.
Hershiser retired the first 23 Cincinnati batters and finished with a two-hit, 1-0 shutout of the Reds Sunday.
The Los Angeles rookie is on an awesome roll. Although he entered July with an ERA near 6.00 gained mainly in relief, Hershiser has thrown four shutouts this month, including three two-hitters in his last four starts. He's allowed five runs in 44 1/3 innings and has halved his ERA, and then some.
His 4-1 July followed a 3-3 start that had Dodgers officials frequently mentioning "Hershiser" and "Albuquerque" in the same breath.
"He is doing nothing different than when he was pitching relief, except in his approach to pitching," said Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda. "He has the same stuff, the same arm, but a different approach."
"Now he is going after hitters."
As he was mowing down the Reds, Hershiser noticed something in the dugout.
"There was a lot of silence in the dugout from about the fifth inning on," said Hershiser, "and I was the only guy doing any yelling."
Nick Esasky, a 204 hitter entering the game, ruined Hershiser's perfection on a 3-0 pitch with a nasty surprise for the rookie.
"It was almost a shock," Hershiser recalled of Esasky's line-drive single to left. "I threw the ball right down the middle, I just laid it in there. I thought he would be taking. I'm just glad he didn't hit it out of the ballpark."

"The thing I had to do was to go right back to pitching," Hershiser added. "After losing the perfect game there was a little letdown, but most of all I wanted the win."
The only other hit Hershiser surrendered was a two-out single in the ninth to Gary Redus, who then stole second to put the tying run in scoring position. Hershiser then made Ron Oester his seventh strikeout victim to end the game.
In other NL games, Philadelphia topped Montreal 6-4, St. Louis edged Pittsburgh 4-3, San Diego pounded Houston 9-0, Atlanta beat San Francisco 4-3, and Chicago took a pair from New York, 3-0 and 5-1.
Hershiser's two-hitter followed a two-hit shutout by the Dodgers' Bob Welch on Saturday. The Dodgers won that game 1-0 with an unearned run.
Los Angeles, which has not scored an earned run in 33 innings, scored an unearned run in the third, which was enough to hand Mario Soto his fourth loss in 15 decisions.
With one out in the third, Hershiser hit a routine fly to center field which Redus dropped for an error. Dave Anderson forced Hershiser, but stole second and came home on a single by rookie Ed Amelung, playing only his second major league game since his promotion from the Pacific Coast League.

Soto, who scattered four hits, struck out five without walking a batter. "Soto is probably the greatest pitcher in baseball," said Hershiser, 7-4, "so it was great pitching against him and pitching well."
Phillies 6, Expos 4
Pinch-hitter Len Matuszek hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning, his second game-winning homer in six days. Von Hayes earlier hit two homers for Philadelphia.
Tuesday, Matuszek's pinch homer in the seventh inning gave the Phillies a 3-2 victory over the Cubs.
Juan Samuel and Hayes homered to lead off the first, the first time in its history the club had led off with two homers.
Cardinals 4, Pirates 3
George Hendrick's run-scoring double and two-run homer powered the Cardinals to their ninth consecutive victory against the Pirates this season.
Neil Allen, 6-5, earned the victory in relief. Bruce Sutter gained his league-leading 26th save.
Sutter slumped a year ago to a 9-10 record and 4.23 earned run average, but has a 3-3 mark, 26 saves and a 1.50 earned run average this season.
"Last year, he was falling behind in the count and he had to come in with fastballs, which he doesn't want to throw," said the Pirates' Lee Mazzilli. "He's getting ahead in the count this year. Then he can come with that split-fingered fastball or forkball or whatever."

The Cardinals took a 4-0 lead with a three-run third highlighted by Terry Pendleton's run-scoring double and Hendrick's eight homer of the season. Dale Berra hammered his seventh homer for the Pirates.
Padres 9, Astros 0
Tim Lollar snapped a personal four-game losing streak with a two-hit shutout and Garry Templeton backed him with his first career grand slam. The Padres have won eight of their last 11 games.
Carmelo Martinez stroked a bases-loaded, two-run double in the sixth to make it 3-0. A walk again loaded the bases and Templeton walloped a 3-2 pitch over the right-field wall.
Terry Kennedy's single gave San Diego a 1-0 lead in the first. Steve Garvey led off the seventh with a solo homer and the Padres made it 9-0 on an RBI single by Kevin McReynolds later in the inning.
Cubs 3-5, Mets 0-1
The Cubs pulled within 1 1/2 games of NL East-leading New York with a sweep, the first doubleheader loss of the season for the Mets. They had swept their three previous doubleheaders.
Steve Trout pitched a seven-hitter to lead the Cubs in the opener. Jody Davis hit a three-run homer and Scott Sanderson scattered five hits in 7 2/3 innings in the nightcap.
Braves 4, Giants 3
Dale Murphy hit his 24th home run, a two-run blast in the first inning, and Gene Garber allowed only a bunt single and a walk over four innings for his fourth save.

Garber took over for starter Pascual Perez with the bases loaded and nobody out in the sixth.

ABC Blows Coverage

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer
Through all the gushing of the opening ceremonies, through all the flag-waving and cheerleading, ABC didn't really blow it until 8:54 p.m. EDT Sunday night, when Al Michaels proclaimed during the final dramatic stages of the men's cycling road race:
"Michael Gross of West Germany has just set a world's record in the men's 200 meter freestyle ... And we'll be showing it to you on tape in just a while."
These Olympics were to be different, ABC had informed us. All would be live. Or on tape shortly after it happened to avoid the situation that occurred during the Winter Olympics, when most of the audience knew what had happened before the network got on the air.
So what happens? The first time ABC is forced to go to tape delay on a major happening — and it was correct to stay with the cycling — it blows the whole thing by telling us the result beforehand.
Why? What's wrong with showing us the finish of the cycling, then cutting to swimming. Announce it's on tape but don't tell us the result. Let us get excited as Gross approaches the finish with his world record time on one side of the screen and the running time on the other. As it was, most viewers probably paid more attention to Mike Heath finishing second and Jeff Float just missing a medal.
The gaffe came just as ABC was peaking — or rather just as the Olympics were peaking as they got into the end of the first day of competition. For all the cheering at the swimming victories, they were expected. But cycling was not.
Even then, ABC almost blew that, too. Just as Canada's Steve Bauer caught the United States' Alexi Grewal with about seven miles left, the cameras cut out — to a medal ceremony that could easily have been taped. Won't we hear the "Star Spangled Banner" enough these next two weeks?
Then, back to cycling (nervous, jumpy cameras seem to be the benchmark of the network's coverage) to discover that a weary Grewal had somehow managed to stay with Bauer and two Norwegians were approaching. "That's dangerous," said commentator Eric Heiden, never quite saying to whom? Bauer? Grewal? American invincibility?

In fact, one reason Grewal's victory was the highlight is that it's more fun to root for the underdog. If Tracy Caulkins had beaten East Germans it might have meant a lot more. As it was, she's won enough so that an easy Olympic gold medal is almost anticlimactic.
Overall, ABC covered the Olympics Saturday and Sunday almost as if it was looking for a style. During the opening ceremonies, the cameras jumped here to an entering team, there to 86 pianos playing Gershwin, over yonder to a movie star or two. But they never really captured the atmosphere of Los Angeles.

And cheerleading — acknowledged as that — by Jim McKay and Peter Jennings was overkill, particularly when combined with commercials showing all those clean-cut young Americans running and jumping and wearing official shoes or drinking official beverages.
ABC officials announced that their ratings on the opening ceremonies Saturday were 29.7 with 54 percent of the audience. That compared with a 29 share in the opening ceremonies of the Winter Olympics and an overnight rating of 34 and a 39 percent audience share of the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Saturday's Cryptiquip — THE KING'S CHEDDAR CHEESE MAKER IS AN ALL-TIME GRATE.
 Today's Cryptiquip clue: O equals C
 The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

'Santa Barbara' Has Home Connections

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — If NBC's soap opera "Santa Barbara" hits a little closer to home than other afternoon serials, it might be because the show's creators and leading lady really are natives of Santa Barbara — the California beach community some call "a playground for the rich."
 "My friends are all saying, 'You're not going to tell my story, are you?'" said Bridget Dobson, who, with her husband Jerome, are the creators, executive producers and head writers of the new weekday series.
 In the best tradition of suspense, Bridget isn't telling about telling. But there may be some clues left today on the first episode of "Santa Barbara."
 "Santa Barbara" stars Dame Judith Anderson, the Australian actress who has been living in the United States since 1918, the last 34 years in Santa Barbara.
 Known for her Shakespearean parts and her role as Mrs. Danvers in the 1940 movie classic, "Rebecca," Miss Anderson does not consider soaps a lower form of acting.
 "This is not a soap, it's a serial," she snaps. "It's another dimension for me. I don't think it's minor at all, or I wouldn't be part of it."
 Clearly, Miss Anderson didn't get knighted because of a compliant nature. She's also not likely to be typecast anymore following her role as the Vulcan high priestess in the movie "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock."

 "I was doing nothing but rotting away," she said. "The 'Star Trek' role was a whole new life and a whole new audience for me."
 Miss Anderson is a devoted fan of serials, particularly ABC's top-rated "General Hospital." She says she'll still watch "General Hospital," even though it is the timeslot competition for "Santa Barbara."
 There are several other connections between "Santa Barbara" and "General Hospital."
 The Dobsons wrote for the show. Bridget's parents, Doris and Frank Hursley, created it. And NBC's strategy of starting "Santa Barbara" when ABC is broadcasting the Olympics during the day is designed to exploit "General Hospital's" unusual time periods and shorter episodes this week and next.
 NBC also raided ABC's "All My Children" for Marcy Walker, who played the conniving Liza Colby. Miss Walker said NBC "made me an offer I couldn't refuse." Asked if she was going to play a nice character, she sounded offended: "That's not true."
 NBC, which has been a poor third in the lucrative daytime period for almost a decade, is seeing signs of success from its new-found aggressiveness. Last week marked the first time in seven years that NBC had a higher percentage of viewers watching daytime programs than ABC.
 NBC gained that advantage from its morning game shows. The new "Scrabble" was in the top 10 for the third week in a row. ABC, however, still does much better in the afternoon, when serials dominate and more sets are being used.
 With the morning looking up, NBC is now setting its sights on ABC's female viewers in the afternoon. "Santa Barbara," with a production budget of $30 million, is the major element of that strategy. NBC stations covering 95 percent of the nation will carry the show. Broadcast clearance levels for the previous program in the timeslot, "Match Game-Hollywood Squares," had fallen below 80 percent.
 Game shows appeal to older audiences, so by substituting "Santa Barbara" for "Match Game-Hollywood Squares," NBC is reaching for different viewers in the afternoon. Except for Miss Anderson's Minx Lockridge, the characters in "Santa Barbara" are under 30.
 NBC hopes the action-adventure themes and location shooting in Santa Barbara will appeal to young audiences. Taking a page from glamorous prime-time soaps "Dallas" and "Dynasty," Mrs. Dobson said "big oil and Hollywood will be descending on Santa Barbara."

 And did anybody say fantasy and dreams mixed with a little naughtiness?
 "Santa Barbara has a special aura," said Mrs. Dobson. "The wealthy, the giants of industrial America discovered it by the turn of the century. It was a wintering place for many of them. In the 1980s, Santa Barbara has become a playground for the rich."

Bandleader Fred Waring Dead At 84 After Stroke

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Fred Waring, the bandleader whose creativity extended to the kitchen and the invention of the Waring blender, was mourned as an innovator who sought "the ultimate in perfection" as he mixed chorus music with the Big Band sound.
 Waring died Sunday at age 84 after giving his last performance Friday night — leading a concert of 200 teen-agers at Penn State University to cap a two-week series of music workshops.
 A one-time engineering student at Penn State University with an inventive streak, he left his mark on America's kitchens when he patented the Waring blender in 1937. The forerunner of the modern food processor continued to provide him royalties as he pursued his lifelong love affair with chorus music.
 Dubbed "the man who taught America to sing," Waring first conducted in 1916 with his mother's curtain rod and saw his career spread to records, television, radio, Broadway and films.

Strong Dollar Good And Bad

NEW YORK (AP) — A strong dollar has been a mixed blessing for Wall Street.

On the positive side, the dollar's ascent to uncharted heights has helped hold down inflation in the United States and lure foreign investors to U.S. securities markets, said Michael Wilcox, a vice president for investment policy and portfolio strategy at L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin.

Yet the dollar's rise has created problems, making U.S. goods more expensive on world markets and leading to foreign exchange losses when earnings from seemingly profitable overseas operations of U.S. companies are converted into dollars, said A. Marshall Acuff Jr., portfolio strategist at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A83 ♥J65 ♦KJ ♣AQ872
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Obviously, the choice lies between two no trump and a heart raise. Since you have only one spade stopper and your hand has a distributional feature, we clearly prefer a raise to three hearts.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ765 ♥6 ♦A8643 ♣95
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—If partner had enough for game, he would have jumped to four spades. You have a minimum opening bid, but lots of distributional features. The major drawback is your singleton in partner's suit, which might represent a fatal duplication of values. The wise course is to pass and hope for a part score. With a doubleton heart and a singleton club, however, we would have pressed on to game.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—For his free bid, North's hand must be better than minimum, either in terms of high cards or distribution—with a minimum, flatish hand, he would pass West's overall. Nevertheless, you should do no more than take a preference to his first-bid suit. If he has a really good hand, he will act again.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ6 ♥J1063 ♦8 ♣AQJ7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ 4 ♦ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—East's preempt has done its job—it has deprived you of the space you need to properly investigate the right level at which to play the hand. Although a grand slam might be in the cards, the preempt should alert you to the possibility that suits will be breaking badly. The practical solution is a jump to six hearts—with no guarantees. Even that might be beyond your resources.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K10762 ♥Q83 ♦762 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ 3 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's immediate cue-bid is a game force. You have an excellent hand for him—two key cards and a five-card suit. Nevertheless, there is no need to bid more than three spades. If partner only raises to four, pass. However, if partner tries for slam, cooperate by jumping in spades or by showing your key card in hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A10762 ♥AK83 ♦6 ♣K98
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a better than minimum opening bid consisting of all prime controls, so you should make one move toward slam. Complete the description of your hand by bidding four clubs. If partner signs off in either five clubs or four no trump, accept his decision.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," Tribune Media Services, Inc., P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check payable to Newspaperbooks.

The tradition continues in Greenville

On November 15, 1948, Booger Scales became an agent for the Integon Life Insurance Corporation. From that day, a tradition of dedicated, caring service began for the people of Greenville. And that tradition continues today as Booger, along with his son Waighty, strive to help the families of Greenville assure future financial security.

The dedication of this father-son team has resulted in important life insurance protection for four generations of Greenville families. Thanks to Booger and Waighty, 3,112 people know their futures are secure with Integon life insurance protection. And the number continues to grow. In 1983 the two of them insured 349 lives for a total of 21,369,564 Million Dollar Round Table credits.

Service to the folks in Greenville is important to Booger and Waighty. And this commitment to service is evident in the fact that the Scales Agency has retained more clients on a yearly basis than any other Integon agency. In addition, Booger now has more life insurance in force than any agent in the 64-year history of Integon.

Because of this service, Booger and Waighty have not only been consistently honored by Integon, but by the life insurance industry as well.

This year Booger was named to the Million Dollar Round Table, the life insurance industry's most prestigious agent organization, for the 30th consecutive year. In addition, he surpassed the tough requirements of 12,750,000 MDRT credits to be named to the MDRT's prestigious Top of the Table — one of only 659 out of 350,000 life insurance agents in the entire world to do so. He accomplished this feat by producing 14,130,000 MDRT credits.

Booger was also honored by Integon this year for being the company's second highest producer from among 1,800 agents. Coming in at the top is nothing new to Booger, though. In the past 30 years, his hard work and concern for his clients have earned him a spot among Integon's top three producers each year — 17 of those years as Integon's number one agent!

This tradition of excellence established by Booger continues with Waighty. Waighty joined the Scales Agency in 1978 and is committed to providing the best possible service to the families of Greenville. From the time he joined the agency, Waighty has put the welfare of his clients at the top of his priority list. His dedication to service became even more evident when he began to serve the clients of recently disabled Clarke Stokes with an enthusiasm equal to that he uses with his own.

Waighty's concern for his clients is reflected in his being named a member of the Million Dollar Round Table five times, and receiving the National Quality Award as many. And the 28-year-old Waighty placed 20th among Integon's 1,800 agents this year to be recognized in Integon's most prestigious honor club. His volume of MDRT credits for 1983 was 7,239,530.

"Booger and Waighty provide the people of Greenville with a continuing tradition of excellent service, dedication and genuine concern," says Integon Agency Marketing Vice President Charles P. Pickett. "The two share a commitment to their community and a dedication to Integon that make them a truly winning team. We at Integon would like to take this opportunity to thank the people throughout Greenville and Pitt County for their loyalty to our company for nearly four decades."
