TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

Secretary Block Watches As Local Leaf Sales Begin

By MARY SCHULKEN

A low "Amen" echoed through the crowd when Bill Clark Sr. shouted "Tobacco is our lifeblood" into the microphone.

"We depend on it entirely. We've not been fighting back with these hard knocks we've been having and we've got to start doing that," Clark said. He served as master of ceremonies today at the opening sales of the Eastern Belt Tobacco Market in Greenville and was the auctioneer for the first sales of the day at Roynor, Forbes and Clark Warehouse.

The first tobacco sold went for $175 per hundred pounds to American Tobacco Company. In the first 30 minutes of the sale, the lowest price was $147 per hundred pounds, two cents above support price, and the highest was $175. Prices hovered around $150 per hundred pounds. No tobacco sold in the first 30 minutes went to the Tobacco Stabilization Board.

United States Secretary of Agriculture John Block attended the opening of the market and told farmers before the opening sale he was "looking forward to higher (tobacco) prices," in 1984. "We want the (tobacco company) buyers out there buying the crop," he said. "We don't want it (tobacco) in Stabilization. We don't know what to do with it there."

Block said the strength of the dollar abroad, which he attributed to high interest rates in the United States, was keeping imports of tobacco high. American tobacco growers have long been concerned over the volume of imported tobacco, which they say decreases demand for domestic leaf and lowers prices. "Government spending has got to be brought in line before this import problem is solved, because that's what causing the high interest," Block said.

The secretary of agriculture indicated, however, he saw more hope for increasing exports of domestic tobacco than decreasing imports of foreign leaf. "I see a lot of potential for exports," he said, "and I see potential for imports."

Block said he saw no immediate end to the tobacco program. "Ten years from now the tobacco program will exist, but it will not look like it does today, just as it doesn't look today like it did 10 years ago," he said. "I see it in existence in 10 years but with a lot of changes."

To control government spending, decrease interest rates and ease the impact of foreign tobacco on domestic markets, federal budget cuts must be made, said Block, and some of the cuts will have to come in agriculture programs. "We're going to have to take our share of cuts in order to reduce spending," he said, "but I'm convinced we can do this and not see our programs suffer." He did not indicate what programs would be cut, or whether tobacco was one of these programs.

When questioned concerning what he felt would help farmers survive in the future, Block said the "whole solution isn't to provide farmers with more money than they have already to pay high interest on."

Senator Jesse Helms, also present for the opening ceremonies, said he would be watching today's prices very closely. "I've been nudging the companies about imports, and they've agreed to buy more domestic tobacco, so I'm going to watch closely," he said.

The best elixir for U.S. agriculture, Helms said, is "a sound, growing economy with low interest rates."

North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said he was "pleased with the prices" after the first tobacco sales. "Of course we'd always want to see them just a little bit higher."

"There's a lot of good tobacco on the floor today and I hope very little of it goes to Stabilization," Graham added. "Despite the weather we seem to have a good-looking crop of tobacco for 1984 with right much quality in it," he said. "We are hoping for good, good, prices...and that the support price is higher."

Party Leaders Unsure Of The Debate Winner

By STUART SAVAGE

Did anyone come away a winner in Monday night's debate between Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms and Democrat Gov. Jim Hunt, who is seeking to unseat Helms in November?

"I would have to say... having the information that I have... I would have to say it was a tie," Andy Andrews, Pitt County Republican Party chairman said Tuesday.

But Andrews suggested that "to the general public, without a full understanding of the issues, Gov. Hunt may have looked better."

Andrews said, "I thought there were some very good questions asked on the part of both candidates," but he said "I think probably that Sen. Helms did not come across as well as he could have because some of the questions involved lengthy explanations, rather than just yes or no type answers."

Both candidates were "aggressive in their questioning," Andrews suggested, "As a whole, I think the public benefitted from the debate."

The county GOP chairman also said he feels it was "a good thing for both candidates to agree to the debate; sit down and have a civil, intellectual debate... take the issues to the people. It is just wonderful."

Kathryn Lewis, the Democratic Party's chairman in the county missed the debate, but Grace Carraway, the chairman of the county's Democratic Women was watching and listening.

Senator Plugs County's Role In Production Of Tobacco

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Some 112 persons attended a breakfast honoring dignitaries — including U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms — here for the opening of the Greenville tobacco market this morning.

Helms told the breakfast crowd he had to return to Washington today to vote on the agriculture appropriations bill. "... I've got to be vigilant today," he said.

Greenville and Pitt County have pride in a lot of things, Helms said; among them are tobacco and East Carolina University.

The area is "a remarkable place to live, work, produce," Helms said, adding that his two daughters are graduates of East Carolina University.

Turning to Block, Helms pointed out that "Pitt County grows more tobacco than any other county in this nation."

Helms then told the gathering that "if things go as planned, the Stabilization rebate plan will move tobacco out of the (Stabilization) pool," and help create a more stable tobacco program.

But the senator suggested, "We're bordering on the direst sort of peril in textiles and tobacco." The Peoples Republic of China (Communist China) "is after our markets."

Red China "produces three times as much tobacco" as the United States, Helms said, and suggested that officials "made a genuine and damaging error" in granting special trade concessions to that nation.

Helms said tobacco will fare much the same as textiles, if the situation is not corrected, because there is "slave labor in Red China."

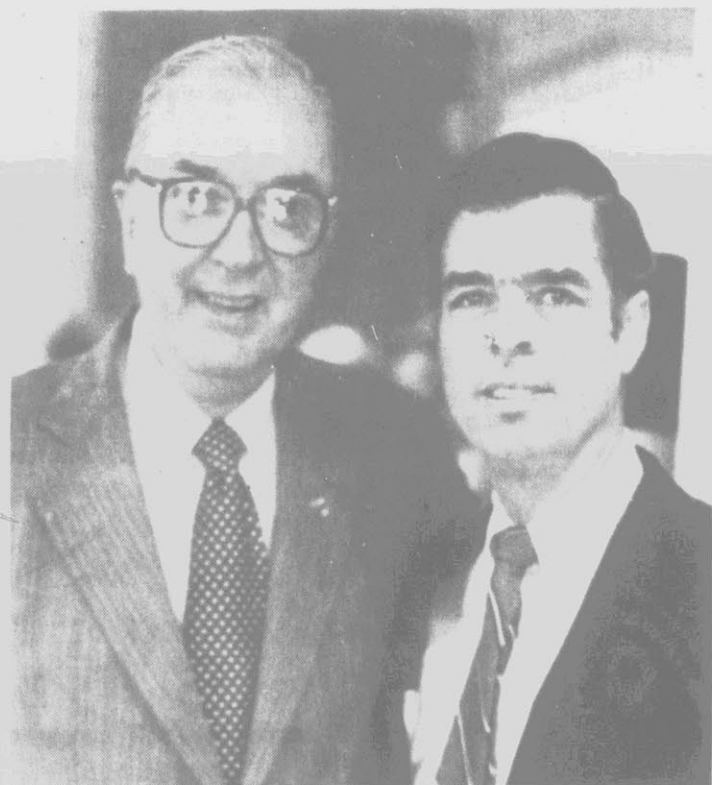

Introducing Block, Helms said the agriculture secretary is "an outstanding supporter of agriculture ...

a real farmer ... a fighter for farmers in America," who "has helped the tobacco program."

"I'm happy to be here to help open the tobacco market," Block said.

Block recalled his first trip to

Hijackers Issue Demands

By JOSEPH PANOSSIAN
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A commandeered Air France jet with 63 people aboard landed today in Tehran after the hijackers reportedly threatened to blow it up if the Iranian government refused to allow an emergency landing.

Five hours after the landing, an anonymous telephone caller claimed responsibility for the hijacking on behalf of group loyal to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and demanded the release of five people held in French jails. The call was received by the French news agency Agence France-Presse at its office in Tehran.

Iran's state-run media did not report a possible motive for the hijacking but said Iranian Foreign Ministry officials and other government representatives went to Mehrabad Airport after the landing to conduct negotiations. The official Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA) said the men were demanding that the plane be refueled, but there was no indication where they wished to fly to.

School Officials Wonder About Legislation Impact

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Local school officials say they are not sure what impact the measure approved by Congress last week that would give student groups wanting to conduct religious meetings equal access to school buildings will have on Pitt County and Greenville school policies.

The preliminary legislation, hailed by President Reagan and other conservatives as a way of putting prayer back in public schools, has yet to receive the President's approval. However, political analysts say they suspect Reagan will sign the bill despite amendments that were tagged to the measure. Political, philosophical or other forms of free speech were lumped in with the religious observance.

"Probably three things will occur once the bill receives final approval," Pitt County schools Superintendent Eddie West said. "We will have to study the legislation, then the board of education would need to develop a policy based on the legislation and then submit a draft for approval."

"But at this point, we really have no idea what changes would be entailed. We'll just have to do a study and go from there," Dr. West said.

Pitt County schools now allow student religious groups to use school grounds for any activity unrelated to religion. "For instance, we allow church organizations to use school grounds for basketball or softball, but not for prayer meetings," West explained.

Alice Keene, county community schools coordinator, said religious organizations wanting to use the

WATER, WATER

DENVER (AP) — America's 235 million people consume 176 million gallons of water each day, according to the American Water Works Association.

Medical experts say a daily replenishment of from two to three quarts of water is needed through food and drink to maintain a person's health. While a human can live for up to two months without solid food, to go without water for one week can be fatal.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Abby Adds Longer Baking Times For Pies

DEAR ABBY: I recently noticed an item in your column instructing readers who bake your famous pecan pie to add 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time if they have electric ovens!

Why? A 350-degree oven should be 350 degrees whether it's gas, electric, coal or wood.

I am a former home economist, and this made no sense to me, so I checked with several of my colleagues and they couldn't understand it either. Please explain.

CHERYL C. BAKER,
TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR MS. BAKER: (What a coincidence!) You are right: 350 degrees is 350 degrees regardless of how the temperature is achieved.

However, after receiving a number of complaints about "runny and undercooked" pies, I checked back with the complainers and learned that they all had electric ovens.

Of course, all ovens should be checked and regulated if the baking time seems incorrect, but knowing that most people tend to procrastinate, I suggested adding 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time for electric ovens. Witness the following testimonial:

DEAR ABBY: I tried your pecan pie again, and thanks to your recent addendum regarding baking in electric ovens, mine was a huge success. I wish to say thank you.

POLLY C. RANLETT,
SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and I was going with a 22-year-old guy, but we aren't going together divorced, and each married another wonderful person.

My stepdad has helped me out through some tough times—financially and emotionally. My stepmother is a caring, considerate person who makes our time together special and fun.

It's hard to be a stepparent. They have to work twice as hard to get the love and respect that natural parents get automatically.

For Mother's Day, I bought two presents. And I did the same for Father's Day. I feel lucky to have four parents who love me.

I hope this letter makes other stepchildren realize that some stepparents really care.

STEPKID

DEAR STEPKID: What a lovely letter. If other stepkids learn from it, it will be a step in the right direction.

We broke up because I wouldn't sleep with him. What is the best way to get my money back?

K. IN N.J.

DEAR K.: Forget the money, and forget him, too. You're lucky you lost only $10. Consider it a cheap lesson.

DEAR ABBY: With both Mother's Day and Father's Day behind us, I would like to make a pitch for a forgotten minority: stepparents. I have two wonderful parents who

Space Market

Another plateau in the true conquest of space just may be in the works for the next decade.

The concept of U.S. private industry moving into the field of commercial space launches has been formally brought up by a congressional study at a House subcommittee hearing on whether the government should boost commercial payload prices or continue providing such services at taxpayer-subsidized rates.

The alternative: private industry moving into the space transportation business.

Sub-orbital flights, orbital flights, the lunar voyages and finally introduction of the space shuttle marked plateaus of progress in what is called the last great frontier.

Entry of private industry into the space transportation business is basically a return to conventional wisdom gained by experience ... a built-in superiority in application of inventions, discoveries and techniques by the private sector.

It involves more than doing away with redundancy, uneconomical procedures and red tape. It does add new spectrums of imagination, ideas, goals, fields of research and development beyond reach of the earthbound.

Feasibility has been proven by the shuttle.

Introduction of business into the reaches of space would be simpler than the pioneering experiences of NASA. Proven systems would require no costly and tedious initial research and testing (the field has moved out of the "top secret" category).

There is a market for launch service. It has been demonstrated by our own shuttles and by the European Space Agency's Ariane booster. Japan, too, is moving into the field. Other nations are said to be developing means to handle space launches. It is a competitive field. Communications and research interests would be early customers.

Historically, private initiative has been the key factor that gave the United States an "edge" in productivity and popular application. It might be the time to seriously consider a business entry into a brand-new industrial role.

Preoccupation

Fidel Castro, just as many presidents might do, gave a speech last week as his country celebrated the 31st anniversary of the beginning of his revolution.

It was a long address ... three hours worth ... in which he was very high over the military capabilities of his government, a longing for peace, his country's economic progress while the rest of Latin America was suffering, the close and supportive ties with the Soviet Union and its bloc.

His boast about Cuban economic progress while other Latin American countries were hurting left us wondering.

For years, U.S. observers have estimated Russia has been putting $4 billion every year into the Cuban economy. That runs to about $400 for each man, woman and child. Every year. It represents no small bonanza for a regime struggling to keep its head above some very deep economic waters.

That also helps explain a burning desire to erase fears of unfriendly neighbors. It is a very expensive preoccupation. We know all about it.

Businessmen's Group Looks At Candidates

RALEIGH — Businessmen often take a highly inefficient approach to supporting political candidates, the manager of a new political research group says. "They've had a shotgun approach. They've spread a little bit (of money and help) around to everybody and hoped that would get them access, maybe," says Mike Mann, executive secretary of the recently formed N.C. Foundation for Research and Economic Education (N.C. FREE).

Mann's organization thinks businessmen should take a more focused approach to supporting political candidates. Before a businessman contributes to a candidate, he should know how the candidate stands on business issues and how much chance the candidate stands with the voters. N.C. FREE says it will help educate businessmen on both points.

N.C. FREE began operating in January. Its goal is to "preserve the free enterprise system through a non-profit organization whose members represent business and industry," says its charter. Mann says the group plans to do so by "researching and distributing information to members on a non-partisan basis on the voting records of candidates for state and local offices."

Actually, N.C. FREE will concentrate on only the Legislature for now. It will research the voting records of members up for election this fall and distribute that information to its 30 members. (Members consist of businesses and business associations.)

Mann says there'll be no "legislative report cards" like those used by many groups. He doesn't think they're fair. Rather, objective reports on legislators' votes on particular issues will be combined with subjective observations of the legislator's performance.

At the same time, N.C. FREE has compiled an in-depth profile of those legislative districts where pro-business candidates are most likely to run well. Mann says the profiles were developed after a statewide random sampling poll on citizen attitudes was combined with demographic data from each district.

"We used a clustering method. We surveyed on about 25 different criteria and with that it is possible to identify every household in the state and tell you with a fairly low margin of error which of several categories it falls into so far as being favorable to, or opposed to, business interests," Mann said.

The first part of the research will tell businessmen which candidates they should want to support — that is, which candidates share their concerns. The second part of the research — the research on the district's population — should tell businessmen if they've got a chance of electing a pro-business candidate there.

"This guy might look great," Mann says of a hypothetical pro-business candidate. "He'll have all the credentials ... but the attitudes of the people in that district are just not pro-business enough that it looks like a likely place for the man to win." In other words, N.C. FREE hopes it will be able to find those districts where businessmen would be wasting their time and money supporting a pro-business candidate. Mann reports that, on the other hand, N.C. FREE has found some districts where the support level for business is higher than conventional political wisdom would have foretold.

The group is limited to research and reporting and cannot lobby the legislature. Nor can it donate money to, or make endorsements of, political candidates. N.C. FREE's political clout, if it has any, will come from its ability to help its individual members lobby legislators.

Nuclear Testing Goes On

LOS ANGELES — Last week, before the doves helped open Olympic festivities at this city's Memorial Coliseum, the United States exploded a nuclear "device" in the desert near Las Vegas.

It was the eighth "announced" underground test of this year. Nothing could have been a more well-timed reminder of the world's biggest problem as the 23rd Games began.

Nuclear testing is an essential step in the process that's given Washington and Moscow enough warheads to turn the earth into a charcoal briquet. Since 1963, when the United States and the U.S.S.R. agreed to conduct all nuclear tests underground, both sides have more than doubled their previous volume of controlled nuclear explosions.

Unfortunately, while American corporations (and, to an extent, taxpayers) have paid to promote peace at the Olympiad, the federal government continues to increase its support for nuclear weapons research and development. Ronald Reagan has requested a 69 percent increase in funding next year for the Energy Department's nuclear weapons division.

Reagan's nuclear-test boosterism stands to become a political issue in the campaign. Walter Mondale has already said he wants a comprehensive test-ban treaty.

Last month, an assortment of secular and church-sponsored peace groups met in Washington to prepare a fall campaign for a treaty. The Republican-controlled Senate even voted, by a 77-to-22 majority, to demand that the Americans and Soviets resume test-ban talks.

These groups must know something President Reagan doesn't.

American Olympic team partisans shouldn't be surprised if some top U.S. athletes fail tests for forbidden chemicals during the Games. According to a well-placed track-and-field official, several women competitors failed tests during the Olympic trials last month. However, the source said, these contenders were not disqualified, on grounds there may have been flaws in the test. "Essentially, five women were told to clean up their act," he said.

Twenty years ago this summer, the pains of blacks and frustrations of the civil rights movement came to head in the nation's cities. Violence first erupted in New York's Harlem in 1964. Between that year and 1967, there were riots in 58 cities. The toll was 141 dead and 4,552 injured.

Since then, steps by government at all levels have helped take the sting out of poverty. But the seeds of potential disturbances exist in some unsolved problems. Black teen-age unemployment remains more than five times the national average; fewer than 10 of every 100 teen-age blacks have full-time jobs. The unemployment rate among last year's black high school graduates, 37.5 percent, is even higher than that among white high school dropouts.

Federal statistics refute any possible suggestion that President Reagan's term in office hasn't helped wealthy Americans. According to the Census Bureau, the average household with an income of $75,000 or more paid $2,690 less in income taxes in 1981 than in 1980 due to Reagan-led tax cuts.

All other households paid the same in 1980 and 1981.

Political strategists on both sides expect Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's candidacy to excite a large share of the nation's roughly 40 million unregistered voters. But Reagan-Bush '84 spokesman John Buckley says the Republican campaign has no plans as yet to revamp its $10 million voter registration program in light of Ferraro. "Ours is a generalist program," Buckley said. The GOP is targeting likely Reagan voters through computerized phone banks.

M. Peter McPherson is the Reagan administration's chief for non-military U.S. aid to the developing world, responsible for filling a lot of hungry stomachs, and therefore in a position to know world needs. In South Africa the other day, he said with all authority that starvation-plagued Africa was "beginning to turn the corner" in its food crisis.

But many other experts wonder whether that's true. The World Bank's International Development Agency, which is supposed to give underdeveloped nations the means to survive on their own, has suffered a funding cut of 40 percent. As the London Sunday Times said last week, "A thousand-year disaster is in the making."

Reagan Shifts To Center Stage For Fall Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — While President Reagan is trying to portray the Democratic Party as the captive of dangerous leftists, he himself is protecting a far more liberal image — at least on foreign policy issues — as the election approaches.

In fact, Reagan's policies bear substantial resemblance to those pursued by Jimmy Carter during his last year in office when Carter was staking out a centrist position, much as Reagan is doing now.

The experience of both Reagan and Carter suggests that presidents, particularly those seeking re-election, are least vulnerable politically if they occupy the safe center.

To date, the campaign has had a topsy-turvy quality. An example is the latest statement by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who is viewed by many on the right as the mastermind of the detente policies in the 1970s that, they believe, played into the hands of the Soviet Union.

Nowadays, Kissinger finds the Reagan administration's approach to arms control negotiations with the Soviets to be soft almost to the point of obsequiousness.

"The administration has made clear, almost apologetically, its eagerness to negotiate. Every overture has been rebuffed; as the administration has reversed its earlier attitude, the Soviet Union has raised the ante," Kissinger said recently.

"Importuning the Soviets to resume negotiations they should never have left will not break the impasse; it is likely to deepen the stalemate."

There is no small irony in Kissinger's comments. It was at the Republican convention in 1976 when Reaganite partisans showered him with boos and jeers for not being tougher on the Soviets, an experience he later described as one of the most shattering of his life.

Reagan's move toward the center actually began well before 1984. Much to the irritation of his more conservative followers, Reagan dropped his opposition to the Panama Canal treaties early on and his support for a restoration of official relations with Taiwan. On those issues, he essentially has embraced the Carter policies.

Reagan now believes that poor countries require outside help, a far cry from his 1981 plea for them to rely on "the magic of the marketplace" to achieve prosperity.

This year, Reagan's scramble to the center began early with a speech on Soviet policy in mid-January that was noticeably free of the anti-Soviet diatribes that had been a hallmark of his pre-1984 statements.

"We must and will engage the Soviets in a dialogue as serious and constructive as possible," he said.

On El Salvador, Reagan annoyed a key Senate backer, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, by appearing to tilt toward Christian Democratic candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte in the presidential elections there. Helms' choice was rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson. With Duarte's victory, El Salvador largely has been defused as a campaign issue.

Eager to deprive the Democrats of another issue, Reagan ordered Secretary of State George P. Shultz to Managua, Nicaragua, in early June to begin a dialogue that the administration had once studiously avoided.

Meanwhile, Democratic nominee Walter Mondale is telling voters it's important to remember the first three years of the Reagan presidency and not to judge the incumbent solely on the fourth.

"I will work for peace and strength from my first day in office, not from my first day of campaigning for re-election," Mondale said in his acceptance speech two weeks ago.

Despite Reagan's embrace of moderation, substantial differences between him and Mondale remain. Reagan wants to continue U.S. support for anti-government rebels in Nicaragua while Mondale has pledged "to stop the illegal war in Nicaragua" within the first 100 days of his administration. Reagan also disagrees with Mondale's call for a mutually verifiable nuclear freeze.

Yet the differences on foreign policy do not appear to be so great as to justify Reagan's statement last week that the Democrats are "going so far left that they've left America."

Strength For Today

When Rip Van Winkle went up the mountain, unaware of the long slumber he was about to enter into, he passed the village inn before which there hung a picture of King George II.

When he came back 20 years later, there was a picture of another George on the sign post, now a George who was first in the hearts of his countrymen. Under the leadership of George Washington, the colonies had won their independence. Someone has said that the remarkable thing about Rip Van Winkle was not that he slept for 20 years, but that he slept through a revolution. World-shaking events were taking place about him, but poor old Rip was unconscious of them all.

Are we alert to the significance of the momentous events going on around us? Or are we, like Rip Van Winkle, sleeping through a revolution?

Homemaker's Haven

A seminar on Creative Self-Esteem will be held at the Ramada Inn in Ahoskie on Aug. 14. The seminar is designed for professionals and volunteers who work with youth or adults; for parents of children of any age, for individuals who would like to upgrade their own feelings of self-worth.

The seminar revolves around the theory that we never outgrow our own need to feel good about ourselves; that many behavioral problems and problems in interpersonal relations stem from a lack of self-esteem or a poor self-image; that one of the best things parents, teachers, 4-H leaders, Sunday School teachers, etc., can do for those in their care is to help them become aware of their self-worth.

The highlight of the program will be the keynote speech by Dr. Jack Beasley, chairman of the home economics department at Appalachian State University. Dr. Beasley will speak on the topic "Communicate Yourself - You're Great, Show Me!" Dr. Beasley will speak during a buffet luncheon provided by the Ramada Inn. Professionals who are unable to attend the entire seminar may consider attending just the luncheon. Registration for the day begins at 9:30 a.m., the program at 10 a.m. Lunch will be from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m.; the afternoon session from 1:30 to 3 p.m.

Dr. Frances Wagner, a N.C. Agricultural Extension specialist in human development, will discuss ways that self-esteem can be developed from infancy to the senior years. Brenda Bedwell, personnel manager, Penn Elastic Co., Plymouth, will speak on "Building Self-Image in the Business World." Loretta Holloman, cosmetology instructor at Roanoke-Chowan Technical College and owner of the Ahoskie Beauty Shop, will demonstrate how appropriate make-up and hair styles will improve one's appearance - one of the surest ways to increase self-esteem. Two area extension home economists, Carolyn Davis of Pasquotank County and Reba Green of Gates County, will discuss "Color, Fashion and the Becoming You," another help for increasing self-esteem.

Persons interested should contact Evelyn L. Spangler, home economics extension agent, at 752-2934, extension 365, for a registration form. Forms must be returned by Aug. 3.

Before the summer gets any further along, take a look at your wicker furniture. If you find it can use sprucing up, you may want to wash it, and if your wicker needs it, you might even consider putting on a new coat of paint. However, knowing what to use and how to proceed makes any job easier, even cleaning furniture.

To take care of wicker, bamboo, reed or rattan furniture, you should begin by dusting it with a clean cloth, brush or vacuum cleaner. After dusting, take the furniture outside and go over it with a fine spray from the garden hose. If further cleaning is needed, apply a mild soap or detergent solution with a fairly dry cloth, making sure you do not soak the furniture.

If you find you need a stronger cleaning solution than soap and water, add household ammonia to the detergent water. After washing, however, be sure to rinse the furniture with clear water and allow it to dry thoroughly and quickly. Drying your wicker upside down will help it retain its original shape.

If you decide to paint your wicker, use spray paint. Complete and even coverage just isn't possible with a brush. A coat of shellac once a year will enhance the beauty of raw wicker.

Whether you have wicker furniture resting on the porch or sitting on the patio, you'll want to keep it clean and fresh looking.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Want to take part in a new trend we've watched our neighbors establish this summer? Serve a fast-food main course and end with an old-fashioned dessert.

For example, while Dad and the kids assemble a salad and grill franks or burgers on an outdoor grill, Mom whips up an old-time Peach Cobbler from scratch. If the ingredients needed for the Cobbler are on hand and ready for use, the going is easy.

PEACH COBBLER

- 1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 large egg
- 1/4 cup milk
- 2 1/2 pounds peaches
- 4 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- Topping: vanilla ice cream

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, 2 tablespoons of the sugar, the baking powder and salt. With a pastry blender cut in the butter until it is in fine particles. Beat together the egg and milk until blended; add to flour mixture; stir only until dry ingredients are moistened and a dough forms.

Peel, pit and slice peaches - there should be 5 cups. In a medium saucepan stir together the remaining sugar, the cornstarch and cinnamon; add the peaches. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until peaches are tender and syrup is clear, thickened and boiling - 5 to 7 minutes. Pour into a shallow 2-quart baking dish. Drop dough by heaping tablespoonfuls, in 6 portions, over the hot peach mixture. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until topping is golden - 20 minutes. Serve warm with vanilla ice cream. Makes 6 large servings - the biscuit topping is home-style rather than rich.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Lottery Winner Dies In Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — Stuart Kelly, the winner in January of an $11.1 million jackpot, has died, a funeral home spokesman said Tuesday. At the time he won, Kelly's was the biggest jackpot ever in North America.

The 57-year-old truck driver said when he cashed in his winning ticket that he would give up his job but would not let the money change the life he and his wife, Lillian, led in Brantford, a small city in southern Ontario.

"We're happy and the money can't buy happiness," he said. "We've got that now and we hope we'll be able to keep it."

Brantford radio station CKPC reported Tuesday that there had been unconfirmed rumors for weeks that Kelly was being treated for cancer. The station said it was told by an unidentified family member that Kelly died on Sunday.

At the Hill and Robinson funeral home, Peter Barabash said there would be a private family service for Kelly. He said Mrs. Kelly had requested that no further information be disclosed.

George Lawrence, the lottery winners' attorney, said, "We're making no comment on any matters concerning the Kellys."

The Kellys' prize in the Lotto 6-49 draw was $13.9 million Canadian, then worth about $11.1 million U.S. It was the largest prize ever won in a North American lottery, but has since been surpassed by prizes in two U.S. state lotteries.

The Kellys created suspense by waiting 10 days to pick up their prize, as Canadians speculated about who the winner might be. Under the system used in the Lotto 6-49 drawings, the prize was awarded in a lump sum. Canadian lottery winnings are not taxed.

Runaways Get Free Rides

DALLAS (AP) — Robert and Eleanor Williams had no idea how they were going to get their runaway daughter Cynthia home from Tuscaloosa, Ala., to Salem, Mass., because they were unemployed and couldn't afford the $100 bus ticket.

Then Cynthia became the first runaway sent home for free in a cooperative project between a bus company and a police association that started a month ago and is now aiding an average of nearly 10 children a day.

Miss Williams, who had left home June 1, had been taken into custody by Tuscaloosa authorities who alerted her parents. She agreed to return home when the bus ride was offered and left on her 18th birthday, June 9, arriving in Boston the next day.

"She was heading for California with another girl and anything could have happened," Mrs. Williams said in a telephone interview. "I didn't have the money at all ... I'm not working and welfare wouldn't have done it."

"Operation Home Free" was established last month by the Dallas-based Trailways Bus System and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Trailways spokeswoman Minna Adams said the bus company had tried to start a similar program two years ago, but had no way to screen potential riders to ensure they actually were runaways.

The program crystalized when representatives of the police chiefs' association approached Trailways this year, Ms. Adams said.

When a youth 18 or younger goes to a police station and asks for a ride home, an officer calls the juvenile's hometown police department to verify that he has been reported as a runaway. The youth then is turned over to Trailways.

In June, during the first 23 days of "Operation Home Free," Trailways transported 207 children, including one cross-country from Los Angeles to New York, and two from Florida to Boston, where they were picked up by their Canadian parents.

"We are delighted with the figures ... we felt that if we got just a few kids to return home, we were doing something," said police association spokesman Robert Angrisani. "But the figures that we are getting on the returns has been just so encouraging."

The police association also approached the nation's other major bus company, Greyhound Bus Lines, but Trailways was the first to offer to take over the program, Angrisani said. Only one of the companies is needed for the program, he said, although several independent companies are cooperating by taking runaways to towns Trailways doesn't serve.

Greyhound has no plans for a similar program, spokesman Herb Doherty said Tuesday from company headquarters in Phoenix. He said Greyhound keeps brochures in its waiting rooms with tips for runaways seeking help in returning home.

Trailways initially estimated that the runaways' trips would cost the company an average of $21 to $22 each, but the lost revenue actually has averaged about $50 to $60 a trip, Ms. Adams said.

"The children are going further distances than we estimated," Ms. Adams said. "But our philosophy is that we don't care what it costs — we'll just keep doing it."

Police began pushing for the program after the Juvenile Justice Act of 1974 encouraged 25 states to strike down laws that made running away a crime and stripped police of authority to hold runaways in protective custody, Angrisani said.

Police "needed something to replace what they lost through the Juvenile Justice Act and something that would address the fact that many of these youngsters would run out of funds and turn to crime," Angrisani said.

"Literally thousands of these young people would return home if they had the means to do so," he said.

Reprimanded Hansen Suggests Ferraro Probe

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Reprimanded by the House for filing false financial disclosure forms, a bitter Rep. George V. Hansen says colleagues should consider omissions on statements filed by other lawmakers — including Geraldine Ferraro.

And House Republican Whip Trent Lott, who voted for the reprimand, agrees that the financial statements of the Democratic vice president candidate should undergo the same scrutiny as Hansen's disclosure reports.

Hansen, R-Idaho, reprimanded by the House on Tuesday by a vote of 354-52, complained that he was unfairly singled out for omitting financial information including transactions by his wife.

In the five statements she has filed since coming to Washington in 1979, Ms. Ferraro, D-N.Y., has said she does not have to disclose anything about the finances of her husband, John Zaccaro. She contended she satisfies the law's criteria for gaining exemption from such disclosure.

But Ms. Ferraro said last week that she would include her husband's financial holdings in a disclosure form required by the Federal Election Commission.

Lott told reporters that Ms. Ferraro's failure to report her husband's income is "a matter that should be looked into. She should have a chance to respond. Depending on her response, it may be necessary to have an investigation. She better respond very quickly."

Hansen, asked after the vote if he planned to file complaints with the ethics committee against Ms. Ferraro or any other House members, said, "at this stage, we're going to sleep on it, think it over and see where we're going."

The lawmaker fought the reprimand in an emotional, 35-minute speech, saying congressmen lived in a "paperwork jungle" that could leave them all "convicted felons."

Hansen said he has done "a little research" that found 253 of his colleagues had "aberrations" on their financial statements, enough to "have a quorum before the grand jury."

The reprimand was the lightest form of punishment the House could have given Hansen, whose disclosure omissions already convinced a federal jury to convict him and a judge to impose a five-to-15 month prison term and $40,000 fine. Hansen remains free pending his appeal.

The punishment consisted of the House adopting the report of its ethics committee, which found that Hansen violated the chamber's disclosure rules and should be reprimanded. Six members voted "present."

Hansen contended he believed he was acting properly because he followed the advice of lawyers, who told him his wife's financial dealings could be omitted because the couple had a property separation agreement.

Riders Hurt In Train Wreck

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
BIRTLEY, England (AP) — An express train jumped the tracks near this northeast England town today, overturning six of eight coaches and injuring more than 20 people, officials said. It was Britain's second rail accident in three days.

Thirty firefighters cut through the wreckage to free dozens of the train's 200 passengers from two coaches which were hurled off the tracks. Four coaches behind slumped on their sides, just off the tracks.

The express, on a 180-mile journey from the north England city of Leeds to Edinburgh, Scotland, went off the tracks after being diverted to a slow-speed line with a 40 mph limit, a spokesman for British Rail said. The spokesman spoke on condition of anonymity.

High-speed, express trains are capable of speeds up to 100 mph, but it was unclear how fast the train had been going. British Rail officials could give no reason for the wreck.

One elderly man who escaped the crash without injury said, "The train just shuddered then the carriage seemed to slip down a bank."

The man, who asked not to be identified, added: "People started flying about while others were trapped in their seats."

The train, which crashed 90 minutes after leaving Leeds at 7:30 a.m., was diverted because another express broke down on the high-speed line, the state-owned railroad said.

Ambulances ferried 20 injured passengers to Queen Elizabeth Hospital in the nearby town of Gateshead. Hospital officials said none was seriously injured, and most had cuts and bruises. Other passengers were taken to the canteen of a nearby chemical plant.

Last Monday, 13 people were killed and 44 seriously injured when an Edinburgh to Glasgow express commuter train sped off the rails after apparently hitting a wandering cow.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 23-25.

HOUSE

PUBLIC — By a vote of 176 for and 217 against, the House defeated an amendment to limit budget hikes for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. After rejecting this attempt to hold spending increases to 15 percent annually during fiscal 1987-89, the House approved hikes averaging 80 percent during the period.

The upshot was to reverse the Reagan Administration's deep cuts in federal support of public television and radio. More generous private contributions had been accepted to take up the slack, but they fell far short of expectations and several programs have been scrapped or slated to die.

As later sent to the Senate, the bill (HR 5541) raises federal payments to $238 million in 1987, $253 million in 1988 and $270 million in 1989.

Amendment sponsor Michael Oxley, R-Ohio, said "there is no reason to believe that public broadcasters need such massive increases ..."

Opponent John Bryant, D-Tex., noted that the higher federal payments will provide "only 20 percent" of public broadcasting's revenue.

Members voting no favored annual spending hikes of about 80 percent over three years for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Tim Valentine, D-2, and James Broyhill, R-10.

Representatives from North Carolina voting no were Walter Jones, D-1; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting were Ike Andrews, D-4; Charles Britt, D-6, and James Martin, R-9.

ACCESS — The House voted, 337 for and 77 against, to permit student groups to conduct voluntary religious meetings in public high school facilities before or after the regular school day. This was a victory for advocates of returning some degree of religious practice to public schools.

The "equal access" provision approved by this vote denies federal funding to any school that fails to give religious groups the same extra-curricular access to its facilities that it gives to other student groups. It was attached to an education bill (HR 1310) that was sent to conference with the Senate. Because there is no disagreement over the equal access language, the provision is expected to become law.

Supporter Marge Roukema, R-N.J., said the measure permits free speech and assembly to religious groups "and is therefore both legally acceptable and necessary in a free society under our Constitution."

Opponent Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said the provision "reverses a 200-year tradition in this country that many of our forefathers died for ... the separation of church and state and no state establishment of a religion."

Members voting yes favored the equal access provision.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill and Clarke.

COLUMBUS — By a vote of 279 for and 130 against, the House gave final approval of a bill (HR 1492) establishing a federal commission to plan a national celebration in 1992 of the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus's discovery of the New World. Senate approval and President Reagan's signature were to follow.

Import Curbs Are Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Administration Tuesday announced two moves to help stop millions of dollars of illegally imported textiles and apparel into the United States.

One action would alter the way foreign textiles and apparel are restricted by U.S. import quotas, preventing large producers such as China and Hong Kong from evading import restrictions. Another move would nearly double the number of U.S. Customs Service officials responsible for enforcing textile import quotas.

Industry officials say imports are responsible for the loss of 240,000 U.S. textile and apparel jobs since 1980.

Generally, the proposed rules attempt to prevent evasion of import quotas by assigning quotas to goods produced by the originating country rather than a country where further work is done, according to Customs Service spokesman James Mahan in Washington.

Currently, the manufacture of garments is often spread over several nations, with one country making the fabric, another cutting it, and a third nation assembling it. Under current U.S. law, the quota is assigned to the final country in which "substantial transformation" occurs.

About $2 million is budgeted initially for the Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Commission, whose staff members are to be paid up to $66,400 annually and be eligible for federal retirement payments of up to $9,600 annually. Most employees are to be appointed through political channels.

Supporter Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., said the commission budget "is not ... an excessive amount" given the need to appropriately celebrate Columbus's historic act.

Opponent William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., noted that the commission that planned and built the Vietnam Veterans Memorial did so "with not a dime of taxpayers' money."

Members voting yes wanted to create the Christopher Columbus commission with an initial budget of $2 million.

North Carolina members voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Neal, Britt, Rose, Hefner, James Martin, Broyhill and Clarke.

SENATE

BURFORD — The Senate adopted, 74 for and 19 against, a resolution urging President Reagan to cancel his selection of Anne M. Burford as chairwoman of the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere.

Burford last year resigned under fire as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Because her appointment to head the environmental advisory committee for three years is not subject to Senate confirmation, the resolution was non-binding.

Supporter George Mitchell, D-

Maine, called the appointment "a step backward not only for the cause of environmental protection but also for (President) Reagan's own credibility on this issue."

Opponent John East, R-N.C., said: "Once again, the political atmosphere (surrounding Burford) has the smell of blood and the sharks come running ... They cut her down and they chew her up and they eat her."

Senators voting yes wanted to condemn Burford's return to an environmental leadership post.

North Carolina senators John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted no.

Inspectors Find Big Problems At 17 Mental Health Units

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inspection of 17 federally-supported institutions for the mentally retarded found all were substandard, and nine had major health and safety deficiencies, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler said Tuesday.

"In all cases where substandard conditions were noted during the recent federal inspections, state Medicaid directors have been given 30 days to give us a firm, detailed plan for correcting those deficiencies within 180 days," Mrs. Heckler told the Senate subcommittee on the handicapped.

"Failure to deliver an acceptable plan or inadequate implementation of that plan will result in termination of the facilities from the Medicaid program," she added.

Medicaid is the federal-state health care program for the poor and needy. In the case of residents of intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded — the type of institution inspected — the federal government contributes about $16,000 per patient per year through Medicaid, with the state spending an equal amount in most instances, she said.

Mrs. Heckler said problems found by federal inspectors included:

—Most institutions did not meet requirements to provide active treatment, such as individual care plans and needed therapies. "Thus, from a services perspective, many of these clients are receiving essentially custodial, non-aggressive care, the very type of care Congress sought to end," she said.

—Some were not meeting sanitation and physical environment standards, with heating, ventilation, cleanliness and general maintenance deficiencies common.

—"In some places we found very high usage of major tranquilizers, usually in the absence of effective behavior management programs designed to reduce dependency on these chemical restraints," Mrs. Heckler said.

—Many facilities had filthy kitchens, poor menu planning, inadequate training of clients to feed themselves and lengthy delays in serving client meals.

—Some facilities had fire protection deficiencies such as improper fire walls and doors. "In one case, we found large numbers of clients who were not capable of self-preservation living in residences that could not protect the clients in the event of fire," Mrs. Heckler said. "We decided this condition constituted an immediate threat to the clients' safety, and we terminated the facility's Medicaid agreement."

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., chairman of the subcommittee, also released results of an inspection by his panel of seven intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded. He said the subcommittee found "abuse and neglect, lack of programming, and inappropriate placement to be major problems across the country."

The subcommittee report said "every institution had fired staff in the past year for confirmed client abuse. Staff at one institution said client abuse occurs in one form or another on any given day at the institution."

The report said that in two institutions, unexplained pregnancies of female clients were discovered when the clients were approximately eight months pregnant. "One of the clients was non-ambulatory and confined to a stretcher-like apparatus," it said.

Weicker noted that HHS sent a telegram July 27 to an intermediate care facility in Mystic, Conn., threatening a funds cutoff in 10 days unless conditions there are corrected. He said there had been 12 reported cases of rape and sexual abuse at the institution, where 27 residents are housed.

Mrs. Heckler and Carolyn Davis, head of the Health Care Financing Administration in HHS, said in answer to questions that they planned to double inspections of such facilities but that the administration had not requested any increase in personnel for this purpose. There now are about 100 people in HHS regional offices to cover 2,200 institutions, they said.

Tax Bills Mailed

WINTERVILLE — The 1984 tax bills for the Town of Winterville are being mailed today to people who own property in the town. Elwood Nobles, town clerk, said this morning.

Nobles said 1,464 bills will be mailed, representing a total property value of some $35.70 million.

Based on the town's tax rate of 40 cents per $100 valuation, the bills are expected to raise some $142,818 to support town operations.

Nobles said the bills this year include a $1.50 charge per vehicle. He said the new item, listed under the heading "Vehicles," means "no more town license tags" for Winterville residents.

"Starting Jan. 1, 1985, people won't have to buy a town tag," for their cars and trucks Nobles said, explaining that the cost of the local plates will be included on the town's tax bills.

Nobles said that the $1.50 charge is for six months, because the town "changed from a calendar year to a fiscal year" for the charge, and future bills will include a $3 charge for each vehicle listed.

Promise Kept

Mrs. Georgia Foreman has kept her promise. Over 50 years ago she told Mrs. Mae Schultz Bowling's husband and mother when both were near death. "I'll stay with her just as long as the Lord lets me."

Mrs. Bowling, 96, died yesterday at her home the two shared. Mrs. Foreman, who maintains her own home on Colonial Avenue, Greenville, but rents it out, was with Mrs. Bowling when she died, as she had been constantly for many years. "She's holding up real well," her foster daughter, Mrs. Clara Cherry said. "I know she's grieving, but she's real strong."

Mrs. Foreman will have her 100th birthday Sept. 2.

Three Collisions

An estimated $5,200 damage resulted from three collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 6:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road, involving cars driven by Edward Glenn Midgett of Washington, and Janie Everette Whitaker of Route 4, Washington.

Police, who charged Midgett with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,200 to the Midgett car and $2,200 to the Whitaker auto.

Investigators said a car driven by Willie Woodrow Daniels of 206 Stutz St., struck a sign at the intersection of Tenth and Evans Streets about 8:30 p.m., causing an estimated $1,600 damage to the car he was driving.

Cars driven by Theodore Roosevelt Bradshaw of Route 4, Greenville, and Timothy Earl Stahl of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 6:50 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 45 feet south of the Fifth Street intersection.

Officers, who estimated damage at $500 to the Bradshaw car and $700 to the Stahl vehicle, charged Stahl with following too close.

Handling Phones

Gary Danford and the Greenville Jaycees will man the satellite telephone bank during the seventh annual Cystic Fibrosis telethon. The satellite station will be for the convenience of area citizens who would like to support the telethon effort without having to make a long distance call. Funds from the event are used for research and education to help those who suffer with cystic fibrosis.

Possession Charged

Greenville police charged Darrel Mitchel, 25, of Route 2, Roland, with possession of marijuana and carrying a concealed weapon early today.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz said after a car driven by Mitchell was stopped about 1 a.m. on Landmark Street, officers discovered a small quantity of marijuana and a .25 caliber pistol in the vehicle.

Mitchell, Heinz said, was also charged with driving while impaired.

Charges Brought

Police charged two teenagers with tampering with a vehicle in connection with a 12:15 a.m. incident Tuesday.

Sgt. C.J. Hardy said Derrick Latroy White, 19, of C11 Glendale

Court and Louis Richardson, 16, of 710A Vanderbilt St., were arrested in connection with an incident in a parking adjacent to Art and Camera Shop on Cotanche Street.

Nominated

Sweetener Review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The artificial sweetener cyclamate, banned in the United States 15 years ago because of feared cancer risks, could go back on the market if a new review helps clear its name, industry spokesmen say.

New studies of the banned sweetener indicate it probably doesn't cause cancer, but the data will be reassessed by a National Academy of Sciences committee to make sure.

Student Test Scores Continue To Rise

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — More North Carolina students are scoring in the highest performance categories on achievement tests than three years ago, a state Department of Public Instruction report released today shows.

The report, prepared by the department's Division of Research, concludes that North Carolina has a greater proportion of students at or above the 96th percentile than the national norm.

While the national group has 4 percent at or above the 96th percentile, North Carolina has 13 percent of its first-graders, 14 percent of its second-graders, 11 percent of third-graders, 9 percent of sixth-graders and 8 percent of ninth-graders above the 96th percentile.

A percentile rank shows the percentage of students in the national population who fall below the average student at a particular grade level in North Carolina.

Although the report was released today to the state Board of Education, Gov. Jim Hunt was touting the results Tuesday at a news North Carolina Association of Educators news conference.

Hunt said the results are proof that "North Carolina is developing one of the very best school systems in the country."

He noted that the reading program in early grades is just beginning to show up with scores by seventh-, eighth- and ninth-graders.

Students in the first, second, third, sixth and ninth grades take the achievement tests each April. The tests administered this year covered reading, math, language and spelling.

The tests are designed to measure performance and compare it with various groups of students as well as to provide teachers with an outline of students' strengths and weaknesses.

The report also concludes that:

— North Carolina students this year scored higher than the typical student in the nation in all subject areas in all grades tested. The highest scores were in language and math, the report said.

— Third-, sixth- and ninth-graders in North Carolina maintained or improved performance in all areas between 1983 and 1984.

— Sixth- and ninth-graders reported they are assigned more homework now than last year. In the sixth-grade for example, almost 50 percent of the students reported in 1983 that they were assigned less than three hours of homework.

Farmers Want More Grace Data

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina tobacco growers are organizing to recover losses from leaf damaged by tainted fertilizer manufactured by the W.R. Grace Co.

At its first meeting Tuesday, the Contaminated Tobacco Growers Action Committee agreed to ask the company for the names of other Tar Heel farmers with injured crops and the names of dealers who sold the fertilizer.

On June 13 W.R. Grace voluntarily took three fertilizers off the shelves after 836 tobacco farmers reported curling leaves and premature yellowing of their tobacco.

Between 5,000 and 10,000 acres were affected in 20 North Carolina counties, W.R. Grace estimated, with Moore County being the hardest hit. The contaminated fertilizer damaged 1,300 acres of tobacco there.

Tom Meacham, an assistant state attorney general, said his office could not get involved unless a large number of farmers were not compensated fairly.

"Right now we're monitoring ... and we'll just have to see how the settlement process goes," he said.

The growers committee eventually will include one or two farmers from each affected county, said Ernest Harris of Moore County, who was elected president of the group Tuesday. About 10 farmers attended the meeting, and Harris said some counties still have not selected a representative.

Four Moore County farmers met Monday with Grace officials and representatives of Continental National American, the insurance company handling the claims.

Harris said the company told farmers the claims would be settled on an individual basis, using $1.85 per pound as the base for compensation. He said deductions would be made for labor, warehouse and similar costs that were not incurred.

He said the company officials said that only leaves with curled edges, called cobra heads, would be considered as damaged. He said he was told there would be no compensation for yellowed leaves or other plant problems.

But Harris and the other farmers said they're seeing a lot of damage that would not be covered, such as leaves at the top of the stalk that have not developed. They said company officials told them such damage was not related to the fertilizer.

George Spain, director of the Plant Industry Division of the state Department of Agriculture, said none of the growers could be sure the damaged leaf would sell until they take it to market.

"If they (the company) would explain things maybe that would relieve a lot of anxiety," Harris said.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram promised to help the farmers if the insurance company does not properly handle claims. He criticized Grace and the insurance company for failing to communicate better with farmers about procedures for making claims.

Car Dealers Face Rollback Charges

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — In a complicated auto mileage "rollback scheme," 12 Rhode Island used-car dealers face a total of 48 counts charging them with turning back odometers and transferring forged car titles to North Carolina.

The car dealers were indicted Monday by federal grand jury.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth McAllister said the 12 face multiple felony violations which grew out of the May 29 indictment of a High Point used car dealer, Darrell L. Hicks allegedly sought to defraud used car buyers in North Carolina and several New England states by altering odometer readings and submitting forged documents to the N.C. Department of Motor Vehicles, officials charge.

The indictments against the Rhode Island dealers say more than 5.74 million miles were rolled back on 141 vehicles from Jan. 25 to May 3.

After tampering with odometers and changing the original titles and odometer statements, the dealers submitted the documents to the North Carolina DMV, where a new title was issued in the name of Seville Enterprises Inc. of High Point, the car dealership owned by Hicks, court documents said.

McAllister said such schemes are costly to consumers and damaging to reputable car dealers. He added that he would seek more indictments in the case.

"There is enormous profitability in odometer fraud. Rolling back thousands of miles off an automobile — a task which takes a few minutes — can increase the market value of a car by hundreds or thousands of dollars," McAllister said.

Indicted were Alfred (Fred) DeFusco, Norman Cardinale, James LaChance, John Irons, Diane M. Scardera, John Riedeman, John Cotoia Jr. and Richard Dion, all of Cranston, R.I.; Angelo Marsella, Edward Regine and Ernest Persichino, all of Johnston, R.I.; and Peter Baker of East Greenwich, R.I.

Each count of conspiracy to commit mail fraud is punishable by a maximum of five years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine. Interstate transportation of forged titles is punishable by a maximum of 10 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

The 12 are scheduled for arraignment Monday in Greensboro, and the trial is set for September in Winston-Salem.

Official Notes Census Distrust

RALEIGH (AP) — Blacks may not be counted accurately in the U.S. census because they don't trust the Census Bureau, a Raleigh official said Tuesday.

Henry L. Edmonds, a civil rights conciliation officer with the city Human Resources Department, said the U.S. Census Bureau should provide state and local governments with funds to ensure that blacks are informed about the census so they are not undercounted.

Many blacks were not counted in the 1980 census because they were afraid their government assistance would be terminated as a result of information they provided, Edmonds said. "A lot of blacks are on welfare or some other program. They fear their assistance would be cut off were they to give accurate data."

Rather than lie on the census application, many blacks do not reply to the survey, Edmonds said.

For The Way It's Made

Folk Festival Scheduled At ASU Saturday

BOONE — Appalachian State University's Farthing Auditorium will be the scene of traditional folk music and dance from around the world on Saturday at 8 p.m.

Colorful native costumes will complement the music and dance of Ireland, England, Puerto Rico, India and the Southern Appalachians when "Folkoot USA, The First Annual North Carolina Folk Festival of International Music and Dance" comes to Boone.

"Folkoot" means "a gathering of people" in Old English. True to that heritage, the event will gather the High Country community to gain a rare insight into the roots of other cultures and at the same time, raise funds to turn the Boone structure known as the "Jones property" into a community center. To raise the $100,000 needed, another $60,000 must be raised above the $40,000 already pledged by the state of North Carolina.

Advanced tickets to the event are available at many locations throughout the High Country as well as at the door. Holders of advanced tickets will gain entrance to a pre-festival reception for the artists from 6 to 7:30 p.m. on Saturday at the "Jones property." Advanced tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for kids, seniors and students. Door prices are $6 and $4. For tickets call 704/264-2225.

The program features five folk groups, the Daniel Boone Cloggers; England's The Monkseaton Morrismen and Folk Dance Club; Clann Na Gael, an all-woman Irish group; the Guateque Folk Dance Group of Puerto Rico; and India's Sheerer Punjab.

Airline Chief Backs Practice Of 'Hubbing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Piedmont Airlines on Tuesday defended the widespread practice of airlines funneling virtually all of their flights through certain "hub" cities, saying the system has benefited the traveler.

Donald Engen, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, recently said the so-called "hubbing system" that most airlines have adopted in recent years has contributed heavily to flight delays because airlines try to bunch most of their flights close together at particular airports.

Engen suggested that airlines in some cases have picked airports for hubs that are unable to accommodate the heavy traffic.

But Piedmont President William Howard told a news conference that the proliferation of hubs has eased the congestion problems at some of the largest airports and reduced the pressure on the FAA.

Howard noted that the Winston-Salem, N.C. airline, which has grown to become the ninth largest carrier in the country, in recent years has concentrated all of its flights through hubs at the Charlotte, N.C., Baltimore-Washington International and Dayton, Ohio, airports.

Flights through the three cities are carrying thousands of passengers that once flew on flights that had to go through more congested airports in such cities as Atlanta and New York, he said.

Howard made his remarks before speaking to the Aero Club of Washington.

In his speech, he reiterated complaints by other airline executives about flight delays caused by a shortage of experienced air traffic controllers.

He said that during the past 18 months the frequency of such delays has increased by more than 50 percent at Piedmont and the average length of the delays has doubled because of air traffic control problems.

"The worst of it is that most of those (delay) increases are generally during periods of good weather," he said.

The FAA has acknowledged that delays have become a problem, but officials argue that the airlines are largely to blame for scheduling too many flights during peak periods and into the hub airports.

Meanwhile, Howard announced that Piedmont will expand its route system next November to include for the first time San Francisco, Rochester, N.Y., and Evansville, Ind.

He said each of the new routes will connect with one of the airline's three hub airports where passengers will be able to make connecting flights to other Piedmont destinations.

The new routes which will begin operation Nov. 1 are:

—Daily flights between Charlotte and San Francisco and Dayton and San Francisco.

—Three roundtrip flights between Evansville, Ind., and Dayton.

—Two daily roundtrip flights between Rochester and the Baltimore-Washington Airport.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, extending Tuesday's gains, buoyed by hopes that a slowing in the economy's growth rate will lead to lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 7.07 points to 1,122.35 in the opening half hour of trading.

About three stocks rose in price for every two that fell in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

In reports released at the opening of trading today, the Commerce Department said factory orders fell 1.4 percent and construction spending slipped 0.2 percent in June. A day earlier, the government said that its main forecasting barometer, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, fell 0.9 percent last month.

The reports helped send interest rates tumbling for bonds and notes, although short-term interest rates remained little changed.

Analysts believe prospects will improve for relief from high interest rates if economic activity cools off to a level that can be sustained without rekindling high levels of inflation or adding to a business borrowing binge.

The government remains a big borrower, with the Treasury scheduled to announce third-quarter cash needs after today's session ends.

Today's early prices on the NYSE included American Telephone & Telegraph, unchanged at 17 1/4; General Motors, up 1/4 at 69 1/2; Motorola, up 1/4 at 35 1/4; Ford, up 1/4 at 39 1/2; FTT, up 1/4 at 24 1/4; and St. Regis, down 1/4 at 49 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 5.30 points to 1,115.28.

Advances outpaced declines by 43 on the NYSE.

county's school facilities now have to go through the same process that any group has to go through.

"Basically, we don't deny any group use of our facilities if we know they're going to take care of the property. We have had some church requests in the past and have looked at those requests just like requests made by any other community group, and we do believe that a church is essentially a community group.

"What we do in instances involving churches is try and stay away from things that ought to be in church like funerals and weddings. If it is a special activity, and the church doesn't have space for that activity, we let them use the facility."

The Greenville, school system adheres to basically the same principles as do the county schools, according to Superintendent Delma Blinson. "We have neither discriminated in favor or against any religious oriented groups in the past and do not plan to start now," Dr. Blinson said.

"People have the first amendment right to exercise freedom of religion as long as it does not interrupt the educational process and doesn't cost the taxpayers anything," he added.

Blinson said that whether a city school receives a request from students or adults for religious or non-religious use of school grounds, each request is treated the same.

"However, we are required by law not to give excessive aid or support to any organization. Therefore, we try to be reasonable and exercise good judgement. In each case that comes up, we ask ourselves: 'Are we doing something for this group that we would not normally do for another unrelated group?'"

Blinson added that at this point public schools are not allowed, by law, to provide aid or sponsor for religious groups.

Rev. J.M. Bragg of the People's Baptist Temple, a "strong proponent of the bill," said the legislation is a step in the right direction. "I've always felt it was a little ridiculous that government opened sessions with prayer and we're not allowed to open a session of school with prayer."

Although Bragg says he has never had the occasion to use a public school for a religious purpose, he said that he is in favor of any legislation that "would open school doors to religious meetings."

Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, maintained, however, that there is a "fine line" involved in bringing religious meetings and thought into public schools.

"Allowing prayer meetings is a little different than having a poetry group or group interested in making duck decoys meet at the school," he said. "Religion needs to be watched a little more closely than you would watch other types of groups simply because it deals with larger, more important matters. It can tend to be misused to a greater degree."

Nahouse said the pending legislation on religious meetings in schools is a "bit more palatable" than previous bills.

"If a group is student-initiated and student-led, as this new legislation calls for, that's one thing. But when they're talking about letting teachers conduct voluntary prayer meetings before, I felt a little nervous. Letting a teacher conduct prayer sessions would be coercive just because of the very nature of the situation. Imagine a teacher saying 'Now who would like to stay after for prayer ...'"

"Now that they're talking about student-initiated and student-led groups, I feel I can accept the situation a lot easier."

North Carolina was to attend a pig picking in 1970 at the invitation of N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham, when Block was director of agriculture for the state of Illinois.

"I'm a pig farmer," Block said, "and the more pigs we can pick the better the price is."

Block noted that his first trip as agriculture secretary was to North Carolina, at the invitation of Helms, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"You can feel secure to know," Block said, "that your tobacco industry ... your philosophy ... is being protected, guarded," by Helms.

"We've been through a lot of wars," Block said, "and we have a lot to do yet before all of the problems are solved."

But Block said the tobacco crop seems to be coming in good. "If you raise it and have something to sell, you've got a fighting chance."

Among other dignitaries attending the breakfast prior to the opening sale were: Congressman Jim Martin, the Republican candidate for governor; N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the Democratic candidate for governor; N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham; Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Wilmer D. (Vinegar Bend) Mizell; N.C. Senator Bob Jordan, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor; N.C. Farm Bureau President John Sledge.

Fine Threatened

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The governor of Toledo province has threatened to fine a small town for refusing to obey an edict that forbids the ceremonial beheading of geese during its annual fiesta last Wednesday.

Gov. Pedro Valdecantos Garcia told Jose Luis Mora, mayor of El Carpio de Tajo, that he had 10 days to either pay the fine of 500,000 pesetas ($3,090) or explain why officials in the town of 2,600 ignored a prohibition banning the goose beheading.

American Team Is Gym-Dandy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mitch Gaylord, Bart Conner, Peter Vidmar, Scott Johnson, Jim Hartung and Tim Daggett — these are the Golden Boys of Summer. They brought the United States its first Olympic team gymnastics victory in 80 years.

The swimmers — Rowdy Gaines, Tiffany Cohen, Theresa Andrews, Rick Carey and the American women's 400-meter freestyle relay team? Well, they were supposed to win. Sometimes that's all they seem to do. That's all they did on Tuesday, sweeping the five gold medals up for grabs.

But U.S. gymnasts hadn't won a team medal of any kind since 1904, and when they won the gold in St. Louis, those Summer Games were nothing more than a disorganized sideshow to a World's Fair.

The American teams back then literally had no opposition, coming to those Olympics from various amateur clubs and dueling only each other. This time they faced China, the defending world champion.

During Sunday's compulsory exercises, Li Ning of China became the first male Olympic gymnast to record a perfect 10, doing it on the rings. Also that day, Gaylord, from Van Nuys, Calif., and Conner, from Norman, Okla., each scored 10, Gaylord on the rings and Conner on the parallel bars.

And on Tuesday night, with the outcome in the balance, Daggett, the last American competitor, was equally perfect on the high bar, giving the United States a final point total of 591.40 to China's 590.80 and bronze-medalist Japan's 586.70. "I just knew I had to do it for the guys," the perfectionist from West Springfield, Mass., said.

Pat Spurgin of Billings, Mont., won the gold in women's air-rifle competition; Detroit boxers Steve McCrory, at 112 pounds, and Frank Tate, at 156, won their first bouts, Tate by default when his opponent failed to make the weight; the U.S. men's basketball team rode Michael Jordan's 20 points to an 89-68 victory over Canada, and Cheryl Miller scored 20 as the American women routed Australia 81-47.

Also, John Marzano of Philadelphia hit a home run and John Hoover of Fresno, Calif., pitched a four-hitter to lead the United States past Taiwan 2-1 in baseball's debut as an Olympic demonstration sport, and the American men's volleyball team pounded Tunisia 15-3, 15-2, 15-3.

But the U.S. men's field hockey team lost 4-0 to West Germany; the soccer team was beaten 1-0 by Italy and the American men's handball team was defeated 21-19 by West Germany.

Of the three other gold medals won Tuesday, two went to China, to Chen Weiqiang in the 132-pound weightlift and Li Yuwei in men's running-game target shooting. The third went to Luciano Giovannetti of Italy, who won a shootout with Dan Carlisle of Fort Benning, Ga., and Francisco Bozain of Peru in the men's trapshoot.

After three days of competition, the United States has 24 medals, 16 of them gold. China is second both in total medals with 11 and in gold with five.

What Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci did for the little girls of the world in the 1970s, Vidmar, a Los Angeles native, hopes he and his teammates, including Johnson, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Hartung, of Omaha, Neb., will do for the future boys of summers.

"I just hope there's a lot of kids out there that saw us do this and want to run out and be gymnasts because we have the ability to be a world power for a long time, and I hope it happens now," Vidmar said. "This is the greatest thing for USA gymnastics ever! We made history today."

Gaylord was the leading performer in the optionals with 59.35 of a possible 60 points on the rings, horizontal bar, vault, parallel bars, pommel horse and floor exercises. Vidmar, with a score of 118.55 points following the compulsories and optionals, leads the all-around competition going into Thursday's individuals. Li is second at 118.45.

When the final team score was flashed on the Pauley Pavilion scoreboard at UCLA, the scene was reminiscent of the one four years ago at Lake Placid, N.Y., when the unheralded U.S. hockey team shocked the powerful Soviet Union and eventually won the gold medal.

Again, the chant "USA! USA! USA!" and the blizzard of American flags bombarded the nation's newest heroes as they received their medals from Yuri Titov of the Soviet Union, the president of the International Gymnastics Federation.

Gaines, from Winter Haven, Fla., figured he was history four years ago, when the United States boycotted the Moscow Olympics. He had achieved every goal, save for Olympic gold. And when dream evaporated along with those Summer Games, he retired from competitive swimming.

But the dream never died, he came out of retirement and, at 25, as the old man of the U.S. swim team, won the 100-meter freestyle in an Olympic-record 49.80 seconds. "My grandmother back in Florida dreamed I would win," he said. "Grandma, from now on I'm sticking with you!"

Cohen, from Mission Viejo, Calif., won the women's 400 freestyle in 4 minutes, 7.10 seconds, breaking the American and Olympic marks. "I heard the crowd and that got me going because I was pretty tired at the end," she said. "I kicked as hard as I could the last 50 and gave it all I had."

Andrews, of Annapolis, Md., took the women's 100 backstroke in 1:02.55, barely beating teammate Betsy Mitchell, and Carey, of Mount Kisco, N.Y., won the 200 backstroke, in 2:00.23.

New Rampant Coach Set To Open Football Drills

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

This afternoon at 6 p.m., new Rose High School football coach Chip Williams will greet his new charges as drills open on the prep scene across the state.

And no matter what, Williams says that things can't be as bad as they were on his first day as a head coach when he took over at Bertie Senior.

"We had 26 people show up that day for both the varsity and junior varsity teams. I've told myself that nothing can be that bad again," he said.

Nor is it likely to be today. A much greater number are expected to show up, but Williams is going to be interested in what lies within those numbers in both talent and desire.

The team, by rule, will go through one week of conditioning drills, when no contact work is allowed. Time will be spent on conditioning as well as on dummy drills with both the offense and defense. Following the first week of work, the team puts on pads next Wednesday and begins two-a-day drills.

The Rampants don't open for 38 days however, playing their first game on September 7 against Jacksonville. They are currently considering a scrimmage on August 23 or 24, but details of that are still to be worked out.

"I'm glad it's worked out this way," Williams said. "By the time we scrimmage, everyone should know his job. Then, we can see who can do what and go from there. It will be a plus for us in installing a new system."

Actually, there's not going to be that much new stuff, the coach said. As in the past few years, Rose will operate out of the I-formation. "In the I things can be changed to accommodate the talent you have," the coach explained. "You work on strengths."

During the first three days of practice, Williams hopes to install much of the offense. "Of course, our major emphasis is going to be on conditioning, but we can work on timing and on presenting the offense to the players. We'll get a chance to know the kids and to orient the offense to their strengths."

While Williams' Bertie teams were generally known as ground oriented, he says he's not afraid to use the pass. "If people only saw us in practice, they'd think we didn't do anything but pass," he said. "But if we've got a good running back, we're going to use him. If now, we'll look to the pass." Williams said that he had seen some of the players in summer workouts, but not enough to know what to expect.

"The passing game takes a lot of time and a lot of timing. I don't know yet what we can do. But I do like to pass and we're going to work on it. But I like to be able to pass at the correct time, not just on third and long."

Williams said his Bertie teams were fairly high scoring units, and he expected to be able to do the same here.

In the final three days of the first week, Williams expects to introduce the defense and kicking games. "The defense will be pretty much what we've played in the past but with some changes. We'll use multiple defenses, and we like to split the defense into two halves with a linebacker responsible for calling the defense for each half. One half might be in one call and the other in another. We'll have gap responsibilities and basically play zone in the secondary."

There may be some handicap for the Rampants in that they have only two other varsity coaches at this time. Williams is hopeful of finding another staffer before the season begins.

"My responsibility will be with the quarterbacks and wingbacks on offense and the down linemen on defense. Jim Brewington will handle the running backs and the linebackers and defensive ends, while Ronald Vincent will coach the offensive line and the defensive secondary."

One coach Williams brought with him from Bertie is James Rankins, who will handle the junior varsity, assisted by Tommy Peacock. "If we get a new assistant, he will probably work with the jayvees, while Peacock moves up with the varsity."

Last year's team recorded a 4-6 record, and Williams, in his first season, is hopeful that the Rampants can turn things around, avoiding two straight losing marks. "The kids are going to have to work for what they get," he said. "The workers will be the ones who play."

Twins Treat New Owner

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Minnesota Twins got off on the right foot for their new owner and at the same time gave pitcher Ken Schrom an unexpected leg-up. Playing their first official game Tuesday night under Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad, who took over the team from Calvin Griffith, the Twins routed the Seattle Mariners 9-2.

And in doing so, the Twins supported their hard-luck right-hander with a 14-hit power show that included a 7-0 lead after three innings.

"All those runs sure take a lot of the pressure off," said Schrom, who pitched a five-hitter. "It's a situation I haven't been in."

Schrom, 3-5, had pitched well lately, but the Twins' quiet bats turned those strong performances into defeats. The right-hander had allowed two runs during his last 16 2-3 innings, but lost two games.

"I figured I'd have to shut out the other team to win," Schrom said.

In other American League action, Detroit beat Cleveland 5-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 6-4, Toronto nipped Kansas City 6-5, Texas edged Baltimore 7-6, New York beat Milwaukee 7-4, Boston routed

Chicago 14-4 and California turned back Oakland 7-3.

Schrom allowed one hit — a second-inning infield single to Larry Milbourne — during the first six innings. He pitched shutout ball until the ninth, when he gave up two runs on a run-scoring single by Al Cowens and a sacrifice fly by Bob Kearney.

Kent Hrbek went 2-for-3, driving in four runs with a three-run homer in the first inning and an RBI single in the third before leaving with a slight muscle pull after five innings.

"When Hrbek hit it (the homer) I felt like jumping up for joy," Schrom said. "But I had to stay at an even keel because I didn't want to let down like some pitchers do when they get early leads."

The Twins have now won eight of their last 10 games and lead California by 1½ games in the AL West.

Tigers 5-4, Indians 1-6

Detroit's Doug Baker hit a bases-loaded triple and Ruppert Jones homered to back the combined four-hit pitching of Juan Berenguer and Doug Bair in the first game.

A five-run second inning helped Berenguer, 5-7, snap a three-game personal losing streak and record his first victory since June 16. Bair pitched the final 2-2-3 innings.

Cleveland's Pat Tabler hit a three-run homer in the first inning of the second game. Both Julio Franco and Mel Hall were safe on one-out infield hits and scored ahead of Tabler's fifth homer of the season, on a 3-2 pitch from Dave Rozema, 7-3.

Winner Neal Heaton, 8-10, gave up nine hits in five innings. Tom Waddell earned his fifth save.

Blue Jays 6, Royals 5
Hot-hitting Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs with a double and a single to lead Toronto over Kansas City.

Mulliniks, who has hit safely in 14 of his past 15 games for a .432 average, doubled home a run in Toronto's three-run second inning and singled in another in the third.

Doyle Alexander scattered seven hits in 6 1-3 innings to boost his record to 9-5.

Mulliniks double was hit high off the wall in right-center at Exhibition Stadium.

"I thought it was out, especially with the way the wind was blowing out the way it was," he said. "But I've been swinging the bat pretty good. It seems that right now everything I hit falls in for me. I feel good at the plate, feel confident."

Rangers 7, Orioles 6
Curtis Wilkerson scored the tie-breaking run on a bases-loaded wild pitch by Tippy Martinez in the eighth inning as Texas defeated Baltimore.

With the score tied 5-5, the Rangers loaded the bases in the eighth on singles by Wilkerson and Gary Ward and a walk to Buddy Bell before the wild pitch by Martinez, 4-7. After Larry Parrish was walked intentionally, Ward scored as Pete O'Brien bounced out for a 7-5 Ranger lead.

The victory went to Odell Jones, the third Texas pitcher who fanned Eddie Murray to squelch a bases-loaded Baltimore threat in the sixth. Dave Schmidt recorded his seventh save after Ken Singleton singled home a run in the Baltimore ninth.

Yankees 7, Brewers 4
Omar Moreno drilled three hit, including a two-run single to highlight New York's six-run fourth, inning, and Don Mattingly knocked in two runs as the Yankees downed Milwaukee.

Ray Fontenot raised his record to 4-6, allowing four runs on 10 hits in six innings. Fontenot got relief help in the seventh from Jay Howell. Dave Righetti got the last out for his 17th save.

Andy Beene, 0-1, suffered the loss in his first major league start.

Red Sox 14, White Sox 4
Bill Buckner's bases-clearing double keyed a five-run first inning and Boston went on to rout Chicago in a free-swinging game featuring 27 hits.

Rookie Roger Clemens, 5-4, struggled through nine innings for the Red Sox, scattering 13 hits and striking out six. The Red Sox pounded out 14 hits themselves, including three homers, four doubles and a triple.

With leadoff batter Wade Boggs homering off Richard Dotson, Boston exploded for five runs on three hits in the first inning and coasted the rest of the way. All nine Boston starters got at least one hit and scored at least once, and only Jackie Gutierrez failed to walk as the White Sox pitchers walked 11 batters.

Angels 7, A's 3
Reggie Jackson and Brian Downing slugged back-to-back homers in the fourth inning to spark California over Oakland as Ron Romanick and Bruce Kison combined on a six-hitter.

Joe Morgan's first-inning homer and Bill Almon's second-inning sacrifice fly staked the A's to a 2-0 lead, but the Angels rallied to take a 3-2 lead in the fourth as Fred Lynn led off with a single and scored one out later on Jackson's 16th homer of the year. Downing then followed with his 13th homer of the season and the Angels never lost their lead.

Both homers were hit off Oakland starter and loser Lary Sorensen, 3-11. Jackson's was the 494th of his career, moving him ahead of Lou Gehrig into 12th place on the all-time list.

Security Officers Keeping It Tight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Syrian man who was on a U.S. government list of suspected terrorists was halted from entering the United States on a Los Angeles-bound flight, according to a federal Immigration and Naturalization Service official.

Sahak Kalanjan, 42, was stopped Sunday after it was discovered that his passport had expired last year and it had been changed to an expiration date of 1986, said William H. Truesdale Jr., deputy district director of the INS in Buffalo, N.Y.

Kalanjan's name also turned up on an INS list of possible terrorists, Truesdale said.

Olympic planners have devised a large and costly security plan to protect the 7,800 athletes competing in the Summer Olympics.

The chief fear of law enforcement officials has been a terrorist attack similar to the 1972 Munich Olympics when Palestinian terrorists attacked Israeli athletes. Before the incident ended, 11 Israelis, five terrorists, and one West German policeman were killed.

Kalanjan was turned back at an INS pre-flight checkpoint in Toronto. Once passengers are cleared there, Truesdale said, they are free to leave the plane without further checks once it lands in the United States.

Dick Berry, a spokesman for the Los Angeles office of the FBI, said, "we've heard about the Kalanjan incident and are checking it."

Federal intelligence agencies have established an elaborate anti-terrorist center in the FBI's office here, aimed at preventing any type of attack on the Olympics.

Richard Bretzing, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI, said last week that federal agencies have "no hard evidence" that any attacks are planned on the Olympics.

In another incident Tuesday, an Olympic decathlete from Paraguay was detained by police at he appeared on a practice track with a starter's pistol.

Claudio R. Escauriza was released after police determined he carried only a starter's pistol, which fires blanks, and not a real gun. He was turned over to the Paraguayan team, said police spokesman George Sumpter.

Escauriza became angry during the incident at the University of Southern California and began kicking at police, cutting the shoe of one policeman with his spiked athlete's shoe, Sumpter said.

In another incident, Los Angeles police arrested an Iranian man who was hiding in shrubs outside the Olympic athlete's village at UCLA.

Mohammad Karim, 26, was booked on an outstanding warrant charging him with battery in an alleged 1983 incident, said police cmdr. William Booth. Karim was picked up by police at 3:50 a.m. after he was spotted by security guards.

Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla., won their relay in 3:43.43, equalling the American record set in 1978. Steinseifer and Hogshead now have two golds apiece.

Jack Donohue, coach of the Canadian men's basketball team, said the officiating in the blowout by the United States was swayed by crowd and by the reputation of U.S. Coach Bobby Knight.

"When there's 18,000 Americans and three Canadians (in the stands), you're not going to get your share of calls," Donohue said at one point. And at another, he commented: "... the referees don't want Bobby Knight on their backs. ... If Bobby Knight yells, the refs will check in and see what he wants." Knight was unavailable for comment about Donohue's comments.

There was the first public mention Tuesday of a potential terrorist at the Games — but it came from a continent away, in Buffalo, N.Y., where a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization spokesman said a Syrian was prevented from boarding a Los Angeles-bound plane in Toronto because of passport irregularities. Sahak Kalanjan's name appeared on a list compiled by federal agencies of suspected terrorists.

Los Angeles police reported the first Olympics-related robbery at the Summer Games, the mugging of two Swedes who were stranded after boarding the wrong bus following last Saturday's opening ceremonies.

The police said cash, credit cards, passports and a camera were taken from Rolland Sjodahl, 44, and Leif Efraemsson, 36, who were attacked by two muggers.

Former Met Shines For Reds

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

The Mets' organization has produced some fine young pitchers, but not all of them are throwing in New York.

One of them, 22-year-old Jay Tibbs, was traded by the Mets to Cincinnati in June for veteran Bruce Berenyi. Tibbs hurled a three-hitter Tuesday in his fourth major league start as the Reds subdued the San Francisco Giants 3-0.

"I think the Mets weren't high on me as a prospect," Tibbs said. "They do have a lot of young arms in the organization. But they were moving other guys (up) before me."

The Reds have definitely become high on Tibbs since promoting him from the minors earlier in July.

"He's got poise on the mound," said Reds catcher Brad Gulden. "He's the type of pitcher who goes after hitters. He makes a good pitch at the right time."

"He's got that little cockiness that a player needs out there. He's going to help this ballclub."

The right-handed Tibbs, 2-0, lowered his earned run average to 1.71.

Cincinnati Manager Vern Rapp not only admired Tibbs' arm, but praised his digestive tract.

"He reminds me of Mel Stottlemyre," Rapp said. "He doesn't overpower anybody. He just goes out there and gets the job done in a hurry and lets his defense help out. That's the way Stottlemyre was — he'd walk one, strike out five and get three double plays."

"He's got the same kind of poise, the same kind of intestinal fortitude."

All three of the Giants' hits were singles. Tibbs struck out four and walked four, and the Reds turned three double plays to keep him out of serious trouble.

In other National League games, Philadelphia edged Chicago 2-1 in 12 innings, St. Louis topped New York 6-3, San Diego nipped Los Angeles 1-0, Pittsburgh defeated Montreal 5-3, and Atlanta bopped Houston 6-3.

Sloppy fielding helped sink San Francisco starter Jeff Robinson, 6-12, who took the loss while allowing six hits and two earned runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Dave Parker hit a soft double to left the lead off the bottom of the second and eventually scored when right fielder Chili Davis muffed Gulden's two-out fly ball.

Gulden also singled home a run in the fourth, after Nick Esasky walked and moved to second on an infield out. Cincinnati tacked on its final run in the sixth, as Ron Oester scored on Esasky's grounder.

"It's kind of hard to believe," Tibbs said of his major-league success. "But I'm proud of myself. I think I can keep doing it."

Phillies 2, Cubs 1

Juan Samuel, who tied the game with a two-out homer in the ninth inning, singled in the 12th and scored the tie-breaking run on Von Hayes' sacrifice fly.

Samuel beat out an infield grounder leading off the 12th, stole his league-leading 49th base, and advanced to third on a wild pitch by loser Tim Stoddard, 7-3, before scoring to make Al Holland, 5-5, a winner. It was Philadelphia's first extra-inning victory after seven setbacks while home-standing Chicago suffered its first overtime loss after seven victories.

Samuel's ninth homer ended starter Rich Bordi's bid for a one-hit shutout.

runs in a four-run first inning as Pittsburgh broke its five-game losing streak. Montreal's Steve Rogers, 3-11, extended his streak of losing starts to six. He is 1-10 in his last 14 starts.

Marvell Wynne walked in the first, Lee Mazzilli singled and both scored on Madlock's double. Jason Thompson followed with a double to score Madlock. Lee Lacy doubled with two out to score the fourth run of the inning.

John Tudor, 6-8, picked up the win for the home club.

Braves 6, Astros 3

Claudell Washington's bases-loaded, two-run single keyed a three-run ninth inning. Chris Chambliss' pinch single drove in Washington with the third run of the inning.

Four of Tuesday's seven NL homers were hit in the Astrodome. Atlanta's Randy Johnson belted his third of the season in the third and Houston's Enos Cabell responded with one in the fourth. In the sixth, consecutive blasts by Dale Murphy, his 25th, and Bob Watson, his second, tied the game at 3-3.

Gymnastics Win Likened To 1980 Hockey Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The smile that is so constant a part of Bart Conner's gymnastic charisma finally surrendered to a steady trickle of tears.

As the American flag was hoisted Tuesday night at Pauley Pavilion to signal the greatest U.S. gymnastics victory, Conner fought a losing battle with his emotions.

Minutes earlier, the University of Oklahoma graduate and his teammates had pulled off one of the biggest upsets in Olympic history, defeating the world champion Chinese for the gold medal in men's team competition.

America's stunning victory over the Chinese squad that defeated the Soviet Union at the World Championships last October in Budapest renewed memories of another implausible Olympic win — the U.S. hockey team's gold-medal triumph over the Soviets at Lake Placid, N.Y., in the 1980 Winter Games.

"This is certainly equal to that," said American Coach Abie Grossfeld. "Anyone who knows anything about gymnastics didn't think we could beat the Chinese."

The capacity crowd of 9,356 spectators went wild as the U.S. team marched around the competition area and under the grandstand to prepare for the medals ceremony.

Fans stood and shouted and waved flags to celebrate the historic triumph in a sport long dominated by Asians and Eastern Europeans.

And, like Lake Placid, the chant — "U-S-A, U-S-A" — rang out.

The American women's team tonight will try to duplicate the men's feat when it takes on Romania and China for the gold medal.

Romania, led by the shy but talented duo of Ecaterina Szabo and Lavinia Agache, holds a 196.15 to 195.70 lead over the United States going into tonight's optionals. China, in third place after the compulsories with a score of 194.15, still has an outside chance of winning the team title.

Agache and Szabo are tied for the all-around lead with scores of 39.55 in the compulsories. Right behind them are U.S. stars Mary Lou Retton and Julianne McNamara, with scores of 39.50 and 39.45, respectively.

Conner, a part of the American gymnastics scene through the transition period from lean years to glory, couldn't help reflecting on the past.

"I was a gymnast when we weren't any good at all," he said.

And while most Olympic observers had conceded the men's team title to the Chinese prior to the start of competition, the U.S. team believed it could offset China's individual stars with an overall team effort.

In the end, the Americans did just that. Although China got nine perfect scores to the United States' five in the two nights of team competition, the Americans had enough depth to win their first team medal since 1904.

"We knew it would take a miracle to pull it off," said the 26-year-old Conner, who is on his third Olympic team.

Conner, who came up with one clutch performance after another, joined UCLA teammates Mitch Gaylord and Tim Daggett in scoring perfect 10.00s.

Conner got his on the parallel bars, Gaylord on the rings and Daggett nailed China's coffin with a perfect score in the high bar; the final event for the U.S. team.

Gaylord, who Sunday became the first American ever to score a 10.00 in Olympic competition with a flawless effort in parallel bars, broke up a Chinese rally with his 10.00 in the rings.

China's Li Ning and Tong Fei both had posted perfect scores in the rings and the U.S. lead had dwindled to less than a point before Gaylord regained the momentum.

China's third perfect score of the night came from Lou Yun in the vault while Japan's Shinji Morisue scored a 10.00 in the high bar.

Japan took the bronze medal in the team competition with a score of 586.70.

American Peter Vidmar, with a 9.95 in the high bar and 9.90s in the pommel horse, rings and parallel bars, took over the all-around lead with 118.55 through the compulsory and optional competition.

Li, the favorite, is second with a score of 118.45 while Tong is third with a 118.40. Conner remains in contention with a 118.30.

The all-around, the most prestigious of the individual titles, will be decided Thursday night. No American has ever won the all-around gold.

Says Knight Intimidates

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The latest teams to be victimized by Americans in the Olympic basketball tournament had nothing but superlatives to describe the U.S. squads — although Canadian Coach Jack Donohue thinks Bobby Knight's reputation as an intimidator is affecting the competition.

"The referees don't want Bobby Knight on their backs," Donohue said after Knight's United States team routed Canada 89-68 Tuesday behind Michael Jordan's 20 points.

But Donohue said he was not accusing the officials of doing a poor job — "For international refs, they were fine," he said — and he admitted the Americans were the best team he has seen.

The United States, favored to win the gold medal, raised its record to 2-0 with the victory over Canada and to 71-1 in overall Olympic play. Canada dropped to 0-2 in Group B play.

The U.S. women, led by Cheryl Miller's 20 points, also raised their record to 2-0 by ripping Australia 81-47, prompting the Australian coach to predict that no team will come within 20 points of the Americans.

Donohue said the referees know Knight's reputation.

"They've heard about bad, bad Bobby Knight. The referees know he's not going to back down," Donohue said. "The U.S. will get the calls. We didn't get any-calls... If Bobby Knight yells, the refs will check in and see what he wants done."

Knight was not available for comment.

Shuttle Dispute Before Subcommittee

WASHINGTON (AP) — On one side is NASA, which depends on sizable military business if the space shuttle is ever to operate in the black; on the other is the Air Force, impatient with the shuttle's problems and looking for another way to put heavy satellites into orbit.

The dispute is being aired before a House subcommittee which was scheduled to hear today from Air Force Undersecretary Edward C. Aldridge, Jr., who wants the military to buy single-use satellite carriers known as ELVs — expendable launch vehicles.

Aldridge has told the same panel, the space science and applications subcommittee, that the Defense Department is committed to the space shuttle program but that total reliance on it for launches "could prove an unacceptable national security risk."

The Air Force has asked for proposals from rocket builders for 10 ELVs to use for a limited number of national security satellites at the rate of two launches for each of the next five years. It has asked Congress for $35 million in the fiscal year beginning in October and $300 million more the following year, but the money has not yet been authorized.

On Monday, the subcommittee was told by James M. Beggs, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, that loss of Air Force business was a major concern. The Defense Department, he said, had been expected to use the shuttle for 8 of the 24 launches in the late 1980s.

"It will severely impact our costs if they take more than two a year off," said Beggs.

The shuttle Challenger had been scheduled to carry the first full Defense Department payload in July, but the mission was canceled because of the failure of a satellite booster rocket last year.

As weeks of testing of that rocket became months, the Air Force asked for bids to build the 10 ELVs.

The Air Force is said to be considering three expendable launch vehicles, one of them a version of the solid rocket boosters that help propel the shuttle off the launch pad. Use of the SRB-X would keep shuttle-component production lines going, but Beggs said the Air Force seems cool to the idea.

"I have no quarrel with their need," Beggs told the subcommittee. "From the point of view of the country ... it would be a significant saving if we share the production capability that exists."

The Air Force also is looking at the Titan 34D7, an advanced version of the rocket used for launching military satellites from Cape Canaveral, and the Atlas 2, a modified version of the rocket that carried Intelsat satellites to an orbit 22,300 miles high.

Beggs also told the panel that each launch of the space shuttle costs $150 million to $200 million, while the most that each flight can earn back is $71 million.

"The $80 million difference is in fact a subsidy?" asked Rep. Robert S. Walker, R-Pa.

"I would prefer to phrase it differently," said Beggs. "It's not a subsidy, it's a continuation of our philosophy to recover our costs over a time period."

Beggs said combination of cost cutting and price increases should make shuttle operations self-sustaining by the end of the decade if the Defense Department doesn't take its business elsewhere.

Beggs said that NASA will raise its prices 25 to 30 percent later in the '80s when it expects to have 24 flights a year and that the cost-per-launch will go down.

"Will your costs ever come down to less than $100 million?" Walker asked.

"You bet," said Beggs.

Hoover Dam Bill Expects OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill allowing hydropower from Hoover Dam to continue to be sold cheaply to consumers in Southern California and parts of Arizona and Nevada is on its way to President Reagan.

The Senate, on a 64-34 vote Tuesday, completed congressional action on the measure, which would extend for 30 years Depression-era contracts under which power from the government-owned dam has been sold to certain utilities at close to the cost of generating it.

The president is expected to sign the measure.

Opponents had argued that power from the 600-foot-high dam, which straddles the Arizona-Nevada border, should be sold to the highest bidding utilities, not just those who had invested in the project when it was built in the 1930s.

Under long-term contracts due to expire in 1987, electricity from the federally owned dam has been made available to just the original utilities.

Home Sales Inch Upward In June

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home sales edged up 0.6 percent in June, ending three months of declines, the government reported Tuesday. The housing industry, however, took little cheer from the slight improvement.

Sales of new single-family homes rose to an annual rate of 620,000 in June, but that increase still left sales 18 percent below the peak hit in December and 5 percent below the rate of a year ago.

With mortgage interest rates on the rise, housing industry spokesmen expect sales to continue to slump. They pointed out that the inventory of unsold new houses — 341,000 — was at its highest level since December 1980.

"It is clear that housing markets are continuing to soften under the weight of high interest rates," said Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors. "There is little hope at this point that interest rates will fall to affordable levels because federal deficit spending remains high."

In June, the interest rate on conventional, fixed-rate mortgages jumped to 14.76 percent, the third straight monthly increase.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said his association's monthly survey showed growing pessimism among builders. He said the percentage of builders reporting good to excellent sales prospects had plummeted from 53 percent in March to 16 percent in July.

"Nothing will help housing unless there is a decline in interest rates and we don't see that happening," he said.

The slight increase in June sales was not enough to regain the ground lost in three months of declines. After hitting a high-point this year of an annual rate of 721,000 units in February, sales dropped steadily to a rate of 616,000 units in May.

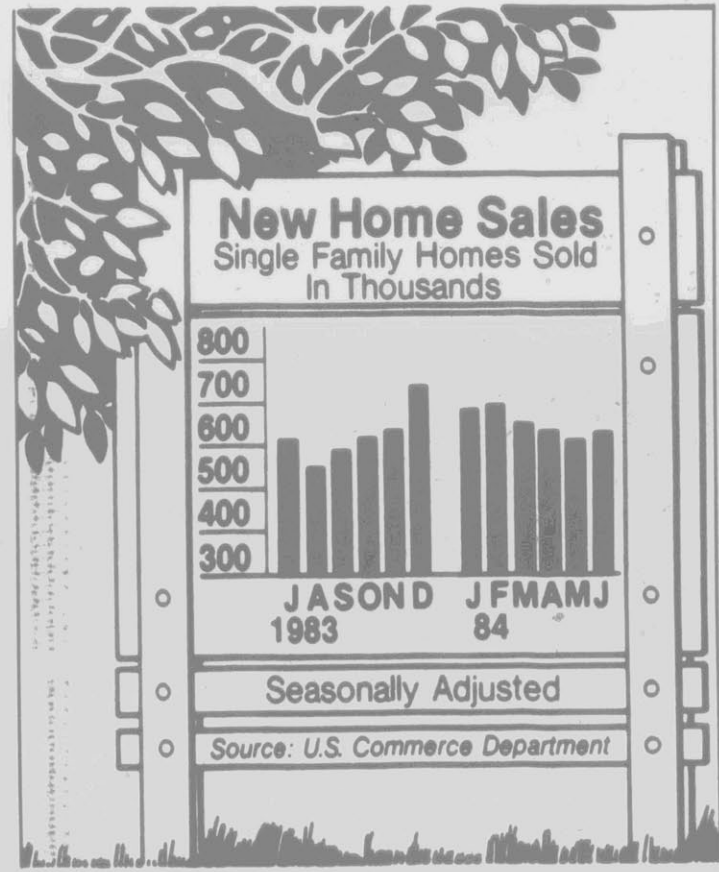

The slight increase in June resulted from a sharp rebound in sales activity in the Northeast, which reported a 41 percent increase in home sales. The South, which accounts for about half of total sales, was unchanged while the Midwest saw a 17 percent drop in sales and the West posted an 11 percent decline.

The average price of a home, which hit $103,600 in May, fell back slightly to $100,000. The May figure marked the first time the sales price had gone above $100,000.

The median — or mid-point — price of homes in June was $78,900, down from $82,100 the month before.

The number of months it would take to sell off the current supply based on the June sales level rose to 6.8 months in June from 6.6 months in May. It was the highest level since September 1982.

The figures in the report were adjusted to account for seasonal variations and expressed at an annual rate. Before the adjustments, 56,000 new homes were sold in June, down from 59,000 in May.

SINGLE-FAMILY HOME SALES — The government reported Tuesday sales of new single-family homes rose 0.6 percent in June, improving slightly after three straight months of declines. (AP Laserphoto)

Declining Gas Prices Help Consumers, Worry Refiners

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Five years ago, American motorists were fighting one another to get into gas stations, putting up with long lines and rapidly rising prices.
Now it is the major oil companies who are fighting — to lure customers into their establishments — and many of them are reporting earnings are being hurt by falling prices at the pump.
Gasoline prices have declined for 11 straight weeks, even with the onset of the peak driving season of the year, according to Dan Lundberg, whose weekly Lundberg Letter keeps track of price trends in the industry. The average nationwide price of $1.184 a gallon, including taxes, for all grades of gasoline has only been lower in two months during the past five years, he says.
And those two months of lower prices early last year marked another period when oil producers were trying to cope with a global oil glut that had triggered an earlier slide in world oil prices.

Here are some questions and answers about the turnabout in the gasoline business:
Q. How can gasoline prices be falling with the economy expanding, consumer confidence high and the summer driving season in full swing?
A. Among the unusual factors that have combined to produce an oversupply of gasoline and bring down prices are last winter's cold snap and a coal miners strike in Britain. Meanwhile, the improved fuel-efficiency of the U.S. auto fleet has enabled motorists to step up driving without substantially increasing trips to fill up.
Q. What did the cold weather have to do with gasoline supplies?
A. When refineries stepped up production of heating oil last winter, gasoline stocks also were built up as a byproduct. The driving season began with a large surplus of gasoline on hand, and the Department of Energy says the U.S.

stockpile of gasoline is still more than 10 percent above year-ago levels.
The long-running coal miners' strike in Britain created demand for heating fuel from European refiners, who turned to U.S. markets with the gasoline surplus created by their increased production.
Q. What about the threat to oil supplies posed by the Iran-Iraq war?
A. Instead of reducing supplies of oil, production has increased. At a meeting earlier this month, there was evidence that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had been cheating on production quotas imposed a year ago in an effort to reduce the oil glut. OPEC said it would hold prices and production steady and launched a new effort to convince member and non-member oil producers to exercise restraint in production.
Last week the world's largest oil producer, the Soviet Union, announced a reduction of oil prices. But other exporters like Mexico, Britain and Egypt so far appear to be holding the line along with OPEC.
Q. How has this affected oil companies?
A. Recently released earnings reports from major companies indicate the refining business remains weak, although other segments of the industry showed growth.
Chevron Corp., for example, reported a $16 million loss from refining and marketing in the second quarter, compared with a $45 million profit a year earlier. "Should motor gasoline prices continue their current low level through the heart of the driving season, third-quarter earnings would be adversely affected," said George Keller, the Chevron chairman.
At Shell Oil Co., the average selling prices of refined products, such as gasoline and jet fuel, fell 1.6 cents from a year earlier even though sales volume rose 5 percent.
Q. Is there any danger associated with falling oil prices?
A. Some oil-producing nations, such as Nigeria and Mexico are counting on price stability to avoid financial collapse.
Mexico, with a $90 billion foreign debt, counts on oil and natural gas for 75 percent of its exports last year. "If oil prices were to drop abruptly, the debt of oil-exporting countries would become a very serious source of debt risk to the world financial system," Mario Ramon Beteta, director general of Pemex, Mexico's oil monopoly, said last week in New York.

High-Income Workers To Feel Big Tax Bite

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The politically popular move to guarantee Social Security beneficiaries an increase in January will put a bigger bite on the 7 million workers who pay the maximum payroll tax each year.
The payroll tax rate already is scheduled to climb in 1985 to 7.05 percent from the current level of 6.7 percent for employees and 7 percent for employers. For workers, that means the amount they pay for Social Security will grow by 5.2 percent.
Someone earning $20,000 will pay $1,340 in Social Security taxes this year, but $1,410 on the same income in 1985.

income it taxes — would also stay frozen at $37,800 in 1985.
The Senate bill, approved 87-3 last Thursday, would unfreeze the wage base, boosting it by 4 percent to $39,300 to match the average increase in workers' wages from 1982 to 1983.
The escalating tax rate will already raise the tax on earnings of $37,800 from $2,532.60 this year to $2,664.90 in 1985, an increase of $132.30, or 5.2 percent.
But raising the wage base to $39,300 would push the maximum tax up to $2,770.65, an increase of $238.05, or 9.4 percent.
Social Security spokesman James Brown said those affected would be the 6 percent of the American work force who hit the ceiling each year.
Brown said that if the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers "continues as it's been going, it will be under 3 percent (for the year ending Sept. 30). The best-guess estimate is that it will be 2.8 percent."
House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Tuesday he has told Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, he wants the Social Security bill "through this House before we left for the next recess" on Aug. 10. O'Neill added he foresees "no problem. The Democrats will go for this."
Beneficiaries will get another bonus if the politicians provide a special cost-of-living increase.
The amounts beneficiaries can earn without losing any benefits will also rise, from $6,969 to $7,200 for those ages 65 to 69, and from $5,160 to $5,400 for those under 65. Those 70 or older can draw all their Social Security benefits regardless of earnings. Those under 70 lose $1 in benefits for each $2 they earn above their limits.
It was at the behest of the Nixon administration and Republicans in Congress that the lawmakers moved in 1972 to make the increases automatic. Robert J. Myers, a former top Social Security official, recalled that advocates favored an automatic escalator to avoid "bargaining that would drive (benefits) through the roof."
Myers said the 3 percent trigger was not intended as a cost-saving device, but merely for administrative simplicity.

But the tax burden will swell by 9.4 percent for those employees and employers who pay the maximum Social Security tax if, as expected, the House follows the Senate's lead and passes a bill to provide a benefit increase in January regardless of the inflation rate.
President Reagan, often accused of harboring desires to cut Social Security, got the ball rolling last week with his surprise announcement that he favored giving beneficiaries an increase in January even if inflation does not hit the 3 percent trigger.
Reagan did not mention any tax increase, and administration officials have shied away from saying whether he wants a wage base increase to accompany the benefit hike.
But deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday that current law already calls for cost-of-living increases to be financed by increasing the base rate on which taxes are calculated.
He said that inflation was originally estimated to be 4.7 percent this year, which would have meant a cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients of about $8 billion.
With inflation now projected at about 2.8 percent for the year, the total cost-of-living increase would amount to about $5 billion.
"So, from a budget deficit standpoint, we will still save $3 billion," Fitzwater said.
Without a cost-of-living increase, Social Security's so-called "wage base" — the maximum amount of

Cheap Stocks Can Be Costly Investment

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Excited callers offering a chance to make a quick buck on cheap stocks that they say will soon rise in price have cost Americans millions of dollars in recent years, consumer and investment experts warn.

The so-called penny stocks, low-priced offerings that usually involve speculation in new companies, can be legitimate but need to be checked out carefully.

Failures of penny stock companies have resulted in losses of hundreds of millions of dollars, according to an investor alert issued jointly by the national council of Better Business Bureaus and the North American Securities Administrators Association.

"Penny stocks are a dangerous game in which the average investor often winds up on the losing end," warned Massachusetts securities commissioner Michael Unger.

The investor alert warned that in a typical penny stock fraud the promoters assign themselves large blocks of stock at little or no cost and then begin selling shares at a nickel or a dime each.

High pressure sales tactics can push prices as high as a dollar or two, at which point the promoters sell out, making a large profit for themselves. The company then goes out of business, leaving unsuspecting buyers with worthless stock.

Telling the difference between such frauds and legitimate stocks that merely have low prices requires carefully reading the company's prospectus, checking out the broker and avoiding high pressure sales tactics.

"Although the profit potential for penny stocks may appear great, losses can also be large. Potential investors can protect themselves from fraudulent offers by carefully investigating them and learning just who is running the business and what they are promoting," said William H. Tankersley, president of the Better Business Bureaus.

In most states brokers need to be registered, and a call to the state securities administrator can determine whether any legal actions have been filed against the broker.

Suggestions that the broker has some sort of inside information or that the stock price can be manipulated to raise the value should be red flags.

Companies are required to file a prospectus before selling stock. But note: registering a prospectus with a government agency doesn't mean that the agency has approved the stock in any way. Get a copy of the prospectus and read it before buying any stock.

The securities administrators say some things to look for in a prospectus include:

— Management: Look for the background and experience of the company officers.

— Finances: Many penny stock firms have little or no capital to work with and will be using investors' money just to keep the doors open. Make sure you understand the financial statement and audit sheet. If you don't, find someone who can explain it to you.

— Dilution: This is a measure of how much the stock you buy has been watered down by free or cheap shares provided to the promoters. A dilution of 75 percent or more is cause for concern, securities officials say.

— Use of proceeds: This tells how much money will be used for actual product development and how much for other things, such as loans to company officers.

— Product: Check to see if the product has actually been tested and proven or if the promoters are using double-talk, such as "about to be tested" or stock proceeds "will allow testing."

— Transactions with management: watch for conflicts of interest such as interest-free loans to company officials and purchases of property from them at inflated prices.

— Litigation and investigations:

this section tells whether any lawsuits have been filed against the firm and, often, whether there are any government investigations underway.

Before making any stock investment it can pay to check the company with the Better Business Bureau where the firm is located and with your state securities administrator.

Cult Hires Attorney To Settle Large Debt

COOLEEMEE (AP) — The sale of a 78-acre farm belonging to a group known in New Jersey as a cult with a history of unpaid debts, will be postponed while the group attempts to settle a $76,000 debt.

Family Farmer's Foundation of America has hired Charlotte attorney Jane Z. Harper to try to settle the debt owed to Juanita and T.C. Hendrix of Cooleemee. The farm was scheduled to be sold Aug. 8.

The Hendrix' attorney, Thomas M. King, filed an execution order in the Rowan county courthouse earlier this month saying Family Farmers owes them $76,000 in liens on the farm and asked that the property be sold to pay the debt.

King said Ms. Harper did not give him an estimate of what the group would offer to settle the debt. King said he plans to send a letter to the Davie County Sheriff's Department this week, postponing the sale of the farm for 30 days.

Hendrix, a longtime friend of Richard Beck, lent Beck $30,000 in October 1980 and $25,000 more in October 1981. Beck was then building a second house on his farm. The house holds seven mortgages, three from banks and four from friends, worth about $217,000.

In August 1980, Beck sold 70 acres to the Family Farmers for $275,000. The group still owes about $210,000 on that purchase, King said.

Beck filed for personal bankruptcy about 14 months ago, so the money owed to him must go directly to his creditors, including the Hendrixes.

George Jurscek, the group's leader, bought the second house and remaining 8 acres for $165,000 during foreclosure proceedings in April.

Retirement: Period With Time To Do It And Enjoy It

By DOUGLAS STEVENSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most people are told wills, Social Security and cemetery plots are the stuff of which retirement is made, but Georgia Watson, author of "Retirement Tracks," advises differently.

"What do you say to retirees?" she asks, chuckling. "Spend your money and enjoy it."

Miss Watson, in Washington recently to promote her book, says: "There should never be a time in one's life when you say, 'This is all.' We have come to think of retirement as when you're finished. It's a golden opportunity to begin something else."

She has been touted as a "retired Erma Bombeck," but Miss Watson simply laughs and says, "I'm an old maid spinster girl poking a little fun at myself."

A retired college professor, this "Georgia born and bred" spinster girl combines wit and wisdom, satirical insight, and life's experiences and observations to comment on life and retirement.

As Mark Twain did a century ago, Miss Watson effortlessly uses few words to simultaneously create one's brow in thought and bring a smile to the face.

Some examples from "Retirement Tracks":

On wisdom — "After you display the wisdom of age, leave in a hurry. After you display blissful ignorance, stick around for someone to display the wisdom of age."

On time — "Jumping clocks backward does not bother you. Jumping clocks forward makes you wonder if you've been cheated."

On money — "People tell you the most important thing to consider in life at any age is not money but fulfillment. You try to borrow money from the bank with fulfillment as collateral."

Humor is essential to her writing style and philosophy of retirement, Miss Watson explains, because "humor applies to everyone."

But she insists, "I'm not clobbering people like Buchwald or Bob Hope."

Watson's approach to retirement and the books she has produced came about as a result of her own need for advice on the subject.

Upon retiring from Georgia Southern College in Statesboro, Ga., in 1976, Miss Watson traveled, fulfilling a retirement requisite.

But she found, after six months: "You've seen all you always wanted to see. Then what?"

Miss Watson says everything she read about retirement was "serious stuff" and that most "experts" on the subject lump all retirees together as "senior citizens."

"What I needed most was a new objective of some kind. I noticed absolutely nothing humorous was being written."

That new objective is evidenced by the premise of "Retirement Tracks," available from Rainbow Books of Moore Haven, Fla.

Miss Watson tells her readers once one reaches retirement, "You hurry because you have time."

Retirees have time to hurry toward small or large goals, she says, adding that the goal, as opposed to motivation toward it, is most important.

"There would have been no way in the world for me to prepare for the writing of these books," she says. "But now I have an objective."

For others the objective "could be a garden in the backyard. The word 'motivation' sets me off," Miss Watson says, leaning forward to make her point, her eyes lighting almost in anger.

Laughing again, Miss Watson, the psychology professor, says "motivation" is for lab rats, not people. "It doesn't mean anything. It's past tense."

But she says the past can be important in determining one's approach to retirement.

"I'm not trying to tell other people how to meet retirement," she says. "It all depends on your background."

"I don't think there's anything wrong with bringing out any of your past experiences and memories if you're building something on top of it," she said. "It's necessary to connect."

Miss Watson, a major in the Women's Army Corps during World War II, uses her own past to advantage when writing for retirees, and recounts in her book a meeting with Queen Elizabeth and a fearful reunion with the Queen Mother forty years later.

But she says making use of these experiences in the present is what is vital.

"The main thing is I'm one of the few people that has stared a new career. Many think about it, but ...

Miss Watson's new career, as well as the new lifestyles of all retirees, have one underlying principle, she says. Hands folded dramatically on the table in front of her, this former Army major and psychology professor, this "old maid spinster girl" says, "Keep it light."

Blushing Can Be Harmful To Individual's Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Cunningham's first job interview with William Agee, chairman of Bendix Corp., took place at 7:30 a.m. in a suite at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Naturally, she was nervous. And her teacup rattled.

Anybody in such a situation would probably get rattled. And sweat. Or twitch.

What happened instead to Ms. Cunningham is a blusher's nightmare-come-true: "I felt my neck turn hot and red," she said. Agee nevertheless hired Ms. Cunningham, quickly promoted her to vice president and, as noted in reams of gossip news copy, eventually married her.

But the 32-year-old Harvard MBA, who wears high-neck blouses even in July to hide her redness, said of her blushing, "It's not an asset."

For countless other blushers, it can be a definite liability.

Philip G. Zimbardo, author of the book "Shyness," quotes an unidentified middle-aged salesman: "This is most distressing to me as it hinders my involvement in many activities that my line of work leads me toward. Public speaking is out of the realm of possibility, small group discussions are rarely handled well, and occasionally, even face-to-face communication is difficult without showing signs of embarrassment. The situation is getting progressively worse."

A young business executive told the author, "The energy diverted by the shyness-blushing syndrome has undoubtedly prevented my movement into higher responsibility."

Researchers have various theories about blushing, which is one of the most visible symptoms of anxiety and therefore one of the most disturbing.

"Blushing is clearly the one you can't hide," said Dr. Benjamin D. Reese Jr., a clinical psychologist at the Fifth Avenue Center for Counseling and Psychotherapy in New York City. "It's easier to put your hand to your face to hide a quiver or not take your jacket off if you're perspiring like mad."

People who blush frequently and habitually are called erythrophobes. Humans of all races and skin pigmentations blush.

Study Says Pet Owners Feel Good

NEW YORK (AP) — Pet owners responding to a survey felt better about themselves and the world than non-owners of pets, a magazine said.

The conclusions were based on answers from 13,000 readers who filled out a four-page questionnaire printed by Psychology Today in April. Eighty-three percent of those answering were women, 78 percent were under 45 years old, 88 percent have pets now and 89 percent said they had pets while growing up.

Pet owners were more likely to check positive responses than non-owners when asked how they felt about their lives now and in the past and their expectations for the future, the magazine said.

The readers ranked pets ahead of jobs in importance and just behind friends and family, the magazine said, with 79 percent saying that at times pets were their closest companions.

Seven out of 10 said they thought pets helped young couples prepare for parenthood "by getting them used to responsibility and to having someone depend on them," it said.

One in four looked on pets as human members of their families and the rest as "almost-human members," the magazine said.

More than half said their pets shared a bed with a family member, it said.

Many respondents had multiple-pet households, with 54 percent saying they kept dogs, 52 percent cats, 11 percent fish, 9 percent birds and 5 percent rodents.

Public TV's 'Summer Of Judgement: The Impeachment Hearings' Airing Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Today, there's the resurrected Richard M. Nixon.
He's become one of the nation's elder statesmen. He addresses the American Society of Newspaper Editors and gets ovations. He writes books and receives large sums to reveal some pieces of himself on TV. And then there's the other Nixon. He defied Congress. He fired a special prosecutor. He was forced to resign the presidency under a cloud of shame.

For adults whose memories have been dimmed by time, for teen-agers who were too young to understand 10 years ago, public television tonight offers "Summer of Judgment: The Impeachment Hearings."

It's a forceful retrospective that shows where Nixon was before today's media rehabilitation. It's a must-see hour that recalls one of live TV's finest hours, when the medium turned public servant and made the remarkable resignation of a president more understandable and acceptable.

"I was amazed how conclusive the hour was," says the show's reporter Charles McDowell. "I didn't remember that it all ended with such finality."

McDowell, who covered the nationally televised impeachment hearings 10 years ago for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, said he forgot that the committee's 11 Nixon supporters switched their votes after tapes finally were released linking the president to the Watergate cover-up a week after the break-in.

Ricki Green, the program's executive producer, said she didn't intend to repudiate the new Nixon, although that certainly could be one effect.

"The program speaks for itself," she said in an interview. "Our memories had become numb. We all had forgotten what had come through. It was not our intent to launch a counteroffensive. He just ran into a 10-year anniversary."

Ms. Green didn't try for a Nixon interview. "This program was about the men on the committee and the constitutional process," she said. "Richard Nixon has had his say. The sense of this show is that this day belonged to common men. They were the stars."

They formed the House Judiciary Committee, the body charged with investigating whether Nixon should be impeached for Watergate-related activities that included obstruction of justice and abuse of power.

In his introduction, McDowell describes the stars this way: "It's ... the story of obscure members of Congress, partisan politicians, suspected second-raters, whose remarkable debate here caught the spirit of the Constitution at a crucial time."

Ms. Green said the committee members eagerly returned to reminisce. "They were run-of-the-mill politicians then and the limelight 10 years later still looks good," she said.

The committee had 21 Democrats, including chairman Peter Rodino, and 17 Republicans. To convince the nation and the history books that this was not a partisan, sordid affair — as had been Andrew Johnson's impeachment trial 100 years earlier — Rodino needed Republicans to join the majority Democrats.

"The basic thing in telling this story," said McDowell in an interview, "was getting people for whom this was a real struggle. We wanted people who carried a burden."

The broadcast focuses on the seven undecided votes, and perhaps none was more difficult than Caldwell Butler's. The Republican from Virginia is running for governor today, but he owed his political life then to Richard Nixon.

"He was a pet of Nixon's. He visited the White House. He was almost the perfect, pro-Nixon, partisan Republican," said McDowell. "If you've seen that kind of person come to vote for impeachment, you've seen something."

When Butler talks about his aye for impeachment, he still breaks down. The power imbedded in the Constitution had been transferred to mortal men, and it awed, frightened and moved them.

"And then I went back to my office and called my wife," recalled Butler through his tears, "and because you felt the urge to share this experience with somebody, and I wanted to be reassured ... she reassured me."

But the most powerful storytelling belongs to the 10-year-old pictures and words. They still make for thrilling, revealing TV.

McDowell is amazed how "surprisingly little" the committee played to the cameras. Their positions in public were their positions in private. It was more constitutional than theatrical when Jim Mann of South Carolina, whose district had voted 78 percent for Nixon, spoke directly to his constituents on TV.

Didn't they have the inalienable right to know why he was about to bring down their president?

"If this had been done behind closed doors, I'm not sure the people would have bought it," said McDowell. "The process went smoothly because Jim Mann talked to his constituents, and they watched it all."

"What an amazing thing. We changed presidents one morning and went on with the next one."

Petersen Has Knack For Directing Hits

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The award as the film world's prize troubleshooter goes to West Germany's Wolfgang Petersen, the director who took over two troubled epics and turned them into hits.

The first was "Das Boot." For three years Columbia Pictures tried to film the submarine saga, considering such stars as Robert Redford and Paul Newman and directors John Sturges and Don Siegel. Petersen was enlisted to write and direct "Das Boot" with German actors. The result was an international hit that won seven Academy Award nominations and became the biggest grossing foreign-language film in the United States.

The second was "The Neverending Story." Another German director had tried to prepare a film based on the best-selling novel of fantasy and adventure. His efforts failed, and Petersen took over the complicated production. "The Neverending Story" has been a smash in West Germany and now is drawing raves from American reviewers.

Now, there's "Enemy Mine." The 20th Century-Fox futuristic adventure founded after three weeks of filming in Iceland. Petersen has agreed to take over the movie, which stars Dennis Quaid and Lou Gossett Jr., and will shoot it this fall at his home-base Bavarian Studios in Munich and on location in the Canary Islands.

Petersen was here for the American launching of "The Neverending Story," along with his wife, Maria, who was his assistant director on 15 films. A sturdily built man of 43 with thinning blond hair, he speaks flawless English.

"I had nine years of English in school and six years of French," he explained. "Also nine years of Latin and six of ancient Greek, but they are not as helpful in my work."

Petersen solved the problem of "Das Boot" by making the film more German. His solution for "The Neverending Story" was to Americanize it.

Jackson Busy For Charities

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, whose tour with his brothers in The Jacksons is expected to be the biggest moneymaking road show in rock history, is keeping busy on the charity circuit as well.

Jackson, who has said he will donate his own proceeds from the tour to charity, is also spearheading an album project that will benefit the entertainment industry-supported T.J. Martell Foundation for Leukemia and Cancer Research.

The LP, called "Let's Beat It," is described by promoters as the largest-ever charity venture of its kind, with hits by Jackson, Paul McCartney, Cyndi Lauper, Billy Joel and 10 other top pop entertainers.

Soviet Corn Purchases Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, with a purchase of another 400,000 tons of American corn, has raised its total grain purchases this month to nearly 6 million tons, the Agriculture Department reports.

The new buy was announced Monday by Agriculture Secretary John R. Block in Indianapolis in a speech to the annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association.

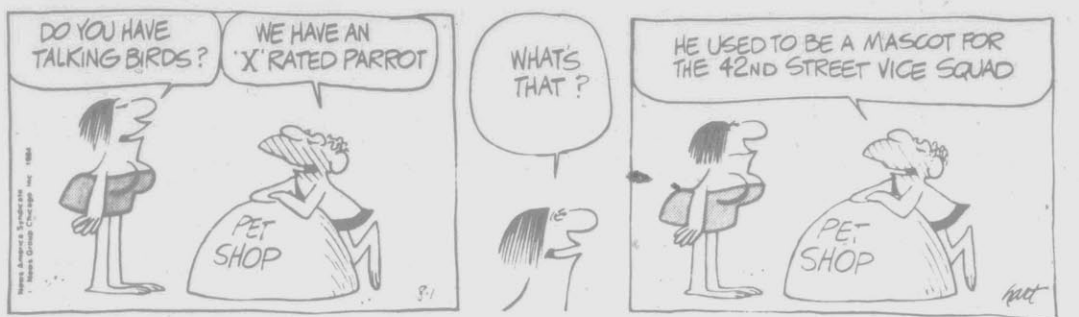

The surge of Soviet grain purchases under long-term agreements began June 29. Since then, sales have totaled 5.8 million metric tons of wheat and corn.

The sales are reported to the department by exporters, as required by law, but prices and other details were not disclosed.

State Lottery Debate Is Not Over Yet

By JOHN FLEISHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — But for Gov. Jim Hunt's successful lobbying blitz, North Carolinians might have voted this fall on whether to lift a 150-year-old ban on a state lottery.

Observers said Hunt was instrumental in the state Senate's defeat last year of a bill to authorize a lottery referendum during the 1984 general election.

Talk of a lottery in North Carolina all but disappeared after the vote, and the issue isn't expected to attract much attention before the 1985 legislative session. However, supporters insist they aren't giving up — and opponents aren't letting down their guard.

"I'm giving very serious consideration to introducing the lottery bill again in 1985," said Rep. Jeanne Fenner, D-Wilson, a top lottery supporter last year.

"Lord, no, it's not dead," said Coy Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League of North Carolina, which fought the bill. "I guarantee it's going to come back up. But we'll be ready."

Seventeen states sponsor lotteries and several others are considering them, according to the National Association of State Lotteries. Those numbers were cited frequently last year as supporters sought to convince their colleagues that lotteries were the trend of the future.

Additional figures in the pro-lottery arsenal included:

- Estimates that the state's profits would range from $100 million to $235 million annually, a powerful lure in recession-plagued 1983 when tax increases and spending cuts were needed to balance the budget.
- "We certainly need to do something about education," said Ms. Fenner. "I look at this (a lottery) as one way to fund improvements in education, and I'm not sure there will be lots of other ways."

"I don't know how stable this economic recovery is. ... What we need is a certain, dependable way to raise revenues, and we need creative alternatives to just raising taxes."

— Results of a poll conducted by the University of North Carolina School of Journalism showing that 59 percent of the voting-age people contacted said they favored a lottery. Twenty-eight percent were opposed and 13 percent had no opinion.

"Our studies revealed that millions of dollars were going out of North Carolina to other states that have lotteries," said state Sen.

Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth. "People are going to play, and it's really a question of whether the money stays here or goes elsewhere."

Lottery opponents weren't convinced. They argued that as long as the state's tax laws are enforced, everyone will pay his fair share to support the government.

"Democratic government operates on the principle that everybody pays a fair share of the operation of government," said Privette. "With a lottery, only those who participate pay." And, he said, a disproportionate number of participants are poor and can least afford to buy lottery tickets.

"It's common knowledge that most people who get involved in a lottery are in the poor strata," he said. "They're convinced by the high-powered TV blitzes that they can get rich quick, overnight. They spend money on the lottery that they need to buy food, clothing and other necessities." Lottery supporters disagree, saying most ticket buyers are middle-class working people.

Privette and other opponents further argued that even if a state-run lottery could be kept free of corruption, it would open the way to illegitimate gambling operations and similar crimes.

Privette also said it would degrade the state's moral values, lower the citizenry's respect for government and promote an ethically unsound principle of "wanting to get something for nothing."

A lottery "promotes a fantasy viewpoint of life," he said. "It's contrary to the basic work ethic of doing a decent day's work for a day's wages."

After a public hearing and lengthy committee deliberations, Barnes' bill calling for a statewide referendum reached the Senate floor, where it seemed to have a fighting chance for approval.

Hunt, who had denounced the lottery as a form of immoral gambling, nevertheless kept a generally low profile on the issue. At the last minute, however, his lieutenants buttonholed lawmakers in Legislative Building offices and corridors while the governor himself telephoned key senators.

Barnes, sensing a loss of momentum, tried to rescue the bill by having it returned to committee. But the move failed and the bill died.

A bill sponsored by Ms. Fenner calling for an in-depth study of the lottery emerged from a House committee but got no further.

Lottery Part Of Life In The Bay State; Some Oppose State-Supported Gambling

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — It was the event of the week. Marcia Sanford smiled and cried for the cameras as lottery officials handed her the first payment of the $15.6 million she won in the Massachusetts Megabucks lottery — the largest single lottery payoff in U.S. history.

The 45-year-old secretary hit the jackpot and the front pages on a $1 bet. But her win didn't break the bank. People will bet an estimated $500 million this year in Massachusetts, which offers the highest percentage of prize money among the nation's lotteries.

The lottery has become a fixture of life in the state.

But not everyone is happy with the frenzy of state-supported gambling. Political leaders question the morality of government touting games of chance. Law enforcement officials dismiss its impact on organized crime. Others call the enticement of "instant millionaires" false and misleading.

"Everywhere you go there are billboards, television commercials, newspaper ads, everything done to make it look appealing and attractive to gamble," said Sen. David Locke, the assistant minority leader of the Massachusetts Senate. "I don't think that is the appropriate function of government."

Locke advocates legislation requiring posting of the odds — 1.9 million to one — but no such law has been passed.

Some take issue with the idea of "instant millions," fostered by lottery advertising.

Writing recently in The Wall Street Journal, Herbert Kahn, head of a marketing firm in Weston, Mass., noted that the woman who won $15.6 million actually will get $624,795.20 a year for the next 20 years. To pay her, the state purchased a $7.5 million annuity with an insurance company, which will dole out her annual check from the interest on the investment.

"What that says to me is she has won a $7.5 million annuity and not the $15.6 million," he said. "I believe the lottery is being promoted misleadingly in a way that money-lenders are no longer allowed to do."

Massachusetts got into the lottery business in 1972 with a modest, 50-cent weekly game and hopes of an annual "handle" of $30 million. Last year some $364 million — nearly $63 for every state resident — was bet on four different lottery games.

Fifty-eight percent of the lottery's take — some $197 million — was paid out in prizes. According to a survey by the Public Gaming Research Institute, Massachusetts has the highest rate of payback among the various lotteries in the country.

Fourteen percent went to run the lottery. The remaining 28 percent — $100.3 million — was distributed to the state's 351 cities and towns, with most of the state's mid-sized cities and towns receiving payments in six figures.

David Ellis, a spokesman for the lottery commission, said the high payoff was set to meet competition from illegal gambling.

But law enforcement officials say the state's lotteries are not beating the mob at its own game.

"No substantial impact," said Jeremiah O'Sullivan, the head of the Justice Department's Organized Crime Unit in Boston. O'Sullivan says anyone who thinks the lottery will put the rackets out of business "is being disingenuous at best."

FOCUS

Taking It to the Street

It was 111 years ago today that those famous cable cars began to make the daily "climb halfway to the stars" up the hills of downtown San Francisco. The cars returned to San Francisco recently, after a 20-month absence for overhaul. Thousands of people, including these hula girls, recently converged on Powell Street to welcome the cars back. The cables that pull these cars were originally steam powered. Cable cars preceded electric street cars by 15 years.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the Mayor of San Francisco?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Russian novelist (and vegetarian) Leo Tolstoy wrote "War and Peace."

Copter Crashes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A helicopter based on a U.S. Navy-chartered ship crashed into the Gulf of Suez off the coast of Egypt, but the four crewmen were rescued, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Ed Bernier, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Cairo, said the crash apparently was caused by head winds while the chopper was on a supply mission.

Bernier identified the chopper's mother ship as the Harkness, a civilian ship with a civilian crew on charter to the Navy. He said the vessel was doing survey work for Egypt's Suez Canal Authority.

Federal Strike

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — About 40,000 federal employees demanding higher pay have gone on strike, shutting down federal government offices, the court system and hospitals and clinics in the interior of the country.

The strike follows a 72-hour walkout last week which failed to win concessions from the government.

The employees, including health workers, court employees, judges and telephone operators, want wage increases of at least 100 percent. Judges say they earn only $130 a month, while a policeman is paid $157.

Brother Held

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The younger brother of Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams is being held on bomb and gun charges, a police source reports.

The source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Dominic Adams, 19, was arrested with two other men in Belfast's Ormeau Road district last week.

The source said a police patrol found a bomb and a handgun in a garden near where the three men were picked up.

Slow Progress In Comeback Of Rare Eagle

CINCINNATI (AP) — Government, state and private specialists are teaming to try and help the endangered American bald eagle make a comeback from man's encroachment — but progress comes slowly.

The specialists are primarily using two methods to encourage eagles to reproduce. In one, eaglets hatched by a mated pair are placed in wild nests occupied by adult eagles, in hopes that foster parents will rear the young.

In the other approach, eagle chicks are placed in a "hacking" tower in the wild, where they are fed by man and encouraged to eventually take to the wild to forage for themselves. Wild eagles feed on fish and waterfowl.

The Cincinnati Zoo, Columbus Zoo and Cleveland Museum of Natural History are conducting eagle breeding programs in cooperation with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Ohio Department of Natural Resources. But progress comes slowly because eagles do not easily breed in captivity, said Ed Maruska, director of the Cincinnati Zoo.

Maruska got his zoo involved after he attended a 1977 symposium at the Cleveland Museum of Natural History on bald-eagle breeding. The museum urged captive breeding of the birds to save them from extinction.

The Cleveland museum hatched an eaglet in April from a mated pair. On April 13, two chicks from a 30-year-old female eagle named Betsy Ross were hatched at the Cincinnati Zoo. The new eaglets were scheduled to be released into the wild in Ohio, zoo officials said.

It was the fourth successful hatching for Betsy and her partner, Brookfield Baldy, on loan from Brookfield Zoo in Chicago. In 1979, another eaglet from Betsy Ross was released into the wild at a hacking tower in northern Ohio.

"That, to our knowledge, was a successful venture," Maruska said.

But there have been numerous failures. The Cincinnati Zoo program was plagued in its early stages by infertile eggs and by adult eagles which did not seem to know how to care for their young.

Cincinnati Zoo officials are themselves learning about eagles simply by observing the feats of Betsy Ross, who was brought to Cincinnati years ago from the National Zoo in Washington. Before her most recent achievement as a mother, keepers had worried that she was too old to play the role again.

"We were quite concerned, but she came through with flying colors," zoo curator Robert Lotshaw said.

She Earned BA Degree, Took Career As A Farmer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Mary Alice Hopkins' family never had to worry about how they were going to keep her down on the farm.

When she was a sophomore in college, Ms. Hopkins, like many her age, was thinking about a career.

Her decision had little to do with the degree she earned from the University of South Carolina in 1981 — a bachelor's degree in history, with honors. She chose instead to follow in the family business and took up farming in the Hopkins community.

Now 23, Ms. Hopkins is still enthusiastic about her decision.

"I have always liked farming and working outside," she said. "I can't imagine ever doing anything else."

Ms. Hopkins and her father, Marion Hopkins, farm more than 325 acres. Some of the land was purchased as early as 1750 by Hopkins' great-great grandfather, John Hopkins, and much of the land surrounds the Hopkins family home, where Marion Hopkins lived with his parents, Thomas David and Catherine Palmer Hopkins, and six brothers and one sister.

Hopkins, who graduated from Clemson University in 1960 with a bachelor's degree in agriculture, was the only member of his family to take up farming professionally.

With the help of his wife, Peggy, his brothers, and a used tractor, he farmed part-time while he worked as a foreman for Edisto Dairy.

After nine years, the farming finally won out.

"I love farming and have not regretted quitting my job," he said. "I have been farming now for more than 20 years and have enjoyed it. I like the freedom of working for myself."

"It is hard work. Sometimes we are in the fields from early morning to long after dark — maybe seven days a week."

Crops of soybeans, corn, wheat and oats are a source of financial support for the family, but "it is not something you do for money," Hopkins said.

Mary Alice is also dedicated to her work.

A group of about 30 pigs belongs to Ms. Hopkins, who started raising them last year. Her dog, Butch, is quite taken with the pigs and helps by pulling the cart of feed to their pen each day.

Hopkins once raised pigs, and he admits there were times when income from the farm animals helped pay the bills. That would not be unusual for a farm the size of the Hopkinses' — an average one according to statistics from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Sam Reeves, who keeps statistics on crops and livestock with the USDA, noted that an average farm is 224 acres.

Gross income on an average farm is $40,000, and operating expenses amount to $36,000. Although this would leave a cash profit of $4,000, Reeves said that figure could be deceiving. The worth of land and equipment also must be taken into account.

Although the size of the Hopkinses' farm may be average, Ms. Hopkins' active participation in its operation is not. According to Reeves, only 7 percent of farms have women in the tractor's seat.

It's a tough business. In recent years, many farmers have been forced to sell their land and equipment because of declining profits and high interest rates.

But the Hopkinses have been able to survive and have been rather successful with their crops. They sell their corn to several milling companies including Allen Brothers, Gold Kist Grains and Columbia FCX.

Hopkins stressed that it is important to have "good money management." A lot of farmers fail because they are not able to manage their money properly, he said.

Another thing that can cause a farmer to fail is the high cost of repairing farm machinery. Hopkins reduces that cost by making his own repairs.

Ms. Hopkins falls a bit short in this phase of the business, Hopkins said, but she is learning. She also is learning more about the basic techniques of agriculture.

Ms. Hopkins is aware that there will be more demands on her time after she is married in September. But she is confident that she will not have any problems in balancing her time between her job and married life.

She does plan to take some time off when she is ready to start a family, but not for very long.

"I may have to cut down on the amount of time I spend in the fields," she said, "but I will never stop farming altogether."

James Mason Funeral Held

VEVEY, Switzerland (AP) — About 100 mourners attended a funeral Tuesday in All Saints English Church for British-born film star James Mason.

The actor, whose career spanned almost 50 years and over 100 films, died last week at age 75. His body was to be cremated, family members said, adding it had not been decided whether the ashes would remain near the village of Corseaux where Mason lived for 22 years.

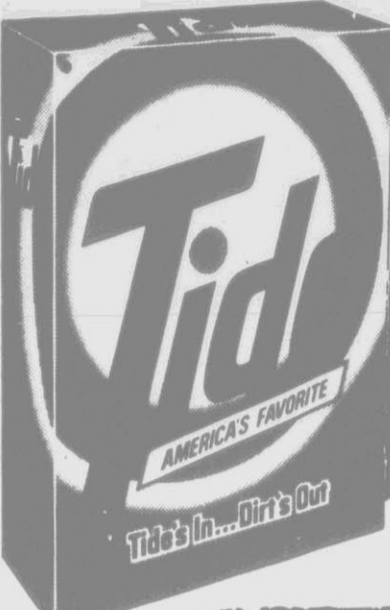

Mason's wife, Clarissa, wept as she greeted mourners leaving the small, stone church where the Rev. Alex Ross spoke of "the loss of a great man."

Mason's daughter Portland, from his first marriage to Pamela Kellino, also attended the service.

"We thank God for the life of James Mason," Ross said in a prayer. "We thank God for the joy and happiness he brought to millions. We thank God for his dedications, and for his joy and happiness."

Mason's wooden, brass-embossed casket was decked with yellow roses, and a white satin sash with gold lettering saying "For my beloved James, from your devoted Clarissa."

Mason was born in Huddersfield, England. He gave up work as an architect to act, beginning his screen career in 1935. He was nominated three times for an Academy Award.

Opening lead: King of ♥.

We have often said aces were made to capture kings—a player who refuses to do so might later be held accountable for his actions. But there is a time when holding back an ace might not only be wise; it might be vital to a successful campaign.

North had just enough to raise to game. His partner, at this vulnerability, promised seven tricks, and he had three, in addition to trump support.

West led the king of hearts, captured by the ace in dummy. Declarer stuffed a heart on the king of clubs, and a case could be made for an immediate diamond finesse. However, declarer feared the possibility of a diamond ruff, and he could afford to lose two diamond tricks as long as trump split 2-1. So he led a trump, and East dealt him a mortal blow by sluffing a diamond.

Fortunately, West came to declarer's aid by capturing the king of trumps with the ace. Now he found he had no safe return. (If West led a diamond and got a ruff, he would sacrifice his trump trick; a heart would set up the 10 for a later discard.) His only exit card was a club, but declarer, reading the hand perfectly, took full advantage of this unexpected entry to dummy.

He led the jack of diamonds. East did the best he could by rising with the ace and forcing declarer with a club. Declarer countered neatly by exiting with a low trump, conceding a trick to the jack. After ruffing the club return high, declarer got back to the board with the eight of trumps and successfully finessed East for the queen of diamonds. Making four-odd.

See the difference if West holds up the ace of trumps. Declarer can throw him in with a trump, but West can cash the last trump and exit with the queen of hearts or a club. Now declarer must lose two diamond tricks for down one.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Country Music Traces Its Soul To The South

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Country music may have gained a national audience in recent years, but some people who have studied it say the music has a Southern soul.

John Reed, who teaches a course on the Sociology of the South at the University of North Carolina, is one of those. The course, he said, teaches students how Southern culture differs from that in other parts of the United States. And he uses country music in the class.

"I really rely more on Gallup Poll data to prove the point, but then to illustrate it, I use country music," he said.

Reed has found three themes in country music: Localism, violence and religion.

"Violence is quite common," Reed said. But unlike in other forms of music, the violence "is provoked. The person who does the shooting thinks he's entitled."

Violence in country music also is usually aimed at someone the person knows, Reed said. And that, he said, is true of the South.

"Southern homicide rates are higher, entirely due to the fact that hot-blooded homicide that grows out of dispute or argument is more common," he said. "They're family murders, murders that grow out of arguments."

Religion also plays a large part in country music, he said. Like the violence, "it's just there and taken for granted," he said. Both are usually "just part of the story and not the point."

What Melton McLaurin sees in country music these days is an "an emergence of a sort of pride in being southern." McLaurin is a member of the history department at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and teaches a course on the New South.

The change is evident if you look at descriptions of the South in country music in the past 40 years, McLaurin said.

"Originally, it was a quaint place, loveable, but clearly a backwater," he said. Tennessee Ernie Ford sang those songs in 1940s and 1950s, he said.

Then in the 1960s, country music performers saw the South "as a place people had to leave for economic reasons," he said.

McLaurin cited "Detroit City" by Bobby Bare and "Appalachian Memories" by Dolly Parton as perfect examples of this feeling.

But then in the late 1960s and 1970s, country music became "militantly pro-Southern" he said. Songs like Loretta Lynn's "Coal Miner's Daughter" "recall the deprivation of living in the South, but acknowledge the heritage with pride," he said.

He also listed songs like Hank Williams Jr.'s "If Heaven Ain't A Lot Like Dixie, Then I Don't Want To Go," and Charlie Daniels' "The South's Gonna Do It," as "new New South songs, prideful songs."

Localism, or a sense of place, is very strong in country music, Reed said. Both Reed and McLaurin said many of the songs are about people who want to be back in the South — "return songs," McLaurin calls them.

"If you listen to country music, you'd be astonished by two things," Reed said. "A great many songs are about places, somebody wants to be someplace else, generally home. The other thing is that a great many songs are set someplace specifically. You don't find that much in popular music."

Raymond Rodgers in the Department of Speech Communication at North Carolina State University has noticed the same thing.

Rodgers did a study a few years ago on the redneck in country music. And what he found was that "rednecks reside in and prefer the South to all other regions of the country," he said.

"When a non-Southern place is mentioned, it always has negative characteristics."

But rednecks who somehow find themselves in the North always want to get out, he said. A perfect example, Rodgers said, is Bare's "Redneck-Hippie Romance," in which a redneck and a hippie get a divorce and he advises her to go back to the North and he'll stay in the South.

"They have a real aversion to out-migration," he said. "There's the melancholy of wanting to be back in the South."

Rodgers said there's a hypothesis that people expose themselves to messages that support their own beliefs.

"If that's true, you ought to be able to look at the most popular country song and get some sort of index of their value system," Rodgers said of Southerners.

But Reed was willing to take his conclusion a step further.

"I'd be willing to say they (Southerners) are more attached to particular places on the average," he said. "In some respects, they're more violent, they're more ready to be violent. And religion is more a taken-for-granted part of Southern life. It's still the normal thing to do on Sunday."

Yankee Boats Now Targets Of Searchers

NEW JOHNSONVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Confederate General Nathan Bedford Forrest left the Tennessee River bottom littered with Yankee boats 120 years ago, and now archeologists want to find the sunken vessels and perhaps raise one of them.

"This is a chance to study western, or what they called western back then, riverboat technology," said John Coverdale, the Tennessee Valley Authority archeologist who has been diving in the muddy river to find the sunken boats.

The wreckage of four gunboats, 14 transports and 20 barges lies on the river bottom between New Johnsonville and Paris Landing.

They sank during a wild battle between Union and Confederate troops in 1864.

The wily Forrest was assigned the job of cutting off supplies to Yankee Gen. William T. Sherman, who was about to begin his March through Georgia.

Forrest placed the few cannons he had along the Tennessee River bank and waited for the Union steamers to fall into his trap.

Later, Sherman reported to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant:

"That devil Forrest was down about Johnsonville, making havoc among the gunboats and transports."

The Confederate artillerymen would allow the Union vessels to pass their first battery, then when the enemy boats came into range of the second, they would open fire.

When the Union crews tried to escape by turning around, the first battery of cannon would announce its presence with a blast of iron shot.

During the fighting, Forrest's artillerymen damaged three Yankee gunboats and captured them with guns intact. A fourth gunboat was sunk by cannon fire.

Forrest hastily recommissioned the gunboats into the Confederate fleet, manned them with his cavalymen and sent the vessels into battle against their former owners.

That expedition failed, however, when Forrest's "Horse Marines" were outmaneuvered by the Federal sailors, and the Confederates were forced to abandon and burn their little river fleet.

Despite that setback, Forrest was able to report that he captured or destroyed some $6.7 million worth of blankets, food, uniforms, ammunition, shoes and other property that had been intended for Sherman's troops.

Now, because of the historical and technical interest, the Tennessee Valley Authority wants to locate the wreckage of the boats sunk during the 1864 battle.

"Very little is known about western riverboat technology," said Bennett Graham, the TVA's chief archeologist. "We have photographs and descriptions, but we really don't know that much about them."

To historians and archeologists, the boats are important because they played a major role in the development of the Western river system. They were also a key factor in the Union victory during the War Between the States.

For several months, Coverdale and a small team of divers has been using a magnetometer to "map" the 30-mile stretch of the Tennessee between New Johnsonville and the Kentucky border.

The magnetometer detects changes in the magnetic field of the earth, enabling the searchers to locate metal objects such as boilers and anchor chains.

Graham and Coverdale say the sunken vessels were stripped by U.S. Navy salvage crews long before construction of Kentucky Dam created the reservoir that now covers most of the area.

"We know that there are no cannons left down there," Graham said. "There wasn't a lot of material goods left on the boats."

In recent months, the TVA crew headed by Coverdale has been trying to find as many wrecks as possible.

They have found a few sunken boats, Coverdale said, but their work has been hampered by poor visibility 50 feet below the surface.

"The visibility is zero to six inches at the maximum," he said.

One of the vessels the TVA crew has located is believed to be the Mizeppa, a steamboat that was loaded with blankets, food and shoes that eventually helped to re-equip Forrest's troops.

Eventually, Coverdale said, the TVA would like to recover at least one of the sunken boats.

"We don't really have a record of western riverboat technology," he said. "We know that these boats were badly damaged before they were sunk, but there might be enough there to help us."

Coverdale said, however, that time and the river also have aggravated the damage done by Forrest's gunners.

"We know that every year that goes by, adds to the destruction," he said. "At this point we really don't know whether there's anything worth bringing up."

'Macbeth' In New Setting

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — Martin Platt, artistic director of the Alabama Shakespeare Festival, has generally taken an orthodox but lively approach to classical theater. Now he has placed "Macbeth" in a World War I setting.

The play, he said, can be more unsettling with murder discussed in the shadows of a cocktail party, instead of a tribal banquet "where everybody's throwing chicken bones around."

And, he said, "the point the production is making is this isn't something just 17th century people were doing. It's the same political chicanery and coldbloodedness that goes on in the corporate world or government today."

The play was presented as the festival, which runs a month, opened July 21.

Much as Platt is taking a different approach to Shakespeare, this is a transitional time for the festival. In little more than a decade, it has grown from a shoestring operation at Anniston, funded by a $500 loan from his mother, to a projected $3.6 million urban enterprise in Montgomery, where it is to locate next year.

Platt, 35, remains cool in the heat of production. A half dozen messages on his desk about his new "Macbeth" provoke the nearest thing to resentment in him.

"If people only understood that in Shakespeare's time they wore the same costumes for "Macbeth" that they did for "Midsummer Night's Dream," and that was fancy dress clothes," he said. "Playing 'Macbeth' in fur and leather was a 19th Century idea."

This year's Macbeth marks something of a watershed for Platt, whose conservative approach to Shakespeare — play it straight and keep it lively — has helped build a taste for classical theater in the region.

He has let his whimsy run a bit in the past, directing a rock-musical version of "As You Like It" and giving a champagne-bubble Noel Coward setting to "Love's Labour's Lost" a few years ago. But this "Macbeth" is his first less-than-orthodox treatment of a tragedy.

The risks, he said, are really not that great — no lines have been changed, there are few cuts and the message of the play has been left intact.

Platt's concept of the Macbeth character also breaks with tradition. Instead of the traditional "big, burly guy with a rather negative personality," he sought out an actor who would bring some humor and vulnerability to the role. His casting agent found Jack Wetherall of Stratford, Ontario.

"I didn't want someone who is the personification of evil, because then there's no struggle," Platt said.

Platt leaves the actors with freedom to experiment and refine within the scaffolding he has built. During rehearsals, he does little more than nudge and prod. Instead of rehearsing one scene to death, he prefers to run through an entire play as often as possible, as early as possible on the main stage, until the production hums.

"Martin pushes for the actor to play it 'on the lines,'" said veteran actor Charlie Antalosky, "that is, play the moment and don't indulge in those long pauses when the actor is having a great time but nothing is happening. In Shakespeare, the characters say what they mean, or else they tell you beforehand that they don't. This isn't Ibsen or Chekhov."

Platt came to Anniston in 1971 as director of the community theater on the advice of a teacher of his at Carnegie Tech, Don Marie, who had the job here back in the 1930s. After two years, Platt began to contemplate a summer festival.

The region was ripe for one, he felt. Regional theaters were already flourishing in the Northeast, Pacific Northwest and Midwest. In Anniston, a new high school was built with a deluxe theater.

The first season, Platt rounded up some friends from college and actors who answered a trade advertisement. Willing to play Shakespeare in Alabama for free? "Miraculously, they came," he said.

Each succeeding year, Platt's ambitions rose and more people arrived to see the productions.

"We've grown organically," he said. "I don't think it could have happened anywhere else, certainly not in Birmingham. There's too much else going on there. To go to a major urban area, you have to be a major arts organization. Now we are."

The festival's new $15 million house in Montgomery is projected to open in December 1985.

"It's what I dreamed to do with my life in the theater," Platt said. "We will have a resident acting company, many of them will stay there 52 weeks a year. And the joy will be exploring the plays that mean something to you, and never having to do ones that don't."

La. Dredging Is Creating Controversy On Permits

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Shells have been dredged from Louisiana's lakes and shoreline for 70 years, but the last two years have brought unprecedented attacks on the multimillion dollar business. Gov. Edwin W. Edwards and the state Legislature have called for a moratorium on new dredging permits. And two major lawsuits have challenged a 1982 Army Corps of Engineers decision to renew five-year permits for a half-dozen dredging companies. Environmentalists say dredging companies should have been forced to make a thorough study of what dredging does to plants and animals in the lakes and coastal areas. Joined by Louisiana Attorney General William J. Guste Jr., four environmental groups and a fisherman's association sued the Corps in 1983 in an attempt to force it to complete such a study. They base their arguments by comparing a recent study by Walter Sikora, a biologist with the Louisiana State University Wetlands Research Center, with one made 30 years ago by Texas A&M marine biologist Reznat Darnell. But biologists with the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries and dredging industry officials say that work is incomplete, compared to long-term studies by state biologists and others. Corps officials, who have until Aug. 8 to reconsider the decision not to complete a full environmental impact statement, will not comment while the case is in court. At stake are the organisms that are food for Louisiana's shrimp, crabs and fish, hundreds of jobs in shell dredging and associated industries, and millions of dollars in royalties paid to the state. Industry officials say shells are the best material for dozens of jobs, from road material to chickenfeed. And they point to a 1983 study by Tulane University economist Kenneth J. Boudreaux. He said the shell industry generated approximately $400 million in direct and indirect revenues in Louisiana, including $8.7 million in payroll expenses and $1.9 million in royalties to the state. Jim Lestelle, a spokesman for Radcliffe Materials Inc., said shells are much better than limestone for building roads, because their shape lets them pack together more densely. "After a certain amount of time, they interlock and cement to each other," he said. Shells also are used to make lime, as a source of calcium in chicken feed, for acid neutralization and water purification, in petrochemical production processes, in filters to remove sulphur dioxide from smokestack emissions, in pharmaceuticals and for seeding oyster beds. Besides, there's nowhere to get limestone within Louisiana, so revenue now going to the in-state shell industry would leave the state if dredging stops, and industries would have to pay 50 to 100 percent more, the dredgers say. But environmentalists say shells can be replaced. Properly built raised roads could be cheaper in the long run than shell roads, said Joan Phillips, a member of the Orleans Sierra Club and the Louisiana Coastal Commission, which acts as an appeals board for the state Department of Natural Resources on coastal issues. She said continued dredging may cost the state more fishing jobs than the number of jobs that would be lost if dredging stops. "As you look at the situation, you have to look at the limestone industry," she said. "People have to barge in limestone and there are jobs there." But Don Lalande, owner of Lalande Towing Co. of New Iberia, told the Coastal Commission during a 1983 hearing that shutting down the shell industry would be unfair to dredge workers. "I think it's a little harsh for someone to tell my people that work for me that this industry is going to shut down, and you can get mining jobs in Arkansas and Kentucky and Illinois," Lalande said. But most of the argument is over dredging's environmental impact. Sikora, whose shell dredging study helped spark the new controversy, said he couldn't get more than two years' worth of money from the Corps because people didn't want to know the environmental costs. "Nobody there was really interested in finding out any more," he said. "Our study was the most comprehensive one done on clamshell dredging anywhere in the world." Sikora said a Gulf Coast Research Institute study — used by the shell industry to support its position — was based on six days of sampling during one month. "That's ludicrous, ecologically," he said. Sikora studied two areas of lake bottom within a mile-wide zone along the Lake Pontchartrain Causeway that has been protected from dredging by state regulations. One area was left alone during the test dredging, while the second was dredged continuously.

Minority Supplier Councils Growing

By TOM MINEHART
 Associated Press Writer
 CHARLOTTE (AP) — Carolinas Minority Supplier Development Councils have been so successful elsewhere in North Carolina and South Carolina that a satellite council is planned for Asheville, officials say.

"People in that area were interested in having a council, and it was such a long distance to Charlotte that they wanted one in their city," said Jennifer Phillips, fiscal officer for the councils' headquarters in Charlotte.

Currently, there are three such councils in each state bringing together minority-owned supply firms and corporations who need their products or services, said councils director Gretchen Johnson. The councils have certified 320 minority suppliers and have 127 member corporations.

The corporations pay $200 in dues each year. When they need a certain product or service and want to give business to a minority-owned firm, they call the councils.

Vendors apply for certification as a minority-owned business. To be approved, a business must be 51 percent owned and controlled by blacks, Indians, Eskimos, Aleuts, orientals, Hispanics, Hasidic Jews, Pacific Asians or Asian Indians, said Ms. Johnson.

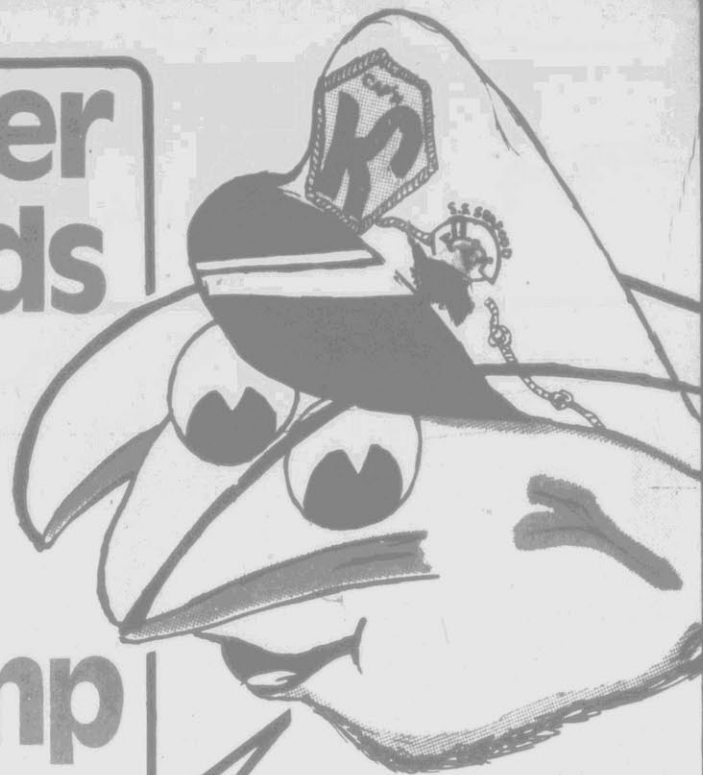

The councils publish a buyer and vendor guides, provide vendor referrals, hold an annual trade fair, conduct buyer seminars and hold sales training programs, she said. "We solicit members," she said. "Each council encourages other major corporations to become a member of the council."

Vendors aided by the councils range from janitorial services to legal firms, said Ms. Johnson.

The councils form a national network with 45 across the United States, she said. They are funded through the U.S. Department of Commerce and the private sector.

In North Carolina, the councils are the Piedmont Council, serving Raleigh and Durham; the Triad Council, serving Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point; and the Metrolina Council, serving the Charlotte area. South Carolina has the Midlands Council, serving the Columbia area; the Greenville-based Foothills Council and the Charleston-based Coastal Council.

Our Low Payment Plan offers you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to five years at competitive rates. The result is a very low monthly payment that fits comfortably into your family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. Just look for the above symbol on selected items in our ads. And, where space is available, we'll also provide the specific credit details on selected items to give you an idea of the relative size of monthly payments and Annual Percentage Rates. Low Payment Credit Terms are outlined below. So apply today. You may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit when you present your Visa, American Express, MasterCard, Sears or Lowe's card!

Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms

The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4%. If sales tax differs in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges are excluded.

We Also Accept Visa, American Express & MasterCard.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
