Gasoline Prices Set Topsy-Turvy Pattern

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Have you noticed that some gasoline prices in Greenville are lower now than they have been in recent months? Do you wonder if the prices will continue to decline?

One oil jobber last week suggested that "if you ask 10 people" if the price of gas will continue to decline or will go up again, "you'll get 10 different answers. I don't know."

A survey showed the self-service price for regular gas ranged from 97.9 cents a gallon to $1.079 in the Greenville area at week's end.

Billl Wheless, spokesman for Shell distributor Quality Oil Co., said gas prices "have been coming down slightly ... over the past few weeks," but he doesn't know if the decline will continue.

Pump prices at local Shell stations, he said, are "running from $1.03 to $1.05" with one running $1.02.

Prices at Gulf outlets "run most anything," Walker Allen of W.L. Allen Oil Co. suggested.

"The dealer himself sets and controls prices" at Gulf service stations. "We sell to the station and they set the price for resale." But he said regular gas at most Gulf stations in the Greenville area ranges in price from $1.059 to $1.069.

Predicting the ups and downs: "It's like taking a dart and throwing it up," Allen suggested.

However, he said "it's unusual for gas prices to fall in the summertime like they have this year. It's not the norm.

"My guess is it (prices) will not go up anytime soon," suggesting that the trend it toward "stable" or "somewhat downward" prices.

Allen also said that "Greenville is much below surrounding areas" as far as the price of gasoline is concerned. In fact "retail prices are less than cost in most cases" at Greenville area stations.

A spokesman for one of Allen's customers, Barnes Gulf Service on Memorial Drive, said self service regular at that station was $1.069 on Friday. "It costs us near the price we are selling it for."

Predicting —"I think it will go down ... I hope so," the spokesman noted that "major brands are the last ones to drop."

A spokesman for another station, Plaza Gulf, which purchases directly from Gulf, said that station's price Friday was $1.079, just "1½ cents a gallon over what it costs us."

But the spokesman said sales at the Greenville Boulevard station are still good even though other brands in the area are selling regular for 97.9 to 99.9 cents a gallon.

Regular gas at The Dodge Store on Memorial Drive was selling at 97.9 cents a gallon last week, where a spokesman said that price had been "off and on now going on a couple of weeks."

Etna service stations in the area were selling regular gasoline for 99.9 cents a gallon, a price that has been in effect for several weeks now.

But Clayton Gray, manager of the Etna station on Memorial Drive suggested the 99.9 cents a gallon price is "... a break-even deal with us," at best.

Gray , citing the unpredictability of gas prices, said "if it goes down, we'll be losing money. There is no way to do it (cut prices) and not lose. The only thing I can forsee is the price of gasoline has to go up.

Although the 99.9 cents might be considered a good price for regular fuel, "my volume (of sales) remains about the same," no matter what prices at other stations are, Gray said. "We depend on local people who seem to stick with me, up or down."

The Citgo stations on Dickinson Avenue were also selling regular gas for 99.9 cents a gallon at week's end, down from Wednesday's price of $1.029.

"We're selling it practically at cost, Leon Moore of Leon L. Moore Oil Co., the Citgo distributor, said.

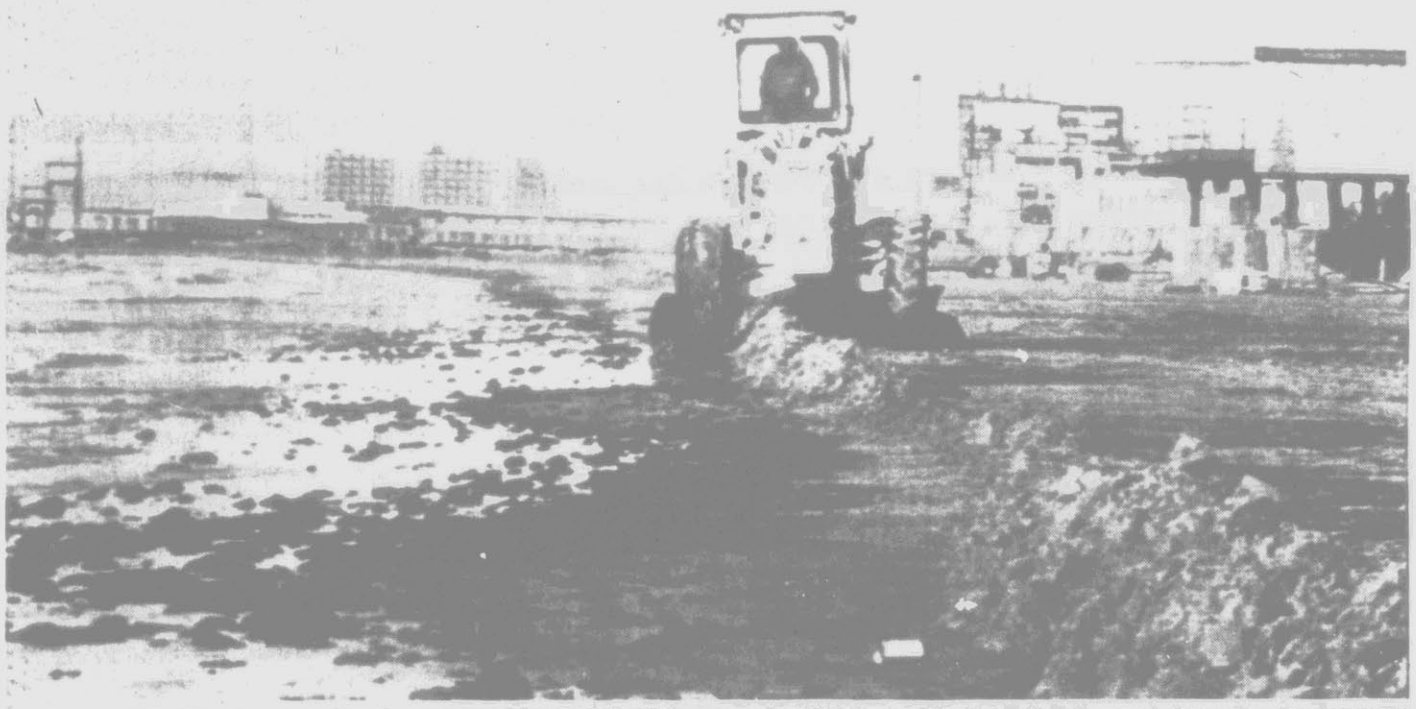
"There's a glut in the market now, but it can't continue. I think by September, you're going to see the prices start going up. Nobody is making any money. All you're doing is swapping a dollar for a dollar.

"I think we'll see these prices begin to rise in September," although "they may go down some more before then," Moore said.

At weeks's end, the price for self-service regular at Sav-A-Ton on Greenville Boulevard was 97.9 cents.

Tom Carawan at Carawan Oil Co., said prices at area Exxon stations are "all different," and calls to several confirmed variations.

Curley's Exxon on Memorial Drive and Corey's Exxon on East Tenth Street were selling regular at $1.019 Friday, while Briley's Exxon at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenville Boulevard, the price was 99.9 cents. At Fleming's Exxon, on Dickinson Avenue at the Tenth Street intersection, regular was $1.089.



CLEANING THE BEACH — A road grader scrapes oil from a Galveston, Texas, beach Saturday after globs of oil from a spill in the Gulf of Mexico washed ashore. The oil apparently missed the environamentally sensitive marshes of Galveston Bay but pollutted more than 50 miles of beaches. The oil came from a grounded tanker in the gulf. (AP Laserphoto)

Oil Globs Hit Texas Coast

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Bulldozers and other earth-moving equipment displaced bathers and beach umbrellas Saturday as this tourist mecca worked to clean up beaches covered with a "sickening" thick goo from a massive Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

But the worst of the spill, which occurred after a tanker ran aground, was expected to be over by Saturday night, the Coast Guard said.

"It looks like by tonight it will all be ashore," Coast Guard spokesman Jim Kosch said Saturday afternoon from Port Arthur. "The anticipation is over, now all that's left is hard work."

He said authorities had received no reports of dead fish, birds or other animals on the beach.

Cost of the beach cleanup was estimated at as much as $13 million. But the first waves of oil missed environmentally sensitive marshes inside Galveston Bay.

"It's a pitiful thing," Vincent Kennison, 49, said as he maneuvered his grader to build a sand dike along Stewart Beach. "We're trying to trap the stuff. Maybe it'll stop coming in, but maybe we'll have to be back."

Others worked to scoop up oil-soaked sand for removal.

There was no estimate of the number of people involved in the cleanup, but Capt. Tim McKinna, commander of the Port Arthur Coast Guard Station, said there were "hundreds."

Other than the workers, few people were on Galveston's usually crowded beaches.

Inmates Take Nine Hostage

BOYDTON, Va. (AP) — Six inmates armed with handmade knives overpowered two guards in a prison recreation area Saturday and then took seven more hostages on a cellblock at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center, site of the largest death row breakout in U.S. history, prison spokesmen said.

By mid-afternoon, the inmates released two guards who had been stabbed, and at 5:30 p.m. issued a list of 15 demands that included "removal of present prison officials," "halt of unjust treatment ... for certain acts" and "more fruit and less pork."

"Right now we have seven people held hostage in Building 5, six correctional officers and a food service worker," said Corrections Department spokesman Wayne Farrar.

"There has been no official threat of any bodily harm," said Jerry Davis, a spokesman for the prison.

Shortly after 8 p.m., Davis said the inmates had told state police negotiators by telephone that no more hostages had been harmed. The negotiators were talking with the inmates from a nearby administration building.

"The situation has stabilized. No one else has been injured, and the hostages at this point are safe," Davis said.

"Prison officials are taking the list of demands into consideration," Davis said. "They are negotiating as much as possible."

The inmates were asking for a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union to come to the prison to act as their spokesman, Davis said.

Judy Goldberg, assistant director of the Virginia ACLU chapter, said Alan Bronstein of the group's National Prison Project was on his way to Mecklenburg.

Throughout the afternoon and evening, a steady stream of guards from other prisons were brought in. Warden Sherman Townley was assisting in the negotiations.

Gov. Charles S. Robb, who was in Minnesota, was alerted shortly after the disturbance and was receiving regular progress reports by telephone, said George Stoddart, a spokesman for the governor.

ECU Has 'Full House' For Fall

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Dormitories at East Carolina University are filled for this fall's session, but due to new apartment complexes in the area, students should be able to find accommodations.

New apartments located near the university cater to students. Such complexes as Ringgold Towers, Captain's Quarters, Kings Arms and Pirates Landing are within walking distance of the campus and downtown areas. Developers believe the location of the apartments make the housing attractive to students. Many of the new complexes will be completed in time for the Aug. 21 start of the fall semester.

Dan Wooten, director of housing operations at ECU, said residence halls on campus are filled and there is a waiting list for men. The housing department is currently assigning temporary third-person situations in the dormitories.

"It is customary to assign around 90 women and approximately 60 men, a total of 150 students, in a temporary situation," Wooten said. "The reason we do this is to accommodate more people. Because of the no-shows and withdrawls, we are usually able to relocate these people (who are tripled in a room) in three to four weeks in a normal semi-private room."

Wooten said 75 male students have been assigned in temporary third-person situations at this time. "We still have a few openings for women," he added.

Wooten said that at one time, the underclassmen at the university were required to live on campus. "The policy was dropped three or four years ago, and no students are required to live on campus now," he said.

"It is hard to say who wants to live where, but it looks like a good balance" of students who want to live on campus and those who want to live off campus, Wooten said. "We have been able to accommodate everyone who wants to live in residence halls except about 50 men who are on the waiting list and we hope to accommodate them because of cancellations before school opens.

"It is my opinion that the price of dorm rents attract students," Wooten said. Dormitory rent currently is $445 per semester.

Students already are moving into one of the new apartment complexes, Captain's Quarters Apartments on East 12th Street. Ann Davis of Miller and Davis Associates said the apartments are ready for occupancy at this time.

"The apartments are over half-full," she said. "Twenty-seven units have been rented.

"We have had a lot of response," Mrs. Miller said. "All the kids have really been excited who have been coming in to rent them."

Mrs. Miller said she thinks the apartments' promixity to downtown and the university, and the fact that the housing is within walking distance of drycleaners, restaurants and a grocery store, has contributed to the rentals.

She said the units rent for $230 per month.

Amy Adams of Pirates Landing Apartments on Reade Circle said the complex is "filling up faster than we had any idea. We have about 14 units left to rent."

She said that the furnished apartments rent for $170 per month, which includes utilities.

Ms. Adams said 90 percent of the apartments have been rented to students, most of whom are upperclassmen.

"The proximity to campus and downtown have helped in renting the apartments," she stated. "Students know they don't have to drive anyplace when they are living here.

"Also, here the student can have a private room, rather than sharing a room with someone in the dorm," she added.

Tornado Indicates Preparation Needed

By The Associated Press

Killer tornadoes which swept through North Carolina in March tested the state's emergency preparedness, and according to a report by the National Weather Service parent agency, it didn't score well.

On the night of March 28, 15 tornadoes ravaged North Carolina, leaving 44 dead, 801 injured and 2,279 homeless. Property damage was estimated at $200 million.

The report by the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration notes staff shortages, outmoded radar and a lack of a network of storm spotters which it says hurt North Carolina's preparedness.

It does not say whether lives could have been saved with the precautions.

"That's a difficult question, and I hate to speculate what might have happened," said Joe Pelissier, the second-ranking meteorologist at the forecast office, located at the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The 24-page report said the Raleigh National Weather Service office "has carried critical vacancies for prolonged periods. It does not have a dedicated warningpreparedness meteorologist and never had one."

Jim Campbell, an emergency warnings meteorologist who helped prepare the report admitted that "in retrospect, more could have been done to prepare. But it's impossible to say if more lives could have been saved."

From 1980 to 1984, Raleigh has had at least one vacant position, and about 40 percent of the time there were two or more vacancies, the report said.

The Raleigh office was responsible for issuing severe storm and tornado warnings for 10 of 15 North Carolina counties in the path of the storms.

The office was also responsible for issuing weather statements for Wilmington, where telephones lines went down during the storm, limiting that office's capabilities.

National Weather Service officials issued 15 severe thunderstorm warnings on March 28 for North Carolina, most coming 10 to 15 minutes in advance of the storms.

Six tornado warnings were issued, "but many not sufficiently early to provide useful advance warning," the report said.

Warnings were not issued until after the tornadoes had struck several North Carolina counties. The warnings came 10 minutes late in Bertie and Duplin, 20 minutes late in Lenoir, 30 minutes late in Pitt, 35

Students Return To ECU Aug. 19

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Between the 19th and 23 of August, the population of Greenville will jump an estimated 13,400, as students begin arriving for East Carolina University's 1984 fall session. Traditionally, those first few days have been hectic for students and Greenville residents alike. This year probably will not be an exeception.

The biggest problem students and residents will have to deal with is parking, according to Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes. "Come the middle of August, residential parking spaces that stood vacant this summer will be filled to capacity," he explained.

He added that there really is not much that can be done about the parking problem. "The kids need a place to park, but so do the homeowners, and since there just aren't enough spaces to go around there is going to be some conflict for a while."

"It's really worse at the beginning, when the students are just moving in," he said, "but the problems never really last once the residents and students readjust."

Dorms open Sunday, Aug. 19, registration will be held Aug. 21 and classes will begin the 23rd.

The city's street resurfacing project, which could have been a potential deterrent to quick resolution of the parking problems around the university, will pose no problems, according to Tom Tysinger of the city's engineering department.

"We specifically spelled out in the contract that repairs to roads in the university and downtown areas be done before registration day so as to avoid any problems," Tysinger explained. "When we get through with those areas, then we'll move on out to other areas of the city."

Despite what some may think, Holmes said the yearly influx of students does not bring any other major problems. "The incidence of traffic accidents does not appreciably increase, nor does the number of other minor offenses." He estimated that the students increase Greenville's car population by only 7 percent.

Orange Grove Cache Yields $3 Million In Phony Bills

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Authorities have dug up more than $3 million in "superior" quality phony bills buried in an orange grove and other Florida locations and have arrested six people on counterfeiting conspiracy charges.

The arrests were carried out during the past 2½ weeks and the suspects have agreed to plead guilty, Secret Service Agent Richard Foree said Friday.

Authorities found $1.8 million in bogus bills buried in an orange grove near Lakeland and another $1.5 million at 14 locations in the Jacksonville area.

Only $30,000 of the fake currency made it into circulation, Assistant U.S. Attorney Stan Powell of Tampa said.

The counterfeit money was printed during May and June in Lakeland, according to authorities.

The bogus $20, $50 and $100 bills were stuffed in plastic, zip-lock bags and inserted into short plumbing pipes before being buried in both cities, authorities said.

"They (the bills) were superior in quality," Powell said. "Especially the 50s, they were excellent."

The suspects, charged with conspiring to counterfeit and pass and utter counterfeit money.

Foree said the suspects, arrested between July 14 and July 30, have agreed to plead guilty.

They face a maximum sentence of five years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both, if a judge consents to the plea agreements, Powell said.

Authorities were tipped about two weeks ago when managers of a fast-food restaurant called the Pinellas County Sheriff's Department, which alerted the Secret Service, Powell said.

Those arrested were identified as: Esther Wilson, 45, of Highland City; her daughter, Wendy Lee Wilson, 19; Tamela Wilson Hare, 22, of Tampa; Benny Colvino, 40, of Temple Terrace; Michael Balas, 41, of Yulee; and his wife, Paula, 29.

Man Surrenders In Shooting Case

A man sought by the Pitt County sheriff's department in connection with the shooting of Paul Tacket of Route 1, Bethel, surrendered Saturday, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Tyson said Robert Cannon Jr. of Evans Trailer Park No. 2, turned himself in at approximately 5 p.m. Saturday and was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicting serious bodily injury. Bond for those charges was placed at $10,000.

Cannon was accused of shooting Tacket in the left side of his chest with a .357 revolver at a home on N.C. 30, 3½ miles west of Stokes. The shooting, which was reported at 4:50 p.m. Thursday, followed an argument between Tacket and Cannon, officers said. Tacket underwent surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital following the incident and was reported in fair condition Saturday night.

Cannon has also been charged with two counts of hit and run, and careless and reckless driving in connection with an accident that occurred Thursday after the shooting. The Highway Patrol said the 4:45 p.m. Staton Mill Road collision involved cars driven by Cannon, Timmy L. Andrews of Bethel and Shirley Stevenson Whitehurst of Route 2, Robersonville.

Trooper R.E. Backus reported Friday that the Andrews and Whitehurst vehicles were headed north on Staton Mill Road when the Cannon car, which was headed south, crossed the center line and struck the other vehicles. Cannon fled the scene on foot, according to a sheriff's officer.

Backus said officers searched the area until 11 p.m., but could not find Cannon. Bond for charges connected with the traffic accident has also been set at $10,000.

Cannon was scheduled tentatively to appear in District Court Monday.

Stephens Charges Court Setting Law

CHICAGO (AP) — Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens said Saturday that his colleagues on the high court are incorrectly making some sweeping rulings when narrower decisions are enough to resolve the cases.

Stevens, speaking in remarks prepared for delivery at the dedication of a new building at the Northwestern University Law School, said that in several important rulings during the recently concluded term the justices made "enthusiastic attempts to codify the law instead of merely performing the judicial task of deciding the cases."

Stevens noted that members of the court "who are often described as 'conservatives'" took a leading role in this activist approach.

Without mentioning any justices by name, Stevens said, for example, that the court had weakened a 70-year-old rule aimed at deterring police misconduct in a case in which the rule may not even have been applicable.

The July 5 ruling narrowed the so-called "exclusionary rule" to permit evidence seized as the result of defective court warrants to be used at criminal trials.

By a 6-3 margin, the court said when judges make mistakes that violate a defendant's rights, and police acting in good faith reasonably rely on those court actions, the evidence may be admitted.

"The court leaped at the opportunity to promulgate the widely heralded good faith exception to the exclusionary rule without even pausing to consider whether the rule itself was applicable," said Stevens, who was one of three justices in the minority in the case.

Nuclear Sub Providence Is Launched

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The Providence, the Navy's most powerful nuclear-powered attack submarine, was launched Saturday as Attorney General William French Smith said it should be used to "maintain peace in a dangerous world."

"In comparison with other ships of her class, this submarine is quieter, faster and militarily more capable," Smith said in his christening address at the Electric Boat Shipyard.

Smith, whose wife Jean failed in three tries to break a champagne bottle on the 6,900-ton, Tomahawk cruise-missile launching sub, made no reference to two Justice Department investigations of alleged wrongdoing involving the nation's nuclear submarine program.

His department announced Friday it would probe allegations that General Dynamics Corp. gave improper gifts to Adm. Hyman G. Rickover when he was head of the program.

Smith also removed himself more than a month ago from his department's review of the settlement of cost overrun claims filed by Electric Boat's parent company on the submarine contracts.

But Smith did refer to a controversy over naming the submarine for the capital of Rhode Island, where protest groups say the name Providence has religious connotations.

It is the fifth Navy ship and the first submarine to bear the name of the city.

Tornado ...

minutes late in Greene and 45 minutes late in Gates.

Campbell said warnings are not issued until meteorologists are certain the tornadoes have touched down. Issuing too many tornado warnings could lead to a "cry-wolf syndrome," he said.

NOAA investigators found that the radar system at the Raleigh office should be replaced with 10-centimeter Doppler radar that helps identify storms with potential for producing tornadoes.

Raleigh uses 5-centimeter radar, "which was severely attenuated (weakened) by intervening echoes that made it impossible to track tornado-producing supercells," the report said.

The storms hit first in South Carolina, where 16 people died, and the report showed that state had established a storm-spotter network which worked well on March 28.

"The weather offices in South Carolina were remarkably well aware of the potential for severe weather," the report said. "The large number of accurate severe weather statements and warnings issued demonstrated both the quantity and quality of work at all weather offices."

60 Escape Unhurt As Roof Falls In

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — The roof and front wall of a factory collapsed Saturday during a downpour, but the 60 people inside escaped unhurt, authorities said.

About 80,000 square feet of a roof collapsed over a shop area at U.S. Engineering, and inventory worth about $500,000 was buried, said George Karsnak, president of the stamping die company. He said fire investigators told him rain caused the collapse.

Proceeds will be used to support cystic fibrosis centers nationwide, including the Duke CF Satellite Clinic at the East Carolina University School of Medicine. More than $104,000 was raised during last year's telethon.

Ground Is Broken For Fire Building

Ground was broken Friday for a new fire department building for the village of Simpson to replace the one destroyed by the March 28 tornado.

Taking part in the ground breaking, among others, were state Sen. Vernon White, state Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed Warren, Simpson Mayor Galloway Thompson, County Commissioner Bob Martin, Simpson Fire Chief Hyman Boyd and Simpson Mayor Pro Tem Virginia McDonald.

Mrs. McDonald accepted a $5,000 check made out to the Simpson Fire Department and a $2,000 check made out to the village of Simpson. Both were specially legislated relief funds voted by the General Assembly during its special session, Mayor Thompson said. He said the town commissioners have voted to turn over the $2,000 given the town to the fire department.

The fire department has been using a tent loaned by the state to house its firefighting equipment since the tornado.

Work by Pitt County contractor J.H. Hudson is set to begin next week. The building is expected to cost about $83,000. About $68,000 has been donated or raised so far.

Tax Increase Can Provide The Means

A $34.35 million budget was adopted by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners recently which includes an increase of 10 cents per $100 valuation. The tax rate for 1984-85 will be 64 cents.

It is important to remember about this budget that it includes $3 million for school capital improvements. With similar appropriations for the next several years the capital improvements needs of the schools will be financed and there is real hope that a merger plan for the county and city schools systems can be carried out.

Even though no one relishes a tax increase, it is not difficult to see the need for new school buildings to replace temporary classroom units currently being used at several overcrowded county schools. Merger of the two systems is desirable to allow more flexibility in allocating funds where the needs are greatest.

A bond issue to finance the school needs would entail enormous costs in interest payments. It could stretch out the costs of paying for the school improvements for many years.

One school observer has said that with the anticipated additional funding the schools can expect over the next several years, we can have the finest school system in the state.

We agree.

Pitt County Commissioners chairman Bob Martin told his board, in recommending approval of the financing plan, "We ought to go ahead and bite the bullet."

We agree with that, too.

There has been some hard negotiating between the school boards and the County Commissioners concerning merger and financing of school capital improvement needs. We are convinced that the most appropriate method of financing school improvements has been found.

Helms-Hunt Debate A Refreshing Pause

Sen. Jesse Helms and Gov. Jim Hunt were effectively aiming at probably less than a fifth of the registered voters in their celebrated television debate on Monday night.

That is true because the loyal followers of each candidate would not be swayed by this or any other debate, regardless of what the two, who are locked in their bitter campaign for the U.S. Senate seat, had to say. Thus the two men could only hope to reach those voters who have yet to make up their minds on the November U.S. Senate election. That fateful group, if it falls preponderantly for one of the candidates, will decide the election.

Both of these men have been seen on television and quoted in print many times. Nevertheless, this was the face-to-face meeting at which the two would attempt to wither each other.

It wasn't a bad show. Hunt, a master debater, was on the attack which climaxed with his challenge to Jesse Helms to forego any further out-of-state campaign contributions, a challenge which Helms did not take up.

Helms, on the other hand, took his stand on the side of righteousness, frequently maintaining that Gov. Hunt had his facts twisted or did not understand foreign policy.

Who won? Well, it is really not necessary to judge. Obviously each candidate was a winner to his own followers. The undecided group will make judgments based on its subjective feelings and whatever that judgment collectively is, it will have far-reaching ramifications.

It can be said that the debate — and hopefully others will follow — had a refreshing effect in a campaign which has been filled with 30-second television commercials that have tended to leave the public more bewildered than anything else.

Sunday Morning Notes

Frequently there are complaints about finding a place to dine out in the area. Nevertheless there are plenty of places to eat. They range from hamburgers at McDonalds, Hardees, Wendys or Burger King to pizza parlors and short order food places. There is home cooking, seafood and that old standby barbecue. And there is fine dining in the evening at a number of places.

There are many restaurants which offer good food throughout Pitt County. They are too numerous to mention but it illustrates the point that it is easy to find a place to dine.

That is far different from the situation in Greenville in 1944 as the war years wound down. Then most of the restaurants could be found in what is now the downtown area.

The city directory of that time lists two famed ones on Dickinson Avenue. Busy Bee Cafe was located at 903 Dickinson Ave. and Carolina Grill was at 905 Dickinson. Both operated 24 hours a day at various times and served inexpensive food to a populace which was still accustomed to depression prices.

The businesses catered to the tobacco industry people since that industry was centered in the area. Fishermen, farmers and early rising businessmen could be found among the breakfast clientele.

The Dixie Gray Cafe was at 809 Dickinson Ave. near what was Five Points and Kares Brothers was at 429 Evans St. New Greenville Cafe at 308 Evans St. was famed for its steaks since the restaurant had a large allotment of beef. In those days of meat rationing, that brought in customers who couldn't buy the steaks they wanted for home consumption.

Olde Towne Inn, at 117 E. Fifth St., was a popular restuarant with students which survived until recent years and has only recently been revived.

The Proctor Hotel had a dining room and there was the Star Cafe at 106 E. Fifth St. and the appropriately named Victory Grill at 431 Evans. And of course there was Respess Barbecue Stand on North Green which had most of the barbecue business at the time.

When it came to dining out there wasn't much more in Greenville and those restaurants made it on a combination of student trade, visiting Marines and businessmen who ate breakfast or lunch out. For the most part families then ate meals that were prepared at home.

Eating out may become dull now and then, but the choices of restaurants are far more varied than they were in 1944.

Cast For Hollywood

LOS ANGELES — If Walter Mondale hadn't made Geraldine Ferraro a vice-presidential candidate, Hollywood would have eventually concocted her. The tough-talking New Yorker seems just the type television executives are looking for these days.

Those execs are increasingly putting women in charge on the screen. One might conclude that they're keeping pace with a nation that can nominate a woman for its No. 2 office.

But in Hollywood and presidential politics, life usually seems dreamier than it really is. Rep. Ferraro is among the more fortunate of a gender that, for the most part, still struggles with discrimination. Her own situation makes her an unlikely role model.

Television producers evidently believe that their audience wants images of power-wielding women. Following a trend set in recent years, they've scheduled no fewer than six new programs featuring women in professional or executive positions for, as they say in the business, this fall's line-up.

Some of these programs are easily predictable. This industry has a rule: When in doubt, make it a detective story. For better or worse, the sleuth may be one of the preferred roles for projecting intelligence, ability and self-confidence.

But Hollywood also improves upon an already-tried househusband theme (remember "Mr. Mom"?) with two programs ("Charles in Charge" and "Who's the Boss") in which men serve as housekeeper to women executives. This is tradition turned upside down. Butlers are one thing, but women have rarely, if ever, played Lee Iacocca to a man's version of "Hazel."

Geraldine Ferraro is also tradition turned upside down, and her example may unleash an unprecedented wave of women candidates for federal, state and local office. Her resume — that of housewife turned prosecutor and congresswoman — could inspire women's idealism as much as this city's screenwriters are trying to exploit it.

The Democrat's choice for veep represents how things already are for many women, including millions of wives and mothers. Ms. Ferraro is one of the majority of wives who now work. Though her income may fall below that of her wealthy developer-husband, she also belongs to a growing number of secondary-earning wives who occupy professional and managerial positions. Under most circumstances, her $69,000-plus congressional salary would put Ferraro into another expanding cluster: wives who earn more than their husbands.

From 1974 through 1981, the number of families relying on the husband's income alone dropped dramatically, from almost 40 percent to less than 30 percent of the nation's 50 million married couples. The biggest group — dual-earner families in which husbands made more money than their wives — expanded accordingly, though by only a few percent.

Census figures, however, show that the number of "primary-earning" wives made the biggest jump, rising from 4 million to almost 6 million, a 50 percent increase. More than a third of them held professional or managerial jobs in 1981, and only 6 percent came from families in poverty.

Ms. Ferraro speaks for this trend. Hollywood producers, in their selection of program themes, may be attempting to speak to it.

But the television and film industry might be fitting launching pads for a more realistic look at women's progress in the workplace. Not only does Hollywood exploit women as much as Bob Guccione ever did; it does so off the screen as well as on, often subjecting actresses to higher performance standards and fewer promotional opportunities than actors.

Safety

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — With the increase in campaign travel, President Reagan, perhaps the most security-conscious president in history, faces the dilemma of making himself available to voters without exposing himself to danger.

Several different methods were tried out last week as Reagan spent three days campaigning for re-election.

In Atlanta, for instance, large tractor-trailers were brought to a suburban shopping mall and placed as security barriers near the area set off for the political rally.

Blue curtains were hung on the sides of the platform from which Reagan spoke, and they were used to construct an entranceway, as they are nearly everwhere Reagan goes. That way, his armored limousine can be driven directly behind the curtains, and he is never visible to the public except when he's actually on stage.

Despite the sweltering heat that day, Reagan and his Secret Service agents were the only people on the platform who kept their suit jackets on. All the other politicians were in shirtsleeves.

While the president doesn't wear a bulletproof vest all the time, it's a safe bet that he and his agents wear them whenever he's in public.

At almost all the outdoor rallies Reagan attends, the platform from which he speaks is usually set back considerably from the crowd. In one case, the platform itself was so high that only Reagan's face was visible to the audience standing or sitting on the ground.

When he does speak, Reagan is standing behind a bulletproof lectern that comes up to the middle of his chest. An agent is standing nearby with a tan bulletproof overcoat.

Sometimes, when the temperature is hovering near 100 degrees, the president looks pretty uncomfortable sitting on the platform in his long-sleeve shirt and jacket, awaiting his turn to speak. In Atlanta, he turned to the head of his Secret Service detail, who was sitting in the next row, and borrowed a handkerchief to mop his brow.

In some cases, the idea seems to be to make it appear as if Reagan is attending a public event, while never actually allowing him to be seen in public.

Democrats Take A Chance

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party took some long steps at San Francisco to make itself the party of "lesbians and gay men." Not much attention was paid to the several resolutions in this regard, but as lines begin to form for the November election these provisions are worth considering.

This is the relevant language in the party's official platform, adopted on July 17:

"We reaffirm the dignity of all people and the right of each individual to have equal access to and participation in the institutions and services of our society ... All groups must be protected from discrimination based on race, color, sex, religion, national origin, language, age or sexual orientation. We will support legislation to prohibit discrimination in the workplace based on sexual orientation. We will assure that sexual orientation per se does not serve as a bar to participation in the military."

The convention also adopted, without discussion or debate, some extensive changes in the party rules. Rule 5B, for example, was amended to insert the words "sexual orientation" in the language having to do with admission to party meetings and party membership. The revised Rule 5C may be of special interest to local Democratic committees not familiar with what was done at San Francisco.

Under the new language, Rule 5C asserts that every state party "shall" develop an outreach program to attract and recruit various groups that now may be underrepresented in party affairs. These groups include "ethnics, youth, persons over 65 years of age, lesbians and gay men ..." The object is "to achieve full participation by such groups in the delegate selection process and at all levels of party affairs."

The San Francisco convention created an interim commission, to be known as the Fairness Commission. Its task is to review party rules "in an effort to establish equitable rules as they relate to the full participation in the party process of blacks, Hispanics, Asian/Pacifics, native Americans, women, persons of all sexual preference and other members of the Rainbow Coalition."

Among other things, the commission is to consider whether "assured percentages" should be assigned to these various groups in putting together delegations to future party conventions. The commission itself is to consist of at least 25 men and 25 women, with fair and equitable representation of "blacks, Hispanics, native Americans, Asian/Pacifics, women and persons of all sexual preference consistent with their proportional representation in the party."

Very well. With adoption of these formal resolutions, the Democratic Party may have bitten off more avant-garde sociology than many of its adherents will want to chew. It takes a powerful imagination to imagine that in many states party officials will work actively to "attract" and "recruit" lesbians and homosexual men. The idea of setting up state delegations with "assured percentages" of "all sexual preferences" is not an idea of instantaneous appeal. One can envision challenges to the Illinois delegation at the convention of 1992: Instead of 9 percent homosexuals it has only 6 percent — 12 lesbians instead of 18.

Notice the pledge in the platform to "support legislation" that would prohibit discrimination in the workplace based on sexual orientation. Voters have every right to ask Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro exactly what they understand the language to mean. What sort of legislation do they have in mind? Do the Democrats propose to support quotas for homosexuals in the way they have supported quotas for women in the construction industry? Will they seek to amend the basic Civil Rights Act of 1964 so as to accord "lesbians and gay men" the same panoply of legal rights accorded to women, blacks and persons who may suffer discrimination by reason of their religion?

Presumably no one would question a homosexual's right to certain fundamentals of citizenship — to the right of free speech and free press, the right to be secure in one's household, the right to a jury trial, and so on. That is one thing. But the Democrats are talking of something entirely different if they are talking of requiring local school boards, as a condition of receiving federal aid, to certify that they have hired "an "assured percentage of lesbians and gay men" to teach in their classrooms.

To the editor:

Catching up on the news after a vacation, I read with interest your editorial of July 22 regarding the demolition of the Coleman House by ECU. I think that several of your editorial assumptions are worth comment. You assume that expansion is not possible without demolition, even though the university "expanded" across 5th Street for years by adapting existing homes such as the chancellor's home and Taylor-Slaughter Alumni Center for its use, without substantially changing the appearance of either. The TRNA is not opposed to adaptive use, but is opposed to demolition and wanton disregard for the university's neighbors north of 5th Street, and uses that are not consistent with the appearance of the neighborhood.

Another false assumption is that we have the university to thank for our revitalization. Really funny! The reason the Tar River Neighborhood Association organized in 1980 was to stem the tide of short-term rental investment, inappropriate use largely brought on by the proximity of the university.

The last assumption is that nothing has been done to identify homes worth preserving in the area. Not true. Kate Ohno was hired by the city of Greenville several years ago to identify historic properties in the city, and she identified the area north of 5th Street as worthy of Historic District classification, and included the Coleman House in her writing, as significant, as well as the chancellor's home, the Howard House, and numerous other houses in this area.

The university has been paying lip services to "cooperative planning" for a number of years, but it is time now for action. Without a truly cooperative planning effort, taking into consideration the interests of the city, citizens and the university, a classic "Town & Gown" battle will be joined.

Labor Leader Hedges His Bets

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the political poker game otherwise known as the 1984 presidential election campaign, Teamsters union President Jackie Presser is hedging his bets.

Presser, controversial leader of the world's largest independent trade union, has been sidling up to Democrats while holding his union's endorsement just beyond the grasp of the Reagan-Bush Re-Election Committee.

The political machinations of Presser, under investigation for alleged involvement in a ghost-employee payroll scandal in his hometown union local in Cleveland, carry broad — and perhaps negative — implications for President Reagan.

Presser, then the president of the Ohio Conference of Teamsters, worked unstintingly in 1980 to persuade the general executive board of the international Teamsters to endorse Reagan.

He ascended to the top of the Teamsters in April 1983, when President Roy Williams resigned in a court agreement that preserved Williams' freedom while he appealed a federal bribery-conspiracy conviction in Chicago.

In an interview with The Associated Press last March, Presser came close to endorsing Reagan's re-election bid, saying the AFL-CIO's endorsement of Walter F. Mondale created "an embarrassing situation for all of labor."

But in early June, several published reports said that attorneys for the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force in Cleveland had decided to recommend to superiors in Washington that Presser be indicted on charges of defrauding his Cleveland local of $250,000.

Presser has granted few interviews since then. He backed out of a speaking engagement at a conference sponsored here by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, although Presser did appear publicly to testify before the Democratic Party's platform committee.

Presser turned up in San Francisco, using a suite at a Fisherman's Wharf hotel to entertain several Democrats and possessing a VIP pass to the Democratic National Convention.

As Presser and his top aides conducted receptions for Democratic figures, more than 10,000 rank-and-file Teamsters took part in a July 15 labor rally and parade billed as a union show of solidarity. In Kansas City, leaders of Teamsters Joint Council 41 are on the verge of endorsing Mondale, said a source close to the union, who agreed to talk only on when granted anonymity.

Several Teamsters interviewed at the San Francisco rally said they favored Mondale.

Duke Zeller, Presser's top spokesman, when asked whether the union would endorse Reagan again, replied: "I'd say there's by no means a lock on that."

The spokesman, however, emphatically denied that Presser's warming up to Democrats was in any way related to his possible indictment.

"Jackie's confident about his own situation ... and for the most part, we're ignoring those old reports that are just being recycled," Zeller said.

Rank-and-file Teamsters will be asked to fill out a presidential preference ballot in August. Zeller said the 18-member general executive board would meet Aug. 30 to decide whether to endorse a candidate — and whom to endorse.

Ken Paff, national organizer for Teamsters for a Democratic Union, a dissident faction based in Detroit, scoffed at the suggestion that a Presser endorsement in 1984 represents any sort of political trump card held by the feisty 57-year-old Teamsters chief.

"BUT THINK OF ALL YOU HAVE TO LIVE FOR! THE INTEREST RATE HIKES, THE DEFICIT PROJECTIONS, THE TRADE FIGURES, THE RETURN OF INFLATION!..."

Volleys

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo isn't on the national Democratic ticket this year, but he is firing some of the most colorful volleys at Republicans as the fall presidential campaign heats up early.

In his latest rhetorical flourish, Cuomo accused President Reagan of trying to paint Democratic candidates Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro as ultraliberals linked to "the worst of the '60s ... people with beards and pipes who have wild lifestyles."

"What Republicans have done is they have gone to labels and shibboleths," Cuomo said in Nashville, Tenn., this week. "Look at their campaign now: 'They are liberals. We are conservatives.'"

Reagan opened a Southern campaign swing last week by adding a new chapter to the long political tradition of trying to paint your opponent as far out on a political extreme while portraying yourself as moderate.

"The national Democratic leadership is going so far left, they've left America," Reagan said in Austin, Texas, on a trip aimed at wining the South from the Democrats.

"I think the current leadership of the Democratic party ... went all the way to San Francisco and then turned left. And they went so far left, they have left the mainstream," he added in Atlanta.

While Mondale simply suggested Reagan was desperate and needed some sleep, Cuomo fired back this week at the National Governors' Association meeting in Nashville in more colorful terms, keeping up the pace he began with his stirring keynote speech at the San Francisco convention.

First, Cuomo painted in bold terms the negative image he says the GOP is trying to tie to the Democratic ticket. He described the Republican strategy this way:

"Call them liberals. Summon up a steretoype — people with beards and pipes who have wild lifestyles. Try to bring back the worst of the '60s."

And then Cuomo suggested that Republicans are ducking the issues.

"God forbid that you should analyze the issues, that you should talk about the deficit, that you should talk about Central America," Cuomo said at a brief meeting with reporters.

But campaigning along the alleged liberal-conservative fault line is a tricky business, as both Reagan and Mondale should know.

While Reagan has long been the standard-bearer of the Republican right wing, Mondale has toiled long and hard on the liberal side of the Democratic spectrum. That gives both images that are not necessarily helpful.

At the Democratic convention, Mondale took a decidedly moderate tone in his acceptance speech, talking of the party's commitment to defense spending and opposition to new taxes that would hurt business.

But the terms "liberal" and "conservative" may not have the impact they once did in American elections.

To start with, more Americans would tend to call themselves moderates or middle of the road than would say they are conservatives or liberals.

And the links between what "conservative" policies in various areas have become are just as weak as those among the allegedly "liberal" positions.

Just because one is for conservative economic policies, that does not mean one is against abortion, for the death penalty and an advocate of school prayer — all so-called conservative positions on social issues.

Conversely, backing more spending on social programs like welfare and Medicaid does not necessarily imply that one will be a supporter of gun control — a "liberal" position.

Arguments about liberals and conservatives may become an increasingly tired refrain during the next three months of campaigning.

Dividend Plan Promoted

NEW YORK (AP) — John H. Perry's "social invention" may receive a hearing from Congress before the year is out, and that, he says, brings closer the day when budget deficits will be no more.

Not only that, he says, but it would spur voter registration by providing registrants with annual dividends of up to $1,000, and raise productivity by uniting blue- and white-collar workers behind free enterprise.

And more: It would encourage individual savings and investments, it would encourage business to make commitments for business rather than tax reasons. It would generate understanding and support of free enterprise.

That's not all: It would avoid tax increases while redistributing income and reducing inflation and interest rates. And it would manage all this while leaving government social programs intact, although frozen in size.

As matters stand, says Perry, a Riviera Beach, Fla., businessman and inventor, many Americans feel budget cuts will deprive them of some benefit. His National Dividend Plan, on the other hand, would assure them a return.

Too good to be true? Maybe not. After more than 20 years of examination, development and refinement, the plan has won approval of eminent scholars, including economist Milton Friedman.

An organization to promote the plan, Americans for the National Dividend Act Inc. has been formed in Rosslyn, Va., just outside Washington. And it has won many adherents in Congress too.

In fact, it is the subject of H.R. 5085, introduced in March by 32 congressmen as the "National Dividend Act of 1984," and is now awaiting consideration by the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I am going to put it over," says Perry, an affable, relaxed man whose confidence is bolstered by many business successes, in which, those who know him say, his creativity has been a basic, essential ingredient.

Among his activities are newspapers, (he once owned 28), cable television, and oceanography. His robot submarines have a steady market. And he believes he is on the verge of a breakthrough in drawing energy from seawater.

But he feels the National Dividend Plan, "a political solution to an economic problem," may be his biggest contribution of all. It consists of five remarkably interrelated provisions:

1. All federal corporate income tax collections owuld be put into a national profit-sharing trust fund to be distributed on a per-capita basis to all U.S. registered voters.

The consequences, as seen by Perry and his supporters: More registrants and voters. More support for profits and free enterprise. Reduction in demogagoic attacks on the private sector.

2. There would be no dividend unless there was a budget surplus from which to pay it.

Consequences: Voters would see to it that there was an end to further federal budget deficits and a halt to the rise in the federal debt. They would insist on a surplus, and Congress would soon get the message.

3. To ensure a surplus, there would be a five-year freeze in federal spending at the present level.

Consequence: According to Perry's charts, growth revenues would put the country in surplus in about 2½ years.

4. The double tax on dividends (first at the corporate level and then on personal income taxes) would be eliminated in order to ensure that there would be maximum incentives for profitable production.

Consequences: It would aid profits, and the national dividend, and encourage risk-taking by business. It would eliminate about 300 tax-code provisions. It would encourage savings by giving investors a better return. In turn, greater savings would tend to keep inflation and interest rates down.

5. A ceiling on corporate income taxes would be established at the present 46 percent maximum rate.

Consequence: Ensure maximum revenue for both the registered voter and the corporate stockholder whose ownership rights would now be greatly strengthened.

The web of cause-and-effect can become even more intricate.

George Gallup

Poll

Compared with previous elections there has been little consistency in the findings of opinion polls in the past month. In Gallup surveys alone, presidential preference results have ranged from a 17 percentage point advantage for Ronald Reagan to a 2 percentage point margin for Walter Mondale. When the findings of other polling organizations are considered along with Gallup's, an even more bewildering array of test election outcomes emerges.

Opinion surveys are sending back very mixed signals about the presidential election race. Some would interpret this as a measure of their unreliability. From a pollster's vantage point, the apparently ambiguous results of presiential preference surveys reflect the nature of opinion about the contest itself, and when the results are examined in perspective, they tell a revealing story about how voters are reacting to unfolding campaign events.

Ironically, the sheer frequency of surveys also plays a role in the seeming increase in poll variability. Since the first of June, Gallup has conducted six national surveys measuring presidential preference. Add to that number the polls taken by other major survey organizations and the result is enough surveys to produce a few exceptional findings by chance alone. Considering the full Gallup trend, which includes regular Gallup Polls and Gallup surveys for Newsweek, a fair amount of consistency in presidential preference is found until convention time — with one exception. In late June (June 22-25) Gallup showed a 17 percentage point margin for Reagan over Mondale rather than the 8 to 10 point it had been indicating. The next Gallup Poll, June 29-July 2, reverted back to the more typical 8 percentage point Reagan margin.

However, from that point on Gallup results began to move around in reaction to the Democratic National Convention. The next Gallup survey (for Newsweek) was conducted on the Thursday and Friday night prior to the San Francisco convention as Geraldine Ferraro was being announced as Mondale's running mate. It showed one of the smallest Reagan margins over Mondale in three months (plus 6 percentage points), which was mostly accounted for by a widening of the gender gap in response to Ms. Ferraro. Reagan's lead opened up again over the next few days as the Bert Lance affair dominated the news and the emotional response to the historic Ferraro announcement subsided.

Gallup's most recent survey was taken at the end of the Democratic Convention for Newsweek, and it showed registered voters dividing their support about equally between Reagan/Bush (46 percent) and Mondale/Ferraro (48 percent).

That the Mondate ticket would gain some ground after a successful convention is not surprising. That it would draw even with Reagan/Bush after trailing consistently for almost six months was a surprise to many. Most probably, the Reagan/Bush lead will reappear as the effect of the Democratic Convention wears off.

What is significant, however, is not that the Reagan/Bush and Mondale&Ferraro tickets drew equal levels of support at the end of a big Democratic week, but rather that opinions could ship back and forth as much as they did in a two-week period. Such variability suggests the potential for a close election in November.

Group Strikes A Nerve

RALEIGH — A research group founded recently to improve business relations with the Legislature has managed to make an enemy out of the state's most powerful legislator, House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

The N.C. Foundation for Research and Economic Education (N.C. FREE) was created to assist businesspeople in their political support of pro-business legislative candidates. The group hopes its work will lead to a stronger voice for business in the Legislature.

But in the process of setting up its shop, and working at the Legislature in its first year of operation, N.C. FREE touched a nerve with Ramsey. "This crowd reminds me of an undercover organization," Ramsey said in an interview. "It's a secretive type of thing."

Ramsey based his charges on conversation during a dinner meeting he had with Mike Mann, N.C. FREE's executive secretary. "I asked him who was paying the bill (for the group's operation) and he wouldn't tell me," Ramsey said.

Mann denies that his group is secretive: The membership list is public. He says he didn't want to discuss N.C. FREE with Ramsey during that dinner because he was afraid it would be considered lobbying and N.C. FREE is not allowed to lobby, according to tax laws and the group's own charter. (The group has 30 members, hopes to grow to 50 soon. They pay betweem $350 and $10,000 annually in dues and N.C. FREE has an annual budget of $160,000, Mann says.)

A source close to Ramsey says his suspicions of the group go deeper. "They want to make the House as pro-business as the Senate," the source, a legislative lobbyist, said. "To do that, you know who they have to get rid of, the Speaker."

Mann denies this charge, too. He says Ramsey is "the most effective speaker North Carolina has ever had," and that to try to get him defeated "would be foolish." He says he's never heard any talk of trying to move Ramsey out.

Personalities might also be involved. Ramsey and Raleigh lobbyist Sam Johnson, N.C. FREE's attorney, often end up on different sides of issues and when Johnson boasted that he had the votes in the House to stop the phosphate ban in June, Ramsey hit the roof. The ban passed the House and sources speculate that Ramsey put much effort into getting the ban through the Senate as a way of getting Johnson. Ramsey denies this.

Regardless of the reasons for Ramsey's sentiments, there's no questioning that they run very deep. "A lot of people would get rich under their system but the masses of the people don't want the clock turned back. They (the masses) want this state to continue moving forward with better schools, roads, hospitals, with better care for the mentally ill, the handicapped, the sick and all the elderly people, better day care programs. If they controlled both houses for six years, instead of this being the most progressive state, we'd be the least progressive state in the nation."

Mann says Ramsey's got his group all wrong. "That's not the intention or purpose of this organization," Mann says. "Those types of services, any sound thinking person knows they're not only good, but they're necessities. The bottom line is that many people in the business community feel that not only some of our elected officials but also average citizens don't realize that a sound economy and strong business climate pay for all these services."

Mann says he hopes to meet with Ramsey to allay his concerns. He's got his work cut out for him.

Leaf Prices Up On Eastern, Border Belts

By United Press International

Higher grade prices and improved quality were reported last week during opening flue-cured tobacco sales at most markets in North Carolina and South Carolina, the Federal-State Market News Service says.

Average prices were up sharply on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina, Eastern and lower Middle belts, the news service said.

Better quality tobacco was offered for sale on all three belts, but the news service said grade averages were up only on the Border and Eastern belts, while averages on Middle Belt markets were unchanged to a little higher than a year ago.

On the Border Belt, the weekly average of $153.80 per hundredweight was up $9.72 from the first three days of 1983 sales. Average prices increased for over three-fourths of the grades, with gains primarily in the $2 to $7 range.Primings made the largest gains while better quality lugs held fairly steady.

Total sales were 11.8 million pounds, compared to 13 million pound sold last year at an average of $144.08 per hundred pounds for the same period last year.

South Carolina markets accounted for 6.3 million pounds sold at an average of $155.01, while North Carolina totals were 5.4 million pounds and a $152.37 average.

A total of 12.2 percent of offerings went to Stabilization this year, compared to 25.4 percent last year.

Sales opportunities for this week total 20 million pounds.

Eastern Belt markets recorded 11.5 million pounds in sales at an average of $156.82 per hundredweight during a two-day sales week. The average was $7.45 higher than the first two days of 1983, when 13.5 million pounds were sold.

Stabilization received 27 percent of total sales, compared to 44.2 percent last year.

Grade averages for lugs and better quality primings ranged from unchanged to $2 per hundred pounds higher than last year, while better quality grades averaged even with or slightly above their support prices. Lower quality primings sold well above their support and were up generally $6 to $10 per hundred pounds.

This week's sales opportunity on the Eastern Belt is 32.5 million pounds, excluding 3.8 millin pounds for Sandhills markets.

On the Middle Belt markets that were open, sales totaled 1.7 million pound at an average of $147.57 per hundred pounds, compared to 1.2 million pounds sold at a $140.47 average last year.

The 31 percent of sales to stablization was just under the 31.9 percent recorded for the same period in 1983.

Grade averages were basically unchanged from last year on lugs and better quality grades of primings, but lower primings recorded gains of $5 to $12 per hundred pounds.

The Middle Belt sales opportunity for this week totals 7.5 million pounds, excluding 3.8 million pounds in marketing area "C".

Northern Middle Belt markets will open Tuesday, while Old Belt markets begin sales Aug. 14.

And the card attached would say

Thank you for being a friend

If it's a car you lack
I'd surely buy you a cadillac
Whatever you need any time of the day or night

I'm not ashamed to say
I hope it always will stay this way
My hat is off. won't you stand up and take a bow

And when we both get older
With walking canes and hair of gray
Have no fear even though it's hard to hear

State Preparing For Rabies Influx

By The Associated Press

Rabies cases have declined here and in neighboring states, but North Carolina health officials are still preparing for an influx of the disease they say has been building since 1980.

"We've been bracing for that for several years," said Dr. John Freeman, North Carolina's public health veterinarian in Raleigh.

"South Carolina has for a number of years reported a lot of rabies," he said. "Virginia has had a tremendous amount of raccoon rabies in the northern half of the state. In Tennessee there's been a problem with rabid skunks although it's dying down somewhat in counties along our border."

So far this year, North Carolina officials have counted only one case of rabies among animals other than bats — a rabid skunk in Madison County. Last year there were six rabid skunks in Ashe and Watauga counties and in 1982 there were 26 in the same two counties.

"For the past three years we've seen skunk rabies coming from Tennessee into North Carolina," Freeman said. "The fact that we've only diagnosed one this year ... doesn't indicate the problem is going away at this stage of the game."

Rabid bats can be found anywhere in North Carolina if enough bats are tested, and eight have been found so far this year. They present less of a problem than other animals because "it's difficult for a bat to really get a good bite" on a dog or cat, which are most likely to transmit rabies to humans, he said.

By July 23 of this year, Georgia had 94 cases of rabies — mostly among raccoons — down from about 130 at the same time last year, Georgia officials said. Tennessee has had 58 cases — mostly skunks — down from about 100 on July 23 last year. South Carolina had 28 cases — mostly raccoons — by July 21, up from 17 at the same time last year. Virginia has had 136 cases — mostly raccoons — down from 429 during the comparable period last year.

Some health officials estimate that for every rabies case diagnosed, there are 10 to 25 cases never detected. No human has contracted rabies in North Carolina since 1953.

North Carolina seems to be an island relatively free from rabies only becuase the disease hasn't spread in epidemic proportions from Virginia and South Carolina to raccoons and from Tennessee to skunks — yet.

"In time we will see it here too," Freeman said. "In all probability, the skunk problem in the mountains will spread too, but not far east."

In the mid-1960s, raccoon rabies spread from southern Georgia and Florida south to the Keys, west to Alabama and north to South Carolina.

In 1980, the disease moved to northern Virginia when raccoon hunters seeking more game imported raccoons from Florida, Freeman said.

Court Will Allow Hearsay Evidence

RALEIGH (AP) — When an assault victim is too young to testify in court, hearsay evidence may be used in child abuse cases, a Superior Court judge has ruled.

But Wake Superior Court Judge Anthony M. Brannon said the evidence must also be supported by other proof.

The ruling came Friday in the case of Francis V. Fearing, a Wake County man accused of raping his 3-year-old daughter on Oct. 30. The Wake District Attorney's Office has filed charges of first-degree rape, incest, indecent liberties with a minor, attempted rape and attempted incest against Fearing. No trial date has been set.

Prosecution and defense attorneys agreed that the child was too young to testify in the case.

With the child unable to testify. Assistant District Attorney Evelyn W. Hill asked the court on July 25 to accept evidence from the nurse, doctor, detectives and social worker to whom the child had spoken. Brannon granted the request Friday on the condition that Ms. Hill show at the trial that the testimony is justified under new rules of courtroom evidence that became effective July 1.

Ronald C. Brown, former president of the N.C. District Attorney's Association, said it was the first such ruling that he was aware of in North Carolina.

"It's unusual, but it's a trend that's beginning to take hold in other states," Brown said.

Brown said the rules allow a "more lax interpretation of the hearsay rules. With the proper safeguards, I think it's a good idea."

P. Gretchen Evans, supervisor of children's protective services for Wake County, called the ruling "a marvelous opening for the protection of children."

Hearsay evidence — testimony from a person who heard a conversation, rather than the person who spoke the words — is not generally allowed in a trial because first-person evidence is considered more reliable.

GE Closing Plant

DURHAM (AP) — General Electric will close its Durham steam turbine generator plant because of falling demand for its product, company officials say.

The plant, which employs 445 workers, will begin laying off workers around the first of the year.

Czech Student Flies To Austrian Freedom

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — In a daring break for freedom, a Czechoslovakian engineering student escaped into Austria Saturday in a homemade "ultralight" aircraft powered by pedals and a tiny 2-cylinder engine, authorities said.

The 24-year-old man — identified only as Ivo Z. — spoke fluent English and asked for political asylum and wanted to emigrate to the United States or Australia, police said.

Police said the man took off in the canvas-winged craft from the town of Lozorno, about 6 miles inside Czechoslovakia, at 3 a.m. and landed at Vienna's Schwechat airport about 4:45 a.m., a 25-mile trip.

The student, wearing a bright yellow crash helmet, flew the craft only about 100 to 200 yards above the ground for the entire trip, arriving "with his last drop of fuel," an airport spokesman said.

"Nobody saw him," the spokesman said.

Police said the man, an engineering and science student in Czechoslovakia, parked his homemade, 3-wheeled craft with a basket-like seat outside an Austrian Airlines hangar used for DC-9 jets and sat there until airport employees spotted him.

Police said the student told them he had planned his escape for a year, making secret test flights of the ultralight aircraft.

Such aircraft, known as ultralights, are popular in the United States, where they are fabricated with lightweight motors and generally are lighter than hang gliders.

A witness said the student's plane was powered by a 600-cubic centimeter, 2-cylinder engine and had a fuel tank taken from a Czechoslovak-made Java motorcycle.

"Such a machine could be built in six to eight weeks," the spokesman said.

Ultralights are prohibited in Austria because of noise and environmental regulations.

Authorities said the man requested political asylum and after several hours of police questioning was taken to the main Vienna refugee center at Traiskirchen, near the airport.

"As it looks now, he will be given political asylum," a police spokesman said.

Japanese Set A-Bomb Observance

TOKYO (UPI) — The people of Japan commemorate the 39th anniversaries of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki this week with tolling bells and films depicting the nuclear destruction of Tokyo and finally of the entire planet.

The two-part documentary detailing the destructive power of nuclear bombs will be broadcast by NHK, Japan's public television network.

One program, titled "The Earth Burns Up," simulates how a one megaton bomb detonated over Tokyo would decimate the city.

The other, "The Earth Freezes," depicts the theoretical "nuclear winter" many scientists believe would follow a nuclear exchange. In the film, some 20 percent of the world's arsenal — about 10,000 bombs — is detonated in a nuclear exchange.

The theory holds that ash and smoke clouds blocking sunlight would lower the earth's temperature below freezing, killing all life but moss, rats, flies and other rapidly breeding organisms.

The programs were produced with financial backing from seven countries and the technical help of a panel of 100 experts, including British physicist Frank Barnaby, who narrates part of the documentary.

About 50,000 people led by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will gather Monday in Hiroshima Peace Memorial Park to hear a bell toll for victims of the attack.

The bell will ring at 8:15 a.m., the moment the device carried by the bomber Enola Gay exploded on Aug. 6, 1945. The weapon, detonating with the force of 20,000 tons of TNT, destroyed two-thirds of the city of 343,000 people.

Some 66,000 people were killed and more than 70,000 injured.

In Nagasaki, a moment of silence at 11:02 a.m. Thursday will commemorate the dropping of the second nuclear bomb.

That bomb killed some 39,000 people and injured 25,000, destroying about 40 percent of the city. The next day, the Japanese initiated surrender negotiations leading to the broadcast by Emperor Hirohito Aug. 15 acknowledging Japan's defeat.

The war that began Dec. 7, 1941, with the unexpected Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, was ending.

Aerobics Craze Reaches Moscow

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet television broadcast its first aerobics class Saturday, as the new craze — scorned by most men — took hold of the country.

Soviet women had half an hour to stretch, jump and dance at home with Russia's Jane Fonda — Olympic figure-skating champion Natalya Linichuk.

Even the normally staid state-controlled newspapers bubbled about the new "boom" among the "swelling ranks of people wishing to develop more shapely figures," though Tass conceded most men scored it as unmasculine activity.

Men "condescendingly call rhythmic gymnastics with its recognizable attributes of dancing movements, cheerful music, bright swimsuits and motley-colored gaiters, a sweetened pill for those women who lack the mettle to engage in 'pure' sport," it said.

All is not lost, though, Tass said, for "there are some 'defectors' among the stronger sex — aerobics buffs claim rythmic gymnastics has a future and predict that men won't be able to stay away from it for long."

The Leninskoe Znamya (Lenin's Banner) said the exercises would put people in a great mood the rest of the day and urged them to watch television every week in a leotard, legwarmers and headband to "dance for the good of your health."

The newspaper said regional sports committees were instructed to set up free aerobics classes in 58 cities and some were already in full swing.

Several newspaper articles have explained what aerobics are, recommending them for people of all ages and stressing their emotional benefits.

Many women are delighted.

"I've tried all my life to lose weight but I never get anywhere because I haven't got the will or the possibility of buying enough fruit and vegetables, which our doctors now tell us we must eat to be slim and healthy," one middle-aged woman said.

"I know I ought to exercise to lose weight, too, but I never had the time or the real desire. But this new aerobics looks like fun. Maybe it's the answer," she said.

Polish Release Two Dissidents

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Adam Michnik, an adviser to the outlawed Solidarity trade union movement and leader of the former workers' rights group KOR, was released from Warsaw's main prison Saturday, family friends said.

Authorities also released 53-year-old Seweryn Jaworski, a steelworker who had been deputy leader of Solidarity's Warsaw chapter and a member of the independent labor federation's national commission.

Both Michnik and Jaworski had been held in Warsaw's Rakowiecka Prison since the December 1981 military crackdown that banned Solidarity. Both were released as part of the amnesty approved by the Polish parliament on July 21.

Michnik was the first of four KOR leaders to be released. Other members waiting to be set free are Jacek Kuron, Henryk Wujec and Zbigniew Romaszewski.

Michnik's release was confirmed by the mother of a senior Solidarity official still imprisoned at Rakowiecka. The mother, who spoke on condition her name was not used, said she had spoken to Michnik by telephone.

After his release, Michnik greeted friends at Warsaw's St. Martin's Church, which houses the office of a church committee to aid political prisoners, a church source said.

European Shuttle Launched Successfully

PARIS (UPI) — Europe's Ariane rocket, a direct commercial challenge to the U.S. space shuttle, blasted off on its 10th mission Saturday after four technical delays caused by computer errors, officials said.

Twenty-one minutes after liftoff, the Ariane III rocket, more powerful than its predecessors, launched two communications satellites into orbit 22,500 miles above the Earth.

The white, needle-nosed rocket developed by the 11-nation European Space Agency blasted off from the Kourou launching site in French Guiana at 10:33 a.m., 1 hour and 29 minutes after its scheduled launch.

Officials said the two satellites, the French Telecommunications Ministry's Telecom 1-A and the 20-nation ECS-2, went off on schedule and were performing "perfectly."

"It was superb, just superb," said French Research Minister Hubert Curien, who attended the 10th launching in the Ariane series. "This is a great success for Europe and for our country."

One of the satellites is Telecom 1-A, the first commercial space vehicle of the French telephone-television system. The second is ECS-2, ordered by the post office, telephone and telegraph administrations of 20 other European countries.

The launch from France's South American possession was the second commercial venture of the Ariane.

A malfunctioning computer halted the countdown four times within 10 minutes of liftoff. But after checking the rocket's key third stage, officials bypassed the computer and proceeded with the launch one hour and 29 minutes behind schedule.

The mission established the European venture as a serious competitor for satellite-launching contracts with the U.S. space shuttle, which has been plagued by technical problems.

Ariane, which unlike the Shuttle does not carry passengers and cannot be reused, suffered two failures in its first five launchings.

But its recent successes and the development of the more powerful Ariane III rocket, used for the first time Saturday, has attracted a string of customers.

Following its first commercial flight on May 22 with a satellite of the U.S. firm GTE Spacenet aboard, the European venture won 29 orders and 19 reservations from 15 clients — 40 percent from outside Europe — to launch commercial satellites.

Youth Sought In Airport Blast

MADRAS, India (AP) — Police tightened security at airports in India and Sri Lanka Saturday as authorities sought a Tamil man in connection with the bomb blast that killed at least 29 people at the Madras airport.

Bomb-threat hoaxes delayed flights at Bombay and Bangalore.

Police and government workers completed what they called the "salvage operation" at the Madras international terminal, wrecked by the Thursday night explosion.

Police said two suitcases had been checked by a passenger on a flight from Madras to Colombo, the capital of Sri Lanka, and when they were found abandoned at the airport here they were taken to the customs area, where one exploded. They had been checked for flights on Air Lanka, the Sri Lankan government airline, to London and Paris.

Kumaraswamy Chockolingam, chief secretary of India's southern Tamil Nadu state, said police were looking for 28-year-old Marimuthu Kathiresan, a Tamil Nadu resident. He said Kathiresan had checked in the suitcases at the Madras airport and then disappeared, but officials "do not rule out the possibility of a foreign hand in the incident."

S.E. Piyasena, Sri Lanka's deputy high commissioner in Madras, blamed the bombing on Tamil separatists from Sri Lanka.

Red Sea Nations Sweeping For Mines

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — North Yemen, like Egypt, is sweeping its Red Sea waters for clues to recent mystery blasts that damaged several ships, according to shipping and other sources contacted Saturday in the North Yemeni capital Sanaa.

They said several private companies have sent divers to inspect the damage to their vessels and search for evidence as to what caused the explosions.

The sources, who spoke only when guaranteed anonymity, were contacted by telephone from The Associated Press office in Bahrain, a shipping center on the Persian Gulf.

They said pro-Western government in Sanaa was using its only minesweeper, a Soviet-made model, in the operation.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Sanaa said that unlike Egypt, which is hosting 15 American mine warfare experts, the North Yemeni government has not requested technical assistance.

Roger Lowes, a spokesman for the Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Department, has reported that at least nine ships have struck mines off North Yemen, which is near the strategically important 17-mile-wide Bab el-Mandeb strait.

The strait connects the Indian Ocean and Red Sea, and is a vital link in the Mediterranean-Suez Canal-Red Sea-Indian Ocean shipping lane between South and East Asia and Europe.

Since July 7, there have been five similar incidents in the Suez Gulf, at the northern tip of the Red Sea and the mouth of the canal.

No casualties have been reported.

"No one knows for certain that the damage has been incurred by water mines," said a shipping executive close to an association involved in salvage. "All that we know is that the ships have been affected by heavy underwater explosions."

The state radio in the Persian Gulf kingdom of Qatar has reported that a group calling itself "Islamic Jihad" (holy war) claimed responsibility in the name of "punishing imperialism." Islamic Jihad is believed to be a pro-Iranian extremist group.

But shipping and oil industry circles in Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain said there was not enough evidence to form an opinion about who was behind the explosions.

A Bahrain-based spokesman for Smit International, a Dutch firm that has salvaged oil tankers damaged in the Persian Gulf in attacks arising from the Iran-Iraq war, said the company was also becoming involved the the Red Sea salvage operations through its branch in Jidda, Saudi Arabia. He declined to give details.

Some shipping experts in the gulf region said the Red Sea explosions could prove even more dangerous than the Persian Gulf attacks.

"Danger in the Red Sea would be more scary," said one shipping company executive, who spoke when granted anonymity. For one thing, he said, the pattern in the gulf was predictable, and floating mines would not be.

"For another, the gulf is basically used by its littoral states, but the Red Sea is an international line linking the Mediterranean to this part of the world," he added.

He also noted that the traffic in the Red Sea included passenger steamers carrying "Moslems from Asia who are currently sailing to Saudi Arabia for the upcoming pilgrimage season in (the Moslem holy cities) Mecca and Medina."

Government-controlled media in Saudi Arabia, and the free-wheeling press in Kuwait, reported little about the Red Sea blasts.

The news media in the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Bahrain were sharply critical of what the Manama-based weekly newspaper Al-Adwaa called "an escalation of terrorism" designed to undermine the region.

The paper charged this terrorism was inspired and financed by "official circles," but it stopped short at naming anyone.

Suez Crisis

Egypt Joins U.S. Experts In Hunt For Clue To Mysterious Blasts

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's military is closely watching the Red Sea and Suez Canal and working with U.S. military experts to find out what's behind the mysterious explosions that threaten shipping in the vital waterways.

The 100-mile-long Suez Canal, which links the Red Sea and the Mediterranean, is an important short cut for shipping between South and East Asia and Europe, and revenues from canal tolls are Egypt's third biggest source of foreign exchange.

"Of course we are deeply concerned," said a Suez Canal Authority official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "The Suez Canal is an important lifeline for us and the Suez Gulf and Red Sea, both of which lead into and out of the canal are equally important to us."

Who planted the explosive devices is a mystery. But the consensus in Washington, London, Cairo and the Persian Gulf was that it may have been the work of an Iranian-backed extremist group.

The official radio in the Persian Gulf state of Qatar has said a group calling itself Islamic Jihad (holy war) claimed responsibility for mining the Red Sea to "punish imperialism." Islamic Jihad is an extremist pro-Iranian group.

Government sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said that since last Monday, air force planes have been patrolling the Suez Canal and Egypt's Red Sea offshore areas in pairs daily.

The navy has launched a minesweeping operation in the Suez Gulf, they said, and the internal security apparatus in the canal and Red Sea region has been on full alert.

At Egypt's request, 15 U.S. mine warfare specialists came to Cairo on Thursday to help. Pentagon officials in Washington said Friday that a squadron of minesweeping helicopters was being readied to go to the region if it is decided to use them in the Suez Gulf and Red Sea.

The U.S. Navy has moved an oceanographic survey ship, the Harkness, into the Red Sea to serve as a possible base for the American experts sent to Egypt.

Between July 7 and last weekend, explosions occurred near five ships in the Suez Gulf, the 180-mile-long northern tip of the Red Sea, according to Suez Canal Authority officials. The ships flew the Soviet, Spanish, Japanese, Panamanian and Liberian flags, they said.

In London, the Lloyds Shipping Intelligence Department reported that at least nine ships, including one each from East Germany, Turkey and Greece, struck mines off the coast of North Yemen, close to the strategically important southern entrance to the Red Sea. A Dutch ship was reported trapped in a minefield in the same area.

Some of the ships were said to be damaged, but no deaths or injuries were reported.

Officials from Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly on down publicly have denied the presence of any explosives in the canal, minimized the damage caused in the Suez Gulf explosions and refrained from making public accusations.

Canal authority sources said their intensified security was directed mainly against ships from Iran and Libya as well as "any other country whose relations with Egypt are badly strained."

Washington reports quoted Pentagon sources as saying suspicion focused mainly on at least one, and possibly three, Iranian ships that sailed in the Red Sea recently and may have dumped small mines overboard.

Egyptian officials are worried that the hazard posed by the explosions, coming on top of the Iran-Iraq war with its adverse effect on the number of oil tankers using the canal, might further curtail Egypt's toll income.

The canal is the nation's third largest foreign currency earner after paychecks sent home by Egyptians working abroad, and crude oil exports. It brought in $1.1 billion last year and the government had hoped for more this year.

Ezzat Adel, chairman of the canal authority, said in a local magazine interview in June that the average number of ships transiting the canal daily dropped from 61 in the first four months of this year to 57 since the beginning of May. This meant a 6.5 percent drop in income from tolls, which are based on weight.

From his headquarters at the canal city of Ismailia, Adel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview he doubted the explosions were caused by proper mines.

"We must distinguish between a real mine and a small explosive device," he said. "A mine hitting a ship would cause a big hole and probably lead to sinking. What we have heard about so far is a series of small explosions which caused little or no damage."

"Our own canal and its southern and northern entrances are clean, thank God," he added. "Nevertheless, in view of what has happened we have tightened up security measures."

Adel discounted a suggestion that a noticeable drop in canal traffic from the daily average of 57 vessels to 49 on Friday and 51 on Saturday resulted from shipping jitters following the explosions.

"We have ebbs and peaks as a matter of course," he said. "This is just a coincidence."

Hijackers Seek Asylum In Iran

By United Press International

Three hijackers who forced an Air France jetliner to fly to Tehran and futilely demanded the release of five pro-Khomeini terrorists jailed in France have asked for political asylum in Iran, Iranian officials said Saturday.

The announcement came amid increasing speculation that Iran would not punish the hijackers, who surrendered to Iranian authorities after releasing their 60 hostages and blowing up the plane's cockpit.

The freed hostages arrived back in Paris Friday night.

The official Iranian news agency, IRNA, quoted a foreign ministry official as saying, "The three hijackers of the Air France Boeing 737 have asked ... for political asylum."

IRNA said the men were from Lebanon, where there is some sympathy toward Iran, mostly among the Shiite Moslem community. IRNA did not identify the men any further and did not say whether their request for asylum would be granted.

IRNA said the three were being held for interrogation, but a West German correspondent said the three were taken from the Tehran airport in a Mercedes and did not appear to be under arrest.

Abortion Policy Is Criticized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Reagan administration's policy on abortions in countries outside the United States is drawing fire even before the huge U.N. International Conference on Population opens here Monday.

Under the policy, the United States would withhold aid from organizations that actively promote abortion.

Jason Finkle, director of the Center for Population Planning of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich., called it "amazingly bad logic and amazingly bad economic analysis."

He charged that the Reagan administration will introduce the policy at the conference to pay "an important debt" to anti-abortion groups that have supported him politically.

Finkle and others spoke at a panel outlining issues for the conference, which about 140 countries are expected to attend.

It is the first U.N. population meeting since the 1974 population conference in Bucharest, Romania.

Sheldon Segal, director of population sciences for the Rockefeller Foundation in New York City, said in a paper prepared for the session that a nationwide Gallup poll commissioned by his organization shows Americans support family planning overseas.

In the survey, 72 percent of the 1,042 adults interviewed last month said they believed the United States should give family planning assistance in countries where abortion is legal.

The new U.S. policy was announced in July, in advance of the conference. It declared abortion an "unnecessary and repugnant" form of population control, and said the United States will not contribute to family planning programs that support abortion.

Although population experts said they hope the talks will stick to concrete population issues, politics can be expected to play a big role.

The conference is of government representatives, most of them at the level of health minister, rather than of demographers and family planning experts.

"Some issues are still taboo because they are controversial and could breach a consensus," said Leon Tabah, a former director of the U.N. Population Division. He said they include abortion and sterilization, "the two most widespread ways of controlling births in the Third World."

The conference was called by the world's poorer countries to talk about how to deal with growing numbers of people, both from migration and natural increases. In 1974, the industrialized nations, alarmed by rising population growth rates, called the population meeting.

In contrast to 1974, a time when government intervention in population questions was still controversial, four-fifths of countries now consider population to be of prime importance to their development plans and most countries have family planning programs, U.N. studies show.

Only six countries, accounting for less than 1 percent of the world population, actively restrict access to contraception, said P. Sankar Menon, deputy secretary-general of the conference.

Migration, both from rural to urban areas and from country to country, is expected to be a key issue.

Cougar That Hurt Child Is Killed

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, Texas (UPI) — Trackers captured and killed a 70-pound mountain lion that severely mauled an 8-year-old boy who had gone on a family hiking trip in Big Bend National Park, officials said Saturday.

The 2-year-old male cougar was captured Friday and killed near the spot where the animal attacked David Vaught, of the Dallas suburb of Garland, in the park's Chisos Mountains, said park spokesman Bob Huggins.

David, who suffered puncture wounds on his head, was taken by ambulance to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas after the attack on Thursday. The youngster was reported in fair condition Saturday.

Huggins said the lion attack was the first ever reported in the park's 40-year-history. He said a census taken in 1974 showed the park, in far southwest Texas along the Mexican border, had 18-20 cougars.

"The animal was positively identified as the animal that attacked the boy and we had professional trackers and park rangers accompanied by dogs looking for the lion yesterday," said Huggins.

He said the animal had to be destroyed to test it for rabies.

Photos Show Halley's Comet May Have Irregular Shape

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Halley's Comet, speeding toward Earth and the sun for a 1986 rendezvous, may be irregular in shape or have a patchy surface and appears to be rotating, new photographs show.

The photos, taken through a 200-inch telescope at Palomar Observatory at the California Institute of Technology, show that the light reflected from the comet varies regularly in intensity over a period of hours.

The finding implies that the comet, which passes close enough to Earth to be visible every 76 years, could be rotating and either have an irregular shape or dark or light patches on its surface, scientists said in a release last week.

The scientists, Caltech staff member G. Edward Danielson and Massachusetts Institute of Technology astronomer David Jewitt, photographed the comet on Jan. 7, when it was 800 million miles from the sun. Their observations are to be published in the journal Icarus.

The photographs showed the comet has a reddish color when seen from far away, indicating it may have a snow-white surface.

When photographed, the comet was not yet close enough for the sun to warm up its nucleus and cause it to emit gasses that lift dust off the surface, producing the fuzzy "coma" that surrounds the comet.

Danielson said the Caltech photographs are the first shots ever taken of Halley's Comet before it reached that fuzzy state and may afford scientists insight into the comet's constituents.

Comets are thought to resemble gigantic dirty snowballs, consisting mostly of dust, rocky material and water ice. Their tails of gas and dust are formed by the sun's heat vaporizing the ice.

Danielson and Jewitt led the team that first detected Halley's Comet on its current approach to the sun when it was still a billion miles away, in October 1982.

Its next close approach to the sun, when it is most visible from Earth, is expected in February 1986.

Public Upgrades View Of Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are giving public schools their highest marks in nearly a decade, with 42 percent awarding grades of "A" or "B," according to a Gallup poll released Saturday.

That is a sharp jump from a year ago, when only 31 percent of those questioned gave public schools such high marks; and it is the best showing since 1976. In the 16-year history of the poll, fewer people than ever — 4 percent — gave the schools an "F" or failing grade.

"Americans are more favorably disposed toward the public schools today that at any time in the last decade," the Gallup organization said in its summary of the poll conducted for Phi Delta Kappa, an educators' fraternity.

Ten percent gave the schools an "A," 32 percent "B," 35 percent "C," 11 percent "D" and 4 percent "F." Eight percent had no opinion. A year ago, only 6 percent gave the schools an "A" and 25 percent a "B," while 7 percent awarded them an "F."

The public also gives higher marks to teachers and principals, with about half getting an "A" or "B" today compared with less than 40 percent three years ago.

The sharp spurt in public confidence comes at the end of a year in which Reagan administration advisers and blue-ribbon panels criticized the schools for low academic standards, lack of discipline, and inadequate teachers.

By a margin of 42 percent to 34 percent, those surveyed said Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale is more likely than President Reagan to improve the quality of public education.

And two-thirds said they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who wants to increase federal spending for education; only 22 percent said that would make them less likely to vote that way.

Mondale has promised to boost the federal education budget by $11 billion and to lead a "renaissance" of learning from the White House.

But the poll's findings may also provide ammunition for Reagan, who has claimed credit for sparking a turnaround in public interest in the schools. Reagan said recently that the current wave of reforms has put the lie to critics "who always insist money is the only answer to the problems of our schools."

The Gallup organization questioned 1,515 adults in person from May 18-27 for its 16th annual school survey. The margin of error ranged from plus or minus 3 percentage points.

People weren't asked to assign letter grades in the first five polls from 1969-73. In 1974, 18 percent gave grades of "A," 30 percent "B," 21 percent "C," 6 percent "D" and 5 percent "F." Twenty percent said they did not know how to rate the schools.

In 1975, 13 percent gave "A" and 30 percent "B" and in 1976 it was 13 percent "A" and 29 percent "B."

Other findings:

— The percentage of adults willing to pay higher taxes for education has climbed from 30 percent in 1981 to 41 percent.

— Some 82 percent rate building the best educational system in the world as key to America's future strength, compared with 70 percent who cited industrial development as very important, and only 45 percent who picked military superiority.

— Although teachers oppose merit pay by roughly a 2-1 margin, "the public favors the idea by about 3-1," Gallup said.

— Discipline still ranks No. 1 on the public's list of school problems, with 27 percent listing it as the biggest woe, followed by drugs (18 percent), poor curriculum and standards (15 percent), lack of financial support (14 percent) and difficulty in getting good teachers (14 percent). Low teacher salaries — a frequent complaint from the profession — were mentioned by only 4 percent.

Jurors Face Verdicts In 2 Issues

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When John Z. De Lorean's drug case goes to the jury this week, it will be the climax of two trials — one in which the automaker was prosecuted on cocaine charges and another in which his attorneys "tried" the government for alleged dirty tricks.

"No government can do to anyone what was done to John De Lorean," defense attorney Howard Weitzman said in his opening statement to jurors, referring to the controversial practice of undercover government "stings."

But the chief prosecutor, James Walsh, said De Lorean was a victim not of government persecution but of his own ambition, which led him to raise money through a drug deal.

"This case is about money, drugs, pride and ego," Walsh told jurors. "It is about a man whose driving desire to succeed led him into the dirty world of narcotics and to this courtroom and to the end of his dream."

De Lorean, 59, whose career as a maverick automaker had made him an international celebrity, was arrested Oct. 19, 1982, in a hotel room near Los Angeles International Airport. Moments before the arrest, he had been videotaped with a suitcase containing 55 pounds of cocaine.

He was charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of the drug in a desperate plan to save his Northern Ireland auto company from bankruptcy.

Some questions remain unanswered. Was De Lorean really threatened by an informant, as he claimed? Was the British government, which financed his auto factory, a secret participant in his arrest? There was no testimony on either issue.

Although the government opened its case with a wallop — five hours of incriminating videotapes — the subsequent months of trial produced more testimony about the conduct of FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents than about De Lorean's behavior.

One agent admitted destroying potential evidence, another said he had back- dated documents in violation of DEA policy, and another apologized to the jury for giving contradictory testimony.

Reagan Vows To Veto Hike In Personal Taxes

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - President Reagan, charging that Walter F. Mondale would hike taxes $1,500 per household to pay for the federal deficit, promised Saturday to veto any bill increasing personal income taxes.

"I think the Democratic nominee owes the American people ... a full explanation of how and where he expects to get that $1,500 more per household, over $135 billion in increased taxes," Reagan said in his weekly paid political radio broadcast.

Speaking from his mountaintop ranch as he nears the midpoint of his 18-day vacation, the president denied anew Mondale's contention that he has a secret plan to raise taxes after the Nov. 6 election.

"I will propose no increase in personal income taxes and I will veto any tax bill that would raise personal tax rates for working Americans or that would fail to make our tax system simpler or more fair," he promised.

When asked how long the pledge applied, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "for the foreseeable future."

At a news conference in North Oaks, Minn., Mondale belittled Reagan's pledge, saying the president might propose a national sales tax after the election.

Mondale said that Reagan "failed again to tell the American people whether or how he will reduce the deficit, completely distorted my plan to do so and demonstrated that he prefers canned long-distance charges to real debates.

"The tax and budget issue is now becoming an issue of Mr. Reagan's credibility on this question," he said.

"I'm convinced they are going to sock it to the average American, that they've got in mind a national sales tax or a value-added tax," Mondale said.

Hammering away again at an issue that is likely to dominate the presidential campaign, the president denounced Mondale for representing "the same tired old formula - tax and tax to spend and spend."

At a news conference two weeks ago and several times since, Reagan has denied that he has any plan to raise taxes, but Saturday was the first time he specifically mentioned personal income taxes. He has left the door ajar to a tax increase by saying it could be considered after federal spending has been cut as deeply as possible.

Continuing his broadside against Mondale's declaration that if elected he would raise taxes to help pay for the federal deficit, approaching $200 billion a year, Reagan said:

"Lately, you may have heard a lot of talk about a so-called secret plan to raise your taxes. Well, I've made it clear that we have no such plan. But apparently, such a plan exists, nonetheless. It's not our plan; it's not yours. It's the plan of the Democratic nominee for president."

Reagan said Mondale's pledge to cut the deficit by two-thirds during his presidency amounts to $135 billion that would have to be raised in new taxes.

Deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the $1,500 figure was achieved by dividing $135 billion by 92 million tax paying households.

On a related issue, Reagan contended that Mondale has made promises during the campaign that would cost $90 billion to implement. He said that figure was taken from a Wall Street Journal article. White House press aides referred to an article published in the Journal last Jan. 24.

Reagan also said Mondale has pledged to make budget cuts worth between $75 billion and $80 billion.

"So when you add it all up, the Democratic nominee's savings, assuming he would achieve them, still don't quite add up to enough to pay for the likely cost of his promises," Reagan declared.

"Rather than telling the truth about his plan or lack of it, Mr. Reagan spent most of his time distorting mine," Mondale responded. The former vice president conceded that he could not provide figures to show how he would cut the deficit by two-thirds until the administration provided budget estimates that were due last month.

Reagan, who pledged four years ago to balance the federal budget during his tenure in the White House, said he would cope with huge budget deficits by "continuing our economic growth and by reducing wasteful government spending."

With that position, Reagan is at odds with even some members of his own party, who have said a tax increase could be necessary to stem the deficit tide.

Mondale has accused Reagan of planning a "December surprise if he's re-elected: unfair budget cuts and tax increases that will sock the middle class."

Martin Feldstein, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, has said tax increases are needed to cut deficits. Sources have said that Budget Director David Stockman has argued for a similar method to cut the deficit.

Reagan recalled that he has reduced personal income tax rates by 25 percent. "Our tax cuts have meant more money for you to spend and invest and for you to save and use as you wish," Reagan said. "More money to create jobs and expand the economy."

Reagan said he wanted to broaden the tax base "so that we can bring income tax rates further down, not up."

Lance, Burford: Case To Remember For Both Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The short-lived resurrections of Anne Burford and Bert Lance, former high-ranking officials forced to resign under fire, demonstrated how even skilled politicans like Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale can voluntarily open old wounds that threaten to infect their campaigns.

The sudden reappearances and just as abrupt departures of Lance and Mrs. Burford could wind up a draw for the two presidential candidates.

For every Democrat tempted to use the Burford episode as an example of Republican skeletons in the closet, there was a Republican ready to point a finger at Lance as a Democratic counterpart.

And now that both have been pushed offstage yet again, it remains to be seen whether there will be lasting damage to either campaign.

On successive days last week, Mrs. Burford resigned as chairwoman of a presidential advisory commission before she was even sworn in, and Lance quit as general chairman of Mondale's presidential campaign before he ever settled into the newly-created role.

Their new positions had been small steps toward political rehabilitation, since both had left office — Mrs. Burford as chief of the Environmental Protection Agency in 1983 and Lance as budget director in 1977 — in storms of controversy.

But the new appointments, Mrs. Burford's announced on July 2 and Lance's less than two weeks later on July 14, met with roars of disapproval from pros within their own parties.

Neither group wanted old political baggage dragged into view at the onset of a fall presidential campaign.

The re-emergence of Mrs. Burford reminded voters that Reagan's record on the environment alarmed environmentalists, and the resurrection of Lance once again tied Mondale to the unpopular president he served as vice president.

Why either candidate would risk putting such proven liabilities back in the public eye is beyond an easy answer.

In the case of Lance, Mondale apparently hoped to appeal to the Georgian's native South, where Democrats fared poorly in 1980. But any advantages were quickly outweighed by adverse reaction, which Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel said he had "terribly underestimated."

Mrs. Burford, on the other hand, offered no obvious advantages. In an interview, Reagan said simply, "I just believe that when someone has been the victim of an attempted lynching, then someone ought to come to the rescue."

Mrs. Burford resigned her EPA post in March of last year, after being cited for contempt of Congress but escaping prosecution in a host of allegations surrounding the multibillion-dollar "superfund" program to clean up hazardous waste dump sites.

But hardly had that furor abated when the White House said Mrs. Burford would chair the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere. The outcry was immediate, but Reagan indicated he would stand by her.

Mrs. Burford hardly helped her cause by calling her new job "a nothing-burger ... a joke" and referring to Washington as "too small to be a state but too large to be an asylum for the mentally deranged."

On Wednesday she resigned, citing in her letter to Reagan "an unwarranted furor created around my appointment. This debate does a grave disservice to your outstanding record on the environment."

Lance's resignation letter was tendered Thursday.

"I have become a major focus of the campaign, through the efforts of different people raising once again old charges which have been fully resolved," Lance wrote.

Those charges of financial irregularities forced Lance to quit as President Carter's budget director in 1977. He was later indicted but acquitted of charges of bank fraud and conspiracy.

When Mondale's people floated a trial balloon prior to the Democratic National Convention that Lance might replace Charles T. Manatt as national chairman of the party, reaction was swift — and negative. So Lance wound up as general campaign chairman, which apparently was designed to mollify the Georgian while giving him lower visibility in the campaign.

Poll Gives South 2-1 To Reagan

ATLANTA (UPI) — Voters questioned in nine Southern states favored President Reagan over Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale by a nearly 2-1 margin, according to a poll released Saturday.

A Darden Research Corp. telephone poll of 1,000 registered voters showed Reagan received 60 percent of the vote to Mondale's 33.7 percent, with 6.3 percent undecided. The poll, which was conducted July 24-30, has a margin of error of 3.1 percent, according to pollster Claibourne Darden.

Darden said the results were similar to a poll taken last spring. "We waited five days after the convention to let opinion settle down," he said. "The lasting effect of the Democratic Convention in the South is a washout in terms of the presidential race."

Voters were interviewed in Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Virginia.

"Looking back on the Democratic Convention, I think they were talking to the poor, downtrodden, weary, hungry and weak," Darden said.

Respondents with an annual household income below $10,000 went 56 percent for Mondale and 37 percent for Reagan. In the $10,000 to $15,000 range, the vote was 52 percent for Mondale and 43 percent for Reagan.

In the $15,000 to $25,000 range, 56 percent favored Reagan and 35 percent favored Mondale. Eighty percent of respondents with incomes over $40,000 annually favored Reagan to 16 percent for Mondale.

Darden said of the people who favored Reagan, 77 percent were strong supporters, compared to 62.6 percent for Mondale.

"What this tells us is this election is very polarized very early," he said. "It's between the haves and the have-nots ... the givers and the give-mes.

"Reagan's popularity is fundamentally a function of the economy," Darden said. "People are relatively well satisfied.

The poll showed 48 percent think they are better off financially now than a year ago, with 21 percent saying they are worse off.

Forty-five percent said they believe the economy will improve next year, as opposed to 19 percent who expect it to get worse.

"What this ends up being is if Mondale has any success at all in the South, Reagan has to give that opportunity to him by himself fouling up," Darden said.

Quiche For Hope

SEATTLE (AP) — The city of Seattle doesn't have a key to the city to present to visiting celebrities and dignitaries. But in Bob Hope's case, it cooked something up.

Hope, in town for a performance and to serve as grand marshal for the Seafair Torchlight Parade, received a "quiche to the city" from Mayor Charles Royer.

"I hasten to add it's a ham quiche, as well," the mayor said.

Royer presented the quiche, emblazoned with a design of the city's landmark Space Needle, to the 81-year-old entertainer at a charity luncheon.

The comedian told those attending the luncheon he had an ulterior motive for coming to the Pacific Northwest.

"I come to Seattle every once in a while to breathe," said Hope.

Meagher Leads Golden Parade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis, accelerating brilliantly with about 40 meters remaining, won America's first gold medal in track and fld in tje 1984 Olympic Games, capturing the men's 100-meter dash in 9.99 seconds Saturday night before a jammed audience at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Lewis, seking to wn four gold medals — the same as American Jesse Owens in the 1936 Games — jumped with joy after he crossed the finish line, circled part of the track, was given an American flag and celebrated as the crowd went wild.

Sam Graddy, the NCAA and national champion from the University of Tennessee, finished second at 10.19 and Ben Johnson of Canada was third at 10.22.

The gold medal was the first for the United States in the 100 meters since 1968 when Jim Hines set a world record of 9.95 in the high altitude of the Mexico City Games, a mark that stood until 1983 when Calvin Smith of the United States lowered it to 9.93. Lewis' time Saturday night was the fastest ever at sea level in Olympic history.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Americans produced another wave of gold medals Saturday in the Summer Olympics, with Mary T. Meagher winning her third gold of the Games, as Canada, Romania and China showed their mettle, too.

U.S. track star Carl Lewis set the stage for a golden final in the 100-meter dash, the U.S. basketball team remained undefeated after five games, and Americans also won gold in skeet shooting and rowing. Teammate Edwin Moses won his 104th consecutive 400-meter hurdles race in the semifinals, at a leisurely 48.51 seconds.

Romania won five of six gold medals in rowing competition, and Canada's Alex Baumann took his second gold and second world record in a distance swimming individual medley.

China's Li Ning won the gold in the floor exercise of the men's gymnastic competition with a spectacular display of acrobatic tumbling and his teammate, Lou Yun, won the silver. Japan's Koji Sotomura edged American Bart Conner for the bronze.

Meagher, cheered on by some 20 members of her family, set an Olympic record of 2:06.90 in the women's 200-meter butterfly. But teammate Nancy Hogshead finished fourth, missing a chance for five medals — the most in the Games.

Meagher, who is one of three American triple-gold winners, earlier won the 100 butterfly and was a member of the winning U.S. 400 medley relay team.

Hogshead won the 100 freestyle and was part of the winning 400 freestyle relay. She was to swim the anchor on the women's 400 medleyt relay Saturday.

Mike O'Brien won gold in the 1,500-meter freestyle in 15 minutes, 5.20 seconds, and George DiCarlo was second in 15:10.59.

Hogshead had won the gold medal in the 100 freestyle and a silver in the individual 200 medley and was a member of the gold medal-winning 400 medley relay team.

Baumann won the 220-meter individual medley after earlier winning the gold in the 400 individual medley, then said his times prove he's the best there is in those events.

"Medals are more important than records, but with the Soviet bloc not here, with the world records, there is no disputing I'm the best in the world," he said.

Baumann was timed in 2:01.42, beating his own mark of 2:02.25 that he set two years ago.

American Pablo Morales of Santa Clara, Calif., won the silver medal, his second of the Games. He also had won the silver in the 100-meter butterfly.

America continued to show it was best overall at the Olympics raising its gold medal total to 33, within reach the 34 golds it won in the 1976 Olympics. The United States' won 45 gold medals in both 1968 and 1924, and took 80 gold medals in the 1904 Games in St. Louis. That total was matched by the Soviet Union in 1980.

Lewis, accelerating late as usual, finished fast and won the semifinal of the 100-meter dash, in 10.14 seconds. The medal — which Lewis hopes will be his first of four golds here, matching Jesse Owens' legendary feat in 1936 — was set for later in the night.

The U.S. women's eight oars with coxswain won the other gold, its first in history, but it was Romania that reigned supreme at Lake Casitas.

The U.S. skeetshooting gold was won by Matthew Dryke of Columbus, Ga. The U.S. marksmanship instructor with the U.S. Army tied the Olympic record with 198 points.

In swimming, the U.S. team had top qualifiers in only two of five finals. Australia was the fastest team in the heats for the men's 400-meter medley relay, but the United States was slated to have a completely different foursome in the final.

U.S. swimmers already had 19 gold medals and needed just two more to equal the Olympic record of 21 set by the 1968 America team.

The U.S. men's basketball team swept to its fifth straight victory, defeating Spain 101-68 after holding a 46-41 halftime lead. Michael Jordan led the United States with 24, while Chris Mullin added 16.

While competition continued on the seventh day of the Games, a new Olympic queen was enjoying the first day of her reign.

Mary Lou Retton of Fairmount, W.Va., grabbed the gold medal Friday night in the women's all-around gymnastics competition. She edged Romania's Ecaterina Szabo with a perfect "10" on the vault, her final event.

She had an appearance on national television and journalists were scurrying for her every word. But the United States Olympic Committee was unable to set up a news conference, and no one was sure where Retton was.

The only Eastern bloc country that dared to attend the Games in the face of the Soviet-led boycott, Romania won as expected in rowing with a big, strong team.

Valeria Racila, beaten in the 1982 world championships by an inch, won the single sculls by defeating Charlotte Geer of West Fairlee, Vt., by a boat length.

Jones Sparkles For U.S. Team

LOS ANGELES — Former East Carolina University basketball star Sam Jones continues to make an outstanding contribution to the American Women's Team Handball squad, which is now 1-1 in the round-robin competition.

Jones scored the winning goal earlier this week in a stunning upset of China, the favorite for the gold medal, and had a total of six goals in the match.

Friday, she added nine goals in a 29-27 defeat at the hands of South Korea.

Her total goals, 15, leads the U.S. team, and is the second highest total among all women in the competition.

Former Duke Grid Greats Join Big Leaguers In Field

Three former Duke University football greats join two former baseball All-Stars as guest celebrities for the Ronald McDonald House Golf Tournament.

The tournament, a superball format, will be held on Monday, September 10, at Brook Valley Country Club. A 42-team field will compete in the tournament, each team consisting of four Pitt area golfers and one guest celebrity.

Guests celebrities announced this week include former Duke gridders Ace Parker, Eric Tipton and Tom Davis, along with baseball greats Tommy Byrne and Jim "Catfish" Hunter.

Clarence "Ace" Parker was an all-American selection at Duke, playing halfback. He signed a professional baseball contract in 1937 with the Philadelphia Athletics, hitting a home run his first time at bat. He completed that season with the A's before joining the Brooklyn Dodgers of the NFL four games into the season. Just five days later, he completed 9 of 10 passes for 122 yards in his first game.

Although he never received a serious injury while playing football, Parker twice broke legs on the baseball diamond.

In 1940, he was named the Most Valuable Player in the NFL, playing 656 out of a possible 660 minutes during the year. He passed, ran, punted, played defense and returns punts and kickoffs.

Following World War II, Parker returned to football with the Boston Yankees, playing for two more years before returning to baseball as a manager in the Carolina League, twice named manager of the year. He then served as an assistant football and head baseball coach at Duke before becoming a professional scout.

He is a member of the Virginia and North Carolina Sports Halls of Fame, the Duke University Sports Hall of Fame, and both the college and professional football halls of fame.

Eric Tipton, a Duke All-American in 1938, is perhaps best remembered for his punting as the "Iron Dukes" topped Pittsburgh 7-0 to cap their perfect season and earn a Rose Bowl bid.

With 52,200 on hand, Duke and Pitt battled in the snow with Tipton punting a record 20 times during the

Greenville Team Wins State Title

WINSTON-SALEM — Tim Moore scattered three hits and struck out 16 as the Greenville North State Little League All-Stars gained a 4-1 victory over Belmont to win the North Carolina State Championship yesterday.

The victory sends Greenville to St. Petersburg, Fla., for the Southern Regionals, against the Virginia state champions. That game will be played on Monday, August 13 at 6 p.m. A total of 13 teams will participate in the single elimination tournament which will decide the South in the Little League World Series to be held later in August at Williamsport, Pa.

Moore walked but three in the contest as he went the distance in the closest game the North Staters had in the tournament. They beat Fort Bragg, 11-4 in the opener, and then downed Lenoir, 12-1, in the semifinals. They are now 6-0 in tournament play.

Heath Clark scored the first run in the third inning. After being hit by a pitch, he moved up to third on wild pitches, scoring on a single by Moore.

Belmont came back, however, scoring a run in the bottom of the third to tie it up. Trent Suggs walked as did Craig Kinlaw. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on an error on the pickoff attempt.

Greenville then came up with three runs in the top of the fifth. Park Williams got a one-out walk and Derrick Clark tripled him in. Moore was intentionally walked with two away and he stole second. Derrick Hines then singled to drive in both runners for a 4-1 lead that held the rest of the way.

Moore was the lone hitter for Greenville with more than one hit for the day, collecting two.

The team returned to Greenville last night and immediately began making plans for a fund-raising drive to cover expenses for the St. Petersburg trip. Team officials said it would take approximately $4,000 to send the team to the tournament. Once in St. Petersburg, food and lodging will be picked up by the tournament sponsors.

Anyone interested in making a donation should contact Bill Clark, 756-0046, or Ron Wing, 756-8643.

Talented QBs Lack Experience

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

(Editor's note: This is the fifth of a series of stories on the prospects for the 1984 East Carolina University football team. Each story will cover a specific area of play. Today's story is on the quarterbacks.)

Mystery Man

With no experienced quarterbacks in the East Carolina camp, the question of who will replace graduated Kevin Ingram is the big question this fall. Not one of the four top candidates has taken a single snap in a varsity collegiate game. (Reflector Photo)

East Carolina's new offensive coordinator Don Murry can do a lot of things this fall to prepare the successor of Kevin Ingram for the 1984 season.

"We're going to try and put him into as many game situations as is possible," Murry said.

One thing he can't do, however, is fill the stands with some 70,000 screaming, hostile fans (a la Florida State), and bring in an Indian warrior on horseback to plant a spear in the center of the field.

It's called pressure and this year's quarterback — whoever he may be — is going to be under a certain amount of it in that season opener at Florida State.

Last year's quarterback, Kevin Ingram, has completed his eligibility, and that leaves the Pirates without a single quarterback who has taken a snap in a varsity football game.

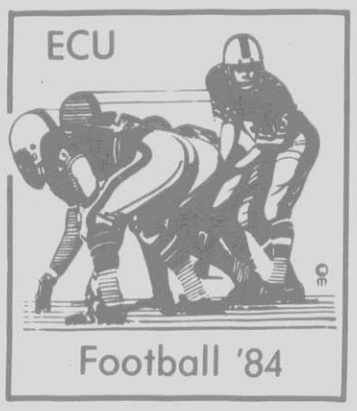
"We've got the talent," Murry points out. "The athletes we're dealing with at quarterback are outstanding athletes. But, it's true, they don't have any experience."

Ingram took nearly every snap during last year's 8-3 Top Twenty season, and when he wasn't out there, another senior, John Williams, did the job.

This spring, Coach Ed Emory recruited one junior college candidate and a couple of freshmen. They join a red-shirt freshman and a sophomore who saw some action at running back, along with a couple of walkons, one of whom has already made himself felt.

Brian Watts (6-0, 190, Fr.) is "a competitor," Murry says. "He's dedicated and determined. When his opportunity came (this spring) he ran the whole scrimmage by himself. He worked hard and we just can't count him out."

Nevertheless, going into the fall drills next week, Ron Jones, who missed the spring game with an injury, will be listed in the number one position. Jones (5-10, 180, Fr.) was redshirted last year, and is expected to produce well once he gains the experience. Behind him will be Robbie Bartlett (5-10, 185, Jr.), a transfer from Southwest Los Angeles Junior College, and sophomore Darrell Speed (6-0, 195, So.) who played in four games last year, carrying the ball 11 times for 34 yards. He did attempt one pass — as a halfback — but it fell incomplete.



"I feel good about the competition for the position," Murry said. "They're all very positive about this and will extend themselves to earn the job. They had good springs and good summers. It just remains to be seen how much better they got."

Murry feels that all of the candidates for the job are outstanding runners, that they can run the offense and execute the option.

"The unknown is how they are going to perform on Saturday. That's why we'll try to create as many game-like situations as we can."

Murry said that Jones earned the number one position in 18 practices before he was injured in the spring, and someone will have to knock him off in the fall to most past him. "Ron has more speed than Robbie and is stronger. They are about equal in running the option and both make good decisions. They have good instincts about when to make the option, and they may be a little ahead of where Kevin was at the end in this."

Murry said he still has to evaluate Speed's ability, since he went down in practice after just four sessions in the spring. "We need to get him back and into game situations to see what he can do."

The coach feels that all four of the quarterbacks have good arms and can throw the ball well. "One thing we're going to have to do this year is throw long with our speedy receivers. This will open up the rest of the game, too. All of them do a good job on the short passes, but they need to work on the intermediate area. That's where the real work is. On the long pass, you just put it up and let the receiver run it down. On the short pass, you just have to either throw or tuck it up and run.

"But on the intermediate game, you have to be able to make decisions, pick up second and third receivers and get the ball to them. That's where the biggest amount of work has to come. This is where the inexperience is really going to hurt for a while."

Joining the "veterans" in the fall will be two recruited quarterbacks, Todd Abrams (6-0, 185, Mobile, Ala.) and Lewis Wilson (5-10, 180, Foley, Ala.). They'll be joined by walkon James Ward of Williamston, who took his team to the Division II 3-A Eastern finals last year. Ward is much in the mold of former ECU quarterback Mike Weaver.

Murry, however, does not forsee any of those three fitting into the picture this fall.

So the talent is there; it's just a question of getting it all together and bringing it out. With ECU's rugged schedule, it must come quickly — and there must come a certain amount of mental toughness too, especially with such a hostile opening as Florida State presents.

"I don't know of anything I can do to help them get ready for this," Murry said. "I can get them ready physically, and try to help them, but I don't want to dwell on (the mental aspect) too much. I'll just try to emphasize their strengths.

"We can't change the fact that they're rookies. We just have to try and get them as ready as possible to take that first snap and then improve from there on out."

Next: Running Backs.

ECU Rookies Begin Drills

East Carolina University's football Pirates report this week and will begin prctice next Friday.

Freshmen and other newcomers not previously at ECU came to town on Friday and went through physicals and orientation meetings on Saturday. They begin NCAA approved workouts on Monday.

The varisty players will return to campus on Wednesday, have their physicals on Thursday and begin preparations for the 1984 season on Friday.

The Pirates open the 1984 season on Saturday, September 1, traveling to Florida State.

The Pirates will have two new coaches this fall, offensive coordinator Don Murry and defensive backfield coach Linwood Ferguson.

Chief concerns for the Pirates will be to find a new starting quarterback and a new defensive line, along with building depth at other positions.

U.S. Women Are Headed To Finals

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The unbeaten U.S. basketball women have won by margins of 28, 34, 37 and 36 points, an Olympic success that surprises even their coach, Pat Head Summitt.

The Americans, already assured a berth in the gold medal game against China or South Korea Tuesday night, conclude their preliminary round at 11 a.m. PDT Sunday against Canada.

The winner of the South Korea-China meeting Sunday at The Forum will face the United States in the title game at 7 p.m. PDT Tuesday in the same arena.

"We anticipated strong competition here," Summitt said after her women went 4-0 with a 91-55 pounding of China Friday night.

"That's why you are seeing the large margins that you see. We play very hard. We have depth.

"It seems like after the first 10 to 12 minutes, the game is even. Then our depth sets us a notch above everbody."

Summit said her squad is "15 points better than last year's national team. We have a better team concept and team chemistry."

Despite a string of routs, Summitt expects stiff competition from a Canadian team that has beaten China and Australia and lost to South Korea and Yugoslavia.

The Canadians' two losses have been by a combined six points.

"Canada always plays us very well," said the University of Tennessee coach. "We intimidate some opponents. We can't do that against Canada. They don't hold us in awe."

Bev Smith, the leading Canadian scorer, says she knows why the Americans are powering toward the first U.S. gold medal in the women's sport.

"The easiest thing to do is realize that the USA is a great team. They are taller and quicker," said the 6-foot-1 guard. "But we've got confidence. We've played them before with success. We're going to try to stop their inside game."

Smith has scored 57 points, an average of 14 per game.

For the United States, 6-3 forward Cheryl Miller is No. 1 with 71 points, an average of 18.

Americans No Longer 'Ugly'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the Olympics end a week from now, the long-enduring image of the "Ugly American" apparently will have been replaced in the minds of many foreign athletes and visitors to the Games.

"Friendly" seems the most frequent term visitors use to describe their person-to-person contact with their American hosts.

"I have one complaint," said Santiparb Tejavanija, an official with the team from Thailand. "We have been treated too good. You have spoiled us."

There have been some general complaints, including claims that media coverage and crowd reactions have been too fervently American. There also has been a smattering of more specific gripes, with athletes saying their quarters are too cramped and spartan, and journalists and fans bemoaning the travel time between the spread-out competition sites.

But most of the personal reviews have been glowing ones.

"People have been so nice, everything has been excellent," said Mohamed Abdul Jawad, a Saudi Arabian soccer player. "Every player from our country says the same thing. I hope to come back sometime and bring my family."

Egyptian journalist Rifaat El-Nagar said he was surprised at his reception.

"We believed before coming here that Americans don't like foreigners, but all the people are really friendly," he said. "Everybody smiles, everybody wants to give their heart."

Said British journalist Joseph Lancaster, "It's the people who make it, and the people here are great."

Sprinter Saidur Rahmen Dawn, Bangladesh's sole competitor in the Games, said, "No problems. The people are very friendly and the food is good. The village is great."

Dawn, relaxing on the grass in the flower-encircled, park-like village at Southern Cal, added, "The beauty of nature is here."

Juliette Cuthbert, a sprinter from Jamaica who attends college in Texas, said she and all the other athletes she's talked to are having a very good time.

"At the Moscow Olympics, it was very restricted," she said. "I feel much more free here. You can leave the village, go downtown. And in Moscow, people didn't seem to smile; here, everyone's so friendly. I think the athletes are having fun."

Lou Yun, a gymnast from China, said, "I feel competing here is very comfortable. The crowds have treated us very well and it is much like competing at home."

Dr. Abdul Mannan of Pakistan, a fan who said attending his first Olympics is a dream come true, was a somewhat worried before coming to Los Angeles. He had read recently about the massacre of 21 people at a McDonald's in the San Diego suburb of San Ysidro, Calif., and the incident in Westwood last weekend where a man drove a car along a sidewalk, killing one and injuring 54.

"I was a little bit scared, especially since I had read the news about people being killed," said Mannan. "But everything is smooth and calm. I'm enjoying the show — it's perfectly executed, nothing has been forgotten. It's much better than my expectations."

Leslie Munoz, a tiny gymnast from Spain, said simply, "I'm very happy; this is the best time of my life."

Although the strict security has caused journalists to complain about access to the athletes, the athletes themselves don't seem to mind.

"The security is very tight, but I am glad they are there," said Leslie Ata, a weightlifter from the Solomon Islands.

Of the complaints, perhaps the most common has been the athletes' criticizing their living quarters.

"Conditions are not as good as in Mexico City or Munich," said Robert Oko, an official with the delegation from Kenya. "We had two or three to a room in Munich, here we have three or four. When we arrived, we saw the problems with accomodations and asked for more, but we were told there were no more rooms."

There also were some good-natured complaints, including Cuthbert's contention that the disco in the village was "Blah, dead," and one from lightweight boxer Zaw Latt of Burma that he was tiring of the meat-and-potatoes fare in the village cafeteria.

"The food is not too good," Latt said, speaking through an interpreter. "Steaks, bacon, chicken, all covered with gravy. I miss my curry."

Roberts Does Escape Act, Holds To Memphis Lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Loren Roberts engineered a great escape act from constant trouble then capped a hard-won round of 70 with a birdie on the 18th hole that left him with a one-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

"This is a trip in unchartered waters for me," said Roberts, 29, who never before has finished higher than 10th in a PGA Tour event and twice has lost — then regained — his Tour playing rights due to lack of performance.

"I've never been in the lead at this stage of a golf tournament before," said Roberts, who has led or shared the lead all the way in this one.

"I don't know what to expect.

"I'm not going to kid myself. I know I'll be nervous tomorrow," he said, then shrugged.

"Whatever happens, happens.

"I'm thankful I was able to hang in there today."

Roberts made a great save on the 17th hole then, moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day, wedged to four feet and made the birdie putt on the 18th that restored his one-shot lead over Bob Eastwood.

Roberts completed three trips over the 7,282 yards of rolling hills that make up the Colonial Country Club course in 207, nine shots under par.

The veteran Eastwood, who scored the first victory of his 13-year career earlier this season in New Orleans, had a 4-under-par 68 in the mild, cloudy weather and completed three rounds at 208, eight under par.

No one else was within five shots of the lead going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first pize.

Tied for third at 212 — four shots back of Eastwood — were Mark Lye, Curtis Strange and Tim Simpson. Lye and Simpson each had a 70 and Strange shot 71.

Third round scores Saturday in the $500,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic on the 7,282 yard, par 72 Colonial Country Club course:

Rookie Willie Wood, one stroke back when the day's play started, was ambushed by a double bogey on the difficult 17th hole, shot a 75 and dropped back to 213, six off the pace.

He was tied with Mark O'Meara, Roger Maltbie, Gil Morgan, Lon Hinkle and Bill Kratzert. O'Meara had a 69, Maltbie 71, Morgan and Hinkle 72s and Kratzert slipped to a 74.

Roberts did not make a bogey, but had to one-putt for par seven times in one stretch of eight holes, then saved his round with a 25-foot par putt on the 17th, where he hit a tree on his second shot and had a full 4-iron for his third shot on the par-4 hole.

"I was scratching, clawing, kicking and biting to make those pars," he said.

Despite his adventures, Roberts had a string of 14 consecutive pars before a 12-foot putt fell for a birdie on the 15th.

Miller Leads LPGA Field

WHEELING, W.Va (AP) — Alice Miller rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday to beat the rains and take a 1-stroke lead in the $150,000 West Virginia LPGA Classic.

Miller, the defending champion, sandwiched birdies at 1 and 18 around 16 pars to shoot a 2-under-par 70 for a two-day total of 7-under 137.

Miller leads Vicki Singleton by one stroke and fast-charging Beverly Klass by two shots entering Sunday's final round on the 6,150-yard course.

Singleton, who led the first round with a tournament-record 6-under-par 66, finished Saturday's second round at even par 72. After nine straight pars, Singleton bogeyed the 10th and 11th holes to fall two shots back before making it up with birdies at 12 and 17.

Klass, who began the day at 1-under-par, put together a mercurial round of 4-under with 8 birdies and 4 bogeys on the sloping Speidel course at Oglebay Park.

"It was typical of my game. When I'm in contention I have a lot of bogeys and I also have a lot of birdies. I'm just that type of player," said Klass. "I had control over my emotions. I hope tomorrow I can play as well mentally. If I have my nerves under control I play pretty well under pressure."

Cathy Pleger is 3 shots back of Miller at 4-under 140 while Joan Joyce and Lynn Stroney are 4 shots off the pace.

Miller, a Marysville, Calif., native, tied Singleton on the first hole with a birdie 3 by making a 50-foot chip shot from the right of the green on the 370-yard hole.

She played consistently throughout the rest of the day but did not get another birdie until the 18th when her putt from the back of the green gave her the lead just as the fifth rain shower in the last two days pelted the already soggy golf course.

contest, a number of these on first or second down. Tipton recorded kicks of 52, 50, 66, 47, 48, 56, 45, 53, 42 and 41 yards on successive tries. Fourteen times he pinned Pitt inside the 20, and on seven of those, the ball was downed inside the five.

Late in the game, he kicked the ball out of bounds on the one foot line and Bolo Perdue broke through to block a Pitt punt for the lone score of the game.

In addition to his kicking, Tipton was an outstanding passer, runner and defensive player. He also played baseball, having a six year career with the Philadelphia Athletics and the Cincinnati Reds.

Tom Davis, an all-American in 1944, was a three-time all-conference selectee, a fete matched by only Parker and Louis Allen. He was also the team's MVP in 1944, as he led the Blue Devil scoring with 48 points. In his career, he rushed for 1,775 yards while passing for 838. He also caught eight passes for 27 yards. He is the only Duke player to have appeared in both the Rose and Sugar bowls.

Byrne, who played professionally with the New York Yankees, was one of the all-time great pitchers for Wake Forest University. After coming to Wake from the University of Baltimore, he pitched from 1937-40 and also played in the outfield and at first base. He his .452 as a sophomore and .593 as a junior to lead the Southern Conference both of those years.

The lefthander left Wake in 1940 to sign a pro contract, moving up to the parent club in 1943 before going into the service, rejoining the Yankees in late i the year. He remained with the Yankees until traded to the St. Louis Browns in 1951. He also played with the White Sox and Senators. He recorded a 20-10 record in 1954 with the Pacific Coast League's Seattle team and was returned to the Yankees, remaining with them until 1954.

His best years were all with the Yankees, 15-7 in 1949, 15-9 in 1950 and 16-5 in 1955. He pitched in World Series games in 1949, 1955, 1956, and 1957, working in six games earning a 1-1 record and a 2.53 earned run average.

He was selected to the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame in 1976.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter was a 1974 selectee to the N.C. Hall of Fame, a year that was capped by his being signed by the New York Yankees as one of the first free agents.

A Perquimans High School star hurler, the righthander also played football. Despite the loss of a toe in a hunting accident, Kansas City A's owner Charlie O. Finley still signed him to a $75,000 bonus — also adding his nickname.

After helping the A's to several world championships following their move to Oakland, Hunter became a free agent, and was signed to a $3,000,000 contract by the Yankees. He won 25 games that year, hurling 30 complete games, and was the Cy Young Award. In 1968, he had a perfect game against the Twins and it was 13 years before his feat was duplicated.

Hunter won 20 or more from 1971 through 1975, before retiring to his farm near Hertford. He is still active in baseball, working with youth programs in his home area.

Coach's Tip Lifts Royals By Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Some timely advice from coach Lee May paid off for Kansas City right fielder Pat Sheridan Saturday.

Sheridan lined a bases-loaded single following a 28-minute rain delay to key a four-run Kansas City rally in the sixth inning as the Royals beat the Detroit Tigers 9-5.

Sheridan, who finished with three hits in five at-bats, said he had been in a mild slump lately because he had been trying to pull the ball.

"We had been playing in a lot of small ballparks and I guess I just got into a bad habit," Sheridan said. "Lee told me to just go where the ball was pitched. Sometimes your thinking is messed up.

"Today, I was just trying to see the ball and hit it where it was pitched. If I had gotten an inside pitch to pull, I still could have adjusted to it."

Joe Beckwith, 4-2, who took over from starter Mark Gubicza after 4 1-3 innings, checked the Tigers on two hits the rest of the way for a combined seven-hitter. The Royals pounded five Tiger pitchers for 15 hits as Detroit lost for the fourth time in five games.

"You don't like to use five pitchers, but that's part of the game, too," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "When you're not on a roll, games are hard to win. We're not on a roll right now, and Kansas City is. They bring in a reliever and he stops things. We bring in one and he doesn't."

Kansas City trailed 4-2 when Jorge Orta started the sixth with a single. Orta was forced on a fielder's choice grounder by Dane Iorg, who went to second on a wild pitch by Glenn Abbott and scored on Darryl Motley's single. Doug Bair, 4-3, came on for Detroit and walked Don Slaught before giving up a RBI single to Onix Concepcion that scored Motley to tie the game 4-4.

Bair then walked Willie Wilson to load the bases and, after the rain delay, gave up the single to Sheridan that scored Slaught and Concepcion.

"We have a better lineup," Royals Manager Dick Howser said. "We're battling. We didn't do that earlier in the season. The key has been the bottom end of our lineup. They weren't giving us that kind of production before."

In the Royals' first, Wilson singled and went to third on Sheridan's double off the center-field fence. Wilson scored on George Brett's grounder and Sheridan came home on a bloop single by Orta.

The Royals added three insurance runs in the seventh. Slaught's bases-loaded double drove in Iorg and Motley while Concepcion singled home Frank White, who had singled.

The Tigers got two in the third and two in the fifth. Tom Brookens was safe in the Detroit third when Iorg dropped his popup for an error at first. Alan Trammell walked, then Kirk Gibson hit his first of two triples.

In the fifth, Gibson beat out an infield single, then rode home on Ruppert Jones' seventh homer.

Boston 5

BOSTON (AP) — Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, the young right-hander on the Boston Red Sox, was hurt by the home run ball earlier this season. Now it's working on his side.

Dwight Evans, Wade Boggs and Jackie Gutierrez backed Boyd's six-hit pitching with home runs Saturday, powering the Red Sox to a 5-2 victory.

"We played long ball today," Boyd said. "They got me the lead and I was determined not to lose it in the end. My fastball was popping pretty good and my breaking pitches were pretty decent."

Boyd, who surrendered 11 home runs in his first 80 innings this year, went the distance for the sixth time with another homerless performance. He has not allowed a home run in his last 28 innings.

"I haven't been hanging any sliders," Boyd said of the streak. "The hanging sliders killed me a lot earlier this year. Now I'm concentrating on making them work for me."

Boyd, a skinny 145-pounder, joked about losing "four or five pounds" in the heat, close to 100 degrees in the sun. But he finished strong, striking out three of the last four batters he faced.

"He hung in there pretty good," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "The hardest thing for young pitchers is to finish a ball game. A lot of older pitchers can't finish either.

"The good thing about Dennis is he just doesn't tire. He's thin, but he's wiry and strong. As far as strength goes, he just doesn't tire."

Evans belted a two-run homer, his 21st of the season, in the first inning. Boggs hit his third to put Boston in front to stay in the third and Gutierrez drilled his second in the fifth. The three homers came off veteran southpaw Frank Tanana, 10-11, who was relieved by Dickie Noles in the sixth.

Boyd, now 6-8, scattered six hits, struck out eight and walked only one. He gave up an unearned run in the first when center fielder Tony Armas fumbled Larry Parrish's two-base hit and allowed Gary Ward, who had singled, to score. The other Texas run came in the third on an RBI single by Buddy Bell.

Evans also had a double and a single for his 10th three-hit game of the season. Boggs scored three runs. Ward had three of Texas' hits.

The Red Sox scored their last run in the seventh as Boggs singled and took second on Evans' single. Boggs scored when Noles threw a wild pitch and catcher Donnie Scott retrieved the ball but threw it away for an error.

Chicago 7
Milwaukee 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Greg Walker decided to do a little basic training at the plate.

"I've been struggling since the All-Star game break really, and I got back down to some basics," said Walker, who cracked two home runs Saturday to lead Tom Seaver and the Chicago White Sox to a 7-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I worked out some mechanical problems with my swing. I felt it coming, and today something just clicked for me. I felt real good at the plate."

It marked the second time in Walker's last seven games that he has homered twice in a game. He has 13 home runs this season.

"It was a matter of getting more rhythm at the plate and doing a little bit better job concentrating," he said.

The White Sox have now won five of their last six games. The Brewers have lost seven straight.

Seaver improved his record to 11-6 with his fifth straight victory. The veteran right-hander, who now has 284 career victories, gave up seven hits, did not allow a walk and struck out three. Jerry Don Gleaton went the final two innings for his second save.

"I think our attitude ought to be, since we have a long way to go, to just concentrate on being happy that we won this ballgame today," said White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa.

"I don't like to think in terms of jelling, because by the time you start thinking of that, a guy will go out there tomorrow with real good stuff and shut you down."

Chicago managed to overcome Milwaukee right-hander Moose Haas, who had shut them down seven times without a loss over the past five seasons.

"Moose is a very good control pitcher when he's on," said Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann. "He tried to throw a sinker to Walker and it came up and on the other one he tried to get it in.

"He said he's trying. That's all you can ask of the guy."

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead in the first on consecutive singles by Rick Manning and Jim Gantner and a sacrifice fly by Robin Yount.

Walker's first homer, a drive into the center-field stands, tied it in the fifth.

The White Sox chased Moose Haas, 6-9, with three runs in the sixth. Carlton Fisk singled with one out and Harold Baines followed with a double to center.

Greg Luzinski then lined a sacrifice fly to deep center — the seventh straight game Luzinski has driven in a run — and Walker followed with a two-run blast to right.

The Brewers came back with two runs in their half of the sixth. Manning opened with a single, and one out later, Yount doubled down the left-field line. Cecil Cooper then singled home both runners to pull Milwaukee within 4-3.

Chicago scored again in the seventh against reliever Tom Tellmann on Rudy Law's RBI single before Fisk blooped a two-run double in the ninth.

OAKLAND (AP) — Rookie left-hander Curt Young scattered four hits over 7 1-3 innings and Joe Morgan cracked a tie-breaking single in the fifth inning Saturday to lift the Oakland A's over the Seattle Mariners 4-2.

Young, 4-1, struck out five and walked three. Bill Caudill pitched one-hit relief over the final 1 2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

Jim Beattie, 9-12, took the loss.

Schellenberg's Actions Under Investigation

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The North Carolina Department of Insurance is investigating a dossier of complaints filed against a former Wake Forest basketball player who allegedly pocketed $23,000 in premiums, a Winston-Salem newspaper has reported.

The Winston-Salem Journal reported Saturday that the Insurance Department would neither confirm nor deny that an investigation into complaints about Jerry Schellenberg was taking place. But it said reliable sources say the case has been assigned to a field investigator.

Schellenberg, who played basketball for Wake Forest a decade ago, is accused in a civil lawsuit of pocketing the money while working as an agent for National Home Life Assurance Co.

U.S. Tops Spain 101-68, Jordan Stars In Victory

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Michael Jordan carried the U.S. basketball team to a slim first-half lead over Spain on Saturday, and when he went down with an injury his teammates responded with a 101-68 victory in the Olympics.

The victory was the fifth in a row for the unbeaten U.S. squad. The loss was Spain's first after four wins. Both teams move into Monday's quarterfinals.

Jordan, the North Carolina All-American, hit six of the Americans' last nine goals in the first half, including a 30-foot jumper at the buzzer, to give the United States a 46-41 lead at halftime.

"Michael Jordan is like rubber, not a man," said Spain's coach, Antonio Diaz-Miguel. "He has agility, speed and good jumping."

Jordan made the first U.S. goal of the second half, then limped off the court with an ankle injury with about 16 minutes remaining and the Americans leading only 51-48.

By the time he returned eight minutes later, Leon Wood, Chris Mullin and Sam Perkins had led a 15-2 streak that put the game out of reach, 66-50.

U.S. Coach Bobby Knight said a doctor and a trainer had checked Jordan and found him to be fit.

In later Group B games, Canada, 2-2, which already has clinched a berth, faced France, 0-4; Uruguay, 1-3, met China, 1-3, with a berth at stake.

In Group A, West Germany defeated Brazil for the right to play the Americans in the quarterfinals Monday night. The 1980 Olympic champion, Yugoslavia, 4-0, faced Italy, 4-0. In an earlier Group A contest, Australia, 3-2, already in the quarterfinals, thumped winless Egypt 94-78.

The 6-foot-5 Jordan finished as the Americans' leading scorer with 24 points, including 11 of 14 field goals and his last nine shots.

Mullin scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half and led the team with six steals.

"We had it going," the St. John's star said. "I didn't know Michael was hurt. We were rolling."

Patrick Ewing added 15 points and nine rebounds. Leon Wood had 12 points and 12 assists and Sam Perkins 11 points and 11 rebounds.

"I think when Michael hurt his ankle, we were starting to really play well at that time anyway," Knight said. "My concern was for Michael."

Diaz-Miguel said, "I believe this is the strongest team in United States basketball history. They also have one of the greatest coaches."

The Americans hit 56 percent from the field to Spain's 50 percent and dominated the boards, outrebounding the Spaniards 44-16.

Juan Antonio San Epifanio topped Spain with 17 points. Andres Jimenez added 14, while Fernando Martin, one of Spain's top guns, was limited to six points.

Ian Davies scored 18 points for Australia against Egypt, which got 37 points from Mohamed Soliman.

In the West German vitory, Detlef Schrempf scored 36 points for the winners.

Retton Slides Through

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The door cracked open ever so slightly, but that was all Mary Lou Retton needed.

The 4-foot-9, 95-pound powderkeg of gymnastics that one columnist described as "Charlie Hustle on the balance beam" was about to go for broke.

With only two apparatus events remaining in Friday night's all-around finals, Retton trailed Romanian star Ecaterina Szabo and realized it would take a pair of perfect scores in the floor exercises and vault to wipe out the deficit.

Szabo, who had started the night with a perfect 10 on the balance beam, settled for a 9.90 in the vault and Retton headed for the floor exercise mat like a piranha smelling blood.

Retton, who would say later she thrives on that kind of pressure, put on a flawless display of backflips and somersaults, then put the Romanian star away with a high-flying, solid-landing vault that got a unanimous 10 from the judges.

"I knew I had it, I could tell on the run I was going to stick it," said Retton, short in stature but never in confidence.

So Retton had the gold medal.

A relative unknown on the international scene until she beat Soviet star Natalia Yurchenko in a meet at New York just 18 months ago, also has changed the sport's game plan.

While pixie and poetry in motion on the floor exercises, she becomes a fullback on the vault.

Bela Karolyi, the former Romanian national coach who has tutored Retton for two years, says no one — not even Nadia Comaneci — compares to Mary Lou.

"Nadia was a great champion but Mary Lou is better," said Karolyi. "There isn't a woman gymnast in the world who can do that vault like Mary Lou."

"Her vault is twice as long as anybody else's," says Karolyi.

American Coach Don Peters agrees with Karolyi's assessment of the teen-ager from Fairmont, W.Va.

"She's the most powerful individual that's ever been in the sport," Peters said.

Karolyi, who defected to the U.S. in 1981 after guiding Romania's women gymnast to international stardom, couldn't contain himself after Retton's win — viewing it as further proof of his contribution to the American gymnastic program.

"We did it in two years. In Romania I work 13 years to get Nadia to be Olympic champion but this is the biggest personal satisfaction of my life."

And while Retton is a bullish performer on the vault and high bar, she also knows how to, as she puts it, "play to the crowd."

Karolyi says that too makes her better than Nadia.

"When Nadia performed she could not look up at the crowd," said Karolyi. "But Mary Lou, she is more liberal. She communicates with the crowd."

That she competed in the Olympics at all is testimony to Retton's toughness.

Less than six weeks before the start of the Games, Retton had to undergo surgery to repair cartilage that had torn loose in her right knee. The doctor who performed the surgery told her to forget about Los Angeles.

"I tell you a story you will like," Karolyi tells journalists and then proceeds to detail how Retton refused to quit dreaming.

"The day after the surgery we went down to the gym. We didn't do double backs or somersaults that day, but the next day she was on a bicycle," said Karolyi. "She worked like a madman, sweating, going, going, pushing herself."

"Within a week she was tumbling again and her recovery was so good the doctors said it was a medical miracle," he said.

"She is the new idol of the sport," says Karolyi. "Everyone is going to out and look for short, graceful and powerful kids."

Davis' Homer Boosts Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Jody Davis of the Chicago Cubs says he wasn't surprised when he saw an inside fastball heading toward the plate on an 0-2 count in the fourth inning Saturday.

Davis smashed the pitch from Montreal's Dan Schatzeder into the left-field seats for a two-run homer, sparking the Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Expos. The Cubs began play one-half game ahead of New York in the National League East and the victory assured them of remaining atop the division regardless of the outcome of the Mets' night game in Pittsburgh.

They've been pitching our guys in all during the series and I was looking for a pitch in there," Davis said. "The home run came at a big time (It gave the Cubs a 3-0 lead) and it must have been a mistake pitch."

Dennis Eckersley, 6-6, pitched 6 2-3 innings for the victory, yielding seven hits and one run.

"I thought Eckersley ran out of gas, that's why I went and got him," said Manager Jim Frey, who removed the pitcher with two runners on base and a 4-1 lead in the seventh.The veteran right-hander, who was acquired from Boston in June, hasn't pitched a complete game since May 27.

George Frazier, who came in a trade with Cleveland later in June, pitched 2 1-3 innings for his first save with the Cubs, striking out three.

He ran into trouble in the ninth when Derrel Thomas singled and first baseman Leon Durham bobbled Mike Stenhouse's two-out grounder for an error, but Tim Raines flied out to end the game.

I was just throwing strikes," Frazier said of the ninth. "The great hitters only get three hits every 10 times up, so if you throw strikes you're all right."

The Cubs chased Montreal starter Dan Schatzeder, 4-3, with four runs on seven hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the second. Keith Moreland opened with a single and, with two out, Leon Durham beat out a checked-swing infield hit. Moreland dashed for third on the play and scored when first baseman Dan Driessen threw the ball away for an error.

Moreland opened with the fourth with a single and scored when Davis blasted his 16th homer of the season.Ron Cey followed with a walk and took third on Durham's single. Cey was tagged out trying to score on Eckersley's grounder, but Henry Cotto followed with an RBI single. Ryne Sandberg's single laded the bases with two out and brought on Steve Rogers, who retired Gary Matthews on a fly ball.

Chinese Olympic Victories Bring New Wave Of Hope

PEKING (AP) — China's Olympic triumphs have given this country an exciting young batch of heros and a new basis to promote friendly contact with rival Taiwan.

"The mainland's valiant fighters have won credit for Chinese on both sides of the Taiwan Straits," the state-run newspaper Sports News (Tiyu Bao) proclaimed Saturday.

China is fielding its first full-fledged team in an Olympics and had collected eight gold medals at the Los Angeles games by Saturday in events ranging from weightlifting to fencing, winning international acclaim and a warm reception in the United States.

It is the first time China has won any gold medals and also the first time the Chinese were competing in the Olympics alongside athletes from Taiwan, the Nationalist Chinese-held island that Peking considers a renegade province.

This issue led to China's withdrawal from the Olympic movement in 1956, when the International Olympic Committee allowed Taiwan to enter a separate team in the Olympics.

A compromise was reached in 1979, when China and Taiwan accepted a proposal under which the Taiwan team would call itself the "Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee," carry the Olympic flag and refrain from playing the Nationalist Chinese anthem.

China boycotted the 1980 Moscow Olympics to protest the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. This is the first time China has competed in the Games since 1952.

Taiwan's government-run television banned coverage of Chinese mainland athletes until Friday when it finally relented to viewer protests.

But Peking's Olympic telecasts have given continuous, prominent mention to the Taiwan competitors, part of the communist effort to woo the capitalist island. The Nationalists always have rejected Peking's moves as propaganda ploys.

When Chinese weightlifter Chen Weiqiang won a gold medal Wednesday and Taiwan's Tsai Wen-yee won a bronze, millions of mainland TV viewers saw them mount the award podium together, waving hand in hand. Reports from Taiwan said Chen was bleeped off the screen.

"Athletes from Taiwan are also members of the Chinese nation," Chen asserted later at a news conference, which was not seen in Taiwan.

Tsai told reporters he felt "proud that the Chinese team and the Chinese Taipei team could compete at the Olympics together like sisters and brothers."

China's official position is that the Taiwan athletes are part of China's national team, though they compete separately.

In the official news agency Xinhua's account of a swimming heat Thursday, it said the Chinese-Taipei team's Wu Minghsun "improved China's national record" by clocking 16 minutes 14.40 seconds in the men's 1,500-meter freestyle.

The Sports News said the Chinese and Taiwan delegations to the Olympics are having friendly contacts and both feel proud of China's Olympic achievements.

"Reporters from both sides also are helping each other, exchanging their reports and establishing friendships," the newspaper said.

In a statement explaining why it ended the five-day TV blackout of Chinese Olympians, the Taiwan government said it was "improper" not to have TV coverage of their performances.

Tough Day For Bowa, Cubbies

By The Associated Press

It was a tough day for Larry Bowa. First he couldn't get his bat on the ball...then he couldn't get the ball out of his glove.

Involved in pivotal situations on offense and defense late in the game, the Chicago Cubs' shortstop came up empty-handed both times and the result was a 6-5 loss to the Montreal Expos.

With the score tied 5-5 in the eighth inning and Bowa at bat, the Cubs put on a suicide squeeze. But Bowa missed the pitch from Jeff Reardon and Keith Moreland was hung up between third and home for the second out. Bowa then grounded out to end the inning.

In the ninth, the Expos scored the winning run when Bowa failed to complete a double play on Dan Driessen's forceout grounder with the bases loaded.

"I just couldn't get the ball out of my glove," said Bowa, who double-clutched before relaying to first and missing the runner by an eyelash.

The loss cut Chicago's lead in the National League East to a half-game over the New York Mets, who beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1. In other NL action, it was Los Angeles 5, Cincinnati 2; Atlanta 2, San Francisco 1 in 11 innings; St. Louis 4, Philadelphia 3, and Houston cooled off San Diego 6-2.

The Expos loaded the bases in the ninth with one out and Max Venable scooted home with the winning run when Driessen bounced into the forceout at second.

Montreal took a 5-0 lead with the help of Gary Carter's two-run single in the fifth before the Cubs came back. They finally made it 5-5 on Moreland's RBI double in the eighth.

That put runners at second and third with none out when Reardon came out of the Montreal bullpen. He issued an intentional walk to Ron Cey, who had homered earlier, to fill the bases.Steve Lake forced a runner at the plate before Bowa missed his bunt.

"The squeeze play gave Reardon a breather," said Cubs Manager Jim Frey. "That was the turning point. It was good to come back like we did, and it would have been a great one to win. We had a chance to open it up with the bases loaded."

Mets 4, Pirates 1

George Foster belted a two-run homer and Kelvin Chapman and Jerry Martin added solo shots as New York, behind Walt Terrell's five-hitter, beat Pittsburgh to end a seven-game losing streak.

The victory, the Mets' first in exactly a week, halted their longest losing streak since August of 1982. Terrell, 9-8, allowed just five singles, and the Pirates' only run was unearned. He struck out five and didn't walked a batter.

"Walt has been our best pitcher over the last month, and that's not being critical of our other pitchers," Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said. "Walt's not fazed by the pressure. For a two-year man, he pitches like a veteran."

Dodgers 5, Reds 2

Mike Marshall hit a two-run homer and Bob Welch baffled Cincinnati for the second straight time, allowing just two hits over seven innings, as Los Angeles beat the Reds.

Welch, 8-11, continued a string of brilliant pitching against the Reds, whom he blanked on two hits in his previous start last Saturday. He allowed just a first-inning single by Ron Oester and a seventh-inning single by Dave Parker, striking out four and walking two before needing relief help.

"I just got the ball over the plate," Welch said. "I was throwing my fastball for first-pitch strikes, and throwing my breaking ball for strikes. They hit the ball on the button in the first inning, and we got a double play. It seems like things have switched around."

Braves 2, Giants 1

Pinch hitter Rufino Linares singled home the winning run in the 11th inning, leading Atlanta over San Francisco.

With one out, Gerald Perry doubled and took third on a short single by Brad Komminsk. Greg Minton, 1-8, the third Giants' pitcher, then walked Randy Johnson intentionally to load the bases before Linares hit Minton's first pitch into right field for the game-winner.

Reliever Donnie Moore, 2-2, the Braves' third pitcher, was the winner.

Cardinals 4, Phillies 3

George Hendrick doubled home two runs in the first inning and drove in another with a double in the third, powering St. Louis over Philadelphia.

Both of Hendrick's hits came off Jerry Koosman, 12-8. The Phillies, who outhit the Cardinals 13-7, stranded 11 runners against Rick Horton, 6-1, and St. Louis relievers Jeff Lahti and Bruce Sutter, who posted his 28th save.

"Everybody's worried about their averages instead of hitting in the clutch," said Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens before closing the door to his office.

Astros 6, Padres 2

Nolan Ryan scattered seven hits and Jerry Mumphrey homered and singled and drove in four runs as Houston defeated San Diego.

Brewington Hurls Stars Into North Carolina Finals

WINSTON-SALEM — Jamie Brewington hurled a four hitter with nine strikeouts and just one walk to lead the North State All-Stars to a 12-1 pounding of Lenoir Friday in the semifinals of state Little League baseball tournament.

The victory sets up a showdown between North State and Belmont, which enters the championship game after a victory over Franklin.

Derrick Clark, Heath Clark and Kelvin Yarrell had two hits each for North State, while Greg Haynes slapped a pair for Lenoir.

Lenoir took the lead in the top of the first on a solo homer by Travis Champion, but North State quickly evened the score in the bottom of the frame when Heath Clark doubled and scored on two wild pitches.

In the second, Walter Gatlin reached first on an error, advanced on a fielder's choice and crossed home plate with the eventual winning run on a pair of wild pitches.

After Yarrell singled in the fourth, Lenoir's pitching continued to erode as another wild pitch moved him around to third. Park Williams walked, and Derrick Clark doubled in Yarrell. Heath Clark singled in Williams and Derrick Clark for a 5-1 North State lead.

North State put the game out of reach with seven more runs in the fifth. Gatlin walked, stole second and Brewington walked before Yarrell singled in Gatlin. Abram Lang reached on an error, and a fielder's choice by Williams drove in Brewington and Yarrell. Derrick Clark was hit by a pitch, and Heath Clark drove in Lang with a fielder's choice. Tim Moore singled in Derrick Clark, and Heath Clark scored the final run on a wild pitch.

America's Newest '10'—Mary Lou

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pigtails and ponytails are out. Mary Lou Retton, an authentic American pixie, has restyled the world of gymnastics.

On a day when U.S. swimmers amassed four more gold medals, when Carl Lewis and Edwin Moses got track and field off to a flying start, when America's women guaranteed themselves a medal in basketball and rocked China in volleyball, a 16-year-old from Fairmont, W.Va. turned perfect circles in the air — and turned America on its ear.

In gymnastics, a sport dominated for generations by the beribboned, barretted likes of Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci, and with Romanian Ecaterina Szabo the next in line, Retton crowned an extraordinary week by winning the women's all-around championship Friday night.

"From now on, there's gonna be thousands and thousands of American kids going to the gymnasium," her coach, Romanian defector Bela Karolyi, said. It was particularly sweet for Karolyi, who had trained not only Comaneci, the first gymnast to score an Olympic 10, but Szabo as well.

The U.S. men's team became instant national heroes on Tuesday night. On Thursday night, Peter Vidmar of Los Angeles won the silver all-around medal, the best performance by an American man in 80 years.

Never before had an American woman won an individual Olympic gymnastics medal. Only once had American women won any medal at all — a team bronze in 1948. But when Retton led the U.S. women to a team silver on Wednesday night, she also led all competitors heading into the all-around event.

As the disciplines were performed, Szabo assumed a slender lead, thanks in part to a 10 on the balance beam. Finally, only Retton's two runs at the horse vault remained. She needed a 9.95 simply to tie for the lead, a 10 to regain it.

She knew Szabo had done well, "but I couldn't worry about her score," she said. "I couldn't do anything about it."

Retton paced nervously waiting her turn, her short-cropped hair bouncing. It is called a balance cut because, as Olympic hair-stylist Vidal Sassoon says, "It looks as good upside down as it does right-side up."

So did Retton.

When her 4-foot-9, 92-pound frame landed at the end of her full-twisting vault, she knew she'd done it perfectly. So did the crowd of 9,023, their cheers thundering through Pauley Pavilion even before the 10 flashed on the scoreboard.

"The pressure was intense," U.S. women's Coach Don Peters said, "and she just rose to the occasion."

"I did have that added pressure on me," Retton acknowledged, "but I work better under pressure."

Her electrifying finish — she also had a 10 on her next-to-last discipline, the floor excercise — coupled with 9.85 on the uneven bars and 9.80 on the balance beam gave her 79.175 points to Szabo's 79.125. Simona Pauca of Romania won the bronze with 78.675.

In other events Friday:

•The U.S. men's basketball team, getting 18 points from Steve Alford of Indiana University, buried France 120-62.

•The unbeaten women's team, led by 14 points by Lynette Woodard of Kansas, routed China 91-55 to guarantee itself a berth in Tuesday night's gold-medal game.

•The women's volleyball team also remained unbeaten, moving into the medal round with a 15-13, 7-15, 16-14, 15-12 over China.

•Cyclist Mark Gorski of Costa Mesa, Calif., held off Nelson Vails of New York to win the gold in the 1,000-meter sprint and the men's 4,000 pursuit team won the silver, finishing behind Australia.

•Karen Stives of Dover, Mass., won the silver behind Mark Todd of New Zealand in the three-day equestrian and the United States took the team gold.

•In Greco-Roman wrestling, Vasile Andrei of Romania beat Greg Gibson of Stafford, Va., for the gold in 220-pound class and James Martinez of Brooklyn Park, Mich., won the bronze at 149.5 pounds.

•The U.S. water polo team defeated Spain 10-8, the women's field hockey team was beaten 2-1 by the Netherlands and the women's handball team lost 29-27 to South Korea.

Going into today's competition, the United States had 52 medals, 29 of them gold. West Germany was second in total medals with 22 and China was second in gold with eight.

The Los Angeles Olympics have become known in some quarters as America's Games, not only because of the grabbing of the gold but because of he way ABC-TV has been covering them.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, sent a "stern letter" to Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, asking him to "talk with ABC about the coverage."

Ueberroth said following a meeting with network personnel that ABC had reacted in a "sensitive" fashion, adding, "I think you will see their focus change." But Samaranch, after his meeting with ABC executives, changed his stance, complimenting the network on its "excellent electronic coverage."

Retton's performance overshadowed swimming victories by Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., and Nancy Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla., each of whom won her third gold, and by Tiffany Cohen of Mission Viejo, Calif., and Rick Carey of Mount Kisco, N.Y., each getting a second gold.

Four victories by the U.S. swimmers gave them 18 golds, three short of the Olympic record of 21 won by the Americans at Mexico City in 1968. Five events remain tonight.

Caulkins won her second individual gold in the 200-meter individual medley in 2 minutes, 12.64 seconds. Hogshead, second in that race, won her third gold in the 400 medley relay, as did Caulkins.

Carey won the 100 backstroke in 55.79 seconds, finishing just ahead of David Wilson of Cincinnati, and Cohen took the 800 freestyle in 8:24.95, beating Michelle Richardson of Miami.

The American swimmers were shut out of a medal in the 200 butterfly. But, more surprising, Michael Gross of West Germany failed to win the race, upset by Jon Sieben of Australia. He did it in the world-record time of 1:57.04, beating Gross' mark by .01 of a second and beating Gross himself by .36 of a second.

Lewis, of Willingboro, N.J., cruised to victory in the 100-meter sprint in 10.32 seconds. "I practically walked through the whole race," he said in a statement afterward. "I knew I could win from the time I left the blocks."

And Moses, of Laguna Beach, Calif., was clocked in a moderate 49.33 for the 400 intermediate hurdles. "The time is great," he said. "It was a good race considering I had not run competitively in six weeks."

The first two track and field golds went to Ernesto Canto of Mexico in the men's 20-kilometer and Claudia Losch of West Germany in the women's shot put.

Lewis Begins His Quest For Gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carl Lewis began his quest for four gold medals in silence Friday — running away from the competition and reporters as track and field, a traditional Olympic showcase, began a nine-day run at the Los Angeles Games.

The confident 23-year-old sprint sensation, bidding to match Jesse Owens' four victories in the 1936 Berlin Games, put in slightly more than 20 seconds of work to easily win his first- and second-round heats in the 100 meters and advance to tonight's semifinals.

His second-round victory was clocked in 10.04 seconds, by far the fastest time of the day.

And he didn't stop running then, jogging past the pack of reporters trying to question him as he left the Coliseum after Friday's early session.

His only communication with the outside world came in statements released by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee press crew.

"I moved a bit in the blocks because I was distracted by all the photographers and officials who were so close to me," he said. "Whoever runs in lane eight tomorrow will be at a disadvantage because of this. It is very distracting."

The temperature was in the high 70s as more than 50,000 people watched each of the two sessions, but high humidity made it seem warmer. Lewis said he liked the heat. "I hope it stays just like this throughout the competition," he said.

Sam Graddy, the brash 20-year-old NCAA sprint champion from the University of Tennessee, also won two heats and said he can put an end to Lewis' plans for four gold medals early by beating him in the 100 tonight.

"I think I have more natural ability," Graddy said. "I have more quickness than he does."

The other U.S. sprint hopeful, Ron Brown, limped away from the competition with an inflamed tendon behind his left knee. He pronounced the injury "nothing serious" and said he would be ready for today's competition.

(See LEWIS on Page B-10)

Retton Makes Dramatic Comeback From Surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Lou Retton would not be denied — not by a surgeon's knife and not by the pressure of Olympic gold.

Retton, who Friday night became the first American woman to win the all-around gymnastics title in the Olympics, capped her comeback from knee surgery six weeks ago with a storybook finish at Pauley Pavilion.

The country's newest sports princess showed that she may also be its toughest.

Trailing Romanian star Ecaterina Szabo by .150 points going into the final two events, Retton nailed a pair of perfect 10.00 scores in the floor exercises and vault to win the gold.

"I'm glad I ended on vault," Retton said of her strongest event. "I did have that added pressure on me, but I work better under pressure."

Bela Karolyi, Retton's personal coach who defected from Romania after tutoring Nadia Comaneci to the pinnacle of gymnastics at the 1976 Olympics, called it "the most dramatic Olympic all-around ever.

"Two great kids — shoulder by shoulder, neck by neck, no one making a mistake," he said. "I guarantee you, no gymnast in the world could do what Mary Lou did tonight — make up that difference and come back."

It was an ending worthy of a Hollywood scriptwriter — and Retton relished every minute.

Going for broke on the floor exercise, the 16-year-old from Fairmont, W.Va., put on a dazzling display of somersaults and backward flips, just barely keeping her size-three feet inbounds on her second set of somersaults.

She got the 10.00 she needed and, with Szabo coming up just short with a 9.90 in the vault, Retton clearly had the Romanian in her sights.

As the capacity crowd urged her on, Retton moved to the vault, concentrated, then pounded down the runway — and saw gold.

"I knew I had it," Retton said of the flawless vault. "I could tell on my run ..."

Retton's score of 79.175 edged out Szabo, who had set the standard for the night when she started the all-around finals with a perfect score on the balance beam. Romania also won the bronze as 15-year-old Simona Pauca finished with 78.675 points.

Just six weeks ago, Retton's dream of Olympic gold was wrapped in a knee brace after she had surgery to repair cartilage that had torn loose in her right knee.

With the Olympic medal resting on her chest, Retton reflected back to that day. "That was the worst feeling in all my life," she said. "I couldn't move it (knee) and I thought at was over."

Within days, however, she was back on a bicycling machine, and within a week was doing tumbling routines. Her doctor, said Karolyi, "decided it was a medical miracle."

Retton's clutch performances for her victory Friday night were more tangible.

She left nothing out of her difficult floor exercise routine, then needed only her first vault to win the gold medal. For good measure, Retton duplicated her perfect vault with a second 10.00.

Szabo conceded Retton had "performed very well" on the vault. But Romanian Coach Adrian Goreac said Retton would not have won outside of America.

"She would not have won anywhere else," said Goreac. "She would not have won even in Los Angeles if Ecaterina had not missed her dismount a little on the uneven bars."

But the colorful Karolyi had the last word.

"Nadia was a great champion but Mary Lou is the best," he said, crediting Retton with having the "psychological strength and perfection" to finish with two 10s.

The victory by the 4-foot-9 American guaranteed her world stardom a la Comaneci and Olga Korbut of the Soviet Union — the pair who revolutionized the sport in the 1970s.

Asked what it was like to be at the top of the gymnastics world, Retton sighed and said, "I can't describe it. All those years of work finally paid off. It's great to stand up there and hear the national anthem."

Karolyi predicted that Retton's highly athletic routines requiring great physical strength will set a new trend in world gymnastics, a sport that has long been dominated by fragile-looking girls. Despite her small size, Retton has a compact figure of astonishing power.

Perfect scores were also recorded Friday night by American Julianne McNamara and China's Ma Yanhong, both in the uneven bars.

Gymnastics competition moves into the final two nights with the men's apparatus finals tonight and women's Sunday.

Among the favorites to win individual medals in the men's competition are all-around gold medalist Koji Gushiken of Japan, Chinese stars Li King and Americans Peter Vidmar, Mitch Gaylord and Bart Conner.

Twins Rebound To Reclaim First

By The Associated Press

For the second time in as many days, the American League West has a new leader.

After suffering a 14-2 embarrassment at the hands of California one night earlier and slipping into second place, the Minnesota Twins rebounded Friday night with a 4-2 victory to reclaim the division lead by one-half game over the Angels.

"We didn't get beat, we got killed," said Tom Brunansky, whose solo homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning and triggered a three-run outburst. "We tried to forget about it and just relax and have fun. There's not much you can do when you get beat that bad."

In other AL games, Chicago beat Milwaukee 5-1, Kansas City downed Detroit 9-6, New York took two from Cleveland 9-0 and 3-2, Toronto turned back Baltimore 5-2, Texas nipped Boston 4-3 in 10 innings and Oakland swept a pair from Seattle 5-3 and 11-7.

Brunansky's 18th home run of the season came off Mike Witt, who retired the first 11 Minnesota batters before Dave Engle legged out an infield single with two out in the fourth, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Kent Hrbek's single.

After Brunansky's homer put the Twins ahead, Ron Washington doubled, Houston Jimenez dribbled an infield hit down the third-base line and Washington scored as third baseman Doug DeCinces threw wildly past first. Jimenez went to second on the play, took third on another infield single by Kirby Puckett and scored on Mickey Hatcher's sacrifice fly.

Winner John Butcher scattered 11 hits in 8 1-3 innings, including Daryl Sconiers' ninth-inning homer, before Ron Davis came on for his 20th save.

"I broke the ice. It was a little tense in the dugout, no doubt about it," said Brunansky. "You can't say we really beat them badly. We only had one good inning before Witt shut us down the rest of the way."

White Sox 5, Brewers 1

Carlton Fisk and Greg Luzinski homered in a three-run third inning and Floyd Bannister checked Milwaukee on six hits and struck out 11. Fisk opened the third with his home run off Don Sutton. Harold Baines followed with a triple and Luzinski hit Sutton's next pitch over the center-field wall for a 4-0 lead. The Brewers have lost six games in a row.

Royals 9, Tigers 6

Frank White's grand slam homer highlighted a seven-run fourth inning and Dan Quisenberry earned his 28th save by shutting the Tigers down on two hits over the final 2 2-3 innings. The Royals sent 11 batters to the plate and collected six hits in the fourth inning, including two singles by Jorge Orta. White's third career grand slam followed Orta's leadoff single, a hit batsman and a walk. Don Slaught's single chased Milt Wilcox and the Royals continued their assault against Aurelio Lopez.

Alan Trammell and Tom Brookens homered for Detroit, whose lead in the AL East was sliced to 10½ games over Toronto. Nevertheless, Manager Sparky Anderson, wasn't too unhappy. "It's the first time we've hit in so long," he said. "I'm just happy to see us hit the ball."

Yankees 9-3, Indians 0-2

Don Mattingly's 15th home run of the season, a one-out shot off reliever Ernie Camacho in the eighth inning, snapped a tie and gave the Yankees a six-game winning streak. Joe Cowley, making his second AL start, fired a three-hitter in the opener for his first major-league shutout, and two-run singles by Dave Winfield, Steve Kemp and Tim Foli highlighted an eight-run sixth inning. The Yankees, who have an 18-6 record since the All-Star break, are over .500 for the first time all season at 54-52.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 2

Buck Martinez hit a two-run homer on the third pitch following a two-hour and seven-minute rain delay in the fourth inning and Willie Aikens contributed a three-run pinch homer. The Orioles led 1-0 on Eddie Murray's 22nd homer in the second inning when play was halted by a heavy downpour with a runner on third and two out in the Toronto fourth. But when play resumed, Martinez clouted his fourth home run of the season off Scott McGregor to put Toronto ahead. Aikens connected off Bill Swaggerty in the sixth.

Rangers 4, Red Sox 3

Gary Ward led off the 10th inning with a single and scored on a three-base throwing error. After Ward singled off Bob Stanley, Buddy Bell bunted. Third baseman Wade Boggs barehanded the ball and threw to first, but second baseman Eddie Jurak failed to cover and the ball rolled into right field, enabling Ward to score. Boston's Tony Armas tied the game with his 29th homer, a two-run shot in the eighth.

A's 5-11, Mariners 3-7

Dwayne Murphy triggered an eight-run sixth-inning rally with a double and capped it with his 23rd homer, a three-run shot, as Oakland came from behind to sweep a double-header. The A's scored five runs in the first inning of the opener and broke a six-game losing streak. Bruce Bochte and Mike Heath drove in two runs apiece.

There were five homers in the second game, including a three-run shot by rookie Alvin Davis that put

The first two gold medals of track and field were awarded Friday.

West Germany's Claudia Losch won a dramatic victory in the women's shot put with a 67-foot, 2¼-inch (20.48 meters) heave on her sixth and final effort — beating Miheala Loghin of Romania by a quarter-inch. Gael Martin of Australia captured the bronze at 62-11½ (19.19 meters).

In the 20-kilometer walk, the gold and silver went to Mexico's Ernesto Canto and Raul Gonzalez, who donned sombreros and waved Mexican and American flags as the crowd cheered.

"We received very strong support from the crowd," Canto said. "Los Angeles has a very strong Mexican community, so we weren't surprised by it. It is a feeling that will stay with me for the rest of my life."

Canto's time of 1 hour, 23 minutes and 13 seconds was an Olympic best. The old record — 1:23:35.50 — was set in 1980 by Maurizio Damilano, who captured the bronze this time.

Edwin Moses, the U.S. track team captain and overwhelming favorite in the 400-meter hurdles, won his 103rd consecutive race with a victory in his preliminary heat at 49.33 seconds.

"It's been a long week just waiting around," he said. "I think people are just waiting for medals to start rolling in in track and field like they did in swimming."

Among the other qualifiers was Harald Schmid of West Germany, the last person to beat Moses seven years ago.

Meanwhile, an open battle shaped up at 800 meters, where Joaquim Cruz of Brazil and Sebastian Coe of Great Britain won qualifying heats Friday.

Cruz, who led the University of Oregon to the 1984 NCAA track championship, had the best mark at 1:45.66, a full second ahead of runnerup Steve Ovett of Great Britain.

Coe, the world record holder, won his heat in 1:45.71.

"I felt comfortable," Coe said. "I'm surprised it was as quick as that. It felt much slower."

U.S. medal hopeful Kim Gallagher burst away at the finish for an impressive victory in the 800-meter qualifying heat. Gallagher had dropped out of two races since the U.S. Olympic Trials due to a hip injury, but she said acupuncture, therapy and rest apparently had solved the problem.

"It was very distressing," she said of her attempt to cope with the injury. "The gold was there, and I thought I was losing it."

Judy Simpson of Great Britain held a 20-point lead over Jackie Joyner of the United States in the heptathlon after four events. The heptathlon, an Olympic event for the first time, was to conclude with three events today. Joyner appeared in position to move into control of the competition despite a hamstring injury.

Bankhead Thrilled By Olympics

By The Associated Press

Scott Bankhead, a former North Carolina pitcher drafted by the Kansas City Royals, says his experience in the Olympics is not tainted by the fact that baseball is only a demonstration sport.

"It's really been great to be around athletes that you always see and who get all that publicity," said Bankhead, who pitched a three-hitter as the U.S. team beat Italy 16-1 Thursday.

Meanwhile, catcher B.J. Surhoff, also from UNC, scored two runs off two hits and drove in two runs.

Bankhead said playing in the major leagues may be a step up from the Olympics in terms of quality of play, but not in terms of emotion.

"They (the Olympics) are beyond college baseball and I hope when I get to the majors that will be a step up. But I don't think it will more be more exciting," he said.

Bankhead praised Olympic coach Rod Dedeaux of the University of Southern California, who is the winningest coach in college baseball history.

"He wants everything to be perfect," Bankhead said. "He thinks the only way to play baseball is the right way. He's 69 years old, yet he acts like he's in his 20s or 30s, running up and down the bench, yelling and screaming and trying to get everybody in the game."

Golfers Net First Ace

Two golfers recently recorded holes-in-one at the Brook Valley Country Club.

Tommie Little aced the eighth hole, using a five wood. The ace was his first, and he had a career low round of 67 with the round. He broke that mark a few days later, however, recording a 66.

Playing with Little at the time were Robert Dean and Joe Wilson.

Perk Ashby recorded his ace on the 12th hole, using a six iron. He was playing with Reynolds May, W.L. Allen Sr., Billy Morton and Al Haverty. The ace was his first.

Several golfers recorded their best rounds recently. They include Horton Rountree, 80; Dorson White, 35-40—75; Becky Ward-Ashby, 99; and Maxine Hawley 39-40—79.

A Purple-Gold Mixed Superball Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday, August 11-12 at the club. The event is for men and women of the club with established handicap. Sign up deadline is Friday.

The next Jack and Jill Tournament will be held Wednesday, August 15, at 6 p.m.

The Member-Member Tournament will be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 24-26. Details and a signup sheet are posted on the bulletin board in the pro shop.

Fall Softball Meeting Set

There will be an organizational meeting for those interested in playing fall softball on Thursday, August 9, at 7 p.m. at Elm Street Gym.

The fall league will be limited to the first 16 teams having registered and paid fees.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

Dove Season Set — Tar Heel sportsmen will have the opportunity to hunt doves over the Thanksgiving holidays this year. This was just one of the actions taken when the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission met on July 16 to set the hunting seasons for doves, rails, gallinules, woodcock and common snipe. In other action the wildlife commission alos adopted a schedule of public hearings for the upcoming waterfowl seasons.

This fall's dove season will feature a three-way split. The season will open on Sept. 1 and run through Sept. 29, with hunting allowed from noon till sunset. Hunting will be allowed all day in the second and third protions of the season, which will run from Nov. 17-24 and from Dec. 14-Jan. 15. The bag limit for doves is 12 daily with 24 in possession. The season for rails and gallinules will run from Sept. 6-Nov. 25. The bag limit for gallinules, clapper and king rails is 15 birds daily with 30 in possession and the bag limit for sora and Virginia rails is 25 daily with 25 in possession. The woodcock season will run form Nov. 12-Jan. 15 with a bag limit of five daily with 10 in possession. The common snipe season will run from Nov. 12-Feb. 26 with a bag limit of eight daily with 16 in possession.

The wildlife commission also adopted a schedule of public hearings for the upcoming waterfowl seasons. These hearings will be held in wildlife districts throughout the state from August 20-23.

"We urge all sportsmen to attend these hearings and give these proposals careful consideration," said Vernon Bevill, executive director of the wildlife commission. "We value this public input which plays a key role in the establishment of regulations and seasons."

All hearings in this area begin at 7:30 p.m. and the schedule is as follows:

•Dare County Courthouse in Manteo on Monday, Aug. 20

•Craven County Courthouse in New Bern on Tuesday, Aug. 21

New Director To Chicago — Duck's Unlimited's efforts to complete the first comprehensive wetlands inventory in North America will be supervised by Gregory T. Koeln of Columbia, Mo., an expert in computer mapping and geological information systems.

In his position as director of habitat inventory and evaluation, Koeln will manage all aspects of data collection for the North Amerian wetland area to compile a wetland inventory to assist D.U. management decisions. Sources to be used include aerial photographs produced by the NASA Landsat 5 satellite.

Koeln, who received his Ph.D. in fisheries and wildlife sciences, most recently was an assistant professor for the Geographic Resource Center at the University of Missouri.

"Koeln has extensive experience integrating today's high technology with wildlife projects," said Dale Whitesell, executive vice president of D.U. "and his expertise will greatly benefit D.U.'s conservative projects."

Ducks Unlimited will use Koeln's wetland inventory to choose the most important areas of waterfowl conservation, especially vital in D.U.'s recent expansion into the U.S. in Minnesota, Montana, Alaska and the Dakotas.

Wildlife Note — To help remedy such man-made problems as erosion and over-grazing, wildlife managers are turning to the continent's largest rodent and nature's premier dam builder — the North American beaver — reports National Wildlife magazine. Some $100,000 erosion repairs by human engineers can be done for less than $5,000 by beavers under the supervision of wildlife managers.

Investors Led Bull By Horns

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The record trading this past week came from institutional investors who vaulted from the bear to bull side of the fence. And the stock market may see more pressure on volume as individual and foreign investors decide to jump, too.

Trading was so frenzied on Friday that volume on the New York Stock Exchange surpassed the 200 million mark and exceeded its previous record with two hours of trading still to go. And the previous record was set on Thursday.

Stock prices, themselves, were nothing to shrug at. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials saw its largest weekly gain in two years. It jumped 87.46 points to 1,202.08, surpassing an 81.24-point rise in the week ended Aug. 20, 1982.

The NYSE composite index rose 6.22 to 93.23 and the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 4.27 to 203.83.

A record average 139.23 million shares were traded a day. The previous record was 118.49 million a day in the week ended Oct. 16, 1982.

The institutional investors, who came into the market with large cash reserves, were prompted by various government reports that indicated a slowing economy. A slower economy would mean less demand for credit and that would mean a lowering in interest rates.

Charles Jensen, an analyst with MKI Securities Corp. said, "This is all a very nice scenario: the renewed perception of a steadier economy with lower interest rates."

"They're rushing with everything they've got to avoid being left," he said. "Whether they're doing the right thing or not remains to be seen."

He added, "This is all perception, not necessarily reality."

Jensen said that the return on bonds is higher than on stocks and that the federal funds rate — the rate banks charge each other for overnight loans of excess reserves — is still high, at more than 11 percent.

Theodore Halligan, of Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood, said, "Most money managers have underperformed in the market in the last two, two and a half years and could not afford to miss an up market."

He added, "On a historical basis, this market is tremendously cheap."

Here are some of those economic reports of this past week:

—The government's main forecasting barometer, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, fell 0.9 percent in June.

—Orders to U.S. factories fell 1.4 percent in June.

—Spending for new construction slipped 0.2 percent last month.

—The nation's basic money supply fell $1.7 billion in late July. And the Federal Reserve Board's chairman, Paul Volcker, reiterated to Congress his view that the economy's growth rate will moderate soon on its own without any further tightening of the money supply.

—Civilian unemployment climbed to 7.5 percent in July, the first gain in 20 months, as 413,000 Americans joined the jobless rolls.

When will the smaller investors and foreigners join the action?

"I'm sure the retail clients are coming in also at this point," Halligan said. The foreign investors are "probably coming in right now," too, he said.

Jensen said: "There's a natural tendency for people to wake up in response to a market like this and say, 'Well, where have I been? This is it.' It creates a bandwagon effect. It creates an inflow of momentum from investors from all walks of life, including foreign investors."

How long can this volume spree last?

One technical analyst said he expects it to continue over the next 3½ months. David M. Kalman, of W.H. Newbold's Son & Co. in Philadelphia, also said he expected the Dow Jones average to attain "significant upward movement."

He said heavy buying pressure from institutional portfolio managers will provide sustaining strength over the near-term.

Jensen said, "This market should be able to continue to do well, not without small pullbacks."

Halligan was less reserved: "It's my feeling that we're on the edge of the greatest continuing bull market in the last 30 years."

Pair Charged

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A Cuban refugee was apparently shot to death on a "whim" by assailants trying to steal his portable music box, and a young woman was slain because she may have witnessed the killing, prosecutors say.

Gary Schaefer and Steven Dusenberry, both 27, were charged with second-degree murder in the slayings of Cirilo Hernandez Carrillo, 31, and Terry Chuhel, 19.

Witnesses told police that Hernandez Carrillo, who came to the United States as part of the 1980 Freedom Flotilla from Cuba, was shot on a St. Paul street and Ms. Chuhel was slain moments later when she went to her window after hearing shots outside.

ABA Says Lawyers Could Cut Their Litigation Costs

CHICAGO (AP) — Lawyers could save their clients as much as 75 percent in litigation costs by resorting to some simple pretrial tactics — one of them simply using the telephone more, according to an American Bar Association task force report.

"The high cost of litigation and slow pace of justice have led to a public sense of cynicism about the judicial system as well as the legal profession," Leonard Janofsky, chairman of the ABA commission that prepared the report, said Saturday.

"The backbone of this country — the 65 percent of American families that earned $25,000 or less per year when we started — really didn't have access to the courts because of these high costs."

The report, begun in 1979 when Janofsky was president of the ABA, examined experimental court methods in a host of jurisdictions.

One recommendation, however, focused on use of tried-and-true technology — the telephone.

Holding telephone conferences between lawyers and judge resulted in an estimated 50 percent saving from the cost of an in-court hearing for a comparable matter — a reduction of about $150 per motion handled by telephone, the study showed.

The study found that procedural changes made possible greater reductions in fees.

In trial courts in Kentucky, the report said, a speeded-up schedule for filing briefs and motions resulted in fee reductions averaging 24 percent — a savings of $650 per case.

"The average American bringing the average case, can expect it to be resolved in five or six months," said Janofsky. "We proved that in Kentucky.

"And I haven't seen anything anywhere that makes me believe it can't be done elsewhere. It may require different rules in Los Angeles, but almost all of these (ideas) can be modified to work in any jurisdiction."

In an experiment in California appellate courts, judges put cases involving "straightforward" legal issues on an expedited schedule and limited the length of briefs and oral arguments. Attorneys handling those cases reported fee reductions of up to 75 percent — an average savings of $1,000 per appeal.

"The research proves that an increased load of cases is not necessarily the cause for delay in our appellate courts," Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor told an ABA gathering earlier Saturday. "Overall appeal time in this experiment was reduced by one-third.

"It shows that judges determined to take control of their caseloads can set time schedules, monitor them ... and cut delays without leading to a loss of quality."

Farmers Complimented With Lower Prices

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

The futures market is paying American farmers a wry compliment this year: they're the best producers in the world. But the back side of the compliment is that the market is saying so with low prices.

Prices have been falling steadily since early July, and the message for farmers is that they're doing a good job — perhaps too good a job for their own well being.

The price of the corn contract for delivery in December has fallen to $2.86 a bushel on Friday from $3.12¾ a bushel at the start of July. Soybeans for delivery in November fell during the same period to $6.31½ a bushel from $7.28.

Corn prices have fallen back to the same level of June 1983, when the markets were fully aware that the nation's surplus of corn was more than 3 billion bushels.

That was before the worst drought in the last 50 years and the most extensive crop production ever run by the government. This year the corn surplus — before crops are harvested — is expected to be 500 million bushels, barely a month's supply.

What the markets are saying is that the farmers are growing plenty of crops to meet demand.

The Agriculture Department has projected production this year of 7.8 billion bushels of corn, almost 1 billion bushels more than will be consumed — and that will start building a new surplus of crops. But farmers have been blessed this summer with almost ideal weather and production may be even greater.

A year ago, in the midst of the drought, the opposite was true.

From July 1 to the end of the first week in August, corn prices went to $3.51 a bushel from $2.75. Soybeans went to $8.17 from $6.28.

But as fate would have it, most farmers didn't have much to sell.

Here are some price trends in major commodity markets this week.

Grain and soybean prices were higher on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for delivery in September settled Friday at $3.55¼ a bushel, which compared with $3.43¼ a week earlier; September corn advanced to $2.97½ from $2.87 a bushel; September oats advanced to $1.73¼ from $1.69¾ a bushel; and August soybeans settled at $6.33½ compared with $6.13 a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were mostly higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Live cattle for delivery in August settled Friday at 64.67 cents a pound, which compared with 63.40 cents a pound the previous Friday; August feeder cattle fell to 65.82 cents from 65.95 cents a pound; August live hogs climbed to 53.22 cents from 51.62 cents a pound; and August frozen pork bellies advanced to 58.65 cents from 50.27 cents a pound.

Gold and silver were higher on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Gold for delivery in August settled Friday at $350.40 a troy ounce, which compared with $342 a troy ounce a week earlier; and August silver advanced to $7.70 a troy ounce from $7.06 a troy ounce.

Jury Award

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A jury has awarded $6 million in damages to a man whose bride of five weeks was slain by a motel employee who had violent criminal history.

Jennifer Holden, 24, was stabbed more than 28 times and her throat was slit Aug. 1, 1981, at a motel in suburban Goodyear.

Randy Bernal, serving a 21-year prison term in the slaying, was an employee of Motor Hotel Management Inc. The jury ordered the Dallas company to pay Tom Holden of Richmond, Calif., $1 million in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

Maine Village Finds Businesses Anxious To Find A Sales Spot

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

FREEPORT, Maine (AP) — This coastal village once begged businesses to locate here. Now it's trying to rein in a surge of discount clothing outlets, shoe stores, restaurants and motels.

The new companies are all lured by the crowds who come to the outdoor outfitting emporium of L.L. Bean Inc., open seven days a week, 24 hours a day, and packed with shoppers most of those hours.

When McDonald's Corp. announced last summer that it wanted to set up in Freeport, the resultant hoo-hah drew national attention, as preservers of tradition and quaintness battled a symbol of invading commercialism.

When a Main Street merchant put two huge pig sculptures in front of his store as a publicity gimmick in June, village officials proclaimed them a clear violation of the sign ordinance.

Local leaders, worried about what the town of 6,000 people might look like in 10 years, are beginning to force new arrivals into the traditional Freeport mold.

"A developer has to jump through many hoops to locate in Freeport," said Town Manager Dale Olmstead.

McDonald's found that out. After making its intentions known last summer, the fast-food chain endured months of hearings and design reviews.

The result: Ground was broken in July for a McDonald's restaurant that few Americans will recognize.

There will be no drive-through window, no outdoor playground and no soaring yellow arches out front.

Instead, tucked inside a 19th century white clapboard house, the restaurant will feature carpets, wainscoting, wallpaper "and lots of cherry trim," said Doug Quagliaroli, the corporation's New England operations director.

"It's going to be tastefully done," he added.

McDonald's was willing to camouflage its operation because it felt Freeport was too good to pass up, Quagliaroli said.

Other businesses share the feeling. Olmstead estimated 20 to 30 new stores would open downtown by the end of summer. "And that will probably double again within the next two to three years," he said.

With such welcome development come problems, Olmstead said. The town must expand its water supply. Tourist parking has become a serious problem. And there is a strain on the police department, whose two daytime officers spend most of their time directing traffic.

The biggest problem in Freeport may be getting residents to agree how much development they want — and how to control it, if they can.

Faye Day, who just got a job as a clerk at one of Freeport's 10 new shoe stores, believes most old-timers like the prosperity that development brings — "except if they're trying to get down Main Street in the traffic."

Others want to preserve the old Freeport. "The people who have the most trouble adapting are the people who moved here because it was quiet and quaint. They don't like to see things change," said Olmstead.

But things are changing, even at Bean's. The company has come a long way since 1912, when founder Leon L. Bean started selling his rubber-soled, leather-topped hunting boots.

Riding high on a decade of phenomenal mail-order growth, the store finished a $3.5 million renovation in June that includes carpeted floors, skylit ceilings and an indoor pond stocked with trout.

The remodeled store sits like a king above Main Street, surrounded by a fawning court of big-name discount outlets: Polo-Ralph Lauren, Bass shoes, Cannon Mills sheets, Dansk kitchenware, the Kids Stop, Cole Haan shoes, Barbizon lingerie.

These stores and others started arriving two years ago, after a fire damaged a five-and-dime store across from Bean's. The owner sold out to a Boston developer, who remodeled it and leased it to Dansk.

That started a trend of "upscale discount" stores that has been accelerating. The town is regulating growth with a host of recently passed zoning ordinances, sign ordinances and design review ordinances that govern a building's color, outside lights and shrubbery.

And as one store found out this summer, there is even an ordinance that forbids pig sculptures.

"They're considered a sign, and we're at the limit of our sign footage," said Pete Bettencourt, manager of the Sports Outlet. The pigs are $10,000 copper caricatures titled "Tourists From Iowa."

"We had some people from Iowa, and they just loved it," said Bettencourt. But town officials didn't.

The pigs now smile from inside the shop's doorway while the owners apply for variances and Bettencourt talks vaguely of a "Save the Pigs" campaign.

Dolls Recovered

PICO RIVERA, Calif. (AP) — Missing Cabbage Patch and Dr. Seuss Cat dolls worth $85,000 have been recovered at a truck company warehouse, and the firm's vice president has been arrested, authorities said.

Thomas J. Giacomaro, 31, of Glen Rock, N.J., was arrested at XTL Trucking in Pico Rivera, 13 miles southeast of Los Angeles, and 3,500 Cabbage Patch dolls and 7,000 Dr. Seuss Cat dolls were recovered from the warehouse.

Wall Street Looks Favorably At Plans For Paper Merger

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The proposed $1.8 billion merger of Champion International Corp. and St. Regis Corp. is receiving favorable reviews on Wall Street so far as the fit is concerned.

The merger would create the largest forest-products concern in the United States. Together, Champion and St. Regis would have posted 1983 revenue of $7.03 billion, exceeding the $6.47 billion in revenue recorded by the current industry leader, Georgia-Pacific Corp.

Combining St. Regis and Champion also would create the largest U.S. paper producer, and it is likely the resulting company would challenge International Paper Co. as the biggest owner-controller of U.S. timberland with about 7 million acres, analysts said.

St. Regis, based in New York, agreed to the merger this past week to avoid an unwelcome takeover bid by publisher Rupert Murdoch, who threatened to launch a tender offer to raise his 5.6 percent stake in St. Regis to 50.1 percent. Murdoch said Friday he would not pursue his bid in light of the Champion-St. Regis agreement.

Champion proposed paying $55.50 a share for as much as 60 percent of St. Regis' common stock and $81.03 for each of its 2.1 million preferred shares. Each remaining St. Regis common shares would be exchanged for 2.85 Champion common shares.

The companies' fit is considered favorable because they overlap in few sectors of the forest-products market. Champion Chairman Andrew Sigler has said their paper operations in particular are diverse, with Champion specializing in printing and copier paper and St. Regis specializing in coated magazine paper and newsprint.

Hence, the companies' executives said they do not expect the merger to create antitrust problems, and analysts generally agree.

Moreover, the merger would allow Champion, headquartered in Stamford, Conn., to greatly expand its presence in the paper industry and hence be less reliant on the cyclical building-products business.

At the moment, the paper industry is enjoying strong demand and rising prices, while the building-products sector — which is heavily tied to the construction business — has been slumping amid the rise in interest rates.

Building products accounted for 41 percent of Champion's sales and 34 percent of its operating profit in 1983, while paper also accounted for 41 percent of sales but 66 percent of earnings, estimates Moody's Investors Service Inc.

"The question is how long the paper markets will stay strong" as Champion prepares to borrow about $1 billion to acquire St. Regis, said Thomas J. Hardin III, who follows the industry for Interstate Securities Corp. in Charlotte, N.C.

But analysts said the impact of the new debt could be partially offset by Champion's plans to sell certain of St. Regis' operations.

"Just which assets, at what prices and whether they'll be able to find a buyer at those prices are big questions," said Mary K. Fraser of the investment firm Becker Paribas Inc.

St. Regis' insurance, energy and certain building-products operations are considered the most likely candidates for sale since Champion is primarily interested in St. Regis' paper holdings.

"I would think the odds would favor at some time Champion disposing of the insurance operation because the philosophy of their current management has been to concentrate on the forest and paper products industries," Ms. Fraser said.

Sale of the insurance unit puts in doubt an earlier St. Regis agreement to acquire Colonial Penn Group Inc., a Philadelphia-based insurance concern, for about $590 million in cash and stock.

If insurance is not to be a part of the new company, Champion probably will try to cancel the Colonial Penn deal and sell the 10 percent stake that St. Regis already holds in Colonial Penn, analysts said.

Champion said Friday that it was considering terminating the deal but had not decided yet.

Champion might also be interested in unloading some of the building-products units of both itself and St. Regis, Ms. Fraser said. "Pricing volatility in lumber products is much more significant than in paper products," she said.

In other developments this past week:

—Stock prices soared and trading volume skyrocketed to a record high amid increasing investor confidence that the economy will slow and help lower interest rates. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange surged to a record 236.57 million shares on Friday, and the Dow Jones industrial average gained a record 87.46 points for the week.

—The U.S. civilian jobless rate rose 0.4 percentage point in July to 7.5 percent, surprising many economists who expected the rate to remain stable, the Labor Department reported. It was the first increase in 20 months.

—The Commerce Department's key gauge of future economic activity fell 0.9 percent in June, its first decline in nearly two years. The last previous decline was a 0.1 percent dip in August 1982, after which the Index of Leading Indicators rose for 21 straight months.

—Productivity in non-farm private business expanded at an annual rate of 3.3 percent in the second quarter, the Labor Department said. The gain followed a 2.9 percent rise in the first quarter. The last decline came with a 0.3 percent drop in the second quarter of 1982.

—Sales of new single-family homes edged up 0.6 percent in June to an annual rate of 620,-000 units, ending three months of declines, the Commerce Department said. But housing officials said they expect sales to keep slumping this year because of high mortgage interest rates.

—Prices paid to farmers for raw products fell 1 percent in July but remained 9.2 percent ahead of a year earlier, the Agriculture Department said. Farm costs, meanwhile, fell 0.6 percent from June.

—New orders to factories fell 1.4 percent in June to an adjusted $191 billion after rising 2.1 percent in May and falling 3.4 percent in April, the Commerce Department said. Much of the June decline came in a 2.4 percent drop in durable-goods orders.

—Spending for new construction slipped 0.2 percent in June, paced by a 2.2 percent drop in residential building, the Commerce Department. Strong office and commercial building, however, lifted non-residential construction by 0.4 percent.

Congressman Sees Fight Over Quota

WASHINGTON (AP) — American steel companies and more than 200 House backers of a steel import quota are in a tug-of-war with a subcommittee chairman who wants to block a bill he calls "narrow, selfish and un-American."

"American steel and its allies may destroy the greatest industrialized nation in the world," Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., alleged during a hearing on the quota bill. "It's narrow, selfish and un-American for them to practice that kind of hoggery."

Gibbons, chairman of the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee, accused domestic producers of "trying to pull down the whole system in America — that is, to earn your way." He said "the whole future of America's basic industries" hinges on what his subcommittee does with the quota bill.

The panel held its final hearing Friday on the measure, which would keep imports to 15 percent of American consumption (about 9 points lower than current levels) and require plant modernization. The bill has more than 200 co-sponsors.

Steel executives and union officials have insisted they can modernize and become competitive if they are granted the quota and the investment capital it would generate.

But Gibbons called steel management and labor "dinosaurs" and said there is no way the industry can compete internationally because of its low technology and high labor costs. He also said domestic firms, unlike the Japanese, put "a bunch of junk" on the market.

His remarks were triggered in part by testimony that steel-using U.S. industries buy Japanese steel because it is better quality than American — not because it is cheaper.

F.A. George, steel commodities manager for the Caterpillar Tractor Co., said a union worker once told him, "It hurts me to say it, but buy Japanese steel."

"Your testimony is persuasive — no, it's compelling," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. "This is the first direct allegation of quality problems although we have been assured by domestic producers that their quality is 'second to none.'"

The steel-using industries contend a quota would drive up their production costs, "killing" steel customers and demand, while other firms fear their exports may be capped by other nations seeking retaliation.

"We're trying to cure a case of hay fever by tying a plastic bag over our head," said Robert Blinken, speaking for the Steel Product Manufacturers Committee.

FATHER AND SON — Several books on famous sites in Washington, D.C., contain Wise's photographs. He and son Harold Jr. (left) look over some Smithsonian Institution shots. (Photo by Chris Bennett)

Through The Eyes Of Harold Wise

A-ONE AND A-TWO ... — Wise covered Lawrence Welk's visit to Navy troops in Hawaii and is pictured here beside the renowned entertainer.

If a picture is worth a thousand words, then photographer Harold L. Wise has written several unabridged dictionaries.

The Marion, Ohio, native's determination and consistent skill have enabled him to capture the moods of many historical moments.

He joined the U.S. Navy after high school, and when World War II was over he attended all of the Navy's photography schools. Later, his assignments included heading the Atlantic Fleet Combat Camera Group's still camera department and serving as chief photographer on the staffs of the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, the secretary of the Navy, and the secretary of defense.

His work appeared in a variety of places, including Navy publications, "Time" and "Newsweek." Additionally, Wise took pictures and edited photo illustrations for eight books on famous sites in Washington, D.C., such as the Pentagon, Mount Vernon, the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian Institution.

In an interview, Wise told about his assignment on the USS Forrestal, an aircraft carrier, as well as his job of covering the Israeli torpedo damage to the USS Liberty in 1967. On a more pleasant note, he said he got to photograph Lawrence Welk's visit to Navy troops in Hawaii. "I traveled all over everywhere," he said, "I was the number one Navy photographer for a number of years."

During his time in the nation's capital, he covered the presidential inaugurations of Eisenhower, Johnson and Nixon. He also made a photographic account of the Kennedy funeral. Snapping pictures of renowned political figures at both the Capitol and the Pentagon was Wise's routine task.

"I took pictures of the joint chiefs of staff, the secretary of defense, whatever," he said, "and each year I took pictures of Billy Graham when he came to speak at the Pentagon during Christmastime."

When Wise retired from the service in 1970, he proceeded to an equally exciting position — chief photographer for the U.S. Customs Service. "I was officially retired from the Navy at midnight and began working for Customs at 8:15 the next morning," he said.

One of his duties included photographing smuggling operations in progress, which often put him in dangerous situations. He has several photo albums documenting "raids" of illegal substances such as marijuana and cocaine. In one case, the smugglers had hidden neatly wrapped packages of marijuana inside the bottoms of two inlaid wooden tables. "They're now used in the Customs Department for regular conference tables," Wise said, "No one even knows what they were once used for."

He said he often had to take pictures from unusual places so as not to be seen. In the wooden tables incident, Wise said, "I had to get the close-up shots out of the back window of a van. I couldn't let the curtains move at all, and I had to use a wide-angle lens because we were so close to them."

An article in "Headquarters Newsletter," published for Customs employees, told about a "close call" for Wise. The story said he and an agent "spotted a known smuggler swimming in the nearby Rio Grande river. After the man went ashore on the Mexican side, apparently to a rifle hidden there, Wise and the agent had to run from a number of bullets that began whizzing (in) their direction. Luckily, the assailant was a bad shot. None of the 10 or 12 bullets that slammed into the river bank hit their intended targets."

Wise not only was known for his photography, but for cinematography as well. He made a film titled "A Day in the Life of Chopper" that won third prize in a Federal Editors' competition. According to an article about Wise which appeared in a 1974 edition of "Customs Today" magazine, the motion picture was a "remarkable achievement because Hal made the film (about detector dog Chopper) with modest equipment, practically no help, and a tiny budget."

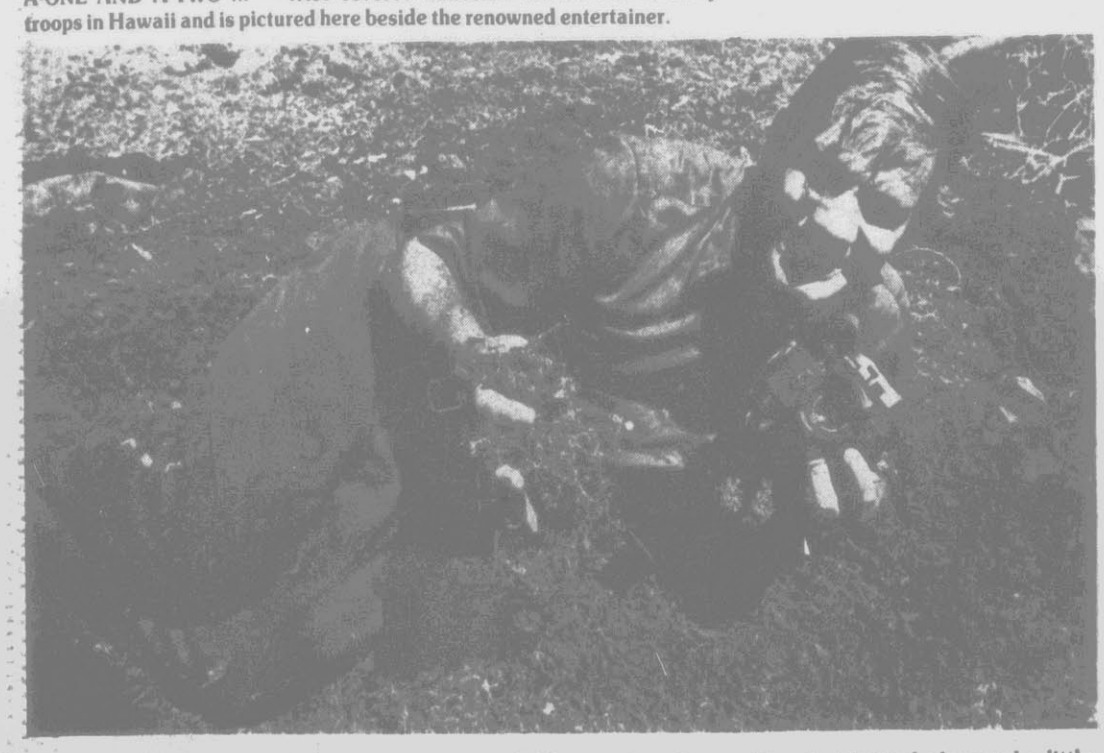
He retired from the Customs Service in 1980, and after living on the Yeopim River in Perquimins County for three years, he and his wife Linda, a Chocowinity native, decided upon Greenville as a retirement location. They moved to Pitt County in February 1984 and with the help of son Harold Jr. and daughter-in-law Denise, the Wises opened up Harold L. Wise photography studio on Greenville Boulevard.

He is scheduled to appear on WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" on Aug. 27 at 7:40 p.m. to discuss his diverse career as a photographer.

How does it feel to settle down after a life of such adventure? "I enjoyed working when I had to," Wise said, "but after a while being away from your home and family and staying in hotel rooms all the time gets a little old. Having everyone together along with the studio makes it especially nice to be here."

KENNEDY FUNERAL — Jackie and the children as photographed by Wise.

By Loretta Grantham



AUTUMN LEAVES??! — After photographing nearly 40 tons of marijuana, Wise decided to fool around a little in one of the piles.

PRIZE WINNER — Wise's color photo of the bow and anchor of the battleship USS New Jersey in a Philadelphia drydock has brought him acclaim in photography contests.

"CHOPPER" — Wise made a movie about a typical day in this canine detective's life.

Double Ring Ceremony Is Performed

Deborah Jane Bowers and Robert Henderson Ladd III exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Bethel Baptist Church. The Rev. Norman Joyner, pastor of the bride, conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Bowers of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson Ladd of Enfield.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Donald Benjamin Green. Teresa Allen Haislip sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer." She is cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin faced taffeta and silk Venise lace. The fitted, dropped torso bodice was overlaid with motifs of lace encrusted with pearls and iridescents. The scooped neckline featured a stand-up ruffle on the shoulders. Motifs of lace adorned the short puffed sleeves and the gathered skirt flowed into a chapel train. Her two tiered fingertip veil of silkened bridal illusion featured scattered motifs of silk Venise lace was attached to a band of lace flowerettes and silk flowers adorned with pearls and iridescents. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses with gypsophilia tied with white satin ribbon.

Cynthia Ann Bowers of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of royal blue matte taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring short pouf sleeves accented with matching rosebuds worn to create an off-shoulder effect. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations, white daisies, purple statice and corn flowers tied with better times ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Lisa Bowers, sister of the bride, Denice Dennis Styons and Alta Jean Dewar, all of Bethel, Ann Kirkland Coats of Tarboro, Gina Woodsworth of Whitakers and Kerry Barger Gardner of Salisbury. Jessica Noll of Wilmington was junior bridesmaid. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant.

Honorary bridesmaids were Dawn Allen of Washington, Beverly Bunting Roberson of Robersonville, Kathryn House of Bethel, Julie Andrew of Winston-Salem and Linda Adams of High Point. They carried pink carnation arm arrangements tied with better times ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Marty Benshoff of Greensboro, John Andrew of Winston-Salem, Kenneth Craig of Enfield, Tim Gardner of Salisbury, Lloyd Evans of Wilmington and Dickson Bridger of Wrightsville Beach. The junior usher was Bobby Bolton of Woodinville, Wash., nephew of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of daphney rose taffeta and the bridegroom's mother wore a pale aqua full length chiffon dress. Both carried white cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Edward Earl Dennis directed the wedding.

The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Roland House, entertained family and out-of-town guests at an informal luncheon at her home prior to the wedding.

On Friday evening the parents of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner for the wedding party and out-of-town guests at the Beef Barn in Greenville. A dance followed at the American Legion and was given by the bride's parents and friends. Music was provided by Southbound.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Dennis and was given by Mrs. Styons and Mrs. Coats. The couple was also honored at several parties, a tea and pig picking prior to the wedding.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Reprinted by Request:

I have spent the greater part of my life trying to figure out what kind of people scrape the icing off their cake, heap it in a little mound to one side of the plate, eat the dry cake and then eat the icing slowly . . . after I have eaten all of mine.

They have to be sick!

Do you know what would happen if I saved my icing? The diner next to me would crush his cigarette out in it. The waiter would remove my plate while my head was turned, or I'd find a fly in it.

People who save their icing until last are born that way. They're the children who put their toys away before someone breaks their leg on them. They brush their teeth before they go to bed. They save the ribbons and the paper from their Christmas presents and they read their birthday cards BEFORE they open the present.

I had a girlfriend once . . . for about 15 minutes . . . whom I met one night after school at an ice cream parlor. From all appearances, our friendship was made in heaven. We were in the same grade, lived in the same neighborhood, our mothers worked, we both hated True-and-False questions, and we both wore bangs because our foreheads broke out.

We ordered the same flavor of ice cream. My mouth closed in over the cone so fast, my glasses frosted up. Just the tip of the cone stuck to my lip and was the only evidence there had been a cone at all.

I looked over at Gloria. Her little tongue licked at that cone for 55 minutes. I wanted to smash it into her face.

We never spoke again.

Icing-savers never change. Not really. They grow up to be adults who put the pimentos out of olives into a little stack on their plate and lick the chocolate off chocolate-covered strawberries instead of popping them into their mouths.

Well, I can't change either. I have to follow my philosophy for living: "Eat! Drink! Be merry, for tomorrow your husband (wife) may find out." I have to grab all the gusto I can get. I have to believe you only go around once in life, but if you play your cards right, it's enough.

Like taxes, the icing-savers will always be with us, but rejoice in the knowledge that aboard every Titanic is a woman who foolishly saved the maraschino cherry on her icebox cake!

Twelve Washington metropolitan area chapters were hostesses for the 51st Boule of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority last week.

Registration totaled 17,500 and attending from the local Iota Kappa Omega Chapter were Basileus Jean Carter, Patricia Artis, Sheila Bunch, Jennifer King Congleton, Addie Gore, Helen Harrell, Ella Harris, Jacqui Hawkins, Gloria Hines and Barbara Johnson.

Outstanding speakers during the week were Soror Norma Boyd, living founder, Geraldine Feraro, Democratic vice president nominee, Jesse Jackson, Charles Robb, governor of Virginia, Elizabeth Dole, secretary of transportation and Miss America Suzette Charles.

The sorority is a public service organization founded in 1908 on the campus of Howard University.

Three Pronged Approach Needed

A three pronged approach is needed for health care for the elderly, says Dr. Robert Atchley, director, Scripps Foundation Gerontology Center, who was keynote speaker at extension's family living seminar held at NCSU recently.

Prevention of disease, timely intervention when something does go wrong and rehabilitation are all important.

"There is a tendency to say, 'This is an older person. What can you expect? We have found it is quite normal for a person to need to be in and out of nursing care several times before" he has to be institutionalized. "They often start on a downslide and pull back up again," Dr. Atchley says.

SALAD BARS

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Salad bars have become a popular addition to fast-service restaurants now that customers are eating more vegetables than previously, according to William Welter.

IT'S CONFUSING

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Places with confusing or unusual names abound throughout the United States but Pennsylvania may have more than its share, according to the new "Rand McNally Road Atlas."

For example, motorists needn't be confused if, when driving along Rte. 154 in Pennsylvania, about 40 miles west of Scranton, they suddenly enter Wyoming State Forest. The atlas reveals that's exactly where it is — in Pennsylvania, right next to World's End State Park.

Pennsylvania also contains the towns of Akron, Dayton and Ohioville as well as Boston, Dallas, Denver, Palo Alto, Rochester, Washington and Yukon. The state also has a Grand Canyon, and California State College and Indiana University of Pittsburgh are located there, as well.

Joseph Todd Moye and Thomas Williams Moye, nephews of the bridegroom, of Atlanta, Ga., and Edward Moye Callaway and George Hadley Callaway, cousins of the bridgegrooom, of Maryville, Tenn., served as ushers.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents honored the couple with a reception at the Cosmos Club in Georgetown, Va.

On Friday evening, friends of the couple hosted an after-rehearsal dinner party in the faculty lounge of the Inter-Cultural Center of Georgetown University.

The father of the bridegroom entertained on Saturday at a luncheon at the Gerogetown Hotel.

The bride is a graduate of Queens College of Charlotte and the University of Richmond, Va.

The bridegroom graduated from Davidson College and received his doctor of philosophy degree in history from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is the historian for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor.

After a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina, the couple will live in Arlington, Va.

Safe Canning Instructions Needed

The old ways aren't always the best ways. Take home canning for an example. Many North Carolinians are still putting food up the way Grandma did.

"If you do, you are taking a big chance on food spoilage," says Dr. Robert Brackett, extension food safety specialist, North Carolina State University. Most of these recipes don't call for heating the filled jars in a boiling water bath or a pressure canner, so the food may not be preserved at all.

All foods need to be proccessed in the jar to sterilize the food and completely seal the jars. And since not all spoilage can be seen or smelled, the family could wind up eating spoiled food without even knowing it.

Another dangerous old method is oven canning. There is no way to can food in the oven. The temperature inside the food cannot get high enough to kill the bacteria which cause food poisoning, particularly the deadly botulism. The jars break easily or even occassionally explode.

Finally, many old recipes have inaccurate measurements or call for ingredients which have changed or are no longer available. Get safe canning instructions from your county agricultural extension office.

Up to 50 percent of the cost of some remodeling projects can be saved when you can do-it-yourself.

Heavy Metal Band Uses Feminine Look

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They were musicians with a few songs and an image for a new band: heavy-metal music but not the usual heavy-metal look of denim, leather jackets and metal studs.

Instead, the boys in the band decided to go for a little femininity — women's clothes and makeup. But they didn't have a name. A friend had a little bit too much to drink one night and blurted out a name: "Twisted Sister."

"It was brilliant," said Dee Snider, lead singer of the quintet known since that moment as Twisted Sister. "Only a drunk person could have thought of it. He didn't even remember it the next day. Now it's his claim to fame."

In those early days, Snider said the group couldn't afford costumes. "The cheapest thing was to rip up a piece of lingerie and make it work," he said. "We figured wearing grotesque feminine makeup on stage would shock people —guys acting tough and wearing makeup.

"Now the costumes are just crazy and tattered," Snider continued. "We spend $3,000 on costumes and they look like they went through a shredder. 'Hid' rock is what I jokingly call it, for hideous, of course."

The band's costume and makeup designer is Snider's wife, Suzette, who was 15 when they married. Snider, who is now 29, was 21.

"She wanted to be a costume designer. At 16 she made me a whole set of costumes. The band hired her. She developed the makeup and cultivated my hair," Snider said.

His dark brown hair falls in natural, long ringlets. Mrs. Snider bleaches it, then dyes some ringlets black. It's so distinctive that when they recently took son Jesse, 2, to a pizza parlor-amusement park, Snider was quickly surrounded by autograph seekers.

"Twisted Sister has got to become famous fast," Snider said. "It's going to be very embarrassing for Jesse if I'm not famous and he has to explain why his Dad goes around looking like this."

Their first LP last year, "You Can't Stop Rock 'n' Roll," on Atlantic Records, didn't propel them to fame. But their new second LP, "Stay Hungry," is rocketing up the charts.

The band began in 1976. "Glitter rock had died a miserable death. I thought it died before it had a chance to hit the suburbs where the real record buying people are," Snider said. Twisted Sister played Long Island rock clubs and tried for years to get a record contract. They lived through a glitter rock backlash in 1977-78 and a minimalist craze in 1979.

"We stuck to our guns," he said. "If we were getting negative reactions from the people we would have thought maybe we were wrong. But we were playing five nights a week, making money. I've never worked a straight job.

"We were huge in Long Island. We went into New Jersey and became a regional phenomenon. I could see in 20 years we'd make it big in the country, state by state."

Atlantic rejected the group four times. "We sent tapes and pictures to everybody. Nobody would sign us," Snider said.

But they were intent on making it, and even considered sending in their material under another name.

Visiting British rock writers liked Twisted Sister and the band was given an opportunity to appear live on British TV. "We borrowed $25,000 from everybody and flew over," Snider said.

After that, five major labels gave them offers. Before they left London, they signed with Atlantic. "Now the company is 100 percent Twisted," Snider quipped.

On stage, Snider says he's "mad."

"My act is very very tuned in to the negative aspects of my personality, anger, frustration, hostility," he said. "That's why I love heavy rock 'n' roll. It's a nonviolent outlet for that. I'm a monster on stage. By the end, you always see Twisted Sister smile. The audience smiles, too. This is the beauty of heavy metal.

"We have a positive message, as long as you consider rebellion positive, which I do. Personal freedom is the big thing in Twisted Sister songs, not sex, drugs or devil worship."

The amusing video for the current single, "We're Not Gonna Take It," has an actor playing a heavy-handed father who doesn't want a son pretending to play guitar along with a Twisted Sister record. The actor gets his comeuppance. "Growing up in suburban tract housing, you need an escape," Snider said. "You need heroes. Alice Cooper was my hero. I thought he was at a party that never ends. That made me happy. I want to be a hero for another generation."

THE ALBUM COVER . . . for a new album, "Higher Ground," recently recorded by the Bill Lyerly Band, an area group that performs extensively throughout eastern North Carolina. This is the second album for the group noted for its "straight ahead" sound. The album is available in most local and area music stores.

A Review ... Lyerly Band Is Consistent

Higher Ground. LP Album. Billy Lyerly Band.

The most striking characteristic of the Bill Lyerly Band is its basic consistency of sound both on record and stage. All too often in the business of making albums, producers get so carried away with special effects at their disposal that the groups recorded are rendered unrecognizable to their live audiences.

This certainly is not the ase with the Billy Lyerly Band's latest album, "Higher Ground" recorded at LSI Studios in Nashville, Tenn. and Mega Sound Studios in Bailey. "Higher Ground" retains the "straight ahead" qualities in which the band has always prided itself.

BLB buffs will notice the addition of keyboards and synthesizer in some of the songs, but they are used primarily as embellishments and do not represent a major change in direction.

The vocals and guitar work are still the core of the sound which could be described as raw, rebel, and proudly redneck.

No stranger to the dirt dance floor or the one-night stands, the BLB has paid its dues to the late night passage of white lines on black highways, endured the advice of industry shoguns, and somehow through the years has managed to retain its sense of musical integrity.

With four originals penned by Billy Lyerly and five by others, the album is a good mix of material from their live show. BLB fans will find "Higher Ground" an excellent addition to their record collections.

From the rocker "Everything's O.K." to the more down tempo "No Way To Cry," the alubm takes the listener through a variety of moods. "When I'm Gone" is a haunting spell-casting song about love gone bad which Bill is so adept at writing and singing.

Other songs of particular interest on the album are "Back to the Island" by Leon Russell which brings out the influence of Leon Russell on Lyerly's vocal style, and "I Really Ain't Surprised" which was originally recorded by Bill Lyerly in his "Super Grit" days.

Long time followers of the BLB may be perplexed by the intro to "Lonesome, Orn'ry and Mean" because its done on a snythesizer and tends to get a little spacey; but, it doesn't take long to fall back to the familiar electric guitar so inseperable from the BLB sound.

If you like harmonies syrupy sweet and melodies shoulder deep in strings, this album is not for you. Bit if you like guitars to twang and feel comfortable around southern English, "Higher Ground" represents a welcome change from the pretentious industry norm.

Members if the Bill Lyerly Band performing "Higher Ground" are Bill Lyerly, vocals, electric and acoustic guitars, piano and synthesizer; Charlie Collins, vocals and electric guitar; Ron Stenquist, bass, and Phil Price, drums.

Produced by Roy Dea and released on the Red Ash label, "Higher Ground" is the Billy Lyerly Band's second album.

New Technique To Date Prehistoric Creatures

By MARIE SCHNELL
N.C. State University

Did the Ice Age spell doom for the dinosaur or was it merely the passage of time that meant the end of the prehistoric creature?

A North Carolina State University statistician has come up with a statistical research method which he thinks will help answer this question.

Dr. Kennth H. Pollock, associate professor of statistics at NCSU, says that by using this method, scientists can estimate the rates at which prehistoric animal species came into existence and died out.

To estimate the numbers and kinds of prehistoric species which roamed the Earth before man arrived, Pollock has adapted a technique long used by zoologists to estimate the number of live animals in a geographic locale: the capture-recapture method.

Zoologists employing the capture-recapture method use the number of tagged animals they recapture in order to estimate how many inhabit a given area.

Working in collaboration with Dr. James D. Nichols, a researcher at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Laurel, Md., Pollock used the capture-recapture method to study the fossil record of about 200 species of marine invertebrates such as molluscs and trilobites.

In the "capture" phase of their study, the two counted fossil species which have been discovered in certain layers of the earth's crust, each layer representing a different prehistoric era.

To "recapture" fossils, they counted those of the same species which have been found in other layers.

The deepest, oldest layer in which fossil species was found indicated the time period when that species came into existence, Pollock explained. The highest, most recent layer in which the fossil was found told when it went extinct.

Counting the fossils by layers also helped the two fill in the gaps for layers where no fossils of a particular species were present. When the two found a layer in which a fossil species was absent sandwiched in between two layers where it was present, they knew that the species must have existed during all three time periods.

Using this data the two came up with a statistical model of the number and kinds of marine invertebrates which existed during the various periods of prehistory.

"This is the type of information which is needed to settle current arguments about rates of evolutionary change," said Pollock. "It will help scientists estimate the rates at which old species died out and new ones took their place."

Although Pollock admits he is not a scientist and does not want to make statements about evolutionary theory, he will venture that changes in species may have occurred more rapidly than was thought by the founder of evolutionary theory, Charles H. Darwin.

Darwin believed that only time — millions of years — was needed to fuel evolutionary changes in species.

But Pollock, like some scientists, thinks the evolutionary clock ticked faster and that animal species died out and others took their places during relatively short periods when the animals were under stress from the environment, such as change in climate.

"For example, we are finding that mammal species appeared during the same time frame," Pollck said. "There must have been a reason."

Pollock says he thinks his method of estimating prehistoric animal populations is more accurate than those used by paelobiologists — scientists who study fossils — because his method is based on the assumption that the fossil record is incomplete.

Although paleobiologists know that the fossil record does not represent all the creatures who lived, Pollock said, their methods for estimating prehistoric populations are based on the assumption that the fossil record is complete.

Pollock says the fossil record is, at best, data which can help scientists mentally reconstruct a model of the number and kinds of species that existed during prehistory.

He noted that Darwin himself described the fossil record as "a history ... imperfectly kept ... only here and there a short chapter has been preserved: of each page, only here and there a few lines."

Whether a creature became fossilized depended on both is own stucture and on the circumstances of its death, Pollock explained.

"Ferns and dinosaurs, which lived in swamps and marshes, could be preserved by the mud and were far more likely to have left their remains than other animals whose bodies fell on the hard forest floor, prey to decomposition and scavengers."

NOT SLOWING DOWN . . . Novelist Irving Stone, right, is congratulated by French Consul General Francois Mouton after Stone was honored recently with France's highest literary award, "Commandeur dans l'Ordre des Arts et des Lettres" during a reception in Los Angeles. Stone has just celebrated the 50th anniversary of his biographical novel on the life of Vincent Van Gogh, "Lust for Life." (AP Laserphoto)

Stone Celebrates Anniversary of Novel

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The manuscript was turned down 17 times by practically every major publisher. Today, "Lust for Life" celebrates its 50th year in print.

"I think it's unprecedented in American publishing, except perhaps with Mark Twain, for an author to see the 50th-anniversary edition of a book that has remained continuously in print," biographical novelist Irving Stone reported proudly about his first book.

He displayed the latest edition of "Lust for Life," which introduced America and the world to an unknown Dutch artist named Vincent Van Gogh. The painter's exhibits now draw huge crowds, his works sell in the millions and his saga appears regularly on television with the 1956 film, "Lust for Life," starring Kirk Douglas.

Stone paused for an interview in the midst of a busy week. He celebrated his 81st birthday on Bastille Day — July 14. The French consul presented him with the prestigious Order of the Arts and Letters. Meanwhile, he and wife Jean, whom he married 50 years ago last February, continued their daily editing of his latest book, a yet untitled novel about the French Impressionists.

"We're in the fourth draft of book 11," said Stone, a pink-faced man of vast enthusiasm and energy. "There will be 14 books, about 1,100 pages of manuscript, of which 25 percent will be trimmed in editing."

The publication date is next year on Sept. 26, the date for most of Stone's books. It's not that he and his wife are superstitious, it's just that "Lust for Life" was published on Sept. 26, 1934.

The new book has been a five-year project, including 14 months' research in France. "My books seem to take longer now," he sighed. "Could it be because I'm getting older? Perish forbid!"

Irving Stone was born in San Francisco, attended the University of California at Berkeley, and taught economics there. He seemed destined for a teaching career until he went to Paris in 1926. There he made his first acquaintance with the Impressionists and out of it came a book about Van Gogh.

"'Lust for Life' was turned down by 17 leading publishers in New York and Boston," Stone recalled, "always with the same comment: How can you sell a book about an unknown Dutch painter to the American public in the middle of a depression?

"At the time I was engaged to Jean but I had no money to get married," he continued. "She said, 'Let me read the book.' She suggested making cuts here and there and prepared a new typescript. Longmans Green, which had published only one novel before, accepted it."

"Lust for Life" allowed Irving and Jean to marry, and she has been his editor ever since. For 45 years they have been associated with Doubleday & Co., one of the houses that rejected "Lust for Life."

Stone's meticulously researched novels have included fictionalized portraits of such luminaries as Jack London ("Sailor on Horseback"), Abraham and Mary Lincoln ("Love Is Eternal"), Michelangelo ("The Agony and the Ecstasy"), Sigmund Freud ("The Passions of the Mind"), Charles Darwin ("The Origin") Andrew and Rachel Jackson ("The President's Lady") and Eugene Debs ("Adversary in the House").

Most of his works have been best sellers.

Stone is a writer who tries to relive his subjects' lives. He lived in Darwin's home when researching "The Origin," and went through self-analysis, just as Freud had done.

Once a writer who worked all day, seven days a week, Stone changed his ways when his wife warned one day: "If you don't take Saturday and Sunday off to take the children to the ball game or the beach, I'll have to get them a new father." They have a son and daughter.

"I used to work until I was exhausted," Stone said. "I don't do that anymore; I've learned to take care of myself. I've still got three or four more books I'd like to write."

Stone said he never gets lonely as a writer. "As long as I can remember, I never wanted to do anything but write," he said. "I started with a short story at 9. I never stopped, even when I was rejected by the literary magazine at Berkeley. My manuscript came back with the note, 'Why don't you learn how to write?'"

Book News

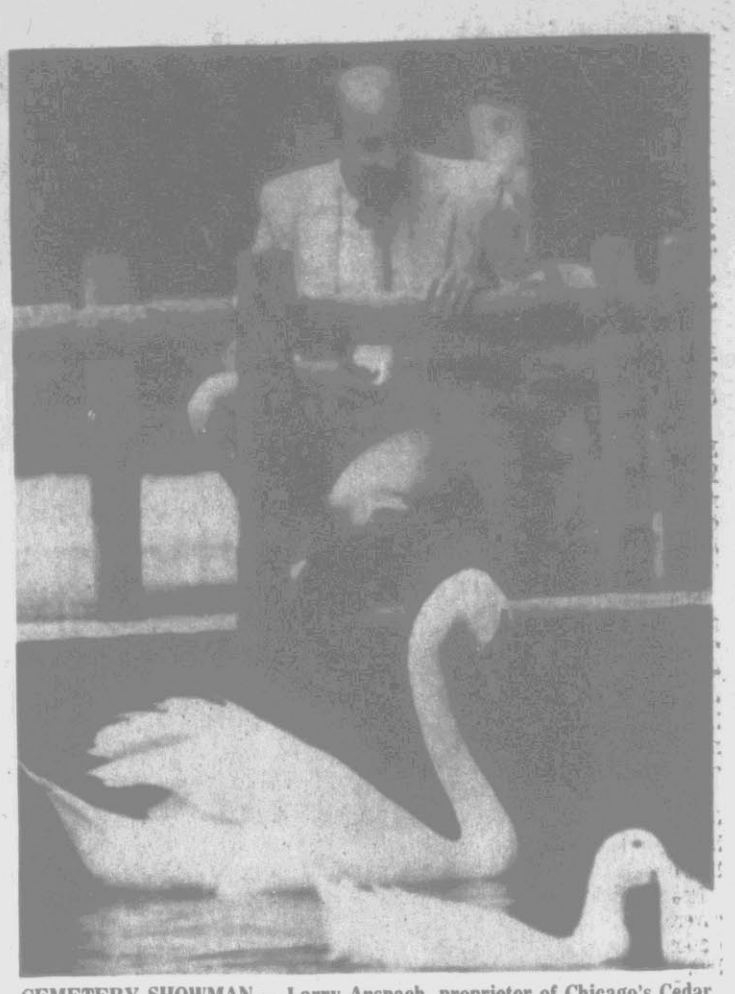
By LINDA M. STANCILL

Several interesting biographies are among the new books recently added to the collection at Sheppard Memorial Library.

"Natalie," a memoir by her sister, Lana Wood, depicts an intimate remembrance of her tempestuous life and tragic death. She presents a warm but unflinchingly candid account of a great star's passionate love affairs, violent fights, stormy marriages, bitter divorces and of her controversial death by drowning at the age of 43. Lana also reveals for the first time Natalie's near fatal suicide attempt, her weight problems that led to pills and mood swings, her drinking and anxiety over aging and bad roles and her valiant plans for a comeback on the stage. Natalie emerges as an impulsive, sometimes reckless person, never free of the limelight from the age of five.

"Wired: The Short Life and Fast Times of John Belushi" by Bob Woodward follows Belushi's life from childhood in Wheaton, Ill., to his meteoric career that started at the famous Chicago comedy troupe Second City, proceeds to New York's National Lampoon organization, then to the wildly popular NBC television's "Saturday Night Live," the successful movie "Animal House," a #1 Blues Brothers hit album, more films and then plans for films this gifted actor did not live to make. Belushi's death of a drug overdose March 5, 1982, in a hotel bungalow off Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood started Woodward on an investigation that examines the dark side of show business, TV, rock and roll, and the movie industry. From personal interviews of Belushi's family, friends, co-workers, movie executives, agents, drug dealers, etc., Woodward has written a close portrait of a great comic talent and of his struggle to succees and to survive that ended in tragedy.

"The Kennedys: An American Drama" by Peter Collier and David Horowitz is an exhaustive and powerful story of four generations of Kennedys. Collier and Horowitz have spent years researching archives and interviewing family members and hundreds of people close to the Kennedys. They have discovered hitherto unused and unknown sources and have penetrated the inner sanctum of the family and have been able to tell much of their recent history from the inside out. A unique combination of intimate knowledge and perspective free of obligations to family loyalties and myths, "The Kennedys" not only reveals proud achievements of an ambitious tribe, but hidden lapses and failings as well. For the family who may well be the most photographed, written about, talked about, admired, hated and controversial in American history, this comprehensive history brings together all the complex strands of the rise and fall of a uniquely American family.



CEMETERY SHOWMAN — Larry Anspach, proprietor of Chicago's Cedar Park Cemetery, feeds swans and ducks he has introduced into the cemetery. As a modern-day P.T. Barnum of the burial business, Anspach hosts running races, photo contests, Halloween cartoon shows and other events. He's spruced up the cemetery with exotic plants and conducts wildlife tours. Hydraulic Ram Is Found

By ROSALIND REID
N.C. State University

Quietly and efficiently, demanding no electricity or fuel and little attention from man, a century-old pump supplies streamwater to a 26,000-gallon reservoir atop the mile-high border between North Carolina and Tennessee.

It's a hydraulic ram, thought to be a lost technology but recently rediscovered by a North Carolina State University professor and student.

Mechanical engineering student David Eichenberger of Raleigh and Professor Gerald H. Elkan began researching and recreating the hydraulic ram last fall as part of an interdisciplinary course called "Entering the 21st Century."

Students in the course found that old ideas left behind by a technology-happy society might be simple solutions for some of the problems of producing enough food in developing nations. The ram might help irrigate the thirsty fields of Africa and Asia.

In June, Elkan and Eichenberger found that the 19th century had, indeed, produced a better solution than they could devise.

Near the top of a rhododendron-covered Roan Mountain in Cherokee National Forest was a working ram, lifting water 500 feet from a small stream to a popular camping and picnic area on the 6,285-foot-high summit.

"It's simpler and better designed than the pump we made," Elkan admitted. "This one was a classic."

The pump works without an outside power source because it uses the hydraulic pressure created by flowing water to pump the water uphill. About the size of a vacuum cleaner, it pushes about two gallons of water a minute up the mountain.

The pair learned of the old ram from Jessie Sullins, a Bakersville woman who has spent a lifetime around Roan Mountain.

Mrs. Sullins had read of the NCSU class project in the Tri-County News of Spruce Pine, which published a feature story distributed by the university.

She wrote Elkan that the ram had been in operation since the heyday of the fashionable Cloudland Hotel, which burned down in 1901. Today, the pump is maintained by a local mechanic, Oscar Queen, employed by the U.S. Forest Service.

Elkan said Queen reported that "except for having to change a gasket once in a while, or a relief valve plugging up, it just runs year in and year out."

Elkan and Eichenberger plan to research the origin of the Roan Mountain ram and try to combine its simplicity with the economy of modern plastic plumbing materials to see whether a ram could be made cheaply for use in developing nations.

"We're going to 'unmodify' some of our modifications," Elkan said.

They learned from Mrs. Sullins that the ram is but one part of a vast but vanishing store of old-time knowledge the Appalachians hold. And on their trip, they encountered others from NCSU using Roan Mountain as a classroom for forestry studies.

The efforts of Elkan, a microbiolgist, and engineering student Eichenberger spring up from NCSU's University Studies program, which seeks to broaden students' perspectives through interdisciplinary studies. The program, according to its head, Dr. John M. Riddle, aims at "educating for a lifetime."

Final Shows In Valdese

VALDESE — Final performances of the 17th season of the outdoor drama "From This Day Forward," written by historian Fred Cranford, will be presented Aug. 9-11 at 8:45 p.m. at the Old Colony Amphitheater in Valdese.

The drama traces the history of the Waldenses, who fled to the remote Cottian Alps in the Middle Ages to escape religious persecution. But there they were not safe because they refused to join the established church and were massacred by the hundreds.

The persecution ended in 1848, but the blessing of peace brought the hardship of overpopulation. The drama tells how the Waldenses came to the rocky hills of Burke County in search of a better future.

Gregory Caswell, instructer at Western Carolina Center in Morganton, is this season's director. Ticket prices are $6 for adults and $3 for children. Group rates are available by reservation for groups of 10 or more.

For more information call 704-874-0176 or write to Amy T. Gray, Old Colony Players, P.O. Box 112, Valdese, N.C., 28690.

Square Dances

FONTANA DAM — An old-fashioned square dance will be held at Fontana Village Resort each Monday, Wednesday and Saturday night through August. The dance will feature renowned square dance caller Al "Tex" Brownlee and the Fontana Rambler Band.

The show begins at 8 p.m. each night and admission is $2 for adults. Children are admitted free. For more information call 704-498-2211, ext. 176.

ART IS THEIR BAG

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 25 billion brown paper bags are used in the United States each year, mostly for carrying groceries.

But, says the American Paper Institute, many artists have also employed such bags in their work. Picasso, for example, painted on bags.

Beaufort Museum's Name Changed

BEAUFORT — The name of the Hampton Mariners Museum in Beaufort has been changed to the North Carolina Maritime Museum. The facility is operated by the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

According to state Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham, the name change was made to better reflect the scope of the museum as state operated and to indicate it represents the history of the entire Tar Heel coastal area.

New quarters for the museum will be completed by the end of the year. They are the result of land donated to the state by Mrs. Evelyn Smith of Beaufort and a $2 million appropriation by the N.C. General Assembly. Support was also received from a group known as Friends of the Museum.

Received Fellowships

Two North Carolina master craftsmen have received National Heritage Fellowships for 1984 from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Bertha Cook, a knotted-bedspread maker from Boone, and Burton Craig, a potter from Vale, will receive award certificates and $5,000 in recognition of their contributions to the preservation of fine quality folk art in the United States.

Cook and Craig are among 17 1984 fellowship recipients selected from across the country.

The National Heritage Fellowships were created in 1982 to honor master craftspeople and artisans whose work helps preserve and enhance the mosaic that forms the country's cultural heritage.

The National Endowment for the Arts will officially honor Ms. Cook and Craig and the 15 other fellowship recipients at a ceremony in Washington, D.C. in the fall.

West Side Story

RALEIGH — The Carolina Regional Theater will present performances of "West Side Story" Sept. 6-9 at 8:15 p.m. in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium.

Tickets are $12, $10 and $8. They can be purchased from the Raleigh Civic Center Box Office by calling 755-6060 or at the door.

Sound and Light Show to be on Campus

Wake Forest News Bureau

WINSTON-SALEM — "Visions and Dreams," a sound and light show dramatizing the history of Wake Forest University, will be presented on the campus plaza Aug. 19-23.

As far as can be determined, the show will be the first sound and light production at an American university. The presentation will climax the school's 150th anniversary celebration.

A sound and light show is an outdoor drama which uses creative lighting techniques, recorded voices and music, and special effects to tell the story of the people and events connected with a particular setting. No actors appear. The imaginations of the audience become a part of the dramatization.

Created about 30 years ago in France, sound and light shows have been presented successfully throughout the world. This kind of dramatization is also known by the French phrase "son et lumiere."

James Dodding of England, visiting professor of theater arts, is the author and director of "Visions and Dreams." Dodding has directed numerous plays for the Wake Forest University Theater, including "The Mikado," "Guys and Dolls" and "HMS Pinafore." He has been involved in "son et lumiere" productions in Lincolnshire, England, and on the Island of Malta.

During the week of performances, Wake Forest will offer several additional activities to those who purchase tickets to the sound and light show. An open house on the campus each evening will precede the show, meals will be available and a number of special receptions will be held. Tours of Graylyn Conference Center and Reynolda House will be conducted and an open house will be held in the Reynolda Village shops.

Three Actors Play One Role

By LYNN SUMMERELL

A recent performance of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama on Roanoke Island seemed to indicate that one of the play's leading characters had a split personality. In one night, three different performers appeared in the principal dance role of Uppowoc, an Indian medicine man.

Uppowoc is a role that showcases a strong male dancer. He performs in two elaborate dance numbers depicting different aspects of life among the native Americans of Roanoke Island in the 16th century. He also appears in several non-musical scenes as an actor, helping to advance a sub-plot about the friction between two alien cultures: the English and the native Indians.

Due to an unusual chain of events, the audience at the July 24 performance of "The Lost Colony" saw three entirely different Uppowocs during the course of the evening.

Brad Wages, of Stroud, Okla., began the performance as usual, made up as the medicine man and performing his "deer dance" solo. Just as the number was finishing, Wages slipped on the damp grass and twisted the tendons in his right foot. Immediately, Wages' foot was locked in a spasm and it hurt a lot.

"The minute I felt the pain," Wages said, "my mind raced ahead to my next entrance. I knew I could never make it."

The dancer was helped off-stage and went immediately to the backstage nurse's clinic.

Wages' understudy was notified. Due to such short notice, however, he was not able to get into the Uppowoc costume and make-up immediately as he was required for another crucial scene just coming up.

In stepped John Walker, associate choreographer of "The Lost Colony."

"I had danced this role hundreds of times in the 1960s and '70s," Walker said, "but I haven't actually performed on stage since 1976."

Since extraordinary circumstances call for extraordinary measures, the Burlington teacher/choreographer literally threw on some make-up and rushed on stage just in time to do Uppowoc's "fire dance" solo.

The fact that Walker sported a full beard — totally alien to how an Indian should actually look — proved to be no obstacle. The scene is dimly lit and the choreography keeps Uppowoc turned away from the audience for much of the dance.

"It literally took my breath away," Walker recalled, "but I think it worked out just fine judging by the applause when it was over."

When the play's second act began, understudy Matthew Padden finally went on and played Uppowoc's key dramatic scenes. Padden is now playing the role until Wages' foot mends and the dancer can return to the show.

Komodo dragons are the world's largest lizards. They may grow as long as 10 feet and weigh more than 300 pounds. They survive today only on four small Indonesian islands, one of them Komodo.

Physical Abuse Is On The Rise In Pitt County

BARBARA VOSK . . . is one of those who has been instrumental in laying the groundwork for a program to help victims of abuse in Pitt County. Now working in Raleigh, she was until recently a clinical psychologist and Coordinator of Children's Services at the Pitt County Mental Health Center. (Photograph by Winkie Lee)

Though men are occasionally the recipients, victims of family violence usually are women and children.

Barbara Vock, a consultant in Raleigh who until recently worked as a clinical psychologist and Coordinator of Children's Services at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, in a recent interview spoke of the alarming results of some studies done in this country.

Research at one Connecticut hospital showed that almost one half of the 1,400 injuries to women brought to the emergency room were results of being battered by boyfriends or husbands.

The 1979 FBI Uniform Crime Report stated that 40 percent of female homicides were committed by boyfriends or family members. In 1977 the American Humane Society concluded that 20 percent of the families involved in reported child abuse were also families in which spouse abuse took place.

North Carolina is not exempt from the family violence problem. Governor James Hunt has stated that during the past five years, reported and confirmed incidents of child abuse had increased 100 percent in this state.

Child Abuse

According to Ms. Vosk, "Child abuse typically does refer to physical abuse, and signs of that might be cuts, bruises, broken bones, and burns . . . emotional abuse is a lot harder to prove in court, even though we can all think of those kinds of things that might fall into that category.

Neglect, another major problem many children face, is such things as not taking care of a child's basic needs for food, shelter and clothing, and leaving small children alone for long periods of time."

Unfortunately, child abuse is prevalent in Pitt County. This area is actually slightly higher in the number of substantiated cases than the North Carolina average, Vosk claims.

Vosk says that there are various theories as to why child abuse occurs. Frequently, children with special needs are the victims. These are youngsters who may be a little slow or who may have some type of physical problem. Though abusing parents usually at some time hurt all of their children, it is not unusual for one to be the more frequent target.

Other causes of child abuse include parents being under high levels of stress; parents being intoxicated and thus less inhibited; unwanted pregnancies resulting in unplanned children; parents being in rough economic situations; and, according to national family violence expert Dr. Gertrude Williams, social sanctions for corporal punishment of children.

Both Williams and Vosk state that it is necessary to realize that many abused children grow up to become abusers themselves. For these people, violence may be a lifestyle. One part of them has learned to cope with it, while another part doesn't question whether abusing a child is right or wrong. They accept it as a way a child is raised.

Cultural Expectations

Some studies have indicated that couples who have children in order to meet cultural expectations become abusers. Dr. Williams says, "There are a number of studies that indicate the abuse of children by couples who wanted their child desperately and refused contraception and abortion. One group wore maternity clothes earlier . . . they were buying in, without reflection, to traditional expectations of being a person in our culture."

Williams does not say that the traditional family is the cause of family violence, but she feels that whenever there is an authoritarian scenario and no recourse by the underlings, there is a setting for violence, sex as a prerogative of the boss, and pregnancy by women — or girls — who are meeting cultural expectations. Stereotyped sex roles are a major contributor to domestic violence.

In truly democratic families, Williams states, there is no domestic violence. Naturally, there is conflict at times, but it is out in the open with all family members permitted to express their feelings. It should also be noted that a democratic family does not imply lack of discipline for children; it simply avoids violent punishments.

Spouse Battering

Getting exact statistics about the number of spouse batterings that occur is very difficult because most cases go unreported, Vosk states. In addition, it is believed that many victims who end up in the hospital with injuries do not tell the truth about how they were hurt.

Domestic violence is often dangerous to people on the outside as well as to family members. Police — who are most frequently involved in the calls — have to be careful. According to Vosk, "More police officers are killed answering domestic violence calls than in all other categories of crimes. These are really dangerous kinds of things to enter into."

A shocking fact about violence in the family is its acceptance. Dr. Williams states that in many circles, according to the research, it is not only accepted, but encouraged. She adds, "A survey was done of so-called normal families and one-fifth of the sample — these are not violent families in the clinical sense — but a fifth of the husbands approved slapping their wives across the face. A goodly number of the wives accepted violence towards them as part of the marital relationship."

Williams adds that husbands are occasionally battered, but most of the victims are women. Sexual stereotypes are considered to be part of the problem.

These stereotypes date back through history. At one time, marriage made a woman her husband's property. Society stayed quiet about wife beating instead of working to help the women.

Different Roles

Vosk claims that society has given and continues to give different roles to both sexes. While men tend to act out their aggression against themselves, women hold their feelings in more and are more prone to direct their aggression against themselves. They are also more likely to experience depression.

It is interesting to note that women who go to shelters tend to be very petite; there is frequently a big discrepancy in the size and weight between them and their husbands.

Williams speculates that the same may be true for battered husbands. Physical build is one possible explanation for why battered spouses do not strike back, but there are many other theories as to why the victims do not leave their homes and marriages. Since women are usually the victims, the theories tend to focus on them.

Vosk explains, "For some of these marriages, it may be that these women saw their mothers get beaten, just as their husbands saw their fathers beat their mothers. There's sometimes a history of violence through the families. So, part of why they stay is that they think that this is the way it's supposed to be. Again, that's like the child abuse victim. If they've never seen it any other way, then this becomes their lifestyle and their method of coping.

"Another reason is that . . . some of these women are not sure where to go and even where to start . . . most women in violent marriages or relationships leave the relationship five or six times before they leave for good."

Many Feel Trapped

Vosk explains that many victims feel trapped. Many are housewives with children and fear that they have no marketable skills. They don't know much about the court systems or laws and are not aware of social services which they can go to for help.

Another factor which often keeps both female and male victims of abuse at home is a cycle that is common in such marriages. According to Vosk and Williams, this consists of a period of tension building, followed by the abuse itself, followed by a "honeymoon" period. The "honeymoon" phase consists of the abusing partner's apologizing, promising to never do it again, and professing his/her love. This produces a false hope that keeps the marriage together. Unfortunately, the cycle continues, returning to the tension bulding phase, and, once again, abuse.

Marital Rape And Incest

Though the subjects of marital rape and incest are "coming out of the closet," there is still a tendency for some people to not even believe they exist," Williams says.

She says that many people feel that marital rape is a contradiction of terms and an impossibility. This lack of belief is based, in many cases, on the theory that a husband and wife are one unit, and one part of a person cannot rape another part. Another feeling held by many is that, when a woman consents to marriage, she consents carte blanche to sexual intercourse.

The view was harder on women in the past, when it was acceptable for men to have sex outside the marriage as well as claiming their "marital right."

Vosk discussed one example of a famous personality of the past who had syphilis and whose wife was not permitted to refuse him sex. Because of circumstances like this, women contracted venereal diseases, gave birth to blind babies, and experienced other nightmarish problems.

Another "embarrassing" crime within many families is incest. Girls are frequently the victims. Vosk states that giving an exact definition is difficult. To some, it's the sex act itself. To others, it's any type of sexual misconduct done to a relative against his/her will.

Because of the complexitites of defining incest, the term sexual abuse is often used instead. This crime is usually committed by people children know. In some cases, there is a pattern of marital dysfunction; in other words, the mother may be gone, sick or very passive, and what begins as touching and fondling of a child works its way up to intercourse. As is true with all of the before mentioned forms of family crimes, they can have a devastating result on the victim that can last a lifetime.

The Media

There is a hope for a new understanding of these problems — or at least for the beginnings of one which will possibly lead to progressive improvements. One positive sign is the attempt of the media to educate the public. News and entertainment programs, for example, have brought the subjects to the spotlight with such efforts as child abuse reports and feature movies such as "Something About Amelia."

Former WNCT-TV anchorwoman Anne McClenathan has seen the change taking place during her career, including here in Pitt County. "I think there's been a lot more coverage," she explains. "People are trying to bring it out into the open." However, getting the public to talk about such violence, especially getting them to do so in front of a news camera, is difficult."

McClenathan continued. "You're not going to get someone to talk about it too easily, unless you put them in the dark and real dramatic things like that. That's kind of gimmicky. Sometimes people look at it and say — Well, what is the news trying to do — make it look more dramatic? But, otherwise, the people aren't going to go on the air and say, 'Yes, I've been beaten up. My mother beats me up.'"

The subjects are often very touchy, but need to be covered. WNCT-TV news producer, Karen Smith, in discussing marital rape, summed up the overall sentiments by stating, "Everybody believes it's a bad subject to handle, but it has to be talked about nevertheless."

Present Help

Vosk states that Pitt County offers some places victims of familial abuse can go to get help. For victims of child abuse, there is the Department of Social Services. Once a report is made to this organization, someone is assigned to the case.

In situations where the abuse is severe, the children are placed in the social worker's custody and then placed into foster homes.

It is a frequent practice for the department to attempt to get counseling or help for the mother or father. In certain cases, both the parents and children are dealt with, with the hopes that the family can be joined back together.

In addition to this, Mary Louis, who works at the Family Practice Center and has a degree in social works, runs a family support group. This is basically a self-help effort where people can get together and talk. The group is open to anyone who is interested. Additional information can be obtained by calling Ms. Louis at the Family Practice Center.

For victims of spouse abuse, two 24-hour crisis lines exist. The round-the-clock availabilty is especially useful since violence — and the need to talk to someone — frequently occur late at night.

The Mental Health Center has a new community crisis program where someone may be able to provide intensified help to a person in need on a short-term basis.

Vosk says this helps the victim in an attempt to figure out what needs to be done, to sort through emotional feelings, and to consider whether charges should be pressed.

Family Violence Task Force

The area now has a Family Violence Task Force which is looking at the problems of family violence and deciding what the community should be doing to help reduce the problems and aid the victims.

The idea for such a group came about last summer when Vosk and Louis decided to write a grant to get some programs established in Pitt County.

When the two sat down to write their grant request, they realized that there needed to be an already existing community network of people and community support. So the decision was made to first get a group of interested persons together. Phone calls were made, letters were written, and contacts were used to reach everyone they could think of who might be involved in some way with domestic violence.

Ministers, police, social workers, and many others were reached. The result, thus far, has been the establishment of a task force whose membership continues to rise.

The task force has progressed to the point where people are now dividing into different committees and working on different tasks. New participants are always welcomed, and may contact Ms. Louis.

Grant Money Received

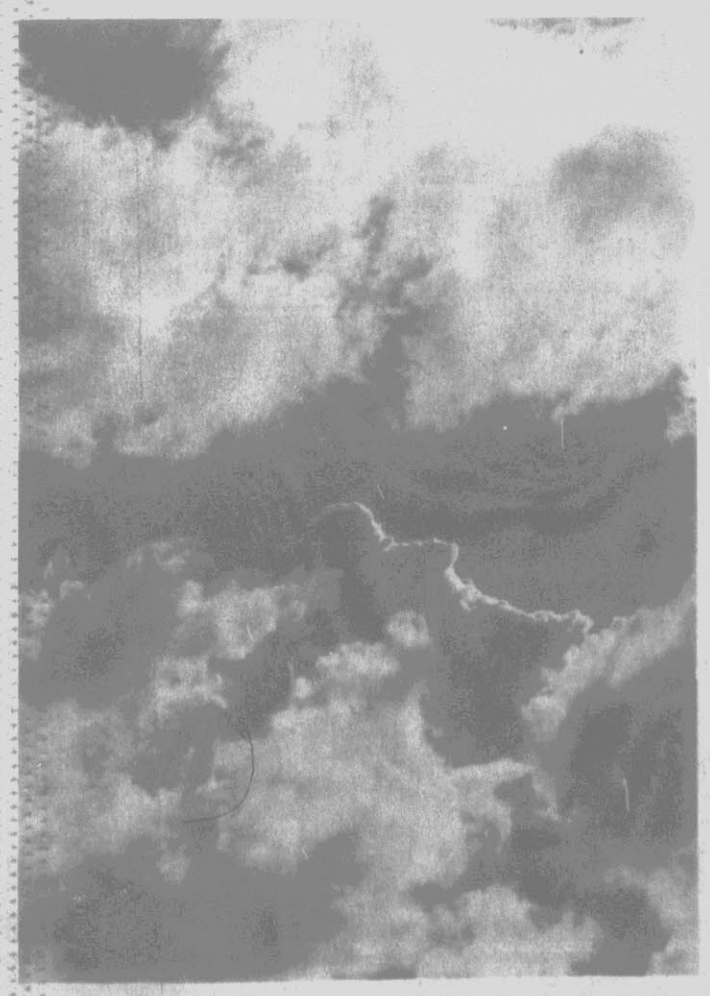
Some grant money has been received which will help in efforts to educate the community about family violence. According to Ms. Louis, an $8,000 grant has come from North Carolina's Status on Women, Department of Administration.

The Pitt County Commissioners, who earlier agreed to support the task force's program if they received funding, have appropriated $2,000. Additional money was obtained by Rep. Walter B. Jones, Jr., who got $3,000 from general state funds.

The majority of the money received will be used to hire a parttime coordinator whose primary responsibilities will be to develop a community education program about family violence, identify volunteer advocates, and develop a training program for these advocates. This position is now being advertised. Interested persons may contact Ms. Louis at 757-4611.

Summer Rains Have Ringed The Sky With Spectacular Skyscapes

Photographs By Jerry Raynor



DARK AND LIGHT TOGETHER . . . Tattered white mist clouds in the foreground open up to reveal a heavier, darker cloudhead in the background ringed with gold in reflections from the afternoon sun.

LAYER UPON LAYER . . . of restless clouds, white, gray, silver, slate, shot through with sun rays, rise from the horizon around Greenville, shift, move, overlap, reform, and disappear. In the rainy season of this July, skywatchers have been rewarded with spectacular visions of aerial mountains, valleys, and silky smooth stretches of sky tinted acquamarine and turquoise.

Tumor Found

SHERBORN, Mass. (AP) — Cindy Hutzler, a "flower child" of the late 1960s, says she learned a lot about love when doctors found her 3½-year-old son had a brain tumor.

"Before that, love was flowers and fun and all this," she says. "And it's not. It's blood. It's hard work. There's a lot of fear. There's a lot of terror. There's a lot of hard stuff in love. And I've learned that with Nathan."

One cold, gray, rainy day in March 1975, doctors in Cleveland removed a malignant brain tumor from the head of Nathan Miller, Mrs. Hutzler's only child. He lost his hair, some brain cells and the bone in the right side of his head. Doctors gave him 2½ years to live. He is now 13 and wears a helmet to protect his head.

"I was numb for the first year," says Mrs. Hutzler, 32. "And then I began to get quite angry. I felt like the rug had been pulled out from underneath me."

She began reading everything she could about brain tumors.

"I began wanting to find out more about brain tumors, the brain. It was something very, very new to me."

The response from her husband and friends, she says, was, "Let's just think that everything is going to be OK. And let's not talk about it. It's not an easy thing to listen to.

"It caused a lot of stress in a marriage that was already stressful. We were not able to be comforting to each other in the way we needed. We both dealt with it in different ways and so we separated."

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands that we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

There was an air of dignity about him even though his cheeks were tear-streaked. "It isn't easy having to live down a smear on your reputation because your name was mistranslated," he said. "Originally we were called knabe, which means youth. Now we have to go around being called knaves, and being suspected of all sorts of skullduggery. If you don't mind, call me by my given name, Jack.

"Not that we haven't been involved in some shenanigans — all strictly above-board, of course. I could tell you some stories . . . But the hour is late so, if you don't mind, just a quick one for the road while I tell you of an occasion where I won a tournament by not taking a trick. Indeed, I was sacrificed by my owner without any regard for my value.

"Our side had reached a contract of three no trump. (Later, I learned the opponents in the other room had reached the same contract but had failed.) West led the queen of hearts — a conventional opening lead that either showed the jack or else asked his partner to play the knave if he held it.

"My owner saw that, if my cousin the Jack of Clubs could be finessed successfully, the contract was easy. So he looked for a way to bring home his game should the king of clubs be offside.

"East contributed the two of hearts to the first trick, and the routine play in hearts would be to follow with the three. However, that might cause West to shift to a spade, which would prove disastrous. How could West be encouraged to continue with a heart?

"The solution was simple. West's lead had called for the jack, so my master played me under the queen! Not surprisingly, West continued with a heart. My master won the ace and took a losing club finesse. Now East shifted to a spade, but it was too late. My master took 10 tricks, and I was a hero."

Florida Lab Researches Impact Of Exotic Fish

By JIM HAWKINS
Associated Press Writer

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Even though the $1.4 billion sports fishing industry gets much of the state's attention, the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission also monitors another important business to the state: tropical fish, and not just the kind that grace an aquarium.

While tropical fish farming isn't half the size of Florida's sports fishing industry, exotic fisheries in Florida report an estimated $75 million in annual retail sales, industry officials say.

Ninety percent of all the domestically raised tropical fish sold in North America are shipped from Florida, said David Boozer, a spokesman for the Florida Tropical Fish Farms Association.

But the game commission also is concerned about the presence of tropical fish that might harm the popular sports fishing industry and Florida water life.

Since 1973, the state, with cooperation from Florida Atlantic University, has operated a Non-Native Fish Research Laboratory to determine how foreign fish adapt to Florida waters and their impact on native fish and water ecology, lab director Paul Shafland said.

"So far 17 tropical fish have been permanently established in Florida," more than anywhere else in the country, Shafland said.

"More than 90 percent of these fish were introduced by the ornamental fishing industry with South America, Asia and Africa being the major suppliers."

"We want to see whether some of these fish can live in Florida and whether they have any commercial or aesthetic benefit," said Shafland.

One non-native fish established in Florida is the walking catfish, which have been spotted waddling down sidewalks and highways in South Florida.

"Using its pectoral fins, the fish makes a rocking motion, more crawling than walking," Shafland said.

More than 10 years ago, the blue tilapia was introduced to Florida waters. Initially thought to have commercial value, the rapidly producing fish could pose a threat to native fish or Florida water ecology, Shafland said.

"We don't know what its impact will be," Shafland said. "That can be determined only over a period of time. We wish they weren't here, though. The problem with exotic fishes is once they are established, they are almost impossible to eliminate."

Shafland said his lab is experimenting with "purposeful introduction" of the grass carp, sometimes called the Chinese carp. They eat aquatic weeds that clog waterways.

"It may be that these fish can be used for some ecological control measure," Shafland said.

The exotic fish lab also monitors the "sunshine bass," a hybrid of the white bass and the striped bass. "We believe the sunshine bass can be useful because it eats certain prey fish," Shafland said.

Experts have taken several steps to make sure none of the experimental fish slips into the environment, not the least of which is the lab's location on 23 acres surrounded by a levee, 16 feet above sea level, along with an 8-foot, chain-link fence. Some eggs of exotic species receive an electrical shock to sterilize them so the hatchlings couldn't reproduce if they did get out.

"We take these precautions to prevent to loss of fishes in the event of flooding or poaching," Shafland said.

The research at the lab is recognized around the world, he added. "It was the only one of its kind in the world, but the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service now has a new lab under construction in Gainesville. It monitors exotic fishes on a national scale," Shafland said.

Sales Growth

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Although many businessmen believe increased sales are the best way to make a company grow, it is not necessarily true in the current economy, according to Harry E. Figgie.

Figgie, chairman of Figgie International, says that each added dollar in sales income costs a company money in additional personnel, raw materials and the purchase of new plants and equipment. He says this creates a need for more working capital to support the increased sales and with it increased debt in a period of high rates and inflation.

"Limiting a company's growth does not automatically negate the twin problems of high interest and high interest rates," Figgie says, "but a no-growth policy will help prevent the problem from getting completely out of hand."

On The House

By ANDY LANG

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Most of us are never really certain whether the energy systems in our houses, both heating and cooling, are performing at maximum efficiency.

What is little known is that you can get the facts about how these systems are acting — in both principal and vacation houses — at little or no cost. There's a fairly recent federal government program under which home energy audits are available through your local utility, free or at a nominal cost, usually $10 or $15. In addition, audits are increasingly being offered by the manufacturers of heating and cooling equipment at no obligation.

The energy specialist begins the audit with a complete inspection of your building from attic to cellar, noting the location and construction of windows and doors; the construction of exterior walls, ceiling, roof and floor surfaces and the building foundation; and the quantity and quality of any existing insulation. Next, a thorough check for energy leaks in windows, doors, foundation, ducts and around air conditioners, as well as an inspection of caulking and weatherstripping, is conducted.

Based on this data, the inspector calculates heat loss from different areas and develops a "plan of attack" for your home. A detailed report, often in the form of a computer printout, suggests where insulation, storm windows, caulking and weatherstripping are needed, and in what quantities. Most auditors will recommend additional improvements, such as restricted-flow showerheads, insulation for your water heater and ducts, thermostats, adjustments to your heating system or new heating equipment.

You'll then receive an estimate for the suggested conservation measures, based on current costs of materials and labor. You can eliminate the latter by doing the work yourself. You'll also get an indication of the payback time for each measure, based on the type of fuel you use, its cost, and how much fuel the improvement is expected to save.

If you are considering switching from an oil furnace to a gas furnace, for example, check with your utility before purchasing a unit. Some utilities have minimum efficiency standards, and will conduct an energy audit on your house to make sure the unit you are planning to buy will operate in accordance with the efficiency standard for your home. The audit will indicate where you should weatherstrip or insulate in order to reach the utility's efficiency standard with the furnace you've chosen.

Before turning you loose, your utility will provide you with a list of contractors who can perform the suggested work. Some will go a step further and act as your "general contractor," collecting bids and arranging for contractors to do the work, and helping to arrange financing through local banks. In some cases, the utility itself will make the loan, allowing you to repay it with your monthly gas or electric bills. The loan may require that you work with contractors participating in the program.

In addition, some utilities offer a free follow-up inspection to check the quality of the work done, and if it's poor, the contractor may have to return and correct it. Some experts advocate an annual reappraisal to see if your fuel costs can be trimmed further with new products or techniques.

Many home heating dealers offer a free analysis of heating and cooling systems in your present home or a home you are considering for purchase. Through an analysis of local weather patterns, utility rates, house dimensions and conservation measures taken, the dealer will make suggestions for improving the present equipment or choosing new equipment tailored more closely to the consumer's heating and cooling loads.

Dealers for Trane Dealer Products Group conduct a free audit with portable computer terminals which link up with a larger computer through the customer's telephone. The dealer enters the relevant data into the terminal, and the information is instantly analyzed, with individualized improvements suggested on an easy-to-read printout. Some 25 programs exist which calculate a home's heating and cooling load, heat loss and gain, the energy consumption of new and existing heating systems, the payback periods and list weather data for selected cities. The computer is programmed in accordance with "Manual J," the industry standard for calculating heat load and heat loss, devised by the Association for Air Conditioning Contractors of America.

Since improvements on your heating and cooling equipment and conservation measures enhance your home's market value, an energy audit is a good investment, and a successful follow-up inspection is an excellent selling point. If you're house-hunting, check out the energy efficiency before you buy. Though utilities won't perform audits on homes you don't own, a private energy consultant will conduct one for a fee of $50 to $100. Or you can arrange to have an energy analysis included in a general home appraisal.

Here's the Answer

Q. — Several years ago I applied rubber strips to the bottom of our bathtub. It was intended to keep people from slipping when they bathed. It worked OK, but the rubber is getting a bit worn and, besides, I want to change the color to harmonize with our present decor. But I find it very difficult to get them off. Some of it has come off, some hasn't, and where it has, some of the rubbery adhesive remains stubborn. Is there some way to get this off?

A. — Usually, it comes off fairly easy by using a single-edged razor blade or a blade in a holder. The blade also is good for removing the old adhesive. Should some of it still remain, use a rubber cement thinner, sold in many places but especially in art supply stores. When using this cement, be very careful and work with as much ventilation in the room as possible. Also, check to see whether the thinner is inflammable, which it usually is.

Q. — Our bedroom wallpaper has dirt spots on it. It is quite old and is not washable. I used to have a special wallpapeeraser. You must use it with great care, since the eraser might take out the spot but conceivably could tear the paper.

Q. — I plan to paint two rooms in our house. Only once before have I attempted a job of this kind and, when I did, I got two slightly different shades yet used exactly the same brand and color of paint. How can I avoid that this time?

A. — Presumably you know about buying all the paint at the same time from the same dealer. What could have happened is the retailer bought some of the paint one time, some at another. Nevertheless, it is unusual to get different shades. An extra precautionary measure is to check the batch numbers or have the dealer do it for you.

Advice Offered On Choosing From Variety Of Wallpapers

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

You've decided to put up wallpaper, but with so many sample books on the market and wall coverings steadily growing in popularity, the choices can be rather dizzying.

Country, floral, big scale, little scale, vinyl or grasscloth: How do you choose?

Lyn Peterson, president of Motif Designs, a wall covering producer, advises using common sense and following some basic guidelines.

First, she says, research your room. Consider the room's function and the amount of time the family will spend in it. Is it a primary room like a master bedroom or kitchen? Or is it a secondary space, like a guest bathroom that is not used so frequently?

For primary rooms, she recommends colors and patterns that are easy to look at and live with. Save the bold adventurous styles for secondary rooms and passageways.

Next consider color. The entry of the sun into the room is an important consideration when selecting colors. Bold, bright colors tend to become harsh in bright sunlight. Strong contrasts are more effective in dim light.

"Don't decorate a space you haven't lived in — or at least visited at 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 p.m. on sunny and cloudy days," says Ms. Peterson.

Personal tastes also should influence color selection. Take a look in your closet. If there is no green in the wardrobe, chances are good that you won't be happy with it on your walls.

One more tip: Warm colors tend to bring a wall in and make a room feel warm and cozy. Cool colors give a sense of expansion.

Measuring carefully is the next step. To know how much wallpaper to buy, you have to measure accurately. A good rule of thumb, says Ms. Peterson, is to measure the distance around the room. Treat doors and windows as if they didn't exist and include them in the measurements. Next, measure the height of the room. Then, multiply the distance by the height. Divide the number by 27 to get the number of rolls necessary to do the job, she said.

She advises do-it-yourselfers to order extra wall coverings, allowing for any mistakes or future repairs. Most retailers will give an 80 percent refund on unused rolls, she says. That is a lot less trouble than trying to match dye lots at a later date. However, check the store's policy before you order.

Q. What are the signs of boron deficiency in vegetables? (D.V., Taylorsville)

A. Fall vegetables that lack an adequate supply of boron from the soil are likely to be of poor quality. Signs of boron deficiency are as follows: hollow, brown and corky stems in broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower; pithy roots of radish, turnips and rutabagas, and dark brown spots on cauliflower curds. The foilage of turnips and other leafy greens may turn bronze or deep yellow. A characteristic dark flecking or clouded area often can be seen inside the turnip roots. To remedy boron deficiency, mix two level tablespoons of borax "20 Mule Team" with a small quantity (3 to 4 cups) fertilizer and apply to 100 feet of row. "Borateam" can be used at one-half the rate of borax. Either borated fertilizer can be mixed with the soil at planting or later as a side-dressing.

Q. When should turnips be sown for a fall garden? (K.S., Institute)

A. From Aug. 10 to Aug. 30 in eastern North Carolina and anytime up to Aug. 25 in western North Carolina.

Q. I want to do some home canning. Is it safe to process foods in the oven? (U.L., Clarkton)

A. No. Oven canning is dangerous. Jars may explode. The temperature of the food in the jars during oven processing does not get high enough to insure destruction of spoilage bacteria in vegetables.

Q. In what type soils will daylilies grow? (O.L., Edneyville)

A. Daylilies will grow in a wide range of soils, but will perform much better if large amounts of organic matter are added to the bed. In extremely poor soils, a three to four inch layer of organic matter tilled into the top 10 to 12 inches of soil will be quite helpful.

Land Being Set Aside For Refuge

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

SKUNK BAYOU, Ala. (AP) — Each new condominium going up on the Alabama Gulf Coast brings unprecedented scrutiny from regulators, speculators, realtors and the like, but one of the largest land transactions under way for the past four years has been on behalf of nature lovers.

It's the purchase of the Bon Secour Wildlife Refuge.

The purchase of refuge property is still under way and could eventually result in some 8,000 acres being set aside for migratory birds and alligators to roam.

Once all the land is purchased, "it will remain in its natural state," said David Morine, spokesman for the Nature Conservancy. "Its primary purpose is a wildlife refuge, but people are welcome."

The Nature Conservancy, a non-profit national conservation group, has been buying tracts of beach and swampland and selling it to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for no profit. The group has no power of eminent domain and must deal with each landowner separately.

The federal government has allocated $23.5 million to purchase the land, and about $12 million has been spent. Congress has authorized the purchase of up to 10,000 acres, but Al Vonsack, senior real estate officer for the Fish and Wildlife Service in Atlanta, said the money should buy about 8,000 acres.

Once the purchases are completed, the Fish and Wildlife Service's operations department will run the refuge.

The refuge purchases started about the same time as the condo boom, right after Hurricane Frederic swept across the central Gulf coast in 1979, taking with it most man-made structures and some of nature's beauty, too.

The tracts of land in the refuge are in different locations on the Fort Morgan Peninsula and Little Dauphin Island and include 10,000 feet of Gulf beach. The refuge lies west of Gulf Shores, the major area of condo development.

U.S. Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., began seeking federal funding for the refuge in 1980.

At that time, he said, "There is continuing interest in the Bon Secour National Wildlife Refuge area by private commercial and residential developers, and I can truthfully say that if we do not act now, we may have lost the opportunity."

Since then, towering residential structures have sprung up all along the Alabama coast and land prices have soared.

Real estate developer Gerald King of Gulf Shores said the refuge land fronting the Gulf would be "so valuable or so much money involved that nobody could touch it. I'm glad it's in a refuge and will stay open."

King said it would be to "everybody's advantage to have open spaces."

Another realtor, Wade Ward of Gulf Shores, recently withdrew plans for a 324-acre resort that would have bisected the wildlife refuge area. Ward declined to say whether the project was being revised to win government approval for it.

Ward said he had no objection to selling the property for the refuge, "providing they pay the fair market land development price."

"Development price" has become a catchword in the burgeoning real estate industry on the coast and is anybody's guess.

Morine said Ward could "expect to be approached," as well as other landowners in the wildlife refuge area.

The advent of the wildlife sanctuary was a welcome sight to some residents who have witnessed the condo boom.

Jack Friend, who lives near the refuge, has pleaded with government officials to protect the fragile habitat of the alligators and wild birds.

"Prior to the hurricane, this swamp abounded in trees, and will someday return to its original condition, thus affording increased variety of habitat for wildlife," Friend said. He said billboards on highways leading to the coast portray wildlife — herons, seagulls, and fish.

"It's ironic that the developments destroy the symbols of their ads," Friend said. "There's just so much greed." He called for a greater understanding of how the environment is "locked into the coastal economy."

TOLEDO, Ore. (AP) — After helping clean up 70,000 gallons of oil that spilled when a tanker ran aground on a Newport Harbor jetty, Georgia-Pacific Corp. found an innovative use for the recovered petroleum.

The oil was taken to the company's pulp and paper mill here, mixed with hog fuel and used to fire the boiler that provides the mill with steam heat.

Rabies Cases Have Declined

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Rabies cases have declined here and in neighboring states, but North Carolina health officials are still preparing for an influx of the disease they say has been building since 1980.

"We've been bracing for that for several years," said Dr. John Freeman, North Carolina's public health veterinarian in Raleigh.

"South Carolina has for a number of years reported a lot of rabies," he said. "Virginia has had a tremendous amount of raccoon rabies in the northern half of the state. In Tennessee there's been a problem with rabid skunks although it's dying down somewhat in counties along our border."

So far this year, North Carolina officials have counted only one case of rabies among animals other than bats — a rabid skunk in Madison County. Last year there were six rabid skunks in Ashe and Watauga counties and in 1982 there were 26 in the same two counties.

"For the past three years we've seen skunk rabies coming from Tennessee into North Carolina," Freeman said. "The fact that we've only diagnosed one this year ... doesn't indicate the problem is going away at this stage of the game."

Rabid bats can be found anywhere in North Carolina if enough bats are tested, and eight have been found so far this year. They present less of a problem than other animals because "it's difficult for a bat to really get a good bite" on a dog or cat, which are most likely to transmit rabies to humans, he said.

By July 23 of this year, Georgia had 94 cases of rabies — mostly among raccoons — down from about 130 at the same time last year, Georgia officials said. Tennessee has had 58 cases — mostly skunks — down from about 100 on July 23 last year. South Carolina had 28 cases — mostly raccoons — by July 21, up from 17 at the same time last year. Virginia has had 136 cases — mostly raccoons — down from 429 during the comparable period last year.

Some health officials estimate that for every rabies case diagnosed, there are 10 to 25 cases never detected. No human has contracted rabies in North Carolina since 1953.

North Carolina seems to be an island relatively free from rabies only because the disease hasn't spread in epidemic proportions from Virginia and South Carolina to raccoons and from Tennessee to skunks.

"In time we will see it here too," Freeman said. "In all probability, the skunk problem in the mountains will spread too, but not far east."

In the mid-1960s, raccoon rabies spread from southern Georgia and Florida south to the Keys, west to Alabama and north to South Carolina.

In 1980, the disease moved to northern Virginia when raccoon hunters seeking more game imported raccoons from Florida, Freeman said.

Such illegal importations continue, and some people have been caught trying to bring raccoons into North Carolina, he said. In 1980, in fact, Freeman diagnosed rabies among raccoons that died while being shipped here.

Freeman said the state has been preparing for the expected influx of rabies by aiding rabies control workers at the county level.

In addition, he pushed for a state law requiring rabies vaccinations for cats. The General Assembly passed the law and it took effect July 1.

But Freeman criticized the Legislature for failing to pass a measure to control the over-the-counter sale of rabies vaccine to dog owners.

Photographer Duncan Compiles Book of Celebrities

DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One day in the whimsical, wonderful world of photographer Kenn Duncan, he found himself holding a faded pair of sequined shoes. They were ruby. They were Judy's.

"I held them in my hands and I thought, 'Judy Garland's shoes!'" he said of the legendary slippers worn by the late entertainer in "The Wizard of Oz."

Duncan had borrowed the shoes from an auction house to photograph what would become an artistic obsession and a lot of fun — a book of 44 celebrities posed in personal fantasies and wearing white costumes and red shoes of every size and style.

The ruby slippers had faded to magenta and Duncan had to apply a gel to restore the color. He photographed them alone for his book, "Red Shoes."

"The pictures were so much fun and everyone had so much fun doing it," said Duncan with a twinkle in his eye.

Television personality Dick Cavett wanted to pose as a gymnast. The final picture shows him swinging in mid-air over parallel bars in white warmups and red shoes.

Actress Joanne Woodward told Duncan she liked horseback riding and dancing. "I didn't want people to think she was really a dancer, so I set that one up to make her look like she was having fun," Duncan said.

Miss Woodward is shown in leotard and tights relaxing against a dance barre, her legs spread in a modified split, an elfish grin on her face, a balloon nearby. On her feet — red ballet shoes.

"With Moira Shearer, there was no time to create anything," Duncan said. "So I put her in a Tony Chase gown and she threw her red ballet shoes into the air. That's the picture."

Miss Shearer, who starred in the ballet movie, "The Red Shoes," wore a white silk paneled dress with silver beading. But her picture won't appear in Duncan's book which is to be published in September by Universe Books.

"She'll be in the second book. I'm ready for a second one," the photographer said in an interview at his midtown studio.

Most of Duncan's work is devoted to dance, an art he pursued while studying roller skating as a youngster in Red Bank, N.J. "I'd like to be able to capture what I see in movement and have other people see it," he said. "It's like beautiful pieces of sculpture come to life."

And there often is a challenge to capturing that movement. He photographed six dancers as they simultaneously leaped into the air and caught a perfect portrait of bodies in flight.

"I'm a perfectionist," Duncan said. "But you have to be realistic about being a perfectionist. There are situations where you can't do more than you've done."

Such a case was the photo session with a baby elephant for the red shoes book. The ample animal, who wore four red shoes of elephantine proportion, did what any self-respecting beastie would do — he ripped the backdrop paper.

"Then I'm on my knees shooting and shooting and shooting and I suddenly hear all this water," the photographer said. He ultimately got the shot, elephant grin and all.

"You have to take what you have and make it work."

Duncan worked in an animal hospital, assisting the vet and walking dogs, when he was in high school. "I'd go there at 6:30 in the morning and work until 12. Then I'd shower fast and get the train to Newark, N.J., where I went to the Academy of Arts," he said.

Later, he'd go to the skating rink for his lessons.

"I had no idea where all of this would lead," he said. "I felt I was doing what I wanted to do."

After school and a brief stint in the Army at the end of the Korean War, Duncan worked in the stockroom for Macy's, pasted scrapbooks for a public relations firm and hoofed his way through the Catskills in summer stock.

But he injured his ankle and was told he had to give up dancing. "I felt terrible, like the bottom had fallen out," he said.

He returned to New York and ultimately went to work for a photographer who specialized in fashion photography. He took a course at a local YMCA, and while on an assignment in Central Park, stumbled upon two dancers practicing.

He made his first dance shots.

"All the things I studied came into place in photography," Duncan said. "When I broke my leg, I was floundering around. The hardest thing in life is finding what to do. I love people; I love life; I love what I do."

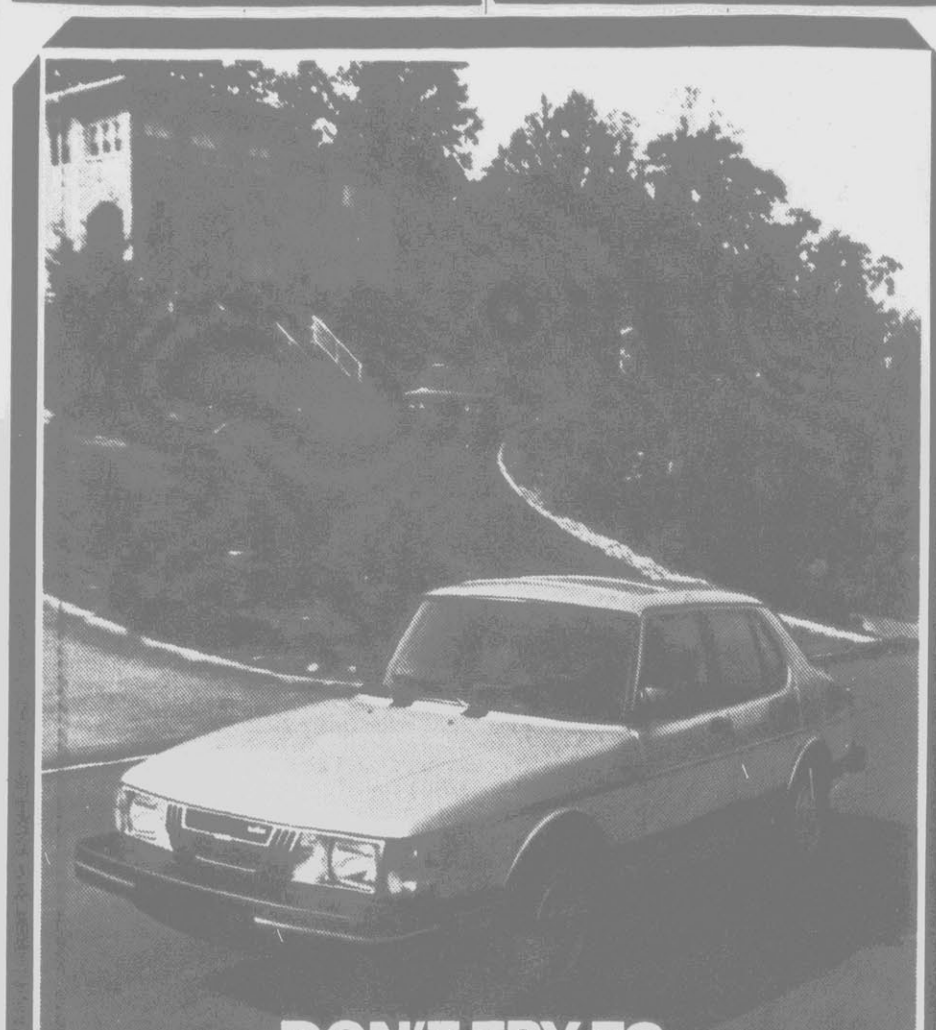
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENTS



DON'T TRY TO KEEP UP WITH THE JONESES. PASS THEM.

Following trends is easy.

Setting them, however, takes a little more imagination. The kind of sixth sense that can appreciate innovation before it becomes fashionable.

Case in point: the Saab 900 Turbo. For some time, car mavens have admired its exhilarating power and performance (not to mention more mundane features like room and economy and comfort). More recently, even publications like The New York Times have seen fit to print its praises. Which may explain why now the Saab Turbo is increasingly seen pulling into the more elegant driveways of America.

Even the Joneses are starting to take notice. But given the Saab Turbo's acceleration of 0-60 in 9.6 seconds, they'll have a pretty tough time keeping up.

Grades Earn Travel

By DAN GEORGE
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGEDALE, Tenn. (AP) — It used to be that when a college student earned an A, the only reward was personal satisfaction and perhaps a spot on the dean's list.

But beginning this fall, students at Southern College of Seventh-day Adventists will reap a more tangible benefit from their academics — free travel to Europe.

The students will get travel credit toward a roundtrip airline ticket to Europe for each hour of study according to their class standing and grade point average.

The result of an agreement with KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, the program is the first of its kind in the country, and Southern College officials hope it's the answer to the school's declining enrollment.

"I see it as having recruitment potential, retention potential and potential for making the kids a little bit more serious about their academic achievement," said John Wagner, the school president.

Southern College, one of 12 Seventh-day Adventist colleges in the United States, was founded in 1892 in Graysville, Tenn., and has been in this town in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains since 1916.

Enrollment at the coeducational liberal arts college climbed to a high of 2,091 in 1980 but dipped to 1,625 last fall. Wagner blames the drop on declining enrollment in Seventh-day Adventist high schools, which provide most of the college's students.

"Those (high schools) are expensive just like we are," said Wagner. Tuition at Southern College is $4,840 a year, and other costs push the annual expense to nearly $7,500.

"We are not the most expensive in the state, but it is a good deal more expensive than community colleges, which we find are our chief competitors."

So when Rene Noorbergen, a KLM representative whose daughter attends Southern College, approached Wagner with his "learn now, pay later" proposal, the college president was enthusiastic.

Under the program, a student must carry at least 12 semester hours to be eligible and must accumulate at least 60 credit hours in the program before redeeming the credit for an airline ticket, which may be purchased only through the school and only for a KLM flight.

Credit, which is non-transferable, ranges from $5 for each semester hour of C to $8 for for each hour of A.

"The higher the grades, the more (credit) they can make, and the sooner they can accumulate enough to make a trip to Europe," said Noorbergen, who has since initiated similar programs at several other schools.

Southern College is footing the bill for the airline tickets, but the 60-credit requirement means it will be at least two years before any trips are made.

In the meantime, the school is emphasizing the program in recruiting new students and hopes it will deter current students from transferring. So far, the response has been enthusiastic, Wagner said.

There are no restrictions on what time of year the tickets may be used. KLM, which is handling the program through its Charlotte, N.C., office, hopes the students will take advantage of off-season fares and fill empty seats during slow travel periods.

"I'm sure some people will see this as a kind of hucksterism," said Wagner. "But it appealed to me ... because I think it has some educational and redeeming value. The travel by itself, even if they only go there and spend four days, is tremendously broadening for someone who's never been to Europe. So I don't see that as the same as giving away balloons."

Still, Wagner said, enrollment problems will force more and more private schools to find a way to advertise themselves.

"I think marketing is definitely a wave of the future in higher education. And I like to think of marketing as simply allowing us to see ourselves as our customer sees us," he said.

"We all have to look at ways of meeting the needs of our customers because there's a lot more competition for those customers. And I think marketing is one way of doing it."

SEIGE ENDED

The long and bitter siege of Stalingrad ended Dec. 15, 1942, with the announcement by Soviet authorities that the German army had been encircled. The encirclement and two major attacks destroyed the power of 36 Nazi divisions. The Soviets took 137,000 prisoners, most starving and ill, and killed about 175,000 officers and men.

COMIC BOOKS

According to "The Almanac of Investments," smart investors would be wiser to give their true loves a complete set of Planet Comics instead of a diamond engagement ring. In four years, the comic books have risen in value 106 percent, from $6,621 to $13,643. But, says the book, the value of a 1-carat D-Flawless diamond has decreased in value 65 percent, from $55,000 to $19,250.

'Bare Essence' Emits An Unpleasant Odor

By Robert DiMatteo

With a title like "Bare Essence" (CBS, Aug. 7, 8), a film could only be about international perfume manufacturing. (You were thinking of something else? Naughty.) Of course, what "Bare Essence" is really about is the commercially boffo combination of flash and trash, or, as the press release states in more dignified fashion, "wealth, power, intrigue and romance." Bruce Boxleitner, Linda Evans, Lee Grant and Donna Mills star in this flossy fantasy — a sort of "How the Jet Set Lives" for all of us who fly coach.

Don't be snowed by the all-star cast of "Avalanche Express" (CBS, Aug. 11). This 1979 adventure drama about a defecting KGB official was the final picture for actor Robert Shaw and director MarkRobson. The film is bad enough that it might have buried them both anyway. The most interesting thing about it is the footnote that, since Shaw died midway through filming, a lot of his dialogue had to be dubbed by an impressionist. On a brighter note, Aug. 11 is also the date for CBS's airing of part two of "Watership Down," one of the better full-length animation films of recent years.

NBC's lineup for the week includes the innocuous "Mr. Mom"-like role-reversal comedy, "Wait Till Your Mother Gets Home" (Aug. 5), about a football coach (Paul Michael Glaser) who becomes a homemaker when his wife (Dee Wallace) goes out to work. On Aug. 6, Gary Coleman of "Diff'rent Strokes" plays a supposedly adorable wisecracking orphan in "On the Right Track," a 1981 TV movie. You have to like a lot of juvenile mugging and Coleman's cutesy-pie shtick to get through this one. "For Love and Honor" (NBC, Aug. 10) contains a mixture of romance and militarism that's reminiscent of "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Meanwhile, movies on pay-cable services offer some relief. Look especially for "Heart Like a Wheel" (on both Showtime and HBO). The film, starring Bonnie Bedelia as race-car champ Shirley Muldowney, is a lively, atmospheric hybrid of a biopic and action movie. Released theatrically in 1983, it deserved a wider audience than it got.

First Sgt. Eugene Allard (Cliff Potts) and Capt. Carolyn Engel (Shelley Smith) are forced to keep their romance a secret because of her higher rank in "For Love and Honor," airing Friday, Aug. 10, on NBC.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Please provide me with some background information on Bette Davis's marriages. Please also tell me how many Oscars she has won. — Elaine Pascale

To Elaine: Miss Davis's first husband was musician Harmon "Ham" Nelson. They were married on Aug. 18, 1932, and divorced in 1938. On New Years Eve of 1940, Miss Davis married Arthur Farnsworth. Tragedy struck on Aug. 23, 1943, when Farnsworth fell to the sidewalk unconscious and died two days later. Foul play was suspected as it was well known that Farnsworth was engaged in secret war work with Minneapolis Honeywell. A police investigation, however, turned up nothing. In 1945, Miss Davis met ex-boxer and painter William Grant Sherry. One month later, on Nov. 20, 1945, they were married.

Unfortunately, their marriage was plagued with problems, and they continually separated and reconciled. On April 5, 1950, however, Sherry slugged actor Barry Sullivan, Bette's leading man in "The Story of a Divorce," when a fracas broke out over a surprise birthday bash, hosted by cast and crew, to which Sherry was not invited. Miss Davis's divorce from Sherry became final on July 4, 1950, and on July 28, 1950 she married actor Gary Merrill in Juarez, Mexico. The Merills divorced in 1960.

Miss Davis has copped two Oscars — her first in 1935 for "Dangerous," and her second in 1938 for "Jezebel."

DEAR MICHELE: My roommate claims that the little girl who played Carrie on "Little House on the Prairie" is one person, Lindsay Sidney Greenbush. I say the character was played by twins, Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush. Can you please settle this dispute? — Jackie Holly

To Jackie: Let your roommate handle the rent for the month. Little Carrie was alternately played by identical twins Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

You will be in for a treat when you meet "Punky Brewster" on NBC this fall, played by 7-year-old Soleil Moon Frye.

"She is not a child," says her co-star George Gaynes. "She is a very young person. She has an honesty about her."

This charming young person was named Soleil (French for "sun," pronounced So-Lay) because, according to her mother, Sondra Frye, "she was born in the month of the sun on Aug. 6." "The middle name Moon originated from a line in a song in 'Annie Get Your Gun' — 'I got the sun in the morning and the moon at night.' Like Annie Oakley, Soleil's a real pistol."

"My right ear is so terrific, it compensates for the loss in the other one. Besides, photographers have told me my right side is my best side — so it could have been much worse," she says.

Bill Cosby, discussing his new series, "The Bill Cosby Show," says, "I would like to be able to say, 'I rescued NBC with this show'." He has not forgotten it was NBC who took a chance on starring him in his first series, "I Spy."

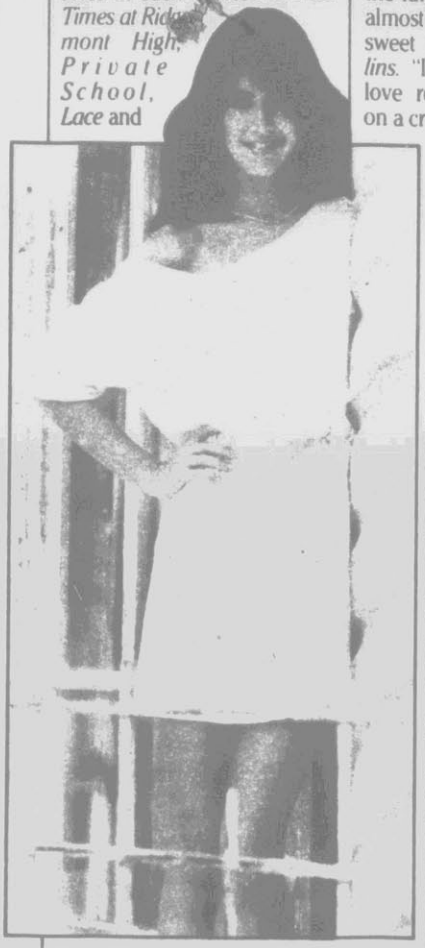
HEADLINERS

It's not that Robert Redford is a stuffed shirt; it's simply that the latest men's fashions don't suit him. There he was, bright and early one recent Saturday morning at Madonna, a boutique on Manhattan's Upper East Side, all set to fill out his wardrobe. He was shown jackets sporting padded shoulders and some numbers stressing the au courant layered look. Redford was having none of it, preferring the, uh, Natural look. He eventually settled for some conventional shirts and slacks.

REDFORD: WEARING WELL

□

With a string of bad-girl roles in such movies as Fast Times at Ridgemont High, Private School, Lace and Baby Sister among her credits, the luminous Phoebe Cates almost lost out on the role of sweet young thing in Gremlins. "I was relieved that the love relationship was based on a crush and one kiss," says Cates, 21. "No nudity! I think that's nice and refreshing for people."



CATES: SOME KIND OF COVER-UP

□

You want to trigger a duel with Kirk Douglas? Just tell him that the western is dead. Douglas, who stars with James Coburn in the HBO film Draw! and is a veteran of such horse operas as Gunfight at the O.K. Corral, couldn't be happier to be back in holsters. "It feels good to do a western again," he says. "I don't believe the genre is dead... You can go to Paris on a beautiful Saturday morning and you'll see elegant Parisians dressed up in western outfits walking through the Tuileries. In a sense, westerns were never out; black hats just became Darth Vader and .44 bullets became laser beams."

Meanwhile, son Michael Douglas, who made a rock-solid success of Romancing the Stone, a spoof of the romance genre, is already gunning to film its sequel. The younger Douglas, with dimple, of course, will reprise his chores as star and producer; talks are under way to sign Stone alumni Kathleen Turner and Danny Devito again as co-stars. According to Michael, the site of the sequel will be exotic, but not quite as treacherous as the Stone locale — Veracruz, Mexico, which offered much in the way of rainstorms, earthquakes, landslides and other assorted natural disasters. Says the producer, "We'll be kinder to ourselves this time."

□

Shirley MacLaine, who at 50 is a veritable blast furnace of energy, is constitutionally incapable of anything that resembles sitting still. "I'm determined to die young, but will put it off for as long as possible," she says.... Ellen Dolan, 28, a star of the CBS daytime trauma The Guiding Light, is nothing if not candid. She believes our world would be better off without "...lady shoppers, people who squeal or act dumb, and piped-in lounge music." Not to mention all three elements in the same elevator!

DOUGLASES: BOTH SHOOTING FOR SUCCESS

FAWCETT: BATTERED ANGEL

Former Charlie's Angel Farrah Fawcett has yet to claim winged victory on the big screen. Still, the blonde with the most-talked-about hair since Samson is considered a major commodity on TV. Her CBS movie Red Light Sting did so well that the network wants to turn it into a series. As before, Fawcett would play a hooker turned undercover vice cop. "She's lovely — perfect for television," gushes CBS programmer Harvey Shephard. But the fair Farrah — who has the lead in NBC's The Burning Bed (in which she plays Francine Hughes, the battered wife acquitted of murdering her husband) as well as a possible bio of silent-screen star Thelma Todd in the works — "isn't in a rush" to snap up the CBS offer. According to her spokesman: "If they submit a good script, we'll consider it at that time."

□

G.F. of Quincy, Ill., writes to ask actress Jennifer Warren: "What kinds of jobs did you have while you were trying to break into the movies?"

Warren replies: "Heading the list was janitor in my New York apartment building. I've always been handy, which helped when I started out as an apprentice in stock and had to help fix the scenery. There was only one time when I got heart palpitations. One winter, the boiler broke down. I had to go down to the dark, dank basement and try to fix it. A first night onstage is a cakewalk compared to that. I thought I'd blow up the whole building."

BEER IS BACK! The Heady Success of America's Native Brews

By Carole Lalli

Any serious social historian can tell you that beer has been around for a long time in America — since Colonial days. But the first full-blown golden age for the beverage arrived with the Gay '90s, when the German-style beer garden became the rage for Americans of all backgrounds. Strauss was the music of choice, and dressing up and promenading in local beer gardens were favorite social activities.

In 1920, Prohibition changed all that. And when legally enforced temperance was repealed 13 years later, only 730 breweries were left nationwide (compared with 1,816 prior to the Volstead Act). By 1940, per capita sales of beer remained below pre-Prohibition levels; an entire generation had grown up without developing a taste for beer. In the postwar years, Americans acquired an appreciation for wine, and the cocktail hour, featuring mixed drinks, became a middle-class status symbol. Beer drinking — once surrounded by an aura of gentility — was suffering serious image problems.

The first people to notice, naturally, were the nation's brewers. Their formula for re-launching beer in the postwar era called for national advertising to build brand loyalty and market success, local distribution to cut costs, and flavors guaranteed to appeal to the widest range of tastes. Not surprisingly, the trend toward national brands took its toll on the small, specialized, mostly European-style brewers. America seemed to be heading toward an Age of Uniform Beer.

All that began to change in the late '60s. A new generation of educated, health-conscious consumers responded enthusiastically to Miller Lite and similar low-calorie brands coming onto the market. At the same time, Americans were developing a taste for the richer imports and their domestic equivalent — the "super premiums." Young professionals who had been exposed to beers with distinctive flavor could afford to indulge their taste: this equally health-conscious group began moving away from hard liquor in favor of beer and wine.

The best of the good news for the nation's brewers is this: Although the American palate may have acquired its appreciation for what the industry calls "flavor" or "super premium" beer through imports, consumers now seem to be favoring fine native food and regional specialties — including beer. The flavor beers command about 9 percent of the market, but domestic labels have 5.4 percent while imports represent only 3.4 percent. Even with the ongoing trend to light, lower-calorie beers — and the latest thing, low-alcohol beers, which are gaining popularity as concern over drunk driving grows [see box] — the public is demanding more flavor in its brew.

"There is a new gourmet influence," says Joseph Owades, a San Francisco-based beer consultant who has helped train a number of the country's most adventurous young brew masters. "People now are exposed to so many new tastes. They want fresh pasta, more flavorful wine — and richer beer."

Today nearly all the well-known premium-beer makers have added super premium beers to their product lines. The "upscale" beers command higher prices than premiums (though some cost no more to make), but the market for flavor — and such intangibles as the panache of a label — is clearly there. Anheuser-Busch offers Michelob; Miller makes Lowenbrau and Special Reserve; Coors serves up Herman Joseph 1868; Pabst trots out Andeker, and Stroh loads Erlanger onto its trucks.

Which are the best domestic super beers? Here, moving west from New York City, are several beers that have been singled out by a number of experts and connoisseurs. Some of the brands are distributed widely, while others are limited to local markets. Most are produced in quantities that fall far short of demand or potential market. All are worth seeking out.

NEW AMSTERDAM AMBER BEER: Matthew Reich, the founder of the 2-year-old Old New York Beer Co., is the prototypical new gourmet beer-drinker. He's young (32), college-educated (University of Massachusetts, summa cum laude), executive-trained (Citibank, Hearst Corp.), and a wine lover. But after teaching wine-appreciation courses for 10 years and toying with the idea of founding a winery, he decided to start a brewery instead. "There are too many smart people in wine already," says Reich. "Besides, people consume 10 times more beer per capita than wine already." Reich makes his rich, amber-colored beer from an original New York recipe, and he has positioned the product as New York's own beer for connoisseurs. New Amsterdam is expensive — $6.20 a six-pack. But so far, so good. Critics have greeted the beer as "one of America's best brews," and production has doubled to 8,000 barrels a year. New Amsterdam is distributed in 12 states, including California.

MAXIMUS SUPER BEER: An early ad for this brand showed a shot glass filled with beer. It was an appropriate image. Super beer is about 6.5 percent alcohol (the normal level for beer is 4.5 percent), and that is one of the reasons this complex, golden, German-style beer has developed something of a cult following, especially among college students in the New York-New England area. It is produced by F.X. Matt Brewing Co. of Utica, N.Y., and goes for about $3.25 a six-pack.

STRAUB BEER: Staffer Herbert Straub sums up his family's business philosophy this way: "We only make so much and that's it. All the Straubs like to hunt and fish too much; forget making all this money. Besides, we're selling all we can make right now." The brewery, family-run since 1872, has been operating at capacity to produce about 35,000 barrels of its dry, flavorful beer for the past five years. Straub is only available within about 120 miles of the plant in St. Mary's in north-central Pennsylvania, normally at around $2.75 a six-pack. When a potential customer from the New York area phoned to ask how he might get some Straub, an employee said matter-of-factly, "You got to drive."

HEILEMAN'S SPECIAL EXPORT BEER: G. Heileman Brewing Co. of La Crosse, Wis., is another company expanding through acquisitions, which include both Rainier of Seattle and Lone Star. The company's strategy is to become a multi-brand house of regional labels that command enough local loyalty to compete with the nationally advertised giants. Its basic beer, Special Export, is a tawny-gold beer with a devoted following; sales revenues increased last year, though overall consumption was constant. Heileman also produces other notable beers, including Carling Black Label, National Bohemian, Royal Amber, Tuborg Gold and Tuborg Dark.

LOW-ALCOHOL BEERS

While some Americans are seeking beers with greater flavor, others are turning to beers with low alcohol content. In part, these new brews are aimed at extending the market for the low-calorie beers that were introduced and took off in the early '70s. They also represent a response to the problems of drunk driving and some states' new tough drunk-driving laws. The lead was set in Australia, which cracked down on drunk driving in 1979. Since then, 10 percent of the beer lovers in that beer-loving country have switched to low-alcohol brands.

Many major brewers plan to introduce beers with an alcohol content of 1.8 to 2 percent — roughly half the usual. (Studies show that 130-pound women who drink a six-pack of low-alcohol beer in 2½ hours do not become intoxicated.) Anheuser-Busch led off with its LA. The nation's third-largest brewer, Stroh, has introduced Schaefer Low Alcohol. A brand called Pace, from Cincinnati's Hudepohl brewery, was developed in direct response to Ohio's strict drunk-driving laws. Other low-alcohol labels to look for are Texas Select, Choice, and Break. Miller is also expected to enter the market.

The current industry wisdom is that low-alcohol beers will carve out a small specialty market at best. In Europe, low-alcohol beer has caught on modestly as non-intoxicating "lunch beer." One Swiss beverage, Moussy, contains no alcohol at all and is distributed in the United States by White Rock, which anticipates sales of 650,000 cases this year. Most experts agree that low-alcohol beers will succeed only if they also have good beer taste. If drunk-driving laws keep getting tougher, however, those low-alcohol beers might start tasting better and better.

"...WHEN I READ HIS LETTER, I ALMOST DROPPED MY CRANBERRY JUICE."

Like most of you, I have to watch my eating habits. I seem to gain weight by just looking at food.

So when I wrote to a friend of mine in Georgia recently, I began the letter with my usual trite complaints about trying to lose weight. And failing.

Within a week he answered my letter. That was a surprise in itself. But, in it he told me about a special new weight loss program developed by Dr. J. T. Cooper, a prominent Atlanta physician. When I read about the results the diet was achieving, I almost dropped my glass of cranberry juice.

First, let's set the record straight. I'm not speaking about some kind of "fad" diet. This is totally different. There are no appetite suppressants . . . no chalky powders to mix . . . no strenuous exercise regimes to follow. None of these things. But here's the best news . . .

"ALMOST TOO MUCH FOOD"

During the entire diet you'll experience no actual hunger. None at all. We absolutely guarantee it. So you feel satisfied. Even at night. But you are losing weight. Quickly.

Let me give you an example:

An Atlanta man aged 34 began the Cooper diet on April 1, 1982. By September, he'd lost 76.6 lbs. But, more importantly, he reported absolutely no hunger pangs. None whatsoever. These results are verified by certified medical records on file.

Another 26-year-old woman under Dr. Cooper's care lost 42 lbs. in just 4½ months. Laughingly, she complained, "There's almost too much food on this diet. I'm having trouble eating it all!" Again, these results were clinically monitored and verified.

THE SECRET

The secret of Dr. Cooper's diet is the special combination of foods you eat. You don't count calories. Only portions. And these specific portions (which are spelled out in the program) create a special negative caloric process that continues all day long . . . a complete 24 hour fat burning cycle. Fat is burned away around the clock. Not just in unhealthy spurts and fits like many diets. That's why it lets you shed pounds so easily.

Be sure to weigh yourself each day. You'll be absolutely amazed at the results. One 56-year old Atlanta woman lost 39½ lbs. in just 8 weeks.

- All of the people we just mentioned were allowed to eat 3 complete meals a day — plus 3 additional snacks per day. A total of six meals. In doctor's records of the entire program, they consistently felt no annoying hunger pangs.
- They ate only nourishing food. No powders or artifical food substitutes. None. They were allowed to choose from a wide variety of their favorite foods available at any grocery store.
- They took no diet pills or stimulants.
- They had no strenuous exercise program to follow.
- They maintained 100% of their energy and stamina level throughout the entire diet and their energy was totally natural.
- Best of all, they kept the weight off. And, that's the most important part of Dr. Cooper's program.

KEEPS YOU SLIM FOR YEARS

How many times have you shed 10 or 20 pounds only to find yourself regaining every pound within 6 months.

The reason most people regain weight is that we are all creatures of habit. We all have an "eating lifestyle." Our habits usually include three meals a day plus at least two or three snacks. Most diets try to force us to change all this. That's why they fail.

With the Cooper program however, you continue your normal eating lifestyle. You eat 5 or 6 times a day. Yet you begin to lose weight. Rapidly.

Consider these facts, too . . .

- ☑ The Program is easy to follow. It fits easily into your busy schedule — even when you're eating in restaurants or with friends.
- ☑ The Program is healthy. It's high in essential fiber and roughage, low in fat, very low in simple sugars and has ample protein for anyone.
- ☑ There is no ketosis. No foul breath odor.
- ☑ Best of all, you'll be encouraged to eat a wide variety of foods up to six times per day. But you must be sure to follow the prescribed portions. It's this caloric balance that makes the diet work.

POST DATE YOUR CHECK 30 DAYS

To prove how effective the Cooper Common Sense Diet is, we suggest you post date your check 30 days in advance. That way it isn't even negotiable for a full month.

We'll send you the program immediately. Try it. You'll begin slimming down quickly, comfortably and without hunger pangs. If you're not satisfied, simply return the program, and we'll return your ORIGINAL UNCASHED check. What's more, we'll return it within three working days. No excuses. No delays.

Or keep the program for up to twelve months. Try it for an entire year. Even then, if you're not satisfied we'll refund your purchase price in full.

This is the fairest way we know to PROVE to you how well this new program really works.

Guaranteed Acceptance for those age 65 and over and enrolled in Medicare Parts A&B

But I thought Medicare paid all these bills...

If you think Medicare pays all the bills, you're making a mistake many mature Americans have made. And they've paid for it. Out of their own hard-earned savings. Let's look at the facts.

With Medicare you have to pay more out of your own pocket than ever before.
Every year, it gets tougher and tougher for people over 65 to pay the bills Medicare doesn't pay. Because every year, for the last 16 years, Medicare has increased its deductibles and co-payments and so your out-of-pocket expenses have also increased. If you had to go to the hospital tomorrow—even for just an overnight stay—you'd have to pay the first $356.00 out of your own pocket. That's Medicare's initial hospital deductible.

An extended hospitalization could cost you thousands of dollars!
Most people simply can't afford to pay these kinds of costs out of their pockets...not without risking their lifetime savings. So we at Colonial Penn designed MATURITY CARE 65—a plan that works together with Medicare to pay some of the bills Medicare leaves for you to pay.

Valuable Group Protection
MATURITY CARE 65 protects you six important ways—starting with that first $356.00 you have to pay when you are hospitalized...

- Pays your initial hospital deductible—100%

- Pays 100% of all your necessary hospital expenses after Medicare's hospital benefits stop!
- Helps pay for doctor, surgeon and medical expenses—both in and out of the hospital.
- Helps pay for skilled nursing facility charges...
- Helps pay In-hospital private-duty nurse care—something Medicare doesn't cover at all!

BEER IS BACK!

and Weidemann Bohemian. Executive Vice President of Marketing John Pedace says the company is currently test-marketing a new low-alcohol beer and expects to launch the product soon.

AUGSBURGER OLD WORLD BAVARIAN STYLE BEER: Some critics proclaim it as the finest domestic beer. Whether one agrees or not, Augsburger is certainly one of the best — and one of the fastest growing, by 10 to 15 percent each year. Although the Jos. Huber Brewing Co. of Monroe, Wis., didn't acquire the brand until 1971, and didn't perfect it until it added special Spalt hops from northern Germany in 1977, the brew accounts for a full 50 percent of the company's 280,000-barrel annual production. The beer, priced at a relatively low $2.79 to $4.19 a six-pack, for either dark or regular, is available in many major cities (except in the South and Southwest). Owner Fred Huber, 51, says Augsburger's success proves that today's consumers are getting tired of old brand norms. "I make an analogy to wine. As people educate themselves, they turn to better products, mostly foreign wines, to get more flavor. I think the same thing is happening with beer. Maybe only 2 or 3 percent of beer drinkers are demanding more flavor now, but that number is growing."

COORS BANQUET: America's love affair with this easy-to-drink brew continues, though some say it tastes better in the West, where it is made and is more likely to be found fresh than it is in the East. Beer, unlike some wines, does not improve with age. A light, unpasteurized beer, Coors is best if kept refrigerated constantly and sold within 60 days after it's made. The Adolph Coors Co. of Golden, Colo., is now publicly held, though still family-run. The company's current volume is 13.7 million barrels, up about 13 percent from 1982. It still has plenty of room to grow, particularly in the South.

ANCHOR STEAM BEER: Brewed uniquely in copper kettles, this brew is the last of the two dozen San Francisco steam beers that date back to the 1890s (when there was no refrigeration in the area). In 1965, Anchor Brewing was nearly bankrupt and producing a mediocre draft beer for its last 10 accounts when Fritz Maytag — a member of the Iowa washing machine family (and then a recent Stanford grad) — put up $5,000 in rescue money, more or less on a whim. Soon he was hooked, working so long and hard that eventually his health was endangered and his marriage broke up. But the beer got better and better. Finally in 1975, after 10 years, the company began to turn a safe profit. Today, at 46, Maytag says he has earned a rest. He has delegated responsibilities to his tiny 15-person staff so he can spend more time sailing, traveling, and just plain goofing off. Production is increasing by about 15 percent a year, and the company's annual output of 33,000 barrels is now distributed in 22 states, including Georgia, Florida, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Maytag's goal is to become "a force in every major American market." The beer is not inexpensive; expect to pay $5 a six-pack or more — when you are lucky enough to find it. FW

Now, thanks to Featherspring my feet are absolutely pain-free and I finally got a spring in my step again."

OUR MONTHLY COLUMN ON ANIMAL CARE

DANGER: KEEP OUT OF PET'S REACH

By Dr. Lewis Berman

You've probably learned to protect your house — furniture, plants, shoes — from your cat or dog. But do you protect your pet from your house? Houseplants, chemicals, drugs — even soap — can, in some instances, be dangerous to a dog or cat.

For instance, you wouldn't think soap could kill. But a few years ago I treated a feisty Wirehaired Fox Terrier who had downed an entire bar. Despite my best efforts, the chemical concentration in his body was so high, and his intestinal tract so full of suds, that he died.

You'll never catch a cat eating a bar of soap — or most other distasteful products — because cats are notoriously finicky eaters. And while they love to eat plants, many of which contain natural poisons, cats will usually vomit toxins from their systems.

It's the great-tasting man-made poisons that you must keep your cat away from. Any time it laps up even a few appealing drops of sweet-tasting antifreeze, it's on the verge of killing itself. Another man-made feline enemy: any cat-box disinfectant spray containing a toxin called phenol. Read labels carefully.

The most obvious poisons are not necessarily the most dangerous. Rat poison, for example, has the reputation of being a killer. That's not quite true. One dose of household rat poison won't seriously harm a dog, beyond making it vomit and giving it bloody diarrhea. But your dog can get a fatal case of food poisoning by eating decomposed garbage. And too much chocolate (2 to 3 pounds), which contains a toxin called xanthine, can also kill the animal.

In fact, your pets may need more thorough protection from household poisons than your children do. A big dog, unlike a small child, has enough strength to knock over a heavy can filled with such powerful chemicals as kerosene or gasoline. A child probably won't be struck by the urge to roll around in fertilizer or weed killer, but a dog will. Once these chemicals come in contact with the dog's skin, your pet will writhe in pain until you bathe it in water with a mild soap.

Never leave pill bottles within a dog's reach; they can open them by chewing through the plastic. And don't be so sure you know what pills you have in your house. I'll never forget the time I offended some clients by telling them that the reason their dog was so sleepy was that he'd swallowed a depressant. "We don't use drugs!" they insisted. They found out later the dog had been munching on their housekeeper's supply of phenobarbital.

Animals will be animals, of course, and sometimes no matter how many precautions you take they'll manage to find something poisonous to eat. You can help save your pet's life by being familiar with the signs of poisoning: vomiting, diarrhea, tremors, drooling, seizures, depression, and a fever alternating with a drop in body temperature. Keep in mind, however, that some kidney and liver diseases as well as viruses cause the same symptoms.

Don't panic if your animal has been poisoned. First, try to figure out what kind of poison it has swallowed. Next, try to determine the approximate amount the pet could have ingested, and roughly when. Then call your vet. Poisoning is one instance in which it pays to telephone him before rushing off to see him. He may be able to offer lifesaving advice over the phone. Take the label or package of the poison with you to the vet so he can review the poison's active ingredients. Should you be unable to reach your vet, call a poison control center for humans listed under "P" in the phone book, or the National Animal Poison Control Center at the University of Illinois in Urbana (217-333-3611).

There are few poison antidotes you can give your pet at home. If you are certain that only a short time has elapsed since the poison was swallowed, you can try to induce vomiting. This can be very dangerous, and should only be done under the direction of an expert. And never induce vomiting if the animal has swallowed a corrosive chemical such as lye, or if it's unconscious.

If the poison has been in your pet's system for a while (two to four hours for a dog or cat), the most important thing is to delay further absorption before bringing him to the vet. Feed him a child's dose of either Pepto-Bismol or a stomach-coating antacid such as Digel or Kaopectate.

Finally, poisoning isn't as grim as it may sound. I'm always optimistic about saving poisoned pets, especially if their owners bring them in quickly. FW

Home Haircutting Made Easy

Step-by-Step Guide

You can learn to cut hair and get professional results. There's no mystery about it. It takes patience and practice, but once you've got the idea you'll be able to turn out a good-looking haircut every time. You'll be surprised how easy it is to cut hair when you use Consumer Guide's® new HOME HAIRCUTTING MADE EASY. And just think of the advantages.

If you knew how to cut hair at home you wouldn't have to spend a fortune come September getting the kids ready for school. If a friend or family member could cut your hair, you wouldn't have to spend good money at the beauty parlor or barber shop for a style that somehow doesn't turn out just (or even remotely) like what you had in mind. You wouldn't have to spend time waiting for the stylist to finish with the difficult client ahead of you. And you won't have to make an appointment!

All the instructions you need are in this book, illustrated with drawings that take you step-by-step through the three basic cuts. You learn the versatile layered and blunt cuts which can be adapted to long or short hair and look good on men, women and children. Plus you learn the wedge cut which is popular with women and girls. The equipment you need? Just a scissors, a comb, a few hair clips, towels and a sheet—all of which you probably have at home—and perhaps a thinning shears or straight edged razor for some variations on the basic cuts (easily obtainable at a drug store or beauty shop).

So buy yourself some convenience and save yourself some money. Order HOME HAIRCUTTING MADE EASY today!

TASTE MAKER

SOUTHWEST COOKERY: IT'S A WINNER

By Marilyn Hansen

The 18th annual Tastemaker Awards, sponsored by the R.T. French Company of Rochester, N.Y., were held recently in New York City. This is the only national contest honoring cookbook authors, and awards are presented for the best cookbooks in 10 categories, with a top award going to the best book overall.

The winner in the "American" category was Cuisine of the American Southwest, by Anne Lindsay Greer. The cookbook contains detailed color photographs of step-by-step preparations; many full-page color illustrations of finished dishes (the presentation is innovative and appealing); and a wide selection of recipes. A glossary and a list of mail-order sources for ingredients are included as well.

Mrs. Greer lives in Dallas, where she is Southwest restaurant consultant in the expansion of the Loew's Anatole Hotel and Tower.

The Papaya-Shrimp Salad recipe from the book is one of Mrs. Greer's personal favorites. Piquant and slightly exotic, it's perfect for a light supper on a steamy August evening.

PAPAYA-SHRIMP SALAD

Ensalada de Papaya

This lovely first course utilizes the native produce of the Southwest and reflects the colorful and festive spirit of the region. It also makes a marvelous light luncheon entree.

The Vinaigrette Dressing:

- 1 clove garlic, peeled
- 2 sprigs parsley
- 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon fresh orange juice
- ⅔ cup vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon white pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon sugar
- 1 egg white

The Salad:

- 1½ pounds medium raw shrimp
- 5 lemon slices
- 5 whole black peppercorns
- 1 bay leaf, broken
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 firm ripe avocados
- 2 firm ripe papayas
- 1 sweet red pepper, roasted and peeled or 1½ tablespoons diced pimiento
- 1 head Boston lettuce, washed and dried

1. Prepare the dressing: Mince garlic in blender or food processor with metal blade. Add remaining dressing ingredients and blend or process briefly to mix. This makes about 1 cup dressing.

2. Put the shrimp in a pan with the lemon slices, peppercorns, bay leaf, salt, and water to cover. Bring to a boil and boil 1 minute. Rinse the shrimp under cool water to stop the cooking, then peel and devein.

3. Peel and pit the avocados and cut into ½-inch slices. Peel and remove seeds from the papayas and cut into ½-inch slices. If using the red pepper, remove stems and seeds and cut into ¼ × 1-inch strips.

4. Place the shrimp, avocado, papaya and peppers or pimientos in a large serving bowl. Pour the dressing over and toss very gently to coat. Chill 1 hour.

5. To serve, separate the Boston lettuce into whole leaves. Arrange several leaves on each of 6 or 8 salad plates. Divide the shrimp mixture among the plates and spoon any extra dressing over the top.

Serves 8 as an appetizer, or 6 as a light entree

OH! GOD!

"OH! GOD!" A cry of anguish when the pain is intense. Of ecstasy when a new baby is born. Of fear when one's sins are known. Of praise when one comes to worship. "OH! GOD!" A cry often emotion-packed and spontaneous, raising somehow from deep within us.

Who is this God toward whom our spirit strains? No one has all the answers. All eternity will be too short to know him. But we do have some answers, thanks to his revealed word and the pious reflection of his gifted sons and daughters. For a sampling of these answers, we invite you to send for our free booklet, "Tell Us About God." No one will call on you.

U.S. EDUCATION

THE GIFTED STUDENT: HOW WE ARE FAILING

By Admiral Hyman G. Rickover

A quarter-century ago, I observed that America's educational institutions were failing to identify and develop our talented youth. I was concerned that the waste of young minds — our most precious national asset — would result in a loss to the nation we could ill afford, showing up in chronic shortages of highly trained professional people. "To put it bluntly," I remarked, "our schools do not perform their primary purpose, which is to train the nation's brainpower to its highest potential."

Since then things have, if anything, gotten worse. During the 1960s there was little progress in educating the gifted and talented. In the 1970s there was more legislative recognition of the needs of the gifted, but the programs and the money remained insufficient. The 1980s have also been years of inadequate financial support. The result, as the Council for Exceptional Children reported in 1982, is that only about 40 percent of the exceptionally talented in the United States were receiving any sort of special education. Only 14 states served more than 40 percent of their gifted children.

In fact, less than 10 percent of America's intellectually superior students are being properly educated at present. The recent Coleman report, High School Achievement, says that in 1980 there were relatively few programs for the gifted. Such programs existed in 73 percent of the so-called high-performance high schools but in only 56 percent of all American high schools. Moreover, while 100 percent of high-performance private schools — and 85 percent of similar public schools — offer advanced placement courses, only 47 percent of other public schools provide such instruction.

Many people assume that "the gifted will make it on their own" and "the cream will always rise to the top." These are myths. Gifted students need specific educational opportunities and special kinds of attention. For example, the most important component of their education is the opportunity to interact with intellectual equals on a regular basis. They benefit most when placed — the earlier the better — in intellectually homogeneous groups. Moreover, they must be taught by teachers of high intellect and professional competence and given the opportunity to pursue a much broader range of subjects.

Vincent Waller

Universality of interests is precisely what distinguishes the person with exceptional intellectual gifts from the average person.

To meet the intellectual needs of the gifted, a distinctive sort of educational program is required: small class size; greater attention from instructors; more independent study. Such a program will, of course, benefit relatively few students and could even be called elitist. However, it will more than pay for itself.

It is estimated that our country currently needs about 50,000 new, highly skilled scientists each year. We already fall short of meeting this need. For example, merely to replace engineering professors in our nation's colleges, we require 1,000 Ph.D.'s a year — but only 600 are joining the faculties of our institutions of higher learning annually, so we have to import good minds from abroad. We cannot expect to continue this practice in the future. We need to home-grow our next generation of intellectuals.

MSOE Photo

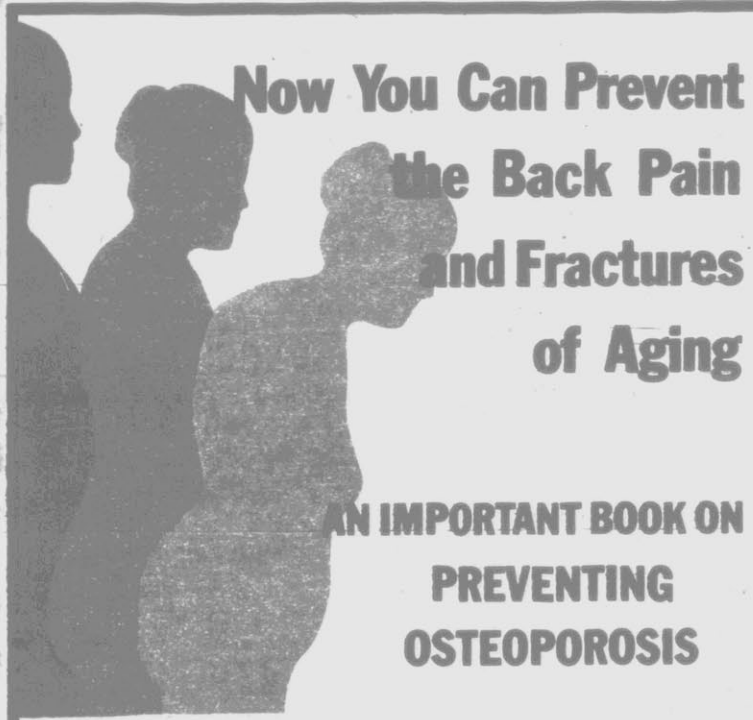
Adm. Rickover

I do not believe it is either elitist or undemocratic to guarantee the future well-being of our country through special attention to the scientists, scholars and engineers of tomorrow. Quite the contrary! To ensure that exceptional students are provided with the opportunity to pursue the highest level of intellectual achievement is in keeping with the best of America's democratic traditions.

As parents and as citizens we have no more important function than to ensure that all children — especially the gifted — are given the very best education they are capable of mastering. Never has this been more important than today, when we are being outdistanced in technological developments.

The modern revolution in technology brings with it the overriding importance of educated brainpower at advanced levels. This now exceeds in importance both our national wealth and our capital, which were the two major props of our past industrial superiority. The development of our best minds, through very advanced education, is essential if we wish once more to lead the world in new technology.

Failing to meet the challenges of the future by wasting the best minds of today's youth is the ultimate national prodigality. Thomas Jefferson's words were never truer than they are today: "If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be." FW



Now You Can Prevent the Back Pain and Fractures of Aging

AN IMPORTANT BOOK ON PREVENTING OSTEOPOROSIS

IF you are over 30, your bones are already beginning to lose their strength. Later in life, brittle bones cause spinal fractures, followed by a stooped posture ("dowager's hump"), height loss, and chronic back pain. Brittle bones also lead to broken hips.

By the age of 60, one out of every four women suffers from brittle bones — or osteoporosis. That's unnecessary. Because osteoporosis can be prevented!

Stand Tall! A Guide to Preventing Osteoporosis was written by a gynecologist in easy-to-understand language. It explains how young and middle-aged women can prevent osteoporosis and how older women can stop the problem from getting worse.

Act now to prevent back pain and fractures later in life. Order your copy of Stand Tall!

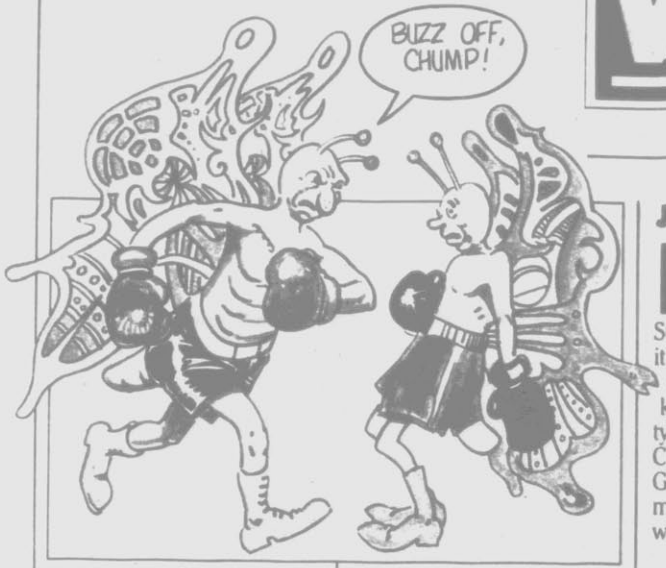
WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG



Illustrations by Vincent Waller

BUTTERFLIES CAN GET UGLY

If you're curious about why a butterfly's wings are so colorful, wonder no more. Once again, science has explained one of the mysteries of nature.

Butterfly experts have long assumed that the bright colors sported by male butterflies had something to do with the mating process (sort of like the designer shirts some men wear in singles bars). The lepidopterists posited that the colors helped females find the right species of butterfly when looking for a mate. But after researchers from the University of Kansas and the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute in Panama painted the wings of males, they found that color had nothing to do with mate selection.

Why, then, are the colors there? Well, the theory now is that color is used as a threat between males competing for a female. A male butterfly flashes its brightly colored wings to warn off other suitors. But it's a lot of flash and not much action. The ritual allows a male butterfly to "talk tough" without getting violent. Their wings are fragile, after all. So they'd rather flutter than fight.

SUGGESTION BOX

Subliminal suggestion. Some years back it was all the rage. By flashing messages on television or movie screens so briefly that they were only perceived subconsciously, the theory went, advertisers — or anyone else — could plant ideas in viewers' minds. It seemed as if Big Brother and thought control were around the corner.

Now, safely into 1984, subliminal perception is being touted as our friend. Stimutech Inc. of Ann Arbor, Mich., has come up with Expando-Vision, a program that you hook up to your television set via your home computer. While you watch the tube, encouraging messages are flashed on the screen for less than one-thirtieth of a second — just long enough for your subconscious to pick them up.

Two of the little tidbits are "I see myself beautiful" and "My breath smells clean." Hmm. Eight different programs offer subliminal pick-me-ups on such matters as stress control, career motivation, and sexual confidence. If these things catch on, what'll happen to psychiatrists?

JUST YOUR TYPE

Ever wonder why the typewriter keyboard is arranged the way it is? Sure you have. "Qwerty" (as it's fondly called after the first six letters in the third row of keys) was designed to slow typists down. In 1873, when Christopher Sholes and Carlos Glidden devised the arrangement, the keys stuck if typists went too fast.

Now, with electronic typewriters and computers, typists want to go faster and faster. That's where the Dvorak-Dealey keyboard comes in. Patented in 1936, it's not new, but advocates of the Dvorak-Dealey claim that this is the keyboard of tomorrow. It is supposed to reduce fatigue and increase speed because of its logical arrangement. The most commonly used consonants and vowels are on the second row from the bottom; vowels and punctuation are on the left, and frequently used consonants are on the right.

With the rise of the computer, folks who never typed before are beginning to do so, and some computer companies are offering machines that will switch between the two arrangements, depending on which the user finds easier. You don't, however, have to worry about re-learning the typewriter immediately. The old system is firmly entrenched, with 20 million "qwerty" typewriters in use. But Dvorak-Dealey may hold the keys to the future.

A SOUND IDEA

Americans love the open road: just weekend cruising or a long trip in the family wagon. But how do you entertain yourself between stops? There's the alphabet game, but after a while you run out of letters. So you flip on the radio.

Once the radio's on, though, where are your kind of stations? Look them up in the Radioguide. In 1972, students from Eastern Michigan University on their way south for spring break asked fellow student Art Vuolo Jr. for help in identifying stations to listen to on their trip. From that research Vuolo created a listing of the nation's radio stations, categorized by types of music and the interstate highways along which they can be heard.

There are guides to just about every kind of music, and in many cities local radio stations now distribute the guides for free. To order a sampling of the guides by mail — or a guide to a specific kind of music — send $1 to Radioguide, P.O. Box 219-F, Ypsilanti, Mich. 48197. They're tuned in to your on-the-road needs.

BEDSIDE READING

We wondered what people read just before they switch out the light and retire for the night. Here are two reports:

Dr. Daniel J. Boorstin, librarian of Congress, Washington, D.C.

Dr. Boorstin has recently reread The Aeneid by Virgil as well as The Sikhs by Khushwant Singh, a book about the way of life of the radical Hindu sect in Punjab, India.

Gerda Ruppert, library director, Nampa, Idaho, Public Library.

Angle of Repose by Wallace Stegner and The Last Supper by Charles McCarry were recently at Ms. Ruppert's bedside. The former is a historical novel about the West and "the grittiness of mining life," and the latter is "a very intelligent spy story with a great surprise ending."

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the preceding page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ for shipping and handling). This spectacular 1¢ Summer Sale buys hours of great music from the Columbia Record & Tape Club. To get any 11 of these records or tapes right away, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may then cancel your membership any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So you risk absolutely nothing by acting now!

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

• DOC SOUP! Say fast and repeat: When a doctor doctors another doctor, does the doctor doing the doctoring doctor the other doctor as the other doctor decides to be doctored, or as the doctor doing the doctoring decides to doctor the other doctor?

• Sum Fun! Challenge: Invert any two digits of 369 to form a number evenly divisible by 11.

Invert the last two digits to form 396

• Dig In! Unscramble cap-letter words for names of three garden flowers: It made him SORE to STARE at the ONE NAME of a flower known to all.

Rose, aster, anemone, respectively.

• Riddle-Me-This! Why is it selfish to eat in a cafeteria? It's self-serving. What vegetable is used in paint brushes? The bristle sprout. What levels of society catch poison ivy? All itchelons.

PERFECT TEN AT CARDS!

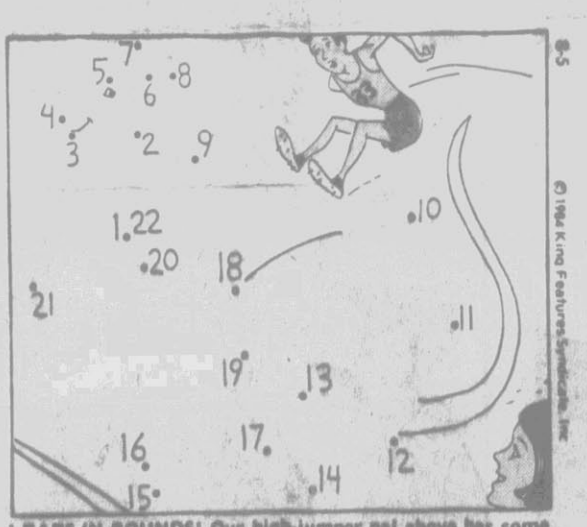
Jot down the number 10 on a sheet of paper and place it in an envelope.

In advance, place cards 1-9 of any suit, in order, in a stack.

Now, deal out cards one, two, three, four, face down, side by side. Lay card five aside, also face down.

Place card six atop four, seven on three, eight on two, and nine on one.

Naturally, when a bystander is asked to select any pair, the sum of the two cards will coincide with the exact amount noted in the envelope.



LEAPS 'N BOUNDS! Our high-jumper pal above has some keen competition. To complete scene, add lines dot to dot.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: VAL, ARN, AND MARCUS, IN THE GUISE OF RUFFIANS, SET OUT TO JOIN MORDRED'S ARMY. FIRST THEY MUST EARN A NAME FOR THEMSELVES. "THE PERFECT VICTIM," GESTURES PRINCE VALIANT AS A FOPPISH NOBLEMAN COMES DOWN THE FOSSE WAY, "THE EARL OF USK. HE BEATS HIS SERFS AND RUNS WIDOWS OFF HIS LAND."

THE EARL OF USK IS SOON RELIEVED OF ALL BUT LIFE ITSELF. "AN HONEST DAY'S WORK DISHONESTLY DONE," PRINCE VALIANT SMILES.

A FEW MORE DAYS OF THIS AND WORD OF THE NEW GANG SPREADS FAR AND WIDE. ENCOUNTERING ONE NIGHT A BAND OF REAL BRIGANDS, VAL AND HIS FRIENDS ARE TREATED WITH RESPECT. THE CHIEF ROGUE TAKES PRINCE VALIANT ASIDE. "JOIN FORCES WITH US," HE SUGGESTS....

"WE ARE ON OUR WAY TO FIGHT WITH MORDRED. THAT IS WHERE PROFESSIONALS LIKE US BELONG." THUS IT HAPPENS THAT A TROUPE OF CUTTHROATS ARRIVES AT LINDUM. THE CHIEF ROGUE GAZES UPON MORDRED'S CAMP LIKE A COW UPON CLOVER. "WHAT A MAN!" HE SIGHS.

THE MAN HIMSELF INSPECTS ALL NEW RECRUITS. MORDRED STARES INTENTLY AT VAL AND ARN, THEN IMPATIENTLY MOTIONS THEM ON.
