Fire Destroys Cox Building

A pre-dawn fire today destroyed a building housing the offices and the tire division of Cox Armature Works at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Ione Street.

The fire was reported at 5:37 a.m. and officers assigned to the fire-rescue department substation, less than three blocks away on Memorial Drive, said flames were already through the roof of the building before they arrived at the scene.

The company's main service garage on Ione Street was not involved in the fire, and a company spokesman said the firm could continue to operate.

Another spokesman said the fire is believed to have started in the office area of the building.

Percy Cox, president of Cox Armature and a former Greenville mayor, was out of town when the fire erupted and could not be reached for comment this morning.

"I feel so helpless. I want to help, but I don't know what to do," Ronny Cox, the firm's controller, said as he watched firefighters pour hundreds of gallons of water a minute into the blazing building.

"It's like a part of your life burning up," Cox said.

The 7,980-square-foot brick structure, built in 1964, was valued at $49,890, according to Pitt County tax records, which also show an estimated replacement cost of $91,000.

Tax records also show that the firm reported an inventory amounting to $225,896 as of Jan. 1, a large percentage of which was thought to (Please turn to page 14)

Mondale Defends His Farm Votes

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale today outlined a four-step plan for preserving and strengthening the family farm system in America during a campaign swing through western North Carolina.

Mondale, standing amid crates of apples and peaches, told more than 1,000 people at the N.C. Farmer's Market that Ronald Reagan's policies have placed the family farm system in more trouble now than it has seen since the Depression.

One step, Mondale said, is for farmers from across the nation to work together to save farm programs. He said America needs a president who understands and can build a "sensible farm commodity program" and who sees food as a source of strength for the nation.

Mondale said fourth step to improving family farms requires raising taxes to reduce the deficit.

"Why do we feel the productive power of the American farmer is some kind of curse?" Mondale said. "We should use food as a source of strength. Rather we should be selling more food and fewer guns."

Mondale repeatedly called on President Reagan to lay his plan for reducing the deficit on the table so voters can choose the plan they believe will work.

Mondale said he believes that Reagan will be forced to raise taxes but charged that "the same people who got no relief in '81 are going to get it socked to them again and Reagan's rich friends will be protected."

Mondale said the deficit is probably the worst thing for rural America because agriculture is a credit-intensive industry.

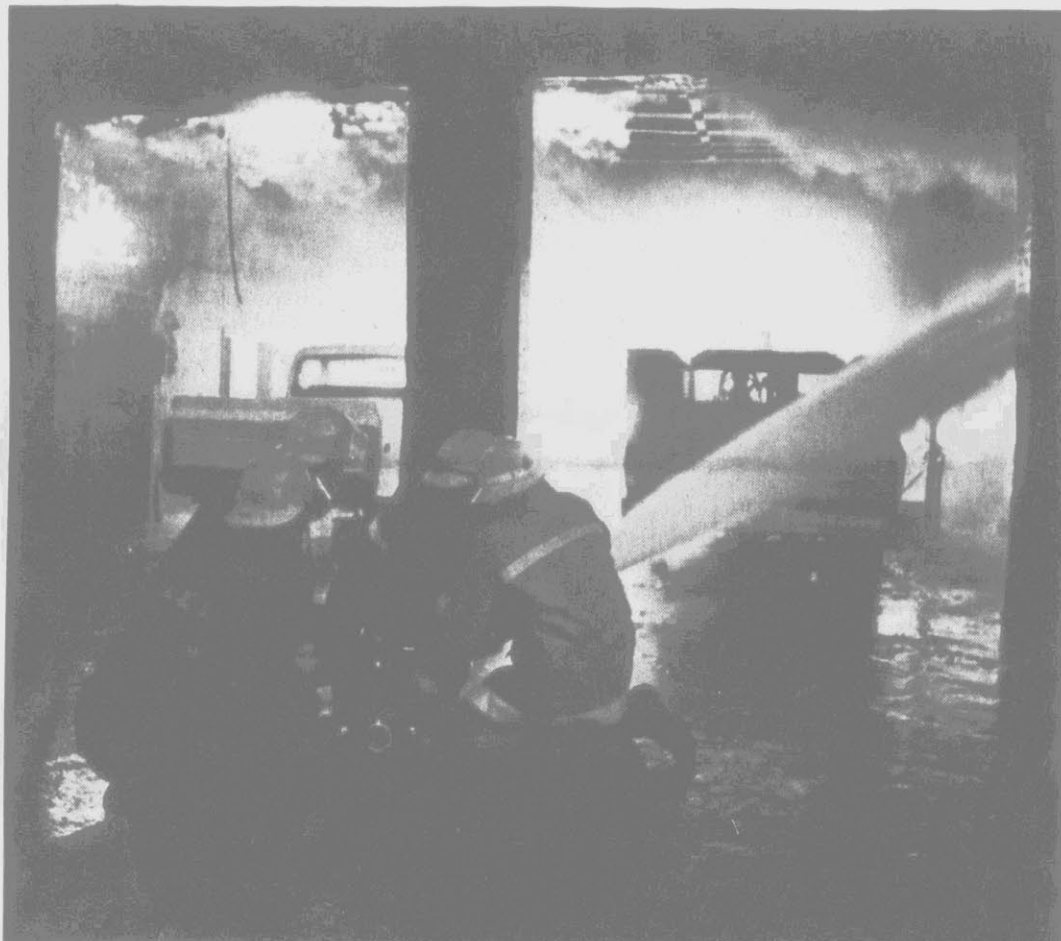

Accompanying Mondale on his trip through the Farmer's Market was state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, state Democratic Party chairman David Price, and leaders of Rufus Edmisten's gubernatorial campaign and Gov. Jim Hunt's U.S. Senate campaign.

Mondale spoke out on the agricultural issues which have drawn fire from Jesse Helms senate campaign and praise from Democrats who think it will be a winning issue this fall.

More than 150 spectators and about 50 dignitaries, including Graham and Price, greeted Mondale and his wife, Joan, when they arrived in Asheville Tuesday night.

"I have never felt such a spirit of unity and purpose as we were having," Mondale told one of the dignitaries as he went down a line, shaking hands and asking for support.

It is Mondale's first trip to the (Please turn to page 14)

Hijackers Free 129 Captives

ROME (AP) — At least two sky pirates armed with a pistol and a grenade hijacked an Iran Air jetliner carrying 284 passengers bound for Saudi Arabia and freed 129 of their captives, including 44 children, today at a Rome airport, Italian authorities said.

An Italian airport official, who would not identify himself by name, said all the freed passengers, released in three groups starting at 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT), appeared in good health. He quoted the passengers as saying there were two hijackers.

"They are fine, they are only hungry," the airport official said of the released passengers, who were taken to the airport infirmary. He said among the 44 children were several infants, and airport workers were seen carrying four packs of disposable diapers to the infirmary.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the hijackers identified themselves as opponents of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Italian authorities said the hijackers had not identified themselves, and had only asked for food, medicine and fuel.

An Italian police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were 284 passengers on the plane before the hijackers released the first group of captives. The official Italian news agency had said there were 304 people aboard when the flight was hijacked over Iran on a flight from Tehran on Tuesday night.

Although passengers told police they saw only two hijackers, police sources said more sky pirates might be aboard the plane. Initial reports put the number of hijackers at 18.

The blue and white plane touched down at Rome's Ciampino airport at 12:40 p.m., and parked at the far end of a runway, airport officials said. The airport, used for charter and military flights, was closed and surrounded by security forces.

Service Request Recommended

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously voted Tuesday to recommend that water and sewer service be extended to property located on the southwest corner of N.C. 43 and SR 1204. The 23.65-acre tract, owned by area developer Collice Moore, is slated for townhome development.

The commission's recommendation will be passed on to the Greenville Utilities Commission for use in determining if Moore's request for water and sewer service is inconsistent with plans for development of the city of Greenville. The Utilities Commission had requested that planning and zoning and members of the City Council give opinions on the request.

At the close of its workshop session Monday, the City Council instructed City Manager Gail Meeks to inform GUC that the council felt as though it had already established policy on matters of this kind and therefore would turn the matter over to Planning and Zoning for review.

Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne said the commission will decide next Tuesday at its regular monthly meeting whether service will be extended to Moore's property. "In a sense, the commission doesn't want to extend to an area that the City Council feels should not be served. But from what I understand, the request is not contrary to the long-term plans of Greenville," Horne said.

During its July meeting, the City Council turned down Moore's request to bring his property into the city's extraterritorial limits and zone the property R-6 and RA-20.

Court Stays Execution

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A federal court has suspended the scheduled execution of convicted killer Linwood Briley, but state officials say they are confident his appeals ultimately will be rejected.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday stayed Briley's Aug. 17 execution pending a final decision only hours after hearing oral arguments in the case.

"That means the court has not yet decided the merits of the appeal," but the judges needed "time to decide those issues," said court clerk John Greacen.

"It could take days. It could take weeks. It could take months, although that's unlikely. But the court does have to decide the case and write a full written opinion," he said.

Briley, 30, was one of six inmates who broke out of the Mecklenburg Correctional Center in southern Virginia on May 31 in the nation's largest escape of death row prisoners.

He was sentenced to die in the electric chair at the State Penitentiary in Richmond for the 1979 slaying of Richmond country music disc jockey John H. Gallaher.

David Hathcock, spokesman for state Attorney General Gerald Baliles, said, "The opinion could come in the next few days. If the state prevails then, we're back on the original schedule" for an execution next week.

However, Circuit Judge Donald Russell assured the defense that if a ruling against Briley comes too close to the execution date, a stay would be issued to allow time for an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Briley's previous appeals have been denied by the Virginia Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gov. Charles S. Robb, who supports capital punishment in principle, has described Briley as "ruthless" and "dangerous" and has given no indication he would extend clemency.

Even if spared death, Briley faces six life sentences plus 76 years for his convictions on other offenses.

Briley, along with his brothers James, 28, and Anthony, 26, and Richmond teen-ager Duncan Meekins, waged a Richmond-area crime spree in 1979 which included 11 murders and a number of rapes and robberies.

James Briley also faces the death sentence but no execution date has been set. Anthony Briley and Meekins are serving life terms.

Linwood and James Briley were ringleaders of the Mecklenburg breakout and remained at large for 19 days.

Slap Stick

NORTONVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kenek Helton says he's set a record that can only be beat with a stick — in fact two of them.

The 16-year-old high school senior claims to have set the world's record for the longest drum solo by slapping away at the skins for 1,045 hours with breaks only for food and sleep.

Helton got into the rhythm of things on June 11 and didn't miss a beat until Aug. 5, he says.

"I'd carry a drum and some sticks with me when I'd need to go somewhere," he said.

The record listed in the latest edition of the Guinness Book of World Records is 738 hours, but Helton said the book's publishers told him that mark had since been stretched to 1,009 hours.

RUGGED OUTDOORS...look is in style for this fall's college coed. Oversized lumberjack flannel skirts, jeans or corduroy pants as well as longjohn tops are expected to be popular according to R.H. Macy & Co. Inc., fashion experts. (AP Laserphoto)

Fall Campus Chic, Lived-In Look

By The Associated Press
Coeds heading for college for the first time this fall will find the more casual they look the more in fashion they will be.

"A lot of clothes for fall have a lived-in look," says Terry Melville, fashion director for New York's R.H. Macy & Co. Inc. "There is an abundance of casual clothes that look great and are real comfortable, too."

Heading every coed's shopping list should be jeans, according to Ms. Melville, who says this fall's selection includes new ones that are rounded in shape and cropped at the ankle, with plenty of detailing.

"Not only are the shapes and details new, so are the fabrications and colors," she adds. "Basic indigo denim shares the spotlight with black, gray, and bleached-out denim, all having a distressed, worn look to them."

"There is even a denim that is wrinkled and crinkled, the ultimate in distressed denim chic."

Coeds might consider buying two pairs of jeans and a miniskirt as the base of their campus wardrobe, she suggested, adding:

"They then could pick up a denim jacket that has a military feeling to it. It could be a bomber or aviator jacket in denim that could have a quilted or sherpa lining depending on what part of the country their school is in."

"Cotton woven shirts also have a military look to them in fall with epaulets, patch pocket and hardware trim. And like the denim jeans you will be wearing them with, these too are wrinkled and crinkled."

Ms. Melville advises that besides the military theme for fall there also is a rugged outdoor look.

Oversized lumberjack plaid flannel shirts will look great with the new jeans or a pair of corduroy pants, she said, and coeds might want to buy a couple of long-john tops that can be worn alone or layered under plaid flannel shirts.

"These long-john tops are comfortable, functional and believe-it-or-not are one of the new fashion trends from Paris this season," she says.

The androgynous look — clothes that are inspired by menswear — also will be popular this fall, according to Ms. Melville.

"One way of achieving this look is borrowing a couple of white shirts from father or older brother, rolling up the sleeves and teaming them up with a new pair of pleated trousers in menswear stripes or buying a new white menswear inspired shirt in the sportswear department," she explains.

"A big oversized cardigan sweater, a vest or oversized blazer could complete the look. Add the finishing touches with a necktie, suspenders and loafers with white socks."

For occasions when coeds want to look feminine and soft, Ms. Melville advises buying a couple of fur blend angora and mohair sweaters in jewel-tone colors.

"These look great with a long lean straight skirt," she says. "A sweater-knit dress also is a great investment because it can be accessorized to look sporty or dressy."

"And last but not least, add some color and excitement to your wardrobe and to your life — pick up a bright neon sweatshirt."

Now, it's time to think and plan for the future. What are you planning to do with your lovely gown? Did you hang it in your closet after the wedding? And, more importantly, is it still hanging there — uncleaned and unprotected? Before you put your gown away here are a few suggestions:

•Have your gown completely cleaned before storage. Perspiration, food or beverage stains on the gown which are invisible now will become visible during storage. Don't be unhappily surprised years from now by permanent yellow or brown stains. Clean it now and play it safe!

•Remove any rubberized perspiration shields and other padding which can deteriorate and cause stains.

•Do not store your gown in the basement — dampness can cause mildew. The attic is not recommended either; it is too hot in the summer. Protect your gown from light and avoid fading or discoloration. Keep your gown in a cool, dry, dark place. Special protective boxes are available for the storage of wedding gowns. These keep the gown clean, safe and fresh for many years. NOTE: Checking and cleaning all clothes before seasonal storage is recommended.

Beware of Perspiration Stains
Perspiration is initially an acid which turns alkaline through bacterial reaction. Perspiration also contains skin scales, soil and salts which can cause deteriorating effects on many dyes and fabrics. Perspiration can cause color loss if left in too long. The misuse of anti-perspirants and deodorants may also deteriorate dyes or fabrics.

Washable Fabrics
Spray the stained area with a pre-wash spray and launder. If a perspiration odor or stain remains, use these tips:

1. Soak in a solution of 1 quart warm water, 1/2 teaspoon liquid hand dishwashing detergent and 1 tablespoon ammonia for 30 minutes.

2. Rinse with water.

3. Soak in a solution of 1 quart warm water and 1 tablespoon vinegar for 1 hour.

Rinse with water. Dry.

If the stain persists:

4. For delicate fabrics, apply alcohol and cover with a pad dampened with alcohol. Let stand as long as any stain is being removed. Keep stain and pad moist with alcohol.

5. For stronger fabrics, apply alcohol and tamp. Keep moist with alcohol and blot occasionally with clean, absorbent material. Continue as long as any stain is being removed.

6. Rinse with water.

7. Bleaching may remove the final traces of stains. Use bleach as directed on the container label. Be sure to test the dye of a garment in an inconspicuous section to be sure the color will not fade.

Non-washable fabrics
The removal of perspiration stain and soil is very complex and best left to a professional cleaner. Professional spotting and cleaning procedures reduce the alkaline concentration and the destructive action

Parents Learn Of Campus Life

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Although it's the sons and daughters who compose the freshman class at the University of Rochester this fall, their parents also have learned about campus life, thanks to POP.

Pop stands for Parents Orientation Program, a three-day session in which parents of the incoming students are briefed on such matters as financial aid and student employment, small-seminar courses open to freshmen, and opportunities for study abroad and independent research.

According to a POP representative, "We've invited some of our freshman faculty to teach model classes where parents can see what happens in introductory courses." The courses include chemistry, English, engineering, and the social sciences.

If they wish, parents can get a further taste of campus life by staying in a large student dormitory, where the rooms are not air conditioned and bathroom facilities are shared on some floors, try out the swimming pool, use a gymnasium and taste meals served in the dining center.

For those parents who really want to go collegiate, T-shirts for the class of '87 will be available.

And if they spend too much time at the campus rathskeller and find themselves locked out of their rooms, emergency help has been arranged.

Costly Furniture Said To Attract Career Mothers

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International
A Victorian influence has crept into the nation's nurseries, says Delores Lehr, vice president of the Dallas Market Center.

That was her impression after touring the Summer Home Furnishings Market at the Dallas World Trade Center, held for buyers from across the country.

"They call it 'Grandmother Bait,' those absolutely irresistible — and expensive — nursery looks that combine lace, intricately designed metal cribs and enchanting reproduction children's chairs," she said.

"But grandmothers are not the only ones these days willing to order the $1,000 cribs and the $400 chairs. Career mothers who waited to have their children later in life and whose own considerable income can give them the necessary financial cushion realize that this may be their only offspring.

"They are frequently willing to pamper both baby and mother with these expensive accountments."

Iron Design's solid brass cribs and cradles were shown by Nollner and Associates. Made in El Dorado, Ark., the line replicates elaborate white iron beds popular during America's earlier days, Miss Lehr said in an interview.

"These $995 cribs boast removable canopies. There are matching cradles — waist-high and costing $800.

Suitable for decorating the cradle are Country Design linens — matching sheets, dustruffle, comforter, bumper pads and baby pillows in many colors and designs.

Durward Nollner said the crib sets are dubbed "Country Pleasures" and sell well all across the country. Each set is handmade in Abilene, Texas.

In soft pink gingham with eyelet lace trim, a set for infant girls costs $525. Cradle and crib furnishings for boys are lower in price. A navy blue dotted group sprinkled with red, yellow and green hearts costs $360 for the same pieces.

Other highlights from the show, Miss Lehr said, include:

—Iron Classics of Los Angeles' iron nursery furniture in eight colors, including dark charcoal and black, and a matching changing table, for $550. As the child grows, the cradle can be exchanged for a crib, then the crib traded in for a daybed, all in matching designs.

—Hand embroidered sheets, available for privileged babies from Raymond Gabler and Associates. Created in the Philippines and imported by Johanna Welty of San Francisco, a daintily scalloped set with rosebud embroidery in a white-on-white design costs $50 for the crib sheet, decorated top sheet and pillow case. Straight edged sheets with tiny colored bunnies, a Noah's ark parade of animals, sailboats or trains are $40 a set.

Antique reproductions of mother's favorite furnishings are available for a price, Miss Lehr said.

Samples: Georgian Furnishings Ltd. of New Orleans offers a tot-size Queen Anne rocker for $400 or a Chippendale design for $450. These are of Indonesian walnut with mahogany finish, handmade in South Korea.

"If the preference is Louis XV, the Besse line imported from France includes a tiny chair antiques in white with deep rose-colored accents and nailhead trim, including a damask seat, for $425," Miss Lehr said.

"If that is a bit steep, a Country French design is offered in beechwood, painted either pink or blue and hand-decorated with toile type designs. This toddler's seat is 'bargain-priced' at $186."

Miss Lehr said purveyors of these pint-sized antique reproduction chairs report that people without small children buy the chairs to put in spare rooms — and buy dolls to sit in them.

Readers Say Abby Wrong On Children's Right

DEAR ABBY: I differ with you on your views about children who don't want their parents to read their yearbooks.

You stated that the yearbook belongs to the child and should not be read by parents without the child's permission. Well, baloney! I paid for that yearbook, and if my son isn't brave enough to tell his friends to watch what they write in his yearbook, that is his problem. I will certainly look at his yearbook if I feel like it.

I also told him that I didn't want him writing filth or trash in other people's yearbooks.

DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR ABBY: When I was in my last year of junior high school, a boy I had known since grade school wrote a filthy expression across my picture. I tried to erase the words and ended up erasing my picture. The words were still readable, so I had to cut them out with a razor blade.

When I asked the boy why he did it, he said he was just kidding. I was ashamed to show my yearbook to anyone because of the stupidity of one person. To this day I've never shown my yearbook to my parents or anyone else.

D. IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: The question of privacy in yearbooks came up in our family the same week you mentioned it in your column.

I saw my granddaughter's yearbook and was appalled to see the filth written by some of her classmates. One boy she said she hardly knew except to say hi to wrote: "Dear Debbie, I only wish I had taken you up on your proposition. I really do want to make love to you. There's still time. Give me a call. Steve."

My granddaughter is a good student, well-liked and was never in any trouble that I knew about. When I told her I was shocked at some of the writings in her yearbook, she said, "Oh, Gram! You're so old-fashioned. Don't believe any of that stuff. The kids just make up things to write so they'll sound cool."

Well, Abby, I guess I'm just a 60-year-old fossil. What do I know?
APPALLED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school teacher in New York City, and the letter regarding yearbooks interested me because last month I had occasion to look through the yearbook of one of my favorite students — a lovely, refined young lady. Almost every autograph contained a sexual reference. She appeared to have been intimate with half the boys in her senior class!

Later she explained that it was only a joke—all the kids wrote stuff like that.

That week I began talking to groups of seniors about the importance of a yearbook as a legacy. I told them that there will come a day when their own children will want to read those yearbooks. How will they explain that what was written was "only a joke"?

I urge all young people to think before they write! Yearbooks are forever, so write kind, caring, readable-by-everyone messages. If you must get personal, do so in a small autograph album. You'll never regret it.

LA MAESTRA, N.Y.C.

DEAR ABBY: It seems that lately in your attempts to "get with it," you are really screwing up. You defend a child's right to privacy, and say parents should not look at their children's yearbooks without permission.

Come on, Abby. Everyone knows

Clarifying

Arguments being referred to the Supreme Court about the constitutional rights of children in school searches for drugs and weapons sometimes seem to miss the mark.

Accounts we have read frequently bring up the giving of "police powers" to teachers and school officials. The root of the debate goes back to a 1980 incident in a New Jersey school and "exclusionary" rules of evidence affecting adults.

The Justice Department (and often individual educators and school boards) say it's largely a matter of maintaining discipline among children — some of whom missed that factor in parental training.

We should remind that everyone knows age limitations on the rights and privileges of youngsters are an everyday fact of life. They simply are not adults; they cannot vote, they cannot drive, they cannot be served in some business establishments adults may patronize. A lot of "rights" are closed to them by age limitations.

Something else.

The responsibility of schools and educators for their charges is often likened to that of "proxy parents." We can well imagine a lot of teachers and principals would rather not have that kind of responsibility, but the very circumstances of their roles in education and guiding children sometimes demands it.

We think the Justice Department is on pretty solid ground in pursuing a high court ruling to ensure the rights of school authorities to be "authorities." It is a matter which should be clarified. The thought of bringing in enforcement officers (policemen or deputies) each time a child is thought to be breaking a rule or a law does not sound reasonable to us at all.

Strategy Fails

Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale had a "Southern strategy" in naming Bert Lance as general chairman of the presidential campaign.

It backfired. Perhaps plagued by a court appearance in which he was found innocent, Lance resigned last week, citing the possibility that he was becoming a major focus of the campaign.

There could be other reasons for Lance's unpopularity, of course. Both he and Mondale were closely allied to the Jimmy Carter administration which was swept from office four years ago.

The incident created an awkward situation for Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, who are generally conceded to be behind in the presidential race.

The situation, however, may be telling them to run as independently of the last Democratic administration as they can. The voters wanted something new four years ago and they may want something new now.

Riches Are In The Mail

If there are a lot of poor people in America it's their own fault. Everytime I open my mail someone wants to give me money. The letters are addressed to me personally. Some enclose checks and others certificates, bonds and coupons.

Let me give you an idea of what my mail was like yesterday. I received one letter from an insurance company that was willing to pay me $1,000 a month for the rest of my life if I came down with any kind of illness. I didn't even have to take a medical examination. "Yes, Mr. Buchwald," the writer said, "all you have to do is get sick and you will receive $1,000 a month no matter what your state of health is at the present time."

The next letter was from First National Bank of Wilmington, Del. Thomas Campenni, the president of the bank, was offering to deposit in my account $50,000 as a line of credit, with no collateral up front, which I could use at my own discretion. To show me he meant business he was even offering me an immediate cash advance of $2,500 and a personalized checkbook which I could use against my account.

You can imagine how surprised I was to get this letter. For one thing, I've never lived in Delaware, and to my knowledge have never met Tom. But somehow he took a liking to me and decided he would trust me for 50 big ones, without me having to set my foot in his bank in Wilmington.

I was about to send for the money when I glanced at the next envelope. It's a biggie. On the front was a great cellophane window which said, and I'm not making this up, "Art Buchwald shall be paid one million dollars in cash — guaranteed in equal annual installments of $50,000.00 and payments may actually double to two million dollars." There was a nice sketch of Ed McMahon on the envelope so I ripped it open.

Well, it was just as simple as it sounded. I had been assigned nine exclusive personal prize numbers and if I sent in the Gold Label I was eligible to participate in the American Publishers Sweepstakes. I would be guaranteed the money if one of my numbers had already been drawn. In a personal letter, Ed said that he would give me the check for the one million himself. I didn't have to subscribe to any of the magazines that Ed was pitching, but he indicated I'd be foolish if I didn't.

Now, unlike Thomas Campenni, I do know Ed McMahon, and he's a very frugal guy. Ed doesn't throw that kind of money around unless he means it. So I immediately sent in my prize-winning numbers to him and I guess it will just be a matter of time until Ed will send for me to give me my first down payment.

The other mail was peanuts compared to McMahon's letter.

There are thousands of firms and individuals who keep offering me something for nothing, and only a fool would not take advantage of their generosity.

So show me a person in this country who is always crying poor, and I'll show you someone who doesn't open mail.

Appointment Comes As A Surprise

WASHINGTON — Although outward relations between the White House and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker have calmed, the central banker was irritated when President Reagan made a recess appointment to the board without informing him.

Democratic opposition had threatened to delay confirmation of Martha Seeger, a conservative Republican named by Reagan to fill a vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board. So, to get her on board for the July 16-17 meeting of the Fed's Open Market Committee, the president formally nominated her while Congress was recessed for the Democratic National Convention.

Mortifying to Volcker was the fact that Reagan-appointed Vice Chairman Preston Martin knew all about the recess appointment in advance. That duplicated the procedure earlier this year when Ms.

Seeger was interviewed by Martin, but not Volcker, before she was picked by the president.

Well-placed rumors that Secretary of State George Shultz hopes to keep his job in a second Reagan administration mainly to block Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger from getting it do an injustice to Shultz.

The taciturn, tightly controlled Shultz is known to have decided to keep his job for about one additional year — if President Reagan invites him to stay. His grievance with Weinberger, however, involves the defense secretary's reluctance to use U.S. military power unless absolutely necessary.

But despite this grievance, Shultz has made it clear to intimates that he would never try to block Weinberger from replacing him at the State Department, even though he salary increases if health insurance benefits are cut. But if employers don't take those steps, they run the risk of having part of their insurance costs declared not eligible for tax write-offs if a proposal now before Congress becomes law.

Another way to reduce medical costs in general is to have more minor surgery performed in doctor's offices and in outpatient hospital wards. But, if that happens, some of the state's financially troubled public hospitals may lose enough income to go belly up. If public hospitals start going out of business, the hospital administrators predict, the health insurance companies will find themselves paying higher bills to the private for-profit hospitals which will take their place.

The arrival of special "urgent care" clinics around the state raise the same problem. Their costs are lower but they take business and revenue away from hospital emergency rooms.

Hospitals say the cost of the average hospital stay could be reduced if the government paid the full costs of Medicaid and indigent patient care. But, if the county, state and federal governments began doing that, taxes would have to go up.

Hospitals also know they can keep their costs down by refusing to buy all the new technology that costs so much money. But when they do that, new doctors stop coming to town, patients start going out of town for medical care, and the hospital ends up in financial trouble.

Many folks point the finger at "greedy doctors" but doctors say they're not to blame for rising costs. So they agreed, through their medical associations both in-state and nationally, to refrain from raising fees this year. But Blue Cross scoffs at that saying fees will continue to go up, that doctors are not going to let their standards of living slip, and that they'll find a way around the fee freeze.

No doubt, the analyst who called this the "blame game" was right when he added, "No single element of the system can be called the problem. There is no single solution to it." But when changes are recommended, be sure that some sectors will suffer more than others. That appears inevitable.

Private Agencies Take A Turn

LOS ANGELES — Ordinarily a gathering of Hollywood stars wouldn't have turned off the likes of Ronald Reagan. But had the president dropped by one recent fundraising party here, he might have walked away speechless.

Reagan would have found about 700 movie types, liberal activists and Latinos, many of them standing on folding chairs and shouting the Sandinista slogan, "They shall not pass!" in honor of their guests, the members of the Nicaraguan Olympic team. The sponsor of the event was not the Sandinista government but a Los Angeles-based support group, the United States-Nicaraguan Olympic Committee, which hopes to defray most of the team's $50,000 travel bill.

The support committee, in fact, is just one of the many private American groups that are working on behalf of governments or causes, largely Central American, with which the Reagan administration is at odds. Theirs is a counter-movement that, self-styled diplomats Jesse Jackson and George McGovern notwithstanding, draws from this country's grassroots.

Some 52 non-profit, U.S.-based organizations now operate in Nicaragua, according to the Technical Assistance Information Clearinghouse in New York. Most of these groups assist the Nicaraguan government on agricultural projects, literacy campaigns and health care facilities. The Clearinghouse estimates that the total value of this assistance may have been $5 million in 1982.

Relief workers believe private groups in the United States account for at least 10 percent of the humanitarian aid Nicaragua receives from abroad. (Mexico, Venezuela, the Soviet Union and Western Europe are responsible for most of the aid.)

Perhaps more controversial is the aid being provided to Salvadoran civilians by 41 U.S.-based organizations; much of that assistance ends up in the hands of Salvadoran guerrillas. Other groups are unabashed about helping Salvadorans most likely to have been hurt by government attacks.

However, liberal organizations aren't the only groups pressing their own agenda in Central America. Several U.S. anti-communist groups have stepped up their assistance to Nicaraguan rebels since Congress rejected $21 million in supplemental aid for the "contras." U.S. Brig. Gen. Harry Aderhold (Ret.), who leads an ex-servicemen's group in Florida, told the London Sunday Times last week that during the last four months, his organization had sent more than $4 million in medical supplies to "pro-American" forces in the region. Joan Huettner, chief of another pro-contra organization, also told the newspaper that her group had shipped supplies into Nicaragua via U.S. Air Force transport planes.

As spirited as opponents and proponents of U.S. foreign policy may be, their activities are no match for those of the United States government. Uncle Sam, for example, has spent a minimum of $100 million in the past few years trying unsuccessfully to overthrow the Sandinistas in Nicaragua. Washington's bill for El Salvador's military needs since 1981 tops $250 million.

Yet when all is said and done about the U.S. government, American citizens still enjoy the right to make their voices heard in areas of foreign affairs. They can contribute time and money to organizations that support or oppose President Reagan's policies.

That may not seem like much for those who've never tasted the likes of a totalitarian state. But just try to get away with it in Soviet-bloc nations and some of the countries our government supports.

—Elisha Douglass—

Strength For Today

In a recently published novel, the hero is saved from punishment when a friend lies to conceal his guilt from authorities.

The hero is present when the falsehood is uttered, but does not contradict it. Apparently both the heroine, who is also present, and the reader are supposed to feel that since someone else told the lie, it is quite all right for the hero to profit by it.

This fictional incident is just one of many which seem to show widespread indifference to moral standards. A man was heard to boast that while he always reported his income, he usually made some "mistakes" in figuring out his return which saved him several thousands of dollars in taxes. This statement is just one of many which demonstrates that to consent knowingly, even though silently, to a falsehood involving oneself is a form of lying.

Indirect dishonesty is still dishonesty — just as harmful to others and just as corrupting to ourselves.

Load Management System Approved For Farmville

FARMVILLE — An energy load management system was approved for the town of Farmville by the Board of Commissioners Tuesday night.

The board approved the purchase of load management switches for homes and the town's electrical regulators. The system consists of switches installed on electric hot water heaters and central air conditioners. The switches, voluntarily installed by customers given monetary incentive, would cut off the air conditioner units' compressor upward to seven minutes during the Carolina Power and Light system peak that normally occurs in the hours of 3-6 p.m. during the hot weather months. The switches on the hot water heaters would be controlled year round with the switches probably operating from 6-8 a.m. during the cold months of December, January and February.

The estimated cost of 409 switches and installation is $42,000 which will come from the $150,000 Load Management Capital Reserve Fund.

In other action at Tuesday's meeting, a contract for architectural services was awarded to James Dugan III of Rocky Mount for the commercial rehabilitation of South Main Street. The bid of $11,850 submitted by Dugan was lower than the board anticipated, and the contract was awarded for the revitalization of the 300 and 400 block of South Main Street.

A bid from Ditchwitch of North Carolina for a trencher and trailer for the Water Distribution and Electric departments was accepted. Ditchwitch's bid of a of $12,596 was the low bid for the equipment.

The personnel policy on leave approval for town employees was revised by the board. In the past month, two employees resigned while on health leave with pay; the policies were not clear as to whether the employees were due compensation for their accumulated vacation time.

The personnel policy was revised to read, "A resignation is a voluntary termination of employment with advance notice to the Town ... Adequate notice shall only be considered notice given while actively at work and for periods: department heads and professionals — four calendar weeks; other supervisory employees — three calendar weeks; regular, full-time, non-supervisory employees — two weeks, and part-time and temporary employees — one calendar week. Employees shall forfeit a portion or all of any accumulated vacation leave payable at termination for failure to give adequate notice as indicated above."

The board also revised the policy on leave approval to state: "Health leave must be approved by the employee's department head and is subject to review by the town administrator. The administrator or department head may require physician's certificates or other evidence to verify the eligibility of health leave ... Each employee is to make written application in which they spell out the length of time to be taken, the return date and how their leave time is to be used. Failure to return on the designated date is termed resignation unless an extension has been approved prior to that time."

The board agreed to change the Building and Grounds Department to Building and Grounds Division, Department of Public Works, and to change the title from building and grounds director to building and grounds superintendent.

The board approved the town's participation in the Electric-Cities Emergency Assistance Program, an inter-local cooperation agreement in restoring utility services. Those systems signing the agreement agree to furnish or receive assistance in time or emergency or disaster. Farmville has participated in the program since 1972. J.A. Wooten was appointed as the authorized representative and Frank Bradham was appointed as alternate.

An ordinance was defeated that would have allowed checks to be counter-signed by the town administrator, mayor and mayor pro-tem.

The board adopted revised by-laws for the Farmville Public Library. It also accepted a book disposal ordinance recommended by the Library Board to allow the library to dispose of old and outdated material without having to bring the action before the Board of Commissioners.

The board approved the specifications for new carpet as submitted by the Library Board. The budgeted amount for the carpet is $4,200; the town administrator can accept bids for the project.

The board agreed to renew the lease of the "Hospitality Hut" to Edwin Kids' Day Care Center for another year. The day care center is a non-profit organization.

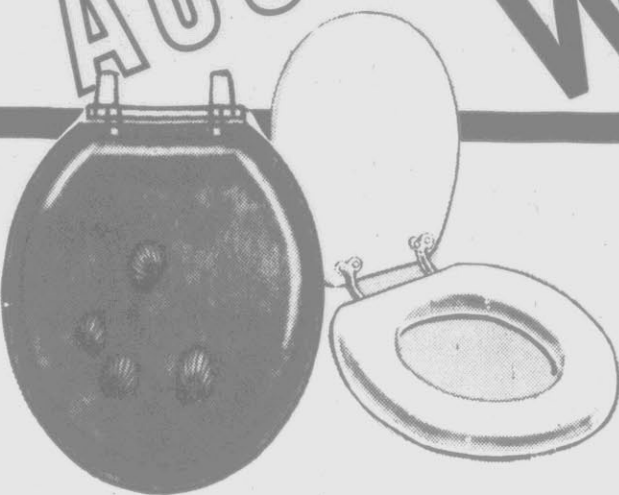

Booth and Associates, an electric consulting firm, was authorized to consider a power cost increase and report its findings to the board. The 5.2 percent increase will be effective Oct. 1.

The board made appointments and reappointed members of the town's boards. Alfred Lewis was reappointed to the Farmville Tree Board. The Rev. Lee Parker was reappointed to the Recreation Advisory Board, while W.R. Duke Sr. was appointed to that board. Elijah Whitfield was appointed as a grievance panel member of the Farmville Housing Authority; James H. Cobb was named the alternate.

Veterans Tell About Agent Orange

NEW YORK (AP) — Vietnam veterans are getting their day in court to comment on a proposed $180 million settlement against the makers of the herbicide Agent Orange, with one former serviceman condemning the package as "a gross injustice and totally inadequate."

Thirty-one speakers were scheduled to appear today in Brooklyn before U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein, who must approve the settlement before it can take effect. From letters to the judge and from telephone interviews this week, it appeared that most oppose the settlement, either because they believe it is too small or because they believe the seven companies that produced Agent Orange should be forced to admit responsibility for marketing a dangerous product.

More than 70 people are scheduled to address Weinstein during three days of hearings this week. The judge, who was instrumental in bringing about the settlement, will also hold two-day hearings this month in Chicago, Atlanta, Houston and San Francisco before deciding whether to approve the deal.

David Dean, a Long Island attorney for the veterans who helped negotiate the deal, was expected to be its chief defender today. He and the other veterans' attorneys have said $180 million was too much to pass up, given the risk of losing and the years of delay and appeals that a jury trial would have entailed.

"We believe this is a reasonable settlement, given the scientific and legal issues involved," Garry Hamlin, a spokesman for one of the companies, Dow Chemical, said from its Midland, Mich., headquarters.

But many veterans disagreed.

Reagan Sees Space Station As 'Bold Step'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, already on record favoring construction of a space station, has written a magazine article extolling the $8 billion project as "the next bold step" in space.

"We stand on the verge of realizing one of mankind's most ambitious dreams, that of building a permanently manned base in space," the president says in a bylined article scheduled to appear in the September issue of Popular Mechanics. "Such a space station will assure U.S. leadership in space into the next century."

Reagan writes that the economic benefits of America's space program far outweigh the cost and that the station will be "a major part of our strategy for conquering the frontier of space."

He predicted the space station will be a base for scientific and commercial activities, will promote international cooperation and will encourage American industry to move beyond Earth.

Reagan's article, a copy of which was sent to news organizations Tuesday, will be on the newsstands about the time that the Republican National Convention begins in Dallas on Aug. 20.

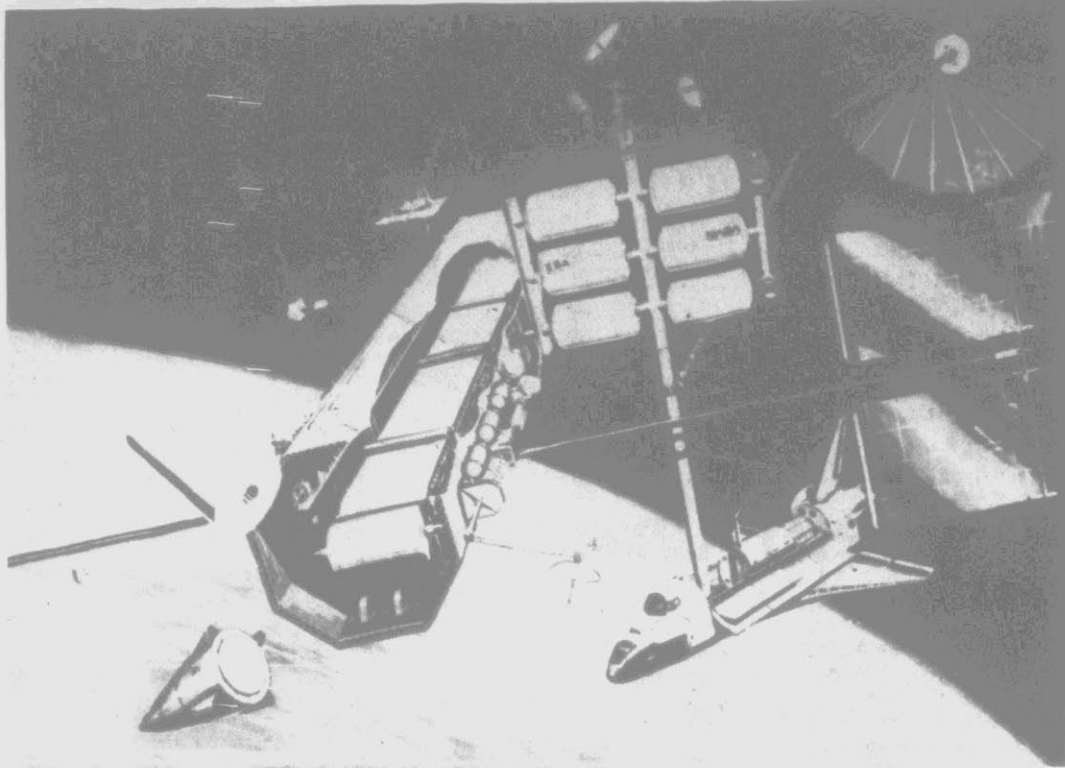

The magazine's Anne Beckenstein said "we were in negotiation with the White House for over a year and the fact that the story appears at this time is mostly coincidental."

The president endorsed a space station, to be in orbit by the early 1990s, in his State of the Union message in January and he has signed legislation appropriating $150 million to be spent on the project in the year that begins Oct. 1.

He writes that the space station program plays a major role in keeping the aerospace industry competitive and efficient and "is a powerful stimulus to our young people to study science and engineering."

He adds that "obstacles to private sector space activities will be removed and active steps will be taken to spur private investment ... Bringing into full play America's greatest asset — the vitality of our free enterprise system — will do more to spur development of space for the benefit of man than any of us can now imagine."

SPACE STATION — This is an artist's conception of a space station proposed by President Reagan in an article in Popular Mechanics magazine. The shuttle-based station would include pods where NASA and European Space Agency astronauts could live and work. (AP Laserphoto)

Student Protest

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — University students hurled rocks at buses in Santo Domingo in a protest this week against increased public transportation fares and a hike in the price of school books.

No injuries were reported but windows of several buses were shattered.

Soviets Building First Nuke Carrier

LONDON (AP) — Satellite photographs indicate construction work has been speeded up on the Soviet navy's first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, which may be ready for sea trials by 1988, Jane's Defense Weekly reports.

The three photos, published by Jane's on Tuesday, show the 75,000-ton carrier being constructed in two halves at a Black Sea shipyard.

Western defense specialists say the carrier, which they believe will be called The Kremlin, is the first of up to eight Soviet carriers equal in size to the USS Enterprise, the largest American carrier.

The Soviet carriers will be "potentially formidable adversaries for the U.S. Navy's carrier battle groups," the weekly said.

Work began in January 1983 on the nuclear-powered carrier, which NATO code-named Black Com-2.

Jane's quoted intelligence sources as estimating the carrier will be ready for sea trials in early 1988, and operational by 1994.

The weekly said that "clearly the carrier has been accorded priority by the commander-in-chief of the Soviet navy, Admiral of the Fleet Sergei Gorshkov."

Jane's spokesman Richard Coltart declined to say where the satellite photos were obtained.

Jane's editors are known to have an extensive network of sources in both the East and West. The weekly is produced by the Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks considered authoritative by defense circles.

Capt. John Moore, editor of Jane's Fighting Ships, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "The carriers will add significantly to Soviet naval power."

Iran Says U.S., Israel Involved In Mine-Laying Conspiracy

By The Associated Press
Iran today accused the United States and Israel of orchestrating a mine-laying campaign in the Red Sea as part of a "new conspiracy" designed to discredit the Tehran government.

The statement by Iran's Foreign Ministry appeared to contradict a government radio report Tuesday that the extremist, anti-Western Islamic Jihad (Islamic Holy War) organization was responsible for the explosions. Tehran radio applauded the apparent minings and said they were directed against the "arrogant" United States, Britain and France.

Today, the Foreign Ministry said was quoted in a dispatch by the official Islamic Republic News Agency as saying that international organizations should "expose the agents behind these moves, so that security would return to the international waterway."

The statement said the recent explosions in the Red Sea and their "indirect attribution to Iran" were a reflection of the "U.S. and Israeli defeat" in Lebanon.

"Therefore, it was clear that in order to retaliate for their defeats and failure of their political and military schemes in the Persian Gulf, they would resort to such a move," the statement said.

At least 13 vessels have been damaged by explosions in the Red Sea in the past month — five in the Gulf of Suez, the northern end of the 1,450-mile-long sea, and the rest near the North Yemeni coast at the southern tip of the waterway.

At the request of Egypt, which owns the Suez Canal and encloses the Gulf of Suez, a U.S. squadron of minesweeping helicopters and a support ship will arrive in the Red Sea area within a week.

Egyptian and Western diplomatic sources in Cairo said Iran's praise of the explosions approached an admission of complicity. Last week, an anonymous caller claiming to represent Islamic Jihad told London news agencies that 190 mines had been planted in the Red Sea.

However, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, in a statement quoted Tuesday by the official news agency, said "Iran has not been involved in this issue in any way."

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted Musavi as saying at a Tehran news conference that Islamic Jihad's "nature is unknown to the Iranian government."

IRNA also reported that Musavi also said two Iranian ships had been stopped and searched in the Suez Canal.

"The Islamic Republic could not sit and watch its ships halted in the Suez Canal while others sail freely. We warn that we cannot remain silent if these actions continue," he was quoted as saying.

He did not elaborate, but Egypt has said it is stopping ships from two nations. They are believed by diplomatic sources to be Iran and Libya, both with hard-line, anti-Western Islamic regimes.

In Moscow, the official Soviet media carried reports from the Middle East today suggesting that the United States was responsible for mining the Red Sea. The official news agency Tass and the Communist Party Central Committee newspaper Pravda quoted "unnamed observers" and a report published in a United Arab Emirates newspaper.

Tass quoted unnamed "observers" as saying, "As in the case with the Persian Gulf, the United States and its NATO partners will try to exploit the situation in the Red Sea to build up their military presence there."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes did not blame Iran for the Red Sea explosions, but said of the Tehran radio report: "Praise for random acts of terrorism is outside the norms of civilized behavior."

The Reagan administration says it doesn't know how many mines there are or who placed them. "There's no way of knowing until after we look at what's in the water," an administration official said Tuesday night in Washington.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch said the roughly 200 U.S.

military personnel were under orders to find and destroy mines, but not to prevent placement of new explosive devices.

The U.S. administration official said several European countries probably would help the United States clear the explosives. He said that since the mining appeared far-flung, "Egypt did not want to be in the position of being responsible for the whole sea, north and south."

Army Raids Net Youths In Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Scores more Tamil youths were arrested in army sweeps through northern Sri Lanka today, the government said. It denied that the navy had shelled a coastal town in reprisal for a weekend guerrilla ambush.

Officials in Colombo, the capital, said at least 42 people, including seven navy and police personnel, had been killed in a new round of violence since last weekend in Northern province — home of the minority Tamil-speaking minority community in this island nation off India's southern tip.

Tamil rebels in Sri Lanka, formerly Ceylon, have been fighting for "Eelam," or an independent homeland. The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, an insurgent group, has claimed that its men killed 20 military and police official in six separate attacks since last Saturday.

Army troops combing the countryside for Tamil separatists have arrested up to 600 suspects since the past weekend, officials said.

Sri Lankan security forces, meanwhile, opened fire and wounded five people today in Jaffna, the major city in Northern province, after Tamil militants raided a government bank and escaped with an iron safe-deposit box, the United News of India reported.

The news agency said the troops opened fired at the scene of the robbery "long after the militants had escaped in a van." Officials were not immediately available in Colombo for comment on the UNI report.

Nicaraguan Rebels Fight

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavy fighting with U.S.-backed rebels has broken out on three fronts in Nicaragua, the leftist Sandinista government says.

Sergio Ramirez Mercado, one of the leaders of the Sandinista junta, said Tuesday night that battles flared along the Coco River in northern Nueva Segovia province, in the Nueva Guinea section of central Zelaya province and along the southern frontier.

A military source, asking that his name not be used for security reasons, said the battles with the anti-government guerrillas "were intense and it is believed there are numerous casualties." No other details were immediately available.

In Costa Rica, a Nicaraguan opposition group reported Tuesday that anti-Sandinista rebel commander Eden Pastora met this week in Miami with other opposition leaders to discuss their conflict with the leftist government.

And in El Salvador, a Communist Party leader issued a statement confirming that the four men who allegedly killed a bank guard and took 63 hostages in a bungled robbery last week were leftist insurgents.

Porch Lights Burn To Combat Crime

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer
Police bands and block parties drew thousands of Americans out of their homes and porch lights burned brightly in 20 states on the "National Night Out" to show citizens they can band together to conquer "after-dark fear of crime."

Rain and lack of participation dampened the turnout in places, but police in some communities said crime reports seemed to decline. Organizers said if they plan a repeat of Tuesday night's campaign, they might start earlier than 9 p.m.

"I think it went well, though it's hard to tell," said Matt Peskin of Wynnewood, Pa., director of the National Association of Town Watches, which organized the event. Even though rain kept people indoors in southeastern Pennsylvania, "It was not a complete failure," he said.

"Actual participation was lighter than I expected," Peskin added. He had expected 10 million Americans in more than 200 communities to take part.

"Maybe we'll do it a little earlier. We were trying to stress the darkness aspect" to help Americans overcome their fear of "after-dark crime," Peskin said.

In Minnesota, the St. Paul police swing band played at a kickoff event in Whittier Park, in a high-crime area of South Minneapolis. Police planned to monitor crime during the "Night Out" and compare the data with other nights to see if there was a reduction.

Several neighborhoods also set up spotlights and held block parties before the appointed crime-watch hour, organizers said.

In Hamilton Township, N.J., police estimated that 5,000 people sat on their porches or walked over to neighbor's homes between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Emanuel Butera, a township police officer, said his department usually gets "a lot of calls ... about rowdy groups or domestic disputes" on a typical Tuesday night. "And tonight that dropped by about 75 percent. I guess because people were out doing something, they didn't have time to fight with each other," he said.

Judy Yates, a crime prevention officer in Birmingham, Ala., said the crime vigil reduced the number of police calls around the city. Birmingham's four precincts, which average between three and 17 police calls on a typical Tuesday between 9 and 10 p.m., each generated only two or three calls during that time Tuesday.

"The community and the nation is very much against crime," said Susan Crane, president of the Roslyn Country Club Civic Association in Nassau County, N.Y., where residents stood on their front lawns and turned on their porch lights as part of the campaign.

"Crime has been on the upswing and people are finally getting to a point where they're saying they're fed up and tired of it and they don't want it anymore," she said.

Organizers said groups in all eight of Pittsburgh's residential districts took part in the event. "The people were enthusiastic. I was really amazed," said Bill Conway, community development director of the Neighborhood Centers Association. In Orange, N.J., residents clapped and cheered when police Sgt. Don Wactor toured the city of 31,000 in a car equipped with a public address system between 9 and 10 p.m. "It felt really good," Wactor said.

People were not asked to patrol the streets, but rather to "sit on their front porch to prove to them that criminals do not operate if people are outside," Wactor said. "Night Out is a relatively simple and inexpensive way to get neighbors everywhere thinking crime prevention ... at least for one hour," said police Chief Tom Hennies in Rapid City, S.D., a community of 46,500.

enthusiasm will last long after the Night Out hour," Hennies said. Peskin said the idea for "National Night Out" came in part from the movie "Network," in which an aging television newsmen leads thousands of people in screaming out their windows, "I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore."

U.S. Pushes Free Market Policy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. delegates at a U.N. conference on population problems are trying to win support for the Reagan administration's controversial theory that free-market economies help lower birth rates.

Several delegates from other countries objected Tuesday to the U.S. representatives' proposal to include the theory among 85 recommendations for action by the conference.

James Buckley, head of the U.S. delegation, was scheduled to deliver a speech today, an opportunity to spell out the Reagan administration's position to the U.N. International Conference on Population. About 3,000 people from some 140 countries are at the week-long conference, which began Monday.

Buckley, a former U.S. senator from New York, defended the proposal, saying there was "total linkage" between economic problems and population. He said economics was "at least half the guts of what's being discussed at this conference."

The administration's policy, prepared for the conference and disclosed in July in Washington, advocates stopping U.S. aid to private family planning organizations that "promote" abortion, even if they use their own funds.

The policy says too much government intervention stifles economic growth and notes that birth rates have declined in industrialized nations.

Buckley spoke with reporters outside a conference hall at the Mexican Foreign Ministry, site of the meeting.

The proposed change in the inroduction to a section on socio-economic development and population said a free-market economy leads to "significant economic growth."

"This testifies to the importance of fostering the conditions in which the human entrepreneurial and commercial spirit can flourish freely without unreasonable government restraint," it said.

"Energizing such a free economic environment typically has the indirect, often rapid effect of lowering fertility as well as improving the conditions of life," it argued.

"It's certainly an ideological addition and I think it would be preferable that no ideological addition would be made" to the recommendation draft, Petter Bjerve, a Norwegian delegate, said.

Court Upholds Contempt Citation In Safety Inspection

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A company may be cited for contempt of court if it blocks a state health and safety inspector's surprise visit, the North Carolina Court of Appeals has decided.

However, the three-judge panel's decision Tuesday did not address whether such visits are constitutional.

The court's ruling, upholding a civil contempt of court citation against Ward Lumber Co. of Elizabethtown, was considered a limited triumph for the state Department of Labor. The department had filed suit against the firm when it refused entry to an inspector, armed with a court-issued warrant, from the state Office of Occupational Safety and Health in January 1983.

"I'm very pleased," said Tiare B. Smiley, assistant attorney general who represented the labor department in the case.

But W. Leslie Johnson, attorney for the lumber company, said he was caught "off guard" by the court's refusal to answer the questions of whether such surprise visits are constitutional. "I'm disappointed," he said. "I can't understand how they can sidestep an important issue like that."

Johnson said he thinks his clients will want to appeal the ruling.

Chief Judge Earl Vaughn said in a concurring opinion that he would consider the constitutional violations claimed by the company "totally lacking in merit." In petitioning for the contempt citation, OSHA inspector James L. Wright said Ward Lumber President John Alexander Gooden originally denied him admission, claiming that the safety inspections were unconstitutional.

The company, in a show-cause hearing, claimed the inspections violated the constitutional guarantee of due process and the ban against unreasonable search and seizure.

The company appealed both the contempt citation and the District Court's refusal to wait for a ruling on whether the case should be heard in Superior Court. The appeals court denied both arguments.

In other rulings, the court upheld the right of a Bertie County father to sue land developers for desecrating the grave of his stillborn child.

The defendants had argued that a stillborn child was not a "deceased person" and thus had no right to be protected from desecration of a grave.

But the court said the issue was the parents' mental suffering.

The judges also upheld a lower court decision that the University of North Carolina does not have to refund $52,000 to a Moore County woman who signed up her family for a tour of China led by a UNC professor.

Louise Stipple said she paid for a tour of China by herself and 15 family members in 1982 and has not been able to get a refund of her money since the California travel agency that administered the trip went bankrupt.

Sister Upset By Transfer Of Bodies

By The Associated Press
In 1979 Ollie Smith arranged to donate her body to the University of North Carolina School of Medicine. Until Tuesday, Lillian Roberts was satisfied her sister's last wishes had been carried out.

Then Ms. Roberts learned that the curator of anatomical material for the UNC medical school was charged Monday with stealing and selling 11 cadavers. The bodies were sent to a medical school in Martinique, an island in the West Indies.

The remains of 87-year-old Mrs. Smith of Reidsville were among them.

"What can you do? Nobody ever followed up," said Ms. Roberts, 83, who operates the Sunset Inn at Lake Junaluska. "There was no one left but me. And I'm not a young lady any more."

"It's an awful thing, an awful way to treat somebody like Ollie, who was just trying to help even after she died."

An Orange County grand jury Monday indicted Lester Sandlin, 42, of Durham on 11 charges of embezzling state property he received as a state employee. Sandlin, curator for eight years, was suspended by UNC on July 20 after medical school officials learned of the allegations. He was arrested Monday in Durham County and released on $5,000 bond.

Sandlin's attorney, Ann Loflin of Durham, said he did nothing improper, that the bodies were surplus cadavers and that he received no payment for them aside from money to cover transportation costs from a Florida mortuary that shipped the bodies to Martinique.

Ms. Loflin said Tuesday her client used his private business, Professional Mortuary Services of Durham, to transport the bodies to Florida and that the medical school knew about his company.

But Kathy Bartlett, UNC spokeswoman, disputed that claim.

"The medical school was aware that (Sandlin) was a licensed mortician and did work with other funeral homes on his own time," said Ms. Bartlett. "We were not aware that he owned a mortuary."

Ms. Loflin said Sandlin's business transports bodies.

"That's, in essence, what he does," she said. "He is moonlighting by transporting bodies. He told me that he does a fair amount of transporting bodies interstate."

Ms. Loflin said she does not know the amount of Sandlin's bill to the Florida mortuary.

"We want to see specifically what the prosecutors are alleging in terms of money, and the indictments do not specify," she said. "Mr. Sandlin is shocked at these charges, because even going through court and being acquitted really doesn't remove the publicity and the innuendo in a case like this."

District Attorney Wade Barber said three bodies were stolen from the medical school in September 1983 and eight more last March. He would not say how much money Sandlin is accused of receiving for the cadavers.

The nation's 127 medical schools — including UNC and the three others in North Carolina — use cadavers in a required course for aspiring doctors called gross anatomy. UNC's medical school uses 50 to 60 bodies a year, as does the Bowman-Gray Medical School in Winston-Salem.

"The students learn the structure of the human body, what they're going to be working with for the rest of their professional careers," said Dr. Charles McCreight, professor emeritus of anatomy at Bowman-Gray and head of the school's bequeathal program for more than 30 years.

Most medical schools, like Bowman Gray and UNC, have no trouble getting enough cadavers.

Board To Study Near-Miss Error

BALTIMORE (AP) — An investigative panel will determine whether air traffic controllers who directed two passenger planes to land on the same runway at the same time made an "error in judgment" or were negligent, federal officials said.

The two planes flew within 100 feet of each other over Baltimore-Washington International Airport in one of three near miss reports at BWI in three days last month.

The Federal Aviation Administration on Tuesday released results of a preliminary analysis of audio tapes and radar records of the July 30 incident involving a Winston-Salem, N.C.-based Piedmont Airlines jet with 40 aboard and a 13-passenger Henson Airlines commuter plane.

The planes were 100 feet apart horizontally, much closer than the FAA's 1,000 feet minimum, and they were 0.1 mile apart in altitude instead of the three-mile minimum set by the FAA, said spokesman Robert Fulton at the agency's regional headquarters in New York.

"They were far too close for it to be considered just a 'closer than normal' situation," Fulton said. "It's apparent that an air traffic control operational error occurred."

Richard Miller, chief of the Air Traffic Division for the FAA's eastern region, has ordered the BWI control tower chief to appoint a staff investigative panel and present recommendations within 30 days, Fulton said.

The panel will "determine if it was an error in judgment, whether it was a reasonable error, whether the air traffic controller needed help or whether the air traffic controller was negligent," Fulton said.

Fulton said there was no new information about the other two near misses, on July 29 and July 31, which involved passenger jets flying too close to small private planes not controlled by the BWI tower.

Analysis of tapes of radar readings and radio dialogue on July 30 showed, "The aircraft were on a converging course for Runway 10. ... When we say converging, that doesn't necessarily mean a collision course. ... There might not have been a collision," Fulton said.

The pilot of the commuter plane pulled away from the Piedmont jet "on his own initiative," Fulton said.

Fulton said both planes were guided by a controller with four to six years experience being trained for a new position at the BWI tower. She was being supervised by another controller sitting next to her, he said.

Textile Leader Blasts 'Free Trade'

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — The president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute says textile imports have hurt the domestic textile industry.

"We are battling in a trade war that is going under an assumed name — and that is called 'Free Trade,'" James H. Martin said Tuesday to about 300 people at a meeting of the Georgia Association of Textile Manufacturers.

Martin's remarks were part of the kickoff of Georgia's "Crafted With Pride" program, which is designed to convince consumers that American products are superior to imported products.

Citing the rapid modernization of the American textile industry in recent years, Martin said American-made products surpass imported products in quality.

"If you were one of the 25,000 soldiers at Fort Benning, and you were about to jump into a war zone, would it comfort you to see 'Made in China' on your parachute?" he asked.

Imports affect the Columbus area and the state of Georgia, where the textile industry is the largest manufacturing employer, Martin said.

"There are 36,227 workers in the textile and apparel complex in this 17-county area," he said. "The Chattahoochee Valley ranks just behind Greenville and Spartanburg, S.C., with 47,000 textile workers, and Greensboro in Winston-Salem, N.C., with 40,000 workers."

The American textile industry is "fighting for jobs, for families in places like Columbus, West Point, Thomaston and Lanett (Ala.)," he said.

A spontaneous burst of applause broke out when Martin said, "When asked if I am a protectionist, I always say if protectionism means saving American jobs, then I'm a true protectionist."

Reynolds Wins Iranian Claim

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International Inc. has won a $49.8 million award in a lawsuit it filed in the wake of the 1979 Iranian hostage crisis.

Company officials said the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, also dismissed more than $100 million in Iranian counterclaims against the company.

RJR Tobacco International's award — the largest issued by the Tribunal to date — is payment for tobacco products shipped to the Iranian state tobacco monopoly before the hostage crisis erupted in November 1979. It includes interest after the company filed suit with the Tribunal.

"We are gratified that the company is finally being paid for the products shipped to Iran more than five years ago," said Lester W. Pullen, president and chief executive officer of R.J. Tobacco International.

Oregon Man Charged In Sale Of Diplomas

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An Oregon man indicted by a grand jury in Charlotte has become the sixth person to face charges stemming from the FBI's nationwide probe into schools that sell phony diplomas.

The mail and wire fraud charges are each punishable by up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Dennis Everett Gunter, 38, of Grants Pass, Ore., was charged Tuesday with mail fraud and fraud by wire in connection with the alleged sale of thousands of college degrees and diplomas, the FBI said.

Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said Gunter is the first Dipscam defendant charged with selling phony degrees from legitimate universities. The others sold degrees from phony colleges they claimed to have operated, he said.

Pence said several North Carolinians bought degrees from Gunter's operation, Alumni Arts and Alumni Arts Diploma Reproduction Service, which was described in advertisements as a service to replace lost college degrees.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, bidding to resume its summer rally after some periods of hesitancy Monday and Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 6.51 to 1,211.13 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 6-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The advance drew some fresh inspiration from a drop in interest rates in the credit markets.

Those declines followed the Treasury's sale of $6.51 billion in three-year notes Tuesday, which went off at somewhat lower interest rates than had been expected.

Declining interest rates were cited as a primary driving force behind last week's powerful rally in stock prices.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors rose 1/2 to 75 1/2; American Express, up 3/8 at 32 3/8, and Exxon, up 1/8 at 39 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.66 to 1,204.62, posting its sixth straight gain.

But declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 127.95 million shares, against 203.05 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .02 to 93.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .47 at 204.55.

Telephone Callers Find A Surprise

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Most people might find it annoying to answer the phone and find it just a wrong number, but Fred Mannion figures he's providing a national service for U.S. Sen. Warren Rudman.

Mannion, 69, a retired subway motorman, has a telephone number identical to that of the Washington office of Rudman, a New Hampshire Republican, except for a single digit difference in the area code.

So when callers dial 212, instead of 202, they get Mannion at his home in the New York City borough of Queens.

The Washington-bound calls come every 10 days or so, Mannion said Tuesday.

"I don't mind. He's one of our representatives and I respect that," Mannion said. "I figure I'm helping the country."

Besides, Mannion said, he has met some nice people on the phone. "Hey, the other night I got a guy from CBS, a nice, cultured fellow."

state since Democrats nominated him for president. The stop is part of Democrats' efforts to deliver a one-two punch to President Reagan in North Carolina with a visit later this month by vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro.

The visit also is expected to build excitement among Tar Heel Democrats, who outnumber Republicans by an almost 3-to-1 margin.

Buncombe County Democratic Chairman Joe Connelly said he believes Mondale will do well in

Martin OKs Bid On Airport Work

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners at their August meeting approved a low bid of $9,991 to landscape the county's airport near Everetts. The bid was by Northeastern Construction and Supply Co. of Winton.

In another action, the board approved moving a building in Williams Township in order to clear a right of way along U.S. 64. The state will pay for the relocation at a cost of about $8,950.

In a report to the board, County Finance Office Danette Minshew told the board that the current fund balance is $1,165,777, which is less than 10 percent of the current budget.

western North Carolina because a lot of working people there have been hurt by President Reagan's policies.

"I think he's here because he thinks North Carolina is important. Certainly western North Carolina has a good Democratic tradition," Connelly said.

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro already have been the targets of advertising by Sen. Jesse Helms' staff in his re-election bid against Hunt.

The ads have appeared on television and radio since Hunt and Helms met in their first televised debate July 29.

One ad says that in the debate, "Jim Hunt even said Walter Mondale supported the tobacco program, but Jim Hunt surely knew that Mondale walked out on important tobacco votes in the Senate."

"Ms. Ferraro's selection is a major blow to North Carolina farmers," the Helms campaign said in a news release after Mondale selected her as a running mate. "She has voted to eliminate the tobacco and peanut program — which strikes at the heart of North Carolina economy."

Mondale promised to support the tobacco program when he visited Greenville before his nomination, and Ms. Ferraro's aides have said she will support the program.

Hunt, who staunchly has defended Mondale's record on farm programs, will not appear with the former vice president because he is vacationing outside the state.

Republicans are interpreting Hunt's absence as an indication that Reagan holds a substantial edge in North Carolina and Hunt knows it. Hunt vehemently has denied the charge.

"I think he should travel around the state with Mondale. What's he afraid of?" said Claude Allen of the Helms for Senate committee.

"Gov. Hunt knows Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro do not go over well in North Carolina. Both have voted against our farmers," Allensaid.

"I am sure there will be conversation on that," Hyde said. "But there certainly was no planning along that line. It does not mean the governor would not like to be there."

Prices Rise In Farmville

FARMVILLE — Although the volume of sales was lighter than on Monday, the Farmville Tobacco Market reported an increase in the market average of nearly $6 per hundred pounds over the previous day.

Demand was off slightly but deliveries to Stabilization continued to run lower than the 1983 level. Prices on most grades of tobacco were steady to better than on Monday. The top price paid by a buying company was $2.05 on Tuesday with most grades in the $1.65-1.85 range.

The Farmville market sold 411,884 pounds for $713,486.34, an average of $1.73.23 per hundred pounds.

To date, the market has sold 2,082,686 pounds for $3,395,894.85, a season average of $1.63.05. The season average for the same day in 1983 was $1.57.07.

Sentenced

LONDON (AP) — Two Americans have been sentenced to 15-year prison terms for a $3.4 million armed robbery of a London jewelry store.
Arthur Rachel and Joseph Sealise, both 45, were spotted by an accountant, Colin Protheroe, who helped police catch the pair within hours of the robbery of Graff's Jewelers in September 1980.

Williamston Adopts Sewer Ordinance

WILLIAMSTON — The Williamston Town Board has adopted a sewer use ordinance which encompasses no major changes but offers more control over the system.

Under the newly adopted ordinance, permits are required for various connections and service changes. Also, a clause allows the town to install automatic sampling devices and to recover the cost of the device.

The new ordinance was presented by Mark Garner of Rivers and Associates of Greenville. He noted it was needed to cope with problems found in a survey of the system in 1983.

IRS Announces Firm Is Closed

Greenville's Tree House Restaurant was closed Tuesday by the Internal Revenue Service as "a last resort" to collect taxes, IRS public affairs officers Glenn Jones said today.

Jones said the IRS contends the Tree House owes approximately $12,000 to the IRS because Social Security and income taxes were withheld from employees but not reported to the IRS. He said the taxes were withheld during the fourth quarter of 1983 and the first and second quarters of 1984.

"If the Tree House satisfies the lien, and we give them every chance to do it, the business will be allowed to reopen," Jones said.

The Tree House is owned by the Pizza Corner Corp. and managed by George Martin. Martin could not be reached for comment.

Action Requested

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A delegation of women whose children disappeared during the former military regime's campaign against subversion has asked President Raul Alfonsin to take stiffer action against military leaders.

Hebe de Bonafini, president of the Mothers of the Plaza de Mayo, said Alfonsin appealed for her group to be patient while human rights cases are prosecuted. She said the meeting left her delegation "disheartened, disillusioned, sad and disappointed."

Alfonsin's inauguration Dec. 10 ended nearly eight years of military rule, and he has vowed to punish commanders responsible for the abduction, torture and murder of at least 8,800 leftists and suspected leftist sympathizers.

U.S. Women Take Basketball Gold

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Basketball is still a uniquely American sport. And U.S. women have made it their own for the first time.

But volleyball, a Southern California phenomenon, and baseball, the national pastime, have succumbed to Olympians from the other side of the globe.

The American women's basketball team, whose previous best Olympic performance was a silver eight years ago in Montreal, took the gold Tuesday night, running away from South Korea 85-55 before 11,280 frenzied fans at the Forum.

But at Dodger Stadium, Japan put on a demonstration of clutch pitching and power, defeating the United States 6-3 to win baseball's non-medal championship.

And at the Long Beach Arena, China, a four-set loser to the U.S. women in preliminary-round volleyball, retaliated with a 16-14, 15-3, 15-9 sweep of the Americans to win the gold.

Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo, Calif., lived up to his reputation as the world's premier diver — in the springboard preliminaries, anyway. The United States also trotted off with gold in equestrian team jumping and in yachting and six American boxers advanced to the semifinals, two of them with decisions that brought complaints of bias from the losers.

The United States headed into today's competition with 105 medals, 48 gold. American women accounted for 47 of the medals, 21 of them gold. Romania and West Germany were tied for second in medals with 36 apiece and Romania was second in gold with 16.

Track and field, which took Tuesday off, resumed today with the spotlight once again on Carl Lewis, the double-gold winner aiming for the third of his hoped-for four in the 200-meter sprint. Also scheduled to compete today and tonight are Briton Zola Budd, the transplanted South African, and Mary Decker of Eugene, Ore., in the 3,000 semifinals, and Mike Tully of Encino, Calif., in the pole vault final.

In other events Tuesday, the United States beat Australia 12-7 in water polo, lost to Australia 3-1 in men's field hockey and lost 18-17 to West Germany in women's team handball.

Also, golds were awarded to West Germany in women's team foil, Frank Wieneke of West Germany in half-middleweight judo competition and Norberto Oberburger in the 243-pound weightlift.

Pat Head Summitt, the U.S. coach, was a member of the team that came in second to the Soviet Union in 1976, when women's basketball became an Olympic medal sport. "It's a different feeling," she said. "It definitely has to be the highlight in comparing it to the silver medal. I was proud as a player. As a coach, I'm just as proud."

She also was a bit wary, but not until after the final buzzer sounded. After the South Koreans celebrated their silver by tossing their coach, Seung-Youn Cho, in the air, the Americans grabbed Summitt and paraded her around the floor while she cautioned: "Don't drop me."

Cheryl Miller of Riverside, Calif., and the University of Southern California, one of the stars of the squad, scored 16 points and had 11 rebounds and five assists to lead the Americans' running game.

She called the gold-medal triumph "definitely 10 times better than winning a national championship." And although the Southern Cal junior said two more NCAA titles are among her primary goals, she added: "I doubt if anything is ever going to top this. I've achieved my ultimate goal."

China defeated Canada 63-57 to win the bronze in women's basketball. But China's women didn't have to settle for less than the best in volleyball, relegating the U.S. team to a silver — its first medal since the sport joined the Olympics 20 years ago.

"Nobody can take it away from them," American Coach Arie Selinger said. "I don't think the team should be sad. They accomplished a lot. They should be proud of themselves."

The United States had a chance to pull off a second upset of the defending world champions when they rallied from a 14-9 deficit in the first game to tie the score. But a misjudgment allowed a Hou Yuzhu serve to fall untouched, and the rattled U.S. team was beaten on the next point. They were never seriously in the match after that.

"China seemed to get the momentum by winning the first game," Selinger said, "and in the last two games they just outplayed us."

South Korea Upset Over Fight Judge

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean media reacted indignantly over what it called unfair judging in the Olympic boxing victory of American Jerry Page over South Korea's Kim Dong-Kil.

The influential daily Dong-a Ilbo headlined "Kim Dong-Kil loses by dumbfounded decision, robbed of gold medal." The Joong-ang Ilbo described it as "Game you cannot lose, decision not worthy of victory," and the Kyunghyang Shinmoon banner headline read "Medal is lost on hometown decision."

The three major evening papers published today in Seoul were carrying dispatches from Los Angeles on a controversial light welterweight match in which Page was awarded a 4-1 decision over Kim on Tuesday.

The two Korean TV networks covering the Olympics also questioned the decision, saying it was rather common for decisions in boxing involving Americans to be questionable.

"He must knock out the American boxer. Otherwise, he won't win because of a hometown decision," said one commentator on the state-run KBS-TV covering the Page-Kim match.

Korean papers and TV commentators also said the Polish referee in the Page-Kim match officiated the match in favor of the American.

Seeds Fall At Clay Court

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — What can you expect when 10 seeded players have already been beaten and the most attention so far has gone to a 14-year-old amateur from Argentina?

"A tough match," said Lisa Bonder, who did not want to become the third straight upset victim of young Gabriela Sabatini, a wild-card entry who scored a pair of three-set victories in her first two rounds of the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis championships.

Cubs Stretch Lead Over New York

By The Associated Press
When the Mets and the Cubs start throwing baseballs at each other, you know the pennant race is for real.

The romantic battle between the National League East's Cinderella teams turned ugly Tuesday as the Cubs swept a double-header from their nearest pursuers.

First-game loser Ron Darling hit Dave Owen with a pitch that drew warnings from the umpires, and second-game loser Ed Lynch hit Keith Moreland, who had slugged a three-run homer in the opener, with a pitch that cleared both benches.

Chicago's Scott Sanderson was ejected from the second game after plunking Kelvin Chapman.

A six-run fifth inning helped the Cubs to an 8-6 victory in the opening game. A five-run fourth powered them to an 8-4 decision in the second.

The Cubs have now won five straight and 11 of 13. They opened a 3½-game lead over the Mets, from whom they have taken 8 of 11 games this year.

"I wasn't trying to hit him (Moreland)," said Lynch. "It was a fast ball in off the plate and he was leaning over. I was trying to set the tone for the at-bat. I can understand his feelings. He's a competitor and so am I."

"They're swinging some hot bats and we have one of the best pitching staffs in the league," added Mets Manager Dave Johnson, "and they roughed us up. Even their shock troops."

"I don't think it's flagrant to hit someone in the leg when you're getting roughed up."

Moreland merely wanted to make himself understood to Lynch.

"I have no hard feelings, I didn't want to hurt anybody," said Moreland. "I just wanted to get my point across that I don't like being thrown at."

After Lynch hit Moreland, the umpires issued both teams warnings. Sanderson then hit Chapman and he and Cubs Manager Jim Frey were shown the door.

"We did what we had to do under the circumstances," Frey said, "and the umpires had to do what they did to get things under control."

Phillies 6-2, Expos 2-3
Dan Driessen doubled home one run and singled home the game-winner in the bottom of the eighth to help the Expos salvage a split. In the opener, Juan Samuel stroked an inside-the-park homer and Mike Schmidt hit one out in a four-run third inning.

The Expos entered the eighth inning of the nightcap trailing 2-1 but tied it on Gary Carter's single before Driessen drove Mike Stenhouse home to break the Expos' four-game losing streak.

Bobby Ramos hit his first major league homer in nearly two years in the first game.

Reds 8, Padres 7
The Reds rallied from 4-0 and 6-4 deficits to win. Nick Esasky's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning scored Dave Parker with the winning run.

Dave Concepcion led off the seventh inning with his first home run since April 27 to give the Reds their first lead of the game, 7-6. Tony Gwynn's single tied the game 7-7 in the top of the ninth, but reliever Greg Harris, 0-2, came in and the game was quickly untied.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1
A two-out single by Steve Yeager in the 11th inning scored Terry Whitfield from second base, after Ken Landreaux tied the game with a two-out, ninth-inning homer.

Landreaux's shot ruined a two-hit shutout bid by Pascual Perez. Donnie Moore, 2-3, came on in extra innings to get the loss. Ken Howell, 2-2, picked up the victory.

Cardinals 2, Pirates 1
Danny Cox allowed only three hits over seven innings and Terry Pendleton's sixth-inning triple drove in the winning run.

The victory was the 10th by St. Louis over the Pirates in 11 tries and the third in as many decisions by Cox, 6-9, who walked only one. Bruce Sutter got the last six outs for his league-leading 30th save and his eighth against Pittsburgh this year.

Giants 9, Astros 2
Jeff Leonard went 5-for-5 with three RBI and Mike Krukow won his fifth straight game, becoming the first San Francisco pitcher to win 10 games this season. Frank Williams and Gary Lavelle finished up.

Mike Scott, 4-10, took the loss, dropping his sixth consecutive decision.

On a delayed double steal in the eighth inning, Joel Youngblood stole home for the Giants' eighth run.

Leaving Blue Devils Gave McGee Career Options

By The Associated Press
When football coach Mike McGee was fired from Duke, he says it was a low point in his life, but it gave him an opportunity to review his priorities and plans.

"I had some chances to coach in the pros, but I wanted to take some time to do some things and think about what I wanted to do," said McGee. "I wanted to spend more time with my family, and I needed time to sort things out."

The day after the Olympic Village at the University of Southern California is taken down next week, McGee will move into his office as athletic director for the Trojans.

After playing as an All-America tackle, winning the Outland award and graduating from Duke in 1960, McGee coached football at East Carolina and at Duke, where he was fired at the end of the 1978 season. After Duke, he served as athletic director at Cincinnati.

When he was hired at Cincinnati, the school was on probation and was having a rough time winning. In four years, he improved the program and the Bearcats were recently accepted for membership in the College Football Association, a step McGee sees as a recognition of Cincinnati's football program.

Last month he was named athletic director at Southern California, succeeding Dr. Richard Perry.

McGee, who received his doctorate from the University of North Carolina in 1982, is taking over a program considered one of the strongest in college circles but that has lost some games over the last few years.

The football program is finishing a two-year probation for NCAA rule violations. The only championship in the past two years has been national titles in women's basketball.

"They have had some slippage and some athletic and academic problems," said McGee. And they are on NCAA probation. But it would be premature for me to say what I am going to do."

Perfect — Twice

Louganis, After Two Tens, Says He Must Do Better

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Greg Louganis, seeking to become the first man to win two diving gold medals in one Olympics, waved off his near-record performance in a preliminary round as just average.

He expects he will have to perform better today if he is to be crowned king of the springboard.

"I was cautious and made some mistakes," Louganis said of his 752.37 points on 11 dives in Tuesday's first round. "I will have to perform better. Judges expect more the next day after they see you."

Louganis, however, was close to his world record of 755.49 points. He was so dominating in the prelims that runnerup Ron Merriott of Ann Arbor, Mich., was more than 100 points behind with 628.47.

The numbers not withstanding, Louganis' rivals seemed to agree with his critique of his performance.

"Greg dived well but he can dive better," said Merriott.

"Greg was good but I've seen him more consistent," added China's Li Hongping, third at 611.55.

The 24-year-old Louganis of Mission Viejo, Calif., had five perfect 10s on his program and was never judged lower than an eight.

"I knew I was close to one of the highest scores I have received," said Louganis. "I was very much satisfied. However, my goal is to someday hit 800 points. My concentration would have to be perfect to do that."

This is the third Olympics for Louganis, who won a silver medal on the platform at the age of 16 in Montreal.

He will compete on the platform here later this week, in his attempt to enter the Olympic record books.

"I can remember walking through the Olympic village in Montreal with my eyes bulging out," said Louganis. "I was in awe of everything. There is still some awe but I can really appreciate everything now."

Louganis also made the boycotting Olympic team in 1980 that didn't go to Moscow.

Louganis has won 26 U.S. titles and is the only male diver ever to win both springboard and platform events at the World Championships.

But he said he wouldn't be crushed if he was upset for the gold medal.

"If I don't win another championship I've had a fantastic career," said Louganis. "When I tell myself that, it alleviates all the pressure."

Merriott, 24, of Rockford, Ill., is a three-time national springboard champion and a finalist at the 1982 World Championships.

Other qualifiers in today's medal round included another Chinese diver, Tan Liangde, with 600.99 points; Chris Snode of Britain, 592.68; Piero Italiani of Italy, 573.69; Carlos Giron of Mexico, a silver medalist in 1968, 549.75; Albin Killat of West Germany, 549.39; Stephen Foley of Australia, 543.87; Jorge Mondragon of Mexico, 537.03; Dieter Doerr of West Germany, 533.61 and Juha Ovaskainen of Finland, 532.17.

The scores do not carry over, and each diver starts with a clean slate of 11 dives at the Southern California Swim Center.

Franco Harris Heads List Of Pro Football Holdouts

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

The contract talks between the Pittsburgh Steelers and veteran rushing back Franco Harris have been as silent as an automobile without gasoline in recent days.

With the start of the National Football League season less than three weeks away, Harris heads a list of unhappy veterans absent from their club's preseason training camps. In Indianapolis, fans of the Colts will see the team makes its NFL debut in its new home Saturday without the club's two top draft picks, cornerback Leonard Coleman and offensive lineman Ron Solt.

While most NFL players toil under the summer sun with dreams of sugar plums and Super Bowl appearances, Harris' agent is saying the 13-year veteran may put off chasing Jim Brown's career rushing record for another season.

"It is not inconceivable he would sit out," said agent Bart Beier, who says the two sides haven't discussed a contract for two weeks.

Harris, 34, is just 362 yards shy of Brown's record. He's in the option year of a three-year contract that would pay him $385,000, but reportedly wants a deal that would include the 1985 season with a huge pay increase for this year.

"I think the Steelers assumed he would not hold out," Beier said, adding that he is willing to negotiate 24 hours a day to end the holdout.

Other veterans AWOL and facing fines of $500-$1,000 per day include

All-Pro tight end Todd Christensen of the Los Angeles Raiders and All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White of Dallas. The New York Jets are without wide receiver Wesley Walker, while the Detroit Lions have five holdouts.

One of the Detroit holdouts, defensive tackle Mike Dawson, may be reconsidering his decision. Coach Monte Clark said he has found strong replacements for Dawson, a free agent, and doesn't care if he rejoins the club.

The other missing Lions are middle linebacker Ken Fantetti, fullback Horace King, center Amos Fowler and wide receiver Leonard Thompson.

Guidry Turns Back The Clock

By The Associated Press

Ron Guidry hopes the Louisiana Lightning he fired at the Chicago White Sox won't turn out to be as elusive as a summer thunderstorm.

The slender Cajun, who will turn 34 later this month, turned back the clock Tuesday night by cooling off the White Sox on four singles and striking out 13, his highest total in more than five years. That enabled the New York Yankees to blank Chicago 7-0 for a split of their two-night double-header.

The White Sox took the opener 6-3 as Harold Baines smashed a double, an RBI triple and a two-run homer and Greg Luzinski homered to extend his RBI streak to 10 games, falling three short of the American League record.

"At least this confirms I can still pitch, throw hard and win. Hopefully, I can carry on with this," said Guidry, who came into the game with a 4.24 earned run average after beginning the season with a career mark of 2.99.

"Tonight I wasn't trying to strike out anybody, I was trying to get outs. I had chances for other strikeouts early and I didn't go for them. It's fun to challenge the hitter and strike him out, but you can't get caught up in that."

Red Sox 12-5, Tigers 7-7

Lance Parrish belted a two-run homer, his second of the game and third of the evening, with two out in the 11th inning, to give Detroit a split and unbeaten Aurelio Lopez his ninth victory. Boston won the opener as Bill Buckner and Tony Armas belted grand slam homers in the first two innings, tying the major-league record for most bases-loaded homers in one game.

The Tigers, who had dropped six of their last seven games, tied the nightcap 5-5 with an unearned run in the ninth. Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman blooped a double to left, took third on an infield out and scored on an error by first baseman Buckner.

Boston had taken a 5-4 lead in the seventh on consecutive home runs by Dwight Evans — a three-run shot — and Jim Rice. Boston's John Henry Johnson, making only his second start, allowed solo homers by Larry Herndon, Parrish and Kirk Gibson.

In the first game, Boston jumped on Detroit's Jack Morris for nine runs in less than two innings, including both grand slams. Parrish, Alan Trammell and Howard Johnson homered for Detroit, which out-homered Boston 11-10 in splitting two double-headers.

"Sometimes you have to dig down a little deeper and do a little extra," said Parrish, who caught both games. "We've been struggling, and now we're in a situation where we have to put the wins on the board."

Twins 2, A's 1

Mickey Hatcher doubled in the sixth inning for his third hit and scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Randy Bush while Frank Viola pitched a four-hitter to keep Minnesota one-half game ahead of second-place California in the AL West. Minnesota's Tom Brunansky hit his 21st homer of the season in the second inning and Oakland's Davey Lopes tied the score by hitting his eighth homer in the bottom of the inning.

Angels 7, Mariners 6

Fred Lynn's sacrifice fly capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning. Rod Carew started the rally with a single and Rob Picciolo ran for him. With one out, Daryl Sconiers doubled and Seattle center fielder Dave Henderson threw to second baseman Jack Perconte, whose relay was in time to nail Picciolo at the plate. But catcher Bob Kearney was unable to hold the ball and was charged with an error. Sconiers took third on the play and scored on Lynn's fly. Doug DeCinces drove in four runs for California with a sacrifice fly and homer while Steve Henderson homered for Seattle, which has lost six games in a row.

Royals 8, Brewers 5

Pinch-hitter Dane Iorg slammed a two-run homer and George Brett also hit a two-run shot that traveled 459 feet in Kansas City's five-run eighth inning that stretched Milwaukee's losing streak to 10 games, equaling the club record for futility. Both homers came off reliever Pete Ladd and offset a pair of two-run homers by Milwaukee's Robin Yount.

Brett, a career .316 hitter, came into the game with just one hit in 21 at-bats. His average had sunk to .273, including .216 in the last 12 games.

"I definitely have some flaws in my swing," Brett said. "We took extra batting practice on the road and nothing seemed to be working. Tonight, it just seemed like everything fell together. I felt confident and comfortable."

Rangers 7, Blue Jays 6

Gary Ward led off the bottom of the 10th inning with a triple off Toronto reliever Dennis Lamp and scored the winning run on George Wright's bloop single. The Rangers tied the score 6-6 in the seventh inning on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly. Toronto had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the inning on Cliff Johnson's two-run double.

Johnson homered in the fourth as Toronto led 2-0, but Texas got to Dave Stieb for five runs in the bottom of the fourth, three on a homer by Larry Parrish.

Indians 5, Orioles 4

Tony Bernazard, hitless in his previous 22 at-bats, delivered a tie-breaking single in the sixth inning and Chris Bando drove what proved to be the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh as Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak. Winner Bert Blyleven allowed seven hits and struck out eight before giving way to Ernie Camacho with one out in the eighth. Scott McGregor suffered his fourth straight loss, allowing four runs in 5 1-3 innings, including Joe Carter's solo homer.

China Tops U.S. ...

Japan finished with the bronze, its poorest volleyball finish in five Olympic appearances. But that was offset by the upset in baseball, led by Katsumi Hirose's three-run homer and a clutch strikeout by sidearm pitcher Yukio Yoshida.

"In a way, this is the biggest victory in the history of Japanese baseball," said Manager Reiichi Matsunaga. "This is the one thing we had been working toward."

With Japan leading 3-1 in the bottom of the seventh, the United States loaded the bases with two outs — after a baserunning mistake by Chris Gwynn took some of the steam out of the threat. Yoshida then took the mound and fanned UCLA's Shane Mack of Cerritos, Calif., who had hit a third-inning homer.

Japan put the game away in the next inning, Hirose's three-run homer off American starting pitcher John Hoover more than offsetting a two-run blast in the ninth by Brigham Young University's Cory Snyder of Canyon Country, Calif.

Louganis, attempting to become the first man to win two diving golds in one Olympics, called his preliminary-round springboard performance just routine, even though he was about 100 points ahead of his closest challenger, Ron Merriott of Ann Arbor, Mich., and came within four points of his world record.

Louganis, who finished Tuesday's round with 752.37 points, could have sat out his last dive and still been first. In fact, he could have sat out his last two and still qualified for today's field.

Jerry Page of Columbus, Ohio, in the 139-pound class; Evander Holyfield of Atlanta, 178; Pernell Whitaker of Norfolk, Va., 132; Paul Gonzales of Los Angeles, 106; Virgil Hill of Williston, N.D., 165, and Steve McCrory of Detroit, 112, all advanced to the semifinals and assured themselves of Olympic boxing medals.

Holyfield's victory was the least controversial, a first-round knockout of Syvaus Okello of Kenya with a left hook to the jaw. McCrory's and Page's were the most loudly questioned.

McCrory was a unanimous winner over Peter Ayesu of Malawi. Afterward, Cardiff Gonde, the Malawi coach, complained the U.S. boxers were receiving too-favorable reviews from the judges. "When you're fighting an American," he said, "it's always 5-0."

The next one was Page's 4-1 decision over Dong-Kil Kim of South Korea, whose team protested it to the International Amateur Boxing Association and threatened briefly to pull out of the tournament.

Faultless rides by Joe Fargis and Conrad Homfeld of Petersburg, Va., and Melanie Smith of Litchfield, Conn., gave the United States its first-ever team show jumping Olympic gold. Britain won silver and West Germany bronze.

Robbie Haines of Coronado, Calif., clinched gold by building an insurmountable lead in the Soling class yachting.

Karolyi Sees Excellent Gym Future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The cheering has ebbed, the crowds have left the arena. Now it's time for budding Mary Lous and Julianes to come knocking at the gym door.

Bela Karolyi, coach of gold medalists Mary Lou Retton and Julianne McNamara, expects gymnastics to boom in the United States in the wake of the Olympics.

"I think these new Olympic champions will generate a lot of enthusiasm now. Certainly in two weeks several thousand kids are going to walk into gymnasiums, and from those kids for sure will be several talented ones," Karolyi said in an interview with The Associated Press. "So I don't think it's a big danger that we can't provide later internationally excellent kids."

Women's gymnastics got a big boost from the triumphs of Olga Korbut at the 1972 Munich Games and Nadia Comaneci in 1976 in Montreal.

The payoff for America came when Retton, 16, of Fairmont, W.Va., won the all-around gold medal and McNamara, 18, of San Remon, Calif., a gold in uneven bars at the Los Angeles Games.

The country cheered America's first women's Olympic gymnastics champions.

And the U.S. women's silver in team gymnastics behind gold medalist Romania was also a first for the United States.

Although the Soviet Union boycotted the Olympics, depriving the gymnastics competition of women's world champions, Karolyi expects the Soviets to come back strong at the 1985 world meet in Montreal.

"The Russians have a strong tradition in gymnastics. Their talent-scouting system is one of the best," Karolyi said.

The same goes for Romania, which Karolyi helped develop into a gymnastics superpower as Comaneci's coach before he defected to the United States in 1981.

"They are carrying on with my program. The concept is good. The technical preparation is good" for developing new prodigies, he said.

Karolyi, 43, a husky 6-foot, 2-inch man with a full mustache, could never be accused of immodesty.

Even people put off by his fiery antics at competitions acknowledge that he has an uncommon ability to motivate his pupils to do seemingly impossible acrobatic moves.

Romania's Ecaterina Szabo, 17, emerged from the Olympics with four golds and a silver medal, outdoing Retton's haul of one gold, two silver and two bronze. Karolyi said he discovered her when she was 5 years old and set her on the path to stardom before he defected.

Although he says Soviet-bloc recruiting and training wouldn't work in the United States, Karolyi expressed admiration for the state-run system he left behind.

"You cannot walk into any kind of kindergarten or elementary school and pick up someone," he said. "It's against the rules and regulations of this country."

Asked if he would like to use the command system to find prospects,

Karolyi replied: "Well, I think it's the only way to select very efficiently, very rapidly several talented kids."

Karolyi said he can watch a 6-year-old girl do basic exercises and tell in 10 minutes whether she has any potential as a gymnast or "whether she is wasting her time."

"But we are in a position where we have to wait for the kid to walk into the gym and to show a willingness to take gymnastics lessons," he said. "Otherwise advising them would even be a waste of time if the parents are not supporting them financially."

Karolyi and his wife teach about 500 pupils at their private gymnastics academy in Houston. He said it was a struggle to build up the school because of "certain professional jealousies" but business is now going well.

Beginners pay $7 per hour for lessons and advanced pupils about "one dollar an hour," he said, because they work out four or five hours daily.

Promising gymnasts from out of town board with families in the Houston area. Retton joined the school in 1982 with the expressed aim of perfecting her techniques under Karolyi's guidance for the Olympics.

For the future, Karolyi said he expects "regional centers" for talented young gymnasts to open in the United States — "in California, for example, or on the East Coast or up in Oregon."

Karolyi said he doesn't regret defecting to the United States during a 1981 tour with the Romanian national team.

He said he turned his back on his homeland because the Romanian government tried to portray the gymnastic victories of his pupils as triumphs of the Communist system.

Alford To Play Key Role

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Guard Steve Alford, the youngest and smallest player on the U.S. men's basketball team, is doing his best to dispel any thoughts that he made the squad because of his connection with Coach Bobby Knight.

Alford, who starred for Knight at Indiana last year as a freshman, came to the Americans' rescue in the quarterfinals of the Olympic tournament and is expected to play a key role tonight when the unbeaten United States faces Canada in the semifinals.

Unbeaten Yugoslavia, the 1980 gold medal winner when the United States boycotted the Moscow Games, faced Spain in the other semifinal today at the Forum.

So far in the Los Angeles Games, Alford has made 30 of 45 floor shots, or 67 percent. He is averaging 11 points and twice led the team in scoring.

"He knows my strengths and my weaknesses," Alford said of Knight during the Olympic trials. "I don't know if that'll help me make the team or not."

One reason Knight selected Alford for the squad is that he's a zone breaker with a deadly outside jumper, and all of the foreign teams use zone defenses.

Alford proved the point Monday night in the 78-67 victory over the tall West Germans, who use a 2-3 zone defense.

He made five of eight shots from the field to help the Americans to their sixth straight tournament win, prompting Knight to call him "the most effective player in the game."

The margin of victory was the smallest for the United States in the tournament.

Alford also knows how to run Knight's motion offense. He led the Big Ten in scoring (15.5) and field goal percentage (.59) and topped the nation in free throw accuracy with a 91 percent mark.

Another accurate outsider shooter for the Americans is 6-6 Chris Mullin, a St. John's senior, who has been averaging 11.5.

The United States has won eight gold medals in nine Olympics, losing only to the Soviet Union in the controversial final in 1972 at Munich.

For Longer, More Restful Lifestyle, Turn To 'Type A'

By DIANE CURTIS
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Type A" people — those who want to do everything themselves, never have enough time and want everyone else to keep up — can cut their risk of recurring heart attacks in half by changing their behavior, a new study says.

Doctors reported this week that heart attack victims who received "Type A counseling" to slow down, smell the roses and relax, had fewer recurrent heart attacks than those whose advice was limited to diet, exercise, smoking and other traditional warnings.

Type A people are easily irritated or angered, insecure, always in a hurry, are aggressive and competitive and have low self-esteem.

They were counseled to "decrease the intensity of their Type A behavior. We did not try to change their personality. We didn't think we were God," said Dr. Meyer Friedman, co-director of the study and the first to report the link between Type A personalities and heart disease in 1977.

Friedman, director of the Recurrent Coronary Prevention Project at Mount Zion Hospital, says 75 percent of the adult urban population displays varying degrees of Type A behavior.

The American Heart Association recognizes Type A behavior as only a risk factor for heart attack, but behind such other factors as high blood pressure and blood cholesterol.

At a news conference, Friedman and Dr. Carl Thoreson, a professor of education at Stanford University who also directed the study, released results of a three-year experiment involving 862 people who had had one or more heart attacks, were under 65 years of age, had quit smoking or never smoked and never had diabetes.

Of those, 270 received cardiology counseling only and 592 received both cardiology and Type A counseling. Ninety percent of the subjects were men.

Of those who received the Type A counseling, the three-year rate of recurring heart attacks was 7 percent, compared with a 13 percent recurrence for those who received only traditional counseling.

If changing behavior is helpful in patients with established heart disease, it could be even better for those who haven't had heart attacks, Friedman said.

Type A patients were advised to walk, talk and eat more slowly, play games to lose, write down things that spark anger, smile at others and laugh at yourself, do one thing at a time, admit being wrong and stop interrupting.

Thoreson said the participants were taught to "slow down to get more done" and that Type A behavior was not at the root of their success.

"Instead, what we said was you have succeeded despite your Type A behavior. That was a tough one because our culture really reinforces the connection between being more successful and being Type A," he said.

"I'd have to look very carefully at the data to see whether those given behavioral treatment didn't lose more weight or lower their blood pressure or cholesterol level more than the control group," Dr. William P. Castelli, director of the well-known Framingham Heart Study in Massachusetts, told The New York Times.

John Vaccarello, 55, a superintendent at Pacific Gas & Electric Co. who had two heart attacks before receiving Type A counseling, said he became more relaxed.

Friedman showed a videotape of Vaccarello taken before counseling. He twitched, sighed, answered questions without a moment's thought and said slow drivers and long lines made him mad.

But in a recent videotape, he said he listens to music in the car, stops at yellow lights rather than racing through them and observes others while waiting in line, imagining what their lives are like.

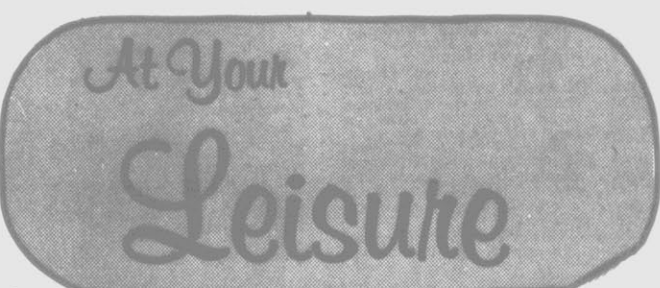

John Weiss, an administrative law judge with the California Public Utilities Commission, said he is "more relaxed, more tolerant" since the counseling. But he admits to needing reinforcement.

"I don't think a leopard changes his spots," he said, adding that his counseling group still meets even though the program has ended.

The study was funded by a $750,000 grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, part of the National Institutes of Health.

Skin Cancer Ruins Life In Sunshine

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Pamela Sloan spent her life at the beach, sailing and swimming under the Florida sunshine. At 28, her suntan caught up with her and she now must hide from the sun's rays or risk a recurrence of skin cancer.

Albert Himmelstein, a Brooklyn, N.Y., native, drove a truck for more than 30 years, dreaming of his Florida retirement as the sun shone through the open window onto his face. By the time he retired to Margate, Fla., in 1974, he had had part of an ear, half his cheek and part of his lip cut away during a number of skin cancer operations.

"I have been cut so many times, I just can't figure out how many," said Himmelstein, 77. "I haven't any idea how many times I've been butchered."

The American Cancer Society estimates 400,000 new cases of skin cancer are discovered in the United States every year, making skin cancer the most common malignancy of mankind.

More than 80 percent of skin cancers occur on skin exposed to the sun — the face, head, neck, arms and hands.

When exposed to the sun, skin produces melanin, the protective substance that gives skin its tan and guards against damage from the sun's ultraviolet rays.

Fair skin produces less melanin than darker skin and is more easily damaged by the sun's radiation. Skin damage also occurs in people who tan easily, but it occurs more slowly.

"A good tan stops you from burning but it does not protect from the sun's radiation," said Dr. Henry Menn, a chemosurgeon who has treated 6,000 skin cancer patients in the last eight years.

Menn compared the destructive process to "twists" in the genetic material that regulates cell growth. With each exposure to the sun's ultraviolet rays, that portion of the cell is twisted a little more.

During the younger years, skin cells are strong enough to ignore the "twists." But as aging progresses, and the body loses its ability to repair itself, the twisted genetic material takes over.

Skin cells reproduce rapidly and at random, creating useless growths that spread out of control, draining oxygen and nutrients from healthy cells turning into skin cancer.

Ninety-nine percent of the victims are over 40 years of age and 70 percent are over 60.

But the rate of sun-induced skin cancer in Florida residents aged 18 to 30 is skyrocketing, said Dr. Richard Kidd, a Fort Lauderdale dermatologist.

"Most people think it's an old-age disease, and I have a hard time convincing people, especially teenagers, that it's not," said Dr. Steven Mandy, a Miami dermatologist.

Skin cancer is highly curable if discovered early. Growths can be frozen away with liquid nitrogen, removed surgically or killed through X-ray therapy.

Menn, who sees only skin cancer victims whose growths did not respond to initial treatment, uses a process called Mohs chemotherapy to cut away cancerous tissue.

Using the process, named for the doctor who initiated it, he makes a numbered map of the cancer site, matching it with corresponding portions of skin that has been cut away. Those portions are examined under a microscope, and if cancerous cells are detected, additional tissue is cut away from that area until all the cells examined under the microscope are normal.

Treatment can cure 95 percent of skin cancers, which rarely spread to the bloodstream or internal organs, and usually are not life threatening.

But anyone who develops a basal cell cancer, the most common form of skin cancer, stands a 1-in-4 chance of developing another within two years.

Nicknamed "the rodent cancer," basal cell cancer accounts for about 60 percent of skin cancers, and can eat away at the victim's face if left untreated, gnawing through the ears, eyes or nose until it reaches the brain.

Squamous cell, or "scaly," cancer accounts for about 35 percent of skin cancer cases. It also is easily treated if discovered early.

A third type of skin cancer, malignant melanoma, accounts for only about 10 percent of skin cancers. It is the least likely to be caused by sun damage, and unlike other skin cancers, occurs just as often among dark-haired and dark-eyed people as it does among the blue-eyed and fair-skinned. It is considered the most dangerous of skin cancers, and usually is diagnosed when it causes moles to turn a blue-black color.

Craftsman Spends 29 Years Making Concertinas

NEW ULM, Minn. (AP) — The tiny workshop cluttered with small machinery, pieces of instruments and piles of sheet music about five feet tall seems an unlikely place for the birth of three-fourths of the concertinas used in dance bands across the country.

But it is indeed the shop of Christy Hensel, who has spent the last 29 years making concertinas that are regarded by many players as the finest on today's market.

A 10-year waiting list and $3,500 price tag for a new Hensel concertina attest to the quality. And Hensel boasts that his first concertina originally sold for $575 is now worth at least $4,000.

He claims about 75 percent of dance band musicians playing concertinas use a Hensel, and that an equal percentage of all recorded concertina work is done with one of his instruments.

"I'm not stretching that either," said the 61-year-old craftsman. "I'll tell you that — that's the truth."

Hensel estimated he has made about 300 concertinas since he got into the manufacturing business. He now produces about 15 instruments each year, a pace that keeps the waiting list growing faster than his customer list.

"I never will get caught up with my waiting list," Hensel said, showing one of his patented dimpled grins. "I'll tell you what — the tight money is not bothering the Hensel concertina business any."

Before entering the business of making concertinas, Hensel spent a good deal of time going about the business of making music, as he still does.

Reared on a farm near Wanda, 40 miles west of New Ulm, he was given his first instrument (a button accordion) when he was 12. He graduated to a double-reed concertina in 1939 and by 1941 had purchased a triple-reed concertina once owned by the king of polka, Whoopee John.

The list of bands the Wanda farm boy served duty in is lengthy, with perhaps the most widely known group being the Six Fat Dutchmen. It was while playing with the Dutchmen at Rochester's Pla-Mor Ballroom, Hensel related, that he met his wife of 22 years, Valera.

Regan Says No Tax Hike Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan repeatedly denied today that the Reagan administration is secretly planning a tax increase as Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale contends.

Asked at a congressional hearing about Mondale's contention, Regan declined to challenge the Democrat by name but said bluntly, "Any and all talk of tax increases by this administration — secret or otherwise — is untrue and unformed."

He also said the U.S. economy grew so strongly in the first half of this year that inflation-adjusted expansion for the entire year will be substantially higher than the administration's earlier estimates — even as estimates for unemployment and inflation are being lowered.

The new economic projections, scheduled for formal release later this week, call for growth in real gross national product of 6.5 percent from the fourth quarter of last year to the final quarter of this year, compared with April's estimate of 5 percent.

Unemployment should be down to 6.3 percent by the fourth quarter rather than the 7.5 percent estimated earlier, and a GNP-linked inflation measure should be rising at an annual rate of 4.4 percent rather than 4.9 percent, he said.

The federal budget deficit for this year is now expected to total "just under $175 billion," slightly better than the $177.8 billion estimate in April.

He said interest rates will stick higher than expected but that that shouldn't halt the economic recovery.

On taxes, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., told Regan that confusion was bound to arise in light of President Reagan's statements in California that no tax increases were planned followed by Vice President George Bush's statement that the president would still keep all options open.

"I can assure you, sir," Regan said, that he himself had made sure he was stating administration policy accurately in today's hearing.

He noted that as secretary of the treasury, he was the administration's top economic policy spokesman and "if anyone should be aware of any plans for tax increases and the like," it would be Regan himself.

He said over and over during the hearing of the Joint Economic Committee, using the same words each time, "There are no plans for tax increases in 1985 by this administration."

Regan said his department's study of possible tax-law changes was on schedule and would be presented to the president in December — after the election as the administration had said earlier.

He gave no details on what the study might recommend. But he did say that it would be "tax neutral." That is, any changes would be designed to bring in about the same amount of tax revenue — no more or less — than is already expected under present tax laws.

Asked how the administration would trim the remaining big federal budget deficits, he reiterated the administration's recommendation that Congress restrain spending rather than raise taxes.

"Tax increases worsen the economic outlook and make budget balance that much harder to achieve," he said.

Smokey's Birthday

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Some of his friends are observing Smokey Bear's 40th birthday today, with this northern Arizona city celebrating with a parade, party and bear-shaped balloons.

Smokey will join Mayor Robert L. Moody, the grand marshal, in a parade. Afterward, there's a birthday party in honor of the bear who warns, "Only you can help prevent forest fires."

A balloon company planned to hand out bear-shaped balloons as the city, nestled in high-timber country, celebrates Smokey Bear Day.

Smokey, the character devised by the U.S. Forest Service for its campaign against forest fires, is 40 years old this year.

Canoe Trip

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles is paying a visit to remote jungle provinces and plans to ride in a traditional war canoe.

The prince flew to Popondetta on the east coast today for the two-day visit. He was scheduled to visit Wewak in the East Sepik and then fly to Manus Island where he will be installed as a paramount chief and review a canoe regatta from an island war canoe.

He departs for London on Friday.

Would-Be Astronauts Training

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Would-be space shuttle astronauts are being asked to live on a survival-training menu featuring delicacies such as grasshoppers, ants, earthworms and rabbit eyes.

Seventeen astronaut candidates began a rigorous training program Tuesday that was to end with a 48-hour foray into the wilderness of northeast Washington state, said Lt. John Boyle, spokesman for the Air Force's survival training school.

The students from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will learn how to build a shelter, start a fire, use a compass, find water and scrounge for food — skills they would need to survive if their T-38 jet trainers ever crashed in a remote area.

Boyle said two rabbits were taken along as "learning aids" by the trip's two instructors. The rabbits will later be killed so the students can be shown what parts of the animal are edible and how the hide can be used.

Rabbit eyes have a high concentration of salt and can be eaten raw or boiled with other food, Boyle said.

Other trailside morsels — including ants, earthworms and grasshoppers — also will be sampled, he said.

"We try to get them over food aversion," Boyle said. "We want them to know that anything that crawls, flies or swims is a potential food source. It sounds terrible, but it's something we have to teach the students."

Staff Sgt. Debbie Fredette, a spokesman for Fairchild Air Force Base, said each candidate would receive a light sheet, a sleeping bag and stones for starting a fire before setting off into the back country near Cusick.

"They keep it very rudimentary," she said.

Ten of the students are military pilots from the Navy, Marines and Air Force, while the others are civilians being trained as mission specialists. The 17 were selected from about 4,000 applicants.

Writer Says Questions Unanswered

NEW YORK (AP) — An article in The Nation magazine says that either the U.S. government knew in advance that a Korean airliner shot down by the Soviet Union last year would intrude into Soviet territory, or a vast U.S.-Japan intelligence network suffered a "mind-boggling breakdown."

"At a minimum ... the president and his administration misled the press and the world concerning what they knew ... and when they knew it," David E. Pearson, a graduate student at Yale University, wrote in the Aug. 18 issue of The Nation.

Korean Air Lines flight 007 entered Soviet airspace while on a flight from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul, South Korea, on Sept. 1, 1983. It was shot down by a Soviet jet fighter, killing all 269 people aboard.

Pearson, a doctoral candidate in sociology who is specializing in defense issues, does not believe that the plane itself was spying, as the Soviets have charged, but rather that it strayed into Soviet airspace so Western intelligence could monitor the Soviet Air Defense Command's response to the intrusion.

Pearson said there should be a congressional inquiry to determine whether there was a cover-up by U.S. officials.

"We've addressed these sorts of allegations before and we've described them as absurd," Air Force Col. Robert O'Brien, a Pentagon spokesman, said Tuesday in response to the article. "They are absurd."

Pearson, who became involved in the study while doing his doctoral dissertation at Yale on the U.S. World Wide Military Command and Control System, said a large number of radar and satellite tracking systems could have warned the airliner it was dangerously off course.

If U.S. forces did not know the plane was in danger in time to correct its course, Pearson said, "it would mean that the most serious failure in the history of the U.S. early warning and communications, command, control and intelligence systems in history occurred that night."

A similar theory was put forth in a pseudonymous article in the British magazine, Defense Attache, which said KAL 007 entered Soviet airspace so that Western intelligence could monitor Soviet radar and electronic signals.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in June that the British magazine had "apparently ... picked up lock, stock and barrel the total set of lies that the Soviet Union published after the Korean jetliner was shot down."

Weinberger said then that the plane was on "absolutely nothing remotely resembling any kind of (intelligence) mission."

EPA Cites Asbestos Dangers

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 15 million pupils attend public school in buildings containing potentially dangerous asbestos, according to a new Environmental Protection Agency survey.

The EPA also estimated that somewhere between 14 percent and 26 percent of the buildings used by the public contain asbestos which could be inhaled.

Fine asbestos particles can cause serious lung diseases, including cancer, that may not show up for 40 years after exposure. Current EPA regulations require school districts to inspect their premises and notify parent and employee groups if potentially breathable asbestos is found.

The EPA's school and public buildings surveys were conducted in response to a petition by the Service Employees International Union that asked the agency to require action against potentially hazardous asbestos.

The agency did not release the survey reports, but made officials available Tuesday to talk about the results.

The 15 million pupils attend classes in some 31,000 buildings, the agency said. Overall, there are about 39.4 million pupils in public schools.

The buildings survey sampled 231 buildings according to statistical techniques. State and local government buildings were excluded, but federal buildings and others to which the public has access, such as department stores, were covered, including apartment buildings with 10 or more apartments.

The buildings survey "does not tell us, nor was it designed to tell, the condition of the asbestos. It may be perfectly fine," said Ed Kline of the agency's toxic substances assistance office.

Bill Borwegen, safety director for the Service Employees International Union, said he was suspicious of the responses to the school questionnaire.

The EPA "has not granted our petition" for a legally binding rule requiring measures against asbestos, he said, and as a result "the public, and our children, have no rights."

Nudists Open Yearly Session In The Buff

DARLINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Shedding their clothes for a more "natural" state, about 1,000 members of the American Sunbathing Association are gathering for their annual convention at a rural retreat where informality rules.

"Sure, some people think I'm crazy for being a nudist. But some people think I'm crazy because I'm a Democrat," said Bob Erlenmeyer, 43, a truck driver from Cleveland.

"It's just real natural, and you know people are accepting you for you. It's the one place you can really be yourself," his wife, Julie, 37, said Tuesday as she relaxed on a cabin porch with her husband.

Representatives of 200 nudists' clubs around the United States and Canada began arriving Monday night at White Thorn Lodge, a 100-acre nudists' camp hidden behind tall evergreens in rural southwestern Pennsylvania.

Like the Erlenmeyers, most of the ASA members stripped soon after entering the front gate, opting for only name tags on neck chains and sandals or shoes and socks for protection from sharp stones and bees.

Men and women, young and old, shapely and not, walked freely at the campgrounds, greeting fellow conventioners, before settling down to ping-pong, volleyball, horseshoes or a swim.

The group planned to mix business with pleasure during the six-day conference, devoting today through Friday to business sessions and the weekend for athletic contests, dances and the crowning of a "Royal Family."

Along with an election of officers and a debate over the consolidation of individual clubs, delegates planned to discuss ways of increasing public awareness of nudism.

"We're normal people. We don't have horns," said Hap Hathaway, 56, an aeronautical engineer from Torrance, Calif., and the group's outgoing president.

Public acceptance of nudism has increased greatly since the non-profit organization was founded in 1931, according to members.

"The younger generation doesn't have the old feelings about the body taboo and all," said K. Mathesius, 62, a retired newspaper proofreader who lives at the lodge as its secretary and practices full-time nudism along with her children and grandchildren.

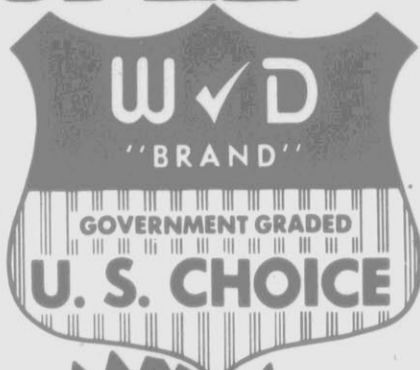

"If someone asked me if I were a nudist, I would say, 'Yes, but why? Who cares?'" said Beverly Price, 40, a geometry teacher from Phoenix, Ariz., and a regional ASA officer who has raised her two children as nudists.

ABC Piles Up Olympic Points

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's Olympics coverage is matching the medal-bedecked U.S. team stride for stride, rolling up huge ratings despite a Soviet-led boycott and attracting what could be the largest audience ever for the Summer Games.

ABC decisively won the ratings war over CBS and NBC for the week ended Aug. 5, taking the first seven places in the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s coveted Top 10 with its nightly Olympics coverage.

The most watched night of the week was Sunday, when America's Edwin Moses won a gold medal for the 400-meter hurdles and Romania's Ecaterina Szabo won three gold medals in gymnastics.

The Nielsen ratings for the first nine days of the Olympics ran four-tenths of a ratings point ahead of the same period for the 1976 Montreal games, the highest-rated Olympics to date.

ABC estimates that 135 million Americans have seen some or all of the Olympics prime-time coverage thus far.

The overall audience, both day and night, will probably reach 170 million, according to Roy Rothstein, ABC's vice president for entertainment research.

If the ratings continue to run ahead of Montreal, the Los Angeles Olympics would become the highest-rated ever. If the ratings fall short by a small margin, the audience for Los Angeles would still be larger because the number of TV homes represented by a ratings points has increased substantially since 1976.

ABC won the Nielsen ratings with a network average of 25.2. NBC was second with 9.3 and CBS was third with 8.4. The networks say this means that in an average minute 25.2 percent of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The ratings were near the projections ABC gave to advertisers before the Soviet-led boycott. The network had estimated its prime-time ratings at 25 each night and it reached that goal on two nights.

ABC's nine-day average since the XXIII Olympiad began on Sunday, July 28, was 23.8. The network averaged a rating of 24.8 in prime time at the Montreal Olympics in 1976, the last Summer Games the American team attended, and had a 24.4 rating at Munich in 1972.

The Olympics even pulled ABC's "World News Tonight," second last week among the nightly network news shows, to its first ratings victory over CBS in more than two years. The last time ABC was first was the week ended May 1, 1982. The ABC news show, however, was telecast by many stations out of its normal time period because of the Olympics.

The outstanding ratings also drew cheers from Madison Avenue.

"ABC's numbers are right on," said John Sisk, senior vice president and director of network negotiating for the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency in New York. Sisk said early American medals and the magnificent opening ceremony got the ratings off to a good start.

Here are the week's 20 top programs:

1. Summer Olympics, Sunday, ABC, a rating of 25.2 or 21.1 million households.
2. Summer Olympics, Wednesday, ABC, 25.0 or 20.9 million.
3. Summer Olympics, Tuesday, ABC, 24.5 or 20.5 million.
4. Summer Olympics, Thursday, ABC, 23.9 or 20.0 million.
5. Summer Olympics, Friday, ABC, 23.2 or 19.4 million.
6. Summer Olympics, Monday, ABC, 22.4 or 18.7 million.
7. Summer Olympics, Saturday, ABC, 22.3 or 18.6 million.
8. "The A-Team," NBC, 13.8 or 11.5 million.
9. "Cagney & Lacey," CBS, 13.0 or 10.8 million.
10. "Remington Steele," NBC, 13.0 or 10.8 million.

Welsh Flag To Top Burton's Coffin

CELIGNY, Switzerland (AP) — Richard Burton, a Welsh flag covering his coffin, will be buried in a cemetery plot he bought here years ago, says a friend, and not in his native Wales as his family had hoped.

A brother of the actor said Tuesday that the family wished the burial would be in Ponthrydfen, Wales, where the actor was born Richard Jenkins 58 years ago, the 12th of 13 children of a coal miner. Burton's sister, Hilda Owen, said Sunday that her brother wanted to be buried in his native village.

However, Edouard Koessler, a banker whose wife is mayor here, said of Burton's purchase of a cemetery plot in Celigny: "I believe this proves that he wanted to be entered here. He bought the concession at our village cemetery several years ago, paying 1,000 francs ($412) like everybody else who wants to be buried here."

Koessler said a Welsh flag will cover the coffin during the funeral Thursday at the 400-year-old village church in Celigny, which overlooks Lake Geneva.

At London's Heathrow Airport, where some of Burton's brothers and sisters were boarding a flight to Switzerland to attend the funeral, his brother Verduin said: "Everybody is very upset. We would have preferred the funeral to have been in Wales ... but circumstances alter."

"It was his wish that he should be buried near his home in Switzerland and we have to respect that," said Jenkins.

Burton, whose heavy drinking and love affair with Elizabeth Taylor at times eclipsed attention paid to his superb stage acting, died from a brain hemorrhage Sunday in a Geneva hospital after becoming ill at his villa in Celigny.

At Heathrow airport, Mrs. Owen said she hoped Miss Taylor will stay away from the funeral "for Sally's sake," referring to Burton's widow, Sally Hay. Miss Taylor, who twice married Burton, has not announced whether she will attend the funeral.

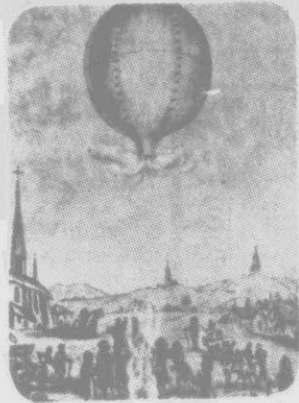

Koessler, whose villa is near that of Burton's modest-looking "Pays de Galles" — French for Wales — said the actor considered Celigny "the best place in the world."

Burton would stay two to three months a year in Celigny.

"Here he had peace and people left him alone and here is where he wanted to be buried," Koessler said.

The retired village pastor, the Rev. Arnold Mobbs, who will officiate at the funeral, said Burton considered himself a Welshman

Full of Hot Air

This week balloonists are competing for the U.S. Hot Air Balloon Championship in Indianola, IA. Originally, these graceful giants of the sky were not greeted with unmixed delight. King Louis XVI of France wanted the first balloon passengers to be prisoners because, at that time, many believed the upper atmosphere was deadly to breathe. Fearing a strange monster from the sky, peasants hacked another balloon to pieces after it landed near Paris in 1783.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the Queen of France when Louis XVI was King?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — South Vietnam surrendered in 1975.

Surgery Donated

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Nobel peace prize-winner Mother Teresa of Calcutta canceled a scheduled eye operation so she could donate the money to the poor, but an ophthalmologist says he'll perform the cataract surgery for free.

Mother Teresa was scheduled to enter a Pittsburgh hospital this week, but said she didn't need surgery and would rather donate the money to poor people.

The ophthalmologist, Richard D. Levin, said he doesn't know where to reach Mother Teresa, but that he is willing to do the surgery for free, and two friends he would not identify have volunteered to provide the air fare.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

The experienced bridge player hopes for the best while preparing for the worst. That attitude saves him thousands of points every year. South was on the borderline of a jump to game, but chose the conservative course of an invitational jump to three hearts. North rightly decided that two aces opposite a hand that jumped was a fine holding indeed, so he went on to game. Note North's decision to respond one no trump rather than show his anemic four-card spade suit—a principle we heartily endorse.

West led the queen of diamonds, and we would wager most players would lose the contract by the time they had played to the second trick. They would win the ace of diamonds and cash the ace of hearts, and now the unlucky break would mean they could not score more than nine tricks.

The experienced player would realize the hand was laydown barring a 5-0 trump break. Therefore, he would direct his energies to seeing what he could do to counter that remote possibility.

Correct technique is to win the ace of diamonds and immediately ruff a diamond. Declarer then crosses to the ace of trumps. If both defenders follow to this trick, declarer simply draws trumps and claims his 10 tricks.

However, when West shows out on the first trump lead declarer is still in position to make his contract. He uses his second entry to dummy to ruff another diamond. Now declarer needs just one little slice of luck to bring home his contract—East must hold at least two spades and one club. When those three black-suit winners live, declarer has 10 tricks—four trumps and two ruffs, two spades and the minor-suit aces.

Ferraro Says She Will List Assets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro is promising to tell all about her husband's finances next week, while defending her decision to keep them secret when she filed her congressional disclosure forms over the past six years.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee said Tuesday that she regarded a conservative legal group's complaint to the House ethics committee about her financial reports "an attempt to politically embarrass me. I'm not embarrassed."

"I don't believe I have violated the law," she told reporters in the hallway outside her congressional office shortly after the director of the Washington Legal Foundation dropped off a copy of his complaint.

The three-term congressman said, "I still think I am qualified" to claim an exemption that allowed her to avoid listing the holdings of her husband, wealthy New York developer John A. Zaccaro, and her children. "I will not be changing that," she added.

But she renewed the promise she made shortly after Walter F. Mondale chose her as his running mate to make a complete disclosure of her own and her husband's finances, including copies of their tax returns. That will come in about a week and a half, she said, and all questions will be answered then.

The law requires vice presidential candidates to make the same type disclosure as members of Congress within 30 days of their nomination. Ms. Ferraro said she will disclose more than the law requires.

Pork imports From Canada Upset Producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imports of Canadian pork and live hogs are causing squeals of protest among U.S. producers, who say they are being unfairly buffeted by Northern neighbors.

A new report by the Agriculture Department shows that it's a complex situation. Canada's freight rates, federal and provincial farm subsidies, disparities between Eastern and Western meat packing facilities and the greater strength of the U.S. dollar are significant reasons, according to the department's Economic Research Service.

The U.S. International Trade Commission is investigating to see how Canadian hogs and pork stack up in the American market. Its findings are due by Nov. 21.

Meanwhile, pressure has built in Congress for retaliatory action, including legislation that would allow additional import duties on Canadian products to offset any advantages gained by subsidies paid to Canadian producers.

The latest update on the Canadian situation was included in a new outlook report issued this week by the agency.

"Since the mid-1970s, Canadian exports of both pork and live hogs to the United States have increased tenfold, while U.S. exports to Canada have been only a sixth of earlier levels," the report said. "In 1978, the United States shifted from being a net pork exporter with Canada to a net importer."

According to Canadian export figures for the first half of 1984, pork shipments to the United States are up 25 percent, and live hog exports have more than doubled from last year.

Pork represented nearly 20 percent of Canada's agricultural exports to the United States in 1983.

"Nevertheless, Canadian pork and live hog exports are small relative to U.S. production," the report said. "In 1983, Canadian pork and live hog exports were about 2 percent of U.S. production."

Canadian hog production rose sharply in 1977 and has remained high since then, marked by especially marketing in Eastern Canada, expanded in Quebec, and no growth in Western Canada.

Consumers' Confidence On Decline

By The Associated Press

While the U.S. dollar was climbing to record highs, Americans' confidence in the economy fell in July to its lowest level in eight months, a business research group said.

The dollar continued its meteoric rise on Tuesday, hitting record highs against the currencies of France and Italy. Bolstered by stubbornly high U.S. interest rates, the dollar also hit an 11-year peak against the West German mark.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee, apparently agreeing that the federal income tax is too complex and riddled with loopholes, opened hearings Tuesday on plans for a fundamental overhaul of the income-tax system. But some committee members warned that the public not to expect a tax cut as a result.

The Conference Board, in a survey of 5,000 households nationwide, said the number of people describing business conditions and employment opportunities as good fell in July from June. The number who said they planned to buy cars, houses and major appliances in the near future also fell.

As a result, the business-supported research firm said its Consumer Confidence Index was 91.1 in July, down from 97.1 in June but up from 84.7 a year ago.

Results of the study indicate that the strong recovery "is now subsiding to a sturdy but sustainable pace," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center.

The dollar rose in European trading to a record high 8.9495 French francs, up from 8.8350 late Monday, and to an all-time peak of 1,788.92 Italian lire, up from 1,769.55.

In opening the tax hearings, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., said, "The time is ripe to devise a tax system that is simple, fair, and — most important — a system that will encourage savings and investment, to lay the groundwork for sustained economic growth for our nation and to create jobs and a better life for all of our citizens."

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the committee, said a decline in voluntary compliance with the tax laws shows the need for major reform. But he added, "Everybody now thinks they're going to get a tax reduction. I don't think that's possible."

A series of Treasury Department hearings confirmed what members of Congress have been saying: Many Americans consider the tax system to be so complex that it is unworkable and so filled with exceptions, exemptions and deductions that it promotes a feeling that too many people are getting away without paying.

In other economic developments Tuesday: —Pan American World Airways reported a $49.8 million loss for the second quarter, largely from frequent flyer redemptions it wanted to clear away before its peak season. The airline earned $10.4 in the period a year ago.

—The Defense Logistics Agency said it lifted a threat to ban National Semiconductor Corp. from government contracts after the computer chip maker took "significant corrective actions" to meet government testing requirements. The company was convicted on 40 criminal counts "related to the company's 1978-1981 underestimating of microcircuits used in a large variety of aerospace and military applications."

—Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Congress should liberalize antitrust laws to make it easier for U.S. companies to merge when they face intense foreign competition.

—Beatrice Companies Inc. said it completed its $2.7 billion acquisition of Esmark Inc., making it the world's largest food and consumer products concern.

Irish Teens Find Friendship In Louisiana

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Fifteen-year-old Thomas Jefferson has had his share of fights with Catholics back home in Londonderry.

But he says he'll keep the Catholic friends with whom he's spent the past month in Louisiana.

"I'm determined to. But there will be difficulty. What you would call peer pressure," said Thomas, one of 14 Protestant and 14 Catholic teen-agers brought from Londonderry to Cajun country by the Ulster Project.

His father, too, may object, Thomas said.

"But possibly once they meet, he'll see what I think."

Friday was the teen-agers' last day in Lafayette, where they have been staying since July 4 with families who have children their own age and sex. This is the fifth year that the project has brought a group from Londonderry to Lafayette.

"The object is to give them maximum exposure to each other, to let them have an example in which they can see that they can live together perfectly well," said Larry Kresse, Lafayette's Catholic coordinator for the program.

Thomas, 15 and a student at Foyle and Londonderry College, said his best friends in the program are Catholic. Bernadette Gallagher, a Catholic participant, said some of the Protestant girls have become her best friends.

The Ulster Project has five or six groups elsewhere around the country, but Lafayette is the only Southern city where one is located, organizers said.

The teen-agers are chosen as leaders who may be able to influence their friends, organizers said.

Thomas, for example, is a school house captain, in charge of organizing one-fourth of his schoolmates in sports. Bernadette helps organize dances and other social activities and reads Bible passages for Sunday church services.

The 28 Irish teen-agers began getting to know each other even before they came to America, said John McLaughlin, the group's Catholic counselor from Londonderry.

He said he and Rosemary Ray, the Protestant counselor, got together and worked up activities to introduce the participants and to help them learn about each other more deeply.

"Initially, both Catholics and Protestants were wary of each other," he said. "You have to accept that for some of these teen-agers it was the very first time they'd ever met someone of the other religion."

After they'd met a few times, he said, members of the group were asked to talk about prejudice in general, and the Irish religious prejudices in particular.

"Some of the Catholics felt that a lot of Protestants living in a certain area all supported the National Front, which is a neo-Nazi type party. Some of the Protestants felt that a lot of Catholic boys believed in actual violence as a way to achieve an end."

"Both these are common beliefs. When they sat down and talked openly, they found they weren't true," McLaughlin said.

Thomas and Bernadette both said they hadn't realized just what they were getting into when they were asked to join.

"I thought it was just a holiday away," said Bernadette, a fifth-year student at Thornhill Grammar School. "But then, from the meetings at home I realized it was to bring the Catholics and Protestants together and see how they would react together."

She said she was pleased. "I liked talking with them and spending time with them."

Bernadette seemed a bit more optimistic than Thomas about the chances for continuing new friendships back home.

"We hope to continue meeting at home, going to each others' houses," she said. "We have a service arranged for us all and we all intend on meeting and visiting each other as often as we can."

McLaughlin, 24 and a first-time Ulster Project counselor, said he and Ms. Ray were committed but dubious when they started organizing activities in Ireland.

"We wondered if it would work at all. But I think at the last meeting we had with the teen-agers before we came across, it wasn't a Catholic group and a Protestant group — it was an Irish group."

The camaraderie tightened in Lafayette, where organizers put together a wide range of social and sociological programs for the teen-agers and their 28 American hosts.

"We went on a canoe trip. We've had about six dances. We took them to Astroworld and Waterworld in Houston. We took them on plane rides. We had a grand Fourth of July celebration with a picnic, games and fireworks," said Kresse. And that wasn't half of the things they did just for fun.

"The serious side of the program we call 'UP' Programs. They dealt with things such as prejudice, fear and anxiety, love, leadership..."

Kresse said the only problems are the usual sorts when a lot of teen-agers spend a lot of time together.

"They're kids. They do the things that kids do. Sometimes they fall in love."

And they smoke. And they want to stay out later than they probably ought to."

And yes, said Kresse, some romances crossed religious lines.

"And there are going to be one or two problems as a result of that. We have one little girl who spent the last several days in tears for that very reason."

"Those things are almost certainly due not to continue when they get home. It's too hard for people to see each other over there."

Thomas said that he felt the best part of the program was being able to talk freely with Protestant teen-agers, including Jim Knox who became his best friend in the group.

"I've got to meet people and realize that people like Jim aren't really different from myself, and you can talk with them and talk about the situation freely here."

Asked if they'll be able to have similar talks back home, he said, "Not in public."

Thomas said he's been in a lot of fights back home because of religious prejudice — and so has Jim. Both of them would like that to stop, he said.

"It's very irrational. But if someone picks a fight with you, you tend to defend yourself, which makes the next person come along and fight," he said.

And he didn't expect to be able to avoid such fights entirely.

"With my friends — I'll help if they are hit. But I'll try to avoid fighting. I'll try to get my friends to avoid it. And it will be up to people like Jim on the other side to do the same."

Charlotte Officials Skeptical of Survey

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Local officials are skeptical about a survey that shows office workers' salaries in Charlotte and Winston-Salem above the national average and leading the Southeast.

The survey, by the Administrative Management Society of Willow Grove, Pa., shows Charlotte above the national average in nine of 20 occupations. It indicates Winston-Salem is above the national average in 10 occupations, while Atlanta is above the national average in only four.

The jobs surveyed include word processors, accounting clerks, shipping clerks, cashiers, secretaries, legal secretaries, receptionists and clerk typists.

"I would be a little skeptical myself," said Dick Daniel, president of the Central Piedmont Employers Association in Charlotte. "We're definitely below Atlanta."

Daniel said his association surveyed 500 companies within a 100-mile radius of Charlotte. Comparisons with affiliated organizations around the nation show the area's office salaries higher than in some cities and lower than in many others, he said.

"We're lower than Alexandria, Va., and Atlanta. We're above Baltimore and showing above Birmingham, Ala. We are on a par but usually below Boston and above Buffalo, N.Y."

"We're an average of 3 or 4 percent higher than Greensboro," he said. "Houston, we're way below. We're also lower than Orlando."

The AMS surveyed more than 5,000 member companies across the United States, including 55 in Charlotte, said survey manager Doris Latham.

She said the average weekly pay for office workers in Charlotte was $266, compared to $270 nationwide. The average was $301 in Winston-Salem, $259 in Greensboro and $264 in Atlanta, she said.

Mrs. Latham said no average was available for the Triangle area, but the survey showed the area below the national average in 18 of the 20 office occupations.

Charles Webb, executive vice president of the Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce, said the problem with the survey is that the AMS took responses only from its members. But he said Winston-Salem's large proportion of manufacturing firms may indeed account for higher average office pay.

Cuba Steps Up Internal News Flow

HAVANA (AP) — While Fidel Castro appears increasingly defensive about outside criticism, his 25-year-old revolutionary government has told the state news media to become more aggressive in reporting problems in Cuba.

In two recent speeches, Castro spent hours citing statistics showing improvements in Cuba since 1959 and claiming Cuba is much better off than its Latin neighbors.

"This is the reality. These are the figures. There is a series of so-called Cuba analysts who will deny them. They will cry, they will lie. They deny what we can see here for ourselves," the Cuban president said in a speech July 26 marking the 31st anniversary of the start of his revolution.

Meanwhile, the television, radio stations and newspapers have shown more frankness in airing complaints and problems.

Some Western diplomats here linked Castro's defense of his record and the increased local criticism to Radio Marti, a Reagan administration project that will beam programs to Cuba. The U.S.-based station will be largely staffed by anti-Castro Cuban exiles. The diplomats, speaking on condition that they would not be identified, said the Castro government wants to improve the news media to dissuade Cubans from listening to Radio Marti and to reduce any impact it might have.

Cuban officials, though, said Radio Marti wasn't a factor.

"We decided a long time ago that the news media have to become more interesting, more valuable. The spirit of criticism has become much stronger," said a member of the Communist Party Central Committee. He made the comment to a visiting correspondent on condition that he remain anonymous.

"Radio Marti will have no effect here," said Foreign Ministry official Ariel Ricardo.

"We already hear Voice of America and the Miami stations. Some days you can pick up the Miami stations better than our stations," Ricardo added, referring to Miami's Spanish-language stations, which are stridently anti-Castro.

At a Festival of Radio and TV on Feb. 27-28, government officials urged island broadcasters to play a more important role in improving society.

"Whatever would be the threats and aggressions the enemy might make toward us, we will be able to meet it by strengthening our programming," said a conference statement which apparently referred to Radio Marti.

Since then, several steps have been taken. Radio and TV hours have been extended. The two major national radio stations were combined into one 24-hour station.

The two television stations now show more foreign movies, particularly much-requested American movies, mostly from the 1940s and 1950s. Brighter TV sets, more use of film, human-interest features and a wider range of timely, less-propagandistic reports have come to the news shows.

Paper Pinpoints Drivers' Dispute

HAVANA (AP) — A bus driver who got into a dispute with his passengers became an object lesson for Cuban workers in a recent issue of the Communist Party newspaper Granma.

It gave this account of a complaint filed by one of the passengers, identified as Sara Cuevas Salas, a young secretary:

The bus driver became angry because his passengers repeatedly asked him to open a rear door to let in fresh air while waiting for more riders to arrive. He shut off the engine and claimed it was disabled.

With the passengers refusing to get off the bus until a mechanic arrived, the driver re-started the engine and "drove at reckless speed, passing several stops."

The driver, Carlos Morejon Ramos, 23, later was reprimanded and fined 20 percent of his July overtime salary, although he denied turning off the engine.

"It's the same old story, it's always the driver who pays," the driver said after learning of the punishment. "From now on, I'll never do a favor for anybody."

Granma commented: "Why should a young, highly regarded worker be capable of such anti-labor and anti-social conduct?"

"Doesn't he realize that if the shoemaker, the baker, the secretary, the plumber, the builder, etc., 'turn off' their respective motors, he and his family will be without all the goods and services that those people's work provides?"

"This is not just one individual or one incident. One must learn a key lesson: to receive and deserve what we have, we have to give. No one should harvest what they have not sown."

Mexicans Downplay Gold Find

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Government officials acknowledge that a substantial gold deposit has been discovered in central Mexico, but they are putting little public emphasis on the find for fear of repeating the economic bust that followed the nation's oil boom of the late 1970s.

El Barqueno gold field, found last November in Jalisco state 335 miles northwest of Mexico City, has a motherlode officially estimated at 3 miles long and about 40 feet wide, with a yield of 5 to 15 grams of gold per ton of earth. It also is estimated to hold 20 grams of silver per ton of earth and variable quantities of lead, iron and zinc. There are 31.1 grams in a troy ounce, the standard measure in weighing gold and silver.

Only 5 percent of the 12,103-acre area believed to contain gold has been explored to date, according to the government's geophysical and geochemical studies.

The deposit near a village known as Panico has been described in local newspapers as potentially the richest in the world.

The newspaper Excelsior of Mexico City described the gold field this way in a recent article: "Here gold is found in plain view. ... This is only the beginning, since other, richer veins exist, with gold in chunks, at depths of between 30 and 60 meters (90 and 180 feet)."

The newspaper predicted that the field holds enough gold to produce 396,000 troy ounces of gold and 1.6 million troy ounces of silver a year. (The price of gold closed out the month of July at around $340 an ounce and silver around $7.)

Mexican authorities have not denied any such reports of the field's potential. But their own reports are conservative.

Energy and Mines Secretary Francisco Labastida Ochoa has said, "The announcement about the mining potential of gold and silver responds to the policy of keeping the public informed and not to the ... desire to signal a new resource with which the development of Mexico can be sustained."

"We must not ever again fall into illusions. We must not again make the mistake of thinking that a natural resource will be the solution."

Rapid development of petroleum discoveries brought unprecedented prosperity to Mexico from 1978 through 1981, producing a climate of heavy spending and borrowing against what officials then assumed would be a vast oil wealth.

But in 1982 the world oil glut and falling prices reduced Mexico's petroleum income far below expectations.

Mexico could not meet its foreign debt payments and the economic downturn still persists two years into the administration of President Miguel de la Madrid, who took office in December 1982.

Labastida Ochoa has described El Barqueno as "the greatest known gold mine in the country," but he said that publicity about the discovery's potential was being handled carefully "so as not to generate false expectations." He added that all information must be confirmed before it is announced, although the expectation remains that the new field will double Mexico's gold production.

Official reports show Mexico as the 25th largest producer of gold in the world. Production for 1983 was 1.8 million troy ounces and projections call for that figure to increase by 25 percent this year.

Mexico is the world's largest silver producer, according to the government. It currently produces 79,200 ounces of silver for each kilogram (2.2 pounds or 26.4 ounces) of gold, in contrast to the last decades of the 19th century when it produced 26,400 ounces of silver for each kilogram of gold.

Government officials have declined to estimate probable or proven reserves of gold, saying it is too tied in to other metals.

However, a recent government statement did say that "in search of self-sufficiency in gold, Mexico will increase extraction, principally in the state of Zacatecas, and will continue work in the recently discovered mines in Jalisco."

Most gold production from Zacatecas, in north-central Mexico near Durango, is done in conjunction with mining for other metals.

Swimmer Dies

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — A 41-year-old lawyer from Sri Lanka, who had admitted he was worried about the chilly water, became the second person known to have died trying to swim the English Channel.

Police said Kumar Anandan was airlifted to a Canterbury hospital Monday and was dead on arrival. The crew of his escort boat had tried to give him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when he got into trouble several miles after leaving Dover for France.

Anandan had previously swum a distance similar to the channel crossing — 21 miles from Sri Lanka to India.

FAA Official Tells World Of Hijackings In Southeast

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Jack Barker tells even his close friends to use a formal greeting when they call him at the office.

As the Federal Aviation Administration public affairs officer for the Southeast, Barker has answered questions about most of this country's air piracy in the last two decades.

"It became a joke, my name being what it is," Barker said. "My friends know never to say 'Hi, Jack' to me over the phone unless there is one."

Of the 134 hijackings of commercial and private airplanes recorded in the United States between 1961 and 1983, 107 ended up in Cuba, which is within the FAA's southeastern region.

As the agency's spokesman, the job of telling the public what happens with the hijacked aircraft falls to Barker, a 22-year veteran of government public relations.

"When a hijacking occurs, a telephone network is activated and all the proper people are on it," Barker said.

In addition to notifying the FBI and the State Department, FAA controllers handling the hijacked aircraft call Barker, or his assistant, Roger S. Myers. Barker or Myers, in turn, call news media organizations in the appropriate areas to inform them of the details.

"Ninety percent of my work is over the telephone," Barker said. "There are people I've known for years that I've never seen."

From his office decorated with prints of various aircraft and cartoons along the "Hi, Jack" theme, the 54-year-old Barker juggles several telephone lines as he watches airplanes take off and land at nearby Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport.

"I'm the source of news in anything that happens in aviation in the eight southeastern states, the Caribbean and Central and South America," he said. "Hijackings, wherever they start, mostly go to Cuba and they end up going through this region to get there. By virtue of that, I'm the one who puts out the information."

He said he doesn't always tell everything he knows about a hijacking.

The FAA and the FBI don't want potential air pirates to learn how they handle negotiations in a hijacking, nor do they want hijackers listening to public radio or watching television to learn of police movements, Barker said.

"We're concerned with putting out correct information without jeopardizing the safety of the passengers," he said. "While the airplane is in the air, the main goal of everybody is to let that plane land safely."

"Most all of the hijackings have been routine air traffic procedures. They always are treated as an emergency, of course, but it's been routine in that there was no problem getting it to the destination safely."

Since the first rash of hijackings started in 1968, the FAA has taken a number of steps to stop people with political or personal motives from commandeering airplanes.

"Every time the hijackings started, we'd find a way to stop them," Barker said. "But then they'd find a way to thwart" the preventive measures.

In 1973, the FAA required all American airports to screen passengers for weapons and, a year later, the FAA required airports to X-ray carry-on luggage.

That stopped air piracy for several years, until hijackers learned they could sneak flammable liquids on board and threaten to blow up the plane.

Two things combined to stop the spurt of hijackings involving flammable liquids: the FAA instituted security procedures to help screen successfully for potential fire bombs and Cuba started sentencing hijackers to prison terms.

Although Cuba sentenced the first hijacker to jail in 1980, Barker said it took a while to convince potential air pirates of the dangers.

"If the hijackers were unsuccessful and caught, they got prison sentences in the United States. If they were successful, they got sentences in Cuba," Barker said. "But they didn't believe us, so the hijackings continued."

Eventually, however, the futility of the crime apparently dawned on potential air pirates and the number of hijackings have dwindled, with only a handful occurring in the last 12 months.

"All but two of the hijackings in 1983 were Mariel boatlift refugees (from Cuba) who had a hard time adjusting to the United States," he said. "They thought they could go back to Cuba and resume the life they'd lived there. But they were finally educated."

Although most of Barker's work is done over the telephone, he sometimes conducts news conferences outside Atlanta and when he goes anywhere he flies.

Scores Of People Came To Infant's Aid

LONDON (AP) — Hollie Roffey was born at 1:19 p.m. on July 20 — 6 pounds and 8 ounces, dark-haired, and a joy for her young parents. But there was a problem with Hollie's tiny heart, and it quickly worsened.

When she was 10 days old, Hollie made medical history as the youngest person ever to receive a heart transplant. It was a breakthrough that wouldn't have been possible without a gifted surgeon, computerized organ matching, and a network of volunteers who rush surgeons and organs into place for transplant operations.

Here is the story of how scores of people worked to give Hollie Roffey a chance to live:

Hollie's heart problem became evident soon after her birth at William Harvey Hospital in Ashford, a suburb southeast of London where Hollie's parents, Janet Roffey, 24, and Anthony, 26, have their home.

"Her health appeared normal although a heart murmur was noted," said John Hind, administrator at the hospital.

On July 24 Hollie became breathless during feeding. An electrocardiogram was done, the heart murmur was recognized as something worse, and Hollie was transferred to National Heart Hospital in London.

There she was diagnosed as suffering from a congenital defect called hypoplastic left heart syndrome, meaning that the left side of her heart had not developed. Without a new heart she would die within weeks.

Hollie became a patient of Magdi Yacoub — surgeons in Britain go by plain Mr. rather than Dr. — who had performed 120 heart transplants since January 1980. In the next week, Yacoub, a 46-year-old Egyptian-born dynamo, did three heart transplants in five days, including the urgent operation on Hollie.

No baby so small had ever had a heart transplant, though newborns had had corrective heart surgery. "It was experimental," Yacoub said later. "But all advances in surgery are experimental. The first time someone took out an appendix it was an experiment."

Yacoub was looking for a heart the size of a plum. His call went out on July 28 via a computerized network called UK Transplant, which has been matching transplant patients with donor organs for 12 years. On the afternoon of July 29, word came back from a sister organization, Euro-Transplant, that the heart of a 3-day-old was available in the Netherlands. The brain-damaged Dutch infant had weighed 7 pounds, a good match with Hollie's size.

Yacoub went into high gear. UK Transplant's Bristol headquarters received a call at 4:35 p.m. July 29 saying that Yacoub needed a flight to Nijmegen in the Netherlands. Within 57 minutes an executive jet had been arranged through St. John's Air Wing, a cadre of volunteers, and a landing was okayed at a military airfield near Nijmegen. The jet took off from Heathrow airport outside London at 7:20 p.m.

"We have quite a sophisticated transport system," said Peter Brooman, administrator of UK Transplant. "We lay on transport for the transplant teams, moving them from the hospital to the aircraft, and to wherever they are going and back again."

At 1 a.m. on July 30 Yacoub was back, carrying the tiny heart in a protective saline solution. He went immediately to National Heart Hospital to operate on Hollie with a team of 10. At 5:30 a.m. the surgery was complete.

That afternoon, the hospital announced that Hollie had received a new heart and was in stable condition. "The patient seems to be doing quite well," said hospital administrator Tom Cosgrove. "The operation was a success and required a delicate touch."

The next day Hollie was awake in her germ-free incubator and, despite a network of wires connecting her to monitors, she was "waving her arms and legs like a normal baby." A press photographer and a television crew were permitted in that day, giving the world its first glimpses of a historic baby.

A day later Hollie suffered a setback, developing a perforated bowel that required a second operation. Hollie then was said to be "very critical," but she has made slight progress day by day, the hospital said. Last Friday, two days after the second operation, Janet and Anthony Roffey were permitted to touch Hollie, their first baby, for the first time since her heart transplant.

"They were gowned up and wore surgical gloves, but very fine ones, so they could get a real touch when they put their hands on the baby," said Cosgrove.

Amtrak Safety To Be Checked

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak operations will undergo intensified government scrutiny following a rash of passenger train accidents that resulted in 11 deaths in five separate incidents last month.

The Transportation Department has announced that teams of inspectors will examine dispatching and signaling procedures along the railroad's Boston-Washington Northeast Corridor, where more than half of Amtrak's passengers travel.

In addition, the government said a special Amtrak car that can detect even minor track irregularities will begin checks on more than 22,000 miles of track nationwide to determine independently the condition of the rails used for passenger travel. The car, which will be attached to regular Amtrak long-distance trains, will cover tracks owned and maintained by other railroads.

John Riley, head of the Federal Railroad Administration, said his agency has noticed "no pattern ... that would pose a threat to passenger safety" at Amtrak but that the inspections are aimed at ascertaining that operating rules are being followed.

Riley acknowledged that the new government initiative probably will not uncover anything that might have prevented the accidents last month. Three of those crashes involved railroad crossing accidents and another has been attributed to a sudden rail washout during flash flooding.

Amtrak Chairman W. Graham

Clayton, welcoming the investigation and promising full cooperation, told reporters, "I am satisfied that we are running the safest railroad in the United States."

The inspections are expected to last three to six weeks.

Over the years, Amtrak has been praised by transportation safety experts, who say railroads generally provide the safest mode of travel. But in July, an unusual rash of fatal and highly publicized accidents plagued the government-subsidized passenger line.

Among the crashes was the derailment of Amtrak's Montrealer on July 7 in Vermont when a ravine crossing washed out during a sudden storm. Investigators have said a faulty radio system prevented the crew from being warned of the severe weather conditions. The track had been inspected only the day before.

The Vermont crash, which killed five people and injured 137, was followed by just over two weeks by a head-on collision of two Amtrak trains in New York City in which one person was killed and 115 injured.

The three other accidents in July all involved trains striking trucks at railroad crossings — the type of collision that railroads often cannot avoid because it takes a mile or more to bring a train to a halt.

Federal officials and Amtrak executives acknowledged that the new government action does not directly address the rail crossing problem, which routinely is cited as the biggest safety concern facing the railroad industry.

There are about 17 rail crossing accidents a day — most involving freight trains — and five of Amtrak's seven fatal accidents this year involved trains colliding with vehicles at grade crossings.

Marine Memorial Planned

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A memorial park scheduled to take shape this month will be dedicated Oct. 21, the nearest Sunday to the first anniversary of the Beirut bombing that killed 262 U.S. soldiers.

"We thought it was time Jacksonville said, 'We appreciate you and we thank you' to the military community," said Jim Tyndall, vice chairman of the city's Beautification Commission. "By honoring those men, we are honoring all the servicemen, particularly the Marines and sailors in our community."

Tyndall said the terrorist bombing at U.S. headquarters in Beirut Oct. 23 resulted in the "most Marines killed anywhere in one day" since Iwo Jima was captured in 1945.

The park is being built on land donated by the Marine Corps next to Lejeune Boulevard at the entrance to Camp Johnson. The cost for its construction, the second phase of the Beirut Memorial project, is being funded through public donations.

"The idea for the park grew out of phase one, which was the planting of the trees along Lejeune Boulevard," Tyndall said.

One flowering Bradford pear tree, purchased with public donations, was planted Arbor Day for each man killed in Beirut and the three Marine pilots killed during the U.S. invasion of the island of Grenada.

Tyndall said enthusiasm to do more resulted in the park project, which includes two white granite walls, one inscribed with the names of the dead and another stating the reason for the park. It will also feature granite benches, a large patio for ceremonies, two flagpoles to be lighted at night and a life-size bronze statue of a Marine. The cost of the memorial is estimated at $100,000.

"We've had donations from every state in the nation," Tyndall said, "and have received a very good response from local banks, businesses, organizations and the Onslow Veterans Council."

Shipping Line

WILMINGTON (AP) — Atlantic Container Lines USA, the top shipping line crossing the North Atlantic, will start weekly calls to Wilmington in mid-September, said Joseph T. Kane, a spokesman for the company based in Birmingham, England, has announced.

The company's 10 vessels have been sailing between New York, Baltimore, Portsmouth, Va., and six European ports.

Student Protest

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — University students hurled rocks at buses in Santo Domingo in a protest this week against increased public transportation fares and a hike in the price of school books.

No injuries were reported but windows of several buses were shattered. Officials said the violence subsided after riot police moved into the university district.
