Storm Damages Five Trailers

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A strong, slow moving thunderstorm that crawled through western Pitt County late Thursday left one trailer destroyed, four others damaged and a Wilson County woman in critical condition from a lightning strike, county fire officials reported today.

Irma Hernandez, 24, remained in critical condition this morning at Pitt County Memorial Hospital after she was struck by lightning while standing under trees during Thursday's storm. Mrs. Hernandez, seven months pregnant, received first and second degree burns, according to a hospital spokesman.

Mrs. Hernandez was transported to Pitt County Memorial Hospital at approximately 6 p.m. Thursday by the Fountain Rescue Squad. She was reportedly standing under a group of pine trees when lightning struck the trees, then her, said a spokesman.

Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner of Pitt County said no one was injured but a trailer belonging to Pedro Wilkes was demolished when heavy winds struck Matthews Trailer Park on state road 1200 between Farmville and Greenville around 4:35 p.m.

"Five trailers were damaged, one was a total loss and the other four were moved off their foundations by the wind," Joyner said. "In addition, one house was damaged when a tree limb fell on the roof."

There was no evidence, Joyner said, that the damage was caused by a funnel cloud. The National Weather Service speculated that a downburst, a strong gust of wind created when very hot air meets very cool air, rocked the trailers.

"There was no sign of the twisting that you see with a tornado, it was just a very strong gust of wind," Joyner said. "The trailer that was totaled was in a west-east position and the wind turned it to a north-south position. It (the wind) picked it up and turned it one-quarter around."

The National Weather Service issued a severe thunderstorm warning for Pitt, Edgecombe and Greene counties around 5:05 p.m. Thursday, and reported a slow-moving storm with large hail and dangerous lightning was moving through western Pitt County in a south-southeasterly direction.

Greenville Utilities recorded .13 inch of rain from 7 a.m. Thursday-7 a.m. today, although an unofficial measurement of 2.7 inches was recorded in western Pitt County.

Agricultural officials said they had no reports of crop damage from the strong winds and hail, but noted they expected the winds had damaged the corn crop in areas.

Early-morning storms today brought relief from the 90-degree-plus temperatures that have gripped the area this week. By 11 a.m. the mercury reached only 78 degrees, although highs were predicted for the low to mid 90s.

A moist and unstable airmass remaining over the state threatens to spark afternoon and evening thunderstorms again Saturday, says the National Weather Service. As a low pressure system moves offshore, east to northeast winds will help lower daytime highs a bit into low 90s. Lows tonight will be in the 70s.

Nation's Wholesale Costs Climb Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, up for the first time in three months, rose a modest 0.3 percent in July as food costs posted their first increase since March, the government said today.

Still, wholesale prices for the year's first seven months gained at an annual rate of just 2.9 percent, well below analysts' earlier predictions of a gain from 4.5 percent to 5 percent for the full year.

Today's report, which noted that gasoline prices fell at their fastest clip in 15 months, was the latest in a series of signs that inflation is remaining at modest levels despite the economy's unexpected strength.

Robert Gough, economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said in advance of the report, "Inflation is very much under control."

In its new report, the Labor Department said food prices rose 1.4 percent, their steepest climb since January. Those prices had fallen 0.6

percent in June and 1.2 percent in May, the steepest drop in nearly two years.

Much of the blame for last month's food price hike went to a 15.1 percent gain in vegetable prices, which followed a 10.5 percent gain in June.

Potato prices alone were up 44.2 percent in July, said department analyst Craig Howell, as wholesalers further drew down last year's stocks at the same time new potatoes have yet to appear on the market.

Pork prices were up 8.3 percent, the result of shrinking supplies at a time of steady demand. Last year, farmers had sold off large numbers of pigs, driving prices down. With herds depleted, however, prices this summer are rising.

Offsetting the increase in food prices was an unusual 3.1 percent decline in gasoline prices, the second monthly fall.

Normally, gasoline is more expensive during the summer driving season.

But oil and gasoline prices have been falling since spring, in part because demand during the peak vacation months has not lived up to expectations and because, analysts believe, the OPEC nations have been producing more than a million barrels a day above their self-imposed limit of 17.5 million barrels.

The July gasoline price drop was the largest for a single month since March 1983.

In today's report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods, the official name for the wholesale price measure, the department revised its calculation for price activity in April from the previously reported no change to a 0.1 percent gain.

The index measures month-to-month changes in the prices paid to producers for food, energy products and other items. The prices consumers actually pay — usually to retailers — are measured by the Consumer Price Index.

TRAILER DEMOLISHED ... No injuries were reported when strong winds destroyed a trailer belonging to Pedro Wilkes at Matthews Trailer Park near Farmville Thursday and damaged four other trailers. Pitt County fire officials said there was no evidence that the damage was caused by a funnel cloud and the National Weather Service speculated that a downburst, a strong gust of wind created when very hot air meets cool air, rocked the trailers. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Council Delays Cable TV Rate Requests

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

City Council members voted Thursday to table Greenville Cable TV's requests for a change in the current ceiling on bulk rates and revision of the franchise ordinance governing submission of annual financial audits until further study could be done.

The council's reluctance to act on the matter without further study, City Attorney Larry Graham told franchise representatives present at the meeting, stems from past problems with the cable company. "When the council and city manager requested specific information on the rate increase initially requested in April of 1982, the information was not given and the request was withdrawn. This made the city manager and City Council curious, because now you're saying we'll give you what you want when you want it."

"So why wasn't the information requested by the City Council, which sits as your rate board, made available? In a sense they're reflecting on what has occurred in the past."

Greenville Cable TV General Manager John Pait, one of three franchise representatives attending the meeting, told the council that he was not aware of those past problems and that he felt the cable franchise should not be "chastized for actions of the former owners and management."

"Why they did not get back to the city I have no idea. Perhaps it had something to do with the transfer to Multimedia and the changeover in management from Tar River Communications."

Multimedia, a corporate structure that holds interests in newspapers, broadcasting companies and production companies in addition to cable interests, has been purchasing stock in Greenville's cable franchise for the past three years. Multimedia now holds 80 percent of Greenville Cable TV's stock.

Pait said that Greenville Cable TV's request for deletion of the ordinance that requires the cable company to submit a full financial audit annually is based on Multimedia's interest in the local cable franchise. He told council members that while Multimedia is audited annually, each individual holding of the company will no longer receive independent financial audits. "To require an audit would therefore incur an additional expense for the company that could be better used elsewhere," he said.

He added that, in lieu of the yearly audit, Greenville Cable would be willing to give the city any information it feels it needs. "We would be glad to give you a profit-loss statement or anything else you require, but we feel a statement of revenue would initially suffice," Pait said.

Cable's request to raise the ceiling on current bulk rates charged to operators of multifamily dwelling complexes, Pait said, is based on economics. "We can't come out ahead when we're having to pay out 1984 prices for installation and service and are receiving 1982 prices in payment," he explained.

Cable's bulk rate request would entail raising the ceiling rate from $3.75 to $8.35. However, Pait told the council that raising the ceiling would not affect existing contracts, most of which run through 1986 and 1987. The $8.35 rate would not be static, however. According to Pait, the $8.35 ceiling figure, which is based on basic individual rates for cable, would fluctuate along with basic rates.

Should the council elect to approve the rate change, Pait said the cable company would apply it "fairly and equitably."

"All we want to do is be able to compete on a free and open market so that working with the complexes is not a losing prospect for us."

Pait said that raising the ceiling would enable the cable company to offer rates according to the size of housing complexes. "We're not going to go to $8.35 a line."

Marijuana Found In Car

Greenville police arrested two people on drug possession charges after finding 14 pounds of marijuana and a quantity of capsules in a car stopped for a traffic check on Memorial Drive, at Glenwood Avenue intersection, about 2:40 p.m. Thursday.

Officer D.R. Best said a car driven by Rebecca Saulter Davenport, 27, of Route 1, Greenville, was stopped by police identification officer supervisor D.P. Bundy when Bundy observed the vehicle being driven in an erratic manner.

Best, who responded to a call for assistance, said investigation led to the discovery of a .357 caliber pistol in the vehicle and 14 one-pound bags of marijuana and a set of scales in the trunk of the car.

According to Best, Mrs. Davenport was charged with driving while impaired, careless and reckless driving, carrying a concealed weapon, and possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana.

A passenger in the car, William Ray Sutton, 28, of Route 4, Greenville, was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver ethchlorvynol (Placidyl), when a bottle containing 52 capsules of the drug was discovered in his possession, Best said.

The officer said the value of the marijuana confiscated would range between $12,000 and $19,000, depending on the quality.

Both Mrs. Davenport and Sutton were placed under a $10,000 bond each pending a court hearing.

Police Say Fires Were Set

Greenville police said this morning that a fire at JB's variety shop and game room on West Fifth Street Thursday, and a pre-dawn fire at 1202 Hillside Drive Wednesday, were intentionally set.

Detective Pete Lavin said the 5:13 a.m. fire which caused heavy damage to the variety shop and game room at 911 W. Fifth St. "had several points of origin ... several internal fires" leading to "the obvious conclusion as being a set fire."

He said local investigators and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation also found "a strong odor of kerosene or some fuel" which was used to speed the blaze.

Lavin described the 3:03 a.m. fire Wednesday at the 1202 Hillside Drive home of James W. Lee as "a set fire also."

The detective said there was "evidence of a break-in found at the residence." Several items, including some jewelry, were taken from the Lee home, and officers feel "the fire was used to cover the break-in, or the break-in was of a malicious nature," Lavin explained.

The fire at the house, Lavin said, had "two sources of ignition ... the kitchen range and a toaster oven," and was "similar" to an incident at Hooker Memorial Christian Church at 1111 Greenville Blvd., which was reported at 8:16 a.m. Wednesday.

A recreation building at the church was entered, a microphone and some keys were taken, and a gas range was turned on, but no fire resulted.

"We do not feel there is any reason to suspect arson" in connection with a fire that destroyed a building at Cox Armature Works, at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Ione Street, early Wednesday, Lavin emphasized.

He said investigators are "looking at an electric plug and wall socket" in connection with the cause of the Cox fire.

Council Refuses To Change Sales Ban On Sundays

The Greenville City Council took heed of what council members said was the public consensus and voted to leave the Sunday sales limitations as they stand during its regular monthly meeting Thursday.

"I felt it was the consensus of those who attended the public hearing that we leave the law as it is and I respect that," Councilman Louis Clark told those present at the meeting.

Mayor Pro-tem Ed Carter said that even though he would vote in favor of retaining the Blue Law, that he wanted to go on record as opposing governmental interference in matters of this kind. "I feel the public had the opportunity to express itself, but I personally do not believe that government should be in the business of telling people what to sell and not sell on Sundays," Carter added that he was also not in favor of using one policeman to make sure that the law is enforced.

In other business, the council approved the appointment of Mrs. Sydney S. Womack to a second term on the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission and unanimously passed the following zoning proposals:

- A request by J.F. Arthur Jr. and Louis C. Arthur to rezone approximately 1.47 acres located on the southwest corner of Evans and Arthur streets from highway commercial to high density residential. The petitioners propose to erect a church on the property. Councilman Louis Clark declined to vote on the matter because of his involvement.

- A request by Northrup King to rezone approximately .39 acres located on the northern side of Ficklen Street from downtown commercial fringe to unoffensive industry to allow for expansion of the company's existing facility.

- A request by Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. to rezone approximately 761 acres located 150 feet from the intersection of Warren and Third streets, with frontage along proposed Third Street and unopened First Street, from residential agricultural to high density residential to allow for the development of a retirement center.

Charles Chamberlain of East Third Street told the council that homeowners with land near the proposed retirement center could think "of no better neighbor," but expressed concern that the Methodist Retirement Center would not be able to secure a special use permit from the board of adjustments.

ing to price ourselves out of the market; negotiations with developers and apartment complex operators would keep that from happening. They're not going to let us get away with unfair prices, but this way we could be able to make different contracts with large versus very small, say three- to four-unit, complexes."

Cable programming also came under fire at the council meeting by local cable users Dr. Charles Moore and Harry Kane. Both Moore and Kane expressed some concern over rate and programming differences between Greenville and surrounding cities, particularly the recent drop of the arts-entertainment channel.

Pait said arts-entertainment was dropped because of unreasonable demands of programmers. He said arts-entertainment marketers are now requesting a $10,000 purchase price instead of offering the cable option free as had been past policy. "We're now talking about getting it back and are negotiating a contract with them, but they're not willing to come off their price and we're not willing to give up our stance either. We've bent over backwards for them and they haven't done anything for us," Pait explained.

Pait said Greenville Cable is also considering the addition of five to six new channels, one of which will probably be the Disney channel.

He explained that the reason cities like Tarboro have more options and did not lose some of the channels Greenville has dropped in past years is because FCC regulations governing small operations are more lenient. "Current FCC regulations penalize the larger systems. For instance, if you have a certain amount of revenue, over $250,000 gross, then you have to pay a larger rate.

"We don't feel that our subscribers would stand for the rate increase that would be necessary to charge if we had everything everyone else has. It is an unfair ruling in my opinion, but the FCC is now looking at it and thinking about the possibility of lessening those rules so the larger systems will not be penalized so harshly. It may be sometime, however, before any action is taken, but at least they're working on it," Pait said.

therefore possibly opening up the rezoned land for multifamily dwellings.

Council members Clark and Stuart Shinn told Chamberlain that they could not assure him what the adjustment board would do, but were hoping that the center would get the go ahead.

In final zoning matters, the board amended the medical arts ordinance to allow for business and professional offices.

In closing single action, the council approved the following consent agenda items:

- A resolution of council's intent to close a portion of John Avenue and to schedule a public hearing on the matter.

- A recommendation by the traffic commission to convert traffic on Summit Street from one-way to two-way with stop signs at both Fourth and Fifth streets and to remove parking on the north side of Fourth Street, 135 feet west of the center line of Summit Street and 85 feet to the east.

- A request to erect "no parking anytime-towing enforced" signs in front of 606 and 608 Bonners Lane.

- A resolution authorizing the city manager to exercise administrative powers on housing rehabilitation documents not to exceed $35,000 under certain stipulations.

- A resolution authorizing the sale of Disposal Parcels 50F-3, 50F-4 and 50F-5 in the south Evans community development project to Phillip K. Flowers.

- An ordinance amending the 1983-84 Greenville Utilities Commission budget ordinance.

- Consideration of an agreement with Seaboard System Railroad for Greenville Utilities to construct and maintain an overhead electric wire on railroad property, and a resolution authorizing the Mayor to execute said agreement.

- Consideration of contract for services with the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Greenville Museum of Art, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council and America's 400th Committee.

Televisions Taken

Greenville police are investigating the theft of television sets from two homes Thursday.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said a television valued at $1,400 was taken from 301 Church St., according to a report filed at 9 p.m.

A set valued at $450 was stolen from 1203B Glen Arthur Ave., Officer R.S. Sawyer said. The theft, according to Sawyer, was reported at 8:50 p.m.

NCACC Award

Margaret Roberts, finance officer for Pitt County, has been honored as the Outstanding County Finance Officer for 1984 by the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners. She received the award at the NCACC's annual conference under way through Sunday in Asheville.

Mrs. Roberts began her career with Pitt County 22 years ago, serving first as bookkeeper, then county auditor and clerk to the board. She was promoted to finance officer in 1978.

A graduate of Bakers Business College, she has attended Pitt Community College and the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

Chapter Meeting

The Pitt County chapter of the Winston-Salem Alumni Association will meet Sunday at 3 p.m. at the home of Eleanor O'Neal, 521 Greenfield Blvd.

Reunion Planning

Gaston Monk will host the next planning committee meeting for the Monk family reunion Sunday at 6 p.m. For further information call 752-1996 or 757-0549.

Perkins At Meeting

J. Vance Perkins of Greenville is attending the 77th annual conference of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners in Asheville. The activities began Thursday and will end with a banquet and dance Saturday night.

Perkins and other past presidents of the association will be honored at a reception prior to the closing banquet.

Perkins, 83, was a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners for 24 years — from 1946 to 1950 and from 1954 until 1974 — and in 1959 was the first Pitt commissioner ever to serve as president of the state association.

R.L. "Bob" Martin of Bethel, present chairman of the Pitt board, served as president of the state organization several years ago and is presently a member of the board of directors of the National Association of County Officials.

Toastmasters Met

Carol Lunney, president of the Greenville Toastmasters, said that Peg Rosett was judged the "Best Speaker" at this week's meeting. The "Best Evaluator" was Fallon Melvin and Janie Martin won the "Table Topics" award. Pat Flanagan presided as toastmaster of the evening.

For more information on the organization contact Ms. Lunney at 746-4793, or Steve Martin, educational vice president, at 752-5935.

Family Gathering

The fourth annual Joyner-Forbes-Summerell family reunion will be held this weekend.

A family banquet is scheduled for Saturday at 6 p.m. at the Batchelor Benedict Club. Sunday at 11 a.m., the family will worship at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. At 5 p.m. Sunday, a family picnic will be held at South Greenville park.

Break-In Averted

An attempted break-in Thursday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brody, 110 Christenbury Drive in Brook Valley, failed when the home's burglar alarm apparently deterred the intruders, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

No entry was gained in the incident, Tyson said.

The sheriff said $25 damage was reported to the back door of the home.

MASONIC NOTICE

Winterville Masonic Lodge No. 232 will hold a communication at 8 p.m. today at the Masonic Hall.

Sipping Time

These hot sultry days between early July and late September are known as dog days. Sometimes we suspect the title is partly attributed to Fido wandering around with a sort of dazed expression; but, factually, it's because the Dog Star (Sirius, not Lassie) is rising just before the sun.

We have known higher temperature readings than those now experienced in eastern Carolina; but there must be a sort of coming-together of heat and humidity to a new apex for the discomfort level.

One spectator sport ... watching the young-in-mind-and-body crowd jog or briskly walk their prescribed distances ... has seen some recent decline. Perhaps their ranks have been thinned by travel to vacation haunts where their custom is routine du jour.

It is not a good season for serious thought nor prolonged exertion by true adults unless protected from nature's uncertain blessings with fans or that ultimate self-gift to humanity: air conditioning (which makes many things possible).

School-age children have reason to be thankful they are now free of classroom confinement. Oddly, the temperatures do not seem to affect their gathering with cap, ball, bat and glove to join in the Great American Game; or engaged in strife beneath a netted basket trying to (a) throw a ball through a hoop or (b) trying to prevent others from throwing a ball through a hoop.

At this time each year we vow there will be no complaints over winter's coldest blasts; but each year the vow is forgotten and summer's warmth is only remembered with longing.

A final point: frequent reminders to assure pets have plenty of water to endure the season are wearing thin. People, too, should be admonished to sip more liquids. So while others have advised you to be concerned about pets we venture a step further and express concern for you. Do more sipping.

Feel better?

Back Again

This month is being widely noted as an anniversary of historic proportions. Ten years ago a president resigned in disgrace. It had never happened before, hopefully it will never happen again.

It scarred Americans.

Oddly (to most of us), governments and the press of much older nations appeared far less critical of President Richard Nixon than were the people he served.

Save for his big misstep in trying to cover up the White House role in a politically inspired break-in, he had been enjoying a relatively successful presidency with a prospering national economy, successes in foreign policy (of which opening the China door was among the highlights), and the country was pretty much at peace with itself.

True, there was no great public affection for the man himself; but that might have been attributable to a poorly disguised lack of warmth toward the faceless audiences he was compelled to meet.

In recent months Nixon has re-emerged from isolation, inspiring certain admiration as a qualified authority on aspects of politics, foreign affairs and economic policies. He has weaknesses, he also has strengths. His insights could prove a welcome asset.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — With trees yielding peaches and nectarines, and horses and dogs frolicking freely, it's not hard to understand the intense attraction President Reagan feels for his ranch.

From the century-old white adobe ranch house, a panorama of clouds and layers of mountains rippling out over the horizon is visible for miles.

Twice in the last week, a small pool of reporters, photographers and a television camera crew got a glimpse of the impressive vista from the ranch 2,500 feet up in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

While waiting for Vice President

WASHINGTON — The Blooper Gizmo Corp. of Silicon Valley, Calif., one of the hottest new companies in the software field, has gone public with a million dollars in common stock available at $25 a share. This brilliantly managed firm is headed for the big time. Its price per share should triple within a year.

OK? Let us suppose that I had written that paragraph as a columnist for Universal Press Syndicate, and that (this paper) had published it. We would have been perfectly within the law in offering such dubious financial advice, for presumably I am a "bona fide" newspaperman writing for a bona fide syndicate that sells my stuff to a bona fide newspaper.

But if I had offered that identical advice in my own little financial newsletter, and if I had not obtained a license from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), I would be in deep trouble. A publication called Stock Market Magazine is in deep trouble now. The story is disturbing to those of us who believe that the Constitution means what it says when it says that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of the press. If the law that gives the SEC life-or-death power over financial newsletters is not a law abridging freedom of the press, it would be hard to imagine a statute that could be so described.

These are the facts. Stock Market Magazine is a 36-page monthly magazine that has been published regularly for the past 22 years by Wall Street Publishing Institute Inc. It has a circulation of 12,000 subscribers. The magazine is aimed at small investors. A survey found that 70 percent of its readers own more than $15,000 and 44 percent own more than $25,000 in securities. Virtually all readers own at least some common stock. The magazine offers feature articles, columns and other material dealing with investments.

This is what the law says. Under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, it is unlawful for any person to engage in the business of advising others "either directly or through publications or writing" as to the value of securities unless that person registers with the SEC as an investment adviser. The act exempts "any bona fide newspaper, news magazine or business or financial publication of general and regular circulation."

Neither the publisher nor any of the editors of Stock Market Magazine is so registered with the SEC. Last year the SEC brought suit in U.S. District Court here in Washington against the magazine. On July 12 District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. ordered the magazine shut down. His conclusion was that Stock Market Magazine is not "bona fide."

Evidence before the court indicated that many of the articles in the magazine were mere puffs from public relations counselors. Featured companies purchased advertising space; they also purchased reprints of favorable articles about them. The magazine's masthead boasts that its articles "are based on thorough research and first-hand interviews with company officials, economists, security analysts, tax accountants and other experts," but Judge Robinson found those assertions "false and misleading" and thus tantamount to "fraud" under the law. He issued a permanent injunction against the publication.

The decision troubles me. Let us assume that the magazine's editor and publisher were guilty of all the practices described in Judge Robinson's 48-page opinion. Their columns were for hire, their articles were public relations plants, and their rule was a nice little quid pro quo: We carry a piece touting your stock, and you buy an ad and a bunch of reprints from us.

I can't defend that sort of thing. But neither can I go along with the idea that an agency of the federal government has power to prevent anyone from giving advice in print about anything, and doing this for compensation. What is so different about buying stocks and bonds that makes investment advice so special? Evidently the subscribers to Stock Market Magazine were satisfied; no publication could stay in business for 22 years without providing something that readers regarded as worthwhile.

I don't want bureaucrats or judges employing so subjective a measure as "good faith" to determine who can write about stocks. A columnist's advice to buy Blooper Gizmo at $25 may be lousy advice, but in a free country a columnist has every right to give such advice, and you have every right to take it or leave it.

Burns Objects To Platform Proposal

WASHINGTON — When he learned that a Republican Platform draft advocated a return to the gold standard and attacked the Federal Reserve Board, U.S. Ambassador Arthur Burns in West Germany placed a trans-Atlantic telephone protest call to the Platform Committee staff.

Burns, a former Federal Reserve chairman, angrily protested the platform's "Fed-bashing." He threatened to mobilize former Republican Treasury secretaries and Fed governors to renounce the party platform if it retained its present form.

The ambassador was told his views would be taken into consideration and that the language would be softened, but Burns was not entirely satisfied. He telephoned Sen. John Tower of Texas, the 1980 Republican platform chairman but not a member of the committee this year, to keep an eye on wild ideas being written into the platform.

Republican National Convention managers are so concerned about the oratorical deficiencies of the White House-selected keynote speaker, U.S. Treasurer Katherine Ortega, that they have trimmed her scheduled speaking time to an unprecedented short 12 minutes.

Ortega was hurriedly selected as keynoter earlier this year by Michael K. Deaver, President Reagan's deputy chief of staff, and given instructions to polish her speaking style. That cut off a campaign by conservative Republican congressmen boosting United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick for the speaking role.

Besides being limited to 12 minutes, Ms. Ortega will be compared with the eloquent ambassador. Although still a registered Democrat, Ambassador Kirkpatrick last week quietly was shifted from the nondescript Tuesday night convention schedule. She was given a speaking slot on the convention's opening night — the same session as

Ms. Ortega's keynote — to satisfy conservative demands.

Sen. Charles H. Percy abruptly backed down from a plea to fellow Republican senators to save his Senate Foreign Relations Committee from becoming "irrelevant" when he was warned he might be in danger in his difficult Illinois re-election campaign.

Percy appealed to a closed-door Republican strategy session Wednesday for the Senate to take up the foreign aid bill approved by his committee. But Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that controls actual foreign aid money, shot back with this warning: The foreign aid bill will only hurt you for re-election.

To the surprise of fellow senators, Percy quickly changed his mind — apparently considering a fourth term in the Senate more "relevant" than the Foreign Relations Committee's clout. Agreeing with Kasten, Percy asked Kasten to join in getting Majority Leader Howard Baker to pull the bill off the calendar. A pleased Kasten praised Percy's suggestion, and they proceeded together to Baker's office.

President Reagan's political managers are plotting an unprecedented campaign schedule that would get him to the Republican National Convention in Dallas two days late, on Aug. 22, after touring Iowa, Ohio, Missouri and possibly Michigan.

Reagan will spend the pre-convention weekend at his Camp David retreat, starting his two-day campaign from there. His political strategists want him to keep the pressure on the fast-starting Democrats, who plan three days a week of Mondale-Ferraro campaigning during August.

The president's Midwest schedule is not yet totally firmed up, especially when it comes to Michigan. With automobile production triggering a major recovery, Republican strategists have wanted a Reagan visit there to court the blue-collar vote. But that enthusiasm has ebbed following the president's unprogrammed call for restraint by the United Auto Workers in current wage negotiations.

The reason the Rev. Jesse Jackson's rousing speech was neither preceded nor followed by the usual rousing music was 11th-hour intervention by the convention's management, controlled by Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt.

Life Takes Quiet Pace On Reagan Ranch

Reagan makes headstones to mark the graves of family pets.

Like Reagan, the agents who guard him at the ranch wear casual clothes, including blue jeans. So it was easy to tell that Bush had finally arrived when two carloads of men in dark suits arrived at the trailer from the helipad.

As reporters were escorted several hundred yards down a winding, gravel road to the president's relatively modest ranch house — 1500 square feet before a recent addition — a white horse appeared out of nowhere, as if to lead the way.

The horse darted playfully down the path, reached a patch of grass and promptly fell on his back and began to roll around.

A few feet away, Reagan and Bush walked out the back door of the house, headed toward a small lake, returned to pose for pictures, and finally sat down at a table under a red tile canopy for a turkey and macaroni salad lunch.

Nancy Reagan, who was caught during a similar picture-taking session last week mulling to her husband the answer to a reporter's question, stayed indoors.

Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary, said she took the incident in good humor, though. "She said after this when she's talking to herself she's going to have to be quiet," Speakes reported. Since she doesn't enjoy performing ranch chores, the first lady has always spent a fair amount of her time here talking on the telephone.

Reagan, who enjoys ranch chores very much, doesn't seem to mind.

Strength For Today

About a year ago a community was brushed by a passing hurricane. Not many houses were damaged, but there was a considerable loss of trees.

After the storm was over, anyone looking at the debris could see that most of the trees which had been downed and the limbs that had been snapped off were already weak inside. Some were rotted. Others were completely hollow at the center.

Most of these trees and branches had looked strong and healthy from the outside in normal weather. But when the really strong winds blew, the true inside weakness was revealed.

It sometimes takes the strong winds of life to reveal the true strength of people as well as of trees. The secret of strong character is religious faith. Without faith man is no more than a hollow tree, ready to be snapped off when the first big guest come. With faith, he can endure anything.

Chinese One-Child Population Policy Is Temporary Plan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Chinese delegates to a U.N. conference on population problems are defending their nation's strict family planning program, saying it does not rely on abortion and that its one-child policy will end when the baby boom does.

"In order to develop our country's economy, to realize the targets...by the end of the century and keep our population to 1.2 billion, we had to choose to encourage one child per couple," Shen Guoxiang, spokesman for the delegation, told a news conference Thursday.

The delegates said the population growth rate of China, the world's most populous country, has gone down from 2.1 percent to 1.2 percent since 1973.

U.N. statistics put China's population at nearly 1.1 billion now. In 1973 it was 892 million.

The one-child policy, Shen said, "is only a response to the expected baby boom...and we think it will last about 20 or 30 years."

Under the one-child policy, which China began in 1979, couples who commit themselves to having only one child receive special health care allowances, preference in admission of the child to schools, better access to medical services, jobs, urban housing and rural property. Mothers get longer maternity leaves with full pay and without jeopardizing possibility for promotion, a delegation statement said.

Having two children is acceptable if each spouse had been an only child and for fishermen and couples in rural areas whose first baby is a girl, Shen said. The latter allowance is based on the idea that rural couples could have a second child in hopes it is a boy, who would help with manual labor when he gets older.

Shen said 21.2 percent of married couples where the woman is of reproductive age have one child.

Wu Chieh-Ping, a urologist who is president of the Chinese Academy of Medical Sciences and among the 27-member delegation, said that if an urban woman who has a child gets pregnant, "workers talk with her, try to give her the understanding of what would be the eventuality for the country if everyone did that."

"We stress they must try every way to use contraception," Wu said in an interview. If women become pregnant with a second child, they are encouraged to have an abortion, he said.

Some Western press reports the past year "said China relies on coercion to implement the family planning program," Shen said. He said the reports are "not true."

"I would like to clear up that China does not rely on abortion to implement its family planning program," he said. He said the number of abortions "is not actually great," but provided no figures.

The U.S. delegation at the U.N. Conference on International Population outlined a Reagan administration policy banning aid to private family planning programs that perform or promote abortion in other countries.

China receives no direct U.S. family planning aid.

Wu noted that figures quoted by Sheldon Segal of the Rockefeller Foundation in New York show that about 27 percent of all pregnancies in China as well as in the United States are aborted.

Wu said he could not deny reports that the one-child policy has led couples to kill baby girls so they can try again for a boy but said "this would be a criminal action."

Sterilization is being encouraged, Shen said.

In his address to the conference, Chinese delegation chairman Wang Wei said his government is committed to expanding the economy while holding down the population "so that the people may be comparatively well-off, both materially and culturally."

About 3,000 government delegates, representatives of private organizations and demographers are at the week-long conference. About 140 nations are represented.

The conference on Thursday tried to resolve differences on two topics not directly part of its business — disarmament and, in clear reference to Israel, building settlements in occupied territory.

The United States objects to including recommendations on disarmament and settlement policies into the documents to be issued at the end of conference.

Algeria, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Tunisia have proposed that the recommendation mention "Israeli occupation of Palestine and Arab lands."

Four Hijack Victims Stay

ROME (AP) — Four men who missed a Thursday night flight returning 284 passengers of a hijacked Iranian jet to Tehran want to stay in Italy and plan to ask the United Nations for help, an Italian legislator said today.

Two Iranian teen-agers were arrested for the hijacking of the plane, filled mostly with Iranians on their way to the Saudi Arabian holy cities of Mecca and Medina for a Moslem pilgrimage.

The teen-agers freed the hostages and surrendered Wednesday, but there were newspaper reports suggesting that other passengers may have provided some support.

"There were only two hijackers as far as we know," a police official who asked not to be identified told The Associated Press.

Police have been searching for the four missing passengers for questioning but an official said they have not been located.

Four other people stayed behind for medical reasons. One of them was a 4-month-old baby who underwent life-saving heart surgery in Rome and was reported to be doing well today.

Deputy Mario Capanna, a member of the left-wing Democratic Proletariat Party, told The Associated Press that the four missing men will seek aid from the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Capanna said the men did not want to return to their homeland, but the legislator gave no reason.

Capanna had gone to the airport Thursday night to make sure that all the 284 people scheduled to take the flight back to Tehran were returning of their own free will.

He told reporters at the airport that the four missing passengers were "guests of friends in Ostia," a coastal town 15 miles southwest of Rome.

A U.N. official declined to comment on Capanna's statement.

"Seeking political asylum is an extremely confidential matter. Therefore I will not discuss this report," Usamah Kadry, the Iraqi head of the U.N. Refugee office in Rome, told The Associated Press.

Doctors at Rome's Baby Jesus Hospital said the operation on Nafiseh Parham was conducted Thursday afternoon and was technically successful.

U.S., Mideastern Leaders Trading Blame For Mines

By The Associated Press
Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini complained that, "Whatever happens, they blame us," and a U.S. official said Iran and Libya are considered prime suspects in a Red Sea mine-laying operation.

The Reagan administration is not making any public accusations until the U.S. Navy investigates explosions that have damaged at least 13 ships in the Red Sea and the Suez Canal in the past two weeks.

But a U.S. government official in Washington, who declined to be identified, said Thursday that Iran and Libya, both with radical Islamic regimes, are "the logical candidates" for suspicion because they are angry at Egypt for signing a peace treaty with Israel and they "want to upset the status quo."

The official Libyan news agency JANA said today that the United States had planted the bombs. It did not elaborate.

The United States is sending minesweeping helicopters to Red Sea and Britain also announced it is sending four minesweepers to help in the operations. Both countries said the equipment would be in place in the area next week to search for the cause of the explosions.

Three French naval vessels, two minesweepers and a support ship, have left the port of Toulon to participate in de-mining operations, Defense Ministry sources in Paris said today. The Foreign Ministry said the ships were sent at the request of Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

France also has naval vessels and 3,500 troops in its former territory of Djibouti, at the entrance to the Red Sea.

Egypt has said that its own minesweeping operations have guaranteed the safety of the 100-mile Suez Canal and the Gulf of Suez, but President Hosni Mubarak asked for help in making sure the entire Red Sea is navigable.

A U.S. Navy survey ship has been in the Gulf of Suez since last week, helping search for mines and serving as a base for 15 American experts.

But until mines or other explosive devices are found and examined, the U.S. official said the United States — like Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Britain and other affected nations — is not prepared to make an official accusation.

Part of the doubt arises from an Iranian about-face this week.

On Tuesday, Iran's state radio praised the attacks and attributed them to an Islamic, anti-Western extremist group.

However, on Thursday, Khomeini was quoted by the official news agency IRNA as criticizing the radio reports because they made Iran look bad.

"Any corrupt action which takes (place) in the world, (they say) Iranians and the Iranian government have a hand in it," Khomeini was quoted as saying.

"Look and see what a problem we have. Whatever happens, they blame us," he was quoted as saying.

"How could we support something which is against world feelings, against Islam and against reason?" Khomeini's statement said. "Mining someplace means an innocent group would be annihilated. How could Iran permit this?"

There have been no explosions in the past few days as hundreds of thousands of Moslems make their annual pilgrimages to Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia. Many of them travel by ship through the Red Sea.

Egyptian sources said Thursday that the Cairo government would provide military escorts 25,000 pilgrims sailing across the Red Sea from Egypt to the Arabian holy cities.

Egypt's Defense Minister Abdel-Halim Abu-Ghazala said Monday that his forces were boarding and searching suspect ships from two countries as they passed through the Suez Canal and other Egyptian waters. But the Egyptians refused to say which two countries' ships were being checked.

It was an Iranian official — Prime Minister Hussein Musavi — who revealed that two of the Islamic republic's ships had been boarded in the Suez Canal.

Last week anonymous callers told news agencies in London that the extremist Islamic Jihad planted at least 190 mines in the sea.

That organization also claimed responsibility for the suicide truck-bomb attack on U.S. Marines in Lebanon last October.

Tehran radio praised the mine attacks Tuesday, but the Iranian Foreign Ministry contradicted the official radio report Wednesday and said the mining was a U.S. and Israeli plot to defame Iran. On Thursday, a Pentagon spokesman dismissed that charge as "preposterous."

In Cairo, a leading Egyptian newspaper editor who is a confidant of Mubarak today said circumstantial evidence makes him conclude that either Iran or Libya is responsible for the mining of the Red Sea.

Ibrahim Nafeh, editor-in-chief of the semi-official Al-Ahram, in an editorial, did not cite material evidence. Among the circumstances he said "narrowed suspicion to Iran and Libya alone" were "statements by (Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi) Rafsanjani on June 29 in which he threatened to attack Red Sea oil installations."

Soviets Abandon Supersonic Jet

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has halted development of the supersonic TU-144 jet, a model of which exploded and crashed at a Paris air show 11 years ago, a senior official of the Soviet airline Aeroflot says.

Nikolai K. Poluyanchik, director-general of the airline's international department, confirmed the move Thursday as a press conference commemorating the 25th anniversary of the opening of Sheremetyevo International Airport. The sleek, needle-nosed TU-144 prototype, a star attraction of the Bourget air show in June 1973, killed 13 people and injured dozens when it exploded in the air before horrified spectators. A year-long inquiry by French and Soviet aeronautics experts failed to pinpoint the cause of the accident.

The supersonic TU-144 jet went into service on Nov. 1, 1977, with much official fanfare, but was later grounded and said to be under further development. The Soviets have not released any figures on the costs of the plane, but they are believed to have run in the billions of dollars.

Protest Growing In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Thousands of people held candlelight marches, sang peace songs and chanted anti-government slogans during nationwide demonstrations called by Chile's Roman Catholic cardinal and other critics of military repression.

Riot police, goaded by a few dozen rock-throwing youths at the largest gathering, surrounded Santiago's downtown Plaza de Armas as the last of 10,000 people were leaving Thursday night and attacked with clubs, tear gas, dogs and water cannons. Most of the candles left behind were snuffed out.

Police reported 30 arrests, and Chile's two main human rights groups said 21 people arrived at their headquarters for treatment of asphyxiation, bruises and fractures. Two beating victims were hospitalized with head wounds.

President Augusto Pinochet's military government, which came to power in a bloody 1973 coup, had warned that Marxists would use the day's events to incite riots like those that have killed more than 100 people in opposition-led street protests over the past 15 months. Most of the victims have been unarmed demonstrators but they also include 15 policemen and army officers.

However, Thursday's "Defense of Life" demonstrations, which drew bishops, prominent politicians and labor leaders to Roman Catholic cathedrals in more than a dozen cities, were largely peaceful and carefully organized to minimize provocation.

There were minor clashes with police in Concepcion and La Serena but no reported arrests.

Government officials volunteered no comment afterward, and the government press office said it had no statement on the demonstrations.

Jorge Molina, coordinator of the Santiago march, said the large, disciplined turnout would show Pinochet and his divided political opposition that "a majority of Chileans agree on the need for unified pressure to end violence and recover our basic liberties."

Evening processions in Santiago and Concepcion, where 4,000 people marched, were among the largest in Pinochet's 11 years of rule. They included chants calling for his downfall and a return to democracy.

Waving banners denouncing torture, forced exile and other punishment, the marchers tossed flowers as they passed in front of Santiago's 425-year-old Metropolitan Cathedral. Some carried photographs of loved ones who disappeared after being arrested.

A woman dropped seven red carnations at the cathedral doors and said they were from her and six relatives who voted "yes" in a 1980 referendum that extended Pinochet's presidency until at least the end of this decade.

"We feel ashamed," said the woman. "We've seen too much violence and suffering in these years. We want our votes back."

Transplant Baby Has Bad Kidney

LONDON (AP) — Three-week-old Hollie Roffey remained in critical condition today with a kidney malfunction, her second serious setback since becoming the world's youngest heart transplant patient 11 days ago.

"She is still critical. Her condition hasn't changed from Thursday night," said a nursing supervisor at the National Heart Hospital, who in accordance with British practice declined to be named.

The chief hospital administrator, Tom Cosgrove, said Thursday night that although Hollie's condition was critical, doctors expected the infant to pull through despite the latest complication.

Hollie was born July 20 and it was subsequently discovered the left side of her heart was missing.

On July 30 she was given the heart of a 3-day-old Dutch baby born with brain damage. The operation was performed by a team led by Egyptian-born heart surgeon Magdi Yacoub.

On Aug. 1, Hollie underwent an operation to seal a perforated intestine. The intestine trouble was unrelated to the transplant.

After that, she was reported making slight improvements daily until the kidney problem developed last Wednesday, forcing her to undergo dialysis.

Cosgrove said she lost an unspecified amount of blood Wednesday during a biopsy to determine if her body was accepting the heart. The operation, which involved removing a tissue fragment from the heart, revealed no sign of rejection. But Cosgrove said the kidneys, which clean the blood, "began to close down" when blood was lost.

Hollie was not put on a kidney machine, but received peritoneal dialysis, whereby fluid is inserted into the kidneys with a tube, Cosgrove said.

Severely Depressed Seldom Recover

CHICAGO (AP) — Contrary to prevailing belief, sufferers of major depression may lack the ability to rebound from severe episodes and to return to their former level of well-being, researchers reported today.

Up to 20 percent of patients with severe depression at major university medical centers were no better even two years after seeking treatment, the researchers wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Patients who recovered at the highest rates were those receiving treatment three months or less after their depression began, the study said. Chances for recovery worsened the longer the subject had been depressed.

The researchers said they were surprised to find that married patients had significantly lower rates of recovery than patients who had never married or were widowed or divorced.

"The clinical wisdom and teaching — and what most general practitioners have thought — is that depression is more self-limited," Dr. Martin B. Keller, the lead researcher and a psychiatrist at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

The public is probably unaware that "the most widespread psychiatric disorder" in the United States can be so chronic, Keller said.

An estimated 4 percent of the population — 9 million people — suffer from major depression at any time, Keller said. Twenty percent to 26 percent of all women and 8 percent to 12 percent of all men will be afflicted during their lives, he said.

"The point we want to make is that it's very important to try to prevent these disorders from becoming chronic," Keller said.

"If (a person's own) early efforts are not successful, he should certainly seek professional help. If initial efforts with a professional don't help, the message is, 'Don't give up.'"

Keller said the researchers were surprised that married patients recovered less often than unmarried patients.

"We don't really understand it. The (unmarried) people ... appear more likely to become depressed than people who are married," he said. "But those people who are depressed who already are married seem to do worse."

Researchers are now exploring whether the quality of marriage relationships has any effect on recovery rates, he said.

The researchers studied 97 patients who had sought treatment at university medical centers and who never before had long-term or intermittent depressions. Three-fourths of the subjects required hospitalization. All are among 1,000 patients whose depression Keller and his colleagues are tracking over a five-year period.

"We want to be sure that people don't generalize from these findings and end up thinking that we're saying 20 percent of anybody who ever becomes depressed is likely to stay chronically ill for two years," said Keller.

He emphasized that the study's subjects were diagnosed as having depression according to the stricter of two sets of criteria commonly used.

The person must have had a depressed mood for at least two weeks and must acknowledge impairment of functioning or have sought professional help.

Also, five of the following symptoms must be present: inability to get pleasure from things that normally give pleasure; marked change in appetite; suicidal ideas or tendencies; excessive guilt or worry; sleeplessness or tendency to sleep too much; trouble concentrating; agitation or slowness of movement; and excessive fatigue.

Change Of Name

HONOLULU (AP) — Comedian Vicki Lawrence, shivering the timbers of men sailing in the "very macho" Pam Am Clipper Yacht Series, is using a husky new moniker — Vick Schultz — for competing in the race.

Miss Lawrence and her husband, Al Schultz, are sailing the 44-foot loop Camouflage in the event.

"Al calls me Vick a lot and someone took it down literally, although my theory is they couldn't bear to put a woman in the crew. It's a very masculine race. Very macho. It's not for ladies and there's no time out there for Maybelline," she said.

"It's rough out there."

Nominated

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Special Superior Court Judge Russell G. Walker Jr. of Asheboro has been nominated by the Democratic Party to succeed resident Superior Court Judge Hal Hammer Walker, who has announced his retirement.

Mondale Southern Tour Focuses On Deficits

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Ala. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, relentlessly attacking President Reagan for high federal budget deficits, is telling Southern voters that on the farm, in schools and on the job, "you're paying for these deficits, not tomorrow, but now."

The Democratic presidential nominee ended here Thursday a three-day, three-state swing through the South, the region he told crowds at each stop "saved me" in the party primaries when his nomination hung in the balance.

At each stop he tailored to the state his assault on Reagan's economic policies, and what he called the president's failure to own up to them.

In North Carolina it was the troubled farm economy, in South Carolina the loss of textile jobs, and here, outside Huntsville, site of Alabama's high-tech and space industries, it was unemployment and cuts in education spending.

"Alabama has suffered more or as much as any state in the union from these $200 billion deficits," Mondale told about 700 people in the sweltering heat of Bob Jones High School's gymnasium.

He noted the state continues to suffer an unemployment rate over 10 percent, and he complained that Reagan's spending cuts were unfairly directed at education programs.

"For some reason, wherever the mind is concerned, that administration is out to lunch," he said.

Mondale flew here from Columbia, S.C., where he blamed the deficits, by driving up credit costs and hampering exports, for the failure of 120 textile businesses since Reagan took office and the loss of 18,000 textile jobs, including 400 layoffs at a Kershaw, S.C., plant announced Wednesday.

"That's one of the ways you're paying for these deficits, not tomorrow but now," he said.

Mondale returned to his North Oaks, Minn., home for a quiet weekend. It was his second Southern trip in two weeks, and he plans another one next week.

Mondale's aides were pleased with the reaction to his week of attacking the president on deficits and taxes, believing they have kept the administration off guard — particularly in view of Reagan's apparent differences with Vice President George Bush over the tax question Mondale has raised.

Mondale's pressure on the deficits was even reminiscent of some Republican campaigns for fiscal restraint, and one Mondale aide was terming it "conservatism."

"It's a good issue everywhere," said Jim Quakenbush, Mondale's Southern coordinator. But, he added, "fiscal conservatism is always popular in the South."

The Democratic candidate insists Reagan has a secret plan for raising taxes after the election that will hurt the middle and lower-income workers, while Mondale says he will reveal his own plan for trimming deficits that includes higher taxes for corporations and upper-income workers. Reagan has said he has no such plan, while Bush has said the president would keep options open for future taxes.

"What Mr. Reagan will do is what he's always done," said Mondale. "He'll go after people, say $40,000 or less, who got little or no relief at all (from Reagan's tax cuts), and he'll sock it to them. So I say, 'Mr. Reagan, table your tax plan ...'"

"The question," he added, "is not whether taxes are going to be raised or not; there's no alternative. The question will not be whether we squeeze the budget; we must. The question is who'll stand up for the people of this country and insist that the average working family get a break, and you're looking at him right here."

Mondale was greeted warmly by Alabama's Democratic senator, Howell Heflin, and in South Carolina by Gov. Richard Riley and Sen. Ernest Hollings, a presidential dropout who backed Mondale's rival, Gary Hart.

But in an overnight stay in North Carolina, Gov. Jim Hunt, locked in a bitter challenge of GOP Sen. Jesse Helms, was absent as were the Democratic candidates for governor and lieutenant governor. Each sent word they had other commitments.

At the high school here, Mondale faced a handful of sign-waving anti-abortion protesters. In a public question-and-answer session, he was challenged on abortion by Cookie Kelly, 44, of Huntsville, who is confined to a wheelchair and said she was concerned about the "helpless."

Mondale drew applause when he replied that abortion "essentially has to be a judgment made by people in their own lives, on the basis of their own faith."

He also faced questioning about his religious beliefs and responded:

"I am a Christian. My faith is central to my life."

But he also said: "I was always taught when I grew up that personal beliefs and behavior spoke for themselves. And when someone came to you and said, 'Look at me, I'm a big-shot Christian and I'm honest,' grab your billfold right away."

President Plotting Political Strategy

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, working to repair some damage to his re-election campaign, took time out from his vacation to confer with his top political advisers.

Reagan's private meeting Thursday with White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and campaign chairman Stuart Spencer was his second political strategy session this week.

The men met over lunch at Reagan's isolated ranch in an effort to fix damage the campaign suffered earlier this week when Reagan and Vice President George Bush differed publicly on the possibility of a post-election tax hike.

"We could have done a better job this week on the tax question," campaign spokesman James Lake acknowledged in a telephone interview from Washington. "But we'll get our act together on that."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Baker, Reagan and Spencer discussed "some of the statements that the Democratic opponent has laid out," as well as future presidential travel and polling data.

The statement was a reference to Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale's charge that Reagan has a secret plan to raise taxes after the election. Mondale said if he is elected he would raise taxes in an effort to cut the federal deficit, approaching $200 billion a year.

Speakes said the ranch meeting was a "free-wheeling discussion and an open agenda" that also included planning for the Republican National Convention, which begins Aug. 20 in Dallas.

While Lake conceded the tax issue was not well handled, he said he did not believe it would cause any long-term damage to the GOP ticket.

And, noting Reagan is leading Mondale by about 10 points in recent polls, Lake added, "Things are not turning sour. Anybody who says that is just not aware of the facts."

However, one of Reagan's main campaign themes is leadership, and the awkward difference of opinion between he and Bush only gave Mondale added opportunities to press his contention that Reagan will raise taxes after the election but refuse to admit it before the election.

There was also increasing confusion this week over whether Bush would debate the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro.

PROTEST — Two dozen members of several Huntsville, Ala., anti-abortion groups were on hand Thursday for Walter Mondale's appearance at the Bob Jones High School in Madison, Ala. The peaceful protestors waved banners outside the school when Mondale arrived, and some were inside the gymnasium as he spoke. (AP Laserphoto)

Tax Issue Is Major Point In GOP Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A steamy battle is shaping up among Republicans over whether their 1984 platform should echo President Reagan's pledge for no new taxes.

Party conservatives are pushing for an "ironclad" no-tax-hike stance while moderates are arguing for the flexibility to raise taxes if necessary.

"President Reagan is ours. We want a platform he feels comfortable with," Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., chairman of the 106-member Republican Platform Committee, told a news conference on Thursday.

But a group of party conservatives vowed to press their fight for an absolute prohibition against tax increases to the convention floor, if necessary.

And, at the same time, moderate and liberal Republicans were staking out a rival position, proposing a plank declaring that "tax increases may ... be necessary."

Lott said he expects the tax issue to be one of the measures that will have to be resolved in Dallas as the Platform Committee puts the finishing touches on the 1984 platform, a document that to date has been largely drafted in closed-door negotiating sessions.

"It is an issue that we should talk about and let all divergent views be heard," Lott said.

Party moderates, including Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole of Kansas, have argued against inclusion of a rigid no-tax-increase plank in the platform.

But Lott said that the platform section on taxes, which he said is still being worked on, would contain "definite, categorical no-tax language ... It's going to be clear that (Democratic presidential nominee Walter) Mondale wants tax increases and we don't."

Mondale has said that a tax hike will be necessary in 1985 regardless of who wins the election. He has charged that Reagan has a "secret plan" to raise taxes. Reagan denies that such a plan exists and says he will veto any bill raising personal income tax rates.

Massachusetts Police Use Gas In Second Night Of Violence

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — Scores of heavily armed police patrolled streets acrid with the smell of tear gas today, forcing a tense calm after Hispanics and whites traded ethnic insults, rocks and Molotov cocktails in a second straight night of rioting.

Despite a massive police presence, violence flared again Thursday night in the poor, six-block area called Tower Hill where officials say tensions have been building for months.

Gunshots were reported, but apparently no one was hit, authorities said.

Police at the scene said about a dozen people were hurt in the latest round of fighting, and hospital officials said four people were treated and released for tear gas inhalation, cuts and a knee injury.

Twenty people were arrested on charges that included looting, inciting to riot, disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer, said police Sgt. Calvin Hall. Eight other people were taken into protective custody, he said.

On Wednesday night, several buildings were burned and 13 people were hurt, some by gunfire.

"It's like Vietnam. ... People walking down the streets with guns," said Joe Johnson, a witness to the fighting.

The hostilities began after a street-corner religious service designed to draw the community together attracted knots of both whites and Hispanics, who started shouting epithets at each other.

At one point, about 180 police formed a uniformed wedge between a group of 300 predominantly Hispanic men who were beating on metal garbage cans and a smaller group of whites. Some of the whites, including people of French-Canadian, Irish and Italian descent, chanted: "U.S.A! U.S.A!" and, "Go home! We were here first!"

"We've got a riot. We don't have time to talk now," a Lawrence police dispatcher said at the height of the conflict in this aging factory city of 63,000 about 30 miles north of Boston.

Using tear gas canisters, police dispersed the largest crowds, but clusters of angry youths remained on the streets well past midnight, more than three hours after the rioting began.

By 2 a.m., an uneasy quiet had been established with about 60 armed police covering the area, drinking coffee and eating doughnuts.

"It's been contained," said police Capt. Thomas Nastasia. "It's very quiet out there."

But residents remained awake and alert all through the night.

"I haven't slept the past two nights," said Angel DeJesus, 47, as he leaned out an open window today. "I have no idea whose fault it was. I just hope for me and my family's sake that it ends soon."

Police were staying at the scene of the trouble today. Authorities planned to assemble a force of 180 specially trained riot police from other Massachusetts communities for tonight, said police Capt. Samuel Aliano.

Alderman Raymond Johnson said that city officials planned to meet today to declare a state of emergency, allowing authorities to impose a curfew and request state aid.

Johnson described the area as a declining, largely Hispanic neighborhood plagued by crime and drugs and bordered by two housing projects.

Four people were treated for tear gas inhalation, cuts and one knee injury at Lawrence General Hospital, said supervisor Estelle Passeri. No one was admitted, she said early today.

Unlike Wednesday night, when only seven patrolmen were immediately available, police arrived in force Thursday.

More than 200 uniformed officers were at the scene, including the entire Lawrence force, 40 state troopers and about 60 members of the Northeastern Municipal Law Enforcement Council's tactical patrol force.

The street-corner religious service, designed to help bring the community together after Wednesday night's violence, drew a crowd to the burned-out ruins of a liquor store.

Crimestoppers

If you have information on any crime committed in Pitt County, call Crimestoppers, 758-7777. You do not have to identify yourself and can be paid for the information you supply.

But tensions rose with the name-calling, and police put themselves in between the two factions.

Four people, including a Hispanic man who hurled a firebomb, were arrested before an unidentified leader of some 300 Hispanics stepped forward and asked Lawrence Police Sgt. Leo Ouellette, commander of the tactical unit, for negotiations.

"They are afraid, they told us," Ouellette said later. "They said they just wanted to go back to their homes. They said they started it because they were harassed."

Later, he said, "We gave them their ground back, but they didn't adhere to their promise."

When the temporary truce failed about 9:30 p.m., police threw tear gas at both sides, hurling it first at the whites, who dispersed, Ouellette said.

Police then charged toward the Hispanic crowd, throwing more gas.

Ouellette said the second crowd eventually broke up. Tear gas canisters littered the street and the gas wafted into nearby homes in the densely populated neighborhood.

The violence Wednesday began with an argument between two families, one white and one Hispanic, over a smashed auto windshield, police said.

Pension Bill Gives Women Easier Access To Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to sign legislation aimed at making it easier for women to earn retirement benefits under their own or their spouses' pension plans, says one of its chief sponsors.

"He has indicated his support in the past for this effort," said Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J. "I have no doubt he will sign it."

The measure was passed by the House Thursday on a voice vote without any opposition and sent to the White House. The Senate earlier passed it on a 99-0 vote.

The bill was the second major measure addressing women's issues to be approved by Congress in two consecutive days of a political year in which the so-called gender gap is an issue. The House unanimously passed a measure Wednesday to strengthen collection efforts for child support payments, including mandatory withholding of wages.

Asked if there was any political significance to the quick passage of pension equity and child enforcement issues, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill replied, "We are going the way of routine. You people can't read political significance into everything we do."

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., the Democratic vice presidential nominee and original author of the pension legislation, said "it has taken four years of hard work by members of this Congress, but I believe we now have legislation which provides true economic equity and genuine fairness for women who have worked inside or outside the home."

Said Ms. Roukema: "Too many women are tragically surprised to find when they reach retirement age they have no pension, no right to their husband's pension nor any steady source of income other than Social Security. This bill recognizes the realities of the '80s and addresses the major shortcomings of current law, with respect to the role of the sexes."

The bill would expand pension coverage for workers who leave jobs to raise a family and then return to work, and it would guarantee pension rights of homemakers whose working spouses die before retirement.

It would bar pension plans from counting a one-year maternity or paternity leave as a break in service and would permit workers to leave jobs for five years without sacrificing pension credits. Under current law, such breaks in service often result in loss of pension rights.

Under the legislation, the age at which employers have to enroll workers in pension plans would be reduced from 25 to 21, and employees would begin earning pension credits for work begun at age 18 instead of age 22, as current law provides.

United Also To Cut Fares

CHICAGO (AP) — The low-fare airline People Express won't offer its new Chicago-New York run until Aug. 22, but the latest move by the no-frills carrier already has nudged its competitors into action.

United Airlines said Thursday it will match the new rates announced earlier in the day by People Express, some as low as $59 for a one-way ticket.

People Express announced Wednesday it planned to begin serving the Chicago-New York route, the third-busiest air corridor in the country, sparking talk of a fare war.

BLACK EARTH, Wis. (AP) — Amish and Mennonites — some friends, others strangers — traveled hundreds of miles to raise a new horse barn in just one day to replace the structure Philip Skalet lost to a killer tornado.

Thursday morning, there was nothing but a concrete block foundation and a deck where Skalet's barn stood before the twister devastated the nearby community of Barneveld.

At one point, two dozen men straddled the barn's rafters, the clank, clank, clank of hammers striking nails filling the hot, sunny day as some 75 helpers of varying experience worked busily.

In an hour and a half the walls were up, the shy Amish in their broad-brimmed straw hats seeming to know what to do by instinct. Some said it was their fifth Wisconsin barn-raising of the season.

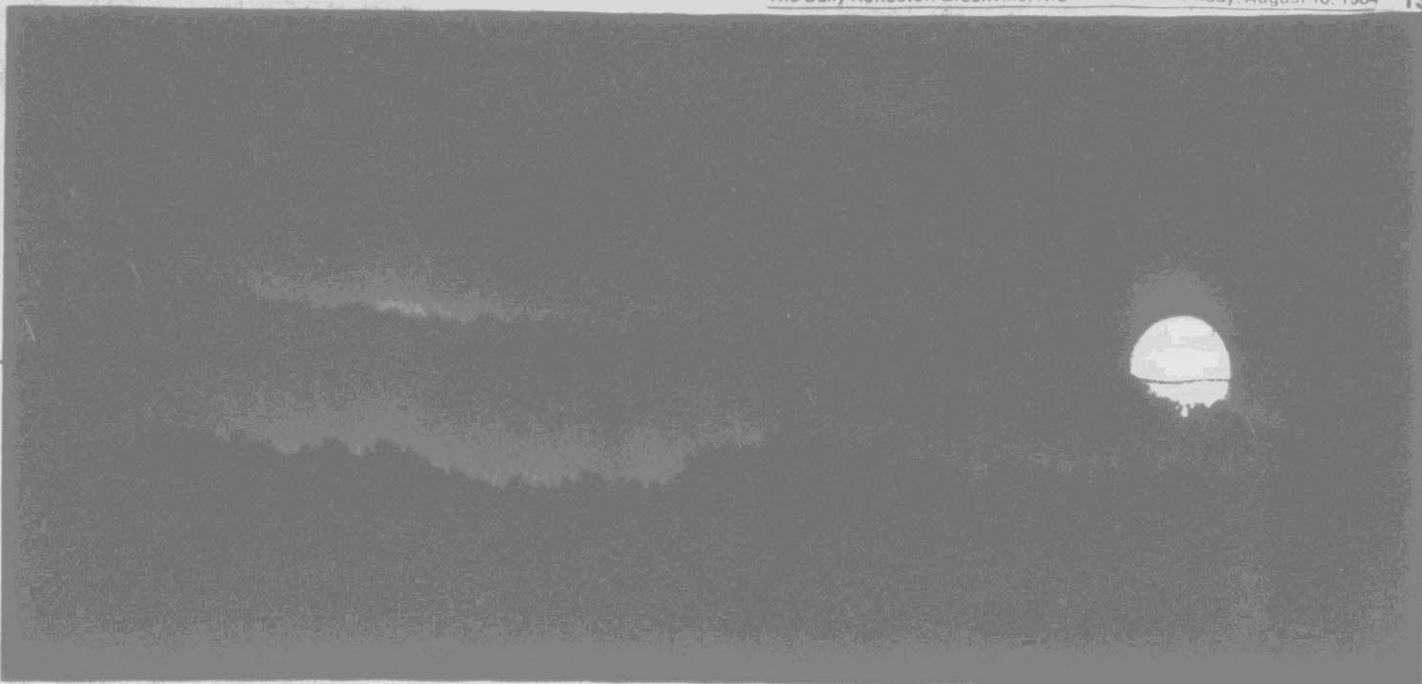

"Boy, these guys know what they are doing. There's not a moment of hesitation," Ethel Skalet, a Lutheran, said in wonder while her husband was off scouring nearby communities for more nails.

By supertime, the improvised crew of Amish from Wisconsin, less-strict Mennonites from throughout the Midwest and Canada, and many of Skalet's neighbors had raised a barn measuring 84 feet by 30 feet.

"This is the way America should be," said Wesley Heddings of Muscoda, one of the local Mennonites who helped organize the barn-raising.

The June 8 tornado blew Skalet's old barn up the side of a Dane County hill and claimed nine lives in Barneveld, an Iowa County community of 600 persons which lost most of its homes and businesses.

Skalet said the new barn would still cost him quite a bit for materials, but that he could not reckon what the labor was worth in dollars.

Big Increases Likely For Corn, Beans

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spring rush to the fields by farmers and good weather so far this summer have boosted crop prospects dramatically over 1983, when drought and government programs cut production 26 percent from 1982's record level.

Government and private forecasts point to sharp increases in this year's crops of corn and soybeans, which are key ingredients as feed to produce the nation's meat, milk and poultry.

The Agriculture Department was scheduled to issue its first official estimate of 1984 corn and soybean production today. Also included will be the department's first estimate of total wheat output, along with cotton and a number of other major crops.

Prospects for greater crop output already have dampened the price outlook for some of the commodities, including corn and soybeans.

A month ago, based on past trends and a normal growing season, the USDA projected a 1984 corn harvest of around 7.81 billion bushels, up 87 percent from the shriveled 1983 harvest of 4.17 billion bushels. That would be second only to the 1982 record of 8.24 billion bushels.

The July projections also showed a soybean potential of about 2.03 billion bushels, up from 1.57 billion bushels in 1983. The record was 2.27 billion bushels in 1979.

Wheat production, which did not suffer greatly from the 1983 drought, also is expected to produce a bumper yield, perhaps eclipsing last year's 2.42 billion bushels — which was the third largest in U.S. history. The record was 2.81 billion bushels in 1982, a slight increase from just under 2.8 billion bushels in 1981.

Private forecasters recently have added their numbers to the pot. Conrad Leslie, head of the Chicago-based Leslie Analytical Organization, said this week that his Aug. 1 surveys indicated a corn crop of more than 7.64 billion bushels and soybean production of about 2.07 billion bushels.

Both of Leslie's forecasts were within the margin of error noted in USDA's earlier projections.

According to the department's July projections, corn prices at the farm during the 1984-85 marketing year which will begin on Oct. 1 may average in the range of $2.60 to $3.05 per bushel, down from $3.25 currently estimated for 1983-84.

Soybean prices at the farm next season were projected at $5.65 to $7.65 per bushel, down from $7.75 estimated in 1983-84.

Wheat prices, burdened by huge stockpiles left over from the last couple of harvests, were projected at $3.25 to $3.50 per bushel in the 1984-85 wheat marketing year that began on June 1, compared to $3.54 last season.

Farmers idled a record 75.6 million acres of cropland under government programs, including a payment-in-kind feature which gave producers $9.7 billion worth of free commodities to cut back on 1983 plantings of corn, wheat, sorghum, rice and cotton.

Except for wheat, there is no PIK program this year, but farmers still have regular government acreage programs to comply with in order to qualify for price supports and related benefits. In all, however, farmers signed up to idle only 30.4 million acres in 1984, only two-fifths of last year's.

Special Interests Offer Tax Advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress lays the groundwork for overhauling the federal income tax, interest groups are showing no reluctance to offer ideas on how it should be done.

— The AFL-CIO wants higher taxes on business and the rich.

— The American Business Conference is asking a substantial cut in business tax rates.

— The National Association of Home Builders says "deficit reduction, tax simplification and affordable, quality housing must be given equal priority."

— The National Apartment Association is urging that any change take account on "the incentives to capital formation in the multifamily housing industry."

The Senate Finance Committee heard those views and more Thursday as it continued hearings on how the tax systems should be changed next year. Although the subject has been aired intermittently by the panel for two years, Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., the chairman, said "we're a long way from any consensus in this committee."

The Reagan administration is expected to add its views to the debate after the Nov. 6 election. The Treasury Department is studying the same basic ideas for overhaul as is the committee: a federal sales tax, a tax on income that is consumed, exempting what is saved; a flat income tax, which would apply the same tax rate to everybody regardless of earnings; and a substantial modification of the present system by eliminating most deductions and reducing the number of tax rates.

There is widespread agreement among lawmakers, economists and tax experts that the present system is in trouble because of the more than 100 deductions and exemptions permitted. But each of those tax preferences has support from some group, as Thursday's testimony showed, and repealing them will face considerable resistance.

Most of the discussion at the Finance Committee hearings and a separate set of hearings conducted by the Treasury Department has centered on two proposals: a flat tax and a plan by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that would wipe out most deductions and allow most people to pay a 14 percent tax.

Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, told the committee a 10 percent flat tax, which also would end many deductions, would "move us away from the discriminatory and anti-productive biases implicit in the graduated system, and instead have everyone paying the same percentage of income in taxes."

Even supporters of such a flat tax concede, however, that it would produce big tax cuts for the wealthy at the expense of lower- and middle-income people.

The Bradley-Gephardt plan was endorsed in principle by Common Cause, the self-styled citizen lobby, and by a liberal-oriented analysis group, Citizens for Tax Justice. It also was praised by Harry A. Jacobs Jr., chairman of Prudential Bache Securities, as "the best thing I have seen come down the road so far."

But there is opposition to this approach, chiefly because it would repeal the tax preference now allowed capital gains.

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, whose members make a living handling tax matters, questioned the assumption that the tax law needs radical surgery. The accountants said laws passed since 1974 will produce considerable amounts of equity and simplicity once they and the regulations that interpret them are fully in effect.

Dreams Come True — For Some

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Daley Thompson and Valerie Brisco-Hooks are two of a kind. Evander Holyfield and Mark Schultz are, too — unfortunately.

Thompson, Britain's answer to Bob Mathias, won his second successive Olympic decathlon Thursday night in near-record form. And Valerie Brisco-Hooks of Los Angeles became the first athlete, male or female, to win the 200 and 400 meters in the same Summer Games.

Holyfield, a 178-pound boxer from Atlanta, and Schultz, a 180½-pound wrestler from Palo Alto, Calif., appeared to be winners in their bouts before officials' rulings changed things around. Holyfield's dream of a gold medal all but vanished. Schultz's is still alive.

More dreams go up for grabs today. The U.S. men's basketball team shoots for the gold against Spain, American Dwight Stones and Zhu Jianhua of China seek to qualify in the high jump and triple-gold medalist Carl Lewis is expected to be on the track to qualify in the 400 relay.

Going into today's competition, the United States had 130 medals, 59 gold. West Germany was second in overall medals with 42 and Romania the runnerup in gold with 17.

Holyfield, clearly in command in his bout, was disqualified for hitting — and flooring — Kevin Barry of New Zealand an instant after referee Gligoraje Novicic of Yugoslavia shouted "Stop!"

Because Barry was incapacitated by a head blow and is not allowed to fight again for 28 days, it gives Yugoslav Anton Josipovic the light heavyweight gold in a walkover — unless a protest filed by U.S. boxing officials is upheld.

The remaining 10 U.S. fighters won their semifinal bouts.

Schultz won his freestyle wrestling bout but broke the elbow of Resit Karabachak in the process. The International Wrestling Federation set the victory aside, but refused a Turkish demand that Schultz be thrown out of the Games.

So Schultz is still wrestling for a gold medal. Ed Banach of Iowa City, Iowa, Bobby Weaver of Rochester, N.Y., and Randy Lewis of Rapid City, S.D., don't have to. They won theirs Thursday.

Other gold-medal winners were: •Candy Costie of Seattle and Tracie Ruiz of Bothell, Wash., in the synchronized swimming duet competition.

•Romania's Anisoara Stanciu in the women's long jump as Carol Lewis, Carl's sister, failed to even reach the final.

•Hyoung-Zoo Ha of South Korea in half heavyweight judo.

•West Germany in equestrian team dressage.

•Italy in men's team sabre.

•Yugoslavia in women's team handball.

At the team handball at Cal State-Fullerton, several spectators were injured when a railing collapsed as they pushed forward to catch flowers being thrown by the athletes during the medals ceremony.

Also Thursday: •Zhou Jihong and Chen Xiaoxia of China stood 1-2 ahead of Michele Mitchell of Mission Viejo, Calif., heading into tonight's women's platform diving final.

•Darrell Pace of Hamilton, Ohio, and Rick McKinney of Glendale, Ariz., stood 1-2 in men's archery halfway through the four-day event.

•Steve Ovelt of Britain, hospitalized when he collapsed with a bronchial attack after Monday's 800 meters, won his 1,500 qualifying heat.

•Greg Barton of Homer, Mich., became the first American to reach the finals of the 1,000-meter kayak competition since it became an Olympic event in 1936.

•The U.S. water polo team defeated West Germany 8-7 to set up a gold-medal showdown tonight with Yugoslavia.

•The U.S. women's handball team defeated Austria 25-21.

•The American women's field hockey team tied West Germany 1-1.

In the 88 years of the Olympics' modern era, only Mathias, in 1948-52, had managed to twice earn the sobriquet, "world's greatest athlete." Thompson said he once heard Mathias had predicted it was impossible feat to duplicate. "Little does he know," Thompson said with a big grin.

In fact, Thompson had a chance to break the world decathlon record of 8,798 points, set last June by Jurgen Hingsen of West Germany. With the victory tucked away — Hingsen would have had to beat Thompson by 34 seconds in the 1,500 meters to win — the Briton needed only to finish that 10th and final event in 4 minutes, 34.8 seconds.

But he appeared to pull up in the final strides. He finished in 4:35. He wound up with 8,797 points. But he eclipsed his 1980 Olympic record of 8,618. And he beat Hingsen for the fifth time in five meetings.

"All I wanted to do was win," Thompson said. "I thought I could get the world record, but the most important thing here was to win."

Hingsen finished with 8,673 points and another West German, Siegfried Wentz, was third with 8,412. The best American finisher was John Crist of Raleigh, N.C., sixth with 8,130.

Even though Thompson didn't get the record here, he will on New Year's Day, when his total will be recognized as an official world mark after the decathlon point tables are revised, according to Olympics statistician Frank Zarnowski.

He said the scoring system will favor the events Daley did well in more than Hingsen's top marks in June. "Daley will be happy he's going to get the world record," Zarnowski said. "All he has to do is wait until Jan. 1."

Before Brisco-Hooks took to the track for the 200 meters, Wilma Rudolph and Babe Didrikson had been the only American track and field competitors to win two golds in one Olympics.

But in 21.81 seconds, she joined their exclusive company, broke Evelyn Ashford's five-year-old American record of 21.83 and East German Barbel Wockel's Olympic record of 22.03 and became the first U.S. woman to win the event in the Summer Games since Edith McGuire did it 20 years ago.

"It's overwhelming," she said. "I guess I really don't know the importance of it."

Holyfield said he never heard Novicic's first order to stop, only the one which came as Barry was sagging to the canvas. "I wasn't aware of the break. I was already in the middle of a combination," he said.

At first, Novicic sent Holyfield to a neutral corner. It was only after he counted to eight, looked at Barry's eyes and escorted the wobbly New Zealander to his corner that he told the American fighter he was disqualifying him.

Loring Baker, president of the USA Amateur Boxing Federation, said the U.S. protest was based on whether Holyfield was able to hear the command because of the crowd noise or whether the punch was already being delivered when the command was given.

With an Olympic-record 10 fighters in Saturday's finals, the United States has a chance to double the total of five golds won in 1976 and 1992.

Pernell Whitaker will fight Luiz Ortiz of Puerto Rico in the 132-pound division. The other matchups are Frank Tate and Shawn O'Sullivan of Canada at 156 pounds; Mark Breland and Chil-Sung Chun of South Korea at 147; Steve McCrory and Redzep Redzepovski of Yugoslavia at 112; super heavyweight Tyrell Biggs and Italy's Francesco Damiani; Paul Gonzales and Salvatore Todisco of Italy at 106; Meldrick Taylor and Peter Konyegwachie of Nigeria at 125; Jerry Page and Dhawee Umponmah of Thailand at 139; Virgil Hill and Joon-Sup Shin of South Korea at 165 and Henry Tillman and Willie deWit of Canada at 201.

Pirates Open Drills; Seek Quarterback, Defensive Line

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The alarms went off at 5:45 a.m. this morning for the Pirates of East Carolina — and practice officially got underway at 6:30 for the 1984 football season, with some questions still to be answered.

Chief among those questions is who is going to step forward as the number one quarterback to replace the graduated Kevin Ingram. And right behind that is the question of who will take over the vacated positions in the defensive line.

Three weeks from tomorrow those questions must be answered as the Pirates travel to Tallahassee, Florida, to face powerful Florida State in the season opening game.

Coach Ed Emory and his staff — which features the third new offensive coordinator over the past three years — will be putting the Pirates through a four-day routine today, Saturday and Monday, with additional sessions planned for Sunday. The NCAA proscribes light — non-contact — work over this period. Actual contact will begin on Tuesday as the Pirates switch to 3-a-day workouts, those to continue through August 20. After that, it will be once-a-day workouts as school resumes.

With Ingram and a number of other seniors gone, the Pirates will be turning to younger players to fill the gaps. Among them are going to be a number of red-shirted freshmen and a scattering of transfer players. For this reason, Emory and his staff feel they must work extra hard.

"As young as we are, we're going to have to work a lot on fundamentals. We're not going to be able to do much 'team' work for a while. We're going to concentrate on blocking, tackling and throwing the ball," Emory said.

"Second, we're going to try and get everyone into position so that they can be the most productive. We're going to try to have this done by Tuesday. Then, we're going to try and find a starting quarterback and identify our first and second units."

Emory added that the defensive unit must come up with a number of newcomers, including nearly a complete revamping of the ends and tackles.

And the coach got a few surprises — all unhappy ones — when the players began reporting in. J.C. Plott, expected to figure in the defensive end position, won't return because of a continuing shoulder problem. Rally Caparas, a defensive back, isn't returning because of personal reasons. Curtis Wyatt, another defensive end, underwent a hernia operation this week, and will not return. Jeff Autry, an offensive tackle, hasn't recovered from a non-football arm injury that kept him out of the lineup last year.

All of the above, except Autry, were fifth year seniors.

The coach is still waiting for some happy surprises, although he said that most of the players appeared to have worked hard in their summer conditioning programs.

But to get them ready in three weeks? Well, Emory feels that's not really enough under this year's circumstances. "If we had last year's squad back, it wouldn't be any problem. But we have so much inexperience this year that it's going to take longer. I wish we had a month."

The key to the season would appear to be health. "We need all the scrimmages we can get, but we're not going to be able to do it. Our depth is so crucial, we have to be smart as to how much contact we do. So I expect that we'll have a lot of contact next week, then cut back on it the rest of the way."

One thing Emory feels will help will be the use of the knee braces that were brought in last year for the first two units. "We've bought 40 more of them, and we really feel that they cut down on injuries last year," the coach said. "Everyone but our receivers and defensive backs will be wearing them," he said.

So now it begins again. From the burrrrr of the alarm clocks at 5:45 to the final "lights out" at 11 p.m., it will be a full day for the Pirates.

The only question is: will it be enough?

Ogrin Can Smile About His Round

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — David Ogrin takes a lot of ribbing about his name, but when you're chasing a dream on the PGA tour, those little things are all part of the fun.

"It's not O'Smile, it's Ogrin," the 26-year-old native of Waukegan, Ill., tells folks who try to kid him.

Thursday, however, you could call him anything you wanted after the way Ogrin cruised around the 7,014-yard, par-72 layout at Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club.

Ogrin, playing nearly flawless golf, put together nines of 33-34 for a 5-under-par 67, matching his best round ever on the tour and earning a three-way tie for second place after one round of the $400,000 Buick Open.

Four players — Tom Kite, Gary Hallberg, John Adams and Jodie Mudd — were tied for the lead at 6-under 66 heading into today's second round.

"This is the way I've always dreamed of playing on the tour," Ogrin said. "Right from the start, I was hitting it close. It was a very comfortable round."

It took Ogrin four tries to earn his tour card and last year, his first as a pro, he earned only $36,003. This year, his best finish has been a tie for 15th at the Western Open last month, but he already has earned $37,803.

A victory in the Buick Open would fatten his bank account by $72,000.

"That really would be like a dream," said Ogrin, who lists as special interests, "Christianity and following the Chicago Cubs."

Ogrin was one stroke back with Tom Purtzer and Tony Sills.

The two glamour names in the tournament — U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller and British Open Seve Ballesteros — also carded sub-par first rounds.

Zoeller was one of nine players at 68, while Ballesteros was in a logjam with 26 players at 1-under 71.

The golf course had been softened somewhat by a heavy rain that washed out Wednesday's pro-am event and the golfers took advantage of the ideal playing conditions. Eighty-four golfers from the starting field of 154 were under par and 17 others were at even-par after the first round.

The field will be cut to the low 70 and ties before the third round.

Kite's performance marked a great turnaround from last week, when he missed the cut at the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

"I was driving bad at Memphis," Kite explained. "I came back with a solid round, here. I only missed one fairway and two greens. It was a very encouraging round."

Wayne Levi, the defending champion, was at even par after the first round.

S. Cagers Not Looking Past Spain

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The unbeaten United States men's basketball team has every reason to be overconfident heading into tonight's Olympic gold medal game against Spain. But chances are it won't.

"Bobby Knight won't let 'em lose," said Canadian Coach Jack Donohue, whose team fell twice to the Americans in the tournament, then lost the bronze medal to Yugoslavia on Thursday.

"There's not going to be any fat cats going into that game," Donohue added. "They're a very good basketball team, and they're very well coached."

Just last Saturday, the Americans whipped the Spaniards in the preliminary round 101-68.

But Knight, who has been driving his players hard in the quest to return the gold to the United States for the first time since 1976, said the Spaniards have the best shooting team in the tournament, his own included.

The figures back him up — barely.

Spain, which suffered its only loss in the tourney to the United States but sent previously unbeaten

Yugoslavia, the 1980 gold medalist, to the bronze medal game, has made 56 percent of its field goal attempts in seven games compared to the Americans' 55.

But defense, Knight's trademark, has been a big factor in the Americans' 7-0 record. They have held opponents to an average 63 points while pouring in 95.3 points a game.

Tonight, the American defense is expected to key on forwards Juan Antonio San Epifanio, 6-foot-6, and 6-8 Fernando Martin, Spain's top scorers. San Epifanio, a 49 percent shooter, is averaging 21 points, and Martin, a 61 percent shooter is averaging 17 points.

"The Spanish team is unselfish, moves the ball well and is the best shooting team in the tournament," said Knight. "More than any other team in the tournament, I think Antonio has brought them to an appreciation of defensive basketball."

Knight was referring to Spain's coach, Antonio Diaz-Miguel, whom Knight has known since 1971 and who has attended the Indiana coach's clinics over the years.

Spain, runner-up to Italy in the 1983 European championships, is a quick team, averaging 90 points while giving up 84.5.

"Our problem playing against the United States is not our shooting, not our passing and our counterattack," said Diaz-Miguel. "Our problem is we don't have Patrick Ewing or Wayman Tisdale..."

The Americans, with a 75-1 overall record in Olympic play, were shooting for their ninth gold medal in 10 tries. Their only loss came to the Soviet Union 51-50 in the controversial final of the 1972 Games.

The depth of this American team has been in evidence in the last two games — both poor shooting nights for Michael Jordan, the college player of the year. He has made only nine of 29 attempts from the field, missing the mark consistently from the outside.

Jordan, the North Carolina dropout who is headed for the Chicago Bulls, still is the most exciting player in the tourney and leads the Americans with a 17-point average.

FALSE PROPHETS!

MORE THAN ONCE THE BIBLE WARNS, "BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS!" (MATT. 7:15). AGAIN WE NOTE, IN THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH, THAT THE LORD SAID, "...THE PROPHETS PROPHESY LIES IN MY NAME..." (CHAP. 14:14) THESE ADMONITIONS, AND MANY MORE LIKE THEM, WERE GIVEN IN EARNEST INSTRUCTION TO THE PEOPLE! YET THEY OFTEN DID NOT HEED THE ADVICE OF THE WISE MEN. THEREFORE, IT WAS NOT UNUSUAL FOR A RAGGED BEGGAR TO WANDER INTO A VILLAGE OR TOWN, PROCLAIMING THAT HE HAD JUST COME OUT OF A FAST IN THE WILDERNESS AND WAS SPEAKING WITH THE LORD'S VOICE! HAVING CONVINCED A FEW OF THE MORE SIMPLE-MINDED ONES THAT HE WAS INDEED A MESSENGER FROM THE LORD, IT WAS NO BIG DEAL FOR THE BEGGAR TO START FREE-LOADING, LIVING OFF THE BEST THAT THE POOR VILLAGERS COULD SCROUNGE OUT OF THEIR MEAGRE LARDERS!

RICHARD DEACON

TV Character Actor Richard Deacon Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Character actor Richard Deacon, who appeared in numerous television series including "Leave It to Beaver" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show," is dead of an apparent heart attack at age 62.

Paramedics were called to his home in West Los Angeles and took him to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where he was pronounced dead Wednesday night, coroner's spokesman Bill Gold said Thursday.

Gold said Deacon's death was of "apparent natural causes," possibly a heart seizure.

Deacon was a regular on seven series in the 1950s and '60s, including

"Leave It to Beaver," in which he played the father of Wally's sidekick Clarence "Lumpy" Rutherford, and "The Dick Van Dyke Show," where he played the overbearing producer Melvin Cooley.

Deacon's bald pate, black-rimmed glasses and stern demeanor made him a natural for portraying stuffy bureaucrats in more than 100 films and hundreds of television shows.

"He was always the guy with the pocket watch who would look down his nose on people, which was so far from what Richard was really like," said Deacon's manager, Robert Prete. "He liked to say he played characters who didn't know too much, but they didn't know it," Prete said.

Deacon was also an avid cook whose microwave cookbook has sold more than 1.7 million copies, Prete said. Deacon had a syndicated TV cooking show in Canada and "he was just about to start a home video on the same subject and a syndicated show for the States," Prete said.

Born May 14, 1922, in Philadelphia, Deacon began acting while studying for a medical career at Ithaca College in New York. After a few years at a community theater in Tulare, Calif., he decided to take a shot at the movies.

Philharmonic Irks Jewish Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Philharmonic's decision to replace a "Hebrew Rhapsody" with another work while performing in a Moslem nation is "a gross display of insensitivity," a Jewish leader says.

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, was one of several Jewish leaders denouncing the decision, revealed Thursday.

The Philharmonic removed "Schelomo," subtitled "A Hebrew Rhapsody for Cello and Orchestra," from its Sept. 3 performance in Kuala Lumpur at the request of the government of Malaysia, a country with a large Moslem population. Malaysian officials said they discourage works of Jewish origin.

"They have the right to choose the works they'd like to hear," said a

Philharmonic spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified.

"Schelomo" is the most frequently performed work of Ernest Bloch, a Swiss-born American composer who died in 1959.

Baptist Activists Start Soviet Tour

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Baptist professor leaving today with 21 religious peace activists for the Soviet Union says he's not afraid of being harassed by the Soviets despite warnings from the U.S. government.

"Compared with a major American city, I think most of our people will feel safer there than here," said Dr. Edwin Bagley, 37, a professor of religion and philosophy at Wingate College.

Bagley, who has been to the Soviet Union twice, said the group plans to visit Moscow and Leningrad.

The U.S. State Department has warned that American tourists in Leningrad have been detained by Soviet police after "innocent contact with Soviet citizens," said press officer Richard Weeks. He said they had also been subjected to "arbitrary ... and embarrassing searches" at the Leningrad airport.

Bagley said the people in his group — most of whom are Baptists — want to talk to private citizens in Russia. It happened all the time on his trips there in 1965 and last winter, he said.

"It's not very difficult to have an informal dialogue," he said. "People spot us on the streets, see our different clothing, and they're eager to strike up a conversation."

Such contacts may be as important as diplomatic talks in bringing about world peace, said Bagley.

"My main thinking is that if we do anything at all to open some avenues for accurate news about what we are like for them and what they are like for us, if we make some friends and keep them from being painted here as so different, it's bound to help in the long run," he said. "They're people with much the same concerns as people in this country. They've got jobs, family and friends that take up most of their time. To the extent they're political, it's a very minor part of their lives."

But Soviet citizens are much more conscious than Americans of World War II, which cost some 20 million Soviet lives, he said.

"There's constant talk of fear of war," he said. "They don't have much of a concept that American citizens are afraid of war — they just hear what our politicians say."

Most of the people in the group, ages 12 to the 50s, belong to Charlotte peace organizations, such as the Bilateral Freeze Committee. They'll be meeting with officially sanctioned peace groups in the Soviet Union, said Bagley.

They also plan to attend a Baptist church in Moscow. Bagley said there are about 4 million Baptists in the Soviet Union, the largest group next to the United States' 13 million.

Bagley, who teaches a course in Marxism along with courses in ethics and theology at Wingate, said he himself is not a Marxist.

"But I think he (Karl Marx) gave a fairly accurate critique of the capitalist system and its problems," he said. "He did not do so well when prescribing techniques for dealing with them. ... And it's a fairly standard critique that the Soviet Union is not very Marxist."

Bagley said he had been criticized "now and then" by more conservative Baptists who favor a tougher stance against the Soviets.

"That's not a Baptist point of view, just a general conservative point of view," he said. On the previous trips, Bagley and others took along pens, knives and other gadgets to leave for people.

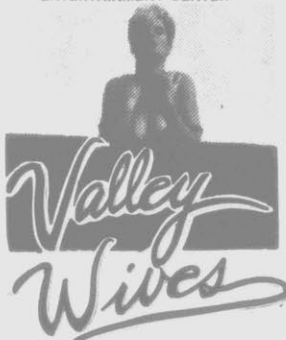

"I think it was the wrong thing to do," he said.

I-40 Mountain Getting A Taste Of Glue

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

WATERVILLE, N.C. (AP) — High in the Great Smoky Mountains, workmen are literally bolting and gluing a crumbling mountainside together to stop boulders from crashing down on Interstate 40.

Traffic along the busy highway linking Asheville, N.C., and Knoxville, Tenn., stops for up to half an hour at a time while workers repair fractures and blast loose rocks that seem in danger of falling.

Hundreds of junked cars, smashed flat and stacked three deep, form a wall between the roadway and falling rock. Fallen boulders have taken huge chunks out of smaller concrete barriers.

The $13 million project began in the spring of 1982 after a pile of rock 200 feet wide fell onto the road along the Pigeon River Gorge in Haywood County, blocking North Carolina's main access to the World's Fair in Knoxville. It should be finished by the end of the year, said Ron Watson, the North Carolina Department of Transportation's resident engineer for the project.

"There have been a couple of fatalities directly attributed to falling rock," he said. "I'm sure there were many others where a rock was in the road and caused a wreck. We had quite a large number of wrecks down there. Almost every week, there was a big truck wreck."

Where a fracture in the mountain appears likely to widen, under water pressure from heavy rain or an earth tremor, workers bolt the rock together with steel bolts an inch wide and as long as 90 feet.

"We drill through the questionable rock into good solid rock beneath," Watson said. "We put epoxy glue in the bottom, stick the bolt in, spin it to mix the glue and it sets up in three or four minutes."

Grout poured into the hole prevents corrosion. Hydraulic jacks then apply 70,000 pounds of pressure to each bolt and a nut is put on the end.

"We've probably put in 20,000 feet of bolts already," said Watson. "We're probably halfway."

"It's a very common practice," said Dr. Duncan Heron, a professor of geology at Duke University in Durham. "It ought to work. We'll see."

Watson said if the highway's route through the mountains had been cut correctly in the first place, the problems might not be so severe.

"Twenty years ago, when the road was built, we did not pre-split rock cuts," said Watson. "It was not a practice at that time ... it was just plain blasting."

Pre-splitting involves drilling closely-spaced holes along a desired crack in a rock. It lessens the shock of the blast to the rock that remains and reduces crumbling within the rest of the mountain.

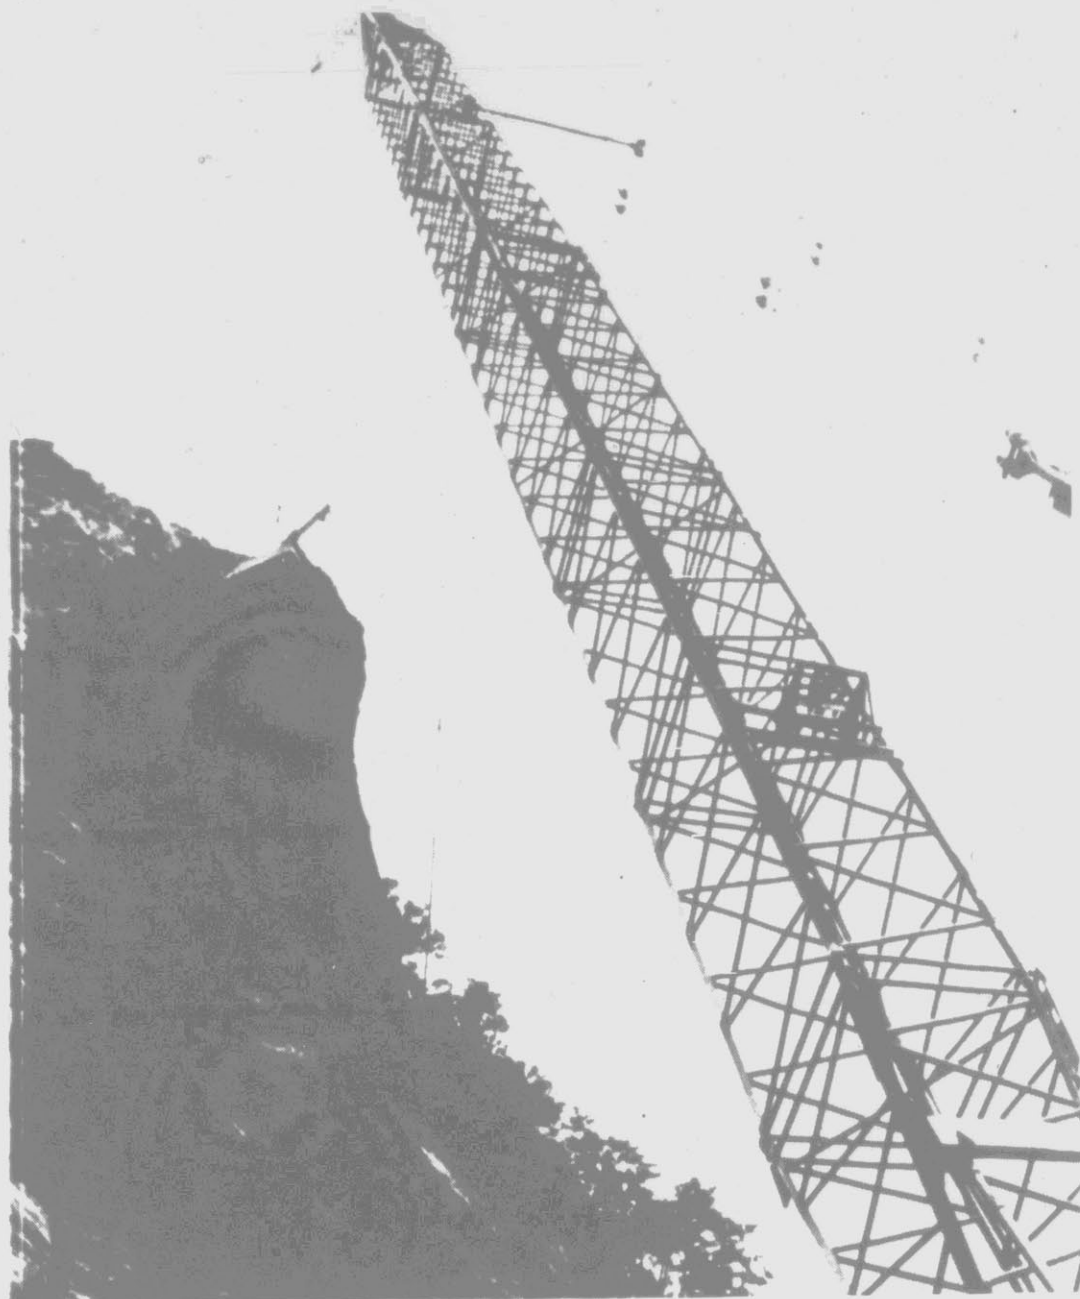

"If that road were built today with more modern technology, it wouldn't be as dangerous," Watson said. "I don't know how much investigation of the geological formation of the mountain was done then. Now we do an in-depth geological review" for such projects.

The scenic highway along the Pigeon River carries about 11,000 cars a day. Motorists traveling on it can see four tall, red cranes along the cliffs beside the westbound lane. Workmen on one crane are using devices shaped like bulldozer tracks to scrape loose rocks off the mountainside. Sometimes a small backhoe is lifted up to the cliff to push other rocks off. The other three cranes hold drilling platforms.

The project's first phase involved building two more eastbound lanes closer to the river to move the traffic away from the cut. Heavy wire mesh was then placed over some rock that couldn't be bolted or scraped off. One of the last phases will be to build a wall between the westbound lane and the rock face to catch falling debris. With a chain link fence at the top, it will be 8 feet tall in the most dangerous areas, Watson said.

"They originally planned to put up a barrier and let the traffic go ahead," said Watson. "But we found immediately that it wasn't safe because some rocks jump completely over and land in the eastbound lane. Occasionally, a big rock about the size of my desk will jump over in the lane, and that takes an extra 15 minutes to clear."

Senate Confirms Appellate Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Harvie Wilkinson III, a Virginia law professor, will take his seat on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, despite arguments in the Senate that he was unqualified because he had never served on a lower court, never had a private client and argued only one case before a judge.

"This is a writing job. It's a scholarly job," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. said Thursday in defense of the nomination. The Senate voted 58-39 to confirm Wilkinson.

Questions also were raised about "judicial temperament" and what

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. called "unethical and excessive lobbying campaign aimed at the American Bar Association Committee on the Federal Judiciary, in order to secure a 'qualified' rating from the committee."

Kennedy called Wilkinson "the least experienced of any individual ever nominated to be a federal appeals court judge."

The court to which Wilkinson has been appointed is one level down from the Supreme Court. It hears cases from Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the Carolinas.

Tax Protestors Draw Sentences

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The co-founder of a Wilmington-based Constitutional Tax Association was sentenced Thursday to eight years in prison after convictions of helping people file fraudulent tax returns.

Marc Kelley of Wilmington was convicted June 19 of one count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government and was sentenced to five years in prison. He was also convicted of seven counts of aiding and assisting in the filing of false tax documents and received a three-year sentence from U.S. District Court Judge Earl Britt.

Margaret E. Mintz of Wilmington was also sentenced to a five-year suspended sentence and a $6,000 fine after being convicted of one count of conspiracy. She was also convicted of three counts of aiding and assisting in the preparation of false tax documents and received a three-year suspended sentence.

Horsing Around

These horses are struggling to reach Chincoteague Island, Virginia. They are participating in the 59th annual Chincoteague Pony Swim, held this past July 25th. Each year, the ponies make the swim across the channel from Assateague Island. Many believe that these ponies may be descended from horses stranded on that island centuries ago in a shipwreck. After the swim, the ponies are sold and proceeds go to the local volunteer fire department.

DO YOU KNOW — What country introduced the horse to the New World?

Justice Attorneys Enter Water Spat

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The city of Virginia Beach has gained the U.S. Justice Department as a courtroom ally in its fight with North Carolina over the proposed Lake Gaston pipeline.

The department told a federal judge here Thursday that it plans to represent the Army Corps of Engineers in Virginia Beach's lawsuit against North Carolina to uphold Corps approval of the controversial $172 million water transfer project.

Virginia Beach City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said the Justice Department's decision would have a "positive influence" on the city's case.

The Justice Department notified U.S. District Judge John A. MacKenzie that it would join the lawsuit only if MacKenzie rules that his court has jurisdiction in the matter.

MacKenzie has not made such a ruling, but he indicated in June that if the government joined the suit he would be more inclined to hear the case.

MacKenzie could transfer the case to U.S. District Court in Raleigh, where North Carolina is suing the Corps to stop the Lake Gaston project.

The Justice Department steered clear of the jurisdictional clash and said it would defend the Corps' January decision to issue the pipeline construction permit and its February approval of a $2.4 million water reallocation contract with Virginia Beach.

Edmisten, Martin Recall Watergate

By The Associated Press
For Rufus Edmisten, who participated in the Senate Watergate hearings, and Jim Martin, one of the few North Carolina Republican politicians to survive the Nixon years, the memories of a decade ago are still clear.

Richard Nixon resigned as president 10 years ago Thursday in the wake of evidence that he had a role in the coverup of a bungled burglary at the Watergate apartment complex in Washington.

Edmisten's campaign TV advertisements show old footage of a younger, slightly thinner Edmisten seated behind North Carolina's Sen. Ervin during the Watergate hearings. As an aide to Ervin, Edmisten helped gather the evidence against Nixon.

"Watergate is still very vivid in the minds of North Carolinians," said Edmisten, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate. "Literally hundreds of people can still tell you the cast of characters. People come up to me every day and mention it."

His opponent rebounded from the Nixon years, returning to Congress in 1974 and each election thereafter.

Crash Kills Man

BANNER ELK, N.C. (AP) — One man was killed and another remained in critical condition today after a private plane crashed into a tree after taking off from the Elk River Airport near Banner Elk, authorities said.

"The plane was upside down in a tree," said Avery County Sheriff's Deputy Nina Case. "It's in the mountains. They (rescue crews) did get one out that was not dead, and there was one fatality."

Desire A. Kiffer of Tallahassee, Fla., died in the crash Thursday, while his son, Gregg A. Kiffer of Orlando, Fla., was injured, deputies said.

The city bought rights to water in the John H. Kerr Reservoir to replenish 60 million gallons a day it plans to pump from nearby Lake Gaston, which is on the Virginia-North Carolina line.

"The corps issued the permit," Muehlenbeck said. "I think it reflects them standing behind that permit."

He added that he hoped the government's participation would help keep the case in Norfolk.

Chris Windham, North Carolina's assistant attorney general, said: "I'm kind of flabbergasted (the Corps) would want to litigate the same issue in two states."

He declined to say how the Justice Department's decision to intervene might affect North Carolina's defense.

"That would be putting the cart before the horse," he said. "We'll wait and see what the judge says about jurisdiction...if there is no jurisdiction, there is no case."

Windham reiterated North Carolina's stand that neither the Corps nor the city has the authority to sue the state.

North Carolina's suit against the Corps of Engineers challenges the agency's right to issue the pipeline permit without a full environmental impact study.

Proponents of the proposed 85-mile pipeline say it is the best way to ensure the future water needs of Virginia Beach, which expects to outgrow the supply it buys from Norfolk within 20 years. The pipeline would take about 10 years to build.

"The Nixon problems came at a bad time for the party," said Martin. "We had considerable momentum building, just as we have today. It's very comparable."

State Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty, who lost to Gov. Jim Hunt in the 1976 gubernatorial race, said he can't think of anything good that came out of the scandal. "Anyone in Republican politics running in the proximity of that time paid the penalty of Watergate," said Flaherty. "Watergate set this party back 10 years. We're just now recovering from it and going forward again."

But Edmisten disagreed, saying openness in government, cleaner campaign financing and a stronger system of government are the end result.

"I think we still have an imperial presidency," said Richard Current, retired professor of history at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. "There's still too much deception. There was an opportunity to make a more constitutional presidency."

Some contend the media was on a crusade against Nixon.

"I still believe that history might treat Richard Nixon a little better than the Washington Post and New York Times," said Bob Shaw, chairman of the Guilford County Republican party at the time.

Edmisten took issue with the views of some that Ervin and his staff were trying to persecute the president.

"I was never one of those people who wanted Mr. Nixon impeached and convicted," he said. "I never wanted to see him go to jail. I just didn't want the office of the presidency dragged through a trial. I was satisfied with the resignation."

Yesterday's Cryptokuip — SLY FOLKS TAKE PAIR OF TOY GUNS, TRIGGERING TOT'S TEMPER TANTRUM.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: Y equals T

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SAT., AUGUST 11, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's Full Moon requires that you do not get involved in any arguments for if you do, much trouble could follow for some time to come. Be very careful in driving.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your allies and friends could be acting strangely today, but take it in your stride and realize that they, too, are under pressure.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take it easy at home and don't argue with kin over expenses and so forth and maintain harmony.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Partners may want to make changes of some kind, so listen carefully and take under advisement. Do your weekend shopping early.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Amusements may be more costly than you plan on, so budget your money carefully.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You may think that partners are not cooperative today, but say nothing. The picture soon changes. Be very diplomatic.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get at all those small duties ahead of you and they are soon out of the way; then take any health treatments you may need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be encouraging with good friends who have had their egos crushed and gain their goodwill. Take time to visit a relative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A day to be obedient and observant, but say little since bigwigs are apt to be in a poor humor. Get marketing done early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle any travel or communication affairs and obey all rules applying to you. Keep active and cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study well any advice given by banker or business person and make sure it is to your benefit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't be so demanding in trying to get into new interests and you will fare much better. Take time for some sport or hobby.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get rid of any limitations you may have so that you can proceed along very intelligent lines.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will comprehend the woes of others and will want to help them and become a trouble shooter, so permit to use the talents early and slant the education along lines of the law. Teach not to be so rebellious and to make serious changes only when needed.

Train Strikes Man

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Winston-Salem Southbound train struck a Welcome man who was lying on the tracks early Thursday, but there is a question whether the man was dead before he was struck, a Davidson County Sheriff's Department spokesman said.

Capt. Billy Nail said 21-year-old Aaron Dexter Wagner was dragged several feet before the train could stop. He said an autopsy would be needed to determine if Wagner was dead before the train hit him.

Here's a test of your analytical skills. Did South succeed or fail in his contract of five clubs, and which tricks did he lose?

The auction was straightforward and reasonably accurate. Looking at both the North and South hands you would certainly choose three no trump as the optimum spot, but it is very difficult to reach that contract.

Had West led a spade this hand would have attracted no attention, but he made his normal lead of the king of hearts. And had declarer relied on finding West with the ace of spades for his overall, he would have lost three tricks in that suit. But South was not the sort to rely on a 50 percent proposition when he could unearth a sure-trick line.

Declarer won the ace of hearts, cashed the king and queen of trumps and ruffed a heart. Next came three high diamonds. Declarer stuffed a spade from hand and, when West discarded a heart on the third diamond, the contract became lay-down.

South simply continued with a fourth diamond and pitched another spade loser from hand. East won, but he did not relish the prospect of being on lead. If he led a red suit, declarer would discard a third spade from hand while ruffing on the board. If he led a spade, the defenders would get only one spade trick.

Either way, with the help of his loser-on-loser play South guaranteed his contract of five clubs. His only losers: a diamond and a spade! Well done if you got it right.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Insurance

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A New Jersey-based insurance company has filed suit in U.S. District Court to recover more than $100,000 in insurance benefits it paid to a Jacksonville woman who was convicted this year of conspiring to kill her husband.

The suit was filed in Raleigh by Prudential Insurance Co. of America against Alice Ann Gallagher. Mrs. Gallagher is serving a life sentence after her conviction in the 1978 slaying of her husband, Marine Staff Sgt. Thomas Patrick Gallagher. Gallagher, 27, was shot to death in his bedroom.

According to the suit, on Sept. 13, 1979, Prudential paid Mrs. Gallagher $100,000 plus $6,471 in interest from her husband's insurance policy. The suit alleges that Mrs. Gallagher obtained the proceeds as the result of a "fraudulent and murderous plan to kill her husband and defraud" the insurance company.

Cribbage

OLD TOWN, Maine (AP) — Gov. Joseph E. Brennan is passing up a chance to participate in a statewide challenge to determine who is the best cribbage player in the Pine Tree State, an aide says.

The challenge came from Timothy Love, tribal governor of Maine's Penobscot Indians, as part of an open invitation to all Maine cribbage players to participate in the first statewide tournament.

Brennan's press secretary, David Cheever, said Thursday his boss plans to attend a Democratic picnic in Brunswick and won't be able to go to the card tourney Aug. 25 at Indian Island.

James Sappier, a tribal representative, said a Brennan aide told him that the governor claims he's not a very good player.

"All cribbage players say that," Sappier said. "You have to be careful when they do — that's when they cream you."
