Chase Driver To Be Charged In 3 Robberies

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Law enforcement officials in Wayne and Lenoir Counties said today that a man taken into custody by Greenville police Monday morning following a car chase will be charged in connection with robberies at three fast-food restaurants over the past month where female employees were kidnapped and raped.

David Leroy Wise, 30, of Wrightsville Beach was taken into custody by local officers after the car, which had been reported stolen, he was driving wrecked about 12 miles south of Greenville at the intersection of Secondary Road 1723 and SR 1724, east of Ayden, while being chased by Greenville police.

The car, taken from McDonald's Restaurant in Mount Olive early Saturday morning following a robbery, was found parked at the Ramada Inn on Greenville Boulevard about 1:30 a.m. Monday by Officer Tommy Lee.

Sgt. C.B. Landreth said police watched the car until a fire broke out in a second floor guest room at the motel and Wise got into the vehicle and drove away. The chase started when Wise refused to stop.

Officer T.V. Woolard said Wise was charged with careless and reckless driving, speeding 100 mph in a 55 mph zone, speeding in excess of 15 mph over the speed limit to elude arrest, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, and felony possession of a stolen car.

Sources close to the investigation here said Wise confessed to the Mount Olive robbery-kidnap-rape and similar incidents at Burger King restaurants in Goldsboro on July 12 and in Kinston on July 19.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, also said Wise told local officers he had intended to rob the McDonald's Restaurant on Greenville Boulevard Monday morning but saw police and changed his mind.

When the fire broke out at the Ramada Inn, Wise decided to leave, the sources said.

Officials in Wayne and Lenoir counties confirmed that Wise has confessed to the robbery-kidnaping-rape cases.

Wayne County officers said Wise would be charged with the Mount Olive and Goldsboro incidents later today, while a spokesman for the Kinston Police Department said Wise would be charged with the incident there "sometime this week."

Wise is being held in the Wayne County jail without privilege of bond.

Fire-Rescue Department Chief Jenness Allen said the fire at the Ramada Inn destroyed a mattress and springs. He said the fire, which had been smoldering for some time, was apparently caused by a cigarette.

Police said this morning that they believe the fire was a coincidence and said Wise denied setting the fire to help his escape.

Chief Ted Holmes said this morning "I'm extremely proud of the police officer who first spotted the car. Wise had actually hidden it back there (at the northwest corner of the motel) ... also the way they handled the chase. The whole investigation was just outstanding police work."

AIRPORT BOMB — Los Angeles police and fire personnel block the taxiway between the new Pacific Southwest Airlines terminal and the Pan American Airlines terminal at Los Angeles International Airport Monday.

An explosive device was discovered aboard a bus carrying Turkish athletes to the airport as they returned home after participating in the Olympics. More than 3,000 people were evacuated during the incident. (AP Laserphoto)

Bomb Found On L.A. Bus

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "real hero" policeman who spotted a ticking bomb on a bus carrying Turkish Olympic athletes' luggage disarmed it by pulling out the right wire, the police chief said, but authorities were left wondering how the bomb got there.

Officer James Pearson discovered the bomb as he checked the bus while it was unloading at Los Angeles International Airport about 5:45 p.m. Monday, minutes after Turkish athletes and officials had left another bus at the airport.

The 52 members of the Turkish delegation were among thousands of athletes and officials who poured out of the city a day after the Summer Olympics ended. The Turkish group departed late Monday aboard two planes bound for Paris.

No one was injured, and "no one has taken any credit" for planting the bomb, said police Chief Daryl Gates, although immediate speculation centered on Armenian terrorists who had threatened to attack the Turkish athletes. Such an attack was a chief worry of Olympic security planners.

Publicity about the incident touched off a spate of telephoned bomb threats. Gates said, forcing the evacuation of about 6,000 people from three terminals of the one of the nation's busiest airports.

And at Dulles Airport outside Washington, D.C., authorities herded U.S. medalists and their guests off buses as a "purely precautionary" measure, said airport spokesman David Hess. The buses were searched, delaying athletes who were in the capital for a parade today, about 1 1/2 hours.

Los Angeles police said it was not known how the bomb was planted in the wheel well, evading a security (Please turn to page 2)

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT

Hotline has been appealing for support for the establishment of a Ronald McDonald House here. The house will serve as a place to stay and to provide community support for the families of seriously ill children hospitalized here. An admission-free softball tournament will be held by the Winterville Jaycee Women this weekend at the Winterville Recreation field, with all team participation fees and concession proceeds going to either the Ronald McDonald House or to a tornado-displaced family that the organization is sponsoring. Games start Saturday at 9 a.m.; Sunday at 1 p.m. Friday night games will be held if there is sufficient participation, according to Lynn Branch, a member of the sponsoring organization.

BIDS NOT OUT

Richard Dawson, financial officer for the Cypress Glen Methodist Retirement Home mentioned in Hotline last Thursday, has asked for a clarification. He said bids have not yet been taken for the construction of the initial phase of the project, that this will probably be done about the last of August or first of September. City School Board Commends Pitt Panel For School Financing Plan

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A resolution officially commending the Pitt County Commissioners for that board's "wisdom, courage, foresight and dedication to the children of Pitt County" was unanimously approved by the Greenville Board of Education on Monday night.

The resolution is addressed to action taken by Pitt Commissioners to levy a special capital outlay tax and to pledge the revenue from that tax to a reserve fund to provide more school facilities.

The school board's resolution said "the financing plan devised by the commissioners to 'pay as you go' will save the taxpayers millions of dollars and thereby provide more funds which can be used to directly benefit the boys and girls of Pitt County."

A school lunch price for school year 1984-85, the same as for the past school year, was adopted. Prices for fully paid lunches are: grades K-3, 75 cents; K-6, 80 cents; 7-12, 95 cents. Reduced price lunches, all grades, 40 cents; paid breakfast for students in K-6, 40 cents; and reduced price breakfast, grades K-6, 30 cents.

A la carte prices will be priced on a per item basis.

Contracts were approved to be awarded to low bidders on dairy and bakery products. Low bidder on dairy products is Carolina Dairy Products, and on bakery items, Fox's Holsum Bakery.

In a report prepared by Dr. R.L. Preston, maintenance supervisor, the board was informed that action is now being taken by the Dynamit Nobel Co. to install new roofing at both Aycock Junior High and Greenville Middle Schools. Material is currently being delivered to the two sites.

The company, manufacturer of Trocal Roofing systems used for original roof construction at the two schools, has employed Robcal Inc. of Norfolk, Va. to do the installation work. It is estimated the work will take approximately six to eight weeks to complete — which will run well into the early weeks of school.

The school attorney, Phillip R. Dixon, has recommended that in view of the fact that the company is now taking positive action to correct the problems with the roofs, that no action be taken to pursue legal remedies. The board had indicated earlier it might take legal action to include calling in the company's bond if prompt action was not taken to correct the leaking roofs at no cost to the school system.

Approval was given to the 1984-85 budget resolution totaling $3,914,273 in the local current expense fund; $6,274,329 in the state public school fund; $785,590 in the federal grants fund; $986,841 in the school food service fund; and $212,794 in the capital outlay fund.

Superintendent Delma Blinson explained that the budget resolution contains essentially what the board originally requested with the budget item figures reflecting totals after Pitt County Commissioners had deleted equalization funds and deletion of funds for items provided by state funds.

The $6,274,329 state budget, Blinson told the board, is a tentative figure subject to change after the state provides its final figures to the school systems. Also, in the capital outlay area, the city school must purchase a bus at an estimated cost of $25,000 to replace a bus on loan from the state for the past two years, the maximum time for a bus loan.

A 17-page Science Advisory Committee report was approved with the stipulation that the school administration would implement various portions of recommendations in the program as appropriate — i.e., as funding and instructional personnel becomes available to put various parts of the science program into effect.

Board member Wilson Rhodes was elected as the board's legislative liaison person to succeed Sue Zadeits. The board's former chairman, Jack Wall, has been nominated for consideration by the N.C. School Board Association as a member of that association's board of directors to represent Region 1, of which Pitt County is a part.

In executive session, the board approved the resignation of seven teachers and the election of 21 teachers.

Fire-Rescue Staff Exempted

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Both fire and rescue personnel will be issued free town tags in 1985 and will be exempt from the $1.50 vehicle tax levied by the town, the Ayden Board of Commissioners has decided.

In addition, emergency personnel that are members of both squads will receive a $3 tax exemption. The board requested at its monthly meeting Monday that the Ayden Fire and Rescue squads provide Town Clerk Ralph Ford with a list of vehicles and owners that will receive free plates and be exempt from the tax.

Ayden Fire Chief Calvin Hardee asked the board to remove the tax for fire-rescue personnel, including a double exemption for individuals who serve on both squads. "The situation is complicated because some families have members that serve on both organizations, and some husbands serve on one while wives serve on the other," he said. "We need some system where we can exempt each person or the vehicle of the person that is involved."

The board also approved the exchange of a 1971 town-owned tractor for a 1973 one-half-ton truck owned by the Ayden Housing Authority. Town Manager Don Russell reported that both pieces of equipment "checked out" to the satisfaction of the town and the housing authority, and that the loan, sale or exchange of property between governmental units is authorized by the North Carolina General Statutes.

In other business: •The board declared a 1977 passenger vehicle and a 1970 backhoe surplus property and authorized the town to accept bids for the sale of the items. A minimum price of $2,500 was placed on the backhoe. "It's worth that much to us," said Russell. "If we cannot get that much for it, we'll utilize it ourselves."

•A $2,750 engineering contract with McDavid Associates Inc. for paving preparation work on Garris Street was approved. The street will be paved and drained under the Community Development Block Grant program.

•A municipal records retention (Please turn to page 2)

Winterville Will Buy Breathalyzer

The Winterville Board of Aldermen decided Monday night to allow the police department to buy a Breathalyzer for $191.

•Three bids for a maintenance shelter were received with the lowest being that of Wimco Builders, which will meet with the board Sept. 10. Other bidders were Ayden Builders and Custom Builders.

•A 1980 Chevrolet police car was declared surplus and plans were made for its disposal.

•A dog limitations law concerning the number of dogs that can be kept in a pen was tabled until further study has been made. There is no dog limit in the present law.

•The board approved Johnnie Smith's request to put a double-wide trailer on his lot on Chapman Street.

The alderman stipulated that the wheels must be removed and the trailer must be underpinned.

•The board accepted a petition for curb, gutter and rock improvements for Lane Street. A public hearing for this item was set for Sept. 10 at 7 p.m.

•The water supply at Knoll Acres on Tar Road was approved.

•A public officer and employee liability insurance plan was approved.

•The Electricities Emergency Assistance program was tabled until further study.

•Leland Tucker reported that the town of Winterville had applied for and received a Community of Excellence Award, which will be presented to the town on Aug. 21. A clean-up day will be held Saturday at 9 a.m. beginning at the Winterville Town Hall.

Under Investigation

Greenville police are investigating a break-in at the Brody's mens store at Pitt Plaza which was reported at 11:25 p.m. Monday.

Officer K.P. Fuller said police, checking after a burglar alarm went off, saw a man coming through the front window of the store. Later, officers said they saw the man and a youth fleeing on bicycles, but were unable to catch them.

Fuller said officers recovered $967 of clothes and other items from two trash bags left at the scene by robbers.

Sgt. C.B. Landreth said police later recovered another $200 of clothing taken from the building behind Greenville Middle School on Arlington Boulevard. A youth riding a bicycle threw the clothes down, officers said, and was chased but eluded arrest.

schedule reducing the time that records such as leases and utility receipts have to be kept was adopted. The agreement, a standard one for municipalities, according to Russell, mandates that records such as utility bills must be kept only two years instead of the five-year period now required.

•The board authorized Pitt County to perform plumbing inspections on homes included in the Community Development Block Grant program.

•Mayor Ross Persinger reported that he had received numerous complaints about overgrown lots in the town and proposed that the town enter into a contract with a maintenance person to mow these lots and bill the owners monthly. "According to the law, this cannot be done," Town Manager Russell told the board. "Currently, each time a complaint on a lot is received we have to notify the owner and he has to comply within 14 days. The law does not, however, allow us to mow the lot and charge him for it."

•A meeting was set for 7:30 p.m. Aug. 27 with residents of the Edgewood, Short and Stokes streets area to discuss paving problems in the neighborhood.

•A budget amendment totaling $1,000 was approved to place a grant from the North Carolina General Assembly to the Ayden Public Library in the library budget account. "The library has no bank account," said Russell, "so the grant must be brought in as a revenue item." The library's board of trustees will determine how the funds will be allocated, he said, and a file will be maintained as the money is spent.

network that law enforcement officials said was particularly aimed at protecting high-risk nations like Turkey.

The Turkish delegation had traveled to the airport on two other buses to board an Air France jet and were already inside the terminal when the bomb was found. But there were "several people," possibly Olympic security guards, aboard the baggage bus when Pearson found the bomb. Gates said, and it could have caused "severe damage" had it gone off.

Gates said Pearson, 40, and a nine-year police veteran, "spotted something that shouldn't have been there."

The bomb was ticking and as Pearson grabbed it, an alarm went off, "indicating the bomb was ready to blow," Gates said.

"He reached up and pulled out what he thought was the right wire" and then "raced about 60 yards" to carry the bomb away from the bus. Gates said. The bomb squad was then called, and the bomb was neutralized, Gates said at the airport.

He called Pearson "a real hero." Police Officer John Weick, who saw the bomb, said it was dark and metallic-looking and was about 8 inches long and 5 inches in diameter.

Gates denied that security was lax after the Olympics ended Sunday and said: "I wouldn't even want to begin to speculate" how the bomb got on the bus. He acknowledged that attacks on the Turks had been a chief worry for police.

Gates said he thought the three buses carrying the Turks and their bags had been inspected before they were loaded at the Olympic Village at the University of California at Los Angeles for the 10-mile trip to the airport.

Chuck Novak, a United Airlines spokesman in Chicago, said there was a call to Los Angeles International Airport several hours after three DC-8 jets carrying U.S. medal winners on a victory tour "were long gone" from the airport. He did not say that call was directed at the U.S. team.

Another call to United — after the bomb incident — may have had a specific target, he said.

"We had a second call, probably directed against an Egyptian 767 charter" carrying athletes and officials to Egypt, Novak said.

The attempted bombing also caused authorities at Dulles Airport near Washington, D.C., to remove 632 U.S. athletes and their guests from buses for precautionary inspections, airport spokesman David Hess said. U.S. medalists are on a national tour.

The bomb was by far the most serious breach of security at the Olympics. During the Games, police helicopters hovered over or near the competition sites and SWAT teams were visible on high buildings around some of sites.

One of the biggest worries was Armenian terrorists, who want Turkey to acknowledge slaughtering 1.5 million Armenians during World War I. Turkey has refused to admit the deaths occurred.

On Aug. 5, Turkish boxer Cemal Oner was the target of threats by a group calling itself the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. Security was extremely heavy for his bout with Argentina's Pedro Ruben Decima, which Decima won.

Because more than a dozen threats were made, Turkish athletes weren't allowed to leave the Olympic Village, said Togay Bayatli, press attache for the Turkish Olympic Committee.

Armenian terrorists claimed responsibility for the 1982 killing of Turkish Consul General Kemal Arikan, gunned down on a West Los Angeles street. Two other Turkish diplomatic officials were killed in 1973 near Santa Barbara, about 100 miles to the northwest, and Armenian terrorists claimed credit.

Indicted

ROME (AP) — A magistrate has indicted 180 people in connection with five years of terrorist activities in Rome by the leftist Red Brigades guerrillas.

Purse Thefts

Greenville police are investigating the theft of purses from five cars parked at the Plitt Theater parking lot Monday.

Joyner of Farmville, and Tim Brinson of Simpson.

A total of $65 in cash was included in a list of items contained in the purses.

Man Charged

Oscar Hill, 41, of Winterville has been charged by Pitt County sheriff's deputies with taking indecent liberties with a minor.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning that Hill was arrested last Friday. He said Hill is charged with taking indecent liberties with a 13-year-old Winterville girl in a series of events between 1978 and 1981.

Hill was placed under a $1,000 bond pending a hearing scheduled for Aug. 20.

Renny Jane Myers Weds R.L. Cannon III

Renny Jane Myers and Richard Luby Cannon III were united in marriage Aug. 4 at 5 p.m. in the Arlington Forest United Methodist Church in Arlington, Va.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Susan L. Pate and the Rev. Wade Mumford. A program of wedding music was presented by organist Patty Lewis, guitarist Kenneth Gale and soloist Lisa Lumberg.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Renice P. Myers of Arlington, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Cannon Jr. of Vanceboro.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The gown was designed with a Victorian inspired neckline encircled with silk Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of imported English net embroidered in a floral motif. Appliques of Venise lace beaded with pearls outlined the yoke and extended over the bodice front. The long fitted sleeves were fashioned in English net embellished with appliques of silk Venise lace centered with pearls. The sheer organza skirt featured a scalloped hem which extended into a chapel train. She wore a bridal hat with a turned up side trimmed with silk flowers and beaded Brussels lace. A tier veil of illusion accented the hat. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Deborah Kay Finch, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Kathleen M. Herbert of Raleigh, Barbara K. Daniels of Winston-Salem and Joyce Singleton of Arlington, Va.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included K. Jeffrey Cannon of Washington and Keith Cannon of Vanceboro, brothers of the bridegroom, and Tyler E. Myers of Arlington, Va., brother of the bride.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

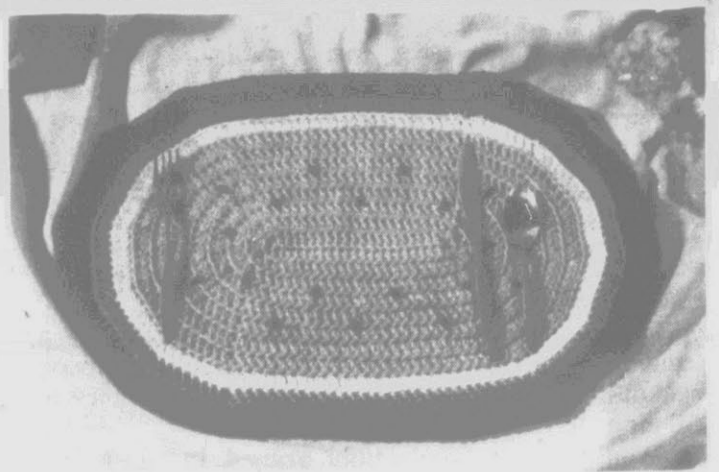

Set an inviting table all year round with summer-fresh watermelon place mats crocheted in washable acrylic craft yarns. Looking good enough to eat, a set of four makes a super gift or bazaar item.

To obtain beginner-easy directions for crocheting the Watermelon Place Mats, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-0812 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler (The Daily Reflector), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. C-0812 by sending a check or money order for $14.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, yarn and full instructions.

So often I hear people say, "Oh, I can crochet—I just can't understand and follow written instructions." I believe this is because the instructions look much more complicated than they usually are.

Whenever possible, I try to convince someone using ordinary crochet directions to write out those instructions herself, spelling out all abbreviated terms and then following them step-by-step rather than trying to understand the whole pattern at once. Following this suggestion, most crocheters find that they can successfully follow any set of instructions.

By the way, whenever I describe one of my instruction leaflets as "beginner-easy," you may be assured that all terms are written out fully, with no abbreviations.

Learning to follow instructions opens the door to the wonderful world of pattern stitchery for crocheters who have previously settled for simple single and double crochet and one or two basic pattern stitches. And, after a time or two of rewriting directions, most crocheters can then follow the abbreviated instructions quite readily.

Decreasing and increasing in crochet patterns is frequently puzzling. To decrease, you may be told something like this: "dc in each of next 2 sts, holding back last lps of each st, yo and thru all loops." It's no wonder that many crocheters don't know what to do!

Unabbreviated, this means: "Work a double crochet in each of the next 2 stitches, holding back the last loops of each stitch. Next, yarnover and pull the hook through all of the loops on the hook." Even this may be confusing, so I will explain further.

To do this is, work a double crochet to the point where you have 2 loops on the hook. Now, leaving these 2 loops on the hook, work a double crochet in the next stitch to the point where you have a total of 3 loops on the hook. Your final step will be to wrap the yarn around the hook (yarnover) and draw this yarn through all the loops on the hook at once. You will now have 1 stitch where you previously had 2.

This same decrease can be worked with single, half-double or triple crochet stitches. Just remember to always work to the point just before you are to "yarnover and pull through the loops" for the last time in any stitch and then start the next stitch without taking this last step of the previous stitch.

To decrease at the beginning of a row, you will sometimes be told to slip-stitch across a certain number of stitches. At the end of the row, you might be told simply to leave some stitches unworked and turn the work before reaching the end of the row.

Increases are frequently made by simply making two or more stitches in the space where only one stitch is usually worked.

If you are not given specific instructions for increasing or decreasing, you should be safe in using the methods described above.

Visiting Couple Sees Church Thief At Work

DEAR ABBY: This is serious. We are senior citizens who visited a Catholic church in a nearby town. A nice young man and an older man took up the collection. We sat in the last row by the stairs. The young man finished collecting downstairs and started to go up into the choir to collect. As he was going up the winding stairs, he put his hand in the collection basket and took a handful of money, which he transferred to his own pocket!

My husband saw him take the money, poked me to look, and we both saw him pocket the money. We could not believe what our eyes had seen.

We wonder how much he took, and how long this has been going on. What should we do?

EYEWITNESSES

DEAR WITNESSES: Tell the priest what you saw. And be prepared to confront the alleged thief should it be necessary.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I, who have been married a little less than two years, recently had a frank discussion about our sex lives. He told me he loves me, is always aroused around me and wants sex at least three times a week. I told him I love him, too, but I am not constantly aroused in his presence and once a week is enough for me. I lied. (The truth is twice a month would be enough for me.) He has told me that he doesn't want me to fake how much I am enjoying it. He would be horrified if he knew how much faking I have done.

This is the first major conflict to come up in our marriage, and I don't know what to do. I think a good compromise would be once a week, but sometimes I cringe when he touches me because I'm usually not interested.

Help! Thanks for being an impartial party.

MISMATCHED IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR MISMATCHED: It's apparent that sex is far more important to your husband than it is to you. That is not to say that you are "wrong"—or he is. You put it well when you sign yourself "mismatched."

In order for a marriage to endure, it must be based on honesty (no faking). A marriage counselor could direct you to a competent sex therapist. Ideally, you and your husband should see a counselor together. But if he refuses, go alone.

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I gave birth to twin boys. My husband and I are proud of our twins, but why must strangers be so obnoxious when they see twin babies?

If I hear another person say, "Oh, double trouble" or, "I'll bet you have your hands full," I will scream. They are not trouble—they are a joy. And yes, I do have my hands full, but so does every parent with even one small child.

In addition to those comments, I find myself answering the same dumb questions over and over: No, they are not identical. Yes, twins do run in my family. Yes, I work. Yes, I knew I was having twins. No, I did not give them rhyming names.

I get some compliments, but for every compliment, I hear the "double trouble" put-down. I am so afraid my twins will grow up believing it, and they'll have a poor self-image.

Is there an appropriate answer for these idiots who assume that all twins are double trouble?

MOTHER OF TWINS

DEAR MOTHER: Try this: "I consider myself twice blessed."

DEAR ABBY: Please tell your readers (and especially that Bible-thumping miser who "Loves to Travel") that a tip is not a nice little "extra." It is survival. Also, 15 percent of the dinner check is the standard tip. A 20 percent tip for excellent service is appreciated more than you can imagine. Also, the tip is not the waiter's to keep. He has to share it with the busboy, bartender and captain.

Tell "Loves to Travel" to keep traveling, but please don't stop in Denver.

LOVES TO EAT

Work Of Art Needs An Artist

Other Resources

A national issue for some time now has been the admission of women to the Jaycees.

The thinking is that the Jaycees is not simply a men's social club; rather it is a means for young adults to obtain leadership training and advance in their chosen careers.

Women have successfully argued in court that they were at an disadvantage in their work if they could not become Jaycee members.

The North Carolina Jaycees decided last weekend that their organization should be kept exclusively for men. They recommended rejection of a national bylaws change which would have allowed women to join Jaycee clubs.

We are inclined to think that the state Jaycees are not changing with the times. Nevertheless, the exclusion of women is not insurmountable for women in professions and business. There are a number of fine organizations which will provide the leadership training and access to civic work which can help women advance. Toastmasters provides for training in public speaking. Anyone can volunteer for work with the bloodmobile, United Way and many other public activities.

Whatever the Jaycees do about admitting them, career women who have the leadership ability and the desire to advance can find adequate outlets for their talents. Our own community is begging for go-getters.

Big Yawn

It has been a year of spectacles.

There was the New Orleans Worlds Fair, the Democrat Party's national convention, the Jackson Brothers' tour (who could ignore that?) and then the Olympics in Los Angeles.

It's been a big year for attention-getting, and there's less than half-a-year to go. What else is scheduled?

Well, later this month we have another national political convention (in Dallas), the national elections, and try as we may, the only other closing acts that come to mind (barring the World Series and some bowl games) will be the Christmas story and the Times Square mob on Dec. 31 at midnight.

The Dallas convention?

Right now it shapes up as a prolonged yawn. No contest. No floor fights in sight (yet). An exhortation for four more years; and that's it!

There have been whispers that a lot of Class AAA demonstrators are clamoring to parade or wave signs in the convention hall's parking lot. (Some amateurs tempted by television coverage may show up, but they lack pizzazz.)

An impresario might find good drama in the demonstrators. If a few of them get carried away with the spirit of the thing, it could help the convention Nielsens. There is still time for Republican convention-planners to get an act together. It could happen; but our imagination is not that fertile.

Coming so soon after the XXIII Olympiad, the Republican National Convention has all the early factors of a showman's nightmare.

Columnists Say Clean Air Is A Myth

LOS ANGELES — Washingtonians take their city's monuments for granted; in New York, Broadway gets mostly shrugs.

In L.A., arguably America's smog capital, low visibility on an otherwise sunny day raises as many eyebrows as divorce in Hollywood. That is, not many.

Their paltry concern over this region's consistently unhealthy air is something of which Southern Californians can't be proud. But the tolerance here is almost typically American. Too many of us apparently feel that air pollution is under control, if not resolved.

Such a myth can only undermine the nation's will to resolve the problem in full.

The dangerous illusion of cleaner air can be traced to the day President Nixon signed the 1970 Clean Air Act. That landmark law gave state and local governments broad authority to bring air quality in line with national standards. Once those rules were worked out by a new Environmental Protection Agency, emissions from cars, power plants and industrial facilities were to be curbed.

Despite setbacks in fulfilling these objectives, the myth received big boosts from the accumulation of new regulations and government agencies; catalytic converters and other innovations; successes in such worst-case cities as Pittsburgh, and the emergence of new distractions like hazardous wastes. By 1980, an always anti-reform Corporate America was winning converts to its cost-benefit arguments, and Ronald Reagan could get away with claiming in Youngstown, Ohio, that air pollution "has been substantially controlled."

But visitors to the 23rd Olympiad can only wonder at Reagan's reckoning. Even during the last week, which has been marked by relatively light highway traffic, L.A.'s smog problem has been evident to all but ABC's well-filtered cameras and announcer Jim McKay's glib imagination.

Indeed, since July 1, the air in downtown L.A. has exceeded the federal government's unhealthy threshold (.12 parts per million for certain pollutants) on 14 days. The level has exceeded the "smog episode" mark (.2 ppm) on four occasions. In nearby San Bernardino, the local air quality says, there have been 24 smog episodes this year alone.

Los Angeles and their neighbors respond to bad smog as others might a bad thunderstorm: Stay indoors and off the roads, if you please.

Yet L.A.'s undramatic response isn't unique. Denver, Phoenix and Houston are just a few of the nation's other metropolitan areas that still suffer from chronic air pollution. Warns David Hawkins, a former EPA assistant administrator for air programs: "It's safe to say that any city with 500,000 or more people has an air pollution problem."

Blame can be laid at the feet of federal officials who have extended compliance deadlines, state and local governments that have weakly enforced their own laws and failed to encourage public transportation, and the private interests that have pressured both levels of bureaucracy. "Air pollution is no longer a technical issue," says Hawkins. "It's a political issue."

Everyday drivers are also at fault. The EPA estimates, for example, that one motorist in five ruins his car's anti-smog device by either tampering with it or using leaded gas. The unrelenting demand for leaded gas, in fact, has prompted an EPA pledge to remove all of it from the marketplace by 1996.

According to one oil industry analyst, a lead ban could bankrupt thousands of refineries and service stations and increase gas prices by 20 cents per gallon. The prediction is in keeping with the EPA's own estimate, released this week, that congressionally authorized air pollution programs could cost each American more than $100 yearly in increased taxes and consumer prices through 1990. (Water pollution programs would add another $100 plus.)

Such projected costs might bring the complaint that the air isn't that bad. For those who quibble, however, evidence of the physiological effects of carbon monoxide, ozone and nitrogen dioxide may be enlightening. So may reports that acid rain is a national, not regional, problem. Even if the EPA chose not to balance its new estimates with the benefits of pollution controls, those benefits are as crisp and clear as Los Angeles (cough!) is not.

requires some sense of design, of composition, of a thought-out relationship among the several elements. But no such discipline can be observed in the Lewiston amusement: The beams were to jut skyward "at random angles." The lark thought was "to let chance into it."

A work of art ought also to say something. It ought to communicate an idea, a comment, an emotion, from the mind of the painter or sculptor to the mind of the viewer. This is not true, of course, of the purely decorative arts. The paintings of Stuart Davis and Juan Miro, and the linoleum patterns of Piet Mondrian, don't really say much of anything, but they are pretty to look at and they do reflect certain disciplines of color and composition. But the only idea to be conveyed at Lewiston is that the curators of the Artpark are nuts.

A work of art, if it truly would qualify as such, ought to be meant to endure. The Lewiston folly will endure, all right; it will endure until the jackhammers come. But that is not the kind of enduring we ordinarily have in mind. We want works of art that will keep speaking to us through the ages, works that will reflect not only the ideas of the artist but also his skill, his craftsmanship, his mastery of the medium he works in.

For the past 40 or 50 years the art world — especially the American art world — has been infested with glib critics and greedy dealers who have created markets for such audacious fellows as the California professor. I recall one piece of what was called "sculpture" at the Corcoran Gallery a few years ago. It was a kind of pinball machine, electrically operated, that popped ping-pong balls at random from a hole in the middle. There was another sculpture composed of two pieces of lumber and an electric lamp; the janitor was to arrange the lumber and the lamp so that a pretty shadow was cast upon the gallery wall.

I will go to my grave denying that the drips and dribbles of the Jackson Pollock school ever will qualify as lasting "art." The lady who put together little black boxes and painted them black was no sculptor in my book. We have had second-rate painters who painted panels a solid blue, and framed them, and became sensations overnight. From time to time mischievous newsmen plant a canvas in an art show. The thing looks as if it could have been painted by a chimpanzee, and sure enough, it transpires that it was in fact painted by a chimpanzee.

The critics are a part of the whole discreditable hoax. Someone once said of a painting by Bradley Walker Tomlin that here "decorative elegance is given depth by an aristocratic sobriety of spirit." What that was, was hogwash. What will the critics say of Lewiston's Operation Plop?

Extraordinary Session For Mondale

MADISON, Ala. (AP) — In the sweltering heat of the high school gym, Walter F. Mondale took off his coat, loosened his tie and began to talk a bit about himself, briefly shedding his public image of stiff formality.

He talked of religious faith and an early dispute with his wife Joan, of pride in his family and his faith in Americans, of moral leadership and the struggle over abortion.

For Mondale, the reserved and controlled politician who rarely reveals his private thoughts, it was an extraordinary session.

"I'm proud of Joan. I'm proud of our family. I'm proud of our faith," the Democratic presidential candidate said at the campaign stop Thursday. "I don't say this to brag because I don't want to get elected on this basis, but that's very important and central to my life and I want you to know it."

Throughout the South last week, a region crucial to his hopes, Mondale hammered away at President Reagan repeatedly on the deficit and other issues. But he also tried to present himself just as South Carolina Gov. Richard Riley described him in Columbia on Wednesday: "a decent and a moderate person. He thinks moderately and he talks moderately."

Mondale, not known for displays of emotion, talked of the importance of feelings in politics as he made his second campaign trip across the South in as many weeks.

"We are not just people of upper nerve centers. We are people with hearts and souls and emotions," he said. "We want not just Gross National Product achieved. We want a sense of values and purposes that make us feel good and satisfied about ourselves and our country."

Facing the "town meeting" in this north Alabama section of the Bible Belt, Mondale talked of hard work and self-reliance in a way that might surprise those hearing the protégé of the late Hubert Humphrey and defender of many liberal ideas.

"I want to tap in America, in our people, a realistic sense that there are no free meals, life is not that easy, you've got to work hard, you've got to earn, you've got to be self-reliant. That's expected of you," Mondale said.

Standing in front of a huge American flag, Mondale sketched his vision of a proud America that he contrasted with the approach of Reagan, who leads him in the South in recent polls.

"I want America to feel proud of itself for the right reasons...not because we're bragging and pushing people around but because as America, we're so good, no one can catch up with us," he said.

Mondale was asked direct and personal questions at the town meeting. And generally he replied in kind.

To one questioner who asked about his faith, Mondale started from his days as, in the words of Sen. Howell Heflin's introduction, a "P.K." — a preacher's kid.

"You have a right to know. You asked about me. My father was a (Methodist) minister. I was brought up in the Christian faith," Mondale said.

"I had one problem: Joan's father was a Presbyterian minister and the question was whether I would become a Presbyterian or Joan would become a Methodist. That was the first big fight we had. And I'm now a Presbyterian," he added to appreciative laughter from the crowd.

"But I am a Christian. My faith is central to my life. I believe that the belief in God, the values, the purposes, the meaning that comes from our faith and the grace has to be central to our life," he said.

But Mondale was quick to take a swipe at those who wear their religion as a public badge.

"I was always taught when I grew up that personal beliefs and behaviors spoke for themselves," he said. "And when someone came to me and said 'Look at me, I'm a big-shot Christian and I'm honest', grab your billfold right away."

Then Mondale faced a question from Cookie Kelley, an opponent of abortion rights.

"This is one of the most sensitive issues in American political and personal life," Mondale replied. "It is an issue I've prayed over. I'm deeply concerned."

While he said "There is whole range of issues on which I think you and I would agree on," he reiterated support for a woman's right to choose an abortion.

"I think this essentially has to be a judgment made by people in their own lives on the basis of their own faith," Mondale said.

As more than 500 people continued to listen in the sauna-like heat, Mondale was asked what emotional issue he would emphasize in this election. The former vice president answered by describing moral leadership and national pride.

"If you don't believe that people essentially seek out the truth and vote on the truth, you'd go crazy in American politics," he said.

Strength For Today

These days there is a great deal of display of romantic affection in public places. Boys and girls walk down the main street with arms entwined about each other. Many married couples make public display of love for each other.

Is this wrong? No, it is not wrong, for nothing in the world is better than love, and the affection of ardent souls for each other is something we can be sure has upon it the blessing of God, and should have the full approval of men.

But are these new customs becoming? The love of two people for each other is private, delicate, personal. Indelicacy can easily edge over into vulgarity. Right things become unbecoming when done in the wrong place at the wrong time. Suppression is usually evil, but self-restraint and delicacy never are.

RACING PIGS — The Heinold racing pigs round the final corner of an 85-foot circular track at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield. The pigs, pampered darlings during the prime of their careers, are trained for racing.

But when their days on the track are over, most wind up in the same manner as their less fortunate cousins. (AP Laserphoto)

Oinking Porkers Run The Races

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — They end up like most other pigs, but for a brief time they are pampered porkers — oinkers that get daily doctor's visits, special food and water and 24-hour entertainment during training.

These are the racing pigs, a team of 26 that grunt and squeal around an 85-foot oval track toward a cream-filled chocolate cookie and sometimes a photo finish.

With names like Loin Ranger, Mean Weenie, Calvin Swine and Olympig, the Heinold Commodities Inc. pigs travel to state fairs and farm shows throughout the Midwest during the summer.

Crowds ringed the track as the bell rang — setting five porkers, saddle cloths and all, racing toward the cookie Monday, the last day of a five-day stint at the Illinois State Fair.

No money changed hands, but spectators could "bet" on the races by picking a free ticket bearing the number of their favorite pig. Those who chose the winner could claim T-shirts, patches, key chains or, naturally, piggy banks.

Mean Weenie won the opening race Monday with a time of 5.73 seconds. Spectators who threw their lot in with the Weenie won a pig-racing patch.

The pigs are trained in Galva by Roy Holding, who has been putting the porkers through their paces since 1977.

The pigs, about 12 weeks old and weighing less than 80 pounds, eventually are sold and usually wind up as bacon and pork chops.

But while they're on the team, the pigs "are treated more like people than a lot of people are," Holding said.

A veterinarian visits them daily, checking for stress, among other things. They drink special water, pig out on special feed that keeps them in racing form and travel in a luxury van with running water and fans over each pen.

"They do much better than we do at some of the hotels we wind up at," he told the crowd waiting for the first race.

There are 22 races daily at the show. Each pig races two to five times a day. This year, a new event has been added, the steeplechase, with the pigs hopping hurdles to win the cookie.

"All pigs have a sweet tooth," Holding said. But apparently they're not picky — they didn't seem to notice when Holding switched to generic cookies from a more expensive name brand.

The pigs are on a 25-day racing schedule. After Springfield, they head for Iowa, Michigan and Ohio and eventually back to Illinois for a farm show at Champaign.

The porcine prima donnas have not time to squeal about boredom during training. They constantly listen to a radio to get them used to the noise of the crowd, Holding said. This year, they happen to be listening to many baseball games — particularly the Chicago Cubs.

"The pigs are just like all other Cubs fans," Holding said. "They were ornery as the devil until about a week and a half ago when the Cubs moved back into first place."

Once they get used to the noise, they seem to thrive on it, Holding said.

"They're really like people," he said. "They're real hams, no pun intended."

Cost Of Attending College To Rise 6 Percent This Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of a year at college jumps an average of 6 percent this fall, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology will be the nation's most expensive school for the third straight year with a tab of $16,130.

The projected 6 percent average cost hike for resident students was presented in an annual survey released Monday by The College Board. The increase in average total student costs at 3,200 two- and four-year public and private institutions marked a considerable easing from three straight years of double-digit increases.

College officials believe that many schools were finally responding to the falloff in the overall inflation rate, as well as to the increasing competition among colleges for capable 18-year-olds.

The 6 percent average increase is just slightly above the 4 to 5 percent overall inflation rate anticipated for next year, said Kathleen Brouder, associate director of the Board's College Scholarship Service.

The College Board survey is published each year in "The College Cost Book," and calculates total costs of more than 3,200 schools, including tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses and transportation.

The 1984-85 survey estimated that a year at a private, four-year college would cost an average of $9,022 for students living on campus, a 7 percent increase over a year ago. For commuting students, costs will total $7,782, or 6 percent higher than last year.

At public, four-year schools, total costs will go up by 5 percent to $4,881 for students living on campus, and a similar increase to $3,906 for commuters.

Average costs at private two-year colleges will rise 7 percent to $7,064 for resident students, and 6 percent to $5,996 for students living at home. At public two-year schools, costs will rise 5 percent to $3,998, and 2 percent to $3,423 for commuters.

Besides M.I.T., the most expensive schools in terms of anticipated total costs in 1984-85 are Bennington College, $16,040; Harvard-Radcliffe, $15,750; Prin-cton, $15,625; Barnard, $15,558; Yale, $15,500; Brandeis, $15,250; Tufts University, $15,236; Brown, $15,190, and Sarah Lawrence, $15,180.

The College Board is a private, nonprofit association of more than 2,500 secondary and higher education institutions.

Ford Issues Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says it will recall 361,900 1981-84 model cars with non-reclining front seats because of the potential for seat-belt damage during front-end crashes.

The recall involves 360,000 1981-83 Escort and Lynx four-door sedans and station wagons and 1,900 1984 Tempo and Topaz four-door sedans, Ford said Monday in a statement.

Seat belt webbing in cars with non-reclining front seats could come in contact with plastic trim covers on the sides of the front seats during high-speed, front-end accidents, the statement said. That in turn could cause them to deform or break or allowing belt webbing to be cut by a metal edge of a seat bracket, Ford said.

The automaker said it planned to install foam spacers on the sides of front seats to prevent the problem.

Some 83,889 1981-model Escort and Lynx station wagons equipped with optional reclining front seats also will be recalled to replace a bolt in the seat frame on the driver's side, the company said.

The bolts could fracture when the seat back was subjected to high loads, possibly causing the seat back to fall to the rear seat and cause the driver to lose control of the car, the automaker said.

CHESTERFIELD, England (AP) — A pair of identical twin sisters who married identical twin brothers on the same day have given birth to a boy and a girl within an hour of each other, officials report.

The 26-year-old mothers, Pauline and Pat Collister, both gave birth Saturday night at a hospital in this north England town.

Legally, the babies are first cousins, but medically they are brother and sister because their parents' genes are identical, a hospital spokesman said.

The women are believed to be Britain's only identical twin sisters married to identical twin brothers, Peter and John, 27.

Pat's 8 pound, 13 ounce boy arrived first, and Pauline's 7 pound, 6 ounce daughter followed 53 minutes later.

The Campaign

Mondale

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, making his third campaign trip in as many weeks to the South today, is preaching "a sensible defense" policy and criticizing President Reagan for free spending on big-ticket weapons.

Despite his attempt to put the focus on military issues this week, Mondale is being dogged by questions about the finances of his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro.

Mondale was beginning a two-day, four-state trip with a flight to Little Rock, Ark., for a "citizens forum" to take questions from the public.

He was going on to Memphis, Tenn., to greet supporters later in the day. Stops were planned Wednesday in Louisville, Ky., and Macon, Ga., before a return flight to Minnesota.

A CBS-New York Times poll released Monday shows Mondale-Ferraro trailing Reagan and Vice President George Bush by 54 percent to 38 percent, with the Democrats behind in all regions. The survey of 1,188 registered voters was taken Aug. 5-9 and has a margin of error plus or minus 3 percent.

This is the third straight week Mondale has been in the South, indicating the importance his campaign is placing on the region Reagan carried in 1980.

Reagan Joke

LOS ANGELES (AP) - While Democratic presidential hopeful Walter Mondale criticized President Reagan for joking that the Soviet Union was about to be bombed, White House officials sought to learn the cause of the slip-up that allowed the joke to be recorded by news networks.

CBS and NBC aired their recordings of the President's remarks on Monday evening's news programs, two days after Reagan told the joke while testing a microphone prior to his regular Saturday radio address from his ranch near Santa Barbara.

As recorded by CBS, the President said, "My fellow Americans, I'm pleased to tell you today that I've signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

A White House official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, confirmed the president had made the statement, but said it was merely a joke by a man who likes to tell jokes.

"It's unfortunate that it got out," he said. He added that the White House is investigating to see how the slip-up occurred and to make sure it didn't happen again.

Ferraro

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is stressing the need for improved crime control, but her West coast campaign swing has been preoccupied with constant questions about her family's finances.

And at every event, dozens of sign-waving anti-abortion demonstrators have picketed the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

Ms. Ferraro, who has promised a full family financial disclosure next Monday, has been met by frequent questioning about her finances and those of her husband, John Zaccaro, since arriving in California on Sunday on a week-long West coast tour.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reported that former Federal Election Commission attorney David Stein said Monday that he advised Ms. Ferraro in 1978 against accepting loans of more than $1,000 each from family members.

The statement contradicts sworn statements by Ferraro's husband and her campaign treasurer that they relied on the lawyer's advice in making $134,000 in family loans to Ferraro's congressional campaign.

The FEC accepted the word of Zaccaro and campaign treasurer David Blankstein that they had relied on Stein's legal advice. The FEC fined them $750 in settling a case on the excessive loans.

John Sasso, campaign manager for Ferraro, denied Stein's charge and said "there were several people there when the advice was given. They were several members of the congresswoman's campaign committee."

Platform

DALLAS (AP) — Republican platform writers are arguing over the final shape of a plank stronger than President Reagan wanted but not as tough as conservatives sought that "categorically" rejects tax increases to shrink huge federal budget deficits.

A proposed draft of the GOP platform was released late Monday in advance of the start today of a line-by-line review and revision of the document by the 106-member Platform Committee. The panel is expected to wrap up its work later this week and offer the platform for ratification Aug. 21 at the Republican National Convention.

The document largely reflects positions Reagan has espoused over the last 3 1/2 years and sidesteps many issues over which Republicans are divided. In contrast with the 1980 platform, the proposed document omits calls for military superiority over the Soviet Union, abolition of the departments of Energy and Education and insistence that future judicial appointments "respect the sanctity of human life."

OLD RIVALS — Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale, left, and former campaign rival Gary Hart had smiles for the press Monday. The two former rivals met as they arrived at a Minneapolis hotel to attend a meeting on military preparedness. (AP Laserphoto)

Hatfield Admits Made A Mistake

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., concedes that he made a mistake by permitting his wife, Antoinette, to perform real estate work for a Greek businessman at the same time the senator was enthusiastically aiding a multibillion dollar African pipeline project promoted by the businessman.

"I have made an error in judgment," Hatfield said Monday in his first detailed explanation of the controversy. "My insensitivity to the appearance of impropriety was a mistake."

Appearing jointly at a news conference, the Hatfields said they have donated $55,000 — the same amount she received in real estate fees from Basil A. Tsakos — to an Oregon charity.

The money went to the Portland Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, and officials there said they were startled when the Hatfields delivered a check and left after only a few minutes, shortly before the news conference.

Hoping to allay a controversy which has begun to threaten an otherwise easy re-election to a fourth Senate term, Hatfield, 62, said there was never any link between the money Tsakos paid Mrs. Hatfield and the proposed 2,200-mile pipeline from Saudi Arabia across Sudan, the Central African Republic and Cameroon.

"I did not regret one word, one action or one minute of my time" spent on the pipeline project, which Hatfield said is needed because of the political volatility of the Middle East.

Hatfield arranged for Tsakos to meet separately with former Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, and Exxon Corp. President Howard Kauffman, and wrote a letter on Senate stationery which Tsakos later used in his efforts to persuade African governments that influential American officials were behind the idea.

Inmate Brew

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Correction officials battling a popular inmate brew called "julep" confiscated 100 gallons in July alone, but a spokesman admitted it may be impossible to keep the potent drink out of prisons entirely.

Julep is made in plastic tubs provided inmates for dirty laundry or soft drink cans using yeast, sugar, water and a variety of fermentable foods such as fruits, potatoes, tomatoes and cornbread snatched from cafeteria lines.

Also known as "potato jack," "raisin jack," or "buck," julep takes less than 72 hours to brew, according to a recently paroled inmate who spent more than a decade behind prison walls in Tennessee. He asked that his name not be disclosed.

"That potato jack will knock your socks plumb off. I've seen guys kill each other over brewing that stuff. Inmates take julep brewing very seriously," he said.

Inmate Apologizes, Escapes Anyway

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Utah State Prison inmate who escaped from a guarded hospital room left a note saying he was sorry, but "I just want to be free."

A mail carrier found the note in a mailbox, along with a handgun taken from a prison guard and a wallet belonging to a hospital employee temporarily abducted by Ronnie Lee Gardner in his Aug. 6 escape from University of Utah Medical Center, authorities said.

The note from the 23-year-old convicted robber read, "Sorry. Here's the gun and the wallet taken from the guard at the hospital. I don't want to hurt no one else. I just want to be free."

The note was pinned to a pair of athletic socks and the loaded gun and wallet were wrapped inside the socks, said a police report.

The mail carrier notified police after he found the note Saturday.

Gardner's note is typical of him, said prison investigator Craig Rasmussen. "He always does these horrendous things and then several days later wonders why everyone is so mad at him."

Gardner escaped after being taken to the University of Utah hospital for stomach problems.

His handcuffs were removed at the hospital. Then, when a guard entered the examination room after Gardner had been treated, the inmate struck him and grabbed his gun.

Gardner was first sent to prison for robbery in 1980. In 1981, he was convicted of attempted escape, robbery and burglary.

Robber Nabs Self

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A would-be robber might have made off with his loot if he hadn't first gotten the drop on himself, police said.

The man dropped his pistol, which went off and wounded him in the leg as he was fleeing after the robbery of two men just outside the French Quarter, police said.

The suspect then sought help from a truck driver who had been stopped by Traffic Officer David Demesme, police said.

Demesme still was talking to the driver when the man limped up and said he had been shot. Demesme took the injured man to the hospital where he was later linked to the robbery.

A .357-caliber magnum revolver was found near the scene, and two watches and two wallets taken from the victims were recovered, police said.

The suspect, identified only as Jerome Williams, was arrested Sunday.

Peasants Killed

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police say Maoist guerrillas killed 51 peasants, including 15 children, in attacks on three villages in south central Peru.

A civil guard officer in Ayacucho, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said guerrillas of the Shining Path movement attacked the villages of Putajasa and Sachabamba, 90 miles south of Ayacucho. He said they killed 26 people after trying them on charges of collaborating with the government.

The officer of the 9th Civil Guard Command said guerrillas on the same day killed 25 peasants in the hamlet of San Pedro de Huaya, also after a trial in the village square. He said word of the killings had just reached Ayacucho.

British Acknowledge Error In Trying To Ban American

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The top British official for Northern Ireland said today his government's attempt to ban an American IRA sympathizer from the province was a "bad mistake" that led to violence at a weekend rally in Belfast.

"Sometimes your judgment is correct and borne out by events; sometimes it goes wrong," Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior told reporters in London.

Prior's comments came a day after a crowd officially estimated at 5,000, but judged by reporters to be twice that figure, marched in predominantly Catholic west Belfast to protest the killing of a Belfast man and the wounding of 20 people by police trying to arrest IRA supporter Martin Galvin on Sunday.

"I have to say in this case some mistakes have been made for which I take full responsibility," Prior said.

Earlier, the British government had said the attack was provoked by Galvin, other members of the New York-based Irish Northern Aid Committee (Noraid), and Sinn Fein — the legal political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Discarding the advice of the British ambassador to Washington, Sir Oliver Wright, Prior recommended that Galvin, Noraid's publicity director, be banned from entering Northern Ireland. Home Secretary Leon Brittan signed the ban order July 28.

Prior said the ban was imposed because Galvin "openly supported murder, violence, and collected money for arms to kill soldiers and policemen."

Galvin, a 34-year-old New York lawyer, turned up Sunday at a rally organized by Sinn Fein. Police, in an abortive attempt to catch him, stormed through a crowd of some 2,000 people. Sean Downs, 22, was killed in the melee.

There were suggestions that Galvin may have slipped out of Northern Ireland. The Daily Telegraph, a British newspaper, reported today that Noraid leaders expected Galvin to return to New York soon.

Michael Flannery, co-founder and director of Noraid, said in New York: "We know he is still at large and we are hoping that he has made it down to the 26 counties" — the Irish Republic.

The IRA is fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the province with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

Israelis Tie Up Crossing

JEBLAI, Lebanon (AP) — "Er-jaa! Emshi!" the Israeli soldier shouted in Arabic to the Lebanese man — "Go back! Get moving!"

The soldier, clutching an M-16 rifle, waved from atop a high earthen mound guarding the road to Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon. The desperate traveler tried to explain that he had a pass to enter the zone, that he had been waiting for more than two days at this checkpoint in the central Lebanese mountains. But it was in vain.

Behind him, a line of automobiles and trucks stretched six miles down the narrow, hilly road, their riders hoping their luck would be better than their hapless countryman's.

For the people of Lebanon, traveling to the southern third of their nation has become even more difficult since the Lebanese government last month closed an Israeli liaison office outside Beirut that issued travel passes.

Some still get the documents from relatives in the south, who obtain them from Israeli authorities there. But people waiting at the Jebelai checkpoint said there was no consistency — some without permits are allowed to cross, and others with passes are blocked. The road opens and closes on no schedule.

"It is just based on their whim," complained one traveler, gesturing toward the Israelis.

Lebanese officials maintain that the Israelis are disrupting commerce between Beirut and south Lebanon in retaliation for the closing of the liaison office, opened under the Israeli-Lebanese accord of May 1983, which provided for withdrawal of Israeli forces that invaded Lebanon 11 months earlier.

The Israelis had hoped the liaison unit would be a step toward diplomatic relations with Lebanon. But the Lebanese government has now canceled the agreement and shut down the office, a move the Israeli Foreign Ministry says will cause "much suffering to the Lebanese people."

The Israelis say they are staying in southern Lebanon for now as a shield against Palestinian guerrilla attacks across the border into Israel.

BATTERED — Angela Doherty, 16, poses in Belfast, Northern Ireland, Monday with an accordion which was battered by a plastic bullet when police open fire at a rally during the weekend. One man was killed and more than 20 people injured while police were pursuing American IRA sympathizer Martin Galvin. (AP Laserphoto)

The Israeli guards here are caught between the Lebanese who beseech to be let in, and the need to protect against infiltration of weapons into the south, where Israel's occupation force comes under frequent attack.

"It has nothing to do with us. We don't make the decision. It is the senior politicians who say what should be done," an Israeli in civilian clothes, carrying an M-16, told reporters. He would not identify himself, but Lebanese say the plainclothesmen here are Israeli intelligence agents.

On this day, more than 50 men, women and children waited under a tin shelter on the roadside, out of the blazing sun. Most said they had been turned back by the Israelis for three or four consecutive days.

Some come in cars and trucks. Others take taxis from Beirut, for the equivalent of $8 per person, only to have to take another cab back after being told the crossing is closed for the day.

World Population Conference

Arab-Backed Plan Banning Settlements Wins Approval

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A controversial Arab-backed measure condemning establishment of settlements by force in occupied territories and viewed as a slap against Israel was approved by delegates to the U.N. International Conference on Population.

But U.S. delegate Alan Keyes said he would object to the recommendation again when it comes up for a final vote, probably today.

With work on a set of 85 recommendations nearly finished, the settlements item was the only one to be decided by a vote rather than consensus. It was approved 83-2 on Monday with 15 abstentions and only Israel and the United States voting against it.

Failure to reach consensus on the measure after a week of negotiations and a three-hour floor debate Monday made it the most divisive issue at the conference, which was extended an extra day so delegates from the 149 nations could complete work on the final documents.

The recommendation cites an article of the Geneva Convention prohibiting occupying countries from moving their own people to occupied territories.

It also says "the establishment of settlements in territories occupied by force is illegal and condemned by the international community."

James Buckley, head of the U.S. delegation, said it was "totally irrelevant to population."

The item was overlooked by a U.S. delegate to a preparatory conference and sailed through without opposition, Buckley said. He did not identify the delegate.

In a last-ditch effort to reach a compromise, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar delayed his speech to the conference and called Arab delegates into conference.

The United States rejected the alternate version that came out of the meeting, but it went to the floor.

Strike Anniversary

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Stirred by a priest's declaration that Solidarity's ideals will outlast its enemies, hundreds of supporters cheered Lech Walesa after a Mass marking today's anniversary of strikes that spawned the now-banned union.

Walesa, who helped establish the union four years ago, and about 2,500 other worshippers raised their hands in victory signs during the Mass Monday evening in St. Brygida's, the parish church for the Lenin Shipyards where Solidarity was formed in 1980 as the Soviet bloc's first and only independent trade movement.

"Working people should be able to unite in the trade unions of their choice," said the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko in his sermon as Walesa sat at the side of the altar.

"Solidarity remains an ideal in the heart of the nation," Popieluszko said. "Nobody can defeat this ideal because it is strongly rooted in the hearts of millions and many paid a high price for it."

Authorities imposed martial law in December 1981 to suppress, then outlaw Solidarity and discourage bold sentiments of freedom inspired by the union's existence.

Popieluszko is one of the most outspoken priests in Poland's Roman Catholic Church, a rallying point for Poles opposed to authoritarian state rule.

Two Germans Observe Berlin Wall Anniversary

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany defended the Berlin Wall on its 23rd anniversary, saying it had provided protection against "imperialist attack," but it also marked the date with a call for continued political dialogue with the West.

On the other side of the wall, West Germans commemorated the 72 people killed trying to scale the wall since it was built Aug. 13, 1961. About 80 people in West Berlin attended the annual ceremony Monday, watching as Sen. Heinrich Lumner placed a wreath before the 10-foot-high concrete barrier.

The East German Communist Party newspaper Neues Deutschland published a commentary Monday signed by Alfred Schroeder, identified as one of the "fighting forces" who helped build the wall designed to slow the exodus of refugees to the West.

The statement defended construction of the wall but also lauded the "peace policy" of East German leader Erich Honecker, who is expected to go to West Germany on his first official visit at the end of September.

Recently, Soviet press attacks on purported West German militarism and efforts to regain territory lost in World War II, had been interpreted by Western diplomats in Moscow as pressure on Honecker to cut back contacts with Bonn.

But the commentary in Neues Deutschland and editorials in other East Berlin newspapers on the wall anniversary carried no direct attacks on Bonn.

Monday also was the 14th anniversary of a treaty normalizing postwar relations between West Germany and the Soviet Union. West German government spokesman Peter Boenisch, at a news conference, appealed to Moscow for "a new and better quality of relations."

West Germany's minister of intra-German relations, Heinrich Windelen, issued a statement Monday in Bonn saying the Berlin Wall remains a "heavy burden for intra-German relations." He said Germans will never get used to "this inhuman structure."

"But we know, too, that our protests alone cannot get rid of the wall," added Windelen, a member of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party. He said only political efforts can improve the border situation between the two Germans.

He noted that progress as been made recently, particularly in East Germany's dismantling of automatic shrapnel-firing weapons along 62 miles of the 250-mile-long border.

Windelen said the efforts by Kohl's government have helped bring about more contacts between East and West Germans, especially in travel.

"We are not giving up the hope that more freedom of movement in Germany can start a trend, the end of which will be that one day the wall — the symbol of the division of Germany and the limitation of movement — also falls," he said.

Play Ball

Human labor took a giant leap forward with the invention of the wheel, but human play awaited the equally crucial invention of the ball. Without it, these and many other Olympic athletes wouldn't have had much to do last week. Early Egyptian and Sumerian civilizations sculpted wood or stuffed strips of leather with hair or feathers to come up with something they could kick or roll. And by 5200 B.C., Egyptians had invented bowling using a stone ball and pins.

Helms Ready For GOP Platform Battle

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Republicans were scheduled to begin editing a draft platform today, with North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms promising to block party moderates led by Connecticut Sen. Lowell Weicker at every turn.

But Helms hinted Monday that one of the biggest clashes may focus on space-based defense systems.

President Reagan asked in a televised address March 23, 1983, if it wouldn't be better if the United States could "intercept and destroy strategic ballistic missiles before they reach our own soil or that of our allies."

But a group of moderates calling themselves the Republican Mainstream Committee argues that negotiations must begin now to prevent space-based systems or face an "era of star wars."

Helms and other conservatives told the National Security Subcommittee of the Committee on Resolutions that space-based defense systems could be the GOP answer to the Democrats' nuclear freeze proposals.

He also charged that people like Weicker could be "undermining" President Reagan with a push for a party platform condemning space-based defense systems.

Weicker, however, defended the moderates' goal as being more in line with beliefs of the American public and charged Helms with worrying more about his own reelection in the face of a challenge by Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

The clash surfaced Monday at hearings before the seven subcommittees of the Committee on Resolutions. The panel is trying to compile a platform for the national convention next week.

Helms said he spoke with President Reagan by telephone to discuss getting strong language in the platform supporting space-based defense systems like those which would intercept and destroy Soviet missiles. But Helms was scheduled to fly today to a $500-a-person fundraiser in Houston, leaving his aides and National Congressional Club officials to monitor subcommittee work for at least half the day.

The fundraiser was sponsored by the Helms for Senate Committee, which also scheduled Wednesday in Abilene a $500-a-person luncheon hosted by John Chalmers.

Helms said he has not seen the draft platform, so he is unsure whether he'll be forced to try to amend it. But he said is ready to fight for necessary changes, although he said he had assurances no action would be taken while he was absent.

"I am pro-Reagan and anti-Weicker," Helms said. "I will do anything I can to prevent Weicker from possibly undermining one of the finest presidents we ever had."

But Weicker said opposition to the space-based defense systems would help Republicans running for office everywhere and said he was offering views shared by his constituents.

"If Jesse feels it will help his campaign to criticize me, more power to him," Weicker said. "I just have to make sure he continues to represent North Carolina, not the United States of America."

Weicker said he didn't believe Helms' views "in any way, shape or form represent the constituency of America."

Helms responded by calling Weicker a liberal who would agree with Hunt on almost all matters in the Senate.

There needs to be a "realignment to get liberals in one (party) and conservatives in another," Helms said.

Weicker said as long as Helms raised the question of "true-blue Republicans" it should be noted that his National Congressional Club gave $2,000 to the conservative Democrat who opposed Weicker last election.

Helms said he did not know whether the defense issue would help his campaign, but noted that Hunt opposes the space-based defense because of the doubts raised by some scientists about its chances for success.

"It would virtually bring to an end the arms race," Helms said of the system. "I thought everybody wanted to bring that to an end."

Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, a Helms' ally who has campaigned on behalf of the senator, told the National Security Subcommittee that the systems would be 95 percent effective in eliminating Soviet missiles before they could reach America citizens.

"We can be 100 percent assured the Soviets will not fire the first missile if we have a defense system like this," Helms said. "That's the 100 percent that counts."

Other opponents charge that development of the systems would be too costly. Graham said those opponents are looking at the cost to build a perfect system, something he said is unrealistic.

He said surveys show that four out of every five Americans support development of the systems.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he believes the party should avoid endorsing specific research and development programs.

"I support the president having flexibility to develop systems that kill other weapon systems and don't kill people," he said.

Meanwhile, the subcommittee on agriculture talked more about the economy than farm programs. Helms, as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, made opening remarks to the subcommittee.

"It is my conviction that the best farm bill, the best farm plank perhaps does not need the word farm or agriculture in it," he said.

Piedmont Jet Loses Engine

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Piedmont Airlines jet carrying 55 people landed safely after one of its two engines failed shortly after takeoff from Asheville Regional Airport, officials said Monday.

Flight No. 709, nonstop to Atlanta, took off around 5:30 p.m. Sunday and had attained an altitude of about 400 feet when its pilot heard a loud pop and its starboard engine failed, according to airport officials.

Two stewardesses told the passengers to assume crash positions while the pilot turned the jet around and flew a half mile back to the airport.

Notified by radio, air traffic controllers gave the jet emergency clearance, according to Bill Conner, airport public safety chief. Two fire trucks were dispatched to the end of the runway and drove behind the plane as it came to a trouble-free stop.

"Everything seemed to go all right on landing," Conner said.

None of the firefighting equipment was needed, and passengers were evacuated shortly after landing. They were taken back to the airport, where they boarded the next available flight to Atlanta, according to Don McGuire, vice president for Piedmont Airline public relations.

The aircraft, including the engine, passed a routine preflight test, McGuire said. Mechanics have dismantled the engine and are examining it to determine cause of failure, he said.

Hunt, Helms Campaigns Disagree On Arrangements For Next Debate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Aides for Gov. Jim Hunt say Sen. Jesse Helms has withdrawn from a debate Aug. 27 because of scheduling problems, but Helms camp officials contend a debate was never scheduled for that date.

"They backed out," a Hunt aide said of the Helms campaign. "They said the Senate was in session and it's not."

"There never was an Aug. 27 debate," responded R.E. Carter Wrenn, executive director of the National Congressional Club, who has been negotiating the debate schedule with the Hunt campaign.

The two U.S. Senate contenders squared off for the first time July 29 in a statewide televised debate. Regional debates are planned for Sept. 9 in Wilmington and Sept. 23 in High Point. A fourth debate will be televised statewide Oct. 13.

At a Wake County Democratic unity rally Monday night, Hunt took the podium and criticized his Senate opponent.

"I just do not believe that Sen. Jesse Helms represents what we are in this good state of North Carolina," Hunt told a crowd of 2,200. "I don't believe in years to come that he will work for the kind of North Carolina or the kind of America that we want."

"We need your help and we need it in a way as never before," he said. "This campaign, for Senate in particular, is going to be so close that it literally may be decided by how many Democrats you get to vote in your precinct."

"If we win this fall, we will win it from the bottom up," said state Sen. Bob Jordan, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

In Greensboro Monday, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said he hasn't decided whether to take an active part in the U.S. Senate contest between Hunt and Helms, but the Democrat said there's not much doubt about who he'll support.

SCLC Convention Set In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Black, labor and religious activists must renew the alliance that won many of the civil rights victories of the last 20 years, Southern Christian Leadership Conference officials said in preparing for their 27th annual national convention.

The theme of the convention is "turning to each other to turn the nation to jobs, peace and freedom," said SCLC spokesman Quentin Bradford. "The whole idea is to solidify the civil rights-labor-religious movement, because historically, most of our civil rights were won through that coalition."

Some 1,500 delegates from around the nation are expected at the convention taking place Wednesday through Saturday at various sites in Charlotte.

The SCLC's president, the Rev. Joseph Lowery, has invited Democratic presidential and vice presidential nominees Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro to speak, and officials expressed hope Monday that they would come.

Thief Warned

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A man whose Cadillac was stolen from a shopping mall parking lot took out a newspaper advertisement saying the thief can keep the car — if he returns the pregnant rattlesnake under the seat.

Kidd Brewer, a developer, says the 1976 Eldorado convertible is an expensive collector's model.

"If whoever took my 1976 red Cadillac convertible with white top from Crabtree mall parking lot Aug. 9 will return my pet pregnant rattlesnake Cleopatra from under the seat, they can keep the car," Brewer said in the ad Sunday in The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Brewer said Monday he was gone from his car only about 15 minutes when he discovered it stolen.

While known for a sense of humor, the 76-year-old Brewer insists he is not joking about Cleopatra, or the impending nest of young rattlers.

Grand Jury Seeks AFL-CIO Indictment

RALEIGH (AP) — Officials of the national AFL-CIO, which faces a possible indictment for a violation of campaign reporting laws, do not believe they broke any law, says the head of the labor organization's state chapter.

"I think it's a very technical type of violation," said Christopher Scott, president of the North Carolina AFL-CIO. "It's not that anyone wanted to violate the law. It's a technical matter."

A Wake County grand jury Monday returned a presentment requesting that an indictment be submitted against the national organization for failing to report its spending on behalf of candidates for office in North Carolina.

Scott acknowledged that the AFL-CIO didn't file the reports or register as a political action committee, but maintained it's not required to do so.

Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley, who investigated the case after its referral from the state Board of Elections in May, had submitted the presentment to the grand jury for consideration. Through a presentment a grand jury instructs a prosecutor to investigate further and submit a possible indictment which the grand jury accept or reject.

Riley said he would subpoena additional witnesses and prepare the model indictment for the grand jury's next meeting Aug. 27.

J.D. Butler Sr. of Burlington filed a complaint with the elections board May 4 saying the AFL-CIO in April had mailed a list of its preferred candidates for state and national offices to members across the state. On June 25, the board turned the case over to Riley.

Under state law, any political action committee working for or against candidates in North Carolina must register with the election board and report its expenditures or donations to the board.

The AFL-CIO didn't, and an exchange of correspondence with the board failed to clear up the matter, Riley said.

"The AFL-CIO contends that the provisions of the statute are not applicable to them, and the board is equally adamant that they do apply," he said.

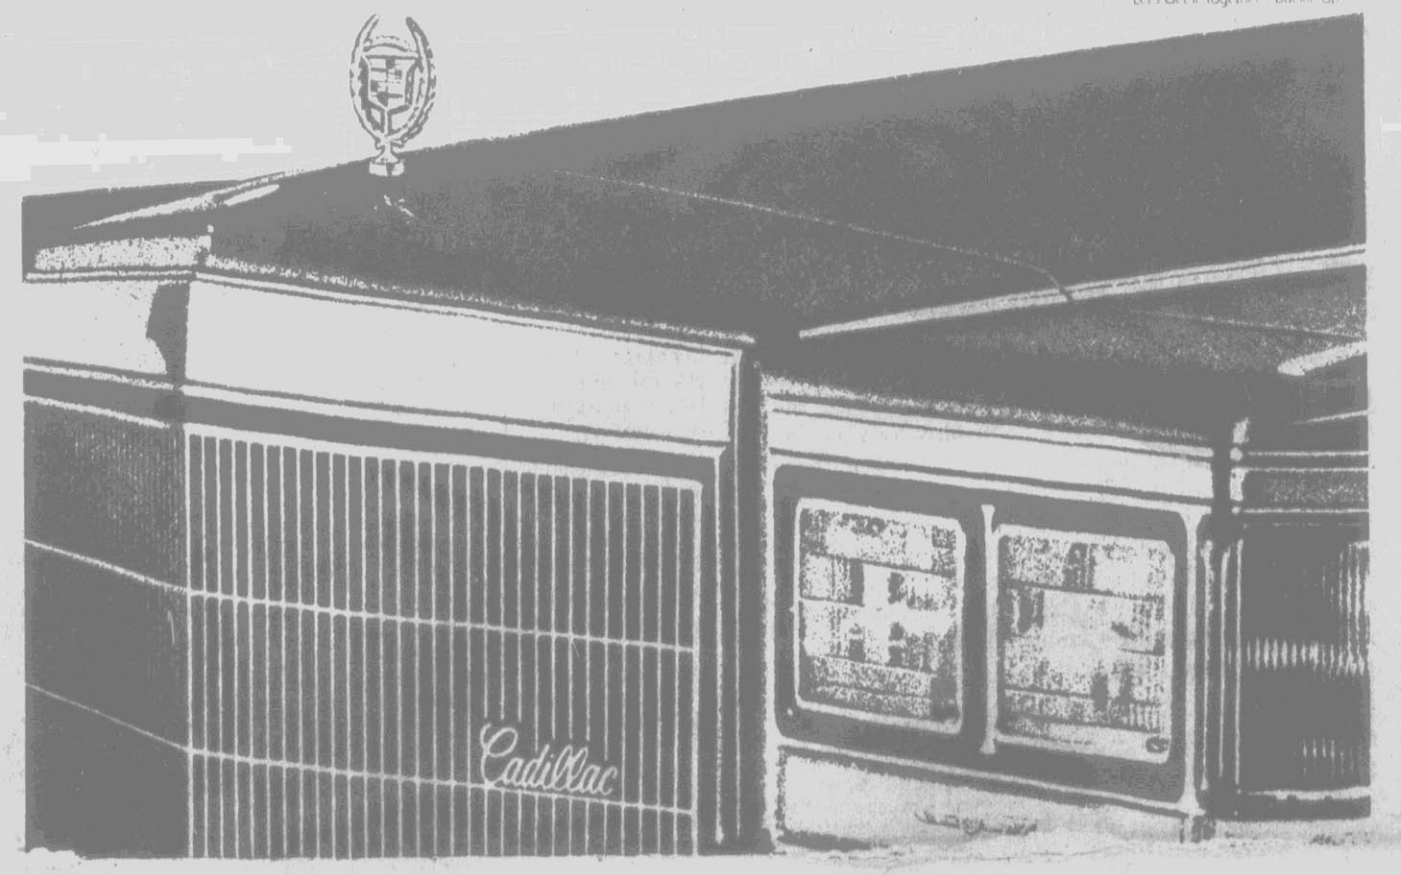

Violation of the campaign reporting law is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $5,000 for an organization or $1,000 and/or one

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, responding to new evidence of a slowing economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.07 to 1,225.15 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened the Commerce Department reported a 0.9 percent drop in retail sales for July. Most analysts had been expecting an increase.

Brokers said the news was taken as fresh evidence that economic growth is tapering off to a slower pace that might be sustained for a longer period of time. Slower growth presumably would ease upward pressure on interest rates.

Interest rates declined in the bond and short-term money markets this morning after the report was issued.

International Business Machines was actively traded, up 1/2 at 122 1/2. The company introduced a new personal computer.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average closed with a 1.99 gain at 1,220.08.

But declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 77.96 million shares, against 171.03 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .06 to 95.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .98 at 207.39.

Leaf Quality, Prices Improve As Markets Enter Third Week

By The Associated Press
 Grade conditions were favorable on North Carolina's three flue-cured tobacco markets as sales started off their third week.

Trade averages and quality of offerings improved noticeably on the Eastern Belt. The Federal-State Market News Service reports heavy volume grades were up chiefly $2 to $7 per hundred pounds from last Thursday. A sharp drop occurred in the percentage of primings, while more lugs, cutters and leaf offerings were sold.

Grades of leaf made up about 5 percent of sales. Volume of sales was heavy at most points.

Sales last week grossed 25,727,897 pounds and averaged $167.54 per hundred — up $10.81 from opening week. Season sales totaled 37,525,571 pounds averaging $164.14 per hundred.

Estimated production of the 1984 crop of type 12 tobacco was raised to 270,600,000 pounds as of Aug. 1. This is 21.5 million pounds more than was forecast a month earlier. Total flue-cured production was set at 850,740,000 pounds — up 60 million pounds from July 1.

Conditions were firm on Middle Belt markets Monday. Several grade averages improved $2 to $5 from last Thursday with most others unchanged. Quality was similar with lugs and cutters continuing to dominate sales. Volume was moderate to heavy. Auctions will begin on Old Belt markets Tuesday.

Sales in the belt last week totaled 5,718,422 pounds and averaged $161.12 per hundred — up $3.55 from the previous week. Season totals climbed to 7,453,534 pounds returning $160.29.

The stabilization corporation received 25.0 percent of gross sales last week and holds 26.4 percent of season sales.

Both grade averages and quality were better on the South Carolina-Border-North Carolina markets Monday. Increases of mainly $1 to $4 occurred for most grades. There was a ten percent increase in good tobacco offered for sale with a decrease in fair, low and non-descript. More leaf and cutters appeared on the warehouse floors with fewer lugs and primings.

Gross sales last week totaled 18,743,273 pounds averaging $166.27 per hundred — up $12.47 from the previous week. Season sales were boosted to 30,619,709 pounds returning $161.38 per hundred.

Stabilization corporation receipts last week were 16.9 percent of gross sales and 15.1 percent for the season.

Decision On Longer School Term To Come Next Year

By The Associated Press
 State education leaders are reserving judgment until next summer on the second half of a program extending the school day and year, says a Department of Public Instruction spokesman.

"We feel it hasn't been in operation long enough to evaluate it," said Tom I. Davis, public information director for the department. "If the evaluations show that great strides have been made by the students, other school systems will take a look at it."

On Monday some 9,000 students in Polk and Halifax counties will open their textbooks for the second term of a pilot program to evaluate the effectiveness of increased classroom time.

Most mountain school systems also will return in mid-August in anticipation of snow days this winter. All schools are expected to be in full swing after the Labor Day holiday Sept. 3.

The three-year experiment stretches the school day by 30 minutes and the entire term by 20 days, giving systems an extra 230 hours of programming. Polk and Halifax county residents took legal action to try to block the experiment, but lower courts have upheld the project.

"Surprisingly, everything is ready. They're into their work," said Dr. Herman Brown, associate superintendent of instructional services in Halifax County. "We were wondering what would happen."

Brown said he was not a part of the system when residents protested the pilot to lengthen the 180-day term. He said the system would have to go through an entire year before an evaluation could be made.

"We do know we prevented some borderline cases from failing their grades," Brown said. "We were able to take the last 20 days and put a concentrated effort on those students."

Susan Dobbins, director of special programs in the Polk County school system, said all the reaction she has heard in schools there has been positive.

"Everyone I asked said they were ready to go back to school," she said. "The opinions are varied, though."

Officials were not looking for immediate results from the first year of the experiment, but were pleased with what they found, Ms. Dobbins said.

"I think we had a lot of growth last year," she said. "We were able to provide a lot of learning opportunities for our students."

Security Is Tight At Reagan Wedding

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Most details about this afternoon's wedding of President Reagan's youngest daughter, Patti Davis, were given the state-secret treatment, but a minister said a traditional service was planned.

"It will be very worshipful, meditative, and it will be a traditional Christian wedding service," said the Rev. Donn Moomaw, pastor at the Bel-Air Presbyterian Church, where the Reagan family worshipped when Miss Davis, 31, was a child.

The wedding of Miss Davis and yoga instructor Paul Grilley, 25, was set for 5 p.m. PDT in the wooded gardens of the secluded Bel-Air Hotel. Security there has been so tight that photographers trying to take pictures of the hotel lawn have been asked to leave in recent days. Only regular hotel patrons are being allowed to stay there.

Hotel officials have declined to discuss plans for the ceremony and reception dinner, referring all queries to Nancy Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate.

Ms. Tate said 130 guests will attend, including members of Grilley's family from his home state of Montana; the Reagan family housekeeper, Anne Allman; former actress Colleen Moore, who is Miss Davis' godmother; Miss Davis' childhood dentist Dr. Paul Shick; and producer A.C. Lyles, who was the first visitor to see Miss Davis after she was born.

Miss Davis will wear a gown of white silk and silk charmeuses, Miss Tate added. But she declined to discuss the reception dinner or wedding decor.

Reporters were told no press coverage would be allowed.

Despite his interest in yoga, Grilley does not adhere to any Eastern religions, and both he and Miss Davis wanted the traditional ceremony, said Moomaw, who met with the couple several times to discuss the wedding plans.

The president and first lady arrived in Los Angeles Sunday for Monday's wedding rehearsal, but Reagan will have only one line in the 20- to 30-minute service, Moomaw said.

"I will ask, 'Who gives this woman to be married to this man?' The president will respond, 'Her mother and I do.'"

"They're getting more excited all the time," Moomaw added. "They love their daughter very much."

Moomaw said there will be no singing at the service, but a small "combo" would play procession music at the beginning and end of the ceremony and might play "The Lord's Prayer" during the service.

Surviving is a brother, William Barnes Ellington of Greenville.

Memorials may be made to a favorite charity. The family will be at the home of Mrs. Margaret B. Slaughter, 1900 McDonald Lane, Raleigh.

GARNER — Mrs. Maude Ennis Tart, 75, of 1512 McDonald Ave., died Saturday. Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. today at Palmer Memorial Free Will Baptist Church. Burial was in Montlawn Memorial Park, Raleigh.

LA's Games Rated Huge Success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They said the Olympics would be too commercial, jam the freeways, create choking smog, become a terrorist target, be unimpressive without the Soviets and perhaps be too serious an undertaking for the city with a laid-back reputation.

But as the signs of the Olympics' 16-day stay were being torn down today, it was apparent that they had worked.

Athletes were checking in for flights home and America's medal-winners, after President Reagan's congratulations, were launching a coast-to-coast victory tour that included a ticker tape parade Wednesday in New York City.

Except for a scare Monday, when police found and dismantled a pipe bomb aboard a bus carrying the Turkish team's luggage, the Olympic fortnight passed with little incident.

So when Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, declared the Games officially closed Sunday night, many of the nearly 100,000 people at Memorial Coliseum shouted "Oh No! No!"

The American crowd, basking in a record 83 U.S. gold medals and addicted to the thrills of the first Summer Games in this country in half a century, didn't want it to end.

"It's hard to put in words the feelings of the last two weeks," said Ellen Randall of Los Angeles. "My husband and I keep saying, 'What will we do' without the Games to watch?"

While the opening and closing ceremonies came right out of Hollywood, the human drama in between, seen by 5.7 million people in the stands and 2 billion more on television, couldn't have been conceived on any movie backlot.

A few outtakes:

—A tearful Mary Decker, blaming South African Zola Budd for ruining her dream of a gold medal, concluded: "Maybe I'm just not meant to win an Olympic gold medal."

—And Ms. Budd, who was running for Great Britain, disclaimed responsibility for their collision. But, she added, Ms. Decker had long been her idol "and this hasn't changed anything."

—Carl Lewis, matching the four-gold 1936 performance of his boyhood idol Jesse Owens, dedicated his last race to Owens' widow, Ruth. "Jesse Owens is still a legend to me," Lewis said.

—Tracie Ruiz, after she and childhood chum Candy Costie won the gold in synchronized swimming, thought as much about losing a friend as winning: "I don't know whether I'm happy or sad. I mean I do know. I'm both. All the years we've spent together..."

—Mary Lou Retton, 16, bouncing on her size 3 feet as she won the gold in all-around gymnastics, and later saying she is ready to start thinking about boys now.

—Kelly McCormick, daughter of two-time diving gold medalist Pat McCormick, wanted a gold of her own but had to settle for a silver. Her mother "is proud of me. She loves me and I love her," Miss McCormick said. But "I'm me and she's her."

—Paul Gonzales, once a member of a Los Angeles street gang, boxed his way to an Olympic gold. And the director of a youth center in his neighborhood said Gonzales proved that "we can get ahead. Latinos are worth something."

Perhaps even more enduring than the memories, though, is the effect these Games will have on future Olympics, despite the Soviet-led boycott by 14 nations. They "showed the world that excellent Games can be organized" for very little money, Samaranch said.

Indeed, they were a Spartan affair, staged for just $500 million, 5 percent of the cost of the 1980 Games in Moscow, Olympic officials said. And they made a profit, too. Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said a $15 million surplus was a "very conservative" estimate.

These were also the first Games in history funded entirely from private sources, the sale of broadcast rights and commercial sponsorships to firms like Coca-Cola, McDonald's and Fuji film. But the organizers forbade advertising in the Olympic areas; the Fuji blimp even had to cover its logo with a "Welcome" sign.

Southern California, though, seemed to have an intoxicating effect on the athletes from 140 countries. Romania's gymnasts bought all the makeup they could stuff into their satchels. Other athletes snapped up push-button telephones.

"The two weeks the Games are on, you want to live it to the max," said British swimmer Richard Burrell.

Alfredo Francini, a judo competitor from Italy who was escorting a young woman from North Hollywood, said: "We like the American people, (but) we love American girls."

As folks around here like to say: "That's so 'LA.'"

Reagan Gives Olympic Sendoff

LOS ANGELES (AP) — America's medal-winning Olympians are on the road this week, given a rousing sendoff by President Reagan, who saluted them as heroes and called them "the great melting pot team of 1984."

Reagan greeted the Olympians at a victory breakfast Monday morning before they flew to Washington, where they will be honored at the Capitol today. The athletes move on to New York City for a ticker tape parade Wednesday and will be honored in Orlando, Fla., and Dallas Thursday and Friday.

Rafer Johnson, the decathlon gold medalist from 1960 who carried the torch into the stadium at the opening ceremonies of these Games, and Mayor Thomas Bradley addressed the athletes before the president spoke.

"You're heroes, every one of you living proof of what happens when America sets its sights high and says, 'Let's create a little excellence,'" Reagan told them.

He cited a number of the American medal winners, mentioning Jeff Blatnick, Mary Lou Retton and four-gold winner Carl Lewis among others. All were in the room, most dressed in red blazers and white slacks or skirts. The president wore the same outfit and William Simon, president of the United States Olympic Committee, introduced Reagan as "the newest member of the Olympic team."

Reagan said he had watched the Games on television. "For a lot of us, one of the really indelible images of the Games was of (marathoner) Gabriela Andersen-Schiess of Switzerland, walking dazed and dehydrated to the finish line, refusing to give up, pushing on even when all her strength was gone, summoning up just that last bit of reserve and crossing that line. What a hero she is."

The president called the Games a triumph — "A triumph of friendly and generous competition, a triumph of fellowship, a triumph of the spirit." Then, referring to the Soviet-led boycott, he added, "It turned out nothing could mar the Games, nothing could detract. It turned out the only losers of the 23rd Olympiad were those who didn't — or couldn't — come."

Reagan told the team, "You did us proud. And you know what? 1984 has a kind of special significance for me. I'm finding it to be a very interesting year. But after seeing what you did at this Olympics, I can't wait till '88."

North Staters Fall Short In South Regional Play

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Greenville's North State Little League All-Stars, making their first appearance in the South Regional Playoffs in 14 years, ran into pre-tournament favorite Virginia in the first round Monday, and were sent home on the short end of an 8-5 score.

"I think, after seeing the other games," Manager Ron Wing said, "that we could have beaten every other team in the tournament. But we drew the favorite, had our chances and just couldn't pull it off."

Both teams scored three runs each in the first inning, but Virginia took the lead for good in the second with three more while holding Greenville to just two.

"I'm very disappointed," Wing said. "We had them in trouble in the fourth and fifth, leaving runners on third base, and we left a runner on second in the sixth. We just couldn't get the hits when we needed them."

Greenville managed only two hits off the pitching of Virginia's Myers, who went the distance, striking out 11 and walking eight. Tim Moore and Jamie Brewington accounted for the hits.

Virginia chased starter Walter Gatlin and Brewington came on in the fourth to finish. They combined to strike out 13 and walk just one, but gave up 12 hits.

Virginia took the lead in the first inning, scoring three times. Butterworth was hit by a pitch and Myers singled. Then, after two outs, Heiser cracked a three-run homer.

Greenville rallied, however, scoring three times on its own in the bottom of the first. Heath Clark walked and Tim Moore reached on an error. Derrick Hines walked to load the bases, and Brewington doubled, driving in all three runners. He was later thrown out trying to score.

Virginia's champions then pushed over the winning runs in the top of the second. Adams singled and Cady homered for a 5-3 lead. Butterworth singled and moved up on two wild pitches, scoring when Patterson singled.

The North Staters tried to rally, coming up with two in their half of the second. Kelvin Yarrell walked as did Park Williams and Derrick Clark, loading the bases. Heath Clark's grounder to the infield forced Yarrell at home, but the relay to third for a potential double play was overthrown and both Williams and Derrick Clark scored on the play, closing the gap to just two.

But Greenville was never able to bring any of its other rallies to fruit, failing to score despite opportunities in each of the next four innings.

Virginia meanwhile added single insurance runs in the third and fourth to set up the final margin. The Cavalier team faces Tennessee today in second round action.

Today, the Greenville team planned a visit to Busch Gardens in nearby Tampa, and will return home either Wednesday or Thursday, depending on flight arrangements.

Blount Joins NFL Office

By The Associated Press
While National Football League teams made wholesale cuts to reach their roster limits of 70 players, the NFL office increased its staff by one.

Mel Blount, who retired prior to this season after starring at cornerback with the Pittsburgh Steelers for 14 years, was named Monday as the league's director of player relations, replacing the late Buddy Young, who died in an automobile accident last September.

"I'm anxious and excited about this opportunity," Blount said. "I am approaching it with the same attitude I had when I came into the NFL. I'm determined to make the player relations job work and be successful at it."

Blount, 36, played on four Super Bowl championship teams with the Steelers and was selected to the Pro Bowl five times. His 57 interceptions tie him for seventh place on the NFL's all-time list.

"One area I would like to concentrate on is finding off-season jobs for the players to make sure they are ready for a career after football," Blount said. "Playing professional football is a short-lived career. Not everyone is as fortunate as I was to play 14 years."

One of those who may not even start an NFL career is quarterback Bruce Grant, the son of former Minnesota Vikings Coach Bud Grant.

A free agent from the University of Minnesota-Duluth, Bruce Grant was one of three players cut by the Vikings. His father resigned as coach of the Vikings last winter after 17 years in the job.

Several other players were placed on various exempt lists to enable the Vikings to reduce their roster to 70, with former New York Giant linebacker Brad Van Pelt put in the "did not report" category.

The St. Louis Cardinals obtained second-year linebacker John Harper from the Atlanta Falcons for an undisclosed draft choice, veteran defensive end Brison Manor was traded by the Denver Broncos to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for an undisclosed future draft choice, tight end Jerome Barkum, cut by the Giants after walking out of camp, signed with the Washington Redskins and the San Francisco 49ers signed veteran quarterback Joe Montana to a new six-year contract.

Montana, one of the NFL's leading passers the past four years, reportedly will receive more than $6 million over the course of the contract, with his 1984 income to include $800,000 in salary and a $200,000 signing bonus.

"Those figures are real, real close," said Jerry Walker, the 49ers' public relations director, who confirmed most of the details of the contract.

Manor was chosen in the 15th round of the 1975 NFL draft by the New York Jets. He was subsequently signed with the Broncos in 1976 and played every game for Denver from 1979 through 1983.

The 6-foot-3, 238-pound Harper was Atlanta's fourth-round draft pick last year and saw most of his action on special teams.

The Giants cut eight players, including eight-year veteran receiver Johnny Perkins, veteran wide receiver Mike Miller and sixth-round draft pick defensive end James Scott.

Sandberg's Injury Could Be More Costly Than The Game

HOUSTON (AP) — The Chicago Cubs may have lost more than a baseball game depending on the seriousness on an injury to All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg.

As if the hip bruise suffered by Sandberg, the National League's third leading hitter, in a first-inning collision with Houston first baseman Enos Cabell weren't bad enough, the Cubs went on to drop a 2-1 decision to the Astros on Jerry Mumphrey's ninth-inning run-scoring single.

"It was a bruise above the hip and it's pretty sore, but we don't think it's serious," said Manager Jim Frey. "Whether he can play (Tuesday) will depend on how sore it is. We'll find out (Tuesday). I would guess he will probably play."

About the only good news for the Cubs came in Los Angeles, where the Dodgers broke a tie with five unearned runs in the seventh inning and whipped New York 9-2, keeping the Cubs 4½ games ahead of the second-place Mets in the NL East. In the only other NL game, St. Louis beat Cincinnati 5-3.

The Cubs have won 27 one-run games this season, more than any other team in the league. But Monday night's setback was the 20th time they have lost by that margin.

"We win a lot of one-run games. We won a 2-1 game two days ago in Montreal. Tonight was just one of those games where we couldn't get our offense going," Frey said of the Cubs' four-hit offense against Mike LaCoss and Bill Dawley.

Jose Cruz singled with one out in the Houston ninth off Chicago starter Scott Sanderson and stole second. Mumphrey followed with his game-winning hit.

"Sometimes you get them and sometimes they get you in situations like that," Mumphrey said. "He had a good slow curve, but I was able to stay with it and hit it up the middle."

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning when Tom Verzyer, Sandberg's replacement, led off with a single, reached third on a wild pitch and a groundout and scored on Leon Durham's sacrifice fly.

Dodgers 9, Mets 2

Mike Marshall's tie-breaking single drove in the first of the five seventh-inning runs and Greg Brock capped the uprising with a three-run homer. Meanwhile, Bob Welch went eight innings and scattered five hits. He struck out nine and retired the last 19 batters he faced before Jerry Reuss pitched a perfect ninth.

Cardinals 5, Reds 3

David Green tripled to touch off a four-run uprising in the fifth inning against Mario Soto and Bruce Sutter recorded his 31st save to preserve rookie Ricky Horton's seventh victory.

Green scored the game's first run on a single by Chris Speier, who was forced at second but came around to score on singles by Willie McGee and Tommy Herr.

Benefits Extend Past Games

Woody Peele

Sunday night, as the Olympic Flame flickered, and finally died away into darkness, pictures continued to come back of events over the past two weeks.

For the United States, the XXIIIrd Olympic Games were a monument to free enterprise, regardless of the critics' (in particular, the Soviet Union and its bloc of no-shows) charges. Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee president Peter Ueberroth related that some $20 million in excess of expenses was raised by the games. This money will go into a fund to help build future American teams.

No tax money went into the building of the Olympic facilities as is usual in other countries. Funds were raised through the "commercialism" of the games — as it turned out, money well spent and well raised.

True, perhaps the United States would not have dominated the games as they did had the Soviet bloc been present — as we will hear for the next four years from the Soviets. But that was their choice, grown from the seeds planted by this country four years earlier. It was a boycott that could have been foreseen even then. The only question now is how much it will affect the 1988 games in Korea.

But, it should be also pointed out how far American athletes have come in the past few years, how they have regained their standing as the world's best. Too many records were set in the games to feel this was anything else but a great success not only for this country, but for all those who participated.

A prime example of this can be our own Leora "Sam" Jones of East Carolina, who has in just three short years become one of the outstanding team handball players in the world. Sam, who was chosen as the Daily Reflector's first Female Collegiate Athlete of the Year, scored 32 goals and had nine assists, fifth best in the games. It marked the first time the USA had put a team handball squad into the Olympics.

We remember pictures of the games in our minds' eye. There was the joy on the face of Mary Lou Retton after she had nailed the vault to win the gold medal in the all-around gymnastics event.

We remember the emotion shown by Jeff Blatnick in winning a gold medal in Greco-Roman wrestling — the fulfillment of a return from cancer. His joyful tears even affected the announcer.

We remember Carl Lewis passing, and passing, and passing. Perhaps winning four gold medals was of too much importance to him. To us, winning the gold is not as important as doing one's best. And Lewis, in the long jump, certainly didn't do his best. Perhaps he would not have exceeded his first jump, but he should have tried.

We remember seeing medal winners from many countries, such as Koji Gushiken, standing on the platform as their national anthem was played, tears streaming down their faces as they realized the peak of Olympic competition.

We remember the agony on the face of Mary Decker as, once more, her Olympic hopes were dashed by a fall in the 3,000-meters.

We remember Joan Benoit simply running away with the first ever Olympic women's marathon as if on a Sunday stroll and the courage of Switzerland's Gabriella Andersen-Schiess in just finishing.

We remember Rick Carey seemingly tossing off a gold medal because he had not set a new world record. Carey apologized the next day, and went on to show that he was greatly pleased after winning another medal.

We remember the way the United States basketball team trounced everyone in its way, then carried iron mentor Bobby Knight from the floor on their shoulders.

We remember the feeling when we watched Rafer Johnson climb to the top of the stairway to light the Olympic flame.

We remember the same feeling when the flame, in a darkened stadium finally winked out.

Maybe somewhere down the line, the Olympic record book will show that several of the world powers didn't participate in the XXIIIrd Olympiad. But it doesn't matter. For two weeks in August, 1984, the eyes of the world — the whole world — were centered on the United States and Los Angeles.

A "ten." That's how Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, rated the games.

Some say this was the last Olympics, that the movement is over, killed by politics. We hope not.

For some, it is only a two-week interruption of their television fare.

For others, however, it is a celebration of what brotherhood and life is all about. Politics and governments could well take note.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Much of the tangible legacy of the Olympics — props, tents, scaffolding and banners — already is disappearing.

But officials hope what will remain are more important long-term benefits that are harder to gauge — a spruced-up image for the region, a shot in the arm for the tourist industry, new ideas about commuting that just may alter Southern California's legendary rush-hour traffic jams.

"The fact the Los Angeles was the center of world attention — with 2.5 billion people watching the city for 16 days — is going to cause people to see Los Angeles and Southern California as a great travel destination and a place of superb hospitality," a jubilant Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley said Monday.

"There's also something that's very hard to analyze but a definite plus, and that is the spirit and sense of pride of the people," Bradley added. "It will have an uplifting effect that will wash over many areas for long to come."

And transportation planners from the city, state and Commuter Computer — a private agency that arranges car- and van-pools — are hoping that at least some of the people who changed their work schedules during the Olympics won't revert to old patterns that caused daily morning and evening rituals of traffic snaking in and out of the city.

"It was a real study in sociology," said W.T. Doc Maloney, a spokesman for the California Department of Transportation, referring to changes in work and commuting patterns that people made amid warnings that the Olympics might turn a big chunk of Southern California roads into a giant parking lot.

The massive influx of people and vehicles never occurred, and highways and streets have rarely seen traffic move as smoothly day in and day out.

"We may be fooled," Maloney said. "But we think some people enjoyed it (the congestion-free driving) and will want to change permanently."

Only three new structures were built for the Olympics: the swim stadium, velodrome for bicycle racing and a shooting facility. Those were paid for by private-business sponsors and will remain for the public to use.

Other sports used existing facilities, and athletes were housed in dormitories at UCLA, the University of Southern California and the University of California at Santa Barbara.

That lack of capital expense let Los Angeles emerge from the Games debt free — cost free, in fact, since they were privately funded. That compares to huge debts incurred by other Olympic hosts.

A small army of up to 2,000 construction workers began on Monday a month-long task of dismantling props, scaffolding and bleachers at 23 now-obsolete Olympic competition sites from San Diego to Santa Barbara counties.

Tents were being struck, festive flags and banners were coming down and mountains of trash were being hauled away.

"We have an obligation to restore everything" to the way it was before the Games, said Harry Usher, general manager of the private Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. "I predict that by Nov. 1, only lawyers and accountants will still be working."

He said all assets of the LAOOC must be dissolved within two years, noting that the committee must dispose of more than $1 million worth of equipment. Much of the sports gear will be donated to athletic organizations.

One touch that will remain is the Memorial Coliseum's sparkling new paint job in the official Olympic colors dubbed "festive federalism" — hot magenta, bright vermilion, clean aqua, rich chrome yellow and vivid green.

"The colors I had so much difficulty convincing them to use, they want to retain," Usher said.

Bradley said the LAOOC may donate funds to help the city maintain improvements made to the Coliseum, which is the home of USC's football team and the Los Angeles Raiders of the National Football League.

Also, Bradley said Los Angeles hopes to retain the bright-colored banners adorning its streets "until they fade."

Each community is being allowed to decide the fate of the banners, and some already are taking them down and selling them.

Southern Californians also now have 1 million more trees than they did before the Games. The greenery was planted by the nonprofit Tree People organization, based in suburban Culver City, to soften the harsh lines of skyscrapers and the endless miles of pavement.

A huge electrical signboard erected by Nissan Motor Co. just off the Harbor Freeway near the Coliseum will remain, and a torch and flame that weren't finished in time for the Games will be added atop it.

The success of the Games is expected to pay long-term dividends to those associated with them, including LAOOC President Peter Ueberroth, who becomes Baseball Commissioner on Oct. 1.

"No doubt it will have a significant impact on my political future," said Bradley, whose third four-year term as mayor ends next year.

Like Bradley, Ernie Kell, the mayor of suburban Long Beach which hosted the second-largest number of events of any city with volleyball, yachting, archery and fencing, believes the long-run payoff of the Games will be intangible.

"I see nothing but positive impact from the Games," said Kell. "Some merchants have complained about the lack of business during the Games, but they are being short-sighted. We put forth a very nice media image, and that means we will benefit for years down the road."

Browns' Coach Happy With Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Sam Rutigliano of the Cleveland Browns was pleased with his club's preseason victory over the Los Angeles Rams, but he knows it may be different when the teams battle during the National Football League regular season.

"It will be different a month from now with Eric Dickerson and Vince Ferragamo in there," Rutigliano said Monday night after the Browns evened their record at 1-1 with a 21-10 victory over the Rams.

"Even in this game, they did a real fine job with their running game."

Dickerson, who led the league in rushing last season, didn't play because of a neck injury suffered in practice.

Quarterback Ferragamo played less than half the contest as Los Angeles Coach John Robinson kept his reserves on the field most of the contest.

Paul McDonald, a product of Southern Cal while Robinson was the coach there, made a spectacular homecoming in his new role of the No. 1 quarterback for the Browns.

He completed a 19-yard touchdown pass to Dwight Walker in the second period to bring Cleveland back from a 10-0 deficit, then connected with Ozzie Newsome on a scoring pass of three yards and with Harry Holt on another of eight yards in a four-minute span of the third period.

McDonald, who had been the Brown's backup behind Brian Sipe for four years and finally is getting his chance after Sipe's departure to the United States Football League, completed 15 of 22 for 245 yards and was intercepted once.

"I was glad to be back in Los Angeles," McDonald said. "I missed two passes I would like to have back. One I overthrew to Walker and one was picked off. Other than that, I had a great game."

Although the Rams fell to 0-2 in the exhibition season, Robinson was pleased with some aspects of his team's play.

"It's no fun to lose, but this game was useful for us because we got to play the people we wanted to look at for long periods of time."

"You have to be pleased with the running of Barry Redden and Dwayne Crutchfield."

Redden, filling in for Dickerson, gained 101 yards on 10 carries in the first half before suffering mildly bruised ribs.

Crutchfield picked up 43 yards on nine carries.

"I think the fact that Barry and Crutchfield did as well as they did shows we can continue to flow even without Eric," Robinson said. "It's dangerous when you have to depend on one man too much, although, of course, we'd like to have Eric in there."

The Rams only scores came on a two-yard run by Crutchfield early in the contest and a 27-yard field goal by Mike Lansford as Cleveland's defense shut down Los Angeles for the final three periods.

Ailing Boddicker Hurls One-Hitter At The Jays

By The Associated Press
If Mike Boddicker was hurting, imagine how the Blue Jays felt.

Boddicker, troubled by back spasms, threw the first one-hitter of his two-year major league career Monday night as the Baltimore Orioles took a 2-1 victory over Toronto.

The 26-year-old right-hander was touched for a leadoff double by Rance Mulliniks in the third inning, then retired 12 consecutive Jays until he hit Dave Collins leading off the seventh.

Lenn Sakata's second-inning homer gave the Orioles the only runs they needed. Sakata, hitting .183 entering the game, followed Gary Roenicke's double with his third home run of the year.

Since losing his first four starts of the season, Boddicker has raised his record to 14-8. He has won his last four starts since losing a five-hitter on July 18.

He missed nine days earlier this year with the same ailment that nagged him Monday.

"It bothered me from the first inning on," Boddicker said. "I came into the dugout after the inning and Ralph (Salvon, the Orioles trainer) pressed on it and relaxed it a bit."

The spasms also bothered Orioles Manager Joe Altobelli, though more indirectly. "He pitches a mighty fine game," said Altobelli. "But I almost shelved him after the third inning."

Overall, Boddicker struck out six and walked one as he recorded his ninth complete game of the season.

"It was luck. I've thrown better ball games, I think," he said. "They were hitting the ball right at people and swinging at some bad pitches."

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota overpowered Milwaukee 5-1, Chicago topped Texas 5-3, Cleveland took an 11-inning, 6-5 victory over New York and Kansas City slammed Boston 6-1.

An experiment with a new pickoff move almost cost Boddicker his lead in the seventh. He hit Collins and moved him all the way to third on two wild pickoff throws. "But what the heck," he said. "He's going to steal second anyway. I take too long going home. That was my best spot."

Baltimore's victory enabled the Orioles to split the four-game series with the Jays, who drew a club-record 145,134 fans. It was the final meeting between the two clubs this season. The Blue Jays won nine of the 13 games.

Boddicker's victory dropped the Blue Jays' record against right-handers to 40-39. They are 26-10 against left-handers.

Jim Clancy, 9-12, allowed only seven hits and walked two batters, but his mistake to Sakata cost him the game. "I was looking for something to hit up the middle," Sakata said. "He hung a slider and away it went."

Twins 5, Brewers 1
Kent Hrbek and Randy Bush hit consecutive homers in the Twins' five-run fourth inning, but it was Minnesota pitching that has impressed Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann.

"They are third in the league in pitching," Lachemann said after John Butcher, 10-7, pitched his sixth Twin to reach double figures in the win column. They have not had that many since 1979.

Butcher scattered six hits while walking none and striking out two. He joined Frank Viola, 13-10, and Mike Smithson, 12-9, as the third Twin to reach double figures in the win column. They have not had that many since 1979.

White Sox 5, Rangers 3
Greg Walker and Roy Smalley hit solo home runs to back the combined seven-hit pitching of Floyd Bannister and two relievers. Bannister, 11-7, retired the first 13 batters and had a no-hitter until Buddy Bell singled to left with one out in the seventh.

Bannister gave up three hits and one run, struck out eight and walked one. He left after eight innings. Ron Reed and Juan Agosto combined to yield four hits and two runs in the ninth inning.

Bannister did not second-guess Manager Tony LaRussa's decision to remove him. "They had some right-handers coming up in the eighth inning and I have to respect his opinion on that," Bannister said.

Rudy Law doubled twice in the game and scored both times.

Indians 6, Yankees 5
Joe Carter's 11th-inning single drove home Brook Jacoby, whose fourth hit of the game, a single, started the winning rally. It was Carter's first hit of the game after Sunday's two homers — including a grand slam — and six RBI. The rookie left fielder also made two throwing errors in Monday's game.

"Tonight is definitely sweeter than yesterday was because I had played so poorly all night. Yesterday things worked out all day, but tonight I was able to help the team at the end," Carter said.

Steve Farr, the fifth Cleveland pitcher, threw two scoreless innings to raise his record to 3-9.

The Indians scored four times in the first inning off starter Jim Deshaies, keyed by Jacoby's two-run single. The Yankees tied it 5-5 in the eighth on Omar Moreno's double.

Royals 6, Red Sox 1
Bud Black scattered seven hits to snap a personal four-game losing streak. Black, 11-10 but 0-4 in six starts since the All-Star break, struck out six and walked one as the Royals ended a three-game skid.

To The Editor:
"Greenville has it all" proclaim local bumper stickers and yet when our Little League North State All-star team won the state championship the news was buried on the sports page. Those boys have worked very hard and deserve the recognition of the entire city and not just those who happen to read the sports page.

That team also happens to have a very dedicated coach in the person of Chester "Crash" Robins whose name has been left out of every story about the team. The team is managed by Ron Wing and coached by Crash Robins. He was with the team in Roanoke Rapids, New Bern, and Winston-Salem for the state finals. He has traveled with the team to Florida and will be their coach in the regional tournament. He certainly deserves recognition for the time and effort he has put into working not only with this all-star team but with his Greenville Little League Championship winning Coke team.

My only connection with Little League baseball is that I happen to have Mr. Robins for a neighbor. I certainly feel however that both he and the team deserve a lot more in the way of publicity than they are getting from the Daily Reflector.

Ductees Await By Hall Of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Harmon Killebrew, dubbed the "Killer" during his major league baseball career that stretched from Washington to Minnesota, paused at the podium, emotionally overcome by his induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

He regained his composure and tearfully wished that his father could have witnessed his glorious achievement.

Buck Leonard, the former first baseman in the old Negro League, was speechless after being presented with the 1972 plaque admitting him to the gallery of greats.

"I don't have anything to say, somebody ask me a question, maybe I can answer that," Leonard told the crowd which gladly responded to his request.

He later termed the experience "the greatest moment of my life."

The effect of the Hall of Fame on past legends and recent greats is a joyful catharsis as former professionals bask in what is for some, the last official appearance as all-American heroes.

For the tiny Otsego County village of Cooperstown, population 2,300, the Hall of Fame marks an increase in civic pride and serves as a financial boon, far-reaching from a single weekend in August.

The brick, three-story Hall, located at the end of a Main Street populated by gaslights adorned with hanging geranium plants, is the main drawing card, attracting 350,000 visitors annually to Cooperstown.

During July and August, 75 percent of the 350,000 descend on the village with their disposable income, and the population swells by almost 20,000 over the three-day induction weekend.

Ever since Abner Graves, a mining engineer from Denver, Colo., penned a series of letters to a 1905 commission created to determine the birthplace of baseball, this one-light village has worn the label as the home of America's sport.

Graves told the commission that the sport "was invented by Abner Doubleday of Cooperstown, N.Y., either the spring prior to or following the campaign of General Harrison for President."

Nearly 100 years after Doubleday fired his first pitch, 11 players, including Babe Ruth, Connie Mack and Cy Young, took part in ceremonies marking the official opening of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum.

Despite the presence of the Fenimore House, the Farmers' Museum and an extensive folk-art collection, the Hall of Fame remains the "golden goose," according to Jean Morgan, president of the Cooperstown Chamber of Commerce.

The 1974 Hall of Fame ceremony drew a record 6,200 fans, a total which was nearly matched last year when 6,000 turned out. That number included 40 busloads of Baltimore, Md., area residents paying tribute to former Oriole third baseman Brooks Robinson.

On the Monday after the induction ceremony, the Hall of Fame game, pitting two major league teams, draws 10,000 ticket-holders and then some. In most instances, the Monday visitors are simply coming to Cooperstown for the game, according to the Chamber of Commerce. Close to 42,000 requests were made for tickets to Monday's Detroit Tigers-Atlanta Braves game, Hall of Fame officials said. All tickets were sold through a lottery format with applications available nationally.

The annual onslaught, linked with the second weekend in August, is usually greeted with a thumbs-under-suspenders, chest-out pride by residents, motel owners, merchants and restaurateurs.

Some residents choose to leave town, others opt to rent their lawns for parking space at prices ranging from a $1.50 to $7. Most, like Don Howard, a schoolteacher, say, "Once a year it's nice."

"Cooperstown becomes very accommodating," said Howard, who works during the summer as a red coat official at the Hall. "There's a lot of interest. A lot goes into the weekend."

For Morgan, a native of New Zealand who still remains excited by her election as the Chamber president 19 months ago, the weekend signifies hotel and motel arrangements for visitors.

Morgan, who is also the owner of the Hickory Grove Motor Inn, normally receives bookings for available rooms months before the Hall of Fame weekend. However, prior to the induction, she and other Chamber of Commerce employees contact area campgrounds or hotels and motels as far away as Binghamton, Utica and Albany to arrange for housing.

"They're not going to find the odd cancellation," she said.

For Don Oberriter, owner of Obie's Brot und Bier restaurant, hidden away on Pioneer Alley, the weekend spells "overstaffing and overbuying."

"You have to assume that it will be bigger than before," Oberriter said. "But I'm limited in storage and refrigeration."

Oberriter, who receives about two major deliveries per week, doubles his normal inventory. He also makes sure that the first umbrella-covered table on his porch is available.

"For five years, the same friends have been claiming that table," he said. "They start on Friday noon and stay till Tuesday."

Ueberroth Shines As Head Of 1984 Summer Games

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sound the trumpets. Raise the flag. Play the anthem. It is time to award the final gold medal of the 1984 Olympic Games and it goes to Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. The man pulled off a full-blown miracle, easily an administrative match of Carl Lewis' athletic feats. He took an orphaned Olympics, an overblown extravaganza that nobody — not even Los Angeles — wanted, and made it a smash hit. He maneuvered it around a Soviet boycott that could have put a large-sized dent in his show, and produced the most widely attended, best-run Games of recent memory.

Mexico City's legacy from the 1968 Olympics was the medal-stand demonstration of two American runners — a testament of those troubled times. Munich in 1972 will be recalled for the terrorist attack on the Israeli team and the callous decision to the continue the Games in the wake of the horror, as if nothing had happened. Montreal will still be paying the enormous bill for its 1976 Olympics well into the next decade. Moscow's Games were boycotted by 62 countries, led by the United States.

Clearly, the Olympic spirit was taking a pretty good beating and it is completely understandable that the world's cities weren't exactly knocking down the International Olympic Committee's doors, begging for a chance to play host in 1984.

When Los Angeles surfaced as a possibility, the idea was put to a vote and the city's citizens said, "Sure, go ahead. Just don't try using any of our tax money for it." That was the birth of the world's first private sector Games, and Ueberroth was the man who pulled it all together against enormous odds. He needed help and he got it from a cross-section of American industry, which paid hefty rights fees to be designated everything from the official snack food of the Olympics (M&M's and Snickers) to the official rental car (Budget), the official airlines (United) and the official gasoline (Arco).

The building budget was kept small with existing facilities used as venues. USC and UCLA dorms provided the athletes villages, a capital project that helped break the bank for the Montreal Games. The only new construction was a $3 million swimming pool paid for by McDonald's Restaurant Corporation and the $4 million cycling velodrome, underwritten by the Southland Corporation.

ABC pitched in with a tidy $225 million to broadcast the Games, and the Organizing Committee, in a burst of goodwill, even tossed in the rights to press conferences as part of the package. Fifty thousand citizens volunteered to work on the Games. Their payoff was two gumdrop colored pastel uniforms, a daily box lunch and access to the venues.

School buses were commandeered to provide transportation. The weather cooperated with perfect conditions from Day One. The smog seemed to go on vacation for the duration and many Californians may have decided to do the same thing because the anticipated traffic jams never really developed. For these two weeks, freeway gridlock was a thing of the past.

As he pulled the pieces together, Ueberroth attracted the attention of major league baseball, which had scouts out searching for a new commissioner. The barons of baseball liked his organizational abilities — and this was five months before the first school bus went steaming down the street — so they gave him the job.

Now our last medal winner has a new challenge. He inherits a sport with problems to solve — different-sized leagues playing with different rules on different playing surfaces and teams with player salary budgets that would make Montreal's Olympic deficit seem strictly minor league.

Ueberroth moves to his new job on Oct. 1. Will that be enough time to get an official sponsor for the World Series?

Short Takes GTA Classic

The Greenville Tennis Association's Seventh Annual Tennis Classic concluded Sunday at the River Birch Tennis Center with Bobby Short winning the men's singles championship 6-0, 7-6 (13-11) over Ben Johnson.

Velma Johnson won the women's singles title over Vivian Hines 7-5, 7-6. Johnson defeated Brenda Jones and Vines topped Evelyn Keel to advance to the finals.

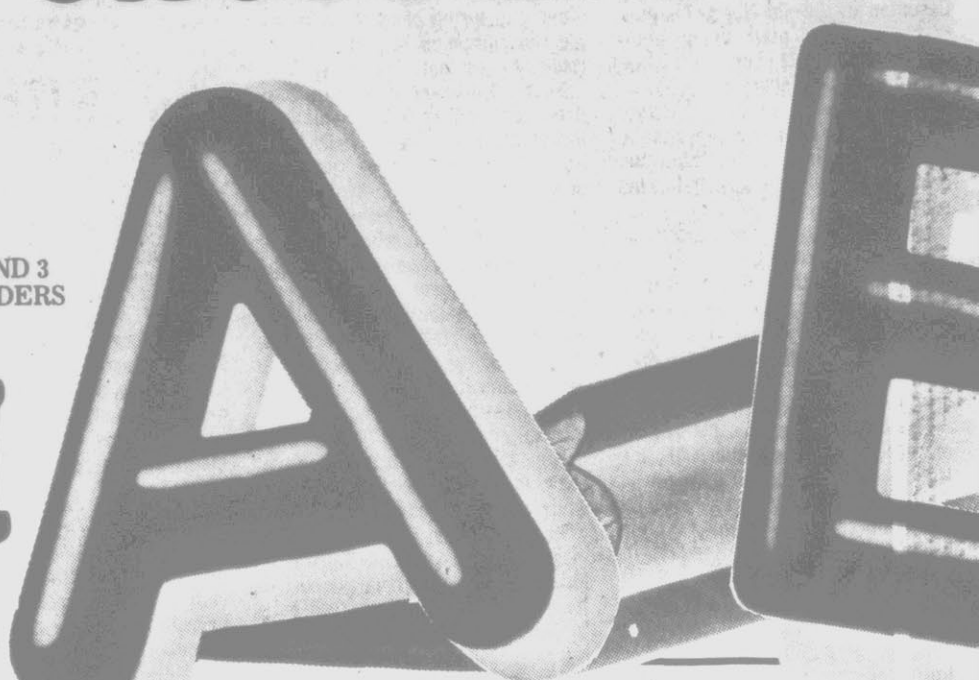

In men's doubles, Short and Jim Akers were the winners over Ben Johnson and Hardy 3-1, retired.

Hardy and Karen Akers took the mixed doubles over Short and Vines 6-2, 6-2.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Maintain your equilibrium when some situation may arise at home that is not to your liking.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be more willing to help a friend who may come to you for assistance, and also make sure you keep a promise made to an associate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Give full attention to outside affairs that can bring in fine benefits today. You may receive a message that is not pleasing.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You are anxious to get some new enterprise working nicely and can do just that through sheer will power.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to get your vocational affairs working more efficiently so that you will feel more secure in the days ahead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Change your attitude with partners and they will become more cooperative. Don't permit some private worry to deter your progress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try a new tack where your job is concerned and become more efficient and enjoy your work more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get arrangements improved so that you can enjoy entertainments you have planned much more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are enthused about getting your life on a more secure basis, so do just that. Think along more constructive lines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You get fine ideas about making your routines more productive. Don't permit an unimportant responsibility to deter you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to gain more assets so that you can have an abundance in case of later emergencies coming up.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will understand exactly how to make current conditions fit in nicely with New Age ideas and by combining the two can come up with something new, charming and workable. So slant the education along modern lines that can be helpful to your progeny. A very ingenu mind.

Former 'Taxi' Actor Has Starring Role As Housekeeper In New Series

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tony Randall's fussy Felix Unger was television's idea of a domesticated male in the 1970s. In 1984, it's a former boxer with an 12-3 record — all the sports coming by knock-out — who sports a "TRUCKIN'" tattoo on his right arm.

Meet Tony Danza, star of ABC's "Who's the Boss?" The new comedy series is about a man who takes a job as housekeeper for a divorced woman (Judith Light) in order to make a home for his young daughter.

What will the Brooklyn neighborhood in Danza's old Brooklyn neighborhood? "Bobby Governale thinks it's gonna be a hit," said Danza, referring to an old schoolboy chum who's become an instant TV critic.

Danza, former star of "Taxi" who says he turned down four pilot offers before accepting "Who's the Boss?," comes by his dishpan hands naturally.

"My mother made me clean all my life," he said. "We weren't allowed out of the house on Saturday and Sunday until the whole house was clean." And inspected. "My mother used to look at something and say, 'That's surface cleaning.'"

Both of Danza's parents worked. His father was a sanitation worker who enjoyed his job and cooking dinner. "My father made garbage collecting a great job," said Danza. "He took pride in it."

Martin Cohan, one of the show's executive producers, said he liked the idea of Danza's character playing against type. "It will be an interesting role model for men and kids," he said.

Danza said he was aware how TV's images can make major imprints. That's another reason why he's upset about his recent legal problems. "I don't want to be a bad role model," he said.

Last month, a jury found Danza guilty of assaulting a security guard in a New York restaurant. Danza and another man said they thought the guard had a gun and they acted in self-defense. Sentencing on the misdemeanor assault and criminal mischief charges is set for Sept. 17.

"I hope the judge doesn't make an example of Tony because he's an ex-boxer and a celebrity," said Barbara Brogliatti, a spokeswoman for Embassy, the show's production company. "If he's sent to jail, he'll have 90 days to appeal. We'd have time to fill out our order of shows."

Danza, 33, is divorced and the father of a 13-year-old son, Marc, and a 1-year-old daughter, Gina.

One week before John Belushi died of a drug overdose, Belushi, Danza and Marc attended a wedding. "John was great with kids. He wasn't a bad person," said Danza. "Marc couldn't understand how a great guy one-on-one could have so many problems. I told him it was an illness."

Hudson Says Enjoying Life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson, waiting for a script that's not a "sleeping pill," says he's enjoying the little things in life that a heart ailment nearly robbed him of three years ago.

Although Hudson, 58, just completed a spy movie in Israel and has begun a television movie set in Las Vegas, he described his career as "dormant" in an interview published Monday.

"Last year I didn't work for a year," he said. "That was OK. I like to work. I also like not to work. I like to bum around. I'm busier when I'm not working. Stuff to do around the house. Gardening."

Hudson, who had quintuple bypass surgery almost three years ago, says he has "the energy of a teen-ager," although he is "kind of taking a rest."

"I'm giving myself a breather," he said. "I'm storing up batteries again, till I can plunge in, plunge ahead."

"I would love to do a good play, yes. Or a good film. I'd love to do a good miniseries," he said.

Pay Raises

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and other top government officials have received a pay raise that nearly doubles their salaries, the government newspaper reports.

The Rzeczpospolita newspaper said the 95 percent raises were needed to deal with the "galloping depreciation of earnings" of top state officials. Poland's inflation rate in 1983 was nearly 25 percent, according to government statistics.

The paper said Jaruzelski's monthly salary would increase incrementally from its current level of $310 to $602 by January.

Jaruzelski, who holds the offices of prime minister and Communist Party first secretary, also receives numerous benefits from his job, including a car and use of government-owned villas.

ABC Says Olympics Most-Watched Ever

NEW YORK (AP) — Even before A.C. Nielsen Co. released its final ratings for ABC's broadcasts of the Summer Olympics, network researchers were proclaiming the 180 hours of coverage the most-watched television event ever.

In network estimates Monday, ABC said the 16 days of coverage had attracted a cumulative audience of 180 million people and 9 out of 10 TV homes in the United States, eclipsing the 140 million viewers who saw at least part of ABC's 18-hour "Winds of War" in 1983 and its Montreal Summer Olympics in 1976.

The Nielsen ratings were scheduled to be released today.

Industry analyst Tony Hoffman says the Los Angeles Games presented the "absolutely best" broadcast situation and "the ratings were as good as they ever could be."

Hoffman, director of corporate finance at the brokerage firm Cralin & Co., called pay-TV "the unknown quantity" in future Olympic broadcast negotiations and suggested that some form of duel coverage between free and pay TV might be the only way for a commercial network to purchase the next Summer Games.

Hoffman said ABC has a clause in its contract for the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics that will allow the sale of some events to pay TV. Whether ABC will exercise its right, Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, has said only, "there's certainly a possibility of it."

Just before the movie began production, Danza ran into Jim Brooks, a producer on "Taxi" and later the man behind the Oscar-winning "Terms of Endearment." Brooks gave him a regular role in "Taxi."

"I felt weird going into 'Taxi' with all those trained actors," Danza said. "But I like taking a shot. As they carry me out, I know I'll be saying, 'Hey, I took a shot.'"

Danza was just another street kid with a good punch and a big smile when he got his break in show business. He always liked to clown about an open casting call for the movie, "The Warriors," he decided to try for it.

"I remember a lot of other guys down there with feathers," he said. "I told the producers to come watch me fight." Producer Larry Gordon came down to the Brooklyn boxing arena in a limousine.

"Larry said I gave the greatest audition he had ever seen. I knocked

Today's Cryptiquip clue: K equals U

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 4 ♠ 4 ♠ 5 ♥
 Pass Pass Dble Pass
 Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

There is nothing more annoying at the bridge table than a partner who blithely ignores all your signals and goes ahead on his merry way oblivious to everything around him. Unless you consider the player who sees a signal in every play, even where none exists.

East's jump to four spades over the takeout double is a classic preemptive raise. However, South was too strong, both distributionally and in high cards, to be shut out. West passed because he wasn't sure whose hand it was, and East doubled on the strength of his ace of trumps. Even so, we are not sure we would have sat for five hearts doubled with the West hand - five spades surely would not be expensive and could even be a good save.

West got his side off to a good start when he elected to lead the ace of diamonds rather than a spade. He reasoned that his partner probably had five spades for his jump, so the ace of spades wouldn't live. East followed with the four of diamonds, and West took this to mean his partner wanted a shift.

Now West proceeded to undo all the good he had done at trick one - he switched to the ace of spades. Declarer ruffed and forced out the ace of trumps, and then claimed the rest of the tricks for his contract.

East was correct in following with the four of diamonds to the first trick. At trick one you don't show suit preference when partner leads a card that is likely to win the trick; your duty is to advise him whether or not you like the suit he has led. That is not the same as a demand that he shift the attack!

West should realize that, since his partner doesn't have the king of diamonds (he would have encouraged with a high diamond if he had the monarch), the only chance for the defense was to find his partner with the trump ace. Therefore, he should have continued with a diamond at trick two. Now East can win the first trump and lead a third diamond, and West's ruff will scuttle the contract.

When Opryland merchandise employee Brook Thompson asked him to stop playing the game, Gaines asked why no one informed him of a limit.

Gaines said he saw the sign setting a limit of two large prizes, but it didn't mention the smaller bears. "The skill level of the game is designed so a broad base of people can win," said Joe Earnest, director of merchandise at Opryland, a 120-acre music theme park which opened in 1972 and drew more than 2.5 million people last year.

Former Santa Finds Joy In Dime Tosses

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A former Santa Claus won more than 70 stuffed bears for a crowd of admiring children by tossing dimes onto a plate at an amusement park, until park officials found it unbearable - and asked him to quit. They came in and rearranged the plates a couple of times, thinking I'd found the right angle to throw. John Gaines said as he demonstrated the winning technique that drew more than 100 onlookers Monday. "You gotta aim for the beve! - it's a science." Gaines, 39, a former Huntsville, Ala., policeman, said he spent $88 of his own money plus uncounted sums passers-by gave him in hopes he would win them a fuzzy yellow bear at the Opryland U.S.A. theme park. "You should have seen the tears in their eyes." Gaines said of a group of children from the Una Baptist Church of Nashville. "They were all waiting for me to pitch for them." "He threw for me every time I asked him. It's great," said Tabitha Cain, 12, of Concord, N.C., as she hugged four small bears. "I like to pitch at the plate," said Gaines. "After spending about $30 practicing, I finally got the hang of it." The heavy-set Gaines, who played Santa Claus one Christmas for a fast food restaurant in Huntsville, said he gives the animals he wins to children. Gaines, who also won a large penguin, left the park, but continued to hand out bears. Standing in front of his pickup in the parking lot, he yelled to a passer-by, "Hey, sir. You got any kids?" The man, a New Yorker, said he had four daughters and Gaines handed him four bears selected from one of three overflowing plastic garbage bags.
