Military School Closing

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The U.S. Army School of the Americas, training ground for two generations of Latin American military men, will close Sept. 30 as Panama takes control of the surrounding military post, the U.S. Southern Command has announced.

The command, in a communique published in today's Panamanian newspapers, said negotiations to continue U.S. Army operation of the facility — at Fort Gulick, 50 miles east of Panama City — have failed to produce an agreement.

The school has been caught in a wider U.S.-Panamanian dispute over the 1977 treaties that provided for the phased Panamanian takeover of the old Panama Canal Zone and of the canal itself by the year 2000.

Under terms of the treaties, 1,448-acre Fort Gulick will be turned over to Panamanian control Oct. 1. The treaties stipulate that at that time, "unless the two countries otherwise agree," the United States will lose its authority to train Latin American soldiers at the school — a program it has conducted for the past 38 years. The school now has almost 2,000 students.

In a speech July 31, Panamanian President Jorge Illueca, accusing the United States of violating the treaties, declared his government would flatly refuse permission for the U.S. military to continue operating the school.

Illueca was angered by a decision of the U.S.-dominated canal commission to give the canal's American workers a special $1,700-per-year pay increase and to extend other special privileges, moves the host government says discriminate against the canal's Panamanian employees. The treaties stipulated that the Americans were to lose special privileges by October 1984.

The school's administrators have said the training program will continue, even if relocation to Florida or Puerto Rico is necessary. The command's communique did not specify where a new school might be established.

The school director, Col. Michael J. Sierra, has said the United States would not agree to operate it under Panamanian control. "This is a U.S. school and it has to be run by a U.S. officer," he said in an interview.

TIME FLIES — A passing bird takes time to look over downtown Greenville from its view on the ledge of the Pitt County Courthouse, ignoring the clouded face of the clock behind him. Weather has taken its toll on the courthouse clock, long a landmark for Greenville, but county building and grounds inspector Walter Gould says a facelift is coming up. Gould said the county issues a contract annually to have the clock lubricated and washed free of debris. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Baby Heart Patient Loses Fight For Life

LONDON (AP) — Hollie Roffey, the baby who became the world's youngest heart transplant patient when she received a new heart on July 30, died today, the National Heart Hospital said. She was 28 days old.

The infant developed respiratory problems and died at 10:15 a.m. (5:15 a.m. EDT), the hospital said.

Hospital administrator Paul Haigh said Janet and Anthony Roffey arrived at the hospital after their only child died. He said they were "very upset."

Haigh added, "Obviously all the staff of the hospital are very upset losing her after she had hung on so bravely to life."

The child was born with the left side of her heart missing, and doctors said she would have had only a few weeks to live without a new heart.

Before Hollie was given the heart of a 3-day-old Dutch baby that died of brain damage, the previous youngest heart transplant patient had been a 2½-week-old infant that died hours after the surgery in 1967 in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Britain's most active heart transplant surgeon, Egyptian-born Dr. Magdi Yacoub, performed the transplant on Hollie when she was 10 days old. She never was taken off the hospital's critical list, suffering first bowel and then kidney problems.

Two days after the transplant, the infant was rushed into emergency surgery to close a hole in her bowel. Doctors said the problem was not related to the transplant surgery.

Then on Aug. 9 she experienced kidney failure after bleeding during a procedure in which doctors removed a fragment of heart tissue to check for signs of rejection.

The test showed no indication that Hollie's body was rejecting the donor organ, but the kidney problems were her second serious setback since the surgery.

The infant developed respiratory problems this morning, said Mark Purcell, a press officer at National Heart Hospital.

"At about 9 a.m., she developed difficulties in her breathing, which caused a rapid deterioration in her condition," Purcell told The Associated Press.

"Her heart was working perfectly but the deteriorating lungs put pressure on the heart and it failed."

Paper Says Ferraro Listed Self As Husband's Partner

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine A. Ferraro last year listed herself as half-owner and vice president of her husband's real estate firm, not secretary-treasurer as she has said, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported today.

The form, an application for a real estate broker's license filed with the New York State Insurance Department, lists Ms. Ferraro and her husband, real estate dealer John Zaccaro, as the sole stockholders in the firm, P. Zaccaro Co., Inc., with each holding one share of stock.

The form was signed by Zaccaro as president and by Ms. Ferraro, using the name Geraldine Zaccaro, as vice president. In her last two congressional financial disclosure statements, filed in May 1983 and May 1984, she listed her position with the firm as secretary-treasurer.

Asked for comment on the story, Scott Widmeyer, a spokesman for Ms. Ferraro, said in New York, "We will have a full and complete disclosure on Monday," when Ms. Ferraro has promised to provide the financial information required of a vice presidential nominee. Campaign manager John Sasso, asked about the report, told a reporter, "I don't know anything about it."

Ms. Ferraro and Zaccaro refused to comment to the newspaper about the information on the application or on the differences between that document and the congressional disclosure statements.

Since her nomination last month, Ms. Ferraro has played down her involvement in and knowledge of the firm's workings.

N.C. Jaycees Lose Anti-Women Fight

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The president of the U.S. Jaycees called its vote to admit women members a "landmark," but there was grumbling in the ranks and the leader of a separate Jaycees women's group said few of her 59,000 members will sign up with the men.

"Our goal for the future is to become America's greatest young people's organization," Tommy Todd, president of the 270,000-member Jaycees.

North Carolina Jaycees said they will abide by their national organization's vote even though the state's delegates accounted for nearly half the "no" votes.

"We believe the will of the majority rules, and we will move forward to open membership to women starting today," said Randall L. Essick of Clemmons, N.C., resident of the Tar Heel state chapter.

He said 10 North Carolinians were among the 600 delegates who held a special meeting in Tulsa to consider allowing women to join the men's organization. North Carolinians, casting multiple votes, represented 161 of the negative votes in the 5,372-386 tally, Essick said.

The North Carolina Jaycee Women, an auxiliary group, will be allowed to set its own membership policies until the national Jaycees Women meet in June 1985, Essick said.

Before the vote, which came at a meeting of 600 national Jaycees delegates — only the second such special gathering in the 64-year-old group's history — the Jaycees had waged a 12-year, $1 million legal fight to bar women from full membership.

The gender barrier began to crumble six weeks ago when the U.S. Supreme Court cited Minnesota's public accommodations law barring discrimination on the basis of sex in ruling that the Minnesota Jaycees must admit women. Jaycees officials said 37 states have such laws.

Women had argued before the high court that exclusion from the Jaycees denied them access to a network of business contacts and opportunities that the organization offers.

Some chapters wasted no time in implementing the new rules. The Louisville, Ky., chapter swore in 35 women Thursday night. "It's really an exciting occasion," said Ann Carter, the first woman admitted.

In Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday night, the president of the statewide Jaycees, Richard Homrighausen, swore in his wife and six other women at Port Columbus International Airport upon his arrival from the national meeting.

"I don't think it'll be too controversial," said Linda Homrighausen. "I think it'll be an adjustment... like marriage."

Karvin Spurgion, one of the national delegates to the Oklahoma meeting, said the rules change will "ruin the Jaycees." Spurgion, 30, of Enid, Okla., said the admission of women will make the Jaycees more of a social organization and less active in various community projects.

"It's not a popular decision," said Rex Weinbender of the Wisconsin delegation. But he added: "It's one (Please turn to page 5)

College First-Time Students Face Anxiety In Leaving Home

By LORETTA GRANTHAM

Reflector Staff Writer

As the long hot days of summer grow increasingly shorter, so too does the time span between vacation ease and academic challenge. Four local first-year college students, a tiny sampling of the many young people preparing to leave for school or to come here to East Carolina University or Pitt Community College, were interviewed concerning their initial step away from home.

Missy Whitford, a D.H. Conley High School graduate and entering freshman at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said she is looking forward to the "whole new atmosphere and new friends."

"I expect courses to involve more hard work," she said, "and I hope to allow the right amount of time for both studying and social life."

Missy said she feels she is ready to be "out on her own" so that she can learn how to handle her time and money. "I'll have no one to answer to," she explained, "so I'll have to figure out how to do things for myself."

Most students have some anxieties about their first year away from the security of high school. Missy, who plans to major in biology and then obtain a masters degree in genetic counseling, said she is not really worried but just full of anticipation. "I'm wondering whether I'll fit in there and if I can handle the courses," she said, "I also hope I can get on the staff of the Daily Tar Heel."

When asked why she chose to attend UNC-CH, Missy said she has "always been a big Carolina fan. They have a really strong biology department there. Although my decision wasn't based on the fact that a lot of my friends are going, that makes it especially nice."

Leaving home is rarely easy, and Missy said she will be saddened when her mother says that final good-bye. "Mom keeps telling me all I have to do is be myself," she said, "and I think if I do that I'll have it made."

Bruce Thompson, a J.H. Rose High School graduate who will be attending Wake Forest University in the fall, is also excited about going away to a different school and living situation.

The George Foster Hawkins scholarship recipient said he is ready to make his own decisions, and like Missy, to "budget time and money."

"I'm going to miss all the people from around here and my friends from high school, but I'm ready to start fresh," he said. "The record's clean and now it's time to settle down and get to work."

Bruce, a political science major who intends to go to law school, said he seriously hopes to one day be president. "People use to laugh when I said that," he said, "now they just say 'really?'"

He said attending governor's school last summer helped him learn about living away from home with a roommate. "By going to governor's school I feel I know a little about what dorm life is like," Bruce said, "and even about washing clothes."

"I'm somewhat nervous about all the studying I'm going to have to do," he said, "and I hope I get a good schedule with the right teachers... I've heard the professors can be pretty tough."

Pioneer Career Woman, Family Woman — Caught Between The Two

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro is caught between two worlds — the career woman blazing new pathways for her gender, and the wife of a successful businessman unaccustomed to the scrutiny of public life.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee is finding a pioneer's campaign trail fraught with conflicts and contradictions in her public and private lives.

And she's learning she can't have it both ways.

On her first campaign swing up the West coast, the candidate hailed as the new role model for women has been tripped up by questions that plague many of the nation's growing number of two-paycheck couples: which career comes first — his or hers?

She's running for vice president.

He's running a business.

Ms. Ferraro's husband, John Zaccaro, is a wealthy real estate developer in Manhattan who makes it very clear he is proud of his wife, children and business.

But he says frankly that he doesn't want to move to Washington if his wife is elected vice president, insisting: "Somebody has to pay the bills."

Zaccaro's son, John Jr., said that when his parents married 24 years ago, his father didn't want his mother to work.

"Then he thought about it and knew it was unfair," young Zaccaro said during a chat aboard his mother's campaign plane.

Last Sunday, Ms. Ferraro told reporters she wants her husband to make public his federal income tax returns, as she promised he would last month. But she admitted later that she made the promise without consulting him.

Zaccaro refused, but after days of controversy that has overshadowed his wife's historic campaign and dogged presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale as well, Zaccaro said Wednesday that he may reconsider.

Ms. Ferraro's comment: "It's his decision."

Throughout her five-day campaign swing up the West coast, Ms. Ferraro has made a determined effort to prove that as a former teacher, prosecutor and a three-term congresswoman, she is qualified to run for the nation's second highest office.

At every stop, she has challenged the record of the Reagan administration on its policies of arms control, deficit spending, crime control, and the environment.

But when confronted with questions about her husband's finances, she fell back on a stereotype that made many professionals wince. She joked that women married to Italian men would understand she can't make decisions for her husband.

By all appearances, Ms. Ferraro is close to her family — a point not lost on Democratic presidential candidate Mondale who, like President Reagan, wants to identify his campaign with traditional family values.

Like more and more professional American couples, Ms. Ferraro and Zaccaro had to consider the prospects of a commuter marriage.

Since she was elected to Congress in 1978, the New York congresswoman has lived in Washington during the week and commuted home on weekends. Zaccaro lives in Queens and has taken day-to-day responsibility for their three children, now ages 22, 20 and 18.

Ms. Ferraro is the first woman to campaign for vice president. And of the pressures and problems she's encountered so far, she said in understatement this week: "It's been a little bit tough."

And many professional couples are watching to see how she and her husband resolve their dilemma.

Says Ruth McFarland, a candidate for Congress from Oregon: "Gerry is taking heat for all of us."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ann Blackman has covered Ms. Ferraro's vice presidential campaign since it began.

Teens Think Mom's Open Door Policy Is Wrong

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and I need your help to settle something between my mother and me.

When I have a boy over, my mother thinks it's horrible if we shut the door while we're in my room. She always yells loudly, "Leave that door open!" It embarrasses me in front of the boy. My brother, who is 18, also has to leave his door open when he has a girl in his room.

If my brother and I ignore our mother's wishes (or the door should accidentally blow shut), she will come by, knock once, then fling the door open. It's like she wants to catch us doing something. But the point is, we aren't doing anything.

Please don't say that if we aren't doing anything we don't need the door shut. I like my privacy and so does my brother when we have friends over. We usually just sit on the bed and talk or listen to the stereo.

It seems like our mother doesn't trust us. It makes me feel trashy that my own mother thinks the worst of me when I have a boy in my room. How do I handle the situation?
NOSY MOTHER TROUBLE

enough to go out with a girl a foot shorter than he is? There are too many normal girls with nice long legs around. If I were a guy, I wouldn't go out with me either.

Is there a doctor somewhere who can give me some pills to make me grow? I wouldn't mind letting him experiment on me. I have nothing to lose. I'd rather be dead than short.

HALF-PINT, SHORTY, SHRIMP, ETC.

DEAR ETC.: First, see an endocrinologist to find out if you have some kind of physical abnormality that can be treated. If not, there's nothing wrong with you that your mind can't change.

In the meantime, commit this little prayer to memory: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference."

DEAR TROUBLE: Thank your "nosy" mother for caring enough about you to do what a mother is supposed to do—minimize the human temptations all normal kids eventually encounter. She trusts you. She trusts your brother. She also remembers your father and the temptations of her youth. I'm sure she trusts the friends you invite into your bedrooms to "sit on the bed and listen to the stereo"; she just wants to make sure you don't get carried away by the music until you're sufficiently mature in every way to handle it.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me because no one has been able to so far. My problem is that I'm an 18-year-old girl and I'm only 4 feet 10 1/2 inches tall. Abby, I can't handle being short anymore. It wasn't bad when I was younger because people thought I'd probably grow some more. Now I have no excuse, and I'm so sick of people kidding me about it.

I've heard every short joke and been called every short name. As soon as people meet me, they mention my size.

As far as dates are concerned, forget it. What guy would be crazy

Hollyday Says GOP Platform Offers Women Hope

By MARY ANNERHYNE
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — The Republican Party platform being drafted this week outlines specific steps toward "real equality" for women in areas ranging from retirement savings to government jobs, says Mary Jane Hollyday of Asheville, N.C.

Mrs. Hollyday is a member of the Platform Committee drafting a document for approval next week by the Republican National Convention. As a member of a human resources subcommittee, she dealt with some areas of traditional concern to women.

"It (the platform) offers them real equality," she said of the draft being considered now by the full Platform Committee. "Our platform does not speak to needs in just generalities. We ... specifically state that there are concerns for women and we have addressed those concerns in a very positive way."

She said one example focuses on Individual Retirement Accounts. She said couples in which one spouse works outside the home now may contribute $2,000 for the wage earner and $250 for the spouse at home.

"Our platform says this is not equitable," Mrs. Hollyday said. "We say that homemakers retire just like other people and they wish to be provided for financially."

The platform says, "We will continue to actively seek the elimination of discrimination against homemakers with regard to Individual Retirement Accounts so that single-income couples can invest the same amount in Individual Retirement Accounts as two-income couples."

The platform also calls for the personal tax exemption for children to be no less than for adults and pledges to at least double the current level. Mrs. Hollyday said that should interest many women.

"Today, with the cost of rearing and educating a child, they should be accounted for on an equal basis with adults," Mrs. Hollyday said.

The platform says a husband and wife with children are paying more of their income in taxes than in 1960 while single people and married couples without children are paying the same average tax rates as in 1960.

The party also pledges to continue to increase the number of first-time appointments for women in government and cites a number of accomplishments by Reagan, including the appointment of Sandra Day O'Connor as the first female Supreme Court justice.

"I think the president has certainly expressed his intent to treat women in a fair and equitable fashion by virtue of the fact he sought them out and appointed them to many, many positions. He has given them the same opportunity to participate at high government levels that men have had for many, many years."

Two other issues of special interest to women — abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment — are opposed or not mentioned in the platform.

Use New Times Processing Tomatoes

Tomatoes can be safely processed in a boiling water bath, but only if newly recommended times are used, reminds Dr. Nadine Tope, extension foods and nutrition specialist, North Carolina State University.

The hot pack method calls for peeled and quartered tomatoes. Bring them to a boil and stir in two teaspoons of lemon juice or half a teaspoon of citric acid per quart of tomatoes. Pack the tomatoes to half an inch of the top of the canning jar. Wipe the rim carefully, and adjust the lid according to the manufacturer's directions.

Process the jars in the boiling water bath. Pints need to be processed for 35 minutes and quarts for 45 minutes. "Make sure you are using a water bath canner with a top and a rack. The open kettle method is not safe," Dr. Tope says.

Processing times for tomato juice have also been increased to 35 minutes for both pint and quart jars.

To save time, use a pressure canner. Pint or quart jars of tomatoes or juice only have to be processed for 10 minutes in a pressure canner, the extension specialist says.

"Never shorten processing time below USDA recommendations. People who do run the risk of spoilage and food poisoning," Dr. Tope says.

For more information on the safe canning of fruits and vegetables, contact the home economist at the county agricultural extension.

Yard Award Given

Carl and Sharon Worthington of Winterville are recipients of the August yard of the month award. The award is given monthly by the Winterville Jaycee Women.

"The unborn child has a fundamental right to life which cannot be infringed," the platform says.

It goes on to endorse a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion, oppose the use of government money for abortions and to call for elimination of funding for groups that advocate abortion and for appointment of justices who oppose abortion.

"Republicans' stand on abortion is the protection of human life which our Constitution guarantees," Mrs. Hollyday said. "We're simply being consistent with the Constitution of the United States of America in our stand to protect the unborn."

The platform does not specifically mention ERA, but Mrs. Hollyday said she believes the platform speaks to equal rights throughout.

The Skies Are Still Friendly

Good Choice

R.L. (Bob) Martin of Bethel has followed a long and twisting path to a now virtually assured seat in the North Carolina Senate.

The long-time Pitt County commissioner Tuesday won the Democratic nomination for the 6th Senate District.

Martin originally planned to give up his seat on the commissioners to seek a Senate seat in a district that included Pitt County. A court ruling, however, forced a redistricting which placed six Pitt County townships in the 6th District with Wilson, Edgecombe and part of Martin. That severely eroded his traditional political base in Pitt County. Nevertheless he pushed on and through two special primaries has won the nomination.

We can assure the people of the 6th N.C. Senate District that they have chosen an outstanding public servant. Martin has served Pitt County well as a commissioner and upon election in November he can be expected to be influential in the Legislature.

Rules Needed

The Pitt County Board of Education has taken first steps toward declaring cheerleading a sport and thus subject to rules. It is now an extracurricular non-athletic school activity, without standards for training and conditioning. It has been recommended by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction that cheerleading be considered a school sport with coaches, paid travel and uniform expenses. Some of the acrobatics such as the "pyramid" might be banned.

Board member Walter Gaskins said, "I've seen the kids at ballgames doing the pyramid formation and I've seen them fall more than once. Everytime I see it, it scares me."

A referee, Gaskins recalled stopping a basketball game for 20 minutes when a cheerleader fell from a pyramid.

Anyone who has closely watched a good cheerleading team at work is aware that the participants are already performing athletes. In years gone by cheerleaders did just that — led the cheers. Now acrobatics is a part of it and with that goes the danger of falls and injuries. There is no question that there should be rules to protect the cheerleading participants, and if the activity is declared a sport, there will be the added benefit of competition to determine the best.

Our first concern, however, should be to make this and all other activities for young people as safe as possible.

Capitalizing On The Olympics

WASHINGTON — The late decision by Rep. Geraldine Ferraro to enjoy unprecedented television coverage by attending last Sunday's Olympic closing ceremonies points up how the White House masters of media politics missed the boat in Los Angeles.

President Reagan and Vice President George Bush not only were not present for the finale but did not attend a single competitive event. Thanks to nervous security men, the president did not get the full exposure of his appearance at the opening of the Games by going onto the field at the Los Angeles Coliseum. A seldom-used underground tunnel would have given Reagan maximum protection.

A footnote: Ferraro's appearance at the closing ceremony was suggested by Joe Cerrell, a Los Angeles-based political consultant who is a member of the Coliseum Commission. State Assembly Speaker Willie Brown invited her, but made clear privately he had no interest in Walter F. Mondale as a substitute if Ferraro could not attend.

In a reversal of their war-peace roles, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger won President Reagan's support in beating back Secretary of State George Shultz's strong effort to increase the number of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador.

Weinberger fears that if military support for the Salvadoran government gets too visible, Reagan will have even more trouble getting Congress to keep the aid program going. That position is backed by uniformed Pentagon chiefs, with Vietnam still very much in mind. That dictates no more than 51 American advisers in El Salvador and about 800 U.S. troops in neighboring Honduras.

Shultz argued hard on diplomatic grounds for an increase in the U.S. presence, but lost in the White House. Even with the hold-down, congressional willingness to keep the aid program financed at levels Reagan wants is still nip and tuck.

WASHINGTON — Some of the newspapers and some of Ralph Nader's professional worrywarts are doing their best these days to promote fears about the safety of the nation's air traffic control system. The fears are groundless. The system is in good shape. A year hence it will be in even better shape.

Several incidents and developments have combined to bring the Federal Aviation Administration and the air traffic controllers back into the news. All of us in the news business tend to write anniversary stories, and last week marked the third anniversary of the controllers' strike in 1981. By bad luck, the week saw a coincidental rash of near misses in the air. At the National Labor Relations Board, reporters noted that half a dozen petitions had been filed by fledgling controllers' unions seeking certification elections. Within the airport towers and other facilities, improved equipment turned up a statistically significant increase in "operational errors."

All this led The Wall Street Journal to speak of the "beleaguered" air traffic system. Ralph Nader's Aviation Consumer Action Project took the data on errors and twisted the figures into statistical pretzels. The several events added up last week to the only news besides the Olympics.

What's the story? The story is that the system has recovered steadily from the stunning blow that was suffered with the strike of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO). When 11,400 PATCO members refused to return to work, the FAA ordered them dismissed and at once instituted emergency measures. If you recall, at key airports air schedules were cut by 50 percent. More than 500 military controllers were rushed into key towers and en route facilities. Some 46,000 persons applied for the vacant jobs, and the FAA's training academy in Oklahoma City began training 1,600 students in each of its training cycles. It was a hectic time.

But looking back, the FAA and the non-striking controllers can take justifiable pride in their achievement. PATCO's misguided leadership had threatened to bring the system to its knees, but the system refused to collapse. Last year saw the best safety record in history for the commuter airlines and the second best record for the major carriers. About 12,000 fully qualified controllers and 1,400 air traffic assistants are doing a superlative job.

Yes, some problems remain. FAA Administrator Donald Engen could use another thousand fully qualified controllers, but some things can't be hurried. In the coming fiscal year he will get them. Meanwhile, 2,300 veteran controllers are eligible for retirement. Engen plans to hire 1,800 en route controllers and 600 terminal controllers to compensate for anticipated retirement. By the fourth anniversary of the strike in 1985, there will be no excuses for understaffing of the system.

Engen says his most worrisome problems have nothing to do with sheer numbers of bodies in the control facilities. The trouble is that at major airports, business travelers want to arrive between 7:45 a.m. and 8:30 a.m., and they want to depart about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is physically impossible for all the competing airlines to be accommodated at the same time.

At Atlanta, for example, 18 arriving planes can be handled in a 15-minute interval, but on any given morning around 8 o'clock, 29 planes may be scheduled to land. The Atlanta tower can control 16 takeoffs in this same interval, but 45 flights now are scheduled to depart at this time. Delays are unavoidable, but until the carriers themselves get together and adjust schedules — a get-together fraught with anti-trust risks — travelers will have to fume. There is nothing the controllers can do about it.

As for near misses, Engen makes the point that reported incidents have dropped sharply from 568 in 1980 to 311 in 1982, and still further to 286 in 1983. The operational errors cited by Nader's group are the result of new computer software that is marvelously efficient in detecting technical flaws. Aircraft are supposed to be kept five miles apart on a horizontal plane. If they briefly are 4.9 miles apart it is an "operational error," but the error has little meaning.

In sum, the system is safe. In some exceptionally busy facilities, some controllers are overworked at peak periods, but this will always be true. The skies are friendly up there. Buckle up.

An Explosive Mine from Iran:

The MOST Explosive MIND from Iran:

Taking Time To Reflect

NEW YORK (AP) — After a frantic flurry that had traders waving their arms like Olympic volleyballers, the stock market seems to have faded back again into the summer heat and haze. So what's the excuse this time? Well, it's uncertainty again, and everyone knows what uncertainty does. Whether it's a baseball batter or a pole vaulter or an investor with a bundle of cash, a strong commitment is never made under uncertain conditions.

This time the uncertainty is about interest rates and Paul Volcker. Just before the recent explosive stock rally, there existed a strong feeling that Volcker, the Federal Reserve chairman, had declared himself as rather satisfied with the way things were going.

If the chairman was relaxed about economic matters, institutional investors reasoned, then interest rates weren't likely to rise — but stocks were likely to do so. And that began the charge into equities.

But now there is uncertainty again. Volcker, after all, never declared himself very clearly on the issue. He often doesn't. His remarks are seldom flat out, but instead are more like those of the oracle at Delphi.

And so, therefore, what had been interpreted as a green light seems to have caught a glint of amber, and the market is back again to considerations of the federal budget deficits and the potential for a credit crunch in the future.

The pressure remains on interest rates, says Francis Shott, chief economist of Equitable Life. The clues "point in one direction — up," say economists at the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. There's just too much borrowing going on, says Thomas Holt, the stock market investment adviser.

The prime lending rate, now 13 percent, might rise to 14 by the end of this year and to 15 percent by mid-1985, says Schott, who bases his contention on strong credit demands from consumers, business and government.

Holt points to a growth rate of more than 20 percent a year in consumer installment loans over the first five months of the year, during which time personal income was less than half that rate. That, he says, is overborrowing.

Freddie Mac, as the Home Loan Mortgage Corp. refers to itself, describes the situation this way:

Each credit sector — the U.S. government; private, nonfinancial business; household; state and local government; and foreign — can be categorized as a net supplier or a net user of funds at any given time.

To the extent that a sector engages in net financial investment, it is a supplier of funds to the other sectors. But if it goes into a minus position, it is draining funds from the pool.

In the first quarter of the year there were two big drains on the pool: The U.S. government, to the tune of $180.5 billion, and nonfinancial business in the amount of $79.5 billion.

Contributions to the pool were much less: $151.7 billion from households, $5.1 billion from state and local government, and $64.5 billion from foreign suppliers.

Considering that the pool of foreign money could disappear as quickly as it had accumulated (one year), and that households, the other big suppliers, were straining their own credit limits, what does it all mean?

There is but one conclusion, says Freddie Mac. "Upward pressure on interest rates will continue through 1984 and into 1985."

Such are the fears and uncertainties that every now and then causes Wall Street to reflect.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Our fun-loving president is known to have declared before the taping of a radio broadcast that we would begin "bombing Russia in five minutes."

We monitor radio broadcasts by Soviet leaders regularly. It is reasonable to expect they do the same with ours. They are often thought to be humorless people. Our former actor president, for heightened effect, could voice a similarly bizarre joke in meaningful tones into an unintentionally opened mike before a LIVE broadcast. It would be intercepted by a DEADLY serious and nervous monitor and relayed to the proper authorities.

Within a few minutes we might all die laughing.

Strength For Today

"Grow old along with me;
The best is yet to be,
The last for which the first was made."

So wrote the great poet Robert Browning. He was beginning to feel the walls of old age close in upon him. And with what persistence so they close! It makes many people unhappy.

Yet, almost as old as the world itself is the statement that it is never too late to mend. Old age can set many things right if the elderly person is so disposed. Age, even advanced age, has a tremendous contribution to make to the most active productions of modern life because of maturity and experience.

You will not be dead until they put you in the grace. Whether you have five or 25 years ahead of you, be assured that you have a world to do according to the will of Almighty God.

Even though he chairs the Republican platform foreign policy subcommittee and looms as a potential successor to Ronald Reagan, Jack Kemp failed to win a plank pledging to move the American embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

The opposition to Kemp was formidable: a promise by Reagan to veto any bill Congress sends him ordering transfer of the embassy as advocated by the pro-Israeli bloc in Congress and the government of Israel.

The veto promise doomed Kemp's effort. It also leaves the Democrats, who have pledged since their 1976 platform to move the embassy, ahead of the Republicans on the most emotional issue between the U.S. and Israel. But the GOP platform will contain a resolution condemning anti-Semitism that the Democratic National Convention refused to consider for fear of offending the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

College ...

Besides getting involved in music at WFU, Bruce wants to participate in collegiate athletics by joining the soccer team. "Being in the ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference) makes games really exciting," he said. "Before I never thought much about Wake Forest, but now I can't wait for everything to get started."

Carolyn Pearsall, another 1984 D.H. Conley High School graduate, will be a freshman at North Carolina State University. She is working at the ECU medical school this summer in the biochemistry department, and she said this has helped her select biochemistry as a major. "I decided to go to State originally because I was interested in engineering," she said, "but they also have a very strong chemistry department and that's what I want to go into now before med school."

Carolyn, who won a National Achievement Scholarship for Outstanding Negro Students sponsored by Procter and Gamble, said she is a little concerned about her course schedule. "There's so many classes I need to take," she said, "I'm going to late orientation so I hope I can get everything I need."

When asked if she has heard any stories about classes at NCSU, Carolyn said, "I've heard people joke about how hard PE 100 is ... running and weightlifting. I hope I make it through that."

She said she has been away from home before so the transition to dorm life will not be quite as difficult. "I've been to camp and to visit relatives," Carolyn commented, "I think I'll be able to get used to things quickly."

"I'm looking forward to being away, joining the band, going to football games, sorority rush my sophomore year, and all the excitement," she said, "My mom and dad just keep telling me to remember what I'm there for!"

Kelly Hobgood, a Farmville Central High School graduate who has selected to attend East Carolina University, plans to live in the dorm even though he is a local student. "I think it'll be good for me to get away and on my own," he said, "I'll be far enough away to learn about being independent, and I'll also appreciate things more by having to do them myself. Besides, you miss out on a lot if you don't live on campus. You just don't have as good a time when you're not in contact with everything that's going on."

He said he does not know his roommate personally, but thinks this will be an advantage. "If I were to room with someone from home, I probably wouldn't make as many new friends because we'd stay in the same group all the time," Kelly commented, "By having a new person as a roommate, we'll both meet more people."

Kelly said one major difference he expects to feel in college is an initial lack of stability. "High school is so stable because you know everyone and go to the same classes. It's pretty much an identical routine day after day. In college it's the not knowing that I worry about. There's also a lot of expenses to be considered, like food for example, that you don't really worry about in high school."

The Farmville native plans to major in biology and then go into medical school at ECU. "I chose ECU because it has a really good and growing med school program," he said, "Also, classes at ECU are smaller than they are at some other large universities. I'm hoping to get a parttime job at the hospital during my second semester."

Kelly said he intends to pledge a fraternity and get involved with the Student Union. "I'm ready to get started off fresh at ECU. Although I was accepted to some other schools, I'm really glad I made the decision to go to school here. It's turned out to be the best alternative for me."

Jaycees ...

we're going to go with."

Doris Gosnell of Lexington, N.C., president of the 59,000-member Jaycees Women, said she doubts many members of her group will join the Jaycees.

"I think our organization will continue to grow," she said, noting the two organizations have worked "arm in arm" for several years in providing separate leadership training for young people.

"We will continue to work in cooperation with the U.S. Jaycees promoting both arms of the Jaycee movement, Jaycees and Jaycee Women," she said.

While Todd accentuated the positive, other Jaycees were less sanguine about the future of their fraternity.

"Today's actions will be celebrated as a landmark in the organization's growth," Todd predicted. "It's going to be a grass roots effort to get everyone to comply."

"It was all decided before we got here," said Barclay Clark, president of the Jaycees chapter in Pueblo, Colo., who voted against the resolution. He said Jaycees had no choice but to admit women because of the July 3 high court ruling in the Minnesota case.

Four Charged In Break-In At Pitt Home

Four Pitt County men, including one teen-ager, have been arrested by sheriff's deputies following investigation of an Aug. 11 incident break-in at the home of A.J. Huntington in the Thomas Trailer Park on the Belvoir Highway.

The value of items reported as stolen totaled $2,200 and included money, jewelry, office equipment and foods.

Those arrested and released under bond were: Elmer Clayton Lancaster, 49, David Wayne Lancaster, 16, Herbert Issac Williams, 25, and Robert Glenn Tyson, 31, all of Route 4, Greenville.

The elder Lancaster has been charged with accessory to breaking and entering and possession of stolen goods, with bond set at $500. The other three have been charged with breaking, entering and larceny. Bonds were set at $2,500 for Williams, $2,000 for the younger Lancaster, and $3,000 for Tyson.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that a portion of the stolen goods, primarily music equipment valued at $1,025, has been recovered.

Toll Beaters

NEW YORK (AP) — Token-detecting machines will be installed to thwart the $14,000-a-month practice of using Mexican pesos and other foreign coins instead of tokens at bridges and tunnels, authorities said.

Meanwhile, city Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said Thursday that turnstile jumpers and other fare evaders are cheating the subways and buses out of $60 million a year.

The use of pesos at bridges and tunnels started soon after a new token was introduced with a fare increase in April 1982, officials said. Now, about 7,300 pesos, worth half a cent each, are collected from fare machines each month — the equivalent of $11,000 a month in tolls or $132,000 a year.

George Schoepfer, executive officer and chief engineer, said the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority also found other foreign coins and slugs equivalent to an additional $3,000 a month, bringing the total monthly toll-beaters' cost to $14,000.

Haney has served for the past year as acting assistant dean and prior to that was the faculty chairman for the school of art.

A Niagara Falls native, Haney earned his bachelor of fine arts degree from Syracuse University in 1971 and his master of fine arts degree from the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University in 1973. He became a teacher of ceramics at ECU in August of 1973.

Fixed-Rate Loans May Return

By The Associated Press
Confidence by credit market investors that inflation is in check may lead to a resurrection of fixed-rate mortgages, loan officials say.

Several major lenders are offering the mortgages in the 13.5 percent range, down by half a percent to a percent from levels of just of few weeks ago.

Lower inflation makes investors more willing to invest in long-term loans at lower rates, loan officials said.

"We have seen demand go down recently (for adjustable-rate mortgages) because of the fact that there is a much narrower spread between the one-year adjustables and the fixed rates," said Pat Sheehy, a loan officer at Cameron Brown Co. in Charlotte.

"Three months ago the spread was almost 4 percent. Now it's down to anywhere between 2 percent and 2½ percent."

"Because of the positive sentiment, we have seen rates fall a little bit in the long-term range," said David Dunaway, assistant vice president in marketing for Wachovia Mortgage Co. in Winston-Salem. "Concern over inflation has eased."

Wachovia's 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages are in the 13½ percent to 14 percent range, depending on discount points paid, Dunaway said. One-year, adjustable mortgages are carrying initial interest rates in the range of 11½ percent.

Shots Required

Pitt County Health Director Dr. Robert Ehinger reminds parents to have school-age children immunized before school starts this fall.

The state-mandated immunizations are three combination diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis (whooping cough) shots; three oral polio doses; a measles shot, and a rubella (German measles) shot. Students not up-to-date on vaccinations within 30 days after the opening of school will not be allowed to attend school until they are properly immunized, Dr. Ehinger said. Immunizations are available from private physicians and at the Pitt County Health Department.

Only medical or religious exemptions are granted. A child's immunization record should be verified and signed or stamped by a physician before school opens.

Lifeguards Aid Bathers In Rip Tide

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-five "heroic" lifeguards battled a freak rip tide apparently whipped up by a passing barge to save more than two dozen swimmers being swept helplessly into deep Atlantic waters, officials said.

A large barge and tug involved in an Army Corps of Engineers beach replenishment project may have created the strong current that pulled 25 to 30 bathers into water over their heads Thursday at the city's Rockaway Beach, said Parks Department spokesman Adrian Benepe.

The lifeguards, wearing shoulder flotation buoys connected by ropes to large reels on the beach, toiled for a half-hour before all of the panicked swimmers could be pulled safely ashore, Benepe said.

"The lifeguards said that for every stroke they swam toward shore, they were pulled six strokes back," the spokesman said.

Three swimmers and one lifeguard were admitted to Peninsula Hospital Center, where they were treated for submersion and listed in serious condition. Hospital spokeswoman Shirley Kaminsky said a fifth woman was treated in the emergency room after suffering an asthma attack at the sight of a relative struggling in the water.

Another 16 people were treated at the beach for swallowing sea water and as many as 10 others were rescued, Benepe said.

"We're still not sure exactly how it happened, but we're looking into the possibility the current was caused or abetted by the tug and barge," he said.

Bathers were pulled from 300 to 400 feet seaward, Benepe said. Lifeguards came running from adjacent beaches soon after the 12:30 p.m. incident, and swam to struggling bathers to hand them rescue ropes.

"The people were fighting the tide and there was a lot of confusion," Benepe said. "The lifeguards there were terrific. They really made heroic rescues under adverse conditions."

One of those hospitalized was 27-year-old lifeguard Sam Santiago, who Benepe said pulled four people from the waters before he collapsed in exhaustion.

"I did it for the kids. Kids are important to me," said Santiago from his hospital bed. He jerked his neck backward. "But the kids kept grabbing me from behind, on the head."

Benepe singled out two other lifeguards for heroic acts. Gary Grady rescued 10 people, he said, and Tom Lynch rescued four.

After the accident, police closed off the block-long stretch of shoreline, said police Lt. James Hughes. Marine units stood offshore to recover any additional victims, but Hughes said, "We think we've gotten everybody out."

Court Says Sweat No Justification

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sweating — even on a cool night after a driver has been stopped for a ticket — doesn't justify police interrogation, a state appeals court ruled.

The case dated from April 1982, when Stanford University policeman Jeffrey Bell stopped Karl Edward Miller as he was driving on a street near campus at 3 a.m. in a jeep with an expired registration tag.

Bell said Miller gave him his license but said he didn't have the proper registration. As he was preparing to write a ticket, the officer said, he noticed that Miller was sweating and his hands were trembling, though it was a cool night.

Bell then touched a blanket in the back seat of the jeep and asked Miller what was under it. The court said Miller pulled the blanket away and revealed a video camera and video tape recorder, the basis of the burglary charge.

The 1st District Court of Appeal reversed the conviction Thursday, saying the questioning was illegal and the camera and recorder should not have been allowed as evidence.

"A routine arrest for a traffic violation does not justify a search for contraband," wrote Justice Jerome Smith.

Police must have a specific, factual reason to suspect that the driver was involved in a crime, the justice said. The lateness of the hour and Mueller's perspiring and trembling were not sufficient reasons, Smith said.

"Officer Bell's suspicion was based on nothing more than a hunch," Smith said.

De Lorean Trial Leaves Stings' Fate In Doubt

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Although defense lawyers and one of the jurors who acquitted John Z. De Lorean say the case should have an impact on future government undercover operations, some prosecutors say the "sting" is too valuable a tool to be abandoned.

"That's one of the great jury verdicts of all time," said noted trial lawyer Melvin Belli after De Lorean was acquitted of narcotics trafficking charges Thursday. "That jury stood up and said they were not going to cotton to cops coming in and acting like a bunch of bums."

Paul Rothstein, a Georgetown University law professor who specializes in evidence-gathering techniques, said the jury had to decide whether or not De Lorean was bent on crime before the government operation began.

"If that were so, then he was a criminal," said Rothstein. "But if he was merely an innocent who had been seduced into committing a crime by police, then it was entrapment and he should get off."
Juror No. 36 — jurors names were not used and were not revealed even after the verdict — said that without considering predisposition "we would have had a hung jury."

"I think the important thing to come out of this case is there is going to be an impact on the future," said juror No. 140. "...the way the government agents operated in this case was not appropriate."

"They sent out a message to the Department of Justice that you can't do to our citizens what you did to John De Lorean," said attorney Howard Weitzman, the automaker's chief defense attorney.

Sting operations have had their share of success since the FBI shifted emphasis from street crime and began to focus on sophisticated white-collar criminals. Between 1977 and 1983, at least 1,496 undercover operations led to more than 3,000 convictions, including six congressmen and a senator in the Abscam case, and the recovery of millions of dollars in stolen goods, the FBI says.

But some of the stings have been criticized by innocent people on the fringes of the probes. In hearings before a House panel in 1982, several victims of sting operations gone awry wept openly and recounted suicide attempts, near nervous breakdowns, bankruptcies, repossessions and divorces brought about by their involvement in the operations.

In all, more than $500 million in lawsuits have been filed against the government by dozens of people who claimed they were unintended victims of the stings.

On May 1, the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights said its four-year Abscam-inspired study of FBI sting operations "demonstrates that many, if not all, of the potential dangers in undercover operations are being realized."

Subcommittee chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., said he did not expect legislation based on the report this year. But the De Lorean verdict may have a more immediate impact.

Charles Whitebread, a University of Southern California law professor specializing in entrapment defense, said he expects the case to make future juries more likely to question the credibility of government witnesses.

"If the jury believed the entrapment claim, then I would expect a lot more of these defenses in drug cases in the future," he added. "Normally it is very hard to win on that theory because the predisposition of the defendant to commit the crime is usually fatal."

F. Lee Bailey, the well-known defense attorney, said the jurors were obviously influenced more by defense allegations of entrapment and accusations that prosecution witnesses lied than they were by government hidden-camera videotapes.

Those tapes showed De Lorean exulting with undercover agents over the up to $24 million he supposedly would have gotten from the drug deal to bail out his failing auto company.

"Certainly there were ample grounds for a jury to get angry and say, 'We're not going to put up with this.' On the other hand, the tapes were pretty heavy stuff," Bailey said.

He said one possible reason the FBI has been more successful in gaining convictions in past stings — such as Abscam, Brillab and Greyford — is that the targets in those cases included congressmen and other officials who held offices of public trust, rather than private businessmen with no previous record of involvement in crime.

De Lorean Still Faces Web Of Lawsuits, British Probe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John De Lorean wept tears of joy after being acquitted of cocaine-trafficking charges, but he still faces huge unpaid legal fees, lawsuits, a bankruptcy case and a British probe of $17.5 million allegedly missing from his failed sports car company.

"Would you buy a used car from me?" the onetime millionaire automaker joked Thursday after a federal jury decided he had not conspired to distribute cocaine worth $24 million.

The British government, which poured more than $100 million into De Lorean's defunct sports car venture in Northern Ireland, issued an immediate invitation for him to answer questions about the unaccounted-for $17.5 million.

But on Thursday, De Lorean was a happy man as he heard the words "not guilty" pronounced eight times in a hushed courtroom, clearing him on all counts in a cocaine conspiracy indictment.

Defense attorney Howard Weitzman called the jury's verdict a condemnation of the government's controversial "sting" operations. He said the jury "sent out a message to the Department of Justice that you can't do to our citizens what you did to John De Lorean."

Some of the jurors felt De Lorean never committed the crimes he was charged with, and others felt he was illegally "lured into a situation" by the government, jurors told reporters.

But De Lorean's future was clouded by court cases in Miami and Detroit and the ongoing British inquiry into his business dealings.

In London, legislators demanded Thursday night that the government ask De Lorean what happened to $17.5 million that a House of Commons investigative committee concluded was paid to a firm called GPD. GPD was described as a small Swiss company registered in Panama with no known assets and about which almost nothing was known.

In Miami, meanwhile, 132 investors including Sammy Davis Jr. and Roy Clark have filed a $414.7 million suit alleging De Lorean misappropriated funds intended for research and development of the gull-winged sports car that bore his name.

In Detroit, a bankruptcy court is attempting to unravel the complex claims filed by unsecured creditors of De Lorean Motor Co., which filed for protection under federal bankruptcy laws just days before De Lorean was arrested. A creditors committee has filed liens on all of De Lorean's assets, including his homes in New Jersey, San Diego County and New York.

Civil litigation also is pending in New York state.

Government prosecutors had portrayed the narcotics case against De Lorean as open and shut, supported by the best evidence possible — videotapes vividly depicting the defendant's alleged drug conspiracy.

The most sensational tape showed De Lorean pointing at a suitcase full of cocaine and saying: "It's better than gold. Gold weighs more than that, for God's sake."

FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents had masqueraded as tough-talking drug dealers and crooked bankers. Their videotapes of meetings with De Lorean were the foundation of the government's case.

The six men and six women found De Lorean had been illegally entrapped by agents who dangled a lure of quick money before the financially besieged De Lorean as his company sank in a sea of financial woes.

The jurors said they hoped their decision would have "an impact on the future."

"Praise the Lord!" the 59-year-old De Lorean exclaimed as the verdicts were read in the jammed courtroom. His wife, fashion model Cristina Ferrare, fell into the arms of her mother and sobbed.

The tearful courtroom scene was the climax of a case that began with De Lorean's arrest Oct. 19, 1982 and generated nearly two years of international headlines.

"I'm pleased it's all over, and I hopefully can get back to my life," De Lorean told reporters later. "It's been an absolute horror."

Asked if his life had been irreparably harmed, he responded wryly: "Well, outside of the fact that I've aged about 600 years in the last two and that life as a hardworking industrialist has been tattered and torn, I don't know."

The jury indicated it was not so much De Lorean's actions as the government's that made their verdict inevitable.

"The way the government agents operated in this case was not appropriate," said one juror. "I look forward to the future favorable impact of this case on the country."

The prosecutors, apparently stunned by their defeat, would say nothing more than it was a shock.

In a statement, U.S. Attorney Robert C. Bonner said, "The jury has spoken; that is the heart of our criminal justice system. As all who believe in our system must, we accept the verdict."

Block Says Has Nothing To Hide In FBI Probe Of His Land Deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says he has nothing to hide from a reported FBI investigation into his farmland transactions and suggests that some of the controversy about his finances has been politically motivated.

Block responded Thursday to earlier reports in Minnesota and Iowa that the FBI also is checking to see if he could benefit from a $400,000 loan by the Farmers Home Administration to a business partner.

The FBI would not confirm or deny that an investigation was under way.

Jim Nichols, Minnesota state agriculture commissioner, said Wednesday that the FBI is trying to discover whether Block disclosed all his assets in financial statements required of government employees.

Nichols, a member of the Democratic-Farm-Labor coalition party, has frequently criticized Block and the Reagan administration's farm policies.

Block was asked at a news conference whether the FBI had contacted him in connection with the investigation.

"No, they haven't contacted me at all, and I don't know anything about it," Block said. "As far as my involvement, I have nothing to hide and I see no problem at all. Whatever they want to look at, they're welcome to look at."

As he has before, Block suggested that recent criticism of his financial situation involving his partners, including John "Bill" Curry of Galesburg, Ill., may be motivated in part by politics. Block said in Davenport, Iowa, on Tuesday that part of the problem has been stirred up by Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who is running for the Senate.

"The politics this year have become more ridiculous by the week and by the month," Block said. "I guess I've come to realize that any citizen that might want to stir up something is quite open to go to the FBI and ask for a routine investigation, and the FBI is obliged to do that."

Block was asked if Harkin was the only one he had in mind when charging that politics have been involved.

"Well, he's been talking more in Iowa than others," Block said. "I really don't want to go out and point the finger at a lot of people individually."

Block said that his visits with Midwest farmers this week indicated they have other things on their minds, such as interest rates, exports, the strong U.S. dollar, not the personal finances of the secretary of agriculture.

Shuttle's Crew Will Retrieve Satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A space shuttle crew in November will attempt to retrieve one and perhaps two communications satellites that were rocketed into useless orbits in February, the space agency says.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Thursday that it has signed an agreement with insurance underwriters to retrieve the Palapa B-2 satellite, which was launched for the Indonesia government.

Officials said negotiations are under way which could lead to the retrieval of Western Union's Westar 6 satellite on the same November mission.

Both satellites were released from the cargo bay of the space shuttle Challenger in February, but both were injected into the wrong orbits when rocket nozzles failed as on-board motors fired to boost them toward stationary outposts 22,300 miles high.

Astronaut Joseph Allen, maneuvering with a rocket-powered back pack, will leave the shuttle, attach himself to the satellite with a latching pole and hold the payload steady so it can be grasped by the shuttle's robot arm.

Palapa B-2 will be berthed in the cargo bay and returned to Earth for repair and resale by two insurance organizations, Merritt Syndicates Ltd., London, and International Technology Underwriters (Intec), Washington, D.C.

The Indonesian government has signed over all recovery and salvage rights for Palapa B-2 to Merritt and Intec, its principal insurance underwriters. Indonesia received a $75 million insurance payment for the loss of the satellite.

Western Union received a $105 million insurance payment and is negotiating an agreement with Merritt Syndicate that could lead to a retrieval of Westar 6.

Indonesia and Western Union each paid Hughes Communications International $35 million to $40 million for the satellites. They also took out insurance for launch costs and loss of business in case of failure.

Refurbishment and resale of Palapa B-2 and possibly Westar 6 would help offset the payments made by the insurance companies.

Under the Palapa B-2 agreement announced Thursday, the insurance underwriters will pay NASA the costs for the retrieval, with the price not to exceed $4.8 million. Two other commercial communications satellites are to be carried into space on the November flight.

Palapa B-2 is in an orbit ranging from 700 to 800 miles high, and it would have to be lowered to an altitude of 200 miles to be within the range of space shuttle Discovery. That would be done by ground commands to the satellite's steering jets.

The flight would be the second for Discovery, now awaiting an Aug. 29 liftoff of its twice-delayed maiden flight. Commanding the retrieval mission in November will be astronaut Fred Hauck.

Billy Graham Meets Presidents

Graham arrived in South Korea on Wednesday to take part in celebrations of the centennial of Protestant Christianity in Korea. He will deliver an address Sunday at a service at Yoido Plaza in Seoul, and organizers say as many as 1 million people may attend.

Veterans Groups Protest Study On Agent Orange

ATLANTA (AP) — A government study published today that found no significant link between Agent Orange and birth defects in children of Vietnam veterans immediately drew fire from some veterans' groups, who called it inaccurate and incomplete.

"It's a government agency trying to protect the government," said Woody Willis, commander of Nam Vets of Georgia, who said the researchers were "trying to sell us down the river."

But CDC director James O. Mason defended the research as fair and truthful. "If anyone were to try to influence me, I would not be director of the CDC tomorrow," he said. "I would resign and leave."

The findings were published in today's editions of the agency's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report and the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The CDC on Thursday released the results of the four-year, $2.8 million study which found that Vietnam veterans — including those exposed to the herbicide Agent Orange — run no increased risk of fathering children with birth defects.

The study did find an apparently higher risk for children of vets exposed to Agent Orange to have a few specific defects, including spina bifida — a malformed spinal cord — cleft lip and several kinds of tumors.

But Dr. Vernon Houk, director of the CDC's Center for Environmental Health, said researchers believe those findings — in a few of some 95 defect categories surveyed — were "by chance," and do not represent a real, biological health threat.

An out-of-court settlement in May called for a $180 million trust fund to be set up by seven chemical companies for thousands of Vietnam veterans and their families who believe they have been harmed by the chemical. Veterans say the effects range from weight loss and liver damage to skin diseases, and a higher risk of birth defects.

The CDC surveyed children born in the Atlanta area between 1968 and 1980. Data were available on the fathers of 4,815 children with birth defects and 2,967 healthy children, and in both cases, 9 percent of their fathers were Vietnam veterans.

"For most (birth defects) ... Vietnam veterans' risks were neither higher or lower than those of other fathers," the CDC said.

Similarly, the Atlanta-based CDC said, there was no statistical difference for children of fathers exposed to Agent Orange, a chemical used to destroy millions of acres of jungle growth in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

"We need a second study that will tell Vietnam veterans if they are likely to have children with birth defects," said Frank McCarthy, president of Vietnam Veterans Agent Orange Victims Inc.

"The CDC study did not go far enough in allaying fears of an extremely apprehensive group of people," McCarthy said.

Chrysler Raising Car Prices $181

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it has tentatively raised prices on its 1985-model passenger cars an average 1.7 percent, or $181, over comparably equipped 1984 models.

The automaker announced the increase Thursday to its U.S. dealers, Chrysler said in a statement. The tentative prices apply to models shipped after July 30.

Chrysler also said it would increase delivery prices by an average $12 per car. Dealer profit margins would remain the same, a company spokesman said.

Chrysler becomes the first U.S. automaker to announce its 1985-model prices, but pricing decisions by its competitors — particularly General Motors Corp. — could determine whether those prices remained firm.

The automaker announced earlier that it was tentatively raising 1985 truck prices an average 4.1 percent, or $473.

Company officials said earlier this year that, despite record profits, Chrysler might try to recover rising labor and materials costs through price increases this fall. But most industry forecasters have predicted small increases stemming from reduced inflation.

By contrast, annual price hikes exceeded 10 percent during the late 1970s, when inflation rates were higher than current levels, The News said.

U.S. Cats Turning To Meat, Not Fish

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tradition may hold that cats like seafood, but the nation's felines are actually gobbling more meat than fish, new government statistics disclose.

Production of meat-based cat food rocketed 310 percent over five years, to 824.9 million pounds, the 1982 Census of Manufactures shows. At the same time, canned cat food made from fish declined by just over 10 percent, falling to 715.9 million pounds.

A pet food expert says the switch might reflect a better recognition of cats' roots and preferences.

"They are a desert animal, the ancestors of cats are from the desert, and there are no fish there," commented Roger Hoestenbach of the Association of American Feed Control Officials in Oklahoma City.

Cats did not develop around water and they don't seek out fish instinctively, Hoestenbach said in a telephone interview. But many people think cats prefer fish from observing them hunt — particularly if a cat pursues a goldfish in a fishbowl, he explained.

That is mostly play behavior, with cats enjoying a hunt for anything that moves, he said.

The switch to meat-based food may be an increased recognition of the actual background and preference of cats as hunters, he speculated.

But he also noted that pet food is bought by owners, not animals, and preferences tend to be cyclical, popular flavors changing from time to time.

For example, in 1977 fish-based cat food topped meat-based products by 797.8 million pounds to 201.1 million.

The Census report, part of an overall survey of manufacturing firms across the country, disclosed an increase in production of cat food from 1977 to 1982, with increases also occurring in dry and semi-moist foods.

The reason for this is simple, Hoestenbach said, "cats are coming into their own. They fit into the lifestyle of Americans in urban areas" being easy to take care of.

Cats can be kept inside an apartment, he noted, don't have to be walked, and can be left alone for a weekend. "That makes it pretty easy to deal with cats" as pets, he said.

The Census study showed a slight drop in production of canned dog food over the five year period, but there was an apparent jump in dry and semi-moist food to balance.

Canned dog food production dropped from 2.3 billion pounds in 1977 to 2.1 billion in 1982, the report said. In 1982, production of dry and semi-moist dog food totaled 5.8 billion pounds.

Overall, the Census Bureau said, there were 219 companies producing some form of pet food in 1982, up from 218 five years earlier. Employment in the industry fell by 300 to 17,400, the report said, but the payroll climbed from $245.5 million to $340.1 million.

Total shipments of pet food in 1982 were valued at $4.4 billion, up from $3.1 billion five years before.

Turning out that 1982 pet food required, among other things, 1.3 million tons of corn, 724,000 tons of soybean cake and meal, 528,000 tons of meat meal, 422,000 tons of wheat, 178,000 tons of fats and oils, 119,000 tons of poultry byproducts, 78,000 tons of barley, 68,000 tons of hominy feed and meal and 55,000 tons of fish meal.

Third Embryonic Birth Announced

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A 33-year-old woman has given birth to the world's third baby produced from a frozen embryo, hospital officials said Friday.

Doctors at Queen Victoria Medical Center said Margaret Brooks gave birth to an 8-pound boy Thursday night. The child was delivered two weeks premature, but physicians said both mother and son were in fine condition.

The baby was named John Brian James Brooks. His father's name is Brian.

The world's first baby produced from a frozen embryo, a girl only identified as Zoe, was born at the Melbourne hospital in April. The second baby produced from a frozen embryo, a boy, was born in the Dutch city of Rotterdam in June.

Under the procedure, ova are surgically removed from the prospective mother's body and fertilized in a glass dish with sperm from the prospective father. Using the normal in vitro fertilization techniques, the resulting embryos would be allowed to develop for a few days before some of them were implanted in the woman's womb in hopes of achieving a pregnancy.

However, in the frozen embryo process, the embryos are frozen in liquid nitrogen for use later. This allows repeated attempts at pregnancy without additional surgery for the woman.

In Mrs. Brooks' case, the embryo that produced her son was frozen for several months before an attempt was made at pregnancy, doctors said.

Two frozen embryos became the center of controversy earlier this year when it was made public that the woman who helped produce them and her husband had been killed in a plane crash. A committee has been named to decide what will be done with the frozen embryos.

40 Oil Rig Workers Die

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — At least 40 workers drowned when a lifeboat evacuating oil workers from a fire on Brazil's biggest offshore rig capsized in heavy seas, the state oil company Petrobras says.

Petrobras said the fire, which it blamed on an explosion caused by a gas leak early Thursday, was raging out of control during the night and expected to blaze for days. It said other oil and gas wells in the Enchova field, 53 miles offshore and 130 miles east of Rio, were sealed off to try to prevent environmental damage and explosions.

The Jornal do Brasil radio station said some workers tried to escape the flames by jumping from atop the 120-foot-high rig into the sea. Petrobras did not confirm the report but said the death toll was expected to increase.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Brasilia, Don Hauger, said the embassy did not believe any U.S. citizens were involved in the fire.

Petrobras said in an official communique there was an explosion from a gas leak that started a fire on the rig. As deck hands fought the blaze, a second fire broke out and workers began to abandon the rig.

"During the abandoning operation, one of the life boats with capacity for 55 people overturned due to the severe conditions of the sea and high waves," the communique said.

British, U.S. Ships Join In Search For Red Sea Mines

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Three British mine-hunters sailed into the Gulf of Suez today and a U.S. Navy ship carrying minesweeping helicopters prepared to join the search for the mines that have damaged 17 ships in the Red Sea.

Three other U.S. mine-detecting helicopters were sweeping the narrow approaches to the Saudi Arabian port of Jidda, midway down the 1,450-mile-long sea, U.S. Defense Department spokesman Michael Burch said.

Diplomatic sources and Suez harbor officials said one British mine-hunter entered the Gulf of Suez — the northwestern branch of the Red Sea — on Thursday night and another two sailed today from the naval base at Adabiya, a few miles south of the city of Suez.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be further identified, said the remainder of the British contingent, one mine-hunter and a support ship, will put to sea later today or Saturday.

The diplomatic sources said the three mine-hunters at sea were "still shaking down" and would start actual clearance work within the next 36 hours.

The start of the multinational cleanup operation in the northern part of the Red Sea came less than two days after unidentified mines claimed their 17th victim since July 9, a Cypriot vessel. A U.S. Embassy source told The Associated Press the U.S. Navy transport Shreveport, with four Sea Stallion mine-hunting helicopters on board, was "in position in the Suez Gulf, preparing to start operations in a day or two." About 200 American servicemen are aboard.

Airport Confirmed

PUNTA HUETE, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's leftist government confirmed a Reagan administration claim that it is building a major military airport and also said it is awaiting delivery of new combat planes from abroad.

The Reagan administration had claimed that Nicaragua was working on an airport at Punta Huete, 13 miles northeast of Managua, but Thursday was the first time the Sandinista government acknowledged the project.

Construction Minister Mauricio Valenzuela said the airport would be completed by the end of 1985.

Nicaraguan Defense Ministry spokeswoman Capt. Rosa Pasos, who accompanied reporters on a tour of the new facility, said the government was showing off the airport to avoid a situation "such as happened in Grenada."

The Reagan administration had accused the leftist government of Grenada of building a large airport for military purposes, although Grenada's leaders said the airport was for tourist jetliners.

Last October, the United States led an invasion that toppled Grenada's leftist regime and installed a interim government.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he was not aware of the Nicaraguan disclosure and said the Reagan administration would have no immediate comment.

Political Parties Agree On Distrust Of Soviet Union

DALLAS (AP) — Democrats and Republicans are sharpening their presidential campaign differences over military affairs, but they agree on at least two things: They don't trust the Soviet Union, and they are willing to spend lots of money to keep the U.S. guard up.

While Republican platform writers met in Texas this week to proclaim "a sober view of the Soviet Union" as "a threat to freedom and peace on every continent," Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale was using strikingly similar words in a speech in Arkansas.

"To see Soviet behavior through sober eyes is to know that we live in a dangerous world," Mondale said as he roughed out a strategy to meet the danger by building up conventional forces instead of relying on nuclear deterrence.

David L. Aaron, a deputy director of the National Security Council under former President Carter and a Mondale adviser, told reporters the details of the strategy have not been worked out, but added, "It is not a strategy on the cheap."

"It would cost a lot of money to strengthen conventional forces," Aaron said, but he added that Mondale is convinced it would deter war more effectively than President Reagan's policy of forcing the Soviets to the bargaining table by a nuclear buildup.

The Republican platform, adopted by the platform committee late Thursday subject to ratification next week at the GOP convention, pledges to "do everything necessary so that, in case of conflict, the United States would clearly prevail" over an adversary.

It does not mention the Soviet Union.

Some conservatives sought tougher language, specifically calling for military "superiority" over the Soviets as the 1980 GOP platform did. The White House objected, saying this would call into question the administration's commitment to nuclear arms talks.

"We will continue to modernize our deterrent capability, while negotiating for verifiable arms control," the proposed GOP campaign document says.

It also supports the president's "star wars" program for long-term research aimed at developing a system to shoot down incoming missiles, but expresses hope that military spending can "level off in the near future."

At the Democratic National Convention that nominated him in San Francisco last month, Mondale shunned efforts by the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson and former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota to put the party on record as favoring cuts in defense spending.

The plank favored by Mondale, and adopted by the convention, calls for continued growth in military expenditures, but at a slower rate than the large increases proposed by Reagan since he took office in 1981.

Aaron, however, said that regardless of who is president, Congress is expected to increase defense spending by about 3-to-4 percent per year for some years to come.

The argument, Mondale and Aaron said, is not so much how many dollars are spent, but how effectively they build up the nation's security.

"In defense, or elsewhere, there is no free lunch," Mondale told his Little Rock audience.

"The issue in this campaign is not whether the Soviets challenge us, but whether our defense is adequate to meet that challenge," he said, adding that he plans to spell out "a defense program that gives us our money's worth."

He attacked Reagan's budget as "tilted toward nuclear weapons and away from conventional preparedness" and promised to reverse that trend.

Aaron said specifics of defense policy "need to be worked out by any president when he is in office" but that Mondale's policy likely would include more emphasis on building up ammunition stockpiles and increased reliance on the reserve and National Guard forces.

No matter how detailed or vague their own plans were, however, both sides were using a broad brush to paint the other as weak in its military posture.

"Are we getting the defense that makes us more secure?" asked Mondale. "Are we getting the preparedness we pay for? The answer is 'No' and the reason is the absence of presidential leadership."

In the GOP platform committee deliberations, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia struck back, denouncing "the deceitful demagoguery of Walter Mondale in Little Rock, in which a man who has specialized in weakening America attacked this administration because we weren't strong enough."

Republicans Putting Finish On Platform

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, zipping upward in the polls, will accept renomination next week from a convention unlikely to hear a squeak of ideological dissent. Republicans were topping off their platform today after quashing moderate initiatives in a series of one-sided decisions.

"When he reads this document he will love it," beamed Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi after his 106-member Platform Committee completed work on a statement of party dogma that suits Reagan's philosophy to a T.

He called the platform "progressive" and "looking to the future" and his co-chairman, Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida, called it "radical" in its call for tax deferrals for money banked for education or new homes.

Party moderates — outnumbered, out-voted and sometimes outmaneuvered on women's rights, abortion rights and school prayer — said their type of Republicans would have trouble running on so conservative a platform, but they lacked the votes to cause a stir, let alone make a difference.

The White House wasn't worried about the tilt.

Drew Lewis, Reagan's overseer in these proceedings, told reporters:

"It is a conservative document. But it should be a conservative document. We are a conservative party and we have a conservative candidate and, obviously, the delegates here are conservative. In no way are we uncomfortable with a conservative document."

About the only work left to do before the convention starts is to write a prologue to the platform hailing Reagan's achievements and portraying the Democratic team of Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine A. Ferraro as hopelessly out of step with American sentiment.

The platform's overall tone is one Reagan is sure to be pleased with: "Americans are better off than they were four years ago."

Further satisfactory news came to him in the form of an NBC News voter survey that gives him a 20-point lead over Mondale and Ms. Ferraro.

The survey was conducted less than a week ago. A New York Times-CBS poll published earlier this week gave Reagan a healthy lead, too.

Surveys taken as the Democratic convention ended — glowing with pleasure over the selection of a woman running mate — showed Mondale and Ferraro neck-and-neck with Reagan.

But the party that's been paraded on television for a week always benefits, momentarily.

GOP moderates took such severe lickings that they lack the votes they would need to compel the convention to confront their issues.

They'd have to have the signatures of 27 committee members to wage a floor fight, and the votes showed that getting that many is highly unlikely. Lott anticipated no floor fights Tuesday, when the platform is presented on the second day of the Republican National Convention.

With Reagan's platform secure, Republicans here have already started partying. A week of big bashes await them in a Dallas anxious to put a new shine on a city whose image was shaped by the assassination of a president and by a television show about lustful, money-hungry rich Texans.

For the Reagan crowd, the only jarring note came from an ally, Anne Burford, who has twice been driven out of environmental positions that Reagan appointed her to.

Mrs. Burford announced she is heading a conservative "truth squad" to discredit Ms. Ferraro.

"The campaign protested and urged her not to do this," said Larry Speakes, the president's spokesman. "It's not the way we want to run the campaign." On top of that, Burford's group must maintain independence from the Reagan-Bush campaign or their expenditures count against Reagan's limit.

The Platform Committee couldn't resist a swipe at Ms. Ferraro and her discomfort over her husband's inclination not to make public his tax returns.

By voice vote, it adopted a plank calling for "full disclosure" by officials and candidates "including the financial holdings of spouses or dependents."

Lewis was so satisfied with the 1984 platform that he left town without even waiting for the deliberations to end.

"It's a platform that is certainly more to the right than a Republican platform would have been 12 years ago," Lewis told reporters as he left. "But if you look at Mondale and Ferraro right now, they're spending all their time trying to figure out how to prove they're conservatives."

The Campaign

Mondale

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale is taking a day off from campaigning today before a weekend trip through the farm belt to remind rural Americans of his country roots and to lay out his proposals for reviving the depressed agricultural economy.

The Democratic presidential nominee had no public appearances scheduled before he leaves his Minnesota home Saturday for a tour of the municipal farmers market in Kansas City. A stop at the Iowa state fair in Des Moines is scheduled Sunday.

Mondale also plans to use his weekly paid radio address Sunday to discuss farm policy.

He laid the groundwork for the trip Thursday with a four-hour private meeting with two dozen agricultural experts and some Democratic members of Congress with a special interest in farm issues.

Afterward, Mondale did not reveal specifics of his farm and rural policy, but he stressed the "credit crisis" faced by U.S. farmers and he cited the need for plans to restructure that debt.

He called for "stronger administration of good commodity programs so that farmers' income is such that they can repay these bills and have some profit."

He also said, "We'll solve no problems, either on the farm or in rural America unless farm income improves."

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hailing Ronald Reagan as a "genuine, real and amiable person," a top Jewish leader predicts the president will win re-election this fall by doing well among all voting blocs, including Jews.

Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, told reporters after meeting with Reagan in the Oval Office that it is his opinion that Reagan "will probably do very well and probably better than last time" in winning the votes of American Jews, who traditionally vote Democratic.

When asked why, Bronfman replied: "I think he's a very popular president. I think his support of Israel, of Soviet Jewry ... plus the fact that he seems to be a genuine, real, amiable person."

"And I think Jews are not going to be that much different than any other voting blocs," Bronfman said. "They're going to vote for him, I think, more so than last time."

Officers of principal Jewish women's groups, who left the White House minutes later, avoided taking any political positions.

Today, Reagan meets with another ethnic group, lunching with Polish-American leaders.

Barbara Mandel of the National Council of Jewish Women said she believes both Reagan and his Democratic challenger, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, have "excellent" positions on support for Israel.

She declined to predict how well either candidate would do among Jewish voters.

Ferraro

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro says it's "amazing" that President Reagan falls asleep in Cabinet meetings and jokes about nuclear war, but that she won't raise his personality as a campaign issue.

"The American public has to look at the whole picture," the Democratic vice presidential nominee said Thursday. "Then they can judge for themselves. But I'm extra concerned about someone who would joke about nuclear war."

In an interview with The Associated Press aboard her campaign plane, Ms. Ferraro said she thinks her five-day swing up the West Coast went "extremely well," but that she is making an effort to curb her own off-the-cuff remarks.

"Even my jokes end up in print," she said. "Then I have to explain it for two days."

She said also she and Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale have not lost the offensive in their campaign against Reagan.

"Nope," she said. "We're still on the offensive. (Reagan) still has to explain the deficit. He still has to explain his position on defense spending. My (financial) situation will be straightened out in a few days. He has to defend a record of three and a half years."

Ms. Ferraro made her comments after winding up a campaign swing designed to emphasize her positions on crime, arms control, deficit spending and the environment.

PACs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political action committees will pour $100 million or more into 1984 federal election campaigns, an increase of about 20 percent over spending on the 1982 races, predicts the head of a group advocating public financing of congressional races.

Fred Wertheimer, president of the self-described citizens lobby Common Cause, is basing his projection on a study his organization did on campaign contributions by the 30 largest PACs between Jan. 1, 1983, and last June 30.

The study, released Thursday, said the big PACs had given federal candidates, most of them incumbent senators and representatives, $16 million during the 18-month period.

Common Cause, which prepared its study from reports filed with the Federal Election Commission, said the $16 million represented a 28 percent increase over the corresponding 18-month period preceding the 1982 elections.

The organization estimated that the top 30 PACs could end up spending as much as $35 million on the 1984 elections — about the same amount given by all PACs six years ago.

"We know from past elections that the biggest chunk of contributions is yet to come," Wertheimer said. "If all PACs follow these leaders, total contributions for the 1984 elections will significantly exceed the $100 million mark."

According to Common Cause, all PACs — and there are now some 3,500 of them — combined to pump $83.6 million into the 1982 federal election campaigns, up from $55.2 million in 1980, $35.2 million in 1978, $22.6 million in 1976 and $12.4 million in 1974.

In the latest study, Common Cause said the 30 largest PACs raised $36 million during the 18-month period, an increase of 35 percent over the amount they collected during a corresponding period preceding the 1982 elections.

The National Association of Realtors' PAC topped all contributors, giving $1,099,045 to various campaigns in the period, trailed by the American Medical Association's PAC at $986,273, according to Common Cause.

These two PACs not only were the leading spenders, but they also on June 30 had the biggest reserves for use later in the year. Common Cause said the doctors had $1.78 million on hand, the realtors $1.75 million.

The next three biggest contributors during the 18-month period were the PACs operated by the National Education Association, $873,270; Seafarers International Union, $865,623; and National Association of Home Builders, $846,816, according to Common Cause.

Comprising the 30 biggest spenders were PACs representing 16 labor unions, 11 business and professional groups and three ideological organizations.

Mobile Home Sales Declining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans aren't buying as many mobile homes as they once did, but the government says they're buying bigger ones.

Mobile-home production slipped slightly over five years, according to the government's 1982 Census of Manufactures. Still, units feet to 14 feet wide — and larger — showed a sharp jump.

According to the Census report, there were 224,000 mobile homes manufactured in the United States in 1982, down from 242,200 five years earlier. This category includes homes of varying widths, but at least 35 feet long and designed to be towed without the need for a permanent

Burford Leads Anti-Ferraro Truth Squad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the official displeasure of the White House, Anne M. Burford has jumped back into the political cauldron by spearheading a conservative group's assault on what she calls "the real scandal" of Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro.

Mrs. Burford, who has resigned under a storm of criticism from two environmental posts in the Reagan administration, presented herself Thursday as the head of an anti-Ferraro "truth squad" and the star of a television commercial which assails the New York congresswoman for withholding information about her family finances.

The effort is sponsored by the National Conservative Political Action Committee, an independent, pro-Reagan group headed by John T. Dolan, brother of the president's chief speechwriter, Anthony Dolan.

Mrs. Burford told reporters she had not discussed the mission to discredit Ms. Ferraro with anyone at the White House or in the official Reagan-Bush campaign, and "I don't intend to." John Dolan agreed with that version, noting "it's against the law" for independent groups supporting a presidential candidate to coordinate with the regular campaign.

Anthony Dolan said "I was completely astonished," when he learned of the announcement by his brother and Mrs. Burford.

But Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes, said the Reagan team had learned of Mrs. Burford's plans at the last minute and "protested and urged her not to do this," to no avail. "It's not the way we want to run the campaign," Speakes said.

In the TV commercial, not yet aired, Mrs. Burford begins by saying: "Witch hunt. That's what I call it when the liberal media decides to create the news instead of report it. I ought to know."

"Now there is a real scandal on Capitol Hill, but you don't know about it. Did you know that Geraldine Ferraro refuses to disclose her husband's finances?"

The attack revolves around congressional financial disclosure forms in which Ms. Ferraro, for six years omitted information about the business interests of her husband, John A. Zaccaro, a New York real estate dealer. Ms. Ferraro has said the information was not required, but has promised to provide it on Monday.

The commercial continues, with Mrs. Burford asking: "Come on, Ms. Ferraro, what are you trying to hide?"

While campaigning in the Northwest, Ms. Ferraro reacted to Mrs. Burford's comments on the commercial by saying: "One would expect the Republicans to run a negative campaign, and that was just the beginning."

Reagan Gets Red Carpet

DALLAS (AP) — Far from the mayhem of the Republican National Convention floor, President Reagan will be able to sip champagne, nibble expensive chocolates, sniff fresh flowers and gaze at rarified antiques.

The Loews Anatole, the Southwest's largest hotel with 1,720 guest rooms, is ready to roll out the red carpet for the president, and hotel officials aren't sparing much when it comes to expense.

Just renting one of the 10 Presidential Suites costs $1,000 per night.

Anatole spokesman Mike Alexander, like the Secret Service, is evasive when asked about the president's suite. And like them, he won't even confirm which suite the president will occupy in the elegant hotel.

Earlier this year, GOP officials said the president would stay in a specially built suite which, at that time, still was under construction in the hotel's newest wing.

Though mum on location for security reasons, Alexander will describe some of the top suites' amenities:

"Oh, they've got robes monogrammed especially for the guest, good chocolates, fruits, cold cuts, pates, champagne, wines, electric shoe shiners, whirlpools and, of course, exquisite furnishings."

Each of the suites can expand up to a whole floor — which is expected to be done for the presidential party — and also include wet bars, dining rooms, parlors, guest baths and a multitude of connecting rooms.

Former President Ford has stayed there, as well as Henry Kissinger and Alexander Haig. But the luxury quarters also have been used by Charlton Heston, Shirley Maclaine, Tom Selleck, Dudley Moore and Michael Jackson.

Alexander says the presidential suites usually are occupied by businessmen and corporate moguls.

In addition to the lavish rooms, guests also can take advantage of the hotel's health spa, 7-acre park, 18 lounges and restaurants, nightclub, indoor-outdoor pools, gardens, shops or anything else that's packed in to the 165,000 square foot village, about 2 miles from the convention center downtown.

Helms Leads Conservative Hold On Platform

DALLAS (AP) — North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms has concentrated on refining defense and foreign policy planks in the proposed Republican Party platform as conservatives easily kept a firm grip on planks dealing with social issues.

Helms offered several amendments Thursday as the 106-member Platform Committee pushed to continue its work before the Republican National Convention begins Monday. The panel was set to meet today to take a final glance at the platform.

But Helms remained silent most of the day when attacks on some of his most frequent subjects of debate — the right to school prayer and prohibition of abortion — proved too weak to threaten conservative language.

Meanwhile, delegate Mary Jane Hollyday of Asheville, N.C., helped restore GOP offers of support for battered children and spouses.

Helms tried to clarify the intent of a plank supporting space-based defense systems, the difference between Democratic and Republican arms policies, reaffirm support of the Monroe Doctrine and support self-determination for Hong Kong.

He said he worked with presidential adviser Ed Meese and White House liaison to the Platform Committee Drew Lewis to polish the platform's support for space-based defense systems and make sure it was not a call to violate arms treaties.

Rep. Marjorie Holt of Maryland, chairman of the subcommittee that studied defense issues, introduced the amendment sought by Helms. The change, approved without debate, substituted the word "build" for "achieve."

"I had some concern last night about whether the newspaper editors would take off on that word 'build' and claim that this was calling for a violation of the treaty so I looked around for another word," Helms said after the meeting.

"'Achieved' seemed to be pretty good. What's the difference between 'achieve' and 'build'?" he asked.

The platform now says, "we will use superior American technology to achieve space-based and ground-based defensive systems as soon as possible to protect the lives of the American people and our allies."

"I just wanted to remove any area of debate over that word," said Helms, citing the words antiballistic missile treaty that prohibits satellite defense systems.

"When you start dealing with rhetoric or a platform, you better fine tune it as much as possible. Otherwise people are going to nit pick. I think they will find very little to nit pick."

The committee also followed Helms' suggestion for clarifying the difference between Republicans and Democrats on the issue of Mutual Assured Destruction, a doctrine which involves the buildup of arms to the extent that both adversaries would be destroyed if fighting began.

Helms' amendment said the Republican Party rejects "the strategy of despair and supports instead the strategy of hope and survival."

Other language inserted at Helms' request supports the principles of the Monroe Doctrine. The 1820s doctrine says the United States regards as an unfriendly act any attempt to interfere in the affairs of the American countries or efforts to increase possessions on the American continents.

"The Monroe Doctrine is being violated systematically by the Soviets," Helms said. "That's the problem right now. We're just reaffirming what a lot of us have been saying."

He also amended the foreign relations plank to call for self-determination for Hong Kong. Without it, he said the country might fall to domination by China.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Hollyday won support for inserting language in a plank on crime that says the party offers support for battered women and children. Similar wording was removed from an anti-pornography plank earlier this week.

"It was taken out in the subcommittee and through an oversight it did not get sent to the crime committee to appear," Mrs. Hollyday said. "It now appears and I think we have spoken basically to all of the various needs."

The platform now says, "The Republican Party has deep concern about gratuitous sex and violence in the entertainment media which contribute to the problem of crime against children and women. To the victims of such crimes that need protection, we gladly offer it."

Convention Fence Has Key Role

DALLAS (AP) — It has come to be known as The Fence — a 1 1/2-mile-long, 6-foot-high chain link barrier that snugly encircles the site of the Republican National Convention.

It keeps Republicans in; protesters out.

Although the metal was been covered with green vinyl, in hopes it would blend into the scenery, that strategy hasn't worked.

Protesters say the fence has reduced demonstrations to "a cry in the wilderness," since they will be virtually invisible from the Dallas Convention Center. They view the fence as the manifestation of civic and political paranoia.

But others see the fence as a key element in Dallas' game plan to pull off a flawless performance as a convention host city.

When city officials decided to erect the $70,000 barrier, they were blunt about its purpose: it would provide a comforting buffer between the convention and the unpredictable — and possibly unmanageable — world outside.

The fence would keep delegates and other convention-goers from "being harassed or bothered by people with signs," city street director John Teipel explained. And it also would keep protesters and the news media from "milling around and seeking each other," he said.

The Republican National Committee soundly endorsed the fence, and no one will be allowed inside the barrier without credentials from the committee.

"I think it is a great idea," said national committeeman Peter Secia. "When our people come out, who wants to run into 115,000 strangers?"

From the outset, though, the fence struck some people as a bad idea.

"It almost says you've got a war zone," complained Dallas Councilman Max Goldblatt, chairman of the council's public safety committee.

A consultant paid to advise the city on convention demonstrations said the fence was an overreaction and predicted it would create more problems than it would solve. In short, said Richard Tankerson, it was an "exceptionally dumb" idea.

"It's going to signal to conventioners that there's a threat — and to all the rest of the people outside that they are the threat," he said.

Despite objections, the fence began going up a few weeks before the convention, defining the perimeter of the convention center grounds and the officially sanctioned protest site, which city officials call the "special events area."

The initial fence line confined demonstrators to the rear third of a parking lot, about 700 feet from the convention center entrance across a sea of cars, a cemetery, a wall and a hill. Some public streets, sidewalks and a park also are inside.

A loose coalition of protest groups — the Dallas March and Rally Committee — quickly decided the fence had to come down.

They said the barrier represented not only the siege mentality of a conservative and provincial city unfamiliar with political protest, but also violated their civil rights.

On July 5, they took the city to federal court, saying the fence violated their First Amendment right of free speech.

Republican Platform Omits ERA

DALLAS (AP) — For the first time in 44 years, the Republican Party is writing a platform that does not even mention an equal rights amendment for women.

It was only four years ago that the GOP broke a string of 10 straight party platforms and dropped its support for the proposed ERA. That was at the insistence of candidate Ronald Reagan, who says he is for the "E" and the "R" but not the "A."

Not only did that shift create a major controversy in 1980 that pros in both parties say cost the GOP votes, it caused many feminists to accuse the Republicans of going back on more than 100 years of commitment to women's rights.

This year, with President Reagan and the conservatives firmly in control, the platform committee is going even further, refusing three times on Thursday to even mention — much less endorse — the ERA.

The draft, due before the full convention Tuesday, does proclaim the Republicans as "the party of equal rights" and states that "Republicans pioneered the right of women to vote — and our party was the first major party to advocate equal pay for equal work, regardless of sex."

"President Reagan believes — as do we — that all members of our party are free to work individually for women's progress," it went on.

'Chintzy Helms Balks At Expenses

DALLAS (AP) — Some of the North Carolina delegates to the Republican National Convention wanted a first-class trip so they selected one of Dallas' nicest hotels as their home for the week.

But apparently Sen. Jesse Helms thinks the hotel, the Plaza of the Americas, and some of the local restaurants are a little too expensive.

A hotel room costs a minimum of $110 a night for delegates and menu prices include a $1 cup of coffee and $2.25 glass of orange juice to wake customers each morning.

State Party Chairman David Flaherty said he wanted to eat at the hotel's top-rated French restaurant but Helms said he would not pay $23 for a dinner. Flaherty said he coaxed Helms into the restaurant only to find that the least expensive meal was $35.

Flaherty said he had to do a lot of talking to convince Helms to stay and enjoy the meal.

"It was fabulous," Flaherty said. "But he didn't get any extras."

The next night, Helms and some of his staff left the hotel in search of good, but less expensive food. They settled for a hamburger at a national fast-food chain.

"If anybody wants to accuse me of being chintzy, I am," Helms said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained more ground today, following through on Thursday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 8.84 to 1,217.98 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a narrow lead over losers in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

After the market closed on Thursday, the Federal Reserve reported a larger-than-expected $5.2 billion increase in the basic measure of the money supply.

But the news had no great impact on the credit markets. Analysts noted that monetary growth remained within the Fed's target range.

After a strong showing Thursday, bond prices edged up a bit further today, and the stock market continued to follow the bond market's lead.

Among today's early volume leaders, International Paper gained 1 1/2 to 56 1/2, General Motors 3/4 to 75; Phibro-Salomon 1/2 to 29 3/4, and National Semiconductor 1/4 to 15 3/4.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.16 to 1,209.14.

Advances outpaced declines by about 5 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 93.61 million shares, against 91.88 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .52 to 94.23. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.07 at 207.29.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Linwood Briley's execution for the murder of a Richmond disc jockey will not take place tonight because there is "no likelihood" of a ruling today from the federal appeals court that stayed the sentence.

"No opinion in the case of Linwood E. Briley ... has been received this morning by the office of the clerk and there is no likelihood that one will be received in the regular course of business during the remainder of the day," said John Greacen, clerk of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

David Hathcock, a spokesman for Attorney General Gerald Baliles, said that rules out chances Briley could be executed tonight.

"There is a stay in effect from the 4th Circuit ... and the court is telling you through this statement they don't anticipate a further order today. There can be no execution with a stay."

Briley, who masterminded with his brother James the escape of six death row inmates from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center on May 31, has been waiting in a cell in the same block as the electric chair.

Until the statement from the 4th Circuit, the state and Briley had been in a legal limbo, and the Corrections Department had gone ahead with preparations to carry out the sentence.

Officials set 11 p.m. for the execution, readied a press center and tested the electric chair in the State Penitentiary here in case the stay was lifted.

Just hours after a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals heard oral arguments in Briley's latest appeal Aug. 7, the

Floyd Surprised By PGA Lead

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Even Raymond Floyd couldn't believe his incredible, scrambling round that gave him the lead after the rain-interrupted first round of the 66th PGA Golf Championship.

The 41-year-old Floyd, who has not won since capturing the PGA title two years ago in Tulsa, fired a 4-under-par 68 Thursday over the 7,145-yard Shoal Creek golf course despite making only seven pars.

Floyd held a 1-shot lead over a logjam at 69 headed by Lee Trevino. Others at 3 under were Chip Beck, Victor Regalado, Scott Simpson, Dave Barr, Gary Hallberg, Nick Faldo and Andy Bean.

"That's not me," said Floyd of his round that included an eagle, seven birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey. "It's a very unusual round for me when I get a double bogey, bogeys and chip in out of a bunker," said the 6-foot-1, 200-pounder.

A thunderstorm halted play at 5:10 p.m. CDT and suspended it until 6:50 p.m. CDT with 54 players still on the course.

Play was then suspended for darkness at 7:35 p.m. CDT with 30 players still on the course. They were scheduled to conclude their rounds at 8 a.m. CDT today, with second round play beginning on schedule at 7 a.m. CDT.

Those still on the course when darkness came included Lanny Wadkins, who was tied with Floyd at 4-under-par through 17 holes.

Wadkins had six birdies and two bogeys, but said he was disappointed with his play on the par 5s, which he parred.

"I could have had a hell of a round," he said.

Tom Watson, who has never won this title in his illustrious career, was one over par through 17 holes.

Floyd's round included birdie putts ranging from 1½ feet to 30 feet in addition to a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe on the ninth hole.

His eagle-3 came on the par-5, 530-yard third hole, when he chipped in a 30-footer from a bunker.

"It was a lot of fun. It was up-and-down and I did the things I needed to score," said Floyd, who has won only $86,000 this year.

He said he has been playing better the last two months since switching back to his regular clubs after playing with lightweight clubs for eight months.

"All I want to do for the rest of the week is hit the ball straight," said Floyd, winner of 18 tournaments and $2.4 million during his career.

"If I play like I played today, I'll win the tournament," he said.

A group at 70 was led by British Open champion Seve Ballesteros. Also at that figure were Don Hammond, Jay Haas, hometown favorite Hubert Green, Peter Jacobsen, Bob Gilder, Don Pooley and Leonard Thompson.

Jim Colbert, Larry Mize, Craig Stadler, Rex Caldwell and Don Pohl were at 71.

At par 72 was a group headed by Larry Nelson, Fred Couples, John Mahaffey, Doug Tewell, Lynn Janson, Tommy Nakajima, David Edwards, Roger Maltbie, Keith Fergus and Allen Miller also were at that figure.

Defending champion Hal Sutton had a 74, as did Tom Kite, a two-time winner this year, and second on the money list to Watson.

Greg Norman, another two-time winner this year and loser in a playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller at the U.S. Open, came in with a 75. Zoeller withdrew before teeing off Thursday suffering due to back problems.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed this course which was hosting a major tournament for the first time since its opening in 1977, came in with a 77.

Masters champion Ben Crenshaw staggered in with an 80.

"I'm awfully disappointed to play that way on this course," said Nicklaus. "I should have been seven shots lower after seven holes, but it's typical of the way I played."

Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this event, defended the course, which got praise from most of the players despite a uniform rough of about three inches.

"The golf course is fine. There's nothing wrong with it. There was something wrong with the golfer when you shoot that kind of score," he said of himself.

Trevino, who said the rough was between 6-to-8 inches, termed it "the toughest I've ever played on" because of its uniformity. "I've played in some taller. Here, it doesn't matter who you are or where you are, it's going to be bad."

Norman was one of the few players critical of the rough, although he said it was "a good golf course. Enjoyable."

"The golf course is very fair, but the rough is unfair, especially around the greens. It takes the art of chipping out of the game," he said.

Norman was in the rough only three times, and wound up with two bogeys and a double bogey on those holes.

Rose To Play Only Limited Time

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose says he still can hit, run and field the same as 10 years ago.

"But I can't do it every day," the 43-year-old Cincinnati native quipped Thursday when he was introduced as the Reds' player-manager. "I guess I'm washed up."

Rose will remain active as a player-manager, although his time on the field will be limited and mostly as a pinch-hitter with the Reds, the team he started with in 1963.

"I am convinced I can still hit," Rose told a news conference, but he said his assault on Ty Cobb's all-time hit record of 4,190 hits — he needs 129 more — will be of secondary importance. "But then again, I'd disappoint a lot of people if I didn't give it a good shot."

Rose said Nick Esasky will remain the Reds' starting first baseman, but that he will spell Esasky occasionally.

Rose said he has spent more time on the bench the last two seasons in Philadelphia and Montreal and has had more opportunity to study the moves made by managers.

"I probably know more about baseball than any other manager," he said, adding that he will have a different relationship with the players because he will be one of them.

"I have this ability to make young players feel welcome," said the 22-year veteran who replaced Vern Rapp, who was fired Wednesday as manager. "When I first came up it was a very cliqueish ball club. I decided then that I wasn't going to let other young players be snubbed like that."

Shortstop Dave Concepcion, who played with Rose at Cincinnati until Rose left as a free agent for Philadelphia in 1979, said Rose will make a difference for the slumping team that has a record of 51-70.

"The attitude here has been a little lackadaisical," said second baseman Ron Oester. "If anybody can fire us up it will be Pete Rose."

"I expect two things," Rose said. "They have to be on time. That's for practice, buses or planes. And second, I want them to play as hard as they can between the white lines."

Rose said he and Reds President Bob Howsam want to revive the slumping team, which has finished last the past two seasons in the National League West.

"Mr. Howsam and I want to make baseball fun again. We want to start winning again. That got lost here in the last few years and I don't understand it," Rose said.

He was asked if his hiring was more of a publicity stunt to increase attendance at home games.

"Well, if it is, it was a damn good one," Rose replied. "But there's a lot more involved in this than that, and if it was just a publicity stunt, why would Mr. Howsam have waited so long?"

Rose becomes the first playing manager in the major leagues since Don Kessinger with the Chicago White Sox in 1979 and the first in Cincinnati since Bucky Walters in 1948.

Ironically, Cobb was player-manager of the Tigers from 1921-1926, compiling a 479-444 record.

Rose drew laughs when he quipped, "I'm just like everybody else. I have two arms, two legs and 4,000 hits."

Rose, nicknamed "Charlie Hustle" because of his playing style, promised that he will be an aggressive manager, using a lot of hit-and-run plays and base-stealing.

Rose was captain of the "Big Red Machine" teams of the 1970s. He then played five years with Philadelphia and helped the Phillies win two pennants and their first World Series. He was signed by Montreal in January as a free agent and was playing with the Expos when he was hired by the Reds this week.

Rose said he planned no immediate changes in his coaching staff. He said he would lean heavily on Coach George Scherger.

"Sparky Anderson relied on 'Scherg's' a lot when he was here, and I think he'll be calling the shots the days I'm playing," Rose said.

Anderson, now manager of the Detroit Tigers, is a former Reds manager.

Rose said he is very familiar with Cincinnati's players, thanks to Montreal Coach Russ Nixon, who managed the Reds until he was dumped in October 1983 and replaced with Rapp.

Rose disclosed that negotiations began with the Reds two days before the Expos acquired Cincinnati first baseman Dan Driessen, who took Rose's starting job.

Minor league second baseman Tom Lawless was sent to Montreal to make room for Rose on the roster.

King, Miller Tied After 1st Round

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Betsy King glanced at the leader board in the Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf. It rekindled memories.

She was tied for the first-round lead Thursday with Alice Miller, both with record-shattering opening rounds of 4-under-par 68.

"Earlier in the year, Alice and I were tied for the lead going into the last round at Orlando," said King. "It would be great to do that again."

King outshot Miller 66-68 to win the Freedom Orlando Classic April 27 by two strokes.

"We're pretty good friends. It was fine the way it turned out. But either way it would have been great," said King.

That may be difficult to duplicate against this strong field of 12 international golfers. Only seven shots separated them after the opening 18 holes at Shaker Heights Country Club.

One shot back going into today's second round were Laurie Rinker and Nancy Lopez.

At 71 was Juli Inkster, at 72 came defending champion JoAnne Carner, Patty Sheehan, Donna Horton White and Pat Bradley, at 73 Amy Alcott and at 75 Hollis Stacy and Ayako Okamoto.

The scores by Miller and King were the lowest for the opening 18 holes of this five-year-old tournament. Lopez had the previous low first round of 69.

There were varying explanations for the low scores over the 6,225-yard layout in suburban Cleveland, generally regarded as one of the LPGA tour's most difficult tests.

A year ago, the field was an aggregate 16-over-par. This time, the 12 were a combined 8-under.

LPGA Event Has A Home

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — The LPGA's showcase event, the World Championship of Women's Golf, apparently has found a permanent home.

LPGA Commissioner John Laupheimer, officials of the sponsor, International Management Group, and Shaker Heights Country Club all say they want the event in this Cleveland suburb again next year.

The tournament matches the sport's best 12 players each year in a chase for $65,000, the LPGA's largest first prize. After the opening year in 1980 at The Country Club in nearby Pepper Pike, the event moved to Shaker Heights in 1981.

The Shaker Heights club members love it. They approved it by more than 90 percent last year and are expected to do the same in 1985.

There are good reasons. It represents a $100,000 payday for the club and paid for a new clubhouse roof and a swimming pool renovation the last two years.

Lopez was not surprised her 69 was not in the lead. "No," she said. "They have shot low scores all year. They have played great golf, just not good golf."

Still, Lopez has lost no respect for this course. "I'd like to shoot 10 under for four days. I might run away with it," she said.

King attributed the low scoring to the immaculate condition of the course. "The greens are at a good speed, not ridiculously fast," she said after her six-birdie, two-bogey round.

Miller attributed her round to her ability to scramble from trouble. "As soon as you stop thinking here, the course grabs you. You can't play too aggressively," she said.

King, three shots behind Miller after 10 holes, birdied the last three holes to create the first-place tie. She knocked in putts of six, 20 and 10 feet.

A Red Again

Pete's Popularity Still High Despite His 6-Year Absence

CINCINNATI (AP) — When Pete Rose was introduced as the Cincinnati Reds' new player-manager, it was almost like old times.

He stood at a press conference Thursday in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium wearing a familiar Reds cap, a bright red jacket and an ear-to-ear Pete Rose grin.

After six years, Rose was back home. And so was the kind of crowd he draws, although this time it was a crowd of reporters and photographers — more than 200 from throughout the country.

One thing new was the slight tinge of gray in Rose's infamous bowl-shaped haircut.

"How come every time I do this, everybody takes pictures," Rose asked, lifting his cap. "Are you trying to see if the Grecian Formula is working?"

The photographers explained they wanted to get pictures of Rose when the brim of his hat was not shadowing his face — the face that graced so many newspapers and TV screens in the 1970s, when Rose led the Reds to four World Series and two world championships.

Rose, who at 43 years of age has been picked to replace fired manager Vern Rapp, recalled the 70s glory days Thursday and vowed to bring them back again.

"It didn't take any genius to pick who was the team of the 70s," Rose said. "We were the team of the 70s. No question about it. There wasn't even a close second."

Rose played 16 years in Cincinnati and broke team records in nearly every offensive category before moving on to the Philadelphia Phillies in 1978. He has spent this season in Canada as a Montreal Expo.

For at least one reason, Rose is glad to be back playing in the United States.

"There's only one national anthem here. That's a relief," he said with a laugh.

But he made it clear there are many reasons he's glad to be back in Cincinnati.

"I never wanted to leave," said Rose, who was born and raised in this Ohio-River city. He said it was a natural kid's dream to want to play for the Reds and manage them some day.

He said he would not have accepted a similar player-manager job anywhere but Cincinnati — a city he said is "still the baseball capital of the world."

Rose will try to bring his "Charlie-Hustle" form of motivation back to the Reds, who are just shy of the basement in the National League West.

The Reds have not drawn a lot of Cincinnati fans to the stadium lately. But that will change, said Rose, because Cincinnati will be what his team is playing for.

The new player-manager pointed to the white lettering on the front of his jacket. "This says Cincinnati here. It doesn't say Rose," he said. "Those guys are playing for Cincinnati. They're not playing for Rose."

He acknowledged the fact that Cincinnati has gone nothing short of hysterical over his return.

"But I tell you," Rose said. "The people aren't as glad as I am."

Steeler Rookies Shock Dallas Vets

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Pittsburgh's rich crop of rookie defenders shook Dallas veteran quarterback Danny White, and the first-year Steeler offensive players made the clutch plays to remain unbeaten in the National Football League preseason.

Rookie Chris Brown of Notre Dame intercepted White twice and rookie Terry Echols of Marshall recovered a fumble that led to the second of two touchdowns by Anthony Corley in a 20-10 victory Thursday night.

Corley is yet another rookie, a free agent no less, from Nevada-Reno.

He has an excellent shot at making the Steeler team.

He scored on runs of one and nine yards after White mistakes and Gary Anderson kicked two 49-yard field goals in a joust of unbeatens.

"Anthony Corley has played well for us and I'd say he is cementing a position on this football team," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "He's been doing well as a running back and on specialty teams."

"He has a knack of slithering through there with power. Others have some slither, but they don't have the power that he has. Corley is a strong runner."

Asked if he missed contract holdout Franco Harris, Knoll said "Franco who? I don't know who he is."

Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry didn't appear too upset at his team's first loss of the preseason.

"Their second team beat our second team" said Landry. "The game wasn't a total loss. We got to see a lot of our players to get ready for the cut to 60 next week. We played pretty good when our first units were in there."

Pittsburgh raised its record to 3-0 while Dallas dropped to 2-1.

White suffered two interceptions and fumbled a snap away to the Steelers.

White did throw an 18-yard fourth period scoring pass to rookie Kirk Phillips of Tulsa to cut the Steeler lead to 13-10, but later fumbled away to Echols at the Cowboy 30. Four plays later Corley broke a tackle and scored from nine yards out.

"I'm not that disappointed," said Landry. "I think we are showing some positive signs. I can't say we are on schedule but I think we will play better each week now. White made some good plays and he made some bad plays. Some were when the second unit was in there."

Steeler linebacker Jack Lambert said the victory over Dallas was important even if it was in the exhibition category.

"It's always nice to beat the Cowboys, no matter when you are playing them," he said. "I think our football team is really looking good, especially our running backs."

Elsewhere Thursday, all-pro linebacker Harry Carson ended a two-day walkout and returned to the New York Giants training camp without indicating why he left, a team spokesman said.

Carson practiced with the club and will start at his inside linebacker position Saturday night when the Giants meet the crosstown rival New York Jets in their annual preseason game.

"Carson appeared and practiced," said Giants spokesman Ed Croke. "He had no comment on why he left or why he came back."

Carson admitted he had been fined $1,000 per day.

The rest of Saturday night's schedule finds Cincinnati at Chicago, Cleveland at Kansas City, Indianapolis at Denver, Detroit at Buffalo, Green Bay at the Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans at Houston, Philadelphia at Minnesota, San Francisco at San Diego and Tampa Bay at Atlanta.

Miami travels to Los Angeles to play the Raiders Sunday.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs used his regulars during the fourth quarter of last week's 21-20 loss to the Raiders, but is expected to rest his veterans as much as possible tonight with the regular season opener just 16 days away.

New England's Ron Meyer, meanwhile, will continue experimenting with the single-back offense that the Redskins have popularized and used with unequalled success the past two seasons.

The Jets were unimpressive in their first two games and Coach Joe Walton says he'll continue to juggle his lineup in hopes of increasing production on offense and filling gaping holes in the defense.

"We have some uncertainties dictated by injuries and others simply by people not coming to the front yet," Walton says. "We want to see who belongs as a starter."

Tommy Kramer, coming off knee surgery, will continue his comeback as the Vikings take on Philadelphia.

"The emphasis is still on evaluation and experimentation, but we will have more of our offense in and we will spend more time studying the opposition and preparing a game plan specifically for the Eagles," says Minnesota's first-year coach

Les Steckel.

Tampa Bay, a 38-0 loser to Seattle in the annual Hall of Fame game three weeks ago, has won two in a row since. Tailback James Wilder will miss the Atlanta game, though, with a severe thigh bruise.

"We've shown a lot of improvement both offensively and defensively," said Tampa Bay Coach John McKay. "I said at the time that one preseason game like the Hall of Fame game should not be regarded as a true barometer of the team."

End Of The Line

Dallas Cowboy wide receiver Tony Hill (80) is brought down by Pittsburgh Steeler cornerback Chris Brown (23) after Hill picked up seven yards on a pass play in the first quarter at Irving, Texas, Thursday night. Moving in on the play is Pittsburgh linebacker Robin Cole (56). (AP Laserphoto)

Jays Lose Third Straight As Detroit Tops Angels

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

It's still August and there are still many games left for the pennant-chasing Toronto Blue Jays.

They're hoping not too many resemble Thursday night's debacle. With the game seemingly under control, the Blue Jays watched the lowly Cleveland Indians strike for four runs in the bottom of the ninth inning, the last two on Andre Thornton's two-out double, and a 6-5 victory.

It was the Blue Jays' third straight loss to the Indians and, coupled with Detroit's 8-7 triumph over California in 12 innings, dropped them 10 games behind the Tigers in the American League East.

Just two days earlier, the Blue Jays had swept a double-header from Cleveland to pull within 7½ games of the lead, the closest they'd been in a month.

"Now, it's real hard after you've fought back and fought back and then you lose three," said Toronto's Willie Upshaw. "This hurts more than any other series because of the time factor."

In other AL games, Oakland trounced Baltimore 8-1. Seattle tipped New York 5-4. Boston clubbed Minnesota 7-5 and Kansas City slammed Texas 6-3.

Toronto starter Dave Stieb, with a 12-4 record, held the Indians to two runs in the first eight innings before reliever Dennis Lamp took over to start the ninth.

"Stieb had us," offered Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales. "They took him out and we knew we had a chance."

George Vukovich led off the ninth with a single. A walk to Chris Bando and Joe Carter's pinch-single loaded the bases with none out. Brett Butler's infield drive in one run and Julio Franco's forceout made it 5-4.

Lamp struck out Mike Hargrove for the second out, but Thornton lined a 1-2 pitch to right-center for his game-winning double.

"With a three-run lead, all you need is three outs," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "With a three-run lead, you can hand the ball to anybody and you'd think you'd still win."

The winner turned out to be reliever Tom Waddell, 3-4, who went 5 1-3 innings, giving up one run on three hits.

Tigers 8, Angels 7

Barbaro Garbey's pinch-double with one out in the bottom of the 12th inning drove in a tired Howard Johnson from first base to win it for Detroit.

Chet Lemon opened the Tiger 12th with a single and Johnson then hit into a forceout.

Garbey followed with a double deep into the left-field corner and Johnson chugged around the bases and beat the relay home.

Johnson was playing on just two hours' sleep, having been up with his wife for the birth of their first child shortly after 4 a.m.

Reliever Willie Hernandez, 7-2, got the victory by retiring all 11 batters he faced, six on strikeouts. John Curtis, 0-1, pitched the 12th for California.

Red Sox 7, Twins 5

Jim Rice belted a pair of two-run homers at friendly Fenway Park, helping Boston overcome a 4-0 deficit.

The Red Sox had been shut out on two singles by Mike Smithson before Dwight Evans singled in the sixth and Rice followed with a home run.

Rice then capped a five-run seventh inning with his second homer, his 21st of the season. This is the ninth time in 10 seasons that Rice has hit 20 or more home runs.

Royals 6, Rangers 3

Don Slaught belted his first career grand slam and Lynn Jones had three hits for visiting Kansas City.

Texas' Mike Mason had pitched 17 consecutive scoreless innings before Steve Balboni hit his 19th home run to lead off the fifth, tying the score 1-1. Jones added an RBI single later in the inning, and Slaught's slam, his third home run of the season, made it 6-1 in the sixth.

Charlie Leibrandt, 7-5, went six innings for the victory and Dan Quisenberry pitched the final two innings for save No. 32.

Mariners 5, Yankees 4

Seattle managed just four hits off Phil Niekro. But two of them were solo home runs by Ken Phelps, and another a bases-loaded triple by Larry Milbourne.

It was enough to pin the loss on Niekro, now 14-7. Phelps homered in the sixth and ninth innings, giving him 21 home runs in just 201 at-bats this season. Milbourne lined his triple over shallow-playing center fielder Omar Moreno in the second.

Salome Barojas, making only his seventh major-league start, gave up one hit over the first seven innings. He left in the eighth after yielding three more hits as host New York scored three times off four Seattle hurlers.

Edwin Nunez gave up another Yankee run in the ninth before getting his second save.

A's 8, Orioles 1

The hometown Orioles were booed at Memorial Stadium as Oakland sent the defending world champions to their 12th 15 hits as the A's completed a three-game sweep and won their first regular-season series in Baltimore since 1974.

Bruce Bochte's two-run double sparked a five-run third inning while Oakland chased Storm Davis, 12-6, whose earned run average jumped from an American League-leading 2.45 to 2.67.

Bad News In San Diego: Schmidt's Bat Alive Again

By The Associated Press
As far as the National League is concerned, the real bad news coming out of San Diego had nothing to do with the fines and suspensions handed down following a beanball war. No, the bad news is that Mike Schmidt's bat may have come back to life.

Schmidt, who has been struggling with his hitting much of the summer, gave signs of breaking loose Thursday when he hit his 24th and 25th home runs in the Philadelphia Phillies' 8-3 romp over San Diego.

Despite Schmidt's hitting troubles — his average is only .268 — Philadelphia looms only six games back of Chicago in the National League East with six weeks left in the season, and that gives Phils Manager Paul Owens reason for optimism.

"Maybe the big guy will get going and carry us for a while," said Owens. "We need something to get us going."

Owens reveled in the victory, which he called a "laugh." "That's the most runs we've scored in three weeks," he said. "You don't know how bad it's been."

In other National League games Thursday, Jason Thompson's 13th home run of the season started the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-2 victory over Atlanta, and Montreal got home runs from Andre Dawson, Tim Wallach and Max Venable in thumping San Francisco 11-3 for Charlie Lea's 15th pitching victory.

Schmidt said a small adjustment accounted for his explosion.

"I backed off the plate a little and pointed my shoulder," he said. "Just the basic stuff, but it helped. I was a relaxed hitter today. I haven't been getting confident enough to let the ball get into my hitting zone. But today I said, 'there it is,' and waited until it reached my zone."

San Diego starter Andy Hawkins, 7-5, put one into Schmidt's zone in the fourth, and the ball landed in the leftfield seats. Schmidt connected for a two-run shot in the seventh and capped his day with a double an inning later.

That was more than enough support for right-hander John Denny, 5-3, who earned his first decision in three months following a lengthy battle with an elbow inflammation.

Denny scattered four hits over eight innings.

The loss capped a thoroughly dreadful day for San Diego, which learned earlier that Manager Dick Williams and players Champ Summers and Bobby Brown would be suspended and nine other Padres would be fined for their roles in last Sunday's beanball battle with the Atlanta Braves. National League President Charles Feeney, who fined Williams $10,000 and suspended him for 10 days, also suspended and fined four Braves, including Manager Joe Torre.

Pirates 5, Braves 2

Thompson's homer, on a 3-and-0 pitch from Braves starter Rick Mahler, 8-8, gave Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead, and the Bucs sewed up the decision with three runs in the fifth inning.

Marvell Wynne tripled leading off the fifth and, after a walk to Lee Mazzilli, scored on Johnny Ray's single. After Thompson singled, the Pirates got a pair of runs when Atlanta shortstop Jerry Royster threw wide of first trying to convert Tony Pena's grounder into a double play.

John Tudor, 8-8, gave up seven hits in helping Pittsburgh snap a four-game losing streak.

Expos 11, Giants 3

Dawson, who had an RBI single during a three-run first inning uprising, homered leading off the third to ignite a five-run rally against Bob Lacey, 0-2, a reliever who was pressed into starting duty. Gary Carter singled to chase Lacey and Wallach greeted reliever Jeff Cornell with a two-run homer. Venable, batting for Dawson leading off the eighth, hit his second homer of the year — and second in as many nights.

Lea, 15-8, was touched for 12 hits over eight innings before giving way to Dick Grapenthin in the ninth.

Padres To Appeal Suspensions, Fines

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Diego Padres will appeal Manager Dick Williams' 10-day suspension and $10,000 fine that followed last weekend's beanball battle with the Atlanta Braves, the team says.

The suspension, handed down Thursday by National League President Chub Feeney, is the longest for a major-league manager since Dave Bristol of San Francisco was set down for 11 days in 1978 after swinging his hat at an umpire.

Williams was one of seven people suspended as a result of Sunday's game, during which brushback pitches triggered three separate brawls.

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre was suspended three days and fined $1,000, while Braves Gerald Perry, Steve Bedrosian and Rick Mahler, along with Padres Champ Summers and Bobby Brown, also were suspended for three days.

The suspensions are to take effect today unless they are appealed. San Diego President Ballard Smith said the team will appeal the penalties given Williams and Brown. The suspensions would then not go into effect until the appeals are heard by Feeney.

"We're not going to appeal," Torre said after learning of the disciplinary actions.

All of the suspended players were fined, as were San Diego players Ed Whitson, Greg Booker, Craig Leferts, Kurt Bevacqua, Tim Flannery, Graig Nettles and Rich Gossage, and coaches Ozzie Virgil and Jack Krol.

Williams disclosed the amount of his fine, although the amounts of the other San Diego fines were not announced.

The Braves said Perry and Mahler were fined $700 apiece and Bedrosian $600. In addition, pitcher Donnie Moore was fined $350 and pitcher Pascual Perez $300.

"I'm not in shock now. I'm more confused," Williams said. "I thought Jack (Padres general manager McKeon) was kidding when he read that to me. I said, 'c'mon, tell me the truth.' It's about three times longer than I figured."

Williams said he had arranged to call Feeney at 2 p.m. EDT this afternoon.

"This will be the first time I'll be stating my side of the story," Williams said. "He'll get my story first-hand."

Said Smith: "We feel that under the circumstances, it's appropriate for Dick to be suspended. The thing that bothered me is the length of the suspension in relation to Joe Torre's."

"The only thing we're asking is that all parties be dealt with equitably. The incident doesn't happen if Pascual Perez doesn't throw at Alan Wiggins," Smith said.

The San Diego at Atlanta game last Sunday started on an ominous note when Perez hit Wiggins with the first pitch of the game. In the second inning, Whitson threw a pitch at Perez, and both benches emptied. Perez was thrown at three times, and there were full-scale fights in the eighth and ninth innings.

Olympic Marks In Five Events Bested On 1st Day

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The crowd was small and the turnout of athletes less than expected, but organizers of the Friendship-84 Games had their fondest wishes fulfilled when five Olympic-winning performances were bested during the first day of competition.

Eastern bloc women won all five events, and in each case the winning standard bettered the gold-medal performances at the just-completed Los Angeles Olympics. About 20,000 people were on hand in the 50,000-seat Evzen Rosicky Stadium.

The Soviet Union and 13 of its allies boycotted the Los Angeles Games after the Soviets charged that the Olympic organizers couldn't guarantee the safety of Eastern bloc athletes. After announcing the walkout, the Soviets decided to stage their own version of the Olympics for the boycotting countries.

Organizers had hoped to attract a large contingent of Western athletes, but only a scattering of representatives from eight countries joined the Eastern bloc group of about 200. Sweden, Jamaica and Algeria had been expected to send teams, but each subsequently pulled out.

The only U.S. competitors were sprinters Alice Brown and Jeanette Bolden. Only Brown competed Thursday, finishing sixth in the 100-meter dash, and later complained of jet lag.

"I just got here after spending 13 hours in the air," Brown said. "The track was very good and I wish I was more ready for this event."

Brown was clocked in 11.21 seconds, .08 slower than her silver-medal performance in the Olympics and .26 slower than Thursday's winner, Marlies Goehr. The East German's 10.95 was .02 faster than Evelyn Ashford's winning time at Los Angeles.

In other events Thursday:
 — Marita Koch won the 400-meter run in 48.16, far ahead of the 48.83 of Valerie Brisco-Hooks in winning the Olympic gold. "Had I run the first half of the course faster, I think I would have clocked under 48 seconds," said Koch, whose time nonetheless was only .17 seconds off the world record.

 — Natalia Lisovskaya of the Soviet Union captured the shot put with a throw 72 feet, 1/2 inch. Three other putters topped the Olympic-winning effort of 67-2/4 by West Germany's Claudia Losch, who finished sixth on Thursday.

"I came here to learn because East European shot putters are so good that I can always learn something new from them," Losch said.

— Petra Felke of East Germany won the javelin throw with a heave of 240 feet, 6 inches, the fifth-best throw of all time and far ahead of the 228-2 effort in Los Angeles that earned a gold medal for Great Britain's Tessa Sanderson.

— Jordanka Donkova of Bulgaria won the 100-meter hurdles in 12.55 seconds in a blanket finish that saw the top five finishers better the Olympic-winning time of 12.84 by American Benita Fitzgerald-Brown.

— Tatiana Kazankina of the Soviet Union easily won the 3,000 meters in 8 minutes, 33.01 seconds, almost three seconds faster than the Olympic winning time of 8:35.96 by Maricica Puica of Romania.

AMOS, THE PROPHET

THE NAME AMOS MEANS A BURDEN, OR A BURDEN BEARER. THIS PROPHET FROM TEKOA, IN THE TERRITORY OF JUDAH, WAS A MAN OF HUMBLE BIRTH. AS A HERDSMAN, HE DOUBTLESS SPENT MUCH OF HIS LIFE IN THE WILDERNESS THAT EXTENDED FROM THE VILLAGE OF TEKOA ALL THE WAY TO THE DEAD SEA. WHEN NOT ENGAGED AS A HERDSMAN, HE FOUND OTHER EMPLOYMENT AS A DRESSER OF SYCAMOR TREES, PRUNING THE FOLIAGE AND PICKING ITS FRUIT FOR PACKING. (AMOS 1:1, 7:14, 15) FROM THE KNOWLEDGE THAT AMOS DISPLAYS WITH DISTANT PLACES AND EVENTS, IT IS EVIDENT THAT HE WAS USED TO HARD WORK, IN MANY CATEGORIES SUCH AS DRIVING SHEEP AND CARRYING HIDES AND WOOL AS FAR AS DISTANT EGYPT AND DAMASCUS. ODDLY ENOUGH, ALTHOUGH A MAN OF JUDAH, HE WAS CALLED UPON TO PROPHECY IN THE NORTHERN KINGDOM OF ISRAEL! HE APPEARED AT BETHEL WHERE THE TEMPLE HAD WITHIN IT ONE OF THE GOLDEN CALVES SET UP BY JEROBOAM (AMOS 8:14). AMOS SPOKE WITH SUCH BOLDNESS AGAINST THE SINS OF THE KING AND THE PEOPLE THAT HE IMMEDIATELY MADE A GREAT NAME FOR HIMSELF.....

Steve Allen Routine Saves Debut Of 'Comedy Zone'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Allen introduced his "Man in the Street" bit on his show in the mid-1950s, and he revives the now-classic routine tonight to save the premiere edition of "Comedy Zone" on CBS.

"If a candidate for president admitted on television to being a heterosexual, could you vote for him or her?" Steve on the Street inquires of passersby.

"I'd vote for her," one fellow replies after due consideration. "Head-over-sexual?" a woman wonders. "I'd have to think about it."

"Comedy Zone," a good idea still far from fulfillment, is hilarious when Allen is on camera, tiresome when he is off.

The tough part is that Allen is a guest on the first show and will leave the funny stuff to others in the four hour-long programs to come in the limited series.

There is hope. The show will draw on the talents of some notable comedy writers from the theater and television, including Jules Feiffer ("Little Murders") and Wendy Wasserstein (the current Off-Broadway hit "Isn't It Romantic?") on the first show, and Neil Simon and Herb Gardner in subsequent programs. So something funny seems inevitable.

"Comedy Zone" features an ensemble cast of Ann Lange, Mark Linn-Baker, Joe Mantegna, Audrie J. Neenan, Bill Randolph and Bob Gunton. Gunton does not appear in the first program.

That first show consists of skits and segments of varying length, none of them too short but a couple of them too long.

In one exceedingly drawn out piece, Steve Landesberg (an Emmy nominee as Detective Art Dietrich in ABC's "Barney Miller") describes his headache in numbing detail ("I got such a headache even my dandruff hurts"). Allen's fruitless effort to get Landesberg to stop is supposed to be funny; it is painful.

Comedian Todd Waring, another guest, does Tippy the dog with his hand (an impression, for instance, of a dog barking up the wrong tree) and it's at least worthwhile.

Bob Dishy, whose film credits include "The Last Married Couple in America" and "Lovers and Other Strangers," and Penny Marshall, from ABC's "Laverne & Shirley," also take part in skits.

The program ends with a long musical piece that is catchy but quickly too much of a good thing: "Don't you hate it when they make you sing along? ... Though it made Pete Seeger rich and it did a lot for Mitch, don't you hate it when they make you sing along?"

As it turns out, the series will run opposite "Benson" and "Webster" on ABC, and that is not particularly agreeable.

Tom Snyder Seeks New TV Position

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Snyder, the outspoken television news anchor who became a national figure on the late-night "Tomorrow" show, says he's leaving New York station WABC-TV "to pursue some other interests in the TV business."

Snyder has been working as co-anchor and celebrity interviewer on the 5 o'clock newscast, the lowest-rated and least prestigious of the station's three news broadcasts.

"Let's just say that I've had some philosophical differences with my format here," Snyder said Thursday.

Asked about one published report that had him going to KNBC in Los Angeles, where he worked before, Snyder said: "I have some ideas and they might include Los Angeles."

Currency Found In Doria Safe

NEW YORK (AP) — A safe from the sunken Andrea Doria yielded only "soggy, murky" U.S. and Italian currency when it finally was pried open — slight reward for a perilous dive to the ocean floor, a $2 million storm-tossed expedition and a three-year publicity campaign.

Experts in the preservation of paper said they pulled "two shoeboxes full" of paper money from the safe on live, nationwide television Thursday night and expected to find a similar amount when they resumed work today.

Peter Gimbel, who raised the wreck, said he was "as amazed as I've ever been in my life ... I would have bet you a thousand to one we'd never find one whole bill after 28 years on the bottom."

Gimbel said it might be weeks or months before the value of the currency was determined, because conservators had to treat the paper before it could be counted.

The money, which apparently is still negotiable, was to be rinsed, wrapped and frozen before shipment to paper conservation centers in Philadelphia and Andover, Mass., Gimbel said.

Teen-Age Hijacker

ROME (AP) — A Iranian teenager sentenced this week to 7½ years in prison for hijacking has asked for United Nations help in getting status as a political refugee, his lawyers say.

The lawyers also said that they are trying to block the possibility of his extradition to Iran because his life would be in danger there.

On Monday, a Rome court convicted and sentenced Hosein Eftekhari, 18, for hijacking an Iran Air Airbus to Italy on Aug. 8.

Eftekhari, who surrendered, has sent a telegram to the U.N. High Commission for Refugees asking to be placed under its protection. He is now being held in a Rome prison.

The Iranian plans to appeal his conviction, according to defense lawyers Fausto Cerulli and Rocco Ventre.

The three-judge Rome court found Eftekhari's friend, 17-year-old Mohsem Rahgohzar, innocent.

Blacks Urged To Vote In '84

CHARLOTTE (AP) — America is in a "twilight zone" between segregation and full participation by blacks in economic and political life, the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference says.

"We're half past the dark in America and a quarter to the light," Joseph Lowery said Thursday at the civil rights organization's national convention — the 27th since it was founded by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. "Everything has changed, but in a sense, nothing has changed."

Lowery, saying the solution is voting, drew applause and shouts of "Amen" from some 250 delegates and spectators at University Park Baptist Church.

"We've come too far and lost too many not to vote," said Lowery, noting that there are 544 black candidates running for office across the nation in November.

"If (Democratic candidate Walter) Mondale is wise, he'll convince us that while we're voting for them we'll vote for him. But Mondale or non-dale, we must march to the ballot box. ... If we go fishing (on Election Day) we betray our past, confuse our present and threaten our future."

Lowery urged blacks, labor activists and other progressives to unite.

Ponder Cleared

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — Zeno Ponder, who voluntarily took a leave of absence from the state Board of Transportation until an investigation cleared him of wrongdoing, says he's "pleased to death that the ordeal is over."

Refusing to say who levied the allegations, Hunt administration officials asked Wake and Madison County authorities in June to see if Ponder's purchase of land for a state highway project warranted an investigation.

The issue involved a 19-acre tract in a mountain gap that provides the only route for a road sought by Madison County residents and approved by the transportation board on July 8, 1982.

Wake County District Attorney Randolph Riley and Madison County District Attorney James T. Rusher issued a joint statement saying their "impartial, comprehensive and thorough investigation" concluded that "there exists insufficient evidence to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Mr. Zeno Ponder has violated the North Carolina criminal law."

Triplets Improving, Could Leave Hospital In Month

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The state's first artificially conceived triplets, whose conditions are steadily improving, will probably be released from North Carolina Memorial Hospital within a month, doctors say.

"I have only good things to report," Dr. Carl Bose, assistant pediatrics professor at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, said Thursday in a news conference with the children's father, Christopher Lyerly of Mooresville.

Doctors also announced that the infants developed from two eggs, not three as originally believed. The boys are identical twins who developed from one egg which split, while the girl developed from a separate egg.

The boys' conditions were upgraded from fair to good and they were taken off supplemental oxygen Thursday, Bose said. Their sister still required extra oxygen and "will convalesce a bit more slowly" than her brothers, he said. "They're doing better than we expected."

The two boys, Nathan Griffith and Christopher Houston, and their sister, Katarina Elizabeth, were born within three minutes of each other Wednesday afternoon.

The "test-tube" babies were conceived through the hospital's in-vitro fertilization program, in which Margaret Lyerly's eggs were fertilized with her husband's sperm and implanted in her uterus.

Lyerly said he was "very happy" and less worried than on the previous day, when doctors closely monitored the newborns because of their breathing difficulties.

"My wife got to hold Christopher today," said Lyerly. "She's still in shock. ... It just keeps getting better and better. She's delighted and in excellent spirits."

Mrs. Lyerly is recovering from a mild case of toxemia, an ailment common in pregnant women that causes hypertension and can lead to organ system malfunctions, Bose said.

Government Wants To Reclaim Grant

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A government agency is seeking to recover a $3.14 million grant from the North Carolina School of the Arts because it says the school violated an agreement not to sell or lease the Stevens Center after its renovation.

The U.S. Economic Development Administration plans to ask the Department of Justice for advice on how to recover the grant it gave the school in 1978, a spokeswoman for the agency said Wednesday. The money was used to help renovate the old Carolina Theater, which became the Stevens Center.

Part of the agreement for the grant was that the school not lease or sell the Stevens Center for 40 years. EDA officials say the agreement was broken when the school transferred ownership of the center in December 1982 to NCSA Inc., and entered a leasing agreement with the First Stevens Limited Partnership.

School officials said they realized they violated the agreement and are following the administration's advice, working with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C., to get legislation passed that would let the school keep the grant.

Samuel M. Stone, director of development for the school, said Wednesday that the development administration has not mentioned bringing the U.S. Justice Department into the dispute.

New Execution Date To Be Set

Supreme Court Rejects Plea By N.C. Woman On Death Row

RALEIGH (AP) — Since the U.S. Supreme Court has paved the way for a new execution date for condemned killer Velma Margie Barfield, her attorney says he'll decide whether to continue efforts at legal relief or seek clemency from Gov. Jim Hunt.

"Well, we're going to have to be moving on to clemency after the execution date is set," Raleigh attorney James Little said Thursday. "What we haven't decided yet is whether it appears that there is any reasonable possibility that we can get relief in a court."

The nation's high court Thursday denied a petition for rehearing in the case of Mrs. Barfield, who would become the first woman executed in the nation in 22 years and in North Carolina in 40 years.

Mrs. Barfield, 51, the only woman on North Carolina's death row, had been sentenced to die Aug. 31. But that date was canceled in June when Chief Justice Warren Burger stayed the execution so the full court could consider the rehearing.

Assistant State Attorney General Barry McNeill said a Bladen County Superior Court judge, likely Giles R. Clark, would set the new execution date.

"If they have lifted the stay, it means the case will now go back to Superior Court for resetting the execution date," he said, adding that the date must be 60 to 90 days after the hearing.

"It is conceivable that they could try another legal challenge," McNeill said. "That is not likely at this stage considering the number of appeals."

District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt of Lumberton said he has asked the hearing date be set for Wednesday at 10:30 a.m.

"Copies have been mailed to the lawyers and a writ has been issued for the defendant," Britt said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Britt said he would ask that the execution be set at "an appropriate date," but declined to elaborate.

Little said he is puzzled by the high court's refusal because the case raised jury-selection issues similar to those in a case the court agreed to hear. The defense petition addressed the exclusion of a juror because of his views on the death penalty.

But Britt said he was not surprised the petition was denied, and he expected more defense tactics to delay the execution.

"I never underestimate defense lawyers," he added.

Little said he hoped new security measures at Women's Prison in Raleigh would preclude moving Mrs. Barfield to nearby Central Prison until immediately before the execution. Little had criticized the state Department of Correction for isolating his client months before her previous execution date.

Department spokeswoman Patty McQuillan said Thursday, "As soon as her execution date is set, then we'll make that decision."

Mrs. Barfield was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her boyfriend, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. On the witness stand, she confessed to poisoning her mother and two elderly people for whom she worked as a private duty nurse and cook. She said she poisoned Taylor because she was afraid he would find out about a $300 check she had forged on his account and that she poisoned her mother after a $1,000 loan she had fraudulently obtained in her mother's name came due. She testified she only meant to make the victims sick.

In recent interviews, Mrs. Barfield said her 10-year addiction to prescription drugs led her to commit the crimes.

Earlier this year the nation's high court denied another defense petition for rehearing on the same claims that a juror was wrongly excluded for expressing reservations about capital punishment. Burger granted the stay of execution after the court agreed to consider another case in which a juror's sentiments on the death penalty were at issue.

South May Have Chance To Control Senate

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic campaign strategists are pointing to the South to counter Republican claims that a Democratic majority in the Senate would give liberals a free legislative hand.

Southerners would be in line to chair 10 of the 16 full committees if the Democratic Party regains control of the Senate in the 1984 general election, according to the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

And those Southerners are, the Democrats say, far from the "wild-eyed liberals" that Republican strategists warn against in campaign literature aimed at keeping the GOP's Senate majority intact.

They include "New South" senators like Sam Nunn of Georgia, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, Lawton Chiles of Florida, J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Kentucky's two senators, Wendell Ford and Walter Huddleston.

They also include senators like John Stennis of Mississippi and Russell Long of Louisiana, the two most senior members whose careers stretch back to earlier decades when Southerners controlled much of the national agenda.

Democratic control of the Senate also would springboard Robert Byrd of West Virginia back into the job of majority leader.

Howell Heflin of Alabama would take over as chairman of a select committee on ethics. He and Jim Sasser of Tennessee also would be in line to chair powerful subcommittees.

Under the control of Republicans and Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, the Senate has only three Southerners heading full committees: John Tower of Texas, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

To regain control of the Senate, the Democrats must keep the seats they now have and pick up at least six more.

Audrey Sheppard of the DSCC said the party's strategists feel there's "a pretty good chance" in Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi, Illinois, North Carolina, Iowa, Minnesota and Oregon.

But Democrats have had to deal with Republican claims that Democratic control of the Senate would allow liberals led by Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts to dominate the legislative agenda.

To counter that claim, the DSCC has come up with what is termed "the Southern scenario" which Bentsen, the committee's chairman, frequently uses in campaign speeches on behalf of Democratic candidates.

Ticking off the names of the Southerners in line for chairmanships, Bentsen is quick to point out that "these are senators who have never been accused of liberal extremism."

Mike House, the administrative assistant to Heflin and one of the principal authors of the "the Southern scenario," conceded it's "a long shot" for the South to take control. But it's a possibility, he added.

"If you look at the overall structure of the Senate, the key committees, it kind of just hits you," House said. "You're talking about a major shift in power and a major shift in emphasis. It's very dramatic."

House noted that the Southerners in line for chairmanships are "much more attuned to conservative and moderate positions" and are "senators that the business community is comfortable with."

But "the main thing," he added, is that the number of Southerners in line for chairmanships shows that the Republican Party is using "the Kennedy booby man" to keep control of the Senate.

"When you look at the facts, you see that their scare tactics are fiction," House said.

"The chairmen control the Senate agenda," he said. "And with 10 of the 16 committees controlled by conservative and moderate Southerners, you can expect some who are more liberal to temper their views."

HUNT CONFERENCE — Gov. Jim Hunt calls to an aide while talking with Betty Stallings of Durham and two of her children after holding a news conference in the yard of her home Thursday to talk about environmental problems. Mrs. Stallings' home was one of 14 whose wells were contaminated by a neighborhood plant. (AP Laserphoto)

Hunt Denies His Forces Mised Public On Debate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Denying his campaign misled the public about a proposed Aug. 27 debate with Sen. Jesse Helms, Gov. Jim Hunt says he's eager to debate the Republican incumbent as many times as possible.

Hunt said in a Thursday news conference that he was "very surprised" to hear Helms would not be available to debate later this month. Hunt said he had missed a meeting of the National Governors' Conference in Nashville, Tenn., to participate in the first debate.

"Sen. Helms had asked for a year to sit down and talk with me," said Hunt. "I look forward to the other three (debates)."

Hunt aides said this week that Helms had backed out of a debate that had been tentatively scheduled for Aug. 27.

Stephanie Bass, deputy press secretary of the Hunt campaign, said the Helms camp erroneously claimed that the Senate would be in session.

But Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Helms-founded National Congressional Club, said there was never a firm agreement to debate Aug. 27 and that the date was only one of several under consideration.

Both sides say the only debates agreed to in writing were last month's statewide televised confrontation and an Oct. 13 debate.

Two others are tentatively scheduled for September.

Hunt called the news conference in Durham to announce creation of an Environmentalists for Hunt Committee.

Denny Shaffer, a Fayetteville businessman and past president of the Sierra Club, said the 50-member committee would try to educate the state's voters about Helms' "abysmal" record on the environment.

Helms, in Dallas for the Republican National Convention, criticized Hunt's announcement.

"You mean the fellow who let the PCBs lie on the side of the road for 2½ years and then dumped them on the county least able to resist?" Helms asked. "Is that the great environmentalist who held a news conference, tut, tut?"

He said the governor was wrong about his environmental record and "we'll be glad to discuss that in the next debate if he wants to bring it up. But he'd be well advised not to bring it up."

Helms continued to play a key role in Dallas as officials polished a draft of the proposed platform that will go before the convention next week.

Helms said he and White House officials edited the draft to make sure its support for space-based defense systems would not advocate violation of arms treaties.

In the governor's race, Republican candidate U.S. Rep. Jim Martin continued to pressure Democratic Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to debate him more than the one time to which both sides have agreed.

Martin said he accepted an invitation from the League of Women Voters to appear in a series of four debates with Edmisten.

"It is vital that people vote with a clear understanding of what they are voting for," said Martin in a letter of acceptance sent to the League during a campaign swing through Durham. "That is not always possible in a campaign based on 30-second television commercials."

Campaigning in Hickory, Edmisten said Martin wanted to debate because he isn't as well known as Edmisten.

"He says he wants to see what we're both made of," said Edmisten. "Well, I'd be very happy for him to do that, and that's what he should be talking about rather than why I will not disrupt my schedule and carry him around on the back of my pickup truck and give him all that publicity. He's not even offered me any gas money."

In an interview with a Durham television station Thursday, Edmisten said he approved of raising the state's drinking age to 21, while Martin said he opposed a law enacted by Congress that orders states to raise the age or forfeit tax money for highways.

Edmisten told WTVD statistics have shown that raising the drinking age would save lives by reducing drunken driving. He said the drinking age should be uniform.

But Martin said it wasn't fair to single out 19 or 20-year-olds and allow them to vote and join the Army but not have a beer. He said law enforcement efforts should be focused on criminals and get tough with people of all ages who drive while drunk.

Elsewhere, former state Board of Transportation member Zeno Ponder was cleared Thursday of any wrongdoing in a 1982 land transaction that he made while serving on the board.

Wake County District Attorney Randolph Riley and Madison County District Attorney James T. Rusher said after an "impartial, comprehensive and thorough investigation" they found insufficient evidence to prove Ponder violated the law.

Cameron said the VFW has more than two million members, 38,000 of them in North Carolina.

Tar Heel Republicans Say Reagan To Top State Vote

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — North Carolina delegates to the Republican National Convention are united in believing President Reagan has a better chance than Walter Mondale to carry the state this fall, an Associated Press survey shows.

Each delegate polled by the AP between Aug. 1-10 said they think Reagan will win North Carolina. Three delegates were out of town and could not be reached. A fourth refused to answer the questions.

However, the 53 delegates are sharply split on how Mondale's choice of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as the first female vice presidential candidate will affect the Democratic ticket.

Recent polls show Reagan with a comfortable lead over Mondale in North Carolina, but Tar Heel Democrats are pinning their hopes for victory on the fact that Reagan carried the state by only 39,000 votes in 1980.

They also cite Democratic votes grabbed up by independent candidate John Anderson and the recent boost in Democratic registration.

Twelve delegates said the choice of Ms. Ferraro hurts the Democrats, while 13 delegates said it helps the party. Another 19 delegates said they believe she will not help or hurt the Democrats and five delegates did not know what the effects will be.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said it's too soon to predict what effect Ms. Ferraro's candidacy will have.

"She's a charming lady," Helms said. "It will depend on how successfully the Reagan people can make known her voting record and how they do it."

Peggy Bidy, a homemaker from Durham, said Ms. Ferraro will help the ticket because "she takes a lot of emphasis off his (Mondale's) voting record and puts more emphasis on the innovation (of nominating a woman)."

Dallas Nance, a teacher from State Road, predicted it will aid Democrats by drawing more women and gays who traditionally vote Democratic to the polls.

Hal McKinney, a Greenville salesman, said the selection of Ms. Ferraro will hurt Democrats in North Carolina because of her votes against the tobacco program. Ms. Ferraro has promised since winning the nomination to support the program.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A co-worker could put a monkey wrench into the work you had planned for today, so you have time to improve conditions at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Contact those who admire you and show how much you value their alliance and gain more goodwill.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Making improvements to property is wise today, and show kin you approve of changes they would like to be made.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day to shop for new clothing and whatever else you need to look more charming. Finish one project before starting another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more concerned with personal pleasure since you are rather depressed now. An argument could start between you and your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Turn to good pals in moments of anxiety and get succor from worry today. Both a partner and a higher-up could give you trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have to get much work out, so don't permit an older person to take up your time. Keep active and you are happy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study into activities that are new to you and you can make real progress today. You may find it difficult to release tension.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Although you may have outside trouble, keep cheerful and devoted to your mate and all works out well, and retain equilibrium.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get in touch with good friends who are cheerful and you can forget any worries that are troubling you now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have everything neat and clean, which is a fine trait that should be encouraged. A flair for writing is apparent early in life. Microwave Study Points To Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major Air Force-funded study has found glandular changes and a higher rate of cancer in laboratory rats chronically exposed to low-intensity microwaves.

According to the current issue of Microwave News, a specialized scientific newsletter, results of the $4.5 million study conducted at the University of Washington have raised serious concern among researchers investigating the biological and health effects of non-ionizing radiation.

"In addition to a general increase in cancer incidence, the experimental results suggest that microwave exposure is responsible for wide-ranging effects related to the adrenal glands and the entire endocrine system," the publication reported.

The adrenal glands, adjacent to the kidneys, and other glands of the endocrine system produce chemical hormones vital to the regulation of many bodily functions.

The Microwave News account noted that the findings could provide an experimental basis for widely reported complaints of headaches, dizziness, memory loss and fatigue from workers chronically exposed to microwave radiation.

Microwave radiation is emitted by a wide variety of sources, including thousands of military and civilian radar installations, satellite ground stations, relay towers for long-distance telephone links, television transmitters, as well as microwave ovens and citizens band radios.

The Air Force study, headed by Professor Arthur W. Guy at the university's School of Medicine in Seattle, exposed rats for up to 25 months to pulsed microwaves at a level of 480 microwatts per square centimeter.

If confirmed by other researchers, the experimental results "would undermine the 1982 American National Standards Institute radiofrequency and microwave radiation exposure standard." Microwave News reported. This voluntary standard sets safety levels of 1,000 to 5,000 microwatts per square centimeter for human exposure to microwave radiation.

Environmental Protection Agency surveys have found that 99.4 percent of the population in 15 major cities was exposed to microwave and radiofrequency radiation at power levels of 1 microwatt per square centimeter or less. However, exposure levels can range much higher under some occupational conditions and close to broadcast transmitters or other sources.

The EPA has prepared "guidance" for establishing a legally enforceable federal safety standard for exposure to microwave and radiofrequency radiation.

But the document's release — originally set for June — has been delayed, reportedly due to an internal dispute within the agency.

Popular opinion to the contrary, the two ends of the first transcontinental railway were not linked together at Promontory Point, Utah, on May 10, 1869. The Golden Spike ceremony there did celebrate the completion of the first U.S. railway joining an Atlantic port to a Pacific port. But in fact, the final link-up was made on this day in 1870, in Strasburg, Colorado. The longest rail line runs 5,864 miles between Moscow and Nakhodka in the Soviet Far East.

West led the 10 of clubs, and declarer performed well on the ace. He cashed the ace of spades and noted with interest that East dropped the nine. Now declarer could bring in five spade tricks if East started with the J-9 doubleton, but declarer realized that, if he cashed the king and East showed out, he would be limited to only three spade tricks. To check on East's holding, declarer crossed to dummy with the queen of hearts and led the 10 of spades. When East pitched a diamond, declarer ran the 10 to West's jack.

Back came another club, won on the board as declarer discarded a diamond. If hearts were 3-3, the contract was guaranteed. If the suit did not break, declarer would need to find one of the defenders with length in both red suits.

Declarer crossed to the ace of hearts and ran all his spades, sluffing two clubs and a diamond from dummy. East could afford to part with a club and another diamond on the third and fourth leads of the suit, but the last spade forced him to make a Hobson's choice. If he sluffed a heart, dummy's fourth heart would set up for the 12th trick; if he parted with a diamond, declarer's seven of diamonds would be the fulfilling trick. No matter what, the small slam was safe.

Suspect Caught Trying To Steal Police Car

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A would-be car thief paid the price when he unwittingly tried to break into a car belonging to a police officer right in front of her eyes.

Police Officer Mary K. Bruner was returning to her car from the Federal Building when she saw "a gentleman trying to break into my car."

"He was leaning onto the passenger side. Then he tried to open the trunk. Then he tried pulling on the driver's side," Mrs. Bruner said.

She told the man to go with her into a camera store, where she telephoned for a police car. But the man apparently had a different idea.

After running into the street, the man "put his arms up like he would punch me and started kicking," Ms. Bruner said.

Watching from a corner was Alfred Heisner Jr. and two of Heisner's co-workers at Union Pacific Railroad. All had just left work.

"He took a swing at her, she grabbed his swing and put him on the ground right there in the middle of the street just as we got there," Heisner said. "We held him down while she put the cuffs on him."

Getting In Close To Nature

With the arrival of the steamy days of August and the subsequent onset of that lazy feeling of not wanting to stir too far afield with one's camera, the time is right to think in terms of making photographs no further distant than one's back yard.

Such a restriction does not necessarily limit picture possibilities. Within any given small space, there's always a wealth of subject matter, particularly nature's miniatures which when viewed up close offer exciting shapes, designs and textures.

The moist days of a North Carolina summer enriches the growth of molds, fungi and late summer flowers, ideal subjects for close-up photographs. Details of common vegetables on hand can also be looked at for promising photographic interpretations.

The photographs on this page were shot with Tri-X, 400 ASA film at speeds ranging from 125 to 500, employing two inexpensive Number 1 and 2 close-up attachable lens. Even without close-up lens, an amateur photographer can get good results by zeroing in at the closest shortest distance afforded by his camera.
