Reagan Says GOP 'Minority Party No More'

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan, refueling his rhetorical attack on the Democrats hours before accepting nomination for a second term, said today an "eccentric clique" had reduced the Democratic Party to a "worn-out, discredited, far-left ideology."

Reagan told a $1,000-a-plate Republican lunch that "we will be content to be the minority party no more."

He said the Democrats, who for half a century have enjoyed a two-to-one advantage in voter registration, no longer speak "for the working people of this country."

"The leadership of the Democratic Party — and by that I mean the eccentric clique that was calling the shots in San Francisco and not the rank-and-file members — the leadership of the Democratic Party has abandoned the principles that formed their party," Reagan said. "They are no longer the party of Jefferson and Jackson, and they speak no more for the working people of this country."

It is the GOP, Reagan said, "that speaks for working people and entrepreneurs and risk-takers and dreamers and great souls and heroes — the kind of people who made this country and who keep it going every day."

"There is one party that sees the future not as a big black cloud waiting to rain on you but as a great and happy challenge waiting to be seized."

Calling his own party "the party of new ideas and fresh initiatives ... the party of the future," Reagan said the choice in November will be between that and "the other party with its worn-out, discredited, far-left ideology that caters to special interests."

Earlier, in remarks prepared for a luncheon of Hispanic Republicans, Reagan described Hispanics as "an increasingly important part of the Republican coalition."

In remarks prepared for a luncheon organized by the Republican National Hispanic Assembly, the president said, "The other party considers Americans of Hispanic descent a separate interest group. We Republicans see you as representative of the mainstream of our party and our country."

Citing the issues his administration have been saying his administration shares with a broad spectrum of Hispanic voters, Reagan predicted "that in the years to come it is the Republican Party that Americans of Hispanic descent will flock to in ever-increasing numbers."

"We are not for handouts and welfare," Reagan said. "We are for jobs and opportunity."

"There's been a lot of talk lately about family. I'm glad to see some of the other side have finally discovered traditional values."

Schools Open

Greenville city high school students streamed into their respective schools for the most part without mishap an hour earlier than usual this morning to make the new 8 a.m. homeroom bell.

"A few of the students did drag in sleepy-eyed, but most of our 1,180 students were in home room by the time the bell rang," Rose High Principal Howard Hurt said. "As for other problems, we had the usual ... a few late buses, and we expect lunch to be a traumatic thing. It always is the first day, but we'll get through it as usual." He added that roll calls indicated that the student population was 150 short this morning.

Business was also running smoothly at the city's primary, middle and junior high schools, according to administration representative Rebecca Oates. Mrs. Oates said, however, that not all students began classes an hour earlier this morning. "K-3 started at 8:15 a.m., the same hour as usual, and 4th-6th grades began at 8:30 a.m., also the same as usual. The only changes were in Rose High's starting time — that was changed to 8 a.m. — and in schedules of E.B. Aycock Junior High and the middle schools," she explained. E.B. Aycock and middle school students began at 9 a.m.

Mrs. Oates said city school student population totals 4,900 — a bit higher than last year's enrollment — and approximately 400 teachers, including 20 new instructors who were either hired to fill vacated positions or balance out teacher-to-student ratios as required by new laws governing allotments per teacher.

Safety Signs Go Up

"School's Open — Drive Carefully" signs are being posted in areas where children travel to and from school, Chief Ted Holmes said today.

Holmes said the signs, provided by the AAA-Carolina Motor Club, are an effort to remind motorists that school has started and to be particularly careful when driving through school zones or in areas where children might be playing.

The chief suggested that drivers should be watchful for children walking and riding bicycles to and from school, and said motorists should drive a bit slower in areas where children are crossing streets or where they may dart into streets while playing.

Holmes said bicycle riders many times are not aware of the nearness of passing cars and may turn into the path of a vehicle or run through a stop sign into the path of a moving car.

While motorists have a responsibility to watch out for children walking and riding bicycles, the children and their parents have a responsibility also, Holmes suggested.

He said parents should instruct their children in the proper ways to cross streets and in the rules-of-the-road of bicycle riding.

Holmes also suggested that parents walk with their children to school in a "dry run" at least once to help plan the fastest and safest route to the school. Children walking to

Fatal Crash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A helicopter crashed on a mountain ridge north of Beirut today, killing the highest-ranking Druse officer in the Lebanese army, the government-run radio reported.

Beirut radio said Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Nadim Hakim died in the crash. The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said seven people — including Hakim — were aboard the helicopter when it crashed and burned, and that all were feared killed.

As the highest-ranking Druse in the Lebanese army, Hakim would have played a key role in putting into place a security plan to extend government authority to the Druse-controlled central mountains.

East Says Taxes Are 'Last Resort'

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Republican Sen. John East says the three major issues facing Congress are the nation's deficit, defense spending and the situation in Central and South America.

In a speech to the Greenville Kiwanis Club Wednesday night, the junior senator from North Carolina agreed with President Reagan about the solution to problems of the deficit, defense and South America.

"There is no single solution to the question of the deficit," East stated. "I share the president's position, not in any partisan way but in his fundamental thrust."

"Taxes ought to be a last resort. If taxing automatically reduced deficits, we would have no deficit; we would have a large surplus. But I'm not saying you can rule out taxes absolutely, never," he added.

"The biggest cause of the deficit is not lack of taxation or defense spending, it is the non-defense expenditure programs, called entitlement programs," East stated. These programs include food stamps, Medicaid and Medicare.

East said a major problem with entitlement programs is that "there is no fixed amount or lid put on" the amount spent on the programs.

He noted that food stamps began in 1965 at a cost of $35 million. Today the program costs $12 billion and is growing.

"It is a laxly administered program," he said. "As more people qualify, you add more money to it." He said college students and strikers qualify for food stamps.

East said he agrees with the president's proposal that the federal government put up a lump sum for the program and leave the rest of the funds and the distribution to the state and local governments.

"This would take the federal

PCC Holds Summer Ceremony

Commencement speaker Dalton D. "Skip" Bright Jr. told Pitt Community College's summer graduates they must "be prepared to expand your careers by possibly returning to school in order to further the accomplishments that await you as a graduate."

"You must be prepared at every opportunity for the development of new skills through additional study," Bright said Wednesday. He said many people attend PCC for the pleasures of learning. Many of these PCC alumni, he said, have taken classes in real estate, investing, small motor repair or "others simply to fill a void in their attempt to become well-rounded persons."

Bright emphasized that the graduates should not just live in a community, but should become part of a community. He also told the graduates that they have a role to play as alumni to "help PCC grow to great heights."

"Take an active part in developing the future direction for PCC," Bright said. "Since you are in the market place now, you will have vital information to share with the leadership of the college. Getting this information in the right hands will enable the college to keep programs updated to the state of the art in each of our professions."

Karen J. Lloyd, a graduate of the electronic data processing department, gave the graduates' response to the college. She noted that graduates have learned more than skills while at PCC. "We have learned how to strive toward the realization of our dreams. We have learned to work with others and this takes determination which has made us strong and self-assured individuals," she said.

Dr. Charles Russell, president of PCC, gave opening remarks. Dr. Edgar L. Boyd, dean of students, introduced the candidates and Kay

V. Whichard, vice chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, conferred the degrees and diplomas, assisted by Dr. Edward Bright, dean of instruction.

A reception was given by Gamma Beta Phi following the exercises.

PCC SUMMER GRADUATION ... Attending Pitt Community College's summer commencement exercises held Wednesday were, left to right, Ephraim Smith, PCC trustee; Dalton D. Bright Jr., graduation speaker;

Kay Whichard, vice chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees; PCC President Charles Russell, and Karen Lloyd, graduate.

Divorce Rate Grows More Common Among Japanese

By SALLY SOLO
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Yoriko Madoka's first book, "I Am Getting Divorced," was a commercial failure in Japan because bookstores refused to stock it.

"The situation is different in Tokyo, but in the countryside everyone would know who bought the book at the store and then neighbors would start to talk about how this or that couple must be thinking about getting divorced," she said in an interview.

Divorce, widely considered a reflection of personal failure, is a social phenomenon to be seen but not accepted in Japan, according to Ms. Madoka, also founder of a monthly discussion group called "Niko-Niko Rikon," or "Divorce With a Smile."

Ms. Madoka still sells her book, published in 1979, but only through the mail in response to requests of individuals who have seen one of her appearances on television.

If present trends continue, though, sales of the book are likely to increase.

According to Health and Welfare Ministry statistics from the first nine months of 1983, Japan's divorce rate had reached 1.5 couples per 1,000 people, up from 1.39 the year before. The rate, though low compared with rates of 5.3 in the United States, 3 in the United Kingdom, 1.59 in France and 1.56 in Germany, was the highest here since World War II.

Divorce is a technically easy process: 90 percent opt to take or send to the local ward office a simple form with information on occupation, marriage history, who will take care of the children and a couple of witness signatures.

The process was even easier for men from the 17th to 19th centuries, when a husband needed only to hand a prescribed letter of three and a half lines to his wife, her father or her brother. Women's options were limited to running away to a Buddhist temple.

The national divorce rate was then about double what it is now. It stabilized at about 0.68 at the turn of the century, fluctuated after World War II and began to climb in 1965. It hasn't fallen since.

But unlike premodern days, the majority of divorce initiators are now women.

"For men, marriage was to make life easier, to get a housekeeper. For women, it was enough if her husband brought home enough money to live. The primary objective of marriage was not to live together happily ever after," said Yasuhiko Yuzawa, who worked 16 years at family court before becoming a professor specializing in studies of the changing Japanese family.

"Now it is women who are starting to feel doubts and dissatisfaction about what they are getting out of marriage," he said in an interview.

Fewer children and greater economic power make it easier for women to survive on their own, Yuzawa said, adding that 80 percent of the women here who divorce have no intention of remarrying.

Social and economic pressures remain deterrents for many, however. Advice columnists tend to promote turning the other cheek as the best response for wives confronted by cheating or violent husbands. And Labor Ministry figures for 1983 showed that women earned only 53 percent as much as men.

Ms. Madoka believes the unhappiness of many wives is in part caused by the vacuum left in their lives after the last child enters school.

"The average life span for a Japanese woman has reached 80. When her second child enters elementary school, she's about 35 ... and has completed what has been expected of her. Meanwhile her husband is out working ... Sometimes tensions that result lead to divorce," she said.

And sometimes the divorces lead to social side effects. A Health and Welfare Ministry survey published in May showed that in 1983 divorce was the No. 1 cause of single-mother households for the first time.

Of Japan's 718,100 single-mother households, divorce accounted for 49.1 percent of the cases, while a father's death accounted for 37.9 percent.

The survey also showed that more than three-fourths of all divorcees did not receive child support. Often ex-husbands pay a lump sum — in the $4,170-$20,850 dollar range — to ex-wives at separation.

Inspired by the report, the ministry initiated an eight-member advisory council under the Children and Families Bureau to study problems of children of divorcees.

People have asked me from time to time if any of my children have aspirations of being a writer.
To my knowledge, none of them has so much as written a letter since one of them forged my name to a permit slip allowing him to ditch school to see "Five Easy Pieces" as a learning experience. (One sent a Christmas card one year showing him on a motorcycle with his arm in a cast and Happy Holidays scrawled on it.)
Yet there is not a day goes by that they do not stop off at the countertop in the kitchen, shuffle through the mail and inquire, "Anything for me?"
They've been doing this since they were toddlers.
And the kicker is, due to the magic of computers, they get more mail than I do.
They receive requests to renew their subscription to Forbes. (They never had a subscription to Forbes.) They get spoken to by E.F. Hutton and they don't listen to him either. Once there was a brochure from a realty company addressed to my son and his wife asking them to put their financing problems on their doorstep. The kid was 12 at the time.

It sounds like I sit around sifting through my children's mail. I don't. I just collect it, store it, and watch them as they stand over the wastebasket reading it in mid-air as it plummets to the can.
I haven't read even so much as a postcard since the day out of sheer curiosity I scanned a card from a skiing buddy of my son who wrote, "Did the Gatorade we put in your dad's radiator work?"
If the kids write, it won't be humor.

Marriage-Minded Trucker Should Get Off The Road

DEAR ABBY: A few words to "Lonely in Dallas," the 30-year-old truck driver who wants a wife:

Supposing you do get married. Your wife will go along with you for maybe two years, then a baby comes along, and guess who is sitting home alone for two or three months waiting for you to come off the road? Only now she has the responsibility of running a home and raising a child because you can't do it over the telephone.

Her social life is almost nonexistent because it's easier to stay home alone than to be lonely at a party.

You miss out on all the joys of fatherhood because you're not there when the baby takes his first step, says his first word, etc. Meanwhile your wife sleeps alone in a big double bed for two and three months at a time, and envies her friends whose husbands come home from work every night.

And what are you going to do for sex while you're away from home? And what is your wife supposed to do?

When your son is 4, he will feel abandoned because his daddy is never home to take him to the beach, ball games, etc.

My advice to you is get off the road if you want a wife and family. I should know. I've been married to a long-distance trucker for 14 years. Sign me ...
LONELY IN NEW YORK

DEAR LONELY: A writer from Michigan offers a surprising solution for "Lonely in Dallas." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing concerning the truck driver who wants a girlfriend. I understand his problem.

I'm a lady truck driver, and it's true that most companies will not let their drivers take an unauthorized passenger in the truck.

"Lonely in Dallas" simply needs to find a woman co-driver. There are a lot more women drivers now than people imagine. Single truckers like having a woman co-driver because it solves problems like the one "Lonely in Dallas" has.

LADY TRUCKER FROM MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY: On several occasions I have read letters in your column from women complaining about an excessive amount of facial hair. How I wish I had their problem!

I am a male with only a few hairs on my chin. In adolescence I kept hoping I would grow more facial hair to appear more manly, but it never happened, and at 22, I am perceived to be a teen-aged boy instead of a man.

In accomplishments I am far ahead of most men my age, but my appearance is against me. I would give anything for a neatly trimmed mustache, but that's out of the question. And having hair on my chest would be too much to hope for. Can you help me, Abby?
BABY FACE

DEAR BABY FACE: Your hairless condition may have its roots (no pun intended) in a hormone deficiency. See an endocrinologist.

Also ask your barber to recommend a hair-aids store. Stick-on mustaches are available, as well as false beards, sideburns and even hair for the chest.

DEAR ABBY: I like your definition of "bedroom eyes." When I was a

Homemaker's Haven

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has amended its rule on textile care labeling, first issued in 1972, to make care labels on new clothes more complete, consistent and accurate. Care labels reflecting the changes in the FTC's rule are now appearing on many garments sold throughout the country.

The amended rule requires that words used by apparel manufacturers and importers on care labels be accurate and the information carried on them be supportable. Also, the commission has adopted a glossary of standard terms for use by labelers.

The rule affects practically all apparel materials now being manufactured or imported and concerns five areas of care: washing, bleaching, drying, ironing and drycleaning. The garment label need give only one general area of care, either washing or drycleaning.

One of the major changes in the rule concerns terminology relating to the use of bleach. When textile items can be bleached safely in both kinds of bleach, liquid chlorine and non-chlorine (all fabric) bleach, the words "bleach when needed" may appear on the care label. However, the label need not say anything about bleaching. So if a new care label does not mention bleaching the label means you can use any bleach, liquid chlorine or dry non-chlorine when necessary.

When chlorine bleach is not safe to use, but dry non-chlorine bleach is the label must say "only non-chlorine bleach when needed." Since virtually all washable fabrics can be safely bleached with non-chlorine bleach, it is expected that the "do not bleach" label will all but disappear from the marketplace.

Not surprisingly we have been deluged with calls about mildew. If you have a problem, call our office (752-2934, extension 370) for a copy of the brochure "Mildew Prevention in the Home."

— During times of high humidity, use air conditioning, it could save you both money and work in the long run.

— If you have lights in your closets, leave the lights on with the doors closed. Otherwise, leave the closet doors open for ventilation.

— Allow clothes and shoes to completely dry before putting in closets or drawers.

— By all means use kitchen and bathroom ventilating fans. These fans should end outside the house, not in the attic or under the house.

— Keep lids on while cooking to prevent steam from escaping. Pour cooking water or liquids down the drain as soon as possible.

— If you do not have air conditioning, do not use wet methods of carpet cleaners during periods of high humidity.

— Clean any mildewed areas as soon as possible. Do not paint over mildew until area is disinfected.

— Cover 80 percent of crawl space with six mil plastic.

— Make sure that both the crawl space and attic are well ventilated.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Judging from inquiries, even cooks who have never made fresh fruit jams are now thinking of doing so. They like the idea of using pure ingredients.

Easiest of all to prepare are the no-cook freezer jams that are made with fruit pectin — a product that does not contain undesirable preservatives. The following recipe may entice you during the fresh peach season. We found it good served with chicken or turkey. It's also delicious with ham sandwiches.

NO-COOK PEACH RELISH JAM
2 pounds (about) fully ripe peaches
1/2 cup raisins

1/4 cup cider vinegar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
5 1/2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1/4 cup lemon juice
6-ounce package (two 3-ounce pouches) liquid fruit pectin

Off heat, cover peaches with boiling water and let stand a minute or so to loosen skins; drain and remove skins; halve and pit. Finely chop or grind enough peaches to make 2 3/4 cups; turn into a large bowl. Sprinkle with raisins, vinegar, cinnamon and cloves; lightly toss together. Add granulated sugar and brown sugar; stir in well; let stand 10 minutes.

In a small bowl stir lemon juice into fruit pectin; stir into peach mixture and continue stirring for 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Ladle quickly into containers (see Note). Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature for 24 hours, then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator for up to 3 weeks. If raisins sink to bottom, stir gently before serving. Allow flavors to blend and mellow for a week or so before using. Makes about 7 to 8 (each 8 fluid ounces) containers.

Note: Use 1 to 2-cup glass or rigid plastic containers with tight fitting lids. Wash, scald and drain containers and lids, or use automatic dishwasher with very hot rinse water.

The Hero

Elvis Presley fans (and the city of Memphis) have just completed their seventh anniversary observance of the entertainer's death. It was a week of pilgrimage and tours for tens of thousands of people.

When the real Elvis Presley died he was an ailing, middleaged, puffy faced and overweight caricature of the young man who qualified for the memories and images that made him a near-cult figure.

He could, and did, sing well. His music style was varied and his songs were painstakingly presented to please a spectrum of tastes.

The qualities befitting a public figure of heroic stature were carefully portrayed by publicists as well as by the performer on film, in concerts, personal appearances and in those segments of his private life which were reported to the public.

Small wonder the ranks of Presley admirers came in all ages and from all backgrounds. Their memories are kept alive by televised replays of old movies and by old recordings heard and re-heard on radio.

The darker side of their hero's life, told by those who were close to him, is largely overlooked or explained away. It really doesn't matter.

Elvis came along at a time when an attractive, talented and magnetic young man portraying a multitude of virtues was needed.

That explains a lot.

Memories

The reunion of former Civilian Conservation Corps members was held in conjunction with the 50th anniversary celebration of Great Smokey Mountains National Park last weekend. It stirred appreciative memories.

The CCC was a brainchild of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration, designed to provide work for millions of unemployed young Americans while rehabilitating the nation's land and forests.

Additional benefits accrued.

The often strenuous work in the out-of-doors, plus medical attention and good diets, saw a bonus in improved health. Concerned leadership often meant grammar school education for illiterates in their ranks. It was a learning experience. Results of their work are visible (and enjoyed) to this day.

The return of a national economic prosperity brought with it disbanding of the CCC. In the decades that followed there have been occasional calls for its revival. Of all the innovative concepts that surfaced during the FDR years, the CCC remains one of the most treasured memories.

Parties, Parties And More Parties

WASHINGTON — At every national political convention since 1948, the Association of American Railroads has done its best to fatten up the press. This year seems to be no exception.

Of the 12,000 media types in Dallas this week for the Republican National Convention, almost half will have received a pass to the "railroad lounge" operated inside the convention center by the association. When the convention is in session, the "railroad lounge" provides reporters free sandwiches, beer and soft drinks, couches, foot massage machines, and an array of television sets. The railroad group estimates that the cost of its generosity will be about $75,000. Not surprisingly this generosity does not extend to members of the foreign press.

At one time, the association's behavior was the exception among special-interest groups. But in the past 36 years, treating reporters and public officials to a good time has become a public relations contest of sorts, raising serious questions about the fourth estate and its relationship with special interests.

In Dallas this week, no fewer than a hundred corporate and trade association parties were scheduled. A majority of the guest list includes the names of reporters, who'll share the hors d'oeuvres of special-interest groups with some of their favorite public officials.

Seagrams, for example, is hosting a party for Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., and friends. Gulf Oil is celebrating Republican Party National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf's term of duty. The American Bankers Association is throwing a party for congressional GOP members on the respective banking committees. (A spokesman for the bankers' group encouraged us to drop by. "We'd never turn away hungry reporters," he said.)

Meanwhile, LTV Corp., a major defense contractor, is hosting a reception for House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill. Nestle Corp. is welcoming reporters to a reception for a new drink the company is introducing that resembles an ice cream soda. The American Medical Association is honoring Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler at a dinner. The American Electronics Association is hosting a reception for public officials and reporters. And the G.D. Searle Co. put on a splash before the convention for GOP volunteers, as well as a "Nutrasweet" reception for convention chairman Ron Walker.

Among the other party-givers are the Avon Corp., the Mortgage Bankers of America, the National Association of Realtors, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, National Society of Professional Engineers, Neiman Marcus, Pepsi Cola, CTE Chem Tex Co. and more.

Veteran hosts Time, Newsweek and U.S. News & World Report will give parties of their own for political dignitaries in town. The local newspapers will do the same. The American Broadcasting Co. is even sponsoring a reception for the Reagan campaign chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

Of course, a week's worth of free food and booze can't alter every reporter's judgment. Most press types, in fact, would probably never let a canape get in the way of a career-boosting scoop.

Yet, it's still important to note the transparent power games that are at play in Dallas. What's at stake is a dangerous pattern of buddyism that clouds the professional arm's-distance relationship that reporters should have with special interests and public officials.

Regardless of how one feels about such friendly relationships, it's unlikely a reporter is going to investigate a trade association that's paid him $3,000 to deliver a luncheon speech. Nor, for that matter, will a scribe chastise a public official who has been a financial asset.

No one should expect perfection. But a press corps that can badger the spouse of a politician to reveal his or her personal finances might someday be asked to do the same.

A Snag With Taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the biggest tax deductions many Americans take each year is the interest they pay.

Interest on home mortgages, interest on personal loans, interest on credit-card purchases — it's all fully deductible when it comes time to calculate the taxes you owe.

So is interest paid on money borrowed to finance investments — within reasonably liberal limits set by the tax rules.

Ordinarily these rules are pretty simple to understand, to comply with and to take full advantage of. But borrowers can run into a snag if they happen, as countless Americans do, to have investments in tax-exempt securities like municipal bonds.

As the investment firm of Thomson McKinnon Securities points out, "interest and other investment expenses, incurred to purchase or carry tax-exempt securities are not allowable deductions."

This exception is intended to keep people from taking out a tax-deductible loan in order to buy a tax-exempt security. Consider what would happen if an investor could borrow $20,000 at 10 percent interest to buy $20,000 in municipal bonds paying 10 percent.

That's no money out of the investor's pocket. But he or she could earn a significant gain on the transaction.

The $2,000 coming in the form of municipal-bond interest is exempt from federal taxes. At the same time, the $2,000 paid out in interest on the loan would result in a tax saving of up to $1,000 for someone in the 50 percent tax bracket.

Net after-tax benefit: As much as $1,000 on a maneuver that involves none of the person's own money and very little risk. In larger amounts, the reward would be proportionately greater.

Congress and the Internal Revenue Service naturally saw plenty of good reason to forestall this practice by disallowing the interest deduction on the loan. Without the deduction, the strategy loses its appeal. So, generally, people simply don't attempt it.

But savers and investors who own a variety of investments still can unwittingly run afoul of the rule. As Thomson McKinnon points out: "In certain cases, the IRS may infer a relationship between interest expense and the ownership of tax-exempt securities. The indebtedness does not have to be directly traceable to the tax-exempt securities as long as there is a sufficiently direct relationship between the ownership of tax-exempt securities and the indebtedness incurred."

'Star Wars' Brings Presidential Threat

DALLAS — A threatened telephone call from Ronald Reagan was needed to convince Republican hard-liners to water down platform language endorsing the president's own "Star Wars" (anti-satellite) program.

In an intense behind-the-scenes struggle, administration spokesmen tried to talk members of the platform's national security subcommittee out of promising to actually "build" the system. Sen. John Warner of Virginia backed the administration position but could not pick up a single supporter on the subcommittee.

The subcommittee chairman, Rep.

Marjorie Holt of Maryland, who was telephoned twice by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, refused to budge. But after word was passed by presidential operatives that Reagan himself was about to intervene, Holt agreed in the full Platform Committee to a Pentagon suggestion that "achieve" be substituted for "build" — much to the anguish of the hard-liners.

Conservatives seeking more time on the convention podium last Monday night for United National Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick were spreading the word among delegates that she might conceivably use the occasion to formally declare herself a Republican.

In seeking delegates to sign up for a floor fight on changing the convention agenda to give Mrs. Kirkpatrick more time, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia encountered some complaints that the ambassador is still a registered Democrat. He responded that she might be more inclined to feel the spirit of the GOP and declare herself a Republican in given a half-hour to expound on her philosophy rather than the 10 minutes allotted by the convention managers.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who was a disciple of the late Hubert H. Humphrey, as recently as 1976 was a loyal Democrat actively participating in that party's national convention. While that is a reason given by Gingrich and other congressional Young Turks for including Mrs. Kirkpatrick in an expanded Republican Party, the White House justified it as a reason for keeping her out as a keynote speaker.

An offer by an overwrought Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan to fly from Washington to Dallas last Thursday to fight the platform plank accusing the Federal Reserve Board of "destabilizing" the economy was hastily rejected by the Reagan campaign team here.

The president's men handling the platform were worried that the secretary, a rookie in convention politics, would only antagonize delegates. Drew Lewis, White House liaison to the Platform Committee, specifically advised that animosity against Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker was running so high that there was no use in fighting the "Fed-bashing" language.

Rep. Trent Lott, the platform chairman, privately informed Lewis that he personally would oppose any attempt to remove the Fed plank and hinted that something worse beyond the mountains — then its federal tax burden would be reduced. That appealed to a lot of folks.

In April 1784, the cessionists won. The Legislature voted to give the lands beyond the mountains to the federal government. But Congress never got to accept the gift. Notice of the action was delivered after a congressional recess and, in October, the Legislature repealed its action.

In August 1784, the westerners held a convention, criticized North Carolina government for neglecting the interests of the area, and formed their state. Today is the anniversary of that decision. But it was not until after the Legislature repealed its April decision that the westerners drafted their constitution. They drafted two, that is. In the end, the westerners adopted a constitution very similar to North Carolina's and petitioned Congress for statehood.

Three factors led to the collapse of the state of Franklin into a state of civil disorder shortly thereafter. The federal government didn't recognize it. The state of Virginia, whose cooperation was needed for some of its western lands, didn't cooperate, and North Carolina was adamant in its opposition.

Franklin was less than five years ahead of its time. In 1789, North Carolina again reversed itself and agreed to cede the land over to the federal government. It was turned into a territory that would eventually become the Tennessee territory and, in 1796, the state of Tennessee.

North Carolina with the western lands might have been too big to govern back then and even today. The regional feuds arising from an Atlantic to the Mississippi state would be tremendous.

Strength For Today

C.S. Lewis, former professor of English at Cambridge University, has become one of the most interesting and widely read writers on religious subjects in the world. Although not a trained theologian, he has been able to explain the basic beliefs of the Christian religion with a penetration and clarity which few in recent decades have equaled.

His writings are like a refreshing breeze after a sweltering day. He made everything he touched sparkle and shine with new light. His "Screwtape Letters" on the nature of evil kept a decade chuckling — which is quite a feat. "The World's Last Night" has about it the vision and clarity which made this teacher of English one of the world's most acceptable writers in the field of theology.

A book by Lewis on religion is as readable as a newspaper article and as thrilling as the most popular "who done it."

Soviets Speculate Long Chernenko Absence Indicates He May Be Ill

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow residents, remembering the secrecy that surrounded the illness of the late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, are speculating about the health of Konstantin U. Chernenko, who has not been seen in public for six weeks.

The 74-year-old Communist Party chief has not made a public appearance since early July and, contrary to the practice of previous Kremlin leaders, has not received visiting officials during his long vacation.

Western diplomats here say they have heard rumors that Chernenko returned to Moscow for medical treatment earlier this month, but that they doubt anything is seriously wrong with the Soviet leader.

Some noted, however, that Chernenko's complete retreat from public duties differs from traditions established by past Kremlin chiefs.

Chernenko left Moscow July 15 for a vacation, the official news agency Tass said. Although the destination and length of his holiday were not announced, the Soviet leader is presumed to be in the Crimea, traditional rest spot of Soviet elite.

Visiting dignitaries have met with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and other Soviet officials vacationing in the south, according to the official media. And although some announcements have carried his name, no personal statements have been issued by the Soviet leader over the past month-and-a-half with the exception of a letter to Irish Nobel laureate Sean MacBride.

Under the administration of Leonid I. Brezhnev, whose style of leadership was similar to Chernenko's, the long summer respite from Moscow was often used as a forum for informal chats with other world leaders.

Early last summer, Andropov made a couple of public appearances while on vacation out of the capital before dropping from public view as his kidney ailments worsened.

He died Feb. 10 at the age of 69 after having been unseen in public for the last six of the 15 months he ruled the Soviet Union.

Chernenko was absent from the Politburo review box for the opening ceremonies of the Friendship '84 games being staged here in the wake of the Soviet-led boycott of the summer Olympics in Los Angeles. Five other Politburo members were at the Lenin Stadium gala, including Mikhail Gorbachev, considered second in authority at the Kremlin.

Closing ceremonies for the Moscow sports competition are planned for Aug. 30. A Soviet sports committee official said he did not know if Chernenko planned to attend, and said the Soviet leader was thought to still be on vacation.

One Western diplomat here said nothing is believed amiss in the Politburo, and Chernenko, although known to have heart problems, is not thought to be ill. But he added: "One could speculate on the fact that he hasn't met with anyone."

E. Germany Stance Is More Pragmatic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presence of East Germany's ambassador in a 70-member diplomatic delegation attending the final day of the Republican convention in Dallas today is being viewed here as evidence of a more pragmatic, less ideological, East German attitude.

Invitations were extended to all countries with diplomatic missions here but East Germany was the only close ally of the Soviet Union to accept. Romania, also a member of the Warsaw Pact, is sending its ambassador to Dallas as well, but that country deviates on occasion from Soviet policy.

A U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said that a year ago, the United States and East Germany essentially were "trading rhetoric" on such issues as grain sales, arms control, tariffs and the deliberations of the 35-nation Conference on European Security and Cooperation.

"We were talking past each other," the official said. That, he added, is no longer the case.

As part of what the official said appeared to be a "pre-negotiation" strategy, the East Germans have been intent on exploring ways to pursue agreements with Washington if they decide to move in that direction.

The official said the presence of East German Ambassador Gerhard Herder in Dallas should not be seen as a gesture to the United States but rather as an "effort to understand what makes the (Republican) party tick."

"They want to see what makes us work," the official said, adding that East Germany "is not headed toward becoming another Romania."

Recently, the Romanians refused to follow the Soviet lead when they decided to take part in the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles. East Germany, on the other hand, boycotted the Games.

Among the issues dividing the two countries is $79 million in U.S. property East Germany expropriated years ago without providing compensation. In addition, bilateral trade has been stagnant for some time.

According to an East German diplomat, Gerhard also attended the Democratic convention in San Francisco along with 60 other foreign envoys.

In Dallas, the diplomats will hear President Reagan's speech Thursday night. Secretary of State George P. Shultz was to deliver informal remarks to the envoys at an afternoon reception hosted by PepsiCo International.

Invitations to attend the convention were extended through the State Department. Those accepting had to arrange and pay for their own transportation. Several dozen ambassadors declined the invitations but it was unclear whether they did so because of scheduling conflicts, political reasons or other factors.

East Germany was represented at the conventions of both major parties four years ago but, as officials pointed out, that period occurred well before the shift in that country's tone towards the United States.

Recently, the Soviet Union and East Germany have been involved in a public dispute over the East Berlin government's defense of detente and dialogue with West Germany. East German leader Erich Honecker, in what was viewed as an act of defiance against Moscow, has arranged to visit Bonn next month, the first visit of its kind since the two Germanies were created in the post-war era.

On other issues, however, East Germany remains firmly in Moscow's camp. As an example, it maintains security advisers in Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia and Nicaragua to help upgrade the police forces in those countries. In general, East Germany provides advice on security to these Soviet allies while Cuba offers help on military matters.

school should make use of marked crossings as much as possible, and should not walk between parked cars.

Bicycle riders, Holmes said, should obey all traffic laws, including giving hand signals when turning and riding on the righthand side of the street just as cars do. Stop lights and stop signs are meant to be obeyed by bicycle riders as well as cars, he added.

Holmes also urged bicycle riders to lock their bicycles when left parked at school or unattended at home to prevent their theft.

The chief urged parents driving their children to school to use courtesy in heavy traffic, and where possible, follow a course that will allow students to get out of the cars next to the curb at the school. He said this will prevent children from having to cross the street in heavy traffic and run the risk of being hit by a passing car.

Policeman Finally Gets His Driver's License, 7 Years Late

MILLVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A policeman who officials say patrolled streets here for seven years without a valid driver's license now has one, but still faces disciplinary charges.

Police Chief Paul Quinn filed departmental charges against Patrolman William Narvaez, 33, whose license was declared invalid 19 days after he was hired in April 1977, according to city and state records.

The state Division of Motor Vehicles suspended Narvaez' license because he failed to meet requirements for automobile insurance, said agency spokesman John Deutsch.

A valid license was issued on June 28 and Narvaez was removed from the division's list of suspended drivers, Deutsch said.

City Solicitor William Forester said he was informed of the alleged violation on July 3 after police department employees made the discovery during a "routine" check.

Narvaez has been assigned to office duties pending the outcome of a hearing scheduled for Sept. 7, said Forester.

Rocco J. Tedesco, the patrolman's attorney, said he would not comment until he has seen evidence related to the case.

Forester said applicants for patrolman's posts are required under Civil Service laws to have valid driver's licenses.

He refused to comment on the disciplinary charges filed against the patrolman.

However, city records show that Narvaez was involved in an accident on April 17, 1982 while driving a police car.

The driver of the other car, Sue L. Whildin of Millville, was cited for running a stop sign. Earlier this year, she filed suit in Superior Court against the city and Narvaez seeking damages for injuries she claimed to have suffered as a result of the accident.

The police report on the accident was dated April 17, 1982 and said Narvaez had a license bearing an expiration date of September 1982, records show.

Deutsch said the motor vehicles division does not have any records showing Narvaez had a New Jersey license at the time of the accident. City officials refused to comment.

Jury Indicts 12 Guards

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The indictment of 12 state corrections officers allegedly involved in beating 15 inmates with nightsticks and fists "should serve as notice" that excessive force by guards will not be tolerated, officials say.

The 12, including three superior officers, were indicted Tuesday by a state grand jury, Attorney General Irwin I. Kimmelman said Wednesday.

"There are times when a reasonable amount of force must be exercised by officers, but the unprovoked use of force will not be condoned," said Corrections Commissioner William H. Fauver.

"This indictment should serve as notice that we will vigorously pursue all allegations of wrongdoing, especially when charges are made against those entrusted with enforcing the law," Criminal Justice Director Donald R. Belsole said.

The officers were summoned to appear in Superior Court on Sept. 28 to answer the charges.

The beatings allegedly occurred on May 15 after the inmates were transferred from Southern State Correctional Facility following a protest over prison food, according to Department of Corrections spokesman James Stabile.

The day after the beatings, Fauver asked the attorney general's office to conduct an investigation. All of the officers were suspended without pay in May.

Stabile said he did not know what prompted the beatings. One inmate was hospitalized for four or five days while the others were treated at the prison for cuts and bruises, he said.

There are about 3,500 officers in the state corrections system, said Stabile. He called the case "rare," and said officials could not recall a similar one.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals.

Application forms are being sent to all homes with a letter to parents or guardians. To apply for free or reduced price meals, households should fill out the application and return it to the school. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application will be used for the purpose of determining eligibility. Household income may be verified at any time during the school year by school or other program officials.

For school officials to determine eligibility, the household must provide the following information on the application: names of all household members, social security numbers of all adult household members or a statement that the household member does not possess one; total household income; and the signature of an adult household member certifying that the information provided is correct. Households are required to report increases in household income of over $50 per month or $600 per year and decreases in household size. Households receiving food stamps may provide their food stamp program case number instead of income information.

Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. Under the provisions of the free and reduced price policy, each principal of the individual schools will review applications and determine eligibility. Fire Breaks Out In Dallas Building

DALLAS (AP) — A smoky fire erupted today in the former Texas Schoolbook Depository Building, where Lee Harvey Oswald fired the shots that killed President John F. Kennedy more than 20 years ago, fire officials said.

The fire, reported at 3 a.m. and declared extinguished at 4:54 a.m., started in the basement and spread to the first and second floors of the seven-story, brick-veneer building, fire officials said.

No injuries were reported. Fire Marshal Jim Badgett said the smoke made it difficult to determine the cause of the fire, but said that heat was intense in two areas, suggesting that the origin of the blaze might be suspicious.

The sprinklers in the building had been turned off for repairs, he said. Asked if arson was suspected, Fire Chief Dodd Miller said, "Sure. We always suspect arson. We'll look for it."

Badgett estimated damage at $250,000.

The building is 10 blocks northwest of the Dallas Convention Center, where the Republican Party is holding its national convention. Five alarms were sounded because of the amount of smoke in the building and because the building is located downtown, said fire Lt. Lester Mount.

Miller said flames reached no higher than the second floor. "The fire traveled up into the walls. We had to cut into the walls. There is some smoke throughout the entire building," he said. "I saw smoke all the way to the top."

Capt. E.B. Hill, who was among the first fire officials to go down to the burning basement, said, "It had been burning a while. It had been going up the walls. By the time we got there, it was up to the second floor."

Asked what was burning, he said, "It appeared to be wood, like plywood, like packing crates. We found lots of wood down there."

Lindalyn Adams, president of a historical foundation that plans to put an exhibit in the building, said she had not been to the basement for several years, but believed it contained some newspapers from the time of the assassination, books about Kennedy, and panels from a Hertz rent-a-car sign that was atop the building at the time.

The sprinkler system in the building had been turned off for repairs after a leak was discovered Sunday, Badgett said. That leak had been fixed, but others were found later, so the system was not on when the fire started, he said.

The building is now a county office building and Badgett said the fire marshal's office and the county commissioner's court were in the damaged areas.

Streets leading to the building on the edge of downtown Dallas were blocked off and a police helicopter circled above, using its lights to illuminate the building as scores of firemen battled the fire.

The Warren Commission, appointed to investigate the death of Kennedy, said that Oswald fired the fatal shots from a sixth floor window of the building on Nov. 22, 1963.

Oswald was an employee of the book depository at the time of the assassination. Police investigators found spent rifle cartridges by the ledge of the sixth-floor window and later found his Italian-made rifle hidden nearby.

Oswald was able to leave the building in the excitement after the shooting and was captured in a theater in the city's Oak Cliff section shortly afterward. Investigators say he shot and killed a Dallas police officer during his escape.

He was shot to death two days after the assassination in the basement of the Dallas Police Station by Jack Ruby, a Dallas nightclub operator who was convicted, won a new trial on technicalities and died of cancer before he could be retried.

The building has since been renovated and is now called the Dallas County Administration Building. The sixth floor, however, is not used as an office and has been kept closed to the general public since the assassination.

The Dallas County Historical Society announced plans last year to raise money to convert the sixth floor into a museum.

Device Slows Racing Hearts

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Implanted devices that zap the heart with electric jolts may someday be a key weapon against cardiac arrests by slowing the rapid heartbeat that precedes half the 400,000 fatal heart attacks among Americans each year, researchers say.

Such treatment has been available in emergency rooms for three decades, but often the patient arrives too late to be helped. So researchers are attempting to shrink these hospital machines enough to insert them inside potential victims' bodies.

The idea is to provide the life-saving shock automatically on the spot, whenever the device senses that something is wrong.

The latest of these devices, developed at Indiana University School of Medicine, was described in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"I personally think we are embarking on a new era in therapy of tachyarrhythmias," said Dr. Douglas P. Zipes, the inventor. "That will be a greater and greater reliance on electrical devices."

Tachyarrhythmia and tachycardia describe heart rates of more than 100 beats a minute. Often, this condition can be controlled with drugs. But when it cannot, doctors must shock the heart back to a normal rhythm by placing electrical paddles on the chest. Otherwise, the heart may go into fibrillation or cardiac arrest that stops blood circulation and quickly leads to death.

Relatively mild shocks will correct tachycardia, while stronger jolts are needed to relieve fibrillation.

Four years ago, Dr. Michael Mirowski of Johns Hopkins Medical School tested an implanted defibrillator, which automatically delivered powerful shocks during cardiac arrest.

"This is another step along in encapsulating the emergency room into a 100-gram can that one can implant and do, from inside the heart, what the paddles do externally," Zipes said.

The latest is still experimental, and at least two major drawbacks must be worked out before it can be considered for widespread use. It is not powerful enough to correct fibrillation. And it does not always distinguish between tachycardia and other rhythm abnormalities, so it may produce a shock at the wrong time.

"I don't see it replacing drugs but serving as an adjunct," Zipes said. "I see a very wide application once these final problems are solved."

The three-ounce device is similar to a pacemaker, which speeds up the heart when it beats too slowly. Like a pacemaker, it can be quickly installed under local anesthesia without major surgery.

Patients are conscious when the device fires off its jolts, and it makes chest muscles contract something like "a giant hiccup," Zipes said. The sensation is unpleasant but not intolerably painful.

Tourist Arrested At White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Oklahoma tourist who carried a loaded pistol into the White House is back on vacation after a day in jail, a $100 fine and a stern warning about toting unregistered guns in the nation's capital.

"It was just a mistake," Victor Rupert Yingst, 41, of Broken Arrow, Okla., said Wednesday as he pleaded guilty to carrying an unregistered, loaded, .22-caliber Baretta pistol in a knapsack into the tourists' entrance to the White House.

Yingst, his wife and teen-age son were planning to take the White House tour and then leave for New York City. "The reason we had it is we were going to New York and we had it for protection," he said.

As to why he took it to the White House, Yingst added: "I just hadn't thought."

Yingst said that when White House guards found the gun at a routine checkpoint where tourists' bags are X-rayed, he was in the process of revealing the presence of the gun, assuming there would be a place to check it.

Plastic Threatens Paper Grocery Bags

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a century of service as one of America's most used but least noticed products, the brown paper grocery bag is under attack. The battleground is the supermarket. The enemy is plastic. And with annual sales of 25 billion bags at stake, the paper industry isn't ready to fold without a fight. Plastic sacks could capture as much as one-fifth of the grocery bag market by the end of this year, said Ronald Schmieder of Mobil Chemical Co., a leading manufacturer of the bags. That's up from less than 5 percent three years ago, with the plastic bags appearing across the nation in such major chains as Safeway, Pathmark, Lucky Stores, Vons and others. But the paper industry contends its share of the sack market still tops 90 percent, and is pressing a public relations campaign on behalf of the big brown bag.

In the struggle for a market that paper has had just about to itself for 101 years, the results, so far, have been mixed. "Plastic has a very strong following by about 20 percent of shoppers. Paper bags are also strongly preferred by about 20 percent. The remaining 60 percent of customers are indifferent," said Robert Wunderle, a spokesman for the Pathmark supermarket chain in the New York metropolitan area. But people with a preference are "very strong and vocal," he added. Wunderle said city shoppers, who walk to and from markets, seem to prefer plastic because of the handles which make it easier to carry.

But suburbanites lean toward paper, which may contain more per bag and is more stable in the back of a station wagon. Mona Doyle, a Philadelphia-based consumer consultant for the American Paper Institute, contended paper bags hold more than plastic, are stronger and are less likely to be torn by sharp corners on boxes. Not so, replied Pathmark's Wunderle, "plastic is substantially stronger ... (and) you don't have to worry about wet items or sharp corners." "At first (the customers) weren't sure they were strong enough. But they won't rip out, and on rainy days they are highly desirable," added Barbara Ettinger, consumer affairs manager for Safeway stores in the Washington, D.C., area, where the plastic bags are in wide use. Mobil's Schmieder said that for heavy loads most supermarkets use two paper bags rather than one. "That's very expensive. You don't double-bag with plastic because it will handle 25 (percent) to 30 percent more," he said.

But the paper industry took just the opposite stand, saying one market found it had to use two plastic bags for each paper one. As to cost, when plastic was first introduced a few years ago it was slightly more costly than paper. Today petroleum prices — the raw material for plastic — are down and the plastic bags are a bit cheaper. Schmieder also said consumers prefer plastic because of "many reuses in the home. It can be used for bathing suits, diapers, garbage, and so forth." Not to be outdone, the paper industry responded that few inventions have served so many uses as their big brown bags. Garbage detail topped their list of secondary uses for the absorbent bags — with a special note that unlike plastic, the paper bags are biodegradable in the environment and are made from trees, a renewable source. "We are moving into a plastic society in a lot of ways and it is necessary in many cases. For example in the bathroom where plastic bottles are safer than glass," Ms. Doyle said, but in the case of paper bags, "if you have a natural product doing the job, why is the high tech solution better?" The paper institute also recommends its product for lining the cat litter box, blotting up spills, as a wastebasket (it stands up on its own), and even removing wax buildup from furniture when placed between the wood and a hot iron.

Air Force Says Shuttle Site Is Safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — There have been construction defects at the new $2.5 billion space shuttle launch complex in California, but quality control efforts have preserved the project's safety, says the Air Force.

"Although we are confident that the quality control and quality assurance disciplines in force are working, we are willing — anytime a question is raised about safety or quality — to doublecheck our procedures," the Air Force said Wednesday in a statement. The written reply to questions submitted by reporters came two days after NBC reported that inspectors had found dangerous flaws at the site at Vandenberg Air Force Base, and a day before an Air Force team was due at the base to look into the matter.

Pentagon Halts Missile Payments

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Pentagon is suspending payments to the Hughes Aircraft Co. for three of the military's primary missile systems because of "serious deficiencies" in manufacturing and quality control, military officials said.

The payments, amounting to $30 million a month, are for the Army's TOW antitank missile, the Navy's Phoenix air-to-air missile and the Air Force's Maverick air-to-ground missile. All are made at the Hughes plant at Tucson, Ariz.

In Tuesday's statement, the Air Force said its investigation at Tucson earlier this month uncovered "68 separate findings associated with poor workmanship, inadequate translation of engineering specifications to production planning, failure of manufacturing personnel to follow planning documentation and most importantly failure of management to ensure the flowdown of contractual requirements to operating levels."

As a result, the Army and Navy joined the Air Force in suspending completely the so-called "progress payments" for the weapons programs. Such payments are installments made to help a contractor cover costs during manufacturing.

"The joint service agreement was reached following the discovery recently of serious deficiencies ... identified by recent Air Force product reviews of the Phoenix, Maverick and TOW programs," said the statement.

The suspension of payments represents one of the most serious actions taken by the Pentagon so far against defense contractors in an effort to clear up quality problems some officials have said are widespread in the industry.

Court Says Wrongful Accusation Libelous

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — An appeals court has reinstated a defamation lawsuit filed by a 65-year-old Sunday school teacher who says she "felt humiliated and hurt" when she was wrongly accused of shoplifting.

The alleged accusation three years ago so upset Julia Hall of Montclair that she stopped shopping at the store which she had patronized for 20 years, according to her lawyer.

Ms. Hall then filed suit against Acme Markets Inc. and John Heavey, manager of the grocery chain's Clifton store. She contended Heavey stopped her in the parking lot on Sept. 3, 1981, and searched her purse.

No stolen merchandise was found. But a lower court dismissed her claim on grounds that an accusation of shoplifting was not intrinsically defamatory because the offense was a disorderly persons offense, not an indictable crime.

In its 3-0 decision Wednesday, the Appellate Division of Superior Court said false accusations of theft are slander, even if the offense is minor.

Under the state's criminal code, theft of goods worth $200 or more is a crime, but the theft of goods worth less than $200 is a disorderly persons offense.

"For the law of defamation it should make little difference if a person's reputation is ruined by an unwarranted charge of theft of goods worth more or less than $200 or of taking merchandise from a store without paying for it," Judge Theodore I. Botter said in Wednesday's ruling.

Ms. Hall contended that Heavey accused her of stealing, but Heavey denied in sworn statements that he accused or indicated to Ms. Hall that he thought she had taken anything, the court said.

Heavey said he was looking for merchandise that may have been taken from the store after a cashier alerted him that a woman walked out with a large bag. No one saw Ms. Hall take anything, the ruling said.

"Plaintiff claimed that she was slandered by Heavey in that he had, in effect, called her a thief in the presence of other people. She said she felt humiliated and hurt," the court said.

Nia H. Gill, a lawyer for Ms. Hall, said she was pleased with the ruling, even though it upheld the dismissal of claims of invasion of privacy and assault.

Yippies Stage Dallas Protest

DALLAS (AP) — Police won praise for their restraint during a two-hour rampage by protesters whose violent charge through downtown ended with 97 arrests as some bathed in a fountain near the site of the Republican National Convention.

The demonstration Wednesday organized by the Youth International Party — the "Yippies" group founded in the 1960s by anti-war activists Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin — resulted in the first mass arrests of the four-day convention, which ends today.

The protesters, some wearing "war paint," chanted obscenities, hurled paint, set off fireworks, spit on passers-by, ripped GOP signs, overturned newspaper vending racks, disrupted businesses and burned an American flag before taking a swim in a fountain near City Hall.

Officers made no attempt to stop the "War Chest Tour," a protest against President Reagan and companies with government contracts, until the demonstrators were cornered in City Hall plaza, near the convention site.

After encircling the group, officers arrested them one-by-one, two officers to a demonstrator.

"It's not like we wouldn't like to take action," police Cpl. C.W. Franklin Griffin said before the arrests, explaining that police waited for a suitable place for the mass arrest.

The protesters, many of whom cheered when the arrests began, were charged with disorderly conduct, a misdemeanor requiring a maximum bail of $200. Police said they believed they wanted to be arrested.

"They're not dummies. They were marching the wrong way down a one-way street and things of that nature," Deputy Chief William Newman said. "This group announced their intentions a month ago."

One Yippie, who said his name was Maroon and his occupation was "political agitator," said the demonstration was intended "to point out the war preparations of the Reagan administration."

American Civil Liberties Union monitor Kurt Albach of Dallas praised police for showing "more restraint than I ever have seen."

"This is not the kind of thing we condone," Albach said. "Burning the flag we don't condone. That's against the law. We condone free speech."

At the fashionable Neiman-Marcus department store, the group chanted "Eat the rich," and "Let's go shopping! Let's go shoplifting!"

The demonstration started with protesters chanting outside Dresser Industries and entering the lobby of the LTV Corp., a major defense contractor.

At RepublicBank Corp., the demonstrators staged an anti-nuclear "die-in," littered deposit slips in the lobby and splattered red paint on the floor.

"I wish they'd leave so we could get back to work," said Mike Schiff, a RepublicBank credit administrator. "This is incredible."

One protester, Jaydene Blount of Dallas, tried to clean up the paint, saying, "Our presence here is enough. I don't think this mess is necessary."

At the Sheraton-Dallas Hotel and adjoining Southland Life building, demonstrators kicked trash cans through the lobby, tore down a sign welcoming the Arizona GOP delegation and splattered more paint.

Moving to the downtown Neiman-Marcus store, the protesters beat on the windows, spit at people and ripped down decorative flags. They also stopped at Dallas Power & Light and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and spray-painted several office buildings along the way.

Demonstrations throughout the convention have attracted smaller crowds than expected, in part because of temperatures above 100 degrees, and police have avoided large-scale arrests.

Wednesday night, two groups of about 100 Iranians demonstrated for the third day against each other in a convention center parking lot designated for protests. A few blocks away, about 400 union workers staged a peaceful anti-Reagan rally.

A "Rock Against Reagan" concert drew only a lone listener to the parking lot.

U.S. Trying To Set Up Meet Between Reagan, Gromyko

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is trying to set up a meeting next month between President Reagan and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, but so far the Kremlin appears to be uninterested, according to an administration official.

The meeting would be held in New York where Reagan and Gromyko are expected to make speeches at the United Nations General Assembly session.

"I haven't seen any evidence the Russians have decided Gromyko is going to meet with the president," the official said Wednesday. Declining to be identified, he indicated efforts to arrange a meeting would continue.

Gromyko, a veteran diplomat, apparently is at the height of his powers under Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko. He may even be the dominant voice in the Kremlin on foreign policy, including relations with the United States.

Coming about six weeks before the election, a meeting could cast Reagan in a conciliatory light. It also might take some of the steam out of Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale's charge that Reagan has not tried hard enough to negotiate with the Soviet Union.

But for the Soviets there are potential risks of embarrassment. Reagan probably will condemn Kremlin policies in his U.N. speech. Also, the Soviets have been sharply critical of his views and bristled at the accusation their government is an "evil empire."

Reagan has ruled out a summit meeting with Chernenko unless arrangements can be made beforehand to guarantee success. Mondale, on the other hand, has proposed annual meetings with the Soviet leader as a means of reducing tensions and narrowing differences between the superpowers.

The last president not to have met with the head of the Soviet Union while in office is Herbert Hoover, more than 50 years ago.

U.S. relations with the Soviets are currently at a low ebb. Negotiations to reduce nuclear weapons were suspended nearly nine months ago and there is no indication a resumption is imminent.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz met in January with Gromyko in Stockholm, Sweden, while they attended a European security conference. Shultz said afterward he had made no headway in trying to reopen the arms control talks.

Bomb In Street Vendor's Cart Kills 18 In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A bomb planted in a fruit juice vendor's cart exploded during rush hour this morning in a crowded street near the central railway station, killing at least 18 people and wounding more than 300, according to official reports.

Tehran radio said the bomb contained 55 pounds of explosives and claimed, without elaboration, that it was planted by "U.S. agents."

The blast left a six-foot-deep crater in the ground and felled pedestrians in the street, which is just off a spacious square facing the railway station. Scores of people were wounded by shards of broken glass that crashed to the ground from windows in buildings within 100 yards of the square.

The dead included two children and eight women, Police Chief Col. Abbas Moazzami told the official Islamic Republic News Agency. Out of the more than 300 injured, eight were in critical condition, he said.

About 50 people were released after first aid treatment, the police chief said.

IRNA said ambulances still were picking up casualties and rushing them to the hospital more than an hour after the bomb exploded at 8:50 a.m. Thousands of Iranians were in the square when the bomb went off.

The blast heavily damaged the facade of a nearby two-story building. IRNA said 11 vehicles were smashed and 20 shops were wrecked by the explosion.

It was believed to be the first major bomb explosion in Tehran in more than a year.

A series of bombings and assassinations by the Mujahedeen Khalk, an outlawed Marxist organization, killed scores of people, including top government leaders, in 1981 and 1982.

But the fundamentalist regime of Iran's supreme political and religious leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, cracked down hard on such groups.

Mujahedeen Khalk leaders who escaped to France claim the Iranian government has executed more than 20,000 opponents and jailed more than 100,000 people in the last three years.

In Paris, the People's Mujahedeen Organization, a principal anti-Khomeini Iranian-exile group, condemned the bombing and said it was the work either of Iranian government agents or remnants of the deposed shah's secret police.

"The People's Mujahedeen Organization of Iran has declared on many occasions in the past and reiterates again that it strongly and vehemently condemns such crimes no matter where and by whom they are perpetrated," a statement issued by the group said.

"The perpetrators of such acts are either the regime's agents, doing so in a bid to cover up their inhuman crimes and their numerous deadlocks, especially in the Iran-Iraq war, or remnants of the shah's hated secret police, Savak," the statement said.

Former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told Radio Monte Carlo that he believed the bomb was the work of hardliners within the Iranian power structure.

"My hypothesis is that it is hardliners who have lost the support of Khomeini and who are trying by this type of action to maintain their power," said Bani-Sadr, who fled Iran in 1981 and lives outside Paris. "There is now in Iran a war for power. Until now Khomeini had always supported the hardliners."

The People's Mujahedeen, headed by Massoud Rajavi, is an outgrowth of the Mujahedeen Kalk, which for years fought against the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and was thought responsible for bombing attacks in the first years of Khomeini's revolution.

The shah was toppled in early 1979 and died in exile.

Film Shows 'Haggard' Sakharov

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov appears "haggard" and aged in a hidden-camera videotape being broadcast nationwide tonight, but his stepdaughter thanked the Soviet Union for the apparent evidence that her parents are still alive.

ABC News showed still photographs Wednesday from an 18-minute videotape of Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, in Gorky that were supposedly taken "within the last month."

The network said it got the tape from a West German newspaper, but there were indications that it originated with the Soviet government.

In an interview on ABC's "Nightline" early today, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the Soviets may be releasing the tape on an "unattributable basis" to quiet Western protests about the Sakharovs and set the stage for a September "peace offensive."

ABC plans to broadcast the footage, including sound from Sakharov, on its "World News Tonight" this evening, said "Nightline" anchor Ted Koppel.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today in a carryover of selling from late in Wednesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.86 to 1,227.92 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's dramatic mid-summer rally has slowed lately amid some revived worries that economic expansion is proceeding at a too rapid, and therefore unsustainable, pace.

On Wednesday the government reported a greater-than-expected 2.2 percent rise in new orders for durable goods last month.

The news prompted a decline in bond prices, and a rise in long-term interest rates, in the credit markets.

Among today's early volume leaders, Texaco rose 1/8 to 35 3/4; American Telephone & Telegraph gained 1/8 to 19; NCR was unchanged at 26 1/2, and Southern California E on slipped 1/8 to 21 1/8.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 7.95 to 1,231.78.

But advances outpaced declines by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 116.05 million shares, against 128.14 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell 34 to 95.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.09 at 210.87.

Lee Is Speaker At VFW Session

Herb Lee, Republican candidate for the 1st Congressional District seat in the November election, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Greenville Veterans of Foreign Wars post recently.

Lee, who faces incumbent Democrat Walter Jones, attacked Jones' voting record, saying the present congressman, in recent years, "has not voted according to the needs, values and beliefs of the people in Eastern North Carolina."

Lee said Jones favors increased spending for domestic social programs rather than reduced taxes, and has been hostile to aid for anti-communist forces in Central America.

Lee expressed support for President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms, but added, "I am my own man."

Lee also voiced support for tax reforms, small businesses and economic development for Eastern North Carolina.

government out of the business of this kind of program," East said. "The deficit must be addressed at this level. Until Congress is willing to do that, we will have a deficit."

East, a member of the Armed Services Committee, said he also agrees with the president's proposed increase in defense spending.

"In 1960, 50 percent of the budget was spent on defense; today, less than 30 percent of the budget is spent on defense," East noted. "It is the prime responsibility of the national government to provide for the national defense."

"As Secretary of Defense (Caspar) Weinberger has said, we do face a severe threat militarily from the Soviet Union," East said. "The reality of the need for a strong national defense to me is clear in view of Soviet power and conduct today."

The senator said the three major components that allow the United States to maintain strategic competition with the Soviet Union are the MX missile, the Trident submarine and the B-1 bomber.

East also said an area of prime concern is Central and South America.

"I do not think that we can allow the Soviet Union, through Cuba and the Sandinistas, to take over South America. It would be disastrous ... It would be a threat to peace in this country."

"If El Salvador is taken, next will be Honduras, Guatemala ... the whole Caribbean basin would be an area of Soviet military dominance in our own hemisphere," he said. "We need to provide those very modest sums to help those people defend themselves against this menace."

Indians Not Waiting Till Next Year

By DICK BRINSTER

AP Sports Writer

These are the dog days of August when baseball teams hopelessly out of contention are supposed to be looking forward to next year.

Normally, the Cleveland Indians, 26½ games behind pacesetter Detroit in the American League East, would fit that description. Instead, Manager Pat Corrales is being pressed for answers to one one burning question — What has happened to the Indians?

"We've got a whole new team now and it's just starting to play together," Corrales said Wednesday night after the Tribe banged out 20 hits to bury the Toronto Blue Jays 13-3 for its eighth straight victory. "As a club we're hitting the ball and we're hot."

Corrales said the Indians improved themselves in a June 13 deal with the Chicago Cubs in which they acquired outfielders Mel Hall and Joe Carter and pitchers Don Schulze and Darryl Banks in exchange for pitchers Rick Sutcliffe and George Frazier.

"We're trying to improve the club, do what the Blue Jays did three or four years ago," said Corrales. "But I don't like to get overconfident, beating up on somebody at the moment. The tables can turn real quick."

And the Indians, fifth in the East, haven't abandoned the idea of moving up in the race.

"Don't count Boston, New York or Baltimore out of our reach. We've got a good shot to end up in fourth place," said first-year Indian Brett Butler, who keyed the latest assault with four hits and two runs batted in.

"Tonight everybody hit the ball well," said Butler. "My Mommy told me there would be days like this."

Elsewhere, Kansas City beat Boston 6-2, Detroit shelled Oakland 11-4, Baltimore blanked Seattle 4-0, California nipped New York 2-1, Texas took Chicago 3-1, and Minnesota swept Milwaukee, winning the first game 5-2 and then the nightcap 4-3.

Cleveland's victory was its fifth straight over Toronto, including a 16-1 rout last Wednesday in Cleveland.

The game was effectively over before starter Bert Blyleven, 14-5, walked to the mound in the first inning because the Indians sent 13 batters to the plate and scored seven of them. They collected seven hits, including a two-run single by George Vukovich.

Twins 5-4, Brewers 2-3
Mike Smithson, 13-9, fired a six-hitter and Kirby Puckett doubled, tripled and drove in two runs for Minnesota in the first game. Mickey Hatcher's run-scoring single off reliever Tom Tellmann in the eighth inning of the nightcap gave the Twins the sweep.

The Twins, who lead the AL West by 5½ games, took a 2-1 lead against Mike Caldwell, 6-11, in the third inning of the opener. Tom Brunansky's 26th homer and a two-run double by Puckett in the seventh made it comfortable for Smithson.

Ben Oglivie and Cecil Cooper each hit his eighth homer to account for Milwaukee's runs.

Kent Hrbek gave the Twins a 1-0 lead in the second inning of the nightcap with his 21st homer. Ron Davis picked up his 25th save in relief of Rick Lysander, 3-1, who had replaced starter Ken Schrom.

Dion James hit the first homer of his career and Bill Schroeder his eighth of the season for Milwaukee.

Tigers 11, A's 4

Marty Castillo drove in three runs with a single and a two-run triple. Juan Berenguer pitched seven innings of five-hit ball and Oakland committed three costly errors as Detroit swept the three-game series.

Berenguer, 7-8, was the beneficiary of the hot Detroit attack, which outscored the A's 37-10 in the series.

Dave Kingman hit his 31st homer and Dwayne Murphy his 26th homer for Oakland.

Among the Oakland miscues was a seventh-inning RBI single by Allen Trammell, which fell among shortstop Donnie Hill, left fielder Rickey Henderson and center fielder Murphy.

Oakland's Carney Lansford went hitless in five at-bats, snapping his hitting streak at 24 games.

Orioles 4, Mariners 0

Scott McGregor scattered nine hits and picked off three baserunners — two from second base — and Wayne Gross keyed the Baltimore attack with a two-run homer.

McGregor, 15-11, allowed just two extra-base hits in pitching his third shutout of the season. Mike Moore, 5-13, took the loss despite allowing only six hits in 7 2-3 innings. The big one was Gross' 17th home run in the fourth inning.

Cal Ripken snapped a 10-game streak without an RBI.

Royals 6, Red Sox 2

Willie Wilson had four consecutive hits and scored three times. Lynn Jones drove in three runs and Darryl Motley belted a two-run homer to lead Kansas City, which shelled Boston starter Bruce Hurst, 11-8, for five runs in the first two innings.

Reliever Joe Beckwith, 7-3, allowed only one hit and struck out five over three innings to earn the victory.

Tony Armas and Bill Buckner drove in the Boston runs.

Kansas City's Steve Balboni struck out four straight times, extending his consecutive string to nine. Only four players, all pitchers, have struck out in 10 or more consecutive plate appearances.

Angels 2, Yankees 1

Bobby Grich homered and doubled to drive in both California runs as the Angels broke a seven-game losing streak.

Until Grich cracked his 13th home run of the season into the right-center field seats at Yankee Stadium in the sixth inning, New York's Ray Fontenot, 6-8, was sailing along with a two-hitter.

Jim Slaton, 5-6, allowed seven hits, struck out five and walked one in seven innings before giving way to Don Aase, who gained his third save.

The Yankees, who had scored 33 runs in their previous four games, scored their only run in the eighth inning on a double-play grounder by Dave Winfield.

Rangers 3, White Sox 1

Mickey Rivers homered, added two singles, knocked in two runs and scored twice to back the strong pitching of Danny Darwin.

Darwin, 7-9, retired 14 consecutive batters in one stretch. He gave up just two hits before developing a blister. Dave Schmidt pitched 1 2-3 innings for his 10th save, striking out three batters.

Rivers' solo homer in the first inning, his fourth this season, came off LaMarr Hoyt, who fell to 14-10.

Greg Walker's run-scoring single accounted for the only Chicago run.

Double Play At Plate

Juan Beniquez of the California Angels is out at home plate on a tag by the New York Yankees' Butch Wynegar to complete a double play in the eighth inning Wednesday at Yankee Stadium. Dick Schofield lofted a soft fly that Don Mattingly managed to catch at first base with his back to the play, turning to throw out Beniquez. (AP Laserphoto)

Groh Glad Harris Finally Picked Old Gold & Black

By RICK SCOPPE

Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest coach Al Groh wanted Jamie Harris from the start. Harris liked Wake Forest but wanted something else — the prestige that comes with being a quarterback at a major football power.

So, Harris chose Georgia. But following spring practice in 1983, Harris decided one year at Georgia was enough and called Groh back to ask if he was still interested. Groh was.

It was not long before Harris waved goodbye to his nightmare at Georgia and hello to a new set of dreams at Wake Forest.

"It felt like a football factory," Harris said.

The football players "run the place down there," Harris said. "I felt like a number. That's the big difference between a big school like that and a school like Wake Forest."

Harris, who's battling junior Foy White for the starting quarterback job, said there's "no comparison at all" between playing the position at Wake Forest and Georgia.

"It's like playing football and baseball," Harris told reporters during the first stop on the Atlantic Coast Conference preseason football tour on Monday. "Here, it's a lot more responsibility. You've got to read, you've got keys, you've got blitzes, you've got blitz control, you've got to know everything and know everybody's job."

"At Georgia, it was swing to the right and pitch it and bootleg to the backside. That's it," he said. "The passing game wasn't sophisticated. They did what they had to do to get the ball down the field down there."

Harris said he told Georgia head coach Vince Dooley after spring drills a year ago he was thinking about leaving.

"I don't feel like it was a big mistake (signing with Georgia)," Harris said. "I didn't perform like I knew I could and I guess the first impression stuck with most of the coaches. I just felt like I wasn't getting a good shot at playing."

So, he called Groh back.

Groh said he told Harris he would "certainly be interested" in talking with him about transferring to Wake Forest.

But Groh did not immediately tell Harris he would take him.

"I like to find out the reason why people make changes in life," Groh explained.

"I think the track record (for successful) transfers is not usually very good because most players want to change their circumstances, but they don't want to change themselves," he said. "As a result, the same situation often reoccurs."

But Harris told Groh what he wanted to hear.

"He simply said, 'Coach, if I had done a better job things might have worked out,'" Groh said. "In other words, he took full responsibility for it."

"I feel it was a situation where expectations of him from so many people were such that it was next to impossible for him to meet those expectations that first year," Groh said.

Harris agreed, saying he was never really comfortable at Georgia.

"It was a matter of me going downhill once I got there, losing all my confidence. I'd have a bad practice and it would ruin my whole week," Harris said. "I know if I would have stayed down there, I would never have regained my confidence."

Harris said he's regained most of his confidence thanks to the transfer and his performance in his battle to replace former Wake Forest quarterback Gary Schofield, who threw for more than 2,200 yards last season.

ECU Offense Shows Some Improvement

East Carolina University's offense proved a little more spunkier last night in a control scrimmage, but the football coaching staff still wasn't pleased with the overall game.

Last Saturday, the offense was completely dominated by the defense, but Wednesday night the offense was able to move the ball a little better. Tailback Jimmy Walden raced 65 yards on one touchdown run, while quarterback Robbie Bartlett romped in from 65 yards out.

Bartlett finished the workout with 105 yards on seven carries, while Bobby Clair, a transfer from Northeastern Oklahoma Junior College had 53 yards on seven lugs.

Offensive coordinator Don Murray said he still is not pleased with the passing game. "They (the three quarterbacks, Bartlett, Ron Jones and Darrell Speed) are all excellent runners and good throwers, but right now they don't have their rhythm down and are not throwing with the aggressiveness they need to have."

The only bright spot in the passing game was an eight yard touchdown pass from Jones to Amos Adams.

The kicking game looked good in its time on the field, with both placekicker Jeff Heath and punter Jeff Bolch having a good night.

The Pirates will hold their final pre-season scrimmage on Saturday at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Coach Ed Emory, rallying the team before the opening game at Florida State a week from Saturday, told the group. "The first two times we played Florida State, they embarrassed us. Last year, we had a better team and still lost. So we've got to be hungry. We owe ourselves at least one victory in that state. (The Pirates are 0-7 in the state of Florida.)"

USFL Sets Course To Battle NFL

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States Football League has decided to go head-to-head with the National Football League in direct competition for fans and television audiences.

The switch from a spring-summer schedule, to begin in 1986, will put the 2-year-old league's existence on the line, though there is some opinion that the eventual aim of the move could be a merger or an absorption of at least part of the newer league with the NFL.

Twice before, new leagues have challenged the established NFL head-to-head, with mixed results. After years of struggle, the American Football League reached a merger agreement with the NFL in 1966, but the World Football League died a fiscal disaster after two years of life in 1974-75.

A more immediate result of Wednesday's decision could be that the 18-team USFL, which will stay with its spring-summer schedule next year, likely will shrink, "possibly to 14 teams in the very near future," said Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals.

Failing franchises have prompted rumors of mergers within the league, the most prominent involving the Oklahoma Outlaws and the Oakland Invaders. Several other USFL franchises — Pittsburgh, Memphis, San Antonio and Los Angeles — also are considered likely candidates for mergers.

Still, Chicago Blitz owner Eddie Einhorn said a fall season "is where the football money is. You either cut back, or you go after the football pot that's out there in the fall."

The first effect of the league's decision was the announcement that the Philadelphia Stars will move to Baltimore in 1986 rather than compete against the NFL's Eagles and baseball's Philadelphia Phillies for use of Veterans Stadium.

players and a more exciting brand of football."

Not everyone was as optimistic about the USFL's future.

Michael McCaskey, president of the NFL's Chicago Bears, for example, said he didn't expect the USFL to survive and called the move one "borne of a certain amount of desperation."

"I think they'll have a tough time with" a fall schedule, he said. "I think this is something they have to either live or die on their own, and it's tough to think of them having a very strong, long-term future."

McCaskey said the move would mean "wall-to-wall football" on fall television and would "dilute interest" in all football.

And one of the USFL's top stars, Jim Kelly, called the schedule switch "100 percent" wrong.

"It's the worst thing they could have done," said Kelly, the Houston Gamblers' quarterback and the USFL's Most Valuable Player as a rookie this season. "But it's up to the major owners. They pay us, so we'll play when they say."

Formal approval of that move was expected today as USFL team owners wrap up a two-day meeting during which they also were to consider such issues as new team markets and mergers.

"The teams that will be left will be stronger," Trump said. "They'll have more income. They'll be in markets we choose. We're in some places the NFL is not, and we have more options."

One question raised by the change is the 14-month delay between the end of the 1985 spring season and the 1986 fall schedule. Simmons said he didn't know if the USFL would lose fans during this time span but said he "absolutely" thought the benefits of the switch would outweigh any disadvantages.

Like most other USFL owners Wednesday, Tannenbaum said he was confident the new league could hold its own against the NFL in any competitive market by the 1986 season.

USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons, who announced the league's unanimous decision, told reporters he thought the NFL "really hoped we'd stay in the spring and slowly drip away." But the decision, he said, reflected a great "amount of belief in this product, a belief in this league."

Also left in doubt was the fate of the league's television deal with ABC, which carried USFL games in both of the league's first two seasons.

"The USFL is ready, willing and able to compete for the attention of (stadium) fans ... and television viewers," he said. "We are prepared to compete aggressively for the best available college and pro talent."

And Trump said: "The real big play is for 1987. That's when the network contracts with the NFL end. The NFL will be asking billions and we will be in that bidding with better the veteran players will have to help the younger ones learn their assignments," said linebacker Eric Wilson, the other co-captain. "We'll have to pick up the slack."

The Terps have 34 lettermen back, including placekicker Jess Atkinson, whose string of successful extra points has reached 79 in a row; Rick Badanjek, a fullback with 18 career touchdowns, and wide receiver Greg Hill, who caught 27 passes for 570 yards and seven TDs last season.

Ross Unable To Gauge Terps

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — According to the turnstile count and the stop watches, the improvement in Maryland's football program is easily verifiable under Coach Bobby Ross.

From the outset, Ross set out to build a program that would have the Terps consistently ranked among the top 10 to 15 teams, and annually be considered a genuine contender for the national championship.

Ross said at a news conference Wednesday that he is unable to gauge where the Terps stand nationally.

But in order to reach the stated heights, he said, "you have to play a pretty good schedule."

Home attendance has increased by more than 15,000 fans a game since Ross took over two years ago, and recruiting has upgraded the team speed markedly.

The Terps posted 8-3 regular season records in each of their first two seasons under Ross, winning 10 of 11 Atlantic Coast Conference games, and lost two narrow decisions in bowl games.

That's exactly what the Terps face this season, playing six ACC opponents, including Clemson and North Carolina, plus such nonconference foes as Syracuse, West Virginia, Penn State and defending national champion Miami.

But how the Terps fare in reaching the ultimate goal set by Ross is still open to question.

Because of question marks surrounding the 1984 team, however,

Gooden Passes 200 Strikeouts

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

Dwight Gooden has yet to rewrite the record book, but he's already started on the dictionary.

starts. Gooden lowered his ERA to 3.02 and improved his record to 12-8.

Descriptions have become repetitive and a comparison is obvious. Terry Kennedy, whose two strikeouts Wednesday qualify him as an expert of sorts on Gooden, said: "He's similar to Nolan Ryan. The ball looks hittable until it's 20 feet away, then it explodes."

third record. It put the Padres' total attendance this season at 1,680,234 — already the highest in their history.

Cardinals 6, Reds 3

Joaquin Andujar gained his 17th victory, tops in the major leagues, and Bruce Sutter got the last out for his league-leading 34th save.

Aside from being a walking definition of "promise" and "potential," the youngest player in the major leagues has drawn raves that test the language's supply of superlatives.

Gooden's numbers Wednesday — two runs allowed and nine strikeouts in the New York Mets' 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres — were not stunning in themselves.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis downed Cincinnati 6-3. Houston stopped Chicago 8-3. Montreal defeated Los Angeles 5-3 in 11 innings. San Francisco outscored Philadelphia 7-5, and Pittsburgh bopped Atlanta 7-2.

Nettles' homer was the night's second record. In the last six games that Nettles has played he has homered.

The Cardinals jumped on Mario Soto, 13-5, for two runs in the first and four in the third. Mike Jorgensen hit a three-run homer and Terry Pendleton added a two-run shot.

"He (Soto) must have been hurting. He usually sets you up with fastballs but he was throwing a lot of changeups," said Tommy Herr, who had two hits.

But — Gooden allowed the two runs on Graig Nettles' homer, one of only three Padre hits in the game.

But — with the nine strikeouts, the 19-year-old Gooden became only the 11th rookie in baseball history to fan 200 batters. He ran his season total to 202, tops in baseball. He is 43 away from Herb Score's rookie record of 245 strikeouts.

Nettles' homer was the night's second record. In the last six games that Nettles has played he has homered.

Nettles, who turned 40 on Monday, has hit seven homers in those six games to tie a National League record also held by George Kelly, Walker Cooper and Willie Mays.

Ron Oester singled to extend his hitting streak to 21 games.

Pendleton's homer was his first in the major leagues. Cardinals officials were unable to persuade an unidentified man who caught the ball in left field to give up the ball. He also turned down $100 for it.

And, to top it off, Gooden did not issue a walk. His strikeout-to-walk ratio this year is a truly startling 202-62.

"You don't have to be a baseball genius to figure out he's a pretty good pitcher," said Gooden's manager, Dave Johnson.

The Mets rallied for three runs in the sixth inning. Keith Hernandez singled off Andy Hawkins, 7-6, and moved to third on Darryl Strawberry's double. Both runners scored when George Foster doubled. Rafael Santana lined a two-out single that scored Foster.

The Mets added an unearned run in the seventh. Gooden reached base on second baseman Alan Wiggins' fielding error and advanced to second on a sacrifice.

"Unbelievable," Pendleton said.

Astros 8, Cubs 3

Jose Cruz's grand slam in Houston's seven-run second inning and Nolan Ryan's five-hitter powered the Astros as they snapped Chicago's four-game winning streak.

When he tried to advance to third on a grounder to shortstop, Gooden instead came around to score as Garry Templeton's throw sailed into the dugout.

Gooden scored again on Hernandez's ninth-inning sacrifice fly.

Slowly Healing Muldowney Says She's Run Her Last Race

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Shirley Muldowney says drag racing helped her get to know herself, and now she knows her career is probably over.

"I didn't know where I was going when I was young," said Muldowney, 44, the only driver to win the National Hot Rod Association's top fuel world championship three times. "I had a little bit of a hard time getting to know myself, but racing helped that."

Currently hospitalized in Detroit, Muldowney is recovering from critical injuries received June 29 in a drag race outside Montreal.

Muldowney suffered a severed right thumb, a fractured pelvis, three fractures between the ankle and knee of the right leg, a compound fracture of her right ankle, a compound fracture of her left ankle, torn cartilage in her left knee, two broken fingers on her right hand and neck injuries.

Her physicians will give no estimates on the time she'll have to be hospitalized. There still are many muscle grafts, bone grafts and skin grafts to be done.

In an interview with Wayne Fuson, sports editor of The Indianapolis News, Muldowney said she probably has run her last race.

"Certainly I feel a lot better than I did. I do know that I have a lot of hard work ahead of me — just to be able to live a normal life," said Muldowney, who won the top fuel world championship for the first time in 1977 and repeated in 1980 and 1982.

She also won the U.S. National championship at Indianapolis Raceway Park in 1982. Overall, she has won 17 top fuel events — second only to Don Garlits, who won his first national title 10 years before Muldowney was licensed to drive a top fueler.

Racing has always been financially rewarding for her but her medical bills already have climbed to more than $100,000 since her accident and they're expected to be five times greater before her recovery is complete.

Pioneer, which has been her racing sponsor, has started a "Don't Forget Shirley" fund to be used to help pay her medical expenses.

The veteran driver had a tough fight to survive after the accident, which ripped her car apart like it was a fragile toy. Officials described the accident as a fluke, saying a front tire, similar to a bicycle tire, blew and the inerture came out of the casing, winding around the front wheels.

For weeks, Muldowney was in a Canadian hospital battling for her life. A couple of weeks ago she was transferred closer to her home in Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Even though it almost took her life, racing has been kind to her, Muldowney says.

"It has done marvelous things for me if you consider that I was a kid with a lack of supervision and a lack of education," she said. "It gave me a lot of nice things and took me to a lot of nice places. I've made a lot of wonderful friends and had a lot of fun."

Now her plans are centered around marrying Kahn Tobler, her crew chief for eight years, on or before next Valentine's Day.

"I'm going to start thinking what is most important right now," she continued and mentioned Tobler.

"He stuck with me through thick and thin in a lot of things. He did take me to three world championships."

The marriage, she said, "will represent a change in my life — a change for the better. It's something which will make me very happy and now I will have someone to go home to, someone I'm very proud of. He is someone who really has been in my corner."

Swimming Takes Center Stage In Soviet Games

MOSCOW (AP) — Swimming is taking center stage again as the Soviet Union hopes to narrow the lead East Germany has taken in the Friendship '84 Games.

Three-time Olympic gold medalist Vladimir Salnikov was to get his first competition Thursday in the men's 400-meter freestyle, the event in which he holds the world record of 3 minutes, 48.32 seconds.

Of the 14 swimming events contested so far, East Germany has won eight and the Soviet Union has won six. Rowing and basketball were also on today's schedule.

The competition at the Olympic cycling oval concluded Wednesday with a world record by East Germany's Lutz Heschlich in the 200-meter flying start race.

Heschlich, the 1980 Olympic sprint gold medalist and two-time world champion, clocked 10.021 and beat the previous record held by his Soviet rival, Sergei Kopylov with 10.249.

It was the sixth world record set on the cycling track during the two-week games and the second of two successes Wednesday for Heschlich over his renowned Soviet challenger, who won the 1,000-meter time trials on Saturday.

In the final of the sprint competition, Heschlich won 2-0 but only after forcing two restarts in the opening race when he fell from the track.

The final of the 4,000-meter team pursuit race ended in mystery when the Soviet quartet suddenly quit after one of its riders was forced to retire.

Less than one lap into the final against East Germany, Valery Movchan appeared to lose control and rode off the track. Instead of continuing with the permitted minimum three riders, the Soviet team just gave up amid whistles from the normally partisan home crowd.

The 50-kilometer individual points race went to Hungarian Miklos Somodi, who scored 81 points and held a two-lap advantage over Martin Penc of Czechoslovakia, who placed second with 77 points.

In the field hockey competition, there was a major upset in the last round of round-robin matches when Poland defeated the Soviet second team 1-0.

The Soviet "B" squad was expected to make the final against the host nation's first string, but they will now clash in the semifinals on Friday. The Soviet first team continued its relentless path by crushing Finland 7-0 and has now scored 28 goals and allowed only one in three matches.

In the other semifinal, Zimbabwe will meet East Germany. The African team made sure of its place in the final four by hammering Afghanistan 11-0 after leading by six goals at halftime. Skipper Desmond Van Jarsveldt scored six.

The basketball competition began with the host nation's crushing 115-64 defeat of Hungary.

The other group "B" match saw Poland thrash Czechoslovakia 119-42, while in Group "A" Sweden trounced Algeria 114-48.

Burroughs Wellcome Settles Suit Over Sale Of Pills

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A North Carolina company has agreed to pay $235,000 for selling California pharmacies millions of codeine pills that were later sold on the streets.

U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello said Wednesday that Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Raleigh, N.C., agreed to pay the penalty to settle a government suit that originally asked for a $900,000 penalty. The settlement declares that the company is not admitting any wrongdoing.

Russoniello said it was the stiffest penalty ever imposed on a manufacturer for excessive drug sales.

The suit alleged that Burroughs Wellcome sold 16.7 million codeine pills to 10 pharmacies in Los Angeles, San Diego and Oakland without notifying the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, as required by law.

The pills were sold as APC-4, Empirin-4 and Empirin Compound-4 between January 1979 and July 1982, according to the suit filed last September. State drug officials have found that those drugs are mixed with Doriden, a sleeping pill, and sold on the street as "four doors" or "loads," Russoniello said.

The Drug Enforcement Administration has estimated that the pills sold had a street value of between $1 and $2 each, so that the amount allegedly sold was worth between $16 million and $32 million in street sales.

Two pharmacies, West Adams Drugs and Viscount Rexall Drugs, both of Los Angeles, have had their state licenses revoked, Russoniello said.

He said that from January through March 1982, each of those pharmacies bought from one to 1½ times as much APC-4 and Empirin-4 as the entire 131-store Thrifty Drug chain in Southern California.

The government quoted police as saying pharmacies that bought large amounts of pills would sell them to people who made illegal resales on the street.

In addition to the $235,000 penalty, Burroughs Wellcome says it has spent at least $375,000 on a system to discover and report to the DEA suspicious drug orders, Russoniello said.

Delegates Back Reagan But Look Ahead To 1988

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — North Carolina delegates gave Ronald Reagan a red, white and blue vote of support for the presidential nomination but many are thinking of 1988 and looking for a successor.

State GOP chairman Dave Flaherty was waving an American flag and dancing in the aisles at the Republican National Convention when Reagan was nominated for re-election Wednesday night.

Others waved homemade signs saying, "N.C. Wants Reagan and Bush" and "N.C. and Reagan." Some held elephant-shaped balloons.

Sen. Jesse Helms announced that the state cast 53 votes for "the husbands of Nancy Reagan and Barbara Bush" although Missouri already had pushed Reagan past the 1,118 votes needed for nomination. Helms said the state was one of the first to stand with Reagan.

Flaherty introduced Helms to the crowd, calling him "the conscience of the Senate."

Earlier in the day, delegates turned their attention to the already crowded field of candidates wanting to take Reagan's place in 1988. A straw poll of the 106 delegates and alternates at a Wednesday morning caucus showed 38 percent support New York Rep. Jack Kemp and 33 percent favor Vice President George Bush.

A telephone survey of the 53 delegates conducted Aug. 6-10 by The Associated Press also showed Kemp and Bush running neck and neck. At that time, 15 delegates supported Kemp and 15 supported Bush. There were 10 delegates with no preference and eight delegates who supported Helms and eight who favored Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker.

Former congressman Eugene Johnston, a delegate from Greensboro and manager of the Reagan-Bush N.C. campaign, is supporting Bush for president in 1988.

"Bush has been a great Reagan and party loyalist," he said.

Flaherty supports Kemp for many of the same reasons. "He is the one man who's done more for our state any time that we've needed him," Flaherty said.

Richard Bishop of Fayetteville, a delegate and retired military man, said he supports Kemp because he has been willing to come help local parties raise money.

In the AP survey, only eight of the 53 delegates said the GOP should not consider a woman for vice president in 1988. Some of the most frequently mentioned vice presidential contenders were United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, a registered Democrat, and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, a native of Salisbury, N.C.

Mrs. Dole and her husband, Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, visited the N.C. delegation on the floor Wednesday night. She said she had come to see hometown friends, not to campaign.

Trooper Dismissed

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year veteran of the North Carolina Highway Patrol and a secretary were fired Tuesday from a western North Carolina troop division, officials say.

First Sgt. B.E. Edwards, a trooper, and Linda Summerlin, secretary of the Hudson district office received orders for dismissal, according to Capt. C.W. Sutton, commander of Troop F.

The reasons for the dismissal were not disclosed. Sutton cited the state Personnel Act, which does not allow information from personnel files to be divulged without the consent of the parties involved.

Neither Edwards nor Mrs. Summerlin, both of Caldwell County, could be reached for comment.

The firings are the second and third in the Caldwell County division. Trooper R.D. Pressley of Hudson was dismissed in May after a patrol hearing into alleged sexual misconduct, allegations which were filed in complaints by three Caldwell County women. Pressley is appealing his case to the State Personnel Commission.

Russ Edmonston, director of public affairs for the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said the latest firings were the result of a patrol internal investigation. He also declined to reveal the reasons.

Edwards, 45, joined the patrol in Oct. 1963. He was assigned to Troop F. and was supervisor of the patrol's activities in Caldwell and Watauga counties.

Mrs. Summerlin, 41, was employed as secretary for 11 years.

Barfield Decision Could Affect Hunt

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt will upset some people regardless of how he responds to murderer Velma Margie Barfield's request for executive clemency, but his U.S. Senate campaign probably won't be affected unless he commutes her death sentence, political insiders say.

Superior Court Judge Giles Clark scheduled Mrs. Barfield's execution for Nov. 2 in a hearing Wednesday. That's just four days before the election, in which Hunt is challenging Republican U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms.

Mrs. Barfield's attorneys have notified Hunt's legal counsel that they will ask the governor to reduce her sentence to life imprisonment.

Hunt issued a brief statement saying he would "give thoughtful and careful consideration" to the case and "make a prompt decision" after meeting with advocates on both sides.

Spokesman Will Marshall said the matter wasn't receiving much attention at Hunt's campaign headquarters.

"The governor is just going to do what he thinks is right regardless of the political consequences," said Marshall. "There's really nothing for us to kick around. This is not a political decision."

Helms, interviewed at the Republican National Convention in Dallas, said, "That's the last thing that ought to be in politics." He declined further comment.

Hunt and his aides repeatedly have insisted that politics would not affect his decision. Nevertheless, several of his key backers privately expressed dismay over the execution date and acknowledged that it could cause problems.

"I certainly do think it could make a difference, especially when the race is so close and the loss of a few votes could have a big effect," said one Democrat who asked not to be identified.

However, most Democrats and Republicans interviewed Wednesday said they didn't expect Hunt to sustain politically fatal damage unless he commutes Mrs. Barfield's sentence — which no one considered likely since Hunt is a death penalty supporter and earlier this year refused to halt the execution of James W. Hutchins.

State Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, one of the General Assembly's leading capital punishment supporters, said for Hunt to commute Mrs. Barfield's sentence would enrage the 70 percent of North Carolinians he said favor the death penalty.

"I really don't have any plans to run," she said, although she quickly added that vice president is not a job for which anyone would campaign. "At this time I'm just enjoying the challenge of being secretary of Transportation."

When asked what he thinks of a Dole-Dole ticket, the Kansas senator said, "You could do a lot worse."

"Let's get Reagan re-elected first," Dole said. "We need to keep the Senate seat in North Carolina and pick up the governor's office."

Jim Martin, 9th District congressman and GOP candidate for governor, gave the delegation an update on his campaign at the Wednesday morning caucus.

He had the delegation laughing with a string of one-liners about Democratic opponent, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. Martin, who said he did not serve as a delegate to give him more time to campaign, was in town for one day. He said Edmisten is telling him he doesn't want to debate because he doesn't want to carry Martin around the state in his pickup truck to help Martin get more statewide name recognition.

"The reason he didn't want ... me on the back of his pickup truck is we might see he wasn't carrying a full load," Martin said.

Martin also had critical words for Edmisten's debate with unsuccessful Democratic opponent Eddie Knox.

Last Marines Return Home To Lejeune From Lebanon

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The last contingent of Marine combat troops to serve on peacekeeping duty in Lebanon arrived home today to a brass band and their commander said the duty was "a splendid exercise."

"It was a nice tour," said Col. Myron Harrington, commander of the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit, as some 1,800 fatigue-clad Marines, wearing helmets and carrying rifles, marched off three troop ships at the state port in Morehead City.

Maj. Gen. Alfred Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division and Camp Lejeune where the Marines are based, went aboard the USS Ponce to welcome the men home.

"We knew we had an extremely difficult and complicated task,"

Gray said.

The 24th MAU left Morehead City last February 18, participated in a NATO exercise in Norway in March and arrived off the coast of Lebanon on April 9 to relieve Marines from the 22nd MAU.

Harrington said an average of 106 Marines were on the ground in Beirut at any one time guarding the U.S. Embassy and that a total of 300 participated in that duty. The rest stayed on the ships.

The Marines left Beirut July 31, marking the last presence of American combat troops in the city since Marines entered almost two years earlier.

On Oct. 23, 1983, Marines from another Camp Lejeune unit were among the 241 killed when a terrorist bombed a barracks. Harrington said there were no injuries in his unit.

"There was a lot of activity," he said. "We had Marines subjected to spillover fire from fighting along the Green Line but there was no direct fire at the Marines. We never fired a shot in anger."

Harrington said Marines perceived a "tremendous dichotomy" in the war-torn city.

"On the one side we had the Marines with fortifications, fatigues and combat gear and so forth," he said. "On the other side of the barbed wire there were Lebanese in bathing suits. They usually gave us a five-minute warning before there was any firing."

The Marines were taken by bus to a reception at Camp Geiger, an installation near Camp Lejeune where returning Marines are reunited with their families.

Couple Dies In Wreck

ADDOR, N.C. (AP) — An elderly Pinebluff couple was killed Wednesday when a freight train traveling about 50 mph struck their van, dragging it 79 feet down the tracks and throwing the victims from the vehicle.

The Seaboard Railways train traveling through this small Moore County town consisted of three locomotives and 100 cars, Seaboard spokesman Ray Bullard said. He said the train was en route from Richmond, Va., to Hamlet.

State Highway Patrol Trooper Robert Harrell in Southern Pines said the driver of the van, John Nelson Dorsey Jr., 65, and his wife, Juanita, died after Dorsey failed to stop his van at the crossing at about 2:50 p.m.

Harrell said the Addor Road crossing has a sign, but no gate or warning lights.

The victims were dead at the scene, Harrell said.

"The engineer put the on emergency brakes but was not able to avoid the accident," Bullard said. He said Seaboard was investigating the accident.

Moore County Sheriff's dispatcher Tommy Harsell said the train was carrying merchandise, but no dangerous chemicals or flammable liquids.

Lenoir Jury Indicts 3 Kinston Residents

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Three Kinston residents have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges stemming from a three-year probe of illegal gambling in Lenoir County.

Lyman Perry Grant, Janice Grant and Randy Grant were named in an 18-count indictment returned Tuesday by a grand jury in Raleigh. The charges involve conspiracy, operation of an illegal gambling enterprise and firearms violations.

Lyman Grant, 59, was charged with conspiracy to violate gambling laws and aiding and abetting, conducting an illegal gambling business and 16 violations of firearms laws. Janice and Randy Grant each were charged with conspiracy to violate gambling laws and aiding and abetting and conducting an illegal gambling business.

The three are scheduled for arraignment Sept. 18 in New Bern.

Helicopter Pilot Draws Conviction

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Fort Bragg helicopter pilot who took part in the U.S. invasion of Grenada was convicted Wednesday by a military judge of smuggling Soviet-made automatic rifles from the island into the United States.

Capt. John E. Dorsz, 28, of the 82nd Airborne Division, was found guilty of conspiracy to commit larceny, larceny and conduct unbecoming an officer. He was found innocent of violating a lawful order. Four other charges of violating federal statutes were withdrawn.

Dorsz was scheduled for sentencing before a military judge, Col. Raymond McRorie at 9 a.m. Thursday.

Defense attorneys had argued that charges against the eight-year veteran should be dropped because he entered a federally sponsored amnesty program giving him immunity from prosecution.

Dorsz and two enlisted soldiers took the weapons from a warehouse in Grenada between late October and early November 1983 and smuggled them aboard a Blackhawk helicopter, military officials say.

He turned in his portion of the five weapons, three of the AK-47 automatic rifles, to a U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent last February.

Wake School Official Submits Resignation

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake County Schools Superintendent Walter Marks resigned Wednesday night in the wake of a school board investigation into the misuse of at least $490,000 in federal funds.

Marks resigned after a six-hour, closed-door session of the school board Wednesday. In a public meeting, the board unanimously voted to accept Marks' resignation.

In a news conference after the vote, school board Chairman Mary Gentry said Marks' involvement with the misused funds was "minimal" and that the board did not force him to resign.

Reading a statement from the board, Mrs. Gentry said, "The board, with reservations and considerable regret, has decided to accept Dr. Marks' resignation and to honor his desire that he be removed from the current controversies affecting the operation of the schools.

"The board is accepting the superintendent's resignation for the good of the system because both the board and Dr. Marks believe that, under the adverse conditions currently facing the school system, he can no longer be as effective in his position as both Dr. Marks and the board would desire."

The board named Deputy Superintendent Robert Bridges as acting superintendent to serve until June 30, 1985. Bridges, 50, assumed his new position today.

Marks will continue to receive his $72,000 annual salary through June 30, 1985, when his contract expires, said board member John H. Gilbert.

Marks left the board room immediately after the announcement and gave no indication of his plans.

Networks To Show Reagan Promotional Film

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Like the movie that snowballs into a box-office hit by word of mouth, the President Reagan promotional film will be carried in its entirety by at least two television networks tonight partially because the Democrats tried to ban it and bury it, but only ended up boosting it.
In a convention minus controversy and surprise, the networks' uncertainty about providing Reagan with 18 minutes of gravy has become a big issue. "Is that what we mean by Decision '84?" correspondent Roger Mudd asked anchor Tom Brokaw during a report about the film on the "NBC Nightly News."
NBC and the Cable News Network have said they will run the 18-minute cinematic tribute introducing Reagan to the Republican convention tonight. ABC said this morning that it won't show the film in its entirety.

CBS said it will make a decision later today.
Network executives who have seen what amounts to a highlight reel of the president's victories and virtues the past four years say it is slick, patriotic and movingly upbeat, the kind of sentimental soft sell that Madison Avenue uses to peddle colas and burgers.
The Reagan-Bush campaign's advertising arm, the Tuesday Team, produced the $425,000 film. One key player was Phil Dusenberry, whose ad agency created Pepsi-Cola's energetic commercials with Michael Jackson.
Normally, the networks treat these back-slapping political pictures as pure propaganda. Their attitude is, edit it down to 18 one-minute commercial spots and you can pay us to run them in prime time.

ABC, CBS and NBC showed no guilt over censoring Walter F. Mondale's flick last month in San Francisco — but there are added issues here, not the least of which is that the Democrats helped fan interest in the film.
"There's a certain irony in that they started it," said Lawrence Grossman, president of NBC News.
Earlier this month, the Democratic National Committee suggested that since the networks didn't find the Mondale movie newsworthy, Reagan's film should not be ready for prime time either. "What's sauce for the goose (should be) sauce for the gander," the DNC said in a letter.
The DNC sent another letter to the networks Tuesday, contending the film was still a "lavishly produced political commercial," even though it had attained celebrity status.

In explaining NBC's decision, Grossman alluded to the media attention. "In the end you make the decision that makes the most sense to the viewers you are serving," he said. "It's now a matter of general interest."
Grossman says viewers also will be served by NBC pointing out omissions from the film. While the Reagan-narrated biography dwells on the high spots, NBC will offer some journalistic balance. In addition, NBC White House correspondent Andrea Mitchell is preparing a four-minute piece on the making of the movie.
But for the viewer-voter, the film's lasting image will be the pictures, sound track and emotions tapped, not Brokaw's caveats.

The result is that the Democrats, so intent on keeping those beauty shots off the air, have lost a key round to the Republicans, whose strategy of using the film — and not a speaker — as the introduction to Reagan's acceptance speech was called "a master stroke" by NBC floor correspondent Ken Bode.
With the convention hall dark, the movie flickering and anticipation for Reagan surging, the Republicans have made it very hard for the networks to ignore the film. Interviews on the darkened floor are impossible, and in the anchor booth difficult.
What Republican is going to upstage the star of the movie and the GOP?
As Grossman said, "to have somebody talk about the film and not show it wouldn't make any sense."

Super Grit, Symphony Concert To Be Telecast

WASHINGTON, N.C. — WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington, will present the "Hoodswamp Symphony Ball," an hour special, at 8 p.m. Friday. The ball features the Super Grit Cowboy Band of the Hood Swamp community of Greene County, with headquarters in Greenville, in a joint performance with the North Carolina Symphony.

The concert was recorded live at Manteo's Waterside Theater July 15, during the opening days of ceremonies of America's 400th Anniversary.
Super Grit Cowboy Band member Mike Kinzie wrote the music and lyrics for the song, "The Legend of the Lost Colony," which has been adopted as the official celebration song for the three-year observance of America's 400th Anniversary.
The song is part of a larger work, "The Lost Colony Suite," composed by Kinzie. It is based on a combination of Renaissance and contemporary music.
Super Grit has previously performed with symphony orchestras. In addition to the North Carolina Symphony, it has appeared in programs with the Alabama Symphony and the Greensboro Symphony.
WITN-TV provided production facilities for the taping of the concert.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon you will have much ability to get basic conditions ironed out as you wish and plan the future. In the evening you are able to rise above mundane interests and see ways to achieve.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can handle home affairs most satisfactorily today and tonight you can enjoy your favorite kind of entertainment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do some favors for those who have been loyal to you in the past and show gratitude. The evening can then be most enjoyable.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) The morning is best time to handle all practical matters, but later gad about town and please your friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Do whatever will bring you personal advancement in the morning, and later you can handle property matters very well.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to be more successful and gain personal goals early and by evening you will have accomplished a good deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put your own aims ahead of everything else in the morning. Accept a fine invitation from a good friend. Be romantic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) An ally at work will give a fine suggestion for your betterment, so be sure to follow it. A favor for a bigwig helps.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make those changes that are for your betterment and later discuss them with a bigwig who can be of assistance to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to handle practical affairs that are important to your welfare. A special thought for your loved one is wise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Come to the right decisions since a partner will be more than willing to go along with our ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can get much done in the morning since everything works beautifully for you at your job. Reconcile with a co-worker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can put those clever ideas across now so that all can be pleased and later you can add to them as well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will understand how to please good friends and should have a very fine education since upon reaching adulthood this fine quality will make it possible for your progeny to get into an executive position that can be very valuable to many persons. Teach good manners.

Sometimes you can choose which defender will win a particular trick.

If so, concede it to the hand that can do you the least damage.

There is something undignified about landing at the five-level voluntarily in a major suit. You are upping the ante without increasing your reward for fulfilling the contract. But there can be no gainsaying the fact South had a very fine hand that grew even better once his suit had been supported. North had the bare-bones minimum for his free raise, so he kept signing off until South made a slam try above game level, when he cooperated mildly.

West got his side off to a good lead when he attacked with the ace of spades. Declarer ruffed and drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy. Since the king of clubs was surely wrong and declarer had to lose the ace of diamonds, everything seemed to depend on the location of the jack of diamonds. But declarer proved the hand was a cinch even if he lost a trick to the knave.

As long as his club holding could not be attacked, he could set up at least one diamond in his hand to take care of dummy's losing club. So at trick four declarer led the nine of diamonds from the table.

East could not rise with the ace of diamonds without setting up the suit, so he played low. Declarer ran the diamond to West's jack, and West could do no better than return a spade. Declarer ruffed and continued with a diamond to the king and ace. East shifted to a club, but it was too late. Declarer rose with the ace, cashed the queen of diamonds and pitched the board's club on a good diamond. Making five-odd, losing two diamonds.

Sacco and Vanzetti

On this day in 1927, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were electrocuted in Massachusetts. The two were sentenced to die for the murder of a shoe-factory paymaster. Their celebrated case illustrated the anti-Communist fever then sweeping the U.S. Given the questionable evidence, many thought the real reason for the verdict was that the defendants were professed anarchists and pacifists. Public outrage and six years of appeals failed to soften the immigrants' fate.

DO YOU KNOW — What American author wrote "Wineset," a play about the Sacco-Vanzetti case?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — President Theodore Roosevelt removed "In God We Trust" from U.S. coins.

Small Turnout Mars African Election

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government said today that a 30 percent voter turnout was enough to legitimize South Africa's first non-white chamber of Parliament, but leaders of a boycott campaign said they had discredited the election.

With 76 of 80 districts reporting, unofficial returns showed about 30 percent of the country's 907,000 eligible mixed-race voters went to the polls Wednesday to choose delegates to the new, segregated chamber.

Police used tear gas and rubber truncheons today against about 1,500 black youths who stoned and overturned a government car and attacked a beer hall in a black township in Natal province.

It was not immediately clear if the clash was connected with the election, but on Wednesday police fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse anti-election demonstrators in two townships near Johannesburg. Police headquarters in Pretoria said 110 people were arrested nationwide on charges of disrupting the voting.

The Cape Times newspaper quoted education officials as saying that 500,000 mixed-race students stayed away from school Wednesday to support the boycott, organized by opposition groups who complained that the parliamentary restructuring leaves whites in full control and continues to deny political rights to blacks.

Government spokesmen said before the elections that they would create mixed-race and Asian chambers of Parliament, no matter how low the voter turnout, to join an all-white chamber. The Asians, also divided over whether to boycott the polls, vote next Wednesday.

South Africa's 22 million blacks remain without the right to vote, own land or move about freely.

Chris Heunis, minister of constitutional development and planning, called the 30 percent figure "acceptable" to legitimize the new chamber.

But the United Democratic Front, a multi-racial organization that backed the boycott, said in a statement: "No amount of election trickery and percentage juggling can hide the fact that this constitution does not have the support of the people."

Frederick van zyl Slabbert, leader of the opposition Progressive Federal Party, said: "The new Parliament starts off with a credibility problem" because of the low turnout.

Allan Hendrickse, whose Labor Party was winning most of the seats, disagreed. "The community involved has said 'yes,' and so we are going ahead. I wasn't looking for a beginning."

"They've lost," Hendrickse said of the boycotters.

Syrians Asked To Halt Militias

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslem militias battled with mortars, rockets and machine guns in the northern port of Tripoli today, and local leaders asked Syria to help stop what one called "this massive bloodbath."

Police said at least 105 people have been killed and 320 wounded in four straight days of fighting in the city of 500,000.

Radio stations reported that Tripoli's religious and political leaders cabled appeals to Syrian President Hafez Assad to intervene to halt the fighting in Lebanon's second largest city.

The Syrian army has controlled north and east Lebanon since its 1976 intervention to halt the first round of the Lebanese civil war. Syrian troops maintain checkpoints around Tripoli but have no presence inside the city.

On Wednesday night, heavy artillery and rocket exchanges spread to almost all the city's residential neighborhoods, blocking fire engines from reaching burning buildings. Hospitals appealed for blood donations.

A new cease-fire was called at 4 a.m. today. Random bombardment tapered off after that but occasional sniping persisted all daybreak, imperiling the truce, police said.

The fighting in Tripoli, hometown of Prime Minister Rashid Karami, was between the Syrian-equipped Arabian Knights militia and the fundamentalist Islamic Unification movement.

The Arabian Knights are predominantly Alawites, a minority offshoot of Islam. Fighters of the Islamic Unification are Sunnis, Islam's largest sect. They have been fighting for dominance of Tripoli for the last two years.

In Beirut, four shops and a car were destroyed in an overnight rash of bombings in the city's Christian sector. Police said there were no casualties.

Lebanon's state radio said Israel today reopened the Bateh-Jezzine crossing, the only major gateway between the Beirut area and the occupied southern third of Lebanon, after a three-day shutdown.

Soviet Ships Enter Canal

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two Soviet warships, shadowed by a U.S. Navy frigate, sailed into the Suez Canal today from the Mediterranean Sea in what may be an expansion of Soviet mine-hunting efforts at the southern tip of the Red Sea.

The Soviet ships, the 16,500-ton helicopter carrier Leningrad and a destroyer, spearheaded the south-bound convoy that entered the canal early this morning. The U.S. frigate John L. Hall was the 18th ship in the convoy. Suez Canal authority officials said.

Pentagon officials in Washington said Wednesday night the John L. Hall was tailing the Leningrad. They said the Leningrad may be serving as a mother ship for Soviet operations in the Red Sea area.

Ships transit the 100-mile-long canal, which links the Mediterranean with the Red Sea, in convoys, two heading south and one north-bound daily. Canal traffic moves in only one direction at a time, but there are several way stations on the canal route where north and south-bound ships can pass.

A Port Said harbor officer who said he saw the Leningrad at close quarters told The Associated Press by phone there were three helicopters on its helipad deck. He said he also saw missile launchers aboard. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

The officer identified the other Soviet warship as destroyer Number 710.
