TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

REDUCED TO RUBBLE .... A few cinder blocks and pipes are some of the few thing that remin in the rubble of the Raynor-Forebes and Clark warehouse facility on Dickinson Avenue Saturday. Officials are still looking for the cause of the fire that destroyed the two-block long building. Warehouse operators say more than 500,000 pounds of tobacco had been stored in the warehouse. Warehouse To Resume Leaf Sales Monday

Business will go on as usual Monday for the Raynor-Forbes and Clark Tobacco Warehouse, which was leveled by flames Thursday. The only difference will be that the auctioneer will begin his pitch in different surroundings.

Despite the loss of the warehouse and up to estimated $1 million worth of tobacco, W.C. (Billy) Clark III said planning for another location was begun the night of the fire. "As soon as we saw that we would need another warehouse to open Monday sales, we got together and arranged to rent the N.G. Raynor warehouse (the Gold Leaf Warehouse) here on Charles Street."

Clark said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who joined Secretary of Agriculture John Block in attending first-day auctions at the Raynor-Forbes and Clark Warehouse this year, called Saturday afternoon "to express his feelings about the loss, wish us luck Monday, and let us know he was behind us." W.C. Clark Jr., another owner, added that tobacco wasn't the only thing that was lost in the fire. "I got a letter from Jesse last week, and now it's gone."

The younger Clark said that getting ready for Monday's auction has been hard, but worthwhile work. "We had to do our unloading Saturday, because we lost our Friday workday dealing with the aftermath of the fire. But, we're not gonna miss one day," he said. "We've taken pride in ourselves for years for offering a stable market and we'll continue to do so."

Although Clark said he does not have exact figures on the amount of tobacco lost in the fire, it has been estimated that as much as 500,000 pounds were destroyed. That would mean the tobacco alone would be worth $750,000 to $1 million. The depreciated value of the warehouse, which was built in 1952, has been estimated at $385,620. Tax records show the estimated replacement cost as $1.54 million.

"Everything is gone except for a few records that we found in two safes left by the fire and we haven't gotten a chance to go over those yet," Clark said. He added that most of the records are usable, although a

Plane Crashes Kill 26

By The Associated Press

Investigators Saturday examined wreckage from two plane crashes in Georgia and California that killed 21 people in two days and an explosion over Wyoming in which five people died.

All five people aboard a twin-engine turboprop plane were killed Saturday morning when it blew up while flying over southwestern Wyoming, the National Transportation Safety Board said.

The AeroCommander 690, en route from Red Bluff, Calif., to Aurora, Ill., had refueled in Ogden, Utah, and was flying at 19,000 feet when it went off the Salt Lake International Airport Radar, the NTSB said.

The plane went down just east of Lyman, Wyo., said a dispatcher at the Sweetwater County Sheriff's Department.

Earlier Saturday, all four men aboard two private, single-engine planes died when the airplanes collided just east of Valdosta, Ga., Municipal Airport, said Lowndes County Sheriff G. Robert Carter.

One plane, a Cessna 150, was taking off and the other, a Cessna 152, was landing when they crashed, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker.

"Witnesses in houses nearby said they heard a noise, looked up and saw one plane spinning toward the ground in one direction and the other spinning in another direction," said Carter.

NTSB investigators on Saturday probed the wreckage of a small Rockwell Commander and a twin-engine jet-prop Beechcraft, which was strewn over 20 acres of brushy, rolling hillside near San Luis Obispo, Calif.

All 15 people aboard a Wings West commuter plane and both men on the single-engine plane were killed Friday morning when they collided near San Luis Obisbo County Airport.

Investigators also planned to examine air traffic control procedures at the airport, which Federal Aviation Administration sources said Friday had been cited as "unsatisfactory."

There is no control tower at the airport, said Mike Larson, airport operating specialist.

"I'm amazed it hasn't happened before," said one FAA official who refused to give his name, but said that planes taking off and landing at the airport sometimes fly toward each other in a narrow valley flanked by 2,500-foot mountains.

Wings West flight 628 and the smaller plane were at 3,000 feet when they collided at 11:34 a.m., said Mark Morro, Wings West chief executive officer. No one was injured on the ground.

The commuter plane had just taken off and the other plane appeared to be landing at the time of the crash, witnesses and officials said.

Author Capote Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Truman Capote, the award-winning author of such books as "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "In Cold Blood" was found dead Saturday in a Bel-Air mansion, police said. He was 59.

Police Cmdr. William Booth said there was no evidence of foul play in Capote's death, but the coroner's department would investigate its circumstances.

Police did not immediately release information on how Capote died. According to Booth, the mansion where Capote's body was found was owned by Joanne Carson, who is divorced from "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson.

The diminutive author, who was known for his flamboyant wardrobe and high-pitched lisp, threw elaborate parties that drew celebrities from Hollywood, high society and politics.

Capote once said he had problems with drinking and taking medication.

"I put them together like some sort of cocktail," he said in a July 1978 television interview with Stanley Siegel on a New York station. The host cut the interview short when Capote rambled incoherently about his drinking and drug problems.

Capote was born in New Orleans on Sept. 30, 1924, was schooled in New York and Greenwich, Conn., and showed an interest in writing from his early years. The 5-foot-3 author was a summer resident of Sagaponack, Long Island.

In 1946, he won his first of three O. Henry Memorial awards for short stories.

WORK CONTINUES ... Owners of the Raynor-Forbes and Clark Warehouse unload tobacco on the floor of the Gold Leaf Warehouse on Charles Street Saturday afternoon. The warehouse operations were moved after a fire Thursday night destroyed the Raynor-Forbes and Clark structure on Dickinson Avenue. The warehouse operators have obtained equipment from other Greenville warehouse owners to continue the season. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Winterville Finding Drive For Recognition Pays Off

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Although final notification has not been received, Winterville's application to become a Governor's Community of Excellence has already served several purposes, according to Winterville Chamber of Commerce President Leland Tucker Jr.

"We learned an awful lot about our community in the process of making application. It really made us sit down and take a look at our town, and what we found," he said, "was that we had a whole lot of assests we weren't aware that we had. For instance, we'd practically forgotten what good recreation, school and police programs Winterville has.

"It also made us aware of our resources in terms of people. On the other hand," he added, "we've always known that we were an excellent community and now we're hoping that Winterville will be given the signs to prove it."

In addition to bolstering town pride, Tucker said being named a community of excellence will let companies know that Winterville is interested in growth and attracting industry. "This is really a two-fold proposition. In a way the program is

Planters Submits Low Bid

Planters Bank and Trust Co. has submitted a high bid of $105,000 for the purchase of the county-owned Tucker property at the interserction of Fourth and Greene streets.

Planters Bank and Trust, which owns property adjoining the site, offered the bid at a public auction Friday afternoon on the courthouse steps. The bid is subject to approval by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners before the sale becomes final.

The two-story Tucker Building was built in 1927 and was purchased by the county in 1935. It has been used to house agricultural extension service and county school board offices, but has been vacant since the new county office building on West Fifth Street was opened several years ago.

Commissioners decided to dispose of the property earlier this year after architects reported that, although the building is structually sound, costs involved in renovating the space might be prohibitive. Cameron Dudley of Dudley & Shoe Architects said in February that the cost of a renovation could be as much as $60 per square foot.

The property includes the 6,654-square-foot building and a 14,000-square-foot lot.

Planters opened the bidding at $93,000. The only other bidder participating in the sale, Frank Dale, stopped bidding when Planters' local manager, R.J. Boleman, raised the bid to the $105,000 figure.

A county spokesman said Planters officials had voiced interest in building an office facility on the property.

Pitt County tax records list the tax value of the lot alone at $53,000.

The family suggests that anyone desiring to make a memorial contribution consider St. Peter's Catholic Church.

The family will be at the home of H. Dail Laughinghouse Jr. on the Pactolus Highway.

Paid Announcement

Burial Quiet

WAYNESBORO, Ga. (AP) — While officers in riot gear lined the streets and liquor stores remained closed, mourners held services Saturday for Larry Gardner, whose death in police custody prompted two nights of racial unrest in Waynesboro last weekend.

There were no organized demonstrations during or after the funeral, according to Lt. David McFeely of the Burke County sheriff's department.

"Everything is quiet," he said.

The one-hour church service and burial came one day after the State Crime Lab reported finding sickle cell trait, a disorder which can lead to heat exhaustion, in the blood of the 32-year-old Gardner.

Preliminary reports from two autopsies listed heat exhaustion as a possible cause of death. Gardner died shortly after officers chased him on foot and arrested him on drug and shoplifting charges Aug. 17.

Shuttle Again Ready To Liftoff

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery, its maiden flight aborted twice in June, is ready to try again Wednesday with a new engine and expanded mission, and the commander says, "The third time will be our charm."

The six members of the shuttle's crew will fly here from their training base in Houston a few hours before the countdown begins Sunday night. They are confident they will get off the ground this time, that there will be nothing like the last-minute back-to-back postponements that grounded them earlier.

Liftoff Wednesday is set for 8:35 a.m., with a landing six days later at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

A faulty computer halted a June 25 launch attempt just nine minutes before the planned liftoff. The next day, with four seconds to go, a computer detected the failure of a fuel valve and commanded shutdown of the engine start sequence.

"The overwhelming emotion was bitter disappointment," said astronaut Henry Hartsfield, who will command the mission. "There was a letdown after that point, but the morale has quickened.

"The third time will be our charm," Hartsfield said.

The other crew members are pilot Michael Coats; mission specialists Judy Resnik, the second American woman named to a space flight, Steve Hawley and Richard Mullane; and payload specialist Charles Walker.

Discovery has had the engine with the balky valve replaced, and NASA has combined the best features of the ship's first two missions into a single flight to maintain the shuttle launch schedule.

Two communications satellites added to the cargo will be the subject of careful scrutiny. They are the first satellites using a Star-48 booster rocket to be carried on the shuttle since the failure of Star-48 nozzles sent two communications payloads into the wrong orbits during the shuttle Challenger's mission in February.

The trouble was traced to faulty nozzle material, and engineers are confident the problem has been resolved. But no one will breathe easy until the Star-48 rockets have propelled both satellites into stationary orbits 22,300 miles out.

The failures in February cost insurance companies $180 million.

One of the new satellites, SBS-4, owned by Satellite Business Systems, is to be deployed from the shuttle eight hours after liftoff. The second, American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s Telstar 3C, is to be released by the astronauts on Friday.

A third communications satellite, Hughes Communications Services' Leasat, uses a different type of rocket to reach the high outpost. It will be released Thursday.

Walker, a commercial engineer employed by McDonnell Douglas Corp., is to produce an unidentified drug in a device that uses weightlessness to separate and purify biological samples. The drug will be tested on animals and humans by pharmaceutical giant Johnson & Johnson Inc., which is in partnership with McDonnell Douglas in the venture.

The two companies hope by the end of the decade to mass-produce drugs in space that are impossible to make on Earth.

Miss Resnik will spend much of her time raising, lowering and testing a very thin solar panel that can be extended 102 feet into space from Discovery's cargo bay. The device could one day be used to convert the sun's rays into electrical power for space stations.

geared toward industry and offers smaller communities a way to attract industry. But the award and attracting industry are also dependent upon other aspects of the community being in strong force such as the quality of living, utility availability, and good school and recreation programs."

Winterville officials applied for the award in late 1983 and, soon after that, began readying the town for the final inspection held last Tuesday.

"It's hard to put a finger on just how many people helped. We had a lot of input from a lot of people and organizations like the Pitt County Boys' Club and the Pitt County Industrial Development Commission, but I think we came out just fine in the inspection," Tucker said.

He explained, however, that it is not an inspection in the traditional Army or Boy-Girl Scout sense of the word. "They brought in several people who posed as industry representatives interested in locating their companies in Winterville. "What we had to do was show them what we had in depth and convince them that they wanted to locate here — in other words, we were sellers," Tucker said.

Among points the state committee noted while touring Winterville were 1) the strength of the local development team created to discuss available sites, facilities for industry, the financial tax structure, recreational facilities and other aspects of the community; 2) local financial organizations' ability to enable the community to option, buy and sell a property to industrial clients as well as finance the construction of industrial building; and

3) thoroughness of a comprehensive community profile providing information on taxes, utilities, transportation and other important factors; 4) availability of identified industrial sites with basic information about each including aerial photos, data sheets, cost per acre figures and other information pertaining to utilities to the site; 5) support of an economic development organization that could coordinate economic development activities; 6) long-range economic zoning and land-use planning; and

7) eligibility for industrial revenue bonds to extend water and sewer lines and provide money for pollution control equipment; 8) support for economic development efforts among existing industries, and 9) adequate school, health care and recreational opportunities, and other community services that assure good livability and quality of life.

"Those are the basic criteria by which we decide who qualifies for the award," committee member Bill Abeyounis said. "And it's not easy to qualify," he added. "You've got to meet all these criteria or you don't become a Governor's Community of Excellence. Some towns that we felt did not meet the criteria were even turned down this year, but not in this area."

Abeyounis said that 23 communities in the northeast region, to which Winterville belongs, have been given the award. There are approximately 150 communities of excellence across the state.

Series Of Accidents Investigated Here

Michael Arnold Duncan of 700 McDowell St. was charged by Greenville police with a safe movement violation Friday following a traffic accident involving the car he was driving and a vehicle operated by Barry Scot Perry of Route 8, Greenville.

Damages in the 10th Street accident totaled $800 — $600 to the Duncan car and $200 to the Perry vehicle.

Officers also reported a three-car collision on Greenville Boulevard Friday that resulted in $400 in property damages.

Operators of the cars involved included Martha Elaine Johnson of 100 Tobacco Road, Nancy Martin Dudley of 421 Lee St. and Deborah Wrenn Hodges of Route 2, Greenville. Ms. Johnson's car was the only vehicle damaged.

Cars driven by Gary Ian Lancaster of Route 3, Greenville, and Eddie Paul Bradley Jr. of 402-C Belk Hall, ECU, collided Friday, causing $675 in damages — $75 to the Lancaster car and $600 to the Bradley vehicle. The accident occurred in Hardee's parking lot on Cotanche Street.

Cars driven by Jeffery Keith of Route 2, Greenville, and Henry Wayne Murphy of 301-C Azalea Gardens were involved in an accident on the Joe Cullipher car dealership parking lot Friday. Damages to Keith's car were estimated at $1,200 and $1,500 to the Murphy car.

Approximately $400 in property damages resulted from an accident Friday involving a car driven by Lendy Moye Sutton of Route 8, Greenville, and a parked car. Damages to the Sutton car totaled $250, and $150 to the parked car.

On Saturday, cars driven by Alice Marie Dixon of 1309 N. Van Dyke St. and Diana Suggs Joyner of 604 Howell St. collided in the parking lot of Piggy Wiggly on Dickinson Avenue. Damages to the Dixon car were estimated at $500 and at $100 to the Joyner vehicle.

Charges Set In Break-In At Brody's

Detective John E. Nichols said Samuel Ray Ham, 22, and Phyllis Jones Ham, 23, both of E6 Greentree Village, were charged with aiding and abetting breaking, entering and larceny and with three counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with the case.

The two were also charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a break-in at 1002 Greenville Blvd. on Aug. 14.

Nichols said that in addition, Ham has been charged with conspiracy to commit larceny in connection with the case.

According to Nichols, four others persons are involved in the case, including three juveniles and Mike Joyner, 16, of 1903 Norcott Circle. Joyner, Nichols said, has been charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with the break-in.

A quantity of clothes was taken from Brody's, while silver was taken from the Greenville Boulevard home, according to Nichols, who said some of the clothing and most of the silver has been recovered.

Unclaimed

More than $350,000 has been paid to 1,516 people throughout the state as a result of last year's concerted effort to restore unclaimed and abandoned property to its proper owners, North Carolina Treasurer Harlan Boyles said recently.

According to Boyles, the money was paid from the North Carolina Escheat Fund, set up by law to receive money and property in cases where the owners cannot be found.

This year, the list contains 313 items for Pitt County, totaling $29,765. While most of the items are for amounts of less than $100, 24 persons are listed as owners of amounts ranging from $200 to just over $600. The one listing for more than $700 is a $2,355.18 item owned by John J. Stauffer of Greenville, and being held by Interstate Securities Corp.

Owners of unclaimed roperty, or those who know the location of owners, should write the Abandoned Property Office, Department of State Treasurer, 325 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C., 27611, or call 733-4440.

The scholarship is given annually in recognition of outstanding scholastic achievement and extra curricular activities. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald A. Southerland of Route 2, Greenville, she plans to major in early childhood education.

FINAL CHECK ... Chet Emerson, left, of the Pitt County Boys Club accepts the last of five checks from Greenville Jaycees President Jack Myers, right. The check ended a six-year pledge totaling $25,000. Jaycee officials reported that the cystic fibrosis project last weekend locally raised $950 for a total of $108,000. The group's next fund-raiser will be a car wash on Sept. 8 at the U-Fill-Up Station beginning at 10 a.m. A Jaycee family social cookout will also be held Sept. 16 at the Greenville Athletic Club.

Revival Service

Revival services will be held at Reddick Chapel Missionary Baptist Church, Bethel, Monday through Friday at 7:30 each night. The Rev. Dennis Walston is the guest speaker for the week.

Monday night's service will be rendered by Wynn Chapel, Robersonville, and Tuesday's service by Triumph of Washington. St. John Church of Falkland, along with the M.E. Laws Gospel Chorus of Winterville, will be in charge of the service Wednesday night. Thursday night's service will be led by Bethel Chapel, Bethel, and Friday night's service will be conducted by Tabernacle of Vanceboro.

Guest Speaker

Carl Whitfield of Greenville, a former state Highway Patrol officer and field representative of the Governor's Highway Safety Program, will be the guest speaker Tuesday at 6:15 p.m. at the Bethel Rotary Club. His topic will be "Our American Heritage." Alvis Mewborn will be in charge of the program.

Chamber Conference

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Out-of-Town Planning Conference will be held in Columbia, S.C., Oct. 26-28.

Chamber members will develop the 1985 program of work around the theme of "Where Do We Go From Here?" Discussions will focus on economic growth, transportation, land use planning, business development and preservation.

Members attending the conference will also have a chance to see the East Carolina-South Carolina football game. A "dinner mystery tour" is also on the agenda.

Morrow To Speak

Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, will speak at the quarterly meeting of the Pitt County Comission for Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services Tuesday and Wednesday at the Ramada Inn in Greenville.

Secretary Morrow will speak at 10 a.m. Tuesday and at 8 a.m. Wednesday. The commission has also scheduled talks on approaches to mental health treatment and procedures for assuring quality mental health services.

Women's Day

Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church will hold its annual Women's Day service today at 11 a.m. Marion Watford of Winston will speak. Lucille Price of Oak Citywill be guest soloist.

Attends Conference

Regina Barrett of Greenville recently attended the week-long 1984 National Junior Achievement Conference at Indiana University.

Miss Barrett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Milton Barrett of 104 Candlewood Drive. She was among 3,500 youth from the United States, Europe and Central America attending the conference.

Tobacco Contest

Tobacco farmers will be showing off their best leaf again this fall in the "Perfect Bundle Contest" in hopes of winning the cash prizes at stake.

The annual contest is in conjunction with the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival in Greenville Nov. 9-15, according to North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Grahama.

Graham said the entries will come from five flue-cured producing states, including North Carolina. He said in a news release that the entries will be judged by tobacco experts on Oct. 19, with the awards to be presented Nov. 12.

Boating Safety

The Tar River Power Squadron will conduct classes on boating safety beginning Sept 11. The course is open to the public and will meet for 12 weeks from 7:30-9:30 p.m. on Thursdays.

The Tar River Power Squadron is a private organization that promotes safe boating for power or sail vessels. For more information about the course, contact Charlie Hammond, (919)946-2054), or Ernest Marshburn at 756-7271.

College President

Likins, 53, will take over his new duties Oct. 1, replacing James S. Barrett, who resigned effective Aug. 1. W. Barnes Tatum, dean of the college, has been serving as acting president.

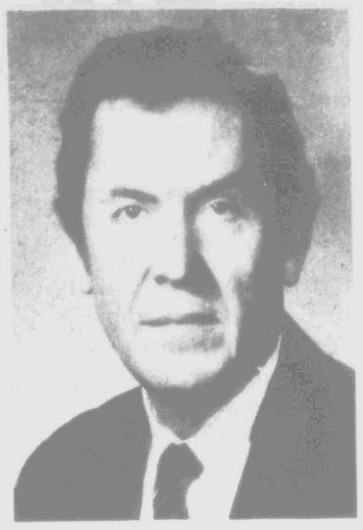

An ordained United Methodist Church minister, Likins will become the 16th president of the 147-year-old college.

A Louisville, Ky., native, Likins previously served as executive director of the Commission on Higher Education for the United Methodist Church in Kentucky.

Director Named

William D. Reagan Jr., president of North State Financial Corp., has announced the appointment of Dr. Robert William McConnell to the Greenville regional board of directors of North State Savings & Loan Corp.

McConnell is a radiologist in private practice with Eastern Radiologists Inc. and is on the staffs of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and Washington County Hospital in Plymouth. He is also a consulting radiologist with Beaufort County Hospital in Washington.

DR. WILLIAM McCONNELL

North State Savings and Loan is a wholly owned subsidiary of North State Financial Corp. The Greenville-based firm reported assets of approximately $300 million.

Week-Long Revival

Revival services will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday-Friday at Simpson Chapel Free Will Baptist Church with the Rev. Blake Phillips of Greenville as the guest speaker.

Area choirs will be guests each night.

Special Awards

Cindy Hope Meadown of Ayden and Brenda Lou Carraway of Snow Hill received special awards at a pinning ceremony held in honor of Pitt Community College graduating radiologic technology students.

Ms. Meadows received the Squibb Award for receiving the highest clinical average, and Ms. Carraway was presented the Mallinkrodt Award for maintaining the highest grade point average.

Graduates receiving pins included: Nancy Hunter Gregory and Kathy Anne Teal, both of Greenville; Cindy Hope Meadows of Ayden; Brenda Lou Carraway of Snow Hill; Debra L. Padgett of Farmville; Terry Leigh Walston of Walstonburg, and Melvin Price Mobley and Melodie Rose Modlin, both of Jamesville.

PCC faculty taking part in the presentations were Garrie Moore, Louise Cox and Judith Kuydendall. Dr. Richard Kelly of Eastern Radiologists Inc. was the speaker.

The U.S. Mariner spacecraft flew past the Planet Venus Dec. 15, 1965, relaying data back to the earth.

Sunday Opinion

Ferraro Finds A Silver Lining In Her Cloud

The Mondale-Ferraro ticket enjoyed one more small coup during the week in upstaging the Republican National Convention in Dallas as a newsmaker. For much of the week the Ferraro finances comprised the main distraction of the national press.

Reporters' questions on that topic virtually overwhelmed the candidates' serious campaign efforts to talk issues that under other circumstances would have represented an important part of wooing and influencing voters. It was embarassing. It was a political disaster.

Generally speaking, Republicans could hardly believe their good fortune; only a few proved so astute as to refrain from public comment. In private, it's a good guess they were gloating.

The climax came with the Zaccaro-Ferraro formal disclosure of their financial records and an extraordinary hour-and-a-half-plus ordeal of primed and near antagonistic questioning of the congresswoman by the news media. Rep. Ferraro met that inquisition with class.

The sun came out.

If it had been planned, there could have been no greater political boon than that enjoyed by candidates Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro.

To be sure, questions remain insofar as John Zaccaro is concerned, but on the whole they are such that appear a minor risk to the candidate in the family.

He enjoyed a big win in Iowa and gave Gary Hart a boost in New Hampshire. He lost Indiana and Ohio after making a political comeback. In early June he had a united party, but by July it was divided by aspirants for the vice presidency.

There is no reason to think political misadventures are over; they add something to making politics one of the more exciting games people play.

We keep wondering how voters are going to respond to a promise of higher taxes. November will provide the answer.

Traditional Spirit Marks ECU Opening

Faculty members at East Carolina University Monday heard from board of trustees Chairman C. Ralph Kinsey that they would find East Carolina to be a "vigorous institution filled with commitment to scholarship and creativity, dedicated to the educational experience of our students and attuned to our role to serve the people of this region and our state."

That signaled the opening of the 1984-85 academic year last week when some 900 faculty members and 13,500 students came to the local campus.

At the convocation Chancellor John M. Howell noted criticism of higher education in general. "We at ECU have turned criticism into a determination to become the best."

We can conclude that East Carolina University has lost none of the spirit that has made it what it is today. The yardsticks tell us a positive story. Vice Chancellor Dr. Algelo A. Volpe said the institution has moved up 12 places in amount of federal funds received for science research and development compared to other research and Ph.D granting institutions of the nation.

It should be clear that ECU is embarking on a year of progress in all areas — and, it must be remembered, the unpleasant alternative to progress is to fall behind.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Nothing is so welcome on an auto trip as a ferry boat ride. It is a time to park the car, take to the deck and dream of ocean voyages to faraway places, although, for sure, ferry rides don't go too far.

On a recent trip to New England there were two ferry rides for your columnist and one which we wish we had taken.

The one we wish we had taken is from either Portland or Bar Harbor, Maine, to Nova Scotia. The six-hour ride is virtually a cruise and puts you on on roads which can be followed back to the United States. It also takes one out of the Eastern time zone and into the Atlantic zone which is fairly unique for North America.

Alas, there wasn't enough time on this trip for that, but it is something we hope to do some day.

There was a ferry ride from Cape Cod to Martha's Vineyard. The ferry boat was a rather large one and it was a pleasant cruise across to Martha's Vineyard, a land of quaint arts and crafts shops.

It was the trip back that was exciting, however. A heavy fog enveloped the ferry, which continued to make its way using its mighty fog horn, radar and a brilliant search light. Anyone who has ever watched a spy thriller is aware that fog horns sound at intervals, and so they did this morning. Periodically fog horns could be heard answering through the impenetratable fog. Anxious faces could be seen peering through the glass on the bridge. They were watching for buoys which would suddenly loom into view at the ship's starboard. It was not difficult to dream dreams of being a sailor far out at sea on a ship making its way through days and nights of fog.

On a ferry boat, however, such dreams end quickly. The lights of the terminal dock suddenly shone through the fog. The ferry boat turned around and backed smoothly into its slip. So much for high seas adventure.

Another exciting ferry ride is from Cape May, south of Atlantic City to Lewes on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. This one completes a virtually direct route north from our area via the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. The ferry is a major ship and it is at sea for a time, complete with rocking and pitching. The trip includes deck chairs and even a lounge and snack bar. For about an hour and 20 minutes it sure beats driving.

Tinkering With The Constitution

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Comma or no comma, on the matter of an increase in taxes the Republican Party platform is positively ambiguous or ambiguously positive, take your choice. One is reminded of the little old Episcopal lady who loved her toddy; she made a firm pledge that during Lent she would not have a drink unless she really needed one.

But on one issue in public finance the platform is indeed unequivocal: The Republican Party wants a constitutional amendment to compel the adoption of balanced budgets. On this proposition, if I may state the matter mildly, the Republican Party has lost its collective mind.

It is a curious thing about Republicans — about some Republicans, anyhow. They like to think of themselves as "conservatives," but they are obsessed with tinkering with the Constitution. They are forever nattering on about an amendment to prohibit abortion, or an amendment to prohibit racial balance busing, or an amendment to guarantee the right of the people voluntarily to join in prayer in public buildings. The president's favorite amendment is the balanced budget amendment. It is a turkey if there ever was one.

Oh, the basic idea is generally sound. In principle, the government in peacetime should match outgo to income. "Pay as we go!" cried John Randolph of Roanoke a long time ago. It sounds great. But in actual practice the basic idea gets caught in the refusal of Congress to separate an operating budget from a capital budget. Yes, operating expenses, such as the pay of meat inspectors and the purchase of paperclips, ideally should be met from current income. But capital expenses, such as the construction of a federal building or an aircraft carrier, properly may be funded by borrowing. The president's pet amendment takes no account of these considerations.

Over the past 15 or 20 years, since talk of a balanced budget amendment became fashionable, at least 15 or 20 drafts of such a resolution have been offered on Capitol Hill. They might pass muster in the Land of Oz.

In the most familiar versions, an amendment would command that "Congress shall adopt" a budget for each fiscal year in which total outlays are no greater than total receipts. No mechanism is provided for enforcing this command. Some drafts continue by saying that total receipts "shall not increase by a rate greater than the rate of increase in national income in the last calendar year ending before such fiscal year." But in most versions such arcane phrases as "national income" are nowhere defined.

The Republicans' 1981 resolution included a sentence of such massive obscurity that no sponsor attempted to explain it: "The Congress may not require that the states engage in additional activities without compensation equal to the additional costs." What could be meant by "activities"? By "additional"?

Put to one side the flaws in draftsmanship, critical as they are. Let us ask ourselves, realistically, what the president would do if his pet amendment were fully operative today. For the 1985 fiscal year, we are looking at prospective revenues of about $750 billion and prospective outlays of about $930 billion, for a deficit of $180 billion.

To close that gap, as a balanced budget amendment would demand, would require 1) a stunning increase in taxes, which the president will not accept; 2) a drastic reduction in defense spending, which the president also rejects; or 3) a virtual wipe-out of all non-defense programs, which the Congress never on earth would agree to. It is only by a combination of new taxes and spartan restraints on spending that income and outgo can be brought within speaking distance of each other.

In Search Of A Slogan

Walter Mears

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan and his campaigners are trying to work some voodoo on Walter F. Mondale, quoting Democrats against the Democratic nominee for the White House.

But they can't find a real catch phrase in all the oratory of the men who challenged Mondale for the nomination.

The Democrats' best shots at Mondale didn't come close to the line George Bush pinned on Reagan four years ago, when they were rivals for the Republican nomination.

So when the Republicans try to cite old Democratic barbs in their campaign against Mondale, they're left with pretty pallid stuff.

That has to be frustrating. Nobody ever mistook Vice President Bush for a master of the political one-liner, but he handed the Democrats a phrase they've never forgotten when he labeled Reagan's tax and budget proposals "voodoo economics."

Bush tried to forget it after he became Reagan's running mate and vice president. He claimed once that he hadn't said it at all. He did, and it's on tape. There's nothing to match it on all the recordings of the Democratic campaign against Mondale.

Consider the material Bush had to work with Thursday night when he looked to the Democrats for oratorical ammunition against Mondale.

Sure, the country has problems, he told the Republican National Convention, but "the answer doesn't lie in Mr. Mondale's new spending programs — programs that John Glenn estimated would cost up to $170 million more in spending, or in Mondale deficits that Fritz Hollings estimated at $400 billion.

"It doesn't lie in the programs of a man Gary Hart called 'mush,' " Bush said.

Not a ready-made slogan in the lot.

What the Republicans want is a rerun of the 1980 campaign, and to that end they're offering constant reminders of Mondale's service as vice president to Jimmy Carter, the man Reagan trounced then.

Bush said the message will stick against Mondale and the Democrats "no matter how hard you try to turn your back on Jimmy Carter."

In his acceptance speech, the convention grande finale, Reagan said the Democrats hope Americans have poor memories.

"In 1980," he said, "we asked the people of America: are you better off than you were four years ago? The people answered by asking us to bring about a change."

"Let us ask for their help again to renew the mandate of 1980," the president said.

Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada had instructed the convention earlier that Mondale was to blame for Carter's political undoing. He said some of Carter's own people thought Mondale the man "most responsible for leading the administration astray and into the quicksand of Washington liberalism."

That is more clout than vice presidents usually can claim, but the Republicans are out to portray Mondale as a power behind the Carter throne.

"For four devastating years Vice President Mondale and his president worked closely together for policies and programs that proved cruelly unfair to everybody," said former President Gerald R. Ford, who never claimed to be a full partner when he was vice president.

The tactic is to campaign against Mondale as the heir to everything that went wrong under Carter — and to recount the Democratic debates of 1984 in order to picture the nominee as a captive of his own promises to special interest blocs.

So Laxalt, in his nominating speech for Reagan, supplied a capsule reprise of the Democratic primary campaign.

"What did Johnny Glenn have to say about Walter Mondale? 'Mondale has just promised everything to everybody, with no thought of how it's going to be paid for. What I'm saying is, are we going to break promises or break the bank?'"

No voodoo there.

"Let's hear from Gary Hart," Laxalt said. " 'Mondale's mush — he's weak — he dares to be cautious — and the pattern is clear eaution until consensus forms.' "

Not bad, but not up to the old Bush zinger.

So Laxalt quoted Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina: "My good friend, Vice President Mondale, is a good lap dog. He'll give them everything they want."

Still no magic in the phrasemaking.

Hart even found his way into the Republicans' convention keynote. U. S. Treasurer Katherine Ortega said she seldom agreed with the Democratic senator from Colorado, but did when he called Mondale's economic program "a collection of old and tired ideas, held together by paralyzing commitments to special interests and constituency groups."

Campaigning in Cincinnati on Monday, Reagan took part of his text from Sen. Glenn, an early casualty among candidates for the Democratic nomination. "He said the policies of the current Democratic nominee would cause a huge increase in spending and taxing," Reagan said.

Glenn replied that he'd settled most of his differences with Mondale, and that they paled by comparison to the differences they both have with Reagan.

Maybe the Republicans should have planted a speechwriter in the Democratic primary campaign, to come up with a grabber they could turn against Mondale now.

Something on the order of voodoo economics.

Public Forum

According to a news report in your paper, Jim Martin, the Republican candidate for Governor, at a recent rally in Greenville, sought to make political hay out of the alleged failure of Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to take steps to remove from office the sheriff of Clay County, who was convicted of vote buying. The sheriff in question was permitted to retain his office pending the appeal of his conviction.

In response to this politically motivated criticism, Rufus Edmisten's staff simply pointed out that the attorney general of North Carolina is not authorized to remove a sheriff or to initiate removal proceedings. Senior Deputy Attorney General Andy Vanore Jr. pointed out that such was the duty of the county attorney or the district attorney.

One must wonder about Jim Martin's credibility as a candidate and potential governor. Has this transplanted Georgian not lived long enough in North Carolina to become familiar with the laws of our state? Or perhaps has he devoted too much time to his studies as a chemistry teacher at Davidson College?

The real question for North Carolina voters growing out of this demonstration of Congressman Martin's ignorance of North Carolina law should be: Can we entrust a man who knows so little of our laws to be our highest elected official?

To the editor:

It's been interesting to note all the attention given in recent weeks to Representative Gillam and the General Assembly's pork barrel projects. Both the News and Observer and the Daily Reflector have had articles or editorials on this subject.

No, I don't believe in pork barrel projects either, but if the General Assembly is guilty of "pork barreling," then our own City Council has gone for the "whole hogshead!"

The General Assembly divided up less than $10 million; that's about $1.70 per North Carolina resident. (What general tax increases did our General Assembly enact this year?)

On the other hand, our City Council recently committed $250,000 to a Science Nature Center; that's over $7 per Greenville resident. And they increased taxes 13 percent. Now which is worse?

There has been no great public outcry from Greenville citizens for this nature center. Not a single public hearing about it was held prior to the City Council voting this huge expenditure. In fact, the average citizen of Greenville first heard about this expensive project from me in a Public Forun letter in late June!

To paraphrase the Daily Reflector editor from his August 1 editorial: "Every item that goes in the city budget should be clearly documented as to need. If we don't need, don't spend it. After all, it took a lot of taxpayers toiling away many days to provide that $250,000."

It's not too late to put a stop to this nonsense. If the citizens of Greenville will "light up the switchboard" at City Hall, AND contact our Council Members, we can reverse this decision and save $250,000 of our money.

Call and demand that your money be spent on necessities, not frills!

To the editor:

Eddie Knox said, "I think I've been pretty gracious to say that I'm going to vote the Democratic ticket." He hasn't been gracious to me. I voted for him as being a Democrat who would make a good governor, not a bad loser.

As for his comment that "Frances and Charlie ... say that Jesse Helms is not always right ... but ... they ... support him," it is not true that Helms is not always right. He is eternally right.

Right if the incomes of the elderly on Social Security should be curtailed and school lunches should be ketchuped to fatten an already bloated Pentagon and make way for that most absurd and horrendous weapon of all, the first-strike MX, in whose belly will lie the seeds of destruction for all our children.

Right if a Salvadoran death squad leader should be deemed a worthy protege of the United States. Right if a poor woman pregnant through rape should be prohibited from having an abortion. Right if a Jewish child should be made to say (or stay silent through) a Christian prayer in a public school. Right if eight million dollars worth of flickering half-truths and printed innuendos can mesmerize the good people of this moderate, progressive state into throwing back upon a bemused Senate its most conedic Throwback.

And Frances and Charlie are right. Personified rancor and spite belong in the Helms camp. That's home. Home, too, for the wild fantasizing of a Bob Windsor. Home for the sanctimonious bleatings of television evangelists who would fit Jesus into their own political mold. (Jesus a right-wing (Re?)publican? Ludicrous.)

If Eddie Knox now disdains the Democratic Party under whose banner he ran, he can always go home. Lots of losers there.

He's A Rookie No More

RALEIGH — Four years ago, Bill Cobey broke onto the state political scene with a surprisingly strong showing in his bid to unseat Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. Cobey's near-miss sent the value of his political stock soaring and Republicans around the state began speaking of him as a possible gubernatorial nominee and maybe the eventual successor to Sen. Jesse Helms.

The confidence in Cobey's political future spread beyond the state's boundaries. When Cobey took on 4th District U.S. Rep. Ike Andrews in 1982, Cobey was able to raise an incredible $800,000 and to bring President Reagan to Raleigh to campaign on his behalf.

But it all went for naught. Cobey lost to Andrews by 5,000 votes, an upset that seemed impossible just a month before election day when Andrews was arrested for drunken driving.

Cobey is running against Andrews again this year in the district that includes Wake, Chatham, Franklin, Orange and Randolph counties. He says he's confident of victory this time but, if he should lose, it will probably be the last time he'll run.

Two years can make a great deal of difference in politics and that's certainly the case in this rematch. In 1982, Cobey had TV ads on the air all winter and spring. This year, he has not aired a single ad yet but does have a few billboards. In 1982, the congressional races were the biggest thing on the ballot. This year, races for president, governor, U.S. Senate and Council of State overshadow the congressional races.

This year, Cobey hopes he'll raise $400,000 and admits he may raise less. "I don't feel we'll need as much money this time. In 1982, we had to build my name recognition. This year, it's already out there."

The amount of money Cobey raised in 1982 became an issue which worked against him. Andrews questioned where it was all coming from. But maybe more importantly, the way Cobey spent it may have turned off voters. He was on TV so mcuh that people got sick of him and his ads. With this year's reduced budget, that's not likely to happen.

Cobey also allowed Andrews to paint him as Helms' puppet last time. He made few public appearances and refused to appear on a UNC-TV interview show. Andrews hit hard on the idea that Cobey was hiding behind his TV ads.

Cobey says the lesson he learned from 1982 is voter turnout. Andrews fired up Democratic voters while he was unable to get Republican voters to the polls. This year, with President Reagan bringing out the voters, Cobey is sure that won't be a problem.

On the Democratic side, no one seems very alarmed by Cobey's decision to challenge Andrews once again — a change in attitude since 1982. Andrews says he's raised $125,000 so far and won't be dramatically outspent this year. He says he's also won the endorsements of key local business groups who two years ago sided with Cobey. "Ronald Reagan is the best thing going for him ... (Reagan) will bring out some people who might possibly vote for Mr. Cobey," Andrews said.

Randolph Cloud, Andrews' campaign manager in 1982, says he's not worried this year. "It'll be easier if Andrews will just push that theme that here's Cobey, the loser, running again."

Cobey is still a bright enough Republican prospect to have won a speaking assignment at the party's Dallas convention. But, if he fails to beat Andrews in November, his star will burn out, just like a heralded rookie who never made it to the major leagues.

Backing Up On Promises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says the voters will have a "brighter and more hopeful" future if they vote for him and paints the policies of Walter Mondale in terms of "gloom and doom".

If the phrasing seems to stack the deck, well, that's the way it is with political campaigns.

Reagan has a lot going for him in the economic recovery beyond the predictions of most of the experts. He also has given the people a perception of an invincible America that can take on any Soviet bully.

He projects leadership and toughness, telling Americans they are better off than four years ago.

Reagan sees his mission as a repudiation of the New Deal and the Great Society, which he describes as the "failed policies" of the past.

In foreign policy, he has sought to return the United States to a position of "superiority" in the arms field in contrast to the acceptance of parity with the Soviets and the "balance of fear" deterrence of war by his predecessors.

During his first term, Reagan has had few triumphs and as many retreats, particularly in the Middle East where he pulled American Marines out of Lebanon after suggesting that Speaker Thomas O'Neill's call for a withdrawal was tantamount to "surrender."

An atmosphere reminiscent of the cold war has returned to superpower relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. Reagan has wiped out the last vestiges of detente and put the Kremlin on warning while nuclear arms control negotiations are totally stalemated.

In implementing his promise of economic recovery, Reagan's policies brought on a deep recession and millions of job losses, but his political strategists say that the blue collar workers in Detroit are not disaffected and will vote for him despite the hardships they suffered.

Under his programs, the Congressional Budget Office figures he has reduced aid to families with dependent children by 13 percent; food stamps, 13 percent; child nutrition, 28 percent, and job training program by 35 percent.

In the field of civil rights, Reagan has curtailed the federal government's intervention and scorned affirmative action. He balked at broadening the Voting Rights Act of 1965, but finally signed the bill when it passed with bipartisan support.

Although he tried to repair his image as an anti-environmentalist in recent weeks, his policies have evoked widespread opposition from environmental groups who say he has been lax in enforcement of laws against polluters and sought to help private enterprise in exploiting public lands.

He has strengthened the Pentagon with a 7 percent increase in the defense budget while giving a 25 percent tax cut.

At the same time, he has produced a record-breaking deficit of around $180 billion, with his 1980 promise of a balanced budget by 1984 going by the board.

His foray into the Midwestern heartland drew crowds at rallies and along the streets. He handled the hecklers smoothly, returning taunt for taunt with humor.

Pilot Pulls Off A Surprise

When Carl Olsson landed his piper Comanche airplane at Wilmington's Bluethenthal Field the evening of May 24, 1960, he had a surprise for his wife back in Atlanta.

Olsson, a Swedish national who had lived in the United States four years, had told his wife on leaving home that day he was flying to New York and would call her from there Thursday night. Instead, the 38-year-old electronics engineer said he intended to fly to Stockhold, Sweden, and would call her on his arrival.

Olsson said he and his family intended to return to Sweden and he had told her he intended to go to New York to arrange for the shipment of his plane to Sweden. His decision to fly the craft to Sweden instead was simply a matter of economics.

"I plan on moving my family back to Sweden this summer and it would cost me about $3,000 to ship my plane there," he explained. "It would cost $2,200 if someone flew it there for me and I figure I can fly it myself at a cost of about $200."

He smiled broadly when he disclosed his plan to surprise his wife and four young children.

"My wife doesn't like flying and wasn't too enthusiastic when I told her I would fly to New York to arrange to ship my plane to Sweden," he said. "I don't know what she'll think when I call her from Stockholm Friday."

He did not appear to be concerned about the 5,400-mile flying trip to Stockholm than the average North Carolina motorist would be at the prospect of driving from Raleigh to Wilmington even though 3,700 miles of his journey would be over water.

Olsson also admitted he had been flying less than a year and a half and had logged only 380 hours in the air. However, he said he had planned the trip carefully and had studied aviation technical manuals many hours in making his preparations over a seven-month period.

"I hope no one misunderstands my trip," he said. "This isn't something I planned in two weeks time. Nor would I recommend that anyone else try it with only limited planning."

He had removed the three-passenger seats from the four-place craft — on which he spent a total of about $16,000 — to make room for additional fuel tanks. This gave him a fuel capacity of 250 gallons and increased his range to about 4,000 miles.

He had planned to fly first from Wilmington to Bermuda (700 miles), then to the Azores (2,200 miles), on to Lisbon (1,000) miles, then to Geneva, Switzerland (600 miles), and finally to Stockholm (1,000 miles).

"I have a lot of custom-made equipment especially for this one flight," Olsson explained. They included a long-range radio and an inflatable life raft equipped with a sail, fishing gear, a quantity of chocolate bars, two quarts of water in plastic bags and several cans of fruit juice.

Olsson had planned to fly on to Bermuda the same day he arrived in Wilmington. However, only one hour of daylight was left when he landed. So, he spent the night in the terminal building and took off from Bluethenthal Field at 5:40 a.m. the following day, flying northeast toward Elizabeth City where he set his course for Bermuda.

Although he appeared slightly nervous as he made his final instrument check before takeoff, he still spoke with confidence.

"It's really not too risky," he said. "I got a real good insurance rate for the flight, so it couldn't be too risky."

However he expressed concern for his wife and four children in Atlanta. "They know I've talked about making the flight," he said. "But my wife was opposed to it. I hope she doesn't find out until I'm in Stockholm."

In June, Olsson landed in the Stockholm Airport. TV camers followed his landing and recorded the ceremony when he was awarded a medal by the Royal Swedish Air Club.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — The Republican Party not only is widely perceived as more likely than the Democratic Party to keep the nation prosperous, but is now challenging the Democrats as the party more likely to keep the nation at peace.

The significance of these findings is that the political party that leads on both these issues at election time has always won that election.

The latest Gallup Poll shows 49 percent of the public — the highest figure since these measurements were begun in 1951 — saying the Republican Party will do a better job of keeping the U.S. prosperous, while 36 percent name the Democratic Party and 15 percent say they see little difference between the parties or don't offer an opinion.

The Republicans have had a clear advantage over the Democrats on only three other occasions, twice during the early months of the Reagan administration in 1981, and again last April.

The Republican Party's advantage on the prosperity issue earlier this year was offset by the Democratic Party's substantial lead as being more likely to keep the nation at peace. In the latest survey, however, the GOP has moved to a position of statistical parity with the Democrats as the "party of peace."

Currently, 40 percent say the Democratic Party is stronger in this regard, 37 percent name the GOP, and 23 percent see no difference or have no opinion (The 3 percentage points separating the two parties is not a statistically meaningful difference.) With only a few exceptions, the Democrats have held an edge on the peace issue for over a decade, with the lead changing hands at intervals before then.

Women are less likely (33 percent) than men (43 percent) to view the GOP as being better able to keep the country out of war. Women's views on this issue, other surveys have shown, contribute strongly to President Reagan's "gender gap."

The GOP's current claim to the title "party of prosperity" is strengthened by the fact that a substantial proportion of Democrats in the survey (20 percent) desert their party to vote for the Republican Party as superior in this respect, compared to only 5 percent of Republicans who cite the Democratic Party as better. Also, proportionately more Republicans are steadfast to the GOP (86 percent) than Democrats are loyal to their party (66 percent) as doing a better job of keeping the country prosperous. Independents express a strong preference for the Republican Party.

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,384 adults, 18 and older, conducted in scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period August 10-12.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction.

An American Hero From The Raw Side

WASHINGTON — This week we went to see an overrated movie that's recently inspired a massive cult following among the Michael Jackson generation. The film is "Purple Rain," its star is a precocious rock-and-roller named Prince.

Likenesses between Prince and Jackson abound. Both are light-skinned black singers with Midwestern origins, androgynous appearances, enigmatic personalities and, in some instances, similar sounds.

In public image, however, Prince is to Jackson as Mordred is to King Arthur — that is, as evil is to virtue. Just when Michael seemed to define where his generation was heading, his antithesis throws good guesses to the wind.

Prince hasn't suddenly emerged from oblivion to supplant Jackson mythology with his own anti-heroic version. At 26, the dimunitive Minnesotan has already been recording his own blend of rock (some might call it "post-disco funk") on the Warner Bros. label for seven years. In rock cultural terms, that makes him almost middle-aged.

At the same time, he's cultivated a naughty personna to accompany a string of gold records and reportedly masterful musical talent (yes, some rockers do have the latter). All sorts of adjectives have been used or created to color Prince's ambisexuality and erotic obsessions. Warner Bros. once had to advise disc jockeys to listen to Prince's albums before playing them on the air. His on-stage dress has included, at different times, leopard-skin skivvies and a black bikini bottom; his suggestive gesticulations would have left Elvis Presley, if not Mick Jagger, blushing.

Jagger, in fact, gives Prince a historical context. Two decades ago, the Rolling Stones emerged as the wicked alternative to the then-peaches-'n-cream Beatles.

Like some celebrities, however, Prince has confounded his fans and interpreters with his private contradictions. Not only is he a noted recluse, but also a self-professed teetotaler and a religious zealot. Just as similar inconsistencies have helped to make Jackson an object of journalists' fascination, so have they done with Prince.

Prince brings self-mythology to the screen in "Purple Rain," a $7 million, largely autobiographocal movie set in wintertime Minneapolis. On one hand, Prince portrays himself as a troubled child-prodigy struggling amid violence at home and competitive pressures in the local music business; utlimately his character overcomes hangups and competitors.

On the other, "Purple Rain" is a motorcycle ride through the star's own pornographic fantasies. In light of its R ranking, however, he manages to keep his clothes on.

If you're one of the unconverted, you might walk away from "Purple Rain" with the impression that, above all, Prince loves himself. Indeed, though the frequent use of mirrors gives "Purple Rain" a hint of self-parody, that possibility doesn't hide the film's overtly narcissistic objectives. Even Jackson has avoided self-portraits of the "Purple Rain" variety.

But, with major commercial success, Prince has expanded to almost two hours a plot that might have been better suited to 15 minutes. Variety magazine says that it was the nation's most poular current film during the first week of August. Few other rockers would even have dared to put their egos to such a test; fewer yet would have succeeded.

Ultimately, few others enjoy Prince's cross-section of partisans. Consider, for example, the whites who, in the movie, dominate the night-club audience; even in predominantly black Washington, the "Purple Rain" crowds have been thoroughly intregrated. "Purple Rain" fans are likely to have seen "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," "Ghostbusters" and other favorites of Middle America.

Indeed, the fact that Prince has competed favorably with Michael Jackson and Mary Lou Retton for America's attention suggests that wholesome goody-two-shoes aren't the only role models in demand

Boston Asks Angels To Quit Patrols

BOSTON (AP) — An aide to Mayor Raymond L. Flynn has asked the Guardian Angels to quit patrolling city neighborhoods following two nights of fighting between members of the group and other youths.

The request came after some community leaders complained that the voluntary street-patrol group is acting more like a street gang. Lawrence Turnbow, head of the group, said the Angels had not been notified of the mayor's request and would continue to patrol neighborhoods.

But he said they would cut out patrols in the area where the fights occurred until a meeting this week with community leaders and elected officials.

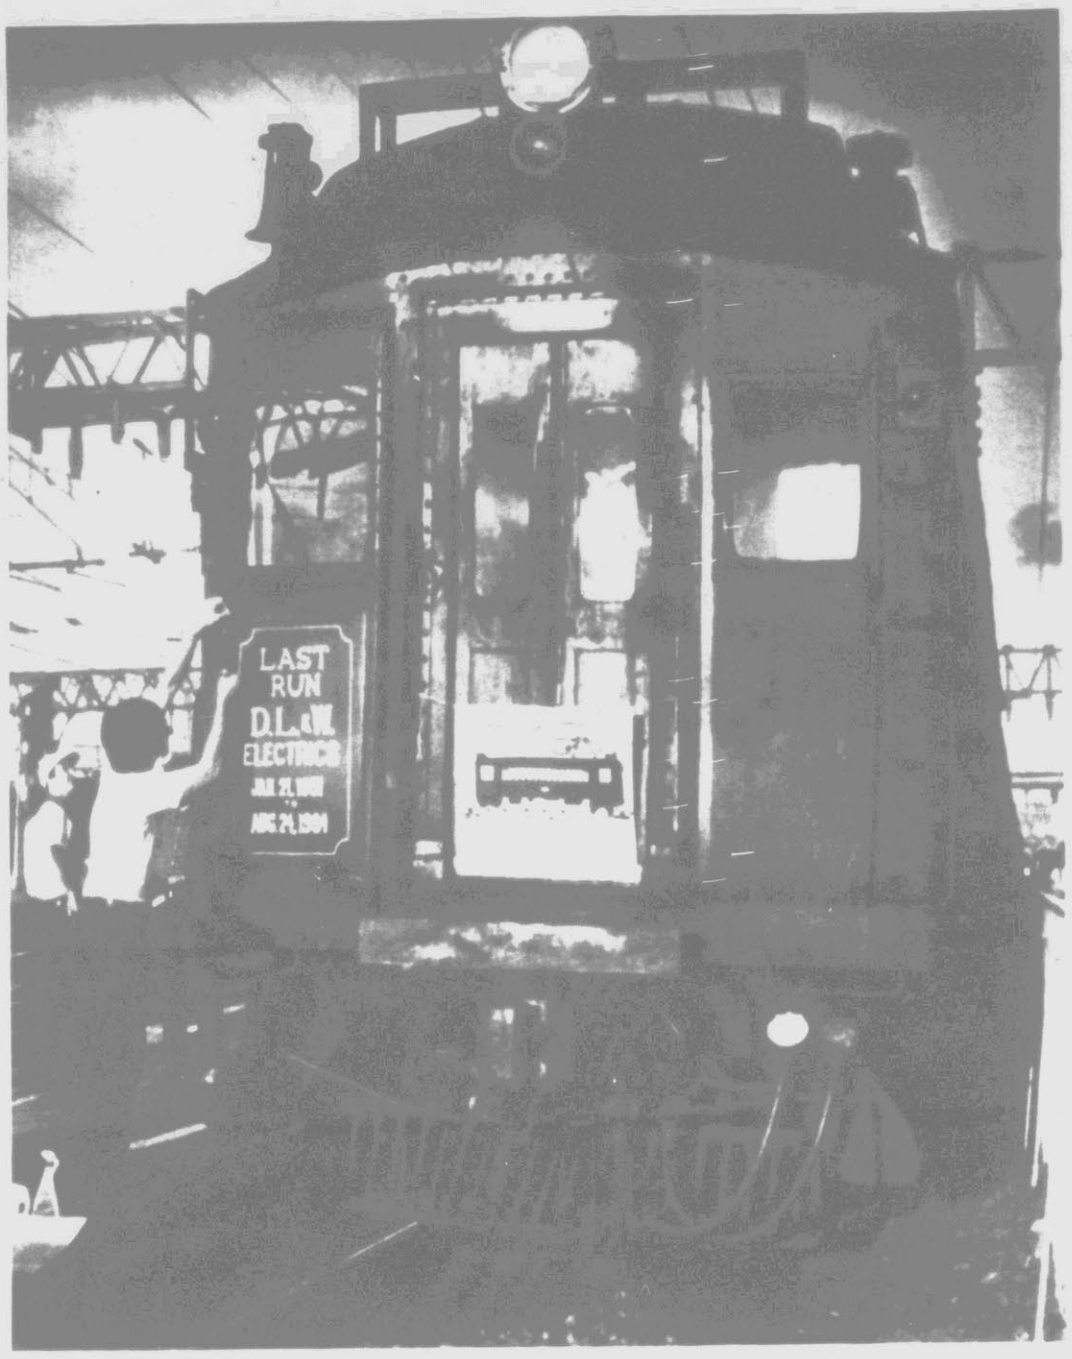

The patrols "are the kind of thing that tends to irritate a situation or create a situation that doesn't exist," said James Jordan, press aide to the mayor, following a meeting Friday with Flynn, city leaders and police.

According to police, five Guardian Angels fought with neighborhood teen-agers Wednesday evening in a middle- and working-class neighborhood that abuts several poor, high-crime areas. Four were injured.

The next night, 20 Angels returned and encountered a group of 60 neighborhood youths. One Angel was injured on the hand, and one youth in the other group was arrested for assault with a deadly weapon, a bottle.

The Angels, who have been patrolling Boston's public transit system for three years wearing distinctive red berets and T-shirts, have been criticized in the community.

"As far as I'm concerned, they're a band of renegades," said Georgette Watson, head of the one neighborhood's anti-crime organization. "Who gave them the authority to roam the city? Who gave them the authority to come in and beat up neighborhood kids?"

Air Florida Prepares New Plan

MIAMI (AP) — Air Florida, struggling to return to service after grounding its flights and filing for protection from its creditors last month, says it will have a viable reorganization plan ready by this week's court-ordered deadline.

That plan could include a purchase by Chicago-based Midway Airlines, which has been negotiating with Air Florida for more than a week, according to both carriers.

Air Florida, heavily in debt, filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act on July 3, after grounding its planes and laying off its 1,200 employees.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Sidney Weaver said he would appoint a trustee if the Miami-based airline failed to produce a realistic business plan by Monday.

But Air Florida spokeswoman Robin Cohn said the carrier doesn't intend to seek an extension of Weaver's deadline.

"We will be going to court on Monday with a plan to present to the judge," she said, refusing to elaborate on what that might include.

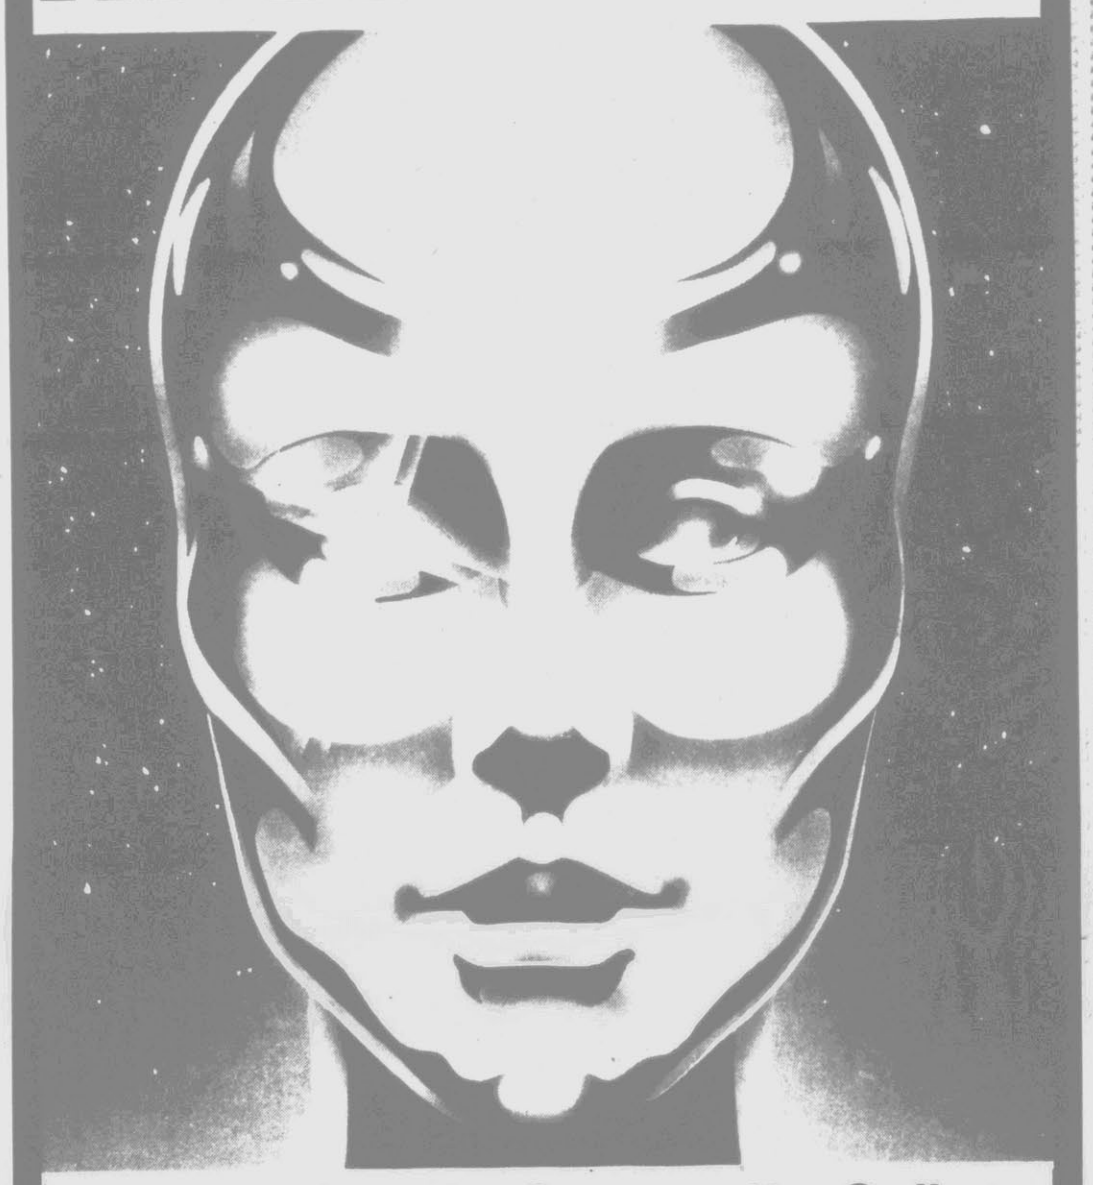

Air Florida has sought help from a number of airlines. It recently turned down an offer by Northeastern International Airways to take over its assets, saying the Fort Lauderdale-based airline failed to provide adequate financial information.

Midway President Neal Meehan met last week with some of Air Florida's unsecured creditors in Dallas to gather more information about the carrier's financial condition.

Moscow Claims U.S. Planted Bomb Aboard Doomed KAL Jet Last Year

MOSCOW (UPI) — Moscow radio said Saturday the Korean airliner shot down by Soviet warplanes a year ago actually was destroyed by a U.S. bomb planted on board and set off by remote control during its spiral to cover up a failed spy mission.

The bizarre explanation, described as the conclusion of a former American diplomat, came exactly a week before the first anniversary of the Soviet missile attack that killed all 269 people aboard KAL flight 007 on Sept. 1, 1983.

Attributing the information to a former U.S. diplomat identified as John Keppel, the official radio said, "the CIA and the Pentagon did everything to prevent the remnants of the aircraft from getting into someone else's hands."

The radio reported that Keppel said the United States detonated a bomb after the Soviet jets fired its missiles to force the Boeing 747 jet down because "otherwise it could be easily proved that the plane was on a spying mission."

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said, "If the charge is being accurately reported it is blatantly false." She would not comment on whether Keppel had been connected to the State Department.

The Soviet Union, which took almost a week to admit it fired two missiles to "terminate" Flight 007, had maintained it was justified in destroying the plane because it was spying. Citizens of 13 nations, including 61 Americans, died.

The charge that the United States blew up the airliner appeared to be part of a buildup of Soviet propaganda timed for the Sept. 1 anniversary.

The attack also was discussed in a long newspaper article on Friday and in answers to letters by the official radio, repeating the familiar story that the United States was responsible for the deaths because they used the plane for spying, a charge denied by U.S. officials.

The new Soviet explanation came in circuitous fashion. Moscow radio reported from Rio do Janeiro that there was "wide" coverage in Brazil of an interview that Keppel allegedly gave to the Italian newspaper Il Messaggero.

"The Boeing Flight 007 blew up 49 seconds after being hit by missiles from a Soviet fighter," the radio said. "This proves that the airliner was blasted by an explosive device which had been planted in it.

"The people on board knew nothing about the device, which had to go off on a radio command from overseas in case of the mission's failure," the official broadcast said.

The report also included the old charge that former President Richard Nixon had changed plans to be on the fight after receiving a warning it was on a spy mission.

The new Soviet story diverges sharply from the Western version of events at the time. Radar showed the plane spiralled out-of-control after the two Soviet missiles were fired in a 12-minute dive into the frigid Sea of Japan.

The Soviet Union at first refused all comment and refused to allow any other nation to join its search for survivors or the plane. A Soviet plane overhead an hour after the attack reported an oil slick, but there was no indication of any rescue mission.

The black box was never found despite an American and Japanese search, and the Soviet Union turned over only two small batches of debris.

Fire Ruins Warehouse Complex

LONDON (AP) — A warehouse fire early Saturday destroyed millions of dollars worth of liquor, melted 100 tons of butter and burned furniture, clothing and tea in London's biggest blaze in 10 years, official said.

It took 200 firemen six hours to bring the flames under control at the warehouse complex in Cricklewood, northwest London. Half of the firefighters will remain through the weekend to snuff out sparks in the smoldering rubble, said a London Fire Brigade spokesman.

Liquor valued at $5.2 million went up in flames, according to the British Broadcasting Corp. Then a 100-ton store of butter melted, spreading burning fat throughout much of the Cricklewood Trading Estate. Warehouses containing other goods were ignited and burned.

Firefighters saved 40 percent of the complex, which is owned by the Church of England, the fire brigade said.

As the flames spread, police cleared out one warehouse used to store court exhibits and articles confiscated from prisoners. Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, reported the warehouse may also have contained ammunition and gold.

Soviets Announce Testing Of New Cruise Missiles

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said in an unusual public announcement Saturday that it is conducting successful tests of new long-range, cruise missiles launched from the ground.

The announcement that a new Soviet weapon was being tested came from the Defense Ministry, and was carried by the official news agency Tass and read on Soviet television news.

It blamed the United States for introducing new long-range cruise missiles and said the Soviet weapon was being developed in response to U.S. deployments.

The publicity given the announcement recalled the fanfare surrounding an official interview given by Defense Minister Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov in May, when he announced that the Soviets had installed nuclear missiles on submarines off American shores.

In Washington, spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said the State Department would have no comment on the announcement.

The long-range cruise missiles, intended for land targets, are powered by jet engines and generally fly at either high subsonic or supersonic speeds like airplanes. They are highly accurate, but it takes them much longer to reach targets than ballistic missiles, which are rocket-propelled and travel many times faster than sound.

Both the submarine deployments — an expansion of existing forces — and the matching of U.S. cruise missiles were among measures promised by the late President Yuri V. Andropov when he warned in November that deployments of new cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe would draw Soviet retaliation.

An editorial in the official Communist Party newspaper Pravda on July 31 repeated Andropov's vow to match U.S. and NATO cruise missile deployments with longer-range Soviet weaponry.

Saturday's announcement said that "the United States has embarked on a massive deployment of long-range cruise missiles, including its stationing of ground-launched cruise missiles of this kind in several West European countries in December 1983."

Chernenko Letter Printed In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news media on Saturday published a letter to anti-nuclear campaigners from President Konstantin U. Chernenko. There was speculation the release of the letter was meant to counter rumors about Chernenko's health.

Chernenko, 72, has not been seen in public since early July, and the official news agency Tass announced July 15 that he was going on vacation. There were uncomfirmed reports circulating in Moscow last week that Chernenko had returned to the capital for medical treatment.

There have been no reports in the Soviet media about Chernenko receiving official visitors during his summer vacation, fueling rumors about his whereabouts and health.

Western diplomats said they had no information on Chernenko's health, but one noted top Soviet officials frequently take long vacations.

"Until we've had more than a two-month absence, it's not really even worth speculating," said one Western diplomat who asked not to be identified.

Tass carried the letter from Chernenko to municipal officials from Western countries who are campaigning to make their cities nuclear-free zones, but it did not say when the letter was written.

The letter also was read on the main evening television news program and it contained no additions to previous Soviet policy statements supporting nuclear free zones, particularly in Europe, as a step to halting the arms race.

Tass said the letter was a reply to John Hetherington, the mayor of Manchester, England.

It said municipal officials from Britain, the Netherlands, Ireland, Italy, Spain, West Germany, the United States, Japan and New Zealand took part in a conference in Manchester in April and appealed for expanded nuclear-free zones.

Many Women Candidates Find Funds Scarce

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

"A man never finds himself in this spot... I can give you a speech about how hard it is for women to raise money to run for office." — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine A. Ferraro, at a news conference in New York last Tuesday on her finances.

Is it so?

Is money, the mother's milk of politics, harder for women to come by?

"Absolutely," says Arlene Violet, a Republican who is trying to unseat the Democratic attorney general of Rhode Island. "I understand perfectly where she's coming from."

"For every dollar a woman can raise, a man can raise $10," claims California's top election official, Secretary of State March Fong Eu, a Democrat.

But some of Ms. Ferraro's Republican colleagues think she is barking up the wrong tree.

"She's trying to use the women's bit a little too much," said Rep. Bobbi Fiedler, of Northridge, Calif.

And Rep. Barbara F. Vucanovich, of Reno, Nev., who raised $600,000 in 1982 in winning her seat in the House, said emphatically, "I don't think women have any more problem than men — if they are qualified. I think gender has nothing to do with it."

There is agreement across the political aisles that it is hard for any first-time candidate to raise money, particularly to oppose a well-entrenched incumbent. But sentiment is divided on whether women — who occupy only two of the 100 U.S. Senate seats and only 23 of 435 in the House — have a tougher financial row to hoe.

Ruth McFarland, a Democratic state senator in Oregon challenging Republican Rep. Denny Smith, complains, "We have to ask twice as much and twice as often to get half as much, and we're expected to be twice as grateful... Women are often perceived as candidates who can't win. It's a self-fulfilling prophecy."

But Betty Heitman, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, said, "I think it was true. But I think it's becoming less true." She said that funds are loosening up as more women have proved themselves in office.

Ms. Ferraro, the first woman on the ticket of a major party, has been the subject of controversy for not disclosing her husband's finances to the House Ethics Committee over the past six years and because she illegally borrowed more than $100,000 from her husband and children for her first race in 1978.

Federal election law bars anyone, including a spouse, from giving or lending more than $1,000 to a candidate for federal office. Her husband, John A. Zaccaro, and campaign were fined $750 for the mistake, which they blamed on faulty legal advice.

Ms. Ferraro said that when the Federal Election Commission told her to repay the funds, she found she could not get a bank loan without her husband's signature.

"A man never finds himself in this spot," said Ms. Ferraro, who was then forced to sell property. "I never, when I got started in this whole thing of running for election, ever thought that it was going to cost me not only $130,000 in property that I owned, but that I was going to have to go around scrounging around between September and November (1978) to try and raise another $40,000 and really having to spend a couple of years paying off those debts."

She gets no sympathy from Bobbi Fiedler, 47, a former Los Angeles school board member who says she is the least wealthy of California's 45 members of Congress.She said Ms. Ferraro "had the luxury of not having to go out and beat bushes to raise money" for her first race. "When you don't have the money, you have to be resourceful."

"I've heard a lot of women complain about the difficulties of raising money. The question I have is, is it really because they're a woman or because they may not really have done the ditch-digging work preparing to run for that campaign?" she added.

Ferraro Campaigns In Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York reached across the span of southern Democrats on Saturday, taking her case for victory in November to onetime segregationist Gov. George Wallace and to the biggest black Democratic group in the region.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee kept up the drumbeat of criticism of President Reagan, ridiculing his claim that all Americans are better off under his administration.

"Any president who pretends that blacks are better off than they were four years ago does not know what it means to be president of all the people," Ms. Ferraro told the black Alabama Democratic Conference.

She also defended Georgian Jimmy Carter and his presidency — a major target of criticism by the Republicans.

"We don't have one thing to apologize for in electing a Southern president who appointed more blacks, women and Hispanics to the federal bench than all the presidents before him put together," she told the black group.

Ms. Ferraro also held private meetings with Birmingham Mayor Richard Arrington, an early supporter of Walter F. Mondale, and with the Alabama Women's Political Caucus. The Alabama events capped the brief trip South, before Ms. Ferraro flew back to Long Island, N.Y., for a voter registration rally and a party fund-raiser.

Ms. Ferraro, whose candidacy Mondale says symbolizes "opening doors" for all Americans, held a private, 10-minute meeting at the governor's mansion with Wallace, who leapt into the public eye by blocking a schoolhouse door to black students in the early 1960s. Wallace has since repudiated his segregationist activities.

Reagan To Be Active

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, aiming for a re-election landslide, is plotting an aggressive strategy that could keep him on the campaign trail more than half the time between now and the Nov. 6 election.

Of the 72 days remaining in the 1984 presidential campaign, Reagan was planning to spend up to 40 of them on the road in hopes of rolling up a large majority on Election Day.

Currently the solid favorite in his race with Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale, Reagan has the luxury of setting his sights on increasing the Republican membership in Congress and trying to boost the minority status of his party.

"Today we look very, very strong," campaign press secretary James Lake said last week. "He could indeed have a very significant victory."

Lake said the president will travel two to four days a week during the campaign, beginning with an appearance in conservative Anaheim, Calif., — his home state — on Labor Day weekend, the traditional campaign kickoff.

From Anaheim, Reagan was expected to make an appearance in northern California.

Governors Suggest More 'True Fritz'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Fifteen Democratic governors met Saturday with presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale and urged him to "let his hair down" in his underdog campaign against President Reagan.

At a news conference after Mondale and the governors had met behind closed doors for about two hours, Gov. Harry Hughes of Maryland said the state officials told the candidate they were concerned that the voters have not seen "the true Fritz Mondale."

"He's a nice guy," said Hughes.

Asked how Mondale might get that across in the campaign against Reagan, Hughes said: "Let his hair down and speak off the cuff. He knows the issues."

Asked what he intended to do, Mondale replied, "I'm going to continue to tell the truth."

He called Reagan "a candidate who tries to flimflam the American people."

"There is no question a person has to communicate effectively," said the Democratic candidate, adding that "this campaign is going to run on issues."

Mondale, rarely seen with a hair out of place, is a very reserved, private man not given to relaxing in public. By contrast, Reagan is skilled at getting across the image of a relaxed man of the people.

Mondale said that during their discussion, he and the governors had talked about the problems facing American farmers. Kansas Gov. John Carlin didn't say "come on out and say anything you want about agriculture so long as your hair is hanging over your eyes," Mondale said in contrasting issues to imagery.

He added that "this is not a contest between advertising agencies ... it's obvious Mr. Reagan doesn't intend to tell us what he's going to do" if re-elected.

When the governors were asked how they thought Mondale would fare in their states, Hughes, Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky, Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts and Rudy Perpich of Minnesota — Mondale's home state — all predicted the Democratic nominee would win.

Gov. James Blanchard of Michigan conceded that "right now our ticket is the underdog," but he predicted Mondale could turn it around in his state.

"Ohio, like much of the country, is an uphill fight," said Gov. Richard Celeste. "I think it's a winnable fight."

Mondale opened the news conference by criticizing what he described as Reagan's recent characterization of nuclear freeze advocates of "jackasses."

Expedition Finds Ruins That Could Be Noah's Ark

ANKARA, Turkey (ap) — Five Americans and one Turkish explorer believe they have discovered Noah's Ark on the southwestern face of Mount Ararat, a team spokesman said Saturday.

"Members of the team arrived at the site of a boat-shaped formation clearly visible at the 5,200-foot level on Wednesday and Thursday," said Marvin Steffins, the president of International Expeditions, based in his hometown of Monroe, La., and the head of the team.

"We believe further archeological investigation and scientific evaluation will prove this to be the site of the remains of the Ark of Noah," he told a news conference.

Members of International Expeditions included Steffins' wife Marjorie, their daughter Marianne, Watcha McCollum and Tim Brinkley, all Americans. The hometowns of McCollum and Brinkley were not given. Bulent Atalay of Turkey was also on the expedition.

The book of Genesis in the Bible says that after a great flood inundated the earth, the Ark with its cargo of two of every kind of animal came to rest on the "mountains of Ararat." The Moslem holy book, the Koran, also mentions both the flood and the Ark.

"Our belief is based on the location in the mountains of Ararat, the boat shape and the dimensions corresponding to the ones given in the book of Genesis in the Bible," Steffins said.

According to Genesis, the Ark was 300 cubits long, 50 cubits wide and 30 cubits high. A cubit, an ancient form of measurement, is believed equal to between 18 and 22 inches. That would make the ark at least 450 feet long.

Steffins showed reporters a large bag of samples he brought from the site and said they would be analyzed in the United States.

The samples were oxidized small pieces of flat-shaped rocks and wood. There were also small packages of sand or soil.

Steffins said the ark could have been almost destroyed by the elements after so many years, but added, "There is enough there to figure out the proper sizes of the instrument and the archeologists will be able to measure it."

"I am not an archeologist nor a geologist, so we requested Turkish authorities to grant a permit for continuing archeological work by competent personnel," Steffins said, adding that he wanted official confirmation before saying the formation was definitely the Ark.

"We are convinced that confirmation of this discovery will be a great contribution to the peoples of the world," he added.

Steffins said the search was sponsored by contributions.

Brinkley told The Associated Press that the group started the expedition Aug. 20 and all six team members were present when they spotted the boat-shaped formation on the southwest side of the mountain.

The team plans to return to Mount Ararat next summer, the best season for exploration and work in the region, Brinkley added.

There are still two other American teams on the mountain searching for the Ark.

"All three American teams are in contact with each other," Steffins said.

He said his team had submitted a report to Turkish authorities and asked them to keep climbers and expeditioners away from the area where they believe the Ark is located.

Vacationers Utilize Ferries As Strike Paralyzes Ports

LONDON (AP) — A dock workers' strike paralyzed 19 British ports Saturday. The nation's largest passenger port, at Dover, remained open, however, and thousands of vacationers boarded ferries at the start of the biggest summer holiday weekend.

Dover is the main point of departure for France and the continent. It was one of a dozen ports still operating on the second day of Britain's second national dock strike in two months. Union members at these ports are to vote next week on whether to back the strike.

Leaders of the 35,000-member longshoremen's union said openly they ordered the walkout to back the 24-week-old coal miners' strike. They picked up support from rail and seamen's unions Saturday, which vowed not to cross picket lines.

Transport Secretary Nicholas Ridley said the dock strike made no sense and urged longshoremen to return to work and save their jobs and "thousands and thousands" of others threatened by the strike.

"It is a political strike engineered to support the crumbling miners dispute," he said. "There is no industrial issue at stake here — no quarrel between employer and worker."

Arthur Scargill, militant leftist leader of the National Union of Mineworkers, told a rally of 3,000 Scottish miners he will ask Britain's umbrella 10 million-member Trades Union Congress next week not to cross miners' picket lines or handle coal moved by non-striking labor or troops.

He said that if the labor federation refuses, "it would be stained for all time with what would be described as an act of betrayal."

On a march preceding the rally in Dalkeith, near Edinburgh, police plunged into a crowd of bystanders after an egg splattered Scargill's jacket. Who threw the egg was not known.

The coal strike has split the 183,000 miners and engendered almost daily picket line violence between strikers and police protecting moderates who have returned to work, demanding a strike vote.

Mine union leaders called the walkout March 12 to protest plans by the state-owned National Coal Board to shut 20 money-losing pits and cut 20,000 jobs. The leaders have refused to hold a national strike vote, saying miners voted with their feet by walking out. The strike has idled 75 percent of Britain's 175 mines.

The dock strike and possibility of sporadic action on the railways appears to have strengthened Scargill's hand.

John Connolly, head of the docks committee of the Transport and General Workers' Union, said he will be seeking wider support from truck drivers, dredging crews and other transport workers.

"I want to make the issue clear," he said. "This strike decision is in support of the (transport union's) executive policy to support the miners."

Hijack Ends

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Seven Sikh hijackers released 79 hostages from an Indian Airlines jet Saturday in return for a week's asylum here and a pledge by the government to help them get to America, some of the freed passengers and an official reported.

The 73 passengers and six crew were taken to the Dubai airport's transit lounge where they received medical care, food and beverages, said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

They had been held captive since the Boeing 737 was hijacked while on a domestic flight Friday — a total of about 37 hours.

Just before the release, the hijackers announced through the plane's loudspeaker that they would be guests of the government in Dubai for seven days and then would go to the United States, the passengers said.

Peace Hope Fall Again In Lebanon

MOUKHTARA, Lebanon (AP) — Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt dashed hopes Saturday for any quick end to tension in Lebanon, delivering a blistering attack in which he called Christian President Amin Gemayel "a butcher."

Jumblatt refused anew to allow the Lebanese army into the Druse-controlled central mountains as part of a government security plan, and he dropped new hints that the helicopter crash that killed the Lebanese army's highest ranking Druse officer Thursday was no accident.

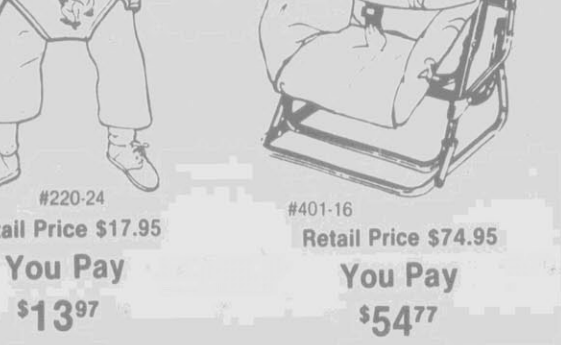

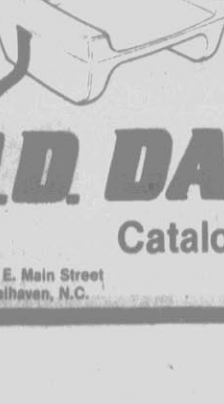

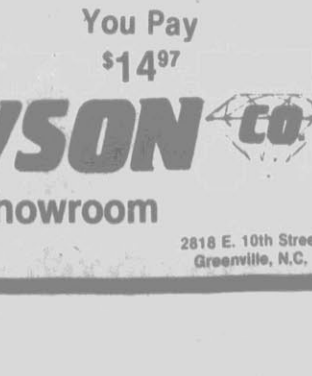

Jumblatt's remarks, delivered during a funeral service for Maj. Gen. Nadim Hakim, the army chief of staff, came as Syria expressed growing impatience at Lebanese leaders' failure to implement the Syrian-backed security plan.

"The only thing that is allowed is to progress — and fast," the Syrian government newspaper Tishrin said in an editorial Saturday. "It is not allowed to go backward or to fail."

Possible progress toward ending the fighting in the northern Lebanese port of Tripoli was announced in Damascus, the Syrian capital. But police said new sniping broke out in Tripoli Saturday and expressed fear lest it escalate into the heavy fighting that killed 120 people and wounded 325 earlier in the week.

In Beirut, police said a car containing 330 pounds of explosives was found parked near an army checkpoint in the Moslem suburb of Ouzai. The driver, a Palestinian, was arrested but denied knowing about the explosives.

Police said they also dismantled a bomb loaded with 66 pounds of explosives found in a suitcase in the parking lot at Beirut International Airport.

N.C. GOP Expects Record Victories In '84 Elections

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The popularity of Ronald Reagan and a realignment of political parties could add up to the most Republican election victories in North Carolina since 1972, according to the state's delegates to the national GOP convention.

But Republicans admit there is one big difference between 1972 and 1984 — Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election battle against Democrat Gov. Jim Hunt — and they are hesitant to predict its impact.

"It's awful hard not to expect to do as well as 1972," said Dave Flaherty, state GOP chairman. "This time we've got the best candidate for governor we've ever had. We'll never have as good an opportunity."

It was in 1972 that North Carolina helped re-elect President Richard Nixon and chose Jim Holshouser as its first Republican governor this century. That was the year when voters sent Jesse Helms to the U.S. Senate for his first term.

Reagan's campaign staff believes it is doing well in the South this year, possibly building a second political base for the president.

Charlie Black, Reagan campaign consultant, said at a news conference last week that one recent poll shows Reagan 17 percentage points ahead of Democratic contender Walter Mondale in North Carolina. A poll completed early this month showed that 56 percent of the public believes the country is headed in the right direction, a level of optimism which the campaign said is unprecedented in this decade.

Republicans see themselves as returning to traditional American values, ideas supported by Reagan and the party's conservatives.

"The Democratic Party is becoming the liberal party with a lot of special interest groups in it," Flaherty said.

Flaherty said he couldn't imagine many North Carolinians supporting philosophies espoused by Mondale and his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, because they are so liberal.

"There is no question in my mind that the Reagan-Bush philosophy coincides overwhelmingly with the majority of North Carolinians," said former Congressman Eugene Johnston of Greensboro, a delegate and head of the state's Reagan-Bush campaign.

Rep. Jim Martin, GOP nominee for governor, said he's not sure those ideological differences between the parties will affect his race. But he said Democratic disaffection will.

Martin has picked up support from workers for unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidates Jimmy Green and Eddie Knox.

"They don't like the way the primary was run," Martin said. "They don't feel hide bound to support the (Democratic) nominee no matter who he is or how he got there."

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, is so optimistic about this year that he has predicted the GOP could keep its majority in the U.S. Senate.

IN THE STATE

Accident Forces Evacuation

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An explosion caused by a collision between the car of a robbery suspect and a tanker truck carrying gasoline forced the evacuation early Saturday morning of about 1,500 people near a busy Charlotte intersection, police said.

The incident began when Charlotte police officer J.C. Jones began chasing three men in a 1973 Cadillac soon after the robbery of an east Charlotte women's clothing store about 4:30 a.m. When Jones stopped the car, he discovered "a large quantity of women's clothing" in the car and called for assistance, said Bob Moss, a spokesman for the Charlotte Police Department.

Two of the suspects fled on foot with Jones in pursuit, Moss said, and the third took off in the Cadillac.

Moss said the car, driven by Robin Eugene Land, 21, of Charlotte, struck a tanker truck, which skidded about 500 feet before bursting into flame.

The explosion did not injure the tanker truck driver, Sanford Preyor, of York S.C., and Land received only minor injuries, Moss said. But the explosion did cause damage to buildings and vehicles in the area, and a busy section of Independence Boulevard had to be closed because of damage to the road.

First Woman Joins N.C. Jaycees

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Angie Kelly says her application to the Gastonia Jaycees was not a crusade to become the first woman in the previously all-male organization — but the North Carolina Jaycees say that is what she has become.

"We didn't plan it that way," said Gastonia Jaycee president Rick Ward. "She was the first because she was the first to be persistent."

Ms. Kelly, a 33-year-old financial consultant, received unanimous approval to join the Jaycees from the local organization's board of directors Friday.

Child Dies In Mobile Home Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A 2-year-old Gray's Creek Township boy died Friday afternoon when he was trapped by a fire he apparently set inside his family's mobile home, fire officials say.

Gray's Creek firefighters found the body of Arthur Nathan Gasque in the bathtub of the smouldering mobile home, where he apparently tried to escape the smoke and flames.

Relatives, a neighbor and passers-by tried to save the boy but were stopped by intense heat and flames, witnesses said.

A Cumberland County sheriff's report said the boy was in the kitchen with his 4-year-old brother, Chris, at about 2:30 p.m. The older brother told officials that Nathan found a candle and lit it using the kitchen stove's pilot light. He then apparently set some curtains on fire, the report said.

NCSU Names New Dean

RALEIGH (AP) — William B. Toole III, associate dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at North Carolina State University, will become dean of the school Sept. 1, subject to approval by the necessary boards.

Toole accepted the offer from N.C. State Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton, but must be confirmed by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, which meets Sept. 14, and the NCSU Board of Trustees, which convenes Sept. 28-29.

Toole replaces Dean Robert O. Tilman, who resigned in April 1983 after 13 years in the position to return to teaching.

Hefner Bill Before House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. W. G. Hefner, D-N.C., says the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee has assured him his textile freeze bill will be considered by the panel when Congress returns Sept. 5 from its month-long recess.

With only a few weeks left in this legislative session, there was danger the bill would die without ever being brought to a vote.

UNC Trustees Name Chairman

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — George R. Ragsdale of Raleigh was unanimously elected to a one-year term as chairman of the University of North Carolina board of trustees Friday.

Ragsdale replaces Durham attorney W. Travis Porter III, who has completed his one-year-term.

Marines To Get Commander

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gen. John H. Miller will relinquish command of the Fleet Marine Force Atlantic-II Marine Amphibious Force on Wednesday at change-of-command ceremonies at Camp Lejeune.

Major Gen. Alfred M. Gray Jr. will replace Miller, who is retiring after more than 38 years of active duty in the U.S. Marines, according to base officials.

Gray will also will be promoted to lieutenant general at the ceremonies. Gray has served as commander of the 2nd Marine Division.

Hunt Isn't Sponsoring Incerator

ST. PAULS, N.C. (AP) — A proposed low-level radioactive waste incinerator in Bladen County is getting no "sponsorship from the governor or the state of North Carolina," according to a state official.

N.C. Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Heman Clark told a gathering of residents from Robeson, Bladen and Cumberland counties that Gov. Jim Hunt did not "recruit" U.S. Ecology Inc.

The firm has applied for an application to build an incinerator near Tar Heel which would burn low-level radioactive waste from all over the Southeast, officials said.

Death Brings Prison Sentence

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 60-year-old Guilford County man who spent six days and nights in a motel room with the corpse of a woman he allegedly killed has been sentenced to six years in prison.

James T. Myers of High Point pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of Bertha Lee Caldwell of Winston-Salem. Myers had been charged with murder.

Authorities said the stabbing apparently followed an argument.

Employees Name Director

RALEIGH (AP) — Durward Franklin Gunnells III has been named the first executive director of the State Employees of North Carolina Inc.

Gunnells, of Raleigh, has been the assistant director of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners for the past six years. He has also served as their general counsel.

Gunnells will preside over the 45,000 member union, which is the largest non-union public employees association. In July, the former N.C. State Employees Association combined with the former N.C. State Government Association.

Photographs By John Menapace To Be Shown At NCMA

UNTITLED . . . a 1981 photograph, is one of about 40 black and white photographs by John Menapace to be included in an exhibition opening Sept. 8 at the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh.

RALEIGH — An exhibition of approximately 40 black and white photographs by John Menapace of Durham will be on view Sept. 8-Nov. 25 in the North Carolina Gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh.

The works are chosen from a sequence of 60 photographs being published this year by the Jargon Society in a book titled, "letter in a Klein bottle." The photographs were taken 1971 to 1981.

In this series, Menapace's subjects are primarily public places in urban situations, showing signs of decay. The sense of abandonment and disuse is heightened by the absence of human figures and overwhelming stillness. Yet these austere images have a formal purity and elegance that seem at odds with their subject matter.

Menapace was born in 1927 in Shamokin, Pa. and attended Yale University. For nearly 30 years he has been design and production manager for Duke University Press in Durham, a position he plans to leave this year in order to concentrate on photography. He initiated the first studio course in photography at Duke, and has also taught at UNC-Chapel Hill and Penland School of Crafts.

He has had numerous exhibitions during the last 10 years and has been included in N.C. Artists Exhibitions at the museum. A 1976 Menapace photograph is part of the museum's permanent collection.

In 1980 Menapace received one of the Southeastern Seven Artist Fellowships awarded by the National Endowment for the Arts and the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art in Winston-Salem.

The Jargon Society, founded 33 years ago at Black Mountain College by poet Jonathan Williams, has published nearly 100 books, with an emphasis on poetry and photography. Menapace's book will be available for purchase in the museum shop.

The N. C. Museum of Art is located at 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh. Hours are 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday, 1-5 Sunday, closed Monday. Admission is free.

Applebroog Show At The Chrysler

NORFOLK, VA. — An exhibition of recent work by Ida Applebroog is currently being shown at The Chrysler Museum in Norfolk. This is the first showing of Ms. Applebroog's work in the southeast and includes the premiere exhibition of her recently completed large-scale oil paintings.

In recent years, Ida Applebroog has had nearly two dozen individual exhibitions in the U.S. and abroad, including those at the Whitney Museum, the Williams College of Art and the Rotterdam, Netherlands Arts Foundation. Her work is also being shown in "An International Survey of Recent Painting and Sculpture," the inaugural exhibition at the recently reopened Museum of Modern Art.

Another show at Chrysler to be on view through Sept. 2 is that of 19 watercolors by Kenneth Harris from his 1950-51 series, "Portrait of a City." The works encompass paintings of Norfolk street scenes from the downtown and Ghent areas as well as points of interest such as the old Norfolk Academy Building, the Myers House, St. Paul's Church and Lambert Point Docks.

The original 30-watercolor series was commissioned by the Norfolk Museum of Arts and Sciences, now the Chrysler Museum, in 1950. Following its premiere at the Norfolk Museum in 1952, the show traveled to nearly a dozen museums and galleries in the southeast.

An important acquisition has been announced by The Chrysler. It has recently acquired the earliest known oil sketch for the monumental canvas "The Angel Appearing to the Shepherds," an 1834 work by Thomas Cole. This work is the latest in a series of acquisition of preparatory studies for works in the museum's permanent collection. This allows visitors to compare the first idea of a work with the finished product. Visitors may also find it interesting to compare this Cole work with oil sketches by Renoir and Rousseau now hanging in the Impressionist Gallery.

The Chrysler Museum is located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch in Norfolk. Museum hours are 10 to 4 Tuesday-Saturday, 1-5 Sunday, closed Monday. Parking and admission to the museum are both free.

The Sultans Of Zanzibar

A total of five sultans of the islands of Zanzibar, the spice islands, were depicted on postage stamps during the years Zanzibar was a British protectorate — 1895 to 1963. The first was Sultan Seyyid Hamed-bin-Thwain, whose portrait was used on a series of stamps issued in 1896. Next was Sultan Seyyid Hamoud bin Mohommed Bin Said, 1899-1904, followed by Sultan Ali Bin Hamoud, 1904-12.

The fourth and longest reigning of the sultans of Zanzibar was Sultan Khalifa bin Harub, who held the sultanate from 1913 until 1961. The fifth and last sultanate to rule before Zanzibar was granted independence in 1963 was Sultan Seyyid Abdulla bin Khalifa. One man, Sultan Seyyid Jamshid bin Abudlla filled the position for a brief time after independence until Zanzibar was declared a republic early in 1964 following a revolt.

Carolina Festival

WINSTON-SALEM — The 1984 Carolina Streetscene, an outdoor festival featuring entertainment, arts and craft from throughout the South, will be held Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8 and 9. The festival is sponsored by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in conjunction with the Arts Council of Winston-Salem.

Now in its ninth year, Carolina Streetscene is the largest two-day event in North Carolina and provides a showcase for arts and crafts. It is highlighted by performances by national and local musical entertainers.

Handicrafts will include graphics, leather, and contemporary and mountain crafts.

The area for the festival will be from First Street to Seventh Street on the Trade Street axis. Eight entertainment stages will be placed throughout the festival area.

In addition to the weekend activities, exhibits by local, state and national artists and craftsmen will be displayed at about 20 downtown galleries on Sept. 6, and a musical performance will be held at Winston Square Park at 8 p.m.

The traditional preview party will be held at 4:30 p.m. Sept. 7 on the parking lot of the New Winston Plaza hotel, with an opportunity for festival visitors to see nationally known talent in concert.

Paul Green's Lyrical Language Lives On

By LYNN SUMMERELL
Public Relations
The Lost Colony

MANTEO — The late Paul Green was a poet of the theater. His 1929 play "In Abraham's Bosom" won him a Pulitzer Prize. His many plays about the South, and the people who farm its land, are knowing, insightful glimpses into lives that are "common" but touched with pride and a certain grandeur.

Green's landmark outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony," now in its forty-seventh year on Roanoke Island, has thrived and survived largely due to the strength brought to it by Green's expressive and moving script.

True, to today's ears some of the dialogue in "The Lost Colony" may sound a bit arch or "old-fashioned" but so does Shakespeare and many other great English and American authors of the past. Nonetheless, the beauty of Paul Green's words, coupled with the drama and emotion they convey, continue to thrill and inspire audiences year after year.

His words — the heart and soul of "The Lost Colony" — have become classic. They will live for generations to come.

One unforeseen and amusing way that Green's lyrical language has a life of its own is in its frequent quotation out of context. Just as the words Paul Green put into the mouths of his characters so aptly fit the dramatic moment in which they are uttered, so, too, do they often perfectly explain or describe "real life."

Often in fun, sometimes in seriousness, dialogue from "The Lost Colony" seems to find its way into the everyday lives of the drama's actors and staff. Particularly during the summer when the play is in production, social situations of every description are peppered with the wit and wisdom of North Carolina's premiere playwright with words or phrases from his outdoor drama.

For example:

• Many a cast member, upon entering a crowded room, has been known to exclaim "unto my people, greetings!" (Spoken by Queen Elizabeth I)

• Upon declining a cocktail or a glass of wine, a technician uttered "drink doth pickle a man's wits, and I who live by me wits can abide no pickling." (Spoken by Old Tom)

• At a recent party aboard one of the local head-boats, impatience was expressed when someone shouted "the ships are ready to sail and we should be aboard!" (Spoken by John Cage)

• Indecision has found voice through the years by a simple — and simple-minded statement — spoken in the play by Ananias Dare: "There are arguments on both sides, sir!"

• A veteran actress, upon moving into a summer apartment which she found too small and stuffy, told her room-mate that "I fear we shall never thrive here, Eleanor. Mayhap we should seek another settlement." (Father Martin)

• One can easily imagine any number of real-life situations aptly described with: "Verily he smells like a fishmonger or a dealer in old cats!" (First Soldier)

• Many a "Lost Colony" staff member has asked an associate to clarify a point of information by saying "I am no poet, Sir Walter. Speak plain." (Queen Elizabeth I)

• Good deeds done can easily be acknowledged with: "My brave knight beyond compare, you shall be rewarded." (Queen Elizabeth I)

• At the beach this summer, a dancer commented on the extremes to which another dancer went in covering her body with suntan lotion: "Whew! She's all anointed with bear grease again, people!" (Old Tom)

With each passing year, there is less and less doubt that Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" — and its magnificently lyrical language — truly "lives and shall not die," as the play's historian has said so often since the drama first appeared in 1937.

TUMBLERS' FLIGHT — Jesse White, left, watches his tumblers' recent practice at Chicago's Cabrini-Green housing project. ADF On Tour In Japan

DURHAM — The American Dance Festival (ADF) has been touring Japan since early August for its first residency abroad. The ADF dancers opened its month-long stay with workshops in Shikoku on Aug. 9-11, then went to Osaka for the period Aug. 15-18, and reported to Tokyo Aug. 19 where they will remain through the month.

Performances in Tokyo will include ones by the Laura Dean Dancers and Musicians, and Crowsnest. The performances will be highlighted by the world premiere of Ms. Dean's "Trio." Crowsnest will additionally travel to Hochigochi and Fukuoka for workshops and performances during the latter week of August.

The workshops by ADF in Japan have included classes in American modern dance, improvisation, repertory, jazz and other dance topics.

The Japan program is the second part of an exchange program with Japan which began in 1982 when the ADF brought four Japanese groups to Durham to perform. This year, to mark the ADF's 50th anniversary, the ADF hosted companies from India, the Philippines, Great Britain, Indonesia and France.

At the close of the Japan residency, Charles and Stephanie Reinhard and Ruby Shang will travel to the People's Republic of China to look at contemporary dance companies in China. Their scheduled three-week visit is at the invitation of the Chinese government.

POWELL HONORED

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hudson Review says British writer Anthony Powell has been named recipient of the 1984 Bennett Award "in recognition of his 'distinguished achievement in the art of the novel.'"

Powell, who lives in Somerset, will attend the formal presentation of the $15,000 award at the U.S. Embassy in London Oct. 25.

The citation accompanying the prize describes Powell as a writer who in "seeing life as a dance that is graceful and dangerous, time as both an opportunity and a menace, and people as comic heroes, equally brave, clownish and lovely

New Album For Greenville's Marvin Daniels

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

For as long as he can remember, Marvin Daniels has been in love with music. "I've always had a liking for music," Marvin commented during a recent interview while home in Greenville visiting friends and his mother, Mrs. J. H. Daniels. "A lot of people in Greenville will perhaps remember my father, the late Percy Daniels," Marvin commented. "He was a football coach at Eppes High School.

"I remember even at an early age, say five or six, that I enjoyed music."

A few weeks ago, Daniels and four other musicians, members of the group Chops recorded an LP album of nine selections for Atlantic Records. The term "chops," Daniels explained, "is simply a musician's term for playing ability. One's chops, or mouth muscles are either in good shape, or up, which means the playing is good, or the muscles are down, and that's when the playing is not so good. I like to think that our chops are always up."

In addition to Marvin, whose principal instrument is the trumpet, other members of Chops are Darryl Dixon, alto saxophone; Melvin El, trombone; David Watson, tenor Sax, and "our vocalist, who goes by the name of Funki."

Chops, new to the Atlantic list of recording artists, has been receiving fine critical acclaim on the New York scene. Last year, New York Times critic Robert Palmer called the group "1983's definitive new dance band."

Chops' success is not a sudden phenomenon. The band has a solid six years of together workmanship behind them. "We put Chops together in 1978," Marvin said. "And we have not changed a member since then. This is somewhat unusual for a band to stay intact without changes for that long a time. Somehow, our chemistry seems to work together."

Their "work together" reputation has resulted in being called on to tour and to take part in numerous recording sessions.

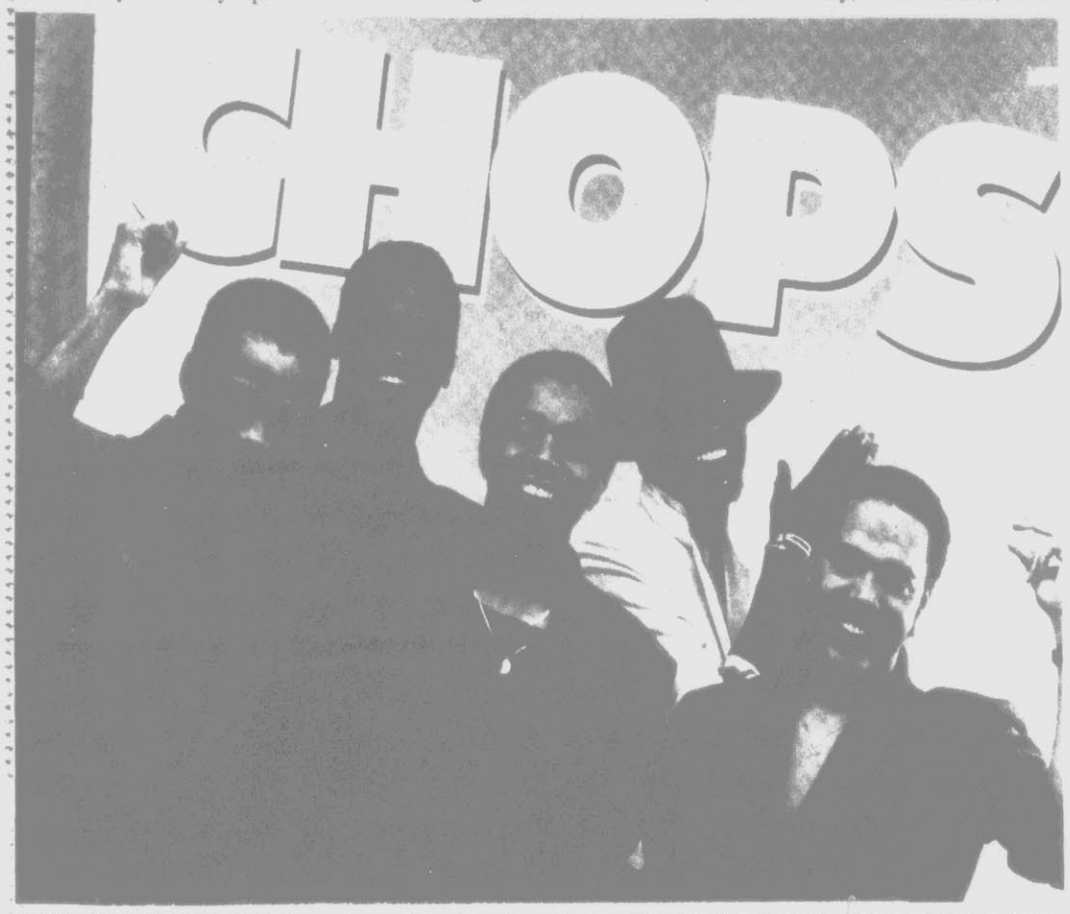

"Our longest tour time has been with The Police," Marvin said. "We have toured with them for three years, covering a total of 18 countries, most of them on two visits." Countries on the tour itinerary with The Police included Brazil and other South American countries, Scandanavian countries, and "just about every European country — France, Italy, Germany, but never Switzerland.

"The tours in Germany were something like a homecoming for me," Marvin commented. "I was drafted in 1971 and served three and one-half years in the Army. Most of that time was spent in Germany. I was stationed with the Seventh Army in Kaiserslautern. Through good fortune, I was able to continue my music career while I was in the Army. I was head of an entertainment center at Kaiserslautern, so I had excellent opportunities to be in on the music scene."

Marvin Daniels is quick to pay tribute to persons who helped foster his inclination from an early age to be a musician. "Johnny Wooten and a fine lady, Miss Arnold, were instrumental in getting me started in music," he said. "They said I had talent and encouraged me to study music. From the beginning and on through college I was classically trained, which I feel has been a great help to me as a commercial musician.

"When I was in the sixth and seventh grades in Greenville, I studied with Mr. James Searl at East Carolina University. He was a really good influence for me. There was another student training at ECU at the same time, Rudy Tyson. Rudy got me interested in the commercial possibilities of music. He has recently had some of his own compositions recorded."

Marvin said that at the time he was in the seventh and eighth grades in Greenville, "several of us got together and formed our own group which we called the Salvadors. One of the members was Robert Daniels, now with the Kenny Rogers Band. He's not related to me, or if he is, it's distant. Another member was Michael Garrett, who's now in a gospel choir."

After graduating from Eppes High School in 1968, Marvin attended Virginia State College in Petersburgh, Va. It was there, after his military service, that he completed his studies and received a degree in music. A couple of years later, Marvin recalls, "I had my first actual experience in commercial music. I was hired as band leader for Evelyn King, a recording artist for RCA. While we were on the road, her record 'Shame' went platinum. Her success was primarily what launched me into the decision to make my living through music.

"It was during this time, 1978, we put together a horn section which in turn became Chops."

Since 1979 Chops has been on the go. In addition to The Police tours, Chops has done touring stints with The English Beat, the Average White Band, The System, Phyllis Hyman, Parliament and other groups. In recording sessions, they have worked with The Police, Teddy Pendergrass, The Stylistics, T.S. Monk, Cashmere and several other groups.

"Last year," Marvin said, "I helped put together the 'Undercover' album by the Rolling Stones. I did a couple of solo selections with Mick Jagger on this album."

At this time, with the Atlantic "Chops" album completed and on sale, the group Chops is working on their next LP for the Beat Street soundtrack, along with production work for other acts.

Marvin praises the support of his music given by his musician wife, the former Garrie Wayne of Lynchburg, Va. "She's one of the hard working members in our support group," he commented. The couple has two young boys, Atiba, 6 and Jamahl, 4.

Although playing dates, recording sessions with other groups, tours and studio work takes up the better part of Marvin Daniels' time, he notes "I still manage to find time to pursue an exciting hobby, one that's music related. I make musical instruments, mostly from gourds and bamboo. These are based on traditional African instruments." Among instruments he listed as one he has created are a hand piano, gourd trumpets, bamboo flutes, "and a shakare, made from a gourd and decorated with plastic beads."

He says he is "finding a good market for these instruments in the Philadelphia and New York areas."

Marvin Daniels is a man obviously happy with his music. The only regret he expressed is "not being able to come to Greenville as often as I'd like to to visit friends and see my mother. But I come every chance I have."

Big Variety In Polish Rock Music

By MATTHEW C. VITA
Associated Press Writer

JAROCIN, Poland (AP) — The 19-year-old guitarist of a rock band called Moscow spat out the lyrics as thousands of teen-age fans danced in a frenzy.

The song, "Everything Is Getting Rotten," was something of an anthem for the four-day festival of Polish rock held earlier this month in Jarocin, a western Polish town about 35 miles southeast of Poznan. This year was the festival's 15th anniversary.

The lyrics are political: "Propaganda is slandering me. Propaganda horrifies me. Truth is left behind. I prefer the enemy's words."

The guitarist, who asked not to be identified, said in an interview backstage, "We are trying to write songs about what we feel."

Nearly 19,000 rock fans pitched tents on 25 acres of fields surrounding a local sports club to enjoy music that is symbolic of today's Polish youth.

"The music of Western bands was about love — what people had inside their souls," said the concert's promoter, Walter Chelstowski. "Our lyrics are directed toward the outside — they are against."

The four-day rock concert, unique in its openness for an Eastern European country, was a reflection of the complexities and contradictions of Polish life and was indicative of the prominent role played by rock music in Poland today.

Although 60 bands performed at the show, their music was never heard over state radio. At the festival, the music was amplified to eardrum-ringing levels by two 30-foot towers of speakers that broadcasted a much less harmonious picture of life in Poland than the rose-tinted socialist version.

As the bands played, thousands of youths danced, slept, drank and sprawled with little inhibition on a dusty soccer field where the stage had been set. As in the West, highly visible police patrols kept an eye out for drug and alcohol abusers.

The crowd was a mix of youths in denim jackets and jeans and a punk look of black leather, teased and bleached hair, or hair laquered into spiked mohawks.

Some drank vodka or homemade concotions. Many sipped from bottles of milk sold at dozens of booths.

A doctor and her husband at a medical station at the site said they treated relatively few people for drug or alcohol-related problems. They suspected strict police surveillance was the reason.

The music ranged from the violent anarchistic lyrics of a punk band called Axe to a show-stopping version of Chuck Berry's "Johnny B. Goode," sung in Polish by two musicians who patterned themselves after John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd's The Blues Brothers act.

There also was reggae and heavy metal, evidence of the influence of Western music in Poland. Still, said Chelstowski, Polish musicians are producing a sound distinctly their own.

"We sing mainly about destruction, because destruction means freedom," said bass player Tomasz Adamski, 21.

Axe's songs include "War Is Coming" and "Load the Cannon," and feature such lyrics as "Soft human blood is flowing down the staircase."

Said Adamski: "Everything is wrong."

NO NAME CHANGE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Cleveland Quartet has spent over half of its professional life teaching at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music for the past eight years.

But it's hard to change your name in the middle of a successful international career, and so the four musicians accept the inevitable confusion of those who think the quartet still lives in Cleveland, Ohio, which it left 13 years ago.

Auburn Tagged Preseason No. 1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Auburn Tigers, who felt they should have won the 1983 national championship but had to settle for third place, have been picked to dethrone the Miami Hurricanes as the kings of college football in 1984.

In the preseason Associated Press poll, Auburn received 30 of 60 first-place votes and 1,057 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters, easily outdistancing runner-up Nebraska.

The Cornhuskers, who also finished second in the final 1983 rankings after dropping a 31-30 thriller to Miami in the Orange Bowl, were followed by Pitt, Clemson, UCLA, Texas, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Alabama and Miami.

Nebraska received five first-place votes and 922 points. Pitt, No. 18 last year, received two first-place ballots and 890 points. Clemson, 11th a year ago, was second to Auburn in first-place votes with 11, but the Tigers' total of 817 points was only good for fourth place.

UCLA, riding the crest of a 45-9 rout of Illinois in the Rose Bowl, is fifth with five first-place ballots and 816 points after finishing 17th last season.

The Hurricanes, who open the 1984 season Monday night against Auburn in the second annual Kickoff Classic, are bidding to become the ninth team to win consecutive national championships. The last was Alabama in 1978-79.

The No. 1 ranking was a bittersweet aftermath to the 1983 season for Auburn Coach Pat Dye.

"I'd be lying if I said I didn't feel good because that's where you want to be," Dye said in East Rutherford, N.J., where his team is preparing for the game with Miami. "But why did they pick us No. 1 this year and not last year? We haven't played a game yet. It (No. 1) puts you in a difficult situation against everybody you play.

"Miami will be coming in here and we'll be the second straight No. 1 team they'll play (Miami won the 1983 national championship by nipping then-No. 1 Nebraska 31-30 in the Orange Bowl) and then we have to go down and play Texas. Everyone will be licking their chops to get at us," Dye said.

"Being No. 1 doesn't change anything. We'll just try and get ready to play one game at a time. If we're good enough, we'll be there. If we're not, we'll try to work a little harder.

"I'll tell you flat out I'd rather be No. 1 in January than in August without any reservations. But I'd rather be No. 1 now than not be. That's what you work for," Dye said.

Texas, which finished fifth last year, is sixth starting out this time with 734 points. Ohio State, No. 9 in 1983, is seventh with 661 points. Neither Texas nor Ohio State received a No. 1 vote, but Notre Dame, Alabama and Miami each got one.

Notre Dame, which didn't make the Top Twenty last year, is eighth with 639 points. Alabama, No. 15 last season, is ninth with 632 points and Miami rounds out the Top Ten with 602 points.

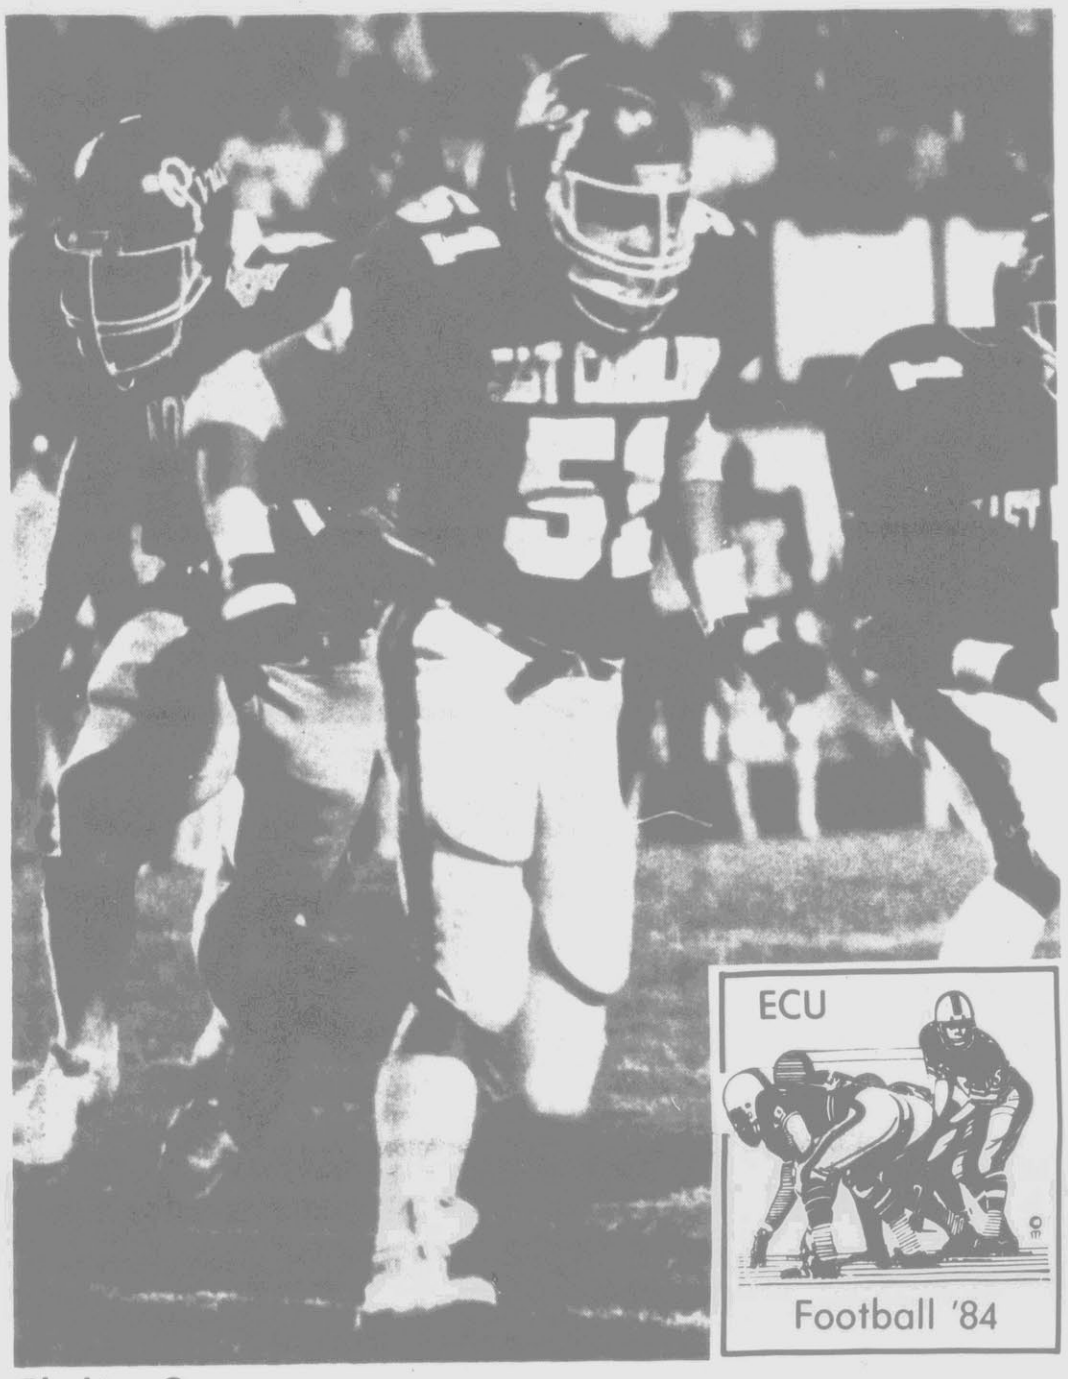

The preseason Second Ten consists of Penn State, Iowa, Arizona State, Michigan, Southern Methodist, Oklahoma, Florida, Washington, Boston College and Florida State, with Arizona State receiving two first-place votes and Iowa and Michigan one each.

Blocking Out

ECU Offensive Line Could Be As Strong As In 1983

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

"The Strongest Football Player in America" is gone, so is the "Chief", and the center is now a graduate assistant.

But despite the loss of the middle of the offensive line that led East Carolina University to an 8-3 record in 1983, assistant Coach John Zernhelt is confident the Pirates will have more depth on the line and as much strength as a year ago — even if not as much speed.

"We'll be a little slower because Terry Long and John Robertson ran so fast for their size," Zernhelt said. "Our offense is geared to sprint-type passing, but our line is actually designed more for the running game.

"What we lost from that team of a year ago was experience; we have players with as much capability, they just didn't get to play very much behind those guys.

"We've got to replace inexperience with being hungry. The biggest thing we have to do is practice like we're playing in a game. We preach you can never have a bad day and expect to succeed."

Long, ECU's first concensus All-America, is now in training camp with the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League, while Robertson, nicknamed "Chief", was picked by the Philadelphia Eagles. Center John Floyd assists Zernhelt with the offensive line.

"We've got depth — that's the big thing," Zernhelt said. "I think we're a little sharper now than last year at this time. We've got four good tackles and four guards if they stay healthy.

"As a rule, offensive linemen aren't the ones who get banged up."

But that hasn't been the case so far for the Pirates.

Center Tim Mitchell (6-2, 247) has missed practice with a pulled hamstring and guard Norman Quick (6-2, 258) has had back problems, but both seniors are listed as probable for the Sept. 1 opener at Florida State. Guard Rich Autry's (6-5, 228) shoulder injury and tackle Brad Henson's (6-2, 255) back ailment will keep each of those veterans out of the lineup, according to reports.

And tackle Tim Dumas (6-6, 290), who started beside Long as a red-shirt freshman a year ago, was slowed with an injury early in fall drills but is now at full speed.

Dumas is faced with the task of trying to regain his starting berth from Greg Sokolohorsky (6-5, 290), a junior college transfer who was red-shirted in 1983. Greg Quick (6-4, 280) was sidelined a year ago with academic problems but has taken over at right tackle with Henson's absence. Also fighting for time is junior Rick Hilburn (6-5, 280).

"Dumas spent the summer here lifting weights, so he's stronger this year," Zernhelt said. "Sokolohorsky squats over 600 pounds; he's really come on the most in fall practice. Greg Quick had a real good scrimmage (Wednesday night), so we still look pretty strong at tackle."

Senior Mac Powers (6-3, 265) will be the starter at right guard after being granted a fifth year of eligibility. Powers played in seven games last season as a backup guard and tackle. Sophomore Shawn Brady (6-2, 250) is counted on for reserve guard.

Theo Livingston (6-6, 255) is listed as the top left guard, with Paul Hoggard (6-2, 245) listed as second team.

"Theo Livingston has had three days of workout at guard after moving back (from tackle)," Zernhelt said. "Shawn Brady moved back (Wednesday) and had his best scrimmage so far. We're such a technique football team, you can't move back and forth. But it's easier to go from guard to tackle than from tackle to guard.

"Mac Powers looked as good as ever in the scrimmage (Wednesday); he's really playing at his peak. Powers is a big help with providing depth for us this year."

Mitchell was listed as the starting center before his injury, and Zernhelt expects him to win the berth before the opener. Greenville's Stuart Ward (6-2, 235) and Greg Thomas (6-1, 240) are the top reserves in the Pirate camp.

"We're counting on Mitchell, Henson and Norman Quick to be our senior leaders," Zernhelt said. "He's at about 90 percent right now, but he's supposed to be ready in time for the Florida State game.

"Stuart Ward is really valuable because he's our deep snapper on punts and field goals. Greg Thomas missed last year with an injury. He came back and did a 605-pound squat after major reconstruction of a shoulder."

The Pirates have a number of recruits on the offensive line in camp, but Zernhelt said none was likely to challenge for playing time.

"Everybody on the front line is a red-shirt from one year or another," Zernhelt said. "We spend a lot of time on them, but it's just a different level of competition — it just takes a year to adjust."

The Pirates have two teams on the 1984 schedule ranked in the preseason Associated Press poll, with Pittsburgh third and Florida State 20th. Tulsa, South Carolina and North Carolina State also appear among seven away games.

Good Scrimmage Pleases Emory

Head coach Ed Emory put his East Carolina Pirates through their third scrimmage Saturday night at Ficklen Stadium as ECU continued prepartations for the season opener with Florida State, set for next Saturday night in Tallahassee.

After two disappointing scrimmages during the past week, Emory seemed pleased with the Pirates' effort last night. Quarterback Robbie Bartlett displayed his best showing of the fall completing two of five passes for 47 yards and two touchdowns. Bartlett connected on scoring passes of 25 and 19 yards while also leading the offense to its best showing since the Pirates opened camp on August 10.

Sophomore Darrell Speed also showed signs of improvement at quarterback as he hooked up with Henry Williams for a 48-yard touchdown pass. Emory however, indicated the unsettled quarterback situation was still just that, and he would not name a starter until later this week.

"The quarterback situation is still wide open," Emory said. "I thought they all had some good moments. We did some good things tonight. We tried to give oursleves a look at everything they see at Florida State.

"But we made a lot of mistakes, too many. The players are so young.

Denis Watson Holds Two Shot Lead In Golf Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — South African Denis Watson, capitalizing on a late lapse by Bruce Lietzke, retained a 2-stroke lead going into Sunday's final round of the $700,000 NEC World Series of Golf.

"It's nice to have a 2-shot advantage," said Watson, who preserved that margin and a score of par 70 in the third round with a spectacular, scrambling par from the gallery by the 18th hole.

"There's always pressure on the man who's leading," he said in a look ahead to the final 18 holes of the chase for a $126,000 first prize. Then he thought about it and added:

"I better play well tomorrow."

Watson, who established a 3-shot lead with a course-record 62 in Friday's second round, completed three trips over the difficult Firestone Country Club layout in 201, nine shots under par.

Lietzke, who once caught, then passed Watson, was undismayed despite losing three strokes to the South African on the last three holes.

"I wasn't surprised to make some bogeys, but it's a little disappointing o do it so late in the round," Lietzke aid after his bogey-bogey finish left im with a 69 and a 203 total.

"But I still feel very good about ny chances," Lietzke said. "If I can lay almost error-free golf tomorrow, I think I have a chance."

Behind Lietzke, it was another three shots back to Bob Eastwood nd Peter Jacobsen, a pair of wo-time winners this season who vere tied for third at 206. Eastwood losed up with a 66 and Jacobssen ad a 71.

Tom Kite, twice a winner this season and very much in the chase for Player of the Year honors, moved up with a 65 and was tied at 207 with Craig Stadler, who had a 68.

Ian Woosnam of Great Britain was the only other member of the 41-man international field under par at 68-209.

Lee Trevino, winner of the PGA National Championship last week, had a 7-212. Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this title, was at 69-214.

Seve Ballesteros, the British Open Champion, required 72 strokes — including one he played from his knees from beneath a low-hanging tree — and was at 216. Tom Watson struggled to a 77-218. Masters

The King, Heir Apparant Clash In Football Opener

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Defending national champion Miami and would-be successor Auburn open the college football season Monday night in the second annual Kickoff Classic and both coaches are armed with simple game plans.

"I'd like to think we can control the ball some and keep (Miami quarterback Bernie) Kosar on the bench," Auburn's Pat Dye said Saturday after his team's first practice at Giants Stadium. "That's the best way to keep him from completing passes on you."

Meanwhile, Jimmy Johnson, Miami's new coach, is concerned with whether his young defense can handle Auburn's ground-chewing Wishbone led by halfback Bo Jackson.

"We lost most of our defensive players and we have a very inexperienced group," Johnson said. "I'm not real sure where they'll line up, but I hope they line up where Bo Jackson is."

The 6-foot-5 Kosar led Miami to the national championship as a redshirt freshman a year ago by completing 201 of 327 passes for 2,329 yards and 15 touchdowns, the first and last figures setting school records. Jackson, a 222-pound junior, rushed for 1,213 yards on just 158 carries — a whopping 7.7 average — as Auburn won the Southeastern Conference crown for the first time since 1957.

Both teams finished 1983 with identical 11-1 records, but Auburn had to settle for a final No. 3 ranking in the Associated Press poll when Miami defeated top-ranked Nebraska 31-30 in the Orange Bowl. That was last year and Auburn is a 3-point favorite to gain a measure of revenge.

"I don't think anybody knows how good Miami is and I don't think anybody knows how good Auburn is until they've played," Dye said. "If last year is any indication, it should be a great game. Certainly we were disappointed we weren't No. 1 last year, but I never said the poll was wrong. I never said Auburn should have been No. 1.

"As far as revenge is concerned, I don't think you can use gadgets to win football games. If the media is going to make a big deal out of it they're going to make a big deal out of it."

"Certainly we have a monumental task defensing Miami's offense. They do a great job protecting the passer, their wideouts (Eddie Brown and Stanley Shapespeare) are as good a pair as you'll see in the country and Kosar does a great job running their offense and taking what the defense gives them. He's an excellent throwing quarterback.

"The key for us is certainly our ability to contain Miami's offense. We've got to do some things to create problems for Kosar. He's so skilled and so smart. You're not going to get to him much because he's so quick getting rid of the football. But you can't let him stand back there and throw it. You've got to make him throw it on time, at least.

"I've never seen a team that executes the passing game better. They do it all. They make you defense the whole field with their passing game."

Faced with a brutal schedule that starts with Auburn (No. 3 last year), Florida (No. 6) and Michigan (No. 8) in a 12-day period — all away from home — and only having been Howard Schnellenberger's successor as Miami's coach since June 5,

New Rampant Coach Pleased

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

New Rose High School football coach Chip Williams got the opportunity to see just how his Rampants would perform against another team Friday afternoon, putting them through a scrimmage against Washington High School.

And — as might be expected — he was pleased with some things and not so pleased with some of the others.

The two teams ran through a series of ten plays twice with their offense working against the others defense, then moved on to a game-type scrimmage. Scores are not kept track of officially, but, as Williams pointed out, "the kids keep up with it in their heads."

And if it meant anything, Rose "won."

Williams used the first part of the scrimmage to work entirely on the passing game. "We didn't tell Washington what we were going to do, but after a few plays, it became obvious that we were going to pass on every down."

And the new coach was disappointed in the completion ratio. Only six of the 20 passes were completed. "I would have been happy with about 13 out of the 20," he said. "I really thought that we could do better than that.

"We used three quarterbacks to give all of them a good look and that could have been a factor. But we also had some reads by the quarterbacks that were incorrect and we had one or two patterns that were incorrectly run.

"I did think that Dwight Smith again did a good job receiving," the coach added, "and our backs caught the ball well coming out of the backfield."

"While our line didn't get too much pressure, I did think they did a good job, both on the pass protection and blocking for the run. We did have some problems in the middle of the scrimmage in the line. Our backs did a good job running the ball, but they are going to have to block better on passes. And we've got to get more consistant in our passing game."

When the defensive unit was on the field, Williams felt the first unit did a good job for the most part "except for goal line stands.

"We worked on that on several series and we found that we have a lot of work to do in this area. It was okay when they were coming straight at us, but when they ran the counter or passed, it hurt. We didn't pick up our pass responsibilities and their people were wide open."

Williams was not that happy with the play of the second units, both offensively and defensively. "The second group is not where it needs to be," he said. "It may be the new system or it may be that they're just waiting to let the first group handle it. But the second team needs to step forward and take some responsibility, too."

While Williams felt the passing game perhaps slipped some from last Friday's scrimmage, he is still pleased with the effort shown in both scrimmages.

"But we need to give the same effort on Mondays and Tuesdays as we do on Friday. Unfortunately, when we don't give the same effort at the start of the week, it shows up on Fridays, too."

And while Williams says that a coach is never satisfied at his team is where he wants it to be, he does feel that they are on schedule.

"I'm still glad that we have two weeks to go before the opener. I haven't seen the film of the scrimmage yet, but when it gets in, I'm going to grade everyone in it to see if we need to have some position changes and what else we need to do. We didn't run anything fancy Friday, just basic stuff, and we're going to need the time we have left to get ready."

"The kids have done a good job of picking up what we want them to do, but they are still playing like they are thinking about not making mistakes. They need to develop that confidence in themselves so that they can play without mistakes without thinking about making those mistakes."

The Rampants have one week left to polish those areas of the game before they give their full attention to the opener, another week on down the road. Rose entertains Jacksonville in that first game, in Ficklen Stadium on September 7.

Duke Seeks New Identity

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM (AP) — Duke quarterback Ben Bennett may have graduated, but his shadow remains over the football program as the Blue Devils search for a new identity without their record-setting signal caller.

"We're a team without a name," Duke defensive tackle David Adams said. "We don't have the big names like we used to and everybody knows that, and everybody's working really hard.

"We have to be team this year. We don't have a choice. If we don't play as a team this year, we aren't going to win games." Adams told reporters on Saturday at their stop in Durham on the Atlantic Coast Conference preseason football tour.

Fifth-year senior Ron Sally, who is battling junior Drew Walston for the starting quarterback slot, said the loss of Bennett may help the Blue Devils, who finished 3-8 last year.

"I think too much in the past we were relying on one person or two people to pretty much carry us along," said Sally, who threw just one pass last year before being red-shirted after injuring his shoulder.

"I think this season of anonymity as far as stars will do us good ... and I think that will enhance our capability to unite as one," said Sally, who was a Rhodes Scholar candidate last year.

Coach Steve Sloan said neither Sally nor Walston, who completed five of 10 passes a year ago, have won the right to replace Bennett, who became the NCAA's career passing leader last season with 9,069 yards.

"There's very little difference. I think our quarterback play will be good regardless of who we play, or if we play two, or play one or alternate," Sloan said.

Sloan, in his second year, said he may rotate Sally and Walston if neither has won the job before the season opener against Indiana on Sept. 8 in Wallace Wade Stadium.

"It's a good possibility that we'll play both quarterbacks, particularly early in the season until one became dominate ... or was more productive," he said.

Sloan, however, said one of his main concerns is his defense, which gave up 435 yards a game last year and 350 points — a school record. In trying to improve the defense, Sloan junked the 4-3 alignment for an eight-man front featuring four linebackers and two defensive ends.

"Our team is difficult to evaluate primarily because we don't know how much we've improved defensively," he said. "That would be our first question and probably our most pertinent question, ... and would have the most bearing on our record at the end of this season."

Sloan said the decision to change defenses was a result of a lack of good defensive lineman.

"We have a very difficult time recruiting defensive lineman," he said. "We also have a difficult time recruiting defensive backs within our academic parameter, consequently we don't have that hard a time recruiting linebackers and defensive ends. So, why not play a defense that emphasizes more linebackers and more defensive ends."

Women Swimmers Lead Friendship Record-Setters

MOSCOW (AP) — The swimming competition at the Friendship '84 Games ended Saturday the way it started — dominated by the women.

While the Olympic Games in Los Angeles was a triumph for the men who set 10 world records, five world marks were lowered here, four of them by women swimmers from East Germany, which followed the Soviet Uunion's call to boycott the Oolympics.

The 29 swimming events that began six days ago at the Olympic pool produced 40 times that were better than those earning gold or silver at Los Angeles.

Thirteen were inside gold medal winning times, although the 10 world marks established at Los Angeles remain intact.

The only world record in the men's competition at the Friendship '84 Games came from the Soviet Union's Sergei Zabolotnov, who bettered American Rick Carey's 200-meter backstroke mark of 1 minute, 58.93 seconds by clocking 1:58.41 earlier this week.

The four women's world records were set by the East German relay teams in the 400-meter freestyle in 3:42.41 and the 400-meter medley in 4:03.69. East german quartets also held the previous marks.

Ina Kleber bettered the 100-meter backstroke record clocking 1:00.59, and Sylvia Gerasch, a 15-year-old high school girl, swam the 100-meter breaststroke in 1:08.29.

The consistency of the East German women gave their country the biggest overall number of wins with 16.

The Soviet Union won 13 events as the two aquatic superpowers crushed the opposition.

Vladimir Salnikov, a triple gold medalist at the Moscow Olympics in 1980 and the world record holder in the 400-meter and 1,500-meter freestyle events, won his specialty Saturday, the 1,500-meter freestyle, in which he has not been beaten in an Olympic sized pool since 1977.

But Salnikov's time of 15 minutes, 03.51 seconds was an anti-climax, although he was wildly applauded and showered with flowers by the near capacity crowd.

He faded between 800 and 1,-100 meters to finish more than 10seconds outside his best of 14:54.76 but his time was still better than the 15:05.20 turned in by American Michael O'Brien for the gold at Los Angeles.

In the men's 400 medley relay Saturday, Vladimir Sshemetov, Dmitri Volkov, Alexander Markovski and Sergei Smiriakin of the Soviet Union established a European record in 3:42.15, but were clearly outside the world record time of 3:39.30 that won an American quartet the Los Angeles gold.

The time, however, would have meant a silver medal.

As expected, Soviet oarsmen dominated the rowing finals at the Olympic canal at suburban Krylatskoye, but only three times came within medal winning performances at Los Angeles.

In only one of eight races — the quadruple sculls — was the host nation defeated, by East Germany, the Soviet Union's main contender in all the other sports at these games.

Denis Watson...

Lietzke, three shots off the pace at the start of the day's play, made up two of them on the front side and got a share of the lead with an approach to within three feet of the flag on the 14th.

Watson, whose first victory in four seasons on the American tour came two weeks ago in the Buick Open, then meekly surrendered his share of the top spot when he missed the green far to the left on the 15th and failed to get it up and down.

He got the shot back on the next hole, the 16th, known as "the Monster," a par-5 that normally plays about 615 yards. This time, however, the front tees were in use and some players had the opportunity to go for the green in two.

Watson was one of them. He got his second on a little knoll by the green, played a very difficult, deft little chip down to two feet and made the birdie putt.

That tied them again.

And Lietzke suddenly developed problems off the tee. He drove into trouble on both of the closing holes and bogeyed both, each time missing from about 10 feet.

Watson had to work hard on the 18th to save par and his 2-shot margin. His approach went over the green, behind a seated photographer's hip pocket in deep rough. Another chip ran it down to within tap-in distance.

Johnson is more concerned with his team than with the opposition.

"I've watched them scrimmage a couple of times, but I've never seen them play a game," he said of the Hurricanes. "We've probably studied Miami's 1983 films four or five times as much as our opponents'.

"You can't put all your eggs in one basket so we felt it was best to concentrate not on Auburn but on Miami football throughout the preseason. We've emphasized trying to be fundamentally sound, being simple and trying to eliminate mistakes.

"From day one we've been getting better and better and I believe we're ready to play with the offensive and defensive schemes we've put in. I believe, we can go out and play against most anybody and be successful."

In his five seasons as head coach at Oklahoma State, Johnson had to defend against Oklahoma's explosive Wishbone, which has led the nation in rushing five times in the last 13 years.

Auburn's attack differs somewhat because, Johnson says, it is "a power Wishbone, an overpowering type of offense. They have big, strong linemen and excellent backs with good speed and they're able to overpower most of their opponents. There will be a size mismatch and that concerns me. I'm concerned with our team being able to hold up against the steady pounding."

King Pulls Into Tie With Bradley

DENVER (AP) — Pat Bradley, fighting a case of wildness off the tee, lost one stroke to par Saturday and was tied by onrushing Betsy King for the third-round lead in the rain-delayed, $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic.

Bradley, the defending champion, was at 4-under-par for the tournament through 14 holes when play was stopped by heavy rain and lightning. King, who began the day at even par, fired off four birdies and also was 4-under through 16 holes.

Patty Sheehan, Janet Anderson and Ayako Okamoto were 2-under. Sheehan and Anderson had finished 14 holes and Okamoto was through 17. Sally Little and Kathy Whitworth were another stroke back at 1-under.

Those players still on the course — 39 out of a field of 76 — were to complete their third rounds Sunday morning at 7:30 a.m., with fourth-round play to follow.

It was the second consecutive day for a rain interruption. King, Sheehan and Okamoto were among those who had to complete their second rounds early Saturday morning before starting the third round.

"It's always difficult to get your momentum going and then be interrupted like this," said Bradley, who held a 1-shot lead entering the third round thanks to her 6-under 65 on Friday that featured an LPGA-record 28 for nine holes.

"But everybody has had a piece of it. We're all in the same boat. We'll just come back in the morning and get after it."

Bradley, 33, of Marco Island, Fla., bogeyed the par-4 second hole Saturday after hooking her drive into the rough and having to lay up short of the green. She birdied No. 4 with a four-foot putt, but drove in the rough again at the sixth hole, missed the green and took another bogey.

She saved par at the par-4 eighth hole when her drive hit a tree less than 100 yards off the tee. She hit a fairway wood short of the green, pitched to about five feet and sank the par putt.

"It was just one of those things," she said. "We strive for perfection out there but don't often get it. I did manage to make some pars today, but I only made one birdie."

Persistent precipitation this month has made Green Gables Country Club soft and muddy in spots, and the players could expect more of the same on Sunday. "I've been a pretty good mudder in the past," said Bradley. "We'll wait and see."

King, who stands second on the tour money list with $189,699, had a steady round featuring birdies at the fourth, fifth, 10th and 13th holes.

Anderson and Okamoto each picked up a stroke during Saturday's play, while Sheehan, who started the day two shots behind Bradley, lost a shot with a bogey at No. 4.

Alexandra Reinhardt, one shot behind Bradley as the day began, drew into a tie with a 20-foot birdie putt on the first hole. But she subsequently lost four shots to par, including a double bogey on the 14th hole as she hurried to complete the hole before the rain and lightning made playing conditions impossible. Reinhardt was at one under when play was halted.

George Is Returning

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — George Allen, ending months of speculation, said Saturday that he has decided to return as head coach of the United States Football League's Arizona Wranglers.

Allen, 66, postponed his scheduled European vacation for the second straight year to attend the Wranglers' free-agent tryout camp at East High School and told The Associated Press: "I wouldn't be here today if I wasn't coming back to coach."

The kicking game had some bright spots. But we're not where I thought we'd be. We're going to get there though. I think we've made a lot of progress in the last week, but we're still a long way from being there."

ECU's kicking game looked impressive as placekicker Jeff Heath connected on four of five field goal attempts and punter Jeff Bolch averaged 41.3 yards on eight attempts. Heath was successful from distances of 44, 21, 44 and 35 yards.

The Pirates will hold a light workout today before entering their game week workout schedule for Florida State on Monday.

Emory said he would put the Pirates through two more situation scrimmages like Saturday night's during the upcoming week before deciding on a starting quarterback.

Twins Win On Bases-Loaded Walk

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Andre David thought he was at the plate to swing, but the Minnesota rookie didn't need his bat to drive in the winning run.

"It was my first game-winner, but I'll take it," said David after Dennis Lamp walked him on four pitches with the bases loaded and two out in the 12th inning.

"I went up there swinging," David said following the Twins' 5-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. "At 2-0, I had the green light."

Twins Manager Billy Gardner, however, disagreed. "No, he was taking," Gardner said. After being told that David said he had the green light, a surprised Gardner said: "Maybe we better go over the signs again."

The Twins blew many scoring opportunities, hitting into five double plays —two shy of the major-league record. Reliever Bobby Castillo, 2-0, kept the Blue Jays in check over the final five innings despite seven walks.

"It was an ugly win," Castillo said. "I didn't think the guys wanted to win for me. I'm glad we got the last walk because I was getting a little pooped."

Ron Washington led off the 12th inning with as double to left and Lamp replaced Gott, who was forced to leave with a sore elbow. Washington advanced to third on a sacrifice by Kirby Puckett, and Mickey Hatcher and Kent Hrbek were then walked intentionally to load the bases.

Lamp got Dave Meier to fly out to short right but then walked David on four consecutive pitches.

Trailing 4-1, the Twins put together four consecutive hits in the eighth inning to tie the score. Pinch hitter Dale Brown singled and went to second on Puckett's single. Both runners scored on Mickey Hatcher's double to center to make it 4-3.

Minnesota starter Ed Hodge struck out the first two batters he faced before Cliff Johnson doubled down the left-field line. After Jesse Barfield walked, Dave Collins, who also had three hits, bounced a triple over Puckett's head in center field. Johnson and Barfield scored, but Collins was out at the plate trying for an inside-the-park homer.

The Twins nipped Jim Clancy for a run in the bottom of the fourth when Hrbek led off with a double to right-center. Randy Bush walked and Tom Brunansky singled to left to score Hrbek.

Toronto picked up two runs in the eighth inning. Garth Iorg led off with a triple and scored on a single by Damaso Garcia, who advanced to third on Lloyd Moseby's single to center. Moseby then stole second as George Bell struck out, but catcher Tim Laudner's throw sailed into center field, allowing Garcia to score.

Boston 11

BOSTON (AP) — Slugger Tony Armas of the Boston Red Sox says "I don't count anything yet," but his figures tell it all.

"Tony Armas is having some kind of year," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said Saturday after the Red Sox romped to an 11-6 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Armas capped an eight-run fourth inning with a three-run double and then added his 35th homer in the sixth for his 97th RBI of the season.

Armas, who leads the major leagues in home runs, also took the lead with 62 extra-base hits, one more than teammate Dwight Evans and the Chicago Cubs' Ryne Sandberg.

"I'm pretty happy, but I don't count anything yet," Armas said. "I'd like an RBI or home run title, but we've got a long way to go. We'll see what happens in the next month."

Acquired from the Oakland A's after the 1982 season, Armas belted 36 homers and drove in 107 runs, but hit only .218 for the Red Sox last year.

He underwent major surgery on his right elbow last December and took things easy in spring training. Now he's batting .272 with as much power as ever.

"I feel this is my best season so far," Armas said. "Except for a little problem with my back, I've been healthy this year. I've felt good and I guess it shows."

Boston picked up a run in the third as Wade Boggs broke an 0-for-12 slump with a run-scoring single.

Mel Hall led off the Cleveland fourth with a double and Andre Thornton, who had four hits, gave Cleveland a 2-1 lead with his 27th homer before the Red Sox jumped on starter Steve Farr, 3-10, and reliever Tom Waddell.

Boston combined six hits and two walks in the decisive uprising. Bill Buckner drove in the first run with a single and Rich Gedman followed with a two-run double. Jackie Gutierrez singled home another run and Rice drew a bases-loaded walk before Armas doubled high off the wall in left-center.

Red Sox starter Al Nipper, 6-5, allowed four runs on nine hits in six innings before Steve Crawford, who has a 5-0 record, mopped up for his first save.

Cleveland scored twice in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Mike Hargrove and George Vukovich, and added two more in the seventh on RBI singles by Vukovich and Thornton.

Baltimore 4
Oakland 2

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Baltimore's Mike Flanagan has never pitched for the Oakland A's, but the crafty left-hander feels right at home whenever he steps onto the mound at the Oakland Coliseum.

"This place is a lot like Baltimore's park," said Flanagan, who ran his career record at the Coliseum to 10-0 Saturday with a 4-2 victory over the Oakland A's. "It's pretty quiet when you step out onto the mound out here, as opposed to a park like Fenway where the fans are right on top of you. I think it helps my concentration."

Flanagan, 11-11, pitched eight innings and allowed only one earned run on six hits as the Orioles handed the A's their seventh straight defeat.

"It's not like it's been 10-0 against the team today," said Flanagan. "That streak goes through a lot of different players. It started with the A's teams right after the Jackson trade (former Oakland star Reggie) against guys like Joe Rudi and Don Baylor before he came over here. If I ever get traded, I'd like to take that mound with me."

A's Manager Jackie Moore felt his pitcher, Ray Burris, 11-7, was the one who could put an end to Flanagan's streak. Burris came into the game with an 8-1 record at the Coliseum, but left after giving up four runs in seven innings.

"I know we're in a losing streak," said Moore, "but we haven't quit. We haven't given up. The history of this club all year is that we've been up and then we've been down. It just boils down to the fact that they're getting more runs than we are."

The seven-game skid ties a season high for the A's, who also lost seven in a row between May 13-20.

With the score tied 1-1, Al Bumbry led off the seventh inning with an infield single. One out later, Cal Ripken singled and Eddie Murray walked to load the bases. Mike Young struck out, but Burris then walked Ken Singleton on a 2-1 pitch to give Baltimore a 2-1 lead. Wayne Gross capped the rally with a two-run single to right.

Komminsk's Homer Leads Braves

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Brad Komminsk has shed a few bad habits and is beginning to feel comfortable at the plate, which could be bad news for Atlanta opponents the rest of the season.

Komminsk, 23, put a charge into a hanging curve for a tie-breaking, two-run homer Saturday which powered Rick Mahler and the Braves to a 3-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

"Lately I've been swinging the bat well," said Komminsk, who is 7-for-20 on the current road trip with two home runs and five runs batted in. "But I've done that before, too. This time I hope I can keep it up.

"I had some bad habits but I'm starting to get out of them," said Komminsk. "Only time will tell. I sat back on a breaking ball for the home run. I was fortunate to hit it. Sometimes, you can miss those pitches."

Komminsk's homer landed onto Wavelaand Ave. and came against a 10-mile-an-hour wind.

"He's strong," said Manager Joe Torre. "When he hits 'em, they stay hit. He's been a little too selective at times and overcommits himself. This is a tough league to learn in but he has a good attitude."

Mahler, 9-8, gave up only five hits in his seventh complete game. He walked two and struck out three.

"The Cubs throw some good hitters at you," said Mahler. "I'm usually a ground ball pitcher. I keep it down, move it around and change speeds. The defense played well behind me."

Komminsk's homer, his seventh of the season, came with two outs after Dale Murphy had singled and snapped a three-game Atlanta losing streak. The loss was only the second in seven games for the Cubs and was charged to Scott Sanderson, 6-4.

The Braves took the lead in the second inning when Komminsk singled, raced to third on a single by Randy Johnson and scored when Jerry Royster grounded into a double play.

Mahler, 9-8, had allowed but one hit through the first four innings and had retired nine straight before the Cubs tied it in the fifth.

Mahler hit Ron Cey with a pitch to open the fifth. Jody Davis singled Cey to third and Cey scored as Larry Bowa forced Davis at second.

The Cubs added a run in the seventh when Thad Bosley, who had singled in the second inning, singled again. One out later Davis also singled again with Bosley stopping at second. The runners advanced as pinch-hitter Dan Rohn grounded out and Bosley scored on a wild pitch

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Los Angeles outfielder Ken Landreaux got rid of some of his frustrations Saturday, belting a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the seventh inning to help the Dodgers defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4.

Landreaux, batting .246 with just two game-winning RBIs entering the game, said he felt it was about time he contributed to the cause.

"It's been a frustrating season," he said. "I've been hitting the ball real good but right at people. There's an awful lot of luck in this game."

Landreaux also had a single and was robbed of hits two other times by Phillies second baseman Luis Aguayo.

"That's the way it's been going," added Landreaux.

Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda, whose team remains 12½ games behind San Diego in the National League's Western Division, insisted he hasn't given up.

"I'm still managing like we're battling for first place. That's the only way I can manage," he said.

The loss was the sixth in a row on national television for the Phillies, a fact which did not escape the attention of Manager Paul Owens.

"We never win on national television, and I guess we're not supposed to win when the Cubs lose," he said. Philadelphia remained six games behind Chicago in the National League East race.

Bob Welch, 11-12, scattered five hits in six innings, while Ken Howell, the fifth Dodger pitcher, got the final two outs to record his fourth save. John Denny, 6-4, was the loser.

With one out in the seventh, Dave Anderson was hit by a pitch and Landreaux followed with his eighth homer of the season, a drive over the right-field fence that gave the Dodgers a 5-3 lead.

Los Angeles took a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI groundout by Pedro Guerrero and made it 2-0 in the fourth on Steve Sax's RBI single.

The Phillies went ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the fourth on a single by Von Hayes, a triple by Mike Schmidt and Ozzie Virgil's 18th homer of the season.

The Dodgers tied it in the sixth when Greg Brock walked with one out, moved to third on Mike Scioscia's double and scored on a groundout by Sax.

After Landreaux's homer, the Phillies narrowed the Dodger lead to 5-4 in the seventh off reliever Burt Hooton when Luis Aguayo singled home Virgil.

The Dodgers scored twice in the eighth inning off reliever Kevin Gross on an RBI single by Ed Amelung and an RBI grounder by Guerrero.

Death Claims Waite Hoyt, Top Hurler For Yankees

CINCINNATI (AP) — Waite Hoyt, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame and the top pitcher on the famed New York Yankees "Murderer's Row" teams, died Saturday at Cincinnati's Jewish Hospital. He was 84 and had been hospitalized for several weeks after suffering a heart attack.

Hoyt, who won 237 games and lost 182 in a 21-year career, was one of the first former players to switch to the broadcast booth. He spent a quarter of a century, from 1941 to 1965, as the voice of the Cincinnati Reds and was also a highly sought after-dinner speaker.

"He had an amazing zest for life," said Jim Ferguson, the Reds' vice president for public relations. "He was a great story teller. He had a great sense of humor. He was just a delight to be around."

Funeral services will be Wednesday at Christ Church in Cincinnati.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Hoyt signed with the New York Giants when he was only 15, then made the majors three years later with the Giants.

After two years with the Boston Red Sox, he joined the Yankees in 1921 and went on to have his best seasons in New York with the Yankees, appearing in seven World Series and posting a 6-4 Series won-lost record.

In 1927, he won 22 games and lost only seven and posted an earned run average of 2.63 with the Yankee team, featuring Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, that won 110 games and lost only 44. The following year, he was 23-7 with a 3.36 ERA with another pennant-winning team.

In addition to the Yankees, Giants and Red Sox, Hoyt also played for the Pittsburgh Pirates, Brooklyn Dodgers, Philadelphia A's and Detroit Tigers finally retiring following the 1938 season.

Nonetheless, he acknowledged long after his career was over that he was never quite secure.

"You start as a child and you wonder whether you're going to make it to the neighborhood team," he said after he was elected to the Hall of Fame by Major League Baseball's veterans' committee in 1969.

"Then you wonder whether you're going to make the high school team and then whether you're going to make it into the big leagues and then whether you're good enough to stay there.

"And when you get out, you wonder whether you did as well as you should have."

He was best known on the speakers' circuit as a congenial teller of tales about his days with the Yankees.

"That was the creme de la creme," he said in an interview last year. "Miller Huggins was the greatest manager who ever lived. He had Ruth to contend with and a lot of temperamental guys like me.

"In Cincinnati, his grave is about a quarter of a mile from where I'm going to be buried. Once in a while, I go out to put flowers on some people's graves and I pass his grave and I hear some noise. That's him turning over in his grave.

"Joe Dugan, our third baseman, used to say, 'You know, Waite, you and I killed him.'"

Hoyt retired as a broadcaster for the Reds in 1965, but returned during the 1971 season to do Reds games on television. He also had done several sports shows on local radio until about 10 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Betty, of Cincinnati, sons Christopher, of Fairfield, Conn., and Harry, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and a daughter, Doris Niccum of Parker, Pa.

NCAA Violations More Widespread

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Violations of recruiting and financial aid rules in college sports is becoming so widespread the NCAA is having trouble clamping down on all the cheaters, its executive director said.

"I believe there is a growing acceptance of the belief that the conditions of intercollegiate athletics are such that you have to cut corners, you have to circumvent the rules," said Walter Byers.

"There seems to be a growing number of coaches and administrators who look upon NCAA penalties as the price of doing business — if you get punished, that's unfortunate, but that's part of the cost of getting along."

Byers, in an interview with the Associated Press, said there may be significant violations in as many as 30 percent of all upper-division programs at colleges.

"The college may be running a clean program in eight or nine sports. In basketball, there may be one or two athletes involved in questionable transactions. I've reluctantly come to the conclusion there are volume violations in football," he said.

The 62-year-old administrator openly questioned — for the first time in his 34 years as NCAA chief — the ability of the NCAA's enforcement department to keep pace with more sophisticated forms of cheating.

"There are numerous successful programs that do not cheat," Walter Byers said. "And I think the people on our enforcement staff and those who serve on the committee on infractions do a remarkable job of keeping the lid on as well as they do. But we are not keeping up.

"It has been proposed that we double the size of our enforcement staff," he said. "That would help. But would that get us where we want to go if we don't have a renewed commitment from the member colleges?"

Fourteen schools are now serving some sort of NCAA sanction.

The enforcement department has a staff of five administators and 10 full-time investigators. For the past two years, the NCAA has also retained on a part-time basis about 25 private investigators throughout the country.

The size of the enforcement department has more than doubled in the past five years and the recruiting committee has recommended additional increases in budget and manpower.

"College people once spent a great deal of time at meetings talking about enforcement and ways to improve it," Byers said. "Now, people spend their time talking about Nielsen ratings and how to get more teams in the basketball tournament."

Byers declined to name any colleges he suspected of rule-breaking.

"I think there is a sizable percentage of colleges, or personnel at colleges, who deliberately set out to beat the rules," he said. "Depending on whom you talk to, the percentage ranges from 10 to 15. Then there is another 10 to 15 percent that is more difficult to categorize. Those are the ones who would like to obey the rules but who turn their heads when they need to. They will look away when violations occur in their favor. And I'm talking about significant violations."

Multimillion-dollar television contracts for basketball and football games are probably the greatest single source of pressure, Byers said.

"We're in a money-oriented culture. The colleges and their organizations brought a lot of this on themselves, but not all of it. Television, as a social instrument, has promoted the cultural idea that you ought to get it and you ought to get it now."

NCAA regulations which require stadium size and attendance averages for upper-division membership contribute to the problem, Byers said.

"I'm the first to concede that the NCAA's organizational structure itself is partly to blame."

Another cause may be a "developing psychology" on the part of some coaches, Byers said.

"A lot of coaches are making 'bonus' money...percentage increments from NCAA tournament receipts...$50,000 from a shoe company just for outfitting players in a certain brand of shoe, substantial income from camps and television shows. I believe there is a growing psychology among them to the affect that, 'The players make it all possible and we should do more for them.'"

Theismann, Riggins Lead Washington

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Joe Theismann and John Riggins led a two-touchdown second quarter explosion and a strong defense made that stand up for the victory as the Washington Redskins downed the New Orleans Saints 14-9 in National Football League preseason game Saturday.

Theismann, who played only the first half, accounted for the second one with 17 seconds left in the second quarter with a 7-yard pass to wide receiver Art Monk.

Led by defensive end Dexter Manley, the Redskins' defense registered seven sacks against the three quarterbacks used by New Orleans. Manley got three of those sacks. Tackle Darryl Grant got two, linebackers Monte Coleman one and Stuart Anderson got one each.

All of New Orleans' points came from kicker Morten Andersen on field goals of 51 yards in the first quarter, 51 yards in the second quarter and 20 yards shortly after the fourth quarter began.

Richard Todd drew his first start of the season for New Orleans and finished with 10 completions on 17 attempts for 148 yards.

It was the first loss of the preseason for New Orleans, 3-1, and Washington wound up 2-2 in the exhibition season.

Wilander Wins ATP Title

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Defending champion Mats Wilander fought back from a four-game deficit in the final set to dump second-seeded Jimmy Connors 7-6, 1-6, 7-6 Saturday and advance to the final of the $375,000 Association of Tennis Professionals Championship.

Wilander was to meet the winner of the match between two other Swedes, No. 5-seeded Anders Jarryd and No. 8 Joakim Nystom for the championship Sunday.

Schnellenberger Left As Coach Without A Team

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Miami's USFL franchise is no longer just six months before its first season was to begin and three months after Howard Schnellenberger had accepted the head coaching position.

Sherwood Weiser, who said last May he would bring the Washington Federals to Miami, and Schnellenberger made the announcements Friday at a news conference at the headquarters of Weiser's Continental Companies.

Schnellenberger, 53, has now gone full circle in less than eight months — from an idol in South Florida as the coach of the national champion University of Miami Hurricanes to a man without a team.

Schnellenberger, who signed a reported five-year, $3 million contract with Weiser just three months ago, said the two men still have a "financial arrangement," but he would not elaborate. The former assistant to Miami Dolphins Head Coach Don Shula admits he's looking for work in his chosen field.

"I'm a football coach by trade and I plan to be one for a long time to come," Schnellenberger said. "I'm sorry that it's not going to be in Miami, though."

Both Schnellenberger and Weiser said the USFL's announcement this week that it would switch from its current spring season to a fall schedule in 1986 affected their decisions.

"I'm regretting to tell you that we have elected to discontinue any further negotiations to purchase the Washington Federals," Weiser said.

"I regret the fact that we can't bring a team to Miami, but I think the need to make a prudent business decision overshadows the desire to bring a team to this area," the hotel developer said.

Schnellenberger said he didn't want to compete for fans with the National Football League's Dolphins and the collegiate Hurricanes.

"I would have rather had this press conference than to have brought the team to Miami under the present set of circumstances," Schnellenberger said. "I never wanted to go head-to-head with the Dolphins and Hurricanes."

Schnellenberger, who guided the Hurricanes to an 11-1 record last season and a 31-30 Orange Bowl upset over top-ranked Nebraska, left the college team on May 25. At the same time, Weiser affirmed that he had nearly completed a deal to bring the Federals to Miami.

Weiser recently had said the agreement had not been completed because a partner, Miami auto dealer Norman Braman, backed out of deal. As recently as last week, Schnellenberger had said only minor details needed to be completed.

Schnellenberger said he would consider offers from college or professional teams, but he refused to speculate about his future. He said he had not talked to anybody about a new job yet.

Schnellenberger began his coaching career as an assistant at Kentucky, his alma mater. He also had assistant coaching jobs at Alabama, under Paul "Bear" Byrant, and in the professional ranks with the Los Angeles Rams and the Dolphins. He left the Dolphins in 1973 for a brief stint as head coach of the Baltimore Colts, but was fired three games into his second season. His teams there compiled a 4-13 record.

He rejoined the Dolphins in 1974 and took the University of Miami job five years later. He led the Hurricanes to a 41-36 record in five seasons.

USFL spokesman Jim Byrne said Weiser's decision to back out of the Miami deal means the franchise technically reverts to Washington and reluctant owner Berl Bernhard, at least for the time being.

"We're going to be talking to the Washington principals over the next couple of days," Byrne said. "Obviously, we'd like to keep this a stable franchise."

But Byrne acknowledged that it's conceivable the franchise could be eliminated entirely in the USFL consolidation, in which the Oklahoma and Oakland teams have already merged.

New Offense For Pam Pack In '84

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Washington Pam Pack posted a 6-4 record a year ago, but only one starter returns for the 1984 campaign which will feature a new offense.

The Pam Pack ran the wishbone for the past three years under head Coach Bing Mitchell, but now Washington has adopted the pro-set to utilize speed and neutralize a lack of size.

"We've been a wishbone team, but we decided to change to take advantage or our quickness," Mitchell said. "Our offensive line averages about 180 pounds, so we're not as strong as we have been. We think the new offense will break our backs open a little better."

Washington, a member of the 3-A Northeastern Conference, premiered the pro-set against Friday in a scrimmage against 4-A Rose High School, and Mitchell was "relatively pleased" with the results.

"We didn't have a sustained drive, but we did break a couple of long runs," Mitchell said. "Rose has a big defensive line, and we just weren't strong enough to move them off the line.

"We'll make some adjustments and wait to see how we do in game situations."

Senior Dickie Cherry and junior John High are battling for the starting quarterback slot, but Mitchell indicated Cherry will probably be the starter.

"Dickie was our backup last year, and he's the leading candidate right now," Mitchell said. "He has a good arm, and he can be an asset to our offense. John High was on the jayvee team last year, but he may be a little more familiar with our offense."

Running back Shane Manual is the Pam Pack's only returning starter and holds one backfield slot. Senior Ronnie Godley and juniors Steve Oden and Al Matthews will also battle for playing time at running back.

"Shane Manual is probably the best athlete on the team, possibly an All-State candidate," Mitchell said. "Oden will probably be the other starter, but Matthews will play a great deal. (Matthews) was a jayvee starter last year and has outstanding potential; he could be great one day. Godley is a great leader, very intense. He's probably our best blocker in the backfield."

At fullback, Jay Laws and Tyrone Gorham are making a bid for the slot opened when Cecil Peed suffered a spained ankle. Peed returned to practice this week and could be ready in time for the opener, but Laws and Gorham hold the edge.

"Cecil Peed was a part-time starter last year," Mitchell said. "He has good quickness for his size (5-11, 225), but that ankle injury has slowed him down quite a bit. Laws was a backup last year and has good balance. Gorham is a little stronger, but this is his first year at fullback. With Peed healthy, we're really in good shape at fullback."

Seniors David McIver and Kenny Pierce will lead the wide receivers, while Rob Jackson and Sam Stephenson are the top tight ends.

"We're going to throw the ball more this year," Mitchell said. "McIver has good hands and has done an outstanding job this fall. But Kenny Pierce has been the surprise of the fall. He converted from running back to split end and has really come on.

"Jackson and Stephenson will split time at tight end. Jackson is an outstanding blocker, and Stephenson runs good patterns."

Todd Downs has control of the center position on the line, but three candidates are in the running for guard berths and four at tackle. Melvin Boyd and Jim Roberson are considered the starters at guard, but David Lawrence could earn one position. Frank White, Steve Tubaugh, Mike Moffitt and Mike Waters are fighting for time at tackle.

Defensively, the Pam Pack lines up in a 5-2 set with senior David Cuthrell (6-1, 230) anchoring the front.

"I'm concerned about our front five against real strong teams; they have to be tested," Mitchell said. "Our secondary is looking real good, but we've still got a way to go."

Moffitt, Waters and Bobby Murrell are the leading tackles, with Stephenson, Phil Harris and Dennis Thigpen vying for the defensive ends. Jackson, Gorham, Al Matthews and Jim Roberson head the list of linebackers.

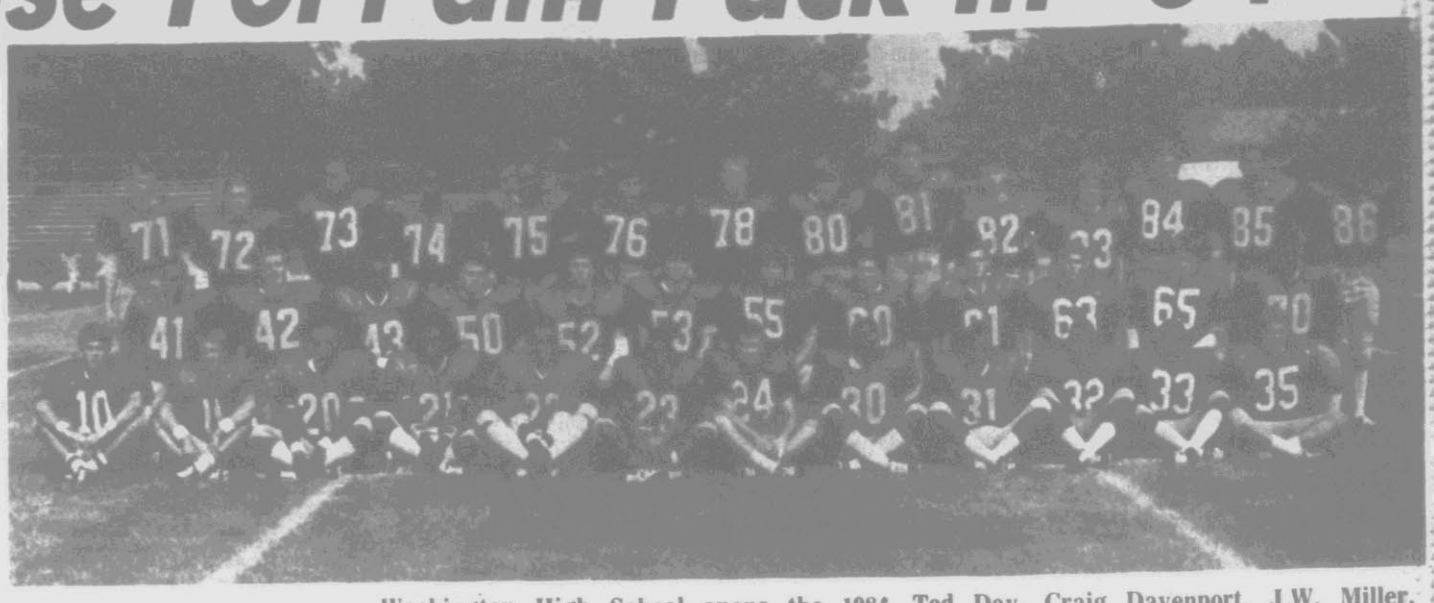

Manual, George Mizelle and Mike Grice form the cornerback corps, while Oden, High, Pierce, McIver and Frankie Deaver battle at safety.

Injuries have slowed the Pam Pack's progress, with Peed heading the list. Godley has been hampered by a broken wrist.

"It's been nothing major, just nagging injuries," Mitchell said. "We've had a lot of kids miss day with ankle or knee strains. If he can stay healthy, I think we have the potential to be a good team by the middle of the season."

Bertie and Tarboro are the top teams this year in the Northeastern battle, according to Mitchell. But he admits, "then it's up in the air. There are a lot of equal teams."

"We've got so many inexperienced players, it's hard to say where we'll fall in," Mitchell said. "If we can stay injury free, we should be in the running."

Washington High School opens the 1984 football season Friday, hosting Belhaven. Members of the Pam Pack are, first row, left to right: Richard Cherry, John High, Tyrone Gorham, Kenny Pierce, Shane Manuel, Steve Oden, Jimmy Hodges, Allen Matthews, Duane Glasmer, Cecil Peed, Michael Grice, Frank Deaner; second row, Jay Laws, Ronnie Godley, George Mizelle, Todd Downs, Ted Day, Craig Davenport, J.W. Miller, David Lawrence, Winfield Cutler, Greg Lyons, Chip Thompson, Bobby Murrell; third row, Stephen Tubaugh, Jim Roberson, Michael Waters, Melvin Boyd, Frank White, Michael Moffitt, David Cuthrell, Mike Whitford, Sam Stephenson, Bill Harris, Lee Rumley, Rob Jackson, Dennis Thigpen, and David McIver. Turner Signs

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets on Saturday announced the signing of Jeff Turner, the National Basketball Association club's first-round draft pick out of Vanderbilt University.

The 6-foot-9½ forward was a member of the gold-medal winning 1984 U.S. Olympic basketball team and was the 17th player selected in the NBA dratt.

Turner, 22, a native of Brandon, Fla., averaged 16.8 points and 7.3 rebounds per game for Vanderbilt. He was named to the Southeast Conference all-star team in his senior year, when he led the conference in free throw percentage with a .843 average.

Collard Net Tourney Set

AYDEN — The Ayden Collard Festival Tennis Tournament will be held September 8-9.

Events include men's and women's doubles, men's and women's 35 and over doubles and mixed doubles.

There will be a consolation flight in each event in which eight or more teams enter.

The entry fee is $15 per team and each person will receive a t-shirt.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

DeLeon Misses No-Hitter, Parker Leads Cincinnati

By MIKE CLARK
AP Sports Writer

Jose DeLeon has been through it all before, but that didn't make it any easier to explain how yet another bid for a no-hitter got away.

"This time I blew it," said DeLeon, whose throwing error set the stage for Cincinnati to convert its only hit of the game into a 2-0 triumph Friday night over the woeful Pittsburgh Pirates.

After six perfect innings, DeLeon walked Eddie Milner to open the Cincinnati seventh. Disaster struck when DeLeon pounced on Ron Oester's sacrifice bunt and launched a throw into center field for an error.

With Milner at third and Oester at second, Dave Parker dribbled a base hit through the middle to drive in the first run of the game. Oester moved to third on the hit and came home with the insurance run when Tony Pena's pickoff throw sailed into left field.

That bad inning was enough to seal DeLeon's doom, since Cincinnati's Jeff Russell, 6-14, was quietly tossing a three-hit shutout at the weak-hitting Pirates. The outcome continued a trend that has become all too familiar to DeLeon, 6-11. In six of his losses this season, the Pirates have been shut out and in three other defeats managed only one run.

In other National League games, Chicago padded its lead in the East with a 3-0 victory over Atlanta while San Francisco was taking 7-6 and 6-5 victories from second-place New York; Western Division leader San Diego split a double-header with Montreal, taking the nightcap 5-4 after dropping the opener 4-1; Houston moved into second place in the West with a 7-2 triumph over St. Louis, and Philadelphia downed Los Angeles 6-5 in 10 innings.

Parker, whose admitted "72-hopper" through a drawn-in Pittsburgh infield scored the deciding run, and Reds player-manager Pete Rose were each willing to give DeLeon credit for a partial no-hitter.

"He threw half a hitter," Parker said.

Added Rose: "He did pitch a no-hitter because if there had been no error the infield would have been back on Parker. When a guy throws as hard as he does and can throw the forkball like he does, he's got a chance to throw a no-hitter every time he goes out there."

In fact, DeLeon has taken no-hit bids into the sixth inning seven times in his 13-month major league career, only to watch the dream unravel on every occasion.

"That's the best game Jose's pitched all year," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "But that's the best their kid has pitched all year, too. Give him credit."

Russell welcomed being on the winning side for a change.

"I've struggled this year and I've had some tough games. But I've kept my head up," Russell said. "I think I've proved I can throw the ball as well as anybody."

Cubs 3, Braves 0

Rick Sutcliffe won his 12th game in 13 decisions, scattering five hits while striking out six. Sutcliffe helped himself by stroking a pair of singles and scoring an insurance run in the seventh inning on a single by Ryne Sandberg. Sandberg had given Sutcliffe the only run he needed with a solo homer in the first off Atlanta starter Rick Camp, 6-6. The homer was Sandberg's 16th of the year but first since Aug. 1.

Giants 7-6, Mets 6-5

Chili Davis tripled in the tying run and scored the winning run on Dusty Baker's infield single in the seventh inning of the nightcap to give San Francisco a surprising double-header sweep of the homestanding Mets. The Giants won the opener behind the slugging of Bob Brenly, who drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including a three-run shot in the seventh that decided the issue.

Frank Williams, 8-2, won both games in relief, each time with relief help from Greg Minton, who recorded his 13th and 14th saves.

The twin defeats dropped New York 5½ games back of Chicago in the NL East race, the biggest Cub lead of the season.

Ace reliever Jesse Orosco, 8-5, the victim of Brenly's telling blow in the opener, and Walt Terrell, 9-10, absorbed the losses.

Expos 1-4, Padres 1-5

Steve Garvey's two-out single in the top of the ninth inning drove in Bobby Brown with the winning run and in the process got relief ace Rich Gossage off an unfamiliar hook in the nightcap. Gossage, called in to protect a one-run lead in the eighth, surrendered a two-run single to Tim Wallach that put the Expos on top 4-3. Thanks to Garvey, Gossage improved his record to 8-4 while Montreal reliever Jeff Reardon fell to 5-5.

Wallach and Reardon enjoyed kinder fates in the opener. After

Stars Consider Move

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor W. Wilson Goode said football fans should know within 30 days whether "a 50-50 chance" of keeping the champion Philadelphia Stars works out in the city's favor.

But owner Myles Tanenbaum, who met with Goode for an hour Friday, seemed less optimistic about the odds of staying as he headed down Interstate 95 to discuss moving his United States Football League team to Baltimore.

After the meeting with Tanenbaum, Goode promised to do everything within his power to keep the team but stopped short of committing $10 million to upgrade Franklin Field, where the Stars played two games last season because of conflicts with the Philadelphia Phillies at Veterans Stadium.

The Stars found themselves facing the prospect of losing their home playing field when USFL owners voted Wednesday to change the league's spring schedule to the fall in 1986. The switch will put the team in conflict with the National Football League's Eagles and the Phillies.

After meeting with Goode, Tanenbaum went to Baltimore with club attorney Howard Gittis, General Manager Carl Peterson and Coach Jim Mora for talks with Hank Butta, a Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. executive appointed to head a city task force on football, and other officials.

"If we cannot make a deal to stay in Philadelphia, it's Baltimore," said Tanenbaum, a local lawyer and industrial developer.

Peterson said the Baltimore officials responded well to word that Goode had asked for time to explore ways to keep the team in Philadelphia.

"Mayor (William Donald) Schaefer and Mr. Butta appreciate that, because . . . unfortunately, this city suffered before regarding losing a franchise without having an opportunity to fight for it," Peterson said.

Peterson also said contract obligations with Philadelphia probably would keep the Stars from moving in 1985, as some players have advocated.

"The Stars have been courted very heavily by Baltimore," Goode said during a news conference Friday afternoon. "Within a 30-day time frame we should know whether the Stars will stay or leave."

Any deal to keep the Stars in Philadelphia, where they compiled a league-leading 35-6 record in two seasons, apparently would have to include the 65,000-seat Veterans Stadium where the Eagles have exclusive fall playing rights.

Tanenbaum has ruled out Franklin Field without a major renovation because of a lack of parking, rest rooms, luxury boxes and concession facilities.

Soccer, Violence Season Opens

LONDON (AP) — A new English league soccer season started Saturday and so did the ritual violence.

Police at Leicester in central England said they had two officers hospitalized for injuries suffered while trying to control fighting at the Leicester City-Newcastle United match. One of the two officers was kicked unconscious.

Before play began, crowds surged around the stadium and smashed windows at a pub and the local hospital, Leicester Royal Infirmary. Police said they made 20 arrests, mostly of visitors from Newcastle, the northeast industrial city.

Tar Heels Avoid Tigers For Top Slot

AP Sports Writer

North Carolina's most inexperienced team in years has been picked to capture the Atlantic Coast Conference football title, and that's because pre-season pollsters were prohibited from choosing Clemson for the honor.

While the Tigers are one of the fortunate league schools in that they have their starting quarterback and 15 starters from the 1983 lineup that achieved a 9-1-1 record, their three-year ACC probation keeps them out of the title picture.

The next choice of the summer poll is the Tar Heels, who have 11 starters from the 7-4 team that lost to Florida State in the Peach Bowl. The offense will have to locate a replacement for quarterback Scott Stankavage, and coach Dick Crum has said he'll let Kevin Anthony and Mark Maye battle for the starting job.

"Kevin is certainly the leader right now, but Mark is a great competitor and I imagine he'll push him for the starting job in the fall," Crum said. "I expect both will play this season."

With tailback Ethan Horton and a stable of good backups, the Tar Heel running game will be potent. Stopping opposition offenses will be difficult, however, because linebacker Micah Moon is one of four defenders who come back from 1983. Moon missed spring drills because of wrist surgery, but should be ready for the season opener against Navy on Sept. 15.

Clemson considered defense a top priority for rebuilding last spring after losing Tim Childers at free safety and Rod McSwain at right cornerback. Four starters were lost along the line, but coach Danny Ford thinks he has the personnel to fill the gaps.

"All our defensive linemen are going to have to be good players," Ford said. "We've got 18 guys we think can help us."

"We're going to have to have success moving the football to make up for some of our shortcomings," Ford said.

Eppley is one of three quarterbacks in the ACC who is returning from last fall. Maryland lost Boomer Esiason to the Cincinnati Bengals and watched a lot more experience walk away as well. In all, Ross must fill 14 starting spots.

"We lost a lot of key people. We lost our whole offensive backfield," said Maryland coach Bobby Ross. "That's our starting point. This will be the most inexperienced team that I've had since I've been with Maryland."

Senior Frank Reich, who replaced Esiason several times last season, is expected to assume the controls there, while junior letterman Rick Badanjek takes over for Dave D'Addio. A mixture of youth and experience is sprinkled throughout the defense.

"It's not gonna change at all. We might add a wrinkle or two or delete a thing or two, but we're going to stick with the same thing," Ross said.

Georgia Tech coach Bill Curry says he is looking for consistency in his team, which competed for the ACC title for the first time last year. The team took third, and has tailback Robert Lavette to help the Yellow Jackets strive for greater heights.

"We expect to inject an atmosphere of confidence into the program," Curry said. "We should expect to figure in the conference race."

Curry is especially pleased with the defense, in which he noted improvement during the spring.

"The play of the defense in spring drills served as an encouragement for the offense to do as well," he said. "You can never tell until you face a strong team in an actual football game, but I believe that we improved our defense in the spring."

The third quarterback who returns from last year's campaign is North Carolina State's Tim Esposito. The Californian won a pre-season battle for the starting spot and set six individual records and four school marks in the process.

Esposito is joined in the backfield by senior Joe McIntosh, the nation's leading career rusher with 3,051 yards. In addition, coach Tom Reed calls offensive tackle Joe Milinichik "the best offensive lineman in the ACC — bar none."

Six starters come back from the 1983 defense, but the inside linebacking duo of Andy Hendel and Vaughan Johnson have moved on. In all, Reed thinks his team has improved in 21 of 24 positions, but he doesn't have a lot of people to rely on once the front-line people are in trouble.

"We're in a position where we can't afford to have anybody injured," Reed said. "After spring practice, we are on the fence, but if we evolve both mentally and physically, then we will have a chance to be in every game."

Duke finished fourth in the ACC last year with the help of record-setting quarterback Ben Bennett and tailback Mike Grayson, both of whom accounted for 3,871 yards of the 4,512 yards of Blue Devil total offense. This year, coach Steve Sloan must rebuild the middle of that attack and teach last year's performers a new alignment — an even attack that will include three defensive backs.

"We don't want to fall off too much offensively. We lost some guys who accounted for a lot of yardage," Sloan said. "We're somewhat of a marginal team that hopes to win some close games."

Wake Forest has always been after what coach Al Groh calls ACC-caliber athletes. He thinks this may be the year.

"We've got a lot more guys on our squad who are ACC football players," Groh said. "Our team should play good football this year."

Replacing Gary Schofield will be either incumbent Foy White or transfer Jamie Harris. Groh said he will not have a time-sharing arrangement for his offense.

"We will definitely have a designated first-team quarterback," he said. "We're gonna pick one and we're gonna go with them."

Four players are fighting for the quarterback job at Virginia, while three starters from 1983 anchor the offensive line. Nine starters bolster a defense that played a key role in coach George Welsh's 6-5 mark last year.

"We're experienced in most areas and have good talent," Welsh said. "The winning season last fall helped us recruit better and I think our squad now has a better idea of what it takes to have a winning season."

Wolfpack Paying Price To Become Successful

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State football coach Tom Reed says the Wolfpack can pay now — through tough, rigorous preseason drills — or pay later — in losses.

"I was out watching some high schools practice this spring ... and a high school coach said something that made a lot of of sense to me," Reed said. "He had his kids going through this conditioning drill and he said, 'Men, it's simple. You've got to pay now or pay later. You must understand to play football you have to pay. If you don't work now, you're going to pay on game day.'

"I believe that sincerely. We've got to pay now so we can get the rewards on Saturday," Reed told reporters Friday during their stop in Raleigh on the Atlantic Coast Conference preseason football tour.

Reed acknowledged that fall practices have been "intense," and tailback Joe McIntosh agreed.

"We may be the best fit team out there," said McIntosh, who rushed for 1,081 yards last season to lead the Wolfpack ground attack.

But McIntosh, who is the top returning runner in the NCAA with a career 3,051 yards rushing, said the tough practices should help the Wolfpack be "strong in the fourth quarter."

N.C. State was outscored 122 to 41 in the fourth quarter last season en route to a 3-8 record.

"We played a great first half" in nearly every game, he said. "If we'd played every game only one half, we'd have been 8-3. But we were just weak. We've got to get stronger."

The drills have been so hard that between 30 to 40 players have quit. But Reed said most of those players were walk-ons.

"I want to make it clear we had a 170 people come in and play football ... and we have not lost a scholarship player since we started practice," he said. "The players who quit have been players who weren't sure they wanted to play anyway. They walked on to see what it's like."

Quarterback Tim Esposito also said the tougher practices should help the Wolfpack when the fourth quarter rolls around.

"We had problems in the fourth quarter last year and we want to be ready to overcome them this year," said Esposito, who set several school records a year ago, including most yards passing, 2,096.

The tougher practices also may help the Wolfpack avoid injuries, which is a must because of what Reed called a "depth problem."

"Our biggest concern is our depth," Reed said. To illustrate his point, Reed said none of the players backing up the starters at offensive line or in the defensive backfield have ever played in a game for N.C. State.

But Reed said he feels "comfortable" going into his second year.

"We've set high standards, but they've met them," Reed said. "They've responded well.

"Our goal is to get better," he said. "I can't tell you how many games we're going to win. We're sitting on the fence right now. We can go up or we can go down."

DeLeon Loses Bid...

Gary Carter broke a 1-1 tie with a sixth-inning single off San Diego starter Mark Thurmond, 10-7, Wallach stroked a two-run single to give Expos starter Steve Rogers, 5-12, all the support needed. Reardon pitched the ninth for his 19th save.

Astros 7, Cardinals 2

Joe Niekro, 13-9, pitched a five-hitter and Terry Puhl and Phil Garner each drove in two runs as the Astros climbed past Atlanta into second place in the NL West, 9½ games back of San Diego. Puhl had a run-scoring single and Alan Ashby an RBI double as Houston jumped into a 2-0 lead in the first against Cardinals starter Ricky Horton, 8-3. Jose Cruz, Garner and Puhl had run-scoring singles in the third to chase Horton, and Garner drove in another run in the fourth.

Niekro's sixth complete game of the year allowed the Astros to win for the 12th time in 14 games.

Phils 6, Dodgers 5

German Rivera's high throw following a routine grounder by Glenn Wilson allowed Len Matusek to score from third with the run that moved Philadelphia within a half-game of second place in the NL East. Mike Schmidt's 26th homer of the year gave Philadelphia a 3-0 lead in the first, but the Dodgers tied it 4-4 in the eighth on Steve Yeager's solo homer, a two-run double by Dave Anderson and a run-scoring two-bagger by Tony Brewer.

A two-out double by Ivan DeJesus in the bottom of the inning gave the Phils another lead, but Pedro Guerrero tied it again with a bloop single.

Lloyd Sweeps Fairbank, Durie

MONTREAL (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd won two matches in the space of six hours Friday to reach the semifinals of the $250,000 Player's Challenge women's tennis tournament.

On Friday morning, Lloyd downed Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa 6-3, 7-5 in a match that began Thursday only to be halted by rain with Lloyd leading 2-1 in the first set.

After disposing of Fairbank, Lloyd, the No. 2-ranked player in the world, went on to defeat fifth-seeded Jo Durie of Britain 6-2, 6-3 in a quarterfinal match.

Lloyd, who now faces Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia in one of Saturday's semifinals, told reporters she experienced only one difficult moment during her two matches.

"I lost my concentration in the first match a little because I didn't feel threatened by Ros (Fairbank) at all," she said. "I have a lot of respect for Jo (Durie) because she's more dangerous."

Sukova, the seventh seed, upset Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, the fourth seed, 6-4, 6-2 Friday for the right to face Lloyd.

"In my last match I got angry at the umpire, so today, I just tried to play tennis and not worry abut who's in the chair," said Sukova, who's been unhappy with her play this year. She's ranked 18th in the world.

Katerina Lindquist of Sweden, also won two matches Friday as she eliminated third-seeded Kathy Jordan 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 6-4 and then earned a semifinal berth by edging Terry Phelps of Larchmont, N.Y., 2-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Washington Tournament

WASHINGTON — A softball tournament will be held in Washington on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8-9, for both men and women.

The tournament is open to Class D Industrial or Church League teams (no more than two Class C players per team) for men. Women's teams may be Class C or lower (no A or B players).

The tournament will be held at the John Cotton Tayloe, P.S. Jones and Washington High School fields in Washington. All teams must provide two new 12" ASA or USSA approved balls prior to the start of play.

Trophies will be presented to the championship and runner-up teams and to the 15 members of the championship team and the most valuable player.

The entry fee is $65 and entry forms and other information is available by contacting Bobby Andrews, Rt. 3, Box 884, Washington, or by calling 946-4125 between 8:30 a.m. and 11 p.m.

The deadline for entries is Wednesday, September 5.

Ayden Collard Footrace

AYDEN — The Eighth Annual Collard Festival Footrace will be held in Ayden on Sunday, September 9.

This year's race will feature an open 5,000 meter run which will begin at 5 p.m. It will be preceeded by a 1,500-meter run for youths 12 and under as well as a 3,000-meter fun run.

Entry fees for the 5,000 and 3,000 meter runs will be $5, with a $4 charge for the 1,500-meter run.

Trophies will be awarded to winners in each event and other awards will be given to the first three males and females in each of several age groups. T-shirts will be given to the first 150 entrants.

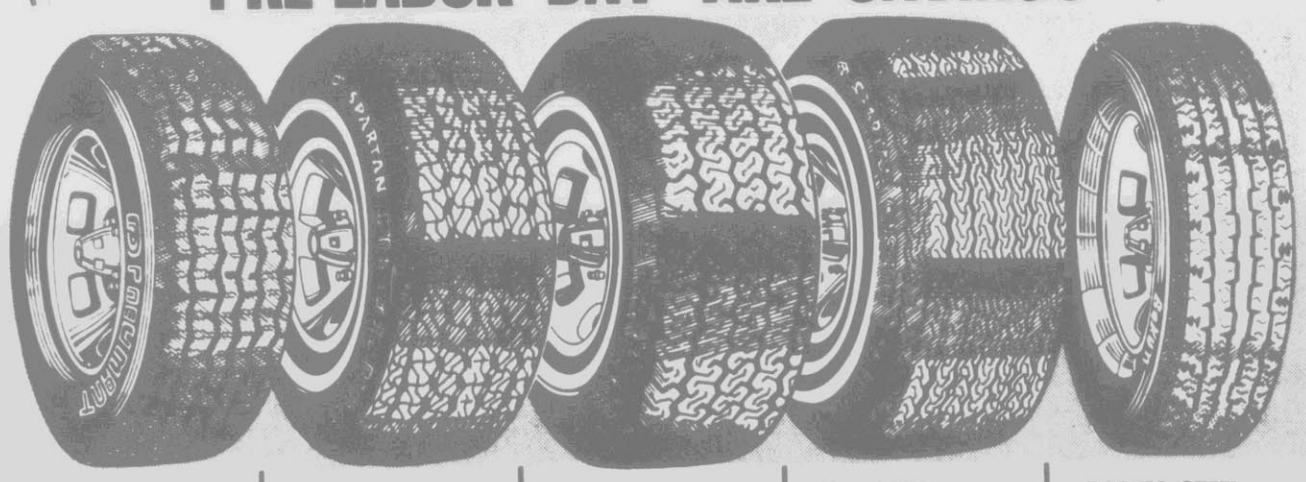

For entry forms or other information, contact Chuck Dunn, 420 Park Ave., Ayden, N.C. 28513 or call (919) 746-6155.

Mulliniks, Jays Envious Of Twins

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays, who have every right to be envious of the Minnesota Twins, actually kind of like the upstarts of the American League West.

"We wish them all the luck in the world when we're done with them," said Toronto's Rance Mulliniks, who had three hits in the Blue Jays' 6-2 triumph over the Twins Friday night.

Mulliniks, who's 18 for his last 24 at-bats, is one of many Blue Jays hoping the Twins hang on to their four-game lead in the West.

"I'm rooting for them, matter of fact," Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said. "I like (Twins Manager) Billy Gardner and the way he built the ball club."

Toronto, which is 11 games behind first-place Detroit in the East, would have a five-game edge over the Twins if it played in the West.

Doesn't that make the Blue Jays a little jealous?

"It's a little frustrating because we've had a pretty good season (72-55), but Detroit's had a great season," Mulliniks said.

"We're not trying to vindicate anything or anybody," said Cliff Johnson, whose pinch-hit double in the eighth broke a 2-2 tie. "I hope they (the Twins) win it."

In other AL games, it was Boston 7, Cleveland 6; Texas 10, Milwaukee 3; Kansas City 6, Chicago 2; California 5, Detroit 3; Baltimore 4, Oakland 2; and New York 6, Seattle 4 in 10 innings.

Luis Leal, 13-3, struck out a career-high 10 batters as the Blue Jays rallied with five runs in the last three innings off Twins relievers.

It marked the fifth time in six games the Twins blew leads to the Blue Jays, who are 6-0 over Minnesota this season.

"I'd rather strike out two and throw 90 pitches than strike out 10 and throw 150 pitches," Leal said. "It makes my arm tired."

With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, the Blue Jays broke the game open against Rick Lysander, 3-2.

Willie Aikens led off with a single, Mulliniks followed with his third hit and Johnson rapped a ground-rule double into the right field corner, which made it 3-2.

Damaso Garcia then singled to score Mulliniks and Dave Collins' forceout drove in another run to ice the victory.

Minnesota's offensive highlight was rookie Tim Teufel's leadoff home run in the fifth inning, which gave Minnesota a 2-1 edge. It was the first homer Leal allowed in 32 2-3 innings.

Teufel's 13th home run eclipsed the Twins' team record for most homers by a second baseman. Bernie Allen had a dozen in 1962.

Angels 5, Tigers 3

At Anaheim, California scored four runs off 15-game winner Dan Petry in the first inning and went on to beat Detroit as Mike Witt won his first game in more than a month.

Reggie Jackson's two-run single touched off the first-inning rally. The Angels picked up another run on the play when Kirk Gibson threw high to third base.

Bobby Grich then singled for the fourth run off Petry, 15-7.

Witt, 12-10, picked up his first win in six starts since July 23. He walked one, struck out six and allowed eight hits before leaving with no outs in the ninth. He gave up solo homers by Chet Lemon in the second and Manny Castillo in the sixth.

Orioles 4, A's 2

Eddie Murray hit his first home run in three weeks, a three-run blast in the first inning, and Mike Boddicker pitched a six-hitter, leading Baltimore over the A's at Oakland, which lost its sixth straight game.

Despite his recent drought, Murray's homer was his 23rd of the season and gave him a major-league leading 18 game-winning RBI.

Rangers 10, Brewers 3

Gary Ward had four hits, including a three-run double and a three-run homer, to power Texas to victory at Milwaukee.

Ward doubled in the fourth inning off Andy Beene, 0-2, to give the Rangers a 6-3 lead. In the sixth, Ward drove a Pete Ladd pitch over the center field wall for a three-run homer to make it 9-3.

Red Sox 7, Indians 6

Rick Miller broke a 4-4 tie with a fluke three-run double in the sixth inning and Boston held on to win at home against Cleveland.

Miller's routine 330-foot fly ball looked like it would be the third out of the inning, but left fielder Mel Hall slipped and fell flat on his back, allowing the ball to roll to the warning path as three runners scored.

Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 8-9, allowed nine hits and struck out nine in seven innings. He earned his eighth victory in 17 decisions although the Indians rallied for two runs in the ninth on consecutive run-scoring doubles by Hall and Andre Thornton.

Royals 5, White Sox 2

Connors, Wilander Meet In Semifinal

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Jimmy Connors, second-seed, faces defending champion Mats Wilander in the semifinals of the $275,000 Association of Tennis Professionals tournament.

"I'm playing very well," said Wilander, who hadn't played in a tournament for two months after suffering a wrist injury at Wimbledon. "I have my confidence back."

Both Connors and Wilander, who met Saturday, struggled through quarter final matches Friday.

Connors, who entered the tournament seeded second, behind defeated John McEnroe, had to win a tie-breaker to defeat Sweden's Stefan Hedberg 6-3, 4-6, 7-6.

Though Edberg lost, at least two Swedes won quarterfinal matches Friday. Fifth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden defeated Paul McNamee of Australia, 6-2, 7-6. And eighth-seeded Joakim Nystrom beat Dan Cassidy, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2.

Willander lost the first match 7-6 to John Sadri on the tie-breaker, but came back 7-6 in the second game on a 7-4 tie-breaker and won the third easily, 6-1.

"I didn't think Sadri's serve would continue as strong, but it did," said Wilander.

Football TV Ratings Watched

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Behind the political turbulence swirling around college football, there may be only one statement that could draw agreement from all warring factions:

There has never been a college football season like the one coming up.

And it has nothing to do with what happens on the field.

It's going to be an experimental shakedown cruise as much as anything. Network moguls, advertising account executives and college administrators will be studying the television ratings of games as closely as coaches scruitinize films of next week's opponent. Thanks to a Supreme Court ruling, the NCAA's centralized control of football television rights is dissolved and, theoretically, every school and conference can make its own deals.

But nobody knows what is going to happen. Everybody is afraid that over-saturation of football telecasts could cause rights fees to plummet even more than they have. And in addition, many small and medium-sized programs are scared that they could be buried beneath the untold millions in television revenue flowing to the big-time powers.

"This entire year will be atypical. Everything about this year is going to be atypical," said Chuck Neinas, 53, executive director of the College Football Association, which led the fight to destroy centralized controls of football television rights.

"For one thing, the networks, by mid-summer, are usually selling advertising rates on games not for the coming season, but for the season after that. This year, nobody knew what they were going to have to sell until July. Everybody had to scramble."

They're still scrambling.

ABC, which is advertising that it will show CFA instead of NCAA football, has announced only two so far: Boston College-Alabama on Sept. 8 and Oklahoma-Pittsburgh on Sept. 15. The network says it will announce all other games 12 days in advance.

For years, Neinas threw darts at the NCAA's television policies, frequently asserting that the NCAA plan prevented some of the biggest games from even being televised.

Finally this summer, in a 7-2 vote of the U.S. Supreme Court, Neinas' long battle was won and millions of dollars worth of NCAA network contracts were voided.

Lots of people naturally made some assumptions, including:

—That all the good games will now hit the airways.

—That schools will be able to cut practically any television deal they want.

—That the NCAA had suffered a deep financial wound.

But on the eve of the 1984 season, the NCAA has just approved a record $41 million budget for the next fiscal year and athletic directors across the nation are complaining of too many restrictions on television games.

Moreover, the dispute has gone back to the courts, with the Pacific 10 and Big Ten conferences suing the CFA over who owns the telecast rights to which games.

And Neinas is preparing to testify in court that under the CFA arrangement, several key games, including Nebraska-UCLA, ought not to be televised.

The high court's decision climaxed an antitrust suit brought in 1981 by Oklahoma and Georgia, two of the most militant CFA schools. Essentially, the court agreed that all schools should be free to make any television deals they wish, since the schools own the rights to their own property.

But the first thing the CFA did was draft a broad television plan covering all 63 of its members, which includes every major football conference and independent except the Big Ten and Pac 10. Those two conferences worked out a deal with CBS.

Under the law, the schools are free to make any deal they wish. But under the CFA agreement, nobody can televise a game between 2:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. local time because that slot is reserved for ABC, which signed a reported $12 million contract with the CFA for national telecasts. The evenings in most areas are similarly reserved for ESPN, the all-sports channel which signed a supplementary deal with the CFA for about $10 million.

And in addition, every CFA conference except the Western Athletic has arranged its own television package, with games starting in the morning, 11:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Even the Public Broadcasting Service is getting in on the act, televising Ivy League games.

The result is that metro areas with full cable service might get as many as eight games in one day.

But having to move their starting times up to 11:30 in the morning or back to 7:30 at night just to accommodate television is something many schools and their fans and alumni are going to have problems with.

"People are really becoming frustrated," said Bill Hancock, an assistant commissioner of the Big Eight. "They can't make a television deal in the afternoon because they can't go against ABC. They can't televise a game at night because they can't go against the cable agreement. And they can't televise a game in the morning because they're not allowed to televise against the conference package."

Another sore point among many administrators is the loss of revenue they expect to result because of the Oklahoma-Georgia action. The NCAA's contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN this year would have brought about $74 million to schools. The CFA contract with ABC is worth an estimated $12 million, similar to a supplementary cable deal the CFA signed with ESPN, which was recently acquired by ABC.

The Pac 10-Big Ten deal with CBS is said to be worth about $9.5 million and the Army-Navy and Boston College-Miami games will bring in an additional $1.6 million from an outside contract signed with CBS. The individual conference packages, say observers, probably will not total more than $16 million.

All of this probably means that at least for this first year, the Oklahoma-Georgia suit could cost many schools many dollars.

"The plaintiffs (Oklahoma and Georgia) made an enormous economic miscalculation," said Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA. "It represents a really unfortunate analysis of the marketplace forces in television. Colleges are paying a price for that miscalculation."

Every agreement and contract is for this season only — meaning that before the 1984 season is spent, college and television moguls will be jockeying for position for next year.

Waltrip Chases Record

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip will start from the third row as he attempted to set a NASCAR record of eight consecutive wins at one track in Saturday night's $228,800 Busch 500 NASCAR race at Bristol International Raceway.

Geoff Bodine won the pole Friday, touring the .533-mile oval with his Chevrolet in an average speed of 111.734 mph to gain his first pole since the 1983 Coca-Cola 500 at Atlanta International Raceway.

Waltrip qualified his Chevrolet fifth at 111.228 mph as he attempts to surpass the NASCAR record of seven consecutive wins at one track, a standard he shares with Richard Petty.

Petty set the mark at Richmond Fairgrounds in the early 1970s and Waltrip tied it by winning the Valleydale 500 at Bristol in April.

Waltrip's car owner, Junior Johnson, has fielded the winner in 13 of the last 17 races at Bristol and Waltrip has never lost on the track in a Johnson car.

Bill Elliott qualified his Ford Thunderbird third at 111.513 and Neil Bonnett was next at 111.312 in a Chevrolet.

The next five fastest qualifiers after Waltrip were Terry Labonte at 111.022, Ricky Rudd at 110.766, Tommy Ellis at 110.498, current points leader Dale Earnhardt at 110.428 and Morgan Shepherd at 110.428.

Earnhardt got the nod over Shepherd for ninth because he was the first of the two to qualify.

The remainder of the 30-car field was to be completed with another qualifying session at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Qualifiers Friday for Saturday night's $228,800 Busch 500 NASCAR Grand National race at Bristol International Raceway. (Final 15 positions will be determined in qualifying at 1 p.m. Saturday.):

1. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 111.734 mph.
2. Tim Richmond, Pontiac, 111.695.
3. Bill Elliott, Thunderbird, 111.513.
4. Neil Bonnett, Chevrolet, 111.312.
5. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet, 111.228.
6. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet, 111.022.
7. Ricky Rudd, Ford, 110.766.
8. Tommy Ellis, Chevrolet, 110.498.
9. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 110.428.
10. Morgan Shepherd, Chevrolet, 110.428.
11. Dave Marcis, Pontiac, 110.409.
12. Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 110.339.
13. Greg Sacks, Chevrolet, 110.276.
14. Mike Alexander, Oldsmobile, 110.137.
15. Bobby Allison, Buick, 110.099.

TONGUE TIMED

BALTIMORE (AP) — There were no records kept but the popular belief among American League umpires over the last decade or more was that Earl Weaver, the retired manager of the Baltimores, led the circuit in times thrown out of a game.

Weaver, who moved into the television booth after the 1982 season, was fond of heated arguments after a call that went against Baltimore.

Martina Chasing Records As Defending U.S. Open Champ

NEW YORK (AP) — When the crowd rose and applauded, Martina Navratilova could no longer hold back the tears. The ovation came after she had lost the women's singles final at the 1981 U.S. Open tennis championships.

Now, Navratilova is chasing numbers — 2, 6 and 55 — as she takes the court at this year's tournament, which begins Tuesday at the National Tennis Center.

After completely dominating women's tennis over the past three years, the left-hander is going after her second consecutive U.S. Open crown and her sixth straight Grand Slam title. If she accomplishes the feat, she will have won 55 consecutive matches, one shy of pro tennis' longest winning streak — a record set by Chris Evert Lloyd in 1974.

"She doesn't remember how to lose," Billie Jean King, a five-time winner of America's most prestigious tennis event, said of Navratilova, the women's No. 1 seed this year. "She's just in the habit of winning."

The third of four jewels in the Grand Slam crown, the U.S. Open begins a two-week run with most of the world's top players aiming for the largest purse in tennis history: more than $2.55 million. The winners of the men's and women's singles each will pocket $160,000 after surviving seven matches.

"It's different because of the location, the planes from LaGuardia Airport going overhead," King said of the U.S. Open site in Flushing Meadow. "It's different because it's a little bit noisier. It's different because we get more people.

"You've got to have good concentration to win at Flushing Meadow. And before you get there, it's very important that you think about it — the noise, the hassle of getting out there every day.

For Navratilova, it's another challenge.

The Czechoslovak, who defected to the United States after the 1975 U.S. Open and since has become a U.S. citizen, cried again last year but they were tears of joy as she finally won the one major title that had eluded her.

This year, Navratilova has lost only once — to Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia in January. Last year, she also had one defeat, to Kathy Horvath in the French Open.

In the men's singles, New Yorker John McEnroe has been almost as dominant, having lost only twice in 61 matches this year. Last month, McEnroe — who captured the U.S. Open for three consecutive years, 1979-81 — won Wimbledon for the second straight year and the third time in his career.

"I'm certainly playing the best tennis of my career this year," McEnroe said. "I think I'm coming into my prime. The next two to four years should be my best years."

For the third straight year McEnroe is the top seed in the men's field that will take to the hard courts at Flushing Meadow, a concrete-and-asphalt edifice.

"It's American," said King, who now heads World Team Tennis and at the age of 40 has drastically cut back on the number of tournaments she plays. "It's got a lot of energy."

McEnroe is favored to win in his backyard. But then he had been favored the past two years — years that saw Jimmy Connors, who will be 32 before this fortnight is over, defeat Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl to win his fourth and fifth U.S. Open titles.

Connors, a favorite of the New York crowds with his scrappy, never-say-die style of play, is seeded third this year, behind McEnroe and Lendl. The Czech finally won his first Grand Slam title when he stopped McEnroe in the final of this year's French Open, contested on the slow, red, clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium.

Mats Wilander of Sweden, the 1982 French Open champion who won the Australian Open last year, defeating McEnroe in the semifinals and Lendl in the championship match, is seeded fourth.

Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich., at 17 is the youngest player ever to be seeded in the men's field in the Open era, which began in 1968.

Networks Steal Football Limelight

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Never mind the LSUs, UCLAs, BYUs and USCs. This is the season of the ABCs, CBSs, ESPNs and USAs, the season you need a program to tell the networks as well as the players.

The Miami Hurricanes may have been No. 1 last season, but a storm of a different sort rules college football as the defending national champions prepare to open the new season Monday night against Auburn, which along with Clemson figures to be among the powers this year.

The overriding issue is television appearances, which mean television money, and the bitter competition on football fields has spilled into ivy-covered buildings.

By the time a new champion is crowned Jan. 2 — after a record 18 bowl games, capped by the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Cotton and Fiesta on New Year's Day — college football will have gone through a season of pigskin proliferation, more games on more channels than ever before. Whether it will be for better or worse is still being debated.

All this is because the NCAA is out of the football TV business, following the Georgia-Oklahoma lawsuit that went all the way to the Supreme Court and was ranked No. 1 among college football lawsuits.

The suit killed the final two years of the NCAA's lucrative four-year pact with ABC and CBS. As a result, for much less money, the College Football Association signed on with ABC and CBS snapped up the Big Ten and Pacific 10 Conferences, the only major schools that don't belong to the CFA. In addition, ESPN will provide a supplemental CFA package on Saturday nights, while individual conferences joined up with different TV syndicators and cable outlets.

The USA Network will show a game each week — coverage provided by Katz Sports, which has obtained rights to the Big Eight Conference as well as defending national champion Miami, Pitt, Boston College and Syracuse. Besides its CBS tie-up, the Big Ten will show 20 games syndicated by Sports View Co. and Sports Time.

TCS-MetroSports will air some Notre Dame, Penn State, Texas, West Virginia and South Carolina games, among others. WTBS hooked up with the Southeastern Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference games will be produced by Jefferson Teleproductions.

Pay TV began to rear its head when Alabama announced that the Mizlou Television Network will broadcast on pay TV all sold-out Alabama games not shown on conventional TV. Cable subscribers reportedly will be sold a four-game package for $100.

However, no sooner had Pac-10 executive director Tom Hansen declared that "we are entering a brave new world of college athletics. Our position is that the fans should have the best games possible," than the controversy erupted all over again.

CBS hoped to show Nebraska (CFA) at UCLA (Pac-10) and Notre Dame (CFA) at Southern Cal (Pac-10), but the CFA quickly squelched that plan. As a result, the Big Ten and Pac-10 are suing the 63-member CFA in federal court, charging it with selling the TV rights to games it does not own. The CFA replied that the two conferences "represented to CBS that they could deliver games over which they do not have complete control."

There are some hard feelings even within conferences. Washington State Coach Jim Walden has criticized as unfair the holdover Pac-10 formula for allocating TV revenue. It calls for the two schools on TV to split roughly 50 percent of the money with the rest divided equally among the other league schools and the Pac-10 office.

"The television revenue problem is a mess and it's going to be very difficult to work out," says Washington State president Glenn Terrell.

"No question in my mind there can be too many games on television," says Illinois' Mike White. "I saw it happen in basketball, and it can happen in football."

And just when you thought there were enough, if not too many, bowls, along come two more — the Cherry Bowl in the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome on Dec. 22 and the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim, Calif., on Dec. 26.

Nevertheless, despite all the tumult and shouting, the season gets under way Monday when Miami meets Auburn in the second annual Kickoff Classic at East Rutherford, N.J.

Key games next Saturday include Brigham Young at Pitt, East Carolina at Florida State, Florida vs. Miami at Tampa, Washington State at Tennessee, Mississippi State at Tulane, Northwestern at Illinois, Texas-El Paso at Texas A&M, San Diego State at Air Force, Fresno State at Arizona and New Mexico State at San Jose State.

Major conference lineups remain the same, except that New Mexico State will start competing for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title. Major-college coaching changes find Fisher DeBerry at Air Force, Ken Hatfield from Air Force to Arkansas, Dave Currey from Long Beach State to Cincinnati, Bill Mallory from Northern Illinois to Indiana, Mike Sheppard at Long Beach State, Bill Arnsparger from the Miami Dolphins at LSU, Rey Dempsey from Southern Illinois to Memphis State, Jimmy Johnson from Oklahoma State to Miami, Fla., Lou Holtz from Arkansas to Minnesota, Lee Corso at Northern Illinois, Pat Jones at Oklahoma State, Watson Brown from Cincinnati to Rice, Dick Anderson at Rutgers, Claude Gilbert at San Jose State, Jack Elway from San Jose State to Stanford and Ron Chismar at Wichita State.

Parity? The last four national champions were first-timers — Georgia in 1980, Clemson in 1981, Penn State in 1982 and Miami last year. In fact, Clemson and Miami weren't even ranked entering the season.

While Auburn, the 1957 champion, and Clemson are strong candidates to end that string this year, Arizona State is a threat to continue it.

Regardless, the shared wealth of talent will have its effect.

Says Jimmy Johnson: "Because of some rule changes like the scholarship limit and some restrictions in recruiting, you've had more of the so-called lower echelon schools upsetting the traditional powers."

Soviets Dominate Rowing

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oarsmen dominated Saturday's finals of the men's rowing tournament at the Friendship '84 Games, clocking times in three events that were inside medal-winning performances at Los Angeles.

In the double sculls, the Kinyakin brothers Sergei and Pyotr clocked 6:35.98, a time that was almost one second better than the 6:36.87 that won America's Bradley Lewis and Paul Enquist the gold medal at Los Angeles.

In the same race, the Bulgarian pair of Ivan Midchurov and Mincho Nikolov put in 6:37.33, which would have pushed them into the bronze medal position behind the United States and in front of Belgium.

In the coxed fours, one member of the Soviet team was carried from the medal rostrum on a stretcher suffering from exhaustion after his boat completed the 2,000 meters on the Olympic canal in suburban Moscow in 6:22.64.

That time, if repeated at Los Angeles, would have placed the Soviets in third place above New Zealand.

In the coxed pairs event, the Soviets were again too strong for the other finalists and won in 7:10.81, good enough to have earned the silver at the Olympics.

Only in the quadruple sculls was the host nation defeated, with East Germany's team winning in 5 minutes, 58.82, again good enough to take bronze at LA ahead of the Canadians.

But there were disappointing times by the Soviet winners of the coxless pairs, single sculls and coxless fours.

The Pimenov brothers — former world champions and third in the 1,500 olympics — won the coxless pairs by more than five lengths, but their time of 7:06.65 was well outside medal winning performances at Los Angeles.

Vasily Yakusha, runner-up in the 1981 world championships, won in 7:14.23, while the Soviet team's 6:17.94 in the coxless fours was some 10 seconds slower than Denmark's bronze medal team in LA.

Jets' O'Brien Makes Up For Lost Time Against Raiders

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

After missing practice all week with the New York Jets, Ken O'Brien made up for lost time in a hurry when the game situation demanded it.

Unable to practice with the Jets because of a court trial in New York, O'Brien entered Friday night's football game with the Los Angeles Raiders for the first time late in the third quarter and engineered a 62-yard, 11-play touchdown march late in the final period to give the Jets a 20-14 victory.

"It's tough to play when he didn't practice," said New York Coach Joe Walton. "He was a little hazy on some things but then pulled it together. He knew the game plan. We had to eliminate some of things that Ken hadn't been able to practice."

O'Brien and teammate Mark Gastineau have been in court all week defending themselves against charges stemming from a New York nightclub incident last September.

"All the mistakes I made showed you have to practice," O'Brien said. "I made mistakes in some formations and plays, but I tried to make it up the best way I could by remembering what I had learned."

The comeback victory by the Jets over the defending Super Bowl champion Raiders in the nationally televised game at the Los Angeles Coliseum left both teams with 1-3 records in exhibition play.

In other NFL preseason action Friday night, Ken Anderson fired three touchdown passes as the Cincinnati Bengals exploded for 28 early points and rolled to a 35-14 victory over the Detroit Lions. Anderson's crisp passing and two turnovers by the Lions led to touchdowns on four of the Bengals' first five possessions.

"Everything fell together," Anderson said. "We got good field position and moved up the field. I think I've been throwing well. It's always easy to throw when you're not getting hit. I didn't get touched tonight. That's a big part of it."

Steve Grogan threw to Stephen Starring for a 55-yard touchdown on New England's first offensive play and Tony Franklin kicked three field goals as the Patriots crushed the Kansas City Chiefs 36-7.

The Chiefs suffered another loss when starting quarterback Bill Kenney fractured his right thumb on the first play of the second quarter. It wasn't known how long he would be sidelined.

Jack Thompson tossed a 22-yard touchdown pass to Jimmie Giles and Hugh Green returned an interception of a Dan Marino pass 31 yards for another score to lead the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to a 14-13 victory over the Miami Dolphins. The triumph enabled the Bucs, 2-14 a year ago, to finish with a 3-2 preseason record.

"It was a good, tough final preseason game and gave us a good indication of the things we need to work on for the regular season opener," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "The difference was the pass rush. We weren't getting the kind of pressure with four men that they were getting with three."

Rookie Gene Lang and Gerald Willhite scored second-half touchdowns on short plunges as the Denver Broncos downed the Atlanta Falcons 24-13.

Space-Age Seed Turns Into Tree

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A seed that traveled the half-million mile round trip to the moon has grown into a hardy sycamore tree at the University of Florida. It has grown so quickly that some wonder whether the extraterrestrial trek had anything to do with its performance on earth.

Noel Lake, landscape design supervisor at the UF campus, said the tree has grown "faster than I've ever seen one grow before."

Lake said the moon journey probably had nothing to do with the tree's impressive growth, "but you never know."

He had kept the location of the tree, at McCarty Drive and Museum Road, a secret until this year to prevent curious students from picking the tree bare.

But now at 35 feet, "it should be big enough to take care of itself," Lake said.

The sycamore seed was in a packet of 100 seeds that flew on the Apollo 12 mission in November 1969.

Despite the fact that it traveled through deep space and may have been bombarded with radiation before ending up in Florida soil, the seed produced pretty much an ordinary sycamore, said Dr. David Ward, a UF botanist and professor.

The university was given three seeds that went to the lunar surface, but two pine seedlings that grew from those seeds fell victim to a lawnmower and weed cutter.

The success of the sycamore, planted in 1976 or 1977, has more to do with its genetic makeup than any effect of the moon journey, Ward said.

It has, however, escaped a disease which is now plaguing other sycamores on campus.

Ward said the reasons for sending the seed to the moon have puzzled him.

"I'm a botanist and I don't see any logical reason for hauling a seed to the moon and back," he said.

The seeds made the trip for several reasons, said Dick Young, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"One was to verify the effects of deep space on the ability of seeds to germinate," he said.

Another was the "serendipity factor," Young said. It is based on the belief that sometimes discoveries can be made by experimentation.

"It didn't cost anything. It was just frosting on the cake," Young said about the packet of seeds.

Ward attributed the plant's fast growth to its soil, sunshine and moisture.

Mars Rover Under Study

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Deep in the basement of the Space Sciences building on the University of Arizona campus, it ambles like a 1984 version of "the blob."

It has tackled stairwells and climbed ramps. It has even been through the paces on an exercise par course and, according to one of its keepers, has run over a few graduate students.

Final destination: Mars.

The Mars Ball, as it has been dubbed, is the creation of graduate students and faculty members in the UA's Planetary Sciences Department. With a $50,000 grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the scientists are working to develop a rover for possible use in future missions to Mars.

The Mars Ball, a crude, one-wheeled prototype of such a vehicle, uses a set of eight independently inflatable chambers to push it over terrain.

The current model, powered by a small portable air blower, will ultimately be replaced by a sophisticated computer-controlled version. As envisioned by the researchers, its center payload area will be capable of carrying a television camera and various scientific experiments.

Standing four-feet high when fully inflated, the Mars Ball creeps along at about seven feet per minute. The second prototype will be three times larger, and will have 16 inflatable chambers.

The rover is designed to handle all potential obstacles on the surface of Mars, including 30-degree slopes and rocks as large as one foot in diameter, student researchers said. It also must be capable of weathering treacherous Martian dust storms, they said.

"The ultimate goal is for this to be able to go over anything we have seen thus far on Mars, or steer around it," said Douglas Hilton, student administrator for the project.

Identical Twins Survive Bout With Hodgkin's Disease

SEATTLE (AP) — When Joe Robinson went to donate bone marrow to save the life of his twin brother, who was suffering from Hodgkin's disease, "flabbergasted" doctors made a discovery that may save Joe's life — he has the same cancer.

The husky 19-year-old football players from Pontotoc, Miss., came to Seattle after chemotherapy failed to halt the cancer that was affecting John's lymph system and spleen. It was during preparations for the bone marrow transplant that doctors discovered Joe also has the disease.

"I was flabbergasted," said Dr. Alexander Fefer, a University of Washington medical professor and a member of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

"It's extraordinarily rare for identical twins to develop the same form of non-hereditary cancer at the same time, Fefer said. "There may have been one or two reports in the world's literature."

After the 6-foot-2-inch, 220-pound high school football guard and tackle arrived in Seattle with their mother, Betty, and John's fiancee, 20-year-old Karen Douglas, doctors decided that John's cancer was so advanced that an extensive battery of chemotherapy and radiation treatment would have to precede the transplant.

"It was basically a nuclear bomb-type level" of radiation, Fefer said Friday. "If you even gave half that dose of radiation and didn't give bone marrow, the patient would die."

The radiation killed John's own bone marrow cells, leaving him without an immune system until he could receive the transplant from his identical twin.

But during tests on Joe, doctors were jolted when a chest X-ray showed a cancerous mass from the same disease his brother was fighting.

"My big concern was that it might be so advanced that we might not be able to use his marrow to save his brother," Fefer said.

However, Joe's case was far less advanced and his bone marrow was healthy enough to use for the operation. The donated marrow should start reproducing itself and "take" inside John's body within a couple of weeks, Fefer said.

Joe then underwent chemotherapy and surgery to remove his cancer, and none was found elsewhere in his body, so he has more than a 90 percent chance of complete recovery, the physician said.

It will take longer to determine whether the transplant has effected a cure in John's case, he said. If the disease goes into remission, he may be out of the hospital within a month.

Ms. Douglas said the couple's wedding plans have been interrupted several times by the disease, but she hopes to get married as soon as John returns to Mississippi. He wants to become a high school math teacher and football coach.

Joe is a tractor mechanic whose wife is eight months pregnant. Though the cost of his brother's care apparently will be covered by insurance, Joe has only meager coverage to meet his share of a bill that could go as high as $100,000.

"I'm just thankful it's no worse than it is," Joe said Friday. "It helped me get closer to the Lord. Sometimes you don't seem too serious about it, but when something like this happens — you get serious."

CANCER TWINS — When John Robinson, left, arrived in Seattle for a lifesaving bone-marrow transplant, doctors found that his identical twin brother, Joe Allen Robinson, on bed, also had Hodgkin's disease. Both are now recuperating from surgery, chemotherapy and radiation. Also shown are John's finance, karen Douglas, and their mother, Bett. (AP Laserphoto)

Study Says Lengthy Grief Isn't Unusual After Death

TORONTO (AP) — Four to seven years after the death of a spouse or child, most survivors still haven't "put the loss behind them" and shouldn't be blamed for not recovering from their grief more quickly, researchers said Saturday.

Because of current emphasis on individual factors like attitude and support from friends in coping with the death of a loved one, "the burden is placed suddenly on the person," said Camille Wortman.

The results of studies by Ms. Wortman and Darrin Lehman, both of the University of Michigan, suggest that traditional notions about how long grieving lasts and its effects "certainly need to be re-examined," Lehman said.

Other researchers have shown in earlier studies that the symptoms of grief decline within six months to two years, but they have not looked beyond that time, said Ms. Wortman, whose studies were presented at the annual convention of the American Psychological Association.

Lehman and Ms. Wortman studied 93 people whose spouses or children had been innocent victims in automobile accidents four to seven years earlier, Lehman said. Thirty-nine of the subjects had lost a spouse, usually a husband, and 54 had lost a child.

Thirty-eight percent of surviving spouses and 36 percent of parents said they still thought sometimes that the death had not really happened.

Ninety percent of spouses and 98 percent of parents had thought of the loved one within the preceding month, memories that were painful at least some of the time for 57 percent of the spouses and 74 percent of parents.

During the same month, 44 percent of the spouses and 51 percent of the parents had mentally reviewed the events leading up to the death. About half of each group had thought that the accident was unfair or had cheated them.

And although 30 percent of the spouses and 58 percent of the parents had tried to find some sense or meaning in the accident within the previous month, 64 percent of the spouses and 49 percent of the parents had not found any.

In another part of the study, 80 of the subjects and 80 non-grieving people were matched for age, sex, income, education and number and ages of children.

Comparisons between the matched pairs showed the grieving people tended to be more depressed, anxious, hostile and worried about the future, and in generally worse psychological condition.

Low Calorie, Low Fat, Low Salt

Snacks Take On New Look

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The shape of the salty-snacks industry has been changing along with the body shapes of weight- and fitness-conscious Americans.

Makers of munchies have been coming out with lower-calorie, lower-fat and lower-salt versions of their products to meet consumers' health concerns.

"There is increasing awareness of salt consumption. There is an increasing concern with health and the demographics of the country would tend to accentuate those things," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with the investment firm Montgomery Securities in San Fransisco.

David Goldman, an analyst with E.F. Hutton Group Inc. in New York, said, "There is a segment of the population that says, 'This is fun to eat and I'm going to eat it.' But that is a declining segment. There will be a point in the future when it is not socially acceptable" to eat junk food.

"It's not just the salt that has the bad image. People are starting to recognize snacks as junk food, with or without salt," he said. "Then, there are the ongoing concerns of demographics and sociographics: the aging of the population and the battle of the bulge.

"It's going to affect their (the manufacturers') business. Whether it's going to be 10 percent or 20 percent I don't know. But they're concerned enough about it enough to diversify their product line."

Diversification has been slower in the salty-snack industry than, for example, the soft-drink industry. That's because, analysts say, it is more difficult to get comparable taste in a low-calorie potato chip than a low-calorie cola.

The emergence of low-calorie, low-fat, low-salt snacks is "much more gradual than the literature would have you believe and really what is driving that is the products' ability to provide the same taste," said Ray Riss, vice president of marketing for Borden Inc.'s snacks group.

"Basically, you tend to get a lot of lip service from the consumer on these health-oriented products. People tell you they're very anxious to go out and buy them but when they're there, they don't necessarily buy them."

David Goldman said that historically the industry grew by 4 percent to 6 percent a year, in terms of the weight of snacks sold, but last year grew by only 2.5 percent to 3 percent.

"Those (good old) days are gone forever," Goldman said. "It was nice when it lasted. I think we've seen the peak or we'll soon see the peak in popularity."

There is disagreement among the analysts. Emanuel Goldman said, "There's no evidence that's peaked and there's no evidence that people are giving up self-indulgence. Snack food consumption is there."

He added, "It's not so clear that it's unhealthy, as long as you eat it in moderation. The nation doesn't have to pig out for the snack-food business to make money."

The average household consumes 28.6 pounds of salty snacks a year, according to the International Potato Chip-Snack Food Association in Alexandria, Va.

It says the $6.1 billion industry is broken down into 44.1 percent potato chips; 24.1 percent corn-tortilla chips; 14.9 percent salted nuts; 5.2 percent salted meat snacks — pork rinds and meat sticks; 4.6 percent extruded snacks — mostly cheese curls, baked or fried; 4.8 percent pretzels; and 2.3 percent popped popcorn.

With over 80 million Americans dieting, light foods account for 6.6 percent of total U.S. food sales, or $16 billion, according to New York-based Borden.

Products like light beer, salad dressings, spreads, soft drinks, and syrups have had a tremendous surge in popularity over the past few years, Borden says, adding that light-food sales are expected to double or even triple in the next five years.

Borden was the first major company to offer snacks with less fat and fewer calories.

Food Technology Laboratories of Chicago since has introduced a low-calorie potato chip called Potato Pips.

Granny Goose Foods Inc., an Oakland, Calif.-based subsidiary of Del Monte Corp., recently introduced a product line called "50 Percent Less Salt."

And Nabisco Brands Inc. in East Hanover, N.J., which markets Planter's cannister snacks and nuts, reports strong volume gains in its unsalted and dry-roasted nut lines.

Meanwhile, boutiques selling popcorn — which has a somewhat better image than other salty snacks — are springing up in cities and are offering the snack in numerous flavors.

Quietly, Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati for years has been researching a synthetic substance called sucrose polyester, which is a low-calorie fat substitute that one day might be used in salty snacks.

Emanuel Goldman said there is no question that Frito-Lay Inc. — the Dallas-based subsidiary of Pepsico Inc. and the industry giant representing a third of the business — will come out with a lower-salt or lower-oil product for test marketing within the next twelve months.

Frito-Lay introduced Doritos Extra Lites and Frito Lites in 1983. But, "The acceptance of all of them was dismal. They are simply thinner chips. I think what they had in mind was that lighter products was of interest. The problem was that they were just thinner," Goldman said.

"We're not necessarily going after a minor segment of the population that is very concerned about calories," said Riss. "You can't necessarily build a large volume business trying to sell to those people," whom he called yo-yo dieters.

"We found ... we could attract more maintstream usage," he said.

He refused to divulge specific sales figures for the Lite-line snacks, but said, "We felt that light snacks could reasonably represent 10 percent of the total business."

He said it would take at least five or 10 years to get that share.

H&R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN GREENVILLE

H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 6 with morning, afternoon and evening classes available.

During the 14 week course, experienced Block personnel will teach students all phases of income tax preparation including actual experience in preparing individual returns.

Instruction topics include current tax laws and tax theory and their application as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is classroom lecture and practice problems on each subject. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both practical and challenging and will also be able to use their new skills directly to save money on their own tax returns.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications. Courses are ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers, persons wanting to increase their tax knowledge or anyone who files a tax return.

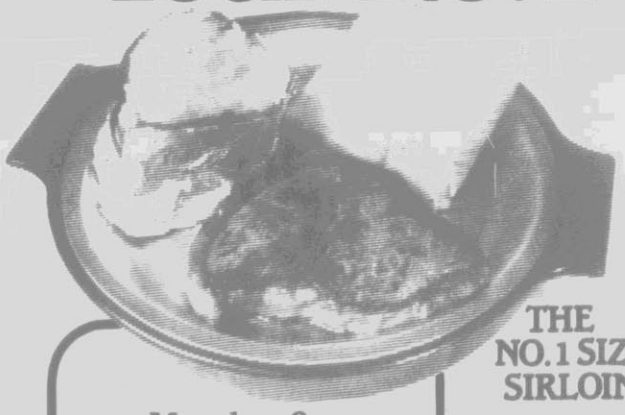

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

The modest course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office at Greenville Square, telephone 756-9365.

Business Notes

Management Session

Joan Giordano, manager of public and governmental affairs of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, recently completed a five-day Institute for Organization Management at the University of Delaware.

Approximately 250 voluntary organization executives from across the nation participated in the development program, which is one of six annual sessions sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

During the session, participants spent 27 classroom hours on management philosophy, interpersonal processes, government, law and organization structure, and economic and environmental concerns.

$6 Million Topped

Carl R. Woxman Jr., president of Great Southern Finance Co., has announced that assets topped $6 million for the first time in the company's history. Woxman said assets on June 30 totaled $6,137,450 which was an increase of 11 percent above last year's figures.

Operating revenues rose $106,516 or 5.6 percent while expenses dropped $23,303, the official said.

The firm reported that Larry D. Dickey has been named executive vice president with responsibility for training and operation of the company's 11 branches in eastern North Carolina.

Mortgage Officer

W. Beauregard Young IV has been elected mortgage officer at Wachovia Mortgage Co. in Greenville, the company announced.

A Wilson native, Young joined Wachovia Mortgage in 1982 and is responsible for residential loan origination at the Greenville office. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The mortgage company, a member company of Wachovia Corp. of Winston-Salem, has offices in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Investment Club

A Faculty Investment Club involving personnel from East Carolina University and Pitt Community College is being formed in the area. Meetings will be held monthly.

For more information on the club and for details on an upcoming organizational meeting call 355-2025 or write the club at P.O. Box 8372 in Greenville.

Business Broker

C.J. Harris and Co. Inc. of Greenville has announced the association of James A. Holmes III as a business broker with the firm.

Holmes will represent clients in the acquisition and divestiture of businesses and income producing properties and will participate in the marketing of the firm's other financial and marketing services.

The associate is a graduate of East Carolina University with a bachelor's degree in business administration with a major in management. A licensed real estate broker, Holmes has worked as a lending officer with a regional bank and held a senior management position with a national marketing firm.

C.J. Harris and Co. is a financial and marketing consulting firm based in eastern North Carolina.

Silver Anchor Award

Joe Vernelson of Greenville Marine & Sports Center Inc. received the "Silver Anchor Award" from Grady-White Boats Inc. at the firm's national dealer conference held recently in Greenville.

Ed Smith, Grady-White Boats president, said the award honors the G-W dealer having the leading sales volume for the southeastern region. Greenville Marine was one of six dealers receiving the award, said Smith.

The president said the awards ceremony was attended by representatives of over 70 dealerships from across the United States.

During the annual conference, dealers conducted in-water boat tests on Grady-White's 1985 models. Smith said the firm completed its 25th year of operations with record sales.

Empire Brushes

Empire Brushes has announced the promotion of David H. Powell from technical supervisor to chief technician-brushmaking. Powell has 19 years of technical experience in his field.

The firm said that Powell will continue his duties as technical supervisor until that position is filled. He has worked as machine adjuster, lead mechanic, and supervisor for the Greenville manufacturer since 1965.

Powell, who attended Washington High School and served in the Navy, resides in the Washington area with his wife Joyce, also an Empire employee.

Manager Named

Terminix Co. of East Carolina has announced that Phil Kaylor has been named manager of the Greenville firm. Kaylor has been associated with Terminix for over 11 years.

A 1972 graduate of N.C. State University, Kaylor joined Terminix as a sales and service representative. Within two years he was promoted to interim manager in New Bern before opening a new branch office in Morehead City, the firm said. For the past seven and a half years, he has been manager in Wilmington.

Kaylor is married to the former Debra Garver of New Bern and they have one son.

New Division

Century 21-B. Forbes Agency has announced the opening of a new Property Management Division to handle management duties of both commercial and residential rental properties in the Greenville-Pitt County area.

The firm said that W.G. "Willie" Pollard Jr. will be the consultant for the division.

New Associate

Louise H. Moseley has announced the association of Janice Rogers with the firm of Moseley-Marcus Realty in the area of residential sales.

A native of Ayden, the new associate is married to Joe Rogers and has two sons.

Appointment Noted

The board of directors of Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Eastern North Carolina has announced the appointment of Gary G. Hardison as assistant vice president in charge of its northeastern North Carolina lending operation.

Hardison will serve as branch manager of the firm's new Edenton office beginning later this year. Until then, he will be at the Plymouth office.

A Washington County native, Hardison graduated from East Carolina University and was employed with Plymouth Savings and Loan Association prior to his appointment with Home Federal.

The company has home offices in Greenville.

Consumer Spending Adds Fuel To Economic Growth

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After more than 18 months of recovery from the last recession, Wall Street analysts say consumer spending is still making a strong contribution to economic growth.

The latest sign of consumer enthusiasm came this past week, when automakers reported that sales of cars built in this country showed a 32 percent increase in mid-August over the comparable period last year.

"The 1980-82 experience of recessions and record-high unemployment created a pool of unsatisfied consumer demands," said Lawrence Horan, an analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham, in a recent "Consumer Profiles" report.

It has appeared at times lately that the consumer spending boom might be slackening off. That suspicion was raised when the government reported a surprise 0.9 percent decline in retail sales for July.

Jack Lavery, chief economist at Merrill Lynch, said he believed that such numbers reflected only "a temporary pause in consumer spending. Similar pauses occurred one year ago and earlier this year, but the fundamentals suggest this lull will be only temporary."

Consumers as a group are notoriously changeable in their moods, and hard to pin down. As Lavery noted, two major surveys of consumer attitudes in July turned up significantly divergent findings.

According to one, conducted by the Conference Board, an independent research organization, both consumer confidence and buying plans declined. The other, which is done by the University of Michigan, showed increases in sentiment and buying plans.

"Despite the differences," Lavery said, "the absolute level of the indices remains high."

The stock market followed a similarly inconsistent, but generally upbeat, course in the past week. Thanks largely to a 22.75-point upsurge on Tuesday, the average recorded a net gain of 24.63 to 1,236.53.

As in most economic matters, analysts' view of the consumer-spending outlook is by no means unanimous. S. Jay Levy and David Levy, authors of the monthly newsletter "Industry Forecast," note that the trend in retail sales lately has been "virtually flat."

"It should pick up some steam in the next few months, but the party is ending for most stores," they contend. "Christmas season shoppers will keep a tight grip on their wallets, to the disappointment of most retailers."

The Levys argue that a recession is approaching. "For most of this year," they say, "the economy appeared to be moving vigorously ahead. But gradually data suggesting less economic strength began to appear among the still predominant, buoyant reports.

"Now the dark news is becoming more frequent than the bright. Each poor statistic evokes comment that the recovery is slowing to 'a sustainable rate.' Yet we are headed straight toward a recession, potentially a serious one.

"Many observers, particularly those in the proximity of Wall Street, have been calling signs of the economy's weakening 'good news.' Be wary of too much 'good news.'"

Horan at Smith Barney, by contrast, says, "A rapid expansion of consumer credit and mortgage financing have helped fuel this consumption rebound.

"As long as the consumer remains confident and money is readily available, it would appear as if the expansion will continue into 1985."

AT&T To Reduce Jobs By 11,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Telephone and Telegragh Company said Friday that it planned to eliminate between 10,000 and 11,000 management and blue-color positions nationwide in its technology sector, which includes marketing, manufacturing and research.

AT&T spokesman Bill Mullane said the positions would not be cut in the communication sector of the company, which handles long-distance calls.

The move is part of AT&T's continuing effort to control costs since the breakup of the Bell System in January.

AT&T had reported earnings well below its earlier projections for its first year without the local Bell operating companies.

He said the cutbacks would concentrate in the 53,000-employee equipment maintenance and service operation of AT&T Technologies, the unregulated AT&T subsidiary that put the parent company into the highly competitive computer business.

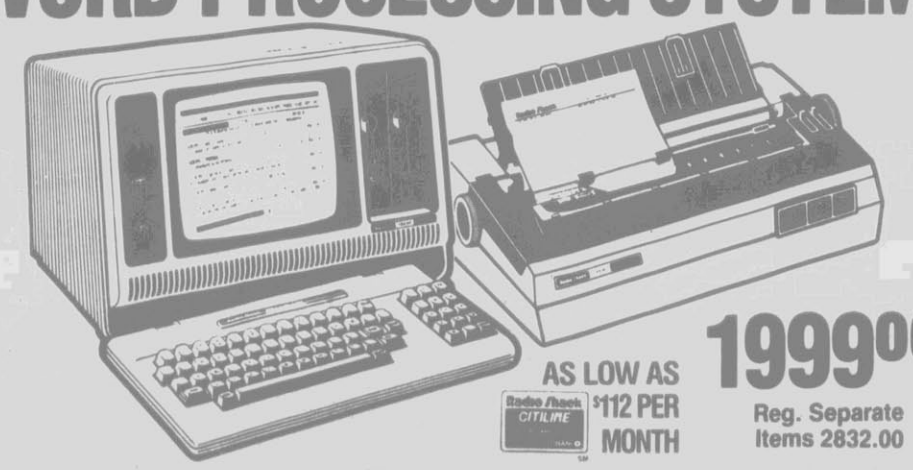

Mullane said the company would try to eliminate the positions through attrition, employee transfers and voluntary retirement.

He also said it was "probable, possible" that further staff reductions would be announced before the end of the year. He said he could not say for certain because the company was still reviewing its new budget. For the same reason, he said, AT&T did not know yet how many job positions would be eliminated in the technology sector, but added that it would be between 10,000 and 11,000.

Cattle Futures Push Upward, Boosting Pork

By EDMUND O. LAWLER
Associated Press Writer

Cattle futures prices, encouraged by a seasonal increase in the demand for beef, rallied Friday and brought pork prices along for the ride on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

"The strength in cattle is a combination of beef's relatively low price and the approach of the Labor Day holiday," said Bob Kuhn, a livestock analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds in Chicago.

He said cash beef prices have been falling since July 10. "I think this week they reached a level that stimulated demand. Relatively speaking, beef is a bargain," Kuhn said.

The price surge in pork prices was inspired by the up-swing in the cattle pits. Kuhn said live pork and belly traders "became a little nervous" and covered their short, or selling, positions to limit further losses.

A less indirect influence on the market was the rise in grain prices. Kuhn said higher grain prices often force feedlot operators to reduce their herd, which in turn reduces the slaughter.

At settlement, live cattle were unchanged to .30 cent higher with the contract for delivery in October at 63.25 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .18 cent lower to .20 cent higher with September at 66.42 cents a pound; live hogs ended the week unchanged to .63 cent higher with October at 47.45 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .43 cent to 1.20 cents higher with August at 56.90 cents a pound.

Corn futures prices were higher, soybeans were mostly higher and wheat was mixed at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Most of the buying was generated by traders covering their short positions, said Sue Hackmann, a grain analyst with Pershing Futures.

She said trading was locked in a narrow range all week on the lack of any dramatic news or crop reports. As the soybean and corn crops approach maturity they are less vulnerable to adverse weather, and trad-ing is less influenced by weather forecasts, Ms. Hackmann said.

Traders were still awaiting confirmation of reports that the United States may sell a substantial quantity of soybeans to the Soviet Union. Talk of frost in the northern regions of the Sovet Union's production belt improved the prospect of grain exports and lent some support to prices, analysts said.

At settlement, wheat was 1¼ cent lower to 2 cents higher with the contract for delivery in September at $3.46½ a bushel; corn was ¼ cent to 4¾ cents higher with September at $3.05¼ a buhel; oats were ½ cent lower to 3½ cents higher with September at $1.76¾ a bushel; and soybeans were 2 cents lower to 10 cents higher with September at $6.38 a bushel.

Cotton prices settled mixed on the New York Cotton Exchange.

Ernest Simon, a cotton analyst with Prudential Bache Securities in New York, said cotton drew a little strength as gold prices advanced during the session. Profit taking toward the close, however, limited further improvement in prices.

Simon said trading has been choppy and light as the market lacks the stimulation of any key developments in the industry.

Publishing Firm Seeks New Fields

NEW YORK (AP) — McGraw-Hill Inc. is serving notice that its push into electronic publishing and computer software is briskly moving ahead.

McGraw-Hill, well-known for its conventional publishing of books and magazines, added to its string of recent acquisitions this past week by announcing plans to acquire Monchik-Weber Corp., a supplier of electronic data and information-management services, for $55.3 million.

Three days later it acquired CYMA Corp., a maker of financial and accounting software for microcomputers used in small business, for an undisclosed cash sum.

Those deals came two months after McGraw-Hill acquired Future Computing Inc., a leading researcher of the personal-computer industry, and Center for Communications Management Inc., a supplier of rate data and other information on telecommunications services.

Both those acquisitions also were made for undisclosed amounts of cash.

And in May, McGraw-Hill agreed to acquire Educational Management Services Inc., a maker of microcomputer software aimed at the education and training markets, for $1.23 million.

The upshot of these purchases, company trackers say, is McGraw-Hill's urge to increase its involvement in the fast-growing electronic publishing and information-services industries while its traditional publishing interests remain well-positioned.

"Once you tip the scales and get a majority of your earnings from the (electronic) information industry instead of from (traditional) publishing, your corporate growth rate starts to speed up," said John L. Bauer, who follows McGraw-Hill for the investment firm Oppenheimer & Co.

Two other companies have made notable progress in this direction — Dun & Bradstreet Corp. and Dow Jones & Co. Inc.

But McGraw-Hill is not abandoning print. "We look upon the opportunities in the electronic side as a real growth opportunity, but one that is essentially additive, not one that is a choice between print and electronic delivery," said spokesman Donald S. Rubin.

The book and magazine units still accounted for 60 percent of the company's $1.3 billion in revenue in 1983. But it is increasingly difficult to draw a line between revenues from conventional publishing and those electronic, since in certain cases one complements the other.

For example, McGraw-Hill sells computer programs that enhance certain textbooks it publishes.

McGraw-Hill's magazines include Business Week, and some of its older information services also are familiar names to business: Standard & Poor's Corp., the bond-rating service; F.W. Dodge, a researcher of construction-industry trends; and Platt's Oilgram News, which follows the oil industry. McGraw-Hill also owns four television stations.

In addition to extending its reach into the growing area of software and electronic data transmission, the company also has two computer magazines, Byte and Popular Computing, that are benefiting from the personal-computer boom.

The Monchik-Weber acquisition steers McGraw-Hill to another growth area that is already mapped out.

Monchik-Weber is developing the software to be used in a brokerage automation system, called International MarketNet, jointly planned by Merrill Lynch & Co. and International Business Machines Corp. The system eventually plans to speed stock quotes, financial news and a variety of other data to desktop terminals throughout the brokerage, banking, real estate and insurance industries.

Bauer of Oppenheimer said one advantage of McGraw-Hill's acquisitions is that they are building up its overall database, from which the company's various information products and data services are then transmitted to clients.

"The beauty of being involved in that kind of business," he said, "is once you have a database, you can start manipulating that database and start spinning off incremental businesses at a limited cost. You don't have to reinvent the wheel."

In other developments this past week:

— The gross national product grew 7.6 percent in the second quarter, the Commerce Department said in slightly revising upward its initial estimate of 7.5 percent growth. The GNP, the total output of goods and services, surged 10.1 percent in the first quarter.

— After-tax corporate profits rose only 1.5 percent in the second quarter compared with 6.8 percent in the first quarter, the Commerce Department reported. But some economists said the earnings slowdown was appropriate for this stage of the economic recovery.

— Consumer prices rose 0.3 percent in July after edging up 0.2 percent in June, the Labor Department said. In July, food prices rose 0.3 percent and housing costs climbed 0.5 percent.

ECU Doctors Help Care For Migrant Children

By TOM FORTNER
ECU Medical Writer

During the long summer days in the Pitt County community of Fountain, the St. James Child Care Center comes to life with the energetic rumblings of preschool toddlers. The center is home to a Head Start program that takes care of educational, nutritional and, now, thanks to the efforts of an East Carolina University School of Medicine pediatrician, offers health care for children of some of the 40,000 migrant farmworkers who each year pass through the state of North Carolina.

In the past, Center Director Yvonne Barnes explained, the center had to bus as many as 70 youngsters to local health departments for required physcial screenings. Since the program involved migrant children from Pitt, Nash and Greene counties, separate visits had to be made to each health department. Besides representing a scheduling nightmare, Barnes says, the trips kept the chiidren away from daily educational activities designed to enhance their development.

Enter the the department of pediatrics at the ECU School of Medicine and Dr. James R. Markello. Dr. Markello, Ms. Barnes said, became familiar with the center's dilemma when migrant children were occassionally brought to the medical school's outpatient center for pediatric care.

"He made suggestions to us as to the best and most effective way that we could carry out health care within our budgetary resources and offered to make periodic visits to the center to provide the screenings for the migrant youths," she explained. So now on many days during the five-month program, he and one or two pediatric residents from the school of medicine make the 20-mile trip to Fountain. From the standpoint of convenience, the site visits have been an obvious benefit to the center, Mrs. Barnes said. "It helps us in not having to transport the kids so frequently for health care. It's less taxing on the kids, too."

Markello, who serves the American Academy of Pediatrics as a consultant on migrant children's health care, says the youngsters' medical needs tend to be neglected as the parents struggle merely to survive.

The children he sees — mostly Hispanic, Haitian and black — encounter health probelms typical of rural migrant populations: diarrhera caused by parasites, infectious diseases of the skin and respiratory tract, and problems associated with poor sanitation and an unclean water supply.

Poor nutrition is also a constant worry, Markello said, "simply because they're on the move. They have low incomes, and cultural practices prohibit adequate nutrition." He added, however, that the migrant center provides a good diet for the children enrolled there. One of the major advances in the care of migrant children in the past few years, Markello said, has been the development of a computer-based tracking system by the East Coast Migrant Head Start Project. When a migrant child is seen at a local health department or at one of 176 delegate agencies between Massachusetts and Florida, the updated medical record is filed in a central data bank in Arlington, Va. Before the system was implemented, Markello added, it was hard to be sure of a child's medical history. However, the new tracking system makes current, accurate data available to each new location of the child. "That was one of the great barriers to continuity of care, and I think that in itself is a real success story," he observed.

Despite the advances, Markello said health care for migrant populations, both young and old, still has a long way to go. "Medical care is still largely crisis-oriented rather than routine. The health agencies are only open in the daytime when workers are in the field and are relatively inaccessible."

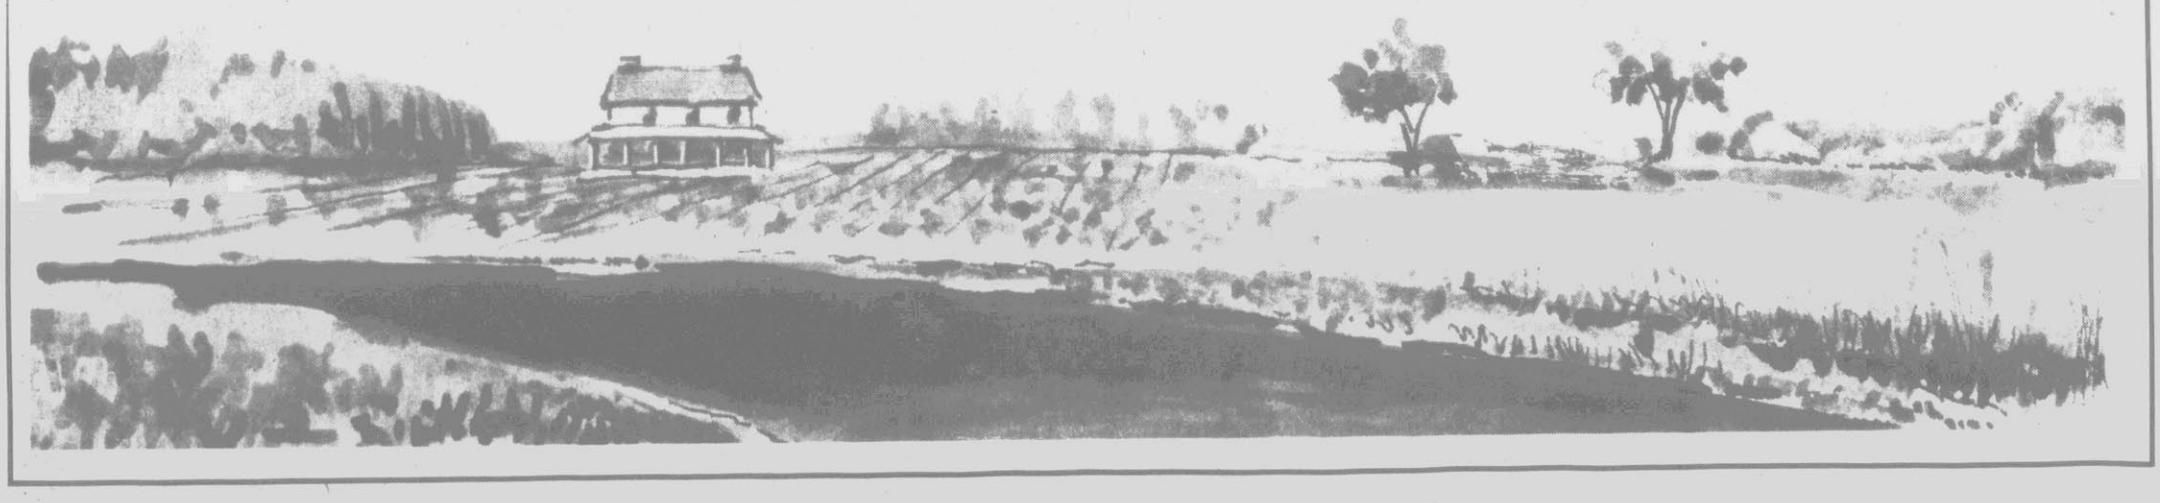

He added, however, that more night clinics are becoming available and although physicians are now able to see some youngsters routinely, many others are missed. The St. James Center currently has a waiting list of 30 children.

"We really don't have a good handle on health care of the migrant," Markello said. "That's one area in which the ECU School of Medicine wants to be more involved."

ACCENT ON LIVING

RITA JENRETTE

By AIDA ROGERS
The Sun News

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Her voice is bubbly and eager as she talks about life as an actress, but Rita Sue Carpenter Jenrette is the first to say her attitude toward life hasn't always been so bright.

It's taken a few years and more than a few tears for the outspoken blonde to reach a plateau of inner serenity, but the ex-wife of former congressman and convicted Abscam participant John Jenrette says their turbulent life together and her actions afterwards have helped her grow as a person.

And a "spiritual reawareness" of God is giving her strength to come to terms with herself and her controversial past.

"I always learn the hard way; I'm not an easy learner," Ms. Jenrette said, laughing during a telephone interview from her New York apartment. "I had something to learn, and it was well worth the five years of John Jenrette if I became a more complete woman going into my thirties."

Now 34, Ms. Jenrette is a regular at Norman Vincent Peale's Marble Collegiate Church and works with a shelter project for New York's homeless. At church, she participates in a fellowship class with other actors and with the homeless, she "just listens and gives them something to eat."

This new lifestyle is light years away from her well known past, she said, and is changing her outlook on herself and her career.

Being a star was important before, she said, "but that's really irrelevant to me now. As long as I can keep working, pay the rent and support myself with my acting, that's all that matters."

Ms. Jenrette is making her motion picture debut in "Zombie Island Massacre," which she describes as a "'Rocky Horror' campy type of movie."

The movie, filmed in Jamaica over a year ago, features Ms. Jenrette in the leading female role. She plays a a New York fashion designer who is about to marry for the fourth time.

"Zombie Island Massacre" also features Ms. Jenrette in a shower scene in which she's nude from the waist up. This is one scene she's not bragging about.

Does she regret making it?

"Well, that's a hard one," she said slowly. "This was my first film and I learned a lot from it and it's gonna make a lot of money," she said, adding, "Zombie Island Massacre is simply a low-budget B-movie ... you just can't critique it."

The movie is a start, she said, and that is what's important. "It shows that I can act, but it's not my finest hour. I did my part, but I won't win the Academy Award."

Ms. Jenrette said the biggest lesson she learned while filming was about herself. "What I really learned was that I really wasn't a prima donna — I never demanded this and that. I didn't go for star treatment."

As for the shower scene, it's one she won't repeat. "Zombie Island Massacre" was filmed "on the heels of the Playboy photograph sessions," she said, when she was still getting over her rocky marriage and life in Washington, D.C. "I just hadn't gotten my thinking together yet.

"I'm not proud that there's a shower scene where I'm nude from the waist up," she said.

"I won't do it again," she said firmly, adding that future Playboy posing was also out of the question. "I was hostile and defensive with the Playboy thing."

Appearing in that hot-selling issue of Playboy was a matter of building self-esteem after her divorce, she said.

"I had to prove I was still attractive — I felt so ugly," she said. "I didn't think anything was wrong with John, I thought it was me who was wrong. Your whole philosophy turns upside down."

But now things are right side up for the browned-eyed Austin, Texas native who graduated cum laude from the University of Texas with a degree in Italian history. She's been in New York since January and keeps busy with voice, drama and dance lessons.

"My parents never wanted me to pursue a career in show business, but I always knew I would eventually," she said. Since her divorce, she's made television appearances in "Fantasy Island" and "The Edge of Night," and has appeared onstage in the play "Philadelphia Story."

She said the public has come to judge her "half and half, love and hate." But she said, "That's just the image. Neither of those images were really me."

Ms. Jenrette said some may be skeptical about her rediscovered Christianity, which "I'm just getting my feet in the cement, so I'm hesitant about what I should say. But God is loving and kind, not judgmental. And maybe that was my lesson — I don't judge people now and maybe I judged them before."

Wedding Vows Said In Farmville Church Saturday

Music was presented by John M. Mewborn Jr., organist, Mary Elizabeth Beckman, violinist, and Alice and Sylvia Cobb, soloists, of Pinetops sang "The Greatest of These is Love." Alice Cobb sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "A Wedding Prayer."

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Franklin Yarborough Jr. of Fayetteville. The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Lovelace of Farmville.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk organza, re-embroidered alencon lace and schiffli lace over satin back crepe. Her gown was styled with a fitted Englist net bodice designed with a lace trimmed Victorian neckline and long fitted English net sleeves adorned with re-embroidered alencon lace and schiffli lace appliques. The layered silk organza A-line skirt flowed into a chapel train bordered with scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace accented with designs of schiffli. Her veil of English illusion, trimmed in over-embroidered schiffli lace, was formal length. It was attached to a coronet headpiece of lace flowers. She carried a cascade of phalaenopsis orchids, lilium lilies, freesia, sendrobium orchids, stephanotis and ivy.

MRS. BRANCH

Ann Cobb Warren of Pinetops was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Melanie Lendrim Lovelace of Williamsburg, Va., and Lisa Chidester Lovelace of Buchanan, Va., sisters-in-law of the bride, Cynthia Ann Beckman of Farmville, cousin of the bride, Taylor Whitlark Hyman of Morehead City, cousin of the bride, Sally Branch of Fayetteville and Amy Branch Johnson of Ballwin, Mo., sisters of the bridegroom.

They wore formal gowns of huckleberry taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline designed with schiffli lace insert, pouf sleeves and ruffles. A taffeta sash encircled the waist of the full circular skirt. Each carried a cascade of lilium lilies, freesia, dendrobium, orchids and dianthus.

Kelley Suzanne Hyman of Morehead City, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and wore an off-white gown trimmed with lace. She carried a basket of rose petals and wore a tiara of flowers in her hair.

Candlelighters were Kevin Mewborn and Kevin Wainwright.

Honorary attendants were Leona Landen of Rocky Mount, Sally Booth of Raleigh and Patsy Allred of High Point.

Wilson Franklin Yarborough Jr. was best man. Groomsmen included George Albert Lovelace of Williamsburg, Va., and William Daniel Lovelace of Buchanan, Va., brothers of the bride, Albert Carlton Owens Jr. of Seven Springs, Scott Leon Schackleford of Evansville, Ind., Leo Corbin of Stokes and Christopher Page Johnson of Ballwin, Mo., brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore a periwinkle chiffon gown with a mauve and white floral print on the sleeves. She wore a white cymbidium orchid and stephanotis in her hair. The mother of the bridegroom selected a long gown in pale periwinkle blue linen with a square neckline. She wore a lavender cymbidium orchid with stephanotis in her hair.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and was employed by Pitt County schools. She will be teaching in Cumberland County schools. The bridegroom attended ECU and is employed by Continental Rent-A-Car in Fayetteville, where the couple will live.

Mistresses of ceremony were Mrs. J. Vines Cobb Jr. of Pinetops and Mrs. Cecil B. Webb Jr. of Walstonburg.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the DAR Chapter House in Farmville. Music was provided by Cecilia Blalock of Walstonburg, Kelly Hobgood of Farmville and Alice Cobb of Pinetops.

PATIO REFRESHER

Iced Tea & Mother's Cookies

MOTHER'S COOKIES

- 1¼ cups stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon baking powder
- ¼-pound stick butter, cut in 8 pats
- 1-3rd cup sugar
- 1 large egg, separated
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1 tablespoon orange juice
- 1-3rd cup finely chopped pecans

On wax paper stir together flour and baking powder. In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar; add egg yolk and beat to blend. Stir in orange rind. Add flour mixture and orange juice; stir until smooth. Cover and chill until firm enough to handle. On saran shape into a 2-inch-wide roll. Cover and chill overnight. With a long sharp thin-blade knife slice ⅛-inch thick; if roll becomes too soft to slice, freeze briefly. With a wide spatula place an inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Beat egg white until foamy; brush over cookies; sprinkle with pecans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned around edges — about 12 minutes. With a wide spatula remove to wire racks to cool completely. Makes almost 3 dozen.

GEORGIA TOMATOES

Remove skins from 4 medium-size ripe but firm tomatoes; quarter and turn into a skillet with a small onion (finely chopped), a tablespoon of butter, a bay leaf, salt, pepper and sugar to taste. Simmer, turning tomatoes over as necessary until they are cooked but still hold their shape. Remove bay leaf. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

At Wits End

Telephone books are like dictionaries — if you know the answer before you look it up, you can eventually reaffirm what you thought you knew but weren't sure.

But if you're searching for something you don't already know, your fingers could walk themselves to death.

The trouble with me is I never learned how to speak Yellow Pages. It'a a language of the 20th century, born of frustration, nurtured by obscurity, and dedicated to the theory that by the time you find it, you no longer need it.

The plumber is a "plumbing contractor," an electrician is an "electrical contractor" and stereos are listed under Sound Systems and equipment.

Roaches are listed under Pest Control, exterminating and fumigating, a taco is under Mexican Food Products, a tailpipe under Mufflers and Exhaust Systems, and a pencil is under Advertising Specialists.

One of the most frustrating encounters in the Yellow Pages is trying to find a doctor, who is listed under Physicians, who are subdivided into M.D.s and D.O.s, who are also listed under Physicians and Surgeons, group, associate and corporate practice, and who aren't in anyway and whose phone is being answered by a doctor's answering service . . . see Physicians and Surgeons Exchange.

You should begin to worry about yourself when you begin to think like the Yellow Pages. Recently, I wanted to call a flea market and caught myself just in time. Flea market would definitely not be under F, but probably under something like Swap Meets. I turned to the S's and read, "See Flea Market."

I don't know what the answer is with the growth of private enterprise and the need to consolidate things under a general heading. But just for kicks I turned to "Survival Kits" and was hit with, "See First Aid Supplies, Sporting Goods heading."

I know this. No one will ever convince me that when Alexander Graham Bell sat in his Boston boarding house March 10, 1876, with battery acid burning his leg and shouted his first frantic message into the transmitter, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you!" it wasn't the despair of looking under HELP in the Yellow Pages and finding, "See batteries: Dry cell, wholesale, retail, charging and maintenance," that did it. . .

Branch-Wynne Vows Solemnized

Mount Pleasant Christian Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Eunice Olivia Wynne and William Judson Branch III. John Simpson performed the double ring ceremony at 3 p.m.

Paul Tucker was pianist and sang "Wedding Prayer" and "There is Love." Guitarist Bob Cotton sang "Longer Than."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel Wynne of Pactolus and Mr. and Mrs. William Judson Branch Jr. of New Bern.

Renaye Andrews of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids included Susan Branch, sister of the bridegroom, and Wanda Wynne, sister-in-law of the bride, both of New Bern, Vickie Wiggins of Hampton, Va., and Jimmie Sue Vernelson of Princeton.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Jay Bedsworth and Bob Cotton of Greenville, Mickey Wynne of Pactolus and Aubrey Wynne of New Bern, brothers of the bride.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of knit chiffon over taffeta with a Victorian neckline accented with Venise lace and seed pearls. The long full sleeves were enhanced with motifs of chantilly lace and seed pearls ending in a cuff of matching lace. The flowing skirt was accented with chantilly lace and seed pearls with self-fabric roses edged in chantilly lace which extended into a chapel train. The bride wore a matching white hat accented with Venise lace motifs and seed pearls. She carried a cacade of white roses, white miniature carnations and statice with white streamers.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of violet silk organza over matching taffeta. Each was fashioned with an open sweetheart neckline accented with a tucked drape of sheer organza. The gown also featured short butterfly sleeves in tiers of organza with pencil edging. Ruffles of organza at the shoulders completed the off-shoulder effect. The modified natural waistline was enhanced by a tie sash of violet satin ribbon. Their bouquets were of white fuji mums and pink baby's breath with lavender and white streamers.

A sleeveless gown of lavender quiana with a matching cape of chiffon was worn by the mother of the bride. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal length gown of daphne rose tinesta knit designed with a high rounded neckline. Grandmothers, Elizabeth Peele and Tina Branch, were remembered with white carnation corsages.

A reception was held at the King and Queen North and was given by the parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Vernelson of Greenville greeted guests and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Peele of New Bern said goodbyes.

Ann Baldree of New Bern and Marian Wynne of Ahoskie, aunts of the bride, served cake. Mickey Allsup, aunt of the bridegroom of Pickney, Mich., and Margaret Scheele of New Bern poured punch. Laticia Wynne and Susan Andrews passed out birdseed bags at the reception.

The couple will be living in Simpson after a wedding trip to the N.C. mountains.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and graduated from East Carolina University. The bridegtroom attended New Bern High School and is attending ECU. He is employed by Hardware Specialities of Greenville.

An after-rehearsal pig picking was given Friday by the parents of the bridegroom at the home of the bride's parents. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the Sheraton-Greenville. Several showers were given for the couple prior to the ceremony.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Wedding Vows Are Performed Saturday

Teresa Elaine Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Lee Whitehurst of Greenville, and Martin Darrell Roebuck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dail of Greenville and Dean Roebuck of Tarboro, were married in a double ring ceremony Saturday at 2 p.m. in Grindle Creek Church of God. The Rev. Ronnie Dyson performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Shena Whitehurst Coward, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Rhonda Jackson, Saramarie Scott, cousin of the bride, Sheila Whitehurst, sister of the bride, and Cherilyn Langston, cousin of the bride. Christy Nicholson was flower girl.

MRS. ROEBUCK

The stepfather of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Tony Roebuck, brother of the bridegroom, Randy Rouse, Kevin Merritt and Grady Whitehurst Jr., brother of the bride. The ring bearer was Michael Eller, cousin of the bride.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silken organza over peau de soie. It was fashioned with an open portrait neckline outlined in a ruffle of chantilly lace. The sheer, pouf sleeves featured ruffled lace at the elbow trimmed in white satin ribbon. The fitted bodice was appliqued in re-embroidered lace and beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The full skirt and attached chapel train were bordered at the hemline in ruffled chantilly lace. The bride wore an elbow length veil of illusion embroidered in schiffli and Brussels lace to complement her gown. The illusion was held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in lace and accented with silk flowers and schiffli embroidered rosettes.

Each of the attendants wore a formal gown of ice pink matte taffeta designed with an open sweetheart neckline outlined in a ruffle of pink chantilly lace, short flared sleeves in tiers of ruffled lace. A tie sash of taffeta enhanced the modified natural waistline and the full circular skirt was bordered at the hemline in a double ruffle flounce of taffeta and chantilly lace. The matron of honor carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. The bridesmaids carried long-stemmed white silk roses.

The mother of the bride wore a formal azure gown of polyester chiffon complemented by a chimere cape. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of blue chiffon over taffeta.

Katrina Gray played the piano and Susan Forlines sang "Endless Love," "There is Love," "You and I" and "Wedding Prayer." Nancy Phelps directed the wedding.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents.

A floating shower was given for the bride by relatives of the bridegroom. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a pig picking after the rehearsal.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

Couple Speaks Vows On Saturday

New Covenant Temple United Holy Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Sarah Devone Whitfield and Michael Ray Clark Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The Rev. Ollie Harris and Bishop Ben Sutton performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Samual King, organist. Royette Michele Nobles and Charles Andre Rountree sang "We've Only Just Begun," "Engless Love," "You and I," "My Tribute" and "The Lord's Prayer.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Whitfield of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Ruby Clark Streeter of Kinston and the late Henry C. Clark.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal Victorian gown of ivory peau de soie designed with a high Venetian lace neckline embroidered with seed pearls and long fitted sleeves edged in cuffs of Venetian lace. The straight skirt was complemented by a matching lace flounce embroidered with seed pearls. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion attached to a peau de soie bow headpiece. She carried a lace fan accented with miniature pink roses, rubrum lilies and variegated ivy tied with silk satin ribbons.

Jo Ann Dove of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Angela Jean Whitfield of Ayden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Each wore a pink crepe de chine gown, floor length, styled with a boat neckline which cascaded into full bell sleeves. The elasticized waistline flowed into an A-line skirt with side slits. White ribbow bows accented the waist. Each carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations and baby's breath tied with silk ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Keeshea Rosenboro of Washington, cousin of the bride, Katie Clark of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, and Michele Whitfield of Ayden, sister of the bride. Junior bridesmaid was Michelle Clark of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom. Each wore a gown styled identical to those of the honor attendants in pink matte taffeta and their arm bouquets were identical.

The flower girl was Jeannette Daniels of Greenville, who wore a waltz length gown of white taffeta trimmed in ruffles at the bodice and hemline. She carried a white wicker basket tied with satin bows and filled with rose petals.

The ring bearer was Anthony Coley of La Grange, cousin of the bride. He carried a white satin pillow with a spray of pink and gray flowers.

Edward Dove of Kinston was best man and ushers included James Whitfield of Ayden, brother of the bride, Clarence Williams of Kinston, brother of the bridegroom, Lamont Braxton, Albert Ingram of Ayden and Jesse Mills of Grimesland. The junior usher was Bruce Hines, cousin of the bride of Washington.

The mother of the bride wore a coral floor length dress of polyester knit with sheer sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length dress of dark pink polyester with sheer sleeves. Both mothers and grandmothers were remembered with corsages.

A garden reception was given by the parents of the bride in Grifton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rountree Jr. Mrs. Rountree, cousin of the bride, introduced the receiving line.

Punch was poured by Jannette Harris of Farmville and Cherry Harris of Grifton. Cake was served by Barbara Daniels of Greenville. Olivia Ellis, aunt of the bride, and Barbara Eubank presided at the guest register. Goodbyes were said by the parents of the bridal couple.

The couple will live in Kinston after a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and works at Sunnyside Eggs. The bridegroom graduated from South Lenoir High School and works at Jarman Tire Service.

A rehearsal dinner was given by Emma Jarman, Mary McCarter and Olivia Ellis, aunts of the bride. A bridesmaids dinner was given by the family of the bridegroom. A shower was given by Mrs. Leroy Nobles of Ayden.

PLATE COLLECING

CHICAGO (AP) — More young adults are becoming plate collectors and the total number of collectors of all age groups has been rising dramatically, according to a survey by Plate World magazine.

In 1983 in the United States alone, the number increased 7.1 percent, to bring the total to more than 6 million, reports the publication, which has polled its readership annually since 1979.

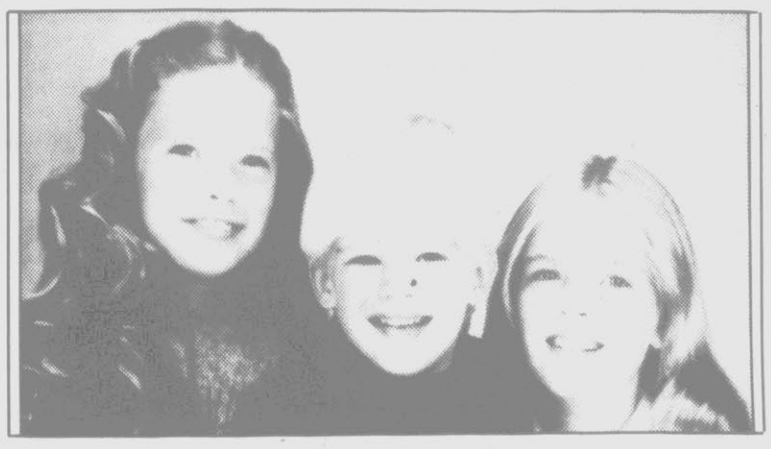

Within the past five years, the proportion of collectors age 21 to 40 has risen from 29 percent to 35.6 percent, while the over-40 group has declined proportionately from 70.3 to 63.7 percent, the survey shows.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Fresh plums are in peak supply right now and there are various varieties to choose from. But when you plan to poach them, red plums are a good choice. Their lovely color deepens during cooking and they look so attractive.

This season we cooked some red plums in a syrup sweetened with sugar, thickened with cornstarch and flavored with lime rind, lime juice and brandy; then we flambeed them. We tried serving them two ways: once as an accompaniment for baked custard, once as a topping for ice cream.

The plums stayed in attractive quarters because their skins were not removed during the poaching. I noticed some tasters particularly enjoyed the skin's tart flavor; others carefully set the skins aside. Everyone was satisfied.

FRESH PLUMS FLAMBE

1 teaspoon cornstarch
¾ cup sugar
2 strips lime rind
2 tablespoons lime juice
¼ cup brandy
1½ pounds red plums, quartered and pitted (8 to 10 medium)
Vanilla ice cream or cup custards

In a chafing dish or a 10-inch skillet, stir together cornstarch and sugar. Stir in lime rind, lime juice, 2 tablespoons of the brandy and plums. Stirring constantly, slowly bring to a boil. Simmer uncovered only until plums are tender when pierced with fork — 6 to 8 minutes. Warm remaining brandy, pour over simmering plums and ignite with a long match. When flames die down, spoon over ice cream or cup custards.

Makes 8 servings.

PHYLL'S POTATO SALAD

6 medium potatoes (about 1½ pounds)
3 slices bacon
½ cup diced (medium fine) onion
½ cup diced (medium fine) celery
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper to taste

Pare, cook and slice potatoes ¼-inch thick; keep warm in a serving bowl. In a 10-inch skillet cook bacon; drain, crumble and reserve. Remove all but 2 tablespoons bacon drippings from skillet; add onion and celery and cook over medium heat, stirring, for about 5 minutes. Add vinegar, sugar, reserved bacon and butter; heat, stirring until boiling; pour over warm potatoes and add salt and pepper. Toss together, keeping potato slices whole. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place

Dana Deneen Hines of Route 1, Greenville, and David Wayne Hollingsworth of Route 1, Winterville, were united in marriage Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Landmark Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John T. Woodley.

A program of wedding music was presented by pianist Eric Hardy of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bride. Johnna Hardy of Winterville, sister of the bride, sang "Looking Through the Eyes of Love," and the Rev. J.M. Bragg of Greenville sang "The Wedding Prayer." Lynn Elks presided at the guest register.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Hines of Route 1, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Shirley S. Hollingsworth of Winterville and John W. Hollingsworth of Charleston, S.C.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza with alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, Juliet sleeves and a basque waist. Alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls appliqued the bodice and sleeves. The skirt extended into a chapel train. A ruffled satin garland-shaped hemline bordered the skirt and train. For her headpiece, she wore a layered veil of illusion edged with scrolls of schiffli embroidery flowing from an alencon lace tiara encrusted with seed pearls.

Maid of honor was Michelle Woodley of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Deborah King of Kinston and Fanette Entzminger of Greenville, both sisters of the bride. Each wore a formal gown of dusty rose chiffon lined in taffeta designed with a flounce trim bodice and scooped back with spaghetti tie belt and a full skirt. The maid of honor carried three long-stemmed pink roses and the bridesmaids each carried one long-stemmed pink rose. They each wore a string of pearls.

Paul Hollingsworth of Winterville served his brother as best man. Ushers were Troy Hudson and David Dickerson, both of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a light blue gown styled with a chiffon bodice and an asymmetrical tier in front. The mother of the bridegroom selected a lavender gown with a high neckline accented with rhinestones. Both mothers wore a corsage of three white roses. The grandmothers of the couple were remembered with a corsage of white mums.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the fellowship hall immediately following the ceremony. Guests were greeted by Louise Bachlotte, aunt of the bride. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Joyner, great aunt and uncle of the bride.

A party was given in honor of the bridal couple Monday night at the Dixie Queen Restaurant by friends. The mother of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal party Wednesday evening.

The bride and the bridegroom are both graduates of Greenville Christian Academy. The bride attended Bob Jones University and is attending Pitt Community College. The bridegroom attended Liberty Baptist College and is attending Pitt Community College. Both are employed at the Dixie Queen Restaurant in Winterville.

After a wedding trip to Virginia Beach, Va., the couple will reside in Winterville.

MRS. HOLLINGSWORTH

Chocolate Is Favorite

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The Netherlands has long been famed for its mellow cheeses and brilliant tulip blooms. But it also plays an important role in the world chocolate market.

The Dutch radically changed the chocolate industry in the 19th century when a specialist named C. J. Van Houten took out a patent on a process to make chocolate powder by removing approximately two thirds of the cocoa butter that exists in chocolate.

The product he created was more digestible and easier to mix with warm water. The partially defatted chocolate powder became the base for hot chocolate, long a standby for schoolchildren on wintry days.

In another innovation, Van Houten produced a chocolate that was darker in color but milder to the taste, which mixed easily with hot water. It became known as Dutch cocoa and is still popular.

The Netherlands obtains most of its cocoa beans from the African nations of Ghana, Ivory Coast, Nigeria and Cameroon. The beans are shipped in jute bags by merchant vessel to Amsterdam, and the country processes about 10 percent of the world supply.

Today Holland is noted for its milk chocolate candy stuffed with raisins and nuts, but it is also famous for its bittersweet bars, which are rated among the world's finest.

Chocolate has long been a top favorite among Americans, who have a weakness for sweets. In 1983, the people of this country consumed more than 2 billion pounds. So great has its popularity become that Americans now eat more than $50 million worth of fancy bonbons at about $20 a pound on holidays and special occasions. The overall American chocolate sales have climbed to a stupendous $10 billion a year.

A national gourmet magazine devoted to chocolate, called the Chocolatier, is now being published. It is filled with recipes featuring chocolate, such as the following for "snowballs."

½ pound unsalted butter
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon sherry
2 cups sifted flour
1 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
8 ounces chocolate kisses
Confectioners' sugar for decoration

Cream butter, sugar and sherry together until smooth. Add flour and stir in the nuts. Gather dough into a disk and wrap in foil or plastic.

Refrigerate at least half an hour. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Remove foil from kisses and insert each one inside ball of dough about one inch in diameter. Make sure each kiss is completely surrounded with dough.

Do you know a nurse who has gone above and beyond the call of duty in helping others? Well, this is your chance to do something special for her or him.
Just fill out a "Heart of Gold Award" entry form by November 24, 1984 (No Purchase Necessary). Tell us an outstanding example of a nurse's unselfish service. Then, based on your account, distinguished nursing authorities will select:
- 25 Semi-finalists (five from each national region) for special recognition including a plaque and a pair of Nurse Mates shoes.
- 5 National finalists to receive a $2,000 cash award each plus a $1,000 grant to be given in her/his name to the hospital charity or nursing education fund of choice.
- 1 Nurse Mates Heart of Gold Award Winner to be awarded an additional $5,000...plus another $1,000 grant/donation...plus a lifetime supply of Nurse Mates hosiery. That's $9,000 in prize money alone!

Anyone can nominate a nurse. And any nurse can win. For more information, write to: Heart of Gold, c/o Nurse Mates, 8 Hampshire Drive, Hudson, NH 03051.
And don't delay. This may be the best opportunity you'll ever have to give some much deserved recognition to that someone with a heart of gold.

Couple Marries In Simpson Church

Lisa Carlene Briley and Joey Lee Godley exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Salem United Methodist Church in Simpson. The Rev. T.D. Hoogerland performed the double ring ceremony.

Carol-Ann Tucker was soloist for the ceremony and Lois Jane Stocks played the organ.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jamie C. Briley of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reid Godley of Simpson.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of sheer organza and alencon lace fashioned with a modified Queen Anne neckline, fitted lace bodice embellished with pearls and sheer shepherdess sleeves that closed with lace cuffs. The A-line skirt was accented with a center front inset of accordian pleats. A redingote effect of alencon lace bordered with a border of lace, flowed into an attached chapel train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a matching lace bandeau. She carried a bouquet of pink and white assorted flowers.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attended Pitt Community College. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School. She is employed with Wachovia and the bridegroom is employed with Agri-Supply Co.

The honor attendant was Tammy Hardee of Greenville, cousin of the bride. Bridesmaids included Lori Jo Edwards, Pam Ross and Brenda Adams, all of Greenville, and Wendy Godley of Simpson, aunt of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers were Bubba Briley of Greenville, brother of the bride, Tony Godley, brother of the bridegroom, and Warren Edwards, both of Simpson, and Barry Sutton of Ayden.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of rose matte taffeta designed with a sweetheart neckline accented with ruffles and dropped shoulders. She carried a stem of silk dahlias with satin and lace streamers.

The bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant.

The mothers and grandmothers of the bridal couple were given corsages of white carnations. The great-grandmothers were given corsages.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Randy Phillips, aunt of the

MRS. GODLEY

Willis and Jerry Phillips, aunt and uncles of the bride. Wanda Oakley and Cathy Davenport, aunts of the bride, assisted in serving.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner for members of the wedding party, relatives and friends.

New Cookbook Published By JL

A new cookbook "Nothing Could Be Finer" has been published by the Junior League of Wilmington.

Some of its sections are gourmet, people and places and recipes for children.

Proceeds will be used to support community projects of the group including the Pied Piper Theater, the Sea Scholars program at Fort Fisher, the publication of the "Historic Wilmington Guidebook, providing money for the children's department of the New Hanover County Public Library and Thalian Hall and providing financial aid in setting up an outdoor program for the New Hanover Drug Abuse Committee, Inc.

A committee was formed in 1979 to formulate plans for the new cookbook. Over 900 recipes were collected, tested and evaluated over the next two years. Of those submitted, 563 were judged by the cookcook committee and selected as the "finest." The entire year, 1981, was devoted to rewriting, edition and organizing the recipes for publication.

For information contact the Junior League of Wilmington, Carriage House, Cottage Lane, Wilmington 28401.

Sisters Join Forces To Gut Buildings

By LARRY REISMAN
Bethleham Globe-Times

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The band "Men at Work" makes music. Allentown's "Girls at Work" makes a mess, then it cleans it up.

To Linda Blose, Nancy Kidd and Carol Williams, music is the sound of a wall falling down, and plaster zipping down a chute and into a dumpster. These three sisters make their living doing what some might consider "man's work" — they gut abandoned buildings for contractors.

"As for us doing this kind of work, it's something different," explained Ms. Williams, 24. "It's gratifying that someone lets a women do this job.

"It's obvious we can't do everything men can do," she added, noting that male help is often needed when it comes time to move a radiator, bathtub or similar heavy item.

"A lot of women do a lot of odd jobs," said Ms. Blose, 29. "I think the gutting part is different."

Ms. Williams thinks that "being willing to crawl in and out of a dumpster" is a unique feature of the job. "I don't know how many women like to do that," she said.

She is also one who often takes risks, as her sisters tell her to climb into a chute on the fourth floor, and slide to the ground-floor dumpster in order to clear the flow of plaster. "It's fun," she said.

"I'm not saying everybody should do it," Ms. Blose said. "It's just what we like to do."

"We have men asking us to give their wives jobs," added Ms. Kidd, 23.

On the job, the women wear jeans and work shoes, T-shirts and a hard hat. By the end of the day, they are caked in a mixture of sweat, plaster and dust.

At present, Ms. Williams works for her sisters, who own the company. In the firm's first year it has worked primarily for Rick Covert of Allentown, who turns condemned buildings into living quarters.

In addition to the gutting, "Girls at Work" also does more routine cleanups. When Covert's carpenters are finished, the young women clean the homes before they are inhabited.

"We were going to call ourselves, 'Demolish and Polish'," Ms. Kidd said. "We're first and last. It's two extremes."

Ms. Kidd explained the firm had got its start after they had watched a particular home turn into an eyesore. Covert eventually purchased the home, which was scheduled for demolition by the city, and they volunteered to rip out the walls and ceilings. While successfully completing their tasks, the women explained, they had fun. So why not combine work and pleasure?

"Every house tells a different story," Ms. Williams said, pointing to a wall on which a painting had been plastered in the former bar area.

She noted there is often writing on walls, under a coat of paint or two. "If these walls could talk..."

Ms. Kidd also likes the work involved.

Instead of volunteering to break down walls, "Now we're getting paid," she said. "Linda and I can take a wall and go crazy on it. It's nice to work for yourself with no boss looking over you."

Marriage Announced

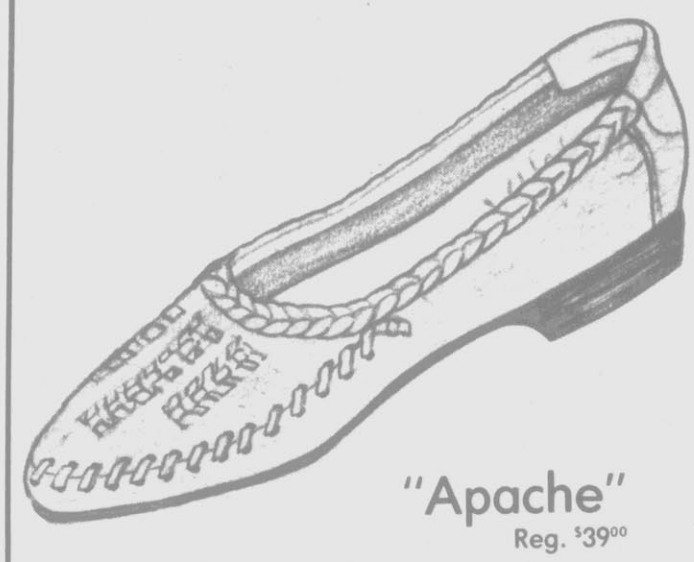

Paulette Hill and Cleotis B. Ward were married Saturday in the Good Hope Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. W.H. Mitchell.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Dear Abby

Pampered Siamese Cats Shouldn't Be Allowed In Crib

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is expecting her first child in two months. She and her husband are thrilled as they have been wanting a baby for five years.

They have two very pampered, spoiled Siamese cats that have the run of the house. There is a new baby crib in the nursery, and the cats love to play in it. They even sleep in it, which I think is a terrible idea because they may get into it when the baby is in it.

I fear for the baby's safety. I've heard tales about cats smelling milk on babies' breath and smothering the babies to death trying to suck more milk out of the baby.

I am not an interfering mother, but I'm considering telling them to get rid of the cats. Is there any truth to this tale?

Don't sign my name or they may give the cats to me!

CONCERNED IN YAKIMA

DEAR CONCERNED: The tale you heard about cats smothering babies is not true, but it's been around for a couple of generations. However, cats should not be allowed in an infant's crib—with or without the baby.

DEAR ABBY: Every now and then I find myself complaining because I'm too busy, don't have enough income, our married children live too far away, we have only one grandchild, etc.

I will soon be 84 and am fit as a fiddle. I still shovel snow with the biggest shovel I can find—like the one I used when I was a young man in South Dakota shoveling ear corn after a day of stooping over, hand-picking corn in the big fields.

Recently I came upon a box of clippings I'd saved for years, and when I read this letter I had clipped from your column it made me ashamed for complaining. It's dated 1965.

I hope you think it's worth a rerun. I certainly do.

GERALD GIVING, FORMER PASTOR

DEAR MR. GIVING: (What an appropriate name.) I agree, it's worth a rerun:

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading the "problems" sent to your column and I hope you print this because it might do a lot of people some good.

I'm in a charity hospital with arthritis, tuberculosis and heart trouble, and I am gradually losing my eyesight. I'm only 38, but I can't remember being free from pain in 22 years. If I could wake up one morning feeling good again, I wouldn't care if my wife (if I had one) flirted with another man.

What I am trying to say, Abby, is that if a person can get up in the morning and go to work on his own two legs, he should get down on his knees and thank God, for without health, you have nothing—even if you are rich.

VERY POOR

DEAR ABBY: I'm 50 years old, retired from the U.S. Navy and I used to make a good living driving a taxi. All the kids are raised and the wife and I are all alone now. That's the problem. The wife has nothing to do all day long, so for the last two years she's been sitting in the front seat with me when I drive my taxi.

I lose a lot of fares because when people see someone in the front seat with me they think I've got a customer and they won't get in. I've begged my wife not to ride with me, but she insists on going along because she doesn't trust me. Abby, I never had a girlfriend in our 30 years of married life, but she doesn't believe me.

I hate to divorce her, but it's murder living with a crazy, jealous wife. So what should I do?

DESPERATE IN HAWAII

DEAR DESPERATE: Please take your wife to a doctor for a complete examination. Her unfounded jealousy could be a symptom of an emotional problem. She could be physically (or mentally) ill. Don't put this off. She may need treatment.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I sent you a very arrogant, opinionated letter, criticizing you for repeating "A Parent's Prayer" in response to a reader's request. You published it without identifying me, for which I thank you.

I am deeply sorry and ask for your forgiveness. I have not been well lately. I have suffered severe pain due to a recent illness and complications. I, too, cried out to God to "help me." He has received and forgiven me. He has also told me that the lesson to be learned from suffering is humility.

I have since been given orders to apologize to all whom I have hurt through my arrogance and selfish attitude. I am carrying out this order with great care. This letter to you is one of them. In deepest sincerity, and may God bless you.

CONTRITE AND HUMBLED

DEAR CONTRITE: I accept your apology, although an apology was not necessary. You have a right to your opinion as well as the right to express it. I am never personally "hurt" when readers disagree with me. Their opinions, though not in agreement with mine, are every bit as important as my own.

You are being much too hard on yourself. I pray that you will be restored to good health soon, and I beg you not to punish yourself further for expressing your convictions. This is America, where there is freedom of speech for every one of us—including you. And may God bless you, too.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: All those letters in your column about tipping prompt this one. Did you know that the word "tips" is an abbreviation of the phrase "To insure prompt service"?

TIPSTER

DEAR TIPSTER: Yes, but in view of the fact, one wonders why the tip is not given in advance so that "prompt" service would be insured. Because the tip is given afterward, it "insures" nothing.

Definitely Worth Calling For Good Service

They Bring Outside In To Convicts

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — "They call me grandmother," beamed Bernadette Gallagher. "Some of them tease me. They wish me a happy Mother's Day."

"I'm not afraid of them — that's the biggest part," she said.

Most grandmothers aren't afraid of their families. But Mrs. Gallagher's "grandchildren" are convicted felons — thieves, assailants, rapists, even killers.

Mrs. Gallagher is one of 11 foster grandparents, age 65-74, who work four hours a day, five days a week, at the Michigan Training Unit in Ionia, a medium-security prison for men, most under 21 years old.

"I'm a substitute for their real grandmother," said the friendly, white-haired Greenville woman, eyeing a prison classroom full of wary young men. "Most of them come from broken homes."

Her gentle voice, the orderly classroom and graceful landscaped grounds suggest a college campus. But only yards away are barred doors, double fences, guardposts and rolls of razor-sharp wire that imprison 780 men.

"They really miss her when she's gone," said teacher Margaret Beach. "Some say she reminds them of their grandmother.

"She is in no danger in here."

The unusual program — believed to be the first of its kind in the nation — is a joint effort of Eight Cap Inc., a four-county community action agency, and the state Department of Corrections.

The program began in October 1983 and offers prisoners a chance to develop reading abilities and learn trades and other skills under a veteran eye. It also lets them talk to someone from the outside who isn't responsible for keeping them behind bars.

It lets the foster grandparents get out of the house, do something meaningful and earn a little money — $2 an hour. They must be over 60 and low-income — under $6,000 a year for a single person — and each is assigned to four inmates.

"She teaches them some new things — they teach her some new things," Douglas Moore, an office education teacher, said of Mrs. Gallagher. Inmates pecked away at typewriters while an elderly woman watched.

"She has a good listening ear. It gives them someone else to talk about society to, what to expect when they get out," he said.

The inmates like the program.

But Chris Parsons, Eight Cap coordinator for the 48-member foster grandparent program — which is financed by $165,125 in state money and also involves schools — cautions against expecting too much from the prison project.

Inmates all say they're going straight, she said, but many will commit further crimes and land back in prison.

"It's idealistic to say a relationship with a foster grandparent will change his life," she said.

"But while they're there (the grandparents) make a difference immediately, they make the environment more human. They bring the outside in.

"When the grandparents aren't there, they are missed," Mrs. Parsons said. "Having foster grandparents there keeps the institution a little more settled." She said vulgar language is reduced and inmates are more orderly.

Prison administrators agree, despite the fact the program initially was opposed by prison employees.

"It's been a tremendous advantage to the institution," said Andrew Jackson, administrative assistant to superintendent Richard Handlon.

"Prisoners see the staff as authority figures. With the grandparents, they can talk to them informally ... Some guys have not had one-to-one contact with an older person.

"There have been no problems," Jackson said.

The grandparents are more than willing to work. "They are so dedicated. And they're never sick," said Mrs. Parsons.

"We're really pleased with the grandparents and can't wait to get more of them on board," said Handlon.

"They're not seen as part of the staff," added Gene Korolewicz, who teaches a vocational class at the prison. "It's a non-threatening role. Andy (Jackson) and I represent 'the man.' There's always that barrier between us."

MRS. GURGANUS

Wedding Vows Said Friday

Janice Tripp Robinson of Greenville and Kenneth Lane Gurganus were married in a private outdoor ceremony Friday evening at seven o'clock performed at the home of the bride's brother.

The bride is the daughter of the late Leon and Daisy Dail Tripp. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Gurganus of Williamston.

Susie Pair played the guitar and sang "The Rose," "Perhaps Love," "My Treasure," "The Wedding Song" and "The Gift of Love."

The bride wore an ivory silk dress with dusty rose accents and carried a cascade of dusty rose alstromerias, gerberas and tiger lilies tied with dusty rose satin. The bride chose to wear her mother's wedding ring in her honor.

Donna and Melanie Robinson and Maryann and Patsy Gurganus, daughters of the couple, were each presented a bouquet matching the bride's. The bouquets were presented by the bride.

The couple will be living in Greenville.

The bride is employed at the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute and the bridegroom at IBM.

HOME SAFETY

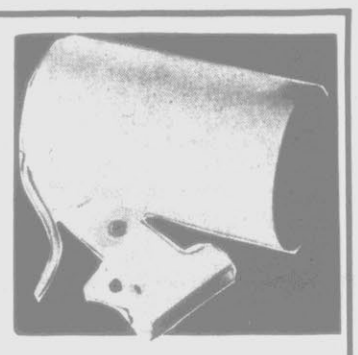

NEW YORK (AP) — Falls, mostly on stairs, from ladders and in bathtubs, cause about half of all home fatalities, according to an article in Home magazine, which offers preventive suggestions:

— Stairs should be kept uncluttered and covered with a slip-resistant material or finish, should have a handrail and should be well-lighted.

— The rungs or steps on a ladder should feel solid and have no side-to-side wobble. A ladder rested against a wall should have as large an angle as possible without the risk of its feet slipping. In climbing, keep either one hand and two feet or two hands and one foot on the rungs at all times.

— Adhesive appliques should be used in a tub or shower without a non-slip surface, and the floor should have a non-skid bathmat. Grab-bars in the shower are an additional safety feature.

10th Anniversary

GREENSBORO — The Green Hill Center for North Carolina Art has announced the selection of the ten North Carolina visual artists for its major anniversary exhibition, "Ten Years/Ten Artists," to take place Sept. 9 through Oct. 7.

To commemorate Green Hill's role during the past ten years as a gallery and educational facility exclusively existing to showcase the visual arts of North Carolina, this exhibition has been organized to recognize ten of North Carolina's most respected and gifted artists.

The ten were selected from nominations of professional directors and curators affiliated with museums, galleries, and art centers across North Carolina. Criteria for selection was: a visual artist of any medium whose body of work constitutes a substantial contribution to the visual arts of NorthCarolina, the high quality of their past and current work; and the artists are ones who are current residents of North Carolina and who have resided in the state for at least four years.

The final selections committee also considered the artist's influence on other artists, such as teaching, public visibility, participation in the North Carolina visual arts community, and other achievements and awards in their art form.

The ten artists to be honored, their principal media, and place of residence are:

- Jim Gallucci, sculpture, Greensboro.
- Maud Gatewood, painting, Yanceyville.
- Silvia Heyden, tapestry, Durham.
- Claude Howell, painting, drawing, Wilmington.
- Harvey Littleton, glass, Spruce Pine.
- Edith London, painting, collage, Durham.
- Andrew Martin, painting, Greensboro.
- John Menapace, photography, Durham.
- Clarence Morgan, painting, collage, Greenville.
- Tom Soumalainen, clay, Walnut Cove.

The "Ten Years/Ten Artists" exhibition will be accompanied by a catalogue and a "North Carolina Visual Artists Seminar," with the ten artists as panelists with a nationally-known art critic to serve as moderator. The seminar will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Gallery hours for the Green Hill Center are 10-5 Tuesday through Friday, and 2-5 on Saturday and Sunday, closed Mondays and holidays.

BLTE Offerings Listed

Advance notification has been received of coming attractions being offered by the Best Lunch Theater Ever (BLTE). The program, presented at noon at the Greenville Museum of Art and in evening hours at the Humber House on West Fifth Street, are under the auspices of The Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, Inc., with headquarters in Greenville.

Works scheduled for the autumn and early winter season of 1984 are:

- Sep. 19 — "Terminal" by Bonnie Beardsley.
- Oct 3 — "Poetry Entr'Act" by Ann Deagon.
- Oct. 17 — "Icy Waters" by Craig David.
- Nov. 21 — "Tobacco 84," celebrating the Souther Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, and
- Dec. 19 — "Rubbings" by Mark St. Germain.

All the programs are being offered free and are open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis. Discussions will follow the presentations.

British Exhibit Set

RALEIGH — Staff members of the N.C. Museum of History have begun clearing the way for a major exhibiton which the British Library and Museum will send to Raleigh in March.

The exhibit, now on view at the British Library in London, features the famous paintings of artist and explorer John White, governor of the "lost colony" of 1587. It will be shown in the N.C. Museum of History March 8 through June 6, 1985, then will travel to the New York City Public Library.

The exhibit will take up the entire second floor of the N.C. Museum of History's facility in the Archives and History/State Library Building at 109 E. Jones St. in downtown Raleigh. That floor now contains a temporary exhibit on public works and two permanent installations, the gunshop of inventor "Carbine" Williams and a gold mining exhibit featuring rare Bechtler coins minted in North Carolina.

Staff members began closing the floor and clearing out exhibits on Aug. 13. The gunshop and gold mining exhibits will reopen to the public when the N.C. Museum of History moves into its new home, the Cannon Museum Center on East Morgan Street, Raleigh, in late 1985 or early 1986.

"The decision to close the 'Carbine' Williams exhibit and the mining display, even temporarily, was very difficult to make," said John Ellington, administrator of the N.C. Museum of History.

"Over the years, those have been two of our most popular exhibits, and we don't want to disappoint visitors. But the British exhibit is the most spectacular and important exhibit our museum has ever had, and we simply must have the space. I'm glad we'll be able to reopen the other exhibits once we're in our new facility."

The N.C. Museum of History plans a number of lectures, seminars, films and other special events during the run of the British exhibit. For details on these, call 733-3894.

N.C. Arts Grants

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Arts Council has awarded $672,000 in Statewide Arts Resources grant for fiscal year 1984-85. These grants are funded by appropriations from the N. C. General Assembly and go to major non-profit, art-producing organizations whose programs serve the entire state by bringing high quality art to North Carolina. Such organizations must be professionally directed and staffed and must have met the eligibility requirements for the grant program for a significant number of years before receiving a grant.

In the area of dance, grants went to the American Dance Festival, $71,000; the Frank Holder Dance Company, Greensboro, $18,000; and the North Carolina Dance Theater, Winston-Salem, $52,500.

Music organizations receiving grants were the Brevard Music Center, $58,000; Eastern Music Festival, Greensboro, $58,000; Charlotte Symphony, $70,000; the National Opera Company, Raleigh, $13,000; and the North Carolina Opera, Charlotte, $78,000.

Visual arts grants went to the Mint Museum of Art, Charlotte, $64,000, and the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, Winston-Salem, $67,500.

Craft organizations receiving grants were The John C. Campbell Folk School, Brasstown, $21,000; Penland School of Crafts, Penland, $39,500; Piedmont Craftsmen, Winston-Salem, $10,500; and the Southern Highlands Handicraft Guild, Asheville, $46,000.

In the area of literature, the Arts Journal, published in Asheville, received a grant for $5,000.

Morgan Show

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — An exhibition of paintings by Clarence Morgan, artist-in-residence at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, will be on view in the college's MCAD Gallery begining Aug. 31 and continuing to Sept. 27. An opening reception is being held from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday.

Morgan, a member of the faculty in the School of Art, East Carolina University, is on a one-year sabbatical from ECU.

Works by Morgan in the Minneapolis show will include examples both of his large, colorful, acrylic paintings on canvas and small acrylic paintings on paper. Morgan uses vivid colors — reds, blacks, greens, whites. In some canvases, he paints frames around the work.

A native of Philadelphia, Morgan has taught at ECU since 1978. He is represented by the Katherine Markel Gallery in New York City and the Richard Rosenfeld Gallery in Philadelphia. His work has been exhibited in numerous gallerys nationally and are in a number of major collections.

Kevin Clark Enjoyed Overseas Experience

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's Kevin Clark has discovered that he likes the loosely structured format of the Universite Catholique de Louvain in Belgium "better than the system at N.C. State University," where Kevin has just returned for his senior year.

"Classes are conducted at Louvain in an entirely subjective way. It's all quite lenient, with students expected to do required work on their own," he explained. "You study as you can, when you can. You're not spoon-fed as we are here. Most students at Louvain really put in a hard month of study before exams. You only get one exam, a comprehensive oral one. At that time, you dress in formal attire to appear before an individual professor." He admitted that the one exam is a "tough one."

The university, located in Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium, "is considered the best philosophy school in the world," Kevin said. He added that the one year he attended the school, 1983-84, was "to do something basically different, not to get a degree, but to work toward getting a diploma. I don't necessarily plan to return to studying philosophy, however."

A 1980 graduate of Rose High School, Kevin attended UNC-Chapel Hill for one year before transferring to N.C. State where he is majoring in math.

"I decided to try for a one-year study program through the International Student Exchange Program based in Georgetown in Washington, D.C.," Kevin explained. "I was accepted and went to Belgium the first of September 83 and returned a short time ago, in July."

Like any student with the opportunity to study overseas for a year, Kevin was excited and curious about the prospect. "One thing I was not prepared for, had no idea about, was the tension that exists between the Flemish and the Walloon people in Belgium," Kevin commented. "The language spoken by the Flemish population is commonly called the Dutch language, while the Walloons speak French. When I spoke English, the Flemish were happy about that; when I spoke English, the Walloons didn't like it. So I learned to be careful to speak French whenver I talked to Walloons."

Because of the long-standing tension between the two factions, a decision was made in 1969 "to split the school due to the rift between the Flemish and Walloons," Kevin remarked. "The new campus, the one I attended, is stuck in the middle of nowhere, in what was formerly farmland, at a spot 25 miles from Brussels.

"That didn't create any real problems for me, because transportation is cheap and dependable there. I enjoyed going to Bruges, which I consider the most beautiful city in Belgium with its fine old churches and handsome old buildings. Brussels is where I went when I wanted action."

The leisurely system of study had one fortunate aspect — it provided Kevin with considerable leeway for visiting other areas of Europe. "And what really helped is that as a student and a young person not having to do the tourist rush, I could live and travel cheaply. Sometimes I was invited to stay with families. Also, lodging in youth hostels is inexpensive, and for $150 I was able to travel anywhere on an Inter-Rail train ticket.

"One of the most enjoyable excursions was a trip to Moscow," Kevin declared. "I went with a group of 150 Belgian students. Only three of the group were American. This was an eight-day trip during one of the long school breaks. We had a chance to talk to members of the Soviet Youth Peace Committee, which was an interesting encounter. Another revealing thing to me was the open air market which definitely showed captitalism at work in Russia. Here farmers brought their excess to sell at whatever prices the customers would pay."

While visiting Moscow, Kevin said he was able to find time to attend the Moscow State Circus, take in a State Opera performance, and attend a performance by the State Chamber Orchestra and a concert by the Red Army Chorus in the Kremlin.

"In the latter part of September '83 I made a trip to Iceland, which I found to be quite a beautiful place at that time of year. I also visited the Adriatic city of Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia, spent a month in England and another in Paris.

"Life in Paris was typically what I'd been led to expect," Kevin said. "I was there in February, a good time for Paris when there's few tourists and lots of activity, especially in the night spots, which are mostly disco oriented. Naturally, I fell in love, but I left my love behind."

In a visit to Berlin, Kevin noted he was very much impressed with the famed Pergamum Hellenistic altar to Zeus. "It's housed in a special section in the Mergamon Museum in East Berlin, a really splendid work of art," Kevin said.

With a year of travel and adventure behind him, Kevin said the experience might possibly change his future outlook. "I've been thinking in terms of going into graduate work once I graduate from N.C. State. However," he added, "I'm not sure that will be in math. I'm still considering other options, perhaps in design or in diplomatic work. I think having had this experience of a year away from my regular studies will help me eventually decide what I really want to get into for a career."

Kevin is the son of Drs. Amos and Barbara Clark. His father is in the education department at East Carolina University; his mother is an administrator at Pitt Community College. Kevin's brother David is a student at UNC-Chapel Hill, and a sister, Lisa, attends ECU.

TOURISTS GALORE

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's hotel industry will have to add 600,000 hotel rooms at a cost of $42 billion to accommodate the estimated 2 billion tourists vacationing by the year 2000, according to a hospitality industry specialist.

"Due to their large number, there will not be enough middle management jobs to go around," says Charles Kaiser Jr. of Pannell Kerr Forster, a tourism accounting and consulting firm. "As a result, these people will be looking for escape by way of vacation at special-amenities hotels.

Old Farm Cottage Evokes Fond Memories

By LA RONA MURRAY
Freelance Writer

Surrounded at this time by a field of knee-high soybeans is a small abandoned cottage-type house located a short distance off N.C. 30 about two miles south of Stokes. It is a lovely structure that catches the eye of many traveling, some of whom stop along the road to take pictures of it.

The partially vine-covered house was reportedly built in the latter part of the 18th century. Constructed in the crude wide-board method of that era, it is typical of many farm houses of that period.

The present owner of the house is Mrs. Don Langston, who inherited the house through generations from its original owner, Edward Langley, a promiment landowner from Stokes.

The doors, rough pieces of boards fastened to cross pieces, were originally opened and closed by latch strings. The small windows now lean slightly askew from the ravages of passing years.

In 1927 the house was bought from Alfred Jenkins and his wife Mary Langley Jenkins, by A. L. Woolard, father of Mrs. Heber Fleming, who lives outside Stokes on N.C. 30. Mrs. Fleming provided her personal recollections of the old house in the years while it was home to Alfred and Mary Jenkins.

"I remember visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins when I was a little girl in the early part of the 20th century," Mrs. Fleming recalls. She remembers the steps that "led up to the two raoms upstairs. They had no hand railings and I was always a little afraid that someone would fall off."

There are four small rooms downstairs. The larger one, which served as a living room and bedroom, had a fire place which in earlier years had been used also for cooking.

"I have no way of knowing for sure," Mrs. Fleming said, "but I believe that the house was put together with wooden pegs and homemade nails.

"Although the floors and wall were unpainted and rough, Mrs. Jenkins kept the floors clean with a corn shuck mop and lye soap."

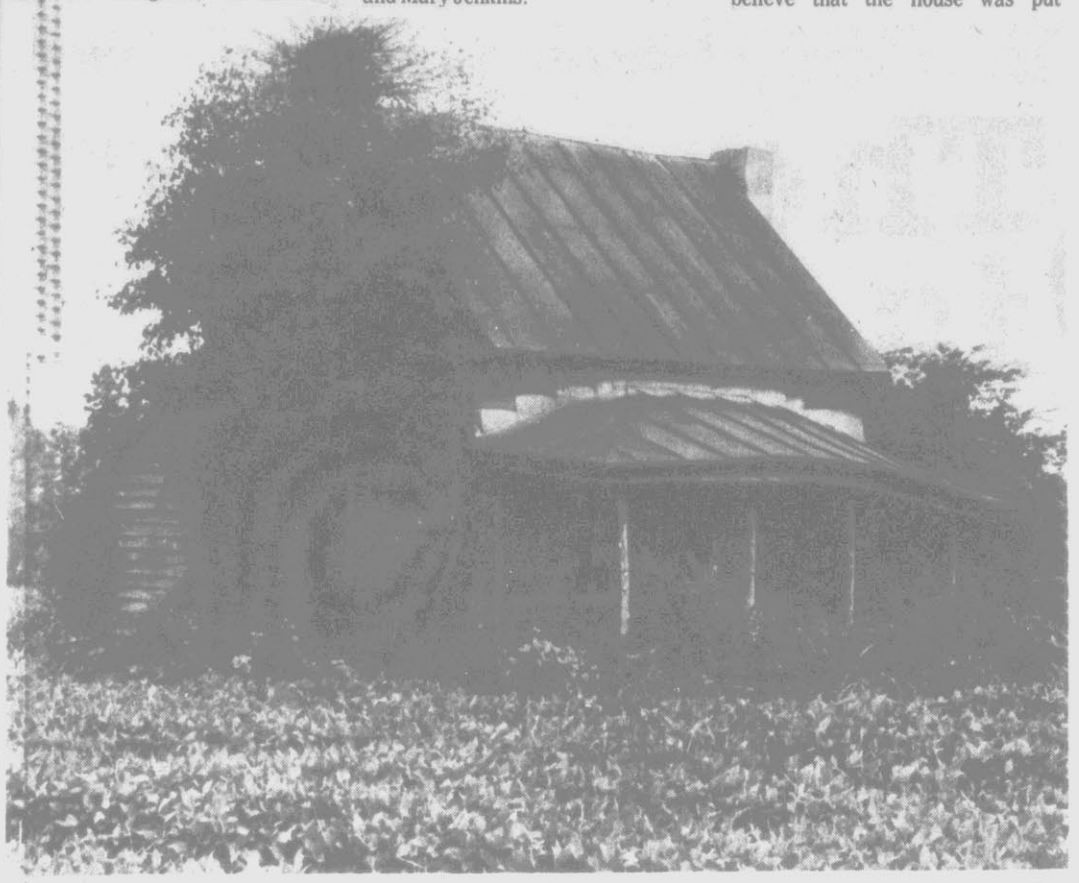

Today, there is no indication that at one time the house was painted red.

"I can just see Mrs. Jenkins now, dressed in her long skirt and bonnet, sweeping the floors with her homemade straw boom," Mrs. Fleming reminisced. "I can see her drawing water fom the well by its long wooden, see-saw like weight, or sweep, as they referred to them then, and pouring the water into an oaken bucket for household use."

Today, the road nearest the house is the paved highway from Stokes to beyond Pactolus. "At an earlier time before the paved road," Mrs. Fleming said, "there was a dirt road that ran from Stokes to Washington which ran in front of the house."

The yard of the house also plays a prominent part in Mrs. Fleming's memories. "It had huge boxwood hedges," she remembers. "No grass or weeds were allowed to grow in the yard which Mrs. Jenkins always swept clean with a reed or dogwood broom."

The old house stands now in an open field, a solid remnant of the past heritage of Pitt County's rural architecture.

THE OLD LANGLEY HOUSE ... Now standing in an open field a short distance south of Stokes off N.C. 30, this small house was origianlly owned by Edward Langley, a prominent Stokes landowner. The house was reportedly built in the latter part of the 18th century. An area resident, Mrs. Heber Fleming, remembers when the Jenkins family lived there in the early part of this century. From Sheppard Memorial Library

By WILLIE NELMS

Area sports fans will enjoy three items on the new book shelves at Sheppard Memorial Library.

"The American League: An Illustrated History" by Donald Honig is a treasury of photographs of professional baseball's junior circuit. Containing over 550 photos, most of which have never before been published, this book offers a comprehensive view of the league. Honig, the author of numerous baseball books, provides numerous statistics and anecdotes about lesser-known as well as star players.

This volume is a browser's delight and a joy for fans of America's national pastime.

"The Golfer's Repair and Maintenance Handbook" by John C. Harvey is a genuine do-it-yourself guide for players interested in getting maximum utility from their golf equiment. The volume illustrates and explains the parts of woods and irons with diagrams and drawings. Players will learn how to replace broken inserts and shafts as well as dozens of other repairs.

This book will be a valuable reference for golfers for years to come.

"Dirt Tracks to Glory" is written by North Carolina native Sylvia Wilkinson. Her book chronicles the early days of stock car racing in the United States. Filled with dozens of photographs from the sport, the book shows the development of stock car racing over the past four decades. Numerous interviews with competitors ranging from Tim Flock to Fred Lorenzen to Ned Jarret provide insight into the lifestyle of the racers.

This book will appeal to anyone interested in sports history as well as followers of the stock car racing circuit.

Arabs Have Discovered Istanbul As A Vacation Mecca

By EMEL ANIL
Associated Press Writer

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Thousands of Arabs have discovered Istanbul and other areas of Moslem Turkey as the place for their vacations, now that Beirut, their usual playground, is in shambles.

For many Turks, it is an unexpected windfall. Said Tourism Minister Mukerrem Tascioglu: "We shall recover the money spent by our people who go on the pilgrimage of Mecca, Saudi Arabia." Mecca is the spiritual center of Islam.

At the same time, the presence of the Arabs and their flowing robes and headdresses present a picture unseen in major Turkish cities since the Westernizing reforms of Kemal Ataturk changed the mode of dress in the 1920's. Also back is Arabic script, unused here since Ataturk Latinized the Turkish alphabet 56 years ago.

Beirut, the capital of Lebanon, once was the chief attraction for Arab tourists. But Lebanon has been in conflict since 1975 and the Arabs, with oil money to spend, went elsewhere, chiefly to London and Paris.

But Arabs find they have something in common with the Turks — religion, culture and customs. The Arabs were part of the Ottoman Empire until it disintegrated after World War I.

In the nearby resort village of Gokcedere, where 90 percent of tourists are Arabs, grocer Seyfi Gorur wears traditional Bedouin dress and has learned enough Arabic to converse with his customers.

Official figures will not be in until the end of the year, but those in the tourist industry say at least 40 percent of foreign visitors this year — more than 600,000 people — are from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Syria, Iraq and Libya.

They can be seen all over this sprawling city of 6 million people, enjoying the parks on Camlica Hill on the Anatolian side, strolling through Ottoman palaces turned into museums and enjoying the belly dance shows at nightclubs.

Travel agency officials say flights from Kuwait to Turkey are booked solid to the end of August and hotel managers say they have no vacancies until after the Kurban Bayram, the Moslem sacrifice feast, in early September.

Turks watched with envy in the past decade as oil-rich Arabs preferred London and Paris for their shopping and amusement.

Some Turks, however, express concern that Western visitors will confuse the the Arabs with the indigenous population and go away in the belief that Turkey is less Westernized than it is.

Travel agency officials say that several luxury hotels in Istanbul, which cater to mostly European and American clientele, admit Arab guests with reluctance.

Tourism Minister Tascioglu has threatened to take measures against "anyone who does not treat our white-robed guests properly."

But most Turks who have any dealings with the free-spending Arabs share his enthusiasm.

Erdogan Erkmen, the manager of UFI department store in Aksaray, said, "These tourists are God's blessing to us. They are big spenders." Erkmen has his sales staff learning Arabic.

He said he thinks the Arab tourists have grown to like Turkey because they share the same religion and eat similar food.

Semir al-Rasidi, a university student from Kuwait visiting here with seven other members of his family, agreed. "We feel close to Turks because they are fellow Moslems." But he also said the country is inexpensive and the people "respectful and friendly."

Abdullah al-Ahmadi, 31, of Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, who came here with his wife and infant daughter, said the family spends $125 a day and finds it very inexpensive.

"We shall be back and also recommend to our friends at home to come and visit," he said.

Rami Sipahi of the Cayiragasi Travel Agency said hotel space in Istanbul cannot accommodate the influx of Arab tourists, who often arrive with large family groups of eight to 10 to stay one to two months.

Rich Arabs rent villas along the Bosporus, paying the equivalent in Turkish lira of $3,900 a month. The middle class tourists, mostly from Libya, Iraq and Syria, prefer houses in less affluent districts, paying $1,300 a month, Sipahi said.

The Arab bonanza has sent rents skyrocketing in Istanbul. Some families have moved in with relatives so they can rent their own homes to Arabs.

A Review

No Relation To Reality

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"RED DAWN" starts ominously. A high school teacher is lecturing to bored students in a remote, mountainous area of the United States. Out of the window he can see parachutes floating down like malignant mushrooms. What's going on?

Teacher and students soon find out. The parachutes bring Cuban soldiers and their Russian advisers. Americans who try to escape are gunned down. The invasion of the United States is on.

John Milius, who has written andor directed such films as "Magnum Force," "Apocalypse Now" and "Conan the Barbarian," achieves the utmost in militarism with "Red Dawn." From beginning to end, his new film is packed with shootings, brutality and violence — like one long video war game.

Opening titles tell the situation: The Soviet Union has had a disastrous wheat harvest and invades Poland. Europe pulls out of NATO and the United States stands alone.

But why would the Reds launch an invasion and occupy an isolated part of the United States with no apparent strategic value? What has happened to the rest of the country? The film offers no answers.

The story centers on a band of highschoolers who escape to the mountains and somehow manage to harrass and destroy large numbers of enemy troops. They endure every kind of hardship, learn the killing game and die valiantly, often with brave words on their lips.

Milius co-wrote the script (with Kevin Reynolds) and directed with no apparent concern for such howlers as: "It's World War III down there — people are getting killed!" Or, "All that hate's gonna eat you up, kid." Reply: "Keeps me warm."

The bathos is unrelenting. Villagers sing "America the Beautiful" before they are machine-gunned into a common grave. A condemned father cries: "Boys, avenge me."

Rarely since "Heaven's Gate" has a major movie been so painfully bad, not only in dialogue. The battle scenes are neither dramatic nor convincing, merely brutal. After one battle the youthful guerrillas execute the enemy wounded. Then the leaders kill a prisoner and one of their companions who turned traitor — point-blank, in cold blood.

The young actors include Patrick Swayze, C. Thomas Howall, Lea Thompson and Charlie Sheen. They should not be blamed, nor will their careers suffer, since most are unrecognizable. Powers Boothe plays a soldier with customary coolness. The best work is done by Ron O'Neal as a conscience-striken Cuban commander.

It may come as a relief to know the United States resists the invasion. The film ends with a tribute to the "partisans" of the recent conflict.

"Red Dawn" is the first film to be released with the PG-13 rating, which advises parental guidance for pre-teeners. This seems a mild assessment of a film replete with violence, including the murder of

Czech Novelist Claims Exile Can Kill Creative Talent

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Josef Skvorecky, who is a professor of literature as well as one of the world's best-known Czech novelists, is well aware that exile has killed the creative talent in some authors.

"There of course have been cases of writers who had to leave their native country, and they just never could write — cut off their roots or whatever," he says. "On the other hand, you have writers who flourish in exile."

Skvorecky, who fled Czechoslovakia in 1969, the year after Soviet tanks rolled in to crush a liberalizing movement, counts himself as one of the flourishers.

"The fact is that in my 15 years in Canada, I have written more books than in all the previous years in Czechoslovakia," he says. "In my case, I am not a sentimental person. I like to remember my teen-age years, but I know that I can never return."

The 59-year-old author — his name pronounced "skvor-ET-ski" — lives in a row house in a recently seedy, now trendy, neighborhood just east of downtown Toronto. He was stripped of his Czech citizenship and is now a Canadian citizen.

Skvorecky spoke of his work — especially his acclaimed "The Engineer of Human Souls," a novel published in English translation this summer — between puffs on a cigar. His pudgy frame relaxed in a living room chair beneath an oil painting showing the kind of swing band often featured in his writing.

"In Canada, I don't feel cut off from anything," he said. "And then there is the Czech community here. In Toronto there are about 15,000 Czechs, which is exactly the number of people that inhabit my native town."

Skvorecky was born in Nachod, a Bohemian town east of Prague. It appears often in his fiction, but renamed Kostelec.

"The Toronto Czech community has all the characteristics of a small Czech town, you know" he continued. "It's very gossipy. News spreads very quickly. It has even a Czech theater, which produces about six plays per year."

There are other advantages of life in the new land.

"There are practically no literary critics among the exiles," Skvorecky said, so his books are read avidly but reviewed, if at all, by friendly amateur critics. "For a writer, I think this is an ideal situation."

Skvorecky's first novel, "The Cowards," drew more than criticism when it appeared in 1958. It was banned and he was fired from his job as an editor at the publishing house.

As the regime relaxed controls in the 1960s — during what became known as the "Prague Spring" — that novel and such other Skvorecky works as "The Bass Saxaphone" were published and drew acclaim. He also worked on film scripts, including one with Milos Forma, who became famous in the West.

Skvorecky is no longer shielded from criticism. Now his writings — when translated into English — are widely reviewed. So far, the comments have been almost universally favorable.

In "The Engineer of Human Souls" — the title comes from Stalin's definition of the writer — narrator Smiricky alternates scenes from his life in Toronto with reminiscences of wartime Czechoslovakia and his attempts as a conscript laborer in a Messerschmitt factory to sabotage the plane.

"To this day I don't know whether the sabotage was effective or not," Skorecky said. "I was really scared for about two months. I couldn't sleep. But when you are young you do things without thinking of the consequences. I wouldn't do it now at my age."

Besides writing, and teaching at the University of Toronto's Glendale College, Skvorecky helps his wife Sdena run Sixty-eight Publishers.

The firm, considered one of the world's foremost Czech-language publishing houses, has published 139 books by exiles and dissidents. Most copies are sold by mail, but some of each title are smuggled into Czechoslovakia.

Skvorecky, about to start work on a new book about Czechs who fought in the American Civil War, does not expect to see his homeland again.

"I have become so used to Canada that I consider it my home now. I didn't leave voluntarily but now I feel that I in fact did," he said.

"Of course if things changed in Czechoslovakia so I could go home, I would go back for a visit," he said. But not to stay.

"I am an exile," Skvorecky said. "I am simply a Canadian now."

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Three guests will make appearances on Kay Currie's Hospitality House, the Sunday magazine aired each Sunday from noon to 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Today's first guest is Dr. James Mathis, psychiatrist in the department of psychiatric medicine, East Carolina University. He will talk about why people suffer from phobias and describe his treatment of patients.

Edward Robert Brooks, known as "the gourmet on the go," will show how to prepare a pear dish. He was interviewed by Ms. Currie in Chicago.

The third guest is New York jazz singer Ruth Brown, who has been on a concert tour of the Greenville area. She will sing two songs — "Since I Feel For You" and "Lover Man."

New PBS Tower

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina Center for Public Television (PBS) has received a permit to construct a television transmission tower, designated as Channel 36, from the Federal Communications Commissison.

Negotiations for the tower, to be located in Brinkleyville, 15 miles south of Roanoke Rapids in Halifax County, began in 1981. Construction could not begin prior to receipt of the permit.

Design and planning of the site is nearing completion, with construction bids to be solicited in the near future. Completion of the site is expected by summer 1985.

The 1,100 foot transmission tower will provide coverage to Edgecombe, Franklin, Northampton, Halifax, Nash, Vance, Warren and Wilson counties.

Long Lines For Menudo Concert

But it seemed that way when scores of adolescent fans appeared outside the famed art deco concert hall with beds and lounge chairs to wait overnight so they could buy tickets to next month's Menudo concert.

When the hot pop group appeared at Radio City last February, it set a record in ticket sales. This concert is expected to be the same, a spokeswoman said, adding that five shows were completely sold out during the first day of ticket sales last Thursday.

Radio City is sponsoring a contest with a local radio station and TV channel for chaperoned dates at a secret place with the five Menudo youngsters. The winning girls can take a best friend along and will go on a shopping spree with a personal shopper at Macy's.

Meanwhile, another pop superstar, Juilo Iglesias, sold out all 42,000 seats for seven performances at Radio City in a record 15 hours.

His concert runs from Sept. 6-12. Menudo will be at Radio City from Sept. 27 to Oct. 3.

Outer Banks Book

TRYON — A new guide book, "The Best of the Outer Banks," has been published by the Gallopade Publishing Group of Tryon. The travel guide is designed to provide information such as where to find ice cream, baby sitters, fishing times, to warn travelers that ferries do fill up and that soft shoulders really mean "quicksand."

The book, priced at $4, is available at area book stores or can be ordered from: Gallapade, P. O. Box 1537, Tryon, N. C., 27782.

NEW GALLERY

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Museum of Art says it has completed construction of a new gallery for the exhibition of photographs.

The first exhibition at the new Alfred Stieglitz Center Gallery is "Beyond a Portrait: Photographs by Alfred Stieglitz and Dorothy Norman." It is on view through Oct.

Adirondack Boats Making A Comeback

EDITOR'S NOTE — No one is sure just who invented the classic Adirondack guide boat, a sort-of pickup truck of the waterways, but the light and fast wooden craft is making a comeback among boat buffs with big bucks to spend.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — An exquisitely handcrafted wooden boat, unique to this region of rugged terrain and miles of wilderness waterways, is enjoying a vigorous comeback after near extinction in the age of aluminum and fiberglass.

As recently as a decade ago, an Adirondack guide boat, among the lightest and fastest of rowboats, could be had for $100 or less. Today, with a resurgence of interest in fine woodworking, classic design and hand-powered watercraft, genuine guide boats are selling for $4,000 and up, new or restored.

But you can't just plunk down your money and pick one up. It takes about a year for a skilled craftsman to build one, using hand-sawn spruce roots, hand-bevelled white cedar lapstrake planks, and about 6,000 tiny brass screws and copper tacks.

Since the boats take so long to build, or restore from the rotted condition in which they are discovered in the boathouses of private estates, the guide boat business is more a labor of love than profit. But a few artisans have carried on the craft that evolved in the wilderness more than a century ago.

"These boats weren't really made as a thing of beauty," said Carl Hathaway, packing his pipe and pulling up a chair beside a partially restored boat in his Saranac Lake workshop. "They were made as pickup trucks — working boats, used to go out for groceries, haul luggage from the railhead, take a client fishing or hunting and maybe bring back a deer, take the family to church on Sunday."

No one knows just who invented the lightweight rowboats, said William Crowley, curator of the Adirondack Museum in Blue Mountain Lake which has about 50 of the traditional guide boats. Legend has it that Mitchell Sabattis, a famous Indian guide from Long Lake, was the one who redesigned the dory and skiff to fashion a guide boat, pointed at both ends, that was roomy, easily rowed and light enough to carry through the forest.

But after years of research, Kenneth and Helen Durant, authors of the "The Adirondack Guide Boat," decided that the boat evolved through the work of numerous Adirondack guides and woodworkers between 1825 and 1960.

Hathaway, 54, is a native Adirondacker who learned the guide boat craft as an apprentice to Saranac's Willard Hamner. He took over Hamner's shop after the builder's death 20 years ago.

The square-jawed, steely-haired woodworker is amiable and long-winded in characteristic northwoods fashion as he describes his craft among the cedar curls and myriad assortment of saws, planes and clamps in his shop.

"The ribs are made of white spruce roots, to take advantage of the natural curve in the grain," he said. "They're sawn, not steam bent like in a canoe or a St. Lawrence skiff.

"The planking, either white cedar or white pine, varies from three to five sixteenths of an inch thick, bevel-lapped."

He said Dwight Grant of Boonville and Riley Parsons of Old Forge, two of the most celebrated builders a century, "had a special bevel, and the secret has been lost as to how they did it. With the extremely tight fit of their joints, I feel it would be impossible for them to be cut by human hands.

"I figure they must have had some sort of machine to cut those laps. Each board would get thinner up near the top — I've measured them with calipers. I've tried their planes, lost a lot of sleep trying to figure out how they did it — it was truly a feat of engineering."

Hathaway said 95 percent of his work is restoration of vintage boats like those made by Grant and Parsons, and the rest is building new boats. Instead of iron screws, he uses brass. Thousands of tiny copper nails, set in holes drilled with a hand awl, clinch the laps tightly together.

He canes new seats, sometimes uses red cedar for the gunwales for contrast, installs shiny, new brass orelocks custom-made at a small foundry, and finishes the wood with clear varnish. The boats are typically 15 feet long and weigh about 70 pounds.

With the new popularity of the guide boat, imitators are popping up all over. The most common is referred to as a "strip boat," made by tacking inch-wide strips of thin cedar to a plywood form and coating it with a layer of fiberglass.

"It's a pretty boat, and a lot easier to make," Crowley says. "But the purists say if you don't go out and dig roots for the rib stock and use the tacks and bevelled planks, it's not a guide boat."

With more than 100 hours worth of work, Hathaway may charge $2,000 or more for a major restoration. He does about 15 a year, while also holding a full time job as caretaker of the woodland estate of John L. Loeb.

His clients come from as far away as Massachussetts, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Baltimore.

"The only thing that bothers me is when people abuse them, step through the planking or run 'em up on rocks. I built a 12-foot boat for one guy. He took it down to Pound Ridge, brought it back and said it leaked. I looked it over, found little holes in the bow. Turned out he'd been clay pigeon-shooting. That really hurt — I mean, when you send one of these boats out, a little bit of you goes with each one."

Restoring Old Buggy Company

Remembering Newtown

In the late 1950s, the Greenville Housing Authority began an ongoing urban renewal program that over the years has virtually eliminated slum conditions within the city. One of the areas that was cleaned up during that period was and is still known as Newtown.

A residential area, Newtown was composed mostly of dilapidated straight-shot and a few two-story homes where approximately 157 low-income families had their children, ate their meals — conducted their lives.

One of the smallest of the Housing Authority's projects, the rejuvenation of the 18-acre Newtown neighborhood cost $1.1 million. Today, 78 units of new public housing sit on the W. 14th Street site.

Most of Newtown's original residents were relocated when work was begun. Willie Washington and Goldie Dupree were two who were moved and now live in the Authority's Moyewood Project located near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Willie Washington

Most summer evenings Willie Washington settles on her front porch, hoping to catch whatever breeze there is to be found. She says she doesn't use her air conditioner because "it's new, isn't natural....Besides," she adds, "I can just sit here in front of these two doors here on my porch and get plenty of air and thinking done."

A lot of thinking isn't natural either, she cautions. "But I do some," she says, "and yes, sometimes I think about Newtown. Oh yes, I like to think about Newtown. No matter what I tell you about thinking, I've set here many days and thought about Newtown. It was a fine place, but I guess you could call it like a slum. As soon as someone'd move out, another'd move in, even after it was condemned. But yep we all got along fine, weren't no arguments because we were all in the same cahoots, you know."

Her house was standard for the Newtown area — single-floor straight-shot with a few rooms and no indoor plumbing. She said, however, that after living in Newtown for several years, a toilet was installed on the back porch. "Up until then, we used a privy and it was some kinda cold going out in the winter time. We took our baths in a foot tub when we needed to, and the children, well we'd throw them in a big wash tub, back-to-back, for their wash. Now that was fun, but it's better over here," she adds. "I stayed in New Town for so long and then when I moved to Moyewood I had to get used to the house. You have to get used to the house, you know.

"I thought at the time they moved me that it was not so good an idea. It was different you see, and no, no, I didn't want to, but I knew I'd have to move. But I told myself, I'm all right like I am so I took it like it was."

She'll tell you, however, that even though she wanted to stay in Newtown, that her new house in the Moyewood Project has plenty attributes. "I was crazy about the carpeting, never had it before. I liked it some kinda good. This place is also bigger, has more room. It's warmer in the winter here, too, for one thing, but it took me kinda a long time getting used to it."

There's not the same kind of closeness at Moyewood, though, she observes. "We all get along fine, but it ain't the same. There's some good and some bad about everything," she says, then looks across the street and resumes rocking.

Goldie Dupree

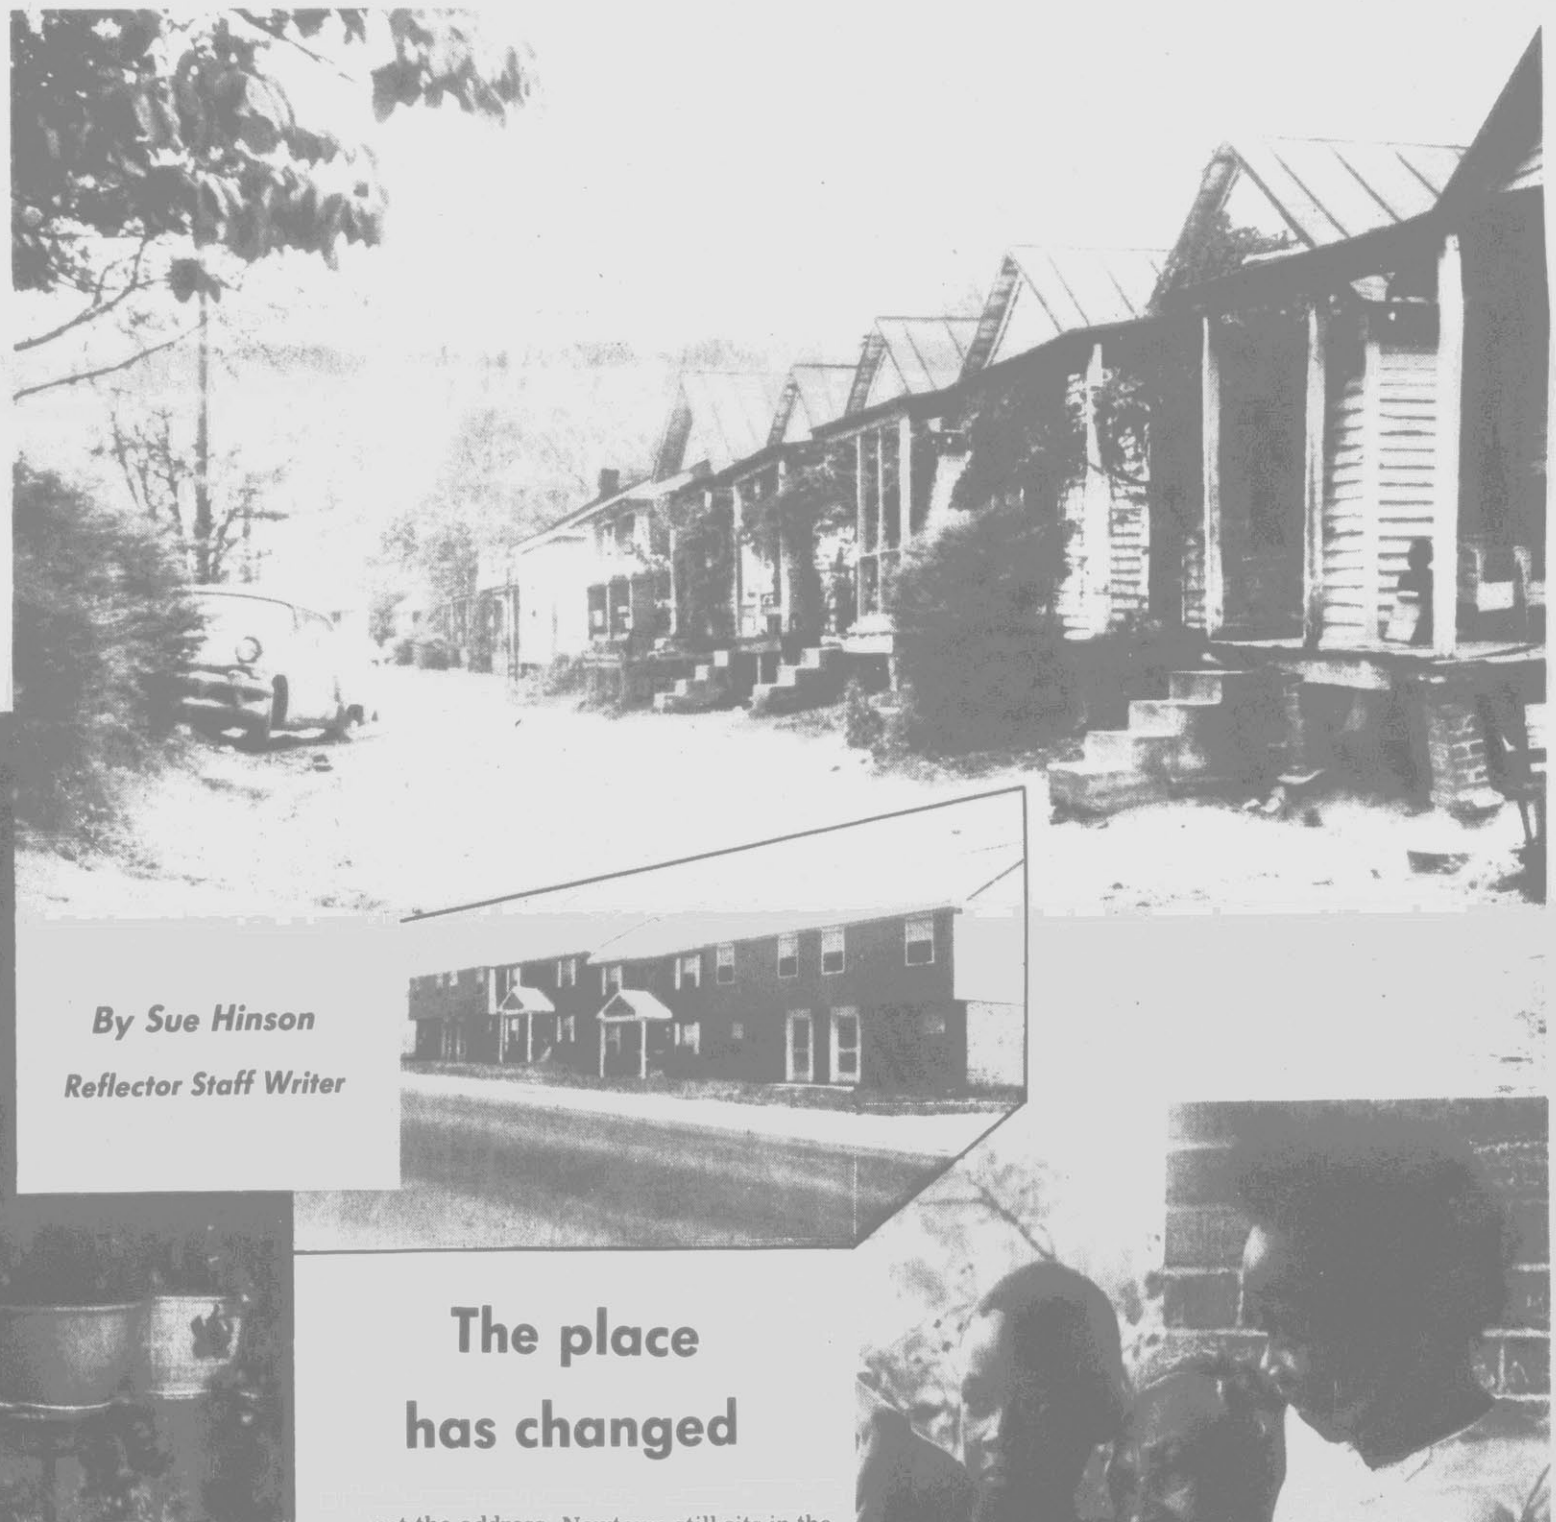

Plants are Goldie Dupree's passion. She likes to talk about them, but says she doesn't like to talk about or remember her past. "I like to let the bad things go by. I don't have to look back on bad things, but since I agreed to, I will."

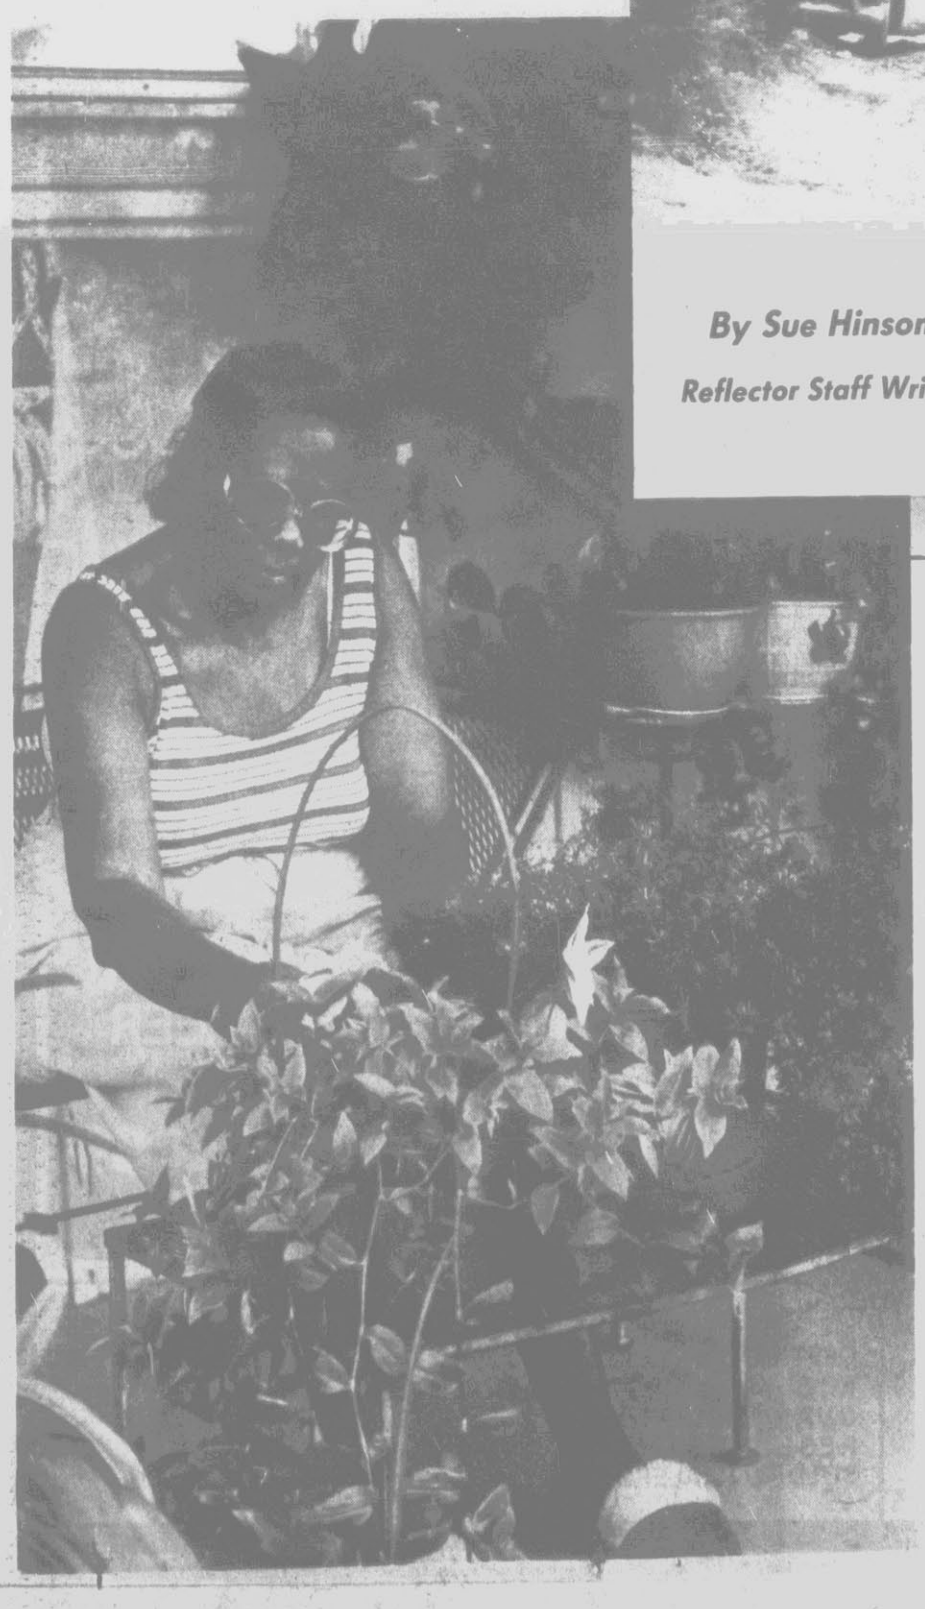

"When I lived in Newtown a long time ago, the houses were real low, that is they looked real bad, but it was like a big happy family. Whatever came up, we'd all pitch in and help. What was yours was mine."

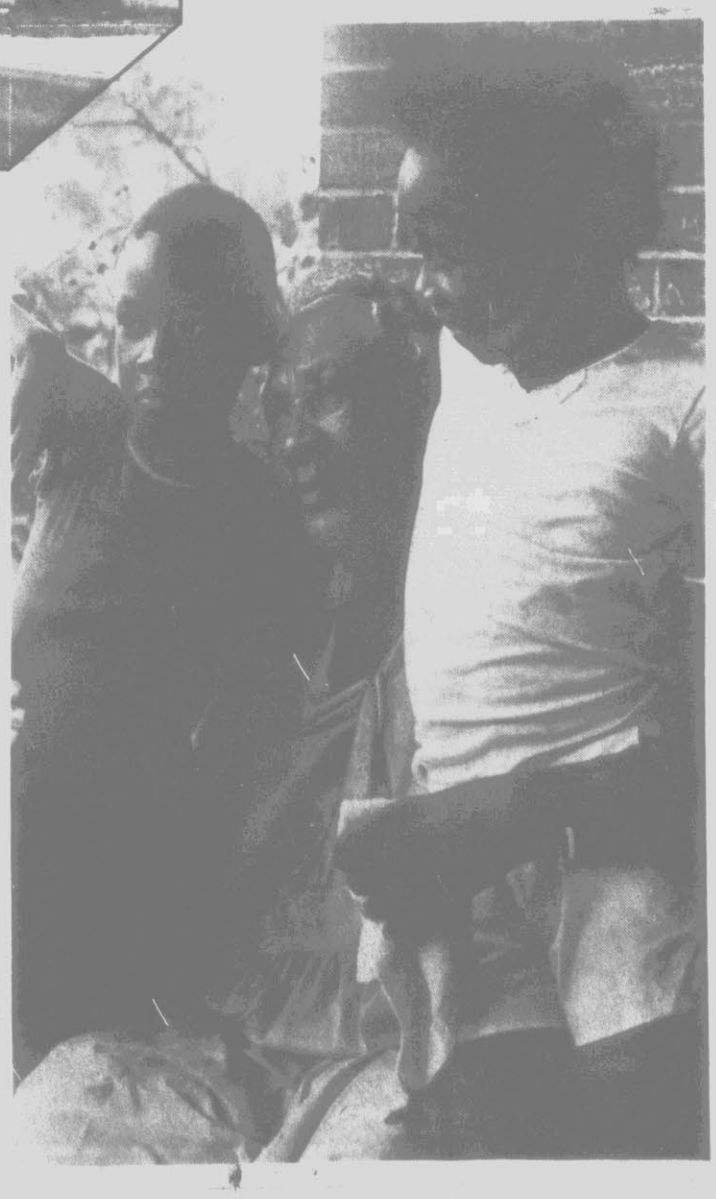

"Most of the houses there were straight-through, but some were storied houses like mine. I had three rooms upstairs and one room and a kitchen downstairs. We didn't have any indoor plumbing at first, but after a time, we got toilets on the outside. Oh yes, and we had back porches, I'd almost forgotten about that."

Yet, Mrs. Durpee says living conditions in Newtown weren't so bad. "It didn't bother me because that's the way it was and to tell you the truth, I really didn't want to move, not so far away that is, but I didn't have no other choice. The whole situation kind of hurt me, but I've grown used to living over here. I learned how to make myself satisfied about things I couldn't do nothing about.

"They did ask me if I wanted to move back to Newtown after it'd been fixed up, but by then I'd decided I liked where I was. Newtown did look a whole lot better than it did, though. It was like a whole new place.

The place has changed

... not the address. Newtown still sits in the south central section of Greenville on W. 14th Street. However, the quiet, country-like atmosphere has been replaced by paved roads and an improved level of housing as is illustrated by the above two pictures that were donated by the Greenville Housing Authority.

The styles of the younger people who now live in Newtown and other Authority housing projects have changed as well. For instance, Mrs. Washington (top right) says her grandchildren (lower right) engage in quite different leisure diversions than the children who grew up in old Newtown. Watching television and listening to the radio are but a few of the differences she listed. Mrs. Dupree (left) noted the dissimilarities as well, but added, like Mrs. Washington, that human nature never really changes, only the faces.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, AUGUST 26, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is splendid for deciding how to go after the greatest ambitions that impel you forward, so put on your thinking cap and come to a decision.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) In the morning, plan amusements for far into the future, but after lunch some obstacles may arise and later you gain benefits.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Home conditions can be pleasant in the morning, but later some gloomy conditions could set in if you love to argue, so keep quiet.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Problematical affairs at home can be solved wisely by being more cooperative with others. Don't criticize others after lunch.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Do whatever you please in the morning, but after lunch you have to study your financial affairs.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Contact those friends you want to see later in the week and set up appointments. First gain some cherished wish.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Meditation is wise in the morning to rid negative thoughts, and then you can carry through with what you believe in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good morning to be out and about, adding to prestige, taking exercise you need, etc. You can gain a favor from a friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Go to some place that is inspiring to you and can bring something important your way. Improve your public standing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into the silence for awhile in the morning and tune in intuitively to whatever is best for you to do today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get new week's monetary affairs well arranged in the morning. Then get out and make new and worthwhile acquaintances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A helpful partner gives you an opportunity to show your finest talent, so accept it graciously.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your surroundings and see how to make them more charming and valuable. Repaying some social debt to an associate is wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be capable of comprehending very large projects and enterprises and be very precocious early in life. Give an academic education for best results and wonderful things can be done by your fine progeny. Be very encouraging and supportive.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when you can get into the details of whatever plan of action you had planned for this week and start it right by an exact appraisal of the specifics that are to be performed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Work should be on the agenda today, whether at home, office, shop or whatever and thereby getting much done.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Early make the appointments necessary for entertainment you desire later. Being more thoughtful of your mate will bring appreciation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Keep promises to kin that were made over the weekend or plan how to improve home conditions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You are able to do whatever is of a constructive nature today so get busy early shopping, etc.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get the new week started wisely by handling monetary affairs extremely well and be sure to make collections and pay bills.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be concerned with your own wishes and amiable personal ambitions today and get what you most desire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study all those small tasks ahead of you and then handle them quickly and efficiently. They will soon be out of the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have some wishes that need practical handling in order to attain them, so put forth energy and do so.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Important you handle your job in such a way that higher-ups will be satisfied and pleased.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Adopt a new attitude in starting the new week and you can get far better results. Then you will comprehend issues better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sensible in handling any business affairs and get fine results. Also important that you keep all promises made on time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Have a long talk with partners with whom you want to get along better in the future, and get good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have much ability at such work that is connected with building, designing, technology, adding machines, etc. Teach early to study the motives behind any enterprise so that your progeny will not get caught in any unsavory enterprise innocently.

George Gaynes, Multi-Talented Performer

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Gaynes, who has performed with the New York City Opera, acted on Broadway and was the soap opera actor on the make for Dustin Hoffman in "Tootsie," has no trouble handling stardom in his 60s.

After "Tootsie," he scored as the marvelously dippy commandant in "Police Academy." Television took notice of the "new" comedy performer, and now he's starring in the new NBC sitcom, "Punky Brewster."

He is a big, robust man of 64 with sandy hair and a friendly face. He seems such a native American that it's a shock to learn he was born in Finland to a Dutch father and Russian mother.

"My parents divorced soon after I was born," he said in an interview. "I went with my mother to Paris, then she married an Englishman and I was raised by governesses for eight years. They divorced, my mother moved to Switzerland and I was a Swiss boy for seven years.

He was studying opera in Milan, Italy, when World War II broke out, interrupting his schooling. He joined the Dutch navy and then the British navy.

After combat in the Mediterranean, Gaynes served a year in the occupation force at bombed-out Emden in northern Germany, and then became manager of an opera company in Alsace. Gayne's soaring basso took him to Europe's major opera houses, then to the New York City Opera in 1949.

"Opera palls after a few years," he said. "The sets and costumes are tacky, the operas are not well directed, and they are insufficiently acted. I took a role on Broadway in Gian Carlo Menotti's 'The Consul,' and for several years I was the only performer commuting between opera and Broadway musicals, sometimes doing both at the same time."

Gaynes appeared in such shows as "Wonderful Town" (with Rosalind Russell) and "A Community of Two" (Claudete Colbert). He was in the movies, "PT 109" and "The Way We Were," and even played the malevolent Mr. Smith in the soaper "General Hospital."

But despite a seemingly successful career, there was a period when he could find only smalltime TV and theater jobs. A broker friend urged him to switch to a career in Wall Street. George decided to give it a try — until he learned "a good year" would produce $15,000.

"Hell, Allyn (his wife) and I could manage that much even in a bad year," he remarked. "I turned down the job offer and shortly afterward was hired to replace Don Porter in 'Any Wednesday.'"

George Gaynes might have continued as a solid character actor except for "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." The soap opera spoof made producers realize he was a superb comedy actor. "WKRP in Cincinnati" followed, then "Tootsie."

He approaches each role, no matter what size, with analysis of the total character. He saw the actor in "Tootsie" as a "very sincere, honest man who is convinced he is God's gift to women; he probably was in his earlier years, and that confidence remains with him."

Gaynes was also in Mel Brooks' "To Be or Not to Be," and Blake Edwards' just-completed "Mickey and Maude." He is amused that he was turned down for "The Neverending Story" because his face was too well known.

"You break your rear for years to be recognized," Gaynes smiled, "then you're rejected as 'too recognizable'!"

Scripts Serve As Sleeping Pills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock Hudson, who is making features again after a four-year absence, says he finds a useful purpose for the scripts that pour in.

"They're the best sleeping pill in the world," the actor said. "And if you can get into the story it doesn't happen until page 25."

Hudson, 58, who had quintuple bypass surgery in 1981, made his last film in 1980, "The Mirror Crack'd." He recently completed the movie, "The Ambassador."

"I would love to do a good play ... or a good film," he said. "I'd love to do a good miniseries ... Last year I didn't work for a year. That was OK. I like to work. I also like not to work. I like to bum around. I'm busier when I'm not working. Stuff to do around the house. Gardening."

Hudson, who said he feels "better than ever" since his operation, said he's giving himself "a breather. I'm storing up batteries again, till I can plunge in, plunge ahead."

Stamp News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The 1985 Scott Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue, Volume II, covering Afars and Issas to Funchal, is now off the presses. There are price revisions galore. Austria leads in such changes with 3,191. France is second with 2,506 and Albania third with 2,354. Many of these prices are downward, and that includes semi-postals. One of the brighter spots, an increase in prices, comes from Czechoslovakia. Volume II is priced at $20.

Volume I (United States, United Nations, British Commonwealth of Nations) was released last month. Volume III, covering Gabon to Oltre Giuba, is scheduled for the end of September, while Volume IV, Panama to Zambezia, is due In October.

The Bailiwick of Guernsey will soon issue the first part of a new definitive series which will feature views of Guernsey, Sark and Herm. The second part of the series is scheduled for next year.

The set depicts views of the island and provides a tourists' guide to the Bailiwick. One can see the High Street which remains traffic-free enabling shops to be patronized without worrying about the noise and frenzy of autos and trucks. There are fishing scenes and views of churches as well as illustrations of the countryside.

These stamps will be available at your local dealer.

The U.S. Stamp Collectors Society is making available a limited edition of silk screen cacheted covers marking the 1984 Republican Convention in Dallas. The covers will depict President and Mrs. Reagan and will contain the official USPS pictorial postmark honoring the event. The cost is $4.95 from USSCS, PO Box 480655, Los Angeles, CA 90048.

OK, you stamp trivia addicts. Here are some items concerning important dates in U.S. postal history. Samuel Osgood was appointed first Postmaster under the U.S. Constitution in 1789. Pre-payment of postage for U.S. mail was not compulsory until 1855. Post cards were first introduced in 1873. Special delivery service started in 1885. On July 20, 1969, the first postage stamp was cancelled on the moon by Apollo II astronaut Neil Armstrong.

Lawsuit Filed

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro couple has filed a $6 million lawsuit against the city of Greensboro and a police detective, claiming their son suffered serious brain damage after an unmarked police car hit him.

Mildred Ann and George Marks Twisdale filed the suit in Guilford Superior Court. The suit alleges that 7-year-old George Marks Jr. suffered head injuries and permanent brain damage and was unconscious for more than a month after he was struck Aug. 17, 1982, by a car driven by Greensboro detective Larry Eugene Davis.

Davis was on duty at the time when he reportedly struck the boy, then 5 years old, who was in the road near the boy's home at about 9:45 a.m., the suit says.

Engineering/Marketing

IBM has exceptional opportunities for top caliber professionals who would like a broader-scoped engineering role at technology's leading edge.

Are you:

- Marketing-oriented with excellent communications skills?
- A degreed Engineer (Mechanical, Electrical or Civil) with at least 3 years of experience (or, in lieu of degree, 5+ years of equivalent practical experience) in one or more of the following areas?
  - —CAD/CAM
  - —Engineering design/product development
  - —Industrial automation/robotics
  - —Finite element analysis/structural analysis
- Experienced in project management/project leadership?

If this outlines your talents, then IBM wants to hear from you!

IBM is an extensive user and major provider of computer-integrated solutions to support product design, engineering, and scientific applications. Your background in the above areas may qualify you to be a part of our expanding marketing effort which focuses on graphic design systems, CAD/CAM software, and scientific systems.

You will work with customers and IBM Marketing Representatives with responsibility for defining application requirements and marketing creative systems solutions in the engineering and scientific environment.

IBM offers fully commensurate compensation, extensive company benefits, and significant recognition for your contributions.

We have an opportunity for you to work out of our Greenville or Raleigh, North Carolina, office. To find out more about your excellent prospects, send your resume, in confidence, to: IBM Corporation, Engineering & Scientific Marketing, Dept. GR-826, P.O. Box 93994, Atlanta, GA 30318.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

Flip down the back seat of a Saab and you get 56.5 cubic feet of cargo space (53 in a 4-door model).
Now compare that to the 16 cubic feet you get in an Audi 5000. The 13.9 you get in a Volvo GLT Turbo. Even the posh 22.5 you get in a BMW 733i (and see how much good posh does you when you're packing up the summer house).
Of course, you can't flip down the back seat of any of these cars. So they might say Saab has an unfair advantage.
We couldn't agree more.

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENTS

Introducing Trooper II, Isuzu's First Convertible.

Meet Trooper II, a compact workhorse of a truck that converts to a 4X4 off-roader that converts to a roomy van that converts to a station wagon.

Its rugged, 4X4 construction is designed to handle off-road conditions, yet deliver a comfortable ride on the highway. Its 79 cubic feet of rear cargo space is the biggest in its class. And with an optional rear bench seat, it'll carry a family of 5 and still give you over 45 cubic feet of cargo space.

Whatever you ask of it, wherever you want it to go, Trooper II will perform, like a real trooper.

AUGUST GOLD — The partridge pea, along with goldenrod, are August flowers of a gold color now decorating roadsides in eastern North Carolina. A legume plant, it bears short-lived five-petaled flowers along the stem and often grows in masses that splash the landscape with their brilliance. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Thai Customs

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Suphat Teerapabsakulwong has been called a sex maniac and suspected of unorthodox labor practices. But the 40-year-old noodle seller maintains his is just one big, happy family which happens to include seven wives and 22 children living under a single roof.

During the day, they all take part in making his well-known ground pork balls to be sold with noodles — a "family factory" where no wages are paid that has raised some government eyebrows. At night, Suphat says he rotates among his wives, each of whom maintains a separate bedroom in his modest house outside Bangkok.

"I regard them as life partners, not sex objects," Suphat said in an interview. "No matter whether they get thinner, fatter, paler or darker, I always love them."

While not many in this rapidly modernizing nation are as open in discussing the purported joys of polygamy, hundreds of thousands of Thai males still practice the centuries-old custom of taking "mia noi," or "minor wives." They include senior government officials, army officers, business executives, truck drivers, janitors and even members of a growing, urban middle class which has replaced many other traditional practices with Western ways.

Minor wives are in fact very much a part of urban sub-culture. An automobile with heavily tinted windows — a foil to easy detection — is sometimes dubbed a "minor wife car," while the early afternoon movie showings are called "minor wives' shows" because a number of unemployed wives of wealthy husbands are said to frequent them after late morning sleep-ins. The foibles of man, wife and minor wife are frequent subjects of newspaper stories and television soap operas.

Following the 1932 revolution, when absolute monarchy was replaced by a constitutional one and a number of reforms were initiated, a law was passed whereby only one woman could be legally registered as a wife. But polygamy is not punished in Thailand's widely tolerant society and children of minor wives can be legalized and bear the father's name if he so wishes.

"This one-wife law is a Western import. Thai men traditionally have had freedom — let's keep it," notes one prominent literary figure, speaking at a Bangkok nightspot. "If I were a 'farang' (Caucasian) husband, would I be sitting here drinking? No, I'd be at home with my wife."

Polygamy and male dominance in Thailand has its roots in ancient Hindu and Chinese cultures. Thai monarchs and wealthy lords accumulated principal and minor wives as symbols of wealth, insurance for continuation of the line and often for use in political power moves. Rama V, Thailand's great 19th-century king, had 92 wives and 77 children and wrote tender love letters to a number of his favorites.

The institution has undergone considerable change since those days.

Dr. Debhanom Muangman, a leading academic and pioneer of sex research in Thailand, says modern-day husbands normally try to keep minor wives a secret from the legal wife. Some men, however, take minor wives openly and often when the principal wife begins to lose her youth.

Debhanom, dean of the public health faculty at Bangkok's Mahidol University, noted in an interview that wives of either stripe are becoming more independent economically, mobile — and jealous. Gone are the traditional strictures which kept jealousies within bounds and focused on unquestioned devotion of females to male.

Minor wives no longer serve a political function, but many young women — especially those who migrate to Bangkok from poor, upcountry areas — find being a minor wife is an economic anchor and sometimes a road to wealth and leisure. Somewhat incredibly, some men with incomes of $200 or less manage to maintain several wives although these will at times be employed and remit part of their wages to the husband.

A growing number of outspoken women are publicly saying that whatever merits the multiwife system may once have held, it has degenerated to a case of plain sexual gratification and male selfishness.

Debhanom, whose grandfather had eight wives but whose foreign-educated father was monogamous, has conducted some preliminary research to determine the prevalence of polygamy. Several years ago 1,000 Bangkok suburban wives were queried and 5 percent knew their husband had other wives while 10 percent were "very suspicious." Last year he found in a nationwide survey that among 4,640 youths between 13 and 20 years of age 8.7 percent could identify siblings from other than their own mother.

"Thai women are making their own way upward day by day," says Mrs. Temsiri Boonyasingh, a member of the prime minister's office and a respected social observer. "But minor wives? That has lasted a thousand years and won't change that easily."

Reattaching Arms, Legs Takes Time

By KURT J. REPANSHEK
Associated Press Writer

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Dr. David Labosky can tell in seconds whether the veins he's pieced back together will work, but it takes months after he reattaches human limbs before he knows whether the nerves have mended.

"You can tell right away if you've done it right," the surgeon says of the vein splicing, because the blood "either flows or it doesn't."

But nerves in an amputated limb regenerate at the rate of just one millimeter per day, so it can take months before improvement is noticeable, Labosky said.

Labosky and Dr. David Fogarty head West Virginia University Hospital's microvascular surgery teams that reattach hands, feet, legs and arms severed in accidents. In recent weeks the doctors reattached a Preston County man's arm that was cut off with a power saw and sewed a Cumberland, Md., woman's left ring finger back on.

Before Labosky, a 37-year-old orthopedic surgeon, came to WVU from the University of Pennsylvania in 1980, no one at the Morgantown hospital had the experience needed to perform such surgery.

Nine months after Labosky arrived, he was presented with one of the toughest cases he's had to handle. Five-year-old Dennis Courtney had lost his left arm when he walked into the path of a pickup truck.

"That was a toughie, because his arm was ripped off," Labosky recalled.

But the success of that operation and the ensuing publicity led more emergency medical service squads to begin taking special care of severed limbs, making more reattachments possible, he said.

"Back then, we were having trouble with people treating the amputated part properly," the surgeon said.

Doctors have approximately 6-10 hours in which to act if they are to have a chance of success, he said. If the detached limb is packed in ice while en route to the hospital the time is closer to 10 hours, Labosky said. If not, then it's closer to six, he said.

Another factor is which limb has been severed, the doctor said.

"If somebody cuts his arm off at the forearm, there is a lot of muscle in the forearm and that muscle will die quicker than any other tissue in the amputated part," Labosky said. "Because there aren't any muscles in the finger, there is considerably more leeway."

The surgical reattachment teams go into action as soon as the hospital's emergency room is notified that an amputee victim is en route.

In the emergency room, Labosky examines both the limb and the patient to determine whether reattachment is worth attempting.

"You have to describe to the patient just what you have to do," he said. The surgery, the lengthy hospitalization and the pain involved all are explained, Labosky said.

Patients also are told that the procedure is by no means guaranteed to work — there is always a chance that the muscle damage is too extensive. If the reattachment fails to "take," the limb must be surgically amputated later.

Labosky said he won't attempt reattachment if he sees too much muscle damage or is worried that dead tissue will send poisons into the patient's bloodstream.

"As a surgeon, you have to make a clinical judgment. You can't, just because the patient wants you to, endanger his life."

The surgeon also stresses that a reattached limb will never be "normal."

"For all practical purposes, if you cut something off and put it back on, it's not going to be normal," he said flatly. "Sometimes, you just have to tell the patient that you don't think it'd help to put the limb back on."

In the operating room, the doctors are assisted by microsurgical technicians and residents.Once the cleaning of both the amputated limb and the remaining stump is completed and the bones lined up, the team begins the painstaking task of matching and reconnecting nerves, veins, arteries, tendons and ligaments.

In some cases, the doctors must take muscles from other parts of the body to reconstruct those in the limb that have been destroyed, Labosky said.

Recovery periods are long, and there often are months of rehabilitation, but attempting reattachments usually is better than giving up in favor of a prosthesis, he said.

"Prostheses aren't as good, as a rule, as the part you can put back on," Labosky said.

In 1773, the Boston Tea Party was staged when American colonists, disguised as Indians, dumped 342 chests of tea from a British ship into Boston harbor in a protest of Royal taxes.

Anglo-Argentines Walk Tightrope

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — More than two years after the Falklands war, Anglo-Argentines continue to walk a narrow line between homeland and heritage.

"There is still some resentment against the English people," said Andres Kingston, in the clipped British accent inherited from his immigrant father. "There will be as long as there are Englishmen on the Malvinas."

The Malvinas, as the British-governed islands are known here, represent a dark side of the love-hate relatonship this South American nation has had with the United Kingdom for two centuries.

Anglo-Argentines say the animosity rarely is expressed directly but it is evident in sporadic, bitter demonstrations of anti-British sentiment.

The affection for British goods and tastes is equally apparent. Just as in London, a Harrods department store occupies the prime spot in Buenos Aires' poshest shopping distict and Argentines, traditionally fastidious about their attire, consider ownership of a Saville Row suit and a London Fog raincoat a crucial symbol of status.

The country is addicted to British-originated sports, boasting the world's best polo team and Latin America's only national field hockey team. Its most exclusive clubs bear names like Hurlingham, and the best language schools hire English teachers only if they have a British — not American — accent.

Yet in some extreme nationalist circles the British, who came here 100 years ago to run the railroads, the utilities and the profitable meat-packing plants, are still seen as foreign plunderers.

They recall bitterly the British military's failed attempts to seize Buenos Aires in 1806 and 1807, and its successful occupation of the windswept, barren Falklands Islands 250 miles off the southern coast in 1833.

An Argentine invasion force seized the islands on April 2, 1982, but was ejected by British troops 74 days later, ending a war that claimed the lives of 712 Argentine and 255 British fighters.

Even at the height of the conflict, anti-British sentiment did not translate into personal attacks on the 17,000 people of British nationality or the tens of thousands of Anglo-Argentines living in the country.

Nonetheless, the more strident and sensationalist of the capital's newspapers still refer to the British with only two words — pirates and assassins.

"I don't think it's nice, but it's best to ignore them," Kingston said. "I know what they say is not true."

Last April, on the second anniversary of the Falklands invasion, Kingston was forced to walk around an angry crowd gathered outside a downtown clocktower donated by British citizens of Buenos Aires in 1910 on the 100th anniversary of the country's independence. His office was a few blocks away, and he felt it was safer to skirt the crowd rather than walk through it on his way to work.

That night, the mob set fire to the tower, a replica of Big Ben, and toppled a nearby statue of Edward Canning, a 19th century British foreign secretary who lobbied for recognition of Argentine independence.

The flames in the red brick tower were put out before they caused too much damage. But the 10-foot statue of Canning was dragged down the streets and tossed into the murky River Plate, where it remains.

On the June anniversary of the Argentine surrender in the Falklands, some ex-combatants and nationalist politicians deposited a hog wrapped in a Union Jack at the London Bank. They chanted: "Pig, go to your dirty sty."

Anglo-Argentines point out that the demonstrations generally are poorly attended, and that those involved do not represent the great majority of their countrymen who bear no ill-will toward the British community in Argentina.

Nigel Thomas said he encounters virtually no aggression, even from strangers.

"I have an English surname and I use it everyday," he said. "People ask me if I'm English and I always say yes. There's no problem."

He, like most other Argentines, belives the country should persist in trying to regain sovereignty of the Falklands through peaceful negotiation.

"They are Argentine and I think one day they will be ours," he said.

He added, however, that the Falklands issue should not be a priority for the government, which he said should concentrate on the nation's severe economic problems. In negotiations with Britain for a restoration of relations severed during the war, Argentina has insisted the sovereignty question be the main negotiating point.

"The Falklands issue is something for the future," Thomas said. "If we don't fix up the economy, there won't be a future."

A Decade Later, Visitors Flock To Lindbergh's Grave

HANA, Hawaii (AP) — Near this remote Maui village, on a knoll overlooking the Pacific, the man who made the first non-stop solo flight across the Atlantic was buried a decade ago Sunday in the rich volcanic soil of a church cemetery.

Charles A. Lindbergh, "Lucky Lindy," was the toast of the world in 1927 when he flew the "Spirit of St. Louis" from New York to Paris.

And even today, 10 years after he died, his gravesite draws several hundred visitors a day. Waves boom off nearby cliffs. Tradewinds sift through two plum trees that shade the small granite marker.

"He was one of my heros when I grew up," said Greer Richardson of Memphis, Tenn., a recent visitor.

"There's no way we were going to come all the way to Hawaii and not see Lindbergh's grave. Lindbergh did it alone. He's an example for most of us who dream."

Lindbergh died on Aug. 26, 1974, of cancer, at age 72.

After his historic, 3,600-mile, 33 1/2-hour trip, Lindbergh shied away from publicity. But in 1932, his 1-year-old son was kidnapped and killed. Bruno Richard Hauptmann was executed for the crime.

Lindbergh always had a love for Hawaii. He and his friends helped restore a missionary chapel near the cemetery and he built an A-frame house in the jungle a mile away.

No formal remembrance service was planned for Sunday. But "we'll say prayers for Charles during our Sunday services," said Henry Kahula, a lay minister at Palapala Hoomau Congregational Church who presided at Lindbergh's burial.

Home Buyers May Have To Lower Goals

By JOHN CUNNIFF
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the more dismal prospects for young couples — and increasingly for singles too — is their belief that they cannot afford to buy a house or an apartment.

But no matter what the statistics say, that verdict need not always be accepted. It does, however, require one of the hardest decisions ever faced by anyone with dreams, and that is to lower the sights.

A lot of people seem to be doing it. A survey this year by the publication Multi-Housing News found that 27 percent of prospective buyers would accept space as small as 500 to 999 square feet, compared with 8 percent in 1983.

Small indeed when compared with the 1,500-square-foot average of homes newly built in the past few years. But as any wise real estate counselor will tell you, shrinking the size can bring the goal into affordable range.

The inability to buy has become one of the great cliches of the past couple of years, a period that constituted one of the greatest recoveries the housing industry has ever had, a period in which millions of houses were bought.

How then did the idea develop that most people couldn't afford a house?

—Because, to a great extent there is a problem when compared to the 1960s and early 1970s, a problem brought on by inflation, high interest rates, rising land costs and to some extent by increases in housing components and labor.

In the 1960s, the situation was almost reversed. Houses were selling at prices that almost almost everyone now agrees were spectacular bargains. The family with the median income could, with luck, buy the median priced house.

The 1980s don't offer such obvious bargains. Nevertheless, with effort, some can be found.

—The industry itself helped promote the idea, in part to convince Congress that affordability already was a serious enough problem and that real estate should be immune from any tax increases.

In June, the national median was $78,900 for new houses and $74,200 for existing or resale houses. Beyond the median family's income perhaps, but who said the median family must buy the median house?

By definition, 50 percent of the houses sold throughout the country in June were for prices below the stated figures. And in various geographic areas those prices were considerably lower.

In fact, median resale prices in Louisville and Detroit were below $50,000. And medians in Albany, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Tampa were under $60,000. That is, half the houses for sale were at prices less than those figures.

—A two-family or three-family house, the type that gave immigrants their first financial toehold in the United States, are sometimes scorned by their children, even though the rental income might make the house affordable.

—Many would-be buyers take to heart the old real estate maxim that location is everything. But it cannot be when you're a beggar. Lower prices can be found further from the city or in less desirable neighborhoods.

—While many people in their 20s and 30s find it difficult to accumulate enough money for the down payment, their parents are sitting on a pile of equity that can be transferred to them, perhaps to everyone's benefit.

—Most potential buyers continue to seek houses through conventional sources, that is, by going to a real estate agent and asking what is available. But things are changing. Auctions — with big savings — are becoming popular.

The Department of Housing and Urban Affairs, for example, expects to auction 32,000 single-family units this year. And one Chicago-based company, Sheldon F. Good & Co., has sold more than 5,000 houses by that method.

Here's The Answer

Q. — Our house has stucco on the lower part of it. It has been in good shape over the 20 years we have had the house, but now is starting to need repairs in various locations. We had expected to be able to patch the holes and slight gaps, but now have been told you must chip away the old material down to the lath and then build up sections in several layers. This would make it a major job. Did we have the wrong belief all along or is the information we got incorrect? If it turned out the major undertaking is necessary, is it something we could handle? We have had some experience in patching things like plaster walls, but never in extensive restuccoing.

A. — Both schools of thought are correct. It depends on how much repairing is required. If there are merely small cracks, holes and gaps, the repair work is similar to that of plaster and you can use patching plaster, spackling compound or one of the drywall joint compounds. If the openings are larger than a few inches and are numerous and widespread, you might conceivably be able to handle the repairs yourself, but the chances are the entire wall needs attention, in which case a professional will be needed.

Q. — We recently had flood conditions in our area and could not use the household water without boiling it. We were told this would kill any harmful bacteria and it probably did, but the water sure tasted flat and unpleasant. Since we live in an area where such conditions occur about twice a year, please give us some advice the next time we have to boil water. Isn't there something we can do to make it more platable?

A. — The longer boiled water stands without being used, the more chance there is the flat taste will disappear. But most of the time, we cannot wait for it to change taste. Try pouring it back and forth again and again between two clean containers before it is used. "Again and again" in this case means between 10 and 15 times, even more if necessary. Some people say the flat taste will go away if a little salt is added to the water. You will have to make your own decision if you are on a salt-free diet.

Q. — I soon will be using lacquer in a sprayer for the first time. How much lacquer thinner should be used with it?

A. — Experiment, but it's usually between 25 and 35 percent. If the lacquer is being used as a sealer, use the higher amount of thinner.

(The techniques of using lacquer, varnish, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. — I expect to do a job soon with hardboard, which I have never used before. I understand tempered hardboard is harder than untempered, but are there any other differences? What is each type used for and which costs more?

A. — Tempered hardboard is more moisture-resistant than the untempered type and costs more. Because of this moisture-resistance quality, it is generally used where there might be high humidity, as in the kitchen and bathroom or an outdoor structure. The untempered kind is used for most other purposes. Both types can be painted, although you can buy hardboard which has been painted at the factory. Other varieties also are available, including many kinds of plastic-faced hardboard. Possibly the most familiar type of hardboard is peg-board, which has hundreds of holes in it for the placement of metal pegs on which tools and other items are hung.

No. 26900 - Erie

Redwood-Sheathed, Passive Solar

by Jerry Bishop

The Erie, a two-story, south facing wood and glass house, was designed for passive solar heating, and it also can, because of the slope of its roof and its plumbing system, be fitted with active roof collectors for the preheating of domestic hot water as well. A two-story, glass-walled entry captures the sun's heat, which it will radiate to adjacent rooms. The solar entry, which might become a greenhouse, leads into the Great Room or den. The Great Room, over 24 feet long, separates the kitchen on the left from a master suite on the right.

The kitchen of the Erie is designed to act as the informal hub with its U-plan work area open to a breakfast area. On the upper level, there are two large bedrooms, a compartmented bathroom, and a loft over the master bedroom.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A special high-performance insulating glass.

Manufacturer's claim — That this glass prevents 80 percent of the sun's ultra-violet rays from entering the house, reducing the fading of upholstery, carpeting and drapes ... that the glass consists of a micro-thin metallic coating applied to the inside surfaces of the inside pane ... that the coating is transparent and is coated to the glass, so there is nothing to install, operate or clean ... that the coating will not roll up, crack or wrinkle ... that the special glazing admits most of the warming rays of the sun in cold weather, yet blocks the loss of interior radiant heat generated by the sun ... and that the glazing is one-third lighter than triple-pane insulating glass, making the windows easier to handle, install and operate.

THE PRODUCT — A utility knife that enables the user to change blades without using a screwdriver to open the knife cases.

Manufacturer's claim — That the two sides of a swivel-lock knife are held together with a button lock at the base of the handle and a swivel rivet at the center ... that the side of the case can be swung open to remove the blade by depressing a button ... that when the replacement blade is securely seated, depressing the opposite end of the button locks the case ... and that the sides of the case also interlock at the front to hold the blade firmly in place.

Manufacturer's claim — That its technological advances enable the gun to heat up for use in three minutes and operate on only 20 watts ... that the hot melt glue sets up in about 60 seconds ... that a long-stroke trigger design assures instant and precise glue output ... and that a wide-stance built-in safety stand folds up when not in use and frees both hands of the user.

THE PRODUCT — Micro-thin blinds.

Manufacturer's claim — That these blinds are made with individual slats that measure half the size of a mini-blind slat ... that the aesthetic appeal of these blinds is heightened by a compact one-inch headrail, a standard valance and completely color-coordinated components ... that the contributions to superior performance include more support ladders, a cord separator to keep cords from tangling, a cord equalizer to assure level lifting and plastic grommets in the headrail to prevent textile wear ... and that the aluminum slats feature a high quality polyester painted surface.

Garden Clinic

Q. What is a good method to collect and save tomato seeds? (R.S., Dysartsville)

A. Allow the fruit to become overly ripe on the vine. Cut the fruit open and scrape the seeds and jelly-like material onto newspaper to dry in the sun. Most vegetable seeds will remain viable from two to five years when stored in airtight cans or jars under cool, dry conditions in the refrigerator. All seeds should be as dry as possible before going into storage.

Q. Is it safe to buy pansy plants and set them out in the fall or should I wait until spring to buy and plant them? (B.M., Edneyville)

A. Go ahead and purchase and plant pansies in the fall. Pansies are hardy, and planting in the fall allows the roots more time to become established before spring. Also, depending on the weather, you will have a few blossoms all winter.

Q. What is the name of the bug that puts his bill in peas and snap beans that leaves black specks? Is there a spray or dust to control him? When or at what growth stage do you spray your plants for control? (M.W., Wallace)

A. You may be talking about at least two insects or groups of insects. On peas, the cowpea curculio causes feeding scars which result in black spots. Usually in 25 percent of the scars an egg is laid. The result is a legless grub inside the pea. Stinkbugs also probe into developing peas or beans. This results in a small black spot and a deformed pea or bean pod. A groups of beetles (Japanese beetles, beanleaf beetles and Mexican bean beetles) also feed on pods. Their feeding result in large scars. Cowpea curculio is most active in late summer. Rotation is advised. Sprays of Thiodan at first bloom and at five day intervals for a total of three sprays provide control. Stinkbugs are present from blooming through harvest. Again, Thiodan is effective. Malathion may be used instead. For the other beetles, either Thiodan, Sevin or Malathion may be used. Read and follow all label directions when applying any pesticide. Two diseases that can cause black spots on beans are bacterial blights and anthracnose. Contact your county agricultural extension agent for additional help and information.

Garden Contest Draws 487 Entries

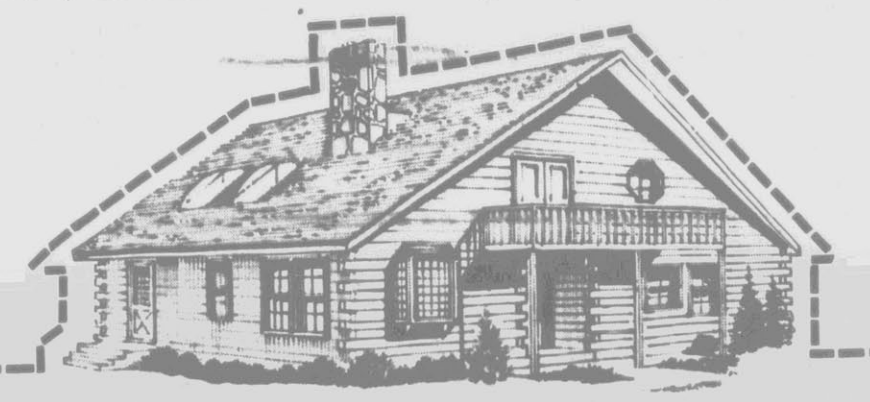

NEW YORK (AP) — A total of 487 gardens have been entered in the first national community gardening contest co-sponsored by the American Community Gardening Association and GLAD Wrap and bags. The total was 100 percent more than initially projected.

Entries came from 40 states, including Alaska and Hawaii.

Unique gardens reported entered included a Chinese senior citizens' garden in San Francisco; a Hawaiian tropical vegetable garden in Honolulu; a rehabilitation therapy garden in Oceanside, Calif.; a churchyard garden in Topeka, Kansas; a Hmong People's Garden (Hmongs are from Laos and Thailand), located at a Milwaukee, Wis., television station; a one-acre garden that grows assorted vegetables used for a non-profit soup kitchen in New Haven, Conn.

The program is designed to focus attention on the important trend to community gardening, recognize accomplishments of community gardeners nationwide, and encourage their efforts. More than $20,000 in cash prizes will be awarded. The winner will be announced in October.

Reagan Uses Humor, Victories To Push Ahead

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

DALLAS (AP) — Ronald Wilson Reagan, at 73, is a president whose style and popularity register even with his political foes — and he has plenty of those.

They call him amiable and charming even as they denounce his policies and struggle against the odds to deny him a second term in the White House.

A program of tax cuts and spending cuts was the keynote of Reagan's first term, and the president is campaigning now as the architect of economic recovery. Democrats call his program unfair, say it took from the poor to give to the rich, and contend the economic upturn came despite Reagan, not because of his supply side theology.

But the economy is surging, and Reagan is seeking re-election in boom times, witness the government announcement that the economic growth rate this campaign year may be the strongest since the late 1940s.

That was done at the price of a ballooning federal deficit, and drastic cuts in social spending — and 12 million unemployed at the peak, back to 7 million now — that have the Democrats calling it a rich man's recovery.

Reagan calls that "falsehood and fiction," arguing as he has from the beginning that the Democrats stand only for the failed policies of the past.

"The truth is, what we have done was done to help all the people," the president said in a pre-nomination campaign swing to Decatur, Ill.

On Wednesday night, the oldest man ever to serve as president, will be nominated for four years more, in a Dallas convention sendoff to a campaign against exasperated challengers who call his the Teflon presidency because, they complain, criticism just won't stick.

Reagan's pollster, Richard Wirthlin, explains the Reagan touch this way: "His use of humor, the fact that he likes people and is such a warm personality — thanks to television, primarily ... and secondly, his successes.

"Americans don't expect a president to turn the world upside down, but they do expect that he deal effectively with at least one or two key things that affect their lives," he said. "With this president, it's been reducing inflation and the size of government, and enhancing our defense."

Reagan's first term has been a mix of success and failure, at home and abroad.

On the economic front, he oversaw the end of double-digit inflation, at the expense of double-digit unemployment and the worst recession since World War II. His sharp tax cuts are credited with helping trigger the strong recovery from that recession, but they contributed to record deficits that have turned to dust his promise of balancing the budget.

And Reagan's low points include the loss of 265 American military men in a policy quagmire in Lebanon, and the icy state of U.S.-Soviet relations. He is the first president in the nuclear age not to achieve a strategic arms agreement with Moscow.

One of his severest Democratic critics, House Speaker Tip O'Neill, has said Reagan must have "ice water in his veins" for cutting social programs, while harshly criticizing enormous military spending increases that have helped propel the federal deficit to huge records.

As part of the so-far unsuccessful effort to rein in a deluge of federal red ink, Reagan has urged and Congress has agreed to a broad range of cuts in the government's social spending over the past 3½ years. In some cases the actions eliminated whole programs, such as legal services for the needy, while tightening the requirements for aid from other sources such as welfare and food stamp programs.

Throughout his tenure, Reagan's approval rating in polls has averaged about 53 percent, unusually high.

Just two months after his inauguration, on March 30, 1981, his presidency and his life were threatened when he was shot in the chest by John W. Hinckley Jr. "Honey, I forgot to duck," he told his wife at the hospital.

The incident further bolstered his approval ratings — he recovered quickly from his wounds and won admiration from those who had feared he was too old for the job.

On a personal level, Reagan has been dubbed "the Great Communicator" because he delivers a speech with an actor's assurance. He is known for his self-confident optimism.

His aides believe his style — the quick quip, even as he lay in a hospital bed — helps explain why people seem willing to forgive him his miscues.

They have been many, and well publicized:

The time he fell asleep during remarks by Pope John Paul II.

The time he referred to Liberian leader Samuel K. Doe as "Chairman Moe."

The time he visited Brazil but toasted "the people of Bolivia."

The time he didn't seem to recognize Samuel Pierce, his secretary of housing and urban development, and greeted him with "Hello, Mr. Mayor."

The time he muffed the name of boxer Sugar Ray Leonard, referring to "Sugar Ray and Mrs. Ray."

The time, most recently, when he joked that he had signed legislation outlawing the Soviet Union and said, "The bombing begins in five minutes."

And critics have made careers of correcting his inaccurate statements and anecdotes; one book was titled, "Ronald Reagan's Reign of Errors."

Furthermore, Reagan's style of running the presidency as sort of a glorified chairman of the board has been so nonchalant that detractors have called him "disengaged."

As evidence, they cite his lack of interest in details, his frequent vacations at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., and the decision by aides in 1981 to let him sleep rather than alert him to a U.S.-Libya aerial dogfight over the Gulf of Sidra in which two Libyan jetfighters were downed.

But, as the Democrats say, ridicule and criticism rarely cling to Reagan.

Part of this, reporters say, is that Reagan's aides so successfully isolate him that the media cannot scrutinize his presidency as they have done in past administrations.

Sam Donaldson, the ABC White House correspondent, lamented in The Los Angeles Times this week "the many layers between Ronald Reagan and the press" that keep reporters from first-hand contact and from questioning the president on tough issues of the day.

Press conferences allow some contact and questioning, but Reagan has held only five this year.

"Covering the president now is like being a drama critic — we see less than the public thinks because not everyone who covers the White House levels with the public about how little they see," Steven Weisman of The New York Times told the Los Angeles newspaper.

During Reagan's recent vacation at his ranch, for example, reporters filed stories every day — based on press handouts. Reagan was 25 miles away and only occasionally available to media pools. Each Saturday, the reporters heard the president's weekly radio address — from a tape recorder set up in their hotel press room.

His advisers clearly prefer it that way.

"People compare what he does as human things they would do," said Edward J. Rollins, director of Reagan-Bush '84. "He's not analyzed or second-guessed in the sense of other presidents."

Rollins believes Reagan is viewed as the first successful president in a long time because his four predecessors were all ultimately rejected in some way and could be judged as failures.

Vietnam drove Lyndon Johnson from office. Watergate caused Richard Nixon's downfall. Gerald Ford lost after pardoning Nixon, and Jimmy Carter was defeated by Reagan — and the Ayatollah Khomeini.

"Ronald Reagan is the man who has made the presidency work, whether you agree with his policies or don't," Rollins said.

Actress Shirley MacLaine, who describes herself as "a liberal democratic socialist," thinks she understands the key to Reagan's popular success.

"You can disagree with him all you want, but let's face it, the man is playing the role of his life, with his ideology as his screenplay," she said in a recent interview in Playboy magazine.

"The public knows he's having a good time being president. I think it's real. ... I think that if you do anything sincerely, you're going to succeed. That's the secret of Ronald Reagan."

Lyn Nofziger, a longtime Reagan ally who now works as a consultant to the re-election campaign, says he believes Reagan's leadership style has polarized the country the same way Franklin Delano Roosevelt did: people either love him or hate him.

"And I think in both cases it's the leadership factor, the fact that each of these men has set the country off on a different path from which it was going before they took office," said Nofziger.

Reagan's popularity is also linked, surely, to his success in doing what he set out to do.

He cut federal income tax rates, as he promised, although not quite as much as he had hoped. He saw the inflation rate drop from double digits to its current annual rate of 4.1 percent. And he dramatically increased military spending.

In general, aides believe, Reagan has changed the course of the federal government by trying to reduce, rather than enhance, its role.

One goal defies him — his failure to deliver on his promise to balance the federal budget. The resulting $174.3 billion deficit is becoming one of the political year's biggest issues.

Mondale says he will raise taxes to cope with the deficit and asserts Reagan will, too, though he won't say so before the election.

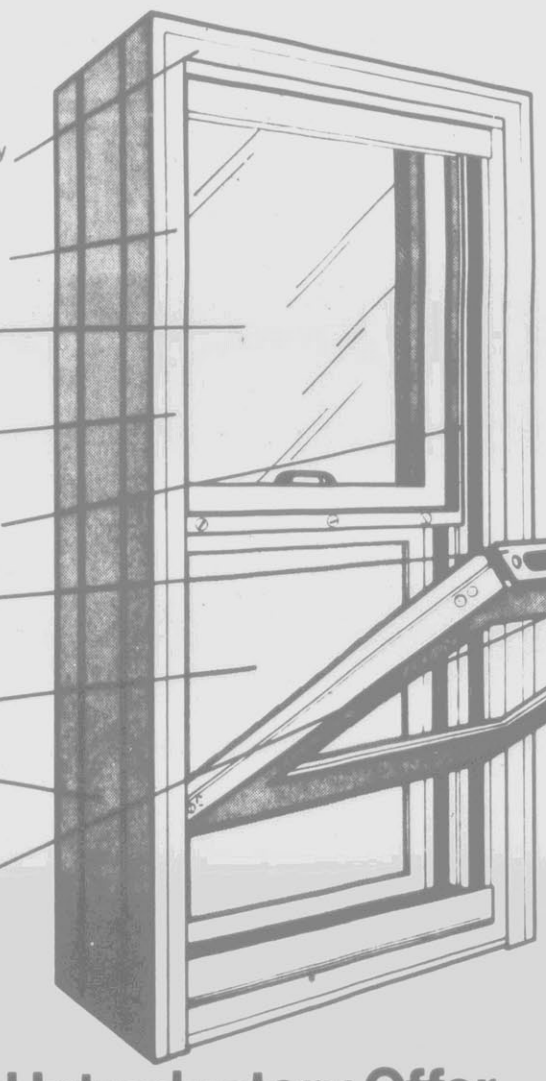

After several weeks of giving various responses, Reagan now says he'll raise taxes only as a last resort.

Although he's had his share of setbacks throughout his life, there is little Reagan has tried that he actually failed at.

At Eureka College in Illinois, Reagan was student body president, captain of the swimming team and a football player. He jokes that he spent so little time studying that his diploma was honorary.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BARBER-TURNED-DOCTOR SET HURTFUL HAIRLINE FRACTURES.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Refugees Return

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Ugandan refugees who fled to Zaire in the final days of dictator Idi Amin's rule have begun returning home again under a United Nations repatriation program that was halted for seven weeks.

The program had been stopped after Haji Jabiri, a chief from Amin's Kakwa tribe, was killed when he returned to Uganda's West Nile region, 156 miles northwest of Kampala, capital of this East African nation.

Polo: A Game For The Six-Pack Set As Well As Fun For The Idle Rich

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

DARLINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Polo may be the game of playboy princes and the idle rich galloping across a manicured field while their ladies on the sidelines nibble caviar and sip champagne from fine crystal.

But the six-pack set is also getting in its licks these days.

On a dusty field in western Pennsylvania, blue-collar workers have been enjoying the sport for nearly five decades. Here it's a tailgate party from the back of pickup trucks and coolers of Iron City Beer.

"This is grass-roots polo," says Hiram Ball, who is taking lessons to play at Darlington, a hamlet of 300 homes and an unlikely hot spot for an elitist pastime.

Polo emerged here in 1937 when local horsemen got a souvenir ball, set up gasoline drums for goalposts and made mallets from broom handles. Lights were added a few years later, and a plaque proclaims the site as the country's first lighted polo field.

The 1984 team includes an asphalt spreader, two blacksmiths, a school teacher, a construction worker and an 11-year-old rookie. Players line the field with lime, water it to keep down the dust, cut the grass, bale their own hay and do other mundane chores.

Every Friday from May through August, they ride on a field surrounded by barns, bleachers, a refreshment stand and two outhouses. But when they cross mallets with other teams in the Penn-Ohio League, the rivalry equals that of patrician clubs in Palm Beach or Boca Raton.

"You don't have to be flat rich to play the game," says Mark Powers, 25, a blacksmith at a West Virginia thoroughbred track who has played polo for 13 years.

Polo, played by the Persians in the first century and brought to this country from England in 1875, is making a national comeback after nearly dying after World War II, according to the United States Polo Association.

Founded in 1890, the USPA now has 190 clubs and 2,300 registered members, although unregistered players push the number of competitors to more than 3,000. Membership has grown 60 percent since 1982. There were only 614 members in 1950.

Today's numbers rival the golden era of the 1930s, when the U.S. Army still trained its cavalry to play polo.

"There is a big surge of polo enthusiasm," says Louanne Koop, executive secretary of the USPA, which is based in Oak Brook, Ill.

Polo is sort of a hockey game on horseback. Daredevil riders, some of whom wear facemasks on their helmets, whack a rolling ball from the back of a thundering charger, ride other players off the ball or hook an opponent's mallet to block a shot.

Polo still has a preppy image — emblems adorn designer clothes, chic colognes and wine bottles — but its appeal is broadening.

"A lot of people feel that it's a rich man's sport, that it belongs to the elite," Miss Koop says. "It's going away from that image now. It was a very closed circle before. It's a lot more diversified now. I would say most polo players are beer drinkers."

It still takes wherewithal, however. A raw beginner can shell out $40,000 for horses, truck, trailer, mallets, saddles and tack.

At Darlington, matches are reminiscent of sandlot baseball. Adult spectators are charged $2 to help pay the electric bill.

"We play because we have a good time," says Glenn Watterson, 37, the owner of a paving company whose horse farm adjoins the field. "The richer clubs like to play us because we don't have any snobs."

On a recent game day, Watterson rolled 52 tons of asphalt before climbing out of his grader and hopping into the saddle to play six chukkers (periods) of polo. His paving equipment helps keep the field in shape.

Watterson's 11-year-old son plays for Darlington, as did his father, uncle and brother. The game is not for wimps, he emphasizes.

"People think it's a gentle, easy game," Wattersons says. "It's a contact sport like football. You can get run over by a 1,000-pound horse. You can get bumped, bruised and elbowed. Polo used to be cowboys on quarterhorses. Now it's athletes on thoroughbreds."

GOREN BRIDGE

THE TALE OF THE SEVEN OF CLUBS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series, we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ K Q 8 4 ♡ Q 9 2 ◇ 6 3 ♣ K Q 9 8
WEST ♠ A 7 ♡ J 6 5 ◇ 10 8 7 5 4 2 ♣ 5 2		EAST ♠ 10 9 6 5 3 2 ♡ 10 ◇ J 9 ♣ A J 10 4
	SOUTH ♠ J ♡ A K 8 7 4 3 ◇ A K Q ♣ 7 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

The Seven of Clubs was in a bellicose mood. "All these stories that you have been telling in the column, glorifying cards for puny deeds," he said argumentatively. "If you really want to have something to write about, there was the time my owner won three tricks in my suit and I was the highest of the three winners!

"It was during a major team championship, and I was being caressed by a tall, lovely blonde who soon found herself in a small slam in hearts on the auction shown. Now you might complain about players bidding a slam off two aching aces, but remember the words of the famous internationalist who said: 'The only good slams are those that make.'

"West led a low diamond and my fair lady was not at all abashed by the contract. She realized her only hope was to find each defender with only one ace, and that neither would realize the true position.

"She won the ace of hearts and immediately led the jack of spades. West won the ace and had no idea as to what was going on. It seemed safe to return a diamond. Declarer won and started running her red-suit winners, bringing the hand to this position:

	♠ K Q 8 ♡ - ◇ - ♣ K
♠ 7 ♡ - ◇ 10 ♣ 5 2		♠ 10 9 6 ♡ - ◇ - ♣ A
	♠ - ♡ - ◇ Q ♣ 7 6 3

"For some unknown reason, West had clung tenaciously to the seven of spades. When declarer now cashed the queen of diamonds, discarding dummy's king of clubs, East was convinced that declarer had the last spade and that, if he sluffed a spade, dummy would score the last three tricks. So East bravely parted with the ace of clubs.

"My lady's pseudo-squeeze had succeeded. She cashed me and my younger sister, the Six of Clubs, to pick up the two outstanding cards in the suit. Young Trey became the fulfilling trick!"

Send any questions for this column to Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Complete Bridge," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged to be the best received.

SEA SNAKE

BALBOA, Panama (AP) — The yellow-belly sea snake possesses the most poisonous venom of any deadly creature and is also the most widespread snake in the world, according to scientists at a research institute here.

The yellow-belly is the only sea snake species that ventures out into the open sea, swimming from the Indian Ocean to the Pacific Ocean on warm currents and feeding on small fish.

Since it is not found in the Atlantic Ocean, scientists speculate that it is descended from Asian cobras and Australian tiger snakes. They think it has arrived in the western Pacific only in the last few million years, making it a recent evolutionary phenomenon.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

BARNEVELD, Wis. (AP) — All they found of the Catholic church was the tabernacle.

For Barneveld, born again, has learned what it may have only suspected. The village was not the community center, the two feed mills, Ron Jabs' store, the new pickup, the dinette set, the heirloom silver, all gone now. It was something intangible, something down deep, safe from the malevolent wind.

On first glance, the towns and hamlets of south-central Wisconsin are differentiated only by the names of their lollipop water towers. But the 607 people of Barneveld (the village was named by a railroad surveyor after his home town in Holland) may have been a cut apart. Half of them grew up here.

They chose, although it cost them through the nose in taxes, to keep their own K through 12 school instead of consolidating like everyone else. It was the only town in the area with a library. It had the first sewers in the area, a new $363,000 municipal-community center and a crack ambulance squad.

Luckily, the ambulance was delivering a patient to Madison at 12:50 a.m. last June 8. Those who were up watching Johnny Carson saw a tornado watch flashing across the bottom of the TV screen. But it was raining so hard radar could not track a writhing black column that had spawned near Dubuque and was heading at 35 miles an hour on a line northeast toward Green Bay.

Barneveld, located on a ridge above the dairyland plain, was on that line. The funnel at times was a quarter mile wide. Winds inside it were possibly over 300 mph. Lightning flashed constantly within it. It looked "like a giant neon tube," said one witness. It sounded, said another, "as if all the planes of the U.S. Air Force were diving right at your head."

Richard Ehlert, the town constable, was due to fly to San Francisco later in the day. With the anticipation, and the storm, he couldn't sleep. So he got up and dressed about the time a lightning bolt blew out the town's transformer. It was a lucky strike. There were no hot wires when the tornado minutes later ruptured scores of propane tanks.

The winds demolished 80 homes, 30 businesses, damaged 22 homes beyond repair and left 98 livable. The water tower was left standing. Barneveld was more than three-quarters destroyed — $9.8 million in damage of an assessed valuation of $10.5 million. That was wood and brick Barneveld. But the roots held.

Moments after the blow Ehlert got his walkie-talkie to call for help "from anybody, anywhere." He thought transmission would be better outside. Then he realized he was outside. His home had been blown away around him.

Neighbors began calling in the darkness to neighbors. The ambulance, alerted by Ehlert's call, pulled into town. So did a passing car whose four tires immediately went flat. The driver told Ehlert the town should clean its streets better. Then he saw.

Rescuers followed the screams carried on a light, rainless breeze. Bill Carden, one of the ambulance crew, said: "Everybody I found I knew." One was Bruce Simon, 32. Near him in a field lay the bodies of his wife, Jill, and daughter Cassandra, 8. Their son, Trevor, 2, survived although he was gravely injured.

At daylight Don Frame drove in a milk cooler filled with fresh water from his dairy equipment company in neighboring Blue Mounds. He changed the drinking water every day for the next month.

Betsy Thronson, a farm wife and mother of five, came into town the same day to offer help. The Red Cross, already on the scene, asked if she could run mess care.

She's been running the kitchen in the undamaged garage ever since. At the peak she had 2,500 for lunch. By the end of July it was down to about 150 townspeople for breakfast and dinner, about twice that for lunch. The food and Betty Thronson's time are all donated.

Wes Headings, who lives in Moscoda about 50 miles away, also came to Barneveld that first day. Headings, 29, is a Mennonite. His church runs the nationwide Mennonite Disaster Service. Be it tornado, earthquake, flood or a hurricane you will find Mennonite volunteers. There have been over 1,000 so far in Barneveld, 370 on one day alone, following the Biblical injunction to love your neighbor as yourself.

Headings' Mennonites have helped build homes and barns for those who had no insurance — 97 per cent of the people had at least some coverage.

"What brought you here?" asked a townsman of some straw-hatted Mennonites from the Dakotas, expecting a spiritual explanation. "I-90," they replied, and set to work.

The Wisconsin State Journal in Madison started a fund. So far it has raised $275,000. Land's End, a mail-order clothing company in nearby Dodgeville, put up $20,000 and challenged other firms to match it. That has brought in $130,000.

Pat Messinger, the village clerk, says $535,000 has been donated by private citizens from all over the country so far. Money is still coming in at about $500 a day.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has said it will pay $6.5 million towards uninsured losses. A televised news conference was held at which FEMA delivered — a letter of intent.

The catch is that the government won't pay until Pat Messinger can prove that the work has been done. That means contractors have to work on credit. A volunteer crew with trucks and a front-end loader came in one weekend expecting to be compensated for their gas, which came to $500. The town had to foot the bill.

"I bet we're going to have to borrow $100,000 at 8½ per cent while we wait for FEMA," says Pat Messinger. "If it hadn't been for the people who gave $10 and $20, we'd be in sad shape. It hasn't been government money at all."

"Our neighbor lady has really failed," says the Rev. Robert Twilton, whose Lutheran church was destroyed. "She's 84 and lived here 74 years. Everytime she goes uptown she grieves. I'm thinking some of our older people are dislocated and won't survive. And the kids. They'll always live with a fear of storms. A lot of people can't sleep."

Yet no one has left, except a family or two and the renters who have no place to stay. Some live in emergency trailers. Some have rebuilt.

"Of the 599 survivors, 595 will make their way back one way or another," says Ron Jabs, 41, whose wife is reopening their store in a trailer until they can raise $400,000 to reopen permanently.

By Saturday afternoon, less than two days after the tornado, banker Ted Arneson had moved in a mobile trailer unit from Rockford, Ill.

"I got an IBM this from somewhere and an NCR that from somewhere else. What else was I going to do? I have a $15 million bank and wonderful customers. I couldn't NOT open on Monday."

Postmistress Marie Dimpfli reopened for business in her garage. She and her assistant, May Ann Meyers, made slots from memory of their 358 old customers.

Dan Woll, school administrator, insisted two days after the tornado classes would open in September on schedule. It looks like he'll make it, give or take a week or two.

The June tornado demolished the library. A July 9 storm flattened its new beginnings. Work recommenced the next day.

Four new fire engines are on order to replace the four that were crushed. Some units will be added to the old folks home. The Farmers Home Administration is going ahead with pre-tornado plans to finance 10 build-it-yourself homes. Pat Messinger has issued 30 building permits. Some houses are already up. Rowena Kirschbaum is rebuilding and welcomes "the chance to redo the mistakes in the first home."

Betsy Thronson figures she'll get back to her own kitchen around the end of August. Wes Headings hopes to go somewhere about the same time "where there aren't any phones.

Student Protest

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Police used tear gas and fired shots into the air to break up a crowd of stone-throwing students protesting increases in textbook prices and bus fares.

Police said an undetermined number of students and policemen were slightly injured by stones in the scuffle Wednesday, and several demonstrators were arrested.

The disturbances, just outside the campus of the Autonomous University of Santo Domingo, forced cancellation of classes, according to Chancellor Fernando Sanchez Martinez. The university has an enrollment of 74,000 students.

TV Independents Try New Strategies

All-day music-video TV stations are now proliferating. At least half a dozen full-power TV stations, including WLXI-TV in Greensboro, N.C. and WVEU-TV in Atlanta, have started or are planning to start broadcasting a full day of music-video programming. By programming videos all day, these UHF stations may offer a challenge to MTV, the cable music-video channel, which still reaches only 26 percent of all TV homes.

The stations are attempting to reach a broader audience than the 12-to-24-year-old MTV audience. At WLXI, the 19-hour broadcast day is divided into four "dayparts." In the morning, videos are devoted to middle-of-the-road artists such as Kenny Rogers and Willie Nelson. From 10 a.m.-3 p.m., the format concentrates on black artists. The hours between 3 and 8 p.m. are oriented to hard rock, while the 8 p.m.- 1 a.m. shift is a mix of all three formats. The Atlanta station breaks its format into 13 different music-video shows, including Top 10 countdowns, premieres of new videos and country video.

Another independent music-video station, WFBN in Chicago, will change its format in September. Videos will be played during daytime and late-night, but its evening programming will be skewed toward the 25-to-39-year-old audience of baby boomers. The schedule will be weighted to movies and such off-network fare as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Perry Mason," "Gunsmoke," "Hawaii Five-O" and "The Avengers." The decision to program the station this way was done after extensive research of baby-boomers' viewing habits, according to Steve Pruett, president of UPI Media, which owns the station.

More independents are joining ad hoc networks picking up new episodes of canceled network sitcoms. "Too Close for Comfort" and "Fame" have been successful in syndication, after being canceled by ABC and NBC, respectively. New episodes of "Oh, Madeline," canceled by ABC this year, are reportedly being produced for the same market.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

DEAR MICHELE: Let me know all about Valerie Bertinelli. When was she born? Who is she married to? Does she have any children? I think she's great. — L.J. Moore

To L.J. Moore: Miss Bertinelli was born on April 23, 1960, in Wilmington, Del. She moved to the West Coast at age 11, when her father, a General Motors executive, was transferred to Van Nuys, Calif. She was married to rock star Eddie Van Halen on April 11, 1981. The pair are one of Hollywood's happiest couples, not to mention one of its richest. At the respectable ages of 27 (Van Halen) and 24 (Miss Bertinelli), their combined net worth is upward of $30 million. Miss Bertinelli reportedly loves to buy expensive gifts for her rocker hubby, and recently surprised him with a $100,000 Lamborghini. They've added it to their fleet of cars parked at their lavish Los Angeles residence, which also houses a recording studio. The patter of little feet is the only thing missing from their gilded life.

DEAR MICHELE: Are Yul Brynner and Telly Savalas naturally bald, or do they keep their heads shaved? — Roy Earp

To Roy: Both actors shave their heads. Brynner, whose big break came in 1951 when he played the King of Siam in Broadway's "The King and I," kept the shaved monarch's head as his trademark. George Savalas, Telly's brother and "Kojak" co-star, says Telly shaves his head every day.

DEAR MICHELE: People have told me that Bill Cullen, popular game show host, is never seen walking on stage because he has an artificial leg. Is this true? If so, how did it come about? — Susan Mullan

To Susan: Cullen was crippled by polio, but he does not have an artificial leg.

DEAR MICHELE: Are Robert Guillaume, star of "Benson," and Joyce DeWitt of "Three's Company" married to each other? — E.R. Albert

To E.R.: Guillaume and Miss DeWitt are not a twosome. TV's "Benson" has been spotted with various lovely ladies, while Miss DeWitt is oh-so-close to Johnny Carson's legal beagle, attorney Henry Bushkin.

TV Chatter

This has not been one of Burt Reynolds's best years. Plagued by health problems, the usually happy-go-lucky glamour boy was saddened recently when his pet deer was found murdered on his Florida ranch. The white-tail deer had been given to Reynolds by the Dreher Park Zoo in West Palm Beach. He is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the culprit or culprits involved.

The producers of "Miami Vice," the new NBC fall series starring Don Johnson and Philip Michael Thomas, are embroiled in a controversy. Miami officials are concerned that their city and police department are being portrayed in a "sleazy" manner, and they have asked for the right to censor the scripts. NBC is reluctant to grant their wish. Pete Cuccaro, the show's technical adviser, is quitting because he finds the series "demeaning to police officers and unrealistic."

NBC is threatening to film the series elsewhere, although the show will still be called "Miami Vice."

Here is a question for Trivial Pursuit players. What do the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, singer Boy George and Detroit Lions running back Billy Sims have in common? You can't guess? They are among the celebrities who have jumped on the Detroit Tigers bandwagon and have taped TV spots for Detroit's WDIV "Bless You Boys" promotional campaign. The station's coverage of Tiger games is a consistent winner on TV as well as the diamond, outranked only by "Dynasty" in local ratings. Other personalities congratulating the Tigers in the campaign have been Shelley Long and Ted Danson of "Cheers," the Beach Boys, Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons and Pat Sajak, host of "Wheel of Fortune."

The CBS Emmy Award-winning drama "Dead Wrong: The John Evans Story," currently being distributed domestically by Western-World Television, has already been sold to West Germany, South Africa, Panama, Chile, Colombia and the Bahamas.

The oft-displayed sign, "George Washington Slept Here," used to lure tourists to various inns across the country, can now be replaced by a sign proclaiming "George Washington Was Filmed Here." Mount Vernon, Washington's estate in Virginia, is crediting CBS's "George Washington" miniseries with this year's bumper crop of tourists.

Ward to perform

Elizabeth Ward, Miss America 1982, will appear as a featured performer on this year's Miss America Pageant, which airs live Sept. 15 on NBC.

After a whirlwind reign as Miss America, Miss Ward moved to New York City where she is currently pursuing a career as an actress, singer and dancer. She is also a commercial spokesperson and keeps abusy schedule speaking at various functions and hosting state pageants nationwide.

Prosky joins 'Blues'

Robert Prosky, who was nominated for a Tony this year for his performance on Broadway in "Glengarry Glen Ross," has joined the cast of "Hill Street Blues" as by-the-book roll-call Sgt. Stanislaus Jablonski.

Prosky becomes the 15th regular cast member of the series, now beginning its fifth season. Ken Olin will also join the cast as Det. Harry Garibaldi.

Sinatra returns

It's been 22 years since his last engagement in Paris, but Frank Sinatra will return to the "city of lights" this fall. He will be appearing at the Moulin Rouge on Sept. 25.

Adams on stage

Julie Adams, who plays Paula Denning on the daytime serial "Capitol," is appearing on weekends, now through Sept. 27, in a stage production of "Women and Other People."

Miss Adams co-stars with Ellen Geer at the Theatricum Botanicum in Topanga Canyon, Calif. Miss Geer's father, the late Will Geer, founded the theater.

Sisters regroup

Christine, Dorothy and Phyllis — better known as the McGuire Sisters — are returning to the stage. They have re-formed as a unit and will make their first public singing engagement in 16 years this fall.

College Football Returns

By Willie Schatz

When Oklahoma City Federal District Court Judge Juan Burciaga struck down the NCAA's four-year, $263.5 million contract with the networks last summer, the usually conservative world of college football was thrown into an uproar. And now that the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 7-2 decision filed in late June, has upheld Burciaga and ruled that the contracts violated antitrust laws, schools are scrambling to get a piece of the new turf pie.

College football's new deal will include syndication rights and agreements between cable and local TV stations and individual schools. But the big money will come from ABC, CBS, ESPN and Ted Turner's WTBS, which are expected to pay more than $30 million for some 50-60 games.

The agreements are being forged with new groups formed to represent the colleges: the College Football Association is representing most of the major universities, while the Big Ten-Pacific 10 conferences have joined together in search of the big bucks.

So in the world of college football, it is no longer all (the NCAA) for one. What does this mean for the fan? More games than ever will saturate the tube this fall. And the most popular teams — Notre Dame, USC, Alabama, Ohio State — will be featured frequently. The networks will certainly choose the games that will garner the highest ratings. But don't blame the networks.

"All these people are saying the networks are in the driver's seat," says Beano Cook, ABC's studio analyst. "But the colleges put them there. The networks didn't ask for this."

Sunday, Aug. 26

Pocono 500, NBC. A one-week tape delay, so you'll already know what happened. But it might be worth watching this third leg of the Indy 500 Triple Crown to see the CART-Cam in action. That's the little electronic eye that puts you in the car and shows you why you'll never race cars for a living.

Arlington Budweiser Million, NBC. An international collection of thoroughbred superstars trod one and one-quarter miles over turf in the world's richest horse race. First prize isn't bad for a two minute sprint.

NFL Pre-Season, CBS. The last week before the pros get down to business. The Buffalo Bills and Chicago Bears play in Indianapolis's Hoosierdome.

Tuesday, Aug. 28 through Friday, Aug. 31

HEADLINERS

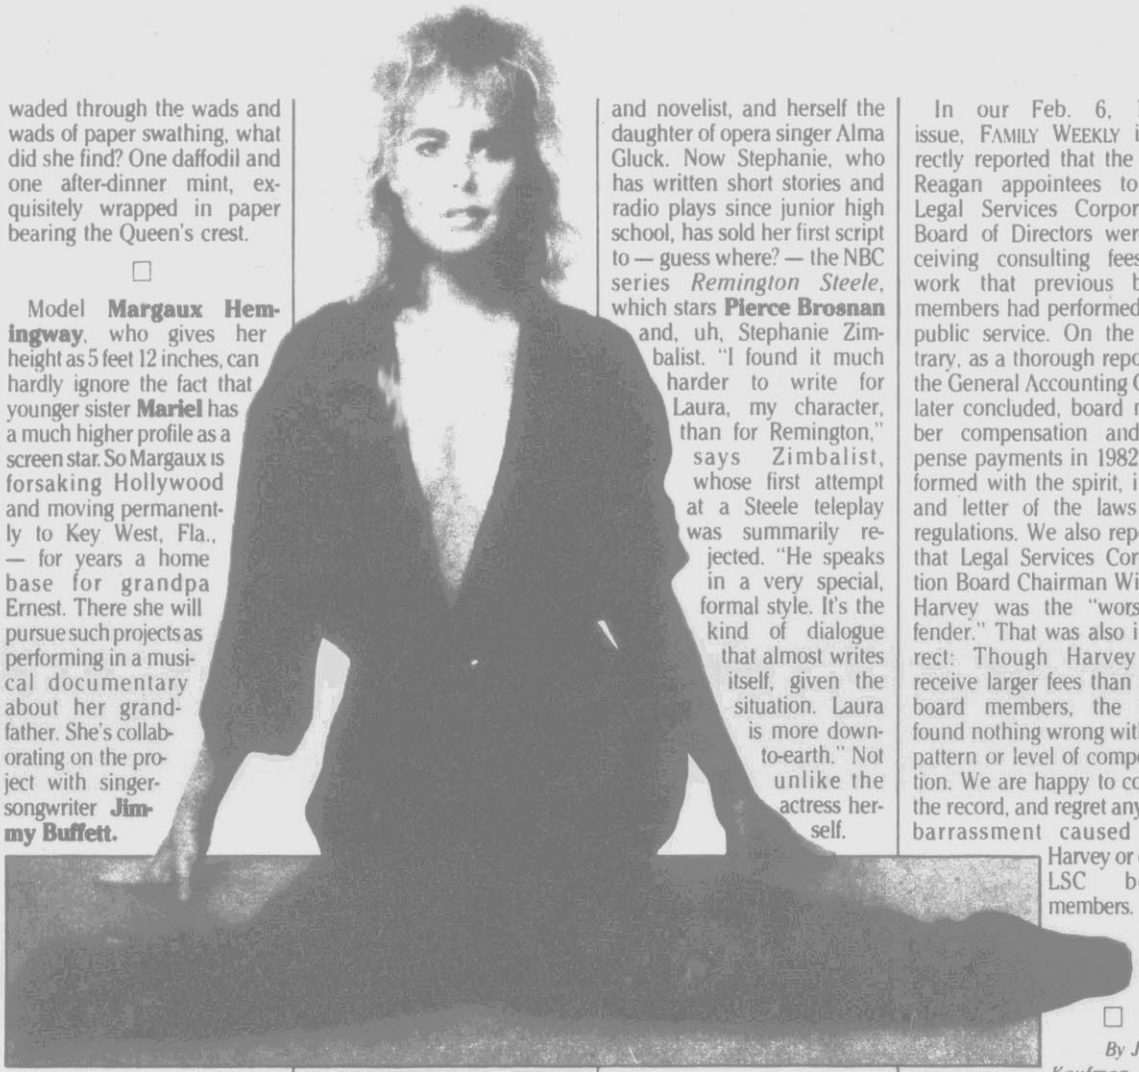

ANDREW: HEY, BIG SPENDER

One of bonny Prince Andrew's dates, who will remain unnamed (no, it wasn't Koo Stark, model Katie Robett, or the waitress who gave him an unceremonious spanking in a London restaurant), sent him a gushing billet-doux to thank him for a swell night on the town, but closed with this PS: "But WHERE are the flowers and chocolates?" The prince, it seems, had forgotten his trademark. Next day, a limo from Buckingham Palace drew up to the young lady's home, and out struggled the chauffeur with a box big enough to hold half the crown jewels. When Andy's date waded through the wads and wads of paper swathing, what did she find? One daffodil and one after-dinner mint, exquisitely wrapped in paper bearing the Queen's crest.

□

Model Margaux Hemingway, who gives her height as 5 feet 12 inches, can hardly ignore the fact that younger sister Mariel has a much higher profile as a screen star. So Margaux is forsaking Hollywood and moving permanently to Key West, Fla., — for years a home base for grandpa Ernest. There she will pursue such projects as performing in a musical documentary about her grandfather. She's collaborating on the project with singer-songwriter Jimmy Buffett.

MARGAUX: ALL KEYED UP

Alfonso Ribeiro, the kid who starred in the Broadway musical The Tap Dance Kid, is hanging up his silver heels for the NBC comedy Silver Spoons. He can also be seen cavorting in a current Pepsi commercial with Michael Jackson and has just signed a three-year contract with Prism Records. But even though Alf overheard the choreographer of the Pepsi commercial remark that he learned the dance routine quicker than the white-gloved one, Ribeiro has managed to keep his feet firmly planted on the ground. Not that the 12-year-old doesn't have big plans for himself, including a big family. "Four to 20 children," he told us. And, if he were to follow another actor's footsteps into politics, he knows precisely what he would do: "I'd push prices down. Starting with candy. It's so expensive. Why pay 40 or 50 cents for a chocolate bar that only takes three seconds to eat?" (We hope Mr. Reagan is taking careful note.) With economic issues set to rights, he'd turn his attention to foreign affairs. "I'd stop wars, get rid of all that nuclear stuff. I don't want my four to 20 children involved in World War III."

ALFONSO: TAP HOME FOR PRESIDENT

The [illegible] Zimbalist family tree are laden with talent. There's the violinist Efrem, his actor son Efrem Z. Jr., his granddaughter, actress Stephanie, and Stephanie's aunt Marcia Davenport, 81, a biographer and novelist, and herself the daughter of opera singer Alma Gluck. Now Stephanie, who has written short stories and radio plays since junior high school, has sold her first script to — guess where? — the NBC series Remington Steele, which stars Pierce Brosnan and, uh, Stephanie Zimbalist. "I found it much harder to write for Laura, my character, than for Remington," says Zimbalist, whose first attempt at a Steele teleplay was summarily rejected. "He speaks in a very special, formal style. It's the kind of dialogue that almost writes itself, given the situation. Laura is more down-to-earth." Not unlike the actress herself.

F.G. of Midland, Pa., writes to ask Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic candidate for vice president: "Do you consider yourself a feminist?" Ferraro replies: "Until I was elected [to the House of Representatives in 1978], I did not consider myself a feminist. The way I would describe myself now is that I am an advocate of equality for women — social and economic equality. I am a very strong family person, and I don't think those two conflict at all. And I think I'm a very feminine person, and that's fine, because I don't think those things conflict either."

She uses her maiden name professionally, she says, to honor her mother, widowed when Ferraro was a child.

FERRARO: NO MYSTIQUE, THE FEMININE

In our Feb. 6, 1983, issue, FAMILY WEEKLY incorrectly reported that the 1982 Reagan appointees to the Legal Services Corporation Board of Directors were receiving consulting fees for work that previous board members had performed as a public service. On the contrary, as a thorough report by the General Accounting Office later concluded, board member compensation and expense payments in 1982 conformed with the spirit, intent and letter of the laws and regulations. We also reported that Legal Services Corporation Board Chairman William Harvey was the "worst offender." That was also incorrect: Though Harvey did receive larger fees than most board members, the GAO found nothing wrong with the pattern or level of compensation. We are happy to correct the record, and regret any embarrassment caused Mr. Harvey or other LSC board members.

THE GREAT BARRYMORE

THE BRIGHT, BUOYANT 9-YEAR-OLD DREW IS DETERMINED TO CARRY ON THE MOST FAMOUS NAME IN AMERICAN SHOW BUSINESS

BY ANDREA DARVI

It was a scene I wasn't supposed to see. Drew Barrymore, safe in the seclusion of a New York hotel room, was screaming and crying uncontrollably, holding a damp washcloth to her throbbing forehead. "What you are seeing is a case of 9-year-old overwork," Drew's tutor told me, recounting the grueling regimen of a week-long publicity tour. "I feel so guilty I could bang my head on the wall!" her mother yelled, pacing the floor. A publicist, smiling nervously, hinted that I should leave, perhaps fearful of a reporter discovering the dark side of Drew.

A former child actress myself, I had a hunch I could hold back the flood of tears. "I saw you in Firestarter last night," I told Drew. "You were very good." For a moment, the anguish faded from her tear-stained face; her sobs quieted down. Her pride had overcome her fatigue and pain. At 9, Drew is relentless about the single most important part of her life: her career.

UPI/Bettmann Archive

Like father, like son: The Great Profile.

Drew Barrymore is one of the hottest child stars to hit Hollywood in recent memory. She has already made more than half as many movies as she has lived years. At 4, she landed a small part as the daughter of William Hurt and Blair Brown in her first film, Altered States. At 6, she rocketed to stardom as the irrepressible pigtailed kid sister in the Steven Spielberg blockbuster E.T. Last spring, she headed an all-star cast in Firestarter, adapted from Stephen King's novel about a child with the supernatural power to set the world aflame. King was so impressed by her talent that he wrote the script for Cat's Eye, a Dino [illegible] production filmed in North Carolina this summer, especially for Drew. Late next month, she'll be on screen again in Irreconcilable Differences, playing a distraught little girl who wants to divorce herself from her estranged parents.

Andrea Darvi is the author of Pretty Babies: An Insider's Look at the World of the Hollywood Child Star.

Drew Barrymore is fast becoming a dual Hollywood legend. She is arguably the Child Star of the 80s. And she is carrying on a legendary family name. Drew is a direct descendant of the famed theatrical Barrymores, a bloodline that includes stage star Maurice Barrymore; his wife, the stage comedienne Georgiana Drew Barrymore (herself from another great American theatrical family, the Drews); Lionel Barrymore, the much-admired character actor who appeared in all 15 Dr. Kildare films and won an Academy Award for A Free Soul (1931); and Ethel Barrymore, the stage and screen star who won an Oscar for her performance in None but the Lonely Heart (1944). John Barrymore, the dashing stage and movie matinee idol (Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, 1920; The Sea Beast, 1926), was Drew's grandfather. And her father is John Barrymore Jr., whose less illustrious career in such movies as 1953's Thunderbirds (co-starring teen idol John Derek) and a long string of forgettable Italian epics in the '60s was overshadowed by his notoriety as the "Battling Barrymore," heir to his father's tempestuous personality and fondness for alcohol. John Barrymore passed on another striking feature to John Jr., who in turn passed it on to Drew: "The Great Profile" is unmistakable in son and granddaughter.

A week later and 3,000 miles away from the hysterical scene in New York, I stood in the driveway of a spacious house in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles, waiting for Drew and her mother, Ildiko Jaid Barrymore, to arrive home from Drew's gymnastics class. The car pulled up with Drew in the backseat, eyes closed, head bent. She was, perhaps, still a little rundown: Two days after we met in New York, she had broken out with chicken pox; she still had a few spots. Before unlocking the front door, her mother explained that when she found out Drew was getting sick, "I felt even more guilty!"

Crying scenes are becoming her specialty. "I have to think of sad things," she said, "like losing one of my stuffed penguins, or my cat, Gertie."

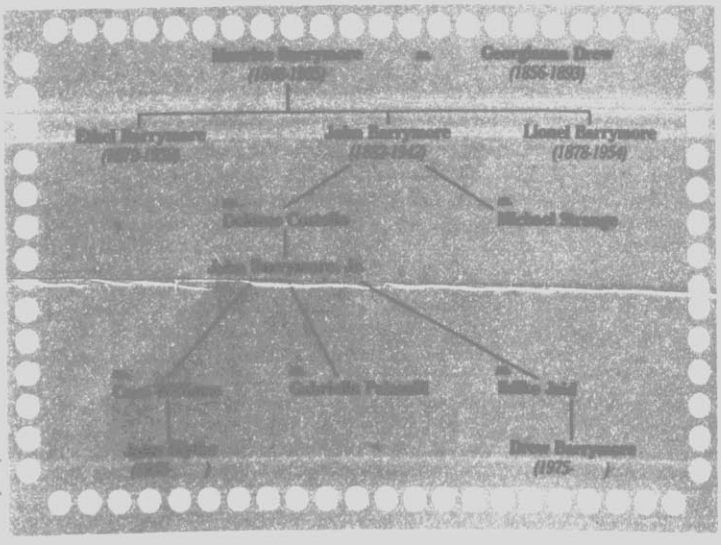

Drew led me to the pool in back of the house, where we had a far more pleasant meeting than in New York. The sun was shining; the pool sparkled. Her spirits had lifted. She was warm and entertaining, not the temperamental brat one might have expected a 9-year-old box office draw to be. I was predisposed to like Drew, my affections tinged by compassion — not just because I had seen her at her worst, but because she is a child already burdened to be the best.

Drew is truly extraordinary — articulate, vibrant, intelligent. Most child actors are; what could be ordinary, or childlike, about earning a living before age 10? But even among today's minicorps of child stars, Drew is a giant. She reportedly pulls in a six-figure income. And she got to the top fast. The agony of professional rejection, she explained, "has never really been my problem." At 11 months of age, Drew won her first part on her very first call — a commercial for Gainesburger Puppy Chow. Then, at 2½, she played Cindy Williams's daughter in the TV movie Suddenly Love.

Finally, the 4-year-old Barrymore decided to make something of herself: "I told my mother I wanted to be a movie actress, but it wasn't that I wanted to be a big star or make money or anything," Drew said, laboring to counter the popular prejudice that child stars are spoiled brats. "I thought it would be neat to be a Barrymore. I thought it would be a little hard to follow up on them, but I tried and tried. I don't want to be a bragger, but I think I got there a little bit."

The smile that radiated from Drew's Hungarian-born mother revealed her delight in her daughter's display of confidence. Once a struggling actress herself, she knows all too well how the entertainment business can undermine [illegible] She claims, in fact, to have resisted the notion that her gorgeous baby should follow in the footsteps of her great ancestors. But even at 4, Ildiko said, her daughter was determined: "She's always wanted to act. I don't know what it would take to intimidate Drew, maybe something from another galaxy." She corrected herself, remembering E.T.: "No, not even that would do it!"

After Drew's success in Spielberg's 1982 box-office record-breaker, Ildiko abandoned her career to step into what must surely be her most demanding role to date: stage mother/manager. How do you manage your child's career without alienating your child? "We compromise," said Drew, defining the concept this way: "Maybe I kind of want to do a script and she'll say, 'It's not too good, but it is cute. I don't think we should do it.'"

Warner Brothers

© Schapiro/Gamma-Liaison

Drew Barrymore has the usual retinue of any star — agent, publicist, and so on. But she also has her very own Svengali: Steven Spielberg. It was he who advised her, after E.T., to stop doing commercials if she wanted to be considered a serious actress. No big loss: "I didn't like doing commercials," she said, thinking back to being 4½ years old and almost throwing up after eating through 45 takes of a chocolate-chip-cookie ad.

Drew adores Spielberg. "Most directors just say, 'Sit here and turn camera left,'" she gushed. "Steven shows people and takes time off the set to be with them." She displayed her stuffed chimpanzee, Jones (as in Indiana) — "Steven gave it to me when I got the chicken pox" — and her gray cat, Gertie (named after her E.T. character), also a gift from Steven.

There's nothing unusual about this kind of cross-generational Hollywood relationship. It's built into the work situation. The director learns to play with the child's emotions, and the child responds on cue. It is ideal play-acting for Spielberg, who is not married and has no children, and for Drew, whose parents are divorced. Drew, in fact, has never even lived with her father. By the time she was born in 1975, John Barrymore Jr. was spending much of his time in the California desert, fasting, meditating, and experiencing a supposed spiritual conversion. Now 52 years old, the retired actor lives by himself in the Hollywood Hills.

Typically, the director–child-actress romance ends when the film is a wrap. But Steven and Drew are an exceptionally tight-knit pair. Some two years after E.T., they remain in frequent contact on the phone. They see one another as often as possible. Ryan O'Neal, Drew's co-star in Irreconcilable Differences, has told reporters that Spielberg spent three weekends coaching her on a moving courtroom scene in the film. This spring, the two planned a "date": Steven would take Drew to see Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, then Drew would escort Steven to Firestarter. But the plan failed. Drew and her mother had to rush off to North Carolina to begin work on Cat's Eye. Drew didn't have time, even for Steven.

Drew loves having grown-up friends. In so many ways, she is already an adult. Juggling education and career can be a problem, she told me, "when you have to cram the school time in between scenes." Making friends at school can be equally tough, especially when you're bombarded by envy-ridden taunts like, "You think you're so great!" Explained Drew: "Sometimes they say, 'What was it like kissing E.T.'s nose? Was there snot coming out of it?' I have a few close friends who understand that when people tease me, it hurts. My best friend is an E.T. fanatic, but she never asks me about E.T."

Sometimes the work itself takes an emotional toll, especially those Jackie Coogan-like crying scenes that are becoming the young Barrymore's trademark. "I have to think of sad things," she said, "like losing one of my stuffed penguins, or my cat, Gertie."

And the stress of being a sought-after celebrity? "After Universal milked me, Warner Bros. wanted me to do publicity," she said, mimicking mom's lingo to sum up the pressures of her publicity tour in New York the previous week. "They [the press] ask you a million times, 'What was it like doing E.T.?' You have to be up each time, like you've never heard the question before." Suddenly, a haunting memory came back to me of Drew Barrymore in her New York hotel room sobbing: "Mommy compared me to Steven [Spielberg] and said he can do 20 interviews a day. I said, 'But he's a grown-up!'"

Given enough relaxation and rest, Drew is no crybaby. She is a pro. A hard-working actress. An ambitious career girl who has already inked eight pages of a screenplay. Says her mother: "They're gigantic pages." She showed the screenplay to Spielberg, who titled it Terms of Endrewment. The premise of the play? "I can't tell," said Hollywood-wise Drew, who knows never to talk until the deal has gone down. But then, in a change of heart, she fed me a few morsels: The play is about a girl named Kim, who is Drew's age. "She meets up with this guy, and they have a funny relationship." Modeled after her relationship with Steven? Drew wouldn't say. She didn't have to. The subplot, however, featuring Kim and her mother, isn't funny at all. Kim is growing up. She wants her mother to stop calling her "Kim, dear" every 10 seconds so automatically that the two words fuse into one. In one vividly imagined scene, Kim plays a record for her mother. The record has two distinguishing features: the lyric "Kimdear" and a skip. "Kimdear, Kimdear, Kimdear..." the record screeches. Finally her mother understands — "Kim" is not a baby anymore.

That, perhaps, is the grown-up Drew Barrymore. But she has a Peter Pan side as well; life as a child movie star is so wonderful that she wants it to last. Would it really be so terrible to be Kimdear forever? "I don't want to grow up," she said. "I want to stay 9 all my life."

Drew went inside to slip into a bathing suit, then walked back out to the diving board and prepared to plunge into the deep end. "I'm addicted to acting," she confessed. "I can't stop." Drew made a splash...a big one, of course. FW

A NEW SPORT IS BLOWING IN THE WIND

By Sherry Baker

It seems to be a universal human desire — the yearning to fly. Not in an airplane, but unencumbered and free like a bird. The writer of Psalm 55 said, "Oh, that I had wings like a dove, for then I would fly away." Swiss psychologist Carl Jung wrote that dreams of flying are common among all peoples. The enduring fascination of Peter Pan and Superman is due in part to those fabled characters' ability to fly.

Until recently, however, the only way a person could experience the sensation of flying — using only his or her body — was through free-falling. Plummeting toward the earth and waiting until the last moment to open a parachute is not for the faint-hearted. Now, the less adventuresome can know what skydiving is like without ever getting into a plane, much less taking a leap out of it. Indoor flying chambers, known as Flyaways, are popping up around the country.

A former Canadian paratrooper named Jean St. Germaine first applied the idea when he decided to teach his children how to sky dive in a safe, controlled environment. He put a diesel engine into a recessed floor covered by a heavy layer of metal netting, and he built a padded chamber around it. As the DC-3 propeller attached to the engine whirled, the winds it generated sent St. Germaine and his children floating toward the top of the 52-foot dome.

American entrepreneur Marvin Kratter, then 64, tried it out himself in 1980, had a "euphoric" flight, and purchased the international franchising rights to St. Germaine's invention. Now, four years later, there are Flyaways in Las Vegas; Knoxville, Tenn.; and Montreal. Other flying domes are in the works for Anaheim, Calif.; Houston; Long Island, N.Y.; Arlington, Texas; and Ft. Lauderdale, Orlando and Miami, Fla.

So far, over 100,000 people have tried indoor flying. Beginners look anything but elegant. They don brightly colored jumpsuits (for extra wind resistance), protective goggles, ear plugs, crash helmets and thick knee pads. Then, after 15 minutes of "preflight" instruction, they jump from a platform into a column of 120- to 150-mph winds shooting up from the bottom of the octagonal silo, where a DC-4 propeller spins at 1,200 revolutions per minute. (Fliers are protected from contact with the engine and prop blades by steel mesh floor netting — it springs like a trampoline, bouncing anybody who hits bottom back into the air.) "Aeronauts," as Kratter has dubbed fliers, must maneuver into a belly-flop position perpendicular to the rush of air. With practice, they learn how to dive and glide. "But at first, no one soars like an eagle," says Jean Phillipe Gay, an avid flier who once headed Flyaway's franchising operation. "There's a lot of bumping and crashing into the padded walls." After a few successful test flights, however, the more skillful aeronauts can forgo jumpsuits and "fly" in their street clothes.

Flyaway attracts a wide range of adventurers. "It generally appeals to those under 40, but all ages love it. [Actor] Lloyd Bridges is 72 years old, and he's crazy about it. And my 3-year-old grandson is a whiz at flying," enthuses Kratter, who at 68 likes to take an occasional soar himself.

Aeronauts claim that indoor flying — apart from being just plain fun — is well on its way to becoming a full-fledged sport. Skilled aeronauts have developed a whole repertoire of complicated maneuvers such as retrieving objects, linking up in the air, walking up walls backwards, and combining dives with somersaults.

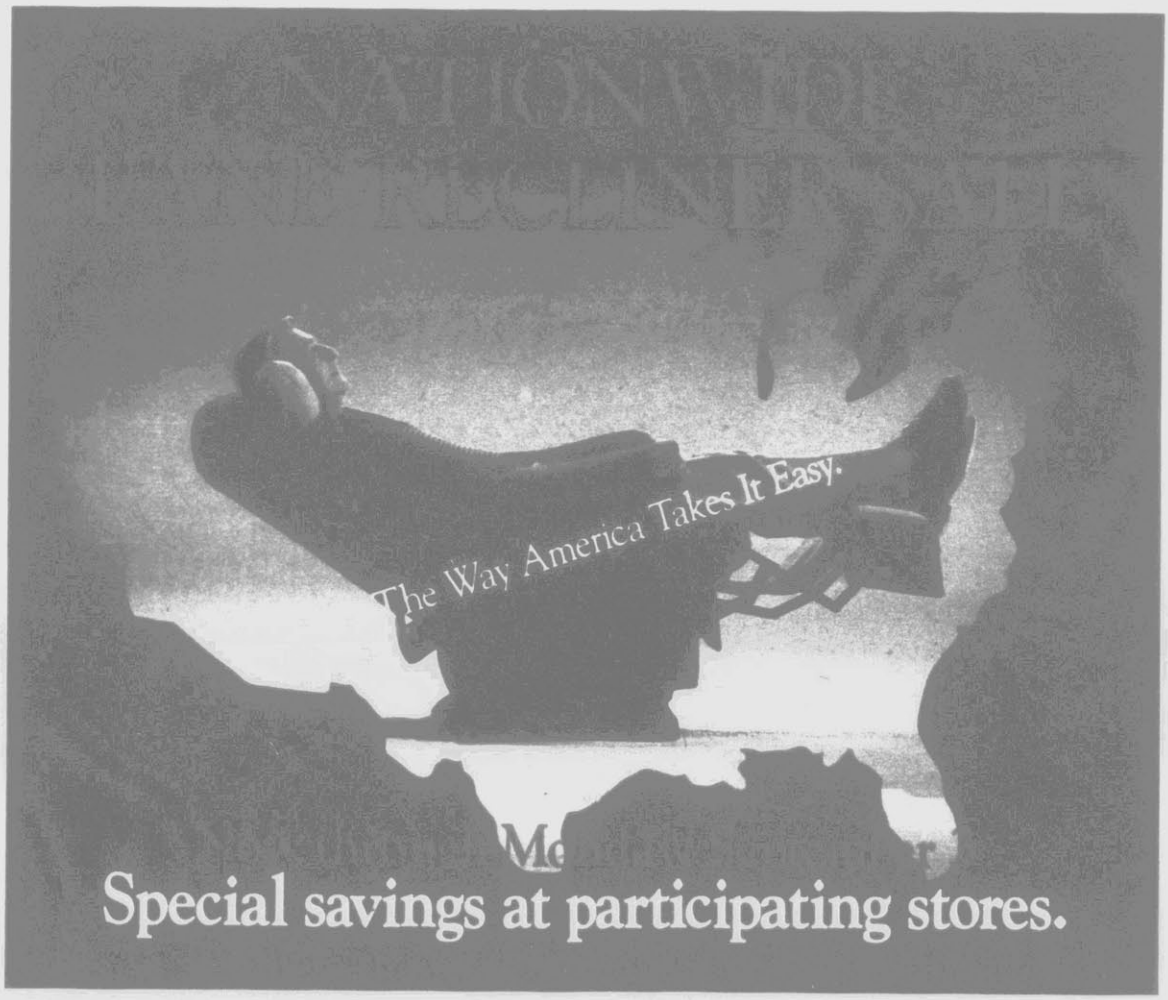

Kratter would like to see indoor flying eventually become an Olympic event, and he speculates that it might supplant jogging as a fitness regimen. Although no one has yet measured how many calories indoor soaring burns up, it is definitely an aerobic activity, leaving fliers out of breath and sweating, particularly on first flights.

A session of indoor flying may seem short and expensive at $7 for just 5 minutes. However, real sky dives last less than 60 seconds. "And with every muscle in your body flexed against powerful winds, those few minutes seem like a long, long time," says Gay.

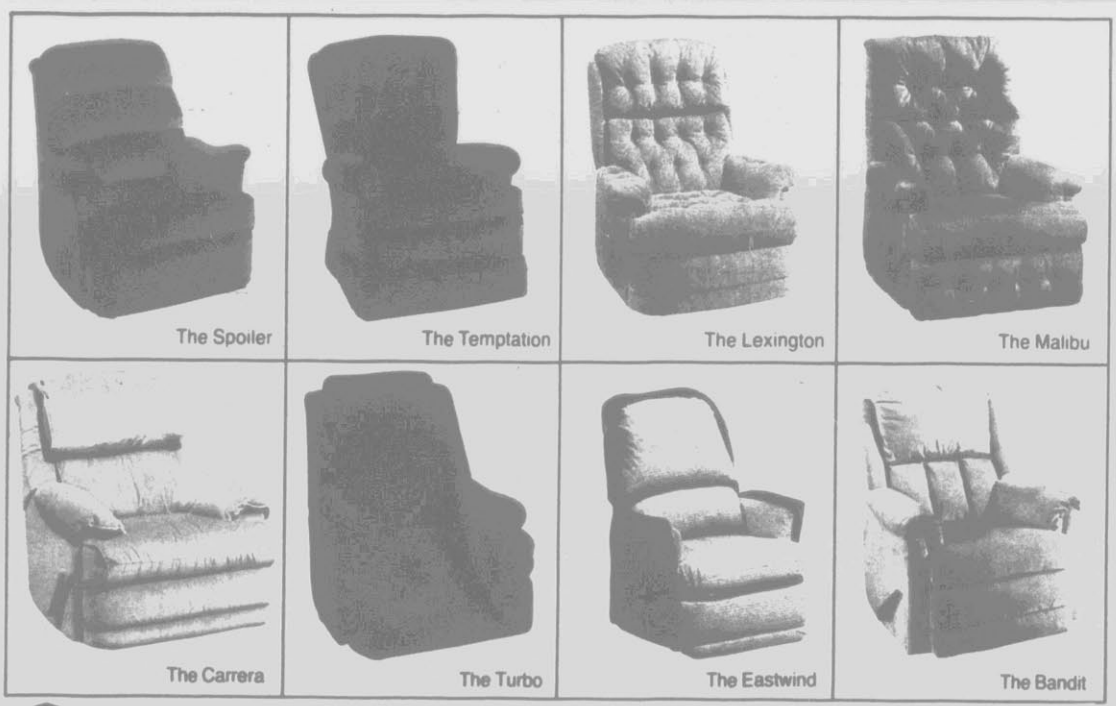

Like any sport, indoor flying isn't risk-free. But Flyaway executives claim it's no more dangerous than skiing or scuba diving. Only a few minor injuries have been reported so far, and the people at Flyaway credit that to the thickly padded walls and the presence of spotters whose job is to boost fliers out of any danger.

How do people describe the experience? Sky divers claim it is close to the real thing (a fact that hasn't escaped the U.S. government's notice — Ft. Bragg regularly sends members of the 82nd Airborne Division to the Las Vegas Flyaway to learn free-falling indoors). Others compare it to bouncing on a huge trampoline, or floating weightless in space. Jean Phillipe Gay puts it this way: "It is a lot like the feeling I have when I dream of flying. After I got the hang of it, I just couldn't stop smiling and laughing. It was so elating. I was free, totally free. Just flying in the air." FW

THE FAMILY

WHEN CARTOONS HELP DRAW OUT TROUBLED KIDS

By Cheryl Crooks

When imaginary monsters haunted 5-year-old Eric's dreams, Scooby-Doo came to the rescue. When 8-year-old Susan worried that her sick dog was going to die, Fred Flintstone helped calm her.

Adults may often worry about what effects Saturday-morning cartoons have on their children, but Joyce Mills, Ph.D., and Richard Crowley, Ph.D., two Los Angeles psychotherapists who specialize in self-help counseling, believe that cartoon characters can frequently be a parent's best friend in conquering a child's everyday problems.

Instead of debating the pros and cons of animated programs, they turn them into therapeutic tools. "We're not saying that kids should be inundated with cartoons 24 hours a day," explains Mills, "but it's a medium that can be used for positive gains."

Three years ago, in their separate practices, Mills and Crowley began using cartoons as one way of treating children such as Eric. The child was so terrified of monsters that his sleep was disrupted for months by nightmares that ended in screaming fits. Finally, Eric's exhausted parents took their son to Mills. Mills asked the youngster what cartoon character might protect him from the monsters. "Scooby-Doo," replied the child. His parents were greatly surprised by the answer; they thought that the animated canine hero frightened their son. "No," said Eric, "he chases the monsters away."

Eric, 5, who was haunted by nightmares (top), felt better when he depicted Scooby-Doo as his rescuer.

Explains Crowley: "Everyone has a metaphor for what would make them feel more protected and safe. For children, it's often a cartoon character."

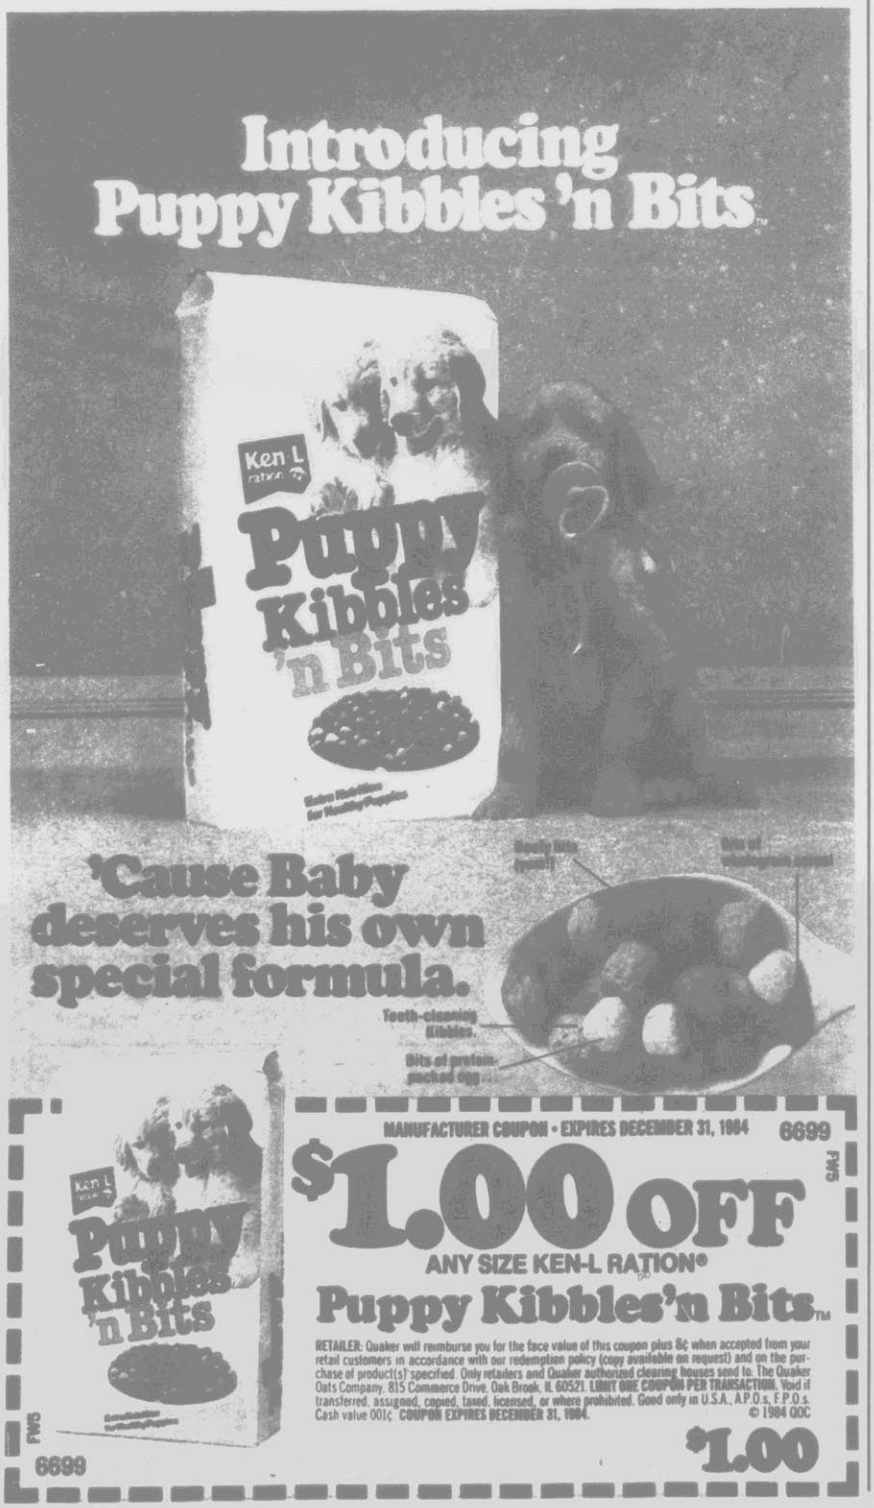

Mills and Crowley base their technique on the theory that cartoon characters are often good role models for youngsters. Scooby-Doo, for instance, is a problem solver. Superheroes such as Spiderman or the Incredible Hulk provide children with an image of inner strength. The Smurf characters possess a variety of useful personality traits. Papa Smurf, for example, represents a benevolent authority figure; Smurfette conveys self-assurance and self-confidence. "Cartoons show kids that there will be problems in life, but they also show them that there is a resolution to the difficulties," says Crowley.

In their sessions with children, Crowley and Mills encourage them to imagine that their cartoon friends are helping them out of difficulties. This reduces youngsters' feelings of fear and weakness and promotes a sense of hope.

The therapeutic process starts when young patients are asked to draw a picture of the fear or painful feeling that is troubling them. Then the children are asked to sketch the cartoon character that could come to their aid. Finally, the children draw a third picture, in which they show the problem being solved.

third illustration pictured the girl and her new ally, Flintstone, happily posing together.

"The drawings show children that there is a solution," says Crowley. "They can see that there's an outcome that they've never conceptualized before by drawing it on paper. That begins to interrupt the pattern."

"This technique gives the child control of his or her own self by bringing problems out into the open," Mills points out. "You can change something that you can see and hear."

Parents who do not have access to professional "cartoon therapy" for their children can use its basic concepts for problem-solving at home. Mills and Crowley suggest that parents encourage their children to create the therapeutic series of drawings depicting problems, helpful cartoon characters, and solutions. Parents should also keep a notebook of these sequences, Mills advises, as a "visual scrapbook of solutions" for the child to refer to later.

By asking children what their monsters look like and what cartoon characters can protect them, parents enter the world of the child, and that, according to Crowley, is an important first step toward solving a child's problems. "They need [to have] whatever is bothering them acknowledged," he says. "Not validated, just acknowledged."

Once parents realize cartoon heroes can make a child feel better, according to Crowley and Mills, these characters can be integrated into storytelling sessions as role models that can assist children in recognizing and confronting their problems.

Mills cautions parents to emphasize problem-solving in helping the child with drawings. The final picture in a series should always be a positive resolution to the youngster's dilemma. Parents should also be careful not to influence the child's character choice, but to let the youngster pick his or her own cartoon friend — an important first step for children in learning how to take care of themselves. "We don't tell the kids what characters to come up with; they come up with their own," says Mills. "That's the beauty of it." Perhaps the greatest advantage of "cartoon therapy," then, is that it allows children to take problems into their own hands. PW

DON SHARP'S MONTHLY CAR CARE COLUMN

TRAILERS: LOAD 'EM UP

For people who have never done it or who do little of it, towing is frightening. But it needn't be, as long as you follow these tips. Simply put, successful trailering largely depends on matching car and trailer, and the major factor of this is weight.

Most manufacturers specify how much weight their cars can tow. Some give no specification, and others recommend against towing altogether. The limits are dictated by the traction of the tires, the capacity of the brakes, and the strength of the hitch attachments. As a general rule, cars that weigh around 2,000 pounds should not tow more than half their own weight, cars of 3,000 or so pounds should not tow more than two-thirds, and larger cars can tow as much as they weigh.

However, differences in trailers qualify this. A small car may easily handle a low-profile, pop-up camper-trailer but may not handle a high, wall-sided travel-trailer that weighs less but is more buffeted by crosswinds.

The hitch must be strong enough for its job, too — a matter complicated by modern unit-body construction and impact-absorbing bumpers, which do not always provide convenient attachment points. Most manufacturers offer a hitch as an accessory, but if a factory hitch isn't available, a shop specializing in hitches can provide one. The specialty shop will also be up-to-date on legal requirements and will know the towing peculiarities of particular cars. (Most states require side mirrors.) In any case, don't attach a hitch to an energy-absorbing bumper, which means bumpers from 1972 onward.

Nationwide, trailers that weigh more than 2,000 pounds when loaded must have their own self-activating brakes. Hydraulic brakes are better than electric brakes, because electric brakes can drain the battery if used a lot, and hydraulic brakes can be locked when the trailer is detached from the car.

If within manageable weight limits, a trailer will easily follow the tow car everywhere, provided its load is properly distributed, which means that most of the weight, about 60 percent of it, should be ahead of the trailer axle.

In distributing the weight, though, the heft of the hitch should be no more than 10 to 20 percent of the total weight of the trailer and its load — but use some judgment; a 2,000-pound car towing a 600-pound load can tolerate 120 pounds, or 20 percent, at the hitch, but a 3,000-pound car towing a 1,500-pound load can not handle 300 pounds at the hitch.

A note about trailer tire pressures: The smaller the tire, the more pressure it must have to minimize its flexing and the consequent heat it builds up. Look on the side of the tire for the proper pressure or consult a tire shop.

You don't need much advice about how to maneuver with a trailer; you'll find out quickly enough just backing out of the driveway. Warning: Don't forget to make wide turns at corners, so the trailer misses curbs and parked cars. Use those big mirrors to assure clearance. FW

WORKER'S COMPENSATION: A LABOR DAY FEAST

By Marilyn Hansen

Labor Day, which traditionally marks the end of the lazy, hazy season, will be celebrated next Monday, Sept. 3. It's a wonderful time for a reunion or a last big open-air party before the weather turns cold.

Peter J. McGuire, founder of the National Carpenters Union, proposed the notion of a holiday honoring laborers in 1882. "I suggested the first Monday in September," he said, "as it would come at the most pleasant season...and would fill a wide gap [between] legal holidays. There are holidays representative of the religious, civil and military spirit," he added, "but none representative of the industrial spirit — the great vital force of every nation." It became a national holiday when Grover Cleveland signed it into law in 1894.

With these thoughts in mind, we felt that a traditional American picnic would be in order. For the main course, those perennial favorites: Texas-style barbecued ribs, Southern fried chicken, or Maine lobster. Sweet 'n' sour cole slaw, favored by the early settlers for its keeping qualities, pickled Georgia peaches, and potato salad are welcome accompaniments. For dessert: While some Americans might insist that a thick slice of blueberry or apple pie is the only proper way to finish off a picnic, home gardeners may want to opt for zucchini bread — a moist and flavorful way to utilize the prolific squash. "Drunken" watermelon, soaked in spirits, is a fun and novel addition to an outdoor bash. And to wash it all down, pitchers of fresh lemonade and sun-brewed iced tea. (Iced tea was first served in America at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair. Representatives of an Indian tea company were serving their brew hot, but because of the soaring summer temperatures, no one was drinking it. This inspired them to pour it over ice, and the beverage immediately took off.)

BASIC FRIED CHICKEN

There are a few tips that can put your fried chicken in the "world's best" category. First, always be sure the oil is hot (about 425°) before adding the chicken. The oil should be at least ½-inch deep, and some cooks swear that a depth of 2 inches produces the crispiest crust.

⅓ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt, or to taste
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 (2½-to 3½-lb.) broiler-fryer chicken
1½ -2 quarts vegetable oil for frying

1. In large plastic bag, measure flour, paprika, salt and pepper; close tightly, shake together.

2. Moisten chicken pieces with water. Place chicken, 1 piece at a time, into plastic bag. Shake to coat thoroughly. Repeat with remaining chicken. Place chicken on wire rack or tray. Cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate 24–48 hours to set coating.

3. Pour oil into 5-quart Dutch oven, chicken fryer or deep electric skillet, filling no more than ⅓ full. Heat over medium-high heat to 400°. Add chicken, a few pieces at a time. Fry about 6–12 minutes, or until fork-tender and golden brown; turn and brown second side. Small pieces will take about 20 minutes to cook, larger pieces will take 25–30 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Keep warm in a low oven while frying remaining pieces.

Makes 4 servings

BLUEBERRY PIE

1 qt. fresh or frozen dry-pack blueberries
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup cold water, divided
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons cornstarch
Few teaspoons milk

1. Prepare pie pastry and line bottom of 9-inch pie pan.
2. In medium-sized saucepan, combine blueberries, sugar, ½ cup water, cinnamon and lemon juice and cook over medium heat. Dissolve cornstarch in remaining ¼ cup cold water. When blueberry mixture comes to boiling, stir in cornstarch and remove from fire. Let cool.
3. Pour filling into lined pie pan. Roll out remaining crust and cover the top of the pie. Seal the edges with a little milk and crimp with the tines of a fork. Perforate top crust with fork or cut air holes in center of crust.
4. Bake pie in preheated 450° oven for 10 minutes. Lower heat to 350° and bake 20 minutes longer, or until crust is lightly browned. Makes 8 servings

SUN TEA

9 orange pekoe or other desired blend tea bags
1 gallon cold water

1. Place tea bags in a clean glass gallon jar or bottle. Fill jar with cold water. Cover jar and place in sunshine for 3 or 4 hours.
2. Remove tea bags, squeezing gently. Pour tea over ice and flavor to taste with lemon, sugar or a sugar substitute. Refrigerate leftovers. Makes 1 gallon

DRUNKEN WATERMELON

1 watermelon
Light rum, brandy or champagne

1. Cut a deep plug about 2-inches square out of the top of a ripe watermelon. Remove plug and slowly pour in as much light rum, brandy or champagne as the melon will absorb.
2. Replace the plug and seal with masking tape. Refrigerate the melon for 24 hours, turning it 4 or 5 times to allow the liquor or wine to seep through the pulp. Serve in slices like ordinary watermelon.

SWEET'N'SOUR COLE SLAW

1 large head cabbage, shredded or very finely sliced
2 cups green pepper slivers or rings
2 cups sliced Spanish onion rings
⅓ cup plus one tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon powdered mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon salt, or to taste
1 cup white wine or cider vinegar
¾ cup vegetable oil

1. In 3-qt. bowl, layer cabbage, green pepper and onion; sprinkle ¾ cup sugar over all.
2. In saucepan, combine the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and all remaining ingredients; mix well. Heat mixture to boiling, stirring; pour over slaw. Cover with plastic film and refrigerate at least 4 hours.
3. When ready to serve, toss salad thoroughly.

Makes 2½ quarts, 8 to 10 servings

WHIZ QUIZ

USE YOUR BEST JUDGMENT

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE

1. Your chances of correctly judging whether or not a person is telling you the truth depend on how you listen.
2. Couples who decide not to have children may be viewed by others as maladjusted.
3. Accomplished liars are expert in judging when someone is not telling the truth. (It takes one to know one.)
4. You can tell a lot about a person by turning him loose with a camera for a brief period and noting what he photographs.

ANSWERS

1. True. Researchers at the University of Virginia studying people's ability to detect deception asked students to watch videotapes of 12 people who were sometimes lying and sometimes telling the truth. The observers were divided into two groups. The first was instructed to pay special attention to tone of voice, words and visual cues — that is, to note how the speakers were saying what they had to say rather than what they were saying. The second group was given no special instructions. The results: The first group was significantly more successful in distinguishing truth from deception than the second.
2. True. A study titled "Attitudes Toward the Childless Spouse," conducted at the University of Health Sciences of the Chicago Medical School, cited surveys showing that the childless spouse is judged by others to be misguided. The study, however, indicated that "the intentionally childless wife is not less well-adjusted or more immature than mothers or those intending to become parents."
3. False. After a study of the ability to deceive and to detect deception, Harvard University psychologists concluded that "skill at lying successfully was unrelated to skill at catching others in their lies."
4. True. In a study at Wake Forest University in North Carolina, undergraduates were administered personality tests, then given cameras and instructed to take as many pictures as they wanted. Concluded the report: "Including people in the photograph was related to being aggressive, extroverted, forceful, autonomous, and uninterested in understanding others. On the other hand, taking pictures of buildings and various other man-made objects was associated with interpersonal sensitivity, need for affiliation with others, and need for nurturance." These results seemed unexpected. They may be explained in part by seeing the act of photography as intrusive and as essentially hostile behavior. FW

THE SEXES

WHEN SHE BRINGS HOME THE BACON

By Donna Sammons Carpenter

One day back in 1981, Kathe did a nice thing for her family's pocketbook — she got a job. "I was really thrilled," she remembers, "until I talked to my husband, Chuck. He hit the ceiling when I told him how much money I was going to make."

Chuck, it seems, resented the fact that his wife's paycheck would be larger than his own, and said so. "Her salary," he explains, "made me feel inadequate as a provider."

But Kathe stuck to her guns, and Chuck finally swallowed his pride and came around to her way of thinking. "I recognized that my reaction was old-fashioned," he says. "Besides, the money is nice. It's a lot easier to live on $40,000 than on the $17,000 I would bring home alone."

A few years ago, the idea of a wife outearning her husband was all but unheard of. Not anymore. In 1981, some six million American women made more money then their husbands. That established women as the principal breadwinners in 12 percent of all American husband-wife households and in 20 percent of all such black households. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, these numbers are expected to rise in coming years as more women enter the work force.

As a rule, wives who out-earn their husbands fall into one of two categories: "career women" and women who take jobs only to boost their family's income. In both cases, marital strife can result when the wife brings home more than the husband. This often forces a reassessment of some basic values.

The tradition of the male provider has strong roots in our society, and according to Robert R. Belisle, a Boston-based counselor and psychotherapist, many men have difficulty accepting the loss of this role. "Some men feel resentful," he explains. "Some men feel their masculinity and values are threatened. The underlying issue is not the amount of money; it's the threat the money poses."

So what's the solution?

Doris Cole Leslie, director of mental health and substance abuse services for Pathways Inc., a community mental health agency that serves a 10-county area in Kentucky, suggests that you "compete with your peers, not with your spouse." And, she cautions, be willing to compromise and do your part: "A good marriage is a partnership. It is two people working together toward common goals. If there's a problem, it takes two people to fix it."

Leslie and Belisle both stress the importance of communication, understanding, and mutual support. "One way to look at this is to try to eliminate some of the competitiveness between the wage earners," explains Belisle. "Most women feel a sense of accomplishment because they're pulling their weight financially. They don't think less of their husbands because of it." He adds, "If the overall goal is to have a strong, everlasting relationship, money shouldn't get in the way." FW

YOU ARE HOW YOU EAT

By Marion Long

There's at least one sizzling new area of research for social scientists this year. Timothy Moore, once a reporter for the Washington Post and now president of Fifth Avenue Franks, a hot dog manufacturer, has doggedly been conducting research into how personality is reflected in the way one eats a hot dog.

We grilled Moore about his findings, which, to be frank, seemed a little too neatly rolled up. Nevertheless, his conclusions do not warrant an entirely chili reception (sorry . . . but our puns'll get worse!). Here are the meatier parts of his report.

"Those who order their franks with just mustard," says Moore, "tend to be low-risk types — people who bank at just one bank." Conversely, the people who prefer just ketchup are fashion-conscious and like to be noticed.

There's more: Sauerkraut and mustard fans tend to have strong family ties, and those who order their dog with everything tend to be the kind of people who accept whatever life dishes up for them.

Moore was clearly on a roll, so we questioned him with even more relish. As it happens, he has come to some tantalizing conclusions about how people eat their franks. Those who eat a frank from one end straight to the other are orderly. If a person begins at one end, stops, then continues at the other, he is compulsive. A dog lover who eats the topping before the frank needs lots of love and affection. And if you skip the bun altogether, and get straight to the meat, you should be a business executive.

Frankly, this is most interesting, but let's just hope it's not an indication that 20th-century psychology is going to the dogs. FW

MODERN MARRIAGE

HOW I LIVE WITH A SUPERWOMAN

By Sen. Robert J. Dole

It's 8:15 p.m., and I'm home at last from another hard day at the office. Finally got the water to boil, and it's almost time to drop the frozen vegetables in. Boy, they look good tonight!

The Secretary of Transportation doesn't know what she's missing. But once again, it's dinnertime, and she is missing. Oh well, I've learned to accept it: I watch the pots, she watches the potholes.

I wonder when she will be home tonight? I'd call her boss, but he's not too good about returning my calls. . . . You know, times really have changed, and I guess our lifestyle shows it. Sometimes it's hard to be one half of a working couple! But we're not all that unusual anymore, given the fact that millions of American households are also headed by a working husband-and-wife team.

I must admit, however, it did take some adjusting on my part after Elizabeth became a Cabinet secretary. At first, I liked the idea, having told her Senate confirmation panel that "I only regret that I have but one wife to give to my country." But then I started to be introduced at my own speeches as the husband of Elizabeth Dole. It got worse. We had lots of pictures taken after her appointment, but I was usually not identified. If I was, the caption would simply say: "The man at right is the husband.

Next, People magazine came to town eager for a story on the Doles. A couple of journalists followed us around for two days and snapped about 300 pictures, but ended up only using three; and one of the three showed us making the bed. That photo brought a hot letter from some guy in California whose wife had read the story, and now he was helping make the bed.

He told me: "I don't mind Elizabeth getting the job, but you've got to stop showing off around the house. You're causing men problems all across the country."

I wrote back and told him, "Buster, you don't know the half of it — the only reason she was even helping was because they were taking the pictures!"

Seriously, all the attention is flattering, although our jobs can make for some real confusion. One Sunday we were enjoying a quiet morning together reading the paper. Suddenly Elizabeth cried out, "I didn't say that!" But there it was, in bold headline type: "Dole Says So-and-So." Well, Elizabeth didn't say it, but I sure did. We've learned to be careful readers.

Elizabeth and I are always asked how we maintain a solid marriage given our demanding schedules. It takes work, I'll tell you. The biggest problem is finding time to spend together. We're getting used to our mismatched schedules, but that doesn't mean we have to like it. When we do catch up with each other —

NOTICE OF LAST DAY FOR CERTAIN CLAIMANTS TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIMS

TO: ALL THOSE ASSERTING CLAIMS AGAINST ANY OF THE ABOVE-CAPTIONED DEBTORS:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York (the "Bankruptcy Court") has entered an order dated July 16, 1984 requiring all those entities which assert Claims (as defined in paragraph "1" below) EXCEPT THOSE CLAIMS DESCRIBED IN SUBPARAGRAPHS 2(a), 2(b), 2(c), 2(d) AND 2(e) AND PARAGRAPH "3" BELOW, including individuals, partnerships, corporations, estates, trusts, and governmental units, which assert a Claim against one or more of the above-captioned debtors (collectively, the "Debtors") arising out of acts or omissions of one or more of the Debtors, to file a proof of claim as hereinbelow described on or before October 31, 1984 (the "Bar Date"), failing which such claimant shall not be treated as a creditor with respect to such Claim for the purposes of voting on, and distribution under, any plan of reorganization.

1. (a) As used herein: "Claim" means (i) a right to payment, whether or not such right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured or unsecured; or (ii) a right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance if such breach gives rise to a right to payment, whether or not such right to an equitable remedy is reduced to judgment, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, secured or unsecured.
   (b) As used herein: "Property Damage Claims" means all Claims against, and debts, obligations or liabilities of, one or more of the Debtors (including, without limitation, all thereof in the nature of or sounding in tort, contract, warranty, or any other theory of law, equity or admiralty) for, relating to or arising by reason of, directly or indirectly, property damage (including, without limitation, diminution in the value thereof) or environmental damage or economic loss related thereto caused or allegedly caused, directly or indirectly, by asbestos or asbestos-containing products or any other activity or omission or products, goods, minerals or other materials and arising or allegedly arising, directly or indirectly, from acts or omissions of one or more of the Debtors (or another person, firm, corporation or other entity for or with which one or more of the Debtors is or may be liable), including, without limitation, all Claims, debts, obligations or liabilities for compensatory damages (including, without limitation, proximate, consequential, general and special damages), punitive damages, reimbursement, indemnity, warranty, contribution and subrogation.
   (c) As used herein: "AH Claims" means all Claims against, and debts, obligations or liabilities of, one or more of the Debtors or J. M. Asbestos (f/k/a Johns-Manville Canada, Inc.) or 126692 Canada, Inc. (f/k/a Johns-Manville Amiante Canada, Inc.) [the "Canadian Companies"] (including, without limitation, all thereof in the nature of or sounding in tort, contract, warranty or any other theory of law, equity or admiralty) for, relating to or arising by reason of, directly or indirectly, physical, emotional or other personal injuries or damages (whether or not diagnosable prior to the confirmation date of a plan of reorganization) caused or allegedly caused, directly or indirectly, by asbestos or asbestos-containing products and arising or allegedly arising, directly or indirectly, from acts or omissions of one or more of the Debtors or either of the Canadian Companies (or another person, firm, corporation or other entity for or with which one or more of the Debtors or either of the Canadian Companies is or may be liable), including, without limitation, all Claims, debts, obligations or liabilities for compensatory damages (including, without limitation, loss of consortium, proximate, consequential, general and special damages), punitive damages, reimbursement, indemnity, warranty, contribution and subrogation.
   "AH Claims" shall not include claims for property damage (school asbestos cases, for example) although arising directly or indirectly as a result of exposure to an asbestos health hazard.
   (d) As used herein: "Proofs of Interests" means the interests of stockholders in Manville Corporation together with rights of the stockholders granted by the certificate of incorporation (including, without limitation, rights, if any, to payment of dividends, redemptions, premiums and liquidation preferences).
2. All claimants who fail to file a proof of claim in accordance with paragraph "5" hereof on or before the Bar Date shall be forever barred from asserting such Claim against the Debtors, except that claimants may, but need not, file a proof of claim in respect of:
   (a) Claims for which a proof of claim has already been filed in accordance with the requirements of paragraph "5" hereof,
   (b) Claims listed in the Debtors' Chapter 11 Schedules as neither disputed, contingent, nor unliquidated,
   (c) Claims for damages arising from an alleged breach of warranty or an alleged defect in each case relating to the Debtors' finished roofing products,
   (d) any and all AH Claims, or
   (e) Claims for workers' compensation.
   PROOFS OF CLAIMS MUST BE FILED FOR ALL CLAIMS, OTHER THAN THOSE ENUMERATED IN SUBPARAGRAPHS (a), (b), (c), (d) AND (e) ABOVE, BY OCTOBER 31, 1984 AS PROVIDED BY PARAGRAPH "5" HEREOF. FAILURE TO SO FILE A PROOF OF CLAIM WILL FOREVER BAR SUCH CLAIMANTS FROM ASSERTING CLAIMS AGAINST THE DEBTORS.
3. THE BAR DATE SET FORTH IN THIS NOTICE APPLIES TO ALL CLAIMS EXCEPT THOSE ENUMERATED IN SUBPARAGRAPHS (a), (b), (c), (d) AND (e) ABOVE. The holders of AH Claims will not be barred from asserting such Claims against the Debtors if such Claims are filed after October 31, 1984 but prior to any applicable bar date fixed by the Bankruptcy Court for the filing of AH Claims. No such date has yet been fixed. Similarly, stockholders of Manville Corporation need not file Proofs of Interests at this time. Holders of 7.85% Sinking Fund Debentures due 2004 and holders of 9.70% Notes due 1985 issued by Johns-Manville Corporation, whose only Claim is a claim of ownership of such securities, need not file proofs of claims at this time.
4. Copies of the Debtors' Chapter 11 Schedules are available for inspection during regular business hours at the offices of (a) the Clerk of the Bankruptcy Court, Room 230, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, New York 10007, and (b) Manville Corporation, Ken-Caryl Ranch, 12999 Deer Creek Canyon, Denver, Colorado 80217.
5. Proofs of claims should conform substantially to Form No. 19 of the Official Bankruptcy Forms, except that in lieu of said standard proof of claim, those who assert a Property Damage Claim (other than a person, firm, corporation or other entity for or with which one or more of the Debtors is or may be liable) must complete and file a special proof of claim containing additional information. Said special proof of claim form can be obtained free of charge by writing to Manville Corporation, P.O. Box 17310, Denver, Colorado 80217 or, if in the United States, by calling the following toll-free telephone number: (800)-445-4000. PROOFS OF CLAIMS (INCLUDING THE SPECIAL FORM OF PROPERTY DAMAGE CLAIMS) MUST BE FILED ON OR BEFORE OCTOBER 31, 1984 WITH:
   United Merchants Information Services, Inc., P.O. Box 368, Teaneck, New Jersey 07666.
   All proofs of claims shall be deemed filed on the date received by United Merchants Information Services, Inc.

usually in airports going in opposite directions — we always have plenty to talk about. But one thing I've learned: if you're a working couple don't bring your jobs home with you.

Would you believe Elizabeth kept her Cabinet appointment a secret? It's true. A few hours before President Reagan introduced his new secretary of transportation to the nation, White House Chief of Staff Jim Baker told me, "Bob, be sure you don't miss the president's news conference tonight." Obviously, I knew Elizabeth was a top contender for the Cabinet job, but I didn't know it for sure until she walked to the podium.

When I was asked to write this article for Family Weekly, I was told by the editor that the readers wanted to know what it was like to be the husband of a "superwoman."

My wife, Elizabeth, you see, is a member of President Reagan's Cabinet. She's a Harvard Law School grad, a former Federal Trade Commissioner, and a former senior White House staff member. Some say she's a potential future president; I'd say she's a wonderful wife.

But superwoman? I'm just not sure what that is. I do know that any woman today has to deal with a society that has historically expected females to stay "in their place." Well, as far as this Kansan is concerned, his wife is fully capable of deciding just where "her place" is.

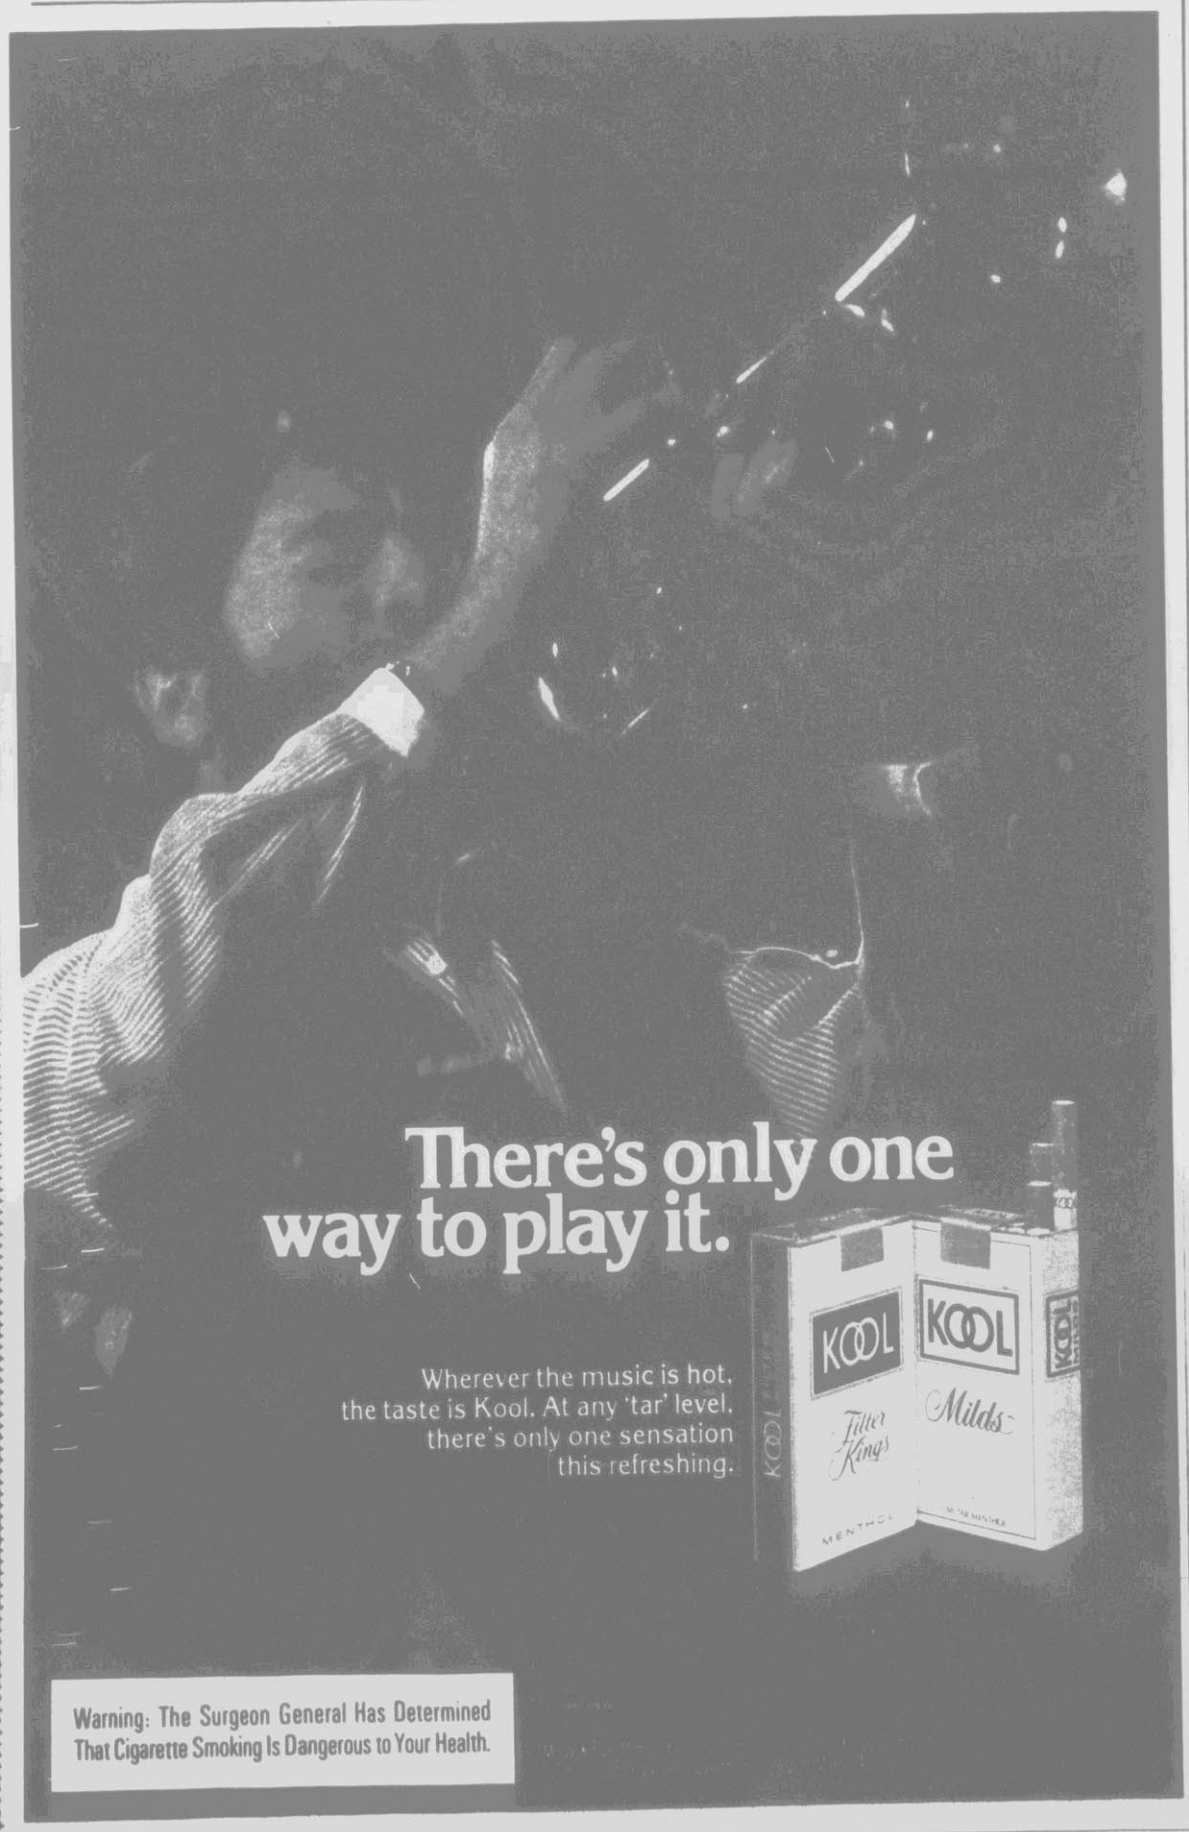

Make no mistake about it, women are making their presence felt in high-level leadership positions all across the country — and I say it's about time. This development, of course, does not mean that by definition a "superwoman" — or even a "successful" woman — must be someone who works in the White House, performs surgery, or totes an attache case. As far as I am concerned, any woman who raises a family these days must be in the running for the "super" title.

My wife often says that a "quiet revolution" is taking place in America as more and more women move into the workplace. Well, it's been almost nine years since I had the honor of marrying Elizabeth, and I will state here and now that it was never a threat to my male pride that we would not have to depend solely on me for bread and water.

The secret to Elizabeth's success is really no secret at all. She gets ahead the old-fashioned way — she earns it. My wife is a hard worker. I would say "workaholic" but that could get me in trouble at home. Suffice it to say, her idea of a relaxing evening is curling up with a thick briefing book on federal shipping regulations. Now I know why she was a Phi Beta Kappa at Duke University!

Elizabeth's discipline and dedication never cease to amaze me. I hear her practicing her speeches at home or sometimes talking on the telephone to a top aide about an upcoming meeting or appearance, and I wonder when she will take some time out for herself. However, she feels that as a woman she not only has to be good, but better. And she is, too. At [illegible] is. Speaking of which, my dinner's ready at last. Like I told you, she doesn't know what she's missing. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

MUM'S THE WORD

We've all heard moving stories about long-awaited reunions. A dog and its master. A mother and daughter. A mummy and its coffin. What? That's right, earlier this summer a mummified Egyptian from the sixth century B.C. was reunited with his beloved coffin.

It all started in 1885, when Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital loaned its mummy-in-residence, Padihershef, to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. In 1896, the museum shipped back the mummy and its inner coffin shell, but for some reason failed to return the outer coffin. No one noticed until 1982, when Egyptologist Joyce Haynes of the Smith Museum in Springfield, Mass., discovered the connection between the exposed mummy and the empty coffin. Now they're together; we hope forever.

STOP KIDDING YOURSELF

Is your child a "Real Kid"? That is the question answered by April and Dan Levy, authors of Real Kids Don't Say Please. The book, it seems, was inspired by the number of "imitation kids" (please-sayers in the authors' parlance), who exist almost exclusively on television.

Real Kids, as you might suspect, do not even faintly resemble the angels we saw on television's Little House on the Prairie. Nor are they like anyone who used to live on celestial Walton's Mountain. Those children were "please-sayers." Real Kids, by contrast, tend not to say please. Beaver Cleaver, in TV's earlier days, was a Real Kid. And the authors speculate that others who must have been real kids, judging from their adult behavior, are Ronald Reagan, Mick Jagger, and perhaps even Lady Di.

How does one tell a Real Kid from an impostor? The authors put it this way: "Real Kids are what you always think other people's kids are, and what you try to convince yourself yours aren't."

DIAL-A-MEAL

There may be worse things than being stuck in a strange city, alone, hungry and without any idea of where to get a good meal. But if you're looking for a bad experience, it'll certainly do. Well, travelers, suffer no more. The Restaurant Referral Hotline has come to your rescue.

Computer Marketing International (CMI) now has a toll-free number you can call for restaurant recommendations in any of the 100 largest cities in the United States. Dial 1-800-LETS-EAT, tell the operator where you are, what kind of food you want, and the amount of money you can spend. In return, he or she will give you a listing of the city's dining establishments, including the restaurants' specialties, hours and other information.

CMI takes calls all week from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. (PDT), and receives between 1,200 and 1,500 calls a day. So when you're away from home, eat, have a good meal, and don't worry your mother.

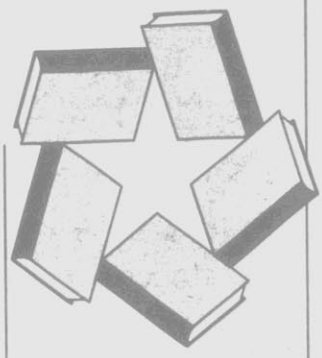

OXFORD-BOUND

There's one thing about computers that, until just a few weeks ago, had even the most enthusiastic hackers baffled: What in the world to call the perforated strips along the edge of printout paper?

Enter the innovative Susan Stamberg and Noah Adams. The two popular hosts of National Public Radio's All Things Considered ran an on-the-air contest to name the paper thingies. After sifting through suggestions such as "frips," "peef," "pinfetti," "experfedges," and "rip-offs," they decided on "perfery" and "perfory."

In an attempt to provide the new words with a bit of respectability, Stamberg and Adams then interviewed Eugene Erlich, editor of the Oxford American Dictionary. Erlich liked both versions, but said, "I think that in print it would be better recognized with the 'o' from 'perforation.' " However, Erlich said it would be some time before the new word starts popping up in dictionaries, as the term must be widely used before it gets into Oxford.

- 5 Apeldoorn Tulips (10-11 cm.). Superb, tall tulips of fiery red, gold or orange blends — real show-stoppers. Imported from Holland.
- 10 Grape Hyacinths (Muscari, 6-7 cm.). Beautiful, dainty blue blooms. Imported from Holland.
- 8 Crocus (5 cm. and up, specie). Mix of yellows, whites, purples, lovely goblet-shaped flowers. Holland imported.
- 10 Dutch Iris (6-7 cm.). Holland imported. How breathtaking they are with their orchid-like flowers of mixed blue, yellow, etc.
- 3 Queen of the Night Tulips (10-11 cm.). Intense, deep color purple almost mystical in its enchantment. Imported from Holland.
- 5 Branching Tulips (Praestans, 8 cm.). Spectacular, 3-4 blooms from every stem. Vibrant red color, Holland imported.
- 10 Allium Moly (4-5 cm.). There are many yellow flowers, but few can match Allium Moly for sheer golden color. Imported from Holland.
- 8 Drumstick Allium (4-5 cm.). Rosy, oval puffs of color are actually dozens of perfectly arranged deep pink blossoms. Like nothing else! Holland imported.
- 6 Daffodils (Narcissus, 4" circ.). Mix of cheerful, dazzling whites, yellows, two-tones, etc. U.S. grown.
- 10 Pink Debut (Allium Ostrowskianum, 4 cm. and up). Bright pink scarlet blooms rate a special place in any well-planned bulb garden. Imported from Holland.

OR—IF YOU PREFER YOU MAY TAKE A SPECIAL TRIAL MEMBERSHIP AND RECEIVE

6 FOR 1 CENT

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 11 selections you want now—here's a perfect opportunity for you to "try out" the Club on a very special trial-membership basis!

Just fill in the special "Trial-Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL 6 for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them.

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ for shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This discount purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in the number you want.

Just look at the exciting array of hit albums in this booklet—from America's greatest recording stars! Over 300 in all to choose from—and you may have ANY 11 for only a penny! To get your 11 tapes or records, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 11 selections, plus $1.85 for shipping and handling). And if you also fill in the Gold Box, you'll get an extra album as a bonus! In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having 10 days, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So act now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 60% off regular Club prices (only $2.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Bed lamp is added. 2. Sleeve is shorter. 3. Tissue box is missing. 4. Shoe is different. 5. Pitcher is different. 6. Hat is different.

- HARD SELL! Wary shopper, picking up ordinary item from table marked "Special": "What's so special about this?" Unflappable salesperson: "Thebo rderr unsar oundt heed geand thec ente risin themi ddle." Rearrange spacing of reply for sense.

...The border runs around the edge and the center is in the middle."

- X Factor! If two plus three equals 1 plus X, what does X equal? Answer in 10 or less seconds.

X equals four

- Well Read? If this zany sentence is read carefully, it can be very quickly explained just which alphabetical member is missing. Which letter?

The letter "o" is missing

- Riddle-Me-This! What insect says "Hee-haw?" The braying mantis. With whom do critics correspond? Pan pals. What became of the missing cards? They were lost in the shuffle.

CENTERS OF ATTRACTION

The diagram above has two centers (neither of which is in the middle). You are asked to surround these "centers" with additional words in accordance with the following definitions to form a word square:

1. Tracks down, as a detective.
2. Sub for a ruler.
3. Meeting plan.
4. Bulls-eye position.
5. To make beloved.
6. _____-eyed.

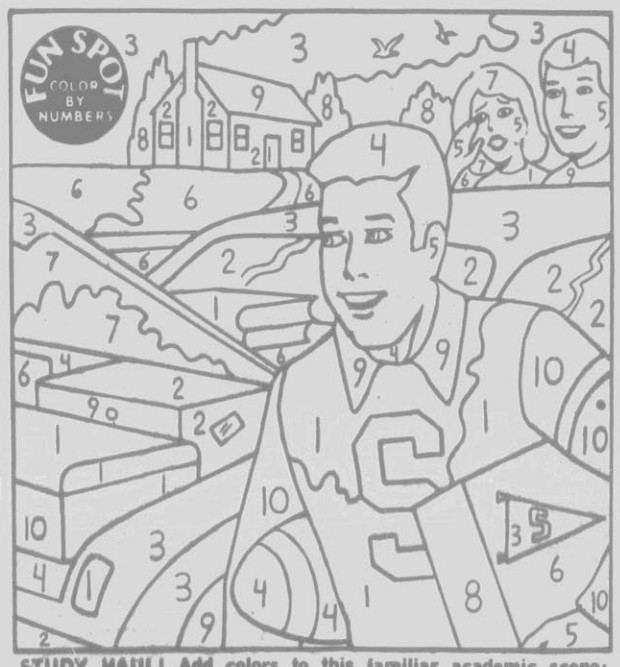

Remember, word square words read in two directions.

1. Trace 2. Regent 3. Agenda 4. Center 5. Endear 6. Starry

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: "LIAR!" CRIES MORDRED TO ACCUSATIONS AGAINST MAEVE. YET A FEW HOURS WITH THE INFORMER SUFFICE TO CHANGE HIS MIND. THE UNFORTUNATE FELLOW HAD BEEN TELLING THE TRUTH. "OH, MY UNGRATEFUL CHILD," MORDRED VOWS, "YOU WILL REGRET WHAT YOU HAVE DONE. FOR I SHALL MAKE YOU THE AGENT OF CAMELOT'S DESTRUCTION."

TO A TRUSTED LACKEY MORDRED LATER SAYS: "FOLLOW MY DAUGHTER, QUIETLY. FIND OUT WITH WHOM SHE SPEAKS AND WHERE."

IT IS NOT LONG BEFORE THREE SUSPECTS ARE UNCOVERED, BUT MORDRED ORDERS ONLY THAT THEY BE WATCHED. ON THE PRETEXT OF A SURPRISE INSPECTION HE EXAMINES THEM HIMSELF ONE DAY. KNOWING NOW THAT THEY ARE SPIES FROM CAMELOT, THEIR IDENTITIES ARE PLAIN.

THAT NIGHT MORDRED SPENDS WITH MAEVE. "SO YOU ARE IN LOVE WITH PRINCE ARN," MORDRED THINKS. "FOR YOUR TREACHERY I WILL MAKE SURE THAT YOU NEVER FIND HAPPINESS IN ALL YOUR LIFE." A DARK THOUGHT FURROWS HIS BROW. IS HE BEING TOO LENIENT WITH HER?

MORDRED'S FACE RESOLVES AT LAST INTO A SMILE. NO, HE CONCLUDES, AFTER ALL SHE IS MY DAUGHTER. ONCE MORE HIS ARMY RESUMES ITS ADVANCE, AND ONCE MORE MAEVE'S DECEIT SLOWS ITS PROGRESS. "ENJOY YOUR VICTORIES WHILE THEY LAST, PRINCE VALIANT," MORDRED SMILES. HE IS PLEASED WITH HIMSELF AND WITH HIS GOOD FORTUNE.

© 1984 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved. 8-26 2481

PASSING A SHRINE HE EVEN TOSSES A FEW COINS ON THE ALTAR. "I OWE YOU," HE THINKS. SOON IT WILL BE TIME TO TURN THE TABLES.
