IMF Chief Points To World 'Debt Explosion'

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A worldwide "debt explosion" is threatening the United States and other wealthy countries, as well as poor ones, Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, said today.

De Larosiere said it can only be contained if governments increase their revenues faster than the cost of the interest they have to pay, either by raising taxes or cutting spending, or both.

"The debt explosion is not limited to a few countries, but rather is a worldwide phenomenon," he said.

De Larosiere pointed out that in the last decade the size of government debt, compared with national income, has risen sharply in the United States and other industrial countries.

"In the United States the ratio remained almost unchanged at around 28 percent up to 1981, but then it began to increase sharply, reaching almost 36 percent in 1983," he noted.

His speech was prepared for delivery to the 40th Congress of the International Institute of Public Finance in Innsbruck, Austria. His headquarters in Washington distributed advance copies to reporters.

The IMF also released a table showing that the speed of the debt increase was greater in the United States than in Japan and Italy, countries where the government's debt burden amounts to more than half a year's total national income: 78.9 percent in Italy, 52.5 percent in Japan.

The rise was also faster in the United States than in Britain or West Germany, but not so rapid as in Canada or as in De Larosiere's native France.

De Larosiere said it could become difficult for countries to raise taxes or to cut spending enough to ease the problem. In that case they may decide that the only solution is "to inflate their way out of the problem," he suggested.

He recalled that some past gov-

Drunk Driving Blamed In Crash That Killed 7

By PAUL PAGE

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police blame drunk driving for a weekend disaster in which a runaway car plowed into a crowded bus stop, wiping out a family of five and taking two other lives.

Robert Lee Williams, 41, of Washington, the driver, has been charged with vehicular homicide, reckless driving and driving while intoxicated, police Sgt. Joe Gentile said Sunday.

Gentile said that Theodore Crisp and Sandra Scott, both 24, and their three children were killed in the crash at 6:15 p.m. Saturday. Witnesses said Williams' car struck a median strip, flew into the air and smashed into the bus stop outside the Washington Navy Yard, 12 blocks from the U.S. Capitol.

The children were identified as Shanta Scott, 5, Sophia Scott, 1, and two-week-old Tandra Scott.

Charquita McKethan, 6 months old, was pronounced dead at the scene. Her mother, Charron, 18, was listed in fair condition in a Washington hospital.

Linda Taylor, 18, also struck by the car, died Sunday in a hospital. Another victim, Willie Caliham, 19, was listed in serious condition.

Williams was listed in fair condition Sunday night. The driver and all of the victims were from Washington.

Ethel Smith of the District of Columbia's Human Services Department said the dead woman's mother told her there was no insurance and "she told me she had no money to bury the family."

Gentile said, however, that numerous offers of money came in Sunday.

"It was a bloody massacre," police Capt. James Thorne said. "I've been 21 years on this job and I've never seen anything like it."

Police would not say what blood-alcohol tests on Williams showed, but Gentile said that to be charged with driving while intoxicated a driver must have a minimum of 0.10 percent of alcohol in the blood.

"Evidence indicates that the accident was caused by excessive speed and intoxication," he said.

Williams' mother, Carjell Williams, said her son had been at a wedding reception at which he "drank a little beer and champagne."

Gentile said Williams was heading the wrong way on a one-bound street when his car hit the median strip. After landing on the sidewalk and plowing forward more than 120 feet into the pedestrians, he said, the vehicle flipped over and caught fire.

Witnesses helped pull the injured driver from the car, he said.

The bus stop is on a narrow sidewalk backed by a large wall that encloses the Navy Yard. "Those people didn't have an escape route," said Gentile.

"The victims were splattered up against the wall," said Neil Della-Camera, a member of the fire department. "When we got there, there were three babies on the ground and three adults beside them."

Washington police said in a statement that 16 of the city's 43 traffic fatalities so far this year were alcohol related and two were narcotics related. Police said 24 of those killed were pedestrians.

Tax Furor Trying Time For Ferraro

NEW YORK (AP) — The furor over the finances of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro and her husband was "one of the worst weeks" of their lives and brought her mother-in-law to tears, she says.

"The worst part is watching my family and what it's doing to them," Ms. Ferraro said during interviews with her and her husband, John Zaccaro, in this week's Time and Newsweek magazines.

"My husband is a fine decent man. And I ache for him," she said of the controversy over disclosure of his income tax records. "I can't tell you what it has been like for him because he is private, he is good. His mother called up on the phone ... and was crying."

Zaccaro lost 10 pounds and postponed a minor hernia operation during the public debate over his finances. He had resisted disclosing his real estate business records along with his wife's.

"Why should I be held for all this nonsense, questions about people that I do business with?" he asked. "They have no right to do that. My privacy is ruined."

"Not too many husbands could put up with all this stuff all the time," Ms. Ferraro said. "But I knew where he was coming from, and we've never had a problem."

"My girls (were) saying, 'Why are they doing this to Daddy and to you?'" she said.

"Just my family I feel badly for," she said. "And it's because of me that they're suffering."

Firefighters Form Union; 33 Involved

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Fire Department have formed a group called the Greenville Professional Firefighters Association partly because they want to legislate "better equipment and protective devices," according to Jon West, the president-to-be.

Other than that, West said the group has three main objectives: 1) to assist in the professional development of the firefighter and the fire and rescue services of the community, 2) to assist in providing publicity and support for projects of public service, and 3) to oversee the welfare of its members and to nurture brotherhood through its membership.

"We're not trying to be a bunch of radicals. We're doing it for the citizens of Greenville and for ourselves," he said.

The group, to be called Local Union 2941, is affiliated with the International Association of Firefighters. Locally, it is composed of 33 members and plans to meet once a month.

"The only thing I can tell you," Fire Chief Jennis Allen said, "is that it's a very minor part of joining the union. And I don't know if they're going to get any better benefits than the city provides."

Allen said a similar group was formed some 15 years ago, but "wouldn't pay their dues." He added that he doesn't think "any of the ones joining now were members of the old group."

West said some of the members of the fire department "felt like they wanted to belong to a professional organization such as this one, so we formed it."

City Manager Gail Meeks said she doesn't "know enough about the organization to offer a comment."

The group will be presented a charter tonight at the Sheraton by Cel Kelly, a representative of the International Association of Firefighters.

Michael Jordan will be vice president and Noel Harris will serve as secretary-treasurer, West said.

Helms Called Weak On Women's Issues

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Women should support Gov. Jim Hunt's candidacy for U.S. Senate because he "has a clear understanding" of their feelings on day care and other issues, several Hunt supporters said today.

"We believe that Sen. (Jesse) Helms devotes too much of his time pushing his own special causes and too little time representing the hopes and aspirations of North Carolina's women," said Susan Law, executive director of Northwest Child Development Council.

Ms. Law and six other women spoke at a news conference at the Learning Together Day Care Center, a non-profit program designed to provide a model for integrating normal and disabled children.

The women said the location of the news conference, organized by Hunt's Senate campaign, was meant to emphasize the importance of day care to working women.

"Women cannot work without day care. There's no way," said Debby Reed, a nurse.

Ms. Law said Hunt had "worked diligently to ensure that day care is affordable and available to middle and low income families," while Helms had ignored the issue.

Claude Allen, spokesman for Helms, said a response was being prepared.

Pointing out that Sunday was Women's Equality Day, the 64th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment giving women the right to vote, Ms. Law said women should vote for the candidate they believed would help them "continue to make progress toward equal pay, equal opportunity and equal rights."

She said Hunt had supported government funding of education and day care, equal pay for comparable work, Social Security, environmental protection and an end to the nuclear arms race. All those issues are of special concern to women, Ms. Law said.

Other participants in the news conference were a retired educator, a fast-food restaurant employee, a St. Augustine's College professor, a nutritionist and a widow.

PROJECT TORNADO FOCUS

Project Tornado F.O.C.U.S. (Follow Up and Community Support) has asked Hotline to appeal for persons directly affected by the March 28 tornadoes to call 752-0118 or 752-0119, Ext. 7, if they feel a need for continued support available through various human service agencies. Workers will also be making door-to-door assessments of those affected by the tornadoes to determine their special needs. Anxiety, depression, fear, guilt and grief are common reactions to crisis, Laura Ferguson, a F.O.C.U.S. outreach worker, said, but may persist if not attended to.

BULK BARN FIRE — Pitt County firemen and workers on the Hardee Farm near Simpson remove damaged tobacco from one of three bulk tobacco barns after a fire early this morning caused heavy damage. Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, said at the scene, the barns were owned by Lynn Raynomd Hardee. There were no damage estimates available this morning. Joyner said trucks from Simpson, Eastern Pines, Black Jack and Grimesland were called to battle the blaze. There were no injuries reported. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon double-check your vocational activities to make sure that you have them as you wish them to be and correct whatever errors exist in your detailed plans.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Taking risks on your job in the morning could be costly, so do your work well and later a bigwig gives you right advice for the days ahead.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Forget fun in the morning and get busy on creative work so that it is neat and artistic and you gain fine benefits from it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use tact in handling some basic problematical affair and get good results, but tonight you can enjoy hobbies with your friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Take no chances in anything today and then you can have a fine time at home with kin and friends in the evening.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Find a more practical course of action to follow that cuts down on stumbling blocks in the path of your progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get out of that slough of despond you are in in the morning, and tonight you can handle monetary affairs very well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to do something positive if you are to rid yourself of a secret anxiety, and then get your practical affairs working better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You find it difficult early to gain some cherished aim, but persevere and it can soon be yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study that outside affair and then fix it to your liking. Then go after your aims in a most positive way and gain them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have a progressive idea early, but you find it hard to get started on it. After lunch get a bigwig interested in it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are confused just how to handle an obligation in the morning, but after lunch try a new slant and it works out fine.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Discuss some moot point that is difficult to solve with a partner, and then you can come to a real understanding by evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will find it very hard to get on a course of action and stick to it, so teach the importance of being consistent early. Then the life changes and your progeny will be much concerned with the problems of others and will want to help them.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Pogo

Well dog my cats, it was the anniversary of Walt Kelly's birthday this past Saturday. Luckily, promptness was never too important to Kelly's creations, the cartoon characters in "Pogo." Pogo, Albert the Alligator, J. P. Malarkey, members of the Jack Acid Society, and all the others spent many happy hours in Okefenokee Swamp driving each other to distraction. Today, years later, the bottom of Okefenokee Swamp is still cluttered with fish hooks and lost baseballs.

Fire Damages Pitt Residence

County fire officials said today they have not determined the cause of a fire that heavily damaged a residence near Falkland Sunday.

According to Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner a 12:52 p.m. blaze Sunday at the home of Frank Chavis left the structure heavily damaged. There were no injuries, Joyner said. The house is located on N.C. 222 one-and-one-half miles west of Falkland.

Fire departments from Falkland, Fountain, Sharp Point and Belvoir responded to the fire call, Joyner said.

Meeting Set

Thefts, B&E Investigated

Thefts from cars and front porches and a breaking and entering were reported to Greenville police this weekend.

Harold D. Clifton reported that a silver hood ornament valued at $2,000 was taken from his 1971 Rolls Royce while it was parked in the lot of King and Queen North.

Windows were broken and purses were stolen from cars parked in the parking lots of Carolina East Centre, the King and Queen North, and Harvey's. Owners were identified as Rebecca Holloman Carraway of Farmville, Susan Wordsworth of Route 4, Rocky Mount, George Anna Chambers, and Cindy Nicholson. All of the cars were reportedly locked with purses under the seats.

A .38 caliber gun was reportedly stolen from a vehicle parked at the Opry House. The owner was identified as William Gene Harris of Route 2, Farmville.

Hubcaps were taken from cars parked in both Carolina East Mall and The Plaza. Those taken from the vehicle of Betty Grady Moore Saturday prior to 5:52 p.m. were valued at $350; those from the vehicle of Melrose Moore, $200. A headlight cover valued at $75 was reported taken from the vehicle of Lance Knowlton parked near the corner of Third and Cotanche Streets.

Some $420 worth of jewelry and clothes was reportedly taken from a room at the Ramada Inn. The owner was identified as Evangeline Richardson of Hartsdale, N.Y.

Two bicycles were reportedly stolen from the front porch of the Alfred Moncla residence at 109 Warren St. Sunday at 10:16 a.m. Value of the two was estimated at $300. A bicycle was also reported stolen from the home of Nettie Williams Vandiford Sunday at 2:15 p.m.

Breaking and entering of several offices in the Minges Building, corner of Third Street and Evans Mall, was reported at 1:15 a.m. Sunday. Included were offices of First State Bank and the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency. Nothing had been discovered missing at the time the report was filed.

Orientation

The Lutheran Church Nursery School, located at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1801 S. Elm St., announces orientation dates for children pre-registered for the 1984-85 school year.

According to Program Director Mary Muzzarelli, the 4 year old class will meet from 10-11 a.m. Wednesday. Those enrolled in the 3 year old program will meet Thursday from 10-11 a.m. Parents are invited to stay with the children during this time.

Debt ...

ernments wiped out their big domestic debts by a burst of inflation. He did not mention which countries he had in mind, but huge inflations had that effect in Germany after both World Wars.

This country's debts are owed mainly to its own citizens. The debt crisis in Latin America and other poor areas has been due to heavy borrowing outside the country.

De Larosiere said that governments must reassess their budgets.

"As the growth of public expenditure has been caused mainly by social expenditure, so-called entitlements must be scrutinized to see that those who are receiving them actually qualify, and that those who do qualify do not receive transfers (of money) that can not be financed," he said.

He did not mention military spending, but said "no expenditure should be seen as untouchable."

Without mentioning any country by name, he also warned against industrial countries thinking they have beaten inflation, and then going on to "pursue with abandon" policies that would revive it.

"If this happens, the sacrifices endured in the past three to four years would have been in vain," he said.

Accidents Are Reported

Two accidents were reported by Greenville police over the weekend.

Mack Vernon Jones, 19, of Route 1, Belvedere, was charged with driving while impaired after his car struck three trees on Conley Street here while he was being pursued by police, according to police reports. The driver was reportedly injured and taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Damage to his car was estimated at $3,500; damage to the trees owned by Julius Streeter, $200.

Cars collided in the parking lot of Carolina East Mall Saturday at 4:08 p.m. Some $100 damage was reported done to a car owned by Phyllis Gilbert Shirley of Route 2, Gritton. Police reported the other car was owned by Donna Dreher Packard of Route 1, Winterville. Damage was estimated at $300.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A

OVERCOMING ANXIETY

There are a lot of people who will not fly because they have an extreme anxiety or fear of flying. Let's face it, a lot of people do not get needed dental care because, they too, have anxiety about the dental chair. It is estimated that 10 to 12 million people won't go to the dentist for necessary dental work strictly because of this anxiety.

When you think about it, the concept is ludicrous. Dental care in today's modern dental office is virtually without real pain. If you want some REAL pain, experience a toothache from a root abcess and DON'T go to a dentist for relief. That's not anxiety. That's pain.

Regular dental care will PREVENT pain by keeping your mouth healthy. NOT going to the dentist will set you up - not for anxiety - but for a possible tooth loss accompanied by the pain you could have avoided in the first place. If you have any anxiety, talk to your dentist about it and everything will be done to make sure you're comfortable. Don't neglect needed dental care because of unwarranted anxiety.

Wedding Vows Are Solemnized Sunday

The wedding ceremony of LuAnn Cora Snowden and Jerry Wayne Avery was solemnized at 12:30 p.m. Sunday in the chapel of St. James United Methodist Church. Conducting the double ring ceremony was the Rev. Caswell E. Shaw.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Ralph Snowden of Greenville and the late Mr. Snowden. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton E. Russell of Greenville are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was escorted by her brother, Terence Ralph Snowden of Huddleston, Va.

Nancy Snowden Soble, sister of the bride, of Alexandria, Va., was matron of honor and the best man was the father of the bridegroom.

The bride wore an ivory floor length gown of chantilly lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline and natural waist. Tiers of chantilly lace accented the skirt of the gown. A satin ribbon encircled the waist accented with streamers. She carried a formal silk cascade bouquet of white phalaenopsis orchids and dusty rose alstromerias and asters. She wore matching flowers in her hair. The bride wore a pearl necklace which was a gift to her mother from her father on their wedding day.

The honor attendant wore a cocktail length dress of dusty rose taffeta fashioned with a sweetheart neckline worn off-shoulder. The natural waist was accented with a sash with a back bow and the full skirt ended in a ruffle. She carried a bouquet of dusty rose alstromerias and asters. She wore matching flowers in her hair.

The mothers of the couple were given long-stemmed roses after the ceremony.

A luncheon and cake cutting was held at the home of the bride's mother.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attended East Carolina University, where she is employed by the School of Medicine. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed by the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department.

Mrs. John Milton May of Winterville entertained at a bridal luncheon at her home Saturday.

Melody Carol Taylor Is Bride Of Dalton E. Wainwright

The wedding ceremony of Melody Carol Taylor and Dalton Earl Wainwright took place at the Junior Chapel Church in Vanceboro Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

The Rev. Harry Jones performed the double ring ceremony. A program of piano music was presented by Sandra McCandless. Phillip McCandless sang "Truly," "Let It Be Me" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jamie R. Taylor of Greenville and the late Carol Tripp Taylor. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Wainwright of Greenville.

Ushers for the ceremony were Arlan Ray Wainwright, brother of the bridegroom, and Jerry Cullipher, both of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk floral Venice lace which continued over the empire bodice. Matching lace continued over the empire bodice and encircled the waistline. It also edged the cuffs of the full bishop sleeves. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accented at the hemline with a ruffled flounce edged in miniature Venice lace topped by a row of floral lace. Appliques of matching lace were scattered over the skirt front. She wore a walking length veil of illusion bordered with a double row of silk lace attached to a Juliet cap overlaid with matching lace. The bride carried a bouquet of white silk roses, daisies, stephanotis, lily of the valley, miniature white carnations, baby's breath and pink sweetheart roses.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. Angie Piner served cake and Ginny Chandler poured punch. Charlene Tripp presided at the register.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of J.H. Rose High School.

Former Student Writes A Surprising Letter

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column since you started writing—nearly 30 years ago. Last year you told your readers to call or write to a school teacher who made a difference in their lives—a teacher who stayed after school to give a slow learner a little extra help, a teacher who encouraged a student to finish school when he wanted to quit and get a job.

Well, can you imagine how thrilled I was to receive a letter from a student I taught 62 years ago! He wanted to thank me for staying after school to teach him how to tell time when he was in the second grade!

Abby, I am 95 years old and live in a nursing home, and I don't expect to have many more surprises as happy as this one. Thank you! MISS ANDERSON

DEAR MISS ANDERSON: I hope your letter inspires others to pick up on the suggestion. Thank you for writing. Flowers mean so much more when the recipients can still smell them.

DEAR ABBY: I am in love with a handsome guy I'll call Joe. We had plans to get married next month.

Well, Joe rented a motel room for the two of us to be alone on the weekend. He called me on the phone and told me to go to the desk and ask for the key to Room 103 and he would be there. I was supposed to meet him at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday.

I got there 20 minutes early and found Joe in bed with another girl! I told him the wedding was off and I gave him back his ring. He says he still loves me and the girl I caught him with means nothing to him.

My friends say I should give Joe another chance. My family says I should forget him. Please help me make the right decision.

CONFUSED

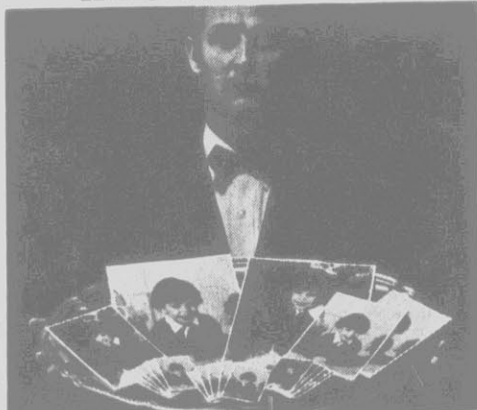

DEAR CONFUSED: I vote with your family. "Joe must go!"

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell your readers not to ask, "Is that a new dress you're wearing?" or "Where did you get those shoes?" or purse, or whatever.

I can't afford to spend a bundle on clothes, so I usually shop at a "near-new" thrift shop, or Goodwill, and it's embarrassing for me to have to say, "No, it's not new, I got it at Goodwill." Once in a while I may splurge and buy a dress at K-Mart or Target, but not often.

Pitfalls

As of right now, Ronald Reagan "has it made". The Republican Party candidate for four more years in the White House was chosen by acclamation (no convention was really needed, that was a formality). He and his admirers can point to any number of polls showing him well ahead by a good margin in terms of popularity and approval of his record.

He can also point to a healthy employment rate, rising income, rising national production and optimism. National prosperity is up and all signs indicate continued growth in the foreseeable future, coupled with forecasts it may well go on for a number of years.

Almost everywhere he looks, Mr. Reagan has reason for satisfaction. His running-mate is recognized as a loyal, proven and trusted vice president. As a practical politician he undoubtedly finds it helpful to have the Kremlin firmly aligned against him (a man is also known by his enemies, we are told, and the Soviet Union has been combining its foreign policies and propaganda and "misinformation" machines in an effort to make his road at home and abroad more difficult).

Forget the gaffes. Everybody makes them; some once-a-month, and during his term they have been relatively infrequent. Most of them proved very forgettable to a largely understanding public.

As a candidate for re-election, he does have problems.

The Ferraro hysteria will not quickly fade, and her personality as well as performance under fire has created a most favorable image of the lady.

Her running-mate has a track record as a hard, experienced campaigner. Walter Mondale can also claim untapped resources in his bag to pose a formidable threat.

Overconfidence is another big risk. It is not something to be avoided only by Mr. Reagan but by his entire campaign organization and by those who expect to vote for him in November. They will be counting votes, then ... not poll trends.

Other pitfalls always confront candidates: the wrong word spoken at the wrong time (even off the record) is one. Another: over-zealous friends can do more harm than equally zealous foes. And lastly, anything can happen in the weeks before Election Day.

Obviously, nomination is a long way from election ... or re-election.

Outmoded

It had the look of the 1960s, a group of "Yuppies" last week marching through Dallas in protest of Reagan administration policies.

News report called it a rampage with participants wearing war paint, shouting obscenities, hurling paint, spitting on passersby, burning an American flag and doing other damage.

In contrast to the 1960s the Dallas police were the model of restraint, so much so they drew the approval of an American Civil Liberties Union monitor. The monitor, Kurt Alback, said police showed more restraint than he had ever seen. He noted the ACLU did not condone breaking the law, but rather supported free speech.

We wonder what the "Yuppies" think they accomplished, or if they really wanted to accomplish anything. Such behavior is not the way to change things these days, and the real result might be to build sympathy for the very policies being opposed.

We are, indeed, a society of free speech rather than violent and forced change. If we truly wish to improve things we will do it through the democratic processes which we have established and so carefully built.

Regulations Slow The Process

RALEIGH — "Regulation, regulation, everywhere. Nor any drop to drink."

Dr. David Moreau of UNC-Chapel Hill's city planning department would no doubt apologize to the poet Coleridge for such unartistic use of his lines from the "Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner." But, according to Moreau, the multiple layers of government bureaucracy which must approve new water supply projects in the state may lead to serious water shortages in coming years.

Focusing on Chapel Hill's ongoing problems with water supply, Moreau says other towns and cities may face the same situation in the future. "While a number of circumstances in the 16-year Chapel Hill saga appear unique, the tangle of bureaucracies and regulations that have complicated the Chapel Hill story now reach into municipalities throughout the state. The Environmental Management Commission, the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the N.C. Department of Human Resources, and other state and federal agencies have authority over various aspects of local water and sewer systems," Moreau writes in the June issue of N.C. Insight magazine.

Local officials must not only wind their ways through this "labyrinth of intergovernmental passages," he says, but they must do so while trying to deal with the increasingly technical aspects of water pollution and the local issues of land-use planning and zoning.

No wonder it is taking more and more time to get a water supply project built these days. "Determination of appropriate size, timing and location of waste treatment facilities is now a matter of negotiation among local, state and federal administrators," he says. The many applications for grants, plan approvals and construction funds which must be made first to the state and then to the federal government "have caused the construction of new facilities to take up to 10 years," Moreau says.

Expansion of an existing water supply from surface water sources has taken the cities of Asheboro, Chapel Hill and Durham from three to five years to complete because of the extra paperwork. Moreau also claims that the red tape and conditions imposed by the federal and state bureaucracies "added as much as 5 percent to the cost of these projects and contributed to delays that have resulted in significant reductions in service over the past several years."

It's no secret that an area's growth is directly tied to the amount of water it can offer new industry. With state and federal officials making so many decisions about new water supplies, are they also indirectly deciding which areas will grow and which ones will not? Are they also taking from locally elected officials the right to make local decisions? For years, federal and state funds accompanied all of this regulation. Local government put up with its bigger brothers because of the big money involved. Between 1973 and 1982, more than $1 billion in federal and state aid was handed over to local water projects.

But that money is now beginning to dry up. In fiscal 1984, federal money for water projects was back down to its 1976 level and it will drop even more this year. The legislature last year added a half cent sales tax, part of which is to go to water projects, but it also rescinded authority for the governor to call for additional water bonds.

Moreau does not advocate elimination of federal and state participation in water supply decisions. Rather, he'd prefer a coordinated effort among the three levels of government which would insure that local governments are not overwhelmed by their bigger partners.

Headed For The Trash Can

DALLAS — Fearful that the old warmonger albatross still poses the gravest threat to Ronald Reagan's re-election, White House agents diluted the platform's national security plank to cast a long shadow on the Soviet policies of a second term.

No other part of a militantly conservative platform — from taxes to the gold standard to abortion — sacrificed Reagan's long-held positions for short-term electoral expediency. Watering down some of the president's cherished convictions on how to deal with the Soviet Union worries hard-liners more than it angers them.

"This is a campaign document that will go into the trash can after the election," said one Reaganite who fought to preserve important portions of the 1980 platform, "but not before it gives the arms controllers new ammunition to fight us in the second term." Whereas the party economic doctrine of the future proceeds naturally from the 1980 platform to the embarrassment of cautious presidential aides, the official word on national security returns to pre-Reagan orthodoxy.

That signals victory by White House staffers, in this case led by deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver. He has played the leading role in the bitter struggle to rid Reagan of any vestige of Attila the Hun and array him in the mantle of peace. Wordy though the national security treatise was, it omitted the declaration of 1980 that peace demands U.S. military "superiority." Additions to the defense plank of "technological superiority" and "qualitative superiority" in naval power, added at the last minute to appease conservatives, were carefully hedged.

More significant than the outright deletion of "military superiority" was the studied effort to downplay Soviet cheating on SALT and other treaties. An original draft written at the Pentagon inserted a flat prohibition on any and all future U.S.-Soviet arms control treaties "until the question of Soviet non-compliance with existing treaties" has been resolved. That is precisely the president's belief, but it was knocked out at the White House's request.

In step with Reagan's own long-held convictions, hard-liners wanted the platform to spell out the president's intention of "build" a new space-based defense against the primary Soviet military threat — land-based nuclear missiles. Panicking at the prospect of losing votes in November on the "Star Wars" issue (even though most polling data show a highly favorable response), the White House sent National Security Council aide Don Fortier here to safeguard Reagan's olive branch.

Fortier forced substitution of "achieve" for "build," with the help of Sen. John Warner of Virginia and calls from Washington eventually wearing down the platform subcommittee chairman, Rep. Marjorie Holt of Maryland.

The difference is fundamental: "build" means deploy; "achieve" focuses on narrow technical feasibility, not deployment. For a fancied short-term gain between now and Nov. 6, the Republican Party opened the door wider to followers of the discredited doctrine called MAD — mutual assured destruction. That door could have been nailed shut and party policy set for the long future.

To defense-oriented Reaganites who understood the president's convictions long before he characterized the Soviet union as an "evil empire," nuances in the party's roadmap for future dealings with Moscow contradict reality. Arms control, treated secondarily in 1980 and always regarded suspiciously by Reagan and his hard-line advisers, got top billing in the 1984 defense plank.

Another sop to electoral politics at the expense of reality was initial failure to mention the Midgetman missile at all because some critics have attacked it as destabilizing. Yet it represents Reagan's most notable effort to add a new strategic weapon to help close what used to be called the "window of vulnerability" — a phrase not to be found in the 1984 platform because it might enhance the warmonger image. The Midgetman finally was tucked in by Rep. Jack Kemp.

If he is re-elected, the president's true conviction about Moscow will at once dominate his actions — elevating Soviet treaty violations, Star Wars and other elements of his Soviet policy to their pre-eminence. But by fuzzing up the clearest view of the Soviet Union any president has had since World War II, Reagan's political men have handed his critics new tools for harassment to revive MAD and press for arms control at any price. The most pragmatic plank of a platform decided for adherence to ideology may prove most costly to Ronald Reagan after the election.

Yalta Jobs A Memory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yalta. A generation ago, you could start a good political fight — and lots were — just by mentioning the agreement reached by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin at the Black Sea resort bearing that name toward the end of World War II.

Interpretations varied, but to a number of prominent conservatives, including the followers of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, there never was any doubt: it was a sellout of Eastern Europe to the Soviet Union.

The Republicans at their 1952 convention pledged to repudiate the agreement. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the GOP candidate, campaigned on a platform of "rolling back" communism.

Eisenhower won easily over Adlai E. Stevenson, but he neither repudiated Yalta nor rolled back communism during his eight years in the White House.

And while Americans sympathized with the Hungarians in their 1956 revolt, with the Czechs in 1968 and with the Poles as they struggled for democracy, the United States sat on the sidelines without intervening.

Through the years, U.S. administrations have used trading privileges and other economic incentives to try to alter domestic policies in Eastern Europe. But apart from what President Lyndon B. Johnson called "building bridges," the United States has relied mostly on evolution to bring about change.

Yalta receded into history. Third-party candidate George C.

Wallace in 1968 accused the Democrats and Republicans of betraying Eastern Europe through Yalta. But the United States recognized East Germany diplomatically a few years later and the debate appeared to be over — except for a flareup over the 1975 Helsinki agreement.

Signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and 33 other countries, it supported human rights in Europe by promising exchanges of people and ideas between East and West. At the same time, however, the agreement apparently and implicitly accepted Europe's postwar boundaries.

There matters rested until President Reagan spoke at a White House luncheon the other day (Aug. 17) commemorating the 40th anniversary of the Warsaw uprising against the Nazis.

The United States could not accept the "permanent subjugation of the people of Eastern Europe," Reagan said. "We reject any interpretation of the Yalta agreement that suggests American consent for the division of Europe into spheres of influence."

Actually, the president's remarks were foreshadowed in a speech by Vice President George Bush last September in Vienna and Secretary of State George P. Shultz last January in Stockholm.

Bush, after a tour that included stops in Romania and Hungary, said "we recognize no lawful division of Europe." Shultz, at a European security conference, declared Germany was "heartlessly divided" and said "this division is the essence of Europe's security and human rights problem, and we all know it."

Shultz recently followed up Reagan's remarks with a speech in Chicago to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in which he said "we will never accept the idea of a divided Europe. Time is not on the side of imperial domination."

The platform adopted by the Republican convention does not attack the Yalta agreement, as the GOP did in 1952. It says "We stand in solidarity with the peoples of Eastern Europe: the Poles, Hungarians, East Germans, Czechs, Romanians, Yugoslavs, Bulgarians, Ukrainians, Baltic peoples, Armenians, and all captive nations who struggle daily against their Soviet masters."

The Soviets, meanwhile, condemned Reagan's remarks. They said through Tass, the news agency, that he had a "pathological hatred of socialism and communism" and had brought back the "worst rhetoric of the Cold War."

President Franklin Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet leader Josef Stalin met secretly at Yalta for a week in February 1945. Roosevelt and Churchill wanted Stalin to declare war on Japan, and he did — in exchange for a promise that the Soviets would acquire control over the southern Sakhalin Islands. Also, a veto system for the U.N. Security Council was approved.

That much has not been in dispute. What they decided to do about Eastern Europe is another matter.

Critics charged Roosevelt accepted the Red Army's control of Eastern Europe, thereby selling out Poland and the other nations that Moscow has since dominated.

Defenders of the agreement said it called for "free unfettered elections" in Poland while asserting the "right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live."

Strength For Today

John Donne was a famous religious and literary figure who lived at the same time as William Shakespeare. Donne had been a dissolute young man who finally "got religion" and ultimately became dean of St. Paul's Cathedral. He was one of the great religious leaders of his time. He also wrote outstanding poetry. One of his poems is titled "Goe, and Catche a Falling Starre."

The attention of most of us is usually drawn toward the things immediately about us on this earth. Too seldom do we turn our eyes upward. We should remember that we live our lives not in a corner but in the vastness of a God-created universe. Let us think of ourselves as children of that God who made both us and the starry heavens. We are part of that grandeur. Let us live up to our destiny.

Let us strive to "Goe and catche a falling starre."

Study Says Heat Spurs Some On, Discourages Others

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heat like that which baked the Republican conventioners in Dallas makes many Americans miserable, but in the Sun Belt they still tough it out and go to work, a study indicates.

Folks living in cities where hot weather is common don't seem deterred from their jobs by the heat, the study said, but extreme hot weather does keep Northerners at home.

And rain also reduces work attendance, if it occurs during rush hours or during the daytime on weekends.

Robert E. Davis and Roger S. Ulrich of the University of Delaware collected the data for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in an effort to detail weather's effect on people. They studied the work records of 60,000 federal employees across the nation for five years.

The researchers said they were surprised to learn that in Sun Belt cities hot weather actually seems to encourage people to go to work.

For example, they cited one five-day period in Phoenix, Ariz., when the temperature topped 110 degrees Fahrenheit every day, and attendance at work was 6 percent above normal.

But, they added, once it cools off after several extraordinarily hot days in these communities, work attendance dips noticeably.

"In other words, people in Sun

Belt cities are more likely to work during uncomfortable summer weather conditions and take leave time when the weather improves," they said.

They suggested that this occurs because the residents have adapted to their climate and are more likely to enjoy the benefits of air conditioning at home and work.

The arrival of cooler weather, when more outdoor activities could be enjoyed, correlates with an increase in absenteeism.

Northerners, less accustomed to the heat and less likely to have air conditioning, don't react as well to the heat.

When unusually hot weather strikes those communities, work attendance dips 2 percent to 3 percent, they observed. And, they added, the effect is increased if nighttime temperatures remain above normal for several days.

"In homes without air conditioning in northern cities, high night-time temperatures undoubtedly produce sleeplessness and other stresses that lead to increased absenteeism," Davis and Ulrich concluded.

Turning to rainfall, they were not surprised to learn that if it rains during rush hour, attendance at work declines. The drop typically is 2 percent to 3 percent, they said, although it can reach 10 percent of workers in extreme cases.

They speculated that "when workers are deciding whether or not to go to work, the anticipated stress of driving in rain deters some from attending, especially if they are unmotivated with respect to their jobs."

Rain occurring well before, or after, rush hour, however, had no effect on attendance.

However, the researchers did discover a result they named the "rainy weekend effect," which did lead to a measureable change in the number of people at work.

When there was significant weekend rain during daylight hours, they reported, attendance at the workplace on Mondays fell by about 3 percent. But if the weekend rain was at night, there was no change on Monday's workforce.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ6 ♥Q105 ♦AJ85 ♣AJ9

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 NT 2 ♥ 2 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's bid of two spades is competitive, not forcing. Had he wanted to get to game he could have either cue-bid the enemy suit or jumped in spades. Since you have a minimum no trump and two of your points rate to be wasted, there is no future in this hand. Pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q10543 ♥K65 ♦AJ94 ♣7

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South

1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—This is a matter of simple arithmetic. In support of spades, your hand revalues to some 14 points even if you don't upgrade the king of hearts with the overcall in front of you. The equivalent of an opening bid facing an opening bid is enough for game, so jump to four spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠6 ♥AQJ83 ♦AKJ6 ♣765

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What do you bid now?

A.—You have the values for a takeout double, but not enough to double and then show your suit should partner respond in spades. Therefore, your only course of action is to overcall one heart.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK854 ♥AJ ♦AQ7 ♣A95

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

2 NT Pass 4 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—In terms of high-card count you may have a minimum two no trump opening bid, but that does not allow for the fact you possess all four aces and a five-card suit. That brings your hand up to a maximum, so you should accept partner's invitation.

We don't mind a bid of six no trump, but why not bid six spades en route. By advising partner you have five spades and the values for slam, you leave him perfectly placed to select between six spades and six no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ3 ♥98742 ♦KQ4 ♣62

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—At this vulnerability, like stretching for games as much as anyone—but only if we have a shot at making them. Nine tricks at no trump seems to be too much to ask for, so we would be content with a partscore. Since partner has rebid his suit, there is no need to look for some other contract. Pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q85 ♥AJ92 ♦10953 ♣Q6

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South

1 ♠ 1 NT ?

What action do you take?

A.—In view of East's overcall, it's most unlikely that our side will be able to make a game—even if we knew where to play the hand. What we do know is our side has the balance of power and our cards are well located behind the overcaller. Double.

Ship's Owners Seek Recovery Of Gas Cargo

By The Associated Press
A Belgian research vessel found no traces of radioactivity in the North Sea area where the French freighter Mont Louis sank with a cargo of radioactive gas, a public health official said today.

Another Belgian expert cautioned, however, that the radioactive cargo should not be allowed to remain in the sea for long.

The ship's owners, the Paris-based Compagnie Generale, are seeking ways to recover the cargo and refloat the ship, a company official said Sunday. The Mont Louis was reported lying in 40 to 46 feet of water at low tide.

The 5,000-ton cargo ship sank about 12 miles off Ostend, Belgium, after colliding Saturday with the 15,000-ton ferry Olau Britannia, carrying 935 people and a crew of 80 from the Netherlands to England. No one was injured in the crash. The ferry was only slightly damaged.

The owners said the Mont Louis was carrying 225 tons of uranium hexafluoride gas, used in the uranium refinement process, which were stored in 15 containers designed to be watertight for up to a year. It had been reported that the cargo consisted of 450 tons of radioactive gas, but the company said today that figure included the weight of the steel drums and tar inside the containers.

Before abandoning ship, the crew determined the containers were intact. The ship was hit in the stern and the cargo was stowed in the forward hold, said a company official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Philippe D'Hondt of the Institute of the Mathematical Model of the North Sea in Brussels, Belgium, said today a research vessel was sent to find the Mont Louis and to take water samples. He said no radioactivity was found. His institute is part of Belgium's Public Health Ministry and regulates the transfer of dangerous materials.

Compagnie Generale's statement said that even if the containers leaked, sea water would dilute the radioactive material and the increase in radioactivity would be "negligible with no consequence for man or the environment."

However, Gerard Fieeuw, head of radiation control at a nuclear research station near Antwerp, Belgium, said, "As long as it (the radioactive gas) remains contained in the special barrels there is no immediate danger. But of course, these barrels will have to be brought to the surface. They should not remain in the sea for more than several months."

French maritime police said their initial investigation found that none of the radioactive material had leaked.

The losses due to nematode damage are not as obvious in a wet year as compared to a dry year. Nematodes are microscopic animals which live in the soil and cause a lower yield per acre in crops like tobacco. Their presence is not easily detected in a wet growing season due to the fact that the plant is more accessible to valuable moisture. High nematode populations in a dry growing season cause plants to appear stunted and slow-growing, and make damage more visible.

Because 1984 has been a year of excessive rainfall the need for a nematode sample is essential. Nematode populations are determined through a sampling technique called the nematode assay. This technique is done in the same manner as a soil sample but needs to be kept cool immediately after it is taken.

The timeliness with which the sample is taken is also essential. Nematode populations have been found to be the highest immediately after harvest. Because of this factor, the time to sample a crop like tobacco is after complete defoliation but before the stalks have been cut and disked. Sampling during this time gives the most accurate idea of the kind and number of nematodes present.

Nematode assays provide information on the kind and number of nematodes present but a direct sample from the root zone must be taken to determine the race that is present.

The root knot nematode species known as Arenaria has been found to be on the increase in recent years. The flue-cured tobacco varieties planted today offer no resistance to this race of nematode and rotations containing corn and soybeans are also limited in their effectiveness on combating the problem. Root Zone assays let a farmer know if he has this problem.

Sampling for nematodes is only one step in a complete management system in agriculture. Through the nematode assay farmers can select proper rotations and avoid guessing on whether to use a nematicide in their tobacco crops. After farmers sample for these pests after harvest, Reduce Nine Pests (R-9-P) or stalk and root destruction represents the final stage in the management program.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — THE DULL LOAFER'S FLAT
REFUSAL: "NOTHING DOING!"
Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Charge Brought

Johnnie Ray Brady of Ayden was charged with assault with a deadly weapon after an argument in the parking lot of the 420 Club here about 2 a.m. Saturday, police reported.

Police reportedly observed a stabbing attempt on William Harvey Cooper of Route 4, Greenville. Brady was placed in Pitt County Jail with first appearance set for District Court Sept. 5.

City Police Arrest 19

Greenville Police reported that 19 persons were cited for various alcohol and drug charges in downtown parking lots over the weekend.

Officers of State Alcohol Law Enforcement agencies, working in cooperation with officers of the Greenville Police Department, issued 15 citations for illegal possession of alcohol by underage persons. Two persons were charged with illegal purchase of alcoholic beverages and three citations were issued for furnishing alcohol to minors. Additional charges included transporting alcohol with a broken seal, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

"Parking lots in the downtown area, particularly on weekends are a problem," Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes reported. Holmes said officers will continue to concentrate efforts in these areas during the next few weeks.

Analyst Sees Possible Surge In Gas Prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average gasoline price has climbed slightly this month and a "real run-up" is possible if oil-producing nations are serious about production cutbacks, says an oil industry analyst who conducts a biweekly nationwide price survey.

The price rise, halting a 15-week price decline, came because the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is curbing the overproduction that had sprung up during the Iran-Iraq war, Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter said Sunday.

There's More
To A
Larry's Carpetland
Sale Than You Think

Larry Whitlow's (owner/operator of Larry's Carpetland) job is no simple task when you consider that Larry's Carpetland offers the largest selection of floor covering and wallpaper in this part of the country.

Larry realizes that if we don't take each sale seriously, neither will you. That's why he won't authorize any special sale unless he's satisfied you'll receive legitimate value. Not factory rejects. Not questionable pricing gimmicks. As Larry will tell you, we don't use sale events as an excuse to unload second rate merchandise or white elephants.

And there's more to the story...

Larry spends a lot of time and effort traveling to carpet and rug mills and shows, on the phone with floor covering brokers and fiber producers to secure for the people of Greenville and Eastern North Carolina, not only the newest colors and patterns, but the best prices on first quality floor covering that can be found in the country. Larry's installed carpet in 1,242 homes in the Greenville area last year, supplied over 2,500 mill end and remnants at substantial savings and carpeted more churches, banks and offices than anyone!

When Larry orchestrates a special sale you'll like the sound of it!...And the savings...Larry wants you to step on a Carpetland rug or carpet every day and enjoy it.

Lees lowers the prices! We pass the savings on to you

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn higher at mostly 3.24-3.36 in East and mostly 3.45-3.55 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans higher at mostly 6.32-6.68 in the east and mostly 6.47-6.88 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.33-3.45; (new crop corn 2.74-3.11; soybeans 5.93-6.25).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today as hopes for lower interest rates waned.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 10.16 to 1,226.37 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by almost 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said many investors seemed to believe that the economy was still too strong to permit any significant drop in interest rates in the near future.

They also said the Federal Reserve's report, released late Friday, on its July policy meeting indicated that the Fed was reluctant to loosen credit.

Interest rates rose in the bond and short-term money markets this morning.

Among actively traded blue-chip stocks, International Business Machines fell 1 1/2 to 124 1/2; American Express 3/4 to 33 3/4, and Sears Roebuck 1/8 to 35 7/8.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 4.89 to 1,236.53, bringing its gain for the week to 24.63 points.

The NYSE's composite index rose .23 to 96.24. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .82 at 213.02.

Auburn, Miami Ready For Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Pssst! Kevin Fagan knows how to stop Bo Jackson.

"Tackle him," is the secret of Miami's 260-pound defensive tackle.

And Fagan hopes he will get a chance to do just that tonight when the Miami Hurricanes, the defending national champions but only ranked No. 10 in the Associated Press preseason poll, get the 1984 campaign under way against Auburn in the second annual Kickoff Classic.

The game likely will be decided on defense — whether Miami can slow down Auburn's Jackson-led ground-gobbling Wishbone or whether the Tigers can keep Hurricane quarterback Bernie Kosar from passing them silly.

"As far as the Wishbone goes," says Fagan, "every person has a phase of the option they're responsible for. As long as every person does his responsibility and doesn't key on Bo, we'll be all right. We know he's going to get the ball a lot, so we're going to key on him a little bit, of course."

Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier of Nebraska chewed Miami for 147 yards on 25 carries in the Orange Bowl despite missing most of the final period. Jackson, Fagan says, "is more dangerous than Rozier because of the offense they (Auburn) have. We don't really know when he's going to get the ball. They may pitch it to him 10 yards down field."

Meanwhile, Miami's veteran offensive line, nicknamed the "Blitzbusters" by center Ian Sinclair, will try to keep Auburn's defenders away from Kosar and give the lanky 6-foot-5 sophomore time to throw.

"In order to stop Kosar, our defensive line will have to have an excellent game," says linebacker Gregg Carr. "We'll try to blitz him and hope we can get by the 'Blitzbusters.' But the way to really stop him is for our offense to control the ball."

"Miami's passing game is one of the best in the nation," adds Auburn cornerback David King. "We've played teams with quarterbacks like Kosar and I think we're ready for him. But when you have an offense with a great quarterback like Kosar you can do anything you want to do."

Even though Auburn is ranked No.

1, Miami has something the Tigers want — a national championship. And they probably will have a difficult time succeeding the Hurricanes unless they beat them tonight.

"Opening against a team like Miami has helped our concentration and our mental preparation," Carr says. "I'd rather be opening against a team of their caliber than one not as strong."

The Kickoff Classic will be televised over more than 150 stations by Katz Broadcasting Co. (9 p.m., EDT). Last year's inaugural game — Nebraska 44, Penn State 6 — drew a crowd of 71,123 in 76,891-seat Giants Stadium and the two teams divided more than $1.665 million. Around 50,000 spectators are expected tonight and the schools are each guaranteed a minimum of $550,000.

Miami has an 11-game winning streak — tied with Brigham Young for the nation's longest — while Auburn has won 10 in a row. Both teams were 11-1 a year ago, with Auburn finishing third in the AP rankings behind Miami and Nebraska.

The game marks the debut of Jimmy Johnson as Miami coach. He was named June 5 to succeed Howard Schnellenberger, who stepped down to become general manager and head coach of the Washington Redskins of the United States Football League. Owner Sherwood Weiser said he would move the team to Miami, but abandoned those plans last week, leaving Schnellenberger without a job.

"He can be our volunteer coach," Johnson quipped.

The Hurricanes insist they will not be complacent in the wake of their first national championship, even though Kosar concedes that "our team maybe suffered a little bit from national championshipitis last spring."

"The coaching changes makes you real hungry," says Fagan. "You want to do your best for a new coach, as he does for us. Being showcased in Giants Stadium on national TV — that's a lot of incentive right there. And playing an excellent team like Auburn, if you can't get motivated for a game like that, you're in trouble."

Washburn Charged For Assault

RALEIGH (AP) — Christopher Scott Washburn, a 6-foot-11 basketball recruit at North Carolina State University, was charged with assault on a female Sunday, according to an arrest warrant filed with the Wake County Magistrate's Office.

Campus public safety officers were called to a dormitory on the campus about 5:50 p.m. Sunday, said Teresa Crocker of the N.C. State Public Safety office.

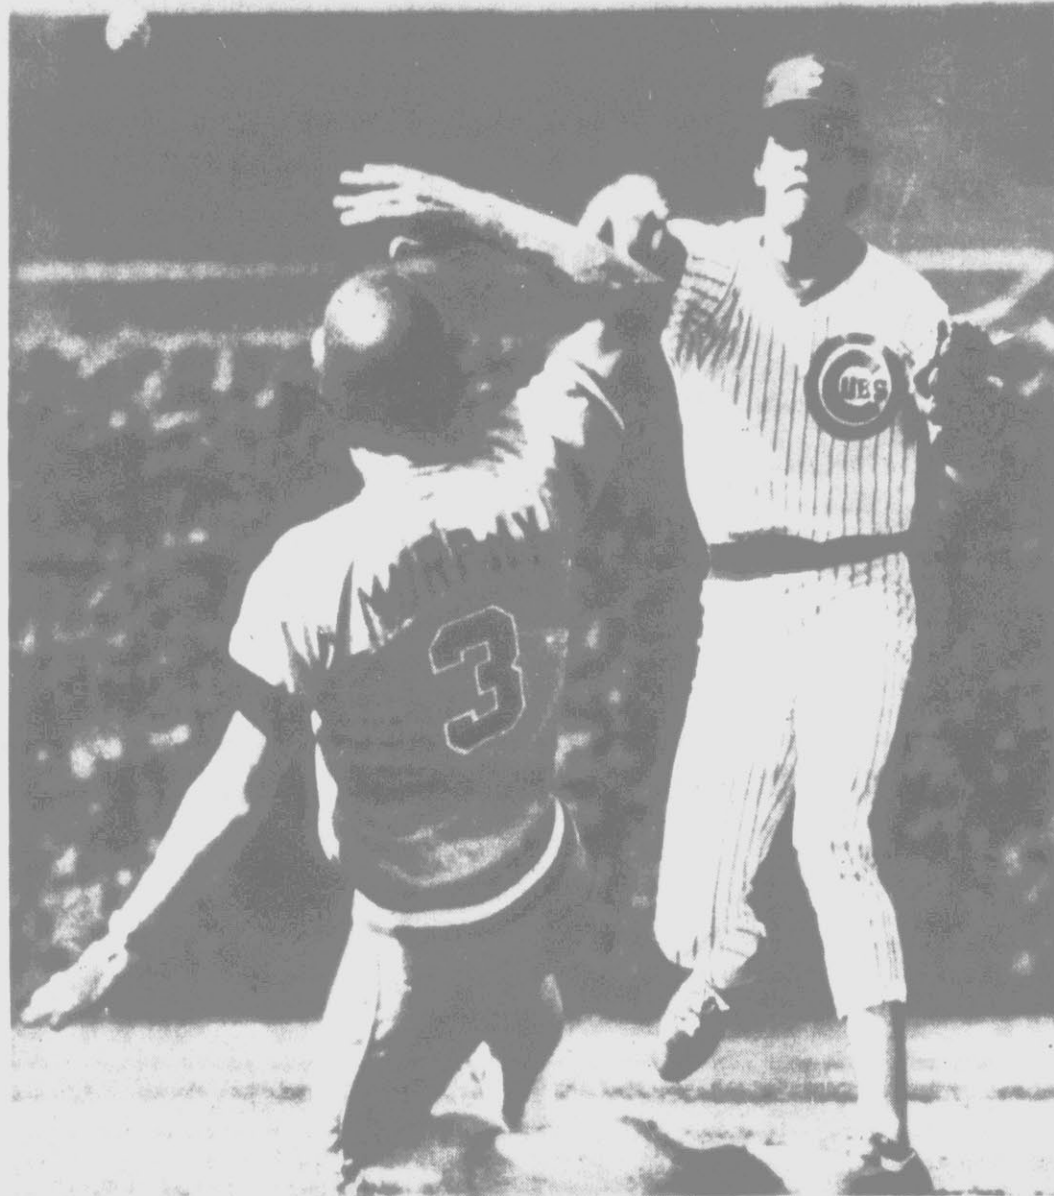

Ms. Crocker said student Patricia Peterson was told officers could not arrest Washburn because the incident did not happen in their presence. Ms. Crocker said Ms. Peterson was taken by campus officers to the magistrate's office, where she filed a complaint.

According to the warrant filed by Ms. Peterson, Washburn was "grabbing and pushing her — slapping her in (the) face once (jamming) his fingers in her face."

Ms. Crocker said Washburn voluntarily went to the Public Safety office and was transported to the magistrate's office. He was released on $200 bond posted by Cozell McQueen, another NCSU basketball player.

Washburn, 20, a Hickory native and a freshman at NCSU, was a high school standout at Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia and Laurinburg Institute. Washburn, who plays center, was highly recruited before accepting a scholarship at NCSU.

He is scheduled to appear in Wake County District Court Sept. 19.

Durham Enjoys Perez' Pitches

By The Associated Press

Don't count Leon Durham among the hitters who dislike facing Pascual Perez, the Atlanta Braves' hard-throwing right-hander with a reputation for throwing brushback pitches.

Facing Perez Sunday proved to be the right medicine to snap the Chicago Cubs' slugger out of a lengthy slump as Durham clubbed two home runs — good for four runs batted in — to help the Cubs to a 5-0 victory that kept them atop the National League East by 5½ games over the New York Mets.

"I'm thankful that the slump is hopefully over with," said the left-handed first baseman. "This is a good pick-me-up."

It marked the second time this season that Durham hit two home runs off Perez in a game.

"It's just his style to give up homers," Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said of Perez, who has now allowed 22 homers in 161 innings.

Durham broke slumps of 0-for-12 and 1-for-21 when he belted a solo homer in the fourth inning. He added a three-run shot, his 19th homer of the season, in the sixth, after singles by Ryne Sandberg and Gary Matthews, giving Steve Trout, 12-5, a cushion. Trout allowed eight hits and struck out six in reaching his personal season-high in victories.

The Mets snapped a three-game losing streak against the San Francisco Giants, the team with the worst record in the major leagues, 11-6, while the third-place Philadelphia Phillies, who trail the Cubs by six games, produced six runs in the eighth to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 10-8.

Ron Cey followed Durham in the sixth by hitting his 22nd homer, sending Perez, 11-6, to the showers.

For Trout it was his second shutout and fifth complete game of the season.

Mets 11, Giants 6

Mets Manager Davey Johnson gave Kelvin Chapman a rare start at second base and the rookie came through with a grand slam home run. Keith Hernandez also drove in four runs, banging out a double and three-run homer (No. 12) as the Mets overcame a 5-1 deficit.

"We've been struggling at the plate," Johnson said of the switch to Chapman as regular second baseman Wally Backman moved to shortstop, "and I wanted more offense in the lineup. It was simple as all that."

Brent Gaff, 2-2, pitched allowed four hits in five innings to gain the victory. Mike Krukow, 10-10, took the loss, which broke the Giants' four-game winning streak. San Francisco took the season series from the Mets 8-4.

Phillies 10, Dodgers 8

"Unbelievable," said Manager Tommy Lasorda, whose Dodgers led 8-4 going into the last of the eighth. "It was a crime to lose a game like that."

The Dodgers committed five errors, including a dropped ball by second baseman Steve Sax in a force play attempt in the critical eighth.

Von Hayes' two-run single broke an 8-8 tie after Mike Schmidt delivered a two-run single and Luis Aguayo slapped an RBI-double. Sixto Lezcano hit his 14th homer for the Phils in the second.

Bill Campbell, 6-4, was the winner, while Burt Hooton, 1-4, suffered the loss.

Padres 2, Expos 1

Eric Show, 14-7, tossed a six-hitter and Bruce Bochy led off the eighth with a homer to break a 1-1 tie for the Padres, who lead the NL West by 10½ games. Dan Schatzeder, 6-5, had held the Padres to four hits, including a fifth-inning homer by Luis Salazar, before Bochy, a seldom-used catcher, connected.

Montreal scored on Gary Carter's two-out double which delivered Tim Lincecum, who had singled and stolen his 54th base — the 300th in his career.

Pirates 7, Reds 1

Brian Harper had a homer and a single and drove in three runs and Johnny Ray collected three hits to lead the Pittsburgh attack. Rick Rhoden, 11-9, limited the Reds to eight hits as Cincinnati's record under player-manager Pete Rose fell to 3-6. Joe Price, 6-10, was the loser.

Cardinals 3, Astros 2

Rookie Kurt Kepshire, 4-3, gave up five hits over 6 1-3 innings for the victory. Bruce Sutter finished up, allowing one hit, for his league-leading 35th save.

Loser Nolan Ryan, 11-8, went eight innings and struck out seven, tying him with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the all-time major league strikeout lead at 3,848.

Young Redskins Eye League Race

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROANOKVILLE — Roanoke High School Coach Nolan Respass feels that this year's Redskin football team will be able to move the ball well and will have a good defense — but he's not counting the team in the race for the Northeastern Conference title.

Experience will be the problem area for the Redskins, as few starters return to the squad that was 4-6 last year. And — as the Redskins prepare to drop from 3-A to 2-A next year — Respass feels that the only three members of the league which are to remain 3-A will be the teams to beat this year.

"Without a doubt, Tarboro, Bertie and Washington are going to be the teams to beat," Respass said. "The rest of us will be in a dog fight, and I'm not saying that one of those three might not get beat by some of us."

Respass feels that with "as good a quarterback as there is around" and a tough defense, the Redskins just might be one of those who could pull off some upsets.

This past week, the Redskins scrimmaged against a revitalized D.H. Conley team, and Respass said that overall he was pleased.

"I was disappointed in the offense, but Conley had a lot of enthusiasm and did some things we weren't expecting. But our defense was outstanding, just like it would be if we drew it up on paper. Our theme is 'Bend, Don't Break,' and that's what we did. We did make some mistakes in our goal line situation work, however."

Respass said his biggest disappointment was in the offense. "But we had a young center who was missing the snap count and that gave us problems. We'll have to see how that is going to work out. Too, our backs ran kind of tentative."

The Redskins will continue to use the wishbone offense, but Respass points out that it's not a true wishbone but has some wrinkles in it. "Our offense may take a couple of weeks to crank up, but I think it can be good."

The chief reason for this is the play of quarterback Stacey Wallace, a senior with good speed and a good arm. "If he gets hurt we're in trouble. With only one quarterback, some people might think that running an option offense is the wrong thing to do, but that's what I know and what we're going to run," Respass said.

The Redskins have good depth at fullback, and because of this one of the fullbacks, Preston Howell could end up as a starting halfback. Steve Roberson will likely get the starting nod, with Howell and David Morgan backing him up.

At halfback, Chris Roberson and Roger Jackson are working, with Howell likely to end up with one of the spots.

James Walters, an occasional starter last year, returns at end, but three others are also vying for one of the two starting spots. They include Ricky Taylor, Bobby Hoggard and Mike Griffin. All four will see lots of action, according to Respass.

"The line is our big question mark on offense," Respass said. Sophomore Dennis Smith is currently handling the starting duties, while Sammy Respass, who started there last year has moved to tackle. There is a possibility, however, that Respass could end up back at the position.

Charles James, who started at tackle last year, has moved to guard, along with Jeffrey Roberson. Terry Council and Jarvis Gray will provide backup duty.

Respass and Braxton Peterson currently hold down the tackle spots.

"Peterson is the most improved player on the team," the coach said.

"He plays an outstanding game both on offense and defense."

"We're not real experienced, but we have good size," Respass said. "We don't have a great deal of speed, however."

With numbers small, Respass finds a lot of the same people on the other side of the ball too. Morgan and Clayton Wiggins hold down the defensive end positions, with Marvin Jones as backup. "All three of them did an outstanding job in the scrimmage," Respass said.

James and Peterson will be at the tackles, with Respass and Gray as backups, while Chris Roberson will return to the middle linebacker position. Roberson was an all-Northeastern Conference selection last year.

Howell and Steve Roberson will be the outside linebackers with Council, Jeff Roberson and Ramone Mason as backups.

"I think we have an outstanding group of kids at linebacker and in our secondary. They are all fine athletes and this should be a strong point for our game this year," Respass said.

Kenny Manning and Taylor, along with Troy Hines and Willie Wilkins will be seeing action at the corners, while James Watlers, Roger Jackson, Hoggard and Mike Griffin will work at the safety positions.

The kicking game is somewhat of a question mark for the Redskins. Right now they are still searching for someone to handle the placekicks well. "We may end up doing a lot of running (for conversions)," Respass said.

He feels he can get some good punting from Steve Roberson and Mason, however.

What the season holds in store for the Redskins — in their final year as a 3-A school — remains to be seen. Respass is just hopeful that the players will stay healthy and pull off one or two of those upsets.

Roanoke Redskins

Labonte Misses Crashes For Busch 500 Victory

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — "It was really a matter of survival," said Terry Labonte after winning the wreck-marred Busch 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race at Bristol International Raceway.

The race saw Darrell Waltrip fail in his bid to set a NASCAR record of eight straight victories on the same track. Waltrip and Richard Petty share the standard of seven consecutive victories.

Labonte, driving a Chevrolet, survived 12 caution flags with 11 caused by wrecks that eliminated most of his challengers except for Bobby Allison, whose Buick was the only car finishing on the lead lap in the Saturday night race.

Dick Brooks' Thunderbird was third and three laps down to Labonte, who collected $25,480 for his second win of the season and moved past Dale Earnhardt in the Winston points standings. Total prize money for the race was $228,800.

Harry Gant was three laps down in third with Dave Marcis, Bill Elliott, and Greg Sacks finishing in order behind the leaders.

"It's hard to get out of the way on a race track like this," Labonte said of the .533-mile oval. "I was only close to two of the wrecks."

"It was good practice for Darlington next week," he added. Labonte, who won the Budweiser 400 at Riverside, Calif., in June, takes a 3,138 to 3,128 lead over Earnhardt into Darlington.

Labonte, who started sixth, took the lead from pole-sitter Geoff Bodine on lap 377 and pulled away from Allison.

Bodine left Labonte and Allison as the only drivers in the lead lap when he retired with rear end problems on lap 393.

Neil Bonnett brought out the final caution of the night while battling Labonte for the lead.

Bonnett's Chevrolet bounced off Labonte's car and climbed the wall on the backstretch on lap 367, leaving only Labonte, Allison and Bodine in the hunt.

Earnhardt appeared headed to victory when he caused the 11th caution by crashing on lap 349 while holding a half-lap lead on Bonnett and Labonte.

Pryor's Homer Lifts Kansas City, 6-5

By The Associated Press
Every team in the American League West had already lost, so it was up to the Chicago White Sox and the Kansas City Royals to see which one would gain some ground.

The game Sunday was tied 5-5 after nine innings. And 5-5 after 15 innings.

But in the bottom of the 16th, Kansas City's Frank White led off with a single and moved to second on a groundout. Then, reliever Bert Roberge silenced the crowd at Royals Stadium by picking White off second base.

"I thought earlier it would take a home run to win it, but I didn't think it would be me that hit it," said Greg Pryor, who followed the pickoff by lining a full-count pitch over the left-field wall for a home run and a 6-5 Kansas City victory.

"After Frank got picked off, I'm up there trying to take a full swing and hit the ball in the gap," said Pryor, owner of four home runs this season.

In other AL games, Detroit hammered California 12-6, Baltimore crunched Oakland 13-6, New York beat Seattle 7-2, Milwaukee stopped Texas 6-3, Toronto edged Minnesota 2-1 and Boston topped Cleveland 4-2.

Kansas City moved into second place in the AL West, four games behind Minnesota. Chicago fell six games back in fourth.

"It's scoreboard time. Everybody's watching it," observed Royals Manager Dick Howser. "We started before a lot of games started and we ended after a lot of games ended."

The 4 hour, 38 minute game started well for the Royals as they scored four times in the first inning, capped by Darryl Motley's two-run homer.

Chicago kept battling back and took the lead at 5-4 when Kansas City reliever Dan Quisenberry surrendered a two-run homer to Carlton Fisk in the eighth. The Royals tied it in the bottom of the eighth when a wild pitch by White Sox starter Richard Dotson allowed a runner to score.

Larry Gura, 12-9, pitched the last two innings for the victory. Roberge slipped to 3-2.

Tigers 12, Angels 6
Chet Lemon provided the day's high and low points for Detroit.

In the third inning, he belted the first grand-slam home run of his career, capping a six-run outburst.

Then, in the sixth inning with the Tigers ahead 11-1, Fred Lynn lofted a high fly ball to center field that Lemon lost in the sun. The ball hit Lemon above the right eye and went for a double and left Lemon sprawled on the ground at Anaheim Stadium.

Lemon was carried off the field by his teammates and went for X-rays. Doctors said he received a gash, and Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said he may rest Lemon during an upcoming series in Seattle.

Kirk Gibson hit two solo home runs and Marty Castillo also homered for the Tigers as Milt Wilcox raised his record to 15-7.

Orioles 13, A's 6

Eddie Murray drove in four runs and Rich Dauer had four hits as Baltimore raked three Oakland hurlers for 19 hits. It was the eighth straight loss for the host A's.

Murray, Cal Ripken Jr. and John Shelby each added three hits to the Oriole attack. Baltimore scored four runs on five hits in the third inning off Curt Young, 6-3, before Murray cracked a two-run single off reliever Larry Sorensen in the fourth.

Oakland's Dave Kingman had an RBI-double in the fifth and run-scoring single in the seventh, raising his major league-leading RBI total to 103.

her mother and stepfather, Martin C. Folmar. She was a graduate of Phillips High School in Birmingham.

She met Bryant while attending the University of Alabama and they were married in August 1934 after she finished school.

Bryant, who coached at Alabama for 25 years and retired in December 1982 with more wins than any other college coach, died at Druid City Hospital of a heart attack Jan. 26, 1983.

A graveside service was planned for 11 a.m. Tuesday for Mrs. Bryant, who will be buried next to her husband at Elmwood Cemetery.

Bryant's successor and former player, Alabama football coach Ray Perkins, said Mrs. Bryant's death "was a sudden thing."

"I had talked with her the day before she was hospitalized. She sounded fine. To me it's a sad thing. She was just a fantastic lady."

Auburn football coach Pat Dye, who once worked as an assistant coach for Bryant, remembered Mrs. Bryant as a supportive friend of his family.

"She was always warm and friendly to Sue and me, particularly while we were in Tuscaloosa and the years that followed. I appreciate that and Sue does, too," Dye said. "Mrs. Bryant was always a source of great love, support and strength to Coach Bryant and to all that knew and loved her."

Blue Jays 2, Twins 1

Dave Stieb fired a four-hit and struck out a career-high 11 to win his first game in six starts.

Stieb, 13-5, walked one in pitching his eighth complete game of the season. The loser was Ken Schrom, 4-7, a former Blue Jay who beat Stieb three times last season.

Rance Mulliniks scored both runs for visiting Toronto. His second home run of the season made it 1-0 in the second, and after Tom Brunansky's 27th homer tied it in the bottom of the second, Mulliniks doubled in the seventh and scored on a single by Ernie Whitt.

Yankees 7, Mariners 2

Phil Niekro, a knuckleballer who said he relied mainly on his fastball, gave up six hits over eight innings to raise his record to 16-7.

Dave Winfield put New York ahead with a solo homer in the fourth, his 15th, and Don Mattingly then belted a three-run shot, his 18th, to cap a four-run outburst in the fifth for the visiting Yankees.

In the second inning, New York's Don Baylor was hit by a pitch for the 16th time this year, breaking the team record set by Frank Corsotti in 1938.

Red Sox 4, Indians 2

Rookie Roger Clemens was the pitching star for Boston and veteran Jim Rice was one of the hitting heroes.

Clemens, who struck out 15 in his last start on Tuesday, pitched a three-hitter against Cleveland and struck out 10. The right-hander is 9-4 and has won six of his last seven starts.

The Red Sox had 14 hits at Fenway Park, three apiece by Marty Barrett and Jackie Gutierrez. Rice's run-scoring single in the fourth inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave him 100 RBI this season.

Brewers 6, Rangers 3

Bill Schroeder drilled his fifth home run in his last five games to spark host Milwaukee.

Schroeder's homer, his 12th of the season, gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead in the fifth. Ted Simmons delivered a two-run single in the eighth after Texas had pulled within 4-3.

Moose Haas, 7-10, went 7 2-3 innings for the victory. Mike Mason, 8-11, took the loss.

Settlement Tops $500,000 In Munson Death Action

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — The widow of New York Yankees catcher Thurman Munson has received some $325,000 in damages and another $127,712 in prepaid expenses as part of the settlement in a wrongful death suit she filed over her husband's death in a 1979 jet crash, according to a published report.

The total amount of the settlement, reached just as the trial was to begin in May, is more than $1.69 million. The Canton Repository reported in a copyright story Saturday.

Diana Munson agreed in May to settle out of court after she filed suit against Flight Safety International, the company that trained Munson to fly, and Cessna Aircraft. She claimed the aircraft had mechanical failures and that Munson was poorly trained to fly it.

Munson died Aug. 2, 1979, when his new Cessna Citation jet crashed as he practiced takeoffs and landings at Akron-Canton Regional Airport.

The newspaper reported that after attorneys' fees and expenses, Mrs. Munson is to receive 70 percent of the settlement and her three children are to get 10 percent each.

The Munsons' three children have received an initial $75,000 each from the settlement to be held in trust and released by their 25th birthdays.

The order filed with the clerk of Stark County Probate Court on July 31 shows that Flight Safety will make payments as part of the terms of the settlement.

The amount and frequency of the payments were not revealed. U.S. District Court Judge David Dowd sealed the settlement and ordered that details, including the gross amount, never be released.

But because trustees for the children were required to post bond equal to double the amount of the initial deposits in the children's trustee accounts, and because those bonds are public record, the newspaper said it was able to determine the amounts of the initial settlements.

Of the $1.69 million, one-third will go to the attorneys who tried the case for Mrs. Munson, the newspaper reported.

TV's Practical Jokes: Product Of Preparation

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Lowe's problem is how do you come up with a "gotcha!" that leaves everybody, including the victims of his practical jokes, happy.

During this year Lowe has pulled off approximately 40 jokes for NBC's "TV's Bloopers & Practical Jokes." He says only two didn't work, and one was because the celebrity victim got sick.

"We had another joke where the celebrity knew right off the bat something was going on," said Lowe, who produces and directs the practical joke segment for the show. "It didn't work. So we turned around, picked another victim and played it on him and it worked. What's really so amazing is that so many of them worked."

The practical jokes segment is probably unlike any other TV show involving celebrities.

"It's the only show where you see celebrities as they really are," he said. "When they go on 'The Tonight Show' they are being themselves, but they know the camera's on them. They're still performing. The same for '60 Minutes.'"

"So we have to make sure that the situation they get involved in doesn't make them look bad. They have to come out looking good and not say, 'Hey, I don't want that scene.' Everybody does things and says things they don't want people to see or hear. We have to make sure we don't hurt anybody's image."

Lowe, a former field producer for "60 Minutes," said that the successful setup and execution of a practical joke is, like an iceberg, mostly below the surface.

"It's mostly preparation," he said. "We may shoot the whole thing in one day, but what people don't realize is that it takes a week of preparation. With some celebrities it takes three weeks of preparation."

"When the Olympic torch was being run I decided it would be funny if a runner turned the corner and no one was there. And when he comes back everybody's gone. We thought Bubba Smith would be the perfect person. We got his brother-manager to cooperate and flew him to Reno. There were photographers and a police escort for him to run the torch. He runs off, follows the traffic cones and ends up at a bush. When he comes back, everybody has disappeared."

Obviously, "TV's Bloopers & Practical Jokes" can't book talent in the usual way. A celebrity can't audition for a joke. But the celebrity's agent or a friend has to be in on it. To give approval and to see the victim into it.

But now that the show is a success, agents are calling Lowe to get their clients onto the show.

Every joke is tailored to suit the personality. For instance, it was learned that when exercise guru Richard Simmons gives a lecture he never looks at his audience.

GOP Convention Is Source For Many Broadcast Notes

DALLAS (AP) — Chet Douglas, who covered the Republican National Convention for ABC Radio, showed up for the longhorn cattle drive along the Trinity River levee near downtown Dallas in jeans, cowboy shirt and western hat.

"I used to ride a little," Douglas acknowledged as the 6-mile drive, an attraction for convention-goers, began.

Indeed. The 6-foot-6 Douglas is a former actor whose credits include a couple of westerns, "Two Rode Together" with Jimmy Stewart and Richard Widmark, and "Requiem for a Gunfighter." Both films were released in the early '60s.

Douglas' ride was not without mishap. At once point, his horse reared, but the reporter managed to stay in the saddle. And when the drive was over, he discovered the tape, on which he had described the drive and interviewed other, real-life cowboys, was blank.

unusual: there was one at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco in July.

Steve Reddicliffe, who covers the news media for the Dallas Times Herald, figured out a way to cover Republican National Convention stories written for his newspaper and the rival Dallas Morning News.

"All this week," he wrote as the convention began, "I'll be reviewing KDFW-Channel 4's reviews of how the city's two very competitive newspapers are covering the convention. (Then maybe they can review my reviews of their reviews; look, it's a media age.)"

Vice President George Bush showed up for an interview at the Republican National Convention with NBC News and asked for the makeup person. The news folks weren't prepared for that; they had no one at the Loew's Anatole Hotel, where the interview was to take place, who could handle the job.

Except for Trish Peters. Trish Peters? She's secretary to Bryant Gumbel, host of NBC's "Today," and she volunteered makeup from her own purse.

It wasn't clear who applied the stuff, but Bush seemed satisfied as he stepped before the camera.

Bob Schieffer, the CBS News correspondent in Dallas for the Republican National Convention, finished an edition of the network's "Evening News" with a report — his own — about Fort Worth 30 miles to the west.

"In the interest of objectivity," he began, "we thought you ought to hear about Fort Worth, too. We thought that mainly because I'm from Fort Worth."

Dallas and Fort Worth, though their names often are said together, aren't the same place, he said.

"While Dallas is proud of its world class hotels, Fort Worth notes that at the stockyards hotel, you'll find a cowboy's prayer on your pillow rather than a French chocolate," the correspondent concluded.

Broadcasters covering the Republican National Convention stationed 29 satellite dishes outside the Dallas Convention Center, most of them for transmitting their reports to distant stations.

With so much technology crammed into a relatively small space, the Federal Communications Commission established a mobile office at the center to monitor frequencies and make sure that other broadcast signals were not interrupted.

Jess Chairez, an FCC spokesman, said Secret Service communications got top priority, followed by the White House and other government agencies, and then those frequencies used permanently by local broadcasters.

The mobile FCC office is not

GOP Delegation Eyes Good Year

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — The combination of a popular incumbent president and a conservative platform that reflects traditional American values should mean a banner year for Republicans, said North Carolina's delegates to the national GOP convention.

"It's awful hard not to expect to do as well as 1972," said Dave Flaherty, state GOP chairman. "This time we've got the best candidate for governor we've ever had. We'll never have as good an opportunity."

It was in 1972 that North Carolina helped re-elect President Richard Nixon and chose Jim Holshouser as its first Republican governor this century. That was the year when voters sent Jesse Helms to the U.S. Senate for his first term.

But Republicans admit there is one big difference between 1972 and 1984 — Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election battle against Democrat Gov. Jim Hunt — and they are hesitant to predict its impact.

Reagan's campaign staff believes it is doing well in the South this year, possibly building a second political base for the president.

Charlie Black, Reagan campaign consultant, said at a news conference last week that one recent poll shows Reagan 17 percentage points ahead of Democratic contender Walter Mondale in North Carolina. A poll completed early this month showed that 56 percent of the public believes the country is headed in the right direction, a level of optimism which the campaign said is unprecedented in this decade.

Republicans see themselves as returning to traditional American values, ideas supported by Reagan and the party's conservatives.

"The Democratic Party is becoming the liberal party with a lot of special interest groups in it," Flaherty said.

"There is no question in my mind that the Reagan-Bush philosophy coincides overwhelmingly with the majority of North Carolinians," said former Congressman Eugene Johnston of Greensboro, a delegate and head of the state's Reagan-Bush campaign.

Rep. Jim Martin, GOP nominee for governor, said he's not sure those ideological differences between the parties will affect his race. But he said Democratic disaffection will.

Martin has picked up support from workers for unsuccessful Democratic gubernatorial candidates Jimmy Green and Eddie Knox.

"They don't like the way the primary was run," Martin said. "They don't feel hide bound to support the Democratic nominee no matter who he is or how he got there."

Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, is so optimistic about this year that he has predicted the GOP could keep its majority in the U.S. Senate.

That has not erased his concern, however, for Helms' re-election.

Lugar said at a news conference last week that Helms and Iowa Sen. Roger Jepsen are in dead-even races.

"The vast majority of people already have made up their minds about both the president and Mr. Mondale and the governor and me," Helms said. "It will turn on who does the best job organizing from here on out. From this point on it's going to require more perspiration than inspiration."

Party officials said the interest in the Senate race could bring people to the polls who were not planning to vote and Reagan could get out voters who have no favorite in the Senate race.

The National Republican Congressional Committee's executive director Joseph E. Gaylord told reporters that the best opportunities for GOP gains in the U.S. House are in North Carolina and Texas.

Political oddsmakers identified four N.C. Democrats against whom GOP challengers could win — Ike Andrews in the 4th Distict, Jamie Clarke in the 11th, Steve Neal in the 5th and Robin Britt in the 6th.

Republicans running for other offices are not sure how long the president's coattails might be.

John Carrington, a delegate from Cary and GOP candidate for lieutenant governor, said he's not counting on Reagan to put him in office. He noted there has not been a Republican lieutenant governor in the state this century although North Carolina has voted for several Republican presidents.

"It did not work in 1972, it will not work in 1984," Carrington said. "We're going to have to earn it."

Psychologist Figures Polls Are Misleading

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A social psychologist says opinion polls should be taken with a large grain of salt, in part because people answering polls sometimes give decisive answers without any real thought.

"With opinion polls, we should recognize that they at best can only measure stated attitudes," Dr. Ann Weber of the University of North Carolina at Asheville said in a telephone interview. "We can never measure real attitudes."

People may have many reasons for saying they plan to vote for one candidate when, in fact, they will vote for his opponent, said Ms. Weber.

She said if a prestigious polling firm calls on you, "you feel you owe them a decisive answer. You don't worry about the consequences of that answer because it's only a poll. It's not the real thing."

"The real danger of polls, especially as we get closer to the election, is that people may look at the results and decide whether or not to even vote," she said. "That could undermine the whole democratic process. People might not take personal responsibility for the only thing that does elect a president."

The accuracy of polls depends on the number of people surveyed and whether they are representative of the whole population. But many pollsters use voter registration lists to find people to poll. That may leave out many who registered for the first time in the past few months — for example, the black voters registered by Jesse Jackson, she said.

"There's always some sort of bias because the sample is smaller than the population," she said. "You may have gotten the 2,000 weirdest people in the state."

"The polling organizations are real professional, but they cannot predict an election because they can't state with real confidence what these people are really thinking," she said.

Polls should be and are used for campaign strategy, said Ms. Weber. Politicians use them to decide what they need to emphasize in.

State's Religious Leaders Are Active In Political Circles

RALEIGH (AP) — Several fundamentalist ministers say the traditional reluctance of churches to become involved in politics is giving way to the belief that churches must influence the nation's moral climate.

"We should have an interest in seeing this country return to its founding precepts," said the Rev. Randy Cox of First Free Will Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Some of the ministers are participating in a voter mobilization drive coordinated by Moral Majority. Others have conducted voter registration and political information sessions for years.

"I never tell people who to vote for," said Rev. H.W. Carey of Raleigh, pastor of Neuse Baptist Church. "But I tell them that I'm embracing such and such a candidate."

Nationally, the growing involvement of conservative churchmen in politics has caused some division among fundamentalists. The Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of Moral Majority, has drawn rebuke from the Rev. Bob Jones III, president of Bob Jones University in South Carolina, for being too involved in worldly affairs.

Apparently, there is little of that concern among fundamentalists leaders in North Carolina.

Dr. John Steely, professor of theology at Southeastern Baptist Seminary in Wake Forest, said that fundamentalist churches in North Carolina "are becoming more politically active and assertive." The trend carries through independent Baptists, the Free Will Baptist denominations and more conservative churches within mainstream denominations such as the Southern Baptist Convention, he said.

While their sponsorship of candidates is not aligned to the Democratic or Republican parties and often crosses party lines, they said, a half-dozen ministers indicated they favored President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., because they represented a similarity of beliefs.

Carey and other North Carolina fundamentalist ministers interviewed last week said they disagreed strongly that the doctrine of church-state separation requires abstinence from political activity. The constitutional doctrine, they contended, was designed to ensure that the U.S. government did not establish churches or interfere with the free exercise of religious differences — not to discourage ministers or congregations from being involved in politics.

The Rev. Lenny D. Anderson, pastor of Rejoicing Life Baptist Church of Raleigh, said all the voting-age members of his congregation of 500 were registered to vote.

"I tell them to get all the facts and then get on their knees and pray, to ask the Holy Spirit for guidance on Election Day," Anderson said. "When people speak out about the moral climate, politicians listen. The ballot box terrorizes them."
