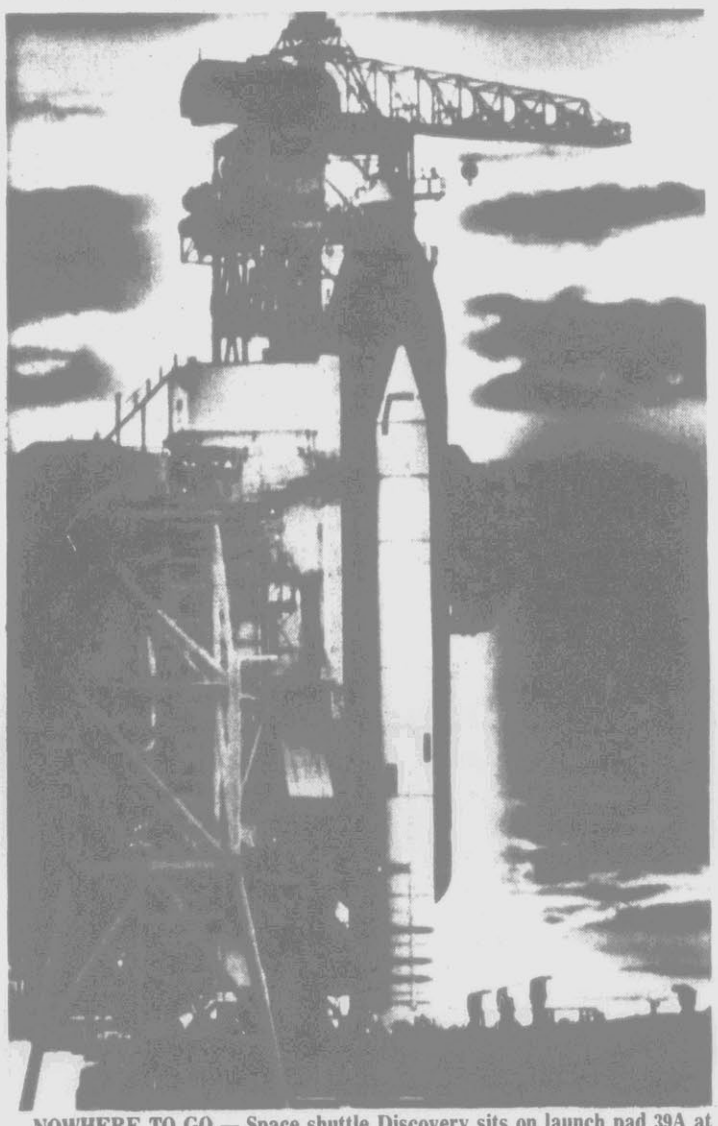
Shuttle Held Up 24 Hours

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery, its space debut spoiled for a third time, remained grounded today while engineers checked out a computer program revamped to ensure that the shuttle misses no vital signals during liftoff. NASA rescheduled the launch for Thursday morning — 24 hours late.

With each new delay casting more doubt on the shuttle's dependability, officials nevertheless stopped the countdown clock late Tuesday night, less than 12 hours before today's planned 8:35 a.m. EDT liftoff.

The postponement gives computer experts time to be absolutely certain they have fixed an electronic malfunction that could have prevented the new ship's booster rockets and fuel tank from peeling away after they exhausted their fuel. If they remained attached, their dead weight would block the shuttle from reaching orbit, and it would have to ditch in the Atlantic and probably be destroyed.



NOWHERE TO GO — Space shuttle Discovery sits on launch pad 39A at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida after being held up for the third time by malfunctions. NASA called off the liftoff scheduled for today late Tuesday after finding a computer problem aboard the shuttle. The launch is now set for Thursday morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Particle Of Time Spells Difference

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Five hundred microseconds is but a fraction of a heartbeat, but aboard the shuttle, where computers operate faster than human thought, that small particle of time can be the difference between success and disaster.

Problems that could occur within those 500-millionths of one second are what forced National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials on Tuesday to postpone for a third time the maiden launch of Discovery.

The problems were found only by accident in a system that experts thought had been tested, analyzed and scrubbed clean of any flaw.

Engineers analyzing a new computer system on Discovery found there was a possibility that commands fired out at the rate of three every 500 microseconds could, in some cases, jam up at critical moments during launch.

The jammed signals — in an extreme, rare case — could theoretically keep the solid rocket boosters and external fuel tank from dropping off the shuttle at the proper time. That in turn could prevent the winged spacecraft from reaching orbit and even cause it to be dumped into ocean.

Experts found the flaw in the way signals are sent from four main computers on the shuttle to another on-board computer called the Master Event Controller.

The MEC controls five major functions: ignition of solid rocket engines to achieve a launch; releasing levers that hold the spacecraft on the launch pad, releasing a launch pad cable; separating the solid rocket engines in flight after they are spent, and separating a large fuel tank in flight after it is empty.

Each of these events must happen precisely on time for the shuttle to reach its expected orbit. The series of signals necessary to trigger the events are too rapid for human control and depend upon the superspeed of the computer.

The four main computers send the commands to the MEC in triplicate. The MEC must receive each of the three identical instructions to perform the commanded function.

In programing the computers, engineers spaced the signals 500 microseconds apart.

But in tests performed just last weekend, engineers found that the flow of signals, in some rare cases, could jam up so that there was less than 500 microseconds between each one. In such a jam, one or more of the tripicate signals could be lost, causing the MEC not to command a desired function.

The result could be, for instance, a failure of the empty fuel tank to be jettisoned precisely at the altitude and moment planned. The tank could drag on the shuttle, causing it to slow and not reach orbit. If the problem was severe, it could even force the shuttle to be ditched.

Economic Index Drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity dropped a sharp 0.8 percent in July, marking the first back-to-back monthly declines since the depths of the recession 2½ years ago, the government reported today.

And in another sign of economic weakness, the government reported today that the United States suffered a record $14.1 billion trade deficit in July, surpassing the old mark of $12.2 billion set in April.

The setback for the Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed an even sharper June decline which the Commerce Department revised today to a 1.3 percent decrease instead of the originally reported 0.9 percent drop.

The June decline had snapped the longest string of advances for the index since the end of World War II, 21 straight months of growth since August 1982 as the country pulled out of the recession.

The back-to-back declines had been predicted by most economists, who insist that the weaker numbers do not signal the beginning of another recession but rather a cooling down from the extremely rapid growth recorded in the first half of the year.

The July trade deficit followed an $8.9 billion June deficit and was blamed on a 26.2 percent surge in imports, which hit a record of $33.5 billion. The import increase was led by rises in crude oil, foreign autos, clothing, iron and steel products and telecommunciations equipment.

U.S. Trade Deficit Soars To A Record $14 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit soared to a record $14.1 billion last month as a flood of imports swamped the best export showing in nearly three years, the government reported today.

The July trade deficit marked the fifth month this year that a new record for red ink has been set. The old mark was $12.2 billion set in April.

The record deficits have led officials to predict that the deficits this year could reach $130 billion, nearly double the old record of $69.4 billion set in 1983.

The country's poor trading performance has led to increasing pressure in Congress for trade barriers to protect a wide variety of domestic industries. It has also become an issue in the presidential campaign with Democratic candidate Walter Mondale blaming President Reagan for the deficits.

The July deficit stemmed from a 26.2 percent increase in imports, putting them at $33.5 billion, the highest level on record.

The flood of imports represented increases across the board from foreign autos, oil, clothing, iron and steel products, telecommunications equipment and agricultural commodities.

The nation's deficit with Japan hit a record $4.7 billion in July, the biggest for any country, caused primarily by a large increase in auto shipments.

The nation's appetite for foreign oil continued to grow with the average number of barrels imported daily rising from 5.7 million barrels daily in June to 5.9 million barrels a day in July. The average price for petroleum products increased to $29.67 per barrel in July compared to $29.51 in June.

The soaring import level overshadowed a 10.3 percent increase in exports, which put U.S. sales abroad at $19.4 billion, the highest level since the $19.6 billion recorded in September 1981.

The rise in exports stemmed from large increases in agricultural products including wheat, corn and soybeans. Agricultural exports hit $3.1 billion in July, a 17.6 percent increase from the June level.

Exports of manufactured goods were also up for the fourth consecutive month with increases in car sales, electric machinery, data processing equipment and coal.

The country's trading woes are generally blamed on the strength of the dollar, which makes U.S. goods more expensive for foreign customers while lowering the cost of imports. The trade deficit represents the difference between imports of merchandise flowing into the country and exports going abroad.

Tropical Storm May Be Brewing In Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression moving toward the eastern Caribbean today could become the first tropical storm of the 1984 Atlantic hurricane season with just a "slight increase" in strength, forecasters said.

"There has been little change overnight, but the depression will continue to be monitored ... for signs of strengthening," the National Hurricane Center said in a dawn statement.

A tropical depression must have sustained winds reaching 39 mph before the disturbance can be classified as a tropical storm, the first of which this season will be named Arthur.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane placed the "poorly defined" center of the depression at about 275 miles east-southeast of Barbados, moving westward at about 15 to 20 mph, forecasters said.

Maximum winds were 35 mph, the morning statement said. A bulletin Tuesday night said there were stronger gusts in squalls, but there was "no immediate threat to any land areas." An earlier bulletin Tuesday said "only a slight increase in wind speed would bring the system to tropical storm strength."

The weather formation was expected to cross the Windward Islands early Thursday if it continued traveling at current speeds, the 6 a.m. statement said.

Officials had been watching the weather system develop off the African Coast since Monday but were not sure it was a tropical depression until Tuesday.

Renfrow Speaks At Session Here

By SUE HENSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Supporters of State Auditor Ed Renfrow's bid for re-election joined with the candidate this morning for a $15-a-plate breakfast at the Three Steer's Restaurant. Renfrow, a Democrat, is seeking a second four-year term in the November elections and is being opposed by Republican candidate James Hix of Hickory.

Among topics Renfrow brought up at the breakfast were government's responsibility to the people and the necessity for financial stewardship. "If the citizens are to have faith in the integrity and competence of their public officials, there must," he said, "be a strong independent audit function.

He said that, under his leadership, progressive changes in the method of reporting state finances have occurred. He proposed and the Legislature enacted the Accountability Act of 1983, which he said was been instrumental in making North Carolina what he called one of the nation's leaders in fiscal accountability. "And its now being used as a model act by others," he added.

According to a representative of the state auditor's office, passage of the act gave clearer definition to the functions of the state auditor's office. "Passage of this act gave him (Renfrow) some flexibility to put the manpower where it would do the most good. It spelled out the objectives of the auditor's office — made it more independent, and provided for the confidentiality of audit work paper," the spokesman said. The work would be confidential to everyone including members of the government, he said, except in incidence of subpoena.

Renfrow also told his supporters that the state hasn't reported a deficit for the past four years. "According to the constitution, government is not supposed to run at a deficit and that's the way it should be done. Without a deficit," he said.

Following Renfrow's remarks, Sen. Vernon White voiced his support for the auditor's re-election. "While Renfrow has been keeping the books the North Carolina government has been free of corruption, I can attest to that ... And I know," Sen. White added, "that the state's finances will not knuckle under as long as we have an independent man in the state auditor's office. This man will see that our money's well taken care of."

N.C. Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr., and Pitt County Commissioner Charles Gaskins, also attended and expressed their support for Renfrow.

Storytelling Regaining Its Popularity

By DAVID McCORMICK
Associated Press Writer

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Long dismissed as the duty of young mothers and the vice of old men, telling stories is now considered as fit for the stage as for the nursery or barbershop.

Over the past few years, enough schools, libraries, nightclubs and historical groups have become interested in tall tales to revive mankind's oldest entertainer, the professional storyteller.

"It's basically the same thing you had during the Renaissance, when storytellers would be paid with dinner or would set up in the market square and work for donations," said George Shannon, an author and storyteller from Eau Claire, Wis.

"Today, you can go from working in city parks to hospitals to public schools to folk festivals," said Shannon, a Bowling Green native who returned recently to speak at a conference on storytelling at Western Kentucky University.

"It's become recognized as a performing art in one way and an educational tool in another," said Jean Smith, director of the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling.

The Jonesboro, Tenn., group draws several thousand people to its annual storytelling festival, the first of about 25 such events to have sprung up in recent years.

About 160 professional storytellers are listed in a directory compiled by the group. Probably the best-known is Jerry Clower, a former fertilizer salesman from Yazoo City, Miss., who has recorded 14 albums since a disc jockey friend brought him to the attention of a record company in 1970.

Like many storytellers, Clower is described as a comedian, but he says there is a key difference. "I don't tell funny stories, I tell stories funny," he has explained.

Gamble Rogers, another popular storyteller, always gets a laugh when he calls Disney World "a $5 billion jukebox in the honky-tonk of life," but it is only a throwaway line in a 10-minute routine about a Florida fisherman grown rich by racing his souped-up skiff against tourists' cabin cruisers.

The better-known yarn spinners have individual specialties.

Like Clower, Rogers tells of the redneck characters he knew growing up in north Florida. Catherine Windham of Selma, Ala., is known for her ghost stories. Jackie Torrence of Granite Quarry, N.C., recites Uncle Remus.

"There has developed a demand for this type of entertainment," Rogers said. "There have always been fine arts groups and libraries that have sponsored storytelling, but it had limited appeal. Now what we are seeing is some of these same groups staging commercial events, and they are being exceedingly well received.

"I was at one ghost story session held outside Louisville in a cemetery at night, and there were almost 5,000 people on hand. Now that is a resurgence of interest," Rogers said, referring to one event at Louisville's annual Corn Island Storytelling Festival.

Interest in storytelling probably peaked during the Victorian era, when orations and recitations were a popular form of entertainment. It continued during the early years of radio with performers like Andy Griffith, Justin Wilson and Brother Dave Gardner, but withered with the spread of television.

"TV has made people more of observers instead of relaters," said Shannon, a former teacher who is interested in the history of folk tales.

Every country has its popular stories, he said, but a few myth-like tales are common everywhere.

"Almost every culture has a flood story, for example. 'Beauty and the Beast' is told in more or less the same version in many cultures. The core of 'Cinderella' is a story told all over the world."

In the United States, folklorists have traced many popular stories to their native countries, he said.

"Stories travel. Most of the stories told in Appalachia have real strong British roots. A couple of stories in Chaucer have always been told in Appalachia. In the South, there's a strong West African influence."

Shannon said he had told a Grimm brothers' story from the 19th century, "Jorinda and Joringal," at the seminar and was not surprised when another speaker recognized it as almost identical to a story her mother had told her as a child in Owsley County, Ky.

Yet while everyone knows many stories, few people are comfortable telling them.

"People are always talking about what they did last night or what happened at a family reunion," Shannon said, "but they don't think of those things as stories. You ask them to tell a story and they feel quite put on the spot and say they don't know one."

COME FOR DESSERT
Blueberry Cakes & Coffee

BLUEBERRY UPSIDE-DOWN CAKES

1½ cups fresh blueberries
6 tablespoons firmly packed light brown sugar
1 cup stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ of a ¼-pound stick butter, cut in 4 equal pats
½ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
¼ cup milk

Divide blueberries among 6 well-buttered 6-ounce custard cups; crumble 1 tablespoon brown sugar over berries in each cup; stir lightly. On wax paper stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In a medium bowl cream butter, granulated sugar and vanilla; add egg and beat to blend. Stir in flour mixture in two additions, alternately with milk, mixing only until smooth each time. Drop batter over berries. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out free of batter — 20 minutes. Let stand on wire rack for 5 minutes; loosen edges and turn out onto individual plates. Serve hot topped with whipped cream. Makes 6 servings.

Homemaker's Haven

Clothes can promote a sense of identity and individuality. Today's children are well aware of this fact; they are extremely fashion conscious. The time when kids always wore a uniform of jeans and T-shirts has passed. Girls are enjoying dresses and daring legwear, while boys are sporting pants and jackets with innovative styling.

This fall's childrens' clothes are cut in geometric shapes. Wool is back, texture is important and bright colors are in. Knits of all sorts are making fashion headlines. Tops made of wool and wool blends are striking for their convertible collars, funnel necks and asymmetrical closures. Knit dresses are squarely cut and fall loosely about the figure, creating a boxy silhouette. These wools are remarkable for their nubby ribbed textures, and many of them are specially treated to be machine washable and dryable. (A must for childrens' clothes!) The new layered look accentuates these rich textures. Sweaters and accessories are carefully coordinated.

Adding to the layered look are bulky socks worn over tights to emphasize the ankle. Argyles and geometric knits are important patterns for both sweaters and socks. Few patterns will be seen that are not checks, triangles, houndstooth or argyles. Animal motifs are often included in designs for young children.

Japanese looks are influencing color for childrenswear this year. Soft dark prints are emphasized as are combinations of black and gray and other neutral mixtures. These neutral colors are reminiscent of sunbaked stone and sand found in the American southwest. Lots of ecru and white are seen, but the dominant color theme is one of deep shades of plum, purple, fuschia and magenta. Browns and golds make up yet another color story.

Dresses this season are sometimes classic and prim, but the big fashion news centers around bold geometric shapes. The Japanese look is once again evident in loose, layered shapes with kimono-like jackets. These dresses are simple, deplete of unnecessary detail, and often have asymmetrical closings.

Wool is the material for childrens' outerwear from classics to updated styles. Flat geometric shapes are in. Jackets and coats tend to be long.

A final fashion note: Hits on the back-to-schoool list include pants of all sorts, from baggies to multi-pocketed survival types. Overalls show up with softened and filled-out silhouettes that build-up the layering of undershirts. Jumpsuits and pull-on kint tops are also popular. Fleece is the dominant fabric for active clothes, and miniskirts with extravagnt legwear are important fashion items.

Couple Marries On Aug. 12

Rena Catherine Starr Craver and Jesse Thomas Tripp Jr. were united in marriage Aug. 12 at 3 p.m. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Herbert Horne in the Harlowe Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of James Roy Starr of Lexington and the late Mrs. Starr. Mr. and Mrs. Pete Tripp of Havelock are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and received her master's from A&T State University. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University. Both teach at Havelock Middle School.

The couple lives in Havelock after a wedding trip to Hilton Head Island and Savannah, Ga.

Dear Abby

This Animal Control Officer Writes A Powerful Letter

DEAR ABBY: I am your animal control officer. I am not the dreaded "dog catcher" or the "murderer" you call me.

It is not I who allows your pet to roam the streets, to contract diseases from other free-roaming animals, to be hit by passing motorists or poisoned by rotting garbage. I am the one who must look into those sick, pain-glazed eyes, try to remove the animal without causing it further pain, and then humanely "put it to sleep" to put an end to its suffering.

It is not I who allows your pets to breed, then dumps the unwanted puppies and kittens on roadsides and in shelters. I'm the one who must find the tiny animals before they die of starvation, exposure or disease, and as an act of mercy, exterminate them. It hurts me to be forced to kill hundreds of thousands of animals each year, but because of your irresponsibility, I have no choice.

It is not I who abandons unwanted animals on farm roads, telling myself some friendly farmer will surely take them in and give them a good home. But I am the one who must pick up the frightened animal who waits in vain for its beloved master, wondering why it has been abandoned. I am the one who must help that friendly farmer trap, tranquilize or kill that animal because it has begun to roam in packs with other abandoned hungry animals, killing livestock, fowl and game.

I am not the one who breeds and fights dogs in the name of "sport." But I'm the one who fights the breeders and participants, and must pick up the dead and dying animals that have been left behind.

It is not I who keeps a pet confined in an area too small—without food, water, shelter or exercise. But I must deal with the irresponsible owner who does.

It is not I who refuses to spend the time and money to keep up regular inoculations that all pets require. But I am the one who must pick up the sick animal that is dying of a preventable disease.

So remember, the next time your child is bitten by a stray dog, your trash is dumped and scattered, your pet is lost, stolen, poisoned or hit by a car, it is the animal control officer you call—not the "dog catcher." The next time your pet is picked up, or you are cited for neglecting or abusing it, remember, I am only trying to get you to fulfill your responsibility to your pet, your neighbor and yourself.

Do not scorn me. Respect me, for I am the product of your irresponsibility. I love animals, and I care.

ANIMAL CONTROL OFFICER

DEAR OFFICER: Thank you for a powerful message that needs to be repeated often.

No pet should be allowed to breed indiscriminately. Please, please have your pet spayed or neutered. And if you have a dollar or two to spare, please send it to your local S.P.C.A. so it can feed and care for all those kittens and puppies a little longer—instead of exterminating them immediately for lack of funds.

I love animals, and I care, too.

DEAR ABBY: I clean house for a well-to-do lady twice a week. She has several small grandchildren that I know she loves, but I am shocked that this same lady, who will not drive a block without buckling up her grandbabies, leaves the dishwasher detergent and drain crystals under her kitchen sink. (The toilet bowl crystals are under her bathroom sink.)

Everyone knows that these chemicals are very dangerous to a child, and I told the lady so. She acted insulted, and said she always watches her grandchildren carefully while they are in her home.

I tried putting these boxes in higher cabinets, but the lady got mad, said it was too "inconvenient" and put them back under the sink.

Abby, those chemicals can kill a child if he takes a fistful in his mouth.

Please print this for all the grannies and mommies to see. I'm sure this lady's daughters-in-law would be shocked if they knew these poisons were within reach of their children. Should I tell them?

LILLIAN

DEAR LILLIAN: Yes. And the sooner the better. It may cost you your job, but if you don't tell, it may cost a child his life.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: It's all in the past, thank God, but I hope you will print this because there is a lesson for parents here.

For five years, my husband (he's now my ex) abused me verbally at home, at family gatherings and even in public. He did this in front of our young son and my parents. How I wished someone had said to him, "Don't talk to her like that!"

Nobody came to my defense, not even my parents, so I started to believe his abuse was OK. Soon, the verbal abuse led to physical abuse. After a while, my son saw me taking all this punishment and he grew to have no respect for me.

To make a long story short, a dear friend saw what was happening to me and she made me get professional help. Now I realize I could have been spared years of pain if my parents had taken my part.

A LESSON FOR PARENTS

DEAR LESSON: The lesson here is not for parents, it's for any wife who permits herself to be abused. When your husband first started to abuse you verbally, you should have said, "Don't you talk to me like that!"

Had you spoken up in defense of yourself, you may have been spared years of pain.

Marinades Can Help Tenderize Tougher Meats

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Some beginning cooks think meat can be tenderized and made flavorful by soaking it in an oil and acid mixture. That's only part of it.

To be successful, marinades should have the right proportion of these two key ingredients, which varies with the type used. More than that, the mixture should be well-spiced to really improve the flavor.

A good salad oil, laced with herbs and spices, can give an ordinary cut of beef or lamb a gourmet flavor. And wine can tenderize a tough chuck steak enough to broil.

Spices and herbs may be used whole or ground, but to release their flavor, the whole ones should be heated briefly. Whole spices are easy to remove, incidentally, if the marinade is to be used later in a sauce.

Ground spices, which release their flavor more readily, can be used in cold marinades which do not have to be heated.

The stronger spices like black pepper, bay leaf and cloves are good in beef and lamb marinades. For chicken or turkey, pepper is usually combined with ginger, rosemary or tarragon. Marinades for seafood call for more aromatic herbs, such as dill, celery and fennel.

Vegetables, too, can be marinated. If you plan a salad with cooked string beans and potatoes, soak them in a mixture spiced with basil, marjoram and parsley flakes. A couple of hours should do it.

The cut of meat you are marinating dictates the time needed. Meat strips can be seasoned in a couple of hours, but a 9-pound roast should stand in the marinade at least 24 hours.

Wine is good in a marinade, but not essential. Wine vinegar is often substituted, and in the Middle East cooks have long used lemon juice in preparing the lamb dishes so popular in that part of the world.

Here is a marinade, popular in America's Southwest, that features wine vinegar.

- 3 pounds short ribs of beef
- 1 tablespoon powdered mustard
- 1 tablespoon warm water
- 3 tablespoons wine vinegar
- ¼ cup salad or olive oil
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1½ teaspoons chili poweder
- ½ teaspoon minced garlic
- ¼ teaspoon ground red pepper

Trim fat off meat, cut into serving-size pieces and place in bowl. Combine mustard with water, let stand 10 minutes for flavors to emerge. Add remaining ingredients and pour over meat. Turn meat to let marinade cover both sides. Cover and refrigerate 12 hours, turning once. Remove meat from marinade, place in roasting pan. Brown 20 minutes in 450-degree oven. Pour marinade over meat. Reduce oven to 325 degrees. Cover and cook about 1½ hour or until meat is tender, basting with marinade occasionally. Serves 6

Memories

The Texas Schoolbook Depository Building in Dallas is a haunted place in memories of people who labor in the news field.

Remember? Lee Harvey Oswald was said to have fired the shots that killed President John F. Kennedy from a sixth-floor window of the structure nearly 20 years ago.

The old depository has since been turned into a county office building. It returned to the news pages Thursday by reason of an arsonist's failed fire.

For years after the JFK asassination people came to stand nearby and look up at the window from which the shots were fired.

Even with renovation, authorities kept the sixth floor closed off. Time and change had not dimmed the memory.

Privately, we have always thought one such shrine to murder (the old Ford Theater) was enough.

For those who came in late: Oswald was able to leave the building in the excitement that followed the shooting. He was captured in a theater shortly afterward, and investigators say he shot and killed a Dallas police officer during the escape.

He, in turn, was shot to death two days later in the basement of the Dallas Police Station by a nightclub operator who was convicted, won a new trial on technicalities, and died of cancer before he could be retried.

If walls could talk, that sixth-floor room has a story to tell.

Unlikely Find

Another expedition has messaged high hopes it has discovered Noah's Ark on Mount Ararat, and despite past disappointments we are sure in the minds of many there was a glow of hope and the question "is this It?" raised anew.

Five Americans and a Turkish explorer comprised the team of seekers.

The expedition's leader cites location of the find and seeing what appeared to be remnants of a "boat shape" with dimensions roughly corresponding to those given in Genesis as his evidence. He also has some pieces of wood and shards of rock for analysis.

Unhappily, people are prone to "see" what they want to see or expect to see; and what we today would interpret as a "boat shape" may not correspond in any way to what might have been a "boat shape" in a past so remote it is utterly foreign to us.

It is an unlikely find.

Bringing Up The Forbidden

What I admire about the Republicans is how reluctant they are to make political hay out of Geraldine Ferraro's financial disclosures.

It's impossible to get a Reagan supporter to discuss them.

I met Lance Worthington, a White House political strategist, for lunch, and the first thing he said to me was, "I hope you're not going to ask me questions about Geraldine Ferraro's tax returns, because if you do I'll walk out of the restaurant."

"I promise I won't."

"We consider Ferraro Mondale's problem, not ours."

I said, "I'm glad you people are taking the high road."

"Of course there are a lot of questions the American people are entitled to have answers to concerning the loan her husband made to her in 1978."

"I thought you didn't want to talk about it," I said.

"I don't. But isn't it peculiar that after John Zaccaro discovered he had made an illegal contribution to his wife's congressional campaign in 1978, she repaid it with $100,000 she received from the sale of a building she only had a $25,000 interest in four months previously?"

"It does seem rather weird," I said. "What's you theory on it?"

"I told you I didn't want to discuss it," he said angrily.

"I'm sorry. Let's talk about the Reagan campaign."

"We were right on schedule until the Ferraro business interrupted it. How do you suppose she and her husband wound up with a net worth of $4 million?"

"I'd rather not say."

"That's the trouble with the media. You make a big deal over a lousy $50,000 loan to Ed Meese, but you refuse to discuss the finances of one of your own."

"I will. But you said you didn't want to talk about it."

"I don't. But that doesn't mean where there is smoke, there isn't a smoking gun. I have nothing against Geraldine Ferraro because she's a woman."

"Neither do I."

"But when a persons runs for vice president the public should know everything there is to know about her husband."

"That doesn't seem to be a problem any more," I said. "I know more about John Zaccaro's finances than I know about my own son's."

"I suppose you think the White House is happy about all this investigative reporting into the Zaccaros' financial affairs."

"I had a secret feeling you were."

"Well, you're wrong. It only detracts from our campaign. Frankly we wish the issue would go away so we could campaign on the Republican platform. President Reagan and Vice President Bush are sick and tired of being asked questions about Geraldine Ferraro."

"What would they rather be asked questions on?"

"Walter Mondale and his inability to pick a vice president who isn't under a cloud."

"That makes good political sense," I said. "But once the media dogs start sniffing there is no way of stopping them."

"That is our main problem. No matter how the Republicans try to downplay Ferraro's problems the media persists in bringing them up. Why don't they talk about Reagan's record for the last four years, instead of whether John Zaccaro rents space to a company that distributes pornographic magazines?"

"I wish they would. It would make your job so much easier. Do you think it will all blow over by Labor Day?"

"What will blow over?"

"The Ferraro finance factor."

"I told you I didn't want to discuss it when we sat down to lunch. Why do you keep bringing it up?"

THAT SHOULD DO IT!

Public Forum

To the editor:

Pitt County property taxes for 1984 are going up. Remember, wasn't it first reported our taxes would go up only a few cents? When the approved budget was announced, we were told it was only a 10-cent increase. But it means we will pay 18.5 percent more property tax in 1984. Does it bother you?

Let me jar your memory some. From 1973 thorugh 1984 budget, our property tax increased 75 percent. Has your income increased 75 percent since 1973?

Any time the commissioners and county manager want more money they raise property taxes. I believe if you asked most of the commissioners, the county manager ($47,000 salary) and department heads, they would tell you they have removed all the "FAT" from the budget.

Do these few items appear excessive?

Mental health — $2,416,000; social services — $4,892,000; data processing $686,000; voter registration and voting — $111,400; solid waste — $775,000.

Pitt County is participating in the legislative Christmas in July. Last January it was estimated there was a $238 million credit balance, but it was not used to raise the teachers' salaries. All of a sudden there came the July Christmas celebration of $737,600,000 surplus to be spent. Nothing was said about saving some for the future — spend it now.

How could the experts miss the budget by $400 million in January? Was it planned in order to hand out pay increases for everyone and all kinds of projects and programs at the most opportune time — election time? Should the expert that prepared the January budget be fired for a poor job or given a bonus by Gov. Hunt? A few of the "pork barrel" handouts: Winterville Historical Society, Bethel Arts, Farmville Arts, Grifton Museum and Ayden-Grifton Playhouse get $23,000; Pitt-Greenville Chamber gets $6,500; ECU Summer Theater, $500, and ECU Friends of Music, $1,000.

Are you pleased?

Reagan Has Safety-First Campaign

DALLAS — The fact that Ronald Reagan came to the most anti-tax of all national political conventions clinging to tax hikes as a "last resort" points to a safety-first re-election campaign and perhaps a standpat second term.

In contrast to the platform's conservative populism, speeches prepared for Reagan's triumphant march through the Midwest to Dallas and his Thursday night appearance here were in the orthodox tradition of incumbent Republican presidential election campaigns. The decision to run on Reagan's record and proclaimed leadership strips the campaign of any blueprint for the future.

Here is a familiar GOP song. Sit on a big lead and, if the lead holds up, enter the second term with no fresh commitments. Events in Dallas also showed that, just as Walter Mondale insists, there are secret intentions inside the Reagan administration to raise taxes after the election.

Those intentions surfaced at a Washington strategy session Aug. 7. Budget director David Stockman painted his familiar picture of cascading red ink, then suggested that the president retain a possible post-election tax increase as "a last resort."

James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff who had previously urged "wiggle room" for Reagan on tax hikes, bought Stockman's "last resort" formulation. The president made it official Aug. 11 on the eve of Platform Committee deliberations, provoking a rank-and-file rebellion that ensured an anti-tax-increase pledge in the platform.

Some presidential political agents here who had reluctantly signed on to the Stockman-Baker "last resort" were delighted at their failure to command enough Platform Committee votes. They hoped Reagan might follow his own instincts about the platform and keep the tax-increase door closed. Those hopes were fanned when a late draft of the acceptance speech did not mention "last resort."

Thus, when two senior campaign operatives watching the evening television news here Monday night heard the barnstorming president talk about taxes as a "last resort," they assumed he was freelancing from his famous index cards. But alas, no: the "last resort" was written into the prepared text.

Political aides recommended that the president not repeat those words to a convention where hundreds of delegates wear "No Tax Increase" badges. But apart from his acceptance speech, the president has opened the door to a tax increase and it is not going to be closed during his campaign.

Mondale's challenge that Reagan reveal his tax intentions so accelerated the often glacial decision-making in the White House that hopes for a slow evolution of presidential support toward the specifics of reform have been smothered. Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin warns his client that presidential endorsement of a flat tax would induce public suspicion that this was the secret tax increase warned about by Mondale.

Simultaneously, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan is displaying fierce determination not to say anything specific about taxes until Treasury's tax study is unveiled after the election (a procedure made to order for Mondale). After getting the platform's flat tax recommendation watered down, Regan still opposes its plank doubling the personal tax exemption to $2,000. Those presidential insiders who once viewed this provision, coupled with an attack on tax shelters, as a tool toward party realignment now fear it is dead.

Passionate views from the Treasury fortify caution inside the White House. Even aides who previously asserted the need for a 73-year-old incumbent to assert a vision of the future now say that it will be accomplished by rhetoric, not programs. With Mondale leading only in Minnesota and the District of Columbia, there is no political imperative to look toward the future.

Strength For Today

Last year the owners of a small business decided that it was not being run efficiently. They hired a new manager — a brisk, vigorous, assertive man — and sat back with pleasure as they watched him make a decisive reorganization of the firm.

Today the owners are looking for another manager. The business is worse off than before. The new man, who had so much to offer, lacked one vital quality — courtesy. He treated everyone badly.

Courtesy to others is a vital element in human relations. It is not, as some insensitive people claim, superficial veneer. It is as necessary to smooth relationships as oil is to an automobile engine — and serves much the same purpose.

True courtesy springs from a sincere realization of the dignity and worth of our fellow human beings. It is a recognition of humanity.

Who's In The Political Center?

In their book "The Real Majority" Richard Scammon and Ben Wattenberg drew a picture of American politics as a struggle for control of the ideological center of the American electorate.

That was not a particularly startling revelation as such, except that the authors defined the political center in a somewhat novel way. The middle, they said, can shrink or expand, depending upon the size and strength of the political right and left.

Using a football analogy, they said the center of the political spectrum could be as narrow as the space between the 40-yard lines or as wide as the area between the 10-yard lines.

Whatever the width of the Scammon-Wattenberg center in the current political situation, it has become obvious in recent weeks that both the Democrats and the Republicans are trying to occupy it.

Some have said that Walter Mondale's victory at the Democratic convention marked return of party control to the liberal-left wing of the party, but Mondale has tried very hard to keep his campaign from being so labeled.

President Reagan's strategists have tried just as hard to avoid the radical right image on their campaign. From campaign Chairman Paul Laxalt down, GOP leaders at last week's Republican National Convention characterized the party platform as reflective of the mainstream views of average Americans.

And both sides have been putting in overtime trying to pin the extremist tag on the other.

The Republicans remember with pain what happened to Barry Goldwater after he was pinned with the extremist label in 1964, and the Democrats still wince when they recall the same thing happening to McGovern in 1972.

Both parties have moved one way or the other over the years, but in truth neither can be said to have moved beyond the boundaries of the wide center defined by Scammon and Wattenberg. The United States does have some really radical political parties at both ends of the spectrum, but most of them are outside the stadium where the game is being played.

In The Area

Armed Robbery

Greenville police are investigating an armed robbery that was reported Monday at 8:58 p.m. in the parking lot of Dixie Bearing Co. on Dickinson Avenue.

Paul Lamotte told police a man held a knife at his throat while another man blocked the other doorway of his car. Lamotte said he gave the men $96.

Shoplifting

Brenda Kay Swinson of 608 W. 14th St., Greenville, has been charged with shoplifting in connection with an incident Tuesday morning at Nichol's Discount Center, according to police.

Officers said Ms. Swinson is accused of concealing two bottles of cologne and attempting to leave the store at 11:43 a.m. The cologne is valued at $9.91.

Thefts, Damages

A bicycle owned by Cynthia F. Shiley was reported stolen from the porch of Pirate Landing Apartments here Tuesday at 4:30 p.m., police said. The bicycle was valued at $135.

Police said security personnel at Pitt County Memorial Hospital reported the larceny of a camera lens, a radio, pictures, candleholders and a decorative liquor bottle from the hospital.

The items were taken from room 204 in the surgical area.

Police are investigating incidents that left soft drink machines damaged at the Farm Fresh Store, the Etna Station at West Fifth Street, at Bullock's Barber Shop on West Fifth Street, at Harris Supermarket on Memorial Drive, and at the Heritage Inn Snack Center. Officers said the machines were apparently damaged in unsuccessful attempts to pry open the units.

Phyllis Ham reported damages estimated at $150 to window screens and a storage shed door at Greentree Apartments.

Tuesday Wreck

A traffic mishap at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Hooker Road Tuesday at 5:16 p.m. involved vehicles operated by Ernest Russell Early and Charlotte Ann Davis, both of Greenville. Officers said damages were estimated at $500 to each vehicle. Ms. Davis was reported injured.

Women Arrested

Three young women from the Williamston area have been arrested on assault charges following an altercation at Hardee's Restaurant on 10th Street, police said today.

Carol Burgess, 20, an East Carolina University student, told officers she was assaulted by three women. Police identified those charged as Paula Mitchell Roberson, 16, of Route 2, Williamston, Donna Lee Washington, 16, of Williamston, and Donna Kay Wainwright, 18, of Route 2, Williamston. Bond for each woman was set at $200.

Possession Count

A Greenville man has been charged by police with possession of pyrotechnics. Officers said Philip Toister of Georgetown Apartments was arrested at his home today at 1:20 a.m.

Task Force Meeting

The Pitt County Family Violence Task Force will meet Tuesday at noon at Archie's Restaurant on Stantonsburg Road.

Discount Deadline

Friday will be the last day Greenville citizens can receive a 2 percent discount on city taxes, according to Floyd Little, revenue collector.

Little said that taxes paid on or before Friday will qualify for the discount.

The tax office is located on the first floor at city hall, corner of West Fifth and Washington streets.

Labor Day Closings

City Hall, all municipal offices, and recreation centers and gymnasiums will be closed Monday for Labor Day. However, River Birch Tennis Center on Arlington Boulevard will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday and River Park North will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

GREAT buses will not operate on Labor Day and the city sanitation division will be closed Monday. Refuse and trash pickup will be delayed one day from the normal schedule. The regular collection schedule will resume on Thursday.

Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches will be closed Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Noon Services

Services will start at noon Sunday at Emanuel Temple Pentecostal Holiness Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Class Gathering

The H.B. Sugg class of 1964 will celebrate its 20th reunion Sunday at the Sheraton Greenville.

Course Participant

Christy Garrison of Greenville, daughter of Charles Garrison, completed a course in chemistry offered as part of the Duke University summer residential program for verbally and mathematically precocious youths.

Miss Garrison is a 10th grade student at J.H. Rose High School.

Reunion Planned

The Moore family reunion will be held Saturday at Wellcome Middle School, with registration beginning at 10 a.m.

Fees may be paid to the following persons before Saturday: Jill Ebron, 752-2304; Vounghie Williams, 752-9804; Cathy Perkins, 758-7994; Jesse Battle, 756-8805, or Vernestine Paige, 757-0508.

Art Classes

The fall session of after-school classes for children will begin in mid-September at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St. Linda Darty will teach 12-week sessions of drawing, painting, and crafts, with all supplies furnished by the museum.

Tuition per course is $25 ($20 for children of members). Early registatration is encouraged due to space limitations (call 758-1946).

Courses scheduled to date are:

- Art I, ages 6-8, Sept. 11-Dec. 4, Tuesdays, 3:30-4:30 p.m. (No class Nov. 20).
- Art II, ages 9-12, Sept. 13-Dec. 6, Thursdays, 3:30-4:30 p.m. (No class Nov. 22).
- Preschool art, ages 4 and 5, Sept. 12-Dec. 5, Wednesdays, 3:30-4:30 p.m. (No class Nov. 21).

Details on another class in hand-buiilt ceramics for children 6-10 will be announced soon.

General Retires

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The retiring commanding general of the Atlantic Fleet Marine Force says the terrorist bombing in Beirut last October that left 241 Marines dead was the greatest tragedy to befall him in 41 years with the Corps.

Lt. Gen. John H. Miller was to turn over his command to Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gray Jr. today at Camp Lejeune, N.C. He will retire to Jacksonville, near Camp Lejeune.

About 4,000 troops and dozens of Navy and Marine Corps officials were scheduled to parade in his honor at change-of-command ceremonies. Miller, 59, has participated in nearly every major conflict of modern times, including World War II, Korea — where he picked up three Purple Heart medals — and Vietnam.

General Strike

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Police fired tear gas and blanks to disperse thousands of members of two opposition alliances who staged a day-long general strike against the military regime of Lt. Gen. Hussain Mohammad Ershad.

Officials gave no arrest figures, but said 16 policemen traveling in a patrol van were injured when they were attacked by demonstrators in downtown Dhaka.

Schedules Ready

D.H. Conley students can pick up class schedules for 1984-85 in the school office from 8:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. through Friday, according to Ike Baldree, principal.

Students not able to pick up schedules this week may get them Tuesday, Baldree said, at 8 a.m. in the main lobby of the school.

Course Offered

A class on the New Testament of the Bible will be held by the Institute of Religion at East Carolina University from 6:30-8 p.m. Thursdays. The time of the course was incorrectly listed in Tuesday's Daily Reflector.

The course will cover the life of Jesus, his teachings and the mission of the Apostles. Registration will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints at 307 Martinsborough Road. For more informaton contact instructor Bill Evenhuis at 756-1473.

Reward Presented

S.L. Woodard of Grimesland was recently rewarded by the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation for providing information that lead to the arrest and conviction of Derwin Gatlin for breaking, entering, larceny and possession of stolen goods.

The arrest followed a break-in at the J.C. Galloway farm on Route 3, Greenville.

The $500 reward was provided through a federation program that makes rewards available to the first person giving information leading to arrest and conviction for arson, malicious injury to property, burgulary or other felonies committed on property posted with Farm Bureau reward signs.

Membership Meeting

A membership meeting will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church.

Women's Day

Women's day will be held Sunday at 11 a.m. at Union Grove Free Will Baptist Church. Eldress Martha Strong will speak.

Precinct Relocated

The location of Greenville's 3rd Precinct has been changed from the Gardner Fire Station to the fellowship hall at Hooker Memorial Christian Church, 1111 Greenville Blvd.

The new voting site will be utilized for the first time on Nov. 6.

The Pitt County Board of Elections said the change to Hooker Memorial was made because of a traffic hazard at Gardner created by a nearby railroad crossing and intersection, and weather problems. The fire station offered limited shelter from poor weather, the board said.

Inquiries concerning the change should be directed to the elections board at 758-4683.

Family Reunion

The Adams family reunion will be held Sunday at Wellcome Middle School beginning at 1 p.m. A covered dish dinner will be served at 2 p.m.

Kiwanis Scholarship

Wiley Thomas (Tommy) Mayo III has received a Farmville Kiwanis Club Scholarship loan of $500 for each of the next four years.

Mayo is a freshman at N.C. State University. He graduated from Farmville Central High School in 1984, where he received the Major Benjamin May chapter Daughters of the American Revolution history award and a North Carolina scholars program graduate award. He was in the top 10 percent of his class.

Fire Darkens 150,000 Acres In Montana

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — National Guardsmen and firefighters from six states battled rampaging fires around-the-clock today as stubborn windswept infernos blackened 150,000 acres of forest and prairie, routing 500 people and threatening more homes.

Most of the major fires remained out of control today with more than 1,000 fresh firefighters being summoned. A blaze which consumed 75,000 acres was added to a list of disaster areas eligible for firefighting assistance late Tuesday, becoming the third such battleground.

All three blazes threatened residential areas or ranch homes.

The flames also prompted the shutting down of a powerhouse Tuesday when a fire came within a half-mile of a Missouri River dam.

"Rain is the only thing that's going to stop it, because we're sure not," said Bob Lawrence, fire boss on the North Hill fire near Helena in west-central Montana that mushroomed to 17,000 acres Tuesday.

Hot and windy weather with scattered thundershowers are forecast throughout Montana into the weekend.

President Reagan declared the North Hill fire and the Houghton Creek fire, which had charred about 12,000 acres between Libby and Kalispell, as federal disaster areas Tuesday.

A third major blaze, the 75,000-acre Hawk Creek fire, was added Tuesday night after officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency met in Helena with state officials.

The North Hill fire nearly tripled its size Tuesday as strong winds prevented aerial retardant drops and pushed the fire into thousands of acres of the Gates of the Mountain Wilderness.

More than 400 firefighters were battling the blaze, including smokejumpers and crews from California and Idaho.

Spokesman Steve Jorgenson of the Department of State Lands in Missoula said 1,000 more firefighters were to join crews on the Houghton Creek fire today.

The fire started late Monday, and by Tuesday night had burned a 10-mile swath on both sides of U.S. 2 covering an estimated 12,000 acres of dense timber 30 miles south of Libby, near the Idaho border. Officials said the fire destroyed at least three homes.

About 200 residents of the area were evacuated Monday. Jorgenson said they have not been allowed to return.

The Hawk Creek fire converged Tuesday with the Goulding Creek fire that destroyed 30 homes in three hours Monday near Roundup, about 160 miles east of Helena. They are now being treated as a single fire.

The Napi Peak fire at the eastern edge of Glacier National Park grew to 3,200 acres Tuesday. That fire has destroyed at least two summer homes. At Red Owl, 20 miles southeast of Kalispell, a fire swelled to about 2,000 acres Tuesday as about 300 people fled their homes.

Montana firefighters were being assisted by crews from California, Idaho, Arizona, Wyoming and New Mexico.

Gov. Ted Schwinden said National Guard equipment is being used on the fires and about 300 National Guard volunteers are working as support personnel.

"Some of these fires are totally out of control at the present point, and the major priority has to be trying to save buildings, communities and evacuating people," the governor said.

Montana Power Co. shut down the powerhouse at Hauser Dam on the Missouri River northeast of Helena on Tuesday afternoon when the fire burned within a half-mile of the dam, said Bill Jones, assistant superintendent of the company's Helena division.

The company also ceased generating power downstream at Holter Dam after a 100,000-volt power line burned.

Crews contained blazes totaling nearly 2,000 acres in the Glasgow and Hays areas of north-central Montana and the 11,500-acre Pine Hills fire in the east on Tuesday.

A fire at the Rocky Boys Indian Reservation south of Havre in the north-central section totaled 12,000 acres, and at Crystal Creek in the northwest, flames had blackened more than 1,000 acres.

Court Reopens Rejected Social Security Cases

NEW YORK (AP) — The Social Security Administration must reevaluate the denial of disability benefits to more than 50,000 mentally disabled New York state residents, a federal appeals court has ruled.

The benefits were denied under a "clandestine policy," Judge Jon O. Newman said in the ruling Tuesday in the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeals court upheld a February 1983 ruling accusing the government of a "covert" attempt to deny disabililty benefits by automatically assuming applicants were able to work without trying to find out whether they actually could.

The policy, in effect from 1978 to early 1983, was declared illegal by Judge Jack B. Weinstein in Brooklyn. The appeals court said the Social Security Administration has since changed the policy.

The suit, filed against the agency and Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, was brought by New York City and the state on behalf of residents who were denied benefits. Federal attorneys said the case should have been dismissed because disability denials cannot be challenged after more than 60 days.

Newman said the applicants could not have known the denials were based on a "system procedural irregularity." The "full extent of the government's clandestine policy was uncovered only in the course of this" lawsuit, he said.

Paul Glickman, a lawyer in the state attorney general's office, said it will be much easier for unsuccessful Social Security applicants to sue in the federal courts for benefits.

The Social Security agency will have to review immediately an estimated 50,000 to 60,000 denials, Glickman said.

Pay Raise Considered By Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to seek a 3½ percent pay increase, effective Jan. 1, for federal civilian white collar workers, a White House official said today.

The official, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, said that figure was recommended by presidential advisers to Reagan, who has yet to approve the hike formally.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan has until Friday to propose the increase, and that he will meet that deadline. But Speakes said the announcement was not expected today.

The 3½ percent figure was recommended because of concerns about the budget deficit and because inflation is running very low, said the official who did not wish to be named. He said 3½ percent "seems like a reasonable salary increase."

Each year, the president gets a new recommendation on federal civilian workers' pay from a panel that studies what comparable employees in the private sector earn. The panel recommended a hike of about 18 percent this year, but the spokesman said the White House has "concerns about the way the comparability study is conducted."

Congressional budget officials have said they probably will accept Reagan's proposal, since time to try to override the president's request is short in this election year.

Federal workers got a 3½ percent pay increase in January, and Congress added another ½ percent to that figure in mid-year.

The law governing federal pay raises stipulates that unless the president proposes an alternative, the employees would receive the increase recommended by the panel to help them catch up with private sector counterparts.

Warrants Issued

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Bladen County authorities have issued warrants for the arrest of two Wake County men, charging them with the Aug. 11 kidnapping, assault and robbery of an elderly Tar Heel couple.

Bladen County sheriff's detective Phillip Little said warrants have been issued for David Eugene McDonald, 30, and Robert Lee Crumpt, 22.

McDonald and Crump are accused of forcing their way into the home of Billy McNair, 69, and his wife, Marie, 62. The McNairs told deputies that two men forced their way into the McNair home, stealing a pistol and $400.

Window Dressing

CHARLOTTE (AP) — First Union National Bank of Charlotte is among six banks that have agreed to a consent order by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency prohibiting them from "window dressing" their asset figures, officials say.

Bob Lee, treasurer of First Union, North Carolina's third largest bank, said the bank has agreed to republish some information for the past seven quarters to show the average quarterly assets were not quite as much as shown when some short-term funds were included.

The term "window dressing" refers to "the practice of engaging in temporary transactions that are designed to cause a distortion or realignment of a national bank's total balance sheet or any of its individual components."

Turks Confiscate 'Ark' Materials

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Airport security forces today detained Marvin Steffins, the American who says he believes he found Noah's Ark, then released him after confiscating about 8½ pounds of sand and stones.

Steffins, his wife, Marjorie, and his daughter, Marianne, were detained at Yesilkoy airport for three hours just before they were to board a flight for New York by way of Amsterdam.

"We kept Steffins with his wife and daughter upon orders of the Interior Ministry," an airport official said.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said security officials found about 8½ pounds of sand and stones in Steffins' luggage. They sent the samples to a museum for examination to see whether they are of any "historical value," the official said.

Police later received a telephone call from their superiors ordering them to allow Steffins and his family "to leave the country the normal way," he said, adding: "But we have to keep the sand and the stones."

The semi-official Anatolia news agency said the security forces had found samples the American brought from the site where he says he believes Noah's Ark is located on Mount Ararat.

Steffin announced at a news conference in Ankara on Saturday that he believed he had found the ark. The Monroe, La., man and his family then went to the Aegean coast for a holiday. They returned to Istanbul on Monday.

Turkish Culture and Tourism Minister Mukerrem Tascioglu said Tuesday that the Americans would not be allowed to take samples Steffins said were from the ark and that they could be charged with smuggling ancient artifacts.

Steffins was quoted by Anatolia as saying "I took them from the site to be analyzed in the United States. If Turkish experts can analyze them here, I can leave them here."

A high-level Culture and Tourism Ministry official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said Monday that under Turkish law expeditioners should report to Turkish authorities within three days after they find anything believed to be of historic value.

Steffins and his team did not report to the ministry about their findings, the official said.

Steffins, the head of a six-member team and president of a group called the International Expedition, said the team found a boat-shaped formation clearly visible at the 5,200-foot level on the southeastern face of Mount Ararat.

On Saturday, he showed reporters a large bag of samples, including small pieces of rocks and wood, as well as packages of sand or soil.

He said he believed the boat-shaped formation was Noah's Ark because of its location, its shape and its dimensions, which correspond to the ones given in the Book of Genesis in the Bible.

After a Turkish government decision in 1982 to lift a 10-year-old ban on climbs up the mountain by foreigners, fundamentalist Christians rushed to the area to search for the ark. Fundamentalist Christian groups claim Noah's Ark settled at the top of Mount Ararat after a flood that the Bible says inundated the Earth.

GESTURES — Dr. Emily Feistritzer of the National Center fo Education Information gestures during a news conference Tuesday on a study report calling for national testing for public school teachers. She said that and other recommendations made by the study would rescue American teaching from its "chaotic" condition and make it a true profession. (AP Laserphoto)

School Consultant Proposes National Test For Teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of teacher education programs would be shut down and American teachers would have to pass a national certification test under a series of recommendations from an education consultant.

C. Emily Feistritzer, head of the National Center for Education Information, included the proposals in a new study, "The Making of a Teacher," released Tuesday by her private education consulting group.

"Teaching will never be truly a profession until it adopts standards of excellence and sets up uniform, effective criteria for selecting, training and placing" teachers, she wrote in her report.

Teachers should face a national certification program similar to that of lawyers, physicians and accountants, she said, proposing that national and state education officials, teachers groups and legislators participate in designing the program.

The current process of teacher training is a mess, she said. "We really have not been paying a whole lot of attention to how we select, train and certify teachers."

She was highly critical of teacher-training programs, many at the small colleges that make up nearly 83 percent of the 1,287 institutions that offer education courses. She noted that more than 100 small schools have added such courses since 1973.

Many of these schools often pay little attention to the qualifications of their students and demand little of them, she said. The schools have added these education programs mainly for the economic benefit of the college, she charged.

She urged the education programs that accept "anybody and everybody" without entrance or exit requirements, "should be summarily shut down" by state education officials.

"There are a lot of colleges in this country where you can show up with a high school diploma and a checkbook, and get out the other end with a bachelor's degree," Ms. Feistritzer said.

There was no immediate comment from the Department of Education on the new study.

Keith Geiger, vice president of the National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher organization, said later that his group is also concerned about the number of small colleges with low standards.

But as to shutting down school programs, Geiger said the NEA would like to see all teachers colleges have to meet some standard for accreditation, which many do not currently do.

Geiger said his group "has problems" with the proposal for a national competency test, preferring to see standards set by each state. But he complimented Ms. Feistritzer's study, saying she has "highlighted many problems and offered solutions."

Ms. Feistritzer said many smaller schools have added education courses as an economic benefit to the schools, since these courses are less costly than engineering, for example, but the student pays the same tuition.

As many as one-third to one-half of the nation's teacher-training programs should be shut down, she commented, adding, "I just don't think we need them all."

Asked if she would describe these schools as diploma mills, she responded that "that's a perjorative term, but it does capture the essence of the process."

She was generally complimentary of large, publicly supported schools offering teaching degrees. She noted that these institutions make up only 17 percent of all schools offering education programs, but produce half of the nation's teachers.

The best of these institutions should be identified and highlighted, she said, so good students can be directed to the best source of learning.

Her study was based on surveys of the schools offering teacher training, and of the state education departments. It was conducted this spring and summer.

Accident Touches Off Mob Action

IAMI (AP) — A rowdy rock- and bottle-throwing crowd of youths attacked police and looted a freight train that struck a teen-ager who tried to scoot across the tracks as it approached, but police called the incident "pretty routine" for Liberty City.

At least 50 police officers were called to the scene after the first units arriving to aid the injured child were bombarded by a crowd that swelled to about 100, police said.

By 2 a.m. today — about three hours after the accident — the site was deserted and the train had left. No arrests were reported and no one was injured except the boy hit by the train.

"Whenever there's a large gathering of police, there always has to be a large gathering of people and someone has to throw rocks," said Metro-Dade police shift supervisor Sgt. George Johnson.

The victim, Ricky Shelton, 14, was injured in the "neck and leg areas," according to a police statement. Bruce Fresko, a night administrator at Jackson Memorial hospital, said the youth was in stable condition today and would not need surgery.

"He is conscious from what they tell me," Fresko said. "He's doing OK."

"A group of unidentified juveniles were playing a 'beat the train' game wherein the players would try to cross the railroad track as the train was approaching," police spokesman Ronald Colmenero said.

After Shelton was hit, a crowd looted two of the train's 45 cars, said Metro-Dade police supervisor C.W. Clemons.

"They apparently threw rocks and bottles at the first police units to arrive," he said, so more patrol cars were sent to the area.

At least 50 police officers swarmed to the scene after the original report of violence, Clemons said. "There apparently was some looting of the train."

The crowd dispersed when the other units began arriving, he said.

"This type of incident is pretty routine in that district," said Johnson. "Whenever there's a need for an officer to respond with a red light and siren, it always draws a crowd," he said.

John Holt, a supervisor for Florida East Coast Railway Co., said the Jacksonville-to-Miami train carried piggyback trailers filled with "various merchandise." Police spokesmen said they didn't know the contents of the looted cars.

"We have men ... examining the train now," Holt said today, adding that the extent of the damage or looting was not yet known.

The train was halted along a 10-block strip bordered by housing projects in the mostly black neighborhood, and police said small groups of people gathered along its length after the child was struck.

Liberty City was the site of a bloody disturbance in 1980 when racial violence claimed 18 lives.

The shooting of a young black man by a Hispanic policeman in a video arcade in another predominately black section, Overton, led to two days of riots in 1982. The acquittal of the policeman on manslaughter charges led to another disturbance there in March.

Dynamite Left Behind In Office

LEESBURG, Fla. (AP) — A woman cleaning a vacant office could have blown up half a city block if she had gone ahead with her plan to toss 40 pounds of unstable dynamite into a trash bin, officials said.

Pam Angelillo found the explosives in her father's office, closed when his contracting firm went out of business. The building had been vacant for more than a year, she said.

She piled old papers onto the deteriorating dynamite, which was leaking nitroglycerine, and was about to toss the whole load into a large trash bin when she changed her mind and called police.

Homes and businesses around the building were evacuated by police while they prepared the dynamite for removal.

"The slightest little jolt" would have leveled half a block of businesses and damaged others, Detective Harry Park of the Orange County Sheriff's Department said Tuesday.

Throwing it in the bin would almost certainly have set it off, he said.

"What I know of dynamite is that Bugs Bunny puts his hands over his ears and a sign comes above his head that says 'POW' and then he explodes," Ms. Angelillo said.

Park and other police explosive experts carefully carried the dynamite to a landfill site where it was blown up.

Deputy Bill Miller of the county explosives squad said deteriorating dynamite is "one of the most hazardous" explosives to handle. It is sensitive to shock, heat and temperature.

How the dynamite found its way to a shelf in the abandoned office of Miller-Jones Contractor-Consultants Inc. is a mystery.

Ms. Angelillo, the daughter of Arthur Miller, a partner in the business, said she believes the dynamite had been there about five years but she wasn't sure where it came from.

INTELLIGENT BUILDINGS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A method to help make commercial buildings "intelligent" has been introduced here.

Under the system, Honeywell forms a partnership with building owners and developers to provide tenants with computer, telecommunications and environmental control networks on a shared-cost basis.

The idea incorporates into a building's design a high-technology system which controls the building's comfort, safety functions, information processing and similar functions. ——

Court Says Advertising Deceptive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld a government complaint that some advertising for products sold by Sterling Drug Inc. — including Bayer Aspirin, Midol and Cope — was deceptive.

The Federal Trade Commission filed the complaints that were affirmed by the 9th U.S. District Court of Appeals on Tuesday. The commission had charged that ads for some of Sterling Drug's products were inaccurate when they claimed the products worked better than the competition or had a "unique" formula.

Among the advertisements termed deceptive by the FTC were:

— Claims that scientific tests showed Bayer Aspirin worked better than other brands and also was superior in purity, freshness, stability, and speed of disintegration.

— Claims that Cope had a "unique formula," which actually is similar to the formula in Excedrin P.M., and also that tests have proven Cope's effectiveness in relieving nervous tension headaches.

— An ad that said Midol was made from an "exclusive formula with medication ordinary pain-relievers don't give you," when in fact Midol's pain-relieving ingredient is aspirin.

— Claims that Vanquish was superior to other pain-relievers.

Two other federal appeals courts have upheld similar FTC actions against Bristol-Myers Co., maker of Bufferin and Excedrin, and American Home Products Corp., maker of Anacin and Arthritis Pain Formula.

The decision by Circuit Judge Proctor Hug Jr., of Reno for a three-member panel said there was evidence to support each of the FTC's findings.

Hug said the Midol violation was serious.

"Misleading consumers who cannot tolerate aspirin is a grave concern," he said. Also, "consumers who did not know Midol's analgesic ingredient was aspirin might not question Midol's comparatively high retail price."

In the case of Bayer Aspirin, the FTC said ads could claim that the product was generally better pharmaceutically — that is, in its composition — than other aspirins, because Sterling had done an in-house study in 1971 comparing Bayer to 220 other brands of aspirin.

But the commission said the study did not entitle Bayer to make claims about specific qualities, such as purity, or about the product's superiority as a pain-reliever.

New Miss America Sued By Manager

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Suzette Charles, who became Miss America when Vanessa Williams resigned following the publication of nude photos of her, has been sued for breach of contract by her manager.

The three-count civil suit seeking monetary damages for Michael Pedicin Jr. says he was wrongfully fired by Miss Charles, his lawyer, Harvey Sernovitz, said Tuesday.

No date has been set for a hearing on the suit, filed Monday in Superior Court here.

The suit also names Miss Charles' parents, Charles and Suzette DeGaetano. DeGaetano said he was unaware of the lawsuit and had no comment. He said his daughter was unavailable for comment.

Miss Charles, 21, became Miss America on July 23 and fired Pedicin on Aug. 10. She had signed a three-year contract with Pedicin on Oct. 24, Sernovitz said.

Miss Charles will crown her successor on Sept. 15.

Attitude May Have Effect On Cancers

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Getting upset at the disease and facing it may help a skin cancer patient avoid relapse, according to preliminary results of a study that suggests that attitude may affect the body's natural cancer-fighting cells.

Madelon Visintainer, a Yale Medical School researcher, reported results from the first nine months of a three-year study Tuesday at the annual convention of the American Psychological Association.

The effect of psychological factors on cancer and other diseases has intrigued scientists in recent years. Some recent studies have concluded that patients who face their cancer and try to deal with it have a better prognosis. Nobody knows why.

The latest study focused on patients with the skin cancer melanoma. Though most skin cancers are mild, melanoma is expected to kill 5,500 people this year, according to the American Cancer Society. But 79 percent of the people diagnosed with the disease between 1973 and 1980 have survived for at least five years after diagnosis, based on data for Caucasians, the society said.

Thirty-eight melanoma patients were studied soon after diagnosis, six months after surgery to remove the cancer and three months after that. Tests measured such traits as anxiety, distress, ways of dealing with the disease and the extent to which patients thought it would change their lives.

Some patients showed a "problem-oriented" strategy, being more willing than others to face the cancer and do something about it. The others were considered "problem avoidant," tending more to play down the threat of the disease and try to ignore it.

At nine months after diagnosis, standard relapse rates for melanoma are about 50 percent if the cancer had spread, and 15 percent if it had not. In the sample, cancer had spread to nearby lymph nodes by the time it was first diagnosed in 22 of the 38 patients.

Nine months later, 12 of the patients had relapsed, nine of them having begun treatment after the cancer spread. Problem-oriented patients showed no relapse for isolated cancer and a 33 percent rate for cancer that had spread. The other group showed relapse rates of 50 percent and 46 percent, respectively.

To estimate potential for relapse after nine months, researchers studied the patients' blood for "natural killer" cells, white blood cells which attack and destroy tumor cells.

Researchers found that the activity of those cells nine months after diagnosis was related to relapse by that time, while activity at the time of diagnosis was not, suggesting that the level of killer-cell activity in the ninth month could indicate chances for later relapse.

Problem-oriented patients tended to have higher killer-cell activity at the nine-month point than the other patients, suggesting a lower chance of relapse. Their level of cell activity had risen slightly during the nine months, while the other group's level had declined.

Ms. Visintainer cautioned that other factors such as sun exposure and genetic makeup must be considered, too. And killer cells are only part of the immune system response that may affect cancer, she said.

Problem-oriented patients were more upset than the other patients when first told they had cancer. But this may be the beginning of a more successful coping strategy, she said.

And problem-oriented patients also expected the cancer would make a greater impact on their lives.

But nine months later, their psychological distress had fallen, while that of the other group had risen. The problem-oriented patients showed less depression and anxiety than the other patients at this point.

The study does not prove whether the emotions were affecting the immune system and the disease, or being affected by them instead.

But the research paper noted that coping style was not related to killer-cell activity at diagnosis, as it was to activity nine months later. If style was a reaction to the immune system, the relationship should have been consistent, the study said.

Cities Say More Jobs Necessary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three-fourths of 388 U.S. cities surveyed feel temporary job-creation programs are needed to substantially reduce unemployment, according to a report released today by the National League of Cities.

The league said 74 percent of the 388 cities surveyed believe that temporary job-creation programs are needed in addition to the summer jobs program for youths. Four-fifths of those responding said the jobs should be in the private sector or a combination of both private and public sectors.

The survey also revealed that city officials think the jobs issue will retain its urgency. More than 60 percent of the respondents said unemployment was their top priority or a high priority now and will remain so a year from now and over the long term.

"The national unemployment rate masks a wide range of local conditions," the survey concluded. "Substantial and severe problems are widespread, not limited to a few communities."

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, vice president of the league, said the survey will be used to develop legislation for Congress to consider early next year on urban employment and job creation.

"Our cities are still the mainspring of our nation's complex and diversified economic system," said Voinovich. "Cities provide the human energy and the capital market momentum to encourage and sustain local, regional and national economic growth."

Nearly two-thirds of the cities expressed confidence that locally implemented programs could be effective in reducing unemployment. But the respondents said substantial state or federal aid is needed to carry out the programs adequately.

Half of the survey responses came from cities with more than 50,000 residents.

Of the 82 cities reporting unemployment rates above 10 percent, 24 were located in heavily industrialized states that also reported the most severe problems related to the lingering impacts of the recession and plant closings. In cities reporting jobless rates exceeding 10 percent, 85 percent said unemployment would remain a high priority over the long term.

Following the creation of jobs in order of priority were efforts to help train people for jobs, training people who lack specialized skills for the jobs that are available, helping adults who lack basic education and jobs skills, and helping youths who lack basic education and job skills.

Janet Gaynor Goes Home From Hospital

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Janet Gaynor has been released from Desert Hospital, where she was admitted Aug. 2 for an undisclosed illness, a nurse said.

Miss Gaynor, 77, "was in good shape when she left" Sunday morning, nursing supervisor Leslie Robinson-Smith said today. The actress has a home in Desert Hot Springs.

The actress won an academy award for the 1927-28 years for her performances in the silent films "Seventh Heaven," "Street Angel" and "Sunrise."

Hospital officials said Miss Gaynor's stay had nothing to do with a near-fatal car accident two years ago in San Francisco.

The Campaign

Mondale

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, picking up key pledges of help from the Rev. Jesse Jackson and John Anderson, is trying to put together the coalition he needs to upset President Reagan in November.

But after a long and sometimes tense debate on Tuesday between Mondale and Jackson there remained lingering doubt whether the civil rights leader would halt his criticism of the presidential nominee.

Continuing his effort to bring key members of the Democratic Party behind his candidacy, Mondale was meeting today with mayors and county executives.

Mondale's effort to widen his support began on a high note Tuesday when he and Anderson addressed a rally at the University of Illinois.

The former Republican congressman, who broke with his party in 1980 to wage an independent campaign for president, told the youthful crowd, estimated at about 10,000: "Those of you who walked with me in 1980...I am asking you with all the urgency I can summon to walk with me now in support of the Mondale-Ferraro ticket."

Anderson said he was not becoming a Democrat but would continue trying to build support for his new National Unity Party. He added that he decided against another presidential campaign this year because "the most immediate priority was to ensure against another four years of the Reagan administration."

Ferraro

CLEVELAND (AP) — Assailing President Reagan as a leader who "has never seen an arms control agreement he likes," Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro is telling voters their choice in November might be one between war and peace.

Ms. Ferraro, opening a three-day campaign swing though the Northeast and South, hit repeatedly upon Reagan as a man she said has failed to make America safer, despite his arms buildup, and one who might in his second term "heighten the need for war."

The vice presidential candidate criticized Reagan in appearances in Camden, N.J., and Cleveland after opening her search for votes in Philadelphia Today, she was heading for St. Louis and Nashville, Tenn.

Ms. Ferraro told her audiences they face a "stark choice" in November between Reagan and Walter Mondale — as well as between two parties that have vastly different visions of the future and "two entirely different approaches to the challenge of peace."

"President Reagan says voters face the clearest political choice in 50 years, and on the choice of war and peace he is absolutely right," she said. "This president has never seen an arms control agreement he likes," she said, charging him with opposing the major arms control pacts devised during the past four administrations.

During his own tenure, Reagan "has presided over the total collapse of all arms control negotiations," Ms. Ferraro said.

"It's time to elect a president who will accept the responsibilities of office and not just the trappings ... it's time to elect a president who will roll up his sleeves and tackle the challenges we face, and not roll down his jodhpurs and then ride off into the sunset."

Crew Abandons Crippled Ship

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The 23 crew members of a crippled Cypriot freighter were safe today after they abandoned ship in storm-tossed Pacific waters, but the 360-foot vessel was listing dangerously as its forward holds filled with water.

"There were no injuries," U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Pat Milton said after the crew of the hurricane-battered freighter Blue Falcon boarded the Panamanian cargo ship Josef Roth on Tuesday night.

The crew was taken off the Blue Falcon because its forward holds were filled with water and the ship was tilting five to 10 degrees to port, Chief Petty Officer Charles Crosby said.

The fate of the freighter, which sustained two holes and cracks in its bow in a brush with Hurricane Lowell southwest of Baja California, was unclear.

"It depends on the weather," Crosby said. "We're not certain of the condition of the hull."

The Josef Roth had rushed to the area, and another merchant ship, the Nalo Express, was expected to arrive this morning. A Coast Guard cutter was due to arrive tonight, Crosby said.

A tug contracted by the Blue Falcon's owner left Long Beach Harbor late Tuesday, but it won't reach the scene for two or three days, Ms. Milton said.

Late Monday the vessel signaled in Morse code that it was sinking 900 miles southwest of San Diego. It was kept afloat Tuesday by its own pumps and an emergency pump dropped by a Coast Guard aircraft. The pumps were left running after the evacuation, Ms. Milton said.

"The captain of the ship was pretty frantic and he wanted to abandon ship" early Tuesday as the freighter labored under the strain of 65-knot winds and 15-foot waves generated by Hurricane Lowell, Lt. Debra Harbaugh said. But the crew stayed with the ship at the urging of the Coast Guard because it would have been difficult to spot lifeboats.

The captain was identified as Kiriakos Dimitrious of Greece.

The Blue Falcon moved slowly for several hours under its own power before stopping dead in the water about 570 miles from the tip of Baja California, the Coast Guard said.

A Coast Guard C-130 flew in near dawn Tuesday and dropped three pumps, each capable of moving 140 gallons of water a minute, but two were lost.

The freighter had enough electrical power to keep its own pumps going but continued to take on water despite the pumping, Crosby said.

The cause of the damage to the freighter was unknown.

"It's possible we may never know," Crosby said. "It's not a U.S. ship and we have no authority to do any investigation on it."

The Blue Falcon had taken on a load of 5,000 tons of manganese ore in North Korea, had stopped in Honolulu and was headed to the Panama Canal en route to Puerto Ordaz, Venezuela.

Chirping Cricket Disturbing Nancy

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials have been sweeping the presidential bedroom for a bug — the chirping cricket variety that has kept first lady Nancy Reagan awake at night.

President Reagan had no trouble getting back to sleep after he and Mrs. Reagan were awakened early Monday by the cricket's chirping. But the first lady, a light sleeper in ideal conditions, lay awake in bed listening to the cricket's chirp, said Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary.

Later in the day, White House usher's office theorized the cricket was hiding in some plants, which were removed from the bedroom amidst assurances the problem had been solved.

But the Reagans were awakened again about 4 a.m. Tuesday by the same chirping sound. And once more, Mrs. Reagan had trouble sleeping.

"She lies awake, listening to the cricket," Mrs. Tate reported Tuesday.

So the usher's office has taken a new approach.

"Today, the radiator vents have been taken apart and sprayed, so we'll know tomorrow whether that worked," Mrs. Tate said.

Although she has had trouble sleeping, Mrs. Reagan "kept remining herself that it is supposed to be good luck to have crickets in your house and that eased the pain of being kept awake," Mrs. Tate said.

Expansion

CHARLOTTE (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. will add 365,000 square feet of office and laboratory space to its main complex in the University Research Park in Charlotte, IBM officials have announced.

Company spokeswoman Judy Anderson said the addition would bring the square footage completed or under construction at the site to nearly 2.5 million. She said the division expects to grow from about 4,800 employees to about 5,000 by the end of the year.

ANGELS CLASH — A man, left facing camera, clashes with a member of the Guardian Angels at a subway station in Boston Tuesday night. Members of the Angels were greeted with jeers and catcalls as they patrolled a Boston neighborhood later, defying the pleas of city officials to stay out of the area. Members of the Angels, a youth group that has volunteered to help provide security, have clashed repeatedly with local residents in the Ashmont section of Boston. (AP Laserphoto)

Guardian Angels Keep Up Patrols In Boston Area

BOSTON (AP) — Despite pleas from city officials and local leaders, Guardian Angels again patrolled a Boston neighborhood where members of the anti-crime group clashed with local youths last week.

About 100 neighborhood residents shouted "Go home" late Tuesday as 10 members of the group walked down one street.

Two youths shouted profanities, and pushed and shoved the Angels when they arrived for their patrol. The confrontation was broken up after a few moments by police officers, and there were no arrests, said Sgt. Robert McLaughlin.

The patrol came after angry Angels stalked out of a meeting with city officials and local leaders who asked that they stay out of the low- and middle-income, mostly black Mattapan section for a few nights.

"We said we were going to patrol the streets, and that's where we're going," said Lisa Sliwa, national director of the group.

She said "no progress whatsoever" was made during the two-hour, closed meeting at City Hall attended by Mayor Raymond Flynn, the police, 30 community leaders and six Angels.

They met to try to resolve a dispute that erupted after community leaders asked the Angels to quit patrolling their neighborhoods.

The leaders said the Angels sparked fighting with local teenagers that sent four Angels to the hospital with minor injuries.

City Councilor Bruce Bolling called the meeting "fairly productive," but added, "We're all frustrated when we reach an impasse. All we wanted to do was lay the ground work for communication."

The Angels contended that most neighborhood residents wanted them to continue their patrols.

"I was walking around there this afternoon, and people sitting on their stoops were waving at us, saying 'Thank you,' and 'Keep up the good work,'" Mrs. Sliwa said.

City Councilor Charles C. Yancey said the Angels have "overstepped their bounds" and the neighborhood people want them out.

Started in New York five years ago, the Angels now claim 1,400 members in 16 cities nationwide, including Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Houston, Chicago and Miami.

Members wear red berets. They do not carry weapons.

Police Chief Suspends Himself

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Police Chief Jim Brooks has suspended himself for five days without pay, saying he takes full responsibility for officers gambling at a police lodge.

Brooks gave himself the suspension following an investigation into allegations that officers had played in high-stakes poker and dice games at the Macon Fraternal Order of Police Lodge on Aug. 21.

Jones County Sheriff Robert N. "Butch" Reece said Tuesday he is assigning an investigator to the case and the officers could face prosecution.

"The alleged activity did occur," Brooks said Tuesday. "The magnitude of employee involvement has been extremely exaggerated by rumors."

Brooks said gambling had been a tradition at the lodge.

"I accept full responsibility for what has happened. By my failure to issue proper orders rescinding such long-standing tradition, I was remiss in my duty," he said. "I am therefore suspending myself for five days without pay. Those members of the command staff who knew, or should have known, that such activity was taking place that night are also suspended for five days."

Barfield Protesters Face Hunt

By The Associated Press

Gov. Jim Hunt wanted to talk about education, jobs and agriculture during a campaign swing Tuesday through Robeson County, but sign-carrying relatives of the victims of condemned murderer Velma Barfield had executive clemency on their minds.

When Hunt arrived at the city hall in St. Pauls, he was met by a group of protestors led by Alice Taylor Storms. Mrs. Storms is the daughter of Stuart Taylor, Mrs. Barfield's fiance whom she was convicted of poisoning in 1978.

The group handed out letters asking for signatures to let the governor know they object to clemency for Mrs. Barfield who is scheduled to die Nov. 2. The governor told the protesters he would arrange a meeting in Raleigh to hear their concerns.

During a campaign stopover in Fayetteville, Hunt said Mrs. Barfield's attorneys have been in touch with his legal counsel, but not with him personally, about the matter of clemency.

He said he has read some of the letters that have come to him about the case, and most of them are opposed to the death penalty as a matter of principle. Hunt said he plans to schedule time to listen to both sides before reaching a decision.

Hunt earlier Tuesday said that if elected to the Senate he'd help the United States have "the best schools in the world," and accused Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., of ignoring education.

Claude Allen, spokesman for Helms, said Hunt's education initiatives were designed to boost the governor's political career.

"During eight years as governor, I have put education at the top of my agenda," said Hunt in a campaign speech at a Fayetteville middle school. "In 12 years as senator, Jesse Helms has put education near the bottom of his list of priorities."

Hunt said Helms had voted against programs to help low-income and handicapped children, vocational education, college work-study and federal student loans while supporting tax breaks for wealthy parents who send their children to private schools.

Allen responded that Helms didn't oppose education funding per se, but did object to expenditures that went beyond what President Reagan asked for.

"Gov. Hunt is endorsing the proposals of Tip O'Neill, Ted Kennedy and the other liberal establishment without addressing the real issues," Allen said.

HUNT AND VICTIMS — North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, had a campaign visit to St. Paul's interrupted Tuesday by friends and family members of the victims of Velma Barfield, who is awaiting execution for murder. The demonstrators called on Hunt to deny clemency to Mrs. Barfield, who is scheduled for execution later this year. Hunt said he would allot times to both sides of the clemency issue before deciding. Military Drinking Age Could Go Up

By The Associated Press

If North Carolina raises the legal drinking age to 21, the Pentagon says that military bases across the U.S. — including those in the Tar Heel state — will fall in step.

"As states enact new drinking age laws, the timing of the military institutions' enforcement of the state drinking age will be consistent with the time of enforcement by state and local authorities," Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft said in an Aug. 20 memo.

Military bases, as federal reservations, are exempt from state law. As a result, Fort Bragg and Camp Lejeune do not observe the North Carolina ban on beer sales to anyone under 19.

Marines 18 and older can buy low-alcohol beer at Camp Lejeune and XVIII Airborne Corps members are allowed to buy beer at Fort Bragg no matter what their age.

In his memo, Taft asked that all branches of the military bring their drinking age policies into line with federal legislation signed by President Reagan last month. That legislation urges states to institute a drinking age of 21 or lose large portions of highway aid.

The state General Assembly last year raised the age limit for beer and wine from 18 to 19, and it may consider the federal ultimatium at its next session in January.

Returns Released

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Jay Rockefeller is a millionaire just as his name implies, but he and his wife also paid 55 percent of his income in taxes over the last 10 years.

The Rockefellers on Tuesday released joint tax returns showing that they received total income of $20.9 million between 1974 and 1983 and paid $11.4 million in state and federal taxes.

Rockefeller is the great-grandson of Standard Oil founder John D. Rockefeller. Raese is heir to the Greer Steel Co. in Ohio and related coal and mineral companies in West Virginia.

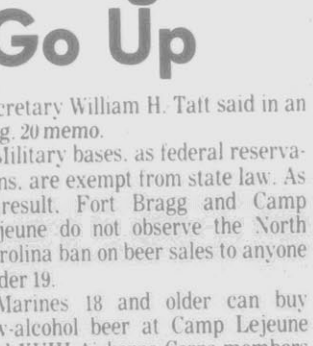
"I GUARANTEE CAR REPAIRS FOR LIFE."



Herbert Powell

That's a pretty strong statement, and I couldn't say it if I couldn't back it up. But my Lifetime Service Guarantee means what it says: you'll never pay twice for the same repair for as long as you own your vehicle. Here's how it works. If you ever need to have your Ford Car or Light Truck fixed, you pay once, and I'll guarantee that if the covered part ever has to be fixed again, I'll fix it free. Free parts. Free labor. For as long as you own your vehicle. No matter when or where you bought it. The Lifetime Service Guarantee. It's a service commitment from me to you, because I stand behind my work, and I put it in writing. Come in and find out more about my Lifetime Service Guarantee.

This limited warranty covers vehicles in normal use. And excludes routine maintenance parts, belts, hoses, sheet metal and upholstery.

State Supreme Court Rejects Hypnosis

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has ruled that evidence obtained from witnesses under hypnosis is not admissible in court. The decision reverses a ruling by the Supreme Court in 1978 which said a witness may testify after having been hypnotized "to refresh his memory."

The ruling, announced Tuesday, also overturns a N.C. Court of Appeals decision on the issue.

In a unanimous decision written by Associate Justice James G. Exum Jr., the court said recent scientific studies of hypnosis had shed more light on the practice.

"The overwhelming scientific evidence is that a subject under hypnosis is extremely susceptible to suggestion, has an often overwhelming desire to please the hypnotist," the court said.

The court also ruled Tuesday's decision was retroactive and defendants convicted by hypnosis evidence were entitled to a new trial unless their convictions had been affirmed by the state Supreme Court.

The decision overturned a 1983 appellate ruling that had questioned the reliability of statements made under hypnosis but had nevertheless upheld the conviction of Elmer L. Peoples of Cumberland County.

Peoples was convicted in December 1981 of armed robbery after a trial in which a video tape was presented showing one of his accomplices recounting the crime under hypnosis.

The court also upheld the death sentence of a Davidson County man and set aside the death penalty for another man convicted of shooting a police officer.

In a unanimous decision Tuesday, the court upheld the death penalty for John Sterling Gardner Jr., 26, convicted of murdering two Winston-Salem restaurant workers just before Christmas in 1982.

Chief Justice Joseph Branch, writing for the court, said that Gardner was properly convicted of the murders and that his death sentence is appropriate.

Bruce C. Fraser, Gardner's court appointed attorney, said he will appeal, but that he is not sure what course it will take.

Gardner has been on death row in Central Prison since he was convicted Sept. 25, 1983. He said during recent interviews at the prison that he is not afraid to die and will accept his death if the courts rule against him.

"In comparing this case to similar cases in which the death penalty was imposed, we cannot say that the sentence of death in this case is disproportionate or excessive," Branch wrote. "The killings in this case were part of a violent course of conduct and were cold-blooded, calculated and senseless."

Gardner, was convicted of first-degree murder in the shooting deaths of Richard Augustus Adams, 21, and Delphina Kim Miller, 23, during a robbery at a restaurant on the morning of Dec. 23, 1982.

Both had shotgun wounds in the head, and about $2,700 was missing from the restaurant.

Three months later, Gardner confessed to the killings in a tape-recorded statement given to police and Forsyth County sheriff's detectives. He was being held on an unrelated armed robbery charge.

Gardner said during the recent prison interviews that he did not commit the murders. He said that while he was in the Forsyth County Jail, he heard about the murders and tried to bargain with police by giving them information about the killings.

The ploy backfired, he said, and he wound up implicating himself so deeply that he was charged with the shootings. Gardner said that he lied in the taped confession to keep police from charging his girlfriend, Kathleen L. Giordano.

In setting aside the death penalty of Eldred L. Hill, the court reduced his sentence to life in prison. Hill was convicted of shooting a Hendersonville police officer in the head with his own gun.

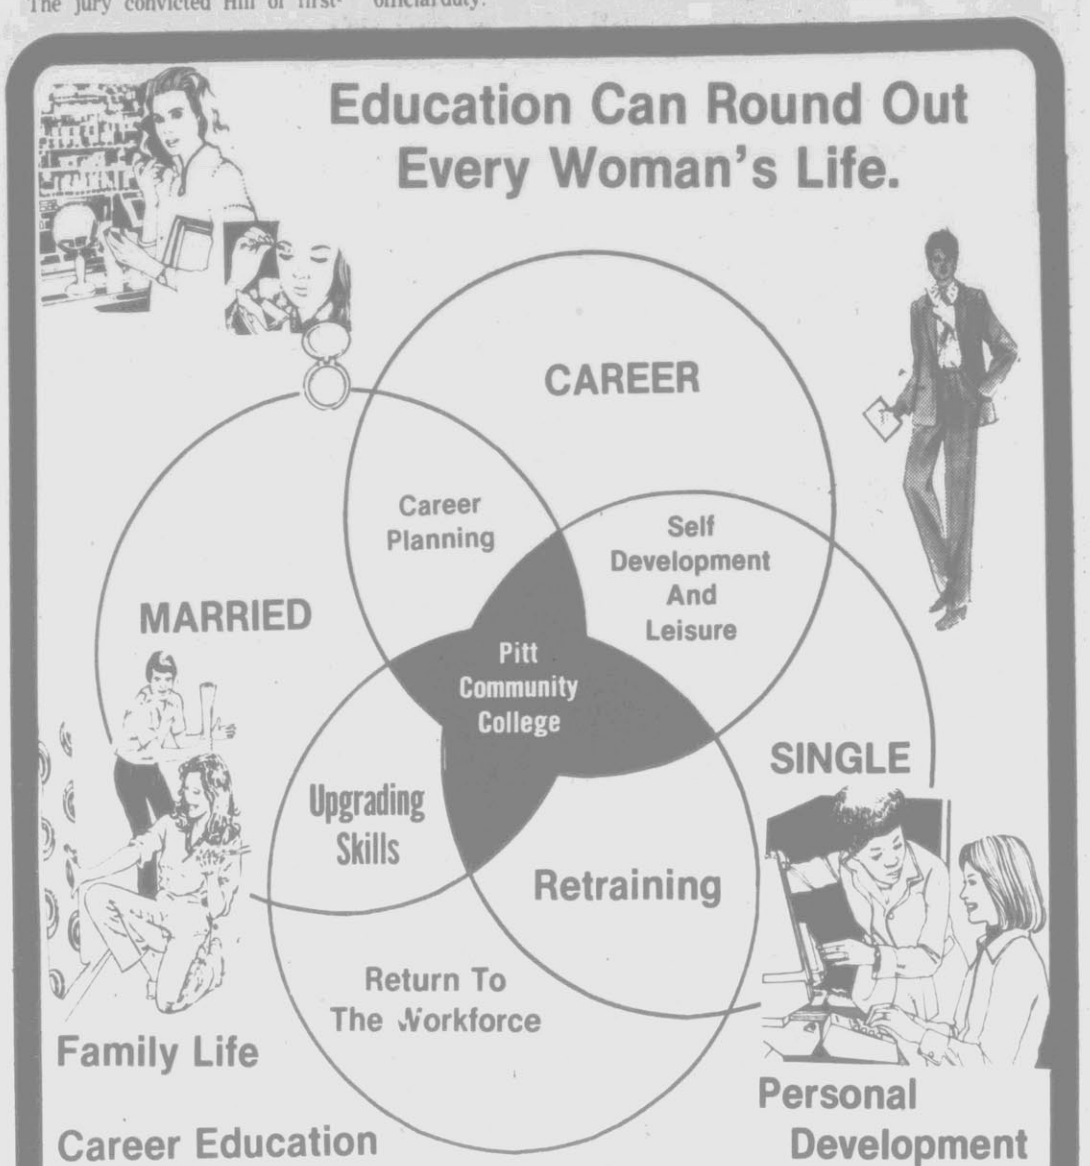
"The killing in this case, though ... senseless, was not especially heinous, atrocious and cruel," said the court's majority opinion, in which eight of the 12 justices concurred.

Police officer Dennie Enevold was found lying face down in a pool of blood on the night of Nov. 21, 1983.

A witness testified at Hill's trial that he saw Enevold chase and tackle Hill, then 19. As the two rose from the ground, the witness said he saw Hill standing over the officer when "fire came from a gun" and the officer fell to the ground.

The jury convicted Hill of first-degree murder and sentenced him to death. It found as a single aggravating factor that the killing was committed against law enforcement officer who was performing his official duty.

While agreeing with the jury's decision, the Supreme Court said that "the facts and circumstances of (Hill's) case simply do not rise to the magnitude of those" in other such cases.



Vote-Buying Probe Reported Spreading In Western N.C.

MURPHY, N.C. (AP) — As many as 50 people in Clay and Cherokee counties have been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in the continuing investigation of vote buying in western North Carolina, an Asheville newspaper says.

The Asheville Citizen reported in today's editions that FBI agents and U.S. marshals began serving the subpoenas last week, but stepped up their efforts Tuesday.

"They're all over the county and people are scared to death," the newspaper quoted an unidentified Cherokee County official as saying.

Ed Jones, the key government witness in the September 1983 vote-buying trials in Clay County, said "they dropped a bunch of subpoenas today." Jones received one.

Howard Barnard, the former Democratic sheriff of Clay County who resigned July 19 after his appeal on a September vote buying conviction was denied, also received a subpoena, the newspaper said.

Barnard said in an interview last week that he believed he would be subpoenaed and that was the reason the Justice Department delayed his reporting date to a federal penitentiary until Sept. 14.

Barnard had asked to report to prison immediately after his appeal was turned down.

The subpoenas ordered witnesses to appear on Sept. 4, the newspaper said. Some were told to report to a Murphy motel parking lot to be bused to Asheville.

U.S. Attorney Charles R. Brewer, who has spearheaded the vote buying investigation, was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

The newspaper said apparently no elected officials from either county were subpoenaed.

An unidentified Andrews resident told the newspaper he had not been questioned by the FBI but was served a subpoena. He said the only clue as to why he was selected to go before the grand jury was a notation on the back of his subpoena which said "vote fraud."

A Murphy resident, James Horace Dockery, 48, said in U.S. District Court on July 17 that he and a Cherokee County deputy sheriff conspired to buy votes in the Nov. 2, 1982, general election.

Dockery said he received $100 on Oct. 18, 1982 from Deputy Sheriff Marshall Glenn Holloway to use in buying eight votes at $20 each.

Dockery did not say where the rest of the money came from. One of the people Dockery allegedly paid to vote his choices is awaiting trial on drug charges.

Holloway has not been indicted but is listed as an unindicted co-conspirator.

At the time Dockery pleaded guilty, Brewer declined to say how many people from Cherokee County have been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury.

Marine Escapee Caught At Home

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 16-year Marine veteran escaped from two guards after being sentenced to 14 years in the brig for 84 crimes, but was recaptured at his home two hours later, officials say.

Gunnery Sgt. Richard R. Murray, 34, escaped shortly after 3 p.m. Tuesday, while apparently saying goodbye to his wife and children in a parking lot outside a Camp Lejeune court building.

Delma Collins, Jacksonville police chief of detectives, said Marine authorities notified him that Murray had escaped and was considered armed and dangerous because he had automatic weapons in his house.

"He did indeed have them," Collins said, "but they were in a gun cabinet."

At about 4:30 p.m., Jacksonville police cars surrounded the block, stopped traffic and ordered children off the street. Uniformed and plainclothes police, with drawn guns, converged on the house at about 4:40.

Collins said Murray's wife, who was in the home with their three children, at first denied her husband was there.

"When she was convinced that we weren't going to leave, Murray came to the window and then the door. It was a step-by-step thing," Collins said.

"He wanted me to listen to his story of how he was railroaded by the Marine Corps and after I listened and promised him he could call his attorney from the police station, he came out," Collins said.

Murray was seen at about 2:45 p.m., without restraints, leaning into a car and talking with a woman and children. Two military escorts, holding restraints including a belt and handcuffs, were standing about 30 yards away.

Earlier, Murray had been found guilty of 84of 92 charges against him. The military judge, Lt. Col. H.K. Jowers, sentenced him after a nine-day general court martial, without a jury.

In addition to the 14 years' confinement, Jowers sentenced Murray to a dishonorable discharge, reduction to private and forfeiture of all pay. Murray's allowances will continue to go to his family.

He could have been sentenced to more than 219 years.

The prosecutor, Capt. J.A. Bukauskas, asked Jowers not to take Murray's allowances. "The government is not so heartless as to make the son pay for the crimes of the father," he said.

Future Uncertain For Ethanol Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although grain-based alcohol used in fuel has developed a following in some areas of the United States, the future of the industry is uncertain and will depend greatly on the relative prices of corn and gasoline, says an Agriculture Department report.

The small, farm-type still used to produce ethyl alcohol — ethanol — has not lived up to its early expectations, the report said. Even the bigger commercial producers depend greatly on subsidies and tax breaks.

"Unless gasoline prices rise andor corn prices fall substantially, alcohol blends will remain competitive only with federal and state subsidies," the report said.

Fuel-grade ethanol can be made from a variety of feedstocks, including grain, potatoes, sugar beets, sorghum and many other sources. Corn is the primary feedstock used at the present time.

Ethanol can be used as a fuel extender. When one gallon of ethanol is mixed with nine gallons of gasoline, for example, the result is 10 gallons of gasohol.

During the energy crunch of the 1970s, there was optimism that small, farm-based ethanol plants could help relieve energy problems of U.S. agriculture.

But that has not happened, says the department's Economic Research Service in a new review of the alcohol fuel situation.

"As many as 24 on-farm ethanol production plants have been in operation, but recently some have closed," the report said. "The problem is that the scale of operation of these on-farm facilities is not efficient."

For example, the typical farm plant can distill only 25 gallons an hour, meaning that annual output of ethanol is only around 50,000 gallons. That does not compete with the economies realized by larger plants, those in the range of 10 million to 40 million gallons a year.

"Some of these plants manage to stay profitable because they enjoy special economic advantages, such as low-cost feedstock and fuel, on-farm consumption of stillage, and easy access to product markets," the report said.

"Others, however, must struggle, and many have gone out of business. Consequently, the vast majority of ethanol is and will continue to be produced by large-scale commercial companies."

The federal government, as well as a number of states, have offered tax exemptions, credits and other inducements to help the development of the ethanol industry.

But the outlook for continued subsidies is uncertain, the report said. A 10 percent energy investment tax credit expires next year, although new ethanol facilities will continue to qualify for the standard 10 percent business investment tax credit.

"Losing this (additional) credit would mean higher costs to establish new ethanol facilities and could discourage some projects," the report said.

Also, future action by states could have a profound effect on the industry. Some states have restricted the sale of imported ethanol. Others have limited the gasoline excise tax exemptions.

"At current and foreseeable prices, government subsidies will be required for ethanol to effectively compete in the marketplace," the report said.

Meanwhile, total sales of ethanol-gasoline blends have risen sharply, from about 830 million gallons in 1981 to 2.3 billion gallons in 1982 and 4.3 billion gallons in 1983.

Nationally, the ethanol blends in 1983 accounted for 4.4 percent of the gasoline market, mostly in big grain areas where states have provided incentives to the industry.

"The states with the highest penetration rates tend to be near corn production and have tax exemptions ranging from 3 to 5 cents a gallon," the report said. One of the top states, Florida, "is not near corn production but is the recipient of low-priced ethanol imports" from Brazil.

According to the report, the top states and the gasohol share held in each in 1983, included: Iowa, 36.6 percent; Nebraska, 23.6; Indiana, 23.2; Michigan, 15.4; Illinois, 12.5; Ohio and Tennessee, 9.9 (tie); South Dakota, 8.2; Florida, 7.0; Kentucky, 5.8; and Kansas, 5.4.

Heat Wave Burns Nation's Midsection

By The Associated Press

Searing heat felled 55 members of a marching band at the Minnesota State Fair, cooked crops in Iowa's fields and turned Midwestern classrooms into ovens as it hit record levels in 30 cities, with forecasters promising no relief today.

Texas officials meanwhile warned that a prolonged drought — now in its 18th month — could lead to massive wildlife deaths this winter and cripple a $2-billion-a-year hunting industry.

The nation's midsection burned Tuesday with the mercury climbing above 100 from North Dakota, near the Canadian border, to Texas and the banks of the Rio Grande River.

In Montana, meanwhile, thousands of firefighters battled stubborn wind-whipped fires that have charred about 150,000 acres and forced more than 500 people from their homes. Officials were hoping that rain forecast for the weekend would help their efforts.

At least 30 cities tied or broke all-time highs for the day, with 22 hitting 100 degrees or more, said Bill Sammler of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

In North Platte, Neb., the 100-degree reading was the highest recorded on Aug. 28 in 105 years. When the mercury hit the century mark in Des Moines, Iowa, it shattered a record set in 1881.

The mercury Tuesday hit 107 in Wichita, Kan., 106 in Columbia, Mo., 104 in Kansas City, Mo., 103 in Waco, Texas, and 100 in Atlantic, Iowa.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today in response to new evidence of a slowing economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 6.30 to 1,238.41 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators fell 0.8 percent in July. It was the second straight drop in the index, which is designed to detect future economic trends.

Many Wall Streeters have staked their hopes lately on a tapering off of economic growth, on the theory that slower expansion can continue for a considerably longer time.

A slowdown also would presumably allow interest rates to fall. Rates were mixed in the credit markets this morning.

Among today's early volume leaders, Mobil rose ⅛ to 30; National Semiconductor gained ⅛ to 16⅛; American Express added ¼ to 33⅝, and Federal National Mortgage was unchanged at 13.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials gained 4.19 to 1,232.11.

More than three stocks rose in price for every two that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 70.56 million shares from Monday's 12-month low of 57.66 million.

The NYSE's composite index rose .47 to 96.14. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.81 at 213.74.

Carter Will Help Fix Up Slum Unit

NEW YORK (AP) — With hammer and crowbar, former President Carter and a crew of co-workers are coming to town to renovate a Manhattan slum building as part of a widescale Christian program to provide decent housing for the poor.

Using what's called the "economics of Jesus," without profit or interest charges, the operation turns out simple, new or refurbished dwellings for families who otherwise couldn't afford it.

"It's not just theory, it works," says Millard Fuller of Americus, Ga., executive director of Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit, inter-Christian organization carrying on projects in many countries to house the homeless.

This Sunday, a busload of 39 volunteer laborers from Georgia, also including Carter's wife, Rosalynn, were due here to spend the next week fixing up a dilapidated, six-story building on Manhattan's shabby lower east side.

Carter is a good carpenter, says Fuller, noting that Carter recently handmade and auctioned some furniture to finance his library in Atlanta.

Egyptian Leader Succumbs

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak led mourners today at the funeral of Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib, who became Egypt's first president after the 1952 military coup that deposed King Farouk and ended the monarchy.

Naguib died Tuesday night of cirrhosis of the liver. He was 82.

Mubarak ordered a state funeral with full military honors for Naguib. But the 12-minute funeral procession was restricted to officials and public figures and no crowds were allowed nearby, apparently for security reasons.

The funeral service took place in the Cairo suburb of Nasr City, and the procession afterwards ended on a military parade grounds a few dozen yards from the grandstand where President Anwar Sadat was assassinated in 1981.

Naguib's coffin, draped in the red, white and black Egyptian flag, was brought from the hospital where he died to a mosque at Nasr City for the funeral. It was then borne on a gun-carriage drawn by seven horses to a nearby tent where some 500 mourners waited.

The funeral procession included units from the armed services, a military band, army troops bearing about 30 floral wreaths and two army officers carrying Naghib's decorations on black velvet cushions.

Naguib's only surviving son, Youssef, walked next to Mubarak in the procession, which ended near the monument to the unknown soldier in the parade grounds.

To many Egyptians, Naguib was the key man in the July 23, 1952, revolution.

State Sends Out Tax Collections

RALEIGH (AP) — About $66 million in net intangibles tax collections for fiscal year 1983-84 were mailed to 465 municipalities and all 100 counties by the North Carolina Department of Revenue Monday.

Eleven counties received in excess of $1 million, led by Mecklenburg County with a check for $4,979,874. Other counties included Guilford with $3,164,102, Forsyth with $2,924,734, Wake with $2,739,324, Buncombe with $1,669,924, and Durham with $1,470,454. The other counties were Gaston, Cumberland, New Hanover, Catawba and Henderson.

Four cities received more than $1 million, including Charlotte with $3,392,905, Greensboro with $1,946,119, Winston-Salem with $1,645,134, and Raleigh with $1,391,409.

The amount distributed this year was $9.7 million more than last year, an increase of 17 percent over 1983, the Department of Revenue reported.

The intangibles tax is a property tax levied against intangible personal property such as shares of stock and units of investment funds, and funds on deposit with insurance companies.

Gas Prices Down

CHARLOTTE (AP) — With Labor Day approaching, North Carolina gasoline prices are nearly 10 cents a gallon cheaper than last Labor Day and 3 cents cheaper than on July 4th, the Carolina Motor Club says.

Florida Hasn't Been Nice To Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For the Ed Emory football Pirates, Florida has not been a nice place to visit. Seven times since 1980, the Pirates have visited or played teams from the "Sunshine State," only to find clouds with no silver linings.

Three times they lost to Florida State, three times they lost to Miami (once in Ficklen Stadium), and once to Florida.

Now, with the 1984 football season opening Saturday night in Tallahassee, Emory says it's time for a win, and he'd like to see the East Carolina Pirates upset nationally ranked Florida State for that "first" victory.

"I think it's time that we won one from Florida," Emory said at the first of his weekly press conferences yesterday. "To say that it's a challenge is very much the thing to say — we'll be in a fight for our lives.

"But it's time for us to win. In 1980, we embarrassed our school, our state, our program and everything (63-7 loss). In 1982, we did a good job offensively, but we couldn't stop them on defense (56-17). In 1983, we had a good offense, but not much defense (47-46)."

And now, Emory says, it's time for ECU to come to the fore.

Actually, the losing streak goes even further back — a total of nine in a row to Florida teams. The last time East Carolina won in Florida was in in the 1965 Tangerine Bowl when the Pirates beat Maine, 31-0. The last time ECU beat a Florida team was a 14-8 win over Tampa (which abandoned football in the 1970's). That win came in 1963 on the weekend following President Kennedy's assassination.

"Going to Florida State is a great challenge to any team," Emory said. "This is the fourth time we've played them there. They've sold more season tickets than ever before, it's their field and their fans. They have 11 players back on offense who started at some time or another. And they have back the quarterback who led them to the Peach Bowl championship."

In that game, the Seminoles downed North Carolina, 28-3. Quarterback Eric Thomas came from nowhere to lead FSU to the victory after the regular starter — now third string according to Emory — was injured.

"They have three players they're pushing hard for all-American," Emory adding, singling out tailback Greg Allen, wide receiver Jessie Hester and offensive guard Jamie Dukes.

"They've also got our offensive coordinator (Art Baker) on their staff now to help their defense know what we do on offense. And they have one of our defensive coaches (Jeff Farrington), who can help their offense know what our defense can do.

"They've got a new defensive coordinator, so we really don't know what they'll do, and with Baker there, plus the input from a new line coach and (head coach Bobby) Bowden, we don't know what they'll do on offense," Emory added.

"I see in a Florida paper that Bowden says he has as much talent as any team in America, and that's a pretty big statement.

"So if you can find any pluses for us, I wish you'd let me know," he told the media.

Meanwhile, Emory might also add in the fact that he will be using an inexperience defensive line, coupled with the fact that no quarterback in camp has taken a snap in a varsity contest.

Emory said, too, he still has not made up his mind in the battle of the quarterbacks. Transfer Robbie Bartlett, sophomore Darrell Speed and red-shirt freshman Ron Jones are still neck-and-neck for the starting job. "We may not dedide until after the kickoff Saturday night," Emory said.

The Pirates and Seminoles clash in the opener for both teams on Saturday night at 7 p.m. in Tallahassee's Doak S. Campbell Stadium with a full house expected to be on hand.

Not Much Race Left In National

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The National League, with a long history of thrilling pennant races, doesn't have much to offer these days with the San Diego Padres holding a huge lead in the West and the Chicago Cubs widening their margin in the East.

The Padres lead second-place Houston by nine games, and the rampaging Cubs, who swept a double-header Tuesday from Cincinnati, lead the New York Mets by 5½ and the Philadelphia Phillies by six.

Boring, you say? Perhaps.

But Chicago's Gary Matthews is reveling in the turnabout that has hit the Windy City, where playing scoreboard has seldom been necessary considering the team's 39-year pennant drought. It still isn't, but for an altogether different reason.

"We don't have to check the standings every day," Matthews said after the Cubs swept Cincinnati by identical 5-2 scores. "We just have to go out and win.

"The sweep makes the Phillies and the Mets play that much harder."

And both did just that. Philadelphia whipped San Diego 11-8 and New York took Los Angeles 5-1.

Among those who believe the Cubs are the class of the East is a man who knows something about winning pennants, Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose.

"I've said all season that the NL East is the best division in baseball," said Rose. "The Cubs are in front, and that tells you something about their team."

Chicago won for the eighth time in 10 games with a well-rested Keith Moreland leading the way with a 5-for-8 performance, including his 15th home run, a triple, two doubles and six runs batted in.

"When I gave him three days off, I said 'you ought to come back like a bull,'" Cubs' Manager Jim Frey explained.

"The three days off felt like the All-Star break," said Moreland, who was given a rest Saturday and Sunday. The Cubs were idle Monday.

Elsewhere, it was San Francisco 3, Montreal 2; St. Louis 5, Atlanta 3 in 10 innings; and Houston 3, Pittsburgh 2.

The Cubs wasted no time in either game against the Reds, scoring four runs in the first inning of the opener and three to start the nightcap. Moreland's three-run homer capped the first inning of the opener.

Ryne Sandberg hit his 17th homer in the nightcap with Thad Bosley, Moreland and Ron Cey completing the first-inning uprising with consecutive doubles. Ron Oester hit a solo homer for the Reds in the nightcap.

Dennis Eckersley, 8-7, and Dick Ruthven, 4-9, were the winning pitchers.

Mets 5, Dodgers 1

Mookie Wilson hit a two-run homer and Hubie Brooks added a two-run triple to lead New York over Los Angeles.

In his last 19 games, Wilson, who connected off Rick Honeycutt, 10-8, is batting .311 and has scored 15 runs.

"When Mookie gets hot, he has the tendency to carry the club," said Manager Davey Johnson.

"I can win a game with a long ball," Wilson said. "All of that makes me versatile."

Dave Anderson homered off Walt Terrelll, 10-10, for the only Dodger run.

Phillies 11, Padres 8

Sixto Lezcano and Al Oliver had two hits apiece and Lezcano drove in two runs in a seven-run second inning to lead Philadelphia over San Diego. The Phillies, who have scored 30 runs in their last three games, sent 12 batters to the plate in the inning against Andy Hawkins, 7-7.

"Three weeks ago we couldn't hit the wind," Lezcano recalled. "Now the hitters are coming along."

Shane Rawley, 7-3, worked six innings to get the victory. Al Holland, who surrendered Terry Kennedy's 10th home run, pitched the ninth to collect his 28th save.

Steve Garvey had three RBIs for the losers.

Astros 3, Pirates 2

Terry Puhl's squeeze bunt, following a two-run single by Jerry Mumphrey in the bottom of the eighth inning, scored Jose Cruz with the winning run as Houston edged Pittsburgh.

John Tudor, 8-9, took a 2-0 lead into the eighth, but singles by Bill Doran and Phil Garner and a walk to Cruz loaded the bases for Mumphrey, who lined his game-tying hit to center. Puhl followed with his bunt against reliever Rod Scurry. Dave Smith, 3-2, won in relief.

"Terry is an excellent bunter," said Houston Manager Bob Lillis. "He's had difficulty hitting Scurry in the past, so in that situation we just matched the hitter and the pitcher.

Cardinals 5, Braves 3

A bases-loaded triple by Darrell Porter in the 10th inning broke a 2-2 tie and gave St. Louis and Bruce Sutter, 5-4, a victory over Atlanta. Ironically, Porter, who entered the game in a 1-for-22 slump, was wearing a new set of glasses.

"When I walked down the street, the glasses were all right," said Porter. "But when you try to hit a 92 mph fastball or an 86 mph slider or an 83 mph changeup it's tough."

So, he got a new pair a few days ago in Houston, and says he is seeing the ball better.

George Hendrick started the winning rally with a single. Pinch hitter Steve Braun reached reliever Gene Garber, 2-3, for a single before David Green beat out an infield hit against Donnie Moore to load the bases. Porter cleared them with his shot to left-center.

Bruce Benedict homered for Atlanta in the bottom of the 10th.

The Braves had tied the game with two runs in the eighth inning on a single by Chris Chambliss, a double error by Cardinals third baseman Terry Pendleton that allowed Chambliss to score and an RBI single by Gerald Perry.

Giants 3, Expos 2

San Francisco's Bob Brenly belted his 18th home run of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning, to lead the Giants past Montreal.

"I haven't seen much of Bryn Smith, so I sat down with Scot Thompson on the bench before the game to discuss what to expect from him," Brenly explained.

Chili Davis started the rally with a single and scored on a double by Jeff Leonard. Brenly, hitting .419 in his previous 31 at-bats, hit a 2-0 pitch from Smith, 9-11, into the left-field seats.

"When you get behind batters, you're asking for trouble," Smith said. "San Francisco is one of the better fastball-hitting clubs.

Dan Driessen hit his ninth and 10 homers off Jeff Robinson, 7-13, to account for Montreal's runs. The Expos have now lost five straight games, all by one run.

Triple Threat
Chicago Cubs' Keith Moreland slides safely into third on a triple past Cincinnati Reds' third baseman Wayne Krenchicki, scoring Leon Durham from first base in the third inning Tuesday in Chicago. The Cubs won the first game of the doubleheader, 5-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Pirates, Frizell Make The Cuts

All eight members of the 1983 East Carolina University football Pirates drafted by the National Football League have made the grade — after a fashion — along with Greenville native William Frizell.

According to sources in Greenville, five of the eight ex-Pirates, however, are listed on the injured reserve list. Fullback Earnest Byner, made it to the final 49-man roster of the Cleveland Browns, while Norwood Vann, switched from tight end to linebacker, made the cut with the Los Angeles Rams.

Terry Long, East Carolina's first concensus all-American player, has come off the injury list with Pittsburgh after suffering a bruised heart in practice, and is now on the active roster also.

Clint Harris, a defensive back with the New York Giants; Jeff Pegues, a linebacker, and Steve Hamilton, a defensive lineman, both with the Washington Redskins; Hal Stephens, a defensive lineman with the Los Angeles Rams; and John Robertson, an offensive lineman with the Philadelphia Eagles, were all placed on the injured reserve lists by their respective teams.

Former Pirate running back Tony (A.C.) Collins is still a member of the New England Patriots where he had been a starter for several years, while offensive lineman George Crump, after missing all last year with an injury, is again on the injured reserve list. Crump had made the starting lineup just prior to his injury a year ago.

Tootie Robbins, another offensive lineman, has started for two years with the St. Louis Cardinals, while Jody Schulz, following an injury last year, has returned to the Philadelphia Eagles lineup.

Frizell played with the Rose High School Rampants before attending North Carolina Central University. He was drafted by the Lions this spring, and will play with the team as a defensive back.

Two former Pirates are also with the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League, Danny Kepley and last year's ECU quarterback Kevin Ingram. Kepley, a long-time veteran and former Most Valuable Player in the CFL, is currently on the injured list, while Ingram is listed on the "move list," considered the same as the "taxi" squad of the NFL.

Lavette Once Considered Leaving Georgia Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Robert Lavette, the gifted tailback who is expected to become Georgia Tech's all-time rushing leader this season, almost parted company with the Yellow Jackets after his freshman season.

"I thought about leaving school, transferring, but I didn't know where to go," Lavette said Tuesday as he recalled his freshman season when he scored two touchdowns in a season-opening upset of Alabama and then had to endure a 10-game losing streak.

"It was hard to understand," he said. "I couldn't figure that out. I've never accepted losing."

Lavette, a 195-pound senior who has 2,877 career rushing yards, decided to stay at Tech after meeting with Coach Bill Curry.

"Coach Curry, being the great salesman that he is, talked me out of it," Lavette said of his desire to leave. "Besides, he wasn't going to release me if I left. I didn't have a choice."

Lavette, who missed most of four games with a sprained ankle last year, needs 640 yards to equal the school rushing record of 3,517 set by Eddie Lee Ivery from 1975 through 1978.

Tech is promoting Lavette as a Heisman Trophy candidate, but he knows such an award is a longshot deal.

"We'll have to at least win seven or eight ball games and I'll have to get off to a good start," Lavette said. "The guy that wins the Heisman usually has it by the sixth or seventh game, the eighth if its close."

Lavette is one of 17 returning

Greene Central Rethinks Plans

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

SNOW HILL — The 1984 football season could be a good one for Greene Central High School, but it might have been even better but for the defection of star player Anthony Thompson, who transfered to Wilson Fike.

Coach Spence Grantham is loath to talk of the situation, and when asked about reports that Thompson had been "recruited," said he had no comment to make at all.

Nevertheless, there is no question that the junior all-Area selection would have been the building point for both the offense and defense for the Rams.

But, like they would have done had Thompson been a graduate, the Rams are gearing up for play without him.

"We're progressing slowly," Grantham said. "We don't have a lot of experience, and we have a lot of teaching to do." The Rams return four who saw some starting duty on offense and three on defense. "Some of them have been moved to other positions, however," the coach said.

With the loss of Thompson, the Rams have switched their offense from the I to the split backs. "We just don't have anyone we can give the ball to 25 times a game like Thompson. So we're sharing the duties with a split back formation. Our linemen don't have to hold their blocks as long with this offense either." The Rams will line up with two tight ends and a flanker.

Kenneth Warren, a senior who saw limited duty last year, moves into the quarterback spot. "He started one game for us last year, and I think he can eventually run the club. But he's a little timid now, rushing things." Backing him up is Steve Harrison, a junior, up from the jayvees. "He's an entirely different player, and he looked good in the scrimmage."

Adrian Smith will probably handle one of the back positions. Although a good blocker, he hasn't been consistant running the ball. Jerome Flowers, moved from the tight end slot, should also see a lot of action. "He's much quicker and has a lot of potential, but this is the first time he's ever played in the backfield."

Charles Artis should be the other running back, and Grantham says he has good speed and quick feet. Ben Underhill is his backup, having seen a little action last year. However, he's been slowed by off-field problems, a death in his family and a reaction from a bee sting.

Steve Wells is the flanker, and the coach feels he needs more consistancy. Patrick Moye is back at one of the tight end spots, and is "looking good."

Robbie Britt was expected to handle the other end position, but he broke an ankle during the summer and hasn't returned as yet. Timmy Grantham, the coach's son, has been moved out from the center position, and "has done a good job adjusting."

Andre Quinerly returns as the strong side tackle, and is rated a good blocker on the run. Tyrone Suggs, who played defense last year, takes over the other tackle spot and is rated a hard worker.

Audie Murphy returns at one of the guard positions, and Grantham calls him the "best competitor we have. He plays with a lot of intensity and aggressiveness." Ken Wade was expected to play the other position, but he too, has been sidelined by a baseball injury and will miss the entire season. Instead, Jack Phillips will handle the duties. "He has a lot of work to do, but he's got potential."

The defense, too, will not be quite the same without Thompson, selected All-Area for his linebacking ability. "We had planned to run a 6-3 and let Anthony kind of rove around to find the ball, but without him the Rams will use a 5-2. We may try some six-man fronts, though," Grantham said.

Flowers has been moved from weak to strong side defensive end, returning 20 pounds heavier, stronger and with good speed. "The other end spot is still up for grabs," Grantham said. "It could be Grantham, Moye or Jerry Anderson."

There will be some rotation among the tackles for resting purposes, but Suggs and Quinerly will be the primary people there. Radford, Phillips and Michael Ormond will also play there.

Murphy and Moye will see action at the nose guard position.

Curtis Murray, who started at nose guard last year, will be at one of the linebacker positions, with sophomore Terrell Strong at the other. "He has a lot of potential, but he has to work on reading the offense. He will hit you."

Charlie Artis, with good speed, will be at one corner, with Steven Ward at the other. "He's small, but he hustles."

Warren returns at one safety position, with Andre Corbett at the other spot. Warren made 12 tackles against SouthWest Edgecombe last year, the coach pointed out, while Corbett has some experience from last year

Quinerly is likely to handle the placement and kickoff duties while Radford appears the most likely to do the punting.

"SouthWest is head and shoulders above the rest of the league," Grantham says of the Eastern Carolina Conference's final year as is. All but SouthWest and Southern Nash drop to 2-A next year. "Farmville Central has a lot of experience back, and Ayden-Grifton and Southern Nash both have some good personnel.

"As for Greene Central, I look for us to be battling for the middle. We need success early."

After Monday, They're Asking, 'Howard Who?'

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

One of the axioms in coaching circles is that you don't want to follow a legend. Rather, you want to follow the guy who follows the legend . . . hopefully, after he's succumbed to the pressure and anything you do will look good by comparison.

Ray Perkins followed a legend named Bear Bryant at Alabama in 1983 and posted the same record (8-4) in his first season as Bryant did in his last. Fred Akers has had plenty of success following Darrell Royal at Texas and Earle Bruce's winning percentage at Ohio State (.783) is better than Woody Hayes' (.761).

And, if one game is any criterion, Jimmy Johnson has surpassed Howard Schnellenberger at the University of Miami. For those who like to compare coaches, Schnellenberger did take the Hurricanes to the 1983 national championship, but Miami beat No. 1-ranked Nebraska only by one point in the Orange Bowl, his finale. In Johnson's debut Monday night, they "crushed" No. 1-ranked Auburn by two, 20-18, in the Kickoff Classic.

Seriously, it was quite an inaugural for the 41-year-old Johnson, who built Oklahoma State into a Big Eight contender in his five years there and has been Miami's head coach only since June 5.

"The last couple of months have been a rather busy time," said Johnson, who was flirting with laryngitis Tuesday night. "I've tried to squeeze in a year's worth of work since June. When I took the job, some people thought I was a little bit crazy."

Johnson was in Dallas the first weekend in June for the College Football Association meetings and the American Football Coaches Association's golf tournament. He never got to tee off.

Sam Jankovich, Miami's athletic director, was looking for a coach. "He asked me about a couple of other people," Johnson said, "and I said I wouldn't mind living in south Florida. He said, 'Are you serious?' I said, 'Yes.' We talked about three days solid from daylight to dark.

"In trying to make the decision I woke up at 4 a.m. I woke my wife up and we talked about the pluses and minuses. The easy thing to do would have been to stay in Stillwater (at Oklahoma State). We had an established team and coaches and players I care about. But it was an opportunity I couldn't pass up. It gave us the opportunity to go a place I'd been searching for for a long time.

"If this were a one-year decision (Miami has a brutal schedule this fall), there's no way I'd have stepped into it. There's no question I'd have stayed at Oklahoma State. But Miami is an outstanding academic institution in an area where I wanted to live. That was the bottom line."

So far, between trying to learn about his team and complying with the job's other demands — breakfasts, luncheons, dinners and speaking engagements with fans, booster groups and alumni — the beach-loving Johnson hasn't had much time to enjoy the surroundings.

Shortly after he took the job, a national magazine criticized both Schnellenberger and Johnson for leaving their jobs after signing new recruits.

"The first reaction (of Miami's recruits) was going to be one of disappointment and it was the same at Oklahoma State," Johnson said. "But when you choose a place to go to college you're not choosing a person, you're choosing a place to get an education and a place with a good football program. No one person is the university."

No one was is criticizing Johnson this week. Both Miami newspapers had front-page pictures of the players carrying him off the field after the Auburn victory and one of them wrote that "the Howard Schnellenberger days are over. This is Jimmy Johnson's team."

The change in coaches did effect the players, but not for long.

"Any time you lose a man of Coach Schnellenberger's qualities it's a setback at first," said quarterback Bernie Kosar. "But Coach Johnson came into an unstable situation and made it very stable. The main reason the transition was so successful was that he didn't come in and try to set the school on fire. He was kind of laid-back at first. He took advice. As a result, the team is very united."

Despite the opening-game success, Johnson knows better than anyone that anything less than another national championship will retrigger the Schnellenberger comparisons.

"There's pressure to win, and it doesn't make any difference if you're in Stillwater, Okla., or Miami, Fla.," he said. "The pressure comes from within because you're a competitive person. I guess I should feel some pressure and be concerned with it, but I really don't. I don't feel any more pressure than I felt when I went to Oklahoma State in 1979."

Oakland Shells Murray, Tigers Push By Seattle

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

It's not an outing that Dale Murray will bring up in his next contract negotiations.

Murray came on with a runner on second, two out and a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the 12th inning Tuesday night. Four Oakland batters then hit a collective 1.000 against the Yankee reliever, and the A's were suddenly 4-3 winners.

Bob Shirley started the inning as the likely winning pitcher and retired the first two batters. But he walked Tony Phillips, and that brought the hook from New York Manager Yogi Berra.

Murray, 1-2, was called in, looking for his first save.

Rickey Henderson doubled and it was 3-2. Carney Lansford singled and it was 3-3. Bruce Bochte singled and it was first and second. Then Dave Kingman singled and it was over.

Kingman gained his American League-leading 108th RBI. The A's snapped a nine-game losing streak.

"They scored three runs after two were out. What more can you say about them?" Berra said.

Bill Caudill, 9-7, gave up two runs in the 12th to gain the victory.

Dave Winfield, who had homered in the eighth for the game's first run, delivered a tie-breaking single off Caudill with two out in the 12th, scoringWillie Randolph from third base. Bobby Meacham went from first to third on the hit, then scored on a throwing error by center fielder Henderson.

"I hope this stops any talk about this team quitting. These guys go out to play and to win. They don't quit," A's Manager Jackie Moore said.

In other American League games, Cleveland eliminated Milwaukee 8-5, Detroit edged Seattle 5-4, California topped Baltimore 4-2, Texas blanked Kansas City 6-0 and Toronto rallied past Chicago 7-6.

Tim Conroy, in his first start since July 3, allowed only six hits in nine innings. In the eighth inning, he surrendered Winfield's 16th home run, which broke up a 0-0 game.

The A's tied the score in the ninth, coming back against New York relievers Jay Howell and Dave Righetti.

Howell came in to pitch in the ninth and retired one batter before Dave Lopes doubled to left-center field. Righetti then came out of the bullpen and gave up an RBI single to Dwayne Murphy.

Ray Fontenot pitched shutout ball through eight innings for the Yankees, allowing only four hits, all singles, walking two batters and striking out six.

Indians 8, Brewers 5

The Brewers became the first team in baseball to be mathematically eliminated from a pennant race as they dropped to 32 games behind the Tigers in the AL East.

"It's done and over with. There's nothing we can do about it now," Milwaukee Manager Rene Lachemann said. "There is still one thing to be decided, though."

"Nobody wants to finish in last place," said Joe Carter, who has hit .324 in August to raise his average to .287. He belted a three-run homer and drove in four runs Tuesday, powering the Indians to a 3½-game lead over Milwaukee.

Mark Brouhard and Charlie Moore homered for Milwaukee, which has lost eight of 11 games with the Indians this season.

Tigers 5, Mariners 4

Ruppert Jones' two-out double in the ninth inning scored pinch-runner Rusty Kuntz from second base. The Tigers tied the game 4-4 in the eighth inning with three runs, highlighted by Alan Trammell's two-run homer.

Detroit reliever Willie Hernandez, 8-2, pitched two innings for the victory. The Mariners lost their fifth straight.

Kirk Gibson's 23rd home run extended his hitting streak to 14 games. Phil Bradley drove in two of Seattle's runs with a single.

Angels 4, Orioles 2

The loss of the game was the least concern for Baltimore. Starter Scott McGregor left the game after one inning after being hit on his pitching hand by Brian Downing's grounder. X-rays revealed a fracture of the ring finger and McGregor is expected to miss the rest of the season.

California's Jim Slaton, 6-6, retired 19 batters on fly balls, six of which were caught with his outfielders' backs to the wall. He pitched eight innings and gave up four hits.

McGregor, 15-12, yielded a solo home run to Bobby Grich, his 14th.

Rangers 6, Royals 0

Pete O'Brien and Jeff Kunkel hit home runs and Buddy Bell slugged a two-run double in support of Danny Darwin's first shutout of the year.Darwin, 8-9, began the game with an 0-5 lifetime record against the Royals.

"It just seemed like there were always one or two little things that kept me from winning," Darwin said. "This year, I got thrown out of a game. Last year, I fell down on a bunt and threw it away."

He scattered eight hits in the 100-degree heat.

Twins 2, Red Sox 1

Minnesota rookie Kirby Puckett led off the ninth inning with a triple and scored the winning run on Tom Brunansky's single. The victory enabled the first-place Twins to gain a full game on Kansas City in the West. The Twins now lead the Royals by 4 games.

Brunansky belted his 28th home run in the second inning, matching his career-high total of last year and giving Minnesota a 1-0 edge.

Second base umpire Bill Kunkel didn't fare as well as his son Jeff. He stumbled on a seam in the Metrodome turf and suffered a fracture in his right shoulder.

Jim Rice bounced into his 32nd double play in the fifth with runners on first and second and no outs. That equaled the AL record set by another Red Sox outfielder, Jackie Jensen, in 1954.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 6

Damaso Garcia stroked a game-winning, 11th-inning double over the outstretched glove of left fielder Ron Kittle. Tony Fernandez scored from first on the hit.

Pinch-hitter Jesse Barfield's two-run homer in the seventh inning had lifted the Jays to a 6-6 tie.

starters from last year's 3-8 squad and is one of the key reasons why Curry and the Jackets are talking about a possible Atlantic Coast Conference title this fall.

Tech also returns its quarterback, John Dewberry, a veteran offensive line and a trio of starting linebackers who are expected to make the defense more effective than in recent years — Dante Jones, Pat Swilling and Ted Roof.

"I expect us to do better," Curry said Tuesday as the media members on the ACC annual press tour made its stop at Tech. "We've got a legitimate opportunity ... to compete for the title."

Much of the optimism stems from the fact that Clemson — the ACC's top power — is on probation and thus ineligible for the conference title. Tech also gets a schedule break in the conference since the Jackets don't have to play Maryland, annually one of the league's top contenders.

"We'll find out what kind of football team we have when we start putting on pads tomorrow," Curry said. "We're in the best shape we've been in since I've been here. We're bigger, stronger, faster and have a better attitude than before.

"Our offense will need to be real productive early," Curry said, "and our defense will be improved. I hope it will be improved early, and we'll find out in a hurry against Alabama."

Tech opens its 1984 season at home against Alabama on Sept. 15.

Curry is entering his fifth season in his attempt to rebuild the football fortunes at his alma mater. It has been a long process, with the four-year chart showing only an 11-32-1 record.

"We've come a long way but we still have a long tough road to travel," Curry said.

Evert Lloyd Hoping To Meet Martina

NEW YORK (AP) — If she gets to the final of the U.S. Open tennis championships, Chris Evert Lloyd would love to have Martina Navratilova waiting to meet her there.

"I think a victory here would be sweeter if I beat Martina, obviously," Lloyd, the No. 2 women's seed said Tuesday night after breezing past Sharon Walsh 6-0, 6-0 in a 41-minute opening-round match.

Navratilova, the defending champion and No. 1 seed, resumed her pursuit of Lloyd's streak of 56 consecutive match victories today with an opening-round match against Lea Antonopolis. Navratilova, who came within two of the streak before losing early this year to Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, took a streak of 48 match victories into this tournament.

The two top men's seeds, John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, also played their opening-round matches today, McEnroe facing Colin Dowdeswell of South Africa, Lendl playing Brian Teacher. Defending champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 seed, plays tonight against Matt Mitchell.

"As much as I would love to win the U.S. Open," Lloyd said, "and I'd have a better shot if Martina was out of the tournament, I think it'd be a great thing for my career right now if I did beat Martina.

"I probably would want to meet her in the finals because at that point, if I reached it and she did, we'd both be playing well."

Lloyd has lost 12 consecutive matches to Navratilova, including last year's final here and this year's final at Wimbledon.

"I think it's a matter of confidence," Lloyd said. "Five or six matches ago, if I was behind (in a match against Navratilova), I probably would still have automatically thought I could come through. Now I have to watch myself, to keep my confidence.

"I'm an underdog now. I haven't been that many times in my career. I've always been favored. I've always had confidence. Now, when I'm down against Martina, I have to watch that I don't get too discouraged, and when I get ahead, I can't get too nervous about it."

The first seeds to bow out were two women — No. 6 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, beaten 6-1, 5-7, 7-5 by Petra Delhees of Switzerland, and No. 10 Jo Durie of Britain, a 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 loser to Australian Anne Minter.

But Mandlikova, the No. 3 seed, was a 6-1, 4-6, 6-2 winner over Pat Medrado of Brazil; No. 7 Zina Garrison easily beat Sabrina Goles of Yugoslavia 6-2, 6-4; No. 14 Carling Bassett of Canada swept Elizabeth Sayers of Australia 6-4, 6-2, and 16th seed Andrea Temesvari of Hungary beat South African Rosalyn Fairbank 7-6, 2-6, 6-3.

In first-round men's singles, all of Tuesday's seeded players survived, although Aaron Krickstein, at 17 the youngest U.S. Open men's singles seed ever, very nearly was ousted in three sets. Krickstein, seeded eighth, advanced when Bruce Manson quit in the fifth set because of heat cramps in both legs.

No. 5 seed Andres Gomez of Equador disposed of Shlomo Glickstein of Israel 6-3, 6-1, 6-3; No. 7 Johan Kriek defeated Glenn Layendecker 7-6, 6-2, 6-0; No. 10 Eliot Teltscher defeated Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland 7-6, 6-2, 6-7, 6-3; No. 12 Vitas Gerulaitis was a 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 winner over Derek Tarr of South Africa, and the 15th seed, 19-year-old Pat Cash of Australia beat 38-year-old Romanian Ilie Nastase 6-3, 7-5, 6-1.

Mandlikova, whose victory last January in the Virginia Slims of California in Oakland halted Navratilova's streak at 54 matches, was the loser to her in the U.S. Open final in 1982 and to Lloyd in the 1980 championship match here.

"Here it is like a zoo," Mandlikova said when asked to compare the U.S. Open to Wimbledon, where she lost the 1981 title match to Lloyd. "I always like to play here and I do well. It just takes a while to get used to it and when I do it is OK. Wimbledon is more peaceful and precise."

On Tuesday, she beat Medrado while flights out of neighboring LaGuardia Airport roared overhead. "That," she said of the low-flying aircraft, "is why we are called professionals."

Manson won the first two sets from Krickstein 6-3, 6-2 before cramps began to affect him. "The good thing is that it's three out of five sets and I had time to hit and get some confidence back. Three out of five favors the best player," said Krickstein, who won the next two sets 7-6 and 6-2 and was up 4-0 in the fifth when Manson retired.

Page, Robbinsville Lead Prep Football

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

Defending state champ Greensboro Page and Robbinsville — on opposite ends of North Carolina's high school football classification — both appear to have good shots at winning it all again this year as the 1984 season begins Friday night.

Page, which defeated Fayetteville Byrd 21-14 last year to capture the 4-A state title, will be led by senior quarterback Todd Ellis, who may be the top player in the state.

Robbinsville whipped Creswell 28-6 last season for its fifth straight 1-A title and 11th in the last 15 years.

While Page and Robbinsville are favored to repeat, 2-A champion Randleman and 3-A titlist Eastern Randolph suffered heavy graduation losses and will be hard pressed to go all the way again.

Randleman won its third straight title last season, downing East Carteret 35-0, while Eastern Randolph slipped by Thomasville 21-6 to capture its first title ever.

In the 4-A division, Page returns nine starters, including six on offense. Ellis, who has thrown for more than 3,000 yards in his career, will lead his team's offensive attack. Joining him will by highly-regarded wide receiver Stafford Moser and tailback Michael Brooks, who gained nearly 1,000 yards last season.

Among the teams expected to challenge Page for the title this season are Northeastern and Gastonia Hunter Huss. Northeastern was picked by Big East Conference coaches to win the league while Huss returns its quarterback and tailback.

Running back George Pledger, who rushed for more than 700 yards in 1983, leads Northeastern's list of returnees.

Junior quarterback Dirk Floyd and tailback Todd Jones, who gained nearly 750 yards rushing last year, give Huss an experience backfield.

Other teams who could make the playoffs are Jacksonville and New Hanover from the Mideastern Conference along with Roxboro Person, Henderson Vance and Northern Durham from the Big Six Conference.

Running back Troy Russell returns after leading Person to a 10-0 mark in the regular season while rushing for 1,645 yards and scored 19 touchdowns.

New Hanover returns six offensive starters, including junior running back Mike Hudson, who rushed for 900 yards a year ago. The Wildcats also have nine defensive starters returning, led by linebacker Steve Smith, a 6-5, 228-pound junior.

In the 3-A division, Eastern Randolph will be without quarterback Alan Hooker, The Associated Press' all-state quarterback.

Only four starters are back this year, including just one on offense — running back Leroy Crutchfield. But Crutchfield rushed for more than 1,600 yards and needs 690 yards to break the Mid-State Conference all-time rushing record.

Eastern Randolph coach Burton Cates said Burlington Williams, Burlington Cummings, Hillsborough, SouthWest Edgecombe and Kannapolis all have a chance to advance to the playoffs. But Cates said Clinton may be the best 3-A team in the state.

Clinton returns two 1,000-yard rushers in running backs Lennie Faison and Dwayne Smith. Quarterback Timmy Hairr also returns.

SW Edgecombe returns AP all-state linebacker Mark Pittman and running back Jerome Staton, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards last season.

Others expected to compete for the state title include White Oak, which returns four All-Coastal Conference performers, East Wake, which returns 14 starters, Tuscola and Statesville and North Iredell of the Western Piedmont Conference.

The race for the 2-A title may be more wide open than any time since Randleman won the first of its three straight titles. The Tigers, who have the state's longest winning streak at 26 games, will be without several starters this season, including AP all-state tailback Tony Goss.

Goss, who will play college football for North Carolina this fall, gained 1,689 yards and scored 29 touchdowns.

But Randleman coach Dee Bulla, who at 27 replaces Charlie Gregory, said his club won't give up the title easily.

"It's like I told the players, they're the state champs until someone takes it from them," Bulla said. "They know they'll have to work to make the playoffs but I won't rule (another title) out."

While Goss is gone, Randleman does return at least one college prospect — 6-4, 259-pound lineman Donnie Treece.

Among the teams expected to have a shot at the title are Sylva-Webster, which lost to the Tigers in the semifinals of the state playoffs, Wallace-Rose Hill and Red Springs, which returns 10 letterman and have 17 players who can reportedly run he 40-yard dash in less than five seconds.

Charlotte Catholic, Cherryville or Newton-Conover may also have a chance to make the playoffs.

Aging 'Boys Of Winter' Find Their Spot On Softball Field

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PENN HILLS, Pa. (AP) — Their backs may be stiff and their legs lack spring, but a team of senior citizens is young enough at heart to "bring back the good old days" with competitive softball.

"You heard of the boys of summer? We're the boys of winter," said Mike Scherr, the 73-year-old pitcher for the Penn Hills Senior Citizens Center in suburban Pittsburgh.

"Most of us played ball in our younger days. We hate giving it up," added Scherr. "As long as I'm able, I'm going to play. There is no such thing as being too old. It's how you feel. We just have fun, that's why we do it."

The team was organized for a tournament three years ago when some players wanted a little more excitement than the cards, checkers and bingo offered at the township senior citizen center.

Players must be at least 55, although almost all are past 60. They play games every Tuesday and practice on Mondays and Thursdays, ignoring the risks of pulled muscles, strained ligaments or charley horses.

"People tell them they're too old for this or they're going to get hurt. But there is a place for them. This isn't an old age home," said Ron Zarotney, director of senior citizen services in Penn Hills.

"It gives them the opportunity to bring back the good old days," Zarotney said. "They play for fun, but they are competitive. They don't like to lose."

Players rib each other about having dulled reflexes, bending over for ground balls or having less hair and more belly. They also bait the umpires.

"We need an old man umpire who can't see that good," said one after a close call went to the opposing team.

"You have to hit a double just to get to first base. You spend too much time running in the same place," another chided a paunchy teammate.

But just like any summer softball league around the country, enthusiasm counts for a lot — and the boys of winter have that in abundance.

"I've been playing ball all my life. The opportunity to play something like this just hasn't been there until I joined this team," said John Zinn, at 59½ the youngest player on the team. "I don't want to say it makes me feel young because I don't feel old."

"You got to keep going. It keeps me loose," said Emerick Pascarella, a 79-year-old backup catcher and pinch runner. "I've got 14 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren, and I'm out here playing softball."

Spectators tote lawn chairs to the field or sit in the bleachers, cheering and rooting for their heroes of yesteryear.

"They really enjoy it. It gives them something to look forward to. They're not sitting in their rocking chairs," said Gloria Pranno, whose husband, Curley, was playing in his first game since his hernia operation in June.

Penn Hills is holding a double elimination tournament beginning Sept. 10. They would also like for form a league of senior teams in Allegheny County and western Pennsylvania.

"It's tough finding teams our age to play against," said Scherr after his pitching stint was over. "These people that sit on their butts. You know what happens to them. Before you know it, they're done."

N.C. Band Seeking Own Style Of Original Music

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Most rock and roll bands play songs by such successful national bands as Van Halen and Journey, and The Theatrics are no exception. However, the founder of the group says this North Carolina band hopes to one day be as successful as the bands whose tunes they now play.

John Custer, the guitar player who founded The Theatrics in 1981, said original music is the only way to become nationally known.

The band members — bassist Kevin Richmond, keyboardist Bob Sanne and drummer Burton Cummings — range in age from 19-22 and are all from Cary. They have been playing nightclubs for only three months. They played in Greenville for the first time recently at The Attic.

The band first appeared in public at the 1983 WKNC Battle of the Bands at the Bear's Den in Raleigh; they won the competition. Custer said one of the rules of the contest is that only original music can be played.

"Prior to that, we didn't do any cover tunes (songs made popular by another group)," Custer said in an interview. "We play music by Van Halen because they are the most sucessful concert band now and because we have the capability to do the songs well.

"Cover tunes are only done to make money," he added. "Ninety percent of the songs are played because people will pay to hear them, not because we like them.

"The big thing for a band is originial music," Custer said. "The only way to make a living in a band is to play originial songs. You can make some money playing in a band that does only cover songs, but you will never get really big.

The band plays Journey's mellow rock and Ratt's heavy metal with equal intensity and sound very much like the original recordings. Custer, Richmond and Sanne take turns singing.

Yet the band's original music has a distinctive sound and titles such as Passion Nation, Vicious Circles, Deceived Children and Prey for Reign.

"We try not to let any bands or music influence us heavily for fear they would influence us in our original songs," Custer said. "If you have someone that influences your sound, you mimic them."

Custer said that band has a "motherlode" of original songs, most of them written by himself or with the help of Richmond.

The band is on the verge of recording a demonstration record which will include several of the bands original songs, and Custer said hopefully will help the band reach a national audience. The Theatrics are currently associated with Raleigh's CMC Productions, which handles such rock groups as Glass Moon, Doc Holliday and Nantucket.

GOP Session May Be Lowest Rated Yet

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Republican Party gathering in Dallas apparently will go down as the lowest-rated political convention ever televised, but it escapes the distinction of being the least-watched.

That anomaly comes from the fact that although the Nielsen ratings are expected to be the lowest, a rating point today represents more homes than in the past.

The highest-rated convention night was NBC's coverage of Thursday's session, when President Reagan spoke. It was 39th out of 58 shows. ABC's Thursday coverage was 41st and CBS's was 44th. But three other nights of coverage were among the five lowest-rated shows of the week.

Arnold Becker, CBS vice president for national television research, said the combined network ratings for Thursday, 22.8, were about what a single top-rated show would get in the fall.

ABC's "Love Boat" was the top show for the week ended Aug. 26, and ABC claimed its fifth straight victory since the beginning of the Summer Olympics. NBC was second and CBS was third.

ABC had a network average of 10.6 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. NBC was second with 9.0 and CBS was third with 8.8. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 10.6 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The four-day Republican convention was seen in an average 16.3 million homes each night for all three networks, while Thursday night's appearance of Reagan reached 19.1 million homes. The Democratic convention had a nightly household average of 17.2 million homes.

Becker said the Republican convention probably would be the lowest-rated political convention ever covered by the networks. But all of the data was not available yet for a definitive comparison.

Becker attributed the low ratings to the lack of suspense about the outcome of the convention and to the fact elevision viewers have more alternative choices than they had in the past.

Second place in the ratings went to NBC's rerun of the first part of its "V" miniseries. In third place was ABC's new summer series "Call To Glory," which has apparently earned itself a place on the network's fall schedule.

Completing the Top 10: "60 Minutes," CBS, fourth; "Matt Houston," ABC, fifth; "The A-Team," ABC, sixth; the ABC movie "And Justice for All," seventh; "Alice," CBS, eighth; and ABC's "Webster" and CBS' "The Jeffersons," tied for ninth.

The lowest-rated show of the week was NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA." The bottom five shows in descending order were CBS' "Domestic Life," CBS' Tuesday convention coverage, NBC's Wednesday coverage, NBC's Monday coverage and NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA."

CBS kept its lead among the evening news shows, with ABC second and NBC third. The ratings: CBS 10.4, ABC 8.7, NBC 7.4.

Here are the top 20 shows of the week:

1. "The Love Boat," ABC, a rating of 17.7 or 14.8 million households.
2. Miniseries-"V," NBC, 16.6 or 13.9 million.
3. "Call To Glory," ABC, 15.8 or 13.2 million.
4. "60 Minutes," CBS, 15.3 or 12.8 million.
5. "Matt Houston," ABC, 14.8 or 12.4 million.
6. "The A-Team," NBC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
7. Movie-"And Justice for All," ABC, 14.6 or 12.2 million.
8. "Alice," CBS, 13.7 or 11.4 million.
9. "Webster," ABC, 13.6 or 11.39 million.
9. Tie-"The Jeffersons," CBS, 13.6 or 11.39 million.
11. "Family Ties," NBC, 13.5 or 11.31 million.
12. "Trapper John, M.D." CBS, 12.7 or 10.6 million.
13. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 12.5 or 10.4 million.
13. Tie-"Blue Thunder," ABC, 12.5 or 10.4 million.
15. "Gimme a Break," NBC, 12.4 or 10.3 million.
16. "Dallas," CBS, 12.2 or 10.2 million.
17. "Different Strokes," NBC, 12.0 or 10.0 million.
17. Tie-"Silver Spoons," NBC, 12.0 or 10.0 million.
19. "Benson," ABC, 11.9 or 9.9 million.
20. "Hardcastle & McCormick," ABC, 11.6 or 9.7 million.

Off-Broadway Theater To Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Mitchell Maxwell and Alan Schuster looked for 18 months before they found what they wanted — a crumbling tin can factory on a quiet Greenwich Village street.

Now, more than $2 million later, the structure with a red stucco facade has been transformed into the Minetta Lane Theater, the first new off-Broadway theater to be built in New York in more than 50 years.

It opens Sept. 6 with "Balm in Gilead," Lanford Wilson's 27-character epic about the down-and-out in a seedy Upper West Side cottee shop.

The Minetta Lane is probably the only theater off-Broadway that can accommodate such a large production, according to Maxwell, a one-time actor, director and restaurant owner.

And it could be the beginning of a new trend toward larger off-Broadway houses. Hit off-Broadway shows can now command a top ticket price of $35, which is what "Little Shop of Horrors," off-Broadway's biggest musical smash is charging for weekend performances.

But production costs are also climbing. "Balm in Gilead" is capitalized at $450,000, a huge amount to earn back at the tiny Circle Rep where the drama started last May. And the only way "Balm" can ever pay back its costs is to play a large off-Broadway theater.

Most off-Broadway houses are tiny, usually 199 seats or less, narrow, buildings with limited facilities that depend on the good will of the audience and the popularity of the play to survive.

Maxwell and Schuster hope to change that with the 415-seat Minetta Lane, and plan to expand their operations to include other off-Broadway theaters. They are partners in an outfit called M-Square Entertainment Inc.

"I run the theater operation. He raises the money, and we make the aesthetic decisions jointly," said Schuster, who grew up in construction. His father was a contractor. M-Square also owns the Orpheum Theater, an old vaudeville house on the Lower East Side that Schuster renovated and turned into a thriving off-Broadway house.

It's not easy building anything in Manhattan, and before a shovel of dirt was turned, the two men hurdled a maze of public hearings that had them running from the local community board to the Board of Standard and Appeals and finally to the Board of Estimates.

"We never lost a vote," said Schuster, referring to the persistent battle waged by local residents who feared the nightly influx of theatergoers. But armed with studies that indicated that a nearby fast food restaurant brought in more people in one hour than the theater would in an evening, Schuster and Maxwell beat back their opponents.

Construction began in June 1983. Everything went accept the four walls.

"The main thing in building a theater is to recognize the most important element — live actors," Schuster said. "You don't want anything unnatural between the audience and the actors. You don't want to amplify them.

Kaplan Loses Festival

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (AP) — Liam Flood, an Irish bookmaker, stared down some top-notch American competition, including comedian Gabe Kaplan, to win the equivalent of $44,200 in the Irish Eccentric Club's International Poker Festival.

The battle for the final pot came down to a faceoff between Flood, 41, and Kaplan with the Irishman cleaning up with a pair of jacks.

On the way to his winnings, Flood outlasted a field that included reigning world champion Jack Keller and former world champions Tom McEvoy, Amarillo Slim Preston and Jack "Treetops" Straus.

"I've never won so much money in my life," Flood said after the eight-hour game Tuesday. "I wasn't going to enter this one, but some friends decided to invest in me by helpin with the 2,000-pound ($2,600-dollar) buy-in.

"I didn't think I had much chance against the class American opposition," said the 6-foot-4 Flood. "I thought I was tall enough to look the big guys in the eye, but I wasn't sure I could beat them at poker."

Kaplan, 39, of "Welcome Back, Kotter" fame, is a poker aficionado who frequently enters poker tournaments.

Progress

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Treasury Department says that "substantial progress" is being made in talks with the international banking community about Mexico's $87 billion foreign debt.

Mexican officials are meeting in New York City with a special "advisers committee" of representatives from 13 large financial institutions in Canada, the United States, Europe and Japan. The talks began Aug. 6

Stray Shots

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Deputy Prime Minister Lord Whitelaw went grouse-shooting last weekend and bagged a top businessman and the gamekeeper, his office acknowledged.

Whitelaw, 66, sprayed gunshot pellets into his shooting companion, 70-year-old Sir Joseph Nickerson, head of an agricultural export firm, and gamekeeper Lindsay Waddell, when he slipped while taking aim, a statement said Tuesday.

Neither man was seriously hurt in the Saturday afternoon accident.

FROM THE PAST — The Edward Lee General Merchandise store, now closed, is typical of rural community general stores common to southern rural areas as late as the 1950s and early 1960s. Rebels, Sandinista Locked In Fighting Over Packages

PANTASMA, Nicaragua (AP) — Sandinista troops and anti-government guerrillas were locked in heavy fighting over six packages tossed from a U.S.-built plane shot down near here, military sources said.

In Managua, army spokeswoman Capt. Rosa Pasos said Tuesday that Sandinista soldiers downed the C-47 cargo plane with anti-aircraft fire. She said eight crewmembers were killed when the plane crashed in the Cerro La Rica area of Jinotega province, 100 miles north of Managua.

Fanor Medina Leyton, a soldier in charge of the six troopers who said they shot down the plane, said the crew threw six large packages from the craft before it hit ground and burst into flames.

Other military sources in Pantasma, about four miles south of the crash site in this Marxist-ruled country, said heavy fighting flared between soldiers and the U.S.-backed rebels who converged on the area.

"The reality is that since five in the morning today, they have been fighting for possession of those six packages," said one of the sources, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The source said at least 14 rebels had been killed in the fighting. He did not say if any government troops were killed or wounded.

It was believed the plane was carrying weapons, food and medical supplies.

In Tegucigalpa, Honduras, the anti-Sandinista rebels' Nicaraguan Democratic Force issued a communique saying a C-47 carrying supplies to guerrillas developed mechanical problems and crashed, killing all eight crewmen.

The group said its fighters went to the scene and buried the victims.

Last October, a U.S.-built cargo plane was shot down by a Nicaraguan soldier near Los Cedros in the north-central province of Matagalpa, and four crewmen were captured. A fifth died in the crash.

The pilot told authorities the plane was delivering supplies to rebels and had taken off from a U.S.-built airstrip in El Aguacate in neighboring Honduras.

In El Salvador, meanwhile, President Jose Napoleon Duarte signed an executive order creating a commission to investigate death squad activity and other human rights abuses.

"I want to make it clear to the country that this does not mean that I know how to uncover this thing, but that I am going to work to see if I can uncover it," Duarte told reporters.

The decree said the five-member commission will "investigate those crimes that because of their gravity and because of their national and international repercussions ... are a serious threat to Salvadoran citizens and to Salvadoran society."

Duarte said the panel would have members "from various sectors" and that his representative would be Benjamin Cestoni, the government's Secretary of Human Rights. He did not say who the other members would be or what "sectors" they would represent.

Duarte, a Christian Democrat moderate who took office June 1, also told reporters Tuesday that since he took office three months ago, "There have been very impressive reductions in the levels of violence and abuses of authority in the country."

Lefitst rebels, however, said in a radio broadcast that the three months of Duarte's term saw "an increase in the U.S. military presence" and a "considerable increase in human rights violations," guerrilla spokesmen in Mexico City reported.

The spokesmen said the broadcast was made jointly by clandestine Radio Venceremos and Radio Farabundo Marti.

In a related development, Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, the president's chief of staff, said in a telephone interview that Duarte ordered the Defense Department to investigate the alleged massacre of 64 peasants.

Human rights groups have charged that members of the U.S.-trained Atlacatl Battalion made the July 18-21 attacks on the peasants in the Jutiapa and Cinquera areas of Cabanas province, 27 miles northeast of San Salvador.

In Panama, a Foreign Ministry communique quoted a working committee of the Contadora group as saying political matters and weapons-control questions are the main unresolved points in their quest for peaceful solutions to Central American strife.

Deputy foreign ministers of the Contadora countries — Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela — began meeting Saturday with their Central American counterparts to identify differences "principally in political matters and control of armaments," the communique said.

The latest round of closed-door talks ended Tuesday night.

Collision

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Three people were killed and more than 70 injured when a passenger train and bus collided in dense fog at a railroad crossing, the government PAP news agency says.

PAP said the crash occurred near the industrial city of Skarzysko-Kamienna, about 80 miles south of Warsaw.

The agency said the train — traveling from Deblin to the southern city of Kielce — hit the rear of a city bus at a protected railroad crossing.

Lebanon Sees Security Plans Crumble

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Renewed militia warfare claimed seven lives in Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli, and an Israeli air raid in the Bekaa Valley near the Syrian border killed or wounded dozens of people, police said today.

The Cabinet of Prime Minister Rashid Karami's national coalition government met with President Amin Gemayel to discuss the deterioration in security and a stalled plan to extend state authority to the central Lebanese mountains.

The session was at Gemayel's summer residence in his mountain resort hometown of Bikfaya, 10 miles northeast of Beirut. Moslem ministers flew from west Beirut by army helicopters to attend, the state radio reported.

Police said exchanges of machine gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades late Tuesday and early today claimed seven lives and wounded 17 others as rival Moslem militias again broke a week-old ceasefire in Tripoli.

Among the victims was a man and his wife, who was seven months pregnant. The couple's bullet-riddled bodies were found in their smashed car at Tripoli's entrance shortly after the hostilities tapered off into sporadic sniping at dawn today, police added.

The police report brought the overall toll in cease-fire violations to 15 killed and 39 wounded. The cease-fire was proclaimed to stop four days of street battles and random bombardment last week in which 120 people were killed and 320 wounded. Most of the casualties were civilians.

Local radio stations said the government was preparing Lebanese army units to deploy on Tripoli's front lines with the support of Syrian troops to disengage the city's combatants. No date has been set for the operation.

The plan is designed to bring an end to a two-year, on-again off-again war for dominance of Lebanon's second-largest city between the pro-Syrian Arabian Knights militia and the fundamentalist Islamic Unification Movement.

Police said at least 25 bodies had been removed from the debris of a three-story building and an adjacent one-floor military center wrecked by an Israeli air attack Tuesday in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley near the Syrian border. Thirty-five people were injured.

Both buildings belonged to dissident Fatah guerrillas of Col. Saeed Mousa, also known as Abu Mousa, an opponent of Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat. The larger building was a prison in which about 100 prisoners, mostly pro-Arafat Palestinians, were kept, according to police.

A police report said the search in the rubble continued today. Rescuers had testified that guerrillas guarding the makeshift prison flung the doors open when Israeli jets began the attack, enabling several detainees to flee, the report said.

Abu Mousa told reporters the attack killed four of his fighters and four Lebanese civilians. Five other Lebanese civilians were injured, he added.

The Israeli command said the jets hit command and staging posts of Abu Mousa's guerrillas near the village of Majdel Anjar. Another neighboring guerrilla base was attacked by Israeli jets Aug. 16.

It was Israel's 14th air assault in Lebanon this year. The statement of the Israeli command did not give a reason for the latest raid, which came amid a persistent campaign of guerrilla attacks against the israeli army in occupied south lebanon.

Lebanon's grand mufti, Sheik Hassan Khaled, announced on state television that he "extinguished the spark" of a confrontation between Sunni and Shiite Moslem militias in west Beirut.

Khaled, the spiritual head of the Sunni community, said in a late night interview he had worked out an agreement with the leaders of the major Sunni, Shiite and Druse militias to call their men off the streets and form a "joint permanent committee" to prevent further friction.

Two people were killed and six wounded in a clash early Tuesday between Shiite and Sunni militiamen over who would control west Beirut's Tarik Jedida neighborhood.

The Shiites, a breakaway sect of the mainstream Sunni denomination of Islam, are the largest single sect in Lebanon. But the Sunnis form the majority in Beirut and have begun to resent the influx of Shiites from the Israeli-occupied south.

Militant Rabbi Is Turned Back

UM AL FAHM, Israel (AP) — Police barred militant U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane and several busloads of supporters from Israel's largest Arab village today after officers clashed with villagers who had formed a human wall to keep Kahane away.

Kahane, a parliament member who says Um al Fahm "has no right to exist" and wanted to urge its Arab residents to emigrate, was turned back a mile from the village.

A police communique said national Police Commander Aryeh Ivtsan decided to bar Kahane after the rabbi withdrew his agreement not to enter Um al Fahm. Kahane earlier had promised to stage his demonstration on the outskirts of the village.

Leftist leaders of the Knesset, or Parliament, and Jews from neighboring towns and collective farms turned out today to reinforce about 1,500 village residents before police cordoned off the town 43 miles northeast of Tel Aviv.

Shortly before Kahane and his followers were barred, a rumor swept the waiting crowd that Kahane was approaching, and some villagers began pelting police with stones. Police responded with tear gas and smoke bombs.

The clash erupted after several hours of tense waiting under a hot sun.

Several policemen appeared to have been scratched or cut by stones and boulders that were rolled down the hill into police lines.

Earlier, demonstrators led by village council head Mahmid Hashem, sat or stood on the main road, chanting in Arabic: "Kahane, your grave will be here, we will bury you here." Behind them stood about 100 helmeted police and border police, carrying batons.

Kahane, the leader of the extremist nationalist Kach movement, had said the visit to Um al Fahm would be the first stop in a campaign to drive Arabs from the Jewish state. Kahane immigrated to Israel from the United States in 1971, after founding the Jewish Defense League in New York. He was elected to the Knesset last month on an anti-Arab platform.

Some of the 26,000 villagers said earlier that they feared violence if Kahane were allowed into Um al Fahm.

"I hope we will be able to stop Kahane entering. Jews and Arabs together will stop him," Hashem said before Kahane was turned back by police.

CHECKPOINT TEARS — A Lebanese Moslem woman and her small son sit on their suitcase, taking a moment to comfort each other and to dry away their tears, while waiting at the Israeli Bater-al-Chouf checkpoint. Salvage Efforts Begin For Radioactive Cargo OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Efforts are under way to retrieve the radioactive cargo of the French freighter Mont Louis, which sank off Belgium's North Sea Coast. Officials say the cargo is undamaged.

"Divers have surveyed the site and the real (salvage) works can start towards the end of this week," Environment Minister Firmin Aerts said Tuesday. "The salvaging will take three weeks, weather permitting."

French navy divers had already checked the ship's cargo on Monday and found nothing broken, said Guy Lengagne, France's secretary of state for maritime transport, who inspected the vessel Tuesday, with Aerts.

John Huylebroeck, an Environment Ministry spokesman, also told reporters that, "There is no damage to the containers." He said officials were continuously sampling water near the wreck site and there were no traces of radioactive contamination.

South African Elections Attract 30 Percent Of Registered Voters

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Less than 30 percent of registered voters cast ballots in violence-marred elections for new Asian and mixed-race chambers of Parliament that the white-ruled government touted as a step toward racial reform.

As unofficial and incomplete returns from Tuesday voting by Asians trickled in today, the Department of Internal Affairs estimated 83,000 votes had been cast in all 40 districts. It said 411,711 Asians had registered to vote, making the turnout of 20.18 percent. By midmorning, results were in from 33 districts.

Boycott organizers claimed the low turnout by the Asian minority for its 40-member house was "an enormous victory for those struggling for a democratic and non-racial South Africa."

A week ago, just under 30 percent of the registered voters of mixed-race elected 80 members to their House of Representatives, also a new body established in a revised constitution approved last year by white voters.

There were few differences among the five parties competing in the Asian election, and the campaign became a referendum on the new constitution between boycotters and politicians who said the new system offered a starting point for further change from within.

About 2.7 million people of mixed-race in South Africa. There also are about 850,000 Asians, most of them descendants from Indian immigrants.

Police spokesman Lt. Tom Jefferson said there were 45 incidents of election-day unrest around the country, including several clashes between riot police firing tear gas and rubber bullets and boycotters hurling rocks and gasoline bombs.

The main fighting was in Lenasia, Johannesburg's segregated township for Asians, where repeated street battles were fought throughout Tuesday. An impromptu clinic reported 140 people were treated for injuries from rubber bullets, batons and tear gas.

Jefferson said five policemen were injured, one seriously when demonstrators overturned his car in Lenasia.He said several people were arrested, but no total was available.

Cassim Saloojee, treasurer of the United Democratic Front, said police had provoked boycotting youths in Lenasia when "in the early part of the day they waded into them, and scores were brutally beaten."

"That is what caused the deep bitterness and anger that led to violence later during the day," Saloojee told a reporter.

The low turnout in both the Asian and mixed-race elections "makes it very clear that our people have rejected this constitution completely, in a massive way," Saloojee said.

"For the black people in this country, really nothing less than full equality and full participation of all blacks will satisfy them. As long as we have a system that whites dominate politically, it will not be acceptable to ourpeople," Saloojee added.

Candidates and commentators on government-run television acknowledged that the low voter participation suggests most Asians and mixed-blood people reject the new constitutional plan.

Blame for the low turnout was heaped by the candidates on the boycott organized by the United Democratic Front, a multiracial group of unions, students, community organizations and individuals opposed to apartheid, South Africa's official policy of race-separation.

The white-minority government accused the boycotters accused of intimidating voters. Boycott leaders said they intimidated no one, but acknowledged they sought a low turnout to discredit the vote.

The boycotters note the new chambers will be dominated by the white house, which has veto power over the other two and can run the country without them if necessary.

Also, the new constitution still leaves the black majority of 22 million without citizenship rights such as the vote.

No matter what the turnout, Prime Minister P.W. Botha said earlier that he planned to seat the new chambers in September when South Africa's new constitution takes effect.

Interior Minister F.W. De Klerk said in a television interview this morning that the government considered the Asian turnout a sufficient mandate.

Botha's National Party, which has ruled South Africa since 1948, split two years ago over the plan for an expanded Parliament. Once-loyal Nationalists broke away to form the Conservative Party, saying Botha was selling out South Africa's whites, who number about 5 million.

More liberal opponents of the expanded Parliament say the new constitution actually solidifies white rule. They argue that it makes cosmetic changes in the government's race-separation policy and is meant to convince the outside world that South Africa is undertaking real reform.

U.S. Textile Rules Darken Trade Outlook

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — China hosted a party this week to mark the American voyage 200 years ago that inaugurated trade between the two nations, but new U.S. textile-import rules threaten to rupture today's $5 billion mutual business.

"There's no question about it, it's a very serious dispute," a senior U.S. official said Tuesday of the Reagan administration's new country-of-origin regulations on textiles.

Due to take effect Oct. 31, the rules are intended to protect U.S. textile manufacturers by halting shipments of low-price clothing partially made in one country but finished in another and entering the United States under the second nation's quotas.

The change would affect some $300 million worth of sweaters made using cheap labor in China but finished and labeled in Hong Kong and sold under that British crown colony's quotas. China has separate quotas of its own.

In Washington, Chinese Ambassador Zhang Wenjin warned last week that bilateral trade may slip into reverse as a result of the customs regulations which he termed a "grievous blow" to China's exporters — endangering 60,000 jobs.

He contended that the unilateral action constitutes a new restriction on textile trading and violates a five-year agreement signed last year after a costly dispute over quotas for 33 types of Chinese fabrics and apparel sold in the United States.

Washington says it has merely clarified rules on the "transformation" of garments.

With disputes over grain sales, a nuclear energy treaty and maritime accord unresolved, the country-of-origin rules are a new impediment to what Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang has termed the "infinite potential" for Chinese-U.S. trade.

At the 200th anniversary party here Tuesday, U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hummel said that "economic relations between our two countries have taken many turns in these two centuries," but extend far beyond the dreams of America's first emissaries aboard the Empress of China.

That clipper ship sailed from New York on Feb. 22, 1784, rounded Africa's Cape of Good Hope and arrived in Canton's Whampoa Harbor on Aug. 2, 1784, to load up with Chinese tea, silk, porcelain and cotton.

Wang Bingnan, president of the Chinese People's Friendship Association, recalled past "confrontations and conflicts," and said he hoped "history will teach us to co-exist more amicably."

The latest rift follows a recovery in Chinese-U.S. trade in the first half of this year — $2.66 billion compared with $2.1 billion in the first six months of 1983 — with textiles and clothing comprising nearly half of China's exports. China is the world's largest textile producer.

Peking's most likely form of retaliation against the customs rules, sources said, would be to renege on its promise to buy 6 million metric tons of wheat and other U.S. grain this year — worth about $900 million.

"The use of counter-measures on the part of the Chinese have been demonstrated once before," warned a U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. He was referring to last year when Washington imposed unilateral textile quotas and the Chinese stopped buying U.S. farm goods.

American farmers were the big loser. The United States stopped $35 million in textile imports, but lost $1.8 billion in agricultural sales.

"It was a rather large price to pay," said the U.S. official.

U.S. experts have doubted whether China would buy its full quota of grain this year, since it had to make up for a 2.2-million-ton shortfall last year and is expecting a second consecutive bumper domestic crop. The Chinese canceled orders for more than 250,000 tons a few weeks ago.

The new rules definitely will affect overall trade, said the U.S. source, "and if the same kind of rules are applied to electronics and computers, the documentation problems will be horrendous."

Knowledgable sources, who spoke on condition they not be idenified, said the State Department tried to persuade the White House not to give in to pressure from the U.S. textile lobby for protectionist measures, and that the argument is continuing.

One senior American diplomat in Peking noted that so far the dispute has not blown up into a major crisis, the way tennis star Hu Na's defection to the United States and the textile quota dispute did in 1982-1983.

The diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said this was a sign of maturity on both sides, five years after diplomatic relations were established.

Japanese Tighten Security

TOKYO (AP) — As the government gears up for the scheduled September visit of South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan, uniformed police officers are posted at nearly every central Tokyo street corner.

The level of security precautions is the highest here since the Tokyo summit five years ago.

"They started pouring out of police vans one night several weeks ago, and now their number seems to have been reinforced," the owner of a downtown restaurant said.

Chun is scheduled to visit Tokyo on Sept. 6-8.

Police officials said they plan to mobilize 23,000 police during the visit and seal off central Tokyo where the Imperial Palace, prime minister's official residence, and the State Guest House are.

Home Affairs Minister Seiichi Tagawa told a Cabinet meeting last week that police would lay down a security blanket for Chun "bigger than the one imposed during U.S. President (Ronald) Reagan's state visit last November."

Police have good reasons for the tight security.

Chun's trip will be the first official visit by a Korean leader to Japan, which ruled the Korean Peninsula for 35 years until World War II ended in 1945.

The visit comes 11 months after Chun escaped a bomb blast in the Burmese capital of Rangoon last October during a state visit. That explosion killed 17 South Koreans, including four Cabinet ministers, and four Burmese.

A Burmese court ruled that two captured North Korean Army officers were responsible. Rangoon broke diplomatic ties with Marshal Kim Il Sung's regime in Pyongyang.

Between a third and a half of the 700,000 Koreans living in Japan are believed to be supporters of North Korea, South Korea's enemy since the 1950-53 Korean War.

He pointed out that a leftist group calling itself "Partisan" had telephoned a Japanese newspaper and claimed responsibility for igniting 10 small fires in Tokyo July 16 to protest Chun's visit.

A number of Japanese leftist groups are critical of South Korea for ideological reasons or because of alleged suppression of human rights by Chun's government. Some rightists are displeased because Emperor Hirohito is expected to express regrets for Japan's often-brutal colonial rule of Korea. They say Japan has nothing to apologize for.

Chun's trip will include meetings with the emperor and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. For security reasons, no other major events have been scheduled, South Korean diplomats said.

Police have staged training exercises in control of riots, fires and snipers.

Japanese newspapers have reported that plainclothes police have been surveilling thousands of resident Koreans.

Outcome of South African Changes Unknown

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A new flexibility is evident in the ranks of Afrikaners, the descendants of Dutch settlers who hold power here.

Among the signs:

— Hard-line leaders for decades banned television as "the devil box," but now South Africa's top-rated program is the A-Team, featuring the black Mr. T often thumping white villains.

— Detente with black neighboring states.

— Outspoken critics are decrying racial discrimination with new vigor.

But the question, according to some South Africans, is whether this will bring substantial reform or Afrikaner backlash.

Prime Minister P.W. Botha has loosened the white-dominated system within the framework of the Afrikaner-based Nationalist Party, in power since 1948, which devised the separate and unequal policy of apartheid.

Some "petty apartheid" measures such as separate park benches have been abolished. Blacks and whites can attend private schools together and, in certain cases, frequent the same restaurants. Shops are integrated.

Black trade unions improve working conditions and force up wages. Constitutional reform gives limited legislative participation to the mixed race "coloreds" and Indians, though not to blacks.

Although the coloreds responded reluctantly to the first legislative elections Aug. 22, with only 30 percent of registered voters — and 18 percent of those eleigible — casting ballots, the newspaper Beeld, which consistently reflects the governing Nationalist Party's thinking, editorialized that the elections "most importantly decided that a mutual desire has been created across the color bar for working together within the bounds of reason for achieving peace in South Africa. ... We have passed the point of no return."

A parliamentary committee has recommended repeal of bans on mixed marriages or sexual relations. A recent newspaper survey found 64 percent of whites interviewed — and 81 percent of blacks — agreed with the proposal.

"It's a horrible law," commented one respondant, Kevin Malan of Capetown. "We're all human — why can't we love one another?"

Two Dutch Reformed Church theologians attacked the religious premise of the apartheid laws, a major step within the conservative church to which South Africa's 2.8 million Afrikaners are tightly bound.

"The basic structure of apartheid may be in place but as an ideology, it has collapsed," South African journalist Allister Sparks wrote in the London Observer, assessing 25 years of the anti-apartheid movement. "It is now seen as impractical and the steady pressure has slowly built up a moral unease about it."

But critics say modest reform only obscures the overall picture: inferior status for non-whites, particularly the 20 million blacks — a 70 percent majority — who are regarded as citizens of separate "homelands," within the territory of South Africa but with no rights in the country.

A two-year-long study by the Carnegie Corp. of New York found a third of black children under the age of 14 are stunted from malnutrition, and the black mortality rate in places is 31 times higher than the whites' rate.

Botha's reforms have split Afrikaners. Some opponents call that encouraging. But a backlash of far-right breakaway factions harks back to early goals.

Andries Treurnicht of the Conservative Party was quoted in a magazine as calling for renewed vigor in moving blacks into homelands, declaring overall integration "an impossible dream."

In a speech launching a hard-line splinter of the Broederbond, the Afrikaners' powerful secret society, Jaap Marais of the Hertigte National Party said: "Our people have always been split at times of crises. ... But we have always been saved by the tough minority that has stood firm."

The hard-liners face a growing challenge.

Opponents attack not only the morality of the homelands policy but also the cost, estimated at more than $1.5 billion a year for the 10 officially autonomous states, which house 9 million blacks on 13 percent of South Africa's total land area.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times editorialized recently: "Monuments they are: hugely expensive and increasingly useless reminders of the folly of Apartheid Man's passion for social engineering. ... (We) are paying for a failed and tattered dream which is rapidly turning into the all-too-familiar African nightmare."

Shifts in mood seem to be building, with television making a major contribution.

Three government channels, two in African languages, feature U.S. serials and films. One showed "South Pacific" but cut the song which begins: "You've got to be taught to be afraid of people whose skin is a different shade...." South Africa's English-language press printed the missing lyrics.

Television from the officially independent homeland of Bophuthatswana spills over into white areas of South Africa, and official jamming has brought angry reaction.

Bop TV is rich in such series as Benson, the Jeffersons and Diff'rent Strokes, all featuring blacks as the main characters.

Recently, Winnie Mandela, wife of imprisoned African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, promised on Bop TV that her husband would bring freedom to his people. She is banned in South Africa and reporters are forbidden to quote her in their articles.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, AUG., 30, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon you are able to get in touch with persons you want to be allied with in the future. Then later, you can investigate the best means for carrying through with plans you have made.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Reach a better understanding with whatever partners are around and later you can do the work that is your part of the bargain.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get into work that requires exactness and neatness and gain the backing of outsiders you want to impress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early contact those persons with whom you want to set up fine entertainments; then get busy at the actual work required.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You have every opportunity to please those who dwell with you in the morning, and then treat them to a nice dinner.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can handle outdoor communications very well today and then have a wonderful time at your home tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Decorate your home so that it will look more charming and be more valuable, and then go after that date you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are dynamic today and can impress the right persons favorably before you get into the practical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get that plan formulated early and then start putting it in operation, making little changes as the day wears on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be with a friend who is cooperative and can help you get what you want; then do the work necessary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Gain the assistance of a bigwig for some special talent you possess so that you can commercialize on it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A new and enthusiastic approach at your duties can bring you fine benefits at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A nice gift for the one you love is wise and then you can gain fine results. Start on a new venture together.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a fine life, beginning with affectionate parents, a nice home to live in and plenty of good friends, and will thereby learn of the needs and desires of others early, and will later make a fine living in an investigative profession.

Ace in the Hole

Today is "According to Hoyle Day" — a day to reread Edmund Hoyle's "Short Treatise" on the card game of Whist. Printed in 1742, the authoritative treatise made "according to Hoyle" synonymous with correct card play. Makers of playing cards in Hoyle's time printed only 51 cards per deck. The British government printed all aces of spades and doled them out only after card makers had paid taxes on the decks. Hence the often incongruous design of that particular ace.

Conservative Trend Sparks New Enthusiasm In Civil Rights Group

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Founded on the ideals of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., the Southern Christian Leadership Conference grabbed headlines and power in the 1960s, faded in the 1970s, and is back in public view in the 1980s amid the conservative policies of the Reagan administration.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, SCLC president, attributes the new interest in part to a perceived erosion of civil rights under the present administration, but others say Lowery himself is the reason for the change in the 27-year-old organization, which held its annual convention here this month.

Lowery stresses that the Atlanta-based SCLC never stopped being active.

"In 1982, we marched 2,700 miles from Alabama to Washington for the extension of the Voting Rights Act, and it worked," he said in an interview. "We still picket and boycott all the time. It's just the media aren't as interested — you all are more worried about the snail darter," the tiny fish which threatened construction of the Tellico Dam on the Little Tennessee River.

The administration came under fire from civil rights activists after President Reagan changed the makeup of the Civil Rights Commission to add commissioners who shared president's opposition to racial quotas and affirmative action. Civil rights groups also were outraged by the administration's stance on tax exemptions for schools found by the Internal Revenue Service to discriminate on basis of race.

"The SCLC in the last two or three years under Lowery is in better shape and having a bigger voice in the black community ... than at any time in the last 12 or 13 years," said David Garrow, an SCLC observer and a political scientist at the University of North Carolina who wrote "The FBI and Martin Luther King Jr." and "Protest at Selma."

"Lowery has been instrumental in bringing the SCLC back to the point where it is a major player among the national black organizations," Garrow said. "It's his commitment of energy, and also the fact he's really an excellent public speaker."

Garrow and Lowery both said they don't know how many members the conference has because the SCLC, unlike the NAACP, is not a membership organization. Instead, churches and social clubs join as affiliate chapters. Lowery estimated members of the affiliates number "in the millions."

Before Lowery took office in 1977, the SCLC was wracked by declining membership and internal disputes, said Garrow.

"First there was a very substantial emotional letdown that followed Dr. King's death," he said. "Second, there was the departure of some key SCLC figures, such as (Atlanta Mayor) Andrew Young into the electoral arena."

In addition, many SCLC activists felt that King's successor, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, was not as dynamic a leader as King, who was assassinated April 4, 1968 in Memphis.

"He (Abernathy) was just as good as King in speaking to grass-roots rallies, but he did not have the training or experience that Dr. King had ... dealing with national audiences and political figures," Garrow said. "Lowery has acquired more of that over the years."

Some SCLC members, such as the Rev. James E. Palmer, chairman of SCLC's Charlotte chapter, say the resurgence is due to the tenor of the times.

Garrow, who is working on a book about King and the SCLC called "Bearing the Cross," said much of the organization's activity is local.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Dble	Rdble	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Sometimes a perfectly normal action can have unfortunate repercussions. West learned that expensive lesson on this deal.

With the right distribution and considering the vulnerability, no one can quibble with West's decision to make a light takeout double of South's one diamond opening bid. After North's redouble it simply became a matter of how high his side would get to, and the small slam certainly seemed reasonable to South in the light of his partner's bidding.

West led the jack of clubs and declarer made a fine play when he covered with dummy's queen. East produced the king, and it was now obvious West would have to have every other card for his takeout double. Had West been silent, declarer's best chance would have been to lead a spade toward his king, but now he cast around for an alternate line.

After winning the ace of clubs, declarer started to run his trumps. West was able to discard safely until the last trump, when this position had been reached:

♠ J 8
♡ A K 10

♠ A Q
♡ Q J 8

♠ 2
♡ 6 4 3
♠ 7

♠ K 6 5

The last trump finished West. If he discarded a heart, dummy's three hearts would all be tricks; if he let go the queen of spades, dummy would get rid of the 10 of hearts and declarer would simply drive out the ace of spades. Either way, the slam was in the bag.

Does this mean you should never make a light takeout double? No. More often than not, such action will permit your side to compete effectively. But you must face the fact that once in a while even a proper bid is going to rebound on you.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy send $1.75 to "Goren Four-Deal," P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check payable to Newspaperbooks.

Hearings

GREENSBORO (AP) — A series of hearings has been scheduled across the state on a proposal sponsors say may attract larger student participation in college and university health care plans and reduce health care costs.

The proposal by Dr. William K. McRae, director of student health services at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, would allow the students' annual health services fee to be applied toward the deductible of private insurance plans.

McRae said the proposal would mean savings for both students and insurance companies. It would also attract more students to the program at UNC-G, which is totally supported by revenues from the fee.

CRYPTOQUIP 8-29

JVV MWZ FZDM FZZD, JVVZLKYI MA IVACZL, KAM WYCZD.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — NOTE THE TIRED RELAY RACER'S DAILY TONIC — A CHASER?

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Monkeys Can Show Mean Side

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — They're friendly, they seem tame enough to the unpracticed eye and, to tourists hungry for a close encounter with nature, they're definitely cute.

But appearances are deceiving. Experts say that the hundreds of monkeys living near tourist lodges in Africa are sometimes serious pests, biting guests, stealing cameras and posing a danger to public health.

"It's a serious problem, most definitely," said Dr. James Else, 38, an American scientist from Grass Valley, Calif., who is now director of the Institute of Primate Research here. Monkeys "are very, very intimidating."

"So many times, you'll go to tea and when you're walking back they will intimidate you," he said following a speech at the recent Congress of the International Primatological Society. "They'll keep threatening to attack you until you give them the food."

In one Southern Kenyan game park, Amboseli, the problem got so bad that as many as four tourists a week were being bitten by aggressive monkeys, he said. Most of the bites were minor and required only first aid, but one in 10 or 20 were serious enough to warrant hospitalization, according to one of Else's researchers.

Eventually, officials had to trap the offending monkeys and move them far away from tourist lodges, Else said. But more monkeys moved in and the problem returned.

One of the biggest offenders is the vervet monkey, a harmless enough appearing bundle of fur that usually weighs in at about 13 pounds and stands only about a foot tall, even when raised up on its hind legs.

Vervets start frequenting safari lodges either when a garbage pile goes unguarded or when the hotel staff deliberately sets food out for them.

"In certain areas, they (staff members) do encourage them because they are a tourist attraction," said Else. "Tourists are sitting there and wild animals are all around them."

It gets worse when tourists start feeding the vervets, ignoring signs that advise them not to. Once the tiny monkeys get used to the handouts, they start raiding kitchens and even stealing food off dining room tables, the primatologist said.

Baboons, which can weigh in at 50 pounds and stand well over three feet on their hind legs, pose a different kind of problem, Else said.

Although they're less likely to chase a person, baboons do climb through open hotel room windows.

"They just actually go into suitcases and rip them apart," making off with expensive cameras and other personal items and leaving the room in a shambles, Else said.

"Monkeys are really very smart," the primatologist added. "They learn they can intimidate tourists and where they can get food. Once they have this habit, it's very hard to break."

Else said he had studied the problem only in Kenya, perhaps Africa's top destination for wildlife viewing. However, a researcher who has worked for him said similar problems had cropped up in tourist hotels in South Africa, Zimbabwe, Zambia and other countries with vervet populations.

"Vervets are nasty, horrible little monkeys," she said. "I think the reason they are like that is because they live very dangerous lives. They are very small animals and they are eaten by almost everything: leopards, pythons, eagles and maybe mongooses and serval cats. They tend to be very nervous.

"The most important thing is to educate the public," the researcher added. "By feeding them, by interacting with the monkeys, they're putting themselves at risk and putting the monkeys at risk."

GENERAL FOODS CORPORATION

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call voted immediately before the ongoing summer recess.

HOUSE

SUPERFUND — The House rejected, 142 for and 205 against, an amendment to shorten by four years the life of the special excise tax on crude oil and chemicals that pays for toxic waste cleanup under the Superfund.

Later, the House by a 10-to-1 margin passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 5640) extending the Superfund for five years at a $10.2 billion funding level.

Although the current Superfund lives until late next year, members rushed to extend it in order to impress voters in the upcoming congressional elections.

Given that political factor, foes could only hope to restrict the bill by limiting the life of the excise tax. This amendment sought to end the tax in September, 1986 rather than September, 1990.

Amendment sponsor Barber Conable, R-N.Y., said "this is a terrible bill" but that "most of us probably will vote for it out of political necessity."

Opponent James Florio, D-N.J., said the vote on the amendment "is the environmental vote of the year."

Members voting yes wanted to limit the taxation period in order to force early (September, 1986) reconsideration of the Superfund extension.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2, and James Broyhill, R-10.

Those voting no were Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, -D-4; Charles Britt, D-6, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Not voting were Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; James Martin, R-9, and James Clarke, D-11.

TO SUE — By a vote of 208 for and 200 against the House killed a Superfund proposal giving toxic waste victims the right to sue alleged polluters in federal court. The language was stricken from HR 5640 (above).

This leaves state courts as the forum for poisoning victims seeking civil punitive damages from the industry responsible for the hazardous disposal of toxic wastes.

Harold Sawyer, R-Mich., said hazardous waste victims have adequate recourse through existing civil negligence laws in the 50 states, and to give them special rights in federal court "does absolute violence to the whole system of tort liability."

James Florio, D-N.J., said state remedies generally coddle the polluter.

Members voting yes were opposed to creating a special federal remedy for toxic waste victims.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner and Broyhill.

Neal voted no.

James Martin and Clarke did not vote.

VICTIMS — By a vote of 142 for and 205 against, the House rejected an amendment to create a "victims' compensation fund" within the Superfund (see preceding votes).

About $1 billion of the $10.2 billion in cleanup money was to have been diverted to the special fund, which would have provided up to $12,000 in loss-of-earnings payments to a person who proved poisoning by toxic wastes. The Environmental Protection Agency was to administer the program.

Supporter Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said the special compensation system was needed for those who can't afford to sue for damages in state court.

Opponent John Dingell, D-Mich., complained the program would usurp Superfund money that is "desperately needed" to clean up toxic dumps.

Members voting yes wanted to create a victim's fund within the Superfund.

Britt voted yes.

Voting no were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Hefner and Broyhill.

Not voting were Neal, Rose, James Martin and Clarke.

SENATE

FED — By a vote of 53 for and 43 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment in opposition to President Reagan s nomination of Martha Seger to the Federal Reserve Board.

The vote occurred during debate on an appropriations bill (HR 6040) that later became law.

Seger, of Michigan, was named to the Fed during the July congressional recess. As a "recess appointee," she was able to avoid Senate confirmation hearings on her qualifications for the monetary post.

Supporter Max Baucus, D-Mont., said he was "outraged" that Reagan would bypass Senate scrutiny in filling such an important post.

Opponent Jake Garn, R-Utah, noted that all presidents make recess appointments, and called the amendment actually an attack on the Fed's tight money policies.

Senators voting no were objecting to Seger's appointment.

North Carolina senators John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted yes.

ABORTION — By a vote of 43 for and 52 against, the Senate failed to table a non-binding amendment in support of the Reagan Administration's views on worldwide family planning. This occurred during debate on HR 6040 (above).

The upshot was to endorse a new White House policy, recently announced at the International Conference on Population in Mexico City. The Administration said U.S. aid would be denied private organiations around the world that support abortion with their own funds.

Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said "I cannot comprehend the logic of this new policy" in view of the problems caused by worled overpopulation.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said "the president should be congratulated for his many efforts against abortion."

Senators voting no wanted to endorse the new White House position on abortion as a family planning tool.

East and Helms both voted no.

Journey At Sea Was 'Appealing'

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — "The idea just appealed to me," is the way Magdalena A. Von Freytag explains why she crossed the Atlantic Ocean from Africa to Brazil in an old wooden lifeboat 15 years ago.

Remembering the harrowing odyssey she made with Wojciech Bialy, a Polish adventurer, Miss Von Freytag says the 100 days at sea taught her to appreciate the things in life many people take for granted.

"Even the little things — like having a glass of water," she adds.

Miss Von Freytag came to South Florida in 1972. Married and the mother of two sons, her life is more sedate these days.

She owns and operates "The Estate Wines & Flowers," a distinctive wine and flower shop in a fashionable shopping area here. Her fresh flowers come each week from Holland and she specializes in wines made at small vineyards in Europe.

"Americans like the unusual," she explains.

So did she.

Born a baroness to German parents living in Warsaw, Poland, Miss Von Freytag had lived in Africa several years when she met Bialy in Monrovia, the capital of Liberia on the western coast of Africa. Admittedly, it was his enthusiasm for circumnavigating the world in a lifeboat that intrigued her.

Fighting Ship

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The Soviet Union's newest fighting ship, the battle cruiser Frunze, has sailed through the Danish straits en route to the North Atlantic, the Danish military reported. The Danish navy's operation's command called it the Soviets' most powerful fighting ship.

Capt. Sven Gobel said the 25,000-ton cruiser was accompanied by the guided missile frigate Krivak "possibly for a shakedown cruise" before it joins the Soviet Northern Fleet, based in Murmansk.

The new 825-foot-long Frunze was described as a floating arsenal of conventional and nuclear missiles, with two 130mm cannon and a helicopter pad on the fantail. Its dual nuclear reactors reportedly can produce a top speed of 35 knots.

Evacuation

YARMOUTH, Isle of Wight (AP) — A helicopter, rescue boat and a sister ship safely evacuated 50 people safely from a pleasure cruiser that ran aground at the Needles rocks, Isle of Wight, the coast guard said.

The vacationers were aboard the Yarmouth Rose, which hit the rocks off the south England coast while trying to rescue a stranded motor boat. Four people in the motor boat also were saved in the operation, the report said.

Blue Bell Team Plans Buyout Of Company

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The management of Blue Bell Inc., the nation's second-largest clothing manufacturer, is forging ahead with an admittedly risky plan to take over the company through a leveraged buyout.

"The potential reward as well as the risk there is certainly very good, which is the name of the game in the United States," said Kenneth Tutterow, vice president of finance.

Blue Bell, which makes Wrangler jeans, Jantzen sportswear and other apparel, had $1.2 billion in sales last year, compared with $2.7 million for No. 1 apparel maker Levi Strauss.

A management-led investment team last week increased its offer for Blue Bell's 9.9 million shares to $47.65 per share from $47.50 per share. The firm's board of directors approved the $471.7 million offer on the recommendation of a panel of nonmanagement directors.

The increased offer settled two shareholder suits that contended the earlier offer was not enough, clearing the way for the buyout by management, investment banker Kelso & Co. of New York and employees through a stock ownership plan.

Tutterow declined to give details on which executives are involved in the proposed buyout, how much money each is putting up, the leadership of the would-be new owners or the stock ownership plan. He said the information would be released in a proxy statement to be sent to the Securities and Exchange Commission within two weeks.

"The intention is that management will be an owner, as well as Kelso & Co., which worked with management in arranging the financing, and the employees," he said. "There will also be certain institutional investors — a limited number."

Stockholders will vote on the buyout proposal at a meeting tentatively set for late October, he said.

The executives want to buy Blue Bell through a leveraged buyout. Most of the purchase price would be financed through loans, which would be paid off with company profits or the sale of assets.

"There is a certain amount of risk involved because the company is very heavily leveraged in order to raise the money," Tutterow said.

Some banking and industry officials say some firms financed through leveraged buyouts could fail in the next downturn of the volatile textile industry, particularly if the financing is based on variable interest rates.

Several other North Carolina textile companies have considered or completed leveraged buyouts, including Ti-Caro Inc. of Gastonia and Cone Mills Inc. of Greensboro.

Blue Bell's 30,000 employees in 77 U.S. plants and 15 overseas facilities haven't been told about the proposal yet, said company spokesman Tom Collins, but no layoffs are expected.

"We're especially lean going into it," he said.

Tutterow said the buyout is designed partly to counteract takeover attempts by outside groups. Earlier this year, the company had to buy back $144 million worth of stock from the Bass Brothers of Fort Worth, Texas, to avert such a takeover.

In their original proposal in May, the Blue Bell investment team offered $50 per share, well above the high 30s normally seen for Blue Bell stock, said Kay Norwood, a stock analyst for Interstate Securities Corp. in Charlotte.

"They had to make the announcement long before they were ready because ... the fear was the word had leaked out," she said.

After the buyout proposal was announced, Blue Bell stock soared above $50 per share.

"The street expectation was that something would materialize at a higher level, but it dropped down to where it should sell relative to an offer at $50 — down to $43 and a fraction," said Ms. Norwood.

In July, the investment group dropped its offer to $47.50 per share, saying the earlier offer of $50 was "not feasible."

Since then, Blue Bell stock has risen steadily "as it's gotten more and more likely that the buyout will be accomplished," said Ms. Norwood.

Charles Harden, a Greensboro lawyer who brought one of the shareholder suits, said one matter remains to be settled — whether the management's offer of $47.65 per share includes dividends payable on Dec. 1.

Times Changed

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — New times has been announced for the two Labor Day concerts by The Beach Boys at the Royal Palace Theater at Busch Gardens. The concerts are now scheduled for 5 and 8 p.m. instead of 2 and 5 p.m. as originally scheduled.

Tickets purchased for the 2 p.m. show will be honored at 5 p.m., and those purchased for the originally scheduled 5 p.m. show will be honored at the 8 p.m. concert.

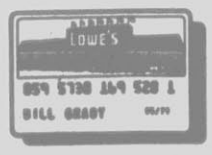
UP TO $1,000 INSTANT CREDIT! CHOOSE FROM TWO PLANS.



Apply For Our Convenient Lowe's Credit Card.
Just present your Visa, American Express or MasterCard, and you may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit on a new Lowe's Card. (Even without these cards, your application will be processed with a minimum delay.) Ask a Lowe's salesperson for complete details.

LOWE'S Low Payment Credit Plan

Finance Major Purchases Of Up To $5,000 On Our Low Payment Plan.
Our Low Payment Plan offers you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to five years at competitive rates. The result is a very low monthly payment that fits comfortably into your family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. Just look for the above symbol in future advertisements. And, where space is available, we'll also provide the specific credit details on selected items, to give you an idea of the relative size of monthly payments and Annual Percentage Rates. Low Payment Credit Terms are outlined below. So apply today. You may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit when you present your Visa, American Express, MasterCard, Sears or Lowe's card!

*Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms: Your credit must be satisfactory. Our cash price does not include sales tax. The monthly payment price may be slightly lower, depending upon state law. The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4%. If sales tax differs in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges are excluded.

We Also Honor American Express, Visa & MasterCard.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
