Discovery Finds Space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery finally soared into orbit today on its thrice-delayed maiden flight, carrying three communications satellites and a crew that includes NASA's second woman astronaut and its first paying passenger.

After a last-minute wait to get a pair of small airplanes out of the way, Discovery lifted off into blue, cloudless skies on a mission critical to rebuilding confidence in the shuttle's commercial reliability that has been shaken by the series of postponements.

Nine minutes after the fiery departure at 8:42 a.m., Mission Control in Houston reported the launch was perfect and the new ship and its six astronauts were in orbit 184 miles high and streaking around the globe at 17,400 mph.

"We are happy the orbiter and its crew finally left town," said launch director Bob Sieck. "The launch team is ecstatic. The only way to get over an abort and two postponements is to have a successful launch."

"I know it's been kind of rough, turning this thing around ... and getting it ready to go again," commander Henry Hartsfield, 50, told the control center shortly before launch. "We're ready to go and we thank you for it."

The flight combines two missions into one as NASA struggles to get back on schedule and packs 24 tons of cargo, the heaviest yet for a shuttle.

Also aboard the 132-ton ship is a drug factory that will manufacture a hormone whose identity has been kept a secret but which is said to be of potential benefit to millions.

Discovery's inaugural, the 12th shuttle flight, began almost seven minutes late because two private aircraft had penetrated the Kennedy Space Center airspace. One had to be chased away by a government plane and Tom Utsman, shuttle operations manager, said it "was in the flight line in a dangerous area — not only dangerous to themselves but also to the shuttle."

With tens of thousands of spectators watching from nearby beaches and highways, the blastoff culminated a countdown that was interrupted for 24 hours Tuesday night. That halt was required because of an electronic malfunction that theoretically could have prevented the booster rockets and fuel tank from dropping off after they exhausted their fuel.

But a hastily redesigned computer program worked perfectly, and the twin boosters peeled away two minutes seven seconds into the flight to splash down in the Atlantic for retrieval. The rust-colored tank fell away into the Indian Ocean after the ship's main engines burned out eight minutes later.

Fatal Crash Of B-1 Will Have Little If Any Impact On Bomber Program

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The first crash of a B-1 bomber, which killed the manufacturer's chief test pilot and injured two crewmen, will have little or no impact on the future of the controversial aircraft, proponents and critics say.

Air Force investigators converging on this desert base to study Wednesday's fiery crash of the $200 million prototype said it could be months before they determine the cause and why there were casualties when the three-man crew escaped in a parachute-equipped capsule.

The B-1A, one of four prototypes, crashed on sagebrush- and greasewood-dotted federal land about 10 miles northeast of the Mojave Desert base and 75 miles northeast of Los Angeles while on a low-speed, low-altitude test flight.

It came just six days before Rockwell International Corp., the prime contractor for the B-1, was to unveil the first production model of the B-1B, which is to be the bulwark of America's nuclear bomber force.

In Washington, Air Force Lt. Col. Ron Greer said the four-engine plane was engaged in "extremely low-level, extremely low-speed" tests on its 127th test flight.

Development of the B-1 began in 1970, and its history has been characterized by sharp debate.

The Defense Department has argued that the nation needs an advanced, multipurpose bomber with low-flying capabilities to penetrate enemy defenses. Critics say the B-1 is expensive, lacks maneuverability and that its job can be handled by existing B-52s.

After rejection by the Carter administration in late 1977, the B-1 project won a new lease on life from President Reagan. The House and Senate approved Reagan's request for $8.3 billion for 34 B-1 planes in fiscal 1985. Eventually, the Pentagon intends to buy 100 B-1s at a cost now projected at about $28.3 billion.

"Any tragedy like this is bad news," said Wolfgang Demisch, an aerospace analyst at First Boston Corp. "But in terms of the specific B-1 program, I don't expect it to have any impact."

"It shouldn't be a setback," said Rep. Robert Badham, R-Calif., a longtime B-1 supporter. "It's one of those unfortunate things that happen in a test program."

His comments were echoed by some of the plane's detractors, including Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Storm Threatens Windward Chain

MIAMI (AP) — Forecasters warned boaters to be cautious today as Arthur, the first tropical storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, churned slowly toward the eastern Caribbean packing 45 mph winds and driving rain.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane that flew into the storm reported it was located about 110 miles east of Barbados and moving northwest at 10 mph, the National Hurricane Center said in a 6 a.m. EDT statement.

The center, whose observations have been hampered by the loss of a satellite because of a burned out light bulb, said gale force winds extended 75 miles from the storm's center.

"The poorly defined center" of Arthur was located near latitude 13.2 north and longitude 57.8 west, the hurricane center said. Highest winds were estimated at 45 mph.

Arthur, born Wednesday of the Atlantic hurricane season's fourth tropical depression, was expected to cross the Windward Islands late Wednesday and early today, bringing thunderstorms, gusty wind and "locally heavy rains in the islands," hurricane forecaster Bob Sheets said.

"Small craft around the Windward Islands should exercise caution and monitor this system very closely," the statement said.

Forecaster Miles Lawrence said Arthur had potential to strengthen today, but said the potential was not a forecast.

"That's really just a precautionary statement for the people that are in its path," he said.

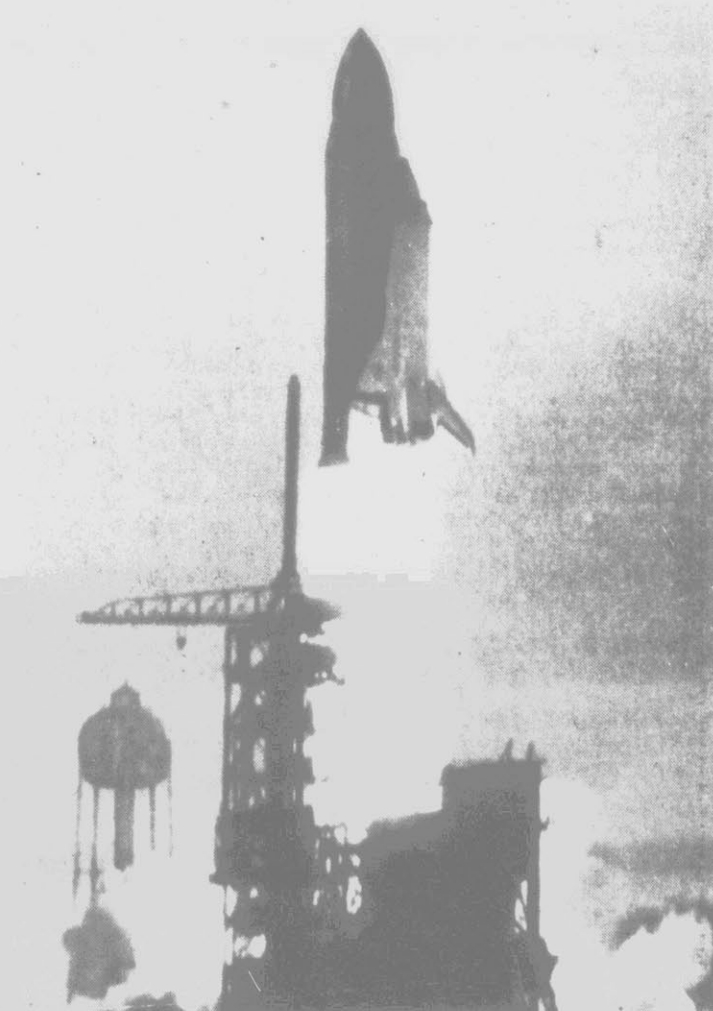

A tropical depression has sustained wind of 38 mph or less, while a weather system with wind at 39 mph to 73 mph is a tropical storm. At 74 mph it is classified a hurricane.

The storm is known as a "Cape Verde type disturbance," for the area off Africa where they form. Cape Verde is a group of islands in the Atlantic about 400 miles west of Dakar.

"Many of our stronger hurricanes that we have gotten in the past have been Cape Verde type disturbances," Sheets said. "They've originated in that area."

Forecasters don't "expect a whole lot of change for the next 12 to 24 hours," Sheets said.

"This only represents a slight increase in wind speed and no rapid changes in strength are expected," the National Weather Service said.

ECU Offers Medical Discount

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Some area physicians say they are upset that East Carolina University employees this year have been promised a 25 percent discount for physicians' fees of ECU School of Medicine-employed doctors.

And they're questioning whether such an offer is legal.

"I only heard of this situation Tuesday," Dr. Donald Tucker, a Greenville internist in private practice, said yesterday. "It concerns me. This is a state institution going into direct competition with free enterprise. It costs a private physician to keep an office open, yet those guys are having their salaries paid by us taxpayers and their offices and staffs supplied by us. Then they're undercutting us. East Carolina University is one of the largest employers in the area. But it's not even numbers. It's the principle of the thing, the precedent being set and I think it's a bad one."

ECU Chancellor Dr. John Howell confirmed that the letters have been sent out to staff and that an announcement was made during a convocation of the faculty the opening day of the fall term. "It began," he said, "when a committee of the faculty interested in improving employee benefits asked for the same benefits (discounts) that the medical school faculty and other employees have been receiving for some time."

Howell said he forwarded the request to Dr. Laupus, who, after whatever deliberation within the medical school, agreed to it.

Dr. Howell read the memo recently disseminated on campus: "Effective July 1, 1984, all employees of ECU will be given a 25 percent discount on physicians' fees by School of Medicine physicians.

The 25 percent discount will be applied to any residual amount owed by the employee after all insurance payments have been made to the School of Medicine. Discounts cannot be given for laboratory charges."

Howell said he understands that the medical and dental schools at Chapel Hill have been offering discounts to university employees for some time.

Dr. William Laupus said the provision of the discounts was seen by the medical school as a response toward the well-being of university employees. He says he does not feel it should be regarded as "a competitive sort of thing." He said he regrets the protest he's heard in the last day or two, because he had not considered that the medical school was doing anything to disturb the private physicians. "We talked about this thing in meetings where doctors were present prior to its being done," he said, "and I thought everybody had their say then. We've always had a tremendously good relationship with the private physicians before and I hope this can continue."

Dr. Tucker said he, too, has felt that the private doctors and the medical school have had good will between them since the beginning of the medical school. "This has done as much to strain it as anything ever has" he said.

He questioned the legality of the discount, saying he's been told there is an Umstead Act on the North Carolina books which prohibits state agencies and institutions from entering into direct competition with private enterprise.

Family Life Services Program To Have Four Focus Areas

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Four focus areas will be used by Bonnie B. Korta in developing a new program in this area which will be sponsored by the Methodist Home For Children.

Family counseling for families in crisis, family life education and enrichment, consultation-training and community planning are the focus areas. "Since 1899 the Methodist Home For Children has provided residential care for children needing to live outside the home. Since then, social conditions have changed and social service agencies responses to family needs have changed as well. The Methodist Home is decentralizing its program and changing its focus from a program which provided permanent custodial care to one which is community based temporarily and centered around keeping natural family units together. Examples of this type of emphasis are group homes, which are being located across the state and the family life services program beginning in Greenville," said Mrs. Korta.

"Serious communication problems, emotional estrangement, alcoholism and drug abuse, incest and family violence are some of the very painful problems faced by families everywhere. The Family Life Services program is a new agency designed to support and assist families as they go through such crises or as they face the normal and unusual challenges and stresses of everyday life.

"Virginia Satir, a noted family therapist, once said of the family that it is the 'factory that produces the person.' Just as a factory sometimes requires input or intervention from the outside to keep it running, so does the family. When the machinery of the family breaks down, intensive and individualized help is often needed for the family to explore new solutions, to relate to each other in different ways, to make appropriate decisions, to take positive action and even to grow as a result of the crisis. Our counseling program hopes to meet the needs of a number of families in a unique way by offering service to families in their own homes — a feature we are hoping will make our services more useful to rural citizens in this part of North Carolina," she said.

"Just as any business or organization operates more productively when its members are knowledgeable about its processes and are skilled in special areas, so do families. We believe that every family has the potential for changing and growing, loving and caring, communicating, resolving conflict, adventuring, creating and experiencing joy but that these activities can be enhanced by participation in education and enrichment activities. Support groups for single parents, step-families and families going through divorce 'Active Parenting,' a six-week series for parents who want to learn effective discipline techniques and communication skills and 'Face to Face,' a six-week experience in couple communication and enrichment are just a few examples of the educational services we will offer," she added.

"Through consultation-training services, we hope to enhance the capabilities of ministers and other professionals who work with families through providing training in family and marital dynamics and counseling. Finally we hope that our agency will have an impact in the community as we get involved and family advocacy councils and task forces studying the needs of families in the area. I'm excited about my role in the new agency because, although I have previously directed and supervised agencies, this is my first experience in developing a program from the ground up," she said.

The services are offered at no cost and are available to any citizen living in the program area. "We welcome service requests and referrals from courts, departments of social service, civic groups and families themselves," she said. She will be working in the Greenville, Rocky Mount and Elizabeth City districts. Her office telephone number is 355-5361.

Mrs. Korta is a native of Lynchburg, Va. and graduated from the College of William and Mary and holds a master's degree from Catholic University of America. She is certified by the Academy of Certified Social Workers. She was the former executive director of youth and family counseling services in Lexington.

Mrs. Korta and her husband, Fred, are the parents of a four-year-old daughter.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

After years of scientific research, marketing and testing, it has finally been revealed that children can open child-proof caps on medicine bottles faster than adults.

In a significant number of cases, it was confirmed that the child-proof caps could not be opened at all by adults and caused headaches for which there is no known cure.

The message to me is quite clear. Child-proof is a fantasy word that was invented to give mothers hope . . . like "wrinkle-free" and "one-size-fits-all." They're catchy, but they don't mean anything.

The way I figured it out, it's God's way of propagating the species. We need kids. We cannot function in this world without them. As long as there are hermetically sealed combs in packages, children will always be with us.

To them, there is no place in this world that is "out of reach" and no package made that cannot be ripped open in 35 seconds.

They can take the bell out of a ball when they are three months old, find the end of the toilet tissue roll at six months, and scale the top of the refrigerator by age one.

By age three they can operate a lipstick tube, by age four they can find the beginning of the thread that is pasted under the label, and by five can disconnect the TV and install video games.

The way the world is going, I don't think it's too unrealistic to consider rent-a-kids for people with arthritis who ever want to get sliced bacon out of a package in their lifetime. Or how about a woman with long fingernails who has never been able to use a shopping cart because they are all wadded together and can only be separated by a pre-schooler? Women climbing the corporate ladder would do well to rent-a-kid to take along on business trips if only to open the bag of airline smoked almonds.

Sometimes I feel package manufacturers don't know children at all. If you want to keep children out of something, what do you do?

Dear Abby

Teen Learns Painful Lesson: His Troubles Are His Fault

DEAR ABBY: I'm enclosing one of your articles. In it is a terrific lesson for every young person. Please run it again. It is more needed today than it was when I clipped it from your column in 1970.

YOUR FAN IN STEUBENVILLE, OHIO

DEAR FAN: I agree, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and in a pack of trouble. I was arrested for burglary and other charges. This was not my first time, so I am locked up in Cambridge, Minn., awaiting trial. I would like to express some of the things I have learned in the 121 days I have been here.

One is that you should listen to your parents, as they will never steer you wrong. I never got along too good with my dad. Every time he tried to talk to me we got into a heated argument, but now I realize if I had listened to him, I wouldn't be here.

I would also like to tell kids, don't quit school to go out and make money. I did, and look where I ended up.

Also, there are no shortcuts. A guy needs all the education he can get. And another thing. Don't blame your mistakes on other people. My friends showed me how to break the law, but I am the one who now must take full responsibility for my own actions. I will probably get sent up to St. Cloud's, but thanks, Abby, for letting me say this. Also, I want to thank Sheriff Erickson. He is a swell guy. He let me use his typewriter to write to you. Sincerely, "THE CAMBRIDGE BUM"

DEAR SIR: You're young yet, so don't go calling yourself a "bum." You can pay your debt and still amount to something if you really want to. I talked to Sheriff Erickson, and he told me you had already been sent to St. Cloud. He said he certainly hoped you would straighten yourself out because you had a lot of good in you, in addition to being exceptionally smart. I believe him. I wish you luck.

I try to tell him I'd rather be safe than sorry. He says, "Sorry, I can't live like that."

What do you think?

CAREFUL

DEAR CAREFUL: Your husband is either very naive or very foolish. Please tell him if he doesn't start locking up, he may not live at all.

DEAR ABBY: The other evening my wife and I took a guest out to dinner. My wife and I ate faster than our guest, and when we were finished with our main course, the waitress came to our table and removed our plates while our guest was only halfway finished with her meal.

Some slow eaters are uncomfortable eating while others have finished, and if the waitress clears the table it just makes the situation worse.

I think it's rude for a waitress (or waiter) to pick up empty plates while someone is still eating, don't you?

NAMELESS IN IOWA

DEAR NAMELESS: Yes. But this need not happen again. When the waitress (or waiter) starts clearing the table, don't be intimidated. Say (politely, of

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a woman who has had her tubes tied two years ago to get pregnant by a man who said he had a vasectomy?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: If the tubes were not properly tied and the vasectomy was not properly performed, it's possible, though statistically unlikely.

More often than not, the woman is victimized by a man who claims to have been vasectomized but wasn't.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a difference of opinion. I lock doors—he doesn't.

When I'm home during the day, I not only keep my doors locked, I double-lock them with a dead bolt. When I'm riding in my car, I make sure all the doors are locked. If my car is just parked in our driveway, I keep it locked.

My husband never bothers to lock anything. When I go around making sure everything is locked up at night, he says I'm "paranoid."

course), "Would you please wait until everyone has finished?"

DEAR ABBY: If I don't write this letter, I won't be able to sleep tonight. First I want to say that I have never before bought a Penthouse magazine, but I was one of the first to run out and buy one as soon as that well-publicized issue was on the newsstands. I gloated over that piece of trash just like everybody else, and even took it to work to show around!

Now I feel rotten. I'm no better than the Penthouse publisher who made millions off that poor girl's misery. And I helped him do it.

I hope you will print this to let the former Miss America and her family know how sorry I am.

Go ahead and let me have it, Abby. I have it coming. I'm too ashamed to sign my name, so sign me ...

SORRY AND SICK AT HEART

DEAR SORRY: Stop beating yourself. Your curiosity was only human. Perhaps the ugly incident that sent shock waves through the land was not without its positive side, for in it is this valuable lesson for all young women:

Think before you act, and refrain from conduct that could bring disgrace upon you or your family. And should you have a lapse of judgment when you are young and foolish—or hungry for money and fame—don't count on your misdeeds never being exposed.

If millions of young women can benefit from the former Miss

Guidelines

Under new Pentagon guidelines for media coverage of military operations there is no guarantee reporters will be allowed on the battlefield; but on the whole, two major press organizations who studied some top Pentagon proposals on guidelines find they are a good first step for reasonable press coverage of any future operation.

The Pentagon study was instituted in response to a barrage of protests that resulted when newsmen were kept from the scene of action in the first 48 hours of the Grenada operation ... wherein the military's press policy was acknowledged to be an error in judgment.

In general, the panel urged defense planners to help the press do its job: such as providing information, transmission facilities and transportation for reporters.

There would be a "press pool" from which a number of reporters would participate and, in turn, share their notes with other reporters. For the sake of security certain ground rules would be instituted and compliance would be "voluntary" ... but those who violated the rules would be excluded from further coverage of the operation.

Basically, that means barring information of intelligence value to the opposition and hence endangering lives of servicemen or success of the mission would have priority over deadlines and "scoops."

The panel saw the early Grenada news blackout as being "in an extremely gray area." Future decisions, we are told, will be made on a case-by-case basis.

"Had our recommendations been in place and fully considered at the time (of Grenada) there might have been no need to create our panel," said the Pentagon spokesman.

Of course it's too late to correct the Grenada misjudgment, but at least future operation planners will know precisely what is expected of them in their dealings with the news media.

Open Season

It's not easy to understand. There was the story of a car that ran amok in a crowd at a Times Square intersection, striking six and critically injuring four.

And there was the vehicle that crashed into another crowd at a bus stop in Washington, D.C., leaving seven people dead ... one came right after the other.

During the Olympics in Los Angeles another car was driven out of the street into a flock of pedestrians, killing one and injuring another half-dozen or so. In the latter, the driver explained he was getting even with the police; the Times Square motorist said her car went out of control, and in Washington the driver had been drinking.

The remarkable thing about these incidents is the short time-frame of their happening.

Memories do play tricks, but instances of a car plowing into a crowd of people are recalled as being rare; so rare, that once-a-year might be called about average.

But what we have here more resembles "open season" on people.

Senate Bill Could Be Costly Sleeper

WASHINGTON — Today's five-minute quiz: Do you manage a medium-sized grocery store? Do you own a pharmacy? Do you run a baseball team using a city-owned park or stadium? Are you a farmer receiving any kind of federal subsidies for crops or irrigation? Do you rent property to low-income families who receive rental vouchers?

If any of these definitions fits your status — and the list could be much extended — let me suggest that you get in touch at once with your U.S. senator. You are about to be blindsided. You are about to be made subject to the full panoply of federal civil rights rules and regulations, including the paperwork, the assurances of compliance, the affirmative action programs, the liability for civil suits, the legal expenses and the endless correspondence that bureaucracy demands.

It is astounding that relatively so little attention has been paid to S. 2568, which bears the title of the Civil Rights Act of 1984. The bill is now actively pending in committee. A companion bill already has passed the House — by a vote of 375-32 on June 26. No bill having greater impact upon more people has come along since the basic Civil Rights Act was adopted 20 years ago.

Dr. Michael Horowitz, general counsel of the Office of Management and Budget, says that the bill "would largely eliminate the remaining distinctions between federal and state, and federal and private, concerns." The respected Center for Judicial Studies here in Washington warns that in its present form the bill "will effect a radical and massive expansion of federal power in the subject areas."

By way of background, it should be said that the Supreme Court last February made an important decision in a case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania. The college received no direct federal aid, but some of its students received "Pell grants" for their tuition. The 3rd U.S. Circuit held that grants to the students constituted federal financial assistance to the institution as a whole, and thus made every aspect of the college's operations subject to federal law prohibiting discrimination in higher education. The Supreme Court, with only two members dissenting, reversed the lower court. The high court held that the Pell grants affected only the particular "program or activity" concerned, in this case the college's financial-aid program.

The pending Senate bill would not merely nullify the Grove City decision on private colleges. It would do much more. The bill effectively would broaden four major statutes banning discrimination on account of age, sex, handicap or race. It would do this by extending the reach of civil rights enforcement programs to any

Through the years, U.S. administrations have used trading privileges and other economic incentives to try to alter domestic policies in Eastern Europe. But apart from what President Lyndon B. Johnson called "building bridges," the United States has relied mostly on evolution to bring about change.

Yalta receded into history. Third-party candidate George C. Wallace in 1968 accused the Democrats and Republicans of betraying Eastern Europe through Yalta. But the United States recognized East Germany diplomatically a few years later and the debate appeared to be over — except for a flareup over the 1975 Helsinki agreement.

Signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and 33 other countries, it supported human rights in Europe by promising exchanges of people and ideas between East and West. At the same time, however, the agreement apparently and implicitly accepted Europe's postwar boundaries.

These matters rested until President Reagan spoke at a White House luncheon the other day commemorating the 40th anniversary of the Warsaw uprising against the Nazis.

The United States could not accept the "permanent subjugation of the people of Eastern Europe," Reagan said. "We reject any interpretation of the Yalta agreement that suggests American consent for the division of Europe into spheres of influence."

Actually, the president's remarks were foreshadowed in a speech by Vice President George Bush last September in Vienna and Secretary of State George P. Shultz last January in Stockholm.

Bush, after a tour that included stops in Romania and Hungary, said "we recognize no lawful division of Europe." Shultz, at a European security conference, declared Germany was "heartlessly divided" and said "this division is the essence of Europe's security and human rights problem, and we all know it."

Shultz recently followed up Reagan's remarks with a speech in Chicago to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in which he said "we will never accept the idea of a divided Europe. Time is not on the side of imperial domination."

The platform adopted by the Republican convention does not attack the Yalta agreement, as the GOP did in 1952. It says "We stand in solidarity with the peoples of Eastern Europe: the Poles, Hungarians, East Germans, Czechs, Romanians, Yugoslavs, Bulgarians, Ukrainians, Baltic peoples, Armenians, and all captive nations who struggle daily against their Soviet masters."

The Soviets, meanwhile, condemned Reagan's remarks. They said through Tass, the news agency, that he had a "pathological hatred of socialism and communism" and had brought back the "worst rhetoric of the Cold War."

President Franklin Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet leader Josef Stalin met secretly at Yalta for a week in February 1945. Roosevelt and Churchill wanted Stalin to declare war on Japan, and he did — in exchange for a promise that the Soviets would acquire control over the southern Sakhalin Islands. Also, a veto system for the U.N. Security Council was approved.

That much has not been in dispute. What they decided to do about Eastern Europe is another matter.

Critics charged Roosevelt accepted the Red Army's control of Eastern Europe, thereby selling out Poland and the other nations that Moscow has since dominated.

Defenders of the agreement said it called for "free unfettered elections" in Poland while asserting the "right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live."

The fact that communism spread through Eastern Europe was attributed to the Red Army's advance and not to Roosevelt or the agreement itself.

In reopening discussion of the agreement, Reagan said it represented a pledge by the three allied powers to allow free democratic elections in all countries liberated from the Nazis after World War II.

"There is no reason to absolve the Soviet Union or ourselves from this commitment," the president said.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Alton Warren in his "Public Forum" column published Sunday, Aug. 26, raised some questions. I want to set the record straight. I do not know whether the attorney general has the authority to remove a sheriff from office after the sheriff has been convicted of vote buying. However, as our chief law enforcement officer, I would hope that the attorney general would have the persuasive ability and authority to press upon the local district attorney or that local sheriff that a convicted felon should not serve as the top county law enforcement officer.

Since Rufus Edmisten was sworn in as attorney general, crime in North Carolina has risen over 50 percent. North Carolina is a national leader in drug trafficking and the pirating of illegal tape recordings. Why hasn't the attorney general done his job in these areas?

Prior to 1977, the Attorney General's Office was responsible for representing the consumer before the Utilities Commission. However, his record of representation was so miserable that the Democrat-controlled General Assembly stripped him of that responsibility because he wasn't doing his job.

The real questions for the voters of North Carolina, Mr. Warren, is if Rufus Edmisten has not done his job as attorney general, why should the voters of North Carolina trust him to do his job as Governor?

Strength For Today

The English writer John Ruskin once remarked that there is no wealth but life. He declared that a country is rich which nourishes the greatest number of noble and happy human beings.

Also, he said that the only rich man is one who, having developed his powers to the utmost, has also "the widest helpful influence, both personal and by means of his possessions, over the lives of others."

This statement should remind us again that true wealth does not consist of the things we possess but in the things which possess us. No matter what external conditions may indicate, the only truly rich person is the person whose heart is undefiled, whose motives are pure, whose aspirations are high, whose spirit is self-effacing.

Material values have their place, but their place can never rightfully be first place. Moral and spiritual values must stand above them.

Centering On Abuse

RALEIGH — The Governor's Crime Commission is about to begin a major new study on the problems of alcohol and drug abuse in North Carolina.

Loaded with statistics that show many North Carolinians are wired to the ceilings with booze and drugs, the commission will hold seven public hearings around the state in September. The commission hopes to be able to present the next governor with recommendations for legislation that can be passed along to the 1985 General Assembly.

The statistics show that four-fifths of North Carolina prison inmates have drug or alcohol abuse problems, that illegal drugs are readily available in the state and that alcohol consumption is a most popular activity for North Carolina teens.

The hearings will be held in Asheville, Charlotte, Winston-Sale, Raleigh, Fayetteville, Wilmington and Greenville.

Jim Van Camp of Pinehurst, chairman of the commission, says the study will look to go beyond the "simplistic idea" that the substance abuse problem (drug and alcohol abuse, that is) can be defeated simply through law enforcement.

"We have to get involved in a broad range of efforts. It's not just putting another helicopter or battleship on the coast (to catch drug smugglers). It is simplistic to think that more police and crime labs — which although they're necessary — will be enough."

But, as Van Camp asks himself rhetorically, "What can we do that hasn't been tried before?" He says he's not sure. "Without communication, dialogue, discussion, without keeping the community sensitive to this kind of problem, however, I can tell you that nothing will ever be accomplished."

In preliminary discussions, the commission has centered on the public schools and how they can better help with prevention and treatment of youngsters with drug and alcohol problems.

"Instead of just getting dogs to sniff at lockers (in search of drugs), at some time we ought to be making some kind of education effort for prevention and also for an element of treatment," he said.

For example, a teacher should be able to tell if a child in her class has problems. Drug and alcohol abuse aren't easy to hide. Yet, if the schools are only interested in getting enough evidence on that child to get him arrested, then they can do nothing to help him.

Van Camp says there's a better way. "Let's funnel him (the student) to the appropriate prevention and treatment program." The teacher may not have caught the student with the goods, with the evidence needed to convict him. But if the teacher suspects that the student has a drug or alcohol problem, then the teacher should send the student off for some help.

Van Camp stresses that the commission won't simply be recommending changes in the law.

"recipient" of "federal financial assistance."

In the construction of statutes, definitions are everything. No amount of "legislative history," no assurances by floor managers, nothing that is said in debate counts more than the words in the statute itself. Here the word "recipient" is sweepingly defined. It embraces not only the states, their towns and counties and institutions, but also any "private agency, institution or organization, or other entity" receiving federal financial assistance "directly or through another entity or person."

Let me go back to the opening questions. The plain language of the Senate bill would snare the grocer who benefits from the food stamps traded by his customers. Prescriptions for persons on Medicare and Medicaid constitute assistance to the pharmacy. Every sports team that plays on publicly owned property would be subject to affirmative action requirements of federal law. Farmers, ranchers and landlords are among millions of citizens who become recipients of federal assistance "directly or through another entity or person."

The pending bill has 63 Senate sponsors, among them such usually sound fellows as Baker of Tennessee, Dole of Kansas and Stevens of Alaska. It is mystifying. The only charitable explanation that comes to mind is that many of the sponsors were misled into believing the bill was an innocent little measure intended only to restore the status quo ante.

Stress, Isolation May Boost Heart Risk

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Reclusive people who cope badly with turmoil or have unsatisfying jobs are at significantly higher than usual risk of dying in the first years after a heart attack, a study today concludes.

The researchers found that such people, whom they classified as being "socially isolated and having a high degree of life stress," were more than four times as likely as more carefree and sociable folks to die after a heart attack.

Dr. William Ruberman said that in this study, stress — an ambiguous term — was "a description of adverse life circumstances." It's not to be confused with the kind of stress that's typically experienced by people with Type A personalities. The study found no evidence that these hard-working, impatient people face any unusual risks after a heart attack.

The study, conducted on 2,320 men by the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York, was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine. The men were interviewed two or three months after their heart attacks and then watched for three years. They were considered to have high levels of life stress if any of the following conditions applied to them:

—They are retired but would rather be working.

—Before their heart attack, they had a relatively low-status job, such as sales clerk or unskilled laborer.

—They said they didn't enjoy their work very much.

—They had been "very upset" in the past year when a robbery, accident or some other violence befell them or a friend or family member, or when someone close to them went through a divorce.

—They had recently experienced major financial problems.

People were judged to be socially isolated if they refused to talk to medical personnel about any possible need to change their lifestyles, didn't belong to clubs or churches and rarely visited friends or relatives in their homes.

The researchers said doctors may be able to use counseling and group discussions to help their patients survive longer after heart attacks. However, they conceded that the burdens of stress and isolation may not be matters of personal choice, so it may be hard for them to change.

Even whether stress and isolation themselves actually hasten death after a heart attack is not clear from the study. However, Ruberman said it's possible that "adverse life circumstances increase the likelihood of heart rhythm disorders that are shown to be very much involved in the ultimate mechanism of death." In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Thomas B. Graboys of Harvard Medical School said the research "has profound and far-reaching implications."

He said the work demonstrates the need for cardiologists to learn patients' social histories before they perform the more technological methods of diagnosing heart disease.

"We should explore the psychosocial causes of stress that may be impairing a patient's ability to resist the adversity of heart disease and may ultimately lead to a chronic and debilitating sense of despair and futility," he wrote.

The research is the latest of a long line of studies that try — sometimes with conflicting results — to find links between personality, lifestyle and health.

Cancer Linked To AIDS

BOSTON (AP) — A form of cancer called non-Hodgkins lymphoma has been linked to AIDS, and researchers reported today that the malignancy appears to be increasing among homosexual men.

The report shows that this rare lymph cancer is occurring among the same people who are at risk for getting acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Another form of cancer, Kaposi's sarcoma, already had been seen among AIDS victims since the disease appeared four years ago.

"A second malignancy is now clearly associated with this immunodeficiency," said Dr. John L. Ziegler of the University of California in San Francisco. "This is another malignancy to be reckoned with."

The researchers identified 90 cases of the cancer among homosexual men in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Houston and New York since 1980, and over half of them were diagnosed last year.

Although many lymphoma victims eventually developed AIDS, the first symptom was often swollen lymph nodes, which also can be an early sign of AIDS.

"Ninety cases across the country is not a real epidemic," said Ziegler. "But it sure is remarkable considering that this is a very rare cancer to start with."

The survey, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, showed that 62 percent of the victims had "high-grade," or aggressive, forms of lymphoma, and the disease responded poorly to treatment.

Although still rare, the number of lymphoma cases appears to have increased since the AIDS outbreak. Between 1975 and 1979, there were two cases of lymphoma in San Francisco among never-married men between the ages of 20 and 49. Between 1980 and 1983, there were 10 cases.

Of the 90 cases studied:
—33 of the patients had swollen lymph glands before their cancer was diagnosed, and 14 of these men eventually developed AIDS.

—29 had AIDS before the lymphoma was spotted, and in 13 others, the cancer was diagnosed during autopsies.

—15 had no AIDS symptoms when their cancer developed, but 12 of these people later got AIDS.

Actor Billy Sands Dies Of Lung Cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Sands, the actor who appeared on Broadway plays and was a regular on the television comedies "McHale's Navy" and "The Phil Silvers Show," has died of lung cancer at age 73.

A funeral service for Sands, who died Monday at UCLA Medical Center, was scheduled today at Hillside Memorial Cemetery, said Gary Owens, a cemetery spokesman.

Sands was an experienced stage actor but was better known to television audiences as Seaman Harrison (Tinker) Bell, member of the PT boat crew of Lt. Commander Quinton McHale, portrayed by Ernest Borgnine.

Fires May Hit More Dwellings

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Windborne flames that have scorched 160,000 acres of forest and prairie leaped battle lines toward more homes, disappointing firefighters as air support and reinforcements from seven states joined the war against fire today.

Residents of the 15-home El Dorado Heights subdivision near Helena were told to evacuate Wednesday after winds shifted the 22,400-acre North Hill fire toward their neighborhood.

"We're not catching up with it now. If we get a break in the winds, we hope to," said Paul May, spokesman for the Department of State Lands.

Authorities classified 18 Montana fires as "major." Because of the number of state and federal agencies involved, there have been no firm figures on the total number of fires still burning. Most of them started last weekend or early this week, presumably by lightning.

The fires have destroyed more than 30 homes and routed more than 500 people.

The 5,000 firefighters on the lines Wednesday were supported by 42 air tankers and 21 helicopters spraying fire retardant chemicals, said Dick Guth, a Forest Service spokesman.

But efforts to control the 75,000-acre Hawk Creek fire that destroyed 30 houses in three hours in the Roundup area Monday were to no avail as gusts carried across fire lines.

Firefighters did make progress at containing a 13,000-acre blaze in north-central Montana and smaller fires elsewhere.

"It's been a disappointing day so far," said another spokesman, Don Kendall. "We didn't accomplish what we wanted today, but we're rapidly building our resources.

"We're in good shape as far as resources.

Court Says Reagan Acted Illegally In Vetoing Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that President Reagan illegally used a pocket veto last year to kill a bill linking military aid to El Salvador with progress on human rights.

In a 2-1 decision released Wednesday in a one-page order, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in favor of Rep. Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., and 32 other House Democrats who sued the president over the pocket veto.

Barnes and his colleagues argued that a pocket veto can be invoked only after the end of a two-year session of Congress, not during recesses. Reagan vetoed the military aid bill last fall after the 98th Congress went on its end-of-the-year recess.

The ruling by the three-judge panel overturned a March decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson, who had upheld Reagan's authority to use a pocket veto during a congressional recess.

Judges Spottswood W. Robinson III and Carl McGowan did not issue an opinion but said one would follow. But Judge Robert H. Bork issued a dissent, arguing that the congressmen did not have legal standing to sue the president.

Barnes told The New York Times he was "very pleased" with the court's decision. "But I'm not surprised. I felt all along that the position we took in the suit was grounded on a strong legal basis.

"The importance of this case goes well beyond aid to El Salvador. It relates to an ongoing dispute between Congress and the president," Barnes said.

Michael Davidson, the Senate's legal counsel, said the decision means "the one proper use of the pocket veto now remaining is at the end of a two-year congressional term."

Michael Ratner, an attorney for the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York who represented the House Democrats, hailed the decision as "a major victory, both legally and on human rights in El Salvador."

A spokesman for the Justice Department, which argued the case for the Reagan administration, said there would be no immediate comment on the ruling.

At issue was Reagan's action on Nov. 30, after Congress adjourned for 1983, to nullify the measure, which required him to certify that the Salvadoran government had improved human rights before more U.S. aid could be disbursed to the country during the 1983 fiscal year.

The measure passed overwhelmingly in both the Senate and the House.

The court's decision is not expected to have any effect on military aid to El Salvador because the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30 and the money has been spent.

The Constitution specifies that a bill passed by each House of Congress automatically becomes law unless the president vetoes it by returning the unsigned measure to Congress within 10 days "unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law."

A pocket veto occurs when, after Congress has passed a bill and then adjourns, the president simply keeps the bill "in his pocket," neither signing it nor returning it with objections.

In recent years, including 1983, both Houses of Congress have appointed representatives to accept messages from the president during intersession and intrasession adjournments, taking the position that the president cannot contend he has been prevented from returning a bill to Congress with his objections.

This would mean that by appointing such representatives Congress could thwart the president's use of the pocket veto except during an adjournment at the end of a two-year term of Congress, which wipes the legislative slate clean.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Henderson Belk, a member of the Charlotte-based Belk Department store family, has filed a petition for personal bankruptcy.

Belk, 61, listed no specific amounts for assets or debts in the filing in U.S. Bankruptcy Court at Charlotte. He has 15 days to file such an accounting with the court.

Auto Workers Eye Ford, GMC

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The head of the United Auto Workers says a decision to target both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. for possible strikes means the companies should "start all over" and make better contract proposals in time to avert a walkout.

UAW President Owen Bieber said Wednesday that GM and Ford should propose new contract terms "with haste because there's only 16 days left" to avoid a strike when the current contract expires Sept. 14.

Bieber's comments at a meeting of nationwide union locals came one day after GM and Ford offered nearly 500,000 domestic auto workers no increase in basic wages and no guarantee that more jobs won't be lost to foreign countries or non-union shops. GM offered a lump-sum payment to workers, while Ford offered a profit-sharing plan.

Ford's top negotiator said the decision to name GM and Ford as dual strike targets complicates the labor negotiations. GM issued a noncommittal statement calling the

UAW move an "opportunity."

The union had made job security its No.1 issue in this year's contract talks, which a GM spokesman said were to resume today.

UAW bylaws provide for a strong presidency and in keeping with that, the 25-member executive board granted Bieber the right to pick one of the two companies later as sole strike target.

Wednesday's vote by the board initiated a move the UAW has tried only once before since pattern bargaining began nearly 30 years ago. Under pattern bargaining, a union agreement with one company sets the standard for the rest of the industry.

"We came to that conclusion based on the fact that the proposals made to our people by the companies really don't represent any proposal," Bieber said.

Bieber called on GM and Ford, which are making record profits, to "start all over" and offer new proposals that do not "represent a lack of fairness."

Ford chief negotiator Peter

Pestillo said the move could rob the talks of the intensity that occurs when one company is the target and the other waits its turn.

"We are suffering the passage of time," Pestillo said.

Pestillo said Ford never expected its offer to be final, but neither was the company abandoning it. "We are not prepared to report its death," he said.

Beiber sought to squelch speculation that union leaders could not make up their minds this year, saying a double target was the UAW's best chance to speed up the talks.

Full-scale strikes against both companies are deemed highly unlikely, even though the union has its richest strike fund ever, $563 million.

However, a union source said that the executive board discussed striking selective targets at both companies — so-called mini-strikes, which could hamper and even shut down operations at GM and Ford.

Strong car sales and factory closings for the annual model changeover have driven down the stocks of auto dealers to below 40 days. GM has only a threeweek supply of some its more-popular big cars. A 60-to 70-day supply is deemed desirable.

The union demands that the present GM base wage of $9.63 an hour and cost of living payments of $3.04 an hour be combined in a new base wage of $12.67 per hour, which would be the starting point for unspecified yearly wage increases. Such a demand often was granted by the companies before foreign carmakers made vast inroads into the U.S. market.

The companies said they want the base wage frozen. While willing to start COLA at the present $3.04, they want increases to be granted more slowly.

GM offered lump-sum payments of $600 and $300 in the first two years of a three-year contract. Ford offered a profit-sharing plan it estimated would amount to between $1,600 and $1,700 per person this year.

GM earned $3.73 billion last year and Ford earned $1.87 billion. Both could nearly double those records this year and union members want a bigger share of those profits.

The UAW chose twin strike targets only once before, in 1970.

Factory Orders Indicate Slight Increase For July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories rose 1 percent in July, partially reversing a decline of the month before, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said new orders rose $1.8 billion last month to $192.5 billion following a 1.6 percent decline in June.

Even with the increase, orders were still 2 percent below the high point reached in March. Economists have said the month-to-month fluctuations in the flow of orders since then is a sign the economy is slowing from its earlier rapid pace.

Further evidence of the slowdown was given Wednesday when the government reported that the Index of Leading Economic Indicators dropped 0.8 percent in July, following an even sharper 1.3 percent decline in June. It marked the first back-to-back declines in the forecasting gauge in 2½ years.

The report on factory orders said demand for both durable and non-durable goods was up in July.

Orders for durable goods — products expected to last three or more years — rose 1.3 percent to $100.5 billion. This revised downward a preliminary report last week showing a 2.2 percent increase in durable goods orders.

Orders for transportation equipment were up 4.9 percent, the strongest increase since a 6.5 percent gain in March. The July rise was attributed to the automotive and defense aircraft industries.

Orders for primary metals such as steel were up 7.7 percent following large declines of 4.7 percent in June and 10.3 percent in May.

The largest decline was posted by non-electrical machinery, which dropped 5.2 percent, the third decrease in the last four months.

Orders for non-durable goods increase a slight 0.6 percent in July to $92 billion following two months when this category showed no change.

Shipments of manufactured goods declined 0.4 percent to $189.7 billion.

The Campaign

Mondale

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — The role of religion in politics and government is emerging as a major 1984 campaign issue and Walter F. Mondale is working on a major speech challenging President Reagan's view.

"This is obviously an issue that is getting newly into the public dialogue," Robert G. Beckel, Mondale's campaign manager, said Wednesday.

In recent days when Mondale has been asked for comment on Reagan's statement last week that "religion and politics are necessarily related," he has declined comment, saying the subject "should only be addressed with great care and great clarity."

Mondale has promised to address the subject of religion in a speech.

Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was promoting space age technology today with a visit to the Goddard Space Flight Center coinciding with the scheduled launch of the space shuttle Discovery.

The president was traveling to Greenbelt, Md., a suburb of the nation's capital, to visit the space flight center — one of seven NASA facilities — to tour technology exhibits and address the top ranking 500 of the center's 8,000 employees.

Goddard specializes in near-Earth orbiting space craft.

Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa has denied the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson's application for a visa to visit the white-ruled country, an embassy spokesman said today.

"Much to our regret, a visit to South Africa during 1984 by Reverend Jackson will be inopportune," said Pieter A. Swanepoel, the embassy spokesman.

"Should he, however, wish to apply for a visa at a later date, the application will be considered on merit, taking into account prevailing circumstances," the spokesman said.

Jackson, the black civil rights leader who failed in his effort to capture the Democratic presidential nomination, said when he applied for the visa Aug. 7 that he hoped to "facilitate a dialogue" that might lead to changes in the nation.

He visited the country in July 1979 and said he hoped to return this month with a delegation of ministers and other human rights leaders.

Ferraro

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro says she is tired of allegations being made about her family and campaign finances and, "I want this whole thing to stop."

The Queens congresswoman interrupted her campaign visit to the Tennessee capital to express indignation over a report in The Philadelphia Inquirer suggesting that Michael LaRosa, a man convicted of racketeering, had been responsible for an illegal corporate contribution to her campaign.

"The report in The Philadelphia Inquirer is totally inaccurate and I find it very offensive," Ms. Ferraro said in an interview Wednesday with local television reporters.

The congresswoman made no mention of the article during her stops before enthusiastic crowds at a town meeting in Cleveland and outdoor rallies in sweltering heat and humidity attended by 4,500 people in St. Louis and 1,500 in Nashville.

Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush is traveling today to Ohio to address a gathering of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters whose endorsement the Republicans hope to receive again this year.

Bush will speak to the union's executive board in Columbus, Ohio. President Reagan was originally invited but never accepted, according to White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Before Bush speaks, the board is expected to announce who the 1.9-million member union will back this year. In 1980, the Teamsters broke with most other major organized labor groups and supported the Reagan-Bush team.

Spokesmen for both Reagan and Bush have said the candidates would welcome the Teamsters' backing again this year. "We hope to have it again," Bush spokesman Peter Teeley said.

Government reports state that half the alcohol consumed in the United States each year is drunk by one-tenth of the population.

O'Connor Apparently Trying To Dodge Political Spotlight

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Geraldine Ferraro was selected as the Democratic vice presidential nominee, President Reagan pointed to Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor to show that Republicans were not lagging in advancing feminism.

But Mrs. O'Connor, apparently seeking to keep the high court out of partisan politics, is quietly resisting efforts to project her into the spotlight.

She has politely but firmly turned down efforts by Republican leaders to use her prominence as a symbol of the advancement of women in the party.

Mrs. O'Connor declined an invitation to attend a "Salute to Republican Women" luncheon at the GOP National Convention in Dallas last week, said Kathy Hunter, a spokeswoman for the National Federation of Republican Women. The federation sponsored the lunch, at which Nancy Reagan was the chief hostess.

Ms. Hunter said Mrs. O'Connor told the luncheon planners she "can't attend political functions because of her position" on the court.

Ms. Hunter said the GOP group did not think the invitation was out of order.

"We wanted to include all who are leaders in the political field. And she certainly is," Ms. Hunter said.

Mrs. O'Connor, who was appointed in 1981 by Reagan to be the first female on the high court, is vacationing in her home state of Arizona and could not be reached for comment.

Reagan and Vice President George Bush have brought up Mrs. O'Connor's name often when questioned about the effect of Ms. Ferraro's nomination by the Democrats.

When Walter Mondale announced just prior to the Democratic National Convention that he intended to make the New York congresswoman his running mate, Reagan took the opportunity to note his own choice of Mrs. O'Connor to the court.

"The day I appointed Sandra Day O'Connor to be the first woman member of the Supreme Court was one of the happiest days of my life," Reagan said on July 13.

"Their choice of a vice presidential nominee is historic," he said. "Why it's right up there with our putting Sandra Day O'Connor on the Supreme Court."

The convention luncheon that Mrs. O'Connor declined to attend was part of a day of activities that highlighted the role of women in the Republican Party and the Reagan administration.

There were earlier efforts as well — after Ms. Ferraro's nomination — to draw attention to Mrs. O'Connor. The White House tried to arrange a luncheon for Reagan and Mrs. O'Connor to take place a few days before the convention in Dallas.

But as the plans fell through, White House officials said Mrs. O'Connor was "out of the country."

The Supreme Court public information office said Mrs. O'Connor was in Arizona at the time.

The Republican National Committee also asked the Supreme Court to provide an official portrait of Mrs. O'Connor to be displayed at the convention. But the request was denied.

Toni House, the Supreme Court spokeswoman, said, "We turn down such requests routinely" if it has anything to do with politics.

"Our policy is not to give an aura of authorization" to the use of justices' likenesses, she said. "We do not provide them for obvious reasons."

Mrs. O'Connor, 54, a former Republican state legislator, was an Arizona state judge at the time of her appointment to the nation's highest court.

She and her husband, a lawyer, have been active party-goers in Washington, contributing to speculation that she has ambitions for national political office.

Supreme Court justices generally guard the limelight and carefully guard their privacy.

Mrs. O'Connor said in an interview last year with the American Bar Association's Journal magazine that she has no plans beyond remaining on the court.

"I have no next career step. This is it," she said.

Teachers' Strikes Affect 86,000 Students

By GEORGE KAUGH
Associated Press Writer

Teachers in North Chicago, Ill., rejected a 10 percent raise to join the more than 4,000 instructors in six states on strike today as picket signs replaced lesson plans and affected the start of school for 86,000 students.

Districts in Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Rhode Island also were hit by walkouts.

And in San Francisco, teachers and school officials were trying to settle salary grievances with 3,600 teachers who could disrupt the opening of classes next week for 62,600 students.

One strike was settled Wednesday night when 135 teachers at Thornton Community College in South Holland, Ill., approved a two-year contract. But the school's 10,000 students remained home today pending a ratification vote by the college board tonight.

About 175 teachers in North Chicago on Wednesday night declared a strike beginning today after rejecting a one-year contract offer that included a 10 percent raise. Seven other Illinois districts already were on strike.

Vernell Whitaker, president of the North Chicago Teachers Association, said the union wants a two-year contract containing a 10.5 percent pay increase each year.

Anticipating the walkout, school officials had already canceled today's opening of classes for 3,700 students.

More than 3,100 other teachers are on strike across Illinois in job actions that have affected nearly 57,000 students, including more than 29,000 in Rockford, the state's second-largest public school district.

In Rhode Island, the 56 teachers of the Exeter-West Greenwich Regional School District failed to show up for opening day of school Wednesday to protest the school committee's failure to appropriate funds for a 7 percent raise approved last year. The strike kept 960 students out of classes.

"We have a contract; we are not going to negotiate or mediate," said Ronald L. DiOrto, president of the National Education Association-Rhode Island, after a teachers meeting Wednesday.

The committee, facing a deficit of more than $300,000 for the coming year, recently voted to rescind the raise and instead pay the 1983 level. Voters twice have refused to fund the committee's budget requests.

State Education Commissioner J. Troy Earhart, who said he would seek a court order forcing the district to grant the raise, planned a hearing today on the funding issue, said Forrest Avila, an Education Department attorney.

About 5,700 students were staying home as five walkouts continued in Michigan. More than 260 other teachers have been on strike since Monday in four school districts, while 80 instructors have been off the job at Kellogg Community College in Battle Creek.

Meanwhile, negotiations were scheduled today in South Fayette Township School District outside Pittsburgh, where 72 teachers remained off the job in a salary dispute, extending summer vacation for 1,175 students.

"The money they're saying is in the budget just isn't there," school board President Leonard Fornella said of the union's wage demand.

The budget committee of the St. John the Baptist Parish School Board in Louisiana planned to meet Friday to consider demands of 350 striking teachers and 350 other employees who have been off the job since Tuesday.

Attendance by 6,100 students in the district's 15 schools was sparse Wednesday.

In Indiana, substitute teachers replaced 85 strikers at Liberty-Perry School Corp. schools, as talks were scheduled Friday. About 95 percent of the district's 1,450 students attended classes Wednesday, Superintendent Jerry Wolfe said.

Meanwhile, San Francisco's 3,600 teachers have not ruled out the possibility of a walkout in their dispute with administrators over pay.

A $244.8 million budget approved by the school board two weeks ago included a 1.5-percent pay raise.

A car parked on Beech Street near the West Third Street intersection was damaged when hit by a vehicle. Police estimated damages to the car owned by Stephen N. Sides of Goldsboro at $400.

Denise JoAnne Peele of Eastbrook Apartments told officers her car sustained an estimated $250 damage when it was struck by an unknown vehicle. She said the location of the accident is not known.

Record Enrollment

East Carolina University has a record enrollment of students on campus for the fall semester, Registrar J. Gilbert Moore announced today.

The official tally is 13,827 students, which is 470 above enrollment for fall semester last year or a 3.52 percent increase, Moore said.

Included in the total are 254 students in the school of medicine. In 1983, enrollment was 13,357.

Hunt Schedules Barfield Talks

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt will meet Sept. 18 and 19 with supporters and opponents of the death sentence for convicted murderer Velma Margie Barfield and will decide shortly thereafter whether to grant her executive clemency, a spokeswoman said today.

Hunt "intends to make a prompt decision after meeting with people on both sides of the case and giving thoughtful and careful consideration" to Mrs. Barfield's plea that her sentence be commuted to life imprisonment. "We are working now with Mrs. Barfield's attorney and the Robeson County district attorney's office in determining who should ... meet with the governor, ensuring that both sides are represented," said Mrs. Garrison.

She said she didn't know how soon after the meetings Hunt would announce his decision.

Mrs. Barfield, 51, was sentenced to death in 1978 for poisoning her fiancé, Stuart Taylor of St. Pauls. The U.S. Supreme Court this month refused to hear her latest appeal, and a Superior Court judge set her execution date for Nov. 2.

Defense attorneys already have notified Hunt's legal counsel that they intend to submit a petition for executive clemency. Mrs. Garrison said the petition probably would be submitted around mid-September.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Garrison said that between June 1 and Aug. 24 the governor's office had received 589 letters about the case. She said 106 favored executing Mrs. Barfield and 483 opposed it.

A total of 199 of the letters were from North Carolinians. Of those, 90 favored execution and 109 opposed it. Ninety-two letters came from other states and 298 from foreign countries.

to say that the action by the school of medicine is not illegal. He said components of the state university system are specifically exempted from the tenets of the Umstead Act to which Dr. Tucker referred.

Dr. Michael Weaver, president of the Pitt County Medical Society, said this issue will be on the agenda of both the Medical Society executive committee which meets Sept. 10 and the full Society which meets Sept. 13. He declined to comment about his feelings, saying, "The Medical Society includes virtually all the physicians in Pitt County — those in private practice and those employed by the Medical School. I do not feel ready to take a position at this time. I am trying to get all the information together for presentation before the Society Sept. 10 and 13."

Dr. Tucker said he does not know the amounts of medical school physicians' fees and Dr. Laupus said he is unaware of average private physicians' fees. Dr. Laupus said the discounting will be in central billing, that medical school physicians are paid salaries, not so much per patient seen.

Judge Tells Duke, Prof To Settle

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Warning both sides they had a lot to lose, a federal judge has urged Duke University and one of its black professors to settle their dispute over a $600,000 award in a racial discrimination suit.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank W. Bullock Jr. told the parties Wednesday they had until Sept. 12 to settle the case or he would decide it.

"That doesn't mean I'm going to split it down the middle," Bullock warned. "One party could win it all or one party could lose it all."

The case arose after a December ruling by arbitrator William J. Kennedy III, president of North Carolina Life Insurance Co. in Durham.

Kennedy's ruling gave Dr. Joseph Battle $100,000 in back pay due to "inadequate and discriminatory increases" between 1975 and 1983. Kennedy also gave Battle $500,000 for damage to his reputation, saying Duke had "real race relation problems."

Duke took the case to court in March.

David Adcock, assistant Duke legal counsel, argued Wednesday that Kennedy's ruling should be vacated because no agreement had been reached on his role.

"The role of Mr. Kennedy is so much in disagreement... the chasm was so wide that no meeting of the minds could have occurred," Adcock said.

H.M. Michaux, Battle's lawyer, said an agreement had been worked out in a series of letters between Battle and former Duke President Terry Sanford.

Overton's Sports Center Opens Red Banks Facility

Overton's Sports Center, specializing in equipment, accessories and clothing in various sports categories, has moved into its new 30,000-square-foot showroom, warehouse and office facility at 111 Red Banks Road.

The business, owned by V. Parker Overton, built new quarters after outgrowing the shop that housed Overton's Competition Skis on Jarvis Street.

Company officials joined Pitt-

Greenville Chamber of Commerce and area representatives for ribbon cutting ceremonies today formally opening the center for business.

The facility's 6,000-square-foot showroom provides display area for equipment and clothing for water and snow skiing, baseball, football, basketball, tennis, golf, archery, exercising, hunting (including guns and ammunition), and fishing. The marine department offers ski and sail boats, accessories and marine electronics. Skiing equipment is also available from the firm on a rental basis.

The sports center, which ships merchandise all over the world through telephone and mail orders, employs a staff of operators to handle telephone catalog sales. Overton's publishes a full-color catalog three times a year. The firm's in-house computer department utilizes 12 display terminals.

The new facility has a 14,000-square-foot warehouse and approximately 10,000 square feet in office and shipping space.

In addition to Overton as president, the staff includes H.L. "Boogie" Norris as general manager, Henry Bunn as national sales manager, Edward Biggs Jr. as marine manager, and Jimmy Wynne, retail sales manager.

New Spot For Welles

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The rotund image of Orson Welles has filled television screens for years touting the man who would "sell no wine before it's time." Now the maker of the movie classic "Citizen Kane" is putting his weight behind the state of Oregon.

Bill Taylor, Oregon's travel director, says the entertainer is taking part in the state's new radio and newspaper campaign aimed at bringing more tourists to Oregon during the fall months.

Retailers Post Moderate Gains

By The Associated Press
The nation's major retailers today reported moderate gains in August sales over the same period in 1983.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the biggest general retailer, said its sales rose 8.1 percent from August 1983. No. 2 K mart Corp. reported an 11 percent gain and No. 3 J.C. Penney Co. said its sales climbed 8.8 percent.

Chicago-based Sears said sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 29 totaled $1.78 billion compared to $1.65 billion in the year-ago period. For the fiscal year-to-date, Sears reported a 7 percent gain to $12.5 billion.

K mart, based in Troy, Mich., said its August sales were $1.53 billion, compared with $1.38 billion. For the 30 weeks since the fiscal year began in February, it posted a 7.7 percent gain to $10.8 billion.

Penney, headquartered in New York, said sales rose to $944 million in August from $868 million. It posted a 16.3 percent gain to $6.22 billion for the year so far.

Jeffrey Feiner, a retail industry analyst with the investment firm Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner &

Smith Inc., said, "The August sales reflected weak patterns early in the month, which were somewhat due to lower than normal shopping mall traffic, partially reflecting a higher level of consumer viewing of the Olympics, in addition to adverse weather in certain parts of the country."

"In the third week of the month, particularly in those regions of the country where schools started early, the back-to-school selling season

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today in a drifting late-summer session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.43 to 1,224.49 by noontime on Wall Street.

Losers held a narrow lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market has been sluggish and relatively quiet all week approaching the three-day Labor Day weekend.

The government's report Wednesday of a 0.8 percent drop in the index of leading economic indicators provided support for Wall Streeters' belief that the pace of expansion was cooling off.

Though it was generally taken as welcome news, the figure evoked little response from the credit markets. Open-market interest rates were mixed in light activity today.

Financial Corp. of America led the active list, down 1 at 5 1/8. A 1.07 million-share block traded at 4 1/4.

Atlantic Richfield rose 1/2 to 50 1/2 in active trading. Early this week the company said it planned to sell its metals and chemicals businesses and buy back 10 percent of its outstanding stock.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .13 to 95.92. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .24 at 214.59.

Volume on the Big Board came to 32.16 million shares at noontime, against 41.66 million at the same point Wednesday.

Harold Dean Harrelson of Nags Head was given the longest sentence of any of the group, being ordered to spend 20 years in jail in addition to being assessed a fine of $50,000.

The other 18 defendants were each given 14 years jail sentences and were also fined $50,000 each.

The 18 are: Rolando Bicente Tudela, Carlos Sosa, Anibal DeJesus Almanzar, Reineel Fonseca, Michael Tom Steeg, Heriberto Tellez, Jose Miquel Almanzar, Carlos Fernandez, and Carlos Sanchez Mesa.

Also, Silvio Alonza, Roberto Martinez, Miquel Ramon Alfonso, Louis Concepcion, Joe Steven Reed, Richard Joseph Van DeSteege, Udell Shieley Stevens, Juan Hernandez, and Elias Silvino Rivero.

Fernandez and Tudela gave addresses in Texas, and the other defendants gave addresses in Florida as their homes.

The lengthy case, with a total of 26 defendants involved, opened Monday, Aug. 20 with all of the 19 defendants tried with five juries seated to hear the case. All entered not guilty pleas at first, then later accepting plea bargain.

The remaining seven defendants of the 26 total will be tried at a later date at a time and place to be announced.

Nineteen of the men were arrested by state and local law enforcement officers near a boat landing site in Hyde County earlier this year, with a large quantity of marijuana being recovered by law officers during the raid. The other seven defendants were picked up at a later date following investigation.

The defendants were held during trial at state correctional facilities in Greene County and were bused to Williamston for the court proceedings.

Hernandez Helps Mets Keep Pace

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Keith Hernandez had seen the scoreboard and realized the New York Mets needed another victory to keep pace with the high-flying Chicago Cubs.

"With Chicago winning the way they have, the gun barrel has been pointed right between our eyes," said Hernandez, whose double in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the Mets a 3-2 victory Wednesday night over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Cubs had beaten Cincinnati 7-2 earlier in the day for their fourth consecutive victory, and the Mets had to match that streak just to stay within 5 1/2 games in the National League East. They had the right man in the right place at the right time. Hernandez, whose hit produced his 16th game-winning RBI to tie him with George Hendrick of St. Louis for the league lead, rifled a double into the left-field corner to score Danny Heep.

"This team's got guts," Hernandez continued. "We've risen to the occasion all year."

The latest victory, which gave the Mets a sweep of their three-game series with the Dodgers and a 9-3 edge for the season against Los Angeles, was a textbook example of clutch hitting.

First, with the score tied 1-1 in the seventh, Rusty Staub, with only one pinch hit in his last 22 appearances, doubled to score Mookie Wilson, whose hustle had just turned a routine single to right field into a double.

Then Heep, hitless in his last 19 at-bats as a pinch hitter, started the ninth against Pat Zachry, 5-4, with a bad-hop single. He scored all the way from first on the gamer by Hernandez.

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 2, Philadelphia 0; San Francisco 4, Montreal 3 in 11 innings; St. Louis 10, Atlanta 6; and Pittsburgh 4, Houston 2.

The Mets success has not been lost on the opposition, particularly Dodger starter Jerry Reuss, who allowed only five hits and one run in six innings.

"It seemed like the Mets were supposed to win from the very start," Reuss said. "Like it was God's will."

Reliever Jesse Orosco, 9-5, set the stage for Hernandez by blowing a 2-1 lead when he surrendered an eighth-inning home run to pinch hitter Candy Maldonado. Orosco was trying to protect the lead of starter Ron Darling, who had yielded just three hits in seven innings and struck out a career-high 12 batters.

Cubs 7, Reds 2

Chicago won for the ninth time in 11 games with Leon Durham leading the way with a home run, a single and three runs batted in. Bob Dernier broke an 0-for-20 slump with a homer that started a four-run third inning to give Rick Sutcliffe his 11th straight victory. He has a 13-1 NL record since coming over from Cleveland June 13.

The Cubs broke open a tie game in the third. Dernier reached Jeff Russell, 6-15, for his third homer. One later, Durham hit his 20th, a two-run blast.

Durham said he has been concerned with his wife, who was to have the couple's first child today through induced labor.

"I've been thinking about the family a lot, but I can put that behind me for three or four hours a day," Durham said.

Chicago's Ryne Sandberg had three hits, including a double and his major-league-leading 17th triple.

Padres 2, Phillies 0

Mark Thurmond's three-hitter cooled off Philadelphia, which had scored 30 runs in three games and 63 in the last eight. Thurmond, 11-7, who fanned two and walked one, retired the first 11 batters. Loser John Denny, 6-5, limited San Diego to just four hits in eight innings.

"When you get away with shutting these guys out anytime, anywhere, anyhow, that's something," Thurmond said.

Steve Garvey's double-play grounder and a sacrifice fly by Kevin McReynolds accounted for the scoring.

Cardinals 10, Braves 6
Willie McGee drove in four runs, three with a bloop double in the fourth inning and another in a five-run eighth as St. Louis whipped error-prone Atlanta. Trailing 6-5 in the eighth, the Cardinals used three hits and errors by pitcher Donnie Moore and second baseman Jerry Royster to spark their outburst.

"We hit some high choppers, for a muddy field," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said of the eighth inning in Atlanta. "If we'd been on Astro turf, they would have been doubles."

McGee's three-run double came when left fielder Brad Komminsk missed a diving try.

Rafael Ramirez drove in two runs with a single in the Braves' five-run fourth inning.

Giants 4, Expos 3

Catcher Bob Brenly hit the first inside-the-park home run of his major-league career as San Francisco headed Montreal its sixth straight loss, all by one run.

"My feeling coming around third base was 'I hope I don't have a heart attack,'" Brenly said of his 19th homer. "I didn't have enough left in me for a pretty slide, so I kind of tumbled across home plate."

He hit the first pitch from reliever Dick Grapenthin, 0-2, on the fly to right-center and center fielder Tim Raines missed a diving catch.

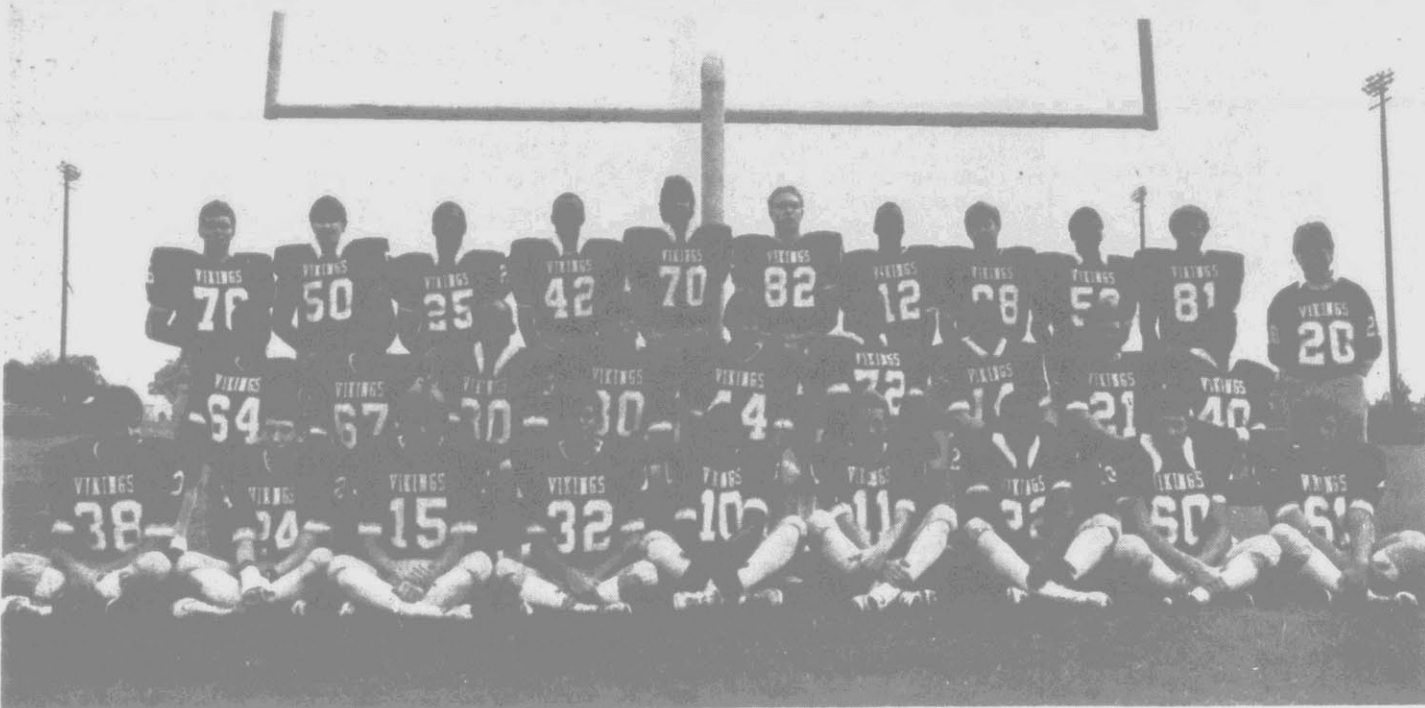

The Giants tied the game in the ninth when Expos third baseman Tim Wallach threw away Joel Youngblood's grounder, allowing Scot Thompson to score.

Pirates 4, Astros 2

Winning pitcher Don Robinson's RBI single in the ninth inning scored Marvell Wynne to lead Pittsburgh over Houston.

Wynne started the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second before Robinson, 3-5, singled to make a loser of Frank DiPino, 4-7.

Kevin Bass and Enos Cabell had run-scoring hits for the Astros.

Vike Work Encouraging

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — "We just have a situation where we don't have a lot of depth. As long as we stay healthy, we can be a good football team if we continue develop."

New D.H. Conley head football Coach Donnie Bunn has had to deal with just 27 players in the Vikings' camp, but the problem is nothing new to him. The former SouthWest Edgecombe assistant was with the 1983 Cougar squad which entered the state playoffs with 22 players.

But what he's seen so far at Conley has been encouraging.

"We were going into the scrimmage (last week) and didn't really know what to expect," Bunn said. "I saw that we were aggressive — that looked good."

"Our defense has picked up what we were trying to get across. We're still not satisfied, but they know what we want. We've made some strides, but we don't want that to be a peak."

run-oriented offense and a basic 5-2 defense, but even the philosophical changes have been accepted.

"That's been a very pleasant thing," Bunn said. "The boys have been very receptive to our ideas. I think a big factor has been our assistant coaches; they've done a whale of a job."

"We're not going to turn things around overnight, but we've made progress."

Joel Cox, a starter a year ago as a sophomore, has continued as the first string quarterback for the Vikings, while junior Shane Adams is challenging for playing time.

"Joel appears to have picked up our offense, but he still needs to work on execution of his assignments," Bunn said. "Shane Adams hasn't had the time at quarterback that Joel has, but he's coming around very well."

"The Conley 'full-house backfield' alignment will have sophomore Ricky Farrow, senior Derrick Parker and junior Martin Anderson at running back. Donald Blackwell (6-1, 201) and Sewell Mills are the leading candidates at fullback.

"Farrow is a hard-nosed runner and Parker has shown quickness, but Anderson has improved each day in practice and is more powerful," Bunn said. "You'll see each one of those on the field a lot."

"Donald Blackwell has the tools for fullback, but we'll use him at halfback also. Sewell Mills is a lot smaller (than Blackwell), but he does a much better job blocking. When he does the job, Blackwell shows signs of being a good blocker."

The offensive line features Gerald Harper, Brian Joyner and Clifton Clemons battling at tackle; Billy Crawford, William Mobley and James Alton Mobley at guard; and Ricky Rice and James Mobley at center.

"James Alton Mobley has been out with a knee injury, but he'll give us depth at two positions," Bunn said. "Here again, we don't have much depth. Gerald Harper is our most aggressive blocker. Joyner moved over from tight end, and we can see he's going to develop at that position."

Steve Mills, Leonard Johnson, William Faulkner and Roy Lewis are Conley's top receivers. All receivers will have to know both split and tight end, according to Bunn.

"Leonard Johnson is very aggressive, a good blocker," Bunn said. "Steve Mills has good speed, but we'll be using all four receivers."

"We're primarily a running team, but we want to throw the ball to keep the defense honest. Most of our passing will be play-action, roll-out type passes. Our offensive line has to be aggressive; we don't want them getting passive in a drop-back pass situation."

Joyner, Faulkner and Lewis share time at defensive end, while Harper, Clemons and James Mobley battle at tackle. William Mobley and Billy Crawford are the top candidates at nose guard.

IT'S A BETTER WAY!

McEnroe Plays One At A Time

NEW YORK (AP) — They like to talk about playing them "one match at a time." It's a cliché — but in John McEnroe's case, he takes it seriously.

McEnroe, the No. 1 men's seed in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, says he can't afford to look too far down the road to a potential semifinal showdown with third-seeded Jimmy Connors.

"With this type of ball, which is relatively quick, it's a little bit tougher to play a big server — and (Sweden's Stefan) Edberg is a good server," McEnroe said Wednesday, looking ahead to his second-round opponent on Friday.

"That's the best part of his game and that's going to help him in the long run because he really has a different serve than a lot of people.

... I would have preferred to have a really easy draw to whatever round it may be, but it's just going to test me earlier."

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world by the Atari-ATP Computer, was hardly tested in Wednesday's first-round match. He beat Colin Dowdeswell of Britain 6-1, 6-1, 6-1 while the unseeded Edberg, ranked 22nd, swept Larry Stefanki 6-4, 6-3, 6-0.

"I'm glad I got an easy match," McEnroe said of his opening-round against the 77th-ranked Dowdeswell. "I think it's good to get an easy one in the early rounds because it's tough to get through those without any sort of problems."

He wasn't the only highly seeded player to breeze to a straight-set victory Wednesday.

Connors, seeking to match McEnroe's mark of three consecutive U.S. Open victories, put away Matt Mitchell 6-3, 6-0, 6-2. "If I go out and play the kind of tennis that I'm capable of playing, then I've got a good chance to win anywhere," Connors said.

And when he was asked at a postmatch news conference whether he felt any undue pressure to maintain his U.S. Open winning streak, Connors replied: "I haven't had pressure since you guys wrote me off five years ago."

Also Wednesday, No. 2 seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the loser to Connors in the final each of the past two years, turned back Brian Teacher 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, and fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden defeated Canada's Glenn Michibata 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Martina Navratilova, the No. 1 women's seed, likewise had an easy first round, beating Lea Antonoplis 6-4, 6-2, and No. 4 Pam Shriver blitzed Beverly Bowes 6-0, 6-1.

All of the seeded men moved into the second round. No. 6 Jimmy Arias rallied to defeat Terry Moor 4-6, 6-4, 7-6, 7-6; No. 11 Juan Aguilera of Spain outlasted Hans Schwaier of West Germany 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4; No. 13 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia beat Robert Seguso 1-6, 6-1, 6-4, 7-5; No. 14 Anders Jarryd of Sweden swept John Frawley of Australia 6-4, 7-6, 6-4; and No. 16 Joakim Nyström of Sweden defeated Ricardo Acuna of Chile 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

A third seeded woman was ousted as No. 11 Kathleen Horvath fell 7-6, 6-0 to Susan Mascarin. It was Horvath who, at the Summer Olympic Games at Los Angeles, said she was ashamed to be an American after the crowd cheered her opponent, Sabrina Goles of Yugoslavia.

The rest of the seeded women here advanced — No. 5 Kathy Jordan, 6-0, 7-5 over Christiane Jolissaint of Switzerland; No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, 7-5, 6-2 over Amanda Brown of Britain; No.

9 Lisa Bonder, 6-1, 7-5 over Pilar Vasquez of Peru; No. 12 Bonnie Gadusek, 6-4, 6-4 over Britain's Annabel Croft; No. 13 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, 6-1, 6-1 over Candy Reynolds, and No. 15 Barbara Potter, 6-4, 0-6, 7-6 over Stephanie Rehe.

The recurring themes sung by the top seeds through the first two days here have been: (a) playing a "nobody" can be deadly; and (b) it's nice to survive the first round.

"When I was young and I played the top players," Navratilova said, "I was thrilled to be on the court and I played my best. I wasn't afraid of it. ... In a first match, you just try to win it in two sets and get it over with and go home."

Said Connors: "It's like no one really expects me to lose at this point. ... Sometimes they (unseeded players) play better because anytime they play me or Martina or any of the top guys, they really don't have anything to lose."

Said Connors: "They have no pressure on them at any time. On the other hand, I'm under the gun every time. But I like it that way; I don't mind that."

And Lendl observed: "You don't know how you are playing (at the opening of the first round), you don't know how he is playing. You don't know what to expect and you are not used to the court; you are not used to the stadium."

From Jan. 4, 1943, to Jan. 8, 1955, more than 12 years, Kentucky won a record 129 consecutive basketball games on its home court.

Moses Adds Yet Another Victory

KOBLENZ, West Germany (AP) — Seven years and 109 races later, Edwin Moses has yet to meet his match.

The two-time Olympic champion in the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdles clocked the year's world-best time in the event Wednesday, 47.32 seconds, at an international track and field meet here.

Moses was well below his Olympic gold medal-winning time of 47.75, but .30 second above his world record, which he set on this track last year.

Harald Schmid of West Germany, the last man to beat Moses and the bronze medalist at Los Angeles, finished second in 48.04, .15 faster than his Olympic time.

In the men's 800, Johnny Gray, who was the co-holder of the American record in the event, shaved nearly a second off the mark with a winning time of 1:42.95.

Olympic gold medalists Valerie Brisco-Hooks of the United States and Said Aouita of Morocco also posted victories.

Brisco-Hooks, the Olympic champion in the women's 200 and 400 and a gold medalist in the 400-meter relay, won the 100 in 11.08. Second was Diane Williams and third Kathy Cook of Britain, the Olympic bronze medalist in the 400.

Aouita, winner of the men's 5,000, switched to the 1,500 meters and won in 3:34.10, edging Omar Khalifa of Sudan and Jose Abascal of Spain, the bronze medalist in the 1,500 at Los Angeles.

Less successful Olympic champions were Alonzo Babers and Roger Kingdom of the U.S., and Rolf Dannenberg of West Germany, along with world record-holder Calvin Smith of the U.S. Each was beaten in his event.

Babers, champion in the men's 400, was nipped by countryman Ray Armstedt, 45.03 to 45.07, as Americans swept the first four places. Willie Smith was a close third and Walter McCoy fourth.

Kingdom, champion in the men's 110-meter high hurdles, finished a disappointing sixth in a race won by fellow American Tomie Campbell in 13.39. Kingdom's time of 14.28 was more than a second slower than his winning time of 13.20 at Los Angeles.

Dannenberg finished second in the discus behind countryman Alvin Wagner. Wagner's winning throw was 212 feet, 7 inches, while Dannenberg's best toss was 210-10.

Smith, whose time of 9.93 in the men's 100 is a world record, finished second to Kirk Baptiste of the U.S., the Olympic silver medalist in the 200. Baptiste clocked 10.30 to Smith's 10.34.

Britain's Steve Cram won the mile in 3:49.64, his fastest time ever, holding off John Walker of New Zealand by .09 second.

Another Briton, Tim Hutchings, easily won the 5,000 in 13:16.57, more than 11 seconds ahead of Stijn Jaspers of The Netherlands.

Jarmila Kratochvilova of Czechoslovakia, the world champion in the women's 400 and 800, raced to a comfortable victory in the 400 in 49.81.

Larry Myricks of the U.S. won the long jump, leaping 27-7 1/2, while American record-holder Willie Banks captured the triple jump at 57-0 1/2. The high jump was won by Francisco Centeles of Cuba, who leaped 7-5 1/4.

Two East European women — Susana Moravcikova of Czechoslovakia and Katalin Szalai of Hungary — beat U.S. silver medalist Kim Gallagher

Division Makes A Big Difference

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

What a difference a division makes. The Boston Red Sox beat the Minnesota Twins 4-0 Wednesday night, leaving both teams with 69-63 records. The Twins are leading the American League West by three games.

The Red Sox are fifth in the AL East, a whopping 17½ games behind Detroit. "I wish we were in it right now," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said when reminded of the disparity in the two divisions. Mike Easler delivered run-scoring singles with two outs in the fourth and sixth innings to help Boston match Minnesota's mark this season. "It's a little bit frustrating, and you think about it," Easler said. In other AL games, California clubbed Baltimore 7-5, Chicago hammered Toronto 8-5, Cleveland tripped Milwaukee 5-2, Kansas City beat Texas 4-1, Seattle stopped Detroit 5-1 and New York downed Oakland 4-1.

Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, who has lost a trio of four-hitters this season, pitched a two-hitter for the victory.

"You expect to lose some close games, but I knew things would turn around," said Boyd, 9-9. "I was really concentrating with men on base and making sure I didn't give them any fat pitches. "I love playing, I love pitching and right now I'm enjoying my season," he said.

The right-hander allowed only one clean hit — Kirby Puckett's line single that led off the fourth inning. The other hit came in the sixth when shortstop Jackie Gutierrez lost Tim Teufel's pop in the Metrodome lights and it fell for a single.

The Twins have lost four of their last six games and have scored just 12 runs during that time.

"We're due to break out," said Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner. "We'll bounce back tomorrow."

Mariners 5, Tigers 1
Rookie Mark Langston took over the AL strikeout lead while bedazzling Detroit with a two-hitter. The left-hander fanned 12 Tigers, boosting his strikeout total to 167, three ahead of California's Mike Witt.

Langston did not allow a hit after the second inning, when the Tigers took the lead on an RBI single by Rusty Kuntz.

Then, with the score tied 1-1 in the fifth at the Kingdome, Jack Perconte produced a one-out bunt single and Phil Bradley also singled. Alvin Davis blooped an RBI single and Ken Phelps followed with a three-run homer. Phelps' 22nd homer came off Dan Petry, 15-8.

The victory broke Seattle's five-game losing streak.

White Sox 8, Blue Jays 5
Greg Luzinski helped himself and his Chicago teammates get out of a power slump.

Luzinski, Carlton Fisk and Scott Fletcher each hit solo home runs as the White Sox scored as many as eight runs in a game for the first time since July 18 when they beat Detroit 10-6. All three home runs led off innings.

Luzinski's pinch-hit home run in the eighth was his 13th blast of the season, but his first since Aug. 7.

Floyd Bannister went six innings and raised his record to 12-8. Luis Leal, 13-4, took the loss.

Willie Upshaw and Buck Martinez hit consecutive homers for host Toronto in the fifth.

Royals 4, Rangers 1
Hal McRae homered and doubled as Kansas City continued its hex over Frank Tanana.

Tanana, 14-12, had won five straight decisions for Texas, but lasted just seven innings as his career record against the Royals sunk to 6-18.

Bud Black, 14-10, pitched a six-hitter for his fourth straight victory.

After Gary Ward's 16th homer put the visiting Rangers ahead in the top of the first inning, McRae's RBI triple tied it in the bottom half of the inning. Kansas City added two runs in the second and McRae hit his third homer in the third.

Angels 7, Orioles 5
It was a home run derby at Anaheim Stadium, where consecutive solo homers by Fred Lynn and Brian Downing with two out in the eighth won it for the Angels.

Both home runs came off Mike Boddicker, 16-9, who also surrendered a three-run blast to Rob Wilfong and a solo shot by Bobby Grich.

Eddie Murray's two-run homer, his 25th, touched off a four-run burst for Baltimore in the first inning. Murray has knocked in 102 runs this season.

Yankees 4, A's 1
Rookie Mike Pagliarulo and Ken Griffey hit solo home runs to lift New York in Oakland. Pagliarulo and Willie Randolph each had three hits for the Yankees. John Montefusco, 2-2, got the victory by allowing only four hits over 6-1-3 innings.

Oakland shortstop Tony Phillips made an error on what could have been an inning-ending double play in the fourth, paving the way to New York's first two runs.

Indians 5, Brewers 2
Cleveland is in sixth place in the AL East, and has won just 60 games. But the Indians can beat Milwaukee, which is in last place.

Joe Carter's RBI double sparked a three-run outburst that broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning and carried the visiting Indians to their sixth straight victory over the Brewers.

After Brett Butler led off the Cleveland fifth with a double and Julio Franco walked, Carter belted his double to left. The hit drove in Butler, and Franco also scored on the play after he suddenly broke for the plate when the relay from the outfield went to second base.

Gant Captures Darlington Pole

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — The last-time Harry Gant won the poll position for the Southern 500, he came in second on race day. This time, he's hoping to defy tradition and improve on that finish.

"Our best finishes have been (in races) with the best starts," said Gant, who pushed his Chevrolet-powered Grand National car to a top qualifying speed of 155.502 on Wednesday.

"We started on the pole here in '81," said Gant, an 11-year NASCAR veteran who hails from Taylorsville, N.C. "But due to my inexperience, we lost the race that day."

Now Gant, who has a lifetime record that includes four Winston Cup victories, is in the catbird's seat again for the 35th running of the Southern 500 at Darlington International Raceway.

He will share the front row on Sunday with Lake Speed, who turned the 1.366-mile oval with a lap speed of 155.080 mph. On the next row back will be Darrell Waltrip, whose speed was 154.846, and Neil Bonnett, who posted 154.685.

Fifteen cars, two abreast, were qualified Wednesday. Fifteen more will start today and the final 10 will be chosen Friday.

"That's by far the best we've run all day," said Gant, currently fifth in Winston Cup point standings. "I just ran it as hard as I could."

"The car feels ready to race... (but) I really didn't think our speed would be that fast."

While his qualifying speed set Wednesday's pace, Gant was well off Bonnett's Southern 500 record of 157.187 mph, a speed that entered the record books just last year.

But winning the pole at Darlington isn't necessarily an indication of more good things to come.

Benny Parsons won the coveted spot on the front row earlier this year for the TransSouth 500, also run at Darlington, but couldn't complete a full lap on race day.

Tim Richmond, who holds the track record posted in 1983 during TransSouth qualifying, lost his engine on the first lap that year and finished 35th.

Earlier, in 1982, Buddy Baker and David Pearson were on the inside of the front row at the TransSouth and Southern 500, respectively. Both finished last.

Overall, speeds posted in Wednesday's first round of qualifying were lower than anticipated and got lower as the track continued to heat up during the afternoon.

Gant, who was the driver to make a qualifying run, and David Pearson, who posted the ninth-best time, said the track seemed slower, in part because of some rough spots along the first turn.

"It seemed like it is a little bit rougher going into one," said Pearson, who has won the Southern 500 pole more often than any other driver. "In practice, everybody seemed to be running slower than last time."

The only mishap during the first day of qualifying came when Kyle Petty spun coming out of turn four and crashed head-on into the retaining wall separating the track from the pit area.

Petty, whose more-famous father Richard Petty has won the Southern 500 once, said he was unharmed.

Here are Wednesday's top 15 qualifiers for Sunday's running of the Southern 500 NASCAR Grand National classic at Darlington International Raceway:

- 1 Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 155.502 mph
- 2 Lake Speed, Chevrolet, 155.080

Pierre Gemayel's Death Clouds Peace Hopes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The death of Pierre Gemayel, the father of Lebanon's president and the country's most prestigious Christian leader, casts a further shadow on the already dimming chances to get this nation out of a nine-year civil war.

The death Wednesday of the 78-year-old Gemayel comes as President Amin Gemayel and his Syrian-backed prime minister, Rashid Karami, struggle to contain Lebanon's warring Moslem and Christian militias long enough to impose a security plan around Beirut.

It comes, too, at a time when the Christian community is precariously balanced between those who would follow the president's leadership and those who resist his move toward Syria following the collapse of the U.S. peacekeeping effort.

The departure of the elder Gemayel, who died Wednesday, reportedly of a heart attack, clearly makes it more difficult for the president to rein in younger elements of the Phalange Party, the dominant force among the country's Christians.

His death could ignite a power struggle within the party and strain the coalition Cabinet formed with leaders of the various factions to try to bring an end to war.

The young leaders of the right-wing Phalange control the Israeli-trained and supplied Lebanese Forces militia, and were outraged by the president's decision last March, under Syrian pressure, to scrap a U.S.-brokered pact calling for withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon.

They were kept in check by the enormous prestige of the president's father, who founded the Phalange

Party in 1936 and headed it until his death.

Pierre Gemayel managed to overrule leaders of the Israeli-backed militia and joined a coalition government formed in April to include factional leaders under Karami, a longtime ally of Syria and veteran Sunni Moslem politician.

It will be difficult to find a replacement in the Cabinet for Gemayel. To keep the Cabinet balance, Gemayel's replacement must be a Phalangist but there is no Phalangist leader who would be as capable of keeping the party's hard-liners in line. The choice, too, must somehow be acceptable to the Moslems and the Syrians.

Chamoun, however, has survived more than three decades as a leading Lebanese politician. His "Tigers" militia was virtually swallowed up by the Phalange Party, but he retained enough prestige that Pierre Gemayel had to share the overall Christian leadership with him.

Chamoun's strong working relationship with the Moslem community also will make it difficult for the Christian hard-liners to oppose him.

Within the Phalange Party — at least for the time being — the leadership question is decided.

When Pierre Gemayel became ill six weeks ago, he issued a statement naming party Vice President Elie Karameh as heir to the party's top post.

But Karameh, a physician by profession, has no political standing on the national scene and is little known outside the party bureaucracy. Party insiders say Karameh would be a figurehead who would hand over the party's helm to the president once the younger Gemayel completes his term in office in 1988.

Amin Gemayel, who acted under the wing of his father's prestige, now must face alone not only the enormous problems of the nation but those within his own religious community.

Moslems, Christians Unite In Mourning Fallen Leader

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Moslems and Christians united today in mourning Pierre Gemayel, the father of Lebanon's president and a dominant figure from the nation's fight for independence through its long civil war.

As preparations got under way for the burial, Gemayel's Phalange Party militia clashed with Druse fighters south of Beirut, and rival Moslem militias battled in Tripoli, bringing the death toll in that city to 23 in three days.

In much of Lebanon church bells tolled, flags flew at half staff and radio stations played sad music in tribute to the nation's most prestigious Christian leader, the fallen founder of the Phalange Party. He died Wednesday at age 78 of a heart attack.

Lebanon's Shiite Moslem warlord, Nabih Berri, and his Druse ally, Walid Jumblatt, offered their condolences in separate telephone calls to President Gemayel. Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem, praised Pierre Gemayel in a statement read over radio stations.

Arab heads of state and one Israeli leader expressed sympathy with the Lebanese people over the loss of Gemayel.

"I share your sadness over the loss of a father and a leading Cabinet member of your administration," Syrian President Hafez Assad said in a message of condolence to the Lebanese head of state.

King Hussein of Jordan and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak cabled similar messages, and Israeli premier-designate Shimon Peres issued a statement praising the elder Gemayel.

Cheddi Klubi, secretary-general of the Arab League, arrived to offer condolences, the state radio said.

The overnight battles near Beirut pitted Gemayel's "Lebanese Forces" militia against Jumblatt's Druse fighters in artillery and rocket duels in the Kharroub region northeast of Israel's defense line in Lebanon.

The hostilities broke a five-month truce in the region abutting Jumblatt's strongholds in the Chouf mountains. No casualty estimates were available in the battle, which police said ended at daybreak.

The government has declared a three-day national mourning for Gemayel, beginning today. His funeral was scheduled for this evening in Bikfaya, his mountaintop hometown where he died, 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

In his will, Gemayel wrote that he wanted to be buried at the family cemetery in a simple wooden coffin next to his slain son, Bashir, and Bashir's daughter, Maya, who was killed in a car bomb blast at age 4 in 1979, an official announcement said.

Bashir was elected president by Parliament in 1982, but was assassinated before his inauguration. His brother, Amin, was then elected president and has held the office for the last two years.

Pierre Gemayel's death casts a further shadow on the nation's already dimming chances of halting the nine-year civil war. Only former President Camille Chamoun, a fellow Christian and political rival, came close to Gemayel in national influence.

Lebanon's Shiite Moslem warlord, Nabih Berri, and his Druse ally, Walid Jumblatt, offered their condolences in separate telephone calls to President Gemayel. Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem, praised Pierre Gemayel in a statement read over radio stations.

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

almost every pair in the field bid to a slam in the major suit. Some lingered in six spades, others bid the grand slam. All found that, no matter what the lead, they could make only 11 tricks — there was no way to avoid the loss of two club tricks.

Only one pair managed to get to the minor suit slam. Their auction is shown above. Note that after East made a lead-directing double of four clubs, South did not feel constrained to bid on a minimum balanced hand. Only after the double fit had been uncovered did South cooperate in the search for slam with a heart cue-bid. North wasted no more time. He launched into Blackwood and, when South showed three aces, he bid the grand slam in diamonds.

West dutifully led a club, but 13 tricks did not prove to be much of a problem. Declarer won the ace of clubs, cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart high in dummy. Declarer returned to hand with a trump and ruffed another heart high. Now trumps were drawn, and five spade tricks brought declarer's total to 13 — five spades, one heart, four diamonds, one club and two ruffs.

Iranian Pilots Fly To Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — One of Iran's U.S.-made jetfighters landed at an Iraqi airport today and its two pilots requested and were granted political asylum, a military spokesman announced.

Meanwhile, Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council issued a statement saying it had released an unspecified number of Iranian POWs to mark a Moslem feast, and was inviting more Iranians to defect.

The unidentified military spokesman's communique, carried by Iraq's state media, said the plane was an F-4 Phantom jetfighter. The statement did not specify the air base at which the Iranian plane landed.

(Iran's official state radio, in reporting on the incident, used a Persian word that could indicate the plane was stolen or hijacked. The Tehran radio broadcast, monitored in London, said the plane was flown to an "unknown destination" in Iraq. It said the incident was "part of the propaganda program designed by world arrogance and the regime ruling Iraq.")

("World arrogance" is a term often used by Iran to mean the United States or another world power.)

It was believed to be the first Iranian jetfighter to fly to Iraq during the four-year-old war. Earlier this year, two Iranian air force pilots defected to Saudi Arabia on a mission to attack a Kuwaiti oil tanker in the Persian Gulf region.

Iraq's minister of culture and information, Latif Nsayyef Jassem, said Wednesday that Iraq is "ready to receive any Iranian plane" that requests landing rights in Iraq.

He made the comment two days after a young Iranian couple hijacked an Iran Air passenger jet with 206 people on board while it was on an internal flight between Shiraz and Tehran, the Iranian capital.

The Iran Air Airbus landed Tuesday at a southern Iraqi military air base. The passengers and the 11 crew members were released unharmed and were said to be on a government-sponsored "visit" to Iraq until they decide whether they want to return to Iran, according to official Iraqi statements.

The hijackers of the Airbus, identified as Behrouz and Ferechte, said they planned to ask political asylum in Iraq, according to Iraqi reports.

The Revolutionary Command Council, headed by President Saddam Hussein, announced it had "unconditionally and unilaterally released" an undisclosed number of Iranian prisoners of war "on the occasion of the greater Bairam," the four-day Moslem feast that began Wednesday.

Iraq invaded Iran in September 1980 in what it said was an attempt to end an old border dispute between the two countries, but which was seen largely as a struggle between Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime and the Iraqi president's socialist government.

The command council's statement said the released POWs were "free to choose either to return to Iran or seek refuge with any country that accepts them."

In an apparent invitation to Iranian troops to defect, the council statement said Iraq is "ready to release fighters of the Iranian armed forces who seek refuge with Iraqi forces..." It was the first time Iraq had made such an offer.

Iraqi war communiques often report that unspecified numbers of Iranian soldiers have defected to Iraq.

The decision to release the POWs, the council said, "stems from Iraq's deep understanding of the POWs' problem and the principles of Islam and international law."

The "inhuman practices and stands of the Iranian regime will not stop Iraq from pursuing humanitarian initiatives," the council statement said.

Shortly before the three-day Islamic feast of lesser Bairam last June, Iraq invited "families of the children Iranian prisoners to visit them in Iraq or any other country accepted by the International Committee of the Red Cross."

Such visits did not take place "because the Khomeini regime did not allow families of the children prisoners to leave Iran," Iraqi officials said.

Cold Threatens Coffee Prices

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A five-day cold snap is surprising residents of this tropical South American nation with frosts and freezing temperatures, and is threatening higher coffee prices for U.S. supermarkets.

The unusual winter weather has killed or damaged crops in the south and emptied beaches in Rio. At least nine people have frozen to death in Sao Paulo. Even in the Amazon jungle state of Acre, the mercury fell to 48 degrees.

Cold weather is not unknown in Brazil during the southern hemisphere winter months of June-August. But the extreme temperatures so late in the season are unusual.

Frosts in the key coffee-growing state of Parana have damaged trees that will produce next year's crop.

Rebels Retrieve Dropped Cargo

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S.-backed rebels fought off Sandinista troops and retrieved weapons and supplies dropped by a cargo plane just before it crashed, a government army commander said.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said at least 14 of the 300 rebels fighting for the air-dropped packages were killed in the one-day battle that ended early Wednesday. He said two government soldiers were also wounded.

"They got there before us and retrieved the packages," Lt. Victor Manuel Cruz, who commanded a Sandinista battalion in the action, said in a telephone interview. "We clashed with them later and fought it out with some clean shooting."

The plane, an old propeller-driven C-47, crashed and burned Monday 100 miles north of Managua, killing all eight crew members on board. The government said Sandinista soldiers shot it down, but a spokesman for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force rebels claimed it crashed because of engine trouble.

Wednesday night, the Foreign Ministry announced it sent Secretary of State George P. Shultz a note "energetically protesting" the supply drop, which it claimed was conducted by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The ministry communique said the plane, coming from rebel bases in Honduras, dropped nine packages of weapons, ammunition, food and medicines to anti-government fighters in the field.

Government spokesmen estimate about 8,000 rebels have been fighting in six northern provinces for almost two years in an effort to overthrow the leftist government.

A smaller rebel force, the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance with bases in Costa Rica, is active in the south.

The Reagan administration has been helping both groups with money, weapons and training, claiming the action is justified because of Nicaragua's huge military buildup with Soviet bloc help.

Administration officials also say that by helping the rebels, the United States is pressuring the Nicaraguans to end smuggling of military supplies to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

A Soviet-built MI-8 helicopter crashed Tuesday on takeoff from Waswili military base, five miles southwest of Matagalpa, a city 78 miles north of Managua, killing all three crew members on board.

A Defense Ministry communique Wednesday said the helicopter developed engine trouble, struck some electrical cables and burst into flames.

Meanwhile, about 1,000 high school students demonstrated against Nicaragua's compulsory military draft on Wednesday in Chinandega, 84 miles northwest of Managua. Teachers suspended classes to avoid clashes with pro-government youths who staged a counter-demonstration.

One demonstrator, 19-year-old Reynaldo Ramos, said students who opposed the draft carried signs reading: "We want to study and not go to military service."

"We went through the streets of the city, seeking support for our demand from parents," he said in a telephone interview.

The government introduced compulsory military service last September because of increased rebel attacks.

The Sandinistas, who seized power in 1979 by overthrowing a rightist pro-U.S. government, have scheduled general elections for Nov. 4. But major opposition parties have refused to participate, saying that restrictions on freedom of the press and other civil rights makes fair balloting impossible.

In El Salvador, troops reported killing 13 rebels in three battles in which one government soldier was also injured. A military source, who requested anonymity for security reasons, said 10 guerrillas were killed near Dulce Nombre de Jesus.

Legislative Study Focuses On Comparable Pay

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Equal pay for comparable work, which one supporter calls "the issue of the '80s" for women, is marching toward the top of the legislative agenda as business lobbyists keep a wary lookout.

Two years ago, a government study concluded that North Carolina should revise its employee pay classifications — which critics say underpays workers in jobs that females traditionally have held.

Now a legislative committee has been appointed to monitor an outside evaluation of the system, which House Speaker Liston Ramsey said will "determine that employees are classified properly and receive pay comparable to other employees performing similar duties."

The issue of pay equity sparks sharp debate because it pits free-market advocates against feminists who argue that working women receive only 60 cents for every dollar earned by men.

Some business observers are particularly concerned that if the equal-pay-for-comparable-work principle takes hold, its proponents will push for it in local government and ultimately in private companies that don't subscribe to the principle.

"I'm sure that would be their next goal," said Paul Lawler, director of fiscal and economic affairs for the 1,600-member N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, a research and lobbying group.

It's the free market, not discrimination, that determines what a particular job is worth, Lawler says.

Wrong, says Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, co-chairman of the legislative committee.

"You hear all the time about interference with the marketplace, but you're constantly doing that," she said. "It's happened throughout history, from slavery to child labor laws to the Chrysler bailout."

It's not at all certain that the current study will result in revision of the pay classification system, she said. That's something the Legislature would have to authorize, and it probably would cost at least $30 million.

"We're talking about something that will take five years to implement if the economy is good, and it may take 10 years or longer," she said. "The big thing is to get on with it."

Pay equity isn't the most highly publicized issue before the Legislature, but Mrs. Woodard says it's gaining momentum at grass-roots levels and soon will be impossible for politicians to ignore.

"It's huge," she said. "It is the issue of the '80s."

Indeed, 15 states have enacted laws requiring comparable pay systems for government employees. Another half dozen states in the last two years have passed resolutions seeking enactment of such legislation.

A federal judge in Washington ruled in December that the state discriminated against female employees in its compensation practices. The case has been appealed. The Supreme Court has not addressed the issue directly, although it ruled in 1981 that it was illegal to pay women less than men for doing the same work.

The Legislature appropriated $650,000 during the recent short session for an evaluation of the current pay classification system. The State Budget Office is developing a contract on which private personnel firms will be able to bid, and plans are for it to be awarded by Dec. 15. A report is due in 1986.

The evaluation will "ensure that North Carolina has a modern, up-to-date personnel classification system," said Mrs. Woodard.

She added that women wouldn't be the only beneficiaries. There also would be pay increases for prison guards, rookie highway patrol troopers, maintenance workers and others "who have had little or no political clout."

Lawler remains unconvinced. The solution for people with low-paying jobs, he said, is to find new jobs — which many women are doing.

"We're in a transitional period, where men and women will be competing for all levels of jobs," he said. "It's important that this be handled correctly. If we have a comparable worth system, women will be put in a gilded cage. A secretary will get her salary arbitrarily raised and might even end up taking a pay cut if she moves up the ladder."

Martin Disavows Release Attacking Edmisten Record

By The Associated Press

Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin has disavowed a press release by his campaign staff that charges his Democratic opponent, Rufus Edmisten, botched an investigation of highway bid-rigging.

Martin, campaigning in Greensboro Wednesday night, said he was "miffed" at his staff for issuing the statement without his approval.

The staff statement reiterates some of the charges which Martin made earlier this week, and it was unclear Wednesday night what Martin's objections were.

"I'm not going to discuss the release," he said. "It should not have been released."

The bid-rigging case to which Martin referred earlier this week involved Baxter Taylor, an Asheville contractor who pleaded guilty in the July case.

Martin charged that Attorney General Edmisten had "ducked and dodged" questions in the case heard before a federal judge this summer in Asheville.

Martin said the judge in that case, Woodrow Jones, had complained that the matter should have been tried in state, not federal court.

The press statement from Martin's staff quotes the Republican candidate as saying: "Judge Jones does law enforcement for a living, and he certainly knows what he's talking about. Rufus ducked and dodged, but he still hasn't answered the real questions. What did he know? When did he know it? Why didn't he do something about it?" The statement also said that at "the state level the bid-riggers were able in civil settlements to buy their way out as they had bought their way in."

In an interview, Martin repeated some of the themes outlined in his staff's statement, saying Edmisten was lax in his efforts to catch highway bid-riggers.

"He's the attorney general. He just misevaluated it. He didn't do his job. He needs to explain what his reasons were" for letting federal authorities prosecute the case.

Edmisten's press spokesman, Dan Hoover, defended the attorney general Wednesday night and expressed glee with the apparent confusion in the Martin camp.

"They haven't got their act together," Hoover said.

Hoover said the bid-rigging case was handled by federal, not state authorities, because they had much better evidence.

Martin also says recent aerial searches for marijuana plants were sparked by his criticism of Edmisten, but Edmisten says that proves Martin knows nothing about law enforcement.

The North Carolina National Guard and the State Bureau of Investigation conducted the searches over several counties last weekend. It was the second series of probes this summer, and resulted in two arrests and the seizure of 71 marijuana plants.

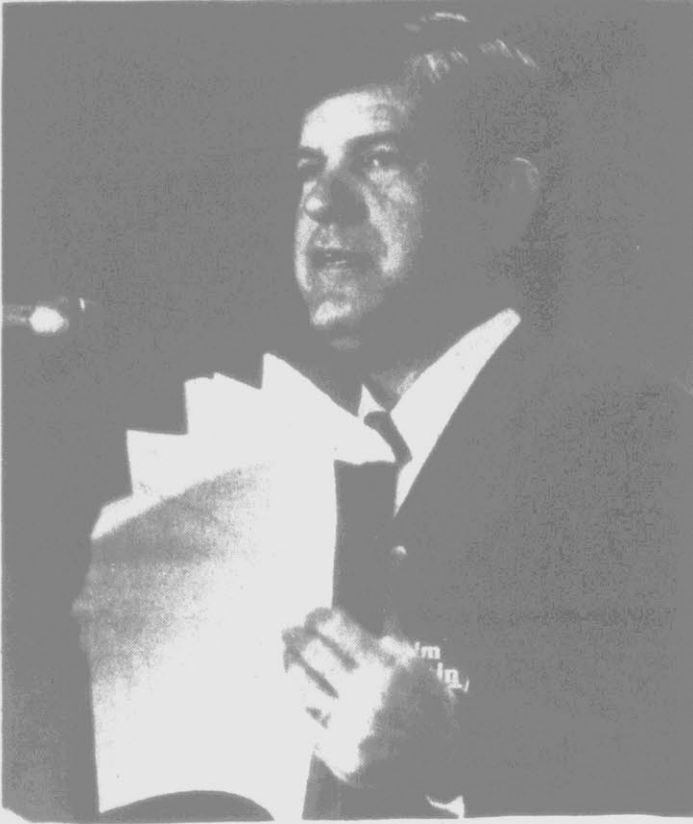

Martin issued a statement this week saying that the searches showed Edmisten "has finally figured out what we've been talking about."

Martin said he had proposed in April that resources of the SBI, National Guard and local law enforcement agencies be combined to combat drug trafficking and abuse.

Reports that the aerial searches have begun "remind us that there may be no end to the good you can do so long as (Edmisten) gets the credit," said Martin.

"That is so funny," Edmisten said in a Raleigh interview Tuesday.

"This is further proof that Mr. Martin doesn't understand anything about law enforcement or marijuana eradication. He doesn't know what he's talking about."

Edmisten said the federal government didn't permit the joint operations until April 23, and that several months of training were required before beginning the searches.

He added that it wouldn't have made sense to search earlier because marijuana plants hadn't matured.

"You want to wait until the plants have grown," said Edmisten. "That's when you can hurt the growers the most."

Meanwhile, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., spoke to about 120 senior citizens at a senior citizen complex in Charlotte.

Pepper, himself an 83-year-old champion of gray rights, stirred the seniors with a rousing cheer.

"I am," he said as seniors chanted back, "proud to be a senior citizen. I will work and vote to make life better for the senior citizens of America."

Introducing Pepper, 9th District congressional candidate D.G. Martin called him "young in spirit, young in drive, just like you all are."

Meanwhile, Gov. Jim Hunt and Sen. Jesse Helms are continuing their campaign for Helms's seat — but in different ways.

Hunt is mixing his official duties with a heavy schedule of appearances. He visited Robeson and Cumberland counties Tuesday, and planned to spend today politicking in Guilford County.

Consultants Help Streamline Courts

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Court officials say input from an outside group is helping to update the court system and make justice a little swifter in North Carolina's most populous county.

Two years ago, a case in Mecklenburg County Court could routinely be held up for four years before reaching trial. The backlog had piled up for years, and by 1976, only four of every five civil cases filed in Mecklenburg Superior Court were disposed of in a year.

Similar backlogs were developing in other courts.

In 1981, after a rash of break-ins threw many people into the court system for the first time, complaints began to mount.

That year, the county hired the Courts Technical Assistance Program of the American University

Law School in Washington to study the county's justice system.

It found that at the end of 1982, cases in Mecklenburg Superior Court's civil division were an average of 387.4 days old. District court's criminal division was 7,853 cases behind, and the average case was 176 days old.

"The system was designed 100 or 200 years ago," said John A. Tate Jr., who heads a five-member Citizens Criminal Justice Commission named as a result of the university study. "A lot of it just doesn't make sense. It needs some basic changes. It was designed for a different era. Obviously, the system was designed for a smaller county — a lot smaller than Mecklenburg."

Figures from the North Carolina Administrative Office of the Courts in Raleigh show cases are now being disposed of more quickly. The average time for disposing of cases in the fiscal year which ended in June was 81.5 days. In the previous year, it was 103.6 days.

The commission's five business and community leaders are credited with bringing outsiders' views to the courts' problems. It was their mission to focus the critical eye of outside expertise on ways to keep the court system from being crushed under increasing loads.

Part of the problem the justice system faces, said senior resident court judge Frank Snapp, is "trying to break some habits, some ways we have done things for years."

But the system is changing. In November 1983, Mecklenburg residents passed an $11.1 million bond issue for a new courthouse, and officials say architects are working to make sure the new structure meets the needs of the justice system.

One tentative feature would be a computerized intake center that would speed a criminal in three hours through processes that now take days. It would include provisions for fingerprinting, drug tests and identification checks.

Computerized records that show prior convictions and the seriousness of the crimes would help a magistrate determine bond. An assistant district attorney would be available to determine if the suspect were arrested properly and whether the courts had a reasonable chance of convicting him. A public defender would be there in case the defendant needed an attorney and could not afford one.

Court Rejects Bid For Milk Royalties

RALEIGH (AP) — Employees do not have to be paid royalties for products they invent on the job, using company equipment and time, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

The ruling came Tuesday in the nine-year legal battle of Marvin L. Speck, a retired professor of food science at North Carolina State University. Speck has been trying to obtain royalties from the sale of Sweet Acidophilus milk since 1975.

Speck and Stanley E. Gilliland, an Oklahoma State University professor, developed the milk in the early 1970s. It contains a lactobacillus acidophilus bacteria, which aids in digestion but usually gives milk a sour taste. In 1972, Speck and Gilliland told university officials they had developed a process to prevent the acidophilus milk from tasting sour.

The milk was marketed in the mid-1970s and is now sold by Pine State under the name Sweet Acidophilus.

Speck and Gilliland filed suit against N.C. State University in 1981, asking for $500,000. Documents in the suit show that the N.C. Dairy

The university appealed the ruling and the N.C. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the case was properly dismissed in Wake Superior Court.

Justice Burley B. Mitchell Jr. wrote in the opinion that Speck and Gilliland had no trustee relationship with the university because the process used to develop Sweet Acidophilus belonged to the university.

Baptist Leader Declares 'Holy War' On Inerrancy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A leader in the Southern Baptist conservative movement has called for a debate on biblical interpretations raised by a seminary president.

Dr. Paige Patterson, one of the two main organizers of the inerrancy movement within the Southern Baptist Convention, issued the debate challenge in response to a "holy war" declared against the movement.

Dr. Roy Lee Honeycutt, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary here, said Tuesday he called a "holy war" because of "my conviction that unholy forces are at work in our midst — forces which, if left unchecked, will destroy the essential qualities of both our convention and this seminary."

He said fundamentalists were destroying the denomination's heritage.

Patterson, president of the Criswell Institute of Biblical Studies and associate pastor of First Baptist Church in Dallas, asked for the debate after hearing Honeycutt's charges.

"I would love to meet him at a neutral site in a public debate to discuss these questions, with the secular press present," Patterson said.

Honeycutt said he won't debate but proposed a conference at which the two groups would present their positions in scholarly papers.

Honeycutt, in his third year as president, said Tuesday during the seminary's 125th convocation, that the fundamentalists are "seeking to hijack the Southern Baptist Convention."

The Louisville seminary, the oldest Southern Baptist institution, has been a target of fundamentalists, who declared in 1979 that they would take over the convention's presidency and its institutions in 10 years.

His address, he said afterward, was the first effort to replace the Rev. Charles Stanley, a fundamentalist elected in June, with a moderate president at the next convention in Dallas.

The fundamentalists believe in biblical inerrancy, which is the belief that the Bible's original texts were without error.

Patterson said he did not rule out taking part in the consultation suggested by Honeycutt, but he said scholars talking to scholars would not resolve anything "as far as the grass-roots people are concerned."

"If there's really a question about theology in Southern Baptists today," Patterson said, "why not take it to the people in an open forum where the people who want to come could get into it?"

Patterson said Honeycutt's charges would only serve to polarize Baptists.

Client Fund Established

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court Wednesday issued an order establishing a client security fund that will be used to reimburse victims of embezzlement by lawyers, according to a news release issued by the court.

As of Dec. 1, 1984, each active member of the N.C. State Bar must pay $50 a year to the fund, the order says. Embezzlement victims will be reimbursed "in whole or in part" by the fund, according to the news release.

The fund will be administered by the N.C. State Bar Council through a Client Security Fund Board appointed by the council, the release said.

"Lawyers in North Carolina handle millions of dollars each year, the property of their clients," Clifton Everett, president of the N.C. State Bar said recently. "This is a trust granted to the profession by the public, and every member of the profession has a duty to protect this trust, to discover and punish violators of this trust, and to provide some remedy to those who are victims of such violations."

The petition to set up the fund was filed with the state supreme court April 13 by the state bar.

Contamination

LAURINBURG (AP) — Evidence of possible gasoline contamination near a former truck stop outside Laurinburg has prompted a Scotland County's health director to advise residents of a housing development not to drink their well water.

Lucille Bridgeman, a Scotland County health official, said a state testing laboratory had identified "gasoline hydrocarbons" in three wells serving residences close to the former U.S. 401 truck stop, which is now used as a trucking company terminal.

A&T Says Nursing Plan Works

GREENSBORO (AP) — An 88 percent passing rate on the national nurses licensing exam shows that the master plan for nursing has been successful at North Carolina A&T University, Chancellor Edward B. Fort says.

Seven of the eight A&T graduates taking the exam in July passed.

Just three years ago, only 13 percent of A&T nursing program graduates passed the exam and the school was put on probation by the National League of Nursing, which accredits nursing schools.

The State Board of Nursing also issued a warning to the school, and there was danger it would close.

Fort praised the leadership of School of Nursing Dean Marrietta Raines, saying she had "provided superleadership."

Ms. Raines credited the efforts of the nursing school faculty and the school's administration, especially Fort, for being willing to commit the "resources and environment" needed for the improvement.

Ms. Raines has been dean of nursing since 1981. The turnaround in nursing school scores has taken place under her administration.

Classes have been small in recent years because Ms. Raines said she has been screening applicants to the school more carefully.

But she said Wednesday that she hoped the continued improvement in test scores would enable the school to gradually begin to increase enrollment.

Only one school in the state,

Winston-Salem State University, scored a 100 percent passing rate on the July exams. Winston-Salem State and N.C. Central University, were also warned a few years ago that they were in danger of losing their nursing schools if their test scores did not show dramatic improvement.

N.C. Central had a 76.6 percent passing rate on the July exam, a score which also showed improvement from previous years.

Other schools in the university system and their results on the July examination include: UNC-Greensboro, 94.6 percent; UNC-Chapel Hill, 84.9 percent; UNC-Charlotte, 75.6 percent; East Carolina University, 88.4 percent; Western Carolina University, 84.7 percent; and UNC-Wilmington, 94 percent.

Celebration

RED SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Residents of this southeastern North Carolina community are planning a December celebration to thank those who helped them after tornadoes ravaged the area on March 28.

Charles Lewis, a local insurance agent and an organizer of the celebration, said the Dec. 7 Christmas celebration would start with a 3 p.m. parade followed by entertainment, food and "fun throughout the downtown area."

"In the last few weeks, we have been pictured as a town struggling to rebuild," Lewis said. "This parade is the beginning of our positive attitude about Red Springs. Besides, a town is made of its people, not its buildings."

Mayors of all the towns that helped during the crisis and representatives of many other groups have been invited to the celebration, Lewis said.

There will also be a special room set aside for the public to view pictures of the tornado damage.

"We've had many requests for this exhibit," he said.

"Our parade will have the usual old cars, floats, clowns and Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, but it will have something that no other parade in America could ever offer ... a spirit of renewal that we would like to share," Lewis added.

PBS To Air 'Adam Smith's Money World' On Sunday Night

By TOM JORY

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Once there was a connection between missing anchovies and the price of grain, and Adam Smith knew about it. Smith — not the 18th century British economist, but George J.W. Goodman, the American writer who borrowed the name in 1966 — probably didn't discover the relationship, and certainly wasn't the only one aware of it. But it does illustrate the way he thinks. Smith described the chain of unlikely circumstances involving Peruvian fishermen, European cattlemen, American grain dealers and the Russians in "Paper Money," the most recent of his three best-sellers on global economics. Now, he's taking his unique brand of journalism to television in a weekly series called "Adam Smith's Money World," and, he says, it's not easy. "It's hard, because you have to convert what is abstract information into something that is visual," Smith said. "And everything I think of they tell me can't be done. 'I'll tell you what they told me: What you just said cost $30,000. Think of something else....'" The weekly, half-hour series premieres Sunday night on many public television stations. Goodman, a Harvard graduate and Rhodes Scholar, wrote a novel instead of a Ph.D. thesis that was published as "The Bubble Makers." He worked on Wall Street, first as a magazine editor, then as a securities analyst and fund manager, and continued to write fiction. He took his pseudonym — and we'll call him that from now on — for a column in the New Yorker magazine that first appeared in 1966. "Adam Smith's Money World" is his first up-to-the-neck involvement in TV, and he says the objective of the show will be to keep the focus as current as possible. "I used a phrase in 'Supermoney' that's quite old now," he said, referring to the book he wrote in 1972. "It came from the days when the British owned almost everything, including Moscow Power & Light. They would get these reports from all over the world on the weekend, and ask themselves, 'What do we do Monday morning?'" "I want the show to have that feeling," he said. "We will try to give the people information to start the new week. What can you do with what you now know?" That's the basis for what Smith calls a "Big Picture-What If?" format. Each program will begin with a background piece explaining and updating the issue, followed by a studio discussion on the same topic: "What if the economic boom turns to bust?" Or, "What if the price of oil falls to $15 a barrel?" The "Big Picture" portion of the program will try to illustrate the abstraction. "That's the hard part," Smith said, "because these are the kinds of things that will make your eyes glaze over. If you give them the option of watching the Olympics or watching the deficit, most people will take the Olympics. I would. 'Why should more than three people watch this show?' he asked. 'Well, everybody interacts with the economy every day. You and it have things to do with one another, whether you want to or not. So my job is to illustrate the connections that people don't see — like the anchovies and the price of grain.'" For a piece on the strength of the dollar overseas, for instance, Smith was on his way to the Caterpillar Co. plant in Peoria, Ill. "You say 'strong dollar' and it sounds good to people. You see a bunch of tourists throwing money around, and that's true," he said. "But there's more to the story: no one overseas is buying heavy equipment, and it's more important that people stay at work in Peoria and a thousand other places than travel abroad." Panelists for the "What If?" segment will be selected on the basis of the subject at hand, although there will be frequent contributors like economist Henry Kaufman; Alan Greenspan, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, and Felix Rohatyn, chairman of New York's Municipal Assistance Corp.

Smith said he would try to maintain the lively touch that characterized his three books on the economy, the two aforementioned and "The Money Game," published in 1968.

"I hope it's user-friendly," he said. "You can control what's in a book, but this is something else."

AFTER A HARD DAY'S PLAY — There's nothing like a nap of exhaustion to restore a youngster's energy and 3-year-old Renee Hope Collins of Greenville shows just how comfortable one can be. She fell asleep before her mother could get her properly situated for a nap. She is covered by a small blanket which she calls "my favorite thing." (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

President Vetoes CPB Budget Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing an "urgent need" to cut government spending, President Reagan has vetoed a budget authorization bill designed to assure the growth of public broadcasting through the 1980s. The bill, vetoed late Wednesday afternoon, would have established new and substantially higher ceilings on the amount of money that Congress could appropriate for public broadcasting in fiscal years 1987, 1988 and 1989.

In a written message to the Senate, the president said the bill contemplated "too much, too fast" for the nation's public radio and TV stations and was "obviously excessive."

"When all of the demands on the federal budget are taken into account, increases in spending on public broadcasting of this magnitude contemplated by this legislation cannot be justified," Reagan said.

"They are incompatible with the clear and urgent need to reduce federal spending."

The vetoed bill would have authorized spending of $238 million in fiscal 1987, rising to $253 million the following year and to $270 million in fiscal 1989. Reagan had previously recommended $100 million in spending authority in 1987, $85 million in 1988 and $70 million in 1989.

The Senate had approved the authorization bill Aug. 10 by a unanimous voice vote. It cleared the House earlier by a margin of 302 to 91.

The veto will not have an immediate effect on the Corporation for Public Broadcasting because it only extends the agency's authority to continue receiving federal money.

Because of a unique system of advance funding established by Congress for CPB, the vetoed bill set maximum spending ceilings for the last three fiscal years of the decade. CPB, the non-profit corporation created to oversee the distribution of federal funds to public broadcasting, has already won appropriations of $137.5 million for the current fiscal year, $150.5 million in 1985 and $159.5 million in 1986.

Since taking office, Reagan consistently has urged a reduction in federal funds for public broadcasting and has succeeded in persuading Congress to slash CPB's appropriation from $172 million in fiscal 1982 to $137 million in fiscal 1983.

CPB officials successfully argued during congressional hearings this summer those cuts had been too deep.

Latest Bo Derek Film Will Run Without Any Rating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When is an X-rated film not an X-rated film? When it's not rated at all, as is the case with "Bolero," an erotic adventure from Bo and John Derek that opens Friday in 1,022 U.S. and Canadian theaters.

"Bolero," described in radio ads as showing more of Ms. Derek than Playboy magazine did, will not have a rating from the Motion Picture Association of America Classification & Ratings Board.

Cannon Films, which produced "Bolero," decided not to seek the rating because of unofficial word that the film would earn an X — a classification that makes it difficult to book a film into first-run theaters and to promote it through ordinary channels.

Cannon is not an MPAA signatory and therefore has no obligation to seek a rating.

"There are exhibitors and there are radio and television stations that have a firm policy against advertising X-rated films," said Micky Hyman, Cannon's chief operating officer. "We wanted to ensure the public has an opportunity to see the movie, enjoy it and make their own decisions on it."

"The film is a love story," he added. "But we don't think it's a dirty movie or a pornographic movie."

Cannon, which is also distributing "Bolero" through its newly formed Cannon Releasing Corp., already has begun a massive print and broadcast advertising campaign for the $7 million, 110-minute film.

"Bolero" was written and directed by Derek, and produced by Ms. Derek, who stars as an adventure-seeking 1920s heiress.

The film originally was to have been distributed by MGM-UA, which had a distribution deal with Cannon until a few months ago. But even before that arrangement ended, MGM-UA had said it would not release the film because of the expected X-rating.

Newspaper ads billing the film as "An Adventure in Ecstasy" show Ms. Derek in a Lady Godiva-esque pose on a horse, tresses tumbling over her chest, superimposed alongside a dreamy close-up of her face.

Where the rating might ordinarily appear, the ads bear the small boxed warning that "Due to the adult nature of this motion picture, no one under 17 will be admitted" — the same restriction that applies to films rated X by the MPAA.

"We didn't want to mislead the public," Hyman said. "There is erotic love-making in the film. We're not trying to hide that."

Among the publications that have run the ads are the Los Angeles Times and the New York Times.

New York Times spokesman Leonard Harris said the newspaper places severe size and content restrictions on advertising for most X-rated films. When a film is unrated, the newspaper's Advertising Acceptability Department reviews the ad to make sure it contains nothing objectionable.

Khadafy Marks Coup Date By Saying U.S. Tried Kill Him

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Moammar Khadafy has accused the United States of "working day and night to liquidate the Arab nation," and said it has even attempted to kill him.

The United States has sent terrorists and assassination teams under instruction from the Central Intelligence Agency "to freely move to get rid of the leadership of this revolution, using poison and electronic equipment which are the lowest and most barbaric means," the 42-year-old Libyan leader said Wednesday.

He made the accusations in a brief speech to delegates from around the world who are in Tripoli to help commemorate the 15th anniversary of the coup that brought him to power Sept. 1, 1969.

Wearing a dark green safari-like suit, he described the efforts of his revolution to turn the yellow desert of his country into a green garden. Green is the symbolic color of Islam and of his revolution.

"But the enemies of the color green, of freedom and life ... headed by enemy of humanity, the murderer of peoples and annihilator of races, the United States ... is working day and night to liquidate the Arab nation," he said in Arabic. An English translation was provided by the official JANA news agency.

The radical Arab leader said the United States tried to destroy American Indians, black nations, Palestinians and the Lebanese, and is now "preparing to swallow the rest of the peoples of the Arab nation."

Khadafy did not give specifics. His comments apparently referred to an unsuccessful May 8 attack in Tripoli that was aimed at him. He previously accused the fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood of launching the attack with U.S. aid.

The speech drew long rounds of applause and cheers from several hundred delegates gathered in the assembly hall of the Labor Education Institute in downtown Tripoli.

The typically fiery speech by Khadafy, who was dripping with sweat by the time he finished, was a buildup to his traditional Sept. 1 address in the downtown Green Square.

Khadafy and 11 other junior officers seized power in a bloodless coup while King Idris was out of the country. He has changed Libya into a socialist stronghold where education and medicine are free.

The United States says Khadafy is a leading backer of worldwide terrorism, and a number of expatriate opponents of his regime have been assassinated.

Egypt, which backs non-Arab Iran in its war against Iraq, has said

Libya is a prime suspect in the mining of the Red Sea. Explosions have damaged at least 18 ships in the Red Sea since early July.

Sinatra Quits

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey-bred Frank Sinatra says this isn't his kind of town anymore, blaming a state casino commissioner for insults that prompted the entertainer to cancel his appearances at a gaming hall.

On Wednesday, Sinatra's attorney, Milton Rudin, announced that the entertainer "has decided he will not perform in a state where appointed officials feel the compulsion to use him as a punching bag."

Rudin was referring to casino commissioner Joel Jacobson's reference to Sinatra as "an obnoxious bully" in connection with a blackjack game in which cards were dealt illegally to the entertainer and Dean Martin. Casino workers said they were intimidated by Sinatra.

Cameroon Jet Catches Fire; 2 May Be Dead

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — A Cameroon Airlines passenger jet caught fire today as it prepared for takeoff from the city of Douala, and National Cameroon Radio said two people were killed.

The radio report did not say how many of the reported 119 people aboard the Boeing 737 were injured.

Earlier, the French news agency Agence-France Presse quoted unidentified sources as saying up to 100 people were killed. And a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said he had been told there were injuries but no deaths in the fire.

"We understand that the aircraft was badly damaged and that some people were hurt, but we hear that nobody was killed," said William Milam, the charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Yaounde, political capital of the West African nation.

Milam said U.S. consular officials in Douala, Cameroon's economic capital, were at the scene of the fire.

The nationalities of the plane's passengers and the cause of the fire were not known.

Unofficial sources in Yaounde said the plane caught fire as it taxied on the runway of Douala's international airport, preparing to take off for Yaounde, 150 miles away.

Cameroon Airlines's Paris office confirmed there had been an accident on the plane, but provided no other information.

Soviets Step Up Effort To Cut Out Swindling

MOSCOW (AP) — The former KGB chief who was appointed two years ago to crack down on corruption says more policemen have been assigned to deal with continuing swindling in the Soviet economy.

The late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, who promised to deal sternly with corruption in the Communist system, appointed Vitaly V. Fedorchuk as Interior Minister in December 1982. The post is among the Soviet Union's top law enforcement jobs.

Andropov, who took power in 1982, died last February.

In an interview with the weekly Literary Gazette on Wednesday, Fedorchuk cited corruption in agriculture, transportation and the food industry, and blamed alcoholism or drunkenness for most crime and a third of all traffic accidents.

Fedorchuk's said his Interior Ministry, which rules a vast network of uniformed police and more than 13 million volunteers known as "druzhinniki," was working as promised last year to halt corruption and solve more crimes.

The number of officers investigating theft of state property has been increased 25 percent so they get out on the streets and track down criminals and "don't spend all their time in police offices," he said.

The minister and his interviewees reiterated that police are cracking down on black marketing on streets, at private farmers' markets and in trade organizations.

One interviewer disclosed that about 100 people were recently sentenced in Kiev for swindling in trade organizations. He did not elaborate.

Fedorchuk said the Soviet countryside was one area where anti-crime efforts needed strengthening. He said statistics indicate that in an area near Tula, 75 miles south of Moscow, about $7 million was lost in agriculture through mismanagement and embezzlement over an undisclosed period.

He said embezzlement was a fixture in much of the food processing industry, citing a meat processing plant in the northern Caucasus where, he said, all chief personnel were "plunderers."

Transportation, a sector singled out for improvement during Andropov's time in office, continues to be plagued by corruption problems, Fedorchuk said.

He named five auto factories where he said stealing of spare parts had become routine. He did not say what action was taken against those caught, or give the value of the parts.

He also said it is a regular practice for some truck drivers to sell their stocks of state gasoline to owners of private cars. In the last seven years, he said, the number of private cars increased 2.8 times, but state gasoline sales went up only 1.7 percent.

In Kiev, 120 truck drivers were detained in one 15-day period for illegally selling gasoline, he said. In the Moscow area, 40 percent of all truck drivers were found to be driving with broken gasoline gauges, apparently so the illegal sales would not be detected, he said.

Fedorchuk blamed stealing for 40 percent of all cargo losses on the railroads. At one station in Uzbekistan, a load of "millions of rubles" of imported goods stood unguarded for 17 days, and 32 people, half of them railway employees, stole $112,000 worth of goods, he said.

Fedorchuk also spoke of murder, a crime rarely discussed in the Soviet news media. He said 68 percent of all killings were the result of private quarrels. A quarter of all victims are related to the murderers, he said.

He also said police "are trying to give full and objective statistics on violations of law, not fearful of whether this figure spoils some personal record" by indicating extensive crime.

Fedorchuk and the Soviet news media last year criticized police for failing to report all crimes accurately, apparently because officials feared it would reflect on their performance.

Relatives Set KAL Service

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — About 300 foreigners who lost relatives when Soviet fighter planes shot down a Korean Air Lines jetliner a year ago are coming to South Korea for the dedication of a monument to the dead, sponsors said today.

All 269 people aboard KAL Flight 007 were killed. The dedication and a memorial service are scheduled for Saturday, the first anniversary of the incident.

The jetliner was flying from New York to the Korean capital Seoul when it was attacked near the Soviet Union's Sakhalin Island. The Soviets have claimed the flight was on an espionage mission, but South Korean and U.S. officials have denied the charge.

Investigators have said the aircraft apparently strayed off course.

The memorial service will be at Manghyang Gardens, about 50 miles south of Seoul. It is sponsored by the Korean Anti-Communist League, a government supported organization.

The league said about 2,000 people are expected to attend the memorial service, including 500 Korean family members and 300 relatives from overseas.

The league said the 300 foreigners would come from 15 countries, including about 70 from the United States. There were 61 Americans on Flight 007.

Walesa Says Opposition Brings 'Threat Of Conflict'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, declaring the outlawed Solidarity trade union is alive despite government attempts to suppress it, warned that Poland's Communist authorities face the "threat of conflict" as long as they ignore the people's desire for democracy.

Walesa accused Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government on Wednesday of abandoning agreements made with striking workers in August 1980 that made Solidarity the first free trade union in the Soviet bloc.

"It is inadmissible to try to govern without taking into consideration our will to gain self-determination and democracy," Walesa said in a statement. "Further ignoring of the will of the nation bears a threat of conflict, the tragic outcome of which we are not able to imagine."

The 950-word statement was prepared for delivery in the Baltic port of Gdansk on Friday to mark the fourth anniversary of the signing of the accords, but it was unclear whether authorities would allow Walesa to speak. The statement was read by an aide over the telephone to Western correspondents in Warsaw.

The statement was more critical of the government than other recent comments by Walesa, in which he has called for moderation by the political opposition following an amnesty that freed 630 political advisors and thousands of common prisoners. Several of those released were former Solidarity leaders and Walesa rivals.

"I have always been an advocate of compromise," said Walesa, winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize. He said he was speaking "not with bitterness, but concern."

After 16 months of legal operation and 32 months of hard fight without legal structures, Solidarity is alive," Walesa declared. "Independent trade unions are needed for us, the working people, but they are also needed for Poland."

The government imposed martial law on Dec. 13, 1981, and banned Solidarity the following October.

Walesa charged that authorities had honored the 1980 agreements only in "articles and speeches" published in the state-run news media.

"What about union pluralism? What about freedom of speech, publications? What about lifting repression for conscience?" Walesa said, reciting some of the worker demands covered in the accords.

"Where are the prisons without political prisoners? What about the just wage adjustments and prices? Where is the selection of managerial personnel on the principle of qualifications, not party membership? Where is the reduction of the time for waiting for an apartment?"

Government newspapers have published a series of articles in recent days arguing that authorities have honored the agreements.

"The party considers the August strikes as the expression of justified opposition to discrepancies and distortions in building socialism," the official Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu said Wednesday.

The article reiterated the government stand that the union leadership steered Solidarity on a radical course for political motivations, forcing the government to suppress it.

Walesa did not join a call issued by the Solidarity underground leadership for Poles to demonstrate their support for the union on Friday. Walesa praised the amnesty as a "step in the right direction" by authorities.

"It is not important whether it is a small or a big step," Walesa said. "It is important it was made in the right direction. I believe this is the direction of dialogue and national reconciliation."

Prosecutors on Wednesday told two Solidarity activists released from prison that their amnesty would be revoked if they continued anti-state activities. Five such warnings have been issued to freed union officials over the past month.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Wednesday that Walesa would need permission to make his speech Friday.

Divers Try To Plug Leak In Sunken Ship

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Salvage company divers, hindered by moderate winds and a choppy sea, tried to plug a fuel leak from a sunken French freighter today before opening the ship's hull to retrieve its 225-ton radioactive cargo, officials said.

Environment Minister Firmin Aerts told a news conference Wednesday that three of 30 containers of uranium hexafluoride on the 4,210-ton Mont Louis were "slightly more radioactive" than the others. Officials said the cargo posed no immediate health threat.

"Divers are now down at the ship, but they are hampered by the waves," said Henk Drenth, a spokesman for Smit Tak International, the world's largest salvage company, in Rotterdam, the Netherlands. The freighter sank 12 miles off the Belgian coast Saturday after colliding with a North Sea passenger ferry. There were no injuries, but the Mont Louis now is lying on its side in 46 feet of water at low tide, trailing a 100-by-50-yard fuel spill from air inlets of the fuel tank.

"We hope the oil spill from the Mont Louis might be plugged" today, Jan Peeters, a spokesman for the Environment Ministry in Brussels, said. "Our immediate priority remains the stopping of the fuel leak. The spill poses no immediate danger to the Belgian coast."

On Wednesday, the spill was as long as 2,200 yards at one point, Peeters said, but most of the fuel had disappeared today.

Drenth said divers planned to drill holes in the side of the Mont Louis to let out air trapped in the hull. "Once that is done the water inside the ship will be tested for radioactivity," he said.

U.S Seeks Prisoner Exchange

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration official says it may be getting closer to an agreement with Cuba to swap "Marielitos" now held in U.S. jails and mental institutions for more than 20,000 Cuban dissidents and political prisoners.

The Washington Times, quoting administration sources, reported today it is possible an agreement will be reached by the end of September involving 2,700 criminals and mental patients who came to the United States during the Mariel boatlift in 1980 and up to 30,000 anti-Castro activists or political "unreliables."

An administration official, who spoke to the Associated Press only on condition he not be identified, said "it's very possible" but he understood the number of Cuban dissidents under discussion was 20,000.

A second U.S. official said he was "hopeful, because the subject has been treated seriously." However, he said the two nations were not on the verge of an agreement.

The two countries have held two rounds of secret talks at an undisclosed location in New York over the past two months, the first formal contacts in years.

Of the 125,000 refugees who came to the United States in 1980 during the Mariel boatlift, some 2,700 are criminals or mental patients being detained because they are ineligible to remain in this country. They are now held in the federal prison in Atlanta, at St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington and in Miami-area jails.

Castro also has sought to include in the discussions the issue of Cubans who have his government's permission to leave but who have not been given U.S. visas because normal immigration from Cuba has been suspended since the boatlift.

The administration is trying to arrange another session with the Cubans on an unspecified date. "I am hopeful, but I don't know what will come of it," the second official said.

"We have been talking to the Cubans, and that's not a secret. The talks are serious," he added.

Don't Leave the Tub Running

Many who watched Kevin Konen win the 5th annual Bath International Tub Races in Bath, Michigan, last month are probably anxiously awaiting Canada's Klondike International Outhouse Race this weekend in Dawson City, Yukon. Outhouses on wheels will run a mile-and-a-half course through the city. Bath tubs also float. The Globe Rowing Club of Greenwich, England, holds the world record for paddling a hand-propelled bathtub 60 miles, 88 yards, in a 24-hour period.

DO YOU KNOW — In what century were bathrooms first built inside of homes?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — "Solitaire" is the more common name for the card game of "Patience."

Student Sues School Board

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A former New Hanover High School student who allegedly tried to kill himself after he had problems at the school has filed a $350,000 lawsuit against the New Hanover County Board of Education and Nancy Hanks Burnette, a teacher at the school. William Crae Pridgen, 19, filed the suit in Franklin County, where he is attending college. The case was transferred to New Hanover County Superior Court Aug. 27.

In the suit, Pridgen says he was removed from Mrs. Burnette's advanced theater arts class in the fall of 1982, which caused him "anxiety, embarrassment, and humiliation."

On May 4, Pridgen shot himself in the abdomen with a .22-caliber rifle "in an attempt to take his own life," the suit says.
