Typhoon Kills At Least 473 In Philippines

By RUBEN G. ALABASTRO
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Ike killed at least 473 people in its rampage across the southern Philippines and left 200,000 homeless, relief agencies said today, but local officials fear the death toll will rise.

Mayor Constantino Navarro Jr. of Surigao City, capital of hardest-hit Surigao del Norte province, said as many as 3,000 people may have been killed province-wide — 1,000 in the capital, the Philippines News Agency reported.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos asked his nation in a broadcast today to forget its differences and concentrate fully on rescue efforts. He said typhoon Ike, which devastated the Philippines on Sunday and Monday was "one of the most severe that the nation has experienced in decades ... The total toll at this time is hundreds, I hope not thousands, of dead."

Marcos appealed for unity in a time of "adversity and crisis," saying, "All attention should be focused on the immediate task ... the saving of lives, caring of the injured and sick, sheltering of the homeless ..."

Reports compiled from government and private relief offices, including the Red Cross, the Social Welfare ministry and the Office of Civil Defense, showed a total of 473 dead in Surigao del Norte and six other southern provinces.

The typhoon, packing 115 mph center winds, left 345 injured, scores missing, and about 200,000 people homeless, the relief agencies said. A Manila newspaper quoted government officials as saying damage was estimated at $111 million.

The toll was the highest from a typhoon since 555 people on the main island of Luzon were killed in a typhoon in 1972, the Red Cross said.

First Lady Imelda Marcos flew to the stricken areas, in the Visayas and Mindanao regions. The Presidential Palace said she surveyed the destruction and directed distribution of relief goods.

The palace said Marcos had planned to fly there on a separate plane but that a hydraulic leak grounded his plane.

In a message played on national television and radio, the president said that because of the disaster, "There is no room here for petty quarrels of whatever kind, whether political or otherwise, at any level."

The typhoon struck at a time when the Philippines is in a political and economic crisis arising from the August 1983 assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, which spurred a massive flight of capital from the country.

Marcos warned profiteers and hoarders not to take advantage of the situation, saying the government "will not allow this to happen."

The military had reported earlier today, before the death count mounted, that 305 had died in Surigao del Norte, where a lake in the town of Mainit overflowed and drowned 200 people. Deaths in the province included 82 known dead in the city of Surigao, 450 miles southeast of Manila, and 23 on Nonoc and Capaya islands.

Navarro said the city morgues had run out of coffins and embalming fluids, and victims had to be buried in mass graves to prevent epidemics.

Navarro called Ike the worst typhoon to strike his province in 20 years.

Deaths reported earlier today in five other provinces included 59 known killed on the island of Negros, 26 on Cebu, 24 on Leyte, 22 on Bohol and two on Akla — all in the Visayas region about 300 miles south of Manila.

Six people died in Misamis Oriental province, also in the south.

The typhoon triggered floods, flattened thousands of houses, and communication lines, sank a dozen boats, damaged others and drove two aground.

Marcos has included Surigao del Norte and two other provinces in a calamity declaration he made last week for 19 provinces battered by a milder tropical storm earlier that killed 53 people.

The declaration allows the government to commandeer food and (Please turn to page 10)

Astronauts Dislodge Worrisome Ice Block

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts successfully executed "Operation Icecube" today, dislodging the greater part of a pesky block of ice from the side of their orbiting ship with a nudge from their 50-foot mechanical arm.

Mission Control said a 5-inch icicle still clinging to a waste-water port was not a hazard. In fact, there was an indication it too may have fallen away after the astronauts completed their ice-breaking task.

The ice danger removed, the crew prepared to come back to Earth on Wednesday.

The frozen block did not pose a threat to the astronauts. But there was concern that it might break off during re-entry and damage Discovery's tail, requiring lengthy repairs that would delay the shuttle's next flight.

"We got most of it," astronaut Judy Resnik reported after commander Henry Hartsfield had gingerly guided the arm out of the cargo bay and over the port side to get at the ice. He operated from a remote station in the cabin.

"It worked like a charm," Hartsfield reported.

A picture televised live to Mission Control in Houston showed that after the initial tap with the end of the arm, a large hunk of the ice had been knocked off.

The block, melted down to about half its size by overnight heating, had measured about 15 inches in length and about 9 inches at its widest point before the operation. The remaining icicle had a maximum thickness of about 3 inches.

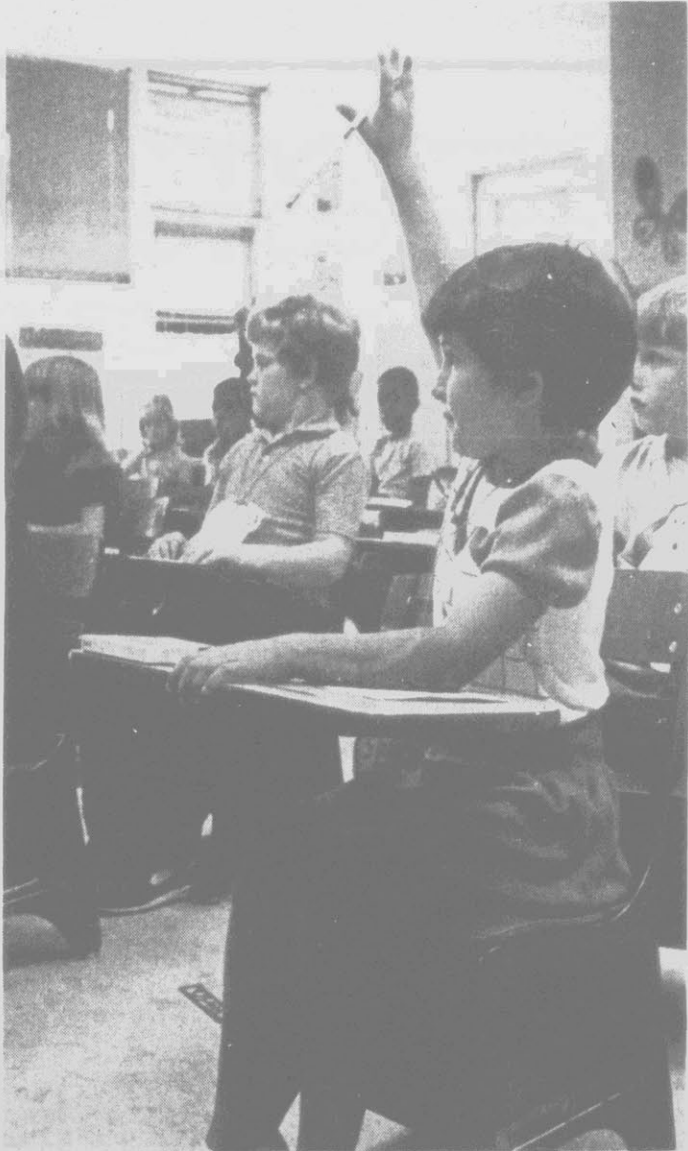

"The remaining piece is not considered a hazard to the orbiter," said Mission Control commentator John Lawrence. "It appears to be porous and very spongy and not very hard."

Lawrence reported later that temperature readings from the port where the small icicle remained indicated that there may no longer be any ice there. He said the piece may have been loosened enough by the nudge that it dropped off after the operation was complete.

Flight director Randy Stone said the crew planned to look at the area with the arm camera late today. He said he didn't think it would be necessary, but if the icicle is still there and engineers want it removed, Hartsfield would try to remove it.

Stone also said the concerted effort to get rid of the ice was made because a small minority in the

Pitt Schools Have 'Smooth' Opening

Pitt County school officials reported a smooth school opening today as students returned to the classrooms to begin the 1984-85 academic year.

"We had a very smooth opening with lots of excited boys and girls," Superintendent Eddie West of Pitt County said today. "Our teachers and other staff members were excited about the beginning of the new school year. We feel like we're off to a good start."

West said county schools followed a normal school schedule today and at mid-morning reported no problems. Attendance figures for the first day were unavailable early today but West said they would be announced Wednesday morning.

At Ayden Elementary, students returned to their school for the first time since the March 28 tornado damaged the facility and shut it down for six months. Students attended classes at Grafton School for the remainder of the school year.

Ayden Principal Stuart Tripp said both staff and students were happy to be back at the school. Repairs to the school are complete, Tripp said, although construction clean-up continued today.

A check around the county indicated that most schools opened on schedule and problems were minor. "the type you expect on the first day of school," said one principal.

Sheppard Reports Record Book Loans

According to the 1983-84 annual report of Sheppard Memorial Library, the fiscal year ending June 1984 was a record year in book loans for the library system, eclipsing a record set in 1961-62.

During the year, a total of 286,380 book loans were made, representing a 6.5 percent increase over the previous year and topping the record circulation of 275,756 books set in fiscal year 1961-1962.

Use of libraries increased across the board. Carver Branch led the way with a 24 percent growth rate. East Branch registered a 16 percent increase, while the Pitt County Bookmobile circulated 10 percent more items than in the previous year.

A total of 154,066 people visited the various library facilities during the year and the library had five percent more registered borrowers than at the end of 1982-1983. A total of 19,735 patrons were registered in the system at the end of June.

The community also turned to the library for help with information needs. The staff answered 35,999 requests for assistance during the past year. This represents a 14 percent increase of 1982-1983.

Additionally, the library sponsored numerous programs, ranging from reading programs to story hours. Designed to encourage reading, these activities attracted 28,215 participants.

Other highlights of the year included the lengthening of operating hours at both Carver and East Branch to an opening time of 10:30 a.m. to a 6 p.m. closing time throughout the year. The funding of the expansion of the children's room at Sheppard Library was approved and a survey of library patrons was conducted to determine their attitudes toward library service.

$40 Million Lottery

CHICAGO (AP) — A $40 million lottery windfall might leave some people singing, "Take This Job and Shove It," but Michael Wittkowski says he'll stay on as a printer because "if I just sat around counting my money, I'd be bored."

The 28-year-old who became the biggest lottery winner in history is heading back to his $20,000-a-year job at a check-printing company Wednesday, he said. The fact that he'll get $2 million a year for 20 years "hasn't begun to sink in yet."

Wittkowski was the only person to pick the numbers 2, 3, 10, 26, 30 and 43 — the combination drawn Saturday night in the state's cash-swollen weekly Lotto game, Illinois Lottery officials announced Monday.

At a news conference, Wittkowski said that he'll share the prize with his father, brother and sister.

"All we want to do is pay off our bills," he said. "After that we'll sit down and decide what to do with it."

He may use his riches to buy Chicago Cub baseball tickets, Wittkowski said. "Maybe now I'll have money for playoff tickets."

The Lotto game went three weeks without a winner, and frenzied ticket buying by people from as far away as California and New Jersey swelled the jackpot to the monumental levels.

Lottery superintendent Michael Jones said 2,020 players matched five out of the six numbers drawn Saturday night, and each will receive $1,569.50. He said 103,652 players matched four of the six debut five months ahead of schedule and at predicted cost.

Reagan intends for the government to buy 100 B-1Bs at a projected cost of $28.3 billion, but Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale has said he would scuttle the program as President Jimmy Carter did in mid-1977 when Mondale was vice president. Reagan revived the program after his election.

"We all know how important this aircraft is to the United States, and we are determined to make it the best bomber there is," said Sam F. Jacobellis, manager for Rockwell's B-1B program.

Besides Rockwell, the major B-1B contractors are Boeing Military Airplane Co., General Electric and the Eaton Corp.'s AIL Division.

Officials said the fatal crash of a B-1A bomber last week would delay testing of cruise missiles from B-1 bombers, but other aspects of the bomber program would proceed as scheduled.

Two pickets outside the main gate today held a banner reading "Reagan 84, War 85" and a sign showing a taxpayer burdened by a heavy missile strapped to his back.

The B-1B is scheduled to be combat-ready by 1986, and plans for its first test flight in October will remain the same despite the Aug. 29 crash of the prototype B-1A in the Mojave Desert, according to Undersecretary of the Air Force Pete Aldridge.

Th970, has been surrounded by sharp debate.

The Carter administration, amid criticism that the bomber was expensive, lacked maneuverability and could be easily replaced by existing B-52s, shelved the B-1 in 1977. But President Reagan gave the program a new lease on life.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

In a world where weapons become more deadly and more inhumane with every passing day, I am reluctant to suggest one that will end war forever.

It is called, "Home Slides and Movies."

I know, I know. What kind of people would stoop to inflicting that kind of pain? But think about it.

When people show up for a war, you simply pull down a large screen and show pictures of a dog chasing sticks, children mooning one another at the pool, mom coming out of a public restroom with toilet tissue on her shoe and dad squinting at the sun mousing obscenities. Think how many lives it would save.

Frankly, I don't know how slides and movies got to be so deadly. I know my husband never meant to harm anyone with ours. All he said was, "Does anyone want to see the 500 slides on our weekend in the Smokies?" and the next thing you know Fred was comatose and Marge was holding ice cubes over each eye to remain conscious.

The camera itself is innocent — until it is loaded. Then it becomes absolutely lethal. No one is safe from its probing eye. If you are eating a ham sandwich where the fat unravels from your mouth like your intestines unfolding, it's all there on film. If you are lying on the beach in your bathing suit and your body has given way to gravity, providing shade for a thousand ants, it belongs to the ages.

Everyone worries about how they can protect themselves and their homes from aggressors in a war. What home does not have its own stockpile of home movies and slides? With a sign in your window, "Tgis house is protected by a projector and 1,500 slides of a science fair project showing the birth of a compost," the entire neighborhood can sleep at night.

In our neighborhood the other week, Walter said, "I'm going to show my slides again of our trip down the Colorado River. Bring Dramamine."

"You do," said my husband, "and I'll show you our home movies of rump shots of 300 wildebeest in Africa which we chased for 18 miles in the dust."

"You wouldn't," said Glenn. "Then I have no choice but to show my slides of an Eydie Gorme and Steve Lawrence concert out of doors at night with the wrong ASA and my lens cap on."

We all held our breath. Was this to be the end of the world as we knew it? Finally Walter said, "So, it's a lot of trouble setting it up. Let's just play some trivia."

Remember, cameras don't kill people. Negatives do.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Have you noticed that one of the best of the store-bought chili sauces isn't what it used to be? Nowadays it's a smooth concoction instead of being dotted with seeds.

How do you make real old-fashioned chili sauce using fresh tomatoes and other good things? At our house we're particularly partial to the following recipe.

CHILI SAUCE

2½-inch-long cinnamon stick
¾ teaspoon whole cloves
5 pounds fully ripe tomatoes, peeled and cut into chunks (10 cups)
1½ cups finely chopped celery
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 cup finely chopped green pepper

1½ cups cider vinegar
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
3 teaspoons salt
2½ teaspoons dry mustard
¼ teaspoon chili powder
Tie the cinnamon stick and cloves in cheesecloth to make a spicebag; set aside.

Into a 5-quart non-corrosive saucepot turn the tomatoes. Stirring often, cook over medium-high heat until tomatoes are soft and almost completely covered with liquid — about 20 minutes. Stir in celery, onion and green pepper. Bring to a boil. Stirring occasionally, boil gently for 1½ hours. Stir in the vinegar, sugar, corn syrup, salt, mustard and spicebag. Bring to a boil again. Stirring often, boil gently for another 1½ hours; stir in chili powder. Stirring often, simmer 30 minutes or until as thick as you like. Remove spicebag.

At once ladle into clean, hot ½-pint jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Wipe top edge with damp towel. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in boiling water bath 15 minutes. Cool jars on wire rack or folded towel.

Makes 4 to 5 half-pint jars.

DINNER FARE

Chicken & Noodles
Vegetables & Salad
Poached Pears & Rum Sauce
CREAMY RUM SAUCE
¼ cup butter
14-ounce can condensed milk
¼ cup amber rum (80 proof)
2 tablespoons dark rum, (80 proof)
In a 1-quart saucepan, melt butter, add milk and amber rum. (Rum will thin mixture.) Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly until thickened — 10 to 12 minutes. Gradually whisk in dark rum. Serve warm. Makes about 1 cup. (generous).

LIGHT SUPPER

Crab Cakes & Tartar Sauce
Zucchini Corn & Rolls
Peach Pie
ZUCCHINI CORN
8-ounce golden or green zucchini
2 tablespoons butter
Medium onion (4 ounces), chopped medium-fine (½ cup)
8¾-ounce can golden creamstyle corn

Scrub zucchini in cold water and trim ends; do not pare; slice thin crosswise. In a 10-inch skillet in the hot butter, over moderate heat, gently cook onion until yellowed — about 5 minutes. Stir in zucchini; cover and simmer, stirring several times, until tender — about 10 minutes. Stir in corn and reheat. Makes 4 servings. (Golden zucchini is available in some markets.)

COCKTAIL TIME

Canapes & Pineapple Rum
PINEAPPLE RUM
¼ cup white rum (80 proof)
¼ cup dark rum (80 proof)
2 tablespoons orange-flavor liqueur (80 proof)
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Two 6-ounce cans (each ¾ cup) unsweetened pineapple juice

Thoroughly stir or shake together white rum, dark rum, liqueur, lemon juice and pineapple juice. Chill until extremely cold. Serve in chilled cocktail glasses. Makes 2 cups (generous). Increase quantities as needed.

Dear Abby

Daughter Seeks A Church To Go With Her Wedding

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, "Etta," who is 22, went steady with "Rick" for four years. He's 23. Five months ago they drove to a distant state, found employment and started living together there. Last week they phoned to say that they had been married by a justice of the peace. But listen to this: Etta says she would like to come back home next summer and have a big church wedding like her sister had. She says it's always been her dream to walk down the aisle on her father's arm.

My husband doesn't want to give her a church wedding. He says since she's already married, she doesn't need a church wedding.

I tried to tell him it's not unusual for couples who have been married by a justice of the peace to get married again in a church.

He says to write to Abby, and if she says it's OK, he will compromise and give Etta a small church wedding.

What do you say, Abby?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Many couples who have been married in a civil ceremony by a justice of the peace choose to be married again in a religious ceremony.

It need not be large to be beautiful and memorable. Don't deny Etta a church wedding. Be glad she wants one.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me why the three major networks (ABC, CBS and NBC) treat us, the listening/viewing public, as though we are a bunch of illiterate morons?

After President Reagan or some other dignitary has talked for 20 to 40 minutes, some newscaster comes on for another half-hour to tell us what was said. We are quite capable of understanding English and do not need an interpreter to tell us what the speaker has already told us.

I, for one, resent it! Care to comment?

GEORGE KELLY,
DES PLAINES, ILL.

DEAR GEORGE: I don't resent it. In fact, I find the interpretations interesting.

DEAR ABBY: I really identified with "Outraged," whose son had a completely different hair color than her husband's and hers. I had the same problem, but I thought it was funny!

When I was pregnant with our first child, we lived out in the suburbs of Seattle, quite a distance from the stores. A truck from a local bakery came by twice a week. The driver was a handsome man with very red hair.

When our daughter was born, she had flaming red hair—and a lot of it! You should have seen the faces on the neighbors when we brought her home from the hospital! It was a riot! Naturally, there must have been recessive genes that picked up the red hair back a generation or so in both families. But it sure gave all our neighbors a lot to talk about. It didn't make me angry because, of course, there was no guilt!

The funniest comment of all came from the neighbor who said, "Boy, when you get bread, you really get bred!"

Tell "Outraged" to just laugh it off. People aren't trying to be mean—the world is full of comedians!

Alaska Boasts Many Kinds Of Game

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Alaska, our largest state, may be a frozen tundra in its far northern sector. But much of the country is a thing of beauty, with a fantastic variety of fish and game.

The adventurous eater can try mooseburger, reindeer steak and bear chops — or even sea lion and caribou there.

But most visitors are attracted by more familiar items such as the huge Alaska king crab, or the lordly salmon. These, along with the local halibut and rockfish, are shipped all over the mainland.

There are other delicacies you don't often see that I sampled on a recent visit to Anchorage, where my daughter lives. Razor clams fried in butter are a memorable treat. So are the giant berries and vegetables grown in the Matanuska Valley. Fiddlehead ferns are a delight, as are the raw rose hips and cranberry ketchup.

One culinary specialty is the ptarmigan, or snow grouse, one sees wheeling over the fields. It is often served roasted or smoked.

Alaska is a sportsman's paradise in the southeastern panhandle and the south central region, with its relatively mild climate.

Wildlife abounds in Yakutat Bay, lair of the king salmon. Fishermen can catch shrimp and dungeness crab there, plus a wide variety of bottom fish.

Buying Furniture, Select With Care

When you have some money to spend on furniture, a versatile occasional piece may be a good selection, says Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension interior design specialist, North Carolina State University.

Fill in a blank spot with a secretary, a small chest or a sofa table. These pieces can go from room to room as needs change, the extension specialist says.

Look for multipurpose furniture. That sofa bed can provide extra sleeping space when needed, and modular shelves with a desk area can be used in the living room or a bedroom. Small scale furniture is also more flexible.

Hunters stalk moose, bear, blacktail deer and waterfowl.

For lovers of baked goods, sourdough bread is a favorite in Alaska, and sourdough batter is also used for pancakes and rolls.

For a dinner that's not too high in calories, try Alaska's low-fat halibut saute.

- 1 pound halibut
- 3 tablespoons oil, divided
- 1 cup each thinly sliced carrots, chopped celery, sliced green onions and broccoli flowerets
- 1/4 teaspoon grated ginger root
- 1/4 cup chicken stock or water
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Red pepper strips and

toasted sesame seeds for garnish

Remove bones and skin from halibut. Cut fish into 1-inch cubes. Saute in two tablespoons oil, until barely cooked, and remove halibut from skillet. Saute vegetables in remaining oil until crisp and tender. Return fish to skillet. Add ginger. Combine stock, cornstarch and lemon peel and add to fish mixture. Cook and stir until thickened and halibut flakes easily when fork-tested. Season with salt and pepper. Garnish with pepper and sesame seeds. Serves 4. Good with a chilled white wine.

MOM'S INFLUENCE

Mothers continue to play an important role in how students eat after leaving home for college. A survey at New Mexico State University revealed that freshmen continued to eat breakfast if they had come from a home where breakfast was regularly served.

Students who eat breakfast tend to eat a regular lunch instead of snacking when they are hungry, researchers found.

The survey also revealed that students tend to drink more soft drinks and coffee and eat more candy and hamburgers. They drink less milk, eat fewer sandwiches, ice cream, cake and fruit.

The research was done by scientists at the NMSU Agricultural Experiment Station.

Display Collectibles To Enhance Room Decor

You have probably collected many items over the years. Upgrade or add to your accessories, group them interestingly and place them on display. Here are some tips for grouping accessories.

— Use a variety of heights, shapes and sizes.

— Use an odd number of items for groups. Odd numbers of items can be placed in more interesting ways without lining things up in rows.

— Aim for a feeling of rhythm and balance when placing items on shelves. Spread heavier objects such as books around.

— When grouping pictures, think of the group as a single unit or one larger picture. Create an invisible frame by placing items close together with one vertical and one horizontal line on the edge of the group for that invisible frame. Try art objects with pictures in a grouping.

Remember that accessories should enhance the decor, not clutter it up. Many people with large collections, rotate them so only part is on display at any one time.

Whatever your situation, if you need help with decorating problems, contact your agricultural extension home economist. A well-decorated room is within your reach if you learn to manage your decorating dollars.

Consensus

If North Carolina raises the legal drinking age to 21 — and the “if” might as well read “when” — the Pentagon is prepared to go along at military installations in the state.

Last year the N.C. General Assembly raised the age limit for beer and wine from 18 to 19; and even then the higher age limit of 21 was shaping up as being in the works. It became more probable with congressional legislation giving states two years to raise the limit to a uniform 21.

The federal standard has teeth. Non-complying states will face cut-off of highway funds. So the armed services’ support was to be expected.

The toll among young servicemen injured or killed in automobile accidents has long been a source of concern among their commanders. They must have been aware of the role alcohol was playing.

Those casualties represent no small drain on military resources. Basic training, specialized training and the benefits of experience represent investments that go down the drain in avoidable accidents.

There is a deep and personal loss felt by associates, families and friends as well as frustrations among those who carry the responsibility of authority. So there plainly must have been a consensus of approval in the Department of Defense over invoking a higher age for drinking.

It will make enforcement less difficult. It will also make adoption of a new limitation easier for the General Assembly.

Temptation

It isn’t nostalgia or a fashion fad that built up summer sales of Vietnam-era jungle fatigues among the soldiers this summer at Southern army bases. The troops just knew a good thing when they saw it ... the best test of any equipment.

At Fort Stewart, Ga., the assistant manager of the military clothing store says they can’t keep them in stock; selling about 15,000 uniforms in two months at the base.

The story goes, that two years ago a new “standard” battle dress was introduced; it was used in Grenada and drew a lot of complaints. The material in the new fatigues was heavier than the old, required wearing an undershirt and was slow to dry. It was also uncomfortably warm — hardly the basic requirements for tropical wear nor ideal for the kind of temperatures that came with the summer of 1984. Luckily there was a good stockpile of the old all-cotton (and cooler) fatigues.

A “new” hot weather uniform is due on the scene. It causes one to wonder just how important is the “new” factor. It might have been more practical and economical to return to the Vietnam-era design. Apparently the compulsion to “fix” something that worked was too strong to resist.

Odds Are Against Bush-Ferraro Debate

DALLAS — Spontaneous applause by reporters for Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as she concluded her do-or-die press conference in New York Aug. 21 alarmed Republican campaign chiefs that Vice President George Bush might not get fair treatment in a campaign debate, raising the odds against a Bush-Ferraro showdown this fall.

Before that applause, reporters had also booed a Wall Street Journal editorial writer for the way he was pressing Ferraro for answers to a question. Such pro-Ferraro sentiment increased already high wariness among Reagan campaign strategists about putting Bush up against the first woman on a presidential ticket.

A footnote: Bush agents worried about crowd competition for his arrival in Dallas at the Anatole Hotel where Rep. Jack Kemp was having a large reception. Unable to get Kemp to switch his time, they changed Bush’s arrival time to avoid any possible crowd comparison.

Censorship of speakers by convention managers under the direction of Washington lobbyist Tom Korologos peaked at the Aug. 21 morning session when Louisiana delegate Marilyn Thayer began her conservative speech to find large hunks of it had mysteriously disappeared from the TelePrompTer.

But Thayer, a New Orleans homemaker and ally of anti-feminist Phyllis Schlafly, had brought a typewritten script to the podium. The words admitted from the TelePrompTer included an attack on government-determined “comparable pay” for women, contending “we women don’t need bureaucrats to tell us how valuable we are.”

A footnote: The convention managers tried unsuccessfully to get State Rep. Judy Petty of Arkansas to remove from her speech a declaration that “there are some things worse than war” (dishonor, cowardice and communism). On the next day, Sen. Barry Goldwater sent in his speech for the TelePrompTer with an accompanying note saying he would tolerate no censorship.

One of the four delegates (out of 2,235) who refused to vote for George Bush’s renomination for vice president is a paid employee of the New Right leader Richard Viguerie, the target of attacks by Bush during the convention.

Steven Allen, an Alabama delegate listed from Birmingham, voted for United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. Actually, Allen lives in the Washington suburb of Falls Church, Va., where he is a writer in Viguerie’s operations.

Bush long has argued that Viguerie, Terry Dolan (of NCPAC) and other New Rightists are not bona fide Republicans and that their word should carry no weight in party councils. He started convention week in a nasty frame of mind when his live appearance on CBS’s “Face the Nation” was preceded by a taped segment that included remarks by Dolan. The vice president chewed out the CBS producer on the spot, then blasted the New Rightists during the week in Dallas.

Conservative leader Lew Lehrman’s agents threatened a floor demonstration that would knock U.S. Treasurer Katherine Ortega’s keynote speech out of prime time when convention managers complained about the extent of a planned demonstration for U.N. Ambassador the safe haven program and know they can get help there.

The program began in Charlotte during the 1978-79 school year. “We were noticing that more and more women were going back to work and that a lot of children were being left unattended,” says Jeri Gwertzman, co-chairman of the Mecklenburg County Safety Haven program.

Since that time, the program has expanded beyond the initial “hiding place” concept and into a full-fledged effort to educate both children and adults on ways to keep children from getting lost and getting abducted.

Under the safety haven program, volunteers are first screened by police and then by program officials to make sure they’re appropriate for the job. If they’re accepted, a decal is placed on their front window. A child in need of help knows he can run to any house with that decal.

The child is not allowed into the house. “The volunteer’s main job is to be there and to contact the proper agency,” Mrs. Gwertzman said. The child won’t be given any medication or food by the volunteer — just a sense of security while either the police, school officials or family comes to pick the child up.

“It’s hard to measure how successful we’ve been,” she says, “it’s hard to measure prevention. But we know it has been successful because our children are pretty much traumatized by what they know goes on and just the signs in the neighborhoods give them a sense of security ... When you’re five years old and you’ve missed your school bus and there is no one home, that is a very frightening thing.”

When the program was started under the aegis of the Girl Scouts and the parent and teachers group, it was felt that the safety havens would be needed only during the time a child walks to and from school. It has now expanded to an around the clock effort.

It has also expanded into an educational effort. “At first, we thought the safety havens would answer needs which they could not. We found that we must educate our children first and then adults and make the entire community aware,” Mrs. Gwertzman said.

Programs on avoiding dangerous situations are held in the local schools five or six times a year, she said. Children are taught how to stay away from people who might hurt them. They’re taught what to do when they get lost or locked out.

Educating the community may be just as important, she said. Adults must be made aware that in this crazy world, an act of kindness to an apparently lost child or just the offer of candy can be very frightening to a child who has been taught to be on the lookout for people who might want to hurt them.

The safety haven program is growing quickly in North Carolina now and a state study panel on missing children is recommending that programs be started in every county.

A Financial Question Remains

WASHINGTON — For almost two weeks now in the matter of the finances of Geraldine Ferraro, the country has been hearing the unmistakable sounds of whisk, whisk and slosh, slosh. These are the sounds of something being swept under the rug; these are the sounds of whitewash being applied. Mr. Speaker! I object.

It is remarkable. On Aug. 20, Rep. Ferraro released “the most comprehensive disclosure ever released by any candidate for national office.” On Aug. 21 she played an hour of pitch and catch and pepper with the press. By Aug. 23 the story had disappeared from the papers as if a vacuum cleaner had sucked it up. I don’t mean to belabor the matter needlessly, but this is too much.

This is the question that remains unanswered, still throbbing like a sore thumb: Did Rep. Ferraro falsely swear that she was entitled to an exemption from disclosing her husband’s financial interests to the House? Let us recall the law. She was required to make such a disclosure unless (1) she had “no knowledge” of John Zaccaro’s affairs, and (2) she did not derive “any” financial or economic benefit from his income.

With deference to the gentlewoman, it has to be said that her own documentation makes evident that she was NOT entitled to the exemption. In her sworn House reports for six years, from May of 1979 to May of 1984, she put her husband’s personal privacy above the public interest. She willfully put herself above the law. If the House Ethics Committee were not such a joke, the committee would have called her on the carpet a month ago for consideration of a resolution of censure.

Let us go to the record. The documentation, on inspection, was not as “comprehensive” as claimed. The statements lumped real property and “other assets” into unitemized lists with a sum total at the bottom. We learned nothing of P. Zaccaro Co. Inc., the principal family corporation. She owns a one-third interest in that corporation.

The first reason for an exemption is that she had “no knowledge,” by which is meant any “detailed or specific knowledge,” of her husband’s interests. Plainly she did have such knowledge. She was at various times in this period vice president, secretary-treasurer, a stockholder and a director of the corporation. Rep. Ferraro is a lawyer, a real estate broker and a licensed insurance underwriter. For four years she maintained her law office in her husband’s office. “She occasionally wrote insurance policies in the course of P. Zaccaro Co.’s business operations.”

Her income tax return for 1981 shows income from the Zaccaro corporation of $2,962. Her 1982 return shows income of $51. Her 1983 return shows a loss of $4,082 from this same source. Are we to believe that she had “no knowledge” of these sums? Who gave her that nice deduction of $4,082 to include on her 1983 return? Where did it come from, Muffin dear? Out of the nowhere, into the here?

The second reason for any exemption required Rep. Ferraro to swear that she did not derive “any” benefit from her husband’s operations. She has attempted to brush this aside with a comment that, taken literally, the rule would require married members of Congress to maintain his-and-her refrigerators. It won’t wash. The instructions accompanying the House disclosure form say that the benefit test should be interpreted “very broadly.” By way of example, if her spouse’s income was used “for vacations, the education of dependents or the maintenance of a home,” the exemption would not apply.

Her own documentation makes it evident that John Zaccaro’s interests were used for precisely these purposes. The two of them own three residences jointly; he pays taxes on four lots she owns individually on one of their residential properties. He put up the money, albeit illegally, to finance her campaign for the House in 1978. To swear that she did not derive “any” benefit from her husband’s multimillion-dollar interests is to sail close to the very shoals of perjury.

Mind you, I think the disclosure law is absurdly rigid; it nevertheless is the law, and most of her House colleagues obeyed it. I am ready to let the matter drop. Ferraro on the issues is more significant that Ferraro on finances. The gentlewoman in effect is running to become president of the United States. Her record on disclosure may be bad, but for those who believe in strong defense, low taxes and limited government, her record on the issues is infinitely worse.

Public Forum

To the editor:

On July 26 seven other peacemakers and I were sentenced to 3-year prison terms for performing an act of disarmament last Easter Sunday morning. I consider the sentence a small price to pay, considering what we accomplished. In 39 years of negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union, not once had the two countries been able to agree to disarm even one nuclear weapon. The Pershing Plowshares, as we called ourselves, did. Our message was simple: Disarmament must take place. If our leaders fail to initiate the process, then the people will.

Let’s look at the facts. The Pentagon estimates that most U.S. cities are only “five to seven minutes” away from Russian nuclear missiles. We imperil Soviet cities equally with our nuclear arms.

During a May lecture in Charlotte, Australian physician and expert on nuclear arms Helen Caldicott suggested that we had perhaps six months to save the planet. “The weapons Reagan plans to build,” she explained, “will make nuclear war in the future a mathematical certainty.”

Take a moment to sit back and ponder what you have just read.

How in the name of God has the human race allowed itself to creep to within minutes of total destruction?

How close must we get to nuclear war before we are willing to admit the folly of our actions? Is there any reasonable person who really believes that deterrence will last for eternity?

Strength For Today

Love is the manifestation of God in the human heart.

We read in the Bible that God is love. The whole of God’s being, therefore, is love. There is nothing in the makeup of God — if we can use such a term — but love. Love is a personalized reality. Furthermore, it is a universal spirit. Wherever God is, there is love. In the universe created by him, love is a reality which extends from one end to the other.

True religion, therefore, is love — the emotion of love, the disposition of love, the controlling presence of love. Jesus Christ was God’s love for us put into bodily form and turned into the stream of history.

Let us not think that we can have religion without love. Belief is important, but love is religion itself. Only the loving heart knows God and opens its gates to receive him.

City To Condemn Structure

City officials say they plan to complete the condemnation procedure on a fire-damaged building located at the corner of Dickinson Avenue and Eight Street within coming weeks. The top floor and roof of the two-story building were destroyed in a Dec. 7, 1981, fire.

Formerly a furniture store and before that a variety store, the building is now owned by the Methodist Retirement Home, Inc., of Durham.

According to the City's Department of Engineering and Inspections, final paperwork on the matter should be underway within the next few days. The building was condemned in 1981 shortly after the fire.

"We will be following up the matter within the next two days to find out what the owners are going to do and what their intentions are," Jim Kaufman, an engineering and inspections representative, explained. Kaufman said that his department will make several suggestions to the owners including making the building into a one-story structure or completely tearing it down. A hearing will then be held to finalize the condemnation procedure.

Sam Underwood, local attorney and representative of Methodist Retirement Homes, Inc., said his client has not been contacted about the matter. He added that the building came into the possession of MRH through Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The church was willed the property by Dr. James Brown of Baltimore who died several years before the building burned.

Nestle Reaches Purchase Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Nestle S.A. said today it has agreed to buy Carnation Co. for more than $3 billion in cash in a corporate marriage of food-products companies.

Carnation, a Los Angeles dairy-products company, said its board of directors had unanimously approved the offer from the Swiss company and recommended that its shareholders accept the $83-a-share bid.

The merger is subject to federal antitrust review, the companies said.

The merger had been the subject of widespread speculation this summer and helped to lift Carnation stock to a 52-week high of $75.50 a share at the end of last week.

The price of the takeover comes to slightly more than $3 billion, including 34.86 million outstanding shares of common stock, outstanding options to buy 965,542 shares of stock and outstanding bonds convertible into another 479,974 shares of stock, according to documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The agreement includes a provision for Nestle to buy 9.4 million Carnation shares, or about 27 percent of the outstanding stock, for $83 a share in cash from certain holders of large blocks of the stock, including a trust held by the family of E.A. Stuart.

In addition, Nestle received an option to buy up to 6.4 million unissued shares of Carnation at $83 a share.

Under the agreement, Carnation would be merged with a wholly owned subsidiary of Nestle.

Among the companies under Nestle's umbrella are Beech-Nut Corp., Libby, McNeill & Libby Inc. and Stouffer Corp.

Reagan Preaches Patriotism, Prosperity

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — President Reagan is campaigning for re-election using some new rhetoric but hitting the same simple themes he has championed throughout his presidency.

Preaching patriotism, prosperity, progress, and peace through strength, the president paints a bright picture of the future and draws a contrast between that and the problems portrayed by the Democrats, whom he calls "that pack of pessimists roaming the land."

Reagan was expected to stress defense issues today in a speech to the American Legion in Salt Lake City.

It is the Republican ticket's third appearance before a veterans group in less than two weeks. Reagan addressed the Veterans of Foreign Wars on Aug. 24, and Vice President George Bush spoke to the Disabled American Veterans two days later.

Both took potshots at Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale, accusing him of being too anxious to negotiate an arms agreement with the Soviets and too willing to halt production and deployment of new nuclear weapons.

Mondale was scheduled to follow Reagan into Salt Lake City to present his side to the Legionnaires on Wednesday.

On Labor Day, the traditional start of the general-election campaign, Reagan set the course for the coming weeks in two speeches to crowds of supporters in his home state of California.

Reagan put forth what he said were "four great goals to build our tomorrow."

The president promised a chance "to maintain sustained economic growth without inflation ... a challenge to ensure that the United States of America remains today and forever prepared for peace ... a philosophy that proudly proclaims the rich traditional values that fill our lives ... (and an insistence) that there is no such thing as a life without uncharted frontiers and that it is our mission to seek them, not cringe from them."

Above all, his message is one of hope and the stubborn optimism that Reagan was able to maintain even in the depths of the recession and at the time of the deaths of 264 U.S. soldiers in Lebanon, two matters Reagan never mentions these days.

"This year," Reagan told supporters in Orange County, Calif., on Monday, "we present to the people of America a sparkling vision of tomorrow — a belief that greatness lies ahead, only waiting for us to reach out for it."

Even after four years at the head of the federal bureaucracy he was still running against Washington, saying he flew west to begin his re-election campaign and "to get away from those puzzle palaces on the Potomac."

And in a rally later in the day in Cupertino, Calif., Reagan borrowed a line from his campaign four years ago, when he was the outsider running against Jimmy Carter, the outside challenger of four years before.

"You seem like you're better off than you were four years ago," Reagan told the crowd in the largely young, high-tech world of Silicon Valley, Calif.

And the 73-year-old president made fun, as he has in the past, of the age issue that might otherwise work against him and in favor of the younger Democratic ticket.

"I hate to say this, but the age issue may play a part in this election," Reagan told his supporters. "Not mine. It's their ideas that are too old."

Record Farm Commodities Shipments Are Expected

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Shipments of U.S. agricultural commodities to the Soviet Union are expected to reach a near-record value of $2.3 billion this fiscal year, more than double what they were in 1982-83, according to preliminary estimates by the Agriculture Department.

The value of farm exports to the Soviet Union last year was only $983 million, less than half 1981-82's $2.3 billion mark, says a recent analysis by USDA's Economic Research Service.

Soviet purchases of corn and wheat have been heavy this summer, although most of the grain has been for delivery in the new fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1. The value figures used in the agency's report are for products actually shipped during a year.

But unfortunately for American farmers, the huge jump in sales to the Soviets this year does not represent a worldwide boom of the same magnitude. Total farm exports are up, but only by about 9 percent from the depressed level of 1982-83.

According to USDA records, the $983 million in U.S. agricultural exports to the Soviet Union in 1982-83 was the lowest value in nine years.

In the 1980 fiscal year — which included the partial embargo imposed by then-President Carter — exports to the Soviet Union totaled $1.52 billion.

In fiscal 1981, which included the remainder of the embargo ordered by Carter as a penalty for Soviet action in Afghanistan, exports were valued at $1.71 billion.

The record value of U.S. commodity shipments to the Soviet Union was $2.32 billion in the 1981-82 fiscal year.

Values are not adjusted for inflation and often reflect sharp changes in U.S. commodity prices. For example, total farm exports to all countries are expected to increase to $38 billion this fiscal year, reversing a two-year slide from earlier record levels.

But the actual quantity, which rose to more than 160 million metric tons in the peak years of 1979-81, will be down again to around 141 million tons. The outlook for 1984-85 is for another dip in export value but probably some gain in the quantity shipped.

According to department records, U.S. commodity exports to the Soviet Union total about $19 billion over the last two decades. About $16 billion of that has been since 1975.

In 1975, the Soviet Union unexpectedly bought huge amounts of U.S. grain, disrupting markets and raising fears among consumers. That led to the first long-term agreement specifying regular sales of wheat and corn on an annual basis. It took effect on Oct. 1, 1976, and was supposed to be for five years.

However, the first pact was extended a year at a time on two occasions. A new agreement was negotiated last year and went into effect on Oct. 1, 1983.

U.S. agricultural exports to the Soviet Union amounted to only $16 million in 1969-70, according to department records. Those increased to $30 million in 1970-71, on the eve of a sudden upturn in business with the Soviets.

In the 1971-72 fiscal year, farm exports to the Soviet Union jumped to $459 million and then soared to $1.017 billion in 1972-73. The value of shipments dropped back to $324 million in 1973-74 and then spurted again to $1.171 billion in 1974-75.

After that, the annual value of U.S. agricultural exports to the Soviet Union, has included:

1975-76 — $2.047 billion.
1976-77 — $1.075 billion.
1977-78 — $1.868 billion.
1978-79 — $2.19 billion.
1979-80 — $1.515 billion.
1980-81 — $1.706 billion.
1981-82 — $2.322 billion.
1982-83 — $983 million.
1983-84 — $2.3 billion (forecast).

Although the Soviet Union — and China, to a lesser extent — has been the most controversial customer of the American farmers, there are others of even larger stature.

Japan for many years has been the largest single foreign buyer of U.S. agricultural commodities. This fiscal year, for example, Japan is expected to boost its purchases to $7 billion from $5.89 billion in 1982-83. China, by comparison, is shown at $800 million, up from $546 million last year.

Collectively, Asia is the largest regional market this year, accounting for $15.4 billion worth of U.S. commodities, up from $13.6 billion in 1982-83.

Western Europe's purchases, at $9.7 billion, are down from $10.1 billion last year.

African countries are a $2.8 billion market for American farm products in 1983-85, up from $2.27 billion last year, the report said. Latin America, at $5 billion, is up from $4.86 billion.

In all, the world's developed countries are expected to account for $18.8 billion of this year's $38 billion in U.S. farm exports, up slightly from $18.5 billion in 1982-83.

The less-developed countries were indicated at $15.5 billion in 1983-84, compared with $13.9 billion last year, the report said.

Authorities Probe Turnpike Shootings

STRATFORD, Conn. (AP) — Three shootings at motorists within a month, one of them fatal, have left toll collectors and motorists on one of the nation's busiest highways worried they could become targets of the seemingly random attacks.

A couple who had been fixing their car Monday were fired at as they dove for cover when they spotted a revolver being held out the window of a van, state police spokesman Lt. Kenneth Kirschner said. The two were not hurt.

On Aug. 5, a former congressional aide was fatally wounded in the head by an unknown assailant. And on Sunday, a bullet struck the rear of a car and grazed the leg of its driver.

All three shootings occurred on Interstate 95 in southwestern Connecticut's Fairfield County, a heavily traveled commuter route that links New York City to New England.

"We don't know why that happens," a toll station worker at the Stratford plaza who refused to give his name said Monday.

Other collectors refused to discuss the incidents, but State Department of Transportation spokesman William Keish said they feared they might be singled out as targets.

Monday's incident occurred around 4 p.m. when a couple whom police refused to identify were in the southbound emergency lane in Stratford, Kirschner said. As the man finished making repairs under the hood, he heard a speeding van approach.

Official Dodges Chernenko Issue

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet Foreign Ministry official declined to answer specifically when asked if President Konstantin U. Chernenko was back at work in the Kremlin, but said Chernenko was "occupied" with his leadership duties.

The official, Vladimir Lomeiko, was asked about Chernenko by an American journalist at a news briefing Monday on disarmament issues.

The reporter asked if it could be concluded, because of Chernenko's replies to questions about U.S.-Soviet relations in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda on Sunday, that Chernenko had ended his summer vacation and was back at work in the Kremlin.

"He is occupied with his duties as general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and as chairman of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R.," Lomeiko said. He did not say whether Chernenko was back at the Kremlin.

Montreal Railway Station Blast Kills 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Workers cleared rubble today from Montreal's main railroad station after an explosion killed three people and injured 41. An American arrested in connection with notes threatening Pope John Paul II sent to the station was to appear in court.

The explosion Monday sent metal and glass fragments tearing into a line of about 150 people waiting to board a train for Ottawa at the end of Canada's Labor Day weekend. Thousands of people were heading home, and the Central Station was crowded.

It was closed after the blast and passengers were shuttled to suburban stations, but station officials said they hoped it would be back in operation today.

Detective Sgt. Jacques Grondines said police arrested Thomas Brigham, 65, believed to be from Rochester, N.Y., in connection with about 50 anonymous notes threatening John Paul, banks, insurance companies and various governments. The notes were mailed to the train station and various news media in Ottawa and Montreal since April.

A police detective, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said today that Brigham was being held and would appear in coroner's court late this afternoon. Police said no formal charges were filed immediately against Brigham, as any such charges could only follow a court determination. Earlier it had been reported incorrectly that Brigham was to appear in Sessions Court today charged with sending threatening letters.

On Monday, Detective Sgt. Pierre Vezina said two local radio stations had received calls from people claiming responsibility for the explosion. He refused to identify the callers.

The bombing came a week before the pope is scheduled to visit Montreal by rail on a 12-day Canadian tour. The pope will arrive at Windsor Station, two blocks from Central Station, and stay at the residence of Maurice Cardinal Roy, Archbishop of Montreal, which is across the street from the station.

In Rome, a Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said: "There is no reaction" to the explosion or the threatening notes. "The preparations for the trip are proceeding normally."

Many people were thrown from their feet by the blast, witnesses said. Railway officials said they believed the device contained more than 25 pounds of explosives.

The explosion occurred in a storage locker area. Police said the bomb must have been in an upper locker, because the ceiling was scorched.

Bernard Lefebvre, of the city's emergency medical service, said ambulances took 25 people to seven hospitals, and 16 other victims went to hospitals on their own. Three bodies were taken to a morgue. Police said it might take hours to identify them because they were badly burned.

"Women were laying on the ground crying in pain," said Robert Dupont, who received a dislocated shoulder and burns on his head and hands. "Their clothes were on fire. It was terrible."

Harry Smith of New Zealand said he saw a ball of flame followed by a huge blast. "I was about 100 feet away," he said. "I hid down behind something. People were running and screaming."

An Amtrak train from Washington and New York was due to arrive in Montreal at 9:35 a.m. It was a half hour late, and the bomb exploded 17 minutes after the Amtrak train entered the station.

An Amtrak official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said there was no reason to believe that train was the target.

Shortly after the blast, police received a phone call warning of a second bomb in the station, but no other explosives were found.

Brigham was arrested on a street near the station after a Canadian Press reporter said he told her in an interview at the train station that he had mailed letters threatening the pope.

"I wrote that," he told Kathryn Leger, after being shown a photograph of a letter the U.S. passenger rail agency Amtrak received last week and turned over to police.

Brigham said Monday was his birthday.

"I knew something terrible was going to happen with the transport system," he told Leger in a chance 20-minute conversation outside the station. "I had been communicating with cosmic forces."

The man said he did not plant the bomb, but was quoted as saying: "I saw the clock. It said 10:17 and that is important because it has been 117 years since the Americans delegated their first representative to the Vatican."

Railway officials said they received a note last week that did not mention a bomb, but the first line said: "9:30 a.m. September 3, 1984. The END of The UNHOLY Vatican Kill Popes!" The bomb exploded at 10:22 a.m.

The note, containing phrases in both French and English, also said: "Blood will be on your hands ... don't ignore." A Canadian Press photographer took a picture of a photocopy of the note that was shown to him by a policeman.

The note contains the words, "Lee Private Hosp. Lake Ave. N.Y." and includes the names of several Canadian news organizations and individual journalists.

Police would not comment on the note, which was addressed to the "directeur" of Amtrak, the U.S. passenger rail service. Police at a news conference declined to say if security had been increased at Montreal train stations after the note was received.

Sgt. Menard said Montreal police spoke Monday night with Brigham's son, a priest in St. Louis, Mo., who said his father once was declared mentally unfit and had spent some time in an institution.

Menard said Brigham — a veteran who was taken prisoner in Nazi Germany after being shot down in 1944 — was being observed by the U.S. Secret Service until sometime last year "for following President Reagan."

Meanwhile, police, acting on an anonymous telephone tip, evacuated hundreds of people from Montreal's Dorval Airport and closed it for 90 minutes Monday while they searched for a bomb.

"We searched the area completely with dogs and we didn't find anything," Transport Canada spokesman Armand Cloutier told a reporter. He said the threat was taken seriously because of the train station bombing.

Mondale Attacks Reagan As Leader Of 'Uncaring, Icy Indifference'

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Along the urban canyons of Manhattan, before small-town Wisconsin, and in Ronald Reagan's home state of California, Walter F. Mondale has opened the Democrats' fall campaign by attacking the president as a leader of "uncaring, icy indifference to human need."

From coast to coast on Labor Day, Mondale and his running mate, Geraldine A. Ferraro, campaigned together for 15 hours, sounding themes they hope will reverse the public opinion polls and prevent a second Reagan term.

On the West Coast, Mondale was greeted by two former rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado and Alan Cranston of California.

Hart, who spent five months attacking Mondale as the leader of the old Democratic politics, praised him generously at an airport rally in Long Beach, Calif.

"Walter Mondale has courage," said Hart, who planned a day of campaigning for the ticket in central California Tuesday.

Earlier, before about 5,000 cheering supporters in Merrill, Wis., (pop. 9,502) Mondale recalled that the late radio commentator H.V. Kaltenborn, a native of Merrill, had reported Harry S. Truman's defeat prematurely in the 1948 presidential election.

"I loved H.V. Kaltenborn," said Mondale, "but he was wrong. These pundits that say we are going to lose, they are wrong. The people know what's going on and we are going to win it."

Mondale and Ferraro's campaign day was marred by low turnout for a Labor Day parade in New York, and by a late arrival and a faulty microphone in Long Beach.

There, the crowd of about 4,000 waited four hours for the two candidates to arrive. As Mondale spoke, his microphone went out intermittently, and a listener in the audience fell ill and required emergency medical treatment.

In New York, Mondale and Ferraro marched at the head of the parade, but a relative handful of early risers turned out at 9 a.m. to watch the Democratic ticket march together down Fifth Avenue.

Campaign aides said the parade was left on the schedule despite the likelihood of a small crowd so that Mondale's core support in the Northeast and among union members would be emphasized on the traditional kickoff day for the fall campaign.

It was a different story in Wisconsin, where cheering and clapping residents of Merrill lined Main Street five deep as Mondale and Ferraro rode by in an open 1958 Ford Fairlane convertible under sunny skies.

One resident wrapped his house in a banner saying, "Welcome Mondale-Ferraro," and another carried a sign that read "Swiss for Mondale-Ferraro." The mood was festive and decidedly upbeat.

At parade's end, both candidates spoke from an old-fashioned podium draped in red, white and blue bunting at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

A steady drizzle fell throughout Ferraro's speech during which she mispronounced the name of the late Robert LaFollette, founder of the Progressive Party and a political hero in the state. At another point, she also referred to the day when she would be inaugurated in January as the first woman president.

Despite the gaffes and the weather, the Democratic vice presidential nominee was warmly received.

In a speech broken more than two dozen times by applause, Ms. Ferraro said, "While Ronald Reagan was making movies, Fritz Mondale was making history as a champion of civil rights and social justice."

"While Ronald Reagan was host of Death Valley days, Fritz Mondale was trying to get Medicare for senior citizens."

The rain stopped just as Mondale began his rally speech, during which he charged that Reagan's first presidential term has benefited only rich Americans.

"I don't believe a president should just serve all the people in his country club. I believe a president should serve all the people in the country," he said.

"Let us end this uncaring icy indifference to human need in American society..."

Both Mondale and Ferraro were critical of Reagan's contention that politics and religion are inextricably intertwined and of the president's support of a school prayer constitutional amendment.

"We don't need politicians to tell us how to pray," said Mondale, recalling his days as the son of a Methodist minister growing up in Elmore, Minn.

"Those who seek to inject government and politics into religion lack confidence in the wisdom and decency and good sense of the American people," he said. "They seem to say people can't be trusted."

On control of nuclear weapons, Mondale said Reagan has worsened the arms race through refusal to negotiate with Soviet leaders and by proposing new deadly weapons systems in space.

And Mondale called on Reagan to explain how he would deal with $200 billion federal deficits now projected annually over the next few years.

Mondale aides had said privately over the weekend that he would use the Labor Day swing to make public a new plan for reducing the federal deficit. But campaign staff aides decided the proposal needed further work and would be announced later.

Lightning Hits Jet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lightning struck a Piedmont Airlines Boeing 737 as it was unloading passengers during a severe thunderstorm at National Airport, and six workers who felt a shock were taken to a hospital for examination, authorities said.

Airport spokesman Dave Hess

said the plane had just landed on a flight from Charlotte, N.C., and passengers were debarking when the lightning bolt struck the plane's metal skin at 6:43 p.m. EDT Monday.

None of the passengers was injured, he said.

Indira Gandhi Embroiled In Political Crisis

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The ouster of N.T. Rama Rao as the chief minister of Andhra Pradesh state has left Prime Minister Indira Gandhi embroiled in India's worst political crisis since her return to office in 1980.

Five months before Parliamentary elections, the controversy has united a heretofore splintered opposition and sullied the 66-year-old leader's image.

The dismissal of Rama Rao was the third such action against an opposition-led state government in three months, leaving three of India's 22 states controlled by parties other than Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party.

While the prime minister has publicly denied engineering the maneuvers, critics charge that they are part of a strong-arm campaign to build her political base before the elections in January.

Press reaction has been sharp and intense, with some of Mrs. Gandhi's most reliable news media supporters condemning the action in editorials.

Independent newspapers warn of "the death of democracy," and one of them published a front-page cartoon showing Mrs. Gandhi trampling on the Indian constitution.

The Indian Express called Rama Rao's dismissal "another disgraceful chapter" under what it called Mrs. Gandhi's "increasingly malign regime."

"Neither Andhra Pradesh nor India is going to take this blatant assault on democracy without the strongest protest," it added.

"The lights are going out all over the country and fascist tendencies are manifesting themselves. ... We have been warned."

Mrs. Gandhi returned to office in 1980 following another controversial period in her career. In 1975 a court nullified her 1971 election to Parliament on the grounds of vote irregularities. With the opposition clamoring for her resignation, a state of emergency was declared in the name of the president and Mrs. Gandhi remained in office until her party's election defeat two years later. She returned victorious in 1980.

The Andhra Pradesh controversy had its beginnings 18 months ago when the 60-year-old Rama Rao, a former movie actor who played Hindu gods in about 300 films before turning to politics, led his Telugu Desam Party to a stunning landslide victory in the state election. It was a humiliating defeat for Mrs. Gandhi since her own Parliament seat is from Andhra Pradesh state.

Rama Rao became one of Mrs. Gandhi's harshest critics and publicly vowed that he would not let her "meddle" in state affairs.

On Aug. 16, one day after returning from heart surgery in the United States, Rama Rao was dismissed by the state governor, a Gandhi appointee, on grounds that he had lost his majority in the 295-seat state assembly.

Rama Rao's effort to prove otherwise included a theatrical parade of more than 160 legislative supporters — a clear majority — before President Zail Singh in New Delhi. The president promised "justice within my purview," but has no real power to act.

Calling his ouster a "butchering of democracy," Rama Rao subsequently accused the Congress Party of offering as much as $250,000 to induce his supporters to defect.

Evidently embarrassed by the uproar, Mrs. Gandhi replaced the governor responsible for the dismissal, but there has been no move to let Rama Rao prove his case through a confidence vote in the state legislature.

In the national Parliament, Mrs. Gandhi denied prior knowledge of Rama Rao's dismissal, saying she first heard of it from a news agency report.

Few political analysts appear to believe that. "Governors do not sneeze without Mrs. Gandhi's permission," wrote political commentator H.K. Dua.

While the deposed Rama Rao has toured Andhra Pradesh in an effort to drum up popular support among its 54 million people for his reinstatement, some analysts think it already may be too late for him to win a legislative showdown.

"Such a test would be futile," said the journal India Today.

It added that the new chief minister of the state, Bhaskara Rao (no relation to Rama Rao), "has one of the most vital ingredients to succeed: time. Time to win, or buy defections from the opposite camp, a process which Indian politicians and society now seem to take for routine."

"There couldn't be a sadder comment on the state of Indian democracy."

But the controversy has built new confidence in the opposition.

"We have to oust Mrs. Gandhi to save the country," said Charan Singh, president of the Lok Dal (People's Party). "Whatever our differences between parties, they pale into insignificance when we see what harm she is causing to India."

Math Grant

ECU News Bureau

Mathematics may be considered the cornerstone of exact science, however, a university mathematician now believes that an element of uncertainty should be introduced into formulas for plotting complex industrial research and development projects.

Iranian-born S. Javad Seyedghasemipour, a lecturer in the math department at East Carolina University, has been awarded a $36,425 grant to develop a mathematical network model for research which takes into account the "accomodating of special instances confronted in a research and development project from a logical point of view."

His work, being supported by the Bartlesville Energy Technology Center, is designed to provide a more accurate and efficient tool for management for planning research activities and forecasting the future progress path of plans.

According to Seyedghasemipour, network models have been used for years in scheduling of large research and development projects. He added that deterministic versions of network models CPM and PERT are implemented extensively. These models contain rigid elements of chance in duration, level of resource requirements and structure and thus "the implementation of such deterministic models has not been very successful," he said.

"Even the PERT model in which the element of randomness is introduced in the activity duration has not attracted widespread interest of the managers dealing with budgeting and planning of research and development projects," he said.

In his work, Seyedghasemipour is using a Generalized Activity Network (GAN) and its simulated language, GERT-S.

"In this project we propose GAN and GERT-S be used for planning of R&D projects conducted at Bartlesfield Energy Technology Center. In this manner, the randomness which is the special peculiarity of activities in a R&D project is pondered," he says.

Seyedghasemipour, who joined the ECU mathematics faculty last year, has degrees from Abadan Institute of Technology, Abadan, Iran, and George Washington University. He has also done doctoral studies at North Carolina State University.

Honecker Trip Ruled Out In Face Of Controversy

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany said today that Communist leader Erich Honecker will not make his expected first visit to West Germany during September.

The official East German news agency ADN quoted the head of the East German mission in Bonn, Ewald Moldt, as saying controversy in the West German capital over the visit made the date the Bonn government had hoped Honecker would come "no longer realistic."

West German officials, including Chancellor Helmut Kohl, have said repeatedly in recent weeks that negotiations with the East Germans had led them to expect Honecker to make the historic visit this fall.

No date was mentioned publicly, but officials in Bonn said privately the last week of September was under discussion.

Kohl, commenting briefly on the ADN report during an appearance in Duesseldorf, said the invitation to Honecker "still stands."

West German chancellery aide Philipp Jenninger, who met with Moldt today, told a news conference the Bonn government "cannot accept" the official East German line that public controversy over the visit prompted the decision.

Jenninger did not say what Bonn suspected to be the real reason for the East German move. He referred to the "postponement" of the Honecker visit, but did not say when it might be rescheduled.

The brief ADN report said Moldt specifically criticized remarks by Alfred Dregger, a conservative Christian Democrat parliament member who said last month that West Germany's future "does not depend on whether Honecker pays us the honor of a visit."

Such remarks as Dreggers' are "absolutely unusual for relations between sovereign states," ADN quoted Moldt as saying.

The ADN report did not say whether Honecker would come at another date, but quoted Moldt as saying "much is still open."

The news agency carried no statement from Honecker.

Honecker has been under pressure from the Soviet Union to cancel the trip. The official Soviet media has repeatedly accused West Germany of seeking to meddle in East German affairs.

A Honecker trip to West Germany would be the first such visit by an East German president since Germany was divided into two states at the end of World War II.

Groups Fight Proposal To Destroy Embryos

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Anti-abortion groups said today they will try to stop state officials from destroying two frozen embryos, whose fate was in put in limbo by the death of an American couple in a plane crash.

Scientists have said that the embryos, created with the aid of "test-tube" techniques, were unlikely to survive thawing and implantation into the womb of a surrogate mother. Despite the pessimism for survival, a government committee's recommendation for destruction has unleashed outcries of protest.

The head of the test-tube baby program at Queen Victoria Medical Center in Melbourne, where the embryos were created and are being stored, also came out strongly today against the committee's recommendation.

Victoria state's attorney general, Jim Kennan, announced Monday that a committee had tentatively recommended the embryos be destroyed. Kennan said a final decision would be made in December, giving the state time to hear public debate on the recommendation.

The ethical and scientific dilemma arose after a Los Angeles couple, Elsa and Mario Rios, were killed in a plane crash in Chile last year. The wealthy couple had been trying to have a child through the method of in vitro fertilization, in which a woman's eggs are extracted from an ovary and fertilized in a container in a laboratory.

Margaret Tighe, president of an anti-abortion group in the state of Victoria, said her organization would put strong pressure on officials not to destroy the embryos.

"It is terrible that human beings are allowed to be produced in laboratories, frozen and then abandoned and allowed to die," she said in a statement.

Professor Carl Wood, head of the in vitro fertilization program at Queen Victoria, said he would oppose the recommendation.

"I don't see that it is respecting it (the embryos) to let it thaw out and die," he said.

Wood had said earlier that the embryos were frozen when the technique was in its pioneer stage and that there was little chance they could survive thawing.

When the existence of the embryos was revealed by press reports in June, anti-abortion groups worldwide demanded that every effort be made to bring them to birth, by implantation in a surrogate mother.

Women in Australia, the United States, Japan and other nations volunteered to have the embryos implanted in them.

Among the questions concerning the fate of the embryos was whether they would inherit the Rios' estate, estimated to be worth more than $1 million.

Wood said today that a couples who can't have their own child should be given the embryos. "I see the chance of a couple to have a baby from an unwanted embryo as a very appropriate stage for adoption," he said.

State officials said in June that a scholarly committee that had been studying the legal and ethical problems of in vitro fertilization since 1982 would consider the fate of the embryos. Kennan said at the time that the state would follow the decision of the committee of legal experts, philosophers, theologians and scientists.

But officials appeared to have had second doubts. The committee made its report two weeks ago, but Kennan did not announce the findings until Monday, and he added the three-month public debate period.

The office of Louis Waller, a law professor who headed the committee, said he was out of the country and could not be reached for comment.

The committee decided the embryos should be disposed of because the Rios had not specified what should be done in case they died.

Mr. and Mrs. Rios first child was killed in an accidental shooting. They used the method of in vitro fertilization because she had been unable to conceive a second child. Donated sperm was used after test indicated Mr. Rios was no longer fertile.

Some of the fertilized eggs were implanted in her uterus, but she did not become pregnant. Two of the fertilized eggs that had developed into embryos in their laboratory containers were then frozen.

The technique of freezing embryos for later implantation was developed at Queen Victoria. Two births have resulted from embryos frozen at the center, and six women are now pregnant after embryos frozen at the center were implanted in them, doctors said.

Couples enrolling in the in vitro program at Queen Victoria now must state what should be done with their frozen embryos if they should die or be divorced.

The committee also said that medical experimentation should be allowed on embryos up to 14 days old and that freezing of embryos should continue. It came out against paying women to carry another woman's embryo to term.

IRS May Be Taking Too Much Off Top

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you are one of the 75 percent of taxpayers who received a federal refund this year, you may be able to take home more money each pay period by legally having less tax withheld from your check.

The Internal Revenue Service, which has authorized more than 67.7 million refunds totaling $55.3 billion this year, is mailing employers a bulletin-board notice to remind workers that they may need to file a new Form W-4 to adjust their withholding.

A change in the number of withholding allowances claimed — not to be confused with the $1,000 exemptions you take when you file your tax return — may be necessary to reflect a change in marital status or family size or if a worker or spouse becomes 65 or blind.

You may be able to reduce withholding if you itemize deductions or expect to claim certain tax credits when you file a return next year. Special allowances also are permitted for contributors to an Individual Retirement Account and for working couples.

The greater number of allowances claimed, the less tax withheld. If you fear you will owe tax at the end of the year, your employer can withhold any extra amount you wish. But it is illegal to claim excessive allowances just to cut withholding.

You may need to increase withholding if your spouse works or you have two jobs. A person who goes to work in the middle of the year after being unemployed may have too much tax withheld and should ask the employer to use the part-year method of withholding for the remainder of the year, the IRS says.

Woodward Garber of Cincinnati had a lifetime dream of sailing around the world. In 1978, he and eight others signed a contract with Harold O. Newell, owner-captain of The Lady Esther II, to circle the globe at a cost of $16,000 each, paid in advance.

The Esther set sail from Miami on Nov. 17, but after about five months, Garber became ill and returned to the United States. He was well again by October, but before he could rejoin the cruise, the boat was destroyed by fire in the Indian Ocean.

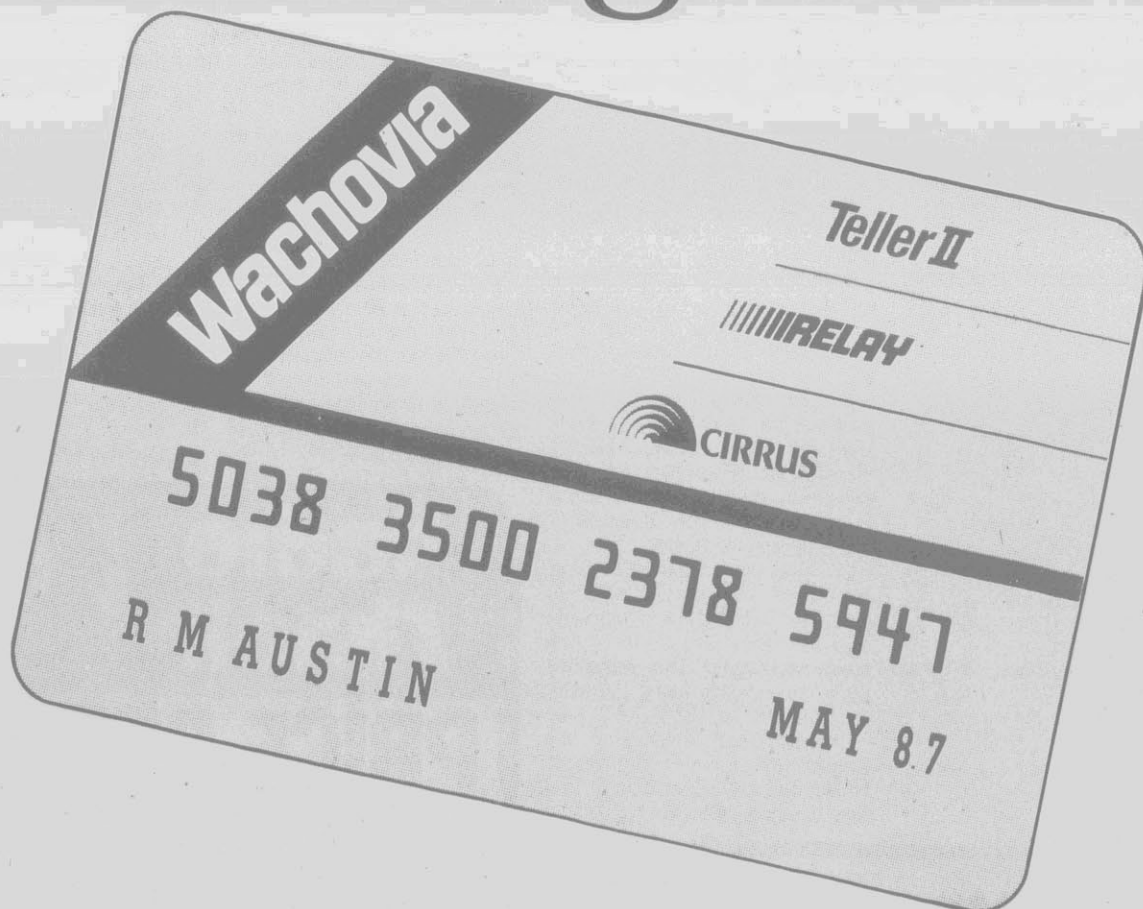

Newell received full insurance reimbursement for the loss. Garber, his dream up in smoke, was told he had a good claim against Newell for failure to perform the contract — but that the attorneys' fees would exceed his $16,000. So he wrote off $13,062 of the money on his tax return as a bad debt, only to have the claim rejected by the IRS.

The Tax Court sank the claim. "It is extremely questionable whether ... (Garber), even if he had brought suit for breach of contract, could have established any amount due him under the terms of the agreement," the court held. In any case, the decision said, there was no debt to be written off.

The law allows employers a special tax credit for each worker they hire from the ranks of the poor and handicapped; certification for each worker must be made by state employment-security officials "on or before the day the individual begins work."

A worker started his job on Veterans Day — a federal holiday. The employer's letter requesting certification was postmarked the following day, and the state refused to clear the worker. In a private ruling, the IRS held the state was wrong.

Hogeboom Leads Cowboys, 20-13

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — While Danny White calls it an experiment, Gary Hogeboom figures to be the first-string quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys for years to come if his first National Football League regular-season start is an accurate measure of his talents.

Hogeboom set a franchise record for completions in a game Monday night as the Cowboys, as they usually do, opened the season with a victory.

"I had fun, hopefully there's more to come," Hogeboom said after completing 33 of his 47 passing attempts for 343 yards to lead the Cowboys to a 20-13 come-from-behind win over the Los Angeles Rams. "I was very pleased with my performance."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry announced last Tuesday that Hogeboom would replace White as the Cowboys' starting quarterback. White had been the starter since Roger Staubach retired after the 1979 season.

White said he had mixed emotions watching the nationally televised game at Anaheim Stadium.

"It was exciting to see how well the defense played," he said. "We have the potential to win the Super Bowl with defense like that."

Asked about his future, White said, "I won't make a permanent decision until this experiment is over."

Ironically, the record Hogeboom broke was set by White, who completed 31 throws last Nov. 13 against San Diego.

The triumph was the 19th for the Cowboys in their last 20 season-openers — their only loss coming at the hands of the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1982 — and gave them an 11-0 record in openers on the road.

It also enabled Landry to become the second-winningest coach in NFL history.

Landry, the only head coach the Cowboys have had since the franchise was formed in 1960, has 235 victories to 234 for former Green Bay Coach Curly Lambeau.

The late George Halas, who coached the Chicago Bears, is the all-time leader with 325 wins.

The Cowboys won despite committing four turnovers in the first 16½ minutes and five in the game. They trailed 13-0 after only 12:32 of play. Then, their defense took over and Hogeboom began hitting with regularity.

"I thought the key to the Dallas win was their defense, they were outstanding," said Los Angeles Coach John Robinson. "It was a game we let get away from us. I thought our defense played well but we left them on the field too long."

The Cowboys had the ball for 37 minutes, 53 seconds of the game and finished with 436 yards in total offense to only 204 for Los Angeles.

Yet Dallas fell behind after 3:01 of play, didn't tie the contest until Rafael Septien's 52-yard field goal with 13:44 remaining, and didn't go ahead until Tony Dorsett raced seven yards for a touchdown with 3:56 left to complete the scoring.

Los Angeles running back Eric Dickerson, who scored his team's only touchdown on a 2-yard run in the opening minutes, had a good game, finishing with 138 yards on 21 carries. Dickerson led the NFL in rushing as a rookie last year with 1,808 yards.

However, the Cowboys did a superb job in defending against the pass. Quarterback Vince Ferragamo of the Rams completed only 11 of his 33 throws for just 84 yards and was intercepted four times.

"Eric ran the ball well but our timing was off on our passing," Ferragamo said. "They made us throw quick and double-covered our receivers. The momentum totally changed after we were up 13-0. We had our chances but didn't capitalize."

Dickerson's touchdown came immediately after Hogeboom was hit while attempting to pass by Los Angeles linebacker George Andrews and fumbled. Defensive end Jack Youngblood of the Rams scooped the ball up and ran nine yards to the Dallas 2-yard line.

The Rams got their other points on field goals of 31 and 36 yards by Mike Lansford later in the first quarter. The first three-pointer followed a 23-yard interception return by Gary Green to the Dallas 44-yard line; the second came after a fumble by Dorsett was recovered by Eric Harris at the Cowboys' 25.

The Cowboys made it 13-7 on a 19-yard touchdown pass from Hogeboom to Doug Cosbie with 5:51 left in the second quarter, and 13-10 on a 31-yard field goal by Septien with 6:01 remaining in the third period.

After the Cowboys drove 69 yards in nine plays to take their 20-13 lead, the Rams posed one final threat, getting as far as the Dallas 39-yard line. But on a fourth-and-one play, Dickerson was thrown for a 1-yard loss by defensive tackle Randy White.

"It was the exact same play as the Ram touchdown," said White, who was a holdout until a week ago Monday. "Dickerson gets the ball and picks his hole. I beat the center's cut block and was able to stop the play."

Three Dallas players established personal single-game highs in receptions — Dorsett caught 10 passes for 66 yards; Doug Donley had nine catches for 137 yards; and Cosbie had eight receptions for 99 yards. Dorsett also rushed for 81 yards on 25 carries.

"This one will give us confidence with a long season ahead," Landry said. "It will be a very interesting season with a 40 percent turnover in personnel and 12 rookies."

Landry didn't even mention the new starter at quarterback.

"I was very pleased with his performance," Landry said of Hogeboom, who is beginning his fifth professional season. "I felt he had that kind of game in him. We are blessed to have two great quarterbacks."

The Cowboys-Rams game was the second NFL contest of the day. In the afternoon, the Seattle Seahawks won their first regular-season opener ever by pouncing the Cleveland Browns 33-0.

Dave Krieg threw three touchdown passes and Norm Johnson kicked three field goals for the Seahawks, who had to start their ninth season on Monday afternoon because baseball's Seattle Mariners played at the Kingdome on Sunday.

The victory, however, was a costly one for the Seahawks. All-Pro running back Curt Warner limped off the field with a knee injury in the second quarter, and after the game team officials said Warner was to undergo arthroscopic surgery today.

"It's possible ligament damage," said team spokesman Gary Wright. The injury apparently occurred when he planted his right foot on the artificial turf.

"It does not look good," said Seattle Coach Chuck Knox.

Cleveland was shut out for the first time since Nov. 27, 1977, when it lost 9-0 to a Rams team also coached by Knox.

Three Gain EC Honors

Three East Carolina University football players were honored for their play in the Florida State game by being named "Players of the Week" by the Buc coaching staff.

They are Tim Mitchell, offensive center; and Jeff Bolch and Jeff Heath, specialty team members.

Mitchell, a 6-2, 247-pound senior from Lancaster, Pa., was named as the offensive team's top player for his centering and blocking in the Florida State game. Mitchell, who started much of last year, was a walk-on who earned a scholarship with the Pirates.

Bolch, a 5-11, 185-pound senior punter from Hickory, kicked five times for a 43.0 yard average against the Seminoles to share specialty team honors with Heath, a 6-0, 210-pound sophomore place kicker from Virginia Beach, Va.

Heath kicked a 52-yard field goal to open the ECU scoring, and that kick tied the career record of 26 set by Bill Lamm. His two additional extra points boosted his career total of 135 points, moving him into the number ten spot of all-time scorers for the Pirates. Heath passed Tom Michel, who had 132 points in his career from 1961-63. He is only one point behind number nine Bill Cline who had 136 points. Carlester Crumpler holds to scoring record with 222 points, a goal which should be well within Heath's reach if he stays healthy and on target.

No player was honored on the defensive unit.

Martina Doesn't Feel Invincible

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since she stormed to the U.S. Open women's championship a year ago, the question has been not who would win this year's tournament but whether anyone could even come close to beating Martina Navratilova.

She may be the only one who doesn't think that way — she says. Yet, through four rounds, no one has come close to beating her.

"I don't think about that," the top-seeded Navratilova said Monday. "If I did, I'd get beat. Maybe I have a low opinion of myself. I don't know."

"Everybody seems to think I have this in the bag. But you can't take anything for granted and I haven't, which is why I've been winning. I certainly don't think that way. It's nice that others do, but I can't afford to think that way at all."

Today, John McEnroe, the No. 1 men's seed, was to face unheralded and unseeded Robert Green in a fourth-round match.

Rain first delayed and then washed out Monday night's matches, including No. 4 men's seed Mats Wilander of Sweden against Tim Mayotte and Sylvia Hanika of West Germany against Petra Huber of Austria. They were rescheduled for today with the Hanika-Huber winner to face No. 2 seed Chris Evert Lloyd in the quarterfinals.

Jimmy Connors, No. 3, plays No.

16 Joakim Nystrom of Sweden to-night in the fourth round.

On Monday, with an all-time record crowd of 21,112 at the National Tennis Center, Navratilova methodically defeated No. 15 seed Barbara Potter 6-4, 6-4 in just 61 minutes to move into the quarterfinals of the $2.55 million tournament.

Lloyd, the No. 2 seed and loser to Navratilova in last year's finals, had an even easier time reaching the quarters as she swept No. 12 seed Bonnie Gadusek 6-4, 6-0. But No. 3 seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia had to struggle to beat Lori McNeil 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Pam Shriver, seeded fourth and a two-time winner over Navratilova in previous U.S. Open competition, had the easiest time of all reaching the quarters, advancing uncontested when Susan Mascarin pulled out of the tournament with a sprained right ankle.

Monday's other women's seeded fourth-round winners were No. 14 Carling Bassett of Canada, 6-1, 6-1 over Petra Delhees Jauch of Switzerland, and No. 13 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, 6-3, 6-1 over No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany.

Hurricanes Blow Into First Place

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Although the Miami Hurricanes reclaimed the No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll, the bad news outweighed the good news for college football's defending national champions.

Starting guard Juan Comendore fractured an ankle in practice Monday and will be out for at least six weeks. Cornerback Reggie Sutton, who missed Saturday night's 32-20 victory over No. 17 Florida, was still unable to practice. Tight end Willie Smith, who tied a school record with 11 receptions against Florida, came out of the game with a sprained ankle and Coach Jimmy Johnson listed him as "very questionable" for Saturday's trip to Michigan.

Star receiver Eddie Brown has a sore thumb but should be all right by Saturday.

So, it was understandable why Johnson wasn't exactly ecstatic about being No. 1.

"A few players mentioned during practice that we probably would be," Johnson said. "But our only concern is to get ready to play Michigan . . . that and the injury situation."

"Right now, we have a lot of work to do before we're a top-notch football team. We're fortunate to have a couple of wins and we've done some good things obviously, but we still have a lot of work to do and there's a lot of football to be played."

"You can't believe how poorly we played against Florida and how good we played against Auburn (the Hurricanes defeated the No. 1-ranked Tigers 20-18 in last Monday night's Kickoff Classic). Having only two practices (between games) and a lack of intensity really hurt us. The kids were drained, the coaches were drained."

"The feeling after the game was not one of a joyous moment; it was more of relief that it was over and we were able to win."

While the Hurricanes soared from No. 10 in the preseason poll all the way back to the top spot they held at the end of the 1983 season, Nebraska held onto the runnerup spot — just like last year — and Auburn dropped to eighth place.

In the first regular-season poll, Miami received 36 of 55 first-place votes and 1,040 of a possible 1,100 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska, which opens its season against Wyoming this weekend, had seven first-place votes and 949 points. The Cornhuskers also were second in the preseason poll.

"We definitely proved ourselves in the first two games that we could be No. 1," said Miami roverback Kenny Calhoun. "But it's early in the season and it could be a hindrance."

INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

'New' Coach Optimistic At Farmville

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — Dixon Sauls may be new to the Farmville Central coaching staff, but the former Ayden-Grifton mentor certainly isn't coming to the Jaguars totally unknown.

Over the past years at Ayden-Grifton, Sauls has played against the Jaguars and he has also been living in Farmville, so he knows the personnel there much better than would the normal incoming head coach.

And, he feels, this is an advantage in getting the team ready for the 1984 Eastern Carolina Conference campaign.

"I think the players have adjusted quite well to the changeover and to what we're trying to do," Sauls said. The Jaguars will be using two tight ends and a flanker in their backfield which will sometimes use the I-back and some times the split backs look.

"Last year they were more of an I-type team, but until we find a reliable fullback, we probably won't be in the I that much," Sauls said.

Defensively, the Jaguars will line up in an eight man front, but again Sauls said there would be some variation, showing a six-man, a five-man and a four-man front.

And there is experience around, too, especially on offense where seven starters return, all currently in the same positions as last year. "There may be some adjustments in that after the first few games," the coach said. On defense, the Jaguars return three starters and two of them are already at new positions. Dennis Tripp has been moved from an outside to an inside linebacker and Jerome Daniels has moved to either tackle or linebacker from a guard spot last season. The only returnee in the same position is outside linebacker Andre Vines.

"I had hoped that we would be further along in our offense at this point," Sauls said. "We're still in an adjustment period. We're asking our guards to do more than they have in the past and that's been a big adjustment for them. We're progressing more slowly in blocking schemes and the passing game and it may take three to five games for us to find out what we can do."

Fortunately, Sauls will not have to replace many of the offensive starters, including the key position of quarterback. Bobby Evans returns to that spot and Sauls notes that he is a more mature player with a fine arm. "Right now, he just needs to get some more game experience under his belt," Sauls said.

And he's got veteran talent to throw to. Tripp and Vines return at the tight end positions and they have the size to be good receivers as well as good blockers on the running plays. Joe Smith and Eric Baker will alternate at the flanker slot, and Sauls says both have good hands and quickness.

The top returning running back is Jeff Vail, "who has excellent moves and quickness," Sauls said. "He probably will be our primary ball carrier early."

Edward Davis is currently the fullback, having seen part time starting duty early last season. "We're going to be looking at some younger players to help us too," the coach said. Those players include Jackie Hardy and Carl Harris at fullback and Gary Moore, a talented freshman, at tailback.

Troy Hardee and Jeff Flake return at the tackle positions, with Jerome Daniels back at one of the guard slots. Bill Blount, up from the jayvees, takes over at the other guard position. The center will be Johnnie Eastwood, also up from the junior varsity.

"It's a good blend of veterans with new newcomers in the line," Sauls said of the offense.

Meanwhile, the defense finds a number of new faces and right now Sauls says the unit is "a step slow. We need to be more aggressive. But,

I guess it's to be expected since we've spent so much more time on the offense. I think the potential is there to be a solid club, but we're got to be wary of giving up the big play because of our lack of speed and experience."

Vines and Mike Ellis will be at the outside linebacker slots with Tripp and Blount on the inside.

Daniels will be at one tackle and right now he's the only lineman with a definite starting position sewed up. Others who could figure in the other three slots include Davis, Eastwood, Hardee, Jeff White, D.E. King and Harris.

Smith will likely be at the safety spot with Vail and Baker at the corners. Moore is also expected to see a good deal of duty in the backfield.

"Right now, we've got a lot of people going both ways, but I hope that after a few games, we can cut it down to maybe four or five going both ways," Sauls said.

The Jaguar kicking game right now is a big question mark. "We lost our punter, kicker and snapper from last year," Sauls said. "We haven't been tested, and I expect us to go for two points on conversions for now."

Moore and Daniels will handle the kicking duties with either Smith or Daniel Dilda doing the punting.

"It would appear that SouthWest (Edgecombe) has momentum," in the ECC race, Sauls said. "They have three or four outstanding athletes, but they're not as deep as they were. I think we can be in the top three with them and probably Southern Nash. If we can come through our non-conference games and gain some confidence and learn to play together in the proper positions I think we can be solid before the year is out."

That might mean another trip to the playoffs for the Jaguars, who went to the Division II playoffs last year, advancing to the Eastern semifinals before losing to Williamston.

Ironically, it's the Tigers they face Friday night in the opening game for the Jaguars. "They beat us twice last year, in our first game and our last. And I'd have to say that they have an advantage over us this year. They've already played a game (7-0 loss to Perquimans). That gives them a chance to see their mistakes and to correct them."

But the two losses to the Tigers means a lot too. "Our seniors will be more motivated than usual," Sauls said. "If we don't beat ourselves early, I think we have a chance to have a good team."

Hunt Disagrees With Mondale On The Need To Raise Taxes

By MARY ANNERHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A spokesman for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., charged that it has become "politically expedient" for Gov. Jim Hunt to disassociate himself from Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale.

The charge came Monday after Hunt said he disagreed with Mondale about the need to raise taxes to reduce the federal deficit. But he said that's a position he's held all along.

Hunt, the Democratic candidate for Helms' U.S. Senate seat, took advantage of the holiday to meet reporters and voters as they shopped holiday sales in Wake County. Helms, a Republican seeking his third term, took the day off to relax with his family.

"We can care for our people without raising taxes on the hard-working middle class," Hunt said. "We've done it here in North Carolina. We've held the line on unnecessary taxes and spending."

"We've balanced our state budget every year for the past eight years. We've proved that we can have both a fiscally responsible government and a fair and caring government," he said.

Mondale has warned voters that he believes a tax increase will be needed in addition to closing tax loopholes and spending cutbacks to reduce the federal deficit. Hunt said the deficit could be cut in half in one year with the proper balance of tax reform and spending cuts.

But Helms' campaign spokesman Claude Allen said that's not the same position Hunt took in August, when Hunt was quoted in the newspaper as calling Mondale's stance fiscally responsible.

"Here goes Gov. Hunt once again with his flip flop," Allen said. "On two different occasions he has come out and praised Walter Mondale's plan as being fiscally responsible."

Allen charged that it has become "politically expedient" for Hunt to disassociate himself from Mondale.

Hunt also attacked Helms' approach to balancing the federal budget. He charged that Helms has worked to give tax breaks to big oil companies and the wealthy, to cut spending for education and the elderly and to continue spending on military contracts that involve waste.

"One way you can get the deficit down is by rooting waste and inefficiency out of those huge military contracts, but that's about the only thing Sen. Helms doesn't want to cut," Hunt charged.

Allen said Hunt was wrong on all counts. He said Helms always has "spoken out against waste, fraud and abuse regardless of what program it is in."

Labor Day traditionally marks an increased intensity in political campaigns and Hunt said he sees growing interest in the Senate race as it comes nearer to the time to select a candidate. He said he feels more confident than at any time since Helms' campaign began airing television commercials in early 1983.

"People now are sort of saying they want to know what you're going to do to help us," Hunt said.

He said his campaign will focus on what actions he would take if elected senator. One opportunity for doing that will be Sunday, when Helms and Hunt are scheduled to meet for a second television debate in Wilmington.

"I will continue to make the differences between us as clear as we can," Hunt said. "There were a lot of topics not covered in the first debate — education, environment, tax fairness."

Conservatives Upset By Female Chaplain At Baptist Seminary

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — A woman appointed as chaplain at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary says she sees herself as a pastor, not as a symbol of women's ordination.

But the appointment of Dr. Donna Myra Forrester by Dr. W. Randall Lolley, Southeastern's president, on Aug. 1 as the seminary's full-time chaplain has upset some conservative Baptist ministers.

"The ordination of women is new to Southern Baptist life, but Southeastern is pushing it, promoting it and misguiding young ladies into thinking churches will call them," the Rev. Robert M. Tenery of Morganton said.

But Lolley said he thought the appointment was correct. "This is how I've always read Scripture," he said.

In June, the national convention passed a resolution discouraging the ordination of women. Conservatives, who believe the Bible is the literal word of God, cited Bible passages they say forbid the ordination of women.

Ms. Forrester, who received her doctorate from Southeastern in 1981, said she was eager to get on with her work.

"A lot of friends thought I was crazy to walk back into the center of this," she said. "I have some concerns, but my goals in life and my call to the ministry outweigh those fears and anxieties."

During an address at the seminary chapel last week, Lolley challenged the conservatives' reading of the Bible and criticized the supporters of the resolution.

"They select a few verses, disregard their context, bend their interpretation and make then normative for faith and practice," Lolley said.

Tenery, the vice president of the convention's Pastor's Conference, said Lolley was "thumbing his nose" at the sentiment expressed in the resolution.

Although resolutions are not binding on local churches, some Baptists have said the resolution on the ordination of women violates a basic tenet of the denomination — the autonomy of the local church and its right to call whom it chooses to the ministry.

"That resolution should never have been adopted or debated by the messengers (convention delegates)," Lolley said. "It had to do with a matter that in our ecclesiology is left to the church. There's nothing we can do on the convention level."

Labor Unions Say Activity Has Picked Up

By The Associated Press

Union organizers say they're more optimistic about the future of organized labor in North Carolina and South Carolina, and labor experts say that unions have an opportunity to make inroads but that the growth may be slow.

"Our activity has picked up tremendously in the past month and a half," said Michael Black, a union organizer since 1971 and now the coordinator of the AFL-CIO's North Carolina and South Carolina organizing team.

"In the past six weeks, we've had more calls from workers about organizing than in the previous year," he said.

Labor leaders say the climate for organizing is the best since at least 1980. A strong economy has made workers more aggressive in pushing for better wages — and more inclined to risk employer's wrath by considering forming a union.

Christopher Scott, president of the North Carolina AFL-CIO, says the current activity stems from pent-up frustrations of workers who may have been laid off or believe they were treated unfairly during the recession. He says unions might be on the verge of a "terrific spurt of organizing."

"Clearly, there is a restlessness out there about the fact that our wages are so low," said Scott, adding that many workers feel they haven't shared in recent economic gains of their employers.

Labor experts say there is reason for optimism but are more cautious in their predictions about the progress of labor unions in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"There are forces at work that suggest that over the next 20 years there's a potential for a modest growth of unionization in the Carolinas and the rest of the South," said William Bigoness, professor at UNC's School of Business Administration. "The long-term development I'd predict is a modest increase in unionization."

Company officials acknowledge stepped-up efforts to organize the region, but doubt they will succeed any more than previous efforts. South Carolina ranks 50th and North Carolina 49th in the percentage of nonfarm workers who are union members, according to 1982 figures compiled this year by Rutgers University professors.

Richard Daniel, president of the Central Piedmont Employers Association, a pro-business group, says today's business managers are more attuned to the needs of workers, making unions irrelevant to workers.

"There's a much better educated group of managers who have learned modern management techniques," Daniel said. "Many workers in North and South Carolina don't find a third party necessary."

Financial Problems Could Face Schools

By The Associated Press

Private college and university officials often remind the state that it would have to pay about $80 million if the North Carolina students now in private school were to attend public institutions.

And they say that figure doesn't include the cost of putting up new buildings.

The cost difference between attending the private colleges and the public universities is so great that it is threatening the economic and, consequently, the educational health of the independent institutions, said Elon College President Fred Young.

"We can not remain healthy without reducing the financial disparities," he said.

"Everyone is raising money," said John Henley, president of the association of independent colleges and universities. "To catch a college president in his office is like a miracle. They're out digging to survive."

Young, who is chairman of the board of the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, says figures show that the gap between state support for private colleges and support of public universities has also increased during the past 10 years.

In 1973, the state paid $1,867 for each North Carolina undergraduate enrolled in a public university and $200 for each private college student for a difference of $1,667. The difference jumped to $3,045 in 1983.

The figures also note that the annual tuition at private schools, adjusted to reflect state aid, in 1973 was $1,426 as opposed to $454 for public schools. In 1983, average adjusted annual tuition was $2,941 in private schools and $727 in public schools.

Student population in public schools have risen substantially, posting an increase from 63,403 in 1973 to 79,524 in 1983. But the number of private school students has grown only from 22,778 in 1973 to 24,261 in 1983.

North Carolina has two major programs of aid to private colleges and universities — the legislative tuition grant and the state contract grant.

The legislative tuition grant, which is $850 for the current academic year, goes to every North Carolina student enrolled in one of the state's private colleges and universities.

The contract grant is $200, with private schools receiving that sum for each North Carolina student enrolled in their institution. That money is pooled and distributed to students on the basis of need.

The contract grant program began in 1971 and the $200 figure, established in 1973, hasn't changed since. Legislative tuition grants of $200 were added to the state aid program in 1975 and the General Assembly has gradually increased the amount of the tuition grants since.

For 1983-84, when the legislative tuition grant was $750, the state provided about $20.5 million for the private colleges through the two grant programs — $15.9 million through the legislative tuition grants and $4.6 million through contract grants.

81-Year-Old Jailer Loved By Prisoners, Officials

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Times have changed for Dessie Odom, the 81-year-old jailer in Graham County.

For one thing, she isn't the full-time dispatcher anymore, and she admits that the jail, which can accommodate six prisoners, doesn't fill up like it used to. She doesn't carry a gun anymore.

"I've had mean ones and drunks and murderers and every kind in jail," said Mrs. Odom. "I've seen 'em come and go, and nobody ever said anything bad to me. Nobody's ever been mean to me. It's a wonder I never was hurt. I been back there in the jail at 2 in the morning, but I never was afraid of a one of 'em in there."

But Mrs. Odom still spends much of her time either deciding what she will feed the prisoners, or preparing their three square meals.

"Breakfast would be three or four biscuits with gravy, eggs and sausage, bacon or ham, and home-made jelly," Mrs. Odom said. "Dinner and supper's about the same. Today it's stew beef, corn, green beans, mashed potatoes and sliced tomatoes. Tomorrow I fry chicken."

In 1962, when Mrs. Odom was first asked to become a jailer, she wasn't too enthusiastic. Her husband, John, who became a deputy sheriff in 1932, was enough law enforcement for her.

"... but I finally agreed," she said. "The job turned out real good. I'm on my fourth sheriff now. My daddy made all us children work and I'm real glad he did. I work from when I get up, about 6 o'clock, to bedtime, about 10 or 10:30. I can't sit down. I got to have something to do."

"She's like a mother to all the inmates," said Sheriff A.J. Peterson. "She's a very religious person, and she leaves that with a lot of them. All the prisoners tell me they never had such good meals at home. I feel having her here makes it easier for us to handle the prisoners."

Mrs. Odom has become something of a celebrity of late, with interviews with local newspapers, a spot on Charles Kuralt's CBS-TV show.

JUST A GLIMPSE — Hundreds of shrieking fans knocked aside police barriers for a glimpse Monday of the Puerto Rican pop group "Menudo", but the quintet scammed to safety behind a wall of police officers to appear on the Muscular Dystrophy Telethon. Sinatra Risked Life, Concert Officials Say TORONTO (AP) — Frank Sinatra risked his life when he appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition during a violent electrical storm, concert organizers say.

"You don't go out and stand in a puddle with a live microphone in your hand during a thunderstorm," Winfield Stockwell, general manager of the exhibition, said Monday. "I'm surprised he stayed."

Stockwell was responding to complaints from fans about the brevity of Sinatra's program here Sunday night. Many fans, some of whom had paid as much as $75 for a ticket, booed when Sinatra left the stage after about 45 minutes.

Esther Shiner, municipal controller in the suburban city of North York, had two free tickets to the concert, but was outraged nonetheless.

"He was rude," she said. "It was almost as if he was laughing at us."

About 11,000 people attended the event, organized by Concert Productions International.

Norman Perry, vice-president of Concert Productions, said Monday that a severe storm warning with the possibility of tornadoes was in effect for Southern Ontario on Sunday night and it was left to Sinatra's crew to decide whether the show would go on.

Stockwell said he was backstage during the discussions, and heard Sinatra's wife advising her husband to call the concert off.

"If there's an audience out there, I want to sing," Perry quoted Sinatra as replying.

At Sinatra's request, an opening act by drummer Buddy Rich was cut short and another by a comedian was abandoned, Perry said.

Sinatra then went on stage and sang every song on the program during a downpour, he said.

Many in the audience presumed the singer was breaking for an intermission and became angry when they saw his limousine leave the stadium under police escort, he added.

Robert Morse: The Original "Tootsie"

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Morse can't begin to count the number of times he's put on high heels and false eyelashes.

Though he dons respectable male garb for his private life, Morse has an alter ego named Daphne who struts her stuff in a blond wig and dress in the musical "Sugar."

The current Los Angeles Civic Light Opera production at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion co-stars Joe Namath. The onetime football star also dons ludicrous female attire as one of two musicians who join an all-girl band while hiding from gangsters.

If the plot sounds familiar, it's because "Sugar" is based on the hit Jack Lemmon-Tony Curtis movie, "Some Like It Hot."

"I was the original 'Tootsie,'" Morse purrs, slipping into his Daphne persona. "I taught Dustin Hoffman everything he knows."

When the play ran on Broadway in 1972, Morse received a Tony Award nomination. Tony Roberts co-starred.

Morse and Namath only had five days of rehearsal together. "He came and he knew every line. There was never a problem," Morse said of his current co-star.

Namath towers over Morse, adding to the comedy onstage. "He's about 9 foot 3," Morse said. "He's an Amazon — the largest lady I've ever seen."

The actor, who was recently featured in episodes of TV's "Fall Guy" and "The Dukes of Hazzard," admits that at 53 the broad physical comedy of "Sugar" isn't as easy as when he first played the role.

"Now it takes a little more out of you — the high heels, the cramps in the legs," he said coily.

Morse, winner of a Tony Award for "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," said he moved to Los Angeles two years ago "to work in television, motion pictures, lawns, gardening, whatever I can do."

As Daphne, Morse clowns around the stage, at one point executing a hilarious sendup of a ballerina performing as the dying swan. But he said he wasn't difficult to transform himself into a woman.

"I try to be sweet and lovely, that's all I can tell you," joked Morse, once again slipping into Daphne. "When I started the role I was nice. Now I'm a little matronly."

But there's one thing he's serious about — his three daughters. Andrea, 21, and Robin, 19, are both actresses with respectable credits, while Hilary, 18, plans to attend fashion school.

Pledge Total Sets Record For Telethon

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Jerry Lewis Telethon ended Monday with a record $32,074,566 in pledges for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which officials said was the highest amount ever pledged to a televised charitable event.

In addition to the pledges from individuals to the annual Labor Day event, about two dozen corporations and organizations presented Lewis with more than $20 million in checks, with final figures expected later in the week, said Craig Wood, an association spokesman.

The $32,074,566 million topped the record of $31,498,772 pledged in 1981, when 210 TV stations carried the telethon, Wood said. Pledges last year totaled $30,691,627.

This year's show was carried by 194 stations in the United States and cable TV in Canada.

Some of the biggest names in show business appeared on the telethon, but it was United Airlines vice president Bob Sampson, a muscular dystrophy victim, who stole the 21 1/2-hour show.

More than $4 million was recorded on a giant tote board in the final 30 minutes of the show after Sampson spoke.

Sampson, who has spent 50 years in a wheelchair, told of being the only child in the Chicago school system to contract MD and live.

Then, referring to the recent Olympic Games, Sampson said MD victims were in an Olympics of their own.

"We're in a marathon called survival until they find a cure," Sampson said. "Someplace out there in this great country is one dollar that'll pay a doctor who's gonna punch through a cure for this disease."

Sampson wept as a film showing his work with the Muscular Dystrophy Association over the last 15 years was shown, then wheeled his chair into view of a national television audience and some 500 people watching the show live in a sports pavilion at Caesars Palace.

His poignant comments brought tears to Lewis and a standing ovation from the audience, many of whom had to stand in line in 105-degree heat for hours to spend an hour watching the show.

As Lewis tried to regain his composure, anchorman Ed McMahon announced the show had achieved its annual goal of topping the previous year's mark.

Lewis choked with emotion as he sang what has come to be known as his closing song, "You'll Never Walk Alone." His version closed with the words "They'll Never Walk Alone" and he walked off the dimly lit stage.

The telethon began Sunday evening with telephone calls from President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale.

"This is a wonderful thing you do and God bless you for it," Reagan told Lewis.

Mondale called 30 minutes later saying "Whatever divides us, we're all together where our kids are concerned."

MDA officials say the telethons have now raised some $350 million in the fight against 40 muscular diseases.

Sammy Davis Jr., Casey Kasem and Tony Orlando served as co-hosts, with some 100 celebrities featured during the show.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

When your opponent is Trump Coup Tommy, the wisest thing to do when you are looking at a bunch of trumps and he is declaring, is to steal quietly into the night. Trump Coup Tommy, you may remember, is that amazing person who fluffs simple hand after simple hand, only to become a master of technique when faced with a bad trump break.

The fact that his distribution was not ideal did not prevent Tommy from opening one no trump. West could hardly be blamed for thinking that the rubber was about to pay for his winter island vacation. After all, his partner had bid at the two-level and his hand rated to produce four tricks on its own.

West led the ace of his partner's suit and continued with his remaining spade. Tommy won the king and confirmed the trump position by cashing the king. Now he was in his element.

He crossed to the ace of clubs and finessed the queen of diamonds. When the king fell under the ace, life was beginning to assume a rosy glow. He cashed the king of clubs, crossed to the jack of diamonds and ruffed the 10 of clubs. When West followed suit, the contract became a cinch.

Declarer led one of his good diamonds and West, down to nothing but four trumps, was forced to ruff high. Tommy did not make the mistake of overruffing — he sluffed the table's last spade. When West continued with a trump honor, Tommy allowed him to win the trick. West was now forced to lead away from his 10-8 of trumps into dummy's A-9 tenace, and Tommy lost only two trump tricks and the ace of spades.

Pooch Rides On Motorcycle

WARDMAN, Ohio (AP) — For a time, Chloe Channel thought either her motorcycle or her Doberman pinscher had to go. But where there's will, there's a way, and now the pair tool along the highways together.

Gila, the 4-year-old dog, rides in a sidecar. Together, they've logged 20,000 miles through 32 states.

The problem arose when Gila was about 12 weeks old, and Mrs. Channel left her dog home alone.

"When I came home, my living room was shredded, demolished, destroyed, and I had to make a decision — give up motorcycling, give up Gila, or find a solution," she said.

Enter the sidecar, with Gila's name painted on the side.

But it wasn't that simple, of course.

Mrs. Channel worried that Gila, leashed in the sidecar, could be trapped in an accident, so the dog had to learn to ride untied.

"The first time was scary," Mrs. Channel said. "I was going about 40 miles per hour when suddenly she wasn't there. I looked back just in time to see her getting to her feet in a field."

"She was scraped and skinned but no bones were broken. I washed the blood off and put her back in, and she's never jumped out since."

Now Mrs. Channel and Gila make quite the smart couple.

"People follow me into rest stops and restaurants and campgrounds," she said. "We've had thousands of snapshots taken of us, even movies by people who put the camera out the car window."

And there are advantages: "With Gila, I need never worry about anyone stealing the cycle even if I left the key in the ignition."

FOCUS

Reach for the Sky

Architect Daniel Burnham, born on this date in 1846, had a vision of buildings so tall they would "scrape the sky." His buildings did just that. He designed this 17-story building in Chicago. At a height of 350 feet, his 21-story flatiron Building in New York City was once the tallest building in the world. In contrast, today the city of Chicago alone has about 50 buildings at least 450 feet high. Last July, a building 1,940 feet tall was proposed for New York City.

DO YOU KNOW — Which Chicago building, 1,454 feet high, is the tallest building in the world?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Pierre Elliot Trudeau preceded John Turner as Prime Minister of Canada.

Golden Eaglet Killed

FLINTSTONE, Ga. (AP) — A wildlife official has called for a review of the program to re-establish the endangered golden eagle in Georgia after one of the eagles attacked a 6-year-old girl and was killed by the girl's uncle.

Bill Collins, area supervisor for the State Department of Natural Resources, said the 14-week-old bird apparently had never developed a fear of humans.

It pounced on Christy Cribbs as she was playing in her yard about 20 miles north of Pigeon Mountain, where four golden eaglets were released two weeks ago.

"We thought it was a goose," said the girl's father, Jerry Cribbs, 32, of Flintstone. "You know how a goose will get up and bite people," he said.

Henry Cribbs came running with a bat when he saw the bird attacking his niece.

"He swung once and just nudged it. Then he swung again and made pretty good contact," the girl's father said.

Jerry Cribbs said his anger turned to sorrow for the bird. "I hope nothing bad happens to the other birds," he said.

The birds were brought to Georgia July 18 to re-establish the endangered species in the state. One of the original five eagles died of disease. Of the four released, two are still alive in the Walker County area and one is believed to have flown west into Alabama.

New Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The record industry has established a new "Multi-Platinum Award" for albums and singles that go through the roof in sales.

The Recording Industry Association of America currently gives a Platinum Award to an album that sells more than 1 million records, compact discs or tapes or a single that sells 2 million copies.

The new award will be given each time a record reaches another million in sales.

Since the Platinum Award was established in 1976, the association has given out 506 album awards and 40 singles awards.

Increase In Small Farms Shows Surprising Growth

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's small farms increased by more than 94,000 over four years as many Americans gravitated to more rural living, new government figures indicate.

Analysts have noted a movement of people from cities and suburbs to the small towns and countryside in recent years, but had not anticipated the extent of the growth in farms of less than 50 acres.

Deaf School Would Like To Close

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
Associated Press Writer
WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Schools nationwide throw open their doors this week to millions of students, but the American School for the Deaf, which has been educating the handicapped since 1817, wouldn't mind closing down for good.

Enrollment at the tuition-free school, which says it is the nation's oldest school for the disabled, has dropped from a peak of more than 500 about 20 years ago to about 275 this year. But that's just fine with school officials, who say that a declining enrollment means that less children are being born hearing impaired.

"We would love to be out of business, but that won't happen in the foreseeable future," school spokeswoman Jane A. Lennox said.

The last graduating class marked the beginning of the decline brought about by the end of the rubella epidemic of the mid-1960s. The class of 1984 had 53 students; the class of 1985 is expected to have about 30.

Realistically, though, as long as no cure is found for deafness, the school will remain open.

"We don't want to foster our existence for the sake of existing," said Ms. Lennox. "We are just learning to respond to the needs of the entire deaf population in the state."

Despite the end of the rubella babies, various forces seem to be keeping the school's population "treading water," executive director Winfield McChord Jr. Changes in federal law have forced public schools to provide education for the handicapped, but more children are also being diagnosed at a younger age.

"We're seeing a sudden rise in 5- and 6-year-old referrals, which I suspect is because of changing attitudes," McChord said. "Parents are referring kids at a younger age. Kids were usually referred at 10 or 12, when parents realized their deaf child's language level was miserably poor."

Ms. Lennox said financially troubled public schools are finding it cheaper to refer hearing impaired students to the school.

"If a school has four hearing-impaired students and 900 regular students, it can't afford to hire a guidance counselor who knows sign language and can handle the deaf students' special needs," she said.

The school also has been getting more referrals because it has a better public image and is no longer viewed as an asylum, McChord said. The school shortened its name from the American School for the Deaf and Dumb many years ago, Ms. Lennox said.

Some public school teachers "came to a meeting here last year with the image of a rainy day — thunder and lightning and children tied to trees, and I'm Boris Karloff," McChord said. "Before the end of the day, we had six referrals, and subsequently got more in the following weeks."

The Hartford public school system went so far as to drop its deaf education program and sent all its students to American School for the Deaf, McChord said.

Declining enrollments are not unique to the American School for the Deaf, said Ms. Lennox. "It's an issue at all special schools, because of better vaccinations, better prenatal care."

Ms. Lennox said the school has a variety of programs which have tended to stabilize the enrollment decline, such as accepting multiply handicapped students who are hearing impaired and offering parents of newborn deaf children a network of counselors who teach parents how to develop their child's speech as early as possible.

"Only 10 percent of deafness is hereditary; the other 90 percent of deaf children are born to hearing families," Ms. Lennox said. "Sometimes the families of a deaf child are so traumatized by the birth that they spend the first five years looking for a miracle cure. That can dramatically slow down the progress of a deaf child."

"The parent outreach program attempts to help the parents and the child through the most critical years."

"I was rather certain they would increase, but I did not expect, I frankly admit, a 17 percent increase in four years' time," Agriculture Department population expert Calvin Beale said of the Census Bureau study.

That report, released Monday, showed farms of less than 50 acres increasing from nearly 543,000 in 1978 to 637,000 in 1982, the most recent figures available.

This does not mean an increase in family farms nor a turn away from the concentration of commercial farms among large business concerns, however, agriculture experts pointed out.

Beale pointed out that the fast-growing farms, "with a few exceptions, are so small they usually are operated by people who earn most of their income from non-farm sources. They are as much a way of life as a business."

There are exceptions, of course, and Beale pointed out that such small operations can be a success raising tobacco, or chickens and some other products.

But in general, he said, that's not the case. "The majority of these places are run by people who are not engaging in farming as their principal occupation," he said.

"Some of these are people of urban background changing their lives, finding a good place in which to rear their children. Others are rural people, maybe blue collar employees, who know something about small-scale farming, who want to engage in it, who don't want to live in town," Beale said. In many cases both spouses commute to a job and work the farm on evenings and weekends.

On the other hand, the smaller scale commercial farms did decline in that four-year period, Beale observed.

The Census study showed a drop in the number of farms in the 50-acre to 1,999-acre range, and an increase of in the number with 2,000 acres or more.

Overall, the Census counted 2,241,124 farms in the United States in 1982, down from 2,257,775 despite the growth among the smaller operations. The average size of farms declined from 449 acres to 439 acres over the four-year span. The land value increased, however, from $619 per farm acre, to $791 per acre.

The market value of farm products sold in 1982 totaled $131.8 billion, the report said, up 23 percent from four years earlier. At the same time, inflation, measured by the Consumer Price Index, rose by 35 percent.

Other findings from the Census of Agriculture included:

—Crop sales accounted for 47 percent of farm income, followed by livestock, 33 percent; dairy products, 13 percent, and poultry, 7 percent.

—Only 1 percent of farms had more than 500 head of cattle, but they accounted for 43 percent of cattle sales.

—The nation's farm land totaled 984.8 million acres in 1982, down from just over 1 billion acres in 1978.

—In acres harvested, wheat edged out corn, 70.9 million acres to 69.9 million, and soybeans totaled 64.8 million acres.

—The number of milk cows grew from 10.2 million to 10.9 million, and broiler chicken sales jumped from 3.1 million to 3.5 million.

Funds Raised To Repair Wall

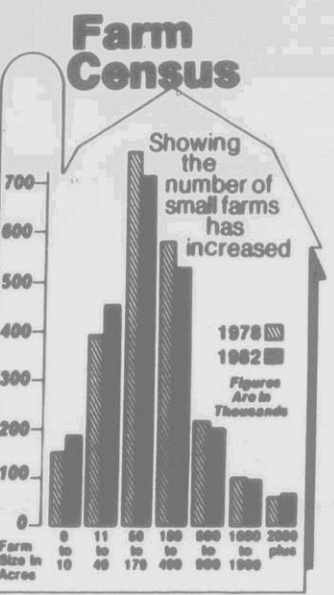

PEKING (AP) — More than 1.5 million yuan — $680,000 — has been raised to repair the crumbling Great Wall of China, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

Four Peking newspapers launched the renovation campaign on July 5, and donations have poured in from businesses, soldiers, peasants, public figures and resident foreigners, the report said Sunday.

The money will be used to repair sections of the wall at Badaling ridge, on the outskirts of Peking.

Visiting foreigners are usually taken to Badaling, where the wall snakes across a mountain panorama. However, a government study published in June said that in one 12-mile stretch near Badaling, "the magnificent Great Wall has become a weed-infested, dirt embankment."

China's most renowned tourist attraction was built 22 centuries ago to keep out Mongols and other marauders from the north. It stretches more than 1,500 miles from Gansu in the west to the Yellow Sea, and U.S. astronauts have said it is the only man-made object visible from space.
