Two Dead In Kansas Oil Company Explosion

By MICHAEL BATES
Associated Press Writer
ANTHONY, Kan. (AP) — An explosion ripped through an oil company building, damaging homes and businesses and killing two people as it hurled debris two blocks away and sent up a fireball visible for 10 miles, authorities said today.
More than a half-dozen people also were injured, two of them seriously, in the explosion at around 9:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Farmer's Oil Co. in west Anthony, officials said.
The blaze that gutted the building raged out of control for nearly three hours, a police dispatcher said. Residents in a four-block area were evacuated from their homes until the blaze was brought under control about 12:30 a.m.

Harper County Attorney Phil Unruh said today the cause of the blast, being investigated by a state fire marshal's investigator, had not been determined.
Police Chief Richard Happ said he was at home on the opposite side of town watching television when the explosion shook "the house real good."
Jeff Bogen and his father were hanging a garage door at their home next door to the building.
"The building was there and then, it was just gone," said Bogen.
"There were just some beams standing there where the building use to be. A big force blew the door down on top of us. We just scrambled out of there as fast as we could."

"The concussion was really great...and then there was just a big ball of flame and stuff falling," he said.
A fireball that soared into the air following the explosion, police said, was visible more than 10 miles north of Anthony, a town of 2,600 people 45 miles southwest of Wichita in south-central Kansas.
The walls of the oil company's two-story brick building, on a corner on the west edge of downtown Anthony, were blown out, Happ said. Bricks were hurled up to two blocks.
A house just north of the explosion scene caught fire and was extensively damaged, Happ said. Three other homes were damaged by flying debris, one extensively, he said. The roof on a combination gasoline station-convenience store, also owned by Farmer's Oil across the street caved in and large plate glass windows in the building were shattered, Happ added.

The oil company building also included an optometrist's office and the district soil conservation office.
The explosion occurred as Kenneth Ray Graves, 51, president of the oil company, was backing a tank truck into a shop area of the building. Officials said the truck had been used to carry a load of anhydrous ammonia fertilizer but was filled with water at the time of the blast.
Fire officials said barrels of antifreeze and diesel additives were stored in the building.

The company is a rural co-op that sells — wholesale and retail — a variety of fuel supplies, tires, and some farm and truck equipment.
The bodies of two males were found at the scene. Authorities withheld the identities pending notification of relatives.
Graves was treated at the Anthony Hospital and later transferred by helicopter to the burn center at St. Francis Medical Center in Wichita. Authorities said he was in critical condition with second-and third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body.
Larry Gaug, 17, suffered a head injury when he was struck by flying debris, police said. He also was treated at the Anthony Hospital and later transferred to the Harper Hospital, where he was reported in good condition.

Four people were treated at the Anthony Hospital for cuts and abrasions. They were released after treatment. Happ said, several other people were treated for minor cuts by emergency medical units at the scene.
A nine-mile segment of Kansas 2 between Anthony and Harper and a 12-mile stretch of the K-2 west of Anthony were closed for traffic control, said a dispatcher in the Wichita Division of the Kansas Highway Patrol.

PCC Reports 'Great' First Day Activities

Pitt Community College officials reported this morning "things are going great" on the college's first day of classes for the 1984 fall quarter.
Enrollment figures, officials noted, although still incomplete, are in line with the 1983-84 fall figures. PCC Dean of Students Edgar Boyd said today he tentatively estimated the school's 1984-85 enrollment at 2,750, compared to 2,700 in 1983-84.

"The enrollment looks to be on par with last fall," Boyd said. "Although we still have three or four days of registration left and it's hard to tell yet, I would estimate we'll have a three-five percent increase over last year."
Although classes began on campus today, registration will continue, said officials, through Monday night.

Fall Weather Finds The Eastern Section

Fall will blow its breath into eastern North Carolina again tonight, forecasters say, as the mercury once more drops into the 50's, a welcome respite from the muggy 70 and 80-degree nighttime lows of the past few months.
Air conditioners got a rest today as high temperatures inched only into the mid-70's and humidity hovered around 60 percent. At 8 a.m. the temperature was a cool 60 degrees, according to Greenville Utilities' water plant, and by 11 a.m. had reached only 70.

A low of 56 degrees was recorded by GUC Wednesday night, and the high for the day was 79.
According to GUC, only .06 inch of (Please turn to page 16)

Reagan Endorses Genocide Treaty

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For the last 35 years, American ratification of the treaty to outlaw genocide has shuffled between the White House and the Senate, an idea whose time never quite came.
Now President Reagan, engaged in his campaign for re-election, is endorsing it as an opportunity to remove a longstanding international embarrassment and to dramatize U.S. human rights concerns.

22 and "the president acted on it."
Dr. William Korey, director of international policy research for B'Nai B'rith, said failure to ratify has "embarrassed the United States ... and thereby hindered (it) from championing human rights."
Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the Senate's most vocal champion of ratification of the long-stalled treaty, said he is so eager to see it approved that political motivations are almost beside the point.
"I suppose we do lots of things in this world for political reasons but I wouldn't question the administration's motives now," Proxmire said. "This move is very, very welcome and to their credit."

of conservative politicians and groups such as the Liberty Lobby and the John Birch Society, which claim it constitutes an infringement on national sovereignty.
Reagan waited until now to endorse the treaty because of a decision to subject the pact to a lengthy review considering all aspects of past opposition, including claims it would violate state rights.
Administration officials acknowledge the long delay by the United States has proved an embarrassing handicap in promoting U.S. human rights policies.

Hughes said the U.S. failure to act has "opened the United States to unnecessary criticism ..."
"We can refute such baseless criticism by ratifying the convention, and, more importantly, we can utilize the convention in our own efforts to expand freedom and fight human rights abuses around the globe," Hughes said.
The pact makes genocide an (Please turn to page 16)

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

SCREENING FEEDBACK

Response to the recent Hotline appeal for participants in an ear and hearing screening of children with no history of ear infection was good, but not sufficient for the study needs. Call tonight between 6 and 8 p.m. 757-3807 or Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 757-6961 and ask for Speech and Hearing if you would like for your child to have this free service.

The consolidation committee of the Pitt County and Greenville City boards of education will hold its first meeting at 12 noon Monday in the second floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.
The Pitt County Board of Education will hold its September meeting immediately following the committee meeting in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building. The meeting was cancelled earlier this week due to the death of board member Jack Edwards.

Death Investigated

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Seventeen juniors and seniors have been transferred out of a unit of Texas A&M's military cadet corps following the death of a cadet who was forced to exercise until he collapsed from heat stroke.

four different investigations are under way. Bob Wiatt, director of security and traffic for the university, said he expects to present evidence to a grand jury Sept. 27.
Bruce Goodrich, 20, a sophomore, died Aug. 30 after collapsing during an early morning run. University officials said three juniors in his corps unit woke him at 2:30 a.m. and took him out for "motivational exercise," which included nearly an hour of running, push-ups and sit-ups.
The corps is a 2,100-member organization, some of whose members are under contract to the U.S. armed forces.

All the upperclassmen in Company F-1 were moved to other units in the university's cadet system because F-1 lacked "sufficiently strong and effective leadership," corps commandant Col. Donald Burton said Wednesday.
He said the leadership vacancies were filled with two seniors and four juniors from other outfits.

Wendy Clark Is Winner In Magazine's Makeover Contest

Wendy Clark of Ayden will be featured in the Oct. 2 issue of Woman's Day as a winner in the magazine's All-American Win-A-Makeover Contest.

Fifty-two women were selected — one from each state, Canada and the District of Columbia — as winners. Ms. Clark received a customized hair and makeup analysis and makeover in Washington, D.C.

Last October Ms. Clark submitted a picture and written essay on "How I Look Is Important To Me Because" to the magazine. "I was notified in December that I was being considered and I had to fill out forms to be returned. I found out in March that I had won. I was very happy about winning and it was unexpected," she said.

Wanting a more feminine, sophisticated look was one of Ms. Clark's reasons listed in her essay. "I wanted a new look when I went back to work after a three-month maternity leave," she added.

Ms. Clark and her husband, Jeff, stayed in Washington two days. Her makeover was "mostly hair and makeup. It did include some color guides for wardrobe selection." Ms. Clark now combines some of their techniques with her ability to maintain a more update look.

The Clarks are the parents of a son, Brandon, who is 19 months old. She is a service representative for a greeting card company and works in Pitt and Edgecombe counties. Her husband is a store manager for an Ayden supermarket.

Create New Environment In That 'Tired' Room

Just as a new scarf, pair of shoes or accessories perks up an outfit, a simple change can pick up a tired room, says Dr. Wilma Hammett, extension interior design specialist, N.C. State University.

"All it takes is the right change to create a fresh, new environment. Look at what might be purchased and what might be discarded. Then think how much better a room might be with a fresh coat of paint, wallpaper or new window coverings," Dr. Hammett says.

Rearrange the furniture and don't be bound by the walls of a particular room. Maybe that upholstered chair that doesn't quite fit in the living room would be perfect in the master bedroom.

Sometimes a room is too cluttered. Getting rid of some things may make the room more attractive and enjoyable. Go through the house or apartment, room by room and decide what needs to go. Be ruthless. Give them away, sell them or alter them so that they no longer stand out.

Maybe the furniture is drab or dull. A new cover or slipcover is an inexpensive remedy. A more time consuming but still inexpensive alternative is to refinish some furniture. Or perhaps it just needs a good cleaning.

If that table or dresser is just too far gone, cover it with a ruffled tablecloth and give it a fresh coat of paint and a new lease on life, the extension specialist suggests.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

My sons have started more mustaches and beards than all the Russian czars put together.

They never finish them. And they never grow them in front of strangers. They wait until there's a three-day weekend, a week's vacation or a summer at home before they begin the disgusting ritual of having their faces break out with fur.

I wouldn't care if they came home some weekend with Tom Selleck mustache or a Burt Reynolds mouth framed in hair, but this is not the case. As their mother, I must stand by and watch the day-by-day struggle. It's about as pretty as watching an alcoholic dry out.

Day One: There's something different about them, but you can't put your finger on it. They look like the sun has gone down on them no matter where they stand.

Two: For no apparent reason you say at breakfast, "I wonder whatever became of the Cro-Magnon men?"

Day Three: They're beginning to stroke something, but you're not sure what.

Day Four: Even with a necktie and $120 camel blazer, they still look like winos. You feel the need to tell strangers on the street that they have the leads in the amateur production of "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Days Five, Six and Seven: Nothing is growing except resentment. To think you went through 36 hours (collective) labor, used baby oil on their skin, protected it from the sun, shielded it from harsh winds, and for what? To have them look like the heads on two pennies.

Day Eight: Disgust builds as this is the day for rejoicing. One of them got a piece of cottage cheese caught in a hair above his lip.

On the day when their faces look like a threadbare carpet, I wonder if the mothers of Sigmund Freud, Santa Claus, and Matthew, Mark, Luke and John also suffered through the birth of a beard.

This summer, it was three weeks of beard-growing — beards with no direction, no pruning, no shaping and no clipping. On the last day home, they appeared at breakfast with faces as soft and smooth and glowing as a baby's bottom.

"What happened to the beards and mustaches?" I asked.

"Shaved 'em off."

"Why?"

"You don't think we could go back to work looking like that! Maybe we'll start growing one during the Christmas holidays while we're home."

Why me, God?

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Bringing Gifts For Both Is Considerate Gesture

DEAR ABBY: My in-laws are super people, but a few years ago they started a practice that I found objectionable. We have two sons, 3 and 5, and on the birthday of one grandchild they bring two gifts—one for the birthday boy, and another for his brother so he wouldn't feel left out.

I think a birthday is a very special day for a child, and he shouldn't have to share it with anyone else. Each child will have his special day, so it's not as though one child is being favored over the other.

When my in-laws started this, I hinted that it wasn't necessary, but either they didn't get the hint or they chose to ignore it.

How do you feel about this, Abby?
MOTHER OF TWO

DEAR MOTHER: I think it's a very considerate gesture. It shouldn't diminish the joy of the birthday boy if his brother

DEAR ABBY: I have learned after 30 years of marriage that my husband is a bisexual and a molester of young boys. He is a professional person and a pillar of the church.

I also learned that he molested our oldest son during the boy's teen-age years.

Our four children are professional people. If my husband gets caught by the police, he will disgrace us all. He says he loves me, and begs me to accept this weakness of his. My children want me to forgive him and do nothing about it, but I find this hard to do.

Should I try to stick it out? I am 60 years old. Please don't mention my city. This is ...

A FAMILY AFFAIR

DEAR FAMILY AFFAIR: When a known child molester is allowed to go free to molest more children, it is not a family affair, it's a crime against society.

Your husband has more than a "weakness"; he is sick and in need of treatment. It is your obligation to do whatever is necessary to get him to a doctor. Insist upon it. If he refuses, you must turn him in.

A Difficult Decision

If the Fates had deliberately planned creation of a no-win situation for candidate James B. Hunt, it would be hard to imagine one to match the decision he has to make on the sentence of Velma Margie Barfield. It's a no-win situation.

Mrs. Barfield is scheduled to be executed on November 2. She has been convicted of murder, and the U.S. Supreme Court has found no error in her trial nor sentencing. The governor does have authority to spare the killer's life; and at least one Barfield family member has promised an all-out publicity campaign to that end in its store.

We have never liked the idea of publicity and the PR pitch applied to pressuring courts or decisions involving the courts and a particular case. The courts and the law are supposed to be totally objective and impartial. This is not always the case; and it is quite possible the attempt to sway a decision via publicity may be unneeded.

Long, long ago there grew up an attitude that women were "different" and needed (indeed, were owed) protection of the males. In some Western societies it was not uncommon for women to be placed on pedestals. In more recent years the concept of ERA did much to erase that notion but traces of that feeling linger.

Those traces might well have prevailed in the Barfield case, but we'll never know for sure.

At any rate, well before November rolls around, public opinion on the Barfield fate is going to be divided — and possibly tainted by strong and bitter feelings on both sides. So no matter what Hunt decides, to abide by the prescribed penalty or modify it, he pays the price of lost votes by whichever faction he disappoints in his most crucial election campaign.

'No' To Lotteries

That record-setting lottery prize ($40 million!) in Illinois won by a ticket-buyer has created something of a stir in the public imagination. It also re-raises the question of why North Carolina doesn't get into the lottery business as a money-raiser.

We've given it some thought, too.

It might represent $100 million per year of additional revenue for the state (and what state could not find a use for $100 million above and beyond its established revenues?).

We know lotteries on a much smaller scale are popular in the state ... and also illegal. Every once in awhile we read of an arrest and seizure of lottery tickets and records.

There are obviously many people who find small wagers and accompanying dreams an entertaining and briefly exciting factor in an otherwise drab day.

Points against a state lottery include concern for those subject to a compulsion (much like alcoholics); concern that "welfare dollars" could be diverted to the dream of becoming wealthy against incredible odds; concern for affecting a treasured sense of values among our young; and, there is a strongly ingrained opposition to any form of gambling among a large segment of our population.

To sum up, North Carolina has survived without going the lottery route, and we really do not need some of the fall-out accompanying the "anti" points.

We'd vote "no".

Police-State Tactics Can Backfire

WASHINGTON — Belying Ronald Reagan's impassioned praise for the bravery of Poland's outlawed Solidarity movement, his administration has scoured ethnic Polish communities from Newark to Los Angeles to round up and deport emigrants to a frightened fate in Poland's police state.

The latest roundup, conducted this summer without announcement, occurred in a factory in Chicago's Northwest side during an Immigration and Naturalization Service (NIS) raid directed mainly at Hispanic immigrants. Polish immigrants, including victims of Poland's anti-Solidarity drive, were singled out by virtue of their ability to speak Polish.

The gap between Reagan's undoubtedly sincere rhetoric and raids ordered by INS district directors is not easily explained. Besides his repeated professions of support for Solidarity, the president recently denounced the postwar Yalta agreement consigning Poland to Soviet domination. Without precisely saying so, he has strongly implied that no Polish emigre who finds his way to the United States in search of political asylum will ever be deported.

But INS bureaucrats pursue suspected "illegals" from Poland's political wasteland with the same fervor that they go after Mexican immigrants fleeing poverty. The mindless harassment of political refugees points to the danger of a political mindset intent on controlling borders. What ultimately may save the situation is the election-year importance to a Republican administration of the big, conservative Polish-American vote.

Leaders of the Polish-American community have made repeated efforts to convince the White House of dangerous political repercussions. That warning may penetrate next week if Aloysius Mazewski, president of the Polish-American Congress, gets the meeting he has been promised at the White House with James A. Baker III, chief of staff, and Robert D. McFarlane, national security assistant.

Political emigres from Poland are covered by a presidential policy called Extended Voluntary Departure, automatically protecting them from premature deportation by overzealous INS agents. Asylum is automatic if deportation to Poland would result in any form of persecution.

But INS agents, in excessive devotion to perceived duty and ignorance of the administration's true intent, routinely warn Polish emigres seeking asylum that they have failed to establish "a well-founded fear of persecution" if sent back to Poland.

The INS form letter sent to hundreds of political emigres is Kafkaesque: "Although the present condition in your homeland may be unsuitable, causing strife to the population in general, you have failed to establish that ... you would be persecuted on account of your ... membership in a particular social group or political opinion."

Photographs of Polish emigres demonstrating against the military dictatorship that quashed Solidarity are regularly dispatched to Warsaw by the Polish Embassy here. The easy identification of any Polish emigre sent home by the INS would mean automatic arrest in Poland. The mere request for political asylum in America could mean a death sentence in Poland.

That seems irrelevant to the INS. On Aug. 1, one request for asylum was rejected in these chilling words: "You are granted until Aug. 24, 1984, to depart the United States voluntarily, at your own expense. If you do not, deportation proceedings will be instituted." Not a word about Extended Voluntary Departure, which supercedes all other regulations.

Political pressures stemming from this bureaucratic bungling have built only slowly. Polish-Americans have listened to Reagan's anti-Soviet, pro-Solidarity rhetoric rather than watch his bureaucrats imitate Kafkaesque prosecutors. That grace period has ended. Baker and McFarlane will be told at next week's grievance session.

While only barely glimpsed inside the White House, the political losses could be severe if the president's policy cannot be imposed on the bureaucracy.

Computer's Tax Relief Fails

NEW YORK (AP) — It's harder now to lower your taxes by using a personal computer at home.

Not that computer marketers need worry. They can still sell you on the machine's ability to help narrow your tax liability with the aid of sophisticated financial programs that home computers can operate.

It's your ability to deduct the cost of the computer itself from your taxes that Congress recently restricted.

Before the Tax Reform Act of 1984 was passed this summer, if you used a computer at home, you could qualify for an investment tax credit and depreciate the cost of the machine provided you used the computer for business or investment needs.

For example, if you bought a $3,000 computer and used it 30 percent of the time for business and 30 percent for investment purposes, you could add them together toward figuring your qualification for an investment tax credit. The maximum credit was 10 percent of the purchase price, so in this case the credit was 60 percent of that, or $180.

In addition, 60 percent of the purchase price could be depreciated over five years, in this case $1,800. The five-year period was normal for the depreciation of business equipment.

The new act, however, aims to allow a tax break provided you use the computer mainly for business and, in the opinion of some tax experts, it will be hard to qualify if that business use is voluntary.

Michele Bourgerie, a tax specialist for the accounting firm Arthur Young & Co., said it appears from her reading of the congressional reports concerning the new law that if you are an employee using a home computer to voluntarily perform work normally done at the office, "it seems to me any deductions for a home computer have been virtually foreclosed."

At the minimum, the law appears to require that the home computer, and its use for business, be a requirement of your employment, said Eli Warach, senior vice president of Prentice-Hall, an Englewood Cliffs, N.J.-based publisher of tax information.

Further regulations clarifying the matter are likely to be forthcoming from the government, tax specialists said.

Regardless, assume you meet the criteria that puts you in a position to qualify for tax breaks. If you use the computer 30 percent of the time for business, and spend the balance of the time juggling your stock portfolio or playing video games, you do not qualify for an investment tax credit.

Moreover, you only get to use that 30 percent of the machine's cost related to business purposes for use in depreciation — and you cannot depreciate it over just five years, you must do so over 12 years.

The only way you can qualify for an investment tax credit, and five-year depreciation, is to use the computer for business more than 50 percent of the time.

Assume again that you paid $3,000 for your computer, which is used 60 percent of the time for business only. You're entitled to a $180 investment tax credit (60 percent of the maximum 10 percent $300 credit) and you can depreciate 60 percent, or $1,800, of the machine's cost over five years.

How will you prove to the Internal Revenue Service that you indeed used the computer more than half the time for business?

"You're going to have to keep a log and presumably it's going to have to be a more expansive 'diary' type of thing than we've seen in the past," says Warach. "And you'll have to certify to whoever prepares your tax returns that it was used more than 50 percent of the time for business."

If you prepare your own return, there probably will be a space on the tax forms where you fill in the amount of use for business purposes and certify that such an amount is being logged, he adds.

(The computer, by the way, might provide the vehicle for keeping such a log.)

Mrs. Bourgerie notes, however, that if more than half of the computer's time is given to business use, you can then add that time to the time you spend using it for investment purposes and apply both against your tax liability.

For example, if business use is 55 percent and investment use is 20 percent, then you can put 75 percent of the machine's cost toward the investment tax credit and a five-year depreciation schedule.

But that investment use counts only when the computer is first used for business more than half the time.

Strength For Today

An artist died recently whose life had been particularly significant to the young artists of his generation. Many of these young people, now distinguished in their field, look back to his wise counsel, his friendly spirit and sacrificial ways as chief factors in keeping up their morale and encouraging them in any success they have had.

When this man passed 60, his art blossomed out and took on a new, more significant dimension. Quite plainly he had been giving so much of his time to others that he had insufficient time to develop his own abilities. Nevertheless, these were growing within him to such an extent that in his last years they came to fulfillment.

Jesus declared that if we lose our lives, we find them. The surest way to stunt one's growth is to concentrate our attentions upon our own interests and their development. Jesus gave up everything, and gained the world in the largest sense conceivable.

Lawyer Claims Client's Reputation Hurt

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A lawyer for a Nobel Prize-winning scientist told a federal jury today that his client's reputation was damaged by a newspaper article which compared his theories on race and genetics to the atrocities of Nazi Germany.

Murray Silver, attorney for William Shockley, said Shockley's proposed voluntary sterilization bonus plan was a "thinking exercise" that had "absolutely no comparison or relevance" to the killing of Jews by the Nazis in World War II.

Silver's statements came during opening arguments in the trial of a $2.5 million libel suit filed by Shockley against Cox Enterprises Inc. and writer Roger Witherspoon in 1981.

The lawsuit alleged that Witherspoon libeled Shockley in a article he wrote for The Atlanta Constitution, one of the newspapers in the Cox group. The article, published in July 1980, discussed Shockley's theory that blacks as a group are genetically inferior in intelligence to whites and his proposal for a voluntary sterilization program for the "genetically disadvantaged."

Witherspoon no longer works for the newspaper.

Terrence Adamson, attorney for Cox and Witherspoon, told the jury that Witherspoon's article was a column that expressed his opinion. Under the law, it is not subject to libel action, he argued.

Adamson said he will call scientists to testify about the widespread differences of opinion in the field of genetics and intelligence.

He said Shockley's theories on race and genetics have been annually rejected by the National Academy of Sciences and Shockley was denied permission by his fellow faculty members at Stanford University to teach a course in genetics.

Adamson argued that Witherspoon's column presented the factual basis for Shockley's theories and his sterilization plan, and then stated the writer's opinion about the possible effect of that plan.

Witherspoon, who is black, compared the Shockley plan to the Nazi atrocities against the Jews in Germany "as a device to draw attention to the most heinous aspects of the plan as he saw it," the attorney said.

A jury of five whites and one black was selected Wednesday to hear the lawsuit filed by Shockley, who won the Nobel Prize in 1956 for his part in the invention of the transistor.

Shockley, 74, contended in his lawsuit that the article was libelous because, among other things, it included a statement that his sterilization plan "was tried out in Germany during World War II, when scientists under the direction of the government experimented on Jews and defectives in an effort to study genetic development."

His lawsuit argues that "to be falsely labeled as a 'Nazi' or of approving the Nazi genocide during World War II is comparable to being falsely labeled a mass murderer or approving mass murder."

The jury was selected Wednesday from among 17 people who were questioned at length by U.S. District Judge Robert Vining.

Shockley's lawyers used all three of their jury strikes to remove blacks from the final six-member jury, while lawyers for Cox and Witherspoon used their strikes to excuse three white prospective jurors.

Before the final selections were made, Vining asked the pool of potential jurors whether they subscribed to the Atlanta newspapers, whether they had heard of Shockley or Witherspoon and whether they had studied medicine or genetics.

Each potential juror also was asked individually, out of the presence of the others, whether he believes blacks are inferior to whites, whether he has ever been in a fight or quarrel with a member of another race, whether he believes blacks work as hard as whites and whether he believes more blacks than whites are on welfare or commit crimes.

The prospective jurors also were asked their feelings about freedom of speech and press, about the responsibility of newspapers to print the truth and about the value of a person's reputation.

Shockley, a professor emeritus of electrical engineering at Stanford University, has said he views the trial in part as a forum to air his theories on race and genetics and his proposal for a voluntary sterilization plan.

Date Set For Civil Rights Fund Trial

GREENSBORO (AP) — A third date has been set in the trial of a $48 million suit filed by the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund against state and local government officials, Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis.

The trial, originally scheduled for Aug. 1, was rescheduled for Oct. 8. It has now been set for March 11, 1985, in Winston-Salem.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. set the new date Wednesday, after listening for almost 10 hours to attorneys for both sides accuse each other of not providing court-ordered documentation or cooperating in gathering depositions from potential witnesses.

The fund, citing what it called new evidence, had asked for new starting date — June 1, 1985.

The suit stems from the Nov. 3, 1979 shootings of five Communist Workers Party members. The fund represents widows of shooting victims.

Levis Pitts and Daniel Sheehan — attorneys for the plaintiffs in the suit — spent more than six hours arguing state and local law enforcement agencies were not providing documents and records ordered last month by Merhige at another pre-trial hearing.

But Jo Sher, attorney for the U.S. Justice Department, argued that many of the records requested by plaintiff attorneys was "privileged information" and irrelevant to the case.

Merhige agreed in part with defense attorneys' complaints that much of what opposing attorneys seek may not be helpful to their case. Merhige spent more than a week recently reviewing many of the documents now in dispute.

"I'm going to characterize their requests as a fishing expedition but upon cursory review, I'm wondering if there are any fish in the lake," Merhige said.

Government agencies say many of their records should not be subject to use at trial because it seriously would hamper future investigations and endanger police informants.

Merhige said he would meet with attorneys Oct. 10 in Washington, D.C., to determine what documents should remain confidential and what documents might be used at trial.

Meanwhile, a former U.S. attorney and three FBI agents discussed "the possibility of some trouble" three days before the 1979 anti-Ku Klux Klan rally that ended with five deaths, according to a motion filed Tuesday.

But the former federal prosecutor, H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, denied Tuesday the fund's contention that his conversation proves that authorities knew there would be violence at the rally.

Fund officials released copies of a deposition Tuesday in which Michaux indicates he met with three local FBI agents, including Thomas Brereton and Andrew Pelczar, a few days before the rally and "talked about the possibility of some trouble" at the CWP-sponsored event.

The suit against the City of Greensboro, the U.S. Justice Department and several law enforcement agencies alleges their agents knew violence would occur but did nothing to stop it.

Fund officials said in a prepared statement they have depositions from Brereton and Pelczar, who deny having had any knowledge that violence would occur at the march. Those depositions were not released at a news conference called by the fund.

Michaux said he didn't agree with the fund's interpretation that his deposition contradicts statements from the FBI agents and said "it is absolutely wrong" for the fund to release pre-trial documents in the case.

Michaux said he didn't remember the exact conversation he had with the agents, but that they did not have any strong evidence that violence was a certainty.

Sher said he would oppose the justice fund's motion to delay the lawsuit trial.

"We're ready," he said. "They've had plenty of time."

But fund officials said Michaux's testimony and other new evidence "illustrates the need" for more time.

"The 'rush-to-judgment' attitude of the court is a threat to the fundamental principle of fairness under the law," said fund press aide Isiah Singletary.

Settlement Hopes Rise

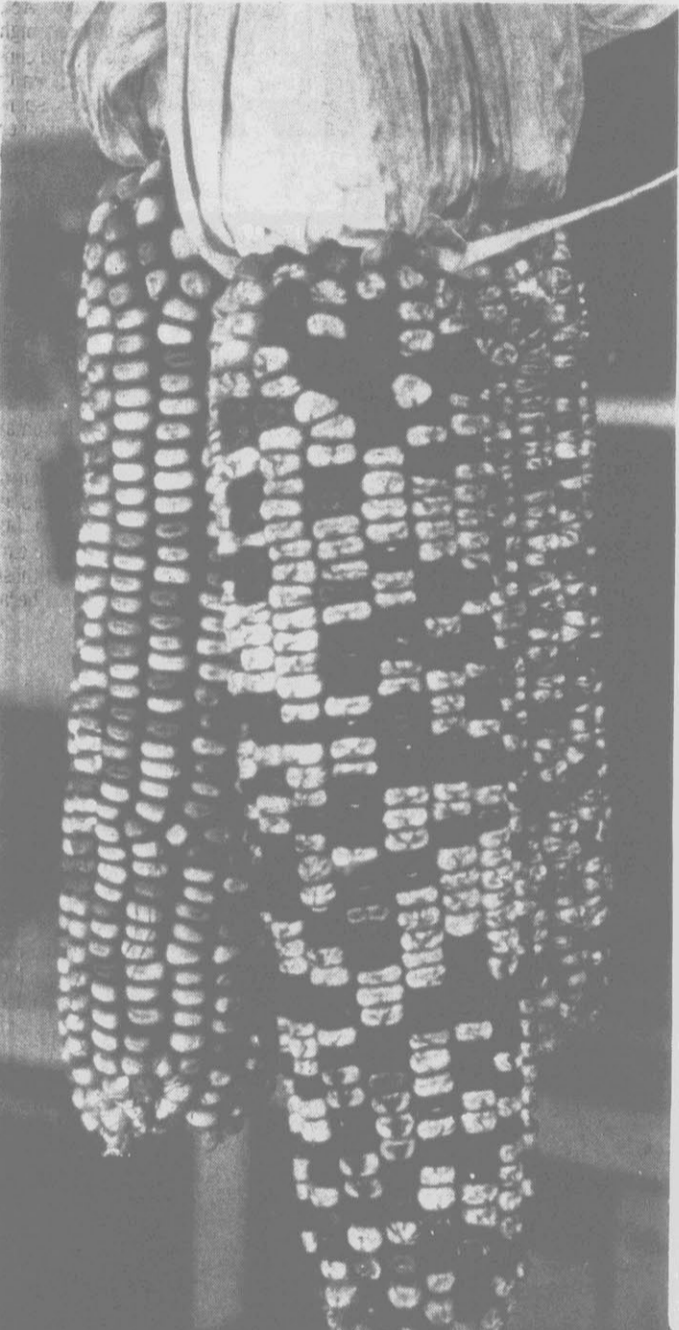

LONDON (AP) — Union official John Connolly says Britain's patchy dock workers' strike could continue for "a considerable time." But hopes rose today for new talks to try to end the six-month coal miners' strike.

Connolly chaired a 3½-hour emergency meeting Wednesday of the docks committee of the 1.5-million member Transport and General Workers' Union. Afterward, the committee appealed for increased picketing of key ports, help from other industries in halting the nation's sea trade, and a total walkout in support of the striking miners.

Two-thirds of the 35,000 longshoremen and other dock workers have refused to join the strike, which began Aug. 24.

Leaders of the two rail unions are scheduled to meet Friday to discuss the board's proposals.

INDIAN SUMMER, INDIAN CORN — As the final days of the official summer season nears autumn, the time of Indian Summer arrives. One of the tokens of this seasonal transition is the ripening of Indian maize, or corn, whose ears are filled with kernels of gold, cream, and dark wine red colors. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

President Forecasts Hope For A Middle East Peace

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told the B'nai B'rith convention today there is "far greater cause for hope" of a Middle East peace now than there was four years ago before he took office.

Defending his own two-year-old peace plan that Israel rejected outright, Reagan told the Jewish organization, "We who are friends of Israel may differ over tactics, but our goal remains always unchanged: permanent security for the people of that brave state."

By building up U.S. defenses, pursuing its own economic recovery and not "wringing its hands apologetically" but playing its world role with faith, confidence and courage, the United States improves the chances that Israel and its Arab neighbors can make peace, Reagan said.

"Let me assure you, we will never attempt to impose a solution on Israel," Reagan pledged in his prepared remarks.

"When I spoke to you four years ago, peace was eluding the Middle East. It still does. But now we and the state of Israel have far greater cause for hope," he said.

It was the first speech Reagan has made in months about the Middle East, where his foreign policy suffered its worst setback with the loss of 264 Marines in Lebanon and the collapse of a multinational effort to secure the withdrawal of foreign forces from that tiny country bordering Israel. Reagan's peace initiative, rejected by Israel and never accepted by any Arab state, lies dormant.

On another topic, Reagan has been under fire from his Democratic opposition for telling an ecumenical prayer breakfast last month that religion and politics are "necessarily related" and that opponents of school prayer are intolerant.

In his speech to the socially conscious Jewish organization, the president made only passing reference to that controversy, concentrating instead on a "new spiritual awareness" that he said extends to people of all religions and beliefs.

"As we welcome this rebirth of faith, we must even more fervently attack ugly intolerance," Reagan said. "We have no place for haters in America."

The United States, he said, "must remain a nation of openness to people of all beliefs.... The ideals of our country leave no room whatsoever for intolerance, anti-Semitism or bigotry or any kind — none."

In response to Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale's charge that Reagan had ignored the "wall of separation" between church and state, Reagan said: "The unique thing about America is a wall in our Constitution separating church and state. It guarantees there will never be a state religion in this land but at the same time it makes sure that every single American is free to choose and practice his or her religious beliefs or to choose no religion at all. Their rights shall not be questioned or violated by the state."

But Reagan made no mention — as he has in several recent campaign speeches — of his support for a constitutional amendment that would permit organized prayer in public schools while permitting children to opt out of locally sanctioned prayer sessions.

Also during the speech, in an attack on opponents of his Central American policy, Reagan suggested — without naming anyone — that "some in our national life would have America take a position of weakness in Central America" and "give free rein to Marxist-Leninists who would persecute Central American Catholics and Jews."

Appealing to the specific concerns of his audience, Reagan quoted Nicaraguan refugee Isaac Stavisky as telling him Jews in Nicaragua "never encountered anti-Semitism until the Sandinistas started their revolution.... Once the Sandinistas came to power... they moved swiftly against Jews. Jewish-owned properties were among the first to be confiscated, and Jews were forced into exile."

"Permit me to add," Reagan said, "that on the first anniversary of the Sandinista revolution, Yasser Arafat visited Nicaragua and spoke these words: 'What the Nicaraguan people did in Nicaragua will be done by the Palestinians.'"

"Today, some in our national life would have America take a position of weakness in Central America — or, through callous indifference, withdraw from that region altogether. These politicians would give free rein to Marxist-Leninists who would persecute Central American Catholics and Jews, leaving them defenseless against Sandinista intolerance."

Walter Mondale has called for a negotiated settlement of the strife in Central America and has pledged to phase out any U.S. support of anti-Sandinista guerrillas. But he has not called for withdrawal of all U.S. military and economic aid in the region.

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, has said she and Mondale support the Contadora peace process, which seeks an end to all foreign interference in Central American affairs and a negotiated end to civil strife in the region.

One Reagan official, speaking on the condition he would not be named, said the administration is quite pleased with the present state of its relations with Israel, but because of the sensitive problem of balancing U.S. relations with the Arab world, "it's not something that we go around talking about a lot."

Educators Remain Off Jobs In 7 States

By The Associated Press
Striking teachers returned to work today in at least two school districts, but contract disputes kept more than 10,000 educators out of classrooms in seven states, giving 150,000 students an extended summer break.

Rhode Island judge was expected to rule today on a request for an injunction to force 56 striking teachers back to work in the Exeter-West Greenwich school district. About 950 students have been on extended vacation since Aug. 29, when classes were to have begun.

Illinois continued to have the most striking teachers today — 5,192 — even though 24,700 teachers in Chicago began the school year for 400,000 students Wednesday while working under an expired contract and 94 teachers in the LaSalle-Peru district ended a week-long strike.

More than 58,600 students are affected by strikes in eight Illinois school districts.

More teachers opted to stay away from schoolrooms Wednesday in Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, joining thousands of their colleagues who were already walking picket lines. Strikes continued in Rhode Island, Louisiana and New York.

In Indiana, 85 striking teachers reported for work Wednesday.

In Pennsylvania's Wissahickon School District, 214 teachers voted late Wednesday to suspend their strike after one day, and classes for the 2,800 pupils were scheduled to begin Friday morning.

One of the latest strikes began in suburban East St. Louis, Ill., when about 140 teachers at the Bethalto school system failed to show up for work because of a contract dispute, Superintendent Don Simpson said. Classes for the district's 3,000 students were canceled.

More than half the 36,000 students in Michigan's second-largest district, Grand Rapids, showed up for the first day of classes Wednesday despite a strike by the district's 1,800 teachers that started Tuesday. Administrators, retired teachers and substitutes were filling in for pickets.

One teacher picketing in Grand Rapids was slightly injured Wednesday after being hit by a car driven by a parent, police said. She was treated at a hospital and released, and police said the driver was not held because of "conflicting statements from witnesses."

About 189 teachers in the Anchor Bay District north of Detroit began a strike Wednesday, idling 4,500 students.

Pennsylvania was hit by three more strikes Wednesday, as districts in Lancaster and York counties in the southern part of the state and in Montgomery County outside Philadelphia began job actions. Strikes remained unresolved in three other districts and about 1,219 teachers remained on strike across the state, affecting more than 21,000 students.

In New Jersey, 92 teachers returned to work at Monmouth Regional High School after a one-day strike to demonstrate "solidarity," and a new strike began at Mainland Regional High School in Linwood. Strikes continued in Bellmawr, near Philadelphia, and in Somerville, both despite injunctions. About 3,200 students in the state were affected by the strikes by 383 teachers.

In New York, 104 teachers remained off the job at St. John's Preparatory School in Queens, where orientation was held in advance of Monday's opening of the school year for 2,300 students.

Some 350 teachers remained on strike in Louisiana, where fewer than 100 of 6,200 students in St. John the Baptist Parish attended the start of classes Tuesday.

Town Board Approves Contract Amendments

BETHEL — The Town Board of Commissioners has approved amendments to contracts with Owens, Rouse and Nelson and Earl Umphlett for services concerning the city's community development block grant program.

Harriet Britt of Talbert Cox and Associates presented the amendments to the board at its recent monthly meeting. The amendments included a conflict of interest clause, non-discrimination and affirmative action clauses and a clause concerning handicap and age.

Ms. Britt also reported to the board that drainage work needs to be done in areas to allow work on the block grant to continue. On East and Elm streets, she said, a 12-inch pipe needs to be replaced with sections of 15-inch pipe. The work will extend beyond the project's boundary areas for approximately 1,000 feet, she reported. The board voted to amend the city's block grant budget to cover the expense of the pipe replacement.

Glen Bowen of Ayden presented schematic drawing of a car wash he proposed to build in the city. According to the drawing, the entrance will be on Main Street and the exit on East Street.

In other business, the board voted to raise the town's required water deposit from $25 to $30 effective immediately.

The local membership assessment due to the Mid-East Commission for fiscal year 1984-85 was approved.

The board approved the Pitt County Selective Mutual Emergency Fire Aid Pact.

Money Found In Closet

LEBANON, Pa. (AP) — Two women cleaning out a closet in the county clerk of courts office found a red-and-white plastic bag filled with Christmas ornaments and $36,000 in cash and checks, authorities said.

Assistant District Attorney John Feather declined to say Wednesday if the money was connected with a $20,000 discrepancy the state auditor general's office found recently during an audit of the Lebanon County clerk of courts department.

The bag, found Aug. 22, included receipts from a six-month period in 1982, Feather said. The discovery was being investigated, he said.

S.C. Attorney General Opposes Savannah River Project

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — A plan by the city of Augusta to divert 4½ miles of the Savannah River for a hydroelectric plant is a "mud puddle" project, according to the South Carolina attorney general's office, which plans to strongly oppose the project at federal hearings.

In a speech before the Graniteville Exchange Club Wednesday, Attorney General Travis Medlock said any project to divert the river must maintain river flow at 2,000 cubic feet per second.

Augusta's plan to divert 4½ miles of the river into a canal would leave the river flow at 500 cubic feet per second at certain times.

The Army Corp of Engineers reduced flow to 500 cubic feet per second in an experiment, Medlock said. The experiment showed "a series of mudflats, rocks and standing pools."

"Reducing this beautiful 4½ mile stretch of the Savannah to this (condition) is intolerable," said Medlock.

Augusta has asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to approve its plans to divert a stretch of the river to power the plant.

The attorney general will file with the agency a petition to intervene. As an intervenor, the attorney general will be allowed to present witnesses and experts at federal hearings on Augusta's proposal.

The petition will be filed before the end of this month, Medlock said.

"The environmental and aesthetic harm to the riverbanks and adjacent real estate as well as the Savannah itself dwarf Augusta's benefit from the sale of the electricity to be generated by the successive diversion," he said.

U.S. Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., also has objected to Augusta's plans and has asked the federal panel to hold a series of public hearings on the plans.

The hearings are in the best interest of area residents because the river diversion would have a negative environmental and economic effect, Derrick said. The intervention will add red tape, Medlock admitted.

"As businessmen you're familiar with the federal government's red tape. As it drags out, the river will continue to flow as it has for well over 100 years."

The intervention will receive a high priority, Medlock said.

"Our intervention will force the federal government to give deep deliberate consideration to the environmental impact of the proposed project," he said.

"Successful intervention will require hundreds of man hours and expensive consultant reports and expert witnesses," he said. "Rarely, however, have I had so few reservations about devoting such substantial resources to a legal problem."

"I look forward to fighting to preserve a treasure which belongs to Georgia and South Carolina — the Savannah River."

Rains Help In Fight To Control Big Fires

BABB, Mont. (AP) — Early-morning rains today helped 550 firefighters bring under control the last of the fires that burned 250,000 acres in Montana since last week.

Hundreds of acres of grassland, meanwhile, burned out of control Wednesday night in Barber County, in south-central Kansas, authorities said.

About 3,000 acres on four farms and 160 acres of timber and range in eastern Washington and northern Idaho were charred as winds gusted to 38 mph and spread controlled burns of field stubble, said Fire District Chief John Bibler in Colfax, Wash.

The 3,400-acre Napi Peak Fire on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation just east of Montana's Glacier National Park was declared controlled at 7 a.m., said Forest Service spokesman Lee Skabelund.

Only a skeleton crew would remain at the fire scene as authorities began to remove equipment that was used to fight the blaze, Skabelund said. He estimated the cost of the battle at $2.5 million.

Skabelund said winds gusted up to 30 mph on Wednesday, but still airplanes managed to drop seven loads of chemical retardant on the blaze, and helicopters were used to drop buckets of water.

Fire boss Bob Webber said Wednesday was the most threatening day since Aug. 26, when the fire blew out of control after having been contained for two days. High winds on Aug. 26 expanded the fire from slightly more than 1,000 acres to its present size.

The Kansas fire, which began in the afternoon and continued late Wednesday, was fanned by southerly winds that reached 17 mph. At one point the fire was six miles long and two miles wide north of U.S. 160 between the Comanche-Barber county line and Sun City.

Thirty trucks carrying firefighters from 13 city and county departments fought the blaze. No serious injuries were reported and no buildings were destroyed.

INNER-CITY SCHOOL TO BE CLOSED — Protestors walk the sidewalks of the Savannah (Chatham) County Board of Education yesterday angry at the proposed closing of Richard Arnold High School, an inner-city school with much pride and history. Ranchers And Indians In Dispute Over Amazon Land Rights

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A rancher who claims ownership of 20,000 acres of territory in Venezuela's Amazon region is in a dispute with native Indians over land rights. Three government commissions are struggling with the problem, but have yet to find a solution.

The dispute began last June 15, when Indians of the Piaroa Tribe crossed onto land occupied in the Guanay Valley by Hermann Zingg Reveron, who claims he has invested the equivalent of $1.9 million for 20,000 acres of land to raise cattle.

Zingg's ranch hands allegedly captured two of the Indians, beat them, and marched them to the local headquarters of the National Guard, tied to a horse's tail.

Zingg said he established the ranch in 1969 and the Indians started moving into the area in 1976.

Officials of the National Agrarian Institute, which grants titles to land, agree with the rancher on that point. But they say the Indians are nomadic by nature and that in November, 1982, the institute granted the 150 Piaroas in the Guanay Valley title to 123,500 acres of land, including the Zingg ranch.

Zingg's own applications for a title have been turned down.

In statements to the press, Zingg has portrayed himself as the victim of larger interests who want to turn the Amazon territory into a "mini-Nicaragua." He charged the region is becoming "a refuge for ex-guerrillas, ... the crossroads of drug traffic and the paradise of gold dealers who reap their harvest at the expense of the Indian population."

Military authorities in the Amazon Federal Territory near the Brazilian and Colombian borders have denied there is drug trafficking and subversion in the region. Maj. Sergio Milano of the National Guard's intelligence unit says there is little chance of any guerrillas being there because the jungle terrain is so hostile.

As for drugs, Milano said, "There are more drugs consumed on a single city block in Caracas than in the entire Amazon Federal Territory."

Still, the claims of drug trafficking, subversion and mistreatment of the Indians have turned the Amazon into the topic of the moment among the nation's politicians, with the result that the three government commissions are studying the problem.

Although believed to be rich in gold, diamonds and manganese, the Amazon Federal Territory has long remained a sleepy backwater province. Only 73,000 of Venezuela's 16 million people live in the area, which is about the size of Oklahoma.

Many of the residents are members of the Piaroa, Yanomami or other Indian tribes, who live largely by hunting, fishing and subsistence farming.

Venezuelan settlers also have come into the region, attracted by the promise of free land and by the reports of gold and diamonds.

Zingg, 41, says he has 800 head of cattle and more than 100 horses, and that he makes his living on the sale of the cattle.

A congressional committee held hearings in the Amazon in late July, but was accused of partiality when its members spent the night at Zingg's ranch and travelled on his private plane.

The congressmen said a storm prevented them from returning to the territorial capital of Puerto Ayacucho, and that they had no choice but to stay at the rancher's home.

In the legal conflict, the Piaroas seem to have taken the advantage at this point, however. Besides the title granted to them by the National Agrarian Institute, they have also received confirmation from the attorney general's office in Caracas of their complaints of human rights violations.

The conflict has underscored the government's neglect of a region that comprises one-fifth of Venezuela's national territory.

President Jaime Lusinchi recently appointed a new governor for the Amazon, Gen. Alberto Muller Rojas, filling a post that has been vacant for two months. Muller is the only military official to hold such a post in the current administration.

"The incident in the Guanay Valley has been turned into everything short of a manifestation of the East-West conflict," Muller Rojas said after being sworn in.

"In fact, it's a simple problem of public order, where the interests of some Venezuelans are in conflict with others. It'll have to be resolved by the courts."

Mormons Help In Family Aid

By BRIAN BECK
The Prescott Courier
PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) — A few days each year, U.S. Electrical Motors general manager Austin Bonnett leaves his coat and tie behind for jeans and a work shirt, and heads off for the east side of Mingus Mountain to do some cowboy work on the 45,000-acre cattle spread the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints leases from the Forest Service.

On those days when he and other church members are fixing fences instead of mowing their lawns at home or repairing windmills instead of washing their cars, the volunteers are helping to support the church's extensive welfare system.

Since the despairing days of the Great Depression, the church has constructed an extensive system of aid for member families suffering economic distress. The program offers everything from employment agency services to money for major medical bills.

Recipients of church aid are expected to contribute to the system if they can — both before they may need help and after they get it.

"The government (welfare) program has no way to pay back for what you take," said Bonnett, president of the Prescott Stake of the Mormon Church. "We don't feel that's healthy spiritually and emotionally. We think that's bad for a man's character."

Nationwide, the church has 26 employment offices that cross-reference jobs with job seekers. There are 600 "production projects" like the Mingus cattle ranch — they include canneries, peach orchards, dairies and egg farms that supply storehouses from which commodities can be drawn for needy families. The projects are operated by volunteer labor.

The church's Deseret Industries hires and trains its handicapped members to refurbish household goods and appliances to sell for cash or to give to church members in need. The church has a Social Service Department that provides family counseling and career retraining and development.

Each month, members are asked to fast through two meals and donate the money that would be spent on them to a fund that can cover families' cash needs, such as medical or housing bills.

The welfare system is structured so that assistance comes first from relatives and ward members, and only later from the wider church organization if needs cannot be met on a local level.

A tenet of the program is that people should take care of themselves before seeking help elsewhere, according to Bonnett. To that end, "we recommend that you keep on hand enough commodities to take care of your family for approximately a year," he said.

"That's where the first help should come from, and that's where reliance should be — in the family. Not in the church, not the government," he said. "It's a key principle. We feel in order for a person to have a feeling of self-worth, a feeling of integrity, he cannot be dependent upon the dole of the government or even the church for his well-being. The thing that drives you and me is our self-esteem."

ECU Chancellor Will Speak

East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. John M. Howell said today that he is "a political scientist and very much interested in the matter of citizenship, and am certainly pleased to be invited" to deliver the principal address Friday at a naturalization ceremony to be held in federal court in Raleigh.

The ceremony, which is for people who want to become United States citizens, will be held at 2 p.m. in the U.S. Courthouse, 310 New Bern Avenue.

"One of the points I'm going to make is that they are becoming citizens of the United States of America during the year that we are celebrating the 400th anniversary of the first English settlement at Manteo," Howell said.

"The whole community is going to have, for the next three years, a heightening sense of heritage of this nation — and that's also their (those who want to become U.S. citizens) heritage too," he commented.

Howell added that the 400th anniversary committee has made a special effort to show that the celebration is for all people, including "Indians and various races and ethnic groups that have come to this country since that time."

Other ECU participants include the ECU Army ROTC Color Guard, Capt. Heldur Liivak of the ECU Army ROTC, Charles Maxwell who will sing the "National Anthem", and a brass quintet that will play "Fanfare" and "Stars and Stripes."

According to U.S. Magistrate Alexander B. Denson, naturalization ceremonies are "always impressive and moving ... and among the most important days in the lives of those becoming citizens."

He's A Real Tomato

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio (AP) — By day, Gary Burkholder is a mild-mannered researcher for the Governor's Office of Criminal Justice Services, but away from work he's Tomatoman, a vegetable with a message.

Burkholder, 29, and several female cohorts, known as the Tomatoettes, are volunteers who dress as tomatoes during the four-day 18th Annual Reynoldsburg Tomato Festival to deliver messages known as Tomatograms.

It's all for a good cause. Money raised by the sale of the $10 Tomatograms goes to the Reynoldsburg Community Counseling Center.

"I figure from here it's on to Fruit of the Loom commercials," Burkholder said Wednesday. "Actually, it feels great. I'm wearing black tights, which may make me a bad tomato, but that's OK."

"It can be a birthday message, an anniversary message or just about anything that involves a little cutting up," said Nancy Griggs, office manager for the counseling center.

Delivery area is limited to Reynoldsburg. "We don't want them running all over the city dressed as tomatoes," Ms. Griggs said.

Air Force One Has Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilot of President Reagan's airplane was forced to drop altitude after a seal on a stove vent broke, losing cabin pressure, as Reagan returned to Washington from a campaign trip.

Air Force One landed safely about 20 minutes after the incident, and an Air Force steward said neither the president nor any of the other 60 or so passengers was in any danger.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan "experienced some minor discomfort" in the Wednesday incident. "He could feel it in his ears, but no problems," Speakes said passengers "generally weren't aware of it."

The seal break in the rear galley caused a loud noise, and Air Force security guards rushed from their seats to inspect the problem.

The Air Force steward said the presidential pilot took the plane down from 27,000 feet to 12,000 feet because of the air seeping out and a resultant loss of pressure.

The Boeing 707 which has served as the president's main aircraft for about a decade had returned about three weeks ago from a long maintenance overhaul.

The mishap was similar to a problem that developed on the press plane accompanying Reagan in San Jose, Calif., on Monday. Then, a seal on the aircraft door broke, forcing the 200 or so reporters, photographers and technicians to change aircraft.

Applications Fell

WASHINGTON (AP) — First-time applications for unemployment compensation insurance benefits fell by 2,000 in the week ended Aug. 25, the Labor Department reported today.

The Employment and Training Administration said a total of 373,000 jobless Americans sought benefits in that week, compared to 375,000 such applications in the preceding week.

The grand total of unemployment compensation beneficiaries across the country in the week ended Aug.

FAA Hints Airline Schedule Rules To End Delays

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Determined to reduce the number of delays plaguing air travelers, the Federal Aviation Administration has told airlines to stop concentrating flights at peak travel hours or face government-imposed schedule restrictions.

The FAA issued a blueprint Wednesday of what it expects of a volunteer effort by the airlines to reduce delays, which reached record proportions in August as about one of every ten flights was delayed at least 15 minutes.

The FAA briefing came as airline representatives began a series of meetings to try to work out a voluntary plan to reduce the number of delays at six of the most congested airports. The air carriers hoped to adjust schedules to reduce the number of flights during peak travel periods.

FAA officials opened the session by releasing new figures for August that show the number of delays of commercial flights increased by more than 5,000 between July and August to a record number of 44,372 last month — more than twice the total in August 1983.

According to FAA figures, about three-fourths of the delays have occurred at Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Newark and the two New York City airports. The airlines hope to develop a scheduling plan for each of the airports over the next five days that will reduce the concentration of flights around peak travel times.

But the air carriers ran into difficulty on the first day Wednesday as they examined scheduling at the Atlanta airport. The airlines worked out a preliminary plan in which both Delta Air Lines and Eastern Airlines — the dominant carriers at Atlanta — would shift many of their flights so fewer would overlap and cause congestion.

But the FAA held off approval of the plan, saying instead that it expected the carriers to establish clear ceilings on the number of flights that would be allowed hourly and even down to 15-minute increments.

At Atlanta, for example, the FAA told the carriers it wanted no more than 120 flights per hour and no more than 30 flights during any 15-minute period.

Those restrictions were quickly criticized by airline officials who said they inhibit competition and are unworkable.

"We have not agreed ... to limit the number of flights we have in Atlanta. We want the ability to respond to market conditions and use our resources where we want to," said Daniel Klein, director of strategic planning for Eastern Airlines.

Ed Faberman, the FAA's acting general counsel, acknowledged after the meeting there remained "philosophical differences" between the FAA and the carriers on how to deal with the problem, but he said he was confident a voluntary solution could be worked out.

Meanwhile, Jack Ryan, the FAA's operations director for air traffic control, told the airlines that he hoped some FAA procedural changes also would ease the number of delays beginning next spring. He said by then some in-flight restrictions are expected to be eased or eliminated as more air traffic controllers are hired and the controller workforce nears full strength.

Ryan and other FAA officials said that schedule restrictions are to be in effect only until the delay problems ease. Nevertheless, industry officials expressed concern that scheduling controls could become permanent once they are imposed and restrict the ability of carriers to compete and freely enter new markets.

Volkswagen Recalls Autos

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America Inc. announced today it is recalling about 16,000 1981- and 1982-model vans and campers to correct a possible door lock problem that could cause the vehicles' doors to open in a crash.

The company said springs that hold the latches of the front-door locks in place could break, making it possible for the locks to open.

That, in turn, could expose occupants to danger in a crash "or when extreme forces are extended against the interior of the door," the company said in a statement.

No cases of lock failure have been reported in the United States, said company spokesman Joseph Bennett.

"We were informed by VW in Germany," Bennett said. "We have had no problems in the United States and we don't want to have any."

He said the company has notified federal traffic safety officials of the recall. The defect will be repaired free of charge, he said.

Postal Bargaining Commitments Made By Service, Unions

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service and its two largest employee unions will soon return to the bargaining table in a fresh attempt to negotiate a new contract for a half million postal workers.

The Postal Service signed an agreement with the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers on Wednesday that waives further fact-finding and commits the parties to new face-to-face negotiations.

Unionized employees of the independent postal agency have been working without a contract since July 21. Any settlement imposed through binding arbitration would not occur until mid-December.

Leaders of the two unions said they don't anticipate calling a strike, which would be illegal, and Postmaster General William F. Bolger has said that he would fire any strikers. Bolger has said that the Postal Service has a contingency plan for any walkouts that would ensure against any interruption of mail service.

Independent fact-finding was triggered July 21 under provisions of the Postal Reorganization Act after talks on a new contract collapsed. The agency sought unsuccessfully in early August to unilaterally implement a two-tier wage system, which would have paid new employees at a rate averaging 23 percent below the wages paid existing workers.

But Congress passed an amendment to an appropriations bill that prohibited the Postal Service from implementing the two-tier pay arrangement — a major factor in the breakdown of the earlier negotiations.

Prospects for success in the new negotiations, due to commence "on or around Sept. 11," were uncertain late Wednesday.

The Postal Service described the new bargaining as an "attempt to narrow or focus the issues in dispute" and the agreement signed by the two unions also retained fact-finding and binding arbitration as an alternative in the event of failure.

But Vincent Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said in a telephone interview that "there will be no bargaining. What he's (Bolger) engaging in is going through the motions.

"If I know that he (Bolger) will be there (for any new negotiations), we'll come and negotiate," Sombrotto said. "Otherwise, I won't be there."

Moe Biller, who heads the larger APWU, which has 320,000 members, said: "There's no restriction whatsoever" on what topics can be brought up at any new bargaining sessions.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm prepared to negotiate on anything and everything," Biller said.

The two unions represent roughly a half-million of the more than 600,000 Postal Service employees. Two smaller unions, which together represent 100,000 workers, were not involved in the agreement to resume bargaining signed Wednesday.

Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which would assist the new efforts to reach an accommodation at the collective bargaining table, said: "I'm very pleased the parties have taken this route. I think it's a far preferable solution."

Last month, delegates to a convention of the APWU gave Biller what, in effect, was a strike authorization, although the resolution passed in Las Vegas, Nev. did not specifically use those words. Instead, Biller and other leaders of the APWU were authorized "to take whatever action deemed necessary" to win a fair and just contract.

Delegates to a letter carriers convention passed a resolution accepting arbitration and restricting the leverage of union leaders to call a strike.

Bolger said in an interview last Sunday on NBC's "Meet The Press" that "I think we ought to get back to the table. ... I think that's where these agreements should be reached, and not through binding arbitration or any other process."

A typical Postal Service mail clerk or letter carrier, under terms of the old contract, averaged about $23,000 a year, not including fringe benefits.

The Postal Service management argued that agency employees were being paid too much in comparison to people performing the same kinds work for the agency's private industry competitors.

The unions contested this, saying Postal Service wages were not out of line, and citing improvements in productivity as justification for demands for healthy pay increases amounting to about 10 percent.

In another matter, Bolger announced Wednesday that he is turning down a job as president of the Direct Mail Marketing Association to avoid the appearance of any conflict of interest.

Bolger, 61, who is scheduled to retire from his Postal Service post at the end of the year, said he made the decision because of the "perception that some people had" that to take the job would violate federal conflict of interest laws.

O'Neill, Baker Eye October Adjournment

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. have agreed to try to end a deadlock over defense spending and adjourn the 98th Congress on Oct. 5.

Though the two leaders did not discuss specifics in a brief, private meeting Wednesday, it was clear that both sides were prepared to give somewhat on the Pentagon budget for 1985.

Another meeting was set for early next week, and an aide to Baker, Tom Griscom, said "you ought to assume" his bargaining position had been cleared with President Reagan.

The administration and the Republican Senate have stood fast behind a $299 billion defense spending plan, while House negotiators have fought for billions in reductions, coupled with arms-control strings on major weapons systems and the president's authority to wage war in Central America.

The defense standoff has stalled the Pentagon spending bill and an overall budget resolution that contains the biggest chunk of a "down payment" on reducing the federal deficit. Depending on the final defense figure, the measure would cut spending by up to $100 billion over three years. Reagan already has signed legislation raising taxes by more than $50 billion over that same period.

O'Neill, a Massachusetts Democrat, and Baker, a Republican from Tennessee, termed their session Wednesday as productive and said they were optimistic of further progress next week. But aides emphasized they did not discuss particular sticking points, such as the Senate-House standoff over the fate of the MX missile.

The Senate barely approved funds for 21 of the multiwarhead nuclear missiles next year, while the House barred the production of any of the weapons unless both chambers approve that step in a separate vote after next April.

CURE FOR DIABETIC DOGS — Dr. Daniel Mintz of the Diabetes Research Institute at the University of Miami, holds a dog cured of diabetes by a procedure which someday could be used by humans. Dr. Mintz announced

One-Day Stays Granted For Convicted Killers

ATLANTA (AP) — Two convicted killers who had been set to die in Florida's electric chair, including one man who killed his 9-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son, have been granted one-day stays of execution.

The Atlanta-based 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it would hear oral arguments today in the case of Ernest Dobbert Jr., who has been granted a 27-hour stay of execution by the court.

In the other case, a federal judge in Miami granted a 24-hour stay Wednesday to convicted killer Nollie Lee Martin, who faced execution for the 1977 stabbing death of a convenience-store clerk.

Martin traveled to Florida from North Carolina, where he was on parole for a second-degree arson conviction in a fire that left three people dead. Martin is from Chapel Hill.

Chief U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King denied a writ of habeas corpus, but granted the stay so that Martin's attorneys could have time to prepare and file an appeal with the 11th Circuit.

Martin's stay expires at 7 a.m. EDT Friday, while Dobbert cannot be executed before 10 a.m. Friday, court officials said.

The condemned men had been set to die today in the first double execution in the United States since 1965. Gov. Bob Graham's death warrants expire at noon Friday for both death row inmates at Florida State Prison.

Dobbert, 46, was condemned in 1974 for the December 1971 murder of his 9-year-old daughter, Kelly. He was convicted of second-degree murder in the 1972 death of his 7-year-old son, Ryder Scott. Jurors also convicted Dobbert of child abuse and child torture related to the beatings of two of his other children.

Recanted testimony of Ernest John Dobbert III, Dobbert's son and the state's chief witness in his father's original trial, was the basis for the appeal to the three-judge panel in Atlanta.

The son, 13 at the time, underwent hypnosis and was drugged before testifying that his father killed his brother and sister. The youth recanted his statements after his father was convicted.

A Duval County circuit judge, the Florida Supreme Court and a U.S. District Judge all have rejected Dobbert's previous appeals.

Dobbert, who is under his third death warrant, and Martin would be the eighth and ninth men executed in Florida since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976.

Martin, 35, is under his first death warrant for the June 1977 slaying of Patricia Greenfield, who was robbed of $90, kidnapped from a Palm Beach County store and later died of stab wounds.

On Tuesday, attorneys for Martin told King that a state trial judge was wrong not to appoint a neuropsychologist to examine the man. They claim that Martin suffers from brain damage.

Two other death-row inmates are scheduled to be executed Sept. 19.

Graham has signed death warrants for James Henry, sentenced to die for a 1974 Orlando murder, and Aubrey Adams, condemned for strangling an 8-year-old girl in Ocala.

Big Money Involved In Governor's Race

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Two Republicans fighting to succeed Gov. Richard Snelling have turned this year's gubernatorial contest into the most expensive ever in Vermont.

The GOP candidates, Attorney General John Easton and banker Hilton Wick, have waged a bruising primary battle highlighted by a dispute over Wick's hard-hitting political commercials.

Waiting quietly in the wings for Tuesday's winner is Democrat Madeleine Kunin, a popular two-term lieutenant governor hoping to become Vermont's first female chief executive. Mrs. Kunin, unopposed in the primary, was crushed by Snelling's re-election two years ago.

But the four-term Republican governor, a former chairman of the National Governors' Association and a strong vote-getter in Vermont, decided to call it quits this year and return to private life.

No U.S. Senate seats are up this year in Vermont, but seven people are challenging the re-election of five-term U.S. Rep. James Jeffords. Jeffords, a Republican, faces a primary challenge from conservative Michael Jacobs, a former school teacher. Three Democrats are seeking the congressional nomination: Anthony Pollina; Paul Forlenza and John Tatro.

Although Vermont is considered a Republican state, Mrs. Kunin, 50, is given a strong chance of capturing the governor's office in November.

Easton, 41, began the campaign as the GOP frontrunner by virtue of four solid years as attorney general.

Wick, 64, has never held elective office in Vermont and has pumped more than $100,000 of his own money into the campaign to build name recognition and establish credibility.

The three candidates have raised a total of $536,000, breaking the $450,000 spent during the entire 1982 gubernatorial campaign.

Wick leads the fundraising sweepstakes with $217,000 in donations, followed by Easton's $174,000 and Mrs. Kunin's $144,000.

The chief issues in the Republican contest have been the state's raid of a church sect in Island Pond and the drinking age. Easton has been on the defensive for most of the campaign, responding to critical ads aired by the Wick campaign during the final two weeks of the race.

Easton gave the legal go-ahead for the June raid on the Northeast Kingdom Community Church in Island Pond. The raid, which was aimed at determining whether church children were being abused, was found to be illegal by a Vermont judge.

The attorney general also was blasted for his position on the drinking age: He supports leaving it at 18, while Wick has called for the age to be increased to reduce highway fatalities.

No polls have been released during the campaign, but Wick claimed on Wednesday that the race was "neck and neck."

Former Aide Figures 'Hit List' Thrown Out

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, through the White House, suggested the removal of eight Environmental Protection Agency officials, but the agency's chief threw out the "hit list," says a former top EPA aide.

The list was thrown out when former EPA Administrator Anne Burford spotted the name of Walt Barbour, who had been the agency's interim head, said John Daniel, chief of staff for Mrs. Burford during her tenure at the agency.

The list had been sent to Mrs. Burford in 1981 without comment by the White House, Daniel said Wednesday.

Existence of the list was disclosed in notes Daniel gave to the House Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee during its investigation of EPA last year — one of six congressional investigations that led to Mrs. Burford's resignation. The notes were part of the hearing record published last month.

"Anne thought the world of (Barbour)," Daniel said in an interview. "When she saw his name was first, she threw it in the trash can. She didn't find the thing credible."

The incoming Reagan administration had chosen Barbour as acting administrator while it sought someone for the job eventually filled by Mrs. Burford. After she took over the agency Barbour went back to his job as director of the office of air quality standards, which he left in 1982.

In a telephone interview from Oak Brook, Ill., where he is a vice president of Waste Management Inc., Barbour said he left EPA "because I was 40, and it was time to try something else" after eight years as a federal bureaucrat. Barbour said "as far as I know" he was not forced out of the agency. "I never had any problems with her," he said of Mrs. Burford.

He said he knew "such a list was around" but had never seen it. Asked if he knew who else was on it, he replied, "Anything I would tell you would be hearsay, so I better not." Daniel said he did not know the other names either.

Barbour said he knew of nothing specific he had done to anger business and thought the hit list was "part of the general reaction of the time."

"People who were around there at the time were thought to be 'contaminated,'" he said.

Several top agency officials who came to the agency after Mrs. Burford had lists of "staff and advisers to be gotten rid off" because they were too tough on industry, according to a history of EPA under Mrs. Burford, "A Season of Spoils," written by Jonathan Lash, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The notes Daniel made of a meeting with Cabinet secretary Craig Fuller on March 2, 1983 said presidential aides "did locate Chamber of Commerce list — sent from Pen James to Anne in 1981." Following that sentence appeared, in parenthesis, the phrase "Not acknowledging this."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, who was named in the notes as one of the officials who discussed the list with Fuller, said today neither he nor Fuller remembered such a meeting. Nor did White House chief of staff James A. Baker III recall such a meeting, the spokesman said.

He added that on March 2, 1983, he was in Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan was entertaining Queen Elizabeth II.

"I don't know anything about the hit list," Speakes said. "You'll have to ask the Chamber of Commerce."

Asked why Fuller wouldn't return telephone calls from reporters, Speakes said, "I'll do the talking on it."

Winston Lovell, spokesman for the Chamber, said the group would respond after it answered a House subcommittee request for material on the incident.

Mrs. Burford's lawyer, Doug

Bennett, said she would give substantially the same account that Daniel did.

The man named in Daniel's notes as sending the list to Mrs. Burford, former White House personnel director Pendleton James, now a New York City consultant, said he did not remember such a list.

He said if he had been given suggestions on career employees, he would have sent it to the appropriate agency without comment because he dealt only in presidential appointments.

Boy's Body Found After Search

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — A body found under a pile of leaves is apparently that of a grief-stricken 13-year-old who may have gone into the woods to mourn the death of a grandfather who taught him how to survive in the wild, authorities said.

Police, who were treating the death as a homicide, ended a six-day search Wednesday saying they were "95 percent certain" the body found near a wooded ravine was that of Matthew Margolies of Greenwich.

A neighbor helping in the search found a pair of sneakers around 4 p.m. Wednesday and called police. Officers soon found the body and, judging by its location and surroundings, tentatively concluded that the youth had been slain, Chief Thomas Keegan said.

Keegan said the body was partially covered with leaves and had been there "for some time." State police crime experts were still gathering evidence late Wednesday and did not plan to move the body until the task was completed.

A cause of death was not immediately known, Keegan said. A news conference was planned today to announce results of an autopsy.

There were no leads and police said they would continue searching for clues in the area of the Byram River, where Matthew was last seen carrying a fishing pole after he failed to come home for dinner Friday.

Throughout the intensive search, Maryann Margolies remained confident of her son's ability to survive on skills learned from his maternal grandfather, whose recent death left Matthew despondent.

"He was very knowledgeable," Mrs. Margolies told a television reporter only hours before her son's fate was learned. "The earth and nature were very important to him."

She said Matthew's grandfather "taught him what berries to eat. he taught him how to track, he taught him all kinds of things. So in that respect I have full confidence that he knows" how to survive.

"I think that he would feel safest and most peaceful in a place that he had frequented with my father," she said.

Bass Tournaments Object Of Probe

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Federal and state officials are pressing their investigation into alleged cheating in high-stakes bass fishing tournaments, despite the shotgun death of one witness and the fears of another that he won't "live until sundown."

Officials suspect that prize-winning bass in Texas and Louisiana tournaments were out-of-state fish. The investigation has prompted two Texas lawmakers to propose new strict penalties for cheating in the contests, where prizes may run up to $50,000.

"They were bringing these big bass out of Florida and keeping them in cooling tanks," the Dallas Times Herald quoted one investigator as saying. "They'd put them in lakes the night before the tournament, staking them out in certain areas so they would know where they were."

In the past few years, prize money in bass tournaments has become lavish and officials say cheating may be a nationwide problem.

According to the Longview News Journal, authorities say they are close to netting a three-state cheating ring. As many as eight people, some with criminal records, are targets of the probe.

The News Journal said as many as five federal agencies, the Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife and the Louisiana State Police are involved in the investigation.

State Reps. Alex Short and Ray Keller say they plan to introduce legislation setting criminal fines for cheating in fishing tournaments.

"We do not intend to hamper the sport, only police it and establish fines as well as jail terms that would serve notice that we will not have that kind of criminal activity in the state of Texas," Short said.

The investigation began last year after Danny Ray Davis, 33, of Grand Prairie won $50,000 in a Labor Day weekend bass tournament, the two newspapers said.

Davis was subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury last Wednesday, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris Harrison in Tyler.

But the day before Davis was to testify, his body was found at a private lake in Grand Prairie.

According to the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, which has not issued a final ruling on the cause of death, Davis died of a shotgun blast to the head. A shotgun authorities say belonged to Davis was found near his body.

Grand Prairie Detective D.S. Burton told the News-Journal his office was investigating the death as a homicide but had not ruled out an accident or suicide.

The News Journal said sources close to the investigation said Davis, who reportedly won $75,000 in fishing tournaments last year, had been cooperating with federal officials and had already been interviewed several times.

The newspaper also said another witness has told investigators he fears for his life. The witness said "he wouldn't live until sundown" if the alleged ring discovered he was helping authorities.

Davis was awarded the $50,000 first-prize after two other men were disqualified when they failed polygraph exams. Lab tests showed their fish were from Florida.

Davis' fish was not tested; it was stuffed and exhibited at the State Fair of Texas. But authorities said he also had trouble passing the polygraph test, the newspapers said.

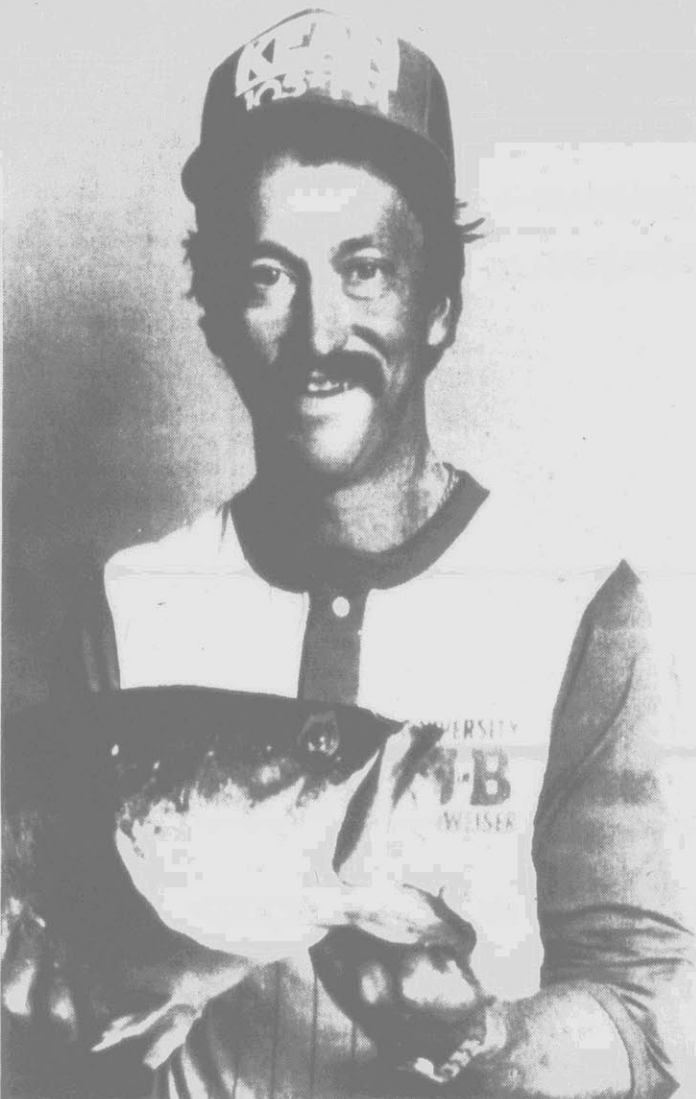

Davis, a lineman for Dallas Power & Light, blamed his problem with the test on the effects of burns he suffered in a transformer explosion. He said he had scars on 70 percent of his body and extensive nerve damage.

Other fishermen eventually became suspicious of Davis and he was blacklisted along with several other anglers, said Dave Bruton, co-sponsor of the annual Country Bass Classic in Tyler.

Bruton said Davis tried to enter contests using an assumed name.

Federal authorities are reportedly considering felony charges involving mail fraud, wire fraud and violations of the Lacey Act, a 1900 law giving federal agencies jurisdiction over the interstate transport of wildlife.

Report Denied

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq has denied reports that a pesticide plant under construction in his country with West German equipment could be modified to produce nerve gas.

Speaking at a news conference on the second day of a three-day West German visit, Aziz said Wednesday that the reports were untrue and that an inspection of the plant, requested by the West German government, was "unnecessary."

There was no official response to his remarks from the federal government.

Too few loads offered for a preliminary weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is moderate for a moderate to mostly good demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,904,000, compared to 1,851,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn higher at mostly 3.08-3.18 in East and mostly 3.30-3.39 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans higher at mostly 6.41-6.74 1/2 in the east and mostly 6.26-6.37 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.33-3.40; (new crop soybeans 5.94-6.25; wheat 2.96-3.25.)

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly higher today after retreating the two previous sessions. Auto, telephone, mining, oil and financial issues paced the early gainers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 15.35 so far this week, recovered 5.97 to 1,215.00 in today's opening half-hour.

Gainers jumped out to a 2-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stock prices had fallen the two previous days in lackluster trading. Some brokers said many investors were sitting out the market until there are clearer signals as to the course of interest rates.

Investors are hoping the apparent slowdown of the economy's expansion will reduce the upward pressure on lending charges, which currently is lifting the dollar to record levels.

But some credit analysts say government and private credit demands will remain brisk in the weeks to come, precluding substantial declines in interest rates.

On the NYSE's active list today, Mobil rose 1/4 to 29 3/4, Exxon edged up 1/8 to 43 3/4, General Electric gained 1/2 to 56 3/4, and Owens-Illinois rose 1/4 to 45 1/4.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 3.32 to 1,209.03.

Losers led gainers by nearly 2 to 1 on the NYSE, whose composite index dropped 0.36 to 94.60.

Big Board volume totaled 69.25 million shares, against 62.11 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 1.43 to 212.90.

CHICAGO (AP) — Pointing out that two-thirds of the 36 million disabled people in the United States are of voting age, the National Easter Seal Society has launched a nationwide Voter Accessibility Project.

rain, measured on Sept. 4, has fallen this month.

Friday will be sunny with highs mostly in the 70s, say forecasters, as the high pressure that brought the pleasant weather to the Tar Heel state Wednesday will continue to control North Carolina weather for the next few days.

By the weekend, the high pressure area will have moved off shore and winds will shift to a more southerly direction, bringing warmer temperatures and some higher humidities to the state. But the threat of any rain through the weekend will be little, if any.

The convention provides for punishment of persons committing these acts, whether they are rulers, public officials or private citizens.

Customs Service Addresses Quotas

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service has taken action that manufacturers say further eases rules intended to stop evasion of textile and apparel import quotas.

Retailers and textile industry officials say the latest action will allow a substantial amount of imported apparel that would have been otherwise prohibited to be shipped for U.S. retailers' spring season.

The Customs Service, which won textile industry praise when it first issued the rules Aug. 3, responded to retailers' criticism last month by exempting previously ordered goods intended for the year-end holiday period.

Textile officials believed that exemption, which applied to goods ordered by Aug. 3 and shipped by Oct. 31, affected only finished apparel shipped to the United States.

But in a clarification made to retailers, the Customs Service said the exemption also applied to cut fabrics shipped by one country to another for assembly.

Textile industry officials expressed outrage over the change. "It's an administration sellout," said Jim Conner, executive vice president of the American Yarn Spinners Association in Gastonia.

Campaign Chief Says Barring Reporters Wrong

NEW YORK (AP) — The director of Ronald Reagan's re-election campaign, Ed Rollins, says "it was probably a mistake" for the White House to bar wire service reporters from the press pool that covers the president as he shakes hands with citizens.

"The campaign or the White House has made no attempt to keep the press from the president," campaign chief Ed Rollins said Wednesday in a Cable News Network interview. "I think what has occurred is, in a pool situation there was limited space."

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said Tuesday that White House officials are reconsidering a recently announced policy that bars reporters from The Associated Press and United Press International from the group that covers the president as he walks along a line of people greeting them and shaking hands.

Asked whether the two major U.S. wire services, AP and UPI, should be barred from the pool, Rollins said: "Personally I don't, and I wasn't involved in the decision. I think it was probably a mistake."

Despite the new policy, reporters from the two major wire services — as well as others — were allowed to cover Reagan on Tuesday as he shook hands along a fence at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago.

Rose Hosts Cards In Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For Chip Williams, the waiting is nearly over. Friday night, the new Rose High School football coach will find out just how things stand as the Rampants open the 1984 grid season by hosting Jacksonville.

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

For some 40 practice sessions, many of them long and hard, the Rampants have worked to master the system brought in by Williams, who moved in from 3-A Bertie this summer. "We've put in everything we wanted to put in," Williams said. "Sometimes I wonder if we have too much to cover. I want us to execute but I also want us to play, and there's a difference. I don't want us to be worrying about making or not making mistakes but to just get into the flow of the game."

"It's time for us to play and I'm glad to have the chance," the coach said.

The Rampants will run out of the I formation most of the time, and the changes Williams has put in mostly involve blocking schemes. And he's not worried about how many lettermen and starters he returns from last year's team because this is a whole new game.

Last year's Rampant team opened on a good note, winning all three of its non-conference games and being highly regarded in the state poll. But the bottom fell out after that and Rose won just one of its seven Big East games, finishing in a tie for the bottom place, 4-6 on the year.

This season, Williams is hopeful of changing things around and bringing Rose back to its usual place among the championship contenders. But it won't be easy.

"We were picked to finish fourth by the coaches," Williams said. "Rocky Mount looks awfully good offensively; they're ahead of the game. Everyone is picking North-eastern to win and they have the potential and the athletes. Fike is a contender too and I think Hunt could finish up there too.

"I'd like to finish in the top four, and I think it's reasonable to think that we could. But we're going to have to overcome our early mistakes."

Williams paused a moment, then added, "I guess I've been lucky as a head coach. I've never finished lower than second before."

That — at least a second place finish — would send the Rampants back to the playoffs.

Despite the return of Battle Emory (6-1, 190, Sr.) at quarterback, there's a battle on for the spot. "Things have been real close, and I'm still not settled on a starter," Williams said. He will wait until after practice today to decide. "We hope to get them all in the game," he added. The other two candidates are Ervin Best (6-1, 175, Jr.) and Clay Young (6-2, 170, Jr.).

The two running back positions, tailback and fullback, will be interchangeable, Williams notes. All of the backs have learned to play both positions.

He'll probably go with the lone sophomore on the varsity squad, Anthony Cobb (5-8, 185) at the tailback position and Tom Moore (5-9, 190, Sr.) at the fullback. Cobb was an outstanding junior high player, amassing over 2,000 yards in his career at E.B. Aycock, although he still has to prove himself on the varsity level. Others who could see action in the backfield include James (Mo) Matthews (5-7, 160, Jr.) and Lorenzo Daniels (5-8, 160, Sr.).

Dwight Smith (5-9, 160, Sr.), Tyrone Jones (5-10, 155, Jr.) and David Walker (5-8, 160, Sr.) are all likely to see action in the flanker position, since the flanker is the play carrier. Mike Staffelbach (5-7, 155, Sr.) has been coming on strong according to Williams and could also see action.

The ends will usually line up tight, but one of them could be split out at times, Williams said. Charles Hill (6-0, 175, Sr.) and Glenn Duffie (6-0, 175, Jr.) are the leaders here, while L.C. Atkinson (6-2, 200, Jr.) could also work in once he shows the enthusiasm Williams is looking for.

At split end, Tyrone Smith (5-11, 170, Sr.) was the leading receiver last year, while Adrian Brewington

Ex-Rampant Finds New Sport

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

For some athletes who found running just wasn't enough, the addition of bicycling and swimming in one afternoon has turned the boredom of road racing into the triathlon, a grueling test of human abilities.

North Carolina has its share of triathletes, and the numbers seem to grow with each event. Participants range from former collegiate performers to runners who found they could do more if they pushed themselves or were pushed by others.

One such convert is Scott Wolcott, a former Duke University and Rose High School placekicker. He literally got into the sport by accident in 1979.

"One of the things is a void you feel when you've been in sports," said Wolcott, 28, a recent second-place finisher in Rochester, N.Y., after a 1.2-mile swim, a 56-mile bicycle ride and a 13.1-mile run. This spring, he finished third in a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., event and was victorious in Columbia, S.C.

"...I fell while I was on a construction job and broke my hip, ribs and bruised my knee real bad," he continued. "Kicking was out of the question."

The accident occurred in June. By December, Wolcott was racing again only to suffer a shoulder injury in 1980.

"The best therapy for that was swimming. I was swimming and running when I heard about the triathlon in Wilmington," he said. "I went down there and tried it and had an absolutely miserable time."

Wolcott went back to Wilmington in 1981 and placed 12th. The next year, he was fourth. This year, he has qualified for the Iron Man Triathlon in Hawaii, a 2.4-mile swim, a 56-mile bike race and a 26-mile marathon. He lost his sponsorship earlier this summer and is looking for help in financing his career.

"I do like racing every week because I'm up to the shape now where I need that incentive each week," Wolcott said.

Tom Ash is on the other side of 40 and calls younger competitors "flat bellies." He works for a computer firm and uses his free time during the work day to train.

"I think it's an extension of what was happening in the '70s. You had the people who were doing one sport. Then you had guys like me who weren't very good at any one of them," Ash said.

"When we first started doing these things, it was something completely different and people thought we were nuts," he said. "Now, they're closing these things out at 400 people."

Ellen McCuiston started running in January. While swimming one day, a friend told her she might be a pretty good triathlete. In three events since June, she has finished 11th in High Point, seventh in Raleigh and she captured a race in New Bern in the women's divisions. Now, she is being considered by sponsorship by an athletic products firm.

"I gives you something to shoot for, it gives you a goal," McCuiston said. "It's a little bit extra work, but I think it's because (the sport) is goal-oriented."

The nation's top woman triathlete is Asheville's Jann Girard. The 24-year-old University of Texas graduate is in Nice, France, preparing for an event there. It was her exposure to the Iron Man that prompted her to take up the sport.

Alexander Julian for fall takes his colors from desert sources; the clearest, purest azure of the overaching sky, sunsets that leave the horizon ablaze in deep purples, mauves, oranges and yellows. There are sun-burnished shades of adobe, sienna, maize, cactus green and wondrous brights borrowed from blooming desert flowers.

Sweaters for fall resonate with the beat of Indian rhythms, modifying native artistry with unmatched flair. Imagine a traditional navajo weave, transformed to row upon row of bright diamonds that layer across the body of a crewneck for an imposing argyle variation. Intarsia rectangles in striking colors give emphasis to an off-white v-neck vest, and reflect the orderly decoration of Hopi pottery. Donegal weaves give the chiaroscuro effect to the designs, which feature double rib necks, waistband and cuffs with signature striping.

Shown are some of the Colours by Alexander Julian sweater styles that can be found at Brody's for men. Multi-color vertical stripes, twisted cables set in on horizontal stripes, and half pattern argyles. See these sweaters and many more in crewneck, v-neck and vest styles.

Bunts Key High-Scoring Contest

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

The San Diego Padres, who have used their share of home runs to stay atop the National League West, decided to use the bunt against the Cincinnati Reds.

And the result was the highest-scoring game in the major leagues this season.

A seven-run outburst in the seventh inning — keyed by three straight bunts — came after a five-run burst in the sixth inning and led the Padres to a wild 15-11 victory Wednesday night.

"That was the most exciting game we won all year," Manager Dick Williams said after his team overcame an early 7-0 deficit to remain 10 games atop the NL West.

In other NL games, Montreal stopped Chicago 3-1. New York beat Pittsburgh 4-2. St. Louis rallied past Philadelphia 6-5. Los Angeles edged Atlanta 4-3 and Houston downed San Francisco 4-1.

With the score tied 8-8, San Diego's Kevin McReynolds — who went 5-for-5 — and Terry Kennedy led off the seventh inning with singles.

Then, Carmelo Martinez bunted for a single that loaded the bases. Pinch hitter Champ Summers, batting just .171, followed with a bunt single that put the Padres ahead. And then Alan Wiggins drove in another run with a sacrifice squeeze bunt.

Steve Garvey's three-run double, an error, and an RBI single by McReynolds capped the seven-run inning.

"We tried a different attack," Williams smiled. "We used the bunt instead of the home run."

Summers liked his manager's approach.

"That was my first bunt base hit in the majors," said Summers, a 10-year veteran. "It was the hardest ball I hit in a month."

Each team finished with 17 hits and the Reds had the game's only home runs — two-run blasts by Eric Davis and Cesar Cedeño in the second inning that made it 7-0, along with a three-run shot by Dave Parker in the ninth.

Craig Lefferts, 3-3, the fifth of six San Diego pitchers, got the victory while Tom Hume, 4-13, the fourth of five Cincinnati hurlers, took the loss.

"It was just one of those wacky games," said Reds player-manager Pete Rose.

Mets 4, Pirates 2

New York had not made up any ground on National League East-leading Chicago since Aug. 22. The Mets did something about that in Pittsburgh as they beat the Pirates and pulled within six games of the front-running Cubs.

Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria, whose left elbow tightened, departed after five innings with a 2-1 lead and New York quickly went to work against reliever Lee Tunnell.

Keith Hernandez led off the sixth with a single and Hubie Brooks drew a one-out walk. A groundout moved the runners up before Ray Knight hit an infield single in the hole that drove in the tying run. When shortstop Ron Wotus threw wildly to first, Brooks scored to make it 3-2.

The Mets got an insurance run in the ninth when pinch-hitter Mookie Wilson led off with an infield single and later scored on an error by third baseman Jim Morrison.

Bruce Berenyi, 11-13, earned his first victory in five career decisions against Pittsburgh. Doug Sisk, making his second appearance since being activated from the disabled list last week, allowed just one hit over the final three innings for his 15th save.

The Mets take on the Pirates again tonight before returning to New York to play host to the Cubs in a three-game series beginning Friday night.

Expos 3, Cubs 1

The Cubs showed signs of fatigue after arriving in Montreal at 2:30 a.m. following a two-game sweep in Philadelphia.

Montreal's David Palmer pitched six scoreless innings of three-hit relief after taking over for starter Dan Schatzeder, who left after one inning with an inflamed left elbow.

Palmer, 6-3, who had been on the 15-day disabled list, was making his first appearance since July 27. Palmer also singled home a run as the Expos scored twice in the fourth inning to take a 3-0 lead.

Gary Carter's RBI single in the first gave him 99 runs batted in this season.

"Everyone was a little drained from getting in late last night," said losing pitcher Steve Trout, 12-6, after the Cubs' four-game winning streak had ended. "I don't think we had the intensity tonight. I know I didn't."

Cardinals 6, Phillies 5

In St. Louis, Willie McGee's fifth hit of the game was an RBI single that capped a four-run rally with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning.

McGee's 5-for-5 performance was his first five-hit game in the major leagues.

Philadelphia starter Jerry Koozman took a 5-2 lead into the ninth, but left after allowing his eighth hit, a leadoff single by Terry Pendleton. Reliever Larry Andersen got Lonnie Smith to bounce into a fielder's choice, but Smith then stole second.

Smith took third on a groundout, and after Steve Braun walked, Al Holland replaced Andersen. Bill Lyons, an .080 hitter, singled home Smith and Darrell Porter's single loaded the bases.

Astros 4, Giants 1

Winner Nolan Ryan leapfrogged ahead of Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the all-time major-league strikeout lead by fanning eight against San Francisco.

Ryan, 12-9, allowed six hits in eight innings while raising his career strikeout total to 3,862, five more than Carlton. It was the third time this season that Ryan had regained the lead.

Dodgers 4, Braves 3

Dale Murphy, a Gold Glove center fielder for Atlanta, made a rare mistake that enabled Los Angeles to win in the eighth inning.

Pedro Guerrero led off with single to center and when he rounded first base, Murphy threw behind him. But the ball went into the dugout, allowing Guerrero to reach third. Greg Brock then singled home Guerrero for his third RBI of the night.

Franco Harris Signs Deal To Join Seattle Seahawks

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks received a perfunctory telephone call from Franco Harris' agent two weeks ago.

"At that time we had a healthy Curt Warner," Seahawks President Mike McCormack said. "So I told him we weren't interested. But I told him if something happens, I would give him a call. Well, something happened."

What happened was that Warner, who led Seattle to the American Football Conference title game last season, went down with a season-ending knee injury in the Seahawks' regular-season opener on Monday.

Harris, a 34-year-old unemployed running back, and the Seahawks, desperate for a replacement for Warner, got together on Wednesday. McCormack and Harris' agent, Pittsburgh lawyer Bob Beier, agreed to a one-year contract.

McCormack, also the National Football League club's general manager, said he expected to officially sign Harris today.

Harris, a key player in the Pittsburgh Steelers' glorious past, is only 363 yards shy of breaking Jim Brown's National Football League career rushing record of 12,312 yards.

"Franco didn't come cheap," McCormack said. "We don't like to even talk about money but Franco's salary was never a concern of ours."

No terms of Harris' contract were announced but there was speculation it was in the $500,000-$600,000 range, including bonuses and incentives.

Wednesday's announcement was made at a hastily called news conference at the Seahawks' offices in Kirkland, after Harris flew into Seattle with Beier.

The Seattle sports media were on hand to greet the 6-foot-2, 225-pound former Penn State standout.

"This was the worst-kept secret in football," McCormack said in making the announcement.

"We're just very happy to have Franco here as part of our football team," said Seattle head Coach Chuck Knox. "I've been a big admirer of his for a lot of years. I've watched what he's done to our football teams (when Knox coached the Los Angeles Rams, Buffalo Bills and the Seahawks).

"I know he's going to come in here and give us a lift, not only on the field but off the field."

"I hope I look good in blue," a smiling Harris said. "I'm real excited about being here. I like the enthusiasm and attitude here."

Asked whether he would be able to play Sunday against the San Diego Chargers in Seattle's second game of the season, Harris replied: "Hopefully, I feel good. I feel in good shape and ready to go."

Harris, a first-round draft choice in 1972, played all 12 of his NFL seasons in Pittsburgh, where he amassed 11,950 yards rushing and 92 touchdowns on 2,881 carries in 165 games. He played on four Super Bowl championship teams — in the 1979, 1978, 1975 and 1974 seasons.

But Harris, caught in a contract squabble with the Steelers, was released by Pittsburgh on Aug. 20. None of the NFL's 27 other clubs picked him up on waivers.

There were apparently no hard feelings from Art Rooney Sr., the Steelers' owner. "I'm just happy it's over," he said.

Daring Bandit Races His Loot

ASHEVILLE (AP) — When Tracy Trent decided to watch the races at Asheville Speedway, he had no idea his own car would race without him.

The green flag dropped to start the 100-lap Poor Man's Division race Saturday and the engines of a dozen modified stock cars roared to life.

That's when Trent noticed that one of the cars in the race, a 1968 Oldsmobile, looked familiar. But instead of having "Tracy Trent" painted on the door, another name was there. Also, the car had been repainted, and a new roll-bar seat had been installed.

When the race ended, Trent told Asheville police officers at the scene, "That looks like my race car."

Officers Porter Fowler and Walt Robertson found the car, which had been damaged, in a pit. Whoever drove it in the race had fled, and no charges had been filed as of today.

Trent filed a stolen-car report with police Sunday.

"It takes guts to steal a race car," said Fowler.

Rose Hosts Cards...

(5-11, 165, Sr.) is challenging him.

Brian Walsh (5-10, 205, Jr.) will be at the center position. John Whichard (5-11, 215, Sr.) is the backup, but still hasn't caught up after returning to practice late.

Steve Wall (6-0, 225, Sr.) has been one of the surprises on the team and has nailed down a guard spot, while Churchill Thomas (5-11, 200, Sr.) has the other. Bill Zadeits (6-0, 185, Sr.) will also see some action here.

Brian Bridges (6-3, 235, Sr.) has been doing a good job at one of the tackle spots, while William Ward (5-11, 195, Sr.) will be at the other position, challenged by another late starter, Evan Hause (6-2, 225, Sr.).

"The offense has been hot and cold," Williams said. "At times they move the ball and move it well but at other times they sputter. Jacksonville has a good defense and I'm not sure how many points we'll be able to score against them. We're going to have to mix it up and I don't see us being one sided with either the run or the pass. We're going to have to pass to open up the running game and we've got to be able to run to keep the passing game alive."

On defense, the Rampants will run out of a 4-4 lineup.

Sterling Edwards (5-9, 257, Jr.) has made a big improvement at guard, Williams notes, while Todd Morris (5-10, 205, Jr.) played last year and did a good job. Mike Jones (5-9, 180, Jr.) also is expected to see a lot of action.

At the defensive tackle positions, Atkinson and Zadeits will start with Thomas in a reserve role.

And if there is an area that Williams is unhappy with, it is the linebacker positions. "We've got to get better here, and I think we can," he said. "But the people playing here, for the most part, haven't done the job I expect of them."

One of the exceptions is Cobb, but Williams hates to depend on him on defense. Darryl Perkins (6-0, 190, Jr.) and Ward are the most likely starters.

Hill and Wayland Moore (5-9, 165, Jr.) are expected to start at the defensive ends, with Matthews and Joe Hallow (5-9, 160, Sr.) in the backup roles.

"We have five people who will play a lot in the secondary, and again, they've learned both the corner and safety roles and can be interchanged," Williams said. They include Brewington, Tyrone and Dwight Smith, Walker and Jones. Young could also work into this group.

In the kicking game, Bridges has been doing a good job with the kickoffs and points after touchdown, while Emory is likely to handle the punting. The latter pleases Williams since he likes to have a quarterback kicking. "That opens other options to us, also," he noted.

While the contest Friday night is the season opener for Rose, Jacksonville opened last week, defeating cross-county rival White Oak, 14-8. In that game, the Cards rushed for over 300 yards. Glen McFadden led the way with 139 yards, 130 of those in the second half, while Marvin Hampton added 119, 110 of those in the first half.

Williams said that there are good things and bad things about each situation. "We've had a chance to see them, although we had a pretty good idea of what they were going to do, and they haven't seen us. So I guess it's about 50-50 as to who has the advantage."

How far have the Rampants come since August 1st? Williams will get the answer in a little over 24 hours.

Lynn Powers Angels Into Contention In The West

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

While the Minnesota Twins and Kansas City Royals have been shooting it out for the lead in the American League West, Fred Lynn has been pulling the trigger for the California Angels.

Shooting mostly blanks, the Angels were trailing the Twins by five games on Aug. 28. But the steady hitting of Lynn, who had been carrying the club through some tough times, became contagious.

Today, the Angels, who have scored 50 runs in winning six of their last eight games, trail the division's co-leaders by just a half-game. And by no strange coincidence, Lynn has driven in at least one run in all eight games.

"Right now, I'm just worrying about getting base hits, and if runners are out there, trying to score them and trying to help us win the pennant," the 32-year-old Lynn said after going 4-for-4 and equalling a club record for RBIs in consecutive games in an 11-4 rout Wednesday night over Cleveland.

"I figure if I don't get them this at-bat, I'll get them the next at-bat," said Lynn, who has driven in 35 runs in his last 36 games. "The guys are getting on base in front of me and hitting well behind me. If you can't relax in that atmosphere, you never will."

Elsewhere in the AL, it was: Kansas City 4, Minnesota 1; Detroit 1, Baltimore 0; New York 4, Toronto 3 in 10 innings; Milwaukee 7, Boston 5; Oakland 5, Chicago 4; and Seattle 6, Texas 5 in 10 innings.

Winning pitcher Bruce Kison, 4-3, yielded 10 hits and four runs while striking out five and walking five in seven innings as the Angels evened their record at 69-69.

Lynn doubled home Juan Beniquez, who had been hit by a Steve Farr pitch, in the sixth, giving California a 9-2 lead. Former Angels

Lee Stanton and Bobby Bonds also had RBI streaks of eight games.

Royals 4, Twins 1
Frank White's two-out, two-run double off Ron Davis in the eighth inning gave Kansas City a 2-1 edge in the showdown series and left the Royals and Twins tied with 70-69 records.

Davis relieved Mike Smithson, 13-12, after Pat Sheridan blooped a one-out double. With two out, Jorge Orta was intentionally walked, and both scored on White's hit.

Winner Charlie Leibrandt, 9-6, scattered eight hits through eight innings. Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth for his 38th save.

"I don't ever remember being associated with a team slump like we're going through," said Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner, whose Twins have lost seven of their last eight games. "We got 10 hits, but none when it counted and no extra-base hits to speak of."

"I'm not sure if it's the lack of hits that bothers me more, or the lack of extra-base hits. Mike Smithson had thrown over 100 pitches and I thought it was a good time to bring Ron Davis in."

Tigers 1, Orioles 0
Juan Berenguer and Willie Hernandez combined to blank Baltimore on three hits, and Detroit scored its only run on a first-inning error by Oriole shortstop Cal Ripken.

Berenguer, 8-9, gave up just two hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out seven, walked three and allowed only one runner as far as second base. Hernandez finished up to collect his 28th save. Mike Flanagan, 11-12, went the distance for the Orioles, allowing just six hits, striking out four and walking one.

Alan Trammell started the Tiger first with a double, went to third on Barabro Garbey's infield hit and scored when Ripken threw wildly to first base.

Mariners 6, Rangers 5
A 10th-inning leadoff triple by Phil Bradley and a sacrifice fly by Alvin Davis lifted Seattle over Texas.

Paul Mirabella, 2-5, pitched 4 1-3 perfect innings for the victory, striking out three, in relief of starter Salome Barojas. Dave Geisel came in to get the last out and pick up his second save after Pete O'Brien had a run-scoring single off Dave Beard in the last of the 10th.

Loser Dave Stewart, 5-13, gave up three runs on three hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 3

Don Baylor's two-out home run in the 10th inning and three innings of one-hit relief by Dave Righetti led New York over Toronto, which dropped to 8 1/2 games behind Detroit in the East.

Baylor smashed Roy Lee Jackson's 3-1 fastball over the wall in left for his 25th home run this season. Jackson fell to 7-7.

Righetti, 5-5, the third Yankee pitcher, struck out four and walked none in gaining the victory.

Brewers 7, Red Sox 5
Rookie outfielder Doug Loman, who joined the Brewers on Monday, stroked a bases-loaded double to key a five-run fifth inning as Milwaukee beat Boston.

Moose Haas, 8-10, gave up five runs on seven hits, walked three and struck out seven before leaving with one out and bases loaded in the seventh. Ray Searge came on to earn his second save.

Boston's Jim Rice had three hits, including a bases-loaded triple, and four RBIs.

A's 5, White Sox 4
Tony Phillips belted a tie-breaking homer in the ninth inning off Richard Dotson to give Oakland its victory over Chicago.

Phillips slammed a 1-0 pitch from Dotson, 13-12, into the right-field seats for his third homer of the year. The A's scored their final run on Mike Heath's single, which scored Ripkey Henderson, who had tripled.

Rookie Daryl Boston had three hits for the White Sox and threw out a runner at home plate.

Mariners 6, Rangers 5
A 10th-inning leadoff triple by Phil Bradley and a sacrifice fly by Alvin Davis lifted Seattle over Texas.

Paul Mirabella, 2-5, pitched 4 1-3 perfect innings for the victory, striking out three, in relief of starter Salome Barojas. Dave Geisel came in to get the last out and pick up his second save after Pete O'Brien had a run-scoring single off Dave Beard in the last of the 10th.

Loser Dave Stewart, 5-13, gave up three runs on three hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Los Angeles (AP) — Pat Riley, the coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, the losing finalists in the NBA championship series this year, says he has grown since taking over as Laker coach.

"I have always given a lot to my team I was associated with," Riley said, "sacrificing when necessary and always with the feeling that I did a good job. But after a while you feel you should do more. I've grown in this job."

Reed Will Wait For Judgement

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Saying a person is innocent until proven guilty, North Carolina State football coach Tom Reed said he would take no disciplinary action against his star freshman quarterback at this time.

Percy Moorman, 18, was arrested Monday and charged with first-degree burglary and second-degree rape stemming from an incident at Sullivan Dormitory on the N.C. State campus early Saturday morning.

"Percy at this point in time has not broken any university regulations that I know of, nor did he break any guidelines we had set up in writing prior to the season," Reed said. "With that in mind, I hope I'm smart enough to know I am stupid, that I don't have all the answers. I then rely on what has been proven in our system ... that is, you're innocent until proven guilty."

Reed spoke to the Raleigh Sports Club prior to Saturday's season opener against Ohio University. Although he didn't discuss Moorman's situation with the club, later he told reporters that he "will not pre-empt the judicial process."

Moorman had been in jail since Monday morning, and on Tuesday a Wake County District Court judge reduced his bond by half to $5,000. Moorman was then released.

Moorman, who played at George Washington High School in Danville, Va., was named to Parade Magazine's all-America team and was chosen to USA Today's second team of prep stars.

Reed said he didn't know if the incident had any effect on his team and its preparation.

"Reality is as you perceive it," he said. "We're going on the presumption that we're not smart enough to understand what took place. We're going on as if everything was normal. There's not going to be much discussion of it at all."

In playing the Bobcats, the Wolfpack is preparing for a team that took a 38-0 whipping from West Virginia last weekend, but gained 250 yards total offense in the second half.

"They were 13 for 18 passing in the second half, also," Reed noted.

"Am I Shot?"

These were the words of President William McKinley as he collapsed from a bullet wound from the gun of assassin Leon Czolgosz, an anarchist who had confessed an urge to kill "a great ruler." The assassination took place on this date in 1901, at a reception in Buffalo, New York, but the President didn't die until September 14. McKinley's wife, Ida, was so shocked by his death that she never returned to the White House and did not attend his funeral.

Apartment Fire Causes Injuries

James Clyde White, 60, of 1107 Forbes St., was injured in a fire in his apartment early Wednesday night. Fire-Rescue Department Chief Jenness Allen reported today.

Allen, who said the fire was reported at 7:59 p.m., said White was found lying on the floor in front of his burning couch by firefighters when they entered the smoke-filled room.

Allen said White suffered second and third degree burns to the upper part of his body and was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Hospital officials said this morning that White was in critical condition.

According to Allen, White apparently went to sleep on the couch while smoking and dropped the cigarette, which started the blaze.

Outlook Better For Farmer-Owned Co-Ops

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Tough austerity policies by many of the nation's farmer-owned cooperatives have been effective in moving them financially into the black, says the Agriculture Department.
Despite a decline in total business, co-op profits rebounded sharply in 1983 after dropping in 1982 for the first time in six years.
Overall, "net margins" or profits rose 24.2 percent in 1983 to $1.06 billion from $854 million in 1982.

However, the margins still trailed the 1981 mark of $1.4 billion.
Randall E. Torgerson, administrator of the department's Agricultural Cooperative Service, said Wednesday in a report that combined sales of all farm cooperatives totaled about $66.7 billion in 1983, down from $69.2 billion in 1982 and a record $71.5 billion in 1981.
Torgerson attributed rising profits to improved management, cost-saving initiatives and lower interest rates.
The decline in net margins in 1982 was the first since 1976 and only the second downturn in nearly 30 years. The drop in sales was the first since 1954.

Total cooperative business volume includes marketing or the value of products sold, such as fertilizer, chemicals, fuels, feed and other supplies to members and patrons. It also includes earnings from related services such as trucking, storage, cotton ginning and grain drying.
Iowa, at $5.76 billion, accounted for the largest business volume in 1983, followed by California, $5.39 billion; Minnesota, $5.33 billion; Illinois, $4.46 billion, and Wisconsin, $4.02 billion. The five states accounted for more than 37 percent of total co-op business.

Other billion-dollar co-op states in 1983 included:
Arkansas, $1.21 billion; Florida, $1.5 billion; Georgia, $1.22 billion; Indiana, $1.91 billion; Kansas, $2.52 billion; Michigan, $1.79 billion; Missouri, $2.35 billion; Nebraska, $2.53 billion; New York, $2.27 billion; North Dakota, $1.92 billion; Ohio, $2.64 billion; Pennsylvania, $1.85 billion; South Dakota, $1.23 billion; Texas, $2.08 billion; and Washington, $1.51 billion.

The number of farm cooperatives continued to decline — to 5,985 last year from 6,125 in 1982 — because of mergers, consolidations, acquisitions and liquidations, the report said.
Membership dropped to 4.95 million from 5.1 million members in 1982. Many farmers belong to more than one co-op, the report noted. The average membership per association was 827 against 838 in 1982.
Total marketing by co-ops in 1983 was $49.3 billion, down from $51.4 billion in 1982 and $53.3 billion in 1981.
"Dairy product business volume replaced grain and soybean products as the leading commodity marketed, a significant change from previous years," the report said.
Dairy volume reached $16.8 billion, up 6.3 percent. Grain and soybean products declined 11.1 percent to $16.2 billion.
In 1983, crop production dropped dramatically because of the drought and the government's program to reduce acreage. As a result, farm co-ops had less to handle.
Farm supply totaled $16 billion, down from $16.4 billion in 1982. Although petroleum products continued to account for the largest part — $5.4 billion — there was a substantial switch as feed supplies moved ahead of fertilizer, $3.6 billion to $2.8 billion, respectively.

Assets of farm cooperatives were reported at $28.8 billion, a 1 percent increase from 1982. Total liabilities declined slightly to $17.3 billion from $17.3 billion, the report said.
Net worth, or member and patron equity, increased to $11.5 billion in 1983 from $11.2 billion in 1982.

Drug-Resistant Germs Are Traced

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock is promoting the spread of drug-resistant germs from animals to human beings, say researchers who today blamed the practice for infected beef that sickened 18 people and killed one of them.

The researchers, led by Dr. Scott D. Holmberg of the federal Centers for Disease Control, published their study in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.
Routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock should "be curtailed or eliminated," said a doctor who wrote an editorial accompanying the article.
"To my knowledge, this is the first time we've been able to actually demonstrate the complete sequence of events," Holmberg said, "starting with feeding animals additives and progressing through the distribution to people who became seriously ill."
To prevent disease and promote growth, farmers give their animals the same antibiotics that are used to treat human illness. Each year, more than 35 million pounds of them are produced in the United States; about half are fed to farm animals, especially calves, poultry and pigs.

Researchers say that the drugs kill a broad range of microbes in the animals' systems, leaving only those whose genes make them resistant to the drugs. But without competition from other germs, these microbes flourish and spread.
In the latest case, the bacteria grew in calves that were fed a form of the common human antibiotic, tetracycline. The germs were resistant to tetracycline as well as two forms of penicillin.
Eighteen people got salmonella in Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota and North Dakota. Many had eaten contaminated hamburger that was sold in stores in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.
Experts are also concerned about the overuse of antibiotics in people. Human drug use played a role in the salmonella outbreak.
Twelve of the 18 had been taking penicillin drugs for sore throats and other infections before they contracted the food poisoning. The researchers believe these people already had the salmonella bacteria in their bodies before they started taking the antibiotics.
The penicillin killed off competing germs, allowing the salmonella to proliferate and make the people ill.
"This study demonstrates that antimicrobial-resistant organisms of animal origin cause serious human illness and emphasizes the need for more prudent use of antimicrobials in both human beings and animals," the researchers said.
In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Stuart B. Levy of Tufts University School of Medicine noted that until now, there has been no clear link between routine farm use of antibiotics and human disease.
"This important missing link is now provided by the elegant detective work of Holmberg and colleagues," he wrote. "Although only one outbreak is described, the findings are compelling."

In an interview, Holmberg said he believes that the practice of adding antibiotics to animal feed should be "curtailed or eliminated." And doctors should re-examine their tendency to give penicillin automatically to adults with sore throats.

Experts have long suspected that adding antibiotics to animal feed would hasten the emergence of microbes that are immune to the powerful drugs. However, the new research is the first to show the step-by-step progression of these germs from farm animals to a dangerous outbreak of human disease.
Researchers traced a strain of drug-resistant salmonella bacteria from a cattle farm in South Dakota to food poisoning in 18 people in four Midwestern states last year. Eleven of the victims were hospitalized, and one died.

The researchers, led by Dr. Scott D. Holmberg of the federal Centers for Disease Control, published their study in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.
Routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock should "be curtailed or eliminated," said a doctor who wrote an editorial accompanying the article.
"To my knowledge, this is the first time we've been able to actually demonstrate the complete sequence of events," Holmberg said, "starting with feeding animals additives and progressing through the distribution to people who became seriously ill."
To prevent disease and promote growth, farmers give their animals the same antibiotics that are used to treat human illness. Each year, more than 35 million pounds of them are produced in the United States; about half are fed to farm animals, especially calves, poultry and pigs.

Researchers say that the drugs kill a broad range of microbes in the animals' systems, leaving only those whose genes make them resistant to the drugs. But without competition from other germs, these microbes flourish and spread.
In the latest case, the bacteria grew in calves that were fed a form of the common human antibiotic, tetracycline. The germs were resistant to tetracycline as well as two forms of penicillin.
Eighteen people got salmonella in Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota and North Dakota. Many had eaten contaminated hamburger that was sold in stores in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.
Experts are also concerned about the overuse of antibiotics in people. Human drug use played a role in the salmonella outbreak.
Twelve of the 18 had been taking penicillin drugs for sore throats and other infections before they contracted the food poisoning. The researchers believe these people already had the salmonella bacteria in their bodies before they started taking the antibiotics.
The penicillin killed off competing germs, allowing the salmonella to proliferate and make the people ill.
"This study demonstrates that antimicrobial-resistant organisms of animal origin cause serious human illness and emphasizes the need for more prudent use of antimicrobials in both human beings and animals," the researchers said.
In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Stuart B. Levy of Tufts University School of Medicine noted that until now, there has been no clear link between routine farm use of antibiotics and human disease.
"This important missing link is now provided by the elegant detective work of Holmberg and colleagues," he wrote. "Although only one outbreak is described, the findings are compelling."

In an interview, Holmberg said he believes that the practice of adding antibiotics to animal feed should be "curtailed or eliminated." And doctors should re-examine their tendency to give penicillin automatically to adults with sore throats.

New Diet Could Help Stop Kidney Disease

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The need for dialysis or transplants may be "substantially reduced" by a new low-protein, mainly vegetarian diet that appears to stop the usually relentless kidney disease, researchers reported today.
Loss of kidney function has been halted for an average of two years in seven of 17 patients placed on the diet so far and was slowed in three others. Without the diet, doctors believe, all of them would have required dialysis by now.
It slows down the ongoing loss of kidney function that seems to be characteristic of kidney disease, regardless of the kind of kidney disease that the patient started with," said Dr. William E. Mitch of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

The diet was tested on patients at Brigham and Women's, Beth Israel Hospital and Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. They suffered from a variety of diseases that affect the kidneys, including diabetes, high blood pressure and chronic glomerulonephritis.
Identical diets are not available for routine use by kidney patients because keto acid supplements are not sold in the United States. They are being considered by the Food and Drug Administration for use outside limited experiments. The National Institutes of Health is also planning a major study of the diets with hundreds of patients nationwide.
Boston doctors began using the diets a decade ago in an attempt to relieve the symptoms of kidney disease.
"Originally, we designed the therapy simply to decrease the amount of waste products accumulating in the body, because that is what gives rise to the symptoms of kidney disease," Mitch said in an interview. "The waste products, in turn, are all derived from the protein that people eat."
Later, they noticed that the diet slows or stops the progression of the disease, but no one knows why this happens.
The doctors kept track of the advance of the patients' disease by measuring levels of a waste product called creatinine in their blood. They found that the therapy worked best when their creatinine levels were below eight milligrams per deciliter. At this point, they have lost about 85 percent of their kidney function.

Researchers traced a strain of drug-resistant salmonella bacteria from a cattle farm in South Dakota to food poisoning in 18 people in four Midwestern states last year. Eleven of the victims were hospitalized, and one died.

The researchers, led by Dr. Scott D. Holmberg of the federal Centers for Disease Control, published their study in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.
Routine feeding of antibiotics to livestock should "be curtailed or eliminated," said a doctor who wrote an editorial accompanying the article.

down from $16.4 billion in 1982. Although petroleum products continued to account for the largest part — $5.4 billion — there was a substantial switch as feed supplies moved ahead of fertilizer, $3.6 billion to $2.8 billion, respectively.
Assets of farm cooperatives were reported at $28.8 billion, a 1 percent increase from 1982. Total liabilities declined slightly to $17.3 billion from $17.3 billion, the report said.
Net worth, or member and patron equity, increased to $11.5 billion in 1983 from $11.2 billion in 1982.

Experts have long suspected that adding antibiotics to animal feed would hasten the emergence of microbes that are immune to the powerful drugs. However, the new research is the first to show the step-by-step progression of these germs from farm animals to a dangerous outbreak of human disease.
Researchers traced a strain of drug-resistant salmonella bacteria from a cattle farm in South Dakota to food poisoning in 18 people in four Midwestern states last year. Eleven ordinarily, kidney disease progresses at a steady rate until all kidney function is lost. Then victims must undergo dialysis or have kidney transplants.

In a study of 17 people with this inexorable kidney loss, doctors slowed the disease in three of them and stopped it completely in seven others. The seven had relatively advanced disease, and no one knows how long they will escape dialysis.
"They seem to be absolutely stable," said Mitch. "I don't think I would venture to say that will be the case forever. I do believe that if we had gotten to these patients earlier, the chances of it lasting an even longer period of time would be greater."
At first, they found it difficult to stick to the diet, Mitch said, but "as the patients become adjusted to it over a period of months, they seem to have very little trouble with it."

Builder Dead
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — H.B. "Pat" Zachry, whose construction company spanned the globe building dams, roads, nuclear power plants and even temporary shelter for Middle East armies, died Wednesday of a stroke. He was 82.
B. Zachry Co. constructed part of the Alaskan pipeline, laid roads in Chile, erected dams in the United States and Canada and ventured into the Sinai to construct modular housing for peacekeeping troops.

Education Official Says Plan Can Be Adjusted After Tests

RALEIGH (AP) — Adjustments can be made in a career development plan for teachers after the pilot programs test the career ladder, the chairman of the state Board of Education said.

Chairman C.D. Spangler of Charlotte acknowledged that there are disagreements within the education community on parts of the plan.

But he reminded the board Wednesday that the Legislature has warned it will not support further increases in teacher pay until a career development program is being tested.

The board approved the five-step plan Wednesday despite concerns that it lacks incentive for educators to seek a master's degree.

"We are responding to what I sincerely believe the public wants," said C.D. Spangler, board chairman. "Should we fail to do it, it will still be forthcoming. ... The fact that it is not perfect is nothing to apologize for."

The General Assembly had ordered the board to adopt a career development plan by October for legislative consideration next year, establishment of pilot programs in 1985-86 and implementation in 1986-87.

The plan would allow a teacher with 31 years' experience to earn as much as $45,696 and give beginning teachers $18,790. The top salary now is $24,840 and the beginning salary is $15,680.

The career development plan calls for creation of five career steps — initial, provisional and career status I, II and III.

Teachers would spend at least two years in each of the first four steps before advancing to the final level. A master's degree also is required to reach the top step.

Each move to a higher level brings a 10 percent salary increase and requires assuming new responsibilities or demonstrating superior teaching abilities. Teachers could stay at the same level and still earn a 5 percent raise every two years based on performance evaluations.

The cost of implementing the plan is not known. It will cost an estimated $7 million, however, to test the program in 16 school systems.

Ken Jenkins of the Council of Practitioners in Education, which includes those who train teachers, told the board that he sees little incentive in the plan for teachers to seek advanced degrees.

"It (obtaining advanced degrees) is a way in which the education profession can continue to seek status and recognition," he said.

State Superintendent Craig Phillips said encouragement for teachers to continue their education "is built into the entire sequence of steps through the schedule."

Jenkins and Ralph Kimmel, who represents a group of principals, also questioned the use of peers from other school systems to evaluate teachers. In addition, Jenkins charged that the plan mixes questions of tenure and career development.

Spangler said the Legislature was adamant about the peer review system and he doubted there was room for change.

The board agreed to adopt the plan and send it, along with a list of concerns, to the Legislature.

The plan was drafted by teachers, school principals and superintendents. It says that teachers now are rewarded alike, based on their years of experience rather than their effectiveness.

"The N.C. Career Development Plan intends to attract the best candidates into teaching, develop and retain teachers in the profession for longer periods of time, reward excellence in instruction, as well as create career options," says the introduction to the plan.

In other action, the board approved the merger of the Fayetteville and Cumberland County school systems effective July 1, 1985, and agreed to seek changes in the state testing program.

The changes include moving the annual test from ninth grade to eighth grade, expanding the test to include new subjects and testing small groups of students on subjects as health education to gauge the strength of the program as opposed to the individual student's knowledge.

Annual tests now cover reading, math and language. They could be expanded to include science and other subjects.

Blaze Levels Warehouse

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A fire has destroyed a warehouse being used to store tires in downtown Fayetteville, the second blaze to strike a downtown building in less than five weeks.

Fayetteville Fire Department officials said the building was used by nearby Todd's Tire Service to store old tires. Todd's president, Ray Naylor, said he had several thousand old tires in the building.

Assistant Fire Chief James Strickland said 40 firefighters, using six engines, a ladder truck and a Snorkel lift battled the blaze Wednesday night. Strickland said he believed the blaze was contained within the warehouse and brought under control about 11:50 p.m.

No injuries were reported. Fayetteville Police Patrolman Nervis J. Dedeaux said he and his partner radioed for firefighters when they spotted flames coming from the building at 10:20 p.m.

"It was pretty good-sized. We could see the flames from up there," he said, pointing one block to the east.

The fire appeared to have started in the middle of the warehouse, but spread quickly.

The east wall of the building that collapsed, and window frames crumbled into the flames.

"When we arrived, it was already broken out on the roof," Strickland said. He said the east wall of the building crumbled to the ground a few minutes later.

At its peak, flames shot from the building more than 100 feet into the air, and thick black smoke belled even higher.

Public Works Commission crews cut power to several square blocks downtown, and police blocked traffic around the building.

Another major fire struck the downtown area about a month ago, gutting the former Belk-Hensdale building. Nearly 300 firefighters and rescue personnel responded, fighting for more than three hours before bringing the fire under control.

Although nearby businesses were threatened in that fire, only one vacant building was destroyed when part of a wall crashed through its roof.

The fire was believed caused by vagrants using the building.

The Belk-Hensdale fire led to discussion among Fayetteville officials about securing downtown buildings against vagrants who sometimes frequent old downtown buildings.

After the Belk fire, Assistant City Manager Roger Stancil met with fire, police and inspections officials to begin an intensive inspection of the properties in the downtown area ... identify what needs to be done (and) correct it ..."

Report Notes Fewer Bus Wrecks In State's Western Section

ASHEVILLE (AP) — School bus drivers in Western North Carolina were involved in fewer traffic accidents during the 1983-84 year than ones in other areas of the state, according to a safety report that suggests the state's overall bus accident rate may be declining.

"For some unknown reason ... during the past 10 years ... there have been fewer fatalities in Western North Carolina," said Mark Fountain with the state Division of Motor Vehicles school bus traffic safety section.

The division's year-end school bus traffic accident report gives no indication of why Western North Carolina bus drivers' records are better than drivers in other areas of the state.

"Perhaps the only generalization you can make is that there are more people in the Piedmont," Fountain said. "Generally, accidents go along with population density."

Charlotte-Mecklenburg County led the state in total number of bus traffic accidents with 175. Raleigh-Wake County followed with 152 incidents.

"Their accident rates per bus were much higher than ours," said James R. McCanless, who supervises 350 bus drivers for Buncombe County Schools. Buncombe County and Asheville City schools were involved in 23 accidents; the rest of Western North Carolina experienced 60.

While no accidents occurred in Clay, Graham, Macon and Yancey counties during the school year, these figures reflect the number of accidents that happened — or didn't happen — within each county, not necessarily the number of county buses involved in accidents.

Public and private buses in North Carolina were involved in 1,316 accidents during the 1983-84 school year. Fountain said that number is "fairly consistent" with year-end totals for the past 10 years, which he said indicates that the number of wrecks is decreasing.

"When you consider that the number of buses has increased from 11,181 in 1974 to 12,818 this year and ... that the number of miles the buses travel has increased by 25 percent, we feel in the long run the number of accidents is decreasing," Fountain said.

Injured in last year's accidents were 684 school children and bus drivers and 345 other people. Of the students and drivers, 27 were listed as being injured seriously.

The year's only fatality involving a school child occurred in Bladen County on Feb. 17, when 9-year-old Mark Christopher Dixon was hit while walking toward his bus in White Lake. Seven other people died in accidents involving school buses, Fountain said.

Nearly half the accidents occurred on city streets, which may cast Western North Carolina's many rural unpaved roads in a favorable new light because they were relatively mishap free.

Even though less than 1 percent of all accidents in the state occurred during snowy weather, that low figure merely reflects the readiness of school superintendents to call off classes during inclement weather, McCanless said.

In multiple-vehicle wrecks, charges were brought against bus drivers 310 times, while the other drivers were cited 345 times.

Bus drivers are fined if they are convicted of any charge in connection with a school bus accident or if they are convicted twice within 12 months of any violations involving their off-duty driving, Fountain said.

A conviction of driving while impaired brings immediate dismissal; there were three of those in the state during the year.

The biggest problem for bus drivers is other drivers, McCanless said. "They pass our buses when stopped and unloading kids ... on the average of once a day. Our drivers have to be very watchful."

The Campaign

By The Associated Press

U.S. Rep. James G. Martin, R-N.C., is taking his gubernatorial campaign to television, with extensive advertising in the next two weeks to boost his name recognition.

"We won't be off the air between now and the election," said R. Jack Hawke, Martin's campaign manager. "But we'll pull back a little after these two weeks and then go heavy again later on — sort of like the shape of an hourglass."

In the Raleigh-Durham and Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point areas, two advertising spots will be seen an average of six times a week by the average viewer, the Martin campaign said. The average viewer in Charlotte and in Asheville will see the ads about four times a week.

The Martin commercials began running Monday.

The Democratic opposition campaign of Attorney General Rufus Edmisten will keep an eye on the TV screen and on its polling data before gauging when to start advertising and how much to do, Edmisten campaign manager Richard Carlton said.

"We haven't made any firm decision on when to start ours," Carlton said. "We'll be polling soon to see how our lead is holding up. We've already done some production and will have some ads made by the end of the week. We'll come out with them when we think the time is right."

In the U.S. Senate campaign, more than 220 ministers have formed a committee in support of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and a conservative political action committee has planned an independent television advertising campaign on his behalf.

Formation of "Pastors for Helms" was announced Wednesday in a Greensboro news conference. The Rev. Steve Sells said the members represented nearly every county and every major denomination in North Carolina, although there are no Catholic priests or Jewish rabbis.

Sells said the pastors were concerned about what they called the inability of Helms' opponent, Gov. Jim Hunt, to take tough stands. The pastors support Helms because he has been a consistent supporter of traditional moral and family beliefs, Sells said.

"Sen. Helms believes, as do we, that unless our country returns to the values that made it so great we will lose this great heritage of ours," said Sells, a Baptist.

Sells cited Helms' positions in favor of "voluntary prayer in public schools," fighting "for the rights of Christian schools," and tougher pornography laws as examples of courage.

Sells also said Hunt supports "special privileges for homosexuals." Asked what he meant by special privileges, Sells said, "Jim Hunt and Walter Mondale have in the past gone on record as promoting a collective type of right for homosexuals to the point of making them a legitimate minority, that has nothing to do with personal rights."

Will Marshall, spokesman for Hunt, called Sells' statements "typical Helms misinformation."

"Gov. Hunt has always been in favor of voluntary school prayer," said Marshall. "The real difference is that Gov. Hunt believes in voluntary prayer and Helms believes in compulsory school prayer. Helms believes in forcing children to recite prayers written by government officials."

On the homosexual issue, Marshall said the Helms campaign is apparently continuing its "smear campaign."

Growing Number Of Elderly Means Tax Cost Will Increase

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientific advances are prolonging human life, but the impact on society could be disastrous unless officials plan ahead to deal with the growing number of elderly people, a private research group says.

While novelist Thomas Mann once wrote that a man's death is more his survivor's affair than his own, the Population Reference Bureau concluded that "the postponement of an individual's death is becoming a federal affair, and one whose implications we cannot ignore."

For example, the bureau said, if all the people who died prematurely from heart attacks in 1978 had lived out their full lives, it would have cost the federal government an extra $15 billion in benefits for the elderly.

In a report based on the work of seven researchers, the private population study group urged more research on postponing aging to improve life and health for the elderly, on accurately predicting increases in life expectancy and in developing programs that will more effectively deal with the needs of this growing segment of the population.

"Death and taxes are popularly viewed as humanly inescapable and, implicitly, complements of one another. They might better be viewed as alternatives: The postponement of death increases federal costs, requiring more taxes," the report stated.

Medical science has extended life expectancy from 70.2 years in 1965 to 74.5 in 1983, and could raise it to 80 years by the year 2000, the report said.

"While these remarkable advances mean we can all look forward to longer lives, their impact on society and the current system of public programs for the elderly could be disastrous," says the report, "Death and Taxes: The Public Policy Impact of Living Longer."

But "if we anticipate the timing and magnitude of these cost increases, we can meet them or minimize the economic burden," the researchers said.

While the report sought to encourage planning to meet the needs of the elderly and the high cost of prolonging life, it did not deal with the morality of prolonging life.

Debate on this issue was stirred earlier this year when Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm suggested the elderly have a "duty to die" and allow the next generation to build their lives.

Lamm said later his remarks had been misunderstood, that he meant to say the elderly have a "right to die" without machines that maintain life artificially. Lamm said he did not mean to indicate that anyone has a duty to die.

The population group said that while life expectancy has been increased by medical science, this does not mean life actually has been extended. It said the most time any person lives remains steady at about 100 years.

"Thus life expectancy — the average age individuals attain before death — has increased. But lifespan — the maximum number of years any person can reach — has remained virtually unchanged since recorded history. Medical achievements have simply allowed more people to approach the 'immutable' limit," the bureau said.

The study concludes that as the number of the elderly increases in the United States, their costs to society must be assessed and planned for, because programs for the elderly cost more than the taxes paid by this group.

The researchers calculated that it would cost the government a net increase of $15 billion if everyone who died prematurely of heart disease in 1978 had lived their full life span, depending on when each was born.

"An estimated $24.9 billion in future (federal and state) taxes was lost because of premature deaths from heart disease in 1978," the study said.

"Had the victims lived to their full life expectancy, however, they would have claimed $40 billion in (retirement and medical) benefits for the aged."

The researchers said their calculation might have overstated the federal burden because the medical treatment costs saved by elimination of diseases were not subtracted.

The study was based on research by Douglas Norwood and Barbara Boyle Torrey of the White House Office of Management and Budget, Thomas Espenshade of the Urban Institute, Eileen Crimmins of the University of Southern California, Leonard Hayflick of the University of Florida, Charles Nam of Florida State University and Lois Verbrugge of the University of Michigan.

Caribbean Nations Trying To Save Sea

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — The nations ringing the Caribbean — communist and capitalist, rich and poor — are quietly coming together to try to save its blue crystal waters from the sewage and chemicals that have spoiled other seas.

Environmentalists say a 16-nation anti-pollution treaty just ratified by the U.S. Senate is a first step toward protecting the Caribbean beaches, reefs and coves that draw tens of millions of vacationers every year. But obstacles remain.

On some islands, political leaders would rather build factories than sewage-treatment plants. And in the richest nation, the United States, the Reagan administration has balked at helping finance a common Caribbean environmental fund.

"For Caribbean governments, building housing gets votes. Protecting the environment doesn't," Jill Sheppard, executive director of the Caribbean Conservation Association, told a reporter. The association is a private environmental education group based on this eastern Caribbean island.

As for the U.S. attitude, "they prefer doing things bilaterally — direct U.S. aid to a single government or project. Their reasoning is that if it's done multilaterally, who knows where the money may end up?" the British-born Miss Sheppard said.

It might end up, for example, in Cuba or Nicaragua, U.S. adversaries and potential treaty beneficiaries. One of the multilateral trust fund's few current projects is an $80,000 pilot program to study and control pollution in Havana harbor.

Public and private U.S. aid is already at work in the Caribbean. In May, for example, the United States financed attendance by representatives of 15 Caribbean nations at an oil-spill preparedness exercise in Puerto Rico.

had only four spades and heart shortness, thought the danger in a major-suit lead was, at worst, remote. South's redouble was to reassure his partner about the quality of his hand — he had not come close to showing the extra values he possessed.

But remote is not a synonym for impossible. West knew which major to lead, and East ruffed the opening spade lead for a one-trick set.

If either North or South had chosen to believe the opponents, he could have pulled to seven no trump. Even though there are only 12 top tricks, declarer can claim the contract. When declarer runs his eight red-suit winners, West's whole hand counts out after he shows up with only one heart and no diamonds.

West must find seven discards on the red winners. He can part with five spades and one club, but the last red card squeezes him unmercifully. He must either sluff a spade and promote a third spade trick for declarer, or else part with a club and allow the table to score the fulfilling trick with the third club.

Woman 'Forgot' About Money

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A 77-year-old widow is $10,000 poorer after sending draperies to the cleaners with the money pinned to the material, but police say they have two suspects in the disappearance of the cash.

"I wish somebody would have warned me before. I just forgot about it," Carabelle Hoekstra of South Bend said Wednesday.

Mrs. Hoekstra said the money "was there about five years, and I just forgot it."

She took the draperies to a cleaners Aug. 27. Pinned to them was an envelope containing the cash and a certificate of deposit, she told police.

Spano Is Alan Alda of Television Cops

By CYNTHIA ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Spano came home this summer to rekindle some friendships, revive his theatrical talents and bite a few necks.

As Lt. Henry Goldblume on NBC's "Hill Street Blues," Spano — the police department's crisis intervention negotiator — oozes sensitivity. He's the Alan Alda of television cops.

But with "Hill Street" in summer hiatus, the 38-year-old San Francisco native made a nostalgic return to a bizarre production of "Dracula" that, oddly enough, led to his hiring on the Emmy Award-winning "Hill Street."

Spano revived a character he played a decade ago as a member of the Berkeley Repertory Theater — Chauncey DeVille, master of ceremonies and horror in "Welcome to Transylvania: A Musical."

The play-within-a-play presents the 19th-century tale of terror as vaudeville, complete with a three-piece orchestra.

Spano was appearing in the play in 1974 when the show had a run in Los Angeles. It was there that an acquaintance, working with executive producer Steven Bochco, introduced the two. Spano later was asked to do the pilot for something called "Hill Street Station."

"I love this play. It gives me a chance to do what I haven't been able to do over the past four years, which is theater," Spano said, slumping into a seat at the intimate Alcazar Theater during rehearsals. "It's fun to act in front of a camera, but there's not a sense of communal happening."

There's plenty happening in "Transylvania," a show that revolves around Spano as the narrator DeVille — whom the critics compared to Joel Grey in "Cabaret" — and as the blood-sucking ghoul.

It's easy to see the one similarity between Spano's Goldblume and DeVille — a predilection for bow ties.

Since the beginning, Spano has insisted that Goldblume have "more substance."

"I could easily have played more of a Jewish stereotype," he said. Instead, Goldblume grapples weekly with his own insecurities and a tangle of relationships from divorce to new love with the boss' ex-wife.

"He's a person trying to do his best in times when the situation is maybe more than he can handle," Spano said.

Spano gets tips for the show from reading ex-policeman Joseph Wambaugh's novels and clipping police stories from The New York Times, which he sometimes forwards to the show's writers.

"Cops love the show. They're really pleased with it, really proud," he said. Spano, a liberal "like everybody who went to Berkeley" in the '60s, says the show hasn't changed his ideas about the justice system, but his views on law enforcement have mellowed.

"I'm much more likely to see a cop as a person with a family, problems, likes and dislikes, than to assume it's someone with an antagonistic attitude," he said.

Since Goldblume's not a street cop, Spano has spent a great deal of time making sure the audience doesn't think Henry is a wimp.

"He provides a viable alternative to hipness," Spano said. "He's not the kind of character who gives in to the latest trends."

The highly acclaimed Thursday night show, almost canceled at first because of low ratings, is heading into its fifth season.

Spano confesses he's anxious at the start of each season, thinking it could be the last for "Hill Street." The show has a staunch following but he expects no decade-long run, mainly because the actors are signed to standard seven-year contracts "and it would cost them a whole lot more" to renegotiate for an extended run.

Anyway, "there's something to be said for leaving something at its peak, instead of seeing it die," he added. Spinoffs "are not for me," and besides, "I can't see doing much better television than 'Hill Street Blues.'"

What he could see doing is more stage and films, particularly working with producers who understand theater. Mike Nichols and John Huston are two he admires.

Spano wouldn't even mind yet another revival of "Welcome to Transylvania."

"This is one of those things you can grow old in," he said. "I could play Chauncey DeVille until I'm 50, only play him older and seedier."

ABC Wins Ratings Game; CBS Has Week's Top Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It wouldn't take sleuths A.J. and Rick long to discover that although CBS' "Simon & Simon" was the top show last week, ABC claimed another first in the Nielsen ratings.

The brotherly detectives were on top for the week ended Sept. 2. Although ABC's highest-rated show — a rerun of the movie "Coma" — was only third, ABC was first overall for the sixth straight week.

It was ABC's 12th victory in the weekly ratings since the end of the regular season in April. ABC also tied for first once. ABC's current has continued since the opening of the Summer Olympics.

ABC's summer series "Call to Glory," which has just been added to the network's fall schedule, failed to make the Top 10. It was in a three-way tie for 11th place with CBS's "Mike Hammer" and NBC's "Cheers." The series made its debut immediately after the Olympics and easily took first place.

ABC won the week with a network average of 12.4 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. NBC was second with 11.9 and CBS was third with 11.1. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 12.4 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The audience increased slightly from the previous week, during which prime time was dominated by the Republican convention.

This is the last week in which a ratings point will equal 838,000 homes. The Nielsen Co. says the number of television homes has increased and beginning next week a ratings point will equal 849,000 homes. This represents an increase of 1.1 million homes.

In second place for the week was the second part of NBC's first "V" miniseries. NBC will also rerun the second miniseries as a prelude to the weekly "V" series.

Here are the other shows in the Top 10: "The A-Team," NBC, fourth; "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, fifth; "Facts of Life," NBC, sixth; "Dynasty," ABC, seventh; the ABC movie "Velvet," eighth; and ABC's "20-20" and NBC's "Riptide," tied for ninth.

The lowest-rated show of the week was ABC's coverage of the "U.S.A. Amateur Golf Championship." The five bottom programs were: NBC's "Legmen," CBS' "Comedy Zone," ABC's "Ripley's Believe It or Not," NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA," and ABC's golf coverage.

CBS was first again among the evening news shows. ABC was second and NBC was third. The ratings: CBS 10.5, ABC 9.5, NBC 8.4.

Here are the week's 20 top shows:

1. "Simon & Simon," CBS, a rating of 18.7 or 15.6 million households.
2. Miniseries "V," Part II, NBC, 16.9 or 14.1 million.
3. Movie "Coma," ABC, 16.0 or 13.4 million.
4. "The A-Team," NBC, 15.9 or 13.3 million.
5. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 15.3 or 12.8 million.
6. "Facts of Life," NBC, 14.9 or 12.4 million.
7. "Dynasty," ABC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
8. Movie "Velvet," ABC, 14.4 or 12.06 million.
9. "20-20," ABC, 14.2 or 11.9 million.
9. Tie "Riptide," NBC, 14.2 or 11.9 million.
11. "Mike Hammer," CBS, 14.1 or 11.8 million.
11. Tie "Cheers," NBC, 14.1 or 11.8 million.
11. Tie "Call To Glory," ABC, 14.1 or 11.8 million.
14. "The Fall Guy," ABC, 14.0 or 11.7 million.
15. "The Love Boat," ABC, 13.8 or 11.5 million.
15. Tie "Family Ties," NBC, 13.8 or 11.5 million.
17. "Dallas," CBS, 13.6 or 11.3 million.
17. Tie "Hotel," 13.6 or 11.3 million.

Orchestra Hailed

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The New York Philharmonic Orchestra won enthusiastic reviews today after a sell-out concert here, part of a Southeast Asian tour made con-traversal when Malaysia asked that a Hebrew rhapsody be scratched from the program.

Conductor Zubin Mehta drew calls for an encore from a crowd of 3,000 people, who clapped for the orchestra's performance of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 5 in C-sharp Minor here Wednesday evening.

In the audience were diplomats and members of President Suharto's Cabinet.

The audience appeared moved when Mehta asked them to stand up for a moment of silence in respect to former Indonesian Vice President Adam Malik, who died Wednesday from cancer.

The orchestra will play a second concert here tonight before leaving for Singapore.

The Malaysian government stirred protests when it requested that the orchestra remove "Schelomo," a Hebrew rhapsody by Ernest Bloch, from the musical program.

Bear-Proof Food Boxes Installed

By LYNN HORSLEY
Associated Press Writer
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — When big game hunting season opens Monday, officials want to prevent unplanned encounters between bears and humans like the ones that have left four people mauled, one fatally, in Yellowstone National Park this year.

They are hoping the installation of bear-proof food storage boxes and suspension poles in national parks in northwestern Wyoming makes the food of hunters and hikers less accessible to the huge roaming carnivores.

"We know how volatile the situation has been this year," Stephen Mealey, supervisor for the Shoshone National Forest, said Wednesday. "It's predictable that the bear population will increase, and more bears mean more encounters."

About 70 steel boxes and more than 100 poles have been installed in the Shoshone National Forest, while 16 boxes and suspension poles should be in place in the Bridger-Teton National Forest by this weekend.

The forest service is providing the boxes and poles "to properly secure the things that man brings with him: food, game meat, horse feed," Mealey said. "We agreed last spring that the Shoshone Forest would take the lead in implementing this program on a trial basis."

Since then, the need for the program has been underscored by several confrontations in which bears got the better of humans.

A Swiss camper was mauled to death July 30 by a grizzly bear in Yellowstone National Park, and less than a week later a young boy was injured while sleeping in his tent. On Aug. 20, a female grizzly injured a ranger and her husband who were scouting an area for a hike.

In a turnabout, on Tuesday two hikers raiding bear food apparently provoked a grizzly to maul them in Glacier National Park in Montana. An unidentified man and woman were pulled from a tree by the bear that startled them as they picked huckleberries, a main food source for bears. Neither was injured critically.

Yellowstone officials are looking at ways to improve food storage and camping sites in areas roamed by bears and have been hanging poles in the backcountry to make food less accessible.

Fred Kingwill, supervisor for the Bridger-Teton forest, said the situation is especially critical during the hunting season. "People are armed and there is a higher chance for encounters," he said Wednesday. "The bears roam more widely, searching for food before they hibernate in winter."

The boxes and poles were put to the test, he said, by the 1,200-pound bear used on "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" TV show. The forest service rented the bear and rubbed the boxes with grease to entice the bear, but he could not penetrate the steel frames.

"The bear jumped all over them but couldn't get inside. He also tried to reach meat that was properly suspended," Kingwill said.

The 8-cubic-foot boxes are equipped with two chains, and the forest service anticipates installing about two in every campsite. Each of the suspension poles is a minimum of 16 feet from the ground and all are located at least 100 yards from sleeping areas.

The Bridger-Teton National Forest will hold a demonstration camp this weekend at Turpin Meadows, the popular trailhead to the Teton Wilderness, to alert hunters to the safety measures. It will also have patrols during the hunting season to educate the public and make sure regulations are obeyed, Kingwill said.

The forest service never before has provided such extensive bear-proof facilities or launched such an aggressive education program, he said.

"We want to help hunters and visitors to learn how to properly visit grizzly country. We need to try and take a more aggressive stance so we can co-exist and actively help the situation."

Stay Lifted

DETROIT (AP) — Lawyers for John De Lorean, who said they would be tied up by a new federal investigation into the former automaker, lost a plea to continue a postponement of bankruptcy proceedings against De Lorean.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Ray Reynolds on Wednesday lifted a stay he issued March 6 because De Lorean was about to be tied up in court by cocaine conspiracy charges. De Lorean, 59, was acquitted on all counts Aug. 16 after a four-month trial.

De Lorean's attorneys confirmed Wednesday that he faces a second investigation, by a federal grand jury here, over his handling of company funds. Attorney Howard Weitzman said that inquiry could conclude in four to six weeks.

Creditors of the failed De Lorean Motor Co. allege that De Lorean diverted more than $17 million from the company.

Don't Use Mail For Mangoes

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter what you may have read, don't mail a mango from Hawaii.
 Although the Postal Service recently suggested using the U.S. mail to get mangoes out of Honolulu in a hurry, the Agriculture Department says it's a bad idea and illegal to do so.
 The Postal Service advertisement, which appeared in the July issue of Reader's Digest, "could mislead the public" into illegally mailing mangoes from Hawaii to the U.S. mainland, the Agriculture Department said.

 Mangoes, as well as other fruit, could spread insect pests, including the devastating Mediterranean fruit fly, officials said.
