Jobless Rate Holds Firm

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment stood still at 7.5 percent in August as modest new hiring by business was offset by the departure of large numbers of young people from the work force, the government said today.

The overall civilian rate, which had leveled off after a significant 0.4 percentage point rise from June to July, remained at the level that existed when President Reagan took office in January 1981.

While the ranks of America's unemployed held steady at roughly 8.5 million, the Labor Department said, total employment fell by 425,000.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said the August figures "show a moderation in the pace of the labor market improvement that we have experienced for more than a year and a half."

She added, "Gains in payroll employment, as measured in the business survey, were small."

An alternate unemployment rate, which includes the 1.9 million-member U.S. armed forces contingent stationed in this country, also remained unchanged at 7.4 percent rate, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

As was the case in July, two separate measures of labor market activity were in apparent conflict.

The survey of some 60,000 randomly selected households showed that total employment fell in August by 425,000, from 105.4 million to roughly 105 million. A companion survey of business payrolls, not used in the computation of the unemployment rate, showed that employment increased by 160,000.

The shrinking of the work force by 425,000 evidently was the result of teenagers abandoning summer jobs in preparation for the new school year. When the figures were adjusted to reflect this seasonal variation, the overall civilian rate held steady. Without that adjustment, the jobless rate would have fallen to 7.3 percent.

In her prepared testimony, Ms. Norwood said that the week in which the August household survey occurred was "quite late this year." She added, "It is possible that more youth than usual had already left summertime jobs in anticipation of the return to school."

Within the various population groups, moreover, there were no significant gains in the various jobless rates. Unemployment among blacks dropped substantially, from 16.9 percent to 16 percent.

Several economists interviewed in advance of today's release of August labor force statistics said they did not believe the surprising surge in joblessness from June to July — from 7.1 to 7.5 percent — was a true reflection of conditions in the job market.

When Reagan was inaugurated in January 1981, roughly 7.8 million people were out of work. Since the depth of the recession in November 1982, nearly 6 million jobs have been created, both the business and household surveys have shown. But the rate is the same as when Reagan came into office because the number of people seeking jobs has increased substantially since the recovery commenced in early 1983.

Among the various groups, these were the changes in jobless rates from July to August:

- Adult men, 6.4 percent, down from 6.5 percent.
- Adult women, 7.1, up from 6.9.
- Teen-agers, 18.4, up from 18.3.
- Whites, 6.4, unchanged.
- Blacks, 16.0, down from 16.9.
- Hispanics, 10.7, up from 10.6.

Among the 10 largest industrial states, for which August unemployment rates are reported simultaneously with the nation's overall jobless rate, several showed improvement last month. The rates declined significantly in California, Florida, Michigan, New Jersey, New York and Texas. But joblessness rose in Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The Reagan administration has forecast that unemployment will be in the range of 6.7 to 6.8 percent in the fourth quarter, and several analysts said they felt it would fall to 7 percent or below.

Predicting the jobless rate "is like calling a lottery number," said Thomas Thomson, a vice president and economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco. "There's a lot of volatility in the labor force."

Ordered By FCC

City Passed On Cable Rate Hike

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

That new 40-cent charge on your cable television bill is the result of a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) mandate placing copyright fees on long-distance channels, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

The City Council, which sits as the local cable rate-making authority, was notified last Thursday by the local cable franchise that the FCC had passed on a 40-cent charge governing royalties for distant-imported stations. "This was a mandate of the FCC to all cable companies," Mrs. Meeks said. "The local rate making authority of this city did not apply in this case."

GCTV's letter to the city explaining the charge said two stations classified as distant-imported, WTBS in Atlanta and WTTG of Washington, D.C., are offered in this area.

"I talked to Greenville Cable TV representatives about the new charge and was advised that they are trying to appeal the FCC decision and are working to get legislation introduced that would provide relief from royalty tribunals for both cable companies and their customers."

Mrs. Meeks added that cable reps said they really had no choice but to pass on the charge. "They indicated that the decision to be made was either drop the two popular channels or pass the charges on to the customers," she said.

However, the amount of that charge should go down by Jan. 1, 1985, Mrs. Meeks said. "The 40-cent charge is retroactive to January first of this year...so the charge is probably higher than it would be in 1985, because they have to make up from January to August of 1984."

Florida Dad Is Executed

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Ernest John Dobbert Jr., convicted of killing two of his children and abusing two others, was executed today in the electric chair for the "heinous" torture and strangulation of his 9-year-old daughter.

He was pronounced dead at 10:09 a.m., eight minutes after he entered the death chamber.

"Do you have any final words before sentence is carried out?" prison Superintendent Richard Dugger asked before the switch was thrown.

Dobbert shook his head and said "No, no."

He winked and smiled at his former public defender and at a minister who had visited him the night before. Both were seated on the front row of the witness section.

Dobbert was dressed in dark blue trousers and a white short-sleeved shirt, with no shoes or belt. The clothing was given to him by prison officials specifically for his burial.

A chin strap was fitted, then a black mask like a welders mask was dropped over his face. The surge of 2,000 volts of electricity lasted just under 90 seconds. A wisp of white smoke rose from the electrode on his right ankle.

Outside the prison, about 10 to 15 supporters of the death penalty cheered when word came that the execution had been carried out. About 30 opponents sang "We Shall Overcome."

The U.S. Supreme Court, which had rejected three previous appeals from Dobbert, had refused to grant a stay, voting 6-3 against his latest appeal.

Dobbert was the 23rd person executed since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976 and the sixth put to death this year in Florida.

Dobbert reacted "very stoically" when told that a federal appeal court in Atlanta had refused Thursday to extend a 27-hour stay it granted Tuesday, said Corrections Department spokesman Vernon Bradford.

He spent his final evening with his attorney and ministers, his mother, Catherine Dobbert, two sisters and a daughter, Honore Vingleman. Bradford said.

He was awakened at 4:30 a.m. for breakfast and final preparations, but he refused to eat, turning down both a regular prison meal and any special last meal offered condemned inmates, the spokesman said.

Dobbert, who considers himself a born-again Christian, was convicted of second-degree murder of his 7-year-old son Ryder Scott Dobbert in 1972, child torture of an 11-year-old son and child abuse of a 5-year-old daughter. He was sentenced to death for killing his daughter Kelly.

The bodies of the murdered children were never found.

Trial Judge R. Hudson Olliff called the 1971 murder of Dobbert's daughter "the most cruel, atrocious and heinous crime I have ever personally known of — and is deserving of no sentence but death." Ignoring a jury's recommendation of life in prison, he sentenced Dobbert to death.

SERVICE FOR LATCHKEY KIDS

I have recently obtained information on a "PhoneFriend" service for latchkey children — those who have to let themselves in at home and stay there alone till their parents get off work. It is operated in State College, Pa., from 2:30 to 6 p.m. each Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on teacher workdays and snow days. Volunteers run it and donations finance it. A get-started kit can be obtained for $20 by writing PhoneFriend, Box 735, State College, Pa., 16801. I would really like to see something like this started in the Greenville area and hope some organizations or individuals will take it on as a worthwhile contribution to the children of our community. Genocide Bill Gains Support WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire says his 17-year battle for ratification of a treaty outlawing genocide will soon end in victory if President Reagan and the Senate's Republican leadership press for action.

"Whether the treaty gets that shot it deserves in these closing weeks will determine whether the administration deserves the credit for winning its ratification," the Wisconsin Democrat said Thursday in the 2,993rd Senate speech he has given in support of the treaty.

The administration announced its support for the 35-year-old treaty on Wednesday, but Proxmire said in an interview, "The big question is whether the leadership will schedule it" for a Senate vote.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said today he would "give very serious consideration to trying to find the time" to consider the measure in the few weeks remaining in the election-year session of Congress.

Baker said he planned to discuss the matter when Senate Republicans hold their weekly meeting Tuesday.

Proxmire, in an exchange with Baker on the Senate floor, said, "I doubt very much there will be very serious opposition on the floor" to the treaty. A few minutes later, he gave his 2,994th speech on the subject.

Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he did not know how much support there was among Democrats for the treaty.

"I think I would be for it," Byrd said. "I haven't thought about it in some time. I am very concerned about Afghanistan, the genocide we have seen occurring there."

Congress is scheduled to adjourn Oct. 5 and has an array of budgetary and other matters to act upon before then.

"Time is short," said Proxmire. "The agenda is already crowded. But with Reagan administration support the treaty deserves a shot."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile, announced that the committee will hold a hearing on the treaty Sept. 18 and vote the following day.

The committee is expected to approve the measure, but it could run into a filibuster on the floor from conservative forces led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Soviets Boot Military Chief

MOSCOW (AP) — In a surprise move, the Soviet Union has announced the removal of Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov from the posts of chief of the general staff and first deputy defense minister, and his replacement by his deputy.

The Tass announcement Thursday said Ogarkov had been "relieved ... in connection with a new appointment," but did not say what his new post would be. Experts in Moscow and Washington were surprised and puzzled by the changes.

Western experts had speculated that Ogarkov, 66, and considered a rising star, might eventually succeed Dmitri F. Ustinov, 75, as defense minister. But there has been no indication that Ustinov is ready to retire.

Ogarkov's successor, Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, 61, has for the past 10 years been a deputy and then first deputy chief of staff. Like Ogarkov, he is considered an expert in nuclear disarmament issues.

Ogarkov has been highly visible in the last year, conducting a rare news conference to present the Soviet version of the shooting down of the South Korean jetliner Sept. 1, 1983, and speaking for the Kremlin on the stalled negotiations with the United States on nuclear weapons.

Western diplomats who attended Ogarkov's news conferences were impressed with his handling of the issues and said Ogarkov was apparently a man on the rise.

In The Area

False Report

Henry Maryland Williams, 46, of 18 White's Trailer Park, was arrested late Thursday on charges of making a false report to Greenville police.

Officer W.C. Widener said Williams was charged after he reported a hit-and-run accident involving his son's parked van about 10:12 p.m.

Larceny Charge

Greenville police Thursday arrested Glenn C. Montague, 20, of Ringgold Towers on larceny charges in connection with the theft of a bicycle.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said Montague was taken into custody about 1:30 a.m. Sawyer said the bicycle, taken from Ringgold Towers, was recovered.

Refrigerator Taken

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Greenville police are investigating a break-in reported about 10:36 a.m. Thursday at 500 D-1 Kings Row.

Wyrick said a small refrigerator was taken from the apartment.

Drug Violation

Randall Craig Murphy, 24, of Deep Run, was arrested early today on a marijuana possession charge by Greenville police.

Officer P.W. Worthington said Murphy was charged with the drug violation after a vehicle he was driving was stopped at the intersection of Tenth Street and Cedar Lane about 2:20 a.m. and a small amount of marijuana was found in the car.

Worthington said Murphy was also charged with driving while impaired.

Field Day Planned

Land users in eastern North Carolina will have an opportunity to learn about and view techniques for conserving and managing coastal soil and water resources at the Soil and Water '84 Coastal Exposition and Field Day Thursday in Kenansville.

The exposition, sponsored by the N.C. Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts in conjunction with the N.C. chapter of Land Improvement Contractors of America, will meet from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. in Kenan Auditorium. Admission is free, including bus service to demonstration sites.

Interested exhibitors and participants should contact Mark Lynch, Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, 7225 Wrightsville Ave., Wilmington, N.C. 28403, or call 256-4161.

A public reading of selected collard poems will take place at about 1:15 p.m. Saturday in Ayden.

The reading will be sandwiched in between the cooking of collards and the collard eating contest.

Meeting Correction

The first meeting of the consolidation committee of the Pitt County and Greenville boards of education will be held at noon Tuesday, not Monday as Thursday's Daily Reflector incorrectly reported.

The committee will meet in the second floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building. Immediately following the meeting on Tuesday the Pitt County Board of Education will hold its monthly meeting in the third floor conference room of the office building.

Deadline Announced

The deadline for registration for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's out-of-town planning conference is Sept. 20, chamber officials have announced.

The conference will be held Oct. 26-28 in Columbia, S.C. The chamber's 1985 program of work will be discussed at the session and plans also include attending the East Carolina University-University of South Carolina football game. The theme for the conference is "Where Do We Go From Here?"

To register or for further information call the chamber at 752-4101.

Ribbon-Cutting

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies were held recently for Arielle's, a ladies' apparel shop located at 618 Pitt St., according to Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce officials.

Arielle's is owned and operated by Charetta Washington and is open from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Taking part in the ceremony were Greenville Mayor Janice Buck and state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr.

New VFW Chief Says Election Shows Respect For Viet Vets

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Billy Ray Cameron sees his election as the first Vietnam veteran to be commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the organization's 85-year history as a signal.

The Sanford resident says his selection is a signal that Vietnam veterans are beginning to get the respect so long overdue.

"In the past, many things about the way Vietnam veterans were treated were very negative," Cameron said. "I guess the big turnaround came in 1982. With the dedication of the (Vietnam Veterans) monument in Washington, finally, Americans said, 'Welcome Home.'"

Cameron, 40, was elected to the post during last week's VFW national convention in Chicago. He came to Greensboro Wednesday in advance of his three-day homecoming. The homecoming is held each year in the home state of the newly-elected VFW Commander, said Wade LaDue, public relations director for the national VFW.

"We're going to try and do some positive things for the Vietnam Vet," Cameron said, noting that 570,000 of the VFW's 2 million members are Vietnam veterans.

Cameron has known the pain of combat and the pain of rejection. He was twice wounded while serving

Tolmie To Help Run United Way Drive

Richard A. Tolmie, director of plant engineering at Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville, has been named the assistant chairman for Pitt County's 1984 United Way campaign. Tolmie also is the division chairman for Pitt County industries.

The 1984 United Way campaign began Thursday, with this year's goal set at $681,325, a 16 percent increase from last year's $585,080 goal. The Pitt County United Way supports nearly 30 health and human service agencies in Pitt County.

A United Way Allocations Committee member since 1979, Tolmie is also a member of the Pitt County

United Way Board of Directors.

Prior to joining Burroughs Wellcome, Tolmie held several engineering positions with Johnson & Johnson companies. He directed the reactor physics division at the U.S. Naval Nuclear Power School while a commissioned naval officer. During his seven years in the Navy, Tolmie also operated and maintained the reactor and mechanical systems aboard a nuclear submarine.

He graduated with a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. He and his wife Patti have been Greenville residents since 1979.

Collard Festival Calendar

AYDEN — Saturday is the big day in Ayden for the 10th annual Collard Festival as the week-long celebration climaxes with the parade, a collard cooking contest and the infamous collard eating contest.

Collard-eater Mort Hurst, who challenged longtime champion D.A. Rodgers in 1983 before he was disqualified, said he'll be back in 1984 and expects to beat Rodgers this year. Hurst, who prefers catsup with his collards, said he's been practicing, and feels confident that he won't lose his greens this year. The battle of the collard-eaters is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday on East Avenue.

Other Saturday activities include:
• Arts and crafts exhibits and judging at 10 a.m. at the Ayden Community Building, Second Street.
• Games booths open at 10 a.m.
• Opening ceremonies at 11 a.m.
• Collard Festival Parade at 11:30 a.m.

• Collard Cooking Contest at 1 p.m.
• Poem contest winners introduced at 1:30 p.m.
• Break dancing contest at 3 p.m.
• Gospel music at the Silver Nuggett Saloon at 8 p.m.
• Beach music concert by "North Tower" from 8-12 p.m.

Today's activities include game booths open at 5 p.m.; rides open at 6 p.m.; a concert by the band "Diamonds" from 8-12 p.m. on West Avenue; a disco from 10 p.m.-1 a.m. in the IGA parking lot, and a performance by the Ayden Alledandanders at the town hall parking lot at 7:15 p.m.

On Sunday the tennis, golf and softball tournaments will hold finals and rides will open at 1 p.m. Footraces will begin at 4 p.m. and will include a 1,500 meter race for ages 12 and under and open 3,000 and 5,000 meter race. The 5,000 meter is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

Family Life Council To Have Fall Meet At ECU

ECU News Bureau
 "Family and Community: in Partnership" is the theme of the annual fall meeting of the North Carolina Family Life Council scheduled for Sept. 21-22 at East Carolina University.
 Hosts and co-sponsors of the meeting are the Family Life Council of Pitt County and ECU. Sessions will be held in the Willis Building.

Dr. Dennis Bagarozzi of the ECU social work faculty will deliver the meeting's keynote address at 10 a.m. Sept. 21. Following will be lunch, screening of a film and two afternoon sessions.

The first afternoon session will feature a panel discussion "Family, Industry, Religion, Education and Government in Partnership," with speakers from each area — Frank Grooms, plant superintendent, Yale Materials Handling Corp., Greenville; Dr. Albert Meiburg, professor of pastoral theology at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest; Bernard Haselrig, director of federal programs for the Pitt County schools; and Hon. Louise Brennan, Mecklenburg County member of the N.C. House of Representatives.

The second afternoon session will include an address "Strengths of the Family" by Dr. Miriam B. Moore, professor emeritus and former dean of the ECU School of Home Economics.

On Friday evening participants will attend the council's annual Sperry Award banquet featuring a presentation "Family Harmony: The Suzuki Method" by Greenville violin teacher Joanne Bath. Members of the Suzuki violinists of eastern North Carolina will perform.

Saturday sessions included a major address "Family, Medicine and Community: the Family Physician" by Dr. Janice Daugherty of the ECU School of Medicine's Department of Medicine's Department of Family Practice and a panel discussion "Family and Community Health Services in Partnership."

Panelists are Dorothy Williams of the ECU School of Nursing, Harry I. Cain, psychologist at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, and Pat Byrd, health educator for the Pitt County Health Department.

The meeting's closing address "Family and Community: A Personal Reflection and Challenge" will be given by Nancy Nobles of the Pitt Memorial Hospital department of therapeutic recreation.

Further information and schedules of the meeting are available from co-planners Dr. Jannis Shea and Dr. Mel Markowski of the ECU School of Home Economics.

The N.C. Family Life Council, Inc. is a professional organization with regional and national affiliations.

Couple Marries In Chapel Hill

The Catholic Newman Center in Chapel Hill was the setting Saturday for the marriage of Kathleen Ann Murphy and James Arthur Baum.

The wedding vows were exchanged during a nuptial mass conducted by the Rev. Al Dash of Raleigh and the Rev. Bob Lotz of Milwaukee, Wis.

During the mass a program of inspirational music was sung with musical accompaniment by Archie and Lisa Riley, Catherine Rogers of Athens, Ga., and Yvonne Acher of Chapel Hill.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Murphy of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Baum of Wilmington, Del.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore an ivory turn-of-the-century dress with a yoke of lace and pink satin ribbons. She wore a headpiece of white flowers and her bouquet was an old-fashioned style with bridal pink roses, stephanotis, statice and baby's breath.

Patti Murphy of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, was her honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Jean Murphy of Ridgefield, Conn., sister of the bride, Maureen Hanifer of Raleigh and Mary Catherine Hanifer of London, England. Each wore above the ankle Laura Ashley print dresses of pale pink accented with roses. Each carried pink gamellias and wore baby's breath in their hair.

Michael Baum of Falls Church, Va., was best man for his brother. Ushers were brothers of the bridegroom, Joseph and Christopher Baum of Wilmington, Del., and Peter Baum of Enid, Okla.

A reception followed and was given by the bride's parents.

Other pre-nuptial parties included a barbecue dinner following the rehearsal at the home of Elizabeth and Brian Murphy of Durham and a wedding breakfast at the Hotel

Europa, both given by the bridegroom's parents.

Following a wedding trip to the N.C. mountains the couple will live in Athens, Ga.

The bride, formerly on the nursing staff of Crawford-Long Hospital in Atlanta, will continue nursing at Athens General Hospital. She obtained her B.S. in nursing from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The bridegroom received his B.S. from the University of Notre Dame and doctorate in genetics from N.C. State University. He will continue his post-doctoral research at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Date Of Wedding Should Be Mutual Agreement

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I are getting married in a couple of months. She and her mother set the wedding date without even consulting me.

Don't you think this was rude of them? I have a large family and they all live 900 miles away. Most would not be able to attend on the date selected. Both my brothers are in college and my sister is a school teacher, so it's impossible for them to get away before the Thanksgiving holidays.

I feel that since my parents were asked to help pay for the wedding and agreed to go 50-50, it should be held when my family can make it. What do you think?

NOT CONSULTED

DEAR NOT: I think you should tell your girlfriend that the date she selected is unacceptable. Then insist on one that's mutually convenient.

P.S. You're lucky. Not every young man about to be married gets a preview of what his married life will be like.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning "Mother," who complained that her inconsiderate son takes the phone off the hook when he wants his privacy—bully for him!

I am the mother of two small children, and my days are hectic. One day I counted 17 telephone calls! Only five were for me. The others were wrong numbers, hang-ups and sales pitches.

I know that phone companies recommend telephones that can be "unplugged" whenever people don't wish to be disturbed. I don't like that idea because often burglars will telephone a home they have targeted for a robbery, and if the phone is unplugged, they hear it ringing and assume nobody is home. Easy prey.

So for my money, I'll take the phone off the hook whenever I choose. I get my privacy; pests and burglars get a busy signal; and I get my housework done. Don't use my name. My husband works for "Ma Bell."

OFF-THE-HOOKER

DEAR OFF: You're "right on" for your own convenience, but here's a message from the friendly folks who beseech you to reach out and touch someone:

DEAR ABBY: I work for the telephone company, so before you approve of taking the phone off the hook, please consider these facts: R.O.H.s (receivers off the hook) decrease service and increase everybody's phone bill.

Repairmen are often dispatched to locate the trouble when people phone to say their telephone must be out of order, it's been busy for hours.

Also, taking the phone off the hook ties up the equipment for others.

F.K.L.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, "Hungry in St. Paul," a pregnant woman, stated that she is eating Purina Dog Chow as a protein source because she can't afford other protein foods.

As a registered dietician, I suggest that this woman eat dried beans, powdered milk, eggs and peanut butter for protein. They are sure to taste better and are safer for human consumption than dog food.

Furthermore, "Hungry" should contact the WIC program (special supplement food program for Women, Infants and Children) through her local public health department.

Many people either do not know about this program, or they assume it's for welfare recipients only. Not true. A family of four can have a gross yearly income of up to $18,870 and still be eligible.

ATLOW LEVEL

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Although Americans seem to be more active and politically aware than citizens of other modern democracies, they're not following it up at the ballot box.

G. Bingham Powell Jr., a University of Rochester political scientist, found in a study that the average voter turnout in other democracies is 77 percent of the eligible population. But in the United States, turnout was 62 percent in the 1960s and 54 percent in the 1970s. That ranked Americans 20th out of 21 nations studied.

Powell says Americans' low level of voting participation contrasted sharply with their high levels of political interest.

It's better to have it and not need it, than to need it and not have it.

Small Farms Gain

Another Census Bureau report tells us in effect - if you're living on a small farm, don't trade it for urban life because it's the "in" thing.

It surprised us, too.

But the small farm count increased by more than 94,000 during the past four years as many Americans gravitated to more rural living. (A small farm is counted as anything under 50 acres; which still represents a lot of "yard work" to city boys who make that choice.)

An Agriculture Department analyst says the 17 percent increase in small farms since 1980 does not really mean an increase in the number of family farms, because as a general rule they are so small they are usually operated by people who earn most of their income from non-farm sources and are less a business than adoption of a new way of life.

Of course, there are agricultural uses for an under-50-acre farm, and the quoted analyst says he is sure many such rural estates are operated as an agricultural investment.

As traditionalists we have a fondness for the concept of the small family farm...and as realists we recognize large-scale "food factory" farms are a fact of life.

Even so, we see the unexpected resurgence of small farms as one more instance of the gradually changing face of America.

A Good Opening

Pitt Community College opened for the fall quarter Thursday with officials saying thing were going "great."

Enrollment figures were not available on opening day but PCC Dean of Students Edgar Boyd said he was estimated an enrollment of 2,750 compared to 2,700 of last fall.

Registration will continue through Monday night.

Pitt Community College is part of a state community college system which is among the best in the nation. The courses it offers fill a need for further education beyond high school, or provide college credits so that students may continue working toward degrees. It is good to see that enrollment is holding its own.

Strike Would Be Far Reaching

NEW YORK (AP) — An automotive industry strike would have consequences far beyond wages, benefits, job security, corporate profits and other factors involved in negotiations.

It could hurt the presidential aspirations of Democratic candidate Walter Mondale. It could put pressure on President Reagan to allow more car imports from Japan. It might defeat any hopes for protectionist legislation.

It would probably cause a decline in the nation's gross national product, and it would put instant pressure on automotive suppliers both domestic and foreign — including many minority businesses.

It would affect labor relations in many other industries. If prolonged, it would cause the layoff of non-union workers both in the affected company and others. Even management personnel could lose their jobs.

Conceivably, and if viewed in a limited perspective, a strike could bring some good news. It could help lower interest rates, for example, simply because business activity would decline and car and other types of loans would not be made.

Here are some of the possible consequences.

MONDALE — He accepted the endorsement of the United Auto Workers union. Business Week magazine points out that a strike at General Motors, "with an almost immediate impact on the delivery of cars and on jobs in related industries," would be deeply and widely resented.

REAGAN — Pressure might develop on the president and Congress to lift the so-called voluntary restraints on imports, thus allowing more Japanese vehicles to enter the domestic market at the very time competition is lessened.

ECONOMY — Motor vehicles represent 4.5 percent of the Federal Reserve's index of industrial production, but the impact on other related industries, and eventually on unrelated industries, magnifies this.

Says Merrill Lynch: "If a strike against GM were to begin on September 14 when the contract expires, third-quarter real gross national product growth would come in at about 3.7 percent at an annual rate by our estimate rather than roundly 5 percent in the absence of a strike."

In the event a GM strike should

Cooking In The OMB Kitchen

I received a call from a friend in the Office of Management and Budget who said he had been asked to cook up a new batch of deficits for the elections.

"Nobody's here so it's okay for you to come over."

I found him in the OMB's test kitchen where they try out every new recipe before packaging for the public.

"Here," he said, "Put these on to protect your eyes."

"What are they?" I asked.

"Rose-colored glasses. Everyone in the administration is required to wear them when cooking up government numbers."

"What's in the pot?" I asked him.

"Our new figures for the campaign. It looks like we're only going to have a $174 billion budget deficit instead of the $200 billion that we originally predicted."

"It smells fishy," I said.

"That's just because I put in tremendous portions of gross national product and added large tax revenues which we hadn't counted on this year. It tastes delicious."

He gave me a spoon and I tried it.

"It's not bad. But after all, you've only cooked this for the Reagan people. Will you be able to bring it in at $174 billion when you have to feed the whole country?"

"No question about it. For one thing we took out all the fat in government spending. With the economy really cooking along, interest rates ought to drop. The only thing that could spoil the recipe is if Congress keeps adding more ingredients than we need. If we can stick with what we've got we can reduce the deficits to a measly $139 billion by 1989."

"Have you added any new income taxes to the recipe for the next year?"

"Not at the moment. The president can't digest anything that has new income taxes in it. The last time we served him a deficit stew with taxes in it he spit it out and fired the chef."

"So you really think you can cook up a dish of deficits for $174 billion without adding any new taxes?"

"We can for the election, but we're keeping our options open for 1985. We might have to throw in a federal sales tax or a value added tax, but we're not going to announce it until after November."

"I still don't know how you created this so fast," I said.

"When you're cooking numbers you have to go on certain assumptions. For example, I figure that by adding optimism the real growth in the pot will increase by 4 percent each year until 1989. Inflation will simmer at around 4 percent and that means the government's borrowing rate will be reduced to 5.1 percent. That should make your mouth water."

"Mondale says those are unrealistic assumptions."

"What else would he say? He wants to be president. If he makes it, which we all doubt, he'll cook the figures just the way we have."

"He says you have secret recipe for deficits that you're not telling the American people about, and what you're cooking up now is some voodoo stew that even Reagan's economic advisers can't stomach."

"It's not worthy of comment," the OMB man said. He then sprinkled 100 large folders into the pot.

"What did you just add?" I asked.

"Defense contracts. That's what gives the deficit its rich taste."

Painting Is Not A Simple Job

RALEIGH — When I was a boy, my mother and I would play a little game. I'd say I wanted to be a something or other when I grew up and, depending on her feelings about that profession, she'd say either good or bad things about it.

One time I said I wanted to be a house painter and mom, uncharacteristically, said nothing. The following weekend, she put a roller in my hand and told me to convert our avocado living room to antique white. It took four coats and I've forever been cured of any desire to paint houses, inside or out, for a living.

Nonetheless, the need to paint occasionally has followed me into adult life. Over the past two weeks, I've painted the townhouse I just bought, putting something like antique white over the previous owner's indigestion gold and insomniac blue bedrooms.

There's a bit of painter in many of us. It is probably the home improvement which we do most often ourselves. Why, how hard can painting a room be? we ask. "I'll paint it myself and save all that money a pro would want." Two weeks after starting, my body feeling as sore as that first day of freshman football practice, I wish I'd spent the $300. I've got tendonitis of the neck from painting the ceiling and a pulled left leg muscle from slipping off the ladder.

I started by buying that fancy new gizmo that pumps paints from the can to the roller. Now maybe that works for other people. Friends told me it worked for them. But it didn't work for me. After three days of fiddling with it, I'd painted one closet and two ceilings and done them poorly. I'd begun to get frustrated.

So I cleaned up the hand rollers and started applying my one coat extra special expensive off-white paint that was on sale. "One coat," the salesman said. One coat left the royal blue bedroom looking like a royal blue bedroom on a cloudy day. Two coats and it's Carolina blue. Three coats and it's white. After one coat, you still couldn't walk into the gold room less than an hour after eating.

Now it's time for the trim. After all that white, I was ready for the excitement of this pretty green. Have you ever noticed that you love the color of your paint when you buy it but hate it by the time you've finished painting. White doesn't do that but this green, it's all over the place now and it keeps reminding me of three nights of painting trim.

There ought to be a medical term for trim neurosis. It starts with that fine line between the baseboards and the wall and trying to make sure that not a single wild hair of the trim brush puts green paint on your just rolled white walls. It's impossible. Then you have to decide what gets painted trim colors and what is wall color.

Does the outside of the door casing get white or green? It looks stupid white but it's a heckuva lot easier to leave it so. How about the windows? They're always white in other people's houses but they look dumb white when all the other woodwork is green. And where do you stop? The baseboards run into the dining room, the gold wallpaper looks stupid next to green woodwork.

So you make your choices but you know someone will come visit, like Gene Wang of UPI, and say, "O'Connor, you painted the door casings the wrong color." Or "How come you painted the windows white here and green there?"

The problem with painting is that you're never finished. As I sit here in my office — formerly the gold room — I can see all the spots I missed. Back to work.

Strength For Today

When word was brought to King Edward III of England that his son, Prince Edward, was in great danger at the Battle of Crecy, the king inquired, "Is my son killed?" "No sire, but he is in great danger."

"Then," said the king, "I will send no aid. Let the boy win his spurs; for I wish, if God so order it, that the honor of victory shall be his." From that time onward, the "Black Prince," as Prince Edward was called because of the color of his armour, became a name of renown throughout Europe.

Few people can let the kids take it. They must send help. They must ease them along. "I don't want my son to go through the sacrifice I endured in my youth." But, bless you, this is the thing which made you the successful person you are.

We never make life better for ourselves or for our loved ones by making it too easy. Have the courage to let youth endure those trials which will produce maturity.

CIA Having Recruiting Success

WASHINGTON — America is back, the president tells us. And no one is more delighted about that than the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA is experiencing one of the biggest recruiting booms in its history, thanks largely to its success on college campuses.

But the gung-ho attitude among the CIA's collegiate applicants may say more about academia's failure to shape active questioners out of students than it does about any groundswell of support to overthrow the Sandinistas.

Last year, the CIA received more than 200,000 resumes, a 100 percent increase since the mid-1970s. Though the agency won't acknowledge how many applicants it hires each year — "I'm sorry, that would be a breach of security," one CIA official told us — it actively seeks college graduates, especially those who speak unusual foreign tongues.

Of particular pride to the agency is the large number of resumes it has received from all sections of the country, even from colleges whose students once greeted CIA recruiters with tomatoes and picket lines. In fact, Columbia University, a one-time center of anti-war protests during the 1960s, now supplies the CIA with more recruits than any other college in New York state.

Even such once-liberal bastions as the University of Wisconsin at Madison have noted an increase in CIA prestige on their campuses. "Our science and engineering students used to schedule their interviews with the CIA on their own, off campus," said Pat Fessenden, assistant director of career placement at Wisconsin. "Now they line up with the humanities majors."

Adds Larry Curran, director of recruitment at the CIA: "A few years back our recruiters often had trouble filling their interview calendars at colleges. But nowadays students are waiting in line to make contact with our people."

Of course, the CIA's expanded advertising budget may have something to do with its increasing number of applicants. Its personnel department also speaks glowingly of starting agency salaries: $17,000 for college graduates and $25,000 for individuals with advanced degrees.

But other officials refer to a "new student" who is more pragmatic, career-oriented and less likely to differentiate between political ideals and a job. Indeed, a 1983 survey of college freshmen by the American Council on Education revealed that student interest in "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" reached an all-time low that year, while enthusiasm for "being well-off financially" reached an all-time high.

Even college placement directors admit that students applying for jobs at the CIA seem willing and eager to do anything. In the opinion of one placement officer at UCLA, "they are a good bunch of soldiers."

Of course, the danger is that many of these good soldiers know very little about the Vietnam War or the CIA's history of domestic spying.

Nor do they question much of what they're told to do. Colleges have done little to promote "critical thinking" in an analytic and systematic way, as a basic skill. Instead, they prefer to push an "information-processing model of education" that rewards students for how much data they can consume and then regurgitate at exam time.

As Albert Schweitzer said, "Thought is the strongest thing we have." That's why educators must invoke greater reluctance among college students to accept answers on blind faith. They ought to encourage students to explore alternative answers rather than settle on the first idea that pops into their minds.

We're not overwhelmed at the thought of staffing the nation's intelligence apparatus with a bunch of "I'll-do-anything" Eagle Scouts.

When students lose or never develop an ability to think critically, institutions like the Central Intelligence Agency are destined to repeat many of their old mistakes.

Mondale Says Social Security Under Attack

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
President Reagan is taking a day off from campaigning while Walter Mondale, after accusing the president of opening his arms to those who would "impose their own beliefs on other people," charges the administration is trying to emasculate Social Security.

Mondale is in Georgia today for meetings with supporters in Atlanta, including one-time campaign official Bert Lance, and for a speech to a college audience.

The Democratic presidential challenger is on what has become a weekly trip into the South, and as soon as his plane touched down Thursday night he accused Reagan of planning an assault on the Social Security system if re-elected.

He said Reagan promised in 1980 to protect the program, "and he broke that promise immediately after the election and tried to emasculate the program and cut benefits substantially, by merely 80 billions of dollars."

"I'm strongly for Social Security. They can't keep their hands off the program," Mondale said.

Reagan was planning a weekend at Camp David with a political trip Sunday afternoon to Doylestown, Pa., outside Philadelphia, for a Polish festival.

Both Reagan and Mondale spoke Thursday to the national convention of B'nai B'rith, the Jewish organization.

Mondale used the opportunity to again accuse the president of trying to inject religion into matters of state and politics, while Reagan addressed the Middle East and said his administration has created new hope for peace.

"When I spoke to you four years ago, peace was eluding the Middle East. It still does. But now we and the state of Israel have far greater cause for hope," he said.

"Let me assure you, we will never attempt to impose a solution on Israel," Reagan pledged.

The speech was the first Reagan has made in months about the Middle East, where his foreign policy suffered its worst setback with the loss of 264 U.S. servicemen in Lebanon. Also, his 1982 Middle East peace plan has been rejected by Israel, and no Arab state has embraced it.

Mondale criticized a whole list of Reagan supporters, from campaign chairman and Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt — for a letter to 45,000 ministers which described Reagan supporters as "leaders under God's authority" — to Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of the Moral Majority.

"I am alarmed by the rise of what a former Republican congressman calls 'moral McCarthyism,'" Mondale said. "A determined band is raising doubts about people's faith. They are reaching for government power to impose their own beliefs on other people."

"And the Reagan administration has opened its arms to them."

The religion-in-politics debate has stormed since the Republican National Convention last month, when evangelical Christians played such a visible role and Reagan told a Dallas prayer-breakfast meeting that "religion and politics are necessarily related."

Saying "an ambitious crowd with fire in its eyes" has taken control of the Republican Party, Mondale claimed Reagan was playing to that "extreme fringe."

"Religion, Mr. Reagan told a prayer breakfast in Dallas, needs defenders against those who care only for the interests of the state. His clear implication was that he welcomed such a role for himself," Mondale said.

"The Queen of England, where state religion is established, is called Defender of the Faith. But the president of the United States is the defender of the Constitution — which defends all faiths," he added.

Pot-Smoker Rejects Advice From Nancy

CANBY, Ore. (AP) — Earl Sturmer says he's going to keep smoking marijuana even though first lady Nancy Reagan told his teen-age daughter she should urge him to give up the habit.

"It's none of Nancy Reagan's business," Sturmer said in an interview after Mrs. Reagan offered the advice and some private words of encouragement to his daughter Sabra, 13.

During a visit by the first lady Thursday to an elementary school class on drug abuse prevention, Sabra told Mrs. Reagan that her father, who is divorced from her mother, smokes marijuana "all the time."

Mrs. Reagan later advised Sabra to "stand hard" and to tell her father to quit smoking marijuana "as soon as possible," the sixth-grade girl said.

But Sturmer, who owns an auto body repair shop, said he had no intention of giving up pot-smoking, which he contends is less harmful than drinking alcohol and should be legalized.

As for Mrs. Reagan, Sturmer said, "I don't care for her one bit in the first place, or any of the rest of the Reagans."

In an appearance at William Knight Elementary School, Mrs. Reagan listened as some of the sixth-graders told her about peer pressure to smoke marijuana or drink alcohol.

The first lady, who is active in programs to fight drug abuse among young people, also took part in a series of skits in which students pretended to be pressuring her to drink or take drugs.

During a later discussion with the students, Mrs. Reagan asked them whether their parents had given them moral support in keeping away from alcohol and drugs.

That's when Sabra told Mrs. Reagan that her father smokes pot.

"I could see that Mrs. Reagan was visibly moved by the girl's story," said Tony Crawford, a sixth-grade teacher who took part in the discussion. "It looked like she was almost moved to tears."

When Mrs. Reagan joined the students for a class picture after the group session, she turned to Sabra and spoke quietly with her.

New Radar Helping Pinpoint Hailstorms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of radar is being tested that may help weathermen detect the hailstorms that trample $700 million worth of American crops annually.

Studies of the radar — which reacts to the different ways rain and hail scatter electrical signals — are being conducted in Colorado, Science Magazine reports in its Sept. 14 edition.

Current radars are effective in locating storms and their precipitation, but cannot easily determine whether rain, hail or snow is actually falling to the ground.

But now the National Weather Service is developing plans for a new generation of radars to be used across the nation, and scientists hope this can include a better means to warning the public of just what type of storms are approaching.

Hail, infrequent in some parts of the country, is a continual summertime hazard over the Plains, especially in Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Ice crystals have been reported as large as grapefruit, and their battering cost American farmers as much as $700 million annually, according to calculations made in 1980.

Convicted Killer 'Solves' 15 Deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fifteen unsolved murders, many involving rape and one taking the life of a 4-year-old girl, were considered solved after convicted killer Henry Lee Lucas visited nearly three dozen crime scenes, California officials said.

During a two-week visit that began Aug. 19, Lucas was escorted by Texas authorities and California state and local law enforcement officials on a 4,000-mile trip to the scenes of 35 of 67 California murders in which Lucas is a suspect, mainly as a result of his own statements.

"Fifteen of those visits resulted in good confirmation of the crime and Lucas' role in the killing," state Attorney General John Van de Kamp told a news conference Thursday.

Because of time restrictions imposed by Texas authorities, Lucas was unable to visit the sites of the 32 remaining California murders. Van de Kamp said he did not know whether another tour could be arranged.

The attorney general said California authorities negotiated several months with Texas officials and Lucas to arrange the visit. As a result, California authorities agreed that Lucas would not be kept in the state but returned to Texas, and that there would be no charges filed against him during his visit.

Van de Kamp stressed that California reserved the right to file charges against Lucas after he left the state, but added that in view of the numerous cases pending against him in Texas and elsewhere, prosecution in California was not a primary motive for the tour.

"The main interest in California by law enforcement has been the clearance of previously unsolved murder cases," Van de Kamp said.

Van de Kamp added that during most of the tour, police officials did not even bother to read Lucas his rights because no prosecution was anticipated.

Murders were cleared from as far north as Eureka in Humboldt County to Sunrise Butte in Imperial County near the Mexican border. The victims, all but one of them female, ranged from a 4-year-old girl to an unidentified woman believed aged 40 to 50, but most were in their teens or 20s. Many were raped.

Van de Kamp said that authorities were not able to verify all of the murders Lucas claimed to have committed.

The California murders were committed during a cross-country killing spree that began in 1975 and ended in June 1983 when Lucas was arrested in Texas on a charge of possessing a firearm and subsequently began confessing to a string of murders.

Lucas was sentenced to death in Texas earlier this year for the Halloween 1979 slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker. He is also serving two life sentences and one 75-year sentence for three other Texas murders.

Lucas is charged with 19 more slayings in Texas, Maryland, Florida, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Inventory Success

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A gold handkerchief holder, brass buttons from the uniforms of Civil War Gen. Robert E. Lee, and scores of portraits are among the items discovered in a inventory at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill this past year.

Marshall Bullock found those items and about 4,000 others in a historic property identification and inventory process at UNC-CH — the first time such an inventory has been conducted at the university.

Bullock spent the past year searching practically every corner of the university for objects of historical significance. Items include 350 works of art, 2,000 scientific instruments, 200 pieces of furniture, 650 pieces of silver and 270 trophies.

Now that the objects have been identified, Bullock is in the process of transferring his paper files to a computer file.

When it's finished, the computer file will be available for public inspection. Individuals will be able to come to the university's property office, look at the list and ask to see items. The office then will help locate the item on campus.

Bullock listed the donors of items and the dates the items were given to the university, if available. He also researched the significance of items.

Creating a historic inventory of university property was the idea of William S. Powell, UNC-CH professor of history.

Powell noticed last year that an antique desk in one of the campus buildings had been moved. "I just wondered if anybody in authority knew where it was," Powell said.

When university officials were asked where the desk went, no one knew, he said.

"I thought that a lot of things on campus weren't being watched," Powell said. "A lot of buildings are open 24 hours, and things can disappear."

Powell then wrote a letter to Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III suggesting that a committee on historic properties be formed.

Fordham agreed and formed the Advisory Committee on Historic Properties. The committee hired Bullock to do the inventory.

Bullock has recommended that the committee search for a display or exhibit area and that the feasibility of building a university museum be studied.

Tobacco Firms Import 12.5 Million Pounds In 6 Weeks

By The Associated Press

Almost 12.5 million pounds of foreign flue-cured tobacco were imported into the United States in six weeks this summer, according to the first detailed government reports on leaf imports.

The report was issued Thursday, one day after Vice President George Bush signaled that the Reagan administration would not likely implement new emergency quotas on tobacco imports. Campaigning in Kentucky, Bush called instead Wednesday for voluntary cutbacks of tobacco imports by American tobacco companies.

Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts, said the new report showed tobacco imports were "significantly up."

But an import-export trade expert said the influx of foreign leaf was not unusual.

Hugh C. Kiger, executive director of the Leaf Exporters Association Inc. in Raleigh, also said "you can't attach much significance to it" because the report covered a brief period.

Rose said the report was the fruit of new legislation designed to give American tobacco farmers a truer picture of just how much leaf and what kinds of tobacco are being imported.

Among other things, Rose said the report showed that imports came in a cross section of grades and were not limited to lower-quality leaf.

The congressman released the first interim report of the inspection program by the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture that covered July 13-Aug. 31.

According to the report, 20.8 million pounds of tobacco were imported during the period, including 12.45 million pounds flue-cured and 8.25 million pounds of burley leaf.

Of the flue-cured imports, the report said 6.5 million pounds came from Brazil, 2.07 million pounds from Argentina and 1.9 million pounds from South Africa. The rest came from Canada, Poland and South Korea.

Marketing service officials said they could not compare the reported imports to last year's amounts because the inspection and grading program only started this year.

Also, the new import data covers all tobacco brought into the country, including some tobacco that companies later will export and not introduce to the U.S. market.

Last year, the USDA's Foreign Agriculture Service estimated that 129.5 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco were imported for domestic consumption, about double the 1982 level of flue-cured imports.

Kiger said the amount listed in the new report was consistent with USDA's projections that tobacco imports this year should be 18 percent to 20 percent lower than last year.

Agriculture groups have called on President Reagan through Agriculture Secretary John Block to impose emergency quotas to cut by half the amount of imports.

Bush addressed the subject Wednesday in Lexington, Ky.

"Basically, our administration has been resisting quotas and controls and that that would cause retaliation," Bush told reporters. "We'd like to see them work out voluntary restraints between importers of tobacco. We don't want to see retaliation against other Kentucky agricultural products."

Disneyland Fire Burns Toy Animals

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A fire near a warehouse at Disneyland, apparently touched off by fireworks, burned about $1.5 million worth of stuffed animals, a Disneyland spokesman said.

The fire, which was extinguished within a half-hour after it was reported at 9:11 p.m. Thursday, was in a remote northern section of the amusement park, said supervisor Liz Creamer of the Anaheim Fire Department.

"A lot of stuffed animals went up in smoke," said Disneyland spokesman Bob Roth, who estimated the damage at $1.5 million. The stuffed animals were Disney characters — Mickey Mouse, Minnie Mouse, Goofy and others, that were to have been sold as souvenirs.

The stuffed animals were stacked outside the warehouse.

One firefighter was treated for smoke inhalation, Roth said.

Most Disneyland visitors probably never knew the fire was in progress, as the nearest rides were "several hundreds yards" away from the blaze, he said.

It was apparently caused by fireworks that went "astray" during a 9 p.m. fireworks display, he said.

Chicago Bans Use Of Leaded Gasoline

CHICAGO (AP) — A ban on sales of leaded gasoline in the nation's third-largest city was hailed by environmentalists as an "incredibly important step" toward cleaning the air, but gas dealers said they will go to court to stop it.

The ban was backed by Mayor Harold Washington and adopted on a 36-7 vote Thursday by the City Council. It bars the sale of leaded gas for all passenger cars and commercial vehicles, such as taxis.

Doctors have linked lead to a variety of problems in children, including mental retardation, anemia and damage to the central nervous system. Lower doses have been linked to behavioral problems.

The measure, which could take effect in early December, will be challenged by the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association. Robert Jacobs, the group's executive director, said the association will seek a temporary injunction to block enforcement.

"The city conducted a farce today," Jacobs said. "They knew if they passed it, we would go to court against them."

The ban was praised by environmentalists and public health groups.

"Today's vote is a bellwether for the nation," said Eric Goldstein, a lawyer for the National Resources Defense Council in New York. "Other municipalities are likely to follow suit, absent of federal action to eliminate lead in gas nationwide."

"I think it's an incredibly important step," said Marilyn Katz, coordinator of a coalition that worked for passage of the ordinance.

The ban takes effect within 90 days providing it is ruled in compliance with the state program to meet federal air standards.

The ordinance was passed just two days after Washington barred the use of leaded fuel in municipal vehicles. He called the emissions from cars using leaded gas an "insidious, silent, odious poison."

Washington's announcement came after preliminary tests by the city on soil samples taken from Chicago playgrounds indicated lead levels two to five times higher than federal limits.

Dr. Ellen Silbergeld, a scientist with the Environmental Defense Fund, said Chicago is "an area with one of the highest rates of lead poisoning in the nation."

Doctors have said that airborne lead concentrations are greatest in areas adjacent to heavily traveled roads, including low-income housing projects.

Alderman Joseph Kotlarz, a sponsor of the ban, said Thursday that 23 of the 28 most congested intersections in the nation are in the Chicago area.

Opponents say the ban will force poor people to pay an extra 7 cents a gallon for unleaded gas, take business away from small gas stations and be virtually meaningless unless the state and federal governments follow suit.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recently proposed reducing the lead content of gasoline from 1.1 grams per gallon to 0.1 grams per gallon in 1986 and backed a complete ban by 1995.

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson has ordered a study of whether the state can outlaw the sale of leaded gasoline. He said he is inclined to support such a ban.

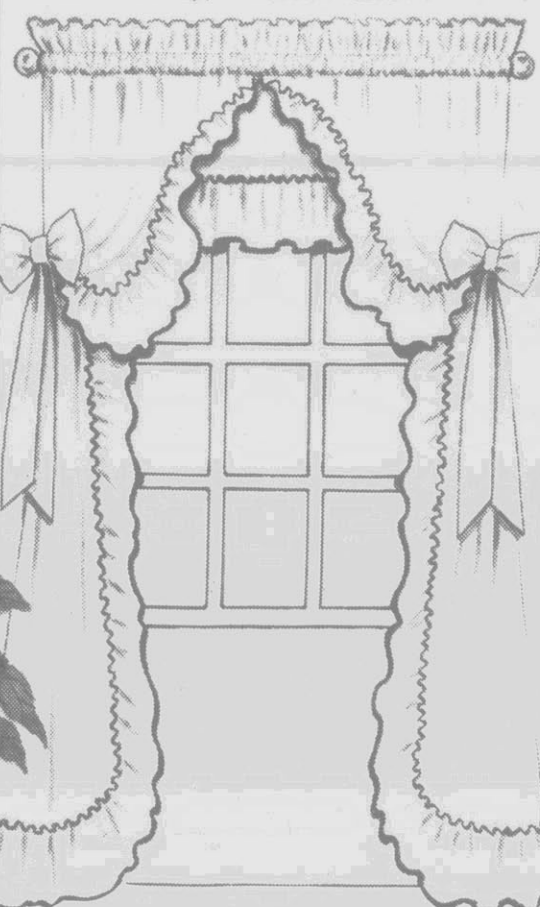

A move by New York City in 1971 to limit the amount of lead in gas was overturned in federal court, said Rob Weissman, an EPA official in Washington.

Generic Drug Bill May Be Boon For Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers may save millions of dollars on medicines under a bill passed by the House and Senate that streamlines government procedures for approving the use of less expensive generic drugs.

"This legislation will do more to contain the cost of health care than anything else Congress has done," Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., said Thursday after the measure passed the House on a 362-0 vote.

The bill, passed in slightly different form by the Senate, would make it easier for drug companies to obtain Food and Drug Administration approval of generic copies of such brand-name products as the tranquilizer Valium.

It also extends the patents of brand-name drugs and provides marketing protection for these products, provisions the pharmaceutical industry contends are crucial incentives for the development of new drugs.

Generic drugs are identical to brand-name drugs but are usually sold at lower prices. The FDA currently has the authority to approve generic copies of brand-name drugs approved before 1962.

About 150 drugs approved after 1962 have no generic equivalents because the FDA requires drug makers to duplicate original tests to show the generic products are as safe and effective as the brand-name medicines.

"Unfortunately, these abbreviated generic drug approval procedures do not apply to pioneer drugs approved after 1962," Waxman said. "The lack of such procedures is an effective bar to generic competition because the generic companies cannot afford the millions of dollars to duplicate the test results already in the FDA's files."

Under the new measure, generic drug makers would only be required to show the FDA that their product is the pharmaceutical equivalent of the brand-name drug being copied.

The bill now goes to a House-Senate conference committee before final congressional approval. Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., said two amendments tacked on by House voice vote will induce the Reagan administration to support it.

One of the amendments granted concessions on patent extensions and additional marketing rights to brand-name drug firms. Waxman, the bill's chief sponsor, said the concessions were necessary to preserve the fragile compromise worked out with those drug firms.

The other amendment would exempt animal drugs from the bill's patent extension provisions.

Waxman said that in addition to making more low-cost generic drugs available, the bill will also give researchers more time to develop new drugs under the protection of patents. Drug industry spokesmen have told Congress that up to eight years of patent time is often lost while the FDA studies an experimental drug's safety.

"The legislation ... will provide the incentives necessary for this country to maintain its worldwide leadership in pharmaceutical research by restoring patent time lost due to government review," Waxman said.

Madigan said it takes about $85 million and more than 10 years, on average, to bring a new drug to the market.

The bill also would extend the patents for drugs and other substances subject to premarket approval for up to five years, restoring patent time lost to government review.

"Because a patent continues to toll when a manufacturer is testing and awaiting government approval, the amount of patent time remaining after approval is less than the normal 17 years," Waxman said. "For example, representatives of the drug industry have testified that the average patent time left after approval is between 8 and 10 years. Research-intensive firms predict that declining patent term will result in the development of fewer innovative products."

Measles Cases Jump Sharply

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials say they are not alarmed by a 61 percent jump in measles cases in the first half of this year, because the disease is still far below levels in the pre-vaccination years.

The national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday that 1,759 measles cases were reported in the first 26 weeks of 1984, up 61 percent from the 1,095 cases reported in the first half of 1983.

Although the measles case numbers are up this year, they are "still far below the number in the prevaccine era (1950-62), when an average of over 525,000 cases was reported annually," the CDC said.

A total of 1,234 cases, or 70 percent, was reported from just four states — Michigan, with 430 cases; Texas, with 377; California, with 267; and Illinois, with 160. The number of states reporting no measles cases increased, from 22 (and the District of Columbia) in the first half of '83 to 24 this year.

The CDC said 44 percent of this year's measles victims had been adequately vaccinated against the disease and got it anyway. But the increased number of cases "does not appear to be" because the vaccine isn't working, the CDC said.

Since 1980, more than 95 percent of the nation's kindergarten and first grade students have had measles immunity, the CDC said.

The CDC noted that the age group for measles has changed somewhat from last year to this year. Where the highest incidence rates were in preschool children in 1983, the highest rate this year — 2.9 cases per 100,000 children — has been in youths 10 to 14.

Oral Drug Proves Effective In Treating Some Herpes

CHICAGO (AP) — An oral drug described as "the best thing to come along so far" is proving effective in treating genital herpes, but doesn't prevent recurrences of the disease that may afflict 20 percent of America's adults, a study today concludes.

The study, the largest of its kind, confirms earlier research that a capsule form of the drug acyclovir is effective in eliminating the rash and pain that accompany that first episode of genital herpes, said Dr. Gregory Mertz, one of the study's chief authors.

The first episode is the most severe, Mertz said. As many as 80 percent of first-time genital herpes sufferers will have another outbreak of the disease within six months after the initial outbreak.

However, the drug — which has not yet been approved by the government — is not a cure and did not prevent or reduce the number of recurrences, concluded the study, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The drug "appears to be the best thing to come along so far, but it doesn't fulfill all of what we hoped to find in an ideal drug," said Mertz, an assistant professor of medicine at the University of New Mexico.

He added that until such a medication comes along, "it's an important advance."

Mertz estimated that one in five American adults may suffer from herpes.

Researchers said that ideally, a drug to treat genital herpes should both reduce the severity of the disease and prevent further outbreaks.

Acyclovir "only fulfills one of these criteria," the study said, yet it "appears to be a safe and convenient treatment of a disease that often involves significant morbidity."

In the study of 119 patients with their first case of genital herpes, 61 were given the drug and 58 were given a placebo over a 10-day period.

Researchers found that those who were given the drug had their viruses disappear faster, lesions healed quicker and had shorter periods of pain compared to those given the placebo.

Recent studies in the New England Journal of Medicine have found that acyclovir eliminated or greatly reduced the frequency of the flare-ups, but all the patients studied soon started having the rash again when taken off the drug.

When the virus isn't causing a rash, it lies dormant in the victim's nervous system.

Acyclovir capsules have not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration, Mertz said. But the drug is on the market as a prescription ointment sold under the brand name Zovirax.

Mertz said the oral medication is preferable because it stops the formation of new lesions, while the topical application just treats new existing lesions. The drug can also be given intravenously.

New Heart Pump May Extend Life

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Researchers are close to developing a battery-powered, computer-operated pump that could be implanted in the chest and keep a failing heart running for years, doctors said after inserting a forerunner of the device in a Florida man.

"We look upon it as a ... step toward a totally implantable one, where the whole device can be implanted including the computers that drive it," Dr. Philip E. Oyer said Thursday of the "Pulsemaker" temporarily put in Robert St. Laurent.

Oyer performed the six-hour operation on the 51-year-old Fort Lauderdale man Wednesday at Stanford University Medical Center.

The 5-inch by 3½-inch device weighing under 1.5 pounds is the first electrically powered heart-assist system to be tried on a human patient, Oyer said.

More than 100,000 potential candidates exist for the permanently installed device, the maker says.

The system works by taking blood from the heart's left ventricle and guiding it into the blood pump. Working in rhythm with the natural heart, the pump ejects blood into the main artery coming from the heart, where it is delivered normally throughout the body.

Japan, South Korea Vow To Build New Friendship

TOKYO (AP) — The leaders of Japan and South Korea vowed today that the bitter past between their nations will yield to a new era of friendship, and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone expressed "deep regret" for the suffering Japan once imposed on Korea.

South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan, in the second day of his historic visit to Japan, warned that northeast Asia and eventually the world would be dragged into a conflict in Korea. He called on Japan and other nations in the region to help keep peace on the peninsula.

Earlier, Chun and Nakasone held a second round of talks on maintaining peace on the peninsula, divided between South Korea and communist North Korea. Chun's official three-day visit is the first by a Korean leader to Japan.

At Chun's request, the two leaders left bilateral issues, such as Japan's trade surplus and discrimination against Korean residents in Japan, for meetings among Cabinet ministers.

"There was a period in this century when Japan brought to bear great sufferings upon your country and its people," Nakasone told Chun at a luncheon, in the frankest acknowledgement yet of past wrongdoings. "I would like to state here that the government and people of Japan feel a deep regret for this error and are determined firmly to warn ourselves for the future."

The admission of guilt was far more direct than that made by 83-year-old Emperor Hirohito the night before at a state banquet.

Hirohito lamented the "unfortunate past between us for a period in this century," but stopped short of an apology many Koreans had demanded for Japan's harsh colonial rule of the Korean peninsula from 1910 until 1945, when Japan was defeated at the end of World War II.

Memories of the colonial period and centuries of Japanese invasions have left deep animosity between the two countries.

Pope To Visit Canada

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II departs Sunday on a pilgrimage to Canada, an exhausting 12-day tour of a vast country whose large Roman Catholic population has been swept by a wave of liberalism in recent years.

During his visit, the pope is expected to emphasize traditional church teaching on sex and church authority, remarks that could as well be directed across the border to the United States.

It will be the globe-trotting pope's 23rd foreign trip and one of his longest. He will travel by plane, train and boat as he crisscrosses the country from the Atlantic provinces to Vancouver on the west coast. John Paul will stop in 13 cities for activities ranging from blessing a fishing fleet in Newfoundland, to visiting a remote Indian village in the Northwest Territories. He will pray at some of the most famous Roman Catholic shrines in North America.

The 64-year-old church leader, who recently went skiing in northern Italy, also has a day set aside for private relaxation in the Canadian Rockies, although snow conditions might not yet favor skiing.

U.S. Veto Upsets Lebanese Official

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami said today the United States exhibited "cheap values" when it vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution demanding improved conditions in Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

"May this modern civilization that is championed by such cheap values be cursed," said the Syrian-backed prime minister.

Karami accused Israel of practicing "inhumane, fascist and Nazi policies" in southern Lebanon. He said he had not expected the United States to veto the U.N. resolution Thursday.

The resolution called on Israel to respect the rights of civilians in southern Lebanon, and to ease restrictions on the movement of people and goods. Israel has occupied southern Lebanon since invading in June 1982.

Israel recently has restricted access to southern Lebanon to curb increasing attacks by Shiite Moslem guerrillas against Israeli forces. Controls were tightened after Lebanon closed Israel's liaison office near Beirut in July.

Nicaragua Files Protest To U.S.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government has protested to the United States over a rebel helicopter raid in which two Americans were killed, and plans to take the issue to the U.N. Security Council.

The text of the protest note, released Thursday, accused the Reagan administration of failing to stop attacks by American mercenaries and asked that the United States "take immediate action to prevent such military activities by North American mercenaries."

Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto sent the protest note to Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Maybe you should consider where you'll be in 150 years.

The thought of it isn't pleasant. But your own bodily mortality is something somebody's going to have to deal with sooner or later.

So, instead of putting on blinders, why don't you consider the options? Find out a little about what happens after you pass away. The laws and the facts that govern the cemetery business. When you do, we're certain you'll see the advantages that Pinewood Memorial Park, managed by S.G. Wilkerson and Sons, offers over new, private ventures.

Just what is 'Perpetual Care'?

The State of North Carolina requires privately-owned cemeteries to meet certain requirements in order to call themselves 'Perpetual Care' cemeteries.

The law requires that a certain amount from the sale of each grave be set aside in a fund. Interest earned from the dollars in that fund is required to be used for upkeep in the cemetery.

However, S.G. Wilkerson and Sons, has never considered the required amount to be sufficient. Therefore, over the years, the contributions to the fund have been much larger than the amount required.

The results are obvious. With a 25-year growth of mature centipede sod, the cemetery grounds are now beautiful. The infrequent maintenance problems are quickly attended to. Plot buyers in Pinewood select from the grounds themselves, not from a notebook of what cemetery owners hope the grounds will look like years from now. Fact is, it takes years of careful maintenance for a cemetery to really look groomed and cared for.

And all Pinewood graves have the low profile and dignity of a flat bronze marker—better for everyone. What may surprise you the most is the fact that the total Pinewood Memorial Park costs are less, not more, than "package deals".

Let us tell you more. We'd like to explain more. Because we'd like you to make an informed decision about this matter which you and your family should take seriously.

The Wilkerson family has been in this business for many years. So talk to us before you buy anything. We'll respect your decision. But we want you to be sure you know what you're doing.

Vatican Questions Brazilian Priest On His Stance For Poor

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Four days after condemning Marxist elements of liberation theology, the Vatican today questioned a leading Brazilian proponent of the worldwide movement aimed at aiding the poor and oppressed.

The Rev. Leonardo Boff was questioned behind closed doors for more than four hours by West German Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, prefect of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

Boff, who often is photographed wearing layman's clothes, was dressed in his Franciscan order's traditional hooded brown robe.

Vatican officials said the session began with a special prayer. After a private meeting between Boff and Ratzinger, other officials, including two Brazilian cardinals and Ratzinger's aides, joined the closed-door discussion.

Boff's brother, Clodovis, told reporters outside: "He's very flexible... He would accept a compromise." Clodovis, also a priest and theologian, said: "I think he'll probably get a few warnings to be more conciliatory and ecclesiastical in his town." He did not elaborate.

"This is not a trial, it is a colloquium," Ratzinger told a news conference at the Vatican earlier this week, explaining the questioning of Boff. It is considered the most important Vatican questioning of a liberation theologian since the movement began two decades ago in Latin America.

Boff had predicted the talk would amount to "a global judgment of our church, that goes into the cellars of society and attends to the outcasts, the miserable and the poor."

The 45-year-old Franciscan, who lives and teaches in the mountain city of Petropolis, Brazil, has spent the last few days in near seclusion in Rome, honing his defenses of his book: "Church: Charisma and Power."

The book accuses the Vatican of elitism and of failing to take a firmer stand in defense of human rights and politically sensitive issues. Ratzinger, who heads the Vatican's chief watchdog body on religious teaching, will question Boff about possible doctrinal errors in the Brazilian's writing.

The questioning of Boff is part of a major campaign Pope John Paul II has been waging against Marxist elements in liberation theology.

Liberation theology is a movement that attempts to use the Gospel to justify nuns' and priests' social activism. It was born in Latin America in the 1960s and has spread as far as Africa, India, the Philippines and parts of the United States.

The theology includes highly theoretical studies carried out by scholars in the United States and Western Europe.

In Latin America, the United States, the Philippines and Tanzania, it includes tens of thousands of "base communities," groups of several dozen lay people each that strive to heighten social awareness in conjunction with New Testament teaching.

Baptist Panel Oks Rules On Mail Lists

CARAWAY, N.C. (AP) — The Executive Committee of the Baptist State Convention has adopted rules on the use of its mailing list after that list was sold to and used by Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election campaign.

The committee adopted the rules Thursday and voted to continue the moratorium on the Christian Action League's use of the list.

The labels will be available only for convention agencies, institutions and programs after department heads verify their requests for labels in writing, according to statement released by the committee after Thursday's meeting, which was closed to the public and news media.

"We recommend the continuation of the moratorium on the use of mailing labels by the Christian Action League until CAL trustees resolve the pending matter with the Baptist State Convention," the statement said.

The Rev. Coy C. Privette, executive director of the Christian Action League, sold the 18,852-name mailing list to Helms' re-election campaign. Privette bought the list from the league for $450 and sold it for the same amount.

The Helms campaign used the list to send a "Dear Pastor" letter dated Aug. 15.

CAL President Thomas M. Freeman addressed the closed-door meeting but refused afterward to discuss his comments. But according to notes from the committee secretary, Freeman said Privette had violated the bylaws of the Christian Action League that called for the group to be nonpartisan.

Freeman also said Privette had "overstepped his bounds but that the Christian Action Committee did not overstep its bounds" and that Freeman hoped the executive committee would not take punitive action, the notes said.

Privette has said his actions were "an error in judgement" and has apologized for placing the convention in an awkward position.

The statement on the mailing labels was passed unanimously by the executive committee.

The league's use of the labels was banned last week after the executive committee discussed the situation in a conference call.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mostly higher today, extending their broad advance of the previous session.

Retail, defense and financial issues were among those moving ahead.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which posted its best daily gain in two weeks Thursday, climbed another 3.75 to 1,222.61 in today's opening half-hour.

Gainers jumped out to a 2-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers said stocks were bolstered Thursday by a stronger bond market, where prices of long-term Treasury issues gained more than a point, or $10 for each $1,000 in face value, and their yields fell.

There is speculation in the credit markets that the Federal Reserve might be slightly loosening its grip on credit because it has injected reserves into the banking system for the past several days.

Some analysts have cautioned, however, that the Fed's moves might be technical only and not reflective of a change in monetary policy.

On the NYSE's active list today, Citicorp rose $\frac{3}{8}$ to 34 $\frac{3}{8}$, American Express gained $\frac{3}{8}$ to 32 $\frac{3}{4}$ and Ford Motor edged up $\frac{1}{8}$ to 44.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 9.83 to 1,218.86, its best one-day advance since it surged 22.75 on Aug. 21.

Advances led declines 5 to 2 on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.70 to 95.30.

Big Board volume swelled to 91.92 million shares from 69.25 million in the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 0.99 to 213.89.

Miss America Rules Remain Unchanged

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Contracts with this year's Miss America contestants don't seek assurances that they have never posed in the nude, despite the scandal that forced Vanessa Williams to give up her crown, pageant officials say.

Pageant executive director Albert A. Marks Jr. said legal advisers to the annual contest found that any attempts to change the routine four-page contract with contestants would make the agreement too voluminous.

Each of the Miss America contestants, who begin arriving in this resort today for a week of competition leading to the Sept. 15 finals, must sign the contract.

The pact already includes a clause stating, "I have not been involved in any act of moral turpitude." Another mandates the winner to "uphold and maintain the dignity and honor of the title 'Miss America.'"

Miss Williams, 21, of Millwood, N.Y., gave up the title July 23 after nude photographs of her appeared in a men's magazine. Miss Williams, the first black woman to wear the Miss America crown, was succeeded by Suzette Charles, 21, of Mays Landing, N.J., who also is black.

Miss Charles will crown Miss America 1985, while Miss Williams has said she will not visit this resort for the finals.

Both Miss Williams and Miss Charles are listed in this year's Miss America program book as Miss America 1984 with notes to show the terms of their reigns.

After Miss Williams became the first Miss America ever to give up her crown, pageant officials considered whether to change the contracts for the contestants to guard against a repeat, said Marks.

But he said pageant lawyers decided against any changes.

Clarification

In a Sept. 4 article, "City to Condemn Structure," the month of the fire that destroyed the second floor of a building located at the corner of Dickinson Avenue and Eighth Street was incorrectly listed as December, 1981. The fire occurred in October, 1981.

In addition, Sam B. Underwood Jr., legal representative of Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. (MHR) — the company that now owns the fire-damaged structure — wrote to The Reflector, saying: "I did not tell you that the building came into the possession of the Methodist Retirement Homes through Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. What I did tell you was that Dr. James Brown of Baltimore devised an interest in his undivided interest in the Brown property to Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church and that subsequently, the Methodist Retirement Homes, by means of a partition proceeding, became the title owner for the property in question."

Tribal Rights

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A group of Amazon Indians attacked and killed a government worker and an oil prospector for trespassing on tribal territory, a spokesman for the government-run Indian affairs agency said.

"They were shot with bows and arrows and clubbed with sticks," Raimundo Nonnado Cruz, a press spokesman for the agency, said. Nonnado Cruz said the Indians, who belong to the Kurubu tribe, live in Atalaia do Norte, an isolated area near the Peruvian border, about 2,900 miles west of the capital, Brasilia.

There are about 220,000 Indians in Brazil. Most of them live in the Amazon jungle.

Pirates Host Temple In Home Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University opens the 1984 home season Saturday night in Ficklen Stadium, and the Bucs are hoping that scheduling the Temple Owls for that game was a wise decision.

However, Temple, which twice has gone down before the Pirates in Philadelphia games, is making noises this year as being a much stronger team, while the Bucs are trying to regroup following their 48-17 defeat at the hands of nationally ranked Florida State last weekend.

Kickoff for the game is set for 7 p.m.

Coach Ed Emory isn't taking the Owls lightly. He calls Temple one of the top teams in the East this year, and in beating the Pirates, the Owls just might make believers out of some others.

For Temple, it will be the first game of the season. Some coaches would consider this a blessing and others a deficit. Emory regards it as to Temple's favor.

"They've had all fall to work on getting ready for us," he said. "They've had a chance to scout us and see what we do. And coming off a game like we played at Florida doesn't help us at all. If we had won down there, it would be a different story and we'd have the advantage. But I see it as all the advantage to Temple."

Temple does come into the game riding a two-game winning streak at the end of last year. The Owls opened the 1983 season with a 17-6 victory over Syracuse, but then dropped five in a row before beating Delaware, 23-16.

In that streak, however, they came close to pulling off a couple of upsets. They lost to Penn State, 23-18, and had the chance to win. They lost to Boston College, 18-15, and again had the chance to win. East Carolina was the final foe in that string, taking a 24-11 victory over the Owls.

In the last five games, they won over Delaware, lost to Georgia, 31-14 and West Virginia, 27-9, before beating Louisville, 24-7 and Rutgers, 24-23.

Those two wins, Emory feels, will definitely give the Owls some momentum to carry into Saturday night.

Temple has some potent players too, among them running back Paul Palmer and quarterback Lee Saltz. Palmer, a 5-9, 168-pound sophomore, was the ECAC Rookie of the Year in 1983, rushing for 628 yards on 141 carries for six touchdowns. He also caught 33 passes for 271 yards and two more scores. With a total of 50 points last year, he led the Owls in all three categories, rushing, receiving and scoring.

He was also second in kickoff returns with a 17.9 average.

Against East Carolina, however, he was held fairly well in check, gaining only 23 yards on 11 lugs with three passes for six yards.

Saltz did much of the quarterbacking late in the season, helping the Owls to their 3-2 mark in the final five games.

"We could not have a tougher opponent," Emory said of the Owls. "I think they're one of the best teams in the East, but they've been very low key."

"They have their entire line back and they've had two great recruiting years. They have six receivers and three tight ends back from last year and their entire backfield (except quarterback) is back. And they think Saltz is going to be a great one."

Emory said that Temple's offense is potent, both as a running and a passing threat. He also is looking for the Owls to use the Pirate freeze-I offense this year.

"Their defense is good. They are a bunch of street-fighters who come at you hard. They had a lot of people hurt last year when they played us. They've got an outstanding secondary and (safety Anthony) Young (6-0, 187, Sr.) is one of the best secondary people in the country," Emory said.

"Their punter (Kip) Shenefelt was second in the country last year," he added.

Oddly, both of the games between the two teams have been decided by the same margin, 13 points. ECU won the opening game two years ago, 23-10, and took last year's 24-11.

Emory has made the decision to go with Ron Jones as the starting quarterback this week. Jones, a redshirt freshman, carried the ball five times last week, but gained only seven yards. However, he hit on six of 18 passes for 109 yards. Two of those were intercepted, but one was tipped by the intended receiver.

Robbie Bartlett, who started against Florida State, failed to connect on two pass attempts, but rushed for 50 yards on six carries.

"I just think Ron did the better job of executing with the offense," Emory said in making the selection.

Tailback Jimmy Walden and fullback Reggie Branch lead the Pirate rushing with 61 yards each. Stefon Adams is the leading receiver with four passes for 64 yards.

Following this week's contest, the Pirates hit the road again, traveling to Central Michigan next weekend. The Chippewas are rated as the favorite to win the Mid-America Conference.

Woodley Paces Steeler Win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — David Woodley was too much for the New York Jets . . . and the Jets' offensive line just wasn't enough for Pat Ryan.

Playing only five days after suffering a concussion against the Kansas City Chiefs on opening day, Woodley picked the Jets apart with intelligent playcalling and passing Thursday night, leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 23-17 National Football League victory.

The Jets, meanwhile, hurt themselves with poor offensive line play that allowed Ryan little protection at quarterback.

"We knew coming into the game that the Steelers had a fine pass rush," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "They blitzed us quite a bit and we obviously had trouble picking it up."

Ryan was sacked four times for a total 27 yards, some of them in crucial situations. Rushing his passes quite a bit, Ryan had three intercepted, including two by Sam Washington that stopped Jets' drives in the final quarter.

"Inexperience hurt me," said Ryan, making only the second start in his NFL career, both within the last week. "There were just a lot of dumb plays on my part."

Symbolic of the Jets' effort Thursday night was a pass attempt on which Ryan fumbled after brushing the ball against the hip of New York running back Freeman McNeil. The play occurred early in the third period after the Jets had taken the lead 14-13 on an electrifying, 97-yard kickoff return by Bobby Humphrey to start the second half.

The Steelers recovered the fumble on the 13 and three plays later were in the end zone on a soft three-yard pass from Woodley to Weegie Thompson.

"I thought it turned the game around," Ryan said. "I faked a handoff to Freeman and as I did, I hit the ball on his hip and it bounced away. It just took away our momentum.

"Our offense was frustrating," added Ryan. "We just made too many mistakes."

The Jets continually hurt themselves with penalties on the offensive line, but it was one by the defense that really hurt as much as any. That happened in the first quarter, when cornerback Davlin Mullen was called for interference on a Woodley passing play. That added up to a 37-yard advance that moved the ball to the Jets' eighty-yard line. Two plays later, Woodley threw a six-yard touchdown pass to Louis Lipps for a 7-0 Steeler lead.

"The cornerbacks weren't really putting pressure on us," said Lipps. "All we had to do was find the open area and Woodley would hit us with it. And that's what we did all night."

In all, Woodley hit 14 of 25 passes for 187 yards and two touchdowns. Gary Anderson provided the rest of the Pittsburgh offense with three field goals — although uncharacteristically, Anderson also missed a 27-yarder and a 30-yarder in the fourth quarter that could have made Pittsburgh's job a bit easier.

"I think we did a great job overcoming all the things we had to overcome," said Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll, who was relieved to see his team come back after an opening-game 37-27 loss to Kansas City.

"It wasn't only all those mistakes, it was playing a very emotional team playing its first game in a new stadium. A lesser group of people than we have wouldn't have won this game."

The Jets, playing before a crowd of 70,654 in their first regular-season home game at Giants Stadium after moving from New York's Shea Stadium after last season, lost their first game after an opening-day victory over Indianapolis.

"We made too many errors, especially on offense," said Walton. "We were too erratic in attacking the Pittsburgh defense, and we couldn't establish our running game. We weren't beaten physically, but it was just all the little mistakes."

On Sunday, it's San Diego at Seattle; New England at Miami; Buffalo at St. Louis; Dallas at the New York Giants; Denver at Chicago; Detroit at Atlanta; Kansas

City at Cincinnati; Minnesota at Philadelphia; Tampa Bay at New Orleans; Cleveland at the Los Angeles Rams; Indianapolis at Houston; and Green Bay at the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Monday night game features Washington at San Francisco.

The Seahawks belted Cleveland 33-0 in their season-opener, but lost star running back Curt Warner for the season with a knee injury. So they went out and signed Franco Harris, who was waived by Pittsburgh during the preseason in a contract dispute.

Harris, 34, is only 363 yards behind the NFL career rushing record of Jim Brown. He signed a one-year contract with Seattle.

"The one thing I want to do is win," Harris said. "I hope the guys realize that. I think a winning attitude is contagious and that's the kind of attitude I have."

"I don't know how long I'm going to play. I've always felt your career could end at any time. Age can be a factor if you've had injuries and you've been beaten up a lot. But I'm healthy and I've taken care of myself."

New England beat Buffalo in its opener, while Miami was mauling Washington behind Dan Marino's five touchdown tosses. The Patriots, who lost linebacker Clayton Weishuhn with a knee injury, also are up against a long losing streak in Miami — the Dolphins haven't lost at home to the Pats since 1966.

"If we win," said Coach Ron Meyer, "it will probably be as big a lift as this franchise has ever had."

Cubs Fall To Cards, 8-0

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's junior varisty went down to an 8-0 defeat at the hands of Jacksonville last night in the opening game of the year for the Rampant Cubs.

The lone score in the game came late in the second period on a bootleg run by the Cardinal quarterback.

"We didn't look very good on offense," Coach James Rankins said. "The only bright spots were the play of Walt Pollard in the line and Rodney Harris in the backfield. Our guards, Jimmy Gillihan and Steve Peele, showed a lot of potential too."

Rankins said the entire defensive unit was to be praised for the job it did. "They stopped Jacksonville inside the ten on a couple of occasions," he pointed out. "They really played well in the second half."

Rankins said he felt Jacksonville's having played a game last week, and the fact that Rose was using a quarterback with little experience, were the big factors in the game.

Rose returns to action next Thursday, hosting New Bern.

The last shall be first and the first shall be last.

Close, but not quite what happened in the first week of our picks for the 1984 football season.

Our leader after one week is last year's celler dweller, Jimmy DuPree, who turned in a 10-2 week. Second place went to last year's titleholder, Vickie Spivey, who was 9-3. This writer, Joe Jenkins and Tom Baines all finished up at 8-4, while our guest, new East Carolina University sports information director Bob Gennarelli pulled in at the rear with a 7-5 mark.

But the season is young, Jenkins reminds us. And, Jenkins says, he will not bring up the rear this year.

That too, remains to be seen.

Our guest this week is Gennarelli's assistant, Rob Wilson, who comes to East Carolina from Florida State — at least the Pirates got one good thing from Tallahassee. Wilson says he'll do better than his boss, and we'll know late Saturday night.

Our initial high school picks last week didn't do too well, as we finished 2-2 with the four games played last week.

This week, there are a good deal more area games, so let's get to them.

win again here, 20-6.

Elsewhere, it'll be Beddingfield over Greene Central, Washington over West Craven, Swansboro over Chocowinity, and Jamesville over Bath.

Turning to our panel, we find the two local games at the top of the list, Rose High School in its opening game against Jacksonville and the Pirates hosting Temple in their home opener.

The Rampants are opening the season against the Cardinals, who opened last week with a 14-8 win over 3-A power White Oak. Supposedly this is a rebuilding year for the Cardinals, and we're not so sure that this doesn't have to be considered a building year for the Rampants. Our panel is split in the decision, but goes along with the Rampants by a 5-1 margin. Our own personal pick is Rose by 14-7.

East Carolina tries to bounce back after its lopsided loss to Florida State last weekend. Hopefully, the Pirates have ironed out many of their mistakes in facing Temple, playing its first game of the year. Again, the panel likes the home team, going with East Carolina down the line, 6-0. Our pick is the Pirates, 24-14.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Virginia; Maryland over Syracuse; Virginia Tech over Wake Forest; Missouri over Illinois; Mississippi over Memphis State; Duke over Indiana; N.C. State over Ohio; Miami over Michigan; Arizona over California; and Michigan State over Colorado.

Rampettes Bow In Opener; Pam Pack, Rams Post Wins

Rose High School, missing one of its top players, fell to New Bern, 6-3, in its opening tennis match of the season yesterday.

Kelly Wall, one of the top returning players, is sidelined with illness and missed the match. New Bern, meanwhile, won five of the six singles matches to close out the win. Rose came back with two wins in the three doubles matches.

The Rampettes, 0-1, return to action on Tuesday, hosting Wilson Hunt in the first Big East match of the year.

Top Teams' Coaches Talk Like A Disaster Is Coming

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

From what they say about their teams, you would think football coaches Danny Ford of Clemson and Tom Osborne of Nebraska were headed for disaster this weekend.

Instead, Ford and Osborne are at the helms of two of the top three teams in the nation as college football gets into full swing Saturday. Clemson, ranked third and coming off a 40-7 romp over Appalachian State, visits Virginia in an Atlantic Coast Conference night game. Nebraska opens its campaign hosting Wyoming.

Neither the Tigers or Cornhuskers figure to have many problems Saturday — though you'd never get that feeling by listening to the coaches.

Cale Will Drive Ford

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Three-time NASCAR Grand National stock car champion Cale Yarborough will switch in 1985 from driving a Chevrolet to a Ford Thunderbird, it was announced Thursday.

Yarborough drives for the Harry Ranier-W.I.N. Inc. Team.

The announcement, during the official introduction of Ford's 1985 cars, was made jointly by Phillip E. Benton Jr., vice president sales operations for Ford Motor Co.; Michael Kranefuss, director of Special Vehicle Operations for Ford; and Ranier, a coal and ranching magnate from Kentucky.

"This is like coming home for me," said Yarborough, who started his Grand National racing career in Fords. "I know the cars are winners. I've watched Ford's resurgence in stock car racing the last two years and I like what I've seen."

Waddell Wilson, considered the premier engine builder in NASCAR, will continue as team manager for Ranier-W.I.N., which is co-owned by Ranier and J.T. Lundy, also owner of Calumet Stables in Kentucky.

Wilson, noting he too started in stock car racing working on Ford engines for Hulman-Moody in Charlotte, N.C., said, "I learned many of the tricks of my trade building Ford engines. This is going to be a good move for us."

Yarborough has been a part-time driver on the Grand National circuit for the past three seasons, driving in about 16 of the 30 races each season. He said this change will not change that situation.

The veteran racer from Sardis, S.C., who has earned more than $4 million in his career, has three of his 81 Grand National victories this season, including the rich and prestigious Daytona 500. He also has won four poles, all in Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS race cars.

"If we're going to have a reputation for being a great team, we've got to be good enough to back that up," said Ford, who was unhappy despite last Saturday's rout of out-manned Appalachian State. "Sometimes I don't think the players listen to me when I tell them an opponent's going to be tough."

"But I keep telling them Virginia's a good team."

The Cavaliers, 6-5 last year, have not beaten Clemson in 23 tries.

"They're going to look forward to playing Clemson, and I think our team's got a hard job in trying to get ready to play Virginia and trying to win a football game at Virginia," said Ford.

Osborne is concerned that his Cornhuskers will have trouble with Wyoming's wishbone offense. The Cowboys rode that attack to a 31-13 victory over South Dakota last week. But no one is mistaking Nebraska for South Dakota.

"Wyoming is going to be a difficult team for us," Osborne said. "Their wishbone presents some unique problems for us. If you blow an assignment on an option play, you can give up six points pretty quick."

Nebraska defensive end Bill Weber also is worried about Wyoming's wishbone.

"It puts a lot of pressure on the defense," said Weber. "You have to play the run and the pass. It requires you to pay attention and do your job. You can't afford too many mistakes."

Nebraska usually doesn't make many errors.

Elsewhere in the Top 10, No. 1 Miami, 2-0, is at No. 14 Michigan; No. 4 UCLA visits San Diego State at night; sixth-rated Ohio State hosts Oregon State; No. 7 Notre Dame plays Purdue in the Indianapolis Hoosier Dome; ninth-rated Alabama entertains No. 18 Boston College at night, and No. 10 Iowa takes on Iowa State.

Also, 11th-ranked Penn State hosts Rutgers; No. 12 Arizona State plays at home against Oklahoma State in a night contest; Baylor is at No. 13 Brigham Young; Stanford travels to No. 16 Oklahoma, and No. 19 Washington hosts Northwestern.

Ranked teams not playing are No. 5 Texas; No. 8 Auburn; No. 15 Southern Methodist; No. 17 Pittsburgh, and No. 20 Florida State.

While Ford and Osborne fret, one coach who might be on shaky ground is expressing optimism about his squad. Gerry Faust of Notre Dame, whose three-year record at Notre Dame is 18-15-1, is under heavy pressure to produce something better than last year's 7-5 mark — his best at the Irish's helm.

"This is a new year," said Faust. "Last year is over with and the past three years are over with. I don't even want to talk about the past three years. I want to talk about the present and the future."

Notre Dame is a heavy favorite, with 10 offensive starters and seven on defense returning.

Valkyries In Opening Win

HOLLYWOOD — Lisa Mills had 12 affective hits to lead D.H. Conley to a pair of victories over SouthWest Edgcombe Thursday in high school volleyball action.

Conley won the first match 15-1, 15-12, then took the second 15-5, 19-17.

Mills and Rhonda Jackson had three affective hits each in the first match, while Debbie Patrick added two. Michelle Waters ran up eight straight points on serve, and Trellany Boyd had nine assists.

In the second match, the Valkyries had 17 affective hits as Mills posted nine including three kills. Boyd posted 11 straight points on serve in the opening game.

Conley hosts North Pitt Tuesday in another 3-A contest.

Cubs, Mets Look Forward To Series

By MIKE CLARK
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Cubs were itching to climb aboard a flight to New York and, once and for all, put an end to 39 years of baseball frustration.

"We're looking forward to the series," Chicago's Gary Matthews said of a three-game set with the New York Mets that could go a long way toward deciding the National League's Eastern Division title.

The Cubs, who haven't won a pennant since 1945, roar into town with a seven-game lead over the Mets with only 22 games left in the season. But six of those games are against the Mets, and it is that fact which gives the slumping Mets some hope.

New York didn't do itself any good Thursday night by dropping a 2-0 decision at Pittsburgh while the Cubs were beating Montreal 4-1.

"What does that series mean? What do you think it means?" said Mets' first baseman Keith Hernandez. "We're seven down with 22 to go."

"We have to do to them what they did to us earlier," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson, whose club has lost seven straight games to the Cubs since a 2-1 victory on July 27.

Since then, the Cubs have won 29 of 41 games, coming from 4½ games back to a seven-game lead. The Mets, meanwhile, are only 19-25 over the same period.

In other National League action Thursday, Houston ripped San Francisco 14-2 as Bob Knepper threw a seven-hitter and Craig Reynolds hit a grand slam home run; Eric Davis and Wayne Krenchicki homered to pace a 13-hit attack as Cincinnati ripped San Diego 10-3; Mike Jorgensen tripled in two runs in the eighth to give St. Louis a 6-5 victory over Philadelphia; and Randy Johnson's solo homer in the 18th inning gave Atlanta a 3-2 verdict over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Cubs 4, Expos 1

Bob Dernier tripled to open the eighth and scored the go-ahead run on Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice fly off Montreal starter Charlie Lea, 15-10.

Chicago added insurance in the ninth when Keith Moreland and Dave Lopes raced home on a two-out, bases-loaded throwing error by Expos shortstop Argenis Salazar.

George Frazier, 5-2, worked two hitless innings in relief of starter Dennis Eckersley to earn the victory. Lee Smith pitched a hitless ninth for his 30th save.

Lea had limited the Cubs to four hits through six innings, but Chicago struck for a pair of hits to tie the game 1-1 in the seventh. Leon Durham opened with a double and came around on a single by Moreland.

The Expos' only run scored in the first when Tim Lincecum singled, stole second and third and came in on Dan Driessen's infield grounder.

Pirates 2, Mets 0

Rick Rhoden, 12-9, and Rod Scurry threw a combined five-hitter and Jason Thompson took care of the scoring with a two-run home run in the third inning as the last-place Pirates blanked the Mets.

Rhoden, who struck out four and walked two, faltered in the eighth when Ray Knight doubled and Mike Fitzgerald walked. Scurry, a left-hander who earned his third save, came on to get pinch-hitter Kelvin Chapman to bounce into a double play and then got Mookie Wilson on a force play to end the threat.

Lee Lacy walked and stole second to start the Pirates' third and Thompson followed with his 16th homer. That made a loser of Mets starter Calvin Schiraldi, 0-1, who was making just his second major-league start.

Astros 14, Giants 2

Reynolds' bases-loaded homer capped a six-run first inning and gave Knepper, 14-9, all the support he needed in pitching his 10th complete game of the season.

The Astros, who closed within nine games of San Diego in the Western Division race, raked Giants starter Bill Laskey, 7-12, for six runs in one-third of an inning. Bill Doran walked, stole second and scored on Terry Puhl's single to open the game. Denny Walling doubled, and one out later Jerry Mumphrey was walked intentionally to load the bases.

Enos Cabell singled home one run and Reynolds followed with his second career grand slam and sixth home run of the season, chasing Laskey.

RBI singles by Cabell and Mumphrey highlighted a four-run fifth inning, and the Astros added three unearned runs in the sixth in a rally featuring a two-run single by Knepper, who had a pair of hits and three RBIs.

Reds 10, Padres 3

Davis' eighth homer of the year, and fifth in four games, gave Cincinnati a 2-0 lead in the first against San Diego ace Eric Show, 14-9. Krenchicki's solo homer in the sixth broke a 3-3 tie and ignited a

Hoyt's 'Dry Spitter' Tops Oakland, 7-3

CHICAGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt is a magician — he can throw a dry spitball.

With a drizzling rain falling over Comiskey Park, Hoyt dipped into his bag of tricks, combined a little resin with a little moisture, and made the baseball perform some mystifying maneuvers.

"You can take advantage of the rain to throw some dry spitballs," Hoyt revealed after hurling a complete game as the Chicago White Sox dropped Oakland 7-3 in the lone American League game Thursday.

"I did that a lot. It's not cheating and I'm not going to lie about it," Hoyt said.

The trick to throwing the "dry spitter" is to grab the bottom of the resin bag, which hasn't been saturated with rain, rather than the top, he said.

Hoyt, 12-15, was definitely more successful after the rain started falling in the fifth inning, allowing just two hits and no runs over the final four innings.

"He did a hell of a job of ignoring the elements," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa of last year's Cy Young Award winner, who picked up his second consecutive complete-game victory.

Hoyt struck out seven, including Dave Kingman four times, and gave up six hits and three walks.

Oakland pitcher Curt Young apparently didn't like the moisture-laden milieu. He was knocked out by a five-run Chicago outburst that started with two out in the fifth inning.

The A's led 3-2 going in, but singles by Tom Paciorek and Greg Walker, a two-run double by Greg Luzinski, an RBI double by Ron Kittle and a two-run homer by Vance Law sent Young to the showers.

"He's a youngster and he was probably a little tired mentally and physically," said Oakland Manager Jackie Moore. "He's not getting the ball in the spots he needs to."

Law's homer, his 15th of the season, was the finishing blow for Young, 7-4.

"It was a breaking ball, a slider out over the plate," said Law.

six-run Reds' uprising. Davis singled in a run, Dave Parker delivered two more with a double, Brad Gulden's single scored the fifth run and Krenchicki finished things with a run-scoring double.

Joe Price, 7-11, went five innings for the victory. Bob Owchinko earned his second save.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 5

Right-hander Charles Hudson nursed a 5-3 lead through seven innings before the Cardinals erupted against reliever Bill Campbell, 6-5. Rookie Terry Pendleton led off with a walk and stole second and Darrell Porter walked. After the runners advanced on a bunt, Pendleton scored on a sacrifice fly by Andy Van Slyke. David Green walked and Jorgensen then tripled to the wall in center field.

That was all the margin needed by relief ace Bruce Sutter, who improved his league save record to 39 by pitching the ninth and securing the victory for Bob Forsch, 2-4.

Porter drove in three runs for the Cardinals while Philadelphia got solo homers from Rick Schu and John Russell.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Mike Sciosia singled in a run in the fifth and Pedro Guerrero's single gave the Dodgers a 2-0 edge in the sixth. But the Braves tied it in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Dale Murphy and Gerald Perry.

Then the teams flailed away at each other for nine innings before Johnson led off the 18th with a liner into the left-field seats off the fourth Dodger pitcher, Larry White, 0-1.

The blow made a winner of Braves reliever Jeff Dedmon, 4-3, who hurled the 17th. Pete Falcone pitched the 18th to record his first save in two years.

Rick Mahler, the Braves' starter, went 11 innings and Fernando Valenzuela toiled 10 innings for the Dodgers. Each gave up nine hits.

The affair matched the longest game in the National League this season, a July 13 contest between San Francisco and Pittsburgh. The longest game in the majors this season was a 25-inning contest between the Milwaukee Brewers and the Chicago White Sox May 8-9.

Tigers, Blue Jays Face 'Big' Weekend Series

TORONTO (AP) — Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, a staunch advocate of the "one game at a time" theory, feels that the Tigers' series with the Toronto Blue Jays this weekend is, indeed, a big one.

Not crucial, mind you, but important enough.

The Tigers, who have lost four of seven to the Blue Jays this season, will send Dan Petry, 16-8, to the mound tonight against Doyle Alexander, 13-5.

"They're gaining," Anderson said, pointing to the Blue Jays back 8½ games in the American League East standings. "I think Toronto has to be pleased. Anytime you can come from 12½ back to where they are, you have to be happy."

The Tigers have been a slump during which they have lost six of their last eight games, including two of three to the Baltimore Orioles.

They needed an unearned run to edge Baltimore 1-0 Wednesday night.

Somebody asked Anderson if this was a sign his club is starting to crack.

"To me, there's no such a thing as cracking," Anderson replied. "They're just not hitting or pitching very well, but they're not cracking. They're just losing."

"We lost a few early in the season, too. Nobody thought they were cracking then."

If the Tigers can sweep the Blue Jays this weekend, they'll do more than just win three games. They also will run six more figures off the magic number.

At the moment, any combination of Tiger victories and Blue Jay defeats that add up to 15 will clinch the AL East for Detroit.

"But, even if we win three, is it over?" Anderson demanded. "No."

Until you get all those numbers off the board, it's not over.

"Also, if we win three, they're not going to quit playing and if they win three, we're not going to quit. Ten-game losing streaks happen."

"This is a stretch drive now. Not because of our slump, but because we've got games left."

Still, the Tigers, who sprinted out to a record 35-5 start and have not been seriously challenged since, appear to be safe.

"Sure, I think the 35-5 was the key," Anderson said. "Getting off to a good start is always important, (but) it really boils down to 162 games. That determines the best club that year."

Economists See End To N.C. Recession

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Although they express caution about what may happen to North Carolina's economy after 1985, two researchers agree a highly diversified durable goods manufacturing sector is leading the state's strong rebound from the depths of a 1982-83 recession.

First Union Vice President William R. Hackney III, chief investment officer for the bank's capital management group, said North Carolina's success in attracting higher-technology, durable goods industries in recent years has enabled the state to offset the ill effects of declining employment in its biggest industry, textiles.

"If we hadn't been able to change our economy as we have, we would be looked at as the Michigan of the Southeast," Hackney said, noting that thousands of textile jobs have disappeared as a result of automation within that industry and competition from imports.

He said the state now has a strong base of jobs in electrical instruments, transportation equipment, metal fabrication and computer instrumentation industries.

Hackney and University of North Carolina at Charlotte Professor John E. Connaughton, who heads the research group that tracks the state's economy, said the gross state product — total output of goods and services measured in dollars — should grow an inflation-adjusted 6.5 percent this year and about 2.6 percent in 1985.

"Over the next 18 months we see no real negative signs that a recession is imminent," Connaughton said.

"Overall, the North Carolina economy is expected to do very, very well in 1984 and this growth should continue into 1985," Connaughton said.

With the creation of 71,000 new jobs this year and nearly 54,000 next year, unemployment should continue to decline, dipping to 6 percent by the end of 1984 and to a five-year-low of 5.2 percent by the end of 1985, he said.

With the continued growth of the gross state product, the non-agricultural jobs available in North Carolina should climb 2.9 percent to 2.51 million by December, Connaughton said. Another 2.1 percent gain, to a total of 2.57 million is expected by December 1985, he said. North Carolina's GSP is forecast to reach $86.5 billion in 1985, he said.

Although next year's GSP growth rate of 2.6 percent will be below the 4.4 percent average for the past quarter century, the slower pace should have "positive and timely value," Connaughton said.

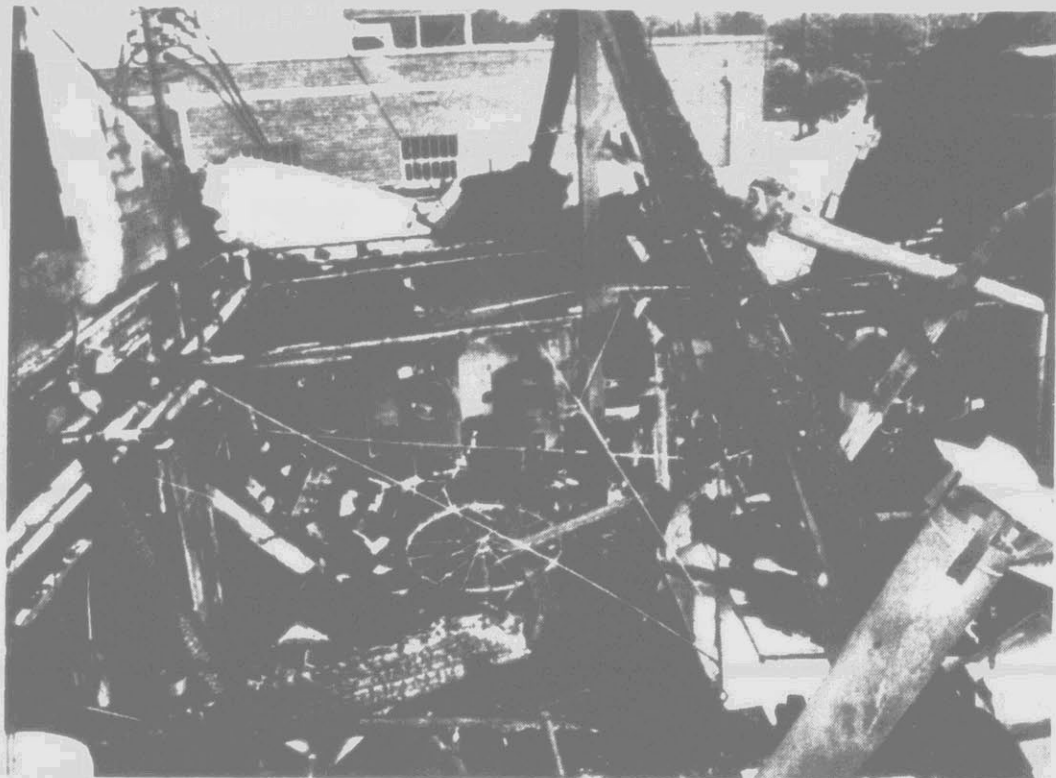

He said the durable goods sector is expected to grow at an inflation-adjusted rate of 17 percent this year and 4.5 percent in 1985, creating 40,940 new jobs in the process. Other sectors doing well this year are wholesale trade, retail trade and construction, he said.

The one bleak note in the state's economic picture came from the non-durable goods manufacturing sector where employment peaked at 500,570 in January and thereafter declined by 12,000 through June, Connaughton said. Most of the losses were in the textile industry, which provides nearly 50 percent of those jobs.

Meanwhile, the N.C. Department of Revenue reported that state tax collections increased 21.6 percent in July, the first month of the 1984-85 fiscal year. General Fund collections were up $59.3 million — from $273.7 million in July 1983 to $333 million this July.

"That is very good and we are very pleased," said state budget director John A. Williams. "My only reservation is that we carefully avoid making a judgment on one or two months."

CAMPBELL FIRE — A building housing the Campbell University laundry and cleaning facilities was reduced to ruins Thursday by fire. More than 350 students were evacuated from other buildings as firefighters fought for three hours to control the blaze. University officials estimated the damage at $500,000. (AP Laserphoto)

Fire Guts University Building

BUIES CREEK, N.C. (AP) — Campbell University's laundry and cleaning building was gutted by fire, causing an estimated $500,000 in damages and forcing the evacuation of more than 350 students from campus buildings.

About 40 firefighters fought the blaze for about three hours before extinguishing it. No one was injured, officials said.

Tommy Harvell, chief of the Buies Creek Fire Department, said the fire probably was caused by a spark from a blowtorch being used by a roofing crew working atop the building.

The building's laundry and dry-cleaning equipment were destroyed along with the university's caps and gowns used for graduation ceremonies, said Lonnie Small, the university's treasurer and vice president for business.

Fire broke out in the cinder block and brick building shortly before noon and quickly swept through the building, causing the roof to collapse.

About 70 women were evacuated from Day Dormitory because of heavy smoke pouring into the building's open windows. Small said that as many as 300 students, faculty and staff members were forced to leave Marshbanks Dining Hall.

Campbell student Tricia Budzinski, 22, said that she was sitting in the Marshbanks Cafeteria when "this boy came in and said, 'Y'all better get out of here, there's a fire.'"

"But no one believed him. They just kept chovin' down," she said.

But when smoke began filling the cafeteria, disbelief turned to fear, Ms. Budzinski said.

"Nobody was running, but they were certainly hustling and busting," said the senior from Newton, Pa. "It was exciting but kind of scary — you know?"

School officials said they will use the university's old music building to begin distributing all salvaged clothing to students. Small said dry cleaning and laundry services will be contracted to a commercial laundry service, school since a 1967 blaze wiped out the math building.

Educators Say Curriculum Plan Would Be Helpful To Schools

By The Associated Press
St. Pauls School Superintendent Thomas F. Paquin is enthusiastic about a curriculum program under consideration by the state Board of Education that would ensure a minimum basic course of study for every student in North Carolina.

That's because students in St. Pauls city schools don't study art or music because there's no art or music teacher. The only reason any high school students get a physics class is because a science teacher is using a planning period to teach it.

"It's a good idea," Paquin said of the proposed program. "I think art is a very basic part of education. I'd like to see the state support that with [teacher] position like they do with English, math and science."

The program not only would lay out a basic curriculum, it would provide for smaller classes, at least 5½ hours a day of instruction and minimum standards for facilities, equipment and school materials.

One of the most important differences from the current educational system is that the program, if approved by the General Assembly, would be matched with the necessary funding.

Under law, the state education board must establish a recommended curriculum and local governments are supposed to carry it out. But funding isn't guaranteed. Often, school system must choose which courses to offer because of financial constraints.

"What we're proposing is a standard in the sense of a core curriculum," said Howard Maniloff, a special assistant for policy development in the state Department of Public Instruction. "This is a program that will be offered to all kids, whatever system they go to, and whatever equipment is needed will be provided.

"It is not a maximum, so that I would expect that the curriculum around the state would still vary because some communities might be able to put more money in, or will use the same resources differently.

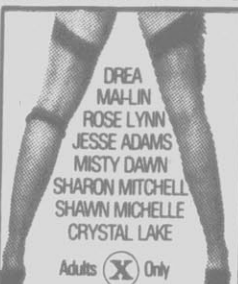

What would not vary is that every child would have access to at least the basic program."

The basic education plan was drafted under orders from the Legislature, which was concerned that educational opportunities varied depending on the school system. The plan, discussed at a board meeting Wednesday, will come up for a vote Oct. 4. If approved, it would be forwarded to the state Legislature for consideration.

WEEKDAYS

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, SEPT., 8, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day finds it advisable for you not to make changes and to maintain calm and poise to avoid unnecessary nervousness.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A day when you can act very swiftly one moment and later want to do nothing, so keep a steady pace and you can accomplish more.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An outside partner is apt to spoil your plans in the morning, but later a new contact gives good ideas for getting ahead faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be careful not to let dull tasks interfere with modern activities you want to engage in that can be profitable.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You have business to attend to in the morning, but your mind is on pleasure. Be more charming with your mate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You had better postpone that work at home and meet with partners for some settlement of an important matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get routine work done in the daytime and tonight you can enjoy some entertainment you like.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't permit some monetary worry to keep you from enjoying family life and pleasure you have long desired.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Put family's needs before your own today and tonight you can see good friends. Take any health treatments that you may need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A private worry could cause you to neglect outside duties that are important, if you permit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't allow some gossip person to take your valuable time away from whatever is important and practical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more concerned with important personal matters and put aside vocational tasks for awhile.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you run off on some tangent you can lose out on working out fine plans you have made.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be undecided whether to follow a conservative or unconservative kind of life, follow standard or New Age ideas, etc., so teach to combine the two and reach a happy medium, and then the success can be great. A nice personality here and fine manners come naturally.

Singer Ernest Tubb, 'Last Cowboy,' Dies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Honky-tonk music pioneer Ernest Tubb, dead after a long bout with emphysema, was mourned as "the last of the cowboys" and as a "classic" singer and guitarist who helped many of today's country superstars get their start.

Tubb, 70, known for such hits as "I'm Walking The Floor Over You," died Thursday at Baptist Hospital. He had been in poor health for about two years, and had been hospitalized since Aug. 10.

"I think all of us who were here back 45 years ago when this thing started feel that every time we lose one of the old-timers, we lose part of the foundation and I think that's what he was," said comedian Minnie Pearl, who like Tubb has been a regular on the Grand Ole Opry for more than 40 years.

Opry general manager Hal Durham said the show will pay tribute to Tubb during its broadcast this weekend.

Tubb, who always wore a cowboy hat in public, befriended many fledgling singers who grew to stardom, giving them air time on his "Midnight Jamboree" radio show that followed the Opry broadcasts.

Johnny Cash, Elvis Presley, Patsy Cline, Pat Boone, Loretta Lynn, the Wilburn Brothers and many more appeared on the show.

Known as the "Texas Troubadour," Tubb was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1965. He sold about 35 million records and recorded more than 250 in a career that spanned parts of five decades.

Joining the Opry in 1943, the Texan was one of the first in country music to use an electric guitar, and his "honky-tonk" sound featuring earthy lyrics influenced many singers of his day and figured in the recent resurgence of rockabilly groups.

In 1947, he led a group of Opry singers to New York for the first country music concert ever in Carnegie Hall.

Bunker Creator Says TV Too Bland

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — British writer Johnny Speight says today's television is bland. As the creator of the outrageous character that became Archie Bunker across the Atlantic, Speight speaks with authority about what touches nerves and what doesn't.

Those famous slurs against blacks, homosexuals and long-haired youth that became the stock-in-trade of actor Carroll O'Connor's Archie Bunker have their origin in Speight's British creation, Alf Garnett, the candidly bigoted boozier of the British Broadcasting Corp. series "Till Death Us Do Part."

American producer Norman Lear bought the idea for Archie Bunker from Speight, whose Garnett was called "Britain's most popular export since Scotch whisky" by a newspaper in 1974.

Ten years later, 64-year-old Speight sports the gold jewelry and healthy tan so common to successful entertainment industry figures, but his good fortune has in no way blunted his off-the-cuff, working class sensibility.

"What Alf did and what I tried to do was bring politics, religion and philosophy down to the street level where the average person understands it," Speight said through puffs on his cigar.

"When you talk about approximations and figures like 1 percent or 5 percent or the F.T. index, that doesn't mean a thing to most people," he said. "All they know is that pound in their pocket — that piece of crumpled filth they carry around with them — and how much it will buy today in a pub or a restaurant." "Till Death Us Do Part" ended a 10-year run in 1976, with the exception of a five-month reprise in 1981. It remains the highest-rated show in British television history — just as Alf has remained a part of his creator.

"They'd have to put me down under before I retire Alf," said Speight of the series that starred Warren Mitchell as the loud Alf, an East Londoner living with Elsa, his "silly old moo" of a wife, and Rita and Mike, his daughter and son-in-law.

Despite an average audience of 18 million viewers a week, the BBC has hesitated to air reruns of the show, a decision that angers Speight.

"The public right now would love him," he said, "but the bureaucrats have taken over on TV. Nowadays, everything has to go up to executive board meetings, with people who cannot read a script."

"TV has been taken out of the hands of the workers and given to the executives, and that's the way the system is. If you've got bland television that no one is complaining about and no one really notices, then your job is easier and safer," he said.

Speight was initially unsure whether the "so-British" humor of "Till Death" would translate to an American idiom. But he explained the success of "All In the Family" with an echo of the title of his award-winning television play, "If There Weren't Any Blacks, You'd Have To Invent Them."

"Every country has all the same bigotry, all the same targets to aim at, because you have to have something like that," he said.

Not limited to export to the United States alone, Alf Garnett also inspired an Australian series with a Garnett-like fellow named Norm Baker and a German one with a character called Alf Tetzleff.

"You depend upon the country's liberalism," Speight said, "In Germany, they made Alf look rather like Hitler. Willy Brandt took the show off the air because of this, but was forced to put it back on by public demand."

Speight's love of populist sentiment and talk of revolution may make him sound like a Marxist, but the dockworker's son from East London's Canning Town said that he arrived at his socialism not through Marx but through "the most remarkable writer I'd ever come into contact with," George Bernard Shaw.

Speight, who ended his formal education at age 14, recalled that the works of the playwright and essayist caused him to renounce his ambitions to become a jazz drummer.

"I sold my drums, bought a typewriter and it was as simple as that," he said.

Dali Given Skin Graft

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Doctors began a delicate skin graft operation on surrealist painter Salvador Dali today that they said was necessary to prevent a life-endangering infection.

Dr. Ramon Benedito, head of the medical team performing the operation at the El Pilar Clinic in Barcelona, said the operation would take at least four hours.

The 80-year-old painter was hospitalized Aug. 31, one day after he received deep second-degree burns on his upper legs, buttocks and groin from a fire in his bedroom at his 12th-century castle in Pubol, north of Barcelona.

The burns cover about 20 percent of Dali's body, doctors said.

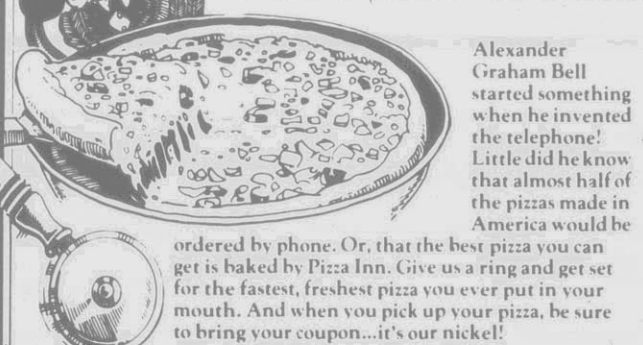

Dali agreed to the operation Thursday after Benedito explained him that his life was in danger.

Benedito said it would take several weeks for Dali to recover from the operation.

In the last few years the artist has suffered from depression, arteriosclerosis and Parkinson's disease.

"Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." This is the inscription on the front of the Post Office Building on Eighth Avenue in New York when the building opened on this day in 1914. Contrary to what many believe, this is NOT the motto of the U.S. Post Office and Postal Service. There is no motto. The inscription was actually a Latin saying provided by the building's architect.

Some Air Fares Going Up, Others Go Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Air fares are going up — and down — as the airlines encounter renewed turbulence at the ticket counter.

Industry giant United Airlines announced fare increases Thursday on its sprawling system, catching its competitors by surprise one day after struggling Braniff announced it was cutting its prices.

American Airlines and Delta Air Lines decided to match the cuts by Braniff, which said its success depends on it slashing fares and becoming a cut-rate airline.

Then, on Thursday, United opted to raise many of its fares.

"We'll match them," responded American spokesman Al Becker.

This time, Delta was less anxious to up the ante. "Good luck to them," said spokesman Jim Ewing, expressing puzzlement at the wisdom of raising fares as the industry heads into its lean fall and winter season.

Ewing said the United plan, affecting hundreds of cities in all 48 contiguous states, was far too in-involved for Delta to respond to without considerable analysis.

As competition widens, the concept of a single "fare" between any two points has all but disappeared. Some airline computer systems track hundreds of carriers worldwide and now follow as many as 820,000 schedules in 115,000 travel markets.

United's announcement came after Braniff, which collapsed once and has had a fitful rise from the ashes, ditched its six-month drive for business as a high-quality, full-service airline and went discount.

Braniff said Wednesday that its survival "depends on this basic change in our philosophy," and announced deep fare cuts and layoffs for 25 percent of its employees. It said it was scrambling to find its niche in the crowded skies over Dallas-Fort Worth.

The fare on Eastern, another big player on the Florida routes, is $99 one-way, but that could change at any time and is being reviewed, said spokesman Mark Wegel.

We are frequently asked to give one tip that would improve a person's play of the hand. Those who ask seem to expect some magical formula, and they are often disappointed by this simple piece of advice: "Whenever possible, make a defender commit himself before you play a key card to a trick." Declarer adopted that principle to bring home a slam contract on this hand.

North-South bid sensibly to a slam in spades. After South jumped in spades, North bid four diamonds to show his concentration of strength while at the same time confirming spades as trumps. South bid what he thought he could make.

West led the king of hearts, won in dummy. Had trumps been 3-2, declarer would have been playing for an overtrick, so he cashed the ace and queen of trumps. West's club discard on the second round was a disappointment. Now declarer had a sure trump loser, and he had to worry about his fourth club as well.

Since East was the danger hand, declarer planned his plays in the club suit so that East had to play before he did. He cashed the ace of clubs and continued with a low club from dummy. Since if he would be squandering his trump trick if he ruffed, East stuffed a diamond.

Declarer won the queen of clubs, crossed back to the table with a diamond and led another club. East was again faced with a losing option. Once more he decided to discard rather than ruff. Now declarer won the king of clubs and ruffed his last club in dummy. Whether East overruffed or not, he could score no more than one trump trick.

Panel To Seek Higher Postage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Rate Commission is expected to recommend today that the cost of a first-class stamp be raised to 22 cents from 20 cents.

The independent agency was holding a news conference today to announce its proposal, which goes to the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors for a decision.

The board can accept the recommendation, seek a revision or permit the rate change to take effect under protest and then ask the federal courts to review the hike.

It was not known if the five-member commission would make recommendations about the prices of other postal services.

Industry sources said the higher rate could begin as early as next February.

In a speech last week, Postmaster General William F. Bolger was less specific, saying a hike would most likely take effect early next year.

Bolger had sought an increase to 23 cents because "expenses have caught up to us and have exceeded our income," he said.

He said the postal service lost $118 million during a recent 28-day accounting period and that the situation would have been worse — a $195 million loss was projected — if mail volume hadn't picked up.

Bolger has estimated that if the Postal Service is to break even in fiscal year 1985, it needs $3.2 billion more income than it would receive at current postal rates.

When the postal service became a quasi-public corporation 13 years ago, replacing the cabinet-level Post Office Department, the price of a first class stamp was 8 cents. The last increase in stamp prices was in November 1981, when postage went from 18 to 20 cents.

NORTH CAR

Local Water Pleasures Highlighted Labor Day

BOATS WERE THE ORDER OF THE DAY . . . on Labor Day at Grimesland Seine Beach on the banks of the Tar River one mile north of Grimesland just off River Road (State Road 1566). The boat in the background is making a turn to retrieve two skiers who had lost their balance and fallen into the water. In the foreground, a boat is being put into the water. Some of the beach's visitors seemed to relish simply sitting in the sun and watching all the activities.

At Grimesland Seine Beach on Tar River, and at Whichard's Beach and Goose Creek State Park, both on the Pamlico River

ENDING A DAY OF SAILING . . . Don Bass, left, and Pat Pruitt, both of Greenville, are shown as they begin preparations to take their catamaran apart after a day of sailing. The two were among dozens of Pamlico sailors who enjoyed the Labor Day holiday on river waters of eastern North Carolina.

Labor Day. A day, or rather a weekend of getting away from jobs, house and yard work to soak in goodly measures of late summer sun, warm coastal water and lazy relaxation.

In the local area, a growing number of people are finding nearby water-oriented recreational sites an ideal alternative to longer trips to coastal beaches. Not only does it cost less in time and gas, but these places have the advantage at this time of not being over-discovered by too many visitors.

A survey of three principal water recreational sites within 12 to 40 miles of Greenville — Grimesland Seine Beach on the Tar River near Grimesland; Whichard's Beach between Chocowinity and Washington; and Goose Creek

State Park between Washington and Bath, reveals a mixture of local and non-local visitors.

An elderly couple from Pennsylvania said they knew about Goose Creek from a travel brochure they had picked up at the North Carolina border, and were delighted they had detoured from their Florida destination to take in the nature trail and cool forest paths at Goose Creek.

Two young ladies from Ohio are in North Carolina taking a bike tour of the state with a friend now living in Raleigh, but also an Ohio native. The three opted for a leisurely rest stop at Goose Creek.

Seven Spanish-English speaking workers, currently employed at tobacco warehouses in Wilson, agree they enjoy taking the hour-plus trip to Whichard's Beach to be around the water, and hopefully, to strike up acquaintances with local people. The men are from various towns in Texas. One commented that the Pamlico has much more water than the Rio Grande.

A number of parents stressed the advantage (and pleasure) of less preparation for an outing which in turn allows children more sun and water time without the tiredness that accompanies prolonged travel.

So while some people carried on farm work or were tied home by their jobs, thousands of eastern North Carolinians took to the road — for the larger, better-known coastal recreational sites, or, like those pictured on this page, to more convenient places closer to home.

UNDER WATCHFUL EYES . . . While youngsters swim and play in the beach area at Goose Creek State Park, parents on shore get some sun and conversation while keeping a watchful eye on the small ones enjoying the gentle roll of the shallow Pamlico River water.

Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

work on tobacco markets there, the four said they enjoy going to the beach on weekends and holidays to watch the girls go by — though they lamented all the girls seem either to be married or have boyfriends already.

A TRIO FROM OHIO . . . Three young ladies, all originally from Ohio, take the sun at the beach at Goose Creek State Park. From left to right are: Sue Girard of Cincinnati; Louise Synder of Dayton; and Chrjs

Simpson, an Ohioan now living in Raleigh. The trio are currently on a biking trip through North Carolina and stopped at Goose Creek to see the sights and soak in some sun.
