Diana Takes Aim For N.C. Coastal Area

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

WILMINGTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt today declared a state of emergency for southeastern North Carolina's coast as Hurricane Diana, loaded with 120 mph winds, headed for a possible landfall.

The declaration came as the National Weather Service labeled the storm "a dangerous hurricane."

A state official said the hurricane could hit the coast at 8 p.m. The weather service said the estimated landfall was at high tide for the Holden Beach area, increasing the danger of abnormally high water. Hurricane Hazel in 1954 left 17-foot tides.

The National Weather Service said tides "up to 12 feet above normal will occur along the coast and near where the storm makes landfall. This would make many of the roads impassable near the coast."

Diana slipped northward at about 10 mph, with its 10 a.m. location plotted at 32.7 north and 78.4 west, the National Weather Service said.

"There has been some evacuation going through the night," said Bob Melott, deputy secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety. "My understanding is most of Sunset Beach has been evacuated because the pontoon bridge there closed early."

Red Cross shelters were established, residents tied down their property and people with health problems were asked to leave the area voluntarily.

North Carolina Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Heman Clark said the hurricane could hit the coastline about 8 p.m. and urged residents of New Hanover, Pender and Brunswick counties to seek higher ground.

Coastal residents and tourists in South Carolina from Georgetown to North Myrtle Beach were under voluntary evacuation and officials there reported heavy traffic as people left those areas.

A weather service plane said the hurricane continued to build and turned northward to the North Carolina coast.

"Hurricane Diana is now a dangerous hurricane," the National Weather Service said. "Further strengthening is likely today."

Wayne Jones of the National Weather Service said even if the hurricane runs parallel to the state's coast there would be severe problems with high tides, high winds and erosion. A tornado watch was in effect for the southeast coast.

Stu Taber of the Red Cross in Wilmington said shelters would be prepared to receive evacuees by nightfall and that Coast Guard dependents had been evacuated from a station at Caswell Beach.

"We're worried about having to do an evacuation under darkness," said Emerald Isle Town Manager James Caldwell.

The weather service issued a warning for the area from Oregon Inlet southward, including Pamlico Sound, after Diana was upgraded from a tropical storm to a hurricane Monday morning.

Coastal emergency personnel in North Carolina were placed on a 48-hour standby after the weather service warned only a slight change in course could bring the hurricane ashore in Georgia or South Carolina.

Pitt Preparing For Emergency

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Officials were making plans today to open shelters if Hurricane Diana, headed toward the southeast coast of North Carolina at mid-morning, comes inland enough to affect Pitt County.

County Fire Marshal and Emergency Preparedness Director Bobby Joyner said officials this morning decided to open 13 schools as shelters in the event Diana, with winds up to 120 mph, strikes the county.

"Once the decision is made to open the shelters," Joyner said, people will be ready to staff them.

Joyner — listing the schools to be opened as Ayden Elementary, Grifton, W.H. Roberson, Bethel Elementary, Grimesland, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, Wellcome Middle, Falkland, Pactolus, Rose High, Third Street and Greenville Middle — said persons seeking shelter in the buildings should "bring blankets ... bedding ... no pets," with them. He said if needed, food will be supplied.

"At this point in time," Joyner said, "we'll be opening shelters for Pitt County residents. We'll go ahead and open all the schools if people from other counties start coming in." However, Joyner said state emergency preparedness officials "feel people on the coast are not going to do much evacuating" to inland counties.

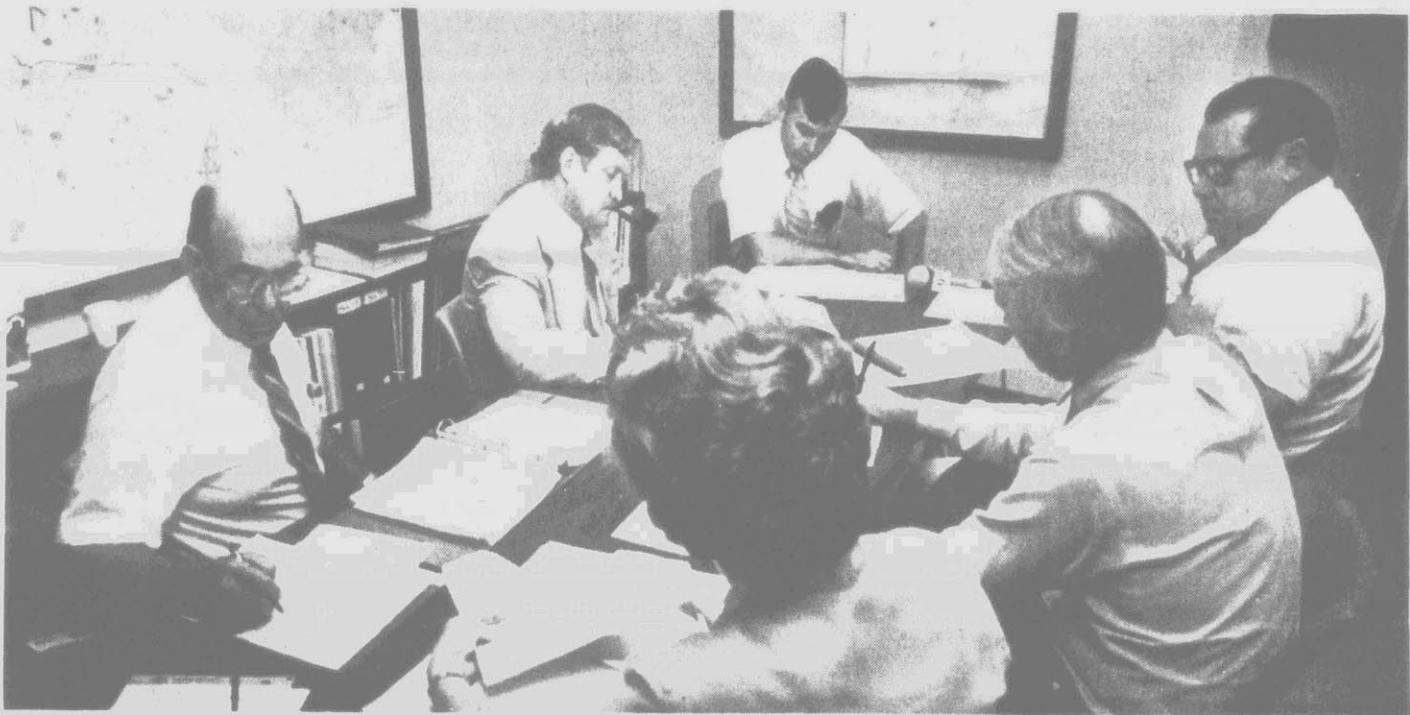

Emergency school closing information will be broadcast on the following stations: WITN-FM, WGHB-AM, WOOW-AM, WRQR-FM, WNCT-AM, and WBZQ-FM.

Mayo Allen, director of public works for the city of Greenville, said he met this morning with members of his department and "we have certain groups ready to stay overnight," if Diana threatens to hit the area tonight.

"We're making sure all vehicles are gassed up and ready to go ... have high water signs ready. Other than that, we're just sitting tight ... doing normal work today."

Allen said there are "certain areas

Jamesville Blacks Call Off Boycott, Return To School

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

JAMESVILLE — "All our black students have returned to school today, ending the five-day boycott," Jamesville School Principal Robert Jones reported this morning.

"There have been no problems whatsoever, and we're happy to have all our students back in school. We only hope now that school will not be disrupted by the hurricane along the coast," Jones added."

The boycott by black students in the K-12 school was instigated by a committee of blacks in the Jamesville School District protesting the appointment of a white staff member, Janet Kallen, as assistant principal to succeed a former black assistant principal, W.C. Moses, who retired at the end of the 1983-84 school year. Committee members said they had expected the appointment of a black to fill the vacancy.

School Superintendent Eugene Rogers said that Jones had made efforts to secure a black educator to succeed Moses, but none of the qualified persons offered the position had accepted.

"This situation has never been one in which tension has developed between students," Jones commented. "Basically, it has been the expression of a difference of opinion about administering the school."

Ayden Considers Dumpsters

By ANGELA LINGERFELT
Reflector Staff Writer

The Ayden Board of Commissioners and several Ayden merchants were involved Monday night in an unresolved debate over the board's proposal to buy Dempsey dumpsters for Ayden businesses.

"We have had a lot of people complaining about downtown Ayden being dirty. When the wind blows, there are boxes and oil cans and all kinds of stuff in the streets. I think new dumpsters would solve the problem," Mayor Ross Persinger said.

The merchants present were concerned about the exact cost to each business of operating the dumpsters, a figure that was not disclosed by the board, and the Health Department's stipulation that the dumpsters have to be kept drained.

"We want to know exactly how much it will cost us. If it's too much I would rather haul my own garbage," said Doug Stocks, owner of a local fish market.

"Some people get lax in hauling their own. I guarantee that 15 out of 20 people would have trash up and down the streets if we left it up to them. You would be unique if you kept yours emptied," Commissioner Marvin Baldree told Stocks.

"The dumpsters seem to be the best solution," Town Manager Don Russell said, "because we are spending too much time picking up crap at supermarkets. We need our people for other things. Our men have to go in with their hands and pick it up. This costs too much and takes a lot of time."

Other merchants were concerned that the Health Department would enforce its strict garbage regulations if the dumpsters were installed, something the Health Department has not been doing, they said.

Persinger said more information was needed before another discussion is held. A workshop session was set for Sept. 25 at 7:30 p.m.

In other business: "The board accepted a low bid of $9,198 from Graham Neville & Associates of Smithfield for insurance for the Ayden Housing Authority. This bid was substantially

Schools Agree To Get Band Instruments

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A lease purchase contract agreement to procure band instruments for the next five years for the Greenville city schools has been approved. Members of the school board Monday night authorized the administration to enter into an agreement to lease/purchase instruments on the basis of $21,108 annually for a five-year total agreement commitment of $105,540. The recommendation to enter into the agreement was presented by Dr.

Richard L. Preston, director of administration for the city schools. Preston told the board "the instrumental music program of the Greenville city schools has expanded to such an extent that it has become imperative that we procure more instruments as soon as possible."

He added that, to facilitate the program at the possible earliest date, "we obtained permission from the (state) Division of Purchase and Contract to negotiate bids for these instruments on an emergency basis." That authorization made it possible to contact contractors and to receive sealed bids without the time-consuming process of advertising bids, thereby saving time on moving ahead with the project.

Three companies were contacted, with two submitting bids. The low bid was submitted by the Pearson Music Co. of Durham.

The lease/purchase contract agreement contains the standard escape clause which allows the school board to vote to drop out of the contract at the end of any school year, either by paying the balance in full or by returning the instruments.

Superintendent Delma Blinson pointed out, before the vote was taken, that the agreement would be binding on a merged board in the event merger was effected before the end of the contractual period. He noted that the Pitt County Board of Education has entered into a similar contract for music instruments on the basis of $40,000 annually over a three-year period to help meet the needs of bands in four high schools

Cpl. Ken Thompson of the department's support services division said today that 400 of the cards have been returned to the department and he asked that businesses which have not returned the cards to "please return them."

Thompson said that the cards, which include the name of the business, street address, mailing address and phone number, as well as the names and telephone numbers of persons to contact in case of a police or fire emergency, are kept on file at police headquarters.

"The information is not given out to the public," Thomas said, and is for police use only. "It helps us get in touch with a responsible person in case of an emergency," the officer said.

Thompson said that firms not receiving a card in the mail and wishing to be included in the locator card file should call him at 752-3342.

Officers Seize Cocaine

Law enforcement officers concluded an undercover investigation Monday by arresting three Route 1, Greenville, residents on cocaine possession and sale charges and confiscated three pounds of cocaine and $33,000 in cash, according to Detective Cliff Weatherington.

Weatherington said Johnny Lee Warren, 34, and Patricia Ann Newby, 34, both of Route 1, Greenville, were taken into custody at a Greenville motel about 3 p.m., after officers purchased 2½ ounces of cocaine from them.

Warren and Newby were charged with possession, sale and delivery of cocaine.

As a result of that incident, Weatherington said, officers searched the Route 1, Greenville, home of Dalton Woodrow Worthington Sr., 69, and charged Worthington with possession, sale and delivery of cocaine after finding about three pounds of cocaine and $33,000 in cash in his dwelling.

Weatherington said the street value of the cocaine seized was set at $850,000.

Bond for Worthington was set at $750,000, while Warren's bond was set at $50,000. Bond for Ms. Newby was set at $15,000. All three were scheduled for first appearance hearings today.

The detective said agents of the State Bureau of Investigation, Greenville police, and Pitt County Sheriff's Department deputies participated in the arrests.

Library Wants Overdue Fine

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

In some cases, a slap on the wrist isn't enough. Then again, Willie Nelms says he doesn't feel someone should be sent to jail for having overdue library books. But those two measures are the only alternatives Sheppard Memorial Library now has for handling delinquent book borrowers, Director Nelms said.

"We really need some middle ground," he explained. "As things are right now, we can either give someone a slap on the wrist or hit them with a general statute. Most people aren't aware of this, but withholding $50 or more worth of library books is a Class H felony punishable by up to 10 years in the state penitentiary. Withholding less than $50 worth is a misdemeanor," he said.

That middle ground could be a $50 fine, if the City Council approves Nelms' suggestion at its regular monthly meeting Thursday night. Nelms said the alternative fine would not be used as a first step means; book users would be contacted three times before they were handed a citation.

"Approval of this request would give us teeth to go after books," Nelms said. "We basically operate on an honor system here, and while we hope that we would never have to pass out a citation, this will give us another lever to ensure that our books are returned."

Nelms said users would receive their first overdue notice when books were a month over due, a second notice on a quarterly basis and then a third notice, calling for return within 15 days. If the user still did not comply, then the $50 citation would be issued. "The user would then have 72 hours to pay the $50 fine, return or pay for the books and pay overdue fees," he said.

According to Nelms, the library only has to notify 3 percent of its patrons that books are overdue. "That," he said, "comes out to about 65 people a week."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Wit's End Tuesday

Who are these people who get sick and have no appetite? The ones who languish on the sofa and wave food away saying, "I'm just not hungry."

My body has never heard of starve-a-cold-feed-a-fever. It eats anything . . . anytime. I have been on the verge of going to that enchanted land in the sky where there are no wax build-ups or ring-around-the-collars, and I have whispered through cracked, feverish lips, "Could we pack a few sandwiches in case I miss dinner?"

I have friends who have dropped off seven or eight pounds in a week when they've "felt a cold coming on." But then they're the same people who gave birth to a ten-pound baby and wore a knit dress home from the hospital.

I have summoned nurses from my hospital bed in panic, wondering if there were seconds on the I.V.'s. The high spot in my entire hospital experience is when the menus are distributed.

Now I don't pretend to know the secrets of those who feel no need to "force something down for strength." These people are strange. But I do know that the medical profession has been sitting on a few secrets of its own for years now.

All the time we are struggling to get well, they are slipping us calories we don't even know about. Take the thermometer they pop in our mouths six times a day. Harmless, you say? That little sucker contains at least 35 calories. A tongue depressor? 50 calories.

Sleeping pills, 150 calories a pop. Ice water that they push on you like green beer on St. Patrick's Day . . . 75 calories.

And who among us has not felt our upper arms get fatter and flabbier every time they take our blood pressure? Huh? And if you think that paper bedroom slippers don't cause cellulite, you're out of it.

I have a friend who, every time she has her teeth cleaned, skips dinner and takes to the sofa. In less than 12 hours, she develops cheekbones like Katharine Hepburn, her midriff melts, the bulges drop from her thighs and her stomach becomes concave.

I have been "under the weather" for the past five weeks. I haven't been able to read, stay on my feet long, talk on the phone, write letters, or watch television. But I have been able to "force down" three tons of nourishment.

Yesterday, I weakly climbed into a pair of slacks. The zipper would not close.

It isn't fair.

Baking Soda Is Billed A Household Genie

"Hooray! We're saved — from sunburn, prickly heat, bad breath and acid indigestion."

CARTOON TIPS...To provide ideas for what bicarbonate of soda can do, its manufacturer has assembled a deck of cards, each with a cartoon on one side and appropriate tips on the other.

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)— Robinson Crusoe had his man Friday. Aladdin had his genie and today Americans have that jack-of-all-jobs — bicarbonate of soda.

It helps in the house, out of the house, on the road, under the hood, under the ground in septic tanks, in the mouth, in the stomach or even in a camper's shoes.

Used as an antacid, bicarb sports the GRAS rating from the Food and Drug Administration — Generally Regarded as Safe.

It also smothers fires and keeps the cat box from offending. It advances health by, among other things, clearing the air of other odors.

The people who make bicarb say there are 100 uses — at least.

Last year Americans used 616 million pounds of bicarbonate of soda, or baking soda as it also is called — about two-thirds in households; the rest, industrial. This year, consumption is estimated to be up 20 million pounds.

Statisticians at Dwight & Church Inc., the mothership for bicarb manufacturer Arm & Hammer, say consumption last year was 7.3 pounds per household.

Bicarbonate of soda has been made in America since 1839. Prior to that it was imported and expensive. Rochester, N.Y., is where made-in-America baking soda first was concocted by Dr. Austin Church.

He teamed up about seven years later with his brother-in-law, John Dwight, in New York City in what became a multi-million dollar company.

Technology also is available ultimately to produce baking soda from sea water.

To provide an idea of what baking soda can do, its manufacturer has assembled a deck of cards featuring cartoons on one side and appropriate tips on baking soda use on the other.

Tips on use are clumped into such categories as first aid, personal grooming and campers' companion.

For an insect bite, remove stinger, if present. Make a paste of baking soda and a few drops of water and apply to affected area. For sunburn, windburn or prickly heat, dump at least a handful of baking soda in a warm tub of water, then jump in.

For acid indigestion, drink one-half teaspoon of baking soda dissolved in one-half glass of water to relieve mild, temporary stomach upset.

For tired feet, soak the tootsies in a basin of warm water and bicarbonate of soda.

To get rid of bad breath, add one teaspoon of bicarbonate of soda to a half-glass of warm water and swish through teeth or gargle.

Bicarbonate of soda also can be sprinkled dry on a damp toothbrush to replace tooth paste.

Campers can deodorize boots and sneakers by sprinkling baking soda inside. It also cleans and deodorizes canteens, vacuum bottles and can be used to scour rust off iron cooking utensils.

If a pet picks up porcupine quills, mix two teaspoons of baking soda with one cup of vinegar and pat it on quills, wait 10 minutes, repeat the exercise, wait 10 more minutes. Then pull out quills.

There's even a way to make jewelry from play clay concocted with baking soda, cornstarch and water.

Other uses of baking soda detailed on the deck include small fire fighting, auto maintenance, interior car care, exterior car washing. Also: cleaning refrigerator, range, countertops, cooking utensils, house.

Baking soda originally was sold as a leavening agent for baked goods. Arm & Hammer historians say, adding that the first Arm & Hammer cookbook, titled "Valuable Recipes," was published in 1860 and "a million requests for it were filled."

The recipe that follows is from the Arm & Hammer "All Time Baking Soda Favorites" cookbook — 25 cents. Cookbook, Arm & Hammer Div. of Church & Dwight Co. Inc., Two Pennsylvania Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10001.

Skipping School Is Big Education Detriment

DEAR ABBY: Now that school has resumed, as a high school teacher, may I make a few suggestions that would greatly improve our nation's educational system and cost the taxpayers nothing?

Make school attendance a top priority!

A message to students: Stop skipping school because you don't want to face a challenging day. Accept those challenges and do your best. Your whole life will be filled with challenges, so learn to deal with them now—one day at a time.

A message to parents: Stop letting your children skip school to go shopping, to go hunting, to sleep in, to go on a family vacation, to nurse a minor ache, or whatever. It's your responsibility to see that your children get eight hours of sleep each night, eat nutritious meals (especially breakfast) and get to school on time.

A message to business people: Stop hiring students to work during school hours. And please stop hiring teen-age students to work after 8 p.m. on evenings before a school day. They need time to study and get a good night's sleep for school the next day.

A message to doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers: Please stop pulling students out of classes for non-emergencies to accommodate your schedules. Most students are dismissed at 2:45 p.m., so please give them late afternoon appointments. Their education is as important to them as the schedules of adult patients and clients are to professionals.

Abby, recent studies show that we are a nation at risk. In the last 10 to 15 years, the quality of our education has deteriorated dramatically. An appalling number of our high school students are certified illiterates, and absenteeism is one of the main causes.

Students who do not attend classes cannot be taught.

SMALL-TOWN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Bravo! Well stated. Students, parents, business people, doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers, please take note and make school attendance a top priority.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl and I'm very mature for my age. My boyfriend and I have become very serious, and I don't want to take a chance on getting pregnant. I'm afraid to ask my mom because I'm sure she wouldn't understand. How do you tell a woman who doesn't realize you're grown up yet that you want to go on the pill?

Please, hurry your answer before it's too late.

MAMA'S "BABY"

DEAR "BABY": Tell your mother just the way you told me. She will then realize that you are already in a very serious relationship, and although you seem like a "baby" to her, you are old enough to have one.

I am printing this so you can show it to her. It may get a dialogue going that will be helpful to both of you.

***

DEAR ABBY: I could have written the letter signed "Outraged." She wanted a snappy comeback for people who joked about the fact that her child's hair color was nothing like hers or her husband's.

My husband's hair is black and mine is blond, and we produced a son with flaming red hair. Believe me, I've heard my share of mailmen, icemen and milkmen jokes.

Here's how we handled it: When our son was about 4 years old, and people would ask him where he got his red hair, we taught him to say, "It came with my head."

Timely Reports

Figures on tobacco imports are read almost as closely as sales figures for tobacco these days. That is because tobacco imports have great impact on American-grown tobacco.

The tobacco grown by foreign countries and shipped to the United States can replace poundage produced by U.S. farmers, if it is the same type that is grown here.

The matter is important enough that the government has begun reporting leaf imports. The first report showed that nearly 12.5 million pounds of foreign flue-cured tobacco were imported during the first six weeks of the summer.

Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., said the report showed imports significantly up. However, Hugh G. Kiger, executive director of the Leaf Exporters Association Inc., said the report had little significance since it covered only a brief period.

It will take some time to build up figures which give a good comparison of tobacco imports, but it is important that the keeping of such statistics is under way.

Growers need to know how much tobacco is coming into the country to gauge their own production. If the imported poundage increases, it also tells us we must do a better job of producing and grading our tobacco to maintain the quality level that is imperative if American grown tobacco is to compete on domestic and foreign markets.

Ah-h-h, Autumn

Where did summer go? Well, if last week's weather was any indication it went in a hurry for eastern North Carolina.

A cold air mass moved in to drop nighttime temperatures to the 50s and to generate thoughts of football, autumn leaves and even Thanksgiving. Thankful home owners turned off the air conditioners, opened the windows and got out blankets. Long sleeve shirts and blouses and even sweaters were in vogue.

It would be unrealistic to think that there will not be more warm days in our Southern area, but this year Labor Day, which heralds the traditional end of summer, also ushered in fall weather. It's just as well. Summer temperatures sometimes extend well into September in our area, but fall must come.

Opinion Trends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Differences of opinion are what the cliché says makes horse races, but what makes them real contests are unknown facts.

Ronald Reagan vs. Walter Mondale, for example, may qualify as a horse race because it certainly involves differences of opinion, but judging from what is known as the run begins, it isn't much of a contest.

A UPI survey on Labor Day weekend showed Reagan running away with the election — carrying 39 states to Mondale's four with eight states in the tossup category. Some polls show Reagan more than 20 percentage points ahead.

However, there are some unknowns in the 1984 presidential contest, and depending on how they are revealed, there might be a real horse race yet.

Here are three factors that could make major differences:

1. The women's vote. The gender gap is real and the Republicans know it. That is why they decided in the first stages of the campaign to avoid giving the appearance of ganging up on Geraldine Ferraro.

It is known that a significantly larger percentage of women than men have opposed Reagan in the recent past, but does that represent only active feminists or is it an across-the-gender feeling?

The Republicans say the former is the fact and that the gender gap will narrow when pro-Reagan women are motivated. GOP pollsters indicate that already is beginning to happen. The Democrats say the more women who vote, the worse off Reagan will be.

A second question is whether the women's vote can be successfully organized. Democratic politicians say it can, but most of the proof they offer is based on local examples. In truth, the job they propose to do is a new element in politics.

2. The black vote. Some of the same questions raised about the women's vote apply here as well. Mondale certainly can rely on carrying a large majority of the votes cast by black citizens, but it is the size of the black vote that is the key factor. Mondale needs more black votes, not more of the black vote.

The question is whether the surge of new black involvement that attended Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign can be transferred to Mondale's. Simply put, will Jackson be as effective in registering new voters and getting them to the polls when he is working for Mondale rather than for himself?

There also is a possible backlash factor. Some observers say increases in black registration already are being echoed by a surge of white registration in certain areas.

3. The labor vote. The question here is whether working class voters will turn back to the Democratic Party after large numbers of them voted Republican in 1980. A lot of these people were out of work during the 1981-83 recession, but a lot also have gone back to work since.

Martin Content With Press Coverage

RALEIGH — "As I've gone around this state, the general pattern of news coverage of my campaign has been fair and generous."

North Carolina's Republican standard-bearers have had a long-running feud with what they consider to be the state's biased, liberal, news media. But one candidate on the Republican ticket, Rep. Jim Martin, GOP candidate for governor, is making statements like the one quoted above. The press has treated him fairly, he says, and he's got no gripes.

"My feelings do contrast with those of my Republican colleagues who have not felt that way about other races in North Carolina," Martin said in a recent interview. He was speaking primarily of the state's two Republican senators,

Jesse Helms and John East. "I've spoken with John and Jesse about this and they've told me that their problems stem more with the editors than with the individual reporters."

This is not to say that Martin doesn't have press problems. But, his campaign recognizes that some of the problems are their own fault and that others stem from the nature of newspapering.

Jack Hawke, Martin's campaign manager, says Martin has had trouble getting statewide coverage. "It's been frustrating because we've worked so hard ... but we just can't seem to get statewide coverage. For example, we make a statement in Winston-Salem, we'll get coverage there but not in Raleigh and Charlotte. If we want coverage in those cities, we have to go there and make the statement all over again."

Equally frustrating, Hawke says, has been Martin's inability to get press coverage of this summer's Martin rallies. Down east, he's drawn as many as 600 people to political events, but while local papers cover those rallies, the significance of such large crowds has not been reported around the state.

Is there a liberal news bias working against Martin here? Hawke says he doesn't think so. The media just isn't ready to begin covering that kind of story yet, he said.

Martin has been surprised with his showing on state editorial pages. He expected his conservative views to be hammered but, so far, that hasn't happened. In fact, he says he's gotten some favorable editorials from papers he expected to oppose him. But when it comes time for endorsements, Martin says he has no delusions that the liberal papers will pick him over Edmisten.

Martin's press operation, which started out well with Max Veale at the helm, has suffered since Veale had to resign. (Veale has been charged with soliciting a prostitute in a downtown Raleigh police sting operation.) Veale knows many of the Raleigh press which is covering this campaign. With Veale gone, reporters have lost their instant access to the inside of the Martin campaign and must now rely on Hawke, who is supposed to be running the campaign, not talking with the press.

There's still two months to go before election day and friction could still develop between Martin and the press reporting on his campaign. If that friction doesn't develop, it might be one of the most surprising stories of the campaign.

Public Forum

To the editor:

One of Greenville's finest resources is the Sheppard Memorial Library.

Elizabeth Copeland, the retired director, and Willie Nelms, the current director, have developed the Pitt-Greenville community library system into one of which we can be justifiably proud. And it is available to all of us free of charge with a very accessible schedule of operating hours. I would like to publicly congratulate Mr. Nelms and his competent and courteous staff for providing to this community an invaluable service.

To the editor: A funny thing happened in the second Helms-Hunt debate. Hunt figured he had old Jesse dead and buried and was going to write his obituary, but Jesse ain't dead!

Did you see Hunt's cute little mouth tighten and pucker up when Jesse asked him about Mather Slaughter? Neither Hunt nor ex-Admiral Green (Ports Directory) can explain what the man does. Maybe Tom Taft (chairman Ports Authority and Pitt County Democratic nominee for state Senate) can! Could this just be the tip of the iceberg, how many more are on the payroll (yours and my taxes) just to work for Hunt? That Hunt, chessey cat grin vanished and it looked like he had just eaten a persimmon (you can bet he was glad when time was up).

Jesse came out swinging, proud of (not apologizing for) his no vote against the Martin Luther King holiday, as he is proud of his no vote against the Panama Canal giveaway (Hunt as a Carter-Mondale liberal would have voted yes with both hands). When Jesse votes no, you can bet he is voting America-first, he is voting your interest and mine.

Just wait until Jesse asks Jimmy Boy about the use of state helicopters and the use of Highway Patrolmen as errand boys. Jim, you ain't seen nothing yet, Jesse ain't dead!

Ray Masten
Greenville

To the editor: The "drunken sailor" label cast at the Democrats at the Republican Convention reflects more on the artificial prosperity of this administration. Borrowed (deficit) money is not income. Add to this deficit the losses in balance of trade and we face a national debt which exceeds those of all previous administrations from Jimmy Carter to George Washington. Arab monies in U.S. banks that can be withdrawn in reprisal and Japanese purchases of grain elevators over the Midwest are just the tip of the iceberg to our threatened economy. If a balanced budget is a serious plank in the Republican Platform — why not submit one to Congress?

The priorities in the Republican platform (part of which were written by a religious con man) bespeaks a lack in sense of proportion and do no address political or economic reality. The Republicans suggest tampering with the Constitution and its continued assurance of church and state separation. Concerned religious groups (Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and other) who minister to their congregations and their communities are not to be confused with religious exploiters who say "give" on TV but are not around to assist the needy, the unfortunate, or those seeking spiritual counsel when needed.

A sound economy is the front line of defense. Future generations deserve more than this deficit riddled administration has to offer. Had Jack Kemp and Ronald Reagan been successful in their original choice of vocations — we would have been spared the "jerry built" economic theories of Kemp and the "script reading" pronouncements of Reagan who serves as a conduit for self-serving interests and unsound economic policy.

No Time For Convention

WASHINGTON — Despite the recent setback in California, proponents of a national constitutional convention still are whooping it up for their misguided venture. Nothing is going to come of the talk, but the topic merits a few minutes of your time.

By way of background, you will recall that our Constitution permits amendment in two ways. The first procedure, which has been used for all 26 amendments thus far, authorizes the Congress, by a vote of at least two-thirds in each house, to submit a resolution to the states. If three-fourths of the states ratify the amendment, it becomes part of the Constitution. The second procedure starts not with the Congress but with the states. If two-thirds of the state legislatures apply to Congress, then the Congress shall call a convention for proposing amendments. Any amendments approved by such a convention then must be submitted to the states for ratification, and the same three-fourths requirement must be met.

Over the past 80 years the state legislatures have peppered Congress with scores of petitions.

The idea of a constitutional convention is back in today's news because 32 states have petitioned Congress on the matter of a balanced federal budget. If another two states make valid applications, presumably the mandatory clause would be triggered and Congress "shall call" a convention. For a time it looked as if California might become No. 33, but the state's Supreme Court last month quashed a citizens' effort to conduct a referendum in November. Now Montana and Michigan appear to be the next possibilities.

In my own estimate, the probabilities of such a convention's actually being held range between nil and nothing at all. I say this chiefly for this reason: Nothing is going to happen before 1985, and in 1985 the petitions of Maryland, Mississippi and North Dakota will be 10 years old. The petitions of Alabama, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania will be nine years old. Would these be considered valid applications? It seems most unlikely. The general rule in related matters is that seven years should suffice to satisfy the principle of "contemporaneity."

But let us suppose, to be supposing, that two more states do petition for a constitutional convention on a balanced budget amendment. Let us further suppose that Congress has adopted the pending Hatch Bill to provide the machinery for such a convention. The bill would authorize a convention of 535 members, elected as senators and representatives are elected. The convention could not consider any subject matter "different from that stated in the concurrent resolution calling the convention." If the convention went beyond the drafting of an amendment dealing with a balanced budget, the bill would permit Congress to refuse to submit the proposal to the states at all.

In 1971 and again in 1973 the Senate passed such enabling machinery, but the House has dawdled and the bill is dead for this session of Congress. The bill ought to pass, simply to have an orderly statute on the books. But our hypothesis is that the Hatch Bill has become law, and that a convention has been called. To listen to some critics — Maryland's Sen. Charles McC. Mathias is a leading voice of doom — the prospect is too horrible to contemplate.

Mathias is much too intelligent a man to join in the calamity howling. We are just as likely to have a runaway Congress as a runaway convention. In the end, three-fourths of the states must ratify any proposed changes, and the states are in no mood to ratify anything. A balanced budget amendment is a bummer, and a constitutional convention is an idea whose time has not yet come.

Strength For Today

Twice in the Book of Acts (7:48; 17:24) we find the statement that God does not dwell in temples made with hands. Where then does he dwell?

We know so little about the nature of things material and spiritual that we find it hard to apply words like "where," "what," and "how" when we speak of God.

But we can say two things about the dwelling place of God. The first is that he is in heaven. What is heaven?

We can only say that it is a place consistent in glory and appointment to the power and majesty of God.

But let us never feel that God is removed from us.

His most important dwelling place so far as we are concerned is the human heart. We are so constructed by God himself that if we permit him to do so, the Most High comes into our hearts and there abides to give us happiness, peace, security and power.

Graham Urges Soviet Priests To Bear Witness

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham today urged Soviets studying to become Russian Orthodox priests to bear continual witness to their faith, even when persecuted.

only two such institutions surviving under the Soviet Union's atheist communism.

Graham, a Baptist, appeared at the seminary before a scheduled appearance at Leningrad's Baptist Church. Two people told the Associated Press they were Baptists from Central Asia who had traveled thousands of miles to hear him preach.

Graham said there was "no way" he could ask listeners in his Soviet audiences to "come forward" in churches as they sometimes do at his revival meetings in the United States and other countries. However, he said he would ask listeners to raise their hands, as he often does at American universities, to signify that they want to be born-again Christians.

Quoting from Galatians, Graham told the seminary students and faculty they should always show "the spirit, love, joy, peace, long-suffering, fullness, kindness, self-control," of Christianity.

"People will see you," he said. "After a while they will ask what makes you different. You may go through hard circumstances. You may suffer or may be in prison like Apostle Paul."

"What were they doing? Moaning? Crying? No. They were singing. And even the jailer came to Christ."

That was the only public reference by Graham, who has visited the Soviet Union several times but is making his first preaching trip outside Moscow, about Soviet persecution of Christians.

An estimated 300 Soviet Baptists are incarcerated in prison camps, jails or psychiatric hospitals. Members of other religions also have said they are persecuted for their beliefs, Graham told reporters he would probably bring up the issue in private talks with Soviet officials.

Graham began his day with a meeting with Leningrad members of the Soviet Peace Committee, a state-sanctioned organization propagating the Soviet government policy on disarmament issues.

When Graham ended a 10-minute speech at the meeting expressing his conviction that "the kingdom of God will come," a Soviet newspaper journalist spoke up.

Leningradskaya Pravda reporter Boris Feld said that if the world was peaceful and freed of nuclear weapons "regardless of the fact that I am an atheist I will call that the kingdom of God."

Another Soviet chimed in, "If that is the kingdom of God we are prepared to enter it."

"We must open that door as wide as possible," Feld said.

"That's why I am here," Graham replied.

Graham added that he hoped President Reagan and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, scheduled to meet in Washington on Sept. 28, will discuss the elimination of nuclear weapons.

Graham's speech at the seminary was his first religious discourse in public on his 12-day tour of the Soviet Union.

The students who heard it listened intently and applauded politely. A student in his early 20s called it "an unusual speech. It spoke about our problems. It was useful."

Graham began by saying he had abandoned a prepared text on the mission of the church in favor of recounting personal experiences. His talk included anecdotes about his faith and how it works in his marriage, a description of personal doubts some years ago about the veracity of the Bible and experiences speaking to American students.

Graham's current trip will take him to Tallinn and Novosibirsk as well as Moscow. On Monday, Graham laid a wreath at Leningrad's Piskarovskoye Cemetery.

The cemetery contains a grave of some of the 1 million people who died during the 900-day World War II siege of Leningrad.

"This monument today is not only a sobering memorial to the past, but a warning of the future as well," Graham said. "Quite possibly we are living in the most dangerous time since the dawn of human history ... Every sane person agrees that steps must be taken to reduce this danger."

Murder Suspect Knew Victims

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — A man charged with murdering eight people two years ago on their fishing boat attended the victims' memorial service and was in a picture on their mantel, said a friend who described the suspect as "a real pleasant guy."

John Kenneth Peel, 24, was arrested Monday and held on $1 million bond in the killings aboard the 58-foot Investor, a salmon boat on a fishing trip to Alaska when it burned to the waterline in September 1982 with a couple, their two children and four others aboard.

Authorities had determined that Investor owner and skipper Mark Coulthurst, 28, of Bellingham and his wife, Irene, 28, had been shot in the head as the boat lay anchored in the fishing community of Craig, Alaska.

Wearing a ski mask and bullet-proof vest for security reasons, Peel was arraigned Monday. A hearing was scheduled for Oct. 9 at which time a decision on extradition is expected.

"The arrest is a product of checking out all of the possible investigative leads, everything we've had," said Paul Edscom, a spokesman for state troopers in Anchorage, Alaska. "Basically, it's the result of two years of investigation."

During that time, troopers received phone tips "from more than one person" that they look at Peel in their investigation, said Sgt. James Stogsdill, the Alaska state trooper in charge of the investigation.

While declining to elaborate on the evidence against Peel, Stogsdill said it comprises a "three-pronged case" including physical and circumstantial evidence and eyewitness accounts.

Stogsdill said authorities have no motive for the murders.

Ketchikan District Attorney Mary Anne Henry said Monday that four witnesses who identified Peel from photographs said they saw him rowing a skiff from the vessel as it burned.

She said a sixth witness told authorities that Peel bought two 2.5-gallon jugs of gasoline on the day of the fire. Investigators believe gasoline was used to burn the boat.

Edscom said Peel was a crew member on the Investor in 1981 and was working in Craig when the Coulthursts and their crew were slain.

Peel "always seemed like a real pleasant guy," said Caroleann L'Hirondelle, a friend of the Coulthurst family.

She said Peel had paid his respects to the family and attended a memorial service for the victims. The Coulthurst family had a picture of the Investor crew, including Peel, on its mantelpiece, she said.

"He came to the house to say, 'I'm really sorry,'" she said. "If he did do it (the killings), what kind of jerk is that? It makes me sick."

Investigators said the victims were killed the night of Sept. 5 while the Investor lay at anchor 60 miles northwest of Ketchikan.

Export Barriers Being Dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department has dropped plans to clamp stringent government controls on the export of certain high-technology products. Instead, the department has unveiled a plan that relies heavily on self-policing by U.S. companies.

At issue are the department's distribution licenses. These licenses allow exporters of high-technology equipment such as computers to ship products to several destinations under a single permit. U.S. companies use these blanket licenses to ship about $20 billion in exports annually.

The new proposed rules come nine months after a January set of changes was greeted with widespread industry criticism. Some 250 U.S. companies complained that the January proposal would generate unnecessary paperwork, delay shipments and result in the loss of business to Japanese and European competitors.

In the changes announced Monday, the department said it had dropped plans to require that companies certify that their customers will not re-export the goods without U.S. permission. The department also backed down from its initial demand that foreign companies receiving U.S. goods provide lists of their customers.

Critics had complained that it was highly unlikely that foreign companies would surrender their customer lists for fear that U.S. companies would try to sell to them directly.

Instead, the new set of rules will require companies to monitor their export practices internally in such a way that the Commerce Department will be able to audit how well they are following proper procedures. To enforce the rules, the department is expanding the number of penalties it can impose on violators and will increase the number of people who will be conducting the audits.

The department said the new rules will not take effect until after a 60 day comment period has expired.

Department officials expressed the hope that the new requirements will strike the proper balance between national security concerns over the diversion of sensitive technology to the Soviet Union and complaints by U.S. companies that they are losing out to foreign competitors because of the regulatory red tape.

In a statement, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said, "We are confident our new proposed rules ... will materially strengthen the distribution license procedure without imposing unnecessary regulatory burdens on U.S. exporters."

Business Expansion To Hit Record High

WASHINGTON (AP) — American businesses are planning to spend a record $307.6 billion on modernization and expansion in 1984, 14.3 percent above the amount spent last year, the government reported today.

Business investment actually declined 4.8 percent last year to $269.2 billion despite the relatively robust recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

The latest Commerce Department business survey, taken in July and August, confirmed earlier projections that capital spending in 1984 would increase at the fastest clip since 1966.

The 14.3 percent rise is expressed in actual spending. When the effects of inflation are taken out, the increase is 13.3 percent, compared to a 3.6 percent inflation-adjusted decline in 1983.

With the nation's factories now operating at more than 82 percent of capacity, economists say the strong drive to expand and build new facilities should continue.

The increase in capital spending is expected to sustain the economic recovery as the earlier surge in consumer spending begins to taper off.

The Reagan administration has attributed much of the strength in business spending to the investment incentives included in the tax cuts passed by Congress in 1981.

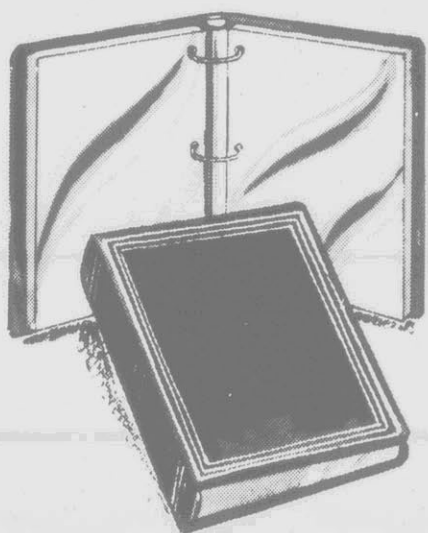

The latest survey reflected a slight drop from the previous estimate, made in April and May. At that time, spending, after adjusting for inflation, was projected to rise by 14.8 percent instead of the latest estimate of 13.3 percent.

The change, the department said, resulted from a decrease in expectations by non-manufacturing industries that more than offset an upward revision in spending plans by manufacturing industries.

After adjusting for inflation, manufacturing industries projected a 15 percent increase in capital investment this year compared to an earlier projection of 13.8 percent in the April-May survey.

Non-manufacturing industries projected a 12.1 percent increase compared to a 15.4 percent earlier estimate.

Mondale Challenges Reagan On Deficit

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

With his tax-increase plan for cutting federal red ink on the table, Walter F. Mondale is challenging President Reagan "to stop avoiding the deficit issue." But Vice President George Bush says there's no need for Reagan to offer a plan because "the people know where we're coming from."

Bush, campaigning in the South while Reagan continued his break from the campaign, responded to the Democratic presidential candidate's unveiling Monday of a $177 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts designed to slash the budget deficit.

"It looks to me like a program for failure and for turning this country back to the economic gloom and doom it was in when we took office," Bush said.

Reagan, who is heading out Wednesday for political events in Buffalo, N.Y., dismissed Mondale's proposals as "nothing new" during a White House photo session.

Bush was going today to Charleston, S.C. — where a hurricane warning was in effect because of Hurricane Diana — before flying to Columbia, S.C., and on to Atlanta.

Mondale revealed his proposal in Philadelphia, and he was hoping to put the president on the defensive as he set out for Chicago and Green Bay, Wis., today to hammer away at the budget issue.

"I challenge Mr. Reagan to stop avoiding the deficit issue and start telling you what he intends to do about it," said Mondale. "Right now, Mr. Reagan, all my cards are on the table — face up."

"Americans are now calling your hand. Let's see it, let's debate it," Reagan has not offered a similar plan for cutting the deficit. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan belittled Mondale's plan as "budget gimmickry" and said the administration would offer its ideas in the 1986 budget — to be presented to Congress after the election.

Bush, too, said there was no inclination to meet Mondale's challenge and put forward an administration proposal for deficit cutting.

"I don't see any propensity on the president's part to do that," Bush said while campaigning in North Carolina.

Asked if the American people didn't deserve more information, the vice president replied:

"No, I don't think so. I think they know if there's ever a president that the American people understood the direction he's going and wants to go, it's this president. They know he wants to hold down spending. They know he is opposed to taxes."

"I think the people know where we're coming from. We're saying, just stay on this general course we're on," Bush added.

While Mondale was debating Reagan's surrogates at a distance, his own running mate remained embroiled in a controversy over the abortion issue.

Campaigning in Toledo, vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro talked by telephone with New York Catholic Archbishop John J. O'Connor, who said over the weekend that she had misrepresented the church's position on abortion.

Ms. Ferraro, a Catholic who says she opposes abortion but supports a woman's right to choose to have one, said she told the archbishop he was wrong. O'Connor said he had not changed his mind.

"The tone of the conversation was very, very amiable," the head of the New York archdiocese told reporters after celebrating Mass in a Manhattan church. "There was no hostility on either side."

But O'Connor said, "I think that she has misrepresented the teaching of the Catholic Church."

President To Charge Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a move likely to stir campaign debate, plans to issue a report within a week accusing the Soviet Union of flouting nearly a quarter-century of arms control agreements, administration and congressional sources say.

The report will be sent to Congress and its principal findings made public over the objections of the State Department, which was concerned about the potential impact on strained U.S.-Soviet relations, the sources said Monday.

Conservative Republicans in Congress have been urging the White House to release at least some of the material, initially submitted to Reagan last November. They argued it would expose a "Carter-Mondale coverup" of Soviet violations of the 1972 and 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties with the United States.

Reagan's White House advisers, led by Robert C. McFarlane of the National Security Council, prevailed, the sources said. The full report will be sent to Congress and a summary of it made public.

Reagan, stressing verification difficulties, has taken a skeptical approach toward dealing with Moscow. His Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, has stressed the dangers of the ongoing nuclear arms race and urged new efforts to reach agreements.

The report was prepared by Reagan's General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament.

Duarte Orders Reorganization Of Controversial Police Units

EL PARAISO, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte has ordered the reorganization of the country's three principal police forces, which human rights activists say are linked to rightist death squads.

Duarte told a group of army officers during a visit Monday to a military base in El Paraiso that the reorganization of the National Police, the National Guard and the Treasury Police will help reduce human rights abuses in the war against leftist rebels.

The three forces, numbering 12,000 men, have overlapping responsibilities and tasks with no clearly defined jurisdictions, and their commanders often are criticized for evading responsibility for abuses by shifting the blame on each other.

Duarte gave no details of the reorganization plan other than to say the National Police will be turned into an urban force, the National Guard into a rural force and the Treasury Police will be combined with the tiny Customs Guard and renamed the National Patrimonial Police.

The National Guard and National Police will divide functions that have been shared by all three units, from handing out parking tickets to helping the 33,000-member military fight the war.

Military sources said Carranza was fired primarily because of U.S. pressure after published reports accused him of having links to right-wing death squads and receiving money from the CIA. He has denied both allegations.

REFLECTION — Pope John Paul II reflects while holding the sceptre during a moment at a Mass in Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Quebec, Monday night. The pope, protected by stepped-up security, planned to meet today with priests at a basilica in Montreal where a layman is said to have worked miracles, to visit the tomb of a pioneer nun he canonized two years ago, to beatify another nun, and to address thousands of young people in an evening rally at Olympic Stadium. ## Storms Hamper Salvage Of Radioactive Cargo OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — A fierce North Sea storm today prevented salvage workers from determining whether 30 containers of radioactive material have been swept from the broken hull of a sunken freighter.

Waves up to 18 feet high ripped open the hull of the Mont Louis on Monday, raising fears that the steel barrels of slightly radioactive uranium hexafluoride might have been washed from the vessel. The ship, which sank after colliding with a ferry Aug. 25, lies 12 miles off the Belgian coast.

A crisis committee of government and salvage company officials, including Prime Minister Wilfried Martens, was meeting today to assess what Belgium's environment secretary, Firming Aerts, called a "serious" situation.

Strong winds and huge waves continued to hinder salvage efforts today, as they have since the vessel went down.

On an aerial pass over the wreck this morning, huge waves could be seen crashing over the 4,210-ton freighter. A gap of several yards in the above-surface section of the ship could be seen, although the submerged bow was not visible. The ship lies in water that is 46 feet deep at low tide.

The ship's hull was torn apart at the point where salvage workers had made a hole two weeks ago in hopes of retrieving the barrels of uranium hexafluoride, said Henk Drenth of the Dutch salvage company Smit Tak International.

Marc Claus, nautical director of the pilot service in Ostend, said Monday that the ship's hull broke under "the continuous attacks of the waves."

Reagan, Gromyko To Meet Sept. 28

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on Sept. 28 at the White House, the first meeting between Reagan and a senior Kremlin leader, administration officials say.

The meeting is certain to be seen as reflecting a slight thaw in U.S.-Soviet relations, one U.S. official said.

But it also may be viewed as an effort by Reagan to deflect criticism by Democratic presidential hopeful Walter F. Mondale that Reagan is the first president in years not to meet with Soviet leaders.

Gromyko will come to Washington from New York, where he will attend the opening of the United Nations General Assembly. He already is scheduled to meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz in New York on Sept. 26.

Reagan will address the U.N. General Assembly on Sept. 24, but it was decided to arrange the meeting with Gromyko in Washington.

The Mont Louis was carrying uranium hexafluoride to the Soviet Union where it was to be enriched.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market shot up broadly in active, early trading today, getting a lift from falling interest rates in the bond market.

Part of the enthusiasm was attributed to a prediction from Henry Kaufman, the influential chief economist at Salomon Brothers Inc., of smooth sailing for short-term interest rates in the next few weeks.

With more than 1,000 stocks rising in price at midday, advances out-paced declines by more than 3-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 4.86 points Monday, was up 13.14 points at 1,215.66 two hours into today's session.

Analysts said traders were encouraged by a slide in a key short-term interest rate, which earlier had touched off a rally in the bond market.

The federal funds rate, the interest on overnight loans between banks, has retreated below 11.5 percent following an aggressive move by the Federal Reserve System to pump funds into the banking system since the end of August.

Meanwhile, Kaufman, who has been predicting sharply higher interest rates, said that at least for the next few weeks, the federal funds rate would hover between 11 percent and 11.5 percent.

But he stuck to earlier forecasts of rising rates in 1985 and said he expected the prime rate to rise to 13.5 percent before this year ends, from the current level of 13 percent.

The NYSE's composite index gained .98 to 95.59. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .96 at 212.97.

Big Board volume climbed to 51.28 million shares a third of the way through today's session, against 31.36 million in the same period Monday.

American Agronomics topped the active list in the early going on the NYSE, unchanged at 2, in trading that included a block of 2 million shares changing hands at $2 a share.

Financial Corp. of America climbed 5/8 to 7. William Popejoy, the new chairman of the corporate parent of American Savings & Loan, reported a slackening in the outflow of deposits from the troubled thrift institution.

"We're trying to anticipate the worst and hopefully those things won't come about," said Brian Robert, the Carolina Beach building inspector who said builders were told to tie down construction materials.

Wrightsville Beach Police Chief George Antley said emergency plans were ready and emergency equipment had been checked, leaving officials to wait for word on the storm's path.

On Ocracoke Island, state officials said the 4:20 p.m. ferry to Cedar Island would be the last until further notice because of the storm's threat. Campers on the island were sent home as a precaution.

Some shallow flooding and beach erosion were reported at Atlantic Beach, while ocean overwash occurred on N.C. 12 at the north end of Ocracoke Island, while winds gusted up to 38 mph in some places.

Thomas Hinton, civil preparedness coordinator for Carteret County, said his area was "well prepared for evacuation if it becomes necessary."

Ralph Cantrell, assistant director of the Office of Coastal Management in Raleigh, said studies have shown the most vulnerable areas on the coast are the beaches facing south. They include beaches in Brunswick County, along the Bogue Banks and Cape Hatteras.

He said beaches facing east, like Wrightsville Beach and Nags Head, are less likely to suffer severe damage.

Planes at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro were sent to inland bases because of the storm's threat.

and eight junior high schools in the county.

Approval was given to contributing $1,110 to the North Carolina School Board Association to help in a statewide program to raise funds for the association to purchase a building for its headquarters. Officials of the association feel it is better economically to purchase a property rather than continue to pay rent at an ever-increasing rate.

Blinson said there were two ways to procure the $1,110 contribution — by board authorization to permit a budget appropriation for the amount, or by an attempt to solicit money from private firms and businesses. He suggested that, in view of the number of area solicitations already made for support of schools through booster clubs and in other ways, the budget appropriation approach was more desirable.

Commenting on the influence the association has with the state Legislature, Blinson added, "This organization more than any other education organization in the state supports education across the board."

lower than the four other agencies who submitted bids.

Persinger was appointed commissioner and Jordan Horne was appointed alternate to the Ayden Power Agency.

The commissioners changed the date of the next Ayden Planning Board meeting from Oct. 1 to Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. J.R. Reaves and Mrs. Jean Jolly were reappointed to the Ayden Library Board of Trustees for three-year terms.

whereas most other groups have a special interest to promote."

School policy File J1 was approved on a second reading. The policy deals with administrative action relative to records of students of separated or divorced parents. It gives guidelines for the manner of indicating on school records the status of each parent relative to access to school records, visitation at school rights, and policy directions for other situations that might arise.

Two reports on school opening were presented, one on elementary schools by Charles Ross, one on secondary schools by Rebecca Oats. Both reported an excellent opening, with a minimum of adjustments.

To date, there are 30 more students enrolled in K-3 than at the end of the last school year with one less teacher than last year. The 4-6 grades show an increase of four students, with two more teachers assigned these grades than were assigned last year. Ross explained that the current school year is the first time that the new legislative mandated ratio of one teacher per 26 students has been in effect for grades 4-6. He noted that kindergarten classes at Third Street and Elmhurst were overcrowded and that some adjustments or approval of excess numbers would have to be considered.

In response to reports that some students at the secondary level do not yet have textbooks, Rose High Principal Howard Hurt said about 50 high school students were still without one of their required books; and Aycock Junior High Principal Kay Whitehurst said the number without one of the textbooks at that school was approximately 50 to 75. Both noted efforts had been made to avoid shortages by ordering at the earliest possible date, in July.

Pros Delight Fans Despite Rain

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Jerry Pate says he's fine, thank you, but please quit asking. Pate, who put together two fine rounds to finish fourth in the Bank of Boston tournament last weekend, was in Greenville yesterday to participate in the Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Tournament, benefiting the Ronald McDonald House to be built here. And while rain washed out most of the action, the pro match between Pate and others was held with several hundred spectators following the two foursomes. Reynolds May, chairman of the event, announced that the main part of the tournament would be played on October 8, but the guest celebrities would not be present for that day's play. Pate, teamed with former five-time British Open champ Peter Thomson, Country Club of North Carolina pro Buck Adams, and local amateur Harriette White, contested the team of Tommy Aaron, former British Open winner Kel Nagel, former PGA titleist Chandler Harper and LPGA member Terri Luckhurst in a superball event. The Aaron team won by a stroke, buoyed by the play of Luckhurst, who's strength off the women's tees gave her male teammates (playing from the further back championship tees) an added bonus.

Pate missed nearly two years of competition when he tore a muscle in his left shoulder while hitting practice balls in 1982. He tried to continue play and aggravated the injury, which eventually involved nearly every muscle in his shoulder. Too often, he said, he tried to come back too quickly. Then, this year, he laid off from April to July, coming back for the Kings Mill tournament at Williamsburg. "I played terrible," Pate said, "but I put myself under a lot of pressure to play well. "The biggest problem is having the media and friends and fans keep asking about it. It's like you had a death in your family two years ago, and people keep coming up and saying, 'Sorry to hear about your dad.' I'm just tired of it now and would like to dwell on other things. I work hard, exercise and run about four miles almost every day." Pate admits that he still has times when he "flinches," and says its both physical and mental. "It usually comes when I don't warm up properly."

Monday was one of those days. Tied up with doing television promos for the Ronald McDonald House in the morning, Pate arrived just at tee time and went on the course without taking any warm-up period. "But it didn't bother me," he said. "I didn't swing hard. I didn't get warmed up until about the 12th hole." Pate, who said he thought he had a chance to win the Bank of Boston event on Saturday, made a run at eventual winner George Archer on Sunday, but said a three-putt bogey on 11 ended his hopes. "I'm feeling better. I'd say my shoulder is about 95 percent now. I've just got to get stronger."

He didn't waste those two years away, working on other projects, such as a 36-hole layout he is a partner in in Pensacola, Fla. He's also involved in the construction of another course in Palm Beach at this time.

"I never felt that I wouldn't be able to play again," Pate emphasized.

Pate said he enjoyed getting away from the tour briefly for such events as the Ronald McDonald tourney. "It's a nice thing they're doing for the community," Pate says he likes working with projects involving the youth. He's also involved in a youth golf league in his home in Calhoun County, Alabama.

injuries back in 1982. But one would never know to look at her now. "It wasn't difficult to come back," she said. "I was off for two months and I wasn't able to practice as hard as I would have liked. I got tired easily and would play like one tournament and then take two weeks off. It was like starting over the next year."

But Luckhurst doesn't put much faith in her future as a superstar of the tour. "I'll never be a superstar. I'm not strong enough. I just hope to come up once and a while and do something."

She doesn't even consider golf Number One in her life. "I got married two years ago this November. Golf is not my number one priority and never has been and never will," Luckhurst said. "There are other things I like to do better than beat my head against a wall. I haven't devoted myself to it." Instead, it's her family life with husband Mick, the place kicker for the Atlanta Falcons. She nearly missed her plane connection to Greenville because of Sunday's overtime loss by the Falcons to Detroit.

And she limits her tour appearances. "I play from January to July on the tour, then only play part time after that when Mick is playing ball." One of those stops is the High Point Henredon, a tournament she calls one of her favorites — and a favorite of her sister LPGA members. "We all like it because the people are so nice — real Southern Hospitality."

She thinks the growing success of the LPGA tour has two basic causes. "Superstars like Nancy Lopez are part of the reason. And, too, the girls are cuter than they used to be."

Cuter? Isn't that a sexist statement?

"No, I really don't think so. The girls are more feminine now and they like it. You can be an athlete and look good too. I don't want to look like a man just to be an athlete."

Well, there's no question that she does fall among the "cuter" category. Just ask any of those who followed her around Monday afternoon.

after an injury absence, saw his team defeated by one which featured LPGA tourer Terri Luckhurst, seen signing autographs and chatting with fans at right. Luckhurst's birdie putt at 15 gave her team a one-shot victory in the superball event. (Reflector Photos)

Nebraska Climbs To Top

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, the nation's top college football team last year in every Associated Press poll except the one that really counted, have moved back to the top spot in the rankings, the third No. 1 team in as many 1984 polls.

While Nebraska was opening its season with a 42-7 pounding of Wyoming, No. 1-ranked Miami suffered its first setback in three games, losing to Michigan 22-14. That not only dropped the Hurricanes into a tie for fifth place but vaulted Michigan from 14th to third.

Nebraska received 35 of 60 first-place votes and 1,150 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Clemson, a 55-0 winner over Virginia, moved up from third to second with 15 first-place votes and 1,100 points. Michigan received three first-place ballots and 948 points.

Nebraska was ranked No. 1 each week last season from the preseason poll until the final poll, when the Cornhuskers slipped to second after losing to Miami 31-30 in the Orange Bowl.

"If we are there (No. 1), fine," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "I hope the team plays up to the ranking. But it would be kind of nice if we could hide in the shadows for a little while."

And fullback Tom Rathman wasn't thrilled with Nebraska's No. 1 status "because that means everybody will be shooting for us. I don't think this team really needs that exposure."

Texas, which opens its season against Auburn this week, rose from fifth to fourth with one first-place vote and 922 points. Despite its defeat, Miami also received one first-place ballot and 824 points.

Iowa jumped from 10th place to a tie for fifth with two first-place votes and 824 points following a 59-21 rout of Iowa State. UCLA, which needed six field goals to nip San Diego State 18-15, also received two firsts and 800 points but slipped from fourth place to seventh.

Brigham Young walloped Baylor 47-13 and shot from 13th to eighth with one first-place ballot — the first eight teams all received first-place votes — and 749 points. Ohio State, which rallied in the second half to defeat Oregon State 22-14, fell from sixth to ninth with 693 points and Boston College, which overcame a 31-14 deficit to beat Alabama 38-31, climbed from 18th to 10th with 668 points.

Notre Dame, seventh a week ago, dropped its opener to Purdue 23-21 and plummeted out of the rankings while preseason No. 1 Auburn, which was idle, dropped from eighth to 11th and Alabama skidded from ninth to 19th.

The Second Ten consists of Auburn, Penn State, Oklahoma State, Southern Methodist, Oklahoma, Washington, Pitt, Florida State, Alabama and Southern Cal.

Last week, it was Penn State, Arizona State, BYU, Michigan, SMU, Oklahoma, Pitt, Boston College, Washington and Florida State.

Oklahoma State made the rankings for the first time this season with a 45-3 pounding of Arizona State that knocked the Sun Devils out of the Top Twenty. Southern Cal also moved in with a 42-7 romp over Utah State.

Grassy Slope All That's Left

All reserved seats for the N.C. State-East Carolina football game, to be played September 29 at Carter-Finley Stadium, have been sold out, a Wolfpack spokesman said today.

However, non-reserved tickets on the grassy slope at the south end of the stadium are still available at the Reynolds Coliseum box office during regular business hours. Tickets are $12 each.

Last year's game, won by ECU, 22-16, attracted an overflow crowd of 57,800, a new stadium record and the largest crowd at that time ever to have seen a college football game in North Carolina.

Rozier Says No To Pittsburgh

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Rozier says he's through with the Pittsburgh Maulers, but officials of the United States Football League team want to hear it from the player, not just his agent.

And the Houston Oilers of the National Football League have said "No, thanks," to further contract talks with the former Heisman Trophy winner.

Rozier's Philadelphia-based agent, Art Wilkinson, said Monday that the Maulers were willing to allow Rozier to buy up the remainder of his three-year contract, which he described as a personal-service pact with Edward J. DeBartolo, Sr., the club's owner.

"They want us to give them back the signing bonus of $1.3 million plus the $300,000 Mike received for playing last season, and they want it tomorrow," Wilkinson said Monday. The buyout was being considered, he added, "although we won't do it tomorrow."

Wilkinson conceded that DeBartolo could seek to have Rozier fulfill the contract. "That's something they will have to decide," the agent said.

Maulers General Manager George Heddleston told the Pittsburgh Post Gazette that Rozier "has never told us he wants out of here. We don't want to hear it from his agent. We want to hear it from him."

Heddleston referred to an interview earlier Monday on Houston radio station KIKK, during which Wilkinson read a statement from Rozier.

"I now find myself with an organization that cannot decide whether it wants me or not," Rozier was quoted in the statement. "In short, I do not wish to return to the Pittsburgh Maulers in 1985 and I will not."

"Art Wilkinson wrote the statement for him," Heddleston said. "I'd just like to hear it from him (Rozier)."

Wilkinson said that Rozier wanted to sign a contract with the Oilers, but Houston General Manager Ladd Herzog said Rozier would have to wait.

"I said last week we felt it was too late for Mike to be effective for the Oilers this year," Herzog said. "We told him the on-going negotiations were becoming a distraction for the team."

Herzog said Houston would consider discussing a contract with Rozier after the 1984 season.

Wilkinson said the Oilers might reconsider, "in view of their 0-2 start," but added that "if it's not until 1985, then we'll wait."

Rampants Rip Vikes In Opener

WILSON — Travis King scored two goals and had three assists as he led Rose High School's soccer team to a 7-0 victory over Kinston yesterday.

The game was the opener for the 1984 season and also was a first round contest in the Hunt Invitational Tournament.

With the victory, Rose moved into the semifinals of the eight-team tournament, and will face pre-tourney favorite Henderson Vance Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Fleming Stadium. Vance rolled up a 12-0 win over Beddingfield in its first round game.

Jordy Smith got the scoring going for Rose at the 12 minute mark, assisted by King, Mike Maxon followed nine minutes later with assists by King and Carl Wille.

King then scored his first goal of the day at the 31 minute mark, assisted by Wille and Lewis Robbins.

King also started the second half scoring, picking up a goal ten minutes into the half, with an assist by Maxon. Five minutes later, Wille scored off an assist by David Lee.

At the 70 minute mark, Richard Haselrig scored off assists by King and Robbins, with Tad Castellow closing out the scoring seven minutes later, assisted by Lee.

"For our first games, we played pretty well," Coach Will Wiberg said. "But we've still got a long ways to go, and a lot to improve on."

Under the tournament setup, Rose must win against Henderson to have a third-game in the tournament. The finals are scheduled for Saturday.

INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

49ers Hold Off Redskins In Rematch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The stakes weren't as high as their conference title clash, but the emotions were just as charged and the outcome about as close.

The San Francisco 49ers, frustrated by running out of time in a comeback bid against the Washington Redskins for the National Football Conference championship last year, pulled a role reversal and gained a 37-31 triumph Monday night in a National Football League game.

Joe Montana opened the show by guiding the 49ers to a 27-0 lead in the second period en route to one of his best days in the pros with 381 yards passing. Then the 49ers hung on as Washington quarterback Joe Theismann led the Redskins on a four-touchdown comeback and finished with 331 yards through the air.

"It reminded me a lot of last year's NFC championship game," said Washington receiver Art Monk, who caught 10 passes for 200 yards. "Time ran out on us tonight just like it did on them last year."

The big difference between the games was that the Redskins' 24-21 victory last January sent them to the Super Bowl. This time, the 49ers, 2-0, only moved to the lead of their division, while the Redskins, 0-2, dropped to the bottom of theirs.

Yet both teams played as if the Super Bowl were again on the line.

"It was probably the most emotionally charged game we've played in my three years here," said San Francisco tight end Russ Francis, who caught five passes for 55 yards and received two personal-foul penalties for tussles with the Redskins.

"We matched them up gun-shooter on gun-shooter," Theismann said of his duel with Montana, a fellow Notre Dame alumnus. "and it was fun moving the ball the second half. The 49ers were not laying back in the second half. They were blitzing more and had a full pass rush on."

Neither team lay back the whole game. In the first half everything seemed to work for the 49ers while nothing went well for the Redskins. In the second half, it all changed.

"We shut ourselves down in the first half," said John Riggins, who had one of his worst games as a Redskin despite running for two touchdowns, managing only 12 yards rushing on 10 carries. "They were very aggressive and we had no continuity. We just couldn't get anything going

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — VOLATILE VOLCANO CANNOT CONTAIN LAVA RIVER.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals N
The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

When you have a sure line for your contract, why adopt any other? If this advice sounds inane, consider how many points are thrown away each year by players who don't seem to understand this precept.

North-South bid well to an excellent grand slam. When North jumped to six spades after South's five club cue-bid, South realized his partner surely had both red aces and the king of clubs. North could hardly have bid so aggressively without those cards, since he did not have a high spade. And since the bidding had marked North with a singleton heart, the grand slam seemed a good bet.

West led the king of diamonds, taken by dummy's ace. Declarer by reflex cashed the jack and queen of trumps, but when East showed out on the second round of trumps, the contract could no longer be made. Declarer could get two discards only on clubs, so he needed to ruff a heart for his 13th trick. He cashed the ace of hearts, returned to his hand with a trump and ruffed a heart, but now the only entry to his hand to draw the last trump was a club. West ruffed, and the defenders rubbed salt into the wound by collecting a diamond and a heart trick for down three!

Two rounds of trumps was just one round too many. After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer should cash only the jack of trumps before clearing the ace of hearts from dummy. Now declarer can get back to his hand with the a trump to ruff a heart on the board, and there is still another trump in dummy to permit declarer to reenter his hand to draw the outstanding trumps.

The 4-1 trump break was unfortunate. However, the correct line insures the contract against anything but a 5-0 split.

VOA Contracts
To Use Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has agreed to a secret contract permitting use of a privately owned Costa Rican radio station to broadcast into leftist-controlled Nicaragua, the Washington Post reported today.

The arrangement between the U.S. Information Agency and a private association that controls the AM radio station is part of a $1 billion modernization of the Voice of America's worldwide broadcast facilities, the newspaper said.

Citing a source close to the San Jose government, the Post said the arrangement, under which VOA pays $3.2 million for the facilities and an annual $168,000 fee to the station's private owners, circumvents a Costa Rican law preventing ownership of broadcast facilities there by foreigners.

VOA made the arrangement after the agency found it was barred from setting up its own transmission facilities. It contracted with the private, nonprofit Costa Rican Association for Information and Culture, a group organized in December by conservative media executives, journalists and politicians, the newspaper reported.

The agreement was signed Aug. 31 at the home of Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge — despite its having been criticized in the Costa Rican Congress as a circumvention of the law — at the insistence of U.S. officials, the Post reported.

President Reagan has asked for $849 million in 1985 budget authority for VOA, which broadcasts the U.S. government's message around the world in 42 languages. That includes $113 million for new facilities.

Benefactor Gives School $2.5 Million

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A furniture company president who took only two courses at the University of Scranton has left the school $2.5 million to establish scholarships for needy students, the school said.

The gift included in the will of Francis E. Redington, former president of J.P. Redington and Co., was the largest in the university's 96-year history — more than twice the size of any previous donation, the school said Monday.

The Scranton-based furniture firm specialized in services to churches and schools, and the Redington family had helped decorate the chapel at the 4,800-student Jesuit university.

Redington, a high school graduate, was 71 when he died in July 1983.

FOCUS

"Oh! Say, Can You See..."

Many Americans might not know this surprising fact about the tune of our national anthem: it is based on an old British drinking song called "Anacreon in Heaven." That ditty was familiar to Americans in 1814 as a military march of the 1700s, and later as a political song called "Adams and Liberty." Baltimore's Ferdinand Durang first sang "The Star Spangled Banner" to the tune of "Anacreon in Heaven" only a few days after Francis Scott Key wrote the poem.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year was the U.S. national anthem officially adopted?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — O. Henry's real name was William Sydney Porter.

Picking TV Name Isn't Always Easy

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shakespeare tells us that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but can you picture irascible Archie popping off as Wally Bunker?

The name Archie Bunker has become such an indelible part of the character that it would be difficult to imagine him with another name.

But when Norman Lear was first developing "All in the Family" more than a dozen years ago, the name was Wally Bunker. (In the original British series "Till Death Do Us Part," his name was Alf Garnett.)

"I'd always wanted to call him Archibald, but people kept telling me no one in Queens would be named Archibald," said Lear. "They said it sounded too English. We used Wally in the first script, but I didn't want that name."

Lear was saved by Kellam deForest, whose deForest Research Inc. checks out character names for most television series and movies to be certain that they are legally safe to use.

"We found there was actually a Wally Bunker living in Queens," said deForest. Thus, Archie Bunker entered television history.

Bunker was selected as his last name because of what Lear felt the name implied. "Our selection came out of the word 'bunk' and all that the word means. Archie was dishing out bunk."

Character names on television come from many sources, not the least of which are the friends of the writers and producers and from street names and geographical places.

DeForest said he discouraged the use of friends' names because it could backfire. He cites an incident from the 1940s when a writer named a movie villain after his best friend. By the time the movie came out writer and friend had become enemies and the former friend collected a sizable settlement.

"If it's a work of fiction we check the names in all the purviews that a name can fall in," said deForest.

"The location of the story, the occupation of the character, and all the spelling variations."

DeForest said his staff uses telephone directories. Other sources, he said, are trade secrets.

Executive producer Barney Rosenzweig said when he first came up with the concept of CBS' "Cagney & Lacey" he wanted everyone to know that it was the first women's buddy movie.

"The original title was 'Newman & Redford,'" he said, in homage to the male buddy movies of Paul Newman and Robert Redford.

"We wanted to make it clear what we were doing, but the legal department said we couldn't use that title. So we came up with the name of 'Cagney & Lacey.' We picked Chris Cagney because it's a hard, tough-sounding name, which fits Chris' character. Mary Beth Lacey has a softer sound, which suits the softer nature of the character."

Rosenzweig said he also used names in the series that give a quick ethnic identification. "Al Samuels is a New York Jew," he said. "Paul LaGuardia is an Italian Catholic. Victor Isbecki is Polish."

Contrary to deForest's rule, Rosenzweig said he frequently used the name of a friend or a place when he's in a hurry to get a name cleared.

"We had a story about Cagney and Lacey investigating a pornography ring," Rosenzweig said. "They talked about some X-rated movies, although you didn't see the movies. I named one of the porno stars after my attorney. He got a kick out of being a sex symbol in an X-rated movie."

The names of lead characters have to have the right sound, especially when it's also the series title, like "Matt Houston" or "T.J. Hooker."

"Peter Gunn" was a title that sounded good and fit the idea of being a detective. The series ran from 1958-61.

"We found there were five Peter Gunns in the country," said deForest. "Fortunately, none of them were private detectives."

A Review

'Bolero' — Who Could Sit There?

Bo Derek's latest movie, "Bolero," is the kind of picture that gives sex movies a bad name.

Through some creative distributing, "Bolero" has managed to reach the Plaza, and other theaters around the country, without a rating, but no one is confused or fooled. "Bolero" is a skin flick, and it is also a bad movie, not because it is erotic, but because it fails miserably at being erotic.

There is a place for sexy movies. Many of the X-rated films I have seen and reviewed were wonderful combinations of eroticism and humor. While it is true that many were gross and tasteless, who can ever forget those low-budget, black-and-white pictures featuring the joys of outdoor volleyball? For the sake of future generations, I hope that sex will always be with us, and despite the efforts of those who would protect us from ourselves, film has a right to treat that subject as much as any other. But it should do it well.

"Bolero" is a bad movie because it is boring. Writer/director/husband John Derek obviously believes in keeping things simple, so he eliminates character development, dialogue, and any pretense of an idea in order to focus his camera on his wife's body, and while Bo Derek does have a nice body, two hours of it are about one-and-three-quarter hours too much.

What storyline there is in this piece of exhibitionism involves Bo's frantic attempt to lose her virginity to the "right" man. Poor Bo is a fabulously wealthy young woman who has seen too many Rudolph Valentino movies. She sets out on an "adventure in ecstasy," searching for the perfect — tall, dark, and handsome — stranger to whom she can give "the gift she has carried with her all her life." She gets as far as Spain.

Viewers of previous dreadful Derek dramas know that Bo can't act, can't talk, and can't change facial expressions without a great deal of difficulty. She can, however, take off her costume more quickly than you can say "lights, camera, action."

"Bolero" demonstrates that she hasn't learned much since she was upstaged by the apes in "Tarzan." "Bolero" is a big, boring bust. Even the 17-year-olds who were in the audience with me at the Plaza seemed bored with the whole thing. I left wishing for some volleyball docudramas, and realizing that we have no need for censorship: no one could sit through this anyway.

— JIM HOLTE

Stars Join Crowd At Tubb Funeral

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Top country stars joined more than 1,000 other people in mourning country music pioneer Ernest Tubb during a funeral service that included recordings of several of the songs he made famous during a career that spanned four decades.

A tape recording of Tubb's 1941 hit, "I'm Walking the Floor Over You," closed the service Monday as 1,500 mourners paid final respects to the pioneer singer, songwriter and guitarist.

Tubb, a Grand Ole Opry star for more than 40 years, died Thursday at age 70 after a two-year bout with emphysema.

He pioneered the honky-tonk sound of country music, a style characterized by forceful guitars and earthy lyrics that originated in Texas beer halls 40 years ago. In 1965 he was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Tubb's open blue steel casket was flanked by guitar-shaped floral arrangements and his familiar white cowboy hat.

Tapes of Tubb singing six of his songs were played during the 60-minute service at Two Rivers Baptist Church, across a parkway from the Grand Ole Opry House.

NEW YORK (AP) — Call it equality of the sexes if you like or recognition that women are controlling the dial more, while men opt for sports and cable movies, but the new television season offers an impressively greater number of female lead characters.

And many of them have invaded the macho world of crime-fighting.

TV's emerging women may not do it better — they'll probably be canceled as often as male cops and gumshoes — but they'll do it a bit differently, solving mysteries and investigating murders with their wiles, wits and wiggles rather than weapons.

Consider the following:

—Angela Lansbury in CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" is an eccentric mystery novelist who talks to the audience, offering clues as she ties up all the loose ends by the final commercial.

—Lindsay Wagner is "Jessie," a police psychiatrist who believes in fighting crime non-violently. But ABC, concerned with the show's dawdling pace, ordered one action sequence per quarter hour. In the season-opener, Jessie is threatened by a hostage-taker with a rifle, rides shotgun in a high-speed car chase and gets attacked by a knife-wielding nut case.

—Loni Anderson and Lynda Carter play detectives in NBC's "Partners In Crime." Elegant and stylish, they wouldn't be caught dead in Columbo's seedy raincoat or, even worse, looking like Chris Cagney or Mary Beth Lacey. They don't carry guns. "Glamorous can be wonderful," said Miss Anderson.

The protestations of Miss Anderson and Miss Carter aside, one irony of the upcoming TV campaign is that "Cagney & Lacey," the CBS show that came back from the dead last spring, has helped Hollywood modify some attitudes.

"Female leads in TV have not been hugely successful," said Peter Fischer, co-producer of "Murder, She Wrote."

But now, if a woman can run for vice president, she can be a ratings success ... or failure. "Cagney & Lacey" paved the way," said Harvey Shephard, CBS' senior vice president for programming.

One result is that male-female roles are becoming more interchangeable.

On ABC's "Who's the Boss?" ex-boxer Tony Danza plays a male housekeeper for an ambitious ad executive (Judith Light). "A man can do meaningless, unproductive work just as well as a woman," says the woman's mother (Katherine Helmond) in approving the hiring.

This gentle nod toward modernity may be the most positive aspect of the 1984-85 season. Many of the other themes raised by the 21 new series suggest that Hollywood is still a fantasy factory obsessed with violence and dedicated to the principle that imitation is always safer than innovation.

Action-adventure series such as "The A-Team," "Magnum, P.I." and "Simon & Simon" are successes, so 10 fall programs adopt their daredeviltry.

In NBC's "Hot Pursuit," a woman is framed and convicted of murder. She and her husband go on the lam from the police and a one-eyed man. Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, quotes producer Ken Johnson as saying, "I'm not ripping off 'The Fugitive.' I'm ripping off 'Les Miserables.'"
