Diana Lashes Southeast Coast

UPROOTED — A truck moves around an uprooted tree in Wilmington early today a few hours after Hurricane Diana came ashore near Cape Fear, just south of the coastal city. Diana, after being stalled for nearly a day off the coast, came ashore at 2 a.m. today, hitting the southeast coast with winds in excess of 100 mph. Damage reports, although not yet confirmed, are expected to be heavy, especially in the Southport area. (AP Laserphoto)

Winds Weaken After Landfall

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
WILMINGTON (AP) — Hurricane Diana blasted into coastal North Carolina today with 110-mph wind, blinding rain and tides 10 feet above normal, ripping down a water tower, lifting cars off the ground and sending whitecapped waves down flooded streets. Two storm-related deaths were reported, but no injuries had been reported at mid-morning.

But Diana weakened after crossing the shoreline and her maximum winds dropped to 75 mph with gusts to 85 mph, said the National Weather Service.

One man died of a heart attack while trying to secure his house and a social services worker died in a traffic accident on his way to work as the storm rushed ashore.

Looting was reported at one computer store. Some 700 National Guard troops were in the area to help police with patrols.

Gov. Jim Hunt said early damage estimates were sketchy because officials were hampered in their efforts to tour affected areas. He wrote to President Reagan that he declare the state a major disaster area, with the worst damage in Brunswick and New Hanover. A day earlier, while the storm was stalled, he had said he doubted a request for emergency aid would be required.

Hunt and reporters took helicopters from Raleigh to tour the coastal area.

Carolina Power & Light Co. had as many as 30,000 households without power, said a disaster official. Highway officials said U.S. 17 was closed from south of Wilmington to the South Carolina state line.

The first Atlantic hurricane of the season ended a day of indecisive spinning offshore when it suddenly charged the coast Wednesday night. The eye of the storm touched land at 1:15 a.m. at Fort Fisher, south of Wilmington, the National Weather Service reported.

The town of Southport, across the Cape Fear River from Fort Fisher, had "been hurt and hurt bad," said Police Chief Bill Corey.

Many residents who had evacuated Tuesday returned Wednesday to survey damage to their homes and were caught along with sightseers by the storm's lurch to land.

Belton Matthews, 78, who lives near Southport, said he heard a "roaring, whirling sound" all night.

"It's a nightmare," said M.H. Robertson, a New Hanover County resident. (Please turn to page 13)

Uranium Canister Salvaged

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Salvage crews today retrieved the first container of radioactive uranium hexafluoride from a French freighter that sank off the coast of Belgium 19 days ago, a government spokeswoman said.

The ship was torn open by a fierce storm Monday, and it was unclear whether the container that was retrieved had been washed out of the vessel and onto the sea bed.

Divers, working in the first favorable weather conditions since Friday, inspected the wreck of the Mont Louis and brought one full and one empty container to the surface, said the government spokeswoman. She spoke on condition she not be identified. There had been 22 empty containers aboard the ship when it sank.

If the divers find the remaining 29 containers of uranium hexafluoride in a good position, they could immediately begin retrieving them, said a spokeswoman for Smit Tak International, a Dutch salvage company. She also spoke on condition she not be identified by name.

Even though the weather improved today, the divers were still (Please turn to page 13)

Local MPs Sent To Coast

The National Guard's 514 Military Police Company in Greenville was dispatched to Wilmington today and officials were asking for fire and other emergency equipment after Hurricane Diana came ashore in the Fort Fisher-Southport area.

Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said he was called at 3 a.m. by officials asking for "fire equipment ... from us, Wayne and Duplin counties," because "Carolina Beach lost its water tank and needed fire equipment."

But Joyner said state emergency management officials reported conditions were so bad at 9 a.m. that "you can't get any equipment there," and none was being sent at that time.

Joyner, who said no shelters were open in Pitt County Wednesday night, said shelters would be opened later if needed.

A spokesman for the 514th MP Co. said "the whole company ... 100-plus men, four officers," was "taking 34 jeeps and three 2 1/2-ton trucks" to Wilmington to provide assistance with "law enforcement and whatever."

An officer with a detachment of the 213th MP Co., also stationed in Greenville, refused to give any information on that unit's activities. However, a spokesman for the unit's headquarters in Washington said 46 men assigned to the detachment were "holding for local assistance" at the armory in Greenville.

Mayo Allen, who heads Greenville's public works department, said 10 men were kept on duty Wednesday night but "nothing unusual happened, and we're back on regular duty today."

"The main thing," Allen said, "is we have so many trucks equipped with chain saws, generators to provide lighting ... we want to be prepared."

He said the department could respond with the first crews and "another 15 or 20 men could come in right behind them ... within 10 to 15 minutes."

Area Creeks Rising Slowly

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Officials of Pitt and Greene counties reported this morning that Contentnea Creek seems to be staying well within its boundaries despite the rainfall spawned by Hurricane Diana.

Greene County Sheriff Early Whaley said the Contentnea, where it passes through the Snow Hill area, showed no sign of exceeding its banks. "There hasn't been that significant a change in the creeks. They have risen a bit, and we did receive two reports of water crossing roads in the past two days, but the creeks around here haven't risen all that much," Sheriff Whaley said.

A representative of the Pitt County

Sheriff's Department said the situation is much the same in Farmville and other areas of the county. "I think it's pretty cleared up now," he said, "but streets were being flooded everywhere last night. That was because the rain was falling so fast it wasn't running off, especially around Grifton and Hanrahan. Most of those were just drainage problems," he said.

A steady drizzle fell through Greene and Pitt counties for much of the morning.

Greenville Utilities' weather station recorded 1.48 inches of rain from 7 a.m. Wednesday through 7 a.m. today, but a spokesman for the station said rainfall amounts were (Please turn to page 13)

TREE MOVING MODERNIZED — A few years ago, moving a tree was a major task around the house or especially if you were in the landscaping business. Modern techniques allow landscapers to move a medium-sized tree in just a few minutes. Paul Whitehurst of Greenville is shown in the first photo in the woods near a landscaping project digging a tree. Before the tree is chosen, a hole where the new tree will go is dug, 84 inches wide and five feet deep, almost four tons of dirt at one scoop. The dirt is subsequently placed in the hole where the new tree was dug. The center photo shows the tree-moving equipment backing over the newly dug hole for the tree, and the last photo shows the tree being set in place. The finished product reveals a moderate-sized tree that soon will provide shade. Moving trees in this manner, landscapers say, saves most of the roots and the tree has a better chance of survival. Communist Party's Begun Matchmaking in China

By ANNSCOTT
 PEKING (UPI) — Mei Ping, 31, hid behind her black, horn-rimmed glasses, waiting in quiet desperation for someone to ask her to dance.

The singles' party at Temple of Heaven Park was almost over and her hopes of meeting a suitable man were dwindling fast.

"There are a lot of lonely people in China," said a young man, who stood watching Mei (a pseudonym) and a thousand other aging singles at the outdoor dance.

Smiling couples twirled by, their faces glowing under the colored lights. Newly acquainted friends drank pop and timidly flirted at dozens of tables.

The 11-piece amateur band from Peking's Computer Center wailed through the last waltz.

"Oh well," Mei said with a sigh as she headed for the bus home in her now wilted blue dress. "I just came to have a look."

About 100,000 unmarried 30-to-40-year-olds live in Peking, 120,000 in Shanghai and millions in rural China, where 80 percent of the population lives, Chinese reports say.

Many are members of China's so-called "lost generation," now reaching middle-age, whose marriage plans were disrupted when they flocked to the countryside during the turbulent 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

The number of singles is rising as more Chinese women put careers and education before wedlock, while many men retain traditional views on marriage and seek younger wives.

China's liberalized divorce laws also mean more men and women are seeking remarriage — and have difficulty because of the stigma attached to divorce.

Exacerbating the problem for singles in China, where most marriages are still arranged by intermediaries, is the dearth of nightlife and social events where people can meet.

Recently, however, Chinese leaders, worried over the "marriage problem," launched an aggressive campaign to help China's millions of aging singles tie the knot.

Donning the cap of "Hongniang" — the most famous matchmaker in Chinese opera — officials in Peking are spicing up the capital's nightlife with a slew of "healthy recreational activities" for unmarried people.

For example, hundreds of singles stomped and swung to the beat of Latin tangos and Western music at a recent, officially sanctioned "dancing party" at the Temple of Heaven.

Opposite the band, eager registrants crowded around a free computer dating service, which promised mechanized introductions to a perfect sweetheart in only three minutes.

"I'm looking for a girlfriend," said Xu Zhijun, 31, a high school Marxist philosophy teacher, who added too much studying had put a damper on his social life.

"It's been difficult to find suitable company," said Wu Fan, 28, a wiry bachelor scientist, shyly attempting to mingle. "I've grown afraid I won't find someone to love."

"Danwei" or work units sponsor the dances each week, providing tickets, bus transportation, and dozens of on-the-spot "matchmakers" to break the ice for their over-30 employees.

"There are some bold people, who are willing to talk directly about their aims, but they're rare," one sponsor said. "Matchmakers are still very important in China."

He said 144 couples introduced at one dance agreed to keep seeing each other.

Peking and other cities also are funding state-run "marriage introduction offices," where lonely hearts can seek a match.

Thousands of numbered cards, many grimy and worn, lie bound on shelves inside the makeshift hut that houses the Chaoyang District Marriage Agency at Peking's Altar of the Sun park.

Each bears a photograph of the marriage candidate and data on age, height, monthly salary, type of work, class background, previous riages — and last but not least — qualities sought in the mate.

"I don't have any special requests, as long as we can love each other, live together and understand each other," a 39-year-old bureaucrat wrote on his registration card after paying the $1 fee.

On the back of his card several women had filled in their registration numbers, which he had marked with a check (O.K. for a meeting), a cross (no meeting desired), or a triangle ("I'll think about it").

"If one person stays single, it's absolutely a personal matter, but when hundreds of thousands of people over 30 remain single, it becomes a social problem," said Xu Jiashe, 26, the agency's matchmaker.

Xu said about 10,000 people have registered with the agency since it opened in 1980.

"About nine percent of our clients end up getting married," Xu told the China Daily. "That's not bad."

The marriage drive indicates a growing realization by China's top leadership that a good social life is important for people, even in a revolutionary society.

"The marriage problem exists ... especially among young women. It

Appetites and Fertility Not Scheduled Alike

DEAR ABBY: You advised "Mismatched," the woman whose sexual appetite didn't match her husband's, to seek therapy. Bad advice, Abby. It's just another example of the guilt trip that has been laid on women ever since Freud and Kinsey came along with their crackpot theories about sex.

It is a biological truth that female mammals, which includes human beings, have a brief period of sexual desire when the ovum is ready for impregnation by the male. This period is easily observed in wild mammals and is familiar to owners of female dogs and cats. We humans have chosen to ignore its existence, and try to make our females feel guilty because they desire sex far less frequently than males, whom nature created to be always ready for action.

A woman who loves her husband will willingly accommodate his need for sexual pleasure even if she does not desire it at the time. For this she will receive another kind of pleasure—the pleasure of pleasing her husband.

HAPPILY MARRIED

DEAR MARRIED: The female of the human species need not be in her fertile phase to desire sex. The biological "truth" you cited is a misconception. (No pun intended.)

DEAR ABBY: For my birthday, my older sister in Maine just sent me the following: a book on how to knit, three candy dinosaur eggs, and a tanned (slightly odoriferous) skunk pelt.

Do you think she was trying to tell me something?

LYS IN GIG HARBOR, WASH.

DEAR LYS: I haven't the foggiest. Please give me a little more information. How old are you? How old is your sister? Do you knit? If not, have you ever expressed a desire to learn how? Do you like candy? If so, were the dinosaur eggs edible? As for the slightly odoriferous skunk pelt: I give up. What did you give her for her last birthday?

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 36-year-old gay man. Last fall I lost "Randy" (my lover of 14 years) in an accident. We lived together. Although Randy was the chief breadwinner, he always referred to the furnishings in our love apartment as "ours."

Immediately after his funeral I was too grief-stricken to do anything but stay in bed. Randy's mother, an aunt and a niece came to see me and asked if it was all right if they took a few mementos. I told them to take whatever they wanted. (Nothing material mattered to me at the time.)

By the time I got out of bed and started to live again, I found that there was nothing of value left—no silver, glassware, stereo, records, towels. They had cleaned me out!

Last week an old friend stopped by. He told me that he had been to a garage sale at Randy's mother's house, where she had sold the things she had taken from our apartment. Randy's precious opera collection went for 10 cents an album! And there were many items that had great sentimental value. I am still heartbroken, but my anger at Randy's family is beginning to overpower my grief at losing Randy. What should I do?

HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Although you did give Randy's mother permission to help herself, the greedy, grasping woman clearly took advantage of your grief-stricken state. You could sue, but it would probably be a very costly, painful and possibly futile experience. My condolences. Perhaps others who read this will learn from your sad experience.

Reflexologists Say Look to Feet in Curing Ills

UNITYVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Clara Biggar Manz is not a faith healer, but she does lay on hands. She lays hands on people's feet.

She's a foot masseuse, practicing a quasi-medical massage therapy known as reflexology.

Reflexologists claim they can cure every ailment from cataracts to hemorrhoids.

Reflexology is based on the theory that there are nerve endings, or "reflexes," in the foot connected to every other part of the body. By manipulating the appropriate part of the foot, a reflexologist can send relief to whatever body part is ailing.

The theory behind reflexology resembles acupuncture, but unlike acupuncture it is not supported by hundreds of years of practice.

Reflexology was first practiced in 1913.

A typical reflexology session with Clara Manz, 83, usually lasts from 20 to 30 minutes. You can get an old-fashioned, muscle-powered massage, or she'll do it with the aid of her electric vibrator.

If you know what part of your body hurts, Mrs. Manz concentrates her efforts on the corresponding part of your foot.

But if you're unsure where it hurts, she can often make a diagnosis by doing some exploratory probing while giving an overall massage.

When the patient screams, the Unityville woman knows she's found the spot.

She has been practicing reflexology since 1959. On the wall in the tiny room in her home she calls her office is an official-looking document which says she completed a "Post Graduate Course in the Ingham Method of Compression Massage."

But she sets little store by documents. She says she learned her craft by doing it, apprenticing with her late husband, Gratz Biggar.

Biggar, in turn, learned the technique from Clara's sister Esther, a registered nurse in Rochester, N.Y., home of the Ingham School of Reflexology. Esther started experimenting on a female patient, whom doctors had said would never walk again.

In desperation, the woman's husband offered Esther $500 if she could get his wife to walk. After three months of reflexology, the woman walked and Esther collected.

In the 25 years she has been practicing, Mrs. Manz has treated a lot of people in this region and it doesn't take long to find someone who will give a glowing testimonial about her work.

But the medical establishment does more than just question reflexology — it claims it doesn't exist.

The official medical response in the region was summed up by the director of the neurology department at Geisinger Medical Center. Reflexology is "based on no proven scientific theory," said Dr. William Jeffreys.

The director of physical therapy at Bloomsburg Hospital, Fran Welk, lumps reflexology with acupuncture.

acupressure, touch therapy, hug therapy and some of the other faddish treatments, most of which started in California.

Welk calls the therapies "the non-medical healing arts" and while there have been some successes, he says they have been limited.

In general, doctors say reflexology may help some people because "it feels good" and "massage reduces stress."

Garden Club Met Tuesday

The Lakewood Pines Garden Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. W.E. Roseveare, with Mrs. N.C. Pierce as co-hostess.

Mrs. W.A. Wright, president, conducted the business meeting

Senior Citizens Volunteered

Twenty-five members of the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club volunteered to take part in the March of Dimes project during a meeting of the club held Thursday with 80 members present.

Louise Jordan was announced as the scrapbook chairman for the club. It was announced that the birthday luncheon will be held Sept. 20. Reservations must be made by Sept. 14 and may be made by calling Margaret Stinson, 756-9666.

Several members plan to attend the Senior Games Day to be held in Kinston Friday and will leave from St. Paul Episcopal Church at 7:45 a.m.

Miss Alice Keene and Mrs. Betty Levey were given honorary memberships in the club in appreciation for their support of the membership.

It was announced that the club was nominated for the governor's award recently and was presented a certificate by the Pitt County Commissioners.

Members were reminded that there are a few vacancies available for the New Orleans World's Fair trip to be taken Oct. 7-13. They and their friends may participate. Call Sarah J. Ashton, club president, 752-2912, for more information.

Local Workshop offers help to solve problems with sewing and machine related difficulties...

Greenville Sewing Center, an Authorized dealer for Singer Company, located in Greenville Square announced today a workshop to be held at their business on Tuesday evening, September 18th, from 7 until 8:45 P.M. to offer help to the person who is constantly having problems getting their machines to perform according to normal expectations.

Leader for the workshop will be C.R. (Bob) Thompson, partner and manager of the local Company who has had some eighteen years of experience with SINGER. Thompson has held numerous workshops and clinics for sewers in South and North Carolina and the simple explanations of eliminations of problems and their solutions challenges even the most reluctant to get "Back to their sewing machine".

Items to be discussed will include proper selection of needles and/or threads; tension adjustments; adjustments of proper pressure for feeding of fabrics; skipped stitches (causes and cures); maintenance of the sewing machine; and lastly, fabric handling. Admission is by pre-registration (call 756-0747 for your seat) and will be limited to not over twenty-five persons.

After completion of the workshop, the floor will open to answering of questions from the audience.

It should be emphasized that while the cost of the clinic is free to the participants, this will be the only workshop of this type offered this fall in this area. Workshops covering other subject matter have been planned; however.

Editorials

Huggable

Ray Geiger, the 73-year-old editor of The Farmers' Almanac, is pretty high on his weather forecaster who sticks his neck out farther and more often than any other weatherman in the business.

Caleb Weatherbee — love that name! — provides the Almanac with weather forecasts peering a year into the future; and his editor says Weatherbee did remarkably well last year when one considers the "erratic and extremely changeable weather" he had to deal with.

But the new edition of The Farmers' Almanac is not standing still. A new facet has been added. Editor Geiger has gone to war on the stress and strain of today's fast-paced life; his publication is ahead of the times in urging its millions of readers to embrace the hugging habit.

It sounds simple, but there are guidelines even in hugging. "You first ask," he cautions; "you don't go up and hug someone without asking. That's against the rules."

The Almanac's traditional values remain. There are household hints, inspirational messages, jokes, puzzles, calendars and even "favorite" recipes. To that has been added a "go hug someone" crusade.

Success of the famous long-range weather forecast is attributed to applying a secret formula based on sunspots, position of the planets, and the tidal action of the moon. Geiger says Weatherbee is an old-school man, "he uses the tried and true formula."

All right, so what is the forecast for the coming winter and spring? We will not tell on this page. Ray Geiger is in the business of compiling and selling Almanacs, and we will not lift the lid on one of its most marketable features.

Maybe this forbearance will bring a few "free hug" coupons in September's mail. Are you listening Mr. Geiger?

Prepared

It is pleasing that North Carolina seemed prepared for a hurricane such as Diana, even though it has been many years since one roared through Eastern North Carolina.

Diane was a surprise hurricane which sprang up off the coast of Florida when the cooler air of the weekend collided with a tropical disturbance. The storm built in intensity until it reached the force of a major hurricane.

It appears now that most people in the affected coastal areas heeded advice to evacuate to refugee centers or to inland motels and apparently effective efforts were made to provide security for their property.

It is easy to take lightly the advance of a hurricane and to assume it is safe to ride it out. Recollections of past hurricanes and the recent destructive force of a major tornado, however, caused the public to be more alert to the potential danger of Hurricane Diana.

Short-Term Gains For Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The resumption of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks sometime next year may hinge on the outcome of the meeting between President Reagan and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the White House on Sept. 28, senior American analysts say.

"At a minimum there should be the beginning of talks about negotiations," said one key analyst, who spoke on condition he not be identified. He said it usually takes about six months of discussion before formal negotiations actually get under way.

Reagan announced Tuesday that Gromyko has accepted his invitation to come to Washington for a meeting, the first for Reagan with a high-level Kremlin official since becoming president in January 1981.

Reagan said he wanted to take the occasion of Gromyko's presence at the United Nations in New York to meet with him to explore ways of reducing "suspicion and hostility" between the two superpowers.

He said he will seek to convince him "the United States means no harm."

Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic presidential nominee, said he thought the meeting was a good idea, but added it was "pretty pathetic" that Reagan waited until the middle of his re-election campaign to hold his first meeting with a Kremlin leader.

Reagan went on national television — to announce with fanfare — what used to occur routinely. Until Reagan took office, hardly a year went by that Gromyko wasn't invited to the White House during the

WASHINGTON — While President Reagan submits to the political requirement of his campaign and tries to avoid pre-election U.S.-Soviet confrontation, an internal paper drafted for CIA Director William Casey warns that the days ahead "will be the most dangerous that we have ever known."

The 11-page memorandum by the vice chairman of the CIA's National Intelligence Council was submitted to Casey in mid-summer. Herbert E. Meyer, one of the very few outsiders Casey brought to the CIA with him in 1981, told his boss that the Soviet Union faces a "growing sense of pessimism and looming decline."

That explains Meyer's warning. If the Soviet Union cannot reform its shackled managerial, agricultural and industrial systems because of fear weakening the Communist Party's dictatorial control, it may choose a "high-risk course designed to change the correlation of (East-West) forces before it is too late." Such a course would be a "grab for the Persian Gulf, an attack on Western Europe or even a first strike on the U.S."

Disclaiming predictions, Meyer simply states as a fact that these "most dangerous" reactions to the Soviet "decline" may now have entered a stage of active consideration inside the Kremlin.

Some Soviet scholars believe that the Russian national temperament is not conducive to lashing out militarily in an effort to solve domestic problems, tending rather toward "circling the wagons." But Meyer's memorandum to Casey warns that the danger of the Soviets striking at the U.S. and the West is real and rising. In plotting American strategy for dealing with the Soviet empire in its decline, the U.S. must make "absolutely certain" that no Soviet leadership could convince itself that salvation lies in trying to destroy the U.S. That dictates military readiness.

Although Casey's response to Meyer's strategy for the period of Soviet "decline" was private, he is known to have reacted strongly in favor of Meyer's warning not to give the Soviets economic or technological help. "We should politely but firmly turn them away," Meyer told Casey, "and we should keep them from stealing what they want."

That exposes one of the most enduring and embittering disputes over U.S. strategy within the Reagan administration. At the moment Casey was studying Meyer's memorandum, the Commerce Department's Bureau of Export Control was putting finishing touches on the largest new list of oil and gas equipment to be offered for sale to the Soviet Union since the early 1970s.

A U.S.-Soviet energy fair now being planned for Moscow next year will offer the Russians such mouth-watering American technology as new computers to guide the flow of natural gas in pipelines, submersible pumps, and deep-sea exploration and extracting equipment.

Meyer warned explicitly against just such technology sales.

Foreseeing Soviet requests for massive amounts of Western technology, Meyer said that the U.S. and its allies "have learned the hard way that the Soviets use whatever help we give not to improve their standard of living but rather to build and deploy more weapons." Meyer scorned commercial arguments that such deals are highly profitable for U.S. manufacturers. In the end, he told Casey, the gains for Soviet military systems from such technology transfers always outweigh the profits of American producers.

This CIA portrait of a Soviet empire slipping into decline was buttressed by a stark collection of sociological and public health facts gathered by CIA analysts. Meyer said Soviet medical literature shows that five key communicable diseases are out of control in the Soviet Union: polio, diphtheria, scarlet fever, whooping cough and measles.

The incidence of measles is only fractionally below the level at which it could be attributed to malnutrition. At least 12 cities, but not Moscow or Leningrad, are under food rationing today.

To support his finding of deep pessimism, Meyer said the Soviet abortion rate is running close to 70 percent (compared to the 26 percent U.S. rate). Demographics point to disaster: a declining population in the educated Russian Soviet Republic, which contains two-thirds of total Soviet industrial capacity, and high birthrates in the Moslem republics.

Two months before the election may not be the ripest time for Ronald Reagan to decide a second-term strategy for dealing with his Soviet adversary, declining or not. But when he gets around to it, Reagan could do worse than ask his old friend Bill Casey to let him see Meyer's memorandum.

Victims And Their Rights

WASHINGTON — Every newspaper reporter who covers the criminal courts is familiar with the cruel irony that so often is imposed upon victims of crime in our society. These victims discover, to their bitter resentment, that criminal defendants have all the rights. The victims have none.

Both houses of Congress now have acted on slightly different versions of the "Victims of Crime Assistance Act of 1984." If the bill is enacted into law, probably as part of a package of half a dozen measures in this field, victims no longer will feel quite so neglected. The bill is no cure-all for the problem, but it will provide significant help.

In its final report in January 1983, the president's Task Force on Victims of Crime described the problem in the context of a typical case of rape. A man has broken into the house of a 50-year-old woman. At knife point he rapes her; he beats her into bloody submission, trashes her belongings, destroys her telephone, and departs with a warning that if she goes to police he will come back and kill her.

A few days later a suspect is arrested. The victim must take time off from her job to go to a police lineup. There she endures the indifference of the police and the hostile stare of the suspect's attorney. The suspect is released on his promise to show up for trial. Her days and nights are now filled with terror at the thought of the rapist's return. Eventually a trial date is set. Time after time the victim must adjust her life to the convenience of the lawyers. She must undergo the ordeal of reliving the experience in her testimony and cross-examination.

This is not all. The suspect is convicted and is brought on for sentencing. At a hearing the judge listens not only to the prosecutor, but also to the criminal's lawyer, his mother, his minister, his friends. They plead for leniency. The victim is now allowed to describe what the crime has cost her in medical expenses, the replacement of destroyed belongings, lost time from work and sheer anguish. The judge sentences the defendant to three years in prison, where he will be housed, fed and cared for by the taxes that are paid by, among others, the victim. And he will be out in 18 months.

In one form or another, such stories are repeated thousands of times a year. A robber kills a cab driver, leaving the driver's wife and children destitute. An old man is mugged, beaten and left paralyzed. Last year 1.2 million violent crimes were reported to police — crimes of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault — and in every one of these at least one victim suffered unforgettably.

The pending bill would create a federal fund of up to $100 million a year, drawn chiefly from fines paid in federal criminal cases (about $72 million last year) and from forfeited bail (about $6 million). The money would be distributed to the states to supplement the estimated $62 million they now are providing in assistance to victims. Thirty-eight states have programs of at least some compensation, mainly for medical expenses and stolen or destroyed property. Sponsors of the bill, including such conservatives as Cochran of Mississippi and Warner of Virginia, and such liberals as Bradley of New Jersey and Kennedy of Massachusetts, are hopeful that the bill will encourage all the states to adopt experimental programs in this field.

The bill has another attractive feature: It would authorize a victim of federal crime to be heard at parole hearings, where the victim could testify to the emotional, psychological, physical and financial impact a prospective parolee's crime had upon his life.

The bill also contains a novel feature that gives me pause: It would confiscate any royalties or lecture fees paid to a convicted criminal who wrote or talked about his "thoughts, opinions or emotions regarding such crime." My tentative thought is that if a Gordon Liddy wants to make a living writing or speaking about Watergate, now that he has paid his debt to society by serving a long term in prison, that should be his right. This part of the bill smacks of at-tainment, not to mention violation of a First Amendment right of free speech and free press, and I have problems with it.

Otherwise the bill would provide a little balance in what now is a wretchedly imbalanced situation. For the past 30 years, dating from the years of the Warren Court, we have worried unceasingly about the rights of an accused. These rights are important and must be defended, but victims have rights too, and their plight has been ignored for much too long.

Strength For Today

Toward the end of the 17th century William Penn was thrown into debtor's prison although at the time he was the largest land owner in Great Britain. He owned what is today Pennsylvania and a considerable portion of New Jersey.

We call this being land poor, meaning that one owns valuable land which cannot be turned into immediate cash resources.

The predicament of William Penn illustrates a number of truths. First, a person may appear wealthy who is not actually wealthy. Again, even the lot of the apparently privileged can sometimes be immensely uncomfortable.

"Call no man fortunate until he is dead," is an old adage. Stop envying others. You probably have a lot of things better than the people you envy. Sit down and make a list of your privileges and blessings.

fall meetings of the U.N. General Assembly.

But Reagan said politics were not a factor in the timing of the meeting, insisting that "one of my highest priorities is finding ways to reduce the level of arms and to improve our working relationship with the Soviet Union."

"Maybe the time has come that anything that can perhaps get a better understanding between our two governments maybe should precede any resumption of dealings on specifics if there can be an easing of any suspicion or hostility," he said.

Nevertheless, there are obvious short-term political gains for both Reagan and the Kremlin leadership by meeting now, said one analyst.

Reagan, often criticized for being overly confrontational with Moscow, can claim himself to be a man of peace by receiving the Soviet foreign minister at the White House.

Gromyko can claim to the world that despite all of Reagan's harsh anti-Soviet rhetoric, he knows he must deal with the Kremlin and treat it like an equal. Analysts say Soviet leaders are deeply distressed that the president does not give them the respect they believe they deserve.

"Being received at the White House is a recognition of superpower status," said one key government analyst.

But analysts say the meeting is much more than a political event and that concrete results could emerge. Those who have argued all along for such high-level meetings say that just by airing their differences the leaders of the superpowers can increase un-

Researchers Say Transplant Drug Can Cause Kidney Failure

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Two heart transplant patients who used the drug cyclosporine to prevent their bodies from rejecting their new organs have suffered complete kidney failure, say researchers who today called the drug "potentially dangerous."

Writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, the researchers said the drug seems to attack the kidneys and cause high blood pressure, which in turn further damages the kidneys.

Whether the drug does more harm than good is likely to be controversial, and the researchers said the tradeoff should be carefully considered.

Several followups have found that cyclosporine significantly improves the outcome of kidney and other transplants. And one expert said he has seen no evidence of steadily worsening kidney damage, as the latest report suggests.

The Stanford University-based researchers followed 32 heart transplant recipients who have taken cyclosporine for more than a year. Two died and "We think that in the coming years, a good proportion of the remainder are going to do the same," said Dr. Bryan D. Myers, who directed the study.

Cyclosporine, widely credited with making heart, liver and kidney transplants practical because it keeps the body from rejecting the new organ, is most widely used after kidney transplants.

The findings about cyclosporine in the new study are already widely known among kidney specialists, and the researchers said some transplant centers have scaled down their use of the drug in an effort to avoid kidney damage.

After several years of testing, cyclosporine was approved by the Food and Drug Administration for general use last November.

Transplant patients were routinely told to take the drug for the rest of their lives so their immune systems would not attack their new organs.

Myers said the researchers wanted physicians to know that "this is a potentially dangerous drug and that its tradeoff between efficiency as an immunosuppressive agent and potential to do harm to the kidney has to be very carefully weighed."

At the University of Michigan Medical Center, Dr. Robert M. Merion has conducted a four-year comparison study of cyclosporine in kidney transplants. He said doctors have long recognized that the drug can cause some kidney damage.

"Cyclosporine can be used to great benefit for kidney transplants," he said. "We certainly haven't seen any evidence of progressive deterioration of kidney function over a period of four years."

Myers said some transplant centers are now giving patients much smaller doses of cyclosporine, while others have switched patients to older drugs after a few months on cyclosporine. However, it's too soon to know how well these strategies will work.

Some researchers are experimenting with cyclosporine as a potential treatment for juvenile diabetes and lupus. Because of the risk of kidney damage, the Stanford doctors wrote, this therapy "appears to us to be ill-advised and may prove to be self-defeating."

In an accompanying editorial, Drs. Terry B. Strom and Rolf Loertscher of Beth Israel Hospital in Boston agreed that physicians may have unwittingly used excessive doses of cyclosporine.

But they said they are "optimistic" that further research will produce treatment programs "that will preserve the dramatic improvements in the rate of renal engraftment (successful kidney transplant) currenting being seen..."

Boy Who Received Transplant Dies

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A 12-year-old boy who received bone marrow from his dead father in what doctors called an unprecedented transplant has died after waging a seven-year battle against leukemia.

Randy Veenker of Windom died at University of Minnesota Hospitals Tuesday of what doctors called "graft vs. host disease," which means white blood cells from his father's marrow attacked the boy's body and severely damaged his skin, intestines and liver.

Blood tests had shown that the boy's 39-year-old father, Gerald Veenker, would make a good marrow donor for his son. But the father died of a heart attack June 15 while waiting to donate marrow.

Two quarts of bone marrow were removed from the father's body, frozen and transplanted three weeks later into the boy's body. Doctors said it was a medical first, since transplant marrow is usually taken from a living relative.

Randy Veenker had suffered from acute lymphocytic leukemia, which attacks the lymph cells, since he was 5.

"The reason they did it (the transplant) at all was because the (blood) typing had been done before Gerald Veenker's death," hospital spokeswoman Mary Stanik said Wednesday.

"It is not something doctors would do as a routine procedure and they don't think another will be done in the near future because you can't do typing on a cadaver," she said.

After the transplant was performed, doctors said the success rate for marrow transplants generally is 60 percent, but is closer to 35 to 40 percent for transplants to leukemia patients.

Randy Veenker's condition fluctuated from stable to serious after the transplant, and he never left the hospital.

When the transplant was performed, his mother, Rose, said: "I'm just grateful he has been able to get this chance for life (with) the last gift he got from his father."

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government has announced a series of changes it says will make it easier for foreign journalists to obtain visas to work in the country.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said the changes, to go into effect Oct. 1, were in accordance with the final document of the Madrid Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and would be based on "strict observance of the principle of reciprocity" between Poland and other countries.

Permanently accredited foreign correspondents and their families in Poland will now receive annual multiple-entry visas rather than the current six-month visas, Urban told a news conference.

Peres Resolves Dispute, Forms Government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Shimon Peres, on the verge of becoming Israel's prime minister, announced today that he and outgoing Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had formed a bipartisan government and would present it to Parliament this afternoon.

A deadlock between Peres' Labor Party and Shamir's Likud bloc was resolved after all-night negotiations to settle the question of naming a minor minister in the joint Cabinet.

"Despite all the difficulties until now and the problems we still face in the future we are convinced that we are off on a road which holds no little hope for the people and the state," Peres told reporters.

"We are sure that the formation of this government is necessary," said Shamir, who will act as foreign minister for two years before switching positions with Peres.

He told reporters that "we have no experience in this field. There are no precedents and we will have to use all our forces and resourcefulness to overcome the difficulties."

The Knesset, or Parliament, will convene for a vote of confidence in the new government following the signing of the Labor-Likud contract.

Labor and Likud will have an equal number of Cabinet members in the national unity government. Critics say the parity between the sides and their deep ideological differences will prevent the government from making any meaningful foreign policy moves.

Peres said his first step would be to deal with the country's economic problems. "They cannot wait," he said.

Peres said among the issues that must be handled are increasing unemployment, a drop in the country's foreign currency reserves, a projected 400 percent annual inflation rate and negotiations for increased U.S. aid.

Peres and Shamir are scheduled to visit Washington later this month to ask the United States for additional aid in the 1985 budget year to stabilize the weakened Israeli economy.

Other problems likely to crop up despite the joint policy guidelines focus on the future of Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Israeli peace overtures to Jordan's King Hussein.

The sides agreed to stop most settlement building for the next few years. But factions in Labor are dissatisfied with concessions made to Likud over development of existing settlements and construction of some already approved by Shamir's government.

On the other hand, Likud hardliners resent Shamir's agreement to curtail settlements.

Regarding Jordan, the parties agreed to invite Hussein to talk peace without mentioning Likud's demand that the talks be based on the 1978 U.S.-brokered Camp David accords or Labor's contradicting rejection of preconditions in the negotiations.

Peres told reporters that this matching of political opposites was an "innovative" experiment never tried in Israel before.

Shamir said he was certain the government could overcome the economic problems and pull the Israeli army out of Lebanon soon because the sides were in virtually complete agreement over those issues.

The Lebanon problem will be handled by Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, a former Labor prime minister. Most economic matters will be in the hands of Likud's Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai and former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, who will serve as commerce and industry minister.

Under the latest compromise, the portfolios of Religious Affairs and Internal Affairs will not be apportioned until Peres and Shamir agree what to do with them.

Two small religious parties — the National Religious Party allied with Labor and the Sephardic Torah Guardians with Likud — were competing for the Religious Affairs Ministry, holding up the bipartisan agreement.

The National Religious Party had been promised the Internal Affairs Ministry and also wanted the Religious Affairs post, but now will get neither until Peres and Shamir reach a decision.

The Religious Affairs Ministry has wide influence in the Jewish religious community because it controls the state rabbinate and religious courts and provides funds to seminaries.

On Wednesday, when it looked as though talks with Likud would collapse, Labor tried to muster a sufficient parliamentary majority to form a government without its rival because Peres only had until Sunday to present his Cabinet.

Iraq Says Ship Struck In Gulf

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq claimed its gunboats attacked a ship near Iran's Nowruz oilfield today, the fourth consecutive day Iraq has reported an air or naval offensive against vessels in the Persian Gulf.

Iraq's military spokesman said in a statement on Baghdad radio that Iraqi gunboats scored a direct hit on a medium-sized naval target — Iraq's designation for small ships.

He said the Iraqi vessels were not damaged.

It was Iraq's fifth claimed attack since Monday, and it was not confirmed by either Iran or by independent shipping sources in the Persian Gulf.

Iraq has been battling Iran for almost four years in a war that began over a border dispute but has since become a struggle for power between President Saddam Hussein and his secular socialist state and Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Islamic republic.

Since February, the Baghdad government has concentrated its attacks on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf in an attempt to choke off Iranian oil exports and force Iran to negotiate an end to the war.

Iraq also is believed to have attacked ships of the Iranian navy, but it does not describe its targets in detail.

Baghdad's access to the Persian Gulf has been cut off since the Shatt al-Arab waterway, at the northern tip of the gulf, was closed in the early days of the war.

Pope Visits Crew Of Polish Vessel At Canadian Port

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Pope John Paul II broke away from his schedule today to spend time with a seafaring band of his Polish countrymen. He got a T-shirt for his trouble.

The pontiff, on his way to the airport to continue his Canadian tour, stopped at St. John's harbor to meet with the 15 crewmen of the Polish schooner Gedania, which de-toured to Newfoundland because of the papal visit.

After seeing the pope, one seaman said, "We'll be going home a happy crew."

In steady rain, the papal motorcade made its way to dockside, where the 64-year-old pontiff chatted from his limousine window with the young seamen.

He gave them rosaries. They gave him a flag from their 70-foot vessel and a T-shirt emblazoned with the emblem of the yacht club in Gdansk, Poland, their home port.

When John Paul left, the wet-haired, stunned-looking Poles let out a "Whoop!" and hugged each other joyously.

Some said their parents worked at the Gdansk shipyard, birthplace of the Solidarity labor movement, now outlawed by Poland's Communist government.

The Gedania's captain, Wojtek Wierzecki, said he ignored specific instructions of Polish officials not to sail to St. John's to see the pope.

The schooner took part in a trans-Atlantic tall ships race earlier this year and spent the summer cruising the Great Lakes.

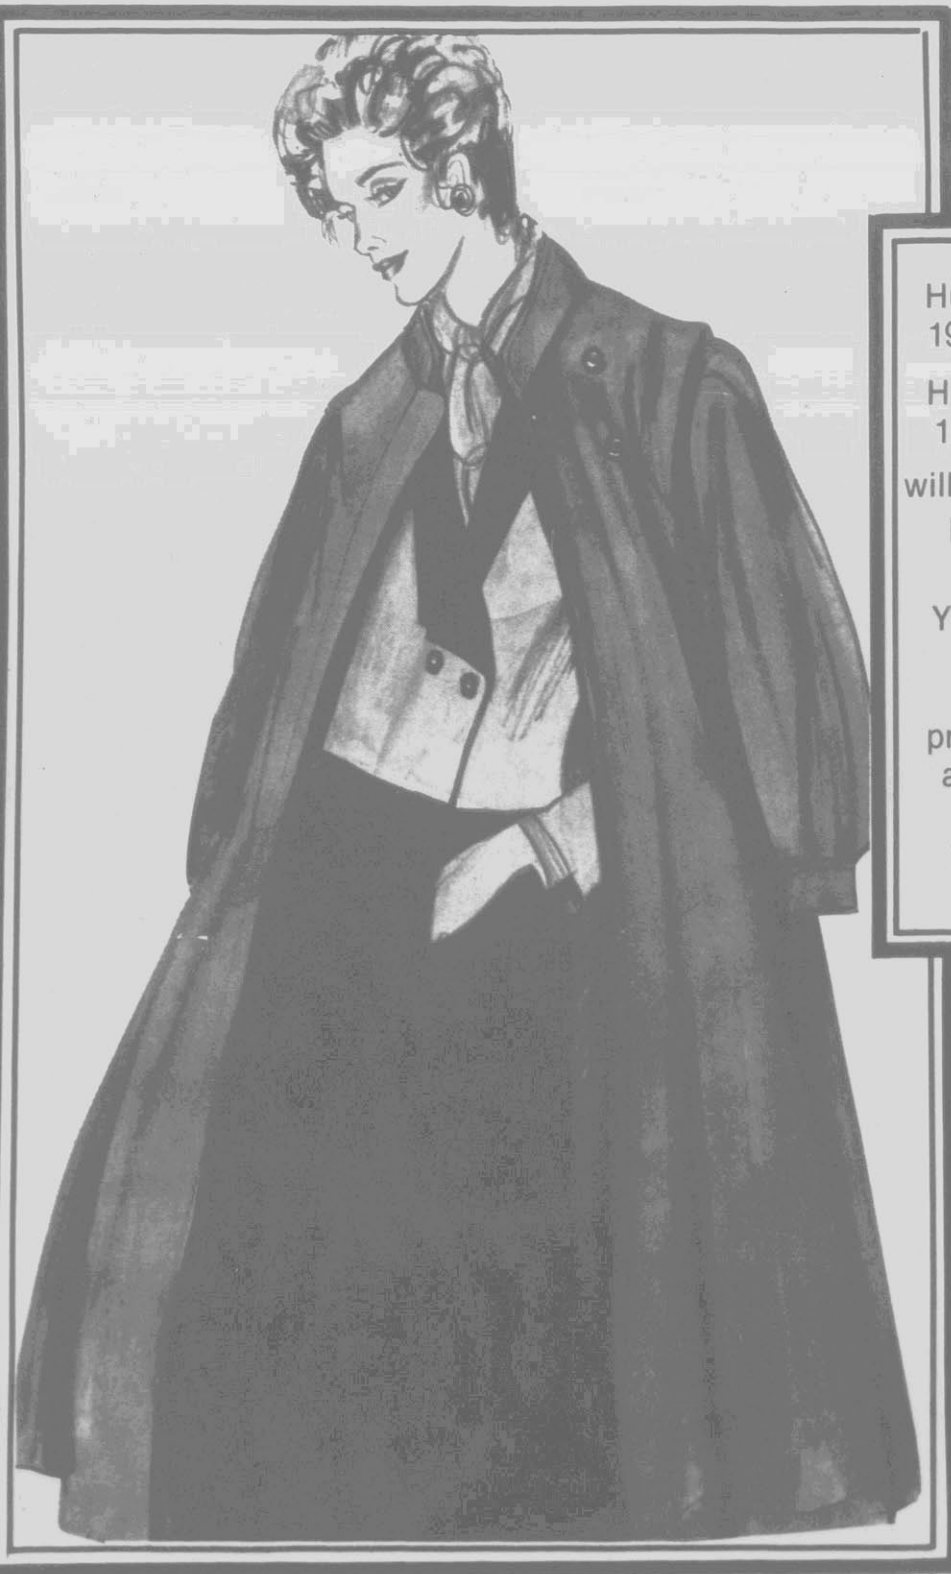

The seamen, on their way back to Poland, were invited to stop at St. John's to receive the papal benediction Wednesday when the pope, on a 12-day Canadian tour, visited Newfoundland and blessed a fishing fleet, Wierzecki said.

House May Knock Out Budget Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of President Reagan's pet legislative initiatives, a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget, likely will die for the year in the House of Representatives today.

Reagan has made the amendment one of his election-year goals and has repeatedly urged the Democrat-controlled House to act on such a measure.

But Democratic leaders who control the legislative agenda in the chamber have refused to bring the measure to the floor.

In response, Reagan's Republican allies have mounted a discharge petition drive to force a floor vote on the issue.

But such a petition would require the signatures of 218 House members, and supporters of the move said Wednesday they were still about 30 signatures short of the goal and did not expect to get the required signatures today.

Under the parliamentary procedures for such a petition, when 218 signatures are obtained, the petition cannot be acted upon for seven working days. Then, the affected legislation only can be brought to the House floor on the second or fourth Monday of each month.

Seven working days from today would go through Sept. 24, the fourth Monday of this month. And congressional leaders plan to have Congress adjourn for the year by Oct. 5, which is before the second Monday in October. Thus the balanced budget drive for this year would be dead in the House.

If Congress does not submit a constitutional amendment to the states for their ratification, 34 states can vote to petition Congress to convene a constitutional convention to draft an amendment.

So far, 32 state legislatures have requested such a convention.

Corn Harvest Expected To Show Bumper Yield

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new production estimate by the Agriculture Department shows farmers are harvesting a bumper corn crop this fall, despite some deterioration in yields last month because of hot, dry weather in parts of the country.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said Wednesday that based on Sept. 1 surveys, the corn harvest is expected to produce 7.55 billion bushels, up 81 percent from the sharply reduced 1983 harvest.

A month ago, in the department's initial production forecast of this season, corn output was estimated at 7.67 billion bushels. The latest estimate, based on Sept. 1 field surveys, was down 1.6 percent.

"Much of the Corn Belt experienced very dry weather during August, but the July rainfall appears to have helped carry the crop," the report said.

In 1983, as a result of drought and the government's acreage programs, U.S. corn production dropped to 4.17 billion bushels — less than half of the record 1982 harvest.

Soybean production, estimated at 2.03 billion bushels, is up 29 percent from last year. However, that was down 7 percent from the August forecast of 2.04 billion bushels. The record was 2.27 billion bushels in 1979.

Despite the August deterioration in some areas, the corn harvest still is expected to be the fourth largest in U.S. history, exceeded by the record 1982 harvest of 8.24 billion bushels; the 1981 crop of 8.2 billion; and the 1979 harvest of 7.94 billion bushels.

President Reagan on Tuesday said the Soviet Union will be permitted to buy an additional 10 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn in 1984-85, raising the potential under a long-term sales agreement to 22 million tons. The pact had guaranteed Moscow the sale of 12 million tons until Reagan's announcement. A similar waiver was issued for 1983-84.

In a related report, the department said total Soviet grain output this year is expected to be 175 million tons, down five million tons from previous estimates. By comparison, the U.S. corn harvest by itself is expected to be about 192 million tons.

A metric ton of 2,205 pounds is the equivalent of 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Teen-Ager Charged In Death By Fright

DETROIT (AP) — A teen-ager was charged with murder in the death of a 34-year-old man who died of fright after three youths burst into his home and robbed him of 80 cents, authorities said.

Alvin White, 18, was arrested after police tracking dogs led officers to the suspect's home, authorities said.

White was charged Tuesday with murder and breaking and entering at a hearing before Detroit District Court Magistrate Vesta Svenson. Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Longworth Quinn, who dismissed an earlier breaking and entering warrant against White, was to decide today whether White should be bound over for trial.

Two other youths, ages 13 and 14, were being held in the Wayne County Youth Home facing murder and breaking and entering charges in juvenile court, said Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Charles Marr. Marr said the youths are too young to be charged as adults.

Faro Ruffino collapsed as one youth yelled at him and demanded money, taking about 80 cents, and as another youth ransacked the house on the city's west side, according to court documents.

Ruffino died at Botsford General Hospital in suburban Farmington of a heart attack caused by emotional trauma shortly after the Aug. 30 robbery, said Dr. William Brooks, Oakland County medical examiner.

Report Links Ulcers With Smoking

BOSTON (AP) — Probably the best thing an ulcer victim can do to avoid recurring bouts of the painful affliction is give up smoking, a study published today says.

About one in 10 of all Americans get ulcers at some time in their lives, and often the digestive sores come back after they heal.

"Smoking appears to be the most important factor in recurrent ulcers," said Dr. Stephen Sontag.

Helms Blocks Early Vote On Genocide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, struggling to break a 35-year deadlock over a treaty outlawing genocide, has hit a snag in the Foreign Relations Committee, where Sen. Jesse Helms says he might demand postponement of action until next week.

The treaty, endorsed by the Reagan administration last week, suffered at least a temporary delay Wednesday when Helms, R-N.C., blocked a vote in the committee. Chairman Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said he would press for action today.

The treaty, signed by President Truman in 1949, calls for legislation outlawing genocide — the deliberate and systematic destruction of a national, ethnic or religious group. Some conservatives oppose it, saying the agreement would be a step toward world government.

Arguing his case, Helms inserted into the committee record testimony against the treaty given in 1970 by former Sen. Sam Ervin, the North Carolina Democrat who gained fame as chairman of the committee investigating the Watergate scandal.

"It would be extremely unwise for the Senate of the United States to ratify the Genocide Convention," Ervin had said. "This is particularly true at a time when it is manifest that a substantial part of the American people wish to contract rather than expand their international obligations."

When Percy asked whether this was still Ervin's view, Helms said he had talked with the former senator by telephone Tuesday, and Ervin had told him the understandings he proposed were necessary. He said he had wanted to have Ervin testify, but was unable to arrange it.

The words of the late Thomas Dodd, a former Democratic senator from Connecticut, were invoked in favor of the treaty by his son, Christopher Dodd, who now holds the same position.

"When the first Senate hearings on the Genocide Convention were conducted in 1950, my father, who had been a prosecutor at the Nuremberg trials, testified in support of the convention as a private citizen," Dodd said.

He quoted the elder Dodd as saying, "We will give hope to people everywhere in the world if we do ratify it. I can't imagine the United States refusing to do so, in a world that looks to us for moral leadership."

"My father's words are as valid today as they were then," Dodd said, urging the committee to approve the treaty and the Senate to ratify it before its scheduled adjournment on Oct. 4.

Theodore B. Olson, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel, cited the testimony of Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, who spoke against the treaty at the 1970 hearing when he was a Justice Department lawyer.

"In 1950 some of the questions concerning federal jurisdiction and the treaty power (surrounding the Genocide Convention) were considered somewhat novel," Rehnquist had said. "However, developments in the intervening years — the extensive use of the treaty power and the growth of federal criminal jurisdiction — have, it seems, illuminated both these areas to the point where I believe I can safely say that the questions before the committee and the Senate are more matters of policy than questions of legal power."

Olsen and Davis Robinson, head of the State Department's office of legal counsel, objected to Helms's proposed understandings. Olsen said the first of them, barring the use of the treaty to pass legislation that would otherwise be unconstitutional, is not necessary. Robinson said the other, limiting international court jurisdiction over acts of genocide, could lead other countries to question U.S. commitment to the treaty.

Helms said he would try to resolve his differences with the administration, but left the door open to insisting upon a delay until next week if they failed to reach agreement.

"I want to support this thing, and I will, providing it is not railroaded," Helms said.

Senate Near Final Vote On Omnibus Banking Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate stands ready to complete action on a far-ranging banking bill, covering everything from interest rates on home loans to how long a bank can hold your check without cashing it.

Four issues remain to be decided before the measure, which will also make it clear what businesses a bank can enter, can come to a final vote.

They concern regional banking, mortgage-backed securities, municipal revenue bonds, and closing a loophole that allows some banks to sell insurance.

To speed things up, the Senate leadership scheduled a cloture vote today to limit debate.

Before that vote, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, has said he would ask for a decision on a motion by Sen. James J. Exon, D-Neb., to make commercial banks with 20 percent of their loans to farmers eligible for special help from the government if they suffer losses in two consecutive quarters. That clause would not cover losses caused by speculation or mismanagement.

A similar provision in the law already helps banks that have 20 percent of their loans in residential mortgages.

Exon said his proposal would allow the government insurance agencies to "go the extra mile" with a farm bank before it put the bank out of business.

He said with the threat of such action "bankers are faced with the choice of foreclosing on farmers or risking foreclosure or merger" themselves.

Two amendments proposed by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, won approval without objection on Wednesday. One would limit increases in the interest rate on adjustable rate mortgages to 5 percentage points over the life of a loan on any home costing less than $500,000. The other would force financial institutions to tell customers in advance if they plan to change or create fees that can be charged against deposit accounts.

Metzenbaum told instances of all of the money in seldom-used small accounts being eaten up by bank fees the depositors knew nothing about.

The Senate also dropped a proposal that would have forced the government to pay banks interest on the money from customers' money market and Super NOW accounts which the banks are forced to deposit with the Federal Reserve.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., won approval for an amendment that would reverse a federal district court decision which overturned the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and Federal Home Loan Bank Board "sledgehammer rule." That measure limits insurance on brokered deposits to a single $100,000, no matter how many accounts are opened.

She said "brokered deposits, if left unregulated, could destroy the federal insurance system" for bank deposits.

Psychiatrists Say Help Needed For Mentally Ill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The policy of opening the doors of America's mental asylums has cast adrift tens of thousands of mentally ill who now live aimlessly on the streets, the American Psychiatry Association says.

The group called Wednesday for a nationwide drive to reach out to these people with programs to provide food, shelter, clothing, treatment and, if need be, a return to an asylum.

Dr. H. Richard Lamb, professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California School of Medicine in Los Angeles, warned that in some cities, emergency shelters "are becoming mini-institutions for the chronically mentally ill, an ironic alternative to the state mental hospitals."

The association said governments at all levels must spend more to help mentally ill street people, who comprise 25 to 50 percent of all the homeless in America. Their precise numbers are not known, Lamb said, but overall estimates of the homeless have ranged from 250,000 to 3 million.

Lamb, who headed an association task force on the problem, said states should rethink laws that now make it difficult to involuntarily commit someone to a mental institution unless he or she can be proven to be dangerous.

These are not just drunks, drug addicts, derelicts or other traditional denizens of Skid Rows, Lamb said.

"We are experiencing a new phenomenon — one of unprecedented magnitude and complexity — and hardly a section of the country, urban or rural, has escaped the ubiquitous presence of ragged, ill and hallucinating human beings, wandering through our city streets, huddled in alleyways or sleeping over vents," Lamb and Dr. John A. Talbott, the APA president, wrote in the summary of their task force report.

The number of patients in state mental hospitals has plummeted from 559,000 in 1955 to about 132,000 today, because of the availability of new, mind-altering drugs and a trend away from long-term, involuntary warehousing of the mentally ill.

The association called for establishing a "comprehensive and integrated system of care for this vulnerable population of the mentally ill," with a "vast expansion" of community housing and shelters, including halfway houses, group homes or high quality board-and-care homes.

It said patients must have an income that covers their living expenses, and they should have easy access to psychiatric care.

Ultimately, each patient should have one person responsible for his or her care, the task force said.

House Review Of Ferraro Data To End Before Nov. 6

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee, mindful of a political deadline, will complete its investigation of Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro before the Nov. 6 presidential election, says a source knowledgeable about the probe.

And, the source adds, it's possible the inquiry into Ms. Ferraro's financial disclosure statements could be shelved if she amends the statements and provides the committee with data she has refused to give it over a six-year period.

The source noted that in its other disclosure case this year, the panel gave Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, the chance to amend his statements before it completed the process that led to Hansen's formal reprimand by the House on July 31.

Hansen refused the offer on the ground that such action would hurt his appeal of a U.S. District Court conviction in April for filing false disclosure statements, according to the source, who spoke only on condition he not be identified by name.

The source made the comments Wednesday after the ethics committee voted 12-0 to investigate allegations made against the liberal Democratic vice presidential candidate by the Washington Legal Foundation.

The conservative public interest law group charges that Ms. Ferraro violated the Ethics in Government Act by not revealing her husband's assets and liabilities on the required disclosure forms she has filed annually since coming to Congress in 1979.

The CBS Evening News, meanwhile, reported the Justice Department has opened a preliminary investigation to determine if federal law was violated by Mrs. Ferraro's request for an exemption from including details of her husband's finances in her House financial disclosure report.

Judy Pond, deputy director of public affairs at the Justice Department, refused to confirm that report, saying: "No comment." Diane Nine, a press aide to Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale, said she was unable to reach Ferraro press secretary Barbara Dixon or other campaign officials for a response.

The foundation also alleges that Ms. Ferraro failed to disclose information about herself, including more than $60,000 in capital gains and interest in 1978 and income of $2,962 in 1981 from a real estate firm she owns with her husband, John Zaccaro.

In announcing the ethics investigation, committee chairman Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the panel was making "no prejudgment of any kind as to the validity of the allegations."

"This committee will now conduct a preliminary inquiry... to ascertain the merit of the allegations," said Stokes, who characterized the probe as "analogous to a grand jury" investigation.

He said he could not predict whether the inquiry could be concluded before the November election or even whether it could be wrapped up by Jan. 3, when Ms. Ferraro's House term ends and the committee loses jurisdiction over her.

Stokes said there was no committee discussion "whatsoever" about whether Ms. Ferraro could avoid the inquiry by filing amended disclosure statements.

In a statement released by her campaign office, Ms. Ferraro said:

"I have made the most complete and thorough disclosure of any candidate for national office in American history. As I understand the committee's rules, receipt of the conservative action group's complaint virtually obligated them to process it. I will cooperate fully with the committee, and I look forward to a favorable outcome."

Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale told reporters that he has "every confidence that the House ethics committee will reach the same conclusion that the American people and I have reached: Geraldine Ferraro is an honest, decent public servant worthy of the people's trust."

There was no reaction from the White House, but Vice President George Bush told a news conference that while the panel is "probably more inclined to be supportive of her," he did not think it would be "trying to influence the election one way or another."

Hansen said he thought the ethics committee had no other choice than to start the inquiry. Asked if he had any advice for Ms. Ferraro, he said: "Everyone has to paddle their own canoe... I've been through an ordeal. I wouldn't wish it on anyone else."

Stokes said the investigation would be conducted in strict secrecy by the staff of the panel, which is comprised of six Democrats and six Republicans.

He said the staff could either propose dismissing the allegations or recommend that the committee formally approve a "statement of alleged violation."

Adoption of a statement would trigger a disciplinary hearing. If the committee concluded afterward that a member violated the law, it could ask the full House to impose punishment — ranging from a fine to expulsion.

The Campaign

Mondale Heads South

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, unable to shake questions about the finances of running mate Geraldine Ferraro, is back in the Deep South trying to shake Ronald Reagan's hold on voters.

"We're behind in the region," Mondale conceded Wednesday during an interview with editors and broadcasters.

"But I think we're going to start gaining," he added. "You see, the campaign is just starting to focus and I believe as we start moving, you're going to see a big pickup."

Mondale hopes that lingering unemployment in such Southern states as Alabama and problems faced by farmers throughout the region will cause some voter disaffection with the Republican president.

The Democratic presidential nominee was emphasizing agricultural issues in appearances today in Mississippi and Tennessee.

Mondale devoted most of his time in Tupelo to interviews with regional editors and television stations.

A Mondale political aide, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said the candidate would make weekly forays into the South from now until Election Day.

The aide questioned the accuracy of polling data put out by the Reagan campaign which says that despite the amount of time Mondale has spent in the South, he has failed to make a dent in the president's lead in the region.

"Our polling figures tell us we've gained," the aide said.

Mondale had a good day on the campaign Wednesday, his rhetoric sharp and well received by good crowds in Davenport, Iowa, and Peoria, Ill.

Reagan Turns Upbeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The background music keeps changing, from the "Beer Barrel Polka" in Buffalo to the country music coming up at the Grand Ole Opry, but the campaign refrain is the same from an upbeat President Reagan: "You ain't seen nothing yet."

"That's our message this year. We'll carry it across America," Reagan said Tuesday before enthusiastic crowds from working class Buffalo to high-tech Endicott, N.Y.

"You ain't seen nothing yet" has become the unofficial slogan for Reagan's re-election effort, and he repeated it three times as he campaigned in New York.

Reagan, who returned to the White House Tuesday evening after his day in New York state, arranged a quick trip to Nashville, Tenn., today for a birthday celebration at the Grand Ole Opry for country music star Roy Acuff.

The president continued to hammer away at Walter F. Mondale's call for higher taxes to reduce the deficits and his Democratic rival's "fairy tale" belief that wage earners wouldn't be hurt.

Reagan also played ethnic politics, dedicating a Catholic-managed housing facility for the elderly and handicapped in Buffalo, walking two blocks with the city's Catholic bishop, Edward Head, at his side, then addressing a sausage and pasta luncheon that brought together the city's Italian and Polish communities.

The "Beer Barrel Polka" was played there and dancers in Polish dress performed, but it was later, in Endicott, that Reagan drew his largest crowd, which the White House said police estimated at 25,000 persons.

Bush

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Vice President George Bush says he understands why blacks have doubts about President Reagan on some issues, but argues those concerns should be eased by steps taken by the administration.

At virtually every stop on his three-day campaign swing through the South, Bush was asked why blacks should support President Reagan's re-election.

At a news conference in Savannah, the question was raised in the context of Reagan's temporary support for giving federal aid to private schools that practice segregation, the president's hesitation in supporting extension of the Voting Rights Act and making a federal holiday of Martin Luther King's birthday, and the administration's record on affirmative action.

"I think those things do raise doubts," Bush acknowledged. "I think the results of them should speak for themselves. But they do raise doubts."

"But I have not seen the proper emphasis placed on all the positive things...," Bush said.

Officials Killed

SAN SEBASTIAN DE GOMERA, Canary Islands (AP) — A Spanish provincial governor and two other people were killed when a sudden wind shift drove a forest fire into the path of the car they were riding in.

Hospital officials said Francisco Alfonso Carrillo, 36, governor of Santa Cruz de Tenerife province, died while coordinating efforts to fight the fire on San Sebastian de Gomera, smallest of the seven Canary Islands, which are part of Spain.

Authorities said the governor was among eight people killed by the fire, which charred 600 acres of pine forest.

Miss Massachusetts, Miss Texas Preliminary Pageant Winners

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Being deaf in her left ear was no problem for Miss Massachusetts, Margaret Marie O'Brien, who won a preliminary talent competition by singing a medley about men at the Miss America Pageant.

And Miss Texas, Tamara Hext, proved true to her state pageant director's assessment that she "has all the parts it takes to win" when she captured a preliminary swimsuit competition in a shimmering white outfit.

A third of the 51 contestants competed in each of three categories Wednesday in the first night of preliminaries, which continue tonight and Friday. The results of the evening gown competition are kept secret to leave some suspense in the selection of the 10 finalists who will vie for the title of Miss America 1985 on Saturday.

The victory by Miss O'Brien, of Weymouth, Mass., came on her 26th birthday.

"This is the greatest birthday present in the world," said Miss O'Brien, who wore a fire engine red sequined sheath slit to the thigh and accented with ostrich feathers as she sang "The Man That Got Away," "The Man I Love" and "My Man" before a crowd of 9,000 at Convention Hall.

"I had my lucky charm on," she said afterward. The silver sand dollar she attached to her underwear belonged to a first runner-up and a second runner-up in previous pageants.

A number of last-minute changes had to be made on the Miss America stage to accommodate Miss O'Brien's deafness, which developed when she was about 5 although doctors are unsure of the cause.

She said the mix of music coming from the monitors onstage made it difficult for her to hear her accompaniment.

Miss Hext, 21, of Fort Worth, Texas, is a hazel-eyed brunette who stands 5-foot-6½, and weighs 114 pounds.

She said she was glad she could prove correct Texas pageant director B. Don Magness, who said before she left for this seaside resort that "there may not be a better body in the U.S."

"He's a very sweet man. I appreciate his compliments. I bet he is glad he said it," said Miss Hext, clasping her swimsuit trophy.

All of the women had private interviews Tuesday with the panel of eight judges, but the results of that competition also are not revealed.

The crowning of Miss America 1985 will end a year in which Vanessa Williams twice made history — by becoming the first black woman to win the pageant and the first Miss America to step down.

Miss Williams, 21, of Millwood, N.Y., gave up her crown in July when a men's magazine published nude pictures of her in intimate scenes with another woman.

Seniors Staging Rallies

Senior citizens are taking to the streets in about 90 cities today to demonstrate their concern for the health of Medicare.

According to the National Council of Senior Citizens, coordinating "Senior Health Action Day" demonstrations, the elderly will hear and make speeches, conduct rallies, stage marches and take other actions to impress upon presidential candidates Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale their insistence that ways be found to save Medicare.

The government's health insurance program faces a financial crisis as grave as the one that confronted Social Security before Congress enacted a bipartisan rescue plan this year.

According to the organizers, senior citizens in Knoxville, Tenn., were to wear price tags on parts of their bodies to represent the cost of recent operations. In Chicago, petitions in the form of a roll of bandages were being presented to Reagan-Bush campaign headquarters.

In Indianapolis, Ind., senior citizens were to register voters in a downtown area at lunchtime; in Seattle, Wash., a giant "get well card" was to be unveiled; in Columbus, Ohio, a lunch of "depression beans and cornbread" was being served at St. Stephen's Community House; and in Fall River, Mass., Gov. Michael Dukakis was expected to speak at a rally in the Lincoln Park amusement park ballroom, according to the council.

In Washington, D.C., the elderly were gathering outside Reagan-Mondale re-election headquarters on Capitol Hill to demand a response to their concerns, organizers said. Seniors New Cumberland, Pa., planned a motorcade to Republican state headquarters in Harrisburg to demonstrate with a large bottle containing dozens of small prescription bottles representing the out-of-pocket costs Medicare patients must pay.

Eric Shulman, legislative director for the council, said a chart showing proposals endorsed by Mondale for overcoming the financial crisis for Medicare and showing what President Reagan has proposed to do will be erected at many of the demonstrations.

The council sent a questionnaire to both candidates asking for their reaction to five proposals that have been advanced for protecting the elderly from various forms of increases in the fees they pay under Medicare and ways to contain the costs of Medicaid, which provides medical care for the poor.

Under the AARP plan, physicians will have to decide whether to sign a written agreement stating they will accept Medicare "assignment" as full payment for their services.

Water Violator

The water supply branch of the state Division of Health Services reported that Smith's Trailer Park in Pitt County was among 81 public water supply systems that failed to notify customers that no sample for coliform bacteria was taken during April.

Federal and state laws require that owners/operators of public water systems submit samples of drinking water each month to a certified laboratory for testing to see if the water is contaminated.

Coliform bacteria is an environmental bacteria found in the soil and in the intestinal tracts of warm-blooded animals, including humans. Its presence in drinking water indicates that some contamination has occurred, according to John McFadyen, an environmental engineer with the water supply branch.

Gospel Sing

A gospel sing will be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness Church in Grimesland.

The featured singers will be Betty and the Sunrise Singers. A special offering will be received for Falcon Children's Home.

Seminar Planned

"Management Communications," a one-day program to help top-level employees in business, industry and government write and speak more effectively, will be offered by East Carolina University Sept. 26.

The program will feature presentations by ECU faculty members and is being sponsored by the department of English in conjunction with the ECU Center for Applied Technology and the division of continuing education.

Information from the continuing education division at Erwin Hall (telephone 757-6143).

Event Cancelled

The Neuse River Foundation sponsored symposium at Fairfield Harbor that was scheduled for today has been cancelled. For more information, call (919) 633-4915.

Advanced Study

Seth Jones III, a history instructor at Farmville Central High School, has become the first student to complete requirements for a certificate of advanced study in the department of history at East Carolina University.

Established in 1981, the advanced study program offers a year of study beyond the master's degree level and is designed to appeal primarily to working teachers.

Jones holds a bachelor's degree in history and a master's in history education, both from ECU. He has taught in public and private schools for the past six years.

Contest Participants

Several area tobacco auctioneers will compete in the fourth annual World Tobacco Auctioneering Championship in Danville, Va., in October.

Billy Clark Jr. of Greenville, Harry F. Crisp of Pinetops, and Garland Leonard of Falkland will be among the participants.

The contest, sponsored by R.J. Reynolds as part of its "Pride in Tobacco Program," will be held Oct. 13 at Auctioneers Park. Auctioneers from around the world will compete.

Gallery To Open

The grand opening of the newly renovated Art Express Gallery will be held Friday at the Old Train Depot, corner of Main and Gladden streets in Washington.

Artists with works on display will be Immy Withers, watercolor, and Linda Boyer, pottery. Also being shown are newly acquired works by J.A. Oertel, a 19th century painter of religious subjects. The Oertel paintings are a gift from Jefferson Davis Snuggs to the permanent collection of the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Admission is free and gallery hours are 9 to 5 Mondays through Fridays.

Women's Day

Women's day services will be held this weekend at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville. A board meeting will be held Friday at 7 p.m. Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach the women's day sermon Sunday at 11 a.m., with music provided by the senior choir. At 7:30 p.m. Sunday, 9-year-old Patricia Phillips will preach, with music by the Last Generation.

World Peace Day

A Bahai-sponsored world peace day will be observed Sunday at 3 p.m. at the home of Karen and Jeremy Tarlo, 107 Paris Ave.

The hosts asked each person attending to bring a prayer or other inspirational reading. Following the readings, Mrs. Tarlo will speak on "The Role of Women in Attaining World Peace."

For more information, call 752-7384 or 752-4483.

Tax Collections

Net sales and use tax collections in Pitt County during July amounted to $524,415, according to state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch.

Totals in several neighboring counties for July included: Beaufort, $250,968; Carteret, $451,398; Craven, $401,726; Edgecombe, $250,154; Greene, $38,362; Lenoir, $369,286; Martin, $121,717; Nash, $435,896; Wayne, $540,086, and Wilson, $426,146.

Net collections in the 100 participating counties during the month amounted to $36,849,681.

Language Classes

After-school foreign language classes have now opened in the Greenville elementary schools. Both French and Spanish are being offered at Eastern, Elmhurst, Sadie Sautler and Wahl-Coates schools.

French classes are also available at Greenville Middle and Third Street schools, and Spanish is being offered at South Greenville.

Enrollment in the classes is limited. The fee is $40 per semester, with $20 due on enrollment.

For more information, call Laurie Lamm at 752-4192.

Advisory Council

Three Greenville men have been named by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the Democratic nominee for governor, as members of an executive business advisory council.

Charles Waller, operator of Waller Tractor Co., Jack Minges, president of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co., and Leslie Garner, president of Garner Merchandiser Inc., are among 75 to 80 businessmen and women from 27 North Carolina counties named as council members.

Edmisten's campaign headquarters said the council "will be an on-going body whose members will advise Edmisten on business and economic development matters during his administration."

Members of the council held an organizational meeting in Raleigh today.

Chapter Meeting

The Down East Chapter of the Painting and Decorating Contractors of America welcomed Darwin Paramore of P&H Painters, Winterville, as a new member Tuesday at its monthly meeting.

Elwood Jones of Jones Painting and Wallcoverings presented a program on spray equipment.

The next meeting is scheduled for Oct. 9 at the Three Steers Restaurant.

Faculty Members

The East Carolina University School of Education added four faculty members to its staff this fall. They include Dr. William F. Barker, formerly of Beaver College, Pa.; Cynthia Allen, a doctoral candidate at West Virginia University; Dr. Marjorie R. Calhoun, Georgia school administrator, and Paul Woods, doctoral student at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Barker and Allen will serve throughout the 1984-85 academic year. Calhoun and Woods are visiting faculty for the 1984 semester.

Two education faculty members have accepted position changes in the school. Dr. Thomas Chambliss, director of student teaching and field services at ECU, is now also serving as assistant dean, and Dr. Parmalee Hawk, assistant to the dean for the past two years, has accepted a clinical assistant professorship.

'Viewpoint' Airs

The recent organization of the Pitt and Greenville schools consolidation committee and the expected results of consolidation will be the topics of this week's "Pitt County Schools' Viewpoint," a radio show aired on several local stations.

Host Barry Gaskins will interview Mark Owens, newly elected chairman of the consolidation committee.

The show is scheduled at the following times and stations: Saturday, 7:30 a.m. WITN-FM, 8:30 a.m. WGHB-AM, 8:25 a.m. WOOW-AM; Sunday, 9:30 a.m. WRQR-FM; 1:06 p.m. WNCI-AM, and Monday, 3:05 p.m. WBZQ-FM.

For further information contact Pitt County Community Schools at 752-6106, extension 249.

Nurses' Registry

Registrars taking calls for the Private Duty Nurses' Registry are as follows: Grace Turner, 756-0375, Sept. 17-21, and Helen McArthur, 756-1854, Sept. 24-28. On weekends, for emergencies call either of these numbers.

Meeting Cancelled

The Coastal Resources Commission meeting originally scheduled for today and Friday has been postponed until Sept. 20-21. The meeting will be held at the N.C. Marine Resources Center/Roanoke Island in Manteo. The sessions begin at 9 a.m. both days and are open to the public.

Checks Stolen

Greenville police are looking for a number of Visa travelers' checks stolen along with identification and credit cards Sunday from a house in Rocky Mount. Detective Pete Lavin said today.

Lavin said 11 Visa checks from First Union Bank, valued at $20 each, were taken in the break-in and two of them have been passed at the Fresh Way Food Store at 810 E. Tenth St.

Lavin said the checks, as well as the credit cards and identification cards, are in the name of Charlie Zimmerman.

The spokesman said anyone having information about the items should contact him at the police department or call Crimestoppers at 752-7777.

Council Meets Tonight

The Greenville City Council will hold its regular monthly meeting today at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

Public hearings will be held on requests to rezone acreage located across and east of Pitt County Memorial Hospital from medical arts to shopping center, a request to rezone a portion of the Tar River neighborhood from R-6 (single-family, duplex, multifamily) to R-6S (single family) and a request to close a portion of John Avenue.

The council will also consider a request by residents to reduce the speed limit on Farm-to-Boulevard from Line Avenue to Raleigh through to 25 mph and to allow on-street parking from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Monday through Friday and over the weekends.

Also on the agenda are ordinances creating civil penalties for violation of Pitt-Greenville Airport regulations and theft or non-return of Sheppard Memorial Library materials.

City Hall is located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

electric department, said "we put our same (emergency) plan into effect last night ... as a precautionary measure." But he noted that "we're all back to a normal mode today."

Dr. Jack Allison, director of the emergency department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said hospital employees are on "disaster alert ... waiting for Diana to decide what she's going to do."

Allison said PCMH employees have been on disaster alert since 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

According to GUC's weather station, 1.48 inches of rain were recorded for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today. The high temperature Wednesday was 82 degrees, while the low for the day was 71. The temperature at 8 a.m. today was 74 degrees.

sheriff's deputy who lives at Carolina Beach, north of where the hurricane came ashore. "Water's everywhere. Long Leaf Mall is so deep we couldn't get through — two to three feet deep."

"When the storm began to move ashore, they had to send people out on four-wheel drives and buses to get them back to the shelter," said New Hanover County Sheriff Joe McQueen.

National Guard Sgt. Randy Norris said he had seen trees toppled and campers overturned as he helped evacuate people, including a pregnant woman who didn't want to leave Norris's car because "she just didn't want to be alone."

McQueen said deputies and National Guardsmen were sent to a shopping center west of Wrightsville Beach to check reports that "people are breaking windows out and stealing radios and things."

Looters broke into a Radio Shack store near Wrightsville Beach and took computers, said an official.

As Diana moved west, she produced gale force winds in North Myrtle Beach, S.C., where a state of emergency was declared.

At the wind's peak, transformers on tortured power lines blew up like fireworks, filling the air with sparks. Columns of water swirled in the darkness and trees bent to the ground.

"We've heard a lot of popping, lights flashing, thundering, lightning," said the Rev. Gerald Massey, one of about 50 people stranded at St. Paul United Methodist Church three blocks from the sea in the island community of Carolina Beach.

"There's a lot of water, a lot of wind and it's really been a rough night...Of course, we had a couple of good prayer meetings down here too."

"It seemed like some of the windows wanted to come out at you," Massey said. "One of the windows on the back blew out, but we put a piece of plywood over that."

Jo Anne Jones, a spokeswoman for the Red Cross Disaster Headquarters in Wilmington, said this morning that the Red Cross was "feeding 12,000 hungry people" housed in 49 shelters in 13 counties. "They were still arriving as of 5 a.m.," she said.

Wilmington police said they would not respond to calls for emergency evacuation until the storm had passed, and the National Weather Service cautioned people to stay away from windows and remain on lower floors of buildings unless they were flooded out.

Carolina Power & Light Co. spokeswoman Elizabeth Beam said it was impossible to tell how much power was out, but that CP&L's nuclear power plant at Southport wasn't damaged. However, outbuildings containing equipment at the plant were damaged, she said.

"There is so much flying debris and bad winds that it's extremely difficult to get crews out and restore power," she said.

At 10 a.m., radar showed the eye of the storm over the Brunswick County town of Supply, inland from the beaches, at latitude 34.1 north and longitude 78.3 west, about 30 miles southwest of Wilmington.

"The main impact of the hurricane is being felt along the beach areas from Wrightsville Beach ... south and southwestward through Holden Beach, North Carolina," the weather service said.

The storm raked Wrightsville and Carolina Beach with winds of up to 90 mph and gusts topping 110 mph, the weather service said. Tides swelled 10 feet above normal.

A water tower at Carolina Beach was blown down, according to officials at Emergency Operations Command in Wilmington, and the broadcast tower of television station WWAY shook under the force of the wind.

After power was knocked out in Wilmington, fire trucks fanned out around the city as numerous reports of fires believed to have been caused by downed power lines were received. Winds compressed by high buildings downtown created whitecaps on water in the streets, drove shingles through the air and lifted emergency vehicles checking for downed power lines.

In South Carolina, Myrtle Beach City Manager Richard Marvin said emergency shelters were reopened to coastal residents at 1:30 a.m. today because of Diana's approach. Emergency officials asked for a voluntary evacuation of low-lying areas and oceanfront residences in Myrtle Beach, he said.

Long lines of cars pulled up outside the evacuation shelter at the Myrtle Beach Convention Center. By 4 a.m. the center was full with an estimated 1,200 people and police were routing evacuees to other shelters, authorities said.

Marvin said 7,000 people had been evacuated by 5 a.m. Of the 15 shelters that had been opened in Horry County, 12 were full by 6 a.m., officials said.

likely to be much higher in areas across the county.

The Tar River, measured at 3.4 feet above sea level at 8 a.m. today, has risen one and one-half feet since Monday, according to GUC. Weather officials say this increase was not significant.

The communities of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton in the southern end of the county reported heavy rainfall in the past 24 hours but officials reported only minor flooding in low-lying areas.

Grifton in particular reported heavy rains and an unofficial measurement in the town recorded over three inches in the past 24 hours.

Pitt County schools were open as usual today and officials said this morning they had no plans to close early unless the weather threat became "a great deal more serious." Greenville schools also were operating on a normal schedule.

Maintenance officials reported no flooding at the county schools, only "leaks here and there and that's normal," according to maintenance supervisor Carl Heath.

GUC Electrical Superintendent Malcolm Green said a power outage in the Winterville area around 3 a.m. today occurred when lightning "blew up a lightning arrester" near Renston, downing a circuit in the Winterville substation. Residents in the area from Renston on N.C. 903 to Pitt Community College, on N.C. 11, were without power for around an hour, Green reported.

hampered by poor visibility under water, said John Huylebroeck, a spokesman for the Belgian Public Health Ministry.

Smit Tak has surrounded the wrecked ship with two pontoons equipped with cranes and seven other salvage vessels. A giant floating crane was on standby in the port of Zeebrugge, 12 miles away, Huylebroeck said.

A film of fuel measuring about six miles by one-half mile spread east of the wreck. Four Belgian navy vessels were spraying detergents on the slick, Huylebroeck said. He said there were plans to pump the remaining fuel out of the ship's tanks.

The Mont Louis sank in about 46 feet of water in the North Sea on Aug. 25 after colliding with a passenger ferry. Heavy storms repeatedly have halted salvage operations that started on Aug. 29.

Fourteen of 22 empty containers have been picked after they floated to the surface through a hole salvage workers cut in the side of the vessel.

Salvage company officials said they also have picked up a crate with high technology equipment that was to be used for the Soviet-European natural gas pipeline. Another crate with similar contents washed ashore at Wenduine, a coastal resort.

Students Sought For Training

The Greenville Employment Security Commission is seeking Pitt County residents who are interested in training courses in welding or foreign automotive repair.

This program will involve one year's coursework at a local community college and will result in certification. All course fees and books will be paid by the ESC. Students also will be reimbursed for their travel mileage.

The welders course will be held at Pitt Community College and will begin Nov. 28. Beaufort Community College will sponsor the foreign car automotive repair class beginning Sept. 17.

Requirements for these classes state that students must be economically disadvantaged and must reside in Pitt County.

Potential students should apply at the Greenville Job Service office at 3101 Bismarck St. for screening and further information.

Too Late, Suicide Victim's Family Finds Savings Account

MARINA, Calif. (AP) — Two weeks after the son of an Army sergeant hanged himself to give his parents "one less mouth to feed," the struggling family has learned that a $1,500 savings account was found in a Kentucky bank.

"That money could have pulled us through," said Jennifer Holley, mother of the boy. "I could've bought groceries. I'd have been OK."

Danny Holley, 13, was found hanging from an eave of the family's rented home on Aug. 27.

He had only lived in this Monterey Bay community since June, when his father, Sgt. Johnnie Holley, moved his family from Germany to Fort Ord in anticipation of a transfer to South Korea. The family's money ran out, and before he died Danny collected cans to help make ends meet.

Several days before his body was found Danny told his mother, "If you didn't have me to feed, things would go better."

The savings account was located late last week. According to Mrs. Holley, every month for three years $46 of Holley's paycheck went to a finance company in Florida to pay off a 1979 furniture loan.

After the loan was paid off the payments continued to go to the finance company and then into a Kentucky savings account, although the Holleys didn't know precisely where, she said.

"We knew all the while we'd have the allotment going to savings (so) we'd have money we could use when we got back (from Germany). It just didn't go right.... It wasn't no million dollars but it would have tided us over," she said.

Holley had written from West Germany last spring to get the money but the letters went unanswered, she said.

Lt. Col. Martin Johnson of Fort Ord's emergency services office said Holley had attempted to resolve the matter with the help of an officer in Germany.

"We eventually checked the records at the (Army) finance center and found the allotment was going to a bank in Kentucky," Johnson said.

About $1,500 of the Holley's money had accumulated in the First Hardin National Bank in Elizabethtown, Ky.

The bank hadn't been kept informed of Holley's whereabouts, so it could not send quarterly statements, W. Bernard Johnson, a senior vice-president of the bank, told the Los Angeles Times on Tuesday.

The Army contacted the bank on Friday and informed the family Monday, Johnson said.

Hope Dwindling For Miner

SHIELDS, Ky. (AP) — Rescuers worked through the night trying to reach a miner trapped 1,600 feet inside a coal mine near where the bodies of three others were found after a huge slab of rock fell in, a state official said.

State Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley said it has not been determined if the fourth miner trapped inside of Bon Trucking Co.'s No. 2 mine was still alive.

"I wouldn't say there is no hope," Stanley said. "But I'd say it would be a remote possibility."

At least three other miners in the vicinity of the cave-in managed to escape, although one of them was injured, officials said.

One of those miners, Rick Simpson, said he had sensed danger. "I told them we're going to get killed if we don't get out of here. I heard the timbers crack and heard the top breaking and I was off."

As he went by the other miners, he said, "they looked at me like I was an idiot or something."

A woman screamed and was consoled by relatives as Stanley announced late Wednesday that the three bodies had been located in the rubble of the mine in Possum Hollow in the eastern Kentucky mountains.

Stanley said today that the body of Mike King, 19, had been removed from the rubble, though it was still in the mine.

He identified the other three miners as Johnny E. Lipfird, 34, Danny R. Simpson, 27, and Bill Worthington, whose age was not available. He said it was not known which of those might still be alive because only King's body was positively identified.

A miner who had helped in the recovery effort said rescuers initially had heard the trapped men "pecking in the mine." But rescue crews later said that they the tapping sound had stopped.

At the floodlit mine entrance, cut into a rock face halfway up Little Black Mountain, haggard rescue workers, black with coal dust from chiseling through rock, ate sandwiches and stood around fires built in old oil drums.

Stanley said about 15 men at a time were working in the rescue effort, which had involved as many as 50 since the accident occurred at 9:20 a.m. Wednesday.

"The bottom is wet, there's about that much water," said Stanley, indicating about an inch. "It's real, real tiresome work."

Stanley said the mine roof was very fragmented, adding that "we're taking all the precautions in the world to not have another accident."

Simpson, who scrambled from the mine as the roof collapsed, said by early Wednesday evening he had little hope for his brother, Daniel, who was among the trapped miners.

"If a 15-foot rock 75 feet long fell on four people I'd say there wasn't much chance they were alive," said Simpson.

Simpson said he and his brother were working as jack-setters in a five-man crew operating a continuous mining machine when the accident occurred.

He said crews had completed "driving" in the section — proceeding into the mountain cutting into fresh coal — and were "robbing" — pulling back and removing coal pillars left to support the roof.

He said that in the immediate area of the mining machine, the roof was unsupported by timbers or roof bolts.

He scrambled through the 28-to 30-inch high coal seam toward the mine entrance, about 1,600 feet away.

He said he escaped "by God's will. I should be in there buried with them, I guess."

Stanley said it would be days before an investigation into the accident could begin.

The accident increased the number of fatalities in Kentucky coalfields this year to 22, and at least 13 have involved roof falls.

Susie Howard, nursing supervisor at the Appalachian Regional Hospital at Harlan, identified the injured miner as Bobby Parker, 25, of Ages. He underwent surgery for a hip injury and was in satisfactory condition, she said.

WAITING — Evelyn Lipfird awaits news on her husband, Johnny, who is one of four men trapped inside a mine in Harland County, Ky. She has maintained a vigil near the entrance of the mine during rescuers' efforts to reach her husband. (AP Laserphoto)

Critic Says EPA Flouting Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional critic of the Environmental Protection Agency says the agency is flouting federal law by delaying, possibly until after Election Day, a list of more than 200 toxic waste sites posing imminent threats to public health.

Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., said the EPA has failed to comply with provisions of the $1.6 billion "superfund" toxic waste cleanup law requiring the agency to update its list of priority waste sites at least once a year.

The EPA on Wednesday formally added 128 sites to the national priority list. But those sites were announced in September 1983, and Florio charged the EPA is deliberately concealing the location of more than 200 other sites ready for listing.

EPA Assistant Administrator Lee Thomas told reporters Wednesday that about 250 new sites will be added to the list later this year, possibly in three to four weeks.

These Builders are also participating in the Thermal Crafted Homes Program™ developed by Owens-Corning Fiberglas.

The THERMAL CRAFTED Home incorporates today's most wanted features for enjoyable living. But its unique energy performance design also helps families save money on heating and cooling costs. In fact, we can estimate the potential annual heating and cooling costs for a specific THERMAL CRAFTED Home. To create our THERMAL CRAFTED Homes, we use the Energy Performance Design System (EPDS) developed by Owens-Corning Fiberglas, the building materials manufacturer who invented Fiberglas® Pink Insulation. And Owens-Corning Fiberglas Insulating Products have been used exclusively to thermally protect our THERMAL CRAFTED Homes. The Energy Performance Design System analyzes such energy sensitive areas as: levels of insulation in ceilings, walls and below grade; size and location and type of windows, door design; levels of air infiltration; heating and air conditioning equipment. Energy savings opportunities exist in almost every construction option, and EPDS helps us quantify each component's contribution to energy efficiency.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today as traders awaited developments in General Motors' labor negotiations.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .55 to 1,200.86 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said many traders were reluctant to make big commitments pending the outcome of contract negotiations between General Motors and the United Auto Workers union.

As the talks resumed today, with the old contract due to expire at midnight Friday, GM had not yet made an expected wage proposal.

Wall Streeters have reckoned that a strike, especially a long one, against GM might be a negative for the market if it significantly depressed the pace of the economy. On the other hand, some observers have said, such circumstances might lead to a decline in interest rates.

GM shares were unchanged at 73 1/2 in active early trading today.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.32 to 1,200.31.

But declines slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 77.98 million shares, down from 101.36 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .05 to 94.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .31 at 212.18.

Vocational Center, City Unit Cancel Plans For Program

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Efforts to reach a facilities operating agreement between Eastern Carolina Vocational Center and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department have been called off by both agencies.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, told members of the department's commission "both sides have agreed not to attempt to arrive at an agreement at this time."

Lee reviewed developments, saying "over a year ago EVCC asked us to consider taking over the operation of the recreational part of the center. You (the commissioners) approved a motion to work on an agreement to be considered by the City Council. We made a thorough study of the benefits we would derive, the benefits ECVV would derive from an agreement."

Lee added, "In recent months the center has decided that they might be able to handle their program alone. This is fine, and there's certainly no hard feelings. We were not seeking the facilities to start with."

In the future, Lee said, if there should be renewed approaches for an operational agreement, "they will be initiated by the center."

Commissioners ruled that favorable consideration cannot be given at this time to a request from Martin County teams to play in the adult basketball league sponsored by the Greenville Recreation Department. Primarily, city ordinances governing use of recreational facilities does not permit the use of facilities by groups outside Greenville and Pitt County. Another factor mentioned is that facilities are currently scheduled to the maximum limit of usage. A suggestion was made that Lee consider inviting the Martin County teams to take part in tournaments in the event area tournaments might be scheduled.

Players, coaches and the manager of the North State League of the Greenville Little League were honored by commissioners at Wednesday night's meeting. The team was the 1984 state Little League champion and recently represented North Carolina at the Southern Regional Little League Tournament held in St. Petersburg, Fla. Each participant was presented a certificate by the commission's chairman, Dr. Alfred King.

The new member of the commission, Bob Clyde, was introduced to the board. Clyde has been appointed by the City Council for a three-year term and succeeds Mrs. J. Knott (Lib) Proctor.

A native of Darlington, S.C., Clyde is a graduate of Mars Hill College, Furman University and the Southeastern Seminary at Wake Forest. Since coming to Greenville in 1971, he has served with the Baptist Student Union in the student ministry at East Carolina University. He and his wife, Olivia Kay, have a four-year old daughter, Katherine. For five years Clyde served on the local Council on Aging.

In annual election of officers for the commission, Dr. Alfred King was reappointed chairman, with Mrs. Sydney Womack elected as vice chairman. Both choices are for a one-year period.

Obituaries

Mrs. Hattie Mae Griffin Sutton died Tuesday.

A graveside service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday in Pinewood Memorial Park by the Rev. Harold Green.

Mrs. Sutton, a native of Winterville, spent most of her life in the Winterville community and had been a resident of Greenville for the past three years. Mrs. Sutton had been active in the Meals on Wheels program sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and attended Arlington Street Baptist Church.

Surviving are a son, Robert Ward Sutton of Rocky Mount; a daughter, Mrs. Mack Ray (Jean) Smith of Bell Arthur; a foster sister, Mrs. Mabel Wynne Currie of Norfolk, Va., four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Friday and at other times will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Ray Smith in Bell Arthur.

Whitaker

Mr. Archie Whitaker, 74, retired farmer, died Thursday.

His funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Friday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Garland Holiday. Burial will be in Martin Memorial Gardens.

Mr. Whitaker, a lifetime resident of Martin County, lived on Prison Camp Road.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Julia Harrison Whitaker; a son, Dillon Whitaker of Martin County; a daughter, Mrs. Doris Scott of Martin County; three brothers, R.T. (Tebbo) Whitaker of Williamston, Horace Whitaker of Norfolk, Va., and Curtis Whitaker of Florida; two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Martin of Robersonville and Mrs. Frances Gurganus of Williamston, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family will be at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. today.

Wiggins

Mrs. Carrie Langley Grimes Wiggins died Tuesday at her home at 1521 Broad St.

Her funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. Leroy Adams. Burial will be in the Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Wiggins was a native of Pitt County and spent her life in Grimesland and Greenville. She was a member of St. Peter Missionary Baptist Church.

Surviving are three daughters, Miss Virginia Battle of Newark, N.J., Mrs. Mattie Blount of the home, and Mrs. Lou Bertha Daniels of Irvington, N.J.; three sons, Jessie and Willie Grimes, both of Washington, and Dan Grimes Jr. of Grimesland; two sisters, Mrs. Luvenia Little and Mrs. Lottie Blount, both of Greenville; two brothers, June and Willie Langley, both of Greenville; seven stepdaughters, Mrs. Mary Stevenson, Mrs. Martha Grimes, Mrs. Ellen Daniels, Mrs. Alice Stevenson, Mrs. Bettie Daniels, Mrs. Emma Moore and Mrs. Lovie Williams, all of Grimesland; 28 grandchildren, 65 great-grandchildren, and 16 great-great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at Flanagan's Funeral Chapel from 7-8 p.m. Friday.

Five Seniors Climb In Merit Competition

Four seniors from Rose High School and one from Williamston High School are among 15,000 high school students nationally who have been announced as semifinalists in the annual Merit Scholarship competition.

The Rose High students are William C. Deanhart, Elizabeth A.

Kane, Charles H. Moore and Josie Wilem. The Williamston High School student is Stephen J. Batten.

They must advance to finalist standing in order to continue in the competition for about 5,500 Merit Scholarships, valued at over $20 million, to be awarded in the spring of 1985.

The semifinalists were selected from more than 1 million juniors attending over 18,000 secondary schools throughout the nation who took the qualifying test and the preliminary scholastic aptitude/National Merit Scholarship qualifying test.

In 1985, non-renewable awards will be increased in value from $1,000 to $2,000. Also, 1,800 National Merit Scholarships of $2,000 will be offered. This year marks the 30th year of the National Merit Scholarship program, which is based in Evansville, Ill.

No School Changes

Officials at Greenville schools said that as of mid-morning today, no plans had been made to change any of the schools' schedules due to the weather.

At Greenville Middle School and Aycock Junior High, some problems were being encountered due to roof leaks, a spokesman said. Workmen are replacing roofs at both schools and weather conditions have hampered their efforts to get the roof work done. The leaks have not hindered classes, the spokesman said.

The City has an informational brochure on City services. If you would like a copy, call Nadine Bowen in the City Manager's Office, 752-4137.

Expensive Toilet

CHICAGO (AP) — An elderly widow says she never became suspicious of a contractor who allegedly charged $16,000 for six visits and told her it would cost $50,000 to fix a leaky toilet.

But a concerned bank clerk did, and called an off-duty police officer moonlighting as a guard. They may have saved 84-year-old Rose Rolek's life savings.

"I was never suspicious, but the price always seemed too high," Mrs. Rolek said. "My sister-in-law was always hollering at me, 'You're paying way too much.'"

"How was I to know? When you get someone to do some work, and they come out and see there's no man in the house, they can charge you anything they want."

Eight Central Home Improvement Contractors employees were arrested Wednesday as they tore up the floor of Mrs. Rolek's basement. They were charged with criminal damage to property and released on $100 bond pending an Oct. 11 court appearance.

Central owner Willie Nearn Sr., was unavailable for comment Wednesday. An answering service handling the company's calls said no employees were in the office "and probably wouldn't be for the rest of the day." There was no answer at the company's offices today.

Bank clerk Joyce Narducy began unraveling the case when Mrs.

Rolek went to Citicorp Savings on Monday and withdrew $25,000. After being told it was for a plumbing job, Ms. Narducy summoned James Ryan, a 22-year police veteran working mornings as a bank security guard.

Ryan asked Mrs. Rolek if she had a contract for the job.

"She pulled a piece of paper out of her purse," Ryan said. The paper stipulated she would pay $25,000 immediately and make a series of $5,000 monthly payments, for a total of $50,000.

Helms Visit Set

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, a candidate for re-election in the November general election, will be in Greenville Saturday.

Nita Raspberry, Helms' Pitt County campaign coordinator, said the senator is scheduled to arrive at the Pitt-Greenville Airport at 2:45 p.m. She said he will go immediately to the Helms for Senate headquarters at 608 E. Tenth St. where he will meet with members of the press and stay to greet area residents and campaign volunteers.

Helms is scheduled to spend the night in Greenville and leave early Sunday morning, Mrs. Raspberry noted.

Correction

The ladies of Ayden's First Baptist Church will hold their fall bazaar Sept. 23, beginning at 9:30 a.m. The date was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Daily Reflector.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The proposed zoning change of property adjacent to Pitt Memorial Hospital WILL NOT be on the agenda of the Greenville City Council meeting on Thursday, September 13. It will be rescheduled at a later date.

Bears Offer First Road Test For Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The Rose High School Rampants made a successful debut last Friday night, but now they have to take their show on the road and see if the rave notices follow.

Friday night, Rose travels to New Bern to face the Bears in a 7:30 p.m. game, and first-year Coach Chip Williams is hopeful of a repeat — no, make that a better performance in front on the first hostile crowd the Rampants face this year.

Last Friday, Rose opened against Jacksonville, rolling up a 28-0 lead in the first half, then settling for a 28-14 victory at the end. Rose failed to move the ball a great deal after the first quarter, taking advantage of Cardinal errors to score the final two touchdowns in the second period.

Sophomore Anthony Cobb scored three of the touchdowns for Rose, while Tyrone Smith scored the other after picking up a fumbled punt reception by Cobb, going 90 yards with the ball.

And while there was happiness in the celebration of the victory, there were also some problems too. Starting fullback Tom Moore suffered a broken leg on the second play of the second quarter and will be lost to the team for about six weeks. Moore had carried the ball nearly 80 yards on just four plays prior to his injury.

Williams, while pleased with the outcome of the game, still feels that there is room for improvement with the Rampants. "We had some breakdowns on technique on defense. We got some great hits but we gave up too many yards when we shouldn't have. We have to get better on our gap coverage and our defensive techniques.

"On offense, we always want to play ahead. But we've got to learn in game situations not to sit back and relax when we do get ahead," Williams added.

He laid the blame for some of the Rose lack of success in the second half to turnovers and penalties. Rose had only one of each in the first half, but came back to have two lost fumbles and six penalties for 59 yards in the second. "After Tom went out — on a fumble — most of our drives ended with a turnover or a penalty that prevented us from completing a first down. We just can't allow turnovers. We have to stop that. And we have to stop getting penalties like that too....."

Williams said perhaps Rose could have passed more in those situations, but he prefers not to pass that much with a lead, increasing the chances of an interception. "So we were limited in what we could call when we got penalized deep."

After the game, Williams said he was bothered by the lack of intensity by the Rampants in the second half. Wednesday, he said that he felt this would come with experience. "They've been there now and they've seen what can happen when you relax."

Williams, while saying that the Rampants must improve on their pass defense, was still happy with the three interceptions Rose pulled off, two of them by Adrian Brewington. "There were times, however, when we didn't do the job. We did take them out of their running game, which was what we wanted."

Williams singled out the play of lineman Steve Wall on offense, as having graded the highest of the linemen. "Dwight Smith (wingback) did a good block job blocking, and Tom Moore did a good job running and blocking as long as he was in there. Mo Matthews came on in relief of Moore and played well, grading 80 percent. That's encouraging." Matthews will move into the number one spot now.

And while Rose didn't have that much success running the ball in the second half, Williams laid the blame of that on stunts Jacksonville ran which the linemen didn't pick up. "Still, the line as a whole graded out higher than any line I've had in the first game. What we need to do is improve and this is the week when you should see the most improvement in the entire season, between the first and second game."

Defensively, Darryl Perkins drew plaudits for his linebacker play. "He didn't get the number of hits we wanted from him and the other linebackers and linemen. We had too many single hits and not enough team hits.

"Brewington obviously had a good game with two interceptions and 11 hits, but that's too many hits for a defensive back. L.C. Atkinson also played well in the line."

This week's challenge against the Bears, who come in 1-1, has Williams worried about the weather conditions. With Hurricane Diana continually dumping shower after shower on the area, he's worried that the field could turn into one big mud-puddle.

"I don't want it to turn into a mud-bath," he said. "New Bern is a much bigger team than we are, and I don't want their size to become the only factor in the game. We need to use our quickness to offset their size."

The Bears have, in Williams' opinion, a good running back in tailback Anthony Grist, 5-10, 222. Grist ran for 68 yards in last week's 9-6 loss to Kinston, and had 30 in the season opener, a 6-2 win over 3-A Havelock. New Bern netted only 67 yards rushing in the Kinston contest.

However, John Bordon has been the man who has found the end zone for the Bears, scoring both of their touchdowns.

Both games have developed into defensive struggles as the Bears have limited their opponents to only 159 total yards in the two games. Havelock rolled up 97 on the ground but got only five through the air. Kinston was held to just 16 yards rushing and 41 yards on the pass.

"They've got big people on their defensive line," Williams pointed out. "Their nose guard goes 235, their tackles 297 and 240. They're big at linebacker too, so it's going to be hard to run on them."

"We're going to have to play well, play our game and go from there. I feel like we're a balanced team with a good running game and a good passing game. We're got good receivers. Tyrone Smith (3 of 3 last week) is excellent, but the others will do as well before the season is over."

"One thing I've been told: New Bern always plays Rose tough," Williams said. "I don't expect things to be any different Friday night."

Gooden Says He Thinks He's Learning To Pitch

(Also See Story On 18)
By MIKE CLARK
AP Sports Writer

On a night when Dwight Gooden was compared with the best pitchers in baseball, the New York Mets' sensational teen-ager uttered a statement that should scare the dickens out of every hitter in the National League.

"I think I'm learning how to pitch the hitters," Gooden said, as if he has it in mind to improve.

Few who watched Gooden's 16-strikeout, five-hit, 2-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday night could find fault with anything the 19-year-old right-hander did.

Displaying a business-like manner throughout the evening, Gooden routinely sent Pirate batters strolling back to the bench with their bats in hand.

When he made Marvell Wynne his 11th victim, he passed Herb Score's major-league record for most strikeouts by a rookie. Score set the mark of 245 when he broke in with the Cleveland Indians in 1955. Gooden now has 251.

Gooden said he had grown up admiring strikeout artists Nolan Ryan and J.R. Richard because he was often compared to them.

"But I'm a little different than them," he noted. "I try to use location and I also throw a change-up."

The only negative note was the news from Chicago — Ryne Sandberg's three-run home run had sparked the Cubs to an 11-5 victory over Montreal. That kept Chicago seven games ahead of New York in the Eastern Division title chase with only 16 games to play.

Cubs 11, Expos 5

Sandberg's three-run homer capped a five-run sixth inning that reduced Chicago's magic number to 10. Any combination of Cub victories or Met losses totaling 10 will move Chicago into postseason play for the first time since 1945. Tim Stoddard, 10-5, pitched two innings for the victory. The loss went to Expos starter Bryn Smith, 11-12.

Ron Cey singled leading off the sixth, moved to third on Jody Davis' single and scored on Tom Verzyr's groundout to tie the score 2-2. Bob Dernier later singled home the go-ahead run, and Sandberg followed with his 19th homer to give the Cubs a 6-2 lead.

Dodgers 8, Padres 1

Guerrero homered with Bill Russell on base in the third inning and connected again in the ninth after Greg Brock had walked to provide all the offense needed by reliever Burt Hooton, 3-4. Hooton pitched the last eight innings, allowing one run and seven hits, after Dodger starter Rick Honeycutt came down with a sore shoulder.

Dave Dravecky, 8-8, gave up four runs in 4 2-3 innings as San Diego lost for the ninth time in 12 games.

Reds 7, Giants 4

Concepcion drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double to spark a five-run Cincinnati first. Parker drove in the first run of the inning with a single and Wayne Krenchicki ended things with a single that scored Concepcion.

Parker also drove in runs with a double in the fourth and a grounder in the eighth.

Manny Trillo doubled in two runs and scored another for the Giants.

Mark Grant, 1-3, lasted only one-third of an inning in taking the loss. Jay Tibbs, 4-2, pitched seven innings and Ted Power earned his eighth save.

Braves 4, Astros 1

With the score tied 1-1, Paul Runge and Alex Trevino singled to open the seventh. After both runners moved up on a sacrifice bunt, Milt Thompson received an intentional pass to load the bases. Ramirez, who had driven in a run with a sixth-inning single, then bounced a chopper to shortstop Craig Reynolds. Runge scored as Reynolds flipped the ball to Bill Doran for the force at second, and Trevino came around when Ramirez beat Doran's throw to first.

Perez, 12-6, walked three and struck out seven as the Braves defeated the Astros for the seventh straight time this season. Dave Smith, 3-3, took the loss in relief of starter Joe Niekro, who pitched no-hit ball for 5 1-3 innings and left with a three-hitter after six.

Phillies 3-6, Cardinals 1-5

The Phillies trailed 5-3 in the eighth inning of the nightcap when Bruce Sutter, the National League record-holder with 42 saves, was beckoned from the St. Louis bullpen. But instead of earning his 43rd save, Sutter, 5-5, served up a pitch that Matuszek deposited in the right-field bleachers. After that three-run shot, Tug McGraw, 2-0, completed a 2 1-3-inning stint for the victory.

In the opener, Rawley, 9-4, scattered seven hits, struck out four and didn't issue a walk. The hard-luck loser was Kurt Kephshire, 4-5, who allowed a run in the second on a double-play ball and in the fourth on a passed ball. Ozzie Virgil singled in the final Philadelphia run in the sixth.

Vance Defeats Rose Kickers

WILSON — Henderson Vance High School defeated the Rose High School soccer team, 4-1, yesterday in the second round of the Hunt Invitational Soccer Tournament.

Vance, the pre-tournament favorite, will now face hosting Hunt for the championship on Saturday. Rose faces Northeastern, a loser to Hunt in a double overtime shootout, in the consolation championship game at 6 p.m. in Fleming Stadium.

Dale Mayfield put Vance ahead in the first period, scoring at the 20 minute mark. He added a second goal with just a minute left in the half for a 2-0 halftime lead.

Wilson Hoyle scored for Vance 28 minutes into the second half, followed five minutes later by Rose's only goal. That was scored by Jordy Smith with an assist by Carl Wille. Hoyle closed out the scoring with his second goal four minutes later.

Rose goalie Gregg Ward had 17 saves in the contest.

"I thought we played pretty well," Coach Will Wiberg said. "We controlled the action most of the second half, and but for a few mental lapses could have made it a much closer game. Except maybe for (Raleigh) Sanderson, Vance is the best team we've ever played."

Wiberg cited the play of Tommy Perkins, Burt Aycock and Scott Davis in the contest.

Now 1-1, Rose closes out the first week of the season Saturday in the consolation contest against Northeastern.

Swim Club Sets Intrasquad Meet

The Greenville Swim Club will hold a intrasquad meet on Friday at 5:45 p.m. in the Minges Coliseum pool.

The meet will be the first experience for all of the new swimmers to get the feel of competition swimming and to establish times for their events. It will also be good experience for the parents in running a meet.

A pizza party will follow the meet for all swimmers and parents. Cost of the party will be $2 per person.

Met Sensation Leared A Lesson

NEW YORK (AP) — It was not a particularly historic confrontation, but it taught Dwight Gooden a lesson.

He learned what it was like to be on the receiving end, for a change.

"I remember facing Nolan Ryan once this season," said Gooden, the New York Mets pitcher and baseball's new rookie strikeout king. "It was hard because all I was thinking was I didn't want the ball to come in and hit me. It's tough."

Wednesday night, the 19-year-old Gooden was the one who was tough. He struck out a career-high 16 batters, three short of the major league record, in a 2-0 shutout of the Pittsburgh Pirates and broke the single-season rookie record set 29 years ago by Herb Score of the Cleveland Indians.

Score had 245 strikeouts in 1955. Gooden has 251 with probably three more starts left this season.

"When you pitch, you have to take charge. You have to have the attitude that you're the best," Gooden said afterward. "You can't let the hitters intimidate you."

Indeed, it was the other way around.

Gooden struck out the side twice, in the fifth and eighth innings. He struck out Tony Pena, Jim Morrison, Doug Frobel and Denny Gonzalez — three times each. In fact, of the four, Pena was the only one to hit a fair ball, flying to right field in the ninth inning.

With his five-hitter, Gooden pitched his second straight shutout and earned his seventh straight victory, raising his record to 16-8. In his past seven appearances, he has allowed only seven earned runs for an ERA of 1.05 and struck out 80 batters. He threw 120 pitches against the Pirates, 92 for strikes. His fastball was clocked at 93 mph.

"Everybody likes to see a great talent express itself," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said, "and he's certainly doing that. He's making some pretty good hitters take some pretty weak swings.

"He's going to be really scary when he begins to use his changeup more and knows the league from the get-go," Johnson said.

To the Pirates, he was scary enough now.

"All you can try to do is make contact," said Marvel Wynne, the batter Gooden struck out to break Score's record. "He throws so hard that all you're trying to do is protect the plate."

In addition to breaking the rookie strikeout record, Gooden also is striking out batters at a record pace, 11.18 per nine innings. The major league record ratio is 10.71 by Sam McDowell in 1965. The man with whom Gooden is most often compared, the Houston Astros' Ryan had the next highest figure, 10.57 when he struck out 383 batters for California in 1973.

Gooden, the youngest player in the major leagues, says the comparisons started at an early age.

"I liked both J.R. Richard and Nolan Ryan because when I was growing up, they compared me to them," said the Tampa, Fla.-born Gooden. "I think they compared me to them because I throw hard. But I'm a little different than them, too. I try to use location and I throw a changeup."

Gooden has built a huge lead over Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles for the major league lead in strikeouts. Valenzuela has 212. If he continues to lead, he would become the first rookie teen-ager to do so. Bob Feller led the majors with 240 strikeouts for Cleveland in 1938 at age 19, but he was in his second season.

"I never really think about strikeouts," Gooden said. "I just wanted to win, and I wanted to keep the shutout."

Gooden said he had thought about the record after his last outing, when he struck out 11 last Friday night to beat Chicago 10-0.

"They said I could do it tonight," he said, "but I was thinking about winning. I thought it might take two nights."

Gooden came into the game needing 10 to tie and 11 to break the mark. He didn't strike out a hitter in the first inning, but he got two each in the second, third and fourth innings. He struck out the side in order in the fifth, giving him nine, and he got opposing pitcher John Tudor looking at a 2-2 curveball to start off the sixth.

That brought center fielder Wynne to bat. The count went to 2-2, and Wynne swung under the next pitch, a high fastball over the plate, to earn his dubious spot in baseball history.

The Mets infielders all surrounded Gooden for congratulations, and the ball was taken out of play to become a souvenir for the young pitcher. His next big souvenir could be the NL's Rookie of the Year award.

"If he does win it, I'm sure he's the type of young man who will take it in stride," said Darryl Strawberry, who won the award for the Mets last season. "He accepted this just like any other game."

Doctor K

The New York Mets' pitching sensation Dwight Gooden relaxes in the locker room after Wednesday's game against Pittsburgh in which he struck out 16 batters. The number increased his total to 251 for the year, setting a new major league record for rookie pitchers. The 2-0 win was his seventh in a row. (AP Laserphoto)

Carolina Set To Open Its Season

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Pre-season favorite North Carolina tangles with Navy while Georgia Tech hosts 19th-ranked Alabama as the Atlantic Coast Conference kicks off a second weekend of inter-sectional battles.

The Tar Heels and the Yellow Jackets are the only ACC teams opening their season this weekend. No. 2 Clemson, 55-0 victors over Virginia last weekend, takes this Saturday off.

In other games involving ACC teams, Vanderbilt goes to Maryland, Furman to North Carolina State, VMI meets Virginia and Appalachian State is at Wake Forest.

Coach Dick Crum ended early speculation this week when he announced sophomore Kevin Anthony would start at quarterback against the Midshipmen at Kenan Stadium. Anthony played six games last season behind Scott Stankavage, throwing one touchdown and one interception.

Crum added that Mark Maye will also get attention in the early going.

"It will probably be a week to week thing although I don't know that every Tuesday we will have an announcement of who the starter is going to be," Crum said.

Navy features tailback Napoleon McCallum, touted by the academy for the Heisman Trophy.

"McCallum probably gets two-thirds of his yards after the first hit. He is strong and pulls through tackles," Crum said of the 1,500-yard back of 1983. "I guess you would say he's got sneaky speed."

Georgia Tech returns tailback Robert Lavette, but lost reserve Cory Collier following a foot injury. Nonetheless, Curry says his players are ready to hit somebody else, although it will be a Crimson Tide team knocked off by Boston College last weekend.

"Our only advantage in having their player is that we've gotten to see their personnel," Curry said. "But they have an enormous advantage in that they've gotten a lot more playing time."

Vanderbilt opened with a 26-14 triumph over Kansas State while the Terrapins were plagued by six turnovers in a 23-7 loss to Syracuse. With the troubles of trying to whip an inexperienced team into shape, Coach Bobby Ross expects his club to come back strong.

"Maryland football is still alive and it will get better before it gets worse, I promise you that," Ross said. "You never want to lose, but you hate to lose and look bad."

Furman has beaten N.C. State once before and has taken Division I-A scalps in the last two years.

"They will come in wide eyed and ready to go," Wolfpack coach Tom Reed said of the 2-0 Paladins. "Why do I say that? History shows that to be true. If we don't prepare for that, then we are fools."

Virginia had very little to glean from its loss to the Tigers, but George Welsh says he will not dwell on the game as an indication of what the rest of the year will bring.

"We're not going to base much on the Clemson game," Welsh said. "I think we're a better team than we were last year, but it may not be until mid-season before we find out what kind of team we've got."

If Wake Forest needs any incentive before Saturday, it needs only to remember last year, when linebacker Joel Carter returned two interceptions for touchdowns in a 27-25 upset victory. The Demon Deacons do need a quarterback and Al Groh hasn't decided who that will be. Last week, Jamie Harris started and Foy White finished. Of more concern to Groh is the Mountaineer offense.

"In their opening game at Clemson, they ran a conservative attack most of the game," he said. "Then this past weekend, they threw the ball 50 times in beating Western Kentucky, so we must prepare for both types of attack."

Chris Wins Exhibition

RANCHO BERNARDO, Calif. (AP) — It wasn't the real thing, but Chris Evert Lloyd says she'll take a victory over Martina Navratilova any way it comes.

"It was great to win, even in an exhibition," Evert Lloyd said Wednesday night after scoring a 6-2, 7-6 victory over Navratilova in an exhibition match here. "Even though it wasn't a tournament, it's always a thrill to beat Martina. I'll take it any way I can get it."

Evert Lloyd, relying on powerful ground strokes and effective lobs, capitalized on unforced errors by Navratilova to score the upset victory, winning the tiebreaker 7-4.

Her victory came five days after she had succumbed to Navratilova, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, in the finals of the U.S. Open championships in New York. She has not defeated Navratilova in their last 13 tournament meetings.

Both athletes appeared fatigued during the match, played under the lights at the Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Evert Lloyd breezed through the opening set, her sharp baseline game preventing Navratilova from approaching the net. When she did, Evert Lloyd went to the lob, with Navratilova straining to follow the path of the ball through the lights.

Evert Lloyd broke Navratilova in the fifth game of the second set to go up 3-2, but Navratilova broke back at 3-3. The two then stayed on serve, forcing the tiebreaker.

They battled to 4-4 before Evert Lloyd took a point on her serve, then watched a Navratilova forehand sail long on the next rally. Match point provided the longest exchange of the match, which ended when Navratilova was wide and long on a baseline shot.

"Chris played really well," said Navratilova, who has won 55 straight tournament matches and six consecutive Grand Slam titles. "I had a bit of a problem seeing the ball. My game is to go to the net, but when Chris lobbed over me I didn't follow the ball too well."

Eichelberger Is Caught In Middle

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Eichelberger knew he could be in for some tough times when he began to change his game a couple of years ago.

"My golf game," he declared in massive understatement, "is not precisely state-of-the-art at the moment."

"In fact, it's downright awful," the outspoken Eichelberger said before teeing off today in the first round of the $300,000 Milwaukee Open.

"I am caught in the middle, the netherlands of golf," he said. "I'm not where I want to be. And I'm not where I want to get to. Now, I can't get back to where I was and I sure haven't got to where I want to go. I'm somewhere in the middle and it's not a lot of fun. There are very few giggles around here, where I am right now."

Not only are the giggles few and far between as Eichelberger tries to restructure his game, so are the checks.

Now in his 18th season as a touring pro, and with five titles (including two victories in Milwaukee), two $100,000-plus seasons and a respectable career behind him, Eichelberger is immersed in the golfing horrors. He's missed the cut in 19 of 27 starts this season, including 10 of his last 12. His high finish for the year is a tie for 44th. His stroke average is near 75. And he ranks a distant 185th on the money-winning list with $6,287, a figure that doesn't even begin to cover expenses.

"I am so broke," he said, "that if steamboat rides were 10 cents apiece, all I could do is run up and down the bank and yell, 'well ain't that cheap."

But the funny man called Berger by his fellow pros is determined to continue with his experiment, which started a couple of seasons ago as he approached age 40, often a traumatic landmark for professional athletes.

"I wanted to get something, a game, a swing, that would last a little longer, let me play longer," said Eichelberger, 41. "I still think it was the right idea."

"I'm going to keep on trying to go ahead with it. Besides, it seems like I can't get back to where I was before even if I wanted to. So I'm gonna give it one more year (he's exempt through the 1985 season), and then I guess we'll just have to see."

While Eichelberger is fighting his personal battle for tour survival, Tom Watson, Tom Kite and Cal Peete are engaged in a struggle for the major seasonal honors: Vardon Trophy, Player of the Year, leading money-winner.

Watson, a three-time winner this season, leads Kite by about $95,000 in the money-winning race and has a slender lead, 60-58, over Kite on the point list from which the Player of the Year is chosen.

"I want to protect those positions," said Watson, who added that his playing plans for the remainder of the season depend on the outcome of this event.

Kite also is in the race for the Vardon Trophy, which goes to the man with the low stroke average. He leads Peete, a two-time Milwaukee winner, 70.79 to 70.80.

Conley Tops North Pitt

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley took a pair of volleyball matches from North Pitt yesterday, extending its record to 4-0 on the young season.

The Valkyries won the first match, 15-4, 15-2. Rhonda Jackson served up nine straight points to lead the Valkyries in that field, while Debbie Patrick and Lisa Mills had three and four effective hits, respectively, to pace that department.

In the second match, designated as a junior varsity match, Conley took a 15-3, 15-3 victory. Lynn Keeter and Miriam Fulford each had five straight points on serves, while Hannah Hill and Rhonda Hills each had five effective hits.

Conley travels to Ayden-Grifton today, while North Pitt, now 0-2, is idle until next week.

Royals Regain Lead Tie

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer

George Brett came back, Oxin Concepcion came back, the Royals came back, the American League West went back to a tie and now it's a 17-game season for Minnesota and Kansas City.

After losing the first two of their last three games with the Twins this season, the Royals regained a share of first by breaking a tie in the ninth inning Wednesday night. Jorge Orta's sacrifice fly drove home Concepcion, who was 4-for-4 on the game, and gave Kansas City a 3-2 victory.

"It was real important game because it was a two-game swing," said Brett, who singled to drive in Concepcion in the fifth inning. "If we lose, we're two games out, now we're tied."

"We have a heck of a chance and now it's just a race between us and Minnesota to see who wins more games the next 17 days."

Concepcion hadn't played shortstop since Aug. 10 because of a broken left hand.

And Brett had missed 20 games with a torn left hamstring, and will run the remainder of the torrid race, the third baseman announced, at only half-speed — perhaps appropriate in a division whose first-place teams are three games over .500.

The Royals and Twins are 74-71 with 17 games to go — seven at home and 10 on the road for each. The Royals play Oakland, California and Seattle; the Twins play Chicago, Cleveland and Texas.

The Angels, two games back after Wednesday's 7-1 loss to Cleveland, are only one back in the loss column and play 11 of their remaining 19 games at home.

Elsewhere around the AL, Chicago defeated Oakland 4-2, Toronto edged New York 2-1, Baltimore bopped Detroit 3-1, Boston topped Milwaukee 5-4, and Texas romped over Seattle 8-1.

Bud Black, 15-11, allowed six hits in eight innings and Dan Quisenberry picked up his 40th save.

Up 1-0 after Brett's RBI single, the Royals went ahead 2-0 in the seventh when Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Don Slaught.

Black pitched 5 2-3 perfect innings, but ran into some scary seventh-inning trouble.

Tom Brunansky smacked his 31st home run after Kent Hrbek's single to tie the game. Singles by Gary Gaetti and Dave Engle and a walk to pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher then loaded the bases with one out.

Gaetti set sail down the third-base line and Chris Speier laid down a suicide-squeeze bunt directly in front of the plate.

"If that bunt goes a foot to his right or left, the run scores easily, pal," said Twins Manager Billy Gardner.

Black barehanded the bunt and flipped to catcher Slaught.

"If he fools around with the glove on the play, the run scores," said Royals Manager Dick Howser.

The toss nailed Slaught at the plate.

"A play like that is bang-bang, it's all instinct," said Black, who then escaped by getting Kirby Puckett to ground out.

"You have to give him all the credit in the world," Speier said. "He made the play. On a suicide squeeze, you just have to try to get it in fair territory."

Indians 7, Angels 1

Bert Blyleven, 17-6, fired a two-hitter while striking out 12 batters. He flirted with a no-hitter through 5 1-3 innings and wound up with his 10th complete game and a personal season high in strikeouts.

He walked only two batters in gaining his sixth victory in seven decisions.

Rod Carew spoiled the no-hit bid with a single to left. The next inning, Brian Downing ruined the shutout bid with a leadoff homer, his 20th of the season.

George Vukovich clouted a his eighth homer, a two-run shot, in the sixth.

White Sox 4, A's 2

Britt Burns, 3-11, won his first game since May 13, breaking a 10-game losing streak. He gave up a run on four hits in seven innings after allowing a homer to Bill Almon on his first pitch of the game.

Three of the White Sox runs were unearned off Oakland starter Tim Conroy, 1-6, who gave up only five hits, one of which was Ron Kittle's 29th homer of the year.

"As they say, 'It came to pass,' and pass it shall," said Burns. "I'll feel good if I do this maybe about two or three more times."

Blue Jays 2, Yankees 1

Doyle Alexander, 14-5, checked the Yankees on six hits, overcoming a shaky opening two innings to post his seventh complete game of the season.

Damaso Garcia singled in third inning for one run and Ernie Whitt singled in the fifth inning for the second.

The crowd of 20,426 brought the Blue Jays' season total to a record 1,937,700, eclipsing the mark of 1,930,415 set last year.

Dave Winfield knocked in the lone Yankee run with a single in the eighth and maintained his league-leading .351 average.

Orioles 3, Tigers 1

Dennis Martinez retired the first 12 Detroit batters and went on to hurl a six-hitter. The Tigers' defeat and the victory by Toronto kept Detroit's magic number at seven.

Martinez, 6-7, struck out six and walked none while hurling his second complete game of the season.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 4

Marty Barrett drove in two runs with a two-out double off the left-field wall in the eighth inning after three unearned runs in the sixth had given Milwaukee a 4-3 advantage.

Jim Sundberg's triple drove in two of the three unearned runs.

Bobby Ojeda, 11-11, earned only his second victory in seven starts. Bob Stanley got the last three outs for his 20th save.

The victory enabled the Red Sox to salvage their three-game series with the Brewers, in which the Red Sox allowed 15 unearned runs.

Rangers 8, Mariners 1

Rookie left-hander Mike Mason scattered six hits and Bobby Jones cracked a three-run, pinch-hit homer. The Rangers had lost six straight to Seattle and 10 of 11 against the Mariners this season.

Jets' Gastineau Convicted; Teammate Innocent In Brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Jets All-Pro defensive end Mark Gastineau has been convicted of misdemeanor assault, but teammate Ken O'Brien was acquitted of similar charges stemming from a brawl at the Studio 54 nightclub last year.

Gastineau, 27, was convicted Wednesday of a single count of the three assault charges against him. He faces up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine, but prosecutor Jeffrey Schlanger said such a severe penalty was unlikely.

Gastineau's wife, Lisa, gasped as the verdict was read. Gastineau, standing before the jury, dropped his head for an instant as his lawyer patted him on the back.

O'Brien, a 23-year-old quarterback, was acquitted by the six-member jury.

"I think it's a piece of exploitation," O'Brien said of his teammate's conviction. "He would never have been here if he wasn't Mark Gastineau."

In a statement, the Jets said: "The club is very happy for Ken O'Brien and obviously very disappointed with the misdemeanor verdict against Mark Gastineau. We will support Mark in every future effort to prove his innocence, whatever that might entail."

Gastineau said later he was shocked at the verdict and maintained his innocence.

"I'm still not guilty," he said. "I hate to disagree with the judicial system, but that's the truth. And it's the God's honest truth."

His lawyer, Peter Morrison, said he was "real disappointed, man. The verdict is the verdict and the truth is the truth. I don't think the verdict changes the truth."

He said there had been no decision yet on whether to appeal the verdict.

Both defendants and their lawyers said they believed the case was tried only because of the players' celebrity. Judge Alan Marrus set sentencing for Nov. 20 and continued Gastineau's release on his own recognizance.

Schlanger said he was satisfied with the verdict. "I think justice was done, as it is with any jury verdict," he said.

The jury deliberated for 15 hours over two days. Nearly half the time was given over to re-reading of testimony from employees of the nightclub.

The players, who missed four weeks of practice to attend the trial, were accused of joining in a brawl at the trendy Manhattan disco last Sept. 30. Two nightclub patrons said they suffered broken noses in the fight.

Schlanger charged the altercation started after Gastineau lost an arm-wrestling match; O'Brien and the defense lawyers countered that the players were not involved in the fight. Gastineau did not testify, but denied the charges in a statement to investigators that was read at the trial.

O'Brien lost his starting quarterback job with the Jets due to missed practices caused by the trial, but Gastineau has been playing and leads the National Football League in quarterback sacks with six in two games.

The defendants were accused of punching and kicking John Benson, 22, a waiter at the club; Charles McGinley, 29, of Union City, N.J.; and Peter Fernandez, 19, of Jersey City, N.J.

Gastineau was convicted of intentionally assaulting Benson with intent to harm him. Benson was one of those who claimed his nose was broken, though defense lawyers disputed that claim.

Morrison and O'Brien's lawyer, Robert Simels, said they did not seek a plea bargain — as is common in misdemeanor cases — because their clients were innocent.

"They did not strike, kick or punch anybody," Simels said.

Dennis Martinez retired the first 12 Detroit batters and went on to hurl a six-hitter. The Tigers' defeat and the victory by Toronto kept Detroit's magic number at seven.

Martinez, 6-7, struck out six and walked none while hurling his second complete game of the season.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 4

Marty Barrett drove in two runs with a two-out double off the left-field wall in the eighth inning after three unearned runs in the sixth had given Milwaukee a 4-3 advantage.

Jim Sundberg's triple drove in two of the three unearned runs.

Bobby Ojeda, 11-11, earned only his second victory in seven starts. Bob Stanley got the last three outs for his 20th save.

The victory enabled the Red Sox to salvage their three-game series with the Brewers, in which the Red Sox allowed 15 unearned runs.

Navy Coach Has Pleasant Dilemma

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Navy football coach Gary Tranquill says he has a dilemma, albeit a pleasant one, to resolve before the Midshipmen open their 1984 season Saturday against North Carolina.

With just three days remaining before the opener, Tranquill said Wednesday he still didn't know which of three quarterbacks will get the starting job in the regionally-telvised game in Chapel Hill, N. C., Saturday afternoon.

As of Wednesday, sophomore Bill Byrne was listed No. 1 ahead of senior Rick Williamson, last year's starter, and sophomore Bob Misch. But that could change by Saturday, Tranquill said.

"All three are better than Rick was at this point last year," he said.

Tranquill said he thinks all three quarterbacks have benefitted from the competition for the starting job, but that the time has about come when he must make a decision and stick with it.

Navy compiled only a 3-8 record in 1983, its worst season since 1971 and the first losing season in six years.

Tranquill said that based on pre-season practice, "I think we are overall a better football team than we were last year."

"We have better depth. There's not much of a drop-off in quality from No. 1 to No. 2," he said.

Tranquill said the depth "is going to help us Saturday, it's going to help us as the season goes on and people start to wear down."

Navy is nearing the end of pre-season practice in good physical condition. The major problem now, Tranquill said, is a hamstring injury to defensive safety Steve Brady which could cause him to miss the game Saturday in Chapel Hill, N. C.

"That takes a big chunk out of our secondary," he said.

Tranquill said his major concern now is a lack of experience in some positions on defense.

The offense will have either eight or nine senior lettermen, depending on whether Williamson, who was the starting quarterback last year, gets the nod again.

Tranquill said he has better passers and better pass receivers than last year, and that he hopes that will take the pressure off of Napoleon McCallum, the senior running back who led the nation last year in all-purpose rushing and who has already set 16 Naval Academy records.

"I don't want to have to turn around and give the ball to Napoleon 35 times a game," Tranquill said, adding that he would prefer to see McCallum carry the ball 25 times and catch six or seven passes.

Sad Sacks Locked In West Battle

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

Dr. Bobby Brown, the noted cardiologist who serves as president of the American League, has seen his share of heart patients with serious problems. Resuscitation was routine for him and right now he's got three teams on his hands who could use some of that.

The Minnesota Twins, Kansas City Royals and California Angels all are posing as pennant contenders, bidding for a division championship, and each of them barely breathing.

Contenders? Pretenders is more like it. If only the good doctor could perform a transplant or two.

As the baseball season reaches its serious stage, these sad sacks are locked in a battle of attrition for the AL West's half-flag. Together they are an endorsement for mediocrity.

Waiting for the survivor of this losers' lottery are the Detroit Tigers, rulers of the East, who won 35 of their first 40 games in April and May, and four months later still have the best record in baseball. No wonder nobody seems exactly anxious to win the West. The combined diagnosis for the Twins, Royals and Angels in the league's championship playoffs is terminal.

Their magic number ought to be .500. Between them, these three barely have won more games than they've lost this season. Detroit is totally unfamiliar with that condition.

Recognizable names are the exception rather than the rule in the West race.

Oh sure, Reggie Jackson still is swinging for the Angels and Dan Quisenberry relieves almost nightly for the Royals. But some of the other players involved in this struggle for survival seem to come

Duke Power, Nuclear Foes Debate Safety Of Plant Near Charlotte

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Antinuclear activists say if Duke Power Co.'s Catawba nuclear power plant fires up as scheduled this fall, Charlotte would be the largest U.S. city centered within 20 miles and downwind of an operating reactor.

But Duke officials say the plant will be a clean, cheap source of energy that will pose no threat to public safety.

Duke already has two reactors at the McGuire plant 10 miles north of the city limits. In 1987, when the utility finishes its second reactor at the Catawba plant 19 miles southwest of downtown Charlotte in York County, S.C., the city will be the largest in the country that close to four nuclear reactors.

"I don't see us stopping the juggernaut now," said Jesse Riley of the Carolina Environmental Study Group of Charlotte. "It (Catawba No. 1) will almost certainly begin operating later this year."

Three other North Carolina reactors are within 40 miles of large cities. Two operating units at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick plant in Southport are about 35 miles south of Wilmington. CP&L's Shearon Harris reactor, scheduled to begin operating in 1986, is about 22 miles southwest of Raleigh.

So far, CP&L has paid nearly $900,000 in Nuclear Regulatory Commission fines for safety violations at Brunswick. Nuclear foes cited the fines at public hearings on licensing for the Harris plant, but the NRC issued a report in August saying CP&L had significantly improved its performance.

Meanwhile, fuel has been loaded into Catawba unit No. 1, said Duke spokesman Mary Cartwright. She said Duke now needs only a license to escalate power — expected soon — and NRC approval of emergency plans — expected in October.

"We don't expect an adverse decision," she said. When it begins commercial operation late this year or early next year, the reactor will produce 1,145 megawatts — enough for 300,000 houses. The cost for both Catawba reactors will be $3.9 billion, she said.

Riley's group and another antinuclear group, the Palmetto Alliance of Columbia, S.C., concentrated on trying to get southwestern Charlotte included in the plant's alert and evacuation zone. They argued in hearings in May and June that the zone should be extended from a 10-mile radius around the plant — just short of the city's southwestern limits — to U.S. 29-74 and N.C. 16 — about 17 miles. That would include about 124,000 of Charlotte's 315,000 people.

"In terms of combined meteorology and demography, we are the worst area in the country" in case of a nuclear accident, Riley said.

"There are locations where there are many more people, but the wind incidence is a quarter of what it is here."

He said the probability that southwest winds would carry radioactivity from an accident over the city is about 35 percent. In addition, frequent temperature inversions would make for little vertical mixing and poor dilution of any contamination, he said.

"There could be 24,000 early deaths for the worst release contemplated if Charlotte was not evacuated 10 to 25 miles away from the plant," he said. "If it were evacuated in eight hours, the death toll would be 470. That gives you an idea of how important evacuation is and emergency planning."

Ms. Cartwright said extending the zone for 10 miles "is to spend money for no benefits" by installing needless sirens and other equipment.

"The zone is the area from which you have to have the ability to notify people within 15 minutes," she said. "The 10 mile zone is very, very liberal — much larger than studies show is needed."

The prevailing winds are indeed from the southwest, but they occur only about a third of the time, she noted.

NRC analysts say the chance of a severe accident in adverse weather producing enough radioactivity over 24 hours to kill someone beyond 10 miles from the plant is one in a billion years of reactor operation.

But Riley said the world still has less than 1,000 years of reactor operating experience.

"We really don't know what could happen," he said. "If we had ideal drivers of automobiles, we wouldn't have 40,000 deaths a year."

Riley said sirens in the extended evacuation area would be an acceptable "Band-aid" solution, but he favors automatic warning devices built into the telephone system with taped messages telling people what to do.

"That technology is just not available right now," said Ms. Cartwright. "It would cost millions of dollars. ... We can't put our eggs in a basket that isn't there."

In early June, the Mecklenburg County commissioners voted 3-1 to take no action on a recommendation from a citizens' study committee in favor of extending the evacuation zone.

Riley said it's possible — but unlikely — that the three-judge NRC licensing panel could come back and say that extension of the evacuation zone could be considered.

"It's possible then that the (citizens') committee could make another recommendation to the county commission and the state would defer to the county," he said. "But I'm not at all optimistic."

USDA To Tighten Seed Export Rules

By The Associated Press
Federal agriculture officials said Wednesday they were tightening export restrictions on American tobacco seeds for experimental purposes and would rescind a policy for tobacco graders that had spurred complaints.

The announcements came as the U.S. Agriculture Department appeared before a U.S. House subcommittee to hear congressmen complain the enforcement by the USDA of a law governing seed exports was nonexistent.

Lionel S. Edwards, tobacco division director for the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said there would be a sharp reduction in the amount of seed that could be exported under scientific exchanges with other countries.

The USDA had limited seed exports to no more than one-half ounce, but under the new guidelines, no more than a half-gram will go to a foreign researcher per variety of seeds requested.

One USDA researcher estimated that an ounce of tobacco seeds contained about 300,000 seeds.

On the tobacco grading, Edwards announced that effective Tuesday, the USDA had dropped a policy begun Sept. 4 of requiring federal inspectors to sign certificates with their first initial and last name. The inspectors can revert to signing their initials.

State Says Fund OK Despite Hikes

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say North Carolina's pension fund is in no financial jeopardy despite a $1.5 billion-plus shortfall run up by benefit increases that were granted, but not allocated, to retired state workers and teachers.

For the past eight years, the gap has been increasing by about $100 million a year, Harlan Boyles, state treasurer and chairman of the State Employees Retirement System, said Wednesday.

"You have one session of the General Assembly obligating a future session," Boyles said Wednesday. "That future session, finding itself in financial difficulties, may have to undo some of these cost-of-living increases or raise taxes to meet the obligations made by an earlier General Assembly."

The issue of the pension deficit found its way into Sunday's statewide televised debate in Wilmington between Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

Helms said he wondered how many people in North Carolina know that under the administration of Gov. Hunt, the unfunded liabilities of the state pension plan have increased nearly $1 billion — over $800 million.

Boyles said Helms' figures were accurate.

"I'd say $800 million is roughly correct, from 1976 to 1984," he said. "It's been increasing roughly $100 million a year."

But, Boyles and others familiar with pension funds said most pension funds don't have enough money on hand to pay benefits for the entire life of retirees.

"It doesn't work that way — the bills don't all come due at one time," said Tom Covington, director of fiscal research for the Legislature. "Everybody doesn't retire all at once."

John A. Williams, executive assistant to Hunt, said, "You don't have to have 12 months rent in your pocket to sign a year's lease."

The state retirement systems, funded by employees and the state, had $6.3 billion in assets at the end of 1982 and had promised present and ex-employees at that time an estimated $8 billion in lifetime benefits, said E.T. Barnes, director of the Retirement Systems Division in the treasurer's department.

That amounts to a deficit — known in accounting as an unfunded liability — of $1.7 billion.

Assets grew to $7.5 billion at the end of 1983, but the cost of promised benefits increased, too, Barnes said. But, he said, the exact deficit at the end of last year has not been estimated.

Judge Says Inmate Can Keep Appealing

RALEIGH (AP) — An inmate sentenced to death after a conviction eight years ago of strangling a prison dental technician has won the right to reinstate his legal appeal.

Wake Superior Court Judge Anthony M. Brannon ruled Tuesday that James Lee Primes, 38, will be allowed to appeal his 1976 conviction to the North Carolina Supreme Court.

Although Primes' trial attorney filed a notice of appeal to the state Supreme Court immediately after the conviction, it was never pursued, and Brannon ruled that Primes never told the attorney to abandon the appeal.

In the aftermath of the U.S.

Supreme Court ruling that declared North Carolina's death penalty law invalid, Primes' attorney did not continue the appeal.

Primes was convicted of first-degree murder in 1976 and sentenced to die for the murder of Jenette W. Fish of Raleigh. Mrs. Fish was found dead, apparently strangled with a belt, in her office at Triangle Correctional Center in May 1975.

At the time, Primes was a minimum-custody inmate with honor-grade status who was working as a prison janitor. He had served 7½ years of a life sentence for rape.

At his trial, two other inmates testified that Primes had told them he had tried to rape Mrs. Fish and then had to kill her.

Guilty Plea Entered In Contract Murder Case

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 29-year-old man accused of carrying out a contract murder pleaded guilty to second-degree murder on Wednesday in the April 1983 shooting death of an Iredell County draftsman.

Luther Campbell originally pleaded not guilty to a first-degree murder charge. Campbell faced the death penalty if convicted of first-degree murder, while second-degree murder carries a maximum penalty of 30 years or life imprisonment.

A sentencing hearing was scheduled for Thursday morning in Iredell County Superior Court.

The change in plea came after hours of deliberations between Campbell, his family, defense attorney Edmund Gaines and District Attorney H.W. "Butch" Zimmerman.

Afterwards, members of Campbell's family wept and hugged Campbell.

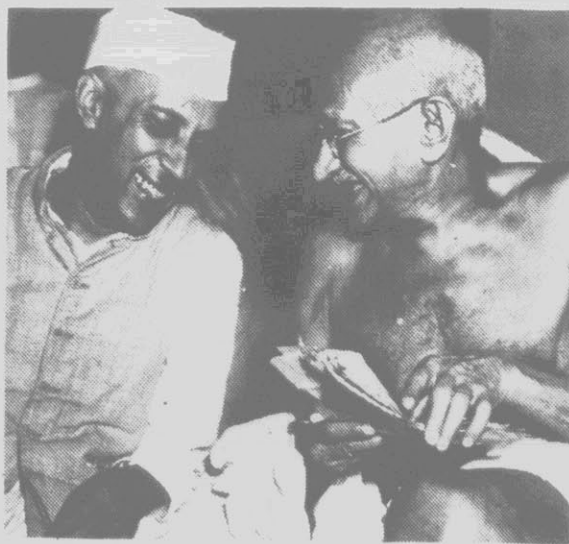

"I feel it was in my client's best interest" to change the plea, Gaines said.

The plea bargain apparently ended a tale which began last April 22, when Linda Stewart and her then 12-year-old son discovered Kenneth Stewart, her husband of 14 years, dead on their kitchen floor.

Machines May Reject Ballots

By The Associated Press
If North Carolina voters follow court-ordered instructions for crossover voting on Nov. 6, the voting machines may reject their ballots, some elections supervisors say.

"I just think we'll have more problems than usual," said Wanda McElveen, Gaston County elections supervisor. "I'll explain the instructions to registrars and judges on Oct. 29, and they'll have to help voters on election day."

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., overruled a North Carolina law voiding crossover ballots — those cast for a straight-party ticket but which including a mark in favor of one or more candidates from another party.

But Mrs. McElveen and other elections supervisors say the instructions for crossover voting are complicated and even if they are followed precisely, the voting machines may not accept them.

Gaston County supervisors say if a voter follows the court-ordered instructions to be distributed Election Day and makes a cross (X) in the straight-party square, tabulators could spit the ballot out.

The ballot is set up with horizontal bars, which should be filled in with a heavy line, not crossed.

Mrs. McElveen said the tabulators' manufacturer expects that the machine will be able to read crosses, but the company warned that if the mark goes outside the line, the ballot could be rejected.

The wording of the instructions cannot be changed, even to indicate that a different type of mark should be made, said state Elections Director Alex Brock.

The appeals court ruling on crossover voting came after former North Carolina Congressman Bill Hendon challenged the law after he lost his seat to Democrat James McClure Clarke in 1982. Former Gaston County Sheriff C.L. "Sarge" Waldrep also filed suit assailing the law.

Neither Hendon nor Waldrep were given a new election or a recount of the votes allowing crossovers.

Some Stayed Behind At Carolina Beach

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

CAROLINA BEACH, N.C. (AP) — As Hurricane Diana roared ashore at Carolina Beach with 110-mph winds, some residents — either by choice or by accident — faced the storm's full fury in their homes or an emergency shelter.

About 50 people stranded by heavy winds as Diana approached gathered at St. Pauls United Methodist Church three blocks from the sea and listened to the storm howl outside.

"We've heard a lot of popping, lights flashing, thundering, lightning," the Rev. Gerald Massey said as the eye of the storm passed through. "It seemed like some of the windows wanted to come out at you. One of the windows on the back blew out, but we put a piece of plywood over that. The building is solid, it's held real well."

Massey said many of the people in the shelter were facing their first hurricane, and had no idea, despite warnings, how bad it could get.

"They were encouraged to get off," he said. "Some of the folks are relatively young. They didn't go through Hazel and they thought they could ride it out."

Massey said he was not sure about damage, but people in the church heard the town water tower crash to the ground as Diana moved through.

"We heard it fall. It made a terrible fuss," he said. "It's scattered all over the lot of the A&P. Somebody thought the store had blown over. I don't know whether they've lost so many buildings, but I know the water is six inches deep around us."

"We just had one prayer," Massey said, "but I'm sure we've had a lot more go up."

Joel Macon and seven members of his family rode out their first hurricane at his brick house eight blocks from the beach.

"The eye has just gone over us," Macon's father-in-law, Jerry Bigley, said at 2:10 a.m. "It's still windy, but it seems to be calming down. The rain has quit."

Bigley said the family had put a large mattress over the living room window to protect against sustained winds clocked at 85 mph, with gusts to 110 mph.

"It was a little serious earlier, but nobody panicked," Bigley said. "It was our choice to stay. After you make the choice and the bridge is closed, you don't have a choice any more."

"I am very, very thankful," Bigley said. "If you have faith in the Lord, he'll get you through it all."

"I think that the worst of it came as far as Third Street," he said. "The only damage there could really be is if it blew the house over. Then if it goes to Wilmington, you're worse off in a lot of ways."

"I really don't have that much fear," Bigley's wife, Barbara, said. "I guess I know that God watches over us wherever we are. If anything is going to happen, it will be where we're at. I know He gives us enough sense to take care of ourselves also."

Macon, a volunteer fireman at Carolina Beach whose wife is a police officer, said he had not evacuated to a shelter. He said his wife, who was evacuated to Wilmington with the police department before midnight, did not try to convince him to leave.

"It's real windy. You can hear it," Macon said. "It's not real bad, though."

"Everybody seems pretty calm," Macon said. "We're just sitting here watching TV. We'll watch the TV until it gets too bad and we have to leave. I imagine they know we're here."

"It looks like we'll probably have to stay here now," he said. "You probably can't get over the bridge (to the mainland)."

"I'd just as soon stay here where I'm safer," Mrs. Bigley said. "I feel like I know my own home."

State Sending Water To Coast

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt continued to warn residents of Southeast North Carolina to exercise "extreme caution" in the wake of Hurricane Diana, which slammed ashore with 110 mph winds and surging tides.

"Now is the time for extreme caution by residents in this area, due to downed trees and power lines, as well as the potential effect of the storm on water supplies," Hunt said.

"In that respect, the National Guard has water tankers en route to the area, so that our people can have safe water. The beaches will be sealed ... to provide extra security and protection for residents."

"Early damage reports have been sketchy, but we will be in a better position to make damage estimates as day break approaches in the New Hanover and Brunswick and surrounding county areas," Hunt added.

Hunt warned of the danger ahead with flooding and the potential for tornadoes, heavy rainfall and high winds.

"North Carolinians have pulled together in the past to help each other," the governor added. "They will help each other out now and in the days to come. State personnel have been working around the clock and will continue to do so in the days to come."

was still "a very dangerous storm."

"We have been extremely fortunate," Hunt said at 5 a.m. "in that we have no reports of deaths or injuries from the storm. This is due in part to the people of the area who have made themselves aware of the dangers of this storm."

Another trip to the storm-torn area was planned today by Hunt.

One man suffered a heart attack and died preparing for the storm. The man died Tuesday and the death was reported Wednesday. Another death in a traffic accident was reported.

On Wednesday Hunt flew via National Guard helicopter to Wilmington, where he visited four schools that served as emergency shelters for beach residents. He then inspected Carolina Beach, an oceanfront resort town all but deserted since the previous day, when evacuation orders were issued.

"As of right now, (damage) is minimal," said Hunt, struggling to speak over the roar of pounding waves on the wind-whipped beach.

"We are prepared to assess the cost the moment the storm comes in. I've got a letter prepared to go to Washington. All I have to do is fill in the blanks and sign it."

Admitting many of the 14,000 displaced coastal residents were frustrated by their prolonged wait, Hunt pleaded with them not to "write off this storm" which was over Cape Fear at 2 a.m. today.

"We haven't dodged the bullet; I have a feeling the bullet's just traveling slowly," he said. "We still have a hurricane out there. It's very dangerous, very deadly, and it probably is going to come inland."

"Most of our people are in safe areas and we want to make sure they stay there until the storm is no longer a danger to us," he said.

Scientists Seek Info On Water

RALEIGH (AP) — If they can weather the force of Hurricane Diana, a million dollars worth of scientific instruments docked at Pamlico Sound may provide valuable new oceanographic data, a professor says.

"We'll have a landmark, one-of-a-kind classic data set or no equipment," said Dr. Leonard J. Pietrafesa, professor of marine, earth and atmospheric sciences at North Carolina State University.

Instruments in the sound record the speed and direction of water motion, temperature, salt concentration and water pressure at various depths and are designed to help state officials determine when residents should be evacuated if disaster approaches and why shellfish and fishing industries in the area have been declining.

Pietrafesa said he hopes divers will be able to recover instruments torn from their floats and moorings, while he is relying on fishermen and area residents to retrieve equipment that washes ashore.

Anyone who finds instruments is instructed to "leave them sealed, call us and we'll come right down and pick it up."

Pietrafesa said the instruments are well marked and should be ticking if they are still working.

S.C. Coast Is Emptied As Diana Switches

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — As Hurricane Diana and its 110 mph winds charged ashore in nearby North Carolina, residents and tourists alike fled this resort community in a nighttime exodus to evade the oncoming storm.

The headlights of thousands of cars cut through a wind-blown rain as motorists headed west and south out of the path of the storm which came ashore at Cape Fear, N.C., early today.

The system was moving west and strong winds and heavy rains were expected here by midmorning. At 4 a.m., Diana was 35 miles east-northeast of Crescent Beach, the National Weather Service said.

The Weather Service said gale force winds of more than 40 mph would likely reach North Myrtle Beach before dawn and "spread southward along the coast." Hurricane force winds were expected to reach the area shortly after daybreak.

For the second time in three days emergency shelters were opened throughout Horry County as officials prepared for winds of up to 100 mph and heavy rains.

Some 7,000 people were evacuated by 5 a.m., according to Myrtle Beach City Manager Richard Marvin.

Dick Shenot, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service office in Charleston, said that gusts of up to 40 mph were reported as far west as Little River at 2 a.m.

Strong winds and heavy rains swept into the Myrtle Beach area and Shenot said the city could expect gale force gusts of 40 to 50 mph by dawn. Heavy rains were also reported at North Myrtle Beach, about 15 miles northeast of here.

Residents in Garden City and other communities south to the Georgetown County line were also urged to evacuate.

Marvin said gusts of up to 100 mph might be felt in the area by late afternoon.

"People in low-lying areas and people in oceanfront homes are encouraged to monitor the storm closely," he said. "Oceanfront occupants should consider evacuating to the nearest emergency shelter as soon as possible."

Law enforcement officers worked through the night to rouse residents in beachfront homes and condominiums.

Long lines of cars pulled up outside the evacuation shelter at the Myrtle Beach Convention Center. By 2 a.m., the center was full with 1,200 evacuees and police were routing evacuees to other nearby centers.

Some evacuees waited outside the convention center in their nightclothes while others had curlers in their hair.

"I've never been in one (hurricane) and I'm scared stiff," said Pat Ward, of Washington Pa., who was vacationing here.

Jane Kwiatkowski, a New Jersey resident vacationing here, returned to the center for the second time this week.

Diana's Legacy: Damage On The Coast

Births, Tears, Frustrations ...

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — At nearly 70 shelters along the North Carolina coast, evacuated residents fought boredom, discomfort and growing frustration, waiting for Hurricane Diana to make up her mind.

About 14,000 people were housed in nearly 70 shelters along the coast, but at least some residents were allowed to return to the beaches briefly Wednesday to check on their property.

In Onslow County, more people may leave the shelters after the storm passes than originally entered them.

County officials Wednesday requested more medical personnel be sent to their 12 shelters because there were 40 pregnant women housed in them, including 10 who are in their ninth month.

In Jacksonville, Christina Tapp, 17, the wife of Camp Lejeune Pvt. Floyd D. Tapp, went into labor at an evacuation center and was taken by ambulance to Onslow Memorial Hospital. At 12:16 p.m. Wednesday she gave birth to a daughter — whom she named Diana after the hurricane.

In Wilmington, Martha Sellers of the Red Cross said people were continuing to report to shelters as winds at nearby Carolina Beach hit 75 mph.

"There's not as many people as last night, but it seems to be more people are taking this seriously," Ms. Sellers said. "The anxiety level is pretty high."

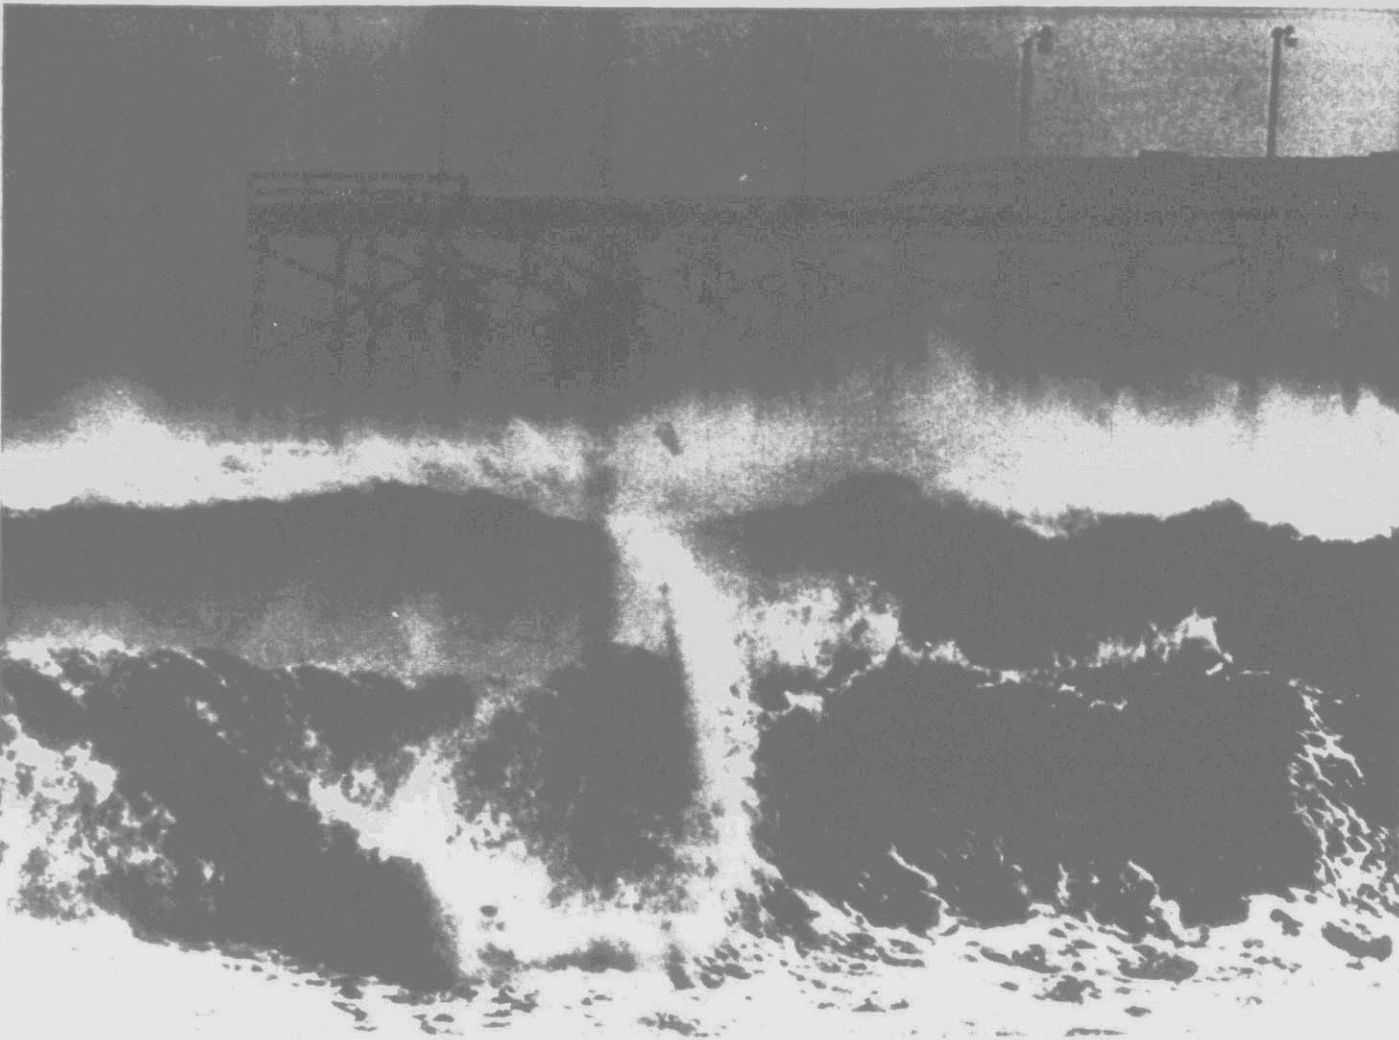

"I think people have had time to make some other arrangements," she said. "An army cot is not the most comfortable place to sleep. I think that even though the numbers of people are less in the shelters this evening...the evacuations from the Barrier Islands and other places are pretty much complete. There are not many people who have decided to hold out."

At Roland-Grise Junior High School in Wilmington, a handful of people gathered around a television set in the auditorium, while others chatted or played cards in the lunchroom.

"The biggest excitement we've had here is a woman who came in with a diabetic cat," said Al Shew, a Red Cross volunteer whose specialty is damage assessment.

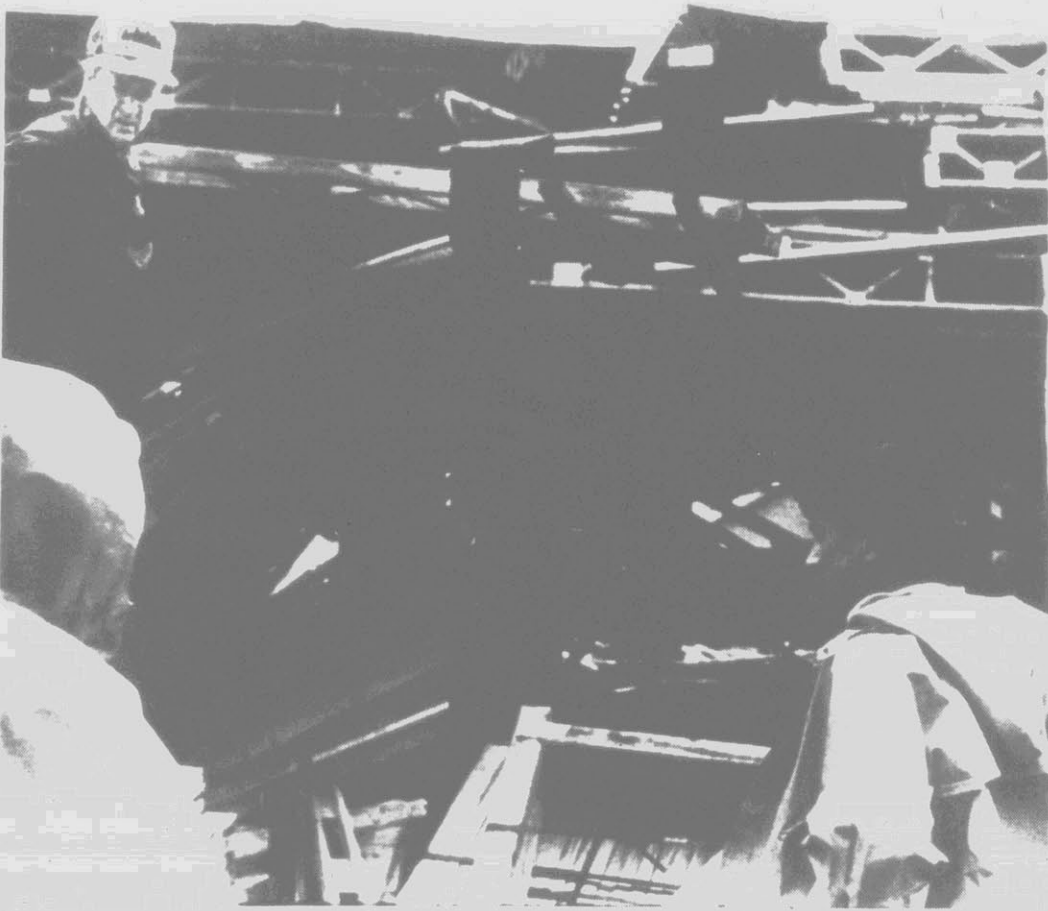

She said the cat, Fluffy, required insulin shots every 12 hours. She said the cat was taken to a local veterinarian, but the owner, a visitor from Minnesota, heard a rumor that the vet's office had been damaged and the animal cages opened.

He said the woman was distraught because Fluffy had been declawed and "she was worried about her ability to defend herself."

OCEAN FURY — Waves roll to the shore of Wrightsville Beach as Hurricane Diana stalls off the North Carolina coast late Wednesday. In the background is the Johnny Mercer Pier, which was smashed by the high waves. Diana early today regain its steering currents sufficiently to hit the coastline near Southport, pounding the coastal area with winds in excess of 100 mph.

DAMAGE — Gov. Jim Hunt, standing with cap, inspects damage Wednesday afternoon after the first onslaught of Hurricane Diana's 100 mph-plus winds slashed inland at Carolina Beach. At right is Carolina Beach Mayor Neil Pharr. Diana returned to the shoreline Wednesday night, knocking out utilities and causing flooding to several areas from Wilmington south into South Carolina.

final check on the safety of their shrimp boat. The boat was anchored on Gales Creek just west of Morehead City.

THANKS — Carolina Beach Mayor Neil Pharr, center, shakes hands with Gov. Jim Hunt after the governor toured the beach area Wednesday. Hunt, informed that damage was much heavier after Hurricane Diana swept ashore early today, has promised state help to coastal residents affected by the storm.

DOWNED — Tim Kelly of Wilmington tries to remove a fallen tree from his pickup truck after Hurricane Diana raked the coastal areas all-day Wednesday before finally coming ashore early today. A water tank was toppled this morning and a television tower for a Wilmington station was nearly blown over as Diana hit with winds in excess of 100 mph.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY SEPT., 14, 1984

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when you have the opportunity to accomplish a great deal by being very practical in your approach, but you may find some delays from some unfinished conditions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy making collections and paying pressing bills so that you can later carry through with interests you are working on.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get out to barber or beauty shop early and improve your appearance. Tone up your health as well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy early at handling your responsibilities and get much done, especially those of a confidential nature.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be practical and you can accomplish a great deal today. Contact good friends who can give you assistance.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy on career work and forget all that daydreaming and be most precise and efficient. Take no risks in motion of any kind.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into some new enterprise and forget whatever has proven disappointing in the past. If a trip is necessary, plan to take it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to set up a more practical system of bookkeeping that will be easier to handle in the future. Be happier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Important that you discuss matters with partners seriously and break that stalemate situation you are in.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more proficient at your general work and you get fine results and cooperate more with co-workers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put a sum away for entertainments regularly so that you need not have to worry about it when the time comes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Problematical affairs may arise at home which need your full attention to solve them quickly and well.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Early handle correspondence and important communications; then look into more advanced matters.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she should have a good environment to grow up in since the ambition is great and only needs a good start in order to grow and become very successful. One who is very much business-minded and will deliberate at length only when some very important decision has to be made.

It is a natural tendency that, when you can give your partner a ruff, you do so at the first opportunity. That can be fatal. You must consider the hand as a whole.

North bid aggressively and South conservatively. As a result, they reached a four spade contract that would make far more often than not.

West decided his best chance to defeat the contract was to score diamond ruffs. East won the opening diamond lead and dutifully gave his partner a ruff. Unfortunately, West had no way to reach his partner for a second diamond ruff, so declarer was able to force out the ace of trumps. When East returned another diamond and West could not ruff again, declarer had an easy time making the rest of the tricks.

East should have realized a diamond ruff would only give the defenders three tricks. Since South chose four spades rather than three no trump as the final contract, he was marked with exactly a five-card trump suit. That left West with only two trumps.

If West held an ace, he would surely have time to cash it. However, if West held the king of hearts, it was vital to set up that card before declarer could get discards on the diamonds.

Observe what would have happened if, at trick two, East had shifted to a heart. If declarer plays low, West scores the king of hearts. Sooner or later East will win the ace of trumps and give his partner a diamond ruff for down one. And if declarer rises with the ace of hearts to lead a trump, East wins, gives his partner a diamond ruff and West cashes the king of hearts for the setting trick.

Dog Bites Lip Off Small Child

SEBASTOPOL, Calif. (AP) — A 2-year-old girl whose upper lip was bitten off by a dog had the lipped stitched back on by plastic surgeons after it was recovered in the dog's food.

The infant, Piper Stroud, was at a babysitter's house Tuesday when she apparently got too close to the dog's food and the animal attacked her, said Twin Hills firefighter Carol Voight.

The dog was rushed to a veterinarian who induced vomiting to retrieve a portion of the lip from the dog's stomach, said Dr. Ralph Lassa, who sewed the child's lip back on.

The lip piece and bits found in the dog's food were washed off, packed in ice water, placed in a baggie and sent to the hospital, Lassa said. Because they were kept at 32 degrees and had not sustained ice burns, they were useable, he said, although only the piece from the dog's stomach was big enough to sew back on.

The child was rushed by ambulance to Petaluma Valley Hospital, where the lip was reattached after 10 hours of surgery, Lassa said. She was reported in stable condition Wednesday.

The dog was quarantined at the Sonoma County animal shelter.

marks the 200th anniversary of his birth. Also being honored with stamps on the second century of their births will be educator Alden Partridge and Army engineer Sylvanus Thayer.

Stamps will also mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of Kern, Lewis, journalist Walter Lippmann and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

New Postage Stamps Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's veterans of World War I and Korea, wildlife artist John James Audubon, composer Jerome Kern and author Sinclair Lewis are among those who will be honored on postage stamps next year, the U.S. Postal Service reports.

In addition, blocks of stamps will be issued featuring seashells, duck decoys and horses, postal officials said.

The block of four horse stamps will depict the Appaloosa, Morgan, quarter horse and saddlebred. The duck decoys will also be issued in a block of four, in the American Folk Art Series, while there will be five seashells in that series to be issued in booklet form.

'Glitter' Has Sprinkling Of Fantasy Dust

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In "Glitter," the new ABC series that begins tonight, ABC and its top producer, Aaron Spelling, sprinkled their fantasy dust on the subject of journalism and turned it into a "Love Boat" with weekly headlines.

You won't find any ink-stained wretches or stale coffee here. No indication that reporters painstakingly build stories by making phone calls, working sources and asking hard questions.

Where's "Lou Grant" when we need him?

"Glitter," complete with laugh track, lush settings, arrested sexual attitudes and the world's most beautiful people, is in the distinctive style of Spelling's other anthology hits on ABC, "The Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island." As he did last year, Spelling has seven series on ABC this season, including "Dynasty," "Hotel" and "Matt Houston."

The tone of this fluffy, juvenile series is accurately depicted by one of ABC's promotionals, in which "Glitter" stars David Birney and Morgan Brittany are putting the finishing touches on some epic. They're working late at night, as reporters are wont to do, fueling their creative juices with food. Only they're snacking by candlelight.

With a smile, he asks if she's cooling off. She says no, that she's just overwhelmed by working for such a wonderfully glamorous magazine. "Pass the soy sauce and write," he says.

If Woodward and Bernstein projected the image of dogged investigative drudges ferreting out corruption, the reporters at this People-type magazine create a decidedly different picture. They're cocktail party jet-setters who turn "Glitter" into a glitzy, chic version of "The Dating Game."

"Glitter" is about a contemporary magazine, which sends its team of reporters to the world's glamour spots to hobnob with the world's most glittering stars. Each week, the cardboard regulars and guest characters will be embroiled in superficial puzzles of the heart.

Tonight, the top reporting team of Sam Dillon (Birney) and Kate Simpson (Miss Brittany) is assigned two intertwining stories. One involves the celebrated prostitute, Madam Lil (Patricia Neal), who is dying in a hospital; the other involves a U.S. senator who's going to be married.

Can you imagine Sam Donaldson applauding a politician's announcement of an impending marriage, as the assembled reporters do tonight? Just as unlikely is the plot twist in which both the senator (Ken Howard) and his fiancée (Markie Post) have been hiding deep, dark secrets about relationships with Madam Lil.

Another story line has a more gee-whiz male-female team (Christopher Mayer and Julie Tipton) traveling to Palm Springs to cover a movie production that reunites two aging screen stars (played by Mike Connors and Juliet Prowse), who used to be on- and off-screen lovers. They profess to hate each other but really still are carrying the torch.

For comic relief (comic relief from what?), a young mail clerk (Timothy Patrick Murphy) will be wooing the receptionist (Tracy Nelson) each week, while the magazine's romance and health editor (Barbara Sharma) will embody this program's approach to adult relationships. She refers to sex as "it."

For fans of Spelling's other sugar-coated programming, "Glitter" should be appealing since it is the same formula, only moved into a fairy-tale journalism setting.

As a journalistic depiction, it most certainly is not the way it is.

The latest in TV's fascination with odd couples sharing the same roof is "Punky Brewster," NBC's new for-kids-only sitcom starting Sunday night.

Diabetics better be careful with this series about a 7-year-old cutie pie named Punky Brewster and her 60-ish roommate, a grumpy widower named Henry Warnimont — the sweet quotient is excessive. Even Punky's dog is overly cute.

Punky is played by Soleil Moon Frye. Henry is George Gaynes, the white-haired leech in "Tootsie." She's a squatter in the building he's managing, and he reluctantly takes her in.

Poor Punky. Not only does she have a weird name (it was the name of NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff's teen-age crush), she was also abandoned by her father and then her mother.

"Maybe my mom just forgot about me," she says sweetly. Everything she says is optimistic, which counters the gruff Henry who lost his wife years ago and his enthusiasm and emotions soon after.

Together, they'll face the cruel world, rub off on each other and try to improve NBC's lowly position against CBS' "60 Minutes" in the time period. Last season, NBC tried carbon-copy programming with "First Camera," and it was a disaster. This year, the thrust is counterprogramming.

Regardless of the results, "Punky Brewster" will have one claim to fame; it is the first network entertainment series in decades to have 15-minute programs.

To counteract pro football runovers and to guarantee that NBC's "Knight Rider" will stay competitive by starting exactly at 8, at least six 15-minute versions of "Punky Brewster" are being produced to fill the available time.

Even the short form may prove too much.

Radio Station Offers Listeners Broadcasts In Many Languages

JENKINTOWN, Pa. (AP) — One of Montgomery County's cultural treasures is buried in the basement of the Benson East building in Jenkintown. There's no need to hire Indiana Jones for this one, though. Anyone can share the wealth by finding 103.9 on the FM radio dial.

Since 1972, WIBF radio has been broadcasting programs in Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Ukrainian, Armenian, Hebrew, Yiddish, Greek and Korean. There are also programs for the Irish and Polish communities.

Owned by Fox Brothers Management Corp., the 5,000-watt station transmits throughout the Philadelphia area. Station manager Douglas Henson says the competition provided the impetus to add foreign language programs which have become "quite a success."

Henson, whose background was in television, remembers when William Fox started WIBF and Channel 29, both in the Benson, in 1965. Four years later, the television station was sold to Taft, became WTAF and moved downtown.

At that time, Barry Reisman produced a radio show on Sunday mornings. Now, he also does an afternoon show. His lively programs consist of Hebrew and Yiddish music, news you might hear in Israel, a song from "Yentl," updates on financial news and driving conditions, as well as the best places to enjoy a kosher meal.

Reisman also does occasional talk shows and interviews, hosting celebrities such as Jan Murray, Don Rickles and Milton Berle. His show has changed with the trends during his 18 years on the air. "When disco was big here, it was also big in Israel," he said.

WIBF's ethnic programming does much to keep the community aware of local events as well as informing them about other countries. Bill and Bessie Sarris, for example, have been bringing news from Greece to Philadelphia since the early 1950s.

Bill, who is from the island of Paros, was involved in radio in Athens. He has been acting as correspondent for the station, making two-month to three-month trips to Greece, and returning with the latest news and music.

Bessie, who is from Philadelphia, is the program announcer and translator. Their son, Chris, engineers the shows, which are broadcast from the Sarris' home on Saturdays and Sundays.

WIBF bills itself as having the only Spanish broadcasts designed for the varied Latin community in the Delaware Valley.

Channel 7 Schedules Special

WASHINGTON, N.C. — WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington, will present a 400th Anniversary hour-long special, "Remarkable Journey: The Albemarle," at 10 p.m. Friday.

WITN staff member Lee Kanipe will narrate the documentary, a historical overview of North Carolina's Albemarle region. The journey begins 400 years ago on the Outer Banks. A tiny colony of Englishmen in 1854 describes the entire northeastern quadrant of North Carolina.

The film will explore the cultural and economic growth of the region.

Featured interviews will include author David Stick, Charles McNeill and Judy Spitzbergen of the N. C. Maritime Museum in Beaufort, and Kay Williams, director of Tryon Palace in New Bern.

Paul Oughton is executive director and Lu Alatorce the producer. Script for the film was written by Anne Russell. The first in a series of documentaries on principal regions and cities of North Carolina, the program is part of a joint project between the North Carolina Center for Public Television and the N. C. Association of Broadcasters, of which WITN-TV is a member.

Johnny, We Hardly Knew You

Dressed in his burlap coffee sack, John Chapman just wanted to plant apple seeds throughout Ohio and Indiana. But his neighbors came to think of him as "Johnny Appleseed," a missionary of the fields who planted seeds and preached about "the new Jerusalem." Johnny also believed in the medicinal value of certain plants. He scattered dog fennel throughout the region. Known as "Johnnyweed," this foul-smelling plant is not one of Chapman's most appreciated gifts.

DO YOU KNOW — On the average, how many bushels of apples are grown each year in the U.S.?

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes during the week that ended Sept. 7. There were no Senate votes.

CUT — By a vote of 78 for and 236 against, the House rejected an amendment to cut $83 million from a bill (HR 5602) authorizing $2.9 billion over two years for a variety of federal health manpower programs.

In part, the bill funds the training of physicians, nurses, dentists and other professionals who serve the disadvantaged through programs such as the National Health Service Corps. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said that "to exercise fiscal discipline, there is no time like the present, when we are hearing all this campaign rhetoric about the deficit."

Opponent Henry Waxman, D-Calif., called the amendment "a hatchet-cutting" measure.

North Carolina member James Broyhill, R-10, voted yes.

Those North Carolina representatives voting no were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Ike Andrews, D-4; Charles Britt, D-6; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

Those not voting were Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7, and James Martin, R-9.

GENERIC DRUGS — The House passed a bill to greatly increase the availability of generic drugs. Sponsor Henry Waxman, D-Calif., called this "the most important consumer legislation" to be considered by the 98th Congress.

Upwards of 150 brand-name drugs, including best-sellers such as Valium and Inderal, would soon be marketed as generics if the bill becomes law.

Generic drugs are those sold at much lower cost under their scientific name, usually without advertising.

The bill (HR 3605) serves consumer interests by permitting generic copies of brand-name drugs to be sold immediately after the brand-name patent has expired.

It benefits brand-name manufacturers by extending their patent protection for up to five years beyond the present 17 years. The extended marketing monopoly would be granted when the Food and Drug Administration takes an unduly long time to approve a new drug.

Among lobbyists endorsing the compromise legislation were the Pharmaceutical Manufacturing Association and the National Council of Senior Citizens.

The bill was passed unanimously and sent to conference with the Senate. Before final passage, the House conducted the following record vote.

By a vote of 24 for and 347 against, the House rejected an amendment to prevent manufacturers of over-the-counter drugs from receiving the extended patent protection set forth in the bill.

The amendment would have benefitted companies selling generic non-prescription drugs, to the detriment of pharmaceutical houses that developed and patented the drugs.

Supporter Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., said the amendment would delete "unfair, unreasonable, monopolistic limits" that hurt small manufacturers of generic, over-the-counter drugs.

Opponent Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, said the principle of patent protection should apply equally to prescription and non-prescription drugs.

Members voting yes wanted to help manufacturers of generic over-the-counter drugs.

Walter Jones voted yes.

Voting no were Valentine, Whitley, Ike Andrews, Britt, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Clarke.

Those not voting were Neal and James Martin.

E-SU Sets Fall Slate

Dr. Ralph Hardee Rives, president of the Greenville branch of the English-Speaking Union of the United States, has announced a tentative schedule of meetings for the fall of 1984.

Saturday the E-SU members will meet for cocktails and a buffet luncheon at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. Rives will present a program on "The Summer of 1984," recalling significant political and cultural events related to Anglo-American affairs and will report on his visit to the Plymouth, England, branch of the English-Speaking Union in July and August. Reservations for the meeting must be made by noon Thursday with secretary Annie Turner.

Alfred J. Rowe, a chartered architect from Aldershot, Hampshire, England, will address the E-SU members Oct. 23 on English cathedrals. Kenneth Taylor, former Canadian ambassador to Iran, who gained the gratitude of Americans during the hostage crisis in Iran, is scheduled to speak to the Greenville E-SU in November.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill McLean and other members of the branch who reside in Kinston will be in charge of the annual Christmas luncheon to be held at the Kinston Country Club in early December. The program will feature presentations by branch members who are natives of England who will share remembrances of Christmas in their native land.

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,900 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 4:35 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 200 feet west of the Kirkland Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Jonathan Guy Buck of Route 2, Winterville, and Hari Budiman Widjaja of 500 E. 10th St.

Police, who charged Buck with exceeding a safe speed, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Buck car and $600 to the Widjaja car.

Cars driven by William Arthur Beaman of Farmville, and Franklin Cedrick White of 314 Oak Grove Ave., collided about 9:14 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 150 feet south of the Mall Drive intersection.

Investigators set damage from the mishap at $400 to each of the two vehicles.

Disruption

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Cockroaches and a foul smell reportedly forced some members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to check out of a government-run hotel.

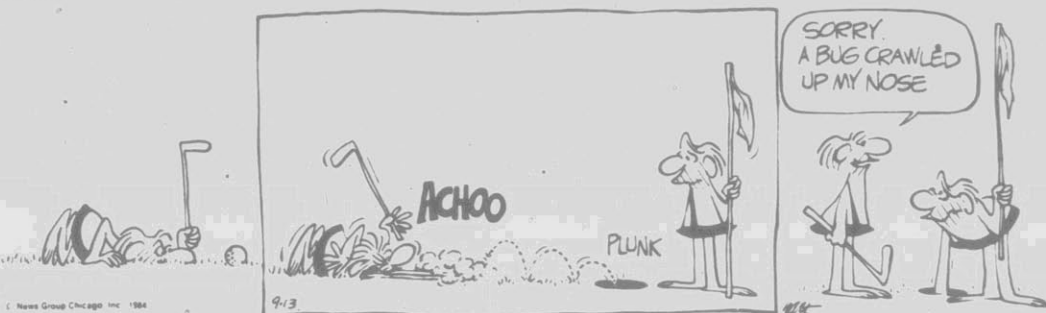

The 140-member group, led by Indian-born conductor Zubin Mehta, arrived in the Indian capital Tuesday for five concerts in New Delhi, Bombay and Calcutta. Several major newspapers reported that about 60 members left the Ashok Hotel in central New Delhi soon after they checked in, complaining that their rooms had cockroaches, bugs and a foul smell.

A spokeswoman for India's Tourism Development Corp. said some of the orchestra members later returned to the hotel after being offered other rooms.

Wilderness Backers Seek Reagan Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sponsors of a bill that would designate 1.8 million acres of California forest as protected wilderness preserve say they expect President Reagan to reverse his earlier opposition and sign the measure.

"The president at one time or another has opposed all three elements of the bill," said Rep. Richard Lehman, D-Calif. "But I think he'll be hard pressed not to sign it."

"This is the conservation vote of the 98th Congress," added Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Interior public lands subcommittee. "I'd be absolutely flabbergasted if the president didn't sign it."

The assessments came after the House voted 368-41 on Wednesday to send the preservation bill to the White House, ending one of the longest-running debates over wilderness preservation to face Congress.

The compromise measure broke a five-year deadlock over conservation in a state rich in natural wonders, but also under more intense pressure for development than any other state in the West.

It designates 1.8 million acres in 39 separate areas as wilderness preserves, open to hunters and fishermen, backpackers and canoeists, but off limits to commercial development and motorized recreation. That joins 2.71 million acres of the wilderness areas designated by Congress in the state in previous years.

And it releases vast expanses of federal land — estimated by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., at 5 million acres — for non-wilderness uses, such as logging, mining and developed recreation including ski resorts. Those lands have been managed since 1979 to preserve their wilderness characteristics in case Congress decided to give them permanent protection.

Wilderness disputes always revolve around the competing interests of economic development and strict preservation. But sponsors in both parties said the dispute is especially sharp in California, and its resolution especially important to Californians.

"There is one thing that is certain," said Wilson. "Californians, from backpackers to board chairmen, prize making a living in a state worth living in. That is what the California wilderness bill does."

"Nature has bestowed many gifts on California," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif. "With the passage of (the bill), we can pass the gifts of mountains, rivers and lakes on to our children and our children's children."

The bill was a compromise between a 2.4 million-acre bill passed earlier in the House — largely a tribute to Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., its determined champion who died suddenly only two days before the House vote — and a competing, 1.2 million-acre bill supported by California business interests.

While the compromise appears from the acreage figure to be a simple case of splitting the difference, the figures conceal agonizing debate over each area.

"We negotiated over every tree and every twig and every inch of territory," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who reached the compromise with Wilson. "We wanted more (wilderness) but ... this is a good compromise accepted by many people in California of different interests."

The bill also declares 83 miles of the Tuolumne River as a wild and scenic river, a designation sought by white-water rafting enthusiasts, but opposed by some local communities that wanted hydropower dams on the river.

And, it designates the area near Mono Lake — believed by geologists to be the oldest continually existing lake in North America — as a National Forest Scenic Area.

The designation affords some protection to the fragile desert lake near Yosemite National Park that is both water supply for Los Angeles and threatened habitat for a number of species of birds.

Missing African Leaders Appear

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Several of the opposition leaders hunted by security police since being freed from detention over the weekend appeared at the British Consulate in Durban today, a British diplomat said.

John Hedley, public affairs officer for the British Embassy in Pretoria, said "five, or perhaps six" of the seven men sought by police were at the consulate in Durban, a resort and shipping city on South Africa's Indian Ocean coast.

Cassim Saloojee, publicity secretary of the Transvaal Indian Congress, said the men, all non-whites, would ask for "temporary asylum," and would ask British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to intervene on their behalf.

Hedley said, "I am not aware that they have asked for asylum of any sort. They are talking now."

The men were among seven who Natal Province Supreme Court Justice Brian Law ordered freed from detention Friday. Police arrested them in August on the eve of parliamentary elections for Asian and mixed-race delegates to new segregated chambers of the all-white Parliament.

The detainees are leaders of groups that urged a boycott of the polls to discredit the elections.

Law set the detainees free, saying their incarceration orders by Louis le Grange, minister of law and order, were vague. About 36 hours later, le Grange issued fresh detention orders. The new ones were no different from the first, except they said le Grange believed public interest would be harmed if he disclosed why he wanted the men jailed.

Police said they could not locate the detainees when they went to their homes Sunday morning. A nationwide hunt ensued.

The South African Press Association reported two hours after the detainees appeared at the consulate that South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said British consular officials refused to act as intermediaries.

The association also said a letter purportedly signed by the detainees was slipped under the door of the news agency's Durban bureau this morning.

The PROVIDER

All Materials To Build This Home (Foundation Plate Up)

Perfect for the small family. Gives you 864 square feet of heated living space, including 2 bedrooms, full bath, living/dining combination and U-shaped kitchen. Also has "extras" like a pantry, linen closet and big, double closets. Plus a 288-square-foot garage. All for one low price. See below for more details.

1 For one low price, Lowe's will supply all the materials to build the energy efficient home above from the foundation plate up. And the price is guaranteed for 90 days from date the contract is signed (which could help you save money).

2 Once construction begins, we'll deliver materials to your lot in building sequence, so there's less chance of loss due to weather or pilferage. In other words, you won't get carpeting when the roof's going up. And that can save you money, too.

3 Our home designs either meet or exceed normal energy efficient standards. That's because they incorporate extra insulation, extensive caulking, insulated windows, attic ventilation system and more. So you save year after year.

4 "The Provider" is one of many Lowe's-designed homes. We offer you a wide selection of styles & sizes - from large contemporary homes to small vacation cottages. Stop by the store for complete details and a free, illustrated booklet.

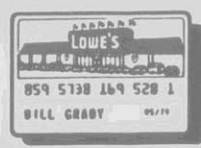

Lowe's Homestead Program lets you build a home at a set price. Choose from a variety of styles & sizes of homes. Stop by now.

CHOOSE FROM TWO PLANS.

Apply For Our Convenient Lowe's Credit Card.

Just present your Visa, American Express or MasterCard, and you may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit on a new Lowe's Card. (Even without these cards, your application will be processed with a minimum delay.) Ask a Lowe's salesperson for complete details.

Finance Major Purchases Of Up To $5,000 On Our Low Payment Plan.

Our Low Payment Plan offers you an easier way to make those major home improvements and larger purchases. It's designed to let you finance purchases of $250 to $5,000 for up to five years at competitive rates. The result is a very low monthly payment that fits comfortably into your family budget and brings important home additions, from a new refrigerator to a new roof, within easy reach. Just look for the above symbol in future advertisements. And, where space is available, we'll also provide the specific credit details on selected items, to give you an idea of the relative size of monthly payments and Annual Percentage Rates. Low Payment Credit Terms are outlined below. So apply today. You may qualify for up to $1,000 instant credit when you present your Visa, American Express, MasterCard, Sears or Lowe's card!

Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms: Your credit must be satisfactory. Our cash price does not include sales tax. The monthly payment price may be slightly lower, depending upon state law. The monthly payment price includes sales tax of 4%. If sales tax differs in your area, the monthly payment will vary slightly. Credit Life and Disability Insurance is available upon request. Delivery charges are excluded.

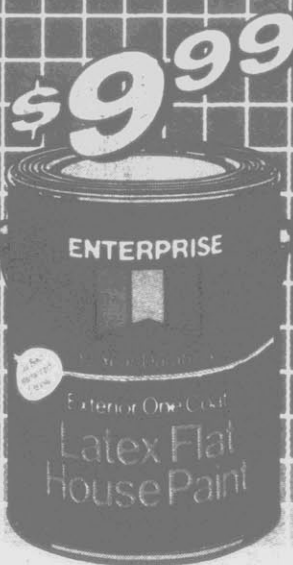

We Also Honor American Express, Visa & MasterCard.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Pricing Policy: Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices as described above represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
